EIGHT ARRESTS ARE RESULTS OF LIQUOR RAIDING

ALDRIDGE RECAPTURED AFTER JAILBREAK OF SATURDAY
WHISKEY IS SEIZED
LOCAL OFFICERS MAKE LARGE HAULS IN BEER SEIZURE

Chasing their work with the re-capture of C. E. Aldridge, local man charged with auto theft, who broke jail here Saturday night, members of the sheriff's and police department closed a very successful day yesterday and at the final count last night eight individuals were lodged behind the bars of the county jail and the sheriff's office was enriched by several gallons of beer and forty pounds of whiskey as a result of a series of raids made yesterday afternoon. The officers killed two birds with one stone yesterday shortly after 4 o'clock when they raided the home of Ed Lightfoot about four miles out on the Bowditch road, capturing the beer and whiskey and also re-capturing Aldridge. He was in a dugout of the Lightfoot place when the officers made the raid. Liquor Supply Found Fourteen pints of "red corn whiskey" along with numerous bottles of beer were seized by the officers in the last raid and Ed Lightfoot, a brother, W. N. Lightfoot, Earl Wright, and a man giving his name as Crossland were taken.

PLAN TO BRING PEACE IN CHINA NOW DISCUSSED

NORTH AND SOUTH TO CEASE FIGHTING IS BELIEVED RET'S ARE BARRED
COMPROMISE MAY BE MEANS TO UNITE THAT NATION
(By Associated Press)
PEKING, June 6.—Definite negotiations for peace between North and South China and the establishment of an alliance of three of the most powerful military leaders in China with the definite exclusion of communists are now going on, said a spokesman for Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, Manchurian war lord, today.
He declared that the leaders negotiating this compromise were Chang Tso-Lin, Generalissimo of the Nanking or moderate nationalists, and General Yen Hui-Shan, governor of the province of Shansi, which is looked upon as the key position in the present struggle between the North and South.
General Takes Lead
It was Chiang Kai-Shek who took the initiative in the negotiations, said the spokesman. Chang Tso-Lin would first make sure that Chiang Kai-Shek was not a follower of Lenin and communism, the spokesman continued, and then admitted he was anxious to come to terms with the real followers of the late Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the Chinese republican leader whose principles Chang Tso-Lin declared he had never repudiated.
While withdrawing to the north of the Yellow river in order to demonstrate "his" desire for peace, Chang Tso-Lin, it was stated, made certain proposals to the Nanking generalissimo in order to determine whether a compromise between Manchurians and the nationalists was really possible. Realizing that the country was tired of war, Chang Tso-Lin was reported as ready to make any concession for the sake of peace with the exception of accepting bolshevism.
No Communism Allowed
Chang Tso-Lin, it was stated, was uncompromising with communism and that a definite line will be drawn between the moderates of the Kuomintang (nationalist political organization) and the radicals whose headquarters are at Hankow. A definite line will be drawn by the Manchurian leader between the moderates and radicals, it was stated, so that he will know exactly with whom he is dealing.

CALL FOR NEW SESSION IS IN PROSPECT NOW

CIVIL SERVICE LAWS FAIL WITH PRISON AND ROAD BILLS
WORK INCOMPLETE
SMALLER MEASURES ARE ALSO LOST FOR THE TERM
(By Associated Press)
AUSTIN, June 6.—Governor Dan Moody, contemplating defeat of the three most important pieces of general legislation urged in his special session messages, would not say tonight whether he will call another special session immediately.
Civil service, highway and prison legislation are lost.
After defeat of the civil service bill by senate adjournment without a vote Saturday, the governor said he would not call another session if appropriations get through.
Tonight he said "I have no statement to make."
Opinion of legislators is divided as to whether there will be another session after this one ends Tuesday night. Prevailing sentiment seems to be against it.
Satterwhite Bill Loss
The Satterwhite house bill to subject major prison re-location sales went under late today along with the administration amendment vesting the new nine member prison board with plenary power in sales, when the senate tabled both propositions subject to call.
In the house, the administration favored highway bill was defeated when several members insisted on receding-end rules, and the house recessed until Tuesday.
Besides the major legislation, many miscellaneous measures were doomed. Although the house calendar is fairly well cleaned of Senate bills, Speaker R. L. Talbot read a list of 22 house bills which the Senate had not acted on tonight. These do not include bills reported from senate committees today, and those sent over by the house today.
Appropriations Endangered
One appropriation measure is endangered. The house on motion of representative J. F. Wallace, refused to grant another conference to the senate which had declined to accept provisions of the other school aid bill.
Wallace declared the house will see LEGISLATURE Page 8

SNOW SENTENCED TO DIE IN CHAIR

TRIPLE MURDER CASE IS ENDED WITH EDICT OF JUDGE "DEATH"
STEPHENVILLE, June 6.—The gruesome case of F. M. Snow, charged with killing his wife, mother-in-law and stepson on a ranch near Miles from here November 27, 1925, closed yesterday with the edict of Judge J. H. Keith sentenced Snow to die in the electric chair at Huntsville on Friday, July 15.
Snow's only hope for escaping capital for the crime with his life now lies with the governor, who has the power to commute the sentence of death to imprisonment.
When asked if he had anything to say before sentence should be pronounced, Snow cried: "I don't think it's right for me to pay for what fate is to blame for. He did not expect what he meant."
Judge Presides
Sheriff J. H. Keith of Erath county led to the penitentiary at Huntsville Monday afternoon, stating at the time that he would guard Snow with more than usual care to prevent any attempt at self-destruction.
After conviction, Snow appeared, but the death sentence was affirmed February 8, 1927, and the court of criminal appeals overruled a motion for rehearing March 8, 1927.
Snow turned the bodies of his wife and mother in an open grave, and after chopping off the head of his stepson, Beverly Condon, he hid the body in the mountains and concealed the head in a cellar near Cedar Point.
Snow confessed to the crime, and led officers to Connelly's body after the head had been found.

THE MORNING AVALANCHE'S PAGE OF NEWS

In The Woman's Realm

BLANCHE E. BEAN, EDITOR

PHONES 13 AND 14

The Woman's Day

By Alliance Summer

A circus fat lady who boasts that her weight is 435 pounds has just wed a male weighing a mere 130 pounds. I'm sure that some fool for thought lurks within that tale—something more than her's proof that somebody loves a fat girl—but I don't know just what it is, unless he's a brave mortal! Think of buying clothes to go around that to say nothing of beefsteaks to fill that!

SNAKE JEWELRY
Women are queer creatures, which observation is prompted by just seeing an ad about "snake-skin jewelry." Artistic little plaques made from box constrictor, blue racer, or python skin are bound in seed pearls or gold beads or what have you, suspended around the neck by a chain or cord, and there you are! And the girl who would give as good a moon as any girl of 1935 if she saw a little garter snake will be the first to wear a snake locket next her alabaster throat. Next on the docket will be lingerie made of mouseline, and all of us who jump on a chair when we see one little anaemic mouse, will wear 'em, I suppose!

ANYTHING GOES
Bathing suits worn at Atlantic City will not be censored this year. "Let your conscience be your guide" is the motto of the A. C. Chamber of Commerce. And here's a warning that prettier, more modest, more sensible suits will be seen at this seaside city than ever before. It's censorship with its implication that suits might be "indecent" which brings us forth as near the border line as possible.

SHE DIED
A few days ago I told you mothers of why dieting daughters is a story which you could tell them. The story was about a Miss Irene Gimbel who, after dieting for 59 days, tried to eat and couldn't. She tried to give even more point to your story, Miss Gimbel died a day or so ago.

THESE MALES!
A 78-year-old bridegroom recently filed suit for annulment of his marriage to his bride of 75. He complained that she was not so robust as represented and that because of her various ill he was still doing his own housework. Before pointing the finger at shame at the elderly bridegroom, consider men of lesser years who discover that their vows of love can quickly change to something else if they discover that the bride can't darn socks or boil an egg. Most wife-seekers are housework-seekers. You can get a wife for her knees. You have to give a lived house-keeper her keep and at least $10 a week.

CUT TO FIT
I wish that all women would read this statement from Andrew Pauley, chief manager of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, and believe and put into practice what they read:
"Half a knee might be too much or too little for a lady to show, depending upon her size. A tall woman might lengthen her skirt a bit, to eradicate the ugly line at the knee joint, and a small girl might shorten hers a bit."
But we'll all of us, short and tall, fat and lean, continue to wear 'em 12, 14, 16 or 18 above, depending on what Fashion says. Our infirm are as whole as!

THESE MODERN KIDS!
Police stopped New York's 12th Black Bottom marathon contest after three of the eight dancers had dropped exhausted to the floor. Another girl just won a marathon by dancing 30 miles in 39 hours or something of that sort. Sometimes, when one hour and reads of certain "gung-ho-ism" of this modern generation one thinks that perhaps the good old days were not so bad.

Miss Mary Peter Is Married To Joe Witt, Amarillo

Miss Mary Peter and Joe Witt were married last evening in Amarillo at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Witt, according to word reaching relatives and friends here. After a honey-moon, they expect to be at home in Amarillo where the groom is a member of the J. M. O'Brien insurance and loan company.

Mr. Witt was formerly at the head of the local business college. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Witt, 1244 15th street.
Only a few intimate friends witnessed the ceremony, which was officiated by an Amarillo minister. The bride wore a gown of blue georgette with accessories to harmonize.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Morrisett, 2117 27th street, are entertaining in the evening for Miss Eva Lawson, bride-elect of Will Ross.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Maxey, 2123 13th street, will entertain the A-1 Forty-two club in the evening.

Today's College Girl

SHE HAS TURNED FROM "PETTING" TO SERIOUS-MINDEDNESS, ONE SAYS

By Margaret Stone Jameson
(By NEA Service)

There are several things wrong with the commonly accepted picture of the present-day college girl.

If she still is portrayed as the type of jinx-mad baby that emerged right after the war, as a matter of fact the pendulum has swung back.

The reckless, unthinking, sensational flapper is a rarity on the campus.

Most college girls today have a sense of proportion. They do not overstep, underdress or behave in a manner that attracts attention. They have never seen any drinking on the Swarthmore campus.

As to Bobbed Hair

Fully fifty per cent of the college girls I know have long hair. Many of the other girls who have had their hair cut are letting it grow. The college girl today discards the harmful things of the newer freedom and retains its advantages.

Five years ago, when I was in high school, everyone "necked." Today, girls are thinking more seriously of the "One Man," and are not petting so promiscuously. I think tales of necking and immorality are a rusty overstatement.

But college girls today do face life with frankness.

Most of them want a career. Of course they want love and marriage even more. But the average college girl, after four years of study, feels her life will be fuller, happier, and more satisfying if she can include a career.

I think most college girls look forward to motherhood. I know no girls who don't want to have children some day. While most college girls are ambitious to win both marriage and work, I think if one had to be sacrificed I would choose the career every time.

College girls today are for the most part serious-minded individuals. It is the rare exception who neglects studies either for athletics or outside activities.

What the colleges are invaluable to what the competitive spirit, which makes for self-development. But I have known of many students who have not done their best in school because of this.

I think outside campus activities are an education themselves, in that they develop the ability to get along with folks.

I think most undergraduates have some form of religion. They may have questioned the blind belief in the God of their childhood Sunday school, but they have grown to believe with much more conviction in some divine guiding power.

Margaret Stone Jameson

One big advantage of college is that it gives a girl a chance to learn how to adapt herself to living and working with all types of people. For college breeds a real spirit of democracy.

The most valuable thing college gave me was a changed viewpoint of life. When I left high school I felt like burning my books because I was "educated," and would no longer need them. Now I feel as if I had just barely glimpsed a few of the great heights of knowledge and that I can spend the rest of my life trying to know more.

College has made me feel that the most valuable thing in life is to know what it is all about and, because people fill such a big place in it, to know and understand them.

5 reasons

Why YOU Should Own Your Home

FIRST—you cease paying for the upkeep of another man's property. Money that went to the landlord each month will not be invested in your own dwelling. Owning a home makes you independent.

SECOND—A home with its grounds provides the only proper environment for rearing children. Their playmates are the children of other homeowners. Owning a home makes you a better father.

THIRD—Similarly, you choose your neighbors. Instead of being people you must tolerate they become friends you want to know. Owning a home brings you friends.

FOURTH—You are afforded the opportunity of living in a truly residential section; trees, lawns and flowers in place of noisy streets. Owning a home brings wholesome surroundings.

FIFTH—Being a landowner, you enter more wholeheartedly into the affairs of your community. Its interests are yours. Owning a home makes you a better citizen.

ONZALES RECORDS PROFIT IN PECANS

VE MILLION POUNDS ARE RAISED DURING PAST SEASON THERE.

(By Associated Press) GONZALES, June 6.—Here in a Soudalpe Valley, where approximately 5,000,000 pounds of pecans were harvested last year, 400 employees of the Texas Pecan Growers' association are to assemble for the second week in July for their annual convention.

They will be shown thousands of tons of pecan trees, some cultivated but for the most part growing wild, from which a revenue of about $10,000,000 was derived in 1926. The figures are those of W. E. Novan, secretary-manager of the Gonzales Chamber of Commerce. A check on our load shipments, he announces, shows 103 cars. Express and less than car loads shipments are figures reported by agents to San Antonio and other points, added 12 car loads in total of 126 car loads.

ROTARIANS MEET KING OF BELGIUM

SAN ANTONIO MAN GIVES HIS INTRODUCTION TO THE ORGANIZATION.

(By the Associated Press) OSTEND, Belgium, June 6.—Harry H. Rogers, of San Antonio, Texas, introduced King Albert of the Belgiums at a luncheon here today in connection with the meeting of Rotary International.

"It is my pleasure to introduce to you the King of Belgium," said Mr. Rogers, "but you, Sir, are a member of two Rotary clubs, and I know that you are interested in the administration as well as in the principles of this organization which you have by your acceptance of the doubling membership in it. No man can be an active member of more than one Rotary club, and ordinarily membership is limited to one who is a resident within the territory of the club voting the membership. However, all rules have their exceptions, and it is fitting that there should be one in this instance."

Recent Former Visit "Many years ago you came to my country, Sir, a youthful prince, and wherever you went in the United States you charmed our people by those qualities of mind and which later years were to be put to the test. Then when the test came and had been made, you came back to visit us again, and I was very pleased to receive you, Sir, as the King that we know the Prince would be when he came to the throne. It seems particularly fitting, Sir, that your membership in an American club should be held in one of the extreme western boundaries of the United States, the second Rotary club to be formed, San Francisco."

"This club is typical of other branches of the extension of the Rotary from its birthplace around the world, and your membership in it, Sir, is typical of the love and admiration of Americans for your country, extending as it does from the Pacific shores of America to the Atlantic shore and across the ocean to Belgium."

Furthermore, your majesty, I can assure you that you have the love and esteem of all the other nationalities here and all those not represented here. It is my duty to call the roll and let someone for each country pay you such a tribute of love and affection."

Stacy Smith and Winfield Watkins, Tech students, left last night for Fort Worth where they will work for the summer.

Judge D. E. Rink returned late Saturday from Capitan, where he has been attending court.

WITCHERS MIDAS

THIS HAS HAPPENED

T. Q. CURTIS, millionaire department store owner, takes BILLY WELLS, NYDA LOMAX and WINNIE SHELTON from his store and places them in his home for one year, because he wants to help further ambitions which he believes are necessary in the only one who is serious. The others lie to enjoy his generosity.

Billy is infatuated with DAL ROMAINO, nephew of MRS. MEADOWS, their hostess. She is harassed by the fear that he is "slaying" both her and Winnie Shelton.

Through everything she loves CLAY CURTIS, son of her benefactor, who has disinherited himself and is living with Billy's mother in the poor part of town, working in a factory by day and writing music at night.

Unknown to T. Q. the girls learn he intends to adopt one of them when the year is up. Nyda and Winnie institute a series of intrigues to gain his affection. Billy loses interest in her violin and finally has a breakdown. T. Q. begins to question the wisdom of his philanthropic experiment when he finds that Nyda, for whom he has fitted a model kindergarten room in his home, is helping her work, is not interested and is careless and unkind with the children under her care. Believing the girls need a change, he takes them to Europe for several months. Upon their return, they find the town in a upheaval over a Hindu fortune teller. All three girls are told amazingly intimate things by the strange man, RALPH TRUMAN, a friend, says he believes the Hindu has an accomplice. When the Hindu and Dal Romaino disappear simultaneously, Billy recalls Ralph's words and is vaguely troubled. She hears occasionally from Dal but his letters leave her unhappy. One night she passes Nyda's room and hears Nyda and a man quarreling.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIX

Before she was in Dal Romaino's arms, before she felt his long-fingered lips upon her cheek, Billy was shaking with a frenzy of delight.

"Are you really here?" she begged huskily. "Oh, Dal, Dal! I've been breaking my heart over you! Why did you stay away so long?"

The man's laugh was low and rich with satisfaction. "Business, my son, business. One of us has to think of the Romaino family's future. It won't be long now, will it, darling? Mr. and Mrs. Dalhart Romaino. Do you like the sound of it?"

"Don't, Dal. You'll make me cry. Did you just get in? You couldn't wait until morning to see me, could you, dearest?"

"Of course not!" He seized her fingers that were straying over his face and kissed them, one after the other, lingeringly. "But there was another reason why I had to see you tonight. I've just got in, but I'm leaving on the next train."

"Oh, Dal!" she cried out sharply. "Oh please, darling, don't leave me again! I can't stand it!"

"It is just for a little while, darling. I really shouldn't be here now, but I changed my routing at the last minute. I'm on my way to New York to wind up a really big business deal. They'll be back, darling. No one knows that I'm here but you, and you must promise me not to tell a soul that you have seen me."

"But why, Dal?" She drew back from his embrace, trying to see his face in the dark.

"Well, I'm not seeing Aunt Lucia, and she'd be terribly hurt if she knew I had been here, had seen you and had not seen her. Besides, our midnight rendezvous between trains would cause a good deal of talk. Come back, Billy. We mustn't quarrel now, dear. Kiss me again."

While she was in his arms it was almost enough, but she knew that when he was alone again she would be for tortured hours awake and fighting her doubts of him. When he could not give her another salute she broke away from him, after a last clinging kiss, and began to run across the rough, dry stubble of the winter-bitten lawn.

Before she reached the house she looked up instinctively to see if Dal's lights were burned. Every shadow was dark, even Nyda's, but as Billy's anxious eyes scanned the facade of the house she saw again the figure of a man creeping down the fire escape that led to the balcony outside Nyda's window. She had no doubt that it was Eddie Manning, leaving Nyda. But this time Billy was so anxious not to be detected as Eddie Manning could have been. Throwing herself flat on the lawn, behind the trunk of a tree, she watched until the creeping figure had dropped to the ground, and had hurried off, almost head double, toward the alley at the rear of the house.

With quaking fingers she fitted her night key into the front door of the house, and was tiptoeing as unobtrusively as possible up the staircase when a grotesque figure appeared descending the stairs from the fourth floor. It was hard to recognize the impressive Sawyers in the night-shedding figure that held a pistol in a scowling right hand.

"It's just me, Sawyers," Billy gasped in a husky whisper. "Don't shoot! I've just been out for a breath of fresh air. I couldn't sleep."

"I thought I heard a noise down below," Sawyers said hoarsely, his eyes upon Billy's shoulder. "Something woke me up—don't know just what it was. But I guess it's all right."

Grumbling, his flashlight flashing about his legs, Sawyers turned and went back up the stairs. When Billy was alone she looked out at the night scene that lay before her. She knew that she was still suffering from a headache and would not go to school that day. T. Q. was accepting his coffee from Mrs. Meadows's when Sawyers bent over him with a request for a private word with him in the library. The millionaire frowned with annoyance, but something pretentious in the face and voice of his butler made him follow him without argument.

"What's the matter, dear?" Mrs. Meadows inquired of Billy. "You look quite pale, and your hands are shaking. Didn't you sleep well?"

"No, I'm afraid I didn't," Billy answered, scarcely knowing what she said, for her heart was pounding with a sickening apprehension of what Sawyers was saying to T. Q. Curtis. The old man! What business was it of his that she had eloped out of the house after midnight? But Billy knew that if T. Q. asked her for an explanation she could not give it, could not involve Dal Romaino.

Sawyers returned alone to the dining room.

"Mr. Curtis wishes to speak with you in the library, Miss Billy," he said to her, with no attempt to conceal the malice and contempt in his eyes.

She found her benefactor standing before the opened safe in the library. His tall, gaunt body sagged. And the eyes with which he looked at her were appalling and tragic rather than angry.

"The angry flush spread to her brow and throat, as she faced him defiantly.

"I suppose Sawyers has been tattling on me," she began indignantly.

"Billy, my safe was robbed last night," T. Q. interrupted her with sad sternness. "All of the jewelry I had given you girls, and the unset diamonds and four hundred dollars in cash were taken. No, don't interrupt please! Sawyers saw you leaving before the safe, he says you were trying the combination."

"That's a lie!" Billy gasped. "I had opened that section of the bookcase to look for a bead that had rolled under it, but I never touched the safe's handle, Mr. Curtis, you don't think—"

"I don't know what to think, Billy child," Sawyers called me in here a moment ago and asked me to open the safe, to see if its contents were intact. He refused to give his reasons for thinking I had been robbed, but when I found the safe empty of everything of value, he told me what he had seen last night. I find that I have been robbed as T. Q. told you. I would almost as soon believe that I had robbed my wife as to suspect you, child, but the facts are such that I must ask you for an explanation."

Billy's blue eyes were staring at him with incredulous horror. "You mean really think I robbed you, Mr. Curtis?"

"I'm not saying that I think so—yet. Sawyers saw you twirling the dial—all right, you say that is not true, but you admit that you were twirling before the safe—"

"I told you!" Billy gasped in a sob. "I told you I was looking for a bead—but I swear I didn't touch the dial."

"Sawyers says he was awakened by a noise. He came downstairs to investigate, heard the outside door clanging, saw you ascending the stairs in street clothes and coat. At half-past eleven you were in negligence in Nyda's room. Remember that I peeped in to tell you girls good night. Where were you, Billy?"

She opened her mouth to pour out the truth in passionate rebuttal, but before she had uttered a word she remembered her promise to Dal. She bent her head upon her hands and burst into tears.

"Tell me what you did with the safe, Billy," old T. Q. begged her, his hand going out to stroke the bright chestnut hair. "You know it was not for yourself. Was—was it for my son?"

"Clay!" Billy raised her head and stared at him unbelievably. "No wonder Clay left you, if you have that sort of an opinion of him! I didn't touch the safe, I didn't have anything whatever to do with the robbery. I did go out of the house after twelve after I had been days to get a book for Nyda. She will tell you that she sent me to get it for her. I went up to my room and decided that I couldn't sleep—that a walk about the grounds would do me good."

"It was very cold last night, my dear. There is a heavy frost this morning," T. Q. reminded her sadly. "Of course I am going to question everyone else who was in the house last night, but before I do so, I beg you to confess to me if you did this thing, Billy. If it is fear of prosecution, I can tell you now that I shall not put the matter into the hands of the police, whether you confess or not. He paused and studied her pale, wide-eyed face with penetrating, tragic eyes. "Have you anything to tell me now, Billy?"

"I have nothing to confess, Mr. Curtis. I don't blame you for suspecting me—I can see that anyone would—but I did not steal the things and I did not help anyone else to steal them."

"I want to believe you, Billy, but the safe was opened by someone who had the combination. You girls have seen me open it scores of times. Any acute observer could pick up a combination if that way an astring it was what the police call an "inside job" child. Still I call in Mrs. Meadows and Nyda and question them, before I question the servants."

"I have told you all I have to tell," Billy answered proudly. "Of course you will use your own judgment as to questioning the others."

When he turned wearily to the door, something clicked in Billy's brain. Suddenly the pieces of the puzzle had slipped into place. Eddie Manning—his midnight visit to Nyda's room—the shadow creeping down the wall last night—the secret trouble that had been tormenting the girl—Of course! What had she not understood from the first moment of this terrible conversation?

(To Be Continued)
Billy depends on Nyda to support her story about the book—and Nyda

George A. Fields, of Paducah, former division engineer of the highway department here, is visiting in Lubbock for several days.

COTTON GOODS QUIET NEW YORK, June 6. (AP)—Cotton goods in the gray were quiet today following the easing in cotton. Raw silk was stronger at Yokohama and advanced a little here.

COTTON OIL EASY NEW YORK, June 6. (AP)—Cottonseed oil was easy today under southern and commission house selling owing to the decline in land and cotton. Final prices were 21 points net lower, with nearness the relatively steady due to buying of July, supposedly for short account of refining interests.

WOOL IMPORTS SLOWER BOSTON, June 6. (AP)—The volume of imports of foreign wool continues to run considerably lower than last year, especially lines used for clothing purposes in competition with home grown wools.

CATTLE LOWER CHICAGO, June 6. (AP)—Cattle 25,000; fed steers steady to 25 lower; stockers and feeders slow at 1500-225; best steers 1550; bulk 1500-1225; cow yearlings 1275; cows steady to 1000-1200; vealers strong at 1000-1200.

EL PASO PREPARES FOR ARRIVAL OF AIRPLANE

EL PASO, June 6. (AP)—El Paso officials tonight were awaiting the arrival of the "Prize of San Diego" sister ship to Captain Charles Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis, which was due to land here at 5:30 p. m. from Tucson, Arizona, on its way to Washington for the Lindbergh welcoming. Shortly before 5 p. m. El Paso officials had had no word of the Spirit of San Diego and preparations were being made to light flare at the field in case an after-dark landing was attempted.

FARMERS ADVISED PLANT PURE SEED

IT TAKES TIME BUT PAYS PREMIUMS, BROKERAGE MAN STATES

(By Associated Press)

HOUSTON, Texas, June 6.—One of the world's most important cotton concerns in Houston has gathered information relative to certified cotton which it advises farmers to plant because it contains a pecuniary.

It shows how superior cotton may be grown by the farmer himself. It he needs not the process requires a number of years and sets out experiences of individuals who have found that it is a community investment, rather than an individual undertaking, to secure best results.

At McKinney, Texas, it appears, farmers and merchants several years ago began to hear reports that cotton in a neighborhood city was bringing as premiums. An investigation disclosed that better seed had been planted. A few scattered farmers took it up under the direction of Roy F. Saunders, county agent. In 1923 he called a meeting of cotton farmers, cotton buyers, merchants, bankers, ginners and others connected with the industry. He demonstrated by comparison in the field the superiority of cotton grown from certified seed over that of mixed 4-1-1 seed. Each year the standardization meetings were held, principally at a cotton mill where the waste in cotton grown from ordinary gin-run seed, due to lack of fibre uniformity, was practically demonstrated. Correspondingly each year a larger percentage of farmers planted the same type or strain of certified seed.

Advantage in Seed

Gradual but steady progress was made during the five several years toward standardization but the path toward achievement was not without its disappointments. Individual farmers who had been considered to standardization soon found that even though certified seed came up earlier and to a better stand, produced greater yields, was more storm-proof and possessed other desirable qualities not found in ordinary seed, they were not paid the premium that their better staple called for.

There were several reasons for it. To begin with, it appeared there was not enough good staple to warrant a special type, so it was placed with cotton of less desirable staple to raise the average. The grower of better cotton profit only so far as he helped to put up the average.

Separate Gin Needed

Then again, since all the cotton of the community, both good and bad, was ginned at the custom gin, each bale was plated with 20 to 40 pounds of cotton that had remained in the gin rolls from the preceding bale. If this preceding bale was of low value, the ginners were forced to give the succeeding bale a corresponding class, since a bale of mixed cotton is only as good as the worst cotton in the bale. Moreover, it was impossible to keep certified seed from becoming mixed if the cotton was ginned at the custom gin. Finally in 1926 a private gin was established at McKinney for the use of standardized planters only. There the mixing of both lint and seed worked no advantage, since the lint was all of the same certified type or strain. Each farmer took home as pure seed as he brought to the gin in his seed cotton. The cotton buyer created a special class into which he placed all cotton from standardized growers and paid a premium for it.

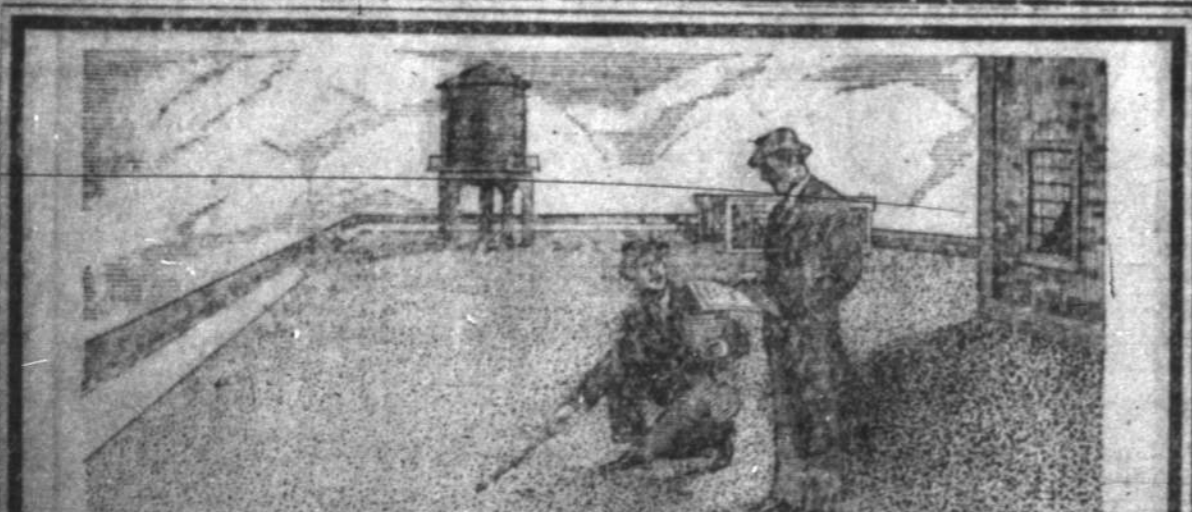

Gay Bradley and Earl Wilson, of Elston, were visitors in Lubbock yesterday.

Then again, since all the cotton of the community, both good and bad, was ginned at the custom gin, each bale was plated with 20 to 40 pounds of cotton that had remained in the gin rolls from the preceding bale. If this preceding bale was of low value, the ginners were forced to give the succeeding bale a corresponding class, since a bale of mixed cotton is only as good as the worst cotton in the bale. Moreover, it was impossible to keep certified seed from becoming mixed if the cotton was ginned at the custom gin. Finally in 1926 a private gin was established at McKinney for the use of standardized planters only. There the mixing of both lint and seed worked no advantage, since the lint was all of the same certified type or strain. Each farmer took home as pure seed as he brought to the gin in his seed cotton. The cotton buyer created a special class into which he placed all cotton from standardized growers and paid a premium for it.

day, suddenly sagged in the midst of benevolent postcard autographing and admitted that they were "rather tired."

Dines With Burgomaster

Mr. Levine recovered sufficiently to dine with the Ober-Burgomaster, but Chamberlin deemed it best to forego the dinner of the Whitman day holiday, with all shops closed, the noted pilot of the Columbia was forced to go without a shave. With the stable he had accumulated in his hours above earth and sea he on the banquet of enthusiastic friends, and quite successfully, he thought.

Except for a brief word now and then to questions, he passed all queries on to Levine. The latter was very much fatigued, but told an incident of their sighting Lindbergh's private cruiser Memphis off Cherbourg. "Let us swoop down and have a look at him," Levine suggested. But they did not swoop down. Chamberlin merely remarked, "I want to get on," both said that the trip had turned out much more interesting than they had expected with bleak Atlantic spaces below them. Their continual circling to avoid storms saved them much monotony.

Rested by Turns

"We were not sleepy particularly," Levine remarked, "we took turns at resting from New York to Hellis, two kilometers from where they descended."

Capit I Offers Praise

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP)—Immered as it is in the plans for a thunderous welcome here to Charles A. Lindbergh, official Washington was prompt today to praise the fact that Chamberlin in piloting his Bellanca plane from New York to the interior of Germany without a stop, Chamberlin's accomplishment lacked the spectacular as compared with the solitary hop across the Atlantic by Lindbergh.

Aviation experts were unanimous in declaring that it would give tremendous impetus to the development of trans-Atlantic commercial flying.

Feat Is Praised

It was noted that he kept his machine a distance of 4,300 miles before landing and this with a passenger. Officials connected with aviation matters pointed to this as a powerful argument for the efficiency and capability of the modern airplane.

President Coolidge was among the first to cable his congratulations to Chamberlin. Mr. Coolidge described the flight as a "wonderful feat" which set a "new nonstop record in history of the air."

Secretary Kellogg, Secretary Wilbur, Postmaster-General New, Secretary Davis and others were equally enthusiastic in pointing to the value the flight would be to aviation of the future.

Honors Discussed

It was not clear here today what honors could be bestowed upon Chamberlin by the government. Some officials believed it would be impossible to award him the distinguished flying cross which was given to Lindbergh owing to the fact that Chamberlin is not on the army or navy reserve lists, although he was once an army aviator. It was said, however, that President Coolidge might be able to fittingly express the feelings of the nation in this respect.

Officials were unwilling at this time to discuss the possibility that Chamberlin might be asked to visit Washington on his return, inasmuch as the Lindbergh reception is not yet over.

Low Powered Planes Used

PARIS, June 6 (AP)—The fact that the Columbia and the "Spirit of St. Louis" flew across the Atlantic with motors developing less than 250 horse power is causing much talk among French aviators and engineers. (The two planes have the same type of motor, developing 225 horsepower.)

Even Paul Painleve, minister of war, commented on the circumstances today, remarking that the French planes that have been seeking records all have at least 300 horsepower. He added, however, that the French planes have been built for army use while the trans-Atlantic fliers have used machines constructed for long flights.

Home-Town Praise

DENISON, Iowa, June 6 (AP)—Ten hours after Clarence Chamberlin and Charles Levine landed near Eisen, Germany, Chamberlin's home town staged its first celebration on the achievement of the aviator who was born, reared, and educated here.

The celebration opened with a band concert by high school musicians of Edinon, Harlan and Ida Grove, augmented by a Denison business man.

A parade followed the concert. In the procession was a baby buggy portraying a sign which read "Chink's first ride." Chamberlin was known here by the nick name "Chink." The second exhibit was a small bicycle labeled "Chink's second ride," the third, a larger bicycle, the fourth an antiquated automobile, the second ever to be operated here; the fifth a motorcycle, and the sixth a miniature airplane—all symbols of Chamberlin's rise to fame.

Wives To Cross

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP)—Mrs. Wilda Chamberlin, wife of the pilot of the Bellanca monoplane Columbia, was given a check for $10,000 today to carry to her husband in Germany. Mrs. Grace Levine, wife of the financial backer of the flight and passenger-refuel pilot, was given a gold watch to take to her husband.

After ceremonies in the Brooklyn Borough hall at which the presentations were made by the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce, of which Levine is a member, the fliers' wives left for their homes to prepare to sail at midnight to re-join their husbands.

Ten Day Journey

The journey that took Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine less than two days will take the wives ten days. They chose the first ship sailing after success of the flight was established, the Berlin of the North German Lloyd line, which will arrive in Bremen on June 17.

The Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce offered a prize of $15,000 this spring if the Bellanca monoplane was the first to Paris, when Charles Lindbergh got to Paris first, the offer was withdrawn, but Ralph Jones, president of the Chamber, then offered $5,000 if the Bellanca should be the second to make the trip. But when it was learned that Chamberlin and Levine had beaten Lindbergh's distance record the amount was again raised to $15,000.

Chamberlin Gets Prize

All the money goes to Chamberlin since Levine had stipulated before leaving that he was not to receive any part of the prize.

to the Virginia Capes and on to Washington, where she is to dock at noon Saturday.

Down the Potomac, Lindbergh will be greeted from the air by two of his "buddies" of the air mail service.

Shirley J. Short, holder of the Harmon trophy and Harry G. Smith, another of the crack fliers of the air mail.

They will fly with the huge conveyer of army and navy planes which will accompany the Memphis up the river.

Parade Decided On

Carrying forward his plans for the entertainment of the distinguished young American, the semi-official reception committee decided today that during his triumphant journey over historic Pennsylvania avenue, Colonel Lindbergh will have with him in the automobile only John Hays Hammond, chairman of the committee.

Mr. Hammond will accompany the president's stand at the Washington monument grounds and present him to President Coolidge. The committee chairman then will receive the aviator, the president and the hero of the flight. They will then hop atop the towering platform in the full view of perhaps 200,000 people.

Cabinet Represented

Besides the reception committee and the District of Columbia emergency governing body of Washington, Lindbergh, the semi-official reception committee, the cabinet committee of three, Postmaster-General New and Secretaries Dwight Davis and Wilbur.

President Coolidge is expected to send a White House automobile bearing the seal of the federal government to use for Colonel Lindbergh. A similar car also probably will be placed at the disposal of Mrs. Evangeline L. Lindbergh, mother of the flier, when she arrives in Washington early Saturday morning from her home in Detroit. She will go direct from the Union Station to the temporary White House on Dupont circle.

During his first day in Washington Colonel Lindbergh is booked for three addresses, one after the president since the distinguished flier crossed on him at the monument grounds and the others at receptions to be given him that night by the Minnesota society and the national press club.

LEGISLATURE

should refuse another conference and "leave the blame on the senate where it belongs."

Representative Morse held out vainly against this stand.

Senator Joe Moore had the floor at 2 o'clock tonight insisting on a better trade with the house.

Filibuster Possible

The house declared he might hold the floor "until the end of the session." Main points of his objection were the $100,000 annual tuition fund included for transferred rural students and the provision for 12 rural school inspectors.

All hope of general highway legislation at the special session ending Tuesday night was killed late today when the Wood senate bill prepared under direction of Governor Dan Moody was caught under operation of a session-end rule barring consideration of measures on their second reading.

Rules Enforced

But for the insistence of several house members on strict adherence to rules, the bill might have been passed. An attempt to extend suspension by viva voce vote of the 72-hour rule abrogated Saturday failed when Representative Thilmon and several others held Speaker R. L. Babbitt to the rule that a written resolution must be approved by a committee, and adopted by the house to abrogate the session-end rule.

Highway legislation was one of the main subjects of the special session. The Wood bill would have defined policies of the highway department and required the commission to give first attention to cardinal highways, 3,000 miles of which would have been designated under the measure.

Prison Bill Decried

The senate today killed both the administration prison reform bill and the Satterwhite house measure on the same subject by laying them, without opposition, on table subject to call.

A two-thirds vote would be necessary to bring the measures up again. Action to table was taken after Bailey of Cuern pointed out that the bill was dead in any event, since should it be engrossed, four-thirds vote would be necessary to suspend the 24-hour rule and put it up for passage.

All through the afternoon, the heavy guns of opposition to the Moody measure, offered by Wood of Grainger as a substitute for the Satterwhite house bill, sounded in the senate.

What appeared to be at first an effort to pass the Satterwhite bill developed later into an actual filibuster to defeat the administration, various opponents admitted privately that their real purpose was to kill the Moody bill.

Filibuster Starts

Philosophy against proposed submission to the house ultimatum of today refusing to concur in the senate's request for a new free conference on the rural aid bill, now carrying $2,200,000 for the biennium, was started tonight in the senate by Moore of Greenville at about 11 p. m.

The former treasury secretary was en route to Greenville, Tenn.

Divorce Granted Movie Man's Wife

LOS ANGELES, Calif., June 6 (AP)—Miriam Walsh won a divorce from Raoul Walsh, film director, in superior court today when she told of a party for women friends in her home being broken up by an apparition staged by her director-husband in the room directly above them.

Walsh, who achieved film fame in the direction of "what price glory," did not contest the action. Mrs. Walsh charged him with declaring that "his home life interfered with his artistic impulses." The couple married in New Mexico in 1916 and separated last fall.

Waco Courts To Hear Bonner Case

BELTON, June 6 (AP)—The $100,000 damage suit of Frank H. Bonner of San Antonio filed in district court here a few days ago against the American Railway Express company, Monday was transferred to federal district court at Waco by District Judge L. H. Jones.

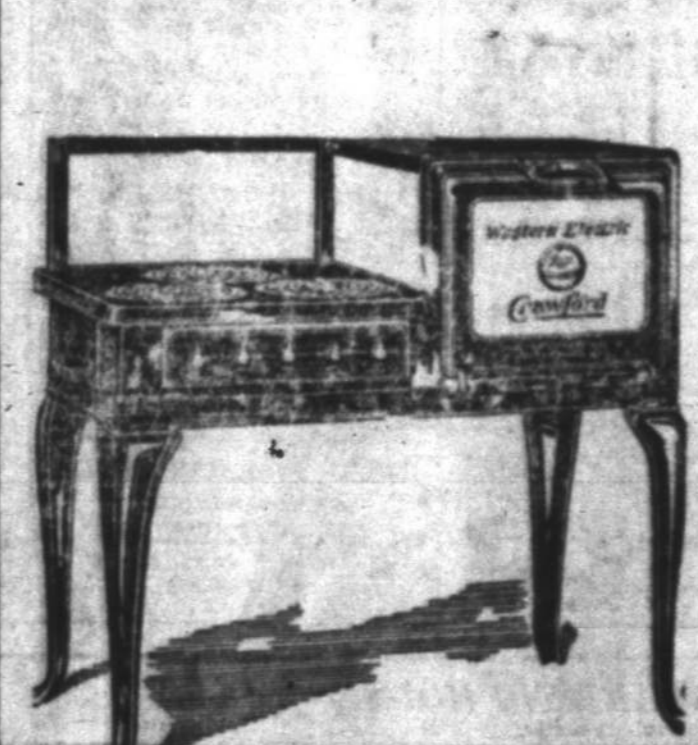

The suit grew out of the indictment and trial of Bonner on charge of murder in connection with the death of J. A. Barnes, killed by a bomb at Corpus Christi in 1925. The trial resulted in a disagreement on being transferred to San Antonio, the case was dismissed. In formation said to have been furnished by the Express company played a part in the indictment of Bonner.

where he is scheduled to deliver commencement address at Tascuin college tomorrow. Delays for several hours by the accident. McAdoo resumed his journey early tonight.
