Administration proposes tax on alcohol

By JIM LUTHER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration's proposal to increase taxes on alcoholic beverages would cost the average American family $101 a year, with the greatest burden falling on the poor, congressional analysts say.

The proposal, which would cost drinkers $7.2 billion a year, is part of the second deficit-reduction tax increase offered by the administration this year. The new package has yet to be agreed to by Republican congressional leaders — let alone by top Democrats — who are trying to negotiate deficit cuts of more than $50 billion for next year.

Under the proposal, the $1.98 federal tax on a fifth of 80-proof vodka would rise to $2.54. For the first time in almost 40 years, taxes on beer and wine would be raised as well, so that an ounce of drinking alcohol would be taxed at 25 cents, regardless of the form.

That would boost the 16-cent tax on a six-pack of beer to 81 cents and the 3-cent tax on table wine to 76 cents. The tax on other forms of wine, which is based on alcohol content, would go up accordingly.

Analysts say the impact would be felt most by those with the lowest incomes, simply because they tend to spend a greater share of their earnings on alcohol than do the more affluent.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, the 20 percent of Americans with the lowest incomes (averaging $8,228 after taxes) spend $308 a year or 3.7 percent on liquor, wine and beer. The top one-fifth, with after-tax incomes averaging $77,622, spend about $1,210, or 1.6 percent.

A second new element of the administration plan would target upper-income Americans. For the first time, it would limit the federal deduction for state and local income taxes — to $10,000 per couple or individual — and raise up to $3 billion a year.

Figures from the Joint Committee on Taxation indicate that the 86 percent of taxpayers with incomes under $50,000 a year would pay only 0.2 percent of that tax increase. Couples and individuals in the $50,000-to-$75,000 range would pay 0.5 percent; those between $75,000 and $100,000, 1.9 percent; and those making $100,000 to $200,000 would pay 11.2 percent of the increase.

Those earning more than $200,000 would pay 86.2 percent of the $3 billion.

The nation's governors condemned the plan. Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad, a Republican and chairman of the National Governors' Association, said Saturday "The deductibility of state and local taxes should not be further eroded."

Powell praises black's record

By JOSH LEMIEUX

Associated Press Writer

LEAVENWORTH, Kan. — The nation's top military official praised blacks' contributions in U.S. wars at a ceremony Saturday opening construction of a monument to the "buffalo soldiers" who fought in the West.

The Buffalo Soldier Monument will honor all black American soldiers, said Gen. Colin Powell, the first black chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"From pre-Revolutionary times through the Revolutionary War, through every one of our wars and on up to the present, black men and women have willingly served and died," Powell said.

"But for most of that time blacks served without recognition or reward for the contribution they made for our freedom," he said, adding that it was "freedom they did not enjoy here in their own beloved native land."

The monument is planned for the Fort Leavenworth grounds near Smith Lake in northeast Kansas, where the buffalo soldiers of the 10th Regiment once camped between campaigns against Indians on the Great Plains.

The 9th and 10th Cavalry Regiments of buffalo soldiers were formed by Congress in 1866 to patrol the western frontier. It was the Indians who dubbed black men who served in the segregated regiments the "buffalo soldiers."

In their service from the mid-1800s to the early 1900s, the buffalo soldiers endured discrimination, hardships and neglect that white regiments didn't have to suffer.

Robbie Sanders sits behind the wheel of his boat, Alcohol on Water, before next Saturday, and Sunday at Moss Creek Lake. Sanders, who will compete in the Blown Alcohol Flatbottom class, Texas Drag Boat Race and Lake Fest has not lost a race in the past two years.

Moss Creek to be site of race and lake fest

By STEVE REAGAN

Power, speed — and lots of noise — will be on display when the Southern Drag Boat Association visits Big Spring for the inaugural West Texas Drag Boat Race and Lake Fest Saturday and Sunday at Moss Creek Lake.

Lake vehicles ranging from jet skis to nitromethane-powered hydroplanes will compete in 22 categories for $6,000 in purses during the event, organizer Robbie Sanders said.

And, if his record is any indication, Sanders will be one of the chief contenders for prize money. For the past two years, he and his boat, Alcohol on Water, has been undefeated in the Blown Alcohol Flatbottom class.

Drag boat racing — which Sanders said is comparable to regular drag racing, but on water — is catching on in popularity in the southern half of the United States. Still, Sanders does not expect to make any money on the Moss Creek Lake races.

"We're going to try to make this a fun deal; something where everyone will have some fun," he said. "But it's not really a money-making deal. People have told me that if I only lose $2,000-$3,000 I'll be lucky."

A Big Spring native, Sanders, got started with high-powered boats in 1978 and, as he said, "got the bug" to race competitively.

He began racing professionally in 1980 and won his first circuit in 1981, "and then I really started spending money on this thing," Sanders said.

In 1985, however, he quit racing. "I sold my boat in 1985 and didn't do anything for two years," he said. "Then, (SDBA officials) asked me if I'd be a race starter, so I did that for about a year. After that, I just sort of got back into racing."

His return has been extremely successful. Aside from being undefeated, he holds the world speed record for his class boat at 154.1 miles per hour, as well as fastest elapsed time in the quarter mile of 6.77 seconds.

His boat, a methanol-powered flatbottom with a 543 cubic-inch custom Hemi-Chrysler engine, develops around 2,000 horsepower and is the only boat in its class to win consecutive world titles, Sanders said.

Showers bring rain totals to near normal

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Sudden showers pelted the area Saturday afternoon, pushing year-to-date rainfall totals nearer the average for the date. A storm battered Moss Creek Lake as it tore through the area, sending rains over much of the city for brief periods.

The Moss Creek Lake area experienced winds up to about 60 miles per hour late Saturday, breaking tree limbs and dumping trash barrels, said Park Supervisor Ron Robey.

"It got pretty rough out here for a while," he said. "We got a storm that apparently missed Big Spring. It came in from the mountain side (of the lake)."

Besides high winds, the area got almost an inch of rain in 20 minutes, Robey said.

"It came at us from two different directions, one right after the other," he said.

The Big Spring Police Department received reports of heavy rains east of Big Spring Saturday evening, along with a small amount of hail.

The east side of town received approximately .8 inch of rain, resident Tommy Hart reported.

The shower brought totals there to 4.75 inches for the month, 9.56 inches for the year.

B.G. Barber, a resident of east central Big Spring, reported one full inch of rain fell before 6 p.m. Saturday. Month-to-date total for that area is 4.1 inches, 10.3 inches for the year.

SHOWERS ON SATURDAY

Folks on the Sterling City Route got 1.16 inches before 6 p.m., reported area resident Boyce Hale.

"We had a real gullywasher," Hale said. The 15-minute downpour brought the monthly total to 2.56 inches, 9.04 for the year.

The National Weather Service reports the average for this date is .02 inch. Average accumulated rainfall for the year to date is 10.64 inches.

There was a 94.8 percent probability against rain in the area for Saturday's date, the service had reported.

Community loses two leaders

Simon Freese

By DEBBIE LINCEUM

Staff Writer

Simon Wilke Freese, the engineer whose contribution to West Texas' water supply is called "monumental" by his peers, died Friday morning in the Fort Worth home of his daughter. He was 89.

Freese, founder of the Fort Worth engineering firm Freese and Nichols, led a group of West Texas cities, including Big Spring, to form the Colorado River Municipal Water District (CRMWD) in 1949.

Long-time associate and friend Owen Ivie said Freese was "an engineer's engineer, dedicated to the work of the CRMWD."

Freese and Ivie worked together on many projects, most recently the design and construction of the O.H. Ivie Reservoir and S.W. Freese dam, named by CRMWD officials in December to honor the two men.

Ivie said Freese had been consulting engineer for the district since its inception. A CRMWD report states that Freese and associate Marvin Nichols were asked in 1946 to search for a long-range water supply in West Texas by Julian B. Thomas, president of Texas Electric Service.

Wayne Moore, 51, executive officer of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce since late 1988, died early Saturday morning of an apparent heart attack.

His death was met with shock by the people with whom he'd worked. "It's a tragedy," said Chamber President Don Reynolds.

Moore's leadership has been credited with the successful May 5 vote to fund and create an economic development corporation and the subsequent series of public meetings designed to identify strengths, weaknesses and areas of pursuit for the board, to be named by the City Council.

He was selected to lead the chamber, and concentrate on the areas of economic and industrial development for the chamber and Industrial Development Foundation, after the resignation of Leroy Tillery September, 1988.

Besides his chamber involvement, which included local and national positions from 1964-1976, Moore was former owner of the Camp Heart O' the Hills in Hunt. He's survived by his wife and four children.

Immediate past president of the Chamber, Hooper Sanders, noted

Man treated for heroin poisoning

AUSTIN (AP) — Authorities said police took custody again Saturday of a parolee who had been hospitalized after a heroin-filled balloon he swallowed ruptured in his stomach.

Terrance Howard Hazel, 35, was being held on charges of theft, burglary, resisting arrest and possession of heroin.

On Thursday, police spotted a substance they believed to be heroin in a stolen, parked car where Hazel was sleeping, according to Municipal Court records.

When police awoke Hazel, he tried to run away, authorities said. Two officers tackled him and they said Hazel fought them, hitting one in the nose and the other in the chest.

The man swallowed three balloons containing heroin and at least one of them broke in his stomach, according to Sally Muir, a spokeswoman for Emergency Medical Services.

He was later released to police custody, hospital officials said.

The burglary charge stems from a reported break-in, police said.

Customs Service may move office

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The U.S. Customs Service may move its field command from San Antonio — the nation's third-largest distribution point for illegal drugs — to Laredo.

The proposed move could deal a severe blow to San Antonio's efforts to stop the flow of drugs, said U.S. Attorney Ronald Ederer, who questioned the wisdom of taking such action.

Under the current transfer proposal, Laredo would become the control bureau for the Texas-Mexican border region and San Antonio would become a branch of the Dallas control station.

The relocation talk comes amid a flurry of reassignments of top Customs officials in San Antonio.

Customs agents who declined to be identified told the San Antonio Express-News that disagreement over a $500,000 training program led to the reassignment of several key supervisors.

One chief investigator already has been transferred from San Antonio to Austin.

Ship channel closed after oil tanker, tug collide

GALVESTON (AP) — A Liberian oil tanker and two barges being moved by a tug boat collided near Redfish Island Saturday, sinking at least one barge and endangering another, Coast Guard officials said.

The Shinoussa of Monrovia, Liberia, was headed into Galveston Bay when it collided with barges being moved into the Houston Ship Channel by the tugboat, Chandy N, just before 3 p.m., said Coast Guard Petty Officer Kevin Johnson.

Johnson said the tanker was damaged, but did not appear to be leaking oil. It was moved back up the ship channel and was anchored late Saturday, he said. It was not immediately known whether the tanker was loaded when it collided with the barges.

Two of the three barges being moved by the Chandy N, however, were damaged and leaking oil.

The first barge, loaded with 18,000 gallons of Catfeed Oil, a No. 5-grade heavy fuel oil, was sunk at its stern on the east side of the channel, Johnson said.

"The second barge is damaged and it's leaking oil," Johnson said. "But it's still attached to the tug."

The second barge contained 24,000 gallons of the heavy fuel. A third barge, carrying 20,000 gallons of fuel, was not damaged in the accident, nor was the tug.

Apex REAT Inc., a St. Louis-based towing firm, owns the tug and barges, Johnson said.

"We had one that is down and one that had some damage," said Tom Kniestedt of Apex in Missouri. "The damaged barge is out of danger and other is down."

The Houston Ship Channel was closed immediately following the accident and remained closed at dusk. No injuries were reported.

The cause of the collision remained under investigation, Johnson said. However, skies were overcast in Galveston Saturday and helicopters over the scene reported visibility down to only four miles by 6 p.m.

There was no immediate word about spill cleanup operations, Johnson said.

Scouts try to save camp from IRS

HOUSTON (AP) — Boy Scout Troop 544 is rallying to save its one-acre campground from the federal government.

Unless the troop can raise $8,000 by Tuesday, the Internal Revenue Service will confiscate the north Houston property for back taxes owed by a benefactor who donated the site two years ago.

"This whole thing is embarrassing, and it tears my heart," said Roy M. Gonzales, owner of SMC Printing, who has let the scouts use the property, rent-free. "If the scouts can't buy it, maybe it will be somebody who doesn't like kids. They could just buy it and build on it, and that would be the end of the campground."

Gonzales said the city's economic problems and the loss of a major client 18 months ago has put his microfilm reproduction company at odds with the federal tax office. Gonzales, whose son is a member of Troop 544, owes $16,000 to $18,000 in taxes on income, property and sales.

Attorney Susan Peters, who represents Gonzales, said the IRS had told her client that the campground would be the first of his assets to be seized.

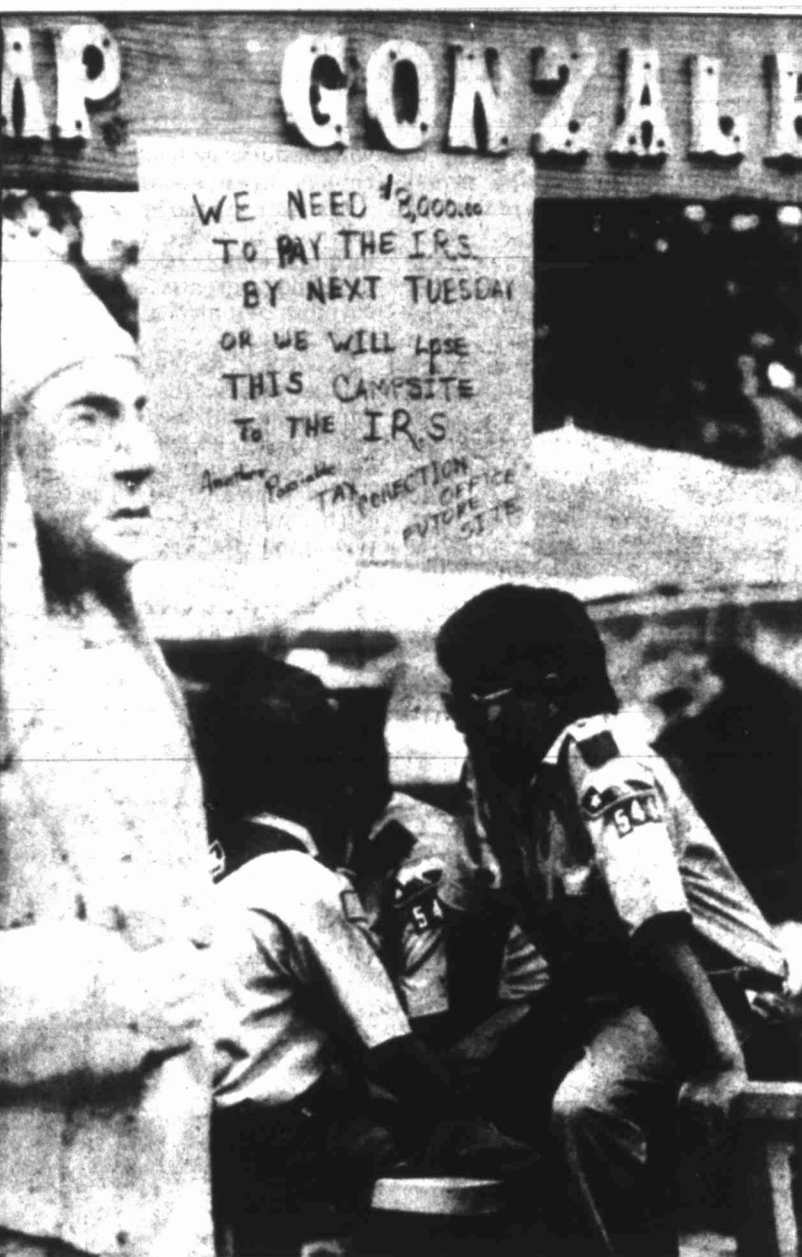

"Apparently they're not terribly interested in the fact that it's been donated to the Boy Scouts," she said. "For obvious reasons, their job is to try to collect the money they're owed."

The lot, located adjacent to the troop's Scout hut, had been vacant for about 20 years before Gonzales bought it in May 1968. The boys and their parents spent a year clearing the property of junked cars, broken refrigerators, old tires, trash, snakes, rats and poison ivy, Scoutmaster Bruce Buss said.

In the past year, the boys have paid for the trees to be trimmed and adding a tiny bridge and two large concrete statues of Indians. Above the figures, a sign reads, "Camp Gonzales."

Three Scout troops — the 25-member Boy Scout troop, a Cub Scout group of about 25 and a Girl Scout group of about 15 — use the land year-round, the leaders said.

"We have camping out here and rope-tying and naturalist training," Buss said. "It's just so hard to go camping in the woods in the winter because of all the deer hunters. Out here, we don't have to worry about any of the kids getting hurt."

HOUSTON — Scouts Eugene Rodriguez, left, and Ricky Rivas of Troop 544 rest under the Camp Gonzales sign that shows their dismay. Unless the Scouts raise $8,000 by Thursday, the Boy Scout Troop could lose their north Houston campsite to the IRS.

Gonzales paid $8,000 for the lot and signed a contract with the scouts, promising not to sell or build on it for 15 years, and allowing the scouts the first option to buy it — at the purchase price — should he decide to sell.

"I just wanted to give the kids a safe place where they could keep away from drugs and other stuff," Gonzales said. "I thought I could help the neighborhood out."

The scouts and their parents met

Friday to come up with a plan to save the campground.

"We're probably going to have a garage sale and maybe a barbecue over the weekend," Buss said. "We'll do everything we can think of to save this place."

A teary-eyed former Scoutmaster Bill Jones, who resigned in 1980, tried to comfort the troop. "It's all right, guys," said Jones, 65. "We're going to do it. You'll see."

A&M hires first woman dean

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The Texas Aggies have hired their first female academic dean.

Texas A&M University's board of regents on Friday confirmed the hiring of Jane A. Stallings, now head of the department of curriculum and instruction at the University of Houston, as the dean of A&M's College of Education.

Mrs. Stallings on Sept. 1 will succeed Dean Corrigan, who stepped down a year ago to become head of A&M's new Commitment to Education program.

"She was not selected because of her gender ... but I couldn't be more pleased that the most competent candidate happened to be a woman," said Texas A&M President William H. Mobley.

School officials cited Mrs. Stallings' experience as an independent researcher, a staff member of the Stanford Research Institute and a teacher at locations ranging from the inner city to Vanderbilt University.

Mrs. Stallings, who founded the Stalling Teacher and Learning Institute, earned her doctorate in education and child development at Stanford University.

Banner year predicted for ragweed

DENTON (AP) — The deluge of springtime rains has a University of North Texas botanist predicting that a monster crop of ragweed is on its way to plague allergy sufferers this year.

"It's going to be a banner year for ragweed," said Don Smith. "There's no pollen in the atmosphere yet, but I've seen a awfully large number of the plants around. It will start up in mid-August."

Texas has a climate that favors the unwelcome plants. And the rains have merged with the plant's well-developed root system to enable it to survive a dry summer.

Smith told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that since the first freeze might not come until December, "it could be with us awhile."

To prepare for the pending invasion, Smith suggested that electrostatic filters could be added to home airconditioning systems. The filters use static electricity to catch pollen grains.

Allergy sufferers should consult their doctors before the ragweed arrives, Smith said. The three different varieties should be hunted down and weeded out.

"I'm allergic myself," he said. "I'm going to have a hell of a time."

Mourners shot at burial service

LINDEN, N.J. (AP) — Seven people attending a burial for a New York gang member were shot Saturday by four gunmen who posed as flower-bearing mourners before opening fire with submachine guns, police said.

At least eight other people were trampled in the panic that followed the gunfire at Rosedale Cemetery in this city just south of Newark, and were being treated at hospitals for cuts and bruises.

A 20-year-old man who was among those shot was flown by helicopter to the trauma unit of University Hospital in Newark.

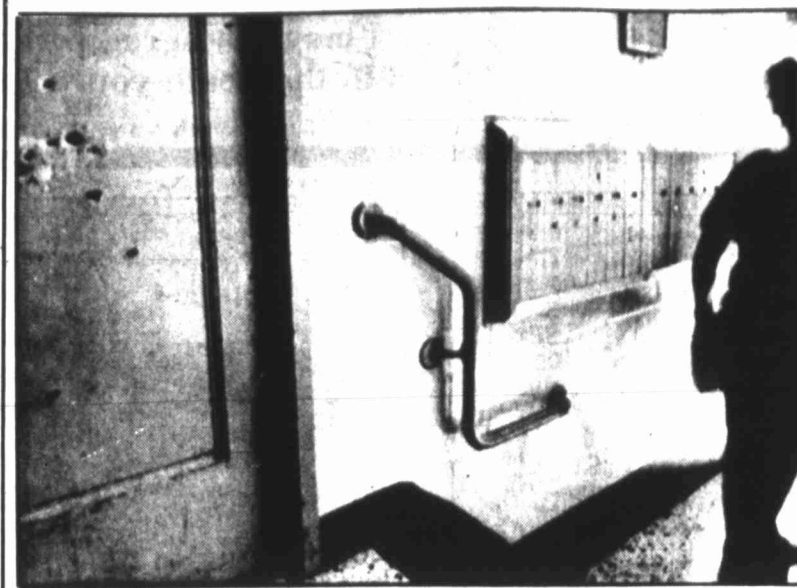

The others' wounds were not considered life-threatening, hospital officials said.

Police Capt. Raymond Beckman said the funeral was for an Asian man he identified only as a member of a New York City gang called Born to Kill.

About 100 people were attending the funeral when the gunmen fired, then fled, Beckman said.

"As they walked by the casket with a bouquet of flowers, they dropped them and opened fire on the mourners," the captain said.

Three of the gunmen fired Uzi submachine guns and the other used a shotgun, Beckman said.

Grim evidence

NEW YORK — A policeman walks past the bullet-riddled housing project apartment door in Brooklyn where at 3-year-old boy was killed Thursday after at least 18 shots were fired through the door. Ben Williams was the third child in a week to be killed by gunfire apparently intended for someone else.

Soldiers die in separate crashes

FORT CHAFFEE, Ark. (AP) — An Army helicopter crashed into a hillside on a night flight in the early stages of a war game, killing five soldiers and injuring eight others, authorities said.

Rescuers had to walk more than a mile to find the UH-60 Blackhawk helicopter about five miles south of Charleston and used other helicopters to get the injured to St. Edward Mercy Medical Center at Fort Smith, said Fort Chaffee spokesman Cecil Green.

It was one of two fatal military helicopter crashes Friday night. The second, in the southern California desert, killed two Marines and injured three others.

Green said he did not know if there was any indication that the helicopter at Fort Chaffee had problems before it crashed in a hilly region north of the Ouachita Mountains. He said weather was not a factor.

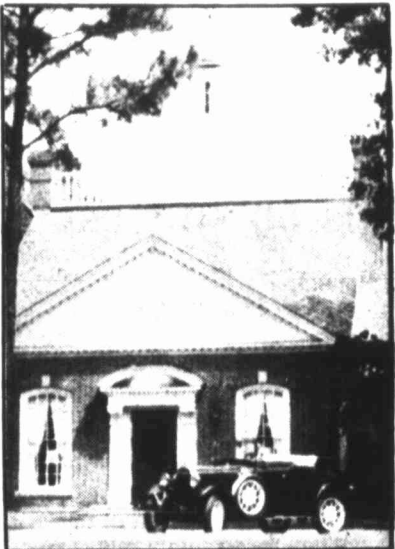

"The only thing we know is that the helicopter was in radio contact with one of the team members on the ground," he said. The ground unit notified headquarters of the crash, he added.

PGA Championship losing ad money

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — ABC has lost nearly $2 million from companies that have pulled their television commercials for the PGA Championship because the host club has no black members. More corporations may follow, it said.

American Honda Motor Co. on Friday announced it planned to pull its ads from the tournament, which is to be shown the first two days on the ESPN cable sports network and the final two days by ABC.

The withdrawal of advertising came as the Southern Christian Leadership Conference said it planned to picket the Aug. 9-12 tournament despite an appeal from Birmingham's mayor, who said the club had agreed to admit blacks.

Tax deduction proposal angers state governors

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — The nation's governors gathered Saturday for their annual summer meeting, voicing bipartisan opposition to a Bush administration plan to limit deductibility of state income taxes.

"The deductibility of state and local taxes should not be further eroded," said Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad, a Republican and chairman of the National Governors' Association.

He said Republican and Democratic governors were united in opposition to the proposal by the Bush administration and congressional Republicans to raise more federal revenue by reducing the ability of taxpayers to deduct state and local tax payments from their federal tax bill.

The first official session of the governors' annual meeting was Sunday. The host city of Mobile placed metal crowd-control barricades along downtown sidewalks in case of protests, though few were expected, and the city planted new palm trees along the route from the airport.

The governors planned to discuss a wide range of issues before their meeting ends Tuesday, including a report on implementing the education goals they agreed on with President Bush last fall.

The governors stated their opposition to the latest proposal on taxes in a letter to the administration before the meeting.

The bipartisan National Governors' Association has a longstanding policy against such a move, spokeswoman Rae Bond said.

The governors argue that limiting or eliminating deductibility, in addition to raising federal taxes for individuals who itemize their deductions, would make it more difficult for states to raise additional revenues to provide new services — and might lead to increased pressure to lower state and local taxes.

The governors also dislike any proposals to raise federal excise taxes, viewing that as an infringement on state and local tax bases.

"The governors are very apprehensive about anything that would reduce the flexibility of states to be able to deal with their own situation in terms of revenue sources that are traditionally the states'," Branstad said.

Gunmen kill four Medellin police

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Gunmen killed four more police officers in Medellin, three of them after the city's cocaine cartel declared an end to its campaign of bombings and assassinations, police said Saturday.

Minutes before the extraditables, as the Medellin drug bosses call themselves, sent a message by facsimile mail to the local press Friday calling for a truce, gunmen killed a police officer, according to a police statement.

Three other police officers were assassinated later in the day, the statement said.

"We decree a unilateral, in definite cease-fire and we suspend attacks against police, bombings in all Colombian cities and the executions of politicians, journalists, judges and other functionaries," the statement said, which claimed the cartel was responsible for the murders of 215 police officers this year in Medellin and the surrounding region.

The authenticity of the statement could not be independently verified.

Police say the cartel is paying assassins $4,000 for each police officer killed.

Canada buys land to settle dispute

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada announced today that it has bought a piece of land in an effort to help end a 2-week-old armed standoff between police and Mohawks.

The standoff was caused by a plan by the village of Oka, 18 miles west of Montreal, to expand a nine-hole golf course. The Indians erected barricades to protect what they say is ancestral land.

Indian Affairs Minister Tom Siddon said in a statement that Ottawa will buy 30 acres just outside Oka, and that the government also hopes to buy the rest of the disputed land. Published reports had said earlier that the federal government would try to buy the land and then turn it over to the Indians.

Siddon expressed hope that the move would "allow for a relaxation of tensions."

But a Mohawk negotiator called the purchase announced today "a drop in the bucket."

"No one has any business negotiating for our land, acting like they are buying it when they don't even own it," said the negotiator, Mavis Etienne.

Leader threatens to kill hostages

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — The black Moslem leader of an attempted coup in this Caribbean nation threatened Saturday to kill the prime minister and other government hostages, a churchman said. One report said 22 people died in the uprising.

The report of deaths in Friday afternoon's takeover of the Parliament building and subsequent fighting came from the Barbados-based Caribbean News Agency. Officials gave no casualty figures, but the Red Cross issued an urgent call for blood donations.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Anthony Pantin said the coup leader, Abu Bakr, told him the prime minister and the other officials captured Friday "are wired up with explosives." Pantin said on state radio the threat was relayed in a 25-minute telephone conversation with Bakr.

The Moslem rebels fired automatic weapons in storming the Parliament building, seizing Prime Minister Arthur N. Robinson and several Cabinet ministers.

1990 Property Tax Rates in Sands ISD

This notice concerns 1990 property tax rates for Sands ISD. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:

+	Last year's operating taxes	$601,110.18
+	Last year's debt taxes	$175,605.22
=	Last year's total taxes	$776,715.40
+	Last year's tax base	$67,540,470
=	Last year's total tax rate	$1.15 /$100

This year's effective tax rate:

+	Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$747,053
+	This year's adjusted tax base (after subtracting value of new property)	$89,224,651
=	This year's effective tax rate	$.83727 / $100

(In the first year a city or county collects the additional sales tax it must insert the following lines unless it made its first adjustment last year:)

—	Sales tax adjustment rate	$0 /$100
=	Effective tax rate	$0 /$100

x	1.03 = maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing	$.86238 / $100
---	---	-------------------

This year's rollback tax rate:

+	Last year's adjusted operating taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$578,154
+	This year's adjusted tax base	$89,224,651
=	This year's effective operating rate	$64,797 / $100
x	1.08 = this year's maximum operating rate	$.69981 / $100
+	This year's debt rate	$.23997 / $100

(A school district must insert the following lines)

=	This year's rollback rate before adjustment	$.93978 / $100
+	Rate to recoup lost state funds	$.00379 / $100
=	A. Adjusted rollback rate	$.94357 / $100
=	B. Rate that would result in maximum state funds	$.50453 / $100
=	Rollback Rate (greater of A or B)	$.94357 / $100

=	This year's rollback rate	$.94357 / $100
---	---------------------------	-------------------

(A city or county that collects the additional sales tax (including one that collects the tax for the first time this year) must insert the following lines:)

—	Sales tax adjustment rate	$0 /$100
=	Rollback tax rate	$0 /$100

Keep single-issue politics out of the Souter nomination

If confirmed as successor to retiring Supreme Court Justice William Brennan, U.S. Appeals Court Judge David Souter, 50, is likely to help chart the direction of the high court well into the next century. But the nominating process may already be in jeopardy of being hijacked by the myopic, single-issue politics of 1990.

In the looming political battle over Souter's nomination, advocates on both sides of the emotion-laden abortion debate are excluding virtually all other considerations. To impose such a singular litmus test ignores the multitude of other vital issues the new justice would rule on during his lifetime tenure and, worse, attempts to predetermine the court's stance on a fundamental constitutional question.

To his credit, President Bush disavowed the use of a litmus test regarding abortion or any other issue in selecting Judge Souter. In fact, the White House did not probe Souter's detailed views on any particular matter likely to come before the court. The Senate Judiciary Committee, which will pass judgment first on the President's nominee, ought to adhere to the same broad standard as it carefully scrutinizes Souter's judicial record.

In deciding whether Souter is fit to serve on the court, the Senate should weigh his views in the context of his judicial philosophy taken as a whole. His opinion on any individual question should not, by itself, disqualify him.

To be more specific, attempting to extract during the confirmation process an advance commitment from Judge Souter to oppose or support Roe vs. Wade, the 1973 decision that legalized abortion, would compromise the essential independence provided to the third branch of government by the Constitution.

Yet this is precisely the danger that will arise if the confirmation hearings dissolve into the kind of partisan bloodbath that derailed Ronald Reagan's nomination of Judge Robert Bork.

Institutionally, the Senate is more vulnerable to single-issue pressure — such as in the abortion debate — than is the White House. With the Supreme Court's liberal wing dwindling due to the advanced age of its members, the stakes are high and therefore so are the risks of politicizing the confirmation process. But this political reality does not diminish the President's prerogative to name a nominee of conservative views who eschews judicial activism.

Mr. Bush has moved swiftly to name Brennan's replacement. Barring unexpected complications, the Senate should honor the President's request for a confirmation vote before the Supreme Court convenes for its new term on the first Monday of October.

The departure of Justice Brennan, the court's liberal titan for more than three decades, marks the close of an era. In considering Judge Souter, who is the same age Brennan was when appointed by President Eisenhower, the Senate should look well beyond the political passions of today and into the next century.

Praises MOH for Dixon, Chapman

To the editor:

It was with great pleasure to receive the news that the Medal Of Honor was restored to Billy Dixon and to Amos Chapman.

These men served with distinction as Army Scouts during the Indian Wars in the latter part of the 19th Century. Both men earned the MOH in what became known as the Buffalo Wallow Fight.

I like to feel that my letter writing campaign had something to do with the MOH restoration.

The Congress of the United States is to be commended for their action.

Now it is time to honor these brave men with a commemorative stamp.

I call on the Congress of The United States to support me and to ask the citizens of Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas to support me in this endeavor.

She's searching for her lost dog

To the editor:

Last week I was visiting in your area with my daughter, Ginger Metcalf and her family. I came home to Muleshoe heartbroken.

While at Ginger's, south of Coahoma, someone took a mini-Dachshund (Wienie Dog) that belong to me. I loved her and she did me. My son and his family had given her to me for Christmas. She had name tags, address and phone number along with Vet. tags on her collar. I offered a substantial reward for her back. Nobody came forward. I have cried for a week over this. I would never think of taking someone's beloved pet — there were 3 other dogs there, but only mine was taken.

What I would like to finish with is, you, whoever you are who took my beloved Marfi, please be good to her. She has been loved and cared for all her little life. She has never been mistreated in anyway. And if you can see in your heart kindness enough to return her to me, please call John Wayne Metcalf — no questions will be asked — and I will pay more than she is worth to anyone but me. I love her dearly.

Phone 394-4067 or 394-4287 for Ginger or John Wayne Metcalf.

Tips on successful grandparenting

To the editor:

It's the 90's and times have changed. Some positive and some negative but changes have occurred nevertheless. Statistics show there are more single mothers playing the roles of father, mother, breadwinner etc.

To add to this segment is another saga in the area of parenting. When these single mothers become overwhelmed with the responsibilities of parenthood often the grandparents become the scapegoats.

Just when we thought the day of terrible two's, teens and tantrums were over the cycle begins again. We haven't the heart to say no therefore we enter the twilight zone of grandparenthood!! This newly acquired position can leave you drained and frustrated. Before you throw in the towel I would like to share a few simple rules of coping that may ease the toilsome road before you run screaming into the streets.

- First and foremost pray for the ability to forego the task you have been assigned.

- Update your knowledge of parenting. Remember times have changed.

- Don't try to overcompensate for the absent parent by spoiling the child rotten nor should you ever belittle the absent parent to the child.

- Take time for yourself. You need self-healing when the little angel has gotten on that last nerve.

- Utilize your family and friends as babysitters, however it's best to have a regular sitter you can call most anytime.

- Form a network of grandparents like yourself to get together and share problems, ideas and formulate solutions based on your shared experiences.

- Whenever possible strongly encourage the absent parent to seek help in parenting skills so that they can resume their role as parent.

- Become aware of the resources available to you. Contact the nearest United Way Agency information office.

- Know your legal rights.
- Remember the times may be rough but your little darling needs someone to love and guide their life in the right direction: you have been chosen!

He has a solution on Carter trouble

To the editor:

In reference to your recent stories about Ronnie Carter, the man who may lose his business due to excessive fees at the landfill, I have a possible solution.

Many states and municipalities have passed laws giving veterans, especially disabled veterans, certain benefits and waving various fees. I understand Mr. Carter is 30 percent disabled, having served in the Vietnam war. By declaring this man 30 percent disabled, the government has determined that about 1/3 of this man's earning power is gone due to injuries sustained while serving his country. How hard would it be for the city to waive landfill fees for disabled veterans?

This man is only asking a fair wage for a day's work, and I feel like someone should do something about it.

In support of Sen. Phil Gramm

To the editor:

I have recently seen a letter or two in some regional newspapers criticizing U.S. Senator Phil Gramm for: 1) Allegedly being soft on crime and drugs, and 2) Spending too much time and money traveling across Texas. Senator Gramm has no equal in Washington for his tough line against crime in general, and drug dealers in particular. It is difficult to imagine that anyone could even question his stance on law enforcement.

As for Senator Gramm's trips across Texas, I am one Texas citizen who is grateful to see one of my legislators, out in the country, listening to what the people have to say. Although most statewide politicians rarely travel west of I-35, I know of at least four times that Senator Gramm has visited Lamesa. This speaks highly of his desire to stay in touch with his constituents, and not isolate himself in the halls of Congress.

Silveradogate touches Texas politics

By JESSE TREVINO

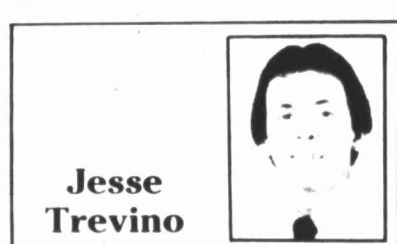

Some years ago, during the Watergate scandal, a character in a Doonesbury cartoon cautioned the public against rushing to judgement on Attorney General John Mitchell, who stood accused in the cover-up.

In the first three panels of the comic strip, a radio disc jockey reminded listeners Mitchell was innocent until proven guilty. In the last panel of the cartoon, however, the radio announcer exaggeratedly repeated the word guilty three times.

Thus, in the opening segments of the saga of President George Bush's son, Neil Bush, and his involvement as a director of the failed Silverado Savings and Loan fiasco of Denver, Colorado, the rush to judge young Bush should slow.

But in the growing angst over the savings and loan debacle, trying to slow the swell of public opinion building against the deceit and treachery of a disaster that has saddled the country with an almost unbelievable problem would be like trying to stop a train. Even the name, Silverado, conjures up images of speculation and the get-rich-quick schemes of the 1980s.

The political environment now jelling in the country is potentially lethal for both father and son, and perhaps others. The news of possible action being brought against Neil Bush came as his father was hosting the economic summit in Houston, in the state most closely identified with the savings and loan disaster.

The negative atmosphere building against business in general since the bottom of the Exxon Valdez ripped open and spoiled the beautiful coastline of Alaska has set the stage for a vociferous public reaction.

As the savings and loan mess unfolds, the anti-business atmosphere promises to turn nastier once the bill for the bailout hits Middle America. A reasonable proposal has been set forth by New York investment banker Felix Rhoatyn that a five-percent income tax surcharge be levied on everyone in the country during the next three or four years to pay the bill quickly.

But imagine the reaction to any taxes that go to bail out institutions that gambled their money or that were ransacked by their officers, who knew the government would cover the gambles they called investments. An angry nation may not buy the bailout, and it does not help Bush or his political party that the scandal has a decidedly Texas flavor.

Across the nation, a heavy anti-Texas sentiment has arisen. The Bush family's Texas associations will tug at the president's popularity that already has shown signs of weakening.

From an 80 percent general approval rating in January, Bush's standing has fallen to 69 percent, according to the latest New York Times poll. A new Newsweek poll shows Republicans take the brunt of the responsibility for the scandal by 2-1. NBC News reported in its poll earlier this week that only 49 percent of Americans think he is handling the economy well. As the national press zeroes in on the savings and loan debacle, the more notorious characters, other than the flagrant Charles Keating of California, are Texans or have Texas associations.

The most recent figures tainted with S&L shenanigans are Edwin McBirney III of Dallas and the unflappable James Fail. Fail coolly put down only $1,000 of his own to snatch government subsidies approaching $2 billion to rescue ailing S&Ls in Dallas.

The display of gall, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio said, is the worst he has seen in his public career. This boiling issue could play havoc with the theme of the campaign for governor of Midland oilman and multimillionaire Clayton Williams.

He may face a public in November sickened of the free market rhetoric that Ronald Reagan peddled to a country whose government now faces financial bankruptcy and may seriously threaten the world financial structure not unlike the Third World loans did four years ago. At the very least, many economists think the taxes needed to pay for the bailout will force the shaky U.S. economy into a recession.

This is worse than President Jimmy Carter did. In fact, when Carter left the White House — run out of Washington by Reagan Republican rhetoric of balanced budgets and deregulation — the public deficit stood at $965 billion and the savings and loans were still in good shape.

Ten years later, the public debt stands at $3.1 trillion and Bush last week asked Congress to raise the debt ceiling to $3.5 trillion; and the S&L bailout is going to cost a half-trillion dollars.

Against this rising tide of bad financial news and an increasingly irate public, the Reaganesque rhetoric Williams and other Republicans tout and any Reagan-like marginal knowledge of government may not work again. The public may find out the sad fact that private business not only cannot — and will not — protect the public interest first but uses the government it rails against to enrich itself.

It will be interesting to see how the Republicans defend their record during the Reagan-Bush years. It will be interesting to see how Bush, when he comes down to support Williams in his race against State Treasurer Ann Richards, explains it all.

The question will be whether anyone is listening.

Jesse Trevino, formerly of Big Spring, is chief editorial writer and columnist for the Austin American-Statesman.

history ended with jurors deadlocked on charges he molested three girls.

"Enough is enough. This bill has embarrassed our state, terrorized our women and families."

— Teri Bartlett, director of Planned Parenthood of Louisiana, reacting to the state Legislature's efforts to override Gov. Buddy Roemer's veto of a tough anti-abortion bill.

Unresolved McMartin case left many victims in its wake

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The McMartin Pre-school child molestation case began in a wildfire of bizarre accusations that swept in from the seaside community of Manhattan Beach to engulf Southern California for seven years.

When the longest, costliest case in U.S. history ended last week with a deadlocked jury, the passion that ignited it was all but extinguished and the anger that kept it going erupted only intermittently.

But left in the ashes of the McMartin case are many victims.

Raymond Buckley, 32, who endured five years in jail and two trials, said his family suffered beyond measure.

The jury in the first trial acquitted Buckley of 40 charges last January and cleared his mother, Peggy McMartin Buckley, of 12 counts. That jury deadlocked on 13 counts against Buckley, and prosecutors refiled eight.

The jury in his second trial deadlocked Friday on eight molestation charges and a mistrial was declared. Prosecutors said there would be no third trial in the case that cost Los Angeles County more than $13.5 million.

"I'd like to get for my family the house that was taken away from them," Buckley said afterwards. Peggy McMartin Buckley, 63, and her husband, Charles, had to sell their home and the prestigious school, which grandmother Virginia McMartin had operated for 22 years, to pay legal costs.

Buckley's sister, Peggy Ann, a teacher of handicapped children, lost her teaching credential but won it back in a long, bitter battle after charges against her were dismissed.

Teachers Betty Raidor, Babette Spitler and Mary Ann Jackson lost their careers as nursery school teachers, even though they were ultimately cleared.

"The case has poisoned everyone who had contact with it," the judge in the first trial said at one point. "By that I mean every witness, every litigant and every judicial officer. It's a very upsetting case."

Those words from Superior Court Judge William Pounders came after two witnesses had died, one by his own hand, the other from alcohol-related disease. And the children who fueled the case with claims of satanic rituals, animal sacrifices and molestations were balking at repeated ordeals on the witness stand.

The newscaster who first broke the McMartin story lost his job and jurors learned he had an affair with a therapist who interviewed the McMartin children at Children's Institute International.

The saga began in August 1983 when a mother reported to police that her son had been molested at the preschool. Hysteria followed after police asked parents to check their children for signs of molestation. Hundreds of parents reported their children were victims, and tots were rushed to the institute for interviews. Therapists decided more than 100 probably had been molested.

Everyone agreed that the children who testified were victims of the long litigation.

"Those kids cannot be McMartin kids for the rest of their lives," prosecutor Joseph Martinez said after jurors deadlocked in Buckley's second trial Friday. "It's been a horrible experience."

But some parents would not give up.

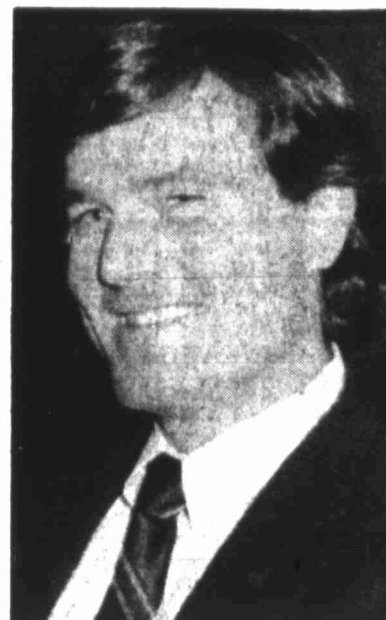

"My child was not called as a witness in either trial," Robert Salas said. "And that was one of the things wrong in the case. The case was flawed from the beginning."

For District Attorney Ira Reiner, the case became an albatross. It is believed to have cost him the Democratic nomination for state attorney general.

His predecessor, Robert Philibosian, who filed the original McMartin case, called the outcome "a political disaster" for Reiner.

Buckley's lawyer, Danny Davis, has said he may leave the practice of law and devote himself to helping children. He has called Buckley "an American hero" and "the most courageous client I've ever had the privilege of serving."

He said he would not file civil lawsuits against anyone on Buckley's behalf.

4-H club members find camp 'a real blow-out'

By Kathryn Burch

A record number of 67 Martin and Glasscock county 4-H club members recently participated in a joint 4-H camp, under the direction of Camp Director Chris Schraeder of Glasscock County. A camp theme of "Wheels Across Texas" was the inspiration for the get-acquainted games involving vehicles that followed the opening assembly.

Various craft opportunities were offered to campers. Brenda Mims taught a class on clay jewelry design. Shapes of Texas and four-leaf clover were popular designs.

Tahita Holloway, Paula Jones, Cody Jones and Amanda Riley had mallets ready as youth learned to hand-tool leather belts. Spud Levens was a guest instructor from Fantastic Images of Midland. He taught video photography. Assistant leaders included Tricia Cook, Elaine Riddle and Helen Glass.

Woodworking was a popular craft headed up by Larry Bradford, Garden City industrial arts teacher and his family, Jody and Brenda Bradford.

Laura Hutchens, Glasscock County extension agent, Debbie Schraeder and Tanya Multer taught a class of ceramics and Karla Hoelscher and Shirley Braden taught kite-making.

T-shirts are always fun. 4-H'ers enjoyed squirting paint across their shirts without their mothers screaming at them. Leaders were Ann Hoelscher and Lana Hirt.

Kathryn Burch, Martin County extension agent, headed a project on creativity. Campers were given an old cardboard box, tempera paint, glue, and tape, and challenged to make some kind of vehicle that moves across Texas. Projects included cars, a taxi and a vacationing family car.

Hamburgers were prepared by the Stanton Evening Lions and the Country Club donated the use of their swimming pool. Moms were particularly helpful, bringing ice cream, driving campers to swimming, bringing cookies, cooking pancakes, and cleaning up.

A camp tradition is that older youth serve as counselors. This year's counselors were Heidi Pelzel, Shauna Butler, Jamie Glass, Jennifer Jones, Michael Schraeder, Chris Schraeder, Karla Jones, Amanda Riley, and Jody Bradford. They led recreational projects, conducted assemblies, assisted in teaching crafts, and were great role models for all the 4-H'ers.

As wheels roll across Texas, campers all exclaimed, "Camp was a real blow-out."

New tunnels will assist toads in crossing roads

BASTROP (AP) — It's going to be easier for the endangered Houston toad to cross Texas 21, but it's going to be expensive, about $70,000, state highway department officials say.

The proposed set of tunnels and breezeways would guide the amphibians under the highway as part of a Texas Highways and Public Transportation road improvement project initially proposed for human protection only, officials said Tuesday.

"We will maintain the scenic beauty of the road by holding the number of cut trees to a minimum," said Randall Dillard, Highway Department spokesman. "We will improve the safety for humans and now improve the safety for Houston toads as well."

The traffic safety project among the majestic loblolly pines was the focus of citizen protest last year when initial plans called for cutting almost a thousand trees. A compromise saved all but 160 trees.

Median work is completed, but the toad study was required before work on the highway shoulder could start.

Construction costs associated with protection of the toad will be $51,250, Dillard said. The study cost $18,496.

The toad proposals, delivered to the Highway Department last week, will be reviewed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Department, which is responsible for protecting endangered species. The toad was placed on the federal government's endangered species list in 1965.

The toad tunnels, designed by a British firm, are used in Europe, but the Bastrop County project is believed to be unique in Texas and possibly the United States.

The polymer concrete tunnels and plastic arched fencing — similar in design to awnings found on some shopping complexes — were recommended after a dozen toads were determined to be traffic fatalities earlier this year.

The arched breezeways would run parallel to the highway. Tunnels would ideally be placed every quarter mile, according to the study.

Eighteen toads were sighted by researchers. Several thousand toads live in Bastrop County, according to study leader Andrew Price.

Price said the 2- to 3-inch toads that wander under the 16-inch high arch will be unable to get onto the highway. The small amphibians are not able to leap across the almost 21-inch expanse of the arch, he said.

"Toads don't jump like frogs do," Price said. "They hop. They can't jump vertically very high."

"You're not messing with Mother Nature by building the tunnels as much as you are with building the roadway," he said.

Couple gets 'money from heaven' for rock

WOLSEY, S.D. (AP) — You've heard of pennies from heaven. Would you believe enough to buy a new car?

That's roughly how much money Robert and Mildred Eichstadt got recently for selling a 160-pound meteorite found on their land nine years ago.

The couple won't say exactly how much they were paid by Marlin Cilz, a collector from Malta, Mont. But Mrs. Eichstadt says it was "a large amount" and agrees that comparing it to the price of a new small car is fair.

"It's probably the best crop we ever took off of our farm," she said.

The meteorite, about the size of two basketballs, was found on their farm in eastern South Dakota, near Huron, by their oldest son, Bruce, when the disc harrow he was using to prepare a field caught the object and rolled it over.

Cilz estimated that the meteorite fell on the land that is now the Eichstadts' farm about 2,200 years ago.

Negotiations final for new nursing home

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

Negotiations have been finalized and groundbreaking could begin within two weeks on a 119-bed nursing home in Big Spring, a contractor has confirmed.

Larry Voegtli, president of Signature Contracting Group, Inc., Austin, said all negotiations were completed Friday afternoon at the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

"The contracts have been signed and monies were exchanged," he said. "We will start seeking bids immediately."

He added that earth-moving equipment should be on the 4.02-acre site — located at 3200 Parkway Road — "in 10 days to two weeks."

The Big Spring City Council approved a planning and zoning commission recommendation for the land tract on July 17, but Voegtli had to wait for the results of environmental soil tests.

"The tests met the approval of everyone involved," he said.

The site for the nursing home was formerly the location of a service station.

Because of a previous lawsuit, officials with North Carolina National Bank of Texas, a co-trustee (owner) of the site, made favorable soil tests a requisite before a deal could be completed, Voegtli said.

The other co-trustee of the acreage is Jack Irons Jr.

The nursing home will cover approximately 37,300 square feet and create between 50 and 60 new jobs, Voegtli said.

Voegtli has declined to comment specifically about what caused those failed negotiations.

Freese

When the district was organized three years later, Ivie said Saturday, it was the first organization of its size in the state.

At that time, "the populations of member cities Big Spring, Odessa and Snyder totaled about 50,000," Ivie said. "Now the district is associated with some 500,000 people who, without (Freese's) efforts and those of others, would not be here at all."

"Mr. Freese gave special attention to this organization (the CRMWD)," Ivie said. "He took it upon himself to see that the district got the most value for every dollar spent, and to ensure that West Texas had an ample water supply. His contribution is certainly something recognized as monumental by those of us at the CRMWD."

"He was a person who loved West Texas," Ivie said. "We (at the CRMWD) considered him a person who took pride in everything he did."

In a resolution naming the lake and reservoir, CRMWD officials declared that Freese, "cast his shadow softly yet relentlessly from border to border of Texas through conception and development of . . . water supplies."

"Mr. Freese was a dear friend I will remember as long as I live," Ivie said.

The funeral will take place tomorrow at 1 p.m. at the United Methodist Church in Fort Worth.

But his boat will by no means be the fastest on display at Moss Lake next weekend.

Nitromethane-burning hydroplanes, which he said is the on-water equivalent of a top-fuel dragster, have reached speeds in excess of 200 mph.

Sanders concedes that racing about on water in vehicles that approach Indianapolis 500-type speeds has its share of danger, but adds that safety standards on the SDBA circuit have improved dramatically in the past few years.

"It's real dangerous," he said, "but (officials) have started getting more stringent rules to make them safer."

For example, he said, when he is strapped into his boat two cords are attached to him. If he is thrown from the boat, the two cords will automatically cut off fuel and electricity to the engine.

Another coming safety feature, he says, are capsules that will enclose the driver in the boat cockpit. "One of these days, I'm sure all the boats will have them," he said, "so, one of these days, I'm sure I'll have to shell out about $5,000 for a capsule or get out of racing."

Racing will begin Saturday with time trials in each of the classes. Time trials will determine the seeding for Sunday's finals, Sanders said. Beginning times are 10:30 a.m. for the Saturday time trials, with a $6 admission fee, and 1 p.m. for Sunday's events, which will cost $6 for admission.

In addition, there will be antique car displays and a sky-diving exhibition, he said.

Moore

that he had served on the committee that selected Moore before accepting the Chamber presidency in 1989. "I'll always remember, we asked Wayne why he'd want to come to Big Spring and he said, 'because I want to come somewhere I can make a difference. I thought: Oh boy, everybody wants to do that. But he did it!'"

John Taylor, civic leader and former businessman, agreed. He said Saturday that he had never seen a single individual in Big Spring accomplish so much in such a short period of time. . . . The greatest memorial will be for the people of Big Spring to move forward with what began under Wayne's leadership and see it become a reality."

Reynolds also praised Moore's leadership, noting that he considered him to have "come at an ideal time. With the economy down, community feeling at a low ebb — we didn't lack leadership, but needed someone to guide, direct the leadership in town."

"He'll be sorely missed — and difficult to replace. . . . he gave us the goals and challenges, it's in place — up to us to carry on and reach the end."

Moore was involved in the successful location of the Blue Bell Creameries distribution center, which was celebrated at a Wednesday luncheon organized by the chamber executive, as well as assistance with the proposed 119-bed nursing home planned for Wasson Road and Parkway. He had been instrumental in drawing together the forces that approved the tax abatement plan, an element he considered crucial to expanding the industrial base of the community.

Andries get revenge and WBC title

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Dennis Andries waited 13 months for revenge. On Saturday, he got it.

Andries knocked out Jeff Harding in the seventh round of a brutal brawl to regain the WBC light heavyweight title he lost to the Australian last year.

Andries stunned Harding with a chopping right to the head, then knocked him out with an overhand right at the 2:15 mark. After referee Arthur Mercante counted out the previously unbeaten Harding, Andries celebrated by doing a backward flip.

"I've never seen anything like it," his trainer, Emanuel Steward, said. "The punches Harding landed could have knocked anyone out, but Dennis refused to let them hurt him. It was mind over matter."

Andries, a Detroit-based Englishman, became only the second man to win the light heavyweight title three times.

"Three times man, I did it," Andries said after improving his record to 37-8-2. "I came to his backyard and did a demolition job."

Andries, 36, also was champion in 1986-87 and 1989. Marvin Johnson is the only other three-time champion in the division. Last June in Atlantic City, Andries was ahead on points when he was knocked out by Harding in the 12th round. He has thought about revenge ever since.

"I didn't care how many punches I took. It was payback time," Andries said. "It was a rough, tough fight and he's a bad dude, but I was ready." Steward had high praise for his fighter.

Former Steer tight end playing in All-Star tilt

Sports Editor

When Joe Downey takes to the field in Tuesday's Coaches All-Star Football game, he will be one of the most unlikely players on the team.

That's because Downey came back from major knee surgery after an injury suffered during football season in the fall to be selected to play for the North squad, coached by Hugh Ledbetter of Southlake Carroll.

Downey left Big Spring Thursday morning, and he and his teammates are currently going through four days of two-a-day workouts in Houston. The game will be played in the Astrodome.

Downey, a 6-foot-3, 211-pound tight end, concluded a superb career at Big Spring, making all-district, all-area and all-state teams. In two seasons he caught 46 passes for 622 yards.

His senior season was cut short however by a knee injury during the ninth game of the season against the Snyder Tigers. "I tipped a pass and I was trying to catch it again," said Downey. "If I had caught it the first time I probably wouldn't have gotten hurt. I came down wrong and my heel got caught. I didn't know I had gotten hit until I saw the film."

Downey said he was down in the dumps because he felt he was going to miss the state playoffs. "A local doctor told me I'd be taking a real big chance if I played again this year," said Downey. "I was kind of down, then I went to a doctor in San Angelo and he told me it might go out on me, but I could try with a knee brace. He was a little more optimistic."

What followed was two weeks of strengthening the knee in preparation for Big Spring's area playoff game against Hereford. Late in the first half of the Hereford game disaster struck again. "I was in the back of the end zone, the ball was a little short and I tried to come back for it, and the knee went out on me again," explained Downey.

"When I felt it, I knew that was it. I said I'm not going to go through that again. It hurt worse the second time."

A week later Big Spring's receiving star had reconstructive surgery to his right knee to repair torn interior cruciate ligaments and torn cartilage.

Since that time Downey has been working on getting his knee stronger. "I didn't know how it was going to react to rehabilitation. It came along well, there was very little pain," he said. A typical work week consisted of two hours a day, five days a week.

Former Big Spring Steers tight end Joe Downey was invited to play in the Coaches All-Star Football Game Tuesday at the Houston Astrodome. Despite a season-ending knee injury, Downey was an All-State selection.

Before his injury, Downey was one of the most sought-after potential college players in the West Texas area. The leading candidates, he said, were Texas Tech and Southern Methodist University. He said that all quickly changed.

"After the knee injury, after mid-January, I think they (colleges) forgot I existed. Tech was the last one to send me a letter."

That's why he was shocked when he was notified in March that he had been selected to play in the All-Star game. "I was real surprised. The fact that I only played in nine games, and I thought there would be many more, better, tight ends around the state."

What does Downey expect workouts will be like?

"I think it will be real competitive for positions," he said, adding that he hopes to get some defensive end, as well as tight end. "I wonder if some of the players will be scared that they might get injured, and it hurts their college career. There will be a bunch of big-time players there."

Downey, who has already made plans to walk on at Texas Tech, said he really hasn't thought about the fact that a good showing in the game might just bring some collegiate coaches calling.

"I really haven't given it much thought, but you hope something like that happens. If someone offers me a good scholarship, I'll take it. But most of all, it's just an honor to play in this game."

TACOMA, Wash. — Kim Zmeskal of Houston, performs her floor exercise routine during the women's gymnastics competition at the Goodwill Games.

"Tiny Tots" lead U.S. gymnasts to second

SEATTLE (AP) — The Goodwill Games welcomed Rudolph Bradley on the seat of his boxing trunks Saturday. He picked himself up and gave America an unlikely victory, exactly what the U.S. women's gymnasts hoped to do later in the day.

Bradley recovered from a first-punch knockdown and beat Raul Gonzales of the powerful Cuban boxing team by a 4-1 decision.

"I'm glad I'm at home because anywhere else they might have stopped it," Bradley said.

Then, it was up to the tiny tots of American gymnastics, led by 14-year-old Kim Zmeskal. On the international money market, 72 pounds sterling would be worth about $132. Team USA was hoping Zmeskal's 72 pounds would be worth her weight in gold in the individual all-around.

The Americans finished a close second to the favored Soviets in the team competition Friday night as Zmeskal amassed the most individual points. Another night like that, and the Goodwill championship could belong to her instead of a Soviet.

"We are now right on their heels," U.S. gymnastics coach Bela Karolyi said.

Boxing

Bradley's fight was barely five seconds old when Gonzales deposited him on his rear with a bone-rattling right hand. Bradley took a standing 8-count 40 seconds later, held on for the rest of the round, then came back with two strong rounds to win the 112-pound division fight.

Bradley, an Army communications specialist, faces Dzhambulat Mutayev of the Soviet Union in a semifinal bout.

"The Soviets don't hit as hard as the Cubans," Bradley said. "I look at this as my hardest fight. We always figure the Cubans are a little better than everyone else."

The United States won four of six fights Saturday.

Michael Demoss outpointed Zoltan Fuzesy of Hungary 5-0 in the 160-pound division; Shane Mosley stopped Anibal Acevedo of Puerto Rico at 2:10 of the first round at 132 pounds; and Tim Austin stopped

U.S. hoopsters in title game against Yugoslavs

SEATTLE (AP) — The NBA has arrived in international competition well before the 1992 Olympics.

That's the target date USA Basketball set for working the professionals into the process of selecting the national team.

Other countries went right into action after last year's rule change, an obvious factor in Sunday night's Goodwill Games gold medal game.

The United States' roster is one of the youngest ever sent to the floor in a major international competition. Only three players will even be seniors next season, but the team has come together and reached the finals after an early loss to the Soviet Union.

Yugoslavia, which lost a qualifying round game to Brazil before beating the Soviets in the semifinals, has one player who was in the NBA last season and two others who are coveted.

"They are a little more like an NBA team," U.S. coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "They are well-coached so what they do, like an NBA team, they get to know what goes well against another international team and they'll go to that."

Against the Soviets, "that" was Dino Radja, a 6-foot-11 center who topped Dave Gavitt's shopping list when took over the Boston Celtics.

Radja, who had 31 points and nine rebounds and showed an assortment of low-post moves, said he would play with the Celtics next season. He has some time already working with one of them.

"When I first learned to play basketball, I had a coach who was a center and he taught me those moves but that was a long time ago," Radja said. "I think Kevin McHale is much better than I am and I practiced with him last summer at his camp. He tried to teach me some of his moves."

Yugoslav forward Zarko Paspalj played almost all of last season with the San Antonio Spurs, and guard Toni Kukoc was the only draft choice this year of the Chicago Bulls.

SEATTLE — U.S. forward Alonzo Mourning (15) defends against the shot of Brazil's Israel Andrade (15) as U.S. guard Billy Owens moves in to help in Friday night action.

Kukoc, a 6-9 lefty who can play either guard spot, expressed the feelings of many Europeans who don't want to go to the NBA too early.

"Of course it is my dream to play in the NBA," the 22-year-old Kukoc said. "It is not my dream to sit on the bench."

The U.S. team bounced back from the loss to the Soviets with two impressive outings featuring Krzyzewski-like defense and much-improved outside shooting.

The United States beat Italy 113-76 to clinch the medal berth and then buzzed Brazil 112-95 to set up the title game with Yugoslavia.

"We're reading each other's moves better and I sense a familiarity developing," Krzyzewski said. "They're really a good group and I really like them and they like one another."

"I think the reason for the progress is the fact we're playing better defense."

Arkansas' Todd Day has stepped up as the stopper, turning in impressive efforts against Italy's 6-4 guard, Antonello Riva, and Brazil's 6-9 small forward, Oscar Schmidt.

"Seeing Kukoc and what he can do, I think Todd has another big guard to guard," Krzyzewski said.

While Day has led the team defensively, Kenny Anderson and Billy Owens have been consistent on offense.

Anderson, a sophomore this fall at Georgia Tech, has handled the point like an international veteran, averaging 19.7 points and 5.7 assists.

Owens, who will be a junior at Syracuse, has drawn praise from every team the United States has played for his ability to score inside, outside and on the break. He's averaging 21 points and 7.5 rebounds.

"We are getting great consistency from Kenny as the other players adapt to him," Krzyzewski said. "Billy is just one of those outstanding players. He is a complete player."

Blind boy gets his wish

DALLAS — Josh Sanchez couldn't see any of Nolan Ryan's pitches when the Texas Rangers ace attempted his 300th career victory. But, the nearly blind 8-year-old didn't miss a thing.

Josh was unable to describe Ryan's windup or Pete Incaviglia's 9th inning home run, but those things mattered little since it was Josh's very first game.

In his excitement, Josh poked several spectators nearby with his Nolan Ryan souvenir pennant — none seemed to mind. He ate nachos and cotton candy and drank several Cokes.

He asked strangers to point him toward the bleachers and he wanted to know how long it took to build Arlington Stadium. And he didn't understand why he couldn't go down to the dugout to get Ryan's autograph during the game. But overall, he had a wonderful time.

"Great, great, just great," Josh said, blinking happily behind glasses thoroughly smudged with cotton candy. "If I hadn't come to this game I'd have been madder than heck."

Congenital cataracts and glaucoma have blurred Josh's vision. The third-grader can't play Little League, has difficulty reading and says he understands why other kids make fun of his thick glasses.

His poor eyesight, however, has not darkened his enthusiasm for baseball.

Josh heard the hype building up for the game between the Texas Rangers and New York Yankees, and was amazed that "people are coming all the way from California to watch Nolan Ryan."

Pokes-Oilers end in tie

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Texas' two NFL teams came to Alamo Stadium Saturday night auditioning to become Dallas Cowboys and Houston Oilers.

Cowboys quarterback Babe Laufenberg completed a pass to Broderick Sargent on the final play of the scrimmage to tie the score at 24-24.

The scrimmage allowed Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson and Oilers coach Jack Pardee to evaluate their talent on the field while 13,706 fans picked their own favorites.

One vendor said Cowboys memorabilia provided 65-70 percent of his sales followed by the NBA San Antonio Spurs with 20 percent and the Oilers with 10 percent.

But the Oilers had their fans too.

The Oilers, who set club records in penalties last season, were hampered again by miscues.

"That's the type of thing we have to eliminate if we're going to improve and win," Pardee said.

Johnson said there are some areas the Cowboys still must improve on, but added, "This is the first shot out of the box."

"I'm really happy with the aggressive play on the defense — the number of sacks we were able to get and the takeaways," Johnson said.

"I think we made some improvements offensively," he said. "We had some breakdowns against the run-and-shoot. That was to be expected."

Johnson praised the performances of defensive ends Jim Jeffcoat and Daniel Stubbins as well as the interception attempt by safety Vince Albritton. Johnson also said that he was pleasantly surprised by the performance of linebacker Terrence Cools.

Oilers starting quarterback Warren Moon played in only the first sequence and completed 7 of 10 passes for 132 yards and touchdowns of 52 yards to Ernest Givins and 19 yards to Frank Miotke.

Cowboys quarterback Steve Walsh completed a 30-yard touchdown pass to Rod Harris. It was Houston's second scrimmage here.

Houston scrimmaged the Kansas City Chiefs before a packed crowd of 22,000 last year.

The Cowboys moved their training site from Thousand Oaks, Calif. to St. Edward's University in Austin this year.

The two teams are scheduled to scrimmage again Aug. 2 in Austin.

Knicks forward goes to Hornets

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Forward Johnny Newman joined the Charlotte Hornets Saturday when the New York Knicks announced their decision not to match an offer sheet for the restricted free agent.

The Knicks had 15 days to match the offer for the 6-foot-7, 190-pound Newman, who averaged 12.9 points a game last season for New York. They get no compensation for his loss.

The deal reportedly was worth $5 million for four years.

Trevino leading Newport Cup

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Lee Trevino dropped a 3-foot putt on the final hole for a 7-under-par 65 Saturday and took the opening-round lead in the $300,000 Newport Cup seniors golf tournament at Newport County Club.

Trevino, who has won six times this year in his first full season on the senior PGA tour, birdied six of the final nine holes in shooting a 30 on the back nine. It was his lowest 9-hole total since he became eligible for the senior tour last December.

Jones leading LPGA Championship by two

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Rosie Jones overcame a bogey on the troublesome 16th hole to shoot a 1-under-par 70 and take a two-stroke lead over Cathy Johnston after Saturday's third round of the LPGA Championship.

Jones parred the first 11 holes, then had birdies on Nos. 12 and 15 before bogeying No. 16, a 195-yard par-3. She had a seven on the hole in Friday's second round.

Jones parred the final two holes to finish at 4-under 209. She has birdied or parred 52 of 54 holes, with No. 16 the lone exception.

She was the only player to have three straight sub-par rounds on

Hot Irwin leads Buick

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Hale Irwin, bidding for his third win in a month, shot a 5-under-par 67 Saturday to maintain a 1-stroke lead after three rounds of the Buick Open.

Irwin, 45, who won the U.S. Open and the Buick Classic within a span of six days late in June, was at 17-under 199 after a bogey-free round of 67 at 7,014-yard Warwick Hills.

Billy Andrade was one shot back at 200 after a round of 66 and Fuzzy Zoeller was at 201, also with a 66.

Irwin's round included a brilliant birdie after driving behind a tree on the par-5 13th, a 490-yard hole that many golfers eagled. He faded a one-iron around the tree and onto the green, leaving himself an eight-foot putt.

Irwin, who started the day tied for the lead with Don Pooley, finished with a birdie on the 18th with a 6-iron to within six feet of the pin.

Pooley shot even-par 72 and dropped into a three-way tie for seventh with Robert Wrenn and Mike Sullivan at 204.

Doug Tewell was fourth at 202, Canadian Dave Barr and U.S. Open runnerup Mike Donald were at 203.

Andrade, whose best finish since turning pro in 1987 was a tie for second in the 1989 Buick Open, started the day 10-under and pro-mply went birdie-bogey to remain 10-under. But six more birdies the rest of the way earned him sole possession of second place.

On the par-5 16th, Andrade blasted from a bunker to within eight feet for a birdie, and at the 18th, Andrade hit a 9-iron 15 feet from the pin to close with a birdie.

Zoeller, winner of the 1979 Masters and the 1984 U.S. Open, started the day at 9-under, three strokes behind second-round leaders Irwin and Pooley.

Zoeller had four birdies on the first nine holes, lost a stroke with a bogey on the par-3 11th, but got back to 11-under with a birdie on the 12th. An eagle from 20 feet at the 490-yard 13th put him 13-under. The crowd-pleasing Zoeller closed with birdies at the 15th and 18th, rolling in an eight-footer on the final hole.

Tewell, looking for his first win since the 1987 Pensacola Open, was 8-under after two rounds. He had two birdies and a bogey on the front and had three birdies and an eagle — also at the 13th — on the back.

Donald, who lost the U.S. Open to Irwin in a memorable playoff at Medinah last month, started at 10-under and played bogey-free golf until the 18th hole. He had two birdies on the front and two on the back to get to 14-under before the costly bogey.

GRAND BLANC, Mich. — Don Pooley from Tucson, Ariz., reacts to the gallery after sinking a putt in Buick Open play.

Barr started at 9-under and shot a steady 68.

The winner of the $1 million tournament, which concludes Sunday, will earn $180,000.

Texas Tech coach to speak at coaching school

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas High School Coaches Association coaching school, the largest organization of its kind in the nation, opens its 1990 coaching school this week.

Players who will participate in the all-star football and basketball games will assemble Thursday to begin workouts for their final games as high school athletes the following week.

The All-Star basketball game will be played July 30 at Texas Southern University and the football game is scheduled July 31 in the Astrodome.

Eddy Joseph, assistant executive vice president of the THSCA, said a top group of lecturers will entertain and instruct the coaches.

College football speakers include Texas Tech's Spike Dykes, Jim Sweeney of Fresno State and new University of Houston coach John Jenkins.

Dykes is one of the most popular speakers at the annual coaching school. "He spoke two years ago and they voted him to come back this year and next year, too," Joseph said.

Basketball coaches will hear from Texas Christian coach Moe Iba and track speakers will be TCU's Bubba Thornton and former Abilene Christian University coach Don Hood.

South quarterback Jeff Granger of Orangefield and the North's Steve Clements of Huntsville will continue as opponents on the college level.

One of the U.S. losses came against a Cuban, Kevin Childrey lost a 5-0 decision to Julio Gonzalez, the 132-pound world champion.

Gymnastics Zmeskal's performance in the team competition was sufficiently alarming to the Soviets to make them change their lineup for the individual all-around. Under Goodwill Games rules, the Soviets' two highest-scoring gymnasts in the team competition would have moved into the individual portion.

That would have left Svetlana Boginskaya, the Soviets' world and Olympic champion, out of Saturday night's action. But the Soviets invoked a rule that allows them to replace injured athletes to get Boginskaya into the fray against Zmeskal.

"It won't change a thing," Zmeskal said. "I'm going into it with the idea of doing my best."

Zmeskal and Boginskaya, who is 17, met earlier this year in Paris, with the Soviet gymnast winning by a slim .025 points.

Ice Hockey Joe Sacco scored two goals as the U.S. team made its debut by beating Switzerland 7-1 in hockey at Kennewick, Wash.

Raymond Walder's goal with the game 10 minutes old gave Switzerland its only goal and a 1-0 lead. Jim Johansson, a veteran of the 1988 U.S. Olympic team, tied the score at 15:37, and Sacco scored on a power play for a 2-1 lead late in the first period.

Just 2,491 attended the game at the 5,800-season Tri-City Coliseum.

Ten run sixth inning leads Tigers past Bosox

DETROIT (AP) — It was Looney Tunes sun visor day Saturday at Tiger Stadium, and it was appropriate. In a goofy game, the Boston Red Sox and Detroit took turns scoring until the Tigers broke it open with their biggest inning since 1983.

Larry Sheets hit a bases-loaded triple during a 10-run sixth inning and the Tigers bopped Boston 17-9. Sheets also hit a three-run homer and finished with a career-high six RBIs.

Paul Gibson (3-2) pitched four innings of one-hit relief for the victory. When he entered, the Red Sox led 8-4 and his first thought was to prevent a blowout.

"Games like this either turn into routs or slugfests," Gibson said. "I just wanted to keep it close and hope our hitters could get it going."

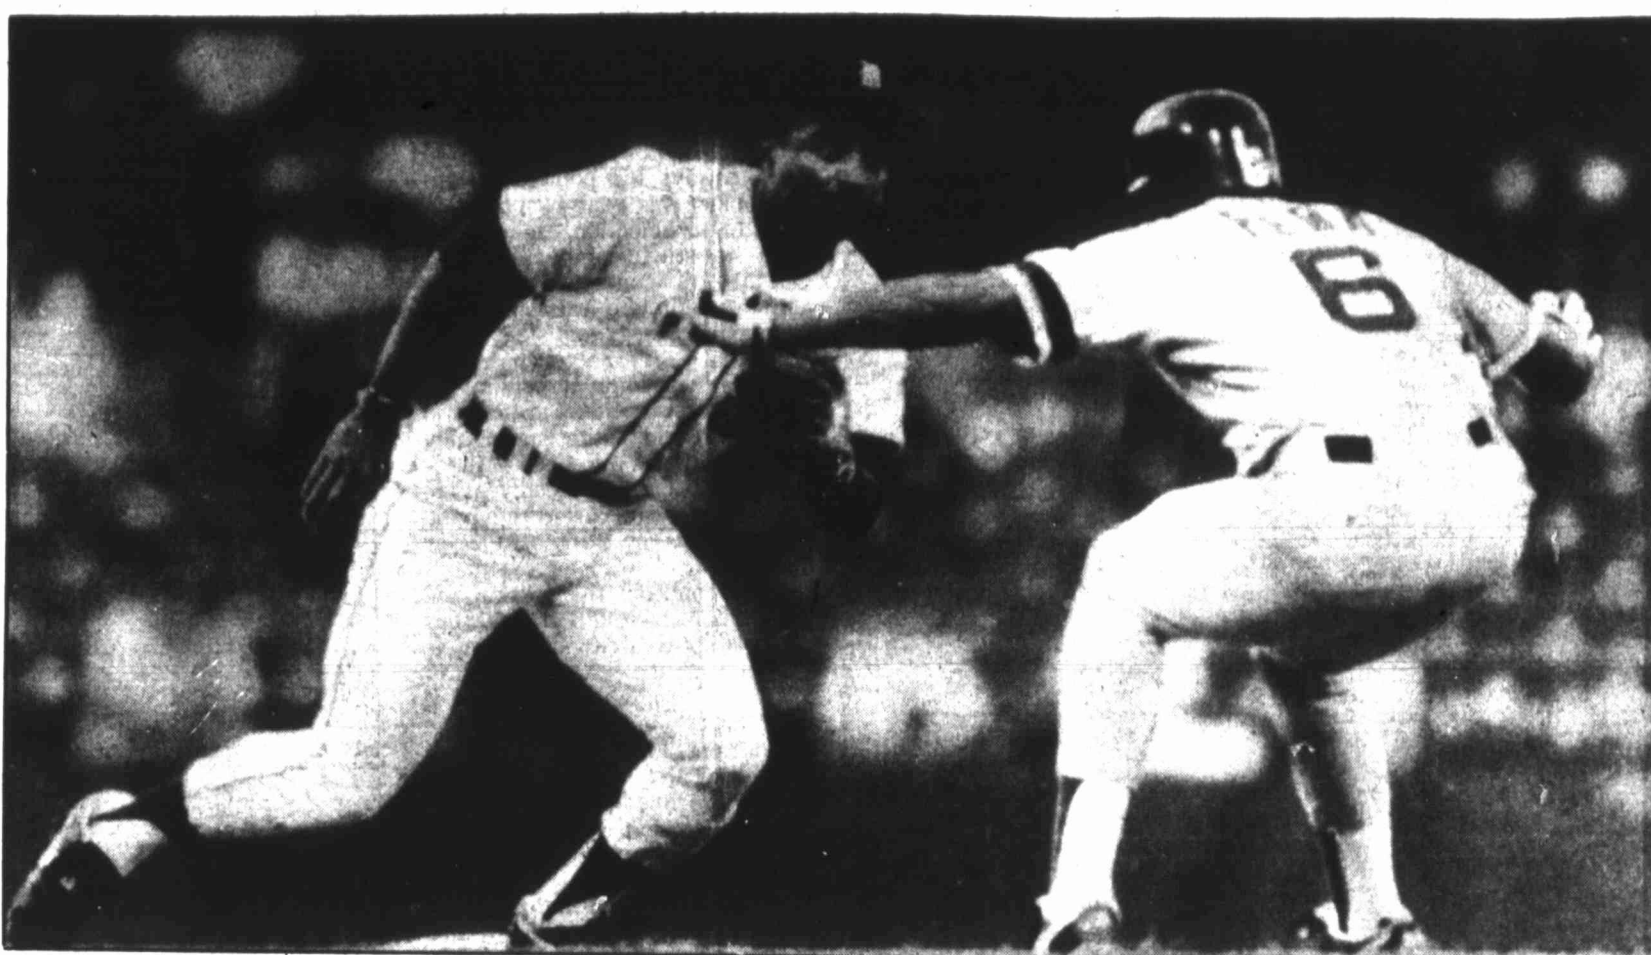

They did. The Tigers overcame a 9-5 deficit by bunching six hits, five walks and an error in the sixth. It was Detroit's biggest inning since scoring 11 runs in the first inning against Baltimore on Sept. 20, 1983.

The big blow was a grounder by Sheets that hit first base and hopped into the right-field corner. The three-run triple tied the score at 9.

"We should have been out of the inning," Red Sox manager Joe Morgan said. "That guy can't run, so if the ball doesn't take a bad hop, we get a double play and get out of the inning."

In his last four games, Sheets is 6-for-16 (.375) with three homers and 12 RBIs after going nearly six weeks without a home run.

"I have had a lot of opportunities, and I want to make the most of them," Sheets said. "I'm just trying to get the bat head out in front of the ball, instead of power-ing everything."

DETROIT — Detroit Tigers' second baseman Tony Phillips (left) runs down Boston Red Sox catcher Tony Pena (right) after Pena tried to steal second base in the second inning. The Tigers scored 10 runs in the sixth inning to blast the Red Sox 17-9 Saturday afternoon. It was the most runs a Tiger team had scored in one inning since 1983.

Dennis Lamp (3-3) took the loss. Lamp had won all 11 previous decisions against the Tigers since 1981.

Rangers 3, Blue Jays 2

TORONTO (AP) — Harold Baines hit a solo home run in the 13th inning and the Texas Rangers beat the Toronto Blue Jays.

The Rangers, stung in the ninth when Toronto rallied for two runs, won it when Baines hit his 10th home run with two outs against Frank Wills (5-3).

Brad Arnsberg (4-1) gave up one hit in 1 2-3 innings for the victory. John Barfield got the last out for his first major-league save.

White Sox 5, Brewers 4
CHICAGO (AP) — Ozzie Guillen's two-run single in the ninth inning lifted the Chicago White Sox over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Ron Karkovics opened the ninth with a double off relief ace Dan Plesac (2-4). Scott Fletcher beat out a bunt single, sending pinch runner Rodney McCray to third and pinch hitter Carlton Fisk walked to load the bases. Guillen followed with a single to center field.

Scott Radinsky (6-0) was the winner. The Brewers had taken a 4-1 lead in the eighth on Greg Vaughn's sacrifice fly.

Royals 10, Orioles 9

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kurt Stillwell's two-run homer capped a wild five-run seventh inning, rallying the Kansas City Royals past the Baltimore Orioles in the first game of a doubleheader.

Orioles shortstop Cal Ripken made an error in the fifth inning, ending his major league record streak without an error at 95 games and 431 chances.

Gerald Perry singled in the Kansas City seventh and George Brett, who hit a three-run homer in the third, lined a ball down the right field line that the umpires called foul. But they reversed themselves after a discussion, ruling the ball had bounced off the glove of first baseman Randy Milligan. Brett was given a double and Perry placed at third.

Milligan then misplayed Jim Eisenreich's grounder for an error. Pat Tabler's sacrifice fly pulled Kansas City within 9-7. Mike Macfarlane hit an RBI single and Stillwell homered.

Steve Crawford (4-2) got the victory and Jeff Montgomery went two innings for his 14th save. Mark Williamson (8-2) took the loss.

McGee's homer paces Cards over Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie McGee's flair is still there.

At 31, the legs are getting slower and the defense is gone. But the bat has been going good these days.

McGee homered to lead off the one-game lead in the NL East, as Philadelphia beat Pittsburgh.

The home run, McGee's second this season, gave him a 19-game hitting streak, matching his career best. He is 33-for-76 over that span, a .434 average. McGee also singled in the ninth against John Franco.

Magrane (6-12) was as down as the team early in the year. He lost eight of his first 10 decisions but now he's starting to turn it around.

Cone (7-5) lost for the first time in nine starts since June 4, despite allowing just two hits in eight innings. He struck out 10, giving him 10 or more strikeouts in five of his last six starts. It was only his third loss in 11 career decisions against the Cardinals.

Phillies 4, Pirates 3
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Charlie Hayes and Von Hayes homered and Philadelphia scored the winning run when Pittsburgh couldn't turn a potential double-play grounder in the ninth inning.

The Phillies, who have won the first three games of the four game series, led 3-1 in the fourth, but the Pirates tied it on solo homers by Bobby Bonilla and Andy Van Slyke. Pirates' reliever Bill Landrum (3-2) retired Carmelo Martinez to start the ninth, but Charlie Hayes and Ricky Jordan singled, sending Hayes to third. Pinch-hitter Darren Daulton then bounced a grounder to third baseman Jeff King, who had an easy play at the plate but elected to try to turn the double play. King got Jordan at second, but Daulton beat the throw to first by a half-step as Hayes scored.

Giants 3, Reds 2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Kevin Mitchell singled home the winning run with two outs in the 11th inning and the surging San Francisco Giants beat Cincinnati, the Reds' sixth straight loss.

San Francisco has won the first three of a four-game series, cutting the Reds' lead in the National League West to 6½ games, their smallest since June 13. The Giants have won all six games at Candlestick Park and are 7-2 against the Reds, the only team to hold an edge over them.

Mystery boxer finally comes to light

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — An Oklahoma man says he was the mystery boxer knocked out by Olympic silver medalist Roy Jones Jr. last weekend, but he denied any knowledge of a hoax, a newspaper reported.

Jones and fight promoters thought Jones' ninth victory in as many professional fights came against Derwin Richards of Houston in a junior middleweight bout. The match was held Saturday in this Florida Panhandle city, Jones' hometown.

But Richards and his manager on Monday said they knew nothing about the fight, spurring investigations by the state attorney's office here and Florida State Athletic Commission.

Tony Waddles of Norman, Okla., told the Pensacola News Journal in a telephone interview published today that he was the boxer knocked out by Jones 2:02 into the first round.

The auto-dealership employee said he traveled to Pensacola with Oklahoma City fight manager Elvis Belt.

"Elvis Belt contacted me and said he may have a fight for me," Waddles said. "He said I could make some good money, something like $2,000 for this fight."

Waddles said he had only three professional fights and had been working out for about two months at a small gym run by Belt. He said Belt told him he would take care of everything, including signing fight documents.

"I wasn't supposed to do nothing except fight," Waddles said. However, Tommy Griggs, an accountant employed by Square Ring Inc., a Pensacola company that promoted the fight, said he witnessed the imposter sign a settlement sheet and endorse a $1,960 check for his purse with Richards' signature.

After the check was signed, Griggs said he then cashed it, giving Jones' opponent a sealed envelope containing the cash. The boxer then handed the envelope to Belt and left the room, he said.

Belt has not returned telephone calls to reporters.

Waddles said he received $700 from Belt. He expressed shock when told the fight contract called for a $2,000 payoff minus license fees.

"I knew it would happen," Waddles said. "Man, he stiffed me, too."

Jones said earlier that the hoax was not his problem.

"If they put me in the ring with a 90-year-old grandmother, she gets up off the stool and comes at me, I'm going to take her out," Jones said. "All I know is this guy had boxing trunks on. He threw punches at me and I tore him apart. That's what I'm supposed to do."

Jones said Wednesday it is up to his managers to tell him who to fight. But he did acknowledge his opponent looked different than the man he saw in a tape of Richards' March 20, 1989, bout with Derrick "Hurricane" Kelly.

"I expected a bigger guy, but that was a year and a half ago and someone's build can change," Jones said. "I'd love to fight the real Derwin Richards."

Clements, who established a state record 8,204 career passing yards, will attend the University of Texas and Granger, a football-baseball star, will attend Texas A&M.

"Granger is a tremendous football player," South coach Dennis Parker of Marshall said. "He and Steve Emerson (Houston MacArthur) both have great arms."

With Clements and Odessa Permian receiver Lloyd Hill on his team, North coach Bob Ledbetter of Southlake Carroll plans to have a passing attack.

"It's going to be an exciting game," Ledbetter said. "We are going to have two groups ready to play. We want to get everyone in the game."

The South All-Star basketball team will be directed by Jerrel Hartfiel and his staff from Alief Elsik and the North will be led by Larry Scott of Snyder.

The South will get help from Tremaine Wingfield, who averaged 20 points per game at Brazoswood last season. He will attend the University of Louisville this fall.

Also expected to lead the South are guard Tim Glover of Clear Lake, Artie Griddin of San Antonio Lee, Rich McIver of Brazosport and Ingram's Troy House, who averaged 41 points per game last season.

Scott hopes to counter with Stevin Smith of Dallas Spruce and Scott Pierce of Bedford Trinity.

Smith averaged 26.6 points last season and will attend Arizona State. Pierce averaged 22.0 points and is headed for Illinois.

Class 5A football coaches likely will discuss the new split 5A playoff system that goes into effect this season.

Three teams from each 5A district will qualify for the playoffs. The school with the smallest enrollment in each district will play toward a state title and the other two schools will compete in the large school division.

Creating a Class 6A would separate the larger schools but it also would produce massive travel budgets, Joseph said.

"You'd have two teams in West Texas close together in the same district with someone 600 miles away," Joseph said.

"This may or may not be the answer. If anyone can draw up something that would work better, they'd adopt it in a New York minute."

Parker doesn't understand the reasoning behind the split division.

"Why do I have to play a school with 3,000 students to get into the playoffs and then I can't play them after I get there?" Parker said.

"I'm happy to get into the playoffs in any division but what this means is the sports writers will be picking the state 5A champion."

"The (NCAA college) Division I schools have been wanting a playoff system and that's what we've had."

"Now there will be two 5A champions and the polls will decide who's the champion."

The Wizard of Oz

Ozzie Smith may be down, but he's definitely not out

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ozzie Smith is accustomed to hearing oohs and ahhs, not boos.

But in this summer of discontent for the St. Louis Cardinals, that is what it has come down to. Suddenly, at 35, he's been perceived in some circles as washed-up, an insidious clubhouse presence, a ringleader in doubleknits who helped greased the skids for Manager Whitey Herzog's resignation earlier this month.

Smith, a true original, became a $2 million dollar shortstop strictly because of his glove as his clean sweep of Gold Gloves in the 1980s attests. But he also learned to hit and he's always been able to wow the crowds with backflips and pirouettes.

Now his critics are saying it would be best for the last-place team if he were to move on. "Ozzie Must Go For Cards' Sake," read one headline a few days after Herzog quit July 6. An anonymous player was quoted as saying that Smith was practically triumphant in the clubhouse the day Herzog quit.

Smith has one year remaining on a two-year contract that pays him close to $4 million with an option for another year. The talk stings, but he figures he'll weather the storm.

"They can write anything and say anything they want," Smith says with a wan smile. "My reputation speaks for itself. I don't have to defend myself against anything. I still do what I do as good as anybody does it."

Criticism aside, Smith is St. Louis' second most loved sports personality, after the departed Herzog, and his popularity hasn't exactly plummeted. Fan voting got him his eighth straight All-Star start even though he hit in the 230s most of the first half of the season with limited range afield due to nagging injuries.

Since the break, Smith's hitting has improved, nudging his average to near .250.

He's a successful restaurateur, he has his own TV show, an option to buy a lucrative Anheuser-Busch Inc. distributorship, and so many other outside interests that baseball sometimes gets crowded out. So when Smith hears the boos, he considers the source.

"To me, those are people who are easily influenced," he says. "These are not people who know me. People who know me, I don't have to worry about."

"Anyway, I've been booed a lot worse in San Francisco."

Indeed, the spottish image Smith carefully cultivated as a TV nice guy persona has taken a bit of a beating in recent years. Giants' fans haven't forgotten that he sucker-punched Will Clark during an altercation a few years ago at Busch Stadium, and the 5-foot-10 shortstop has made a few enemies in the locker room, both players and media, with his larger-than-life ego.

Yet it's hard to argue with his results.

Cardinals fans, among the most loyal in the game, haven't forgotten his immense contributions to the team's success in the 1980s, both as a player and drawing card.

Smith is a huge celebrity at Ozzie's sports bar-restaurant in St. Louis County, about 20 miles away from the ballpark, where the clientele grabs the baseball bat door handles on the way in and can order such delicacies as grand slam ribs, knockout hamburgers and home run chili.

"They really pack it in when he tapes his TV show here," said waitress Peggy Lieser. "Everybody loves him."

Cardinals fan Harris Jackoway of St. Louis comes to Ozzie's for the food, not to catch a glimpse of the little big man, but he agrees.

"He's the best shortstop we've ever had, and I've been following the Cardinals since 1926," Jackoway said. "He's been a hell of a shortstop and he's made a hell of a contribution to this city in many ways."

Smith may be the third-best shortstop in the National League this season, behind Barry Larkin of the Reds and Shawn Dunston of the Cubs, but the way he sees it, he's far from through.

"Shoot, everybody slows down," Smith says. "But I can play till I'm 40 if I choose to."

And having Smith around is OK with the younger players. Jay Bell of the Pittsburgh Pirates, for one, says he's enjoyed getting the chance to talk strategy with Smith.

"He's always been free with his advice," Bell said. "As a young shortstop, I appreciate that."

Larkin, the heir apparent, also defers to Smith.

"Until Ozzie is out of the game, he's always going to be the man," Larkin said. "He's done a lot for the game and that nickname, 'The Wizard of Oz,' is something for people to hang on to."

Or is it Wizard of Aahs? Time has diminished Smith's skills and his arm is a slingshot compared to Dunston's cannon, but he still has the best range in the National League and remains a master at stealing hits.

"I think people come to see me to do what I do out on the field and that's play good baseball," Smith says. "I've done that for a few years, I think, and I've made it entertaining, even in the years that we didn't win."

"That's why the attendance here is so high, the fans want to be entertained."

Smith says his popularity was overlooked this year by critics of his All-Star selection. He suffered from statistical comparisons, but has always contended that the game shouldn't be just a showcase for players having fast starts.

"Actually, it's not even a good year that gets some players in, it's a good first half," Smith says. "Every year it's the same thing and you get sick and tired of it."

"I had six or seven good years in a row and now because I'm having a down one they wanted to throw me out."

Smith concedes that Larkin and Dunston are having better seasons but he's not ready to step down as king of the hill.

"There's so many good young shortstops," Smith says. "But time is what determines greatness, not one year. You've got to do what you do over the long haul, and I have."

And he hasn't written off this season yet. It began poorly when he pulled a groin muscle in spring training, spending the first few weeks of the season on the disabled list. Then he injured his right knee, and still wears a brace.

"It was a double whammy," Smith says. "As my knee's getting a little better, I'm able to move a little better, and cover a little more ground."

"You watch. As I get better, everything will get better."

Smith's career skyrocketed after he came to the Cardinals in 1982 in a shortstop swap that sent Garry Templeton to the San Diego Padres. The Cardinals won the World Series his first year in town and won National League pennants in 1985 and 1987.

This year, the Cardinals could finish in last place for the first time since 1918. Whom to blame? Nobody, Smith says.

The nucleus of the Cardinals — Smith, center fielder Willie McGee, third baseman Terry Pendleton and left fielder Vince Coleman — has been in place for six seasons, and Smith says it's simply time for an overhaul.

"All good things must come to an end," he says. "We've been together a long time and we've had a lot of good years, but things just go stale."

"You become stagnated, no matter what you do."

It was a golden era that likely lasted a season too long, he says. Free agency will take care of the problem this winter, when McGee, Pendleton and Coleman all could go elsewhere.

As for Smith, he won't be pushed out of town. As a 10-year veteran with five years of service with one team, he can veto a trade.

"So, if I want to be here I probably will," Smith says. "Well, yeah, I'd like to be here next year. I don't plan on going anywhere, at least not at this point."

Landry ready to go to Hall next week

AUSTIN (AP) — When Tom Landry is inducted into the Professional Football Hall of Fame next Saturday, no current member of the Dallas Cowboys will be there to congratulate him.

The Cowboys will be working out at St. Edward's University not too far from where Landry played in college at the University of Texas. And no player on any of his Super Bowl teams is left on the roster with the recent retirement of Ed (Too Tall) Jones.

Travis County is still Landry country. He has a house on the 18th fairway at the Hills of Lakeway and is in the Longhorns' Hall of Fame.

It's ironic that the Cowboys' first Texas training camp is in the town that helped make Landry's name. There's been no announcement of a ceremony in the Dallas training camp.

Roger Staubach, the quarterback for so many of Landry's successful Super Bowl teams, will do the honors of introducing Landry.

"It was kind of tough making the decision," Landry said. "But I realized that it's the players who put you there. Since Roger retired, we have developed a strong friendship. We have become great friends."

Landry's firing still hangs heavy as he awaits his induction into the Hall of Fame.

"It (the firing) could have been handled a little better," Landry said. "It wasn't. You can do what you want when you buy a team. Let's see if they go on to be successful. If they don't, then somebody else will move in."

There has been no drive to put Landry in the Cowboys Ring of Honor and he's not sure he'd go if invited.

"I'm not sure about that," he said. "I don't know how I'd react."

Landry coached the Cowboys 29 years, through the 1988 season. His regular season career record was 250-162-6 and his record including playoffs was 270-178-6.

The ceremonies begin at 10 a.m. in Canton, Ohio. Landry is familiar with them. He inducted Sam Huff, Lee Roy Jordan, and Staubach into the hall.

Remembering to forget

GREELEY, Colo. (AP) — When you're around the Denver Broncos, someone always brings IT up, almost as if he knows that few people will charge in and ask: "How does it feel to get clobbered in three Super Bowls?"

So as Dan Reeves talks about being the NFL's fourth most senior coach ("It's hard to believe I've been doing this ten years") he segues neatly into the pressing question about this year's Broncos.

"People always want to know how you're going to handle IT," he says. "You don't handle it. You set your goal to win the division title and get to the playoffs and go from there."

Still, IT is always there — three losses by a combined score of 136-40, including a 55-10 shellacking by the 49ers last Jan. 28.

Still, on the surface it's business as usual as the veterans try to remember to forget what has happened to them three of the past four Januarys and Reeves reminds himself that last year's AFC championship not withstanding, the Broncos are a young team.

And that is where the hope lies. Just 17 players, headed of course by quarterback John Elway, remain from the team that lost the 1987 Super Bowl to the Giants. Some of those seem to be on the verge of being phased out as the Broncos remain one of the NFL's youngest teams.

Four rookies — running back Bobby Humphrey, fullback Melvin Bratton, guard Doug Widell and safety Steve Atwater — started against the 49ers last January. Humphrey, Atwater and Widell all have Pro Bowl potential.

Moreover, Reeves expects improvement from some other second- and third-year men, notably 6-foot-6, 280-pound defensive end Warren Powers. If nothing else, Powers stands out physically on a defensive front that still looks undersized, the principal rap on Reeves' first two Super Bowl teams.

That can hardly be said about the offensive line, which features Widell and the injury-plagued Jim Juriga and where 311-pound Gerald Perry has been looking good following alcohol rehab in the offseason.

Elway himself is bulked up to 215 pounds — he's been lifting weights and can bench press 285 pounds — and Humphrey and Bratton give him the best running backs he's ever had.

On defense, Karl Mecklenburg has been moved to outside linebacker to take advantage of his pass-rushing skills and a fourth-round draft pick named Jeroy Robinson, a 245-pound inside linebacker from Texas A&M, has looked sensational in the early drills.

All that SHOULD be enough to win the AFC West.

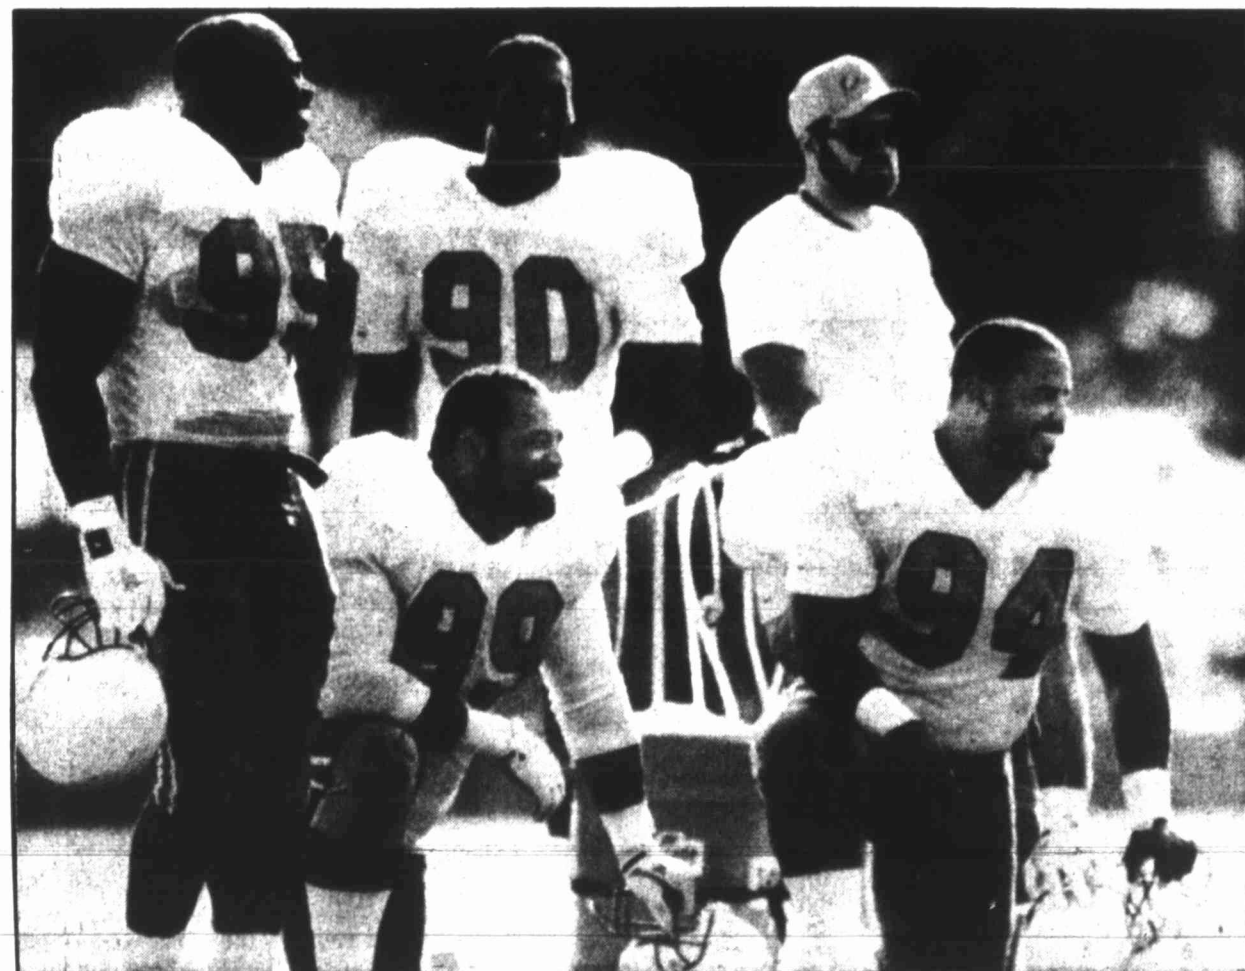

But that has rarely been a problem. Nor has winning the AFC championship, particularly when Cleveland has been the opponent.

What has been a problem is, of course, the ... uh ... Super Bowl.

Reeves goes out of his way to note that the Broncos have been competitive in the regular season with all three teams — the Giants, Redskins and 49ers — who clobbered them in the Super Bowl. But that's not much consolation.

"IT doesn't go away just like that," says Pro Bowl safety Dennis Smith. "IT stays there in the back of your head and crops up from time to time. We know we played bad in those games. We just played bad. We know that if we play our best, we'll have another opportunity."

The rest of the country may be forgiven if it groans at the thought.

Break time

SAN MARCOS — Oilers William Fuller (95), Erza Johnson (90), Doug Smith (99) and Glenn Montgomery (94) take a break between drills during training camp Friday. The Oilers are running a new 4-3 defense, putting aside their old 3-4 defense.

New Orleans Saints go marching off to London

LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP) — For a change, Jim Mora wants his team to think about something besides football.

The New Orleans Saints left Sunday for London, where they will practice for a week against the Los Angeles Raiders, then play the Raiders in the American Bowl atembley Stadium on Aug. 5.

Mora is usually singleminded about preseason practice, but the Saints coach is making an exception for the overseas trip.

"I know it's going to be different than it is over here, and I've accepted that. This is part of going over there," Mora said.

"One of the reasons we take the trip is that we want them to be distracted. We want them to enjoy the trip. We're not going over there with the idea of practicing twice a day and having meetings until 10 o'clock at night.

"They are going to have some free time. We want them to learn something from their experiences over there, so we're giving them that opportunity."

Equipment manager Dan Simmons has been supervising packing since May — about a ton of trunks; 13 equipment carts loaded with enough gear to fill a 12-yard dump truck; 72 player bags, each weighing 35 pounds; and coaches' kits, 20 pounds apiece.

"We're taking another 120 items — ball bags, a stand-up dummy, blocking shields, kicking nets, three carts of bath towels, you name it, we're taking it," Simmons said.

His list is 47 pages long. "Just our tool box took a half-page — hammer, screw drivers, pliers," he said.

Assistant trainer Kevin Mangum has an 89-page list. He even had to count the Band-Aids.

"We don't expect any problems, but if somebody in Customs wants to check, it's all listed," he said.

Jim Miller, vice president of administration, has a short list.

"I'm taking a pen and a note pad," he said. "We'll leave a skeleton crew here and in New Orleans to answer telephones, but we're essentially shut down for a week."

The Saints played a preseason game in Mexico City in 1978, and Simmons handled the packing for that game, too.

"We want it to be a good experience for the whole organization," Mora said. "I hope the players are looking forward to going."

AUSTIN — Slot limits, aggregate limits and possession limits are just a few of the terms Texas fishermen need to be familiar with before heading to the lake.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials said some of the basic terminology found in the agency's fishing regulations guide continues to be misinterpreted or misunderstood by some anglers.

The following are just a few of the phrases that may be troublesome to some anglers:

• Aggregate Limit: Aggregate means a combination, so when the regulation says "five largemouth, smallmouth and spotted bass in the aggregate," it means the angler can retain five bass in any combination of the three species.

This could be all five of one species, or a combination such as three largemouth, one smallmouth and one spotted.

• Slot Limit: This is a relatively new concept in fishery management, designed to protect valuable middle-sized black bass while allowing harvest of bass in the smaller and larger size classes. The 14-21 slot is in effect on only seven Texas reservoirs. Under the slot limit, anglers are allowed to retain only bass shorter than 14 inches or longer than 21 inches. Thus, fish between the 14 and 21 inch size are said to be in the protected "slot." Slot limit lakes have a daily bag limit of three bass.

• Minimum and Maximum Lengths: Some fish species, such as spotted seatrout, have only a minimum length limit. Anglers can retain 10 spotted seatrout per day, and all those retained must be at least 15 inches long. For other species such as red drum (redfish), there is both a minimum and maximum length limit. Anglers are allowed to retain three red drum per day, and all those retained must measure longer than 14 inches but less than 30 inches. This type of limit is designed to protect smaller, immature fish and also the larger individuals that are valuable spawners.

• Possession Limit: The regulations say "possession limit" means the maximum number of a species that may be possessed at one time.

• Length Measurement: A fish must be measured lying on its side on a flat surface with its jaw closed and the tail fin squeezed together or turned in a way to obtain the maximum overall length.

Rip-rap can offer good sport

By Mark Weaver

If you are on a lake for the very first time and really don't know where to start your hunt for fish, rip-rap is probably your very best choice.

Rip-rap is a man made rock structure that is often found along the base of bridges in most large impoundments, and for some reason, bass and really most game fish, just seem to love it.

Basically the reason that fish love rip-rap is that it is an excellent source for food. The food chain starts with algae growing on the rocks which draws the smallest of creatures in to feed. In turn, small shad come in to feed, bringing in the bass to gorge on the abundance of these small fish. One of the most prevalent sources of food found in these areas is crayfish, as they love to hide in the rocks.

For this reason, crayfish colored baits will produce in a big way around rip-rap. Crayfish patterned crankbaits, crayfish bodied worms and many lures in brown-orange color combinations will work extremely well.

For the most part, I like to position my boat so that I can fish parallel to the rip-rap. Using this method, you can quickly locate the depth at which the bass are holding.

Crankbaits are, by far, my favorite choice of lures for fishing this type of structure. Crankbaits, when bumped along the rocks, will effectively imitate crayfish, and bass just can't seem to resist the action.

My favorite worm to fish in this situation is a six inch, brown worm with an orange tail. When worked slowly, in every nook and cranny on the rocks, it's not hard to draw the attention of hungry bass in search of an easy meal.

Because shad are ever prevalent around rip-rap, shad colored baits and patterns should not be overlooked. It is for this reason that spinnerbaits are quite effective in and around rip-rap.

Remember, next time you're on a new lake, take a little time to seek out the rip-rap. If you've been passing it up at your favorite lake, then do yourself a favor and spend some time fishing it.

From bass, to bream, to crappie, they are all often found in abundance around rip-rap. It is a structure that should never be overlooked!

Lamesa Bass Club has tournament

The recent cool, cloudy weather slowed fishing at Lake J.B. Thomas and put only a few hundred acre feet of water into the reservoir.

The Lamesa Bass Club held its tournament at the lake with 12 participants. Kenneth Miers, Welch, won the tourney with three fish weighing in at 7.72 lbs. Second was Jack Hataway, Lamesa, with 6.40 pounds for two fish. Next was Bill Brannon, Lamesa, with 2.75 lbs. for one fish; followed by Jack Fleghorn, Big Spring, with one at 1.8 lbs. and John Hataway, Post, one at 1.5 lbs.

Channel catfishing was fair, using liver for bait, and black bass results were fair. Water temperature dipped to 75 degrees.

Bingo!

Christina Ferchalk

By CHRISTINA FERCHALK

My mother defends to death her right to play bingo. That no one has ever challenged her on the subject is moot.

She insists my dad is driven to distraction while she's away at bingo.

"That man probably wears a path in the carpet, pacing back and forth, the whole time I'm gone."

I've seen "that man" while Mom was at bingo — snoring on the sofa, head thrown back, mouth wide open. No doubt his bear-in-hibernation routine is just a ruse to mask his anxiety.

One Sunday afternoon, I decided to go to the local bingo game with Mom. I don't know what possessed me to do such a thing. It seemed like a good idea at the time. I thought we'd talk, laugh, eat, gossip with the other ladies — and if there was time, maybe play a few rounds of bingo. My naivete knows no bounds.

When I got to Mom's house she was waiting at the curb, pawing the ground. Jumping in the car, she shouted, "I'm jazzed, let's roll!"

It was my first inkling that I should be afraid, be very afraid.

At the bingo hall she took out a wad of currency thick enough to choke a horse, peeled off a few bills and handed them to the man at the door.

"Just give my daughter four cards," she told him. "She's new, but I'll take my usual."

He gave her her usual and a wheelbarrow to tow them in.

Inside the hall, I headed for the nearest available table. I'm such a ninny I thought I could sit anywhere I pleased. I had no way of knowing bingo players are so territorial. A newcomer claiming squatter's rights to a regular player's lucky seat could find herself swinging from the rafters by her bra straps. These ladies are intense!

While Mom got organized I watched the other women arrive. Some had newborns at their breasts; others had oxygen tanks at their feet. Their only common denominator was their T-shirts. Most, like my Mom were wearing their "Bingo Is My Life" shirts. Others wore shirts that declared, "I'm Going To Bingo: Make Your Own Damn Supper." It was scary.

Before the games began the other women noticed me and began circling our table. My palms began to sweat.

"Don't let them hurt me Mommy."

"They do this to all the new ones," she whispered. "Just hold your ground and relax."

"It's OK, girls," Mom said coolly. "She's with me."

The caller hit the switch that set the bingo ball machine humming. The air was charged with electricity.

"B-12," he called. Mom scanned the length and breadth of her cards in two seconds flat.

"I-22," he called. I was still looking for B-12. Mom glanced at my cards.

"You don't have an I-22, but you missed B-12, third card, upper left hand corner, fourth number down."

"Hot dang, Mom," I said with awe. "You're good."

This was no friendly little game. It was a stress event. When it was finally over, I felt like a dish rag. In the car on the way home, I asked if she was going to tell Dad how much she had won. She gave me the same look I give my kids when they ask if they can jump in the shower with me.

As far as your father is concerned, I won $15," she said. The rest she stashed in the lining of her wallet.

Mom doesn't lie to Dad, she just fudges a little on financial matters. She tells him the cost of an item, right down to the penny, minus exactly 13 percent. Dad hasn't known the true cost of consumer goods since D-Day.

When we pulled in front of her house, Dad was looking out the back window.

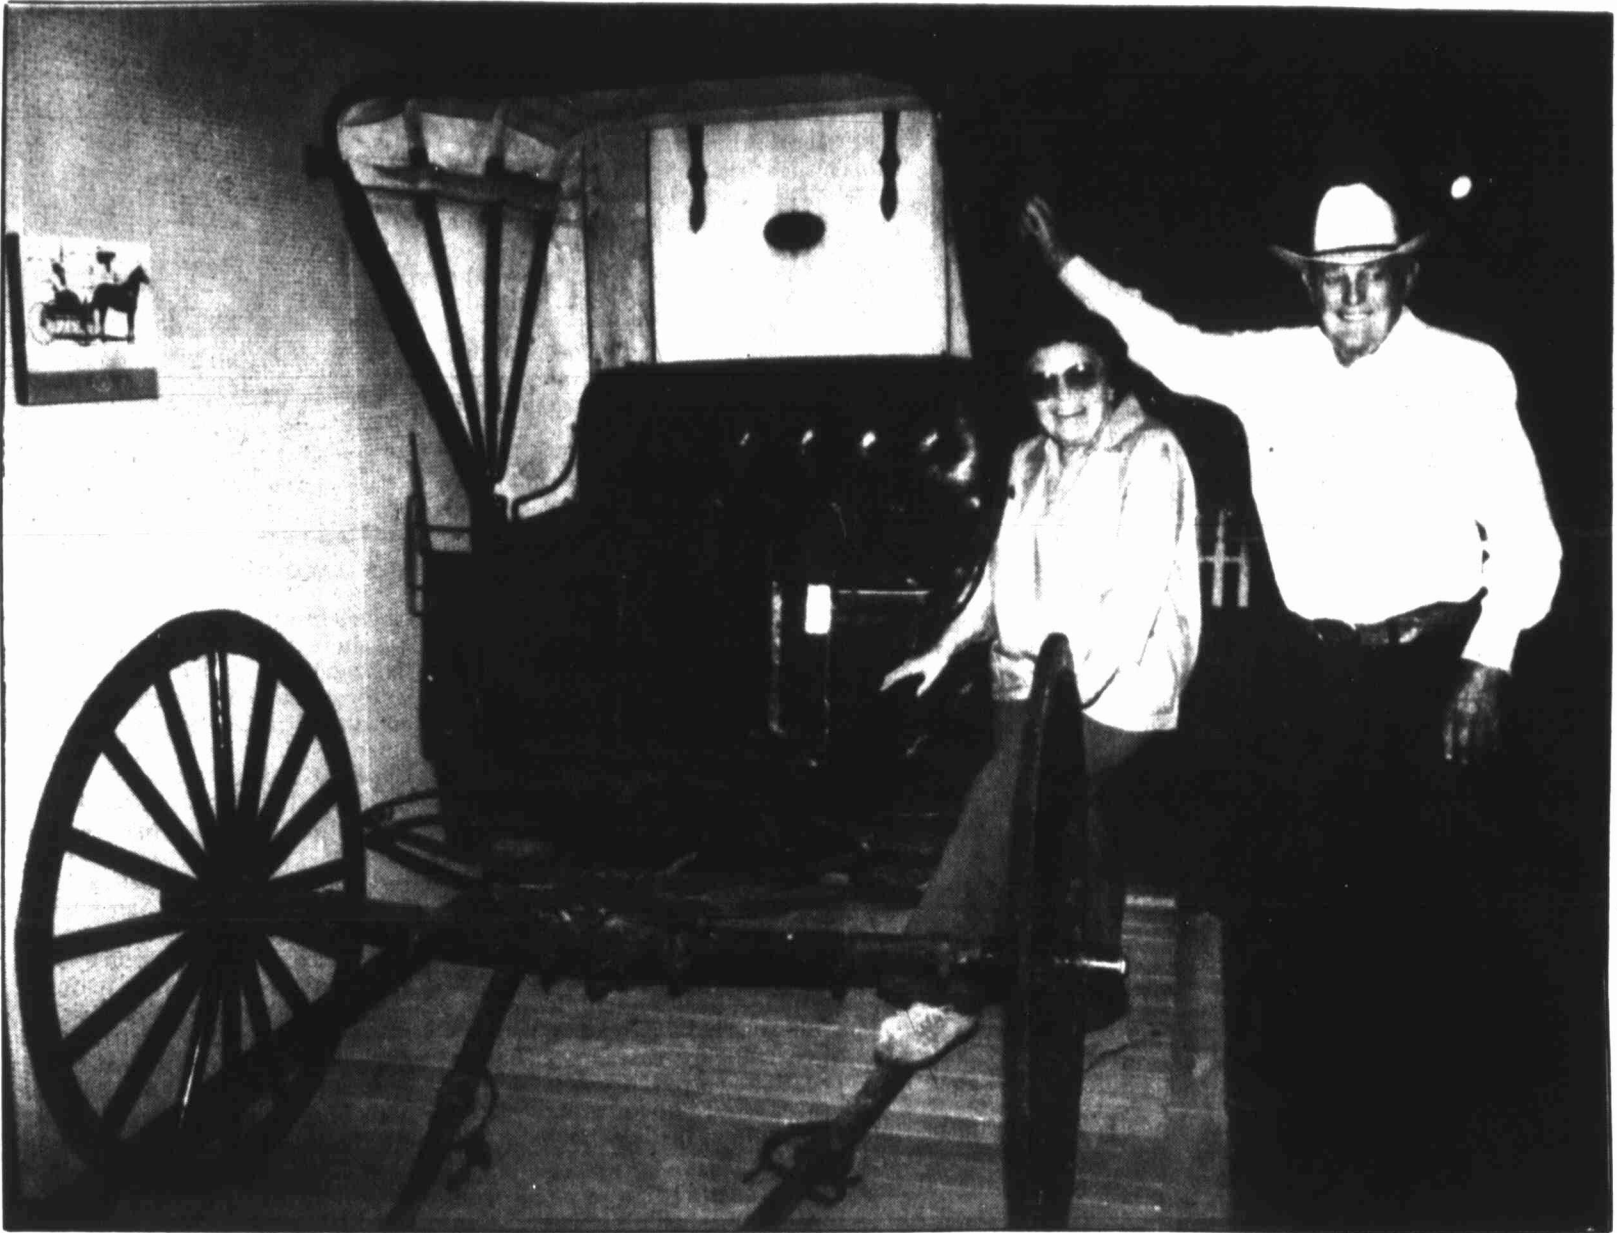

"Look at that time," Mom said. "That man must be frantic."

Even through the glass, I could see the creases from the sofa cushions indented on his cheek.

"This was fun," she said. "maybe you'll go to bingo again with me sometime."

"Sure thing, Mom," I told her. "I'll drive, you hold the gun to my head."

'Old settlers' ready to reminisce

By R.E. ARCHIBALD
Special to the Herald

The 67th annual Howard-Glasscock Old Settlers Reunion will begin at 9 a.m. Friday at the Howard County Fair Barn in Big Spring.

The special one-day celebration will honor the families of the area's first settlers and will feature games, a barbecue, awards, a fiddlers' contest, and a dance.

Perhaps the longest celebrated activity in Howard County, the Old Settlers Reunion is rich in history. Originally held at the J.L. McKinney Farm on June 28, 1924, the event has moved to other locations to accommodate the increasing attendance. Previous reunions have been at the former Cottonwood Park and the Old Settlers Pavilion built specifically for the reunion at Comanche Trail Park.

The celebration was created to recognize and honor the area's first permanent settlers. The committee uses the term "old settlers" to mean "anyone who has lived in Howard or Glasscock counties for more than 20 years is considered an old settler."

Festivities will get underway with a brief registration of all old settlers and their families in attendance. Dominoes and bingo will follow, with prizes being awarded to the bingo winners. Prizes, including door prizes, are donated by Big Spring merchants.

One of the highlights of the day will be a noon barbecue. The fee is $4 per person, with those over 65 receiving their meals as compliments of the Settlers Reunion Committee. Special tables will be furnished for those over 65, with their meals being served to them.

An awards ceremony will follow at 1 p.m. Awards will be given in various categories, including the most authentic dressed woman and man, participants married the longest, the old settler with the most children, the eldest man and woman, as well as the one who has traveled the farthest.

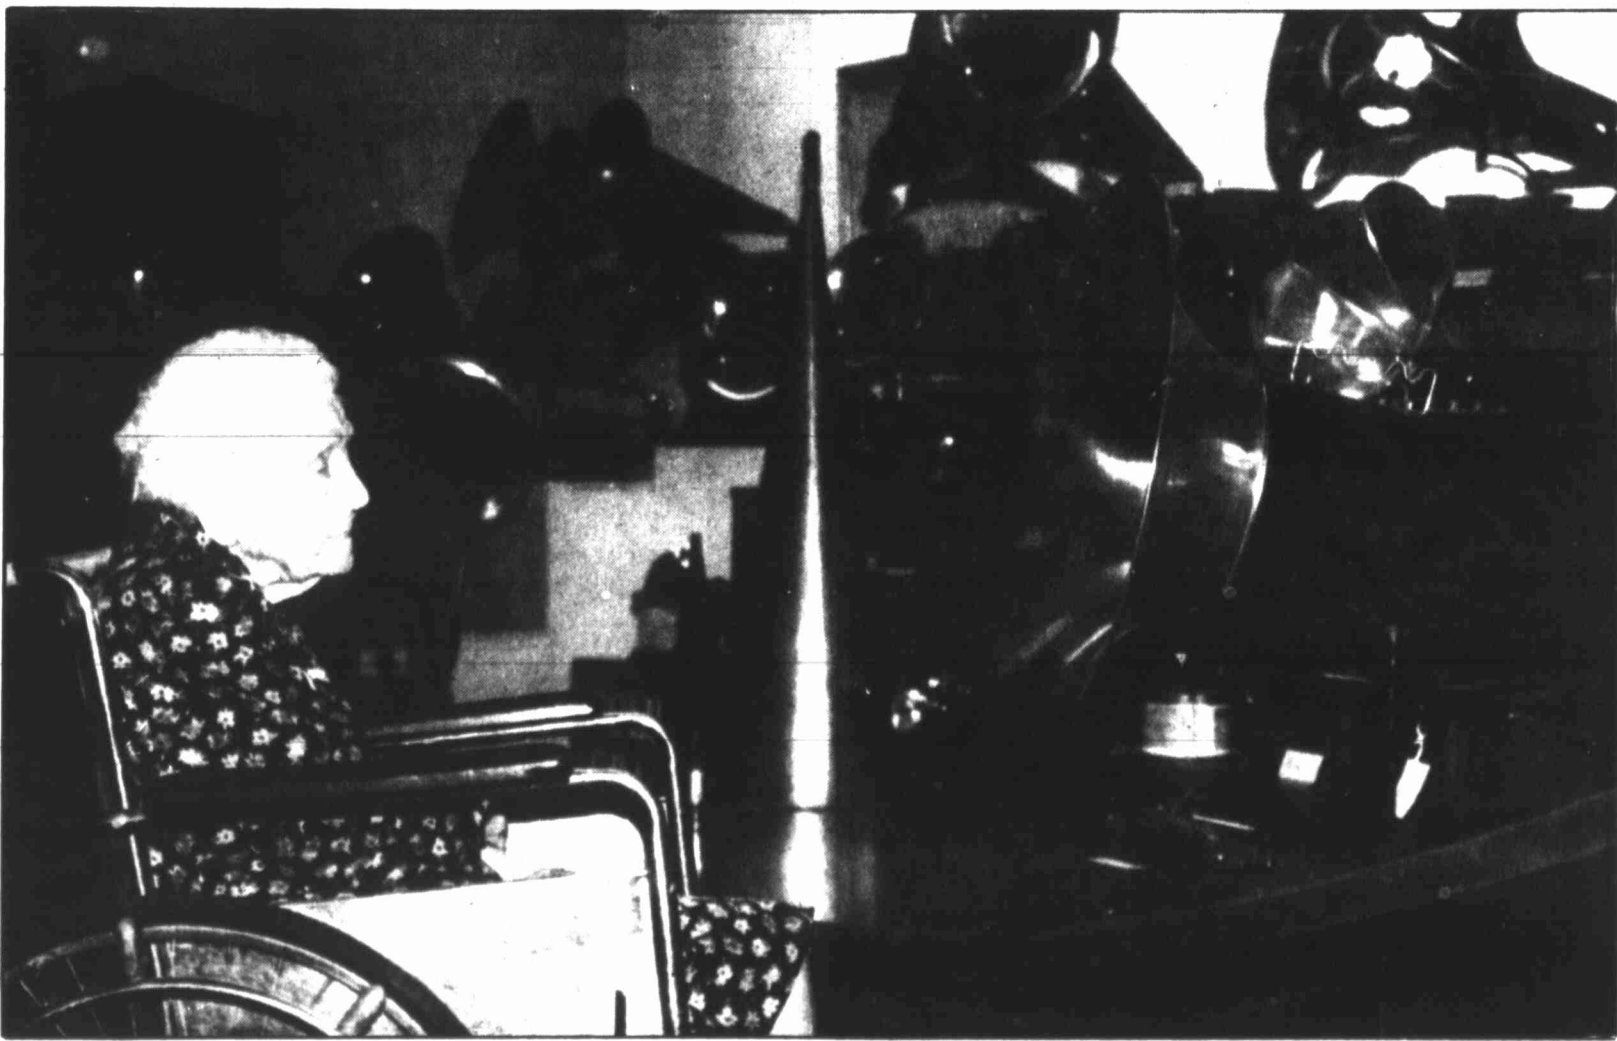

Another highlight will be the old fiddlers contest scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. In order to be eligible to compete for one of the five cash prizes, all participants must be over 45 years of age. A special award will be presented to the oldest fiddler.

Activities will slow down with a break at 3 p.m. The celebration will resume at 8 p.m. with a dance. Ben Nix and the Boys will provide the music until midnight. Prizes will be awarded to the three sweetest dance couples. There is no admission charge to the event, however donations are encouraged to help defray expenses.

Tickets for the reunion barbecue can be purchased at the door of the Howard County Fair Barns. Those wishing more information about the Howard-Glasscock Old Settlers Reunion and the activities planned for the one-day event are asked to call 263-4606 or 267-5551 in Big Spring.

For donations, please make check payable to the Old Settlers Reunion and mail or drop by 1205 Eleventh Place, Big Spring, Texas 79720.

Weddings

Anderson-Rogers

Dana Lyn Anderson, 1715 Yale, and Kyle Ray Rogers, Lubbock, exchanged wedding vows July 28, 1990 at a 7:30 p.m. ceremony at 14th & Main Church of Christ, with Royce Clay, minister, and Terry Cagle, campus minister at Angelo State University and cousin of the bride, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Jimmy and Pat Anderson, 1715 Yale. Bridegroom's parents are Larry and Jan Rogers, Friona.

The couple stood before an altar decorated with a large crescent candelabra in the center with smaller matching candelabras on each side, which were decorated with English ivy. The aisle was marked with hurricane lamps, pale pink ribbon and English ivy.

Music was provided by a choral group directed by Karen Lee. Vocalists included Joyce Bradley, James Kinman, David Elrod, Big Spring; and Eddie Pleasant, New York.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a traditional gown of white taffeta designed by Private Label by G. The bodice was adorned with Schiffler lace encrusted with pearls and white iridescent sequins. The full ballgown swept into a mid-cathedral train, which was finished with scalloped schiffler lace. The back of the gown was accented with a bustle of taffeta centered with a candybox bow.

She carried a cascading bouquet of rubrum lilies, pale pink roses, stephanotis and English ivy.

Maid of honor was Nikki Anderson, bride's sister, Big Spring.

Bridesmaids were Dana Anthony, Lubbock; Shelly Brasel, Big Spring; Sharla Kinman, Lubbock; and Hollie Roberts, Ft. Worth.

Flower girls were Amber, Ashley and Kaci Anderson, bride's nieces.

Best man was Koby Rogers, bridegroom's brother, Friona.

Groomsmen were Roger Karr, Ft. Worth; Steve Kordas, Amarillo; Doug Okruch, Grand Prairie; and Kevin Roberts, Ft.

MRS. DANA ROGERS

Worth.

Ushers were David Anderson, bride's brother, Granbury; John Paul Anderson, bride's brother, Big Spring; Dub Austin, Amarillo; and Len Wright, Amarillo.

After the wedding, a reception was hosted in the fellowship hall. The bride's table, draped with a white cloth with a lace overlay, featured a wedding cake decorated with hot pink and Caribbean blue flowers and topped with a crystal cup and heart. The bridegroom's table, draped with a pink cloth and Southwest blanket, featured a devil's food cake decorated with a double T. A brass coffee service completed the setting.

The bride is a graduate of Big Spring High School and Texas Tech University. She is employed by Friendship Independent School District.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Tascosa High School, Amarillo, and is a student at Texas Tech University. He is employed by S & Q Clothiers.

Halfmann-Droll

Blue Bell ice cream officials 'excited' about West Texas

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH

Blue Bell ice cream officials have never seen anything like it. "We have more than doubled what we expected to sell out here in one week," says branch manager John Lilley.

Blue Bell has just opened up a new territory with the completion of its newest distribution center in Big Spring, which sits within a 120-mile radius of 1 million people. Ice cream lovers in Lubbock, Abilene, San Angelo, Odessa and all the towns in between can now buy Blue Bell ice cream. Eventually, Hobbs and perhaps Lovington, N.M., will have Blue Bell delivered from Big Spring. The only parts of

Tumbleweed Smith

Texas not served by Blue Bell are El Paso and Amarillo.

The response to Blue Bell in West Texas has been overwhelming. "We would deliver ice cream to a store in the morning and they would be sold out within a few hours," says Lilley. "In some stores, they would pick it up faster than we could put it on the shelves. They took it off the delivery carts. Of all the places I've opened up, this is the best. Our employees had to work about a hundred hours that first week just keeping ice cream in the stores. We've had to put more trucks into service."

West Texans are anxious to try the real Blue Bell, those flavors with all the good stuff. White Chocolate Almond and Chocolate Decadence sales have gone through the roof.

Paul Kruse, general counsel for Blue Bell, says "I think clearly this is the biggest response we've ever had. It's much more than we expected. People in this part of the state enjoy living. They enjoy good things. So naturally they would like Blue Bell."

"There are a lot of smiles around Brenham," says Paul. "Ice cream is a fun food and a fun business to be in. We're tickled to be out here."

Blue Bell officials had hoped to beat the weekly sales record set when their distribution center opened in Baton Rouge, La. That figure was $149,000. The first week in West Texas Blue Bell recorded sales of more than $400,000.

In Baton Rouge, it took Blue Bell three months to become the best selling ice cream. It might not take that long in West Texas. Sales of Blue Bell in the metroplex are up from 61 percent of last year's market share to 68 percent this year.

Steve James, a vice president, has worked for Blue Bell 16 years and he's just flabbergasted. "At Abilene, people would see our trucks and start honking and waving. They would follow the trucks to stores. At one store, when a truck brought in a re-order at midnight, a whole bunch of people were waiting in front of the display case. They applauded when the driver rolled in the ice cream."

Steve did not believe so many people would buy the product so quickly. "The people of West Texas have proven that it's been worth our while to come out here. Personally, I wish we had got here sooner."

Big Spring grocer Don Newsom says, "In 50 years we've not had an item that had the impact of Blue Bell ice cream. We sold enough that first week to supply every man, woman and child in the universe with at least a spoonful."

Don ran out of some flavors and that caused some stressful situations. "Especially when one lady couldn't get her Chocolate Decadence," says Don, who sold a truckload and a half of Blue Bell the first week.

Fowler-Wigington

Shanna Fowler, Dallas, and Perry Wigington, Pueblo, Colo., exchanged wedding vows July 28, 1990 at a 5 p.m. ceremony at Midway Baptist Church, Big Spring, with the Rev. Rick Davis, pastor of First Baptist Church, Midlothian, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Kirby and Sharon Brown, Route 3 Box 189.

Bridegroom's parents are Robert and Burnell Wigington, Ackerly.

The bride stood before an altar decorated with five brass candelabras adorned with white bows. Arrangements of white flowers and greenery completed the setting.

Pianist was Joan Davis. Organist was Martha Belew.

Ronda Fowler sang "Here and Now," accompanied by Kirby Brown on the keyboard.

The bride, given in marriage by her stepfather, wore a white sleeveless taffeta gown embellished with French alencon lace, pearls and sequins on the front center. The gown also featured an elongated bodice and ruffled flounce at the shoulders. The bodice featured a "V" neckline and a "V" back with a butterfly bow at the back waist. The chapel-length train was edged in alencon lace and sequins. A waist-length veil of illusion was held by a garland of white beads and adorned with a beaded flower cluster.

Bridesmaids were Jancy Cunningham, Big Spring, and Brandi Kloss, San Angelo.

MRS. SHANNA WIGINGTON

Flower girl was Sterling Gee. Best man was Ronnie Long. Groomsmen were Tim Pike, Charlie Ragan and Kirby Brown. Ushers were Tim Cuar, Chuck Denning and Mitch McBeth.

Candlelighters were Michael Wigington, Heddy Wigington, Eric Wigington and Joshua Fowler. Ringbearer was Christopher Wigington.

After the wedding, a reception was hosted in the fellowship hall. The bride's table, draped with a white taffeta cloth and white lace overlay, featured three cakes that sat on black and white pedestals.

The cakes were decorated with black and white silk flowers and pearls. A white pina colada punch was served from a silver punch bowl. The bridegroom's table, draped with a white sating cloth with a black taffeta overlay, featured a chocolate cake iced in white and decorated with black flowers. A silver coffee service completed the setting.

Brodie-Hunter

Karen Michelle Brodie and Matthew Chapman Hunter, both of Lubbock, were united in marriage July 28, 1990 at a 3 p.m. ceremony at First Baptist Church, with the Rev. Kenneth Patrick officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don M. Brodie, Big Spring.

Bridegroom's parents are Carol Chapman Hunter, McKinney; and Dr. Wallace C. Hunter, Big Spring.

The couple stood before an altar decorated with two white Roman pillars that held arrangements of green ivy, white roses, spider mums and royal blue snapdragons.

Organist was Beth Spence. Vocalist was the Rev. Kenneth Patrick.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white crystal organza, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline. Double ruffles covered the shoulders. The bodice was overlaid with re-embroidered lace and accented with crystal sequins and seed pearls. Layers of crystal organza ruffles formed the skirt and chapel-length train.

She carried a bouquet of Japet orchids, white roses and ivy adorned with white lace that held her great-grandmother's cameo brooch.

Maid of honor was Amy Burgess, Lubbock.

Best man was Todd Badgett, Lubbock.

Groomsmen were David Chandler, Dallas. Usher was Sam Ross, Big Spring. Guest registrar was Vanessa Bateman, bride's cousin, Flagstaff, Ariz.

After the wedding, a reception was hosted in the church parlor. The bride's table featured a three-tier white wedding cake decorated with roses and topped with a crystal heart embellished with crystal doves and flowers. Her bouquet centered the table. The bridegroom's table featured a chocolate cake with an "H" monogram on top. A silver coffee service completed the setting.

The bride, a 1987 graduate of Big Spring High School and a 1989 graduate of Howard College, graduated Magna Cum Laude from the University of Texas at the Permian Basin with a bachelor of arts degree. She is employed as a social worker for the Salvation Army, Lubbock.

The bridegroom, a 1987 graduate of McKinney High School, McKinney, is a student at Texas Tech University and is active in the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white matte taffeta. The fitted bodice, overlaid with re-embroidered alencon lace, featured a high neckline and exaggerated puffed sleeves. A bowed butterfly effect accented the back of the dropped basque waistline. The A-line skirt fell from a low open back to a sweeping cathedral train detailed with a border of scalloped alencon lace. Pearls and iridescent sequins adorned the gown.

Maid of honor was Lynn Blackburn, bride's sister, Dallas. Matron of honor was Denise Habicht, Altamonte Springs.

Best man was Glenn Flint, bridegroom's father.

Groomsmen were Tommy Blackburn, bride's brother.

After the wedding, a reception was hosted at the church.

The bride is a graduate of Hockaday School for Girls, Dallas; and the University of Mississippi where she was a member of Chi Omega Sorority. She earned a master's degree in education from Reformed Theological Seminary, Jackson, Miss. She is employed by Orangewood Christian School, Maitland.

The bridegroom, a graduate of Purdue University, served five years in the U.S. Air Force. He is currently a master's degree student at Reformed Theological Seminary, Orlando, Fla.

After a wedding trip to Antigua, West Indies, the couple will make their home in Altamonte Springs.

BRING THE WORLD TO YOUR DOORSTEP

Opening your door to an International Student is a great way to grow in a shrinking world.

Maybe the greatest gift you could give your family would be to open your door this year to an international high school student. Imagine what you will learn, as well as what a young person can learn about America from you, your family and your community.

High school students all over the world dream of traveling to America to study and to experience our way of life. We seek volunteer host families who can share their homes and lives with a student for up to 10 months, providing room, board, transportation and friendship. Students will arrive in August, so call your IEF Community Coordinator immediately for more information.

Paul Kruse, son of Blue Bell CEO Ed Kruse, took a look at the crowd and expressed amazement.

"I expected maybe 50 or 60 would show up," he said. "In Brenham about 15 people turn out for a Chamber function."

Paul has been acquainted with West Texas ever since he worked in Eastland some time ago — "I guess Eastland is East Texas to you." He was the one at Blue Bell who kept reminding them they were building an operation in "Big Spring without an 's'." He showed further fluency by pronouncing "Colorado City" with a long "a".

Blue Bell's Steve James said the welcome his company had received in the area surpassed their expectations. People honked and waved at their drivers heading into Abilene, he said, and even followed the trunks into store unloading zones!

Chamber President Don Reynolds presented the visitors with a framed print of Coy McCann's mural "Once Upon a Time," framed by Quin Martin.

Enjoying the festivities were Tom Arcand, Merline Pierce, Celia Terry, Bob Lewis, Jerry Worthy, Aileen Zant, Doris Huibregtse, Ruby Taroni, Ralph

McLaughlin, Larry Webb, Joe Reed, Carl Johansen, Joyce Phillips, Pam Welch, Richard and Judy Atkins, Clyde McMahon, Sr. (who was presented the United Way Volunteer Award at the luncheon.)

Also Harold and Janell Davis, Mamie Lee Dodds, Carl Bradley, Roberta Shive, J.D. Nelson, Terry and Jan Hansen, Clyde Angel, Corky Harris, Iris Correa, Betty Condray, Hooper Sanders, James Welch, Bill and Joyce Crocker, Marie Hall, Scott McLaughlin and many more.

The crowd moved en masse, it seemed, to Blue Bell's office on I-20 for a tour and a sample of the product.

Writer-historian Joe Pickle has a question for some of you old-timers.

Do you remember when there were communities called Vinson, Light, Earl and Wakefield? Do you know where they were and what happened to them? They were all listed as post offices in Howard County in the 1890s.

If you have any information, contact Joe at 263-2542.

Floyd and Gail Earls have just returned from an unusual reunion — the first one for a church group they had belonged to in Ardmore, Okla., 35 years ago!

Now this wasn't just any church group, Gail explains, but a training union class of young girls who had recruited guys from Ardmore Air Base to come to church and a social supper every Sunday night.

Out of that group of 50 young people, 21 couples — including Floyd and Gail — got married, are still married and showed up at the reunion!

Even though they had not been in contact all these years, Gail said everyone enjoyed the reunion immensely.

Before returning home, Floyd and Gail stopped in Oklahoma City to visit her mother, Idamae Luckens, who has just earned her GED at age 71.

Two Big Spring couples celebrated their 20th wedding anniversaries recently by taking a week-long cruise of the Caribbean.

Dr. John and Cynthia Marshall and Dr. David and Judy Rickey sailed to Jamaica, Grand Cayman Islands, Cozumel and Can Cun.

There was plenty of time for snorkeling and scuba diving, according to Cynthia, and she found the Mayan ruins in the Yucatan "awesome." At one port of call, the two couples took in the unusual sport of feeding and petting sting rays! The boat takes you out to a spot where the creatures gather, and then you just slip into the waters alongside them.

Shortly after returning home, the Marshalls, with Zachary, left for Boise, Idaho, to visit John's brother, Stuart Marshall. John's father, Dr. John and Edy Marshall, drove up from Salt Lake City to join them.

Meanwhile, the Marshalls' daughter, Kristen, has been in Finland visiting Pia Alkula, an exchange student who had spent the school year in Big Spring at the Marshall home. The Alkula family took Kristen to Leningrad, Russia, for a two-day tour. Kristen is due home Tuesday.

Sherrie Bordofsky's vacation she'd "saved up all year for" was a trip to Nashville and Opryland.

Sherrie drove to Sweetwater to pick up her mother, Clara Brown, and a sister, LoVelle Stuart in Sylvester; then they picked up another sister, Lela Porter, Danville, Calif., at the airport in Dallas.

At the Grand Ole Opry, they saw Ricky Van Shelton, Minnie Pearl, Roy Acuff, the Osmond Brothers, the Four Guys and more, plus a Brenda Lee show and a Louise Mandrell concert, and were in the audience for TV's "Nashville Live."

Daughter stumbles into generation gap

DEAR ABBY: I am very tired of hearing parents complain that their adult children are "living with someone." I am currently living with my fiancé, and I am having the same problem with my parents.

I was a model child. I never missed a curfew or sneaked out of the house. I was an honor student in high school as well as being involved with varsity athletics, choir and my church. In college, I excelled as well. I have never touched drugs — not even as an experiment — and my parents have never been called to the police station to pick me up for any reason.

I have a great job and so does my fiancé, and we are both well over 21. Do my parents ever tell me how proud they are of me for my accomplishments? No! Every time we speak, they remind me of how much they disapprove of our living together. My fiancé and I are going to be married soon, and didn't start living together until we became engaged. (By the way, there is no baby on the way.)

Abby, I think all parents of

children like me should thank God that their children are alive, healthy, drug-free and succeeding in their careers. I almost wish I had done some major drugs in the past so that when I told them that I was living with someone, they would have said, "Is that all — we're happy you aren't doing drugs anymore!"

I think today's parents focus too much on premarital sex. We could be doing worse things — namely drugs. Sign this — SOMEBODY'S DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Congratulations for having been a model child as well as a decent, drug-free adult.

The problem here is the generation gap. Your parents are uncon-fortable with the knowledge that you are enjoying all the pleasures of marriage without the benefit of clergy. The fact that you will be married "soon" doesn't make it any more palatable. They imagine that "everyone" (their friends and relatives) knows that you are "living in sin" — and they can't handle it.

If you are as adult as you claim to be, you will tune out your parents' disapproval, continue to be their loving daughter, and judge them not for their condemning attitude.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl. About two years ago, my mother sent for your booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." At the time I thought: "What do I need this dumb booklet for? I know everything I need to know!"

A couple of months ago, while cleaning out my drawers, I came across the booklet and read it intently for the next hour. A lot of things you mentioned, I still didn't know anything about until I read it. You were so straightforward and direct, you really got through to me.

Since last year was my first year of high school, I didn't know much about drugs, and never even thought of having sex. Last month, my boyfriend (now my "ex" boyfriend) asked me to have sex with him. I flat-out turned him down. Then another boy asked me to get "high" with him one day after school. Thank God I had the strength to say no. Your booklet showed me the real dangers of sex and drugs, and how to say no to both.

The last two pages, "A Letter to Parents," telling parents what their teen-agers want from them, was really, really great. Even my mother liked it. Thanks, Abby. — YOUR FRIEND FOR LIFE IN MOLINE, ILL.

DEAR FRIEND: Thanks for a great letter. It made my day, my month, my year.

Readers can write to Abby at P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Pointers for developing good eating habits

By NAOMI HUNT
County Extension Agent

While it is well recognized that lack of exercise and too much television viewing are major factors contributing to the poor fitness and increased obesity of America's children and youth. The role which parents play is also important.

Parents are the ones to help their children avoid developing negative food behaviors, which can lead to obesity and chronic disease later in life. The large American family sitting down to a well-balanced, home-cooked meal has become a myth. Today's American family is frequently a single-parent family or a family in which both parents work.

Everybody is involved in multiple extra-curricular activities. Reality is a family that engages in habitual snacking, family members preparing individual meals and eating out. Still, a structured meal time, place and behavior is one of the most important behavioral patterns for establishing good eating patterns.

Meals and snacks should be scheduled in a pleasant atmosphere. A child who misbehaves should not be allowed to disrupt the family but should be expected to leave the table and not allowed any food until the next snack time. To encourage children to eat, provide a variety of foods at each meal, making sure that there is at least one food that the child likes. Serve the dessert with the meal.

Constantly expose children to new foods, expecting them to take only a bite. Remember that a food is new to a child for a long time. Five to six exposures are required before a food is no longer new to a child.

If your child does not want to eat what is served, again, he or she must wait until the next scheduled meal or snack time. Do not become a short-order cook. Parents must realize that they are only the food providers and only responsible for what children eat.

Children themselves are responsible for whether they eat and how much they eat. Encourage your children to know their own internal cues for fullness and encourage them to stop eating when they feel full. It is important to remember that each child has a personal genetic potential for fatness and that you as a parent can't change this nor should you try.

Don't restrict food or specific food items. Restriction only serves to make food more attractive and more important. Do not reward or console with food either, as this gives unwarranted emotional attributes to food that can cause eating pattern problems later in life.

More than a roof over your head

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — A sure way to draw attention to yourself is to forecast a collapse in the value of housing, so it is no mystery why such forecasts erupt from time to time from analysts and writers.

Regrettably, some of analysts, many of them on Wall Street, often attract attention and even build reputations on publicity, and few things are better at garnering that publicity than the aforementioned forecast.

The national home ownership rate is about 64 percent, which means the great majority of the population has some sort of home equity to worry about. It is their biggest single investment. It is their bank, their hope, their future.

Toss a bomb at it and you'll get attention.

You can, as some have done, declare that the sale of foreclosed housing properties owned by the Resolution Trust Company will undermine the market, even though such properties amount to just a tiny fraction of the whole.

Or you can warn that changing demographics — a slowdown in household formations, of younger, first-time buyers — will destroy the base that supports prices in the higher tiers.

That argument has been used. If there are no bids for the least expensive existing homes, the type purchased by first-time buyers, then how can the people who reside in them move up to more expensive properties?

While the argument has been unfilled for a decade, it persists.

These are some of the other housing-collapse contentions: Recession will bring down prices. Tight money will bring down prices. Poor affordability will bring down prices. A lowering of tax benefits will bring down prices.

The forecasts persist, but prices hold, in spite of occasional horror stories. There has been much clamor about a price collapse, but the clamor just doesn't reverberate in the national housing statistics.

In contrast, there are some sound reasons why housing prices could go higher rather than lower:

- Gains in income and wealth.
- Trading up by baby boomers with rising incomes, and trading down by oldtimers.
- Higher land costs. Finished lots today account for 27 percent of the price of a house, compared with 21 percent in 1969 and 11 percent in 1949. Many factors, including greater environmental demands, suggest a continuation.

- Higher construction costs.
- Shortages. It might sound far-fetched to talk about a lack of homes to buy, but shortages are a recurring event in housing markets. Oversupply leads to crackdowns on lending and building, and that leads to undersupply.

- Investment. Homeowners have lost money during deep recessions in Houston and Detroit. But generally speaking, housing values rise in time. Moreover, that rise is enhanced by leverage; many people bought homes for just 10 percent down.

- A house is a basic need, like food and clothing. There is always a need and therefore always some level of demand. In that respect it is unlike some corporate shares, whose value can disappear with the company.

Finally, a house is a roof over your head. Try protecting yourself from the rain with a stock, bond, mutual fund or certificate of deposit.

First week exceeds Blue Bell's expectations

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Blue Bell Creameries officials had expected a good first week from their Big Spring distribution center, but the demand for their ice cream so far has far exceeded their expectations.

The Big Spring center held an open house for the public Wednesday, and creamery officials took the opportunity to thank area residents for the overwhelming response.

"It's probably one of the best receptions we've ever had when we opened a distribution center," center manager John Lilly said. "It's definitely exceeded our expectations."

"We expected the reception to be good, but it's almost doubled what we expected," Lilly added. "Everyone was just so nice. We've had very few negative responses. If I had to do it all over, I'd get a month rest, then I'd be ready to do it again."

His reference to a month's rest was in response to the frenetic pace during the center's first two weeks. Lilly didn't release exact figures, but business at the center has "almost doubled" Blue Bell projections, he noted.

In fact, area response has even senior Blue Bell officials a bit puzzled.

"We don't quite understand why people have been so receptive to our product, but we definitely appreciate it," Steve James, a vice president of the company said.

An example of area reception to Blue Bell, which had even James shaking his head, occurred in Lubbock. As James related the story, a Lubbock grocery store ran out of the ice cream on the first day, and called the distribution center asking for more — that night.

By the time a Blue Bell truck reloaded and made it back to Lubbock, it was nearing midnight. But, James said, the salesman was met by a crowd of customers who applauded his arrival — then took most of the ice cream off his pallet before he could stock the store's freezers.

"I don't know about the rest of you," James said after relating the story, "but I've got better things to do than hang around the grocery store at midnight waiting for the ice cream man."

Whether the tale is exaggerated is debatable. What is not is that officials are already planning moderate expansion to meet the unprecedented demand. Lilly said the center is currently using its 11 route trucks full-time, as well as three vehicles that were to be used as spares. More trucks are on order, he added.

Dan and Lynda Profitt are the new owners of Aded Touch Florist at 602 South Main Street. The shop, which offers fresh and silk flowers, baskets and ceramics, potpourri and live plants, is open from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on Saturdays.

GENEVA — OPEC oil ministers said they agreed to raise the cartel's ceiling price for crude oil, and OPEC President Sadek Bousenna criticized members who drove down the price by exceeding production quotas.

His comments Thursday were apparently directed in part at Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates, who are blamed for keeping oil prices low by cheating on their quotas.

OPEC's decision to raise the ceiling price came after it received assurances that overproduction by Kuwait and the U.A.E. would end and that overall world production of oil would decrease.

DETROIT — Economic problems in Brazil and higher incentive costs pushed General Motors Corp.'s second-quarter profits down 40 percent and Ford Motor Co.'s earnings down 45 percent from last year's levels.

GM, the nation's largest automaker, said Thursday that it earned $900 million, or $1.32 a share, in the second quarter, compared with $1.5 billion, or $2.23 a share, in the same period last year.

WASHINGTON — A House committee voted to grant junk bond financier Michael Milken and convicted stock speculator Ivan Boesky immunity from additional prosecution in order to get them to testify before Congress.

The decision Thursday by the full Energy and Commerce Committee virtually guarantees the two most famous figures in the Wall Street scandals of the 1980s that nothing they tell Congress could be used against them in court.

No date was set for their appearance before the panel's investigations subcommittee, but the committee agreed to delay Milken's testimony until after he is sentenced for securities fraud.

Chip guru: Snacking an adventure

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

PLANO (AP) — A potato chip may seem a simple thing, something to munch on mindlessly while watching the time.

But for Dwight Risky, the chip and its "snackability" are the culmination of millions of dollars and billions of hours aimed at making your "snacking opportunity" a moment of "fun entertainment."

"What people are looking for when they snack is an adventure... a taste adventure," said Risky, a vice president of Frito-Lay Inc. "They're looking for a fun experience."

"This is not the same as sitting down and having roast beef and mashed potatoes. This is a fun adventure. It's entertainment as well as food," said Risky, who is in charge of the snack food company's new product development and marketing.

"I wouldn't say it's the most important thing in their life, but it is kind of personally important to them," he said.

Personal pretzels? Chummy chips?

"It sounds silly: we're making potato chips, but you can make 'em great or you can make 'em average," he said. "What we're trying to do is make 'em great."

Yes, snack food may be trivial balanced against world hunger, but there's nothing corny about the chip industry: Americans salt away $35 billion worth of the stuff a year, about 13½ pounds per person.

Frito-Lay, a subsidiary of PepsiCo Inc. based in the Dallas suburb of Plano, is the market leader, with 1989 sales of $4.5 billion, grabbing four of the top five snack chips sold in supermarkets.

Doritos brand tortilla chips alone brought in $1.2 billion last year. "That amounts to about 10,000 pounds of Doritos manufactured every hour, 24 hours a day, 365 days year," Risky said.

Ruffles brand potato chips added $1 billion, with Lay's chipping in $700 million. Other brands include Fritos, Tostitos, Chee-tos and Rold Gold. Although last in sales among PepsiCo's three divisions, Frito-Lay ranked first in the parent's profits, with $821 million of $1.93 billion.

"They're pretty dominant in the snack industry," said Jerry Hess, editor of Snack Food magazine published in Duluth, Minn.

"I think the industry in general perceives them as being a well run, profitable company," although not adverse to taking advantage of its size if necessary, he said.

VA honors employees

As the heat wave continued in Big Spring on Friday, June 29, the Big Spring VA employees gathered on the front lawn of the medical facility to enjoy a hot dog cookout at noon and receive performance and honor awards, according to Conrad Alexander, Medical Center Director.

One hundred and thirty-one employees were honored at the annual awards ceremony. The majority of the awards were given for exceptional individual job performance during the past year; however, there were three who received other recognition.

Don Arroyo, RN supervisor, received a Director's Commendation and monetary award for his ongoing support and contributions in Equal Employment Opportunity programs.

Joyce Wood, RN supervisor, was selected by the EEO Advisory Committee as "Supervisor of the Year." Richard Dodds, president, AFGE Local, presented to Hugh Clark, supervisor in Radiology Service, an honorary plaque in appreciation for his genuine concern for the employees in his service while discharging his supervisory duties and accomplishing the mission of the medical center.

CANTEEN SERVICE — Gloria R. Rodriguez, Alice L. Sayers, and Sharon Gutierrez.

OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR — Richard D. Burns of the Midland Veterans Outreach Center, David Baird, Lou Wright, Carol Roen, and William G. Watkins.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF STAFF — Mary L. Jones.

DENTAL SERVICE — Maurietta Callahan.

ENGINEERING SERVICE — John Fulesday, John Pantoja, Virgil Churchill, Travis Oliver, Harold H. Raney, and Stephen Jones. A group cash award was given to Charles Sims, Lyndon Priest, Travis Oliver, George McCleskey, Everette Horn.

Pilot upgrade course offered

Local pilots will be upgrading their knowledge the first two weekends in August in a newly available program to improve flying safety.

Flight instructors Ben Hutson and Ned Crandall are sponsoring two accelerated 2-day courses at the Big Spring YMCA designed to enable pilots to pass Federal Aviation Administration written exams.

Hutson, a designated Written Test Examiner for the FAA, states that these courses, "significantly enhance aviation safety through learning."

Courses will be conducted for the private pilot and instrument rating written exams. The private pilot course will be conducted Aug. 4-5 and the instrument course on Aug. 11-12. The written exam will be administered immediately following the completion of each training course. Class size will be limited.

The training programs being used were developed by King Accelerated Schools. The firm, based in San Diego, Calif., provides aviation programs throughout the United States.

Porter attends

TV convention

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Pat Porter of Satellite Earth Stations in Big Spring got a chance to meet country music star Becky Hobbs while attending the National Satellite Television Convention here recently.

Porter was at the trade show — the industry's largest — to learn all about the latest developments in the field. Making news at the show were new programming options, sophisticated hardware and a new TV technology that will expand satellite viewing choices.

To find out more about the 256 channels available on satellite TV, contact Porter at Satellite Earth Stations. To receive a free sample of "Satellite TV Week" as well as a free copy of "A Simplified Guide to Satellite TV," call 1-800-345-8876.

FCC issue permit for Westex tower

The Federal Communications Commission has issued a construction permit to Westex Cellular of Stanton for construction of a 480-foot tower that will support operation of Westex's newly planned cellular service.

The tower will be located on South Mountain in Big Spring and provide cellular coverage for Howard, Martin, Borden, Sterling, Glasscock and Dawson counties.

"Once the tower is up and installation of equipment is complete, cellular service will be available," Westex General Manager Charles Butler said. "We expect this to be sometime in October of this year, if all goes according to plan."

Advertising and service announcements are scheduled to be released prior to completion, Butler said.

Westex is owned and operated by Wes-Tex Telecommunications of Stanton. The company will provide cellular service as well as phones and equipment for the cellular customer.

Chips

on the taste frontier, Risky said. "What we're always looking for is the new taste experience," he said.

New doesn't always mean good, however.

"People will say, 'That's a very unusual taste,'" Risky said, which really means, "I hate it."

New doesn't always mean better, either.

"Or they will say, 'That's a great taste, but it's just like Ruffles.'"

"We look for uniqueness, we look for acceptability," he said. "If you can get a combination of those two characteristics, you've probably got a winner."

Risky believes the company has two winners right now, one a lower-oil version of three of its regular brands and another a multi-grain chip currently being tested in Minneapolis.

In March, Frito-Lay introduced nationally a "light" line of Doritos, Ruffles and Chee-tos, containing one-third less oil than the regular snack.

"We knew we had been getting a lot of input from the consumer that there was interest in products that are, quote, better for you, that have nutritional benefits beyond what our current line of products had at the time," he said.

Trouble is, Risky said, consumers aren't willing to swap "taste indulgence" for health.

But Risky said Frito-Lay researchers made a technical breakthrough about two years ago, allowing the company to produce snacks with a lower fat content but almost exactly the same taste.

Tortilla chips, for example, are now made from a different variety of corn and baked.

"It sounds like a minor thing, we're talking potato chips, we're talking about tortilla chips," he admitted. "But it really was a major technological breakthrough to be able to make products that have a third less oil and be equally acceptable, almost indistinguishable from the base brand regular products."

"Others have done that, but when Frito-Lay does it that tends to have some authority," said editor Hess. "The timing is right and they certainly have the clout to carry it off."

Since hitting the market in early March, the products have done well, but Risky said they still suffer from a stigma of other health-conscious foods.

"Although we have a very loyal user base at this point, we haven't gotten to as many users as we want and that's really the marketing challenge for the next six months," he said.

Next on Risky's agenda is broader marketing of "Sun Chips," a snack made from corn, wheat, rice and oats.

tions in a way that seriously damaged a fraud investigation of the company, according to Justice Department testimony prepared for Congress.

In testimony to be delivered Friday before a House subcommittee, the deputy assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division detailed the department's inquiry of Northrop that led to the company's guilty plea in February to 34 fraud charges and agreement to pay $17 million in fines.

STOUGHTON, Mass. — Reebok's board of directors let the air out of chairman Paul Fireman's huge pay package, cutting it by more than $11 million under a new five-year deal that begins Jan. 1.

Fireman, a key to the company's growth into a footwear giant that sells "The Pump" athletic shoe for $170, would receive no more than $2 million in annual salary and bonuses under the new agreement, the company said Thursday.

MOSCOW — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev said his country needs Western aid to rebuild its consumer industries in the next two critical years of reform.

Gorbachev spoke to reporters Thursday following a meeting with Italian Premier Giulio Andreotti.

Houston couple finds niche in custom color

HOUSTON (AP) — William Dalton knows his place.

"We're not competing with the big furniture companies with all the fancy equipment. In fact, our way of making furniture is pretty archaic — we make it by hand," Dalton says as he points to an employee cutting out the curved side of a cabinet with a band saw. "You have to find your own niche if you're a little company like we are. So our niche is doing custom colors — whatever the customer wants."

That explains the manufacturing firm's name, Accents by Color, Inc. Dalton is president of the young Houston firm, and his wife, Carolyn, is vice president and designer.

"Carolyn has natural artistic talent and a good sense of color," Dalton says. "She does a line drawing of each piece and colors it so the customer can approve it before we ever start."

Custom color, to the Daltons, can mean anything from a traditional fine wood finish or an antiquated whitewash look to a wild combination of vivid colors. In their showroom at the International Home Furnishings Market in High Point, N.C., this spring, they attracted attention with their multicolored juvenile furniture. They also gathered praise for a sophisticated, not-quite-white and beige and crackle finish on a large armoire.

All the furniture is made of Ponderosa white pine from Oregon, and most is country French in styling. However, their oversize rolled-arm slatted sofas and chairs have more of a California casual feeling, especially when given that sun-bleached, whitewashed finish. The West Coast classification sounds fine to the Daltons, native Californians who relocated to Houston early this year.

The Daltons owned a retail

Temecula, Calif., about 40 miles north of San Diego. About three years ago they joined forces with a Houston man to import furniture from Mexico. Because Houston is centrally located and better suited than California for shipping goods to other areas, Dalton began spending more and more time in Texas.

When he decided he wanted to make the furniture from start to finish, Dalton and his late father, who was an engineer, took the port pieces apart to figure out exactly how they were put together. In August 1988, they started manufacturing in Houston.

Now they employ about 25 people in the 20,000-square-foot factory at 6747 Signet in Northwest Houston. Business is brisk. Dalton says that having pieces in two quality mail-order catalogs, Williams-Sonoma and Ballard Designs, has been a strong plus.

This was the Daltons' second year to show at the North Carolina furniture market, the largest in the world. Who should discover them there but another Texas Company, Pier 1? Dalton says they are still talking, and he has his fingers crossed.

Most of the orders for furniture from Accents by Color come from interior designers who want pieces in specific colors. Not only do the Daltons make their own furniture and hardware, they also make their own paints.

"We can make up to a thousand different colors and any combinations," Dalton says. "And we can do our new crackle finish in any color."

Counting all the different sizes, there are about 150 pieces in the firm's lineup, but the Daltons also build custom pieces. They do wood pieces only — no upholstery. Cushions for chairs have to be made by someone else.

Furniture is usually shipped about six weeks after an order is placed. The firm ships all over the United States, and it has filled orders in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Japan.

The Daltons' crew has a definite international flavor. The couple's adopted son, Miguel Martinez, a native of Mexico, oversees the manufacturing area. Ban Hua, who came here from Vietnam with his wife and children in 1974, makes all prototypes for new pieces. "Ban was a woodworking engineer in Vietnam, and he can put anything structural together," Dalton says.

Salvador work in different areas of the shop, and two women from Cambodia paint furniture under the supervision of artist John Lach, who came here six years ago from Cambodia. When a piece of furniture calls for a special painted floral design or carving, Lach does it.

Overseeing the entire operation as plant supervisor is Bill Fox, a native of Tucson, Ariz., who has lived in Texas several years.

FLOOD PLAINS AND WETLANDS NOTICE
EARLY PUBLIC NOTICE
The City of Coahoma is considering a waterworks improvements project which will involve construction of new water distribution lines in an area of the City of Coahoma officially designated as a 100-year flood plain. These improvements will be constructed with funds provided under the Texas Community Development Program.
The City is interested in discussing alternatives to this project, securing public perceptions of possible adverse impacts which could result from the project and discussing possible measures to minimize any adverse impacts. A public hearing has been scheduled to discuss the proposed project. The hearing will be held at 7:00 o'clock p.m. on August 1, 1990, at Coahoma Community Center, Coahoma, Texas.
Interested persons are invited to comment on the proposed project at this public hearing. Handwritten personal meeting assistance in attending this hearing should contact the Coahoma City Hall at (915) 394-4287. Written comments will also be accepted. Comments should be addressed to Eleanor Garrett, Mayor, City of Coahoma, 122 North 1st Street, Coahoma, Texas 79511. Comments will be accepted by the City until August 14, 1990.
A written description of the proposed project along with a map showing the project location are available for inspection in the Coahoma City Hall during normal business hours, Monday through Friday.

Selling the shoes by selling the star

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

When Rick Pitino became Kentucky's basketball coach, the news within the news was his endorsement contract with Converse, the sneaker-maker.

"When word got out, it was just nutso," recalls Roger Morningside, a Converse marketing executive. "The sales guys' phones lit up with calls from retailers asking what shoes the team was going to wear."

Back when men were boys, their basketball sneakers were simple things of canvas and rubber. Except for minor variations in color and configuration, everyone had nearly the same shoe — a low-key accessory that cost a fraction of a day's salary.

But as the boys grew and matured, so did their sneakers and the industry that made them. Today, sneakers are a megabusiness of computer-engineered, high-tech fabrics, plastics, gel — even air. You can, if you feel the need, spend well over $100 a pair.

In 1985, Americans paid $1.4 billion for athletic footwear. This year, an estimated $5.5 billion will be spent. Long-range predictions put sales over $20 billion by the end of the century.

The once lowly sneaker is more than a business success story. It has become a matter of social debate. Sneakers are pilloried as an accessory to murder, touted as a vehicle for social change.

How did things come so far? Bob Carr traces it back to a New York City transit strike in the mid-1970s.

"Suddenly, all these secretaries and business types were walking to work in sneakers," said Carr, editor of Sporting Goods Business magazine. "What it showed was sneakers were becoming a lifestyle, not just something to wear for sports."

Once the sneaker made it off the court and onto the street, the stakes got much bigger.

Nike, Converse, Reebok and the other sneaker-makers now spend tens of millions of dollars on national advertising campaigns. "Bo Knows" and "Just Do It" are part of the public lexicon.

"Some people have a hard time conceiving of a shoe company being like General Motors or IBM," said Sonny Vaccaro, Nike's promotions man. "They keep referring back to the '50s and '60s and talk about the good old days of $6 tennis shoes."

Recently, talk has focused on youngsters killing and being killed over high-priced sneakers. Chicago Bulls star Michael Jordan and filmmaker Spike Lee, who directed Jordan's Nike commercials, have been criticized for exploiting the wants and desires of inner-city kids.

Others say such criticism is off the mark.

"To single out a theft of sneakers is to exaggerate the story about a generation of kids being lost to drugs and violence," said Richard Lapchick, director of the Center for the Study of Sport in Society at Boston's Northeastern University.

Lapchick cites numbers to counter the controversy: nine documented murders nationwide involving sneakers from 1983 to 1990, compared to 110,000 homicides during that time and 542,968 robberies in 1988 alone.

Thomas Doyle says the inner city isn't even the main market for sneakers.

"The inner-city community represents 8 percent of the U.S. population and 6 percent of basketball shoe purchases," said Doyle, the director of information and research for the National Sporting Goods Association.

"They may sell some Air Jordans in the inner city, but generally, the other markets are more significant," he said.

So why the commercials with the rap music soundtrack, the quick and flashy MTV visuals of black athletes? Isn't that aimed at the minority market?

"Using a black in a basketball ad isn't unusual," Carr said. "Where do you have a white athlete as good as Michael Jordan? Larry Bird? Does he have a great personality? Does he have charisma? Most people think he's very Indiana."

And charisma, say the sales guys, is what you need these days to get your shoe to stand out from the crowded closet of competitors.

Green's playing beat the clock with money

DALLAS (AP) — Cecil H. Green is a man fighting against time to give away all his money.

After giving $150 million in recent years to a variety of educational, medical and artistic causes, he admits he's almost exhausted the fortune he built as co-founder of Texas Instruments.

"I've given most of it away now," Green said in a rare interview from his high-rise Turtle Creek condominium, "but the idea is to get it down to the last nickel before I die."

Green, 89, considered one of the nation's leading philanthropists with his wife of 61 years, Ida, who died in 1986, gave away a king's ransom. A list of the academic and medical facilities built by their largesse would go on for pages.

Explaining the philosophy behind his philanthropy, Green says, "Our giving has always been what we wanted to do. We never did it just because we were asked."

The childless couple also gave out of a sense of adventure.

"We had no children, so what were we going to do with it?" asks Green. "Instead of our estate's trustees giving it away, we thought we'd give ourselves the pleasure of doing it. Giving is an investment in pleasure."

As for the plethora of college buildings and medical centers named after the Greens, he claims, "I never asked for it. None of our giving was done on the basis of 'you name this after us and we'll give you the money.'"

Green was born in 1900 in Manchester, England. His parents moved to eastern Canada when he was 2. They later moved to Vancouver via San Francisco, where his father, an electrical mechanic, operated a cable car.

Cecil and his mother were waiting to join his father in Vancouver when the Great Quake of 1906 hit.

"I remember being awakened by Green. 'We had to sleep in tents in Golden Gate Park and stand in soup lines. I remember it vividly.'"

The family finally settled in Vancouver, British Columbia, where Green remained until going to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology where he earned bachelor and master's degrees in electrical engineering.

While working on his master's thesis at the General Electric Research Center in Schenectady, N.Y., in 1923, he met his wife-to-be, Ida Flansburgh. They married in 1926.

A series of job possibilities took the Greens to California and back again to Boston. During several transcontinental trips looking for work, the Greens slept in tents and their car. Green's desire was to return to Vancouver but there were no jobs.

Green eventually went to work for Geophysical Services, Inc., an oil exploration business in Tulsa, Okla. In 1941, Green and three partners, J. Erik Jonsson, Eugene McDermott and H.B. Peacock — decided to buy the company when they heard the owners planned to sell to Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

"We borrowed money from Republic National Bank, took out a mortgage and scraped together everything we owned to pay our $75,000 share," recalls Green.

As things turned out, it was a stupendous investment. Under Green and his partners, Geophysical Services became a petroleum industry leader. But it was the subsidiary electronics firm they founded, Texas Instruments, that was to make history and its founders extremely rich.

Over the years, Texas Instruments created: the first silicon transistor (1954), the first integrated circuit (1958), the first single-chip microprocessor (1970), the first single-chip computer (1971) and the first single-chip speech synthesizer (1978).

"Our business went up remarkably," says Green. "But we discovered it was hard to find young, highly technically trained people in the Dallas-Fort Worth area. We realized our competitors — Boston, San Francisco Bay area, New Jersey and Los Angeles — all had higher education environments in the sciences. If we were really going to grow in a healthy way, we'd either have to move, or create a higher educational environment in Dallas."

Green and his Texas Instruments buddies Jonsson and McDermott founded the Graduate Research Center of the Southwest for the training of engineers. It eventually became the University of Texas at Dallas.

"We don't have to be ashamed or worried about our higher education now," says Green.

While Green's philanthropy stretches from Australia to British Columbia, a large part of his giving has been to Dallas institutions, including bequests to Children's Medical Center, Southern Methodist University and the Dallas Museum of Art.

Green's giving is especially noteworthy because of its diversity, according to Robert R. Shrock, who wrote a book about the Greens for the MIT Press.

"It's extraordinary in the variety of projects that he has funded in one way or another," he explains. "There are many other philanthropies that are larger in dollars, but not as diversified in coverage."

"For instance, he hasn't picked one level of education, but supported a broad spectrum from the kindergarten at St. Mark's School in Dallas to postdoctoral studies at the Green College at Oxford University in England."

Shrock adds that Green is not a passive donor, but gets actively involved with the institution he is benefiting.

"He gets very involved with his subjects, when he makes a gift, he doesn't end his involvement with a $1 million check," Shrock says. "He gets involved with the people and finds out what their needs are. It often results in him giving many more dollars."

Green's involvement in the sciences continues unabated, according to A.D. Suttle Jr., professor of nuclear biophysics at the University of Texas Marine Biomedical Center in Galveston and a colleague of Green's.

Green, who helped organize the center, visits frequently. He enjoys vigorous academic discussions and helps recruit outstanding scholars, according to Suttle.

"He still likes to scan his scientific journals and remains on the cutting edge. He has always been interested in science and transferring advances from one discipline to another."

Green, who divides his time between Dallas and a home in La Jolla, Calif., loves to travel. Since his wife's death, he has visited the Soviet Union, China, South Africa, Australia and England.

NII lacks votes for board candidates

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A partnership seeking control of National Intergroup Inc. has enough votes to fill three seats on a 10-member board of directors, keeping NII's own candidates out, according to the partners and the company's chairman.

"Our tally shows that we don't have enough votes to elect our directors," Chief Executive Officer Howard M. Love said at a news conference Wednesday after the holding company's annual shareholders' meeting in Pittsburgh.

About 200 NII stockholders and proxies attended the meeting to elect three new directors. Candidate slates were nominated by the company and the dissident group, Centaur Partners of New York, NII's largest stockholder with 16.5 percent of outstanding shares.

Centaur principals Melvyn J. Estrin and Abbey J. Butler said they believed stockholder support for them was overwhelming but would not say how many votes they thought they had. "It is not a slight victory, not a slight win," Butler said.

If Centaur's candidates are elected as expected, the shareholder group will have three seats on a board of 10. Estrin said he believed the seven directors already seated would respond to the arguments of the three new members.

"We do think that the shareholder vote is a mandate," Estrin added. They said board nominees would work to increase the value of NII stock.

The election results will be announced when the shareholders' meeting reconvenes Aug. 9.

Love's seat on the board was one of those at stake. He had said he would retire once the company's restructuring was complete but said Wednesday he would step down March 1, 1991.

"We want to make sure that we understand the concerns of those who voted against us," Love said after the meeting.

At issue is whether NII, formerly a debt-ridden steel corporation which diversified, then sold most of its assets to pay creditors, should be restructured as a wholesale drug distributor. NII wants to sell its Ben Franklin Stores and The Permian Corp., keeping Dallas-based FoxMeyer Drug Co., the nation's third-largest drug distributor.

Centaur says FoxMeyer should be sold and the proceeds given to shareholders. "We know of potentially interested people. We know that the company knows of interested people," who may bid on FoxMeyer, Estrin said.

Robert King, president of FoxMeyer, tried to persuade shareholders to back the restructuring. He said wholesale drug distribution is nearly a $25-billion-a-year industry and is growing by 15 percent a year.

Eugene Cohen, one of a few shareholders who addressed Love during the meeting, said stockholders have not shared in profits from the sale of NII assets or received dividends.

"What incentive is there to buy stock in Intergroup?" Cohen said.

Union asks NLRB help getting drivers on board

DALLAS (AP) — Union attorneys have asked for federal help in forcing Greyhound Lines Inc. to reinstate immediately its 6,300 striking bus drivers.

In a letter to the National Labor Relations Board, the Amalgamated Transit Union says pending court battles against Greyhound will take too long to resolve and even if the union wins, members could be left with no jobs and no money.

NLRB spokesman David Parker said Wednesday the agency had not received the letter and would not comment on the request. NLRB General Counsel Jerry Hunter already has obtained an injunction against the union barring it from further violent acts in the dispute.

"The striking employees' resources are now depleted, and their health care and homes are at risk," the letter from union attorney Martin J. Burns said.

The request is the latest move by the union, whose drivers went on strike March 2 in a dispute over wages and job security. Dallas-based Greyhound, which operates the only nationwide bus system, has continued running at reduced levels since the strike began.

The union cites the company's financial troubles in asking the NLRB to seek an injunction requiring the reinstatement.

Greyhound filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy court protection from creditors on June 4, citing increased expenses from fighting the initially violent strike.

In addition the NLRB's Hunter said Greyhound had committed an unfair labor practice by immediately instituting a new contract on March 2 when no impasse existed in negotiations.

Greyhound maintains an impasse did exist and is challenging the finding in hearings before an administrative law judge in Minneapolis. If the company loses, it could be forced to reinstate the 6,300 striking drivers and give them back pay from the time the strike began.

Hearings aren't scheduled to begin on the dispute until mid-September, however, and could drag on through the courts for years.

"Meanwhile, the employees who have exercised their ... rights will be confronted with financial ruin," Burns said.

The ATU says the potential back pay is accumulating at between $3 million and $4 million a week, and the burden of such a claim would insure Greyhound's financial failure and leave the drivers with no jobs and no money, even if they eventually win.

"Greyhound's refusal to reinstate the striking employees denies them and the union of statutorily protected rights now which can never be fully vindicated," Burns said.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Third Coast can deliver quality water

"Our delivery service is free — our customers pay only for the water," says Maury Smith, owner of Third Coast Water Company.

Third Coast offers regular home and business water delivery (in five-gallon plastic bottles) from its reverse osmosis plant in the Industrial Park. The firm's delivery trucks are equipped with two-way communications so that incoming orders can be handled as expeditiously as possible.

"Water delivery is our primary business," the Big Spring native said, adding that the staff is dedicated to providing quality water and dependable delivery.

"It's really exciting to be in this business; the demand for good water is increasing every day," Smith notes that during dry weather the mineral content becomes more concentrated in area water sources (Lake Spence and Lake J.B. Thomas) due to usage and surface evaporation. Taste is only one consideration, said Smith. The mineral content may be harmful to one's health.

"We do everything required for a first quality water product," Smith says. "We took a course from the Texas Department of Health and were certified; we are licensed by the state to operate a bottled water vending service. And we pull water samples regularly for continued quality testing by the health department."

The firm is especially proud of its delivery service to senior citizens (62 and over). "We deliver five gallons to their homes for $2.75."

Smith was formerly branch manager for Ozarka Water, handling their product in Howard County. "I saw a need to be filled, and I opened my own business with just a handful of customers. Now we operate our own plant with over 200 delivery customers."

Third Coast also owns and operates reverse osmosis systems at Don's Fiesta in Big Spring and Lamesa, Dominquez #1, WTG Stop (Greenwood), Seven-11 at 18th and Gregg, Vier's convenience store in Garden City, and a system at Canterbury — with others in the works. Water samples are regularly taken at these locations.

Bulk hauling is available for spa systems — "better for your skin and better for the system!"

In addition to Smith, the staff includes Teresa Thompson, bookkeeper; James Balios, plant manager; and Alan White, bottler.

For delivery, phone 263-0400; or if it's more convenient, you can pick up bottled water at Building 239, Industrial Park. The company's logo is Signal Peak — with palm trees and a lake in the foreground!
