International opposition to Iraq picking up strength

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press Writer

Young Kuwaiti men trying to flee their occupied homeland were seized today by Iraqi troops, refugees reported, and their sobbing wives and daughters were forced to cross into Saudi Arabia without them.

A top U.S. military official — who had been quoted as saying massive air strikes would be the only effective way of forcing Iraq out of Kuwait if war erupted — was relieved of his duties today, the Pentagon said.

A Pentagon spokesman, Lt. Col. Rick Oborn, said he could not comment on the reason for the dismissal of Gen. Mike Dugan, the Air Force chief of staff. But it came one day after his remarks, made while touring U.S. military installations in Saudi Arabia, appeared in The Washington Post and the Los Angeles Times.

In Iraq, state-run newspapers today heaped scorn on President Bush for his broadcast warning to the Iraqis that their president, Saddam Hussein, is leading them to war. One newspaper's headline read: "Shut up, Mr. Bush."

"Saddam Hussein tells you that this crisis is a struggle between Iraq and America. In fact, it is Iraq against the world," Bush said in his speech, aired Sunday on Iraqi television.

Standing in front of his Oval Office desk with the American flag behind him, Bush urged Iraq to withdraw its troops from Kuwait, which it overran on Aug. 2.

Iraqi authorities responded that Bush's statement was full of "lies and contradictions." They said the U.S. president aimed to be "dictator of the world."

Thousands of protesters gathered in the streets of Baghdad's capital after Bush's broadcast, chanting "Death to Bush! Death to America!"

International opposition to Iraq, however, appeared to pick up strength.

Britain said today it would expel the Iraqi military attaché and three aides from the embassy in London. Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd indicated the Home Office would be announcing further sanctions against Iraq later in the day.

Twelve member nations of the European Community, meeting today in Brussels, Belgium, are expected to consider new retaliatory measures against Iraq and more aid for countries hurt by the U.N.-ordered embargo on trade with that country.

Dutch Premier Ruud Lubbers said today he expected European nations to agree on toughening the economic embargo against Iraq within the next two days. But he said the Netherlands has no immediate plans to expel Iraqi diplomats in retaliation for Iraq's intrusion into diplomatic premises in Kuwait last week.

Iraqi authorities responded that Bush's statement was full of 'lies and contradictions.'

Dutch, French, Belgian and Canadian embassies or diplomatic residences were raided last week by Iraqi troops. The embassy raids were unanimously condemned Sunday by the U.N. Security Council.

France expelled 29 Iraqis in retaliation, and Italy announced it was ousting all officials at the Iraqi military attaché's office in Rome.

Also Sunday, U.N. diplomats began drafting a new resolution to close off Iraq's air routes and punish nations flouting the U.N.-ordered embargo on trade with Iraq, U.S. officials said.

An Egyptian military source said Egypt will send 250 soldiers to Saudi Arabia today and more will follow in a few days, joining the estimated 4,000 Egyptian troops already in the region. The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Egypt would also send Egyptian tanks, armored personnel carriers and air defense systems to Saudi Arabia by ship across the Red Sea.

Meanwhile, Japan's first mission of doctors, nurses and support staff was preparing today to leave for Saudi Arabia Tuesday to lay groundwork for a planned 100-member Japanese medical team, officials said. Japan has pledged a total of $4 billion to the U.S.-led multinational effort against Iraq, but recruitment of medical personnel has been slow.

Moscow announced it will restore diplomatic ties with Saudi Arabia, cut in 1938. The Soviets had been longtime allies of Iraq but cut off weapons sales and became cool to Iraq after Saddam seized Kuwait.

At the lone border crossing between Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, about 6,000 Kuwaitis streamed out of their homeland over the weekend after Iraqi troops suddenly and without explanation opened the crossing. It had been shut for a month.

But refugees arriving today said Iraqi troops manning the border crossing were seizing all Kuwaiti males between the ages of 17 and 36, apparently because they were of age to serve in the military. And all non-Kuwaitis, except for a few Western women married to Kuwaitis, were turned back by the Iraqis and told to leave Kuwait through Baghdad.

The refugees said food is becoming scarcer in their homeland, and Iraqi soldiers are trying to quell resistance by blowing up blocks of houses.

Their government-in-exile called the unannounced weekend exodus — the first allowed by Iraq in about a month — evidence that Saddam intends to depopulate Kuwait and move in his own people. (See related story, Page 3.)

There was concern that the Iraqis might be trying to infiltrate spies or terrorists into Saudi Arabia, where 100,000 U.S. troops have deployed since the invasion of Kuwait, leading a multinational force. Refugees without proper identity documents were being questioned carefully by Saudi authorities.

The refugees told tales of terror and anarchy at home, of dwindling food supplies and Iraqi troops blowing up the homes of suspected resistance fighters in Kuwait City.

In a move consolidating their control of Kuwait, Iraqi authorities announced today that they ordered the dissolution of Kuwait Airways, that country's flagship air carrier.

U.N. diplomats began drafting a new resolution to close off Iraq's air routes.

Bush's address to the Iraqi people, with an Arabic voice-over and captions provided by the State Department, was apparently broadcast in its entirety Sunday evening. It was the first direct message from Bush to the Iraqis.

In a commentary today headlined "Shut up, Mr. Bush," the Iraqi government-owned Al-Jumhuriya, or The Republic, declared, "America today is a bastion of oppression and we have this to say: 'Mr. Bush, we listened to your message, but please shut up.'"

The speech was followed immediately by a 25-minute response from an Iraqi TV announcer, who said a "thundering rage" is building against the United States in the Arab world, and a showdown in the Persian Gulf would end "in a catastrophe" for U.S. forces.

A few hundred men later took to the streets of Baghdad, the Iraqi capital. As they passed through residential neighborhoods, thousands of men, women and children joined them.

Raising clenched fists, the demonstrators denounced Bush. They also called President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia "traitors of the Arab world" for siding with the United States in the confrontation.

Bush: War decision in Saddam's hands

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, making his case directly to the Iraqi people, says the only way for Iraq to avoid a war it cannot win is to end its occupation of Kuwait.

"That decision is in the hands of Saddam Hussein," Bush said in a taped address broadcast over Iraqi television Sunday.

Bush today was meeting with his Cabinet to discuss the Persian Gulf crisis and hear firsthand from Secretary of State James A. Baker III about the $14 billion pledged by America's allies for the gulf effort.

Baker returned early Sunday from an 11-day mission to Europe and the Middle East during which he solicited help for the costly stand in the Saudi desert.

Bush has accused Saddam before of lying about his intentions. But the Iraqi president made good on a promise to let his people hear Bush's appeal, taped last Wednesday.

Iraqi television broadcast the tape unedited Sunday evening in Baghdad, including the Arabic voice-over translation and captions provided by the State Department.

Saddam answered Bush's words with ridicule, disdain and defiance. Speaking through a spokesman, the Iraqi leader said Bush's address was "full of lies and contradictions."

Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, said Sunday that the $14 billion in pledges that Baker collected from Saudi Arabia, West Germany, the United Arab Emirates and other allies were "a very heartwarming example of united action against aggression."

"What we have here is the international community rising up against an outrageous act of aggression," Scowcroft said on CBS-TV's Face the Nation.

Bush, in his message, emphasized that Iraq "stands isolated and alone" against worldwide condemnation.

"Saddam Hussein tells you that this crisis is a struggle between Iraq and America. In fact, it is Iraq against the world," said Bush, standing in the Oval Office before his desk and an American flag.

"Iraq finds itself on the brink of war," Bush warned.

"Let me say clearly, there is no way Iraq can win. Ultimately, Iraq must withdraw from Kuwait," Bush said.

"War is not inevitable. It is still possible to bring this crisis to a peaceful end," he said.

But "that decision is in the hands of Saddam Hussein."

Pulling a paper from his pocket, he quoted a Saddam speech on Nov. 28, 1988, saying no Arab country has the right to occupy another Arab country, and if Iraq ever did that, "the Arabs would be right to deploy their armies to check it."

Joyce Willingham enjoys laughing with a friend on the telephone. Prior to a lung transplant this summer, she was barely able to talk because of shortness of breath, caused by emphysema.

Pampa woman enjoying new health after lung transplant for emphysema

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

A Pampa woman who recently got a new lease on life says the gift of each new breath is one of the most underrated ever given to mankind.

Joyce Willingham of 2312 Dogwood faced a life-and-death situation for five years as emphysema stole her ability to breathe and made her a virtual captive in her own home.

In April, Willingham moved to San Antonio with her two adult daughters and a small arsenal of oxygen tanks to await a new lung.

Without it, doctors did not know how much longer she would live.

Two months later, on June 6, Willingham learned her deepest desire was about to be granted.

Willingham received a telephone call at her Alamo City apartment on a Wednesday morning telling her a donor had been located in Florida and the lung was on its way to Texas.

One person's generosity in filling out an organ donor card would quiet death's knock at Willingham's door.

"We had had a false alarm the week before the actual surgery," Willingham said. "They called and said they had a donor and they got me ready. It was around midnight. By 10 o'clock the next morning, they said something had gone wrong and they decided not to use it."

"I was disappointed, of course. And we had called all the family and half of them were on the way to San Antonio."

Willingham now says she is glad her doctors refrained from implanting the questionable lung. She said the lung she was given has provided no trouble at all.

"We were ready to just wait for something better," she said. "A week later they called and said they have a perfect match. There has been no rejection, which is one of the main problems you can have."

After weeks of recuperation in San Antonio and Pampa, Willingham is reminded daily how good life is without emphysema.

"It has been wonderful not having to use the oxygen," Willingham said. "You knew you had to have it, but it got so tiring having the tubes up your nose all the time and being confined to home."

Now that she is recuperated, Willingham said no task seems too small to be enjoyed. Even going to the grocery store is a pleasure for this woman who once had to lug around huge oxygen tanks and faced long bouts with pneumonia and lengthy hospital stays.

"I can now do the things a normal person does everyday. I even enjoy doing housework," she laughed. "Just getting up in the morning and taking a walk, or walking with my husband at night, is just really amazing, because it is all so good."

Willingham said, "The day after I got home, I went up to Coronado Hospital to visit with all the nurses who had taken care of me for so long. They couldn't believe how well I looked. My doctor here tested my lung and he was rather amazed, too."

"When you get up and realize you are healthy, it makes you do a lot of thinking about life," Willingham added. "There is not a day that goes by that I don't remember what it was like before. Seeing people who have emphysema, I have so much sympathy for them. It is a devastating thing to see people not able to breathe."

Willingham said fund-raisers, letters and visits by friends and acquaintances from Pampa kept her spirits high while she waited for her new lung.

Those fund-raisers included a jam session at the City Limits Club by most of the rock'n'roll and country bands in Pampa, with proceeds helping to defray Willingham's immense hospital bill.

Today Joyce Willingham doesn't want to talk about medical bills, though. She said she realizes you cannot put a price tag on life and she will not try.

"My family has been so great. To know I have such a wonderful family, that has been one of the best things through all of this," Willingham said. "You come to appreciate how special these people are during a time like this."

Clean Pampa joins in Great Texas Cleanup

Clean Pampa Inc. members and other Pampa organizations, civic clubs, churches and businesses that have adopted sections of highway rights-of-way participated in the Great Texas Cleanup-Greenup project Saturday.

Clean Pampa officials said 11 local units have adopted sections of highways leading into Pampa under the state's Adopt-A-Highway program, sponsored by the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

The statewide cleanup is held twice yearly, once in spring during the national Great American Trash-Off and again in late summer, under the state's Great Texas Cleanup-Greenup project, to encourage the adopting units to join together in picking up the trash and litter along the state's highways and roads.

Clean Pampa, which helps to oversee the local program with highway officials, sent 13 members out Saturday morning to participate in the program, with 40 bags of trash collected during the project. Other units also participated, but reports have not been collected yet.

No totals have been reported from the state office yet, but last March participants collected 41,000 bags of trash and litter from the state's roadways during the spring Great American Trash-Off, with more than 21,000 people participating in the statewide effort. Some 2,746 miles were cleaned up on March 31.

The fall project this year benefited from contributions from Anheuser-Busch Inc., which donated proceeds from sales of beverages and Texas Bud promotional items in the form of trash bags, wildflower seeds and special gifts for volunteers.

Units receiving the wildflower seeds are encouraged to plant them along their sections of adopted roadways to provide bursts of color from the wildflowers next spring.

The statewide cleanup effort is a part of the Highway Department's popular "Don't Mess With Texas" anti-litter project, which encourages the picking up litter and trash along Texas roadways and beaches and informs the public about the need to keep Texas beautiful.

'Tracey Ullman Show' captures 6 Emmys

By DEBORAH HASTINGS
AP Television Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — L.A. Law won the Emmy for best drama series for the third time in four years, Murphy Brown was named best comedy and the acclaimed Twin Peaks, nominated 14 times, managed only two technical trophies.

Candice Bergen of CBS' Murphy Brown won best actress as the acid-tongued newswoman for a second consecutive year. And Ted Danson, the skirt-chasing bartender Sam Malone on Cheers, finally won as best comedy series actor Sunday night after being nominated eight times — every year the show has been on the air.

In a big signoff for The Tracey Ullman Show, the British comedian's program grabbed the most awards at the 42nd annual Emmys with six. Ullman, who pulled the plug on the little watched show last spring, won Fox Broadcasting Co. its first Emmys last year.

"Oh, blimey, this brings it all full circle," said Ullman, honored with a pair of Emmys in the music-variety category for her work as star and a writer. "I miss the show a whole lot."

Peter Falk's bumbling but brilliant Columbo earned him the dramatic actor award. Patricia Wettig, who plays a cancer-stricken young mother on ABC's thirtysomething, won the best dramatic actress trophy.

"I would really like to thank all the women with cancer who have shared their stories with me so wholeheartedly," a teary Wettig said. "I shared their insights and their fears. I truly salute their courage."

Despite 14 nominations, ABC's Twin Peaks, the strange new series about murder in a Northwest logging town, captured only two technical trophies — for editing and costuming. Both were given in a non-televized ceremony Saturday.

Instead, NBC's L.A. Law went home with the best drama Emmy — an honor it also received in 1987 and 1989 — won a writing award and also a best supporting actor Emmy for Jimmy Smits, who plays lawyer Victor Sifuentes.

In a reversal of the order last year, ABC finished first with 22 awards, NBC won 18 and CBS, which topped the Big Three networks with 27 Emmys in 1989, managed only 14 this year. Fox won nine Emmys, the most in its four-year history. Cable's Home Box Office collected eight.

Best miniseries went to NBC's Drug Wars: The Camarena Story, an account of the torture-slashing of U.S. drug agent Enrique Camarena. "This is a victory for him, too," said executive producer Michael Mann.

Kenneth Ivory Wayans, whose irreverent Fox comedy sketch series In Living Color won the variety, music or comedy category, welled up. "Oh, forget it," said the show's executive producer and host. "This is for you, Mom."

Scott Winant of thirtysomething, who tied with Thomas Carter of Equal Justice for best drama series director, got choked up, too. "I'm afraid I'm not really going to be able to express myself," he said.

Danson's award was presented by the animated family from Fox's The Simpsons. Obnoxious 10-year-old son Bart Simpson shredded the envelope containing Danson's name and pronounced himself the winner.

Asked how it felt to receive his trophy from cartoon characters, Danson replied, "I think it is appropriate after nine years. I feel a little weird. I felt like if it didn't happen this year it would be more embarrassing than ever before."

Joseph Sargent was named best director in a miniseries or special for his work on CBS' Caroline. Vincent Gardenia won for supporting actor in a miniseries or special, given for HBO's Age-Old Friends.

Eva Marie Saint took the trophy for supporting actress in a miniseries or special, co-starring in NBC's People Like Us.

A special recognition was given to puppeteer Jim Henson, who died earlier this year. To the strains of Kermit the Frog's song "The Rainbow Connection," Bergen, daughter of puppeteer Edgar Bergen, movingly recounted Henson's career.

Alex Rocco won outstanding supporting actor in a comedy for his portrayal of sleazy talent agent Al Floss in The Famous Teddy Z, which was canceled this year. The supporting actress award went to Bebe Neuwirth, the cold-as-ice psychoanalyst on Cheers.

ABC's The Wonder Years collected trophies for best directing (Michael Dinner) and writing (Bob Brush) in a comedy series.

Bergen, Jay Leno and Jane Pauley were the program's hosts.

During Saturday's technical awards, Fox's The Simpsons was selected top animated program. Hume Cronyn, who starred in HBO's Age-Old Friends, took the prize for best actor in a miniseries or special. Barbara Hershey, who played the lead in CBS' A Killing in a Small Town, won for best actress in a miniseries or special.

Man sought in shooting of DPS trooper

MAGNOLIA, Texas (AP) — An off-duty Texas Department of Public Safety trooper who stopped for what he thought was a traffic accident was shot to death early today, authorities said.

Jeffrey Phebus, 23, had been out of town for the weekend and was returning home when he came upon a man and a woman in two cars who were involved in some sort of domestic altercation, said Mike Cox, a Department of Public Safety spokesman.

The two cars were bumping into each other on Farm Road 1774 in southwestern Montgomery County, Cox said. The cars stopped and the trooper, who graduated from the DPS Academy last Feb. 16, was shot in the head by the man, Cox said.

Officers obtained a capital murder arrest warrant from Montgomery County for a 43-year-old Spring man, Richard Leland Jordan. Jordan was last seen driving away from the shooting scene in a black 1976 Chevrolet Caprice Classic.

Jordan's wife, whose name was into immediately available, stayed behind and provided investigating officers with information.

"Jordan and his wife were having some kind of domestic dispute that involved him knocking her car in the roadway," Cox said. "One car went into a ditch. He (Phebus) stopped."

The shooting occurred about 1:15 a.m.

Cox said Jordan was seen about three hours later in Houston outside the Cameron Iron Works. He then was driving a Ford pickup truck and was believed to be headed toward Sealy, where he works at the Cameron Valve Plant. A state police helicopter was flying over Interstate 10 west toward Sealy, about 50 miles west of Houston, Cox said.

He said Jordan was believed to be armed with a pistol of an unknown caliber.

It was not immediately known if Jordan had a criminal record.

Texas Rangers and other troopers were still at the shooting scene conducting an investigation several hours after the shooting, Cox said. Other officers were searching for the man.

The shooting scene was south of Hazy Hollow, between Magnolia and Pinehurst, Cox said.

One teen still hospitalized from accident

One teen-ager remained in Coronado Hospital today as the result of a one-vehicle accident on Saturday evening.

The girl who remains in the hospital is 15 years old and was reportedly in the back seat of the 1984 Ford Bronco.

Names of the four juveniles in the accident were not released by officials.

The accident occurred on an unnamed dirt county road, 2.9 miles west of Pampa and about a mile south of Texas 152, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Kuwaitis stream across open border with grim tales of Iraqi actions

By NEIL MacFARQUHAR
Associated Press Writer

KHAFJI, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Kuwaitis fleeing through a suddenly opened border crossing say food is becoming scarcer in their homeland and Iraqi soldiers are trying to quell resistance by blowing up blocks of houses.

Their government-in-exile called the unannounced weekend exodus of several thousand Kuwaitis — the first allowed by Iraq in about a month — evidence that Iraq's Saddam Hussein intends to depopulate Kuwait and move in his own people.

One refugee, the 45-year-old owner of an investment company, said "people are not obeying them (the Iraqis) so they want to get rid of us."

Iraqi soldiers confiscated all identity documents, including car registrations, from those leaving the oil-rich emirate, refugees said. They said the Iraqis apparently wanted to make it difficult for anyone to return.

No precise tally was available on the number of refugees who had crossed into Saudi Arabia at Khafji since word spread in Kuwait on Friday that Iraq was lifting restrictions on departure through the border post, the only official crossing between the countries.

In addition to the several thousand Kuwaitis who apparently made the journey, refugees included a Yugoslav woman married to a Kuwaiti and about 20 Asians, Saudi officials said.

They said they were too overwhelmed with paperwork to give exact figures.

The Iraqis had not announced the border opening. The refugees learned of it by word of mouth and could only speculate on the reasoning behind it.

The Kuwaiti Cabinet discussed the development in an emergency meeting Sunday in the southwestern resort of Taif, where the government-in-exile has established its headquarters.

Afterward, it issued a statement saying the border opening reflected a new Iraqi policy of "getting the Kuwaitis out after stripping them of their identity papers, and bringing in Iraqis to settle in Kuwait."

Kuwaiti leaders have previously accused Saddam of intending to eventually repopulate Kuwait with Iraqis.

On Sunday, Mercedes, Chevrolet Suburban jeeps and scores of other expensive cars stretched 500 yards from the checkpoint as Saudi border police-checked vehicles and demanded some identification.

"There's just too many of them to handle. It's a very slow procedure getting them through because they have no documents," said a Western diplomat stationed at the border to monitor the traffic.

A committee of Kuwaitis at the border screened refugees, asking questions about such things as membership in local organizations. Saudi officials have expressed concern the Iraqis opened the border to sneak in spies and terrorists.

Kuwaitis said the Iraqis have blown up or burned up to 20 houses at a time in neighborhoods where Iraqi soldiers were killed by resistance fighters.

The Iraqis also were sealing off whole neighborhoods to conduct house-to-house searches, looking for resistance material and the several hundred Westerners still reported in hiding, the refugees said.

They said the sound of gunfire could be heard during the curfew hours of 11 p.m. to 7 a.m.

Saddam's troops have plundered most public property — carting off everything from hospital machinery to street lights — but have generally stayed out of Kuwaiti homes.

"Now they want to make a super robbery in Kuwait — take everything," said 35-year-old Salam Matouk, a refugee.

An estimated 300,000 of Kuwait's native population of 570,000 have fled since Iraq invaded on Aug. 2. Most are in Saudi Arabia, where the government pays for their housing and food.

Only Kuwaitis working in essential services like electricity and water plants are at their jobs, refugees reported.

Kuwait's police officers have ignored an order to return to work, and no one has registered for the announced Oct. 1 opening of schools.

Stocks of food are getting low and cash short, the refugees said.

But staples are still available, and small quantities of vegetables are brought in by Palestinian traders allowed to go to Iraq's southern port city of Basra, they said.

O say can you see ...

Third-grade students of Pam Zemanek's class at Travis Elementary School raise the flag during a ceremony at the school Friday afternoon in honor of the anniversary of the writing of "The Star-Spangled Banner," the national anthem. At the far right, flag-bearers are Noel Schulz, with the Travis School flag; Shane Flynn, with the American flag; and Russell Thorum, with the Texas flag. The students celebrated the 176th anniversary with a "Red, White and Blue Extravaganza." Activities included sampling a Star-Spangled Salad, collaborative drawings to patriotic music, reading of the Preamble to the U.S. Constitution by new school principal Mike Sherrer and concluding with the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" and the presentation of colors. Other classes participating in the activities were the third-grade classes of Mrs. Judy Forister and Mrs. Terri Wells.

Green's trial moves into penalty phase

AUSTIN (AP) — A defense attorney said he thinks Ricky Lee Green, convicted of capital murder in the 1986 sexual mutilation death of a TV advertising salesman, has a good chance of avoiding the death penalty.

"This trial isn't over yet. There is much left to be said," David Bays told reporters after a jury returned with its guilty verdict late Friday.

The jury was told to return to the court at 9 a.m. today for the punishment phase. The panel was expected to be told for the first time about three other sexual mutilation deaths that Green has been accused of and has confessed to.

Green's trial in the Dec. 27, 1986, slaying of Steven Fefferman of Fort Worth was moved to Austin because of extensive pretrial news coverage.

Prosecutors seeking the death penalty are allowed to reveal pending charges or arrests against the defendant. Green, 29, faces a life sentence or death by injection.

He also faces trial in the April 1985 death of Jeff Davis, 16, of Lake Worth, who was castrated and stabbed.

In Wise County, Green faces two charges of capital murder. Betty Jo Monroe, a topless dancer from Amarillo, was stabbed and beaten in the head with a hammer in October 1985 at the mobile home in Boyd where Green lived with his wife, Sharon.

Sandra Lorraine Bailey of Fort Worth died in November 1985 from stab wounds and blows to the head that she received in the trial news coverage.

Ms. Green, 30, was convicted of murder in the deaths of the women and is serving two probated 40-year sentences for her role in the slayings.

The defense is expected to portray Green as a victim of a traumatic life and say he was abused by his father.

Among defense witnesses subpoenaed to testify in the punishment phase are Perry Green, an older brother who is serving a 30-year prison term for delivering drugs; Tim Green, a younger brother who is in jail on charges he tried to fatally stab a pregnant teen-ager; and Theresa Green, a sister who has said under oath that their father, Bill Green, sexually abused her and physically abused her brothers.

FBI recovers stolen Army machine guns

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal authorities recovered four Army machine guns stolen from an arms shipment headed for the Persian Gulf and offered for sale on Houston streets, the FBI said.

The M-60 machine guns recovered over the weekend in an undercover operation were stolen Sept. 7 from the Port of Houston, said FBI Special Agent Charles B. Kearney Jr. Investigators are trying to determine if other weapons were taken.

Three men were arrested in the plot and face arraignment today on firearms laws violations and charges of stealing government property.

"The weapons were part of a shipment that was destined for Saudi Arabia," Kearney said. "The ship has either arrived or is still in transit."

Without elaborating, Kearney said the crime was related to youth street gang activity in Houston.

The investigation was conducted by the FBI in conjunction with Army investigators. Kearney said investigators are still trying to determine if other weapons or military equipment were stolen with the machine guns.

"We are trying to trace the shipment in order to determine if we have recovered them all," he said.

The investigation started when federal agents received a tip that stolen military weapons were available for sale.

Kearney said the FBI conducted an undercover buy operation during the investigation.

The three men were arrested late Friday and early Saturday. David

Green, 27, was arrested at a Houston restaurant after he allegedly tried to sell one of the machine guns to an undercover agent, Kearney said. He said John Anthony Muniz, 20, and Miguel Rojo, 18, were arrested at their homes.

The machine guns were part of a shipment of weapons and supplies that originated in Fort Sill, Okla.

The M-60 is a general purpose machine gun that was widely used by U.S. forces during the Vietnam war. It has been in production since 1959 and fires 7.62 mm ammunition, which is fed by a belt and fires at a rate of 750 rounds per minute.

The machine gun, which weighs 23 pounds unloaded, can be carried and fired by one soldier. It is also mounted on helicopters, tanks and other military vehicles.

Shuttle's fourth countdown heads into final hours

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA headed into the final hours of Columbia's fourth countdown today, anxious to launch the first shuttle in nearly five months but insisting it will not do so at the expense of safety.

The shuttle was to lift off at 12:28 a.m. CDT Tuesday with seven astronauts and the $150 million Astro observatory — provided the spacecraft got through fueling today without springing hydrogen leaks. Previous countdowns never got past fueling.

"We will not launch it until it's right," test director Mike Leinbach said Sunday. "We will not commit human life to that. It has to be perfect before we get off the ground."

Hydrogen is highly combustible, and a leak during liftoff could cause an explosion.

NASA has two days — Tuesday and Wednesday — to launch Columbia. After that, the agency will shift all its attention to Discovery's top-priority flight in October and put off Columbia's mission for later in the year.

NASA has been trying since May to send Columbia up. Two launch attempts, one as recently as 1 1/2 weeks ago, were called off because of leaking hydrogen.

Another was halted because of problems with one of the four telescopes aboard the shuttle.

Last week, workers replaced two leaky components, and officials said the repairs make them more confident than they have been in quite a while.

NASA has not launched a shuttle since Discovery's flight with the Hubble Space Telescope in April, the longest gap between missions since flights resumed after the Challenger disaster.

The discovery of a focusing flaw in Hubble and the leaks in Columbia and then in space shuttle Atlantis have brought criticism from Congress and the public down on NASA.

For NASA's 82 astronauts, it has been a trying few months.

"Nobody likes to work for an agency that you give your heart for and then wake up with all this negative publicity," said Dick Richards, 44, commander of Discovery's upcoming mission.

At the same time, astronauts said, there have been no demands from the astronaut corps that safety be damned.

Hazardous trash stored in boat stalls

SOUTHLAKE, Texas (AP) — A former ball-bearing salesman says he found it easy to obtain a license for disposing hazardous waste, but more difficult to find places to store the refuse.

Richard Kirkham said he stored medical waste, human tissue and dangerous solvents at a Lake Grapevine boat marina and near a grocery store because he could not afford to dispose of the waste properly, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Sunday.

A simple registration form made Kirkham one of the state's 2,034 hazardous-waste transporters in 1986, but his company went unwatched by state and federal regulators, Kirkham said.

Kirkham told the Star-Telegram it was never his intent to run his business illegally. He blamed a regulatory system for failing to discover the shortcomings in his business.

He was exempt from stringent rules imposed on licensed disposal sites that would have guaranteed that he had the money to destroy what he collected. Instead, he started his own company, Hazardous Waste Management, Inc., with a pickup and four weeks of training at Texas A&M University.

His struggling operation was derailed when the sand-hauling truck he used to subsidize the fledgling waste-hauling business was wrecked, he said. He used the money paid by waste generators to repair the sand truck instead of properly disposing of the waste.

Hazardous Waste Management Inc. stored 95 barrels of hazardous solvents, fuels and toxic chemicals at Scott's Marina No. 2, authorities said.

Also, 75 drums of chemical solvents and several cartons filled with used syringes, soiled dressings, surgical gloves and human tissue were found at Kirkham's office and at a warehouse near a Fort Worth grocery store.

Authorities said they caught Kirkham removing water-soaked cartons of medical debris from shoreline boat stalls last November, after flood waters receded from the lake.

The discovery triggered a three-state criminal investigation of Kirkham's one-truck operation, and a water treatment plant was shut down for two days while Dallas water utilities officials determined there was no evidence of contamination from the wastes.

The Star-Telegram reported that Kirkham was fined $260. It has cost $125,000 so far to clean up the boxes and barrels he stashed at the marina, the newspaper said.

No evidence was found that Kirkham's illegal inventory polluted the environment, federal officials said.

Kirkham said that when he could no longer afford to pay disposal fees, he forged the records to convince his customers that their waste was reaching its destination.

"It was stupid, OK?" Kirkham told the Star-Telegram. "But we did it. And the reason that we did it is that hope springs eternal in the breast of man ... We kept thinking things would get better."

In June, the Environmental Protection Agency notified 214 Texas companies and medical facilities that they were potentially liable for Kirkham's actions. The agency billed each of Kirkham's clients the full cost of storing and disposing of the waste found at the boat dock.

Among those notified were Texas A&M University, Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas, Cook-Fort Worth Children's Medical Center, MedStar, LTV Energy Products, the U.S. Navy, the Army Corps of Engineers, the Waco Tribune-Herald, Kenneth Copeland Ministries and the First Baptist Church of Dallas.

Sixty-seven of the 214 parties billed by the EPA have rejected the EPA's suggestion that they assume control and all costs of disposing of the waste. The EPA is awaiting a final cleanup cost estimate before taking further action.

Officials with the U.S. attorney's office in Fort Worth confirmed in July they are continuing a criminal investigation of Kirkham and Waste Management that was launched by the EPA in January.

The probe has spread to Oklahoma and Louisiana, where records at licensed disposal sites conflict with manifests Kirkham supplied to customers showing the waste had been delivered, investigators told the Star-Telegram.

Walesa to run for president of Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity chairman Lech Walesa announced today that he will run for president of Poland.

"Today I made up my mind. I am putting forward for society's approval my readiness to be a candidate for the post of president of the Polish Republic in popular elections," Walesa said in a statement issued from Solidarity headquarters in Gdansk.

"For me, it is a fulfillment of the pledge I made in August 1980," the Solidarity chairman said, when he was catapulted to fame by a leading role in strikes that led to the formation of the East bloc's first independent labor federation.

Post-Communist Poland's first fully democratic presidential and parliamentary elections are expected as early as this fall and no later than the spring.

Walesa has suggested for nearly a year that he might run for president to speed political and economic reforms. In June, he said, "I do not want to be president: I will have to be president."

Walesa has split with Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, the former close adviser he picked to be the East bloc's first non-Communist government leader.

Walesa has charged that too many supporters of the old regime remain in key government and state industry posts and that the government is losing touch with the problems of Poland.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the covenanted commandment.

No bank crisis? Don't bank on it

The savings and loan crisis may soon be followed by a lesser, but still substantial, bank crisis. New England, which has been in a recession for about a year, is suffering an increased number of bank failures. The national average of troubled bank loans is 2.49 percent of assets, but New England's average is 4.3 percent. Said securities analyst Gerard S. Cassidy: "There is clearly the potential for many more bank failures in New England over the next 12 to 18 months."

New England's difficulties could foreshadow those of banks across America, as the recession spreads south and west, and as higher oil prices drown the economy. Texas, again, is already leading the nation in the number of failed banks this year to date. The cost, as in the S&L crisis, could amount to hundreds of billions of taxpayers' dollars. This is precisely the time to consider private alternatives to taxpayer-backed insurance for both banks and S&Ls.

One of the best plans has been proposed in a study by Peter J. Wallison, a specialist in corporate and banking law and former general counsel for the U.S. Treasury Department. Back from the Brink: A Practical Plan for Privatizing Deposit Insurance and Strengthening Our Banks and Thrifts, is published by the American Enterprise Institute. He notes that "error, incompetence, and fraud" played a big part in the S&L fiasco. But "the costly denouement of the S&L deposit insurance system was the virtually inevitable result of a poorly conceived deposit insurance system."

Moreover, "The central cause of the S&L insurance system's collapse was its vain effort to substitute government regulation and supervision for the disciplines of the market... S&Ls operated with high leverage simply because deposit insurance enabled them to borrow practically unlimited amounts from the public."

However, Wallison cautions that the solution is not to increase the risk of depositors by, for example, eliminating insurance. Instead, the solution is to privatize bank and S&L insurance. In the place of incompetent government regulation relying on taxpayer-funded bailouts, he proposes a Supplemental Deposit Protection System (SDP).

One of the big problems with the government program is that it pretty much treats all banks alike. Any attempt to charge riskier banks more for government insurance induces the banks' lobbyists to work overtime on Capitol Hill. The result: a system rigged by politics, with taxpayers picking up the tab. In contrast, SDP would be "risk-based," charging more to banks with riskier portfolios.

Wallison concludes, "Fundamentally, by relying on private contractual arrangements and the proper restructuring of incentives, the SDP system eliminates the market distortions caused by federal deposit insurance and the government regulation it requires."

Berry's World

"Baghdad, Helsinki — hey, WHO CARES about domestic problems?!"

Let's throw those bums out

It's time to throw the bums out!

While members of Congress and the Bush administration whine about the alleged "budget deficit crisis," and prepare to raise our taxes, the mad federal spending spree continues.

In the four weeks after George Bush abandoned his "no new taxes" pledge, Congress passed eight appropriations bills that increased spending over current levels by nearly 12 percent, more than twice the annual inflation rate.

Is your money being well spent? Consider the following pork-barrel spending projects:

- $18 million to study methane emissions from cows;
- $1.3 million to study Zebra mussels;
- $2.8 million for a fish farm in Stuttgart, Ark.;
- $6.1 million to search for extraterrestrial life;
- $41.7 billion for space station research;
- $1 million for a study on "Cigarette and Little Cigar Safety";
- $168 million for the Army Corps of Engineers to study rivers in Arkansas, Kentucky, Hawaii and other states; and
- $325 million for "magnetic fusion research" whatever that is.

Congress also has decided to expand existing entitlement programs. The House Agriculture committee has approved a $7.5-billion increase in the Food Stamp and nutrition programs, and the farm subsidy bill now stands at an all-time record $54 billion.

Not to be outdone, the House Ways and Means Committee has approved a new foster care program which will cost taxpayers more than $4 billion over the next five years.

Further, nearly every attempt to cut spending has been shot down in flames. One congressional wit, Republican Bob Walker of Pennsylvania, proposed a bill to cut the budget by .000000002 percent — $19.90 — but even this minuscule effort toward thrift was soundly rejected by congressional wastrels.

About the only spending Congress is willing to reduce is defense. Scratch the B-2. Cancel plans for a 600-ship Navy. Call the boys home from Europe. But don't — under any circumstances — close a single U.S. base. After all, bases mean jobs, and jobs mean votes.

Make no mistake. These "budget busters" are nothing less than attempts to buy your votes. Members of Congress are convinced that if they can bring enough pork-barrel projects into their home districts, the citizens will continue to send them back to Washington. So far, they've been right.

The "No New Taxes" stance of Presidents Reagan and Bush was the only form of fiscal discipline Congress understood. As long as the White House stood fast and said, "make my day," increases in spending were held to reasonable (by Washington standards) levels. But now that George Bush has written Congress a blank check, there's nothing holding them back.

It's high time for Americans to take a stand, and hold members of Congress' feet to the fire. They must be held accountable for their thoughtless and inexcusable squandering of our money. If members of Congress can't bring the deficit under control without raising taxes, they deserve to be kicked out.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, September 17th, the 260th day of 1990. There are 105 days left in the year.

On September 17th, 1787, the Constitution of the United States was completed and signed by a majority of delegates attending the constitutional convention in Philadelphia.

On this date:

In 1862, Union forces hurled back a Confederate invasion of Maryland in the Civil War Battle of Antietam.

In 1920, the American Professional Football Association, a precursor of the N.F.L., was formed in Canton, Ohio.

In 1939, the Soviet Union invaded Poland, more than two weeks after Nazi Germany launched its pre-emptive assault.

In 1939, the Harry James Orchestra and featured soloist Frank Sinatra recorded "All or Nothing at All" for Columbia Records.

In 1947, James V. Forrestal was sworn in as the first U.S. Secretary of Defense.

In 1948, the United Nations mediator for Palestine, Count Folke Bernadotte, was assassinated in Jerusalem by Jewish extremists.

In 1949, more than 130 people, most of them U.S. citizens, died when fire gutted the Canadian passenger steamer "Noronic" at a pier in Toronto.

In 1962, U.S. space officials announced the selection of nine new astronauts, including Neil A. Armstrong, who would become the first man to step onto the moon.

Pimples before the prom ...

You always got pimples before the prom. There was something about wanting so much to look your best that left you looking your worst.

This manifestation of anxiety was likely your first conscious experience with the effect of "mind over matter."

And as surely as fears, depression and anxiety can trigger negative physiological response, positive emotion can mobilize your body's immune system — assisting in the prevention and cure of disease.

Norman Cousins is pioneering a new medical discipline: psychoneuroimmunology.

Readers of his books Anatomy of an Illness and The Healing Heart are aware that Cousins "laughed himself well" from two critical illnesses.

For the last 10 years he has been on staff at the UCLA School of Medicine — working with doctors and medical students, with hospitals and panicky cancer patients — refining this healing process.

Cousins' new book is called Head First — The Biology of Hope.

"In view of what is now known about the role of endorphins, not only as a painkiller but as a stimulant to the immune system, the biological value of laughter takes on scientific validity."

Cousins is careful in this new volume to qualify his prescription.

While it is true that "a happy heart doeth good like a medicine," Cousins prescribes his therapy only in conjunction with whatever orthodox medical treatment is appropriate.

Yet, carefully controlled experiments conducted by Cousins and his associates demonstrate that you — just by controlling your mind set — can alter your temperature, your blood pressure and your blood chemistry in a matter of minutes!

Similarly, a doctor can create either positive or negative expectations with a single word — expectations that are self-fulfilling.

Cousins faults the contemporary threat of malpractice lawsuits that disciplines the doctor to tell his patient "the worst" when he should instead be encouraging the mobilization of the patient's positive — potentially healing — outlook.

This new book includes scores of case histories of patients whose positive mental attitude resulted in cures that medical science has been willing to call only "remission."

There is now evidence that cancer patients — liberated from depression — can actually activate the anti-cancer capability of the immune system.

"The human body," contends Cousins, "is far more robust than people have been led to believe."

"A strong will to live, along with other positive emotions — faith, love, purpose, determination, humor — boosts disease-fighting immune cells."

The physician's role in attending to the psychological needs of patients has been neglected both in his training and his practice.

I recommend Head First. I finished the book convinced we are all moving along the path of our expectations, for better or worse.

Why oil really is worth fighting for

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

In its issue dated Aug. 20, The New Yorker magazine, which has always been a sort of journalistic peacenik, goes to work on President Bush's deployment of U.S. forces in the Middle East. Deploing the near-universal support for Mr. Bush's action, the magazine's editorial concludes as follows:

"The American-Iraqi War, if there is to be such a thing, is not about freedom, or, really, about deterring aggression. This war is a war for oil. American soldiers are in Saudi Arabia because we are a society dependent on Arab oil. The still, small voice suggests that we stop and think."

"By all means, let us stop and think. The New Yorker's editorial writer clearly regards oil as a grubby and highly unsatisfactory reason for going to war. He would be happier, at least relatively, if this country were to go to war for "freedom," or to "deter aggression" — nice, high-sounding objectives, arguably worth somebody (else) dying for. But oil?

In response, let us begin by noting that, at this writing, America is not, in fact, at war. On the contrary, the huge American deployment in Saudi Arabia seems to have induced some salutary second thoughts in Saddam Hussein.

But in any case, exactly what is it that usually prompts nations to go to war? A lot of Americans still believe the old propaganda myth that Japan plunged into World War II for the sheer sake of aggrandizement. But the real reason, oddly enough, was that old devil: oil.

In 1941, the Japanese economy was heavily dependent (as it still is) on imported oil — much of it, in those days, from the Dutch-controlled oil-fields of Indonesia. In July 1941, the United States, Britain and the Netherlands, as a punishment for Japan's aggressions on the Asian mainland, imposed a total embargo on shipments of oil to Japan.

As Winston Churchill later observed, "It was evident that this was a stranglehold, and that the choice before them was either for Japan to reach an agreement with the United States or go to war." Remember Pearl Harbor?

Saddam Hussein is not in a position to strangle anybody so completely. Even with Kuwait under his belt, he controls only about 20 percent of Middle Eastern oil. But if he were to overrun Saudi Arabia — and his huge armies were poised on its border, in attack formation — he would acquire de facto control of virtually the entire output of the region, and with it an immensely powerful role in world affairs.

Even then, the peril to the United States would be only indirect. The New Yorker is simply wrong: We are not in fact "a society dependent on Arab oil." But Western Europe and Japan most certainly are, and without it their economies would grind to a halt in a matter of weeks. It was this clear danger that prompted President Bush to act so decisively.

For the collapse of Western Europe and Japan would be an absolute disaster for the United States: politically, economically and culturally. We could not possibly escape a major and probably permanent economic downturn.

When Mr. Bush spoke of oil as vital to "our way of life," therefore, he meant exactly what he said. It is far more than a matter of "a few cents at the pump." Not only is the modern world heavily dependent on oil for energy; petrochemicals are the very basis of a huge variety of industries, from pharmaceuticals to plastics.

No doubt a day will come when substitutes will relieve modern civilization of its dependence on oil, and the Arabs can get back on their camels and plod slowly off into the desert. Until then, however, oil is as vital to mankind as oxygen, and as much worth fighting for.

Constitution Week begins today

Editor's Note: The week of Sept. 17-23 commemorates the signing of the Constitution of the United States. This great document, the guardian of our liberties, established our Republic as a self-governing nation dedicated to rule by law. Constitution Week provides an opportunity for all Americans to recall the achievements of our Founders, the nature of limited government and the rights and privileges of citizenship as well as the responsibilities. The Commission of the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution offers to our readers this article written by former chief Justice Warren E. Burger, to focus attention on the Judicial Branch of government.

By CHIEF JUSTICE WARREN E. BURGER (1969-1986)
Chairman, Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution

When the founding fathers wrote the Constitution during the summer of 1787, creating the structure of a "national judiciary" was easy—they left it up to the First Congress. In a summer of dispute and compromise, this compromise by procrastination did nothing more than turn over to The First Congress the potentially volatile problem of establishing a federal judiciary.

Article III of the Constitution merely provided for a "supreme Court, and...such inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish," as well as establishing tenure (during good behavior) and pay (cannot be diminished while in office) for Supreme Court Justices. It also lists the types of disputes that may be taken to a federal court, including the Supreme Court, and guarantees trial by jury. Article III concludes with a description of the crime of treason, the only crime spelled out in the Constitution.

legislation on September 21, and on September 24, 1789, President George Washington signed the Judiciary Act of 1789, creating the office of Attorney General, 13 federal districts and 13 district judgeships and a means to review their decisions. The Judiciary Act put the District Courts at the base of the pyramid. The next level was the Federal Circuit Courts and the apex was the Supreme Court. Originally three judgeships for circuit courts were provided; a circuit court was made up of two Supreme Court Justices and one District Court Judge.

To sit on the first Supreme Court, President George Washington sought men he had worked with in the past and who shared his philosophy of a strong central government. Three of his nominees, John Rutledge of South Carolina, James Wilson of Pennsylvania, and John Blair of Virginia, served in the Constitutional Convention and had signed the document. William Cushing of Massachusetts and James Iredell of North Carolina had carried the Federalist banner in their state ratifying conventions.

For the first Chief Justice of the United States, Washington again turned to a staunch Federalist, John Jay of New York. Jay was one of the leaders in New York's ratification battle, joining with James Madison and Alexander Hamilton to author The Federalist Papers in support of ratifying the Constitution. The first session of the Supreme Court was scheduled to meet in New York City on February 1, 1790, but only Chief Justice Jay and Associate Justice James Wilson had taken the Judicial Oath. The next day, John Rutledge and John Blair took their oaths, and the Court had an official quorum and convened for the first time.

For the first decade, the Supreme Court decided few cases. The Justices spent the majority of their time "riding the circuit," serving the three circuits created by the Judiciary Act of 1789. The Eastern Circuit included New Hampshire, Massachusetts (including Maine), Connecticut, and New York. Rhode Island was added after it ratified the Constitution on May 29, 1790. The Middle Circuit consisted of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia. The Southern Circuit was made up of South Carolina, and Georgia, with North Carolina added when it joined the Union on November 21, 1789.

When one considers that the most common means of travel was horseback or carriage, and the condition of most of the roads during this period of time, the burden and danger of "riding the circuit" comes into perspective. The days spent on the road, traveling from court to court, were extremely taxing. Justice Iredell was especially vocal in his antipathy for the circuit rider system. He complained of "leading the life of a Postboy," and asked Congress for some relief. As new states were added—Vermont joined the Union on March 7, 1791, followed by Kentucky in 1792 and Tennessee in 1796—the burden of "riding the circuit" increased also.

In the beginning, the Court was not held in high esteem. John Harrison of Maryland refused Presidents Washington's nomination to be an Associate Justice to take the position of Chancellor of Maryland. John Jay was elected Governor of New York while holding the position of Chief Justice.

It was John Marshall, the fourth Chief Justice of the United States, who set the Court on the path that would eventually gain for it a co-equal status with the Legislative and Executive Branches.

Although Marshall had previously declined an appointment to the Court, he did accept appointment as Chief Justice in 1800, and the year 1801 began a great epoch in the history of this Court and of this country.

In his 34 years as the nation's chief jurist, John Marshall took part in over 1,000 Court decisions, writing 508 opinions himself. The leadership and the decisions of Chief Justice Marshall have been praised and discussed for almost 200 years. He is known as the "Great Chief Justice." Marshals' "building block" opinions gave the Court authority and prestige, confirming and defining the concept of judicial review, the scope of the Commerce Clause, and the Necessary and Proper Clause, which exist today. By the time Marshall had served 34 years on the Court, in 1834, the Court and the judiciary were firmly established.

Bill Hames Carnival returns for 49th year at Tri-State Fair

The Amarillo Tri State Fair, scheduled for September 17-22, will again feature the Bill Hames Carnival during its six-day run. The Hames Show had been playing the Tri State Fair since 1941 and always bring a complete line of kiddie rides and some twenty super rides.

An added attraction on the carnival grounds at the fair this year will be a new Giant Gondola Wheel recently purchased by the Hames Shows.

The 27-meter-high wheel is the largest built in America since George Ferris introduced the Ferris Wheel at the 1893 Chicago World's Fair.

It is the largest portable wheel in the world, and is designed to be set up in one working day. It carries 120 passengers in 20 six-passenger gondolas, lit by nearly 5,500 incandescent bulbs, and weighs 98 tons.

You don't want to miss a ride on the giant wheel and the many other rides, games and events at the 1990 Amarillo Tri State Fair.

Families of reservists need our prayers in current crisis

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband was just called to active duty because of the Persian Gulf crisis. You would do me and the other wives of reservists a favor if you would print this.

1. Please don't ask me if my husband is going to "see some action" overseas. It's possible, but I have no way of knowing, and even if I did, I couldn't tell you. He's not Rambo or John Wayne—he's a flesh-and-blood man with a family who loves him, and we're praying that it won't come to that.

2. Please don't ask if I think President Bush made the right decision. Like every American, I'm praying that he did, and I'm trying to think positive.

3. Please don't come over with your small children to "cheer me up." I have four of my own, and after working, cleaning house and caring for the kids, I'm just too tired.

4. Call me and let me talk out my worries. Offer to take my kids for a few hours, and if you are going to the store, ask if I need anything. That would be wonderful!

5. Most of all, pray for this crisis to end quickly without a full-scale war. My heart goes out to those who have family members already in the Middle East.

Reservist families have special needs because we are not the tight-knit group the regulars are; we are spread out and not acquainted. If you know people in that situation, be a friend. They need you.

Thank you, Abby. I really had to get this off my chest. My husband is a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps, but sign me ...
SMALL TOWN IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: I must take exception to your advice to "His Wife in Ohio," who was whining about her non-existent sex life due to her new husband's weight.

First, she was aware of his weight, and had even slept with him prior to marrying him. Perhaps she should have left the big guy on the market for a woman without her hang-ups who would appreciate his great qualities.

Second, I was dismayed by your assumption that the problem was his and he needed psychiatric treatment. Abby, you are perpetuating a very destructive form of discrimination that is rampant in this country. It is neither a sin nor a sign of mental illness to be overweight. I've fought a weight problem all my life, so your suggesting that he should fix his "problem" so his wife can have the sex life she is "entitled to" is incredibly callous. What about the sex life he is entitled to?

A better response would have been to send her to a shrink to solve her culturally induced hang-ups, so she could start living up to her marriage vows. With a little love in their relationship, maybe he'd have an easier time losing weight.

DENVER DAVE

DEAR DAVE: It will probably warm your heart (and cool you off) to know that I received a sound trouncing from many readers for my answer to that one.

DEAR READERS: Guess who said, "Life is not a matter of holding good cards but of playing a poor hand well?"

Charles Goren? Alfred Scheinwald? No! Robert Louis Stevenson.

Abby's family recipes are included in her cookbooklet! Send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Cardinals shock Eagles, 23-21

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

A year ago, Pittsburgh lost its opener 51-0 and made the playoffs. Could the Phoenix Cardinals be taking the same route?

The Cardinals, who lost 31-0 to Washington in Joe Bugel's debut as coach, got three fourth-quarter field goals from Al Del Greco, including a 42-yarder with 25 seconds left, to beat the Philadelphia Eagles 23-21 Sunday.

"This made some non-believers believers," Bugel said. "That was a great testimony to our football team and this organization. I'm proud of them and I'm proud to be a Cardinal."

"We took a 'so what' attitude into this game," said quarterback Timm Rosenbach, who was intercepted four times in the Redskins debacle. "People have been trying to write us off since the start of the season."

Rosenbach passed for only 116 yards and no touchdowns against Philadelphia, but he threw just one interception and rushed five times for 50 yards, more than anyone on the Eagles.

Philadelphia, a playoff team a year ago, dropped to 0-2, with both losses to division rivals.

Elsewhere, it was Detroit 21, Atlanta 14; Chicago 31, Green Bay 13; the New York Jets 24, Cleveland 21; New England 16, Indianapolis 14; the Los Angeles Rams 35, Tampa Bay 14; Miami 30, Buffalo 7; Minnesota 32, New Orleans 3; Cincinnati 21, San Diego 16; San Francisco 26, Washington 13; the Los Angeles Raiders 17, Seattle 13; and Pittsburgh 20, Houston 9.

Kansas City visits Denver in tonight's game.

49ers 26, Redskins 13

Joe Montana became San Francisco's all-time leader in career passing yardage, throwing for 390 yards and touchdowns to John Taylor and Jerry Rice.

Montana, who completed 29 of 44 passes, eclipsed John Brodie's record of 31,548 with a 37-yard completion to Taylor in the third quarter. Montana finished the game with 31,654.

Dolphins 30, Bills 7

Don Shula became the fourth NFL coach to win 200 games for one team and Miami started 2-0 for the first time since 1984 with a near-perfect performance against Buffalo.

The Dolphins, whose offense revolved almost exclusively around Dan Marino in recent years, had 128 yards rushing and 177 passing while holding the Bills to 205 yards of total offense, including 44 on the ground.

Steelers 20, Oilers 9

Pittsburgh's offense still doesn't have a touchdown this season, but David Johnson's 26-yard interception return for a touchdown and Rod Woodson's 52-yard punt return for a score resulted in a victory over Houston.

The Oilers, who have had four turnovers returned for touchdowns in two weeks, lost in Pittsburgh for the first time since 1986 as the Steelers (1-1) ended an eight-game home losing streak against its division rivals.

Bears 31, Packers 13

Chicago, which lost 10 of its last 12 games last season, beat Green

Bay for its second straight victory.

Jim Harbaugh passed for two touchdowns and ran for another, and Trace Armstrong and Richard Dent had two sacks apiece.

Rams 35, Bucs 14

Jim Everett completed 18 of 25 passes for 269 yards and four touchdowns for Los Angeles, which also scored when Bobby Humphrey intercepted Vinny Testaverde's pass on the final play of the first half.

Lions 21, Falcons 14

Detroit beat Atlanta in a battle of run-and-shoot teams, with Rodney Peete throwing two touchdown passes in the first half before he was replaced by Bob Gagliano.

The Falcons (1-1), who roughed up Houston last week, were called for three personal fouls against the Lions (1-1), including one with three minutes remaining that allowed Detroit to run out the clock.

Bengals 21, Chargers 16

Boomer Esiason overcame three interceptions with three touchdown passes, two of them to Eddie Brown.

The key play was a 23-yard scoring pass to Brown on a third-and-20 play early in the fourth period.

Taylor plays like he talks in Giants' 27-20 win over Cowboys

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Lawrence Taylor keeps making a fool of training camp and the Dallas Cowboys.

Taylor had five tackles and a quarterback sack and returned an intercepted pass 11 yards for a touchdown Sunday as the New York Giants whipped the Cowboys 28-7 in Texas Stadium's 104-degree heat.

Taylor, who practiced only three days after ending his holdout, had three sacks last week in New York's 27-20 opening victory over Philadelphia.

A year ago, Taylor made fun of the Cowboys' offense, calling it something straight out of college. He said it was so simple he thought there was some trick to it.

Taylor showed what he meant on Sunday, batting a Troy Aikman pass into the air and returning it for a fourth-quarter touchdown.

"LT made a great play," Aikman said. "It was just a great individual play. It's very frustrating."

Aikman and the Cowboys got another taste of the Giants in two weeks in New York.

Taylor sacks up Cowboys' Aikman.

"It's always fun to score," Taylor said. "Aikman was looking right at where he was going to throw the ball." The Giants (2-0) have defeated the Cowboys (1-1) five consecutive times, a first in their 55-game series.

New York seemed to handle the heat better than the Cowboys. The temperature was 96 degrees at halftime, and a Texas Stadium field thermometer registered 104 at kickoff.

The Cowboys lost two players briefly to heat exhaustion. The Giants didn't lose any.

Phil Simms ran for a touchdown and passed for another. He hit 16 of 20 passes for 208 yards.

"The heat was a big factor, but I think it may have worked against the Cowboys and for us," Simms said. "On offense, it's a lot easier to take the heat than on defense. And their defense was on the field a long, long time, so I think it probably worked against them."

New York led in time of possession 41:40 to 18:20. "It was really hot out there," Simms said. "It's probably the hottest game I can ever remember playing."

Simms added: "I'm sure our defense loved the idea of what we were doing. They were on the bench most of the afternoon. So far, they haven't thanked me, though."

Simms ran four yards for a touchdown and passed four yards to tight end Mark Bavaro for another. The other offensive touchdown came on Otis Anderson's one-yard run.

The Dallas offense produced only nine first downs. The only touchdown came on rookie Alexander Wright's 90-yard kickoff return in the second quarter.

"This is the second time in the last three games we've played the Giants that they had possession of the football for over 40 minutes," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson. "The one thing I feared during the week is that the Giants would take the football and control it. It was a mismatch."

Dallas defensive tackle Dean Hamel said the Cowboys knew what was coming and still couldn't capitalize.

"The Giants ran exactly what they ran last week and we just couldn't stop them," Hamel said.

New York coach Bill Parcells was pleased with the Giants' fast start.

"I thought we played pretty well. Generally speaking, I have to be happy. I'm happy we're off to a 2-0 start," he said.

Expos charge to the forefront in three-game sweep of Pirates

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

On a weekend when almost everyone had a chance to make a move in the National League, only the Montreal Expos did.

The Expos charged from the fringe of the East race to the forefront, beating first-place Pittsburgh 4-1 on a combined one-hitter Sunday to complete a three-game sweep. The Pirates managed to stay one-half game ahead of the New York Mets — who lost to Philadelphia 8-3 — but allowed Montreal to get within 5 1/2 games.

"I'll be glad to get out of Montreal," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "But we better check the locks on the clubhouse. The Expos might want to keep us around for a while."

Montreal won 13 of 18 against Pittsburgh this season and sent the Pirates to their fifth straight loss. The Expos trailed in all three games before rallying to win.

In the West, Cincinnati seems to be back in charge, barely. The Reds averted a three-game sweep by beating Los Angeles 9-5 Sunday, increasing their lead to 5 1/2 games over the Dodgers.

NL roundup

Cincinnati trimmed its magic number to 12 for winning its first division title since 1979.

"I've felt good and confident all year about this club," Reds manager Lou Piniella said. "We're in a good position, but we've still got to get the job done."

The Dodgers do not play Cincinnati again this season.

San Francisco, which began the weekend 6 1/2 games behind the Reds, got swept in a three-game series in Houston. The Giants lost 3-2 Sunday when the Astros scored twice in the ninth inning.

In other games, Chicago beat St. Louis 8-4 and San Diego defeated Atlanta 9-4.

Scott Anderson, a 28-year-old rookie, made his first major league start a successful one against Pittsburgh. He pitched five innings and gave up the Pirates' only hit, a one-out double by Jay Bell in the first inning.

Scott Ruskin (3-2), traded to Pittsburgh on Aug. 8 for Zane Smith, pitched 1 2-3 innings for the victory. Tim Burke went one inning and Steve Frey got four outs for his eighth save.

Reds 9, Dodgers 5

Bill Doran hit three doubles, one on a misplayed fly ball that fell and drove in two runs, and Los Angeles failed to take advantage of its opportunities in Cincinnati.

The Dodgers loaded the bases in three of the first four innings, but scored only two runs. With the score

Phillies 8, Mets 3

Rookie Jose DeJesus beat New York for the third time this year and Darren Daulton hit a two-run homer and RBI single off David Cone.

DeJesus (6-7) gave up three hits in 7 1-3 innings. He has allowed the Mets four runs on nine hits in 25 1-3 innings.

Jays close in on Red Sox

By The Associated Press

The Boston Red Sox are stumbling, and they certainly aren't getting any help from the Toronto Blue Jays.

The Blue Jays, who trailed the AL East leaders by as many as 6 1/2 games on Sept. 4, continued to keep the heat on the slumping Red Sox with a dramatic 6-5 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Sunday night.

Coupled with Boston's 4-2 loss earlier in the day, the Blue Jays moved within a single game of the Red Sox. Each team has 15 games to go in the season.

"Three in a row makes you nervous. I'd like to win one where we're ahead going into the ninth for a change," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said after his Blue Jays pulled out a game in the ninth inning for the third straight day for their ninth victory in 11 games.

The Red Sox weren't as fortunate. They lost for the sixth time in seven games as they continued their September swoon.

"This is the series I feared the most all month," Boston manager Joe Morgan said after his Red Sox were swept by the White Sox in the four-game series in Chicago. "We don't play well here and we never get any breaks."

Elsewhere in the AL, it was Oakland 5, Minnesota 4; Detroit 5, New York 2; Kansas City 9, Cleveland 6; Seattle 5, California 3, and Milwaukee 5, Texas 3.

George Bell drove in the tie-breaking run with a fielder's choice in the ninth inning for Toronto, his third RBI of the game. Bell had earlier homered and knocked in another run with a single before his game-winner.

AL roundup

Tony Fernandez singled to lead off the ninth, stole second base and advanced to third on Kelly Gruber's groundout to first. Fred McGriff was walked intentionally before Bell stroked a line drive to right field. Steve Finley fielded the ball on one bounce and threw to second to force McGriff before Fernandez crossed the plate.

Tom Henke (2-2) was the winner and Joe Price (3-4) the loser.

The Orioles had tied the game 5-5 on a two-run homer by rookie David Segui in the eighth inning, his first in the major leagues. Segui homered off reliever Tom Henke following a walk to Mike Devereaux.

White Sox 4, Red Sox 2

Three pitchers combined on an eight-hitter for Chicago, including major league save leader Bobby Thigpen, who recorded his 51st.

Eric King (10-4) allowed five hits in seven innings and Barry Jones pitched a hitless inning before Thigpen finished up.

Athletics 5, Twins 4

Walt Weiss drove in the winning run with a two-out single in the 11th inning as Oakland reduced the magic number for its third consecutive AL West title to seven.

Mark McGwire doubled with two outs off Juan Berenguer (8-4) and Terry Steinbach was intentionally walked before Weiss' single.

Tigers 5, Yankees 2

Cecil Fielder hit his 47th home run, Steve Seay and Paul Gibson combined on a two-hitter and Alan Trammell hit three run-scoring singles.

Levi captures Canadian Open

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Wayne Levi said he's not a goal-setter. Then he corrected himself.

"Everybody's goal is to retire," Levi said. "The more money I make the faster I can retire. And if I win Nabisco, that might be enough."

He was smiling when he said it, but the 14-year veteran of the PGA Tour may or may not have been kidding.

And Levi, whose one-stroke victory in the Canadian Open on Sunday gave him twice as many tournament wins as anyone else on tour this year, certainly will be a force to be considered in the $3.5 million Nabisco tournament late next month.

"He's having the kind of year you think of Johnny Miller and Tom Watson having back in the '70's and '80's," said Ian Baker-Finch, a one-stroke runner-up for the second straight week.

What makes a parent? Judge to hear complex surrogate mother case

By LYNN ELBER
Associated Press Writer.

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — The childless couple and the young woman struck a bargain: Mark and Crispina Calvert would give Anna Johnson $10,000, and she would bear a child created from their egg and sperm.

The deal went wrong. Now, just weeks before the birth, the Calverts and Ms. Johnson are locked in a bitter custody dispute that is moving from the TV talk show arena into the courtroom.

Lawyers for the three sides — the fetus has a court-appointed attorney — are preparing their strategies in a case called unprecedented even in the cutting-edge realm of surrogate pregnancies.

The issues: What makes a parent — the genetic link or the act of bearing a child? And what is the legality of the surrogate contract?

The outcome, experts say, could be a groundbreaking ruling or a narrow decision that doesn't go beyond that of any other custody case. A pre-trial hearing is set for Thursday in Superior Court.

Harold LaFlamme, the fetus' attorney, said his goal is to avoid protracted litigation and an unstable life for the child. A narrow ruling based on the child's best interests is possible, he said.

California courts "try to avoid constitutional disputes, try to fit cases into the family law scheme of things," he said.

H. Joseph Gitlin, head of the surrogacy committee of the American Bar Association's family law section, agreed that the child's interests may outweigh other issues. But if Johnson is found to lack a genetic link to the child, "that surely gives the (Calverts) a leg up," he said.

The couple's attorney, Christian Van Deusen, said he will ask the court to enforce the custody rights detailed in the contract and to recognize the genetic relationship in determining parenthood.

Johnson's attorneys, Richard Gilbert and Diane Marlowe, say they will seek to have the contract declared illegal and invalid because it constitutes baby-selling. California has no law on the issue.

They maintain that Johnson is the biological parent because she is carrying the child to term, and that the transplant may not have even succeeded. State law recognizes the birth mother as the legal mother, they say.

California's liberal track record in family law — giving the nation such concepts as no-fault divorce — makes it more likely that the surrogate contract will be upheld, Gitlin said.

But even if the contract is ruled invalid, "I see the court deciding the case on the same basis as the Baby M case: That is, in the best interests of the child," he said.

In that landmark New Jersey case, the child was conceived by a surrogate mother, Mary Beth Whitehead, with the sperm of a man whose wife couldn't have a baby. Whitehead reneged on the arrangement, prompting a bitter custody fight that was won in 1988 by the father, William Stern, and his wife, Elizabeth. The judge ruled the contract invalid and awarded them the baby.

However, in that case, Ms. Whitehead was genetically the child's mother because she provided the egg. In the California case, the Calverts agreed to provide both sperm and egg for a so-called test-tube baby.

Complicating the California case is a claim from Johnson's attorneys that the fetus might be her natural child. And because one of Johnson's grandparents is American Indian, the child's adoption could involve federal tribal-protection laws that give preference to Indians. Calvert, 34, is white and his wife Filipino.

Mrs. Calvert, 36, and Johnson, 29, met at the Santa Ana hospital where both worked as nurses. Johnson agreed to undergo an embryo transplant for the Calverts for $10,000.

EMS Week is designed to educate the public on the vital role EMT's play in saving lives during emergency responses, the proclamation states.

National service bills for youth stray from sponsors' concepts

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate have passed multimillion-dollar bills establishing a civilian "national service" corps for young people. But originators of the idea say the differing bills bear little resemblance to what they had in mind.

"The committee picked up the ball but forgot to run," Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., one of the sponsors of national service, said after the House passed its bill last Thursday. "This bill is not national service."

Nonetheless, the $193 million bill the House approved on a voice vote after long debate bears the title National Service Act. It now goes to a conference committee to work out differences with the Senate, which passed a $125 million bill that, although less costly, is more ambitious.

McCurdy and other original sponsors hope the final version will include a provision in the Senate's bill, a $35 million demonstration program that will test their idea for linking national youth service with financial aid incentives.

It's a plan that the House did not include. The chairman of the House panel that wrote the bill, retiring Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., opposed the idea and said his committee "categorically rejects any linkage between service and student financial assistance."

The idea of a national service corps to encourage young people to do social works the nation otherwise couldn't afford has been bound up in political differences that go beyond pride of authorship.

President Bush uttered the phrase "a thousand points of light" in his nominating speech and later refined it into a modest $25 million plan to establish a clearinghouse for community service — publicizing successful projects and encouraging new ones.

Critics of that idea, however, concluded it would do little to actually support an organized effort harnessing the energy and time of young people to do constructive social or environmental work benefiting their communities.

Moderate and conservative Democrats who lead the Democratic Leadership Council, a group formed to counterbalance what they see as the more liberal national party organization, proposed a more sweeping plan in January 1989.

Their bill would have made student financial aid contingent on a full-time stint in the military or in low-wage community service. Their bill would have phased out current forms of student aid in five years.

It would amount to a "civilian GI bill," a civilian program comparable to the benefits that encourage military service, according to its sponsors, led by McCurdy in the House and Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Charles Robb, D-Va.

Their plan met stiff resistance, however, and in the Senate they settled for the scaled-back pilot program. Participants could receive vouchers for use toward college, a first home purchase or establishment of a small business — worth $5,000 for one year's service.

"I haven't dropped my original thinking on the subject, but I do think we ought to go slowly and determine what works," Nunn said.

Critics, who include liberal Democrats as well as Republicans, said tying aid to service would penalize low-income students while allowing the affluent to escape service obligations. Supporters, however, said low-income students already have to work to supplement the meager support they get from existing student aid programs.

The House's bill provides grants to states and local school systems to encourage volunteer activity by young people, and establishes youth conservation and service corps to do environmental and social projects.

Sponsors of the Democratic Leadership Council's plan say volunteerism is different and more limited in scope than what they have in mind.

They say Hawkins' committee, with its ties to the establishment education and labor lobbies, basically added money to existing programs and came up with little more than a traditional youth jobs program.

UAW reaches settlement with General Motors

By FREDERICK STANDISH
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers early Monday announced a tentative agreement with General Motors Corp. on a new contract covering 300,000 U.S. workers.

"I am pleased to announce to our members and to you that we have reached a tentative contract agreement here at General Motors," UAW President Owen Bieber said after an all-day bargaining session with the nation's No. 1 automaker.

Bieber said details of the agreement would be withheld until they could be presented to the union membership. A meeting was scheduled for later Monday.

The UAW's three-year contract with GM had expired at midnight Friday, but both sides agreed to extend the terms of the 1987 agreement on a day-by-day basis while negotiations continued.

UAW contracts with Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. ran out at the same time, but the union put negotiations with those companies on hold pending the outcome of its talks with GM.

The extension of the GM-UAW contract was the first such move since bargaining between the union and the automaker began in 1937. The union agreed to a 59-hour extension of its contract with Ford during the 1987 talks.

Days before the settlement was announced, 300 members of the GM bargaining council were called to a briefing Monday in a Detroit suburb.

The group is made up of local presidents and bargaining committee chairmen. Announcement of that meeting gave rise to speculation that an agreement was more likely than a strike.

About 300,000 active GM workers are covered by the UAW-GM contract.

Meanwhile, talks continued in Toronto between the Canadian Auto Workers union and Ford of Canada. The CAW's 12,800 members at Ford of Canada struck early Saturday after talks there broke off.

Negotiations were held later Saturday and resumed Sunday. No plants involved operate on weekends so any strike impact won't be felt until Monday; if the strike continued, U.S. Ford plants that use parts made in Canada would be affected.

National contract talks this year have focused on job security, income protection and pension issues.

In all, more than 450,000 active Big Three workers are covered by UAW-negotiated contracts. It's the first time in 11 years that UAW contracts with each of the Big Three have had common expiration dates.

Comanche Peak power plant has fourth shutdown this month

GLEN ROSE (AP) — The Comanche Peak nuclear power plant has experienced a fourth shutdown in just over a week, a TU Electric spokesman says.

The latest shutdown came at 8:50 p.m. Saturday when a gauge incorrectly indicated a pump was not supplying enough water to the steam generator, TU Electric spokesman Mark Manroe said Sunday.

The problem, a short in the wiring, was located and the plant restarted at 2 p.m. Sunday, Manroe said.

Officials said neither plant nor public safety were jeopardized.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission does not believe Saturday's malfunction is a major safety problem and said the agency will monitor TU Electric's review of the incident, said Joe Gilliland, an NRC spokesman.

The other shutdowns were on Sept. 7, 8 and 10.

Manroe said the plant remained safe during the shutdowns.
