Illegal immigration bills pass in House

■ Measures would increase border patrol officers, let states deny public school education to illegal alien children.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Cracking down on illegal aliens, the House passed two bills Wednesday — one focusing on law enforcement and the other letting states deny public school education to illegal alien children. Only the first had a chance of getting President Clinton's signature.

The Senate was expected to reject the second bill — passed 254-175 — and Clinton has said he would veto the measure, even though it would allow currently enrolled illegal aliens to stay in school.

Supporters in the House said the bill would remove an incentive for foreigners to come here illegally and allow voters to decide whether they want to bear the expense of educating children who shouldn't be in the country.

"This bill says, "Don't come to America and think the taxpayers of America are going to take care of you if you're here illegally,'" said House Speaker Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga.

Opponents said it would punish innocent children for the behavior of their parents and push thousands of young people into the streets.

"This is a foolish piece of legislation," Rep. Sheila Jackson-Lee said.

The far larger bill, which would nearly double the number of border patrol officers and speed deportation procedures, passed earlier in the day, 305-123.

"This bill secures America's borders, penalizes

Passing documents

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — A civilian computer expert working for naval intelligence was accused Wednesday of passing at least 50 intelligence documents to a South Korean agent. American officials were scrambling to determine the scope of the security breach. Robert Chaegon Kim, 56, was ordered held without bail at least until Monday, when a pre-trial detention hearing is scheduled in U.S. District Court here, a few miles from the nation's capital.

City discusses girl's death during charity walk, possible lawsuit

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The City Council has discussed the potential of a lawsuit stemming from an April charity walk where a 7-year-old girl died after being hit by a car.

An item to discuss the possible litigation was placed on the executive session portion of the council's Tuesday meeting. Executive sessions are closed to the public and permitted when subjects such as litigation, personnel and property purchase/sale are to be addressed.

City Attorney Keith Stretcher said there are no any indications a lawsuit will be filed against the city in connection with the accident that occurred during the Multiple Sclerosis Walk-a-thon on April 27.

But, Stretcher said, there has been discussions between city officials and attorneys representing the Multiple Sclerosis Society and the family of the accident victim.

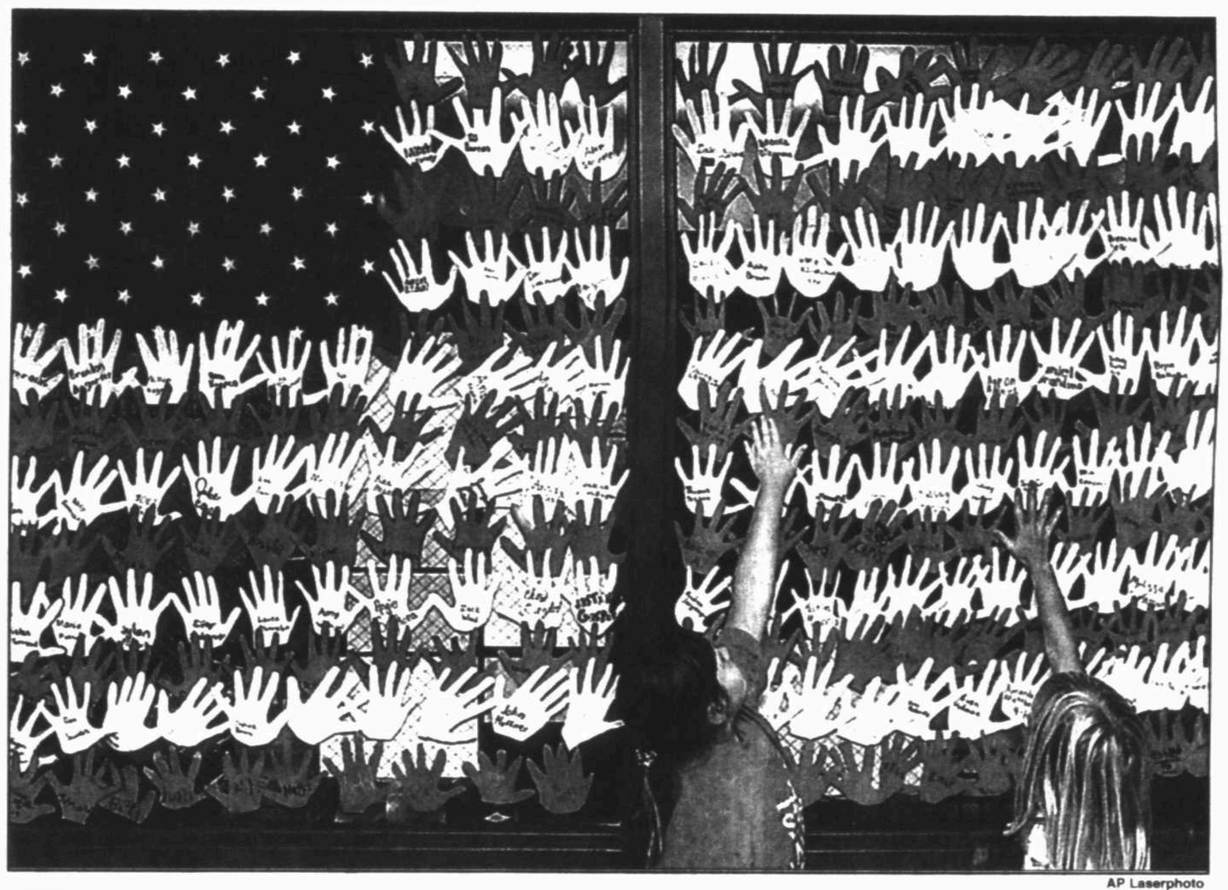

Because the matter was taken up in executive session, City Manager Mike McGregor declined to say what prompted the item to be placed on the agenda.

The potential for litigation revolves around an accident that occurred during the morning of the walk-a-thon.

Kassandra Crites was riding her bicycle north on J Street — ahead of her parents, Kay and Robert Crites — when she entered the intersection at Wall Avenue and was hit by a car, police reported at the time. The 7-year-old girl died at the hospital eight days later.

Bush touts proposals to tackle violent juvenile crime

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (AP) — Pledging to once again make juvenile crime a top legislative priority, Gov. George W. Bush on Wednesday proposed a new law to allow authorities to randomly frisk paroled youth offenders.

The governor also unveiled proposals to commit habitual sex offenders at the end of their prison terms and to expand a law ending mandatory release for violent criminals.

In a speech to the Texas District and County Attorneys Association, Bush promised to push the proposals during the legislative session that begins in January.

"As we begin to think about what we're going to do in the future, I think the victims need to be foremost in our minds," he said.

The so-called stop-and-frisk proposal would allow law enforcement officials to randomly frisk juvenile offenders as a term of their parole or probation, Bush said.

If a police officer spotted a suspicious juvenile, he would be able to check via computer to see whether the teen was a parolee and whether "stop and frisk" was a condition of his release, Bush said.

"We need to give our law enforcement officers more tools to tackle tough gangs and tough kids," he said. "Stop and frisk will give the police and probation officers another tool to keep offenders on a short leash and help keep guns out of their hands."

But one civil rights attorney questioned the constitutionality of such a law, saying it would violate a parolee's right to privacy.

"They're entitled to put restrictions on them, but they can't go too far," said Jim Harrington, legal director for the Texas Civil Rights Project. "It lends itself to arbitrary and capricious enforcement and abuse by the police."

Bush said he believed the proposal would stand up to a constitutional challenge.

Juvenile crime was one of Bush's top priorities during the 1995 legislative session, during which lawmakers passed reforms including lowering the age at which juveniles can be tried as adults and increasing sentences for violent youth offenders.

While praising those reforms, Bush said more must be done to crack down on young criminals.

"I'm not optimistic yet about the declines of juvenile crimes simply because the numbers of kids coming into the system are mas-

Midland pilot gets ride of his life

Flight took on a rousing dimension for at least one veteran aviator whose almost 30 years of flying have been behind the prop-wash of piston-powered airplanes designed for peacetime flight.

And then, a dashing blue-and-gold flying war machine, inscribed "Blue Angels" and out of the United States Navy's inventory, flew into town. Others are to follow in preparation for the Blue Angels' aerobatics performances in the Confederate Air Force's AirSho'96 at Midland International Airport this weekend.

"Awesome. It's a beautiful airplane," Charlie Spence said, as he was preparing to streak across heavens of West Texas in the Navy's premier fighter-attack jet aircraft, the twin-tailed McDonnell Douglas F/A-18 Hornet. "I have never flown in any machine that even resembles this," he said of the carrier-borne aircraft. "For a pilot, this is an opportunity of a lifetime."

Yeltsin's surgery on hold 6 to 10 weeks

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin's bypass surgery will have to wait six to 10 weeks to give his damaged heart time to heal, and then he'll need two months to recuperate from the operation — meaning Russia will likely be governed from a sickbed into the new year.

Doctors said Wednesday that Yeltsin must remain in a hospital or health resort until he undergoes the triple or quadruple bypass surgery, although he can do paperwork and see visitors.

"He's mentally as alert as he can be," said American specialist Michael DeBakey, who consulted with Yeltsin's Russian doctors for three hours Wednesday and will return for the operation.

"There is no reason why he cannot function in his capacity as president" while awaiting surgery, DeBakey said at a news conference.

Hard-liners have already called on Yeltsin — who was re-elected to a second five-year term in July — to step down.

"If there's a feeling that the presidential staff is ruling instead of him, the question might be raised" in parliament, said Communist Gennady Seleznyov, speaker of the Duma, the lower house.

Yeltsin's illness was also causing anxiety in Washington about the future of Russia's reform process and its ability to carry out a peaceful succession if Yeltsin dies.

"Democracy in Russia is doing fairly well, but it is hardly an absolute certainty that it will take deep root," Assistant Secretary of State Thomas McNamara said.

Dr. Renat Akchurin, head of Yeltsin's surgical team, said doctors told the president the bypass operation had an 80 percent chance of success if it was done now, but an almost 100 percent chance if he waited.

The president, who had been eager to get the surgery over with, "reacted courageously and calmly," Akchurin said.

The 65-year-old Yeltsin originally said he expected to undergo heart surgery by the end of September. The six- to 10-week delay makes the date early November or even December. The two-month recovery means he wouldn't be back in his Kremlin offices until early 1997.

Doctors confirmed Wednesday that Yeltsin suffered a heart attack in June after campaigning furiously for re-election. The president and his aides covered up the heart attack until recently.

DeBakey said Yeltsin's heart was damaged, but that the muscle showed "considerable, significant improvement" over the past month.

Dr. Andrei Vorobyov, who presided at Wednesday's meeting, also described a recent series of episodes, each lasting for several minutes, that left scar tissue on the president's heart.

Vorobyov said there had been unspecified "complications" involving the president's lungs, liver and kidneys this summer, but the organs were now in good shape.

A brief film clip released by the Kremlin showed a smiling Yeltsin greeting the 88-year-old DeBakey inside the hospital Wednesday.

"Welcome, Mr. Patriarch of world surgery. I'm very pleased to meet you, to get to know you and to use your services while you're here," Yeltsin told him.

The chief Kremlin doctor, Sergei Mironov, said Yeltsin will stay at the Central Clinical Hospital, where he has been since Sept. 13, or at a government health resort outside Moscow.

Yeltsin has promised to transfer his powers to Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin during surgery. But Chernomyrdin says a resignation is out of the question.

All indications are that Yeltsin remains in charge, although he works as little as 30 minutes a day, according to press secretary Sergei Yastrzhembsky.

If Yeltsin dies or is incapacitated, the prime minister would take over for three months and call a presidential election.

4 die in Palestinian-Israeli clash in West Bank

RAMALLAH, West Bank (AP) — Palestinian police and Israeli troops battled with automatic weapons Wednesday, casting Israel and the Palestinians into their biggest crisis in three years. Four people died and more than 350 were wounded as Palestinians cheered on their police against the Israelis.

The exchanges of fire in the West Bank towns of Ramallah and Bethlehem began during stone-throwing protests by thousands of Palestinians angered by Israel's decision to open an archaeological tunnel near Jerusalem's Al Aqsa Mosque compound, Islam's third-holiest site.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who personally ordered completion of the tunnel, said in Paris: "The decision was good, but the timing was bad."

Palestinian protesters and Israeli forces clashed in Arab east Jerusalem and the West Bank town of Hebron. Those scuffles did not involve gunfire and only minor injuries were reported.

Wednesday's confrontations for the first time involved armed Palestinian forces — 30,000 armed Palestinian police were deployed in the West Bank and Gaza Strip as part of the peace accords.

Palestinian demonstrators said they took to the streets with the encouragement of their leaders. "The Palestinian Authority is giving us the green light to demonstrate and throw stones and return to the uprising," said Mohammed Kafkay.

Palestinians cheered on their police as the officers fired at the Israelis.

The violence dealt another blow to Israeli-Palestinian relations, which have faltered since Netanyahu took office in June, and comes at a time when Israel's relations with much of the Arab world are troubled.

Egypt has accused the new government of reneging on agreements and stalling the peace process, and the specter of war with Syria is in the air. Even ties with Jordan, Israel's closest ally in the region, are losing their warmth.

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat has warned that a new uprising could erupt if Netanyahu did not go forward with implementation of the peace accords signed by Israel's previous government.

The Palestinians postponed a round of talks with Israel that had been scheduled for Thursday. Israel said the talks would be held Sunday.

The Palestinians claim the archaeological tunnel undermines their rights to the Muslim shrines.

Netanyahu, who insists the tunnel does not affect Islamic holy sites, personally gave orders to workers to break through the last stretch of the tunnel on Tuesday, just before he left for a three-day trip to Europe.

Arafat responded by ordering a commercial strike in Jerusalem and protest marches in all Palestinian areas Wednesday.

Four Palestinians, including a 15-year-old boy and two policemen, were killed in rioting near Ramallah, and a fifth was in critical condition with a bullet in the head, said Shawki Harb, director of the Ramallah Hospital.

More than 350 Palestinian protesters and nine Israeli soldiers were injured in both clashes.

In Ramallah, more than 1,000 Palestinians marched to an army checkpoint south of the city and hurled stones at Israeli soldiers, who responded with rubber bullets and tear gas.

Palestinian witnesses said that by mid-afternoon, Israeli troops took positions on hills overlooking the protesters and opened fire with live ammunition. They said Palestinian police, cheered on by demonstrators, then fired at the Israeli soldiers.

The Israelis and the Palestinians accused one another of using live rounds first. Palestinian witnesses said commanding officers tried to stop junior Palestinian policemen from shooting at the Israeli soldiers, but the policemen defied their orders.

The fighting in Bethlehem began after nightfall, when about 500 Palestinians hurled firebombs and stones at Israeli troops guarding Rachel's Tomb, a Jewish holy site where the biblical matriarch is believed to be buried.

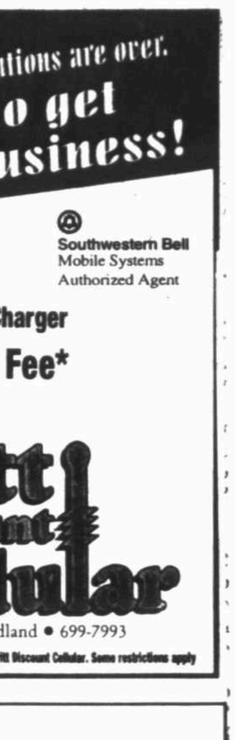

Soldiers fired bullets and tear gas after protesters burned down trees and a wooden road divider outside the tomb at the entrance to the city. Although Bethlehem is under Palestinian rule, the tomb has remained under Israel control.

Palestinian police, taking cover behind bushes and trees near the tomb, opened fire on the Israeli troops guarding the tomb.

In downtown Bethlehem, police and demonstrators drove through the streets in a convoy, cheering and singing nationalist songs as if in a victory parade.

Netanyahu blamed Palestinian leaders for inciting the violence and said he would not be pressured into softening his positions.

WEATHER WATCH

Today partly cloudy, mid-80s

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and a high in the mid-80s with southwest winds at 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service.

Tonight's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies, 20 percent chance of rain and a low near 60.

Friday's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and a high between 75 and 80.

The high for Wednesday was 89, compared to the record high for that date of 102, set in 1977.

Wednesday's low was 64, compared to the record low of 42, set in 1989.

STATE

A moist atmosphere helped produce mostly cloudy skies for much of Texas on Wednesday keeping temperatures cool across the state.

In North Texas, afternoon temperatures were generally in the 80s. The extremes ranged from 75 degrees near Paris to 86 degrees at Waco.

The forecast calls for a chance of thunderstorms tonight. Lows are expected in the upper-60s to the mid-70s. Highs will be in the mid-80s.

In South Texas, skies remained mostly cloudy from Georgetown to San Antonio. Showers and thunderstorms speckled the region and were moving towards Houston and Jasper.

Temperatures were in the upper-70s to lower-80s under the cloud cover.

The region's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies to continue across the southern half of the region, while mostly cloudy skies should persist across the northern half through today. Low temperatures will be in the 70s today, and highs will be in the 90s.

West Texans can expect partly to mostly cloudy skies, and there is a chance of showers or thunderstorms over the region today.

A cold front moving into the region should bring much cooler conditions to northern areas. Temperatures will range between the 60s in the Panhandle to the mid-90s in the Big Bend valleys.

NATION

Light to moderate showers fell across the Plains and the West on Wednesday, turning into snow in the higher elevations. It was calm along the East Coast.

The snow was light in the higher elevations of Wyoming and northern Colorado, and the Black Hills of South Dakota, where morning temperatures got down to the 20s and 30s.

Winter storm watches were posted for the Black Hills and the central and northern Colorado Rockies. A stationary front across southern Wyoming, northern Utah and central Nevada was expected to develop into a strong cold front today.

More rain was forecast for northern Texas, Oklahoma, into Kansas and Nebraska.

It was mild and dry in the Southeast. Isolated showers fell in Maine and western New York.

Temperatures Wednesday ranged from a morning low of 18 in Meacham, Ore., to a midday high of 91 in McAllen, Texas.

Winter's blizzards bring fall's babies

By Rick Hampson
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Amy Lauriat had never played Monopoly all the way through before, but now the snow outside was 2 feet high and she and her boyfriend had finished two whole games. Next, they moved on to Scrabble, then Trivial Pursuit — "the old Trivial Pursuit, with the old answers."

The Blockbuster was closed. They'd had a few beers. They were feeling a little bored. And then ...

Nine months after all those trips past GO, Lauriat is happily expecting her first baby. She's one of many shut-in Americans who made more than a snowman during the Blizzard of '96.

"It was very relaxing," the 25-year-old University of Maryland student recalled the other day. "Neither of us could go to work. We'd played every board game we had. There was nothing else to do."

The blizzards that covered the Northeast and Midwest in early January apparently will not produce the kind of bumper baby crop associated, in anecdote if not demographic science, with other great storms of the century.

Many hospitals, obstetricians and midwives report an increase in births, but others see no effect at all.

In Grand Forks, N.D., which was slapped by one blizzard after another last winter, deliveries at United Hospital are up 40 percent from a year ago. St. Peter's Medical Center in New Brunswick, N.J., which has the state's largest maternity ward, says births are 25 percent higher.

Dr. Wendy Martinez, an obstetrician in Vorhees, N.J., had to add a second birthing class for expecting parents.

"Everyone was asking everyone else, 'So what day of the storm did you do it on?'" she reported.

But some hospitals with large maternity units, such as Brigham and Women's in Boston and Montefiore in the Bronx, report no storm effect. Mothers Work Inc., which has more than 400 maternity clothing stores, has seen no surge in sales.

For all the stories about babies named after the hurricanes during which they were conceived, demographers say there has been no scientific study of the relationship between extreme weather and birth rates. And they claim that "variables" — say, managed care's impact on hospital populations, or seasonal fluctuations in sperm count — would complicate any such effort.

In the Washington area, for instance, any assessment of this year's blizzard-baby connection is muddied by the partial government shutdown that started in mid-December and lasted three weeks.

But if the blizzard has not produced an across-the-board population boom, it has produced some rather embarrassing confessions.

Tara Hayden Brown, an expectant mother, told the Buffalo News she thought that she and her husband conceived on Jan. 16. "The snow was so high, Steve even couldn't get across the street to the drugstore," she blurted.

Another expectant mother told the paper how she and her mate had escaped the snow by flying to Las Vegas. "We went and gambled — in more ways than one," she said.

Meanwhile, Lauriat and her boyfriend, Michael Trevert, are expecting their son any day now. They'll call him Tobin, and he'll always remind them of that otherwise boring, snowbound night in an apartment complex in Gaithersburg, Md.

"We marked the snow level on the tree outside," she said. "It's still there."

CITY: Council discusses possible lawsuit

five-mile route — that circled downtown — was considered the safest, an organizer told the Reporter-Telegram after the accident. It was also the first year that barricades were not used to block the streets, an organizer said.

Before the accident occurred, people yelled for the girl not to enter the intersection, a walk-a-thon volunteer said at the time.

As required for such events, the Multiple Sclerosis Society had a permit for the walk issued by the city of Midland.

Organizers told the Reporter-Telegram after the accident that police were to monitor intersections. But no police were hired to do so.

Correction

The unemployment rate for the Texas Workforce Commission's Odessa-Midland metropolitan statistical area should have been 5.7 percent for August, not 6.7 percent as reported.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

PASS: House OKs illegal immigration bills alien smugglers, expedites the removal of criminal and illegal aliens, prevents illegal aliens from taking American jobs and ends non-citizens' abuse of the welfare system," said Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, who introduced the legislation.

(From 1A)

Some Democrats have urged Clinton to veto it as well, saying the legislation is too hard on legal immigrants too soft on unscrupulous employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

The president has asked Republican leaders for some changes, said White House spokeswoman Kathleen McKiernan. Nonetheless, she called it "a major step forward."

"We still would like to see improvements in the provision concerning the treatment of legal immigrants and worksite enforcement," she said. "We've asked the leadership to take that under consideration and make some adjustments."

Seventy-six Democrats joined 229 Republicans in approving the bill and sending it to the Senate, which was expected to vote on it later this week. Voting against the bill were 117 Democrats, five Republicans and one independent.

Republicans — who worked for two years to bring the immigration bill to a final vote — said the bill was Congress' first serious action against illegal immigration in years.

"Every three years enough illegal aliens enter the country permanently to populate a city the size of Boston or Dallas or San Francisco," Smith said as the House voted on the measure that was a compromise of separate bills passed last spring by the House and Senate.

But Democrats called the bill a ruse that does not attack the true causes of illegal immigration. Some also suggested that Republicans were using the issue to score points with voters weeks before the election.

"The problem with this bill is that it cons the American people into thinking major new steps are going to be done," said Rep. Howard Berman, D-Calif.

Under the bill, local police and other law enforcement officers would have new powers to detain and remove illegal aliens and foreigners would have a tougher time winning U.S. asylum by claiming persecution in their home countries.

Penalties for alien smuggling and document fraud would be increased. U.S. sponsors wanting to sponsor foreign family members into the country would be required to earn 140 percent to 200 percent of the poverty level. Under current law, sponsors must earn at least 100 percent of the poverty level.

Legal immigrants who receive 12 months of welfare during their first seven years in this country would be subject to deportation. A provision criticized by AIDS activists would bar legal immigrants from using Medicaid for treatment of AIDS or HIV infection.

TEENS: Bush pushes tougher juvenile crime laws

(From 1A)

sive, but we're making progress," he said. "People should not expect magic results overnight."

In addition to the stop-and-frisk measure, Bush also proposed toughening laws for repeat sex offenders by allowing them to be civilly committed to a mental institution upon their release from prison.

"We need a law giving us the option to send those offenders to a secure mental institution as opposed to being released to the streets," Bush said, citing the highly publicized case of Larry Don McQuay, the convicted child molester paroled in April despite promises that he would attack again.

McQuay, who was paroled under mandatory release rules, was placed in a private jail in downtown San Antonio upon his release. He was later indicted on additional molestation charges and transferred to the Bexar County Jail.

Bush also proposed a measure to expand a 1995 law ending mandatory release of inmates with prior convictions for violent offenses.

Under the old system, inmates sentenced for certain offenses were eligible for automatic release from prison when they accrued a certain level of "good time" credits, even if the parole board denied their release.

The 1995 law did away with the system, but only for repeat offenders incarcerated after Sept. 1. Bush wants the law to apply retroactively to all repeat offenders.

Dianne Clements, president of the victims rights group Justice For All, praised both the sex offender and mandatory release proposals, saying they would go a long way toward keeping criminals off the streets.

"We are releasing every day hundreds of sex offenders, mandatorily released that have been denied parole," she said. "The most important thing is to protect as many children as we can. If we can keep a pedophile locked up or incarcerated for as long as possible, then we are protecting children."

FLY: Midlander takes to sky in Navy fighter jet

(From 1A)

Wednesday afternoon and let him fly the aircraft, put it into a loop and rolls, and even "let me set it up (for a anding) and land it ... with his help.

"It was just an incredible trip," Spence, who is publisher of the Reporter-Telegram, said after the Hornet's flight.

"What a beautiful piece of equipment."

Aside from its aesthetic beauty, Spence seemed convinced that the F/A-18 Hornet is the most agile and maneuverable of military fighter-attack aircraft.

The Navy's F/A-18 Hornet can "out-turn and out-perform" other military aircraft, noted Spence, although there are faster United States and foreign aircraft. "It's very maneuverable and so responsive."

The setting for the flight at Midland International Airport, headquarters of the 1957-founded Confederate Air Force, embodied aviation history in the air, on the flight lines, and in the CAF hangar: Warplanes included fighters, bombers, transports, liaison aircraft and trainers from the 1939-1945 World War II era and a replica of a 1917 World War I triplane, the Fokker Dr. I triplane.

The flying machines settling into the airport traversed eras of flight, from the prop-wash of vintage piston-engine airplanes to the jet blast of supersonic aircraft.

The thundering star among the lot was, of course, the F/A-18 Hornet, a Mach 1.8 aircraft, flown by the Blue Angels' Beare, a "mustang" who rose from the Navy's enlisted ranks to a naval aviator and a "Topgun" — a graduate of the Navy Fighter Weapons School.

"This is the top-of-the line (Navy fighter-attack airplane) these days," the 35-year-old Beare said of the F/A-18 Hornet. "It is both an attack and a fighter aircraft — a self-escort: We fight ourselves into a target, drop our bombs, and fight our way out."

The naval aviator chalked up 45 missions in the 1991 Persian Gulf War, has logged more than 2,000 flight hours, and mastered 194 carrier landings, which his British-American crew chief, Peter Ford, terms "controlled crashes."

"Landing on carriers takes a little bit of work," said Beare, who noted that nighttime landings are "pretty stressful."

And Beare and his cohorts on the Blue Angels, the Navy's precision-flying, aerobatic demonstration team, represent the "men and women flying aboard carriers around the world right now."

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

U.S. Navy Blue Angels' pilot Lt. Scott "Yogi" Beare, at right in the cockpit's front seat, gives Midlander Charlie Spence a ride in the supersonic F/A-18 Hornet.

The Blue Angels Squadron, which is celebrating its 50th anniversary this year, will be flying at 3 p.m. Saturday and Sunday during the CAF's AirSho'96 at Midland International Airport.

Before that in the weekend show, World War II-vintage aircraft will be reenacting World War II aerial battles and campaigns in the war's European, Pacific, China-Burma-India, and African Theaters of Operations.

While Beare and his crew chief were readying the Hornet for a press flight and while in flight, CAF and privately-owned "big iron" aircraft were rumbling: They include the Lockheed P-38 Lightning, the North American P-51 Mustang, the Douglas A-26 Invader, the Chance Vought F4U Corsair, the Grumman F-8-F Bearcat, the Boeing B-29 Superfortress.

"Are you guys fired up about flying?" Beare asked Spence, KWES-Television co-anchor Melissa Hendrix, and KNFM-FM radio disc-jockey Dave Love.

"Absolutely," Spence said.

One by one, they each experienced a flight that threatened to invade the speed of sound.

"I feel pretty good," Spence said of his flight into "the unknown. I've been (especially) excited about that vertical takeoff, the G forces (positive forces of gravity), the aerobatics."

Spence got a dose of 7.2 Gs without blacking out and, like Beare, without benefit of a G-suit.

From the rolling takeoff to "altitude" beyond 10,000 feet and leveling off inverted, the F/A-18 Hornet consumed less than a minute.

"It is like a roller-coaster ride you ain't ever had," said Carl Rodgers, a private pilot who is chief of the Midland Fire Department's Aircraft Rescue-Fire Fighting station at the airport.

In Spence's F/A-18 Hornet experience, slow flight at altitude was 100 knots or about 115 miles per hour. His top speed was 600 knots, though the aircraft, depending on altitude, can readily double that.

After Beare had paced the F/A-18 Hornet into a series of Blue Angels' rolls, loops, climbs, dives, and a medley of other aerobatic maneuvers for Ms. Hendrix's thrill, she climbed out of the aircraft's cockpit so amazed.

"Fantastic!" she exclaimed. "What can I say? I can't believe you (Blue Angels) guys do that" with an airplane. "Just to hold the (control) stick and feel how the plane moves is great," she said of her experience of flying the aircraft.

And after experiencing G-forces, of which she, Spence, and Love were forewarned, Ms. Hendrix candidly mused: "I forgot who I was after that."

That soon passed, but not memory of the flight.

And more memories will be made. Today, other members of the Blue Angels squadron are to fly their F/A-18 Hornets into Midland International Airport.

The squadron is made of eight aviators and their eight aircraft, crew chiefs, and other support staff who will be flying in the Navy's Lockheed C-130 Hercules "Fat Albert" turbo-prop transport.

Six aircraft are in the Blue Angels' air-demonstration flight: Four will be flying the traditional "diamond" formation, and two will be giving solo performances, including ailerons rolls and inverted-type flying.

"It is just great for West Texas to have this kind of talent," Spence said of the Blue Angels' weekend performances.

For the Blue Angels' Beare, "Flying for me is flying — just the love of flying. I enjoyed getting up in a Cessna 150 (civilian single-engine, high-wing airplane) and flying that as much as I enjoy flying this (combat jet aircraft)."

F/A-18 Hornet, Beare noted, is "computer limited to 7.5 Gs (forces of gravity) and minus three negative Gs.

"The airplane is actually capable of going more than that, but that's what the computers limit us at," Beare said. "In the time of war or for combat or missile defense, we have the capability of overriding the computers to do what we need to do."

The Hornet has "two flight-control computers that run the flight controls," Beare said. "And when we move the stick, it is electronically sent back to the computers. But we also do have mechanical-linkage backup that assists with the flight controls as well as a backup in case of an emergency.

The F/A-18 Hornet is rated at Mach 1.8 or almost twice the speed of sound and is powered by two turbofan jet engines that, together, develop 32,000 pounds of thrust.

"It's a different type of flying, but still a heck of a lot of fun," Beare said.

While growing up in Virginia, Beare said that he "built model airplanes and model ships instead of cars. I used to have the little gas-powered airplanes I flew on a string."

In reflection, Beare said that he "never thought I would have a chance to do something like that" — earn his Navy wings and fly with the Blue Angels. "It was always somebody else."

Beare earned his private pilot's license when he was an enlisted sailor — a machanist's mate — in the Navy. Later, he went to college on a Navy scholarship.

"I go to college, and the next thing I know I applied for flight training, and I got it" and then his Navy aviator's wings.

Downtown plans are looking good

We tip our hats to Mayor Bobby Burns and others who have worked long and hard on the project to revitalize Midland's downtown district.

Although the work is far from over, those involved in this project have kept their noses to the grindstone, so to speak, and now they can see light at the far end of the downtown revitalization project.

Recently the sponsors signed the papers of incorporation to submit to the Texas Secretary of State's Office, a move one of the organization's sponsors characterized as "a hard footprint in the sand." With this hurdle past, perhaps the downtown revitalization effort can get to its feet and begin running.

Mayor Burns noted this week that the project appears "to be building some excitement downtown" and holds the potential for creating a great downtown district." This is a longterm project, noted Burns, which may take from two to 10 years to complete.

The mayor noted that down the road, the sponsors are talking about projects which include creation of a mercado featuring the Farmers Market and other vendors, promotion of retail development and housing, and ensuring historical preservation, which is an important part of such a project. Plans also include expansion of Midland Center, possible redesign of parking on some downtown streets and removal of parking on others, as well as other innovations to make the downtown district more user-friendly.

This is an exciting effort with outstanding potential to pump life back into the Midland downtown district — and that will benefit the entire community in a positive manner.

We look forward to watching Midland's downtown brought back to life and thank Mayor Burns and all the others who are involved in this project for their hard work.

Clinton lead could ultimately disappear

WASHINGTON—Dole's campaign would be investing inordinate amounts of money and hope in its "Sure, if I could" ad if the ad's point were really just about drugs. The ad features the MTV clip of candidate Clinton in 1992, grinning like a nervously ingratiating freshman during fraternity rush week. He is asked, "If you had it to do all over again, would you inhale?" and he responds, "Sure, if I could. I tried before."

Will

The ad is supposed to buttress Dole's contention that inadequate presidential "leadership" explains the surge in drug use among young people in the last four years. However, it is hard to convince this common-sensical country that presidents, by their rhetorical cues, have large consequences, particularly among young people, for many of whom the existence of a president is only a vague rumor.

This president, on another MTV appearance, unhesitatingly — not to mention invertebrately — answered an ill-mannered young woman's impertinent question about his preference, boxers or briefs, in underwear. (Characteristically, he semi-endorsed both by answering "usually briefs.") What both MTV appearances, particularly the one in the Dole drug ad, really illustrate is Clinton's (to borrow Jefferson's acid words about Lafayette) "canine appetite for popularity."

One of the few encouraging thoughts for Republicans is that Clinton, his standing in polls notwithstanding, enjoys little genuine popularity, partly because people who so ravenously drool for it rarely get it. Because there is such a small reservoir of real affection for him, Republicans can hope that a potentially election-swinging number of voters have not "come to closure" for Clinton.

Many Republican leaders believe that more and more voters are making up their minds later and later. That is why in 1994 the national party sent no money out to congressional candidates before Oct. 15. Undecided or lightly committed voters, if asked by a poll taker to state a preference, are apt to do so, but they are apt to remain undecided or lightly committed.

Many Republican leaders also believe that the compression of the news cycle stimulates volatility in the electorate. Thirty years ago, it could take days, sometimes weeks, to turn public attention from one topic to another. Today, with CNN, C-SPAN and MSNBC and other journalistic hypodermics for political junkies, the conversation of the country can be changed in a few hours by grabbing the attention of an influential minority of voters.

Of course Clinton, sitting on his lead, wants to run out the clock without volatility. Hence his continuing mimicking of Republicanism. In 1956 in San Francisco, comedian Mort Sahl regaled nightclub audiences by saying, "Eisenhower stands for 'gradualism.' Stevenson stands for 'moderation.' Between these two extremes, we the people must choose!" Today Clinton wants a similarly soft-edged choice. While he warns against the "extremism" of the Republican-controlled Congress, Republicans are chewing their carpets in their anger over his acceptance speech at the Democratic convention, in which he essentially took credit for 13 actions of that Congress — seven of them from the Republican Contract.

Republicans can take cold comfort from the fact that the blurriness Clinton wants will minimize his coattails. Presidential landslides are more likely to pull along congressional candidates when the election involves clear differentiations. And it is arguable — with a large caveat — that if by mid-October Dole's weakness convinces the country that the presidential outcome is obvious, that will improve Republican chances of not merely holding control of Congress, but of enlarging their majorities in both houses.

Peter Hart, a Democrat who does polling for The Wall Street Journal and NBC, finds that when people are asked if they would prefer Republicans or Democrats to control Congress, the result is a statistical dead heat. However, when voters are asked to assume Clinton is re-elected and to choose between a Republican Congress to restrain him or a Democratic Congress to implement his agenda, they favor the Republicans, 53-39.

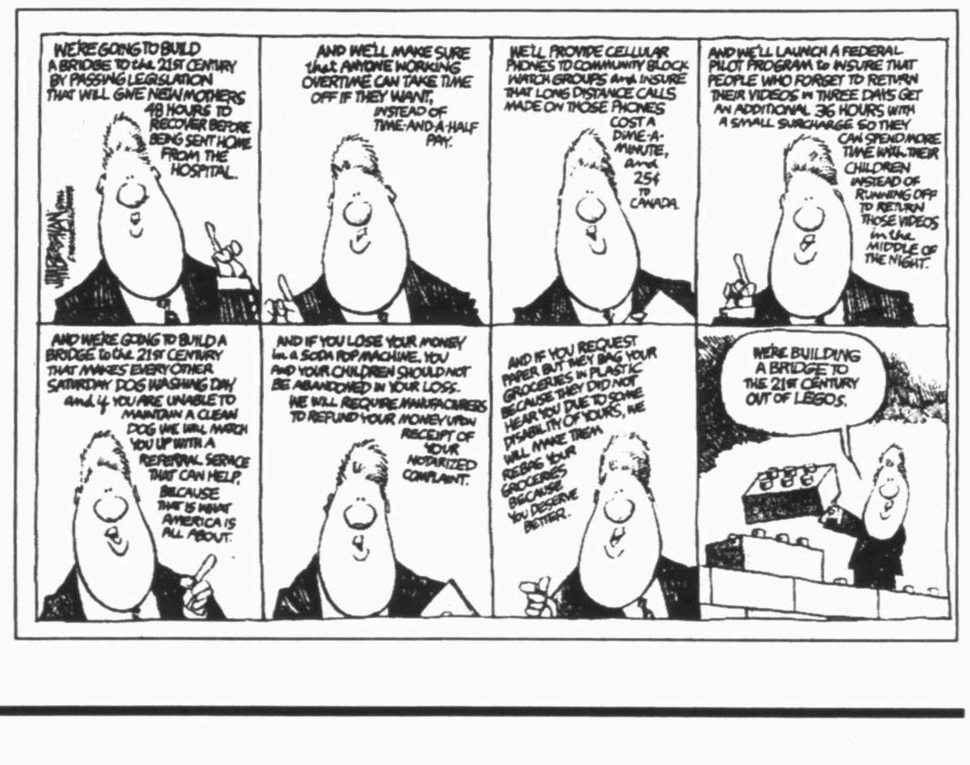

The caveat is that Dole's weakness could depress Republican turnout, thereby defeating some congressional candidates. Which makes Republicans wish they had a Democratic version of the "Gingrich card" they could play--some fright figure to energize their base and lure wavering voters. They do.

In Kansas, two Senate seats are at stake because of two Republican retirements — Dole's and Nancy Kassebaum's. Republican Rep. Sam Brownback, running for Dole's seat, warns audiences that if Democrats control the Senate, the committee Kassebaum chaired — Labor and Human Resources — would be chaired by ... Ted Kennedy.

Audible gasps. Women with the vapors. Urgent calls to travel agents to book one-way tickets to Australia. Republicans may spend October playing the Kennedy card.

ANOTHER VIEW

Clinton-Dole debate should exclude Perot

The Commission on Presidential Debates was absolutely correct to recommend that Ross Perot be excluded from the showdown between Bill Clinton and Bob Dole. Simply put, Perot has no realistic chance of winning in November and as such should not clutter up the stage that holds the only two men who could prevail.

Yes, we realize that the decision has provided Perot with a lifetime of material for tirades about a corrupt system that tries to keep noble reformers like him frozen out.

Yes, we realize that many Americans think Perot should be included out of some vague stab at "fairness" — even though 95 percent of the electorate has so far told pollsters they will not pull the lever for the Reform Party candidate. (Perhaps this year's lack of support for Perot could have something to do with his erratic record and bizarre personality.)

Yes, we realize that many comedians are quipping that Bob Dole doesn't have a realistic chance of being elected president, being down 20-something points in most polls. And yes, we realize that polls are not perfect and should not be used alone to determine this question.

But setting aside the "entertainment" factor of Perot's presence and even the perception of Clinton's huge lead, almost no serious observers believe that the Texan will be taking the oath of office from the chief justice of the Supreme Court on Jan. 20, 1997. The debates should be focused on the candidates who could win in November, and unlike 1992 when he got 19 percent of the vote, Perot isn't in that group this time. ...

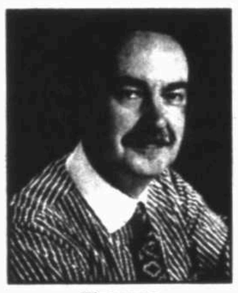

The important thing is to let Clinton and Dole face each other one-on-one in a fair format. For many Americans, the presidential debates are the single most important factor that helps them make up their minds, and something that important shouldn't be trivialized.

Pro-choice representative refuses to toe line

Occasionally one finds a political figure with enough integrity to refuse to toe the special-interest line and instead look into an issue and do what's right in light of the evidence.

Thomas

Rep. Marge Roukema, a pro-choice moderate Republican from New Jersey, decided that instead of voting in lock-step with the rest of her pro-choice colleagues, she would go beyond the sloganeering and the sound bites. Though Roukema voted against the original bill banning partial-birth abortion — a procedure in which a fully formed baby is delivered feet first and a shunt inserted in its head sucks out the brains — she switched sides and voted to override President Clinton's veto of the measure.

The reasons Roukema gave for her change were as honest as they were profound. She said that her concerns about protecting the mother's life had been answered, putting the lie to pro-choicers' charges that the bill would jeopardize women's lives. She also said she was satisfied that doctors would not be prosecuted if the procedure was performed in dire circumstances.

Explaining her veto override vote, Roukema said something that should hearten pro-lifers who might be getting discouraged. (No wonder — on the horizon is the abortion pill (RU 486) that takes us not to the 21st century but backtracks to the 1930s when other categories of human life were deemed unworthy of official protection and technology was used to speed up the killing process, making it more efficient.)

Roukema said: "Over time, I've been reading about this and informing myself. It's a decision that was very difficult to make, but I decided (partial-birth abortion) comes too close to infanticide."

What a refreshingly new approach to this fractious issue! She took the time to inform herself. As we rush to legalize almost every questionable behavior, it is heartening to see at least one public figure take the time penetrate the hype and discover the facts. If Congress will not say no to a grisly procedure that results in the death of a fully formed and viable baby, what will it say no to?

Most importantly, the debate over partial-birth abortion shows that the real extremists are on the pro-choice side. So radical and committed are they to the notion that a woman has the right to do anything she wishes to another human life that they view any attempt to regulate abortion as akin to depriving women of the vote or equal pay for the same work. Having right to kill their babies — according to their jaundiced and twisted rationale — somehow empowers women in a positive way.

Quite the opposite. A nation that tolerates the wholesale slaughter of 30 million babies cannot be said to be helping women. Today there is assistance — financial and emotional — for every woman with an unplanned pregnancy, so "freedom" is no longer the issue (if it ever was). The question is whether a pregnant woman will put her short-term self-interest on hold to take the long view and bless her child. A woman bestows no greater gift than life.

Roukema finds partial-birth abortion too close to infanticide. Now if other members of Congress not fully informed on abortion, its history and its horror, would demonstrate similar integrity, perhaps they might see things differently. Abortion — partial birth and otherwise — not only damages to the women who have them but the nation that allows them.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Sept. 26, the 270th day of 1996. There are 96 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 26, 1789, Thomas Jefferson was appointed America's first Secretary of State; John Jay the first chief justice of the United States; Samuel Osgood the first Postmaster General; and Edmund Jennings Randolph the first Attorney General.

On this date:

In 1777, British troops occupied Philadelphia during the American Revolution.

In 1892, John Philip Sousa and his newly formed band performed publicly for the first time, at the Stillman Music Hall in Plainfield, N.J.

In 1914, the Federal Trade Commission was established.

In 1950, U.N. troops recaptured the South Korean capital of Seoul from the North Koreans.

In 1960, the first televised debate between presidential candidates Richard M. Nixon and John F. Kennedy took place in Chicago.

In 1980, the Cuban government abruptly closed Mariel Harbor, ending the "freedom flotilla" of Cuban refugees that began the previous April.

In 1981, the twin-engine Boeing 767 made its maiden flight at Everett, Wash.

In 1990, the Motion Picture Association of America announced it had created a new rating, "NC-17," designed to bar moviegoers under the age of 17 from certain films without the commercial stigma of the old "X" rating.

Ten years ago: William H. Rehnquist was sworn in as the 16th chief justice of the United States, while Antonin Scalia joined the Supreme Court as its 103rd member. Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone apologized for remarks he'd made about American minorities that were considered racist.

One year ago: The prosecution began its closing argument in the murder trial of O.J. Simpson.

ART BUCHWALD

Some would rather go to Radcliffe than have head shaved

As soon as the Virginia Military Institute voted to accept women at the school, a version of the following scene took place among alumni all over the state.

Buchwald

"Alice, I have good news for you. You can now enroll in VMI, my alma mater, which I have loved all my life."

"Daddy, I don't want to go to VMI. I want to go to Radcliffe."

"Shame on you. Radcliffe is for girls."

"But I am a girl."

"VMI will give you the steel and discipline that your brother and I have. I have dreamed of this moment for years. The fact that you can now enroll is an opportunity you can bless the Supreme Court for. Just think. You'll be the first Donahue woman to attend VMI, and your daughters and granddaughters will follow suit. I can't wait for you to be a brother rat."

"Dad, I read that they are going to shave the heads of the women cadets to teach them a lesson."

"You won't be sorry. One day when you're in the trenches of Malaysia, you will thank VMI for shaving your head. You will also understand that they had to shave your head to wash your brains."

"Daddy, I really don't want to spend my college years doing push-ups."

"Bite your tongue. Everyone has to do push-ups. You can't fire missiles at the Iraqis if you are unable to flex your muscles. VMI is the perfect school for you."

"If I can't go to Radcliffe, can I go to Smith?"

"They don't teach you character at Smith. VMI is the only institution where they instruct you on how to throw yourself on a live hand grenade and win the Medal of Honor."

"I was hoping to become an interior decorator, not a war hero."

"I'd hate to see you waste your life drawing pictures of living rooms when you could be on a 29-mile hike with only one canteen of water and cold C-rations. That's what I always envisioned for my daughter."

"Daddy, I appreciate you wanting me to attend your alma mater, but I am not a chip off the old block. I believe in the military, but not as a career for me."

"But I've already sent off your application. I get special treatment because I was in the top 10 percent of my class. I can't very well cancel the application. It would be a cowardly thing to do."

"I'm not going. I am not interested in carrying a rifle around and eating VMI food. I don't want to prove that I'm better than a man when it comes to running the obstacle course, nor do I want male cadets chewing me out because my shoes aren't shined."

"I never thought a daughter of mine would reject the opportunity to learn how to deal with mental pressure, physical stress and psychological bonding. You've let me down, and you've let my school down. You'll have to live with this for the rest of your life."

"Sorry, Pops, but maybe you can come visit me if I go to SweetBriar."

"Doesn't any young Southern woman care about going to Somalia any more?"

NATO defense ministers order plans made for Bosnia follow-up force

BERGEN, Norway (AP) — NATO nations, accepting that an alliance-led military force will be needed in Bosnia beyond the current Dec. 20 deadline, told their generals Wednesday to begin making preparations.

U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry and his 15 fellow ministers also agreed that no significant withdrawals of the 52,000 troops in Bosnia can be made before the end of November. That decision is subject to confirmation next week by the North Atlantic Council, NATO's top policymaking body.

The bulk of those forces will be used to oversee municipal elections, currently planned for November. Gen. Klaus Naumann, chairman of NATO's Military Committee, said the elections pose a potentially greater security threat than Bosnia's national elections, which were held this month.

Gen. George Joulwan, NATO's supreme allied commander, told the ministers that it was time to move from an "implementation force," as outlined in the Dayton peace agreement that ended the Bosnian war, to a "stabilization force."

Perry refused to commit American troops to any new force — a decision American officials insisted had nothing to do with the Nov. 5 presidential election.

Nonetheless, there was a widespread feeling among NATO diplomats that Perry's hesitation was merely an effort to avoid publicly exposing the Clinton administration in the run-up to the U.S. presidential election.

"It was obvious that Perry shares our evaluation, but he couldn't say anything that would bind his government," said German Defense Minister Volker Ruehe.

French Defense Minister Charles Millon repeated France's position that if the United States did not participate in a post-December Bosnia peace force, France would withdraw its 7,500 troops.

The defense ministers asked Joulwan to produce four plans for Bosnia:

—one for a total withdrawal of the troops from 30 nations;

—one for a deterrence force only, capable of preventing another outbreak of fighting;

—one for a "deterrence-plus" force that would go further to stabilize the overall situation;

—and one to continue the present mission.

According to a NATO official who spoke on condition of anonymity, Joulwan told the ministers he needed a strong, capable core force in Bosnia until Dec. 20 to ensure stability. The official said there was a consensus among the ministers that it was too soon to declare peace in Bosnia.

Joulwan also asked for clear guidance on the tasks he would be expected to fulfill with the follow-up force.

The ministers, who were to meet Thursday with Russian Defense Minister Igor Rodionov, also discussed Moscow's opposition to NATO plans to expand its membership to include former East Bloc nations.

With Wednesday's announcement that Russian President Boris Yeltsin's major heart bypass surgery would be delayed six to 10 weeks, the ministers were not keen to provide ammunition to Yeltsin opponents who want Russia to be tougher on NATO.

Millon insisted, however, that "enlargement and relations with Russia go together, but are not dependent."

Taliban rebels assault Kabul

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Rebel soldiers routed government troops Wednesday as they swept into the capital — the last major government stronghold. Weary retreating soldiers said at least 100 fighters from both sides were killed in the rebel advance.

Government jets bombed rebel positions in retaliation, as President Burhanuddin Rabbani's troops desperately tried to hold onto what little of the country they still controlled.

The Taliban rebels, who want to establish a strict Islamic government, captured the eastern town of Sarobi on Wednesday, then the Kabul suburb of Pul-e-Charkhi.

The rebels then wrested control of the Custom House, a four-story rocket-demolished building, six miles from the presidential palace in the heart of Kabul, said a government commander known only as Gen. Muslim.

"There is a lot of heavy fighting along the front lines," said Muslim. "But we have pushed them out before, and we can do it again."

Inside the city of 750,000, the streets were deserted as residents hid from the battles. It wasn't immediately known whether Rabbani was still in the capital.

Government jets screamed in low over Pul-e-Charkhi, dropping bombs on Taliban positions before returning to Baghram military airfield, 20 miles north of Kabul.

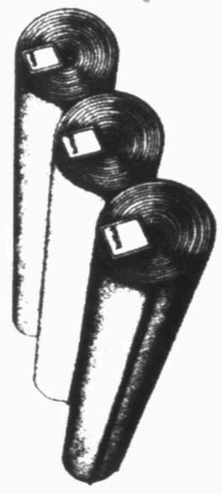

There were no immediate reports of casualties from the bombing raids, but witnesses reported at least 10 sorties.

The Taliban are religious students who broke off from other factions they claimed were riddled with corruption. The rebel groups had united in 1992 to oust the Moscow-backed communist government.

MISD sets up Parent Information Center, complies with judgment

From Staff Reports

Midland Independent School District has established a new Parent Information Center to comply with the Agreed Judgment plan, an agreement between MISD and the U.S. Justice Department.

Dalia Benavides, parent information specialist, will head up the center. The center has been developed to offer information to parents about programs in the district, to provide a resource for parents to contact for assistance, to offer assistance with direct school and parent communications and to assist with the development and presentation of parent-oriented workshops.

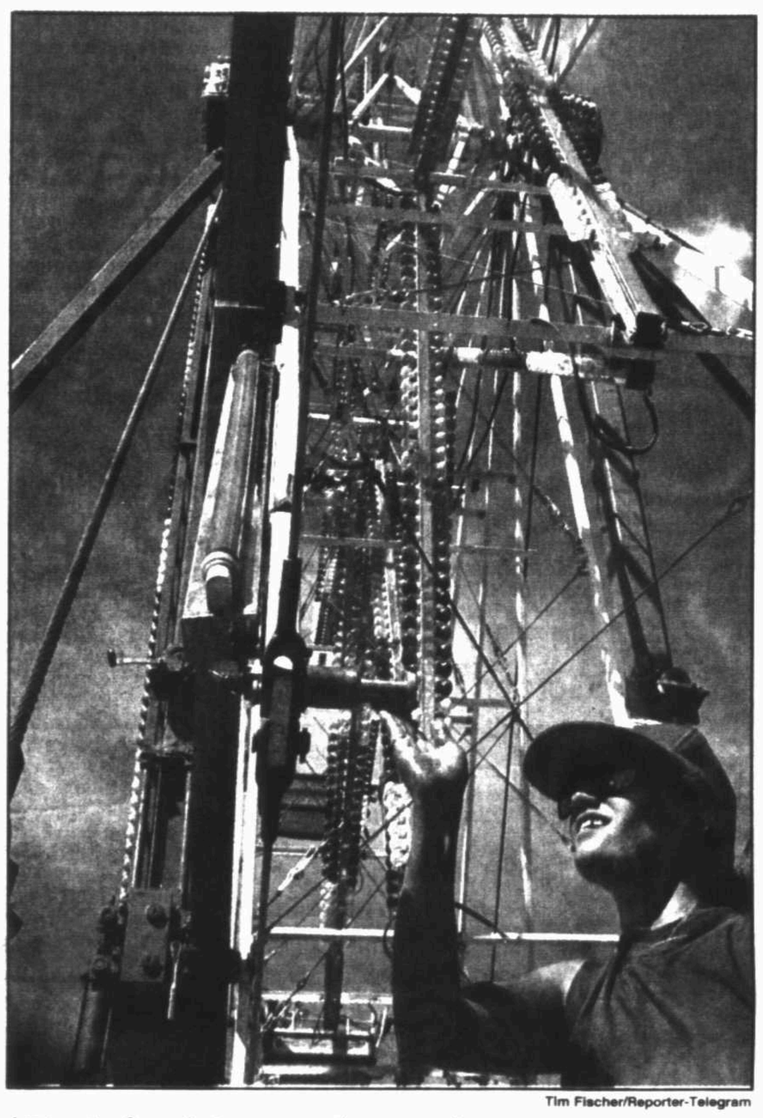

'I have developed a particular passion for students who face hurdles, such as limited language proficiency.'

— Dalia Benavides, West Texas native who will head new MISD center

Ms. Benavides, a West Texas native, has taught bilingual education. She will assist parents with information on majority-to-minority transfers and with communications with school officials. "I want to be a resource for parents so they feel there is someone in MISD just for them, to be able to help parents find sources and answers to situations and ultimately, to give parents the information they need to make better educational decisions for their children," Ms. Benavides said. "I have developed a particular passion for students who face hurdles, such as limited language proficiency."

Ms. Benavides earned a bachelor's degree in secondary education from Sul Ross University. She has a bilingual endorsement to teach bilingual education from kindergarten through eighth grade. She taught bilingual education four years at the elementary level and taught English four years at the secondary level.

The Parent Information Center is located on the second floor of the MISD administration building in the communications office, Suite 220. Office hours are 8 a.m.-5 p.m. For more information, call 689-1014.

Council may buy land, lease it to exposition center

■ Purchase of property is contingent on city first reaching arrangement with organizers of proposed project, official says.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The city of Midland has reserved the option to purchase 127 acres of land for the purpose of leasing it for the proposed West Texas Exposition Center.

The City Council on Tuesday gave the go-ahead to enter into an agreement for the right to buy the land — off Interstate 20 west of Loop 250 — for $100,000 before the end of the year.

Purchase of the property is contingent on the city first reaching a lease arrangement with organizers involved in the proposed Exposition Center, a city official said. If a deal is made, the city would recoup money spent through lease payments and a purchase agreement.

A lease agreement is anticipated to be reached by the end of October, according to Karl Reiter, who sits on the board and executive steering committee for West Texas Exposition Center.

Securing the land — and the backing of the city — will be an important step in making the center a reality, Reiter said. "It was a key ingredient to the rest of the money raising," he said.

So far organizers have verbal commitments for about a quarter-million dollars for the project, which will cost an estimated $2 1/2 million, Reiter said. All money raised has come from private contributions, he said.

Although a specific time frame for the project hasn't been outlined, Reiter said, the necessary dollars are anticipated to be raised by late next year with com-

President of hospital district board resigns; search to fill vacancy starts

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

The search has begun for an appointee to fill a vacancy on the Midland County Hospital District's Board of Directors, created by the loss of board President Charles Coffman, who is moving to Dallas.

The board accepted Coffman's resignation Wednesday during a meeting of the board at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

Coffman was elected president in May and has served on the board since 1992.

Vice president David Darmstettar was elected to fulfill the job of president and Steve Kuzmich, who was elected to the board in May, was elected to serve as vice president.

"I've enjoyed it," Coffman said of his time spent directing the hospital district.

A retired manager of a prominent petroleum company in Midland, Coffman and his wife are moving to Dallas to be close to their two children and two grandchildren, he said.

There is not a specific time frame for filling the empty slot on the seven-member board, said Laurie Johnson, public

Representatives from citizen police academies in eight states gather in Midland for workshop

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

Joining citizens and police to fight crime was the goal of a national symposium of citizen police academies held in Midland Wednesday.

Around 200 civilians and law officers from eight states met at the fourth annual symposium to discuss ways to start citizen police academies (CPAs) and how to use citizens to assist police agencies.

"We have a lot of people here from cities without citizens police academies that are seeing how they can introduce it to their department," Midland police Sgt. David Garcia said. "They are also here to learn about life after CPA and advanced training."

By educating the public through CPAs, citizens learn not only the concerns of the Police Department but the police learn the concerns of

Texans for Lawsuit Reform honors Craddick for tort legislation

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Craddick

The group Texans for Lawsuit Reform honored state Rep. Tom Craddick (R-Midland) at the Petroleum Club Wednesday for his work in helping to reform tort legislation in Texas.

With more than 100 area civic and business leaders present, Craddick was presented an award by Richard Weekley, founder of Texans for Lawsuit Reform.

"Without the determined leadership of Tom Craddick, we would have been unable to begin repairing the tattered reputation of the Texas civil justice system," Weekley said.

In the last legislative session, Craddick helped to pass eight bills addressing lawsuit abuse and sponsored one of these, a bill to reduce the number of frivolous lawsuits filed.

The frivolous lawsuit bill makes it easier for judges to impose sanctions on parties who offer pleading or motions that are without merit or are intended to harass or cause delay in court cases.

This law protects people from having to spend money to defend themselves against lawsuits without merit, Craddick said.

"The courts shouldn't have to hear those," he said.

Lawsuit reform in the last session includes a cap on unreasonable punitive damages, limitations on judicial campaign contributions, reform of the Deceptive Trade Practices Act and establishment of the principle of "proportional liability" in which a lawsuit defendant can only be held financially responsible for damages he or she caused.

"For years, Texas has earned the unfortunate reputation as the lawsuit capital of the nation, because of the wild unpredictability of our civil justice system," Weekley said. "With the help of Tom Craddick's keen legislative insight and the help of tens of thousands of concerned citizens, Texas took a giant step to begin correcting many of the abuses that have plagued our civil justice system over the past 20 years."

Craddick praised the accomplishments of Texans for Lawsuit Reform, saying such groups are necessary to focus attention on issues such as educa-

MHS student to join citizens panel during 2-day workshop

From Staff Reports

A Midland High School student has joined the panel of citizens who will participate in the "From Barriers to Bridges" workshop at 6:30 p.m. Monday.

LaCrecha Gilbert, an MHS cheerleader and president of her youth group at Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church, has been added to the panel to give the students' point of view at the "From Barriers to Bridges: Moving Toward Reconciliation in Our Community."

Deadline for persons to reserve a light supper — $4 a person — is 5 p.m. today. The meal will be served at 5:30 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall of First Presbyterian Church sanctuary. For dinner reservations, call 684-7821, ext. 38.

Educators planning to attend the Prayer Breakfast at 7 a.m. Tuesday at First Presbyterian Church may call the same phone number. There is no cost for the breakfast.

The Rev. Joan SalmonCampbell, pastor of St. Mark's Presbyterian Church in Cleveland, Ohio, will moderate the two-day workshop. She is the founder of the Diversity Training Institute. The workshop is being sponsored by the Midland Association of Churches.

As part of the two-day event, a worship service will be offered to the community at 7 p.m. Tuesday at First United Methodist Church (FUMC), 305 N. Baird St. A combined choir and a processional led by children will open the worship service. The combined choir will be directed by Suzanne Cate, minister of music at FUMC. Anyone interested in singing in the choir is asked to be at the church by 6 p.m. Tuesday to practice for the 7 p.m. service. Also performing will be the Iva Boze Community Choir and the Spiritual Forces directed by Milton Jones, guitarist Albert Madrid and a group from Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

A group of children and adults will perform a liturgical dance to "How Blessed Are They."

Following the service, refreshments will be served in the Fellowship Hall. The service is open to the public. Anyone needing child care or more information may call 682-3701.

BBB warning

Envelope-stuffer advertisements promise a lot but deliver little, according to the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin.

"You can look in any newspaper and see the ads that promise lots of money with little effort by stuffing envelopes. The ads state postage and envelopes will be supplied and all you have to do is put them together to earn $2 an envelope," Dick Rowland, BBB president said.

The U.S. Post Office advises envelope stuffing is a highly mechanized process, eliminating the need for home-workers and violators of postal laws face charges of federal mail fraud.

"In reality, the company requests a processing fee and the company sells the consumer information on how to do the same thing they're doing," Rowland said. "Think about it. Why would a firm want to send you a box full of envelopes, postage and papers, when they could do it for a fraction of the cost in their own office?"

"Before you send money to a company that promises you a job, ask yourself a simple question. If I was interviewing at a local store and the manager required me to pay him for the job, what would I do?"

Contact the Better Business Bureau at 563-1880 or 1-800-592-4433 for a free pamphlet of work-at-home opportunities.

Toole killed Adam Walsh, Lucas says

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Ottis Elwood Toole killed 6-year-old Adam Walsh in 1981 and then showed his traveling companion — convicted murderer Henry Lee Lucas — the remains of the boy that have never been found, Lucas said Wednesday.

"It wasn't completely decomposed," Lucas, awaiting execution for a Texas killing, said of the headless remains Toole exposed for him in a shallow grave. "He kicked it uncovered and showed it to me. I got sick about it. I said 'Let's get the hell out of here.' I left. I never heard no more about it until '83.

"What I heard is he (Toole) showed police where the head was at. That's what a police officer told me. Whether that was true, I don't know. I said I didn't know. I didn't want to be involved. I let it go."

The Walsh case, which set off a nationwide manhunt, has gained renewed interest with word Tuesday from Florida prison officials that Toole, 49, died last week in a prison there of cirrhosis of the liver. He was buried on prison grounds because nobody claimed his body.

Police believe Toole killed Adam in 1981 after abducting the boy from a Hollywood, Fla. mall. Police said Toole confessed to killing the boy, whose severed head was found two weeks after his abduction, but he later recanted and never was charged.

Toole also confessed to scores of murders with his Lucas, saying the two had killed nearly 200 people as they traveled the country. Lucas, awaiting execution in Texas on an unrelated case, has denied involvement in any killings. He, too, has a history of credibility problems, confessing to hundreds of slayings and then recanting them all.

"I'm not saying this because Ottis is dead," Lucas said Wednesday. "I've wanted this off my chest for a long time. But when all this other stuff started I didn't want to get involved in it. It was just one thing after another. I've got enough of these false confessions on me as it is."

IRA LEE WATKINS

Services for Ira L. Watkins are set for 2:30 p.m. Thursday, September 26, 1996, at First United Methodist Church in Sterling City, Texas, with Rev. Hilton Chancellor, Chaplain for Home Hospice of Odessa, officiating, and Rev. Rae Noah of Agape Way of El Reno, Oklahoma assisting. Interment will follow at Foster Cemetery, in Sterling City. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mr. Watkins died Monday at a local nursing home. He was born December 9, 1911 in Hardeman County, Texas to Mark Robert Watkins and Jessie Jones. He was reared on farm land outside of Meadow, Texas. He earned a Master's degree from Texas Tech in Lubbock, Texas in 1939. His masters thesis was the History of Sterling County, which was later published. He taught school in Forsan, Texas, where he met Frances E. Coulson. They married on January 15, 1936 in Forsan. While residing in Glasscock County, he went into the ranching business in Reagan and Sterling Counties for many years. They moved to Midland in August, 1955, and he began teaching for the Midland Independent School District, where he taught for twenty years and retired. During his early retirement, Mr. Watkins volunteered for the A.M.O.S., food bank and Meals on Wheels.

Mr. Watkins has been a member of St. Luke's United methodist Church since 1955, where he served as a teacher for many years and wrote articles for the Church newspaper. He was a member of the Retired Teachers Association and the Midland Odessa Symphony Guild.

He was preceded in death by his wife, Frances, on March 25, 1985, and by a daughter Deanne Marie Watkins, on February 18, 1982.

He is survived by one daughter, Karla Jean Watkins of Midland; one brother, H.A. Watkins of Colorado City, Texas; one sister, Lois Bingham of Socorro, New Mexico; four grandchildren, Mark Templeton Brown of Lubbock, Michelle Brown of Midland, Angelia Marie Mercurio-Standridge of Houston and Phillip Lee Mercurio of Midland; and many family members in Sterling City, as well as many friends in West Texas. Pallbearers are Daryl Adams, Harold Patterson, Skeet Foster & David Foster.

In lieu of flowers, the family request memorials be directed to Home Hospice 3053 E. University Odessa, TX 79762 or AGAPE Kids Ranch 1113 Skyview Dr. El Reno, OK 73036.

"CPAs increase understanding and draw the (police's) blue curtain aside," said William B. Clark, assistant chief of the Honolulu Police Department. "Here, groups that don't have a CPA and those that do come and share ideas. The idea is about getting people involved and building a partnership between police and the citizens."

'CPAs increase understanding and draw the (police's) blue curtain aside. Here, groups that don't have a CPA and those that do come and share ideas.'

— William B. Clark, assistant chief of the Honolulu Police Department

In addition to giving information on how to start a CPA, the symposium advises law enforcement on how to use CPA graduates to deter crime.

After 13 CPA classes in Midland, graduates have been used to monitor handicap parking — a possible first in the country — as well as in communications and fingerprinting. Later this month, Midland CPA alumni will help police monitor neighborhoods as part of Citizens on Patrol (C.O.P.), Sgt. Garcia said.

"CPA alumni save the taxpayer money by donating their time free of charge," he said.

Because of the success of CPA alumni in fighting crime, the symposium also gives advanced training on how to use alumni in crime trends like gangs, terrorism and sex offenses, Sgt. Garcia said.

After training, each of the attendants receive a certificate of completion, and they get the chance to use their knowledge during a staged 'Who Done It' crime scene, with the amateur sleuth receiving a trophy.

Other goals of the annual meeting are to set up a governing board to oversee future CPA symposiums.

"We need to set the stage for the future, and Midland has played a pivotal role by making a lot of changes to positively affect the program," Sgt. Garcia said.

The symposium continues through Friday at the Midland Holiday Inn.

pletion of the center in early to middle 1998.

Plans for the non-profit center call for two arenas — one indoors, one outdoors — a picnic area for concerts, eight barns with 400 horse stalls and a western heritage museum.

Organizers expect the center to attract a wide variety of events. The family-owned facility would host events including horse and livestock shows, rodeos, fairs, educational seminars, trade and craft shows, art exhibits and concerts.

The idea for the Exposition Center came almost two years ago. Many businesses and individuals, Midland County commissioners, the City Council and the Midland Chamber of Commerce have since expressed support for the project.

tion and anti-drug abuse legislation in the thousands of proposed bills that are circulated each legislative session. "You need some groups to target them," he said.

When the next legislative session begins in January, Craddick said he will support a further reform bill dealing with third-party liability in worker's compensation cases.

This reform is designed to repair a gap in the principle of proportional fault allocation adopted in 1995 legislation that compels juries to allocate the employer's "fault" to the other parties in the lawsuit, according to TLR literature.

"Twenty years of erosion in our civil laws could not be solved in a single session of the Legislature so we will need the help of citizens and legislators like Tom Craddick," Weekley said.

relations director for MHMC.

Board policy dictates that they solicit nominations from area civic groups and organizations such as chambers of commerce.

This allows the community to have input in the selection process, Ms. Johnson said.

At some point, three finalists will be discussed by the board of directors and one chosen to fill the empty seat, she said.

This person will serve the remainder of Coffman's term, which is almost two years.

This nominee will face public election to the post in the spring of 1998.

The elected board oversees the expenditure of tax money, which is used to offset the cost of treating Midland's indigent and uninsured citizens.

The board sets the tax rate and approves the work of the hospital's board of trustees, who make recommendations regarding the operation of the hospital as a whole.

Sides disagree if abortion numbers will rise with RU-486

DALLAS (AP) — Abortions will become more accessible statewide when the French pill RU-486 becomes available next year as expected, say Texas doctors, abortion clinic officials and abortion opponents.

But those on both sides of the abortion debate disagree on how much access will grow, and whether the drug's availability will increase the total number of abortions.

The pregnancy-ending pill, also known by the chemical name mifepristone, is followed two days later by another pill that causes strong uterine contractions to expel the fetus. The process can be painful and cause bleeding. It must be monitored closely, requiring three separate doctor exams for safety.

Abortion providers and opponents alike expect some doctors who are unwilling to do surgical abortions to do medical abortions by prescribing the drug. Such doctors, they say, will be less fearful of protests by abortion opponents and won't have to buy expensive equipment such as vacuum aspirators.

"With the medical abortion, then more physicians in rural areas will be able to provide the service confidentially to their patients," said Peggy Romberg, executive director of the Austin-based Texas Family Planning Association, a group focusing on access to abortion and contraception.

RU-486 cleared its last major hurdle Sept. 18 when the Food and Drug Administration said it was safe and effective when used under a doctor's close supervision. The FDA withheld final approval until it receives more information about how the drug would be manufactured and labeled.

The drug should be in doctors' offices by mid- to late 1997, according to the nonprofit Population Council, which holds the U.S. rights to market the drug.

Abortions currently are provided in 16 of the state's 254 counties, Ms. Romberg said. According to the Texas Department of Health, 87,501 abortions were done statewide in 1995.

Some of the new abortion providers are expected to be obstetrician-gynecologists who don't perform surgical abortions.

A 1995 survey sponsored by the Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation found that 33 percent of obstetrician-gynecologists who don't perform surgical abortions said they would be likely to prescribe RU-486. The survey by the Menlo Park, Calif.-based foundation included 307 doctors nationwide.

Texas has 2,604 obstetrician-gynecologists, according to the Texas Board of Medical Examiners. Neither the state nor abortion services groups keep count of how many do abortions.

Dr. Terry Kuhlmann, president of the Austin-based Texas Association of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, predicted that fewer doctors than people expected would provide abortions once the drug becomes available.

"I think there's a fair number of physicians that just don't like to do abortions," he said. "I'm sure access will go up a little bit, but it may not be quite as much as what people think."

But Kathryn Allen, director for community services Planned Parenthood of Dallas and Northeast Texas, said doctors have told her differently.

"We have had many physicians who don't provide surgical abortions say they would provide medical abortions," she said.

Ms. Allen noted that the drug allows abortions earlier in the gestation period — from 10 days after conception through about seven weeks — compared with surgical methods, which cannot be performed until the embryo is about 7 weeks old.

"I think (doctors) feel more comfortable terminating a pregnancy earlier. It also makes it much more private," she said.

The confidentiality does indeed mean more doctors are likely to provide abortions using RU-486, said Bill Price of the anti-abortion group Texans United for Life.

"In some places, I think it probably will be a lot easier for certain physicians to provide this without being noticed," Price said. "But I don't think that's going to be the case in smaller communities.

"Any physician that gets involved in this is going to find themselves in a tremendous amount of controversy. To think otherwise is to ignore the history of this issue."

Facilities that already have been targets of abortion protests said they certainly will offer RU-486.

Planned Parenthood of Houston and Southeast Texas Inc., the state's largest affiliate of the national organization, will begin offering RU-486 at its central clinic in Houston as soon as possible. It also will look at dispensing the drug at its 10 clinics in towns like Lufkin, Rosenberg and Stafford, said spokeswoman Rebecca White.

Bush weighs effect of instituting welfare changes

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas coffers could collect more federal dollars by moving quickly to fulfill requirements under federal welfare changes.

But questions about the final impact of the recently passed federal law have top state officials cautiously weighing the state's next move.

Mike McKinney, Texas' health and human services commissioner, has recommended submitting a state welfare plan to federal officials as soon as possible.

That would start the process under which the state would collect additional welfare dollars. But the state also would have to start moving people off welfare rolls and submit to other federal requirements tied to the additional funds.

Karen Hughes, a spokeswoman for Gov. George W. Bush, on Wednesday said Bush and Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock want to make certain the federal measures don't override state welfare changes approved last year.

"The Legislature debated those changes and passed welfare reforms tailor-made for Texas," Ms. Hughes said. "We want to make sure that our Texas welfare reforms supersede federal law in every opportunity."

Ms. Hughes said one area where the federal law was unclear was in the definition of a job.

Under the federal law, welfare recipients must be moved as quickly as possible from government assistance to work. But federal officials have not yet defined work, Ms. Hughes said.

Ms. Hughes said state welfare laws define work to include enrollment in educational or approved vocational programs. She said state lawmakers agreed enrollment in educational courses is a step toward getting a self-sustaining job.

Ms. Hughes said federal officials have agreed to allow the state definition to stand for Texas. But she said other such questions remain unanswered.

For example, Bush is concerned that other state changes will conflict with federal measures that remain undefined. Ms. Hughes said if that happens, the governor and other top state officials want to make sure the state changes stand for Texas.

The state can begin the new welfare law anytime between Oct. 1 and July 1, 1997.

Criminal appeals court upholds Blair's sentence in Estell slaying

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals on Wednesday upheld the death sentence of Michael Blair, who was convicted of the 1993 kidnapping and murder of 7-year-old Ashley Estell of Dallas.

The slaying of the youngster, who was abducted from a Plano park and strangled, spurred lawmakers last year to crack down on sex offenders with a package of measures known as "Ashley's Laws."

Blair at the time of the slaying was on parole after serving 18 months of a 10-year sentence for burglary and indecency with a child.

Prosecutors will ask for Blair's execution date to be set by a judge as soon as they receive the mandate from the appeals court, said Angela D'Amore, a Collin County assistant district attorney.

"We're very happy and satisfied that it has been affirmed," she said.

Blair, a Dallas carpet cleaner, still has appeal routes left to try, including in federal court. His lawyer didn't immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

Sen. Florence Shapiro, R-Plano, the driving force behind the package of laws targeting sex offenders, called Wednesday's action "an affirmation of the entire justice system."

"I think today, once again, Ashley Estell's death was not in vain. And with the passage of 'Ashley's Laws' in 1995, I think we have even stronger laws on the books in Texas than we did at the time Michael Blair murdered Ashley," she said. "Now I hope that justice will be swiftly carried out."

Among his arguments on appeal, Blair said the trial court erred by admitting testimony concerning the photo identification of his car by a witness. The witness identified it as the vehicle she had seen parked on the road where Ashley's body was later discovered.

Blair said the photo lineup of cars was improper because his was the only one pictured without a front license plate, parked in a covered area and with the passenger-side door and hatchback open.

The court disagreed, saying the lineup "was not impermissibly suggestive."

Ashley was murdered after she and her parents went to a park on Sept. 4, 1993, to watch a soccer tournament her brother was participating in. She disappeared after going to a playground near the field where the soccer match was being held.

Her body, clothed only in shorts, panties and socks, was found Sept. 5 next to a ditch along a dirt road a few miles away. Blair was later convicted in the case.

Senate Republicans report 6-month gap in White House records

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans investigating the FBI files controversy said Wednesday there was a six-month gap in White House records for mid-1994. That period came just after the gathering of sensitive background material on hundreds of Reagan and Bush-era presidential aides.

At a hearing, Senate Judiciary Committee chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, revealed that the White House security office kept a log identifying each presidential aide who sought an FBI background file and the name of the person whose file was reviewed. The log entries stop on March 29, 1994, and resume the following Sept. 21.

From late 1993 to early 1994, civilian Army detailee Anthony Marceca collected FBI background files on hundreds of Republican staffers from earlier administrations. Four months of investigation by the House and Senate has failed to turn up evidence that anyone else at the White House knew what Marceca was doing.

Raising the possibility that pages from the log are "missing," Hatch disclosed that Senate investigators have been unable to locate the ex-White House employee, Mari Anderson, who had custody of the log during that period.

Republicans said the gap raises the possibility the FBI background files were misused, but Democrats said such talk is unfounded speculation and that the lack of log entries is meaningless.

Former White House security chief Craig Livingstone told the committee that "to the best of my knowledge" Anderson didn't keep the log during that six months.

"There was a period of time evidently that we didn't" keep the log, said Livingstone, who resigned when the FBI files furor erupted in June.

Meanwhile, the White House said newly released Secret Service documents show the background data on Reagan and Bush appointees was gathered by mistake.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, discounted the White House assertion, saying the Secret Service lists were a type that the White House would have had to request specifically.

"It was a customized list" with dates of birth and Social Security numbers, said Grassley. "Somebody (inside the White House) had to request this list" and the questions are who asked for the lists and why, Grassley said.

Hatch said, "What list Mr. Marceca was using is irrelevant. He could have been using the White House phone book." The important point is Marceca knew he was using an over-inclusive list to collect FBI files, said Hatch, and "The only question is who else knew what Mr. Marceca was doing. So far we don't know the answers."

Whitewater prosecutors collected the lists in June as part of their investigation into the FBI files matter, and prosecutors provided copies to the White House on Tuesday.

In a letter to the White House, deputy Whitewater prosecutor John Bates said he was fulfilling an earlier pledge to provide copies "at such time when disclosure of the documents would not hinder or impede" the investigation.

"We believe that time has been reached," Bates said in his letter.

Man starts fire, shoots 4 in Oregon Scientology center

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A man carried a gun and a can of gasoline into a downtown Church of Scientology on Wednesday, starting a fire and shooting four people, including a pregnant woman.

The suspect surrendered after walking out of the church's Portland Celebrity Centre with a female hostage who was heard shouting: "Don't do anything. He's got a gun to my head." Police talked the man into releasing the woman unharmed and dropping his handgun.

Firefighters quickly put out the blaze and it did not cause serious damage.

The pregnant woman was hospitalized in critical condition with gunshots to her shoulder and abdomen. Two men were in serious condition and a fourth victim was hospitalized with a gunshot wound to the hip.

It was not immediately clear what motivated the shooting. The name of the suspect was not released.

Witnesses across the street at The Heathman Hotel said another suspect fled the scene. Police spokesman Lt. Cliff Madison said he had no information on a second suspect.

The building, located in the heart of downtown Portland, features big displays of Scientology books, and Scientologists often attempt to persuade passers-by to listen to talks about the religion.

"Any shooting is pretty disturbing. But our business is for the public so we're not going to keep people out," said Barbara Roland, a church community organizer.

Founded 40 years ago by science fiction writer L. Ron Hubbard, Scientology teaches that technology can expand the mind and help solve human problems.

Bomb explodes at home of Chargers' team doctor

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A package bomb blew up in a 14-year-old girl's face Wednesday after she picked it up outside the home of her stepfather, a team doctor for football's San Diego Chargers.

Shrapnel struck Jennifer Hutslar's upper body, but she was in good condition and expected to recover fully, fire Capt. Jeff Carle said.

The package was apparently addressed to Dr. Gary Losse, and the girl found it under the mailbox, police said. It exploded when she tried to open it about 7 a.m.

Police had no motive for the attack. Neighbors said they did not know why the Losse family would be targeted.

"My initial reaction was, 'I'm for the death penalty,'" said Jim Bouskos, who lives next door. "This kind of stuff has got to stop."

Police refused to say whether the package was delivered by mail or dropped off at the home in La Jolla, a wealthy San Diego neighborhood.

Losse is one of four doctors for the Chargers. He has served as the team's orthopedic surgeon since 1981 and has his own practice in San Diego.

"He's been a member of our family and we're just hopeful everybody will be OK," Chargers spokesman Bill Johnston said.

The neighborhood has little crime. But in May, Japanese scientist Tsunao Saitoh and his daughter, Loullie, were shot to death outside their home a few blocks from the Losses.

Police have speculated the shooting was a professional hit. They said there is no indication the bombing is related.

Clinton makes election-year offer of new bonds

CORAOPOLIS, Pa. (AP) — Bob Dole often chides President Clinton for offering "a million little programs" in an election-year grab for votes. Make that 1,000,001.

In his latest appeal to the middle class, Clinton unveiled details of a new government bond Wednesday that offers investors protection against inflation.

Calling it "a new way to save," the president told a subdued western Pennsylvania crowd that his initiative would provide "a solid rock upon which families build their futures and their dreams."

He said the Treasury Department will auction 10-year "inflation protection" notes starting in January and costing as little as $1,000. The bonds' principal will be protected against inflation, as measured by the consumer price index.

In addition, the administration plans to offer inflation protection to purchasers of certain types of savings bonds beginning no later than 1998. The savings bonds will be available for as little as $50; they will be tax-deferred until they are cashed.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin announced in May he would take the action, but details needed to be worked out. Announcing the particulars at a campaign rally is typical of Clinton's strategy to make the most of modest election-year initiatives.

Standing in the presidential spotlight, Clinton has again and again featured low-cost, low-impact proposals to portray himself as a can-do leader. His political team, armed with polls pinpointing middle-class issues, works in tandem with policy builders throughout the federal government to shape initiatives that help Clinton on the campaign trail.

He has proposed giving cellular telephones to neighborhood crime watch volunteers, creating alternate 911 numbers for non-emergency calls and financing local programs to combat teen truancy. He wants a national registry for sex offenders, a ban on guns for people convicted of misdemeanor domestic violence and "wanted" posters for parents who don't pay child support.

A dismissive Dole has accused Clinton of getting government too involved in people's business. "It seems sometimes they have a million little programs on how the government can tell people to run their lives better — the government's got this, the government's got this, the government's got this," Dole said in a recent speech.

The new bond proposal will begin modestly. The government offered $55 billion worth of regular 10-year notes for sale last year, but the amount of securities sold with the inflation protection will be much smaller.

"I think you'll initially see them relatively small because it's a new investment," Rubin said. He predicted the program would eventually increase the national savings rate.

The value of the bond, which pays interest twice a year, rises as prices rise. If inflation increases 3 percent in a given year, a $1,000 bond would be adjusted upward to $1,030 at the end of that year.

With the added protection, interest rates on the bonds will be lower than on regular 10-year notes. But the administration believes middle-class investors will welcome the shield against inflation.

Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, criticized the administration for creating a new type of government bond without first consulting Congress. He said the bonds, which he called a "major departure" from previous practice, would make it difficult for the government to reliably estimate future interest payments.

Lucid's trip about to end

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — She's traveled 75 million miles — equivalent to 157 trips to the moon and back — and watched the Earth transform itself from a glittery winter white to fertile spring brown to lush summer green.

After a record-long season of her own in space, astronaut Shannon Lucid finally is coming home. She is due back on Earth on Thursday, 4,512 hours, or 188 days, after she rocketed away to the Russian space station Mir.

"All adventures have to come to an end," Lucid said from space shuttle Atlantis on Wednesday. "You have to go home sometime, and I'm ready to go home."

Lucid, who has spent a longer stretch in space than any other American and any other woman, left the planet in March, when lakes were frozen and snow covered the ground at the northern latitudes.

"I was able to see that disappear and then the brown and then the green as all the crops started growing, so it was a very interesting thing to watch and to see that happening," she said from orbit Wednesday.

The 53-year-old biochemist said she had a better time on Mir than she expected, although she wished there had been more science experiments to conduct.

Lucid, a dessert lover, can have seconds and even thirds of chocolate cake and anything else she wants once she's back on Earth and her most pressing medical tests are completed. Doctors have imposed no dietary restrictions, although they want her to record everything she eats and drinks during her months-long recuperation.

The first American woman to live on Mir, Lucid should have been home in early August but had to spend an extra seven weeks in orbit because Atlantis was delayed by equipment trouble and two hurricanes.

The shuttle finally lifted off on Sept. 16 and docked with Mir two days later. American John Blaha took Lucid's place aboard Mir..

"It's always difficult to be away from your family," said Lucid, who is married and has three grown children, "but I must say that my family's been extremely supportive."

She added: "I expect life to go on just like it always has."

Harvest moon to shine on in eclipse tonight

MIAMI (AP) — Sky watchers throughout North America will get a triple treat Thursday night: a total eclipse of a harvest moon, with a bright Saturn in tow.

Most of North America won't see another total eclipse of the moon until the year 2000, and astronomers say these kinds of very public displays help reconnect a generation of children who have "lost contact with the sky."

"With the amount of electric lighting we're using, we're washing out the sky," said Bob Stencil, head of the physics department at the University of Denver. "When we illuminate the sky, we're depriving children of a chance to tap into the cosmic wellspring of creativity and imagination."

A total lunar eclipse occurs whenever the Earth moves directly between the sun and the full moon, casting its shadow across the moon. Even when the moon is completely in the Earth's shadow, it doesn't get entirely dark; it is often a faint reddish, illuminated by sunlight filtering around the Earth's edge.

This time, Earth's curved shadow will fall across the moon starting at 9:12 p.m. EDT, with the darkest part of the eclipse coming at 10:54 p.m.

This lunar eclipse comes at the same time as the harvest moon, which is the full moon closest to the first day of autumn. A harvest moon is not necessarily different from other full moons, but crisp, dry fall weather can make it seem brighter and more distinct.

Making things even more interesting this time, Saturn is positioned in the sky very close to the eclipsed moon. As the moonlight dims, stars will come out and Saturn will seem to shine more brightly.

Dust from volcanic eruptions or smoke from forest fires can affect the color of the eclipsed moon, which can vary from a dull gray to a coppery or muddy red color. A lunar eclipse can give scientists a reading of how much dust is in the atmosphere.

New test allows diagnosis of mad cow disease, related human illness

BOSTON (AP) — Scientists have developed the first simple test for mad cow disease and its human equivalent, providing a possible new way of slowing the spread of this insidious killer.

Until now, the only way to diagnose these incurable, mind-robbing illnesses with certainty was to look at a sample of brain tissue, something doctors are understandably reluctant to do before the death of the victim.

The inexpensive new test should allow veterinarians to diagnose the illness in live cattle, sparing the needless slaughter of animals that look sick but are actually healthy.

And it should enable doctors to distinguish patients with the exceedingly rare human variety of the illness — Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease — from those with much more common Alzheimer's, which has some of the same symptoms.

"The single most difficult diagnosis is assuring yourself whether the patient has Alzheimer's disease or Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease," said one of the developers of the test, Dr. Clarence J. Gibbs Jr. of the National Institutes of Health. "If the patient has Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, you have to advise the family that the patient will die within a year. If it's Alzheimer's, you tell them it will be a long, drawn-out affair."

The new test doesn't offer any way to treat the disease.

Practically any medical lab could offer the test now, using currently available equipment.

The test was created by researchers from NIH and the California Institute of Technology. A report on the discovery was published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The human and cattle varieties of the disease emerged from obscurity earlier this year in Britain. An outbreak of bovine spongiform encephalopathy — dubbed mad cow disease — led to a European ban on British beef imports and the slaughter of nearly 200,000 cows.

Even more worrisome were suspicions, still unproven, that beef eaters could catch the cow disease. Some experts think that bad beef might be responsible for a recent cluster of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease in 12 unusually young British victims.

Unlike Alzheimer's disease and similar illnesses, Creutzfeldt-Jakob can be spread through transplants of corneas and brain tissue. Dr. Michael G. Harrington of Cal Tech, another developer, said checking some organ donors with the new test could help reduce the risk of this sort of spread.

The test requires a spinal tap, a generally safe but unpleasant procedure. The samples of spinal fluid are then checked for a telltale protein. Even simpler versions, including ones that could be done on a farm or in a doctor's office, are in the works.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease strikes about one in 1 million people annually in the United States. Alzheimer's afflicts 30 percent of Americans by age 85.

California law opens drug dealers to liability lawsuits

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — A new state law prompted by the suicide of actor Carroll O'Connor's son allows suspected drug dealers to be sued for any deaths, injuries or damage they cause.

The law, which takes effect Jan. 1, holds dealers to the same liability standards as legitimate businesses. Even drug users themselves can sue.

"We're going to financially bankrupt these leeches," Gov. Pete Wilson said Tuesday in signing the legislation.

If the dealers are believed to have caused damage or injury by selling drugs, they can be sued by the victims' family, employers, hospitals, insurers and others who suffer from drug users' reckless actions. The suspected dealer does not have to be convicted of a crime first.

Drug users could sue their dealers, but only to recover compensatory damages and lawyers' fees. A person who believes he or she was injured while still in the womb can also sue.

Actor Hugh O'Connor shot himself last year after battling a drug habit and becoming despondent over marital problems. Harry Perzigian was convicted of selling cocaine to O'Connor and was sentenced to a year in jail in January.

Carroll O'Connor, television's Archie Bunker and the Southern sheriff in "In the Heat of the Night," cannot sue under the law, because the measure is not retroactive.

Supporters said California is the sixth state to enact such legislation.

"Anyone who tries to make a buck by getting other people high will be treated as they deserve to be — as the lowest of the low," Wilson said.

Before signing the bill, Wilson toured a hospital, peering at sleeping infants, some of whom weighed less than 3 pounds. A drug-addicted baby is born there once every 10 days, hospital officials said, and caring for the infants costs $200,000 to $250,000.

The bill was intended to allow hospitals to recover some of those costs by suing.

San Francisco considering sex-change coverage

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco, the city that has made nonconformity practically a civic virtue, is considering broadening municipal employees' insurance to cover sex-change operations.

The idea came from what's known as the "transgender community" in San Francisco, where the Board of Supervisors in recent years has considered such things as legalizing marijuana for the terminally ill and prostitution.

Supervisor Tom Ammiano, a gay man who sidelines as a comedian, said he will introduce the measure at the request of those who consider gender transformation a medical necessity.

"People don't choose to be transsexual. They're born that way," said police Sgt. Stephan Thorne, who is undergoing the change from female to male at his own expense. "I haven't 'opted' to do anything. I am taking the medical treatment that is required for my medical condition."

No one knows how many of the 28,000 municipal employees might want the procedure. The surgery costs $10,000 to $20,000, not counting psychiatric evaluations and hormone treatments before and after.

"This is not a problem for Boise, Idaho," complained Arthur Bruzzone, chairman of the city Republican Party. He called sex reassignment, like breast enhancement, a "lifestyle decision" and said that "special interests" are ignoring more urgent problems like homelessness.

"That allows them to propose what is viewed by the outside world as absurd proposals while we're facing all the normal problems of urban America," he said.

San Francisco is believed to have about 6,000 transsexuals.

STORM TRACKER FACTS

A return to summer was felt across the Permian Basin on Wednesday as temperatures rebounded to the upper 80s...but changes are on the way. A strong cold front is moving through Colorado and northern New Mexico and will start to move into the Permian Basin later tonight. Warm and somewhat moist air will be in the area and that could lead to some strong thunderstorms later tonight.

FBI accuses military worker of sharing documents with S. Korea

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A civilian computer expert working for naval intelligence was accused Wednesday of passing at least 50 intelligence documents to a South Korean agent. American officials were scrambling to determine the scope of the security breach.

Robert Chaegon Kim, 56, was ordered held without bail at least until Monday, when a pre-trial detention hearing is scheduled in U.S. District Court here, a few miles from the nation's capital.

In a 20-page affidavit, the FBI said it has evidence that Kim, who worked for the Office of Naval Intelligence, passed dozens of classified records to Baek Dong-Il, a South Korean navy officer, during a five-month span earlier this year. Officials have not discovered any evidence Kim was paid for his efforts, a senior law enforcement official said.

"We think we know what he did and how much damage was done," said a Pentagon official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "Is it serious? Yes. Will the national security of the nation fall? No, I don't think so."

A video camera secretly installed in Kim's office taped him copying and printing classified records on his computer, the FBI affidavit said. Searches of his mail revealed that he was sending them to Baek, who works at his nation's Washington embassy, and telephone wiretaps indicated the two discussed the deliveries, the affidavit said.

If convicted of transmitting classified information to a foreign agent, Kim could face a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison. But prosecutors were contemplating bringing espionage charges that could carry a life sentence, said a law enforcement source who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

The Clinton administration reacted angrily to the incident even though it was a carried out by an ally with which the United States has a security treaty. The United States not to share all of its secrets, even with its closest allies.

In recent years, the most famous incident involving spying by a friendly country occurred when Jonathan Pollard, a Navy intelligence analyst, was caught passing state secrets to Israel and was sentenced to life in prison.

State Department spokesman Glyn Davies said the senior South Korean diplomat in Washington was summoned to the department Wednesday and was told the United States "is very disturbed at this development."

But White House Press Secretary Mike McCurry tried to play down the potential international implications of the arrest. He said U.S.-South Korean relations "are strong and of the nature that they can endure any alleged wrongdoing by an individual."

The South Korean Embassy said it would have no immediate comment.

U.S. Marshalls follow a car carrying Robert Chaegon Kim as it arrives at the Federal Courthouse in Alexandria, Va., Wednesday Sept. 25, 1996. Kim, 56, a civilian computer expert working for naval intelligence, was charged Wednesday with passing at least 50 secret documents to U.S. ally South Korea.

Kim, a Seoul native, became a U.S. citizen in 1974. He began working for the Office of Naval Intelligence in 1978 and gained a "Top Secret" security clearance a year later, court papers said.

He worked on a computer system that gave him access to top-secret documents generated by other U.S. intelligence-gathering agencies, the affidavit said. The Pentagon official said the system also included information considered "above top secret."

"Kim regularly searches the system to find classified documents relating to military, political and intelligence matters in the Asia-Pacific region," the affidavit stated. "Kim copies and stores these documents in his work computer, removes classification markings, prints them on his office printer, and transmits them to Baek Dong-Il."

The Pentagon official said an assessment to determine the damage done by Kim won't be completed until investigators review materials seized from his home, which FBI agents raided late Tuesday night.

The affidavit offered few specifics about the nature of the documents Kim was passing. However, the case summary noted that the first batch of 10 documents Kim is accused of passing to Baek included top secret records pertaining to North Korea.

In recent years, South Korea has been working harder to develop its own military technology and buy less sophisticated equipment from the United States. It also has been buying more from other countries, including Russia.

Baek arrived in the United States on Oct. 1, 1994, to begin a three-year stint as a naval attache to the South Korean Embassy in Washington.

The case against Kim began to move forward about May 5, 1996, when the FBI conducted a court-authorized search of his work computer.

On it was found a Jan. 24, 1996, letter from Kim to Baek in which Kim "offered his services to Baek," the affidavit stated.

After the first set of 10 documents were transmitted until Sept. 9, Kim was seen copying and either mailing or faxing at least 50 additional documents, many of which had high-level security classifications.

Law enforcement officials have not yet developed evidence that Kim was given a shopping list of secrets sought by South Korea. The affidavit, however, did note that Kim was observed playing golf with Baek and two senior South Korean military officials at Fort Meade, Md.

Kim was employed by same Navy intelligence center in Suitland, Md., that employed Pollard, a former civilian Navy intelligence analyst now serving a life prison term for spying for Israel.

Man who was elected 'mayor' at 11 dies at 24

Hearst News Service

CRABB — Brian Zimmerman — who put this tiny crossroads community on the world map when he became its honorary mayor at age 11 — was buried Wednesday.

Zimmerman, 24, died unexpectedly in his Houston home late Friday of a suspected heart attack, said his mother, Marcia Zimmerman.

"He was our one and only," his mother said. She and her husband, Calvin "Buster" Zimmerman, still live in the home in Crabb where their son ran for mayor in a straw poll in 1983.

The boy's maturity and unsuccessful attempt to have voters incorporate Crabb became the stuff of legend. His story was turned into a television movie and was written about in newspapers worldwide.

The title was an honorary one, since the town about 25 miles southwest of Houston was not incorporated. But shortly after his election, Zimmerman went to a mayors' conference in Paris, where Europeans referred to him as "John Kennedy II."

Marcia Zimmerman described her son as husky and said he had high blood pressure.

After voters rejected efforts to incorporate Crabb in 1985, Zimmerman told the Houston Chronicle he didn't care if he lost his post as mayor.

His whole idea, he said then, was to improve services for the tiny rural community and prevent its annexation by cities like Houston.

His life story was the topic of a PBS movie, "The Lone Star Kid," starring James Earl Jones and country-western singer Charlie Daniels.

Zimmerman also was listed and pictured in a 1989 junior high school history book in which he was called the youngest person ever elected mayor in the United States. The picture shows him sipping coffee in Paris, cowboy hat firmly on his head.

In 1988, he was one of two spokesmen for a national "Kid Power Election Campaign" sponsored by Cheerios breakfast cereal. He talked to youngsters — including senators' children in Washington, D.C. — about the importance of voting and speaking out when one believes strongly in something.

NY gets All-Stars

NEW YORK — The NBA All-Star Game is coming to New York in 1998, the first time the showcase game will be played at Madison Square Garden since 1968.

The league did not confirm the decision Wednesday, but a news conference is scheduled for Thursday at City Hall, with Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, NBA commissioner David Stern and Garden president Dave Checketts among those to attend.

The New York Times said the Garden was selected over Portland and its year-old Rose Garden and Philadelphia, which begins play this season in the new CoreStates Center.

The 1997 All-Star game will be played Feb. 9 at Cleveland.

The All-Star Game also was played at Madison Square Garden in 1954 and 1955. All three times the East beat the West — 98-93 in overtime in 1954, 100-91 in 1955 and 144-124 in 1968.

The East leads the series 29-17.

Toros-Astros split

TUCSON, Ariz. — The 17-year relationship between the Tucson Toros and the Houston Astros is ending today, leaving the Toros to expect a one-year affiliation with the Milwaukee Brewers next year and the option of an Arizona Diamondbacks link in 1998.

The Astros agreed to affiliate with the Triple-A New Orleans Zephyrs, Astros General Manager Gerry Hunsicker confirmed Tuesday. The move is expected to be announced today in New Orleans.

The Astros-New Orleans relationship left two unaffiliated major league clubs, Milwaukee and the Chicago White Sox. The two unaffiliated Triple-A franchises are Tucson and Nashville.

Any unaffiliated teams left after today will be assigned player development contracts jointly by the major-league and minor-league governing bodies, and both Toros and Brewers officials said they expect the White Sox to be realigned with Nashville.

That would leave the Toros and Brewers as the other pair.

"It just seems to be what makes the most sense," said Toros president Rick Holtzman.

Holtzman said he would not seek an affiliation with the Brewers because arrangements can only be willingly entered into for two- of four-year intervals. Any term longer than one year would preclude the Toros from aligning with the Diamondbacks in 1998.

"I'm doing this because I want to have the '98 season open to all possibilities," he said. "I'm not taking anything away from the Brewers, but it's not my choice."

Baseball 1, debates 0

NEW YORK — The candidates can debate, but October is for baseball.

That's the view of Fox and NBC, the networks televising baseball playoff games this season. Both networks said Wednesday they intend to fulfill their contracts to broadcast the games.

President Clinton and Bob Dole are to debate Oct. 6 and Oct. 16, with the vice presidential candidates to debate Oct. 9.

NBC would have only one possible conflict, Oct. 16, when it is scheduled to televise the seventh game of the American League Championship Series, if one is necessary.

The American League playoff game on Oct. 9 starts at 4:10 p.m. EDT.

"We have a contract for baseball, calling for us to do the game, and we will be there, doing the game," NBC spokesman Ed Markey said.

MIDLAND LEE VS. MIDLAND HIGH: THE TALL CITY'S 36TH BATTLE

LEE

Confused 'R Us

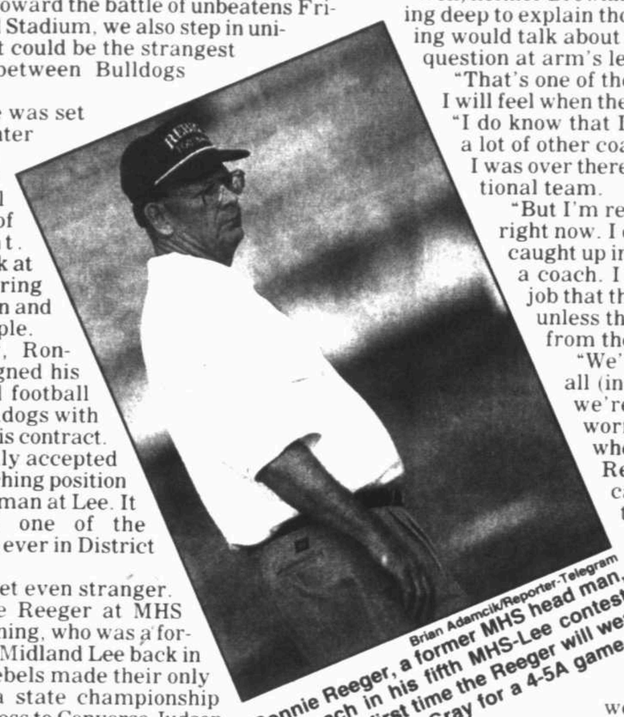

M

Old coaches in strange places add to historic rivalry

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

As we march toward the battle of unbeatens Friday at Memorial Stadium, we also step in unison toward what could be the strangest meeting ever between Bulldogs and Rebels.

This fall stage was set back in the winter months with coaching moves that still leave all of us in a state of bewilderment. After all, just look at who is now wearing the Rebel Maroon and the Bulldog Purple.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram
Ronnie Reeger, a former MHS head man, will coach in his fifth MHS-Lee contest. This is the first time the Reeger will wear the Maroon and Gray for a 4-5A game.

Last January, Ronnie Reeger resigned his position as head football coach of the Bulldogs with one year left on his contract. Reeger eventually accepted an assistant coaching position with John Parchman at Lee. It was hailed as one of the strangest moves ever in District 4-5A.

But it was to get even stranger. Hired to replace Reeger at MHS was David Browning, who was a former assistant at Midland Lee back in 1983 when the Rebels made their only appearance in a state championship game, a narrow loss to Converse Judson.

Rebels are Bulldogs. Bulldogs are Rebels. Confused 'R Us.

And now time has run out. It had to come. The two teams would have to meet again on the field of battle. What emotions prevail as one of the most highly anticipated meetings between the two schools is set to unfold?

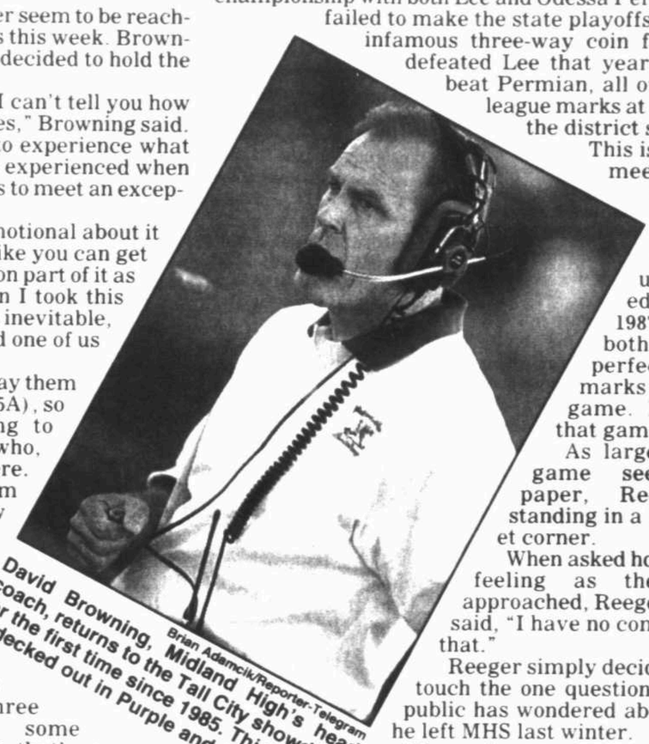

Well, neither Browning or Reeger seem to be reaching deep to explain those feelings this week. Browning would talk about it. Reeger decided to hold the question at arm's length.

"That's one of those things I can't tell you how I will feel when the time comes," Browning said. "I do know that I'm fixing to experience what a lot of other coaches have experienced when I was over there, and that's to meet an exceptional team.

"But I'm really not emotional about it right now. I don't feel like you can get caught up in the emotion part of it as a coach. I knew when I took this job that this day was inevitable, unless they dropped one of us from the league.

"We've got to play them all (in District 4-5A), so we're not going to worry about who, when or where. Really, I'm calmer now than I have been in the last three weeks. In some respects, I guess that's my nature. At some point you've got to concentrate on the job at hand."

But Browning does have his Bulldogs on an undefeated roll in non-conference play for the first time since 1988 when MHS was 9-1 under Doug McCutcheon. That was a team that shared the district championship with both Lee and Odessa Permian, but failed to make the state playoffs after the infamous three-way coin flip. MHS defeated Lee that year and Lee beat Permian, all owning 6-1 league marks at the end of the district season.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram
David Browning, Midland High's head coach, returns to the Tall City showdown for the first time since 1985. This time he is decked out in Purple and Gold.

This is the first meeting of the two teams with both undefeated since 1987 when both carried perfect 3-0 marks into the game. Lee won that game 35-0.

As large as this game seems on paper, Reeger is standing in a lone, quiet corner.

When asked how he was feeling as the game approached, Reeger simply said, "I have no comment on that."

Reeger simply decided not to touch the one question that the public has wondered about since he left MHS last winter.

"I knew the question was coming," Reeger responded when pressed further. "I know it had to be asked and I was expecting it. I've just decided not to get into that."

Hey Rhodes, don't expect an 'I'm so sorry' from Switzer

IRVING (AP) — Barry Switzer said it, and he's not going to apologize for it.

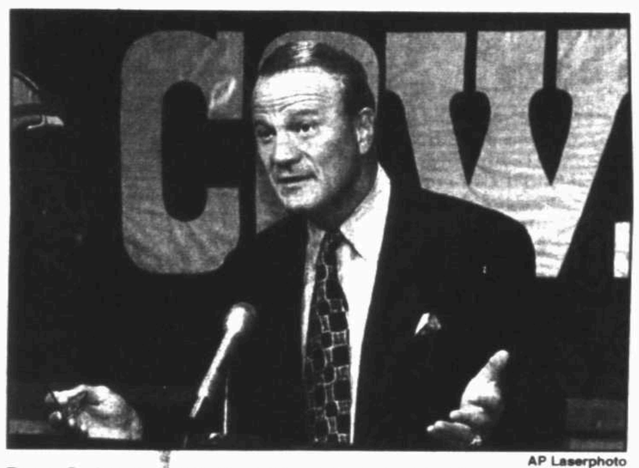

After beating the Philadelphia Eagles in the playoffs last year, the oft-hyper Dallas Cowboys coach hollered, "We kicked their (expletive)."

To Switzer, the 30-11 victory was redemption for a late-season loss to the Eagles that featured his ill-fated decision to go for it twice on fourth-and-one. Dallas didn't make it and Philadelphia used the good field position to kick the game-winning field goal.

So his exclamation was aimed at his critics, not his opponent.

Yet Eagles coach Ray Rhodes didn't take it that way.

As a result, a Dallas-Philly rivalry appears brewing as the teams prepare for their meeting Monday night, the first get-together since that playoff game.

Rangers relax at home after tough road trip

By Rob Gloster
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. — Will Clark had just one concern on a laid-back Wednesday as his Texas Rangers recovered from a tough road trip and awaited the chance to clinch the AL West at home.

It had nothing to do with baseball.

"If I'm barbecuing hamburgers, I'm more worried about whether they're well-done or medium rare," said the Rangers' first baseman. "I'm not going to be watching TV."

The Mariners, who have been chasing Texas in the AL West, routed California 11-2 to close within 2 1/2 games. But few of the Rangers were looking at Seattle.

"I doubt I'll watch it," manager Johnny Oates said Tuesday as his team prepared to head home from Oakland. "My heart can't take it too much any more. I'll just get the final score when it's over."

The Rangers could afford to relax. After their win Tuesday at Oakland and the Mariners' loss Tuesday night at California, the Rangers' magic number for clinching their first division title was down to three.

While the Mariners beat California on Wednesday, the Rangers played golf and found other ways to get away from baseball before starting a four-game series at home against the Angels beginning Thursday.

Proven Mustangs face biggest test in Stanton

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

This was supposed to be the year Midland Christian got thrown to the lions. So far, the lions are lookin' awfully skinny.

Midland Christian's Mustangs have spent the season proving there's not that much difference between six-man and 11-man or between the Texas Association of Private and Parochial School and public school football. Midland Christian (3-0) plays at Stanton (2-1) Friday at 8 p.m.

"I don't think anybody expected Midland Christian to be this good this fast, but they are," Stanton coach Mark Cotton said. "They've done an outstanding job making the adjustment."

The Mustangs won five straight six-man TAPPS titles with the last coming in 1995. They dominated their private school division, 45-point ruling their way through the regular season and playoffs year after year.

But TAPPS six-man has only a handful of teams statewide. And when Midland Christian grew to 11-man status for the '96 season, skeptics thought the Mustangs would have trouble with the new, more physical type of football.

To date, their only trouble is finding out if they can win a close game.

Midland Christian has outscored its opponents, all public school teams, 113-13. The Mustangs have two shutouts and broke into the state's top ten ranking (No. 9) for regular private schools in the Walk Sports Services poll this week. Their veer offense, under new coach Mike Spradlin, averages 262 yards rushing and 5.7 yards per carry.

Spradlin said his team is "ahead of schedule."

"Probably everyone but us is surprised," Spradlin said. "And I think more

Tech, Dykes missed respectability bus on fatal drive

Spike Dykes has always been one ready with a quick one-liner, a great joke or levity in a press conference; Morey Amsterdam with a coach's whistle.

But what Dykes did last Saturday in Tech's heartbreaking loss to Georgia was a joke. He cost the Red Raiders much more than a football game. He cost them a shot at finally becoming an initiated member of the college football in-crowd.

Wallace

Byron Hanspard looked like a Heisman Trophy candidate although Zebbie Lethridge wasn't really that effective, the defense held the Bulldogs to just seven points in 58 minutes of play and a beautiful punt down to the Georgia 3-yard line put the Bulldogs in a bind Houdidi would have balked at. Still, Dykes and his coaching staff found a way to snatch defeat from the jaws of victory. Their play-calling in those final two minutes was abysmal, both on defense and offense.

Dykes elected to have his defense drop back into a prevent zone — conventional football wisdom dictating you don't get burned on the big play.

But this allowed Georgia to keep marching up the field, 12 to 15 yards at the time. Georgia had not thrown the big bomb all day, and doesn't have a quarterback like Eric Zeier anymore who could pull off a pass like that, especially in wet, muddy conditions. Dykes coached like he was sitting there with his feet propped up watching the game with the rest of the country on television.

Georgia got out of a third-and-long as well as a fourth-and-bus-ride situations on the drive and scored with less than a minute left on the clock. Dykes stood there on the sidelines like he was having Converve Judson 1983 flashbacks.

Given that, the Red Raiders still had a chance to win. Down by three with timeouts to spare, Dykes burned two in the final drive unncessisarily, forcing Tech into an almost impossible situation of kicking a long field goal with no time left instead of getting into position to win the game with a touchdown.

A rookie mistake from someone who has been around the block a few times. That can't happen if Tech wants to be mentioned in the same breath with the words Top 10 or national champion.

All week Dykes has been saying the passing game's not where he'd like it to be.

The problem isn't the offense. It's the out-of-touch play calling.

Tech fans better get used to 7-4 seasons and third or fourth-place finishes in the Big 12 South because that's what you're going to get if Dykes can't win games which are all but signed, sealed and delivered.

SATURDAY'S GAMES

#12 COLORADO (2-1, 0-0 in Big 12) at TEXAS A&M (1-2, 0-0) — Talk about a balanced offense. The Aggies rolled up exactly 312 yards rushing and passing in last week's demolition job of North Texas, but A&M will need another balancing act to beat Colorado: Offense and defense. It won't be easy, but A&M always finds a way to win at home. PREDICTION: Texas A&M 24, Colorado 22.

UTAH STATE (2-2) at TEXAS TECH (1-2) — Byron Hanspard raised some eyebrows with his game against Georgia. Now he'll put some more gaudy numbers to add to it. PREDICTION: Texas Tech 35, Utah State 7.

#13 TEXAS (2-1) at #19 VIRGINIA (3-0) — The Longhorns had their season tarnished last week against Notre Dame, but it won't affect them. James Brown is nearing the school record for TD passes and wants to finally put Texas back on the college football map. He starts Saturday in Charlottesville. PREDICTION: Texas 27, Virginia 20.

SMU (2-2) at #24 BRIGHAM YOUNG (3-1) — Steve Sarkisian should get back on the TD track, and how. If Navy can throw against the Ponies, just think what a real college football team can do. PREDICTION: BYU 47, SMU 14.

RICE (1-2, 0-0 in WAC) at AIR FORCE (2-1, 2-1 in WAC) — The Air Force Falcons run the ball, run the ball, run the ball. And just for a change of pace once in a while, the quarterback rolls out and runs the ball. The Falcons have the best rushing offense in the country and Rice will find that out. PREDICTION: Air Force 28, Rice 17.

TCU (1-1, 0-0) at NEW MEXICO (3-1, 0-0) — The Horned Frogs finally play their first WAC game and they're going to like what they see. New Mexico's three wins came over Division I-AA Northern Arizona and two D-I schools (Central Florida, New Mexico State) who play like they are. PREDICTION: TCU 28, New Mexico 16.

LAST WEEK : 3-3 (.500). OVERALL — 16-7 (.696)

Yanks clinch AL East title

■ Fans chant "we want Texas" during 19-2 rampage over Milwaukee.

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The anticipation was overwhelming, the anxiety was extraordinary and the angst was omnipresent as the New York Yankees puttered around a cramped clubhouse Wednesday. They played cards and did crossword puzzles, but securing one more victory dominated their thoughts. One more victory would make their day. One more victory would make their season. For now anyway.

The Yankees ended the suspense, the anxiety and the angst early. They had 14 runs after two innings and went on to pummel the Milwaukee Brewers, 19-2, in the first game of a doubleheader at Yankee Stadium, engraving their names on the American League East Division trophy after clinching first place.

In securing their first division title since 1981, the Yankees erupted for 10 runs in the second inning in support of David Cone's capable pitching. The victory assured the Yankees, last year's wild-card qualifier, that they would keep playing meaningful baseball into October once again.

The Yankees, who were revamped from first base to the front office this season, celebrated between doubleheader games Wednesday, amid chants of "We want Texas," from most of the 30,000 fans on hand for the opener.

Orioles improve chances for post season

By The Associated Press

BOSTON — Their hopes for a division title gone, the Baltimore Orioles improved their wild-card chances by beating the Boston Red Sox 6-2.

The Orioles, eliminated from the AL East when New York won earlier in the day, led by only one run before Mark Parent hit a three-run homer off Tim Wakefield (14-13) in the ninth. Eddie Murray walked and B.J. Surhoff singled before Parent hit his ninth homer of the season.

Baltimore leads the wild-card race by 1 1/2 games over Seattle despite going 4-5 in its last nine games.

Boston's fading playoff hopes grew even slimmer. The Red Sox trail Baltimore by four games with four to play, and can at best force a one-game playoff for the wild-card spot.

Mariners 11, Angels 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Dave Hollins had four hits and four RBIs as Seattle snapped a three-game losing streak and stayed in the playoff race.

Seattle pulled within 2 1/2 games of idle Texas, the AL West leader, and remained 1 1/2 games behind wild-card leader Baltimore.

Alex Rodriguez broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh with a two-run double, and Dan Wilson hit a three-run homer off Darrell May in a six-run ninth as the Mariners ended the skid that followed a 10-game winning streak.

Seattle, which trailed Texas by nine games on Sept. 11, heads to Oakland for a four-game series while the Rangers are home for four games against California. The Mariners would play a makeup game at Cleveland on Monday if it's necessary.

Indians 6, Twins 3

■ AL Roundup

CLEVELAND — Charles Nagy pitched a five-hitter for his 17th victory and Cleveland moved within two wins of 100.

The Indians improved to 98-60 in the last scheduled regular season game at Jacobs Field. The AL Central champions may have to play a makeup game at home against the Seattle Mariners on Monday.

Nagy (17-5) struck out five and got 19 groundball outs, including two double plays. His only walk came in the ninth, when the Twins scored twice, in his fifth complete game of the season.

Blue Jays 13, Tigers 11

DETROIT — Rookie Julio Mosquera had four hits and drove in two runs as Toronto handed Detroit its 14th consecutive home loss.

Detroit, which has a major-league high 106 losses, was swept in the three-game series. The Tigers are two short of the team record for consecutive home losses, set in 1956.

Expos trip in playoff run; Leyland fails in finale

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The Montreal Expos stumbled again in their bid for the NL wild card, losing for the fifth time in six games Wednesday night, 3-1 to the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Expos, who have four games remaining, began the night 1 1/2 games behind San Diego, the NL wild-card leader, which played Colorado later Wednesday. After playing the Phillies again on Thursday, Montreal returns home for a three-game series against Atlanta.

Cardinals 8, Pirates 7

PITTSBURGH — Jim Leyland lost his last home game as Pittsburgh's manager when the Pirates' fourth error led to the go-ahead run in the 11th inning.

Terry Bradshaw went 4-for-6 with three RBIs — he had only three hits all season entering the game — as St. Louis won despite starting just one regular. The Cardinals clinched the NL Central on Tuesday.

Reds 4, Cubs 3

CINCINNATI — Willie Greene hit his fourth homer in two nights and Hal Morris extended his hitting streak to 25 games. The Reds have won both of their games since being eliminated from the NL Central race. The Cubs have lost 10 of 11.

Dave Burba (11-13) gave up three runs and six hits over six innings to win his fourth consecutive decision over six starts. Jeff Brantley pitched the ninth for his 43rd save.

Marlins 3, Braves 0

MIAMI — Kevin Brown (17-11) pitched seven shutout innings and lowered his ERA to 1.89, best in the major leagues. He allowed five hits and was helped by four double plays.

Florida beat Tom Glavine (15-10) for its fifth consecutive victory. The Marlins could finish above .500 for the first time by winning their final four games.

Glavine allowed two hits and one run in five innings for the Braves.

Astros 5, Mets 4

HOUSTON — One day after Houston was eliminated from playoff contention, the Astros overcame a 4-0 deficit and stopped their losing streak at nine on Mike Simms' RBI single.

Craig Biggio drew a leadoff walk from Derek Wallace (2-3) and Ray Montgomery walked with one out. Simms hit for John Hudek (1-0) with two outs and singled to left.

Lee tennis beats Snyder

The Midland Lee tennis team easily rolled to victory over Snyder, including a sweep of the boys' matches en route to a 13-5 win.

All but one of the 10 Lee boys' singles matches was won in straight sets, and Lee's boys didn't drop a set in doubles. For the girls, Deborah Ho, Lili Vo and Stephanie Hofer, the top three seeds, all won their matches for the Rebels in straight sets. Snyder won three singles matches, but all of Lee's wins were in two sets. Lee is now 9-3 on the season.

Hillander scores soccer victory

The Hillander fifth and sixth grade coed soccer team defeated Odessa St. Mary's 3-0 Tuesday afternoon. Jake Davis, Tommy Brown and Joseph Davis scored the goals for Hillander.

Hole-in-one at Hogan Park

Shane Harless scored a hole-in-one at Hogan Park with a five-iron at the 178-yard No. 16 hole. Jason Goff witnessed the ace.

Midland Purple defeats Ector

The Midland Freshman Purple volleyball team defeated Ector Junior High 15-8, 8-15, 15-3 Wednesday to improve to 10-3 on the season and 4-0 in conference. Rebecca Nobles led the Purple team with nine service points while Jill Knottek added seven.

Gold team beats Bowie

The Midland Freshman Gold volleyball team defeated Bowie 15-9, 15-1 Wednesday to improve to 11-2 overall and 2-1 in conference. Lindsey Leaverton had eight service points in the second game to lead the Gold team.

Crystal Classic ends 1st round

The team of Trina Albright and Jo Dickson led after the first round of the Crystal Classic while Albright was the shoot-out winner in the first flight at the Green Tree Country Club Wednesday.

Albright and Dickson combined for a 74 to take a three-stroke lead in the first flight competition. Judy Bates and Lisa Sheets along with Carol Whitsitt and Jeanne Benson both scored 77 to tie for second.

In the second flight, Teresa Shumskie and Ruthe Owens took the lead with an 84. Marge Bassett was the shoot-out winner in that flight and with her partner LaVet Hergenreter stood tied for second with an 85. The teams of Tracy Youngs and Betty Perkins, Joan Daniels and Liz Hughes and Jean Elkin and Sylvia Laufer also were in second.

Georg McConaughey and Dena McGuire shot an 84 to lead the third flight by four strokes. Doris Schultz and Charlene Atkinson sat in second with an 88 while Jana Rush won the flight's shoot-out.

Marilynn Philpy and Jane Gill were tied atop the fourth flight with Evelyn Davis and Linden Howell with a 94. The tournament will run for three more rounds.

Stahl shoots age at MCC

Frank Stahl lived out a fantasy of many golfers Wednesday at Midland Country Club, shooting under his age. The 81-year old Stahl shot an 80, scoring a 39 on the front nine and a 41 on the back. Stahl was playing with Bert Conley, G.W. Brock, Bob Boyd and Rodney McDaniel.

Abell scores big shutout

The Abell White football team routed Goddard White 32-0 Saturday to move to a 2-0 record in the American Conference. Emory Young and Jacoby Kendrick each had two touchdown runs and Gavine Sanchez also ran for a score.

with the level of play than with our record."

Cotton feels ability has keyed the Mustangs' smooth switch to 11-man.

"They've got too much athletic ability to struggle," Cotton said. "If you put good athletes on the field you're going to have a chance. I don't think the TAPPS or UIL makes that much difference to them or us. They were a dominating team in TAPPS six-man and the way they're starting out they're going to be dominating team in 11-man in their class."

Spradlin previously coached in large public schools. But to him football is football at any level.

"One thing I've noticed about TAPPS is the good TAPPS programs are just as good as the good UIL programs," Spradlin said. "I've coached at (Abilene) Cooper and (Irving) MacArthur and we do the same things here."

Stanton is the first Class 2A school the Mustangs have played. Midland Christian faces a struggling 0-3 Rankin team next week before beginning its district schedule. This could be the best team it plays all year. The Buffaloes only loss was by four points to a strong 3A Colorado City team.

"Stanton, by far, is obviously the best football team we've seen," Spradlin said. "We did have McCamey (in a scrimmage) and they scored four times but we didn't get knocked around. Our kids are not going against a caliber team they've never faced."

Still, Spradlin said he hopes his team can stay on the field against the Buffs.

"I was talking to Mark (Cotton when we set up the game) and I said, 'You may just beat our brains out,'" Spradlin said. "But we were too close not to get this going. When you're out here you welcome a 20-mile road trip."

Area Schedule

Midland Christian at Stanton	8
Alpine at Greenwood	8
Snyder at Big Spring	7:30
Andrews at Levelland	7:30
Crane at Lamesa	8
Rankin at Junction	8
Trinity at Grandfalls	8

Stanton comes off a 20-13 win over Coahoma in which Cotton was less than pleased with his team's intensity. But the Buffs have threats in sophomore quarterback Kyle Herm, running back Mark Carrillo and receiver Leo McCalister (eight catches, 210 yards, three touchdowns).

"The thing about Leo is not only is he doing a great job athletically, he's becoming a leader," Cotton said. "He did a great job defensively against Colorado City."

On the other side, Alex Awtry is running the veer with precision as the Mustang quarterback. He has a 9.5 average per rush (227 yards) and has 15-of-25 passes completed for 288 yards and three touchdowns. Craig Patteson and Andrew Hufford are averaging 5.9 and 5.6 yards per carry.

Midland Christian has come a long way in a short time. Just how long they've advanced in their new world will be much more evident at about 10:30 p.m. Friday.

RANKIN entered the season with hopes of a long playoff run. And an 0-3 start has not dampened its enthusiasm.

"We're just playing good football teams and that's what we wanted to do," Red Devil coach Greg Olthof said. "Everybody is still 0-0 in district. We could have picked on people who were not as strong and we'd be 3-0, but where does that get you?"

Rankin, a 1A team, lost to sixth-ranked 2A Iraan and then McCamey, both by shutouts. They fell to Forsan, a team they shut out for the last three seasons, 13-12.

"There's some people writing us off this year," Althof said. "But there's still a lot of season to play."

The Red Devils next two teams are now 3-0: Junction and Midland Christian.

In recent years, this game was a battle of top Region I-3A teams. But GREENWOOD and Alpine are both 0-3 entering this season's contest. Ranger coach Bob Purser still likes Alpine's style.

"They still play harder than anybody we play," Purser said. "They just do it with less athletes now."

The teams have more in common than their records.

"We look like we're about the same size and we have the same problems and we both have had a little success over the years," Purser said.

The Rangers lost two starters to grades this week. Out of 80 football players from the ninth grade up, Greenwood had 21 fail to make good enough grades to keep playing this six weeks.

But some players are stepping up. Among them are sophomore defensive end Marcus Stack, back from an injury, and defensive tackle Michael Glasscock.

"We continue to find the pieces to the puzzle so we can have the football team we hope to have in a couple of weeks," Purser said.

BIG SPRING (1-2) faces its biggest non-district rival, Snyder (1-2). The Steers have beaten the Tigers for the last three years. ANDREWS (1-2) goes on the road to take on Levelland (2-1). Mustang running back Shaud Williams has 362 yards rushing.

LAMESA (1-2) plays its homecoming game against Crane (3-0) and TRINITY (0-3) plays at Grandfalls (3-0).

Bulls sign Parish for two years

CHICAGO (AP) — Center Robert Parish, who has played more games than any player in NBA history, signed a two-year contract with the Chicago Bulls Wednesday.

Parish, 43, will be entering his 21st season, also the most in league history. He had shared the record of 20 with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who retired in 1989.

Parish, who has played 1,568 games — eight more than Abdul-Jabbar — is 13th on the NBA's all-time scoring list with 23,173 points. He comes to the Bulls as a free agent after having played four seasons with the Golden State Warriors, 14 seasons with the Boston Celtics and the last two with the Charlotte Hornets.

The 7-foot-1 Parish was picked by the Warriors in the first round of the 1976 NBA draft. After being traded to the Celtics in 1980, he played on three NBA championship teams.

Jerry Krause, Bulls vice president of basketball operations, said Parish "has the legs of a much younger player."

Bulls coach Phil Jackson said Parish's conditioning habits and lack of major injuries would help him at this stage of his career.

COACH: Browning treating opener like another game; Reeger being 'class act'

(From 1C)

Parchman, who is unbeaten in one test against MHS and who now owns a 11-0-1 record in regular season play at Lee, said he wasn't surprised by the no comment statement by Reeger.

"Ronnie Reeger is a class act," Parchman said. "He's never said one derogatory thing about Midland High during any of our staff meetings this week. I'm sure this is hard for him. He likes a lot of those kids over there and he doesn't want to say anything that could be taken wrong."

So, we are left with neither Browning or Reeger letting their hair down, so to speak. Both will do their jobs. That is one clear statement, but the fans will have to just guess at what is taking place in two Midland hearts when the lights come up Friday night.

Regardless, it is still strange watching who is wearing Maroon and Purple these days. One wonders if we will ever get used to it.

REST: Texas heads for four-game series

(From 1C)

"I'll be doing a lot of nothing, not much at all," said Dean Palmer, who has seven RBIs in his last six games. "I think it will be good everyone gets a day to relax. We're coming off a long road trip and everyone needs a day off."

Texas' division lead almost didn't survive the road trip. The Rangers lost the first five games of the West Coast swing and seemed to be on the verge of blowing a nine-game lead over the Mariners.

Four straight defeats in Seattle and a loss last Friday night at California chopped the Rangers' lead over Seattle to one game. But the Rangers won their final two games at California and split a two-game series with the Athletics.

"I think we are starting to relax a little bit. I think we were just uptight in Seattle," Palmer said. "When we were in Seattle, I think we just put too much emphasis on that series. Once we got to California, we settled down."

Though the Rangers are just 36-36 since the All-Star break, they have been atop the AL West for all but four days this season. That position as leader looked to be in danger last Friday, but now again appears comfortable.

SPEAK: Cowboy coach upset Rhodes

(From 1C)

ers.

The latest spice: Rhodes plans to include a clip of Switzer's comment in his pre-game film.

Presumably, he hopes to fire up his team and inspire them to kick Dallas' (expletive).

This may be the perfect time for Philadelphia (3-1) to extract revenge. The Cowboys are 1-3, have lost two straight and are showing no signs of being the defending Super Bowl champions.

Dallas already is without suspended receiver Michael Irvin and injured tight end Jay Novacek. Now, receiver Kevin Williams has joined the absent list with a broken bone in his foot.

Although he's not backing down from what he said, Switzer doesn't fully understand the uproar it caused.

"In no way did I feel I'd incite him," Switzer said. "Ray uses those things to motivate his team, but I didn't mean it personally."

Rhodes, though, insists his anger is genuine.

He told The Dallas Morning News: "When you make statements about how you kicked somebody's (expletive), I don't think there's a person in the league that's going to accept it and not be offended. Everybody in the country who saw that game on national TV knows you got beat."

In reality, Switzer's few inflammatory words were part of a larger picture. He explains:

"Someone brought up the fourth-and-1 in Philadelphia. Not just us beating Philadelphia," Switzer said, referring to a question asked in the news conference following the playoff game. "I said, 'Hey, look, after kicking their (expletive) today, don't you think we ought to bury that fourth-and-1?' "

After being told Rhodes was upset by the comment, Switzer responded: "Well, did we or didn't we?"

This week, Switzer said he was "just being cute" with that snappy comment.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A long-sought goal comes into view. Refuse to be distracted from crossing the finish line! A money situation will improve as Thanksgiving approaches. Continue to monitor spending. Once 1997 begins, children will play an increasingly important role in the decisions you make. Travel could prove more educational than profitable next spring. Keep in touch with the people you meet. Marriage enjoys highly favorable influences throughout the summer of '97. Keep loved ones' secrets.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: composer George Gershwin, singer Olivia Newton-John, country musician Lynn Anderson, actress Linda Hamilton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Prophetic visions are featured. A change of residence could follow. Keep your career moving forward by dint of hard work. A May-December romance may be irresistible!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Traffic snarls or flight delays are possible. Have a realistic back-up plan. The passage of time works to your advantage where romance is concerned.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Handle a difficult situation with your usual finesse. Good timing is vital for success in business. Be willing to take an occasional risk. Keeping a secret will show a friend that you are trustworthy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep a close eye on investments. An older individual could be the ideal business or romantic partner. It is time to improve your living arrangements.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Clear your mind of confusing thoughts. A flatterer may be trying to soft-soap you. A romantic fever abruptly cools when the truth is revealed. Show your modest side.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make reservations for a weekend getaway. A discussion touching on philosophical issues invigorates your thinking. Do not be afraid to stand up for your principles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Higher-ups are evaluating your job performance. Carry out instructions to the letter. Acquiring additional education will transform your life. Joint financial dealings could prove very lucrative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Giving in to impulse could prove costly. Keep your emotions in check. Someone deserves a second chance. Try to be more relaxed about a new role you must play. Comfort a grieving friend or relative.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Help someone who is going through a difficult time. You will never regret your kindness. Pay cash when shopping, reserving credit cards for emergencies.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Postponing a business decision until next week would be a mistake. Act immediately to reduce stress. Finding peace of mind will improve your personal and professional relationships.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Safeguard your money by keeping it in the bank. A new push for success sparks exciting career developments. Compromise is the best bet when handling domestic affairs. Listen closely to teen-agers before offering advice.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not be thrown by someone's aloof attitude. They may be going through tough times. Keeping things under control at work will help banish tension-related headaches. Answer a loved one's questions with candor.

The bidding:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
2◇	Pass	Pass	4♡
Pass	5◇	Pass	6♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

This hand is based on one from the recent Summer North American Championships held in Miami. Is there a legitimate play for six hearts?

West started the auction with a weak two-diamond opening bid. Since South's four hearts, at this vulnerability, had to show a strong hand, North made a slam try by cue-bidding five diamonds. South was happy to accept.

West led the king of diamonds. Is there any hope? Yes, if the cards are distributed as above. Trumps must divide 1-1, East must hold a singleton diamond and West must not have more than three spades and no fewer than two.

Win the ace of diamonds, cash the ace and king of spades, then lead the jack of hearts, overtaking with the queen. Ruff a spade high, lead the two of trumps to the three, then play the last spade from dummy but, instead of ruffing, discard your losing club.

In with the fourth spade, East has a choice of losing options. A spade return, if possible, allows declarer to discard the losing diamond from hand while ruffing on the table; on a low club, declarer discards the diamond and the king wins; and the ace of clubs only delays the final denouement.

Declarer ruffs high, crosses to the seven of trumps with the low trump so carefully preserved, and discards the diamond loser on the king of clubs. Simple, when you think about it.

Travolta reportedly takes role as Clintonesque Southern governor

NEW YORK — John Travolta, former Sweathog and disco king, has reportedly been cast to play the Clintonesque Southern governor in the movie version of "Primary Colors."

John Travolta has reportedly been cast to star in moive version of "Primary Colors."

The New York Post on Wednesday quoted an unidentified Hollywood insider as saying that Travolta will make an estimated $15 million as the womanizing presidential candidate. Travolta signed after Tom Hanks pulled out, the Post said.

The governor's bisexual wife may be played by Emma Thompson, the Post said.

The author of the political novel was listed only as "Anonymous," creating a literary mystery solved when The Washington Post unmasked Newsweek columnist Joe Klein as the writer in July.

Travolta shot to stardom playing dimwitted Vinnie Barbarino on TV's "Welcome Back Kotter." He was a disco hunk in "Saturday Night Fever" and a coke-snorting hit man in "Pulp Fiction."

STURBRIDGE, Mass. — Ken Burns, archaeologist of the past, has a lock on the future.

The historian is finishing up a two-part film on Thomas Jefferson, the first installment of a series on six famous Americans. The series will run on PBS until 2000. His next series, about jazz, will air that year.

"I stand before you today a man who knows what he's going to be doing every day between now and the end of the millennium," the creator of two acclaimed PBS series on baseball and the Civil War said Tuesday upon receiving a history award from Old Sturbridge Village.

LONDON — The Duchess of York: 2. Disloyal subject: 0.

The former Sarah Ferguson won another round Wednesday in her court fight to prevent publication of a tell-all book by a friend of a friend. Justice Michael Astill extended an order barring publication of "Fergie: Her Secret Life" pending a trial set to begin Oct. 7.

Allan Starkie signed a deal last month to publish the book. Starkie is a former business partner of John Bryan, the American who was photographed kissing the feet of the topless duchess.

The photographs were published in 1992, two months after the duchess separated from Prince Andrew. The couple divorced in May.

LOS ANGELES — "Frasier" star Kelsey Grammer checked into the Betty Ford Center after his arrest for alleged drunken driving and his popular NBC sitcom was put on hold.

Grammer, who has won two Emmys as the pompous psychiatrist Frasier Crane, has a history of substance abuse. He was arrested Saturday after he overturned his $66,000 Dodge Viper outside his home in suburban Agoura Hills.

Kelsey Grammer checks himself into Betty Ford Clinic.

According to a statement issued Wednesday by his show's producers, the 41-year-old actor "voluntarily admitted himself" to the Betty Ford Center for substance abuse, and his colleagues at the studio and network "support his decision and wish him a speedy recovery."

The break in production probably won't affect the show's Tuesday night broadcasts because baseball playoffs replace it on NBC for at least the next two weeks. A few new episodes have already been filmed and are ready to air after that.

The statement said "Frasier," which recently won the Emmy for top comedy series, will resume its fourth season production in October — but did not say whether Grammer would be included.

LOS ANGELES — John Ritter's wife is saying goodbye to 14 years of marriage.

Nancy Ritter filed for divorce Tuesday, citing irreconcilable differences with the 48-year-old former "Three's Company" star.

The couple have three children, ages 11, 14 and 16.

How To Read The Market In Review

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.

Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.

Chg: Loss or gain for the day. No change indicated by ...

Tkr: The stock's ticker symbol.

How to use: The ticker symbol can help you get information about a company. Two important uses: Most services that provide stock quotes over the phone require the ticker symbol. Second, stock brokers and analysts can recognize stocks more easily with a ticker symbol.

Generally, ticker symbols resemble the company name although some – BUD for Anheuser Busch Cos. and FON for Sprint Corp. – are more related to what a company does. Tickers on the New York and Amex usually don't exceed three letters. On Nasdaq, they go up to five letters.

The names you see in this paper are abbreviations of the company name supplied by The Associated Press. Companies can help determine what their abbreviation will be. Overall, AP tries to use an abbreviation that will most closely match the full company name.

StockQuote Hotline

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources, all are available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400, enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker number. These are based in industry standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update, which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options.
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Dollar charges

NEW YORK — The dollar charged to big one-day gains against the Japanese yen and German mark Wednesday, shaking off its plunge of a day earlier, when the Federal Reserve surprised traders by leaving interest rates unchanged.

In late New York trading, the dollar cost 110.44 yen, up from 109.00 Tuesday. This was the biggest one-day jump for the dollar against the yen since Aug. 7, when traders responded to the strength of the U.S. economy and tensions in Korea.

The dollar also rose to 1.5156 marks from 1.5011, the biggest one-day jump since April 9. The British pound cost $1.5610, down from $1.5655.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday: 1.2398 Swiss francs, up from 1.2251; 5.1256 French francs, up from 5.0970; 1,514 Italian lire, down from 1,524; and 1.3664 Canadian dollars, unchanged.

Satellite merger

NEW YORK — In the second big satellite system acquisition in less than a week, Loral Space & Communications announced a deal to buy AT&T's Skynet Satellite Services for $712.5 million.

Loral, recently formed as an offshoot of Lockheed Martin's $9.1 billion purchase of Loral Corp.'s defense businesses, touted the acquisition Wednesday as the first purchase by the new Loral Space & Communications Ltd., suggesting there are more to come.

Skynet provides Loral with a strong entry into the lucrative satellite service business, bringing it four orbiting satellites that beam TV programs, phone calls and computer data around the country.

Markets higher

NEW YORK — Stocks edged higher Wednesday as investors, freed at least temporarily of interest rate worries, struggled to find incentives to push stocks further into record territory.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 3.33 to 5,877.36 after slipping from an early 21-point gain and trading in a narrow, indecisive range through the session.

Broader measures also finished higher, led by the Nasdaq market, which extended its recent rally after an encouraging earnings report from the technology sector.

Stocks drew support from the bond market, where interest rates fell to their lowest level in a month amid continuing enthusiasm for the Federal Reserve's decision Tuesday to leave interest rates unchanged. As bond prices rose, the yield on the 30-year Treasury bond — a key determinant of borrowing costs — fell to 6.92 percent from late Tuesday's 6.98 percent.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by an 11-to-9 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume was busy at 451.70 million shares, about even with Tuesday's pace.

The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 0.22 to 685.83, and the NYSE's composite index rose 0.07 to 365.30.

The technology-laden Nasdaq composite index rose for the 13th time in 14 sessions, adding 9.39 to 1,224.66, its best close since mid-June.

The American Stock Exchange's market value index, which is also dominated by technology and speculative shares, rose 2.49 to 565.89.

Fueling the renewed enthusiasm for technology shares was a strong profit report late Tuesday from 3Com.

Heating oil futures near five-year highs

Crude oil prices continue to climb, supported by Middle East tension

Associated Press

Heating oil futures prices neared five-year highs Wednesday on fears there won't be enough fuel to keep Americans comfortable should winter be severe or come early.

West Texas Intermediate for November delivery rose 39 cents to $24.46 a barrel. Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 25 cents to $22.75 a barrel.

October unleaded gasoline rose 0.27 cent to 63.10 a gallon.

Natural gas for November delivery rose 4.1 cents to $2.096 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Weekly inventory figures for heating oil came in well below expected by the market, triggering the rally.

The American Petroleum Institute reported Tuesday evening that the amount of distillates, which include heating oil, grew by only 303,000 barrels last week, while the Department of Energy said Wednesday the amount actually fell by 500,000 barrels. Market watchers had been expecting an increase of 1 million to 2 million.

The runup was "a function of how far we are behind last year's level of inventory," said Ed Ryan, with the energy futures desk at Dean Witter Discover & Co. in New York. "It's time to catch up and it's just a big surprise that we're not."

Distillate stockpiles remain about 10 percent lower than last year, which could cause spot shortages if East Coast demand is espeeially strong this winter, U.S. energy officials predict.

It's unlikely America will run out of heating oil, but prices could continue to soar amid dwindling reserves. With cold weather about two months away, there is time to build reserves, but producers need to step up production.

"It's a race between what we can do and Mother Nature," said Don Morton, senior vice president at Prudential Securities in Manchester, N.H. "It's a real tough situation."

Crude oil futures were supported by continued uncertainty in the Middle East.

Kuwait says it plans to build an electric fence along its border with Iraq to stop crossings by smugglers and Iraqi agents. But at 15 feet wide and nine feet deep, the trench likely could not stop an advancing army such as Iraq's, which invaded Kuwait in 1990 and triggered the Persian Gulf War.

Meanwhile, the Kurdish faction that formed an alliance with Saddam Hussein now seeks U.S. backing and is consolidating its hold on the region without help from the Iraqi military, Assistant Secretary of State Robert Pelletreau said Wednesday. He also told lawmakers assertions by some Republican lawmakers that Saddam had regained control of the Kurdish sections of northern Iraq are premature.

Heating oil for October delivery rose 2.08 cents to 71.77 a gallon on the New York Mercantile Exchange — close to the 71.84 cents per gallon it hit in November 1991.

Home sales dip in August

■ Annualized pace strong despite dip, higher mortgage rates.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Existing home sales slowed slightly in August but continued at more than an annualized 4 million pace for the sixth consecutive month despite relatively high mortgage rates.

"The housing sector is still healthy," maintained economist David Lereah of the Mortgage Bankers Association. "The housing sector is not being inhibited by mortgage rates."

Sales of previously owned homes slipped 0.5 percent, to 4.14 million at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, the National Association of Realtors reported Wednesday. Many analysts had expected a 1 percent drop.

Sales have remained above the 4 million mark since March and set a new record, 4.28 million, in May. Sales for all of 1995 totaled just 3.8 million.

Since May, however, sales have softened, declining 2.8 percent in June and 0.2 percent in July. But the 4.15 million rate in July was stronger than the 4.14 million initial estimate.

"The nation's housing market has seen unprecedented movement this year and it's only natural that the market will correct itself," said John A. Tuccillo, a Realtors economist.

Lereah attributed the strength to an economy that continues to produce jobs and increase incomes.

"Consumers still have the wherewithal to go out and buy homes ... and builders continue to build homes," he said.

Indeed, new home sales shot up 7.9 percent in August to the highest level in five months and construction of single-family homes jumped 8.3 percent to a 2 1/2-year high.

Many analysts had predicted a sharp fall off in the housing industry as 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages soared, averaging 8.32 percent in June compared to 7.03 percent last January.

The monthly payment on a $100,000 mortgage with a 7 percent interest rate is $665, while the payment on the same loan with a 8.5 percent rate is $769 — a difference of $104.

Rates have fallen slightly since June and averaged 8 percent in August, according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

Many analyst expect rates to level off near the current level, well below the double-digit figures of most of the 1980s.

The median price of an existing home was $122,300, up from $121,500 in July and $117,600 a year earlier. The median is the midpoint, meaning half of the homes cost more and half cost less.

Regionally, sales jumped 5.6 percent in the West, to a 950,000 rate. The median price was $154,600. They rose 0.9 percent, to 1.07 million, in the Midwest, where the median price was $104,900.

But sales plunged 9.5 percent in the Northeast, to a 570,000 rate, and 1.9 percent in the South, to 1.53 million. The median price in the Northeast was $144,500 and in the South, $105,700.

Nation's largest pipeline ruled hazardous

■ Owners of petroleum pipeline that stretches from Texas to New Jesey told to schedule testing of entire line.

Associated Press

DALLAS — The nation's biggest petroleum pipeline is hazardous, according to federal officials who have ordered the owner to prepare a schedule for testing the entire line that stretches from Texas to New Jersey.

The "continued operation of this pipeline without corrective measures ... would be hazardous to life, property and the environment," the order says.

The line is one of four fuel lines that ruptured in flooding near Houston in 1994, setting the San Jacinto River on fire for days and scorching everything in its path.

Officials have ordered Colonial Pipeline Co. of Atlanta to submit by Oct. 29 a schedule for tests on the entire line.

The pipeline runs as close as 20 feet from homes and businesses and delivers more than 75 million gallons of fuel a day. However, federal officials haven't notified communities along the line of the risks, The Wall Street Journal's Texas Journal reported Wednesday.

"We only tell the emergency-response people when they need to respond," says Richard Felder, the administrator of the Office of Pipeline Safety in Washington, who signed the order. "Otherwise, we are handling things."

The pipeline contains weak, corroded or fractured segments, and there appear to be systemwide problems controlling the pressure along the pipeline, the order said.

Colonial officials have agreed to test and repair the entire line before a Jan. 1, 2002, deadline. No deadline for repairs has been set.

Felder's agency is most concerned with 500 to 600 miles of pipeline that may contain stress fractures or damage that occurred during shipping in the 1960s. That pipe is distributed along the pipeline's 1,350-mile length, including segments in Texas, Alabama, Mississippi and the Carolinas.

Six spills have resulted in the past 34 years because of the damaged pipe, the Colonial spokesman said.

While the pipe damage has been known for years, no action was taken because testing and repairs were prohibitively expensive until new technology was developed in the early 1990s, Felder said. Testing still costs about $6,000 a mile, amounting to at least $32 million for the entire Colonial system, Felder said.

Colonial estimates the tests' costs at $8 million to $10 million.

While Felder said "the odds are that most of the pipeline is in pretty good shape," a number of local officials said they are angry they haven't been notified of regulators' safety concerns.

"This is not a secret that should be kept," said John Brasington, emergency preparedness director for Cherokee County in South Carolina.

Odds are most of pipeline is safe, but officials along route are upset regulators kept safety concerns secret.

A spokesman for Colonial said the company will do whatever regulators ask. But he added: "We feel that the pipe is safe."

Colonial is owned by 10 oil companies, including units of Mobil Corp., Amoco Corp. and Texaco Inc.

A June 27 rupture near Greenville, S.C., that dumped 1 million gallons of diesel fuel into the Reedy River prompted the order by the U.S. Transportation Department's Office of Pipeline Safety. The spill was the fifth-biggest pipeline spill in U.S. history.

Colonial has replaced three corroded pipe sections in South Carolina in the wake of the order. It also spent an estimated $21 million on related cleanup tests and repairs.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Use of term 'discount' by brokers is not regulated

By Eric Tyson

Q: I understand that discount brokerages pay their brokers a salary, thereby removing their incentive to churn my account. Is the usage of the term "discount broker" somehow regulated, or can commission-compensated brokers call themselves discounters as well?

Tyson

A: The term "discount" is not regulated, and sometimes it is abused.

Just as some retailers in other businesses can claim to be discounters but actually charge comparatively high prices, some discount brokers engage in practices more characteristic of traditional commission-compensated brokers.

The term "discount broker" was coined back in the early 1970s, when the federal Securities and Exchange Commission deregulated brokerage commissions. Prior to that time, all brokers charged the same high rates.

After deregulation, some brokers began to undercut traditional brokers. Led by Charles Schwab and a handful of other firms, discounters were able to charge their customers lower trading fees by paying the brokerage's staff on salary, by not producing research or providing advice and by using technology to reduce labor costs.

Some brokerage firms are hybrids. For example, they might offer reduced commissions on stock and bond trades but then sell commission-based mutual funds.

Most brokerage firms will disclose whether they pay their brokers on salary or commission.

In addition to the churning, which you site as a drawback to the commission-based pay system, I would add that such brokers also have an incentive to steer you toward higher-commission investments.

Q: I was contacted recently by a broker from one of the major brokerage firms about investing in no-load funds. In the past, the same broker tried to sell me load funds, which I refused to buy because I don't like paying an extra 5 percent commission. Now, this broker claims I can buy no-load funds through him.

What's the catch?

A: There's a big catch.

Increasing numbers of the traditional commission-based brokerage firms are beginning to offer no-load funds. However, the firms offer such funds only on a managed-account basis.

To invest in no-load funds through such brokerage firms, you must agree to pay the firm an annual fee of around 1.5 percent for its oversight of your fund portfolio. Note that it is an additional fee on top of the annual operating expenses that all funds charge.

If you pick a good portfolio of funds, you won't need much oversight, so I've never bought into the idea of charging annual fees for such service. The annual fee that such brokerage firms are collecting for the service is more than the funds themselves charge for actually managing the money in the fund!

I've said it many times before: Investing in funds need not be complicated or require a broker or adviser. If you educate yourself, you can take responsibility for choosing good funds.

Stick with companies that maintain low annual operating expenses and that have long-term, demonstrated records of success in the types of funds you desire. Make sure you read each fund's prospectus before you invest.

After you invest, read each fund's annual report, to ensure that the fund is holding its own vs. its peers in terms of performance and the fees that it charges.

If you trade more than 10 percent of your funds every few years, you're trading too much.

Versace Rescues a Vanderbilt Mansion

Associated Press

Gianni Versace, who commands top dollar for his Italian fashions and home furnishings, has spent a lot of lire transforming a derelict Vanderbilt mansion into a New York emporium.

The five-story townhouse, one of two built in a French neoclassical style for George W. Vanderbilt, was completed in 1905. George, grandson of Cornelius, also conceived and built the Biltmore, the opulent retreat in Asheville, N.C.

Vanderbilt hoped the marble-faced twins would stem the march of commerce up Fifth Avenue. B·it by 1924, one had been turned into an art gallery. In 1950, the other was razed to make room for a dry goods store catering to the carriage trade. In the 1970s, a glass and steel skyscraper, Olympic Tower, replaced the retailer.

By the time Versace arrived in New York in search of a worthy address for a flagship store, the remaining townhouse, a city landmark, was empty. While the upper portion of the facade had retained its magnificent pilasters and Corinthian capitals, the ground level and the interior had been altered as commercial space.

Versace leased the building and began a restoration to approximate its original grandeur, at a cost that would exceed the $9 million estimate. Now complete, it joins restored architectural landmarks in Italy, Switzerland and Paris that also are important shops in his fashion, home furnishings and retailing empire.

Versace, who also prefers historic buildings as homes, appreciated the historical associations of the townhouse, designed by the sons of eminent architect Richard Morris Hunt for one of America's richest and most pretentious families.

Using what was left of the facade, period photographs and architectural drawings as reference, Rocco Magnoli and Lorenzo Carmellini of Laboratorio Associati of Milan re-created the exterior. They also re-created the original interior plan of three large rooms, or bays, per floor.

Restoration is an inexact process in which luck often plays a part. In this case, the architects were lucky to find a source in Cararra, Italy, for the Vermont marble that once faced the lower part of the building. It isn't unusual for firms in Cararra, world center of marble fabrication, to have stock from around the world. And it was cheaper to cut what was already there than for the architects to have more shipped from the Danby, Vt., quarry.

Using a laser, Italian artisans re-created the unusual pattern of cuts, known as vermiculation, that imitate the meanderings of worms in wood. They finished the work by hand.

"This was the most expensive way of working marble, involving extensive hand-carving to make the pattern," says Enrico Como, co-project architect. "So, of course, it was appropriate for the Vanderbilts."

Versace's people declined to discuss costs, but Xenophon Galinas, president of Olympic Tower Associates, the landlord, said that most large retail corporations spare no expense on their flagship stores. In that context, he said, "The Versace installation is one of the most expensive found in the market today."

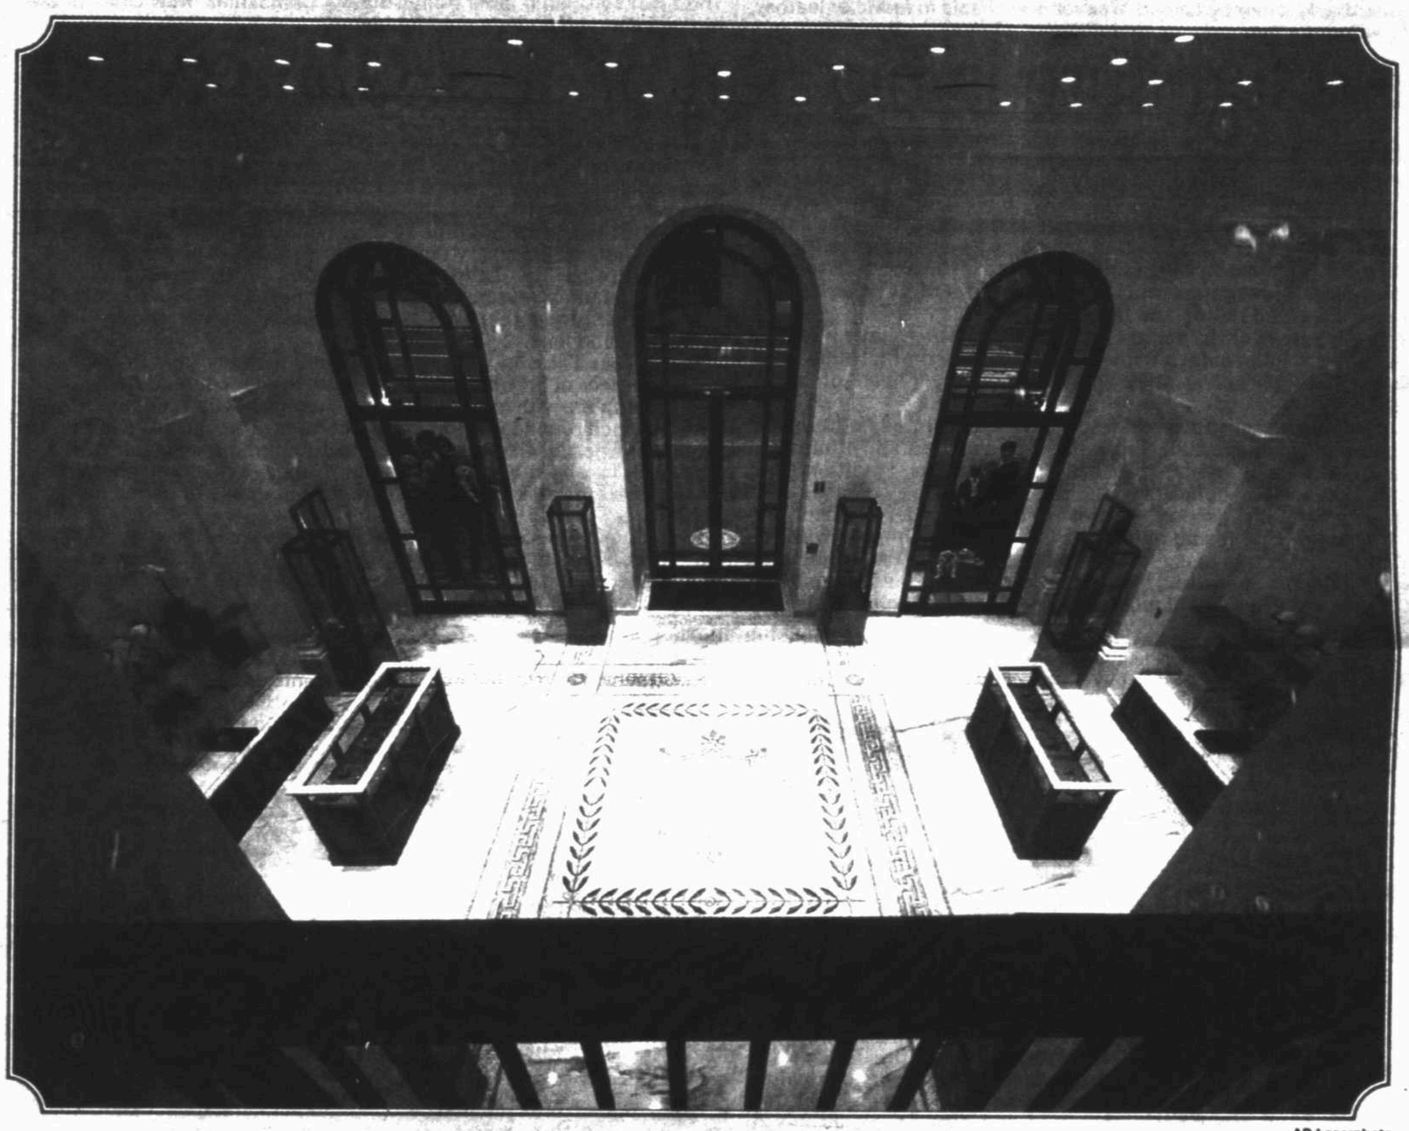

What Versace got for the money is a luxurious commercial space in what was once a magnificent residence.

The key interior feature is a marble staircase with bronze balustrade that winds its way through each level. The stairwell is lit by a skylight, evoking the original light well of the Vanderbilt residence.

Each level has custom-made terrazzo paving, and the home furnishings department on the fifth floor has inlaid wood. Throughout the store, recessed wall vitrines display accessories against hand-trowelled plaster walls ornamented with classical pilasters.

While the Vanderbilts lacked no amenities in their mansions, the reconstructed townhouse has something the original didn't: a sixth floor. From the original roof line rises a Palladian-style temple on a mosaic pavement. It offers a breath of fresh air and a birds-eye view of Fifth Avenue near Rockefeller Center.

The addition's interior, styled like a pavilion, is to be a haven for the rich and famous. Along with a kitchen and reception area are private dressing rooms for Versace's best clients — Madonna, Prince and Elton John among them.

What was once the grand foyer of the George W. Vanderbuilt townhouse on Fifth Avenue is now the main floor of Gianni Versace's New York flagship store. The facade of the five-story mansion was restored to its 1905 origins, including the Palladian windows and door. The interior, long ago gutted for business space, was rescued from commercial oblivion.

Heraldry enters home furnishings

By Barbara Mayer
Associated Press

Georgia Greenberg read legends of King Arthur to her sons and took them to see the armor collection at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. So she was delighted when her 9-year-old asked that his bedroom be done up in a heraldic style.

That was about four years ago, and Greenberg, a New York composer and writer who tackles her projects with gusto, was stretched to find thematic furnishings to bring the room to life. She ultimately ordered a custom-made rug decorated with shields, found suitable imported fabric for bed and window coverings and hung antique shields and swords on the walls.

Today, the trappings of heraldry are found in a variety of American home furnishings, including fabrics and wallpaper. There is also furniture with iron strapping and other details reminiscent of medieval times. And decorator show houses and magazines are providing inspiration.

"The bold look of heraldry lends itself to the style of the '90s, which is sparer and less cluttered than in the opulent '80s," Jamie Gibbs, an interior designer in New York, says.

Heraldic patterns on fabric from Europe began to trickle into the United States about six years ago, Gibbs says. American fabric and wallpaper manufacturers are now catching up.

The home furnishings trade publication, "Furniture Today," reports that fabrics with heraldic icons, such as one with a lion rampant, are featured in new home decorating fabrics.

Among companies with wallpaper patterns harking to days when knighthood was in flower are Chapters, with the Chart Room Collection; Eisenhart, with Lynn Hollyn's Sunsplashed Garden Collection; and Sanitas, with the Associates Collection.

Look for coats of arms, crests, shields, pennants, banners, lances, and images of knights, dragons and unicorns. They likely will be mixed with traditional detailing such as the fleur-de-lis, oak leaves, ribbons, banners and tartan plaids.

Ron Soeder, marketing chairman of the Wallcoverings Association, says today's heraldic designs have a realistic look. Imperial Wallcoverings Inc. of Cleveland, where Soeder is vice president and general manager, is using computer-generated motifs of knights, castles, unicorns, wizards and coats of armor in two children's collections, "For Boys Only" and "For Girls Only," and in "Ascot," a more sophisticated collection.

AMONG DECORATORS who have mined this vein is Geoffrey Bradfield of New York, who recently did a decorator showcase room in a Knights of the Round Table theme. The room, set up for two hypothetical pre-teen boys, featured decorative moldings and partitions that looked like castles. He borrowed a suit of armor, valued at $7,000, from Newell Galleries in New York, and draped it with prep school ties.

"The look is romantic, masculine and fun for boys' rooms and media rooms," says Bradfield, who has created several rooms in the idiom for clients.

Gibbs sees heraldry as "an opportunity to get away from flowers" and to make use of dramatic furniture pieces with iron bases and stone tops and drapery rods that look like an arrow or a lance.

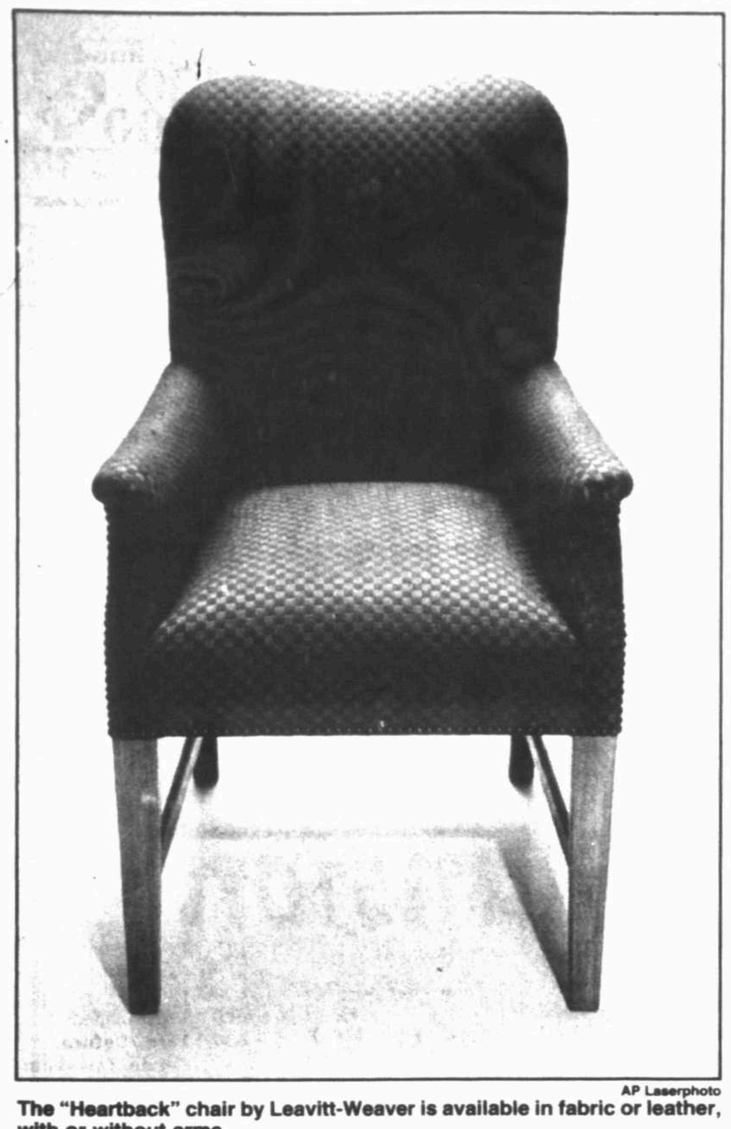

Used in moderation, heraldic motifs impart a sense of tradition. With a more lavish hand, the style verges on the baronial, as in Gibbs' most elaborate effort — a reception hall in a Tudor revival house in the Chicago area.

"We didn't want it to look like a dungeon, but we did want a King Henry VIII feeling," he said.

Toward that goal, there's a copy of a steel shield over the fireplace and a radiator cover that looks like a medieval strapped chest. The most telling accessory is a costly 16th-century suit of armor, bought in England by the client.

But perhaps the chains on the wall are the most talked-about accessory. Gibbs said they were bought — for decorative purposes — at an S&M shop.

The "Jackson" lamp table from Councill Companies' New Orleans Collection reflects the city's colorful history.

New furniture is big part of decorating dollar

Associated Press

Newly made furniture is often the biggest part of the decorating dollar, so a tour of the showrooms is in order. A few picks:

■ Federal and Regency neoclassicism is the inspiration for Ethan Allen's new Regent's Park collection, including a bed with spiral-turned posts and finials and a writing table with leather top and gold tooling. The solid cherry collection features details like reeded bed posts, fluted pilasters, carved motifs and tapered legs.

■ If you're tired of the same old overstuffed sofas, have a look at Mitchell Gold's Juliet sofa, a triple hump-back piece with rolled arms in tailored washable velvet. It's part of the company's New Romantics Collection.

■ Leather-covered furniture doesn't have to look like something for a swinger's lair. Substantial, club-type sofa, armchair and ottoman in Highland House's Single Professional group evoke tradition with antique-finish leather upholstery and solid form.

■ The essence of Louisiana — New Orleans' Garden District, the French Quarter, Creole and plantation culture — is captured with the New Orleans collection being introduced the Councill Companies. The 70-piece collection, sponsored by the Preservation Resource Center in New Orleans and a number of museums, collectors and cultural groups, draws on the area's multicultural background for furniture, fabrics, wallpaper, lighting and rugs. A typical piece is the Jackson mahogany lamp table with shaped, reeded legs and identical front and rear facades, with two functional drawers in front and one in back.

■ The tilt-top table that flips up to provide a chair, often found in 19th century Canadian country cottages, now makes it to the present-day market through the Tulip Tree Collection, a group specializing in French-Canadian reproductions. Tulip Tree also offers a reproduction of an 18th century gothic English chair in solid wood, featuring detailed back slats and legs.

■ The Tour Table by designer Stephen Weaver of Leavitt-Weaver is not just a piece of furniture but an architectural model of a Renaissance tower, complete with miniature staircases, arches and columns, topped with a 42-inch round table top. It's something of a collector's item from an interior design firm that has turned to making unusual furniture, especially in abstract moderne style. A more typical piece might be the sleek Heartback chair, upholstered but spare in either fabric or leather.

■ Basic pine pieces in no-nonsense design are offered by This End Up. There are sofa, chair and ottoman in the Autumn Leaves collection, made of solid pine in a square-cut shapes with free-standing plaid cushioning.

Insulation, caulking are major concerns for home owners, builders

By Edward R. Lipinski
N.Y. Times News Service

Within the last 30 years, insulation and caulking have become major concerns for homeowners and builders. Before the energy crunch of the 70s, homeowners found that fuel was inexpensive and the cost of keeping the home warm was low compared with the cost of installing insulation.

That situation changed; builders and homeowners installed insulation in attics and walls and under floors in an effort to make homes more energy-efficient. Even so, many houses, including some of those built within the last few years, are not properly insulated.

How can you be sure that your home has enough insulation? First, you have to determine how much insulation, if any, you have. To do this you'll have to make a visual inspection of your home from top to bottom. Your home may have several forms of insulation: batts or blankets of fiberglass or mineral wool; loose fill of either rock wool, cellulose, or glass fiber; rigid foam boards; or foam (which expands and hardens after being injected into a cavity).

In addition to verifying the presence of insulation, try to measure its thickness. Match these measurements to the figures on the accompanying chart to calculate the approximate R-value for your home (the ability of the insulation to resist heat flow.) The higher the R-value, the more efficient the insulation.

Your inspection should start in the attic. Look between the joists for insulating materials; these may be in the form of insulation batts or loose fill. If you have insulation here, now is a good time to inspect its condition.

Even though most insulation is very durable, there are still a number of things that can degrade its value. Leaks in the roof or moisture from condensation can mat it, making it useless. Check to make sure that it's not compressed or compacted anywhere — this is usually the result of faulty installation. If you have loose fill, make sure that invading rodents are not nesting in it.

After the attic, you'll want to examine the house walls. Naturally you only need to check the outside walls. Evaluating the insulation in the walls is difficult because it's sealed behind the wallboard. You can verify the presence of insulation, but may not be able to measure the thickness. This is not really a problem, because in most cases the insulation will be fiberglass batts, blown-in loose fill or expanded foam. You can assume, then, that it is approximately the size of the wall cavity, or 3 1/2 inches thick.

Sometimes you can get a peek at the insulation by removing the cover plate on a switch or outlet (be sure to turn the power off first) and looking into the stud area. You can also try drilling a small inspection hole in the wall. If you use this method, be careful not to drill past the wallboard into the insulation. If you have, patch it with all-purpose compound.

Next, go into the basement. If the basement is unfinished the inspection will be easy. Simply look up between the floor joists to see if there are fiberglass batts. Not all homes have under-floor insulation, but it is essential if the basement connects directly to the garage or has an outside access door. Many building codes require that under-floor insulation be covered with gypsum wallboard. If your ceiling has wallboard, it's safe to assume there's insulation above.

Next, look at the basement walls. Insulation is not always necessary unless the basement is used for living quarters or other activities. A finished basement should be insulated. If the basement has finished walls, use the same wall-inspection techniques described above to detect the insulation. Before leaving the basement inspect the air ducts, pipes and electrical wires. The ducts and pipes should be wrapped, and openings around incoming pipes and electrical wires should be plugged with insulation.

If you have a crawl space, check that. The crawl space may have insulation blankets spread between the joists. There should also be some sort of moisture barrier on the ground. This usually consists of 6-mil polyethylene film laid over the exposed soil.

After your inspection you can calculate the average R-value for your house and compare it with the local code specifications or with the United States Department of Energy recommendations. If all this seems like a lot of effort, you can simplify matters by calling in a professional energy auditor, who will assess your home and make cost-effective suggestions — for a fee. Look in the Yellow Pages or call your utility company for the names of energy auditors.

Some energy auditors are able to perform an infrared scan on your house. This can be helpful even for homeowners with up-to-date insulation. The scan technician, or thermographer, uses a special heat-sensitive camera that measures very small differences in temperature. The scan is best done at night or on a cool day when there is a 30-degree temperature difference between the inside and outside of the house. A good scan can reveal areas where heat is leaking through the insulation barrier, and can pinpoint the weak spots.

To locate a thermographer, look in the Yellow Pages under "Infrared Inspection Services" or get in touch withthe Infraspection Institute, 33 Juniper Ridge, Shelburne, Vt. 05482. Scan rates vary from $75 to $250.

Your inspection may show that your home is well insulated, but if not, then you're faced with the problem of choosing the right insulation materials and installing them properly. These topics will be discussed next week.

DEAR ABBY

Perception of 'gay lifestyle' needs update

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am hoping that you will be able to answer a question that has been bothering me for years. What is a "gay lifestyle"?

Van Buren

I am a 40-year-old gay male and don't have a clue as to what a gay lifestyle is. My life partner, David, and I have been together 15 years and have jointly adopted three special-needs children. We live in the suburbs in a middle-class neighborhood, at the end of a cul-de-sac. Like most of our gay and lesbian friends, we don't smoke, drink alcohol or go to bars. Our children go to public school with the rest of the children in the neighborhood.

Once a friend told me what he thought was a gay lifestyle, but by the sound of it, he was describing a single's lifestyle, gay or straight. Is that what some people mean, that is, a gay lifestyle is synonymous with a single lifestyle?

If there is such a thing as a gay lifestyle, doesn't that automatically mean that there is a "heterosexual lifestyle"? And if this is true, what is a heterosexual lifestyle? I have sincerely been asking people and no one has been able to give me an answer. — MICHAEL SERKIN-POOLE, BELLEVUE, WASH.

DEAR MICHAEL: Fair questions. In Eric Marcus' informative book "Is It a Choice?" (HarperSanFrancisco), he answers this way: "After watching countless news reports and occasional documentaries over the years about gay people —gay men, mostly — the most popular image of gay life that has been seared into the minds of most Americans is the urban, single nightlife led by some gay men — and plenty of straight people as well — during the 1970s.

"As hard as it might be to believe, there is no such thing as a 'gay lifestyle,' just as there is no such thing as a heterosexual lifestyle. Gay and lesbian people, like heterosexual people, live in a variety of ways, from poor to middle-class to nouveau riche, from urban to rural."

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to the opinion of "Ex-Waitress," who apparently has a problem when a good server approaches her on a personal level.

When someone (anyone, anywhere), even the "person who has been hired to serve her," tells her that her "hair is pretty" or "that's a beautiful blouse," offense should be the last thing that crosses her mind. Helllooo!!! She has just been given a compliment on her great taste — not a conversation, just a compliment; that's it.

I have been a waitress for 12 years and I love my job. It's the most enjoyable work I have ever done. The money's good, too, thanks to the many customers who don't penalize their server when they receive a compliment. Should I take offense when a customer likes my hair? No, I shouldn't.

My tip to "Ex-Waitress": Either stay home and eat, or try a vending machine. Then there will be no conversation that may offend her. With such an unpleasant attitude, it's no wonder she's an ex-waitress. — A HAPPY AND FRIENDLY WAITRESS, LAKELAND, FLA.

DEAR HAPPY WAITRESS: Your "tip" to "Ex-Waitress" is probably one of the most valuable tips she'll ever receive. Let's hope she takes it.

DEAR ABBY: I call my sister in another state very often because of an illness in her family. When things are particularly bad, I call her every night.

These calls are quite expensive for me, and my sister has no consideration about the length of time she talks. She will gab on and on about her neighbors and incidents that I really don't care about when it's on my dime. It would be boring to me even if I lived around the corner from her.

If I remind her that this is long distance and I'm hearing a lot about nothing instead of what's going on with the sick relative, she gets highly insulted and calls me "cheap."

I care about the ailing family member and will continue to call, but how can I reduce the expense and aggravation and get my sister to be more considerate? — PALM SPRINGS SISTER

DEAR PALM SPRINGS SISTER: Tell your sister at the beginning of the call that you have only a couple of minutes to find out how her relative is doing, and that you'll talk longer another time.

Pool watch important

By Ava Van de Water
N.Y. Times News Service

Here are safety tips for pool owners.

The National Spa and Pool Institute recommends layers of protection: A fence with self-closing, self-latching gates around pool or property, beeping alarms on doors leading from the house to pool (most security systems have this built in), child safety fence immediately around pool for tiny children, pool cover (manual or motorized), floating pool alarms and safety equipment near pool, such as a life ring and throw rope.

But don't forget — the best protection is responsible adult or responsible teenage supervision.

Correction:
Kahlua Pound Cake is perfect for entertaining

A recipe for Kahlua Pound Cake published on Wednesday's Food page that included an extra ingredient in the cake portion of the recipe. The following is the correct recipe from "Landmark Entertaining: Party Traditions and Favorite Recipes From the Junior League of Abilene."

KAHLUA POUND CAKE

FOR THE KAHLUA FUDGE:
1/2 cup baking cocoa
1/4 cup sugar
1/4 light corn syrup
1/4 cup Kahlua
1/4 cup water

Combine baking cocoa, sugar, corn syrup, Kahlua and water in a sauce pan. Cook over low heat until blended, stirring constantly. Bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring constantly. Let stand until cool.

FOR THE CAKE:
3/4 cup milk
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
2 1/2 cups sugar
2 cups unsalted butter, softened
6 eggs, at room temperature
4 cups flour
1/4 teaspoon baking soda

Combine the milk and vanilla in a bowl and mix well.

Combine sugar and butter in a mixer bowl. Beat at high speed for 3 minutes or until light and fluffy;, scraping the bowl occasionally. Add the eggs 1 at a time, beating well after each addition. Add the flour 1 cup at a time alternately with 1/4 cup of the milk mixture at a time, beating constantly and beginning and ending with the flour.

Spoon 1/3 of batter, or about 2 1/2 cups, into a medium bowl, reserving the remaining batter. Stir the baking soda into the fudge. Stir the fudge into the medium bowl.

Pour 1/2 of the reserved batter into a greased and floured 10-inch tube pan; spread with the fudge batter. Top with the remaining reserved batter.

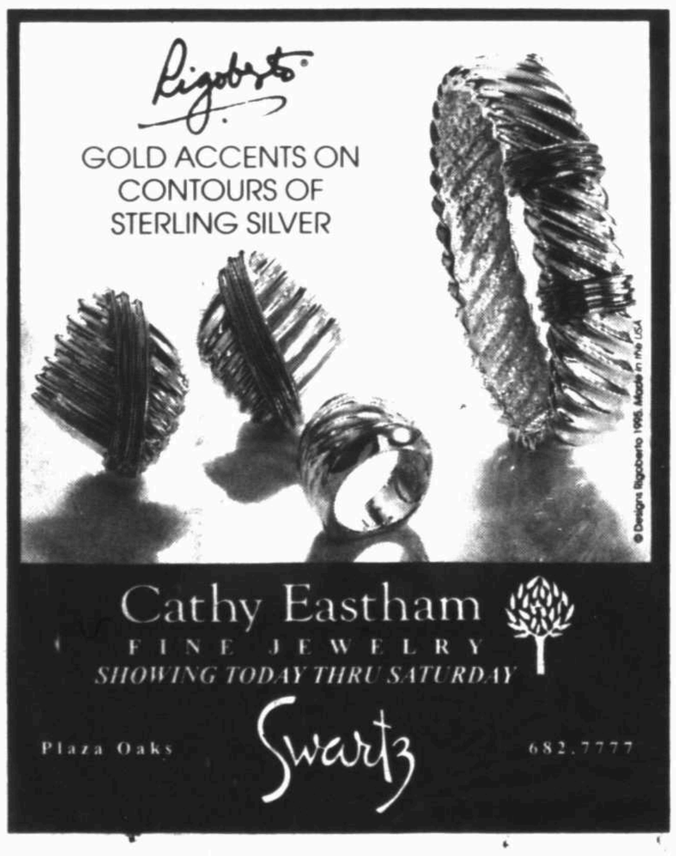

Bake at 300 degrees for 1 hour and 40 minutes or until tests done. Cool cake in the pan on a wire rack for 15 minutes. Invert onto a wire rack to cool completely.

FOR THE KAHLUA GLAZE:
4 ounces semisweet chocolate
1/4 cup unsalted butter
2 tablespoons whipping cream
2 tablespoons Kahlua

Bring the chocolate, butter whipping cream and Kahlua to a boil in a saucepan, stirring frequently. Let stand until cool. Drizzle over the cake. Serves 16.

Stepdaughter of Charger physician victimized by bomb

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — A small package bomb exploded Wednesday in the face of a 14-year-old girl who had picked it up outside the La Jolla home of her stepfather, a team physician for the San Diego Chargers.

Police were called to the home of Dr. Gary Losse at 6:51 a.m. after the package detonated in the family's kitchen, police said. Losse's stepdaughter, Jennifer Hutslar, sustained major shrapnel wounds to her left hand as well as minor facial and torso lacerations.

"She's in good condition and expected to make a full recovery," said fire Capt. Jeff Carle. She underwent 4 1/2 hours of surgery on her left hand at Scripps Memorial Hospital in La Jolla.

Hutslar had picked up the plain brown package under the family's mailbox and took it inside, where it exploded when she tried open it, investigators said. Damage to the home was said to be minor.

"Presuming it happened about 6:30 or so she was probably getting ready to go to school," said police spokesman Bill Robinson.

Her father, Robert Hutslar, said the family was concerned about "how she's going to take this. She's scared. She's upset — we all are."

The package apparently was addressed to Losse, Robinson said. Losse, one of four team physicians for the San Diego Chargers, has been the team's orthopedic surgeon since 1981 and has his own practice, Oasis Sports Medical Group, in San Diego.

It wasn't known why he may have been a target of the attack.

"It's a sad thing, boy, that our society has reached that level," Chargers coach Bobby Ross said. "Right now our big thoughts are with him and his family and his daughter. I was shocked when I heard about it. Just shocked."

Neighbors on West Muirlands Drive said they did not know why the Losse family would be targeted. They said they were awakened by sirens and did not hear the explosion.

"My initial reaction was, 'I'm for the death penalty,'" said next-door neighbor Jim Bouskos. "This kind of stuff has got to stop."

Police refused to say whether the package was delivered by mail or dropped off by the bomber.

The fire department's Metropolitan Arson Strike Team and San Diego police were investigating the explosion with assistance from postal inspectors, the FBI and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Marketing of George begins after suspension by Falcons

By Marc Rice
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — The marketing of Jeff George has begun.

Though insisting he is still a Falcon, the suspended Atlanta quarterback said Wednesday he'd just as soon play somewhere else. And his agent acknowledged that George's days in Atlanta are numbered following his sideline spat with coach June Jones during Sunday night's loss to Philadelphia.

"It's fairly clear he's played his last game as a Falcon," said agent Leigh Steinberg.

As if to underscore the point, George held a rare news conference Wednesday at which he painted himself as a model team player who would someday take a team — not necessarily the Falcons — to the Super Bowl.

A source close to George, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the Seattle Seahawks, Oakland Raiders, Tampa Bay Buccaneers and Baltimore Ravens have expressed interest.

"Absolutely, if it's not here, I'll find a team. There's a team out here that's in need of a quarterback, a quarterback away from the Super Bowl. There's no doubt — I'm confident in my mind that I can lead them to where they want to go," George said.

George was benched by Jones in the third quarter of Sunday's game after throwing an interception. In full view of television cameras, he raged at Jones about the benching, then was suspended by the winless Falcons on Monday.

George said he has not apologized to Jones, and will not. He said any competitive quarterback would complain about being removed, and he would do it again if the situation arose.

For his part, Jones said he tried to call George Tuesday night and again Wednesday to talk to the quarterback directly. But chances that George will remain a Falcons quarterback are "fairly slim," he said at a news conference Wednesday. "Kenny (Herock) and I will put our heads together after the 49er game if something hasn't transpired by then."

Though he alleged the benching was "preordained" and was mildly critical of Atlanta's run-and-shoot offense, George said he still considered himself a Falcon.

Weary Woods withdraws from Buick Challenge

Associated Press

A frantic five-week run in which Tiger Woods won the U.S. Amateur, turned pro with golf's richest endorsement deal and played 408 holes at 63-under-par ended Wednesday when he withdrew from the Buick Challenge, citing exhaustion.

"The past five weeks have been the most challenging of my life and at the same time the most physically and emotionally draining," the 20-year-old Woods said in a statement released by his agent.

Woods, who had a chance to win the past two weeks, said "being in contention resulted in more strain that I anticipated."

The Buick Challenge, which begins Thursday in Pine Mountain, Ga., about 70 miles southwest of Atlanta, has the strongest field of any of the events since Woods turned pro.

Woods gained entry to the Buick and six other tournaments by accepting the seven sponsor exemptions non-tour members are allowed under PGA Tour rules. He needed those events to earn enough money to get his PGA Tour card and avoid going to qualifying school.

But a third-place finish at the B.C. Open last week gave Woods a total of $140,194 in earnings and moved him to 128th on the money list, guaranteeing unlimited sponsor exemptions for 1997. It also put Woods within easy striking distance of the finish needed to earn his full-time PGA Tour card.

Woods had committed to play in the Las Vegas Invitational next week and the Texas Open the week after.

Lassiter's two scores seal Mutiny's win

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Roy Lassiter scored two goals in the final eight minutes Wednesday night to give the Tampa Bay Mutiny a 2-0 victory over the Columbus Crew in the first game of the MLS Eastern Conference playoff series.

Tampa Bay can wrap up the best-of-3 first-round series Saturday night at home.

Lassiter's first goal came in the 82nd minute when Steve Ralston sent a long cross from the end line to Lassiter, who headed it past Columbus goalkeeper Brad Friedel.

Five minutes later, as Columbus was pressing forward, Ralston again found Lassiter on a cross, which he booted past Friedel.

Lassiter, who leads the league with 29 goals, has scored 27 in the last 25 games and four goals in his last two games.

The Mutiny offense, best in the league with 68 goals, outshot the Crew 10-2 in shots on goal.

The win was the seventh in a row for the regular season champion.

PRAYER TO The Blessed Virgin. (Never to Fail) O Most Beautiful Flower of Mount Carmel, Faithful Vine Splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin Assist Me in my Necessity. O Star for the Sea, Help Me and Show Me Here You Are My Mother. O Holy Mary Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth Humbly Beseech You From the Bottom of my Heart, To Secure Me in my Necessity (Make Request). There Are None That Can Withstand Your Power. O Mary Conceived Without Sin, Pray For Us Who Have Recoursed to Thee (3 Times). Holy Mary I Place This Cause In Your Hands (3 Times). Say This Prayer For 3 Consecutive Days and Then You Must Publish and It Will Be Granted To You. EB.
