Plea Offered For Removal Of European Tariffs

RECOVERY OF GOOD BUSINESS
IN EUROPE IMPOSSIBLE UNTIL
BARRIER REMOVED, PLEA SAYSINTERNATIONAL TRADE SERIOUSLY HAMPERED, MOR-GAN AND OTHER LEADING FINANCIERS CHARGE
IN REMARKABLE INDUSTRIAL MOVE(By the Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—A remarkable plea for removal of the tariff barriers and other restrictions from European trade was issued here today over the signatures of scores of the leading financiers of Europe and a half dozen Americans headed by J. P. Morgan.

There can be no recovery in Europe, the manifesto declares, unless the politicians realize that "in time of peace our neighbors are our customers and their prosperity is a condition of our own well-being."

"We desire, as business men, to draw attention to certain grave and disquieting conditions which, in our judgment, are retarding the return to prosperity," the manifesto said.

Interfere With Trade
"It is difficult to view without dismay the extent to which tariff barriers, special licenses and prohibitions since the war have been allowed to interfere with international trade and to prevent it from flowing in its natural channels. At no period in recent history has freedom from such restrictions been more needed to enable traders to adapt themselves to new and difficult conditions. And at no period have impediments to trading been more pettishly multiplied without a true appreciation of the economic consequences involved."

The break up of great political units in Europe dealt heavy blows to international trade. Across large areas, in which the inhabitants were allowed to exchange their products freely, a number of new frontiers were erected and, closely guarded by customs barriers, old markets disappeared. Racial animosities were permitted to divide communities whose interests were inseparably connected. The situation is not unlike that which would be created if a confederation of states were to dissolve the ties which bind them, and to proceed to penalize and hamper, instead of encouraging, each other's trade. Few will doubt that under such conditions the prosperity of such a country would rapidly decline."

Tariffs Unfortunate
"To mark and defend these new frontiers in Europe, licenses, tariffs, and prohibitions were imposed, with results which experience shows already to have been unfortunate for all concerned. Prices have risen, artificial dearthness has been created, production as a whole has been diminished. Credit has contracted and currencies have depreciated. Too many states, in pursuit of false ideals of national interest, have imperiled the national interest."

CHURCH REFUSED
PARADE PERMIT

FORT WORTH, Texas, Oct. 19 (AP).—The city council today at the behest of Mayor H. M. Machan temporarily refused the First Baptist church's petition to put on a parade of 10,000 persons on the eve of its fundamentalist pastor's trial for murder November 1.

Mayor Machan has been the object of frequent attacks by the indicated pastor, Rev. Dr. J. Frank Norris, whose killing of D. E. Chipp, Mesquite friend, July 17, was the outgrowth of the lumber wholesaler's protest of the preacher's pulp utterances.

The mayor said the council could not act on the church parade petition because it had only the typewritten signatures of the church board.

"It was not signed by individuals," the mayor said.

Two Men Added To Federal Cotton Board

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (AP).—Geo. R. James of the federal reserve board and A. C. Williams, of the federal farm loan board, were added by President Coolidge today to the government cotton committee which is dealing with the situation created by a slump in cotton prices.

Crushing Of Seed
Shows Big Decrease

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (AP).—Cotton seed crushed during the two-month period, August 1 to September 30, totaled 538,365 tons, compared with 601,514 tons in the same period last year, and cotton seed on hand at mills September 30 totaled 577,981 tons, compared with 779,430 tons a year ago, the census bureau announced today.

She'll Boss Young 'Bud' Stillman

Mrs. "Liane" Wilson, whose daughter, Lena, is to wed young "Bud" Stillman, Princeton student, son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Stillman.
This photo of Mrs. Wilson, gathered around at her home near Grand Avenue, is the first to be brought out of the privacy of her home where she resides. It affords means for an interesting contrast between the rustic simplicity of the bride-to-be's origin and the environment in which young Stillman was reared.Rumanian Queen Pays Tribute To Past And Present Glories Of New World; She Begins Tour Of America(By the Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (AP).—Marie of Rumania paid a tribute to the past and present glories of American democracy as she posed for a while today on the threshold of her trip across the continent.

Attracted by the emotions of a sovereign who had seen her own Balkan kingdom overrun by the swelling tide of the great war, she first went in state to Arlington and, in the name of her government and people, offered on a silent prayer in the tomb of the unknown soldier.

Goes to Mount Vernon
Then her royal motorcade rolled away from the Arlington hills to Mount Vernon, the home and tomb of Washington, 20 miles down the Potomac.

The trip to Arlington was Queen Marie's first official act on American soil.

Leaving the location at mid-forenoon, the queen by her own request rode into Virginia in an open touring car, at the head of the motorcade which carried the ladies and gentlemen of her party. She murmured admiration as she was carried swiftly across the Potomac and began to mount Arlington Ridge in the sunnier brightness of a perfect Indian summer day.

Cavalry Escort Present
A cavalry escort was in waiting at the gates of the Arlington reservation. They drew up in formation and stood at attention as the queen left her automobile at the tomb of the unknown, stood for a little while in silent prayer, and then laid upon the granite slab a bouquet of red and yellow flowers, woven into pattern of the Rumanian flag.

As she turned away to begin the ride to Arlington she spoke a word of greeting to officers of the guard that keeps vigil night and day at the tomb. Then she gazed dreamily out across the river at the capital nestled below.

Reach Tomb at 11:15
Proceeding without another stop, the party reached Mount Vernon at 11:15 a. m. The queen was escorted into the mansion of Washington, where she expressed interest and awe at the carefully preserved mementoes of the father of his country.

Although a motor car was waiting to carry her down the long slope to the tomb, she preferred to walk. She took a tour also through the historic gardens and returned to find the assembled ladies of the Mount Vernon Association awaiting her pleasure. Representative women from every state had been assembled to receive her and to be present at the luncheon given in her honor.

TELLS OF BUYING ADVERTISING
SPACE TO HELP ROAD PROGRAMPERSONAL LETTER FROM GOVERNOR'S HUSBAND GIVEN HIM BY AGENT SETTING HIS PART OF FUND AT
$500, WITNESS TELLS COMMITTEE(By the Associated Press.)
AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 19.—The governor's husband, James E. Ferguson, was pictured today in the role of a diligent publisher by a witness before the Texas legislative committee investigating state departments.

M. Kelly, highway contractor of San Antonio, said he was solicited in writing by Mr. Ferguson to contribute toward a road advertising program conducted in the Ferguson Forum, a weekly paper published by Ferguson at Temple.

Kelly testified that he agreed in 1925 to pay $500 toward this advertising proposition of the Forum because he thought it would place him in the good graces of the governor.

TWO MEN HELD
FOR WILD ORGYOne Of Accused Youths Shot
By Police; Pair Held For Murder And Robbery(By the Associated Press.)
SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Oct. 19.—While two men under arrest on charges of murder and robbery police today were hunting a third member of a gang which terrorized the city a week ago with a series of murders and hold ups.

The two men arrested late yesterday are Lawrence Weeks and Clarence "Bud" Kelly, both 22 years of age. Weeks was taken while at work with an excavating crew and Kelly was apprehended on information given by Weeks. Kelly tried to escape and was shot twice by policemen and was near death today at the emergency hospital.

Confession Said Made
Weeks was booked at police headquarters on several charges of murder and robbery. He is said to have made a complete confession involving Kelly and another man, name not announced.

Weeks and Kelly were identified by Rex Hayden and C. W. Johnson as the youths who shot and wounded and killed Jack Dunne, night watchman, during a hold up of a gasoline service station. Later they were identified by Frank Mana and Louis Verdora, as the pair who held up a pool room and shot and wounded Constantine Guillen, proprietor. Five persons were killed and eleven wounded on the nights of October 9 and 11 when bandits operated.

YOUTHS BONDED ON ASSAULT CHARGE

SHAMROCK, Oct. 19 (AP).—J. J. and L. W. Rook, cousins, were free today on bonds of $2,500 each, following their arrest here yesterday on charges of attempt to murder and assault with prohibited weapons.

The charges grew out of a meeting of the two men with Berry Koons, Shamrock farmer who is awaiting a second trial on a charge of maintaining a salaried position as a deputy sheriff while receiving a salary from the county.

Koons is said to have recently received a large sum of oil royalty money, said that Rook accosted him and demanded that he sign a $20,000 check. When Koons refused, it is charged, Rook apparently reached for a gun.

Rook's son and three other youths were fired on late one night about a year ago while passing the Koons farm in an automobile. Koons said he fired because he had been disturbed often by joy riders. Young Rook was permanently blinded as a result of the shooting. Koons' first trial resulted in a hung jury.

Texas Road Bonds
Now All Validated

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 19 (AP).—Texas road bonds, invalidated by decision of the United States supreme court in the Archer county suit, were virtually all validated with certification today by Governor Miriam A. Ferguson of two bills which with others are intended to correct all defects in the bond issues.

The governor yesterday signed 36 road district bond measures and today placed her signature on two separate bills. The bills are expected to equalize every step necessary to the issuance of road district bonds.

Love Is Fashion's Dictator

Lack of Amorous Incentive Leaves Germaine Wondering What to Buy; Reds Are "In" and Muslin Appears in Evening Gowns

A plaid velvet afternoon frock, banded with fox. The low waistline and round neckline are considered good points.

PARIS, France, Oct. 18. Dearest Cousin:

Shopping is a great test, not only of my father's vocabulary, but of my own state of mind. Going the rounds of the fashionable couturiers with Aunt Louise, and finding myself able to resist purchasing has revealed to me that I am not in love. The reason I do not feel impelled to buy is because I am not impelled to charm—and I am not impelled to charm because I am not in love. When Jacques first returned to Paris last spring, I was very eager to make him care for me. Every thing I bought "answered" what I thought would be his requirements in loveliness.

When he admired one blue frock, I promptly acquired another. When he noticed the similarity between me and an angel from heaven when I appeared in white, I forsook color entirely for a while.

Then along came Jimmy, and I subconsciously bought for him—and without realizing it, quite changed my style of dress. I knew Jimmy liked simple, but what you call "snappy" clothes. I became tricky with sweaters and sport clothes.

Now suddenly, I find myself without inspiration, and I know that I have no anchor for my affections. And I realize this situation must be corrected at once. So today I ordered two frocks, with no particular man in mind—but hopeful.

I had them photographed for you because I thought they were the straightline, simple type you like. One is plaid velvet, in lovely browns on a tan ground, banded with a wide band of tan fox. The low waistline and the round neckline are both good points. I think. For afternoon, I consider this an excellent acquisition. My other frock is for morning, and is also in brown and tan—I can wear both with the same coat. The mate-

Menu For Today

BREAKFAST—Honeydew melon, cereal, thin cream, shirred eggs and tomatoes, crisp rye toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Baked macaroni and cheese, graham bread and lettuce sandwiches, caramelized apples, ginger snaps, milk, tea.

DINNER—Baked haddock with cucumber sauce, browned sweet potatoes, cabbage salad, Concord grapes, fudge cake, whole wheat bread, milk, coffee.

Children under six years of age should be served orange juice or a baked or stewed fruit in place of the melon suggested. In the breakfast menu, and of course, small persons should not have the sauce served with the dinner fish.

The woman who lives on a farm with apples always at hand will welcome the caramelized apple rule.

Caramelized Apples
One and one-half cups sugar, 1 1/2 cups water, 5 tablespoons chopped nut meats, 6 apples, 1 cup whipped cream, 2 tablespoons powdered sugar, 1/4 teaspoon vanilla.

Cook 1 cup sugar with water until a thick syrup. Add apples pared and cored. Turn often and cook over a low fire. When tender but not broken in a serving dish or on individual plates. Boil the syrup until thick. In the meantime put remaining sugar and nuts into a small iron spider and cook over a hot fire stirring constantly until the sugar melts and discolors. Fill the cavities of the apples with the heavy jelly-like syrup in which they were cooked and pour the caramel mixture over the apples. Pour any remaining syrup around the fruit and top each apple with a spoonful of cream whipped until stiff and lightly flavored with sugar and vanilla. (Copyright, 1924, NEA Service, Inc.)

IF YOU'D LIVE, LIVE IN A SUBURB

Golden autumn days find real estate merchants showing their choicest wares to prospective customers. Those fortunate people who are considering the building of a new home in the spring probably are interested just now in finding a plot of ground suited to their taste and convenience. For one thing, the weather is more auspicious for such a survey, and for another, it is not a bad thing to see one's future environment in its gay fall dress instead of at the bleak end of winter when all attempt at suburban or country building is likely to drive the prospective householder shivering back into his steam heated city apartment with a thankful prayer to the heaven that saved him from such folly.

Polly? You will seldom find anyone who has broken away from the toils of the dumb waiter and sunporch four flights up, into the freedom of God's country, going back. No more systems of belt-pressure for him! Laugh all you like at Mr. Suburban of the comics, shoveling snow, missing the last train, and on the hunt for his eternally borrowed lawn mower; but never mind—he and his neighbors are having their innings. The suburbs and the country are coming into their own at last.

The very trend of architecture indicates the passing of the "city type" of house. What house plan have we seen in the papers or magazines, even to the most modest bungalow, that does not require a goodly plot of ground to sit upon with a generous margin around it for things "to grow on?"

And while you are planning, as the simplest type of house now costs the price of a Texas oil well, why not stick to essentials? Every groove in a roof where two slopes meet costs a hundred dollars extra. Why not plan the barn roof—always lovely to behold, cheap to construct and easy to keep in repair. And hard oak floors are not necessary! Yellow pine takes a fine wax finish and wears forever.

PRAYING IN HOLY GHOST A. L. PAGE'S TOPIC

First Number Of Tech Artist Course Is Well Received

The first number of the Tech Artist course was given Monday evening at the high school auditorium before an audience of music lovers from the Tech and from the city. The Schubert male quartet, accompanied by Miss Florence Richardson, who also played violin selections, was well received by those who heard them. A series of musical pictures from the life of Franz Schubert was a feature of the program for the evening, in addition to a straight male quartet program.

The ability of the singers, their tonal qualities and the blending of their voices were especially good, and according to those who heard them sing, this was one of the best musical programs given in Lubbock in several seasons. One of the more popular numbers of the evening was a piano duet played by two of the singers.

Each member of the quartet has had experience singing in the north and east as featured numbers with musical comedies, oratorio societies and as leading artists with recital groups. Other numbers on the artist course will follow at intervals during the year.

PIRATES BOSS LOSES JOB FOR COMING SEASON

INTERNAL DISSENTION PAST YEAR GIVEN AS CAUSE OF DREYFUSS ACT

(By Associated Press)
PITTSBURGH, Oct. 18.—The Pittsburgh Pirates, rulers of the baseball world in 1925, dethroned this year by St. Louis, will be guided in 1927 by a new manager.

Bill McKechnie, who last year piloted the Corsairs to their first National league pennant in 16 years and then on through to a triumph over Washington in the world's series, yesterday was told his services no longer would be required.

Fans Lose Confidence
Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the club, said the fans had "lost confidence in McKechnie and there was only one thing to do."

Although Dreyfuss said he had no successor in view at this time, baseball observers were inclined to believe Arthur Fletcher, fiery manager of the Philadelphia Nationals, might be found at the Pirate helm when the 1927 season opens. Rumors that Fred Clarke, assistant manager and vice president of the club, might be named brought denial from Dreyfuss, who also made known his preference for a bench manager. This spiked another rumor that had Dave Bancroft, brilliant playing manager of the Boston Braves, as the Pirates' next leader.

Internal Dissention Cited
The downfall of McKechnie after a four year reign, was a direct result, in the opinion of most observers, of the internal dissention that rent the club during the season just passed. This began when some players objected to Clarke's presence on the bench and before it was over, Max Carey, Babe Adams and Carson Bigbee, veterans, were dismissed from the club. There were many that attributed to this dissention from the Pirates' failure to repeat their triumph of the preceding year.

Forward Pass Is Gridiron's Greatest Thrill, Says Star

BY ERNIE NEVERS
All-America Fullback, 1925

In the last 10 years the west has become a prominent factor in college football. During the past years there has been but little to distinguish between the caliber of the leading teams of the east and west.

When I speak of the west, very naturally I have reference to the Pacific Coast eleven, Stanford, California, Washington, Southern California and the rest of the teams comprising the coast conference.

Since the colleges of the Pacific Coast have made such rapid strides in the last few years I often am asked what style of play has made such recognition possible.

As I have said before I do not believe that the coast eleven confine themselves to a particular style of play that differs from football as played in the colleges of the various other sections of our country.

I would say the coast eleven play a diversified game. I know that is very true of Stanford as coached by Glenn Warner. Incidentally, I might add that he believes in mixing the plays up.

Last fall, in our first game of the year, he gave instructions that short passes should be the chief offensive weapon. In our second game we used plunging plays almost entirely. In our third contest we resorted to kicking tactics. In the first three periods of that game it was not at all uncommon for us to kick on the first down. In this connection, I would like to say that I am not in favor of any legislation tended to curtail the use of the forward pass.

The forward pass has been the one greatest factor in making football so popular. I am convinced that any rule formulated to curb the pass is a bad thing for the game.

Football thrives on uncertainty and no one thing has done more to create such a condition than the pass.

When I make this statement I have in mind a defeat Stanford suffered against Notre Dame in which intercepted forward passes proved the undoing of our team.

Without in any way trying to disparage the victory of Coach Knute Rockne's great Notre Dame team, I feel that Stanford was a better eleven.

I still have some interesting statistics of that game well in mind. Here they are:

Stanford gained 395 yards from scrimmage to 95 for Notre Dame. And while the victors made only five first downs, their margin at the finish left nothing to be questioned.

Two intercepted forward passes followed by runs of 79 and 89 yards, plus another long run after recovering a fumbled punt, gave Notre Dame the winning margin. The breaks were the deciding factors.

I am strong for the forward pass. I feel the rule-makers are making a big mistake any time they seek to curb its use.

Hitting Sports Highspots With James R. Dow

Saturday's game at Dallas between S. M. U. and Texas Aggies will be attended by the Southwestern Conference fans from all points of Texas. Its the banner game for the Aggies student body—as the Cadets are taking the Dallas trip in preference to the annual Baylor game.

Much discussion is at hand pertaining to the outcome of the S. M. U.-Texas A. and M. game Saturday. From all indications sport critics are of the opinion that the winner of the Saturday contest will have a good road to travel for the 1926 Conference championship.

Von Tungen and Frnka, coaches of the high school Westerners are preparing for their hardest contest—the Plainview Bulldogs—for this week-end. The rivalry has existed between the two schools has been intense—bitter engagements have been waged and since the creating of the Class A and B school conferences for the Texas Inter-scholastic League it places the South Plains conference Class A championship to be settled between the Lubbock and Plainview high school.

Several hundred Westerners fans will no doubt accompany the high school gridiron aggregation to Plainview this week-end. The contest means the championship of the Class A South Plains district.

Lamesa Tornados and Slaton Tigers will meet tomorrow afternoon on the Lamesa gridiron. The battle will no doubt mean the Class B title of the lower South Plains high school district.

Matrimony Is Nil Gene Tunney Avers

NEW YORK, Oct. 19 (AP)—Gene Tunney expects to avoid matrimony until he is through with the squared circle.

"There is absolutely nothing to it," he said when told of a rumor that he was engaged. "I am not even keeping company with any girl. I am going to stay single as long as I am in the boxing game. Then if some girl comes along and looks kindly on me I may marry. At present I would not look at any girl, and really do not know a girl who would want me."

DUNDEE TO BATTLE MORGAN TONITE

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 19 (AP)—Backed by the experience of 400 battles in the ring and the confidence of 17 years of successful fighting, Johnny Dundee of New York will meet Tod Morgan, junior lightweight champion, here tonight in a title bout.

It will be no experience for the veteran boxer—this bid for the title of 130 pound champion. Two times he has held it and as many times has it been toppled from his shoulders. Should he win, it will elevate him to a position few other figures of the ring have attained, possessor of two titles. Dundee already is featherweight champion of the world, a title he vacated in 1924 by retirement after winning it the year before from the Frenchman, Eugene Criqui.

Dundee came back a short time ago to claim his featherweight crown after Kid Kaplan relinquished it because of failure to make weight.

Betting odds favor Morgan 2 to 1. The champion has an advantage of eleven years in age, a longer reach, more speed and height. He is 32 against Dundee's 23, and has a 71 inch reach as against Dundee's 66 inch reach.

Got Cardinals Mixed

Here is a story that was told me during my last trip to Chicago. I regard it as worth repeating:

Two sets of color were standing on the curb of Michigan avenue during one of the many processions that featured the Eucharistic Congress. One didn't know what it was all about but fortunately his more intelligent friend did.

After a brief explanation, the ignorant person asked who certain men in the procession were and was informed they were the priests. Later the bishops were pointed out to him.

"Who is them men following the bishops?" he asked.

"Them is the cardinal," replied the more intellectual one.

"They is, sure enough? Well then, don't fail to point that fellow Rogers Hornsby out to me. I shure have wanted to see him for some time."

Big Trio Slips
It is beginning to look as if the American League in a few short years will lose some of the stars who have done much to keep the prestige of the organization at the high water mark.

I have in mind three of the playing managers, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and Eddie Collins.

While the trio could go on indefinitely in the managerial role, their days as regulars on the ball field are fast drawing to a close.

There is a certain glamor that surrounds the star player that is missing in the manager, no matter how successful he may be. The deed of the star on the field dwarf the strategy of the manager on the bench.

Cobb has smashed every possible record that was within his grasp a year back, and I believe is now content to be numbered among the illustrious stars who have made the game what it is. There is no argument about him being the greatest player of all time.

Loss of leg power is the thing that will cause the three veterans finally to retire. Of Cobb, Speaker and Collins, Speaker is perhaps in the best shape to continue for a few years more.

Should they care to continue in a managerial role, all three could go on indefinitely provided they are able to turn out winners. That is one thing the baseball public demands of a manager.

An Unwise Policy
Discussing managers brings to mind the thought as to whether it is good policy to make a star player a manager when he is at the top of the game.

During the past season I discussed that subject with several American League club owners and all are about convinced that it is an unwise policy.

When Cobb, Speaker and Collins were made managers they still were great, but really had passed the peak of their game. That is the proper spot to make a manager out of an outstanding star.

Carrying the burden of being a star and playing at top speed is enough of a task without burdening the athlete in question with managerial troubles.

Making the brilliant Sleser manager of the St. Louis Browns, just after he recovered from an eye affliction, probably was a mistake. Certainly it didn't help his playing or aid him in his comeback.

Sleser, relieved of managerial woes, probably would return soon to the form that made him baseball's greatest first sacker.

Marines Mobilized To Guard U. S. Mail

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (AP)—Twenty five hundred marines were being mobilized today at various marine corps posts preparatory to being assigned throughout the country to guard the mails from bandit attacks.

They will be under orders which will require them to shoot quickly and anyone not having legitimate business in the vicinity of valuable postal shipments should keep away, postal officials are warning.

PRINCIPALS STILL FUSS OVER WRECK

No legal action has been taken by either of the principals in an automobile crash which occurred on Main late Monday afternoon. The woman whose Ford was wrecked insists that she was driving slowly on the right side of the street. The man says he was going west and on the right side. Both car and truck were badly damaged, and the woman claims slight bodily injuries.

Both appeared before Judge Goodman Monday, though neither of them saw fit to file a complaint against the other. The woman wanted the man to pay for her car, and he refused to do so. The man asked the woman to pay half his repair bill, but she refused.

Several women witnessed the accident, though none of them will be called to testify unless charges are filed and it seems at this time that no such action will be taken. The man stated early today that he would continue his journey westward as soon as his truck is repaired.

DAILY MARKET

Cotton Markets

NEW YORK TRADING

NEW YORK, Oct. 19 (AP)—The cotton market opened steady, unchanged to a decline of five points under selling promoted by relative easy cables and the favorable weather map.

Southern hedging also was reported, but in comparatively small volume and after easing off to 12.50 January rallied to 12.50 or 4 points not higher on covering and trade buying.

The bulge after the call was not fully sustained, active months rallying about net unchanged to 3 points lower at the end of the first hour.

Pressure against the market relaxed after the early offerings had been absorbed. Trading was quiet in the morning with prices working up a few points on covering and trade buying.

At mid-day January was selling around 12.50 with the general market about 12 to 14 points higher. The tropical storm threat attracted more attention during the early afternoon and a flurry of covering sent prices up to 12.85 for January or about 18 to 20 points net higher on the general list. Realizing by recent buyers developed, however, and the market sold off 8 to 10 points from the best at 2 o'clock.

NEW ORLEANS FUTURES

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 19 (AP)—Cotton futures opened steady, October 12.75, December 12.75, January 12.75, March 12.50, May 12.12.

NEW YORK FUTURES

NEW YORK, Oct. 19 (AP)—Cotton futures opened steady, December 12.75, January 12.75, March 12.50, May 12.12.

NEW ORLEANS TRADING

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 19 (AP)—The cotton market opened steady with Liverpool cables lower than day and first trades showing no change to a loss of six points. Prices were lower the previous close but soon advanced to 12.85 for December and 12.85 for January. The steadyness was attributed to fear of the tropical disturbance which is expected moving near the Yucatan channel.

The market turned firm late in the morning on a warning that the tropical disturbance was increasing in intensity and moving rapidly toward the Yucatan channel. December traded as high as 12.95, January to 12.95 and March at 12.75 or 20 points above yesterday's close.

The market continued to improve after noon on buying and covering based on storm fears and good spot news. December trading up to 13.00, or 24 to 26 points above the previous close. Later in the afternoon the market reacted on realizing and hedge selling, losing 10 to 12 points from the highs.

Stocks And Money

WALL STREET TRADING

NEW YORK, Oct. 19 (AP)—Buying orders were well distributed among pivotal industries to check the start of trading today, enabling the market to extend its recovery. Initial gains of 1 to 2 1/2 points were recorded by General Motors, U. S. Steel, Iron Pipe, American Smelting, Mack Trucks, Woodworth and North American. Large investment purchased buoyed up the rail shares which followed in advance in Atchafalaya and the Van Sweringen issues.

With commission house sentiment the more favorable to the market as a result of the recent speculative readjustment and easier credit conditions indicated by the large reduction in brokerage loans, buying became more diversified in the subsequent dealings. Active bidding for popular shares added to the discomfiture of the short interests, while professional traders showed an inclination to take up a position on the long side, at least temporarily. Public Utilities, including North American, Montana Power and Radio were in demand. Motor shares which suffered severely in last week's break, such as Hudson and Mack Truck, rebounded sharply. Foreign exchanges were firm, with trading featured by a five point rise in Italian lire to a 1926 high above 422 cents.

ANTIS DENY SLUSH FUND CHARGES

CHICAGO, Oct. 19 (AP)—A flat denial of the testimony of two Anti-Saloon League officials concerning a $400,000 "slush" fund for the independent senatorial candidacy of Hugh Smith of Chicago was made today before the senate campaign funds committee by the Rev. Robert O'Brien, a Methodist minister of this city.

O'Brien said he had discussed the candidacy of Smith with E. Scott McBride, national superintendent, and George S. Stuffed, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League. O'Brien testified that Dr. Stuffed as head of the state Anti-Saloon League was never an independent candidate in the place of Frank L. Smith.

Dr. Stuffed said that Frank L. Smith's record made it necessary for the Anti-Saloon League to drop him from the general campaign, explaining that Smith was chairman of the Democratic committee.

O'Brien said that Stuffed himself was an independent candidate for the Senate in 1924, but that he was not a candidate in 1926.

Commission Will Refund Portion Of Co. Tax Payments

Individuals in Lubbock county may be "financially hunched," but Lubbock county, so far as the commissioners are concerned, has more money than is needed. That is why commissioners decided last week to refund tax payers a portion of their money.

Of course this does not mean that the court could not have spent it, but rather that it was not needed just at this time. The refund will not amount to very much, but when it is considered that every tax payer in the county is to get a "babe" of 5 per cent on his county ad valorem tax it causes people to stop and think it will be a tidy sum.

The court orders reads like this: "It is ordered by the court to refund to the tax payers 5 per cent of the county ad valorem taxes of the year 1926, which are paid between the 1st day of October, 1926 and the 31st day of January, 1927, and the clerk is ordered to issue warrants to the said tax payers for 5 per cent of the 1926 county ad valorem tax when said taxes are paid as above stipulated and presentation of the 1926 tax receipt. The clerk is ordered to stamp every receipt presented with the words 'Refunded 5—No Warrant.'"

Political Probe In Indiana Decided On

Subpoenas are returnable forthwith and it is said that the witnesses will be here tomorrow.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
Arriving to teach at Pendleton University, JUDITH MARTIN is missed at the station by a green-eyed stranger.
She makes the acquaintance of MYRA ALDRICH, a student, in love with one ERIC WATERS who has come from Princeton. Myra thinks Judith a student. Judith also meets DR. PETER DORN, earnest young astronomy professor.
In a tea shop with Judith, Myra hears that Waters has kissed a girl at the station, on a bench. She rushes home, followed by Judith, and in a fit of tears.
Learning from the college catalog that Judith is a teacher, Myra goes into a tantrum, accusing Judith of deceiving her into making confidences.
Eric signs up for Judith's Horace class, not knowing she is a teacher. They leave the library together on registration day.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER V
"Congrats!" said someone.
Judith and Eric looked up, just as Will Wetherel reached them, clad in full riding regalia and flicking the hedge top with an elaborate leather crop. He was smiling at Eric paternally.

"Hello," said Eric coolly. "And to what do I owe your kind attentions?"
Will raised pained eyebrows. "Well, really, you know, that seems a bit thick. Yesterday you spoke big 'I's, and today you ask why I congratulate you."

Eric thrust his hands in his pockets. "Oh, my error, I'm sure. I got the idea somewhere that it was the fraternity that should be congratulated. Perhaps I was misled by the salty tears of your rush captain as he pleaded with me not to turn him down, and the curses of the Phi Delta, as they skulked away in defeat."

Wetherel looked mystified. "More of that famous wit of yours, I suppose, but I'll give you a tip. The brothers won't care for those sentiments."

Eric listened in mock humility. "So sorry, old man. It was that sniffling rush captain who was to blame. He said the frat would go into a decline and flicker out, if I so much as looked at any other fraternity. I see now that I shouldn't have believed him."

Wetherel turned a cold shoulder on Eric and looked under the brim of Judith's hat for the first time. "You might introduce me, Eric—why, it's Miss—"

Eric smiled. "Yes, that's my trouble too. I haven't learned her name. Perhaps you'll have better luck."

Wetherel recovered quickly. "I know her name. It's Judith Martin. I was just astonished to see her with you. Didn't know you knew her."

Eric smiled loftily and the three walked on together. Wetherel was evidently bent on jarring Eric's cold self-assurance. "Nice little ducking party given for you yesterday, wasn't it?" he said. "Next time I fancy you'll find some other place except the sacred grounds to lie and meditate on. Didn't you know better?"

Eric shrugged. "I haven't any traffic with your silly fetishes. I reasoned that no better place could be found for scholarly meditation."

They were approaching the Prairie Schooner tea shop, when Wetherel spoke again. "Say, Waters, what about that $200 kiss? Don't you think you ought to stand treat on the proceeds? Miss Martin would like a fudge sundae and I could use a malted milk. But what I want to know is, did you earn the $200, or was the kiss clear profit? Nobody seems to know just what the girl was like."

He had slipped his arm through Judith's and was gently guiding her and Eric toward the tea shop door. But she pulled away from him.

"I'm sorry," she said, very low. "I must go home."

She walked quickly away, leaving them staring after her. Her face was still flaming when she saw just ahead of her a stooped figure in gray tweeds, beside which trotted a gaunt police dog.

Judith was about to turn aside, but Dr. Dorn had seen her and hurried to meet her. The conversation began with commonplace about the work of registration day, the caliber of this year's student body and the number of classes each was to have. Judith's embarrassment gradually ebbed away and she talked blithely enough to the rather sober-faced professor.

Just before they reached her street, Dr. Dorn gasped a little and stammered out, "You must have thought me as very remote home as the other day, Miss Martin. I've walked the earth so long with my eyes on the stars and a field glass in my hand that I've stumbled past the little graces and gallantries of this world."

Judith laughed a bantering laugh. "Aha! Astronomy is your only love—the world well lost for a comet's streaming hair and all that. But don't you think you're missing a lot?" Then she turned abruptly from the topic. "Tell me, what kind of man is Dean Timothy Brown?"

"A very able man," Dr. Dorn responded, without hesitation. "I imagine there's no scholar in the world who knows so much about the decline and fall of Rome. As a general historian, he is very good, but that period is his specialty. He means to write a book about the degeneracy of Rome that will put Gibbon off the map. He is also interested in those features of modern life which are similar to the decadence which preceded the fall of the Empire."

"Um-m-m," said Judith. "A specialist in human degeneracy. Well—" she looked brightly up at him—"I don't think I like Dean Timothy Brown."

Dr. Dorn looked distressed. "Don't make snap judgments, Miss Martin. I know he talked too long at the meeting yesterday, and sometimes I think he is rather harsh in his indictments of the new generation. But he is a worthy man, and a fighter for the right."

"Um-m-m," said Judith again, non-committally.

"What I'd like to know," said Caroline McConigle, as she poured a river of catsup over the wooden meat loaf, "is why the rules should be so strictly enforced in this house, when every other landlady in town will listen to reason. Doors closed at ten-thirty? And the first violation punished by a report to the dean? I never heard of such a thing."

Miss Stedway had retired to the kitchen to learn why the mad-faced young men had failed to return with the bread platters.

"Sh! Carrie," exclaimed someone softly. "She's right behind that swinging door listening. P'll bet a conky."

"What do I care?" sniffed Caroline. "Eavesdroppers never hear good of themselves."

The door swung open almost instantly, and Lillian Stedway entered with the bread plate, her usually pale cheeks very red.

Caroline nodded. "I told you so" to the assembled company, as she passed the bread to Judith.

Miss Stedway stood at the head of the table. "My mother wishes me to say," she announced sulkily, "that there must be no noise in the house after seven-thirty on week nights, or after eleven on Saturday nights. This rule will be strictly enforced. Moreover, when once the doors have been locked at ten-thirty, they will not be opened for latecomers." She sat down in the midst of a great silence, and the girls hurried through the meal.

Judith climbed the stairs wearily. A box of books from her home had been delivered that day, and she went in search of a hammer to pry out the nails. When she came back, she found Lillian Stedway seated gingerly on the edge of a straight chair by the door.

"I just dropped in a minute," said the caller, nervously, to tell you how glad we are to have you with us. My mother thinks that having a faculty member in the house may help to keep the girls down. They're very hard to manage sometimes."

Judith's lips were grim. She sat down beside the express box and began to jerk at the nails as though Miss Stedway were not present.

Lillian Stedway looked at her a moment, and then went on with determination. "My mother hopes you will be as helpful as you can in the matter of discipline," she said. "You will be able to observe more infractions of the rules than we can, from our rooms downstairs. By reporting them, you can help us a great deal."

There was silence.

"Your position on the faculty rather requires it, you know," said Miss Stedway, almost defiantly.

Judith laid her hammer down and raised her head. "This might as well be a final understanding, Miss Stedway. I was engaged by the university not as a policeman, but as

FERGUSON DENIES WINDER CHARGES

Robertson, Brown, Madison and Winder counties.

Says Was Not Paid Fee

Bowers stated owners of these counties were his friends, the counties involved in his district, and that he was paid no fee of any sort for appearing before the highway commission in interest of the counties.

He said he had represented at the hearings over 25 years L. W. Hendry of the Franklin Construction company but that he was employed only after Moody had asked the highway commission to cancel maintenance contracts not let on competitive bidding, and after the Ferguson county commissioners court had complained to the commission about maintenance in that county.

Winder Charges Denied

AUSTIN, Oct. 19 (AP)—Testimony yesterday by J. D. Winder before the legislative committee inquiring into the state highway department was characterized "an infamous, cheap, political falsehood" by James E. Ferguson. Winder had asserted that Mr. Ferguson asked 10 per cent commission on highway contracts.

"I do not know J. D. Winder," a statement by Ferguson said. "I have never talked to him about a contract in my life and any statement by him or by anybody else that I ever demanded or received the payment of any sum for the obtaining of any contract with the highway department is just a bald faced political falsehood."

Criticizes Investigation

Ferguson criticized the inquiry as being an effort to "try me with a partisan jury for political purposes without my being accorded the privilege of being represented in any way." Mr. Ferguson also denounced as untrue the testimony of W. G. Hill before the committee yesterday.

"All I know about him is that Hill came to me and begged me to recommend him to the highway commission as auditor to check up tax collector and county depositories handling high way funds. Upon recommendation of my friends, I asked the commission to employ him and the matter of his payment was arranged with the highway commission."

Cattlemen Driving Herds From Mexico

DEL RIO, Texas, Oct. 19 (AP)—Reports that thousands of Mexican cattle were being driven across the border into Texas to escape the new export tax effective October 24 were verified here today.

American cattle men say the new tax, which places heavy duties on livestock going out of the country, virtually will stop exportation of Mexican cattle. About 10,000 head have been driven across the border at this point in the last seven days.

Humble Company Leases More Land In Lubbock County: 18,140 Acres Boost Total To 70,000 Now Taken

The Humble Oil and Refining company, with headquarters in Houston, one of the great petroleum organizations doing business in Texas, again showed its faith in Lubbock county as a potential oil and gas field yesterday when 18,140 more acres of Lubbock county lands were placed under mineral lease to the company. Forty-three separate leases, ranging in size from thirty acres to 5,000 acres, made up the series and the land involved lies from four to twenty miles from the city of Lubbock.

As in the majority of cases where big companies lease land the leases were taken by Clyde Vinson, representative of the company, who in turn made them over to the big concern, 70,000 Leased.

This now makes the total number of acres held under lease, here by the company to more than 40,000 acres, a greater part of which have been lifted during the past three months. With a number of individuals holding small contracts and with the El Capitán company with a large acreage, the total number of leases in the county is now approximately 70,000 acres.

Each of the leases yesterday specified that unless operations for drilling were not commenced on said land on or before one year from date, the lease shall terminate as to both parties unless on or before such anniversary date lease shall pay rentals on said land. Ten years is allowed for the exploitation of the oil, gas and minerals in 18 of the leases, while 25 of them only allowed exploitation for oil and gas.

The leases yesterday were taken in the checkerboard plan frequently used by large oil companies and cover several miles of territory, tracts being taken intermittently.

A number of the farms included in the leases of yesterday belong to oil timers who have seen this section pass from a large ranching territory to an agricultural center.

The "Farmer's Wife" hat is becoming popular among smart women dressers of England.

Heavy Cut In Price Of Crude Is Likely

NEW YORK, Oct. 19 (AP)—Heavy daily production in the Oklahoma oil fields, notably the Seminole pool and the Burbank field, is said to be the basis for reports reaching Wall Street of a pending decrease of from 20 to 25 percent in the price of mid-continental crude. Oil men to the view, it is said, that a cut would place the industry on a sounder basis.

Pardoned Convict Leaves For Taylor

HUNTSVILLE, Oct. 19 (AP)—Murray Jackson, pardoned last Monday by Governor Ferguson, after serving little more than a year on a five year sentence in connection with the Ku Klux Klan flogging of R. W. Burleson at Taylor in 1923, left the prison walls here at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday for Houston. He said he was going direct to his home at Taylor where his mother is sick.

Jackson told Frank O'Rourke, secretary of the prison committee, that he was deeply appreciative of the action of the woman governor, in giving him his freedom, but expressed bitterness towards Dan Moody, gubernatorial nominee, who as district attorney of Williamson county, prosecuted him.

own welfare and best sight of the common interests of the world, by basing their commercial relations on the economic folly which treats all trading as a form of war.

"There can be no recovery in Europe till politicians in all territories, old and new, realize that trade is not war but a process of exchange, that in time of peace, our neighbors are our customers, and that their prosperity is a condition of our own well-being."

Awakening To Dangers. "Happily there are signs that opinion in all countries is awakening at last to the dangers ahead. The League of Nations and the international chamber of commerce have been laboring to reduce to a minimum all formalities, prohibition and restrictions, to remove inequalities of treatment in other matters than tariffs, to facilitate the transport of passengers and goods.

"Some states have recognized in recent treaties the necessity of freeing trade from restrictions which depress it. And experience is slowly teaching others that the breaking down of the economic barriers between them may prove the surest remedy for the stagnation which exists. . . . We wish to place on record our conviction that the establishment of economic freedom is the best hope of restoring the commerce and the credit of the world."

Coolidge Doubts Move

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (AP)—President Coolidge, though without specific information as to the manifesto asking tariff changes considers that there is a good deal of difference between the methods and purposes of tariff system raised by European states and the tariff system of the United States.

Off hand, the president was said to doubt if much could be done by America and its standard of living. Those who lend money between nations naturally are in favor of practically free trade, it was said at the White House and the same is true of those who import, whereas wage earners and manufacturers desire protection.

The resolution urged cotton farmers in marketing their seed to "store what you can and sell gradually."

The protection given Lubbock and the adjacent territory by the addition of the Avalanche to the ranks of the Associated Press is the same which is offered by the largest newspapers in the country.

Goodman Says Its Hard To Tell Who Tells Tale Right

All that glitters is not gold and all that he hears cannot be true. That is the opinion of Municipal Magistrate James H. Goodman, who yesterday heard two widely differing tales concerning the same accident.

One party to the crash for of course it was an auto smash up—insisted that the other was wholly at fault and the other returned the compliment.

The difference all happened when a man driving a truck crashed into a new sedan being driven by a lady, whom the man said was on the wrong side of the street. The lady, however, claims the man was in the wrong and demanded damages for her car.

When the judge explained, however, that the municipal court was a criminal tribunal and that he could not grant damages until a complaint had been sworn out the lady decided that she would drop the case.

They were both right, to hear them out, the judge told the Journal—much proves his contention made in the opening paragraph.

Aged "Traveler" Is Arrested By Police

An aged man with a name that sounds like an Irish revolution, and with a facial expression that would stop a clock was picked up, Monday, night by a Lubbock policeman. The man was too highly charged with "joy water" to make any kind of a statement, but he rested well in the city jail once he was rolled in.

He stated Tuesday that he is too old to work, and he just don't like to pick cotton, any way. He had money enough to buy "white lightning," but not enough left over to buy a cup of coffee for breakfast. So far as officers are able to determine he is a "foster" of the most unwelcome type, admits being "chased" out of Wichita Falls, but declares he is guilty of no crime.

Very likely he will be transferred to the county.

Business as Usual

When the United States National Bank at East Chicago, Ind., started to build its new building, it had to move the old one to a vacant lot a block away. President Walter J. Riley insisted there must not be a minute's interruption of business. So throughout the ten days it took to move the bank, business was carried on as usual.

DRUNK IS-COSTLY TO LUBBOCK MAN

One drunk, one fine has been the city's program for some time, and as $15 is the least fine one may pay for a "drunk" victims often find it difficult to pay off. But when a fellow is asked to pay two fines the situation is even more serious.

J. W. Bush was arrested late Monday by a member of the police force after a woman who resides on the 2100 block on Main notified officers that a drunk man was trying to enter her home. She was badly frightened, and began calling for an officer when the man first made his appearance. Bush was found just off the porch in her front yard.

He was thoroughly intoxicated and when questioned by the chief Tuesday morning did not remember what time of the day he was arrested. The city will ask him to pay a fine for drunkenness, and the husband of the complaining woman has filed charges of disturbance against him in equity court.

a teacher. While I live in your house it is my home, and in my home I am neither teacher, nor policeman and certainly not a spy. I'm sorry to disappoint you, but you must count me out of these disciplinary activities."

Lillian Stedway rose from her chair, stammering. "Oh, if you feel that way—" She was edging toward the door.

"I do—exactly," said Judith, and went on pounding.

A door bell rang a little later, and Judith heard someone call up the stairs. "Myra, here's you date." The door across the hall opened and French heels clicked down the stairs.

Judith tugged at the box until it yielded, unpacked her books, and then sat back, stretching wearily.

She made ready for bed, brushing her hair in leisurely fashion, and went through the countless little rites that women consider necessary before retirement. At eleven, she crept into bed and was sound asleep in less than five minutes.

It seemed that she had been asleep for many hours when something started her awake. She lay staring into the darkness for a moment, until the sound that had waked her came again. It was at the open window near the foot of her bed.

The hand that she stretched out for her dressing gown shook slightly, but she pulled the robe around her and began to creep toward the window.

As she reached it, a bright shaft from the street lamp fell upon the face of a man standing on the balcony and peering into the room.

"You!" gasped Judith. She caught at the window frame.

Homage Of Old World Royalty Paid To Shrine Of Democracy As Queen Marie Becomes Official Guest Of U. S.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The homage of old world royalty was paid again to the shrine of new world democracy when a pilgrimage today to the tomb of the unknown soldier of the United States became the first official act on American soil of Marie, queen of Rumania.

Beginning her round of formal ceremonies less than 24 hours after her arrival at New York, the trip of America's energetic royal visitor to place a wreath upon the tomb in Arlington national cemetery, Virginia, marked her presence in the sixth state that has felt the touch of her queenly foot, in addition to the District of Columbia, within the span of a day, and in each she has received a royal welcome.

Greeted widely everywhere, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland echoed New York's mad greetings, groping for glimpses at royalty as the queen's special train sped past. Manhattan transfer had its little crowd, applauding at the tiny station, waiting for the smile and the wave of a hand that the gracious queen gave from the observation platform. West Philadelphia lined its terminal with onlookers, as did Baltimore. And all along the line of the smooth passage of the queen's express, on platforms, in factories, on country roads, were smiling faces and peering eyes, waving handkerchiefs and clapping hands—accompaniments of a medieval majesty's progress through her realm.

"I've seen so many smiling faces since I landed," she said in an audience to three press representatives aboard the train. "They make me very happy."

Wanted Here As Queen

"They seem to want me here as a queen," she replied to a question as to whether she would assume an incognito or seek any of the privileges of a private visitor to this country. "What use would there be in my pretending to be someone else?" she asked.

Then, "a queen can't act in the movies, now can she?" was her comment on a rumor that she would act for the screen while in Hollywood.

"I shall not appear in the movies, except as I am snapped on the street—but I'm not saying I won't write for them."

As a speaker, the queen declared herself to be a complete amateur. "My speech in reply to the mayor of New York was the first I ever made," she said. "I had not prepared it. I only spoke from my heart."

"No, I was wrong, she corrected herself. "I recall another speech I made to Americans, too. It was in a Y. M. C. A. hut in France before American doughboys. I was trying to tell them the difference between democracy and bolshevism. Most people have learned since what a big difference there is—I knew it then."

See Country From Car

Seated at the rear of her flower-covered private car, the queen, with her son and daughter, watched the flying American landscape.

"It is very like England," she commented, "only larger, and more brightly colored."

When she reached Washington at the close of her first American day, Queen Marie met another glamorous welcome and had her first glimpse of the nation's capital.

Standing with Secretary Kellogg, faced by an imposing reception committee in which the variegated uniforms of the army and navy, diplomatic insignias and gold lace designated the highest officials of the various departments of government, backed by the color of her own party with Rumanian pomp and ceremony in attendance of its royalty, the queen was the central figure in a scene neither she nor her audience is likely to forget.

Skies Are Ink-Black

Against the almost ink-black sky over the heads of the marines at attention and the squadron of cavalry waiting to form her escort of honor and framed in the arcades of union station, the dome of the capitol shone dully gold.

The army bands drew the Rumanian and the American national anthems from their brasses, while the queen stood, smiling, her arms full of orchids and her gaze on the far-off capitol. Behind her Princess Ileana, carrying roses, and Prince Nicholas waited shyly. While diplomacy claimed the queen, who was ushered into the first car of the entourage by Secretary Kellogg, the navy in the person of Admiral E. W. Eberle, claimed the prince, who had been trained in the British navy. The army, represented by Major General Fox Connor, acting chief of staff, escorted Princess Ileana.

Throngs Crowd Embassy
At the Rumanian legation, where, on the extra-territorial soil of her own country, the queen spent the first night of her stay in the country, the crowd that filled the streets waited like pilgrims for a sight of a new prophetess.

Although she had announced through an officer that she would not appear again, Marie at last relented and appeared, a lovely regal figure, on a balcony above the entrance. She spoke a few words of thanks to her new subjects.

Later she entertained informally at the legation, having as dinner guests some members of the diplomatic corps.

Official Guest of Nation
Today she becomes the official guest of the nation, being received at the White House, with Princess Ileana and Prince Nicholas, at 4 o'clock, and receiving President and Mrs. Coolidge in return at the legation half an hour later.

Dinner at the White House with fifty guests will mark the end of a day full of presidential ceremonies.

The day includes also a trip to Mount Vernon, the fulfillment of another wish expressed on her journey to this country—"To see as many as possible of the historic spots connected with the revolution and the early days of the American republic."

He Carries Rowboat On Car; Fears Rains West Texan Claims

"It may be so, but I don't know—it sounds so very queer!" The old saw might, or might not have been written to fit a case which was found in Lubbock yesterday when J. I. Dean, a civil engineer in the employ of the Humble Oil and Refining company, drove into Lubbock with an eight foot row boat lashed to the side of his automobile.

The boat, which weighs forty pounds and will float three men, has been very useful this fall, Mr. Dean reports, and many times, he says, he has thought of resigning his present position and going in for marine commerce. He will christen the boat if anyone will furnish the champagne, he says, and will allow the purchaser of the champagne to select the name.

WISCONSIN YOUTH HELD FOR VAG

Chas. Ogle, 19, who gave Ithica, Wisconsin, as his home address was arrested Monday night by a member of the police force on a charge of vagrancy. The young man stated today that he had been working in San Angelo for some time, but after hearing the glowing reports from Amarillo—how people could get rich over night, he decided to make a change.

He was sleeping when picked up by the officer, but claims to be innocent of everything except being broke and out of work. He was informed Monday that there were hundreds of jobs on the South Plains for people who wanted to work, but he felt sure he could not hold them. Cotton picking is something he doesn't care to learn.

Officers are at a loss as to what they will do with him. If he is fined for vagrancy he will have to lay his fine out in jail. The city will have to feed him while he is behind the bars, and he is of no earthly use to anybody. It may be he will be transferred to the county, and if so he will work out his fine on the roads.

Chicago Futures Market Expanding

CHICAGO, Oct. 19. (AP)—Rapid expansion of the Chicago cotton futures market has been in progress for the last few months, and the volume of trading for October will be more than double that of September, says Samuel P. Arnot, chairman of the cotton committee of the Board of Trade. He added:

"The surprising growth is due in largest measure to Chicago's attractive contract. Houston and Galveston delivery, which is provided for by the contract, means that the cotton is available at the world's greatest spot cotton basis. It is the point of concentration of over half of the country's export surplus."

BISHOP ARRESTED

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 19. (AP)—Despatches from San Cristobal, say that Bishop Gerardo Anaya of Chiapas has been arrested under orders of the department of the interior and will be brought here under military escort. The charges against him have not been made public.

Riot Call Issued, One Drunk Found

It took Desk Sergeant J. T. Inmon of the Lubbock police department, and a burly fireman yesterday afternoon to place under arrest one gentleman in a decided state of intoxication, who was amusing himself and frightening others by his efforts to gain entrance in homes on West Main street.

According to reports issued from

Police headquarters three hurry-up calls were sent in rapid fire order, causing the Desk Sergeant to leave his desk and with the aid of a fireman, to hurry to the scene of disaster. The man arrested is an old offender and will get his policemen said today.
