Wreckage and Bodies Strewn Along Track When Cars Meet

BUS MAKES STOP

Driver Looks Both Ways But Fails to See Interurban Coming

BELLEVUE, Ohio, Jan. 22. (UP)—A lake shore electric interurban car, running on express schedule, came crashing out of a blizzard here this afternoon just as the "Jack Rabbit," a heavy Detroit to Pittsburgh motorbus was passing over a railway crossing.

There were 17 passengers on the bus. All were killed. Ed Butler of Cleveland, the driver of the bus, alone lived to tell the story. He was injured seriously.

A half score of the passengers on the interurban were hurt.

Wreckage was strewn for 200 yards along the right of way, and in the center of it was a tangled mass which was the motor coach, with the interurban perched crazily on top of it.

The bus was operated by the Greyhound line and was driven by Ed Butler of Cleveland.

Broadside Crash

"I stopped at the crossing. Got out to wipe off the windshield which was caked with snow and ice, looked both ways and saw nothing," Butler said in hospital here tonight.

"So I got back into the bus and started across the tracks.

"The next thing I knew we were hit broadside and everything was smashed."

John Schuyler, motorman of the interburan, himself injured, was one of the first to climb out of the wreckage and made his way to a farmhouse where he summoned help and reported by telephone to his headquarters. Wrecking crews and ambulances were sent out immediately. Schuyler had made no statement tonight.

The bus left Detroit at 8:30 a. m. today bound for Pittsburgh with about 25 passengers. It was a heavy affair, weighing almost as much as a trolley car, and of a new, fast type.

It left Cleveland at 10:40 a. m.

Ice on Windows

Ice had formed on the windows of the big car and only by constant wiping had Butler been able to keep the windshield clear.

Finally he approached a triangular crossing where two roads and the interurban line intersect. The state law requires all buses to stop

Native American Regains Status Lost by Wedding German

FORT WORTH, Jan. 22. (AP)—Mrs. Martha Lavenia Lusher, born in Tennessee in 1867, of American parents, and who has lived her entire life in the United States, became an American citizen Tuesday morning in federal district court here. He died in 1927 at Cleburne, and, due to a recent act of congress, Mrs. Lusher was not repatriated. Discovering that she was a subject of the German reich, Mrs. Lusher made application for citizenship, which was granted Tuesday by Federal Judge Wilson on recommendation of the naturalization bureau.

SENATE VOTES LIQUOR FUNDS

President Would Get $24,000,000 for Enforcement

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22. (AP)—The senate today adopted a proposal by Senator Harris of Georgia to give the president $24,000,000 to be used under his personal direction to enforce the prohibition laws. The house still must act.

The increase was added to the first deficiency appropriations bill and has been the subject of much disagreement between wet and dry leaders.

The president would have the power to distribute the money in whatever departments of the government having to do with prohibition that he might choose and to use either all or part of the money as he might see fit.

The senate then accepted a proposal by Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, for an appropriation for $250,000 to be used by the president in making a thorough investigation of prohibition conditions. The house also must act on this.

Further Changes In Sugar Duties Argued

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—Further proposals for and against increasing the import duties on raw sugar and for both increases and reductions in rates on sugar by products were received by the house ways and means committee today during hearings on tariff of the revision.

BUSINESS ROW CAUSED WOOD'S SLAYING, CLAIM

Brother of Shooting Victim Denies Domestic Rift Was to Blame

RELATIVES AID STATE

Existence of Close Family Friendship Denied By Two in Statements

A man arrested about midnight Tuesday by city police was placed in jail and may be questioned in connection with the slaying Saturday night of Clifford E. Wood, officials said. The man, according to police, recently has been under charges of violating prohibition laws.

The fatal shooting of Clifford E. Wood here Saturday night was the climax of a business difficulty and not the result of domestic troubles, Gordon Wood, brother of the slain man, asserted Tuesday night in a statement relative to the shooting.

Mr. Wood said relatives will give every aid to the prosecution in the trial of O. C. Haither, charged with murder in connection with the shooting.

W. C. Hicks, brother-in-law to Clifford Wood, Tuesday night emphatically denied reports of the existence of friendship between Heither and Wood. Mrs. Clifford Wood, killed about six months ago in an automobile accident, was a sister to Mr. Hicks, who denied that Heither had ever given aid to members of the Hicks family at the time of the accident or that any friendly feeling existed between the two families.

Heither was quoted Tuesday as saying Wood was his best friend.

Business Difficulty

"The difficulty which led to the shooting of Cliff grew out of a business wrangle instead of domestic troubles," both Mr. Hicks and Mr. Wood declared. Clifford Wood, they said, had been in the employ of Heither. They added that before the accident in which Mrs. Clifford Wood was killed the families "had not been on speaking terms."

Mr. Hicks said that the last time members of the Wood family saw Clifford before the shooting had been at noon Saturday, when, according to his statement, two women had called for him in their automobile.

Relatives of the slain man may retain the services of a special counsel to assist the state if the state's attorneys suggest such a course, Gordon Wood said. He arrived in Wichita Falls Tuesday afternoon for a consultation with other members of the family, whose plans were not completed Tuesday evening.

Wife Visits Heither

Mrs. Heither, dismissed from the Wichita General hospital 24 hours after she had told jail attendants that she had swallowed ground glass, visited her husband in his cell Tuesday afternoon.

Clifford Wood died at 6:15 o'clock Sunday morning, six hours after he had been found by city officers lying on the floor of the Heither home, 2308 Buchanan street. He had been shot eight times.

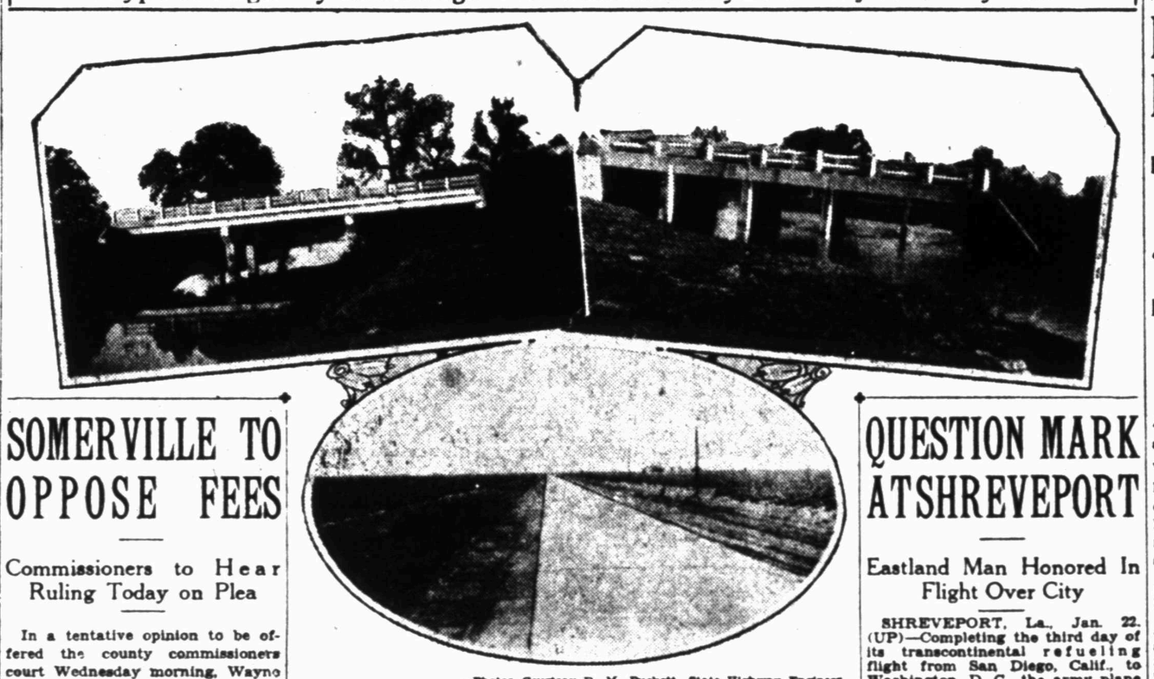

Charges of murder were brought against Heither late Sunday afternoon after he had made a signed statement to Sam Spence, district attorney. According to his statement, the shooting grew out of domestic trouble.

Early Vote on Navy Bill Is Forecast

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22. (AP)—The filibuster threatening the year-old cruiser construction bill almost disappeared today as the senate drove ahead with the long pending deficiency appropriation measure which has been standing in the way of the naval program.

On the verge of a return to the naval bill which would authorize 15 new cruisers and one aircraft carrier, senate leaders were confident tonight of their ability to press it to a final vote within a short period. Unwilling to take any chance on a filibuster, they are preparing to keep it before the senate until acted upon.

SOMERVILLE TO OPPOSE FEES

Commissioners to Hear Ruling Today on Plea

In a tentative opinion to be offered the county commissioners court Wednesday morning, Wayne Somerville, county attorney, will recommend that the claims of Guy C. Raley, county tax collector, and M. L. Tittle, former collector, for $30,000 commissions on delinquent taxes collected since 1919, be contested in the courts.

The county attorney will tell the court that the county can plead the statute of limitations and claim that the plaintiffs failed to properly make their claims and protect their interests at the time the commissions first fell due. He will ask the court for more time to investigate the facts involved in the claims.

The claim arose after a supreme court ruling to the effect that the 1919 statute, repealing the law which allowed collectors a commission on the collection of delinquent taxes, is void. The law allowing the commission has therefore been in effect and is the governing statute, the claimants allege. Mr. Raley and Mr. Tittle are being represented by T. R. Boone, who formally presented their claim to the court two weeks ago.

Mr. Somerville said Tuesday that the county can plead that, since the cause arose more than four years ago, the statute of limitations now bars it from the court. The plaintiffs should have made their claim when the law was first repealed and have obtained a written agreement with the court, he added.

The opinion will be given the court in a special session at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, called for the purpose of letting the contract for the Scott avenue bridge over Wichita river. The court took nine bids and 10 bridge plans under advisement at its regular meeting Monday.

Road Construction Gangs Busy On Baylor County's $2,000,000 System

Five Major Highways Radiate From Seymour to Great Trading Area; Concrete Predominates in Work

By C. W. ROGERS
The Record News Staff

SEYMOUR, Texas, Jan. 22.—Baylor county's paved highway system now under construction, some of which has been completed, with an ultimate total cost in excess of $2,000,000, assures Seymour commercial supremacy in a vast trade territory, by reason of the fact that centering in Seymour are five cardinal highways, with another projected from Maybelle on highway 30, north to Vernon, a distance of 37 miles, thence to a bridge on the Red river near Elmo, Okla., which has been designated as a part of highway 23.

Upon completion of the system Seymour will be served by a greater mileage of paved highways within the county than the capital cities of any of the surrounding counties.

In all this vast trade territory there are no competing trade centers of major importance within the county and those in surrounding counties are all distant from the boundary lines of Baylor county.

Major Systems

Adding to the advantage of paved highway arteries in Seymour's immediate trade territory is the fact that one of these highways, number 30, extends from Burkburnett bridge on the northern boundary of Texas through Seymour and Baylor county, thence through Haskell, Anson, Abilene, Ballinger, San Angelo, Christoval, Sonora, on to Del Rio on the Rio Grande.

Of probably equal or greater importance is highway 24, which when completed, will afford a connection with the Bankhead highway at Mineral Wells to the southeast, and upon completion of the proposed highway from Jacksboro to Fort Worth, now being surveyed, will afford a short route into Fort Worth.

Highway 24, now under construction to Benjamin in Knox county, connects at Benjamin with highway 53, a direct line west from Seymour through Benjamin, Guthrie, Dickens, Ralls and Lubbock. At Lubbock there is a direct westward highway through Levelland and dropping southwest from Lubbock to Brownfield. Highway 53 connects with highway 84, direct and mainly traveled highway westward into Roswell, N. M.

Highway 23, designated from Red river on the north, through Vernon, south across Lake Kemp dam to Maybelle on highway 30, extends south out of Seymour to a connection at Woodson with highway 67, which extends through Breckenridge, Eastland (on the Bankhead highway) southeast through Dublin and Meridian to Waco. At Woodson highway 23 continues via Albany to Cisco, Rising Star, Cross Plains, Coleman, Ballinger, thence

ENGLAND ASKED ABOUT SLAYING

Report of Missionary's Death Requested

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22. (US)—The state department today called upon the British government for a complete report on the slaying of the Rev. Henry A. Bilkert, American missionary, by Wahabi tribesmen near Basra, Iraq.

The department was formally advised that the British authorities have sent out airplanes to search for the desert bandits who, firing upon the automobile of Charles R. Crane, former U. S. minister to China, killed the Rev. Bilkert.

Inasmuch as the responsible authorities are making every effort to bring the slayers to justice, there is little the department can do in the meantime, officials said.

The region in which the attack took place is of such a character that travelers passing through it must do so practically at their own risk, it was explained. Under British mandate, it has been the scene of continuous clashes between British forces and the Wahabis under the leadership of Iben Suad.

No request for indemnity will be made, department officials said. Such demands are made only when American nationals are killed through negligence of the governing authorities.

QUESTION MARK AT SHREVEPORT

Eastland Man Honored In Flight Over City

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 22. (UP)—Completing the third day of its transcontinental refueling flight from San Diego, Calif., to Washington, D. C., the army plane Question Mark landed here at 2:55 p. m.

The flight from Midland to Shreveport, approximately 500 miles, was completed in five hours and twenty minutes. Bad weather delayed the plane before it reached Dallas, from that point the plane was aided by a strong tail wind.

The refueling plane, delayed in Midland at the take-off with battery trouble, was expected tonight.

The crew announced the plane would take off for Montgomery, Ala., early Wednesday.

The Question Mark took off from the Midland airport at 9:35 a. m. today. The ship was piloted by Capt. Ira Eaker who had returned to Midland on an early train from San Angelo where he stayed overnight visiting his father who is confined to a hospital with mastoid trouble. The chief pilot's mother's funeral had been held Monday afternoon.

The army plane was sighted by officials at Love field, Dallas, at 1:20 p. m. It was flying high in an easterly direction.

DALLAS, Jan. 22. (AP)—National democratic leaders need not worry about Texas, Jesse H. Jones, former treasurer of the party and "godfather" of the 1928 convention at Houston, said here today.

Organization of the party on a basis under which it would function in "off years," as advocated by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, is a meritorious plan, Mr. Jones said, but not needed in Texas.

"Texas was divided only on the religious question. There is no doubt about how the state will vote in 1932."

SIXTH COUNT LAID AGAINST H. S. JOHNSTON

Employment of Special Attorney for State Is New Complaint

'BOSOM MONEY' AIRED

Pay-Off Tucked Away By Mrs. Hammonds Told By Contractor

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 22. (AP)—A sixth impeachment charge against Gov. Henry S. Johnston was voted late today by the Oklahoma house of representatives. It concerned the employment of Kirby Fitzpatrick, former Ardmore attorney, as a special attorney for the state banking department.

BRIBE CHARGES UNDER PROBE

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 22. (UP)—"Bosom money" allegedly paid in a highway deal to Mrs. O. O. Hammonds, confidential secretary of Oklahoma's impeached governor, and rumors that $100,000 figured in the adjournment of the special impeachment session a year ago, were examined today by Oklahoma's legislature.

Mrs. Hammonds, confidential secretary to Gov. Henry S. Johnston, received money from a woman "go between" who sought to collect his claims for extra highway work, C. B. McCormack, road contractor, told the house investigating committee.

The money was delivered to Mrs. Hammonds at the capitol by Mrs. May Kline, who had obtained it from McCormack on the promise that "she and Mrs. Hammonds" would see that McCormack's claims were paid by the highway commission, L. K. Ford, McCormack's employe said.

Half to Mrs. Hammonds

Ford told the committee that he had seen Mrs. Kline receive $52 from McCormack in a hotel room conference and had seen her give "about half of it" in an envelope to Mrs. Hammonds.

He said Mrs. Hammonds put the envelope containing the money in her bosom.

Ford said Mrs. Kline received $1,410 from McCormack to "lend political influence" to collect his claims amounting to $8,500, which he never received.

Ford also revealed that Mrs. Kline and McCormack proposed to bid for a rock crushing contract at the state reformatory, sharing the profits fifty-fifty on the agreement that Mrs. Kline "take care of Mamie (Mrs. Hammonds)." The deal was quashed by the state board of affairs, however.

Senate Bribe Aired

Simultaneously, the state senate investigating committee took up the trail of $100,000 rumored to have been used to adjourn the senate impeachment court in the antiadministration special session a year ago.

The rumors were first revealed by Carl C. McGee, editor of the Oklahoma News, and formerly of New Mexico. He introduced witnesses to develop the case today.

Testimony centered about a conference of senators, Governor Johnston and others in a parlor on the mezzanine floor of the Huckins hotel, Dec. 27, 1927, the night before the senate quashed impeachment charges against Johnston.

Tulsa Banker Named

Tom Kight, one of the anti-Johnston house leaders, told the senate committee he heard talk that John McGraw, Tulsa banker, had sent a Newt Graham to the capitol to pay expenses of legislators and that Graham had phoned back asking if he could use the fund to "bring about the adjournment.

Other high points of the senate testimony came when W. B. Graham, a dismissed highway employe, said he had learned by hearsay a highway contractor had said he "raised money to adjourn the session."

Graham revealed a scene in a conference between Governor Johnston and Mrs. Hammonds on political favors and told him to "keep his mouth shut."

Mrs. Hammonds and the governor were away from the capitol today with Major Charles Keller of the adjutant general's office guarding records of state on orders of acting Gov. W. J. Holloway.

Bourland Pleads for 'Texas' Honor' In Stressing Need of Title Laws

Special to The Record News

Bourland, president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce spoke in Throckmorton Tuesday afternoon and at Albany tonight, urging all West Texans to throw their influence to these measures now pending in the Texas legislature.

A representative gathering of West Texans at Throckmorton heard Bourland declare that the honor of Texas demanded validation of land titles held for half a century, declaring that he was but a West Texas farmer talking from his heart to fellow farmers. Bourland explained that present suits instituted by so-called "grabbers" filing on "alleged vacant lands" in West Texas oil fields were mere camouflaged robberies in which parasites were seeking to deprive

AUSTIN, Jan. 22. (AP)—Repeal of the search and seizure act, whereby officers are prohibited from searching private residences without a warrant, was recommended by the Texas house of representatives liquor traffic committee here today when it voted to report favorably on a proposed bill amending that act.

The bill, drawn by Representatives A. H. King of Throckmorton and W. T. Graves of Stephenville, would protect officers from prosecution in the event they search private residences or individuals without the proper warrants.

Representative King, who argued at length for a favorable report by the committee, said that a drastic step was needed to curtail the liquor traffic in Texas. The committee finally voted 12 to 4 to make a favorable report to the house.

Motor Bus and Interurban In Collision

at railroad crossings, and Butler, as well as the survivors of the accident, reported that he did.

Apparently the roar of the storm and the hum of the bus motors deadened the sound of the interurban which was gliding fast through the snow and sleet.

Bus Twisted Into Mass

Neither the driver of the bus nor the crew of the interurban saw anything in the path until suddenly there was a crash. People screamed and there was the cracking and grinding of wreckage. The bus was cut almost in two and twisted into a shapeless mass. The heavy interurban was lifted from the rails and settled on top of the wreckage of the bus, pinning several of the victims into the wreckage.

Motorists passing along the road came to the crossing and found their way obstructed by the wreckage. Soon half a dozen cars had stopped while their occupants gave help or ran to telephones to call for aid.

Three Ambulances

Three ambulances were sent from Bellevue and wrecking cars went out from both Toledo and Cleveland to clear the way.

Some of the injured crawled out and were hurried to Bellevue in ambulances and motorcars.

Survivors reported that there had been a baby on the bus, travelling with its mother. At dark it still had not been found and it was believed that it had probably been crushed to death, perhaps unrecognizably, and that its mother also was among the dead.

No list of names of those aboard the bus had been kept, making identification of the dead depend entirely upon cards, letters, or other marks which might be found upon the bodies.

Officials of the bus line and of the Lake Shore Railway company said that an immediate investigation would be made. They were inclined, however, to lay the accident to "human failure in the face of a storm."

Bourland Pleads For Texas' Honor

men who pioneered this state of fruits of their labor.

He discussed action of the attorney general's department in pressing suits based on the ancient navigable stream statute. Under this statute all streams of 30 feet cutbank are considered "navigable streams" and the attorney general is seeking to deprive land owners of oil royalty rights to the beds of these streams and to one thousand feet of land on each side of such creeks.

"Under the statute creeks such as Leon creek, Elm creek, California creek and dozens of dry creeks in West Texas might be deemed 'navigable' and hundreds of land owners in West Texas will be deprived of their rightful dues. The men who framed the Texas constitution never dreamed that dry creeks in the interior would ever be construed as 'navigable' and he declared such action would never have been taken had not oil been discovered.

"This question is as important to East Texas as to West Texas," said Bourland, "in fact more so since East Texas has more streams of 30 feet width than West Texas. Oil may be found in East Texas or any other section at any time and just as soon as oil is found or for other reasons this land becomes valuable enough to appeal to land grabbers all Texans may find themselves menaced by parasites seeking to file claims on their lands."

Bourland discussed the water situation brought about by the Colorado river case and the Brownwood application and urged an united West Texas support for the Woodward bill which would give priority to municipal and domestic use and next irrigation to hydro-electric power companies in allocating flood waters of Texas rivers.

Bourland was introduced at Throckmorton by Garland Eubanks, Throckmorton banker and at Albany by Col. Dick McCarty, veteran editor. Homer D. Wade, manager, spoke at Albany reenforcing Bourland's plea. E. H. Whitehead, who will accompany Bourland throughout his campaign explained details of the bills.

IZAAK WALTON DINNER FRIDAY

Fish and Game Provided For Banquet

The usual end-of-the-hunting season banquet of the Wichita Falls chapter of the Izaak Walton league of America will be held Friday night, Jan. 25, at the Woman's Forum, according to Ben G. Oneal, president.

The menu being prepared for the occasion will feature fish and game, Mr. Oneal said, the detachments of nimrods which have gone afield to procure these items for the feast Friday night having reported Tuesday that fish and ducks in abundance will be brought in.

The moving picture which will be shown following the dinner is a five-real Pathe film of Alaskan adventure, actually photographed in that country, and recommended by the national headquarters of the Izaak Walton league, according to Mr. Oneal.

Tickets for members and their guests are on sale at the Noble-Little, Rigsby, and Bailey-Moline hardware stores, and Mr. Oneal requested that those planning to be present Friday night obtain their tickets as early as possible.

The $60,053.86 will be turned into the road and bridge funds of the county, Mr. McHam explained. Antiseptic Remedy Promotes Normal Digestive Action

Stomach Troubles Soon Relieved by Internal Antiseptic

G. M. GORDON
Discoverer of Gordon's

You cannot enjoy sound health unless your digestive organs function naturally, for it is the food, properly digested and prepared for assimilation, that builds tissue and makes for normal health and strength.

When the system becomes foul from the presence of poisonous substances, which the body is unable to throw off, the nerves, brain, muscles and vital organs become deranged. Constipation, weak nerves, headaches and a general feeling of exhaustion result.

The underlying object of Gordon's—an internal antiseptic combined with effective digestants—is to stop fermentation (souring of food matter), which is the greatest obstacle to the successful treatment of digestive troubles, and thus prevent the absorption of poisons from the food mass.

Being an internal antiseptic, this remedy goes right to the seat of the trouble. It will bring quick relief in cases of indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, gas, bloating, heartburn, sour stomach, "that tired feeling," excess acid, bad breath, sick headache, and nervousness, when caused by faulty digestion. The first dose will convince you.

Gordon's is made in liquid form. A large 8-ounce bottle, price $1.10—less than three cents a dose. At druggists.

Music Department Hears Exceptional Program by C. I. A. Artists Tuesday

Members of the music department of the Woman's Forum presented William E. Jones, tenor and head of the music department of C. I. A., and Waldo P. Henderson, pianist, in a lecture recital at the Forum clubhouse Tuesday afternoon when about 125 members and guests received the program enthusiastically.

Numbers were given as follows:

Reflections on the Water...Debussy
Capriccio.....Waldo P. Henderson
Polonaise in E Major...Paderewski
Waldo P. Henderson
Worship of God in Nature.....
.....Beethoven
Where You'll Walk.....Handel
Passing By.....Purcell
William E. Jones
Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Mr. Henderson
The Last Hour.....Kramer
The Bird of the Wilderness..
.....Horsman
Three Tone Pictures.....
Music by James H. Rogers
and quatrains from Rubaiyat
Mr. Jones

Immediately following the music, Mr. Jones gave a lecture on "Music and Intellect."

"Through the ages," Mr. Jones said, "music has expressed the highest ambitions of man, and because a piece is new people think they must accept it and that is the indictment that I have against the younger generation. They would throw the past away as if it has been futile. They believe that the new music expresses the American people, but it only expresses the feeling of a few of the American people.

"It is not the lack of music we are suffering from but from bad taste in music. Teachers lay too much stress on the exceptional child and let the average child drift along. This should be corrected in the course of study and the intellect of every child should be appealed to and cultivated rather than the emotions because the intellect is more susceptible than the emotions.

"Some people herald jazz as the most important and only contribution to American music, but in reality it is not a contribution at all."

During the musical program, Mr. Henderson accompanied Mr. Jones at the piano.

Pre-School Circle Organized Tuesday

Miss Mary Sutherland outlined a course of study on health, child welfare and pre-school work as a basis of the organization of the pre-school circle of the Barwise school when members met at the home of Mrs. W. Roberts Tuesday afternoon.

In the business session officers were elected as follows: Mrs. Bob Russell, president; Mrs. Charles Runyan, vice president; Mrs. J. Frank Roberts, secretary; Mrs. H. G. Schmidt, treasurer, and Mrs. W. Roberts, publicity chairman.

The purpose of the organization is to keep in harmony with the P.-T. A. and child welfare work and to assist the association in any way possible.

Members present included Mesdames E. R. King, Charles Runyan, E. W. Evans, J. Frank Roberts, H. G. Schmidt, Bob Russell, William Fisher, R. A. Bailey, L. L. Pombadore, Charles Wilson, C. R. Lambert and Miss Sutherland.

The club will meet next Tuesday with Mrs. E. W. Evans at 2 o'clock, when a question box will be submitted by members.

Girl Reserves Of Baptist Church Meet

Members of the Lamar Avenue Baptist Girl Reserves met at the church Tuesday afternoon, when the missionary program was a "Trip to Mexico." Members present were Agnes Cantrell, Lucille Byrd and Katherine Byrd. Any girl in the junior department, whether she is a member of the Lamar Avenue Baptist church or not, is cordially invited to join the organization, it is announced.

Climbing

First, Ziegfeld picked her for his "Follies." Next, she was chosen for "Rio Rita" and now Warner Brothers will present her in the movies. Dainty Agnes Franey is climbing; helped by her clever dancing and seldom equaled in beauty.

Miss Franey says: "I don't believe in overlooking anything which helps add to your attractiveness. I am most particular about my hair and so many friends compliment me on its softness and lustre that I am sure my method of caring for it is right. Nearly all the girls I know here in New York are using it now. It is so easy. All we do is put a little Danderine on our brushes each time we dress our hair. It makes my hair easy to dress and holds it in place wonderfully. It has gotten rid of my dandruff. It keeps my hair and scalp so comfortable, that I don't shampoo half as often as I did before. And best of all, it gives my hair a softer, more silky and lustrous appearance than anything I've ever found."

Danderine quickly removes that oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color, makes it fairly sparkle! Dandruff usually disappears when you use Danderine. Waves, "set" with it, stay in longer. It's delicately fragranced; isn't oily; doesn't show. It's economical. The 35c bottles will last several weeks. All drug stores recommend and guarantee it.—Adv.

School and College News

Approximately 55 new students reported for regular classes at the high school Tuesday morning. The total enrollment in the college now stands at around the 200 mark, showing a slight decrease. As all regular classes are now well under way, the enrollment is not expected to increase to a large extent, although a few students that are late in entering will cause a slight increase.

Another item of achievement by the manual training department may be found in the magnificant display cabinet that recently made its appearance in the main corridor of the building. The entire cabinet was made within the department by the students taking the course, under the leadership and guidance of A. W. Hornung, instructor.

The cabinet itself is a large, finely finished structure surrounded on the three vertical sides by plate glass. On the lower center crosspiece is an emblem bearing a large M, through which stands out the letter T.

On exhibit at the present time are many finished products of the department, such as: a floor lamp, a fancy carved table made by the instructor, a table, and a large bowl, made from two different kinds of wood. The wall is lined with draperies and overhead lights bring out the full effect upon all articles on display.

Products of the domestic art department will be next on display.

No matter what the fad may be if it is traced to its source it will usually be found to be started by a student.

The Prince of Wales is reputed to have started the one time favorite method of tying four-in-hand neckties with a large knot at the neckpiece. Students immediately adopted the method and it became the style among undergraduates. But the students soon tired of this fad as it became perhaps too well known.

Students at the Wichita Falls High school have now started a new one along this line and have presented something very unique and unusual. The usual operation is followed in this new fad until the final adjustment; namely, that of slipping the material through the loop. When the process is finished, no knot is present and the tie suspends from the neck down in a flat appearance. The fad was started several days ago and is rapidly finding many converts.

Happiness in the Home Can Come By Treating Each Other as Human Beings

The Different Members of a Family Would Find Happiness at Home if They Would Treat Each Other as Intelligent Human Beings Instead of Pieces of Machinery.

Did you ever think that the problem of how to make a happy home, one in which the husband and the wife and the children would all be happy and contented, could be solved by the simple expedient of the different members of the family treating each other as if they were ordinary flesh-and-blood human beings instead of machines, or puppets, or morons, or slaves?

Suppose, for instance, the wife and children treated the husband and father as if he were a man and not a cash register. If they regarded him as a man they wouldn't consider him as merely something that supplied them with food, and clothes, and a place to live, and party frocks, and sports cars, and that you grumbled and sulked at when it didn't deliver the goods in the quantities and qualities you desired, and that you never dreamed of thanking when it came across. For you felt that that was what it was made for.

It is a curious thing, but after the first child is born many a woman never sees her husband again as a man. He is merely the children's father, whose sole purpose in life is to supply her children's needs and desires. So the children never visualize their father as a human being. He is merely something that coughs up the cash when they or mother punch him hard enough.

If they thought of him as an individual, they would see something very heroic in the man who lays his whole life on the altar of his family; who toils in summer heat and winter cold that his wife and children may be kept soft and comfortable; who gives to his children advantages that he never had; who goes shabby that they may have fine clothes, and who is almost invariably the least considered member of the household.

It takes all that the average man can make to support his family. He gets nothing out of his life work but what he eats and wears and the place he sleeps. He is the one who wears his overcoat three seasons, and gets the drum sticks and the back of the chicken, and has one hook in a closet for his clothes, and is pushed around in the house from pillar to post when the children want to jazz. He is the fore-ordained family goat, but it would cheer him up a lot if the wife and children would hang garlands about his neck and tell him how wonderful and brave they thought he was, and how much they loved and admired him.

Suppose, too, that husband quit looking upon wife as a useful household convenience and regarded her as a woman. Suppose he ceased to think of her as an automatic, self-starting combined gas stove and vacuum cleaner, that didn't even require to be oiled up now and then to keep it functioning perfectly, and contemplated her as a human being with feelings, and complexes, and reactions pretty much like his own.

If he thought of his wife as a woman or even as a human being, he would know that she must get awfully tired doing the same round of mechanical tasks day after day, and year after year, and that she must long for some change, something to pep her up, and so he would take her to places of amusement now and then.

If he thought of her as a woman he would know that she hungered for love and tenderness, and longed to be flattered and told that she was beautiful in his eyes, and that he blessed the day he married her, and he would give her once a day, at least, a kiss that didn't taste and feel like a cold buckwheat cake flapped in her face.

If he thought of his wife as a human being, he would know that it galled her pride to have to panhandle him for every penny that she got, and that it outraged her sense of justice to have to wheedle out of him the money she had earned by the labor of her hands, and he would give her an allowance.

It is because men treat their wives as if they were kitchen cabinets instead of lady loves that divorce is so common.

Suppose parents treated their children as intelligent human beings instead of puppets. Suppose they conceded to their children the right to their individual tastes and inclinations, and to make their own decisions about the big things that affect their lives, instead of feeling that they were entitled to boss them as long as they lived. The average parent's idea of a dutiful child is a marionette on a string that they can make dance to their own tune.

If mother likes spinach, all the children have to eat it. If father doesn't like the movies, the children can't go to one without a row.

Mother feels she has a right to pick out Mary's huband for her, and father decides on John's profession, and if Mary insists on marrying the kind of man that she wants instead of the one that mother likes, and John refuses to go into the green grocery, or the bank, or study law, or be a doctor, as father has elected, why, father and mother wring their hands and talk about ungrateful children.

It is because father and mother regard their children as puppets and not as human beings that children leave home in order to get a little personal liberty.

Suppose children regarded their parents as human beings instead of something that Providence has provided for their convenience and well being. If girls thought of their mothers as being women they wouldn't be selfish enough to take all of the good clothes and let mother wear the cast-offs. It is because they think of her as a sexless creature without feminine vanity, that doesn't care how it looks, that they monopolize all of the frills.

If boys thought of their mother as a human being they would know that she got tired, and they would pick up after themselves and not make extra work for her to do. It would surprise most children to death to find out that their mother was human, and that she wants things just as much as they do, and longs for amusement just as much, and that she doesn't enjoy staying at home and getting up a special meal when everybody else has gone off on a picnic.

Suppose our families regarded us as intelligent human beings instead of morons. Suppose they paid us the compliment of considering that an adult man and woman had enough sense to know what kind of food agreed with them and when to go to bed and were capable of picking out their own clothes and friends, and didn't have to be warned every time they started out of the door to be careful of the automobiles and not to get their feet wet.

What a lot of nagging it would save, and what peace and happiness it would bring about if only our families would treat us as if we had ordinary sense instead of as if we were fools.

TUNNEY MEETS YOUNG WILHELM

One Time Enemies Guests At Fashionable Ball

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland, Jan. 22. (US)—Two world-known figures who barely a decade ago were on opposite sides of No Man's Land—one as high commander and prospective emperor, and the other as an obscure leatherneck marine—have met as friends. They foregathered with international society at the annual Cresta ball at this winter capital.

The figures are the former Crown Prince Wilhelm of Germany and Gene Tunney. A cordial meeting occurred at the ball when they were fellow guests of Mr. and Mrs. Vivian Cornelius, who entertained in the prince's honor.

Fashionable guests sipping cocktails at the bar before dinner were puzzled by three empty reserved tables in a choice corner. The mystery was dispelled when the prince entered as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius. The hostess was the former Jessica Brown, of Buffalo, who last year divorced Lord Northesk.

Other guests who appeared were Madame de Landa and her daughter, Lady Patricia Moore; Lord and Lady Portarlington; Mr. and Mrs. Gene Tunney; and Mr. and Mrs. Jay O'Brien. The traditional bending of the knee was done by each arrival in turn as salute to the prince until the Tunney's appeared. Their greetings were cordial handshakes.

The prince appeared to enjoy himself throughout the evening, after dinner dancing with each of the ladies in his party.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22. (US)—Mrs. Jeanette Kraus, who has crowned the first "Miss Texas" at the Fort Worth rodeo of 1918, asked Official Referee William T. Burr today to divorce her from Emanuel Kraus, wealthy meat and poultry packer. Kraus did not defend the action.

Mrs. Kraus, whose home was at Fort Worth until a short time before her marriage, named another Texas girl as co-respondent. She is Grace Trueman Mytinger of Marshall, Texas, and Mrs. Kraus said she was in her husband's apartment when Mrs. Kraus directed a raid in September, 1928.

Mrs. Alice M. Finch corroborated the statements of the former "Miss Texas." Referee Burr reserved decision for 10 days.

Safety, silence and simplicity are features of the new Ford six-brake system

ONE of the first things you will notice when you drive the new Ford is the quick, effective, silent action of its six-brake system.

This system gives you the highest degree of safety and reliability because the four-wheel service brakes and the separate emergency or parking brakes are all of the mechanical, internal-expanding type, with braking surfaces fully enclosed for protection against mud, water, sand, etc.

The many advantages of this type of braking system have long been recognized. They are brought to you in the new Ford through a series of mechanical improvements embodying much that is new in design and manufacture.

A particularly unique feature is the simple way by which a special drum has been constructed to permit the use of two sets of internal brakes on the rear wheels.

The brake construction on the front wheels also is unusual. Here the brakes are enclosed without the use of a leather boot or sliding joint to protect the linkage between the brake rods and the mechanism on the brake plate.

A further improvement is effected by the self-centering feature of the four-wheel brakes—an exclusive Ford development. Through this construction, the entire surface of the shoe is brought in contact with the drum the instant you press your foot on the brake pedal. This prevents screeching and howling and makes the Ford brakes unusually silent.

Another feature of the Ford brakes is the ease of adjustment.

The four-wheel brakes are adjusted by turning a regulating screw conveniently located on the outside of each brake plate. This screw is so notched that all four brakes can be set alike simply by listening to the "clicks."

The emergency or parking brakes on the new Ford require little attention. However, should they need adjustment at any time, consult your Ford dealer for prompt, courteous, and economical service. He works under close factory supervision and he has been specially trained and equipped to help you get the greatest possible use from your car over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

NEUTRAL GROUND

Daily Editorial

THE Declaration of Independence was the first Bill of Spiritual Rights—a Magna Charta of tolerance, which purposed that no citizen should be privileged or trammeled by his beliefs. And that decision was the nation's cradle-cry.

Pilgrim, Quaker, Covenanter and Cavalier colonization were launched on waves of persecution.

Rankling memories of ancestral suffering, humiliation and fanaticism warned the architects of this republic against the intrusion of religious authority into state affairs.

They foresaw how clerical power might some day control legislative judgment and employ the forces of government to humble and degrade minority sects.

Old World experience had taught them that discrimination against one creed was simply a method of imposing the absolution of other creeds: that the exclusion from office of any one creed would, in effect, be the limiting to office of dominant creeds.

Should this come to pass, bigotry would soon be offering the bribes of leadership and distinction to strengthen its grasp upon national control, thereby debarring from national service vast areas of talent, genius and capacity.

Such a consummation would violate all guarantees of equality, and brand dissenting groups with civic and, ultimately, with social inferiority.

IT is not the interest of religion in politics that need alarm us, but, rather, the intimidating investment of politics by religion.

The introduction of a ruling hierarchy is the first stone in the foundation of an aristocracy.

If the granting of highest honors may be decided and monopolized by any commanding church influence, religious nepotism must inevitably perpetuate its chosen succession of favorites.

And finally establish a caste able to lift its own members exclusively to power. Also, permanently sentence non-conformists, first to a politically and then to an economically inferior estate.

Lest we create pariah classes in a democracy, patriotism demands the constant re-statement of the faiths in which our liberties are sealed.

We cannot too often cry the shibboleths composed to beat of drum and peal of cannon on Boston common and at the crossroads of Lexington: "Freedom for all, opportunity for all, and the unprejudiced right of each American to think according to his convictions and his conscience."

Maybe the young man Cleveland police arrested as he was about to go into a trance shouldn't have been arrested at all. He may have been merely training to become a prohibition officer.

Correspondents neglected to mention that the betrothal of Helen Wills, queen of the tennis courts, and young Moody of San Francisco was a love match.

Abdul Hak Hamid, poet laureate of Turkey, also is said to be the country's Beau Brummel. Poets do not even have to look wild any more.

Amanullah's Lesson

IN ALL this semi-ludicrous business of King Amanullah of Afghanistan, who lost his throne because he tried to modernize his somewhat stiff-necked subjects, there is more or less food for thought for us Americans, distant as Afghanistan may be.

Amanullah, petty and pompous as he may have been, was a man with rather advanced ideas. Afghanistan was hardly the place for such things. It had existed in semi-barbaric seclusion for centuries, and its wild, untamed hill folk didn't like the idea of change.

So the airplanes, European clothes, electric lights, barber shops and automobiles that the worthy Amanullah tried to compel his subjects to take to their bosoms, became a source of friction. The Afghanistans, as one man, rose and chased Amanullah over the borders. They will continue in the "good old ways" of their grandfathers.

Our sympathies, naturally, are all with Amanullah. The world has moved ahead rapidly in the last few decades, and sooner or later the manners and appurtenances of the machine civilization will penetrate every corner of the earth. It seems hard that an enlightened monarch should lose his throne simply for trying to hurry the process along.

But it is right there that we can read a bit of a lesson into Amanullah's downfall.

Reforms or changes of any kind, great or small, have to start at the bottom to be every effective. People can't be pushed out of old ways and into new ones by a few zealous leaders on top. A community or a nation will always stick to its old ways until the desire for a change has permeated all ranks.

It follows, accordingly, that any reform of any consquence in the social, cultural or economic system is bound to come very slowly. It can't be engineered from the top. It can't come overnight. Years of discussion, argument and thought are required.

Take, for instance, the matter of world peace. Having passed the Kellogg treaty, we are apt to think we have done a good deal; and when government officials take occasion to announce that war with such and such a nation is "unthinkable" we shall be further encouraged. But we've only scratched the surface.

War is an institution—one of the oldest in existence. It can't be put out of existence by a few treaties or by well-intentioned speeches. When war is finally abolished it will be because the great mass of the people are determined in their hearts that it shall be abolished. We can never be led quickly into an era of eternal peace.

That's the way it is with every reform. They have to well up from underneath to be effective. If you doubt it, ask Amanullah.

Quest of the Supreme

"IT IS BETTER to die struggling for the supreme than to perish in the dust among the commonplace."

This was the maxim that guided the life of Emil Fuchs, world-famous sculptor and painter, who shot himself to death in his New York studio the other day.

Fuchs was suffering from an incurable disease. That, doubtless, was a strong motive for suicide. Few men can sit unmoved when death is approaching relentlessly. But it is fair to assume that he felt, also, that his life was at a dead end, and that the "dust of the commonplace" was beginning to settle about his studio. For a man with his philosophy, that would be enough to make like unendurable.

Although he did not put it into words, most of us, no doubt, feel much the came way about it. To "struggle for the supreme"—to pack life with high moments, so that it glows like a stained cathedral window or flashes like a golden shield in the sunlight—is the goal we are all looking for. We resent sameness and routine; we know that we have the capacity for deep emotional and spiritual experience, and we hunt eagerly for the chance to exercise it.

But, ordinarily, we fail at it. In the beginning we get a hint of what life could be like. A brief experience, a fleeting mood, shows us a bright and shining land beyond the barriers of every day existence. But the demands of bread and butter, and the necessity of doing what is expected of us, shut us out. We plod along, in the dust of the commonplace, and work up a good deal of pity for ourselves.

It is only the exceptional man or woman who can escape and make a life that is truly a "struggle for the supreme." The most of us have to make the best of the commonplace. And we do fairly well, too. We do the day's job, year after year, and we plod along from youth to middle age and from middle age to old age, without ever reaching that pit of despair that drives a man to suicide.

For we discover, as we get experience in living, that the commonplace can shield wonders. In the daily routine we see strange and noble things; men struggling against long odds to be decent and honorable, women fighting loneliness to make someone else's life easier, fathers and mothers sacrificing in silence for the sake of their children. The most uneventful life has a thousand loopholes through which may be seen courage, fidelity and kindness.

These things are little—yet they mean everything. They make the commonplace path a road of wonders, because they demonstrate that the world is not a mere confused turmoil devoid of hope or light, but a place that has love, unselfishness and a magnificent striving that cannot be defeated. And we know if these things exist, no matter in how small quantities, amid the dust of the commonplace, somewhere they are infinite and everlasting.

ADVICE TO CONGRESSMAN BOX

Congressman Box of Texas wants to rid the Democratic party of "the organization and forces" that nominated Gov. Alfred E. Smith for president. It would be far better for the Democratic party to rid itself of Mr. Box and those who think as he does, inclusive of the Ku Klux Klan, the Anti-Saloon league and the Amalgamated Brotherhood of Bootleggers. If Mr. Box was one-half as good a Democrat as Governor Smith he would have something to be proud of.

"Aw shucks; missed him!"

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—"There's one thing about New York," said the gentleman from Indiana, "you can always find a new surprise." Nine times out of ten the surprise is an inspiring or thrilling thing. The city makes me angry lots of times, but I'll admit it has no rival on the face of the earth for free entertainment. The poor man with anything back of the eyes is better off in opportunities for mental and spiritual enrichment than the boob rich man.

"With that highly philosophic observation out of the way, let me come down to cases. I missed a train in the Grand Central station the other day and cussed some. I had a wait of two hours on my hands and waiting for a train is the hardest kind of wait for me. Magazines are a bore at such times. I don't care for a close up study of the human animal en masse—and two hours of it are too much anyway. Movies were too much of a gamble. What to do?

"'If you've got a long wait, Colonel,' volunteered my Red Cap, 'why don't you take the elevator and have a look at the art gallery? It's some gallery, Colonel.'

"'Art gallery? What do you mean, art gallery, in a railroad station?'

"'Just what I says, Colonel. It's sure some gallery. All the big art boys from the avenue come traipsin' along down here.'

"So, listening to such hopeful words and taking a chance, I also took an elevator to the Grand Central art galleries on the sixth floor of the big traffic clearing house at Forty-second street and Vanderbilt avenue, letting myself in for a delightful and unforgettable experience. It was difficult for me to believe that art and time tables could abide under the same roof, even though the roof be Helleu's wonderful firmament, but I was gorgeously undeceived.

"At the entrance of the suite of rooms which compose the galleries I encountered bronze horses and some odds and ends of marble. Then I came into the fountain room, where a bronze group swayed delicately above a green tiled pool, and for the next hour and a half I lost myself in the charms of the place, in the appeal of paint and marble.

"I discovered that these galleries are the only permanent exhibition rooms in the world which are devoted exclusively to displaying the work of living American artists. Walt Kuhn had an exhibition there a few months ago. All of our best known American painters and sculptors have been represented there. Many of them are shown there now.

"One hundred and fifty American painters and sculptors exhibit their work in these rooms, each having a showing of two weeks during the year. Everything hung upon the walls at such times is for sale, and some exceedingly good prices are obtained now and then for this fresh work from the talent or genius of living artists. The directors of the galleries are six nationally known business executives, and no one gets a cent out of the sales except the artists themselves. Some of them, I heard, are often in real need of the money.

"Wandering and wondering through the big, high ceilinged rooms, I came upon whole rooms full of paintings—pictures distinguished for the strength and vitality of the American life they pictured. Independents and academicians—artists of the old school and artists of the new impressionism, all were numerously represented. I never spent a more interesting two hours, or was ever before delighted that I had missed a train I had been anxious to catch. I wonder how many New Yorkers are aware of the existence of this picture treasure house."

Still Inquire How It's Pronounced

The Roosevelt Memorial association maintains, in a fine old brownstone house at 28 East Twentieth street, relics and memorials of the great President Roosevelt, and visitors—most of them out-of-town people, by the way—are to be found there daily during the hours it is open.

New Yorkers, it seems, use the telephone to get from the people in charge of Roosevelt House an important point of information. What is the proper pronunciation of the name? Arguments still arise on that subject, it seems, and the girl at the telephone desk has it down to a formula. "Roosevelt is pronounced," she says many times a day, "with the double 'o' as in rose. . . . Yes, madam, that is right. No trouble at all, thank you.'"

You Just Knew When She Said It

You just knew she was an ingenue from some place considerably smaller than New York. She blushed as she inquired of the strange woman sitting alongside her how many more stops before Times Square. It was on an express train and this was at the Seventy-second street station of the West Side subway. When she learned that Times Square was the very next stop, she immediately rose and started for the door of that rapid train, three men making a dive for the seat she was vacating.

She omitted holding a stanchion or a strap, and when the train stopped she stepped on the toe of a man. Did she blush again and say, "Excuse me!" or the more contemporary "I'm sorry." She did nothing of the kind. "King's Ex!" she said as the tide swept her out to the platform.

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting

By Gardner Hunting

Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

In the year 1935 Radley Brainard has invented the Vicarion, a device with which it is possible to re-create scenes out of the past. The invention is a sensational success, with all the theaters installing it in place of motion pictures. Complete Illusions, Inc., which at that time controls all the improvements on the movie, faces ruin, but when Fardinand Mortimer and Jerry Ballard, heads of the company, call on him, Brainard refuses to make terms.

Brainard's records of the past are contained in "bombs," which hold liquid air, and while he is projecting one of the "bombs," which was unmarked, he sees a beautiful gossamer-clad girl, with whom he falls in love, although he is engaged to Phyllis Norman. During the first demonstration of the Vicarion, with Phyllis and her family looking on, a strange man staggers in the studio. He is unable to tell who he is and Brainard names him Van Winkle, and makes him his aide.

Brainard calls in the operator who made the unmarked record, but gains no information from him. He orders Van Winkle to investigate the making of the bomb. Brainard projects one of the three remaining bombs containing the woodland scene in which the girl with whom he is infatuated appears and decides the records were made by Jeffry Honer, a criminal whom he has employed. Phyllis receives a telephone call from Van Winkle telling her to come to the studio.

Van Winkle's Past

"Do you remember, Phyl," said Brainard, his eyes narrowing slightly at her, "what Aunt Relief said about me showing you human transparencies? Did it never occur to you that life might grow beautiful if it were made transparent? Light might bleach the dark spots out of it."

She looked into his eyes. He was not joking now. He was bitterly sincere. Had those fine eyes of his, then, vision—vision above her own little glimpses that stirred only terror in her? Indeed, what real grasp had she of the thing she attempted to discuss? Again it overwhelmed her. Suppose life could be held up to the race as it is. Idealism itself was a kind of secrecy men spread over truth. "Know thyself" was a mandate to the individual—why not to the species? Could humanity stand before itself—stripped? And would it see, like Adam, only its nakedness—or, with cleared and multiplied vision, the image of its Creator?

What was the ultra-modern epoch into which the world was setting foot? Who and what was this man its ultra-modern prophet? What was she that she should set up her little measuring-stick?

But Brainard had turned restlessly to papers on his desk. Van Winkle had spoken to her. She said conventional things without knowing what they were, and found herself presently in one of the white exhibition rooms. She did not hear the explanation offered her by the man at her side, but abruptly she was looking into a great ballroom where hundreds of dancers thronged the floor, where the dulcet strains of a languorous waltz swung them in its cadences, where mellow light changed is slow, kaleidoscopic shifting—glitter of costume, glimpses of sweet, youthful faces, flashes of grace in swaying figures and slender feet, gay, guarded and gracious eyes—all of the undying charm of earth's oldest pastime in loveliest of settings, a profusion of flowers, ferns, palms and fountains stretching away in dimming vistas to white moonlit lawns! And as the scene began to warm her senses, into the foreground out of the crowd danced a lovely figure, star-eyed, flushed, joyous, radiant, a bright spark from the glowing whole, and paused and was—herself!

Some half-forgotten myth of nymph or woman enamored of her own reflected loveliness floated through Phyllis Norman's mind. She was not vain of her beauty, but she had now a sense of never having seen it! But the man—her partner—was bowing; and the woman beside the slender pillar was suddenly her mother, to whom he was surrendering her; and he turned and came out toward where . . .

"Look, look!" gasped the man beside her. "Do you know me—do you remember—do you understand?"

The man approaching there out of the re-created scene of a bygone night was strong, erect, full of the vigor of health—little like this still haggard, half-broken unfortunate here, whose luckless state was summed up in the name they had given him. Yet he was—Van Winkle!

"I—I remember that night," faltered Phyllis, her mind whirling. "But—oh, I don't—remember you."

"When—where was it?"

"Why, it was—why, it was at the New Embassy—last winter—in December!"

"Last winter!" groaned the other. Then he raised her head. "But—it is not the mystery! Can you understand? It's that I remember—remember that night, and what it meant to me—what you meant to me! But you—do not! And I—remember nothing else! I am a wrecked and meaningless thing! It is only my body that is here! I—now, here—am like the man we just saw in that scene from a dead year—he walking, living body of a dead man, without a spirit—without a soul!"

Brainard had long ago dreamed of reaching beyond the earth's atmosphere and looking upon what might be occurring, or have occurred, in other planets—Mars, Venus, Mercury, the moon! But he had found that no answer came to his broadcast calling. Either because he could not gauge to exactness the enormous distances involved—or because records in any atmosphere which surrounded other spheres than the earth were incapable of duplicating themselves across intervening space so as to be picked up by his present crude condensers. He did not give up hope that he might one day stand vicariously upon whatever surfaces there might be of the North Star or Neptune, but all he succeeded in getting as records of their affairs were what amounted to photographs from upper ranges of the earth's own atmosphere. He could record what sun and moon and stars would look like to the eye from there. Wonderful enough, but paltry achievements compared to his hopes. He had not even announced them—to a public sufficiently interested in terrestrial doings to let heavenly affairs alone for a time.

Terrestrial matters sufficiently absorbed him now. Anything else would wait till he should find Jeffry Honer. As he had told Phyllis, the man had disappeared. He had simply not come to work on the morning following that on which he had met Brainard in the hall—and smiled. He could be followed a little way—to and from a recent boarding place—beyond, through a brief stay at a small hotel—back of that through an arrival in the city from a railway train. But in the train itself, at its various stopping places, all the way back to its starting point, he was invisible. That arrival in Santa Monica was recent—but many of his movements since then were lost in darkness of the nights when he chose to move about.

The Clue

It was only two or three nights after Phyllis' visit, however, that he stumbled upon a clue. He had shut himself up persistently in his studio, and worked over the condenser till he was nearly exhausted; and this night he had dropped back in his chair and fallen into a doze. He woke with a curious memory before his mind's eye. He was seeing Honor as he had stood in the private office on the day he had come to explain the unlabeled bombs. Van Winkle had ushered him in. He had told his little story and was awaiting Brainard's reaction to it. Brainard now recalled an odd action of his; Honor had glanced aside to where Van Winkle stood, and had almost immediately put his hand to his own chin, rubbed the new beard there and looked subtly relieved.

The movement had meant nothing to Brainard when first observed. Now it instantly suggested an association of ideas which transformed his indifference to Van Winkle's little mystery into keenest interest.

The train of thought, once started, was like a broadcast vibration: it caught everything that it touched to which it was keyed. Brainard found himself remembering the robbery scene in the Norman library, and how Honor had looked into the glass bowl containing the miniature from Van Winkle's lost career. The man had been frightened. This fact Brainard had previously set down to his seeing the little scene itself—enough to terrorize most men coming upon it unawares. But Honor had already known something about the Vicarion and its ways when he had come to the Norman home—he had even stolen some of its bombs that night. Hence his fright had some deeper origin!

Curious how one could overlook such a thing; but there had been other things to think of then. Now Van Winkle's story, which had seemed a commonplace repetition of its kind, offered endless possibilities for association with that of a crook like Honer. And Brainard began making records on the beach, all around the index of that one he had called Van Winkle's resurrection. He spent hours, and more hours, at it. But at the end of long persistence he wrenched out of the gloom of that night a burial scene—in which three dark figures put a fourth, limp and unconscious, into the sand from which Van Winkle afterward had been seen to rise!

Here was something normal enough, if criminal. Persistently he followed those figures away down the beach, till they emerged into the lights of a street and separated. One of them was Honer—without his beard. Then Brainard went back and patiently recorded and watched the arrival of a boat on the beach, from which the burial party took what they seemed to consider their corpse. Beyond that he followed backward the course of the boat to an obscure inlet on the coast; thence the devious ways of the party by motor, down from the hills; and finally he looked once more into their faces by lamp-light in a cabin hidden far back among the rocks.

He dropped them instantly here, shutting off his projector and rushing to his condensor. He had leaped to the conclusion that such a hiding-place as this, once frequented, would unquestionably be sought again by a man who wanted concealment.

Having the location index, he set his timer within the present hour—and found Jeffry Honer now once more in the mountain cabin, as he had guessed, busily engaged in trying to set up what was unmistakably the frame of a Brainard condenser!

He could hardly contain himself. Even after he had investigated and found that spare parts of a condenser had actually been carried off piece-meal from a storage room downstairs, and that Honer might actually have in his possession much of the material to make his enterprise a success, Brainard exulted. He exulted in this first test of his weapon! He did not trouble to trace the method by which he had been robbed. He could do that at his leisure. He had well in mind the method by which he hoped to reach the man, and he cared little for the machine. The game was exciting enough to make him forget his weariness, and nearly everything else.

Honor's Crime

For days then Ushigi had to force upon him things to eat; night after night he awoke to find that he had fallen asleep over his machine. But day after day and night after night he worked on. He began by searching the little mountain cabin, among the effects of the man who sat there absorbed in work and utterly unconscious of the forces in movement around him. He found what he wanted at last—a clue to a past career—in an old letter bearing a postmark of a Nevada town. Broadcasting there he at last picked up Honer again—the Honer of two years previous—in jail. It was easy then to learn the accusation that had put him there; and Brainard came upon a piece of unnatural cruelty that chilled even his accustomed nerves.

It appeared at length that Jeffry Honer and a brother of his, most frequently called "Spike," had been rivals for the favor of the same girl—a pretty little brainless thing she was, happier when her flirting with the two had brought its hideous result than ever in their love-making—though she had seemed partial to Spike. This brother was a rough, hard-working, decent-spoken chap, to an outsider's eye and ear at least—an outsider who looked upon and listened to his doings and his words some two years after them and some hundreds of miles away!

The story was long and fragmentary, as Brainard got it, but it ended in a night when Brainard watched Jeffry Honer leave a tin box in the path by which his brother would come home from calling on the girl. And he saw Spike Honer later pick it up and open it to look inside—and explode a charge of flash-light powder in his eyes!

Afterwards he saw the scene in which Spike Honer came home, nearly delirious with pain, staggering, fumbling along familiar ways till he reached his door—and met his brother. And Brainard heard what the stricken man said. He did not rage or rail; he merely uncovered his eyes, seared white as a fish's belly, and said, "Look what you done to me, Cheff!" and dropped thudding to the floor.

Spike Honer died from blood-poisoning; the details were horrifying. And Brainard learned that Jeffry Honer escaped after arrest. But he cared nothing for that; he had what he wanted. He recorded it again and again—that meeting between the brothers at the house door. And after studying Honer's habits for a time, he took Ushigi one night and they motored together out a rough mountain trail. They found the cabin locked, but they forced the door. When they left, Brainard fastened a note on the door with a pin. It said:

Don't be sore I busted in thinkin you mite be sick what. Will be up again.

That night in his studio once more he set his condenser for Honer's cabin and 9 o'clock. Then he waited till 10 and made a record. He found Honer just coming in with a sack of supplies—scowling over the note he had taken off his door, as soon as he had made a light by which to see. He saw the man shrug presently, toss the note into the dead fireplace and take a bottle out of his bag.

Pouring a drink into a tin cup, he was about to swallow it, when he stopped suddenly, listened, then took a backward step away from his door as if he heard approaching steps there. Next instant, however, he dropped his slopping, splashing cup on the table and grabbed at the back of a chair, his eyes going gray with fright. And Brainard, congratulating himself on the success of his release-timing device, heard the faint, ghostly echo of the record within his record, as the dead Spike Honer said again to the brother who had destroyed him, "Look what you done to me, Cheff!" and thudded on the floor.

Brainard's Revenge

Brainard alone in his studio felt the icy chill as if the other man's terror had spread out to him like a frozen wind. He had himself only partially realized the power of the weapon he used. In the instant he watched Honer standing there, staring into the empty fireplace in his mountain cabin, he saw how rightly men have believed in ghosts. The man who saw and heard the specter, familiar as he was with the new trick by which a man might look into another's life, having experienced a taste of the whip it put for him into an enemy's hand, was still not prepared for this! He was alone in an isolated spot, at night, miles from another human being, two years after his brother's death. And what he saw and heard was not so much something Brainard had made; perhaps for the first time in his life he was victim of that older trick by which a man looks back upon a record in memory's mysterious depths that is exclusively his own!

The fingers of Honer's hand clawed at his lips; then he wavered and grabbed again at the back of the chair. He missed it and plunged headlong to the floor. There his body drew into a slow contortion, while his hands vaguely fumbled at his breast.

Brainard sat stunned in his chair. What was this that he had done? Had the man some vital weakness unguessed? It would scarcely be surprising; the very liquor such men nowadays bought and drank was poison. Such terror might easily rupture a spent heart. Suppose Jeffry Honer was dead!

But it was not the idea that his retaliatory blow had had a fatal issue that made his own heart slow in its beating and then pound heavily till the pulse gurgled in his ears. It was not a danger that his own hand in the other's fate might sometime be detected and traced by the same terrible means he had used to strike. It was not that he newly recognized the fact that his grasp of world sway committed him to violence, as a constant future factor in his life. It was the certainty that he had crudely bungled by underestimating the very forces with which he dealt. Had he sealed the very lips he meant to open? Had he forever buried the madly coveted secret that lay in those ridiculously cloth-covered dials, and in this one man's brain?

Another thought swept in upon him. Here was something out of reach of the Vicarion! Out of reach! He had suddenly touched a boundary of his power—the power he had begun to think was limitless! With all the mighty range of his multiplied senses he was still bound within the little six-square realm of three dimensions!

But all men were so bound. All things! And the thing that had newly become his heart's desire—that also lay within this realm—his realm! He tried to fend off panic with bold declaration! He would make a means to find her! If Honer were dead, he would waste no time on him. He would find his woodland Sprite. He must find her! For he must know whether she were within his flesh-and-blood reach. If so, he would take her where he found her. If not—he still must know! If there were venom in this stab he had received from fate there could be but one antidote. Better to cauterize than to carry a festering wound! Boldly resolved! —reassuring — comforting!

But was Honer dead? He rose from his chair with his limbs tingling like a man getting out of bed after a siege of fever. He went to his condenser and set it to record more scenes in that mountain cabin. It would take time. He had already spent half the night over the task. He threw himself down in his chair again exhausted, and sleep rushed over him like surf over a prostrate bather. When he awoke his watch told him it was 3 in the morning. The purr of his condenser had automatically stopped. He took the little steel bomb from the machine and put it into the projector. In a moment he was looking again into that other, lonely, quiet room so intimately, significantly linked with this!

Turkey Sheds Pin Feathers and Now Is Busily Engaged in Expansion

Citizens of New Town "Talk Turkey" Constantly With Favorable Results Shown on Every Side

By C. W. ROGERS
Record News Staff Correspondent

TURKEY, Texas, Jan. 22.—The people of this pulsating West Texas town can and do with justifiable pride "talk Turkey" unceasingly—and that goes two ways.

Situated in the extreme southwestern part of Hall county, until recently 32 miles from rail transportation, Turkey in a brief period of time has made a remarkable record of progress.

For a town that might correctly be termed, in the vernacular of the cowman, a yearling past, Turkey presents a scene of building construction, commercial activity and civic advancement that is amazing to the stranger acquainted with the brevity of its history as a town.

Sheds Pin Feathers

Turkey just now is shedding the pin feathers of its infancy and beginning to exhibit the plumage that comes with advancing maturity.

Evidence of haste in the foundation of a new town are still to be seen in hastily improvised frame business shacks here and there. These ultimately will disappear, but they are in striking contrast to the substantial brick business structures that present an almost solid front on either side of the principal business thoroughfare, the $100,000 high school building of brick construction, the $40,000 modern brick hotel and the $100,000 compress.

In addition to the foregoing substantial contributions to the permanency of the town is a $35,000 sewerage system ready for service dependent upon a necessary water supply, which now is assured.

$500,000 in New Buildings

During the last year building construction in Turkey totaled in volume more than $500,000 and prospects warrant expectation of an equal or larger volume during the present year.

Under construction at this time is the building being erected by John Sharp for occupancy by the West Texas Utilities company and the two-story brick addition to the Lacy hotel. Foundation of the new place of worship of the congregation of the First Baptist church, to cost $20,000, has been completed and construction is progressing rapidly. The Rev. I. W. Fulgham is pastor of this church. The new edifice of the First Methodist church, the Rev. J. A. Wheeler, pastor, is nearing completion at a total cost of $30,000.

Residences last year were completed at the rate of four or five each week. Pleasing types of architecture were noted in the homes of Roy Cooper, Turkey druggist, and Dr. H. Gilmore, pioneer physician. Dr. Gilmore averred that he had been "camping out" for the last 20 years but was glad that the advance of progress necessitated his building a modern home.

Residences Built

Construction of residences in Turkey continues at a rate comparable with that of last year. Contractors and investment concerns from other towns are building residences in groups to be held as investments or for appreciation in value.

Turkey's water supply problem has been solved, after protracted experimentation, by the sinking of a well that produces 500 or more gallons of pure, soft water per minute. The strike, made last week, aroused more enthusiasm than would have the bringing in of a gusher oil well. Another well will immediately be sunk near the discovery and it is believed that within 90 days Turkey will have available a water supply ample for the needs of a city of 20,000.

Largely responsible for the rapid development of Turkey is its chamber of commerce. This is an organization that functions in an unusual manner. In the offices of the chamber in the First National bank building at most any time of the day will be found a group of business men and farmers discussing new projects and planning for their accomplishment. Secretary J. M. Edwards has at hand, arranged for immediate access, facts and statistics relating to every subject concerning Turkey and its surrounding territory that might be required by the investigator or prospective investor.

His powers of persuasion are such that he is likely to convince the visitor that he made a mistake by not being born in Turkey and that if he does not remove to Turkey he is making another mistake that is irreparable.

Banker John Sharp, vice president of the chamber, at the slightest suggestion from the visitor, insists on leaving his work in the bank and driving the visitor to any point in which he is interested. Mr. Sharp is an apostle of the gospel of diversification and stock growing.

Another power in the development of agriculture is L. C. Edwards, active vice president of the Farmers and Merchants bank. This enthusiastic councillor has proclaimed as his shibboleth: "Stay with the Cow, the Sow and the Hen!" Mr. Edwards also is foremost in promoting the advancement of educational and religious institutions. He is insistent that training in agricultural methods be adopted as a part of the curriculum of the Turkey schools and that a farm demonstration agent be employed to serve the community, supplementing the work of the county farm agent.

New C-C Officers

Newly installed officers of the chamber of commerce are: J. A. Lacy, president; John Sharp, vice president; L. M. Edwards, secretary. Directors are: Roy Russell, Cecil Reavis, John Sharp, C. J. Hartwick, Jesse Jenkins and T. L. Colvin.

Collaborating with the chamber of commerce is the Noonday Luncheon club, which meets each Tuesday with representation from all business interests. Officers of this newly organized civic club are: J. B. McCarley, chairman; Roy Russell, vice chairman; J. M. Edwards, secretary-treasurer.

At the last meeting Secretary Edwards announced that a farm diversification program would be presented for adoption at the next meeting of the chamber of commerce. It was stated that only a small proportion of the demand for Jersey cows had been supplied and that the chamber was still in the market for more tested cows. The citizenship was warned to spend its money with home merchants if the town is expected to prosper.

Banks Prosperous

Turkey banks are in the same prosperous condition to be found all over this section of West Texas. Current statement of First National bank supplied by Mrs. Bertha Sharp, cashier, shows capital stock, $25,000; surplus and undivided profits, $18,825.89; deposits, $353,810.20; total resources, $397,636.09. Newly elected officers are: John Sharp, president; G. H. Trueblood and A. B. Crump vice presidents; Mrs. Bertha Sharp, cashier; G. O. Coker, assistant cashier.

Farmers and Merchants State bank, organized in November of last year, already has resources of $95,374.50, according to statement supplied by Felix Hankins, assistant cashier. Capital stock is $25,000; surplus and undivided profits, $3,000; deposits, $65,374.50. Officers are: T. W. Bell, president; Jess Jenkins, vice president; L. C. Edwards, active vice president and cashier; Felix Hankins, assistant cashier; T. W. Bell, Jess Jenkins, C. C. Broyles, L. C. Edwards and J. M. Crews, directors.

ROME, Jan. 22. (US)—On the eve of his departure from the Grand hotel to take up his residence in a private villa, Alexander Kirk, charge d' affaires at the American embassy, was robbed of more than $20,000 in cash and jewelry, in a bold theft which the police attribute to a valet.

The robbery occurred late last night or early this morning while Kirk was out with friends at the hotel Ambassador grill. Returning, Kirk discovered that his valet, a traveling jewel case containing the entire collection, and a sum of money, were missing.

Prosperous Turkey Farmer Credits Success to Reading and Observing

(By Staff Correspondent)

TURKEY, Texas, Jan. 22.—Many a farmer gets a reputation for being an extraordinarily good manager when in truth he only reasons that to make money he must apply to his own case the experience of other farmers who have been successful.

R. Lafe Jones, two miles south of Turkey, is one of these.

From reading and observation, Farmer Jones learned that diversified farming pays largest dividends.

He is in the main a cotton farmer; last year he made 43 bales of cotton; not only that, but—

He raised and stored 12 tons of maize and 6,000 bundles of feed.

In addition, he sold:

Cream worth $582.26; four calves worth $120.50.

Hogs worth $202.

Eggs worth $134.47.

Chickens worth $85.34.

His total gross cash income, aside from cotton and feed, was $1,125.99.

He began the year with two brood sows and has left three brood sows, 18 pigs and three meat hogs.

He had 70 hens at the beginning of the year and has left 130 hens.

He began milking six cows and has left seven cows and two calves.

His table has been supplied with an abundance of meat, eggs, milk and butter with no expenditure of money.

Mr. Jones has an 80-acre farm and rents an adjoining 100 acres. Only about $40 was paid out last year for hired labor.

such widely varying types yet all screen stars alike have the vital appeal of smooth lovely skin . .

9 out of 10 screen stars use Lux Toilet Soap

AN exquisite, velvety skin is any girl's greatest charm, and for a screen star it is all important, leading motion picture directors say.

"Screen history has proved that the cleverest make-up can't imitate beautiful skin under the glare of the close-up. I don't know a single girl without really lovely skin who has won enough of the public to become a star," says William Beaudine, director for Fox Films.

"A star must always guard the perfection of her skin—the glaring lights of the close-up reveal the slightest unevenness," Merna Kennedy explains.

The next time you see her in a close-up notice how fine and smooth Lux Toilet Soap keeps her skin or Clara Bow's, Bebe Daniels', May McAvoy's. When next you see your favorite screen star, whoever she is, remember that nine out of every ten lovely stars use Lux Toilet Soap for smooth skin.

Indeed, all the great film studios, following these stars' example, have made Lux Toilet Soap the official soap in all dressing rooms.

The exacting screen stars like the fact that this delicately fragrant white soap is made by the French method. "It gives my skin that beautiful smoothness I thought only fine French soap could give," Renée Adorée says. You, too, will like its caressing lather that leaves your skin so satin smooth. Use it for the bath, too, and the shampoo, as the screen stars do.

the Bargain Day of a Bargain Month!

January is a month of bargains. Merchants are eager to make space for Spring merchandise and prices are cut to the quick. It is the month of sales in fur coats, dresses, hats, shoes. For men it is the best season to buy suits, overcoats, neckties, shirts and other articles of apparel.

And of all the days of the month, this January 24, 1929, will afford the greatest opportunities. It is Suburban and Dollar Day. It is the day Wichita Falls merchants have chosen to put forward goods and prices of especial attractiveness for the benefit of shoppers from out of town.

Read the Suburban and Dollar Day advertisements. They will appear in The Times and Record News Wednesday, January 23, the day before Suburban Day.

Does your wardrobe call for replenishing? Do you need china or silver? Are your curtains and draperies a little the worse for winter wear? Next Thursday is the time to make replacements.

Check your requirements against the items advertised in The Times and Record News. If you will make a pencil list of the articles that interest you and where they can be obtained, it will save you much time and aimless "looking around."

To get the most out of your trip it's a good plan to shop first from the advertisements.

STRATON WARM ON NEW THEORY

Fundamentalist Glad Scientist 'Has Told Truth'

NEW YORK, Jan. 22. (UP)—The theory of Dr. Austin H. Clark that man came upon the earth in much his present form and did not evolve from some far lower animal, was warmly endorsed today by Rev. John Roach Straton, recognized leader of the fundamentalists in religion.

Dr. Clark explained his theory in an interview on Sunday. He was unable to accept theories that man evolved from a fish or an ape through many slow processes of development. He believes that man came upon the earth as a distinct species.

Glad of "Truth"

"I am glad to hear a resonsible scientist tell the truth for once," Dr. Straton, whose militant fundamentalism has brought him into conflict with scientists so often, told the United Press.

"It is particularly gratifying and opportune to have this theory brought forward at this time, when there is so much discussion of the recent statements of Prof. Harry Elmer Barnes, who denied the very existence of God."

Prof. Barnes of Smith college, speaking at the recent meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said that in modern life there is no place for a supernatural God.

He believed that the entire religious structure must be revised and rebuilt, discarding the "great volume of fears and superstitions which obviously have not the slightest scientific validity, but, nevertheless, continue to terrorize countless millions." Only last night Professor Barnes, speaking here, restated his position.

Contentions Identical

"Dr. Clark's position," said Dr. Straton, "is exactly the same as that which I have held in my debates with Prof. Kirtley T. Mather, professor of biology at Harvard and one of the leading witnesses in the Scopes trial. Prof. William North Rice, biologist of Wesleyan and dean of American biologists; and Prof. Maynard Shipley, president of the American Science league.

"There is not one scintilla of truth or real evidence in support of the theory that man descended from beast.

"I hope that Prof. Clark's new theory will start the scientific world on another tangent. I am glad to hear such a responsible man speak the truth and the time for it is most opportune."

Scientists who commented were not as ready to accept Clark's theory, however, as was Dr. Straton.

Four Crashes on Grandfield Bridge

Special to The Record News.

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Jan. 22.—When the sedan driven by Miss Gladys Bleeker of this city, and containing eight passengers, plunged through the railings of the Grandfield bridge over Red river, last Saturday morning it marked the fourth accident of identical nature that has occurred on the bridge since last Christmas. The peculiarity of these accidents is that none of the occupants of the cars have been killed or severely injured, though the bridge is 12 feet high from the riverbed and nearly all the cars have landed bottom side up.

Miss Bleeker laid the cause of her accident Saturday morning to the car skidding on the frosty runways which are very narrow and crooked and plunging through the frail wooden railing before she was able to right it back on the driveway.

Those are the breed of coughs that prove that common cough syrups are about as useful as a bottle of ginger pop.

Ardent Love Maker Sued for $180,000 By Girl Who Says He Didn't Mean It

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22. (US)—Many, many dollars—180,000 of them—are needed to sooth the wounds left in her heart by the arrows of love, Dolores L. Salazar, screen actress, holds in the suit charging breach of promise of marriage against Ferdinand Pinney Earle, long known as "Affinity Earle."

Earle, in years long gone a Hollywood motion picture producer, is alleged in the pretty actress' complaint to have "swept her off her feet" with a "course of ardent love-making and passionate letter-writing."

This was in 1926. At that time, the document sets forth, Earle was a man of 40 years and Miss Salazar a girl of 19.

Dear Little Nell

A sheaf of love letters were filed with the complaint to bear witness to the plaintiff's contention that Earle "took advantage" of her "youth and innocence."

The former producer, according to Miss Salazar, took her to Mexico. Later, he is alleged to have taken her to Paris. There he is asserted to have forsaken the actress, completing his desertion last Jan. 14 by taking one Denise Lonsin to wife.

After administering a severe beating one day in May, 1927, Miss Salazar claims, Earle declared he thought it would be a good idea to toss her out of a window.

Ardent Letters

The ardent letters written by Earle, according to the complaint, spoke of the "inexpressible, inmeasurable, unutterable joy of being able to bring you happiness—and faith, renewed faith in yourself and in life and in love—by my few gifts—my property now."

In another letter, Earle is alleged to have written: "Tonight I hesitated to kiss you at all. Because I didn't want a kiss in repayment—I who am so helplessly and everlastingly your humble and grateful debtor."

"As you selected the trousseau today, My Dolores! Always I was impressed, fascinated, enamored by the same special charm that first arrested my attention. But as you talked, I was enthralled by a personality, an individual sweetness and nobility, a clear, candid intelect, a compelling spirit, that singled you out in my mind. I can feel your emotions only in so much as they are mirrored in your pure, earnest, lovely features."

Disowned by Parents

The actress itemizes the extent of the damages she alleges she suffered as the result of the romance as follows:

Because of the "stigma of a loose woman" cast upon her by Earle's asserted conduct, and because she has been disowned by her parents—$30,000 for alleged breach of contract.

Alleged seduction—$50,000.

Alleged breach of marriage promise—$50,000.

Exemplary damages—$50,000.

Vera Reynolds' Friends Learn She's Mrs. Ellis

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22. (US)—Love not only laughs at locksmiths but occasionally it gives movie contracts the merry ha, ha. Vera Reynolds, petite, young and a former DeMille star, went to Europe three years ago and all unbeknown to her friends, became the wife of Robert Ellis, well known stage and screen star.

Not a word was said about this marriage which took place in May, 1926, in Paris. Miss Reynolds, returned to Hollywood, went on with her motion picture career and no one was the wiser with the exception of Maude Latham, Miss Reynolds' closest friend.

No one suspected until Mr. Ellis started working at Universal City on "Broadway." Miss Reynolds called for him so often that a few of the gossips started asking questions and ,venturing a few matrimonial prophecies. A little personal investigation unearthed the interesting story that the little blonde actress could not marry the good looking actor because she was already Mrs. Robert Ellis.

Hope to Keep Aged Couples Together

NEW YORK, Jan. 22. (AP)—A charity project designed to keep aged couples united and in their own homes instead of in separate institutions is to be inaugurated by New York City.

John T. Eagan, executive secretary of the board of child welfare, is preparing data, and legislation is pending to bring about the reform.

The city gives about $1.09 a day for the maintenance of 3,300 old persons in almshouses.

The strong feature of the project, he said, is in its low overhead cost as compared with private charities.

LITTLE THEATER PLANNED

TURKEY, Texas, Jan. 22.—An effort is being made to stimulate the organization of a Little Theater company in Turkey.

Victims of Mabel's Famed Night Club Raids Now Laugh Up Their Sleeves

NEW YORK, Jan. 22. (US)—Night clubs are "nuisances" but cannot be convicted in this district of conspiracy to defeat the prohibition laws, federal authorities decided today. Therefore Helen Morgan, Texas Guinan, Tommy Guinan and other defendants in the famous Willebrandt cases did not go to trial.

The night club calendar was to have been called today when a special assistant attorney general appeared before Judge Thomas and said:

"It appears there is no prospect of securing convictions in this district under such conditions as the indictments set forth. The government, accordingly, when the remaining cases are called for trial will not ask for conviction under conspiracy counts, and it is our request now that the call of this calendar be put over until Wednesday."

At the federal building it is expected most of the night club defendants will plead guilty to the nuisance counts in the indictments. If this action is accepted as a precedent the night club owners would escape with fines of not over $500.

DEFENDER OF CHURCH HERO

Two Chalice Thieves Killed In Terrific Fight

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 22. (UP)—A swarthy Mexican, whose first name means "merciful" but who took the part of an avenging angel when he saw the "holy grail" of his religion being desecrated, was the hero of an amazed St. Louis today.

Clemente Moreno is his name. A coroner's jury today freed him, after he stabbed to death two burglars who attempted to steal the chalice from the Roman Catholic Church of the Annunciation, where he is watchman. Only priests of the Catholic church may touch the chalice.

The burglars, Walter Neonan and Charles Evans, died at the point of Evans' own knife, which Moreno snatched from him.

Sleeps at Church

"I came to St. Louis five years ago," Clemente said, "from my home in San Luis Potosi, Mexico. At the church here they were good to me and set me to work. I sleep in a little room at the south end of the church building, near the sacristy where the priest puts on his vestments.

"I was awakened in the middle of the night by a noise in the sacristy, and ran to the door of my room, in my underwear. As I opened the door I saw these two men, one held in his hands the chalice, the holy gold cup used in the mass by the father while the other looked through the doors where the vestments are kept. This made me very angry."

Of what followed Clemente is not sure. He remembers a terrific battle, during which he secured the knife from one man, who "tried very hard to thrust it into my body."

Priest Comes In

"I felt for his heart and struck him as hard as I could, once or twice." The second man ran to his comrade's assistance, and Moreno "swung upward with the knife many times."

A priest from the nearby rectory hearing the noise of the fight, came in time to administer the last rites of the Catholic religion to one of the bandits. The hands and feet of the dying burglar were anointed with sacred oil from the same vessels he had come to steal.

One burglar was dead when police arrived. The other died in a hospital.

Clemente's nose was broken, his windpipe crushed and his jaw dislocated.

COLD WEATHER COMING, OFFICIAL WARNING

Icy blasts due to strike city

According to the Weather Bureau this locality is in for a spell of wintry weather. Folks, in general should get out the old red flannels and the ear-muffs, while car owners should see that the old family bus is equipped with a good anti-freeze.

The last really cold wave that struck this town left several sadder but wiser motorists in its trail. Repair men reported that they did a thriving business patching up frozen radiators and cracked cylinders.

Here's what one well-known repairman has to say: "Winter's first cold snap finds our wrecking trucks busy towing in cars crippled with frozen radiators and engines. Some repair bills cost the car owners from $100 to $250—all because they did not use enough denatured alcohol.

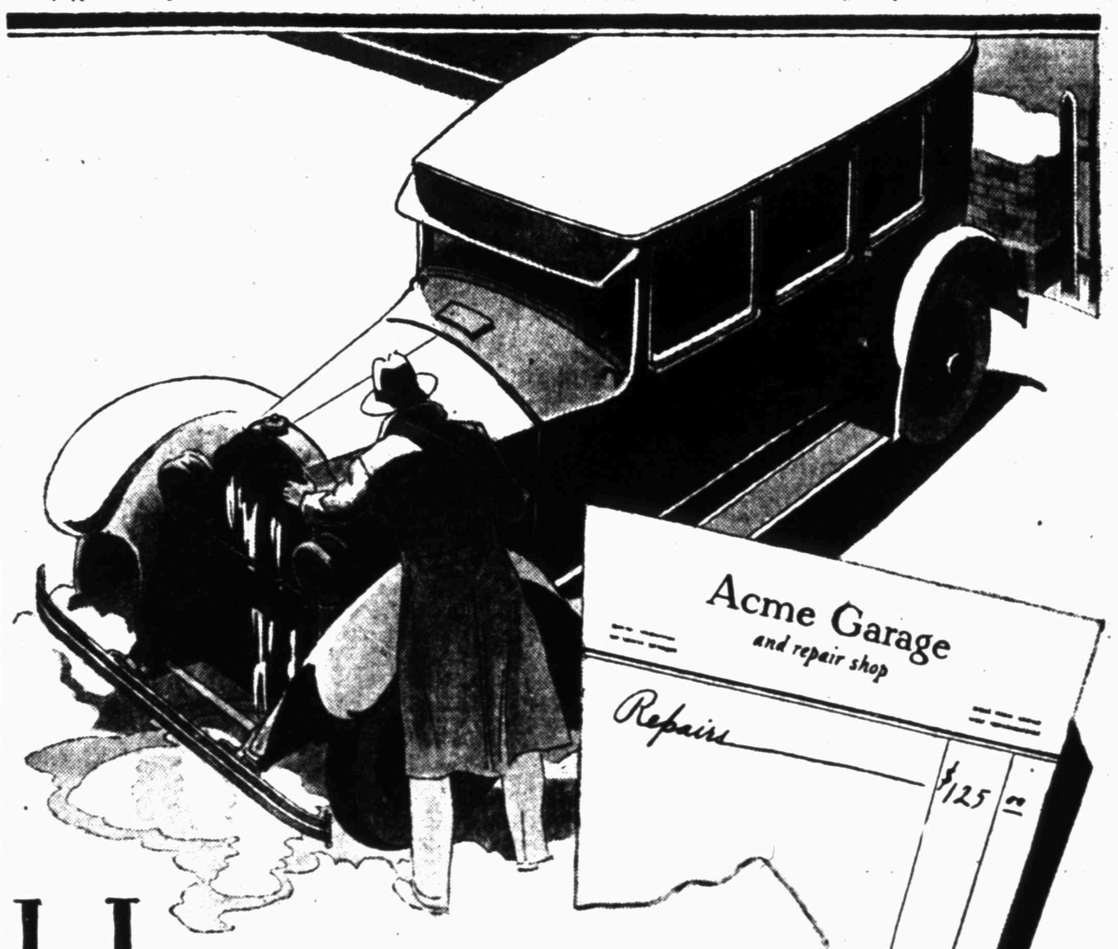

"Denatured alcohol is the only anti-freeze solution we recommend our customers to use in their cars. It does not cause over-heating of the engine, neither does it tend to develop leaks in the radiator and cooling systems, as do some chemical anti-freeze preparations now on the market."

This time car owners should have ample warning to protect their motors from cold. A gallon of denatured alcohol is a mighty inexpensive form of insurance to safeguard two or three hundred dollars worth of motor.

Auto men advise car owners to use denatured alcohol

Every cold spell takes a heavy toll of motorists who fail to protect their cooling systems properly. All garages and filling stations carry an adequate supply of denatured alcohol on hand and car owners are advised to have their radiator solutions tested immediately.

Automobile manufacturers are unanimous in approving denatured alcohol for their cars. They have found from long years of experience that denatured alcohol is sure, safe, economical and that it cannot injure expensive motors and radiators.

He didn't heed cold weather warning

now he's paying off this bill

HE noticed in the papers the forecast of a cold wave. He even felt the chill in the air. But he was too tired to fuss about getting some anti-freeze for his radiator. He decided to put the car up (the garage was unheated) and take a chance. "The weather man is liable to be off anyway!"

He guessed wrong. The next morning his motor was a solid chunk of ice. The radiator had given way and burst. There was a crack the size of your finger in the cylinder block. His repair bill amounted to just one hundred twenty-five dollars. That case (an actual one) is typical.

Don't run the needless risk of ruining an expensive motor by gambling with cold weather. Have your dealer put in Denatured Alcohol today.

DENATURED ALCOHOL
Use it early enough
*Use it often enough
Use it late enough

Why DENATURED ALCOHOL is best

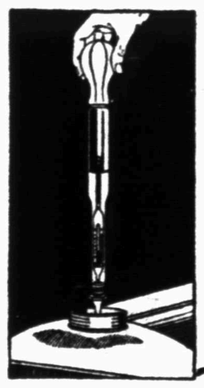

There are many anti-freeze preparations on the market. Perhaps you are in doubt as to which is best. Here are the facts.

Without exception every manufacturer of water-cooled cars in the country approves the use of Denatured Alcohol to prevent freezing. More than half of them approve it exclusively. The world's largest automobile radiator manufacturers also approve the use of Denatured Alcohol.

Why experiment with other anti-freeze preparations which far too often fail to give protection or damage the cooling system of a motor.

Denatured Alcohol is the simplest to use, the safest for your motor, the most economical. It is the choice of a vast majority of the country's car owners and has been for many years.

Play safe by always using Denatured Alcohol.

BLUE JACKETS BEAT MIDLAND

Locals Score Most Impressive Win of Meet, 12-5

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Jan. 21. (AP)—The high powered Blue Jackets from Wichita Falls won their way into the finals of the low-goal events of the sixth annual southwestern mid-winter polo tournament on Treat field Tuesday, when they inflicted a crushing 12-5 defeat upon the Midland Cowboys in the crucial game giving them the undisputed leadership in the upper bracket.

In the first game of the doubleheader on Treat field, the crack Eighth Corps Area headquarters rolled back the Fifth Cavalry Yellow Jackets from Fort Clark by the score of 12-6, with Lieut. Harry Cullins scoring six of the winners' goals.

Both the Headquarters and the Wichita Falls four spotted their rivals to three goals by handicap, but Wichita Falls scored the most impressive victory of the tournament to date when the Blue Jackets led the Midland outfit, 11 to 0, on the field of play at the start of the seventh chukker.

The handicap drag of three goals vanished under the power drive of the onrushing Blue Jackets in the second chukker, where they took the lead and were never threatened.

Capt. Boyle, playing with no handicap, led the scoring with five goals. Horace Robbins negotiated three goals. Robbins, C. H. Featherstone and Lieut. Borden each were handicapped two.

A feature of the match was the scoring of a goal by a Wichita Falls pony. Lineups:

The Great Diamond Robbery

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Robbery in New York has now reached a stylish pitch as high as the top button on Beau Brummel's best vest.

The boys who recently put the finger on Park avenue's most exclusive jewelry garage were such splendid mannikins that they would make a finale hopper look like a cake eater's crumbs.

The boys have been calling on the retail trade and doing very well.

They looked over the Nassak chunk of ice and discarded it. The leader said:

"Too big. There should be a polar bear on it."

If it had been a ruby they could have used it as a tail-light.

There are no more gangs in New York. They are well dressed cliques.

They walked into the jewelry store carrying very fine walking sticks and wearing their blue afternoon guns.

Their exquisite choice in personal adornment caused them to pass up the half-million-dollar Nassak diamond as being too vulgar.

They had left their pearl-handled evening gats at home.

Their walking sticks were slightly weighted on the southern end with six pounds of lead. The extra ballast enabled them to point out objects of interest.

There were four members of this latest pilgrimage of serious thinkers. The leader had just sent Dapper Dan home because his spats didn't match his necktie.

The leader spoke to the salesman in a well modulated threat:

"We would like to look over some neat diamonds. Object, matrimony."

They then scooped up a couple of hundred dollars' worth of rare and costly building material and marched out in double-breasted splendor.

The proprietor, not to be outdone in oriental politeness, asked them to call again, as he was expecting a new load of fresh koh-i-noor berries.

By the time the police got there with their dancing shoes, the orchestra had left.

The description of the neighbors' children engaged in this charming prank indicates that the fashion plates you see in magazines have suddenly turned robots.

The police strong-arm squad is anxious to get in touch with this quartet. Object, singing lessons.

Nelson-Gans Fight Finally Held After Battler's Demands Are Met

Joe Won On Foul After Making Greatest Exhibition of Boxing Ever Seen by Tex Rickard

BY JACK LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1929, by the New York American, Inc., and Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Until Battling Nelson actually climbed through the ropes in that Goldfield ring 23 years ago Tex Rickard was not sure that the fight was going to take place. Billy Nolan, manager of Nelson, had contrived in every way imaginable to hamper Rickard's promotion of the contest. Billy was the most unpopular man in Goldfield and it seemed probable that he would have backed out of the fight at the last minute had it not been for certain threats against his life which had been made by miners and cowboys.

The match almost went up in smoke over the question of weight. Nolan demanded that Gans make 133 pounds at the ringside. Tex told him he thought this would be a great hardship on the negro boxer and would weaken him. Nolan is said to have replied:

"I hope it does. But he's got to weigh 133 pounds ringside or there'll be no fight."

That weight was easy for Nelson.

When Rickard put Nolan's ultimatum up to Gans the old master admitted that it would be hard for him. He didn't object to making 133 pounds, which was then the lightweight limit, but he felt that the official weighing in should take place four or five hours before the fight. This would have given him an opportunity to consume a good meal and regain his strength.

Tex made one more effort to persuade Nolan to make this concession, but this hard-headed manager wasn't conceding anything.

"One hundred and thirty-three pounds ringside or there'll be no fight," he repeated.

When Rickard went back to the Gans camp and announced that he could not do anything with Nolan, the negro fighter said:

"All right, Mr. Rickard, I'll do the best I can."

Joe Goes on Road

Nobody knows how many miles Joe Gans trudged over dusty desert roads in order to make that ringside weight. There is no doubt that the grind weakened him. Many of his friends believe to this day that it brought on the tubercular trouble that eventually caused his death. Every day when he would come off the road he would step on the scales. Pound by pound the weight came off until the old master's cheeks were sunken and sallow.

Nolan had his spies in the Gans camp, and when they informed him that Joe was going to make the weight Billy pulled a card that he had been keeping up his sleeve. He went to Rickard and said:

"I forgot to tell you that Joe Gans has got to be weighed in his fighting togs, shoes and All."

This nearly knocked Rickard right out of his chair. He didn't know a great deal about the boxing racket, but he knew that this demand of Nolan's was not only absurd but unheard of. Tex protested long and loudly, but to no avail. Nolan stuck by his guns and declared again that unless Gans weighed 133 pounds ringside in his fighting clothes there would be no battle.

When Rickard informed Gans of this new condition prescribed by Nelson's manager the old master broke down and wept.

"That ain't fair, Mr. Rickard," he said. "It ain't right."

But rather than cause the fight to be called off, the negro boy finally agreed to make the weight in his fighting togs. And he did. It is doubtful whether any fighter ever put in such an arduous, heartbreaking siege of training as Joe Gans did for the Nelson match in Goldfield.

Nelson, Nolan Unpopular

All this naturally made Billy Nolan and Battling Nelson extremely unpopular with the motley throng of fight fans who were trickling into Goldfield from all over the country. The crowd was with Gans almost to a man, and Nelson and Nolan drew a round of hisses and boos as they climbed into the ring after the weighing in. But it was generally believed that making the weight had so weakened the negro boxer that he would have little chance against his rugged opponent. For this reason Nelson was the favorite in the early betting.

The two, however, had not reached the 10th round of their long journey before the odds were two to one with Gans the favorite. The superb boxing of the old master made Nelson look foolish. I have often heard Tex Rickard tell of that fight.

"There's never been anything like it, before or since," he declared. "When they came out for that first round Nelson made the mistake of trying to box with Gans. That was the funniest thing you ever saw. Joe would simply stand off and pop him with left hands, one after the other. There never was a better left hand than that one. It worked with the precision of a piston rod, and every time Joe let it go it went true to the mark. He kept spearing Nelson with it until Bat was dizzy. What a boxing lesson that boy got in those first 10 rounds! It was beautiful to watch.

"Then, when he felt like it, Joe would glide in and cross a right to the jaw. And all this time he was picking off Nelson's punches with his open hands. What a boxer he was! Nelson soon saw that he'd get nowhere boxing with Joe, so he began to bore in. He hauled and he mauled and he wrestled Joe all over the ring, butting him with his head whenever he got a chance and hitting him below the belt frequently."

Nelson's foul tactics had the great crowd in an uproar. Once, when Nelson slipped to the floor and Gans assisted him to his feet, the white man deliberately struck him a cruel blow squarely in the pit of the stomach.

Riot Is Averted

This almost precipitated a riot, and the several hundred deputies stationed among the crowd had all they could do to keep the maddened fans from swarming into the ring.

As the fight progressed Nelson's low punches became more and more palpable and deliberate. Time and again he was warned by Referee George Siler. With each low punch the crowd would break out into a storm of hissing.

In the 33rd round Gans crossed a hard right to Nelson's jaw and splintered a bone in his hand. From that time on the right hand was practically useless. Finally, in the 42nd round, Nelson swung a low right hook that landed far below the belt. Gans curled up on the floor in a paroxysm of agony. Without hesitation Siler disqualified Nelson and announced Gans as the winner.

This foul punch stirred up a controversy that was to last for two years.

But, according to Tex Rickard and many other ringside witnesses, there was no question about it being low. Speaking of it afterward, Rickard said:

"The punch was not only low, but I believe it was intentional. I think that Nolan sent Nelson out with instructions to foul the negro boy."

NEW YORK, Jan. 22. (AP)—The New York American says today that Suzanne Lenglen has engaged passage for herself and mother on the French liner Paris, sailing Friday, and that officials of the line are holding in reserve a stateroom for Baldwin M. Baldwin.

The Lenglens, who were reported eastward bound after a hurried departure from the California home of Baldwin's mother, Mrs. Anita M. Baldwin, have evaded all efforts to locate them. Baldwin, who, although still married was at various times reported a suitor for the hand of the former world's tennis champion, also left his mother's home at the same time.

The cause of their abrupt departure was never explained. Mrs. Baldwin's secretary merely issuing a statement saying "Mrs. Baldwin never quarrels with a guest."

WALKER BOXES HALL TONIGHT

Middles Feature Another Fine Show Here

Led by a noted manager and a famous trainer, Jimmy Walker, El Paso middleweight, arrived yesterday to meet Cyclone Hall tonight in the 10-round feature of Alex Ross' impressive boxing show.

Walker is accompanied here by John McIntosh, his manager, one of the leading figures in boxing in the southwest. McIntosh, in addition to managing Walker and several other starry battlers, is boxing promoter at El Paso and Juarez. He is the only impresario who ever brought Jack Dempsey to this section for a fight after the Man Mauler became champion. Jack knocked out some fellow whose name escapes the writer for the moment, down at Juarez three or four years ago.

Walker's trainer is none other than Jack Johnson—Li'l Arthur, former heavyweight champion of the world. Johnson, in addition to looking out for the other members of McIntosh's stable, still is active in the ring and he appears frequently in fights at Juarez. Despite his near 45 years Jack is said to retain much of the skill and speed of his titular days.

Star Flyweight in Party

Also in the party is a Yaqui Indian flyweight. McIntosh and his battlers arrived yesterday morning and accompanied Ross and some other fighters to Fort Sill, Okla., where a boxing show was staged last night in which Duke Tramel and Howard Scott fought in the main event and semi-windup.

This Yaqui flyweight is a foremost contender for the world championship. Indeed, he is so good that McIntosh is heading east, where his 112-pounder engages Corporal Izzy Schwartz of the world fly weight crown.

The remaining member of the party is K. O. Brown, another title contender, this for the middleweight throne occupied by Mickey Walker.

In addition to managing these crack fighters, McIntosh is director of the wrestling affairs of Yaqui Joe and Matty Matsuda, popular grapplers here.

Walker looms as a most formidable adversary for Hall. In fact, McIntosh says Jimmy is a coming championship contender and in truth, the El Paso entrepreneur of pugilistic affairs would not have a scrapper in his stable who wasn't a capable battler. So the Childress middleweight seems in for another strenuous evening at fisticuffs.

The Hall-Walker war is the windup of a program of seven bouts, including 42 scheduled rounds of boxing at Professor Ross' gymnasium at 821 Indiana avenue. It looks like another wow of a card, similar to the splendid program held last week, one of the best fistic shows ever staged in Wichita Falls.

Fast Banties Meet

Battling Sturdivant of Scotland and Windy Woody of Abilene, a pair of fighting banties, who fought a slashing bout here a few weeks ago, will step in the eight-round semi-windup. This promises to be a great duel.

Aubrey Langford of Quanah and Lefty Hemmi of Scotland are carded for six rounds, as are Red Williams of Childress and Jimmy Wilson of Oklahoma City. Other bouts include Benny Leonard (he says that is his real name) and Jack Betts, both of Wichita Falls, four rounds; Buck Betts and Ad Faubion, both of Wichita Falls, four rounds, and Black Dummy and Battling Sam, four rounds.

A battle royal will open the show at 8:15 o'clock.

Don Miller to Answer Bid From Washington

DEFIANCE, Ohio, Jan. 22. (AP)—Don Miller, former "horseman" of Notre Dame, now backfield coach at Georgia Tech, said here today that he would go to Cleveland tomorrow to get final word from the University of Washington on an offer to become head coach of football there.

After telephoning to Seattle tomorrow, he said, he would give Coach Sam Willaman of Ohio State his answer to an offer to assist him at Columbus next year.

HOPPE TRIMS LAYTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 22. (UP)—Willie Hoppe defeated John Layton of St. Louis, at both 50-point sessions today of their 400-point three cushions billiards match at Kline's Strand academy. The score at each session was 50-38.

At the afternoon sessions—43 innings—Hoppe's high run was 6 to Layton's 5. At the evening session—45 innings—Hoppe's high was 8 and Layton's 3.

GRID COACH APPOINTED

RENO, Nev., Jan. 22. (AP)—George Philbrook, head football and track coach of Whittier college in California, has been selected as head coach of the University of Nevada football team for 1929.

Hitchcok, Lacey Ranking Poloists

Tommy and Argentinan Handicap 10 Players

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Changes in polo handicaps announced today by the United States Polo association through its handicap committee shows a general downward trend, so far as the game's famous players are concerned. The most startling reduction in scoring effectiveness is that of Devereux Milburn, famous internationalist and one of the best backs ever developed anywhere in the world.

Milburn who has been practically out of polo for more than a year, was one of the few ten-goal men in the game. In the new handicap ratings issued today, he is reduced from 10 goals to 6.

Stevenson Reduced

Another 10-goal man to lose his classic rating along with Milburn was Malcolm Stevenson, who has been an international star for many years. He was reduced from 10 to 8. On the other hand, F. W. C. Guest, who distinguished himself in the North and South America matches last summer, was raised from eight goals to nine.

Among the few who had their handicap rating increased were E. A. S. Hopping, Stephen Sanford and W. Averill Harriman. The latter, who performed brilliantly in the last international matches, was raised from 7 to 8 goals, as was Hopping. Sanford was raised from 6 to 7.

Only Two Handicap 10

With the passing of Milburn and Stevenson from the select 10-goal class, there are now only two players left with that distinguished rating. They are Louis Lacey of the Argentine, and Tommy Hitchcock Jr., of the United States.

The most notable changes announced follow:

	1928	1929
Devereux Milburn	10	6
Malcolm Stevenson	10	8
Louis E. Stoddard	8	6
R. E. Strawbridge Jr.	8	7
F. W. C. Guest	8	9
E. A. S. Hopping	7	8
W. A. Harriman	7	8
Stephen Sanford	6	7
F. S. Von Stade	6	5

Cummins, Denton forward, was high point man with 12.

CHRISTNER OUT TO STOP JACK

K. O.'s Record Indicates He May Be Tough Foe

NEW YORK, Jan. 22. (UP)—Meyers W. Christner never knew he could fight until he crawled out of the pit in an Akron, Ohio, tire factory and shattered an opponent's jaw in three places with one swing of his iron right.

"What a K. O.!" his fellow tire workers said.

He got his nickname that day and his first fight shortly afterward in July, 1927, at a club smoker. He knocked out his opponent, Arvine Spence, in two rounds. Previous to that fight he had seen only two rounds of boxing in his life.

Until the big Akron rubber puddler knocked out the highly touted Knute Hansen in Cleveland recently he was not known outside his own region, where little was thought of him by anyone but his own handlers.

Now when most fighters have passed their peak or quit the ring, Christner is getting his first big chance at 34. Jack Dempsey is the same age, and Gene Tunney three years younger. Both have retired.

While Dempsey and Madison Square garden are pushing ahead with elaborate plans for the Sharkey-Stribling bout at Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 27, Christner is confident he can blast all their good work with his murderous right fist.

"If Sharkey will fight, I'll do the same thing to him I did to Hansen," Christner said. "I ain't no fancy boxer, but I sure can sock."

Christner's confidence in himself is not radiated in fistic circles, where Sharkey is a prohibitive favorite to show up Christner as a lucky fighter who catapulted into prominence in one fight.

"They didn't think I was any good in Cleveland before I stopped Hansen," Christner said when told New York fight fans regarded him as a "set-up" for Sharkey.

The betting odds were 20 to 1 on Hansen, according to Christner, who advised a pal on the police force to bet his only $25 at those odds. There is no record of anyone else betting on Christner.

"It's a shame to lead that poor fellow to slaughter," Christner said he heard one fan remark when he went down the aisle to fight Hansen.

Hansen turned his back on Christner as they waited in their corners for the opening bell, catering to the audience's applause for him.

"Pack up and we'll catch the 10:30 back to New York tonight," Hansen told Lou Brix and Billy Gibson, his handlers.

Hansen was not out of shape, according to Brix, who said the Dane had trained three months before the fight.

"He went after Christner just like he did Phil Scott," Brix said, "but he couldn't bring him down. He hit him with everything he had, but Christner stood up under the battering.

Christner finished Hansen in the seventh round, knocking him down with a right to the head. Hansen lay flat on his face until he was counted out and it was 20 minutes before he was brought to consciousness.

Christner's punch is no myth, according to his record. He has scored 41 knockouts in 47 fights. He quit his job in the Akron tire factory last April and has scored 11 knockouts in 15 professional bouts.

Quarrel Looms Over Nurmi Race

New York Protests Finn's Boston Appearance

NEW YORK, Jan. 22. (UP)—A fresh tempest in a tea-pot is brewing over the American appearances of Paavo Nurmi.

The amateur athletic union has referred to J. J. Deignan, chairman of the registration committee of the Metropolitan A. A. U., charges brought by Jack Harris, a member of the committee handling the Masonic benefit meet scheduled for next Saturday night, to the effect that the Finn was improperly persuaded to run at the Knights of Columbus games in Boston on that night.

Harris, admitting that Nurmi had not signed an entry blank for the Masonic games here, charged that Paavo had been unduly influenced to go to Boston by "a man or men with power in official track circles." He claimed that the Finnish star had practically agreed to run in the Masonic meet, only to come to a "sudden decision" to appear at the K. of C. games instead.

Dan J. Ferris, secretary of the A. A. U., before whom the charges were laid, has turned the matter over to Deignan, since Nurmi is registered with the local Metropolitan association.

The Protective Citrus Fruits

Only a few years ago oranges and grapefruit were considered expensive delicacies to be used on special holidays, but now oranges, orange juice, and grapefruit are served at every good restaurant, club and cafeteria.

It has been estimated that at least 75 out of every hundred people use some of these either for breakfast or at some time during the day. The public is becoming convinced that these are helpful fruits. Many people have arrived at this opinion because of their own experience and others have been convinced because of the wide publicity that has recently been given to the scientific investigations about the value of citrus fruits.

The fact that oranges are wholesome is not a new discovery for we find as early as 1646, Ferrarius wrote one of the first books on citrus fruits in which he recommended orange juice for persistent fevers accompanied by eruptions.

Only a few years ago I was severely criticized for recommending orange juice for babies but now every up-to-date doctor recommends this. Science knows that orange juice is especially valuable because of the large amount of lime and magnesia, both necessary building elements. Orange juice also contains a large amount of the protective vitamins against rickets. The citric acid in the orange and other citrus fruits is a valuable stimulant to digestion, and seems to increase the flow of bile. This makes it especially helpful to those who have a tendency to sluggishness of the liver. One who has been bilious cannot take a better treatment than to live for a few days exclusively on a citrus diet and after the fruit fast it is a wise thing for one with a tendency to liver derangements to take at least one meal a day of oranges or grapefruit until the trouble has been entirely remedied.

A citrus fast can also be used to advantage in many other diseases since it produces a rapid increase in the blood's alkalinity perhaps more speedily than any other healthful method. Not only will this exclusive diet result in increasing the alkalinity of the blood, but it will give your intestines and alimentary canal a rest and you will eliminate vast quantities of toxins from your body and will in this way assist in the cure of many disorders.

The best method is not to take too long a fast unless you are under the proper supervision, but to make up your mind to stick to the fast for about five days, during which time you should use a full glass of orange or grapefruit juice every two hours. If you will keep this regular schedule you will find that you have better results than if you are irregular.

In some disorders you may have a slight headache or breaking out on the skin or rheumatic pains for a few days due to the stirring up of systematic toxins, but you should continue on the fast until these symptoms disappear. You should, of course, use one or two enemas every day, using only plain warm water and not over a quart at a time, and you should use two sponge or shower baths daily to keep the skin pores eliminating freely.

After this fasting period you should use the regular menus outlined in my newspaper article and increase your amount of exercise daily. This regime can be used even by one in health, and it may be of assistance in warding off impending diseases.

DEMO WELCOME GIVEN HOOVER

Florida Goes Wild When President Arrives

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 22. (US)—Florida flung out its arms to Republican President-elect Hoover in the old-fashioned Democratic way today.

Over a pathway strewn with red and golden petals, He and Mrs. Hoover stepped from their special train at Miami as a presidential salute of 21 guns boomed them a welcome to the winter playground where the president-elect will rest and fish and meditate on problems of state for the next few weeks.

There was a carnival spirit in the air, blended with a touch of the old campaign enthusiasm and fervor, as the fortunate vacationists in this land of sunshine turned out in massed array to greet their distinguished visitor.

Airplanes zoomed overhead in a deep blue tropical sky; gaily decked yachts strewn along the causeway shrilled a noisy salute. Pennants and flags and banners fluttered from every building along the miles of highway which the president-elect traveled from the station to the beautiful Belle island home of J. C. Penney.

There was music at every corner, bands, buglers and fife and drum corps, from every town and city in southern Florida. The festivities started at the station, where Mr. Hoover was welcomed on behalf of Governor Doyle Carlton by a committee of Floridians headed by Morton M. Milford of Miami. The parade, headed by the American Legion fife and drum corps in overseas uniforms, formed quickly and proceeded through the densely crowded streets to city hall, where Mr. Hoover was presented by Mayor E. G. Sewell with a gigantic golden key to the city which the mayor said would also unlock the hearts of his fellow Miamians to the president-elect.

STEPHENS SETS HIGH RECORD

Breckenridge Area Produces 103 Million Barrels

Special to The Record News.

BRECKENRIDGE, Texas, Jan. 22.—During the nine years since the first producer came in on a Stephens county lease this county has sent to the world's petroleum markets approximately 103,000,000 barrels of crude.

The wells, approximately 1,100 in number, are now pumping at the rate of slightly less than 9,000 barrels daily.

The peak in production came rapidly following the discovery in 1920. The yield for 1920 was above 23,000,000 barrels, according to figures tabulated by the Gulf Production company. In 1921 the county saw a production of 31,038,000 barrels, which was the best year for the fields.

Slump in 1922

The flush began to make its inroads immediately after that year and in 1922, the pipeline runs showed a decline to 14,925,000 barrels.

In 1927, the last annual record available, Stephens county produced 3,289,000 barrels while the estimate for the 12-month period ending Dec. 31, 1928, places the yield at 3,000,000 barrels which is less than one-tenth of the production of the first year.

On account of the long lived gas wells of the section, the gasoline plants, augmented by Carbon Black industries, have prevented a slump in the county in proportion to the depreciation in oil production. These concerns employ 474 men and furnish a normal pay roll of 71,000 per month, according to recent tabulations.

County Now Active

This year has opened with activity general in every part of the county, with new fields promised and additional wells in the gas areas. It is reported that the Lone Star Gas company has contracted to drill eight more gas tests south of Breckenridge and between Lyles and Compton leases.

The Mesa Production company, Ramsey and Decker, Clark and company and C. M. Root are beginning a drilling program near the town of Breckenridge. The first two named companies are operating east of town and the latter two are busy west. The Mesa has started drilling in the north Caddo field and Ramsey and Decker are drilling on the Keathley lease southeast of Breckenridge three miles. Clark and company are drilling on their Creagh No. 1 and C. M. Root is starting his Hitson No. 2, both immediately west of the city limits and in untested territory.

It is while crude production is on the slump that the business men of Breckenridge and property owners in the county are getting in behind the irrigation project northwest about 30 miles by which it is hoped to open up for irrigation some 90,000 acres between this point and the contemplated damsite on the Clear Fork.

Oil Discussion Meets Cancelled

Special to The Record News.

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 22.—At a special meeting at noon Tuesday the officers of Kansas-Oklahoma division, Mid-Continent Oil and Gas association, voted to cancel dates for massmeetings at which the proposed conservation bills were to be adopted or rejected. The Independence, Kan., meeting was to be Friday, Jan. 25 and the Tulsa meeting on Tuesday, Jan. 29.

J. C. Denton, president, says the second cancellation is due to the fact that so many oil producers are unfamiliar with the bills. He suggests that the massmeetings be delayed until after the American Petroleum institute meets Feb. 11 at St. Louis.

Eighth Oil Well In Wichita Pool

Special to The Record News.

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 22.—Barnsdall Oil company is getting the eighth producer in the Wright field, north of Wichita, in Sedgwick county, south central Kansas. Its No. 1 Samuels, in the northwest quarter of 24-25-1e, four miles east and one mile south of the Marland Production company No. 1 Goodrich, and northeast of the discovery well, swabbed 70 barrels in three hours and then the hole filled up 450 feet with oil in 30 minutes. Howard County Test Deepened

Special to The Record News.

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Jan. 22.—Plymouth Oil company's No. 1 Kloh, Rumsey and Abrams, in Howard county, was shut down today after deepening two feet to 2,296 feet, 32 feet in the pay, late Monday. Earlier it swabbed 110 barrels of oil in two hours.

The well is in the southwest quarter of section 5, block 32, township 2 south, T. and P. Railway Co. survey, and is a one mile western extension of the area opened last August by Henshaw Oil company's No. 1-A Settles, in section 6, since purchased by American Maracaibo Oil Co.

Production of 618 barrels in 30 minutes, a rate of 25,664 barrels daily, was registered today by California company No. 1 Smith in Pecos county from 1,443 feet before being shut in for storage. It topped pay at 1,405 feet and flowed steadily from 1,440-43 feet.

The well is in the northwest corner of section 21, block 194, G. C. & S. F. Ry. Co. survey, and an east offset to Gulf Production Co's No. 13-B Smith, in the northeast corner of section 22, block 194, G. C. & S. F. Ry. Co. survey. The latter extended the Yates field a half mile south, being completed at 1,521 feet for 850 barrels hourly.

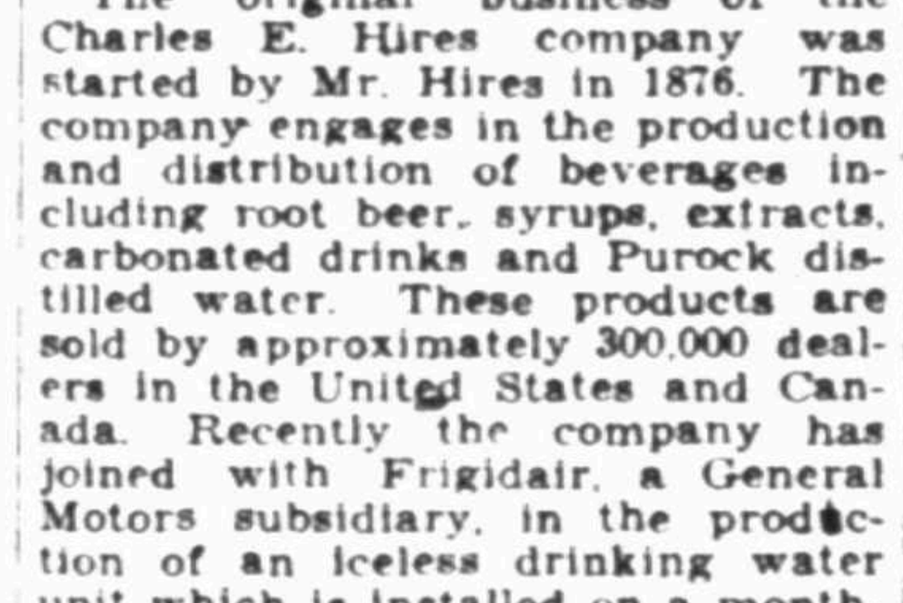

Gypsy Drills In Big Producer

Special to The Record News.

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 22.—While drilling out the plugs after standardizing, the Gypsy Oil company No. 2 Miller, in the southeast corner of 18-8-5, in the Maud field of the greater Seminole area, blew in Friday and for the past 24 hours, produced 3,420 barrels or an average of 142 barrels per hour, making it the largest well in the Maud area.

The top of the Woodford shale was encountered at 4,065 feet and the total depth is 4,109 feet. Because of a pressure behind 20,000,000 cubic feet of gas the well is making, it has evidently drilled itself into the Misener sand.

The production of the greater Seminole field was 293,793 barrels Sunday from 1,331 wells and 292,815 barrels Monday. Maud pool made a new peak Sunday, having produced 31,784 barrels, but declined 868 barrels Monday.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 22. (AP)—The cotton market was quiet again today. Moderate advances on some trade buying and covering were followed by reactions in the late trading. After selling up from 20.16 to 20.25, March reacted to 20.15 and closed at that figure. The general market closed steady net 1 point lower to 5 points higher.

The market opened steady at an advance of 1 point to a decline of 2 points. It eased slightly right after the call under near month liquidation promoted by the circulation of January notices, which were estimated about 7,400 bales. January declined to 20.10 or 4 points below yesterday's closing figures. July, after selling at 19.80 at the start, reacted to 19.78 compared with 19.74 at the close of yesterday.

The initial selling was readily absorbed and the market firmed up during the middle of the day on some trade buying and covering. The comparatively small volume of offerings seemed to promote a little covering or commission house buying. The market became more active during the afternoon when January sold up to 20.19 and July to 19.87, or about 4 to 15 points net higher on the active months.

More cotton appeared for sale around the 20 cent level for the spring positions, however and last prices showed reactions of 4 to 10 points from the best. At the close January was 1 point under March after having been about 6 points under during the day. Trading in that position will end at noon Friday. It is thought that some further notices may be issued as a little cotton is arriving for addition to the local stocks.

A private report was published estimating ginnings prior to January 16 at 13,629,000 bales. The figures were without apparent effect on the market, which some brokers think may be waiting for the official ginning report tomorrow morning. Private cables attributed a relatively steady showing of Liverpool to trade calling and Manchester buying which had absorbed some Bombay selling. According to these advices, the demand for cotton cloths from China was well sustained, but business with India was poor. Port receipts today 45,048. U. S. port stocks, 2,243,274. Exports 18,554, making 4,431,560 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 22. (AP)—Nervousness and erratic price fluctuations characterized cotton trading today due to the impending census ginning report and talk of mill curtailment. March contracts after advancing to 19.60 or 7 points up, eased off later to 19.53 then rallied again to 19.62, but some selling in final trading carried it off to 19.56 where it closed 3 points net higher. The general market closed steady net 3 points up to 2 down.

Liverpool cables were higher than due at the start here and initial trades showed gains of 3 points in response. The early firmness was shortlived, however, due to reports of circulation of additional notices for delivery of 5,000 bales of January cotton in New York and 3,100 bales here. At around yesterday's closing quotations the market encountered some support when it became apparent the notices were being promptly cared for and January sold up to 19.55, and March and May 19.60, or 4 points above the previous close.

Later the market turned quiet and prices gradually eased back under some selling promoted by talk of mill curtailment but in the last hour there was more or less covering by shorts in advance of tomorrow's ginnings report and January sold up to 19.56, March 19.62 and May 19.63, or 8 to 9 points above the lows and about as much gain over the previous close.

There was a renewal of belated long liquidation in advance of the ginning report and prices eased off 6 to 7 points from the top with January closing at 19.50, or 2 points net lower and May at 19.56, or 3 points net higher.

Stocks Regain Strength When U.S. Steel Again Takes Leadership

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Jan. 22. (US)—Stocks enjoyed a resumption of strength today after the profit-taking of Monday had been absorbed. U. S. Steel once again assumed leadership, and with it various other of the highest grade issues advanced to record levels. Money was in fairly liberal supply at 6 per cent throughout the session, and announcement of additional large "investment trusts" served only to further enthuse traders, who saw in them huge new buying power.

Steel common crossed 190, as all opinions on the stock were universally optimistic. It is stated that much of the recent heavy buying of Steel can be attributed to most favorable developments at Washington which have to do with matters other than the tax refunds.

Tariff adjustments of a nature which will be highly favorable for the entire steel industry are a probability. There are certain other tariff adjustments indirectly related to steel producers which also furnishes a basis for optimism over the steel outlook.

The steel corporation, it should be remembered, has been spending considerable money for development of by-products, particularly in the chemical and dye fields. The Washington developments have also inspired the rather sharp advances in other chemical and similar shares.

Public utility shares maintained their strength. Public Service of New Jersey featuring by advancing to a record high. This company's December statement, due Wednesday, will diclose approximately 100 per cent increase in earnings. Electric Power and Light is the favorite of a strong group which has been active in the utilities. Abitibi and International Paper advanced to the highest levels in some time on general appreciation of the fact that both enterprises are less dependent on the paper business than ever before in their history, both having tremendous power resources which are being developed.

Attention was directed to Minneapolis, St. Paul & Saulte Ste. Marie preferred as a neglected issue. Its preliminary statement for 1928 discloses a net income equivalent to over $23 a share on the preferred stock, on top of $16 a share net the previous year, a total of almost $40 per share in the last two years. No dividends are being paid on the preferred, but in view of the rather huge earnings early payments are warranted, the road being in perfect condition physically. The preferred, of which there is only a comparatively small issue, $12,600,000, is entitled to $7 dividend. The road is controlled, through stock ownership, by Canadian Pacific.

International Combustion reached a new high as confident buying by powerful interests continued. International Nickel advanced to a new high, a fraction below 70, at which level, it was stated a big block of stock was offered. Warner Bros. Pictures sold off sharply, although it was reported that a new stock offering, with attractive "rights" to shareholders, may be announced shortly.

American Smelting shares had a sharp rise to record levels, as leading copper interests switched their activities into this issue. Smelting has always been one of the most attractive of the copper shares because the company has been able to show most satisfactory earnings year after year, since its income is not dependent on any one branch of the mining business. Its profits for the current year promise to be substantially above last year. Loew's, Inc., lost several points, notwithstanding widespread report that a large-scale consolidation involving this company is a probability if present negotiations succeed. Goodyear Tire advanced several points as a growing short interest was pressed.

The outlook for this company and others in the rubber tire industry is the best in several years. The outstanding performer of the day was Johns-Manville, which soared 21 points to a new top on the highest-grade buying, inspired by knowledge of the company's tremendously increased income and assured future growth. Union Carbide had a sharp run-up on buying by the same interests responsible for Johns-Manville's performance.

TEXAS LIVESTOCK

FORT WORTH, Jan. 22. (AP)—All classes of cattle at Fort Worth today were about steady. Hogs generally 10c higher, with trading in sheep division confined mostly to lambs that were fully steady.

Steers got away to a slow demand, with very little business transacted during the early part of the session. One load of light-weight common steers sold at $10.25, or about steady. Receipts included fairly good fed steers as well as common cattle carrying fair flesh.

Bulls fully steady; lone load at $8.15, a part load at $7.90, common light bulls mostly around $6.50.

The supply of slaughter yearlings and heifers rather plentiful and included some loads of the better kind that sold at $12.25@13.50, or fully steady. The better ones sold to a good demand.

Other loads of slaughter yearlings due to sell down through the $11.00 range.

The supply of cows rather light in proportion to the total receipts. Most of the cows came in mixed loads, and outside of a few packages that sold around $9.00, nothing especially good changed hands. Trade about steady with yesterday's close. Canners and cutters steady; bulk sales at $4.50@5.75.

Most of the calves in the southern division and packer buyers took them at about steady values. A seven-car string mixed-weight calves sold at $11.25. The supply of stocker calves light. The bulk of culls sold around $4.00.

Hogs mostly 10c higher, best rail butchers at $9.25 and truck top at $9.60. The bulk of 170-250-pound butchers at $8.25@9.25; packing sows at $7.25@8.00.

Trade in the sheep division included four decks of good to choice wooled fat lambs from Oklahoma at $15.50, or steady.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 22. (AP)—(United States Department of Agriculture)—Fresh receipts of hogs were around 115,100, a decrease of 30,000 as compared with a week ago and 48,000 less than a year ago. Lighter supplies and a broad shipping outlet were responsible for an active market at 15c to 30c higher prices as compared with Monday's best average. Best light weights reached $9.45 at St. Louis for the day's top.

A slow, draggy trade featured the fed steer and yearling market and most classes were weak to unevenly lower. Weighty steers were extremely hard to move and some sales were as much as 50c lower. A few low-priced cattle went to shippers at steady to weak prices. All classes of she stock sold unevenly with values weak to 25c lower. Best weighty steers went at $14.50 at Chicago, while medium weights brought $14.25 at St. Louis. Trade in stockers and feeders displayed some weakness in face of the decline in slaughter classes. Desirable yearling stockers ranged up to $12.25 at Kansas City. Total arrivals were 38,100, against 46,937 a week ago and 41,937 a year ago.

There was a rather broad outlet for fat lambs and prices were strong to 25c higher. The top reached $17.25 on choice grades at Chicago. Mature classes were scarce, and values were generally strong to 25c higher, choice fat ewes selling up to $10.75 at Chicago. CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, Jan. 22. (AP)—Fifteen below zero temperatures tonight threatening big damage to the domestic winter crop sent wheat values whirling upward today, outdoing all season record completely. Buying of wheat future deliveries took on large proportions and was stimulated also as a result of continued talk of bullish aspects of farm relief legislation looked for at Washington.

Prices for wheat closed buoyant, 2⅞ to 2⅞ cents a bushel net higher. Corn finished at ¼ to ½ net decline, oats ⅛ cent to ⅝ cent advance, and provisions varying from 2 cents setback to 20 cents gain.

At first, the wheat market showed a downward trend on account of Liverpool quotations failing to reflect yesterday's advances in price on this side of the Atlantic. Corn weakness, resulting from reports that rains had given the Argentine corn belt timely relief from drouth, tended likewise temporarily to press wheat values down.

Apprehension of severe winter killing of wheat, duplicating perhaps experiences of a year ago at this time, soon began to hoist the market, and to bring about much increased buying both from previous sellers and from new speculative traders. A decrease of 6,298,000 bushels in world stocks of wheat was a later bullish influence. Under such conditions, and with domestic millers reported buying, the day's top prices were reached just before the close, with the finish at virtually the apex, more than 3½ cents up from the early low level of the day and about 14 cents above quotations that were current after Jan. 1.

Corn prices rallied with wheat but averaged lower for the day owing to heavy profit taking sales as well as to reports of rains in Argentina. Late private advices said that contrary to early reports the rains were light and that dry hot weather continued in many sections of Argentina. There was considerable selling of corn at times against purchases of wheat. Meanwhile Eastern shipping demand for corn today was the best in many weeks. Oats were active and higher sympathizing with wheat, July oats touching a new top price for the season.

HEAVY POULTRY SALES LISTED

Towns in Wichita Area Move Flocks

Practically the entire supply of fresh vegetables now being offered to local retailers is coming from the Rio Grande valley, the last remaining local production having been exhausted, according to produce dealers. The new crop in the valley is just now fully matured, it was said, and is providing an unusually good variety of bunch vegetables.

Tomatoes and Mexican peppers grown on the west coast of old Mexico also are being offered now.

Chickens continue to pour into the Wichita Poultry and Egg company plant, a solid carload of live hens arriving from Memphis Tuesday morning. Turkeys and chickens from Graham, Breckenridge and other points on the Wichita Falls & Southern railway are moving in, contributing to an unusually heavy season here. Almost 20,000 birds were on hand Tuesday, with more than 40 persons in the killing and picking rooms endeavoring to keep pace with the influx of poultry.

But two, at least, are easily explainable: We read these Want Ad Columns because we know that most anything we need is sure to be found here at a lower price than we expected to pay; we use ads of our own here because we know that quick results are almost sure to follow.

VIKING READY TO FLY NORTH

Dr. Nansen Lays Plans for Zeppelin Venture

NEW YORK, Jan. 22. (INS)—A tall, handsome, kindly norseman, strikingly reminiscent of the vikings from whom he is descended, arrived in New York today with plans for a north pole expedition to be made in 1930 in the Graf Zeppelin.

He is Dr Fridejof Nansen, 67, long noted in scientific circles as one of the most daring and successful of the world's explorers of the far corners of the terrestial universe.

Seeks Assistance

Dr. Nansen is here for the specific purpose of interesting American scientists in the Zeppelin expedition, which, incidentally, will be one of the most ambitious projects of its kind ever attempted, and gaining the co-operation of the American government in erecting a mooring mast and flying field in Nome, Alaska.

The hardy northlander is very enthusiastic about the contemplated trip and he has many interesting ideas regarding polar expeditions.

Bars Liquor

For instance, he does not believe that men who make up the personnel of such trips should carry liquor with them. Alcoholic beverages, he contends, are not strengthening to men living close to nature.

In discussing this idea of his with ship news reporters, Dr. Nansen recalled that the Norwegian government once entertained somewhat similar beliefs and established a prohibition law there much like the Volstead act. The experiment was a failure, he said, because the majority of the people refused to obey the law.

COURT HEARS SEVEN CASES

Liquor Warrant Upheld In Judge's Ruling

Evidence for the state in the trial of Curtis Weaver for possession of whiskey was completed Tuesday afternoon after Judge Allan D. Montgomery had overruled objections from the defense, alleging that the warrant on which the Weaver home was searched was not adequate.

Bob Crain, attorney for Weaver, sought to prove an "abuse of discretion" on the part of the magistrate issuing the warrant, claiming that the complaint was brought on the evidence of only one person, whereas the statute requires the testimony of two "creditable individuals." Judge Montgomery, in overruling the objections, admitted the testimony of the officer making the search of the apartment.

Wife and Baby Attend

Mrs. Curtiss and her 18-month-old son sat with the defendant during the trial.

The case against Weaver was the seventh called for trial in the 30th court Tuesday. Willie Gibson, negro, plead guilty to two of three burglary indictments, and was convicted on the third. He was given five years on each case, the sentences to run concurrently.

Sam Manicchia and Paul Reneau, jointly indicted for the burglary of Pond's laundry on the night of Dec. 9, were each given a two-year sentence after they plead guilty and applied for a suspended sentence. The application for suspension was denied.

Charles Allen, 18, negro, was given a two-year suspended sentence after he pleaded guilty to burglary charges.

The trial of Walter Pointer, negro, charged with assault with intent to kill Ed Ellis, white man, was continued on the motion of the defendant early Tuesday morning.

Attorney Shows Speed

The state, represented by Sam Spence, district attorney, has disposed of 22 indictments in the convictions obtained during the first two days of this week in the 30th court. Wednesday, the case of Jess Jones, charged with the theft of an automobile, will be called after the Weaver trial has gone to the jury.

City to License Trash Haulers by Numbers

Housewives who have satisfactory trash haulers but who don't know their names, may hereafter recommend them to their neighbors by their numbers, it was learned Tuesday at the office of the city manager.

A requisition from the office of Dr. H. D. Filmore, city health officer, for a lot of metal numbers, revealed that the sanitary department is to order the numbering of all licensed trash haulers at once.

It will be possible in the future to report offending wagons or for the business of good service wagons to grow, it was said at the Memorial auditorium.

Dr. Gaines B. Hall To Address Lions Club

Dr. Gaines B. Hall, pastor of the First Southern Presbyterian church, will be the principal speaker at the regular luncheon meeting of the Lions club Wednesday noon at the Y. W. C. A. rooms.

Honey Boy and Sassafras from station KGKO will provide entertainment.

'I'M GRATEFUL TO ORGATONE,' SAYS WICHITAN

"I Don't Ever Remember Feeling As Well As I Do Now, Since Taking New Medicine," Says Mrs. H. H. Hopkins

"Orgatone has done me a world of good and I'm now feeling just fine," said Mrs. H. H. Hopkins, wife of the well known field superintendent of the drilling rigs of the Petroleum Producers Oil company, and residing at 3100 Miami, while talking with the Orgatone nurse recently at Allison's Drug Store.

"My stomach and liver bothered me for several years," she continued "and I suffered with terrible pains from the back of my head down to the small of my back. My liver was inactive, and I was tired and worn out all the time. I couldn't sleep hardly any and what sleep I did get didn't seem to do me any good and I would get up in the mornings without any energy and I just hated the very thoughts of work. I didn't have any appetite and what little food I did eat, did not agree with me, it formed gas on my stomach, and gave me a puffed up uncomfortable feeling. I was just going down hill every day, and it seemed as if I could never find any medicine to relieve me or bring me out of my run down condition.

"One day I noticed in the local paper here, where Chief McClure had endorsed Orgatone and I too, decided to try it. It has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken and I have certainly taken my share of it. I have tried everything, and nothing ever did me any good until I got Orgatone. I am certainly grateful to it. I eat anything I want now, my food digests properly, and the gas does not form on my stomach at all now. I've taken a little over one bottle of Orgatone and never realized it could do anyone so much good. I am giving this statement to the paper because I hope a man takes it, that I know of, who is suffering as I was, for I know if he does it will certainly help him. I feel like a new woman. I want every one to profit by my experience and get them a bottle of Orgatone. Orgatone is the most wonderful medicine I have ever taken and I shall continue taking it as long as it helps me as it is."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but a new scientific treatment containing no alcoholic or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Wichita Falls, exclusively by the Allison's Drug Store under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative. Out-of-town customers are being supplied promptly by mail upon receipt of price, one bottle $1.25 or six bottles $6.25.—Adv.

A scene from "Hit the Deck," Vincent Youman's musical comedy, coming to the Majestic theater Monday, Jan. 28.

The seat sale for the musical comedy, "Hit the Deck," which is coming to the Majestic theater Monday night, is now on. As the Majestic is a small house, it is well to get seats early if good seats are wanted. The show is coming here with a mighty good reputation and record. Vincent Youmans, composer of the music of the show, also is the producer. That's an unusual thing in the theater world.

Sophie Tucker, musical comedy and vaudeville actress of note, is married for the third time. It leaked out the other day in Chicago when a plastic surgeon and beauty doctor, seeking some free publicity for himself, tipped off the Chicago Tribune that the famous Sophie was in Chi to have her face lifted. "Just having a few wrinkles removed so they won't show in the talkies on which I am to start soon," the gay young 40-year-old comedienne popped off as soon as an inquiring reporter popped in. "I think my hubby will like me better, also," she added.

"What? You got another husband, Sophie?" the reporter asked.

"Dear me, suh, yes," Sophie replied. "I got him two weeks ago down in Kentucky, but hadn't intended to let it slip. He's a small merchant in Noo Yawk and sells dresses."

Now Sophie is on her way to California, and the talkies. She has always liked to talk—never bashful—and her talkie should be a wow!

Bebe Daniels, having served out her long contract with Paramount, says in Photoplay magazine that she hasn't signed with anyone yet, but that one thing certain is that she will not appear in any more comedies. "It's drama for me in the future," she says.

That's the end of Bebe. Distant fields always look greener and some look greenest. In this case terribul dramer seems greenest. Many a good actor loses his career when he throws up something in which he is successful to try something he would just "like to do."

Dolores Del Rio plays the part of a Russian peasant girl in her newest picture, "The Red Dance," coming to the Majestic Saturday. Eastern press notices on the show say that Ivan Linow, a young Russian giant who stands six foot four, just about "steals the show" from Miss Del Rio and Charles Farrell, who plays the lead opposite her.

Seats for the three Shakespearean plays to be given by Fritz Leiber at the Memorial auditorium Friday and Saturday night are now on sale at the Renfro drug store, it was announced Tuesday evening.

Five-Year Advertising Program To Boost Small Farms, Weeks Tells Club

Persistent advertising will be required for the first five years in developing the intensive farming colony on tracts near this city, after which period the community will keep itself going by its own momentum, according to Charles Weeks, principal figure in the movement, in his address to the Ad club Tuesday noon.

Members of the Hoo-Hoo club, local lumbermen's organization, also were present at the luncheon.

Mr. Weeks declared that various systems of irrigation, including sub-irrigation, sprinkling and flooding, will be tried out on the lands now designated for the small farm colonization program. Experimental research also will be made with various kinds of fruits and vegetables to determine the maximum variety which can be grown successfully in this locality, it was said.

Outlines of his plan for a self-supporting school of intensive farming and poultry to be instituted in the small farm community also was discussed by the speaker.

Wichita Falls to Join Other Texas Cities in Opposing Utility Bill

Wichita Falls will join the Texas League of Municipalities in opposition to the public utilities control bill, introduced in the state senate last week, which proposes to take control of the utilities away from the cities and vest it in the Texas Railway commission, according to George D. Fairtrace, city manager.

Mr. Fairtrace explained that the action is being taken by the city through and as a member of the league.

Unanimous opposition to the bill was voted by city attorneys of 20 or more cities at a conference held in Austin early last week.

"This bill will probably be supported by few, if any, of the cities of Texas," Mr. Fairtrace said.

"It takes away from the city the home rule right to regulate and control utilities. Just what control the Texas railroad commission might give us is problematical.

"Wichita Falls is opposed to any such measure. I believe the local utilities are among the best in the state. Why take a chance?

"I don't know of a single city represented in the Texas League of Municipalities which favors the bill, and I feel certain that it will be defeated overwhelmingly."

Bewhiskered Peeping Tom Found Insane By County Jury

A 60-year-old man, adorned with an impressive growth of auburn whiskers, was convicted of lunacy in the county court Tuesday afternoon after witnesses had testified that he had hidden in a bedroom to watch a woman in her morning dressing and had described the spectacle as "excellent drama."

The principal witness in the trial was the husband of the woman thus spied upon. The bewhiskered old man, a former employe, had settled himself upon the family as a permanent guest, the husband testified, and his peeping Tom activities were only a part of his "pranks."

Walter K. Campbell Elected New President

Walter K. Campbell was elected president of the Wichita club for the year 1929 at the first meeting of the new board of directors which was held Tuesday noon in the club rooms.

Other officers elected are David G. Gray, first vice president; William N. Bonner, second vice president, and Carter McGregor, secretary-treasurer.

The affairs of the club were thoroughly discussed, and, considering the change in the management and the removal to the new home, the condition in every respect was found to be quite satisfactory. Thanks were extended to the retiring officers, particularly to Mrs. Horrace Robbins and the committee of women who were responsible for the success of the annual meeting and party.

Special mention was made of the decoration of the tables and the preparation of the food which was so tastily arranged for the annual meeting. It was declared that the display was equal to that to be found in the large eastern hotels, all of which was made possible through the courtesy of Fenton Baker, proprietor of the Baker hotel at Dallas, in allowing Charlie King, garde manager of the Baker hotel, Dallas, to assist in preparing and presenting the dinner. Victor, the club chef, who was so well known at the Country club, was also complimented for his work in preparing the dinner.

A. A. Dickson was reappointed manager, with Mrs. Eva Shelton as assistant secretary. Both were praised for their efficient service.

It is estimated that approximately 1,000 druggists from every part of West Texas will attend the convention, Mr. Harrison stated. A meeting of those interested in the entertainment of the visiting druggists has been called for Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Kemp hotel to make preliminary arrangements.

Tax Exempt Voters Urged to Get Receipts

Citizens of Wichita county who have become 60 years of age since Jan. 1, 1928, are entitled to poll tax exemption and are urged to call for their certificates at the office of the county tax collector, Roy Jones, deputy, announced Tuesday.

The certificates, which will allow their holders to vote in the city elections in April and in all elections called through the year, must be called for before Feb. 1, Mr. Jones explained. He added that the exemption papers must be renewed each year, certificates issued last year being no longer valid. He said 1,386 certificates of exemption were issued to the voters over 60 and just 21 last year.

Fritz Leiber Veteran Actor

Three Plays of Shakespeare To Be Presented Here

Fritz Leiber, generally recognized as the leading American exponent of Shakespearean drama today and the successor to Robert Mantell, has portrayed Shakespearean roles all of his theatrical life with the exception of his first two years, when he served an apprenticeship in a Chicago stock company. Mr. Leiber will appear at the Wichita Falls Memorial auditorium in "Hamlet," "The Merchant of Venice" and "Macbeth" on Friday and Saturday.

Ben Greet, head of the Ben Greet players, had an engagement in Chicago while young Leiber was in stock work there. Leiber asked for a tryout and made good, with the result he was given a permanent job playing small roles. He toured the country for four years with the Ben Greet players and gained a knowledge of Shakespeare which served him in good stead later.

For one year he played with Julia Marlowe when Southern was heading his own company. Then for 10 successive years he was leading man with Robert Mantell. Then, before he headed his own company, Mr. Leiber played with David Warfield in "Venderdecken."

Since 1919 Mr. Leiber has produced most of the Shakespearean plays for George Ford, under whose management he is to appear at the auditorium here.

H. C. Cheshire, who is bringing the company to West Texas for its only presentation in this portion of the state this season by a major company, announced Tuesday that many study clubs, schools, woman's clubs and organizations interested in Shakespeare have engaged blocks of seats for all three performances to be given here this week.

COURT ENDS OIL LEASE SUIT

Property Valued at $100,000 Involved in Case

The United Royalties company was awarded one-half interest in a lease of 20 acres of Wichita county oil land in a verdict returned in the 89th district court Tuesday. Complete possession of the lease was claimed by Wayne Hammon, named as defendant in the suit of the United Royalties company.

The property, valued at $100,000, was leased through Mr. Hammon, oil operator, the company claiming that by the terms of a verbal contract one-half the price and one-half the returns from the land were to go to the plaintiff. Four producing wells have recently been drilled in on the disputed lease, according to the maps of the defendant.

The case went to the jury in Judge P. A. Martin's court Tuesday mornnig. The plaintiff is instructed by the terms of the verdict to reimburse Mr. Hammon for one-half of all the money he had expended on the lease. The parties to the contract are expected to agree on the amount, but Judge Martin will rule on any disputed question in the accounting.

DANDRUFF
A Sure Way to End It

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—Adv.
