Ready for refund? Your check could be in mail

By Kristine Aleman and Jonathon Carrasco
MRT Correspondents

Does a few hundred bucks sound good?

Will you save it? Will you spend it?

Internal Revenue Service refund checks of up to $300 for a single taxpayer, $500 for heads of households and $600 for a married couple filing jointly are part of the 10-year, $1.35 trillion tax cut signed into law last month by President Bush.

"I'm working to become a registered nurse. If I get a check I'll put it towards my schooling to buy books," Gergianna Harbin said. "I know others who are planning the same, but I think people will try to save or invest the money."

Supporters of the refund checks call the money a stimulus to the economy that some economists feel has been lagging recently. If people spend their checks, some believe, the extra cash flow will stimulate the American economy and make sure it maintains a healthy course.

"A tax cut like this worked 20 years ago in the Reagan Administration and I believe it will work again today," said Gary Bodine, a local man planning on spending his refund on col-

Midland tax collectors 'will work with people' to pay delinquent taxes

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

One of life's most unforgiving certainties is taxes.

Pay up or else.

The "or else" could, and often does, include a "Notice of Foreclosure for Delinquent Taxes" if taxes are not paid in a timely manner and legal action to collect late taxes.

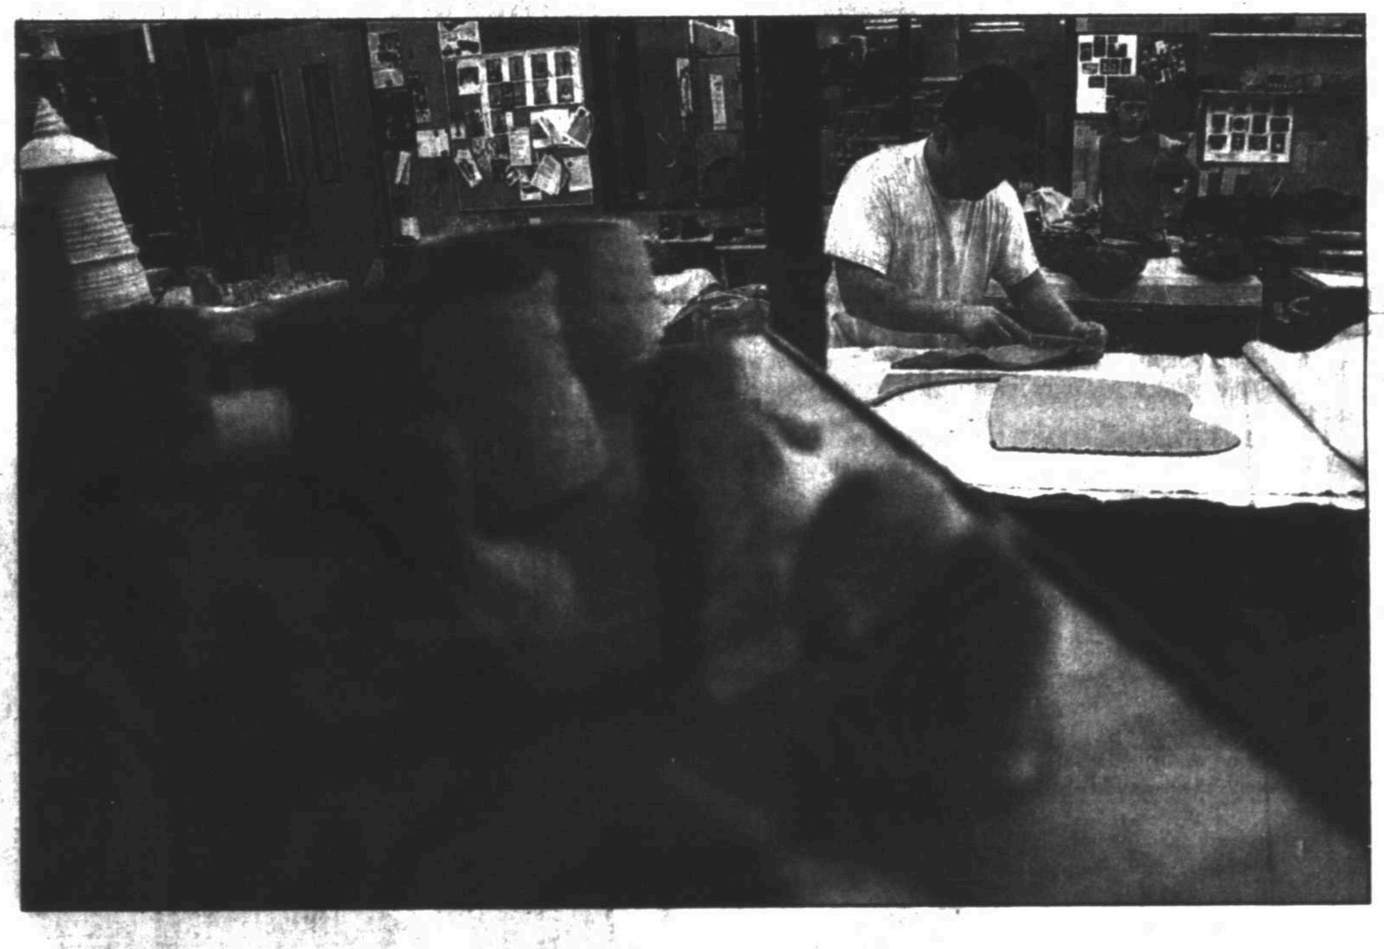

In Texas, unpaid property taxes become delinquent each year on Feb. 1.

And if still unpaid by the following July 1, tax collectors turn the delinquent accounts over to delinquent-tax attorneys, who then go after the taxes and their 15 percent fee paid by the delinquent taxpayers.

In Midland County, in which there are six property-taxing entities, approximately 2 percent of a year's billing of

MODELING A PROGRAM

Art teacher focuses on reality

By Hillary S. Condon

ODESSA — Eight years ago, Christopher Stanley was offered a job he couldn't refuse.

He and his wife then moved to Odessa from Palouse, Wash. Stanley, after all, was thrilled with the opportunity to start an art program at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. He knew the university needed a 3-D specialist who could problem-solve and, quite literally, build the ceramics program from the ground up.

But he may not have been aware of the work that was ahead. Stanley's first priority when he got to UTPB was to figure out how to stop the old art building from flooding and put insulation up on the walls. Bad conditions, he said, were one thing. Renovating the building was another.

"That's not uncommon for ceramics and sculpture programs, because they are dirty and nasty,"

OPEC talks of possible output cuts

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

When OPEC announced two years ago it was establishing a crude oil trading band of $22-$28, and would do whatever it had to to keep it within that range, there were doubts the cartel could do it.

Most in the industry thought the cartel, with a history of quota-cheating, could not muster the discipline to make a trading band stick. Those doubts are now fading in light of the longest period of oil price stability in recent petroleum history, and events this week have demonstrated OPEC is still in control.

Oil prices Thursday dropped to $24.70, their lowest level in 18 months, but that was enough for Ali Rodriguez, Venezuela's oil minister and OPEC's secretary general to issue warnings about possible production cuts to prop up prices.

Rodriguez told reporters at an environmental conference in Bonn, Germany OPEC may act even before its scheduled September meeting in Vienna to boost prices.

OPEC, which pumps about two-fifths of the world's oil, with an official production of 24.2 million barrels a day, has cut crude output targets twice this year, and agreed July 3 to stick with its existing quotas.

While $24.70 may have been the lowest price in 18 months, the real story is the fact oil prices have been above $20 for their longest period in history.

Noting it was hard to conceive of $24 being a low oil price, Bill White, vice president of Pure Resources noted: "There was a time when the industry would have cut off its left leg for $24 oil prices."

Saudi Oil Minister Ali Naimi in a statement Friday, noted $24 was within the OPEC trading range, but the cartel was acting to head off a possible price crash.

"All sources of information are leading us to believe that we are heading toward a crisis, that demand is diminishing, supply is excessive, and therefore if OPEC needs to maintain its price band, it should take drastic action to cut production," Naimi said.

It took less than one day for those comments to be reflected in the market. By the end of the day Friday, the NYMEX futures price for crude futures jumped to $25.59 per barrel.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Cyclists heading out on 150-mile bike ride for MS

By Andrea Fryrear
MRT Correspondent

More than 100 bicyclists left bright and early this morning from EOG Resources at 4000 N. Big Spring St. in Midland. They will ride through the morning and reach Big Spring this afternoon. Once in Big Spring, the riders will enjoy an afternoon and evening of relaxation before riding from Big Spring to Snyder on Sunday.

The riders are part of the MS150 Cactus and Crude Bike Tour, which is an annual event that helps raise money and awareness for Multiple Sclerosis, a disease that affects the central nervous system. This year marks the 20th anniversary of the tour in Midland.

Each year more than 70,000 riders across the country participate in more than 120 tours like the Cactus and Crude to benefit the MS Society.

Midland Academy hires Charter Schools, USA to manage school

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

After nearly three hours of discussion and deliberation, the board of trustees at the Midland Academy Charter School voted 2-0 Friday to accept Charter Schools, USA's proposal to manage the school.

The same board voted last month to cut ties with its former management company, Advantage Schools.

Since MACS started two years ago, it has experienced problems with low state test scores, discipline and staffing problems, and even issues concerning Advantage's financial viability. On July 2, Advantage was acquired by Mosaica Education, which also presented a proposal to the board. Board members stated their primary goals for a company as financial viability, keeping the current staff and director and delivering a curriculum that would raise the school's scores on the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills.

"I like Charter Schools (USA)," said Bobby Hennis, president of MACS's Parent-Teacher Organization. "I like what they have to offer. I like their attitudes as far as quick responses and financial viability."

Two representatives from Charter Schools, USA made the presentation Friday night. President and CEO Jonathan Hage said he didn't know the specifics of all of MACS's problems, but he had a definite plan to better the school. He offered a three-pronged plan for improving

Suicides refocus spotlight on baffling disorder

By Lindsey Tanner
Associated Press

CHICAGO — A mother of quadruplets flees home and drowns herself in Lake Michigan less than a week after their births.

Another new mother disappears from her house several months after her baby is born and jumps to her death from a 12th-story hotel window.

Aracely Erives, whose body was found in the lake on Wednesday, and Melanie Stokes, who died June 11, were among four new mothers to commit suicide in Chicago over the past two months, authorities say.

The women could have met pushing strollers in the park, sharing stories of sleepless nights, first smiles and favorite lullabies. Instead, at a time that is supposed to bring wondrous joy, they were all struck by postpartum depression.

The condition has been in the spotlight recently because of Andrea Yates, a Houston woman said to have been afflicted with the most severe form of the illness. She is accused of drowning her five children in the bathtub June 20.

Authorities believe the recent cases do not mean there is any surge in postpartum depression-linked violence, but rather reflect a slowly growing awareness of the baffling disorder.

Experts admit they know frustratingly little about postpartum depression and its causes. And some say not enough is being done to detect it before tragedy strikes.

"People dismiss it and say that you can just snap out of it, that you've chosen to feel this way. That is totally wrong," said Lisa Anderson, a Tacoma, Wash., shipping company auditor. She went to several doctors before finding one who took her seriously when she developed postpartum depression after the birth of her third child last year.

Anderson, 33, said she thought her family was better off without her and contemplated suicide. But medication and counseling helped her, and she said women should know "they shouldn't blame themselves for this illness."

AP Photo

Melanie Stokes holds her daughter, Sommer Skyy, in this recent family photo. Stokes, 41, who suffered from postpartum psychosis, jumped to her death from a Chicago hotel on June 11. She is one of four new mothers who suffered from varying degrees of postpartum depression that have taken their lives in Chicago in the past two months. Stokes' mother, Carol Blocker is currently promoting legislation which Rep. Bobby Rush introduced in Stokes' name that seeks more research and services for postpartum depression victims.

Postpartum depression happens in about 10 percent of pregnancies and typically develops within the first few weeks after childbirth, according to the National Institutes of Health.

It is often blamed on the dramatic drop in estrogen and progesterone, pregnancy-sustaining hormones, that occurs with childbirth. But there is little scientific evidence to support that theory, said Dr. Valerie Davis Raskin, a University of Chicago psychiatrist.

An NIH study is seeking to test the theory by using drugs to create a "scaled-down" hormonal state of pregnancy in non-pregnant women and then measuring their mood after immediate withdrawal of the synthetic hormones.

One problem is trying to figure out which women are susceptible, since all women experience a hormone crash after giving birth but only a fraction develop postpartum depression, Raskin said.

The condition is known to run in families, and women who had had previous mental ailments, including an extreme form of premenstrual syndrome, also face an increased risk, she said.

Women with difficult pregnancies, such as 27-year-old Erives, who spent more than a month on bedrest, are also at risk.

Carol Blocker, Stokes' mother, said her daughter's symptoms began soon after her baby's birth in February.

"She stopped eating, she couldn't sleep, she was very agitated," Blocker said Thursday. "She told me that she felt like a walking zombie. She she told me she was a living corpse."

Stokes, 41, was eventually hospitalized and diagnosed with postpartum psychosis, an extreme variation that affects one in 500 to 1,000 women. But she was later sent home.

Stokes' mother is promoting legislation Rep. Bobby Rush, D-Ill., introduced in her daughter's name that seeks more research and services for postpartum depression victims. "I'm not going to let her die in vain," Blocker said.

The U.S. government does not track postpartum depression-related violence, but estimates that up to 200 U.S. infants a year are killed and many more suicides are committed by afflicted mothers, said Laurence Kruckman, a medical anthropologist at Indiana University in Pennsylvania.

Kruckman said the United States lags behind places like Britain, where all new mothers are evaluated for postpartum depression before they are sent home, and nurses make at least two mandatory home visits to check for symptoms within 40 days of childbirth.

At Indiana Hospital outside Pittsburgh, where Kruckman works as a consultant, all new mothers are screened for postpartum depression and are offered free support-group sessions with their babies where experts look for symptoms.

New York and New Jersey are the only states that require hospitals to give mothers information on postpartum depression, said Sonia Murdock, president of Postpartum Support International, a Santa Barbara, Calif., group.

NATION IN BRIEF

■ TV show actors arrested

LOS ANGELES — Two actors who appeared on "America's Most Wanted" were arrested on charges of having sex with a 14-year-old girl living at a shelter for abused children.

The alleged acts occurred in January after a film crew finished shooting in an alley next to the Children of the Night shelter.

Cristian Saliadarre, 28, surrendered to police Wednesday and Anthony Alvarez, 27, was arrested two weeks ago.

Both pleaded innocent to charges of sodomy and oral copulation with a person under 16, said Deputy District Attorney Melinda Murray. If convicted, the men face up to three years and eight months in prison.

Authorities said one of the men climbed through a window at the shelter, which helps sexually abused teens and former prostitutes, and had sex with the girl in her dormitory room. She later climbed out of the window and had sex with the other man in the alley, authorities said.

■ Serial killer to be executed

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — A judge agreed Friday that one of the nation's first known female serial killers is competent and can therefore fire her attorneys to hasten her execution.

"I am a serial killer. I would kill again," Aileen Wuornos, 45, said during 1 1/2 hours on the witness stand.

She said she wanted to fire her state-appointed attorneys and end her appeals because she wants to come clean and make her peace with God.

"I wanted to clear all the lies and let the truth come out," she said. "I have hate crawling through my system."

Circuit Judge Michael Hutcheson said he would recommend to the Florida Supreme Court that Wuornos is competent to make such a decision. He told Wuornos it would put her on the "fast track" to be executed.

"I hope you can live or die with that decision," Hutcheson said.

■ Budget surplus shrinks

WASHINGTON — The government's budget surplus in June was a lot smaller than for the same month last year, reflecting the impact of a weak economy.

The Treasury Department reported Friday that the government's surplus last month came to $31.9 billion. That's 43 percent lower than the $55.9 billion surplus posted in June 2000.

As the faltering economy has taken a bite out of corporate profits, corporate income taxes have fallen as well, the Congressional Budget Office said.

Corporate income tax payments in June came to $29.9 billion, a 26 percent drop from the $40.5 billion collected in June 2000.

Individual income tax payments were down by 6.8 percent, totaling $93.7 billion last month, against $100.5 billion a year ago.

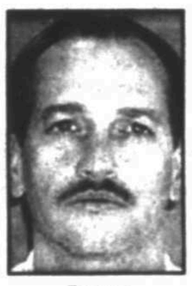

June's surplus was slightly larger than the $30 billion projected by the CBO, but was smaller than the $36.5 billion expected by private economists.

Transient known as 'Cowboy Mike' arrested

By Chuck Oxley
Associated Press

VALE, Ore. — A transient suspected in the disappearance of four women and the shooting of another was captured Friday after a highway chase that ended when he got out and tried to swim to freedom in the Snake River.

Braae

Michael John Braae, a 41-year-old barroom womanizer whose penchant for cowboy hats and boots earned him the nickname "Cowboy Mike," eluded officers in the 13-mile chase and then for almost an hour more after he jumped in the water. He was arrested about 2 1/2 miles downstream.

Braae had last been seen late last week, when he was in a bar in Yakima, Wash., with 50-year-old Marchelle Morgan, Garcia said.

Morgan was found Sunday shot in the head in the bushes by the side of a rural road. She remained in critical condition Thursday.

Braae also is suspected in the disappearance or death of four other women since 1997. All had been seen talking with him, most recently a woman found dead July 7.

"He's known as a womanizer, known to pick up women in taverns," Garcia said. "He's not from anywhere; he's from here and there."

Friday's chase began when Braae was spotted at the Black Canyon Truck Stop along Interstate 84 in Idaho, about 13 miles east of the Oregon line, a police dispatcher said.

State troopers chased him down the highway, onto some side roads and back onto the freeway. Spike strips were placed on the road and blew out at least one of Braae's front tires, the dispatcher said.

Braae stopped on the bridge 40 feet over the Snake River, which divides Oregon and Idaho, and jumped in. At least once he went to shore and tried to hide in some bushes before returning to the water.

Eventually, a police dog was sent into the river.

"That encouraged him to get out," Cordes said. "They had to go in and drag him out of the water, too, though. He had to be tired."

Cordes said Braae was being taken to the Malheur County Jail in Vale.

Lt. Dan Garcia of the Yakima County sheriff's office had said Thursday that an arrest warrant was being prepared in the Morgan shooting, "probably for attempted murder."

In the Puget Sound city of Lacey, Wash., Braae is a "person of interest" in the killing of Lori Jones, 44, who was found dead in her apartment July 8, said Lt. Tom Nelson.

The two were seen together at a bar in nearby Olympia the previous night.

Braae has not been charged in the Jones case or the three others, in which police say he was the last person seen talking to the women.

He is charged in arrest warrants with a parole violation in Thurston County, Wash., and with failing to make child support payments in California, Garcia said.

Charles Irvin Fain, left, is shown in this photo. A federal judge late Friday voided the conviction and death sentence of Fain and ordered the state to either retry him in 60 days for the 1982 murder of Daralyn Johnson, right, a 9-year-old Canyon County girl, or free him. The order by U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill followed submission of a report by Attorney General Al Lance that DNA testing showed that hairs found on the clothes of Daralyn Johnson were not Fain's.

DNA tests cast doubt on Idaho man's conviction

By Chuck Oxley
Associated Press

BOISE, Idaho — After almost 20 years on death row, Charles Irvin Fain may be set free after new DNA testing cast a long shadow of doubt on his conviction.

The 52-year-old Fain was found guilty in 1983 of kidnapping, sexually assaulting and drowning 9-year-old Daralyn Johnson.

But after the DNA tests on pubic hairs, his conviction was set aside by a judge who gave prosecutors until Sept. 4 to file new charges or free Fain.

"He's an innocent man who has been in jail for 18 years for a crime he didn't commit. It has been a tremendously long battle," said Spencer McIntyre, one of Fain's lawyers.

Daralyn was abducted as she walked to school in 1982. Her body was found by fishermen a few days later along the Snake River.

Fain, a handyman, moved into Daralyn's neighborhood shortly after her death. His attorneys said he passed a lie-detector test but was arrested and charged with murder.

Among the evidence against Fain were statements from cellmates who said he admitted to the crime and a girl who saw the abduction from a distance. Prosecutors also said a partially washed-out footprint near Daralyn's body resembled the sole of a tennis shoe found at Fain's home.

But the key evidence came from an FBI forensics expert, who said pubic hairs found on the victim's clothing may have been Fain's.

Last year, U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill authorized $18,000 for new forensic tests. And last month, a Virginia laboratory said that none of the three hairs — one found on Daralyn's sock, the others in her underpants — was Fain's.

Two weeks ago, the judge set aside Fain's conviction.

According to the Death Penalty Information Center in Washington, 10 death row inmates have been exonerated by DNA evidence since 1990.

Prosecutors have not said what they plan to do. But prosecutor David Young acknowledged that winning another conviction against Fain could be difficult.

"If we do have the wrong guy, it's our job to identify that and get him out of there," Young said.

The girl's mother, Deanna Johnson, did not return a call for comment.

Fain is eligible to be moved off death row while awaiting a new trial or release, but he has asked to remain in the same cell where he has lived for years.

"He's used to it," defense attorney D. Frederick Hoopes said.

Powell foresees flood of emotions on trip to Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — Colin Powell, reflecting on his Army service in Vietnam more than three decades ago, said Friday he expects his upcoming visit to Hanoi to evoke powerful memories of the battlefield deaths of many close friends.

"I'm sure the years will peel back three and four decades and the emotions will be powerful and strong," the secretary of state said as he looked ahead to his first return visit to the country since 1969, a traumatic time that indelibly shaped his views on how America should fight its wars.

However, Powell said he is not haunted by that wartime past: "There are no ghosts within me that need exorcism."

Returning next Tuesday on a mission of peace and reconciliation, Powell said he wants to encourage the nation's erstwhile enemy "to move forward with reform and openness."

After a brief visit to Japan, Powell will make a three-day stop in Vietnam, where he will attend a conference of leaders from the Asia-Pacific region. Afterward, he plans stops in China, South Korea and Australia.

Powell arrived in Vietnam as a 25-year old Army captain in December 1962, well before the United States became involved there militarily in a serious way.

He returned as a major in July 1968, when 545,000 thousand U.S. troops were in Vietnam and the death tolls often ran into the hundreds each week.

In his biography, Powell saw the war unfold from his perspective as an executive officer whose role was to ensure that his battalion had all that it required. He was unforgiving about the way the war was conducted.

"Our senior officers knew the war was going badly," he wrote. "They bowed to groupthink pressure and kept up pretenses, the phony measure of body counts, the comforting illusions of secure hamlets, the inflated progress reports. As a corporate entity, the military failed to talk straight to its political superiors or to itself."

He later recommended a new approach that has since become known informally as the Powell doctrine: "Have a clear political objective and stick to it. Use all the force necessary, and do not apologize for going in big if that's what it takes. Decisive force ends wars quickly and in the long run saves lives."

Secretary of State Colin Powell will make a trip to Asia next week and said that he will feel powerful and strong emotions when he returns to Vietnam for the first time, where he served two tours of duty.

Asked Friday if it was a mistake for the United States to have become in involved in Vietnam, Powell said that although the commitment was not successful, "I would never say to those young men and women who, as I, were veterans that it was the wrong cause in the beginning.

"Toward the end ... it became clear that we were not going to prevail and maybe a different political and military judgment should have been made at that point."

Powell has visited all major regions of the world except Asia since taking office. His visit includes a mix of defense treaty allies — Japan, South Korea and Australia — as well as two communist countries, China and Vietnam.

In China, Powell said he will make "absolutely clear" to Beijing's leaders that the United States is seeking a better relationship after a somewhat bumpy ride over the last six months.

"The United States is not seeking enmity with China," he said, adding that he will tell the Chinese "we will work with them as they continue on that path of reform, as they join world institutions and adopt world standards in trade and economics."

On other subjects, Powell said:

■ It might be useful to have Americans and other monitors oversee a cease fire between Israel and the Palestinians, but no mechanism has been established for that yet. He ruled out the possibility of imposing a monitoring system if one side or the other opposes it.

■ The administration is looking for ways to give legal status to some Mexican undocumented aliens in the United States and to have a more equitable system of dealing with migration flows.

■ The administration is disappointed that the recent India-Pakistan summit meeting did not produce more progress. "We plan to work very hard with both countries to make sure that our relations with both countries are strong and thriving and growing," he said.

REBATE: Refund isn't necessarily cut-and-dry

lege expenses and sharing the extra money on worthy causes. "I believe people will do a combination of spending and investing which will be healthy for the economy."

Unfortunately, the refund checks, like the tax cut, isn't necessarily a simple cut-and-dry deal.

"What people need to understand is that the check is an advanced credit to the 2001 taxes," said Larry Edgerton, Midland CPA. "It's not a handout, and that's what some people are thinking."

The refund, a dollar for dollar reduction in tax, is computed as credit in the 2001 tax return, he said, and taxpayers will not see the full effects of the tax cut until 2010.

The refund checks represent an advance payment for the new 10 percent income tax rate on the first portion of taxpayer income, which is retroactive to Jan. 1.

"The key is, if the payment is larger than the credit on the 2001 tax return, you don't have to pay back any difference," Edgerton said.

Notices describing the details of the upcoming tax refund checks were sent to about 112 million taxpayers Monday. The Internal Revenue Service notices will explain the good news about their check to most, but some will find out they are not eligible and will not receive a check in the near future.

"Basically, they're giving us relief for the first half of the year, giving us a 10 percent tax bracket and making it retroactive," Edgerton said. "Unfortunately, there's not an easy way to explain it, it's not real simple."

Meanwhile, Bush administration officials also are considering the long-term possibility of overhauling the tax code. Some advocates have pushed for a flat tax rate, where all taxpayers are subject to a single rate, while others favor switching to a consumption tax and ridding the income tax entirely.

The question remains: What should a taxpayer do with the check in hand?

"A lot of people are going to spend them, and I suspect it would be a good idea. It probably makes sense since they are trying to stimulate the economy with a retroactive tax cut," Edgerton said. "If people don't spend, they certainly don't stimulate the economy."

It's hard to tell what people are going to do with their check when and if they get one. Some people are still oblivious they stand to receive a check and others remain skeptical until the check is cashed and safe in their own bank account.

"We got a notice about our refund check in the mail this weekend. It's still hard to believe we'll be getting $600," said Georgia Staff, who was preparing to visit family in Dallas. "My husband and I will most likely put the money in savings, but I know that my daughter is planning on using hers as a down payment on a new house."

While most grocery stores do not cash the government check, Wal-Mart Supercenter in Midland is preparing for the refund rush by designating one cash register located at the service desk specifically for cashing refund checks.

"We usually don't cash government checks," said Gladys Gomez, assistant store manager. "We're making an exception with it being so close to the beginning of school. Customers can cash their checks and continue shopping."

Beginning July 23 through the end of September, Wal-Mart will cash the checks free of charge.

However, for those who are hesitant to let go of their checks, Edgerton says it's not a bad idea to hang on to them.

"Wait and see how the 2001 tax return shakes out," he said. "It's very possible you could turn around next April 15 and owe additional taxes."

The checks started going out on Friday, beginning with taxpayers whose Social Security numbers end in 00 through 09. They will continue each week through the end of September when those whose numbers end in 90 through 99 will receive their checks.

PAY: Collectors will pursue back taxes 'aggressively'

(From 1A)

$114 million in property taxes becomes delinquent. But most of that is collected — eventually.

A tax lien is automatically placed on taxable property and stays there until taxes are satisfied.

"The tax lien is extinguishable only when you pay the taxes," noted Chief Appraiser Ron Stegall of the Midland Central Appraisal District (MCAD).

In the 20 years since 1981, there currently is about $6.9 million remaining in uncollected taxes among four of the six taxing entities, Stegall said. He collects taxes for the city of Midland, the Midland Independent School District (ISD), Midland College and the Midland County Hospital District associated with Midland Memorial Hospital.

Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Kathy McCourt Reeves collects taxes for Midland County and the Greenwood ISD and was not available on Friday to cite the delinquent taxes due the county and Greenwood.

"It's not fair," Stegall said, for 2 percent of property owners not to render their taxes when 98 percent of the taxpayers do pay their taxes timely.

Of the $6.9 million remaining in delinquent taxes monitored by MCAD over the 20-year period, Stegall noted $3.6 million is due from 2000 forward.

"We can, and we very well may and will, file suit on the homeowner's property to collect delinquent taxes," Stegall noted. "We very well may and will follow up on whatever legal remedies we have. We do it all the time."

However, Stegall, who has been MCAD's chief appraiser since 1988, said he does "not remember actually selling a homestead" to collect taxes.

"The majority of the property that we actually sell on the courthouse steps (at sheriff's sales) for back taxes ... are vacant lots, rent houses and rent property, and commercial property," such as office buildings, he noted.

Stegall has been with the district for more than 20 years.

"We will work with people," he noted. "We are not in the business to foreclose property. That's our last resort.

"Our business and what we want to do is to collect the taxes."

If taxpayers tell MCAD's agents they "can't pay the whole X amount of dollars" due the district but can pay "$50 a month or whatever," the district will be cooperative, Stegall said.

"And we will work with them. They will pay the penalty and interest on whatever is due. We will work with them on a payout agreement," Stegall said.

At the same time, "We will pursue our legal remedies.

However, "You are not going to find any widow ladies that we foreclosed on and threw out of their houses. We don't do that."

Stegall noted homeowners age 65 and over by law may defer paying taxes if they cannot afford them. However, the taxes would be assumed by their heirs.

MCAD has contracted with an Austin-based law firm, McCreary, Veselka, Bragg & Allen, to collect delinquent taxes.

And the law firm is paid a 15 percent collection fee, based on the taxes due, by the delinquent taxpayer and not by the district.

The delinquent-tax notice says in part: "Unless these taxes are paid by the close of business (on a specified date), suit will be filed to foreclose the tax lien. The foreclosure suit will ultimat ly result in the sale of your property for the taxes due."

The notice "gets them in to start making payments," Stegall noted.

The straightforward wording of the notice apparently offended one taxpayer, whose delinquent tax bill was $26.92.

"... It is important to me to pay my bills on time," the taxpayer said in a note to the newspaper. "Like my Dad (a Marine officer) said, 'Paying taxes is a small price to pay to live in this country.' I pay taxes with this sentiment in mind."

The wording of the notice and "MCAD's tactics (may) cause unnecessary embarrassment and anxiety to the citizens of Midland," the taxpayer surmised. "There has to be a better way than threatening letters."

David Grimes, who is a veteran member of the MCAD board of directors, noted it is "fair to complain" to the MCAD board.

"We really don't want it (foreclosure) to happen," Grimes said. "We (directors) back what we think is an office that does a good job, and we are proud of their work.

"We would like to hear right from the public straight to the board," which meets at 9 a.m. on the third Wednesday of each month at MCAD's offices in the 4600 block of Andrews Highway in Midland.

"Facts are facts," Grimes noted. "Dates are dates. We want to present it (information) in a way that indicates we are understanding of feelings of people."

Grimes said the board does not intend to be insensitive.

At the same time, Grimes said, "People have the responsibility to pay their taxes and do their best to do their business within the law."

Stegall noted foreclose on property takes place in a public auction on the Midland County Courthouse steps. Bidding starts at the amount of taxes, interest and penalty due.

If the successful bid "goes above the taxes or whatever costs we have in it," the remainder "goes into (state) district court as an overage." Stegall said. "And the previous owner has a right to retrieve that money by claiming it out of the district court."

Delinquent taxes may range from $5 upward toward $50,000, he said.

"Some is not collectible," Stegall noted, and cited "personal property — furniture, fixtures, equipment, inventory — of defunct companies. It's gone."

Of delinquent taxes, "We are going to pursue that very aggressively — the higher dollar amounts (first)," he said. "It may take us a while to get down" to lessen sums "as far as filing suits."

Of the district's roles to appraise property and to collect taxes, "We are not going to softpeddle it," Stegall said. "It is very serious. They (taxpayers) need to pay the taxes. Most people end up paying before they (their taxes) ever go delinquent.

"If they don't have the money, we will work with them ... as long as they try to make some kind of good effort," Stegall said. "We will work out an agreement. By the same token, we look with disfavor if they are not trying to do anything. We will proceed with whatever legal remedies we have" to collect taxes.

2 Midlanders face possession, burglary charges

By D. Lance Lunsford
Staff Writer

Two Midland men face charges of burglary of a vehicle, criminal mischief and possession of marijuana resulting from an alleged offense Thursday morning at the Midland County Barn and Extension Building at 2435 East Business 20.

According to Lt. Rory McKinney of the Criminal Investigation Division of the Midland County Sheriff's Department, the Midland Police Department initially investigated the burglary of a vehicle offense, but notified deputies after investigations revealed the offense occurred on county property.

"The burglary of a vehicle I believe came from the MPD. When the county employees showed up, they saw some their cars were torn up," McKinney said.

Elisa Alex Sosa, 24, of Midland and his nephew, a juvenile, were arrested by Midland County Sheriff's deputies after the subsequent investigation allegedly revealed the two were involved in the burglary of a vehicle as well as the criminal mischief from the vehicle damage.

Deputies tracked the suspects by foot through brush and thick trees to Sun Valley Mobile Park where they found a battery taken from a vehicle from the barn.

"It was all footprints. It's probably about a half a mile," McKinney said.

Deputies searched the home and vehicles on the scene where they found the two subjects. Deputies said they seized marijuana from a vehicle with a street value of approximately $1,000.

McKinney said the two eventually admitted to three other burglaries that occurred in the area, but the burglaries fell under Midland Police jurisdiction because the incidents occurred within the city limits.

Police charge mother with murder in 'missing baby' case

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Leticia Gomez, a 27-year-old Odessa woman, was charged with murder on Friday in connection with the so-called "missing baby" case. She was awaiting arraignment today and remained in custody at the Ector County Law Enforcement Center.

Mrs. Gomez, the mother of the missing baby, earlier had been charged with "tampering with evidence," after the baby's remains were found Thursday morning near the intersection of Sergeant and Burchfield streets, south of Interstate 20.

The investigation began more than a week ago — on July 13 — when Odessa police were notified of "a suspicious woman" dumping something in an alley. Police later found bloody woman's clothing in a nearby Dumpster. Soon after, police began questioning Ms. Gomez, who had been identified as the baby's mother.

But police were suspicious of her story from the beginning.

Early in the investigation, Sherri Thompson, a Police Department spokesperson, said, "Basically we've found evidence that a full-term baby was delivered, but we don't know where the baby's at. We know who the woman is. Her story is not what we're believing."

After the baby's remains were located Thursday, an autopsy was performed.

"The preliminary report has indicated that the baby's remains were so badly decomposed a cause of death could not be determined," according to a written statement from the Odessa Police Department. "However, through continued investigation, Leticia Gomez has now been additionally charged with murder."

ART: Building now has state-of-the-art equipment

(From 1A)

he said with a laugh. "They're hot, they're sweaty, they smell funny. But the old building was woefully inadequate."

Today, UTPB's art building has state-of-the-art equipment and ventilation systems, all with a price tag of $2.8 million.

But it still wasn't enough.

After Stanley and his first group of students renovated the studio to bring it up to a workable condition, they realized basic tools for art don't come cheap. Kilns and furnaces for baking ceramics and pottery pieces cost upward of $30,000. But using the items gathered from oil fields and materials donated by the community, they simply built their own.

So it wasn't just saving money, but the benefit to students that pleased UTPB administration.

"I think the most positive aspect is not that we saved a bunch of money," said William Fannin, UTPB's vice president for Academic Affairs. "It's a good learning experience. Everything makes a difference. The design and construction of the kiln, that's going to impact how their work is going to look. It's better than if they had five kilns shipped in, or if they had a textbook."

Stanley said where larger schools can teach the history and the theories of art, his students live it. Instead of books about ancient ceramics and kilns, Stanley and his students gather manure from local fields to demonstrate how ancient Native Americans used it to heat their pots.

"I think other institutions with more faculty can diversify," he said. "This teacher might teach theory, and this teacher might teach practice. Well here, we've got to smash all of those together."

He also was pleased at how well the students took to the unusual methods.

"They knew that they were responsible and accountable for their education," he said. "And they were going to make it the best they could make it. If you have passionate students, you'll rise up to meet them; and you will conquer anything it takes to get them to where they can work."

Above all of the theories, Stanley believes he has given his students a priceless gift.

"It's stacking brick, this is the funny part," he said. "It's not a glorious job, this is what most people don't go to college to study. But it means more than that. It means you've been given a gift to learn how to do things yourself."

And in a university setting, the emphasis is on preparing students for "the real world." Stanley said that's when reality beats theory every time.

"The fear is that if you lie to an artist, and then they graduate, thinking it's something less," he said. "And then they get out there. If my students get out there, and they don't have the chops to do the thing that they studied ... somebody's going to know that in about two seconds. They're not going to be able to talk, they're not going to be able to problem-solve. And if they're in the running for a position, and these people are serious about finding someone, they want reality, they don't want theory."

HIRE: MACS trustees vote for Charter Schools, USA

The first aspect, he said, is local representatives. Second, to incorporate a growth strategy for extending the school's grade levels to include 7-12. The third aspect was to provide a support system where the company will work with parents, teachers and the school director to better the school.

But he said he certainly won't change everything.

"We offer the research, the expertise, the teacher training," Hage said. "But we will certainly keep some things. We definitely don't want to throw the baby out with the bath water."

Local trustees Paul St. Hiliare and Maria Duron voted to accept Charter Schools, USA. Trustee Mike Krusee was absent from the meeting, and board chairwoman Melinda Wheatley abstained from discussion and voting because her employer has shareholders in two of the bidding companies.

TREK: Cyclists to be driven home from Snyder

www.findu.com/cgi-bin/find.cgi?kd5mhm-4 thanks to the Midland Amateur Radio Club, one of the organizations providing communications for the bike tour.

Free therapeutic massages, grilled fajitas, courtesy of the Howard County Fire Department, movies and awards will be featured as the cyclists unwind on the campus of the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf (SWCID) in Big Spring. Jan Gray, a teacher from Goddard Jr. High School who suffers from MS, also will be speaking tonight.

Once the cyclists reach Snyder on Sunday, they will be fed and loaded into vans along with their luggage and bicycles and transported back to Midland.

Cyclists can ride individually or with a team of at least three other people, and must raise at least $200. By raising extra cash, cyclists become eligible for prizes. This year's top fund-raiser will receive two round-trip tickets on Southwest Airlines.

Senate gives Gregory permanent Appeals Court seat after long fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a yearlong battle, the Senate confirmed Roger Gregory on Friday as the first black federal appeals court judge in the district that represents a higher percentage of minorities than any other in the nation.

It took two presidents, three senators and several deals to permanently integrate the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, a southern circuit serving Virginia, South Carolina, North Carolina, West Virginia and Maryland.

Gregory's district has 22 percent minorities, the highest percentage in the nation.

"It always speaks well when the courts are reflective of all that America has, but the most important thing is that judges serve with integrity and competence in every regard," he said after the Senate confirmed him to a lifetime appointment, 93-1.

Gregory watched the action from his home in Richmond, Va., more than a year after Sen. John Warner, R-Va., and then-Sen. Charles Robb, D-Va., said they would submit his name for the federal appeals court. "It feels good to finally have it over," Gregory said.

Senate Republican Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., voted against Gregory because then-President Clinton appointed him to the court on a temporary basis last December while the GOP-controlled Senate was in recess, said spokesman Ron Bonjean.

The Senate unanimously approved two U.S. District Court judges, Sam Haddon and Richard Cebull, both of Montana.

The federal judiciary has been a flash point between Republicans and Democrats, and Gregory's confirmation illustrated the machinations that have gone on in the Capitol.

Last year, Democrats accused Republicans of blocking Clinton's judicial nominees out of hope that a GOP president would win the November election. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., for example, stopped several North Carolina nominees for Gregory's seat by using a senatorial prerogative that lets senators bar nominees from their state.

Congress approves $6.5 billion for defense, farmers, AIDS

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congress overwhelmingly approved $6.5 billion on Friday for defense cost overruns, aid to farmers in the Northwest and other programs in a bill that provided an early of test of President Bush's desire to live within budget limits.

The House agreed to the compromise legislation by 375-30 and the Senate used a voice vote to ship it to the White House for Bush's signature. The bill is for the remaining 10 weeks of fiscal 2001, which runs through Sept. 30.

"This bill is proof that fiscal discipline can be exercised and enacted in a timely manner," White House budget director Mitchell Daniels said in a statement.

The measure is largely similar to what Bush proposed last month, with its focus — $5.6 billion — on Pentagon fuel, healthcare and operations costs plus the Energy Department's nuclear weapons activities.

The measure also includes $20 million to help farmers in the Northwest's Klamath Basin, who are engaged in a bitter water battle with the government. In addition, it has $116 million to process and mail the income-tax rebates going out this summer; an expected $84 million for miners and others sickened by radioactivity from nuclear weapons testing; $100 million to battle AIDS and other diseases in Africa and parts of the world; $300 million to help the poor pay cooling and heating bills; and $5 million to step up efforts to keep mad cow and foot-and-mouth disease from entering the country.

Bush had insisted on keeping the price tag at $6.5 billion, the amount left under budget caps Congress has imposed on itself. He also said he wanted Congress to declare no emergencies, which would allow extra spending that is paid for out of the federal surplus and that is exempted from budget caps.

The White House won both those demands, even forcing Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Texas, the No. 3 House leader, to back down from attempts to add $1.3 billion for the aftermath of Tropical Storm Allison and other natural disasters. Allison badly flooded much of DeLay's Houston district.

Because of pressure to respond to that storm, the bill dropped a $389 million cut in disaster aid the House had included in its initial version of the bill.

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., cooperated in limiting the price tag to $6.5 billion, as many Democrats wanted to deny Bush the easy political target they could have given him by insisting on extra spending.

And lawmakers of both parties said the measure's price tag was contained by simply not providing enough money for defense and natural disasters — money Congress may have to grant later.

"This is more or less a Band-Aid on what our real needs are" for defense, said House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bill Young, R-Fla.

"If we have one more storm, this bill will clearly be inadequate, and I think the administration knows it," said Wisconsin Rep. David Obey, the top Democrat on the Appropriations Committee.

Overall, the bill contains $7.5 billion in new spending and $1 billion in cuts from this year's defense budget, leaving a net expenditure of $6.5 billion.

WORLD IN BRIEF

■ Gang in Nigeria kills up to 22

ABUJA, Nigeria — An armed gang attacked the house of a volunteer crime fighter and then turned their guns on his neighbors, killing up to 22 people in a revenge attack on a citizens anti-crime movement.

The 30-strong robbery gang raided the home of Francis Okafor in Awkuzu town in Anambra state, but Okafor was out, so they killed his two wives and burned down the house, the national newspaper Vanguard reported Friday. The attackers accused Okafor of pressuring the gang and having its members killed.

They then moved on to others homes — killing residents who came out to answer their cries for help.

Police and residents rushing to the scene flagged down a bus to ask its occupants for help — not realizing the bus was carrying the fleeing gang members. The gang members opened fire, killing five residents and two policemen, the newspaper reported.

The assault started Wednesday before midnight. While media reports put the death toll at 22, police spokesman Yemi Ajayi confirmed only eight deaths.

With crime rampant in Nigeria, anti-crime groups and vigilante gangs are common — including some known for carrying swords and beheading suspected criminals on the spot.

■ Pope winds up vacation

LES COMBES, Italy — Pope John Paul II wound up his vacation in the Italian Alps on Friday, heading for his summer palace outside Rome and a meeting with President Bush.

Following his long-standing custom, John Paul celebrated Mass for local parish priests before leaving and thanked everyone in Les Combes, the Valle D'Aosta village where he goes to rest every summer, for their hospitality.

After his 12 days in the shadow of Mont Blanc, John Paul was returning Friday to his summer residence in the hills outside Rome, Castel Gandolfo. Bush has an audience with the pope there on Monday.

The Vatican, meanwhile, announced Friday that the 81-year-old pope would visit the former Soviet republic of Kazakstan in September. The pope is traveling to the Central Asian nation and to Armenia as part of his efforts for better relations with Orthodox Christians.

■ Agency: No more spying

MEXICO CITY — Mexico's main intelligence agency will no longer spy on political opponents, its new leader said, adding that the practice was widespread under former governments.

In the past, the Center for Investigation and National Security "carried out political espionage and invaded the private sphere of individuals by illegitimate methods and for political ends," the center's director-general, Eduardo Medina Mora, told a news conference Thursday.

Medina was named to the post by President Vicente Fox, whose Dec. 1 inauguration ended 71 years of rule by the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI.

The agency will shift from spying to analysis of intelligence, Medina said. "CISEN will not resort to any instrument or method outside the law," he insisted.

He indicated it might return to surveillance if specifically authorized to do so by Congress.

The agency collaborated in uncovering illegal spy networks operated by others, Medina said.

Federal police last week discovered one such network operating in Mexico City and the neighboring state of Mexico.

Officials launch 'rescue' to save global warming pact

By Tony Czuckna
Associated Press

BONN, Germany — Some 180 nations launched a "rescue operation" for a treaty against global warming on Friday, redoubling efforts to salvage an accord they hope the United States will join.

Four months after President Bush abandoned the 1997 Kyoto Protocol, senior government officials from Canada, Japan and Europe — among others — insisted at talks here that the accord was the only game in town.

"We do not believe the Kyoto Protocol is flawed, as the Americans have said," Canadian Deputy Prime Minister Herb Gray told reporters. "We certainly disagree with them on this. We will ratify the protocol without the United States."

The Kyoto Protocol is aimed at cutting emissions of heat-trapping gases. The United States is the world's largest emitter; Bush says the accord would be harmful to the U.S. economy.

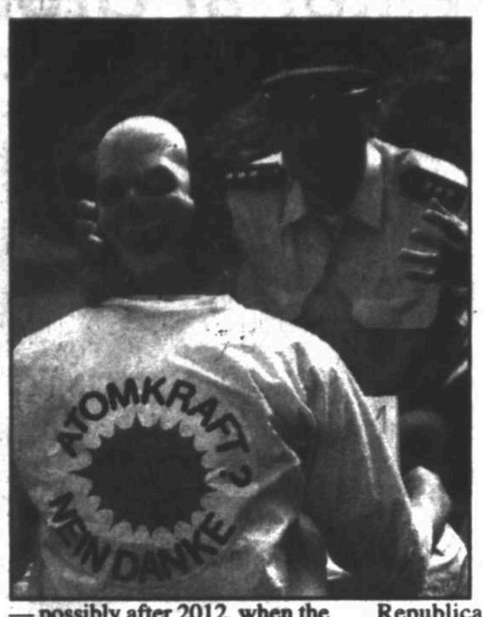

European Union delegates also expressed their commitment to the Kyoto pact.

"We are in a rescue operation of the Kyoto process," EU Environment Commissioner Margot Wallstrom said. "We are so occupied with trying to do that we have no plans on how to bring the Americans back on board."

But the Europeans also stressed that U.S. support was crucial to any effective climate change deal.

As top officials and environment ministers from 178 nations began urgent bargaining on how to bring the Kyoto deal into force, leaders of the world's seven richest countries and Russia discussed climate change at a summit in Italy.

Belgian envoy Olivier Deleuze said the first goal of the Bonn talks is to reach a deal, but that the EU wants to bring the United States back into the fold — possibly after 2012, when the treaty calls for industrialized countries to have cut emissions by 5.2 percent from 1990 levels.

A police officer talks to a demonstrator as he blocks a road to protest the climate summit in Bonn, Germany, Wednesday. Officials from some 180 nations are meeting in Bonn through Friday for the climate summit. Message reads "Nuclear power - No, thanks"

By 2012, Bush will no longer be in office.

Kyoto supporters are speculating that a future U.S. administration will be more inclined to join the treaty. Japan and Canada in particular appear to hope that more flexible rules will help get the Americans on board at a later date.

In the United States, bipartisan support was growing around demands for Bush to define his plans for attacking global warming. The U.S. envoy to the Bonn meeting showed up empty-handed, but said the administration was committed to offering its own plan.

"There is a recognition of the keen interest which many countries have in better understanding what direction the United States will be going in on climate change," U.S. chief delegate Paula Dobriansky said Friday.

But several Democratic members of the U.S. Congress urged Japan and the European Union to reach a deal on Kyoto, saying that would pressure the United States to stop standing aside.

Republican senators Susan Collins of Maine and Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania appealed to Bush in a letter to commit to reducing greenhouse gas emissions.

"As the world's most technologically advanced nation and as the world's largest greenhouse gas emitter, the United States must take a leadership role on climate change," they said in the letter.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, a Democrat from Connecticut, said he hoped the United States would be a party by the next meeting in Morocco in October, the next conference meeting.

"I've been watching the Bonn conference with a real sense of discomfort and even embarrassment to see the Bush administration has made the United States into a renegade, outsider nation," he said in a conference call with journalists at the conference.

Rep. Robert Menendez, a New Jersey Democrat, said it would take "mounting pressure" in the United States to get the Bush administration back to the bargaining table in the foreseeable future.

"I'm not optimistic about that possibility, but I don't exclude it," he said.

Let us help you get to where you want to be.

Police kill protestor at Group of Eight summit in Genoa

By Laura King
Associated Press

GENOA, Italy — One protester was killed and nearly 100 police and demonstrators injured in running battles that raged in the cobbled alleyways and broad piazzas of this ancient port city Friday.

The interior minister said the protester was shot, apparently by a police officer acting in self-defense.

In a daylong faceoff between riot police and the violent vanguard of a massive protest march, demonstrators lobbed bricks, bottles and firebombs, while police fired tear gas and powerful blasts from water cannons.

Once again, an international gathering had become a battleground, but one that set a grim new benchmark in what has become a familiar pattern of confrontation. This time, the setting was the Group of Eight summit, which brings together the world's wealthiest industrialized nations and Russia.

The clashes produced the first fatality in increasingly intense protests staged at similar gatherings over the last two years in nearly a dozen cities under the auspices of the anti-globalization movement.

Italian Interior Minister Claudio Scajola said in a statement that the young man who was killed "was hit by a bullet, presumably fired in self-defense by one of the injured carabinieri," a paramilitary policeman.

A police official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, identified the victim as Carlo Giuliani, 23, a Rome native living in unoccupied buildings in the center of Genoa. He said Giuliani had a long criminal record that included weapons and drug charges.

Late Friday, the summit leaders issued a joint statement expressing regret for the death and condemning the violence. They urged peaceful protesters to isolate lawbreakers by example.

They also spoke out individually. President Bush called the demonstrator's death "tragic" and injuries to police and demonstrators alike "highly regrettable," said Gary Edson, the U.S. deputy national security adviser.

As well as being a chaotic street battle, the day's fighting was a clash of deeply held values.

"They are just selfish," protester Saeed Mohammad said of the rich countries whose leaders met in an ornate medieval palace just blocks away from where he stood. Clouds of choking tear gas wafted his way after another charge by club-wielding police kept demonstrators at bay.

At 35, Mohammad represents his own brand of globalization — a worldwide diaspora of those seeking economic betterment, a journey that took him from his native Pakistan to the Netherlands, where he now lives and works.

Like him, many protesters were drawn to Genoa to decry what they see as the widening gulf between rich and poor, multinational corporations running rife, the environment carelessly despoiled and workers' rights trampled.

The fighting — which in addition to the protester's death injured several dozen demonstrators, police officers and at least a half dozen journalists — erupted almost simultaneously throughout the city.

An anti-globalization movement activist lies dead on the ground after clashes with police during G8 summit protests, in Genoa, Italy, Friday. The dead man was identified by an anonymous police official as Carlo Giuliani, 23, a Rome native living in unoccupied buildings in the center of Genoa. Italian Interior Minister Claudio Scajola said in a statement that the young man who was killed "was hit by a bullet, presumably fired in self-defense by one of the injured carabinieri," a paramilitary policeman.

Small groups of violent demonstrators, sometimes dozens, sometimes hundreds, broke away from a much larger main march to confront police on the edges of a six-square-mile restricted zone surrounding the summit sites — the so-called red zone.

The protester's death occurred about half a mile due east of there, in an area near the railway station where repeated clashes occurred. Eyewitnesses gave conflicting accounts that had him being beaten, run over or shot. Police in Italy are not equipped with rubber-coated or plastic bullets for crowd control, but they do use live ammunition, said police spokesman Mario Viola.

A sequence of news photos published in the Italian press appeared to show the man, hooded and approaching a jeep of the Carabinieri paramilitary police with a fire extinguisher lifted in his arms, and an officer inside pointing a gun in his direction. Subsequent pictures showed him prone on the ground, the body lying beneath the jeep.

Hours after the death, protesters created a makeshift shrine, heaping red flowering plants they uprooted from a nearby public garden. A piece of notebook paper, weighed down with a tear gas canister, was scrawled with the words, "Made in G8."

Only 300 yards from the meeting site, the protesters made their most determined bid of the day to breach a high steel-mesh security barricade, hurling themselves against it and managing to open a narrow gap in one layer of the double-layered fence.

But they were immediately driven back by a water cannon fired point-blank by police from the other side. Inside the red zone, officers scrambled to erect a set of secondary barriers, positioning a bus to block an alleyway in case protesters breached the perimeter fences.

White clouds of tear gas and black smoke from trash-can fires hovered over Genoa's old town as the fighting raged. Blue-uniformed riot police chased protesters, swinging clubs even at people who raised their hands.

In separate incidents, Associated Press Television News producer Sam Cole was clubbed by police, and AP photographer Jerome Delay suffered a fractured rib when a demonstrator hit him from behind with a metal bar.

The violence preceded days of tension, with the government deploying 20,000 police, paramilitary police and soldiers and vowing to crack down on any violence. Tens of thousands of protesters had camped out at sites around the city, including a soccer stadium-turned-tent dormitory. Hundreds more arrived in Genoa as the mass marches began.

Italy refused entry to about 1,000 people before the three-day summit, authorities said. It also closed Christopher Columbus international airport and train stations.

Police could not provide a firm total of protesters, but put it in the tens of thousands. Protest organizer Francesco Caruso estimated there were 100,000 demonstrators.

Russia wants to regain pride by raising nuclear submarine from Arctic

MOSCOW (AP) — Almost a year after it sank in the Arctic, killing all its 118 crewmen and dealing a sharp blow to Russia's prestige, the Kursk nuclear submarine is again in the global spotlight as a costly and daring effort to raise it to the surface gets under way.

Russian officials say one goal of the salvage operation is to recover the Kursk's two nuclear reactors, which haven't leaked radiation so far but remain a potential threat. Another, unspoken motive is to demonstrate the government's strength, resolve and openness — all absent in the days following the catastrophe.

"One of our main problems in the last few years has been the lack of trust in the leadership," President Vladimir Putin told a news conference Wednesday. "This trust can be restored only if we fulfill our promises."

After communications with the Kursk were lost during naval maneuvers on Aug. 12, 2000, the bewildered Navy command waited hours before launching a search, wasting precious time to save survivors trapped in the sub's rear compartments.

The government refused offers of Western help and Russian mini-submarines spent several days in futile attempts to hook onto the submarine's escape hatch until Moscow finally invited foreign divers — who took just a few hours to open it.

Putin remained at the balmy seaside resort of Sochi throughout the crisis. Only after harsh media criticism of his absence did Putin fly to the Kursk's home base to meet with the submariners' relatives. He promised to raise the submarine to recover all the bodies.

The recovery effort, which began this week and is estimated to cost about $70 million, is unprecedented in naval history. Some submarines have been raised before, but none has been comparable to the giant Kursk.

"No one has ever tried to recover an 18,000-ton submarine before, it's a huge task," said Capt. Richard Sharpe, the former editor of Jane's Fighting Ships, a widely recognized reference on the world's navies.

Poverty drives rural Chinese to explosives business

By William Foreman
Associated Press

MAFANG, China — The blown-out windows and trees stripped of leaves and branches in the middle of summer are signs that something terrible happened in this northern Chinese village.

Mafang was jolted awake in the middle of the night last week when explosives illegally stored in a home blew up, killing at least 69 people, according to official figures. People in a neighboring village who witnessed the carnage put the death toll at more than 100.

It's hard to understand why someone would endanger the lives of their neighbors by storing explosives in a home or by producing them in a residential area.

But seeing the poverty in Mafang raises sympathy for those who give up trying to coax corn and wheat seedlings from the sandy soil of northern Shaanxi province and venture into a dangerous and risky business.

Some villagers in the area say making explosives became a popular cottage industry in Mafang, sandwiched by a low mountain ridge barely fertile enough for patches of scrub brush and a trickling river, whose flood plain is crowded with patches of wheat, corn, rice and watermelon crops.

"There are at least 20 factories making explosives in Mafang, some big, some really small," said one farmer in his 20s who would only give his surname, Liu.

The story is repeated with tragic monotony across China, where thousands of deaths each year occur in illegal coal mines, unlicensed fireworks factories and other hazardous businesses embraced as a way out of poverty.

The aftermath of these accidents is often the same, with accusations that local officials ignore the illegal activities and often are directly involved.

The suspect in Monday's blast was Ma Shigui, whose illegal explosives factory was shut down by safety inspectors last spring. Ma tried to protect his investment by moving unsold explosives to his brother's home in Mafang, according to official media reports and villagers.

Ma was arrested, the county police chief was fired and two local officers were detained for questioning. News reports suggested police had turned a blind eye to the clandestine explosives trade.

The details of the blast remain sketchy. China's communist government is sensitive about accidents that might sully the nation's image and often waits days or weeks to explain what happened. It's still unknown how much explosive was involved and how it was ignited.

An Associated Press reporter who traveled to the village was detained and questioned for a day; his photos of the scene were confiscated.

One farmer in Hengshan, a five-minute drive from Mafang, said the blast shook his house.

"It was 3:20 in the morning and I heard a big bang," said the villager, who gave only his surname, Wang. "I went over to Mafang and saw bodies everywhere. It must of been more than 100."

Three days after the blast, farmers were still huddling beside the village's main road, gawking at police and soldiers who were guarding the site, which couldn't be clearly seen from the road.

Shards of glass still stuck out of some window panes but most windows had been blown out. Most of the branches on several trees were broken off, and some of the walls of the brown brick homes had toppled over.

A photo in the mass-market Yangchen Wanbao newspaper, printed in the southern city of Guangzhou, showed soldiers in the rubble pulling a blanket off the corpse of a half-clothed man who apparently died while sleeping.

The most common cause of death in northern Shaanxi — one of the oldest settled areas of China — was once hunger. For centuries, people have struggled to farm the region, mostly desert or severely eroded hills with deep ravines and vertical cliff faces about 300 miles west of Beijing.

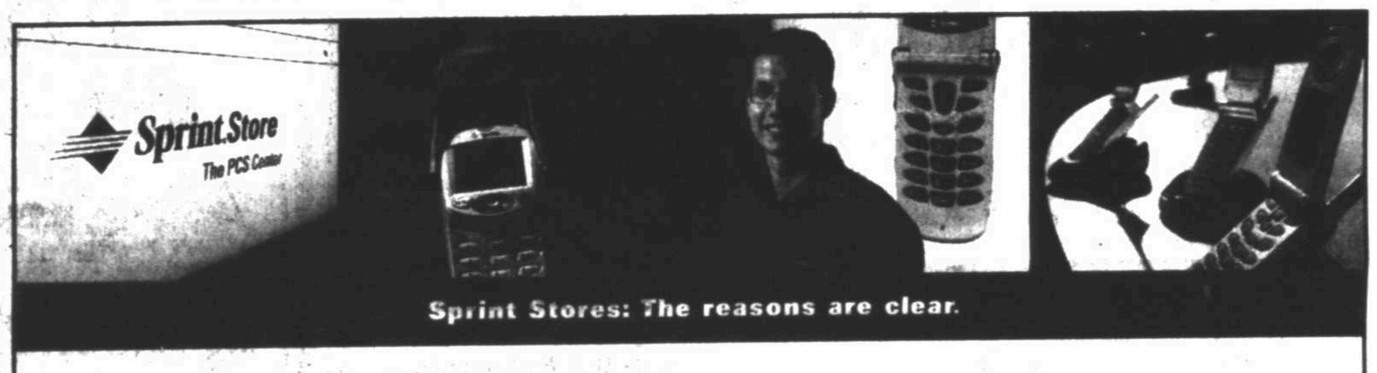

From the air, the landscape looks like a huge yellow blanket of sandy soil cut by long strips of green created by farm fields plowed from the fertile soil along small rivers.

Many in Shaanxi feel like the region has been forgotten during the past two decades as the central government focused on developing southern coastal regions.

E-4 Specialist Travis Reed checks the ear of Burunda Sanez on Friday in Edcouch Elsa. Reed was part of the medical teams in the Rio Grande Valley treating citizens during Operation Lone Star, a readiness training exercise. The medical team was stationed in three regions of the Valley including Edcouch Elsa where Sanez was being treated.

National Guard program provides medical training

LA JOYA (AP) — By 5 a.m., they are lined up — some of the hundreds of thousands of South Texas' uninsured, coming for free medical care under the Defense Department's "Operation Lonestar."

For National Guard members, this is the fourth year of a program that gives them "real world" medical training. For the patients, many coming from one of the estimated 1,500 colonias that dot the Mexican border, it may be the first time in years they've seen a doctor.

"We heard there was not too much red tape," said 32-year-old Juan Pineda, who brought his wife and 4-year-old daughter to E.R. Chapa Elementary school Friday. Chapa is one of the three schools housing clinics as part of the program. The others are Ed Couch Junior High in Elsa and Escandon Elementary School in Edinburg.

Guard officials expect to treat more than 5,000 people before the clinic closes next week.

"Down here where it's hot, there's all the diseases you would see in a lot of other regions in the world," Guard spokesman Sgt. Ken Robinson said.

They include high blood pressure, skin conditions, digestive problems, respiratory problems and diabetes, a problem that is particularly prevalent in the Rio Grande Valley.

One woman came complaining of lightheadedness and lethargy. She was found to have a sugar level near 500 (normal is 70 to 120), putting her in danger of a diabetic coma.

"She was a medical emergency," Sgt. 1st Class Debbie Cano of Galveston, said.

Operation Lonestar joins personnel from the U.S. Navy Reserve, U.S. Marine Corps Reserve, Texas Department of Health and the Texas Disaster Medical Assistance Team. Many of the doctors, dentists, and medical professionals are part-time soldiers who have regular practices all over the nation.

Sgt. Chief Corpsman George Herrera, 51, is a nuclear medicine technologist in the private sector in Miami. This was his last duty as a Navy reservist.

"It's humbling that so many need this kind of basic care," he said. "My kids don't have to worry about going to the doctor."

Secretary of State Henry Cuellar, who toured the facilities at Chapa Friday, said Operation Lonestar is helping address the health problems of colonias.

According to the state health department, the greatest percentage growth in Medicaid is along the border. Thirty-two percent of children and 40 percent of adults along the border lack medical coverage. Still more lack dental.

"Some of them have not even seen a dentist," he said.

While there are state-sponsored health programs for the uninsured, colonia residents may not know of them. Others are undocumented immigrants who are frightened clinic officials will alert immigration about them. Just about all are unable to afford a doctor's visit, which can easily cost $100 or more.

Failure to get required school physicals often delays children's entry to school, said Benito Saenz, a representative of La Joya Independent School District, a district that ballooned from under 3,000 students in 1980 to 18,400 students last year. One of the most frequent treatments at Operation Lonestar is school vaccinations.

Family grieves for victims of fatal auto accident

By Lisa Falkenberg
Associated Press

A collision with an 18-wheeler Thursday on Texas 171 claimed the lives of sisters-in-law Ginger Gail Destiny Chavez, 18, and Yvonne Chavez, 26, as well as their daughters, 6-month-old Yesemia Chavez and Patricia Roman, 4. The four died at the scene. Family friend Michelle Swindle, 16, died at a hospital.

HUBBARD — The low rumble of pickup trucks drowned out the sun and the chirping birds at the Wade Funeral Home on Friday as friends and family planned a funeral for the women and girls they loved.

A collision with an 18-wheeler Thursday on Texas 171 claimed the lives of sisters-in-law Ginger Gail Destiny Chavez, 18 and Yvonne Chavez, 26, as well as their daughters, 6-month-old Yesemia Chavez and Patricia Roman, 4. The four died at the scene. Family friend Michelle Swindle, 16, died at a hospital.

"I would hope that it doesn't get worse than this," said Hubbard Justice of the Peace Eugene Fulton. "It's probably going to be all closed casket."

At the funeral home, the close-knit family of Mexican immigrants and U.S. citizens hung their heads and muttered to each other in Spanish. Destiny Chavez' husband Stephen tried to find the words express his grief.

His eyes, the color of virgin olive oil in the sun, welled and reddened. But there were no words.

No one knows what made the red Chevrolet pickup veer into the opposing lane about 1 1/2 miles south of Hubbard.

"We'll probably never know," Fulton said.

Authorities said the impact of the collision spun the truck around 180 degrees and left a trail of thick black skid marks, tires and metal along the road. None of the passengers in the extended cap pickup were wearing seat belts.

The driver of the 18-wheeler, Robert Eckert, 41, of Palestine, was treated and released from a Waco hospital.

"They looked like they'd been run through barbed wire fences," Fulton said.

One of the last people to see the group alive was 85-year-old Bill Weatherby.

"They were all just happy, happy, happy," said Weatherby, who saw them at a convenience store in town. "A lot of chattering. All five of them got in that pickup."

And then they were gone.

Ricardo Chavez, 37, drove by the accident, not knowing it had killed his brother's wife until police told him.

"They said it was a red truck and I said, 'Oh no, that's my brother's truck,'" he said, his face solemn, eyes searching. "The man told me, 'Can you come in and look at the bodies and tell me the names?' I can't tell you exactly how they looked."

At the funeral home, a circle of drawn faces listened as director Michael Wade talked of the technicalities of the funeral. There were documents to produce, decisions to make. But money won't stand in the way of decent burials, Wade said.

"Somehow, it'll be worked out," he said. "I'm sure a memorial fund will be set up in town."

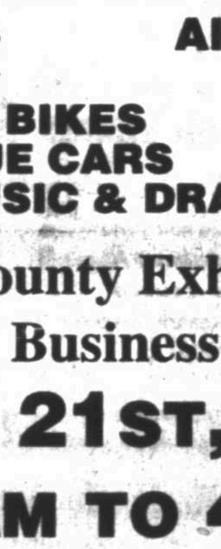

One of the victims, Yvonne Chavez, was apparently a member of an Arapaho American Indian tribe in Wyoming, Wade said. Tribe members were trying to obtain the woman's body so that she could receive a customary burial.

Meanwhile in Hubbard, about 30 miles northeast of Waco, American flags flapped in front yards and tractors crawled along roads.

Officials said just about everyone in the town of about 1,670 residents knew Chavez family.

"They spent a lot of time working and a lot of time with their families," said Hubbard Police Chief Mitch Tyra. "It's a good family, good people, bad situation."

Summer water use forces Texas cities to conserve water limits

By Renee C. Lee
Associated Press

FRISCO — Public Works director Gary Hartwell likes to compare water usage during the summer to a traffic jam.

At 5 p.m., a busy intersection can turn quickly into a parking lot. But if some motorists had delayed or started their trip earlier, congestion would be eased.

That's what he's trying to do with voluntary water restrictions in this fast-growing north Dallas suburb: manage water consumption so that demand doesn't bog down the supply.

"With traffic, people can see the demand, but people can't see the demand for water," Hartwell said.

Last winter, daily water usage was 150 gallons per person, but now it's 600 gallons per person. "That's all going out on those lawns," he said.

Residents and businesses are asked to limit landscape watering to two days a week and to avoid watering between 5 and 8 a.m., peak hours for water use.

Other Texas cities are trying to do the same: 16 have similar voluntary restrictions and 45 have mandatory restrictions, according to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission.

Overall, the state is in good condition with rainfall totals in four of the state's eight regions above normal this year, the National Weather Service said.

In the Houston area, precipitation from Jan. 1 through July 18 is 14.45 inches above the normal level for the same period, thanks to Tropical Storm Allison, which dumped up to 30 inches in some areas. Good rainfall in the winter and spring helped the Dallas-Fort Worth area, which is almost six inches above normal.

"The wet winter and spring brought reservoir levels up, but it's one of those things like electricity, it never hurts to conserve. We could start a drought tomorrow," said Larry Nierenberg, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Fort Worth.

Most mandatory restrictions are in south and central Texas. In the Brownsville area, rainfall totals are 3.8 inches below normal this year. Mandatory restrictions have been in place since last year.

In Corpus Christi, where reservoir levels are 40 percent below normal, a mandatory restriction limits watering between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m., but allows residents to water shrubbery by hand with a hose.

"We live on cusp of drought all the time and prepare for it," said city water superintendent Eduardo Garana. "We promote conservation all the time. It's not onerous."

Basin levels are up in Wichita Falls, but the city remains under a water restriction that started last year. Wet weather increased basin capacity from 37 percent last winter to 90 percent last spring. The current level is 77 percent, Public Works Director George Bonnette said.

The city also has raised water prices by 70 percent to fund major improvements to the city's water system. The combination has significantly reduced water waste and demand, Bonnette said.

Once basin levels drop below 50 percent, stricter limits and surcharges will be enforced.

Rainfall across Texas

Here's a look at rainfall totals in the state from January through July 18, 2001:

Region		Actual Average	Amount above/below avg.
Amarillo	12.13	10.79	1.34
Brownsville	7.77	11.57	-3.8
Corpus Christi	13.2	14.51	-1.31
El Paso	1.47	3.07	-1.6
Fort Worth	25.48	19.54	5.94
Houston	39.27	24.82	14.45
Lubbock	9.47	9.46	0.01
San Antonio	14.98	16.95	-1.97

Doctors still unhappy with Perry's veto

AUSTIN (AP) — Nearly 80 people, mostly physicians, have sent letters to Gov. Rick Perry criticizing his decision last month to veto a bill that would have forced insurance companies to pay doctors' claims more quickly.

Many of those doctors who wrote the letters, provided to the Austin American-Statesman under the state's public information laws, said they would not support Perry in the 2002 election.

"I will work vigorously in your upcoming election ... to make sure that you don't get re-elected. Remember every doctor talks to patients, i.e. voters every day; we can be a powerful force," C. Martin Persons, a Fort Worth doctor, wrote in a letter to Perry. Persons said he had to borrow $75,000 last year to keep his practice afloat as he waited for late insurance payments.

Some who wrote the letters are contributors to the Texas Medical Association's political action committee, which has decided for now not to endorse a gubernatorial candidate, the newspaper reported.

Doctors and hospitals contributed $395,000 to Perry's campaign from 1997 to 2000, according to a preliminary analysis conducted by Texans for Public Justice, a nonpartisan watchdog group. The TMA political action committee, which had been neutral in Perry's 1998 race for lieutenant governor, contributed nearly $50,000.

Insurance companies and health maintenance organizations, which supported the veto, gave Perry $536,000 during the same time period.

Perry defended his veto of the bill in a letter to 43,000 doctors last month, saying the bill would have prevented insurers from settling disputes through alternate methods or binding arbitration, encouraged frivolous lawsuits and driven up the cost of health insurance.

Many of the doctors said they felt blindsided when the measure was among Perry's 82 vetoes, especially since the Texas Hospital Association had already endorsed him for 2002.

Perry's office said it was trying to pressure insurance companies to pay their bills more quickly and believes the Department of Insurance can resolve the problems, without a new law in place.

Perry has told HMO representatives and insurance companies that he expects prompt payment to physician and health care providers and reminded them of state law that requires payment within 45 days, Perry spokeswoman Kathy Walt said. She said failure to comply could result in a $1,000 claim per day fine.

Weavers, Whiteside, McGee take lead over Huckabee team at RHCC event

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

When the Ranchland Hills Country Club's annual Blowout golf tournament rolls around, there is little secret as to where to aim your guns in this two best ball event.

The defending champions are Ron Huckabee (Green Tree Country Club), Dub Huckabee (RHCC), Doug Noah (GTCC) and Larry Snyder. This year there is a one-quarter twist with Snyder missing this year's event while Midland Country Club's Tim Kohn steps in.

Well, the guns of the Midland Country Club foursome of Pat Weaver, Mac McGee, Steve Whiteside and Mike Weaver hit the first day target dead center, delivering a major wounding blow.

The MCC foursome produced a 126 on Friday on the RHCC layout, which is a solid 14-under par explosion. The Huckabees, Noah and Kohn produced a solid eight-under 132 and stand in second place, but down by a full six strokes after the first day of the three-day event.

"Well, we are going to try our best to beat them (the defending champions)," said Whiteside. "We also knew we needed a good start because those guys always play good."

And while the wound appears to be huge after one day, few expect the defending champs to go down without a fight. In other words, this thing ain't over yet.

"There is a lot of golf left as they say," Noah said while staring at the six-stroke

Blazers lure Anderson from Spurs

By Landon Hall
AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Portland Trail Blazers, not exactly known for being a spendthrift outfit, landed free agent guard Derek Anderson on Friday for a relatively paltry $4.5 million.

Portland, whose league-record $89.7 million payroll couldn't carry it past the first round of the playoffs, also shed $4.4 million in salary by trading Greg Anthony to the Bulls and letting free agent Stacey Augmon go to the Hornets.

Anderson's agent, Tony Dutt, said Anderson likely will sign for the Blazers' mid-level salary-cap exception of $4.5 million. That amount is granted to teams that are over the $42.5 million cap.

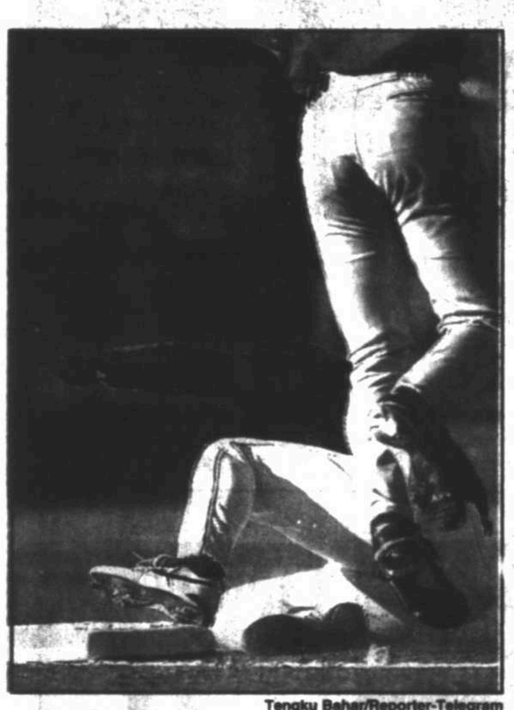

Anderson's six-year deal, with an opt-out clause after five years, would be worth $34 million.

He could earn more if the Blazers and Spurs can work out a sign-and-trade deal. Negotiations probably won't begin until early next week, Dutt said.

"We sure would like to help them (the Spurs) out if we can, and at the same time it would be helping Derek out with a sign-and-trade," Dutt told Portland's KFXX-AM on Friday.

Steve Smith, who started last season at shooting guard for Portland but later lost his job to Bonzi Wells, likely would be part of such a trade. Wells seriously injured his left knee late in the season and is trying to get ready by training camp

Midland's Esteban German slides into third base with a triple as Tulsa's Hank Blalock leaps to avoid him during Tulsa's 4-2 win Friday.

Blalock's blast downs 'Hounds to start series

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Tulsa's Hank Blalock has a habit of giving the Midland RockHounds plenty of headaches.

Earlier this season, Blalock hit for the cycle twice in three days against the 'Hounds. He may not have hit for the cycle on Friday but his two-run home run in the seventh inning proved to be the difference in a 4-2 win by the Drillers at Christensen Stadium.

This hasn't been exactly home sweet home for the RockHounds as they dropped their fourth straight in this homestand.

With the score tied at 2-2 and Danny Solano at first base, Blalock took an offering from Midland reliever Ray Noriega (0-1) over the right field wall for the two-run shot. Once again, Blalock was a 'Hounds heartbreaker.

"If anything, it's just coincidence," said Blalock about his good fortunes against Midland. "There's really nothing special that I do against them. It just happens that way."

On the homer Blalock said, "I was getting beat earlier in the game and I was looking for something to drive and it happened to go out of the ballpark. I was hoping that would hold up and the bullpen would take over and finish them off."

THE BRITISH OPEN

Monty stays clear of Woods

AP Photo

The only woods that Colin Montgomerie (above) had to worry about during Friday's second round of the British Open were these trees he hit his ball near on the third hole at Royal Lytham and St. Annes golf course. But another Woods — Tiger — looms as the tournament enters the weekend. Montgomerie leads the tournament at 7-under par, but Woods (below) is only four strokes behind Montgomerie.

Montgomerie holds onto Open lead; Woods lurks 4 shots back

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (AP) — Colin Montgomerie heard the roars on every side of him. The difficult part now is not looking back.

"Having to always look over one's shoulder is never an easy task," Montgomerie said.

Especially in a British Open.

With Tiger Woods lurking just four strokes back.

Riding an emotional groundswell he has never felt, Montgomerie delivered a 1-under 70 at Royal Lytham & St. Annes on Friday, giving him a one-stroke lead over Pierre Fulke of Sweden going into the weekend.

At every turn, the enormous gallery cheered on Montgomerie as if that support alone could carry him to his first major championship.

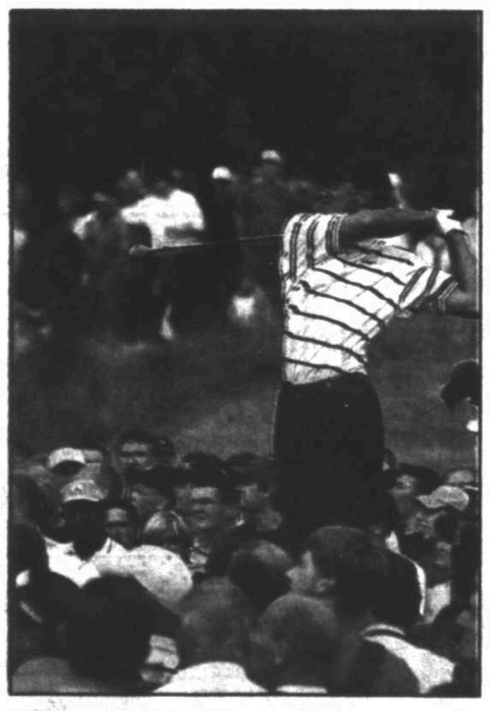

If only it were that easy.

Still ahead of him are 36 holes. Not too far behind is Woods, whose six major championships are six more than Montgomerie can claim.

"I've won major championships and I've won the Open. That in itself relieves a lot of tension, a lot of pressure, because you know what it takes," Woods said. "If you haven't won one, it becomes a little more difficult."

That's what awaits Montgomerie this weekend.

He has won an Open from start-to-finish as recently as three weeks ago, only it was the Irish Open. He says he is playing as well now as he has in some of the 30 tournaments he has won around the world.

"In fact, I've played an awful lot worse than this and won tournaments," he said. "I feel quite comfortable at this stage."

But this is a major championship, and Montgomerie conceded it's new territory for him.

It isn't for Woods.

Trying to become the first player in 18 years to successfully defend the claret jug, Woods birdied all the par 5s and escaped with only a bogey on a potentially disastrous 15th hole for a 3-under 68 and at 3-under 139 for the tournament.

Montgomerie, who was at 7-under 135, didn't know Woods' score until later. He never heard any cheers for Woods because his own gallery never stopped roaring. He studied every scoreboard and never saw Woods' name, only because there wasn't room with six players in front of him.

"What is he, 3 under, 4 under?" Montgomerie asked.

Told that Woods was at 3-under 139, he nodded.

"Well, that's great. Thank God he's not 4."

This is the first time Montgomerie has led a major after 36 holes since the 1994 U.S. Open at Oakmont, where he got into a playoff that was won by Ernie Els.

"It is tiring," Montgomerie said of the prospect of going wire-to-wire.

Carrying him along was a British gallery that offered thunderous ovations at the mere sight of

Finley's agent reviews offer from Mavs

Associated Press

DALLAS — The Dallas Mavericks have formally offered two-time All-Star Michael Finley a seven-year, $102 million contract.

Finley's agent, Henry Thomas, told The Dallas Morning News that he had received the contract from the Mavericks and was reviewing it. He expected the contract to be signed within a few days.

"At the latest, Monday," Thomas said.

The deal is for the maximum length and amount allowed under the NBA's collective bargaining agreement.

Mavericks owner Mark Cuban isn't concerned about the delay.

"It's not a question of terms," Cuban said. "Just his people getting through the details."

Finley became a free agent when he opted out of his contract after last season. By doing so, Finley will get a hefty pay raise after making about $8.4 million last season.

Finley could have opted for a one-year deal at just under $11 million, which would have enabled him to receive a contract for seven years and $120 million next summer. But the 6-foot-7 Finley will apparently take the long-term deal now.

Finley made the NBA All-Star team for the second straight season and helped the Mavericks to a 53-29 record, their best since 1988. After overcoming an 0-2 deficit to win a best-of-5 series against Utah in the opening round of the playoffs, Dallas lost to San Antonio in the second round.

For the second time in three seasons, Finley led the NBA in minutes played (42 a game). He was the team's second-leading scorer at 21.5 points per game and also averaged 5.2 rebounds and 4.4 assists a game.

Rangers send Devil Rays to team-record low

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — In a season of low points, the Tampa Bay Devil Rays reached a new one.

Ivan Rodriguez and Ruben Sierra hit consecutive homers as the Texas Rangers beat Tampa Bay 4-1 Friday night, dropping the Devil Rays (30-67) to a franchise-record 37 games under .500.

"When you're in a rut, you have a tendency to press," Devil Rays manager Hal McRae said.

In losing the first three games of a five-game homestand, the Devil Rays have scored three runs and gone 3-for-30 — including 1-of-10 Friday night— with runners in scoring position.

Tampa Bay has allowed just eight runs over the same span.

"We're pitching our tails off, but offensively we're not executing," McRae said. "The guys just need to relax and not be concerned with the outcome, but with the process."

Rodriguez and Sierra, without an RBI in his previous nine games, hit solo homers in the sixth inning to put the Rangers up 3-1. It was the 12th time this season the Rangers have hit consecutive homers.

Rodriguez went 2-for-4. He is batting .412 (61-148) career against Tampa Bay, his highest average against one club.

Sierra also picked up an RBI with a bases-loaded walk in the ninth.

"I just try to do my job everyday," Rodriguez said. "You've got to go up there and swing the bat and try and hit the ball hard. That's what I do. Concentrate to hit the ball hard and make good contact."

Texas starter Doug Davis (5-7) gave up one run and 11 hits in eight innings. It was the ninth straight time the left-hander, who struck out six and walked three, has gone at least six innings.

"I gave up a lot of hits, but I spread them out through eight innings so none of them hurt," Davis said. "I'm not concentrating hard enough, obviously, because I can't have a 1-2-3 inning."

AP Photo

Texas pitcher Jeff Zimmerman (59) gets a handshake from first baseman Rafael Palmeiro after finishing off the Tampa Bay Devil Rays in the ninth inning Friday night in St. Petersburg, Fla. The Rangers won 4-1.

In nine starts since being recalled from Triple-A Oklahoma on May 31, Davis has allowed 24 earned runs in 64 2-3 innings.

"The thing that has impressed me is he steps it up when he gets in trouble," Rangers manager Jerry Narron said. "He's done it about the last four times that he's pitched. When he's gotten in a little trouble, he's been able to pitch out of it."

Jeff Zimmerman got three outs for his 16th save.

Albie Lopez (5-12) left the game four pitches after the back-to-back homers because of a sprained left ankle.

Lopez appeared to misstep while completing his delivery on a pitch to Gabe Kapler.

"It's something that I could have pitched through, but Hal was taking care of me" Lopez said. "I didn't want to leave the game."

More painful than the ankle injury to Lopez was his pitch selection on the homers.

"I got beat on my fourth-best pitch," he said. "Two changeups."

Ricky Ledee put the Rangers ahead 1-0 with an RBI double in the second inning. It was his first RBI in 10 games.

Greg Vaughn also got his first RBI in 10 games with a run-scoring single that drew Tampa Bay even in the fifth.

Merced's grand slam lifts Astros

Associated Press

HOUSTON — As Orlando Merced was rounding the bases, he realized he'd have to protect himself from his own teammates when he reached home plate.

Merced's pinch-hit grand slam rallied Houston past Chicago 5-2 Friday night, extending the Astros' winning streak to seven straight over the Cubs.

"I tried to keep my helmet on going back to the dugout because I knew they'd be hitting me hard," Merced said. "People are throwing you around. It's a good feeling when your teammates receive you that way."

The Astros pulled within two games of the first-place Cubs in the NL Central.

Houston swept the Cubs in three games earlier this season and hasn't lost to them since last Aug. 23.

Jon Lieber (12-5) had won his last six decisions, tying a career high, and was off to a good start until the Astros scored five runs in the fifth inning.

Richard Hidalgo and Vinny Castilla led off with singles. Brad Ausmus sacrificed, and reached on second baseman Eric Young's fielding error to load the bases.

Merced followed with the third slam of his career and his third pinch-hit homer this season, a liner down the right-field line that barely cleared the fence and boosted the Astros to a 4-2 lead.

It was Houston's seventh grand slam of the season, setting a club record.

"I got down 0-2 real quick but I still felt I had a chance," Merced said. "If you try to do too much it works against you. I just tried to go with the pitch and hit it."

Craig Biggio then extended his hitting streak to 12 games with a double and scored on a passed ball by Joe Girardi.

The Astros have beaten the Cubs 10 times in 11 meetings.

"I think every game in the second half is big," Biggio said. "These games are big because they are in first place. The fans are excited and we're excited. When you're chasing first place, the games you play against them are important.

Lieber pitched five innings, his shortest outing of the season. He allowed eight hits, struck out three and didn't walk a batter.

"Lieber had a couple of strikes on a couple of guys in that inning but he wasn't able to put them away," Cubs manager Don Baylor said.

"Then, they took advantage of an error. You can't make mistakes. You have to play perfectly with the bases loaded. There's no place to put them."

Rookie Tim Redding (2-0), who developed a blood blister on his right middle finger Sunday against Cleveland, felt good enough to start against the Cubs.

'HOUNDS: Enochs pitches well in loss

(From 1B)

And that's exactly what happened.

After the fifth inning, the 'Hounds only had three total base runners through the next three innings as Jose Martinez (3-6) and Travis Hughes handcuffed Midland.

Midland finally got something going in the ninth when Esteban German led off with a walk, then pinch hitter Oscar Salazar hit a bloop single to right field to put two men on with nobody out.

J.J. Pearsall then came in relief of Hughes and struck out Todd Mensik, who was caught looking.

Tulsa manager Paul Carey then made the strategic move of the game as he brought in closer Spike Lundberg to face the heart of the 'Hounds' order. Lundberg stepped up to the challenge, striking out a swinging Jacques Landry and Ryan Ludwick to end the game. Landry came oh so close to winning the game two pitches earlier but he a connected a little too much to the left for a foul ball.

"Landry and Ludwick are both great hitters and (Lundberg) was able to contain them," Blalock said. "Hopefully, we can continue to do it for the rest of the series."

The RockHounds got off to a good start in the game as German doubled, reached third base on an error and then scored off a Mike Lockwood single in the first inning.

In the third inning, things started to unravel for the 'Hounds. First, Luis Taveras led off with a single. Then, Corey Wright singled to left to move Taveras over to third base. As Wright was making a wide turn at first base, German took the relay from the outfield and tried to throw out Wright at first base. The throw however sailed past Midland first baseman Mensik to score Taveras. Wright later scored off a groundout.

Take away that third inning and Midland starter Chris Enochs had a solid game as he pitched five strong innings to give the Midland hitters a chance, which was all that 'Hounds manager Tony DeFrancesco wanted from his starters.

The 'Hounds got that chance but the only other run they could put together was in the fifth with an RBI single from Ryan Ludwick.

ROCKHOUND BITES: As Midland third baseman Josh Hochgesang has been activated from the disabled list, pitcher Eric Thompson is going on it. Thompson was supposed to start on Friday but Enochs got the spot duty instead... Texas Rangers outfielder Rusty Greer did not make the trip with the Drillers on rehab assignment as expected.

Cubs get OF Tucker from Reds for minor leaguers

CHICAGO (AP) — The NL Central-leading Chicago Cubs acquired outfielder Michael Tucker from the Cincinnati Reds on Friday for minor league right-handers Chris Booker and Ben Shaffar.

Tucker is the second outfielder traded by the Reds in two days. They sent Alex Ochoa to the Colorado Rockies on Thursday for second baseman Todd Walker and a minor leaguer.

"Michael Tucker is a great player. He is going to fit in our lineup very well," Cubs star Sammy Sosa said. "It was a good move. No doubt about that."

The Cubs have one of the league's top pitching staff, but need to upgrade their offense. They worked out a trade with Tampa Bay for first baseman Fred McGriff, but he blocked it by invoking a no-trade clause in his contract.

"We're looking to get some help offensively," Cubs manager Don Baylor said after a 5-2 loss at Houston. "He can help us out in center field. We've been struggling there all year."

"Hopefully, he will generate some offense from the left side, too. We've been looking at this for a long time," he said. "What we came up with is that his experience can give us a lot of help. Instead of just trying to play the season out in Cincinnati, now he has a chance to play for the pennant."

challenge in front of his team. "We've won this thing nine times in 17 years, so we would like to win it again. There is no question that the 126 is a great round. We just hope they don't keep that up."

So, what is the secret of the blazing guns?

"We didn't make any bogeys and had 14 birdies," Whiteside said. "We just played pretty good. But, you know, in a tournament like this, pars can be just about as important as birdies and we had a couple of those that were good pars with long putts."

Kohn, who is replacing Snyder on the defending championship team, did not play in last year's Blowout, but has been in the championship hunt before.

"This is a good team to get on if you have to pick one," Kohn said. "I didn't play (in this tournament) last year, but I played on a team two years ago with Whiteside. Steve got caught in the office for about 11 holes that year and we still lost by only one stroke."

Noah said, "We had a good round with 4-under on each nine. We did have a bogey on (No.) 11 which hurt. We were still pretty solid."

Right now, it appears to be a two-team race. The team of Robert Milam (RHCC), Jeff Munden (Mission Dorado), Jeff Lutke (Oklahoma City, Okla.) and Les Littlejohn (Mission Dorado) are in third place at 135, three strokes behind the defending champions and nine strokes behind the leaders.

"We had four bogeys, and without those, we could have been at 131," Munden said. "We missed some short putts."

The tournament continues today with the championship flight owning the tee box early at 8 a.m. The championship flight will tee off last on Sunday for the final round.

Friday's first round results from the 24th annual Ranchland Hills Country Club Blowout golf tournament.

Basin Bombers are on a roll

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The Basin Bombers 14-under state champions baseball team has been competing in the World Series over the past six days here.

Going into Friday night's 10 p.m. and 12 p.m. games, the Bombers had played eight games with the Iowa Thunder, Texas Heat, Springfield Flame, Atlanta Redbugs, Georgia Raiders, Texas Cubs and Arkansas Orioles, losing only once.

The Bombers had advanced into the final five remaining teams. If the Bombers came away with two wins in Friday night's late games, the Basin team will be playing in the finals at noon today against the Springfield Stingers, who await the winner of the loser's bracket.

Slumping Gordon gains momentum by capturing pole

Associated Press

■ NASCAR News

LOUDON, N.H. — Jeff Gordon responded to his mini-slump the way any champion would. He won the pole position for the next race.

Coming off a pair of disappointing finishes, the three-time Winston Cup titlist topped qualifying for the New England 300 on Friday, racing his Chevrolet around the 1.058-mile track at 131.770 mph. It was Gordon's fifth pole of the season — the best on the Winston Cup circuit — and his third at New Hampshire.

Still looking for his first victory this year, Mark Martin was second at 131.724 mph in a Ford. Jeremy Mayfield (131.715 mph) and Bobby Hamilton (131.302 mph) earned spots in the second row for Sunday's race.

For Gordon and his team, this was simply more of the same: his 38th career pole position and the 100th for Hendrick Motorsports.

And what timing? Gordon finished 37th after getting caught up in an accident two weeks ago at Daytona. Last week in Joliet, Ill., he led much of the race, but finished 17th because of a lost cylinder.

It allowed Dale Jarrett to turn Gordon's 126-point lead into a dead heat — not exactly the way Gordon was hoping to move into the second half of the season.

"What makes a championship-caliber team is going through the ups and downs, and getting through them," said Gordon, who has won three races at New Hampshire International Speedway. "When you've won three championships, it makes it a little easier, it takes some pressure off. You don't focus so much attention on one bad finish, then two bad finishes."

The value of starting positions in these 3-hour races vary from track to track, although the consensus is that it means more in Loudon. In the last race here, winner Jeff Burton started from the second position, rushed to the front and led all 300 laps.

That race was run with power-robbing restrictor plates, a concession NASCAR made after Adam Petty and Kenny Irwin were both killed at this track in the span of six weeks.

The restrictor plates are gone, but passing could prove difficult nonetheless. To address the safety issue, track officials have resealed the racing surface — paved it over with a very light coating of asphalt — and the drivers are struggling to find an outside groove that might be used for passing.

"My hope is that you'll be able to pass here in a racing pass, instead of just the guy on the outside stopping while the guy on the inside is doing the passing," Martin said. "It'll be nice if we have that this weekend."

The new sealer was the talk of the garage after qualifying, in part because drivers were unsure of how it would affect them on their first run around the track. They persuaded NASCAR to delay by one week a new rule that will allow drivers only one lap of qualifying, instead of the customary two.

"NASCAR might have jumped the gun a little on that," said Gordon, who obviously had no problem with the different surface. "But as long as it was fair for everyone ..."

Dale Earnhardt Jr. had a rough trip, bumping into the wall at the end of his second lap and qualifying in 29th position with a speed of 129.688.

"It ain't going to be great, but we ain't going to be awful, either," Earnhardt said.

Returning to Loudon for the first time since the death of his son Adam, Kyle Petty qualified in 26th position.

Tied with Gordon in the points race, Jarrett qualified ninth. His teammate, third-place driver Ricky Rudd, will start 14th.

Coming off his second career victory last week, Kevin Harvick qualified 24th, then rushed to a helicopter so he could make it to Busch Grand National qualifying in Madison, Ill.

Petty makes solemn return to scene of son's death

LOUDON, N.H. — Driving a car painted black to honor his fallen son, Kyle Petty returned to Loudon on Friday for the first time since Adam Petty died here 14 months ago.

"I love Adam, we all love Adam, and miss him terribly," Petty said in a statement that announced his decision to return.

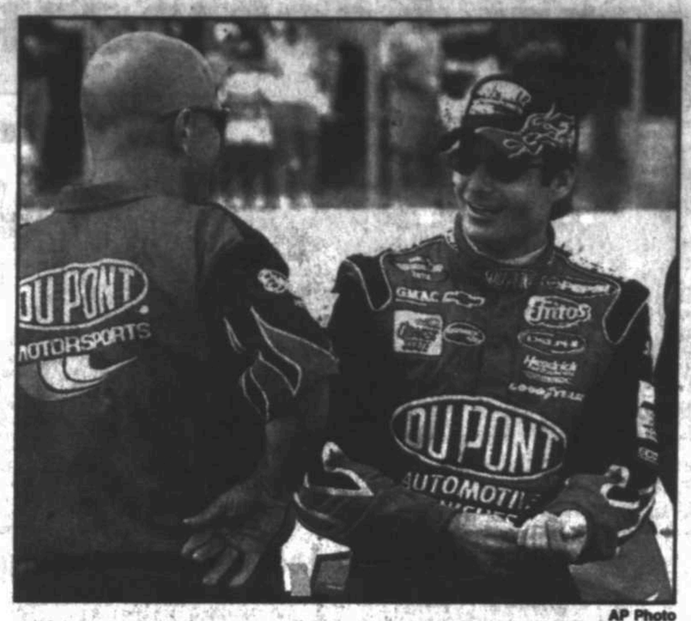

This couldn't have been an easy choice — coming back to the track where his 19-year-old son, so full of promise, died in May 2000, after ramming into the wall on Turn 3 during practice for a Grand National race.

Petty's death began a long stretch of soul searching for his family, and tragedy for NASCAR, which would lose three more of its drivers — including Kenny Irwin at this very track — to deadly accidents.

In many eyes, some of the sport's wounds were healed two weeks ago when Dale Earnhardt Jr. thrilled racing fans with his cathartic victory at Daytona, the track where his father died five months before in the Daytona 500.

Petty's story doesn't seem pointed toward such a storybook ending. The third-generation driver of America's first family of racing is 43rd in the Winston Cup points standings.

He hasn't won a race since 1995 and qualified 26th to make just his 12th of 19 points races this year.

Ray claims his 4th pole of IRL season

Associated Press

GLADEVILLE, Tenn. — Greg Ray took his fourth pole of the season Friday as light rain and humidity kept cars from hitting 200 mph in qualifying for the Harrah's Indy 200.

He edged points leader Sam Hornish Jr. by turning a lap of 199.922, while Hornish will start beside him on the front row thanks to a lap of 199.750. Hornish had posted the fastest lap yet on this track earlier in practice at 201.037.

Mark Dismore will start third, followed by Billy Boat. Eddie Cheever, who won the last race at Kansas, was fifth, followed by Buddy Lazier, Robbie Buhl, Jeff Ward, Felipe Giaffone and Donnie Beechler.

Ray was happy to grab his 13th career pole on an afternoon where oppressive humidity slowed down everyone, keeping drivers from getting fully into their top gear. Winning Saturday night at the Nashville Superspeedway would mean much more.

"We haven't had the season that we wanted and haven't posted the results we wanted and haven't capitalized on the pole positions we have had," said Ray, who converted only his pole at Atlanta into a victory.

"We're going to try to focus on some of the details and hopefully be the frontrunner tomorrow night."

Ray's biggest challenge will come from Hornish. The 21-year-old driver started beside Ray at the season-opening race at Phoenix and made that race his first of two consecutive victories. Hornish also has finished second in the last three races.

"The last time we started second we won," Hornish said.

Rogge officially takes over presidency of IOC

Associated Press

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — IOC president Jacques Rogge reached out to his vanquished opponents Friday and counseled the United States on how to increase its power under the committee's newly elected leadership.

With his predecessor, Juan Antonio Samaranch, still hospitalized with exhaustion, Rogge officially began his eight-year term by accepting the key to IOC headquarters in a subdued ceremony at the Olympic Museum.

The 59-year-old Belgian surgeon reiterated his vows to step up the fight against drugs in sports and to downsize the Olympics. He also began mending fences.

Elected Monday in Moscow as the eighth president in the 107-year history of the International Olympic Committee, Rogge brushed aside accusations he'd won the vote thanks to Samaranch's influence.

His principal rivals, Kim Un-yong of South Korea and Dick Pound of Canada, each claimed the outgoing president pulled strings for Rogge.

"I can only say I understand there can be disappointment following the election," Rogge said. "My task is to unite the IOC and not to put oil on the fire. I will work most cooperatively with the other members and I definitely want to work most closely with Dr. Kim."

Rogge already has asked Pound to resume his duties following the Canadian's abrupt resignation as IOC marketing chief and chairman of the World Anti-Doping Agency.

On the United States' place in the Olympic community, Rogge said the nation is poorly represented within the IOC and its position slipped further with the end of Anita DeFrantz's term as vice presidents at the end of the Moscow meeting.

Rogge acknowledged the U.S. status within the IOC did not reflect the power it wielded both from a financial and sports standpoint.

"The United States wins the most number of medals at the Summer Games," Rogge said. "They produce the most money from television rights and nine of the 11 Olympic sponsors are American companies. They hold a special place in the Olympic movement."

He promised to examine the situation with U.S. Olympic Committee president Sandy Baldwin in Colorado Springs, Colo., next month following a trip to Edmonton for the world track championships and a visit to the 2002 Winter Games sites in Salt Lake City.

But in advance, Rogge — who speaks five languages fluently — said the United States needed to develop multilingual leaders, organize more major international events and invite athletes from developing countries to training camps in the United States.

"That would automatically lead to more readiness to elect someone from your country," he said.

Standing in for Samaranch, IOC first vice president Keba Mbaye handed Rogge the keys to Chateau de Vidy, the IOC's marbled headquarters on the shores of Lake Geneva.

"It is ... a symbol of the ship's wheel that you will now be guiding," Mbaye told Rogge, a three-time Olympic sailor. "It will be a difficult task as the ship has become overloaded, capricious and the ocean is tempestuous. But I know you are a good captain."

A smiling Rogge accepted the golden key.

"At this moment, as I officially take the keys, my first words are for the one who should have taken a prominent part in the ceremony," Rogge said solemnly. "Unfortunately he could not be with us but he insisted himself the ceremony go on.

"Be reassured I understand the gravity of this moment and its symbolic importance. By handing me these keys you are entrusting me with the leadership of the International Olympic Committee and it is with great enthusiasm that I start my office as president of the IOC."

Tibetan demonstrators protested the IOC's decision to give the 2008 Games to Beijing, calling for the committee to push for human rights and "listen to minorities" in China.

The peaceful group handed a letter intended for Rogge to IOC director general Francois Carrard in the museum hall.

Olympic bribes may be OK, but feds don't like fraud

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Federal prosecutors sought Friday to shore up their fraud case after a judge tossed bribery and racketeering charges out of the Olympic corruption trial.

Even if their million-dollar scheme to influence IOC members wasn't bribery, the Salt Lake bid leaders who won the 2002 Winter Games were not authorized to spend money that way, and they kept their board of trustees from learning about the details, the government said.

"The defendants contrived through false representations, material omissions and various schemes" to hide their activities, Justice Department attorney Richard Wiedis argued Friday in a brief.

His 34-page pleading asked U.S. District Court Judge David Sam to uphold the government's fraud charges and a conspiracy count.

The defendants have asked that those charges be dismissed, too, and Sam is the judge who on Monday gave the boot to bribery and racketeering.

Sam ruled Utah's commercial bribery law doesn't apply to a foreign organization like the IOC, so he knocked out the federal travel-in-aid of-racketeering charges that depended entirely on the state bribery misdemeanor.

Falcons hope rookie can fill Andersen's shoes

Associated Press

GREENVILLE, S.C. — Jake Arians looked down at his size-9 1/2 shoes.

"You think these are big enough?" he asked.

Indeed, Arians has some big shoes to fill with the Atlanta Falcons, who let go Morten Andersen and plan to give their kicking job to a guy who's never even attempted a field goal in the NFL.

Arians wants to get one thing straight right from the start.

"People say I'm going to replace Morten Andersen," he said. "Well, there's no way to replace Morten Andersen."

The Falcons couldn't afford to re-sign Andersen, still one of the best kickers in the NFL at age 40. Last season, he made 25-of-31 field goals, was perfect on 23 extra points and had a strong enough leg to handle kickoffs.

The plight facing Andersen and other established kickers such as Al Del Greco and John Carney is simply one of money. With the restraints of the salary cap, many teams aren't willing to dole out big salaries to players who rarely get on the field, which creates opportunities for younger (and cheaper) kickers.

"There's pressure to deal with, no question about it," said Joe DeCamillas, the special teams coach. "But that's the way it is now in the NFL. It's just a matter of finances. You'd like to have a guy, but it's not feasible. It's not like Mort can't still do the job, either."

Anderson has worked out at the Falcons' old training complex in Suwanee, Ga., hoping to catch on with another team. Meanwhile, Arians is at Furman University, trying to show he's a worthy successor.

"There's four or five guys who are really good. Mort is one of those," Arians said during a break in the two-a-day practice routine at training camp. "The rest of us are a dime a dozen. How you handle the pressure is how you separate yourself. That's how you keep your job."

The 24-year-old Arians spent all of last season on the Falcons practice squad, watching Andersen's every move, trying to pick up the nuances that made him one of the league's greatest kickers.

"His work ethic was unbelievable," Arians said. "And Morten relished the pressure. He may have missed one from time to time, but it was rarely in the fourth quarter."

At practice, Andersen would always go off by himself, practicing his technique on 15 or 20 kicks without using a ball. In bed, he would envision kicks in his head before dozing off.

Arians watched and listened, soaking it all up. Now, he'll try to take those lessons to the field, knowing he doesn't have much room for error.

"There's probably 300 guys who can kick well enough to be in the NFL," he said. "If you miss two in a row, you've got to start worrying about your job."

Arians won't be given the job, either. The Falcons signed Michigan rookie Jay Feely and former Georgia kicker Chad Holleman to provide some competition in camp.

"I'm sure I have a little edge because I've been here a year," Arians said. "They were high enough on me to keep me around last year. But I've got to be on top of my game."

The other players are eager to see how the young kickers react when the game is on the line.

Ogilvie gets proof that he's longshot

By Jim Litke
AP Sports Writer

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England — At the start of the week, Joe Ogilvie did what any self-respecting pro with no chance to win the British Open would do. He walked into a betting parlor and tried to put down money on himself.

"The place I went, they didn't even have my odds," he recalled. "They said, 'We don't go that high.' I asked, 'What are the odds of you going that high?' They said, 'Pretty high.'"

More than a few English bookies are breathing a lot easier at the moment. On Friday, Ogilvie wrestled a 68 from Royal Lytham & St. Annes to go with his 69 in the opening round. Midway through the season's third major, the 27-year-old whose preparation consisted mostly of watching British Open reruns on The Golf Channel is the top American on the board and only two strokes out of the lead.

"This is pretty much what I thought it would be," he said, "although on a grander scale."

This appears to be one cool customer. Ogilvie's last chance to make it into the field here nearly vanished two weeks ago on the next-to-last hole of the Western Open, when an approach shot to the green hit a sprinkler head, ricocheted 30 yards over the green and cost him a bogey. Then, on the 18th, he calmly drained a 25-footer for par to secure eighth place and a spot in the Open.

Yet, when Ogilvie finished telling the story in the interview room, it sounded a lot less heroic.

"Obviously," he said, "I didn't realize what that putt would mean."

The truth is that Ogilvie probably can afford to be that casual. He gave himself five years to make it on the PGA Tour or go bust, figuring he could fall back on his economics degree from Duke or a handful of very successful fraternity brothers. For all the scuffling he had to do at qualifying school and the Buy.com Tour just to reach The Show, Ogilvie conceded he spent as much time modeling himself after Bill Gates and Warren Buffet as Jack Nicklaus.

Growing up in Lancaster, Ohio, just down the road from Ohio State, Ogilvie revered Nicklaus. But when asked to list his heroes in a PGA Tour bio, he put the two sterling CEOs ahead of the Golden Bear.

"Do you invest a lot?" someone asked.

"You'd probably win more betting on me this week than I made on the market," he replied. "When it was very, very easy, I made a lot of money. When it was very, very hard, I didn't go cash in early enough."

Whether that amount put Ogilvie in fast company before, he knows that's where he stands now. Scotsman Colin Montgomerie has yet to win a major, but he has a two-stroke lead, Ryder Cup experience and seven consecutive years under his belt as the European tour's leading money-winner. And Tiger Woods lurks just two strokes behind Ogilvie.

Still, he doesn't scare easily.

"He's played against some big golfers before," Ogilvie's father, Pip, recalled during a telephone conversation from the family's home in Lancaster. "When he was a freshman in high school, he played No. 1 on the varsity. He was only 4-foot-11 and 98 pounds back then, and he couldn't reach a lot of par-4s in regulation. But he could get up and down out of a milk bucket."

The 196 bunkers at Royal Lytham practically guarantee Ogilvie will have to manage that feat a few more times. On the other side of the Atlantic, the father's last bit of advice for his son is to recognize when discretion really is the better part of valor. On a course this treacherous, the line between risk and reward sometimes swells to the width of a chasm.

"What the top players understand is that while there are so many times that they can make the shot, there are also times they shouldn't try it," Pip Ogilvie said.

Still, there's no denying that longshots are the son's specialty. On Sunday, one of Ogilvie's friends dropped into a betting parlor and saw the odds were 500-1. On Tuesday, when he returned to make a bet, they had dropped to 150-1. It was hardly a sudden groundswell of support, though.

It turns out nearly all the people who bet him down just assumed they were putting money on Geoff Ogilvy, the Australian who is ranked No. 116 in the world — 146 places higher than Joe Ogilvie — but failed to make the cut. It was an easy mistake to make.

The people who run the leaderboard at the Open did the same thing.

Parnevik contends for British crown again

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (AP) — A two-time runner-up who relishes playing windy links courses, Jesper Parnevik is ideally placed for another shot at the British Open.

Parnevik is near the top of the leaderboard at the halfway mark in the 130th Open at Royal Lytham & St. Annes at 5 under after rounds of 69 and 68, trailing leader Colin Montgomerie by two strokes.

"I feel very comfortable right now. I am probably playing better than I have been in a very long time," he said. "I feel I have good ball control and can confidently fade and draw the ball.

"There's much less wind (than Thursday) but this course is set up so well you still have to be very careful off the tee. I wanted to be a few ahead because the course is playing a little bit easier."

Parnevik's consistency at British Opens has put him in contention three times before.

The Swede was second to Nick Price at Turnberry in 1994 and Justin Leonard at Troon in '97, each time being beaten by standout final rounds. He also tied for fourth behind Mark O'Meara in '98.

"At Troon, I gave it my all and thought I was going to win there," he said. "But Justin played a great round of golf."

BRITISH: Montgomerie leads

the 38-year-old Scot lumbering toward the green.

"I think they're quite glad to see me leading at this stage," he said. "There's an awful long way to go. We've managed to cover half of it."

None of the six players between Montgomerie and Woods has ever won a major. Some are barely known outside of Europe, and even the lone American in the mix — Joe Ogilvie — is playing in only his second major.

Fulke, who clinched a spot on his first Ryder Cup team by finishing second at the Match Play Championship in Australia, had a bogey-free 67 and closed with seven straight pars. He has made only one bogey at Royal Lytham.

Jesper Parnevik, Greg Owen of England and Ogilvie each had 68 and were at 137, while Eduardo Romero, Niclas Fasth and Alex Cejka were another stroke back.

Woods has some company at 139 — he'll play with good buddy and former British Open champion Mark O'Meara, who had a 69 on Friday. Also in that group of 139 was Darren Clarke, Brad Faxon and Billy Andrade.

Parnevik has had two good chances at winning the British Open since 1994, but Woods was the name that jumped out at Montgomerie.

"I'm happy he's behind me. I will be happier on Sunday if he's behind me," Montgomerie said. "We all have an eye on him. He's the best player in the world by some margin. We are ahead of him right now, but he must be quite comfortable in that position."

Indeed, he was.

It was hardly a spectacular round by Woods — not even as good as the 66 he shot in the second round at Lytham in 1996 when he was a 20-year-old amateur. Still, the mistakes were minimal and he took advantage of the three par 5s with birdies on all of them.

His worst drive led to a birdie, but only because it went so far right of the fairway that it landed in a patch of hay trampled by the gallery. His wedge covered the 111 yards required to clear a pot bunker and stopped 20 feet away.

The round could have fallen apart on the next hole when Woods hit out of a divot into rough so thick that all he could do was chop it into a bunker by the green. But he blasted out to 6 feet and holed the putt.

"I feel pretty good about where I am right now," he said.

David Duval and Phil Mickelson can't say the same.

The best American players to have never won a major might not get a chance at Lytham. Duval was only two strokes back at one point until taking a double bogey from a pot bunker on No. 10, shooting 40 on the back nine and finished seven strokes back.

Mickelson was going along fine until he hit into rough at No. 14, then into a bunker, then three-putted for double bogey. He found another pot bunker on the 17th to drop a shot, signed for a 72 and also was at 142.

The last time Montgomerie had the first-round lead at a major, he shot 76 the next day in the '97 U.S. Open and never caught up.

He was solid this time, except for a poor iron off the third tee that rattled into the trees. He was lucky to hack it into the fairway and take only bogey, and his only other glitch was a tee shot that ran too far into a pot bunker on No. 15.

He was met with energetic applause along the way, the gallery hanging on every shot.

"Even walking up the first hole, I realized this is going to be a different type of day," Montgomerie said. "It was quite amazing. I've never had this before."

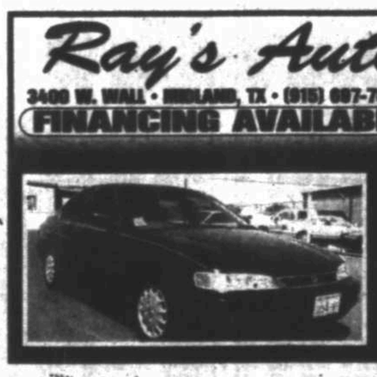

He had some luck, too.

His approach into the par-5 seventh was headed into the gallery and waist-high grass until it caromed out and rolled down a carpeted path away from danger. Another approach on No. 11 rolled up the sodded wall and out of a bunker.

The crowd let out another roar, a sound Montgomerie came to know well.

"May it long continue," he said.

Quigleys take over leads in BC Open, SBC Senior Open

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

ENDICOTT, N.Y. — Ty Tryon's youth was not served as a group of veterans, led by Brett Quigley's 10-under 62, took control of the B.C. Open on Friday.

The 17-year-old Tryon, coming off a first-round 65, tumbled quickly out of the lead. Struggling with his putting, and spending much time playing out of bunkers, the high school junior from Orlando, Fla., shot a 72 in muggy conditions at En-Joie Golf Club.

Quigley took advantage of the cooler morning temperatures to shoot a career-best round, one short of matching a tournament record. With a two-round score of 15-under 129, Quigley holds a three-stroke lead over Mark Hensby and Jonathan Kaye.

Thursday's co-leader Edward Fryatt, shot a 68 to match Jim McGovern (66) at 11 under.

Although disappointed, Tryon shrugged off his performance that left him eight strokes back at 137.

"I showed some stupidness out there," Tryon said. "I'm not mad or angry. I'm a little disappointed. ... It's just the way it goes. I go out there and birdie the first hole tomorrow and I'm right there."

As consolation, Tryon made his second cut in his second PGA Tour event. The cut was established at 3 under, leaving a field of 86.

Last March, Tryon qualified for the Honda Classic and tied for 39th to become the youngest player to make a cut since 15-year-old Bob Panasik in the 1957 Canadian Open.

McCord, Quigley share lead

LONG GROVE, Ill. — Gary McCord and Dana Quigley shot 7-under 65s Friday to share the first-round lead in the SBC Senior Open, while Bruce Lietzke struggled to a 74 in his senior debut.

McCord, the CBS announcer who has two senior titles, birdied four of his first six holes on the Kemper Lakes course. He made an 18-foot birdie putt on No. 2, holed a 15-footer on the 6th and made eagle on the 11th with a 15-foot putt from the back of the green.

"I've been struggling with the putter — seriously," McCord said. "I've tried everything. I caught a happy putter for the first time in a while. I took three or four days off a couple weeks ago to see my swing guru. He said every time I get over a putt I think about missing it and pulling it. I actually made a couple of long putts. I got so excited. I made a 15-footer from the back of the green for eagle. That juiced me a little."

Lietzke, the 13-time winner on the PGA Tour, turned 50 on Wednesday. He was paired with Miller Barber and Gene Littler.

"When I came out on the regular tour Miller Barber and Don January took me under their wing and Gene Littler was always very complimentary when we played," Lietzke said.

"If Don January was here today it would have been a dream foursome. These guys were my idols. We talked about old memories today. But mostly it was business."

Scranton, Stupples share second-round lead

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. — Karen Stupples capped a 5-under-par 66 with a 10-foot birdie putt Friday and moved into a share of the lead of the LPGA Big Apple Classic with first-round leader Nancy Scranton.

Stupples, who has one top-10 finish this year and stands 90th on the money list, had her sixth birdie of the day on the closing par-5 to join Scranton at 7-under 135 after two rounds on the 6,161-yard Wykagyl Country Club course.

Scranton, who held a two-stroke lead after opening with a 64, shot a 71 Friday and still had the lead to herself in the $950,000 tournament until Stupples finished in one of the day's final groups.

"I hit some pretty decent drives," said Stupples, a native of England who birdied all the par-5s. "I can't keep my eyes off the leaderboards so it was pretty exciting knowing I needed that last putt to tie for the lead. I thought how it would be if I needed that same putt Sunday to get into a playoff. It was a good thing to do."

Michele Redman, who was second after the opening round, Mi Hyun Kim and Rosie Jones were all at 6-under 136.

Mosley defends his WBC title for 3rd time as heavy favorite

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Unbeaten, untied and still largely unnoticed, Shane Mosley defends his WBC welterweight title for the third time, facing the relatively unknown Adrian Stone.

Mosley, who has not gained the fame of Felix Trinidad or Oscar De La Hoya, took the title from De La Hoya last year in Los Angeles in what was Mosley's only marquee match so far.

The bout against Stone on Saturday night shapes up as a mismatch, with Mosley a 20-1 favorite over the English fighter.

Featuring both speed and power, Mosley brings a 37-0 record into the ring at Caesars Palace.

Stone, a native of Bristol, England, who now lives in Paterson, N.J., is 30-3-2 with 23 knockouts.

The 29-year-old Mosley has knocked out challengers Shannan Taylor of Australia and Antonio Diaz, a fellow Californian, since beating De La Hoya on June 17, 2000.

Mosley stopped Taylor in the fifth round, and Diaz was counted out in the sixth.

Stone doesn't figure to last any longer than the last two challengers.

Still, Mosley said he must respect Stone.

"He's very tough and very strong," Mosley, said of his opponent, who turned 30 on Thursday. "He's like his name, 'Stone.' He gets off the canvas and he's war until the end.

"I have to be careful about that."

His father/trainer, Jack Mosley, is trying to make sure Shane is careful.

"We don't overlook any opponents, in spite of what people say — that Adrian Stone is not a worthy opponent," Jack Mosley said. "He's a brawler. He's coming down in weight and he's used to fighting bigger guys, so we don't know what that might bring to us."

The bout will be televised on HBO, with Mosley to earn $3.5 million.

Mosley, who said he plans to fight for only two or three more years, has a goal of meeting the other welterweight champions, but also said he would consider a rematch with De La Hoya if the deal were right — ostensibly meaning a 50-50 split of the purse in what would be a big-money bout.

"If it is possible, I'd like to unify the welterweight championship," Mosley said. "If not, I'll go on to bigger and better things. My plan is to fight the other welterweight champions first."

A natural matchup would be against Vernon Forrest, the IBF 147-pound champion and the last fighter to beat Mosley, when both were amateurs in 1992. Mosley didn't make the U.S. Olympic team that year, but he did eventually beat the only American boxer to win a gold medal that summer, De La Hoya.

Andrew Lewis, a native of Guyana who fights out of New York, is the WBA welterweight champion and another possible foe for Mosley.

Mosley also could go up to 154 pounds to challenge De La Hoya, but it is unlikely that he would go any heavier to set up a bout against Trinidad.

"After the Stone fight, I want my fights to be for the public," Mosley said. "I don't want to be in a situation where there is nobody worthwhile to fight."

Pacers pursue Olajuwon

N.Y. Times News Service

The courtship of Hakeem Olajuwon expanded Friday when a delegation from the Indiana Pacers met with the Rockets' 17-year center, sources familiar with the talks said Friday.

Olajuwon met with Pacers coach Isiah Thomas and president Donnie Walsh on Friday and already had met with Raptors coach Lenny Wilkens and general manager Glen Grunwald this week.

The Jazz, Knicks and Heat also have expressed interest while the Rockets have increased their offer to a two-year, $8.2 million deal, according to sources familiar with the talks.

Olajuwon's agent, Dan Fegan, did not return phone messages.

The Rockets' increased offer is close to any offer the other teams are liable to make without use of a sign-and-trade arrangement with the Rockets.

The Raptors have discussed a variety of options with Olajuwon's representatives who have sought a multiyear deal worth more than $21 million, according to sources familiar with the talks.

The Raptors initially offered a two-year deal worth $9.45 million if using the team's midlevel exception. The Raptors also have a trade exception worth more than $5 million in which the Rockets could receive future draft picks without using any of their current salary-cap space. In that scenario, Olajuwon, 38, could accept a two-year, $10.5 million contract.

Sources said the Raptors also discussed a three-year deal with a team option for the last season.

A four-year deal would allow Olajuwon to receive a package worth the $20 million his representatives were originally seeking over two seasons. He could then seek a buyout after two seasons, although no such arrangement could be agreed upon in advance.

Cooperation with the Rockets could allow Olajuwon to receive the largest contract possible, regardless of length, with the Raptors. By using the Raptors' trade exception, acquired in Toronto's trade of Charles Oakley to Chicago, the Raptors could deal draft choices and the exception to pay Olajuwon a salary starting at $5 million a year.

In addition to picking up at least one draft pick and maintaining their cap room to maneuver this summer, the Rockets would then have the valuable trade exception to use in a deal or in a sign-and-trade pursuit of a free agent this year or next.

Other than the cap space occupied under league rules by the Rockets' unsigned free agents, the Rockets' signed players occupy slightly more than $24 million of the $42.5 million salary cap. The Rockets are attempting to fit Olajuwon, Shandon Anderson and Maurice Taylor in their cap space and to sign Moochie Norris and Matt Bullard using their "Larry Bird" rights to exceed the salary cap with the Rockets.

NBA: Trail Blazers do some shopping

in early October.

Anderson, a four-year veteran who also spent time with the Cleveland Cavaliers and Los Angeles Clippers, was the Spurs' second-leading scorer last season with an average of 15.5 points. He played for just $2.25 million, expecting to be rewarded with a big contract this summer.

Anderson had been negotiating with the Spurs over the past two weeks, and the team was offering $36 million over five years. But he was unhappy that the Spurs would not guarantee a sixth year or give him the maximum allowable raises from year to year.

The Blazers, who tried to sign Anderson as a free agent last year when he left the Clippers, apparently stepped in at the right moment.

A Blazers' spokeswoman said Friday she could not confirm the deal.

That Portland could offer far $1.8 less than the Spurs in the first season of the contract apparently didn't dissuade Anderson.

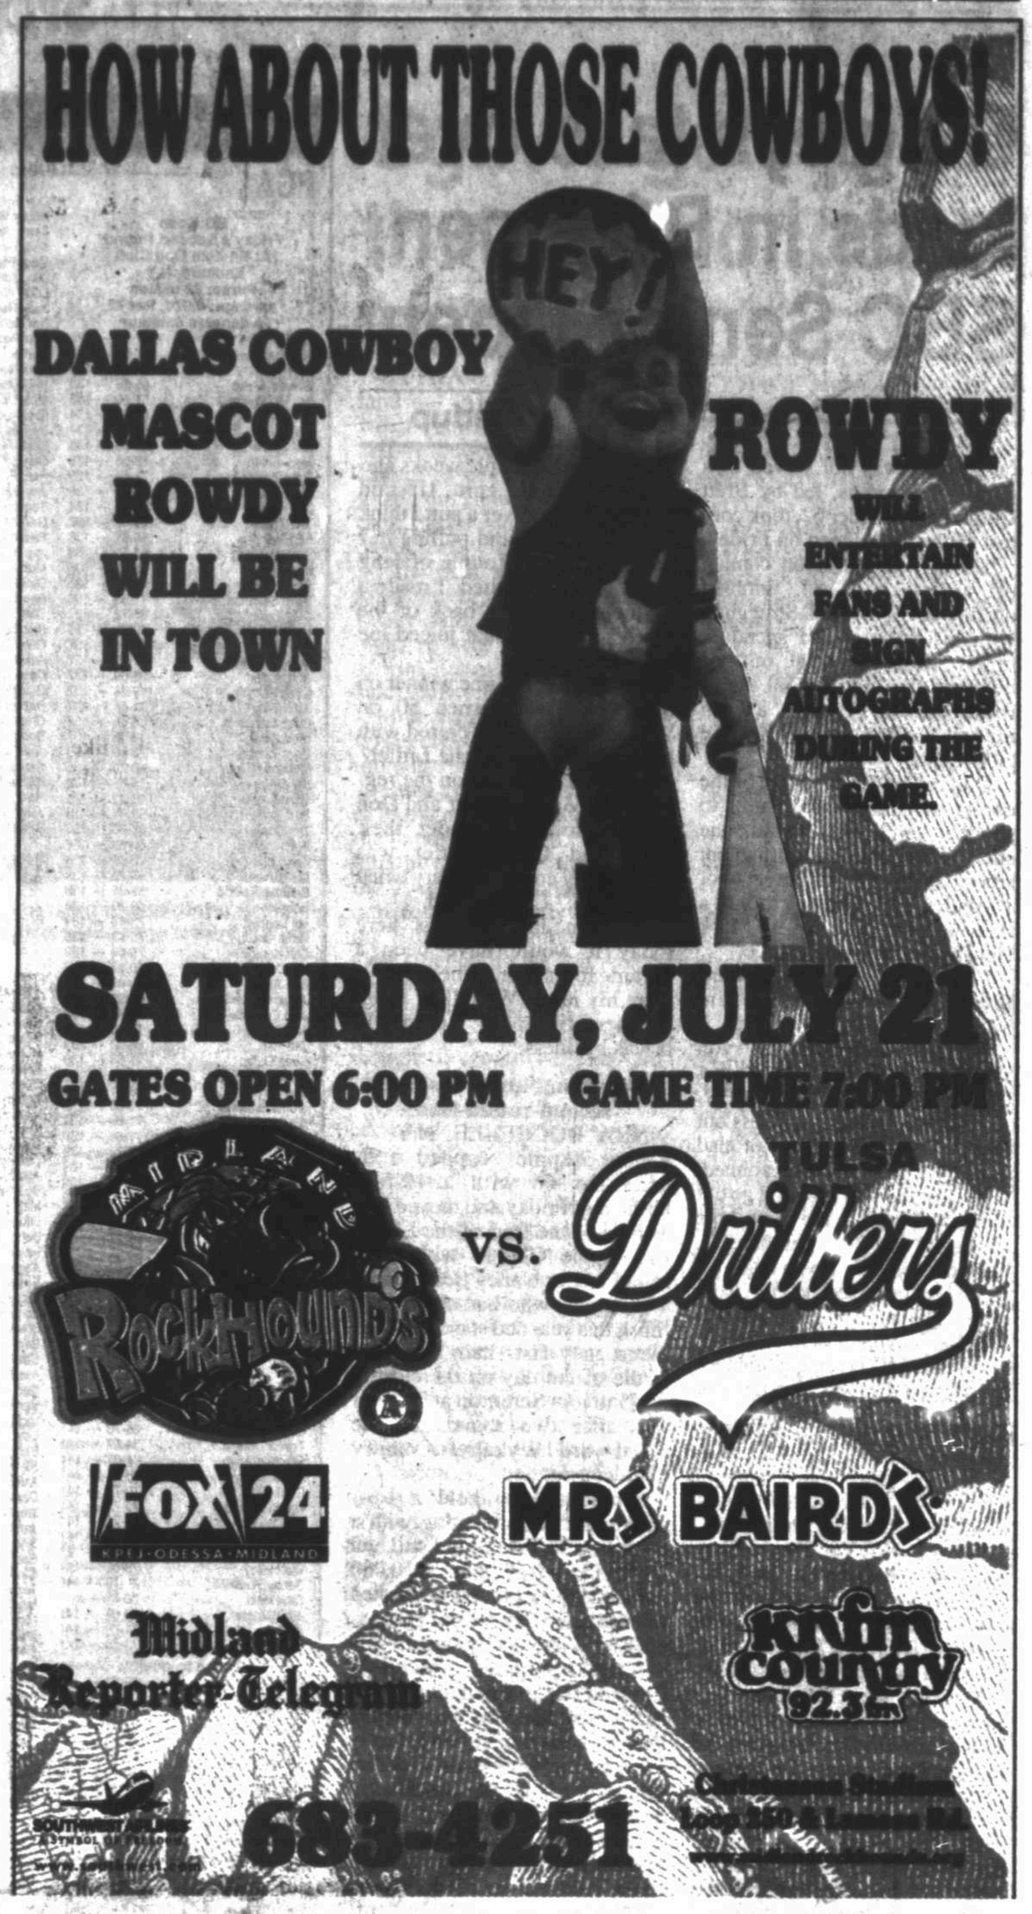

"Derek isn't a big spender, and that's a lot of money as well," Dutt said of the $4.5 million.

The agent, who also represents new ex-Spurs Samaki Walker and Avery Johnson, said Anderson felt Portland management has a "family atmosphere" that is committed to winning over the long term.

"He feels mainly like at this stage of his career, he wants to be somewhere he can blend and grow with a group of young talent," Dutt said. "With Tim Duncan only having two years remaining on his deal, there was some concern about what happens in two years. With Portland, we feel like they're always going to be competitive."

Anthony, hobbled by ankle injuries last season and relegated to third-string point guard after the signing of Rod Strickland, was traded to Chicago for a future second-round draft choice. The 10-year veteran averaged 4.9 points and 1.4 assists in 58 games after signing a three-year, $11.3 million contract.

Augmon, a former UNLV teammate of Augmon's who was among Portland's better defenders, has agreed to sign with the Hornets, the Charlotte Observer reported.

Man to present one-man show at Globe

■ After turning his life over to God, Roger Nelson left teaching to do performances of the life of John Wesley.

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

ODESSA — The Globe of the Great Southwest will present a one-man portrayal of the life of the founder of Methodism, John Wesley, by actor Roger Nelson at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. today.

The performances will be filmed before a live audience, and after editing, will be distributed by Gospel Communications.

Nelson has performed the play, "The Man From Aldersgate," more than 1,100 times in 31 countries and all six continents, including the Shakespeare Center at Stratford-Upon-Avon, and Carnegie Hall in New York.

He first brought the play to Odessa about 18 months ago, and liked the Globe of the Great Southwest so much that when he agreed to put the performance on film, he asked to do it at the Globe, according to Globe contact person Sherree Carter.

Nelson has been in Odessa since July 14 preparing for the performances.

Nelson holds degrees in math and computer science from the University of Colorado and was involved in research for five years before turning to a career in theater. He said despite considerable success in summer stock, TV commercials and an off-Broadway show, he had searched for a missing component in his life.

"I began attending a church on the East Side (of New York City), and enjoyed the atmosphere," he said.

After being hit by a car while riding his bicycle home from a performance one night, he spent 11 days in the hospital with a broken leg, and during that time, he became close friends with the East Side church's associate pastor. Yet Nelson said he still felt something was missing from his life.

"I was playing a role," he said. "It didn't really matter."

One day after being released from the hospital, he dropped by the old Lamb's Club, which had been New York's oldest theatrical club. He found that the building had been converted into a church, which called itself The Lamb's.

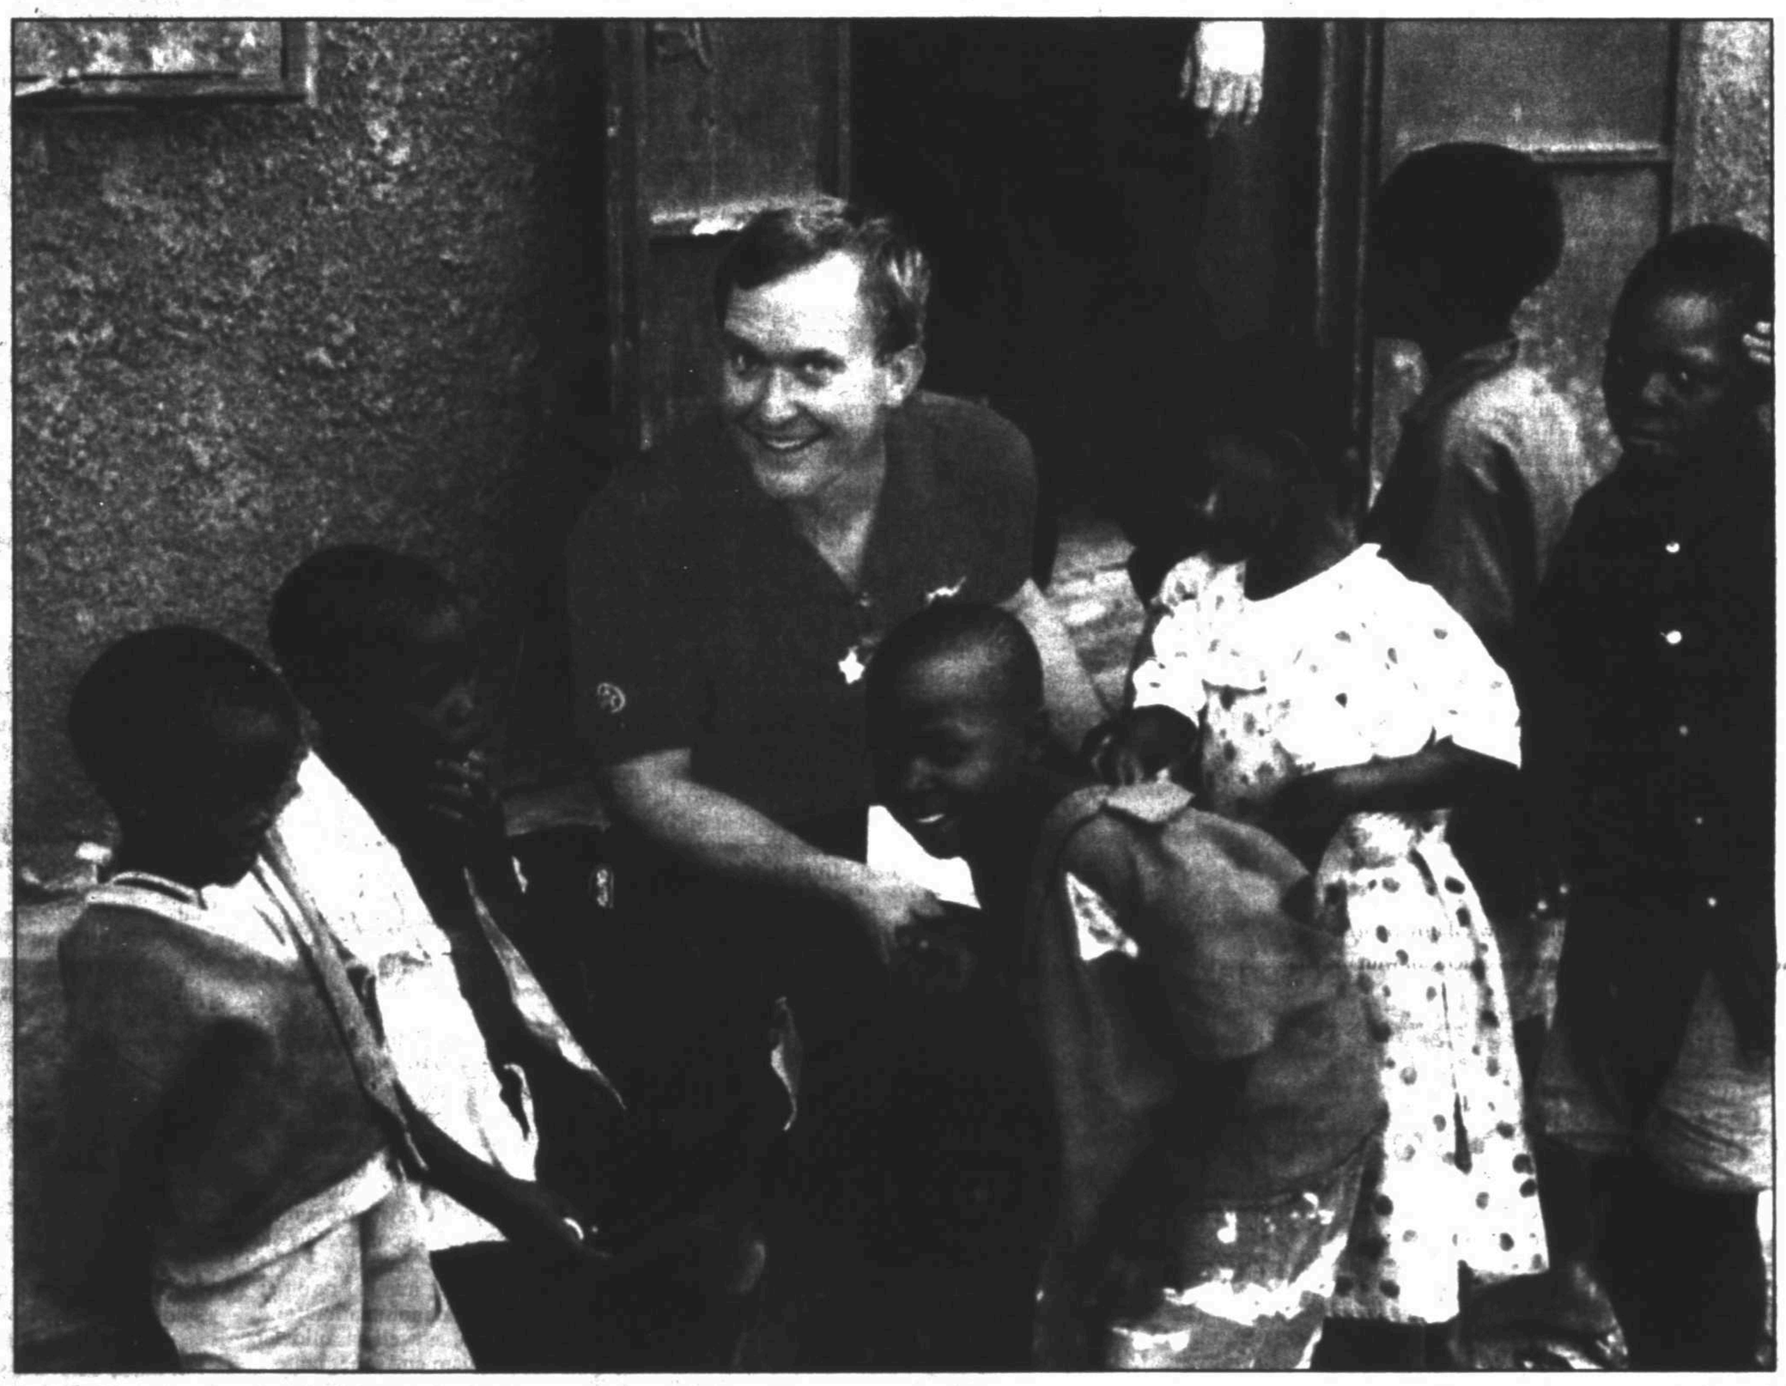

"The church was in the process of organizing a theater company, and they asked me if I'd like to attend a workshop they were having," he said. Nelson did, and it was the start of an association that eventually led him to become the company's manager.

Meanwhile, he was attending church services at The Lamb's, where he said

PLANTING CHURCHES

Midlanders plan to simply tell Gospel story in Uganda

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

Mbale Town, Uganda, population approximately 250,000, is situated near the equator, yet is mountainous enough that the climate is comfortable — with temperatures ranging in the 70s and 80s — and ideal for growing lush crops of potatoes, bananas, corn, beans and cash crops of cotton, sugar, coffee and tea.

It is an area white to harvest in the biblical sense, according to the Rev. Fred Lybrand, Midland Bible Church pastor, who left July 12 with a group of 24 to do mission work.

They will not be in Mbale, but in a nearby town, where construction of a new church building will be completed shortly after their arrival. The church already has a pastor in place.

Lybrand said the mission of the Midland group is simply to tell the Gospel story.

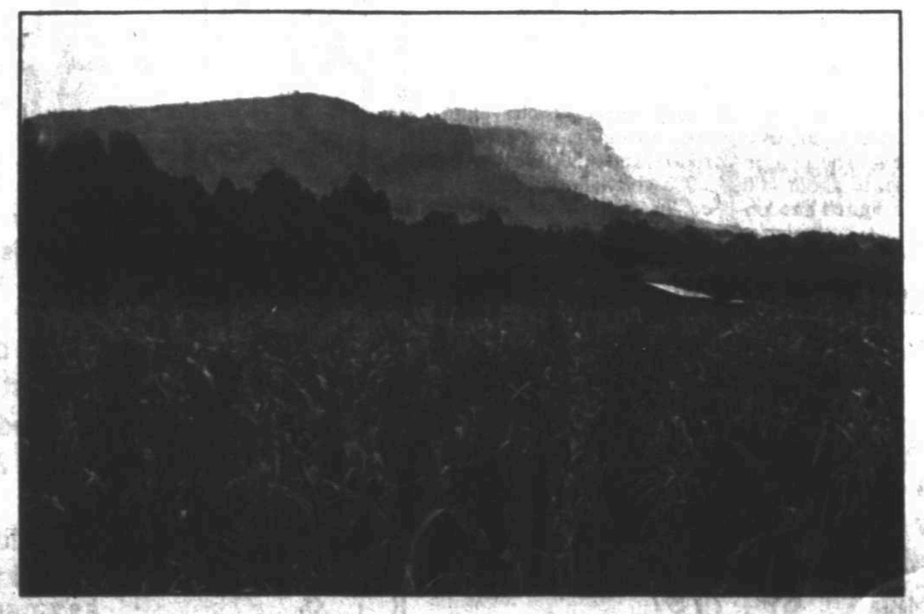

"We will go hut to hut, sharing the message, and also make larger presentations in schools and other public places," said Lybrand. "The people are eager to have us visit, and we expect to have 400 to 500 people come to the first service in the new church at the end of the week."

This will be the second trip for Midland Bible Church, and five of the 10 people who went on the first mission last year are returning. Lybrand explained the Midland congregation took on the Ugandan mission as a ministry last year after a two- or three-year hiatus in mission work. During that time they re-evaluated their purpose in the light of their beliefs.

"We were convinced that the real challenge was with involvement," said Lybrand. "We wanted to build churches — not the physical buildings, although we did pay local (Ugandan) construction he became keenly aware of his need to surrender to the will of God.

"It's one thing to believe in God, even the devils do," he explained, "and another thing to place your complete trust in him.

"Only by surrendering my life to God did I finally experience peace.

"His life, real life, had been the thing that was missing. I was no longer playing the role. The truth became a reality to me."

The path was not made smooth for Nelson, however. He continued to experience career ups and downs, and he and the significant woman in his life parted ways, yet he felt secure as one of God's own.

A turning point came when the minister of The Lamb's Church dreamed one night Nelson was John Wesley, and told Nelson that he thought he should put together a one-man play.

"I said, 'John Who,'" said Nelson, joking he thought John Wesley played second base for the Mets. "But I prayed about this, and the Lord answered with a playwright, Brad L. Smith, a lifelong Methodist, who wrote an outstanding script on the life of Wesley."

The script — based on Wesley's journals with a few additions from biographical notes — is for the most part Wesley's own words.

This was in 1977. By the time the play was ready to perform, Nelson had left New York and moved to Colorado Springs, where he was an adjunct professor of math at the university. His first public performance of "The Man From Aldersgate" was in January 1978. In 1979, seeing the continuing success of the play, he left teaching and began performing full time.

Nelson attributes performances of the play not only to a turnaround of his own life, but others' discovery of the way to peace.

"By surrendering my life to God, I experienced a turnaround in my career, which would have been otherwise impossible," he said. "I never dreamed of performing at Carnegie Hall, the Stratford Theatre in Canada, or the Shakespeare Center at Stratford-Upon-Avon, but God opened these doors to me.

'It's one thing to believe in God, even the devils do, and another thing to place your complete trust in him.'

— Roger Nelson, actor

"There is a God-shaped vacuum inside each one of us that only God can fill," Nelson said. "People try to fill it with going to church, doing drugs, observing religious practices, achieving financial success or seeking supernatural experiences, to name a few.

"Some of these things may not be bad in themselves, but they can never fill that vacuum. Only God can, because it is God-shaped."

While still performing 'Aldersgate,' at the suggestion of friends, Nelson began work on another one-man play, "The Confession of St. Patrick," which Nelson said is virtually the only written record of Patrick.

"I started researching St. Patrick in 1991, and there is hardly anything written about him that is not legend," Nelson said. "He was not Irish; he was not born in Ireland; he was never canonized by the Roman Catholic Church and the stories that so many of us take as truth are actually campfire stories.

"The legends are fun, but the confession is actually a written document.

"When I do Patrick, I basically recite the confession, which I've edited a little for length, and I'm in costume, and a sing a little, in a folksy way."

He did his first performance of Patrick in 1992, and since that time, he had done 188 performances.

The edited video of the live performance of "The Man From Aldersgate," will be out in August.

Ms. Carter said dinner will be served at the Globe at 5 p.m., between the two performances of the show.

"We hope to have a packed house for both performances," she said.

Tickets are $25 for singles, $35 per couple, and cover the cost of dinner and a copy of the video when it is released.

The Globe of the Great Southwest is located at 2308 Shakespeare Road, behind Odessa College. Phone number is 580-3177, or 332-1586.

The video may also be purchased from Nelson's office (phone 626-794-3943) or through the play's Web site, www.a1manplay.com.

workers to build a church — but to share the Gospel with people, and plant the church in that way."

As a part of the mission, the Midland church also arranges to pay the salary of an indigent pastor, a graduate of the Bible school at Mbale, and to furnish him with a bicycle, a cow and a house for the first year.

The program is run by the Presbyterian Church in Uganda, and was begun about five years ago, according to Lybrand, who said Midland Bible Church is one of several non-Presbyterian congregations in Texas that have signed on to help. He said sharing the Gospel in Uganda is easier than in many other countries, since Uganda's official national language is English.

"The people there are taught English in the schools, but they also speak Ugandan and their local dialect." But even so, Lybrand said the mission program leaves nothing to chance with something as crucial as the Gospel.

"When we go, we are accompanied by a translator, usually a pastor or an elder in the church, who is very well-versed in the Bible.

"As a general rule, these folks are familiar with spiritual things. They know there is a God, and they've had some experience with Christians. Uganda was once a British colony, and the Church of Uganda, which is Anglican, is the largest Christian denomination in the country," he said, adding there are also Catholics, a number of other Christian denominations and Muslims, as well as followers of animism and other beliefs.

"There is a huge interest in our presence," said Lybrand. The schools all invite us to come and speak, in towns from all around. We'll talk to 300 to 400 kids in each school, and although they're not from the town where we're building the church, they're still hearing the Gospel."

Lybrand said the group last summer had visited a Muslim school at the invitation of the principal, a Christian woman, who had told school officials this was an opportunity not to be missed.

"This is a great opportunity for them, and they're eager to learn from us," he said. "This year, we're visiting 17 schools during the time we're there, and we were invited to visit more. The response is just amazing."

While teaching, the Americans will learn a lot as well, said the Rev. Tyler Beard, associate pastor at MBC who went on last year's mission trip. He said there is a wide culture gap.

"Typically, the life expectancy of Ugandans is about 35. They tend to have lots of kids. Girls start having children at about 13, and by the time they're 35, they will have had eight or nine kids.

"It's not unusual for people to have to walk 100 miles to get to a hospital, and in hospitals, most of the people you see have missing toes or fingers, from injuries that got infected before they could get medical help.

"There is a doctor in the village where we're going that was one of the little barefoot kids running around years ago, when a mission group came.

"He got help, and went to Oxford to study medicine, and when he finished, he came back and opened a clinic in the town where he grew up," said Beard. "He runs that clinic, and loses money every day, but that's what he wants to do.

"We take him medical supplies when we go."

The group from Midland Bible Church includes engineers, students, teachers, an air traffic controller and others. One member of the group is from Odessa. The youngest is a 13-year-old student.

Cowboy church reaches out to faithful of all stripes

ODESSA (AP) — If you insist on stained glass windows and padded pews for your Sunday morning worship service, the Cowboy Church of the American West is probably not for you.

The Rev. Monty Price, the church's pastor acknowledges as much.

"We're not a real quiet place with an organ playing softly in the background," Price said. "Our bunch loves to clap and laugh because church is fun."

This church, located on 23 acres just east of Midland, is a home for people who don't often feel at home in a traditional church, he said.

Nobody's going to raise an eyebrow over your clothes; children (and their accompanying noise) are in abundance; and if you don't arrive on time, you may have to sit on a bale of hay instead of a folding chair, Price said.

And everyone, cowboy or not, is welcome.

Price and his wife, Susan, who is also an ordained minister, started the nondenominational church 2 1/2 years ago with about a dozen members. The congregation has grown to about 400, Price said, as the church has continued to reach out, gathering in those who seek the comfort and wisdom of the word of God.

"About 75 percent of our members wouldn't know the front end of a horse from the rear," Price said jokingly. "We've got members who are doctors, nurses and oil workers who work Saturday nights into Sunday mornings and come straight from work to church."

The congregation is so varied, he said, that he and his wife considered changing the church's name. They stuck with the original name, though, because it reflects the roots of the couple's Christian ministry and its ongoing traveling ministry to real-life cowboys.

Price is a second-generation cowboy. He grew up on a ranch in East Texas.

"I had a horse before I had a bicycle," he said.

After marrying in 1978 and graduating from Bible college in Broken Arrow, Okla., in 1983, the Prices started the Rising Sun Cowboy Church in Trinity, Texas, and began a traveling ministry to junior and professional rodeos and other Western events.

Cowboy church, he said, started in rodeo arenas about 25 years ago.

"For rodeo people, weekends, including Sunday mornings, are workdays," Price said. "So the ministers went to the arenas and brought church to the cowboys."

The Prices traveled to rodeos as far away as Wyoming and Montana.

One weekend, they're in San Antonio for the George Strait Invitational Team Roping Rodeo. Next weekend, they'll have cowboy church for the Texas State Sheriffs Convention in Corpus Christi.

Back home, though, it's a family-oriented service, with Monty Price preaching — or teaching, as he prefers to call it — and Susan leading the praise and worship music.

The Prices' 18-year-old son, Jake, is the sound technician, and their 21-year-old daughter, Leann, who has recorded several albums, plays guitar and sings with the church band.

The church's No More Blues Band also features fiddler Ricky Boen. Boen's own band, Ricky Boen and the Texas Mud, recently received the Academy of Western Artists Will Rogers Award for Western Swing Band of the Year.

"Our praise band is fantastic," Price said. "Music comes from heaven, and it's a tremendous tool, a vehicle that brings all denominations together."

At the 8:30 and 10:30 Sunday services, children and adults meet together for music, then the children make a break for children's church.

"This is one place you'll literally see kids run from the car to go to church," Price said. And no wonder.

Children's services are held in a building that has stalls of horses on one side and the false front of a town straight out of the Old West on the other.

Instead of sitting still for a lecture, children move from station to station for a wide range of activities.

An informal inquiry class will be held on Tuesday, Aug. 21, 2001 at St. Stephen's Catholic Church from 7-8:30 pm

"Let your light so shine before men..."
Matt. 5:16

This is the soul purpose of the entire congregation of the Beacon Light Outreach Ministry. To let the life of Christ be shown in all phases of our life that others might be drawn into the knowledge of and ultimately accept Christ into their lives. With our temporary location at 3100 W. Wall, Room "A" in the Best Inn & Suites, we are trusting that the Lord will bless us to be fruitful & multiply and leave to be established in a new permanent location.

Building on the solid foundation with the love of Christ felt throughout the entire congregation, at God's own appointed time, it won't be long for this "Faith Walk in Christ" to become a reality. This is another Pentecostal Outreach Ministry reaching out to the community area, inviting any and everyone who is looking for a new church home to come and fellowship with us. Our Sunday Services are 10:30am & 7pm. Musicians are welcome and needed.

Arbitrator awards woman $225,000 in lawsuit against Rodman

SANTA ANA, Calif.— A court-appointed arbitrator awarded an actress-model $225,000 in her civil lawsuit claiming that former NBA player Dennis Rodman raped her.

The arbitrator's award to Tina New on Thursday is non-binding. Her lawyer, Stephan Tornay, said he expects Rodman will exercise his right to ask for a trial, but Rodman could not be reached for comment Thursday night.

"I don't even know the girl. I have nothing to do with her," the 40-year-old Rodman told the Orange County Register in an article that appeared in Friday's editions.

A Superior Court judge, who had appointed a lawyer as the arbitrator, ordered a hearing for July 27.

New sued Rodman for $10 million last August. She claims she met Rodman in August 1999 at a Newport Beach bar, and that she turned down an invitation to a party from a man who said he was Rodman's bodyguard.

According to New's lawsuit, after she left the bar, someone kidnapped her and took her to Rodman's Newport Beach home, where she was forced to drink an unknown liquid that caused her to fall asleep.

She claims that when she awoke, Rodman ripped off her clothing and raped her.

New said she went to Newport Beach police 10 days after the alleged rape, but detectives were unable to find any physical evidence. A district attorney's spokeswoman said no charges will be filed unless prosecutors receive evidence of a crime.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.— Sean "P. Diddy" Combs launched his new album, as police investigated allegations that he ran a red light and almost hit a pedestrian while driving a Ferrari last month.

Combs, 31, unveiled "P. Diddy and the Bad Boy Family: The Saga Continues" in Miami Beach Thursday.

The rap mogul said he worked on the album during a six-week span in Miami-Dade County, where he had gone "to take a breath" from his problems.

At that time, he had just been acquitted of weapons and bribery charges from a 1999 nightclub shooting and had broken up with girlfriend Jennifer Lopez.

Meanwhile, police were investigating a June 9 incident in which Combs drove up to a Miami night club and parked in the middle of the street, officials said. Officers told him to move the Ferrari 2001 he was driving, but he ignored them, asking "Do you know who I am?" police said.

Combs got angry, jumped in the car and drove two blocks to the Goldrush strip club, running a red light and almost hitting a pedestrian, police said. He pulled up to the club, ran inside and headed out a back door, they said.

Combs said his troubles with police have been "blown out of proportion."

BURBANK, Calif.— Everybody will know Shelley Long and Bebe Neuwirth's names when the former "Cheers" co-stars reunite this fall for the one-hour season premiere of "Frasier."

The actresses played Frasier Crane's love interests in the mid-1980s on the NBC sitcom "Cheers," from which "Frasier" spun off in 1993.

Long will return as Diane Chambers, whom Frasier (Kelsey Grammer) dated first, and Neuwirth will come back as Dr. Lilith Sternin-Crane, whom Frasier married and divorced.

In the season premiere, Diane and Lilith will try to help Frasier figure out what to do about the love triangle he was involved in during last season's finale, the network said Thursday.

ST. PAUL, Minn.— Minnesota Gov. Jesse Ventura will visit New York Gov. George Pataki in Syracuse next month to pay up on a football bet.

The pair made the friendly wager on a Vikings-Giants playoff game in January.

If the Vikings won, Pataki would have accompanied Ventura on the governor's fishing opener May 12 at Breezy Point Resort on Big Pelican Lake in central Minnesota.

But the Giants routed the Vikings, prompting Ventura to make reservations for the $5 Million Ultimate Fishing Derby on Onondaga Lake Aug. 3 in Syracuse, N.Y.

FORT WAYNE, Ind.— There might have been no joy in Mudville, but there was plenty of it at Memorial Stadium as James Earl Jones read "Casey at the Bat" to students.

In the booming voice that gave life to Darth Vader in "Star Wars" and King Mufasa in "The Lion King," Jones wowed the crowd that came to hear him before Wednesday's Fort Wayne Wizards baseball game.

"I loved it," said 10-year-old Heidi Orr. "Whenever something exciting happened in the book, his voice rose real high."

The older audience members also were impressed, including several members of the Class A Wizards, who paused their pregame warmups and wandered over to home plate to hear Jones, who also starred in the baseball movie "Field of Dreams."

Jones came to Fort Wayne to help celebrate the Wizards Reading Program.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, July 21, 2001:

You have an unusual gift when it comes to making money. Start planning, and you'll achieve a long-term financial goal in the next two years. Sometimes, explaining your ideas to others confuses them. Be your own person. Next spring you will be more upbeat than you have been in many years. You have unusual charisma, which draws others to you. If you are single, love surrounds you. Take your time when making a commitment. If you are attached, follow your financial instincts, but certainly let your sweetie know what you are doing. Experiment or choose a special hobby or sport that the two of you can learn and enjoy together. LEO knows how to spend your money!

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ Use your imagination to make plans. Let go of an overblown sense of responsibility and do something childlike or something you loved as a kid. Browse a favorite spot and invite loved ones to join you. In a different setting, everyone opens up. Tonight: Savor the good times.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ Treat a family member like a friend, and you'll both relax and enjoy each other more. Seriously consider someone's idea. Remember, you're not the only idea person. Invite others over for dinner and dessert. Tonight: You don't have to go far.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Your natural style brings others to you. You might wonder what might be the best choice of playmate. Don't worry about someone's extremely assertive manner. Express more of yourself, not only the light side but also the serious side. Tonight: At your favorite spot.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ You're inclined to go way overboard. As a result, you might spend too much or push your limits physically. Understand that you might need to change your ways. You might feel a lot better if you used more self-discipline. Establish limits. Tonight: Do something special for another.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Someone might be frustrating or confusing, but you know you can deal with it. A friend helps you define your objectives. Creativity surges. Your will helps you get exactly what you want. Be especially affectionate with a friend or loved one. Tonight: Whatever puts a smile on your face.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ You might feel like the ringmaster in the circus, although you can't get anyone or anything clear or under control. So don't! Do your own thing, even if it might involve doing some work or lounging at home. Tonight: Play it low-key.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Join friends. A loved one needs to be more a part of your social life. Bring this person along. By continuing a conversation, you find out where another is coming from. Reach out for someone at a distance — meet halfway. Tonight: Celebrate the night.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ A must appearance! Consider a change of plans if you feel pressured financially. In fact, some Scorpios might want to work or put in overtime. Don't forget an important relative who needs your attention. You know you make a difference here. Tonight: Leader of the gang.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Your get-up-and-go could blow others away. Reach out for others at a distance, and catch up on news. You find that your caring also means a lot to someone close. You can loosen up someone who might be stiff or uptight. Express your caring. Tonight: How 'bout jazz or blues?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Deal with someone on a one-on-one level. Don't hold back any longer; express some of your frustration and perspective. Have every expectation that this person will understand. Don't let confusion over money dominate your thinking. Tonight: Opt for togetherness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ What you perceive as easy and logical just might not be for someone else. Take your time thinking through information about a loved one or friend. Much might be hitting quickly as a friend pressures you in one direction and a loved one in another. Tonight: Go along with plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Everyone needs a day off to daydream and relax. Get into a fun project or two as well. Don't hesitate to get a couple extra zzz's or ask a roommate to do something to make your day easier. Tonight: At a friend's for dinner.

GENERAL INFORMATION:

To ensure the integrity of our newspaper, for the benefit of our readers and advertisers, the Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right the revise, reclassify, edit or refuse any advertising. We also reserve the right to convert all advertising into digital and/or audiotext formats within our other products and services.

Please check your ad the first day it appears, and, if you find a mistake, please call our office at 682-6222 so we can correct the error immediately. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. If an error does occur, you can choose to rerun your ad once for free, or we'll gladly refund the cost of the portion of the ad affected by the error. If an ad is inadvertently omitted, we will assume liability up to the cost of the ad itself – consequently, we will publish your ad in our next available edition or refund the price you have paid.

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classifications require payment in advance. Credit applications are required for business accounts.

We welcome your suggestions or comments. Please call: Brandi Alexander, Telephone Sales Supervisor, 687-6813.

PLACING AN AD:

Call 682-6222, Monday through Friday, from 8a.m. – 6p.m.

A friendly Advertising Consultant will help you word and schedule your ad for best results.

HOW TO WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!

❶ Promote Your Merchandise - The more descriptive you are the more likely your merchandise will appeal to someone.

❷ Check The Market Value - The most common mistake that occurs is over or under pricing your goods.

❸ Always Include The Price - People are more likely to respond when they know the price range.

❹ Keyword Your Ad - Begin each ad with the name of the item, such as "Stove" or "Guitar" rather than "Kenmore" or "Gibson", "Ford 1997" instead of "1997 Ford", or by its key reference point, such as location or area in real estate ads.

Spontaneous adaptability:
2002 Chevrolet Avalanche Four Door Truck

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

For years I have been critical of General Motors – uninspired styling, a "me too" product line – until now. The world's largest manufacturing corporation is showing American consumers that the automaker can be creative with the introduction of the 2002 Chevrolet Avalanche.

Based on the automaker's Silverado pickup truck frame, the Avalanche is built in the automaker's Silao, Mexico, assembly plant available as a half-ton (1500 Series) model with a choice of two- or four-wheel drive with a full frame four-door cab that seats up to six adults.

Power is generated by a (LM7) Vortec 5300 5.4L V-8 engine and transferred to the road via a smooth shifting 4L60-E Hydra-Matic four-speed electronically controlled automatic overdrive transmission with tow/haul modes. No other engine or transmission choices are offered.

Billed as the market's first "Ultimate Utility Vehicle," the Avalanche is the only full-size truck on the market that can go from a full-size SUV to a full-size pickup with a protected eight-foot cargo box.

The Avalanche features aggressive new exterior styling and the breakthrough Convert-a-Cab system. At the heart of this system, which allows the truck to quickly and easily adapt to what customers need, is Avalanche's unique midgate system. When the split rear passenger seat is folded, the midgate can be folded down to allow longer and larger cargo. This allows the 5'3" standard length bed to convert to a full 8' 1" – long enough to carry the proverbial 4' by 8' sheet of plywood – with the lockable tailgate closed and cargo safely secured. This is just the start of its versatility.

In a cue borrowed from the 1968 Corvette sports car, Avalanche's rear window can be removed and stored on the midgate. Keeping the midgate upright with the window removed creates an open air feel without the inherent wind noise associated with a convertible.

In addition, the midgate can be lowered to create a larger open space. This allows the truck to accommodate taller cargo like a quad-wheel ATV or motorcycle. Securing big cargo like this is facilitated by the availability of eight multipurpose tie downs.

The three-piece cargo cover is an integral part of the Covert-a-Cab system. Each panel can be removed separately to maximize the versatility of the bed to haul tall items. They can also be interlocked to cover the entire bed and protect the contents below from the elements and be easily stored in the pickup box as well.

The bed and tailgate are made of a combination of steel, GM's new PRO-TEC composite and other materials. Exceptionally durable, the composite material will resist dings caused by sliding material and can be cleaned easily. The cargo box floor features a black, rubber mat to reduce cargo shifting and to protect the body.

The cargo box also features two Top Box Storage compartments on either side. Inside is a combined five cubic feet of watertight, lockable storage space for tools, sporting accessories or important valuables. Just like the cargo box, the compartments are lighted for quick access day or night.

On the road, the Avalanche delivers car-like handling and performance – limitless acceleration and smooth shifting. It seems like a person is driving a car with great outward visibility instead of a full-size truck. The amazing part of my ride was that the Avalanche I drove was a four-wheel drive model equipped with the $835 optional Off-Road package!

Inside the cabin, the driver has a commanding view of the road. Displays and controls are the same as in the Silverado pickup truck – analog speedometer, tach, odometer, fuel, water temp, oil pressure and a digital message center. Comfortable front bucket seats with armrests and a cavernous center console capable of swallowing almost anything make this cab a very friendly place for driver and occupants alike.

Three dash mounted power points facilitate the use of various electrical devices such as a cell phone and laptop computer. The rear seating area is very comfortable and roomy for three adults. These are only the highlights of this remarkable truck! Consumers will need to drive one themselves to fully appreciate all of the built-in charms and usefulness.

Driving Green:
2001 Toyota Prius Sedan

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

"Once upon a time, all across the world, engineers closed their eyes and imagined a car that would change everything. It would do less harm to the environment by significantly reducing noise and emissions, and would maximize fuel economy beyond that of most current vehicles. Yet, it would also be a practical, real-world car with four doors, a steering wheel, brake and accelerator pedals, and seating for five – a car people would trust and love to drive, one that felt like a car, not an experiment." – Toyota Prius brochure

Introducing the Toyota Prius – the world's first mass-produced four-door hybrid sedan available in the American marketplace. Based on the compact Echo sedan, Toyota is making the world a little greener by combining a 1.5L DOHC 16-valve VVT-i four-cylinder engine with a permanent magnet electric motor and a sealed nickel-metal hydride battery. Torque is transferred to the pavement by an electronically controlled continuously variable transmission (CVT).

The Prius has been engineered to include many small items designed to reduce its effect on the environment. Built in the automaker's Motomachi Plant in Toyota City, Japan, the Prius is offered in just one trim level. Certified as a SULEV (super ultra low emission vehicle) in California, the Prius is 75 percent cleaner than the ULEV standard and nearly 90 percent cleaner than LEV for smog forming exhaust gases. The Prius runs 90 percent cleaner than the current federally required average.

The Sierra Club, America's oldest and largest grassroots environmental organization honored the Toyota Prius with the "Sierra Club Award for Excellence in Environmental Engineering." This is the first year the organization has given out such an award, recognizing new products that provide a substantial contribution to improving the environment.

In a nutshell, the Toyota Hybrid System (THS) works like this: the electronic controls of the THS allow Prius to operate on either electricity or gasoline alone, or a combination of both. The ratio of power provided by each system is constantly controlled, depending on speed and load, to keep the vehicle in its most efficient operating mode.

Seamless and virtually unnoticed by the driver and passengers, a power-split device sends engine power directly to the front wheels and the electric generator feeding the electric motor and/or battery. This device uses a planetary gear connected to the motor, the generator and the engine to deliver seamless, efficient power to the wheels.

To further boost system efficiency, the hybrid sedan is fitted with a regenerative braking system. When the vehicle is coasting or the brakes are applied, the motor is turned into a generator, capturing kinetic energy that would normally be lost as heat, and transforming it into electricity to recharge the batteries.

Inside the cabin, Prius' high front and rear seating positions make for easy entry and exit, as well as offering excellent visibility. Digital read outs for speedometer, odometer, gear selection and fuel are centered high on the dashboard at the base of the windshield making it easier for the driver to change eye-focus from the road to the dashboard. A 5.8 inch wide touch-panel display monitor shows the condition and energy flow of the hybrid drive system.

Comfortable seating front and rear for four adults is combined with a good amount of standard equipment and creature comforts. A rear spoiler, air conditioning, power windows, power door locks with anti-lock out feature, power mirrors, tilt wheel, remote keyless entry, heavy duty rear window defroster and AM/FM /cassette stereo system are standard. The center console contains an armrest, storage bin, two cupholders for driver and front passenger and one cupholder for the rear passengers.
