School Trustees Drop Auto Tax

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock school board members today set the wheels of tax relief in motion on the local level by unanimously abolishing the personal automobile tax for all car owners and approving the existing local $3,000 homestead exemptions for the disabled and elderly.

The board also agreed to delay implementation of the new agricultural use valuation until 1980 upon the recommendation of school administration and tax assessor-collector John Brooks.

By taking no action, trustees automatically granted the auto exemption for all personal automobiles, a move that Brooks has estimated will cost the school district about $990,000 in tax revenue if calculated at a 97 percent collection rate. About $74 million worth of automobiles will be subtracted from the tax base.

The trustees' decision means that Lubbock residents likely will be paying no personal property taxes at all on their automobiles. The city already has indicated that it plans to take no action on the tax, in effect abolishing it.

Brooks added that automobiles used for business purposes will continue to be taxed.

Because the automobile exemption and the existing local exemption for disabled veterans and the elderly will not be reimbursed by the state, Brooks has estimated that the district stands to lose an estimated $1.25 million in tax revenues.

The validity of that figure, however, was the center of some controversy following the board meeting.

Rep. Froy Salinas, who attended the 7:15 a.m. session, told reporters that the figure was not correct because the collection rate of automobile taxes is actually lower than 97 percent.

Salinas also said at one point that despite the losses from exemptions, the school district would be ahead in funding this year because the Lubbock district was granted an additional $2 million over last year's state funds.He added that $2 million more would be granted the district next year.

That extra money, explained Salinas, comes from a surplus created from state revenue such as oil, cigarette and gas taxes. "As long as we have inflation we will always have a surplus" because taxes also rise with inflation, he said.

Later, however, Salinas apparently contradicted his earlier statement and agreed with Supt. Ed Irons, who said that the district would not be ahead in funding, despite the additional state aid.

Although Irons acknowledged that the extra $2 million would make up for the loss of the $1.25 million in exemptions, he said the remaining portion of the extra aid would be consumed by inflation and teacher salary increases.

"We'll have more state and less local money, but they won't quite offset each other," said Irons.

Ronnie Gooch, assistant superintendent for business affairs, added that the local districts must pay 20 percent of the state salary increase voted by the legislature. So although the 5.1 percent increase granted teachers is state-mandated, local districts must pay part of that cost plus any local increment the school board grants.

Irons acknowledged that the $990,000 in auto tax losses was not an accurate figure because of the number of unpaid tax accounts, but he still said the district will have no surplus funds from additional state aid.

After listening to Irons, Salinas agreed that inflation "is hitting the schools like everybody else," and that the district would not actually come out ahead.

With the approval of the existing $3,000 homestead exemption for disabled veterans and homeowners over 65, the school district will lose about $230,000 in revenue that will not be reimbursed by the state.

Those taxpayers in the over-65 and disabled veterans category will now receive $12,000 (of assessed value) in state and local exemptions beginning in 1979. The local $3,000 exemption will be added to a state-mandated $3,000 exemption for all homeowners and a $6,000 exemption for the elderly or disabled.

The state will reimburse school dis-

Iowa Storms Bring Havoc

MANSON, Iowa (AP) — More than three dozen tornadoes raked the Iowa Plains, wiping out neighborhoods and forcing evacuation of a small town where two tanks holding a toxic chemical ruptured. Five people were killed and 70 were injured, authorities said.

About 40 twisters were spotted in northern and central Iowa Thursday night, officials said. Trees were uprooted, power and telephone lines were torn down and homes and businesses were ripped up in six communities.

The National Guard was called out to help the two hardest hit towns, Manson and Algona, which had been preparing to start a week-long celebration of its 125th anniversary Saturday.

Tornadoes also were reported in Minnesota, North Dakota, Colorado and Arkansas. Some damage was reported in those states but no deaths or serious injuries.

Three people were killed and about two dozen injured in Manson, officials said. Initial reports said four people were killed. Twenty-four businesses and 100 homes were reported destroyed or heavily damaged.

Police Officer John Ewing said no homes were left in a swath from downtown to the southeast edge of town. "It's just gone, clear out to the edge of town," Ewing said. "The houses are gone."

Harold Ricklefs of Fort Dodge rushed to Manson and had to dig his mother out of the rubble that was left of her kitchen.

"It's a mess, I'll tell you," Ricklefs said as he surveyed damage in the farming town of 1,900 people. "It just flattened houses. The streets are all blocked."

Area Wins Historical Designation

The Urban Design Commission, in a meeting which began Thursday night and ended early this morning, approved boundaries and landmarks for a Design-Historic District in Overton South.

At 1:08 this morning the commission settled on boundaries for the 200-acre area which would exclude commercial property along Avenue Q, 19th Street, University Avenue and Broadway.

The district also would exclude the First Christian Church, in danger of being cut in half by the boundary, and part of property owned by the First Baptist Church.

The panel approved 10 of 11 recommended landmark structures in the area and approved the request of the Overton South Neighborhood Association that trees, street lights and fire hydrants in the parkways be protected, along with four brick streets and Works Progress Administration signs on curbs throughout the neighborhood.

Under standards approved for the district, by far the largest established by the seven-month-old commission, any new building or structure within the district or any alterations to existing structures would have to be "architecturally compatible" with one of the nine styles of architecture present in Overton South.

However, the board voted to delete two other proposed standards which would have banned vehicle parking on front yards and prohibited window-mounted air conditioners on the fronts of buildings within the district.

During most of the six-hour meeting,

Diggs Will Accept Censure By House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charles Diggs admitted today that he violated a House rule and agreed to repay some $40,000 he improperly collected from the House of Representatives and to accept censure from House members.

The House ethics committee agreed to accept his statement by a vote of 11-0. The action ended the committee's investigation of the Michigan Democrat.

Diggs told the House committee that he violated a House rule when he increased the salary of one of his employees and then accepted money from the employee to help him pay his personal debts.

He also admitted that he benefitted from pay increases given other employees, but he said he did not willfully violate the House rule by those actions.

Digg a 12-term House veteran, apologized to the committee for his actions, agreed to repay $40,031.66 to the U.S. Treasury by use of a promissory note and said he would accept censure by the full House.

He also agreed to have all of his current employees certify in writing that none of them is funneling funds to him from salary checks issued by the Treasury.

In return, the committee agreed to withdraw the 18 allegations it had earlier filed against Diggs.

Diggs would be the first congressman censured by the House in more than 50 years.

The ethics committee last year recommended censure of Rep. Edward R. Roybal, D-Calif., as a result of its investigation of alleged influence buying by the South Korean government, but the full House rejected that motion and instead agreed to reprimand Roybal.

Diggs told reporters after the brief session that he made the arrangement to prevent a prolonged and embarrassing proceeding for the House and for his family.

"I have volunteered to repay to the House approximately $40,000 ... in order to finally put to rest any doubts about my past use of clerk hire allowance," he said.

Diggs said the arrangement will support his appeal of a federal conviction of the payroll misuse. He said this is so because he admitted he misused the payroll for personal expenses but the committee dropped all charges of misusing it for congressional expenses.

He said that continuing the proceeding would "prolong the uncertainty under which my family, my staff and I have lived for the past several months."

There was no immediate word on when the censure motion would be brought to the House floor for a vote.

Censure is the strongest punishment the House can mete out short of expulsion. It normally requires the member to stand in front of the full House while the speaker reads the censure pronouncement.

The ethics committee had formally opened — and then indefinitely postponed — public hearings on allegations against Diggs only four days ago without hearing any evidence.

Although the 18 allegations filed against Diggs by the committee basically paralleled the counts on which he was convicted in federal court, the House investigation is completely separate from the earlier court action.

CAN'T SURVIVE AT $1.51 PRICE

Dealer Will Boost Gas To $5

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Tony Grasso is tired of battling the government, the oil companies and irate motorists. So beginning Monday, he's going to charge $5 a gallon for gas at his Chevron service station.

"I got one customer already committed to come down at 8 a.m. at $5 a gallon," the 57-year-old dealer said Thursday.

Grasso already is in legal hot water for charging $1.51 a gallon — his pumps read 75.9 cents a half-gallon — and he knows that $5 a gallon is well over the federal price ceiling.

But he says things have been going so badly for him lately that he just doesn't care.

"I'm daring the Department of Energy to come and get me," he said. "I want to see if this is a free country or if it's Nazi Germany."

Grasso does seem to have had more than his fair share of troubles since he took out a $32,000 bank loan and opened his station in January.

At that time, he had signed a contract with Standard Oil for delivery of a maximum of 50,000 gallons a month. Working 15 hours a day, he built his sales to a peak of 43,000 gallons in March.

Then gas allocations were started. For most stations, they were based on the previous year's volume, but Grasso's station was closed last year.

"They chopped me in half, to three loads (of about 8,000 gallons apiece)," he said.

Grasso said Standard cut his monthly allocation further, to two loads. But in June they sent him one of his July loads, and so in July he says he will get only one load of 8,100 gallons.

And things have gotten worse. Grass said his rent is going up 15 percent as of July 1.

Beetles Launch Local Invasion

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Bugs.

They're flying through City Hall these days and dying in the halls over at the Lubbock County Courthouse. At The Avalanche-Journal, they've been tickling besandaled toes and dying in droves near the loading dock.

The ground beetle has arrived in Lubbock in what may seem to downtowners to be plague proportions.

For every one that meets its death by someone's vicious heel, there is another bug — and sometimes many — waiting to take its comrade's place in the barrage.

Dr. Marjorie Orr, director of the health department, is unconcerned about the beetles. "They're not a health problem, " she said Thursday, "just a nuisance." She did admit the inch-long shiny black insects "are not very pretty, though."

City information officer Wanda Evans took a dimmer view of the creatures. "We've got them flying over here (in City Hall), they're driving us crazy!" Mrs. Evans conceded, however, "I've seen them before in Lubbock, and worse."

E.M. Smith of the city vector control attributed the sudden resurgence of the beetles to Lubbock's recent heavy rains, but Donald Ashdown, an entomologist at Texas Tech University, said merely, "This is their time of year."

Ashdown continued, "The beetles are moving into town looking for food," and said they may seem to favor downtown because they also are attracted to areas "where light levels are high."

Although the experts agree the bugs are harmless, persons absolutely determined to take positive action should use

Nations Schedule Quotas On Oil Imports

in agreeing to adopt specific, individual oil import quotas through 1985.

In a joint declaration, the seven leaders deplored the latest oil price increase by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Foreseeing severe economic consequences for the world, they said "the most urgent tasks are to reduce oil consumption and to hasten the development of other energy sources."

The United States agreed to freeze its oil imports at 8.5 million barrels a day — the current level — through 1985.

"I think the results of the economic summit were superb," Carter declared.

The joint communique spelled out specific ceilings for Japan and Canada and said European summit participants — France, Germany, Britain and Italy — would specify annual levels later this year.

After their two-day conference ended, the summit participants appeared before reporters in a crowded hotel ballroom. Carter was particularly pointed in discussing the impact of the latest OPEC increases.

He said the boost to an average price of $20.90 a barrel would "lead to worldwide inflation, less growth, more unemployment and endanger the stability of the economic system."

U.S. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, asked about the economic impact of the OPEC increase, said, "I think the chances of a recession are increased."

Asked about the economic impact of restraining oil imports, Blumenthal said, "The less we need to buy from them, the less we're dependent on them and the less they can increase prices."

A senior American official estimated that without the quota, U.S. oil imports would have risen to 9.5 million or 10 million barrels a day by 1985.

At the end of the summit, which followed a three-day state visit to Japan, a tired-looking Carter confessed to "pleasant weariness." He headed for Seoul for an official visit to South Korea.

Carter, who announced Thursday he was canceling plans for a three-day holiday in Hawaii following his Asian travels, told reporters he was "ready to go home."

The U.S. president claimed the outcome of the summit was a victory for his position — that each country should adopt a specific oil import ceiling.

Asked if there was a fight about this, Carter told an informal news conference, "There was a constant debate." Asked how he had convinced Europeans, who had favored a collective import

Israeli Board Approves Release Of Terre Fleener

RAMLEH, Israel (AP) — An Israeli parole board today approved the early release of Terre Fleener, the 24-year-old American imprisoned for 20 months for spying for the Palestine Liberation Organization, and ordered her to leave Israel immediately, her lawyer said.

"After looking at all the material submitted to them, the commissioners decided to release her on condition that she immediately leave the country," attorney Felicia Langer said.

"She could leave tomorrow and be at home Sunday," Mrs. Langer told reporters after the brief hearing at the prison in this Tel Aviv suburb.

Appearing fit, Miss Fleener, of San Antonio, smiled at the waiting reporters but was not allowed to talk to them. After the close-door hearing she was returned to spend her last day in a cell at the Neve Tirze womens' prison.

Before the proceedings, Mrs. Langer said she would argue for Miss Fleener's freedom on grounds of her good behavior in prison, her good character and the fact that no actual damage or injury resulted from her spying.

Miss Fleener was convicted in January 1978 after a one-day secret trial. The charges against her were not specified at that time. She had been arrested at Ben-Gurion Airport the previous October upon her second arrival in Israel.

She originally was sentenced to five years in prison but the term was cut in half three weeks ago after Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and other U.S. officials recommended leniency. An Israeli government source said the United States exerted "tremendous pressure" for the the release of Miss Fleener, the only American now imprisoned in Israel for security offenses.

Israeli officials recently disclosed that she became friendly with members of the PLO after Kuwait Airlines hired her in Lebanon four years ago as a stewardess.

The newspaper Maariv recently printed a long article apparently quoting from the previously-secret testimony at Miss Fleener's trial. It reported she said she gave the PLO "photographs of hotels in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and Haifa. I photographed beaches I had been requested (to) ... I told them about the security arrangements in the post offices and theaters I had been to in Israel.

"I was not coerced. I agreed. They asked me to take note of the Haifa coast area and to photgraph it. I guess they wanted this for landing boats there ...

"I was assigned to visit Galilee and photograph public buildings there, to visit a kibbutz in upper Galilee and memorize its structure, the location of the power station. I suppose these assignments were all intended for the purpose of attack and sabotage."

In a court hearing last year on a petition to reduce Miss Fleener's sentence, her lawyer said such pictures could be bought in Israel "by the hundreds." The young woman's "only intention was to do an innocent favor," Mrs. Langer contended.

Some Asian Leaders Praise Carter's Action

BALI, Indonesia (AP) — Some Southeast Asian officials today praised President Carter's "good intentions" in doubling the monthly U.S. quota for boat people fleeing Vietnam, but others said the action does little to solve the overall refugee problem.

"It does not solve the problem ... you have to get at the core of the problem, which is Hanoi," Thai Foreign Minister Upadit Pachariyangkun said at a meeting here of his counterparts in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

Carter's announcement in Tokyo Thursday that the United States now will accept 14,000 refugees a month failed to take into account refugees from Cambodia and Laos, the Thai minister said.

Earlier, a Thai Foreign Ministry spokesman said Carter's announcement indicated the "good intentions" of the American government.

"It is a good thing," said Philippine Foreign Secretary Carlos Romulo. "It will encourage other nations to help."

According to the Thai supreme command, there are at least 193,000 Indochinese refugees in Thailand. The group includes 134,660 refugees from Laos, 55,030 from Cambodia and 6,457 from Vietnam.

Of the other four ASEAN members, Malaysia has about 76,000 refugees, Indonesia 47000, the Philippines about 5,000 and Singapore has several hundred.

"Double the intake, double the output," said Singapore Foreign Minister Sinnathamby Rajaratnam, who said the U.S. plan would not help. Rajaratnam has been saying Western nations should tell Vietnam they will cut back their intake of refugees.

Malaysia and Indonesia announced this month they would accept no new boat people and Malaysia has towed 14,457 refugees in 77 boats to international waters.

The Thai government pushed back an estimated 45,000 Cambodians to their embattled homeland earlier this month. Prime Minister Kriangsak Chomanan says his government is holding back sending home others pending an international conference on Indochinese refugees under the auspices of the United Nations.

Many nations have called for such a conference, but none has been scheduled so far.

A U.S. official said acceptance of the additional aliens could cost the United States $150 million a year. Other nations meeting with the United States at the Tokyo economic summit agreed to increase their quotas.

Sources at the ASEAN meeting said the foreign ministers were drafting a plan that might ask Vietnam to suspend its offer to help the orderly transfe of refugees to permanent resettlement in the West.

Most of the Indochinese refugees are of ethnic Chinese origin and claim they are victims of discrimination at the hands of Vietnam and the forces it supports in Laos and Cambodia.

Southeast Asian ministers have said the Hanoi government is purposely flooding their countries with ethnic Chinese, knowing that could inflame internal racial tensions.

Skylab Descent Estimate Made

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The latest estimate is that the doomed Skylab space station will drop out of orbit and hit Earth's atmosphere between July 10 and July 16, with Friday, July 13, the most likely date.

The re-entry prediction issued Thursday by the North American Air Defense Command was a day earlier than the previous estimate, and the period of uncertainty was reduced from eight to six days.

Skylab's orbit had dropped to within 147 miles of the Earth. The aerodynamic drag caused by he increasing density of the thin upper fringes of Earth's atmosphere is responsible for the ship's accelerating descent.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration estimates 500 pieces capable of causing injury will survive Skylab's plunge to Earth.

Godfrey Sells Estate To Prince

LEESBURG, Va. (AP) — Radio and television personality Arthur Godfrey is getting out of the cattle and horse business.

GODFREY

Godfrey has sold his 1,900 acre estate near here to a Dutch corporation backed by a Saudi Arabian prince, according to court papers. The price was more than $5 million.

According to the papers, Vanguard Co., a Netherlands Antilles corporation, bought Beacon Hill, the luxurious cattle and horse farm about 30 miles northwest of Washington, D.C. The papers said Prince Talal Bin Abdul Aziz Saud, a member of Saudi Arabia's royal family, personally guaranteed the mortgage on the land.

The estate has been on the market since mid-1977 with an asking price reportedly about $6 million. Godfrey originally purchased 326 acres of land n 1946, then bought additional parcels to insure privacy for himself and his family.

Mitchell Cutler, a Washington attorney representing the buyers, told the Washington Post that the prince and his partners have "no intention of developing it (the farm) whatsoever."

Loudoun County, Va., officials have said they hoped the property would remain undeveloped.

Steve Martin Buys Expensive House

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Comedian Steve Martin's latest attack of happy feet has led him to suburban Montecito, where county records show he recently bought a home for about $1.5 million.

MARTIN

The deed for the sale filed in the county recorder's office Wednesday indicates the home is located on 2.86 acres of land in the foothills behind Santa Barbara. It was purchased from magazine photographer Jesse Alexander.

Among Martin's new neighbors are actors Robert Mitchum, Bradford Dillman and Burl Ives.

Bellamy Promoting Book

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Ralph Bellamy has seen a lot in more than 50 years as an actor, and he's a bit worried about what he sees now.

Here this week to promote his book, "When the Smoke Hits the Fan — A Reminiscence of the Theater, Movies and TV," Bellamy said there seems to be a shortage of good actors, writers, directors and producers, and an abundance of promiscuity in today's films.

"You can say what you want about the old moguls," said Bellamy. "They were detestable people as individuals, but they were theater people who had their fingers on what the people wanted."

But Bellamy says he's not really down on the motion picture industry, and thinks some of today's stars will pass the test of time — Jane Fonda for one, who he termed "the best actress we have."

Bellamy, 74, recently finished shooting "Power," a four-hour miniseries for NBC which he thinks will air next fall.

"Don't ask me who else is in it," he said. "They're all a bunch of young people and they're all stars I've never heard of before — but they're all very good."

She Didn't Eat Her Hat

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A woman identified only as Jackie, a member of a group called Theater of Process Theater, bet her fellow dramatists they couldn't sell 48 season tickets for their summer repertory shows in one day.

"What will you do if we do?" they asked.

"I'll run down State Street naked with a watermelon on my head," she answered.

They sold 52 tickets.

She ran down State Street as promised Thursday — three blocks through the heart of downtown Santa Barbara, wearing the cut-out watermelon as a helmet to protect her from the hot midday sun.

Man Celebrates 114th Birthday

TOKYO (AP) — One of the oldest persons on earth, Shigechiyo Izumi, celebrated his 114th birthday today, and his relatives said he doesn't have an ache in his bones.

"He wakes up at 7 in the morning, takes the dog for a walk, meets newlyweds who come to see him everyday and drinks about a half-pint of spirits every night before he goes to sleep at 8," Chiyo Izumi, his nephew's wife said.

She said a ceremony was held by 300 well-wishers at a primary school gymnasium on Tokunoshima Isdand, 50 miles southwest of Tokyo, where Izumi lives, and that "I saw him shooting up his hands, crying 'banzai' (long life).

Izumi is a widower with a long white beard. His record age is attested to by the Guinness Book of World Vecords.

But while the Guinness record book lists Izumi as the oldest person, the Social Security Administration claims the record belongs to Charlie Smith, a resident of a nursing home in Bartow, Fla. Smith is 137, the agency says.

Social Security officials say they have substantiated his age through old slave records but not his date of birth. His birthday was arbitrarily set as July 4. Guinness withdrew its recognition of Smith earlier this year, claiming there was a dispute over his documentation. But the Florida Social Security administrator says he stands by his agency's findings.

Situation Should Please Democratic Liberals

Analysis

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic liberals, one of their leaders once said, are never so happy as when they are unhappy.

By that standard, they should be overjoyed these days. They certainly are unhappy with President Carter.

It was the late Hubert H. Humphrey who made that observation about the emotions of his liberal colleagues. He was one of their heroes for most of his career, with the exception coming when he needed them most, as Democratic presidential nominee.

"Some liberals feel the only way you can be truly liberal is to take a position and then go down fighting with flags flying," Humphrey wrote later. "With that view, you are never quite so happy as when you are unhappy, and you're never quite so unhappy as when you succeed."

Humphrey also observed that it is virtually impossible to discipline or organize liberals because each one tends to go his separate way.

That may be why the liberal establishment is better at adopting resolutions than at organizing campaigns. That also is why Carter's political cadre is not likely to lose much sleep over the resolution adopted by Americans for Democratic Action opposing his renomination and urging Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts to run against him.

The action could hardly have come as a surprise at the White House. Liberal Democrats never wanted Carter to be nominated n the first place.

Not that the ADA didn't try. The organization held a series of conferences in 1975, shopping for a liberal candidate for the 1976 Democratic nomination.

There were plenty of applications — enough to splinter the liberal vote in the presidential primaries. By the time liberal Democrats decided they should go with Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona, Carter was well on his way to the nomination.

The ADA supported Carter in the 1976 election, because he embraced a generally liberal Democratic Party platform, and because the alternative was Gerald R. Ford.

But within months, ADA leaders were accusing Carter of catering to big business and betraying the party platform. So it was hardly a surprise when the organization's 32nd national convention declared recently that:

"President Carter has given us conservative domestic policies and Republican Party economic programs."

This time they voted on it instead of just saying it.

Nor could the White House have been shocked that the ADA declared it could not support Carter's renomination and wants Kennedy instead.

The question is not whether the ADA delegates or the 55,000 members they rpresent would rather have Kennedy. The questionis whether they can ge him.

"If Sen. Kennedy chooses to run, ADA will support him," the resolution said. "Moreover, ADA commits itself to working to help create an irresistable national mandate for his candidacy."

The ADA does not have much of a track record in creating irresistable mandates.

In 1948, its leaders wanted the Democrats to dump Harry S. Truman and draft Dwight D. Eisenhower for the party's presidential nomination. Of course they didn't know at the time that Eisenhower was going to turn out to be a Republican.

Twenty years later, the ADA endorsed Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy for the Democratic nomination over then-President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Humphrey won the Democratic nomination that year, and while the ADA finally endorsed his ticket a month before the election, it did so grudgingly and with an expression of dissatisfaction at his support of Vietnam War policies.

The liberals Kennedy once led as a founder and later president of the ADA didn't do much for him in that campaign.

In formally breaking with Carter, the ADA said it will seek an alternative progressive candidate if Kennedy chooses not to run.

But that would put them back where they were in 1976, without a candidate who can command consensus support. They aren't much taken with California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and there are no other options evident at the moment.

Which brings the liberals to a harsh fact: for all their talk of "bringing down a sitting president," it may be that Carter will weather his season of troubles and beat them again. So the resolution leaves an out.

"Recognizing, however, that there may be no viable alternative, ADA reserves the right to meet to re-examine our position, to review the record of the Democratic Party nominee at that time and to consider endorsing him or her."

In other wrds, if they have to choose between another four years of Carter and a new Republican administration, they'll almost certainly endorse the Democratic ticket.

That's happened before.

Besides, under the Humphrey rating system, that would give the liberals at least another campaign and perhaps four years to enjoy their unhappiness with the Carter administration.

U.S., China Health Care Compared

BOSTON (AP) — China's system of health care, though impressive, could not be adopted in the United States because of drastic differences in the two nations' economies, a study concludes.

The report says China's network of hospitals and clinics is built on the communist nation's tightly planned and controlled economy.

"China's health care system is a reflection of the way China has chosen to organize its national life," wrote Robert J. Blendon of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation in Princeton, N.J.

"It is not, as some have written, a separable phenomenon — something that could be transported across international borders as could be done with a new vaccine or surgical procedure."

The study, published in this week's New England Journal of Medicine, noted that China has made "monumental strides" in controlling infectious diseases, improving nutrition, decreasing infant mortality, lowering the birth rate and bringing health care to rural areas.

"Decisions to minimize imports, ban private economic acitivity, assign university graduates on a compulsory basis, control wages, maintain a large domestic standing army and prevent professions or universities from acquiring independent status led directly to the present system of medical care," the study said.

Blendon wrote that the levels of care given to government workers and farmers "do not, in any sense, meet Western standards of adequacy."

The health system emphasizes simple medical technology and outpatient care instead of sophisticated medical centers.

"Visitors to China will not see stark contrasts such as that between te modern State University of New York-Downstate Hospital on one streetcorner in New York and the overcrowded Kings Count Hospital on the other," he wrote. "Only Kings County is in evidence."

OIL SUIT

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Consumer Association has joined the state of California and other groups in a suit challenging the federal offshore oil policies. "Our present offshore bidding system returns only a trickle of the public's increasing payments for oil buried beneath the public's land back to the federal treasury," association director Jim Boyle said Wednesday.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Baker Makes It Plain

THE CARTER Administration got "the bad news" this week.

Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker says he will vote against the SALT II treaty unless it is amended by the Senate because "it provides a substantial strategic superiority to the Soviet Union."

The Tennessee solon's stance, which has been awaited by both pro and con SALT II groups, could play a significant part in the final outcome of the pact. In effect, Sen. Baker's forthright stand was an answer to both President Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

IN FACT, the solon addressed himself directly to Mr. Brezhnev's warning that any changes in the treaty by the Senate would jeopardize its enactment.

"If the administration does not signal a willingness to consider amendments, and if the Soviet government does not desist in trying to threaten the Senate, then I will work diligently, and I trust, effectively to defeat this treaty," Baker bluntly announced.

Baker's position came one day after Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said he also believes the Soviet Union must be made to understand that the Senate is likely to adopt some amendments, reservations or understandings.

Church's stand, however, was weaker than Baker's. The Idaho man, who has leaned toward ratification, hinted that ways are being sought to change the treaty just enough to improve chances for approval but not enough to cause the Russians to reject it out of hand.

SUCH A POSITION is double-talk, misleading and playing into the Russians' hands.

If changes are needed—and they are—then they should be made forthrightly and without "understandings." There should be no sham to "save face."

We do agree with Church that the Senate would be making a mistake to add a "killer amendment" which it knew was unacceptable to the Soviets ahead of time, letting Moscow kill the treaty. It would be far better to draw up a pact the U.S. can live with, hand it to the Russians and say "this is it."

Much debate lies ahead, much maneuvering. But, Baker's outspoken position helps clear the air where one important man in the Senate stands. Others should do likewise.

A Staff Inflection

They've had a rough time. The good job they do in caring for patients at the teaching hospital has been obscured by all of the billing and financial problems with which the Lubbock County Hospital District has had to wrestle.

Now, with the abrupt departure of executive director Gerald Bosworth and the announcement that the staff will be reduced by about 60, morale will be difficult to maintain.

Chairman Jack Strong did the best he could Tuesday by letting some of those associated with the hospital talk about the good things, but the effort largely was lost in the turmoil of not renewing Bosworth's contract.

That's a shame. The HSCH has the potential to be one of the finest hospitals in the nation and the professional staff has been doing its part to make it so.

CHANGING PITCHERS, to use the analogy that members of the board prefer, won't necessarily solve the Hospital District's problems. It may not even help.

The severest criticism I've ever heard against Bosworth is that maybe he's too nice a man to make the hard decisions necessary to make a teaching hospital's books balance.

On the job only two years, after succeeding Harold Coston, who was pressured into leaving before he could see the HSCH through to accepting its first patients, Bosworth faced what many think is an impossible task.

The teaching hospital for the University of Texas medical school in San Antonio—the next newest in the state after ours—is reliably reported to have much the same immediate financial crisis.

Houston's Ben Taub, operated by the Harris County Hospital District as a teaching facility, is maybe one year away from a crisis.

Dallas' Parkland Hospital, county-owned and operated as the teaching facility for Southwest Medical School, fired its manager of 17 years two weeks ago amid constant worry over finances.

UNLIKE WORLD-FAMOUS Parkland, our Health Sciences Center Hospital was designed and built to avoid the cluttered corridors that staff and patients say plague the Dallas facility.

Unfortunately, we share with Parkland the heritage of confrontation between medical school and hospital policymakers, administrators and staffs.

Families of paying patients at both hospitals have complained about the liberal visitation rules which see the waiting rooms and hallways clogged by relatives of emergency room patients and of newborn babies.

Late and mixed-up billing has been the main complaint here.

Significantly, though, it is very rare to hear any complaint about the quality of care or about the attitude of the nursing staff at Health Sciences Center.

That provides a good foundation on which to build, if it can be maintained until management stability is achieved.

A FINANCIAL turn-around won't be easy to bring about. The Board of Managers is making a beginning by trimming the staff to match the patient load.

The new administrator should be able to solve the billing snafus and tighten cost controls.

But unless Texas Tech and the medical community come off their confrontation mode and get on a cooperation kick with the Hospital District, Lubbock's emerging reputation as a first-class medical center will suffer a tremendous setback.

A closer relationship between the medical school and other hospitals and between the faculty and community physicians is essential for both the medical school and the primary teaching hospital.

If HSCH is to get into the financial pink, it can't be relegated to the role of a charity hospital, nor can it absorb all of the teaching costs imposed on it by the medical school.

NEW BOARD MEMBERS were selected with an eye toward getting the HSCH on a firmer footing and one of them, Dub Rushing, was picked because he had served for years on the Methodist Hospital board and said he had some good ideas about what the HSCH needs.

Now that it has sent the chief administrator packing, the board has assumed full responsibility for resolving the internal and external problems facing HSCH, including its relationships with the medical school, community physicians and other hospitals.

If the board and the other entities will do their jobs, the hospital staff will do its.

Holmes Alexander:

The Lost Art Of Intervention

WASHINGTON—It was inevitable that Sen. Henry (Scoop) Jackson should come out against SALT II—like the man-bitten dog—he'd have made news by doing the reverse. However, much remains to be noted:

Jackson very conspicuously refrained from the linkage of President Carter's name to SALT II. Instead, he spoke invideously of "Mr. Warnke's treaty," although Paul Warnke resigned as chief negotiator some while ago.

Furthermore, Jackson pulled a punch which could have cracked Jimmy Carter's glass jaw—for Jimmy had inferentially applied the word "war-monger" to anybody opposing, even amending, the treaty.

Instead of disabling the President for the stupid goof, Jackson merely gave him the back of the glove by making the administration "imply (that) if we change one comma of Mr. Warnke's treaty (we flirt with) nuclear war."

I DON'T DOUBT that Jackson intends amending, at whatever risk, or killing the treaty, and I am "war-monger" enough to hope he succeeds.

It is well to remember that Jackson, though his distrust of Communist Russia is complete and unqualified, does not feel that way about Communist China. The long list of crimes against human rights that he recited against the USSR would equally apply to the PRC.

I once asked him why he was tolerant of one Red superpower and implacable toward the other. He had no satisfactory answer, especially since he'd just been a guest of the country which intervened against us and turned the Korean Conflict from a punitive expedition to the first of our No Win wars.

To be sure, China is not a present military threat, but Jackson says the same of Soviet Russia. "The odds are there will not be a nuclear war. Rational leaders know that a nuclear exchange is self-defeating."

JACKSON'S FORBODING is that the Kremlin's increasing strategic superiority "will lead to a series of probes to expand Soviet power and weaken the position of the U.S."

But the likelihood of a future threat from Red China, with 950 million for gun fodder, 3.6 million square miles of battlefields and a growing nuclear arsenal, is hardly less realistic, though possibly more remote.

It would be churlish to fault any politician for choosing to agitate over the closer threat and cultivate a discreet silence over the distant one.

A panel of historio-philosophers has admirably faced up to this unfading panorama in a series of articles on "intervention" which fills the entire June 6 edition of "The Nation."

From the days of Columbus and Henry the Navigator, intervention (n. interposition or interference of one state in the affairs of another) has been the way of capitalism and Christianity. It isn't surprising that Communism and Atheism have learned from us after so many centuries.

Well, let us say there is "bad" intervention and "good" intervention. Look how Tanzania intervened to overthrow the unspeakable Idi Amin, and there are many other current examples.

If we are to believe either Jackson or Carter, we had better think less about SALT II and more about a "good" intervention to save our democratic values before Russia and/or China execute what Scoop calls that "series of probes."

We probably don't need any treaty for that purpose. All we need is a conviction of death before dishonor.

'Fill-In-Gap' Insurance Empties Buyer's Pocket

SCARE THEM. Use shock tactics to make your sale. Then depart with the check, leaving the old folks with a Bible marker and a pen.

This was the stunning advice given in a training program for insurance company agents selling Medicare supplementary policies to the aged, according to testimony before Congress earlier this month.

Agents of the National States Insurance Co., it was alleged, were instructed to strike terror into the hearts of the elderly by warning that they were in danger of having their savings wiped out, or losing their homes and being dependent on their children (if any), or ending up penniless in a nursing home.

The agents also were advised to give only a sketchy and overstated description of the benefits of the policy—and to avoid mentioning the limitations. In 24 hours, the agents were assured, the old people would remember only about 20 percent of what was said.

Of the $4 billion the elderly spend each year on health insurance, Pepper estimated more than $1 billion is wasted on policies that are duplicative, unnecessary, of little or no economic value.

"There are policies available that may be genuinely helpful in paying the deductibles and co-payments not paid by Medicare," said Pepper. "A Blue Cross policy, for example, that pays an average of 90 cents back for every $1 paid in premiums can meet a legitimate need.

"But a policy that pays back only 30 cents or 40 cents, as is the case with many Medi-gap policies, is simply an outrageous case of throwing badly needed money away for worthless policies."

At the root of the problem is the sad fact that elderly citizens are frightened, Pepper emphasized.

Americans 65 or older are sick three times as often and three times as long as those under 65 and their health care bills are three times as great. That's why Medicare was enacted in 1965.

Since '66, the dollar amount of the Medicare hospital deductible—the equivalent of the average cost of one day's care that the older person must pay—has risen from $40 to $160.

THE MONTHLY PREMIUM for Part B of Medicare (the doctor bill insurance) has gone up from $3 to $8.20 and will rise another 50 cents starting Sunday, July 1.

Furthermore, fewer and fewer doctors are now using the assignment method of billing for services provided Medicare patients (and committing themselves to accept what Medicare determines is the "reasonable charge.") If a doctor elects NOT to use the assignment method, there is no limit on the fee he can charge.

If the bill turns out to be higher than the Medicare reasonable charge, the patient must make up the difference—in addition to paying the $60 annual deductible and the 20 percent of the reasonable charge that Medicare does not cover. Medicare will reimburse the patient for only 80 percent of the "reasonable" fee.

As Medicare pays less and less of their health bills, more and more elderly citizens have been turning to Medi-gap policies—to try to avoid being wiped out by a catastrophic illness.

A basic solution to the problem would be to fill in the gaps in Medicare coverage. But this would sharply increase the costs of the Medicare program and boost the need for more taxes to finance those costs.

This is simply not feasible now, when Congress and the public are intent on cutting back, not adding to the budget.

SO, LEGISLATION IS being presented both in the House and Senate to provide a system of certification for health insurance policies sold to supplement Medicare. (Details in columns to come.)

If enacted, this legislation could creep a little way toward curbing the heart-breaking exploitation of the elderly.

If there is an older person in your family, you owe it to him and/or her to make sure they get this information.

John D. Lofton:

Soviet Monkey On Our Back

WASHINGTON—As the SALT II debate heats up and it becomes apparent just how bad this pact is for the U.S., many Americans will be asking themselves: How in the world did we allow ourselves to make a deal that leaves us on the short end of the stick?

One of the answers to this important question is: Paul Warnke, chief architect of the Carter administration's SALT II negotiating position.

In 1975, in an article in Foreign Policy magazine titled "Apes on a Treadmill," Warnke laid out his view of the arms race: The Soviets behave like bad guys because they have been taught to behave this way by the U.S. As Warnke put it:

"AS ITS ONLY living superpower model, our words and our actions are admirably calculated to inspire the Soviet Union to spend its substance on military power and weaponry...

"The Soviets are far more apt to emulate than capitulate. We should try a policy of restraint, while calling for matching restraint from the Soviet Union...

"It is time for us to present a worthier model. The strategic arms competition is a logical place to start. The steps we can take in trying to start a process of reciprocal restraint are not drastic."

Have the Soviets followed the lead of the U.S. and restrained themselves militarily? Hardly.

For many years, the U.S. has deployed a fairly constant number of intercontinental ballistic missiles and submarine-launched ballistic missiles and a declining bomber force, and we have shrunk the size of our Navy and put generally decreasing amounts of money into our defense budget.

We have also canceled our B-1 bomber, terminated our Minuteman III production line, refused to deploy the neutron bomb, delayed our Trident submarine-SLBM programs and ICBM and MX missile development, and withdrawn military forces in most areas of the world.

In stark contrast, the Soviets have increased their defense budget to a sum 40 to 60 percent greater than ours and a percentage of their gross national product almost three times that of the U.S.

SINCE WE SIGNED the SALT I agreement with the Soviets in 1972, one of the goals of which was to curb the growth of strategic offensive weapons, the Soviets have:

— Developed four new generations of ICBMs, and they are working on a fifth;

— Developed 11 new modifications for their existing ICBMs;

— Developed and deployed three new generations of SLBMs;

— Deployed four new types of nuclear submarines;

— Deployed a new penetrator bomber, the Backfire, which can deliver nuclear weapons on targets in the U.S.;

— Continued large-scale production of tanks, artillery, tactical aircraft, naval vessels, etc., at levels far above those of the U.S.

— Made major investments in war-fighting, protection and training programs in biochemical warfare;

— Spent $2 billion annually on civil defense and industrial defense programs, and — Invested heavily in anti-bomber defenses (which the U.S. lacks) and in anti-ballistic missile defense research and development.

SO MUCH FOR the idea that, if we restrain ourselves, the Soviets will "ape" us. Their attitude has clearly been one of monkey-see-monkey-don't-do.

In his article, Warnke also praised detente as being based on the "wholesome realization" by the U.S. and the Soviet Union that their direct military intervention in local conflicts "would create unacceptable risks."

Well, somebody forgot to tell the Soviets this. Since detente began, the Soviets:

— In 1973, knew about in advance and encouraged the Yom Kippur attack on Israel;

— In 1975, violated the Paris Peace Accord by militarily supplying and sanctioning the all-out North Vietnamese offensive against South Vietnam;

— Also in 1975, militarily supplied and egged-on the Cuban infantry in their war in Angola;

— IN 1976, SENT their own soldiers to fight in Ethiopia and also supplied Cuban troops there;

— In 1978, backed the North Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia, and — This year helped Cuban soldiers fight in South Yemen, North Yemen and Oman.

Paul Warnke has been quoted as saying that the SALT II treaty is "a hell of a good deal" for the U.S. But it isn't. It's a lousy deal.

The massive Soviet military buildup during the past decade has made a monkey out of Warnke and his apes-on-a-treadmill thesis. I don't think, however, that the U.S. Senate is going to be so easily fooled. In fact, I'd bet on it.

Seaway Called Too Successful

OTTAWA (UPI) — The 2,342-mile St. Lawrence Seaway, the main artery to the industrial heartland of North America, celebrates its 20th anniversary this week amid fears that it is becoming too successful.

"Right now we're 17 percent ahead of last year and that's way too much," St. Lawrence Seaway Authority president Paul Normandeau said of figures that point to another record year.

"It's speeding up on us and frankly it's worrisome because, obviously, our facilities are going to become congested much sooner than anticipated," he said. "We cannot see that we are going to remain at that pace — it's way too much."

The international project, which took five years to complete, was opened June 26, 1959, by then U.S. President Dwight Eisenhower and Queen Elizabeth II in a ceremony on the St. Lawrence River that opened the interior of North America to the ships of the world for the first time.

As it enters its third decade, the seaway system of lakes, rivers and locks to lift ships 602 feet to Lake Superior is carrying more than planners expected — but less than some early promoters predicted.

"The proponents in the U.S. Were forever boosting the seaway by saying all these ports on the Great Lakes would become ocean ports, great ports, other Rotterdams," Normandeau said. "This did not happen."

Just as the dream of centuries was finally realized, the container revolution struck. The convenience and security of shipping in large metal containers, combined with the speed of trucks from ocean ports, killed any hope of the seaway becoming a major artery for manufactured goods.

"This revolution is really what prevented that dream of the port operators becoming reality." But the enthusiastic Normandeau quickly added that, "Instead the proponents of the seaway had never dreamt of the huge quantities of grain that are being exported and these volumes of iron ore.

"The seaway is the ideal pipeline for these huge quanties of grain, iron ore, coal, all of these bulk commodities of a fairly low value," he said. "Whether they move slow or fast has not much bearing."

The system, the seven locks between Montreal and Lake Ontario opened in 1959, the Welland Canal bypassing Niagara Falls opened in 1932 and the locks making the short step from Lake Huron to Lake Superior, were planned for an annual capacity of about 45 million metric tons.

"The curse is that the seaway is handling well over 60 million metric tons now. It's a mountain," Normandeau said. "Mind you, there will be a physical limit. I dare say it will be around 100 million tons."

That figure should not be reached in this century, he said. But that is why the increase in tonnage, rising despite increased tolls that some feared would discourage traffic, has him both pleased and worried.

Today's huge ships were unheard-of in the 1950s. Already fragile 1,000-foot lake freighters built to ply the lakes above Niagara Falls are captives, unable to fit through locks built for 1959's 730-foot ships.

Any major plans to change seaway facilities — especially the aging Welland Canal — are a long way off, despite the up to $9,000 a day that delays caused by congestion would cost shipping companies.

At today's prices, replacing the $500 million worth of work done in the St. Lawrence River section between Montreal and Lake Ontario would cost about $3 billion, Normandeau said. Replacing the Welland Canal, the system's main bottleneck, would cost about the same.

Instead, the staffs headed by Normandeau and his Washington counterpart, David Oberlin, are looking for ways to get more use of what is already there.

Normandeau was departing to check an experiment to speed up traffic on the Welland Canal. Special "shunters will grab the bow and stern of freighters and guide them quickly through the system, increasing traffic by as much as 20 percent.

Experiments in fighting ice are underway to increase the shipping season on the system that already functions long after the pleasure boaters have stored their craft for the winter.

"We have extended the season by one month since the opening in 1959, so we are now operating a full 8½ months," Normandeau said. "And we are looking at ways of extending it further but there are risks."

As well as unknown environmental changes, freed chunks of ice could damage the turbines of the electrical generators that are just as important to the economy as the cheap transportation.

"We think we are going to overcome these risks and we think we will eventually go to 9½ months," Normandeau said. "W can also see 11 months but that will require very substantial investment."

The rates of alternatives makes the seaway's future look secure, whether 9- or 11-month seasons. Moving the grain that flows out of the west of both Canada and the United States costs only about half by the seaway and rising energy costs should help even more.

Businessmen To Convert Nixon Estate

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Much of the estate Richard Nixon used as his Western White House will be converted into single-family homes if officials approve, say the three men who bought the property.

The three Orange County businessmen — Donald Koll, George Argyros and Nixon-friend Gavin Herbert — acknowledged this week they had bought the ex-president's estate. The sale was announced last month, but the buyers' names were not disclosed.

The three said 5.9 acres of the lushly landscaped estate where Nixon's old house — La Casa Pacifica — stands would be kept intact and "available for private residency."

But the rest of the 28 acres would go for single family dwellings if the City Council and the California Coastal Commission approve, the buyers said.

They did not disclose a purchase price for the estate, which was owned by the Nixons and Robert Abplanalp, a close friend. They said deal would be closed "within a year."

Nixon sold the property despite his 1973 pledge to eventually donate it to the public. It was announced that he and Mrs. Nixon would move into a $650,000 home in the closely guarded community next door, Cyprus Shore.

In announcing the sale last month, Nixon spokesman Jack Brennan said the government was apparently not interested in having the place.

Nixon bought La Casa Pacifica, known also as the Cotton estate, in 1969 during the first year of his presidency. Questions were raised as to the ownership of the land and the fairness of the assessed valuation assigned to it for tax purposes.

In addition, controversy arose over millions of dollars worth of improvements added to the estate, which the Secret Service and the General Services Administration said were necessary for presidential security.

System Improves Gasoline Mileage

BORGER (UPI) — Big car owners feeling the energy squeeze take heart: Cadillac owner Raymond Dietz reports he's come up with a way to stretch each gallon at least five miles more.

Dietz, 65, says he's already increased his Caddy's mileage from 10.5 miles per gallon to 18.3 with his "water burner system" and hopes to get it up to 20 mpg.

Ditz, a tax accountant whose hobby is automobiles, says his system has more than one advantage.

"It not only saves gas, it saves the motor and reduces pollution," he says.

He said his water burner system evolved from his own desire to keep his Caddy on the road.

"I don't like to tear anything up, I like to fix things, improve on them. I'm just an old second-generation German.

"I have a '67 Cadillac and it only has 47,000 miles and when this gas starts getting up to $1 a gallon, I started trying to figure out some way to increase mileage."

The first way he tried in January was a water injector system.

"Water injectors aren't anything new, they've been on the market since World War II," he said. "They've never been successful because they go down through the carburetor, and naturally you still are sucking just as much air and gas as you were before. It helps a little with power and carbon, but not on the gas."

So Dietz decided to try running the water through the exhaust system, the temperature of which can reach 1,000 degrees.

"It turned the water into gaseous vapor. When it enters the car, the gaseous vapor goes beneath the carburetor. I've learned that for every gallon of water you can save one gallon of gas. And the motor runs perfect."

Dietz still is working on the system, but the latest version involves a ⅜-inch hole in the manifold. A valve is connected to a foot feed, which adjusts the amount of air and water that goes through the exhaust system.

The system involves installation of a 10-gallon water tank in the trunk, with a hose attached to a 2-gallon tank under the hood with a float in it so "it keeps a gallon and a half in it all the time."

Water is sucked out of the little tank through a foot or dashboard valve, goes through a turbine to mix it with air and then moves through three copper tubes attached to the exhaust, where it is heated before it runs back through the system and reduces by about 50 percent the amount of gas and water that goes through the carburetor.

"I know this to be a fact, you only get 25 percent efficiency out of a gallon of gas. The other 75 percent goes to the heat of the radiator, the heat of the exhaust and the power of the exhaust."

But Dietz says his system will increase the efficiency rate, as well as reduce pollution in a car by 65 percent and remove carbon from the motor system.

"Carbon is what wears your motor out, not the driving," he says. "I would say on a new car, with the system, you could go 150,000 miles without even putting a new set of rings in it ... maybe more if you put good oil in it."

Dietz says he's already received a patent on his system, and the mayor of this Panhandle town, City Commission and Chamber of Commerce have offered him assistance in obtaining an energy grant because they'd like to see him open a factory to produce his system. But Dietz says he'd like to wait until he can increase the mix to 10-10 before opening a plant to mass produce the system.

He figures the cost of the system, including a 10-gallon tank in the trunk and installation of the entire thing, would be about $250. In the winter, he says, motorists could add grain alcohol to the water to prevent freezing.

"But even at $250, there's a lot of people that have pre-1975 cars — '75 and up use unleaded gas. Anyone with a '74 down, has a nice car and isn't ready to buy a new one except to get more economy, with the gas burner could gain 5 mpg.

"They could recover it fast, not having to use unleaded gas which is from 5 to 10 cents higher than regular."

He says he hopes someday to expand his system so it uses no gasoline — just water and alcohol. Such a mixture, he says, would stretch the mileage even more.

But in the meantime, he says his system primarily would benefit larger, pre-1975 cars since the mileage savings wouldn't be as dramatic for smaller cars.

"I believe that if I could get this tested by the government, it reduces pollution so much you wouldn't have to use unleaded gas even in these later model cars because the air comes out of that exhaust real clean," he added, however.

Dietz has been around cars since he was 4 and "worked with my daddy in his shop." He is no stranger to patents, having obtained three on a "service station in a truck" with gas pumps and tanks all hooked up to the truck's motor. He sold the rights to the "mobile service station" in 1974 and prototypes now are being used in Cincinnatti, Ohio, to service cars of high-rise office employees while they are at work.

Egypt announced the reopening of the Suez Canal to international shipping in 1975. The canal had been closed by the Arab-Israeli war of June 1967.

Columnist Visits World's Largest Flower Auction

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press Writer

The world's largest flower-auction center, a mass of color, is so big that some employees travel by bicycle within the structure and tractors haul carloads of blooms in miniature railroad fashion.

Overall, the United Aalsmeer Flower Auction in Holland covers 104 acres, including 60 acres under a single roof. Thousands of carts in organized confusion deliver cut flowers and plants from the sellers to the auction rooms,then to the exporters for shipment around the world. Each day, more than 3,700 growers bring their products to Aalsmeer where 2,600 registered buyers sek their wares. Many of the flowers are grown in the miles of greenhouses in Aalsmeer and surrounding communities; some come from much further distances.

More than 80 percent of the products are sold for export. In 1977, sales by the cooperative venture totaled about 1.7 billion cut flowers and about 80 million potted plants. The co-op takes a commission of one percent for its expenses. In 1978, the auction reports, there was a turnover of 540 million guilders on cut flowers and 160 million guilders on potted plants. The current rate of exchange is approximately two guilders per $1 of U.S. currency.

The auction begins daily, except Sunday, at 7 a.m., and ends about 11:30 a.m. Within a few hours, generally the same afternoon, the flowers are en route to their destinations by air, truck or railroad.

There are five auction rooms at the center, each containing 308 seats for buyers. The auctioneer is seated in front below the sloping tiers of seats. An aide operates a computerized clock that registers bids. As the flowers appear through the rear doors on carts moving on a conveyer track, an attendant picks up one bunch from the cart and holds it aloft. The bidding — by exporters, shopkeepers and wholesalers — then begins.

Early in the morning, growers bring their flowers and plants to the auction site. There is a specific location for every kind of flower: roses, carnations, orchids, cut amaryllis, gerbera in glowing colors, tulips and narcissus, of course many others.

The growers put their flowers on carts with a delivery note. The loaded carts are stored in an area in front of the auction hall awaiting the start. All flowers have been inspected and the carts given a number and moved into the auction hall.

The auctioneer announces the name of the nursery-producer, the names of the flowers and comments on the quality.

For the benefit of the 200,000 visitors who coe each year to watch the proceedings, there is a gallery, or walkway, which runs down about two thirds of the building from its front, then arcs back in horseshoe fashion. On the vast floor are workers walking, on bicycles, or aboard tractors hauling a dozen carts of flowers.

It takes about half an ahour to travel the walkway, with brief stops to look again and again at the array of color below. Many of the varieties of flowers, tightly packaged, stand upright in plastic bins, awaiting loading on trucks ready to start them on their trips to the flower stands of a large part of the world.

West Germany is the biggest customer. Last year it took 84 percent of the cut flowers and 58 percent of the potted plants; Switzerland and France each bought four percent and France seven percent.

AT&T Passes Lofty Mark

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in 1978 became the first private firm in the country to surpass $100 billion in assets, Fortune magazine said in its report on the 50 largest non-industrial companies.

The current edition of Fortune, issued Wednesday, said that among non-industrial firms, AT&T is the nation's biggest private company in every respect except revenues.

In fact, the magazine noted, many analysts even rank it among the industrial giants, and Dow Jones includes AT&T Stock with its industrials.

In 1978, AT&T had $103.3 billion in assets, $41 billion in operating revenues, $5.3 billion in net income and 984,044 employees. Its stock is the most widely held in the nation, with nearly 3 million shareowners.

General Motors Corp., the No. 1 company on the 1978 "Fortune 500" industrial list, had assets of $30.6 billion, sales of $63.2 billion, a net income of $3.5 billion and 839,000 employees in 1978.

BankAmerica Corp. of San Francisco easily stayed No. 1 among commercial banks. With assets of $95 billion it ranked second to AT&T among U.S. non-industrial firms. The Prudential Insurance Co. of Newark, N.J., ranked first in the insurance group and third overall among non-industrials with assets of $50 billion.

Czech Dissidents Face August Trial

VIENNA (AP) — Dissident sources here say there are indications in Prague that 10 members of the Czechoslovakian Charter 77 human rights group may be tried in August. The trials would coincide with the anniversary of the 1968 Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia, they said.

The sources said Czechoslovakian Communist authorities were trying to silence the leadership of the group by intimidating their supporters, linking the trial to the August 21, 1968 invasion that ended a liberal era in Czechoslovakia.

The 10 group members were arrested May 29 on charges of subversion and cooperation with foreign countries in carrying out such subversion. Sentences would range from three to 10 years.

Rat Population Below Federal Grant Level

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A recent investigation for possible rat infestation in an East Lubbock neighborhood shows the area to have a rodent population well below the six percent infestation level necessary for federal grant funds.

A study of the Cherry Point area in northeast Lubbock from May 9 to June 22 confirmed the presence of rats at 23 out of a total of 1375 premises — an infestation rate of only 1.7 percent.

Initiated by the City of Lubbock to identify and destroy rat harborages, the Cherry Point study is the first result of a project geared towards Community Block Grant target areas in the city.

Under a one-year Community Development grant that began in April, Jim Montgomery, a zoologist, plans to examine much of East Lubbock, the Arnett-Benson area, the Overton neighborhood and isolated portions of southwest Lubbock.

Montgomery said Thursday he is concerned strictly with rats. "A mouse could carry a disease, but it is the rat that is difficult to control," he said.

Concern over rodents as carriers of disease has increased since several cases of the plague were diagnosed this spring in New Mexico. Montgomery said that although the plague has surfaced from time to time among wild rodents in the western tier counties of Texas, "it has not affected Lubbock to my knowledge."

Millard Bruce, Lubbock Health Department environmental health coordinator, said he did not believe the plague had been detected east of Brownfield, but added that it is "probable" Lubbock rats have spread salmonellosis and leptospirosis.

Salmonellosis is an acute gastroenteritis that is generally classed as food poisoning and is spread through food contaminated with rat and mouse feces. Leptospirosis is a mild to severe infection, seldom fatal, that is caused by infected rodent urine entering either mucous membranes or small cuts or abrasions of the skin.

City health department officials were interested in the Cherry Point findings because a brief department investigation of rat levels early this year raised fears of much greater infestation.

Those investigations, performed Jan. 23 to 25 along about 113 blocks in East Lubbock and the Arnett-Benson area, confirmed the presence of rats at 24 of 305 premises thoroughly inspected — an infestation rate of 7.9 percent.

However, since federal guidelines stipulate a six percent infestation level must be discovered over at least a 200-block area, the health department was ineligible to apply for funding.

Based on the Cherry Point study, Montgomery said certain conditions tend to attract rats. "As far as residential areas," he said, "the rats are found where there is a permanent food source and water source and, secondarily, where there is a harborage. Where we have seen them, usually they are associated with chickens or around dogs."

The study states that 65.2 percent of the confirmed rat harborages were on premises either containing chickens or adjacent to premises containing chickens. Or put another way, 56.2 percent of the premises containing chickens had confirmed rat harborages.

Although the Community Development project will be confined to selected neighborhoods, Montgomery stressed that rats are found throughout the city.

"The rats are not restricted to East Lubbock," he said. "We have seen them in the more expensive parts of town."

He said the Norway or brown rat is the common species found in Lubbock, adding that this rodent lives in burrows dug along fences and walls or around and under dog houses, chicken coops and garbage dumpsters. Throughout the city dog houses and garbage dumpsters are prevalent, and Montgomery cited open dumpsters as a particular problem.

With the identification of the rat population in the Cherry Point area completed, Montgomery said he was now beginning to apply a relatively mild rat poison to the harborages. He said a rat must eat one-third of its body weight of the poison to be killed, with the process normally requiring several days.

At maturity, the Norway rat has a head and body length of 7 to 10 inches, a tail length of 5 to 8 inches and a weight of 7 to 10 ounces.

Stolen Credit Card Aids Murder Probe

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A credit card, stolen from a purse in Lubbock May 19, was in the possession of a group of people who attacked and killed a man in Houston June 13, according to a Houston policeman.

Homicide Det. Dan McAnulty, who arrived in Lubbock Wednesday to continue his investigation into the stabbing death, said that tracing down the stolen Master Charge credit card has brought good leads in the case, but that none of the suspects are thought to be from Lubbock.

The credit card reportedly was stolen from the purse of a Methodist Hospital nurse while she was at work May 19.

A group of five men and two women had been using the card to charge drinks the night they allegedly knifed to death David Murrell Cowick, 23, of Houston, McAnulty said.

The detective said Houston police were told that Cowick confronted the group in front of a club in the southwest part of Houston after they had been using obscene language in front of the dead man's girlfriend.

McAnulty said the group turned on Cowick, one of them stabbing him 12 times. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

Houston police traced the license plate number which was on several of the stolen credit card's receipts, and found it belonged to a Pontiac registered in Lubbock.

Assisted by Lubbock Det. J.R. Ashmore, McAnulty questioned a man here who reportedly owned the car and was told the vehicle had been sold to an auto sales business prior to June 13.

After contacting that business, McAnulty and Ashmore located the vehicle in front of a house on the Idalou Highway. The detectives were told by the resident that his daughter had been using the car.

The daughter told the officers she and several of her friends had used the credit card while on a trip to Lufkin. McAnulty was told Thursday night that upon arriving back in Lubbock, one of the woman's friends gave the card to one of his cousins who came from Lubbock, but who had lived in Houston about four years.

The description of that man matched that of one of the persons McAnulty said he is looking for in connection with the murder.

"We don't know if this man was the one doing the stabbing, but we think he was there (at the club)," McAnulty said. The detective, armed with new information in the case, was scheduled to fly back to Houston today.

No arrests had been made in connection with the murder by late this morning.

Judge Allows Reduction In Accused Man's Bond

Judge John McFall this morning reduced bond for accused murderer Charles Walter Hill from $250,000 to $50,000.

During the 30-minute hearing in McFall's 237th District Court, the 29-year-old Hill took the stand and told the judge there was "no way" either he or his family could raise the percentage of the $250,000 bond needed for him to be released from jail.

Hill, of 3604 Zenith Ave., was arrested by sheriff's deputies March 29 in connection with the April 1, 1978, murder of Robert Rios Rivera.

Hill's half-brother, Gary Lynn Vester, was convicted of the murder April 5 and sentenced to a 50-year prison term.

At this morning's hearing, under questioning from his attorney, Tom Sawyer, Hill told the court he has never been convicted of anything but traffic violations and Class C misdemeanors.

Hill added that at the time of his arrest, almost a year after Rivera was shot to death in a field east of Lubbock, his employer at Commercial Metal indicated that if Hill were released, all efforts to rehire him would be made.

Hill also told the judge if bond was reduced and he was able to get out of jail, he would return to his Zenith Avenue residence, where he lives with his mother.

When asked by Sawyer if he had ever failed to appear in court on other charges, Hill responded, "No."

The defense also called Robert E. Pickle, manager of Triple A Bail Bonds, who testified that he knew of no bondsman who would post the $250,000 original bond.

Rick Howell, felony division chief for the criminal district attorney's office, called arresting officer Deputy Dean Bohannon to the stand to recount the details of Rivera's murder and the alleged rape of Rivera's female companion.

Bohannon also described for the court the 23-year-old woman's identification of Hill the day he was arrested.

City Shooting Suspect Released

A 34-year-old Lubbock woman was released Thursday afternoon from Lubbock County Jail on a personal recognizance bond in connection with the shooting death of Wanda Fay Parson, 26, of 1704 Vanda Ave.

Miss Parson was pronounced dead shortly before 1 a.m. Thursday on arrival at West Texas Hospital. She suffered a .22-caliber bullet wound near the left shoulder blade.

The shooting suspect was arrested after the incident on a count of voluntary manslaughter.

The case will be presented to the grand jury the second week in July, a spokesman for the Lubbock County District Attorney's Office said Thursday.

Another victim in the apparent domestic quarrel was Belvin Thomas, 43, of 2318 E. 15th St. He suffered stab wounds to the chest and arm during the altercation, which erupted about 12:15 a.m. Thursday.

Paternity Suit Filed By Man

CHICAGO (UPI) — In what may be the first case of its kind, a man has filed a paternity suit against a woman.

The man filed suit in Cook County Circuit Court in an attempt to prove he is the father of a child born to his former girlfriend, now married to another man. The man who filed suit seeks visitation rights for the child.

Judge Reginald J. Holzer, who is hearing the case, joined in a request by all parties that the litigants not be identified.

The suit said the woman made it clear during pregnancy that her former boyfriend was the father and she often allowed him to visit the child, who is now 5 years old.

The plaintiff said he continued his sexual relationship with the woman, who was then married to another man, for four years after the child was born. But last year the mother refused to allow the man to see the child any longer.

Holzer rejected arguments by the mother's lawyer that paternity laws apply only to women and the man had no right to sue.

The judge ordered the plaintiff to take a blood test today to determine if he could be the father of the child. Blood tests can determine if a man is not the father of a child, but cannot determine if he actually is the father.

DPS Predicts 13 To Die

Predicting that 13 persons will lose their lives in traffic accidents during the July Fourth holiday in the 60-county area of Region 5, the Texas Department of Public Safety will be on full alert to promote defensive driving.

Operation Motorcide will be in effect from 6 p.m. Tuesday to midnight Wednesday when holiday traffic is expected to be the heaviest.

"Defensive driving is driving to prevent accidents in spite of incorrect actions of others and adverse conditions," commented Maj. C.W. Bell, regional commander.

Bell warned motorists to wear seat belts at all times, adding that a person has a better chance of surviving a violent crash if he remains in the vehicle.

"We in this region hope to have the safest Fourth of July on record this year," Bell said. "The American public are the people this celebration is for, and what better way to celebrate than by keeping alive."

Stafford To Be Arraigned On Five Additional Murder Counts

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Roger Dale Stafford will be arraigned Monday on five additional first-degree murder counts in the worst mass murder in Oklahoma history.

The five murder counts were filed Thursday against Stafford, who's now charged with killing all six Oklahoma City Sirloin Stockade steakhouse workers slain during a $1,500 robbery last July 16.

Oklahoma County District Attorney Andrew Coats said if he is unable to reach agreement with Stafford attorney Garvin Isaacs to hold a preliminary hearing in mid July, he will ask a judge Monday to order Stafford's preliminary hearing to begin in July.

Coats said he wants the case to go to trial in September.

Stafford was charged March 11 with the murder of one of the steakhouse workers, Terri M. Horst, 15. After a nationwide manhunt, he was arrested without resistance March 13 at a Chicago YMCA.

Coats filed the additional murder counts against the 27-year-old Alabama drifter after the Oklahoma Court of Criminal Appeals turned down a request Thursday by Stafford attorneys to rehear their request for access to certain prosecution evidence.

The attorneys had sought access to evidence that might tend to show Stafford is innocent or might reduce his punishment, and to investigative data they contended were not protected by provisions of state law.

The appeals court earlier refused to give the defense access to the evidence. By refusing to rehear arguments in the matter, the court let its earlier decision stand.

Coats said he had been waiting for the appeals court decision before filing the additional murder counts.

He said Stafford was charged with all six killings so "a jury can get a full picture of what went on."

Investigators have said repeatedly they believe Stafford and his late brother, Harold, 29, were responsible for all six murders at the Sirloin Stockade restaurant almost exactly a year ago. Harold Stafford was killed in a motorcycle accident in Tulsa six days after the steakhouse bloodbath.

The charges filed Thursday charge Stafford with first-degree murder in the deaths of steakhouse employees Anthony Tew, 17; David Salsman, 15; David Lindsey, 17; Isaac Freeman, 56; and Louis Zacarias, 43. All the victims were from the Oklahoma City area.

The Stafford brothers also are the prime suspects in the murders of the three members of the Melvin Lorenz family of San Antonio, whose bodies were found along Interstate 35 near Purcell on June 22, 1978, said Cleveland County District Attorney Kay Huff.

Mrs. Huff said she has been waiting to see what happens in the steakhouse murder case before she decides if she will file charges against Stafford in the Lorenz murders.

Stafford pleaded innocent to the Horst murder charge at his arraignment March 17. He was sent to Eastern State Hospital at Vinita, where he underwent 26 days of mental and physical examinations before doctors ruled he was sane and able to stand trial.

In addition, Stafford is considered the only suspect in the killing of a McDonald's restaurant employee, 19-year-old Jimmy Berry, in Muscle Shoals, Ala., in 1974, said Muscle Shoals Police Chief Ronald Gene Bowling. He has not been charged in the case, however.

Coats said he hopes Stafford's preliminary hearing — held to determine if Stafford must stand trial on the murder counts — will last "two or three days at the maximum."

But the prosecutor said he expects Stafford attorney Isaacs to use the preliminary as a vehicle for discovering as much prosecution evidence as possible.

Isaacs used that tactic at the preliminary hearing of the late Gene Leroy Hart, who was charged and recently found innocent in the murders of three Girl Scouts at an eastern Oklahoma summer camp.

The month-long preliminary hearing in the Hart case was one of the longest in state history.

Bundy's Defense Lawyers Ask For Second Change Of Venue

MIAMI (AP) — Spurred by a report of frightened jurors, Theodore Bundy's lawyers say his trial must be moved a second time to insure fair judgment for the man accused of murdering two sorority sisters.

With no jury seated after four days of questioning, Bundy's defense team formally petitioned Thursday night to have the trial relocated.

"Massive, pervasive, prejudicial publicity" makes fairness impossible in Miami, they said. "The general state of mind of the inhabitants of this community is so infected by knowledge of the incident that jurors could not possibly put the matter out of their minds."

That is pretty much what the defense argued successfully in having the trial removed from Tallahassee, Fla., earlier this month.

Dade County Circuit Judge Edward Cowart didn't say when he'd consider the motion but defense lawyers said they expected him to hear arguments on it today.

Thursday's marathon session ended with 11 jurors tentatively seated and each side with a half-dozen challenges remaining.

Cowart has been determined all week to seat a jury in Miami. But questioning of jury prospects here has made it clear people in Miami have heard plenty about the neat, curly haired defendant who has been a prime news subject from Washington to Florida.

Bundy grew up in Tacoma, Wash. He was convicted of a Utah kidnapping attempt, charged in a Colorado murder, escaped jail there and showed up in Florida.

Here he's charged with murdering Chi Omega sisters Lisa Levy and Margaret Bowman at Florida State University. He is also accused of killing 12-year-old Kimberly Leach of Lake City.

Overall, only eight of 60 jurors called in four days said they'd never heard of Bundy.

Evelyn Rosillo, a lawyer's daughter, said more than small talk had been going on as about 50 potential jurors waited in an off-court room earlier in the week. When Bundy's name came up, she said, women became fearful.

"I remember one person saying, 'He's guilty already,'" she told Cowart. "Everybody's scared. It was like the word 'Bundy' alone would scare you.

"It was among the women ... some were scared that if they were on the jury, that Mr. Bundy might have people on the outside that would get them."

Defense attorney Margaret Good asked the judge to reject any jurors who might have been exposed to such talk. That could cover 50 or more, including some already tentatively on the trial panel.

Appeals Court Orders Citizenship Revoked

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Feodor Fedorenko's wartime deeds as a Nazi concentration camp guard, and his secrecy about them in applying for entry to the United States, have prompted a federal appeals court to order his citizenship revoked.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals issued the revocation order Thursday, reversing an opinion of U.S. District Judge Norman C. Roettger Jr. of Miami.

Fedorenko, 72, was a Russian soldier in World War II when he was captured by the Germans in 1941. He served as an armed guard at the Treblinka, Poland, concentration camp until the end of the war.

He has lived in the United States since 1949.

But the government sought to cancel his citizenship when it learned his application for a visa was falsified and his association with the Germans was concealed. Fedorenko stated in the application that he was a farmer and forced laborer for the Germans.

"The defendant's assertion before the district court that his guard service was involuntary comes 30 years too late," the 5th Circuit said.

Fund Gives Kids Some Fresh Air

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Susan Kiernan stood in the parking lot, her baby boy propped up on one arm. She watched knowingly as the inner city kids from New York gingerly stepped off the bus.

"I was a Fresh Air kid," the waitress and mother of two said with some measure of pride. "I was one of 13 children, living in Queens. I had never been out of the city."

During that summer 17 years ago, Susan — then a third grader — went to live with a family in Pennsylvania where "the leaves tasted just like teaberry" and "we drank water right from the river."

On Wednesday, two charter buses from Manhattan rattled into the bumpy Concord, N.H., Parking lot and released 53 nervous youngsters.

As their names were read over a bullhorn, the New Yorkers, tiny suitcases in hand, were quickly gobbled up by the New Hampshire families who will care for and feed them the next two weeks.

It's all part of the Fresh Air Fund, a program founded 102 years ago by Dr. H.B. White of Brooklyn.

White, concerned about the ill health of some of New York's youth, arranged to have the kids sent to farms where they could get some fresh air.

"There were only nine in this first party — all weak from want and disease, perhaps from both — consumption, crippled, thin and prematurely old, both boys and girls," Lippincott's magazine wrote about White's first adventure, years later in its August 1881 edition.

Things have changed a lot during the past century.

The kids who came to Concord Wednesday and the hundreds more who will visit other Northeast communities this summer are required to undergo extensive physical exams.

About half the kids, aged 5 to 13, had come to New Hampshire last summer. There was a lot of the hugging, squeezing and kissing that goes along with sweet reunions.

One Fresh Air orgnaizer, Teresa Stone of Pembroke, looked on.

"For every kid that makes it out here, there's 100 who don't," she said wistfully.

"The people would rather have the younger ones, which is kind of a shame because the older ones need this, too," added Denise Clattenburg, another organizer from Concord.

"The only way we get the older ones is to get families to re-invite them," she said.

Michael Hernandez, 9, was one of the lucky ones. Dave Hill, a wiry, suntanned man from Hillsboro who has two boys of his own, had written Michael asking him to come back and join his family again this summer.

Peering out from under a baseball cap, Michael, a Yankee fan, was asked if he could find a way to get along with Hill's boys, who as New Englanders are diehard Boston Red Sox fans.

There was a sheepdog grin and a nod of the head. That told it all.

Susan Kiernan watched from the sidelines. She is a "bank parent," which means she would have gotten one of the New York children if there had been any left over. There weren't.

She will have another chance in a couple of weeks when a second bunch of Big Apple kids is due to come to Concord.

"I remember when I went to Pennsylvania," recalled Mrs. Kiernan, her 10-month-old boy in her arms and 5-year-old daughter by her side.

"They sent me into the shower and, being one of 13 kids in Queens, I had never taken a shower before," she said with a big smile. "I didn't know whether to be embarrassed or surprised. I think I was both."

"We exchange Christmas cards to this day," Mrs. Kiernan said of her Pennsylvania family. "I'll never forget that summer. There was no other way out of the city."

Study Supports Theory Of Conceptions

BOSTON (AP) — The odds of having a baby boy instead of a girl increase greatly if couples conceive their child late in the woman's menstrual cycle, a study shows.

The research disclosed that when couples have sex two days after ovulation, which occurs midway in the monthly cycle, two-thirds of the children are boys.

The research answers a question that has puzzled philosopers and physicians for centuries — whether the time of intercourse affects the sex of the child.

"The study provides strong confirmation for the theory that variations in sex proportion are associated with conceptions occurring on different days of the menstrual cycles," the report said.

However, the researchers warned that limiting sex to late in the cycle may also heighten the risk of genetic malformations in the newborn.

"Couples should be cautioned against attempting to conceive a boy by delaying intercourse until after ovulation, until further research has established whether delayed fertilization causes birth defects," the study said.

Delayed conception has been shown to cause birth defects in some animals, but there is no firm proof that this also happens in humans.

The study was conducted by Susan Harlap at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, and was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Availability Of Caviar Increases

BANDAR ANZALI, Iran (AP) — Iran's anti-royalist revolution has brought caviar, that most aristocratic of delicacies, within reach of Iranian proletariats for the first time in years.

But the new Islamic revolutionary government is just as anxious as deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to impose tight production limits.

Before the revolution caviar used to be sold in this Caspian-sea port known as the world's caviar capital for a price set by a state monopoly of about $100 per kilo. A kilo is 2.2 pounds.

Now it is readily available, though illegally, at a black market price frequently less than $10 per kilo.

This has come about because the state fisheries and caviar monopoly has all but collapsed in the confusion following the revolution.

The monopoly is the only organization allowed to fish for sturgeon — a fish whose tiny black eggs are known as caviar — and to market the precious roe. The sturgeon of the slightly salty, blue-green, landlocked Caspian produce the most coveted caviar in the world.

The virtual dissolution of Iran's police and security forces has provided local fishermen with a golden opportunity to fish for sturgeon. A single grown sturgeon can weigh several hundred pounds and net a poaching fishermen up to $1,500, more than a month's wages.

Fishmongers, both here and all along the Iranian-Caspian coast, openly display freshly cut sturgeon, a delicious fish, in the teeming bazaars of the coastal towns, or at stalls along the busy highways leading to the beach resorts. Caviar, kept in special round tins, is produced on request from ice-boxes, where it must be kept to prevent it from going bad.

"The poachers are a serious threat to the very preservation of sturgeon, for such continued overfishing may lead to the species extinction in the Caspian," warned Abbas Keshavarz, who as director of the main state fisheries and caviar depot, is the local caviar king.

Sturgeon poaching has been a lucrative tradition among local fishermen, but never before with so much profit and such impunity.

"It's a very serious problem and we hope the government will soon be in a position to control it once more," Keshavarz added.

The state monopoly has had strictly liited fishing quotas since it was established in 1952. This has inevitably increased world prices, but it has at least preserved a continuing steady supply of caviar, a commodity that has been synonymous with something too lofty or delicate for the masses since Shakespeare's day.

Annual production has been around 200 tons, all but 10 percent for export. Of that kept for domestic use, a large quantity went to the royal court of the deposed shah and to Iranian embassies that became renowned for caviar and champagne parties. A large proportion was also snapped up by tourists, leaving little for the Iranian public.

News Service Applies For Satellites

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press applied with the Federal Communications Commission Wednesday for the establishment of a broadcast quality satellite delivery system.

The news service said the system would initially involve the licensing of 15-foot earth stations in 37 cities for delivery of the Associated Press Radio Network and certain limited data services for newspapers.

"This is merely the first step in the creation of a total satellite delivery system for AP services," said David L. Bowen, AP vice president for stations, ranging from 15 feet in diameter down to the smallest diameter the FCC will allow, covering every AP city in the country."

The initial application included specific requests for the location of 15-foot earth stations in Miami and San Diego. Application will be made for additional specific sites as necessary paperwork is completed.

"Since the FAA already has approved a similar operating system for National Public Radio, we anticipate routine approval, and hope to have the first stage of the system in operation before the end of 1979," Bowen said.

Meanwhile, an FFC-authorized test of smaller earth stations, involving dishes of 10-and six-feet diameter, is proceeding. The test is in operation at WGST, Atlanta, with additional test sites ready to come on line. Up to 23 cities will be involved in the testing program.

"By moving ahead with the 15-foot system, we will be able to provide greatly improved broadcast quality to affiliates of the APRadio network in a relatively shortime," said Roy Steinfort, AP vice president of broadcasting.

The APRadio network has more than 680 affiliates, 61 of which are located in the 37 cities where the larger earth stations will be located initially.

"Quality will be improved for all APRadio affiliates, however," Steinfort noted, "since the technical effect of the satellite system is to move APRadio's Washington studios to the city in which the earth station is located. Even stations which continue to receive service frm those points via terrestrial lines will notice an improvement."

TEARFUL VICTOR — Danny Stamm, 11, of Reading, Pa., sheds tears of happiness as he is lifted in victory by an unidentified man following his winning of the National Marbles Tournament in Wildwood, N.J., Thursday. Danny was proclaimed the nation's top mibster. (AP Laserphoto)

Pennsylvania Youth Wins National Marbles Title

WILDWOOD, N.J. (AP) — Little Danny Stamm, showing championship cool under the bright beach sun, is the nation's top mibster after beating big Chuckie Bosiljevac in a nerve-wracking final series in the National Marbles Tournament.

Danny, 11, and teammate Kris Alfiero, 12, who emerged as the top female mibster, defeated 26 other boys and 16 other girls at the four-day tourney to make Reading, Pa., the undisputed marbles capital of the country.

"I was better than him," said a confident Danny after he defeated Chuckie, 14, of Pittsburgh, in a grueling best of 21 series on a 10-foot wooden ring placed on the beach.

Danny cried in the arms of his parents and his coach after his "aggie," a large agate shooter marble, knocked the last "commie," a smaller glass marble, out of the ring Thursday.

Chuckie, who wore a patch of foam rubber on his knuckles to prevent bleeding, nearly stole the title from Danny in the final moments, however. The capable 14-year-old won three games in a row before Danny put the series away at 11-9.

Kris knocked out seven straight commies to win the rubber game in a best of 11 series against Joelle Guiles, 12, a neighbor from Reading who placed third in last year's tournament.

"My secret was using my spin and taking my time," Kris said afterwards. "The wind was a big factor."

Carter, Senate Face SALT Fight

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When President Carter returns from his Asian trip, the battle for ratification of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty will begin in earnest.

Hearings get under way in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee July 9, a few days after Carter gets back to the White House. No one in the White House believes the task will be easy.

Leonid I. Brezhnev at the Vienna summit took seven years to negotiate. It will take months of debate before the expected showdown vote in the Senate in late October.

In a strategy to win the necessary two-thirds Senate vote, the administration forces are urging senators who are on the fence to remain there and to hear all the arguments before they take a stand.

Press secretary Jody Powell said, "We're trying to encourage people not to get committed to amendments while the hearings are under way ... to listen thoroughly to the testimony pro and con ... and not to make precipitous judgments."

The opponents of the accord are seeking to amend it and to send it back to be renegotiated. "Our position is that any substantive amendments to the treaty are extremely dangerous, and tantamount to rejecting the treaty entirely," Powell said.

"Killer amendments" is how some of the reservations have been labeled. Few senators want to vote outright against a pact that seeks an accommodation to lessen the risk of a nuclear war. But some of the most vocal opposition believe the Russians have been given an advantage in the treaty which Carter says proposes "equality" on both sides.

Whether the Soviet leadership would agree to renegotiate the agreement is questionable. Brezhnev said at the summit that attempts to change the provisions of the treaty could lead to "grave and even dangerous consequences."

And Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said this week that failure of the Senate to ratify the treaty would mean an end to U.S.-Soviet arms negotiations.

The Senate has the constitutional right to advise and consent. In the Vietnam War era, the Senate went along with foreign policy resolutions almost in rubber stamp fashion. The questioning came later.

Now the mood is very different. Although the Constitution provides for the president to conduct foreign policy and to negotiate treaties, the Senate is getting more and more into the act and less willing to accept what is sent from the White House.

Carter has the support of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. His approval of the MX mobile missile for the 1980s is expected to win him points with the Pentagon and advocates of military superiority.

He also has the support of the allies in Europe who foresee an unprecedented nuclear arms race if steps are not continually taken by the United States and the Soviet Union to move in the direction of mutual understanding on destructive limits.

The president strongly believes rejection of the treaty will signal the Soviets and the world that the United States is not interested in controlling arms competition. He also believes it will be much tougher to verify what the Soviets do in the technological field without the treaty. And he says that other nations on the verge of building the bomb will have no restraints if the treaty is not approved.

Carter says he will try to explain the pact "to every American who will listen."

His crusade is being likened to President Woodrow Wilson's ill-fated cross-country campaign — some 40 speeches in 22 days — to win public approval of the League of Nations. In the end, a handful of senators blocked the plan, not frontally but through amendments and reservations.

AMNESTY BILL

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — President Joao Baptista Figueiredo sent an amnesty bill to Congress pardoning an estimated 4,500 persons who opposed the military regime that has controlled Brazil since 1964. Presidential spokesmen said the amnesty, which must be approved by the Congress, was evidence of the 61-year-old president's determination to bring the country slowly back to democracy.

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

The moon is moving toward its first quarter.

The morning stars are Venus and Mars.

The evening stars are Mercury, Saturn and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Cancer.

William Mayo, founder of the famed Rochester, Minn., Medical Center bearing his name, was born June 29, 1861.

On this day in history:

In 1946, two years before Israel became a nation, the British arrested more than 2,700 Jews in an effort to put down terrorism in Palestine.

In 1970, the last American troops were drawn back into South Vietnam from Cambodia.

In 1972, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled capital punishment, as then administered, was unconstitutional. It also ruled sources of information must be revealed to state grand juries.

In 1977, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the death penalty could not be used in punishment for rape.

A thought for the day:

British poet Lord Byron said, "Speak not of men's creeds. They rest between man and his maker."

In 1966, a state of emergency was declared in Britain during a national maritime strike.

Panel Approves Bill Increasing Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sugarcane and sugarbeet growers and processors have won a victory in the House trade subcommittee.

The panel approved a bill Wednesday to raise sugar prices in October, adding about 75 cents to a consumer's annual food bill. Growers and processors argue they need higher prices to survive. Since almost half the sugar Americans consume is imported, the imported price generally sets the level for the whole market. Duties bring that to about 15 cents a pound. The subommittee's bill would raise the domestic price in October to 15.8 centsa pound and provide for annual increases through 1982. The bill goes to the House Ways and Means Committee.

Carter's SALT Speech Language Praised By Paper

By United Press International

Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

Carter...spoke broadly, and movingly, about the moral imperative of preserving the "strange peace" of the atomic age. His emphasis on the hideous consequences of nuclear war came as a welcome corrective to the bloodless abstraction of the SALT debate as it has developed in recent months.

That debate will, of course, continue, and it will necessarily involve both the Senate and the public in a welter of technical and complex arguments about verification, parity of weapons systems and Soviet intentions. But as Mr. Carter argued the other evening, the case for a strategic arms limitation treaty also involves a great deal of common sense — nuclear-age common sense.

...as Mr. Carter conceded..., the leadership of both the United States and the Soviet Union practice a sort of strategic double-think. Both sides regard nuclear war with justified horror, and cannot conceive of initiating such an all-destructive conflict. At the same time, each side must operate on the assumption that the other, endowed with nuclear superiority, might take advantage of it.

Strategic arms limitation agreements cannot obliterate that reciprocal suspicion. What they can do is restrict the quantity and quality of strategic arms on both sides...the proposed SALT II treaty does not come close to accomplishing the dramatic reductions sought by President Carter early in his term. But it is a beginning and an important one. And, as the president has forcefully argued, the alternatives to ratification of the treaty are awful to contemplate...

...by eloquently stating the advantages..., President Carter has placed a strong burden of proof on those who would scuttle the only practicable alternative to an unrestrained nuclear arms race.

SALT Vote Important

Columbia (S.C.) State

Senators facing a forthcoming vote on ratification of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty realize that their votes may have a measurable effect on the voting of their constituents in the next senatorial election back home.

But...the SALT debate...may well involve an even more immediate threat to job security of defense officials who may be called upon to testify...paticularly to members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, whose military expertise and experience could be of considerable value to the Senate.

The situation is all the more ticklish because of President Carter's all-out advocacy of ratification. It will take courage for a chief of staff or other major figure in the defense establishment to voice opinions contrary to that of the commander-in-chief.

In the final analysis, however, the duty of the true patriot is to his country rather than to any individual, no matter how highly placed. The United States has suffered in past administrations from efforts to "muzzle the military."

Let us hope in this instance that there will be no attempt to stifle testimony or — in the event of such pressure — that the individuals concerned will speak from conviction — pro or con — so that all sides of this vital issue can be aired.

Take Heed, Senator

Providence Journal-Bulletin

It was an occasion that demanded a very good speech and President Carter met the need...he made an eloquent and straightforward appeal...for the Senate to ratify the treaty limiting U.S. and Soviet strategic weapons. He by no means convinced his harshest critics, but he made a rational case for the treaty.

...President Carter said it simply and well: "When all is said and done, SALT II is a matter of common sense."...

The Senate's chief duty in evaluating this treaty is to determine whether it will, as advertised, reduce the risk of nuclear war. To this end, senators need to examine several issues with scrupulous care: the procedures for checking against possible cheating; the chance of some unperceived technical breakthrough unbalancing the strategic equation; and the degree of risk posed by weapons outside SALT II, such as the Soviets' "Backfire" bomber...any case against it ought to be made from hard facts and reasoned argument. The issues ...demand a debate that goes beyond emotional diatribes or ritualized snap judgments by either side...

He Betrayed Us All

Dallas Times Herald

Convicted Watergate burglar Frank Sturgis is bitter. He feels "betrayed" because the people he once worked for let him and others go to prison.

We know how he feels. The people he once worked for at one time were also our employes before they betrayed us.

...There is no doubt, at least in Sturgis' mind, that Richard Nixon knew about the (burglary) job before it occurred.

"From the estimation I have gathered," Sturgis said in a recent interview, "the information I received, he (meaning Nixon) not only knew about it, he more or less sanctioned it..."

...At the time of the break-in he didn't think he was involved in any "political shenanigans."

"We were all strictly agents working for the U.S. government," he notes, sounding for all the world like a disgruntled former employe for sure.

As the jilted employers, the rest of us tend to remember Sturgis and company more along the lines of the disloyal opposition.

But then, we could be wrong. It has been several years since the burglary, no one is still in jail and Richard Nixon remains alive and well in California — Like the San Andreas fault.

Drawing a pension from the government just as if he were an honorably retired employe.

The Shortage Is Real

Sapulpa (Okla.) Herald

...we have inquired of several persons as to their views concerning the shortage, real or contrived, of oil.

We are amazed to report that out of 14 persons we have discussed the matter with, nine think it is a great big hoax. And one of the doubters was an independent oil producer, although small in size. One of the believers was a geologist who has worked in the field for many years.

...our percentage on this small sampling came out within a couple points of national surveys on the same question.

We happen to believe oil is in extreme short supply. We happen to believe that forming a conspiracy of oil barons would be as impossible as getting unanimous opinion on a close call in a Little League ball game.

Iran, which supplied the U.S. With 6 million barrels per day, is now anyone's guess. Production, according to Wall Street Journal, is running only about 2.5 million barrels per day in Iran...The same source reports world petroleum requirements are presently running 1.5 million barrels short per day...

The gas lines may not be bothersome at present in this part of the country. Thirty days hence it may be another story.

Government Negect

Albuquerque (N.M.) Journal

...In recent days there have been revelations showing governmental disregard for the health of persons affected by nuclear testing, power generation and uranium mining has been a rule than an exception.

A Senate subcommittee was told recently that early warnings about the hazards of exposure to low-level radiation by a uranium miner who worked in mines 20 years ago went unheeded. The result, said the cancer expert from the Labor Department: "We now have an epidemic of monumental proportions on our hands."

There's more. The Defense Department overruled the objections of a scientist from the old Atomic Energy Commission in the 1950s and relaxed the AEC safety standards to allow soldiers doing combat maneuvers to venture close to the "ground zero" point of a nuclear weapons blast at a Nevada test site.

In that case, the AEC Scientist said seven miles would be about as close to "ground zero" as the soldiers could safely go; the Pentagon men, however, opted for 3.9 miles and took "responsibility for the safety of all participating troop units and troop observers." About 4,500 soldiers ad observers were involved.

...We are gradually being informed that safety standards have been bent — or disregarded — in more instances than most Americans would have ever imagined.

Elimination of such instances of indifferent safety standards must take place if we are to continue using nuclear power.

Guerrillas Retreat From Capital City

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista rebels gave up the Managua slums after two weeks of fighting but said they were withdrawing to regroup for more combat. President Anastasio Somoza failed to muster a quorum for a session of Congress and met with the new U.S. ambassador, Lawrence Pezzullo, amid reports the envoy asked him to resign.

The New York Times reported Somoza told U.S. officials he would step down if his national guard and ruling Liberal Nationalist Party were given a role in a transitional government. U.S. Embassy political officer Jack Martin called the report "pure speculation," and Somoza's private secretary, Max Kelly, called it "absolutely false."

Somoza told the Colombian newspaper La Republica: "If the Congress asks me to resign, I will dissolve it."

Only 28 of the 70 congressmen showed up for the session Somoza called Thursday, eight short of a quorum.

"We're going to Masaya," one of the guerrillas shouted to reporters as he and hundreds of others streamed out of the slums on foot and in captured national guard trucks toward the rebel-held city 20 miles south of Managua. They were armed with automatic assault rifles, rocket grenades and heavy machine guns.

The national guard claimed control of Managua today for the first time in nearly three weeks, and a top Somoza aide said dislodging the guerrillas had freed troops and planes to push the rebels from the strip they have been holding along the Costa Rican border. "You're going to see something surprising tomorrow, and after that comes Masaya," the aide said.

A guerrilla source said the Sandinistas pulled out of Managua because of heavy guard fire and because they were running low on food and ammunition. The guard, Somoza's army and police force, had been hitting the eastern barrios from the air and with heavy rocket and mortar attacks.

Government planes dropped 250- and 500-pound bombs on the rebel strongholds again Wednesday night, and on Thursday morning infantry began moving in behind a Sherman tank and armored cars. A guard plane rocketed Sandinista sniper positions and a C-47 gunship strafed the area. By noon most of the area was clear of resistance and the guard began tearing down the rebels' paving stone barricades.

The barrios were full of twisted metal roofing, burned timbers and shattered brick from slum dwellings and stores destroyed in the fighting. Residents said hundreds had died in the guard bombing and shelling, and many houses had freshly dug graves in back yards.

Some had "house with children" scrawled in large black letters on the outside walls in vain hopes the guard would spare them. Others were covered with Sandinista slogans such as "Sandino Lives," "Death to Somoza," and "A Free Country or Death."

Brass shell casings, shrapnel from bombs, dud grenades and mortar shells littered the streets of the barrios, and many residents told of guardsmen shooting indiscriminately into houses with heavy machine guns.

One man said his daughter was trying to get back into his house after the 7 p.m. curfew, but the guard shot and killed her at the gate. She was buried in the backyard. Other residents simply raised their hands palm upward in despair and shook their heads when reporters approached.

Despite their retreat from Managua, the Sandinistas still control many provincial cities, including Leon, the nation's second largest 55 miles northwest of the capital, and a swath of territory north of the Costa Rican border.

But so far the guard has prevented them from moving from the frontier area northward to the city of Rivas, where they hope to establish a five-member provisional government that they named last week.

The guerrillas of the Sandinista National Liberation Front take their name from a Nicaraguan rebel who fought the U.S. Marines who put Somoza's father into power 42 years ago. They led a two-week rebellion in September in which some 1,500 persons were killed. Another 1,500 died in clashes in the ensuing months and at least 10,000 more are estimated to have been killed in the last few weeks of fighting.

Solons Approve Trade Embargo

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter retains the authority to continue indefinitely the U.S. trade embargo against Zimbabwe Rhodesia as the result of new House action.

But efforts continue in Congress to compel the president to end the sanctions either immediately or by some fixed date. Those favoring an end to the embargo say they will try to amend every relevant piece of legislation that comes along to achieve their ends.

After four hours of debate Thursday night the House refused, 242-147, to adopt an amendment that would have ended the sanctions Dec. 1 and stripped the president of power to retain them on his own authority.

(Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock was one of those who voted for the amendment.)

It then adopted, 350-37, a bill which leaves that authority in the president's hands.

The bill declares that the April parlimentary elections in Zimbabwe Rhodesia represent encouraging and significant progress toward development of a multiracial democracy in the African country and that a peaceful resolution of the continuing guerrilla war is in the interests of the United States.

It also states that Great Britain, which is responsible for Zimbabwe Rhodesia under international law, has not yet recognized the new government of Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the country's first black prime minister.

And it directs the president to lift the sanctions by Oct. 15 — an arbitrarily chosen date — unless he determines it would not be in the national interest to do so.

"This bill makes absolutely no change whatsoever in the wrong headed and sanctimonious position taken by the president not to lift the sanctions," said Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md.

Baumaun, who is also president of the American Conservative Union, was referring to Carter's June 7 decision to maintain the sanctions on grounds Zimbabwe Rhodesia had not met the congressionally imposed test of conducting free and fair elections.

Rep. John N. Erlenborn, R-Ill., said the test should be the national interest of the United States. And he said that includes retaining the good will of the nations of black Africa, none of which have recognized the Muzorewa government.

Erlenborn and other congressmen noted that some African nations have raised the possibility of taking economic reprisals against the United States if it lifts the sanctions unilaterally.

Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., principal sponsor of the bill, said it retains leverage for the United States to encourage further progress in Zimbabwe Rhodesia toward more complete black majority rule.

The nation's current constitution reserves 28 seats in parliament for the 4 percent of citizens who are white and leaves the military, police and justice systems under white control.

The trade embargo was imposed in 1966 at the request of Great Britain following Rhodesia's declaration of independence, a step taken to continue white domination.

Carter Announces Plans To Freeze Oil Imports

target for the European community, he said:

"Well, we felt very deeply about it, and I think the longer we discussed these issues, the more they saw that the outcome of the conference would be disappointing if it was expressed in generalities and if particular nation-by-nation quotas were not very specific and stringent."

The "Tokyo declaration" allows for "slight adjustments" in quotas for special needs generated by growth.

The summit nations, in an effort to moderate recently high prices in spot oil markets, agreed to "take steps to bring into the open the working of oil markets by setting up a register of international oil transactions."

This presumably would focus public attention on oil producers who bid up spot prices.

"We will likewise seek to achieve better information on the profit situation of oil companies and on the use of the funds available to these companies."

Other summit positions:

•A pledge to spur coal use, production and trade;

•Recognition of a need to expand alternative energy sources and to cooperate in developing new energy technologies; and

•A statement that "economic growth and higher employment will be hard to achieve" without expanding nuclear power projects, but agreement that "this must be done under conditions guaranteeing our people's safety."

The nations also promised to combat inflation and to recognize the financial needs of developing countries whose economies will be hard hit by higher oil prices.

At an earlier meeting with reporters, Carter said the summit's most difficult problem was persuading some of the European nations to opt for individual national import ceilings for 1979 and 1980 and through 1985.

Just a half hour before the two-day summit ended, Carter said, one unidentified participant proposed to amend the communique to adopt a collective quota for Western Europe rather than individual, country-by-country ceilings.

The objective was to reduce oil imports by 2 million barrels a day, the estimated gap between supply and demand.

Citing OPEC's 60 percent price increase since December, Carter declared, "There is no one on earth who will fail to suffer from these extraordinary increases."

Asked if he could do anything immediately to reduce gasoline lines in the United States, Carter said he understood an increased amount of gasoline, up to 97 percent of last year's supply, will be allotted in areas of long gas lines.

Asked if gasoline lines should be considered permanent, a senior American official, who did not want to be identified, said, "There's no reason to draw that inference." He said gasoline production should increase in July and August enough to shorten, and perhaps eliminate, the lines.

LISD Panel Abolishes Auto Tax

tricts for at least 45 percent of the state-mandated exemptions, although it is projected that Lubbock will be reimbursed for almost all of the revenue losses resulting from state exemptions.

The board also decided to delay use of the "ag-use" valuation for taxation because Brooks said that reorganization of the taxing of agricultural land would be impossible to achieve for 1979. The new valuation allows for taxation of agricultural land according to its productivity value rather than its market value.

He said that most of those who qualified under the old law had already applied for the exemptions. "It won't wind up as any loss to taxpayers who've already applied," said Brooks.

In other action, trustees approved the depository bid for the school district presented by American State Bank. American State, which currently has the contract with the district, presented the only bid.

The board also heard a proposal from Wendell Huddleston, former president of the Lubbock Classroom Teachers Association, for increases in local salary increments. The proposal calls for an additional $920,000 over last year's total increments of $2.2 million.

The board will act on the proposal when they consider the district's budget during the next two months.

Beetles

any good garden spray, following label directions, Smith advised.

Wherever the beetles come from, and whatever they want, it looks like Lubbockites won't be rid of them as soon as they may like.

"It'll be the middle or end of summer before they leave," said Smith.

Ashdown was less optimistic. He named no exit period for the beetles, saying only, "The winter didn't kill them off... it's hard to tell how long they'll be around."

In defense of the beetles, however Ashdown said, "they're what we call good bugs. They're killing many pests such as worms and leaf beetles."

Small consolation.

Israeli Gunners Shell Southern Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Israeli and Christian rightist gunners today shelled Palestinian positions in southern Lebanon for the second straight day amid escalating tensions between Syria and Israel.

Leftist sources reported from the southeast that shells rained down at the rate of "seven a minute" on the guerrilla-controlled towns of Sohmor, Yohmor, Qelia, Rihane, Kawkaba, Nabatiyeh and Hasbaya.

The intensity of the shelling, which began Thursday and continued until early today, made it difficult to determine casualty figures with any precision, the sources said. But it was feared the toll was heavy.

Israeli incendiary shells started a number of fires in olive groves, fields and orchards. The Israelis used heavy 155mm and 175mm artillery.

Outgoing fire also came from the Christian militia enclaves in the border area.

Reports from Israel Thursday had said the guerrillas fired Soviet-made Katyusha rockets into Israel from their positions in southern Lebanon.

Israeli warplanes flew over the southern border area today, the leftist sources said.

In an attempt to protect Palestinian targets from Israeli bombing, Syrian jets Wednesday intercepted Israeli planes as they were attacking villages and refugee camps along the southern Lebanese coast. Syria said four of its jets were "hit" during the dogfight.

Since the attack, which drew criticism from the United States, Israel has vowed to keep hitting at guerrilla bases in Lebanon, warned Syria against interefering with its air strikes and rejected U. S. concern at the use of American-supplied warplanes in the raids.

The state-controlled Syrian newspaper Al Thawra said in an editorial Thursday that "Syria's resistance is neither temporary nor casual," in what seemed to be a clear warning to Israel to refrain from further attacks on Palestinian targets in South Lebanon.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said earlier in the week that his country would wage an "offensive" campaign against the guerrillas in Lebanon.

The firing began early Thursday when Israeli and Christian artillery opened fire on targets in Southeast Lebanon, wounding 10, the PLO Radio said.

Reports from Israel said the Palestinians lobbed several Soviet-made Katyusha rockets into northern Galilee Thursday.

Flaming Toad Ignites Brush

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (UPI) — Two teen-agers set a toad afire as a prank and the burning animal escaped, setting a brush fire that consumed two acres.

The youths, 15 and 17, whose names were not made public, were questioned ane "severely counseled" by sheriff's deputies, then released to their parents. No charges were filed.

A spokeswoman for the Ventura County Fire Department said the youths took the toad to a privately owned field near the Los Robles Golf Course, where they fashioned a "funeral pyre" for it out of a mound of dry grass.

Overton South Wins Historic Designation

commission members were listening as Planning Director Jim Bertram read how 13 standards for landmarks applied to the 11 structures recommended for that designation.

The commission approved landmark status for the Mast-White House at 2219 13th St., the Cox House at 2223 13th St., the Leidigh-Adams House at 2101 17th St., Lubbock High School, St. Paul's Episcopal Church at 1510 Ave. X, the Kuykendall House at 2201 16th St., the Etz House at 2003 17th St., the Miller-Loter House at 2323 18th St., Carroll Thompson Junior High School at 2002 14th St. and the Nislar-Napier House at 2313 17th St.

The Osborne House at 1924 14th St. was deleted from the list of landmark structures after commission members decided the house was not of great architectural or historical significance.

But they suggested to the Overton South Neighborhood Association that it recommend another structure to "anchor" the northeast portion of the district.

However, the controversy in the second meeting on the Overton South district again involved boundaries.

Carroll Cobb, representing commercial property owners on Avenue Q, again pleaded with the commission to end the district on the eastern edge at the alley between Avenues R and S, rather than at the alley between Avenues Q and R as was approved.

Cobb said businesses on Avenue Q need the block-wide area to expand and to provide parking facilities and pledged to fight any boundary different from the one he suggested.

He said design standards approved for the district are "well and good in a residential area, but I object to being subjected to another bureaucracy."

However, Ted Hogan, finance and design chairman for OSNA, said moving the eastern boundary would be an "open invitation for commercialization."

Hogan predicted the area would then be open to C-4 (commercial) zoning which would lead to blight.

"There's been a good deal of misunderstanding" about what the district will mean to property owners, Hogan said, and Bertram agreed.

He explained that moving the district boundary to the west would not in any way affect the zoning and that any change in zoning would have to be approved by the Planning and Zoning Commission and any change in use for parking would have to be approved by the Zoning Board of Adjustment.

The Design-Historic District does not prohibit commercial development or construction of parking lots, Bertram said, but it means any construction must meet certain design standards to be compatible with the rest of the district.

At last week's meeting, OSNA chairman Roger Loter announced the group had agreed to delete all property used for First Baptist Church parking in exchange for the church's support of the district designation.

But since those parking lots would form a non-district peninsula into the district, commission members decided to include some of the parking lots by drawing the boundary south of the church at the alley between 13th and 14th Streets.

Arnold Maeker, representing the church at the meeting, said the church had "instructed me to ask you to exclude all property" used for parking by the church.

However, Maeker said the church had no intention of using the property for anything but parking and said "I don't see it as a monumental issue."

"I see no real problem with the church under the ordinance," he said. "We could do what we plan to do with our building under the framework of the ordinance."

The commission's recommendation now goes to the Planning and Zoning Commission and the Lubbock City Council for action.

Tornadoes

twisters heavily damaged a shopping center and a 100-square-block area. Two people died early today at a Rochester, Minn., hospital where they were taken after the storm. One remained in serious condition there. Seven others were hospitalized in Algona-area hospitals and 35 others were treated and released, officials said.

"It looked like it came through the north edge of town, just kind of picked things up and laid them over," said State Sen. Berl Priebe of Algona.

"There's a hardware store, Graham's Hardware, where there's nothing left — just a slab of cement," said Priebe's son Gary, who also lives near Algona, population 6,000.

Also hit by a twister was Renwick, 30 miles northeast of Manson. About 420 residents were evacuated when two tanks holding anhydrous ammonia — a fertilizer — ruptured and released toxic fumes.

One tank later sealed itself and a second 26,000-gallon tank was sealed. The residents began returning home early today, the highway patrol reported.

Lt. Gov. Terry Branstad, National Guard, State Patrol and Disaster Services officials were to visit the area today.

House Weakens 'Windfall Profits' Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — The "windfall profits" tax, weakened on the House floor, is headed to the Senate where influential oil-state lawmakers are expected to try to reduce its bite on oil companies even more.

The House watered down the tax Thursday, agreeing with arguments that U.S. oil production could best be increased by leaving oil companies a bigger share of the profits from the decontrol of domestic oil prices.

"The telling argument was energy production," declared Rep. W. Henson Moore, R-La., one of the sponsors of the amendment to weaken the tax bite on oil companies.

The House Ways and Means Committee and the Democratic leadership had favored a tax that would have reclaimed about $44 billion of the oil companies' decontrol-related revenues between 1980 and 1984.

Moore argued that by cutting the tax by about $6 billion over that five-year period, U.S. oil production would be increased by 800,000 barrels a day, compared to 350,00 new barrels a day expected under the committee's tax.

"Congressmen can go home now for July Fourth and tell their constituents, 'I voted for a tax that will keep you from being ripped off, but it will get you more energy,'" Moore said after the vote.

The Moore substitute is still tougher than the tax President Carter originally proposed and then challenged Congress to toughen.

The substitute cut the tax's basic rate from the 70 percent proposed by the Ways and Means Committee to 60 percent. Carter had proposed a 50 percent levy. Congressional tax experts estimated Carter's proposal would have netted $32.5 billion compared to the House committee version's $44 billion. The substitute is estimated to bring in roughly $38 billion.

The Senate Finance Committee, the bill's next stop, is slated to consider the tax next month.

The panel, chaired by oil industry ally Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., is expected to recommend a tax lower than the House measure. But in a letter read to the House during Thursday's debate, Long expressed concern that the Senate might toughen the House bill.

"There is nothing in the history of the Senate to demonstrate that it is less subject to over-reacting to the frustration and emotion of the moment than is the House of Representatives," Long said.

The House passed the Moore substitute on a 236-183 vote, with 90 Democrats — many from oil-producing states — joining 146 Republicans. Ten Republicans sided with 173 Democrats in opposing the amendment.

(Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock was one of the Democrats in favor of the Moore substitute.)

The vote was a stinging defeat for Democratic leaders.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., Ways and Means Committee chairman, said decontrol, combined with OPEC's steep increase in world oil prices, will pour billions of dollars more into oil company coffers.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raised the price for crude oil to between $18 and $23.50 a barrel Thursday.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: I know that nobody lives forever — but I felt sad at the passing of Mary Pickford, who was more than just "America's sweetheart." I always felt, because of her business sagacity, she was one of the outstanding pioneer women of her time. Did she, in death, leave that heritage for today's liberated woman? — Mrs. A. Sentry, San Jose, Calif.

A: We believe so. Douglas Fairbanks Sr. — to whom she was once wed — Charlie Chaplin, D.W. Griffith and many other contemporaries also admired her business acumen almost as highly as her acting abilities.

Adolf Zukor, the veteran moviemaker, is a notable example. When the actress cut off her golden curls to symbolize her retirement, Zukor said, "Mary sweetheart, I don't have to diet. Every time I talk over a new contract with you I lose 10 pounds!"

She recalled to a reporter some years ago, "I always said I would retire when I couldn't play little girls anymore."

Q. How come, with so many of the Watergate one-time biggies who went to jail (such as Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Dean, etc.) writing books about their implication in the scandal, the only one who hasn't done so was professional writer and former CIA agent E. Howard Hunt? — Mrs. H.D., Arlington, W. Va.

A. In a television interview, we relayed the question on to Mr. Hunt. "That's not correct," he said. "I was probably one of the first to write on the subject back in 1974, titling my Putnam book 'Memoirs of an American Secret Agent.' Perhaps it would have had a brisker sale if the word 'Watergate' was in the title!"

Q. Who performed tennis champ Chris Evert's recent marriage to Britisher John Lloyd? Wasn't it the mayor of Ft. Lauderdale or another official from the bride's hometown?— B. Collins, Cocoa, Fla.

A: The ceremony was performed by Father Vincent Kelly, the principal of the St. Thomas Aquinas High School which Chris attended when she grew up in Ft. Lauderdale. Mrs. Lloyd has said she'd like to have three children after she retires from professional tennis. Her husband, also a tennis whiz, ranks uncomfortably below his top-seeded bride.

The Ayatollah Khomeini: "Communism is as much the enemy of the people of Iran as American imperialism. We do not want the East or the West, atheism or materialism."

President Carter loses another Last Straw Poll to Sen. Ted Kennedy, voted No. 1 in Forum's list of the "10 Sexiest Fathers." Jimmy ran fifth, with Johnny Carson second, Muhammad Ali third and Mick Jagger fourth.

Bucky Dent, the Yank voted MVP in the '78 World Series, carried the schoolbooks for the then 15-year-old Jackie Lynn Bowen (an "Awayyyyyy-We-Go Glea Girl" on Jackie Gleason's TV show aired from Miami). She's now Mrs. Richard Castellano...

Jack Dempsey: "They're not juvenile delinquents. They're just a handful of punks who give their whole generation a bad name. I think we ought to separate them like they used to do with lepers."

And famed British comedian Max Bygraves waxes nostalgic about his pop: "When I was a little lad, my dad gave me a penny a day as he patted me on the head. By the time I was 14, I had several pounds and a flat head!"

Public Advised To Shop Around For Credit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of credit seems to be skyrocketing, but you can still save money by shopping around for credit.

There are two figures you'll need to make comparisons: the finance charge and the annual percentage rate.

The finance charge tells you the total cost of the loan, including interest, service charge, insurance and appraisals if required. The APR expresses this cost as a percentage of your loan.

The finance charge can tell you the comparitive cost of various loan terms. For example, financing a car for four years instead of three would lower the monthly payment, but the total cost of the loan would be higher.

To learn more about handling credit wisely, you can obtain the Federal Reserve Board's "Consumer Credit Handbook" without cost. Simply send a post card to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 659G, Publo, Colo. 81009

Station Fires News Director

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — The news director of station WTTM, which gained national attention last week with a gasoline protest, was fired Wednesday for not supporting the action.

Chris Canali, 34, said he was told he was fired by Bo Weaver, the disc jockey who carried out the protest last Thursday.

Weaver closed the door to his broadcast booth and nailed it shut so he wouldn't be interrupted in playing, over and over, the record, "Cheaper Crude or No More Food," interspersing it with calls from listners about the gas crunch. The deejay's protest was allegedly spontaneous.

"They told me they didn't like my opposition to the promotion," Canali said, "but I think it was just a lot of publicity."

Canali had been with the station for five months.

During his protest, Weaver was fired by general manager Larry Conti. But after crowds of listeners gathered outside the station and even shoved money under the door, he was reinstated by owner Herb Scott.

Eyewitness Remembers Day Of Archduke's Assassination

CARMEL, Calif. (AP) — "Even though 65 years have passed," recalls Joseph Vesel, "I remember the day very clearly. It was a Sunday, June 28, 1914, in Sarajevo — a beautiful, sunny day."

A beautiful, sunny day that plunged the world into the darkness of World War I because of the assassination of Austrian Archduke Franz Ferdinand. Vesel, 79, remembers clearly because he was there.

Now a resident of this seaside town, Vesel said he was standing nearby as Gavrillo Princip, a Serbian nationalist, put a bullet through the neck of the duke and another through the chest of his duchess on St. Vitus Day, a national holiday.

When Austria adopted a punitive policy toward Serbia, Russia backed the Serbians. The remaining powers in Europe were entangled by their alliances. The result was World War I.

"The Serbian newspapers in Bosnia (now a Yugoslavian republic) had repeatedly warned against the selection of St. Vitus Day for this visit," Vesel says. "Franz Ferdinand's answer to it was, 'I am the master of Bosnia and I shall visit my province when I want to.'

"The feelings of the population seemed to be split: While some of them considered the visit as an intentional insult, others wanted to participate in the festivities."

Vesel said he was walking along the River Miljacka near City Hall when he saw the archduke and his wife's car approach.

"A few steps from me suddenly I saw a young man throw a bomb at the approaching cars and run away," Vesel said. "The bomb missed the archduke's car but slightly injured one of his adjutants in the following car. Unruffled, the archduke continued on his way."

Vesel said he began following the procession.

After a meeting with the city's mayor, the archduke and his wife went to visit the aide injured in the bomb blast. It was the last trip they ever made.

"The driver of the royal car came from Vienna and did not know his away around Sarajevo," Vesel remembered. "When the car reached a bridge across the river, the driver became confused. This indecision allowed the pressure of the crowd around the car to increase and at that moment, a youth of 19 pushed through the crowd and fired two shots.

"Both the archduke and the duchess were hit. The duchess was hit in the chest and died almost instantly, while the duke was hit in the neck and lived for a few minutes.

"I shall never forget how, after being wounded, he got straight up in the car and turned to the duchess saying, 'Sophie, you must go on living for our children,' whereupon he slumped back into the seat. He never realized that she was mortally hit."

Vesel said he recognized the assassin as Gavrilo Princip, an older classmate of his at Velika Gimnazija school.

"I can still vividly see him in his overcoat, pulling his revolver out of it and shooting," Vesel said.

The prosecution of all those directly connected with the assassination followed quickly, although Princip was not executed because of his age. He later died of tuberculosis in prison in 1917.

The secret to stronger, longer nails was discovered by the women who groomed thraughbred horses, each day applying a strengthening preparation to their hooves. FBI Contends Hicks Hindered Probe

EL PASO (UPI) — The FBI contends Bandidos Motorcycle Club member James Eugene Hicks may have hindered an investigation into assassination plots against federal officials by lying about a clandestine meeting being held to engineer the plots.

Hicks, 37, who faces federal perjury and narcotics charges and a state murder charge, was seeking Thursday to have a $25,000 bond on a drug indictment lowered 10 percent, but it will be up to U.S. District Judge William Sessions to decide the issue at a later date.

Hicks also has been placed under $10,000 bond on the perjury charge and $80,000 bond on the murder charge.

The bond reduction hearing before U.S. Magistrate Harry Lee Hudspeth was on an FBI complaint charging Hicks gave false statements about the alleged meeting and then later denied them in an April federal grand jury appearance at San Antonio.

FBI agent James Beck produced written copies of statements he said were made by Hicks describing the alleged meeting Dec. 8 at the San Antonio residence of Timothy Kenneth Larson, which agents have described as "a prime suspect" in the Nov. 21 machine gun ambush of Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr.

The tattooed Larson, who appeared in a lineup viewed by Kerr, told reporters in San Antonio he had resigned from the motorcycle gang and denied he had anything to do with the attack on Kerr.

Beck said Hicks told him the meeting took place in December and was attended by Bandido gang members, two attorneys, businessmen and others, none of whom Beck named.

According to the FBI agent, an unnamed attorney allegedly said at the meeting the unsuccessful attempt to kill Kerr was "only a warning," and that "they might consider hiring people to assassinate other federal officials."

U.S. District Judge "Maximum John" Wood was fatally shot in the back on May 29, only 14 blocks from where Kerr escaped serious injury in a barrage of bullets.

Beck said Hicks' original statement may have hampered the investigation into the attack on Kerr, 38, known as a tough prosecutor of narcotics violators in the Western Judicial District of Texas.

Although the complaint alleges Hicks knew "no such meeting ever took place," the FBI has also charged former El Paso Sheriff's Department employee Ransom Patrick Cross with perjury on grounds he lied when he said he did not hear of the Kerr assassination attempt from "Timken," Larson's nickname in Bandido circles.

FBI agent A.C. Boyd testified in San Antonio earlier this week that Cross told him he knew where the gun used to fire 19 bullets into the hood and fender of Kerr's automobile was hidden.

In addition, the federal grand jury Wednesday indicted Hicks and six other individuals on charges of conspiracy in the manufacture of methamphetamines, and U.S. District Judge William Sessions sentenced Rudolph "Shakey" Maio, president of the local Bandidos chapter, to five years probation on a weapons convicton. Maio also was ordered to sever all ties with the Bandidos.

Nueces Grand Jury Indicts Evangelist

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Evangelist Lester Roloff spent a tearful 65th birthday after being indicted for operating a child care home without a license.

The indictment, returned by a Nueces County grand jury Thursday, came less than a week after Roloff yielded to state pressure to close the Rebekah Home for Girls.

"What is my crime? Is it a crime to do good?" asked Roloff, who shed tears Thursday night as his congregation sang "Happy Birthday" during a celebration at the People's Church.

Roloff is accused of operating the home without a license on or about May 11 — a day County Attorney Mike Westergren said was picked at random. The charge, a Class B misdemeanor, carries a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

"Our county attorney, Mike Westergren, was very insistent that the grand jury indict this notorious criminal as a lawbreaker," Roloff told a nearly full house.

Roloff compared indicting him after his homes were closed to someone digging up a dead body a week after it was buried.

"After 35 years and more of doing what most people say is good work, it seems strange that anybody would want to dig up a dead body," Roloff said. "But there will be a resurrection."

Roloff indicated he was perplexed by the indictment.

"At the age of 65 today, facing criminal charges, when all I've done is help people and never taken a penny of your tax money..." Roloff said, his voice breaking.

"If I'd raped, if I'd killed, if I'd been violent when all them were coming around, I might could understand. I've done all I know to do," he said, sobbing. "This is one of the saddest nights I've known."

At Wit's End...

Editor's Note: While Erma Bombeck takes a one-week vacation, we are taking the opportunity to reprint three of her most popular AT WIT'S END columns. Erma Bombeck will resume writing next week.

By ERMA BOMBECK

When I am reincarnated, I want to come back in this world as a mother who doesn't drive.

I have noted with some bitterness that mothers who do not drive have time to paint sunsets, knit coats, bake bread and write symphonies.

Not only that, they are fully dressed by nine in the morning, have a deep bronze tan by May 20 and somehow seem taller.

Fifteen years of car pools does something to a woman. It makes her a little strange. For example, I cannot sit in a chair and delicately cross my legs at the ankles like other women. Instinctively, my right foot extends in an accelerator position and remains there until I stand up.

Also, I mumble a lot. That comes from spending years on the telephone trying to figure out that if Mary Jane's husband goes to the doctor's office on Wednesday, she will have to bundle the baby up and take him to work and trade with Martha who is having a cyst removed. On the other hand if Peter was really exposed to measles that means he will have them by Wednesday and Ada, who already exchanged with Charlotte because Charlotte had trouble starting (the car, not Charlotte), would have to trade with Muriel because she has the convertible with the top that is stuck and it is her hair appointment day. (She also cannot drive on rainy days.)

Probably the most disconcerting hazard of being a "listed parent" in a car pool is that intellectually, I have become stagnant. My vocabulary at the moment is down to four basic sentences: "Fill it up with regular," "Lock the door," "Keep your feet on the floor," and "Didn't you go before you left home?"

The other night at a party I was standing alone holding my handbag in front of me like a steering wheel when a handsome man approached me and said, "You look like you could use a drink. What'll it be?"

I handed him my Shell card and said, "Fill it up with regular." He laughed and steered me toward the kitchen where the bar was set up.

"Lock the door," I said mechanically, "and keep your feet on the floor."

He looked around nervously. "Listen," he said, "I just remembered I have some unfinished business to attend to. Would you excuse me, please?"

"Didn't you go before you left home?" I snapped.

Specialist Cautions Ice Cream Makers

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — With hot, summer weather here, many people will be cooling off with homemade ice cream. However, failure to follow certain precautions can result in food poisoning, points out Al B. Wagner with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Last summer, 22 food poisoning outbreaks involving 292 people across the United States were associated with homemade ice cream, Wagner explains.

Investigators found Salmonella in most of the 73 hospitalized patients. Most often, dirty, cracked or ungraded eggs from a non-commercial origin were the source of the bacteria.

The food technologist suggests certain precautions when making ice cream to avoid food poisoning.

Begin by washing all freezer parts with hot, soapy water and rinsing thoroughly. Use only good quality ingredients. Never use cracked or dirty eggs or milk or cream of questionable quality. Before adding fruit, wash it thoroughly and don't use soft, overripe segments. Lastly, always cook the ice cream mix before freezing, advises Wagner.

PORK SUPPLIES UP

Pork on the grill will be appealing this summer, for hog supplies are on the increase and prices will be increasingly attractive. The March 1 inventory of hogs indicated that the number of pigs and hogs on farms was up 13 percent from a year ago, the largest spring inventory since 1971. The inventory of market hogs was 12 percent larger and the inventory of breeding hogs was 20 percent larger than 1978. This increase in pork production will signal lower hog prices for the second half of this year.

COMFORTABLE AND CONTEMPORARY — This room is appealing with the focal furniture featuring plump loose back pillows and seat cushions. Bamboo accents along with plants and unique lighting fixtures complete the look.

The Slim Gourmet

By Barbara Gibbons

Some would-be slimmers still suffer from Pastaphobia ... the unreasonable fear that macaroni will make them fat. Maybe they're possessed ... still haunted from the great beyond by Dr. Stillman whose quick-weight-loss theories of dieting preached the gospel of protein instead of carbohydrate.

In the here and now, however, carbohydrate foods have become the diet "good guys" while fat-laden protein foods like meat and cheese are wearing the nutritional black hats. A half-cup of tender-cooked macaroni is only 78 calories, but a 6-ounce slice of rib steak is 682 calories. Macaroni can help you cut calories and lose weight by taking up some of the plate space that might otherwise be occupied by a larger serving of meat.

With the warm weather coming, macaroni salad is one of the best ways to take up that plate space with low-calorie pasta foods. It can be made up in quantity and stored in the refrigerator, then added to luncheon or dinner menus with no extra work. Still think macaroni salad can be fattening? You're partially right. Store-bought or conventionally made macaroni salad that's well-larded with mayonnaise IS high in calories; about 275 per half-cup serving. But the culprit is the fat in the mayonnaise, not the "starch" in the macaroni. We make our macaroni salad with a low-fat mayo-and-yogurt dressing that has only a fraction of the calories of ordinary mayonnaise. And we make it even more slimming and high in nutrition by adding lots of shredded vegetables. Vegetables are high in bulky fiber to fill your stomach and satisfy your appetite.

With a serving of this macaroni salad, you need less meat:

HIGH-FIBER HIGH-PROTEIN
LOW-CAL MACARONI SALAD

½ lb. protein-enriched macaroni
5 ribs of celery, finely minced
1 onion, peeled, minced
1 small carrot, pared, finely shredded
1 red or green bell pepper, seeded, diced
3 tbsps. chopped fresh parsley
16 Spanish olives, thinly sliced
2 tbsps. olive liquid (from jar of olives)
2 tbsps. low-calorie mayonnaise
3 tbsps. plain low-fat yogurt celery salt and pepper to taste
paprika

Cook macaroni in rapidly boiling salted water according to package directions. Meanwhile, mince vegetables by hand or with the aid of a salad maker or food processor.

When macaroni is tender, rinse with cold water, then drain in a colander. Combine macaroni with shredded vegetables. Combine olive liquid, low-calorie mayonnaise and yogurt and stir into mixture. Season to taste. Sprinkle with paprika and chill well before serving.

Store, covered, in the refrigerator (will last several days). Makes 16 half-cup servings, about 70 calories each.

QUICK MACARONI SALAD LUNCHES

Prepared homemade low-calorie macaroni salad can be the headstart on nutritious, quick and easy summertime lunches ... with the addition of low-fat protein foods such as drained water-packed tuna, cooked or canned (drained) tiny shrimp or crabmeat, sliced hard-cooked egg or lean cold leftover meat or young poultry. For each lunch-size serving, allow 1 cup macaroni salad and 2 to 3 ounces of meat, poultry or seafood, or 1 sliced hard-cooked egg. Combine well and mound on a bed of lettuce. A few wedges of vine-ripe tomato would be a nice addition. Between 200 and 250 calories a serving, depending on your choice.

For brown-baggers and picnickers: Pack icy-cold macaroni salad with chilled tuna, diced cooked chicken or turkey or lean leftover beef or ham in insulated wide-mouth jars to keep safe.

And don't blow your cool with heavy sweets! For homemade low-cal ice creams and frozen treats (no special equipment needed), send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 35 cents to SLIM GOURMET FROZEN DESSERTS, in care of this newspaper, Sparta, N.J. 07871.

FOOD CHOICE

Education level greatly influences food choice. Among households earning under $3,000 the percent of poor diets increased as education decreased, says Mary K. Sweeten, foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: If people are "entitled" to clean air, devoid of cigarette smoke, why aren't they entitled to clean air, free from the scents of perfumes, colognes, after-shaves, etc., which also can make people sick?

I am allergic to scents. They give me a migraine headache. My nasal passages become irritated and swollen, and I have difficulty breathing.

It is torture for me to be helped by a heavily perfumed salesperson. Or to stand in line with perfumed people, get trapped in an elevator with them, sit next to them in a waiting room or theatre or wherever people gather. Room sprays of all kinds are a disaster to me!

In writing this I hope scent-users will become aware of how offensive they are and will be satisfied with a daily bath and an unscented deodrant.

Allergic

Dear Allergic: Thanks for a letter about scents that makes sense.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter (an only child) and I have a beautiful relationship even though she is 37 and I am 67. She is happily married. She and her husband invite me to be with them very often and we always have a wonderful time. I lost my husband 6 months ago, Abby, but when he was alive we saw a lot of "the kids."

Well, the kids are planning a vacation and want me to go with them. We enjoy the same things and always have a great time together. Some of my friends have told me it is not "healthy" to be with my kids so much. They say I shouldn't go on a vacation with them, that they asked me just to be nice. My kids say if I don't go with them they won't have as much fun.

I have other interests and friends, and do not feel as though I am clinging to my children. Perhaps I need another point of view.

Mrs. R.

Dear Mrs. R.: If you feel that their invitations are sincere, and their enjoyment of your company is real, pay no attention to the suggestions from friends. Join the kids and have a good time!

DEAR ABBY: This may sound silly, but it is a big problem with me.

My boyfriend, 25, started to shave the hair off his chest about a year ago, then he began shaving his arms. I asked him why he did this and he said he didn't like the looks of all that hair. (I never thought he was particularly hairy.)

Now he turns up with all the hair shaved off his lower extremities! This really bothers me, Abby. Nobody sees his legs so why does he need to shave them?

Now he claims that body hair is "unclean."

How can I convince him that body hair isn't dirty, and that he should stop all this silly shaving?

In Love With A Hairless Guy

Dear In Love: Your boyfriend's problems could be more than skin deep. But as long as he doesn't consider his obsession with body hair a problem, it's no problem. If you do, I'm afraid that's your problem.

Opening lead: King of ♡.

Our good friend from Holland, Herman Filarski, reports this hand, which is of interest from both a declarer play and defensive point of view.

Once South could rebid spades, North decided that he needed no more. He checked on aces and kings and wisely subsided in a small slam when he learned that two kings were missing.

West made his natural lead of the king of hearts, and declarer saw that the hand would present no problem if trumps broke 3-2. But to guard against a possible 4-1 division, declarer decided to score as many trump tricks as possible. He won the ace of hearts and ruffed a heart, crossed to the queen of spades and ruffed another heart. Then he entered dummy with the king of trumps noting East's failure to follow suit, and ruffed another heart, thereby setting up a long heart in dummy. Declarer cashed the ace of spades, sluffing a club from the table, which created a most unusual situation. After seven tricks at a slam contract, a defender was left with the only trump in the game!

Declarer entered dummy with the king of diamonds and led the jack of hearts, discarding a club from his hand. West ruffed with the master trump, and declarer claimed the balance.

Declarer played the hand skillfully, but he received an assist from West. That defender was in too much of a hurry to ruff with his master trump. He should have discarded on the heart and then waited to ruff the third round of diamonds. Now he can exit with a club.

Declarer must win the ace of clubs in dummy, but he is marooned on the board. For lack of an entry to his hand, the ace of diamonds will wither on the vine, and East will take the last trick with a high club for down one.

Youths' Assets Need Protection

(Editor's Note: This is the last of a five-part series on "What We Haven't Taught Our Children;" financial plahning for young people. This series is a special report by Purdue University.)

WEST LAFAYETTE, IND. (Special) — Today's youth need to be more knowledgeable about protecting their assets, according to Leslie A. Bryan, consumer economist on the staff of Purdue University's School of Management.

"Life, health and property insurance as well as a clear understanding of the basics of saving and investing are all tools in the protection of assets," he says.

He quotes the average amount of life insurance per family in 1977 as $32,400; per insured family, $36,900.

"Is this enough? Who knows without considering the total financial situation," he answers.

One life insurance statistic that worries many family advisers is the lack of life insurance within one-parent families, Bryan notes. In 1977, family heads were insured in 91 percent of families with children under 18 years of age and in which both parents were present.

In contrast, only 71 percent of the heads of "incomplete" families were insured. Bryan defines an imcomplete family as one in which the head does not have a spouse living in the household.

"Families with one parent plus children make up the bulk of this catagory," he says. "Considering the welfare of the children, lack of life insurance on the heads of incomplete families is far more serious than it might be in the complete family."

Today's young adult lacks consumer skills not only in life insurance but also in property and health insurance and in the area of saving and investing, a Purdue survey indicates.

Obviously, before one can invest, one must save," Bryan points out. "A savings account is necessary, but shop around for the best interest available — savings and loans and credit unions often pay more than full-service banks."

Once the savings account is large enough to purchase certificates of deposit which pay higher interest rates, do so, he advises, then look for investments which will yield more than inflation will eat up.

Bryan believes a wise home purchase (he underscores wise) is probably the best investment a young couple can make in their early married life. A home typically appreciates at a faster rate than inflation.

"As parents and educators reflect on their early experiences of personal and family money management, they will probably recall many poor financial decisions in their early adulthood," Bryan says.

"The lesson learned in this reflection is that youth today are no better prepared. We have an obligation to prepare the high school and college student not only for a career but also how to handle the financial rewards accruing from that career."

Cross-Stitch Sampler Easy To Do

Cross-stitch is easy to do and is an age-old favorite whether you're putting a decorative trim on a shirt or a blouse, edging a pair of pillow cases, or making a lovely wall hanging.

If you've done cross-stitch before, you'll know how to get started, but if this is a first for you, here are a few pointers.

First, think of your design. Trace a variety of flowers from magazines or even from flower seed envelopes. If you're really talented, draw free-hand style your favorites right from the garden.

Once your actual-size pattern is down on paper and you've decided on what color of floss to use, you're ready to begin.

For those unsure of tracing or drawing abilities, here is a floral arrangement of dainty petite flowers to cross-stitch in a hurry. The kit comes complete with instructions, white fabric, cotton floss, diagram, color chart and includes the mounting board and four gold plastic 2 ½ inch frames.

Order kit no. 14117 for $6.99 plus $1.45 postage and handling Creative Home Crafts is required to collect and pay sales tax in Texas.

Send your name, addressed, order and remittance to Creative Home Crafts, Dept. 8BB, P.O. Box 1281, 17th and Locust, Des Moines, Iowa 50336. If you wish to use your Visa, Master Charge or American Express, please give the Master Charge interbank number, credit card number and expiration date.

U.S. Stamp To Honor Vietnam Veterans

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

A 15-cent stamp paying tribute to Veterans of the Vietnam War is to be issued Nov. 11.

The new design features the service ribbon for the Vietnam Service Medal, an emblem of special significance to the many Americans who saw duty there. The Vietnam Service Medal was awarded to those who served in that country and contiguous waters from July 1, 1958, until U.S. withdrawal.

This stamp is not considered a commemorative but rather a regular issue. The regular issues are printed in larger quantities and remain on sale longer than commemoratives.

The red, white and green cover will contain the new stamps, plus the cachet, which is an artistic rendition of flowers bearing the legend "for the preservation of natural beauty."

The covers are available at $3.95 each from: Flowers, International Stamp Collectors Society, Equitable Bldg., Hollywood & Vine, Hollywood, Calif. 90028. Allow four to six weeks for delivery.

Speaking of endangered species, the Fiji Islands — located about 1,200 miles south of the equator in the Pacific Ocean — has issued a new set of four stamps to publicize the plight of some of its endangered animals. The species featured are the banded iguana, tree frog, long-legged warbler and the pink-billed parrot finch.

The 4-cent shows the banded iguana, the only Polynesian iguana in existence. It is endangered by the clearing of wooded areas for new construction. The 15-cent depicts the tree frog, which is endangered because its forest habitat is being reduced by agriculture.

The 25-cent illustrates the long-legged warbler and the 30-cent the pink-billed parrot finch. The birds are in trouble because of the encroachment of both man and animal in the islands.

Gambia hails the 14th anniversary of its independence with the issuance of three new stamps. The adhesives depict various public services of the country — police, fire and ambulance ... The American Topical Association's latest computer printout of its topical check list shows 104 subjects on some 6,000 stamps issued by various government of the world during the past year.

New Accessory Extends SLR Viewing Systems

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

A new accessory is now available that extends the viewing systems of most popular SLR (single lens reflex) cameras by more than a foot above eye level.

Labeled "Spiratone Periscope Viewer," it literally lifts a photographer above a crowd for clear shooting.

Visualize a long, tube-like device which incorporates a 10-element optical construction, with an adjustable dioptic eyepiece and rubber eyecup at the bottom, and an adjustable bracket to support the camera at the top. Custom fittings mate the eyepiece of the periscope to most camera viewfinders. And because it has been designed for rotating, it can be used for very low angle shooting as well as shooting around corners.

Still another unusual application is its use for shooting just under the water surface. In use, the camera and periscpe attachment are enclosed in a long, clear plastic bag and held under water while leaving the eye-piece and plastic bag opening well above water level.

From the same source comes news of the Spiratone Motionmaker, a filter-like attachment which creates a streaking effect over almost half the subject.

With half of the picture sharp and clear and the rest blending off into a comet-like, blurred action finish, the effect is suitable for conveying the impression of a child's wagon or bicycle speeding, a runner jogging, a baseball being thrown or a football kicked.

The effect is produced by a cylindrical lens ground into slightly less than half of the face of the Motionmaker. Like a filter, it comes in screw-in sizes from 49mm to 67mm and in series VII and VIII. When attached to the lens, the effect is seen in the viewfinder and the mount is rotated to select the exact position of the subject which is to be shown "in motion."

When writing for further details (address above), send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and include information about the type of cameras you have. For their latest catalog, send 50 cents for postage and handling.

The W. Eugene Smith Memorial Fund has just been established as a non-profit corporation to honor and perpetuate the memory of the late, great photojournalist. The fund will give recognition and support to photojournalists who seek to work in his tradition.

FBI Documents Link Mobsters With Vegas Casinos

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — FBI documents alleging that mobsters are behind the scene in some of Nevada's famous casinos are reverberating through this town, making gambling figures as nervous as a blackjack player down to his last dollar.

Since the documents were made public, state officials have revoked the gaming license of a major Strip resort hotel and scheduled license revocation hearings for two other hotels. They are expected to act against at least one other hotel-casino.

In addition, officials have recommended placing the names of four men in the state's infamous "Black Book," a list of persons prohibited from entering any gaming establishment.

All the actions stem from the alleged ties of the hotels — or the persons who run them — with persons purported to be organized crime figures in Detroit, Chicago and Kansas City.

The allegations are contained in a 1,088-page FBI affidavit that was unsealed June 15 in Kansas City. It has information collected by federal investigators — using wiretaps, other electronic eavesdropping equipment, and informants — as part of a wide-ranging investigation by the Justice Department's Organized Crime Strike Force into alleged mob infiltration of the gambling industry.

The affidavit also revealed that some of the reputed mobsters felt they had control over at least one top Nevada official. Harry Reid, chairman of the Nevada Gaming Commission, has said federal authorities felt he was the "Mr. Clean" referred to in wiretapped conversations. But Reid has denied any connection to organized crime.

Hotel executives here and state officials long have feared that federal intervention would result unless they showed they could adequately police the industry. And they've claimed the industry has been relatively free of mob control since the 1940s and 1950s when Benjamin "Bugsy" Siegel and other mobsters ran major casinos.

Strict controls, including more stringent accounting, were instituted in the late 1950s and 1960s, a move that helped reduce underworld influence. A policy change, allowing publicly traded corporations to take over hotel-casinos, also helped.

The allegations came as a surprise to many here, but not to all. Richard Bunker, appointed in January as one of the three members of the Gaming Control Board, the Gaming Commission's investigative and enforcement arm, said it was no shock to him.

"I've lived here all my life," he said. "I'm not naive. It's not a question of being aware, it's a question of the lingering suspicion all the time."

Bunker and other gaming control officials claim the FBI was able to get the evidence because it has much broader powers to use electronic eavesdropping than do state gaming authorities. "That's the only way they were able to get that kind of information," Bunker said.

Earlier this month, the Gaming Commission revoked the gaming licenses of the Aladdin Hotel and its two top officers following the conviction in Detroit of the hotel corporation on charges that the hotel was illegally controlled by reputed mob figures there.

The casino operation has remained open under a state administrator who took over in an agreement worked out between gaming officials and the club's owners. The state has ordered the hotel be sold.

A proposed buyer for the Aladdin, HMA Inc., withdrew a $135 million offer Thursday, saying its directors had decided not to branch out into the gaming business. HMA operates several insurance companies from its Denver headquarters.

The Kansas City affidavit alleges that Joe Agosto, the former producer of the "Folies Bergere" show at the Tropicana Hotel, was the purported overseer at the club for reputed Kansas City organized crime figures. Agosto has denied this accusation.

Gaming officials have hinted they will act against the Tropicana in July after a law takes effect allowing a state-appointed supervisor to run a hotel until allegations against it are cleared up.

The board also recommended that Agosto be placed in the Black Book, along with Frank "Lefty" Rosenthal, former entertainment director at Argent Corp.'s Stardust Hotel; Carl Thomas, a long-time Las Vegas casino operator; and Carl DeLuna, who according to the FBI affidavit is the No. 2 man in the Kansas City organized crime hierarchy.

The FBI affidavit included a transcript of a bugged conversation between Thomas and others in which he allegedly explains how cash can be "skimmed" from a casino before it is reported for tax purposes.

Thomas alleged scheme involved key persons in the counting room, the falsification of records, and blocking television cameras used to watch internal casino oprations by standing in front of them.

Argent, controlled by San Diego financier Allen R. Glick, operates the Stardust and the Fremont Hotel. The Gaming Commission has set July 20 for licenses for Glick and his corporation to be revoked.

Another FBI affidavit alleges that Glick is just a figurehead controlled by reputed organized crime figures in Chicago and that Anthony "Tony the Ant" Spilotro oversees operation of the club for the mob. Spilotro, whom the federal government has named as an organized crime figure, recently was put in the Black Book.

Despite the publicity, Bunker and Gov. Bob List both said they felt Nevada's gaming image was untarnished by the allegations.

List said he believed the public would wait and see what action the state takes taken before making judgments. He said the state "has the ability to deal with these challenges."

Bunker said he felt that "any time you move to clean up your house, your business, your state, I think it helps.

"It shows we're big enough to realize that problems do exist, and at the same time shows we're big enough to do something about them, which we're doing."

MOB TIES ALLEGED — State gaming officials have ordered stockholders of Las Vegas' Aladdin Hotel to seek new owners after the club's gaming license was revoked. HUD Pulls Out Of Soul City SOUL CITY, N.C. AP) — The signs of a bright new future are all over Soul City.

There is the sign marking the expansion of the housing development, and the sign showing where the townhouses are to be built. There is the sign marking the site of the half-constructed firehouse. There are even street signs for streets that aren't there yet.

But the future is destined never to arrive at Soul City. Floyd McKissick's dream of a model multi-racial community ended Thursday when the federal government announced it is pulling out of the project.

Officials from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development said only 124 people live in 33 houses in Soul City, where McKissick planned to build a city of 50,000.

HUD estimated its loss in seven years at about $28 million, plus $65,000 for a consultant's study saying Soul City would never be "economically viable."

The government will pay off $10 million worth of guaranteed bonds and seek to negotiate a takeover of the land owned by the Soul City, said Bill Wise, HUD's assisant secretary for urban affairs. It then plans to sell the land for an estimated $800,000.

If a settlement can't be negotiated, the government will foreclose, Wise said. Officials said those living in Soul City will be free to remain.

Lewis Myers, vice president for marketing for Soul City, said three HUD representatives arrived at Soul City Thursday morning to deliver the official news that HUD was cutting its ties to the community.

"We have nothing to say because we don't know what to say," Myers said. "We don't know what it means."

Business went on pretty much as usual Thursday at Soul City. Construction continued at the firehouse, and visitors continued to arrive at the information center to see the exhibits and the film depicting Soul City as a model combination of urban advantages in a rural setting.

Children and adults, many from the surrounding area, splashed in the the only public pool within 50 mles.

But pool manager Kathy Wright, who lives in a rented trailer near the recreation complex, threw back her head and groaned when told of HUD's decision to pull out.

McKissick, former head of the civil rights group the Congress of Racial Equality, said last month that Soul City faltered because of a lack of support from North Carolina's congressional delegation.

DR. LAMB

Treat Skin Disorders

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been having surgery for the removal of several large actinic kerotosis. One was 9 centimeters by 2½ centimeters. They heal perfectly each time. Now more are developing all over my neck. At times they are very irritating. I can't have them all removed. What causes this condition and what can I do to reduce their growth?

DEAR READER — I think it's very important for people who have skin disorders to let a doctor look at the problem. A proper diagnosis often cannot be made without actually seeing what the person is talking about. By your use of the term "actinic kerotosis" I assume that your doctor has told you that's what you have. These are usually the large brownish or grayish spots that develop on the skin in response to exposure to sun.

I notice from your letter that you come from a sunny climate. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 7-10, Your Skin: Sun, Aging, Spots and Cancer. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

The Health Letter I'm sending you discusses in greater detail problems such as spots that you are developing on the skin. You probably already have quite a bit of skin damage as a result of exposure to the sun through the years. Nevertheless, it's important for you to try to limit your sun exposure to slow down or prevent such changes.

I think you should probably use one of the sunscreens daily, winter and summer. The effective sunscreens contain PABA. You can also use a physical blocker during the sunnier parts of the day if you have to be out. Of course, one important means of preventing such problems is avoiding exposure to the sun, at least in the parts of the day when the rays are the strongest.

Usually it's important to remove these spots, as some of them can progress to skin cancer. There are some salves which can be prescribed by your physician that will remove them chemically. The choice of whether surgery or chemical salves should be used depends on the spot.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would appreciate it if you could help me out regarding a question I have about hiatal hernia. I read in your column that the pain can be intense enough to bring tears to the eyes of a strong man. I lost the column and that item is of importance to me. I already have your booklet on hiatal hernia.

DEAR READER — The hiatal hernia itself usually doesn't cause any pain. The problem is that you can have a leakage of the acid digestive material out of the stomach into the lower esophagus. The acid irritation of the esophagus can cause burning or it can cause the esophagus to go into a spasm. This is basically a muscle cramp.

The esophagus is a long muscular tube, and it can cramp just as other muscles do. It's this muscle cramp or esophageal spasm that can cause the severe pain that was referred to in my previous column.

Many people have hiatal hernias and never have any symptoms from them; others can have esophageal spasms and not have hiatal hernias.

Study Suggests On-Job Stress Linked To Health Problems

By AL ROSSITER JR.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A New study suggests stress on the job may be linked to increased health problems such as allergies, migraine headaches, backaches, muscle aches, tension, nervousness and anxiety.

The survey of 4,473 mostly middle-age men and women also found the work environment seems to be a leading source of stress which fuels many of the habits that stand in the way of better health — including overeating, smoking and alcohol abuse.

The study, conducted for the American Academy of Family Physicians, examined attitudes and practices of six occupational groups representing different social, educational and economic circumstances.

They were business executives, family doctors, farmers, garment workers, secretaries and teachers.

Four-fifths of the executives and two-thirds of the physicians, secretaries and teachers said their work is usually or always stressful. Thirty-eight percent of the farmers and 44 percent of the garment workers reported significant stress.

The causes of the stress varied according to the job. For business executives, deadlines, workload and pressure from superiors were the main causes. Farmers complained primarily of workload, dealines and pay. Salary, workload and superiors were the main causes of stress for garment workers.

The survey found those who reported one or more job stress factors also tended to report higher incidences of allergies than those who said they considered themselves under no stress on the job.

The study, prepared By Research and Forecasts Inc. of New York, found that for executives, susceptibility to allergies doubled as reported stress factors increased from none to one or more. Among farmers, the rate of allergy complaints nearly doubled as stress factors went from one to two or more.

Among garment workers, 14 percent of those who reported no job stress factors suffered from allergies. This increased to 20 percent among those who reported one stress factor, and to 26 percent among those who reported two or more.

Science Today

"While the samples in some cases are too small to be conclusive, the present study suggests the value of further research into psychological stress factors as significant elements in the occurrence of allergies," the report said.

Migraine headaches also were more common among those who reported stress on the job or at home. The report said the incidence of such headaches doubled among most groups as the number of reported stress factors on the job and home problems increased from none to two or more.

Among executives, an increase in the number of job stress factors appeared to be accompanied by a quadrupling of the frequency of such headaches.

Anxiety and nervousness, depression, insomnia, backaches and muscle aches also were linked to stress on the job.

Among executives and doctors, the most marked increases were in muscle aches and nervousness. Among farmers, headaches and nervousness were the most common products of stress. Teachers reported anxiety and nervousness and muscle aches.

For garment workers and secretaries, an increased incidence of anxiety and nervousness was most marked, the report said, followed by headaches.

Report Reveals Stomach Aches Due To Milk

BOSTON (AP) — Mysterious, recurring tummy aches that plague children may often be caused by an inability to digest milk, a study shows.

The researchers say intolerance to milk more frequently causes pain in the digestive systems of youngsters than doctors had realized.

Other studies have shown that about 10 percent of all school children have episodes of unexplained abdominal pain. And usually their doctors assume the problem is caused by an underlying disease or emotional stress.

Instead, this survey concludes that in many cases the problem will go away if the kids simply drink less milk.

The study, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, was directed by Dr. Ronald G. Barr at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston.

The researchers examined 80 children ranging in age from 4 to 15 who complained of bouts of abdominal pain. Using a newly developed breath test, they found that 40 percent of them suffered from lactose intolerance, an inability to properly digest milk sugar.

When these children were put on a lactose-free diet, 70 percent of them said they had less of the unpleasant symptoms, which include diarrhea, gas, bloating and cramps.

Lactose intolerance increases as people get older. It is common to some degree in about 80 percent of black adults and 7 percent to 20 percent of older whites.

"The results imply that many children who have recurrent abdominal pain are predisposed to the phenomenon due to an isolated decline in intestinal lactase activity," the study said. Lactase is the enzyme necessary for digestion of lactose.

Barr, who is now on the staff of Montreal Children's Hospital, said doctors should rule out lactose intolerance before they perform other, more involved tests for belly aches.

Not All Collections Of Coins Valuable

By SHARI LEWIS

Do you like to hear the jingle of coins? That doesn't mean that you should start collecting them in order to make money. It's entirely possible for a person to collect coins for years and have nothing but the jingle to show for it.

Current American coins are fun to collect, but far too many of each is minted for them to become valuable. Certain foreign coins are recommended for collecting. The best of these seem to be the South American and African coins. If you can get them in good condition, you my have something, because they are scarcer than U.S. coins (those countries don't mint as many). They are also likely to contain more precious metals. Try to get South American and African coins from friends who travel. You can get them from a dealer, too. They range in price from $1 to $5, some are more.

Bicentennial sets which are untouched and well kept in their original plastic holder have gone up in value and will continue to do so.

The most valuable coins you're likely to encounter seem to be coins that have errors on them: those that are mis-stamped (double-stamped, stamped off center, and so forth). If a coin really looks wrong to you, check with a coin dealer.

If you want to know the value of a coin you own or might get, you can look it up in The Standard Catalogue of World Coins, which is probably in your local library.

Yesterday's Brain Twister: Can you set down four nines so as to make one hundred?

Answer: 99 9/9 (ninety-nine and nine-ninths).

Today's Brain Twister: Can you draw four trees so that five are seen? (Look for the answer in Sunday's Kids-Only Club column.)

Baptists Reveal Unique Qualities

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Writer

America's largest Protestant denomination, the Southern Baptist Convention, has some singular qualities and they came into view in fascinating array at its recent meet in Houston.

The incongruities, the grandeur, the suspicions and graciousness tumbled forth in mingled profusion, with the process starting out in one direction and winding up in another.

That curious, seesaw mixture of thrust and parry, backing and hauling, is part of the unusual nature of this vast, loose-knit body of 1.2 million Christians holding them together in teeming vigor.

Although retaining the "Southern" designation, they've stretched across the land in all 50 states, with missions in 90 foreign countries, and a myriad diversity of tastes and cultural bents.

They're people of "differing viewpoints whose freedom of expressing themselves has always been a hallmark," notes the Rev. Russell H. Dilday Jr., president of Southwestern Baptist Seminary in Fort Worth.

But whatever the frictions or tangles, the Baptists display a fervent faith and passion to evangelize the world for Christ. They backed that dedication with budgets, praise and 'Amens," despite the peripheral upheavals.

Ironically, on the surface, however, the convention began with rolling thunder directed at seminaries and charges of lax teaching about the Bible, but ended with a salute to them for good work.

Strangely, too, the meeting of 16,000 "messengers" started with the triumph of an extraordinary political-style campaign for the denominational presidency by a strictly conservative coalition.

But in a remarkable twist, the convention afterward rebuked such "overt political activity ... as a method of selection of its officers," and ordered an investigation of reported voting irregularities.

It was a zigzag, flip-flop sequence that brought tears and chuckles, arguments and embraces, but withal, that spirited, full-fledged commitment to the cause of spreading the Gospel.

"Let's get on with this obsession," their famed evangelist Billy Graham exhorted 48,000 of them in Houston's Astrodrome, brushing aside the intramural bickering as beside the point.

The odd turn-around of affairs, however, apparently derived at least partly from the casual, easygoing makeup of the annual meeting, and offhand voting procedure, with some "messengers" apparently casting multiple ballots.

Any Southern Baptist — up to 10 from each of the denomination's 35,000 autonomous congregations — is eligible to attend, speak (if he can get recognized in the crowd) and vote, which could mean a possible total of 350,000 people.

But the count usually is around 20,000 or less, with time and geography having a lot to do with the makeup, and the bulk of "messengers" coming from the area nearer the meeting site.

Tha gives the conventions a regional flavor, with conservatives tending to dominate meetings in the Southwest and Far West, but moderates more numerous at conventions in the Southeast and central states.

Since the site is shifted annually, the attitudinal pendulum swings with the locale. Texans from Houston and Dallas led the conservative drive to elect a president to tighten up on Bible interpretation — and won the first round with election of the Rev. Adrian Rogers of Memphis.

But then, says campaign organizer, the Rev. Paige Patterson of Dallas, his forces melted away and failed to stick with the convention in ensuing days to push through measures to get the job done.

The coalition consequently abandoned further efforts, including a proposed demand for a "loyalty oath" from convention officers. The moderates took over in effect and turned the tables with counteractions.

It was a contrasting sequence, but fusses among Southern Baptists, with their bent for Southern warmth, humor and demonstrative affection, tend to end up with handshakes or a hug.

The amiable new president, Rogers, although backed to victory by the conservative bloc, disavowed belonging to any faction or anyone except Jesus and pledged to give "postive, loving, soul-winning" leadership to all Southern Baptists.

Back in Memphis in his first appearance in his home pulpit at Bellevue Baptist Church since his election, he was interrupted by an apparently deranged man who bounded on stage shouting incoherently at Rogers. Aides restrained the man and led him away.

Commented Rogers to his congregation: "It's exciting being president of the Southern Baptist Convention."

Methodist Women Schedule School Of Christian Mission

A third study program entitled Human Rights and the International Order has been added to the agenda at the Annual United Methodist Women School of Christian Mission which will be held next month at the College Inn in Lubbock.

The school will be held in two similar sessions; the Mid-Week School (July 18-20); and Week-End School (July 20-22). All sessions will be held in the College Inn across from the Texas Tech University campus.

The new program will deal with developing a basic understanding of the nature of human rights. It may consciously extend ideas developed in the "new age" study and explore the changing concepts of human rights as related to the past and future.

The study is intended to alert the churches to the current atmosphere of repression and to the urgency of the issues of human rights and the necessity of identification with the oppressed.

Study leaders for the two sections of the course will be Mrs. Edwin M. Walker and the Rev. Don C. Price.

Mrs. Walker is vice president of her local United Methodist Women unit in Meeker, Okla., and also of the Stillwater District of UMW.

Rev. Price is from Madill, Okla. and a graduate of Oklahoma State University and the Perkins School of Theology in Dallas. He has served as minister of local churches in the Oklahoma Conference and also as Campus Minister at a Wesley Foundation.

The two basic texts for this study include "Paradox and Promise In Human Rights" by Peggy L. Billings and "Of Life and Hope: Toward Effective Witness in Human Rights," compiled by Mia Adjali.

Gospel Festival Begins Saturday

Five a cappella groups will present gospel singing in a three-hour festival beginning at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the Moody Auditorium at Lubbock Christian College.

The festival is being sponsored by the Quaker Avenue Church of Christ and its School of Ministry and will feature both favorite hymns from the past and some of the best songs of the contemporary gospel revival.

The "Children of Promise," the Quaker Avenue Church of Christ chorus directed by Dave Langford, range in age from five to 55 years of age and is the only Lubbock group performing.

Representing the Bible Training Work of the South Main Church of Christ in Houston will be the "Sweet Spirit." The group is directed by Darrell Bledsoe and recently won second place in a Gospel Music Festival in Houston.

Also appearing will be the "Joyful Sound," representing the Farmers Branch Bible Training Work in Dallas and directed by David Moore. Comprised mostly of young voices, the group is one of two sponsored by the Farmers Branch Church of Christ.

Gospel music from the "singing school era" of the forties and fifties will be presented by a family group of children and other relatives of evangelists Ralph and Quentin Gage called "The Gage Cousins." Members of the group come from Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas and must rely on family reunions for practice sessions.

An Amarillo quartet called the "Psalms Four" has had number one songs several times on Amarillo radio stations. The group is comprised of businessmen.

Sen. Hance will speak at the morning services only.

Ray, who was the assistant vice president for Development at Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene, now has the David Ray Evangelism Association in Abilene.

He received his Doctor of Theology from the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Ft. Worth in 1976.

Montford To Speak At Bacon Heights

Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford will be among the guest speakers at a special patriotic celebration at 7 p.m. Sunday on the east parking lot of the Bacon Heights Baptist Church, 53rd and Slide Road.

Joining Montford will be radio personality Jack Dale, Chaplain Charles Locklin of Reese Air Force Base, World War I veteran Jack Welch, World War II prisoner of war Ed Dean, Korean War combat pilot Col. Robert H. Davis (ret.) of the U.S. Air Force, who also flew missions in Vietnam, and Reese AFB instructor pilot Ed Hazlett.

A special honor guard from the Estacado High School ROTC will present the colors and J.B. Mann will sing the National Anthem, accompanied by the orchestra of Bacon Heights Baptist Church.

The combined sanctuary choirs and orchestra also will present the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Eternal Father Strong To Save" and "America The Beautiful."

The public is encouraged to attend the rally after which homemade ice cream and cake will be served.

Church Head Endorses Treaty

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (Special) — The president of the 1.8 million-member United Church of Christ this week endorsed the SALT II treaty and called for its approval by the Senate.

The Rev. Dr. Avery D. Post of New York, while giving his state of the church report at the opening of the denomination's 12th General Synod in the Convention Center here, told the 703 delegates that the treaty "will constitute the centerpiece of the disarmament debate in the months ahead, but more importantly will be the basis for more far-reaching bilateral negotiations in the future."

Post asked the delegates to join him in backing the treaty in what is believed to be the first such unqualified endorsement of the pact by the head of a major U.S. church group.

He termed the treaty "a small step forward — but a crucial one — toward sane judgments about nuclear arms."

Pastor Opposes Law

OSLO, Norway (AP) — A Lutheran Church of Norway pastor strongly opposed to a new law allowing abortion says the king and members of Parliament who supported it should be excommunicated.

The Rev. Boerre Knudsen says he will no longer perform civil duties required of pastors in the officially established church. Last year, the church's bishops issued a pastoral letter condemning the new abortion law.

Pilgrimage Season Opens

GRAYMOOR, N. Y. (AP) — The Atonement friars have opened their hospitable and scenic mountaintop home and Christian unity center for the 1979 pilgrimage season, which annually attracts thousands.

The season will continue until the last Sunday in October.

The center, sometimes called "'the holy mountain," was started by a controversial Episcopal priest, the Rev. Lewis T.. Wattson, in 1898, who founded the Roman Catholic Society for the Friars of the Atonement.

Their establishment at Graymoor has since become Roman Catholicism's leading U.S. center of work for Christian unity, and Protestant and Catholic pilgrims show up on weekdays and weekends to pray, worship, rest, browse in the bookstore and chat with the friars.

. . . Our American heritage has its roots deep in our homes and hearts.

. . . To understand it we must behold the light of hope it kindles in the hearts of enslaved men.

. . . To honor it we must revere the institutions and beliefs upon which it is founded.

. . . To preserve it we must exercise faithfully its privileges and opportunities.

. . . To perpetuate it we must keep its vision bright before the eyes of our children.

. . . To enshrine it we must thank, worship, serve and love the divine Author of Liberty.

Interest Rates To Remain High

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

Interest rates have moved down in the past few weeks, but in Wall Street the bears are holding fast. It's not temporary. Real relief from double-digit interest charges is not yet in sight.

Ten weeks ago, the Treasury sold 13-week bills at an average rate under 9 percent for the first time since last December. The 26-week notes sold the same day dropped under 9 percent for the first time since last November (and triggered the rule set by the Federal Reserve in March allowing savings banks and savings and loan associations to pay higher interest than commercial banks for six-month savings certificates).

The prime lending rate at major banks around the country — the rate the biggest corporations and best borrows pay — slipped to 11½ percent from 11¾ percent.

None of that has had much effect, though, on the thinking of credit analysts like Henry Kaufman and Erich Heinemann.

At his Solomon Brothers office, Kaufman said "some of the decline" in interest rates "was in anticipation of a recession." But, he said, "we are not now in a recession; inflation will stay quite high and may go even higher in the second half of the year because of union wage settlements and risidng energy costs, and the demands for credit by businesses will be larger in the second half of the year than they have been so far."

Kaufman maintains that, while consumers have cut back their outlays, business has more than taken up the slack. "Business spending is quite strong and so far shows no signs of weakening," he says. "Even housing starts (which were 10 percent lower in May than they were a year before) are still high for this late stage of an economic expansion. The thrift institutions (saving banks and S&L's) can't handle the mortgage demand, so they'll have to sell other investments, and that will push rates up."

The current dip, Kaufman feels, is partly technical — "we haven't had a rally in the bond market in a long time" — and partly the result of banks borrowing money overseas to re-lend in the U.S.

"There's a difference of about a quarter of a percentage point in the interest rates here and overseas," he notes. "That may not mean much to individuals, but it's a lot of money to bankers. So they've been borrowing in Europe."

Kaufman is sticking to his earlier prediction that there will be a recession, but not until late this year or early in 1980, and that, in the meantime, the financial markets are going to have problems. "If I saw business spending turn down, I would advance my timeable," he says, "but there's no sign of that now."

To Heinemann, at Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., the interest rate decline is the result of "loopholes" that have triggered a "huge" inflow of private money into the U.S. "We put it at about $30 billion," Heinemann says, "and it's been a major force in stablizing the credit markets despite strong upward pressures.

"The banks have a whole series of games they're playing now that makes them able to finance that loan demand and even bring short-term rates down," he adds.

One of the key "loopholes" Heinemann refers to is the change in reserve requirements last August that allows banks to bring in foreign money without keeping any of it in reserve. With the additional funds available for lending, the banks' own costs are reduced so they can lend at lower rates.

"The Federal Reserve has let this happen and in effect undermined its own policy of restraint," Heinemann says. "Foreign money traders know it and they're becoming uneasy."

Earlier this month, the Bank for International Settlements in Basel, Switzerland — which handles accounts between central banks such as the Fed — called for more restraint from U.S. authorities. Heinemann thinks that such pressure will force the Fed to close the loopholes and cut down the flow of foreign money.

"That's when we think interest rates will climb again, maybe as much as a full percentage point, before they reach a 'peak,'" he says. "After all, we still have a high rate of inflation, and the economic slowdown won't start until sometimes late in this quarter, so the demand for money will remain strong for a while."

Nurses Group Heads Drive For School Funding

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The local Texas Nurses Associaton is heading a petition drive to request that funding for the Texas Tech University School of Nursing be considered in a special session of the Texas Legislature.

Although the House and Senate approved funds for the Tech school for the 1980-81 biennium, Gov. Bill Clements used his line item veto power to eliminate the nursing school budget.

"We were shocked and dismayed to learn of the veto," said Sherry Whiteaker, president of District 18 of TNA. "It is our opinion that Gov. Clements did not have benefit of sufficient facts and input regarding nursing and the needs and desires of the citizens of this region."

Several individuals and representatives of organizations spoke in favor of the petition at a meeting Thursday called by the local TNA.

Bill Tinney, speaking on behalf of three organizations, said, "We commend the governor on his good intentions to cut the (state) budget. But we cannot depend on schools of nursing in other areas of the state. Good judgment tells us they won't migrate to our area." Tinney is president of the South Plains Perinatal Association, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Education Committee and a representative of the March of Dimes.

Miss Whiteaker cited statistics showing that most nurses are employed within a 46 mile radius of the university from which they graduated. The only baccalaureate degree nursing program in the area is at West Texas State University in Canyon.

The Tech School of Nursing, if funded, would offer a multiple entry program so that Licensed Vocational Nurses and others with nursing training could enter and receive credit for their previous training.

Debbie Chaney, an LVN, told the audience at Thursday's meeting, "I want and need to further my education." For three years she has hoped for the opening of Tech's nursing school, she said, because its multiple entry program would mean she would not have to repeat courses she has already taken for her LVN training.

But the Lubbock native said that without a Tech bachelor of science in nursing program, she will not be able to become a registered nurse.

"It would be a financial burden to attend school outside of Lubbock," she said.

Bebe Boren, a registered nurse from a diploma program, echoed those sentiments.

"I cannot leave Lubbock (because of my family) to further my education," she said. Although Mrs. Boren has an RN degree, she said her diploma program did not prepare her for the responsibilities she faces as a public health nurse and she would like a baccalaureate degree to upgrade her training.

Although they were not present at the meeting, Miss Whiteaker said State Sen. E.L. Short, Rep. Froy Salinas and Rep. Buzz Robnett "have individually expressed their support."

TNA requests that citizens and organizations which support the move coordinate their efforts through the TNA at P.O. Box 10308, Lubbock, TX 79408. She said letters, telegrams and resolutions are welcomed by the organization.

Miss Whiteaker said funding for the Tech school is urgently needed now, as it is "not uncommon for nurses here to have to work two shifts."

Statistics from the South Plains Health Systems, which is sending its own letter and resolution for the nursing school to the governor, show that 22 percent of nursing positions in the 15-county South Plains area are unfilled. In the letter to the governor, Ronald Warner, president of the group, noted that health care costs will rise without an adequate supply of nurses.

Official Labels Finance Bill Excellent

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A top state education official Thursday rated the complex Texas school finance bill as excellent if judged according to the benefits reaped by the less wealthy school districts such as Lubbock's.

Raymon Bynum, associate commissioner for finance at the Texas Education Agency, said in an interview with The Avalanche-Journal that the recent measure is excellent "if you believe the state should fund schools in relation to the amount of wealth per pupil."

Bynum, who was at Texas Tech University for the annual School Business Services workshop, was referring to the increase in equalization money granted by the Legislature.

Equalization aid, which will be increased during the coming school year from $185 to $275 per pupil, is money provided by the state to districts that have the lowest amount of wealth per average daily attendance in the schools.

"The largest amounts of money went to the poorest districts," said Bynum. "Lubbock fares well because it is not a wealthy district per pupil."

The educational finance expert also called the Tax Relief Amendment "tax redirection" rather than relief. "Tax relief only takes place when governmental spending decreases," said Bynum. "We had tax redirection."

He explained that the burden for some school expenses simply will be shifted from the local taxpayers to the state. "The state revenue (such as sales taxes) would pay for what would have been paid for out of the three property taxes — the regular homestead ($5,000), the additional homestead for the elderly ($10,000) and the ag tax," Bynum said.

He said the tax relief measure is part of a 25-year trend toward a reduced dependence on the property tax. "Contrary to what most people believe, state spending for education has gone up faster than property taxes have gone up," Bynum said. "I know that's hard for most people to believe."

He said that despite the losses to school districts due to the tax exemptions, "I have not heard of a single one who is going for cutbacks" in the school budgets.

He said that about half the school districts in the state are eliminating taxes on automobiles.

Bynum does not agree with the opinion voiced by many teachers in the state that the 5.1 percent salary increased granted by the Legislature is inadequate. "I have a hard time talking about the increase as little," said Bynum. "It's the largest they ever got."

He also does not accept the argument that teachers are paid less than other state officials, even though teachers do not receive all the fringe benefits guaranteed to other state employees.

"Teachers get an automatic step increase (a jump in salary according to experience), but the state employee gets only what he's given (on an individual basis)" Bynum said. He added that teachers have a higher salary than the state employees that work for him.

Bynum says both teachers and state employees are underpaid, and "to be at war with each other is bad."

The education official also says he believes that more emphasis should be placed on funding areas determined by each local district than for areas mandated by the state. "There is a need to emphasize not categorical money but money to go to districts to make their own local decisions," he said.

Bynum concluded that Texas education financially is in good shape. "We're financially fortunate. We're a sunshine state and we have a good economy." He said that deregulation of oil in the state would increase the state revenue and improve the overall economic situation.

"The states in bad shape are New York, New Jersey and Ohio — the old block of northeastern states. They're declining in (school) enrollment and in revenue."

He explained that industry is moving to the South and is taking the money with it. He said that school enrollment is declining because of the industry moves and because of the declining birth rates in that area. "We're growing slightly here," Bynum said.

Vacationing Students Raise Jobless Rate

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A flood of vacationing students caused Lubbock's unemployment rate to increase .7 percent during May, and further increases are expected through July.

The Texas Employment Commission's Labor Market Review shows that unemployment here jumped from 3,210 or 3.4 percent to 3,820 or 3.8 percent between Mid-April and mid-May.

The increase is not as sharp as TEC officials had anticipated and it still is better than the 4.2 percent Texas average and well below the 5.2 percent rate nationwide.

Approximately 6,000 students now are looking for jobs, said Jerry Boudreau, TEC office statistician. This number does not include the graduates who are looking for permanent employment.

The rise in the unemployment rate is "the seasonal effect of the school term ending," he said. "June (unemployment figures) will be even higher."

Total resident employment slipped for the second consecutive month to 97,360 individuals, according to the report.

As the summer job market tightens and competition becomes stiffer, even more people will be jobless in June, Boudreau said.

This number is expected to sharply decline in July, he added, because by that time "a lot (of people) will have decided they didn't need a job after all."

However, the TEC anticipates Lubbock's unemployment rate will rise to 4.4 percent in August, with 4,600 workers without jobs.

Employment trends for the month of May showed contract construction, finance, insurance and real estate employers adding to their work force. Construction contracters registered a 400-worker increase and 30 new employees were hired among the other groups.

Good weather and the return of construction workers idled by the labor dispute during April were responsible for the great increase.

"The bulk of construction happens during the fair weather months," Boudreau said. "Accordingly, it goes up every year as regular as clockwork."

"It's a little late this year because of the strikes during April," he noted. "It's not up to plateau at this time, but they're not in bad shape."

Settlement of the trucking strike in April also was responsible for employment gains in transportation during May.

Manufacturing was the only industrial group to show a decline in comparison to levels a year ago. One of the main factors for the decline was the closing of the Levi Strauss plant here.

A record number of jobseekers registered for TEC assistance in Lubbock in May. More than 2,600 new and renewal applicants were counted, making the monthly total the highest since last June and setting a new high for the month of May.

June traditionally is the month of peak applicant load, according to the TEC labor report, and this month is expected to be no different as increasing numbers of residents are out of work.

Juror's Friends Advised By DA

FORT WORTH (AP) — Prosecutors, who failed to block Cullen Davis' defense attorneys from investigating potential jurors, have advised 2,400 Tarrant County residents they may be contacted by private detectives working for "persons charged with crimes."

The residents, neighbors of 600 potential jurors for Davis' upcoming murder solicitation trial, were told in letters mailed Thursday they are not required to reveal any information concerning their neighbors.

The 45-year-old industrialist is scheduled to stand trial July 9 in Judge Gordon Gray's criminal district court. Before Davis' 1977 murder trial in Amarillo, private detectives spoke to potential jurors' neighbors and may have photographed the homes of potential jurors.

Although Davis is not named in the letter, prosecutor Jack Strickland confirmed the Davis case provoked the mass mailing. Gray recently refused to limit the defense's investigation of potential jurors.

The letters were sent Thursday to neighbors on each side and across the sreet from each person on the list.

The letters also refer to calls from persons who claim to be sampling public opinion for Marketing Aid Research.

Davis attorney Phil Burleson confirmed the pollsters are working for Davis' defense team.

Residents may comply with the detectives and pollsters, the letters say, but they are not required to do so.

"Your district attorney's office has reason to believe that private investigators representing criminal defendants may be calling on you asking questions about your neighbors," the letters say. "If you do choose to speak with private investigators, you may want to ask them for proper identification and record their names."

Kahn Predicts Inflation To Exceed 10 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation, fanned by OPEC oil-price increases, will exceed 10 percent this year, presidential adviser Alfred Kahn is predicting.

Petroleum costs are rising fastest, but food could go up more than 11 percent in 1979, the Carter administration says.

Kahn's inflation assessment Thursday, the gloomiest yet by the administration, is brought home by a private economist's estimate that the average family's bill for gasoline and motor oil will increase at least $230 a year because of OPEC price boosts.

Albert H. Cox Jr., president of Merrill Lynch Economics, also said home heating oil costs for the average family will rise more than $90 a year.

While the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raised oil prices Thursday from a base of $14.55 per barrel to between $18 and $23.50 per barrel, the Agriculture Department was estimating food prices this year will zoom between 10.2 percent and 11.2 percent.

Department forecasters said they were forced to revise previous estimates upward because of uncertainties throughout the economy — from rising grain prices to fuel shortages and costs — which affect the transportation and processing of food.

Kahn's chief deputy, Barry Bosworth testified on Capitol Hill that OPEC risks causing a recession by its latest move. He added that the United States is heading for bankruptcy unless it can cut its appetite for foreign oil.

In a preliminary analysis, administration officials said the OPEC price rise will add one point to the nation's inflation rate this year and another point in 1980.

They said the number of Americans unemployed will increase by 800,000 through 1980 because of OPEC price increases.

Economic growth, as measured by the Gross National Product, will be two percentage points below what it would have been without the world oil price rises, administration forecasters said.

"The OPEC increases raise the real specter of double-digit inflation for the rest of this year," Kahn told the House Government Operations consumers subcommittee.

The annual inflation rate is currently 13.4 percent, the compounded average of the first five months of the year. Kahn's prediction is that actual inflation will exceed 10 percent in the 12 months ending Dec. 31. Bosworth, who plans to leave the Council on Wage and Price Stability soon, said the inflation situation is "rapidly worsening."

Meanwhile, the council charged Thursday that United Airlines violated the administration's wage guidelines in its recent contract settlement with the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace workers.

It also said three rubber companies — Firestone, B.F. Goodrich, and Uniroyal — are in probable noncompliance with anti-inflation standards because of new contracts with the United Rubber Workers union.

United spokesman Jim Linse said, "We disagree with it (the finding)." He said the company has not decided what, if any, formal action to take.

The United contract with the machinists union amounts to about 37 percent over three years, while the rubber settlements fall between 35 percent and 40 percent over three years, union and government officials say. The administration wage guideline sets an annual 7 percent ceiling.

Kahn joined Vice President Walter Mondale and several congressional leaders on Capitol Hill to discuss the administration's anti-inflation program in the wake of OPEC's action in Geneva.

Kahn said unspecified changes in the voluntary wage and price guidelines program were discussed, but mandatory controls was "one topic that was not on the agenda."

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., said afterwards the session was a "grim analysis" of the OPEC price decisions. He said administration officials "never discussed what we should be discussing, the breaking up of OPEC."

Inaction May Provide Accused Grounds To Seek Dismissals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department says congressional inaction may give thousands of accused criminals new grounds to seek dismissal of the charges against them, beginning Monday.

Congress adjourned for its Independence Day recess without completing action on proposed amendments to the Speedy Trial Act. The Senate adjourned Thursday and the House left after a brief session today.

The two houses will return July 9.

In the meantime, the final requirements of the 1975 act will go into effect on July 1, which is Sunday.

They provide that criminal cases must be dismissed if the defendants have not been put on trial within 100 days of their arrest.

The Senate passed by voice vote last week a measure postponing the dismissal requirement until July 1, 1981. Backers of the measure said it was pushed through quickly in the hope of getting it through the House and to President Carter before the July 1 deadline.

Philip Heymann, assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's criminal division, testified before a House subcommittee on crime Thursday that the act is "very ambiguous" as to whether the dismissal requirement applies to pending cases.

"Literally thousands of cases might have to be dismissed" if action is not taken soon, Heymann said.

"What it looks like is there is going to be a lot of confusion and uncertainty and litigation about it all over the country," Heymann told a reporter later.

Roge Pauley, director of the office of legislation in the criminal division, said he assumed some defense lawyers would be filing motions for dismissal when federal courts open Monday.

"I would if I were a defense counsel," he said.

Pauley predicted there would not be "large scale immediate dismissals" but added that if the act stood unchanged for as much as a month "there will be a significant flow of motions for dismissal and some will presumably be granted."

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., chairman of the subcommittee, which is part of the Judiciary Committee, said he planned at least one more hearing and "the burden of proof will be on those proposing changes in this important legislation."

"It's very dramatic stuff to talk about thousands of criminals roaming around loose and all laughing because they got around some dumb congressional law," Conyers told a reporter.

But he said he doubted any dangerous criminals would avoid prosecution. The act provides that a federal judge may extend the time limit if he believes "the interests of justice" outweigh the defendant's right to a speedy trial.

Mint Encouraging Use Of New Dollar Coins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At banks and in their change beginning Monday, Americans will receive shiny, eleven-faceted coins worth $1 and bearing the likeness of Susan B. Anthony, the only real-life woman ever depicted on U.S. Currency.

Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, who campaigned to put the profile of the 19th century suffrage worker on the new dollar, hopes millions of Americans will use the coins and get a history lesson each time.

"It will make all of our children and all individuals very aware of the role that women have played in history, and she in particular," Miss Oakar said. "We don't want it to become a collectors' item. We want it to be used by the American people."

The Bureau of the Mint, which has produced about $500 million of the new coins, says if they catch on, the Federal Reserve System could save up to $50 million a year because they are cheaper to produce, distribute and keep in circulation than dollar bills.

The government has mounted a major campaign to persuade businesses and banks the coins also will save them money.

According to the Mint, the new coins will save time and reduce errors at the cash register. They are easy to drop in racks without fumbling with the spring clips that hold paper bills down. They won't stick together, won't become soggy and torn and need replacement. They can be counted easily by machines.

The Mint says the public should find them convenient, too. The copper-nickel coins are larger than a quarter, but smaller and lighter than a half-dollar — about one-third the weight of four quarters.

Each has an eleven-sided inner border that can easily be identified by the blind and the elderly with poor sight.

And, adds the Mint, the coins won't blow away.

The government has its fingers crossed because it has had little luck selling new currency to Americans in the past. The Eisenhower silver dollar, bigger and heavier than the Anthony coin, never caught on. Nor did the $2 bill.

The Treasury Department didn't want Susan B. Anthony's picture on its new dollar. It wanted Miss Liberty, a mythical head that 4has adorned several coins.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal wrote Congress in 1978 that any other face would "invite unnecessary controversy."

Susan B. Anthony campaigned for black suffrage and women's suffrage.

States Attempt To Block Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-one states are suing the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in an attempt to block the department's plan to cut about 20 percent in Medicaid and welfare grants for the final three months of the current fiscal year.

Attorneys for the states filed suit in U.S. District Court Thursday shortly after HEW Under Secretary Hale Champion announced a $831-million cut in the $4.3 billion that the 50 states are due to receive for the July 1-Sept. 30 period.

HEW officials ordered the cut in response to a congressional amendment thatslashed $1 billion from the department's 1979 appropriation and ordered HEW to recover the money by eliminating fraud, waste and abuse.

A subsequent non-binding resolution by the Senate instructed HEW to borrow the money it needed from funds designated for fiscal 1980, but Champion said it is unclear whether the department can legally do that.

In their suit, the states argued that the 20 percent cutback does not comply with the amendment because the department is reducing the appropriations without achieving reductions in waste, fraud and abuse.

NO GAS HERE — Connie Dubbe, 19, an Imperial Valley sophomore and summer student assistant at the Environmental Quality Control office in El Centro, continues to defy the oil industry and Arab oil producers Thursday by roller skating back and forth to work, a six-mile round trip. While work-bound motorists zoom past, with air conditioners slurping up more gas to ward off the 116-plus average daily temperature, they might get a glimpse of Miss Dubbe's message to gas guzzlers. Shell Will Deliver Less Gasoline

NEW YORK (UPI) — Unlike most other major oil companies, Shell Oil Co., the largest supplier in the country, will deliver less gasoline to service stations in July than in June because it is having trouble obtaining crude oil.

So far Gulf Oil Corp., Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, Cities Service Co., Mobil Oil Corp. and Atlantic Richfield Co. say they will increase their July allocations slightly.

And Thursday, Mobil said it will provide retail dealers in certain parts of the Northeast and Middle Atlantic region with some of their July gasoline allocation daring the last days of June to alleviate shortages.

But a Shell spokesman said Thursday the company's July gasoline allocations will drop to 70 percent of the amount it delivered to customers in July 1978. In June the company allocated gasoline at 75 percent of its June 1978 sales east of the Rockies and at 80 percent in the West.

"We're having problems obtaining crude oil because of a cutback in the volume that we get under contract from some foreign countries," said Everett Vilander, Shell's assistant public affairs manager for the Northeast.

"We've also been directed to increase our sales of crude to small refiners under the Energy Department's regulations and controls."

As a result, Vilander said, Shell's shortfall of crude needed to run its refineries at full capacity has increased to 140,000 barrels a day from 120,000 barrels a day in June.

Under DOE regulations, Shell and the other major oil companies are required to provide gasoline — in addition to their July allocations — to certain priority users and to the states for emergency set-asides.

"We expect that the total volume of gasoline that we put on the market for all consumers next month will be 80 to 85 percent of wha we actually sold in July of 1978," Vilander said.

Since Shell sold 785 million gallons of gasoline last July, he said that "it looks like we'll deliver about 650 million gallons this July."

Vilander said that at the beginning of June, the company estimated it would supply about 685 million gallons of gas. "That would have been 88 percent of what we sold in July 1978," Vilander said.

The amount of gasoline Shell supplies to state a priority users under the DOE rules "comes off the top," he said. "The remainder goes to our service station network."

Mobil Oil said it took the "temporary expedient" of agreeing to supply hard-pressed dealers with part of their July allocation in response to requests by officials in Connecticut, the District of Columbia, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York and other states.

The dealers affected by the Mobil decision are those in areas designated by the states as having the greatest shortages and longest lines.

A Mobil spokesman emphasized that such borrowing could take place only if the company and the individual dealers agreed.

He warned severe shortages at the pump could develop next month unless the states use their July gasoline set-asides to supply the dealers who accept early delivery of their July allocations.

Attorney Endorses Bushel-For-Barrel

MIAMI (UPI) — Americans can fight steadily increasing oil prices from OPEC nations, says Miami attorney Ellis Rubin, who endorses a-bushel-for-a-barrel plan of selling food to such countries.

"For every hike in the price of crude, let's hike the price of food," Rubin said Thursday.

The 13 member nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries voted Thursday to boost oil prices to a maximum of $23.50 a barrel.

Rubin, the attorney who began the "To Hell With Shell" chain letter campaign last month calling for a boycott during July of all Shell products, said the United States should consider freezing OPEC assets in the United States and stopping military aid until the oil price comes down.

"Last year while Americans fed and clothed and modernized and even armed the OPEC nations, we paid $30 billion to OPEC for oil. They in turn invested $35 billion in U.S. bank deposits, U.S. treasury notes and American corporate stocks and bonds. And today they continue to buy up our farms, buildings, banks and businesses.

"The president and Congress can reverse this rush to economic disaster. OPEC must be told at once that Americans are forming an oil buyers cartel and our goal is a bushel of grain for a barrel of oil," Rubin said Thursday in a prepared statement.

Rubin said he has formed a group called Operation Backbone "named to help the president and Congress stand up to the OPEC nations."

"Operation Backbone stands ready to go anywhere to speak and to organize support for this program," Rubin said. "We flew to Philadelphia, Miss., Saturday and organized a chapter of Operation Backbone. In August we're going to Dallas to set up a chapter. And next week we're off to Hendersonville, N.C., to organize there."

Rubin says he has received inquiries from persons in Texas, South Carolina, Georgia, Pennsylvania and New Jersey about his boycott of Shell in July, which is designed to make oil companies realize they are dependent upon the citizens who buy their product.

In addition to the freezing of OPEC assets, Rubin asked states to pass laws forbidding future gas stations from being owned and operated by the oil companies themselves.

"The stranglehold which is gradually forcing independents out of business is establishing monopolistic control of retail outlets, which must be broken in the legal and equitable way."

Locally, he urged governments and businesses to adopt a 10-hour, four-day work week to save energy.

"Every candidate for public office in the 1980 elections will be confronted and asked whether or not he or she supports this national, state and local program," Rubin said.

Rubin said he was sending the statement to President Carter, each member of the Congress and every state governor.

Company Purchases Vans To Transport Employees

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — As other American commuters sit in long lines for gasoline, a company with offices here and in three other big cities intends to pay the entire cost of getting many of its employees to and from work.

The Louisiana Land & Exploration Co. took delivery Thursday of the first of 15 to 20 passenger vans it says it will use to transport many of its 400 New Orleans employees to and from work — some on round trips of 80 miles or more.

LL&E, which produces and explores for oil and natural gas, said similar programs will be offered soon at its offices in Houston, Denver and Calgary in Alberta, Canada.

Company spokeswoman Nancy McCann said LL&E will pay about $10,000 for each of the vans, liability insurance on and repairs to the vehicles, parking costs and bridge tolls, and for such other things as licenses tags and inspections.

She said no estimate of the program's total cost was immediately available because the program is still being organized, but the expense of the vans alone figures out to between $150,000 to $200,000.

Mrs. McCann said the first 15 vans should be on the road here within the next three weeks, carrying at first about 100 LL&E employees to their jobs in the city's Central Business District.

"The company is addressing the current energy shortage, as well as the problems of urban congestion and pollution," said Mrs. McCann. "By offering our employees these vans, we can take a number of cars off the road and provide a benefit to our employees, as well."

Mayor Forbidden To Buy Fuel

OCEAN CITY, Md. (AP) — Ocean City Mayor Harry W. Kelley has been forbidden to buy any more gasoline for the town's gas stations.

The city council Thursday voted 5-2 against Kelley's plan to purchase 24,000 more gallons of spot-market gasoline at $1.42 a gallon for resort-area stations.

Council members argued that Ocean City should not continue subsidizing the gas stations and that there is gas outside Ocean City for tourists to buy.

Meanwhile, Kelley said 120,000 gallons he stockpiled for the gas stations over the last few months has been sold to the stations.

He said the resort's 15 stations should have enough to get through this weekend, but some station operators said they would be closed.

Ocean City sold its gas stockpile to stations for 92 cents a gallon, but some stations are selling the gas to motorists at prices up to $1.15 a gallon for unleaded. Other stations refused to buy the gas, accusing Kelley of getting it from the "black market."

"He ought to be locked up for selling it," said Bill Oliver, owner of a Gulf station near the U.S. Route 50 bridge

U.S. Leaders Denounce OPEC's Oil Price Hike

By United Press International

The world reeled today under OPEC's stinging 24 percent oil price boost, and experts warned the ageement may yet fall apart unless the cartel steps up production or consumers cut back their energy appetites.

"There is no one on Earth who will fail to suffer from these extraordinary increases in oil prices," President Carter said in denouncing the increases, which allow producers to charge from $18 to $23.50 a barrel.

Carter, in Tokyo where the Big Seven industrial powers struggled to reach a compromise to cut back oil consumption, said this year's OPEC price increases, "will cost our nation at least 2 percent in increased inflation and at least a 2 percent decrease in the rate of growth."

U.S. consumers soon will be paying 4.5 cents to 5 cents more a gallon for gasoline, home heating oil and diesel fuel because of OPEC's price increase, the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation in New York said.

Carter administration officials said 250,000 Americans will lose their jobs. In Britain, unemployment may rise by between 50,000 and 100,000. Italian oil industry sources said Italy would pay 35 percent more for oil this year and India said its bill will be rise by $450 million.,

Thursday's decision by the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — created in 1960 to press for a $1.80-a-barrel oil price — sparked threats of retaliatory action by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., who warned the Senate was in an "ugly mood."

"I think there may be some attempt at punitive action," Jackson said Thursday on ABC TV. "But will it get us more oil? That is the question. And as Pogo said, 'The enemy is us.' We've been on notice that this was going to happen: Prices going up and supply going down."

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said, "There are 100 ways to retaliate ... You use arms shipments, you use credits, you use food. You're just as nasty back as they are. It's time we realized we're not living in a world full of nice countries... they are not our friends, they are our enemies."

Oil analysts expressed doubt that OPEC's current ceiling of $23.50 a barrel would stick since many OPEC members have cut back on production to keep demand — and prices — high.

"It's questionable whether most OPEC members will be willing to accept something less than what they can get on the spot market, where crude has been selling for between $30 and $40 a barrel," said Dr. Gary Ross of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation.

"It's still uncertain whether OPEC's decision on a maximum price will become unglued at some point," he said.

Joseph Tovey of Tovey & Co., a New York investment banking firm specializing in energy, warned, "Without increased oil production, OPEC's current ceiling price is going to be be exceeded."

In Geneva, Saudi Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani warned that unless the major industrial nations cut consumption and concentrate on alternate energy sources, "We are going to face a real disaster."

Under the OPEC agreement, the 13 cartel members will be allowed to charge $18 to $23.50, depending on the quality of their oil.

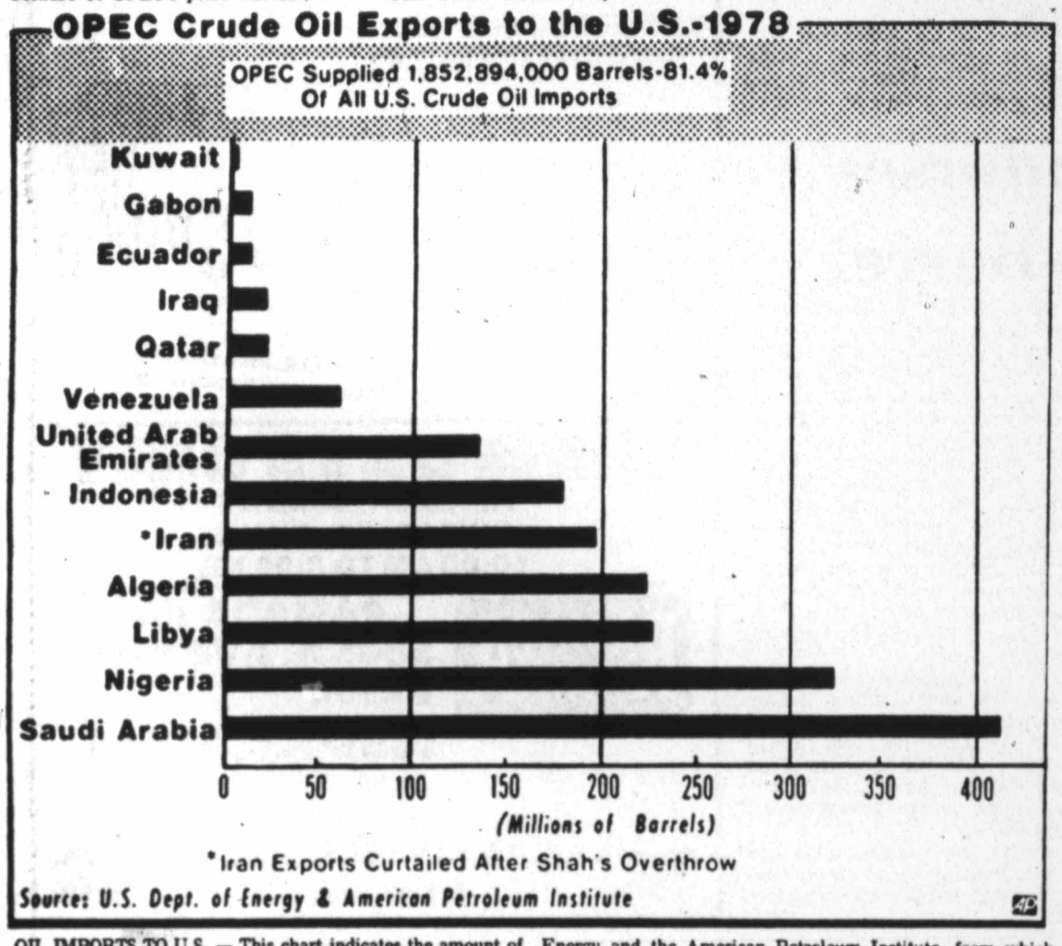
Saudi Arabia, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates said they would stick to the $18 rate. Kuwait said its oil will cost $19.50 a barrel, Iran said prices would range between $21 and $22 and radical Libya said it would charge the full $23.50.

The bottom line for Americans was sharply higher prices for petroleum, transportation, plastics and food since almost every product the nation uses in its daily life is based on oil.

The OPEC price boost actually translates into an increase of 7 cents to 8 cents a gallon for U.S. refiners, but the larger oil companies cannot pass the full amount along to the consumer because of the government regulations.

Smaller retailers, Tovey said, may engage in price gouging.

"Smaller oil companies and retailers are likely to engage in full exploitation of the tight petroleum market and raise prices by more than 10 cents a gallon for gasoline, home heating oil and diesel fuel within 30 to 60 days," he said.



OIL IMPORTS TO U.S. — This chart indicates the amount of oil in millions of barrels that OPEC member nations import into the United States. According to the U.S. Department of Energy and the American Petroleum Institute, from which these statistics are gathered, the producers in OPEC account for 81.4 percent of all U.S. imports. (AP Laserphoto)

Price Increase Will Affect Jobless Line

WASHINGTON (UPI) — OPEC's crude oil price hike, the latest insult to motorists already sweating out long lines to pay rising gas prices, also will have a profound effect on the unemployment lines.

Government figures show Thursday's up-to-$3.46 — or 24 percent —increase by the oil-producing nations would mean an additional 800,000 unemployed Americans by the end of 1980.

Administration economists calculated the latest price increases by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, combined with those made earlier this year, will have these effects on the U.S. Economy:

— Unemployment will be increased by 250,000 by the end of 1979 and another 550,000 by the end of 1980, a total increase of 800,000.

— The rate of inflation will be 1.0 percent higher this year than it otherwise would have been, and 1.0 percent higher again in 1980.

— About 12 cents will be added to the price of both gasoline and heating oil, if all the cost increase is passed on to consumers.

— Growth of the Gross National Product, sum of all goods and services produced by the nation, will be reduced by 1.0 percent this year and another 1.0 percent in 1980 below what it would have been. The GNP at the end of 1980 will be 2 percent less than it would have been.

Administration officials said about one-third of all these effects are attributable to OPEC price increases announced Thursday. The rest comes from increases since December.

The estimates assume an average OPEC price of $20 per barrel of crude oil. If differentials push that price higher, the effects would be greater.

Fuel Shortages Slow Tourists

By The Associated Press

A Rhode Island supplier said sales for traditional clambakes at the shore were off and a Maine town offered tourists free gasoline, as the spreading fuel crunch clouded travel plans for the weekend and July Fourth holiday.

A spot check by the Associated Press showed that weekend gasoline supplies were tight in 35 states, with the biggest pinch in the heavily populated cities in the East.

Seventy percent of West Virginia's gas stations were expected to be closed Saturday and 95 percent Sunday. In Portland, Ore., 93 percent were expected to be closed Sunday.

The situation has "stabilized at disaster," said the Automobile Club of New York, where gas lines stretched up to 2½ miles this week and prices ranged up to $1.60 a gallon.

The Automobile Association of America said the average gas price across the nation was 94.3 cents a gallon — and OPEC adopted a new pricing system that will add four cents to that in the months ahead.

In Orange, Calif., a dealer who has been having trouble getting adequate allocations said he will begin selling fuel for $5 a gallon Monday. Tony Grasso said he's aiming at drivers who hate lines.

In Miami, the gas crunch was blamed for the suicide of 60-year-old James Rogers, who ran a newspaper-delivery service. Rogers' wife said he was "extremely despondent over not being able to get gas to deliver his newspapers" because of rationing.

With end-of-month shortages, fuel blockades by striking truckers and threats of a shutdown July 1 by service station owners complicating the gas picture, officials took these steps:

— Pennsylvania and Rhode Island officials agreed to release part of their states' emergency "set-aside" supplies of gas for July to stations that stay open over the weekend.

— New York City Mayor Edward Koch ordered a crackdown on drivers who violate "odd-even" rationing regulations. He also directed police to visit every gas station in the city today to inform operators of state rules mandating weekend openings for some outlets.

"We want to get credibility back so that when a motorist gets up in the morning, the first thing he thinks of is coffee, not gasoline," Koch said.

— Vermont set up a telephone "Gas-Line" to provide up-to-date information on gasoline supplies in the state.

— The seaside tourist spot of Trenton, Maine, persuaded both local station operators to give $5 worth of gas to anyone who stays in town and shops this weekend. "Not many vacationers have made it up our way lately," said Whitney Austin, president of Trenton's Chamber of Commerce, which will pay for the gas.

Motorists' fears of gasless highways continued to take their toll on tourist areas around the country.

A fish supplier in Rhode Island said the gas crisis has cut into his business by as much as 50 percent. "We're usually taking a lot of orders for Fourth of July clambakes but right now there's nothing coming in," said the supplier, who asked his name not be used.

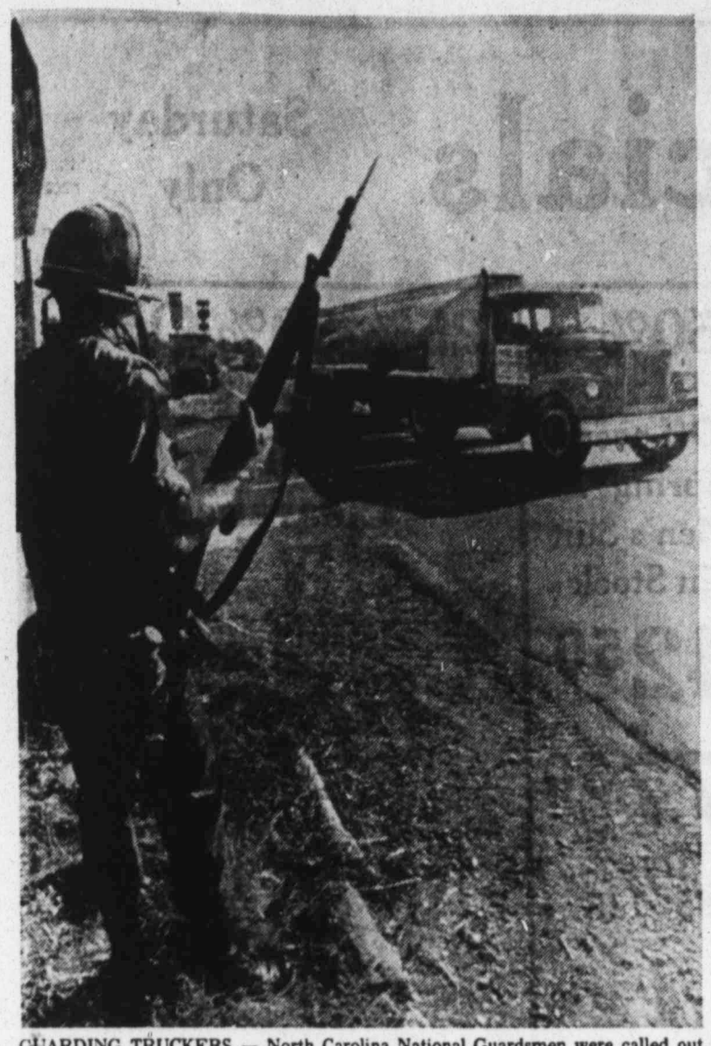
Delaware today became the 10th state to begin odd-even rationing this summer and Rhode Island was slated to join the list, which includes the District of Columbia, next week.

The gas picture was further complicated by threats by some dealers to shut down starting July 1 to protest federal regulations that restrict profit margins. Threatened shutdowns in New Jersey, Connecticut and Pennsylvania were called off Thursday at the last minute.

Meanwhile, Mobil Oil Corp. said dealers in the District of Columbia and 10 Eastern states would receive part of their July allocations this week as a "temporary expedient."

And Shell Oil Co. spokesman Everett Vilander, in Baltimore, said the firm had offered to give dealers early delivery of one load each borrowed against July allocations.

But Sun Oil Co. said the amount of gasoline available to most dealers in July will be only about 70 percent of last year's supplies, down from 71 percent in June.



GUARDING TRUCKERS — North Carolina National Guardsmen were called out Thursday night to protect gas haulers from striking independent truck driver. The call was made to insure the safety of all. (AP Laserphoto)

Four Counties Added To Odd-Even List

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements' odd-even gasoline rationing plan will cover four more counties — Galveston, Denton, Fort Bend and Waller — starting Monday.

The governor announced at his weekly news conference Thursday he had added the counties to eight already under odd-even rationing.

Since Monday is an even-numbered day — July 2 — only cars whose license plates end with an even number will be able to buy gasoline on the first day of gas sales restrictions in the four new counties.

Clements said authorities in the eight counties already under the rationing plan tell him they "are satisfied with it and are convinced the lines are shorter and the system is indeed working.

He said "misbehavior is at a minimum" in the gasoline lines. "I am not familiar with any incidents in that regard." He mentioned with approval a new Dallas ordinance providing up to a $200 fine for line-jumping.

Clements said "first of the month allocations will ease" somewhat the present tight gasoline supply.

Bill Lauderback, administrative assistant to energy adviser Ed Vetter, said the governor's office would watch the gas situation for two more weekends before deciding about Sunday sales. He said the odd-even rationing system might leave stations enough gasoline to voluntarily open on Sundays.

Clements said he "can't understand" why the U.S. Department of Energy allows new service stations to open at a time when existing ones can't get enough gas.

"They've done such a good job of botching up the program that I just assume this is one of their mistakes," he said. ... "If there is anything we don't need in Texas at this time, it is more filling stations. We need them like a hole in the head."

FIRST NEWS CONFERENCE

Woodrow Wilson held the first presidential news conference at the White House Executive Offices on March 15, 1913.

Some ideas work and some won't! In 1978 over 2000 growers from California to Delaware and from Canada to Florida agreed that the Spray Sickle is one weed control idea that really works.
The 1979 Spray Sickle is better than ever — (Over 35 New Improvements.) If you have Johnson Grass (or any other problem weed) the Spray Sickle is really the only sure way to eradicate it.

Suspect Sought In Two Assaults

A 49-year-old Lubbock man has been named as a suspect in two separate assaults occurring Thursday afternoon, police said.

The man reportedly went to a Avenue M residence about 4 p.m. and became enraged when his ex-wife refused to talk to him.

The man who now lives with the woman said the suspect attempted to get into the house by cutting through the screen door. When that failed, the man went to his car and retrieved a pistol, according to reports.

The middle-aged couple said they closed the door on the suspect and called police. However, the armed man left the scene before officers arrived.

The victim, who was treated and released at St. Mary's Hospital for a large cut across the back, said the man came to his house with a female companion about 5:30 p.m.

Reports indicate the two men began arguing and the suspect displayed a yellow pocket knife and slashed the other man. The victim said he chased the knife-wielding man out of the house with a tire tool.

No arrest had been made in connection with either assault by late this morning.

In another reported assault, a 30-year-old Lubbock man said he got into a fight about 1:50 a.m. today with a group of men, and that he cut one man on the face "very bad."

The man said he was at a club at Broadway and Avenue G when he got into an altercation with about seven other men. Reports indicate the man suffered multiple cuts and a bloody nose in the fight.

The man said that after cutting one of the men in the group, several of the others chased him. The man was able to escape and ran to the police station where he reported the incident.

At the station, the man showed a "very sharp" blood-stained pocketknife he said he used on one of his attackers. The man then called his wife to pick him up at the station and take him to Methodist Hospital.

Thieves made off with large hauls of property from a Lubbock business and a vacant apartment, police reports indicated Thursday.

About $1,800 worth of tires and wheels was reported stolen between 6:30 p.m. Wednesday and 7:15 a.m. Thursday by Mike Stevens, manager at American Equipment and Trailer Co., 3707 Quirt Ave.

Stevens said he arrived at work Thursday morning to discover six Goodyear tires mounted on Firestone wheels missing from a storage area behind the store building.

Police found a hole cut in a chain-link fence which surrounds the storage area, where the mounted tires had been chained together. The padlock securing the chain apparently had been cut by a bolt cutter.

Chester Campbell told police Thursday that about $785 worth of furniture and appliances had been stolen from a vacant apartment at 1121-D 43rd St. sometime Tuesday or Wednesday.

He had gone to make a routine check of the property when he discovered the loss.

Perjury Charge Names Lubbock Woman

A Lubbock woman Thursday was charged with aggravated perjury in connection with testimony about an alleged murder she gave before a Lubbock County grand jury in March.

Gloria Moreno, 20, of 1912 Ave. P was named in the aggravated perjury charge filed by the Criminal District Attorney's Office. A $25,000 bond was recommended.

Miss Moreno is accused of knowingly giving a false statement to the grand jury that she witnessed the Feb. 8 beating death of Dillard Odell Gaddy at his 2910 Ave. H, No. 58 apartment.

The charge alleges that while under oath, Miss Moreno told a 140th District grand jury that she watched David G. Coronado kick and beat the 54-year-old Gaddy. Earlier this week, while police were questioning Miss Moreno about another matter, she provided them with a notarized statement saying she had lied about watching Coronado beat Gaddy in February.

Gaddy was discovered dead at his residence about 10 a.m. Feb. 8. Autopsy results showed that the man had died of an apparent heart attack and Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy ruled the death was of natural causes.

But about a week later, Miss Moreno, who had traveled with Coronado to his Tulsa, Okla., home, told Oklahoma officials Coronado had beaten Gaddy to death.

Coronado was arrested by Tulsa police and transfered to the custody of Lubbock authorities. Murder charges were filed against the 21-year-old Coronado and the March grand jury returned a murder indictment against him in connection with Gaddy's death.

Investigators say the case against Coronado has been re-opened and will be re-evaluated before any decision is made as to whether to dismiss the murder charge or continue prosecution procedures.

In other charges filed Thursday, Debra Dianne Anderson, 22, of 709 Ave. R, Apt. 27, was charged with the Monday theft of more than $2,500 and a $300 diamond ring from Lubbock Bail Bond, 808 Main St.

The district attorney's office recommended that bond for Miss Anderson be denied because she is free on bond posted on another charge.

Ward allegedly tried to cash a forged check Tuesday at a drive-in window of First National Bank, 1500 Broadway. A $15,000 bond was recommended.

Two Lubbock men were charged with stealing four tires and and wheels from Gene Messer Ford, 31st Street and Avenue H, June 12.

Named in that theft charge were Willie Lee Thomas, 29, of 1122 43rd St. and Clarence Robinson Jr., 20, of 2125 Emory St. A $15,000 bond was recommended for Thomas and a $5,000 bond for Robinson.

Douglas Sims was charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and a $2,500 bond was recommended.

California Earthquake Causes No Injuries

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An earthquake centered in the San Bernardin Mountains shook Southern California all the way to the Mexican border Thursday night, rattling windows and furniture, but apparently causing no damage.

The quake registered 4.4 on the Richter scale at about 10:53 p.m., according to Kate Hutton, a seismologist at California Technological Institute in Pasadena. She said the quake was centered in Big Bear, 90 miles east of Los Angeles.

A dispatcher at the San Bernardino County Sheriff's substation said deputies were answering numerous calls about burglar alarms set off by the jolt, which reportedly lasted four to eight seconds.

The dispatcher said deputies also were checking mountain roads for possible landslides.

Mary Musselman, a dispatcher for the Riverside County sheriff, said she received about 25 calls after the quake hit, but did not feel it at the station in Riverside.

Marvin Scott of San Jacinto, near Big Bear, said his 11-year-old son Steve, was riding his bicycle in the family's backyard and he felt the ground shaking under his bicycle.

"We heard the beams (of the house) creaking, they were really pushing against each other. It lasted for quite awhile. All we could do was hang on," Scott said.

San Bernardino County sheriff's deputy John Gocke said no damage or injuries were reported in the county.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage; 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

Khadafy Plans To Shut Off Oil Exports

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy was quoted as saying in an interview published today he plans to shut off his country's oil exports for at least two years and is urging other Arab oil producers to do the same.

"We shall stop producing oil — except what we need for our own domestic consumption — for two years, perhaps three or four," Khadafy was quoted as saying. "The more we store the oil in our ground, the better it will be for us."

The interview was conducted by the Damascus correspondent of the Paris-based Arabic weekly Al-Mustaqbal last Monday, before the latest meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

There was no immediate confirmation today from the Libyan goverment or other sources that such a shutdown had been ordered.

Khadafy was in the Syrian capital last weekend for talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad about strengthening the Arab opposition to the U.S.-sponsored Egyptian-Israeli peace process.

Libya produces about 2 million barrels of oil a day and virtually all of it is exported. It is the source for about 10 percent of the oil imported by the United States, and a sudden cut-off in Libyan exports could throw the American oil market into chaos.

In 1976, the latest year for which figures are available, Libya consumed domestically only 20 million barrels out of total production of 704 million.

Speaking three days before the OPEC oil ministers agreed on new price hikes at their Geneva meeting, Khadafy was quoted as saying, "The subject of oil production and oil prices has become tiring. We have become responsible for inflation while the real responsibles are the industrialized nations."

Khadafy said giant oil companies and the United States were primarily to blame for inflation. He said the falling value of the U.S. dollar "has ... caused the oil producers tremendous losses."

Khadafy said the shut-off of Libyan oil would bring pressure on the industrialized nations.

"They will have to establish just relations between us and them," he was quoted as saying. "They have to evaluate us as we deserve even if we have to break all relations with them."

The OPEC countries decided at the Geneva meeting to raise crude oil prices to between $18 and $23.50 a barrel, amounting to increases as high as 37 percent.

Fair Weather Predicted To Continue

A-J News Services

Nighttime thunderstorms over the Panhandle disappeared in early morning sunlight this morning, and today and Saturday are expected to be sunny and hot with temperatures in the high 90s.

Winds will be southerly at 10 to 15 mph today and southeasterly at five to 10 mph tonight, forecasters said.

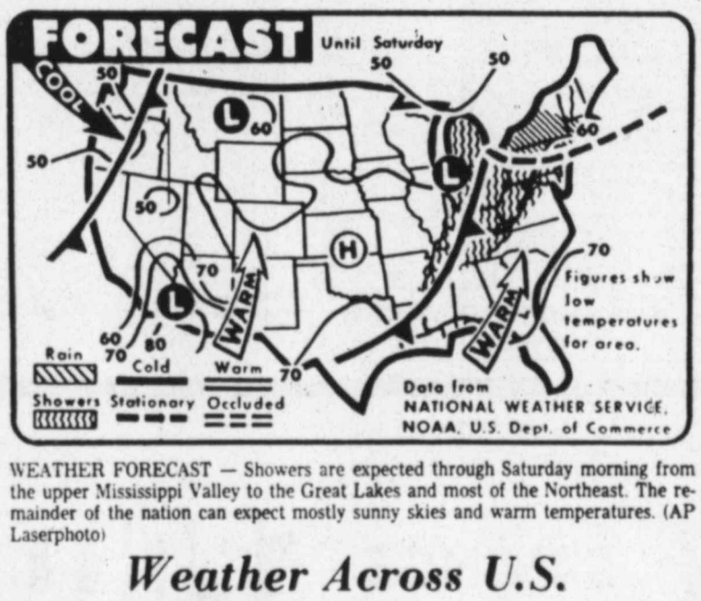
The low tonight should be near 70.

This morning's low in Lubbock was 71 after a high of 97 Thursday afternoon.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms rumbled across the eastern and central Panhandle during the night but dissipated with only small amounts of rainfall reported. Amarillo reported a trace of rain.

The extended forecast for the West Texas region calls for continued fair weather with isolated nighttime thunderstorms in the southwestern mountains and the Panhandle Sunday through Tuesday.

Temperatures will vary from the mid-90s in the north to 105 in the Big Bend area.



WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected through Saturday morning from the upper Mississippi Valley to the Great Lakes and most of the Northeast. The remainder of the nation can expect mostly sunny skies and warm temperatures. (AP Laserphoto)

Single Lens Reflex Camera Boom Called Great Success Story

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The booming growth of the single lens reflex camera market is among the success stories of the decade.

Sales of still cameras in 1978 totaled $960 million, with SLRs accounting for about 12 percent of this figure. Unit sales of SLRs in 1978 were 1.6 million, not much perhaps when compared with the 17.5 million total for all still cameras, but a big jump from 340,000 SLRs sold in 1970.

And to the American subsidiaries of Japanese companies in the SLR market it's a bonanza. The Japanese makers include Canon, Nikon, Minolta, Asohi (which makes Pentax) and Olympus. There is one West German maker, the Leica Co. but the Leicaflex is priced at the premium end of the market and is not a large factor in overall sales.

According to the Wolfman Report, the bible of the photographic industry, 42 percent of SLRs sell at retail for $200 to $300; 20 percent for under $200; 20 percent for $300 to $400; and the rest over $400.

There isn't an American SLR At present, even though the first reflex camera was made in this country. The Graflex, a monster that first used dry plates and then cut film, was the most widely-used press camera in the first quarter of this century.

The reason there is no U.S.made SLR is that cheaper cameras, instant picture cameras, film, motion picture and TV cameras and high grade specialty cameras and equipment appeal more to American manufacturers.

The sharp rise in sales of the 35mm SLR came about because of improvements that made it easy for amateurs to use. It has automatic light metering, aperture control and other details that were made possible by use of a single lens instead of separate lenses for viewing and shooting.

The industry also has made use of television advertising and new mass marketing outlets and techniques.

Nikon is believed to have the biggest share of the SLR Market in the United States but the others are growing rapidly.

Olympus invaded the market only two years ago when Robert Brockway, who was a combat photographer in World War II, formed its U.S. subsidiary.

Brockway went into business for himself at the age of 22, manufacturing a light exposure meter. He subsequently was in cable television, worked for CBS, MGM records and for four years headed a motion picture and music venture jointly owned by Siemens of Germany and Philips of Holland.

He already is challenging the two leaders, Nikon and Canon.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Mart Hurt By Libyan Oil Report

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today, faced with a report that Libya had threatened to cut off its oil exports.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 2 points at mid-morning, was off 2.08 at 840.96 by noontime.

Gainers held a slight edge on losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues after leading by a broad margin earlier.

Col. Moammar Khadafy of Libya was quoted by a Paris-based Arabic weekly publication as saying he plans to shut off oil exports for at least two years.

Libya, one of the most militant members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, accounts for about 10 percent of the oil imported by the United States.

Confirmation of the story was not immediately available. "If he's serious, this is a real shocker," said one broker.

Stocks of companies such as Occidental Petroleum and Charter Co. which have direct links with Libyan oil were ahead in trading because of order imbalances. Occidental led the active list, down ¼ at 23¾.

Sambo's Restaurants fell ¾ to 6⅜ in trading that included a 192,600-share block at 6½. The company said Thursday it expects to post a loss for the second quarter and probably for the full year as well. The NYSE's composite index dropped .09 to 58.24. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index added .06 to 200.83.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 16.36 million shares at noontime, against 16.70 million at the same point Thursday.

Two Oil Rig Suits Filed

GALVESTON (AP) — Federal law suits totaling about $4.3 million have been filed by an injured crewman and the survivors of another crewman killed when the Ranger I oil drilling platform collapsed in the Gulf of Mexico in May.

Mary Lou Palomarez and her two children are asking about $3.8 million as a result of the accident in which her husband died. The suit, filed Thursday, says that Cruz H. Palomarez was killed because Halliburton Co. failed to provide a safe and seaworthy place in which to work.

Paul Lee Fromberg, 26, of Houston filed a suit Wednesday seeking about $475,000. The suit says Fromberg was severely disabled by injuries he suffered in the accident.

Eight men were presumeded killed in the accident, but only five bodies have been recovered so far.

By ALEX SACHARE

NEW YORK (AP) — It seemed like a good idea at the time.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was in town, so it was decided to bring him to one of the theaters showing the Bruce Lee film, "Game of Death," in which Abdul-Jabbar has a feature role. A photographer would snap some pictures of Abdul-Jabbar alongside a poster advertising the film, or under the theatre's marquee, and it would make good publicity.

There was only one problem the theater was in Times Square.

"In tha 42nd Street area, it doesn't take much to attract a crowd," said Abdul-Jabbarn shaking his head.

And the sight of the 7-foot-2 basketball great was more than enough. Seconds after he got out of his car, he was surrounded by street people. Peddlers spotted the growing group and quickly came over to hawk their wares. The crowd swelled until the sidewalk was jammed.

Although the actual picture-taking required only a few seconds, getting Abdul-Jabbar away from the crowd was another matter. The delay set back a schedule of appearances that had been carefully planned to take advantage of every minute he was going to be in town.

"This is the umpteenth one I've done in the last couple of days," he said, leaning his head back on the couch in his hotel suite later Tuesday morning, unwinding just a bit between appearances. "I'm just about numbed out."

Later that day Abdul-Jabbar served as host of a ceremony in which Manhattan's 52nd Street was designated "Swing Street" and plaques honoring five jazz greats were implanted in the sidewalk. Then he caught a flight back to California, where Wednesday he began work on another film, "Airplane!"

"It's a remake of a movie from the early 1950s, a spoof of all those disaster movies," he said. "In the original the co-pilot was played by Crazy Legs Hirsch. Now I'm going to be the co-pilot. It's produced by Howard Koch, who made Kentucky Fried Movie' and 'Groove Tube.'"

Abdul-Jabbar has done several films and television shows and wants to test his acting ability with an eye toward the future.

"This is the first real acting that I will be doing with the official pros," he said. "It will be a good indication to me and everyone else as to whether or not I can do it."

Does Abdul-Jabbar, now 32 and a veteran of 10 pro seasons, spend much time thinking about what he'll do after he retires?

"I think about it more and more as time goes n," he replied. "I've played a lot longer than Im going to play, I'm in the last half of my career. But until it's really with you, face to face, you don't really know."

Abdul-Jabbar has no timetable for retirement.

"I'll play as long as my physical and mental health hold up," he said. "Either one of those can be gone in the matter of a blinking of an eye. I'm just going to play it by ear."

For Abdul-Jabbar, some of the fun went out of pro basketball on Oct. 18, 1977, when he broke the fourth metacarpal in his right hand while punching Milwaukee's Kent Benson, after an exchange of elbows.

"It did weigh on my mind," he said. "I'm a target. People pay a lot of attention to what I do because they have to try and stop me. That put me in

It was another of those knock-down, drag-out battles between the Texas Rangers and California Angels.

The pitchers were knocking down the batters and the batters were dragging themselves back up and hitting the ball.

After plenty of hits by the batters and some near-misses by the pitchers, the Rangers wound up on the long end of a wild 14-4 decision in the game between two of the American League West leaders.

"It was just one of those nights," said California's Jim Barr, who was roughed up by the Texas hitters in the first inning and left after getting only one out.

The Rangers bolted to a 12-0 lead in the first two innings, beltng 16 hits off three hapless California pitchers. That apparently got the Angels angry, for in the third inning the Rangers' Pat Putnam was hit by a Steve Eddy pitch.

The next inning, California's Dan Ford was brushed back by Ranger starter Ferguson Jenkins.

"I had orders to knock him down, to hit him," said Jenkins. "We have to protect our hitters; they are the guys who do the job for us and so we have to protect them."

Noted Barr:

"These things (brush-back pitches) happen and they're going to happen as long as baseball is played. It will always happen."

Billy Sample knocked in four runs for the Rangers while Bump Wills and Dave Roberts smashed four hits apiece. Jenkins gave up only five hits to the slumping Angels, who lost their seventh straight game.

"I tried to tell myself the score was 1-0 and pitch accordingly," said Jenkins. "I felt great the first six innings, and the last three I felt done on both sides."

Astros 6, Giants 5

San Francisco, hours after reaching for some pitching help, went out and proved it needed it.

"We've had pitching problems," General Manager Spec Richardson explained,before the Giants blew a 4-0 lead to the Astros. "We've been losing too many ballgames in the eighth and ninth innings."

The Giants had given up two-time batting champion Bill Madlock to Pittsburgh for righthander Ed Whitson and third baseman Hector Cruz to Cincinnati for Pedro Borbon. They discovered that wasn't enough to stop Houston.

"It was a great comeback," said Houston Manager Bill Virdon, who made decisions that paid off all afternoon. "It's a good sign when you can do that against a good team."

Rick Williams, 3-3, was shelled in the first, but Virdon stuck with him and it paid off with a victory. Cesar Cedeno had two hits, stole two bases, scored one run and drove in another.

Ed Halicki, sidelined a month with tonsilitis, was discouraged about his return to action.

"I didn't have my rhythm," the righthander said. "I thought I was ready, but today was a setback. I was hurrying my pitches."

Mets 3, Pirates 2

Tim Foli is a scrapper from way back. Now with the Pittsburgh Pirates, the journeyman shortstop has had two stints with the New York Mets. And he has had run-ins.

Seeds Continue To Fall During Early Net Play

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Three-time Wimbledon champion Bjorn Borg faced dual threats to his title today, one in the form of hard-serving American Hank Pfister and the other a thigh injury.

Borg rested Thursday and he and his coach were clearly worried about continuing his campaign today.

Referee Fred Hoyles ruled out any chance for a day's grace.

"If he is scheduled to play he must. There are no dispensations or favors for champions," he said.

The cool Swede apparently strained the leg during a tough five-setter against Indian No. 1 Vijay Amritraj Wednesday.

He was under treatment Thursday, but also found time to practice at Queen's Club.

"If this was any other tournament but Wimbledon, he would have withdrawn already," said Borg's coach, Lennart Bergelin.

If Borg did withdraw, the men's singles competition could be one of the most wide open affairs here in years.

Because in Thursday's action, Guillermo Vilas became just another seeded player who has bitten the dust in the early going.

Vilas, who beamed with triumph as he lifted the Wimbledon men's singles trophy high above his head on movie screens all over the world after beatingactor and sometimes tennis pro Dean Paul Martin in the movie "Players," bowed out of the 1979 championship, beaten in four sets by an acrobatic American ranked just 41st in his own country.

Tim Wilkison, a fresh-faced 19-year-old from Shelby, N.C., beat the sixth-seeded Vilas 5-7, 6-2, 6-1, 7-6 to earn a third-round meeting with Tom Okker.

Vilas was the seventh of the 16 seeds to fall in what is fast becoming the most open Wimbledon in years.

Wilkison ended his match against Vilas with his shirt soaked with sweat and covered by grass stains. The American did some remarkable retrieving against Vilas in front of a large crowd at court three.

But the American teen-ager had little time to reflect on his big win. He was almost immediately hustled off to another outside court to partner John Sadri in a men's doubles first-round match.

"All my best results have been on grass," Wilkison said later. "I'm always trying to rush things, but when it got to the tiebreaker in the fourth, I just told myself to take my time and relax."

Wilkison's father and mother, who taught him to play, were there to watch.

Vilas, who has won every major tournament except Wimbledon, was bitterly disappointed at his loss to the agile Wilkison.

"I think he played quite well, but I helped him a lot," said the Argentine

Houston Comes From Behind Against SF

Mets, in 1970 and 1971, he was involved in two different fights with his teammates. One was with Coach Joe Pignatano in spring training and another in the dugout with Ed Kranepool — two very unlikely sparring mates.

After several years with Montreal and a brief outing in San Francisco, Foli returned to the Mets in 1978. After a very quiet season, he was traded to Pittsburgh for Frank Taveras last April.

Thursday night, Foli picked on Mets catcher John Stearns, but this time it was during the heat of competition, not in anger.

With the Pirates trailing 2-1 in the bottom of the sixth, Foli doubled. Bill Robinson, who had homered in the fourth, singled in the direction of right fielder Joel Youngblood.

Youngblood threw the ball home on one hop, and Foli came crashing into Stearns. Stearns held onto the ball for the out, then grabbed Foli by the legs. The two rolled around, and both benches emptied toward the plate. No punches were thrown, and order was restored quickly.

In the next inning, Stearns slammed a solo homer, his fifth of the year, to give New York a 3-1 lead, and the Mets hung on to beat Pittsburgh 3-2. The Mets won three of five in their home-and-home series with Pittsburgh.

Royals 7, A's 6

Al Cowens' RBI single capped a two-run ninth, leading Kansas City over Oakland. Jamie Quirk led off the inning with a single off Dave Heaverlo and went to second on Willie Wilson's sacrifice bunt.

After George Brett was walked intentionally, Amo Otis singled home the tying run and sent Brett to third before Cowens delivered the game-winning hit. Al Hrabosky was the winner in relief.

"It was a tough game for us to lose," said Oakland Manager Jim Marshall. "We can't hold anybody the last two innings. We've lost at least 20 games that way."

Indians 6, Orioles 3

Ron Hassey drove in three runs and Rick Wise and Sid Monge combined on a five-hitter as Cleveland beat Baltimore and ended a 10-game losing streak. Hassey singled home a run during a two-run second inning and had a two-run double in the fourth, doubling his 1979 RBI total for 14 previous games.

Yankees 5, Blue Jays 3

Jim Spencer doubled home the tie-breaking run in the 10th inning and scored on an error by losing pitcher Mark Lemongello as New York defeated Toronto.

Lou Piniella singled with one out in the Yankee 10th and Spencer, who had entered the game as a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning, drilled a pitch from Lemongello, 1-8, off the center field fence to break a 3-3 tie. Graig Nettles then grounded to second, but Lemongello, covering first base, let Dan Ainge's throw get past him for an error, allowing Spencer to score.

Tigers 6, Red Sox 3

Champ Summers drove in three runs with his third homer in as many games as Detroit efeated Boston. Tiger starter Jack Billingham scattered seven hits in seven innings to pick up the victory with relief help from Aurelio Lopez. Boston starter Steve Renko took the defeat.

Noted Renko, who gave up Summers' homer in the fifth; "You know what you have to do with him. But when you get behind, like I did, you have to come in with it. But, boy, did I come in with it. He SHOULD have hit a homer on that pitch."

Renko did acknowledge:

"He hit two pretty good pitches, too, for singles, though. So what can you do? He's in a hot streak now."

White Sox 2, Mariners 1

Ross Baumgarten and Steve Trout scattered nine hits to lead Chicago over Seattle. Trout came on in the ninth with Seattle leading 2-0 and two runners aboard and nobody out. The reliever gave up a bunt single to Dan Meyer to load the bases, but then pitched out of the jam as Seattle scored its only run on a double-play ball.

Jorge Orta's RBI single in the first inning gave the White Sox a 1-0 lead and they built it to 2-0 on Chet Lemon's run-scoring single in the top of the ninth.

Brewers 6, Twins 5

Ben Oglivie's tie-breaking home run in the 10th inning powered Milwaukee over Minnesota. Oglivie's blast came off Mike Marshall, 9-7, with two out and overshadowed a comeback rally by the Twins, who had tied the game with two runs in the ninth. Bill Castro picked up the victory in relief.

"He's been doing a super job for us," said Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger of Oglivie, who drilled two home runs Wednesday night. "This is the time of year he usually comes into his own."

Reds 2, Dodgers 1

Cincinnati sent the Dodgers to defeat for the third straight time and sixth time in seven games on the strength of first-inning RBI hits by Joe Morgan and George Foster.

Reds right-handers Tom Hume and Doug Bair limited the Dodgers to six hits.

Los Angeles scored its first earned run in 24 innings in the sixth when Reggie Smith doubled and later scored on Ron Cey's sacrifice fly.

Hume, 6-5, was the winner and Burt Hooton, 7-5, who went the distance scattering 10 hits, was the loser.

Padres 6, Braves 5

Jerry Turner doubled twice and drove in two runs, and John D'Acquisto, 4-5, went 7 2-3 innings in relief to beat Atlanta.

San Diego scored four runs after two were out in the fifth. Paul Dade doubled, Danny Briggs singled, and Turner doubled home two runs. Gene Tenace then singled home Turner, kayoing rookie right-hander Tony Brizzolara, 2-3.

Braves reliever Mickey Mahler then walked Jay Johnstone, and Bill Almon's RBI single made it 6-2.

Joe Nolan hit a two-run homer for Atlanta in the eighth, and Padres reliever Rollie Fingers came on in the ninth to record his 11th save.

Madlock Trade Making Some Pirates Nervous

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Two-time National League batting champ Bill Madlock won't arrive in Pittsburgh until Sunday. But the six-player trade involving the former San Francisco Giant already has a couple of Pirates looking over their shoulders.

Manager Chuck Tanner said Thursday he would alternate Madlock with third baseman Phil Garner and second baseman Rennie Stennett.

"It will depend on who is going good or who isn't going good," Tanner said following the deal, which also sent pitcher Ed Whitson to the Giants.

Madlock, 28, began this season with the highest career batting average of any active player in the league, .325, although his average so far this season stands at .261.

"We have three big-leaguers, all regulars, to play two positions," said Stennett, batting .235. "I'll go along with the program. Eventually, though, something will happen. Anybody who has been around baseball knows something will happen," he said, declining to elaborate.

Garner, hitting .292, had this to say:

"Madlock is an established hitter, and he will help us. But I don't know how I'm going to feel if I stop hitting and find myself on the bench."

The trade also brought Pittsburgh relief pitcher Dave Roberts and former major league infielder Lenny Randle. Roberts will join the Pirates this weekend, and Randle will be assigned to the minors.

Meanwhile, Pittsburgh sent the Giants two minor league pitchers, Al Holland and Fred Breining.

"We're giving up a good pitcher in Ed Whitson and two good young prospects," said Pirate General Manager Pete Peterson. "But to get something good, you have to give something good."

Madlock said he was not disappointed with leaving San Francisco, where he had some angry words with team officials.

"I don't worry about what his problems were out there," said Tanner. "I just want to get him here and see what he can do for us."

Madlock, who won batting titles in 1975 and 1976 with the Cubs, isn't expected to arrive until Sunday due to a death in his family. When he arrives, the Pirates will send utility man Matt Alexander to the minors.

Meanwhile, Whitson said he was surprised.

"Everyone thought Rennie was going to be traded," said Whitson, 2-3 with Pittsburgh in 19 games.

"I'm not unhappy about it. I'm leaving a contending ballclub but they're a contender out there."

Roberts, a 10-year veteran who was 0-2 with the Giants with a 2.57 ERA, once spent four years in the Pirates minor league system.

Randle will join Portland in the Class AAA Pacific Coast League. He was released by the New York Mets in the spring and signed by the Giants for their Phoenix farm club.

Cincinnati Sends Borbon Amid Furious Trading

CINCINNATI (AP) — A trade that sent pitcher Pedro Borbon to the San Francisco Giants for outfielder Hector Cruz started a hectic day of dealing for the Cincinnati Reds, their busiest day since Tom Seaver, Rick Auerbach and Paul Moskau joined the club two years ago.

Before the Reds were done trading Thursday, they had sent first baseman Arturo DeFreites to Indianapolis, sold outfielder Ken Henderson to the Chicago Cubs and called up infielder Harry Spilman and pitcher Mario Soto from their Indianapolis farm club.

"This is one of those things where one change leads to another," Reds President Dick Wagner said after the smoke had cleared. "That should be it," meaning the end to the furious bartering.

It was the Reds' most active trading day since June 15, 1977, when they got Seaver from the New York Mets, bought Auerbach, called up Moskau and dealt away pitchers Rawly Eastwick and Gary Nolan.

"We felt that Soto had pitched so well that he could help us more than Pedro right now," Wagner said.

He denied that the trade with the Giants was merely the culmination of a deal that was rumored when Borbon refused to pitch in the final game of spring training and was suspended for two days.

"I talked to Spec Richardson (San Francisco general manager) probably 72 hours ago," Wagner said.

Borbon, 32, had been in the Cincinnati doghouse on more than one occasion. He still is awaiting trial on an assault charge stemming from a disco brawl in which he allegedly bit a man.

Borbon was 2-2 with two saves and a 3.40 earned run average this season. He had been with the Reds since 1970 and held the club record for career appearances by a pitcher with 531 and was second in saves with 76.

Vilas Bows Out At Wimbledon

"I was really thinking about winning Wimbledon this year," he said. "It is the only big one I haven't won. But I am not dead yet."

No. 13 Manuel Orantes of Spain also fell Thursday, losing to little-known Frenchman Gilles Moretton 7-6, 3-6, 7-6, 3-6, 6-1.

Third-seeded Jimmy Connors lost the first set of his second-round match against 37-year-old Marty Riessen but went on to win 6-7, 6-3, 7-6, 6-0.

Connors, who has been elusive all week, once again refused to meet reporters.

Riessen, however, did deign to talk. He does not give Connors much chance of beating Borg or second-seeded John McEnroe. And Riessen had plenty to say about giant-killer Wilkison.

"I have only played him once, but I have practised with him a few times. He will be tough for anyone and I think he is going to have a great future in tennis," said Riessen.

Eighth-seeded Paraguayan Victor Pecci gave another impressive performance in beating veteran Australian Phil Dent 6-4, 7-6, 6-3.

In the women's singles, top seeds Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd had a day off, but fourth-seeded Tracy Austin opened her bid, dropping the first set before coming back to beat South African Brigitte Cuypers 4-6, 6-1, 6-2. Austin had had a first-round bye.

Miss Austin, who hasn't played fr a week because of a roin muscle injury, was happy with her form against Miss Cuypers.

"That was just the sort of match I needed," said the 16-year-old schoolgirl from Rolling Hills, Calif. "I just need a couple more matches to get my concentration back."

Tracy has won 20 of her last 21 singles matches.

Argentine Star Called Poet With Tennis Racket

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

WIMBLEDON, England — Guillermo Vilas, his strong Latin features reflecting strain and his coal-black hair hanging in wet strands to his shoulders, could not disguise his disappointment.

"I lost control of myself," he said, trying to find some logical explanation for his surprising second-round loss to 19-year-old Tim Wilkison of Shelby, N.C., in the Wimbledon tennis championships.

The handsome, sensitive Argentine — poet, playwright, an artist with a tightly strung racket — appeared to be a broken man.

Two years go, Vilas was king of all he surveyed, champion of both the U.S. and French opens and winner of 50 matches in a row. At age 25, his potential seemed limitless.

But today he is on the sidelines again — one of seven seeded players who have gone down in two rounds of competition. Ex-champion Arthur Ashe is gone. So is Vitas Gerulaitis, semifinalist the last two years, as well as Manuel Orantes, Corrado Barazzutti, Jose Higueras and Wojtek Fibak, all big names on the international scene.

"This is a nice tournament but it can be improved," Vilas said. "There is no place to practice. You sit around the bar. You walk around. You wait and wait. Then you are called. You walk out cold.

"No two courts at Wimbledon have the same conditions. The early rounds are murderous. Some day maybe I practice four weeks and win. I am not dead yet."

We wonder.

Vilas is a superb athlete who handles a racket the way a musician might a violin. But he is a brooder. Most of his poems deal with death.

It is tragic to see such a marvelous talent go to waste.

But he is not alone. Absent from the field this year is perhaps the finest all-around shotmaker the game has produced — Ilie Nastase.

He could make a racket's strings sing. They call him Nasty and Ilie the Terrible. First he became a firebrand, then a repulsive villain, finally a clown. His skill deteriorated.

Reggie, Yank Reunion Set For Tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — The schedule shows a single game, but there is a double-header on tap at Yankee Stadium tonight — the New York Yankees meet the Boston Red Sox and Billy Martin meets Reggie Jackson.

The encounter between the Yankees and Red Sox will produce a winner. The Martin-Jackson meeting hopefully will produce an end to the hostilities that enveloped the two protagonists in 1977 and 1978 and re-escalated into a war of words since Martin returned as manager last week.

Jackson, who had been on the disabled list with a calf injury for more than three weeks,was activated Thursday after four days of special batting practice while the Yankees were in Toronto. He will be available tonight when Ron Guidry, who has missed three turns with a back injury, opposes Boston's Mike Torrez.

"I'll see how he (Jackson) is when we get there, if he's ready to play," Martin said Thursday night after the Yankees' 5-3, 10-inning triumph over the Blue Jays in Toronto. "I'll cross that bridge when I get there."

Martin said earlier in the week that Jackson would be the designated hitter until his leg is completely healed, with newly acquired Bobby Murcer in right field. When Jackson is ready to return to the outfield, Murcer will probably switch to left, with Lou Piniella the DH.

Jackson called Martin in Toronto on Thursday and told him that he felt he would be able to play tonight.

Kareem Facing New Challenges Outside Court

the position of being a marked man and I didn't like that."

But Abdul-Jabbar said he noticed an improvement last season, after the NBA passed rules against hand-checking and other incidental contact.

"It's a lot less of a problem," he said. "It's not something you can eliminate altogether because you have very big men out there in a confined space. But the intentional roughhouse stuff has been stopped."

After the Lakers signed their top draft choice, guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson of UCLA, the ebullient Johnson said his game plan for the pros was "to have fun with a capital F-U-N."

Abdul-Jabbar has his doubts.

"The way they have things organized now, it's very hard to have fun," he said. "We play too many games. That diminishes the importance of every game, and it can become very tedious.

"This coming year, Magic will play more games than he played in his entire college career, and probably half of his high school career. He's going to learn a lot. I think he'll be looking at the world in more realistic terms after he's been through this season ... the traveling, the schedule the waking up at 6 a.m. to get on a plane to go play another game the same day."

Abdul-Jabbar feels it is imperative the NBA reduce its season, and he does not see the current plan of playing the same number of games in two weeks less time as viable.

"All that's going to do is make the players more tired and diminish the quality of play," he said. "The owners want the potential to make every dime they can possibly make, so they play a whole lot of games in order to sell as many tickets as they think they can. But they could sell more tickets to a better quality game if they'd shorten the season.

"What's going to happen is that they're going to keep playing a whole lot of unimportant games, and fan interest and other related things are going to continue to go down. It's inevitable."

Abdul-Jabbar would like to eliminate the exhibition season and cut the regular season from 82 games to 75. "It wouldn't be that drastic a reduction for the owners, but it would make the travel schedule a lot easier," he said.

Some NBA players have said they feel they have an image problem and that they are not being projected to the public as well-rounded human beings, with interests and lives beyong the basketball court.

"That's true, yeah, it's a problem," said Abdul-Jabbar after a moment's reflection. "A classic example is that interview that was on TV during the playoffs with Darryl Dawkins (the 22-year-old Philadelphia center who turned pro directly out of high school). They had (announcer) Hot Rod Hundley in bed with him.

"Did you see that? That's ridiculous. That does so much harm. Kids see that and say, 'I'm gonna be like Darryl Dawkins and I'm gonna act like him.' I don't think that's achieving anything. It's not good for basketball, it's not good for Darryl, it's not good for the young people who see it. And the mature people who see it just say, 'There must be a lot of jerks in basketball.' And that's not true.

"I take great pains to articulate the things I feel and see, so I haven't had that problem. I've never conducted an interview like that, and I'm not going to."

Abdul-Jabbar feels the roots of that problem run deepm

"It has to do with the history of sports in this country," he observed. "If you look at a movie made in the 1930s about sports, they always had this one guy called Moose or something, just a big, dumb guy who can't find his pens and pencils. It's a classic image, and it's still very much a part of the way people think about athletes.

"But I could find someone like that in every profession. I could find a doctor who's kind of strange.

"I don't blame Darryl, he's still basically a kid. He didn't get a chance to go to college and to grow and mature as a human being. Darryl's a nice kid, but when he understands a lot more about what life is about outside of basketball, he's not going to be the same person."

It was time now for Abdul-Jabbar to move on to his next appointment, as host of the jazz awards, something he was looking forward to. Abdul-Jabbar has had a life-long love for jazz, runs a music festival in Los Angeles and is considering the field of concert production when he retires from basketball.

"Music is a universal language that has become a big part of the American lifestyle," he said. "I don't think that's going to change in the near future."

Surprises Plentiful At Futurity Trials

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (Special) — There were plenty of surprises in Thursday's race slate. Each race on the the expanded agenda was 400 yards in preparation for the upcoming $496,000 Rainbow Quarterhorse Futurity, the second leg of the triple crown.

In order to make the qualifying cut, a hopeful had to finish first or second.

One of the big surprises concerned Favorite Past Time, the winner of the recent $26,000 Kansas Futurity. The filly looked sluggish at the end of her heat, drifted to third as a towering favorite and was ruled out.

But perhaps the biggest surprise of all was a coasting length win in the 18th race by the 112-1 longshot, Breazing Angel. She led all the way and paid $225.60, one of the highest win prices in Ruidoso history.

Woman Arrested On Suspicion Of Keeping Daughter Prisoner

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Charlotte Elaine Mottinger told police she has been a virtual prisoner in her mother's home for nearly 20 years — frequently beaten, bound hand and foot and locked in a bathroom for days at a time.

Long Beach Police said they freed the grown but child-like woman late Wednesday when she was found tied in the back seat of her mother's car.

The mother, Ethel Mae Mottinger, 61, of Long Beach was arrested and held on $1,000 bond on suspicion of false imprisonment, police said.

Thomas Hibbison, one of two officers who found the 33-year-old woman, told a news conference Thursday that Miss Mottinger did not appear undernourished, although she was small and slightly built. He said he first thought she was about 15 years old.

She had three bruises on her head, Hibbison said. The woman was staying with relatives here after being freed by police.

Hibbison said he and his partner, Allan Huff, stopped a car driven by Mrs. Mottinger at about 8:20 p.m. Wednesday after being notified of a possible kidnapping.

Inside were two small children — Mrs. Mottinger's niece and nephew — and, in the back seat, Miss Mottinger, bound and tied to a bolt in the floorboard, the officer said.

Police said that after being released, the woman was trembling and visibly frightened, and asking over and over, "You're not going to drown me, are you?"

Police said her mother was telling her, "Don't talk to them."

Miss Mottinger later told police her mother had warned repeatedly that if she ever talked to police, they would beat her and drown her, officers said.

The woman said the ordeal began at age 13, when her father died, Hibbison said. Miss Mottinger said she spent days tied up in a bathroom without food and was beaten with electrical cords, a broom, a belt and, at least once, with a soft drink bottle. She claimed she was fed mostly a concoction of rice, corn, bread and water, he said.

"I had been a bad girl," Miss Mottinger told police. "I stole some bread because I was hungry. I had not eaten for three days. About a month ago, I stole a candy bar. That time I was left tied in the bathroom for 10 days."

Mrs. Mottinger told authorities her daughter was retarded and diabetic.

But police said the daughter was treated at St. Mary's Medical Center in Long Beach a year ago and hospital records indicate she was neither retarded nor diabetic.

Insect Pests Kill Millions Of Trees In National Park

YOSEMITE, Calif. (AP) — Tiny insects are killing millions of trees in Yosemite National Park — one of America's favorite scenic vacation spots in the jagged granite peaks of the Sierra.

But the National Park Service, which has a policy of keeping hands off nature, said Thursday it is doing nothing to save about 130,000 acres of lodgepole and ponderosa pines infested with insect pests.

"This is the third time it has happened to the lodgepole pines in the past six years, and it's very likely that this time around a lot of those trees will recycle," said Dr. Jan van Wagtendonk, a forest ecologist for the 761,000-acre park 150 miles east of San Francisco.

Van Wagtendonk used the term "recycle" to describe the dying trees, because he said the natural ecology will lead to the trees growing back.

"We don't want to say we are losing the trees, because it's the forest ecosystem doing its thing," Van Wagtendonk said. "We're watching it, but we're not doing anything about it. Our main concern would be in the campgrounds and picnic areas — we don't want all of the trees dying there and falling down on people."

About 100,000 acres of lodgepole pines at 8,000 to 9,000-foot elevations are being attacked by a pest known as the lodgepole needle miner. Adult moths lay eggs on the trees' needles, and the larvae burrow into the needle.

Similar needle miner attacks have damaged Yosemite forests in the past, Van Wagtendonk said, but this one seems to be the most widespread. A 1910 infestation denuded a forest — which became known as "The Ghost Forest" — but the acreage has since produced another stand of pines.

"The ecosystem is pretty resilient," said Van Wagtendonk. "We are relying on that resiliency to bring the forest back."

Meantime, several thousand feet lower in the park, bark beetles are attacking about 30,000 acres of ponderosa pines, Van Wagtendonk said.

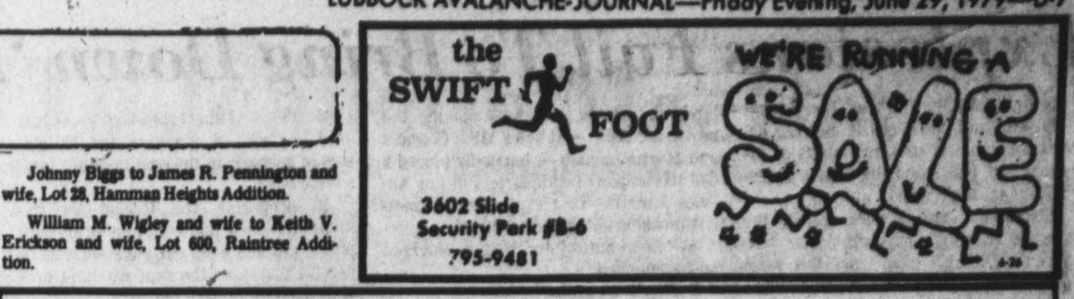
He said a few dead ponderosa pines are being cut and removed to protect visitors in campgrounds and picnic areas of Yosemite Valley, the most popular part of the park with spectacular waterfalls dropping 2,000 feet down sheer granite cliffs.

Park Service policy states that "native insects and diseases existing under natural conditions ... will be allowed to function unimpeded except where control is required."

Under the policy, control is required only to prevent complete loss of a species, to prevent spreading of an infestation outside the park, to protect a rare or endangered species, to protect plants in developed zones or for public health and safety.

A U.S. Forest Service expert is developing a pesticide that could be used against the needle miner, Van Wagtendonk said. The pesticide would be used to protect trees in national forests — where the Park Service policy doesn't apply.

Regarding park visitors who would be disappointed by denuded pines, Van Wagtendonk said, "I'm not sure that the park is being maintained just for visitors. We also have an important obligation to maintain the natural ecological systems."



Explosions Fail To Bring Down 'Rocket'

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Rocket is 80 years old and looks it, but the ancient rollercoaster took two blasts of dynamite and just stood there. If a rollercoaster can laugh, it did.

Explosives experts working with the crew of an ABC television movie, "Amusement Park," tried twice this week to destroy The Rocket for the movie's big scene.

They failed.

On the second try, 3½ cases of dynamite — twice as much as for the first effort — were carefully planted in a huge, twisting turn in the coaster.

"It was the most we could use without knocking out the windows of the shopping centers around here," said Wayne Beauchamp, a demolitions expert with 12 years experience who headed the team.

The blast did knock out 25 nearby store windows, but the Rocket did not come crashing down as planned.

Beauchamp said when a third attempt is made today, a caterpillar-type tractor will be used to pull The Rocket down as the explosion occurs.

In each effort, after shouts of "action," cameras rolled and gigantic explosions ripped through the wooden framework — sending a red fireball over 100 feet in the air.

The only visible effects the two explosions had on the abandoned rollercoaster, once the main attraction at Ocean View Amusement Park, were a slight twist in its rails and the blackening of its wooden structure.

"She defied them. She stood there and defied them," exclaimed Richard Miller, satisfaction beaming from his face.

Miller, who owns another beachfront amusement park in nearby Virginia Beach, had been associated with The Rocket and the now defunct Ocean View Amusement Park for years.

He said he wants the TV movie to be a success, but was happy that The Rocket, which had been declared unsafe, could withstand man's first effort to fell it without even swaying in the breeze.

Dan Rogers, a spokesman for Playboy Productions, which is making the movie for ABC — it stars Mike Connors and Martin Landau — hurriedly placed a call to company headquarters in Los Angeles after the first explosions Wednesday morning failed to do their job.

A few minutes later, Rogers emerged and announced:

"They'll try again."

Rogers said the explosives crew had used 76 sticks of dynamite and 200 gallons of gasoline in the first loud but ineffective blast.

In preparing The Rocket for the scene, the crew had cut many of its support poles and even cut the steel rails in several places so the rails wouldn't prevent the section from falling.

But the explosives apparently failed to cut the remaining support poles.

"It looks like we're a little behind schedule now," Rogers said.

The movie, scheduled for airing this fall, is about the destruction of a amusement park when a hurricane and other natural disasters cause a buried gasoline line to explode.

FINE INCREASED

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina, citing the economic threat of pirate fishing fleets, has raised the maximum fine for poaching in its waters from $100,000 to $1 million and said it would confiscate ships that violate the law deliberately.

Village Mayor Bans Gasoline Sales

ALFRED, N.Y. (UPI) — Mayor Virginia Rasmussen has banned sales of gasoline in this Southern Tier village but that should pose no big problem for anyone.

"It's a blanket boycott," Mrs. Rasmussen said Wednesday. "We thought we'd do our share in conserving gas."

The declaration, however, is expected to have no effect on the village's 1,400 residents, since there are no service stations located within village limits.

Fan Club Pays Homage To Jeanette MacDonald

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jeanette MacDonald died Jan. 15, 1965, her last movie was made 30 years ago, but her fan club is burgeoning as strongly as it did during her lifetime.

This week some 300 MacDonald fans held their annual convention in Hollywood to pay homage to the singing star who brought the first operatic voice to movies back in 1929 when she starred with Maurice Chevalier in "The Love Parade."

The 1,300-member club, founded by Jeanette herself in 1937, publishes a quarterly magazine and a news letter under the guidance of club president Clara Rhoades who administers the organization from her home in Topeka, Kan.

The club is affiliated with the International Council of Fan Clubs, 50 strong.

While the MacDonald club is not the largest, it ranks among the most active, behind such others as Elvis Presley, Liberace and Judy Garland.

Public relations for the club is in the hands of Paul Brogan, 28, of Hillsboro, N.H., who wasn't born when Jeanette made her last picture, "The Sun Comes Up" with Lloyd Nolan, Claude Jarman Jr. and Lassie at MGM.

A voluble young man, Brogan, joined the club 16 years ago at Jeanette's invitation after he wrote the star to tell her how much he'd enjoyed seeing "Rose Marie" on television.

Jeanette costarred in the film with Nelson Eddy, with whom she made eight musical movie hits. They rank as one of the most successful of all film teams.

What, Brogan was asked, is the purpose of a fan club, especially after the star has been dead almost 15 years?

"We're trying to perpetuate her memory, her music and the values she stood for," Brogan said. "She made operetta easily acceptable to the masses. Until she came along audiences had to suffer with 300-pound divas.

"Our purpose is to unite people who appreciate Jeanette's talent. Young people are constantly discovering her movies on TV. Some write to MGM thinking she's still alive. Our members range in age from 8 to 86.

"In her movies with Nelson Eddy she played her roles sort of tongue in cheek and relaxed. Poor Nelson was stiff and uncomfortable."

There's no denying Brogan is a genuine authority on MacDonald movies. Of her 29 films — 25 of which were musicals — he has seen them all save three, "Annabelle's Affairs," "Don't Bet On Women" and "Oh For a Man."

All three were early movies printed on ancient nitrate film which have all but disappeared.

Brogan has seen "Maytime" — Jeanette's biggest box-office hit — 40 times. He's seen others almost as often.

The annual week-long club convention, drawing fans from Denmark, Australia, South Africa, Hungary, Switzerland and England, coincides with MacDonald's wedding anniversary to actor Gene Raymond.

"Jeanette held the first convention in 1962 to celebrate the 25th anniversary of her fan club as well as her wedding anniversary," said Brogan.

"We go to Forest Lawn and leave flowers at her grave — she's buried in the same area with Gracie Allen, Nat King Cole and Alan Ladd. Then we hold a reception at the Beverly Hilton hotel and spend the week watching her films.

"Gene Raymond is honorary president of the club and hosts our banquet. He also attends the showings of her films with us. We see about a dozen of them during the convention. This year MGM is showing a double feature for us.

"She made 18 of her films at the studio. But she also worked at Paramount, 20th Century Fox and Universal. Her costars at MGM included Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy in 'San Francisco.'

"People forget she and Chevalier made four pictures together. In addition to 'Love Parade' there was 'One Hour With You,' 'Love Me Tonight,' and 'The Merry Widow.'"

Brogan never met Jeanette, nor have about half of the other club members. But Jeanette plays an important role in the young man's life nonetheless.

"The club has been responsible for some of my closest friendships," Brogan said. "There about a dozen club members in New Hampshire and I see them regularly. Forty or 50 of us get together in New York every month or two for dinner and to see her films replayed in theaters.

"Last year we waited in line in a pouring rain for an hour to see 'Naughty Marietta' and 'The Merry Widow' double feature. We talk about Jeanette, of course, but we find we have other things in common.

"Our magazine, which comes out four times a year, is full of pictures and anecdotes from friends and costars. We also pint stories of her movies and such news as the fact she was offered the role of abbess in 'The Sound of Music' but had to refuse it because of her heart condition.

"She was a wonderful woman onscreen and off. Our fan club helps keep that memory alive."

NICARAGUA HELP PLEDGED

WASHINGTON (AP) — The general secretary of the United States Catholic Conference said Wednesday the church will do "everything possible" to meet the need for food and medicine in Nicaragua. "We express once more our profound sympathy with the suffering people, and in a particular way with the bishops, priests, religious and lay leaders, many of whom have been subjected to unconscionable treatment by the National Guard," Bishop Thomas C. Kelly said.

"CAAAA-A-A-A-A-A-AT!"

Former CBS Executive Named To Fill NBC Post

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Veteran producer and former CBS executive Harry Lafferty has been named senior vice president of west coast programs and talent for NBC's Entertainment Division.

Lafferty, 58, takes over the post held for the last year by John J. McMahon, who will leave the network, NBC Entertainment president Mike Weinblatt said this week.

"Harry Lafferty has had a brilliant career in television production," Weinblatt said, "and headed CBS' west coast operation for 11 years during which that network was consistently No. 1."

Lafferty was vice president for west coast programs at CBS from 1965-76. Under his supervision, the network developed such hit comedies as "MASH," "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," "The Bob Newhart Show," "Maude," "The Jeffersons" and "Good Times."

From 1976-78 he worked as an executive producer at Filmways, and last year he produced Mary Tyler Moore's latest comedy program for CBS.

He won an Emmy for the Danny Kaye show, which he produced from 1963 to 1965. Earlier, he produced and directed nearly 1,000 TV shows, including dramas on "Robert Montgomery Presents," "U.S. Steel Hour," "Studio One" and "Twilight Zone."

NBC Quickly Selling Olympics Ad Time

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Better hurry if you want to sponsor the 1980 Olympic Games from Moscow — television time is almost sold out.

Unless you have at least $1 million to spend, forget it and go sponsor something else. Sponsoring the world's top amateur games is for pros.

There are 44 companies so far that have invested at least $1 million a piece with NBC And no one in the television industry is laughing any more when the network says it will make money on its coverage of the super-expensive 1980 summer Olympics.

Sponsorship of the amateur games already is 94 percent sold, according to industry sources, and by August NBC Expects to be 100 percent sold out.

Network estimates have been that the Moscow games will wind up costing about $115 million, including production costs.

The network also expects to take in an estimated $172 million from sponsors, according to the word that's going around. Subtract the standard billing fees to advertising agencies and the network figures to earn $25-30 million on the games. Not bad for amateur athletics.

It would seem that when NBC Outbid its network rivals for the big sporting event, it did more than land a prestige item that would lure viewers back to the bottom-rated network. It also closed a deal that would turn a profit, which is the way Edgar Griffiths, chairman of NBC's parent company, RCA, likes to see it. He wasn't nicknamed "Bottom Line" Griffiths for nothing.

According to reports from industry-watchers, NBC could write sold on the Olympics right now, but that would mean changing its sales policy — something it won't do.

Olympic games sponsorship now is available only on a "package" basis. No sponsor can buy choice prime time sponsorship without also underwriting other day parts.

As of now, minimum participation in sponsorship costs $1 million. Only have half a million to spend? You don't make the team.

The price on Olympic time started out at $65,000 for a 30second spot, but the price has risen four times and now stands at $90,000. That means for the minimum $1 million a sponsor buys 11 or 12 spots, which will be divided around the clock — Some in early morning, some daytime, some prime time and some late night.

Among the biggest spending sponsors to date are Toyota, Coca Cola (including Minute Maid products), Levi Strauss and Miller beer. Toyota, Coke and Levi Strauss currently are about tied for first place among sponsors, each having invested a little more than $11 million.

Rapist Terms Crime 'Ritual'

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Dion Rene Clark said society may call it rape, but to him it's just a "ritual of courtship."

The judge sentenced Clark to five years in prison anyway, despite the defendant's offer to "love, care for, educate and cherish" the woman he sexually attacked at a bus stop.

In an empassioned, 30-minute plea, Clark Tuesday quoted from the U.S. Constitution, the Declaration of Independence, the Bible and Shakespeare, among other sources, trying to convince Superior Court Judge Earl Gilliam that his conviction was unjust.

"Society has its rules of courtship and mine are different," Clark argued, saying that raping the 21-year-old stranger was just "a different ritual of courtship."

Most rapists are sexually inadequate and "pathological," he said, and "only when we understand the perpetrators of this crime can we help the unfortunate victims."

Gilliam nevertheless sentenced Clark, 26, a former cab driver, to five years in prison saying, "Under the system we live by, you have been found guilty."

Still, he encouraged Clark to "keep up your challenge to the system."

ARRIVE FOR MUSICAL — Movie stars Tatum O'Neal and her father Ryan O'Neal arrived for a showing of the Broadway show "Got Tu Go Disco" recently in New York City. (AP Laserphoto)

Soviet Critic Says Travolta 'Washed Up'

MOSCOW (AP) — A year after his huge success in "Saturday Night Fever," John Travolta is washed up at the box office, just another out-of-work actor, a Soviet journalist writes.

Travolta "has become uninteresting to the powers-that-be" since the critics panned "Moment By Moment," his film with Lily Tomlin, Borovoi wrote.

"Only one joy is left to him — the childish habit of gluing together brightly colored model airplanes," and in Los Angeles, people don't even recall where the "former star" now lives, the Russian wrote.

"Only the film 'Saturday Night Fever' continues to thrive," he continued. The movie, about a disco-dancing Brooklyn boy named Tony, has never been shown in the Soviet Union, but Borovoi told his readers it carries a "definite social burden."

"The dancing and music for Tony is a means of self-expression," he explained. "And not only for him, but for all those representatives of Brooklyn youth who are deprived of any kind of hope for a better future and who have no chance to break away from the region, from its poverty and from the vicious circle of violence and indifference in it."

Like the character that he plays, Travolta is a "moral and ideological stereotype of the West," the Soviet writer asserted.

Asked about Borovoi's comments, a spokeswoman at the office of LeMond-Zetter, Travolta's New York manager, laughed.

The spokeswoman, who asked not to be identified, said the actor is in Texas doing a movie, "Urban Cowboy," which will take up his time for "the next several months." She declined to comment further.

Noting that Playboy magazine dubbed Travolta the "sex symbol of 1978," Borovoi said he was a boasting high-school dropout who expected to conquer the highly competitive world of the New York stage.

"But the largest city of the United States was not in a hurry to open its arms to the young 'conqueror.' Fate mercilessly made him take parts in crowd scenes and forced him to perform small roles in a humiliating way."

Then a "real-life movie miracle" happened; he was given the lead in a television series, then offered the role of Tony in "Saturday Night Fever."

After the movie came out, "a significant part of capitalist youth was in a fever of idolization. Girls and boys were copying the style, the clothes and mannerisms of a new 'star.'

But when he wanted to break out of his Hollywood mold and play a serious role in "Moment by Moment," "severe retribution came," the Russian wrote.

The moral, according to Borovoi, is that American society tries to make its members believe a myth — that occupying a half-yard of space in a discotheque will lead you like Toy to glory and material well-being.

PBS Implements Big Doings At Low-Key Meeting

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was an interesting few days for public television.

The folks from PBS pulled into the Century Plaza Hotel just as the big boys — ABC, CBS and NBC — were pulling out. The commercial networks had just finished the summer press junket ritual, hyping their shiny fall schedules an special projects, defending the ways of commercial TV before the choler of visiting television critics.

"No," the network bosses said, one more time. "We won't be turning over any nights to coverage of ballet. That's not our business."

There were parties and screenings and gang interviews with the stars, and by Monday, it was over.

Then, seeming almost an afterthought, PBS began its convention. It was a low-key affair, compared to the commercial network hooplah, but there were big doings aplenty.

First, public TV membership voted to restructure the network, forming three separate "mini-networks" that will transmit programs simultaneously by satellite. The membership directed the board of directors to have the plan implemented by January 1981.

The three public TV networks will consist of an educational service, to be aired in conjunction with local school programs; a regional service, for programs of local interest; and the regular PBS service, featuring cultural, entertainment and public affairs programs now offered by the network.

By the use of satellite transmission — a capacity PBS already has — the network can deliver three different programs to its affiliated stations at once, rather than just a single program, which is the limit of the commercial networks.

Satellite transmission will enable local PBS stations across the country to choose programs from any of the three planned services. The satellite service caters to the fierce individuality of local stations, which is one of the basic underpinnings of public TV.

That independence, though, has been seen by some in PBS as a hindrance to broader popularity for public TV. If local stations don't air network programs at the same time, as commercial network stations do, national promotion is useless.

In an effort to effect some semblance of network unity, 126 of PBS' 157 licensees agreed this week to join in "common carriage" of certain programs. For the first time, PBS will have a block of programs that will be carried by nearly all of its stations on the same night.

It seems a forward move, if audience building is one of the aims of public television.

PBS is coming off of its best-ever season, with weekly viewers increased by 11 percent. Its most popular shows will be in the common-carriage block, with only one newcomer, "Connections," a fascinating series exploring the beginnings of various technologies (less boring than it sounds).

So, the PBS network schedule:

Wednesday — "Great Performances" returns, featuring a few "Live from Lincoln Center" evenings, as well as dramatic renditions of Moliere and John Cheever.

The common carriage block ends Wednesday, but it's a start. Other popular shows back on PBS in the fall:

The "MacNeil-Lehrer Report," "Cavett," "Over Easy," "Sesame Street," "Mister Rogers" and "The Electric Company." PBS also announced that it will air CBS' old "Camera 3" series, adding a few new versions made for public TV in Boston.

The common carriage plan, entertainment programming aimed at broader audiences and a hoped-for promotion budget of $6 million — more than double last year's promo budget — suggest another big year for PBS.

And all the nifty phrases that public broadcast types like to use — social imperative of democratic broadcasting, and the like — seem less relevant than the bit of old-fashioned hype that comes at the beginning of PBS' promo tape:

ADULTS OPPOSE LAW

BONN, West Germany AP) — A survey by a research institute indicates nearly half of West Germany's adults are opposed to a law that would make it illegal for parents to beat their children. The Allensbach Institute put this question to 3,957 persons over 16: "There is a law in Sweden forbidding parents to beat their children. Would you be for or against such a law here?" The institute said 48 percent opposed such a law.

Hybrid Cotton 'Near Reality'

A&M Researcher Here Reports Progress

Hybrid seeds have been providing corn and grain sorghum producers a generous bonus for many years. In these crops, hybrids have increased yields 15 to 25 percent with essentially no increase in production costs.

Dr. Levon L. Ray, cotton breeder at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center, north of the Lubbock airport, is currently conducting research into the development of hybrid cotton.

This research indicates cotton farmers may have hybrid seed available in the not distant future.

"Developments over the past decade have brought hybrid cotton production near reality," Ray said. The components are available to develop hybrid cotton seed, yet some questions relating to its feasibility are not fully answered, he said.

"In most hybrid crops," the TAES researcher said, "a cytoplasm-genetic system is used to produce the seed." This is the system which has been developed in cotton, he reported.

"However," Ray said, "pollen must be transferred between plants. And because of cotton's heavy pollen, insects are required for cross-pollination, a possible problem in hybrid cotton seed production."

The High Plains is relatively free of damaging cotton insects and a minimum of insecticides are used.

"Because of this," the TAES cotton breeders said, "the South Plains could become an important hybrid seed producing area."

Research has shown that it would be difficult to produce hybrid seed where insecticides are extensively used. It is generally agreed that bees are the most important pollen carriers. These include wild bees as well as the domesticated honey bee. The use of honey bees for this purpose would add another important industry, honey production, to the South Plains, he added.

"More research is needed to determine the effectiveness of native insects in pollination across the area," Ray said. "We have obtained surprisingly good seed set on male-sterile cotton varieties, even without the use of honey bees."

A cytoplasmic male-sterile cotton variety has been developed and released by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. This line is being used by several commercial companies in the development of a hybrid seed production program.

"The development of practical hybrid cotton seed program would be a major breakthrough for cotton breeders," Ray said. "Hybrids should boost yields by 10 to 25 percent.

"But perhaps more importantly," the scientist added, "hybrids would provide shortcuts in breeding programs."

"Increased yields are not the only potential benefits of hybrids," Ray said. "With hybrids, it may be possible to increase the level of insects and disease resistance and provide more desirable fiber combinations in high yielding cotton," he said.

"Although some hybrids have been developed," Ray said, "they have not been adequately tested and are not currently available to cotton producers."

More than 20 hybrids from commercial companies are being tested by TAES this year. The outcome of these tests will give a good reading on the potential and future for hybrid cotton.

"I feel confident that hybrid cotton seed will be available to producers within the next few years," Ray said, "and hopefully increase the profitability of cotton farming."

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE BOB BERGLAND said this week the administration is leaning toward having no set-aside program for wheat in 1980.

Bergland said the U. S. Department of Agriculture probably would reopen the farmer-owned reserve in 1980 if the decision is made not to have a set-aside program.

Under that option, the loan rate would be raised, resulting in higher release and call levels for the reserve than now are in effect.

The administration plans to wait until the July crop report before deciding on the 1980 wheat program, Bergland said.

IF THE DECISION IS FOR NO WHEAT set-aside, Bergland said, an announcement probably would be made next month.

But if the administration decides to adopt a "modest" set-aside program, he said, the announcement probably would be made close to the Aug. 15 deadline.

The only basis for having a set-aside program again in 1980 would be a sharp downturn in the markets, Bergland said.

In each of the past two years, the USDA has established a 20 percent set-aside program.

THE RANGE BETWEEN THE RELEASE level and the call level in the farmer-owned grain reserve may be too narrow and the USDA will study the possibility of widening it, Bergland said.

This applies especially to corn, he said, and the USDA may widen the range from the present 30 cents per bushel to perhaps 50 cents.

Bergland pointed out that prices are much more volatile now than just a few years ago. "Prices can go up as much as 30 cents in a matter of days and then decline sharply in the same length of time," he said.

The release level for corn currently in the reserve is $2.50 per bushel and the call level is $2.80. The release level already has been reached.

THE PERIOD FROM WHICH NATIONAL average prices are determined in reaching the respective levels, currently five days, also may need to be extended, Bergland said.

Wide swings in prices in relatively short periods, he said, could result in grain being released from the reserve in a period of falling prices.

He said he has directed USDA officials to be sure prices actually are on an upward trend before loans are called on reserve grain.

Bergland said calls of loans on commodities from the reserve will not force farmers to sell their wheat or feed grain.

CALLS ON COMMODITIES IN THE RESERVE would only require farmers to pay back their reserve loans within 30 days, he said. Even if a farmer's grain were called from the reserve, he said, growers would have the option of repaying their loans and maintaining possession of the reserve grain.

This would allow farmers to wait for more attractive market prices before selling their grain, Bergland said.

Farmers would be required to forfeit grain called from the reserve to the Commodity Credit Corp. only if they were unable to repay their reserve loans before the deadline designated by the USDA, he said.

Deadlines on loan repayments for commodities called from the reserve will be extended by the USDA in areas where the department determines that transportation problems or a lack of commercial storage facilities make it impossible for farmers to market their grain.

THE U. S. COTTON PLANTING ESTIMATE of 13.9 million acres, released by the USDA after the market closed Thursday, was considered neutral to the market and in line with the expectations of floor traders, commission house analysts and cotton merchants.

Texas upland plantings were estimated at 7.5 million acres, down from April intentions of 7.6 million but up from 6,950,000 in 1978. The High Plains acreage was estimated at 4.4 million, including 800,000 in District 1-North and 3.6 million in District 1-South. High Plains plantings in 1978 totaled 3,955,000 acres, including 775,000 in 1-N and 3.180 million in 1-S.

Plantings in the Lower Rio Grande Valley were estimated at 360,000 acres, compared with 329,000 in 1978. The acreage in the Northern Low Plains District of 2-North was estimated at 765,000 acres, down from 780,000 in 1978, and plantings in the Southern Low Plains District of 2-South were pegged at 840,000 acres, up from 735,000 last year.

Observers were somewhat surprised that the 1-N and 2-N estimates were not larger. They also were surprised by the estimate for the Lower Rio Grande Valley, where private surveys had indicated plantings of 400,000 to 425,000 acres.

COTTON FUTURES AT NEW YORK CLOSED near the lows Thursday, off 112 points in near October to 25 points in forward deliveries, on speculative booksquaring ahead of the USDA cotton plantings report.

Floor brokers said the market slipped in mid-afternoon on general commission house selling, also inspired by weak metal, soybean and grain markets. A Chicago-based commission house, active in the market of late, was reported a buyer of October.

Trading on Telcot totaled 780 bales. The average price to farmers was 52.13 cents, an average of 889 points over the loan. All except 62 bales was old-crop cotton on which Commodity Credit Corp. loans were expiring.

Corn Trails Soybeans In U.S. Planting Estimate For 1979

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American farmers will harvest 69.5 million acres of corn for grain, 1 percent less than last year, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

Experts had expected rising corn prices — based on increased Russian demand and domestic demand for pork and poultry production — would encourage farmers to plant more corn, but a large increase did not materialize.

Experts said part of the reason was late planting that caused farmers to switch to soybeans, which have a shorter growing season, and a favorable price ratio for soybeans.

For the first time in history, soybean acreage was greater than corn acreage for grain harvest.

Based on a June 1 survey, soybean acreage was estimated at a record high 71.7 million acres, up 12 percent from last year, when a record 1.84 million bushels was harvested.

Compared to last year, a 4 percent decline in planting of corn for grain harvest in southern states and a 1 percent dropoff in the Corn Belt offset increases in the rest of the nation.

Last year farmers planted 79.8 million acres of corn and harvested 69.97 million acres for grain for a record crop of 7.1 billion bushels. The survey indicated 79.8 million acres of corn was planted for all uses, the same as last year and 1 percent more than forecast in April.

With acreage off slightly, the crop is likely to be less than last year's,when average national yields set a record of 101.2 bushels an acre, unless weather is extremely favorable.

The first estimate of this year's corn crop will be made July 11.

Both winter and spring wheat were seeded on 71.2 million acres, up 8 percent from last year. Last year's crop of 1.8 billion bushels was the first crop of less than 2 billion bushels since 1974.

Durum wheat was seeded on 3.98 million acres, down 3 percent from last year, and other spring wheat was seeded on 15.6 million acres, up 9 percent from last year. Despite weather delays, farmers were able to plant more spring wheat than was expected, experts said.

Growers seeded 51.7 million acres of winter wheat, 8 percent more than last year.

Acreage of all feed grains — Corn, sorghum, barley and oats — intended for grain harvest was estimated at 117 million acres, down 4 percent from last year.

The Crop Reporting Board estimated 15.6 million acres of sorghum would be harvested for grain, down 6 percent from last year, the smallest acreage since 1962.

Estimates of corn acreage for 1979 grain harvest based on June surveys compared with the 1978 crop included Texas, 1.2 million compared with 1.44 million.

Grain sorghum acreage planted in Texas was shown as 4.7 million for 1979, compared with 4.65 million a year ago.

Upland cotton acres in Texas this year were 7.5 million, compared with 6.95 million in 1978.

Wheat and soybean plantings for Texas were not listed.

Gasoline Poison Cases Reported

GALVESTON (AP) — The Southeast Poison Center says the gasoline shortage has been accompanied by a sharp increase in gasoline poisonings. Mike Ellis, director of the center at the University of Texas Medical Branch, attributed the increase to inept siphoning of gas tanks.

Ellis said Thursday that the center is receiving about 10 calls a day on gasoline poisoning, compared with last year's average of about one a day. He said the total of about 100 such calls so far in June easily exceeds the total number received in 1978.

MORE OPTIMISTIC

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Beef Industry Council thinks $2 a pound ground beef is not on the horizon, as some other sources suggested recently. The council, a member of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, a trade organization, expects price increases of only 20 percent over last year's. Because cattlemen are no longer sending huge numbers of non-fed animals (mostly cows) to market, the supply of beef for grinding is declining and sending retail prices up. The council's newsletter predicts price rises probably won't start until late in the first quarter of the year.

Cotton Conference To Be Conducted Here On Saturday

The third annual Lubbock Cotton Conference, sponsored by ContiCommodity Services, Inc., is scheduled at 11:30 a.m. Saturday at the Lubbock Club.

Mike Stevens, president of Conti and manager of the firm's Lubbock office, said six speakers will address a press gathering.

They are:

— James King of Greenville, S. C., vice president for cotton purchasing with Burlington Cotton Co., who will speak on "The Domestic Mills in 1979."

— Peter Leavitt of Bedford, Mass., vice president of Weather Services International Corp. and executive vice president of Weather Services Corp., who will describe "The Weather Picture in Cotton Growing Areas."

— Neil Mearns of Memphis, Tenn., president of the Fibreco Division of Valmac Industries, who will talk on "World Trade in Cotton."

— George Mullendore of Starkville, Miss., extension cotton specialist with Mississippi State University, who will report on "Delta Crop Conditions."

— Fred Traylor of Lubbock, president of Traylor Cotton Co., who will outline "Texas Cotton Prospects."

— Bert Kyle of Lubbock, assistant general manager and sales manager of Plains Cotton Cooperative Association, who will discuss "The Outlook for West Texas Cotton in the Far East."

A barbecue dinner is scheduled at 5 p.m. at the Lubbock Country Club.

King is a past president of the Greenville, S. C., Cotton Exchange and a past chairman of the cotton buyers division of the South Carolina Textile Manufacturers Association.

Leavitt is director of agricultural services for his firms. He is a charter member, a director and president-elect of the National Council of Industrial Meteorologists and a charter member and former councilor of the National Weather Association.

Mearns, a native of Liverpool, England, supervises the international operations of Valmac Industries. His responsibilities include merchandising cotton of all world growths with the exception of U. S. cotton.

Mullendore, son of a Mississippi county agent, is widely known as a crop authority on Delta cotton. He recently returned from a cotton trip to Russia.

Traylor is a past president of the Texas Cotton Association and the Lubbock Cotton Exchange. He has been a member of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Cotton Advisory Committee, a director of the National Cotton Council and the American Cotton Shippers Association, and has served on the board of the Oklahoma State Cotton Exchange.

Kyle, who first became affiliated with PCCA in 1963 and headed the Greenville, S. C., office for seven years before moving to Lubbock, returned earlier this year from a U. S. trade mission to the Far East. He left Lubbock in May 1976 to become vice president in charge of sales for Staplecotn at Greenwood, Miss., and returned to PCCA's headquarters in September 1977.

Planes, Insecticide Used To Combat Grasshoppers

BELVIDERE, S.D. (AP) — Three crop-dusters flew into the morning sun to rain insecticide upon hordes of grasshoppers who are stripping the ground of green in numbers as high as 200 per square yard.

One light plane buzzed over a hilltop, roared about 30 feet over rancher Jerry Ireland's head, made a horseshoe turn and returned on a path about 75 feet closer to the river.

"He's coming in mighty tight," said Ireland. The grasshoppers swarming around his feet were not immediately affected by the light mist of Sevin 4-Oil. It kills them when they eat it on foliage.

One pint of the common garden insecticide, mixed with four ounces of diesel fuel, covered each of 30,000 acres in the state's first grasshopper control spraying program this year. State officials say up to 1 million acres may have to be treated.

The spraying must be completed by the first week in July to be effective, according to the state Department of Agriculture. After that, the grasshoppers lay eggs and next year's problem grows worse.

Grasshopper numbers have been increasing for the past few years, but this year they have thrived on near-drought conditions.

"Wet weather will kill them, but we didn't have any" said F. H. Ireland, who runs the 4,400-acre ranch with his son, Jerry. "I think every one of them that hatched lived."

Agricultural specialists have counted as many as 200 grasshoppers per square yard on the Ireland ranch.

"They've taken 100 percent of the growth in some areas," said the elder Ireland. "It isn't as bare as a road, but it's bare enough that livestock can't get any grazing."

Ireland, 56, was just a boy in the 1930s when drought and grasshoppers last laid bare the prairie.

"I could see them in a cloud way up high," he said. "When they run out of things to eat, I don't believe there's any limit to the distance they can travel."

Sixteen ranchers put up about $30,000 to spray some 25 miles on both sides of the White River. The federal and state government will make up the remainder of the spraying cost, estimated at about $2.10 per acre.

But ranchers have chafed over delays caused by weather and federal red tape.

"The 'hoppers aren't moving yet, but they're getting wings and getting ready too," said Ireland. "I believe we should have sprayed last week. We had our money down and we were ready to go."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that more than 4 million acres of rangeland in 14 western states are due for spraying. Acreage is eligible if it has more than eight grasshoppers per square yard.

But spraying is just beginning in South Dakota.

"And we feel we're approaching the critical time," said Jerry Ireland. "If they get any bigger, they're going to be real hard to kill."

D-FW Airlines Deny Sect Disclaimers

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Several airlines operating out of the Dallas-Fort Worth Reional Airport here have begun reading disclaimrs over the public address system in an effort to counter complaints about solicitation by the Hare Krishna religious group.

"This is something the various airlines are doing and is not official policy," said Jim Street, D-FW public information officer.

The action came in the wake of a court ruling on Jan. 30 that allows the religous sect to peddle magazines, candy, literature and to solicit donations in the terminals.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat, corn and soybean futures fell sharply Thursday for the second consecutive day amid heavy speculative selling on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Corn and soybean futures tumbled by as much as the daily trading limit before the release, set for after the close, of an Agriculture Department report on acreage devoted this year to various crops.

The report was expected to show an increase in corn and soybean acreage over the levels indicated April 1 when the department reported farmers' planting intentions.

An important feature of Thursday's selloff was heavy liquidation by brokerage houses as prices crossed established points at which automatic sell-orders were issued for outside customers. Light local and commercial selling was enough to set off a chain reaction of selling, and there were no buyers to be found at limit-down prices for two contracts in soybeans at the close.

Cattle Mart Contracts Off Sharply

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed down 70 to 150 points lower led by various contracts at the limit decline Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. The market reacted after an early gain of 25. Sales totaled 21,318 lots.

Aggressive profit taking and other selling followed Wednesday's advance to one month highs. Increased cattle arrivals and freer movement of trucks brought pressure as did weakness in the pork complex.

There have been 264 deliveries thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 107 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were steady to up $1 with the best top $70 per hundredweight at Omaha. Slaughter was 118,000 head. About 2,400 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed down 50 to 150 led by November at the limit decline. Volume was estimated at 5,814 cars.

Cash feeder cattle were steady to up $1 with the best top $103 per hundredweight. Receipts at the major terminals today are expected to total 800 head.

Hog futures closed 82 to 150 lower led by December through August at the limit decline. Sales totaled 7,420 contracts.

Local and commission house selling was touched off by heavy hog runs and mostly lower prices coupled with easiness in most of the pork complex. Continued weakness in feedgrains was also a factor and forced October and December to new season's lows.

There have been 65 deliveries thus far. Wholesale hams were off 2 to up ½ at 73½ to 77½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were off $2.50 to up 50 cents with the best top $45 per hundredweight at Indianapolis. Kill was 319,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 155 to 200 lower paced by various contracts at the limit decline. July and August tumbled to new season's lows with prices lower from the start. Sales totaled 7,691 cars.

Further sharp declines in cash bellies and increased hog supplies combined with freer movement of trucks to easily offset another reduction in local belly stocks.

Forecasts of precipitation in some areas of the corn and soybean belt, plus reports of light showers in the Soviet Union's drought-stricken sunflower area, were depressing factors.

At the close, soybeans were 26¾ to 30 cents lower, July $7.71½; wheat was 12¾ to 19½ cents lower, July $4.45¼; corn was 7 to 10 cents lower, July $2.94¾; and oats were 2¼ to 3½ cents lower, July $1.62.
