Regime Seeks Accord In Berlin Issue Strategy

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Kennedy administration plans a determined effort in Paris next week to win full Allied agreement to a strategy of negotiation with Russia for a Berlin settlement.

French President Charles de Gaulle holds the key to agreement. If he blocks development of a joint Allied diplomatic effort at this showdown stage, the United States, Britain and West Germany will have to decide whether they should proceed without French cooperation.

There has been some talk in official quarters here that the United States might decide to move on its own to initiate new exploratory talks with the Soviets if there seems to be no other choice.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk, following a late afternoon conference with President Kennedy, is due in Paris Sunday for a week-long round of Allied meetings.

The Paris meetings Monday and Tuesday will be among the foreign ministers of the United States, Britain, France and West Germany—the four Western powers primarily concerned with Berlin. The latter part of the week will be devoted to sessions of the 15-nation North Atlantic Treaty Council.

U.S. hopes for winning De Gaulle to the strategy of negotiation rest in the first instance on German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, who conferred here with Kennedy Nov. 20-22.

Kennedy and Adenauer reportedly agreed that it was desirable to work toward a negotiated Berlin settlement, as an alternative to possibly increasing risks of an East-West nuclear conflict over West Berlin.

Adenauer's talks with De Gaulle in Paris this weekend are regarded as critically important.

De Gaulle's view is that the Russians created the crisis with their demands for an end to the presence of Allied forces in West Berlin and for a new international status for the city. De Gaulle has taken the position that the Soviets therefore should take the lead in making proposals for a compromise settlement.

The United States and Britain, while agreeing on the cause of the crisis, have advocated an exactly opposite procedure. Their view is that since nuclear war might be the alternative to a peaceful settlement, it is of the utmost importance to negotiate for two reasons:

1. To find out whether there is any possible compromise formula which would preserve the freedom and independence of West Berlin under the protecting presence of Western troops.

2. To demonstrate to the world that the Western powers are doing everything possible to avoid a conflict and to obtain a reasonable arrangement.

In October, Khrushchev lifted his year-end deadline for a showdown on the whole range of Berlin issues, though his position has been that he does not intend to wait indefinitely before acting.

His lifting of the deadline, however, eased the threat. If the new round of discussions in Paris fails to produce agreement between the other chief allied powers and France, the problems of what to do next may occupy the attention of Kennedy and Macmillan when they meet in Bermuda Dec. 21-22.

UF Campaign
Here Reaches
53.1 Per Cent

The Scurry County United Fund Campaign eased past the half-way mark in contributions and pledges Saturday.

Figures compiled at a report meeting accounted for $20,164.73, or 53.1 per cent of the $38,000 goal. E. H. Williamson, general campaign chairman, again reminded workers that efforts must be redoubled if the campaign is to be completed on schedule, Dec. 15.

All divisions in the campaign were represented in the Saturday reports, although some had been working only one day.

The advance gifts division reported a total of $13,237, or 74.1 per cent of its goal. Other divisions reporting included the professional division, $400, or 26.3 per cent of its goal; branch house division, $905, or 23 per cent; school division, $2,429.92, or 91.4 per cent; special gifts, $982, or 32.3; employee gifts, $1,609.63, or 28.2 per cent; public employees, $388, or 25.3 per cent; women's division, $77.38, or 10.2 per cent; general division, $69.80, or 4.6 per cent; county division, $66, or 3.4 per cent.

Badger Robertson, chairman of the county division, announced appointment of another community captain for the drive. Mrs. Edgar Shuler will head up the drive in the Ennis Creek community.

TV LOC CARRIED
A DAY IN ADVANCE

Beginning today, the Snyder Daily News will run its daily log of TV programs one day in advance of the effective dates. In other words, each issue of the newspaper will carry the log for the following day so that readers will have the full log before a day of programming begins. This also will enable rival subscribers who get their Daily News by mail the morning following publication to receive current TV logs. Consequently, today's issue carries TV logs for both Sunday and Monday programs, one in this section and another in Section B.

VIEWING ANCIENT PAINTINGS on the wall of Buffalo Draw causes Daphne Short, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Short, to wonder who, when, and why. The paintings are in pretty good shape except for where trigger-happy shooters have used them for target practice.

Stones Used
In Early Era
Stir Guesses

By DICK ROBERTS

Traditionally news stories tell who, what, when, where, and why. But when one looks into the past at what ancient civilizations have left behind the only question that can be answered with any certainty is "where."

On a hillside just over the Scurry County line in Fisher County lie stones which were used by people. But when? And for what? And why right there? We can only guess. Rough outlines of what must have been buildings or special areas still can be traced in the almost buried stones. Some stones with special shapes can be pretty well identified as to use since some primitive tribes still use similar tools.

But it took a lot of work to place some of the larger stones just on. Somebody wanted them where they are very badly. Why? And why did they paint them? And why did they paint them where they did? Pictures on the walls of Buffalo Draw (formerly known as Buffalo Creek) on the old Pymon Ranch were drawn by someone who either had to cling like a mountain goat as he did his work, or build a scaffold just for the purpose.

The area where the paintings are still to be seen was, if we're guessing right, a stop on an old Indian trail running from southeast to northwest through the area. Early records speak of "Painted Rock Springs" as a stopover point. And within the memory of old timers the water of Buffalo Draw ran clear and good. So it's logical.

Were our ancient artists just indulging their talent, or was there more to it?

Perhaps the land's a little dryer now than it was then, but generally it looks about the same. Imagination can go wild as we stand where those ancient people stood and look at the scenery they knew well. But all it takes is a glance at the sky and the white slash of a jet's contrail to make the present—and the future—seem real again.

Marrying Fool Is Sued For Annulment

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Franklin J. Mills, a self-styled "marrying fool" at 8 who has acquired at least 19 wives and several children, was sued for annulment by a recent bride. In a complaint, filed Friday, Mrs. Grace Morden Mills, 62, a motel operator, said Mills married her only 10 days after moving into her motel as a tenant. She said he led her to believe she was a young physician, a nurse and, other hospital employees, six patients, and five visitors.

TRYING OUT A GRINDING STONE discovered on the site of an ancient dwelling, Daphne Short finds that the good old days of way back then were probably not much fun after all.

Hospital Fire
Under Probe

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Investigators remained puzzled Saturday over the cause of the disastrous Hartford hospital fire that killed 15 persons.

The hospital itself began the slow, arduous job of returning to its former routine of hospital life.

Hartford County Coroner Louis W. Schaefer said some of the bodies showed varying degrees of burns but death in all cases was the result of carbon monoxide poisoning and smoke inhalation. More than 100 persons—patients, visitors and hospital personnel—were trapped in rooms along the corridor when several hundred flames leapt from the blaze.

Meanwhile, the Fire Department and State Police resumed a sifting within the building to look for the cause of the fire and to learn some lessons on preventing a repetition of the blaze. The hearing began at 2 p.m. Friday, only two hours after the height of the fire.

Some hospital officials suggested that a lighted cigarette may have been tossed down the trash chute in which the blaze started. Another suggested that escape gas may have turned the small chute fire into a holocaust.

Cotton Quota Snyder Backs Highway Assn. Notices Go To Farmers

Notices of individual farm acreage allotments for the 1962 upland cotton crop have been mailed to farmers in Scurry County, according to Dee Pylant, chairman of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation county committee. He said that any questions about the allotments should be taken up immediately with the County ASC committee.

The chairman declared that the intention is to let farmers know how the allotment program will affect their farms well in advance of the Dec. 12 referendum on marketing quotas for the 1962 upland cotton crop. A favorable vote by at least two-thirds of the growers voting is necessary in order to keep the quotas in effect.

Growers eligible to vote are all farmers who engaged in the production of upland cotton in 1961. If the vote is favorable, Pylant explained, quotas will apply to the 1962 upland cotton crop, with penalties on any "excess" cotton produced, and support to growers who comply with their farm allotments will be available at the full effective level—within a range of 65 to 90 per cent of parity.

If the vote is unfavorable there will be no quotas or penalties on the 1962 upland cotton crop, and price support to growers who comply with their farm allotments will be available at 50 per cent of parity.

Scurry County received an allotment of 72,612 acres for distribution to growers in producing their 1962 upland cotton crop. This represents the county's share of the national allotment of 18,101,718 acres.

Snyder Backs Highway Assn.

Snyder went "over the top" in its U. S. Highway 180 Association membership drive this year, officials of the organization have reported.

Snyder had been assigned a quota of $500, and memberships here accounted for $517.50.

The funds derived from memberships here helped provide a total of $4,160.64 for the association's budget during the period from April 1 to Nov. 10.

Meanwhile, the U. S. 180 Association was conducting possibly its most active and most fruitful program. Approval was finally obtained for extending the U. S. 180 designation beyond El Paso to the Grand Canyon in Arizona. The association had sought this designation for years, and its approval provides the booster organization with new and expanded opportunities to promote tourist travel on U. S. 180.

Katangan Troop Assembly Attacked By U. N. Planes

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga (AP)—Two U.N. jet planes attacked the post office in the middle of Elisabethville with incendiary shells and rockets Saturday as Katangan troops assembled there for a new attack on U.N. headquarters.

There was serious damage, but no casualties were reported. The strafing followed other attack runs by U.N. jets which hit the Katanga radio station and swept over Elisabethville University and a police camp in the northern outskirts Friday.

A joint communique issued in Leopoldville by the Congo central government and the United Nations denounced any design of military conquest of Katanga or other "warlike aims." It said the two sides agreed that "after restoration of law and order and elimination of the dangerous influence of mercenaries" in Katanga the Congo government would seek a political solution. The communique was issued after a conference between Dr. Sture Linner, head of the U.N. Congo mission, and top Congo leaders.

several hours, practically cutting Elisabethville off from the world, and destroyed the transmission building with four rockets and with cannon shells. Two engineers in the building ran for their lives. Later a new power line restored transmission.

Two Indian Canberras made five runs each over the university and police camp in the northern suburbs Friday but university officials said the students were in their hostels at the time and no one was injured.

Heavy Toll Is Forecast

AUSTIN (AP)—The director of the Department of Public Safety estimated Saturday that 173 persons will die violently in Texas during the Christmas-New Year holiday season.

Col. Homer Garrison said of these 88 will be traffic deaths, 40 suicides and homicides and 45 in other accidents.

Garrison designated the period from 12:01 a.m. Saturday Dec. 23, through 11:59 p.m. Monday, Jan. 1, as the official time for "Operation Deathwatch," the DPS tabulation of fatalities designed to aim extra safety hazards of the holiday season.

He said the highway patrol will be augmented during this period.

The attack on the post office was the first inside Elisabethville and was intended to scatter a mass assembly of Katangan renegades who were being harangued to attack U.N. headquarters, U.N. sources said.

A nearby store was set afire and the shots barely missed three hotels.

The jets, Indian Canberras bombers, circled for 20 minutes, then streaked for the post office. Their attack caused practically every Katangan soldier in town to open fire with mortars, machineguns and rifles, and one Canberra was reported slightly damaged.

Pupil Solicitors Must Have Cards

Steps have been taken by Snyder Public Schools to provide identification cards for students when they are involved in any type of school-related solicitation. The identification cards will be put into use beginning Monday at the Snyder High School, according to Bob Clinton, principal, who presented the proposal to the school board several weeks ago.

Clinton said that whenever a school-related organization launches any type of solicitation campaign, those participating will be issued identification cards listing the name of the student, the purpose of the solicitation and the date of issue. An identification card requires the signature of the principal for validation.

Clinton said that no students, except those issued cards, will have authority to solicit in behalf of any school organization. At the same time, the principal said that efforts would be made to keep such solicitation campaigns to a minimum within the school, and that the identification cards will help reach this objective.

Judge Dunagan To Seek State Post

TYLER—Otis T. Dunagan, the 53-year-old state district judge who put the N.A.A.C.P. under permanent injunction in Texas, today announced as a candidate for judge of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin.

He is seeking the position now held by W. A. Morrison.

A district judge here for 20 years without opposition in election years, Judge Dunagan is also the jurist who ordered the disbarment of former Randall County Judge Roy Joe Stevens, central figure in a legislative investigation into alleged vice and corruption in and around the West Texas town of Canyon.

The disbarment ruling was not appealed. The N.A.A.C.P. injunction ruling was sent to the Texas Court of Civil Appeals, but was not prosecuted and Judge Dunagan's ruling was upheld.

Both sides in the N.A.A.C.P. case highly-praised Judge Dunagan for his fairness at the end of the long hearing here.

Judge Dunagan's announcement today begins another era in his political and public life which began at the age of 22 when he was elected to the Texas Legislature.

While a young legislator, he wrote the state's first driver's license law, the law granting absentee voting rights to persons physically unable to come to the polls and the depression-era law permitting payment of delinquent taxes without the required payment of the accumulated penalties and interest.

Financially unable to attend college, Judge Dunagan studied in the Texas Supreme Court's library while a Texas Legislator and was admitted to the State Bar in 1935. He maintained a law office in Fort Worth for two years before returning to East Texas.

OTIS T. DUNAGAN

He is a member of the Texas Supreme Court's advisory committee on rules of civil procedure and is secretary-treasurer of the Judicial Section of the State Bar of Texas.

Judge Dunagan is a member of the board of deacons of Tyler's First Baptist Church and is an associate teacher of the church's Radio Bible Class. He previously served as chairman of the board of deacons.

Mrs. Dunagan is the former Miss Louise Thomas of Fort Worth. The Dunagans have a son, Otis T. Dunagan Jr., news director for an Austin radio station.

Eddy Phyl of Snyder was named to the all-tournament team.

Sweetwater jumped to a 20-0 advantage in the first quarter and was never behind. The Tigers were 1-0 for the first time. They were somewhat cold from the field, but hit 19 of 23 free tosses, while the Mustangs cashed in on 14 of 23 from the charity line.

Steve Fier meshed 8 field goals and two extra points for 12 points to pace the Tigers in scoring. Jimmy Tindall had 8 field goals and three extra points for 18 points to lead the Mustangs.

The Tigers were nudged out of the championship race Friday night when Andrews scored a last-second field goal to take a 47-46 decision.

Friday's game against Andrews was one that would tug at one's heartstrings, a disputed affair in which Snyder held the upper hand until the final second of play when the sky came tumbling down in riotous Mustang Gym.

Prior to the game-winning goal the Mustangs had held only one lead—that being by 2-0 in the first

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP)—Dale Hall was dismissed Saturday as Army's football coach because of the failure of his teams to develop into a winning annual season classic. His contract still had another year to run.

The 37-year-old coach from Parsons, Kan., took over the Cadet gridiron forces, as the successful Col. Earl H. Blaik, at the start of the 1960 season, after successively lost to the Middies 43-12, 17-12 and 13-7. The third defeat was administered only last Saturday at Philadelphia as President Kennedy and 100,000 other fans watched the struggle.

In making the announcement, Col. Emory S. Adams, Army athletic director, said that Hall, an outstanding halfback under Blaik in the 1940's would be paid in full for the remaining year. Hall originally signed a three-year pact but it was extended a year ago to include the 1962 season.

Col. Adams also said that in seeking a successor Army would not be bound by its graduate system of the past and that "as far as we are concerned the field is wide open."

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Bo Hagan of Rice, Claude Gilstrap of Arlington State and Hayden Fry of Arkansas were among those who were interviewed regarding the head coach job at Southern Methodist University.

Athletic Director Matty Bell said Saturday the three—Hagan, assistant coach at Rice and formerly of Southern Methodist, Gilstrap, head coach of Arlington State, Fry, former Baylor assistant now assistant at Arkansas—would talk to him and the faculty committee on athletics.

Hagan will be here Monday, Gilstrap Tuesday and Fry Wednesday.

SAN BENITO, Tex. (AP)—

Loretta Kay Plyant Becomes Bride Of Mr. Raymond Wayne Smith, Here

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Plyant, 2100 Forty-first Street, was the setting for the marriage of their daughter, Loretta Kay, to Raymond Wayne Smith on December 1, at 7:30 p.m.

Rodents Become Tree Tasters As Cold Gnaws

Off the screen and in the backyard, cartoonland's endearing rabbits, meadow mice and ground squirrels are anything but gentle and lovable. They turn into unwitting tree killers when the cold days of winter sweep in.

They're compulsive wood eaters and nibbling them with tidbits left on the ground will do no good. They'll still dine on the bark of trees and buds and twigs and shrubs. Without half trying, hungry rodents frequently can match the devastation caused by insect borers.

There are ways of making rodents obey ground rules. The most effective means of safeguarding the edible landscaping is also the most troublesome for the homeowner. It's building "iron curtains" around valuable trees and shrubs, especially the thin-barked and newly transplanted. Hardware cloth or wire screening should encircle tree trunks or stem plants high enough to discourage rabbits and deep enough to prevent burrowing.

Homeowners averse to arming woody pets may find chemical repellents the answer. A number of sprays on the market are reasonably effective. These have odors disagreeable to the rodents. Since their effectiveness wears off in time, the chemicals must be applied at fairly regular intervals.

Rodents may be the classical "rodents" of "rod" gardens, but they loom as real-life "beasties" in the home back yard.

A Hep Homemaker? Grade Yourself

How does the teen-age newlywed rate on her three Cs—cooking, cleaning, conversation—all essential to that happy home life?

Setting up housekeeping may be a wee bit of a change for a teenager whose mother acted as chef, housekeeper and alarm clock winder. When Mom tried to tell her how to boil water, she didn't listen. Looking for something new in the way of a room divider?

Why not try clay flower pots? The idea comes from Dell Doty, superintendent of Forestry, Parks and Playgrounds for the city of Colorado Springs, Colo. He's not just talking about it, either. He has made this ingenious use of stacked red clay flower pots to build attractive space dividers for the lobby of the new Parks and Recreation Department Building in his city. And he thinks the same

Baked Peach Pudding

4 thin slices bread (crusts removed and cut into 1/4-inch squares)
1 can (1 pound) peach halves (drained and cut into 1/4-inch pieces)
2 tablespoons light raisins (rinsed in hot water and drained)

2 eggs
1/4 cup sugar
1/4 cup milk
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

4 drops almond extract
Lay bread, peaches and raisins in 6 large custard cups. Beat eggs and sugar until thickened and lemon colored; beat in milk, vanilla and almond extract; pour over preparation in custard cups.

Cover cups with foil; place in a shallow pan; add enough hot water to come up to half the height of the cups. Bake in a hot (425 degrees) oven 25 minutes or until custard is set—about 25 minutes. Unmold and serve with Lemon Sauce. Makes 6 servings.

principle can be followed in making room dividers in the home. The framework for the divider consists of one-inch hollow square steel tubing stock welded together to form a rectangle. The four dividers in the Colorado Springs building are 3 feet high and vary in width, depending on how many rows of flower pots are used. Six rows of 3-inch flower pots have been used in one divider, 11 in another, 17 in another and 25 in the other.

Holes are drilled through the top and bottom parts of the frame. Steel rods run vertically through these holes. The flower pots are stacked alternately upside down and rightside up, with the rods running through the drainage holes of the pots. A surprisingly interesting effect is thus created.

The holes in the bottom part of the frame are drilled only part way, so as to form sockets into which the steel rods fit snugly. The holes in the top part of the frame are drilled completely through. This enables the maker to maneuver the rods through the top holes for proper placement of the flower pots.

While the metal frames in Doty's dividers were welded together, you can use metal stock which takes bolts or some other building material. The frames should be secured to the ceiling and the floor, although this will not be necessary if the dividers are no more than 3 feet in height.

Many variations of design are possible, since clay pots are available in sizes of from one to 10 inches. You can also obtain colored, glazed or other types of pots, although the soft color of the natural clay pot is very attractive.

Question: An old kitchen chair that has been in our family for many years has one leg a little shorter than the others. Although it has been unsturdy for years, we have never done anything about it. Now we would like to try. How do we go about it? The legs of the chair are round and painted a dark brown.

Answer: There are a number of ways in which the short chair leg can be lengthened. One of these is to measure the diameter of the bottom of the leg and then see whether you can buy a wooden dowel of the same diameter. Cut off a piece of the dowel long enough to make up the difference between the short leg and the other legs. Glue it to the bottom of the leg and let it dry until it is set.

A disadvantage of this is that the bottom of the chair leg may not be flat across and therefore won't make good contact with the floor.

A method that can be used regardless of the condition of the bottom of the chair leg is to attach wood putty or plastic wood to the leg. Shape the putty carefully, making it just a bit fatter than the chair leg itself. When the putty is completely dry and thoroughly hard, sand it down until it is even with the leg. Then do your painting.

Messiah Is Christmas Tradition

By RICH A. MULLIGAN

"I did think I did see all Heaven before me, and the great God himself."

With these words and with tears streaming down his face, George Frederick Handel described the exquisite inspiration that had motivated his famous "Messiah."

Handel had emerged from his room in a shabby London tenement after 23 days of feverish creativity. The oratorio he brought forth has become the best loved and most frequently performed Christmas music among all the classics. Although "Messiah" deals with the entire life of Christ, from his birth to his resurrection, it has become a Christmas tradition throughout the world, a favorite with church groups and choral societies, and a masterpiece of undying appeal to record buyers.

There are at least 20 versions of "Messiah" on the market today, a statistic which did not discourage London Records from calling on soprano Joan Sutherland, tenor Kenneth McKellar and the London Symphony Orchestra and chorus under Sir Adrian Boult to attempt another. The result is one of the finest "Messiah" recordings available, largely due to the fact that both Miss Sutherland and McKellar are Handel experts gifted with magnificent voices. Since English is the native tongue of both—Miss Sutherland is Australian, McKellar is Scottish—their phrasing of Charles Jennens' famous text is faultless. The words float forth effortlessly, clothing the meaning of the story in the golden fabric of Handel's lovely music. Bass David Ward and contralto Grace Bumbry also play a large part in making this one "Messiah" recording in which the solo parts are equal to, and indeed superior to, the choral parts.

Other notable Christmas albums this year span centuries of musical history.

Capitol offers Alfred Wallenstein and the Roger Wagner Choral in a beautiful performance of Monteverdi's 350-year-old "Magnificat." The opposite side of this fine record offers Respighi's "Laud" written in 1930 but based on Gregorian themes.

Decca's "The Coming of Christ," featuring "The Project 20 years ago last year telling the life of Christ through famous art masterpieces, makes for a handsome gift album. This is both from the viewpoint of Robert Russell Bennett's background music, also based on Gregorian motifs, and from the viewpoint of the art masterpieces illustrating the album. Narrator Alexander Scourby does his usual excellent job with the script.

Miss Patricia Keisler of Abilene presented traditional wedding music and Mrs. Gerald Crawford sang "Because" and "Whither Thou Goest."

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white slipper satin, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline accented with pearls and sequins and long pointed sleeves. Her fingertip veil of white tulle was attached to a band of sequins and pearls. She wore a pearl necklace, a gift of the groom. She carried a white orchid feathered with carnations. She also carried out the tradition of something old, new, borrowed and blue.

Mrs. Richard Smith sister of the bride was matron of honor. She wore a teal blue shadow dot cotton satin dress, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and long pointed sleeves, matching teal blue tulle headpiece and shoes. She carried a nosegay of gladioli with teal blue net.

Miss Linda Staton of Snyder and Miss Ellen White of Dunn were bridesmaids. They wore teal blue shadow dot cotton satin dresses, with fitted bodice, three-quarter length sleeves and full skirts. They also wore white elbow length gloves and matching headpieces. They carried nosegays like that of the matron of honor.

Candlelighters were Mrs. C. D. Gray and Mrs. Ted Billingsley. They wore sky blue button satin dresses fashioned like the bridesmaids. They also wore matching headpieces of blue tulle.

Donna Faye Gray was flower girl and Jimmie Nail was ring bearer.

Jerry Stevenson of Rotan was best man. Groomsmen were Mark Brown and Regis Stinson of Rotan. Ushers were Richard Smith and Steve Nail, brother of the bride.

A reception was held in the Dunn community center. Houseparty members included Mrs. C. D. Gray Mrs. Ted Billingsley and Mrs. Joyce Bond.

For her going-away costume the bride wore a rust-colored suit with black accessories. She wore the orchid from her bridal bouquet.

The couple are at home in Rotan.

which is based mostly on Biblical texts. The program will be repeated again on NBC this year, but this should increase rather than detract from the demand for this beautifully mounted album.

Among Christmas carol albums this year—and they are legion as usual—two stand out: "A Christmas Offering" by Leontyne Price with Herbert Von Karajan conducting the Vienna Philharmonic (London Records) and "Joyous Noel" with Les Djinns Singers, a chorus of 60 French girls (ABC—Paramount).

The merging of the talents of Miss Price and Von Karajan, a great soprano and a great conductor, results in an unforgettable Christmas album, particularly in the renditions of Adolph Adam's "O Holy Night" and Schubert's "Ave Maria," when her crystal pure voice pleases like a chime on a clear winter night. The orchestra, under Von Karajan's masterful baton, seems to follow as if in reverent procession.

In a more popular vein, the Djinns Singers bring galle charm and the exuberance of youth to such traditional carols as "O Beau Sapin (O Christmas Tree)" and "O Holy Night" and the lesser known but lovely "Trois Angles Saint Venus Ce Soir" (Three angels we have seen this night).

A perennially popular Christmas gift is an apron—particularly if it has an interesting twist. One imaginative style is made of a dainty floral print rayon that reverses to an equally washable solid color organdy.

"Watchers At The Pond." By Franklin Russell.

Can you imagine a book that is graphic and exciting, though not a single human being appears on its pages?

Russell has written such a book. It is a tremendously detailed study of every bit of life that stirs in and around a remote North American pond during an entire year.

It begins with the snow and ice of winter, the hibernating period, and carries on through fecund, awakening spring. The hot fruit of summer and the long benedictions of autumn.

He has described with a naturalist's skill an amazing range of living creatures, from the microscopic plant and animal life of the water to the foxes and deer that inhabit the pond's shores. There is every conceivable kind of life in this chronicle—insects, fish, animals, plants, trees—and there are vivid descriptions of their life cycles from birth through procreation and death.

The reader is struck by the vast, extravagant and wasteful processes through which life perpetuates itself, equalled only by the voracious, overwhelming drive with which species after species feeds upon other creatures.

This is no dry textbook discourse.

tion. Russell writes in a sensitive, sometimes poetic, style that enhances his story. Miles A. Smith

More Boos Advocated By Singer

TULSA, Okla., (U.P.)—Advice to opera audiences: "If you don't like what you hear and see, then by all means—boo!"

That suggestion came from Cornell MacNeil, who sang the lead role in a production of Verdi's opera, "Rigoletto," which toured here. American audiences, he said, are far too polite—and as a result they too often put up with mediocre opera.

"Americans will help the worst dog off the stage with cheers," MacNeil explained. "But we should remember—if you buy your ticket the singers owe you their best and it better be good."

Europeans and South Americans will let you know if you stink and if U.S. audiences would boo a bit they'd soon find themselves hearing better opera.

Another reason for low quality opera, MacNeil believes, is the reputation of New York's Metropolitan Opera. "The Met is the greatest detriment to U.S. Opera culture," he said. "Too many Americans think that if someone hasn't a Met reputation, he's not worth hearing."

WHILE YOUR ROSES are getting their winter beauty sleep, let's call them names.

In today's popular rose market, there are about 5,700 different varieties, each with a name. Generally, these names favor people, especially females. More than 1,400 roses are named in honor of women, ranging from Queen Elizabeth (she's a beautiful pink one that blooms in our garden) to wives and daughters of famous rose growers and such folk as movie actresses.

About 900 roses have been named for men, including presidents, war heroes and, naturally, rose growers.

According to one authority on roses, only 19 have been named for entertainment world personalities. There have been some others, but these varieties have never had their names in the bright lights of the rose world.

The most successful rose in the stage-screen category is the "Helen Traubel." More than a million plants of this pink hybrid tea have been sold. The Helen Traubel (developed by Armstrong of California) was a 1952 All-America Rose Selections winner and the only All-America rose named for a stage celebrity. It also won the 1951 Rome Gold Medal.

Today, 10 years after its debut, Helen Traubel rose remains in the top 10 of the nation's best sellers and is rated sixth in the American Rose Society's all-time popular roses with a score of 8.7 out of a possible 10.

Roses have been named for fictitious film favorites such as the Scarlet O'Hara, Charlie McCarthy, and Tarzan. There is a rose named Dopey, one of the Seven Dwarfs.

Others bear the names of Grace Fields, Greer Garson, Dinah Shore, Ariane Francis, Lily Pons, Helen Hayes, Hildegard, Kate Smith, Mary Pickford, Rochelle Hudson, Shirley Temple, Sonja Henie, Wendy Barrie and Susan Ball.

From me to you A DAILY VIEW

By Rev. R. Charles Spivey

"...nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. O house of Jacob, come, let us walk in the light of the Lord." Isaiah 2:4-5 (read verses 1-7)

What a beautiful dream! Do you suppose that the vision will ever really come to pass that war will cease, and men will live in harmony with one another? I think it will come some day, but when, I cannot tell. My belief is simply based on the fact that God has promised that such a day will eventually come. But that day will come only when He thinks the world is ready for it.

You can be sure of one thing, though. Our world will not be ready until we all "walk in the light of the Lord."

18 Introductions Present Wide Choice Garden Color

For gardeners who look forward to the new and different in easy-to-grow annual flowers there is plenty in store. Announcement of 18 flower introductions for 1962 means new colors, larger blooms, improved form and plant habit in such popular favorites as zinnias, snapdragons, asters, marigolds, larkspurs and sweet peas. Beginner in gardening might well follow the example of experienced flower growers in choosing the newest annual flowers because of other varieties. The annuals, of course, endow a garden with the quickest and most profuse color of the same season as planted and actually require the least care of any kind of flowers.

If any new flowers could be singled out as being most important, a good guess would be the Super Tetra Snapdragon, a new brilliantly colored, impressive spikes of this new strain.

Sixteen years ago was developed the Tetra Snaps through treating plants with a drug called colchicine. They soon became the most popular of all outdoor snaps. Now this exceptionally fine new strain of Tetras provides extra large, bold flowers, ruffled and in mixture of colors to the summer of closely set on graceful, massive spikes. Super Tetras are available in crimson and five separate colors - Crimson Giant, Glacier (white), High Noon (clear, sharp yellow), Volcano (bright orange), Rosabel (clear, rich rose).

Another outstanding snapdragon is Super Jet, a clear, mid-yellow newcomer to the summer flowering Supreme said to be the strongest growing, largest spiking of first generation Hybrid Double ever offered from seed to gardeners, and a beauty, too. An additional attribute is its ability to perform well even under hot growing conditions.

An active breeder of new big American Marigolds has been looking to make them our national flower is evident from his four introductions in this class. Primrose Climax, a new color in the Climax series, is a double, frilled and fringed in globular blooms of a creamy primrose. The soft, cool tones of Primrose Climax are reminiscent of other marigolds and other flowers - in the garden or when cut. This should be a good one for exhibition.

At the other extreme of marigold colors is Super Chief, the most intense in range. American Marigold ever offered, and earlier than most, Rich reddish orange double carnation-like flowers up to 4 in. across are borne in profusion above the foliage on good cutting stems.

Season colored carrots with a little sugar or honey, grated orange rind and orange juice and even folks who say they don't like carrots will ask you for the recipe.

Stitch Stylish Santa Satchels

St. Nick's big sack is always so stuffed with goodies nobody pays any attention to its shapeless, downright unfashionable lines. But if you're playing Santa, bright plastic tote bags can be sewn and decorated at home at little cost. Each bag required about 1/4 yard of 36 - in upholstery or other heavy plastic, about 21 x 22 inches.

IT'S FUN TO GIVE

stitch them well down on the bag or strength.

Then decorate with colored plastic tape, gold metallic tape, Christmas ornaments, many - shaped sequins.

Here are two kinds:

Christmas - ball bag: Make from bright coral with white and gold design. Cut out ornament shape on fold of scrap paper, 8 x 10 is a good size. Then cut piece of waxed paper slightly larger than this pattern, and place strips of 1/4" white plastic tape close together on it. Trace your pattern onto the white tape (pencil marks clearly), and cut. Remove bonds from waxed paper and re-set them on bag. Add trim of gold metallic tape and sequins (which can be attached with small dab of glue). Cut a stylized bow for the top and fold it around a gold ring.

Christmas tree bag: This moss green bag features a blue tape tree with green ornaments. Outline a triangle on the bag first - perhaps 7 x 14 inches. Cut eight pairs of branches in graduating sizes, using blue plastic tape 1/4" wide. Apply to front of bag in inverted V shape. Stand for tree is made from black, white, and red tape. Christmas tree ornaments are attached by the small wire clip in the neck.

When you've finished taking around your gifts, the bag will make an appreciated present itself. That is, if no one has talked you out of it in the meantime.

Santa Ana Fans Blaze That Lays Waste To Lush Homes

EDITOR'S NOTE—In 18 hours and 1 minute a month ago 437,100 acres on some of the most expensive real estate in the country went up in smoke. Here's how it was the day a wave of fire swept down the Hollywood Hills.

By DIAL TORGERSOON
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It is Monday, Nov. 6. The dawn is bright and clear. Visibility is unlimited.

From the crest of the Hollywood Hills, where Mulholland Drive follows a meandering ridge line, you can see north across the San Fernando Valley to the mountains separating its green suburbs from the desert.

To the south are brush-covered slopes dropping away to the mansion-clad ridges and canyons of Bel-Air, where swimming pools gleam in the morning sun like blue-green jewels. Beyond lies Sunset Boulevard, Los Angeles, and the sea.

If there is the least hint of disaster, it is in the wind. It's a Santa Ana, the "devil wind" of seafarers' lore, which sweeps suddenly from the desert and howls through the canyon passes to the sea.

Film producer Keith Danieles feels it against his face, hot and dry as chalk, as he sits breakfast guests the view from his home on Mulholland Drive.

Suddenly he asks singer Billy Vaughn: "Isn't that a little fire down there in the canyon?"

"You'd better call the fire department, Billy," says Danieles. At this same moment, in Bel-Air, nearly four miles closer to Los Angeles, actor Burt Lancaster wheels his bright-red sports car from the driveway of his stately Colonial-style home—which he will never see again.

Kim Novak is in her dressing room at a film studio, applying makeup. She doesn't know she won't get to wear it long. At Mountain Patrol Station 2, on Mulholland Drive two miles west of Danieles' home, two fire chiefs are talking about the wind.

"Well," says Battalion Chief George Moore, "we made it through the night."

"Yeah," replies Division Chief Henry Sawyer, "but this is the third day of the Santa Ana. That's when they hit us with a bad one—when the brush is really dry."

At 8:13 the alarm buzzer sounds three times. The radio crackles. "Van Nuys to all units," the dispatcher says. "Reported structure fire in Stone Canyon."

Moore and Sawyer relax a moment. Brushfires, not house fires, is what they fear. Then the buzzer alarm sounds again.

"Van Nuys to all units," the dispatcher says. "Correction. Fast transmission. It is a brushfire."

It is 8:14. Moore is springing for his truck. Sawyer is calling headquarters. The worst fire in Southern California's history is under way.

Daniel and Vaughn try to save Danieles' house with garden hoses as the fire sweeps up the slopes toward them at almost the speed of the wind—35 m.p.h.

"It seems like it exploded," Danieles said. "Suddenly there were flames all over. We smashed a picture window with a rock and dived into the house. I was so excited, I even took the hose with me."

Two dry years in succession have left the chaparral which covers Southern California's mountain flanks dry and anxious to burn. To touch it off takes just a spark. A rain of blazing brush and cinders keeps a fire moving, makes it almost impossible to stop.

Moore's men can't halt it. They save Danieles' home—with $10,000 damage. But then the flames jump

Mulholland and race downhill toward the homes of Bel-Air.

8:20. Chief Sawyer reaches the scene. He declares it a major emergency. Fire units from all over the city are rushing to assist.

8:30. Connie Wulffson, 46, is doing laundry at her $80,000 home on Roscomare Road when she hears a fire engine. She looks idly out the window and is unimpressed. "It isn't a very big fire engine," she tells herself.

9:00. N. J. Freis, 74, is leaving his home on Somers Road to go to work. His wife, Gertrude, 73, calls his attention to the smoke in the horizon. He has work to do.

Police order residents to evacuate upper Roscomare Road. It runs up a long, steep-sided canyon from the heart of Bel-Air, near Sunset Boulevard, into the smoke hills at Mulholland Drive. Buses evacuate students from Roscomare Elementary School.

9:05. Homes are aflame on upper Roscomare Road. Tanker planes are bombing the blaze with fire-retarding borate solutions. Off-duty firemen are called back to work. Scores of fire rigs, many from adjoining cities, rush into the hills.

But they aren't enough. The flames are spreading out, leaping roads, plunging down canyons, pushing toward the sea by the wind. Burning houses are setting their neighbors on fire.

9:16. Mrs. Wulffson's washer stops. So does her electric clock. Power is gone, but the telephone still works. She phones a friend a mile up the hill.

"Connie," the friend cries, "they're evacuating. I've got to go."

At 9:25, Wulffson, 25 miles away, Connie Wulffson's husband, Bob, notices the smoke and decides, on a hunch, to head for home. He's on his way before his car radio tells him it's near his house. He speeds up.

9:45. Wulffson reaches a police roadblock on Sunset Boulevard. He is the last car officers will let through for hours.

At UCLA, not far away, his son, Don, 18, a freshman, also sees the smoke. He heads home, too.

10:00. Homes are burning on a half-dozen streets. Flaming shingles fill the air. A fire storm strikes—a cyclone of fire and debris, spinning on winds generated by heat of the rising flames. Winds reach incredible speeds—perhaps 100 m.p.h.—as they churn blower-hot, within the confines of the narrow canyons.

Bob Wulffson reaches his home as the fire storm moves down Roscomare toward him. He is on the roof with a garden hose when his wife hears him shout:

"Get the car out, honey! Get the car and get out! And don't look back!"

The storm of flame strikes as she drives away.

"It was a giant ball of flame," she said later. "It was shooting out of the driveway, leaping from house to house. First it's bright white, then it turns black. Then it's dark red. The sky is all dark and full of smoke."

"And there's this terrible wind. What an awful roar!"

10:15. Mrs. Feis sees the flames above her and calls her husband. He leaves for home.

10:30. Mrs. Wulffson gets clear of the fire area and looks around at the forbidding, smoke-filled sky. "My God," she thinks. "My husband is back there." She tries to return.

A motorcycle policeman stops her as she hears the crushing flames.

10:40. Don Wulffson reaches home. Homes on both sides and three across the street are on fire. The Wulffson house still stands. Don's dad, coughing in the smoke, is on the roof, hosing spots of flame on the shingle roof.

11:00. Homes are burning now all over the Bel-Air district—burning by the scores. Firemen save the Roscomare school. A private school nearby burns to a shell.

On Somers Road Mrs. Freis is doing her laundry when a neighbor yells, "You better get out, Mrs. Freis. She thinks he is joking. The last time she looked the fire was a mile away."

Then I smelled something," she later recalled, "and I saw flames licking the edge of the roof. I ran into the bedroom and grabbed some money I had there, and a little diamond bracelet my husband gave me on our 25th wedding anniversary. Suddenly there was a cracking noise. The bedroom was on fire!"

11:30. Burt Lancaster is watching rushes of a new film in a Columbia Studio projection room when a neighbor phones to tell him his home is in danger. His roadster squeals rubber as he roars out the gate, headed toward Bel-Air.

At another studio, Kim Novak gets a similar call. She heads home, too.

12 noon. The flames move into the fringes of the Bel-Air Country Club. Lancaster's home is afire. Firemen and special effects men from his studio save Red Skelton's mansion—by pumping water from the swimming pool onto the roof with gasoline-driven pumps they brought from the studio.

Report On State Convention City Council P-TA Is Given

A report was given to the City Council P-TA Wednesday of the 15th - second State Convention by C. D. Henry, director of curriculum in the Snyder schools and a delegate to the convention. The convention was held at San Houston College on Friday, Dec. 8.

The theme of the convention was "Homes Create Community Strength - Through Effective Learning."

Henry summarized the convention theme as follows:

Throughout the entire convention the one central idea that kept the discussions, lectures, and study groups pointed toward a common objective was, "What can I as a parent do in my home to promote more effective learning. In this convention, effective learning was defined as learning in academic courses at school, learning moral and spiritual values; learning to live in home, community, state and nation; learning to be a good citizen; and learning to accept responsibility for my actions." In determining how this learning could be accomplished, the answer that was unanimously adopted by the near three thousand delegates was: "I can teach my children by setting the correct example for them."

Dr. Andy Holt in his address, time after time stressed the importance of this setting the example and living the life he wanted his children to live. If he wanted his children to do home study, then he must do home study; if he wanted his children to obey the laws of God, nature and man, then he must obey those laws; if he wanted his children to associate with the right kind of persons, then he must associate with that type person.

In the group discussions, effective learning for the child in the school, for moral and spiritual values and for community strength were the topics considered. Each small work - group was charged to give one best answer to four questions concerning the above four areas. The groups were charged to think and meditate for just a few minutes on what I, as an individual, can do in my own home. The following guides to stimulate the thinking process were presented prior to each question being considered:

1. Effective Learning for the Home.

"Learning begins in the home. A boy or a girl learns more during his preschool years than in any other five - year period of his life. He also develops habits of learning - habits of attention and concentration, habits of careful observation, habits of obedience, habits of quiet and orderly activities. The habits developed by a child in the home will largely depend on the example of the parents. Parents who want their children to be alert, attentive, courteous, and thoughtful would be wise to be alert, attentive, courteous, and thoughtful themselves as examples for their children. Examples of indeed the most powerful method of instruction."

"We parents would do well to build in our children a love for their home and a strong feeling as a family group. When the quality of home and family living attains a strong approach to the highest ideals of the American way of life, then indeed boys and girls will be learning effectively in the home."

2. Effective Learning for Good Schools.

"The school is the only institution that has for its chief purpose the academic education of children."

"No other individual organization or agency can provide the same thing that is required of the school team, although the school team cannot provide its part of the total without assistance from and close cooperation with the home and other agencies."

"The teacher is the person who actually deals with the child. It is the teacher who directs and guides the child in the classroom learning."

ing procedures and the curriculum of the total school program. The teacher is the active, living, dynamic, stimulating influence with whom the child comes into closest contact.

"Citizens of a school" community has both a privilege and a responsibility in determining the type and the nature of schools which the community provides for its children."

3. Effective Learning for Moral and Spiritual Values.

"The need for effective learning is easily justified in many areas of life, and certainly this is true in the area of moral and spiritual values. Belief in God and trust in God and the desire to implement His teachings have been fundamental to the American way of life ever since the first writing of the first paragraph of the Declaration of Independence."

"Develop proper attitude toward God. The proper religious development of children and their attitude toward God and the church of the parents' choice is primarily a family responsibility. The church can obviously do much to help in this aspect of the child's life however, the home plays a most important role. The parents who go with their children to church services are providing one of the most practical methods of learning good and lasting moral and spiritual values. J. Edgar Hoover has been quoted as saying, 'The parents of America can strike a blow against the forces which contribute to our juvenile delinquency if our mothers and fathers go with their children to Sunday School and church regularly.' Not only does such attendance help the child, but also it leads the parent into an inner security and peace that cannot be found in any other source."

4. Homes Create Community Strength

"Whatever you do, remember that education in a free world must produce people who can preserve the American way of life - people who can think for themselves and have the ability to project their thinking. Together, parents and teacher build the lives of the on - coming generation - that they today may develop strength for faith for tomorrow. Be aware that the P-TA is a dynamic, living organization, bringing together people that share an increased concern for the educational and spiritual progress of each child in the community."

The following questions were given and a committee selected what they considered the best answer to these questions:

1. What learning situations can I set up in my own home?

Answer: Set an example by having:

A regular time for family study. Create an attitude or atmosphere for study.

Follow through with the idea-not just start it.

2. What can I do to help improve the schools in my community?

Answer: Find out what the school is doing and its policies. Be informed about the schools through visitation and participation.

3. What can I do in my home to promote and understand moral and spiritual values?

Records Destroyed In Poultry Fire

SOUTH SALEM, N.Y. (AP) - Records dealing with 33 years of experimental chicken breeding to Henry A. Wallace were saved Thursday from a fire that destroyed a poultry barn on the former vice president's farm.

Wallace, who became interested in chicken breeding while U.S. secretary of agriculture, said about 1,000 chickens were included among those that were under long tests in efforts to develop chickens that will move eggs on less food.

High Hopes Are Held For Kite-Like Flying Machine

By NORMAN BEAL

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) - A flying machine that looks like a manned kite has been tested here with the hope it may someday become an aerial workhorse.

"There has never been an aircraft resembling it," said Lou Everett, a group engineer, and "it's pilot, although it is based on principles conceived centuries ago by Leonardo da Vinci."

Everett, in fact, referred to it as "Leonardo da Vinci brought up to date by Francis M. Rogallo."

Rogallo, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientist, developed the concept of a flexible wing aircraft that has been built by Ryan Aeronautical Co. and now is being tested by Everett.

The research vehicle, whose synthetic fabric wing has a span of about 100 feet and was made by a sailmaker, fits an aluminum platform. The pilot seat is in front and a 16-horsepower engine, turning a pusher propeller, is in the rear.

Filled out this way the "kite" weighs 1,500 pounds. But the wing it is thought, could be used without power to glide a space vehicle to a soft landing or to make possible aerial towing of cargo or troops.

Control is based on a wing pitch pivot point. The platform, swinging from hinges, is moved forward, backward or sideward relative to the wing. This causes the wing to take new angles.

"Any sensations," said Everett, "are different from those experienced in any other flying machine. They can best be explained by imagining yourself, sitting in a rocking chair controlled by a giant hand which occasionally rocks you sideways as well as back and forth."

The rocking, however, is controlled to the platform and the machine as a whole has high stability," Everett said.

He pointed out that the flex wing was not to be considered an experimental airplane.

"The applications of the flex wing range from small, powered reconnaissance drones, maneuvered by remote control to huge, unpowered wings capable of recovering payloads and rocket booster of 30 tons or more," he said.

"Nothing like this wing has ever been herded through the air by man before," he said.

PAAR: Father Of Ethics?

EDITOR'S NOTE—For many a TV watcher across the nation, the Jack Paar show ranks high among nightly pleasures. The show Paar cooks up is a heady blend of showmanship, sentiment, wit, acid comment and controversy. Here, after a thorough study of the ingredients, are a reporter's impressions of Paar on-stage.

By SAUL PETT
NEW YORK (AP)—If Napoleon had been taller, he might never have tried to conquer Europe.

If Karl Marx had inherited a pile of money, Nikita Khrushchev might now be president of the Moscow stock exchange.

And if his chromosomes had been only slightly rearranged—such is the narrow margin of history—Jack Harold Paar might now be garden editor of the New York Times.

But fate being fate, Jack Paar presides, instead, over a TV congregation of innocents who watch him between their toes, has sponsors paying a reported $12,000,000 a year to the National Broadcasting Company and in the push and pull of unfolding history has proved his country's humblest elder statesman since Arthur Godfrey lectured the nation on air strategy.

Reaching those heights, Jack Paar has again fulfilled the old American dream, that yesterday's most common citizen may be tomorrow's most uncommon success. Leaving these heights—he is abandoning after the fides of March for a respite from his nightly office—Paar leaves behind the afternoon of an intriguing personality that bears memorializing for future archeologists on this simple Rosetta stone.

To begin this appraisal of the Paar syndrome, which is based only on his own programs—he declined to be interviewed—he needs to note that Paar has the dimpled physical charm of a Huck Finn, the quick wit of an arrow, the instinctive talents of a great showman, the tear ducts of an orphaned onion peeler, the simple innocence of a child playing with a land mine, the retaliatory force of the Strategic Air Command, and the memory of a recording secretary for the Mafia.

He has in abundance a quality which admirers describe as courage, detractors call gall and psychiatrists might diagnose as an excessive compensatory reaction to a basic feeling of insecurity. Whatever the label, Paar has stood up to his critics and fought back with fury where other people in show business might have lain down and died or written a quiet note of regret to the editor.

He has, too, a disarming candor which frequently brings out people he interviews on a re-creating "reality level" instead of the stale topen of a canned interview. This quality sometimes leads to a discussion of sex attitudes or the personal story of a nervous breakdown, between songs.

More often than not, he has the unerring feel of a good director who knows almost instinctively when to prolong a comedian or guest who is "hot" and when to cut short a turkey. It is one of the many qualities which has made his show popular, made semi-national institutions out of such diverse people as Alexander King, the dyspeptic dissenter, Dody Goodman, the blonde bumbler and Hugh Downs, erudite reincarnation of Henry VIII's lord chancellor who served as the king's conscience until he, too, was beheaded.

All in all, the show gets talked about, has received reams of newspaper space, made NBC far more money than it might otherwise have earned from Cro-Magnon movies and seemed important enough to persuade such dignitaries as John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon to appear during their quest for the presidency. Paar does have talent as a reporter, especially in collecting human interest detail. While he frequently denies that he is a pundit, Paar lectures his following on the fallacy of fallout shelters and the sins of the trees. He has implied that it is only in-responsible editors and sensational headlines that have built up the world's tension. He seems to be saying there is no real crisis in Berlin, an attitude which finds him in some disagreement with such sources as John F. Kennedy, Dean Rusk, Nikita Khrushchev, most of the Congress of the United States, most of the United Nations, Jawaharlal Nehru, Harold Macmillan, Konrad Adenauer, Charles de Gaulle and the news staff of the National Broadcasting Company.

Many shadings of personality account for the impact of Jack Paar but perhaps the most important single ingredient is something which is almost a mystique. Call it conflict-proneness. He involves himself—or gets involved by an unkind but lucrative fate in many kinds of bitter fights.

To each controversy, as it erupts, Jack Paar brings a lusty appetite, a spontaneous fury, a sense of massive retaliation, an exquisite lack of proportion, a throbbing sense of self-identification, a robust repertoire of counter-punches ranging from the classic right cross to the non-classic gousse. Asked not for whom the earth-quake quakes, it wildly, stirs the seismograph of Jack Paar's heart.

Thus, the viewer turns on the Paar show with mounting excitement and suspense. It's like watching abdominal surgery. Will the doctor find something benign or malignant?

Hurry, Glady, pull up a chair and don't forget the pretzels! He may attack Ed Sullivan or cut down a congressman. Hurry, dear hearts, who knows what may happen tonight! Will he attack the papers again? Will Mickey Rooney show up drunk and be blasted? Will Jack call Dorothy Kilgallen "Alexand"? Will Alexander King call reviewers "eunuchs"? Will Hermione Gingold make cracks about Elsa Maxwell's bosom? Will Jack cry? Will Zsa Zsa slash George Jessel? Will Jack shoot a shaft into Dody Goodman? Will this be the night when Jack finally loses his patience with non-alignment and gobbles up Hugh Downs?

"Did you know," he told his nationwide TV audience, "after millions of dollars were spent investigating labor racketeering before the Senate and two years were spent, it was about to be passed, do you remember that Do you know, and don't try to deny it now, because the press already said I did it, in a snide way, this show with Bobby Kennedy in one night caused more comment, more letters to Washington, than any other time in the history of Washington with one exception, when Harry Truman fired or dismissed General MacArthur."

"And legislation was passed, antiracketeering legislation was passed because of the pressure that you brought on the Congress. This show was greatly responsible for changing the laws during the last election of equal time so that every minor candidate running on some minor ticket could not ask for equal time."

Jack Paar pressed on. "I do not intend to be pushed around by the United States Senate, the most exclusive man's club in the world, nor by newspaper editors or publishers or their henchmen, the columnists. The columnists—among whom are some of the worst rakes, deadbeats, bunko artists, bribe-takers, free loaders and town drunks in our culture."

"The dignity of the United States Senate was not preserved by the actions of reading, within its chambers, newspaper clippings which gave, as we now know, an entirely false account of my program. True, there are dedicated men in Congress. But far too many of them speak like they are going to become statues, forgetting that they are just human beings—some former ward heeler, political compromiser and a witness of local beauty contests."

Had the congressional criticism been any more severe, one got the impression Jack Paar would have been ready to burn down the Capitol. On subsequent nights he acted like a man ready to burn down the press. At first he pointed out he was attacking only those he considered irresponsible, and said many newspapermen were honest. But the attacks became more frequent and all-inclusive and the qualifications became fewer.

To the recognizable sins of journalism, he added the word, "rigged." Thus no mistake, however innocent or honest, was allowed to remain honest in Paar's nightly soliloquy. Each mistake, real or not, became a "deliberate lie" designed to build circulation at the expense of the country's prestige, even at the expense of world peace.

Which brings this seminar to the subject of integrity. Jack Paar talks about integrity as if he owned the pilot film. "To my knowledge," Hugh Downs once wrote in Look magazine, "he has never taken a dime of loot, nor sold the power of his office, nor promoted outside personal interests other than his book (which he has mentioned less than the books of any regular guest) nor countenanced any shabby ethics in the way of plugs."

Earlier in the article, Downs said, "Jack often tempers his beliefs in favor of a friend. The closest he comes to dishonesty is in giving a better review to someone's play or work of art than he feels it really deserves, in order to help it. This is compassion."

Let us then suppose, dear hearts, that newspaper book reviewers and theater critics tempered their judgments in behalf of friends. Would friendly old Jack look with compassion on their compassion? Resisting sympathy can be another test.

In recent days, Paar has allowed only Look magazine to interview him. The Nov. 21 issue contained two favorable articles on the subject of Paar, one by him, the other about him. And on two consecutive nights, Nov. 7 and 8, Paar had the cameras come in close while he plugged the Nov. 21 issue of Look and its prose on Paar.

When Paar returned from Berlin and was blasting the press in general for their coverage of his stay there, he singled out a few newspaper men who, he said, were fair in their comments. One was Paul Malloy, TV critic of the Chicago Sun-Times. Less than a month later Paar had Malloy on his show and plugged Malloy's new book coast to coast.

Would it then be sacrilegious to ask, pal, about the ethics of a man who uses a coast-to-coast entertainment program to reward his admirers and punish his critics?

On Feb. 13, 1960, Jack Gould, television critic of the New York Times, happened to write a column defending Paar's right to answer press attacks and praising Paar's courage in flaying the dubious morality of yellow journalists.

On March 7, 1960, Paar quoted the column on the air and described Gould as "the conscience" of the TV industry and the Times as "perhaps America's finest newspaper."

But in September, 1961, Gould criticized Paar's presence and shows on the delicate border of West Berlin. On Oct. 2, as soon as he could get back from Europe, Paar rushed before his cameras to denounce Gould for "many low blows." And then, like a man groping in a wild barroom fight for a broken beer bottle, he cried:

"I don't know what his frustrations are. I don't know what his frustrations are. I know Mr. Gould once quit the New York Times and got a job on television. It didn't work out. He went back to the New York Times. I don't know what happened but he tried it and it didn't work out."

A few moments later, switching his attack to another columnist, a broken beer bottle was finally located. The year before, Paar had described this columnist as an "honorable man." But since then this columnist, too, had criticized Paar's Berlin show.
