Hart, Mondale discuss party's 'peace' bid

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Walter F. Mondale and Gary Hart began a political summit meeting today amid indications that the Democratic Party is moving toward a peaceful nominating convention in San Francisco and a united front in the campaign against President Reagan this fall.

The meeting was held at the upper East side townhouse of Arthur Krim, a Mondale supporter.

The former vice president walked seven blocks down Park Avenue from his hotel, while Hart arrived by limousine about 15 minutes later.

Aides to both candidates said there were no plans to discuss the possibility that Hart might be chosen by Mondale as his vice presidential running mate.

They did talk about compromises under which Hart dropped potential challenges to Mondale delegates at the Democratic convention and Mondale accepted proposed changes in the Democratic party's rules for selecting the 1988 presidential nominee.

With the agreement brokered by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the two Democratic presidential rivals moved significantly closer to one another Monday, although Hart said he will continue to seek the nomination.

Before their meeting, Mondale said he and Hart agreed that the agenda would not include a discussion of Hart's possible selection as Mondale's vice presidential running mate.

Arriving in New York late Monday, Mondale was asked what he and Hart would say about the sometimes bitter exchanges they had during their televised debate before the New York primary. He grinned and said, "We'll get around to that."

While Hart and Mondale met, the third Democratic presidential hopeful, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, was in Havana on his Latin America tour.

He was greeted by Cuban President Fidel Castro upon his arrival Monday night, and Castro said the visit "possibly" would lead to improved U.S.-Cuban relations.

Jackson met Monday in El Salvador with Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte and conveyed an offer from Salvadoran guerrilla leaders to discuss a cease-fire.

The Mondale-Hart agreement followed several days of delicate negotiations in which Kennedy, a presidential contender in 1980 when Mondale was vice president, played a personal mediating role from Mondale's home in North Oaks, Minn.

Discovery flight grounded with seconds to spare

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The delayed debut of space shuttle Discovery was aborted just four heart-stopping seconds before liftoff this morning when computers detected a questionable fuel valve and stopped the engine firing in mid-sequence.

It was one of the most agonizing scrubs in U.S. space history, with a six-person flight crew sitting atop 500,000 gallons of volatile fuel.

Engine ignition started a small gas fire at the base of the rocket, but it was quickly extinguished and officials said the astronauts were never in direct danger. The crew — five men and a woman — faces a launch delay of several days to several weeks.

Precisely on schedule, just before 8:43 a.m. EDT, two of Discovery's three engines flashed to life. But a computer saw an errant signal from a fuel valve and sent out the command to shut down. One of the engines had not kicked in and never did. The others closed off immediately and NASA said there was no physical damage to the new ship despite the small fire that flared immediately.

It was the second scrub in as many days, but bore no connection to Monday's — forced by a bad computer that was replaced and operating today.

The engine that did not fire — No. 1 in the NASA designbook — was borrowed earlier this month from sister ship Challenger, but the fuel valve apparently was located on No. 3.

Both engines have flown flawlessly in previous shuttle missions.

"We had a clear go and we were well underway," when the last engine did not kick in, said shuttle operations director Thomas Utsman.

Discovery's six-person crew was safe and left the ship about 45 minutes later. "Riding a rocketship is not something like riding down the freeway," Utsman said. Nonetheless, he contended, "the crew was not in any danger. We had developed the procedures to prevent the situation from getting out of control."

Asked about the possibility of the astronauts making an emergency exit from Discovery, Utsman said, "We considered it, but we never saw the data" that would make this necessary.

Discovery's commander is Henry Hartsfield, pilot of the fourth shuttle flight, along with an all-rookie crew. They included rookies Judy Resnik, the second woman to fly on a U.S. spaceship, and Charles Walker, the McDonnell Douglas engineer. The others are pilot Michael Coats and mission specialists Steve Hawley and Richard Mullane.

For the second straight day the crew waited out the countdown while lying on their backs in Discovery's cabin.

Utsman said launch controllers carefully monitored fuel tank pressures to make sure levels were not endangering the astronauts.

"I feel it's in the several days category," Utsman said of the delay before attempting another launch. But it could be as long as two weeks, he added.

Damage to the launch pad alone mandated a 48-hour delay, but the engine system trouble indicated a longer postponement than that. of 48 hours. But no one seemed optimistic about that.

Not since the Gemini program of the 1960s has an American spacecraft come so close to liftoff only to be aborted. Gemini 6 in 1965 shut down two seconds before liftoff after burning for one second.

"It has not been a year that has not been without difficulty," said Utsman. He referred not only to the Discovery delays, but to the loss of several satellites which failed to achieve working orbits when their internal rockets misfired after shuttle deployment.

Ector County shootings probed

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Four men have died in Ector County shootings in the past three days, including two reported Monday by the sheriff's department.

Gunplay Saturday on southside Odessa streets claimed the lives of two Hispanics in the latest episode of a longstanding feud. And two men found dead in the unincorporated areas of the county in apparently unrelated incidents Monday had sustained gunshot wounds.

Still unidentified Tuesday morning was the body of a man found in a pasture near Penwell about 10 a.m. Monday. Justice of the Peace R.G. Hungerford pronounced the man dead and ordered an autopsy.

In another incident, James Howell, 40, reportedly was shot dead about 1:30 p.m. Monday by his roommate in a West Odessa trailer park following what the sheriff's department is calling a family disturbance.

The suspect's name is being withheld pending consideration by the Ector County grand jury of the circumstances involved in the shooting death. Hungerford also pronounced Howell dead and ordered an autopsy in this case.

The sheriff's department refused to release any further information on these incidents and the results of the autopsies were not available at press time.

Ronald Don Lopez and Juan Moreno, both 19, died Saturday following a shoot-out outside the southside residence of David Perez Mendoza, 35, and Jose Perez Mendoza, 29.

Lopez was declared dead at the scene, while Moreno died later at Medical Center Hospital.

TWC to debate re-hearing on Monahans Draw dispute

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County has taken a die-hard approach to Monahans Draw.

Yet another episode in the ongoing dispute between Midland and Odessa over the draw being used as a channel for Odessa's municipal wastewater is to be held next Tuesday. The Texas Water Commission is to hold a hearing in Austin that day to consider scheduling a re-hearing on the dispute.

"I don't know anything that would cause one to be optimistic," said Midland County Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig.

On May 23, the three-member TWC granted Odessa's renewal of its two permits to continue discharging effluent into the draw.

Midland is appealing the ruling.

The draw cuts eastwardly through Midland County and just south of the city of Midland.

In its wake, claims Midland, are contaminated ground water, depressed property values, breeding grounds for mosquites, farm land and roads damaged by flooding and renewed contention between Midland and Odessa.

Odessa claims the wastewater is sufficiently treated not to pose any health problems to its neighboring city and county.

Midland disagrees.

"It's a sticky situation," said Commissioner Win Brown.

County Judge Bill Ahders said he would be in Austin for the 10 a.m. July 3 hearing in the Stephen F. Austin State Office Building. First Assistant County Attorney Mark H. Dettman said he would attend the hearing if he's not in trial then, and the four commissioners indicated they would consider attending.

Midland lawyer Ted Kerr represents Midland County and First Assistant City Attorney David Reagan represents the city of Midland in the formal dispute.

"We don't have any new evidence to give," said Brown.

"It's 95 percent sure they're going to ask for new evidence," speculated Commissioner Durward Wright. "If we don't have any new evidence, they're going to say 'request denied.'

"In the absence of further evidence, which we don't have," said Wright, "we've thrown down all the hay. They're not going to offer us another hearing."

When Dallas Police Choir sings, people listen

The Associated Press

DALLAS — They're not your typical choirboys. In fact, some of the 21 members of the newly-formed Dallas Police Choir have been described as "pretty tough officers."

But once the jokes are over and the laughter dies, people listen.

"They can't believe we're that good," said group coordinator, Gene Hagen. "When they first hear us, they sit around and laugh and say, 'These guys are gonna make fools of themselves.' Within three minutes, you could hear a pin drop and they're standing there with their mouths hanging open," Hagen said.

Nevertheless, choir members have had to bear the brunt of sharp criticism — mostly from fellow officers — who can't reconcile the idea of singing with that of a police badge. The critics gripe that the chorus is creating an image they'd rather live without.

"Come on. Choirboys? Give me a break," one arson investigator, who asked not to be identified, told the Dallas Times Herald. "We're trying to convey a rough-and-tough image...I mean, it's a sweet idea, but the Police Department is not supposed to be sweet."

But Police Chief Billy Prince, a big choir fan, shrugs off the criticism, arguing that the choir has been a boost to the department's civic image.

"I know some of the guys in the choir, and believe me, they're pretty tough officers," Prince said.

"But really, they're all trained police officers and are out there every night putting their lives on the line with all the rustle-tussle on the streets," the chief said.

The choir was organized by Dick Hickman, the president of the Dallas Police Association, who wanted a group of officers to go Christmas caroling. It was kept alive by officer Dan Whittington, who once co-directed a local barbershop quartet.

The choir has sung at City Hall, at funerals and at luncheons, and plans to sing downtown during the noon lunch hour on July 2. Another engagement is scheduled for a Fourth of July festival at the Cotton Bowl.

Clear skies for most of the nation, cooler temperatures in the northern Plains and mild weather elsewhere are forecast through Wednesday by the National Weather Service.

Evening thunderstorms may relieve forecast's monotony

From Staff and Wire Reports

The partly cloudy skies and high temperatures will continue tonight and Wednesday, with only a few isolated early evening thunderstorms to relieve the monotony. Tonight's low will be in the low 70s, with winds from the southeast at 10-15 mph, while Wednesday's high will be in the upper 90s, with winds from the northeast at 5-15 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Monday's high of 98 was 7 degrees below the record high of 105, set in 1953, while the overnight low of 76 was well above the 1958 record of 59 for the date.

STATE

Strong thunderstorms moved across the Texas Panhandle early today as impulses from a low pressure system over Colorado began moving southeastward, triggering thunderstorm activity.

The heaviest thunderstorms during the pre-dawn area ranged from northwestern Oklahoma to near Childress. Other, light activity was reported before dawn along the Texas-New Mexico border.

Most of the state had warm conditions and clear to partly cloudy skies early today. A few high clouds were reported over South Texas and along the Red River.

Patchy fog was reported along the gulf coast near Beaumont-Port Arthur, but the National Weather Service said visibility was reduce to only less than two miles.

Early morning temperatures were again warm, ranging mostly from the mid 70s to the lower 80s. Extremes ranged from a cool 59 at Marfa in the mountains of Southwest Texas to a sultry 82-degree reading at both Abilene and in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Forecasts called for widely scattered showers and thunderstorms over section of West Texas and Southeast Texas today. The rest of the state was to have more clear to partly cloudy skies and warm to hot temperatures. Highs today were expected to reach the 100-degree mark or slightly above in North Texas and Central Texas and in the 90s elsewhere.

NATION

Powerful thunderstorms pounded the floodweary Midwest again today after scattered storms produced hail and high winds in North and South Dakota, Minnesota and the Texas Panhandle.

Wet weather was expected for Maine and from the upper Great Lakes to the middle Mississippi Valley, with afternoon and evening thunderstorms over Florida, the southern Plateau and the Great Basin, the National Weather Service said.

The weather service also forecast rain today over northern and eastern Maine.

Deficit compromise effort continues

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Despite red ink spe ng from the federal government at a record-setting pace, Congr effort to stem the flood is lagging.

Budget writers from the House and Senate were gathering today to try to put the finishing touches on a compromise three-year package of deficit-reduction moves that both houses will vote on later this week.

The idea all year has been to combine in three roughly equal parts tax increases, a curb on domestic spending and a reduction in planned military spending increases in order to make a modest "down payment" on trimming budget deficits.

Those deficits are estimated to be about $600 billion over the next three years.

The House passed a $182.4 billion deficit-reduction plan and a $140.1 billion package supported by President Reagan was passed by the Senate. Most legislators thought the final compromise package would total about $150 billion.

But things are not quite working out that way.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the top Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, expressed his frustrations, and those of some of his colleagues, in a speech Monday on the Senate floor.

"We will end up raising some revenues, but not enough to reverse the increase in federal deficits.

"We will restrain the growth of Medicare. ... But we were not able to put it under control ... to safeguard its future.

"We have not cut back discretionary spending at all.

"And, when it comes to military spending, we will have done nothing but raise the ante," Chiles said.

Over the weekend, congressional tax writers agreed on about $50 billion in tax increases, representing about one-third of the "down payment."

The group also agreed to spending cuts of as much as $11 billion, about $8 billin of which comes from tightening the Medicare program. Other negotiators have agreed on about $3.7 billion in savings through government accounting and other changes.

That, however, is as far as the effort so far this year has gone.

For a time, wrangling over a method of enforcing budget savings was a major obstacle blocking efforts to resolve differences between the House and Senate bills.

The Republican Senate deficit-reduction plan Reagan agreed to included legislated "caps" to enforce savings on annual domestic and military appropriations over the next three years. Military spending would be held to about 7 percent growth after inflation, and domestic spending would be frozen next year and allowed to grow only at the rate of inflation in the following two years.

The president had said he would not accept tax increases without assurance of spending restraint, which the caps would accomplish.

The Democratic House plan envisions a defense spending increase of only 3.5 percent and it does not include the multiyear caps on appropriations. In addition, it calls for more domestic spending.

Rather than face a stalemate that might doom all deficit-reduction efforts, congressional negotiators have substituted non-binding language for the caps.

Meanwhile, it appears unlikely that a compromise figure on military spending savings, the final third of the deficit-reduction plan, will be agreed upon soon.

Earlier this month, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., emerged from a White House meeting with Reagan saying, "There is no intention on the president's part or mine for significant defense reductions" from the level in the Senate package.

House Democrats just as adamantly say they will stick by the military spending reductions they have voted.

Some legislators have suggested the issue of military spending may be separated from the other components of the deficit-reduction plan in order to keep the entire package from collapsing.

Unconvinced House goes along with capital gains measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — House tax writers are skeptical that a plan pushed by their Senate counterparts to cut in half the one-year holding period for capital gains will have any positive effect, but they are going along with it anyway.

In the final hours of marathon negotiations that ended at dawn Saturday, the tax negotiators from the House and Senate agreed to temporarily reduce from 12 months to six months the holding period after which stockholders can use lower capital gains rates to compute taxes on their holdings.

The conferees were seeking ways to increase taxes in order to trim deficits, but congressional tax experts estimate the cut in the capital gains holding period will cost the goverment about $600 million through 1987.

In advocating the six-month holding period this year, the Senate Finance Committee concluded: "Studies of capital asset sales data confirm that investors are 'locked in' to investments because they do not desire to realize short-term gains," meaning those that have no tax advantage. "This reduces capital market efficiency because investors hold assets longer than they otherwise might in the absence of tax considerations."

House Ways and Means Committee aides, asking not to be quoted by name, said House Democrats were skeptical of the move, but the need to complete negotiations on an overall tax package led to acceptance of the provision.

However, the aides said, the reduced holding period was not made permanent as a way of challenging the Senate to prove over the next three years that the move will increase revenues, as claimed by backers, through increased trading volume and stock prices.

Opponents, though, note that tax-exempt organizations such as foundations and pension funds own about half the nation's securities and account for about three-quarters of stock trades, lessening the revenue impact of the change in the holding period.

This tax break for investors would take effect as of Monday, if the full House and Senate approve and President Reagan signs the measure into law. The holding period will revert to one year after 1987.

Thus, investors holding stocks and bonds for six months can compute taxes according to capital gains rates. Sixty percent of capital gains income can be excluded from taxes.

Latin debtors reacting to prime rate

The Associated Press

Latin American nations that owe billions of dollars to foreign lenders were confronted today with hundreds of millions in additional debts because of the latest rise in the prime interest rate charged by U.S. banks.

The foreign minister of Chile, whose $20 billion debt is modest compared with sums owed by some neighbors, said a time will come when "no country will be able to pay its debt."

Many of the debtor countries are trying to carry out austerity programs designed to help them repay some of what they owe and win approval from the International Monetary Fund of loans to pay off interest.

Last week in Cartagena, Colombia, representatives from 11 Latin American nations issued a document calling for "a drastic and immediate reduction" in interest rates charged by foreign lenders.

In Mexico City, the official news agency Notimex quoted Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog as saying the rate increase announced Monday could be considered a reprisal for the Cartagena declaration. Mexico's $87 billion foreign debt is the second largest after Brazil's.

It is estimated by World Bank experts that every one-point rise in the U.S. prime rate causes a $2.5 billion increase annually in the interest costs paid by poor nations. Thus, the new increase — from 12.5 percent to 13 percent — means $1.25 billion more in Third World interest costs annually.

Brazil, faced with a $100 billion debt that is the largest owed by a developing nation, "is examining the subject and its implications," said a Foreign Ministry spokesman Monday night in response to the increase.

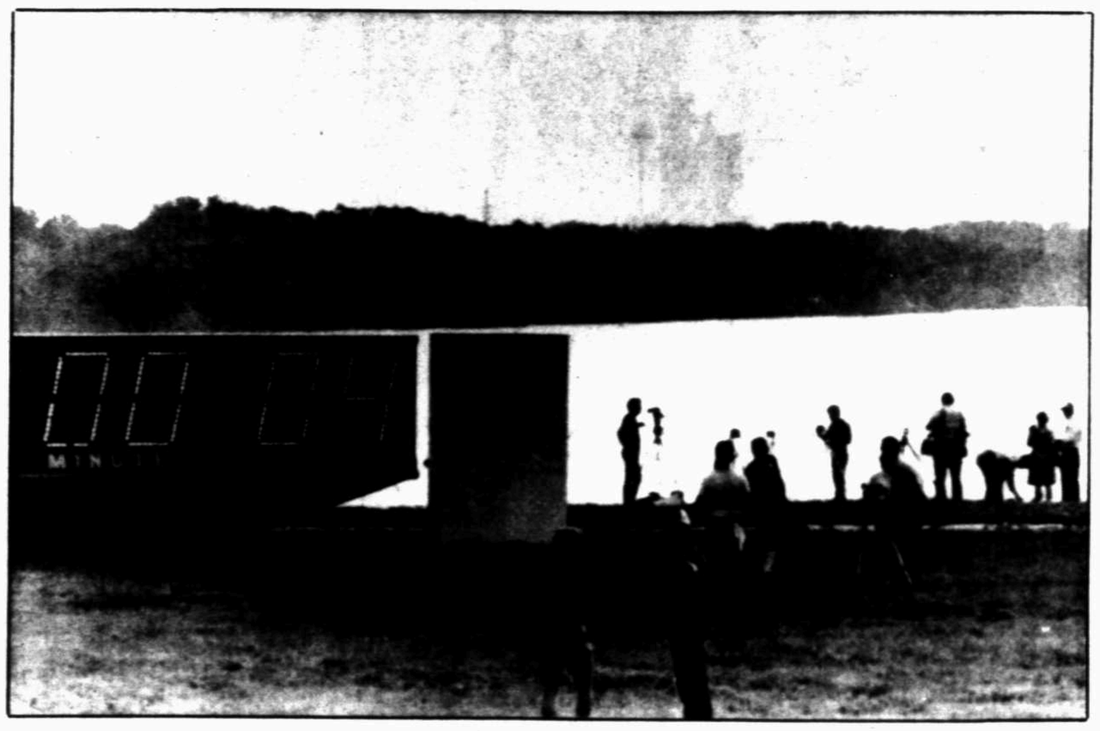

The spokesman said the government was "very concerned" about the consequences of the increase in the prime rate, which is what U.S. banks charge to their preferred customers.

Wall Street analysts said the boost was needed to offset the higher price U.S. banks have had to pay to attract funds.

In Venezuela, Finance Minister Manuel Azpurua echoed remarks made in Brazil, saying the increase "is of great concern, because it supposes a greater weight, a greater burden of debt service for all the Latin American economies."

Venezuela's foreign debt of $35 billion is the fourth largest in Latin America.

The spokesman for Brazil's Foreign Ministry, Bernarndo Pericas, said the latest rate increase "appeared to be in response" to the Cartagena meeting.

DRAW

In the May 23 hearing, attended by the four Midland County commissioners and Ahders, "one thing was obvious enough," said Brown. "Odessa was able to work on the staff of the water commission. They were politicking them well."

Odessa has denied it used politics to influence outcome of the TWC hearing.

Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis suggested that TWC's order that Odessa explore irrigation as a means to dispose of its effluent be within a time frame.

Earlier in the 1980s, the city of Midland fell under a similar but more stringent order to dispose of its wastewater, which was seeping and running into Midland Draw east of the city and past the Greenwood community. Residents in that area had complained that Midland's wastewater was polluting the underground water zones and was flooding roads and some agricultural land used for growing cotton and pecans.

Unlike its mandate to Midland, TWC only suggested that Odessa explore irrigation as a means to dispose of the effluent. Davis wants a "time frame" written into the order.

Craig said that if he goes to the hearing, he wants to be prepared to say something substantial should the TWC "unexpectedly...let us open our mouths." Craig said he had "thought of a lot of good things I could have said (but didn't)" in the last hearing.

Davis didn't seem confident of a re-hearing. Following the TWC's latest ruling, Davis dispatched to Texas Gov. Mark White a letter in which he referred to "a misguided, a misdirected board" which handed down a decision that favored Odessa over Midland. On that board are Paul Hopkins, chairman, and Lee B.M. Biggart and Ralph Roming. "Reasonableness, based on the facts..., did not prevail. Bias and prejudices were paramount...," Davis wrote.

"Midland in effect has had it," he said Monday.

DEATHS

Both Mendozas have been charged with murder, but police are still looking for the younger of the two. The elder Mendoza is in jail with bond set at $20,000.

The shoot-out apparently stemmed from a beating sustained by the younger Mendoza Thursday at a southside store parking lot from Lopez and several other Hispanics.

Lopez reportedly pointed a .38-caliber revolver at Mendoza's head and threatened to kill him, then asked him who was responsible for shots fired into the Lopez residence May 21 which wounded Lopez's mother, 37-year-old Jessie Lopez.

Further information gathered Monday by police indicates the two groups exchanged words earlier on Saturday from passing cars.

The Mendozas reportedly drove home, and Lopez's car followed later, stopping outside the Mendozas' Autumn Street residence. The Mendozas reportedly ran toward the car, one carrying a gun.

Lopez was struck, then shot twice as he got from the front passenger's side of the car, and Moreno was shot as he ran from the car, according to reports. Jessie Hernandez, 15, who was in the car with Moreno and Lopez, reportedly was stabbed after calling for help, but has since been treated and released.

The weekend shootings were the latest episode in the feud involving the Lopez, Mendoza and Dutchover families, which has continued for at least 10 years.

The southside residence of Ted Dutchover Sr. was ripped by bullets twice in the past four months, one incident leaving two men and a teen-ager suffering from minor gunshot wounds.

DEMOCRATS

Kennedy helped negotiate the agreement during a two-day trip to Minnesota where, as expected, he warmly endorsed Mondale for president.

"You will find most of the disputes involving rules and credentials are behind us," Mondale said.

In a letter to Charles T. Manatt, the party chairman, Hart agreed Monday that he would wage no challenge either in the party's rules committee or the convention to so-called "tainted delegates" committed to Mondale and elected with funds from political action committees sponsored by labor unions.

Such a challenge, Hart said, "would surely, whether successful or not, splinter Democrats at this critical juncture."

Hart pledged "to take no part in any action that makes our convention one of divisiveness or rancor."

"For years to come we will each be judged on the central question: did I do all I could to ensure Ronald Reagan's defeat," Hart said.

Hart planned to continue campaigning actively, speaking at a rally in Concord, N.H., later today, and meeting with convention delegates later in Boston.

James R. Kearns, who is accused of conspiring with narcotics trafficker Jimmy Chagra to shoot an assistant U.S. attorney in 1978, leaves the federal courthouse in Waco. Testimony in Kearns' trial is expected to begin Tuesday after a 14-member jury is seated.

Jury selection beginning for alleged hitman's trial

WACO (AP) — Prosecutors say they'll try to prove that James R. Kearns was the hired hitman in a bungled scheme to kill a federal prosecutor, who narrowly escaped death by diving under the dashboard of his luxury automobile.

On Nov. 21, 1978, former federal prosecutor James Kerr barely escaped a hail of 20 bullets that riddled his car's windshield on a San Antonio street.

Jury selection in Kearns' federal trial started Monday. U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions of San Antonio began screening 82 prospective jurors, from which a 12-member panel will be selected to hear Kearns' case.

Prosecutors say Kearns was hired to shoot Kerr by convicted narcotics trafficker Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, who has pleaded guilty to the crime. Chagra has been listed as a possible witness for the prosecution against Kearns.

Chagra pleaded guilty June 16 to one count of a two-count indictment stemming from the Kerr attack. During that hearing, Chagra said he had arranged for another man to hire Kearns to kill the prosecutor.

Kerr has since has become an administrative law judge in an undisclosed location.

Sessions denied defense motions Monday to sequester the jurors and for a continuance in the trial, which was moved from San Antonio to Waco on a change of venue.

Sessions sealed details of a plea-bargain agreement between Chagra and federal prosecutors, and it was not disclosed whether he would testify in Kearns' trial.

TSU Regent: School's problems not all gone

AUSTIN (AP) — Financial conditions at Texas Southern University have not been straightened out and anyone who thinks the Houston school is out of the red has another thing coming, a university regent said.

"We're trying to gain control over the fiscal morass," said Dr. Larry Greenfield, a Houston dentist. He added that any report that financial conditions have improved at TSU are wrong.

"Far be it from that," Greefield said.

A special audit team from the governor's office found four years ago that TSU had been plagued by unsatisfactory management during most of the 1970s.

The report said university administrators had "consorted" with two churches and a campus religious organization to award bogus scholarships to 800 foreign students to enable them to escape non-resident tuition fees. The scheme reportedly cost more than $300,000 in scholarship money.

Since that time, Granville Sawyer has been fired as president of the predominantly black school and replaced by Leonard Spearman, a former deputy commissioner in the U.S. Department of Education.

Greenfield told the Senate Nominations Subcommittee on Monday the current "crisis" is "of the magnitude of $500,000." He said it also involved foreign and other out-of-state students paying in-state tuition, which is cheaper.

Spearman reported the possible deficit to TSU regents in April, saying during the past four years the percentage of students paying in-state fees has risen from 60 percent to almost 75 percent.

"The only thing that we've accomplished," Greenfield said, "is that we're now able to be audited."

TSU's finances and future hopes were raised Monday as the Nominations Subcommittee questioned Greenfield and two other TSU regent appointees — Arthur Gaines Jr. of Houston and Andrew Melontree of Tyler.

Greenfield said he had heard that "the only way you can eat an elephant is a bite at a time, and we're biting as fast as we can."

One problem Melontree and Greenfield focused on was the low percentage of TSU law school graduates who pass the State Bar Exam. Only 14 percent percent of this year's class passed the exam.

"That's a disservice to the (law) students," said subcommittee chairman Ed Howard, D-Texarkana.

"Absolutely," Melontree agreed.

He said a special task force appointed by Gov. Mark White was expected to make recommendations to TSU regents at its next meeting, July 6. White earlier this year brought TSU a $22,000 gift from law firms to create a fund to help TSU law graduates prepare for the bar exam.

It was mentioned that 80 percent of the TSU law faculty has tenure, or job security, and Sen. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, asked if the Legislature might need to address that problem.

Subcommittee member Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, told the three TSU regents, "Yours is a much larger challenge than that of any other board in Texas."

The subcommittee voted 6-0 to recommend that the full Senate confirm the regents.

The following appointees also were recommended without a dissenting vote:

Parks and Wildlife Commission — George Bolin and Richard Morrison III, both of Houston; William Graham, Amarillo; Perkins Sams, Midland; and Dr. Ray Santos, Lubbock.

Governing board, School for the Deaf — Robert Bevill, Pasadena; Mrs. Arvil Thompson, Houston; and Ernest Fuentes, Austin.

State banking commissioner — James Sexton, Georgetown.

North Texas State University regent — Jack Hays, Dallas.

Spelling titillates viewers

By FRED ROTHENBERG

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Aaron Spelling, executive producer extraordinaire for ABC, brings millions of viewers through his golden gates of fantasy, glamour and sexual titillation and says he has no qualms about doing it.

Who cares that audiences can check their minds at the door? Not these very same viewers who have made his "Dynasty," "Love Boat," "Hotel," "Matt Houston" and "T.J. Hooker" so popular.

Only the TV critics and a group Spelling labels "the Bel Air crowd" complain about the meaninglessness of his shows.

"Forget Bel Air, forget the Emmys, but I would love to have more respect with the critics," he said diplomatically. "Your tastes are above the tastes of the typical viewer."

Spelling, a soft-spoken, white-haired, pipe-smoking TV mogul, has built an empire by never overestimating the tastes of the American public. The folks want to be entertained, and probably nobody in television history has understood the formula any better.

In the last 16 years, Spelling has done 24 series for ABC. Except for the very real and caring "Family," his previous shows were all fluff: "Mod Squad," "The Rookies," "Starsky & Hutch," "Charlie's Angels," "Hart to Hart" and "Fantasy Island."

His five returning series and two newcomers also fell off the confectioner's shelf. "Glitter" is a kind of People magazine searching for glamorous stories, and "Finders of Lost Love" is about a do-gooder reuniting former lovers who had drifted apart.

Spelling's credits also include 99 TV movies (the great majority as insignificant as his series) and the hit theatrical film, "Mr. Mom," which cost $6 million to make and has already grossed nearly 11 times that.

His Aaron Spelling Productions, which employs 1,600 people, will spend $120 million this year on TV shows, which will all have the glittery sheen symbolizing Spelling's TV philosophy.

"My opinion of the audience is that it's like (I was) during the Depression years," he said. "My sister and I would love to go to the movies, and she would love to see what Ginger Rogers wore."

Today, women of all ages gawk at their TV sets Wednesday nights to check out the latest fashions modeled by Linda Evans and Joan Collins on "Dynasty."

"When times are bad...I think escape is tremendous," said Spelling. "It's a good valve, and that's why I never apologize."

By winning the Trials last month in Memphis, the team of Malcolm Brachman, Bobby Goldman, Bob Hamman, Bobby Wolff, Ron Andersen, all of Dallas, and Paul Soloway of Bothell, Wash., qualified to represent the U.S. in the World Team Olympiad, to be held in Seattle in October. In the final they defeated Edgar Kaplan, New York, Norman Kay, Philadelphia, Bill Root, Boca Raton, Fla., Richard Pavlicek, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., Jeff Meckstroth, Pinkerton, Ohio, and Eric Rodwell, Indianapolis over 128 boards in a match that was close until the final stretch.

When the players held today's hand, Soloway and Goldman, sitting North-South, reached four spades on the auction shown. (East's no trump jump after the takeout double was a limit raise in hearts.) While the only sure losers are two clubs and a diamond, the 4-1 trump break combined with the 5-0 diamond split is more than declarer can handle, so one down would seem to be the normal result.

Declarer won the ace of hearts and immediately ran the queen of diamonds. West ruffed and now it looks as if routine defense will defeat the contract two tricks — the defenders are entitled to two club tricks and a diamond, and declarer will be hard pressed to escape another loser if West exits passively with a trump.

Instead, West chose to underlead his ace of clubs. The idea was that if East held the king-jack of clubs, both cards would be entries and West could score two diamond ruffs. Unfortunately, East elected to play his partner for the ace of trumps rather than the ace of clubs, and he inserted the 10 of clubs. Declarer won the jack and returned the suit. All would still have been well had West risen with the ace and returned a club. But West placed declarer with the king of clubs, so he took his ace and exited with a heart.

Declarer now played masterfully to make his game. He ruffed the heart with the nine of spades, led the seven of trumps to dummy's eight and ruffed the last heart with his ace. A spade to the jack enabled declarer to draw trumps, and the only other trick for the defense was a diamond.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge," will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Fighting terror

Speaking at an international conference on terrorism and means to prevent its spread, Secretary of State George P. Shultz urged that "the time has come for nations that truly seek an end to terrorism to join together, in whatever forums, to take the necessary steps."

He's absolutely correct, but that statement, while correctly identifying a couple of necessary ingredients in effectively countering terroristic activity, fails to graphically depict what must be done to make terrorism an outlawed activity. That's what it has to become if its spread is to be checked.

The international conference is a good idea regardless. It will focus attention on a problem that can touch any nation and any people. Hopefully some good will result from the meeting. But effective action to counter terrorism will take a particular resolve.

Terrorists are, by their very nature, outlaws; they are fanatics who refuse to recognize established social order and laws. They try to accomplish their goals by force. In nearly all instances that activity is illegal and their victims are the innocent, often the elderly, women and children.

Shultz's call for nations to band together in their attempt to counter terrorism is a realistic approach. It will take such a unity of purpose to effectively combat terrorism because some nations such as Libya are known exponents of terrorism. In fact, U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick openly accused the Soviet Union of supporting "small bands of violent men" who use terrorism in the guise of national liberation movements throughout the Western Hemisphere.

While the banding together of nations seeking an end to terrorism is a good vehicle to put forward a front to that activity, an indication of how far civilized society must be willing to go is given by a military court in Turkey which last week sentenced 27 leftist terrorists to death and seven to life imprisonment for political murders, attempted murders and armed robberies.

Harsh penalties are needed. Terrorists are not, after all, leading members of civilized society and sentences that work in a structured society won't work with terrorists.

Terrorism is a crime against society, not merely against its victims.

Bulgarian connection

Confirming the news leaks of two weeks ago, the Italian government's judicial system is now on record as officially accusing communist Bulgaria of organizing the 1981 assassination attempt on Pope John Paul II.

As matters stand, probably only one Bulgarian, Sergei I. Antonov, a former Bulgarian airline official, will stand trial in the conspiracy along with two Turks. All three are in Italian custody while two other Bulgarians and as many Turks appear to be out of the country and thus out of reach of the Italian authorities. Meanwhile the Turkish national who actually pulled the trigger, severely wounding the pontiff, and was seized at the scene, is serving a life term for the crime.

While the report filed by the Italian state prosecutor mentions no connivance in the plot by the Soviet Union, the message is quite plain: The Soviets had every good reason for getting rid of the pope because of the inspiration he gave the outlawed Solidarity movement in Poland, so they passed the contract along to the Bulgarians.

Moreover, as the Italian prosecutor put it, it is inconceivable that the Bulgarians would undertake such an assignment without at least the approval and consultation of the Soviets.

Curiously, the reaction of the Soviets to the charges made by Italy is subdued, almost studiedly casual. The official news agency, Tass, has gone no further than to question the reliability of the Turk gunman, whose statements to police involved Antonov and the others.

Could it be that the Soviets, after due reflection, have decided to look the other way and throw Comrade Antonov to the wolves?

It would not be the first time that the Russians have used a sacrificial goat to extricate themselves from a scandalous predicament.

Where there's smoke

Here's something to puff on:

It seems that good old American know-how is being used once again to tinker with cigarettes in an attempt to make them safer. Oh, sure, the tobacco manufacturers have been trying for years to watch out for everyone's welfare, offering all sorts of options such as filtered cigarettes, low-tar cigarettes, low-nicotine cigarettes, low-tar and low-nicotine cigarettes, skinnier cigarettes. But people have just kept right on dying.

Well, leave it to industry to see a need and fill it. Now a company in California (where else?) has developed tobacco-free cigarettes, apparently on the order of the lettuce and parsley versions that flashed in the pan years ago. These newest ones are made from an unspecified plant similar to tobacco, the manufacturer says.

The good news is that this anonymous plant apparently contains no nicotine, one of the chief baddies in the smoky smorgasbord of perils found in cigarettes. The bad news is that cigarettes made from this plant still produce carbon monoxide when they are lighted and, of course, smoke — offensive enough in itself.

The possibilities for other cigarette fillings seem endless. Perhaps an enterprising company should consider stuffing cigarettes with shredded advertisements extolling the virtues of smoking.

Put that in your cigarette and smoke it.

High court 'blesses' home porn

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court has given its blessing to home pornography. Presumably, this was not the intention of the nine solemn, black-robed justices behind the high mahogany bench. But could be the effect of their unanimous decision last week on cable television.

Jack Anderson

All they did, strictly speaking, was strike down Oklahoma's ban on cable-television wine commercials. But the way the decision was worded, it would bar states or communities from regulating the content of cable television programs.

This may give the green light to a few depraved profiteers, who use cable television to pipe the most disgusting sex scenes imaginable into American homes. I have spent the past three months investigating cable pornography. Here are my findings:

— Sex orgies that would make the Caesars blush are shown coast-to-coast on cable television. Hour after hour of this wanton sex programming is available in millions of homes at the turn of a dial. The scenes are filthy, obscene, lewd and shameful. The producers have the morality of the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah.

— Children are getting their sex education from these prurient, perverted programs. Usually, the kids gather at the home of a friend whose parents are out. In the sanctity of the home, they watch lurid sex acts that debase humanity, degrade women and corrupt morals.

— Many studies have found a statistical relationship between hard-core pornography and sex crimes. The Michigan state police, for example, found that pornography is used or imitated in 41 percent of the sex crimes they investigate. So cable sex could lead to rape, sexual assault and child molestation.

I taped some explicit sex scenes from cable television, sent copies to 50 key members of Congress and asked for their comments. They expressed shock and outrage. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., found the scenes so depraved he couldn't watch the full six minutes. He locked the tape in his office safe to keep it out of innocent hands. Yet children are free to view this stuff, my associate Vicki Warren has found.

Helms, thoroughly alarmed, drafted legislation that would bring home pornography under control. It would outlaw indecent, profane or obscene programs on cable television. As a federal measure, it wouldn't be affected by the Supreme Court ruling.

The National Cable Television Association has raised a legitimate concern. It as worried about government censorship. Its president, Thomas E. Wheeler, wrote me:

"As a journalist who has often found himself in the center of controversy because you have declined to adopt the popular approach to issues ... you did not mean to suggest that cable programming, or a newspaper columnist, or any information provider, should be free of government control only if a majority of its audience finds it acceptable."

I have always championed freedom of expression. But as a society, we have learned to take measures to protect ourselves against many things. We endeavor to isolate those who commit theft or violence. We impose quarantines against the spread of communicable diseases. Against those responsible for other hazards to public health or safety, we invoke injunctions and penalties.

But there are some things we have not been able to protect ourselves against. One is hard-core pornography, which can scar the minds of young people. If we were to spread poison where people were likely to be exposed or injured by it, we would expect severe penalties. But those who befoul the moral and intellectual atmosphere with debauched programs are polluting the environment as surely as if they were spreading something toxic.

UNDER THE DOME: Some chatty members of Congress have been a little slow to reimburse the General Services Administration for their loquacity on the telephone. Internal GSA records show that at the end of May, 20 past and present members of Congress owed a total of $12,754.81 in delinquent phone bills dating back to late last year.

Heading the overdue list are Rep. William Patman, D-Tex., ($2,387.49); Rep. Frank Harrison, D-Pa., ($2,369.21); Rep. Brian Donnelly, D-Mass., ($1,792.68); ex-Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., ($1,490.06); Rep. Timothy Penny, D-Minn., ($1,464.17); ex-Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, ($1,182.89); Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., ($426.31); Rep. Major Owens, D-N.Y., ($239.88); Rep. Sid Morrison, R-Wash., ($206.84); ex-Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., ($183.06); and Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., ($182.74).

At the bottom of the delinquent list is Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., who owes the GSA $13.50 in old phone charges.

Patman said his large overdue bill appears to be for a Corpus Christi office that's no longer in his district. He said he'll look into the matter, as did the others who were called. Donnelly's office insists it has tried unsuccessfully for more than three weeks to get copies of the bills.

EVANS & NOVAK

Moscow gaining power in gulf

KUWAIT — Fearfully exposed to Iranian attack or subversion, Kuwait is sending its defense minister on a desperate mission to Moscow July 9 to seal a $327 million Soviet arms purchase of air defense and ground-to-ground missiles, plus other modern armaments, possibly including tanks.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

"They are opening the door to us," Defense Minister Salim al-Sabah told us in an exclusive interview two days after the U.S. rejected Kuwait's bid to buy short-range Stinger anti-aircraft missiles. More in sorrow than anger, he added: "The U.S. looks at us and decides they do not approve of us. Do they really think our Stingers could be used against Israel?"

The opening of a major weapons pipeline to Moscow by this pro-Western but non-aligned oil-rich country was a decision not easily taken. It means Kuwaiti military officers must be sent to the Soviet Union for training or Soviet technicians must come here. Neither prospect pleases the virulently anti-communist Kuwaiti government.

This, then, is one more example of Reagan administration and congressional folly in submerging U.S. interests in the Arab world to the new "strategic partnership" with Israel. A key Israeli objective of this "partnership" is to block American arms for Arab states, and Secretary of State George Shultz appears to be going along.

Kuwait fears Iranian air attack in retaliation for its help to Iraq. The bustling Persian Gulf port here is a major transit point for unloading Soviet arms purchased by Iraq, whose border lies a few miles to the north.

Although long-range Iranian strategy is almost as obscure here as in the West, some officials believe that reprisals will be triggered if and when Iraq uses new Soviet missiles, probably the SS-21, against Kharg Island, Iran's major oil-loading station. Iraqi strongman, President Saddam Hussein, has said he has been promised these ground-to-ground missiles, but there is doubt here that they will be delivered before August.

The threat of subversion by the pro-Iranian Shiite minority in this Sunni kingdom is no less ominous than the prospect of overt attack. If the December terrorist bombings had been fully successful, Kuwait might have been torn apart. Bombs exploded at the U.S. and French Embassies, but they miraculously fizzled at six other targets, including vital harbor installations, the airport control tower and the crucial water desalinization plant.

Later, Kuwaiti intelligence found large arms caches, clearly intended for use as a follow-up to the bombings. Two weeks ago, a four-man terrorist group, penetrated by police, was seized with a bomb designed to blow up Kuwait's only television tower.

"The gulf war is in a momentary calm that cannot last," al-Sabah told us. He said he hoped that his 10-day trip to Moscow, where he is certain to be received on a red carpet, will "not be misunderstood" in Washington. "Our relations have been good," he said, but the U.S. must "appreciate our need for self-defense."

In addition to the Soviet arms deal, Kuwait is buying $800 million of new weapons from France. These include command-and-control radars, computers, Mirage F-1 fighter aircraft and heavy helicopters. The minuscule Kuwaiti air force, manned by gung-ho pilots but lacking combat experience, will soon be patched into the Saudi Arabian AWACS system, despite traditional Kuwaiti-Saudi rivalry. The early-warning AWACS planes are flown by U.S. pilots. As of now, the Kuwaiti air force is informed only by telephone when Iranian aircraft are spotted. Connecting Kuwait's interceptors electronically to the AWACS will save precious minutes.

Last year the U.S. had big plans for protecting the Gulf and its vulnerable Arab oil states from Iran, including a Jordanian strike force and the pre-positioning of equipment in the Gulf region. The strike force died when Israeli objections overrode the Reagan administration's plan to arm King Hussein with Stinger missiles for defense against Syria, infuriating Hussein. As for pre-positioning military equipment under U.S. control, it was never acceptable to the Gulf states, who want arms, not Americans.

The mood here grows more tense. If Iran's long-awaited offensive to isolate the Iraqi Gulf port of Basra should succeed, the road to Kuwait is short and open. The alternative routes — air attack or subversion — are equally inviting.

While the U.S. bends to Israel's political might in Washington, Moscow seizes the opportunity to gain what it has always dreamed of: power in the Persian Gulf.

CHARLEY REESE

Struggle of nations won't end

The United States cannot defend itself unless it has the will to do so and that will is being eroded from within by our own idealists.

Charley Reese

The peace movement in the United States is based on a mythological view of the world. The world some of these idealists believe is out there exists only in their heads. Such is the devotion to their myths that they willfully ignore history.

Let me say for the recored that it's too bad their mythical world does not exist. I wish it did. The difference between me and the most ardent pacifist is not our desire for peace, but my preference for dealing with the world as it is, not as I wish it were.

One of these myths is that hunger and poverty cause revolution. They proclaim that the United States can insure its security only by curing poverty and hunger in the world. This myth is so prevalent that it is believed by some American public figures who ought to know better.

If you look at the history of revolutions, however, you will see that they are not uprisings by the poor but struggles for power between the well off. Czarist Russia was not nearly as poverty-stricken before the Bolshevik Revolution as it was afterwards. The Bolsheviks themselves were not peasants but intellectuals who were well-financed by the extremely wealthy in Europe and North America. The American Revolution was led by the well-off. Cuba, prior to Fidel Castro, had one of the highest standards of living in Latin America. Castro and his leaders were upper class or middle class and their revolution was financed by the well-to-do. French Algeria was prosperous; South Vietnam was the rice basket of Southeast Asia; Nicaragua is one of the most underpopulated countries in the Western Hemisphere.

Really poor and hungry people do not have the means to make a revolution. They can only make cannon fodder for people who want to use them as an excuse to seize power. Curing hunger and poverty, which frankly is an impossibility, would not insure stability.

Another myth is that arms races cause wars and disarmament or arms control treaties make them less likely. There is no evidence in all of human history to support this claim.

War is the pursuit of a political objective by means of force. Nations arm themselves because they intend to become an aggressor or because they intend to defend themselves against an aggressor. In other words, arms are an effect, not a cause. For that reason, war is most likely to occur when there is an arms imbalance since no one ever starts a war they do not think they can win. Had there been a genuine arms race in the 1930s, World War II would probably not have occured. Sir Winston Churchill called it the most easily avoidable war in history.

What has prevented a nuclear war is the very thing the peace movement is against — the United States' nuclear arsenal. If the peace movement succeeds, it will very likely produce what it wants to avoid — a nuclear war. In an objective sense, the enemies of peace are the members of the peace movement.

Remember that there is no peace movement in the Soviet Union. Andre Sakharov, who is either dead or still in exile, demonstrates the fate of any Soviet citizen genuinely concerned about peace. The Soviets you see prattling about peace or the horrors of nuclear winters are propagnada agents of the Soviet government. The Soviets know that persuading us to subtract from our arsenal has the effect of adding to theirs at a very cheap cost.

A third myth of the peace movement is that the conflict between the United States and the Soviet Union can be reconciled. You cannot reconcile a conflict based on mutually contradictory premises. The basic premise of Marxist-Leninism is that for socialism to succeed, captialism must be destoryed. Our basic premise is that we do not intend to be destroyed. Therefore there are only four possible outcomes: (1) The Soviet Union abandons Marxist-Leninism; (2) the Soviet Union is defeated; (3) the United States abandons capitalism and independence; or (4) the United States is defeated.

The fourth myth of the peace movement is that morality is more important than force in international affairs. Unfortunately, force rules the world. I can think of no instance in history where one nation achieved a major foreign policy objective except by force or the threat of force. If you are thinking of Mahatma Ghandi, don't. He used a form of force, but what really achieved Indian independence was World War II which so exhausted Great Britain it had neither the will nor the power to hang on to its empire.

Judge rules against mobster

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge has ruled reputed mobster Joseph Bonanno does not have the right to approve the cover of a paperback edition of his autobiography, and refused to order the recall of the books.

Bonanno, 79, sued publisher Simon & Schuster for $13 million, complaining the cover of "Man of Honor" made him look like "a cheap gangster." The suit is pending.

State Supreme Court Justice Irving Kirschenbaum also decided Monday the recall would be "unduly costly and burdensome."

Ruling delayed on Reagan album

CHICAGO (AP) — Three Dixon businessmen and RCA Records return to court July 6 after a judge gave them more time to settle a dispute over the re-release of Bible readings made 30 years ago by Dixon native President Reagan.

U.S. District Judge Stanley J. Roszkowski delayed a decision Monday on whether the businessmen may sell the album, "Ronald Reagan Reads Stories from the Old Testament."

RCA Records, a division of RCA Corp., sued the businessmen, contending a contract gives it exclusive rights to market the album. The defendants argue RCA's copyright expired in 1980.

Scarsdale must permit creche

NEW YORK (AP) — The village of Scarsdale must permit a creche in a public park at Christmas, a federal appeals court has ruled, saying the display does not violate the separation of church and state.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Monday overturned a ruling that banned the creche last year. But it said there should be a larger sign stating the creche was privately maintained.

The creche was moved to private property in 1981 after village trustees denied use of the park. It was not set up the last two years.

Judge waits for official word

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A judge says he's waiting for a decision from Gov. James Blanchard before acting on the extradition of an Alabama killer seeking asylum in Michigan.

Berrien County District Judge Leo Cook said Monday that Blanchard's legal adviser has urged John C. Chance's lawyer to challenge the constitutionality of Chance's prosecution before the governor decides whether to accept the Alabama extradition warrant.

Chance, 30, fled from Alabama in March and was arrested in Michigan in April.

Chance and his brother were sentenced to life in prison for the death of a storekeeper during a robbery. The Chances claim their cousin did the killing.

The brother was granted asylum in Michigan three years ago by then-Gov. William Milliken.

Invalid's apartment fire probed

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Authorities are investigating the cause of a fire that killed a 95-year-old invalid who was strapped to a chair while his housekeeper went to lunch.

Irving Wallach was found dead by firefighters Sunday afternoon, police said. The blaze affected only his apartment.

Lou Betchell, the housekeeper, told police she restrained Wallach so he wouldn't remove a catheter while she was away.

Ms. Betchell said she had no idea how the fire started, police said. Although she said Wallach didn't smoke, investigators found old cigars in his nightstand.

Opponent says Studds lied about homosexual affair

BOSTON (AP) — Saying it is time to "take off the gloves," Plymouth County Sheriff Peter Flynn is making U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds' homosexual affair with a teen-age House page the focus of his Democratic primary challenge.

"From day one he's misled everyone. He's said it is a homosexual incident, but it's obvious to those people who read the Califano (congressional censure) report and are familiar with the whole incident that it has nothing to do with him being homosexual," Flynn said Monday.

"It's a breach of his trust. He abused young people entrusted to the care of Congress. He used alcohol and got a boy drunk and had a sexual encounter with him," he said. "It's time for me to indicate to people they've been lied to."

Studds, 46, was considered nearly unbeatable in the 10th District before he was censured by the House last summer for having an affair with a 17-year-old male page in 1973. Studds has said the relationship was "mutual and voluntary."

The Sept. 18 Democratic primary battle with Flynn will be Studds' first test before voters in the district, which includes Cape Cod and New Bedford.

Studds received a mixed reception during initial appearances in his district following the censure. He was cheered during a Portuguese-American parade in New Bedford, but was booed and jeered by pockets of voters in some other appearances.

Flynn said it was time to "take off the gloves," partly due to his frustration in trying to get Studds to debate the issues of the campaign with him.

Flynn, 44, a one-time state representative, had said in January that he would not remind voters of the censure or Studds' homosexuality.

Flynn said Monday he also would ask U.S. Sens. Edward Kennedy and Paul Tsongas to retract a letter they sent asking voters to contribute to Studds' campaign. The letter raised the prospect of Studds' opponents receiving heavy funding from "national right-wing groups that want him out of office ..."

Flynn said the Massachusetts Democrats' letter was misleading because Studds has accepted money from political action committes and out-of-state sources.

"It is not easy to call a congressman a liar. Frankly, I do not like it, nor do I like involving our fine senators in this sordid episode," Flynn said in a statement released Monday.

"But ... when a man continually lies about his deserved censure for seducing a young boy and calls it homosexual rights; when a man continually misrepresents the tenor of the campaign, then it is time to call him what he is: a liar."

Jackson urges end to 25 years of tension between Cuba, U.S.

HAVANA (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, welcomed here by President Fidel Castro, declared the United States and Cuba must forgive each other for decades of hostility, "redeem each other and move on."

The Democratic presidential candidate received a ceremonial greeting from Castro when he arrived Monday at Jose Marti Airport from El Salvador on his five-day visit to Latin America. He planned some sightseeing before a scheduled 3½-hour talk with the Communist leader.

Castro told reporters at the airport that Jackson's visit might "possibly" lessen strains between Cuba and the United States.

"I invited him out of our friendship to the United States," Castro said through an interpreter. "He honors us with his visit."

Jackson called for an end to 25 years of enmity between the two nations.

"We must forgive each other," he said. "We must redeem each other and move on. We must give peace a chance. Together, our nations have the capacity to bring peace in this hemisphere."

Jackson attended a folk festival Monday night at the National Theater of Cuba and later told reporters his discussion with Castro would take in not only Cuban-American tensions but a wide range of Latin American concerns.

"In the course of our dialogue, we will talking about human rights and political prisoners," Jackson said. "We will be talking about the divisions in El Salvador and Honduras and what's happening in Nicaragua."

Cuba and the United States have been at odds since 1959, when Castro and his supporters deposed dictator Fulgencio Batista. Diplomatic relations were broken in 1961, when a CIA-backed force of 1,400 Cuban exiles was defeated in an invasion attempt at the Bay of Pigs.

Recent American presidents have accused Castro of sending troops and advisers abroad to act as surrogates for the Soviet Union. The Reagan administration says they are now stationed in 12 countries. It also criticizes the Cubans for encouraging revolutionary movements in Central America and alleged human rights violations.

Tension flared in 1980 over the so-called Mariel Harbor exodus in which the United States welcomed thousands of Cuban refugees arriving in Florida only to find they included mental patients and criminals sent by Castro.

A longstanding U.S. trade embargo against Cuba remains in effect.

Jackson was touring Havana before his talk with Castro. His schedule called for a visit to a hospital and the Museum of the City of Havana.

It was apparent that considerable time and money were devoted to preparing for Jackson's two-day visit.

The elaborate cultural festival at the National Theater of Cuba included folk music and dancing, ballet and popular music. Castro was on hand for the first part of the program.

Democratic Presidential candidate the Rev. Jesse Jackson is accompanied by Cuban President Fidel Castro at Havana's Jose Marti airport after his arrival from El Salvador in a symbolic journey and search for better relations between the United States and Cuba.

Girl placed in custody of county

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A 15-year-old girl with a kidney ailment was placed in the custody of the county Monday so she could receive blood transfusions which her mother, a Jehovah's Witness, refused to permit.

Orange County Superior Court Commissioner Gilbert N. Mueller denied an emergency request for custody by Arnold Thomas Acosta, 34, of Huntington Beach, the father of Melissa Pina Acosta of Los Alamitos.

Acosta said he wanted custody of his daughter because he was convinced she would die without the transfusions. Acosta, an ex-convict, said he had not seen his daughter for 11 years until a June 14 hospital visit.

Mueller instead removed the girl's mother, Susie Acosta, as her legal guardian and appointed attorney Corrine Adams of the County Department of Social Services to represent Melissa's rights.

The commissioner also ordered Melissa's physicians to administer any conventional treatment for her, including blood transfusions or surgery.

Melissa was taken by ambulance to Santa Ana Hospital Medical Center, which permits doctors to treat Witness members according to their religious beliefs.

Leaders of the 10-nation European Economic Community pose outside the Fontainebleau Chateau, Fontainebleau, France, before today's summit session. From left are Andreas Papandreou of Greece, Poul Schluter of Denmark, Pierre Werner of Luxembourg, Garret Fitzgerald of Ireland, Margaret Thatcher of Great Britain, Francois Mitterand of France, Bettino Craxi of Italy, Ruud Lubbers of Holland, Wilfrid Maertens of Belgium, Helmut Kohl of West Germany and Gaston Thorn of the EEC. Common Market nations to close talks on British trading dispute

By DAVID MASON
AP European Correspondent

FONTAINEBLEAU, France — Leaders of the 10 Common Market countries met today for the final session of a summit aimed at resolving a financial dispute between Britain and the rest of the European trading bloc.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is seeking a reduced British budget contribution as part of a package settlement of Common Market financial problems.

British sources said they expected French President Francois Mitterrand, host for the two-day meeting, to present proposals worked out during the night by conference officials for a draft agreement.

Mitterrand's spokesman, Michel Vauzelle, said today that the government leaders had agreed on a series of proposals to promote greater unity among European citizens.He said the measures included a single European passport for all citizens of member nations, creation of a European flag and European anthem, and formation of a European radio and television network.

The 10 leaders discussed the financial dispute for 90 minutes Monday at the 16th century Fontainebleau chateau, then instructed their foreign ministers to come up with the framework of a solution. In turn the foreign ministers handed the outline to lower-ranking officials who worked into the early morning today on a draft agreement.

British sources, who would not be identified by name, told reporters a new formulation on Britain's future contributions to the Common Market's budget, now running at about $24 billion annually, was under discussion. The plan would also encompass contributions by other members and would be pegged to relative wealth, or the gross national products, of the nations.

Summit meetings in Athens in December and in Brussels in March failed to resolve the pressing money problems, which Common Market officials say may lead to severe difficulties by October. Officials have said the community will be at least $2.5 billion in the red by year's end — the first deficit in the group's 27-year history.

Britain and West Germany are only members of the bloc that contribute more money than they receive in benefits. For four years, Mrs. Thatcher has led a drive for financial reform.

The biggest drain on the trading bloc's finances is support prices for 8 million farmers, most of whom are in France and Italy.

Berlin mission not 'escape hatch'

BERLIN (AP) — West German diplomats have closed the main door to their mission in East Berlin in an effort to end the stream of up to 20 East Germans per day seeking an "escape hatch" to the West.

Informed sources said the embassy is now crowded with about 45 East Germans seeking a way to reach West Germany. Officials of the Bonn government have tried with little success to persuade the East Germans to leave, Hans Otto Braeutigam, head of the mission, told Western reporters Monday.

West German officials refused to specify how many East Germans are inside, but government spokesman Peter Boenisch told a news conference in Bonn that the mission had reached the limits of "what is technically and physically possible."

A drop in the number of emigrants allowed out of East Germany in the past month apparently prompted dozens of East Germans to seek help from the West German government.

"We have had up to 20 shelter-seekers a day," Braeutigam said. "We decided last Thursday to henceforth conduct talks with all visitors at the front gate. The door to the main building is closed."

All visitors will be restricted to a small room at the main gate, he said.

"We are no longer able to give any shelter. The mission is no escape hatch. The crisis of the mission must not become a political crisis," Braeutigam said.

U.S. won't aid abortion-linked population fund

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Reagan administration says it will halt millions of dollars in aid to the U.N. Fund for Population Activities unless the agency pledges that the money will not subsidize or promote abortion.

The warning was delivered by Undersecretary of State Gregory J. Newell in a speech Monday at a meeting of the U.N. organization. He said the United States refused to support "the termination of fetal life as a technique of family planning."

In Washington, a White House official said Newell's remarks reaffirmed administration policy that prohibits federal funding of abortions in the United States or abroad.

Newell said the United States' "determination to follow our conscience is as clear and strong as is our respect for the moral judgments and social solutions that others adopt."

A source in Geneva who spoke on condition of anonymity said "an accommodation has been reached" in which the United States would continue its funding, but only for programs in nations where abortion was not practiced as a form of population control.

The source, familiar with Newell's speech and the population agency, said the Development Program had worked out the accommodation with U.S. officials. The source did not give further details of the accord.

Wimbledon kind to seeds

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — In sharp contrast with last year's tournament, when a host of seeds went tumbling out on opening day, this year's Wimbledon tennis championships began much kinder to the top players.

Just one seed was tripped up in Monday's first-round matches — No. 10 Anders Jarryd of Sweden, felled by Scott Davis of Santa Monica, Calif.

FORM APPEARED in little danger today. The women's competition — celebrating its centenary — was to take Center Court with Martina Navratilova opening defense of her title against Peanut Louie, the 23-year-old right-hander from San Francisco.

The British bookies have made Navratilova, the French Open and Grand Slam champion, the most prohibitive favorite since World War II to regain her crown — and begin her quest for yet another Grand Slam collection of Wimbledon, the U.S., Australian and French titles.

Perhaps the only extraordinary development took place off court, when top seed and defending champ John McEnroe called an official of the All-England Lawn Tennis club "very nice" and then declared to reporters that from now on, he was going to "let my racket do the talking."

THE KIND words were for Buzzer Hadingham, chairman of the All-England club, who had just written a letter to the fiery New Yorker's father promising no "witch hunt" at Wimbledon over John's notorious tantrums at line calls.

McEnroe certainly gave no cause for any Monday as he bested Paul McNamee 6-4, 6-4, 6-7, 6-1.

But afterward, McEnroe refused to appear at the obligatory postmatch news conference until the television cameras were switched off. He explained that at a previous news conference, a British TV reporter had purposely tried to stir him up and then aired his responses out of context. The club said it "expects to resolve the matter in the near future."

As to his match with McNamee, McEnroe said there were "a few bad line calls, but it was not in my best interest to say anything at the present time."

But there was a word of warning: "I have no idea if I'll continue to hold back."

As McEnroe was dismissing McNamee on Center Court, next door at No. 1 Court, Ivan Lendl was having a tougher time against Dick Stockton, the veteran doubles player who has not been playing much singles of late.

HIS GRASS-court game still not completely in tune after defeating McEnroe on clay two weeks ago to win the French Open, Lendl double-faulted to give Stockton the fourth set, then traded service breaks for the first five games of the last before holding on for a 4-6, 6-0, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4 triumph.

Both McNamee and Stockton agreed that, should form continue to hold, Lendl would have a virtually impossible task in a final against McEnroe.

"It's not a betting match right now," Stockton said.

Cubs drop 7-6 decision

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — The Midland Cubs dropped a 7-6 decision to the El Paso Diablos here Monday night to fall to 2-3 in the second half Texas League West race.

The Cubs lost this one in the eighth inning when El Paso's Mike Felder reached first on a fielder's choice, stole second and scored on a single by Dave Klipstein. The Cubs had scored a run in the top of the eighth to knot the score at 6-6, but Klipstein's single off Cub reliever Ron Kaufman proved to be the difference. It was the first loss of the year for the newly acquired Kaufman.

El Paso's Paul Hartzell, trying for a major league comeback, picked up the victory by halting the Midland rally in the eighth.

Chicago Cub Ryne Sandberg scores against the St. Louis Cardinals in a recent series that may put the second baseman among the list of Cub heroes of the past.

Sandberg enters as hero

Owen's winning hit will be forgotten

CHICAGO (AP) — Ryne Sandberg's five-hit, seven-RBI, heroics in the Chicago Cubs' comeback victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday was like an echo from Wrigley Field's high-scoring past. With one exception — the wind Saturday was blowing in.

Sandberg, called the greatest player in the game by Cards Manager Whitey Herzog following the the game, had three singles and homered in both the ninth and 10th innings to twice lift the Cubs into ties. Then former Midland Cub Dave Owen singled in the winning run in the 11th to give Chicago a 12-11 victory.

THAT PUT Sandberg's name alongside the likes of Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies, who figured prominently in a couple Wrigley classics, as does Bruce Sutter, Sandberg's double homer victim in the Cubs' 12-11 victory in 11 innings.George Mitterwald, Dave Kingman, Bill Buckner and Dave Rosello are other names that come to mind.

"You know what it reminded me of," said Lou Boudreau, a member of baseball's Hall of Fame, a former Cub manager and for more than two decades a member of the Cubs' broadcasting team.

"It reminded me of the 1948 playoff game," said Boudreau who hit two home runs and a pair of singles to lead Cleveland to an 8-3 victory over Boston in a single game playoff for the 1948 American League pennant.

Boudreau, 66, has missed few of the recent "great games" in Wrigley Field, including what many consider the greatest — Philadelphia's 23-22 win over the Cubs in 10 innings on May 17, 1979.

The Phillies led 12-1 and 21-9, then blew that 12-run lead as Kingman cracked three home runs to drive in six runs and Buckner hit a grand slam and had seven runs batted in and the Cubs tied it at 22-22.

The wind was blowing out at 18 miles an hour and the two teams combined for 50 hits including 11 home runs. Schmidt hit two home runs, the second coming off Sutter, who was then with the Cubs, in the 10th inning to break the 22-22 tie.

Sports Analysis

Schmidt also was on center stage on April 17, 1976. Again the wind was blowing out and the Cubs scampered ahead 13-2 before Schmidt started an assault which would include four home runs in four successive at bats, the last coming in the 10th inning and providing the Phillies with an 18-16 victory.

A year later on July 28, 1977, the Cubs and the Cincinnati Reds hooked up in a "Wrigley Field Classic," again with the wind blowing out.

The Reds jumped ahead 6-0 but the Cubs kept battling back with Mitterwald providing the fireworks. Mitterwald hit three home runs and drove in eight runs, helping erase Cincinnati leads of 10-8 and 13-11.

Then Rosello committed a costly error in the 12th but the Cubs came back again and finally won it 16-15 in the 13th inning on Rosello's run-scoring single.

THE WIND blowing in was the was one difference from those games and the one Saturday, which will go down as the game in which Sandberg overcame Willie McGee of St. Louis.

McGee was all set for the hero's mantle, having knocked in five runs with a bases-loaded triple and two-run homer and adding a single. When Sandberg tied the game in the ninth, McGee had a chance to hit for the cycle. He did with a run-scoring double and eventually scored himself for a two-run lead in the 10th.

Again Sandberg tied it, this time with a two-run homer with two outs in the 10th.

Owen's bases-loaded single won it in the 11th but in future years, although much of the nation watched the contest on television, few will remember the name of Dave Owen.

They will remember Ryne Sandberg and, possibly, Willie McGee.

Boston's Bird joins Celtic elite

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The names of three Boston Celtics of the past adorn the National Basketball Association's most valuable player trophy. Now a name from the present will join them.

Larry Bird, the main cog in Boston's drive to a 15th world championship, Monday took his place alongside other greats in Celtic history by being named winner of the 29th Maurice Podoloff Trophy as the league's best player for 1983-84.

In compiling 52 first-place votes from a panel of 76 sportswriters and broadcasters who regularly cover the NBA, the 6-foot-9 forward also became only the third non-center to earn the MVP award in the past 25 years.

TRAILING BIRD in the balloting were New York Knick forward Bernard King, who had 11 first-place votes, and guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers with five first-place votes. Bird, who had finished second in the MVP balloting the last three seasons, received a total of 652 points. King had 373 points and Johnson 305.

Bird accepted the honor here Monday night during the league's annual awards banquet.

The NBA also paid tribute to Celtics' President and General Manager Red Auerbach by naming its annual coach of the year award in his honor.

Auerbach has been responsible for Boston's titles, either as a coach or general manager, by collecting such talent as previous MVP winners Bob Cousy, Bill Russell and Dave Cowens.

And fittingly, it was Auerbach — who selected Bird in the 1978 draft as a junior eligible from Indiana State — who presented him with the trophy.

"There are great players, but every once in a while, there is a great, great player — one who comes along maybe once in a generation," Auerbach said of the 27-year-old Bird.

Bird, in turn, appeared touched by Auerbach's praise.

"I'm very proud to be a Boston Celtic," Bird said. "It's been an honor for me to show my talents in Boston."

Earlier, the native of French Lick, Ind., was asked how he felt at joining the elite list of MVP's from the Celtics. He quickly dismissed any similarities.

"I don't like comparisons," he said. "I never saw Bill Russell play. But he'll always be the best."

Auerbach expressed the same sentiments.

"In 37 years in the NBA, I've seen them all, and they were all different," Auerbach said. "You can't make comparisons between a Bill Russell and a Larry Bird."

But Auerbach said that Bird, in the mold of Russell and other old Celtics, would perform any role asked of him.

"He's of the old school," Auerbach explained. "He comes to play, and all he wants to do is win."

INDEED, BIRD'S performance during the past season was one of the main reasons for Boston's drive to the Atlantic Division title and its league-best 62-20 record.

Bird, who has been named to the All-NBA first-team in each of his five professional seasons, averaged a career-high 24.2 points and 10.1 rebounds per game — the seventh and 10th highest in the league, respectively. His 88 percent shooting from the free-throw line was the best in the NBA.

In the NBA finals against Los Angeles, Bird averaged 27.4 points per game and became one of the few players to earn double honors as the MVP in the playoffs and the league.

Mr. Fan loser in tennis, golf

Running between the dots with pointed fingers...predictions...and even praise...

Since Wimbledon is underway, it's time to air an annual gripe. I've never thought of tennis as a sport for the fan. Mr. Fan is expected to sit on hands and quietly say things in muted tones like, "Did you see that fantastic shot? Shhhh..."

Golf is another sport where the fan is the loser. Sports is supposed to full of emotion. But in tennis and golf, Mr. Fan is required to keep his mouth shut. I think that's absurd. Is it harder to play tennis and golf with people shouting than it is to hit a Nolan Ryan fastball with 42,000 people shouting?

WHAT ABOUT trying to hit a free throw in a noisy gym or trying to catch a touchdown pass in the Super Bowl where Mr. Fan can act like he feels?

As far as I'm concerned, tennis, golf and any other so-called quiet sports are not really fan-oriented sports as long as Mr. Fan is penalized at the event. These are sports where only the competitors are allowed to show how they feel. Isn't that right, Johnny Mac?...

And a prediction while we are on the subject of Wimbledon. Either John McEnroe or Martina Navratilova will be upset in this year's event. The British press would gladly accept a McEnroe loss and so would a lot of other people...

Who says you can't ever return home? Brad Swendig has and already has a championship under his belt to prove it. Swendig recently became the new head coach of the City of Midland Swim Team and his team won the 31st annual running of the West Texas Invitational swim meet Sunday at Doug Russell Pool.

Brad is a Midlander from the word go. He was a swimming standout with COM in his younger days as well as in high school. And before travelling off to Auburn, he was Midland College's answer to sliced bread. While at MC in 1976-77, Swendig won four NJCAA swimming titles, named All-American in six events, participated in the USA-USSR Games and helped the Chaps become the No. 2 swimming team in the nation. Welcome home, Brad...

AND WHILE speaking of returning home, my 20-year high school reunion is Saturday in Snyder. Now talk about your 1963-64 football greats — Jimmy Wilson, Larry Lee, Danny Aycock, the Stewart brothers (Billy and Jackie) and Rob Hall. Now there's a list to remember — and I get to see them all Saturday.

I still haven't forgiven Hall for ruining a possible moment of glory. In a game against Andrews in 1963, both teams were wearing black pants. Just as I was about to make an open field tackle on an Andrews runner, Hall made the tackle — on me. "What are you doing wearing black pants?" was his only reply...

JUST AS Channel 9's Skip Baldwin thought the NBA championship was over and forgotten, it occured to me to remind the Skipper that the Boston Celtics won the title in seven games, just as I predicted in print.

Skipper gave me a rough time on that prediction and dished out some heavy ridicule at one of the Cubs' games. I didn't forget, Skip, and you knew you had this coming. Skip's closing comment, "LA in five."

And Skip may have been right if the Lakers' Magic Johnson had kept his "magic." One Laker fan called the R-T to find out if Magic had been paid off by the bookies. Of course, I answered, "No, he's just a friend of mine..."

Mets take over first place

Martinez helps Padres extend lead

By The Associated Press

The New York Mets moved one game ahead of Philadelphia atop the National League East Monday night with a 10-5 belting of the Phillies behind Ron Darling's fifth straight victory and Keith Hernandez' offensive show.

Hernandez hit a three-run homer, doubled and scored three runs. Darling, 8-3, worked the first 6⅓ innings, giving up 10 hits and all five runs. He is the first Met to win five straight games since Jerry Koosman — now with the Phillies — did it in 1976.

The Mets took a 2-0 lead thanks to sloppy Philadelphia fielding. Mike Fitzgerald singled, as did Darling, who moved to second when left fielder Jeff Stone bobbled the ball for an error. Fitzgerald scored when catcher Ozzie Virgil dropped the relay throw for another error, with Darling advancing to third. Darling scored on Wally Backman's single.

New York made it 4-0 in the third when Ron Gardenhire singled home two runs, then the Mets made it 8-1 in the fourth, with Hernandez delivering the key blow with his opposite-field blast.

ELSEWHERE in the National League, former Midland Cub Carmelo Martinez hit a three-run homer and Terry Kennedy and Graig Nettles also homered to lead a 19-hit San Diego attack in a 9-4 romp over Los Angeles as the Padres extended their lead to four full games in the NL West.

Baseball Roundup

Bill Madlock slugged two solo home runs to back Jose DeLeon's four-hitter as Pittsburgh blanked the Chicago Cubs 3-0.

In the first game of a twi-night double-header, Mark Bailey belted two solo home runs to lead Houston to an 8-5 triumph over slumping Atlanta. In the nightcap, the Braves broke their five-game slide as Bruce Benedict keyed a five-run second inning with a two-run double and Dale Murphy homered in a a 6-4 victory.

Willie McGee raced home from first on a bases-loaded single by Darrell Porter to cap a five-run third-inning rally as St. Louis scored a 5-4 victory over Montreal. Cardinals right-hander Joaquin Andujar became the National League's first 12-game winner and Bruce Sutter earned his 17th save with two innings of shutout relief.

Wayne Krenchicki's one-out homer in the top of the ninth lifted Cincinnati over San Francisco 2-1. Eddie Milner led off the game with a Reds' homer.

IN THE American League, rookie right-hander Jaime Cocanower tossed a five-hitter for 8⅔ innings before Rollie Fingers came on for his 13th save as Milwaukee beat Toronto 2-1 in the opener of a twi-night double-header. In the nightcap, Mark Brouhard stroked a two-run single in a four-run second inning as the Brewers completed its sweep with a 9-4 decision.

Pete O'Brien singled in Gary Ward in the bottom of the 11th inning to give Texas a 5-4 victory over California. The Rangers are still in last place in the AL West, but only four games out of first place after the extra-inning victory over the league leading Angels.

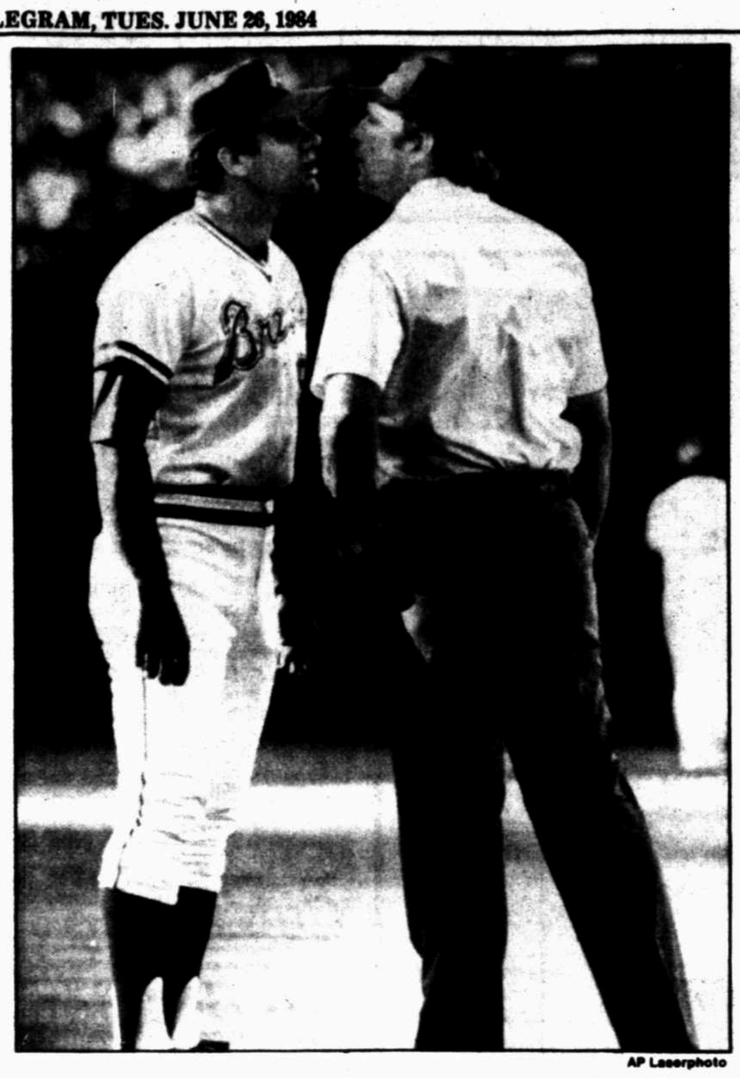

Jim Beattie threw an eight-hitter and Spike Owen had an RBI-double and a run-scoring single to lead Seattle to a 6-1 victory over Chicago.

Mark Gubicza fired a three-hitter, George Brett and Steve Balboni unloaded three-run homers and Kansas City handed the A's a 16-0 beating, the worst defeat for the franchise since they moved to Oakland from Kansas City in 1968.

Outfielder Garry Hancock pitched the final 1⅓ for Oakland, retiring all four batters he faced.

Red-hot Dave Winfield had five hits for the third time this season, including a two-run double that paced a New York comeback as the Yankees downed Detroit 7-3. Winfield leads the AL with a .368 average.

Tony Armas drove in three runs with a triple and a double and Mark Clear registered the first save by a Red Sox pitcher other than Bob Stanley as Boston defeated Baltimore 7-4.

Key players drop from NL rosters

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Outfielder Jack Clark, a National League All-Star candidate having the best season of his eight-year major league career, said Monday he will undergo surgery on his right knee.

Clark, who has a .320 batting average for the San Francisco Giants, said after an examination of his knee that the team doctor recommended immediate arthroscopic surgery.

Dr. Gordon Campbell, the team's orthopedic surgeon, told Clark he could be sidelined for 10 days to three weeks after the relatively simple operation.

Campbell said Clark could be out as few as two weeks, but could miss as many as eight, depending on what is found during the surgery. Campbell said Clark will be placed on the 15-day disabled list but he didn't know when the team would make the announcement.

The surgery, scheduled for Thursday, might force Clark to miss the All-Star game at Candlestick Park on July 10. He is fifth among outfielders in the fan balloting, but was expected to be one of the players named to the National League roster.

"I'd rather get it fixed and be out two weeks than take a chance and shorten my career," Clark said. "It's a minor thing, but it'll ease my mind to know that it was taken care of."

Clark, a notoriously slow starter in previous seasons but generally regarded as one of the best right fielders in the league, is tied for seventh in the league with 11 home runs. He also has 44 runs batted in, sixth in the league, and a .434 on-base percentage, second in the league.

MEANWHILE, THE Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals also lost key players Monday.

First baseman Leon Durham of the Chicago Cubs was placed on the 15-day disabled list, retroactive to Sunday, because of a jammed right shoulder.

Durham jammed the shoulder sliding into second base Saturday in the 11th inning with what eventually proved to be the winning run in a 12-11 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Replacing Durham, who had 12 home runs and 52 runs batted in with a .308 average, will be outfielder Thad Bosley, whose contract the Cubs purchased from their Iowa Triple A affiliate.

Veteran pitcher Bob Forsch will be lost for the remainder of the 1984 season after undergoing back surgery, the St. Louis Cardinals said.

Moffet sets world mark on Olympic road

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — John Moffet's world-record performance in the men's 100-meter breaststroke gave him a spot on the U.S. Olympic swimming team. Only slightly less in importance was an end to a string of second-place finishes to perennial rival Steve Lundquist.

"Sure it was frustrating," the 19-year-old Stanford University junior said of his five-year pursuit of Lundquist, whose year-old world record he broke during Monday's opening round of Olympic Trials. "But now, if I'm the favorite, that's fine with me."

MOFFET AND Lundquist qualified for next month's Olympic Games at Los Angeles with their 1-2 finish on Monday, the first of six days of competition at the Indiana University Natatorium. Moffet had a time of 1 minute, 2.13 seconds, while Lundquist was clocked at 1:02.16. The previous world record was 1:02.28, set by Lundquist at last summer's Pan American Games in Venezuela.

"It was kind of nice having something physical in front of me. It was something to go for," said Moffet, who had never beaten Lundquist in that event in a major meet. "But I didn't look at him as a goal. I tried to think of where I wanted to be myself, not to key just on him."

Moffet, of Costa Mesa, Calif., finished behind Lundquist in the 1982 World Championships and the 1983 Pan American Games. Lundquist, 23, also beat Moffet in Monday morning's preliminaries.

In the finals, Moffet said: "I felt real good. I felt good with my stroke, but I died a little coming home. Other than that, the race went as I wanted it to. I lost mobility in my arms and legs and felt like I was bogging down in the water the last 5-10 meters. I just wanted to get to the wall."

LUNDQUIST suffered a shoulder injury in a water skiing accident last summer.

The shoulder "felt fine. I just got beat coming off the wall (at the 50-meter turn)," he said. "I thought I had a chance to win, but I came off the wall, took two strokes and he (Moffet) shot by me. I said to myself, 'Let him go, and maybe he'll die.' He didn't die as much as I thought he would. He's a great competitor."

Only four events were contested on Monday. Today's schedule included the men's 100 butterfly and 400 individual medley, and the women's 200 freestyle and 200 breaststroke.

Mike Heath, who set an American record of 1:48.58 in the men's 200 freestyle preliminaries Monday morning, lowered his own record in the finals with a time of 1:47.92. The world record of 1:47.55 was set two weeks ago by West Germany's Michael Gross.

Heath, 19, said he thinks he can challenge Gross for a Gold medal.

"I figured if I could take the first 100 smooth, I could use that as a warmup for the second 100, which is the strongest part of my race," said Heath, who resides in Dallas. "In the Olympics, I'll just have to go out a little bit faster and really concentrate on the last 100.

"He (Gross) might be a little more worried now," Heath said, referring to his near-world performance.

The second U.S. Olympic spot in the 200 freestyle went to Jeff Float, 24, of Sacramento, Calif., who finished with a time of 1:49.70.

ROWDY GAINES, who visited Midland last week, was hoping to win a berth in this event, but finished seventh overall and losing his chance to qualify for five Olympic events. Gaines' best event, however, is the 100 freestyle. He also hopes to win berths on three relay teams, but that may also be in jeopardy after Monday's showing.

Tracy Caulkins of Nashville, Tenn., who hopes to qualify for six individual events and two Olympic relays, easily won the women's 400 individual medley. Her time of 4:41.72 was far ahead of the other Olympic qualifier, Sue Heon of Clarks Summit, Pa., who was timed at 4:46.37.

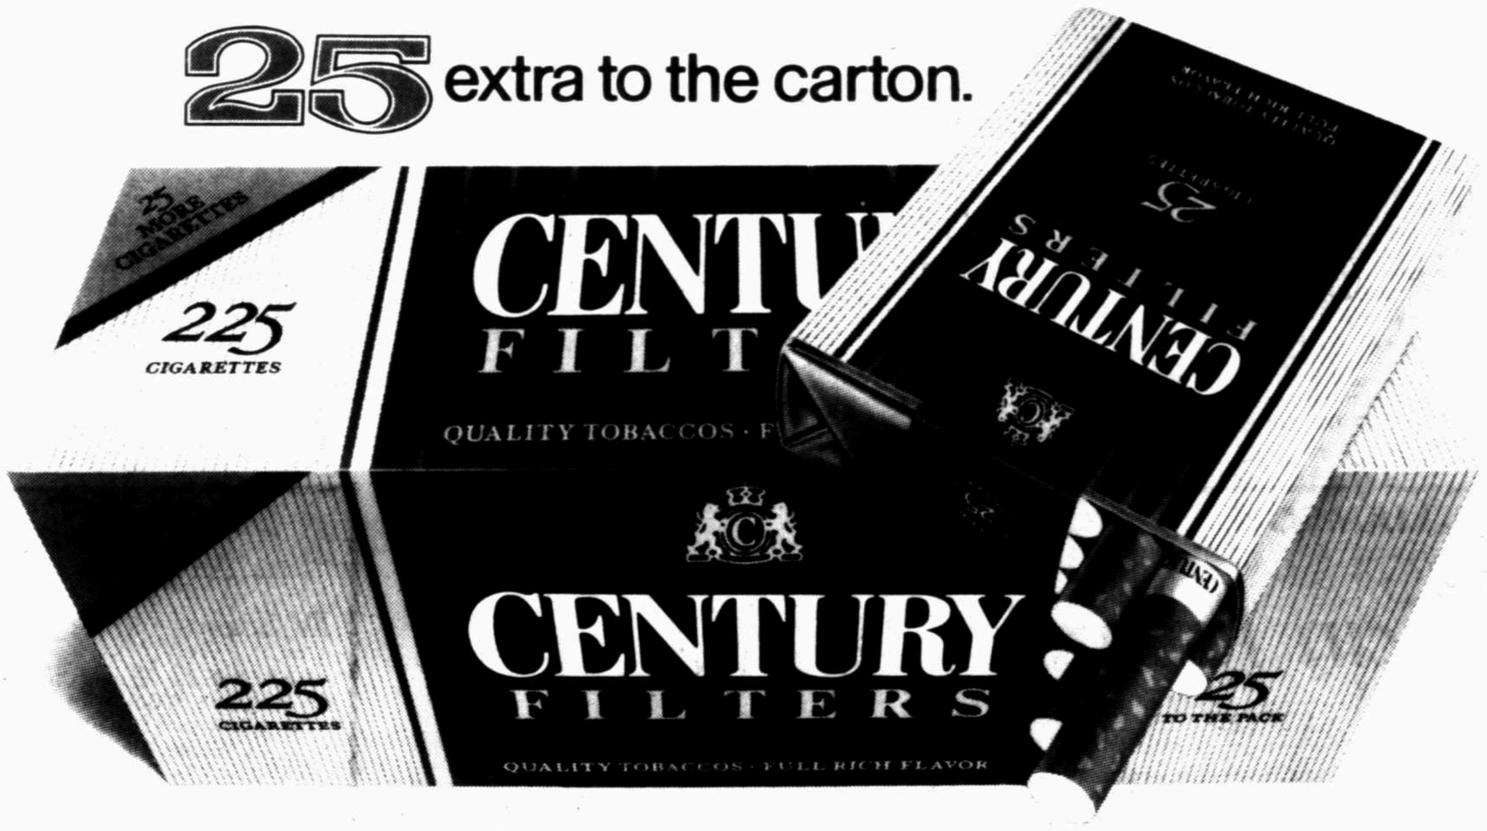

"I don't know if (winning the 400 IM) is a relief, but I'm glad to get that out of the way because it's probably my most demanding race," said Caulkins. "It's nice having that out of the way so I can concentrate on the rest of the events. I have five more, one a day."

Caulkins was entered in today's 200 breaststroke.

Nancy Hogshead, 22, of Jacksonville, Fla., won Monday's 100 freestyle in 56.03 seconds and made the Olympic team along with 16-year-old Carrie Steinseifer of Saratoga, Calif.

Prime rate hike brings outcry from debtor countries

The Associated Press

The move by major U.S. banks to raise their prime lending rates to 13 percent, the fourth increase this year and the highest since October 1982, brought a swift outcry from major debtor countries.

The increase Monday from 12.5 percent directly affected international lending, which is tied to the prime.

As a result, debtor nations — already owing some $810 billion — face an interest increase of another $1.25 billion, according to experts at the World Bank.

As the banks raised their benchmark rates, citing the high cost of funds and pressure on reserves partly due to government borrowing to finance the deficit, the government said that its budget deficit was headed toward record heights.

The dollar also reached new highs against world currencies on Monday and the nation's automakers reported their best mid-June sales period in six years.

The latest prime rate increase brings the year's total debt increase for poor nations to as much as $5 billion this year.

In Brazil, the world's leading debtor, Central Bank spokesman George Diab said the half-point increase in the prime will add another $500 million to Brazil's staggering $100 billion foreign debt.

In its deficit report released in Washington, the government said it spent a record $33.9 billion more than it took in last month, sending the deficit for fiscal 1984 toward a record-setting pace.

The Treasury said the deficit for the first eight months of the fiscal year ending Sept. 30 totaled $140.2 billion, a rate that would lead to a yearly deficit of more than $210 billion, compared with last year's record $195.4 billion, the report said.

However, the Reagan administration is still estimating a $177.8 billion shortfall for the fiscal year.

The deficit for the first eight months of fiscal 1983 was $161.8 billion.

Meanwhile, the dollar hit new highs in international currency trading, sending the British pound and Canadian dollar to new lows.

Dealers attributed the rally to rising interest rates and prospects for new tax breaks for foreign investors in dollar-denominated securities.

In Detroit, the automakers said as the summer selling season began, new car sales were 12.4 percent better than the comparable period a year ago.

The increase kept the auto industry's year-to-date sales rate at a healthy 27.8 percent ahead of last year's pace.

The carmakers sold 28,872 autos a day in mid-June, up 12.4 percent from 25,681 a day in the year-earlier period.

The annual rate of sales — the most widely used yardstick of the industry's health — came to 8.5 million for the period and stayed at 8.2 million for the year, which is close to the industry's estimated capacity.

In other economic news Monday:

—The National Association of Realtors said resales of single-family houses declined 1.3 percent in May after rising for five straight months. High interest rates were blamed for the decline, as they were for earlier government reports that housing construction dropped in May and sales of new houses declined in April.

—Citicorp Information Services senior economist Peter Crawford said real gross national product will rise at about a 3.5 percent annual rate in the current quarter — down sharply from the first quarter rise of almost 9 percent. He said inflation, which hit an annual rate of 3.7 percent in the last quarter, should be up 5 percent this quarter and will rise to 7 percent by yearend.

Lawyer says Monsanto knew chemical danger

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Monsanto Co. officials knew the chemicals used at its plant in Nitro were harmful to workers but went ahead with the work anyway "for the money," said a lawyer representing seven retirees.

The lawyer for the seven, Stuart W. Calwell Jr., presented opening arguments Monday in the first of a series of lawsuits in which 170 past and present Monsanto workers are seeking more than $2 billion.

U.S. District Judge John T. Copenhaver has said this trial could take six months.

Calwell told the six-member jury he would prove that although the company knew its employees were endangered by handling chemicals such as dioxin, it continued the work "for the money."

Monsanto lawyer Charles Love said in opening statements that he would show the company took care of its workers. Citing a 1950s incident involving the chemical PAB, the lawyer said Monsanto went to extraordinary lengths to protect workers from the chemical, which had been found to cause bladder cancer.

In the years Monsanto made and sold herbicides containing dioxins, 1949 to 1969, no buyers complained about health problems from the substances, Love said.

Love was to conclude his opening statements today, and Copenhaver said testimony would then begin.

Copenhaver told the jury that lawyers will talk primarily about eight chemicals: 2,4,5 T, trichlorophenoxyacetic acid; 2,4 D dichlorophenoxyacetic acid; 2,3,7,8 TCDD tetrachloro-dibenzoparadioxin; PAB, or Para Amino Biphenyl; carbon disulfide; hydrogen sulfide; aniline; and chlorine gas.

U.S. auto sales strong

DETROIT (AP) — The traditionally strong summer car-buying season has begun with a bang, with U.S. automakers posting mid-June sales figures 12.4 percent higher than the comparable period a year ago.

The six major manufacturers reported Monday that car sales for June 11-20 were the best for the period in six years.

The increase kept the auto industry's year-to-date sales rate at 27.8 percent ahead of last year's pace.

"These numbers, the high rates, shouldn't be a real surprise," said David Bloom, an automotive industry analyst for First Boston Corp. in New York.

Bloom said he believes sales may slow down toward the end of the year.

The carmakers said they sold 28,872 autos a day in mid-June, up 12.4 percent from 25,681 a day in the year-earlier period.

The annual rate of sales — the most widely used yardstick of the industry's health — came to 8.5 million for the period and stayed at 8.2 million for the year, which is close to the industry's estimated capacity.

General Motors Corp., the industry giant, averaged 17,046 car sales a day in the period, 12.1 percent ahead of 15,204 in the 1983 period.

Ford Motor Co. sales were up 13.7 percent, at 7,034 a day compared with 6,188.

Chrysler Corp. sales were up 10.5 percent at 3,605 a day compared with 3,261 a day last year. Those figures don't include sales of 667 a day for the company's hot-selling Dodge Caravan and Plymouth Voyager minivans, which are listed as trucks.

American Motors Corp., the only U.S. producer selling fewer cars a day this year than in 1983, said its sales fell 7.6 percent in mid-June, to 514 a day from 556 a day.

However, AMC's Jeep sales have been running strong. Like the Chrysler minivans, Jeeps are not included in car sales reports.

Increase may be reprisal

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog says that the latest half-percent increase in the U.S. prime rate might be considered a reprisal for last week's Latin American summit conference, the government's Notimex news agency reported.

He also was quoted Monday as saying that the increase will have harmful effects for Mexico.

Notimex quoted Silva Herzog as saying that the latest half-percent increase "constitutes a negative response to the demand of the Latin American debtor nations and as such seems as if it might be a reprisal for having carried out the Cartagena meeting."

Mexico was one of 11 Latin American nations that participated in a summit conference last week in Cartagena, Colombia, on the debt crisis.

Silva Herzog was quoted as saying that Latin nations at the Cartagena conference called for measures to produce an immediate drop in interest rates on the international markets.

The latest increase took the prime rate to 13 percent.

Dollar takes early dip; Gold steady

LONDON (AP) — The dollar dipped against all major currencies except the Canadian dollar in early European trading on today. Gold prices were steady.

Dealers said profit-taking took some of the strength out of the U.S. dollar after Monday's surge to record highs against the British pound and Canadian dollar.

The rally was attributed to prospects of a new tax break for foreign investors in the United States and rising interest rates.

The Canadian dollar was trading at a new record of 1.31285, slightly ahead of Monday's record-breaking closing price of 1.3105.

Industry seeks regulation

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials of a half dozen solar energy businesses in Austin are proposing a city code to regulate the installation of solar water and space heating equipment.

The code would make solar power more attractive by ensuring the equipment was installed properly and would also help control shoddy companies that could give the emerging industry a bad name, proponents of the regulations say.

Industry officials said they would offer a draft of the proposed code to the City Council this week.

"If the projections (about solar power) are correct, we are going to be sitting in a million-dollar industry here in a few years," said Chris Higgs, president of WEBA TEXSUN.

"If we don't regulate now when the industry is gearing up, we are going to have a great deal of difficulty later," Higgs said.

The proposed code describes the kinds of materials and equipment to be used and prescribes how they are to be installed.

Under the proposal, a permit would be needed from the city to install a solar water or space heater.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Anadarko Basin leader in deep wells

DENVER — The Anadarko Basin led the nation in 1983 for the number of wells drilled 15,000 feet or deeper. More than $8 billion for drilling and completion was spent in 1983 in Texas for the 24,297 wells completed there. The Bend Arch province was the most densely drilled geologic province in 1983 with one well drilled for every 2.97 square miles, reports Petroleum Information.

Supreme Court lets ruling stand

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court let stand an appeals court ruling ordering a new trial in a dispute over oil sales, in which Cosden Oil and Chemical Co. had been awarded over $2 million in damages.

Cosden sued John Thedford Sims, Jaco Oil Co. Inc., and Wheelco Oil and Gas Co. over the oil sales, with the Howard County trial court awarding Cosden $343,109.84 in actual damages and $1,750,000 in exemplary damages.

However, that award was reversed and a new trial ordered by the Eastland Court of Appeals on ground the trial court committed error in excluding testimony of an expert witness for the defendants regarding a "drop meter" involved in measuring oil deliveries.

The Texas Supreme Court ruled "no reversible error" had been made, allowing the appeals court ruling to stand without writing a new opinion.

Oil, gas drilling permits increase

DENVER — A total of 2,315 permits to drill wells for oil and gas were issued in the United States during the week ended June 15, Petroleum Information reported.

The total was up 25.5 percent from the 1,845 permits issued the previous week. The weekly total was also higher than the 1,928 permits issued during the same week a year ago.

Permits to drill, obtained by PI from government agencies, are a measure of the drilling intentions of the nation's oil operators.

AGA's new publication now available

ARLINGTON, Va. — The American Gas Association's publication "The Gas Energy Demand Outlook: 1984-2000" is now available.

The publication projects gas demand in the year 2000 will range between 18.7 trillion cubic feef (Tcf) and 25.4 Tcf. The market share of natural gas in the nation's total energy use is projected to be between 22 and 30 percent.

U.S. natural gas consumption in 1983 was about 17 Tcf or about 25 percent of the nation's energy use.

The new demand projections, which update 1982 data, forecast total U.S. energy use in the year 2000 in the 80 to 90 quadrillion Btu range.

Firm completes discovery in North Dakota

CASPER, Wyo. — Double Eagle Petroleum and Mining has announced completion of an oil discovery in Burke county, North Dakota.

The well, Double Eagle No. 22-17 Linda in section 17-161N-90W, flowed at a rate of 192 barrels of oil per day during a 15-hour flow test through a 1/4-inch choke, flowing tubing pressure 370 psi, producing from the Madison formation through perforations between 6,428 and 6,440 feet. Nearest production from the same interval is in the Lostwood Field 2.5 miles away.

Double Eagle owns a 12.5 percent working interest in the well and 960 acres of adjacent leases. Tyrex Oil Co. also owns 12.5 percent. The remaining 75 percent is owned by other oil companies.

Hrubetz Oil completes confirmation well

DALLAS — Hrubetz Oil Co. has completed a confirmation well to its No. 1-16 Thorson Minnelusa discovery in the Powder River Basin. The new well, the No. 3-16 Thorson, tested for 1,672 barrels of oil per day with no water.

The No. 3-16, also a Minnelusa well, was drilled to a total depth of 7,100 feet and completed in two zones through perforations from 6,868-6,892 feet and 6,901-6,923 feet. Both wells are located on a 600-acre tract in Moorcroft townsite, Crook county, Wyo. Hrubetz Oil Co. has a 100 percent working interest in both completed wells. A second development well is being completed; two additional development wells are drilling with further development activity planned.

The new field is located eight miles southeast from Hrubetz' earlier discovery, the Federal No. 1-12. The Federal well was completed in November 1983. Development on this lease is also continuing.

Cable company leaves viewers short-circuited

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — If you've got the money, the city of Odessa has got the time.

That is, if the money can be invested in a cable TV franchise.

Stuck with a contract which leaves them no easy way out, the Odessa City Council finds itself hard pressed to solve the problems of local subscribers calling for action against the city's single franchise, Community Cablevision of Odessa.

During a Monday morning work session, the cable company made a presentation to the council explaining the Copyright Royalty Tribunal, which Community Cablevision claims is keeping the company from adding more channels to its basic service.

After hearing the explanation of how this tribunal charges "exorbitant" royalties when more than one signal is carried by a cable company, council members leveled questions at the Community Cablevision contingent.

Councilwoman Melissa Hirsch suggested the company compensate its subscribers for poor service with a free month of service.

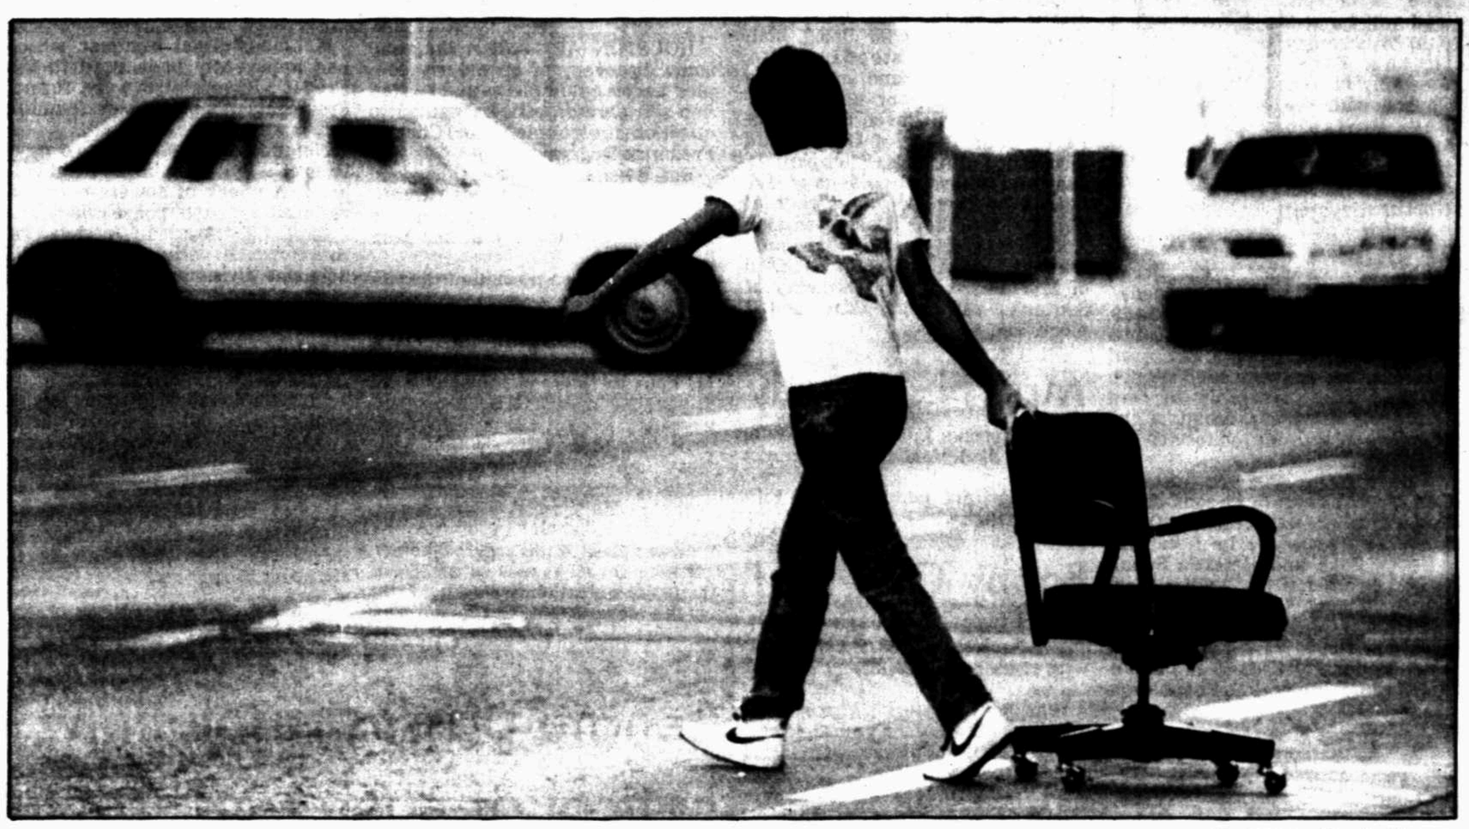

The company explained that problems with the signal flashing on and off were caused by the heat affecting circuit breakers. But the session left 23,000 frustrated viewers with little hope for better reception.

The city's one way out of the 20-year agreement, which runs into the next century, is if Community Cablevision fails to provide — as the contract states — "first class service."

"I personally believe they are not providing first class service," said Ms. Hirsch, also a private attorney, but, "The contract leaves no options."

Canceling the franchise agreement would almost certainly bring the city into a lawsuit. Because of the lack of specific guidelines in the contract, it would be difficult to prove a default.

Gramm: Gay rights only one issue of Senate race

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Gay rights is only one issue of the U.S. senatorial race against Democratic nominee Lloyd Doggett, Phil Gramm said Monday during a noon news conference at Tiger Charter.

But last week a gay rights bill was turned into the only issue between the two men seeking the Senate seat being vacated by Republican John Tower.

The two men's opposing stands on gay rights only symbolizes their philosophical differences on other points, such as a balanced budget, right to work laws, a strong national defense and prayer in school, contended Gramm, who won the Republican nomination by a two-thirds margin over his other opponents.

"We're down to a classic race between the conservative and the liberal," said Gramm, a congressman from College Station.

"For six years I've fought to control spending while the government is committed to spending," he said.

Gramm had submitted an amendment that would force the government to follow a balanced budget, but Doggett voted against a similar resolution in the State Senate where he now serves, said the Republican.

Peace comes through strength and strength through a strong national defense, contended Gramm. "When the President sent troops to Grenada, I supported the president's decision and so did most Texans," he told the group of supporters from all ages packed into a conference room.

On right to work laws, Gramm said he feels "it is a fundamental right for the citizen to join or not to join a union. Being a member of a labor union should not be a pre-condition to getting a job in this state." Doggett, he contended, doesn't support the right-to-work law.

The gay rights bill, which Doggett supports, was only one of several points of differences that Gramm noted last week during a news conference in Austin. But it was the one point that made the headlines.

"It's a issue relevant to the people of Texas," said Gramm. The bill supported by Doggett would call for affirmative action in hiring homosexuals.

"The bill he supports and I oppose is not THE issue in this campaign, but you add it to the balanced budget, Grenada, right to work and prayer in school. It's another ingredient in a long litany of items."

Gramm earlier had noted that Doggett was opposed to voluntary prayer in school.

To the group of supporters, many from Odessa, Gramm appealed for a coalition of conservative Democrats and independents to merge with the Republicans in getting him elected this November. Those conservative Democrats who voted for congressman Kent Hance in the runoff are "disappointed," he noted. "But they don't have to accept a liberal as a senator. We're putting together a coalition, people who pull the wagon and pay the taxes."

Although he switched from the Democratic party to run as a Republican two years ago, Gramm said he doesn't give blanket support to all of President Reagan's programs. His most recent disagreement came last week over the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration bill — a piece of legislation which Reagan has been pushing but which Gramm voted against.

That bill, he contended, "didn't address the problem, only the symptoms. Giving out blanket amnesty will encourage millions more people to seek it. We should allow goods and services to come across the border — not people. We're the only major country in the world who doesn't protect our borders."

Construction has begun on Midland's newest elementary school, slated for completion in 1985. When completed, the school, located west of Loop 250, will resemble this architect's rendition.

Construction under way on elementary school

From Staff Reports

Construction has begun on a new elementary school for the Midland Independent School District.

Located in the new subdivision of the Scharbauer Ranch west of Holiday Hill Road between Andrews Highway and Wadley Drive, the school will be similar to De Zavala, Quanah Parker and Santa Rita elementaries. The exterior will be slightly different in appearance.

HBF Construction Inc. of Midland was awarded the construction bid. Architect for the 51,000-square-foot building is Terry M. Harden of Geren Associates/CRS.

Building costs of $2.5 million will be paid with funds approved by Midland voters in a bond election held in April of 1982.

Construction is expected to be completed in early June of 1985.

Talks continue against parking on right of way

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

"It's dangerous," said Albert Stewart, superintendent of Midland County's road and bridge department.

"It's hazardous," added Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis.

But is there a law against it?

"There might be...," said Assistant County Attorney Mark H. Dettman.

And so the Midland County commissioners on Monday once again agreed that nothing — including trucks, other heavy equipment and Dumpsters — should be parked on the right of way of county roads.

"Someone is going to run into the backend of one of those things," Davis said.

"They're parking out there," said Bill Harral, the county's consulting engineer, "and there's a danger at night that somebody will hit them (trucks). They're not there by permission of the county. They're just out there. It's the same thing with the Dumpsters...Somebody could get killed."

Stewart proposed a solution.

"I'll tell you something that will get their attention:" Hauling off the offending trucks and Dumpsters and impounding them at the county barn.

Owners of the impounded equipment would have a "chance to recover" it after paying a fee, noted Commissioner Durward Wright, who suggested the county attorney notify owners of the trucks and Dumpsters of the county's policy.

Aside from the hazard of a car or other vehicles possibly crashing into an object lodged on the side of the road, Stewart said that such blockage impedes the mowing of weeds and grasses on the right of way.

Harral said the county has the "the right" to remove "anything that's left on the right of way...if it's abandoned or if it's a detriment to the public."

The commissioners noted that some drivers park their trucks on the right of way near their houses because their driveways are too narrow to accommodate the trucks, which are either owned by the drivers or their companies.

Harral noted that equipment left on Midkiff Road's right of way particularly poses hazards since that thoroughfare is narrow.

Commissioner Win Brown said such parking is a "health hazard: hazardous to life and limb."

Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig alluded to the likelihood of suits stemming from crashes involving trucks or Dumpsters on the county's right of way. "They would sue anyone and everything."

Harral noted the county previously has notified owners of the Dumpsters that those trash bins belong on private property and not on the public right of way. Some have been moved from the right of way.

"It's a liability problem for the owners of the vehicles and the Dumpsters," he said.

Negotiators go back to work on school bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislators went back to work on an education bill today after a late-night session that ended with a day-ending show of temper.

House and Senate negotiators working out differences in their two bills reached agreement on some major issues Monday, but left others — including school finance — unresolved.

The meeting ended Monday night when Senate Education Committee Chairman Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, became upset with House Education Committee Chairman Bill Haley, D-Center.

Haley, chairman of the conference committee, refused to recognize El Paso Sen. Tati Santiesteban's motion to quit for the night. Parker, who had folded his jacket over his arm and seemed ready to leave, complained to Haley, saying:

"The Senate conferees are ready to go (home for the night) and you're being an —— about it and you're about to lose me."

— High school seniors must pass a test to get a diploma.

— The State Board of Education will review rules passed by the University Interscholastic League.

— Schools must offer tutoring sessions.

— Reduced teacher-student ratios for lower grades.

Among the unresolved issues are:

— Funding public schools.

— Teacher competency tests.

MARK LEWIS

I've crossed Great Divide into adulthood

I recently underwent a rite of passage so subtle I didn't even notice it at the time. Even now I couldn't tell you exactly how or when it happened, but at some point in the last two or three years I ceased to be a member of the younger generation.

Now, this is a wrenching discovery to make at the tender age of 28, especially for someone still waiting for his beard to come in. But it's true — I'm over the hill and I have to face it. The days of my youth are forever gone.

I stumbled across my change of status the other day during a conversation with a friend, a crotchety old coot of 32 who was grumbling about the state of rock music today. This hidebound musical reactionary was claiming that nothing interesting or inspiring has been heard on the radio since 1973, a point I was hotly disputing when I suddenly realized he was right.

Not about the music; the quality is still there if you take the trouble to find it. What's changed since 1973 is the audience. The music of the '60s generation reflected our utopian vision: "All You Need is Love." We heard inspirational music because we wanted to be inspired, whereas today's kids only want to be diverted.

"Today's kids." The first sign of impending senility is when you start talking about "today's kids" and how they fail to measure up to the high standards of your own generation. That's when I knew I'd crossed the Great Divide into adulthood.

After shedding a few bitter tears for the lost promise of my youth, I decided to kick off my declining years with a trenchant analysis of the New Generation Gap.

This is best exemplified by the current TV sitcom "Family Ties," which contrasts the values of a '60s couple, now grown up and married, with those of their teen-age children. Mom and Dad are still into eating health food and changing the world, you see, but the kids prefer junk food and Republican politics.

This, I submit, is a travesty of the generation gap as it is traditionally understood. The younger generation is supposed to be idealistic, naive, impatient and impractical — in a word, immature. The older generation is supposed to restrain the unruly impulses of the younger, while absorbing its energies and channeling them in useful directions. But what are we to do with a younger generation which refuses to be young?

A recent poll of college freshmen revealed that "Making Money" was the most important thing in life for most of these 18-year-olds, while "Developing a Viable Philosophy of Life" was named by perhaps 1 or 2 percent of the respondents.

Now, I don't object to crass materialism per se — I'm as crassly materialistic as my paycheck allows me to be. As an adult, I've earned the right to be selfish. But there's something obscene about an adolescent who cares more about floating mortgage rates than he does about saving the world.

This generation, spawned by the Me Decade and nurtured by the culture of narcissism, has fewer illusions than mine did. At 5, they're too sharp to believe in Santa Claus. They're precociously mature at 10, worldly-wise at 14 and thoroughly jaded by the time they graduate from high school.

Today's teens are too hip to be real. Where does a 15-year-old get off being cynical? What has he got to be cynical about? Algebra?

But what is childhood for if not to believe in the way things should be, before adulthood strips these illusions away and shows you the way things really are? It's the memory of this lost innocence that makes the grim realities of life endurable — the effortless faith of the child is transformed into the more fragile but still hopeful faith of the adult through a painful process called growing up.

I guess that's what touched off this little tirade — my own sense of being grown up and doomed to maturity forevermore. As the days dwindle down to a precious few, I look to the current crop of kids to renew my youthful enthusiasm, and the little thugs refuse to cooperate.

I guess every generation is in a hurry to grow up, but I'm afraid the current group has succeeded all too well — the child is supposed to be father to the man, but they seem to have inverted the process.

Well, if that's maturity, they can have it. I'm just looking forward to my second childhood.

Six injured in bus accident

APACHE JUNCTION (AP) — Six students from an El Paso, Texas, seminary were recovering today from injuries received when their bus ran off the road and flipped three times near Apache Junction.

The accident occurred about 3:30 p.m. Monday on U.S. 60 approximately six miles east of the Phoenix suburb, the Arizona Department of Public Safety said.

The driver of the vehicle, Ron Jacenko, 27, of El Paso, said he could not remember exactly what happened, although he knows that the bus began to sway and he could not keep it on the highway. Jacenko was not seriously injured.

There were 21 people aboard the bus, including six who were hospitalized, said DPS spokesman Sgt. Allen Schmidt. Those hospitalized were Marcello Coehtero, 22; Enrique J. Mendoza, 14; Urbano Lopez, 18; Rafael Morales, 12; Luiz F. Preto, 6, and Robert Lopez, 14.

The bus was enroute from the School of Jesus and Mary in El Paso to Our Lady of Sorrows Church in Phoenix, its first stop on a vacation trip to Montana, said Sister Mary Barbara, who teaches at the school. The group was to stay overnight in Phoenix.

Sister Barbara said the Rev. Regis Babinett, pastor of the school, was traveling with the group.

"He said it was a miracle of Our Lady that they weren't all killed," she said.

The injured were flown by helicopter to four Phoenix-area hospitals: Valley Lutheran, Mesa Lutheran, Scottsdale Memorial and Good Samaritan, but 15 were treated and released. None of the remaining were in critical condition, the DPS said.

Police still baffled by couple's killings

HOUSTON (AP) — After the gruesome discovery of an elderly couples' bodies cut in pieces and stuffed in a refrigerator, officers wanted to question the couple's son, Charles Frederick Rogers.

But Rogers, 43 at the time, who lived an obscure life in his parents' home, disappeared after the June 23, 1965 killings and no one has seen him since.

There has been no sign of the former Shell Oil Co. employee since that night, when police officer C.M. Bullock, called to the house by a worried relative, opened a refrigerator door to find the remains of an 81-year-old man and a 79-year-old woman.

"It just looked like a bunch of meat," said Bullock, now a captain with the Houston police department. "I didn¾,YE?1FIst as I was closing the door, I saw the heads through the clear glass of the vegetable bin."

Police found traces of blood on the bathroom and kitchen floors and on the steps leading up to the tiny upstairs bedroom where Rogers lived.

A bloodstained hammer which had apparently been used to kill Fred C. Rogers also were found. Fragments of a bullet were found in Edwina Rogers' brain.

Neighbors complained two days later of a foul odor in the neighborhood. A check of sewers revealed various body parts, police said.

Capt. L.D. Morrison Jr., head of the Houston police department's homicide division at the time of the killings, said investigators have no evidence implicating the son but officers believe what the younger Rogers knows "may shed some light on this case."

Officers found a keyhole saw, a straight razor and a .22-caliber pistol in Charles Rogers' room. Lab tests showed blood and bits of human flesh on the saw blade, police said.

Bullock said he seldom thinks of the murders now and is reminded of them only when someone calls to ask about them.

"For a while, it broke me of the habit of opening refrigerators," he said.

Senate passes resolution critical of energy office

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A resolution criticizing the U.S. Department of Energy for searching for a site in the Texas Panhandle to locate a high-level nuclear waste repository has been passed by the Texas Senate.

The resolution, introduced by Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, states the construction of a repository "in Deaf Smith or Swisher county has not been shown by the U.S. Department of Energy to be in the public interest." The two Texas sites are among five sites in the country being considered by the DOE for the repository.

"I concur wholeheartedly with Sen. Doggett's resolution," said Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, who cosponsored the measure along with Sens. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, and Bill Sims, D-San Angelo.

The Panhandle locations would put the repository "right in the square middle of the Ogallala aquifer," Montford said. "That's the kind of mentality certainly I question."

Sarpalius echoed Montford's comment, saying it "doesn't make sense" to drill a shaft through the aquifer for the repository. "They're giving the shaft to the state of Texas," he said.

"We're are saying to the Department of Energy (to) look elsewhere," Doggett told his colleagues in the Senate. "In the strongest possible way, we are saying we do not want a nuclear waste dump here in Texas."

Doggett said a repository would adversely affect business in the West Texas area, as well as oil and gas drilling operations.

"The possible construction of a large exploratory shaft at one of the proposed repository sites would have potentially severe impacts on the surrounding region since millions of tons of salt would have to be brought to the surface," SCR 20 states, "threatening massive water and soil pollution of nearby farmland and aquifers."

Senate doesn't want nuclear dump site

AUSTIN (AP) — After several lawmakers said there are good reasons against disposing of high-level nuclear wastes in West Texas, the Senate passed a resolution telling the federal government that it must look elsewhere for its dump sites.

"Our answer is no, no, no, when it comes to locating a nuclear waste site here," said Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, co-sponsor of the resolution.

"With this resolution, we are saying to the (U.S.) Department of Energy, 'Look elsewhere,'" he said Monday.

At present, the Department of Energy has chosen two sites in Texas among five nationwide as possible locations for a high-level repository for nuclear waste matter.

"Right now, we stand a two-in-five chance of having them choose Texas," Doggett said.

"We're speaking about high-level nuclear waste. That's the really hot stuff," added Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin.

Federal law allows governors and state legislatures to veto putting a nuclear dump in their states within 60 days of the president recommending a location to Congress.

The Senate's resolution, adopted without opposition and sent to the House for action, would exercise that veto and empower the lieutenant governor and House speaker to register the veto if the Legislature isn't in session when a presidential decision is made.

Approval sought for ATT's long distance plan

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utilities Commission is being asked to approve an AT&T Communications' plan for discount long distance calling within Texas that would charge a fixed monthly rate for an hour of night and weekend telephone calls.

The plan, similar to a national billing plan AT&T intends to offer Texas customers beginning Aug. 1, also would provide greater discounts for night and weekend calling beyond the hour, AT&T said in filing its request with the PUC on Monday.

"For many customers who are not served by any other long distance company, it will offer the first price alternative to regular long distance," said Tom Jones, AT&T vice president.

Under the plan, Texas customers would pay a monthly fee of $14 for one hour's worth of calls to anywhere within Texas. The calling period would be from 11 p.m. to 8 a.m. Sunday through Thursday, and from 11 p.m. Friday until 5 p.m. Sunday.

Calls over the first hour but during the same rate period would be billed at 20 cents per minute, AT&T said.

Customers opting for the service also would receive a discount of about 38 percent on calls made between 5 p.m. and 11 p.m. Sunday through Friday, rather than the 25 percent discount they currently receive, said AT&T spokesman Phil Bode.

AT&T asked the utilities commission for approval to start the plan Aug. 1.

Cable

The city has suggested to the cable company that the contract be renegotiated, but there is no way to force Community Cablevision to forfeit an agreement which virtually assures them the franchise until 2002.

This brings the city to another option — allowing a second company to operate within city limits in competition with Community Cablevision.

"There is not an exclusive on their franchise," said Councilman Vern Foreman, suggesting that any company with the qualifications and funding was welcome to appear before the council.

Community Cablevision and its parent company, Capital Cities Communications, claim to have invested $20 million and strung almost 400 miles of new cable since taking over the franchise in late 1982 from a company that had held the franchise since 1968. One company operating in West Odessa was rejected by City Council when it proposed expansion of its service inside city limits.

The council recently gave the developers of Mission Dorado preliminary approval on a separate system for their far east side development where no cable has yet been strung. But Foreman said, "There's not room for two cable companies to make a living."

Noting Mission Dorado was a "defined new area," Foreman suggested that a similar arrangement might work in another defined area, but that two companies could not operate profitably city-wide.

Councilman Sherman Cox said no other company has expressed interest in moving into Odessa. He suggested that dissatisfied subscribers should have their service disconnected.

"I think that would bring them to the bargaining table quicker than anything," said Cox, adding that cancellation would leave local viewers without cable until a new company was brought in.

A cable TV task force appointed by Mayor John Minor held a public hearing last week during which several unhappy subscribers suggested competition as the solution to the problem, but one task force member agreed with Cox's idea.

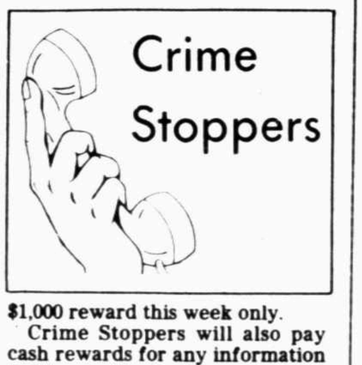

Crime Stoppers looks into oil well tampering

Texas law states that a person who tampers with equipment, cap, or seal on a gas or oil well has committed a felony offense.

Midland Crime Stoppers is seeking information on such an incident.

On June 12, Midland County investigators were called to the Parker and Parsley Inc., Miles "A" lease, on County Road 140 East, three-eighths of a mile west of FM 715. Investigators discovered that someone had opened a valve on an oil storage tank allowing approximately 185 barrels of crude oil, valued at over $5,000, to flow onto the ground.

Anyone having information that leads to the arrest and indictment of the person responsible, Crime Stoppers will pay a $1,000 reward this week only.

Crime Stoppers will also pay cash rewards for any information leading to the indictment of felony offenders. In Midland, call 694-TIPS. In Odessa, call 333-TIPS.

All callers can remain anonymous.

West Texas project to receive funds

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Water Development Board (WDB) has approved an agreement with the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation for funding of a West Texas cloud seeding demonstration project design, with the work to be carried out by Texas Tech University.

WDB approved a three-year cooperative agreement with the bureau, under which the Department of Water Resources will receive $173,151 over a three-year period, with $111,015 to be paid to Texas Tech.

The university will analyze data collected under the High Plains Experiment (HIPLEX) program, and will prepare a design for the demonstration project.

The funding for Texas Tech is for the 1984-85 biennium, DWR reports.

FASHION

Fashion dynasty

For a multi-millionaire look, the new "Dynasty Collection," from After Six may do the trick. The double-breasted formal, above left, is made of 100 percent wool faille. Characters Jeff Colby and Blake Carrington, center photo, choose tasteful single-breasted models of 100 percent wool. Classic lines add sophisticated refinement to the winter white dinner jacket, above right. It's just the thing to wear to a corporate take-over.

Dallas creates 'dynasty' of its own

Hearst Feature Service

Hold on to your fur-trimmed dressing gowns, Alexis, Krystle and Dominique, because come fall, the ladies of "Dallas" are going to give you some stiff competition in the fashion department.

Bill Travilla, the man who put Marilyn Monroe in the sexy halter dress that sent men's blood pressures soaring in "The Seven Year Itch," has been hired by Lorimar Productions to whip up ultra-glamorous clothes and accessories for Sue Ellen, Ellie, Pam and the rest of the prime-time soap's cast. Even Linda Gray, who has been jetting to Milan the past few seasons for her sophisticated sportswear, has graciously accepted Travilla's glitzy getups.

"I'm so happy Travilla is with us," says Gray, who has the final say on what she'll wear. "He understands how a woman should dress. At the same time, he respects my judgment. For example, I'm not big on pastels, so instead of putting me in a pink dress, he chose salmon. It's also wonderful having someone like him accessorizing everything to the last detail," adds the actress, who still plans to wear Giorgio Armani for some scenes.

Gray's character, Sue Ellen, will undergo the most dramatic fashion transformation. The long-suffering wife of J.R. has gone from simple dresses to high-fashion jackets, skirts and slacks by Armani. But this fall, her new, bolder fashion statements — a slinky red jersey gown and gold lame kabuki coat lined in the same red jersey, a navy silk jacquard wrap dress with a wide collar, a taupe wool chemise with a matching fox-trimmed jacket — reflect her character's growth.

The leading lady whose look will remain essentially the same is Victoria Principal. Her character, an independent woman of means, will continue to wear designs by top European designers, including Armani, Basile, Ginny, Ferre and Complice. The decision was made by Travilla, who helped Principal select the clothes and accessorized them.

Lorimar executives deny that a battle of the network designers is shaping up between Travilla and "Dynasty's" Nolan Miller. Explains Lee Rich, president: "We decided some months ago to embark on a search for a top designer whose style and film expertise would complement our current hit series."

Although Travilla is also quick to deny the suggestion that he is being pitted against Miller, he credits "Dynasty" with creating "the demand from viewers" for drop-dead costumes.

In Travilla's opinion, the only "weak point" in "Dallas" has been the costumes, which didn't accurately reflect the way the real residents of Dallas dress. He should know, since many of these women are customers for his ready-to-wear collection.

"Texas ladies love to dress up. There wasn't enough of that on the show," he points out.

Manicurist nails down controversies

Copley News Service

Jessica Vartoughian, Romanian-born manicurist to such notables as Nancy Reagan and Morgan Fairchild, says unequivocally that anyone, "absolutely anyone, can have long, beautiful natural nails in just six weeks."

Vartoughian recalls taking care of Reagan's nails "before she was the first lady of California." She said she has occasionally, while on business trips to Washington, D.C., done Reagan's nails since her husband has occupied the White House.

So what does the first lady prefer when it comes to nail care?

"She wears polish only occasionally," Vartoughian said. "I just take care of her cuticles and file her nails. For special parties, Mrs. Reagan wears a subtle red or a dusty rose."

And for Fairchild, it's pink, "always pink — sometimes subtle shades, sometimes passionate pinks."

Vartoughian owns a chain of nail clinics from coast to coast — the most notable being Jessica's Nail Clinic on Sunset Boulevard in Los Angeles.

And what's her method?

The first step is to designate your type of nails. Are they:

— Dry nails, which are flaky at the edges and prone to splitting and peeling? They may have pronounced ridges and white spots.

— Brittle nails, which are very hard and may be curved? They are inflexible and have a tendency to shatter or break high.

— Normal nails, which are strong, smooth, flexible and have a rich, natural pink color?

Most every brand name has products specially formulated dry, brittle or normal nails. Once you have picked what's best for you, follow these nail-care tips:

1. Remove polish from the nails on both hands. Soak hands in warm water.

2. Thoroughly dry hands with a towel and apply a cuticle formula to all 10 cuticles.

3. Trim nails, if needed.

4. Loosen cuticle, moving from top to center and around base of nail.

5. File.

6. With a wet towel, remove as much cuticle as possible.

7. With nippers, starting with thumb, clean under nail and trim hang nails.

Then apply primer, polish and glaze (some brands refer to this final application as a top coat). And, yes, there is a difference between primer (or base coat) and glaze (top coat). The base polish is more porous and allows the polish to adhere. The glaze seals the polish and makes it harder for the polish to chip.

"Always, no matter what the situation, apply one coat of primer on top sides of nail for protection and treatment," Vartoughian said. "Then allow it to dry.

"Never use polish remover to thin polish or soak nails. That dries out the nails. Always polish generously and hold the skin away from the nail to ensure coverage around complete edges and sides."

And where should polish be stored between use? "The refrigerator extends the life of the product."

"When you're ready to use a polish, turn it upside down and roll it between your hands instead of shaking it." (Do this before applying it to the nails to allow air bubbles time to settle.)

Soft hues enhance coloring

From Staff Reports

NEW YORK — The best way to make the most of that sun-kissed look this summer, according to Seventeen magazine, is to select soft makeup shades which enhance natural coloring.

Bronze and gold — the newest hues in warm-weather makeup — add special highlights to tanned skin and a rosy pink shade brightens fair skin. Whichever approach is used, the overall effect should be soft and uncomplicated with all makeup well-blended for just the sheerest wash of color.

A brunette complexion takes beautifully to the new metallic shades of gold and bronze, with the added dimension of bright or deep accents. Focus attention to the eyes by sweeping taupe shadow across the lids, adding gold shadow to the brow bones. Add extra eye appeal by rimming both upper and lower lashes with forest green pencil, and finish with black mascara. Coral blush dusted on the cheeks will give a brunette complexion a special glow. A very pale pink gloss applied to lips adds the final dash of color.

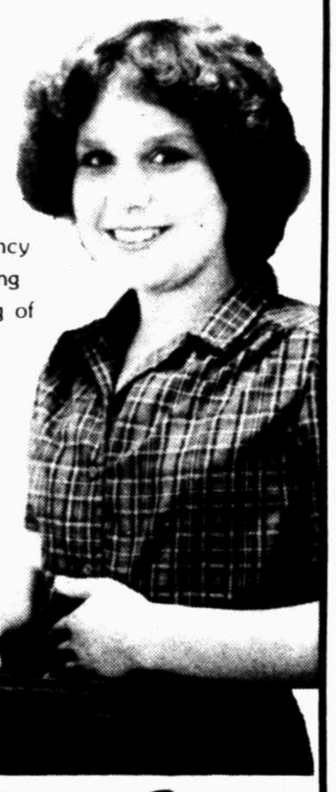

For blond hair and a tanned, fair complexion, earthy almost monochromatic shades of golden brown bring out the best in golden coloring. To play up summer tan, line upper eyelids and the outer half of lower lids with taupe eye shadow. Dust shimmery gold shadow over eyelids, extending it to brow bones to highlight eyes. Sweep black mascara on lashes. Warm but subtle shades, such as honey-amber applied to the cheekbones, accent sun-kissed skin.

DEAR ABBY

Explanation 'for the birds' may ruffle feathers

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: A bird lover wrote: "I love birds, and for many years now I have been offended by the expression 'For the birds.' When people want to express a negative opinion of something, they say, 'That's for the birds.' Where did that disparaging expression originate?"

Bird lovers (and haters) offered the following:

DEAR ABBY: The expression "For the birds" came from an old joke that's been around for at least 50 years. It goes like this: Two squirrels were making love in a tree. They became quite rambunctious, and the female fell to the ground.

The male scampered down the tree and ran to the side of his fallen lover, asking, "Are you all right?"

The dazed squirrel replied, "I'm all right. But I learned one thing ... making love in the trees is strictly for the birds." — L.B. SMITH, BIGELOW, MINN.

DEAR ABBY: The saying "For the birds" originated with flight instructors. When a student would do something foolhardy or unsafe in the air, the instructor would say, "That kind of flying is for the birds!"

This is one way of saying that birds were created to fly naturally; men were not, so they had better not try anything too fancy. — PILOT'S WIFE

DEAR ABBY: If you have ever tried to sit in Pittsburgh's pigeon-infested Market Square, where a flock of misguided bird lovers go to coddle and feed those stinking, parasitic, disease carriers, you would understand what we mean when we say something is "for the birds." — WORTH SEYMOUR, SEWICKLEY, PA.

P.S. If you ever come to Market Square, bring an umbrella.

DEAR ABBY: When we were kids, there were many horse-drawn delivery wagons on our streets — the iceman, milkman, breadman, etc., and it was a common sight to see sparrows gleaning the undigested kernels of grain from the piles of horse droppings.

Naturally we concluded that the birds had to be quite desperate to seek such foul rations, so whenever anyone wanted to put something down and couldn't use the vulgar four-letter word for horse manure, he'd say, "That's (beep) for the birds," hence the expression "It's for the birds." — YOU ASKED FOR IT IN SALT SPRINGS, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Originally, the expression was "... for the small brown birds," and referred to the close relationship of horses and sparrows.

They are the only two that can live as cheaply as one. — EDWIN IN HONOLULU

DEAR ABBY: In GI language, "It's for the birds" meant "Save the horse (bleep) for the birds," or "That horse (bleep) is strictly for the birds."

Explanation: Horse droppings contain undigested grain that birds feast upon.

The idea is nicely expressed in an old Arab saying: "If you feed the sparrows, you must first feed the horses." — E.L. IN HUDSON, OHIO

AT WIT'S END

Helpful hint not so helpful

By ERMA BOMBECK

I read household hints for the same reason I read cookbooks. It's a guilt fix for those days when I get up feeling good about myself.

Read a hint a couple of days ago that really did it for me. It said, "For a more relaxing day at the beach, choose matching swimsuits for your children so they will be easier to spot in a crowd."

Since when is a day at the beach with kids . . . a day at the beach? And why would anyone assume you went there to be with your own children and they with you?

All of my kids were born with an "orphans' wish." They wanted everyone to believe they lived alone in a Stephen King house near the school, taking care of themselves doing whatever they liked without benefit of any type of supervision. Every month a mysterious check would arrive to take care of their needs. They were destined to go through life alone, unloved, ignored and envied. To have suggested we even arrive at the beach at the same time or on the same day would have thrown them into a panic.

I remember a woman in our neighborhood once who had six children . . . four girls and two boys. The entire family dressed alike. They wore floral chintzes in the summer and striped corduroys in the winter. They always looked like the Von Trapp family in concert and created a stir wherever they went. Maybe this is significant, but no one ever knew their names. They were the Leech tribe or the Leech gang.

For years I used them as a threat. If my kids didn't shape up, I was going to make us matching vests and hats and join us together with Velcro. They never knew I didn't know how to thread the sewing machine, so for years it worked.

I never thought about the Leeches much until one day, about a year after we moved, I saw one on the school playground. "Hello," I said, "You're . . . one of the Leech tribe."

She said, "My name is Phyllis."

"And is this what we're wearing today? It's lovely."

She looked at me sadly and said, "I match the shower curtains too."

Maybe I did something right by taking my kids to the beach dressed a la carte. And when anyone asked, "Which children are yours?" I said, "Guess."

While they were guessing, it bought time for me to figure out which ones were mine.

Recent fashions for men explode

Hearst Feature Service

The fashion action in menswear is explosive, compared to times past, with many of the world's leading designers as interested in "him" as they are in "her," says Will Carter, merchandising editor of Gentlemen's Quarterly.

Like women, men have learned that what they wear and where they wear it always makes a statement. "Men's fashion is no longer by the few, for the few, on special occasions," Carter says.

As a result, men have 10 times the fashion choices they had even five years ago. The way men look is no longer dictated by rigid rules, and they must decide among at least six different personae or put together their own unique mix of what GQ describes as:

— Updated preppy, like Robert Redford.
— Japanese modern.
— Italian sophisticated, like Richard Gere.
— Northwest rugged.
— Dull as dishwater.
— Urbane guerrilla.

Macho is not on the list, Carter says.

"In the '70s, macho meant scruffy and unkempt," he says. "Today, that look is unknowing, uncaring, out of control. I mean that as an indictment."

Carter says men should plan their wardrobes as they plan their business activities. He adds that year-round dressing is gaining qopularity around the country and that cut, color and texture are the news this summer.

Take an inventory of your assets and balance this against projected needs, he says. This is a good year for investment buying of suits and separates, unlike recent recession times when men bought accessories instead.

Regarding the decision between suits and separates, men in New York wear suits, men in Los Angeles wear sports jackets and everywhere else men fall somewhere in between.

Year-round dressing is increasingly logical as air conditioning mitigates summer heat, as more men travel between climate zones, and as layered dressing makes the whole wardrobe more flexible.

Layered dressing began a few years ago when men started wearing polo shirts under their oxford cloth shirts. Layering "blossomed from that humble beginning," Carter says. Shirts, vests, sweaters and jackets allow great control of individual comfort by shedding or adding layers.

As for cut, color and texture – in which there are strong new developments this summer — "men's fashion is in an evolution, not a revolution. Change the cut, color and texture, but not all three at once," says Carter.

In cut, constricting European traditional cuts are falling by the wayside. "Rope shoulders" (high, padded shoulders), lessening of the seven-inch drop in size — between a size 40 jacket and 33 pants, for example — and the highly defined waist are all disappearing.

Men's fashion options vary

Copley News Service

PORT CHESTER, N.Y. — Men who would like to be in style next fall will have a number of trends to consider, including looking in the back of the closet to see what's already there. All those old cardigans and odd jackets may be able to go to work again.

That's the idea from some 250 top menswear designers and manufacturers who are showing the nation's fashion press their fall collections in this East Coast village about an hour north of New York City.

Despite the heat and high humidity, models have been parading heavy, strong-shouldered coats; commanding cardigans; double-breasted suits and swanky sweaters being offered for fall by members of the Men's Fashion Association of America.

Most of the coats look too long and heavy for warm weather states, but there's a message in their breeziness and length. Some are corduroy. Most tie or belt in the back, which means they're easily worn open for that important extra layer.

Big coats, also shown by New York fashion designers for women next fall, really had their beginnings several years ago when young men began buying "antique" or used coats, said Chip Tolbert, fashion director of the association.

And we're seeing other touches of the thrift-shop market here in odd jackets which have an older look, many with a belt across the back, and "antique ties" or ties that are new but look old in pattern and muted color.

There's also a resurgence of cardigans. Cardigans banded in contrasting colors, or sweaters that look like those comfortable old creations your dad or granddad used to wear.

Here's what you'll need to look for next fall:

A mix of patterns. Bold plaid jackets over windowpane check shirts. Sweaters with bold graphics over striped shirts. Plaid with plaid. Do the colors blend? If you're not sure, ask your artist friends or your wife; she's having to learn to mix patterns, too. It's a top trend in women's wear as well.

Winter white. Looking very clean and contemporary, winter white turns up in blazer and blouson jackets, slacks, sweaters, mufflers, cardigans, sweatshirts and pants. An all-white outfit in this creamy shade is clean and cool; mix in one bright color and the whole picture changes. Try a winter white muffler tucked into the V-neck of a winter white sweater.

Stacked sweaters. A V-neck vest over a pullover, or a cardigan over a vest.

Black in activewear or casual clothes. Shades of black, from anthracite to almost gray, make casual clothes more meaningful. Of course you're in shape in a black sweatvest over a gray sweatshirt and darker gray jogging pants. Would anyone argue with the seriousness of black?

"American men will be dressing up more even when they're dressing down," said Tolbert. "A growing percentage of the mass market wants to equate with the class market."

He says there is a "growing trend to identify with the trappings of successful role models in the business world," and he believes it's "prompting these new expressions of classic menswear."

It also might be prompting some looking in the back of the closet. Men who save everything, even the old green sweater that almost went to Goodwill, can get it out and wear it in style next fall.

Boudoir literally for pouting

Copley News Service

The literal French definition of "boudoir" (a woman's bedroom, dressing room or private sitting room) is "pouting room," which originally meant a place where milady can go to sulk.

Body sprays popular

BOSTON (AP) — Body sprays, or deocolognes as they are known in Europe, are starting to achieve popularity in America.

This category of cosmetics could amount to $70 million in retail sales this year, according to an official in the personal care products industry.

Body sprays originated in Scandinavia during the 1960s as an economical alternative to expensive and heavily taxed perfumes.

Cancer treatments may cause damage

Dear Dr. Solomon: One of the yongsters who lives in my neighborhood has been found to have a brain tumor, and he is being treated for it. Is it possible that the treatment might hurt his mind? — Ms. K.A., Salem, Mass.

Solomon

Dear Ms. A.: There is evidence that the combination of radiation therapy and chemotherapy may result in some damage. Some researchers have suggested that either form of treatment alone does not have a serious, long-term effect on the patient's intelligence.

Of course the immediate concern in the kind of situation you describe is the patient's cure.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband has been having a lot of trouble sleeping at night but he refuses to go to a doctor. He complains that he always feels sleepy but he says that he gets enough sleep to do his job, and the truth is that he never misses a day off from work. But he'll wake up with a headache and he just does not look well. Is there any way to tell how much sleep a person is getting? — Mrs. B.R., Atlanta.

Dear Mrs. R.: Regardless of the number of hours of sleep your husband is getting at night, it is apparent from your description that the time as come for him to have a complete physical examination. Sleep disturbance may be indicated by morning headache and excessive sleepiness during the day, symptoms that seem to apply to your husband. But first things first, and the first thing should be a complete workup.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine got Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever while on a camping trip. I know that this comes from ticks, and I've heard people say that the way to remove a tick is to hold a lighted match against it. But how is it possible to do this without burning yourself at the same time? — Kevin, Columbia, S.C.

Dear Kevin: To remove a tick, light a match, blow it out and then hold the hot end to the tick. Another technique is to pour gasoline or nail polish remover over it. After the tick is removed, it is advisable to use an antiseptic to clean the area.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband and I recently bought a house that has a lot of ivy on the grounds. Since poison ivy is so well-known as causing a rash, I would like to know if it would be a good idea to get rid of the ivy on the grounds so that the children will not be affected. — Mrs. K.G., Atlanta.

Dear Mrs. G.: Poison ivy is not really an ivy, and touching common ivy wll not cause a rash. Therefore, there is no reason to remove the ivy now growing on your lawn for the reason you cite.

For Emily, Spokane, Wash.: Some psychiatrists believe that children who have frequent accidents may actually have suicidal tendencies. Dr. Perihan A. Rosenthal of the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester reports that several children re erred to the clinic because of self-destructive behavior and frequent accidents were found to be suicidal.

Man drives 3,600 miles for free cup of coffee

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For a free Maine lobster, maybe. But a 3,600-mile, five-day trek across the country for a free cup of coffee?

"Not many people would do it," said Cornelius Walsh, 76. He did it.

"Not many people have loose rocks in their head, either," added Walsh, who figured the trip was as good a chance as any to break in a new sapphire-blue Porsche with personalized plates reading "HAFTA GO."

Walsh and Yank Clewell, 19, went the distance to cash in on promotion for a Boothbay, Maine, restaurant.

Transplanted Southern Californian Peter Gilchrist offered a free lobster and cup of coffee to the first 10 Californians who walked into his restaurant by Friday night.

Walsh of Sierra Madre, and Clewell of Palm Springs, showed up at Gilchrist's East before the deadline.

Fine for Clewell, who merely turned down the coffee.

But Walsh doesn't eat lobster.

Walsh said he saw an article in the Los Angeles Times about Gilchrist's offer "and thought, 'By golly, that sounds interesting, and I'd like to do it!'...I told them I'm coming for the free coffee."

Clewell said he took a little detour en route to Boston, where he'll house-sit for an uncle this summer.

Rowdy fans toss tortillas during seventh inning stretch

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Tossing tortillas from the cheap seats at Anaheim Stadium seems less offensive than eating big moths, but stadium officials nonetheless are cracking down on the latest ballpark craze.

"Take Me Out to the Ballgame" use to be the signal for the traditional seventh-inning stretch. Now it's a cue for the rowdy fans in the $2.50 seats high at Anaheim to begin flinging tortillas back and forth — or down onto the home field of baseball's California Angels.

It's not as if the Angels were doing poorly. They're in first place in the American League West.

"It mostly happens on weekends and other nights when there are big crowds," says usher Dana Woods. "We eject the ones who bring the most tortillas, but they just keep coming back."

"One group started it during a game in May," she said. "Then the next night another group brought tortillas. We know who they all are."

On Friday night, the tortilla-tossing became so boisterous that police escorted nearly 20 of the worst offenders out to the stadium parking lot.

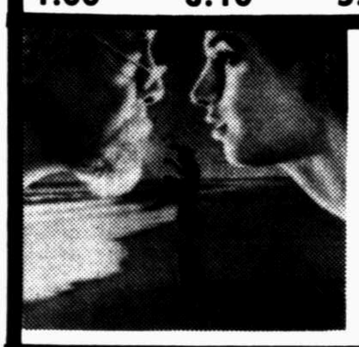

Police Sgt. Bill Donoghue said the tortilla battles were "not a significant problem," but police discourage throwing anything in the stadium.

Joseph Swartz, owner of Swartz Framing Studio, is available to help you with your framing needs. He is located at the corner of Garfield and Wadley in Plaza Center.

Swartz Framing Studio offers custom framing

Years of experience, quality materials and a high standard of ethics is why Joseph Swartz and Swartz Framing Studio have developed the reputation of being among the best in the framing business in Midland.

Joseph Swartz has been framing for as long as he remembers and has done so professionally in Midland since 1969.

Mr. Swartz feels that his Art degree from the University of Missouri has helped in his framing because he has a working knowledge of which frames with look best with different mats and types of pictures. He tries to create a feeling of composition when framing a piece of art. This is particularly important due to the fact that in almost any framing the actual frame only accounts for around ⅓ of the cost. It is the mat and expertise of the framer that adds to the cost.

Mr. Swartz doesn't believe in cutting corners or taking shortcuts and uses only the highest quality materials that can be found. Even though he puts an extreme amount of work and quality products into each project, Swartz Framing Studio has reasonable prices.

As a member of the American Picture Framing Association, which is a national organization that has its own ethics and strives for professionalism within the framing industry, and the Professional Picture Framers' Guild, a branch of the A.P.F.A., Swartz is working with the other professional framers to have all picture framers certified as professionals working within certain guidelines. This, he feels, will add to the insurance of getting quality work from framers.

Swartz Framing carries a large inventory of moldings for you to choose from as well as special order selections. Between what he has in stock and what is available through special orders, Swartz feels that he can offer the finest framing available. This includes the latest trends in framing such as wooden frames with rounded edges.

Swartz Framing Studio is located at 42 Plaza Center. If you have any questions give Mr. Swartz a call at 684-3971.

Dallas area papers reprinting coupons

DALLAS (AP) — All three major daily newspaper in the Dallas-Fort Worth area have decided to print free ads in today's editions for the Michael Jackson concert next month.

Two of the newspapers — the Dallas Times-Herald and the Fort Worth Star-Telegram — jumped on the bandwagon after Jackson fans on Monday staged a run on The Dallas Morning News, the only paper to print the ads.

Some area residents reported their morning newspapers disappeared from their front lawns before they had a chance to pick them up Monday.

Promoters of the concert, scheduled for July 13-15 at Texas stadium, have antagonized newspaper executives all over the country by refusing to pay for the ads. The News, in agreeing to print the ads Monday, had said they felt there were other benefits to be gained from running the half-page ads gratis.

But executives of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, in announcing that they would publish the ads Tuesday, said they weren't happy about printing the coupons but wanted to give area fans an equal chance at attending the concert.

"We're philosophically opposed to it, but we feel that if we don't run it, we will penalize the Tarrant County fans," said Jack Tinsley, vice president and executive edtitor of the Star-Telegram.

Ray Wilkerson, Times-Herald assistant managing editor for operations, said the newspaper agreed to run the coupons as a public service ad.

A flood of phone calls to the Morning News as well as brisk newspaper sales in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana prompted News executives to reprint the coupons.

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A pair of Siamese twins slept in separate cribs for the first time since their weekend separation surgery, while a second set, separated last week, were alert and eating baby food, hospital officials said.

Two-week-old Amy Jean and Emily Jean Hasner were "doing well, but are being very closely watched," said Tim Warner, a spokesman for Madison General Hospital. "The hope is that within two weeks or so they'll be stabilized and able to be taken home."

The sisters were in critical but stable condition Monday night in the hospital's special pediatric care nursery.

Their nine-hour operation Sunday was the second time this month that Siamese twins from Wisconsin were successfully separated.

Claire and Emily Taylor, born Feb. 12, were separated in a 18-hour operation at Children's Hospital in Philadelphia last week, and Richard and Mary Taylor of Portage held their daughters for the first time Sunday.

The Taylor twins' condition was upgraded from satisfactory to good after an examination, hospital spokeswoman Shirley Bonnem said late Monday.

It was not known when they would go home, she said.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — News anchors Jane Pauley and Bryant Gumble may have the looks, but NBC-TV weatherman Willard Scott says he's "the comic relief" of the Today Show.

"I don't consider myself a real journalist," Scott told the Kiwanis International convention Monday.

He appeared here without the hairpiece he wears on television, saying he charged an extra $20 to wear it to engagements, but then pulled the toupee from a pocket and demonstrated its versatility as a wig, fake chest hair and a skeet-shooting target.

Flashbulbs popped as Scott took the stage at Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum, so Scott whipped out his own camera and snapped three pictures of the 11,000 people in the audience.

One reason for the pictures was to prove to the Internal Revenue Service that he really flew to Phoenix, he said. The other reason, he said, was to prove it to his wife.

LONDON (AP) — Buckingham Palace denied as "a complete invention" reports that Prince Andrew got a mock caning at a London restaurant, and a teachers' organization criticized the prince for going to the eatery.

British newspapers reported Monday that the 24-year-old son of Queen Elizabeth II was caned last week by a waitress at the Schoolboys' Dinners Club. Patrons of the restaurant who don't finish their meals or fail to raise their hands for permission to go to the toilet get mock canings from waitresses.

"The facts are that Prince Andrew was there, he sat down to dinner and then left," a palace spokesman who would be quoted only on condition he not be identified said Monday. "There was no spanking — it's a complete invention."

However, the Society of Teachers Opposed to Physical Punishment had already written the prince protesting "your thoughtless, irresponsible and puerile behavior in attending this establishment."

• • •

DENVER (AP) — Vice President George Bush became a grandfather for the sixth time when his daughter-in-law gave birth to a seven-pound, one ounce girl.

Sharon Bush gave birth Monday to Lauren Pierce Bush. Mrs. Bush is the wife of Denver businessman Neil Bush, son of the vice president.

Mrs. Bush entered Rose Medical Center in Denver at 8 a.m. Monday and the baby was born 5½ hours later. A hospital spokesman said the mother and child were doing well Monday night.

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Singer Gregory Bithikotsis, who helped popularize Mikis Theodorakis' music, including the score for "Zorba the Greek," says he'll spend his retirement composing.

Theodorakis and Manos Hatzidakis, who wrote the music for the 1960 hit movie "Never on Sunday," paid tribute to the gravel-voiced bouzouki singer during a three-hour show before a capacity crowd of 70,000 cheering fan at Athens Olympic stadium Monday.

Bithikotsis, 61, performed Theodorakis' classic songs of love and resistance to the accompaniment of bouzoukis, long-necked stringed instruments resembling lutes.

DALLAS (AP) — Herman Ward "Frito" Lay III, the 18-year-old grandson of of the co-founder of Frito-Lay Inc., was an outstanding prep school student who was leaning toward a career in law or business, friends and teachers say.

Lay was alone in his 1974 Mercedes when he apparently lost control of the vehicle on a far north Dallas road and crashed about 3 a.m. Monday, said a police investigator.

He was pronounced dead at the scene at 3:45 a.m., said a field agent for the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office.

An autopsy showed Lay died of "multiple severe injuries and acute alcohol intoxication," a spokesman for the medical examiner's office said.

But Tolbert Marks, 19, a friend who said he was with Lay until minutes before the accident, said Lay was not drunk when he left him.

"We had a couple of beers and some nachos," Marks told the Dallas Morning News. "He was fine when I left him. He had just dropped me off. And then he must have fallen asleep."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aida Ward, a nightclub, stage and radio singer in the 1920s and 1930s who popularized the hit song "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," died Saturday of a respiratory ailment at age 84.

Miss Ward began her professional career on Broadway in 1924 as a featured singer in the musical "Dixie to Broadway." Miss Ward was also a vocalist with the Duke Ellington and Cab Calloway orchestras.

U.S., Nicaragua meeting in Mexico

By CONCEPCION BADILLO
Associated Press Writer

MANZANILLO, Mexico — Representatives from the United States and Nicaragua's leftist government met in this Pacific coast resort in what Nicaragua called an effort to normalize tense relations between the two countries.

The participants made no public comment on the talks, which began Monday at an exclusive seaside club protected by dozens of armed guards and a Mexican navy patrol boat.

However, the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry in Managua issued a statement saying the meeting "shows good will on the part of Nicaragua, which is trying with all its might to normalize relations with the government of the United States."

The meeting coincided with a vote by the U.S. Senate to shelve the Reagan administration's request for $21 million for covert operations in Nicaragua. A compromise $1.4 billion emergency spending bill was sent to the House for expected approval after the Republican-controlled Senate reversed itself late Monday and voted 88 to 1 to delete any reference to U.S. funds for Nicaraguan rebels.

Participating in the Manzanillo talks were Harry Shlaudeman, the U.S. special envoy for Central America, and Victor Hugo Tinoco, vice foreign minister of Nicaragua, according to U.S., Mexican and Nicaraguan officials.

Mexican Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda greeted the American and Nicaraguan officials in the afternoon but left an hour later, the Mexican government news service Notimex reported.

In Nicaragua, a source at the U.S. Embassy in Managua said, "Possibly the conversations will extend until Tuesday (today), if something positive comes out of the first meeting."

The meeting was planned after Secretary of State George P. Shultz made a surprise visit to Nicaragua on June 1 and met with Daniel Ortega, coordinator of the ruling Sandinista junta.

They announced that other high-level meetings would take place, but Nicaragua later said there would be no further meetings if the United States continued supporting anti-Sandinista rebels.

On Saturday, Nicaraguan Interior Minister Tomas Borge said the meeting could be a "publicity stunt meant to gain votes in the coming United States elections," but added that "the course of conversations...will clarify everything."

The Reagan administration says Nicaragua is trying to spread its 1979 leftist revolution to other countries in Central America, especially to U.S.-backed El Salvador.

In Costa Rica, police said Monday that Costa Ricans may have been involved in the May 30 bombing that killed four people and wounded Nicaraguan rebel leader Eden Pastora.

"We cannot discount the possibility that there might have been national support in the attack, because it is difficult to believe that without such help the act cold have been committed," said Minor Calvo, director of the Judicial Investigation Organization.

Pastora, guerrilla leader of the Costa Rica-based Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, was one of 27 people injured in the news conference bombing. Four people were killed.

Venezuelan Interior Minister Octavio Lepage told reporters in Caracas Monday that Pastora had recovered from wounds he suffered in the blast and left Venezuela for Panama.

Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson, during a visit Monday to El Salvador, visited Hector Bernabe Recinos and four other jailed leftists at a jail near San Salvador.

Earlier, Jackson had spoken to President Jose Napoleon Duarte about freeing Recinos, but apparently got no firm commitment.

Helms comments on plot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, angered by news accounts suggesting that Salvadoran rightist leader Roberto d'Aubuisson had plotted to kill the U.S. ambassador in El Salvador, says the scheme was initiated by forces from an unidentified third country.

Helms said d'Aubuisson is "not a suspect" in the purported plot on the life of U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering and that he sought d'Aubuisson's aid in protecting the envoy's life.

With d'Aubuisson due here Wednesday, Helms seemed eager on Monday to defend his ally against the recent spate of reports depicting d'Aubuisson as a would-be killer of a leading American diplomat.

Arriving in Miami on Monday, d'Aubuisson said the accusation linking him to the alleged assassination plot was "nothing more than garbage, it's something very dirty."

Troops may shoot Sikhs

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Troops patrolling the border between Pakistan and India have been authorized to shoot Sikh extremists on sight to prevent them from entering India, the Statesman newspaper reported today.

The order was issued after intelligence agencies received information that at least 200 Pakistanis and some Sikhs, armed with sophisticated weapons, were planning to slip into India, the newspaper said. It quoted an official spokesman in Srinagar, the capital of Kashmir.

The newspaper said the Pakistanis are members of the Kashmir Liberation Front, a separatist organization which claimed responsibility for kidnapping and murder of an Indian diplomat in Britain in February. Some of the Sikhs are from the United States, Canada and Britain, the newspaper said.

Program to be reviewed

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to revive a scientific exchange program on the environment, the head of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said today.

EPA chief William D. Ruckelshaus said the U.S. and Soviet delegations attending an environmental conference in Munich met Monday night and agreed to revitalize the exchange.

The 1972 agreement provided for trading information and research on environmental problems, such as acid rain and toxic substances, Ruckelshaus told The Associated Press.

Filipino minister testifies

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Prime Minister Cesar Virata, the highest government official yet to testify about the Benigno Aquino assassination, said today it was wrong to rule out involvement by anyone in the government.

Virata, testifying before a board investigating the murder of the opposition leader last August, said he knew of no specific government figure who wanted Aquino killed but said the possibility could not be ruled out.

Senate vote may doom Nicaraguan operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate vote to sidetrack President Reagan's request for $21 million for covert operations in Nicaragua may doom the CIA's operation there, says House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

The House was expected to grant routine approval today to a compromise $1.4 billion emergency spending bill, after the Republican-controlled Senate reversed itself late Monday and voted 88 to 1 to strip from the legislation any reference to U.S. funds for Nicaraguan rebels.

That broke a three-month congressional impasse that had stalled action on the spending bill, which contains $100 million in funds for a summer jobs program for teen-agers as well as money for various other cash-short domestic programs.

Previously, the Senate had supported the administration's efforts to tie the covert aid to the jobs program; the House repeatedly had rejected such an approach.

"The Senate's action should bring to a close U.S. support for the war in Nicaragua," said O'Neill, an outspoken critic of the administration's policy of supporting anti-government guerrillas, known as contras, fighting the Marxist government there.

In a statement, O'Neill noted that existing law only permits a total of $24 million in U.S. funds to be spent on the Nicaraguan operation. "The CIA has informed our Intelligence Committee that such funds are near exhaustion," O'Neill said.

The White House reluctanty acquiesced on Monday to requests by Senate Republican leaders that it drop its insistence on tying the two issues together. Democrats had made a campaign issue of the linkage, claiming it was new evidence of Reagan's inensitivity to the poor — especially now that the summer has begun and the teen-age jobs funds are needed.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., said he would try to find some other piece of legislation to which the administration could attach the Nicaraguan money. "Let's not fight it here where I think we'll lose," he told the Senate.

But other senators suggested that the Nicaraguan aid was probably dead at least for this year in Congress.

"The White House is realistic ... they know they're not going to get it from this Congress. If the president wants to put his head in the buzzsaw again, that's up to him," said Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.

But Sen. John East, R-N.C., argued that the Senate should stand behind the administration's program, saying, "the issue is whether we allow Central America to fall under Communist domination and control."

But in the end, he supported the motion to disentangle the operation from the jobs program, claiming, "We have finally reached the point in the legislative process when we must move on." Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., cast the sole vote against that motion.
