Deputies shot

ROMA, Texas (AP) — Two deputies from the Starr County Sheriff's Department were wounded in a shooting Tuesday afternoon, officials said.

Chief Deputy Ray Guerra said the two deputies were shot during a traffic stop in the city of Roma, located on the Mexican border.

Guerra said one suspect was wounded and undergoing treatment and that two others were arrested in the case.

The incident was not drug-related, Guerra said. He added that Sheriff Gene Falcon would provide further information later Tuesday evening.

Roma is located about half way between the border cities of Brownsville and Laredo.

2 girls, 4 boys

MARACAIBO, Venezuela (AP) — A 20-year-old woman married to an unemployed oil worker gave birth Tuesday to sextuplets, and the hospital in this western city claimed they were the first ever in South America.

All six — two girls and four boys — were reported in satisfactory condition, though doctors placed them in intensive care because of their low birth weights. The mother had been pregnant for only 29 weeks.

A doctor said there are already triplets on both sides of the family.

Earthquake rattles Managua

■ No casualties are reported as a temblor measuring about 6.5 on the Richter scale shakes the Nicaraguan capital and the nearby coastal city of Montelimar.

Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — An earthquake measuring 6.5 on the Richter scale rocked Nicaragua and the neighboring region on Tuesday, causing panic in Managua and along its Pacific coast. Authorities said they had no reports of casualties.

The quake began at 5:57 p.m. (6:57 p.m. EDT) and was felt in the beach resort of Montelimar, where five Central American presidents are holding a two-day meeting to negotiate peace in the region.

One of the seven swimming pools and the still-unfinished complex center in Montelimar sustained serious cracks from the intensity of the quake. The other pools swayed from the 30-second tremor, and water spilled over the sides in small waves.

The U.S. Geological Survey Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said a preliminary reading showed the earthquake occurred off the coast of Costa Rica with a magnitude of 6.5.

Several aftershocks followed about 15 minutes later.

In Managua, people fled into the streets in fear, and the National Legislature suspended its session. The downtown part of the capital was razed and 10,000 were killed by an earthquake in 1972.

There were no immediate reports of damage or casualties in Costa Rica.

In Montelimar, outgoing President Daniel Ortega and President-elect Violeta Barrios de Chamorro were walking down the stairs together from a meeting with the presidents of Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador and Costa Rica when the stairway started swaying.

The two Nicaraguan leaders waited until the earth stopped rocking, then continued without incident to a hall on the ground floor where they planned a news conference.

The devastating quake last October in San Francisco Bay area measured 7.1.

Surgery conference 'uplifting'

CHICAGO (AP) — Tired of seeing the same frowning, hag-like face staring in the mirror every morning? Plastic surgeons are gathering to discuss the latest in lifting sagging lips, plumping up puny ones and fixing a "witch's chin."

Thanks to lift-and-tell celebrities such as Cher, Phyllis Diller and Joan Rivers, cosmetic surgery is a booming business, said Dr. James Baker, who teaches at the University of Central Florida at Orlando.

"The demand is growing all the time," Baker said Tuesday at the 23rd annual meeting of the the American Society for Aesthetic Plastic Surgery.

Liposuction, the fat-sucking procedure imported from France, is the most popular technique, with 100,000 operations done each year. Breast enlargement is a close second, with about 85,000 performed in 1989, Baker said.

Softer, more life-like breast implants and details on special techniques for giving mammograms to women with implants also are on the agenda at this week's meeting.

Despite the costs, which range from hundreds to thousands of dollars and usually aren't covered by health insurance, people who can afford it will pay to look good, he said.

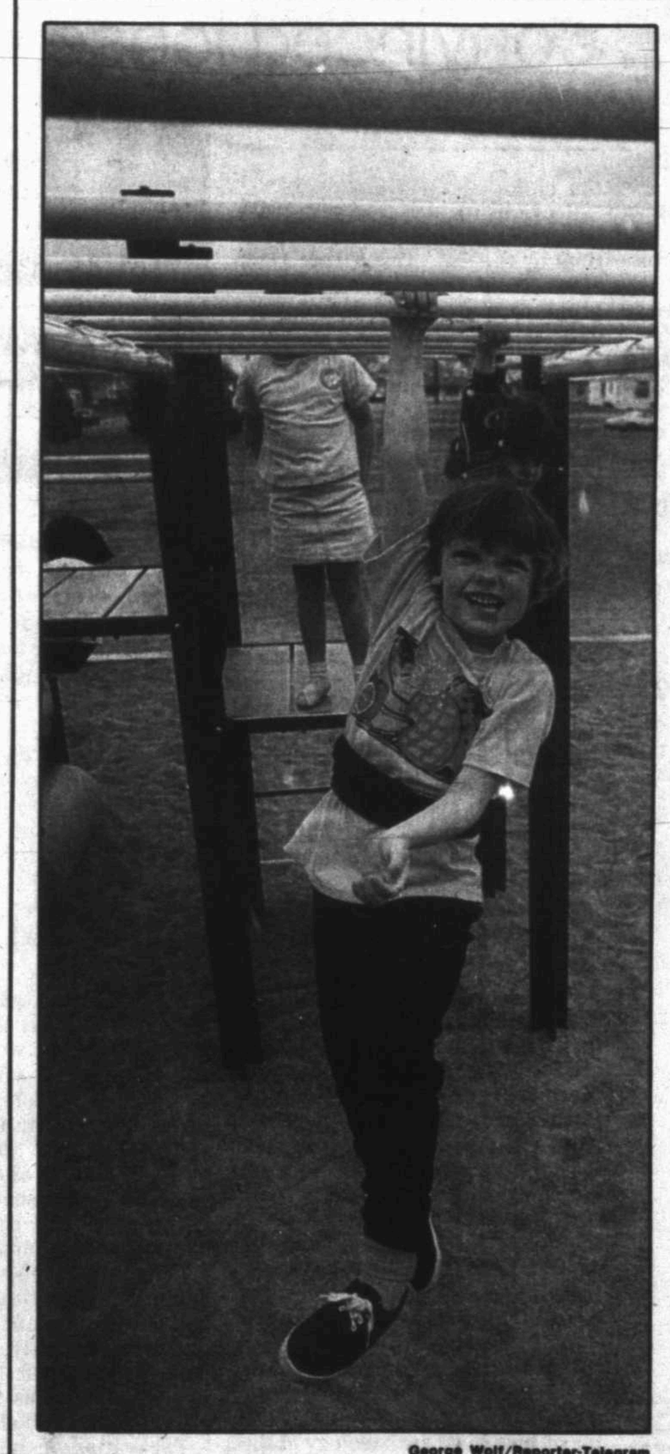

"Cosmetic or appearance things can significantly affect the way people feel about themselves, so even though some of these things may seem trivial to outside people, to somebody who has that, it can make a big difference," said Dr. Joel Feldman, a Harvard Medical School plastic surgeon who has pioneered a way to fix the "witch's chin."

The term refers to a protrusion of skin at the chin's tip that becomes pronounced when a person smiles. It is more common in older people, but Feldman said he's treated younger people and even teen-agers.

"I had one patient who said when she was a young girl and baby-sitting, one of the kids said to her, 'You look like a witch,' " he recalled.

Feldman's technique involves removing the soft protruding tissue, using an incision that is hidden by the shadow of

California firm relocating its factory here

■ Fuel Harvesters Equipment Inc. will refurbish a Midland Industrial Park warehouse as its new manufacturing facility, the company's president tells civic leaders.

By John Paul Pitts

Business & Oil Editor

A California recycling equipment manufacturer announced it will relocate to Midland with a payroll expected to grow to 150-200 within four years.

Powell Clinton, president of Fuel Harvesters Equipment Inc. of Grass Valley, Calif., told a gathering of civic leaders and media representatives that his company would purchase a 55,000 square-foot warehouse and office facility in Midland Industrial Park and begin operations within a month. The site is the former French Tool Co. plant at 2501 Commerce Drive.

Clinton said the manufacturing concern would employ 25 initially and eventually 150 to 200 over the next four years. "Our company which is tracking the fast-growing recycling industry, has doubled every year for the past seven years and we expect that growth to continue."

He said company sales in 1989 were $8 million.

School land leases prompting optimism

Staff Report

AUSTIN — More acres of Texas School Lands were leased at Tuesday's auction than at any sale since 1985, causing some to predict a rebound in the oil industry.

"This is a strong signal that interest is increasing in oil and gas exploration in Texas," said Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

Texas School Land Board Member William F. Warnick of Lubbock said he saw the successful lease results as an indication that the oil and gas industry in Texas was on the rebound.

More than 70,000 acres of state lands were leased during the one day of bidding for a total price of $12.5 million.

Almost 63,000 acres of the 70,000 acres were in Texas bays and the Gulf of Mexico, and Mauro said that was a result of

SW Bell plans talks on dialing option

■ Despite delays, extending dialing service between Midland and Odessa still a possibility.

By Chris Van Wagenen

Staff Writer

Southwestern Bell Telephone plans to meet with Midland and Odessa leaders no later than May on a plan to offer an optional extended service dialing between the two cities.

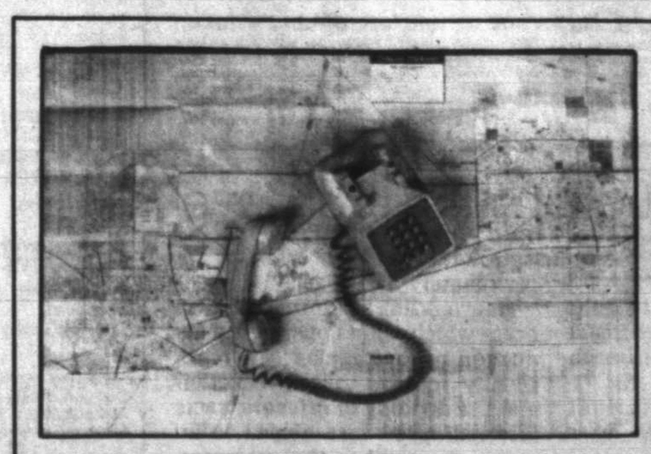

The long awaited meeting was suspended in December when SW Bell decided to devote all its efforts to a rate case now before the Public Utilities Commission in Austin.

SW Bell is trying to sell its Texas First plan as a means of settling a multi-million dollar overcharge dispute with the PUC.

The company has offered to expand local dialing to certain metropolitan areas as well as update rural services. The local dialing option between Midland and Odessa is not part of that case.

However, Darlene Gifford, SW Bell's area manager for public relations, believes that case will be settled no later than May, bringing the local issue back to the table.

Partly cloudy conditions likely

Staff Report

National Weather Service forecasters at the Midland International Airport predict partly cloudy skies today with a 20 percent chnce of afternoon thundershowers. The high should be near 80, with winds gusting out of the southwest at 10 to 20 mph.

The low tonight should be between 50 and 55 degrees, and Thursday will be variably cloudy with a 30 percent chance of thundershowers and a high in the mid- to upper-70s.

Tuesday's high was 71, 23 degrees off the record of 94 set in 1946. The record low for today is 28 degrees, set in 1945.

STATE

The clear skies prevailed over East Texas on Tuesday, while clouds hovered over the Rio Grande Valley and South and West Texas.

High pressure remained over the state Tuesday afternoon while a low pressure trough cut across the northwest Panhandle and the far West Texas, the National Weather Service reported.

A few showers were scattered across the South Plains and around the Midland area.

Afternoon temperatures warmed into the 60s and 70s throughout the state with Brownsville the warmest at 3 p.m. with 79 degrees. The coolest reading was 63 degrees at Sherman.

Northeast to east breezes swept most of the eastern half of the state, turning southeast and southwest across the west. Speeds continued to be mostly in the 5 to 15 mph range.

Increasing cloudiness occurred through the night, with isolated thunderstorms in the South Plains.

Wednesday's forecast calls for fair skies in the Panhandle, partly cloudy in the far West Texas and elsewhere. Scattered thunderstorms were predicted later in the day in the Panhandle, South Plains and North Texas.

NATION

Rain and snow were scattered over the eastern half of the nation Tuesday and cold weather headed into the deep South.

At midday, snow fell over eastern Michigan, Indiana, northeastern Kentucky, Ohio, West Virginia and western Pennsylvania.

Rain extended from Vermont and southern New England across eastern New York state, New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania.

The heaviest rainfall during the six hours up to 2 p.m. EDT was 1.10 inches at Islip, N.Y.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms extended across southern Florida. Showers also were scattered from southeastern New Mexico into southwestern Texas.

During the night, scattered frost was forecast in the upstate and midlands of South Carolina and by daybreak Wednesday frost was possible over much of Georgia and into Alabama.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 31 at Mansfield, Ohio, to 86 at Homestead, Fla.

Tuesday's low for the Lower 48 states was 11 above zero at Duluth, Minn.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

DIALING: Expansion talks should be held by May

(From 1A)

Ms. Gifford said the local phone company plans to offer the cities extended dialing as an "option only" package, that would be offered to businesses as well as residents for one flat fee over and above the current local rate.

"The feasibility study has been completed ... we're optimistic that we'll have a proposal for them once we finish with this" rate case, she said.

If accepted by both city councils and both counties' commissioners, SW Bell will then be authorized to conduct a poll among its customer base in Midland and Odessa to determine interest in the program.

Bill Fowler, president of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, who also heads the committee studying the local call issue, is one of those interested in securing such an option.

"A toll exchange is a lot like a toll bridge. It's an economic barrier that tends to keep these two cities apart," said Fowler, who is anxious to see what SW Bell has to offer.

"Everyone I've talked to thinks it's a good idea," said Folwer. "The most important thing is that this service is offered on a volunteer basis...we don't want people being told they have to take it."

And they won't be, according to Gifford. "I think people we'll be pleased with our proposal when they see it."

In a joint council meeting held last year, both cities voted to pursue looking into an extended area service agreement, permitting SW Bell to conduct a rate analysis.

Midland City Manager Fred Poe said if the price is right, he can't see any reason why both cities wouldn't support such an option, given the fact the two communities do so much business together.

Poe said he suspects there are a number of businesses that would be interested in the option, including the city. "We make calls every day to Odessa," he said. "I have no idea just what they've come up with, but you know they're not interested in losing money on that type of service."

Russell Autry, chief executive officer of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, said he doesn't expect either city to let the issue die.

"I'm convinced that in order for both communities to succeed, the key is increasing our ability to communicate ... for a lot of groups, that's not something we can do with a long distance phone call."

Tahoka area project will close last gap in area's cellular service

Staff Report

TAHOKA — The final gap in cellular telephone service between Midland and Lubbock is nearing an end with announcement of Poka Lambro Telecommunications selection to build a rural cellular telephone system near its headquarters at Tahoka.

The company was notified of the project by the Federal Communications Commission in Washington, D.C.

The area to be served by Poka Lambro includes Lamesa, Tahoka, Post, Seminole and Andrews and the surrounding rural areas.

Tentative operational dates for Lamesa, Post, Seminole and Andrews are late in the third quarter and early in 1991 for Tahoka.

"Basically, you will be able to call and be called anywhere between Lubbock and Midland-Odessa," according to Mickey Sims, Poka Lambro's general manager.

"This technology is state of the art and will be of great benefit to the residents of the South Plains," Sims said. "Our system will be immediately compatible with Southwestern Bell Mobile System's Amarillo, Lubbock, Abilene, and Midland-Odessa cellular systems," he added.

Pricing plans for the new service have not been finalized, but according to Sims, they will be "market driven."

products, such as crates and pallets, that would normally be buried in landfills. Grinder models ranging in cost from $75,000 to $250,000, and grind wood into chips for private and public landfill operators. The recycled wood is used a mulch for landscaping.

"We can reduce the amount of solid waste going into a landfill by 20 percent with our machinery," said Clinton. "It is so simple to use, any municipal landfill can be in business in the recycling business in one day."

He noted landfills are rapidly being closed, and that half of existing operations will likely be closed within five years, putting a strain on the remaining landfills.

"When you can reduce the waste stream by 20 percent, your product is in demand," he said. He added that demand for the machinery is very high and the company usually runs with a long lead time.

He said his decision to move to Midland was purely business. "It was not for the scenery or climate, but because of the reasonably priced facility, reasonably priced homes, a good labor pool and a central location for a national operation. We looked at a lot of places, but Midland was our final choice."

Joanne Langston, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said the payroll for the company would be around $500,000 and would be turned over approximately seven times in the local economy.

She also estimated that each manufacturing job at the plant would create an additional 2.5 support and service jobs in the community.

CONFERENCE: Plastic surgeons convinced loose lips need lifts

the chin.

Previous techniques "have tried to correct this problem by repositioning the soft tissue," he said. "I've found that repositioning is prone to undercorrection, or sagging as time goes on."

Feldman said his procedure is a simpler, more lasting solution. It costs about $2,500.

For folks with drooping mouths, perpetual frowns also associated with aging, there's the "lip lift."

As people get older, the upper lip gets longer and the corners of the lip turn down, "into almost a comma shape," said Dr. Bernard Cohen, a University of Pittsburgh plastic surgery professor.

"It always looks sad, no matter what they feel inside," Cohen said.

While more common techniques such as chemical peels have been used to fix fine frown lines beside the mouth, none addressed actually lifting the lips until a few years ago, Cohen said.

It involves excising a small diamond-shaped patch of skin at the corners of the mouth. The technique draws up the lips into a more neutral position.

AP Laserphotos

"Lip lifts," demonstrated in these before, top, and after photos, are among the topics of discussion at the 23rd Annual Meeting of the American Socieyt for Aesthetic Plastic Surgery.

"You're literally elevating the corners of the mouth," said Cohen, who estimates he and his former partner have lifted 275 lips in recent years.

The procedure is often done in conjunction with total face lifts, but alone it costs up to $600, he said.

Another lip enhancer is billed as a possible permanent solution to the problem of thin lips, and an alternative to collagen injections made famous by actress Barbara Hershey in the movie "Beaches."

It involves cutting flaps of lip skin from the inside of the mouth and lifting them forward to the lip line. The procedure creates fullness by advancing some of the lining and muscle inside the lip, according to Dr. M. Reza Samiian, chief of plastic surgery at Baptist Medical Center in Jacksonville, Fla.

"The results can be considered permanent because the materials used to build up the lip are part of its basic structure," said Samiian, who is to report on the technique Friday.

Storm unearthed Civil War artifacts

FOLLY BEACH, S.C. (AP) — When Hurricane Hugo battered this island community it uncovered well-preserved Civil War artifacts including smoking pipes, leather boots and wooden buttons from a Union camp, officials said.

The site, which was kept a secret since the Sept. 21 storm in an effort to keep vandals away, was shown to reporters Monday as part of Duke University geologist Orrin Pilkey's field trip to assess damage from the hurricane.

"The exceptional thing about the site is the preservation seems to be superb. We rarely ever get wood," said Martha Zierden, curator of historical archaeology at the Charleston Museum.

Other artifacts unearthed by the storm included a piece of a wooden scrub brush, bullets, bottles, ink wells, wooden buttons and barrels and salted pork.

"These provide insight into day-to-day living," said Gered Lennon, a geologist for South Carolina Coastal Council and Folly Beach resident, who discovered the site.

The items had been buried under 2 feet of sand.

Lennon said he was concerned about vandals disturbing the site, and noted that police are checking the area regularly.

The area, about 100 yards long, likely was used as to store Union munitions and food, Lennon said.

Excavation of the site is on hold while federal officials review a permit application, Ms. Zierden said.

Thousands of Union soldiers used Folly Beach as a winter encampment during the bombardment of Fort Sumter at the start of the Civil War and the siege of Charleston.

Last year, relic hunters discovered the vestiges of a long-lost regimental hospital cemetery during excavation for a road.

Archaeologists from the University of South Carolina eventually uncovered 19 human skeletons. They concluded the men were black, apparently died of diseases rampant at the time and were members of the 54th and 55th Massachusetts regiments and the 1st North Carolina Colored Infantry Regiment.

The spring sale was up significantly from last October when only $7.6 million in bonus money was netted in lease sales on approximately 65,000 acres.

Mauro said an incentive program which allows operators a reduction in the regular 25 percent royalty fee for early production and the dividing of offshore tracts into half-tracts also helped to increase the number of acres leases.

Meeting with Lithuanian delegation called sign of hope in confrontation

MOSCOW (AP) — A delegation from the rebellious Baltic republic of Lithuania met Tuesday with a major adviser to President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, and a Lithuanian legislator later called it a sign of hope in the confrontation.

"We are very, very encouraged," legislator Egidius Bickauskas, Lithuania's representative in Moscow, told The Associated Press. "If there are people who at least want to listen to us, it's very good."

He earlier told reporters a three-member delegation, including Deputy Premier Romualdas Ozolos of Lithuania, was meeting with Alexander N. Yakovlev, a Politburo member recently appointed to Gorbachev's new Presidential Council.

Also Tuesday:

—The Supreme Soviet parliament approved a bill setting procedures for secession from the Soviet Union. The law, which goes into effect when it is published in the Soviet press, requires approval by a two-thirds vote in a referendum and a waiting period of up to five years. Lithuania, forcibly incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940, declared its independence on March 11. The Moscow government refused to recognize this and a crisis ensued.

—The Kremlin restricted traffic at Lithuania's border with Poland, the republic's only border that does not adjoin Soviet territory. Soviet officials told Polish border officials the crossing from Ogrodniki, Poland, to Lazdijai, Lithuania, was "temporarily" closed, the Polish news agency PAP said.

—Lithuania's chief diplomat in Washington, Stasys Lozaraitis Jr., told reporters there he believes the Soviet army may have taken the lead role from Gorbachev in dealing with the crisis. He said the Soviet military show of force in Lithuania made him more pessimistic than before about his homeland's fate.

—Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze arrived in Washington for talks with President Bush and Secretary of State James A. Baker III, pledging to hold "honest dialogue" with secessionist Lithuanians. Administration officials hope he brought a message from Gorbachev that will spell out Moscow's promise to deal peacefully with Lithuania's independence movement.

Yakovlev is seen as a key aide to Gorbachev and is considered the architect of his policy of glasnost, or greater openness.

Yakovlev led a parliamentary commission that last year reviewed the secret Soviet-Nazi pact under which the three Baltic republics — Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia — were absorbed into the Soviet Union. The commission's work led the Soviet Congress of People's Deputies in December to condemn the 1939 pact.

Tuesday marked the first high-level personal contact between Lithuania and Moscow since just after Lithuania declared itself independent last month.

The talks, which Bickauskas described as "consultations ... a conversation," lasted for more than three hours. He could provide no details.

"It is likely there would be no concrete decisions but the very fact that they heard us is very good," he said.

Gorbachev says he will not negotiate with Lithuania, but will hold discussions on any topic as long as the republic renounces the declaration of independence.

"Independent states are not created in such a way in an overnight takeover," presidential spokesman Arkady Maslennikov told reporters Tuesday.

Bickauskas said Lithuania had no means of implementing its proclaimed independence if Soviet soldiers continue to interfere in the republic.

"We have declared independence but we very well know that tanks are moving on our soil every day and night, and they take over one building after another," he said.

Rioting inmates still in control of four wings

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Die-hard mutineers held fast to a large part of Strangeways Prison on Tuesday for the third day and kept other inmates from surrendering, the government said. A wounded prisoner died in a hospital.

Thirteen guards were injured by flying bricks, poles and other missiles in an operation Tuesday to regain control of sections of the decaying Victorian structure, said Ivor Serle, chairman of the local branch of the Prison Officers' Association. He said six were hospitalized.

Serle said about 20 "hard core of the hard core" prisoners were stopping the other inmates from giving up.

Advancing guards carried only shields and truncheons, he added.

"That's all. This is England, not America," he snapped at an American reporter.

Prison negotiators suspended talks with the holdouts Tuesday night but were ready to resume at any time, said Charles Keseru, a spokesman for the Home Office, the Cabinet-level department with responsibility for prisons.

Manchester-born Derek White, 46, who had been in a segregation wing for his own protection awaiting trial on sex offenses, became the first fatality.

Spelling winner believes in study

The adage "practice makes perfect" came true for 14-year-old Rudy Ramirez Jr. of Midland on Saturday. The Alamo Junior High School eighth grader spelled 51 words correctly to walk away with the regional spelling bee sponsored by the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

In doing so, he won a $50 cash prize, a first-place trophy, a 32-volume set of the New Encyclopaedia Britannica, and a trip May 27-June 2 to the nation's capital.

No beginner at spelling competitions, Rudy won the spelling bee two years ago and won third place last year.

He is convinced that practice is the key to success in spelling difficult words such as nasturtium and coquettish, and admitted that he studied for hours in preparation for the Saturday spelling bee.

"I practiced every day, all the time, for three months," said Rudy. "Practice gets you familiar with the words — once you familiarize yourself with a word, you'll never forget it."

The student obviously has learned the one great truth of education: That there are no shortcuts to success in learning; knowledge can only be gained through diligent study.

The great 17th century philosopher John Locke noted that "the business of education is not to make the young perfect in any one of the sciences, but so to open and dispose their minds as may best make them capable of any, when they shall apply themselves to it."

The point, simply, is that any kind of educational success depends on the student's willingness or desire to learn. Rudy Ramirez obviously wanted to learn to spell words correctly, studied diligently toward that end, and achieved success.

When the national spelling competition rolls around in May, Rudy will travel to Washington, D.C., to compete against other champion spellers. And with the interest he has shown, Rudy undoubtedly will represent this region admirably.

In winning the regional bee, Rudy has shown other students the way to educational success — diligent study.

Remember AT&T!

Let's look at another view of the "Another View" published in the Reporter-Telegram on March 20th and headlined "U.S.P.S. inefficient."

First let's look at paying $11 more in postage per year for the average household. How many times has the price at the grocery store, clothing store, cable rates, phone rates, water bill, gas bill and other services gone up? And there is not a public outcry like the one going on now against the post office. We pay more than $11 per year in increased costs in any one of the previous services.

Next, about the statement that postal workers are "earning an average of more than $20 per hour." Yes, we do, if you include overtime, retirement, insurance, sick leave, uniform allowance and vacation. Any company with similar benefits pays their employees the same or nearly the same as the post office.

How about the statement about postal workers being "the highest paid semi-skilled workers in the world"? Well, when an employee is hired, he makes $9 per hour. United Parcel Service, on the other hand, starts their employees $1.50 more than postal workers. Any good businessman knows you must pay people a good, fair wage in order to keep qualified people.

Then there's the statement that "the service is expected to suffer a loss of about $1.5 billion this fiscal year." Yes we are, but when you consider that the post office is expected to "break even" only, and when the government wants the post office to pay for its retirement system that the government has been paying up to this time, any company will suffer a loss.

Last is the statement that "naturally there is every incentive for management to condone large increases for union workers and for themselves." Then tell me why it takes four to six months of contract battling to settle a 1-4 percent raise in pay, if any raise at all.

If you liked the break up of AT&T, you'll love the break up of the post office!

Why begrudge risk?

In response to the article published recently and headlined "Natural gas futures set to debut," can the opinions expressed by independent producers that (1) natural gas and crude oil futures contracts significantly increase long-term price volatility and (2) the contracts benefit mainly large companies and outside interests be backed up with factual studies?

And even if they can, how inportant are these issues compared to the FERC regulations of the last five years?

Will exploration programs really fail because of short-term futures market fluctuations?

Can speculators really change market fluctuations more than Saudi Arabia or events in Eastern Europe?

Are oil and gas futures really that different from grain futures which have been traded for over 50 years?

I find it ironic that the free market wildcatters of yesterday are now begrudging others the opportunity to take risks on a level playing field. Futures markets are essentially insurance companies for commodity producers. What is so wrong with that?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, April 4, the 94th day of 1990. There are 271 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 4, 1968, civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was shot to death in Memphis, Tenn., where he had gone to support a strike by sanitation workers. He was 39.

On this date:

In 1818, Congress decided the flag of the United States should consist of 13 red and white stripes and 20 stars, with a new star added for every new state of the Union.

In 1983, the space shuttle Challenger roared into orbit on its maiden voyage.

Constituents tired of getting junk mail

WASHINGTON — Our readers have had it with junk mail. They could complain to Congress if it weren't for one small problem. The junk mail they're sick of comes from Congress.

Anderson

This will be a record year for mass mailings, the self-congratulatory letters members of Congress send to their constituents in the guise of news from Washington. The mail goes out under the congressional franking privilege, which is a quaint, colonial way of saying you buy the stamps.

About $124 million was spent on taxpayer-financed mass mailings by Congress last year, but the bill will be higher this year because members of Congress always seem to have more to say during an election year. The newsletters become thinly disguised campaign material.

We recently reported on the biggest mailers on Capitol Hill and asked our readers to send us their junk mail. There is no shortage of it out there.

One reader said he wrote his congressman, Rep. Tommy Robinson, R-Ark., and asked him to stop sending franked newsletters. But he still got them. The reader sent us one of the offending pieces of mail in which Robinson noted his high voting attendance record, his responses to 11,000 constituent inquiries and his efforts to help more than 5,000 people cut through government red tape. That wasn't much consolation to one lowly constituent who simply wanted to be cut off the mailing list.

Rep. Ronnie Flippo, D-Ala., who is running for governor, is getting a boost for his gubernatorial campaign with the free congressional mailing privilege. He sent out a newsletter touting statewide concerns beyond those of his district. He boasted of a 90 percent voting attendance record and included a picture of himself with George and Barbara Bush at a White House soiree.

A Minnesota reader wrote us to complain about mail from Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn. Boschwitz was among the biggest spenders on mass mailings last year, spending $1.7 million. He draws a happy face next to the signature on his letters.

"My husband has been dead for five years and is still receiving regularly Rudy's correspondence," the Minnesotan said. "I can't tell you if he draws a happy face on the brochures, as I don't bother to open them. They are filed in the wastebasket."

A Pennsylvania writer gets more mail than she needs from Rep. Joseph McDade, R-Pa. "The offensive thing about getting this piece of junk mail was not the newsletter itself, but the fact that we received four — one for myself, my husband, my 8-year-old son, and how they remembered the dog, I'll never know."

RACE TO EAST GERMANY — While many economists have assumed that West Germany's aggressive business people will make a captive out of East Germany's industry, Japan is not yet ready to be counted out of the race.

Japanese company representatives are already working busily in newly free East Germany tying down markets for everything from tiny electronic consumer goods to heavy industrial equipment.

One prominent West German industrial consultant told us that the Japanese are already lining up deals in the heavy electrical field that will cut into projected West German sales.

The Japanese appeal is first, lower prices, then service without any of the heavy-handedness that West German companies have shown to their disorganized counterparts in the East.

At a meeting last month in Mannheim, West Germany, prominent labor leader Frank Steinkueler said bluntly of his country's industrialists, "They want to conquer markets ... they want to conquer East Germany." That's hardly the rhetoric to win friends and business partners.

Where does the United States fit into the competitive picture? A West German representative of a major American company told us he is putting up a fight to get contracts in East Germany, but added glumly that he is not hopeful of beating out the West Germans or the Japanese.

Tide of history running against dictators

WASHINGTON — From the Baltics to Baghdad, the umbrellas of appeasement are unfurling.

"Lasting change can come to the Soviet Union," said a powerful Voice of America commentary on Feb. 15, "when citizens no longer need to fear massive surveillance — and worse — from the KGB. Secret police are also entrenched in other countries, such as China, North Korea, Iran, Iraq, Syria, Libya, Cuba and Albania.

Safire

"The rulers of these countries hold power by force and fear," was the accurate message beamed by VOA., "not by the consent of the governed.

But as East Europeans demonstrated so dramatically in 1989, the tide of history is against such rulers. The 1990s should belong not to the dictators and secret police, but to the people."

These words were labeled a "call to revolution" by Saddam Hussein, dictator of Iraq. He conveyed his displeasure through four cables from our ambassador in Baghdad to John Kelly, the diplomat who had run the Poindexter "back-channel" arms bribery of Iran, now elevated by President Bush to run the State Department's Near Eastern bureau.

Kelly joined the king of Saudi Arabia in supporting Saddam's protest and denounced the VOA's truthful words at a morning meeting on Feb. 17 chaired by Secretary of State James Baker.

Baker told the USIA representative at the meeting to bring the VOA editorialists to heel.

The hangman of Baghdad had reason to be edgy. His nuclear missile program was set back by a huge explosion last Aug. 17 that sources tell me may have killed hundreds of technicians at Al Hillah, south of Baghdad.

He also may have suspected that his efforts to smuggle nuclear detonators out of the U.S. were imperiled by U.S. Customs agents in California.

The State Department, which could not have been ignorant of Iraq's attempt to steal our nuclear secrets, has long sought to appease Saddam.

Accordingly, the dictator was assured that no more such broadcasts would trouble him, and USIA was instructed to clear all editorials with State Department censors.

The close supervision was extended to another area: the Baltics. "We were told by USIA that State wanted no editorials at all on Lithuania," a Voice employee tells me.

Bush and Baker have evidently decided that "peace for our time" would best be achieved by hearing only promises of no use of force from Moscow and by ignoring the pleas for support of a small nation struggling for freedom.

The newly empowered superczar, Gorbachev, ordered the Red army to arrest "deserters." We must refuse to accept Moscow's description of these brave young Lithuanians as deserters; on the contrary, they are patriots resisting impressment by a foreign power, in the face of likely beatings, torture and worse.

Bush, supported by Jimmy Carter and unopposed by congressional leaders, refuses to assert even moral support of the Lithuanians.

Russian tanks and helicopters are roaring through a nation that wants only to be let alone; Moscow is ordering out foreign observers, to prevent pictures of any crackdown.

Young Lithuanians are being dragged away by the occupying army — with thousands more to be forceably conscripted into hated foreign uniforms in coming weeks — and the U.S. government is worried that any expression of support for the oppressed nation would "inflame the situation."

One man has assumed the power to rule by decree, and he has decreed that the Soviet empire will not give up its Stalinist conquests.

We cannot liberate the captive nations by force of arms, but we can take a stand on the principle of self-determination.

William Safire is a columnist for New York Times News Service.

'Hatchet man' gets blamed for layoffs

We keep reading about people getting fired in the United States — 6,000 auto workers, 4,000 computer analysts, 5,500 Drexel Burnham employees. What's wrong is that the newspapers never tell us how it's done. One of the top hatchet men in the country is Walter Widegrin, who has laid off more than half a million workers in his time.

Buchwald

Widegrin, known as "The Hangman," provides 24-hour service to companies that want to push their employees in front of the firing squad. He enjoys his work but pretends he doesn't.

"People blame me if they're laid off, but I can't help it when business is lousy. Look at the Perfect Wave Suntan Oil Company that just hired me to get rid of 10,000 workers."

"Did they have a problem selling suntan oil?"

"On the contrary," Widegrin said. "Business was good — so good that they decided to purchase a meatpacking plant, 1,000 VCR stores, a soccer team, a chain of combined carryout banks and pizza parlors, and a factory to make air bags for government bureaucrats. To finance their investments, they borrowed money from insurance companies, credit unions and the Japanese Sushi Employees' Pension Plan."

"That takes guts."

"Not if you issue a lot of junk bonds. The problem was that the executives who knew everything about suntan oil didn't know a damn thing about meat, soccer, banks, pizza or air bags. They were very determined, however, and they bought a large airplane to fly from one company to the other so that they could find out why they were losing so much money."

"So far it doesn't sound as if they did anything wrong."

"What they did wrong was that they ran out of cash to pay off their debts. When this happened, the word went out on the street that Perfect Wave was overextended. Everybody was told not to advance the company any more credit. Without supplies it wasn't easy to make suntan oil so, like all good executives, they made a tough business decision to lop off 10,000 heads."

"How can that help?"

"It impresses Wall Street that Perfect Wave means business."

"Why?"

"Because when you're in debt, the best way to show your creditors that you intend to save the situation is to fire all the people that work for you. Once we pink-slip the workers, the banks and insurance companies will be on their knees begging to give us money."

"When you lop off heads, do the executives feel the blade as well?"

"Hopefully not, and we always make sure that when we fire a top manager, he has a golden parachute. That way he doesn't get hurt when he bails out."

"I remember that they took care of all the executives at Drexel Burnham before the roof caved in."

"Exactly. I was the hangman on that case, and the big guys really came out smelling like a rose."

"When you start putting the noose around the necks of the rest of the help, do you do it alphabetically, or by age, or by length of service?"

"We don't have time for that. We throw a bottle of ink over the computer printout, and whoever gets blotted is told not to show up the next day."

"What happens to the plane?"

"The top boys keep it for the new company they're putting together with their manufacturing expertise."

Art Buchwald is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Israel satellite put into orbit

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel sent its second experimental satellite into orbit Tuesday and showed off its advanced rocket technology at a time of rising Middle East tensions.

Israel denied the Ofek-2 satellite was part of a program to spy on its Arab neighbors, but Israeli leaders boasted that the launch showed the country's scientific and military superiority over Arab countries.

Military analysts have long noted that Israel's space program could give it immediate intelligence on Arab military moves and the rocket technology involved also could carry more lethal payloads.

Witnesses said the rocket that hefted the 352-pound satellite into space lifted off at 3:02 p.m. (8:02 a.m. EDT), rising slowly above a ball of orange flame and leaving a trail of white smoke.

The Ofek-2 — "Ofek" is Hebrew for "horizon" — was launched from an undisclosed site in the center of the country and entered orbit 90 minutes later.

Mladenov voted in office

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Parliament on Tuesday adopted legislation for free elections and unanimously voted Petar Mladenov, who initiated democratic reforms in Bulgaria, to a newly created presidency.

The ruling Communists also renamed their disgraced party the Bulgarian Socialist Party in an apparent effort to distance themselves from their hard-line past and decades of unpopular rule in Bulgaria.

The legislation for multiparty elections scheduled this June sets the terms for the first free balloting in Bulgaria since World War II.

The legislation was agreed to last week following three months of tough talks between the Communists and the opposition, and was ratified by Parliament along with constitutional amendments abolishing all references to "Communist" and "Socialist."

Both the Communists and the opposition agreed last Friday to Mladenov's election to the new

Eight policemen killed

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Drug traffickers killed eight policemen and wounded four in a two days of attacks in Colombia's cocaine capital of Medellin, authorities said Tuesday. Seven attackers also were reported killed.

Gunmen kidnapped a federal senator, and a leading Bogota newspaper left its editorial column blank after threats from the traffickers.

For its part, the government of President Virgilio Barco pressed forward in its U.S.-backed war against the drug dealers. It announced it would soon extradite three more drug suspects, including a congressman, El Tiempo newspaper reported.

Some people fail to receive census forms

■ Census Bureau is elated that residents who have not received their questionnaires are taking the time to call.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Greenwood resident Victor Pena said he understands what an accurate census count means to Midland.

A mail carrier brought Pena, the city of Midland's assistant administrative services director, a reminder notice to fill out his census.

However, a census questionnaire never reached his mailbox.

Rick Menchaca, the city's coordinator of economic development and community relations, said Tuesday that city officials have fielded more than 60 telephone calls from area residents who never received their census forms.

"A lot of the people are in the rural areas," Menchaca said. "A lot of them have only post office boxes."

He said the number of callers, who started telephoning late last week, is not surprising. In fact, the response shows a strong interest in an accurate count, he said.

"We're elated that the people are calling," Menchaca said. "It shows they are aware about the census and the importance of it."

The U.S. Census Bureau questionnaires, which primarily ask how many live in the dwelling and the family's ethnic background, were mailed out March 23. The census officially began Sunday.

About 305,000 questionnaires were mailed out to a 14-county area, including Midland and Ector counties, which is being covered by the bureau's Lubbock offices.

Randell Warren, bureau district manager in Lubbock, said only a small percent of residents did not receive a questionnaire. Not getting a form is not unusual, Warren said.

"To come up with every mailing address in the United States is very hard to do," he said. "There are numerous reasons why someone may not get a census form. Our office has had very few calls."

Residents who have not received their questionnaires are being asked to call 1-800-999-1990 between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m., seven days a week through April 15, Warren said.

An operator will take the person's name, mailing address and telephone number, he said. "We'll either mail the forms out or bring them one, but we'll get them one," he said.

Those who do not speak English can call one of seven other toll-free numbers. The numbers are 1-800-444-6205 for a message in Korean, 1-800-289-1960 for Cambodian, 1-800-365-2101 for Chinese, 1-800-283-6826 for Spanish, 1-800-937-1953 for Vietnamese, 1-800-288-3208 for Laotian, and 1-800-288-1984 for Thai.

Warren said he expects to get a 70 percent to 80 percent return rate on the census forms which have been mailed. Returns have been good so far, he said.

"We've been swamped," Warren said. "It has been very successful. We knew we were going to be snowed under the first two weeks."

Not all residents are being asked to mail back their questionnaires, he said.

Forms sent to most city and some rural residents were accompanied by an addressed, postage-paid envelope to enclose the questionnaire, Warren said.

A number of rural residents did not get a postage-paid envelope, he said. Those residents will not receive the envelopes mostly because they have no mailing addresses to their homes, he said.

All residents in Midland, Ector and Lubbock counties should have received the postage-paid envelopes, as did citizens in the cities of Levelland, Brownfield, Seminole, Lamesa and Andrews, he said. Everyone else in the region will have to wait for an enumerator to pick up the questionnaire, he said.

Enumerators began knocking on rural doors Monday, Warren said. Visits to residents who failed to mail in their census forms will begin in about three weeks, he said.

A count of military personnel began March 26. Leaders from each branch of the armed services are being asked to report the numbers within their ranks.

Census counters, 15 in Midland County, hit the streets last month to count the number of homeless dwelling in shelters, parks and

All MISD grades could have a GEM

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Fifth-grader Joey Peden works in a computer lab at the Carver Cultural Center. Fewer gifted pupils will make the trip to Carver for gifted education classes under gifted education expansion plan, which calls for gifted kindergarten- through third-graders to remain at their home campuses for specialized instruction.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Midland Independent School District trustees this week will consider a plan to expand MISD's gifted education progam to all grades, school officials said.

The current Gifted Education in Midland (GEM) program serves third- through 12th-graders, said Patricia Maurer, MISD coordinator of gifted and talented programs.

"In a nutshell, there will a program on every campus to meet the needs of students in grades kindergarten through three," she said.

Gifted third graders, who now must travel to Carver Center twice a week for specialized instruction, would remain at their home campus under the new program, she said.

Expansion plans are the result of state requirements which call for gifted programs at all grade levels by next fall.

Because it is more difficult to identify gifted pupils in lower grades, entrance requirements for kindergarten through third graders will be less stringent than for older pupils, Ms. Maurer said.

"The K-through-three program basically gives each elementary school campus the option of identifying a talent pool of up to 20 percent at each primary grade for participation," she said.

In higher grades, 7 to 10 percent of MISD students participate in gifted programs, she said.

"Twenty percent seemed a manageable talent pool to the committee" responsible for designing the expansion program, Ms. Maurer said.

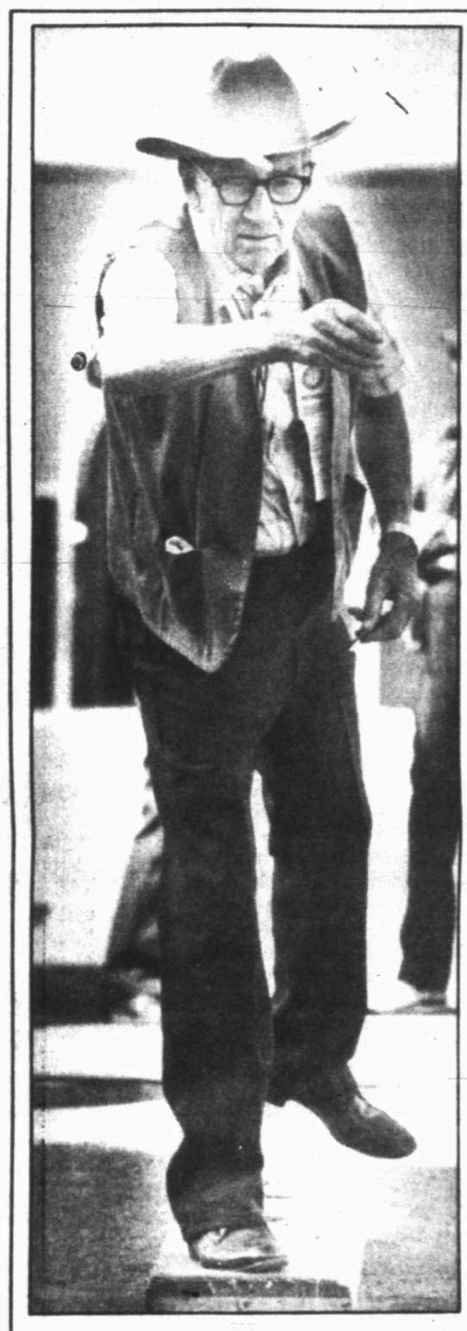

She said test scores, teacher recommendations, writing samples and other pupil work will be used to screen students for participation.

The program, in which gifted education teachers will regularly visit elementary campuses to conduct classes, should help prepare children for higher-level gifted programs later on, Ms. Maurer said.

It is hoped that the expanded-gifted program will bring talented but disadvantaged pupils up to the academic level of their more affluent peers, Ms. Maurer said.

"The one factor that we cannot recoup in this business we call education is time," she said. "If you've been teaching a child something longer ... they're going to do it better. We need to take a more aggressive approach toward developing the skills of these kids with

Budget plan could mean $270 million for schools

■ Proposals of diverting funds for school finance are keyed to a plan developed by the Governor's Task Force on Public Education.

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements' office backed up his claims that the state budget contains "ample" money for education reform on Tuesday with 11 recommendations that would translate into $270 million in new aid to schools.

Mike Toomey, the governor's chief of staff, laid out the plan before the House Appropriations Committee with a promise that even more money might become available as lawmakers attempt to deal with the state's school finance woes.

Clements' program relies on a combination of budgetary measures that include capturing supluses from some funds and diverting money from others.

One proposed idea would up from $3 to $9 the fee that the state charges insurance companies to check driving records, an option that Toomey said would add about $40 million to state coffers.

Another idea would divert $50 million to education from the $150 million sum lawmakers earmarked for renovation of the state Capitol this past year.

If lawmakers choose to increase the diversion to $75 million, the total amount available for education would approach the $300 million level that Clements on past occasions has claimed the budget holds.

The diversion from the state's general fund probably would be replaced with bonds on a 20-year payout to make sure the renovation proceeds uninterupted, Toomey said.

Other proposals would capture surplus money from the state's rainy day fund and funds created to pay employee insurance claims and debt service on bonds.

Diversions would come from money earmarked to implement a unified state accounting system, two Parks and Wildlife funds that Toomey said are better off combined and from the governor's emergency fund.

Other money would come from unclaimed bank accounts, forfeited warrants and from money in the state budget that lawmakers failed to appropriate.

Although all school finance plans proposed so far call for billion-dollar spending increases over several years, Clements has pledged to veto any program that requires new taxes to implement.

Toomey said the proposals presented Tuesday are keyed to a plan developed by the Governor's Task Force on Public Education, which called for $234 million in first-year spending and $4.3 billion after five years.

Appropriations Committee members criticized the governor's diversion plan as a sidestep of the tax question.

"Political demagoguery, that's what I call it," said Rep. Frank Collazo, D-Port Arthur, who questioned Toomey closely about whether the money is available

Deadline may not be met for opening nuclear waste dump

EL PASO (AP) — The state may not meet federal deadlines for opening a nuclear waste dump, a state official said Tuesday.

A judge granted a four-month delay in the trial of a lawsuit challenging state plans to build the dump near Fort Hancock, about 50 miles south of El Paso. Dump foes contend the site is in a 100-year flood plain and a fault zone and poses a threat to ground water.

The suit filed by El Paso and Hudspeth counties was supposed to go to trial April 16. But 34th State District Judge Bill Moody rescheduled the trial for Aug. 13, approving a delay requested by the counties.

"I'm concerned that we won't meet the deadlines and it will cost the taxpayers tens of millions of dollars," said Rick Jacobi, general manager of the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Authority.

Responsibility for disposal of radioactive waste generated by hospitals, laboratories, universities and nuclear powered plants is shifting from federal to state government on Jan. 1, 1993.

Federal law requires states to have dumps in operation by that date or face penalties of $35 million.

Jacobi said Texas had planned to open the doors of its dump site in 1994.

"I anticipate it will be well beyond that now," he said.

Gov. Bill Clements also has told the Nuclear Regulatory Commission that Texas could be storing its radioactive wastes in the dump by June 1993.

Attorneys representing El Paso and Hudspeth Counties asked for a delay after learning the authority changed plans on how to store the waste. The authority originally planned to use vaults. In the new design, the waste would be stored in concrete canisters and then buried underground.

"We're just as anxious to get to trial," said Gayle Garner, first assistant county attorney. "The only reason we asked for a continuance is our experts have to look at this new technology."

Moody, the judge, agreed.

"This is not just like your normal intersection collision case," Moody said. "This does appear to be a major change."

Lawmaker calls for review of TDHS finances

■ If the state does not make up the Department of Human Services shortfall, it could lose federal grant monies and threaten many programs.

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate Finance Committee chairman Tuesday called for legislative budget examiners to review Texas Department of Human Services finances after the agency scaled back its deficit projections by more than one-third.

"I have no confidence in these numbers," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, after DHS officials presented new figures that showed a scaled-down $210 million deficit projection for the next year and a half.

In January, DHS officials notified legislative budget officers they expected a $77.6 million deficit for the rest of this fiscal year, and a $257 million deficit for fiscal year 1991, due to increased demand for welfare and new federal regulations that increased costs.

This past week, the agency reduced the deficit projections to $31.9 million for the current fiscal year and $178.8 million for 1991, a drop of $123.9 million from the earlier projections.

Rob Mosbacher, the agency's board chairman, said the new budget estimates are more accurate because the agency has had more time to analyze trends. The shortfalls could be covered by shifting funds and taking better advantage of federal money, he said.

If the state does not make up the shortfalls, it could lose an additional $548 million in federal grants that could threaten many programs for the poor and elderly.

Caperton said he already has asked the Legislative Budget Board (LBB) staff to come up with its own projections of DHS needs.

"I think the LBB will be the group we trust, and listen to, and rely upon," Caperton said.

Mosbacher, the Republican nominee for lieutenant governor, said he would look for ways to increase the amount of federal matching grants the state receives before he would seek a tax increase.

"As far as I'm concerned we haven't run all the traps in terms of leveraging federal dollars with state dollars," Mosbacher said.

Mosbacher said Gov. Bill Clements has endorsed his plan to shift $31.9 million from the 1991 budget to 1990, but Caperton called it "one of the most irresponsible ideas I've seen trotted out in a long time."

Deferring the costs merely compounds the problem, Caperton said, particularly as the Legislature faces probable increases in spending for education, health and mental health-mental retardation services.

The Department of Health requested an additional $40.7 million for aid to chronically ill dependent children while the Department of Mental Health-Mental Retardation requested $43.8 million for the rest of the biennium to cover court-ordered improvements.

Woman treated after accident

Staff Report

At least one Midlander was sent to the hospital Monday following a pair of car accidents, police reports show.

About 2:30 p.m. Monday, the car driven by Glenda Neely Chivers, 57, of Midland, rear-ended a car that was turning right into a parking lot in the 2700 block of West Front Street.

Injured in the crash was Sandra Cordova, 20, a passenger in the car that was struck. She was treated and released from Midland Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokesperson said.

Ms. Chivers was cited for following too closely, police reports show. The driver of the other car, 41-year-old Isidro Torres, was cited for not having insurance, reports show.

About 8 p.m. Monday, two cars were involved in an accident at the intersection of Big Spring and Loop 250 after one car apparently ran a stoplight.

Police reports show that a car driven by Gumersindo Lujan Gonzalez, traveling west on Loop 250, collided with a car southbound on Big Spring which pulled into the intersection against a red light.

The driver of the second car, Amy Dianne McQuerry, was cited for failure to obey a traffic signal and for not wearing a safety belt. Police reports indicate that she was transported to a hospital, but Midland Memorial Hospital officials could not confirm that she had been treated there.

Gonzalez was cited for not having insurance, police reports show.

Oklahoma site talk topic

Staff Report

Dr. Don G. Wyckoff, director of the Oklahoma Archaeological Survey, will speak to the Midland Archeological Society 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium, located behind the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

In "Beyond Clovis: Glimpses from Northwestern Oklahoma's Burnham Site," Wyckoff will present preliminary evidence for human occupation of North America dating to at least 26,000 years ago. This is about 15,000 years earlier than the generally accepted date for human settlement of this continent.

Recent finds of chipped stone tools and resharpening flakes in ancient deposits at the Burnham Site, near Woodward, Okla., seem to indicate the presence of humans some 26,000 years ago. Several of the artifacts appear to be made of flint from the Edwards Plateau and West Texas.

This is the first public discussion of Wyckoff's latest findings from the Burnham Site.

The public is invited to attend the meeting.

Kodak conference slated

Staff Report

ODESSA — Odessa College's photography department will sponsor an Eastman Kodak "Techniques of the Masters" video conference at noon Thursday.

The free two-hour public conference in OC's Electronic Technology Building, Room 130, will feature Gordon Parks, a photographer, musician and writer, and William McIntosh, a portrait painter.

At the end of the tele-conference, participants may call direct to ask questions. Participants also may bring brown bag meals to the conference.

According to Steve Goff, OC's assistant professory of photography, Parks' diverse filmmaking, music and writing career began "with a click of a shutter." McIntosh will demonstrate how unusual settings have created "the portrait of success," Goff said.

Kodak's videoconferences are non-commercial, educational programs available to anyone interested in participating. For more information call Goff at 335-6497.

Saddle, guns taken

Staff Report

A silver-inlaid saddle worth $2,000 was among the items stolen this week from the Clark Pipe & Supply Co., 8012 W. Highway 80, Sheriff's Department reports show.

According to reports, guns, saddles and a copy machine with a total value of $4,560 was taken after a break-in early Monday. The burglary was reported about 8:50 a.m. Monday, reports show.

In another burgalry reported Monday, Rittenhouse Oil Co., 5700 W. Industrial Ave., lost $2,075 in air compressors, assorted tools and acetylene tanks, reports show.

Richards' behavior compared to Nazi

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Gov. Mark White, whose comeback bid was dashed in the Democratic gubernatorial primary, Tuesday accused Ann Richards of dirty politics, likened her behavior to that of a Nazi leader and said he would never vote for her.

"I will never endorse Ann Richards. I will never support Ann Richards. And I will never vote for Ann Richards," White told a Capitol news conference.

Stopping short of endorsing Attorney General Jim Mattox over Ms. Richards in the Democratic runoff for governor, White said he would be voting in that race. And he declined to criticize Mattox's tactics during the mudslinging primary.

"I've always thought he (Mattox) was one of the toughest campaigners I've ever seen, but what Ann Richards has done would make Himmler blush," White said, an apparent reference to the Nazi SS and Gestapo leader Heinrich Himmler.

That no-vote policy will apply in the general election, should Ms. Richards win the nomination to challenge Republican Clayton Williams, he said.

"If she gets the nomination it will be without my help. And I think if she's able to be elected, she'll have it in the same fashion," White said.

White blasted Ms. Richards, the state treasurer, for TV commercials and speeches in which she alleged that he had profited from public service and helped his old law firm obtain state bond business while he was governor.

"I think I've been probably been madder from time to time, but this one ... they pretty well ripped their britches with me," he said, saying Ms. Richard had made remarks that were "patently false, maliciously made and she should have had better judgment."

Asked to respond during a campaign stop in San Benito, Ms. Richards said, "Well, that's too bad ... I really don't think that it's like Mark White to call anyone a Nazi."

Earlier in the day, Ms. Richards had said she believed White and other Democrats would eventually be united.

Student shot by another student

DALLAS (AP) — A 16-year-old Skyline High School student was in fair condition Tuesday after being shot on campus by another student who had been suspended the day before for fighting, authorities said.

The 10th-grader was shot in the abdomen and was being treated at Baylor University Medical Center.

Police were looking for a 17-year-old student suspected in the shooting, said Dallas Police Detective Joe Henderson.

The 17-year-old had been suspended on Monday after fighting with a friend of the 16-year-old, said Gene Golden, Skyline principal.

Williams tops pro-choice group's hit list

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's largest pro-choice group Tuesday placed Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams atop its 1990 election hit list, saying his recent joke about rape showed insensitivity to women's issues.

"Clayton Williams has amply demonstrated in the last several weeks that he is dangerously out of touch with the lives of Texas women," said Phyllis Dunham, executive director of the Texas Abortion Rights Action League.

Citing the veto of a strict anti-abortion bill in Idaho late last week, the TARAL leader said electing a pro-abortion governor is crucial to preserving women's rights.

She said Williams' remark — in which he likened bad weather to rape and said if it was inevitable to "relax and enjoy it" — showed that he doesn't care about women's issues.

"How can we expect a man who doesn't understand that rape is no pleasure to comprehend that abortion is no mere convenience?" Ms. Dunham asked.

Williams has repeatedly apologized for the rape remark — made to three male newspaper reporters during a cattle roundup on his West Texas ranch.

The Republican has said he opposes abortion except in cases of rape, incest or when the mother's life is in danger.

"Clayton believes in such things as parental consent in cases where minors are seeking an abortion," press secretary Bill Kenyon said Tuesday.

"He anticipates this will be a major component of his legislative package dealing with the issue. He recognizes that TARAL disagrees with that and so it's no surprise they're choosing to endorse another candidate," Kenyon said.

Ms. Dunham said Williams is the "No. 1 threat" on an evolving TARAL 10 list of abortion opponents.

PLAN: Tax hike stall sought

only on a one-time basis or could be appropriated in regular two-year cycles.

Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, likening the program to "a balloon note," with billions more due in years to come.

But Toomey criticized the criticism. "It's politics," he said. "It's 'Make the governor sign a tax bill.'"

Still, House Speaker Gib Lewis said leaders are searching for budgetary ideas to help forstall, or at least cushion, the need for a tax increase.

Beyond the $270 million, Toomey detailed a $172 million idea that zeros in on the Teacher Retirement System.

The proposal involves capturing the money while the state delays for a year increasing its annual contribution to the TRS from the current 6 percent to 7.65 percent.

As a sweetener, the reduction would come with an increase in benefits to retired teachers in the same amounts they received this past year — up to 16 percent for those who left work in 1975.

The state would increase its contribution to 7.65 percent in the 1992 and 1993 fiscal years and then contribute 8 percent thereafter, a plan that lawmakers approved during the last regular session.

Toomey said Clements does not support cuts in higher education spending to help solve public education woes.

A list of 14 proposed budgetary measures prepared by the Legislative Budget Board had included substantial backtracking on gains the higher education community had made in the last regular session.

If implemented, the measures would cut $87,500 from the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Also earmarked was $65,177 at Sul Ross State University in Alpine.

Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa and an Appropriations Committee member, thought the proposed cuts are "not anything to worry about at this point in time," but said they might resurface once the House passes an education bill.

While House action Tuesday focused on budgetary measures, the Senate endorsed on a voice vote the same $1.2 billion school finance plan that the chamber approved during the last special session.

"You can justify in the name of excellence in education spending a billion-two now, " said Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and co-author of the bill. "The children of Texas need it," he said.

House Speaker Gib Lewis predicted that a House school finance measure would be filed today.

next session of the Legislature which could have tragic consequences, and a hole out of which there may be no escape," he said.

Caperton said he thinks the Legislature will have to come up with $300 million for the next year and a half.

Mosbacher suggested he was a victim of a "political firestorm," but Democratic senators said they were not making political hay of the budget troubles.

"This is not a partisan issue," said Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville. "There is enough blame to go around ... What we're fooling around with is the lives of Texans who are sick and who are disabled."

"The politics happened last session when we tippytoed around because we've got a governor who didn't want to spend any more money and nobody came out and said this is a bunch of bull," said Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur.

"We didn't have anybody, and it wasn't a bipartisan effort, to scream their heads off about that miserly approach to protecting the children of this state, except for a few of us wild-eyed professional politician liberals."

abandoned houses.

Warren said high participation also is important because census statistics help determine state and federal legislative districts as well as federal funding of local programs.

He emphasized that census information is confidential. Not even the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, Internal Revenue Service, welfare agencies, the military or FBI can touch census records for 72 years, he said.

The bureau still needs people to work as enumerators, he said. Midland, Ector and Lubbock counties will need about 400 enumerators, with about 100 for each of those counties, he said.

To qualify to be an enumerator, a person must be at least 18 years old or 16 with a high school diploma. The job candidate must show a driver's license and have an insured vehicle to use for the work.

Warren urged those interested to call local Texas Employment Commission offices for more details on enumerator work.

GEM: Expansion may help minorities

high-level potential."

She said about 5 percent of pupils in MISD gifted classes are minorities. Language problems and a lack of exposure to books and learning experiences at home place many minority and poor students at a disadvantage when academic ability is being measured, she said.

Trustee Larry Rusk, who served on the committee supervising the creation of the new program, said it is too early to tell whether minorities will benefit from the new program.

"Time will answer those questions as we re-evaluate those statistics," Rusk said. "How it will actually perform we'll have to measure over time."

About 1,000 kindergarten through third-graders will be eligible for the program, Ms. Maurer said.

The cost of the program will depend on how many teachers the school board hires to staff it. However, a minimum requirement is expected to be at least six teachers at a cost of about $28,000 per teacher annually, Ms. Maurer said.

Grand jury doesn't indict ex-officer in guard's death

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County grand jury Tuesday declined to indict a former police officer who fatally shot an off-duty security guard after he stopped him on a traffic violation.

Grand jurors deliberated 1½ hours before it no-billed Scott M. Tschirhart in the Nov. 5 shooting of Byron Gillum. The jury had finished hearing testimony Tuesday morning.

Tschirhart told police department investigators he stopped Gillum for speeding near the University of Houston. The officer said he opened fire when Gillum allegedly reached for a .357-caliber Magnum revolver on his car seat.

An autopsy showed Gillum, 24, received six gunshot wounds, including four in the back.

Tschirhart, 27, was fired from the police department, but he has appealed his dismissal.

The shooting occurred about two weeks after 50-year-old Ida Lee Delaney was shot to death in a freeway shootout by police officer Alex Gonzales.

Gonzales was one of three off-duty officers in the car that pursued Mrs. Delaney's truck for several miles on Houston freeways. The shooting occurred in the early morning hours of Oct. 31.

The officers said they chased the vehicle after the driver cut them off and fired a shot at them, and Gonzales has said he fired at the woman in self-defense after she shot him.

Gonzales was indicted for murder Jan. 2 in Mrs. Delaney's killing. A trial date has not been set.

Texans' income rises slower than average

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texans saw their incomes rise at a slower rate than the national average during most of past decade, according to a Census Bureau report Tuesday that found Starr County residents are the state's poorest and those in Sherman County earn the most.

The report also finds Texas has the country's least populated county — Loving County on the Pecos River in West Texas, and the country's poorest county — Starr, an isolated stretch of land along the Rio Grande in South Texas.

Statewide, the Census Bureau said per capita income in Texas grew at a rate of 47.8 percent between 1979 and 1987, while nationally, per capita incomes grew by 63.4 percent.

Texans had a per capita income of $10,645 in 1987, compared with earnings of $7,203 in 1979. Nationally, per capita income grew to $11,923 in 1987 from $7,295 in 1979.

Texans' earnings put them in 34th place nationally in 1987, a 10-place drop from 24th in 1979, the Census Bureau said.

The earnings picture was especially bleak for three counties in South Texas, which the Census Bureau said were among the 10 poorest nationwide in 1987.

In Starr County, residents had a meager per capita income of $3,464. The nation's fourth-poorest county was also along the Rio Grande in South Texas: Maverick County, with per capita earnings in 1987 of $4,269. The nation's seventh-poorest county was neighboring Zavala County, with a per capita income of $4,646.

The state's richest county with a population over 100 was Sherman, in the Panhandle, with a per capita income of $16,260, earning it a 35th-place ranking nationally.

Loving County actually had a higher per capita income, $23,500, but with an estimated population of just 100 in July 1988, statisticians find the sample is so small that "we don't really have any confidence in it," said George Patterson, an economic statistician for the Census Bureau.

John Bender, a spokesman for the Texas Comptroller's Office, said the slow growth in per capita income statewide stems from two major economic shocks that hit the state in the 1980s — the first, in 1982-83, affecting the oil industry in Houston and along the Gulf Coast; the second in 1986-87, which affected oil and real estate across the state.

"What happened in Texas in the mid-1980s was the loss of high-wage jobs the areas of oil and gas, oil and gas related manufacturing such as oilfield equipment and supplies, and construction jobs," Bender said.

While the Texas economy began to rebound in 1988 and the state has regained most of its lost jobs, employment gains in recent years have been in lower-paying sectors such as services and government, Bender said.

But economic projections by the Comptroller's Office show the Texas economy should out-perform the national economy in the 1990s, Bender said.

Computer projections, he said, "show the Texas population will grow faster than the national rate, and employment and perosnal income should exceed the national rates."

"Texas is in for a period of steady, stable growth because the economy today is much more diverse than it was in the early 1980s. It's no longer as dependent on the energy industry as it was, and because of that diversification, Texas will probably not see the kind of boom and bust cycles that it has had in the past," Bender said.

Two especially promising areas include the border with Mexico and the so-called I-35 corridor between San Antonio and Waco.

Man shot after setting house afire

AUSTIN (AP) — A man who police say killed his estranged wife's boyfriend Tuesday after setting her house on fire was shot by law officers after a three-hour standoff, according to authorities.

Robert Smith, 29, was shot once in the neck and was in serious condition in the intensive care unit at Brackenridge Hospital after undergoing surgery, said hospital spokesman Larry BeSaw.

Authorities said Smith shot Charles Hudson, 29, twice with a shotgun, killing him.

The confrontation began at approximately 3:30 a.m., when authorities said a man broke into his wife's house in a subdivision north of Austin.

Authorities originally reported the man took the wife and three children hostage.

But Curtis Weeks, a deputy sheriff, later said the man allowed everyone to leave the house and then barricaded himself inside.

Authorities tried to talk the man into surrendering for nearly three hours, Weeks said.

He said the man then set the house on fire and allowed it to burn for about 15 minutes.

He said the man fled the house and tried to get away in his car. Law officers shot his tires, Weeks said, and the man pulled his car back into the garage.

Weeks said when the man got out of his car, he had a gun and was told by law officers to drop it. Weeks said the man raised his gun, and a member of the Department of Public Safety tactical unit shot him.

Hudson was dead when authorities went into the house about 6:30 a.m., Weeks said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Extension asked in Brandley case

CONROE (AP) — Montgomery County's district attorney has asked the U.S. Supreme Court for 60 more days to draft his appeal petition in the Clarence Lee Brandley capital murder case.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturned Brandley's 1981 murder conviction in December, saying the former high school janitor was denied a fair trial.

Brandley was released from Texas' death row on $75,000 bond, but he remains under indictment for the Aug. 23, 1980, rape and strangulation of 16-year-old Cheryl Dee Fergeson at Conroe High School.

Because of lost evidence and recanted testimony, Montgomery County District Attorney Peter Speers has said his only recourse for returning Brandley to death row is an appeal of the appellate court's ruling.

Wrecked ship found

FREEPORT (AP) — A sunken wooden ship possibly dating back to the Civil War has been found in mint condition off Quintana Beach.

The ship, which is sitting upright, was apparently constructed of rough cedar planks and is about 100 feet long. The decks are partly eroded and the hull is encased in gray clay.

For five days marine archeologist Steve James and another underwater archeologist studied the ship.

"She is curiously constructed ... and has no obvious anti-fouling hull coating," James said. "She appears to have been replanked."

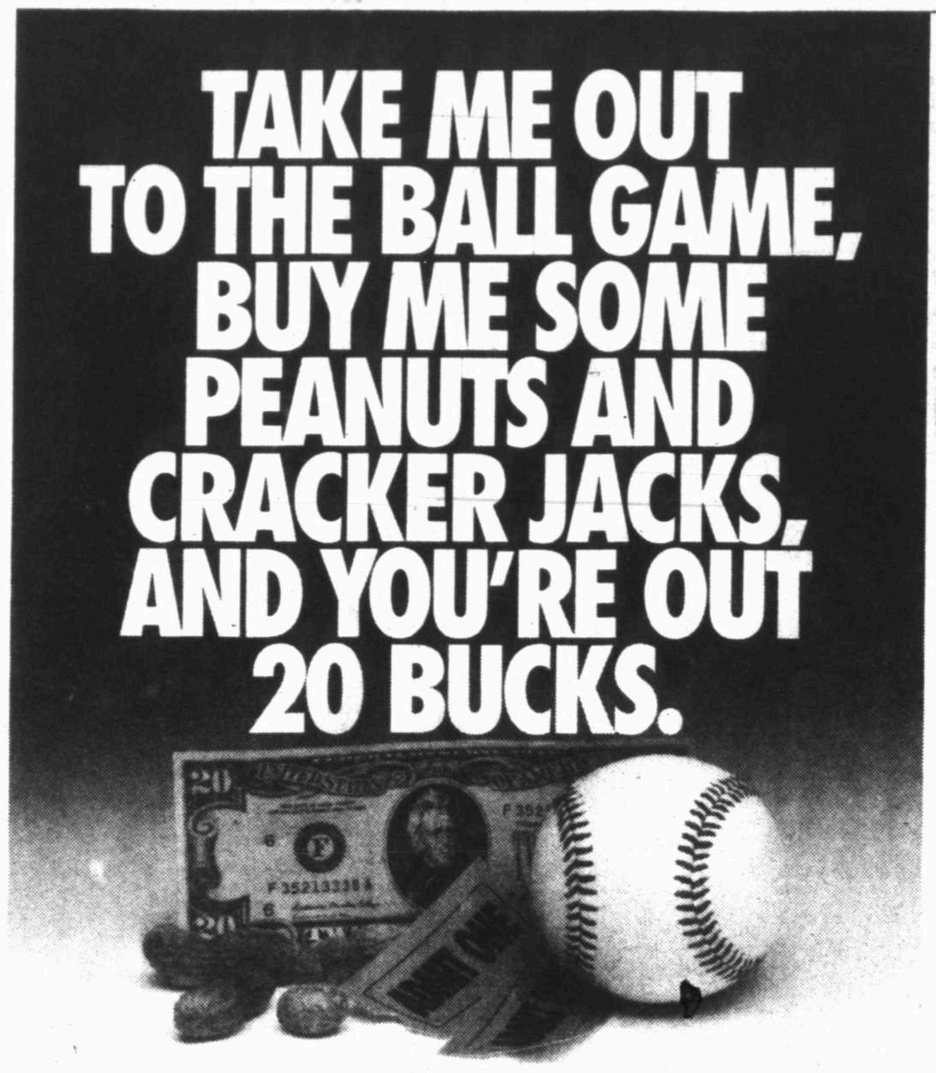

The ship could date back to the mid-19th century, but James said the ship's design suggests it was built in the early 20th century.

DPS trooper injured

AMARILLO (AP) — A Texas Department of Public Safety trooper was in critical condition today at an Amarillo hospital after a freak traffic accident, officials said.

The DPS said a pickup rammed the rear of Trooper Roland McGill's vehicle. McGill apparently was outside the patrol car when the accident occurred.

Senate passes clean-air bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, after a decade-long struggle to strengthen federal air pollution controls, wrapped up debate Tuesday on a $21 billion clean air bill that would impose tighter restrictions on car and factory emissions.

A vote was scheduled for Tuesday night amid widespread speculation that the bipartisan bill endorsed by President Bush would have little trouble passing.

From a downtown parking lot in Indianapolis, Bush urged Senate action.

"I am proud of this proposal to cut smog, acid rain and toxic pollution, to make America cleaner and safer," Bush said. "I urge the Senate to act not merely for this generation but all the generations to come."

Senate approval would shift focus on clean air legislation to the House, where a similar bill is being written by the Energy and Commerce Committee. Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., the panel chairman, plans a final vote by week's end, sending the measure to the House floor.

The clean air bills before Congress represent the first attempt to strengthen federal air pollution laws in 13 years, despite widespread agreement among environmentalists and federal regulators that the 1970 Clean Air Act has failed to rid cities of dirty air. The law was last amended in 1977.

About 150 million people breathe dirty air in more than 100 cities from Lewiston, Maine, to Los Angeles, according to government figures. In addition, industrial plants release an estimated 2.7 billion pounds of toxic chemicals, including carcinogens, into the air each year; and acid rain pollutants are endangering streams and lakes across much of the Northeast and mid-Atlantic states.

The Senate legislation, which would impose sweeping pollution controls on industrial plants, automobiles and coal-burning electric power plants, is designed to ease those problems.

Among its key provisions are:

■ Tighter automobile tailpipe emission controls, requiring new cars run cleaner and reduce smog-causing pollutants.

■ A reduction in sulfur-dioxide emissions from coal-burning utility plants by 10 million tons a year.

■ Reductions through the installation of the best available control technology of toxic chemical releases by industry, including controls on about 200 chemicals linked to cancer, nervous disorders and birth defects.

The bill would require states to implement specific pollution control plans to clean up urban smog and establish incremental requirements to cut pollution by 3 percent to 4 percent a year until federal air quality standards are achieved.

Stars hold bedside vigil for White

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — AIDS patient Ryan White fought for his life Tuesday as thousands of messages of love and prayers poured in from small towns and big names, including President Bush and Michael Jackson.

Singer Elton John flew in from Los Angeles.

White, 18, remained in critical condition on a life-support system, said Dr. Martin B. Kleiman. He was unconscious and heavily sedated so that life-support systems would function more efficiently.

White, who during his five-year battle with AIDS grew from an object of scorn in his hometown of Kokomo to an international spokesman for AIDS patients, has been hospitalized at Riley Hospital for Children since Thursday.

His mother, Jeanne, and sister, Andrea, have remained at his bedside.

"It's very hard, what we're going through, and our family needs to be together here," Mrs. White said in her first public statement since Ryan's hospitalization.

Hospital spokeswoman Mary Maxwell said the flood of calls "has been bedlam. We're getting calls from every small town in the United States. It hasn't let up."

Among those who left messages were actor Tony Danza and the son of comedian Milton Berle.

Maxwell said John spent five hours with the family and "just raised their spirits tremendously, that someone of his stature would care so much to drop everything."

When Jackson called, a speaker phone was brought to White's bedside in hopes the unconscious youth would hear Jackson's words.

"He told Ryan he loved him and that God is with him," Van Dyke said. "And he said, 'Hang in there, buddy, and get better.'"

Jackson befriended White a couple of years ago and gave him a car. White also was a guest at Jackson's California ranch during the New Year's holiday.

Bush, who was in Indianapolis for a political fund-raiser, planted a tree for White at a ceremony 1½ miles from the hospital.

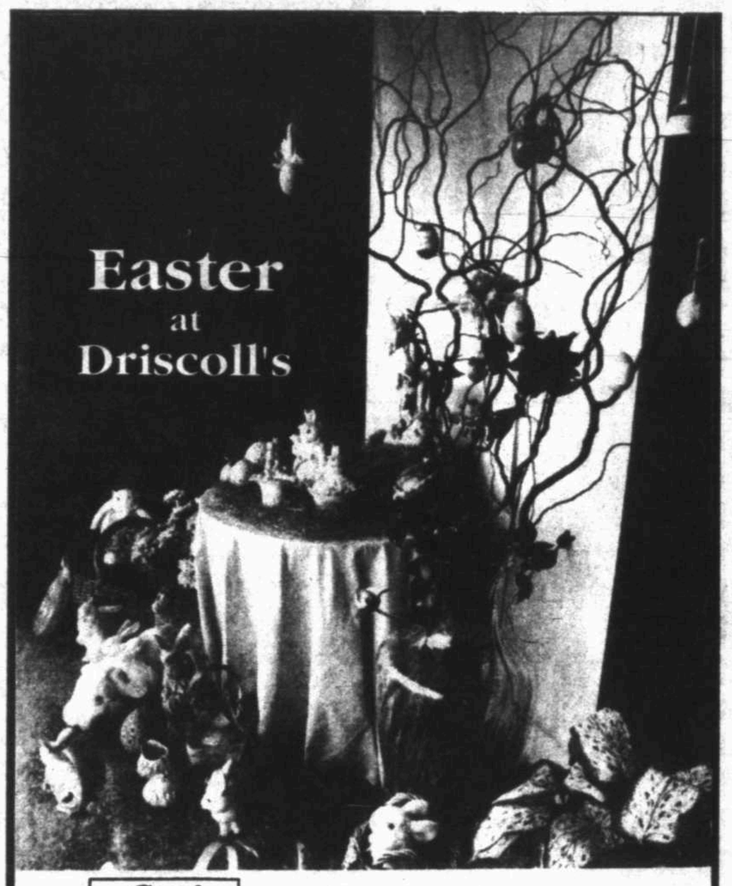

"He's been fighting a courageous battle against a deadly disease and also against ignorance and fear. Ryan has helped us understand the truth about AIDS and he's shown all of us the strength and bravery of the human heart," Bush said.

Five years ago, White, who was diagnosed as having AIDS at age 13, was barred from school near Kokomo by officials who feared acquired immune deficiency syndrome could be transmitted to other students.

Even after a judge affirmed White's right to attend school, he and his family felt ostracized and moved about 20 miles away to Cicero, where they were welcomed.

"Because of the lack of education on AIDS discrimination, fear, panic and lies surrounded me," White told a teachers convention in 1988.

Cost revealed

This photo released by the Pentagon Tuesday shows the super-secret F-117A Stealth fighter jet. Defense officials yesterday released long-classified figures for the cost of the dark, delta-winged aircraft, $106.2 million. Cost of the total program is estimated at $6.26 billion. The Stealth craft reportedly has been operational since 1983, but the Pentagon refused to acknowledge it existed until late 1988.

Democrats, GOP oppose B-2 jets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is considering scaling back production of the B-2 bomber, Air Force Secretary Donald Rice said Tuesday in his first public comments on the Pentagon's review of major weapons The Air Force secretary declined to provide many specifics to members of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on defense, but Rice did say Defense Secretary Dick Cheney is re-examining current Pentagon plans to buy 132 of the stealth bombers at a cost of more than $70 billion.

The overriding concern at the department is forcing up the cost of a single, radar-evading bomber — about $530 million apiece — by purchasing less than the full fleet.

President Bush's $307 billion defense budget for fiscal 1991 calls for $5.5 billion for the stealth bomber program.

Democrats and Republicans on the panel made it clear that the B-2 program, for which the government has invested more than $23 billion, faces an uphill fight in Congress.

Central America targeted for $720 million 'peace dividend'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Tuesday approved a $2.4 billion spending bill that includes money President Bush is urgently seeking for new democracies in Panama and Nicaragua.

The bill, with $720 million for the two Central American nations, would mark the first use of a "peace dividend" from reduced Pentagon spending. It still needed Senate action, which appeared unlikely by the Thursday deadline Bush had set for completion of the measure.

Lawmakers approved the bill on a vote of 362-59 after defeating a series of amendments that would have cut foreign aid amounts in the bill

Rep. James Traficant, D-Ohio, sought to cut 5 percent from the foreign aid portions of the bill, charging the measure was "busting the bank. ... Before we ship money overseas, let's take care of our own country first."

Countered Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla.: "This amendment shows why people are fed up with Congress — because we're looking at the little bitty 'Did I get mine' ... instead of taking care of the security of our people."

The Senate's Democratic leaders had not yet scheduled consideration for the money bill, and it was unlikely Bush would get the money he sought for the two fledgling Central American governments before Congress leaves Thursday for a 12-day Easter recess.

Bush called his appeal a "laser-like request to help Panama and Nicaragua." State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said, "To put it plainly, democracy could be at risk in Central America if the president's timetable is not met. ... Delay is playing with dynamite."

White House officials have pleaded with Congress in recent weeks to expedite aid to Panama, where a U.S. invasion in December ousted dictator Manuel Noriega and installed a new government, and to Nicaragua, where voters turned out leftist President Daniel Ortega in February elections. Both countries' economies have been hurt by U.S. sanctions and military conflict.

Because of budget rules, most new spending added during a fiscal year must be made up by cutting elsewhere in the budget. This spending measure is counterbalanced by $1.8 billion in cuts in Pentagon spending agreed to by Bush and House leaders.

One issue that delayed the bill was whether to attach strings to current U.S. military aid to El Salvador because of human rights concerns.

Huge deficits fuel first-ever 12-figure debt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The national debt on Monday totaled more than $3 trillion for the first time in history, the Treasury Department reported Tuesday.

That's $3,000,000,000,000, with 12 zeroes.

A person counting a $1,000 bill each second would take 133 years just to reach $1 trillion.

And when the national debt reached $3 trillion, it meant that it would cost every man, woman and child $12,000 to pay it off.

"The debt did go over $3 trillion on Monday," confirmed Peter Hollenbach, public affairs officer for Treasury's Bureau of Public Debt.

The actual level of public debt subject to statutory limit at the end of the day Monday was $3.023 trillion. That's just $99.59 billion under the statutory limit of $3.123 trillion. The national debt stood at $2.989 trillion last Friday.

Hollenbach said that despite a growing number of income tax receipts at this time of year, he expected the debt to continue to grow as long as the budget is not balanced.

Congress enacted the current debt limit last November.

The debt reached $1 billion in 1916 during World War I, climbing to $278 billion at the end of World War II.

It reached its first trillion on Oct. 1, 1981, and rose to $2 trillion on April 3, 1986.

The rapid growth in the debt stems from fact that the government been running huge deficits for the past decade. The inability to reduce the federal deficit was considered the major economic failure of the Reagan administration.

Democratic opponents often pointed to the fact that President Reagan ran up more public debt in this eight years in office than all of his predecessors put together.

The federal deficit has continued to grow since then and totaled $152.1 billion during the fiscal year ended last Sept. 30.

By the end of February, the deficit had reached $97.52 billion, just $2.48 billion less than the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction target for the entire year. Interest on the deficit during February totaled $17.32 billion and is expected to reach $254.85 billion for the year.

Analysts have said the target for fiscal 1990 has all but been abaondoned, with some suggesting the actual imbalance for the year will total $160 billion to $165 billion.

Full and Partial Dentures Don't Replace Your Natural Teeth. Dental Implants Do.

Good Morning, Midland. LUCKY NUMBER 06886

The Implant Alternative.

If you've been disappointed in conventional solutions to your missing teeth, you should know about an important new alternative: dental implants.

A dental implant is a tiny cylinder which is surgically implanted in your jaw to replace the root of the tooth. Once in place, your natural jawbone bonds to the implant, making it a stable foundation for replacement teeth, a permanent bridge, or anchored, removable dentures. Dental implants are fixed so securely, in fact, they can actually restore the feeling you had with your own natural teeth. As well as your ability to eat just about anything you want—confidently.

Dental implant, actual size.

Call to learn more about dental implants. They'll help restore the feeling, and the freedom of your own natural teeth.

Soviet brings word of Baltics to Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze arrived Tuesday for wide-ranging talks with President Bush and Secretary of State James A. Baker III and pledged to hold "honest dialogue" with secessionist Lithuanians.

Shevardnadze is expected to give Bush and Baker a message from Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. Administration officials hope it will spell out Moscow's promise to deal peacefully with the independence movement in the Baltic republic.

While Shevardnadze's remarks on arriving at Andrews Air Force Base had a conciliatory ring, the foreign minister emphasized the significance the Kremlin attaches to the Soviet Constitution and laws in the face of the Lithuanian challenge.

"You must understand the importance of that question for the Soviet Union and the Soviet people," Shevardnadze said as he set the stage for talks with Baker beginning Wednesday afternoon and with Bush on Friday.

The foreign minister's agenda here reaches beyond Lithuania to the war in Angola between U.S. and Soviet-backed forces, to ways of limiting cruise missiles in a U.S.-Soviet arms control treaty nearing completion in Geneva and to trying to set a date for Gorbachev's summit meeting here with Bush in June.

Meanwhile, Margaret D. Tutwiler, State Department spokeswoman, said Soviet actions in Lithuania were at the top of the agenda for Baker's sessions with Shevardnadze.

Bush told reporters during a Republican fund-raising trip to the Midwest on Tuesday that his Friday meeting with Shevardnadze "will be the chance ... to see how that message went down in Moscow."

The president reiterated his hope "to see this matter handled in a cool fashion — freedom, democracy and self-determination all goes forward, but where it's handled in a way (that) the result is peaceful and no use of force."

The Soviets have acknowledged the Lithuanians have a right to self-determination. However, the Kremlin has insisted they annul a March 11 declaration of independence as a prerequisite for negotiations.

The secessionists are unwilling to take that step. Lithuanian leaders, softening their approach, insisted Monday they had never expected immediate independence.

Lithuania's chief diplomat in Washington said he believes the Soviet army may have assumed the lead role in dealing with the independence crisis.

Stasys Lozaraitis Jr. said at a news conference that the Soviet military show of force in Lithuania has made him more pessimistic about Lithuania's fate.

NATION IN BRIEF

Spence wants Bush on stand

NEW YORK (AP) — Imelda Marcos' attorney contended Tuesday that George Bush urged her husband to invest in U.S. real estate and that the CIA "was aware of every transaction" for which she is on trial on racketeering charges.

In opening arguments, defense attorney Gerald Spence also said he plans to call Bush as a witness.

Spence said Bush, then vice president, was concerned about the Marcoses negotiating an oil deal with Libya's Moammar Gadhafi and suggested to Marcos during a 1981 meeting in Manila, "Why don't you invest in American properties?"

The former Philippines first lady and her late husband, Ferdinand, were named in the 1988 indictment that charged them with stealing millions of dollars from their homeland's treasury to buy Manhattan real estate, jewelry and art.

Jury sequestered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The judge in John Poindexter's trial disclosed Tuesday that two jurors had been contacted by the news media and he ordered the jury sequestered to avoid further problems from such "irresponsible behavior."

U.S. District Court Judge Harold Greene said the "irresponsible behavior of the press leaves me no alternative" but to have the jurors "taken by the marshals" to a hotel each night.

Poindexter, who was national security adviser to then-President Reagan, is charged with conspiring to obstruct Congress, making false statements to lawmakers and obstructing congressional inquiries into the Iran-Contra affair.

It was disclosed that a Washington Post reporter had telephoned juror Leroy Witherspoon at home after Monday's first day of deliberations in the Poindexter trial. Witherspoon said he hung up on the reporter twice.

Labor fines spiral

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fines against fast-food restaurants and other businesses are climbing toward the $3 million mark for thousands of child labor law violations uncovered in a three-day federal sweep, officials said Tuesday.

One businessman called the effort by the Labor Department "nitpicking" and a "crusade." But spokeswoman Johanna Schneider said the department's "responsibility is to enforce the letter of the law."

The number of violations grew from 7,000 to nearly 11,000 after federal investigators gave the case files further review, officials said.

Actress upstaged

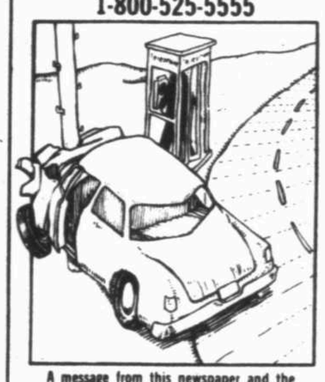

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Mark Hatfield, in an emotional plea for increased money for Alzheimer's research, told Congress Tuesday how the disease had affected his powerful father.

Television actress Angie Dickinson also testified about how Alzheimer's has hurt her family and urged increased spending on research of the disease.

The actress was upstaged by the Oregon Republican, who drew loud applause during a hearing before the House Select Committee on Aging and the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

MANAGEMENT DEVELOPMENT
We hold general membership meetings every Friday at noon at the Midland Center. At one you might hear about a few of the more than 70 projects and programs we run every year. Annual elections give our membership a chance to select the President, Vice Presidents, Treasurer, Secretary, and Board of Directors. Those that chair each of our projects are the lifeblood of the Jaycee organization. They organize comittees, take the risks and responsibilities and learn the most. Basically the management development we've described here could be referred to as the foundation of the Jaycee experience...the base of what we call the "Jaycee Triangle".

The energy futures market finished mixed in quiet trading Tuesday, with prices of crude oil and unleaded gasoline losing ground and home heating oil posting gains.

The contract for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate, fell 18 cents to $20.30 a 42-gallon barrel while posted price continues to cling to $19.25. The contract had advanced 20 cents on Monday.

Natural gas contracts traded on the New York Merc for the first time Tuesday. The June contract settled at $1.685 per 1,000 cubic feet.

More families can buy home

An index measuring the typical American family's ability to buy a house increased in February as lower prices and rising income offset higher mortgage rates, a real estate trade group said.

The National Association of Realtors said Monday its index rose to 105.1 in February, meaning that a family with a median income of $33,816 had 105.1 percent of the income needed to buy a median-priced existing home costing $95,400.

Main economic gauge falls

■ The government's forecasting gauge took a sharp drop in February, but analysts call the report an aberration due to a plunge in building permits.

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main economic forecasting gauge plunged 1.0 percent in February, its steepest drop in nine months, the government said Tuesday. But analysts said the decrease was misleading.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday its latest Index of Leading Economic Indicators — designed to forecast economic activity six to nine months in advance — wiped out three months of increases with the largest decline since a 1.1 percent fall last May.

But analysts said the report was an aberation caused by a record 25 percent drop in building permits in February from January's 26.8 percent gain when builders took advantage of warm weather and tried to beat deadlines for new government regulations.

"It would have been down just 0.2 percent without the distorting effect of the building permits," said David Jones, an economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a government securities dealer in New York.

Gilbert Benz, an economist with the Swiss Bank Corp. in New York, said the gauge would bounce back next month to its levels of late 1989 and early 1990. The index rose 0.1 percent in November, 0.4 percent in December and 0.2 percent in January.

Nevertheless, seven of the 11 statistics in the index were down which analysts interpreted as meaning a soft economy, particularly in the manufacturing sector.

"February's leading indicators show a substantial industrial rebound is unlikely to occur in the next six months," said William K. MacReynolds, forecasting director for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

But Jones added, "Recent signals suggest that while the goods-producing sector is still flat, it's not getting any worse and there's no evidence that its weakness is spreading to other sectors."

According to a recent survey of 51 top economists by Blue Chip Economic Indicators in Sedona, Ariz., the gross national product — the nation's output of goods and services — will avoid a recession and grow 1.7 percent in 1990.

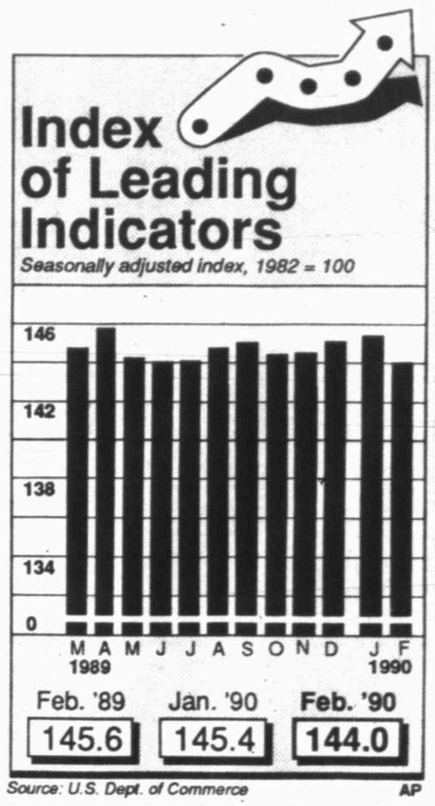

But the survey concluded that the economic outlook "remains the most sluggish since the recession year of 1982." The economy grew 3 percent last year, although it slowed to 1.1 percent in the final quarter.

In addition to building permits, other statistics contributing to the index's decline in February were faster business delivery times, lower stock prices, a decline in plant and equipment orders, a decrease in the price of raw materials, a decline in the backlog of manufacturers' unfilled orders and a drop in an index measuring consumer confidence.

Three of the components were positive, including an increase in orders for consumer goods, a gain in the money supply and a drop in weekly unemployment claims.

One indicator, the length of the average workweek, was unchanged.

The various changes left the index at 144.0 percent of its 1982 base of 100. The index fell 0.6 percent from September through February.

OPEC oil production steady

■ OPEC production was steady but above its self-imposed cap, and experts believe production will go still higher in April, possibly weakening prices.

By Sally Jacobsen

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — OPEC nations held oil production steady in March but remained more than a million barrels a day above their self-imposed supply cap, according to estimates released Tuesday.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries pumped a total of about 23.7 million barrels a day in March, the same as in the previous month, according to the Paris-based International Energy Agency.

United Way project needs new funding

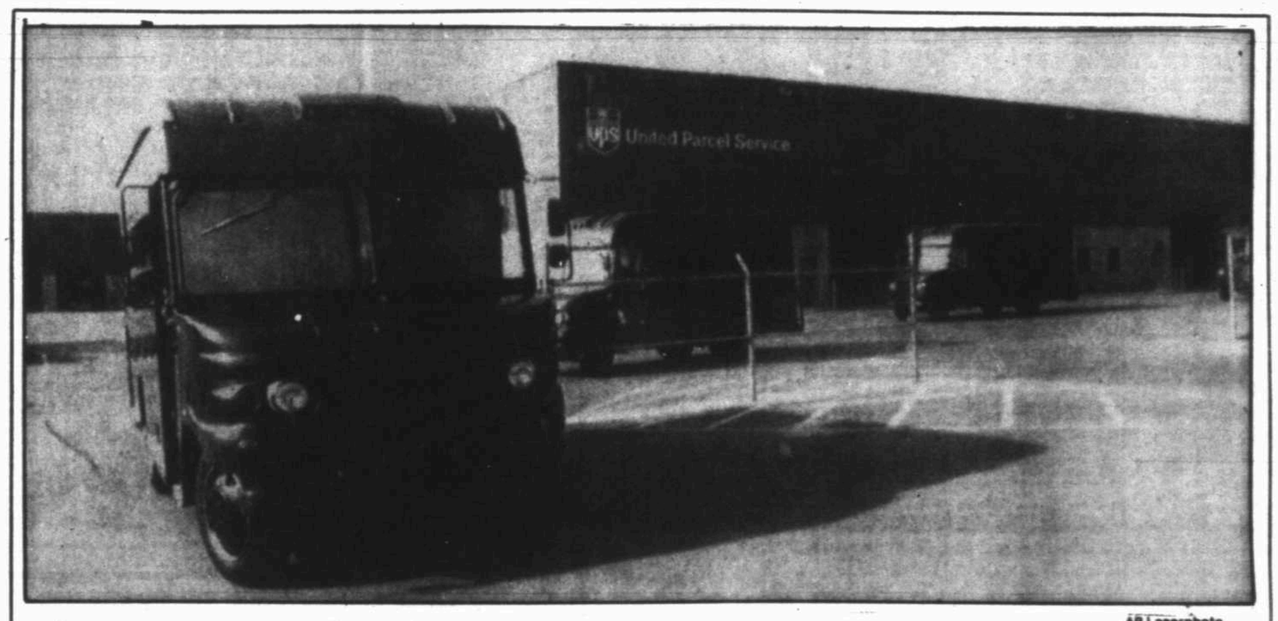

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Project Blueprint, the United Way program aimed at increasing minority participation on boards and committees of United Way programs, is in danger of closing, members of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs were told Monday.

The Rev. Hadley Edwards, community volunteer coordinator for the United Way, said that the program, begun with a grant from the W.K. Kellog Foundation, would lose that funding after this year.

Still, he is optimistic that the Midland program — the most successful of the 23 programs across the U.S. — will find new funding and continue.

UPS tries to outdeliver competition

■ The serenity at UPS headquarters covers up the company's hard push to become the carrier of choice in a business that's suddenly become highly competitive.

By Jill Arabas

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — For a company that claims to run the tightest ship in the shipping business, the place looks pretty loose. There's a duck pond, women pushing strollers and executives in shirt sleeves taking afternoon walks.

But rivals aren't fooled by the serene headquarters of United Parcel Service, the package-delivery giant with the distinctive brown vans.

UPS is pushing hard to make itself the carrier of choice around the world.

In the last decade, the company has substantially increased its fleet of vans and planes and expanded delivery to 180 countries and territories. Now, it's working on advancements like computerized mapping to help drivers figure out the fastest way to travel a route.

ANALYSIS

Market posts broad trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose sharply and broadly Tuesday in moderate trading, boosted by a rebound in the Tokyo market and firm bond prices.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 154.31 million shares, up from 124.36 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 182.88 million shares.

Analysts say the link between the Tokyo and New York markets is not as strong as once believed. They also say most of the trouble on the Japanese exchange is due to domestic concerns, including interest-rate worries and a belief that stocks are overpriced compared to earnings.

MBCE: Involvement urged

(From 1C)

"There is a necessity for Project Blueprint. This is the tool with which we (in the minority community) can make a positive statement to Midland and the U.S., that we can be not only recipients of United Way assistance but volunteers for the United Way," he told the gathering. "This program is gong so well, and has done so much good, I would hate to see it die for a lack of funding."

In other topics discussed at the meeting:

■ Members were urged to participate in the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corp., a community program aimed at rebuilding Midland's East side. Angelina Davis siad there will be a meeting at De Zavala on April 28.

■ Members were introduced to new board member Diedre Tidwell, who comes to Midland from San Antonio and is employed by Mervyn's.

OPEC: Prices could fall

(From 1C)

Sales of OPEC crude oil in March were believed to be lower than production due to apparent excess supply of heavy, sour grades and weaker than expected demand from refiners, the group stated.

Private analysts predicted the cartel would increase output even more this month.

"It seems it will go up in April, maybe to as much as 24 million barrels a day," said Pierre Terzian, editor of the Paris-based newsletter Petrostrategies.

Leading the surge in last month's production were Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates and Nigeria, according to the International Energy Agency's Monthly Oil Market Report. All were estimated to be above the individual quotas the cartel set for each country last year and reaffirmed at a recent meeting in Vienna.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

NASD or AAA designed to help settle disputes

Bill Doyle

Q. I have about 60 stocks with a total value of about $300,000, but no regular broker. In February 1989, I contacted a vice president of a very large brokerage firm who had spoken at our lodge. I asked him to review my investment portfolio. He got the list at my house. The next day, he phoned and told me to sell all my stocks and buy five others.

I stalled him. Since then, all five stocks he recommended have gone down in price. Many of my stocks, which I have held for 25 to 45 years, have gone up. On six occasions, he gave me a lot of hype and pressure to sell all my stocks.

I finally bought 100 shares of one stock and paid for it to get rid of him. I still have not received the stock certificate, even though I asked for it a number of times. Nor have I received a Form 1099 showing the dividends the brokerage firm collected while holding that stock.

I wrote to the firm's president three times and got a letter from a clerk, ignoring my questions. Also, the Securities and Exchange Commission has not responded to three letters of complaint.

I want to start arbitration proceedings against the brokerage VP and his firm. How do I do that?

Doyle

A. The National Association of Securities Dealers as well as all stock and commodity exchanges have arbitration arrangements. Most broker-customer disputes are handled by arbitration panels of the NASD, 1735 K Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20016; the New York Stock Exchange, 11 Wall Street, New York, NY 10005, and the American Stock Exchange, 86 Trinity Place, New York, NY 10006.

You can enter arbitration through NASD or any exchange in which the brokerage holds membership. You can pick the appropriate address in the preceding paragraph and write to the arbitration department there to get the ball rolling.

And, because the brokerage firm is a member of the American Exchange, you can go through the American Arbitration Association. A clause in the American Exchange constitution permits that.

Many observers feel investors get fairer treatment by going the American Arbitration Association route. AAA is an independent nonprofit organization specializing in all kinds of disputes. It is headquartered at 140 West 51st Street, New York, NY 10020, and has 26 regional offices around the country.

Q. What can the brokerage at which I have an account do if I refuse to pay a disputed charge?

A. If you have any cash in the account, the brokerage usually will deduct that charge from your balance. If there is stock in the account, the brokerage might sell it to satisfy its claim.

And the brokerage could take legal action against you.

UPS: Trying to stay first

(From 1C)

Such improvements are considered vital in a business that's become fiercely competitive in recent years. UPS, Federal Express Corp. and overseas firms like TNT Ltd. and DHL Worldwide Express all have been expanding and improving operations to capture a bigger share of the worldwide air delivery industry.

UPS still leads the pack, with 230,000 employees and 2.8 billion deliveries last year for a record $12.4 billion in revenues — about $7 billion more than its nearest rival, Federal Express.

The company that proclaims in advertisements "We run the tightest ship in the shipping business" started as a messenger service in Seattle in 1907, then quickly got into the package business by making deliveries for department stores to their customers.

The next 70 years were spent expanding ground service to all corners of the country, a task it essentially accomplished in 1978. Air delivery was started on a limited basis in 1929, but was terminated a few years later in the midst of the Depression. UPS restarted it in 1953 and expanded it nationwide in 1980.

Going head to head with the U.S. Postal Service, UPS also strove to be the fastest and least expensive carrier, hiring engineers to poke around and find places to save a dime here or a moment there.

West Texas' Best Country

April, 1990

GREETINGS!

As a country music listener, we are sure you will be interested in knowing about some recent changes we have made at KGEE FM. In response to comments we have solicited from hundreds of listeners, KGEE-100 is playing:

1. Absolutely The Most Music Ever
2. A Lot More Variety
3. Your Favorite Country Oldies
4. At Least 50 Minutes of Music Every Hour

And Fewer Commercials. That's something else you asked for.

Listen to KGEE-100 at 99.9 FM. We believe you will hear the difference. But you be the judge. Drop us a note with your comments and suggestions, and because we care what you think, we will enter your name in a drawing for one of several $50 Cash Prizes. We will notify winners by mail no later than May 31, 1990.

Thanks for taking the time to make West Texas Best Country better than ever.

Sincerely,

Tommy R. Vascocu

GIRLS' GOLF — MHS, Lee host district round at Ranchland Hills Country Club, all day.

Rose off menu

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete Rose and Mike Tyson — you're just chopped liver now. Stage Deli patrons, saying they're among 10 celebrities who no longer cut the mustard, have voted their sandwiches off the Manhattan eatery's menu.

Rose

Other lesser-known celebrities had the same bad taste in their mouths when the results were announced Tuesday. Catcher Gary Carter was released by the New York Mets last year; stage voters turned him loose as well.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, fresh off his first victory as a senior, hit a spectator with a golf ball Tuesday during his first practice round at The Masters.

Nicklaus

Nicklaus, the six-time Masters champion known as "The Golden Bear," hooked his second shot on the 555-yard par 5 second hole and the ball hit the spectator just below the right eye.

Nicklaus came over and apologized, patting the man on the back. The two talked shortley before Nicklaus continued his round.

Coming Thursday

We invite you to take a Front Row Seat each Thursday with a new weekly sports feature on local and Permian Basin athletes and other sports figures.

Tomorrow's first Front Row Seat will take a look at former Midland Lee baseball star Randy Velarde and his rise with the New York Yankees.

As an added bonus on Saturday, there will be a look at former Midland High baseball player Mike Stanton, who is hoping to become the relief ace of the Atlanta Braves.

Masters forecast

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A 50 percent chance of showers Friday clouds the long-range weather forecast for the Masters at the Augusta National Golf Club.

The forecast calls for partly cloudy skies Thursday and Saturday, with sunny weather for the final round Sunday.

Champs, but for how long?

■ Off-court allegations continue to haunt Jerry Tarkanian's program in spite of record-breaking national championship.

Associated Press

DENVER — UNLV had been national champions for less than an hour when the cynical questions began.

How long will they let Tark keep it? Will the "V" stand for vacated? Does Duke get its first title as a promoted runner-up?

You have to admit there were flashbacks to the 1981 meeting between Al Davis and Pete Rozelle when Tarkanian accepted the championship trophy from Jim Delany, chairman of the NCAA tournament committee.

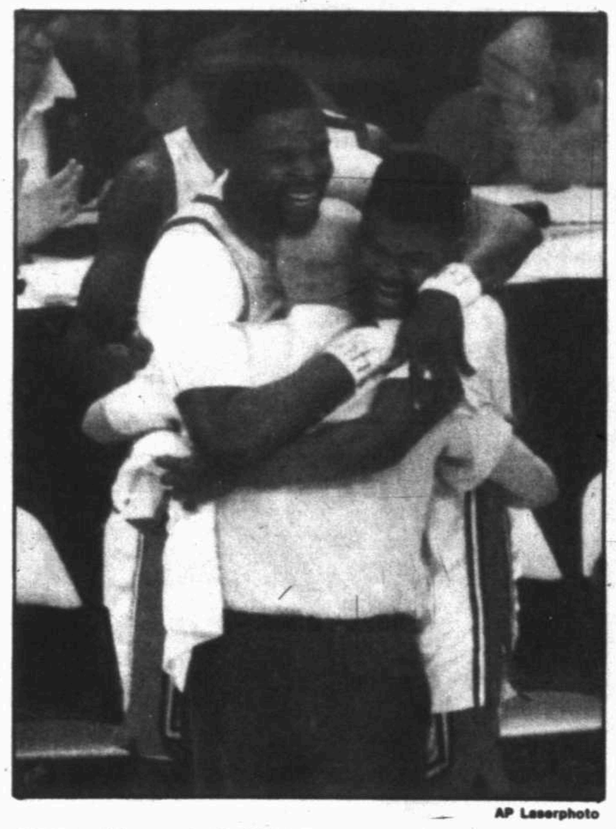

The moment snapped everyone back to reality after watching what has to be one of the top performances in a championship game.

The Runnin' Rebels' 103-73 victory over Duke on Monday set offensive records and a defensive standard. From now on, all will be measured against what UNLV did to the Blue Devils in extending the worst postseason record — no titles in eight trips to the Final Four.

"I don't think you people realize what you saw," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said during his five-minute glowing tribute to UNLV's defensive effort. "I think it's the best a team has played against me as a coach. They're great. That was great defense."

It was the first 100-point effort in a championship game and it was the largest margin of victory in a title game. The Runnin' Rebels had a record 16 steals; they set a tournament

■ Rebel fans break into celebratory mayhem after Vegas brings home the national title.

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Thousands of people lined downtown's Glitter Gulch and the glitzy Las Vegas Strip Tuesday evening to welcome home college basketball's new national champions, the UNLV Runnin' Rebels.

Crowds in the downtown area brought the parade to a stop as they crushed around the four convertibles carrying the Rebel players.

Names of UNLV Runnin' Rebel players flickered across Strip marquees and residents of this city of 750,000 remained in a party mode following Monday night's 103-73 victory over Duke for the national title.

The 18,500-seat Thomas & Mack Center, where the Rebels play, was packed for a welcome-home ceremony following the parade.

The Rebels arrived on a charter flight shortly after 3 p.m. EDT at a restricted area of McCarran International Airport. The arrival was closed to the public because several thousand people mobbed the UNLV players on their arrival home following the West Regional last month.

■ Embroiled coach's agent says that Valvano appears to have accepted the fact that he will not return next year to N.C. State.

Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — Given no chance of keeping his job, basketball coach Jim Valvano was trying to work out a financial settlement to end his career at North Carolina State, his lawyer said Tuesday.

Valvano

"It appears that the option of him staying on as coach is no longer available," attorney Woody Webb said.

Asked if Valvano had given up the fight for his job, Webb said: "I don't know that it's fair to say that we've given up. It's been made abundantly clear to us that they are not going to entertain that idea. But there are people in the Wolfpack Club and elsewhere who are continuing to work for Jim."

Webb said a court fight would be "the only way I know of" to keep Valvano's job, but he also noted that the coach would "rather be on the basketball court than in court."

Valvano was in his office but would not take telephone calls from reporters, his secretary, Beverly Sparks said.

Webb said his client appeared to accept the fact that he wouldn't be coaching the Wolfpack next season.

"He just said, 'If it's impossible for me to stay on here, then I guess we'll have to focus on a financial settlement,' " Webb said. "He's talking with his financial people to come up with figures that might be agreeable."

Asked whether N.C. State had increased a $100,000 offer made several weeks ago, Webb said, "They have not, in essence, but they have indicated a softening of posture."

Still a problem for State is a $500,000 buyout clause the school must pay Valvano if he is fired without cause. The contract also calls for Valvano to pay the school $500,000 if he leaves to take another Division I or professional coaching job.

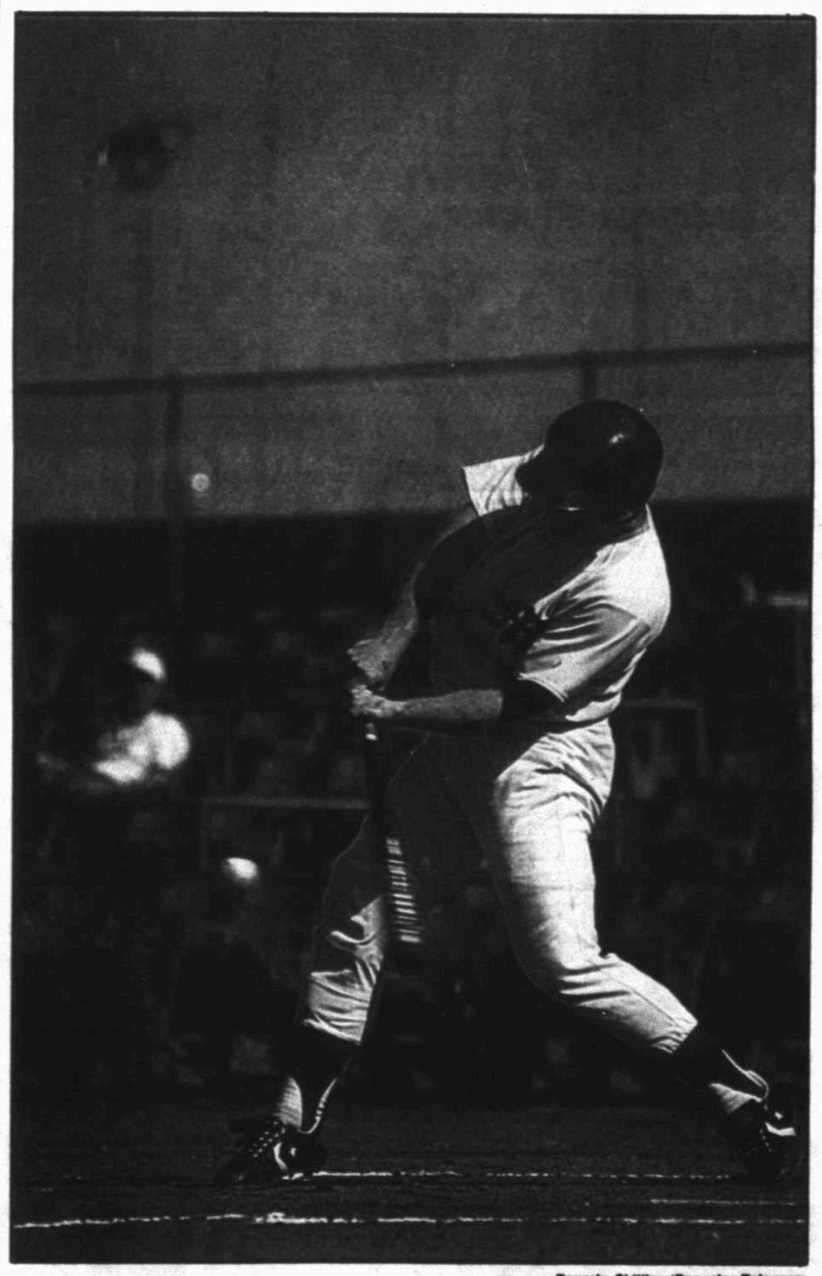

Valvano, who has coached the Wolfpack the last 10 years, led North Carolina State to a stunning victory over heavily favored Houston in the 1983 NCAA championship.

Last week, the N.C. State Board of Trustees voted 9-3 to ask its attorneys to find a way to remove Valvano. On Monday, the university was given permission by the UNC board of governors to sue Valvano for breach of contract, if necessary.

Webb, however, didn't think the school would take that route.

"It is less likely than last night that they'll sue, at least that's the way I read it," he said.

Webb said he still hasn't been successful in getting the board to meet with Valvano.

Midland High's Will Sowders takes a cut at a fastball during Tuesday action at Angels Stadium; Sowders later delivered an RBI triple for the Bulldogs in their 6-0 win.

Salazar hurls another gem for Midland High

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

It didn't matter that Midland High pitcher Gabriel Salazar had thrown seven innings Saturday against Odessa High.

Salazar simply told Bulldog coach Tim Whalen he was ready to go Tuesday, and promptly went out and tossed a complete-game shutout as MHS thrashed Abilene High 5-0 at Angels Stadium.

With the win, MHS kept abreast of Abilene Cooper in the District 4-5A baseball standings. The Bulldogs are now 12-7 overall and 4-2 in 4-5A play, while Cooper moved to a 4-2 loop record with its 4-0 defeat of Midland Lee Tuesday in Abilene.

"Gabe said he felt good and was ready to throw today, and we really wanted to change our rotation around. I have complete confidence in both of our starters (James Madrid also starts for the 'Dogs), but we wanted to give the competition a different look in the second half of district play," Whalen reasoned.

And despite the fact that Salazar (7-3) allowed 12 Eagle runners on the bases by giving up seven hits and issuing six walks, he preserved the shutout by fanning 10 AHS batsmen. He was especially effective when the situation was tight, such as the Eagle sixth.

AHS had one out and the bases loaded, but Salazar quickly gathered his wits to strike out Alex Zertuche and Steven Ezzell. Salazar has not allowed a run in the past 14 innings he has pitched.

When Salazar was not shutting down AHS threats, the Bulldog defense was taking the initiative. In the first inning, Barry Reese hit what appeared to be a single just past second base. But Scott Melzer, MHS second baseman, robbed Reese of the hit by

A's can't afford to stand pat

Associated Press

The biggest changes in baseball for 1990 start right at the top with more probably on the way.

"A lot of teams were hesitant to make moves until the contract was settled," Atlanta general manager Bobby Cox said. "I think you'll see a lot of things happen as clubs find holes once the season starts."

The defending World Series champion Oakland A's didn't even have to wait that long.

Gone are DH Dave Parker (Milwaukee), second baseman Tony Phillips (Detroit) and right-hander Storm Davis (Kansas City).

All took their Series rings and signed big free-agent contracts. In fact, the theme of the winter was the way free agents scurried around the country like tokens on a Monopoly board.

Parker, 39, led the A's with 97 RBIs and was a force in the clubhouse, too. He was also a dangerous left-handed bat in a predominantly right-handed lineup.

"These were people we didn't want to lose but we felt it was more important to keep Rickey Henderson and we also had to negotiate a new contract with Dave Stewart and others down the road," Oakland GM Sandy Alderson said. "I think we have the people to replace those who left."

Ken Phelps, who the A's acquired late last season from the New York Yankees, will move in at the DH spot and a healthy Scott Sanderson can win 15 games.

Davis was 19-7 for the A's in 1989 and 35-14 overall the last two years.

He signed as a free agent with Kansas City, a team that figures to challenge Oakland along with California in the talent-laden American League West.

"I had to do what I thought was right for my family," Davis said. "In 15 or 20 years, that's what will be important — not where I pitched."

A lot of players apparently agreed with that thinking — even another Davis.

Mark Davis, the National League Cy Young winner, left the San Diego Padres to sign a four-year, $13 million deal with Kansas City.

"I had offers that were equal or higher from a couple of other clubs," Davis said. "But I wanted to pitch where I was comfortable and my family was happy."

His arrival should make the Royals' starters smile, too.

Last season, Davis saved 44 games in 48 opportunities and had a 1.85 ERA. He only allowed 13 of 75 inherited runners to score.

The Royals already had a solid bullpen as Steve Farr and Jeff Montgomery combined for 36 saves in 46 opportunities.

Davis can compare notes with Bret Saberhagen, who won the AL Cy Young Award with a 23-6 record.

Not to be outdone, the Angels went out and signed free agent pitcher Mark Langston for $16 over five years.

Langston was the premier pitcher in the free-agent pool.

The left-hander has led the AL in strikeouts three times and held opponents to a .218 average in 176 2-3 innings

There's hope for the Yanks — Winfield breaks slump

Associated Press

On a day when ex-teammate Willie Randolph punished the Yankees with four hits and they were four runs behind before they came to bat, all was not bleak for the New Yorkers.

Dave Winfield finally got a hit.

The Yankees absorbed a 6-1 exhibition pounding from the Los Angeles Dodgers at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Tuesday, managing just six hits against John Wetteland, Jeff Bittinger and Jim Gott. One of them was a seventh-inning single by Winfield, who missed all of last season because of back surgery and was 0-for-17 so far this spring.

Winfield celebrated the occasion by tipping his cap and bowing as the crowd cheered.

"It was a pretty long drought, about 500 days between hits," he said. "I almost forgot what it was like to get one. I'm sure I'll get a few more during the season."

The Dodgers jumped loser Chuck Cary for four runs in the first inning, the last three on a bases loaded double by Jeff Hamilton. Randolph contributed two doubles and two singles to the Los Angeles attack.

Along with the games, there was one off-the-field moves. Pittsburgh traded outfielder Billy Hatcher to Cincinnati for pitcher Mike Roesler and infielder Jeff Richardson.

Pirates 11, Rangers 5

At Bradenton, Fla., Jeff King and Jay Bell each homered and had three hits in Pittsburgh's victory over Texas. Andy Van Slyke added a three-run pinch homer for the Pirates.

Ranger starter Bobby Witt pitched five innings and gave up 10 runs and 12 hits.

Astros 8, Reds 6

At Kissimmee, Fla., Houston rallied for three runs in the eighth to overtake Cincinnati. Harry Spilman's two-run double delivered the winning runs.

The same two teams will open the regular season in Houston next Monday.

Cubs 11, Giants 7

Mark Grace hit for the cycle, drove in four runs and homered during a six-run rally in the eighth inning as Chicago beat San Francisco.

Grace went 4-for-4, including a three-run homer. Kevin Mitchell hit three doubles and drove in three runs for the Giants and teammate Will Clark went 2-for-4 with a two-run homer.

Phillies 11, Blue Jays 8

Steve Lake drove in four runs and Charlie Hayes drove in three as Philadelphia outhit Toronto 16-12 and beat the Blue Jays.

Glenallen Hill hit two homers and drove in five runs for Toronto. Kelly Gruber also homered for the Blue Jays.

White Sox 5, Cardinals 5

At St. Petersburg, Fla., Carlton Fisk hit a home run and a triple that deflected off a passing dove as Chicago and St. Louis played to a 10-inning tie.

Fisk tagged Greg Mathews for his homer in second inning and then in the fourth, he lined a hit to right that bounced off the bird and rolled to the wall for an RBI-triple.

Padres 11, Angels 3

Jerald Clark homered and had three hits as San Diego pounded California for its sixth straight.

The win gave the Padres an 8-2 record this spring, the best in baseball.

Twins 5, Red Sox 4

At Winter Haven, Fla., Derek Parks, farmed out a day earlier, and Randy Bush hit home runs helping Minnesota past Boston. Bush also contributed an RBI-double and Parks drove in another run with a ground out.

Orioles 1, Braves 0

At Miami, Jay Tibbs pitched four scoreless innings as Baltimore shut out Atlanta in a game halted by rain after six innings. Tibbs, who is recovering from shoulder surgery and had not been expected to pitch until June, now has seven scoreless innings this spring.

The game attracted just 691 fans.

Mets 12, Expos 9

Tom O'Malley's two-run double broke a ninth-inning tie and keyed a five-run burst, New York over Montreal.

Mets starter Ron Darling hit a three-run homer in the second as New York took a 5-0 lead.

BASEBALL: What's new

for Montreal last season.

The Expos traded three pitchers to Seattle last May in an attempt to win it all. But Langston, who was born in Sa Diego, was never really comfortable pitching in a place where Patrick Roy's shutouts are more important than his.

Langston wasn't the only one unhappy with life with the Expos.

Pitchers Pascual Perez (New York Yankees) and Bryn Smith (St. Louis) and outfielder Hubie Brooks (Los Angeles) also signed big free-agent deals.

With Montreal no longer a factor, the NL East should end up in a two-team race between the New York Mets and Chicago Cubs.

While the defending division champion Cubs made few key changes, the Mets were busy adjusting their roster and attitude.

The Mets traded disgruntled center fielder Juan Samuel to Los Angeles for first baseman Mike Marshall and reliever Alejandro Pena.

Mets manager Davey Johnson said Marshall will start the season at first base after winning the battle with Dave Magadan.

The Mets are starting a new era in 1990 after saying goodbye to aging and injury-plagued Gary Carter and Keith Hernandez.

"It's like night and day from the end of the season to the first day here (spring training)," pitcher Frank Viola said. "It's just incredible. We went from having Keith and Gary and Don Aase, guys in their upper 30s, and all of a sudden Bobby Ojeda is the senior member of the team at 32."

The Mets also traded reliever Randy Myers to Cincinnati for John Franco in an exchange of premier left-handed relievers.

The San Diego Padres moved to the spot of No. 1 contender in the NL West as Manager-GM Jack McKeon went on a shopping spree at the winter meetings.

In a 24-hour span, McKeon acquired outfielder Joe Carter from Cleveland and signed free agents Craig Lefferts and Fred Lynn.

Lefferts saved 20 games in 24 opportunities with San Francisco and will take Davis' place as the Padres' stopper.

Carter is an impact player and was the big prize among everyday players. In the last four years at Cleveland, he averaged 31 home runs and 108 RBIs.

After trading for Carter, the Padres signed him to a three-year deal for $9.2 million.

To help their chances at repeating as NL champs, the Giants signed free agent right fielder Kevin Bass. Last season, Bass hit .300 for Houston and is a lifetime .275 hitter who can steal a base.

The Giants also decided to give Gary Carter a chance, despite signs he can no longer hit. Hernandez signed a free-agent deal with Cleveland.

Another great hitter of the last 15 years, Jim Rice, wasn't as lucky.

The Boston Red Sox did not offer the 16-year veteran a contract and nobody else was interested, either. He ended his Boston career with 382 home runs and 1,451 RBIs.

Baseball's newest faces in the dugout are actually quite familiar.

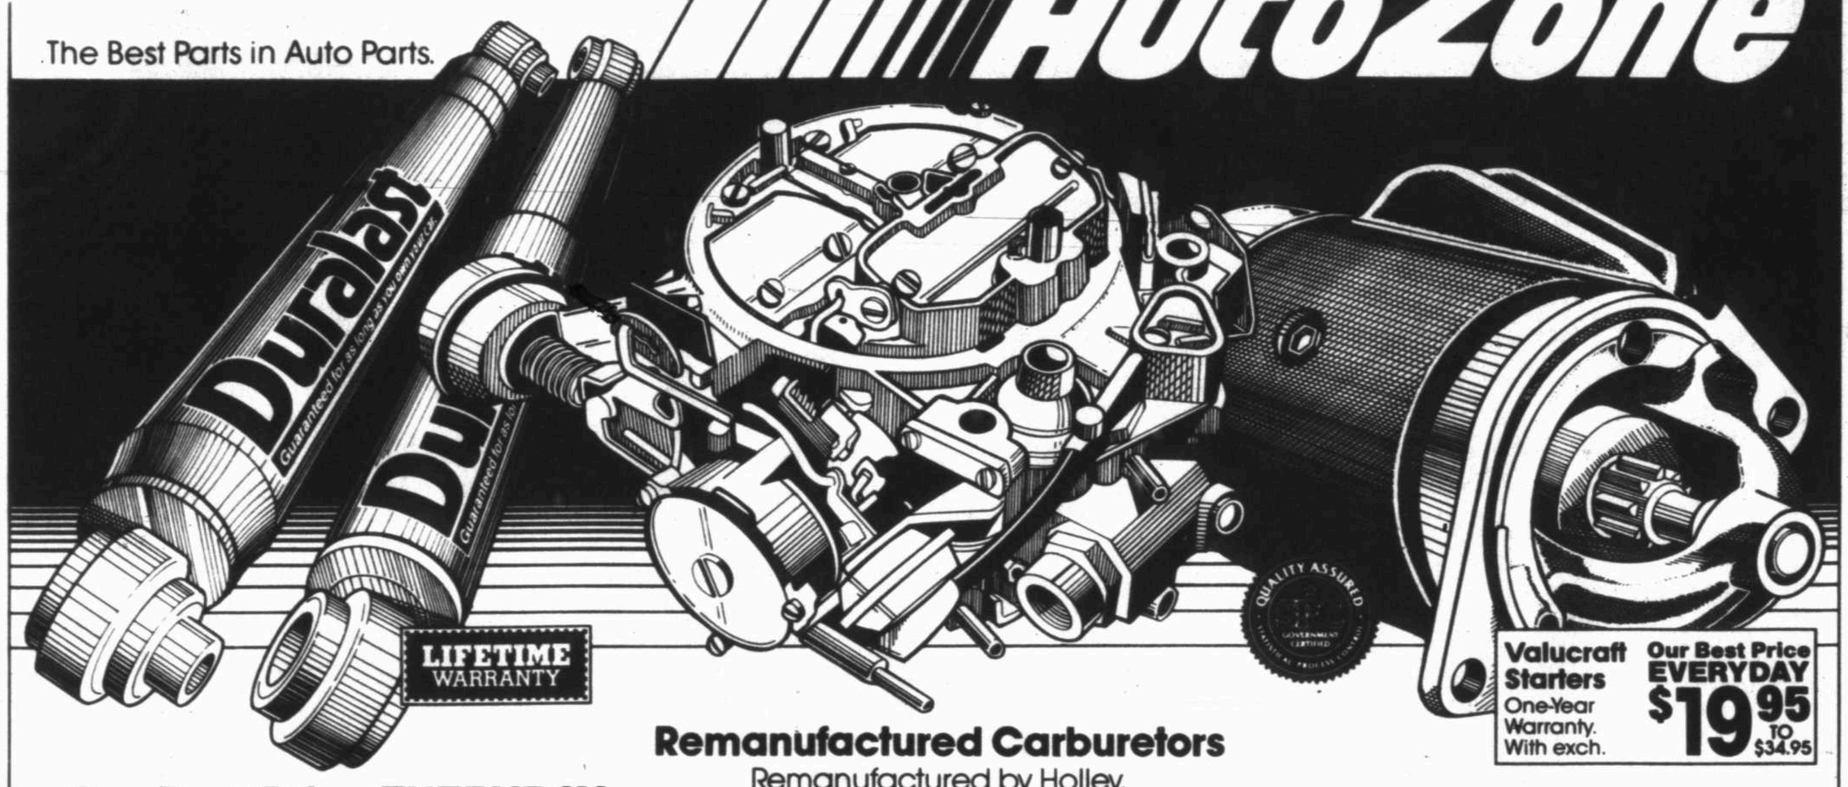

John McNamara is the new manager in Cleveland and Lou Piniella left George Stienbrenner's baseball committee to become the Reds' skipper.

In 1990, there will be a lot more baseball to see.

For the first time, ESPN will televise games starting with a tripleheader on opening day, April 9. And, don't look for the "Game of the Week" on NBC. CBS has the contract now, even if the network doesn't have a No. 1 announcer.

NBA ROUNDUP

T'wolves stun Spurs

Rockets blown out; Pistons beat up on Celtics

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Tod Murphy broke an 88-88 tie, scoring Minnesota's final four points, and San Antonio missed two short shots in the final seconds as the Timberwolves upset the Spurs 92-90 Tuesday night.

Murphy's jumper with 2:04 left gave Minnesota a 90-88 lead. He added two foul shots with 30 seconds to play.

David Robinson, who finished with 18 points, scored with 21 seconds remaining for San Antonio, and when Minnesota's Tony Campbell turned the ball over, the Spurs had a chance to tie the game.

But Willie Anderson's 10-foot jumper was short. Terry Cummings rebounded the air ball and missed a 3-foot follow as time expired.

Campbell had 27 points and Tyrone Corbin 17 for Minnesota, which won for the third time in its last five road games, while Jerome "Pooh" Richardson had 16 points and a season-high 15 assists. Campbell, Corbin and Richardson played the entire 48 minutes.

Anderson led San Antonio with 24 points, while Cummings had 17.

Campbell's 17 first-half points helped Minnesota take a 52-38 lead at intermission. The Timberwolves went on a 16-2 run midway through the first period to open up a 10-point bulge.

The Spurs used a 10-2 surge at the start of the third quarter to get back in the game.

Murphy finished with 12 points for the Timberwolves.

"The first half, we played great," Minnesota coach Bill Musselman said. "It was the best executed half we played all year. It was a fantastic game. We beat a great basketball team."

San Antonio outshot Minnesota from the field, 52 percent to 48 percent, and outrebounded the Timberwolves 42-31.

But the Spurs committed 21 turnovers, including nine in the final period, and were only 17 of the 28 from the free-throw line.

"This has to be one of the biggest games ever," Richardson said. "We played very well, especially in the first half, and we never let them get untracked."

Spurs coach Larry Brown moaned about his team's lapses on offense.

"Nine turnovers in the fourth quarter without getting a shot really kills you," he said. "They used the clock very well and you've got to give them credit. When they had to make the big plays, they did."

The Spurs, vying with Phoenix for the fourth spot in the Western Conference playoff race, had defeated the Timberwolves in each of four previous meetings.

Knicks 106, Cavaliers 97

NEW YORK — Gerald Wilkins reached the 20-point level for the fourth consecutive game by scoring 10 of his 25 points in the pivotal third quarter, and New York took only its second victory in 11 games.

Patrick Ewing had 24 points and 11 rebounds and Newman 18 points for the Knicks. John Williams scored 26 points and Larry Nance added 18 for the Cavaliers.

It was the first time since Jan. 13 that the Knicks won a game in which Ewing was not the leading scorer.

76ers 133, Rockets 112

PHILADELPHIA — Charles Barkley scored 26 points, including 14 in the third period, as high-scoring Philadelphia won its eighth straight game overall and 23rd straight at home against Houston.

Pistons 93, Celtics 82

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Isiah Thomas scored six of his 24 points during a second-quarter surge and Detroit controlled the backboards.

Bulls 109, Pacers 102

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored 29 points and Scottie Pippen added 21 as Chicago won its fifth straight game.

The victory was the Bulls' 11th in their last 13 games and seventh straight over the Pacers at Chicago Stadium.

Warriors 127, Magic 126

ORLANDO, Fla. — Orlando's 20-point fourth-quarter comeback fell agonizingly short when Rod Higgins made a free throw with 10 seconds remaining to give Golden State the win.

ABILENE — The Midland Lee Rebels fell out of second place in District 4-5A baseball with a 4-0 loss to Abilene Cooper.

Lee, now 3-3 in league play, entered the game tied with the Cooper and Midland High for second place. But the Rebels were shutout in their bid to overtake front-running Odessa Permian, which downed San Angelo 14-1 Tuesday.

Jimmy Patton started the game for the Rebels and tossed two perfect innings. But after having to battle a bout of the flu for the past two days, Patton was relieved by Chris Kosh, who picked up the loss to go 1-1.

The Rebels return home for a Saturday game against Midland High at 2 p.m. at the Lee field.

UNLV: Still fighting with NCAA

scoring mark with 571 points in six games; and the 30-point margin of victory was their third such blowout of the tournament.

The Final Four games provided a sharp contrast to the first four rounds, where 23 games were decided by three points or less.

The closest game this weekend was nine points and that was UNLV's 90-81 semifinal win over Georgia Tech. It was the second half of that game which began UNLV's 60 minutes of defense.

The Runnin' Rebels trailed Georgia Tech by seven and Tarkanian was upset with the defensive intensity.

Whatever he said at halftime did the trick because in the next 60 minutes, UNLV held the opposition to 40 percent field-goal shooting (36 for 90) and forced 30 turnovers.

"We had a period in the second half against Duke where our defense couldn't be any better," Tarkanian said. "This was one of those games you dream about."

Could it soon become a nightmare for Tarkanian?

The New York Times reported Tuesday that the coach's troubles with the NCAA investigators may not be over and that Tark and his program may face additional sanctions in connection with infractions dating back to 1977.

Jim Marchiony, a spokesman for the NCAA, said reports that the association would not pursue the 1977 matter were inaccurate. "The NCAA has made no such agreement," Marchiony told the Times.

Thirteen years ago, the NCAA committee on infractions placed UNLV's basketball program on probation for two years and ordered the suspension of Tarkanian. The coach won an injunction preventing the suspension and halting the NCAA from taking further actions against him.

Two years ago, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the injunction against the NCAA, ruling that as a private organization it was not bound by due process and ordering injunctions against it vacated. That order was signed last week by a Nevada District Court judge with reports that the settlement included having the coach pay all court costs in exchange for the charges being dropped.

That was only part of a troubled season for UNLV. Eight players were suspended one game each for failing to pay incidental hotel bills from last season. The NCAA is currently investigating possible violations against the program from the recruiting of New York schoolboy legend Lloyd Daniels. NCAA investigators have made at least 10 visits to the campus by The Strip this season alone.

Augusta welcomes back Scott Hoch

Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Scott Hoch, the man who blew the 1989 Masters by missing a two-foot putt, happily sees an end to his year-long role as the Goat of Augusta.

Hoch said he's played the part quite long enough.

"After this week, it'll be over," he said Tuesday after a practice session for the 54th Masters. "Then somebody else will be the goat for a year."

Just as he has for a year, Hoch patiently replayed the little putt that cost him a Masters green jacket and placed him, instead, on that woeful list of those who might have been.

There were several others who had their chances in the rain and gloom and near-darkness of that Sunday a year ago.

But the memory of their misses have been wiped away by Hoch's more dramatic misfortune on the first playoff hole.

"All those superstars out there on the back nine screwed up and lost the tournament before I did," Hoch recalled. I took a lot of the goat off of Greg Norman. And Mike Reid, he had the tournament. All he had to do was finish it. And Seve Ballesteros and Ben Crenshaw, they all lost it before I did."

Was it then that he missed it, when he backed away? Was it nerves, pressure that made him take another look?

Not at all, Hoch said.

"I would have been choking it I'd gone ahead and hit it," he said. "I went to stand over that putt and I thought, 'hey, I don't even know how I want to hit this putt."

Girls tee off at Ranchland

Staff Report

Midland will be the host city for the third round of the District 4-5A girls golf tournament, which begins at 8:15 this morning at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Going into the third round, San Angelo holds a 10 stroke edge over Abilene Cooper, as the Lady Bobcats have amassed a 712 team total in the opening two rounds.

Midland High's Jenny Hyde holds a three stroke advantage in the medalist standings, posting a 161 to the 164 of second place Lisa Balsch from San Angelo. San Angelo's Danya Huling is in third place with a 171.

The final round of the tour is set for Aprill 11 at the Odessa Country Club.

Team Standings: 1. San Angelo, 712; 2. Abilene Cooper 1, 722; 3. Midland High 1, 764; 4. Odessa Permian 1, 785; 5. Midland Lee 1, 795; Abilene High 1, 815; 7. Abilene Cooper 2, 884.

Realtor makes pitch to move Rangers to Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — A real estate broker has proposed a new home for the Texas Rangers in west Dallas as part of a complex that also might feature football, basketball, horse racing and auto racing, a newspaper reported Tuesday.

But Arlington officials say the proposal is not a serious attempt to lure the Rangers away from their city.

Don Shackelford of Arlington said Prime Sports Partners Ltd. plans to build a sports complex on 1,017 acres about 10 miles east of Arlington Stadium, the Rangers current home.

"We're offering a sports complex for the Metroplex," Shackelford told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram Monday. "It's not baseball; it's not anything. It's just a sports complex."

The site, which is just east of Loop 12 and Interstate 30, is among the highest spots in Dallas County. It's about seven miles west of downtown Dallas and about five miles south of Texas Stadium, where the Dallas Cowboys play in suburban Irving.

Arlington Mayor Richard Greene, who has led an effort to keep the Rangers in Arlington, dismissed Shackelford's announcement as "a real estate speculator who is hyping his property."

Ted Willis, president of the Arlington Chamber of Commerce, called it "a joke."

"I would think the Rangers would be more interested in Florida swamp land than this deal. It's got enormous costs in land development because of the topography. It's going to require a commitment by the state to build freeway interchanges. It's not in an established entertainment district; it's in an industrial district."

Rangers owners have said Arlington Stadium is inadequate and have been listening to alternatives.

The west Dallas site is the third to be proposed for a new stadium. Several others in Arlington, Dallas, Irving and Plano also have been mentioned.

The Dallas City Council on Wednesday will review a 93-acre site in downtown Dallas.

Gretzky's bad back will keep him sidelined for up to two days

Associated Press

NHL Playoffs

A bad back will keep Wayne Gretzky, the backbone of the Los Angeles Kings, out of the first two games of the NHL playoffs.

Gretzky, the NHL's leading scorer for the eighth time, suffered spasms and a hyperextension of the back March 22, when he was checked hard by Alan Kerr of the New York Islanders. He hasn't played since and will miss the two games at Calgary against the defending Stanley Cup champions.

"Wayne will remain in Los Angeles to continue daily treatments on his back," according to team physician Dr. Steve Lombardo. "A decision of him playing on Sunday (when the best-of-seven series with Calgary switches to Los Angeles) will be based on improvements made over the next three days."

It will be the first time in Gretzky's 11-year NHL career that he will miss a playoff game.

The absence of Gretzky, who finished the season with 40 goals and 142 points, was no surprise to Coach Tom Webster.

"I have no idea when Wayne will return," Webster said. "We just have to take it day by day."

In addition to Gretzky, the Kings have several other injured players. The list includes forwards John Tonelli, Dave Taylor and Steve Kasper and defensemen Larry Robinson and Tom Laidlaw.

"We do expect to have Robinson back, hopefully Tonelli and Kasper," Webster said.

Without Gretzky, however, the fourth-place Kings could be in trouble against the first-place Flames, who finished the season with 99 points, second-best in the league.

"Gretzky is the best player in the world," Los Angeles goalie Mario Gosselin said. "With him in the lineup, it changes the way the other team plays against you."

In the other Smythe Division series in the Campbell Conference Wednesday night, Edmonton, which Gretzky led to four Stanley Cup championships during the 1980s, entertains Winnipeg.

In the Norris Division, regular-season champion Chicago will be home against Minnesota, and Toronto visits St. Louis.

The Wales Conference playoffs begin Thursday night, with the Boston Bruins, whose 101 points led the league, home against Hartford, and Montreal, last year's losing finalist to Calgary, entertaining Buffalo in the Adams Division.

In the Patrick Division, the New York Rangers, winners of a division title for the first time in 48 years, will open their quest for their first Stanley Cup championship in 50 years at home against the New York Islanders, and the New Jersey Devils will be home against Washington.

The Edmonton-Winnipeg series matches teams who faced each other on the final night of the regular season. The Oilers won that game 4-2 and the season series 5-3.

Edmonton will be playing without All-Star goalie Grant Fuhr. He reinjured his left shoulder last week in a game against Calgary, and will miss the entire postseason.

Schools cash in on tourney

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Now that the NCAA basketball tournament is over, the teams can count their profits.

Arkansas, Duke, Georgia Tech and UNLV made approximately $1.43 million each for advancing to the Final Four.

Teams get approximately $286,000 for each round they play in the NCAA tournament through the national semifinals, NCAA spokesman Jim Marchiony said. There is no further payment for advancing to the championship or winning the tournament.

Connecticut, Loyola Marymount, Minnesota and Texas — the four regional final losers — get approximately $1,144,000 each. Regional semifinalists get $858,000 each, second-round losers $572,000 and first-round losers $286,000

Most conferences have their teams split the money among all the schools in the conference. The five Atlantic Coast Conference teams made 5,148,000, the seven Big 10 teams made $4,004,000 and the six Big East teams made $3,718,000.

Abbott tosses shutout for Angels

Staff Report

MESA, Ariz. — Left-hander Kyle Abbott pitched six scoreless innings, and Dan Wagner had four RBI as the Midland Angels defeated Williamsport 7-0 Tuesday. Midland out-hit Williamsport 15-2 and raised its spring record to 10-5-1 with the win.

Abbott had three strikeouts and walked three batters in six innings work, and pitchers Luis Merjo and Frank DiMichele kept Williamsport hitless over the the final three innings.

Wagner, the Midland right fielder, doubled and singled in four plate appearances. And short stop Kevin Flora also was 2-for-4, scoring twice, knocking in a run and stealing a pair of bases.

Catcher Mike Knapp had a 2-for-2 afternoon.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 4, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The emphasis will be on home, family and travel. Although romance can be unsettling at times, a strong commitment to your relationship will help you overcome some difficult hurdles. Changes related to business this summer will work to your benefit. Be patient. Your personal finances should show improvement by late fall. A winter trip will change your outlook about someone who has played a minor role in your life. An alliance you forge next January has a good chance of becoming permanent.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Craig T. Nelson, musician Muddy Waters, biographer Kitty Kelley, baseball's Gil Hodges.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Look to the future with confidence. Your associates will cooperate with your plans if they know exactly what is expected of them. Be certain your instructions are clearly understood. Success beckons!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take advantage of an opportunity to acquire specialized knowledge. Romantic partner may express a desire for more freedom. Someone from your past resurfaces. Welcome a second chance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Spend more time thinking about your future and the course you might take to make your dreams come true. A phone call will bring good financial news from overseas. Plan a trip.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Squelch a spur-of-the-moment impulse to buy something costly for your home. Wait until it goes on sale. The ability to speak a foreign language helps you unravel a business problem.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your keen intuition should be a terrific help when making important decisions. Discussing business with a friend over lunch should prove rewarding. Watch a tendency to dictate to your grown offspring.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You could become privy to some valuable information today. Be careful who you share it with. A frustrating alliance mercifully comes to an end. A mutual parting of the ways can be amicable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Fighting fire with fire could leave a relationship in ashes; find a less volatile way! You may never discover if something you suspect is true. Pool business ideas to improve the bottom line.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Being too introspective could make you a bore. Listening to music will put you in a better mood. Tonight is not the right time to broach a delicate subject. Keep the conversation casual.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An outsider may ask how you are being treated at work. Even if you do not feel you are getting a fair shake, be non-committal. Confidential dealings are earmarked for success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stick to traditional values and you will do just fine. An agreement can be reached this afternoon; help make it happen. Be candid with someone who loves you. Act on your financial hunches.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Complete pending projects and bring accounts up to date. Family members are supportive; there is a new tranquillity on the domestic scene. Make a point of getting more fresh air and exercise.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Devote more time and energy to creative endeavors. Accepting an associate's challenge will give your self-confidence a boost. Welcome a new ally or partner. An expert's advice gives you insight.

When Trump Coup Tommy played in the club Pro-Am night event, it was open to debate whether he was there as the pro or the amateur. As readers of this column are aware, Tommy blundered his way through bridge, except in one rare instance. When trumps broke badly, Tommy was suddenly transformed into a master of technique.

The evening started well for Tommy. On the first board he played, he reached a normal four spade contract on the auction shown. South's jump to three spades showed a suit good enough to play regardless of support, as well as some extra values, and North's raise to game had nothing to spare, but was clear-cut.

West attacked with the king of hearts and the defenders took their two tricks in the suit. When East persevered with hearts, Tommy ruffed with the ten and West defended superbly, discarding a diamond rather than overruffing.

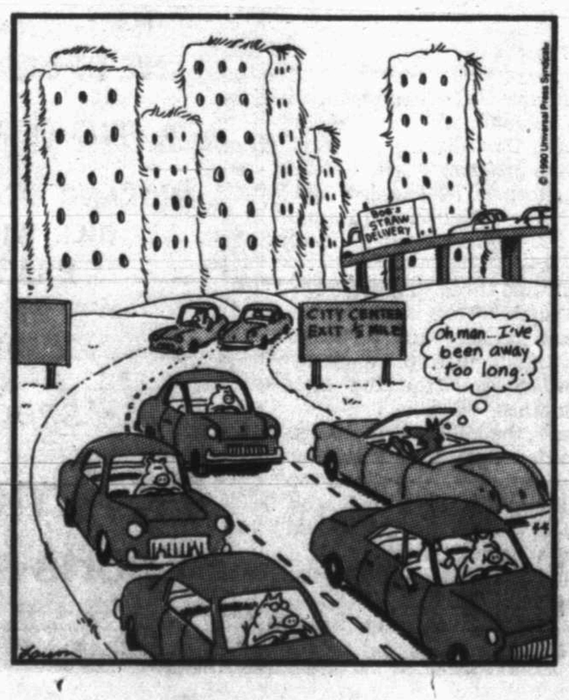

It looked like an uninteresting hand until Tommy cashed the ace of spades and discovered there was a danger of losing two trump tricks. A lesser mortal might have been daunted, but to Tommy the hand had suddenly become child's play.

The ace and king of clubs were cashed, followed by a club ruff. Reading the situation accurately, Tommy cashed the ace and king of diamonds and then ruffed another club, reducing his trump length to one fewer than West's.

When Tommy exited with the queen of diamonds, West was a goner. Down to nothing but trumps, West was forced to ruff and then lead a trump into Tommy's king-jack tenace. As was so often the case with Tommy's opponents, a seemingly sure trump trick had vanished into thin air.

Ivana Trump looks good, 'other woman' doesn't

NEW YORK (AP) — The results of the latest poll are in on the saga of the divorcing billionaire: thumbs up for Ivana Trump and a mixed bag for Donald. The alleged other woman, Marla Maples, gets massacred.

Ivana Trump

Twelve percent of those questioned said they think very favorably of The Donald, the nickname Mrs. Trump favors, and 30 percent said they regard Trump in a mostly favorable light.

Donald Trump

The Gallup Organization conducted the poll of New York City residents for New York Newsday.

But 19 percent of the 1,010 respondents had very unfavorable impressions of Trump, while 17 percent were mostly unfavorable, Newsday reported Tuesday.

Nineteen percent had no opinion. And, in an indication that a self-promoter's work is never done, 3 percent said they'd never heard of Trump, who has his name on apartment houses, casinos, an airline and hotel.

"It seems to show his name is bigger than ever," a Trump spokesman said.

The jilted Mrs. Trump scored very favorable responses from 14 percent and mostly favorable from 34 percent. Twelve percent fell into the "mostly unfavorable" category and 9 percent had very unfavorable feelings. Four percent claimed never to have heard of her. The rest had no opinion.

Maples, alleged Trump mistress, apparently has no reason to emerge from hiding. Her unfavorable rating was a combined 41 percent, versus 14 percent in the favorable category. Thirty-one percent couldn't rate Maples, 14 percent never heard of her.

Maples' agent, Chuck Jones, blamed press coverage. Ivana Trump aides weren't talking.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The judge who ordered Zsa Zsa Gabor to work at a women's shelter as part of her sentence for hitting a policeman wants a detailed accounting of her hours of community service.

"Kindly send me copies of all records kept to document her community service activities as to dates, times and activities performed," Municipal Judge Charles Rubin wrote to the director of the homeless shelter.

In the letter released Monday, Rubin gave Vera Davis, executive director of the Venice-area LIEU-CAP shelter until April 13 to document Miss Gabor's work there.

Ms. Davis filed a three-paragraph letter with the court Friday stating Miss Gabor completed her 120 hours of community service but provided no detail.

Last month, the shelter director said Miss Gabor worked about 50 hours at the center but completed the rest of her sentence through guest appearances and in planning a June 8 celebrity auction at her Bel-Air home to benefit the shelter.

Deputy District Attorney Elden Fox said substituting guest appearances and the auction for hands-on shelter work was unacceptable.

Miss Gabor was convicted Sept. 29 for slapping Officer Paul Kramer during a traffic stop. She also was convicted of driving without a license and having an open container of alcohol in her Rolls-Royce. She was sentenced to four days in jail, but that portion of the sentence is being appealed.

S. Carpenter

HASTINGS, Neb. (AP) — Scott Carpenter, one of America's first astronauts, says the United States needs to embark on a new space mission — to planet Earth.

The astronaut-aquanaut told a Hastings College audience Monday that if the world doesn't take action soon to preserve the forests, air, streams and oceans of "spaceship Earth," life as we know it will not survive.

Carpenter said viewing Earth from the window of his spacecraft in 1962 allowed him to see the grand order of the universe and the "excruciating beauty but extreme fragility" of the planet.

BOSTON (AP) — People who want to change society violently and those with a peaceful approach are worlds apart, says philosopher and author Sissela Bok.

Mrs. Bok was interviewed Monday by public television executive Bill Moyers at the 41st annual meeting of the Council of Foundations.

More than 1,800 philanthropists from around the world are attending the three-day meeting of the organization for more than 1,000 American philanthropies and grant-makers, who want to promote organized philanthropy.

"The greatest difference in the world is not so much the balance between East and West, or the different religions, but within each tradition between those who want to take a violent road to social change and those who want to take a non-violent approach," said Mrs. Bok.

Desserts are always in style

By NATALIE NAUGHTON
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Dessert trends come and go, but desserts in one form or another are never out of style. And what is a fashionable dessert choice to one person may not be to another.

The same goes for dessert cookbooks. A book that one consumer likes may not appeal to another because we all have different tastes.

But, fortunately, there are lots of options when it comes to dessert cookbooks nowadays. The latest crop to come to my attention includes "Manhattan's Dessert Scene" by Rose Reisman (Lymas Publications Ltd.; $12.95), "A Passion for Chocolate" by Maurice and Jean-Jacques Bernachon and Rose Levy Beranbaum (William Morrow and Co. Inc.; $22.95) and "Light Desserts" by Beatrice Ojakangas (Oxmoor House; $19.95).

If you would like to enjoy pies, cakes, pastries and souffles without guilt, "Light Desserts" offers lightened versions of many favorite desserts, as well as imaginative new combinations at 200 calories a serving or less.

The more than 350 recipes in the book were developed for those interested in reducing their intake of calories, sugar, fat, cholesterol and sodium. To achieve these goals, the author uses fresh fruits, decreases the number of egg yolks, replaces whipped cream with whipped non-fat dry milk powder and reduces the sugar content of recipes.

EACH RECIPE is accompanied by a nutritional analysis, which includes the amount of protein, fat, carbohydrate, cholesterol, iron, sodium, calcium and calories.

If calories are the farthest thing from your mind when it is time for dessert, explore the other two volumes mentioned above.

As the name reveals, "Manhattan's Dessert Scene" includes 100 recipes shared by some of New York's top restaurants and chefs.

Author Reisman's goal was to make the recipes accessible to home cooks and bakers, a task the 35-year-old dessert aficionada accomplished by carefully adapting and testing the recipes in her own kitchen.

The book includes creations such as White Chocolate Mousse Layer Cake with Raspberries from the Tavern on the Green, Peach and Cherry Oatmeal Crisp from the Quilted Giraffe, Orange Cream Tart from Lutece, Chocolate Velvet Cake from the Four Seasons, Creme Brulee from Le Cirque, Frozen Praline Souffle with Chocolate Sauce from the Rainbow Room, Five Fruit and Berry Compote from Gotham Bar and Grill, Apple Tart from Aurora and Chocolate and Coffee Truffle Cake from Gindi.

So, even if New York is not on your travel agenda, you can bring a little of the city's dessert fare to your table.

Bernachon chocolates, which are made by hand in Lyon, France, are said to be some of the finest in the world.

Now, in "A Passion for Chocolate," the Bernachon father-and-son team share their treasured chocolate recipes. They have been translated and adapted for the American kitchen by chocolate expert Rose Levy Beranbaum, author of "The Cake Bible," and you will find her notes about the recipes and techniques sprinkled throughout the book.

CNS Graphic

ALTHOUGH MANY of the recipes in this book seem lengthy, complicated and geared for the accomplished rather than novice cook, the ideas sound wonderful.

This volume, filled with a wealth of invaluable chocolate information, should be a welcome addition to a true chocolate devotee's library or for anyone interested in delving into the subject in depth.

APPLE MIX-IN-THE-PAN CAKE

2 cups chopped apple
⅔ cups sugar
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup brewed coffee
3 tablespoons cooking oil
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup chopped walnuts or pecans

Place chopped apple in an ungreased 8-inch square baking pan. Sprinkle with sugar. Let stand 10 minutes.

Combine flour, cinnamon, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Add to apples; toss gently. Combine coffee, oil, egg and vanilla; stir well. Add to apple mixture in pan. Stir gently until well blended. Stir in nuts.

Bake in preheated 350-degree oven 45 minutes or until a wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Let cool on wire rack. Cut into squares to serve. Makes 9 servings.

From "Light Desserts," by Beatrice Ojakangas, Oxmoor House.

ALMOND RICOTTA CHEESECAKE

CRUST:
1 cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 cups flour
9 ounces ground almonds
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
2 egg yolks
FILLING:
3 cups ricotta cheese (1½ pounds)
⅓ cup sugar
4 egg yolks
½ teaspoon almond extract
4 egg whites
Powdered sugar

To make crust, cut butter into small pieces. Place in large mixer bowl. Add sugar and beat until creamy. Add flour, almonds and cinnamon to creamed mixture until mixture becomes crumbly. Add egg yolks. Blend until mixture holds together. Save ⅓ of mixture for topping. Pat remainder onto sides and into bottom of 9-inch springform pan. Refrigerate.

To make filling, beat ricotta cheese and sugar until smooth. Add egg yolks and almond extract to cheese mixture and mix until blended.

Beat egg whites in clean bowl until stiff and fold into cheese mixture. Pour mixture into crust.

Crumble remaining ⅓ of crust mixture on top. Bake in preheated 375-degree oven 50 to 60 minutes or just until tester comes out barely dry. Let pie cool in oven with door open, then cool further on rack. Refrigerate and dust with powdered sugar.

From "Manhattan's Dessert Scene," by Rose Reisman, Lymas Publications Ltd.

CHOCOLATE BROWNIES WITH MOIST AND CHEWY CENTERS

1⅔ (3-ounce) bars (5 ounces total)
6 tablespoons unsalted butter
1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup plus 2 tablespoons superfine sugar
2 extra-large eggs (½ liquid cup)
1 scant cup walnuts, coarsely chopped

Break chocolate into squares; place chocolate and butter in top of double boiler set over very hot water (but no hotter than 160 degrees F). The water must not simmer or touch bottom of double boiler insert.

Stir until chocolate begins to melt. Return pan to low heat if water cools, but be careful that it does not get too hot. (The chocolate and butter may be melted in a microwave oven if stirred every 15 seconds.) Using either method, remove from heat source before fully melted and stir, using residual heat to complete melting. Allow chocolate mixture to cool just until no hotter than lukewarm.

In a small bowl, whisk together flour, baking powder and salt.

Gradually add sugar, eggs and flour mixture to chocolate. Mix until well incorporated. Stir in nuts.

Turn batter into 1 (8-inch) square baking pan, greased and lined with parchment or waxed paper, then greased again and floured. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven 30 to 35 minutes or until a toothpick inserted in center comes out almost clean. The brownies should still be slightly moist in center.

Loosen sides with a small metal spatula and unmold onto a lightly greased cookie sheet. Reinvert onto a lightly greased second cookie sheet. When cool, use a serrated or sharp knife to cut brownies into 2-inch squares. Wrap each brownie in plastic wrap to preserve moisture.

From "A Passion for Chocolate," by Maurice and Jean-Jacques Bernachon, William Morrow and Co. Inc.

KITCHEN HINTS

Sometimes you can't get a flicker.

Here's how to ignite everytime:

1. Warm the alcohol to about 130 F. Even low percentage alcohols, like sherry, can be used.
2. Make sure the food to be flamed is warm. Once alcohol is poured over, ignite.
3. To avoid an overly alcoholic flavor, allow flames to die down completely.

Ice cream ad designs wanted

NEW YORK (AP) — Can you create your own ad for ice cream? Dreyer's Grand Ice Cream-Edy's Grand Ice Cream is looking for amateur commercials for its products.

The company is sponsoring a contest for original television, radio and print ads. One ad will be selected as the grand-prize winner from each of the three categories.

Entries will be judged on creative concept and aesthetic presentation. Commercials for television should be submitted on VHS video tape; radio ads on audio cassette tape.

Grand-prize winners will receive a 15-cubic foot freezer stocked with Dreyer's-Edy's products. First and second prizes will also be awarded. The deadline for entering the contest is April 20. All entries must be accompanied by an official entry form.

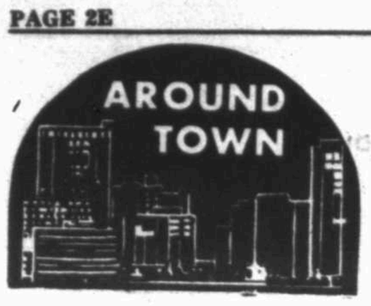

For rules and entry forms, write to: Ad Contest, Dreyer's Grand Ice Cream, Box 1188, Lafayette, Calif. 94549-1188.

DEAR ABBY

For health's sake, wash after flushing

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I teach fifth-grade students. I was told that you once had a column on the importance of washing one's hands after using the bathroom. Please find it and run it again. My colleagues agree it is urgently needed. Thank you. — TACOMA, WASH.

DEAR TACOMA: Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: People come to you with every conceivable problem, so I'm encouraged to present one that is so touchy I've never seen it mentioned in your column.

How do you get people to wash their hands after using the bathroom? In our home, the bathroom is right off the kitchen, and when the water is turned on, it can be heard in the next room. Guests have gone into our bathroom, used the toilet (I can hear it being flushed) and then come out without having turned on the faucet, so I know they haven't washed their hands. Then after supper, they offer to help me dry the dishes! (I always say no thank you.) There's no telling what kind of infection could be transferred to my dishes from those unwashed hands.

Worse yet, where I work there's a cafeteria, and I've seen some cafeteria employees walk out of a bathroom stall and go straight out to serve the people without having washed their hands. Some of them even wipe and polish dishes as they come out of the dishwasher. Can you imagine the disease risks a diner faces when he uses these "freshly washed" dishes?

Abby, please explain how dangerous this is. If you print this, I promise to frame it and hang it above our toilet. Thank you. — PLEASE WASH IN WINONA, MINN.

DEAR PLEASE: I cannot stress too emphatically how important this one specific area of hygiene is to good general health. Children should be taught to wash their hands with soap (preferably a disinfectant type) after using the bathroom, and adults should have made it a lifelong habit.

Last November the Mayo Clinic, the medical mecca of the world, sponsored an "Infection Awareness Week" program. As part of its campaign, prominently displayed along the corridors of the Mayo hospital complex were posters showing a pair of hands under this terse message: "The 10 Most Common Causes of Infection."

To remind doctors, nurses and employees of the Mayo Clinic to wash their hands frequently were other posters bearing this catchy message: "A milligram of handwashing is worth a kilogram of antibiotics."

One final no-no on this subject: One must never use a napkin from the table as a handkerchief and then carelessly allow it to be mixed with other napkins on the table. Quite often a careless waiter or bus person will use soiled napkins to wipe off the table. This is almost as unforgivable as the aforementioned dirty toilet habits. The solution is to use a napkin as a napkin and a handkerchief as a handkerchief, and be certain each is deposited in its proper place.

DEAR ABBY: My parents are disappointed because I do not want to go to college. I want to go to trade school. What should I do? — NOT COLLEGE-MINDED

DEAR NOT COLLEGE-MINDED: Go to a trade school if that's what you want to do. To quote John Gardner:

"An excellent plumber is infinitely more admirable than an incompetent philosopher. The society that scorns excellence in plumbing because plumbing is a humble activity and tolerates shoddiness in philosophy because it is an exalted activity will have neither good plumbing nor good philosophy. Neither its pipes nor its theories will hold water."

CONFIDENTIAL TO CATTY IN OKLAHOMA: Curiosity killed the cat, but satisfaction brought it back.

'Homey' dessert fast, delicious

Associated Press

This homey dessert goes together a lot faster and easier than classic dumplings. Roll up apples, sugar and spice in a tender sour-cream pastry. Serve warm with vanilla or cinnamon ice cream or light cream.

APPLE DUMPLING ROLL-UPS
1 beaten egg
1 8-ounce carton dairy sour cream
2 cups all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
4 cups thinly sliced, peeled cooking apples
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
Lemon Sauce (recipe follows)
2 tablespoons margarine or butter

For dough, in medium mixing bowl combine egg and sour cream. In small mixing bowl stir together flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, baking powder, soda and salt; add to sour cream mixture. Mix well.

On a lightly floured surface roll dough to 12-inch square. Spread apples on top. Combine ¼ cup sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg; sprinkle on top of apples. Carefully roll up dough. Cut into twelve 1-inch-thick slices. Place slices, cut side down, in greased 13x9x2-inch baking pan. Pour Lemon Sauce over. Dot with margarine.

Bake, uncovered, at 350 degrees 35 to 40 minutes or until golden. To serve, spoon warm dumplings and juices into individual dessert dishes. Serve with cream or ice cream, if desired. Makes 12 servings.

LEMON SAUCE: Stir together 1½ cups water, 1¼ cups packed brown sugar, 1 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch and 2 tablespoons lemon juice.

Nutrition information per serving: 341 cal., 3 g pro., 69 g carb., 7 g fat, 31 mg chol., 163 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 10 percent thiamine, 10 percent iron.

White chocolate flavors bread pudding

Associated Press

There isn't a product that causes a bigger stir among dessert lovers than white chocolate, especially white chocolate whipped into homey bread pudding.

DOUBLE CHOCOLATE BREAD PUDDING
2½ cups French bread strips, about 2 inches long
1 cup (5 ounces) white baking pieces with cocoa butter
½ cup light raisins
3 eggs
2 cups milk
⅓ cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup miniature semisweet chocolate pieces

In a greased 12x8½-inch tart pan or shallow 1½-quart oval dish combine bread strips, white baking pieces and raisins.

In a large mixer bowl beat eggs, milk, sugar and vanilla until well mixed. Pour over bread mixture; let stand for 15 minutes so bread will absorb liquid. Bake at 375 degrees for 40 to 45 minutes or until a knife inserted near the center comes out clean. Remove pudding to a wire rack. Sprinkle chocolate pieces on top. Let pudding cool for 30 minutes. Serve warm, spooned into dessert dishes.

Condiments add more than flavor

N.Y. Times News Service

Condiments like soy sauce, ketchup, mustard and barbecue sauce are added to food primarily for flavor. But they can add a lot more than that: unwanted calories, sodium, fat and sugar.

A tablespoon of soy sauce, for example, has more than 1,000 milligrams of sodium, twice as much as the body needs each day and about a third of the maximum that health experts say should not be exceeded in a day.

Determining the calorie, fat or sodium content of condiments is not always easy because few provide nutrition information on their labels.

The Food and Drug Administration requires that nutrition labeling be provided only on products making nutritional claims like "low sodium," "no salt added" or "sugar free."

While most condiments are virtually fat free, there are some notable exceptions, like mayonnaise and mayonnaise-based sauces. Mayonnaise, as any experienced calorie counter knows, is the No. 1 condiment to avoid.

Though it is generally made from healthful unsaturated soybean oil, all its calories come from fat: a single tablespoon has almost 100 calories, as well as more than 70 milligrams of sodium. "Light" versions with about half the calories have been introduced recently, but most also have more sodium — as much as 50 percent more.

Cholesterol-free mayonnaise sounds better, but it is little improvement.

ONE TABLESPOON of regular mayonnaise has only 5 milligrams of cholesterol from egg yolk, which is only a fraction of the 300 milligrams that the American Heart Association says should not be exceeded in a day.

Cholesterol-free mayonnaise does without the egg yolk and the 5 milligrams of cholesterol, but the calorie and fat content remain the same. Several brands of light cholesterol-free mayonnaise do reduce the amount of calories and fat along with the cholesterol.

Horseradish is fat-free and low in calories and sodium. Horseradish sauce is another matter. Because it is made with mayonnaise, it has about the same number of calories and grams of fat as regular mayonnaise.

You can make your own horseradish sauce using plain horseradish and reduced-calorie mayonnaise; the sodium content may be higher, but the fat is cut by half.

Tartar sauce, a favorite with fish and seafood, is also made from a mayonnaise base; it has about 75 percent of the calories of mayonnaise alone and two to three times the sodium. A low-fat version is easy to make, by mixing pickle relish with a reduced-calorie mayonnaise.

But even fat-free condiments can provide 25 calories in a tablespoon. Twenty-five calories may not sound like enough to break a diet until you consider how easy it is to pour a quarter cup or more from a bottle of ketchup or barbecue sauce, adding as many as 100 calories to a meal.

Americans consume millions of bottles of ketchup each year with little thought to the sugar and sodium they contain. A single tablespoon of ketchup has only about 18 calories, but 43 percent of those calories come from sugar, which has no nutritional value.

THAT SAME tablespoon also provides 173 milligrams of sodium. Moreover, one tablespoon of ketchup is a paltry portion. A more typical serving of a quarter-cup or more with french fries or meat increases the tally to 72 calories and 692 milligrams of sodium.

At least one brand of "light" ketchup cuts the calories and sodium in half, and nutrition information is provided on the label.

"You can find ketchup that has no salt in it, and it tastes much better because you really taste the tomato instead of the salt," said Layne Liebman, a registered dietitian and the director of Nutrition Learning Centers, a nutrition counseling service in Cedarhurst, N.Y.

Barbecue sauce is similar to ketchup in nutritional content. And as in ketchup, Ms. Liebman said, the biggest culprits are salt and sugar.

Soy sauce, a standard seasoning in Japanese and Chinese food, is the worst sodium offender among the condiments, and though "light" versions have 30 to 40 percent less sodium, a tablespoon can still have about 600 milligrams of sodium.

Ms. Liebman suggested adding water to a light version, to cut the sodium further, and using only small amounts along with grated fresh ginger to add flavor in cooking.

MUSTARD IS sometimes used on sandwiches in place of mayonnaise to avoid the fat. Anyone concerned about sodium, however, should be aware that some specialty mustards may contain as much as six times the amount of sodium as regular mayonnaise.

But as Ms. Liebman pointed out, "People use less mustard because it has a strong flavor." Some no-salt mustards are hard to distinguish from the real thing, she added.

In the search for more healthful condiments, Ms. Liebman recommended going to health-food stores for specialty products that do not contain salt and sugar.

Although supermarkets are starting to carry some of the more healthful products, she said, they are generally easier to find in specialty shops.

Though the fat, calories and sodium that condiments contribute shouldn't be ignored, neither should they be overemphasized.

Gail Levey, a dietitian in New York, said there are worse dietary evils.

"If I see someone putting ketchup and mustard on their hot dog, I'd be much more worried about the hot dog than the ketchup and mustard," she said.

Athletes should cross-train when pollen season peaks

NEW YORK (AP) — The pollen season is upon us, and so is the urge to be outdoors. But nature and allergic athletes don't mix well.

Activities that involve prolonged exposure to allergens or moving at high speed are likely to cause discomfort for allergy sufferers. Runners, for example, inhale up to five to seven times more pollen when running than during normal activity. If you like jogging but ragweed drags you down, swim during the ragweed season.

During the height of the allergy season, you may be better off taking up water sports, which generally reduce exposure to allergens, except for molds.

For more information on how best allergies and the outdoors can coexist, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope to Chlor-Trimeton Guide to Seasonal Allergens, P.O. Box 5137, Bergenfield, N.J. 07621.

Healthy eating begins with smart shopping

Associated Press

Healthful cooking and eating starts when shopping for family groceries.

Through the maze of store aisles, Better Homes and Gardens magazine recommends concentrating on the most healthful choices available in each department. Loading up the basket with nutritious fruits and vegetables can help shoppers resist buying less-nutritious impulse items throughout the store.

■ FOR SALAD MAKING, choose Vitamin A-rich, dark-green, leafy vegetables such as spinach and romaine.

■ PICK UP vitamin C-packed foods. Try citrus fruits, strawberries, peppers, broccoli, brussels sprouts, or cabbage.

■ KNOW WHICH fruits and vegetables hide calories and fat. Winter squash, corn and potatoes have slightly more calories. Avocados contain fat (about 15 grams per half avocado) and more calories than other produce items.

■ CHOOSE LUNCHEON meats made from turkey or chicken breast meat.

■ TRY LOW-SODIUM and reduced-fat cheese in favorite recipes.

■ OPT FOR rotisserie-cooked poultry and meats, which contain less fat than meat loaf in gravy, barbecued ribs or fried chicken.

Meat case products are leaner than ever before. To select the leanest cuts, look for Meat Nutri-Facts posters which provide nutrition information.

■ READY-TO-COOK products such as breaded fish fillets or stuffed chicken breasts may have hidden fat.

■ BUY SELECT GRADE BEEF. Beef is divided into three grades: Prime, Choice, and Select. Select beef has the least amount of marbling (fat throughout the muscle) and visible fat. Prime has the most fat.

■ FOR FRESH POULTRY, choose pieces with skin removed; they are all lean.

■ EXPERIMENT WITH FISH. Just about everything at the fresh seafood counter is good for the body. Fresh fish is an excellent lean, protein-rich food. Fresh herring, mackerel, some varieties of salmon and albacore tuna are slightly higher in fat than other finfish. The higher-fat fish are rich in omega-3 fatty acids, purported to help lower blood cholesterol levels.

■ FOR DESSERT, try angel food cake. It's made with egg whites, no yolks and at around 160 calories per serving has half the calories in devil's food cake.

■ BUY BREADS that list whole grain flour as the first ingredient. These are generally higher in fiber.

■ COMPARE LABELS when buying yogurt. Some brands are made with whole milk (32 calories per ounce), while others are based on nonfat milk (20 calories per ounce). Some fruit yogurts rely on artificial sweeteners.

■ TRY LIGHT CREAM CHEESE AND SOUR CREAM.

Before filling the cart with pantry items, take a little extra time and read product labels. Ingredient labels and nutrition labels can tell which products are the most nutritious buys.

Canned foods: Opt for no-salt-added vegetables. For fewer calories, go for the water-packed or juice-packed fruits.

Buy plain frozen vegetables more frequently than those packed in cream sauce. Of all frozen desserts, fruit and juice bars are lowest in calories in fat.

Beverages: Read the fine print on beverage labels. Beverages labeled "juice drink" or "juice cocktail," which have added sugar or corn syrup, will usually be higher in calories than plain 100 percent fruit juice. Flavored seltzer and sparkling water can be calorie free, but some contain sugary flavorings. Club soda has added minerals and salts that make it higher in sodium than seltzer.

Cereals: Oat bran is fine, but it's not the only healthful choice. Most cereals range from 1 to 3 grams fiber per serving, with some bran and multigrain varieties coming in at 5 to 7 grams. And, because cereal doesn't taste salty, one may be surprised at the sodium content of some varieties.

Vegetarians pass up T-bone steak for tomato salad

Copley News Service

Victory through vegetables, ran a mocking slogan of the countercultural '60s. As we move from the conservative '80s to the uncertain '90s, the claim seems to be coming true, after a fashion.

Vegetarianism — the doctrine that rejects the flesh of animals and sometimes all animal products whatsoever — has edged toward widespread acceptance, at least in part.

No one can be sure how many Americans follow the veggie doctrine. The U.S. Department of Agriculture offers a ballpark estimate of 2 percent of the population, about 5 million people, with no great confidence in its accuracy.

Lucy Moll, editor-at-large of Vegetarian Times magazine, said that the figure of 8 million to 9 million is often quoted, based on a survey by a polling organization. This too, she said, is none too reliable.

Experience suggests that there are more vegetarians than ever before, but evidence is lacking.

More important in the larger scheme of things, orthodox nutritionists and everyday citizens have come to a tacit acceptance of a large measure of vegetarian doctrine, as shown by the trend away from red meat and a new emphasis on plant foods and fiber in the diet. Many Americans, concerned about their health, have become virtual fellow travelers along the veggie way.

VEGETARIANS TRACE their lineage back to Pythagoras in ancient Greece and to the vast Buddhist and Hindu traditions of the East.

In the United States, the doctrine achieved an earlier peak of influence around the turn of the century. The most prominent diet reformer of that era, Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, attracted the rich and famous to the vegetarian regime at the Battle Creek Sanitarium in Michigan. While he was at it, Kellogg founded the breakfast cereal industry and the modern health food business.

During those days, Americans were worried about supposed scourges, such as autointoxication and excess uric acid, blamed on the eating of meat.

Vegetarianism appears to have gone into a decline by 1920. By World War II, it was mentioned in nutritional texts, if at all, as a regrettable eccentricity.

The veggie persuasion began a resurgence in the late '60s. In part, the conversion was probably another way for rebellious youth to annoy their elders, but the cause has outlasted the era of psychedelics and radical chic. Several reasons have contributed to the trend:

■ The rehabilitation of carbohydrates. Reducing fads, athletic trainers and health evangelists used to share a strong pro-protein, anti-carbohydrate bias. But in recent years, carbohydrates — starches and sugars — have finally been recognized for what they have always been: the primary fuel of the human body.

Theories of "carbohydrate loading" came into fashion for endurance athletes and trickled down into the larger audience of neighborhood joggers. Nutritionists now emphasize complex carbohydrates in the diet and freely accept vegetable sources of protein.

WHILE THE ORTHODOX still prefer a diet that draws from all food groups, the mainstream has perceptibly shifted closer to the vegetarian line, which has always disparaged the American love affair with protein (commonly identified with animal sources) and praised the carbohydrates plentiful in plant foods.

■ The concern about cholesterol and fat. Medical science now urges people to consume less fat, seen as a contributing factor in a number of serious diseases. Cholesterol and saturated fat have been especially implicated in heart attacks. The trouble with a high-protein diet, we are now instructed, is that it is almost inevitably high-fat. The net effect of these strictures has been to move Americans away from red meat and animal fat.

Plants don't make cholesterol, and although some vegetable fats are saturated, such substances in the American diet mostly come from animal sources. A plant-based regimen tends to be high in bulk and low in fat and caloric density, leading to easy weight control. Vegetarians could say, "We told you so." And they do.

■ The rediscovery of fiber. It isn't only vegetarians any longer who believe that the rich, overrefined American diet needs a healthy measure of what our parents used to call "roughage," the non-digestible fiber found in plant foods.

Mainstream authorities now talk up the virtues of fiber, and some types have been seized upon in the battle against cholesterol. The middle-age executive, spooning up his oat bran, looks like a vegetarian fantasy come to life.

■ The "small planet" ideology. Frances Moore Lappe's book, "Diet for a Small Planet," first published in 1972 and often reprinted since, popularized the notion that the rich nations of the West gobble up the world's agricultural resources because of our appetite for high-cost meat production, and she proposed vegetarianism as a moral antidote to our greed. The argument persuaded many Americans that giving up meat was the virtuous thing to do.

■ THE ANIMAL rights movement. A small but determined band has adopted the welfare of our fellow creatures as a passionate cause. This has brought new energy to vegetarianism, which deplores both the killing of animals for food and decries what it describes as inhumane conditions on factory farms.

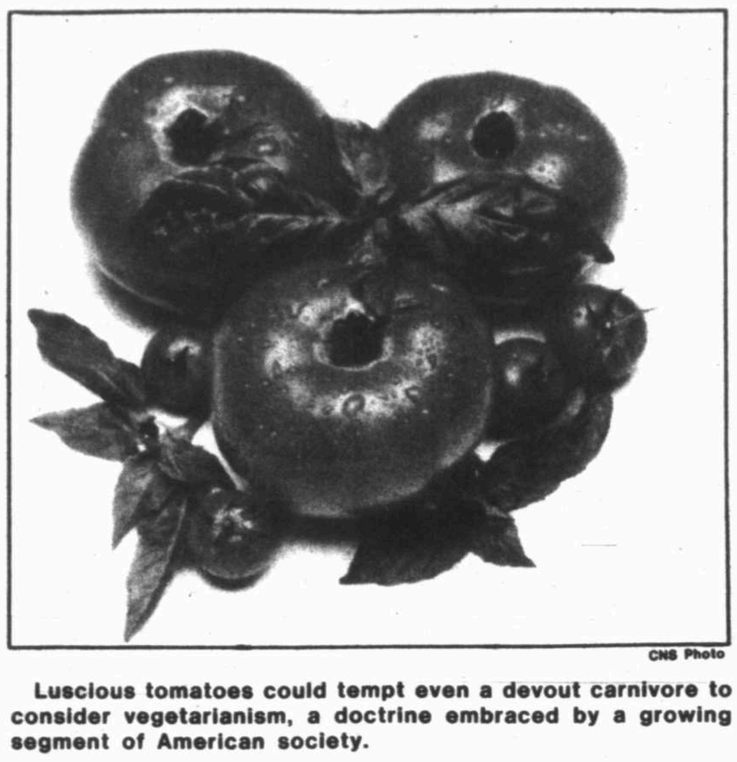

■ The fascination with Eastern religions. An influential segment of the American upper-middle class discovered Zen in the '50s and went on to explore various branches of Hinduism and other varieties of Buddhism. These beliefs honor vegetarianism, which spread as a consequence. More recently, immigration has added native followers of these traditions to our social mix. The Seventh-day Adventist Church, founded in the United States, has been a center of American vegetarianism for more than 100 years.

■ The fondness for Asian and Mediterranean cuisines. As Americans developed more sophisticated palates, they discovered that other people don't eat as much meat as we do. This is especially true of Asia, where millions practice vegetarianism out of conviction or necessity. The enormously popular Mediterranean cooking spares meat as well. Vegetarianism has never made much headway as a doctrine among Italians, but dishes like pasta with marinara sauce fit the requirements perfectly.

Those converting to vegetarianism have several varieties from which to choose. The vast majority of believers are ovo-lactarians; they eat milk and egg products.

Vegetarians follow a stricter path. They refuse all animal foods and some go further and disallow the use of any animal product, such as leather and wool.

A few vegetarians seek out yet more extreme sects, and their eccentricities make it easy to poke fun at the overall movement. We find those who eat only raw fruits and vegetables, those who munch vast quantities of sprouts, those who worry that eating root vegetables offends "plant consciousness."

CNS Photo

Luscious tomatoes could tempt even a devout carnivore to consider vegetarianism, a doctrine embraced by a growing segment of American society.

VEGETARIANISM HAS a more liberal wing, too. Gary Null, the most frequently published spokesman for the cause, gives a nod to "pesco-vegetarianism," which allows fish. Null even speaks of a poultry-eating "pollo-vegetarianism." With such latitudinarianism, many a health-conscious person would find a pew in the veggie congregation.

Through vegetarianism's long history, adherents have based their claims on moral grounds: Eating meat makes people bestial, while a diet derived from plants develops wisdom and benevolence. Present-day followers continue to claim that vegetarianism will lead to a kinder, gentler society. Casual experience supports the impression that vegetarians are indeed more benign than average, but it was probably their attitudes that inspired their adoption of the diet rather than the other way around.

In any case, the uplifting effect of vegetarianism doesn't always work. It failed conspicuously with the most notorious adherent, Adolf Hitler. He remains a standing embarrassment to vegetarians, and although they love to catalog the famous people who have adopted their diet, they often forget to mention him.

Vegetarians and their opponents have worn themselves out debating over what diet is most natural for humankind. They brandish dental charts and intestinal diagrams, they search anthropology and archaeology for arguments, all to little avail. Nutritionists now readily concede that vegetarianism can be a perfectly sound option, although the devotee may have to exercise special care to arrange an adequate diet.

Ovo-lactarians should have no trouble obtaining plenty of the essential nutrients. Milk, cheese and eggs easily compensate for whatever plant sources may lack. Many athletes and people who do physical labor thrive on such programs.

Vegetarians have to consume a large bulk of low-density foods in comparison to a standard diet to obtain required nutrients, and this is one reason they tend to stay thin. By the same token, they can ill afford the reduced food value of many refined products, such as table sugar and white flour. They must eat whole-grain products — but most of them do this anyway because it comes with the territory.

VEGETARIANS FACE greater problems. Without any animal-produced foods, they have to pay special attention to consuming a balanced ration of the amino acids necessary to health. This can be done by combining plant proteins, as in the classic pairings of beans and rice. Traditional cuisines are rich in such dishes.

Vitamin B12 remains a sticking point. It is available from hardly any plant sources, and vegans risk depleting their livers of this essential nutrient and ending up with nerve damage and pernicious anemia. They need vitamin supplements. Further, vegan diets are not good for growing children, whose nutritional needs are more acute than adult needs.

Vegetarian cooks used to dish out penetential fodders such as brown rice and steamed veggies. Many still do, but a vast array of options has opened up from cultures where meat has always played a minor role and often is missing entirely.

Here's a Southern Italian main-dish soup — a variation on minestrone — that offered a balance of proteins before nutritionists discovered the idea. The name means "A Thousand Little Things."

MILLECOSEDDE

¼ pound dried chick-peas
1 onion, chopped
1 stalk celery, chopped
1 carrot, peeled and chopped
3 tablespoons olive oil
½ head red cabbage
½ pound fresh mushrooms
2 quarts water
¼ pound rigatoni or other short pasta
Salt, pepper
½ cup grated Parmesan or Romano cheese

Pick over and rinse chick-peas in cold water. Place in saucepan with plenty of water to cover. Bring to boil for 2 minutes. Allow to stand, covered, for 1 hour. Drain.

In very large saucepan or soup pot, saute onion, celery and carrot in oil until lightly colored. Add cabbage and mushrooms. Cook, stirring, until cabbage has wilted. Add beans and water.

Bring soup to simmer and cook gently for about 2 hours, or until beans are tender. Cook pasta in soup just before serving. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve with cheese.

SPICED WINTER SQUASH

1 teaspoon black mustard seed (or to taste)
1 teaspoon whole cumin seed (or to taste)
Cooking oil
½ onion, minced
1 or 2 (or more) cloves garlic, minced
1 portion banana squash, peeled and cut up — around 6 cups
Salt, pepper
Chili pepper to taste (optional)
Lime juice to taste (optional)

Heat oil in large saucepan with lid. When hot, add mustard seed and cumin seed. Let them sizzle for a minute or so. Have cover handy, for mustard seed will begin to pop. Allow them to do so for a few seconds without burning; add onion and garlic and cook until very lightly brown.

Add cut-up squash and turn chunks in hot oil. Cover and allow to simmer about 30 minutes; squash will render quite a bit of juice. Dish is done when squash is very soft, almost a puree. As it cooks, season to taste with salt, pepper and chili pepper and lime juice, if desired.

Actress' memoir describes life of 'Little Girl Lost'

By Bob Thomas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — How could anyone write an autobiography at the age of 15? It's possible when you consider the young life of Drew Barrymore.

At the age of 6, she was starring in Steven Spielberg's "E.T. The Extraterrestrial," the most successful film of all time. She was a drinker at 9, marijuana smoker at 10, cocaine user at 12, recovering addict at 14.

"Little Girl Lost" (Pocket Books, $17.95) is the apt title of the teenager's memoir. Written with Todd Gold, the book describes in harrowing detail her descent into a juvenile abyss of deception, excess and degradation. The road back has been rocky.

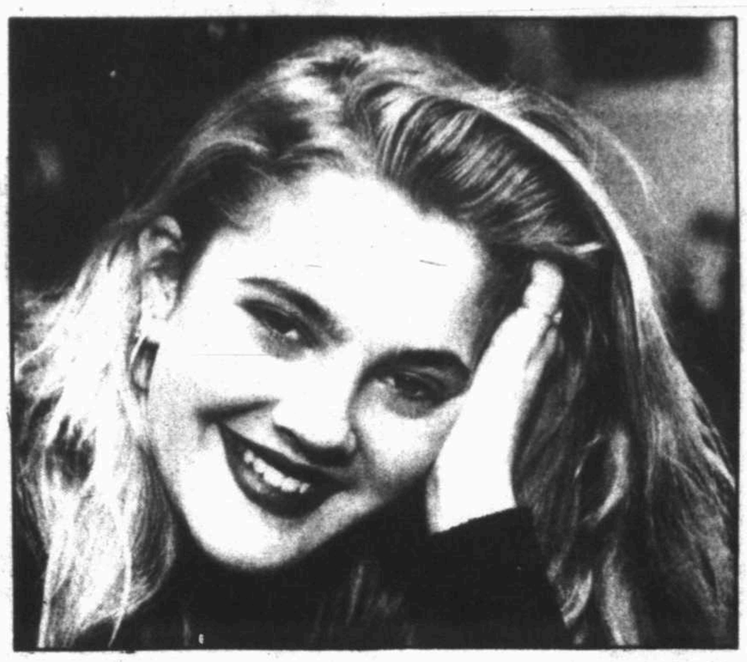

After a wild drunken spree, Drew underwent 87 days of rehabilitation in a hospital. Released, she embarked on another bender, flying from New York to Los Angeles on a credit card stolen from her mother. The second treatment, she hopes, will be her last.

"It was never the work that was the problem with Drew, it was the time in-between," remarks her mother, Ildiko Barrymore. "That is the problem for many actors: How to fill that time between the jobs. The jobs give you a sense of self-worth and accomplishment."

The Barrymores have a long history of alcoholism and addiction. Drew's grandfather, John Barrymore, and aunt, Diana, were destroyed by drink, as were members of earlier generations. Drew's father, John Jr., has had a long history of addiction. He is a menacing figure in "Little Girl Lost," a wild-bearded wreck who turned up only to abuse his daughter and former wife and ask for money.

"I was not aware of the extent that genetic predisposition has," says Ildiko Barrymore. "Once you become aware of that, you deal with it on a level of more intelligence in terms of what needs to be done."

Drew, now 15, and her mother live on a quiet street in the San Fernando Valley. One day after school, Drew sat down for an interview. Always an attractive girl, she has turned into a teen-age beauty, and she talks thoughtfully about the tumultuous events of her young life.

A recovering alcoholic at 14, actress Drew Barrymore, at 15, has written an autobiography about her battles with drugs and alcohol, which began when she was 9-years-old.

Q. How can you write a life story at your age?

A. People were saying, "You should tell your story, you should tell your story." I was really too scared to. I got a few different offers to write a book, and I chose one. It was really scary to lay your life on the line. You don't know what the feedback is going to be. Will it be positive or negative? I took the risk.

Q. Did you realize you would have to live through the bad periods again?

A. It was scary in the fact that you would have to bring up these issues you had already dealt with, or are scared to deal with again. But I just focused on positive energy and went with the flow.

Q. How do you answer those who might say you're writing the book for exploitation or publicity?

A. I certainly wasn't looking for publicity, because I'd gotten enough before I wrote the book. I know exactly why I wrote it: There's a lot of parents with kids who may not be addicts or alcoholics but who can relate to what I've gone through; they could know that they're not alone. That was real comforting to me, to know that I'm not alone in this situation that I'm going through.

'I'm living life one day at a time. I go to meetings, I go to movies, I act stupid. I'm not afraid to be my age anymore. Then there are times when I act like 20.'

— Drew Barrymore, actress

Q. Was one of your problems that you have spent most of your life in an adult world?

A. I don't think it really helped. But it was more me, in wanting to fit in so badly and to be at their level so badly. I thought that was what I was supposed to do.

Q. Did Steven Spielberg have an important influence on you?

A. He is probably the most important male ever in my life. He means everything to me. He's given me a lot of experience, a lot of good advice, the nurturing I never got from my dad. He filled a lot of empty spaces just by being there. ...

Q. What was your relationship to your father?

A. The little bit of relationship that there was was very abusive and just chaotic. Even though it was like that, I just wasn't going to accept that he wasn't going to come back. I had this fantasy in my mind, that I was going to have "Father Knows Best" walk through the door. I wanted that so bad, and I wasn't going to face reality that it wasn't going to happen.

Q. Even though your mother was loving and supportive, you had resentments with her. Why?

A. When I was little, she had to work all the time. I felt like she was abandoning me, but she really wasn't; she was just working and making money for us. Later on, I just wasn't there at all. I would turn the table around and say that she wasn't there for me. Every time she would be with me, I'd walk out the door. There was a lot of friction there.

Q. What was your lowest point?

A. Probably when I went back into rehab the last time. I had hit many emotional bottoms, but there was always 1 percent of me out of 100 that thought I would make it out. This time, I honestly did not think I would make it out. Through sheer love of people I cared about and my own wanting it for nobody but myself, I worked through it. But it was really scary.

Q. What is your life like today?

A. It's very calm and mellow. There are times when it's in the fast lane, and there are times when it's in the slo-o-ow lane. I'm usually somewhere in-between, which is where I always wanted to be. I'm living life one day at a time. I go to meetings, I go to movies, I act stupid. I'm not afraid to be my age anymore. Then there are times when I act like 20.

Q. What do you do when people offer you a drink?

A. As soon as I got sober — it has been eight months now — I haven't had many days of temptation.

Thousands maimed in mine war against civilians

American Friends Service Committee aids 13 government centers with artificial limbs, rehabilitation

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Moeun Mali massaged the bandaged stump, all that's left of a leg blown off by a mine while she walked with friends in the countryside. She awaits an ugly replacement made of wood, leather and steel.

She is 19 and frightened. "I feel lost now," she said softly."I don't know about the future."

"Someone like her has a bleak future in Cambodia," a Western aid official said later. "Nobody will marry her and society offers little. There is still a cultural belief that if you have lost a limb you are less than whole. You are a second-class citizen."

Moeun Mali is one of thousands of Cambodians maimed by anti-personnel mines, which Cambodian officials and Western aid workers say Khmer Rouge and other guerrillas are sowing in roads, ox-cart trails, stream beds and rice fields.

Although most of the fighting is along the Thai border in the northeast, they say, the mines are being planted throughout the country.

"In many respects, this is a war being fought with land mines against civilians, and I don't think anybody is keeping records of where they are being laid," said Brett Ballard of the American Friends Service Committee.

Officials of the Vietnam-sponsored government in Phnom Penh say most of the mines are planted by the Khmer Rouge, whose government was ousted by the Vietnamese invasion of December 1978.

The Khmer Rouge and two less powerful guerrilla groups, which officials say are planting a smaller number of mines, are loosely allied against the government of Prime Minister Hun Sen.

Aid workers said half a dozen types of mines are used.

One made by China, the guerrillas' main arms supplier, is a blue plastic device that floats just beneath the water's surface and is easily detonated.

The mines are light, making them ideal for transport from guerrilla sanctuaries on the frontier with Thailand, and often are planted in flooded rice paddies. The plastic shards are difficult to detect by X-ray when embedded in a human body.

"It's a classic Khmer Rouge terror tactic," said Ballard, who runs his organization's aid program in Cambodia. "They don't have the people's hearts and minds, so they use the barrel of the gun."

According to Cambodian officials, the guerrillas' objectives are to sabotage the economy, disrupt community life and convince the people the government cannot protect them. The guerrillas also appear to use mines to ring hideouts and arms caches.

Both sides in the civil war sow large numbers of mines in the northwestern battle zone, and often do not remove the mines when they change position.

Refugee camps and hospitals on the Thai side of the border receive a constant stream of victims.

Some say the greatest impact of the mine warfare is psychological, keeping people on the edge of fear after 20 years of war and a reign of terror by the Khmer Rouge government.

"It also seems to have the effect of reminding people of the horror experienced under Pol Pot, and in many ways strengthens resolve against the Khmer Rouge," Ballard said in an interview.

At least 1 million people were killed or died of starvation while Pol Pot's Khmer Rouge government was in power from April 1975 until the Vietnamese invaded.

Animal Damage Control program tries to protect livestock

Associated Press

The Santa Rosa rancher was losing sheep in a big way. A coyote was coming through the fence, slaughtering a ewe here and a lamb there, to the tune of 110 head in 10 days.

The rancher called the U.S. Agriculture Department's Animal Damage Control program, the main predator control effort in New Mexico.

When an officer finally killed the coyote, it turned out to be "one little 20-pound female," said Ken Podborny, northern New Mexico district supervisor for Animal Damage Control.

The cooperative venture between the USDA, the New Mexico Agriculture Department and other contracting agencies removes predators and other problem animals only by request, said Podborny and Curt Mullis, acting state director. They said the program does not do routine trapping or shooting and does not operate where counties or area ranching associations haven't put up some money.

Mullis said the program covers only about 20 percent of New Mexico's land area, "so our effect on the total (coyote) population is negligible. Now, our local effect, especially for sheep and goats in the southeast, now that's a different story."

In the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30, the program provided predator control on 1,417 of New Mexico's estimated 9,000 cattle ranches and 1,400 sheep ranches, working on 16.3 million acres or about 21 percent of New Mexico's total land area.

The program killed 5,989 coyotes statewide.

In calendar year 1988, cooperating cattle producers reported 2,109 calves lost to predators, 91 percent to coyotes. They reported 145 adult cattle killed, about 50 percent to coyotes.

Animal Damage Control protected about 70 percent of the state's 1988 lamb crop. Sheepmen reported 3,107 lambs killed by coyotes, 2,511 killed by golden eagles, 2,008 killed by bobcats and 841 killed by other animals ranging from dogs to rattlesnakes. Coyotes also killed 732 of the 1,532 adult sheep lost to predators last year.

The program has 45 field people working in about two-thirds of New Mexico's 33 counties. It handles not only predator control, but everything else from removing prairie dogs digging up ball fields to hazing waterfowl off a farmer's grain.

A field officer tries to determine what kind of animal did the damage and what can be done. Sometimes — as in the case of black bears driven into Albuquerque by drought last fall — animals can be relocated. But in the case of predators such as coyotes, "the only thing you can do is capture and destroy that animal," Podborny said.

Government involvement in predator control goes back decades, when society decided it needed to protect agriculture. And although the 1931 law on which the modern program is based uses the word "eradicate," Mullis said society's values have changed, and the program now is one aimed at control.

"We don't use the 'e' word anymore," Mullis said. "And physically, we can't eradicate, so we don't even try."

Mullis and Podborny said their program has detractors, including people who believe the government shouldn't be in the predator control business.

"The question is, why bother? Well, we all use products made from sheep and cattle," Mullis said. "We all eat these products, we all wear these products. ... We're out there to protect a resource that's desired by a significant portion of the public."

And, he added, "If there's not a responsible government agency to take care of this problem, there will be irresponsible private control."

The program also comes in for criticism from environmental groups.

Jim Fish of the Public Lands Action Network said he opposes any type of predator control.

"One, it's expensive, two, it doesn't work and three, it's an attempt at manipulating a system by putting your hands essentially on only one part of the system, and the net effect of that is often counterproductive," he said. "We feel like predators are part of the natural system and removing predators causes other problems which then require manipulation. ... You never get out of the cycle and the system continues to deteriorate."

Podborny said Animal Damage Control does make recommendations to livestock owners about non-lethal ways to reduce losses. But he said the program hasn't done a good job of showing how much technical assistance it provides.

Baltic neighbor's government placed in hands of grassroots movement also seeking independence

TALLINN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Estonia declared support Tuesday for the declaration of independence by its Baltic neighbor, Lithuania, and appealed to Mikhail S. Gorbachev to end military and political pressure against Lithuania.

The Estonian Supreme Soviet, or parliament, also elected Edgar Savisaar, the chairman of the Estonian People's Front, as premier. That effectively put the Estonian government in the hands of the grassroots political movement that has been pressing for independence.

Savisaar, 40, a former teacher and member of the Estonian Planning Commission, received 54 votes, one more than he needed for a majority in the 105-member assembly.

Savisaar told deputies he would present a list of Cabinet members next week and pledged cooperation with all ethnic groups.

But sources said the new government is unlikely to include any of the 27 legislators representing the non-Estonian population.

Tensions between ethnic Estonians, who make up some 60 percent of Estonia's 1.6 million people, and the other nationalities were apparent in Tuesday's session.

Delegations from the northeast city of Sillamae, a largely Slavic area, said they would not accept a declaration by the Supreme Soviet on Friday that Estonia is an occupied state. They also called on Gorbachev to protect the rights of all Soviet citizens.

Estonia said it would seek to reestablish independence at the end of a still-undefined transition period.

Viktor Andreyev, deputy chairman of the Estonian Supreme Soviet, said he would demand a referendum if Estonia pushes for independence.

Unlike Lithuania, the Estonians are treading a more careful line on secession and have called on Moscow to start negotiations.

But they gave their backing to Lithuania's March 11 declaration of independence. They said the realization of independence was not a domestic matter of the Soviet Union, "but a matter of international character."

The Estonian Supreme Soviet urged Gorbachev to support negotiations "on an equal footing" between the Soviet Union and the Lithuania.

"It is necessary to stop without delay the military pressure from the Soviet side and political provocations, the purpose of which ... is to perpetuate the occupation of the Lithuanian republic," the declaration said.

Moscow has set armored vehicles rumbling through the Lithuanian capital, Vilnius, and has arrested a handful of the hundreds of Lithuanian deserters who have left the Soviet military.

The Estonian declaration, adopted 71-22, also offered Estonia's cooperation with Lithuania but did not elaborate.

The three Baltic republics, including Latvia, were independent from the end of World War I until Josef Stalin annexed them in 1940.

HOW TO PLACE A
GARAGE SALE AD
Follow these simple instructions to get the most from your garage sale advertisement.

(1) Decide the address and dates where the sale will be held.

(2) Compile a list of the major items you want to advertise (furniture, appliances, speciality items, specific sizes or types of clothes) along with a few smaller items (pictures, kitchen utensils, etc.) If more than one family will be participating in the sale, ask each family to write out a list of the items they want to sell.

(3) Combine the lists of items to be sold, the complete address, the day and times the sale will be held. Remember, the best days to advertise for your sale will be at least the day before and each day of the sale. The deadline for placing your ad will be before 5:00 the day before you need your ad to appear, Monday - Friday.

(4) NOW - Call Classified at 682-6222 with the days of the sale and the items you want to list.
We offer two types of ads: word ads and space ads.
EXAMPLE WORD AD:
1234 MAIN Street. Saturday 9:00 - 4:00. Kids' clothes: boys 2T-4T, girls 6x-14, dining room set and lots of miscellaneous.
