From Staff and Wire Reports

Wednesday's slash of North Sea crude oil prices by Britain and Norway will have a definite affect on the Permian Basin economy, according to Bill Kleine, president of Permian Corporation, the Basin's largest purchaser of crude oil.

"Our West Texas intermediate crude is in direct, daily competition with this grade of sweet crude oil, which is found in the North Sea and Nigeria. If a refiner can buy a tanker of North Sea oil delivered to the Houston ship channel for a dollar less than West Texas intermediate, he will buy it for a dollar less. If the price cuts continue, they will definitely have an affect upon our crude market."

He said there was no way to tell how long such a price cut might continue, adding that surpluses and shortfalls in crude are always determined by a very small percentage.

"This round of price cuts will be unusual in that they will be taking place in a totally free market, without import quotas, entitlements and other government controls. It will be pure supply and demand in action, and we will just have to ride it out," said Kleine.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said today it will hold a special oil ministers' meeting Oct. 29 in Geneva to plan a defense of the cartel's oil prices in the wake of price cuts by Norway and Britain.

OPEC spokesman Gonzalo Plaza said the "open-ended" meeting would be held to discuss the current situation and "consider ways and means that could eventually be taken to defend the present price structure."

"It certainly doesn't appear that OPEC is rushing in to anything," said Ed Thompson, executive vice president Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "A meeting two weeks down the road indicates to me that they will probably hold to the current prices."

Thompson does not discount, however, the impact of the price cuts. "It will definitely have an impact upon our economy if these price cuts persist and we continue to import finished products."

He predicted that more domestic refineries would close, and the oil industry would be burdened with the Windfall Profits Tax for a longer period, as a result of softening crude prices.

In Lagos, Nigeria, the country's Executive Council was meeting today to consider oil prices, a source at the Nigerian National Petroleum Corp. said.

Britain and Nigeria produce similar grades of oil, and Britain's lowering of its price was expected to undercut Nigeria in oil markets. Britain is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, while Nigeria is a member.

Nigeria's head of state, Maj. Gen. Muhammadu Buhari, who is a former oil minister, presides over the Executive Council, which includes other top figures in the military government.

Dealers share unrestrained support for car safety seats

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Texas car dealers have shifted into gear in complying with a new automobile safety law they hope will help put the brakes on other forms of legislation.

Passed by the Texas Legislature, the law requiring all children under the age of 4 be restrained by safety seats or seat belts while traveling in passenger cars or light trucks goes into effect Oct. 31.

"The child safety seats — we think that's probably the most important thing we've seen in a long time," said Frank See, of Frank See Chevrolet. In some accidents involving unrestrained children, "it throws them around like a rubber ball."

According to Bill Stella, president of the Midland New Car and Truck Dealer Association, the safety of children comes first. But efforts are being made to strap adults into similar situations.

Although mandatory seat belt use by adults has not been passed, the Texas Automobile Dealer Association is hoping it will.

"Unless two-thirds of the population agrees to a mandatory seat belt law by 1987, there will be forced installation of air bags," Gene Fondren, TADA executive vice president said during a visit to Midland in September. "The cost of installing air bags will have an impact on manufacturer and consumer prices."

Air bags "will up the price of new cars about $1,000," Stella said. "It will also raise your monthly payments and finance charge."

The seats and belts are "much more efficient," Stella said, adding air bags, which can inflate by accident, protect only those in the front seat.

Ferraro's criticism sets stage for weekend debate

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE — Geraldine Ferraro is using her campaign appearances the rest of the week to turn up the heat in her criticism of President Reagan's foreign policy and set the stage for Walter F. Mondale's confrontation with Reagan on Sunday.

The Democratic vice presidential nominee was making a foreign policy address today at the University of Washington. She was scheduled to deliver a speech on nuclear arms control Saturday at the University of Massachusetts.

Both speeches are aimed at appealing to young voters to back the Democratic ticket, but the emphasis is on Reagan's foreign policy, which the Democrats say has failed.

"We want to leave the week on a foreign policy note," and lead into the Sunday debate between Mondale and Reagan, said Francis O'Brien, Ms. Ferraro's press secretary.

Meanwhile, an ABC News-Washington Post poll shows Reagan's lead down to 12 points, 54-42 with 4 percent undecided, a solid gain for Mondale since their Oct. 7 debate.

An ABC-Post poll before the debate had Reagan ahead 55-37 with 8 percent undecided. The latest poll was conducted Friday through Tuesday among 1,505 registered voters, and had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Both Reagan and Mondale were in Washington today studying for the debate, televised live at 8 p.m. EDT Sunday from Kansas City.

Reagan was traveling to New York this evening to attend the Al Smith dinner, a traditional political dinner sponsored by the Catholic Archdiocese of New York. Mondale wasn't attending, citing the debate preparations, and the church spokesman refused to allow vis Ferraro to be a stand-in.

Vice President [illegible] Bush planned to tour a wood mill in Portland, Ore., today before moving out for a rally in Spokane, Wash., and apparances in Seattle later in the day.

Replica of memorial stirs Tyler area residents

Associated Press

TYLER, Texas — A replica of the Vietnam Veterans National Memorial has unleashed a flood of tears and memories here.

Many came at night, searching for names of the dead with flashlights. Others brought flags or flowers or pictures.

Evelyn Singleton kissed the name of her dead son, Thomas. He was killed guarding a bridge in Saigon in 1968.

Louise Hickman stooped to light a candle beside the name of her son, Graham. He died on patrol near Pleiku in 1967.

Janet Saiter came to see the name of her brother, Glenn Edward Miles. He drowned when a pontoon bridge collapsed in 1968.

Hundreds of other tearful, silent mourners have visited the memorial since it was unveiled Monday.

"A lot of my friends are on that wall," said Lloyd Tinker, an FBI agent in Tyler and a veteran of the war. "They were killed by snipers, booby traps and by our own artillery.

"When you see this entire wall of names, it gives you a deeper understanding of the horror and waste of the whole thing."

The surface of the half-size replica bears the names of 58,012 American war dead. Thirty-three of the names belong to residents of Tyler and Smith County who died in the war.

The 250-foot, angled wall of black plexiglass was handmade in San Jose, California. It was unveiled in Tyler because of close ties between a local veteran's group and one in California.

Arson suspected as hotel fire kills at least 13

Associated Press

PATERSON, N.J. — A fire that authorities said was started by a disgruntled employee swept through an eight-story residence hotel early today, trapping some residents and forcing others to jump from windows. At least 13 people were killed and 55 injured.

A part-time employee who had argued with the night manager of the 60-year-old Hotel Alexander Hamilton was arrested in the case, said Mayor Frank X. Graves Jr.

Russell William Conklin, 44, was being held at the city jail pending arraignment on charges of aggravated arson and murder, said police Capt. William E. Dolan. Authorities said only one murder charge was filed initially.

Fire Capt. Domenick Cotronreo said 15 people had died in the blaze, but the mayor, police and the prosecutor's office said they could only confirm 13 deaths.

The blaze broke out about 12:15 a.m. in the 150-room downtown hotel occupied by about 300 permanent residents and transients, many of them clients of various agencies of government," Graves said. The fire was under control at 3:40 a.m.

"There are deaths and there are injuries and there are still people in there," the mayor said.

County man sues Midland motel in March 30 rat bite incident

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 19-year-old Midland County man is suing the Holiday Inn Country Villa in Midland for $150,000, claiming he was bitten March 30 by a rat while eating in the motel's kitchen during a work break.

Greg Moore, 19, filed suit against the motel Wednesday in an Ector County district court. The suit alleges that Moore was bitten as he reached onto a shelf during a lunch break.

The lawsuit claims the motel was negligent for:

— Not keeping the eating areas free of garbage.

— Failing to remove dishes and trash from the area.

CBS grabs top two spots in Nielsen ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS grabbed the top two spots of the Nielsen ratings for the first week of the fall season as millions of viewers tuned in "Dallas" and "Falcon Crest" to end a summer of suspense and find out who shot who and who survived.

"Dallas" was first and "Falcon Crest" was second for the week ended Sept. 30 as the nighttime soap operas returned with solutions to the summer-long suspense engendered by their cliffhanger plots.

CBS — last year's top network — thus was first at the official start of the season after a summer in which it frequently fell behind ABC and NBC. Last week it was third, behind first-place ABC. ABC dropped to third this week and NBC remained in second place.

NBC was out of the cellar during the premiere week for the first time since 1980, but ABC made its worst showing since 1962.

NBC's "The Cosby Show," first the week before with its premiere show, was third. Situation comedy may be making a comeback after last year's dismal showing in the ratings — NBC's "Cheers" and "Family Ties" also made the Top 10. Another NBC comedy, "Night Court," was 15th.

In fourth place was ABC's "Dynasty," returning with cliffhanger solutions of its own. It was ABC's only showing in the Top 10.

The first week's ratings appear to back what the experts were saying all summer: that this could be the tightest three-network ratings race in years. ABC was strong all summer, and now NBC is showing ratings strength.

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

Showers from the western Gulf to the Great Lakes and in northern California, changing to snow over the mountains, and snow for North Dakota and northern Minnesota, are forecast through Friday by the National Weather Service.

Cool days continue around Permian Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Autumn weather will continue tonight, with mostly fair skies, a low in the mid 40s and a 20 percent chance of rain. Winds will be from the north to northeast at 15 to 20 mph and gusty; decreasing to 5 to 10 mph by Friday morning.

Friday will be fair and cooler, with highs in the mid 70's and a 20 percent chance of rain. Winds will be light and variable at 10-15 mph from a southeasterly direction by late morning, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Wednesday's high of 76 was 18 degree lower than record set in 1964. The overnight low of 55 was 18 degrees higher than the record low of 37 set in 1968.

STATE

A stream of low level moisture eased northward from the Gulf, bringing a dense shield of low clouds to the eastern half of Texas just before dawn today.

Meanwhile, a weak upper level disturbance triggered heavy thunderstorms along the middle Texas coast, while light rain and showers advanced into southeast and south central Texas.

Most of the north central Texas, the High Plains and the Trans Pecos region, however, were enjoying fair skies.

Southerly winds at 10 to 20 mph roamed most of the state, except the High Plains and Trans Pecos, where southwesterly breezes prevailed.

Early morning temperatures remained on the balmy side over south and south central Texas, with the mercury mostly in the mid to upper 70s. Readings had dropped into the mid 50s across the High Plains, while temperatures in the 60s were the rule elsewhere.

NATION

Parts of Nevada were buried under up to 10 inches of snow today as a storm blew across the central Rockies, and thunderstorms drenched much of the nation.

Thunderstorms dumped rain on much of the eastern Great Lakes region, the mid and south Atlantic Coast states, the upper and middle Mississippi Valley, Southern Texas and the northern Pacific Coast.

The second Western snowstorm of the week was moving across the central Rockies.Some parts of Utah's mountains were under "near blizzard-like conditions," the National Weather Service said.

Winter storm warnings and travelers advisories were issued from as far south as northern Arizona and New Mexico to Utah and southern Idaho.

British professor to receive Nobel

By WILLIAM C. MANN
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Sir Richard Stone of Cambridge University today won the 1984 Nobel prize in economics for developing accounting systems that help governments allocate their financial resources.

Stone, 71, became the fourth Briton to win the Alfred Nobel Memorial Prize in Economics, which is sponsored by the Riksbank, Sweden's central bank.

His pioneering research, begun in the 1940s, concentrated on integrating a government's accounts for different economic sectors into a model for applying its resources, the Swedish Academy of Sciences said in a statement. The academy awarded the prize.

Soft-spoken and modest, Stone shuns the limelight and wrote in the current edition of Who's Who that his main recreation is "staying at home."When reporters tried to contact him today, however, he wasn't there.

Assar Lindbeck, chairman of the Swedish Academy's Nobel Selection Committee, said Stone's ideas are used by all major international organizations and by more than 100 countries. Lindbeck said the World Bank often requires developing countries to implement Stone's accounting system as a condition of receiving World Bank loans.

Basically, the system integrates the billions of transactions in a nation's economy during a specific period, balances income, expenses and production and cross-checks them through elemental double-entry bookkeeping.

"You could say it could be a vaccination against wishful thinking on the part of developing governments," Lindbeck said, adding a feature of the system was that it uses no political policy as a basis.

"It has been standardized so that within the framework of international organizations it can be used for all countries except those with socialist systems," he said. The system is not adaptable to socialist countries because its figures must be based on supply and demand, which the planned socialist economies are not, he said.

The academy said it honored Stone for "fundamental contributions to the development of systems of national accounts, and hence greatly improved the basis for empirical economic analysis."

"Systems for national accounts have since the 1950s had a unique international impact and are indispensable for the analysis of economic levels and structures," the academy said.

"At the same time, (they provide) a systematic backing for forecasts in the form of national budgets," it said.

Britain's previous laureates shared the economics prizes with other economists in 1972, 1974 and 1977.

The economics prize was established in 1969. Stone's award marked only the fourth time that economic theorists from the United States did not win or share the prize.

The academy statement said Stone "showed his mastery in finding routes for systematic statistical searches based on the requirements of the national accounts."

He caused improvements in statistics "through the checks provided by the bookkeeping, in finding methods for approximations and impudent 'inflation' of available sampling figures," the statement said.

Born Aug. 30, 1913, Stone served in Britain's War Cabinet during World War II and in 1945 became head of Cambridge's Department of Applied Economics. He was Leake Professor of Finance and Accounting at Cambridge from 1955 until he retired in 1980.

Chemistry prize winner member of prominent Fort Worth family

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — R. Bruce Merrifield, who won the Nobel Prize for chemistry, was born to an old Texas family that also boasts a former congressman, a Fort Worth bank executive and a long line of morticians.

Merrifield, born 63 years ago in Fort Worth, rarely gets to Texas from his home in New York. But dozens of relatives from his mother's side of the family still live in the area.

"I nearly fell over when I heard Bruce's name," said Dorothy Bess Francisco of Grapevine, Merrifield's third cousin, who heard the news on television.

"I didn't really catch what he'd done. But he's been referred to me as almost a genius," she said.

Merrifield's uncle is former U.S. Rep. Wingate Lucas of Fort Worth, who lost his seat in 1954 to House Majority Leader Jim Wright.

Lucas, 75, now lives in Tennessee.

"I heard the news on the radio, and I've been on the phone with clan all day," Lucas said.

Jim Lucas, owner of five area funeral homes, is Merrifield's second cousin.

FIRE

Some residents jumped from windows, some climbed to safety on firefighters' ladders and others were rescued from the roof, authorities said. The injuries included smoke inhalation, broken bones and burns.

"People were screaming, trying to tie sheets and blankets together to get out the windows," said Lusylvia Rivera, 33, who fled with her three children from a first-floor room. "The ones who were more scared just went ahead and jumped."

Flames were shooting from fourth-floor windows when firefighters arrived at the scene, and smoke still billowed from the building hours later. The fire, spread from the third floor through air shafts, engulfed four or five floors, said Fire Chief William Comer.

"The fire spread so fast and the flames were so intense in combination with toxic smoke" from paint and plastics, and "it could be that some of them (residents) were so old they couldn't get out." Comer said.

"There was very poor visibility, panicky people, unconscious people lying on floors," said Battalion Chief Frank Crampton. "We took them out of all the windows and down all the staircases."

The blaze quickly escalated to three alarms, and firefighters from nearby Passaic, Clifton and Hawthorne joined Paterson's full force, said Cotroneo. "We have people trapped, we have people jumping, people with burns and smoke inhalation," Cotroneo said.

"It happened all of a sudden," said Harry Moore, who sat in a bar across the street after escaping with his wife and two babies from a second-floor apartment.

— Failing to eradicate the rats and other rodents despite knowledge they were present in violation of city and county health ordinances.

The suit, filed by Odessa attorney Warren Burnett, notes that Moore had to undergo the complete series of rabies shots following the bite and claims he has suffered and will continue to suffer physical pain and mental anguish from the incident.

Don Goodrum, a health inspector at the City/County Health Department, said he had investigated the incident April 1. He said the management had contracted with an exterminator and that follow-up checks on April 2 and 3 showed that the problem had been corrected.

Goodrum confirmed there periodically are problems locally with rats, but said that mice are a greater problem in the city and county.

Motel manager George Saxon declined comment on the allegations in the suit. Moore no longer is employed at the Midland Holiday Inn Country Villa.

The lawsuit was filed in Ector County because the Holday Inn's area office is in Odessa.

A rabies vaccine introduced in 1980 calls for five injections, replacing the previous 23-shot treatment, according to a registered nurse at Midland Memorial Hospital.

NOMINEE

All week, Ms. Ferraro has claimed that she and Mondale defeated Bush and Reagan in their initial debates over the last two weeks.

In addition, campaign strategists point to the debates, especially Mondale's, as revitalizing the sagging Democratic campaign. Now these strategists expect an additional boost from the final debate Sunday in Kansas City between the presidential contenders.

"This is a whole new race," Ms. Ferraro has been telling campaign audiences. "It's getting hot and we're feeling the heat. It's getting close and they're getting worried."

"We don't want to sidetrack the debate in any way," O'Brien said of Ms. Ferraro hammering at a foreign policy theme for the rest of the week. He added it amounts to raising the stakes on foreign policy.

In a speech Wednesday at the California State University at Sacramento, the congresswoman ticked off major themes of the Mondale-Ferraro campaign such as personal freedoms, the elderly, preservation of the environment, equal opportunity and equal rights, jobs and economic growth.

But, she said, "Above all, we're in a fight for peace. No single issue is more important to our future than the need to control the arms race."

And that is a prime topic on which the Democrats hope they can raise doubts about Reagan's leadership.

"Fritz Mondale and I are committed to negotiate a mutual, verifiable nuclear freeze," Ms. Ferraro said.

"Ronald Reagan has opposed every arms control treaty ever negotiated.

"If John Kennedy had listened to Ronald Reagan we wouldn't have a (nuclear) test ban treaty. If Lyndon Johnson had listened to Ronald Reagan there would be no agreement on nuclear proliferation. ... If Richard Nixon had listened to Ronald Reagan we would not have an ABM (anti-ballistic missile) treaty and the Soviets would have a greater threat to our security than they do today," she said.

When she said, "In the last four years, Reagan's record has been just as bad," there were jeers from Reagan supporters sprinkled through the crowd.

"If I had a record like Ronald Reagan's, I wouldn't want anybody to hear it either," she responded to the heckling.

Reagan, she said, "is the first president since the dawn of the nuclear age not to make progress on arms control."

SEATS

"Sometimes they cause more injury than they prevent," See agreed.

As a member of the TADA Board of Directors, See has fully endorsed TADA's efforts to make child safety seats financially accessible to Midlanders.

The federally approved seats are for sale at Midland dealerships at prices ranging from cost (about $30) to $45.

Although retail costs for the seats are about $60, Texas Safety Association officials are urging parents not to buy seats from garage sales because of potential safety problems. While missing information or straps are easy to detect, it's much more difficult to determine whether the seat has been involved in an automobile accident — an event the association says should bring about the retirement of the seat.

"This practice just ensures added protection for young riders," said George R. Gustafson, executive vice president of the Texas Safety Association.

Mistaking a common household infant carrier or booster seat for one made for motor vehicles is another danger of buying the articles at garage sales, he said.

According to a news release issued by the Texas Safety Association, federally approved child safety seats are required to show the manufacture date and include manufacturer's instructions. The current crash standard was done in January 1981 so consumers should look for seats manufactured on or after that date.

Although three companies (IBM in Austin, Transco Energy Co. in Houston and Tenenco, Inc. in Houston) have responded to the association's request to provide funds to help the association's loaner program in major cities, others also are trying to make the relatively expensive seats available locally.

The Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary rents seats for infants and toddlers at a low cost.

According to Kim Modisett, chairman of the program, the infant seats, for babies from birth to 8 or 9 months, rent for $1.50 per month. A $25 deposit is required and the fee is taken out of the deposit. The remaining money is refunded when the seat is returned.

A variety of toddler seats are available for two weeks maximum at $1 per week. The short-term rental is designed so that parents can test the way seats are installed and their child's reaction to them beforing buying one, Ms. Modisett said.

The seats are available for rental at noon Tuesdays and 10 a.m. Thursdays at the MMH annex, 2200 W. Texas Ave. Demonstrations and parent education about the importance of the seat also are available, Ms. Modisett said.

According to law, children less than 2 years old must be restrained in a safety seat and those ages 2 to 4 must be in a safety seat or belt.

Fines from $25 to $50 for noncompliance will be assessed beginning Jan. 1. A fine can be dismissed if a person shows proof of acquisition by purchase, loan or rental within 10 days of the offense.

Sadat Peace Foundation plans revealed in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Jihan Sadat, the wife of slain Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, has announced the establishment of the Sadat Peace Foundation to continue efforts for Middle East peace initiated by her husband.

Mrs. Sadat made the announcement Wednesday in a press conference at Southern Methodist University, which plans to sponsor research and exchange programs under the foundation.

"There are people who start talking about peace only when they are afflicted by the ravages of war. But there are other people who think of peace as a condition for development, for construction and for prosperity," Mrs. Sadat said.

"They think of peace as a philosophy, as a way of life, which is essential for all people and all nations.

"Such was my late husband," said Mrs. Sadat, whose husband was assassinated three years ago.

Mrs. Sadat said his dreams had not died with him. She said she plans to travel across the United States to garner support for the organization in hopes of rekindling the spirit she said was started with the signing of the Camp David accords.

"We still have our relations with Israel," she said. "The Israeli ambassador from our country comes and visits me from to time. We have good relations. Sometimes it has its ups and downs. But there is a relationship which we are looking for other Arabs to match."

SMU was the first school in the United States to be asked by the foundation to participate in the program.

R. Hal Williams, dean of the undergraduate school, said the foundation wants to use the resources of students and faculty in anthropology, economics, history, political science and religion at SMU to try to improve relations between the Middle East and the United States.

Diplomats: Chernenko interview aimed at influencing debate

MOSCOW (AP) — Konstantin U. Chernenko's call for U.S. moves to break the arms control talks deadlock was likely aimed at influencing the U.S. presidential debate and election, but also suggested improved U.S.-Soviet relations, diplomats say.

The Soviet leader's ideas were outlined in an interview with the Washington Post, published Wednesday. It was his first meeting with a Western journalist.

The Post said Chernenko, 73, appeared in good health. He was rumored to have been hospitalized this summer with unsp)cified illnesses.

Diplomats, who spoke on condition they not be identified, were unanimous in saying the interview seemed designed to influence Sunday's debate on foreign policy issues between President Reagan and Democratic challenger Walter Mondale.

"You can be certain that they (the Soviets) thought exactly about when they would give the interview. You don't get such a thing by chance," one West European diplomat commented.

The diplomats did not spell out exactly how they thought the Soviets hoped to influence the elections, although one suggested that the interview was an attempt to focus the debate on issues which the Soviets want to see discussed by the candidates.

A transcript of the interview was carried by all major Soviet newspapers today, with a straightforward one-paragraph introduction stating that Chernenko had responded to questions "touching on Soviet-American relations."

Some Western diplomats said they believe Chernenko hinted at positive changes in superpower relations.

Chernenko suggested space weapons talks be preceded by a moratorium on the testing or deployment of such weapons; a freeze on nuclear weapons; U.S. ratification of underground nuclear testing treaties signed in 1974 and 1976, and a U.S. pledge not to be the first to use nuclear weapons.

The West European diplomat said the substance of the interview — asking the United States to make a policy shift in order to get a response from the Soviets — differed little from Soviet statements of the past months.

Yet, he said, the interview contained "a recognition of the need for dialogue" and was "more positive" than negative in tone.

Soviet news media began reporting the interview Wednesday night with broadcasts on Radio Moscow that said Chernenko expressed a desire to improve U.S.-Soviet relations.

The news agency Novosti issued a report under the headline, "We are for good relations with the U.S.A., says Konstantin Chernenko."

The Reagan administration responded Wednesday by saying it wants improved relations but has no obligation "to pay a price so that the Soviet Union will come back to the nuclear negotiating table."

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes gave no indication the United States is prepared to shift its position on any arms control issue Chernenko cited.

"When the Soviet Union is prepared to move from public exchanges to private negotiations and concrete agreements, they will find us ready," Speakes said in a statement issued in response to the interview.

The Washington Post said Chernenko responded in writing to written questions submitted by the paper and also answered questions by the Post's correspondent during a 20-minute interview in the president's Kremlin office.

Peace prize winner Tutu returns home

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Bishop Desmond Tutu, telling a crowd of jubliant supporters that "we have done well, all of us," returned to his troubled homeland today as winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize.

D. Tutu

"God is saying to us, He is on our side," the black Anglican clergyman declared to more than 200 people who greeted him as he emerged from customs at Jan Smuts airport. He was accompanied by his wife, Leah, and daughters Naomi and Mpho.

Supporters held up placards saying: "Apartheid: Goodbye to You," and "Tutu: Freedom a Reality." The crowd sang "Nkosi Sikelel' iAfrica," (God Bless Africa), the unofficial black national anthem.

Tutu, 53, a leader in the struggle for equal rights for South Africa's 22 million blacks, joined in the singing and danced a little as he worked his way through the crowd.

Tutu embraced the Rev. Allan Boesak, a mixed-race minister of the Dutch Reformed Church who, along with Tutu, is one of the most prominent clerics in the campaign against the white-dominated government's system of racial separation, known as apartheid.

Boesak said Tutu's Nobel prize is "a tremendous boost for us at a time when the South African government is beginning to think it could get away with bogus reforms. We have been given a kind of recognition that we needed most at this time."

Earlier this year South Africa adopted a new constitution giving limited representation in Parliament to Indians and people of mixed-race. However, South Africa's blacks are considered citizens of 10 tribal homelands and are denied citizenship rights.

Boesak also said the award was a "personal vindication for Bishop Tutu, who has gone through so much vilification from the South African government, and a vindication for the movement."

The South African Council of Churches, which Tutu heads, has come under close government scrutiny for its work in the campaign against apartheid. Tutu's passport was revoked in 1981 for anti-government remarks, and he travels on temporary permits issued for each trip.

Boesak criticized the government for not congratulating Tutu. "The South African government can still not bring the decency of saying congratulations to this man," he said.

Conservative white South Africans have assailed the Nobel committee's decision, saying Tutu gives tacit support to the African National Congress guerrilla movement fighting from exile against white rule. Tutu denies that charge, saying he supports the ANC's goal of equal rights for all, but not its methods.

The government-controlled South African Broadcasting Corp. said in an editorial on national radio today that the peace prize "has degenerated into an international political instrument."

The editorial said Tutu's "contribution to peace in South Africa is neither remarkable nor consistent," and quoted the bishop as saying that hate and violence were the only alternative for South Africa as long as blacks were denied participation in the system.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Hunter kills man-eating tiger

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A nine-foot Royal Bengal tiger believed to have killed 40 people in recent months was slain by a hunter in eastern India, the United News of India reports.

The news agency said Wednesday that S.B. Minaralu shot the tiger last weekend while it was feeding on its latest victim.

The tiger stalked villagers in forests of Orissa state, about 750 miles southeast of New Delhi, after it was injured by an ax-wielding tribesman trying to protect his wife, the news agency said.

General receives high Soviet honor

MOSCOW (AP) — Gen. Vladimir L. Govorov, who reportedly gave the orders to shoot down a South Korean airliner last year, has been named a Hero of the Soviet Union to mark his 60th birthday today.

The honor is the highest Soviet award.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Govorov, who was promoted earlier this year to be one of 12 deputy defense ministers, was distinguished for his "contribution to increasing military preparedness" and for leadership during World War II.

U.S. intelligence sources were quoted by London's Sunday Times in September 1983 as saying they believed the order to fire on the Korean Air Lines passenger jet that strayed into Soviet airspace was given by Govorov after consultations with commanders in Moscow.

The Korean jet was shot down Sept. 1, 1983, and all 269 people on board were killed.

Grand Hotel will be rebuilt

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — The Grand Hotel, devastated in an IRA bomb attack aimed at Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and her Cabinet last week, will be rebuilt, according to its owners.

A spokesman for the Greenall Whitley group said Wednesday that the hotel and brewery chain hopes to reopen the 122-year-old hotel on Brighton's promenade by late next year.

The explosion tore a hole in the front of the building, and the spokesman said repairs were estimated to cost about $6 million. He said the hotel was insured for $12 million.

Four people were killed and 32 wounded in last Friday's bombing by the outlawed Irish Republican Army, fighting to drive the British out of Northern Ireland. Mrs. Thatcher and her Cabinet were staying at the Grand while they attended the Conservative Party's annual convention.

Guerrilla leader to be extradited

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The supreme court has rejected a plea to stop the extradition of Argentine leftist guerrilla leader Mario Firmenich.

The ruling Wednesday means Firmenich, 35, former head of the Montonero guerrilla group, could be sent back to Argentina at any time, a court official said.

Firmenich was arrested in Rio in February after Argentina asked for his extradition for terrorist crimes committed during the so-called "dirty war" between leftists and the right-wing military regime that ran Argentina from 1976-1983.

Soviets condemn Spock's arrest

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet media has condemned the arrest of antiwar activist Benjamin Spock in Washington this week as a violation of human rights and repression of the peace movement.

The official news agency Tass issued six articles Wednesday on Spock's arrest. Stories denouncing the action were also published by the government daily Izvestia and Komsomolskaya Pravda, official newspaper of the Soviet youth organization.

Lawmakers denounce CIA's manual for 'contras'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency is under scathing attack for producing a psychological warfare manual for Nicaraguan rebels that says some leftist government officials can be "neutralized" with the "selective use of violence."

Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, denounced the book Wednesday night as "repugnant" and a "document (that) should never have been produced by any element of the United States government."

The furor over the 90-page manual, entitled "Psychological Operations in Guerrilla War," has also revived congressional calls for the ouster of CIA director William J. Casey, President Reagan's longtime friend and a chief architect of U.S. policy in Central America.

The Associated Press, quoting intelligence sources, reported Monday that the manual was produced by the CIA. The book recommends the hiring of professional criminals to carry out "selective jobs," creating a "martyr" by arranging a violent demonstration that leads to the death of a rebel supporter, and coercing Nicaraguans into carrying out assignments against their will.

It also states that unpopular government officials, including judges, police and security officials, can be "neutralized" with the "selective use of violence." However, the precise meanings of "neutralized" and "selective jobs" for criminals are not made clear.

Boland said the House Intelligence Committee, responsible for overseeing CIA activities, had been unaware of the manual until the AP provided a copy to the panel earlier this month. "Since that time, the committee staff has been exploring with the CIA the reasons for its production and distribution," Boland said. "That investigation is not yet complete."

In his unusually tough reaction, Boland compared the manual to the CIA-directed mining of Nicaragua's harbors earlier this year.

"Like the mining, the manual is a disaster for U.S. foreign policy," Boland said. "It espouses the doctrine of Lenin, not Jefferson. It embraces the communist revolutionary tactics the United States has pledged to defeat throughout the world. Its emphasis on deceiving the populace makes a mockery of American championship of democratic values."

Boland's response came in a letter to Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., who had called for a congressional probe of the manual. Boland said the book was given to the Nicaraguan rebels, known as "contras," last year.

Meanwhile, administration officials continued to refuse comment on the manual, and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, demanded an explanation from the CIA by Friday.

Rep. James N. Shannon, D-Mass., who was an observer at this week's peace talks between the Salvadoran government and leftist guerrillas fighting in that country, called on Reagan to fire Casey, who has been under fire in the past for his financial dealings.

"For the sake of all who believe in freedom, President Reagan should dismiss CIA Director William Casey and unequivocally condemn this action by the CIA," Shannon said. "The CIA primer instructing Nicaraguan contras on terrorism is inconsistent with the history and the values of the American people."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said, "Aiding and abetting a strategy of political assassination is unacceptable American foreign policy and intolerable at any level of our government. The fundamental question is, did President Reagan know about the CIA's role in the preparation of this reprehensible document — and if he didn't, what is he going to do about it?"

Parents put candy stores off limits

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese parents are declaring neighborhood candy stores off limits to their children as extortionists broaden their cyanide candy scare to force a manufacturer to pay them $400,000.

Until now, the extortionists have always put clear warnings on the poisoned candy packages they surreptitiously slipped onto store shelves. However, they have stepped up their campaign against the manufacturer, Morinaga and Co., with a threat to put cyanide-laced candy on store shelves this week with no warnings on packages.

"Mothers around here have taken precautions, but we can't be 100 percent safe if the extortionists strike with unmarked cyanide candy," said Mrs. Yukiko Tsuda, 37, of Nishinomiya City, near Osaka. "We keep the TV switched on all day for news."

"We've instructed our children to buy candy only when with their parents and to be very careful," Noboru Yamashita, vice principal at Seimeigaoka, Osaka's largest elementary school, said in a telephone interview.

More than 44,000 policemen patrolled supermarkets and candy stores across the nation today, and thousands of Morinaga employees and their families have been combing stores in the Osaka area for suspicious-looking candy boxes. Thousands of stores nationwide already have removed Morinaga products from their shelves.

Morinaga became the target of the extortionists in mid-September. In the first of more than 30 typewritten threats, the group demanded 100 million yen ($400,000) from Morinaga, one of Japan's largest candymakers with annual sales of about 120 billion yen ($500 million).

The extortionists call themselves "The Man with 21 Faces" after a popular mystery series.

Police in the Osaka area have found 14 boxes of Morinaga and Co. candies containing lethal doses of cyanide.

No one is known to have been harmed so far.

Noboru Hosomi, principal of the Kawaragi Elementary School where Mrs. Tsuda's son is a pupil, said, "We have asked homeroom teachers to tell students to be careful of these sick men and their candies, but we have refrained from mentioning Morinaga's name. All the kids know it anyway from the extensive news coverage."

The scare has dominated the news since Oct. 8, when the extortionists first wrote major newspapers that they carried out their September threat to Morinaga by putting 20 boxes of tainted candies on store shelves but with clear warnings on them. They added, however, that if their demands were not met they would plant 30 unmarked boxes in stores in 10 days. That deadline came Wednesday.

Television talk shows have invited mystery writers to discuss the group's operating methods and language experts to analyze the tapes of telephone calls from the extortionists. More than 1 million people have called a special number to listen to the tapes, while about 350 people have volunteered information after police on Monday released a videotape of a "suspicious" man in a supermarket where poisoned candy was found.

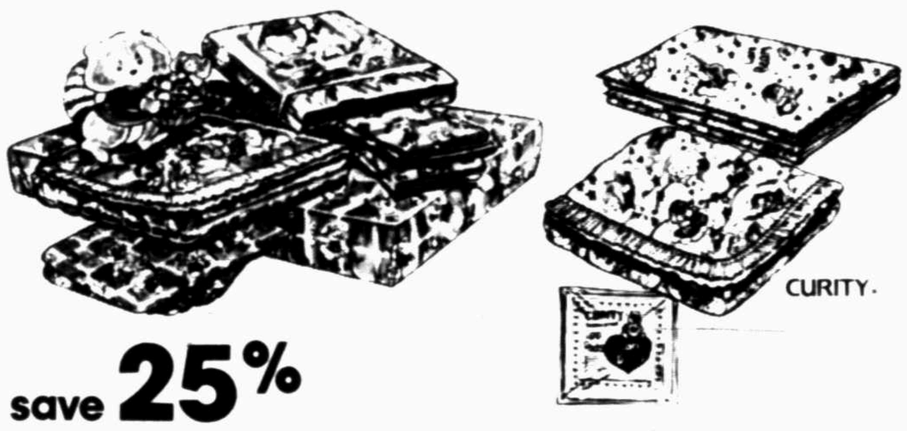

"The Man with 21 Faces" first struck March 18, when Katsuhisa Ezaki, president of the Osaka-based confectionery Ezaki Glico Co., was dragged from his bath by kidnappers who demanded 1 billion yen ($4.4 million) and 220 pounds of gold.

Recovery road

The 1984 Permian Basin Oil Show, now under way in Odessa, is a significant event and, not unlike previous gatherings of industry personnel, one of the main topics of conversation is the state of that industry.

That's only natural. With the lion's share of businesses in the Permian Basin devoted to the location and production of oil and gas or one of the various service functions, it's understandable that the state of that industry would be a vital concern. It's been said many times before but it's well worth repeating: Everyone in the Permian Basin is in the oil business — in one way or another.

The oil show offers something for everyone. It gives sales representatives the opportunity to show off the latest innovations in equipment (and to make a few sells). It gives industry "old-timers" a reason to get-together to swap tall-tales and interesting anecdotes (and to relive some of their more memorable moments in the oil patch). It gives a lot of area residents who aren't directly involved in oil-related industries the opportunity to expand their knowledge of the business that has so much to do with how good a life they have.

All-in-all it can honestly be said that the oil show is a true highlight of life in this area. That's substantiated by the fact that the show this year — and in many previous years — is featuring exhibits from approximately 550 companies and the fact that it attracts not only sales representatives from throughout the world but also numerous curious people who are intrigued by this fascinating industry.

That's what the oil show is all about. It's the oil industry on display, telling its stories, crowing its accomplishments and recounting its hardships. Over the past couple of years the industry has been struggling to regain its prominence in an uncertain economy. But there's a new mood in the industry now. The old boom-bust cycle has taken its toll in past years and many in the industry now are downplaying hopes for another boom. Rather they favor slow, sustained growth of the industry.

Whatever course the recovery takes one thing is certain: This industry is marked for great strides in future years. Don't take our word for it; go see for yourself at Ector County Coliseum.

Terrorism's threat

The Irish Republican Army has taken credit for the bombing of a seaside hotel in Brighton, England, where Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and her Cabinet narrowly escaped death. One Conservative Party member and three other hotel guests were killed by the blast.

This outrage failed to halt Thatcher from chairing a scheduled meeting of her party. She received an eight-minute standing ovation from her fellow Tories.

We applaud her courage.

The bombing underscores the need to resolve the problems in Northern Ireland through reason, not violence. The IRA is outlawed in the Republic of Ireland, where the government has cooperated with Britain to hunt down and jail IRA terrorists.

But both Britain and Ireland have failed to halt the IRA. Why?

Because the IRA receives support among a certain portion of the Irish population in Ireland, Britain and America. That is a crime against the victims of violence and a tragedy for Northern Ireland, which will never become reunified as long as terrorism threatens lives.

Another View:

Mining the poor

The "compassion" that some politicians keep saying they feel for the poor is not unlike that which the Walrus and the Carpenter in Lewis Carroll's rhyme felt for the oysters — which they ate down to the last one.

Compassion is the excuse for the trillions of dollars that the country has spent fighting poverty.

The multibillion-dollar programs continue today. Many are expanding.

Yet there are more poor people now than there were when all the heavy spending on poverty began. Why?

A significant part of the answer may be found in a statement by the distinguished black economist, Thomas Sowell, who summed up federal poverty programs this way:

"To be blunt, the poor are a gold mine. By the time they are studied, advised, experimented with, and administered, the poor have helped many a middle-class liberal to achieve affluence with government money."

Writing in the New York Times magazine, he commented: "The total amount of money the government spends on its many anti-poverty efforts is three times what would be required to lift every man, woman and child in America above the official poverty line by simply sending money to the poor."

This led conservative editor and writer Richard Viguerie to say, "Yes, as always, it is the poor who suffer the most from inflation, from taxation, from regulation, from liberalism.

"Inflation makes the poor poorer. Taxes push up prices. Laws like the minimum wage prevent the poor from getting jobs. And liberalism offers the poor a handout while placing its foot on their neck."

And these people call this compassion. Economic growth offers the poor some hope as it always has. Those with energy and ambition can escape from the rut. An expanding economy offers job opportunities. In a forward-looking society, the poor are encouraged to make the efforts that carry them into the mainstream.

America's poor do not need more of the narcoticlike compassion that traps them at the bottom of the heap forever while their numbers increase.

Officials fighting registration

WASHINGTON — Some overzealous Reagan administration officials are still trying to ban voter-registration drives from public buildings. Apparently, they fear that a big voter turnout will bring too many Democrats to the polls.

Jack Anderson

These officials have gone so far as to countermand federal court orders and their own internal regulations.

The case of Donald Devine, director of the Office of Personnel Management, has already been reported. Using his own unique interpretation of a federal law, Devine warned that registration drives conducted in state buildings might result in a cutoff of federal funds to the state.

In fact, the law merely prohibits state employees from trying to interfere in an election.

Now it's the Labor Department's turn. The Employment and Training Administration has sent letters to its regional offices warning that federal regulations don't allow voter-registration drives in state employment offices, which get federal funds.

The letters don't mention that job seekers and those drawing unemployment benefits are less likely to be Reagan supporters.

As legal justification, Bert Lewis, the regional management administrator, cited an inoperative section of a federal manual. Here's how he explained this curious reliance on a defunct rule:

"Although Part IV of the Employment Services Manual has been rescinded," Lewis wrote in a memo outlining the new policy, "the precedent established ... regarding voter registration represents an expression of (agency) policy."

Specifically, the state employment offices "could be used for voter registration and-or elections only during non-working hours," Lewis wrote. Furthermore, all costs "had to be paid for by the state from other than (federally) granted funds, and the facilities had to be restored to original condition at the expense of the state."

The agency's position is in direct conflict with federal court injunctions ordering that public places must be open for voter-registration efforts.

In Ohio two years ago, for example, a federal court ruled that such registration drives are protected by the First Amendment. In Pennsylvania more recently, a federal judge ruled that restrictions on voter registration were violations of the First and 14th amendments.

When asked about this apparent defiance of the courts, a Labor Department spokesman told my associate Donald Goldberg that these decisions had been overruled by a New York state court — though how a state court could overrule federal judges in other jurisdictions was not explained.

In fact, the New York decision merely forbade state employees from taking part in voter-registration drives. It made no restrictions on volunteers.

The administration's attacks on voter registration, though legally outrageous, are having the desired practical effect. Voter-registration groups have had to go to court repeatedly to fight state officials who have gone along with the administration — or have been intimidated by the threat of a cutoff in federal funds.

STRICTLY PERSONAL: In an earlier column, I answered some of the political questions that have come in the mail. Here are a few more replies:

Has President Reagan softened his tone toward the Kremlin because he wants better relations or because he wants to be re-elected?

Sources close to the president tell me he believes his own anti-communist rhetoric and doesn't trust the Soviets. He's convinced that they have cheated on past arms agreements. My sources insist, nevertheless, that Reagan genuinely wants to reduce East-West tensions.

Is Walter Mondale soft on communism?

Those who know Mondale say his first priority, if elected, would be to reduce world tensions. He believes concessions are preferable to confrontations. He would seek accomodations, therefore, with nations that are unruly. But this does not mean he's soft on communism.

Does Reagan, contrary to his public statements, have a secret plan to raise taxes?

In a sense, yes. He wants to overhaul and simplify the tax system. This will likely involve some tax hikes, which the president will call "reforms" rather than "increases."

Though he recognizes a tax overhaul will raise some taxes and lower others, he hopes to keep the general tax level low. He believes high taxes stifle prosperity and encourage government extravagances.

Is Mondale's promise to raise taxes and reduce the deficit credible?

As a certifiable liberal, Mondale has had an ingrained nonchalance about deficits. He has had a tendency to believe national problems can be solved with more federal funding. He is now shedding his profligate skin with excessive delicacy. I am sure he believes it will take more taxes to reduce the deficit.

The better way, I believe, is to reduce wasteful spending. During the past 35 years, the median family's income has increased 7.6 times. But their income taxes have shot up 246.4 times. No matter how much the taxpayers are soaked, taxes never seem to keep up with spending.

Debates don't govern politics

WASHINGTON — These have been days that caused tongues to click, lips to purse, brows to furrow and fists to clench in both parties.

George F. Will

For at least one of the President's most trusted confidants, there were signs of trouble even before the Louisville debate. This confidant thought it was out of character — undignified and unpresidential — for Reagan to refer to his opponent as "whatshisname." Since Louisville, Republicans talk less about this being a "re-aligning" election. But they may be mistaken, at least in this sense: We may not be on the eve of a re-aligning election, we may be in the middle of a re-aligning era that no trivial event, such as a debate, can disrupt.

For Mondale these have been the most satisfying days of his long march. The debate was the first moment since January that his courtship of the electorate had not gone unrewarded. Until then, the more he campaigned the more "negatives" became attached to him in polls. That pattern changed after the debate. But not much else changed. The "270 problem" — electoral votes, that is — is as intractable as before.

In the afterglow of Mondale's debate performance it was almost possible for Democrats to dream of President Mondale. Did I say dream? It may have been a nightmare for Gary Hart and Mario Cuomo. Hart would then have to run for re-election in 1986. After you have been the lion of New Hampshire, the star of Super Tuesday and the toast of California, it is hell to go back and beg for votes in Pagosa Springs, Colorado. And Cuomo would have to run for governor again. Albany has many charms, but...

(My hunch is that Cuomo will run again in any case. He will pledge to serve a full term, which is fine. But he will mean it. He, like me, has a picture of Thomas More on his wall. I, unlike Cuomo, have a flicker of sympathy for Henry VIII, who found More exasperatingly stiff-necked.)

But the odds against a Mondale administration remain high, for reasons that have little to do with Mondale personally, and much to do with his being a Democrat. That is an imprudent thing to be in a Republican presidential era, which Horace Busby says this is.

Busby, a Tory Democrat from Texas, who served in LBJ's White House, now is a Washington consultant who writes one of the town's most interesting newsletters, in part because his pocket calculator never sleeps. He reports that in 1980 some voter cast the billionth vote cast since 1856 for a presidential candidate of the Republican or Democratic parties (more than half the billion have been cast since 1952). In this, "the oldest continuous political competition in the world," the popular vote split has been amazingly even. During these 124 years, each party has received more than 500 million votes — Republicans 51 percent, Democrats 49 percent.

But Republicans lead in elections won, 19 to 13. And 54 percent of the electoral votes have gone to Republicans, 46 percent to Democrats. There have been eras of lopsided dominance. From 1860 to 1928 Republicans won 61 percent of the electoral votes. From 1932 through 1948 Democrats had the strongest dominance yet recorded: 83 percent.

In the four elections beginning in 1968 Republicans have won 74 percent. The 1932-48 Democratic dominance was really FDR's one-man show: In 1948 Truman did not even get a majority of the popular vote. (Since 1944 no Northern liberal Democratic candidate for President has received a majority of the popular vote. The only two Democrats who have — LBJ in 1964 and Carter, barely, in 1976 — were from states of the Confederacy.) If Reagan wins this year and a Republican wins in 1988, Republicans will govern at least until 1992, establishing a 40-year dominance under four elected Presidents.

Since 1920 seven of the 15 elections have been landslides, with the winner getting more than 400 electoral votes, as in 1980. But in the elections immediately after four of those seven, the party that had won the landslide was defeated (1932, 1960, 1968, 1976). Therefore, Busby may see more inevitability than history will admit.

But in recent days a small event (the Louisville debate) has caused many people (including bored journalists hungry for a more stimulating story) to exaggerate the fluidity of American politics. So it is salutary to be reminded of the length and steadiness of the pendular movements in American politics. The electorate believes certain things, not capriciously, and the parties stand for certain things, not frivolously. These, not 90-minute episodes, govern politics. And they make the electorate move more like maple syrup than mercury.

Officer's help cited

Recently I was driving on a county road, on my way to watch my grandson's football game. As I approached the highway, I saw two boys in a car with the hood raised.

I stopped, asked if they needed help and was told they needed their battery jumped, but they did not have a set of cables. I told them I did and pulled my car off the road, yet beside theirs, so as to use my battery and cables. The motor would turn over, but would not start, and I, not being a mechanic, wondered what I should do.

I happened to look behind me and several cars were waiting to get on the highway, the first being a county sheriff's patrol unit. I told the patrolman I wasn't able to help the boys, needed to get to the ball game, etc. He told me he had a set of cables and would help the boys — if he couldn't get the car started, he would call someone to come get them, and for me to go on to the game.

I would like to publicly thank Patrolman Jerry Cannon for "being at the right place at the right time." He was not only concerned about helping the young boys, but also insisted I get on to the game before it was over, knowing I was already late for it. As I proceeded towards Lee Field, I felt good knowing Patrolman Cannon was "in charge" and would be more help than I.

It is certainly nice to know we have such kind and caring patrolmen on our county roads, not only to be mechanics, but to handle any problem we might have — in and around our homes.

So my sincere thanks to you, Patrolman Cannon, for helping and, by the way, my grandson's team won their game!

Sports writer irks legislator

I am incensed at Terry Williamson's opinion piece of Sept. 28 in which he accuses the Governor of Texas and those of us who favor the new eligibility rules governing extra-curricular activities of consorting with drug dealers to pass the law.

Twenty years in public life has taught me everyone has the right to their own opinion even when I think it's a dumb one. It is, however, outside the bounds of civil public debate to make such asinine comments, which themselves denigrate both the position and intelligence of the accuser.

The fact that a little-known sportswriter would have missed his 1962 high school football season under today's rules is no argument against the new policy, which decidedly emphasizes academics over extracurriculars. Given the importance to him (professionally?) of football, today's rule would simply have encouraged him to work harder at his chemistry lesson. Today's athletes are up to it, too.

Mr. Williamson's values are obvious — and absurd. The new rule is not a matter of punishment; it is a matter of perspective.

Cable change upset reader

Why is it when Midland has something good going for it somewhere down the line somebody or something has to mess it up? What I am talking about is cablevision changing channel 11 to channel 21.

Channel 21 does not appeal to me because it doesn't have the programming I enjoy. Channel 11 did. The programs that I enjoyed on this channel were "All In The Family," "Twilight Zone" and the Chicago Cubs when they played. Instead channel 11 has been replaced with the "700 Club" which has some good programming on it but not as much as channel 11 did.

I think that channel 24 already is devoted enough to this type of programming without having to take up another channel.

Hopefully in the near future Cablevision will not have a monopoly on the cable TV here and another better cable company will come which is better equipped to handle the needs of the community as well as the individual.

Mondale's gains in polls make him more popular with candidates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic congressional candidates have shied from identifying themselves closely with presidential nominee Walter Mondale, say politicians in both parties, but Mondale's gains in the polls are making him a more welcome campaign companion.

Republicans, on the other hand, say their candidates for House and Senate seats have been eager all along for any kind of indentification with President Reagan, and his dip in the polls after the first presidential debate did not diminish the demand for his political help.

"Any time a Congress or Senate candidate can get on a podium next to the president, they are very, very happy to do so," GOP National Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf said in an interview.

On the other hand, Fahrenkopf said, "In the South particularly and in the West, you don't see a lot of Democratic office holders up there being seen alongside the Democratic nominee."

Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, said the debate, in which polls showed Reagan the loser, brought no letup in requests by GOP Senate candidates for a chance to campaign alongside him.

Most Democrats painted a brighter picture of Mondale's popularity than Fahrenkopf did but conceded that some of their candidates had been reluctant to tie their campaigns closely to his, at least before his standing in the polls began to rise.

"I think for a while, when the polls were showing him at about 33 percent, it was thought that he wasn't going to be the most attractive candidate to campaign with," said George Behan, press secretary for Rep. Norman Dicks, D-Wash.

Behan said Dicks, a long-time Mondale supporter, had always welcomed the former vice president's help, but "some of his colleagues have been less interested in having him (Mondale) appear with them."

"Since the debate, interest in Mondale is picking up," Behan said.

Luke Roth, executive director of the Iowa Republican State Central Committee, said he thought Democratic candidates in Iowa were more comfortable appearing with vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro at a recent appearance than they were with Mondale.

"I don't think there was any problem with everyone gathering about her and letting her luminescence shine on them. Mondale maybe is a different story," he said.

Scott Widmeyer, a Mondale spokesman, said interest on the part of congressional candidates had increased since Congress adjourned and the polls started going up for Mondale.

Bush campaign savors attention generated by his salty remarks

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — In a little more than a week, Vice President George Bush's campaign has become filled with charges about salty remarks, accusations about shame, demands for apologies, and now, comments about his manhood.

The strange agenda of issues has emerged in what had been a low-key campaign up until Bush's debate last Thursday with Geraldine Ferraro.

Ever since that encounter, Bush has been trading fire with White House challenger Walter Mondale and his running mate, Ms. Ferraro, about his comments both in the debate and afterwards.

Peter Teeley, press secretary to the vice president, said Wednesday he was not disturbed by the odd twist of developments.

"We are very surprised that the Mondale-Ferraro campaign would waste five days by throwing bombs at us," Teeley said.

"We are more than willing to take the heat from the Mondale campaign," Teeley added. "All it does is free up the president to take the high road. It allows the president to get his message out."

Bush, whose family nickname is "Poppy," seems to be relishing the sudden new attention he has received since offering this post-debate assessment: "We tried to kick a little ass last night."

Calling attention to the controversy, Bush opened a foreign policy address Wednesday by saying that he and his wife Barbara "have been washing our mouths out with soap ever since" he made his off-color remark and his wife called Ms. Ferraro something that rhymes with "rich."

Teeley, asked why Bush keeps referring to his off-color remark, said, "We were just trying to laugh off the issue. They're (Democrats) trying to make it a serious one."

"In terms of votes, we're just laughing all the way to the bank," Teeley said.

In the debate, Bush also said that Mondale and Ms. Ferraro had suggested that American servicemen killed in Lebanon had "died in shame." Ms. Ferraro protested immediately that they had never said that, and Mondale demanded an apology.

When Bush refused, Mondale said, "He doesn't have an answer and he doesn't have the manhood to apologize."

Asked about Mondale's charge, Bush, in a somewhat confusing answer, replied, "I'll lay my record on any forum, whatever it is, on the manhood up against his. I'll just leave it at that."

Questioned again later, Bush said: "Desperation. We're getting near the election."

Charles T. Manatt, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said earlier this week in Los Angeles, "Shame on George Bush for using sexist, downgrading language toward Geraldine Ferraro."

Yet, Bush's remark seems to have created an identity for his often-overlooked campaign.

Fans at the World Series in Detroit and at rallies in California have shouted encouragement to Bush using his language.

Hundreds of homeless people leave Indian guru's commune in Oregon

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Hundreds of homeless people bused into central Oregon by followers of an Indian guru are leaving the commune with no money to get home and are relying on social service agencies of communities in the state for food and shelter, officials say.

The Salvation Army has fed and housed about 400 of the street people in the past week, and another 150 were "dumped" from buses downtown Wednesday, said Salvation Army spokeswoman Sonia Fetherston.

"We've been helping the homeless in Portland for 98 years, and we've never seen anything like this," she said. The Salvation Army said some of the people left here Wednesday were not expected to find shelter for the night.

Since early September thousands of homeless from cities around the nation have been bused to Rajneeshpuram, the central Oregon city founded by followers of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh. Opponents of the busing claimed the group was trying to pack Wasco County's voter registraton rolls before the residency deadline for people wishing to vote in the Nov. 6 general election, which was Wednesday.

The recruitment program is winding down this week because of the approach of winter, said Rajneeshee spokeswoman Ma Prem Isabel, denying that it was intended to pack voter rolls. She said about 850 homeless people have left Rajneeshpuram since the busing began.

Callie Kurz, a Trailways Bus System ticket clerk in Madras, said more than 800 street people had been bused from the town near the commune in the last week alone.

Social service agencies in Portland are appealing to the public and church organizations for money for bus tickets home for the homeless.

"I don't think much of it at all," said Mayor Frank Ivancie. "If they attract these people into Oregon, they should ship them back to where they came from. We have enough problems here."

"We have sent home 130 in the past week," Ms. Fetherston said Wednesday. "We don't have enough money to send them all."

In Madras, Everett Jantzen, director of the Harvest Field Mission and pastor of the Church of the Nazarene, said donations had paid to transport more than 50 people home through last week.

Rajneeshpuram officials say about 3,700 street people remain in their commune.

Before Sept. 23, the visitors were offered round-trip bus tickets. Since then, however, the Rajneeshees say recruits have been warned that if they left, they would be on their own. Several street people say they were issued no such warning.

"I chose to leave," said Danny Harding, 22, of San Jose, Calif., who arrived at Rajneeshpuram about three weeks ago. "I ended up in fights with the sannyasins (disciples). They promised me no violence, they promised paradise.

Reagan panel wants more emphasis on liberal arts

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Reagan administration panel is urging colleges to require two years of liberal arts study even if that forces students in business and technical fields to stay on campus longer than four years.

In a report prepared for Education Secretary T.H. Bell, the panel of college professors also proposed a variety of other changes to address what it called "warning signals" of a decline in the quality of higher education.

All undergraduates "should have at least two full years of liberal education. In most professional fields, this may require extending undergraduate programs beyond the usual four years," said the report, entitled "Involvement in Learning: Realizing the Potential of American Higher Education."

It said this might entail "a radical restructuring" of programs for students in such fields as agriculture, business, engineering, music, nursing, pharmacy and teacher education.

A copy of the report was obtained Wednesday by The Associated Press.

Bell is scheduled to release it Monday following a discussion with college officials.

Bell and Manuel Justiz, director of his National Institute of Education, commissioned the study a year ago in an attempt to focus more attention on the problems of higher education.

The seven-member Study Group on the Conditions of Excellence in American Higher Education, chaired by Kenneth P. Mortimer of Pennsylvania State University, warned, "The strains of rapid expansion of higher education, followed by recent years of constricting resources and leveling enrollments...have taken their toll.

"Gaps have appeared between our ideal expectations for higher education and the realities of student learning, curricular coherence, the quality of facilities, faculty morale and academic standards."

It decried the popularity of majoring "in narrow specialties." The percentage of bachelor's degree in arts and sciences — as opposed to professional, pre-professional and vocational programs — fell from 49 percent in 1971 to 36 percent in 1982, the report said.

"The bachelor's degree has lost its potential to foster the shared values and knowledge that bind us together as a society," it said.

The panel lauded the movement to open up the nation's nearly 3,300 colleges and universities to more women and minorities. Sixty percent of high school graduates now enroll in college, and enrollment has surged past 12 million from 8.6 million in 1970.

But it said that 1 in 8 "high ability" high school seniors never goes on to college, and half of all students leave college without a degree.

"Increased access to higher education will mean little to millions of new students if the degrees they seek are weakened as credentials," it said.

Colleges must devote more faculty time and resources to first-and second-year students, the report said.

Freshmen "are ill-served by too many of our institutions of higher education. They are too often closed out of course selections, treated in an impersonal way and take second place to majors in academic advising."

It cautioned against deploying ill-prepared graduate students to teach freshmen courses, saying colleges "should assign as many of their finest instructors as possible to classes attracting large numbers of first-year students."

The report criticizes colleges' reliance on part-time faculty members, who comprised 23 percent of all faculty in 1966, but 41 percent in 1980.

Professors' salaries have not kept pace with inflation, losing 20 percent of their purchasing power in the past decade, it said, and it cited the "ominous statistic" that the percentage of entering freshmen who intend to become professors plummeted from 1.8 percent in 1966 to 0.2 percent in 1982.

"Many of our current faculty members feel 'stuck': they have lost the traditional mobility and vision of career that motivated so many professors to strive for excellence..." it said.

The panel said students' average scores fell between 1964 and 1982 on 10 of 14 major subject area tests of the Graduate Record Examinations.

Computers, grids tempting targets for terrorists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bank computers, electric power grids and telephone systems should be safeguarded against terrorist sabotage intended to disrupt or cripple society, a panel of military and foreign affairs experts says.

The computerization of records makes banks and other financial institutions attractive targets for sabotage, according to a report published by Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies entitled "America's Hidden Vulnerabilities."

"Imagine what would happen to the personal finances of everyone in this room if a terrorist destroyed records of bank accounts, investments, Social Security and mortgages all at once," R. James Woolsey, a former Navy undersecretary, said Tuesday at a briefing on the report.

"We've changed the nature of what 'property' signifies in this country," Woolsey said, noting that increasing numbers of records are kept only in computers, not on paper.

Computers are vulnerable to sabotage or even playful mischief such as the insertion of a random error into the system, he said.

"The 1983 movie 'War Games' was an amusing but disturbing glimpse into the world of the computer hacker and the computer and telecommunications network that has become increasingly critical to our way of life," the report says.

The film shows young computer buffs who break into a Pentagon command system and almost start a nuclear war.

"Fortunately, the military has taken precautions to see that this particular scenario could not occur. But most teleprocessing systems are not nearly as well protected," the report said.

In the financial world, four vulnerable fund transfer networks exchange amounts of money equal to the federal budget — $845 billion — every two to four hours, the report says.

Woolsey suggested that central computers be better protected, that the system be operated to make tallies every few hours, so that errors can be checked, and that basic information be kept in some place other than the main computers.

After society devises security measures to thwart truck bombings, terrorists will turn to sabotaging computers, power grids and telecommunication systems to upset stability, predicted Robert H. Kupperman, co-chairman of the panel that drafted the report.

This has already occurred to some extent in Spain, Italy, West Germany and Peru, he said.

Kupperman recalled the foiled attempt by Puerto Rican terrorists to black out Madison Square Garden in New York during the Democratic Party convention of 1980.

He emphasized the danger of accident as well as terrorism to interrelated networks of electric power, telecommunications and transport.

FBI agents, police round up radicals linked to robbery

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 300 FBI agents and police carried out pre-dawn raids today and rounded up nine radicals associated with defendants convicted in the bungled Brink's armored car robbery that left three people dead, the FBI said.

The nine arrested were said by authorities to be part of the New Afrikan Freedom Fighters, the FBI said. The report said the massive show of force was used to discourage resistance by those arrested.

FBI spokesman Joe Valiquette said this morning outside the federal building in lower Manhattan that the suspects were "along the same lines" as those involved in the Brink's heist.

The timing of the raid, which involved officers from a variety of city and federal offices, was prompted to prevent a recurrence of any terrorist activity, Valiquette said.

"We knew they were going to do something soon," the spokesman said. "We had to act to interdict that."

Authorities said some weapons were recovered, but Valiquette refused to comment on a report that dynamite was found during the raid.

NBC News reported the suspects had been overheard on FBI wiretaps planning a robbery of an armored truck cash shipment and had "scouted sites" in the New York area.

Loeffler goes to MC for himself, Reagan team

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

President Reagan is moving toward not only the path of a nuclear arms freeze but the road that would see eventual elimination of all nuclear weapons, a congressman told a group of students and faculty at Midland College Wednesday afternoon.

U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, represents Midland in his 21st District and is campaigning not only for his re-election but in support of the Reagan/Bush ticket. He stood before the audience in the Fine Arts Auditorium and responded to their questions on defense, an unbalanced budget, abortion, religion and politics and health care costs.

The fact that Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko this week acknowledged the need for an arms control agreement signals what Reagan was wanting when he took office four years ago, according to Loeffler.

Because of the weakened defense position the U.S. dropped to in the late 1970s, "we had to balloon up defense spending above that amount of domestic spending to place us in a strong defense posture. In the latter part of the decade, defense spending will go down."

BUT THIS SPENDING has placed the country and the President in a negotiating position, Loeffler said. "It's not just happenstance that the Soviets are talking of laying something on the table in arms. Reagan will be able to sit down and acheive not just a nuclear freeze, but I want to see a nuclear reduction."

Congressman Tom Loeffler answers questions from students and faculty in a session at Midland College Wednesday afternoon.

And the President reportedly has said that "even a reduction is not good enough. We need to eliminate all nuclear weapons by all countries in the world."

Loeffler supports the "Star Wars" theory of defense in which a system in space detects nuclear warheads heading toward the United States and destroys them. Under the present defense system, "if a missile is fired from the Soviet Union and is aimed at the United States, it will hit us. We don't have one system to stop that missile from coming in once it's fired."

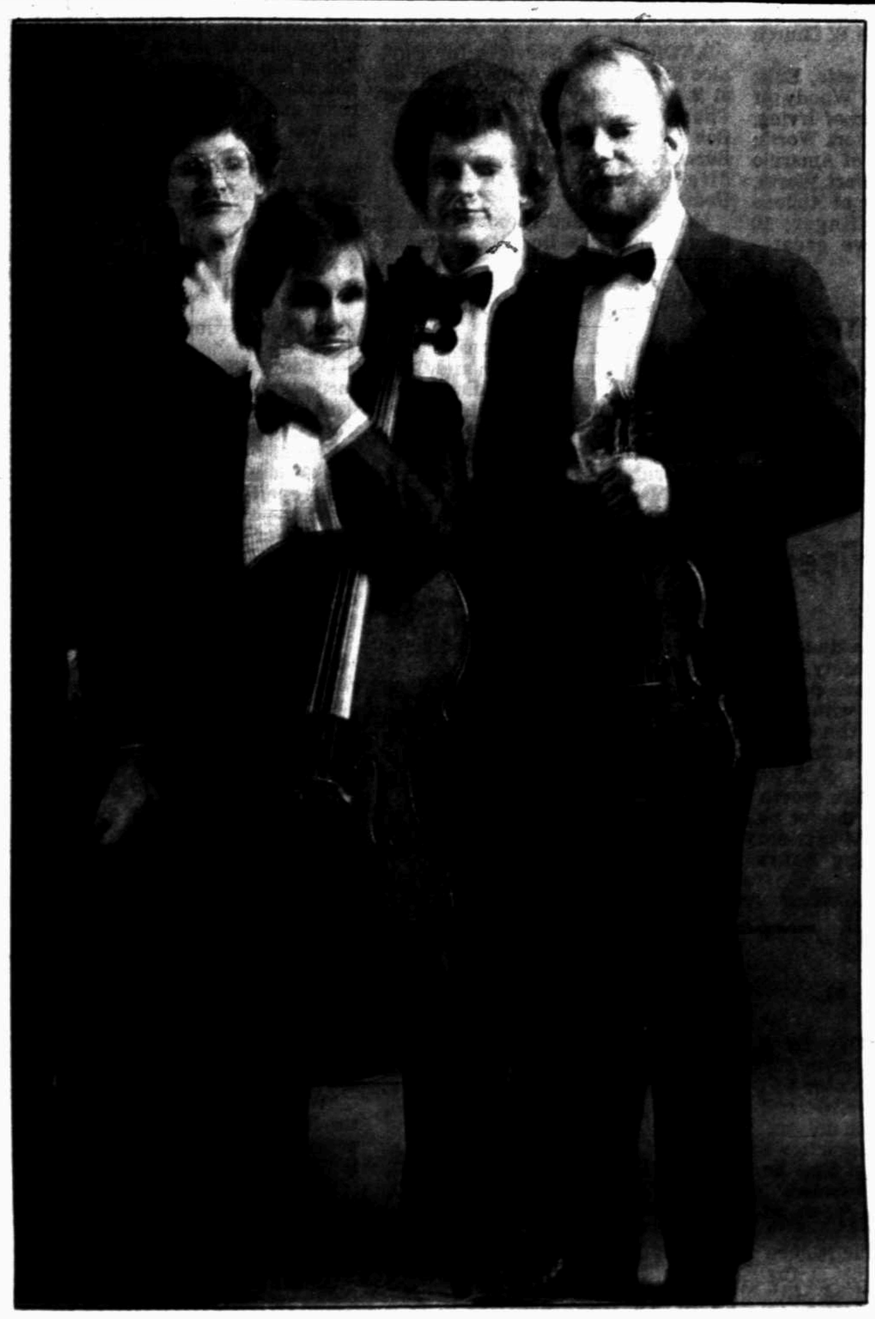

The United States has the technology to put in the Star Wars system, according to Loeffler. "We have tremendously successful, highly capable satellite technology. They have the ability to blow up our satellites in space. We don't have that ability."

THIS YEAR'S election results ranging from the presidency down to congressmen will determine if taxes will be increased in the future, the congressman said. The Tax Reduction Act of 1981 is in effect and "if you pull the plug you'll slow down the recovery. It is Congress that will either pass or reject a balanced budget."

Loeffler predicted the country will have a balanced budget by the end of the decade, but he warned it also depends on the makeup of Congress.

The tax reductions from 1981 were achieved through a bipartisan coalition of Congress — Republicans and conservative Democrats joining forces, he noted. But that coalition was lost in the 1982 election.

Gramm responds to Doggett's ads

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Pointing out that Democratic senatorial candidate Lloyd Doggett has been cited for violating an advertising code of ethics, Republican hopeful Phil Gramm has responded to one of the opponent's ads because "it just went too far."

Speaking to a group of about 100 monetary supporters during a reception Wednesday at the Midland Hilton, Gramm tossed back a few of Doggett's stones that have been a focal point of the Democrat's campaign. The two are seeking the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by six-term Republican John Tower.

It was the American Association of Advertising Agencies that warned Doggett of violating the code of ethics with an ad from the primary race against Kent Hance in which the opponent was referred to as a liar.

Gramm feels it's a similar situation with a Doggett ad in which the Republican is quoted as being against a bill for the handicapped. "The source in that is an unnamed government bureaucrat," Gramm said.

Doggett's most recent charge is that the Republican will support a nuclear waste dump site in West Texas. "He's making it up," said Gramm, pulling out an Oct. 10, 1984, letter from Energy Secretary Donald Hodel. In that letter to U.S. Rep. Richard Ottinger, Hodel wrote, "I would be in direct violation of the letter and spirit of the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982 if, during this process, we failed to take into account the strong opposition of Congressman Phil Gramm to locating a nuclear waste repository in Texas." That act, he explains, requires the Department of Energy to take into account the views of public citizens and their elected representative during the lengthy process leading to selection of a nuclear waste repository site.

Steps for new jail move forward

By ED TODD

Midland County Commissioners' quest for a new jail took another step forward Wednesday when bids were opened for detention equipment.

However, no action was taken.

Commissioners are waiting for bids on the general construction before they make any decisions on awarding contracts.

SESCO (South Eastern Specialty Co.) of Montgomery, Ala., and Southern Steel Co. of San Antonio tendered bids.

SESCO bid $2.4 million and Southern Steel bid $2.7 million to install detention equipment — bars and cells — for the proposed jail's basic configuration to lodge 165 prisoners in an octagonal shell.

Concert to mark cellist's debut

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

The Thouvenel String Quartet's opening concert Saturday marks cellist Keith "Robbie" Robinson's debut with the group.

Two seasons ago the same was true for violinist Eddie Stein. Fans were delighted with that opening performance.

This 8 p.m. concert at the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium will feature guest artist pianist Greg Allen, a faculty member at the University of Texas at Austin since 1973.

"When Eddie joined us people did definitely comment on the different kind of sound we had, a more homogenous sound," says violist Sally Chisholm during an interview with the quartet members. "And also the energy of the quartet, they thought it changed. I think they'll find it's also a pretty big difference this year."

Formed in 1975 when Eugene Purdue, Ms. Chisholm, Jeffrey Levenson and Teresa Fream were students at Indiana University, the Thouvenel String Quartet has been based in Midland since 1977. The loss of Ms. Fream, violin, two years ago and Levenson, cello, this spring has meant major personnel changes.

The quartet has played a private concert since Robinson joined the group.

"It went really well, considering it was our first performance and we really hadn't spent that much time together," Stein says. At that point, the quartet had rehearsed less than a month.

Agreeing with Ms. Chisholm that "it's a big change in what we sound like," Stein says, "In rehearsals you stop and go and fix, stop and go and fix. In performances you can't do that, and you get a different perspective of the group when you do that. I think it's definitely going to work."

Aside from his musical expertise, Levenson had another quality he brought to the foursome. His face was enormously expressive.

"He had some great faces actually," says Stein. Then, pointing to Robinson, he adds, "You ought to see this guy."

Robinson, a recent graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music, is the son of two musicians, both players with the Houston Symphony, and one of five children, all of whom are musicians. Sharon Robinson is a concert cellist in New York City. Hal Robinson is principal bass with the National Symphony, Washington, D.C., Erica Robinson plays violin for the Houston Opera Ballet and his twin sister, Kim Robinson, a student at the University of Houston, plays violin.

Robinson's musical studies began when he was five. After playing the violin for two years, he switched to the cello.

The United Way announced today that $1.56 million has been pledged so far for the fall fundraising campaign. That represents 80 percent of the total goal of $1.95 million, with one week still to go.

The announcement was made by Campaign Chairman Joseph I. O'Neill III at the fourth and final report rally at the Yucca Theatre.

Division totals include: Special Gifts, $390,145 (84 percent of goal); Independent Oil I, $21,951 (54 percent); Independent Oil II, $22,455 (54 percent); Residential, $13,076 (65 percent); Major Firms, $373,495 (100.2 percent); Pacesetters, $25,184 (38.8 percent); Small Business, $7,190 (59 percent); Major Oil, $333,539 (84.7 percent); Intermediate Oil, $89,166 (80.7 percent); Trailblazers, $68,071 (62 percent); Education, $69,840 (94 percent); Government and Services, $51,846 (95.8 percent); Professional, $72,298 (68 percent); and Wildcat, $22,805 (68 percent).

The report rally was attended by about 225 solicitors, campaign volunteers, and company coordinators and their guests. It was emceed by Ed Clements and JoAnn Bagwell of KCRS radio, and featured appearances by Susie Hitchcock and the Summer Mummers Olio dancers.

The campaign finale is scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 25 at Green Tree Country Club, at which time United Way officials hope to be able to announce that 100 percent of the goal has been reached.

Museum 'declines' committee's request

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

The Lancaster House Committee's written request to the Museum of the Southwest's board to reconsider its stand on the Lancaster House has been "declined."

A letter rejecting a proposal for saving the historical home located on the Museum property was mailed Tuesday. That letter was made public Wednesday.

The Lancaster House has been a controversial topic since June when the Museum board announced it was having the home demolished. Citizens opposing the move formed a group known as the Lancaster House Committee to save the house, once the home of longtime civic and cultural leader Naomi Lancaster.

When contacted about the letter, committee spokesman Harris Kerr said, "Everything they say in there is wrong or a misrepresentation of what we've done."

The board's letter came in response to a written request from Midland County Judge William B. Ahders to consider the committee's latest plea for the house to be used as the Midland County Historical Museum, which would be supported by a non-profit foundation.

In the letter, Ahders states, "The Midland County Commissioners would ask that if you consider this proposal worthwhile, you and the directors of the Naomi Lancaster Educational Foundation meet with us to consider and work out the details of this proposal."

The board's reasons for declining included:

— "A long-term lease is not in the interest of the Museum of the Southwest, in that our plans call for a construction on the site within the next few years;

Looking backward can be futile, frustrating

Looking backward can be hazardous. It's a malady called nostalgia.

It can be as crippling or as fatal as peering behind when you're coming in on a final approach in a crosswind on a dirt air strip, when you're looking behind while zipping down a mountain trail on a bicycle or when you're looking up and wondering why you jumped out of a perfectly good airplane. In the latter case, if you don't forget where you're going, you might be concerned about opening your parachute. And it probably will open and flare if you don't forget to pull the rip cord and go about your business in an orderly fashion.

Looking backward with discernment is an asset for writers, historians and storytellers with a purpose.

It's quite futile if you're looking into the past to live.

But looking backward while you're groping for something tangible from the intangible past can be quite frustrating.

I've tried it. There's nothing practical about it unless you're researching for a novel.

I went to a high school class reunion a couple of years ago and to another one this year. It was a revelation. We were no longer teenagers, though we certainly acted the part. Some had children much older than we were when we finished high school and a few were grandparents. There was a bunch of frolicking and reminiscing about the senior trip to St. Louis, the teen-age pranks, the dates, loves and teachers and the "missing" classmates. Some were already dead and that explained why they didn't show up. We wondered about the sanity of the others. Who would miss being with the old gang?

About all you can do is look back, laugh and cry.

After all, you have only today to contend with.

More recently, I tried to return to my childhood and boyhood in East Texas. It doesn't work. I re-visited places such as Pacio and Cooper in Delta County and Roxton and Paris in Lamar County. I reached out for the old home place, but it wasn't there. It's only memories. And even if it were there, it would only be a ghost where the familiar was as distant as the horizon. It's not to be possessed and cannot be.

To dwell on the past is fatal. It kills the now — the present moment. And that, I've been told, is all that there is. I wish there were more, but, I wonder, how could anyone be in more than one place at a time? To grapple for more is fantasy. And certainly mankind is both cursed and blessed with the ability to conjure up the past and distort it and to project into the future and worry needlessly.

The knack for the good life is to take delight in this very day.

Ed Todd is a staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

Arresting officers witness car theft

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Acting on a tip to the Department of Public Safety, DPS investigators and local police arrested four men after witnessing them take a car from the lot of Jack Aldridge Oldsmobile/Cadillac, according to reports.

A 1984 Cadillac Seville worth $28,000 was driven from the lot by four men, including a 34-year-old Midlander, after closing hours Wednesday, police said. The officers observed the suspects leaving and the arrests were made, according to reports.

It has not been determined whether this theft was part of an organized car theft ring, said Lt. Rusty Baker, who recalled a new Datsun had been reported stolen earlier in the week.

Filing of formal charges is expected to take place today, said Baker.

CELLIST

"When we were growing up, it was something that we had to do," Robinson says. "It wasn't until I went away to school at age 16 that I really decided to make it my life, and I started to actually practice a fair amount." Prior to that time he had dreams of a career in baseball.

The school he went to when he was 16 was the North Carolina School of the Arts where he studied with Robert Marsh. While at the Curtis Institute, he studied with David Soyer, cellist for the Guarneri Quartet and performed solos with the Curtis Orchestra in Philadelphia and Paris, the latter on national television.

Finding a solid replacement is not an easy task. It requires phone calls to other quartets and schools as well as listening to players. After the private concert, many of those there asked quartet members how they found Robinson.

"We had received his name as recommended by another quartet that was also looking for a cellist at the same time," Ms. Chisholm says. "We didn't think too much about it because they said he might be hard to locate."

Time was a dominent factor and the Thouvenel continued auditions. Out of the 50 to 60 people contacted by the quartet, seven cellists came to Midland as potential Thouvenel members.

"But my father played a tape for us that he had gotton off the radio of a quartet that was in Europe, and when they announced who the cellist was it was Robbie. And we'd been sitting there saying, 'How come we don't have a cellist that sounds like that?'"

The quartet reached Robinson and asked him to come interview. "He plays even better than the tape," Ms. Chisholm says.

The Thouvenel is playing a series in California and a five concert Midland series this season.

Other Midland performance times are 8 p.m. Nov. 17, Jan. 22 and April 9, all at the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium. The Thouvenel will perform during Midland's Celebration of the Arts Festival at 8 p.m. May 12 at Theatre Midland.

Subscription ticket prices this season are $25 for adults and $15 for students. Single admission tickets are sold at the door. Thouvenel fans have formed a Friends of the Quartet organization to help with promoting the quartet. For more information call the Midland-Odessa Symphony office, 563-0921.

In addition, the Thouvenel has been invited to perform in China this spring. The music performed for the April concert will have already been played by the group during its March tour of China.

The private group from Houston, headed by former Midlander Mary Bray Neelly, that arranged the Peking Opera tour of Texas last fall, made the Thouvenel trip possible.

JAIL

High bids ranged up to $3.15 million by SESCO and $3.4 million by Southern Steel for detention equipment for the basic configuration plus additional detention equipment in a second octagonal shell. Total capacity then would be for 225 prisoners. However, additional detention equipment could be built into the second shell to bring inmate capacity to 300.

"It's complex," Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig said of the multi-tier bidding.

"They (SESCO) are the apparent low bidder for the detention equipment," said architect Walter Pate.

Bids from general contractors on construction of the jail are to be opened Oct. 31.

Commissioners have yet to announce how they propose to finance the construction other than securing loans. They do not propose a general obligation bond issue, such as the April 1983 $12 million proposal to renovate the courthouse and build an adjoining jail tower. That issue was rejected by the voters by a 4-to-1 ratio.

The proposed jail, to cost from $5.5 million to $7.8 million, is to be built on a seven-acre tract east of the Midland County Exhibit Building off East U.S Highway 80.

Jail construction is to begin in late November and, according to Pate, is to be completed in 1986.

Gibson's hearing postponed

From Staff Reports

A U.S. Bankruptcy Court hearing on Gibson Distributing Co.'s petition for payment of a disputed fee on sub-letting former Gibson stores in El Paso has been postponed by U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Joseph C. Elliott.

Gibson, which is undergoing reorganization under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Act, had agreed to pay a $47,500 fee to arrange sub-letting its stores in El Paso after Gibson rejected three leases there.

But the party who arranged the leasing is asking for a $100,000 fee, according to courtroom testimony in Midland on Wednesday.

Moments after Bill Howard, Gibson president and chief executive officer, had begun to testify, Judge Elliott summoned attorneys into his chambers, returned to the courtroom and announced that the hearing was "premature."

"All parties would be best served by postpostment of rulings on this motion," Elliott said.

Afterward, Howard noted that "negotiations (on the fee) are still in progress."

The 11-store Gibson franchise filed for bankruptcy in August 1983 under management not connected to Howard. About a month later, Howard, one of three orginal Gibson franchise owners, assumed the Gibson presidency.

The franchise was established in 1964, and in 1980 Howard, Herschel O'Kelly and Jim Hooker sold the stores to Main Street Inc, a subsidiary of the Rust Group, a real-estate development enterprise in Austin.

Six Gibson stores in El Paso, Big Spring, San Angelo and Plainview were closed and liquidated. But the franchise store in Midland remained opened and underwent improvements.

Under supervision of the court, Gibson has been proposing how it will pay substantial portions of the $27 million indebtedness it owned to 1,500 creditors.

Howard has termed the stores in Midland and Odessa as "viable" and has said that the employees are proud of the company's new vitality under new management.

LANCASTER

— "Counsel for the museum has set forth certain problems which may exist under the antiquities Code of Texas, which may result in the Museum of the Southwest being unable to use this private land once the property is leased to the county;

— "That a previous exploration of details of these proposals have found the Lancaster House Committee unable or unwilling to perform or comply with the previous requests of the Board of Trustees."

The letter further contends that the committee's reports in July, August and September did not "address the issues they had set out to address." As of Sept. 12, the committee indicated to the board, the letter reads, that it had raised cash, pledges and promises of pledges sufficient for $47,250.

The letter also states, "The only interested party in the Lancaster House had not determined the extent of damage which the house had suffered, had not provided the board with any use compatible with objectives of the Museum of the Southwest, had failed to secure funding necessary to refurbish, remodel or to maintain the house."

Kerr denied the charges.

"We did give them reports. We did give them uses.

"We've told them that the Lancaster House is not damaged. There's nothing wrong with the Lancaster House.

"We've told them that we have the money and the funds to make it ready for the County Historical Museum including pledges of labor, material and services by local builders and contractors. We estimate that we've received more than $150,000 in value in pledges."

The first week of October the museum's board of trustees made public its decision to allow all interested parties until 5 p.m. Nov. 1 to submit written proposals for moving the Lancaster House. If no satisfactory proposals were received, the museum would begin demolition on the house.

Since that time, the Lancaster committee has reworked its proposal for the house to be leased to Midland County and used for the Midland County Historical Museum.

In its new proposal, the county would sublease the house to the Naomi Lancaster Educational Foundation, a Texas not-for-profit corporation to be created by the committee. The new proposal was submitted to the County Commissioners and the museum board.

In its petition to the board, the committee states, "The Foundation would be responsible for all the costs of renovation, upkeep and maintenance of the Lancaster House and Midland County and its taxpayers would bear no cost...If the Foundation was unable to restore or maintain the Lancaster House to the county's standards, the county could step in and either take over that operation itself, or return the Lancaster House to the Museum of the Southwest, to do with as it wishes."

Referring to Tuesday's letter, Kerr said, "We've given them everything necessary for them to make a decision, and it's obvious that they've never varied from their original intention to destroy it."

GRAMM

Doggett has another advertisement on television in which Gramm reportedly said he doesn't feel sorry for 80-year-old people. That was taken out of context, Gramm said in defense. He added that he had been talking about his grandmother who lived to be 98 and he envied her. "She had said she didn't want to be pitied and wanted to be treated fairly like everyone else."

Gramm added, "My opponent did a poll and found out he couldn't win on his record. So he changed his image and calls himself the Biblical David, which is interesting since he voted against voluntary prayer in school. Now, he's trying to tear me down personally."

In tossing his first rock, Doggett said Gramm was against education. A former Texas A&M economics professor before being elected to Congress by a majority of 122 votes, Gramm said, "That must come as a surprise to my 10,000 students. I've spent about as much time in the halls of Congress as I did in the classroom. Teaching Aggies economics is a piece of cake compared to teaching Congress."

The second rock struck Gramm on Social Security, contending that he was opposed to it. Gramm recalled that Doggett hit his Democratic opponents with the same stone in the primary.

"It's the same song, third verse," he said. "First, Bob Krueger was said to have slashed Social Security. Then Kent Hance was said to want to eliminate Social Security. Now, I'm against Social Security. I'm one of the guys that put together a bipartisan coalition to save Social Security (in 1982)," he said.

Turning to his own family, Gramm said his mother worked 39 years as a practical nurse to get her $339 a month of Social Security. "I'm not going to take that away from her."

With 19 days left before the Nov. 6 general election, Gramm related that Doggett reported he "has substantial amounts of money left for the final three weeks of the campaign. He won't talk about his record. He's going to attack me."

Gramm said he expects the advertising to "get a lot worse" from Doggett, but the Republican denied he had some unused tricks up his sleeve. "I'll just talk about my record and the issues," he said.

LOEFFLER

He also blamed Congress for the high interest rate. Normally, the prime interest rate should be four points higher than the inflation rate. If this principle were being followed, then with an inflation rate of 4 percent the interest rate should be no higher than 8. Today, it stands slightly above 12 percent.

But the Federal Reserve won't drop the interest rate until Congress cuts down the deficit, according to Loeffler.

The only way taxes would be increased next year, he said, is if Congress does it. He criticized Democratic presidential hopeful Walter Mondale's tax plan, calling it a "sham. It's as hollow as an old oak tree that's fallen down."

AND WHILE inflation dropped from the double digits in the last three years, health care costs have continued to rise "three to four times that."

Without wanting to get into socialized medicine, Loeffler said the system needs to be streamlined and management made more efficient in hospitals.

Inflation, too, hurts the agriculture industry, he said. "High interest kills us in agriculture." And so do low prices. Loeffler pointed out that the industry is inflexible — when the crop is ready to harvest or the stock ready to sell, the farmer and rancher is forced to accept the market prices at that time.

In response to charges from "Farmers for Mondale" that the Reagan administration is responsible for today's lower commodity prices, Loeffler argued the country is still trying to recover from President Carter's grain embargo.

Loeffler would rather not see the issue of abortion rambling the halls of Congress. "The best way to resolve it is not to get it in the government arena. I would rather see it resolved on the local or state level," he said.

BUT WHEN PRESSED for his opinion, Loeffler said, "I oppose federal funding for abortion except in cases of rape, incest or when the mother's life is in danger."

He also would prefer if politicians stayed out of the churches and retained the practice of separation of church and state. Although he supports voluntary school prayer, "I don't believe a politician should campaign in a church or synagogue. You go to a religious institution to establish your own guidelines for moral or religious beliefs."

In response to other questions, Loeffler said he opposed the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration bill, preferred to keep the drinking age at a lower rung although polls showed people wanted it raised to 21, and criticized Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro for not fully disclosing her financial statement until pressured.

Burglar stops in for snack

From Staff Reports

An unidentified burglar apparently entered the northside apartment of an 18-year-old woman Wednesday and, rather than take anything with him, decided to have a snack.

According to police reports, Kelly Patton of 5001 Saddle Club returned home at 9:45 p.m. to find evidence that someone had been in her apartment. According to police reports, the person apparently cooked a hamburger and placed the plate from which he or she had eaten in the sink before leaving.

Nothing else appeared to be disturbed and no items were reported missing. Point of entry has not been determined.

A gold nugget ring valued at $2,700 was reported missing by Dean Smith of 1612 Harvard. According to police reports, the ring was taken from a bathroom counter top Oct. 8, apparently while Realtors were showing the house.

About $1,300 worth of items were taken from the Roscoe Riley Frazier residence, 1602 Delmar. The burglary apparently took place between 9:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Wednesday. Missing were a video cassette recorder and a camera.

Midland police were busy Wednesday investigating nine automobile burglaries, resulting in about $2,800 worth of stolen items and damage.

— Greg Hilgemeier, 804 Elk, reported a $500 stereo, $385 radar detector and $35 pair of sunglasses were taken from his Audi while it was parked in his driveway Wednesday.

— Willie Wilson, 1506 Hemlock, said a $325 revolver, two pair of shoes valued at $150 and a $70 briefcase were taken from his unlocked pickup while he was attending a meeting in the 1200 block of Jax Wednesday night.

Police Round-up

— Nguyn Minh, 3417 N. Midland Drive, said a coathanger was used to gain entry into his car and a $450 stereo was taken. The burglars apparently tried to remove car speakers but could not.

— Tony Andrews, 1936 English Drive, said a $320 equalizer was taken from his Camaro, parked at his residence, Wednesday night.

— Van Pipkin, 4315 Neely, said his locked car was entered and speakers valued at $120 were taken from his back dash.

— Harry Rawlings, 3700 Avondale, said his car was parked at 4511 N. Midkiff when it was burglarized Wednesday night. Taken were two speakers and an equalizer, valued at a total of $138.

— Leroy Franklin III, reported a C.B. antenna, stereo power booster and seat covers valued at $150 were taken from his Trans Am, parked at his house.

— Robbin Graham said her car was at a restaurant on Big Spring when the battery was stolen and the cables cut. Damage and loss was placed at $66.

— Sergio Cardenas, 4605 Cherokee, said his pickup was parked in the east lot at Lee High School when burglars apparently pried open the trunk and pulled out the rear seat to gain access. Taken were a stereo and speakers valued at $160.

Inmates win

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court has ruled that a convicted Texas murderer should have the chance to prove his claim that he was forced to confess to the crime.

In another Texas case, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Wednesday waived court fees and gave another inmate permission to proceed as a pauper in appealing a forgery conviction.

In the case of convicted murderer Johnny Meadows, the 5th Circuit said the U.S. District Court for North Texas, rather than just dismissing Meadows' claim at an evidentiary hearing, should have done a more extensive investigation of his claim.

Judge dismisses indictment against six men

From Staff Reports

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — District Judge Frank Allen Jr. Tuesday dismissed an indictment accusing six men including former Midland chiropractor Joe Boyd of defrauding the defunct State Savings and Loan Association of Clovis, N.M.

Allen dismissed the indictment because two prosecutors were in the grand jury room during deliberations and voting — a violation of state law and jury instruction.

Clovis District Attorney William Bonem, a prosecuter in the case, said today he would have to read the written court order before deciding on new tactics. "Without the court order, it's difficult to say what his (Allen's) basis for saying we were present was."

Bonem speculated, however, that Allen was referring to a poll of grand jurors taken — by himself and Assistant Attorney General Fred Smith — when he said prosecutors were present in the grand jury room.

Bonem denied being "present during their (the grand jury's) discussion of whether or not to return the indictment."

An alternative for the prosecution would be to appeal Allen's ruling to the State Court of Appeals, Bonem said.

They could also ask for a new "probable cause" hearing, with charges repeated against the alleged offenders.

The final alternative "would be to let the case die," but considering the time spent on the investigation into the alleged embezzlement scheme, "That's not a viable alternative," Bonem said.

A Curry County, N.M. grand jury returned an indictment Nov. 2, 1983 charging the six men and four corporations with fraud in excess of $20,000 or, in the alternative, embezzlement of more than $2,500, and with securities fraud and criminal conspiracy.

The following day, the federal Home Loan Bank Board declared State Savings and Loan to be insolvent. It closed the institution and named the Federal Saving and Loan Insurance Corp. as receiver.

Sun Country Savings Bank bought the State Savings and Loan.

Indicted by the grand jury were Randolph Shipley of Laguna Beach, Calif.; Glen Houston, a Hobbs, N.M. attorney; Lewis Nance of Brownfield; Jack Brown of Las Vegas, Nev.; W.W. "Doc" Taylor of Dallas; and Boyd.

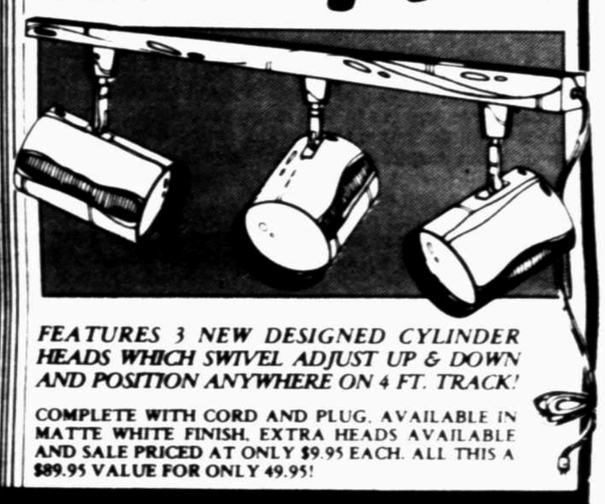

Corporations indicted were Credit Plan Corp. of Corpus Christi; Lessor's Management and Data Services of California; Resort Development International of Nevada and Southwest Mortgage Services Corp. of Dallas.

Boyd, formerly with Boyd Chiropractic Center, 2503 W. Ohio Ave., Midland, was indicted on charges stemming from a three-month investigation by police, the district attorney's office and the Governor's Organized Crime Prevention Commission, Bonem reported.

Records indicate that in 1975, Boyd was given a five-year sentence after being convicted in federal court of conspiring to illegally market $60 million in stock. Boyd could not be reached for comment today.

Bob Wallace, an agent with the GOCPC, reportedly said the dismissed indictment involved a conspiracy to move more that $5 million out of the Clovis savings and loan. He could not be reached for comment.

Allen transferred the case from Clovis to Bernalillo County after defense attorney contended their clients could not get a fair trial in Clovis.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox and consumer advocate Carol Barger at a news conference Wednesday where they told of filing a complaint with the Public Utility Commision seeking to require Southwestern Bell to make available all information regarding their expenditures for financing and capitalization of its unregulated subsidiaries.

Bell says complaint by Mattox, consumers' groups off base

AUSTIN (AP) — A complaint filed by Attorney General Jim Mattox and consumers' groups is off base, a Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. official says.

Mattox and the consumers' groups Wednesday asked for an investigation of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. to determine whether money paid by telephone customers is being funneled to Bell's other business interests.

"We suspect that Southwestern Bell is using revenues from its regulated services to finance its unregulated businesses, such as telephones, mobile phones and the Yellow Pages publications," Mattox said.

"What we're seeking in this complaint is the information that would show us if our suspicion is correct," he said.

Southwestern Bell officials denied the allegations, saying that no mixing of funds is taking place.

"We have nothing to hide," said Richard Harris, a Bell vice president.

He said the companies are set up as separate subsidiaries and the books and records are "clear."

"There can be no intermixing because they are stand-alone corporations," Harris said.

Mattox and the consumers' groups — the Consumers Union, Public Citizen, the Gray Panthers and the Texas Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now — filed the complaint with the Public Utility Commission.

"Ratepayers are, have been and will continue funding of the new Southwestern Bell subsidiaries from which they receive no profits. Commission action is needed to stop this victimization of Texas consumers," said Carol Barger, regional director of the Consumers Union.

While Bell has been saying it needs more money to maintain high-quality basic phone service, Ms. Barger said, "the record shows that the telephone company has embarked on building a multi-billion-dollar system that will have no appreciable effect on the quality or reliability of basic telephone communications.

"But Bell, its holding company and all of their subsidiaries will then be in a very favorable market position to sell all of their services, gadgets and whistles which have nothing to do with basic phone service," she said.

Ms. Barger said that costs to consumers could be reduced 20 percent to 40 percent if the complaint proves accurate.

The complaint asks the PUC to investigate several issues, including:

— How much of the company's construction program being funded by Texas ratepayers will benefit unregulated businesses.

— How much of Bell's assets have been transferred to subsidiaries and the holding company without adequate compensation to Southwestern Bell.

— Whether phone customers are being asked to pay an unfair portion of advertising costs and charitable contributions made by the company.

— Whether revenue from Yellow Pages advertising is being diverted from the telephone company into another business interest.

Court rules for Bell

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has decided that Southwestern Bell's rule for stopping companies from seeking high alphabetic placement in Yellow Pages advertisements is legal.

A-ABC Appliance Service sued to challenge the Bell policy, which denies paid ads to companies that stack several "A's" at the beginning of their names in an attempt to be listed first.

After A-ABC Appliance was denied an ad in the Austin Yellow Pages and lost its suit in state district court, it appealed to the Austin Court of Appeals but also was turned down there. The Supreme Court on Wednesday affirmed lower court rulings.

After the April decision in the Austin appeals court, Bell lawyer Donna Snyder of San Antonio said the ad policy was needed to stop incidents such as when an Oklahoma firm tried to guarantee its place at the beginning of a category by putting 23 A's before its name.

Fire rages through aircraft company

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A four-alarm fire raged early today through one of the nation's largest aircraft parts supply company, which last month was barred from doing business with the government, authorities said.

The blaze at the Alamo Aircraft Supply Inc. drew more than 100 firefighters to the scene after a fire alarm was sounded at 12:18 a.m. today, company officials said.

It took firefighters about two hours to get the fire under control. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

The fire engulfed part of the company's six-building complex which contained one of the largest military parts supply inventories in the United States, company vice president Leon Wulfe Jr. told the San Antonio Light.

Wulfe said the complex also was the site of two previous multi-alarm fires in the 1970s in which arson was ruled as the cause. In 1970, a four-alarm fire that was deliberately set cost $500,000 in damages, he said

The cause of today's fire was under investigation, Wulfe said.

On Sept. 28, the Pentagon suspended the aircraft company from doing business with the government for three years.

A Defense Department spokesman told The Light that the company, which sold $21 million in parts to the military last year, was suspended for allegedly giving "things of value" to federal employees in exchange for "proprietary drawings."

An attorney representing Alamo Aircraft had told The Light on Oct. 4 that the company sold a total of $23 million in parts in 1983, $21 million worth of which were sold to the government.

Gary Painter

SHERIFF FOR MIDLAND COUNTY

It's common sense that law enforcement agencies must work together in preventing and arresting crime. My experience has shown me that cooperation is an essential element in our whole criminal justice system.

As your Sheriff I will bring back an attitude of cooperation at every level of the Midland County Sheriff's Office. Where fences need to be mended with other agencies-especially the Midland Police Department-I will take the initiative as any leader must do.

I will not allow personal conflict or predjudices to stand in the way of properly enforcing the law for all the people of Midland County.

I believe that you, as a taxpaying citizen, expect nothing less of your officials.

I would appreciate your support.

DON'T FORGET TO VOTE ABSENTEE

Democrats closing gap in Texas, Democratic chairman contends

The Associated Press

But less than three weeks remains before the Nov. 6 General Election, and it will take hard work to pull off a victory "We have to redouble our efforts. This is not a time for the faint hearted, just like it wasn't in 1980."

—Bob Slagle
State Democratic Party chairman

State Sen. Lloyd Doggett, preparing for a debate in Dallas tonight with U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, says his opponent for a U.S. Senate seat "will crumble like a Graham cracker."

Doggett, a Democrat from Austin, said he would spend today studying for his meeting with Gramm, a Republican from College Station.

Doggett said he did not expect any revelations from the debate in Dallas. "It probably will be more of the same," the state senator from Austin said.

State Democratic Party chairman Bob Slagle told a group of Bowie County party volunteers in Texarkana Wednesday that although Walter Mondale trails President Reagan in Texas, he is closing the gap.

But less than three weeks remains before the Nov. 6 General Election, and it will take hard work to pull off a victory, Slagle said.

"We have to redouble our efforts. This is not a time for the faint hearted, just like it wasn't in 1980," Slagle said.

Slagle compared this year's election to the Texas gubernatorial race four years ago in which the polls consistently showed Democrat Mark White behind Republican incumbent Bill Clements, but White won.

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, whose landslide victory over Republican Jim Collins led a powerful Democratic showing statewide in Texas two years ago, accompanied Doggett for most of a 13-hour swing through East and South Texas on Wednesday.

Bentsen stayed out of any mud slinging in a current flap between the candidates concerning alleged inaccuracies in television commercials.

"I speak for the candidate and leave it to the candidates to work on each other," Bentsen said.

Doggett said Bentsen's presence on the campaign trail would assure his victory in the Nov. 6 election, but Bentsen was uncertain how much good he was doing.

"That the public decides and I don't think there's anyway to measure that," Bentsen said.

At news conferences across the state, Doggett was careful to maintain a distance from his party's national ticket of Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro.

"It has been essential to run an independent campaign. I think that strategy is working," he said.

In his Texarkana comments, Slagle said Mondale helped his chances in Texas by besting Reagan in their nationally televised debate earlier this month in Louisville, Slagle said.

After the debate, Slagle said, a poll was conducted of what he called predominantly Republican "swing precincts" in Texas, and Mondale's support was 9 percent higher than the last previous poll. Slagle said that reduced the president's lead from 2-1 to about 3-2 in those areas, which he labeled as precincts White lost in 1980.

Gramm campaigned Wednesday at Amarillo, Muleshoe, Lubbock, Levelland and Brownfield — West Texas towns who depend upon agriculture. Gramm promised that if elected he will lead a fight for an improved farm bill.

Gramm said he would spearhead farm legislation that, coupled with an aggressive U.S. agricultural marketing plan, would put Texas farmers on an equal footing with Japanese and European producers.

"We need a reciprocal trade policy," Gramm said in a speech at a Rotary Club luncheon in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Magna Charta displayed to Plano students

PLANO, Texas (AP) — Students in four high school history classes got a "once in a lifetime" chance to see a copy of the Magna Charta that was written in 1297.

The copy, written in Latin on animal skin and adorned by a wax seal, was obtained recently by Dallas electronics magnate H. Ross Perot. It is one of 16 in the world and the only one owned by a private individual.

Tom Luce, a Dallas lawyer who arranged the sale, said the showing to one sophomore and three freshman history classes Wednesday will be the only public display before it is shipped in a few weeks to the National Archives in Washington.

Mervin Stauffer, an executive at Electronic Data Systems, a firm founded by Perot, offered to show the document to students at Plano's Shepton High School because his daughter attends there.

The original Magna Charta, which limited kings' excesses against barons, was written in 1215, but did not become a part of English law until 1297. Perot's copy is one of four existing copies that were written in 1297. Four copies of the 1215 version and eight copies of a 1922 version exist, Luce said. Fourteen copies are on display in British museums, and one is owned by the Australian government.

County sheriff agrees to temporary suspension

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An attorney for Hudspeth County Sheriff Mike Armstrong says his client has agreed to temporarily leave office while he stands trial on federal drug charges because it's in the best interests of all concerned.

Lawyer John Langford said he and the district attorney's office in El Paso, which had filed a lawsuit seeking Armstrong's removal from office, reached a compromise agreement Tuesday that would suspend the sheriff without pay until his trial.

A hearing on the lawsuit was to have been held Friday in Sierra Blanca, the county seat of Hudspeth County in far West Texas.

The settlement was filed with the district court clerk's office in Sierra Blanca about 3:45 p.m. Wednesday, according to clerk Pat Bramblett. She said retired state District Judge William H. Earney of Marfa, who was to preside over the removal hearing, had selected chief Deputy Sheriff Tom Burns as acting sheriff.

Burns was to be sworn in today.

Armstrong, 36, was indicted on charges of possession of marijuana and conspiracy to sell the drug after law enforcement agents arrested him Sept. 7 at the Hudspeth County courthouse. He also faces charges of taking money in exchange for not making arrests, of accepting money to not enforce drug laws and of warning others of police drug investigations.

Langford said that Armstrong agreed to temporarily leave office because the sheriff felt it would be in the best interests of all concerend, especially the people of Hudspeth County.

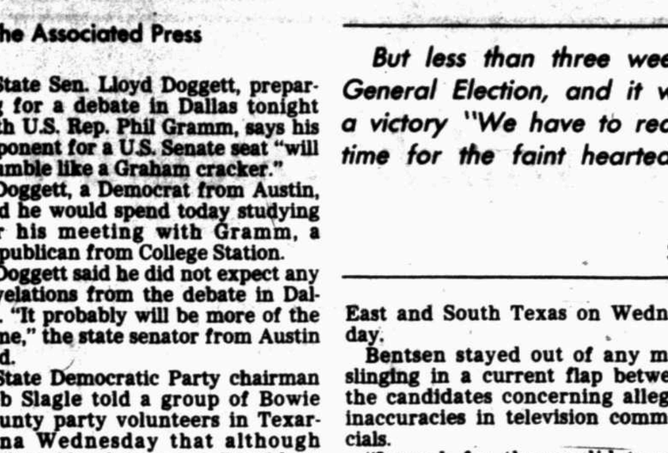

He said the agreement "in no way" is an admission of guilt and cannot be used as such at Armstrong's trial, which is to be held in Pecos before U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton. No trial date has been set.

"We have agreed to a temporary suspension, nothing more, Langford said. "If (Armstrong) is elected again and cleared of the charges, he would go back to office and get paid for the time he was out."

Armstrong is seeking re-election to the office he has held since Oct. 1, 1981.

He was unopposed before his arrest, but now three men have waged write-in campaigns against him.

District Attorney Steve Simmons could not be reached for comment Wednesday on the settlement. His secretary said he was out of the office.

The War on Drugs laws were some of the most beneficial legislation ever, for the protection of our children. Tom worked very hard with the sponsors of these bills to see that they passed. He's got my vote.

Testers troubled by 'which chips are which' decision

By LINDA ANDERSON

When I was growing up in a small southeastern New Mexico town, the girls used to get together once a month or so at one of our homes for the age-old ritual of what is called a slumber party. (My father used to say he didn't know why these gatherings were given that name because noone ever slumbered, but I guess everyone's father said the same thing.)

And for some reason, among all the snacks served at these slumber parties, the one common to all was Fritos corn chips. It didn't matter what else was served, we always had Fritos. Consequently, some of my fondest Memories of Youth involve staying awake all night with several friends and munching Fritos.

Now Planters has introduced its corn chip, packaged in a can, in competition with Fritos. Advertising for Planters corn chips shows happy smiling people singing about how much better Planters corn chips are and how they have switched corn-chip brands.

I had to check these claims. After all, some of my favorite memories are at stake!

We compared Fritos king-size corn chips and Planters king-size corn chips for taste, price and advertising accuracy. The testers — a small child, adults, and teens — were joined by our neighbor, who was kind enough to share her opinion also.

Fritos king-size chips cost $1.79 for a 12-ounce bag. For a 13.5-ounce can of Planters chips, the price was $1.95. Ounce-for-ounce, the cost two brands of chips was comparable. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Both brands were made from the same ingredients. According to label information, Fritos king-size corn chips contain corn, vegetable oil (one or more of the following oils: corn, peanut, soybean, sunflower or partially hydrogenated sunflower) and salt. Label information on the Planters king-size chips list these ingredients: corn, soybean and/or corn oils, salt.

Planters chips' label claims "Crushproof resealable canisters keep Planters Snacks as fresh and delicious as the day they were made ... Since 1906, great taste has been the Planters tradition ... All Planters Snacks are delicious right to the last crunch."

Fritos' advertising — "Crunch a bunch of Fritos ... Fritos corn chips go with lunch..." — have always been favorite commercials at our house. A Fritos TV commercial shows children, disappointed with another dull lunch, suddenly brightening up when their mother gives them a bunch of Fritos to "munch with lunch." And of course the kids eat every last bite and depart from the table with smiles on their faces. Cute commercial — but when I try the same scenario at my house, Fritos are the only part of the lunch that is eaten.

The testers had a difficult time deciding which brand of corn chips was better. In fact, several testers had trouble with deciding which was which. Some said the Fritos were too salty; some said the Planters were too salty. Some said the Planters had a finer texture, as if they had been made from corn which had been ground one more time than the Fritos' corn. But the testers agreed both brands were good corn chips and differed very little in taste.

I guess my memories are safe.

BETTER BUSINESS

Bureau often mistaken for government agency

By LINDA TRUITT

Many people who call the Better Business Bureau are confused about who supports the Bureau and what its services are. It is often assumed the BBB is a government agency, and the staff has the power to threaten a business into "giving in" to the complainant.

The bureaus — 152 in the world — are supported by businesses in the community who recognize the need for promoting a high standard of business conduct. The same businesses know that unscrupulous businesses hurt them as well as consumers, yet they prefer self-regulation to government regulation.

Although many believe the ongoing problem of business ethics has only recently been identified, Cicero wrote more than 2000 years ago "All things should be laid bare so that the buyer may not be in any way ignorant of anything the seller knows."

With the appearance of the first formal advertisement in a Boston newspaper in 1704, many unscrupulous operators realized advertising could be used as a means to cheat unsuspecting consumers out of their money.

In the late 1800s and early 1900s the federal government became concerned with fraudulant advertising being distributed through the mail and other media. In 1906, with the passage of the Federal Food and Drug Act, the Coca-Cola Company found itself charged with false advertising of its product. Although the charges were shown to be unfounded, Samuel C. Dobbs, sales manager and later president of the company, was shocked to hear his company's attorney make his in response to the charges: "Why all advertising is exaggerated. Nobody really believes it."

Through his efforts people involved in the advertising industry began to encourage truth in advertising. In response to this outcry "Vigilance Committees," sponsored by advertising clubs, were formed in various cities to investigate abusive advertising claims.

Today's BBB system is an expansion of the first Viligance Committees. Although the BBB's original function was to serve as advertising watchdogs, its services now include issuing reliability reports on local, state and national businesses and charities; handling complaints against business for misrepresentation or fraud; offering arbitration if mediation does not solve the complaint; and providing consumer information.

While the regional BBB office can watch local consumer/business concerns, the Council of Better Business Bureaus, with offices in Washington D.C. and New York City, works with business and the government on national problems facing consumers and businesses. The Council also disseminates information on national businesses and charities, and watches for abuses in national advertising.

Since the BBB has no legal power, cooperation in working with the BBB must be on a volunteer basis. The BBB cannot force a business or a consumer to act in a responsible manner.

Linda Truitt is president of Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin Inc.

Best storage space in the house not always closets

By ANDY LANGE
Associated Press

If you are a homeowner, the chances are you are always looking for more space. No matter how large your house seemed to be when it was bought, it went through a gradual shrinking process. As somebody once said, "Whatever space there is gets filled to capacity."

A closet that isn't jam-packed is a rarity. Yet, in most houses, it is the closet that offers the best chance for finding extra space.

Usually, a closet has a single rod for hanging garments and a single shelf for hats, boxes, blankets and whatever. Wasted space is all over the place ... below the clothes and above the shelf.

By using your imagination and very little actual skill, you can make a closet larger simply by a rearrangement of what is there now and a few additions. Several kits have hit the market in recent years to help you organize your closet or closets. They usually contain some rods and all the necessary hardware for the transformation. Some have shelves and some even have drawers. You can decide which kind to get after you have determined how you want to utilize the wasted space in a closet. Or you can buy everything separately at your local lumber yard, home center or hardware store, since most projects involve little more than using a saw, a hammer and a screwdriver.

In most closets, there is plenty of space above the shelf now there. An extra shelf can be installed, although care must be taken to see that there is room to put in and take out items.

In your search, don't overlook the back of the door. With a conventional swinging type of door, the inside often will hold towel bars or some kind of narrow shelving. See if there is room just inside the door for hanging a robe or belts or items that need not be on hangers.

Compulsive shoppers may pay serious consequences

Hearst Feature Service

While abjuring the self-destruction found in gambling, drugs and alcohol, a visible but mostly unknown segment of the American population pursues its own lower-keyed but equally seductive addiction. You see them everywhere; you probably know some of them. They are compulsive shoppers.

Compulsive buying can have serious consequences, including bankruptcy and broken marriages, but because it is less devastating than other compulsions, the subject receives little attention. Psychologists and retailing experts are hard pressed to say how many people are compulsive shoppers, but they say the problem is real.

"I know that it's not just hearsay," said Dr. Margery Brown, chairman of the psychology department at Siena College in Loudonville, N.Y. "You can see it with personality disorders where there's a need to fill up the emptiness a person experiences. Material goods are a way of doing that. But what the person finds, I suspect, is that it doesn't satisfy much for long."

Dr. Susan D. Britain, a Clifton Park, N.Y., psychologist, estimates that perhaps 40 percent of her patients spend more than they should and feel their buying is a problem. For about 10 percent of her patients, compulsive buying is a "very great problem."

While most of Britain's patients are women, some of her male patients also buy things they cannot afford. Where compulsive female shoppers tend to buy clothing, cosmetics and jewelry, men are more likely to purchase expensive power totems, such as cars and boats.

Gelatin protection for ham

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. Why is canned ham surrounded with slimy gelatin? Is it done to add weight to the product? Also, how do they get the gelatin to fit so snugly around the ham before it's put in the can?

A. Gelatin is added to canned hams in order to fill up the empty spaces in the cans. The gelatin acts as a protective shield for the ham during shipping and storage. Without it the ham would bang around inside the can.

The gelatin is not put around the ham before it is canned. Rather it is added in dry form just before the can is vacuum-sealed and cooked. As the juices are drawn from the meat during cooking they mix with the dry gelatin, and as it cools the gelatin thickens in the air spaces.

About one-fourth of an ounce of dried gelatin is added to a five-pound ham which is included in the weight on the label.

Q. Every so often my grocer has oxtails, which I buy for soup. Since one never sees or hears of oxen anywhere in this country anymore, where do they get these tails?

A. Donald Houston, an administrator with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, tells us that oxtails today are more likely not to be the tails of oxen but rather the tails of beef and dairy cattle. The term "oxtail" today is just generally accepted by the meat industry as the tails of cattle.

The number of oxen is very small in the U.S. now because of mechanized transport. The only oxen around are more likely to be used for hobbies or pastimes, or in historical recreations, than for commercial agriculture.

In this column recently we had some comments from a reader who protested the use of the Statue of Liberty in conjunction with a television commercial about Sure deodorant. The camera zoomed in on the statue's armpit and the reader felt this was disrespectful. When I asked Procter & Gamble to comment, Barbara Nieman of their consumer department explained that the statue was used only as a setting for the ad and did not intend any offense.

Apparently Procter & Gamble underestimated the strong feelings some Americans have for this symbol of liberty. Here are two examples:

"The Public Defender," Fresno, Calif.: "How sickening and repulsive can these companies get, that they can't create an original commercial of interest to the consumers without using the Statue of Liberty. How stupid does Barbara Nieman think the public is to swallow such an explanation — that Procter & Gamble only used the statue as a setting. It's an insult to our intelligence.

"So for me and others who protest, we will not buy Sure for sure, and thus they will lose more customers than they get. We will not sanction the revolting feelings of disgust as this ad brings to mind. The public is fed up to the teeth with ads such as these."

Barbara Shafer, Crown Point, Ind.: "I agree with you that using the Statue of Liberty in the Sure deodorant commercial is disgusting.

"I have a feeling a deal was made wth the Department of Interior's National Park Service when they were at their weakest moment. I know they needed money to refurbish the statue and I'm afraid maybe money was paid to them by Procter & Gamble to do this commercial. If this is true, shame on the National Park Service and Procter & Gamble for taking advantage of this situation."

Q. How come the taste of wine never varies? I know that wine harvests are not the same because of weather conditions, temperature, humidity, fertilizers, etc. Why does wine always taste the same when you keep buying the same brand? Sal Vitanza, Stamford, Conn.

A. "It is only the jug wines generally produced in the Central Valley of California," explains R.G. Petersson, Ph.D. and Winemaster with Taylor California Cellars, "that tend to be consistent from year to year. The way this is done is that most jug wines are blends of one, two or three different vintages and they are deliberately blended (keeping in mind the taste of the previous bottling) to match the taste that has been established for that particular label.

"Thus, if a vintage is higher in alcohol and perhaps lower in acidity than the 'standard' blend, then the winemaker will blend this with wines from a different vintage which happen to be lower in alcohol and higher in acidity. If a lower alcohol wine is available that does not have higher acidity, then tartaric acid or citric acid may be added.

"If needed, the acid used comes originally from other grapes. Some countries produce tartaric acid as a by-product from high acid grapes and sell it to other wineries to use to raise their acidities where needed. In no case are 'chemical' acids added to wine to increase acidity.

"Unfortunately," says Dr. Petersson, "there is no analytical machine that can distinguish between minor differences in taste of two similar lots of wine. Only the winemaker's taste can determine this.

"In fact, the smart winemakers do not rely on their own taste alone. They usually ask several other people to taste these and give him their precise impressions as to details of the flavor spectrum of each wine. Then he makes the final decision based on the taste of others and his own taste and experience.

"It is also true that the wine continues to change in the bottle after bottling and in this case the winemaker simply has to make some good guesses about how long the wine will remain on shelves before the consumer gets it, and how the wine is likely to change.

Lumber mill uses wood waste for energy efficiency

BIEBER, Calif. (AP) — Using its own wood waste for fuel has enabled a local lumber mill to become completely energy independent, according to a national energy journal.

Energy User News reports the mill not only generates its own steam and electricity for plant operations but has enough excess electricity to sell to a West Coast power company.

The mill, owned by the Big Valley Lumber Co., uses 'hog' fuel or waste wood — chips, shavings and sawdust — to fuel its main boiler. This produces steam to operate four wood-drying kilns, and a turbine generator that produces electricity 24 hours a day all year long for other plant-power needs.

DEAR ABBY

Choice of gifts upsets mom

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The holiday season is approaching, and with it approaches a five-year-old problem. Ever since my first child was born, I have been asking my in-laws to refrain from buying him toys for Christmas. Every year my request has been ignored. Now we have two children, so the problem has doubled.

The in-laws say, "If we didn't buy toys for our grandchildren, it would take all the fun out of Christmas for us!" (What a selfish attitude!)

Abby, these people are in their early 50s and they have had fun for a lot of years. I've suggested that they give savings bonds plus one token toy. (We could use the money for the children's education.) I gave up a lucrative career to stay home and raise our children. My husband and I get by, but we worry about our children's college education, etc.

We live in an upper flat and have no room to store so many toys. When I see the amount of money tied up in this junk, I could cry. I'm not talking peanuts here — every year each child gets a minimum of $200 worth of toys! My husband is noncommittal because he doesn't want to hurt his parents' feelings.

How do I reach these people? I have told them firmly but nicely. I have pleaded with them. Nothing works. What now? — DREADING THE HOLIDAYS

DEAR DREADING: You've told your in-laws how you feel, and they have told you how they feel.

I agree, it would be more practical for them to invest in your children's education, but that decision is not yours — it's theirs, so try to be a gracious loser.

DEAR ABBY: Before I've had a chance to read the newspaper, my scissors-happy wife cuts it up for items of interest and coupons.

I'm particularly annoyed when parts of "Dear Abby" are missing. Don't tell me to talk to her; I've done that, and it's like talking to the wall. — GETTING ULCERS

DEAR GETTING: For the next gift-giving occasion, give "Scissors-Happy" a year's subscription to this newspaper. You will both benefit from it, and it's cheaper than ulcers. (P.S. I hope my column was intact today, or you'll miss this suggestion.)

DEAR ABBY: I just had to respond to all those letters disclosing that people will dry their hands on the tip of a bath towel, the shower curtain or toilet paper rather than use the pretty little guest towel laid out for that purpose.

Until I read it in your column, I did not know that those "pretty little guest towels" were put out for that purpose. I am serious. I'm 28 years old, no dummy (I'm an R.N.), but I was never taught by my parents or my grandma (who always had one lying out on the counter) that they were to be used. I always thought they were there for decoration. I assume that many others thought the same. — NOW A USER

DEAR USER: Be a "pusher," too. In your own home, use a guest towel and leave it conspicuously in view beside the unused guest towels. This will encourage others to do the same.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Technology replaces meter readers with computers

YORK, Pa. (AP) — Meter readers, the people who periodically come into houses to check water and gas meters for billing purposes — are becoming victims of the computer age.

In York, some 18,000 residential water meters are being linked to a central office computer by television cable and read electronically. In the near future the same will apply to gas meters, according to MIS Week.

The management information systems journal says the computer technology-based system offers a solution to the high cost of manual meter reading and concerns regarding security where there are two working spouses in a household.

Quilt Show awards given

Winners from the recent Midland Quilters Guild' Second Annual Quilt Show were selected by the public. Three "People's Choice" Awards were presented to craftsmen of the quilts receiving the largest number of votes from an estimated 1,000 visitors of the show.

Guild member Elsie Dean was awarded first and second place for her hand-pieced winning entries. Her first entry, No. 10, is a medallion quilt in red, green and beige in a central "Castle Wall" design framed in intricately pieced borders.

Her second place award was for entry No. 22, "Floral Collection," a design of multi-colored pieced flowers on a blue background.

Guild member Rosemary Rose was awarded third place for "Feathered Star," executed in red and green on a natural muslin background. The quilt, containing more than 1,700 pieces hand-pieced and appliqued, took 1,100 hours to complete.

AAUW luncheon international

An "Around the World" Tasting luncheon will feature native foods prepared by foreign-born members of the International Group of the American Association of University Women. The meeting is from 10 a.m.-1 p.m. Saturday at Trinty Presbyterian Church.

The International Group was founded during World War II when many foreign born service men were training at Midland Air Base, and branch members opened their homes to these visitors and later to foreign wives of U.S. service men.

Almost half of the group's membership is comprised of foreign-born women. The group's purpose is to exchange knowledge of customs and cultures on a one-to-one basis.

Any woman who has earned a baccalaureate degree is eligible for membership in AAUW. For information call 697-3685.

Personal income shows increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income rose a strong 0.9 percent in September while consumer spending, after showing no gains for two months, shot up by 1.4 percent, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the rise in consumer spending was the strongest since a 1.6 percent gain in April. Since that time, spending has been on a downward slide, posting no gains at all in July and August.

Economists have cited the drop in consumer buying as one of the key reasons for the dramatic slowdown in overall economic growth since June.

Total economic output, after surging ahead at rates of 10.1 percent and 7.1 percent in the first and second quarters this year, slowed to a 3.6 percent pace from July through September, according to a preliminary estimate last month.

The government will revise that estimate on Friday and today's figures could signal that the revision will show the economy slowed less than originally thought. However, some economists have predicted that other signs of sluggish growth will translate into an even lower figure than the original 3.6 percent estimate.

The report on income and outlays showed personal income rising by 0.9 percent following gains of 0.6 percent in August and 0.7 percent in July. It was the strongest gain since a similar 0.9 percent rise in June.

The rebound in personal consumption spending, which includes virtually everything but interest payments on debt, follows a 1.6 percent jump in retail sales in September.

The personal spending increase included a $4.5 billion increase for durable goods, compared with a decline of $6.6 billion in August. The report said that the August decline and the September gain were due to a fall and then a rise in auto purchases. Purchases of nondurable goods, items intended to last less than three years, increased $18.4 billion in September, compared to a decline of $3.1 billion in August.

Americans' wages and salaries were up $11.7 billion in September, compared to a $3.8 billion August gain. The big gain came in the service industries, where payrolls rose by $6.2 billion. Manufacturing payrolls declined $1.8 billion in September with about one-third of that drop attributed to the strike against General Motors Corp.

Other details of the income and spending report:

—Personal income rose $26.1 billion in September to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.07 trillion.

Houston L&P audit gives firm good marks

AUSTIN (AP) — Houston Lighting & Power officials say a "very professional and thorough audit" showed that the company is well-managed.

But a state lawyer who represents consumers looked at the same 400-page report said called it a "superficial" audit that offers an incomplete glimpse at a wasteful company.

The audit, prepared by Arthur Young & Co., was ordered by the Public Utility Commission, which in the past had blasted HL&P as a poorly run company.

The $980,000 audit will be paid for by HL&P. The commission has not decided whether HL&P customers can be billed for the audit.

The 25-member audit team identified areas in which the company could save about $24 million a year, which HL&P spokesman Don Beeth said represented about one-half of 1 percent of the company's budget.

Overall, the audit offered a generally favorable review of HL&P operations.

"The company is beginning to achieve the benefits of a number of new and innovative programs. We found a real capacity, in terms of management processes and capabilities, to provide customers with reliable, safe electric service," the report said.

HL&P currently has a $554 million rate increase pending at the commission.

HL&P President Don Sykora said, "Arthur Young conducted a very professional and thorough audit, and we believe their conclusions, in general, were accurate and fair."

But Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle said the report was "by no means a clean bill of health." Boyle, the state lawyer who represents ratepayers, said the report is "superficial."

"I think the report has serious flaws and serious errors in it," he said. "I do believe HL&P's top-level management has improved, but it should, they've had 10 years of government agencies and consultants telling them they ought to improve their management."

A 1982 rate case decision included a penalty from the PUC, which said the company had been mismanaged. The $15 million penalty was later overturned in court.

The report called the South Texas Nuclear Project "a well-managed project, when compared with similar nuclear construction projects."

"While there are still gains to be made, excellent progress has occurred to date," according to the auditors.

The project initially was scheduled for completion in 1980 at a cost of about $1 billion. It is now set for completion in 1987 at a cost of $5.5 billion.

Boyle said, "The audit only pertained to HL&P today and did not look at HL&P management performance from 1971-83, which is the critical period of time as far as the South Texas Nuclear Project."

The auditors also gave a positive review of HL&P's customer relations, reporting that the company "has addressed some of the major problems experienced in the past."

HL&P still receives an increasing number of formal complaints, but the auditors said they might be due to "a problem of historical customer attitudes" rather than the "current level of service provided."

The suggestions for cost reductions include changes in fuel planning, fuel inventory and productivity of staff.

New home building jumps in September

NEW YORK (AP) — New home building rose 8.9 percent in September following two months of declines, the Commerce Department said today. And while another indicator, industrial production, declined in September economists termed the setback temporary.

The government said construction was started at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.67 million units last month, against 1.54 million units in August.

But an indicator of future building plans slipped.

The government said construction permits were taken out at an annual rate of 1.42 million units, off 3.7 percent from the August rate.

The government figures, which are a widely followed economic indicator, came under attack earlier this week from the Real Estate Research Corp., which said the housing starts reports ignore rehabilitation that creates as many as 500,000 housing units a year through conversion of buildings such as warehouses and factories.

Meanwhile, industrial production turned down in September for the first time since the low point of the last recession, but most economists said the slide was only a temporary setback for the economy and not a signal of a full-scale retreat.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Tuesday that the output of the nation's factories, mines and utilities dropped 0.6 percent after 21 consecutive monthly advances, the most recent a 0.1 percent gain in August.

The last decline in production was a 0.6 percent skid in November 1982.

"A one-month decline in this index does not signal a recession," said Robert Ortner, chief economist for the Commerce Department. "This economy does not resemble anything like a business-cycle peak. It resembles the middle stages of expansion."

A strike against General Motors Corp., coupled with a parts shortage in the industry, reduced output by 1 million cars from August to September, to an annual rate of 6.9 million automobiles, the report said.

Analysts said the sharp decline in auto production accounted for half the drop in overall industrial production. For October, the report predicted a return to production at the annual rate of 7.9 million cars.

"I am not very concerned about the decline, particularly since a lot of it related to the auto industry situation," said Edward Yardeni, chief economist for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York.

Economists cited declines in interest rates and a rebound in consumer spending to support their optimism about future growth.

Most of the nation's big banks announced Tuesday they were lowering their prime lending rates from 12.75 percent to 12.5 percent. But they did not match the 12.25 percent adopted Monday by Bankers Trust Co. in New York, the nation's ninth-largest bank.

In other economic developments Tuesday:

—The Labor Department said only Alabama, Michigan, Mississippi and Virginia had double-digit unemployment in August, compared with 12 states a year earlier. All 50 states reported lower jobless rates from August 1983.

TRC authorizes new Metroplex bus service

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission has authorized new bus service to move passengers between the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport and Dallas, Plano and Las Colinas.

The Link, which will operate 15 vehicles, was authorized to take the place of the Surtran Bus System, which has virtually quit operating, the commission said.

Surtran was subsidized by Dallas and Fort Worth, the commission said, but Fort Worth stopped funding Surtran in 1982, and Dallas will stop its funding on Oct. 31.

Surtran has operated for 11 years, and has carried up to 500,000 people a year, the commission said.

The Link will be operated by The Burstly Co., Dallas, which filed for emergency authority on Oct. 9.

The Link will charge $8 per passenger one way between the airport and Dallas and $15 for a round trip; $10 one way between the airport and Plano and $18 for a round trip; and $5 one way between the airport and Las Colinas and $9 round trip.

The commission said current one-way taxicab charges between Dallas and the airport range from $23 to $25, and the charge from Plano to the airport is $35.

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission has temporarily approved natural gas contract changes which should save four companies and their customers' more than $4.9 million.

The contract changes would reduce pipeline company rates to Valero Transmission Co., United Texas Transmission Co., Intratex Gas Co. and Houston Pipe Line Co., which must pass on reduced costs to cities and other customers.

The largest contract change was submitted by Clajon Gas Co., and would reduce rates charged to Intratex by 40 cents per million British thermal units (MMBtu) for an estimated annual savings of $4 million.

A reduction of 9 cents per MMBtu charged by Producer's Gas Co. to Intratex would save Intratex almost $753,000 per year.

Lower Producer Gas Co. rates for United Texas would save customers $34,000, the commission said, and reduced Producer rates charged to Houston Pipe Line would save $114,000.

Rates charged by Ferguson Crossing Pipe Line Co. to Valero would drop $22,100 a year.

The commission said since mid-September it has temporarily approved more than $17 million in gas rate reductions requested by pipeline companies.

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission has determined that a $2.05 million bond submitted by the Lower Colorado River Authority is adequate to cover reclamation costs at its proposed Powell Bend lignite mine in Bastrop County.

The Show goes on

It was the usual fare of rigs, pumps, pipe, processes, tools, valves, crowds, coupled with a free exhange of information as the the 1984 edition of the Permian Basin Oil Show opened yesterday and continues today at the Ector County Coliseum.
petroleum industry personnel.

Oil Show President Frank Ratcliff and Executive Director Jay Alvey are very pleased with yesterday's attendance and hope the large crowd indicates a record-setting year for the 44 year old exposition.

There are 542 exhibitors from 26 states at this year's oil show, using close to 1000 spaces. For the first time, KMID-TV is broadcasting its 6 p.m. and 10 p.m. news shows live from their booth at the oil show.

Many of these exhibitors have been participating in the oil show for 3 decades. Others have been on the oil show's waiting list since the 1970s, and there are many more companies still on the waiting list.

The Oil Show first began in June, 1940, as part of the second annual convention of the Permian Basin Association, which some believe was the forerunner of the API. The new manager of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, Jerry Debenport, arranged for the oil show. He also created the Chuck Wagon Gang, and the two have gone together ever since. The oil show's biannual appearance was interrupted during World War II, but resumed in 1950.

Housing statistics called wrong

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private researchers of real estate trends say government statistics on housing starts are meaningless and understate new housing by 25 to 33 percent.

The government considers its monthly housing starts report on of the most important indicators of the nation's economic health.

But Lewis Bolan, vice president of Real Estate Research Corporation, says "the number of housing starts is increasingly becoming an absolutely meaningless statistic. Each year we add between 400,000 and 500,000 units to the housing stock through rehabilitation, which creates new units.

"Those are not considered when new housing starts are talked about. In order to be considered a new housing start a unit must have new foundations and new footings," he said at a news conference held earlier this week to release the company's annual report on real estate trends.

"I mean converting a warehouse or a factory of loft building into residential units or chopping up a large house into apartments or adding an accessory apartment into an existing dwelling unit," Bolan added.

He said the Census Bureau, which compiles housing start information, is "doing an enormous disservice to the housing industry and the situation is not nearly as dire with respect to the number of new housing units created as the statistics themselves would indicate."

David Fondelier, spokesman for the Census Bureau says the statistic must be meaningful to many people because calls start coming to his office 45 minutes before the report is released with people asking to be put on hold so they can get the figures as soon as they are made public.

He said the bureau takes 200 to 400 calls on the report each month from producers of building materials and financial institutions, among others.

Jay Shackford, a spokesman for the National Association of Home Builders said even though the housing starts numbers exclude rehabilitation they remain valuable because they give a view of where the economy is going.

Comanche Peak complaint studied

DALLAS (AP) — A Nuclear Regulatory Commission official says he is looking into complaints that the special NRC task force investigating the Comanche Peak power plant has failed to adequately pursue allegations of safety problems.

Darrel Eisenhut, NRC licensing director, said in Washington that a disproportionate amount of his time now concerns allegations about the plant's safety.

Eisenhut said that Comanche Peak is among the top six projects being monitored.

Executives optimistic about 1985 economy

By JAMES F. PELTZ
AP Business Writer

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Some top executives say they're generally optimistic about economic prospects for 1985, but are reluctant to look beyond the next 14 months.

Uncertainty about the outcome of the presidential election, and its effect on tax laws and an already slowing economy, are two reasons 1986 is difficult to judge, they said.

"When you get into searching beyond '85, you find you're pretty much reduced back to extrapolating history," said Clifton C. Garvin Jr., chairman of Exxon Corp. and chairman of the Business Council, which is comprised of chief executives of many of America's largest companies.

The council's meeting, which this week, is held twice a year at this mountain resort and allows members to discuss the economy and to hear from members of the Cabinet and Congress.

The council's economists issued a report that said the economy would slow to about half its 1984 pace to a "more sustainable" rate in 1985, and that inflation should remain relatively low.

But they also warned that the massive federal budget and trade deficits threaten to push the economy into recession in 1986.

Several executives said after talking with their colleagues that most of them generally agreed with the report's outlook, and endorsed action to narrow the deficit.

"I'm very bullish about '84, and I think '85 is a very healthy but very important year," said John R. Opel, chairman of International Business Machines Corp. "The important thing is that it's the first year of a new administration, and I think fundamental tax changes are required and I think fiscal policy needs attention."

The outlook for taxes was a prominent topic at the three-day meeting.

Executives interviewed made no outright call for taxes to be raised, but some asked that any proposed tax changes be forwarded not only with an eye toward the deficit but also toward extending economic expansion.

"We should be very careful to preserve and foster economic growth," said Du Pont Co. Chairman Edward G. Jefferson.

Yet with the Reagan administration expressing reluctance to raise taxes, and Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale promising a tax increase, the business executives have found long-range planning difficult.

"We're in kind of a tentative state, as you always are in a pre-national election," Opel said.

For companies facing heavy foreign competition or relying heavily on foreign sales, the outlook is even more uncertain. The strong dollar has made life difficult for them because it has raised the price of U.S. products sold abroad.

Asked if U.S. companies facing that dilemma could prosper nonetheless, Caterpillar Tractor Co. Chairman Lee L. Morgan said, "Not without an adequate response by the companies themselves."

$50 million scam lands man four year term

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A man who pleaded guilty to bilking $50 million from 2,500 elderly investors was sentenced Tuesday to four years in prison, despite his tearful pleas for mercy.

"I do want all the people who lost money in this to know that I feel very badly about this," Anthony Sorge said while testifying during his sentencing hearing in U.S. District Court.

"I tried everything to straighten out that company. If you can, find something for me to do to help these people," Sorge said, breaking into sobs.

Sorge, one of five former principals who pleaded guilty to charges related to the bankrupt Coastal Equities trust deed firm, had tried to change his plea from guilty to innocent at his original sentencing Monday.

Houston L&P to pay injured teen

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Lighting & Power Co. reached a settlement Monday in which it could pay as much as $5 million to a teen-ager who lost his arms six years ago when he climbed an unfenced transmission tower.

Attorneys for HL&P agreed to the settlement the same day the boy's attorney, Dale Felton, finished his case in State District Judge Ruby Kless Sondock's court.

Adrian Ledesma, was 12 when he climbed a transmission tower near his parents' southwest Houston home and touched a distribution line he thought was a telephone wire. Because of the shock, doctors amputated both the boy's arms above the elbow.

Rebs leave toughest part of season behind

Lee travels to Big Spring Friday

BOB BRUNDAGE
orts Writer

"It's certainly good," said Midland Lee coach k Tayrien of his team's 2-1 start in District A football. "We wish we could have come out but 2-out-of-3 isn't bad."

Considering two of the district's three teams e Rebels have played to date are, or were, nked in the state's Top 10 polls, it isn't a bad rt at all even though Lee had every chance to the lone remaining unbeaten team in the 4-5A. Instead, the Rebels, with the toughest part of eir schedule behind them, are in the midst of a ur-team tie for second place along with San ngelo, Abilene Cooper (two teams they've eady beaten) and Midland High. All three of e teams have yet to play each other or beaten and No. 1 rated Odessa Permian. Something in that tie has got to give.

NOW THAT the loss is behind them and the motional wounds have had a few days to heal, s time for the Rebels to worry about their xt opponent: Big Spring.

At the start of the season, before teams went to league play, the Big Spring Steers were 2-1 and looked like they might be playing a better brand of football. However, since entering 4-5A competition, the Steers have had their problems, reaching rock bottom last week when Abilene Cooper handed them a 52-0 thrashing.

Despite the score, Tayrien isn't willing to count the Steers out of Friday night's 8 p.m. game at Memorial Stadium.

"The score against Cooper is deceiving," said Tayrien. "Big Spring shut down the Cooper running attack, which is something we couldn't do, so consequently, Cooper had to throw the ball. They have (quarterback) Doug Hadley and all those receivers and that's something most teams don't have the luxury of having."

It was a luxury worth 36 points as Hadley fired six TD passes before leaving the game for a rest in favor of backup quarterback Bill Dehlinger, who added a seventh TD pass. The Cougars also came up with a field goal and seven PAT kicks by Scott Anderson.

Big Spring's ability to stop the run is one area that is causing some concern for Tayrien, a staunch believer in "On any Friday..."

"Defense is their strongest suit, no doubt about it," said Tayrien. "They have a lot of players back on defense from last year. The offense is still young but they'll come along. I tell you, Coach (Quinn) Eudy is doing a good job and he has a fine staff.

"They're not a very large team (in size or numbers) but they do have an excellent defensive tackle in Doug Walker who was a starter for them last year," continued Tayrien. "He goes both ways. He's a big, strong 225-pounder and is certainly an impressive player. They also have Jay Pirkle in the defensive secondary and have some good linebackers. Offensively, Big Spring has some fine wide receivers in Sam Bauchum and Mike Doporto."

PIRKLE MAY be Big Spring's best overall player this year, a starter in the defensive back field along with a part-time fullback. Offensively, he and fullback Collin Carroll have accounted for a good percentage of the Steers' rushing yardage, 459-of-630 total yards.

Passing may be the Steers' best offensive weapon. Junior quarterback Carl Speck is the district's fourth leading passer with 48 completions in 109 attempts for 511 yards and two touchdowns.

"They're an excellent passing football team," said Tayrien. "The do have some good receivers and can mix it up enough where they can run on people. If you try to take an advantage and play the pass, they will run against you."

Big Spring's ability against the run will be strongly contested Friday, considering the running game of the Rebels.

Senior halfbacks Walter Jones and Tyrone Thurman provide the main offensive threat. Lee leads the district in rushing with 1,804 yards, while Jones, ranked fourth, has 553 for six touchdowns and Thurman, ranked fifth, has 475 and seven TDs.

Fullback Randy Ellis, who suffered a sprained ankle two weeks ago against Abilene Cooper, is the number eight back on the 4-5A charts with 421 yards and four six-pointers. Because of the injury, Ellis, who saw limited action Friday against Permian, will be sitting out again this week.

"Craig Swearingin is going to be at fullback," said Tayrien. "Ellis didn't re—sprain his ankle but it's still tender. We want to give it a chance to heal completely."

Other changes for the Big Spring game will be Ricky Lee, 190 pound junior, in at guard for injured starter Craig Kamradt. In the defensive backfield, Kevin Witt is moving from cornerback to safety for Harold Woods while Terry Young will take Witt's spot at safety.

"Kamradt is going to kick but we're keeping him out of the offensive line," said Tayrien. "He has a bruised shoulder."

Kamradt's kicking duties will still include kickoffs, field goals and PATs.

Midland's Fred Kester gave up playing golf at age 41 for tennis. At age 75, Fred is one of the top-ranked players in the state.

Kester may only be young ringer

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Just looking at Fred, I'd have to say he is a ringer.

And if I were one of his opponents, I might demand to see his birth certificate.

He is ranked No. 2 in Texas Tennis Association ratings for players in his age bracket, but Fred Kester just doesn't look 75.

"That's old news," the longtime Midlander protests. "Those rankings were for last year and were announced last spring."

Kester, who is executive director for Hillcrest Manor, cautions that past history doesn't count a thing toward this year's rankings and there's no telling how low he might be. One suspects a twinkle in his eye when he makes the statement.

"As far as this year's ratings go, the Sectional is the big tournament that decides the year's rankings. That will be held in Fort Worth in late October. That's the tournament in which we find out where we stand for the year."

BUT SURELY there must be some hint? How about the tournaments to date?

"I've played in five and I've lost to the same fellow four times." If you pry a little bit, you'll discover that the guy who has been beating Kester is Fred Royce of Dallas, who is ranked No. 1 in the state.

"He and I team up and win all the doubles."

So how many high school and collegiate championships did he win in his youth in preparation for his 75-and-over successes?

"Actually, I never even played tennis until I was 41. That's when I gave up golf." Kester relates, "I started in the tennis club and just played easy doubles. I did win an Over-35 tournament locally and got a big headline in the Reporter-Telegram, but it wasn't really justified. There were some very good players in the younger age divisions who deserved the headlines I got."

"But I never really played competitive tennis outside of Midland until after I retired from Southwest Bell Telephone in 1973. I began playing more and in tournaments at the Racquet Club."

That's when Bill Harris, a former Southwest Conference tennis champion at Rice University, suggested, "You ought to go to some of these tournaments. You can compete."

Kester's first venture was the Sectional Age 65 tournament at San Antonio.

STILL, HE protests his No. 2 ranking in state is not that much of a big thing. "I'm not that good. There just aren't that many players around who go out and play singles. You know, some have physical impairments, like a bad knee , and they just can't play."

Of course, Kester's hesitancy over retaining his No. 2 ranking next year is understandable. You never know what hotshot is going to turn size 75 before the Sectionals.

USTA Tennis

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Only the names have changed.

The United States Tennis Association's regular satellite tour stop in Midland is now an established tradition in the Tall City. For three years running the Midland portion of the Segment V (Texas) USTA play has climaxed here with the Masters Segment. Of the bevy of players that competed in the four previous Texas stops in Waco, Corpus Christi, Tyler and Dallas, only the highest-scoring 32 are issued invitations to the Masters.

The tournament, which began Tuesday at the Midland Racquet Club and continues through the Sunday finals, doesn't change much in format. The young and rising players in the world pro tennis business usually use these tournaments as "booster shots" for the all-important ATP computer points. At stake in the $10,000 tournament is not only a first-place prize of $1,300, but points that add towards the players overall world ranking. And the higher the rank, the better the shot at competing in a big-bucks tournament such as the U.S. Open.

What does change is the faces. Three years ago a youngster named Jimmy Arias made moderate waves in the USTA satellite circuit. Now Arias and others who have been this way (John Sadri, Van Winitsky, Mel Purcell, Tim Mayotte, Drew Gitlin, etc.) are finding their names more and more often in connection with the major events.

Thus, the best players in the region combined with the added stakes of extra points (this being a Masters Segment, i.e., the Texas finale) means the intensity of play is a notch higher than usual.

THE TOP two singles seeds, Bud Schultz and Andy Andrews, took different routes in advancing past the opening round. Schultz took care of Troy Collins easily, 6-2, 6-4, but Wednesday afternoon Andrews had his hands full against Eric Riley of Malvern, Pa.

Schultz has taken the Texas Segment by storm, and has been the hottest player on the Segment with wins in Corpus Christi and in Waco. He finally lost after a 15-game win streak at the Dallas Segment by Tomm Warneke in the quarterfinals. Warneke was a first-round winner over Craig Kardon, 6-4, 6-3.

Schultz faced Wittus this morning. Warneke next meets Kelly Evernden, a former University of Arkansas player from New Zealand. He coasted in wiping out Ted Farnsworth of New Jersey 6-1, 6-2. Evernden, seeded twelfth in singles, is ranked second in doubles with partner Mike Robertson. They open their doubles play today against Collins and Juan Farrow.

Andrews and Riley went toe to toe like prizefighters late Wednesday afternoon in their singles battle. In the first set, Riley appeared to have the edge in aggressiveness but could not rattle Andrews. Both showed poise and determination in games that could get a service [illegible] after more than an hour the set went to a tiebreaker at 6-6, and still neither could gain the advantage. But despite Riley's net charges that for the most part allowed him to set the pace in the first set, Andrews fought him off for a tense 12-10 edge in the tiebreaker.

Riley felt that the first set should have been his, and didn't shake off the results convincingly in the second set. Consequently, he was broken the first two times he served and Andrews 4-0 start was too much for him to overcome in losing the match 7-6, 6-4.

Wet weekend tests spirit

The Dallas weather forecast was for hot and humid with, as an inconsequential, quickly discarded afterthought, a 20 per cent chance of showers.

Since a 20 per cent chance of rain in West Texas is about as likely as a ski lift-line in Yuma, there was no reason to consider the possiblity. But this wasn't West Texas.

Hot and humid, typical Texas-Oklahoma game weather.

Rain, there was as much likelihood of that happening as the teams playing a tie.

They were right about the humidity, only in West Texas, we call it rain.

IT'S DIFFICULT to believe that people live like this...where a day-long rain is accepted as being a normal course of events. But perhaps they don't realize there is a better way.

It's also difficult to believe that teams could play 60 minutes in an unrelenting downpour and not get their uniforms dirty. Rugs take all the fun out of rainy days.

Monday night I didn't think the Green Bay-Denver game would be worth watching, but my interest became hostage of the snowstorm.

It revived memories of those Thanksgiving Day games, back in the Vince Lombardi era, when Green Bay played the Lions in Tiger Stadium Turkeyday morning.

For someone who had to get up early in the morning and put out a holiday-morning sports section, the sight of the Packers and Lions suffering frostbite was enough to set the world right again.

EVEN TEXAS Coach Fred Akers was upset about the condition of the Cotton Bowl turf. He thought it was terrible, but before he could be enlisted in our "replace-all-artificial-turfs" campaign, he spoiled it all by suggesting that the surfaces at Texas' or Oklahoma's Memorial Stadiums would have been much better. All I can say is, "Oxydol on you, Fred Akers."

"With that attitude, Akers, all you deserved was a tie," although somewhere can be heard a dissenting voice from Barry Switzer.

USFL files large suit against NFL

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States Football League charges in a $1.32 billion antitrust suit that the National Football League is conspiring to beat back a challenge to its "monopoly" on fall football.

The USFL, for two seasons a spring-summer "alternative" to the traditional fall football, filed the suit Wednesday in federal court. It accused the NFL of involvement in "a conspiracy" to destroy the USFL through a monopoly on players, stadium leases and television contracts.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle termed the suit "totally baseless. I think it is ridiculous to be suing on the basis of what they have done."

Last spring, Rozelle had hinted that legal action might signal the death throes of the USFL.

"You will know when they are on their last legs. They will bring a lawsuit against us," Rozelle told The Boston Globe after the NFL meetings. "This will be how they try to keep the owners from jumping ship. They will hold out their suit as a way of getting their money back if they stay around."

DONALD TRUMP, owner of the USFL's New Jersey Generals, disagreed.

"I predict we'll be victorious on the basis that the NFL has totally placed itself in a monopoly position," Trump said. "The NFL has taken control of all three television networks, so there is little room for competition. Their draft practices, including a supplemental draft of USFL players, were designed to damage the USFL. They also have sought to damage us with other rules."

The USFL suit asks that NFL contracts with the three major television networks be voided and that the NFL's "monopoly" on player contracts and stadiums be broken.

ABC spokesman Irv Brodsky said the network would have no comment until it receives a copy of the suit. Attempts to reach CBS and NBC officials were unsuccessful.

Rozelle and the 28 NFL teams were named as defendants in the $440 million suit. Under antitrust law, the award would be tripled in the event of a favorable ruling.

It claims "there is a conspiracy" among NFL clubs "to create a complete barrier to the entry of a competitive league into the business of major league competitive football." Since the emergence of the USFL "the efforts of the defendants and their co-conspirators have been specifically directed at the elimination of the plaintiff USFL member clubs as competitors."

The suit asks:

—That the NFL be "enjoined from negotiating with or making contractual offers with players currently under USFL contracts" before their contracts expire. Last year, the USFL signed a number of NFL players, including Cris Collinsworth of the Cincinnati Bengals, who is currently playing in the NFL and will report to the Tampa Bay Bandits of the USFL after the season.

—That NFL contracts with the three major television networks be declared illegal. USFL alternatives offered in the suit call for splitting the NFL into two 14-team leagues, each with a one-network contract, or limit the current 28-team league to contracts with no more than two networks.

—An end to such NFL practices as long-term contracts for the "most desirable stadia in metropolitan areas," granting expansion franchises in major metropolitan areas "to perpetuate their monopoly and preclude entry by any competitive professional football league into those areas," and controlling the "available pool of professional football players well beyond the reasonable player needs" of NFL clubs.

The USFL was formed in 1982 as what its founders said was a summer alternative to the NFL. The USFL came into being with two-year television contracts estimated at from $18 million to $22 million.

LAST SEASON, the league expanded from 12 to 18 teams and several of the franchises were sold, leaving only six of the original owners. It also spent millions to sign college stars like Steve Young, Herschel Walker and Mike Rozier and finished last season with losses estimated at $63 million.

Then, last August, despite ABC's extension of its contract for $15 million in 1985 and a new pact with ESPN valued at about $17 million a year, the USFL voted to switch seasons. It also has decided to consolidate from 18 teams to 12-14 teams for next year. The details of the consolidation may be worked out in meetings this weekend at Amelia Island, Fla.

The suit also stated that the USFL, since its first season in 1983, has been forced to play a spring schedule "given the monopoly of the NFL member clubs" in the fall season.

The USFL claimed it was able to secure a network TV contract with ABC, which "was willing to pay much less for the television rights of a 'spring football' league than it would" for a pro or major college fall football program.

Because of that, the court papers said, the USFL received only $9 million a year in television revenue for 1983 and 1984, while the NFL garnered "approximately $2.1 billion over the five-year period 1982-1986."

"If you make mistakes, you need to leave them out of your mind," said Riley afterwards. "I had three break points on him, I should have broken him. It's that simple." Riley, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, also tasted defeat in doubles as he and partner Schultz were ousted 6-4, 7-5 by Warneke and Mark Pinchoff.

Andrews' first-set triumph was keyed by relentless patience and a groundstroke that eventually cooled Riley's rushes. "He's a real good hard court player," Andrews said of his opponent. "I felt I had more chances to break him in the first set." But that never occurred, and Andrews solved Riley's blistering service in the second set.

Andrews is a North Carolina native and an N.C. State alum, and he faces Las Vegan Brett Dickinson next. Dickinson and Andrews have never played, but they did practice together a bit Wednesday afternoon.

OF THE tournament's top eight seeds, only third-seeded Jerome Jones of Los Angeles has been eliminated thus far. Jones dropped a rugged 7-5, 4-6, 4-6 match against Switzerland's Stephen Medem, who was unseeded. Medem now takes on John Sevely, a 6-2, 6-4 victor over Argentina's Roberto Saad.

In other first-round play, Andy Gordon toppled Charles Honey in another marathon match, 3-6, 6-4, 7-6. Gordon now faces eighth-seeded SMU product Jeff Turpin, a 7-5, 6-4 winner over Wittenburg. South African Howard Herr passed Sean Brawley 7-5, 6-2 to advance against sixth-seed Stephan Bonneau. Bonneau had an easy time against Juan Farrow, 6-2, 6-3.

Jonny Levine is seeded fifth and won the singles event in Dallas. He beat Filipino Mehl Ampon 6-0, 6-3 to move on against Christo Steyn. Steyn eliminated fellow South African Mike Robertson 6-2, 6-4.

Seventh-seeded Charlton Eagle won against Ted Erck of Houston, 7-5, 6-4, and played Canadian Laird Dunlop this morning. Dunlop advanced by eliminating Buzz Strode in straight sets.

THE SINGLES draw had one weird first round pairing when Tracy DeLatte faced Fort Lauderdale's Craig Wittus. Wittus knocked Dallas' DeLatte out of the running with a 6-2, 6-3 win. But apparently all was forgiven Wednesday, when DeLatte and doubles partner - you guessed it - Craig Wittus combined for a 6-4, 6-4 disposal of Corey Wittenburg and Chuck Nunn. Wittus and DeLatte are seeded third in doubles play. They faced unseeded Richard Akel and Tres Cushing Thursday.

In doubles, the other teams that have advanced are Brawley-Levine and Dickinson-Jacques Manset. Top seeded Strode-Turpin faced Bonneau-Dunlop today, and fourth-seeded Honey-Steyn met former Midlander Jeff Bramlett and partner Carlos Correia.

Bramlett is a '79 Midland High graduate and worked at the Racquet Club at one time. After graduating, "I went to Tech for a couple of years, then went two years to Southwest Texas." Bramlett earned his degree there and also palyed on two national championship teams, but currently he is "just trying to pick up a few computer points. I'm ranked about 761 in the world," he said.

The Strode-Turpin winner faces Brawley and Levine.

Second seeds Evernden and Robertson round out the play with a Thursday match against unseeded Collins and Farrow. The Evernden-Robertson team took a second-place finish in Dallas when they lost to Manset and Dickinson in straight sets, but won last weekend in Tyler.

"We're three points out of first," said Evernden. "So as long as we win one more match than the guys in first, we'll win the circuit." Evernden and Robertson can't finish any worse than second, so extra points are a certainty. Evernden, however, took a week off from playing singles due to the flu. But their doubles ability didn't suffer en route to a win Sunday.

In singles, Evernden faces Tomm Warneke, a nemesis who Evernden beat three times while Warneke was at Trinity University in San Antonio.

Frogs bring back 1958 memories

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - It's been more than a quarter century since Texas Christian jumped off to a 5-1 start, and Horned Frog football fans still recall that 1958 season with special affection.

Elvis was the national rage but back home the Frogs were the Purple scourge, mugging all their Southwest Conference rivals except SMU enroute to a Cotton Bowl date with Air Force.

Now, in 1984, a bunch of youngsters who weren't even born then could duplicate that 5-1 record with a victory Saturday over non-conference foe North Texas State, 1-5.

It would be the first time in 26 years.

The Cinderella Frogs, losers only to unbeaten and seventh-ranked Southern Methodist, may yet crash in flames but the comparison between then and now is harmless and maybe even relevant.

Although TCU was 8-3 the next year, the Cotton Bowl appearance of the 1958 team was the last by the Frogs, and they soon would begin the long slide into mediocrity and eventual oblivion.

Beginning in 1960, the Frogs have posted only three fractionally winning seasons and from 1974 until 1984 they won a meager 15 games while losing 90 and tying five.

TCU lost an early game to Iowa in 1958 but rode a 6-1 SWC slate into the Cotton Bowl for a New Year's Day misadventure (0-0) with Air Force.

Bob Lilly was a year away from greatness, but five Frogs, including two backs, would make the All-SWC team.

The quintet included tackle Don Floyd, guard Sherrill Headrick, center Dale Walker, halfback Marvin Lasater and fullback Jack Spikes.

Now, in Coach Jim Wacker's second year, TCU has apparently turned the corner and begun the equally long and difficult climb back to respectability.

The atmosphere in Froggieland may best be illustrated by giant offensive guard Joe Young, a fifth-year senior elgible this year only because of revised NCAA rules.

After last year's 1-8-2 disaster, and other mishaps, the coaches were uncertain whether Young would return for the 1984 campaign.

They need not have worried.

"No way was I going to pass up the chance," says Young, who has been perhaps the most physical member of the Frogs' offensive front. "It was another chance for me to prove myself after I thought my career was over.

"This is a great bunch of coaches and I enjoy playing for them. And I knew we had two quarterbacks, two great receivers, good running backs and a lot of the linemen coming back.

"I just had a feeling something good was going to happen."

Indeed!

After five games, the Frogs rank first in the nation in total offense and scoring and second in rushing. Running back Kenneth Davis is third nationally in individual rushing.

Davis leads the SWC with an average of 128.4 yards per game and teammate Tony Jeffery, a freshman, is fourth with a 90.4 ledger.

Quarterback Anthony Gulley, who ran for 147 yards and passed for 143 last week against Rice, holds the No. 2 spot in total offense. Clinton Brown is first in kickoff returns with a 24.9-yard average.

Dan Sharp and James Maness are among the conference's top receivers and Maness set a SWC record last week with a 99-yard reception from backup quarterback Scott Ankrom.

Maness collected 202 yards in receptions in the 45-24 victory over Rice while Ankrom, who touched the ball only four times, galloped 51 yards for a touchdown in addition to the record 99-yard toss.

Assessing the Frogs at this point, Wacker abandoned his favorite word,"fantastic," and said: "Unbelievable."

Tom and I agree that excellence in education is an admirable goal to be sought, but that that goal need not be achieved by unduly restricting or destroying extra-curricular programs that many of us grew up with...programs we believe would benefit our children.

Burrow stages kick show for Little

CONWAY, Ark. (AP) — Curtis Burrow recently put on a command performance for his high school idol.

Steve Little, the paralyzed former University of Arkansas place-kicker, smiled and said it was good.

Burrow, the place-kicker for the University of Central Arkansas, appears to be the rightful heir to the throne in the Order of the Upright and the Crossbar. Before he's through, he may challenge Little for the title of the best place-kicker in Arkansas history.

"He is the best I have seen on the college level," claims UCA head coach Harold Horton, who was an assistant at the University of Arkansas when Little, Tony Franklin and Russell Erxleben were trading long-range boots, and the misses came on muddy fields. He has missed only three field goals since he became the Bears' regular place-kicker the third game of last season.

He's only a junior, and he already can claim to be one of the best in the country on the college level.

It's no wonder that Little, who kicked for the St. Louis Cardinals before being paralyzed in an automobile accident, visited a UCA practice session recently to watch Burrow.

"About the only thing he told Curtis was to make sure he kicked a whole lot of footballs in practice in which he got a bad hold or a bad snap," Horton said.

"I had never thought of that," Burrow said. "Even when I would miss, Steve would tell me, 'You're not doing anything wrong. Keep doing it.'"

When Burrow was a ninth-grader in Brinkley, Little was his idol. "Watching and hearing about him inspired me to go on with my kicking," Burrow said.

Little has also provided Burrow with about the only coaching he has received. Horton has a hands-off policy, with good reason.

"If anybody says a word to him, he's in trouble," Horton said with a sly smile. "I've seen some good kickers get messed up because people had decided to try to coach them. About all we tell Curtis is, 'There's the ball, here's the tee and make sure you get all the balls back in after practice.'"

Burrow worked extensively last spring in building up his leg strength and says he is stronger than ever. He can squat 420 pounds. He says he has booted two 67-yard field goals in practice.

"His leg is so strong that he has tremendous range," Horton said. "The only problem is it's hard to use him at a real long distance because of the risk of giving up field position."

"I guess it's confidence and practicing a lot," said Burrow, who says he kicks about 75 balls a day or "until I get tired. A lot of kicking is confidence and just going out there knowing you are going to make it. It also helps when you know the team and the coaches have confidence in you. I seem to do better under pressure, and I seem to kick farther when that adrenaline gets flowing.

"It also helps that we have a good deep-snapper in Bobby McCallister and a great holder in Ray Daugherty. There's no way a place-kicker can be successful if the snap and the hold are not there. Ray has done a great job with some bad snaps. Our line has done a good job keeping people out. I've just had one attempt blocked since I've been here."

Two Packers avoid rape charge

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee County district attorney says the alleged rape of a professional dancer by two National Football League players was "shameful and depraved," but that he has decided not to file charges.

The decision by District Attorney E. Michael McCann will have a "chilling effect on women" who are rape victims, the dancer's attorney, Daniel P. Kondos, responded.

Kondos said he may ask the Circuit Court to review McCann's decision, and that his client may file a civil suit against the two Green Bay Packers whom authorities have declined to name publicly.

"I hope she socks them for a bundle," McCann remarked to newsmen. "Football greats they may be, but heroes they are not, in my book."

Kondos had accused authorities last week of delaying a decision "because of the notoriety and the celebrity status of the individuals involved."

The 18-year-old, 5-foot-2 woman says in a police report she was assaulted Oct. 9 in a basement dressing room of the tavern where she has worked as a dancer for about three months.

Kondos said he sent his client to a hospital for photographs of bruises she suffered.

In a statement Wednesday, McCann said: "After carefully considering all elements of this case, we have determined that the state will be unable to prove the guilt of the two men beyond a reasonable doubt."

"To file charges of third-degree sexual assault when we believe that a jury will find the men not guilty would not be in the interests of justice," he said.

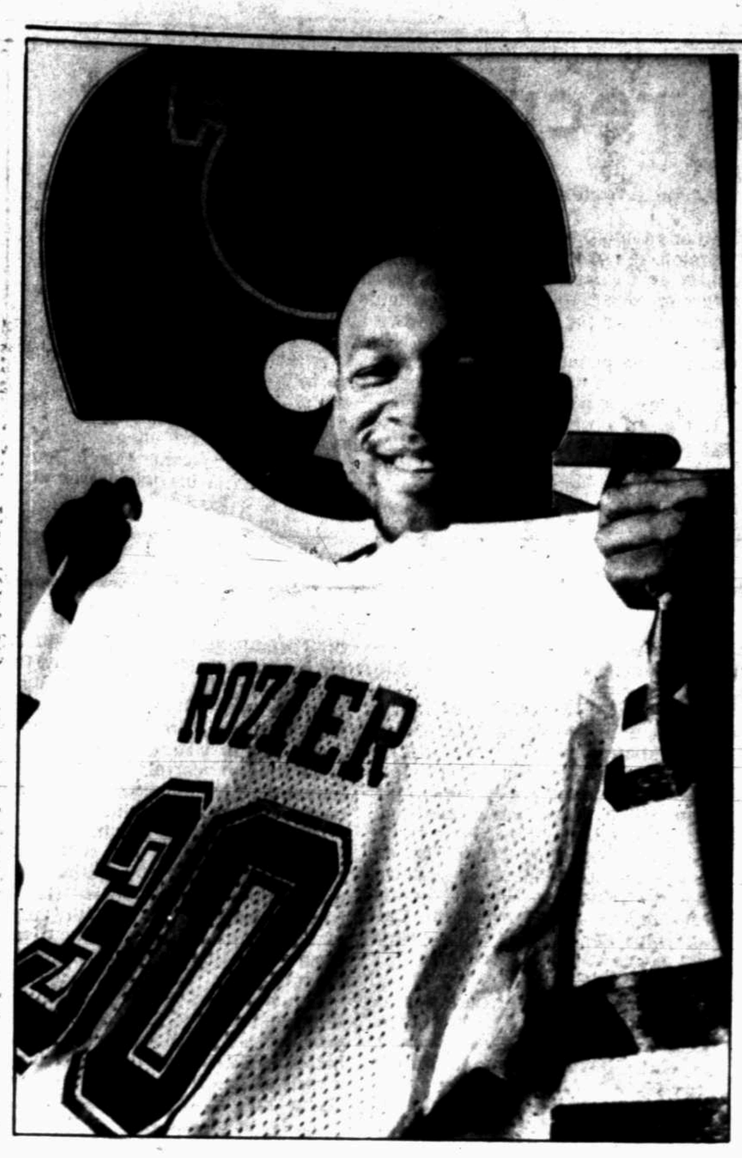

In Green Bay, Coach Forrest Gregg and club president Robert J. Parins said in a statement they "are pleased that those of our players who are alleged to have been involved have been absolved of any conduct that would call for a criminal charge."

"We were well satisfied with the investigation," Gregg told an interviewer. "I thought it was very, very thorough, and the decision was reached by someone who is quite capable."

McCann's statement said "a lengthy, bruising trial with consent as a defense ending with a not-guilty verdict is not in the best interests of the young woman."

Kondos denied his client consented and said she is fearful of being pregnant. She was upset by McCann's decision, he said.

"She feels that she has been victimized by the two individuals, and now she's being victimized in charges not being issued," he said.

Mike Rozier, shown here holding his Pittsburgh Maulers' jersey, has admitted to having violated NCAA rules by accepting money from an agent in his senior college season while at Nebraska.

Rozier admits illegal payment

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Rozier says in a taped interview with Sports Illustrated that he received four monthly installments of $600 from an agent while playing football for Nebraska during the 1983 college season, after which he won the Heisman Trophy.

Sports Illustrated, in its Oct. 22 issue, said Rozier admitted in a tape-recorded interview that he signed with an agent before the 1983 season and, before playing in the Orange Bowl, he entered into a contract with the USFL's Pittsburgh Maulers, for whom he played last spring.

UNDER NCAA rules, Rozier could have come to terms with an agent or a pro team only after the Orange Bowl game against Miami, which ended shortly after midnight last Jan. 3.

But, according to the magazine, Rozier said he signed with Los Angeles-based agent Bruce Marks in August 1983, before Nebraska's first game of the season, and that Marks paid him four monthly installments of $600 during the season. Marks is an associate of Mike Trope, but Rozier said he did not know that at the time.

Rozier also told the magazine that, several days before Nebraska's 31-30 loss to Miami that gave the Hurricanes the national championship, he, Marks and Maulers General Manager George Heddleston agreed to terms.

"We just sat down and went over the contract," Rozier was quoted as saying. "It sounded good to me. Three million dollars for three years." After the Orange Bowl game, Trope emerged as Rozier's agent.

In the days following that game, Rozier, Trope and the Maulers said they had not made a deal. But on Jan. 9, the USFL club said it had signed Rozier to a contract 16 hours after the game.

Sports Illustrated said Marks declined to comment on whether he gave Rozier any money during Rozier's senior season, but said Rozier "never signed anything as far as I was concerned." It said Trope has refused to discuss his dealings with Rozier.

"Until I hear from Mike Rozier personally, whatever he has to say, I'm gonna go along with that," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said in Lincoln, Neb. "I don't care what's written in a magazine or what anybody says.

"If he did take the money he would simply be another one of a number of players such as Billy Sims and other players who admitted that they had taken some money before their senior season was over. It's regrettable, it's not good for college football, it's not good for the player.

"IT WOULD'VE caused them to be ineligible at the time if it had been discovered. If I had known about it I would have had to declare them ineligible. And yet it will not in any way affect last year. The NCAA's already said those kinds of things are over and done with. It won't cause anybody to forfeit any games or anything like that."

Cornhuskers' Athletic Director Bob Devaney said that the university was unaware of any contract Rozier might have signed or any money he might have received.

"We have no idea of what Mike Rozier did or didn't do. It's nothing to do with our athletic program," Devaney said. "We have no knowledge that Mike Rozier signed or took any money."

Frey named NL's top manager

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Frey, named National League Manager of the Year after leading the Chicago Cubs to their first title in 39 years, says his only incentive is to keep his job.

Asked whether his contract — which runs through the 1985 season — contained incentive clauses that would reward him for such awards, Frey, in a joking mood, told reporters Wednesday, "I didn't have any. My incentive is to try and not get fired."

FREY, IN his 35th year in baseball, took the Chicago Cubs to the National East Division title in his second job managing. He had led the Kansas City Royals to the 1980 World Series in his first year as a major league manager.

Frey was named on 23 of 24 ballots in voting by members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, receiving 16 first-place votes and seven seconds for a total of 101 points. New York Mets Manager Dave Johnson was runner-up, followed by San Diego's Dick Williams, whose Padres won three straight from the Cubs to take the NL pennant.

Jim Frey

"I'm honored and proud that people thought I did a good job, but it was the organization that went out and spent the money to get the ballplayers," Frey, 52, said. "A lot of people deserve credit; I'm just the guy who happens to be standing here."

But, the soft-spoken Frey admitted he was less than surprised about the award.

"We won more games than anybody in the National League, and I guess that put me in contention," he said.

But Frey said the award doesn't wipe out the disappointment of the playoff loss.

"I'm not going to feel good until something comes along that puts this (disappointment over losing to the Padres) out of my mind," said Frey. "I'll be thinking about it until spring training."

Frey spent 14 years kicking around the minor leagues, but despite attending spring training with several teams and being named the Texas League's Most Valuable Player in 1957, Frey never earned the right to call himself a major leaguer.

His playing days ended in 1963. Frey briefly tried making a living selling real estate in his native Cincinnati.

"Look at this body," the 5-foot-9 Frey said in a recent interview. "This isn't the body of a pro athlete."

HE RETURNED to baseball, minor league managing, scouting and coaching for the Baltimore Orioles.

Frey joined Billy Hunter and George Bamberger on an Orioles staff headed by Manager Earl Weaver. After Hunter and Bamberger both were given shots at managing big league clubs, Frey told his wife, Joan, that he would leave baseball if his chance didn't come soon.

In 1980, his turn came after Kansas City replaced Whitey Herzog. Frey's Royals won the American League pennant but lost to Philadelphia. But then-Phillies Manager Dallas Green must have seen something he liked. Four years later, after taking over as general manager in Chicago, Green would tab Frey to run the ball club.

McNamara earns call from Boston

BOSTON (AP) — "He's a heck of a baseball man — and a darn good person," says Haywood Sullivan.

"He has good qualifications, most of the things we're looking for in a manager," says Lou Gorman.

With that support, John McNamara was expected to be introduced today as the new manager of the Boston Red Sox.

"I'm delighted," McNamara said as he arrived Wednesday night at Logan International Airport and declined to confirm his appointment. "You don't know how pleased, how thrilled I am to come to Boston."

He said he planned to meet Sullivan in the morning and was in Boston because "I want to see Boston College play."

The fourth-ranked Eagles football team plays this weekend at West Virginia.

The official announcement at an afternoon news conference at Fenway Park appeared a mere formality.

Sullivan, a co-owner and chief operating officer of the Red Sox, and Gorman, the club's general manager, all but signed McNamara during talks at the World Series in San Diego 10 days ago.

Sullivan and Gorman admitted that McNamara was their first choice to succeed retired Ralph Houk, 65, as Boston's field boss.

McNamara, 52, a major league manager for 10 full seasons and parts of three others, cleared the way to come to Boston by rejecting a contract to continue as manager of the California Angels.

"I put a lot of priority on major league experience," Sullivan said on the West Coast. "I wouldn't eliminate good people in our organization, but in this situation I think we need someone with experience in handling two different clubs. Half our team is experienced, half is very young. There's not much in between.

"We want to blend the character of the manager into the character of the team."

"He's a solid guy," said Gorman. 'He's handled veteran clubs, he's handled kids and he was a sound organizational leader in the minor leagues."

Sullivan said he talked to "about six other candidates" after Houk decided to retire on Sept. 25.

McNamara and Sullivan have been close friends since they were in the Charlie Finley-owned Kansas City A's organization in the early 1960s.

McNamara was Sullivan's top choice for the Boston managerial job after Don Zimmer was fired in 1980. However, Houk was hired when he surprised everyone by ending a two-year retirement in Florida.

After meeting with Sullivan and Gorman during the World Series last week, McNamara said:

"The contract isn't a problem. It never has been with me, but especially not with Sully. All I can say right now is that I'm thrilled an excited. I feel extremely fortunate."

The Red Sox rarely disclose terms of any contract. However, Mcnamara reportedly would be paid $150,000 a year, the same as Houk received.

Sullivan admitted that formal announcement of the new manager was delayed for a few days after the World Series for maximum media coverage. The Red Sox also may have decided to wait until after the Angels announced that Gene Mauch, player personnel director, will return to managing in 1985.

McNamara, a journeyman catcher in the minor leagues, began managing at the age of 26 in 1959.

He became coach of the Oakland A's in 1968, and was named to replace Hank Bauer as manager on Sept. 19, 1969.

Fired by Oakland after a second place finish in 1970, he became a coach with the San Francisco Giants for three years.

Then, in 1974, he became manager of the San Diego Padres, remaining until he got the ax on May 30, 1977.

He coached with the Angels in 1978, then signed as manager of the Cincinnati Reds in 1979. The Reds won the National League West championship in his first year, finished second in 1980 and then had the best record in the major leagues in 1981, missing the playoffs because of the strike-interrupted, split season.

He was fired by Cincinnati on July 21, 1982, and became manager of the Angels in 1983. California had a 70-92 record and finished fifth last year. The Angels this season lost a battle down the stretch, tying Minnesota for second place, three games behind Kansas City.

Padres dismiss pitching coach

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Padres have dismissed Norm Sherry as the club's pitching coach in the wake of a disastrous performance by the team's starting rotation during the World Series.

"They told me I won't be back, it was a shock to me," Sherry said Wednesday night. "When you win, you never expect something like that. I thought I did a good job. Evidently, it wasn't good enough."

General Manager Jack McKeon said team officials "felt like it was in the best interests of the organization to make a change in pitching coaches, because of conflicts on the pitching staff."

McKeon said that Sherry's contract with the club would not be renewed, although he has been offered another position within the Padres organization. Sherry, 53, has not yet decided whether he will accept the new job offer.

The general manager said the Padres have not yet settled on a replacement for Sherry, a former catcher with the Los Angeles Dodgers and New York Mets and manager of the California Angels.

McKeon denied that Sherry's ouster had anything to do with the collapse of San Diego's starting pitching corps in the World Series, which was won by the Detroit Tigers.

During the series, the Padres four-man rotation of Mark Thurmond, Ed Whitson, Tim Lollar and Eric Show lasted a combined total of 10 1-3 innings in five games. They gave up 25 hits, including five homers, and 17 runs (one unearned) for a combined earned run average of 13.94.

Birdsong put on recruiting halt

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The NCAA has barred University of Arizona assistant basketball coach Ricky Birdsong from off-campus recruiting this season because of a 1982 recruiting violation, it announced Tuesday.

Arizona officials expressed disappointment with the penalty, but Coach Lute Olson said the impact would be minimal on this season's recruiting efforts. The penalty will have no impact on the university's eligibility for post-season play.

The decision by the infractions committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association will limit Arizona to having one assistant coach, Ken Burmeister, recruit off-campus during 1983-84, in addititon to Olson. Normally, two assistants can recruit full-time as well as the head coach.

Burmeister will be given additional burdens, Olson said, "but in my opinion he's one of the top recruiters in the country as it is, and hard work has never been a foreign word" to him. He said he would be concerned if not for someone of Burmeister's caliber.

Olson said that as a result of the penalty, he will have to be more involved than in the past, "but certainly not at the expense of what my job is on the floor. It'll just mean a whole lot more 5 o'clock plane flights out of here after practice to see players."

Byrdsong will be able to recruit by telephone and by letter and will coordinate the recruiting program from the office. Last year Burmeister was responsible primarily for recruiting in Southern California and Byrdsong in Northern California and the Midwest.

"So it just means that Ken will have to find more flights from Southern California back to the Midwest, I guess," Olson said.

The NCAA decision, announced in Mission, Kan., said the violation involved arrangements Byrdsong made to provide a new player, Morgan Taylor, with a pre-paid airline ticket from Atlanta, Ga., to Tucson to enroll for 1982-83.

The violation was among five allegations of infractions made in 1983 by former Coach Ben Lindsey, who was fired after his only season at Arizona.

BATTLES

This is a game I save up for all summer. This year, I got drenched to the skin twice. First, walking from the car to the press box lugging my embarrassment in a black case. And then there was another soaking when I went down on the field for the first two quarters.

Watching the game from the press box and field is like watching two different games. The press box is like a soundproof isolation booth. On the field, you have no idea what's going on, but it's what it must have been like on the floor of the Coleseum when they turned the lions loose. No lions here, but keep eye on Bevo. He's another who doesn't appreciate these modernday fraudulent surfaces.

It's not difficult, however, to keep track of the game's flow. It all depends on where the roar comes from. This year, OU had everything south of the 50 and Texas was everything North of the midfield stripe.

The bands are a show in themselves, Texas with its rousing fight song followed by its two-touchdown head start-Eyes of Texas while Oklahoma plays Boola-Boola with more verve than they ever dreamed of at Yale and now counters The Eyes with OK-lahoma.

I STOPPED taking the plane to this game a few years ago because it took forever to inch from the airport to the state fairgrounds. Usually, it is easier to drive 350 miles from Midland, take the loop around Fort Worth and Dallas and come in from the south.

Last year, I missed my secret turnoff and landed in the thick of the game traffic, winding up on the wrong side of the Cotton Bowl and being led by someone on my hood up a sidestreet to someone's backyard to park. It meant crawling under the railroad tracks and entering the fairgrounds from the back. As I tiptoed through the livestock pens, the roar from the stadium told me someone had already scored.

At the press box, one sniff and they tried to direct me back to the sow judging by I refused to be intimidated.

Last year, I practically fell asleep that night at the Baylor-SMU game, the Midland-Odessa counterpart of the Permian-Lee Friday. Baylor-SMU is frequently a wilder game than OU-UT. I also was considering writing the Dallas Cowboys a nasty letter for scheduling Tampa Bay on that weekend, a team that was down 49-0 at halftime to Green Bay the week before. As it turned out, Dallas-Tampa Bay was one of the year's best games, decided in overtime.

This year I flew and there was no traffic problem from Love. Maybe, because I arrived in time to watch the entire Baylor-SMU game on the press box TV.

Going back was another matter.The return flight from D/FW left at 9:54. I wondered how many hours I'd have to sit around the airport, waiting.

Even after the post-game locker room and pounding out a story on the portable that one day is going to get me barred from press boxes for its offending racket, it still took an hour to reach I-75, less than a mile from the Cotton Bowl, and somehow I was in the wrong lane when it came time to veer off on 35-E. Consequently, I wound up the pregame traffic jam to the Maverick game.

Once at the airport, more time was wasted finding the rental-car return lot and then it took a bus ride to reach the terminal. By the time I finished calling in the story, my plane was already boarding, so there wasn't even time to get a candy bar for supper.

I know what you're thinking. What an ordeal to repeat year after year for something you could see better on TV. I think the same thing myself after a 2 a.m. desk, a 6 a.m. alarm and long trip to Dallas. Then I find myself on the floor of the Cotton Bowl at kickoff, and I know why.

Whites own Dallas bucks

DALLAS (AP) — Despite losing his starting role, quarterback Danny White remains the highest-paid member of the Dallas Cowboys with an annual salary of $550,000, The Dallas Morning News reported today, quoting figures supplied by the teams to the NFL Players Association.

White's salary is greater than the $450,000 annual base salary recently negotiated for defensive tackle Randy White, the newspaper said.

However, the story noted, Randy White also received a $600,000 signing bonus which, if prorated over the length of his contract, would add $120,000 a year to his base salary, putting him at $570,000 a year.

The base salary for the 49 players on the Cowboys' active roster totals $8,037,000, an average salary of $164,000, the News reported. The league average, according to the NFL Management Council, is $160,000.

THE COWBOYS have 15 new players this year whose salaries total $750,500 less than the 1984 contracts of the players they replaced. The difference is a result, in part, of renegotiated contracts of Randy White and several other players.

Besides Randy White, whose average annual salary increased from $300,000 to $450,000, Herb Scott was boosted from $235,000 to $310,000, Phil Pozderac from $54,000 to $150,000, Glen Titensor from $63,000 to $150,000, and Mike Downs from $95,000 to $175,000.

"Salaries of all the teams are going up," Gil Brandt, the Cowboys' vice president for player development, told the News.

In 1982, the NFLPA reported that the average league-wide base salary was $90,412. The Cowboys had an average base of $107,990. In the two years aince then, the average Cowboys salary has increased by more than $50,000 and the league-wide average has gone up by about $70,000.

The NFLPA salary survey shows that linebacker Anthony Dickerson, who is going into the option year of his contract, is the lowest-paid Dallas starter at $82,000. The Cowboys have not made him a new offer, which the newspaper said could be an indication the team is phasing him out and making plans to push along Billy Cannon, Dallas' No. 1 pick in the 1984 draft.

Behind Danny White and Randy White, the next highest-paid Cowboys are runningback Tony Dorsett at $400,000 and Scott, a backup offensive lineman, at $310,000, the newspaper said.

The base salary of defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones is $225,000. Adding a $50,000 roster bonus he got for making the team, that puts him even with defensive tackle John Dutton, the newspaper said.

The newspaper said the Cowboys' two lowest-paid players are defensive backs Vince Albritton ($46,000) and Carl Howard ($51,000), the only free agents who made the team. They each also received a $15,000 roster bonus when they made the final cut.

Cannon received a $400,000 signing bonus and a $200,000 loan along with salaries of $150,000, $175,000, $200,000, $250,000, $325,000 and $400,000.

Victor Scott, the team's No. 2 pick in the draft, got a $375,000 signing bonus and a $200,000 loan and salaries of $140,000, $165,000, $195,000, $245,000 and an option year of $325,000.

Wide receiver Mike Renfro, obtained from Houston in April in a trade for wide receiver Butch Johnson, signed a three-year contract with a $25,000 signing bonus and salaries of $160,000, $190,000 and $235,000. He made $100,000 for the Oilers last year and was scheduled to get $125,000 from Houston this season.

Johnson was to have received $197,000 from the Cowboys this year.

Three Cowboys who retired before this season would have received salaries of more than $200,000 had they returned. Defensive tackle Harvey Martin would have been paid $275,000, offensive tackle Pat Donovan $247,500, and wide receiver Drew Pearswon $247,500. Tight end Billy Joe DuPree and fullback Robert Newhouse would have received $187,000 each.

Muncie released from treatment

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego running back Chuck Muncie has been released from the drug evaluation and treatment center he entered last month and is continuing his rehabilitation at home, Chargers officials say.

Muncie, the Chargers' leading rusher from 1980-1983, was prevented from being traded to the Miami Dolphins earlier this season when a urinalysis test showed traces of cocaine.

According to a prepared statement released by the Chargers Wednesday, Muncie has finished "the initial phase of a chemical dependency program," which was said to have been conducted at a treatment center in Arizona.

Muncie has returned to San Diego for "after-care," the release said.

National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle has said he will not make a decision on whether Muncie may return to the league until he is satisfied the running back has put his drug dependency problems behind him.

Hartford making noise

Lowly Whalers rally to dump Leafs

Associated Press

Could the Hartford Whalers, who failed to make the playoffs in their first five years in the National Hockey League, be ready to mount a serious challenge for a postseason spot?

On Wednesday night at Toronto, the Whalers rallied from a 2-1 deficit with four consecutive goals and beat the Maple Leafs 5-3, displaying a disciplined style under Coach Jack Evans that was lacking in past seasons. The victory improved Hartford's early-season record to 2-1-1, the best ledger in the Adams Division.

Toronto Coach Dan Maloney, for one, was impressed by the Whalers.

"I've been telling everybody all along that they're a good hockey team," Maloney said. "Hartford just outworked us. They used the same game plan we did — shut the other team down and wait for the opportunities — but they were a little more patient than we were and you have to give them a lot of credit.

"We made a couple of key mistakes in our own end and they capitalized on them."

Mike Zuke gave the Whalers the early lead, but goals by Jim Korn and Miroslav Frycer put the Leafs ahead 2-1. Mark Fusco's goal late in the second period tied it and Hartford got three got consecutive goals by Sylvain Turgeon, Joel Quenneville and Ron Francis to put the Leafs away.

Fusco, 23, winner of the Hobey Baker Memorial Award as the top college player in the United States when he played at Harvard two years ago and a U.S. Olympian earlier this year, had an outstanding night.

"Because of my experience and my age, I don't feel like a rookie, even though, technically, I am a rookie," said Fusco, who got into 17 games for the Whalers at the end of last season. "I played almost a quarter of last season.

"I also played in the Canada Cup and the Olympics, so that's a lot more experience than an 18-year-old rookie coming out of high school."

Turgeon broke the 2-2 deadlock at 2:15 of the third period when he flicked a wrist shot past Leafs goaltender Ken Wregget.

Quenneville scored at 6:06, streaking in from his defense position to take a pass from Mark Johnson and drive the puck into a lower corner of the Leafs net.

The Whalers moved ahead 5-2 when a shot from the blue line by Risto Siltanen struck Francis and dribbled past Wregget at 13:16.

Leafs captain Rick Vaive made it 5-3 at 15:35, but Toronto was unable to narrow the deficit again.

National Hockey League

Islanders 6, Red Wings 4

Clark Gillies scored three goals for New York, including one that broke a 4-4 tie with 3:14 left at Detroit.

Gillies deflected Pat LaFontaine's slap shot past Detroit goalie Greg Stefan to give the Islanders a 5-4 edge. Mike Bossy scored a clinching goal with 1:10 left as New York won its third straight game after a season-opening loss.

Brad Park scored two goals for the Red Wings.

Penguins 4, Canucks 3

Pittsburgh won its first game of the season after two losses as Warren Young scored two goals and set up another against Vancouver.

Bruce Crowder, with an assist by Young, put the Penguins ahead to stay, 2-1, with 55 seconds left in the first period. Young, a 25-year-old rookie, scored a 14:38 of the second period and 11:31 of the third to make it 4-3.

The Canucks made the final score close in the last five minutes with gials by Tony Tanti and Gary Lupul.

Flames 7, Jets 4

Ed Beers netted three goals as Calgary scored three times on power plays and once short-handed to beat Winnipeg.

Beers' first goal on a power play early in the game was the Flames' first with a manpower advantage this season at home after an 0-for-9 start.

Black Hawks 4, Blues 3

Nordiques 4, Sabres 1

Wilf Paiement and Dale Hunter broke open a close game with third-period goals to lead Quebec to its triumph over Buffalo.

Peter Stastny, playing in his first game after sitting out a three-game suspension for bumping an official, and Louis Sleigher scored second-period goals for the Nordiques.

After a scoreless first period, Dave Andreychuk gave the Sabres a 1-0 lead that lasted just 22 seconds before Stastny tied the score. Sleigher's go-ahead goal came at 15:57.

Arlington Heights forfeits three games

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The coach at unbeaten Arlington Heights High School says telling his team they must forfeit three victories for using an ineligible player was one of the toughest things he ever did.

"I feel empty right now," Yellow Jackets Coach Melvin Priddy said afterward. "I let the school down. I let the coaches down. I let the players down. I let the community down."

Forfeiture — the minimum penalty — were ordered by the District 6-5A Executive Committee Tuesday. Priddy broke the news to the team following practice Tuesday.

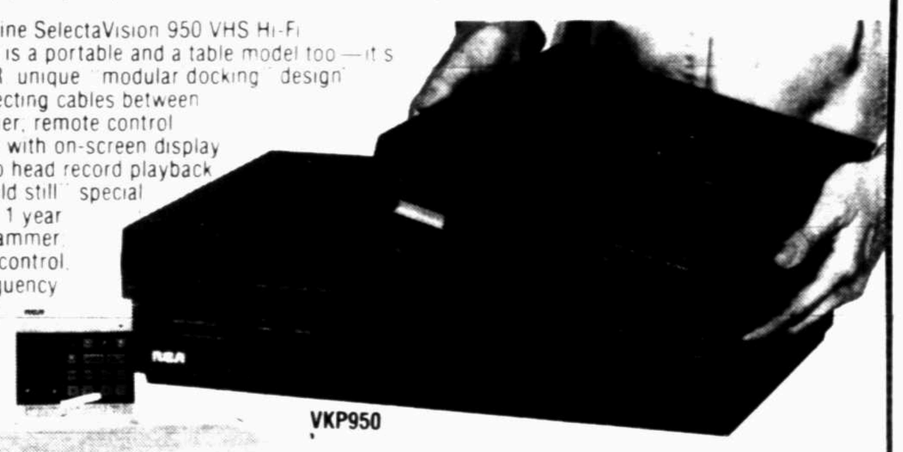

"I'm grateful to the district committee for the type of punishment they handed down," Priddy said.

'Doonesbury's' commentary dropped

Trudeau

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Garry Trudeau's comic strip "Doonesbury," back less than a month after a nearly two-year hiatus, has been dropped by the Wheeling Intelligencer because of its treatment of President Reagan.

"We've had some phone calls wondering what's happened," Editor Tom Briley said Wednesday. The paper dropped the Pulitzer prize-winning comic strip last week. Briley said he didn't know whether it would return after the election.

Recent installments of the comic strip have portrayed God as a Reagan supporter and have shown character Michael Doonesbury registering disbelief at being asked to develop a Reagan ad campaign appealing to black voters.

The decision to drop "Doonesbury" was made by publisher Ogden Nutting, Briley said. Nutting declined comment.

Dali, 80, who also was treated at Pilar Clinic for malnutrition, left the hospital Wednesday, accompanied by painter Antoni Pitxot and a nurse, said clinic sources who spoke on condition they not be identified.

Doctors said two weeks ago that Dali had recovered enough to leave, but the artist reportedly preferred to wait for completion of repairs at Torre Galatea, the house adjoining the Dali Museum in Figueras, his birthplace.

Ruby slippers taken from store

By LESLIE GUEVARRA
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — A wily bandit and his accomplice swiped the ruby-red slippers Judy Garland wore as Dorothy in "The Wizard of Oz" from a novelty shop by feigning interest in movie memorabilia and then pulling a gun.

The audacious robbery occurred at Humpty Dumpty and Sons here.

"It was wicked," said Humpty Dumpty's proprietor, Ted Smith. "I'm really in a state of shock."

The distraught Smith tried to console himself by playing the movie's theme "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" on his store stereo.

He said the two robbers, youths wearing dark-colored clothing, came in out of the pouring rain Tuesday and began browsing through his shop.

It features toys for sale and his own display of collector's items — life-sized wax figures of Dorothy, the Cowardly Lion, Tin Woodman and the Scarecrow, and his cherished slippers — which were not for sale.

The youth, alone in the store with Smith, asked him to let them examine the shimmering red shoes trimmed with leather bows.

When he refused to remove the slippers from their niche — a blue and white gingham pillow within a prim glass-and-wood cabinet — one robber pulled a gun.

"He said, 'You better take them out, boy,'" Smith said.

The bandit grabbed the shoes from him and stuck them in a plain cardboard box, which he apparently had brought with him, Smith said. Then the robbers fled, taking nothing else.

Smith, who began collecting movie and San Francisco memorabilia 16 years ago, bought the shoes for an undisclosed price from a former MGM wardrobe man about a decade ago.

He said a collector once offered $20,000 for the hand-sewn sequin-covered, kidskin-lined pumps in size six, which were one of a half-dozen pairs made for Garland to wear in the movie. But he refused to sell.

"I'm not interested in money," he said. "I don't have insurance on the shoes, and I'm not going to try to make a (monetary) claim on them. I just want them back."

Already depressed because he is closing his year-old shop next month, Smith said the theft is "just knocking me over — first the building is condemned, now this." Smith said he didn't intend to part with any merchandise during his move from the store. But he now plans to sell his wares at bargain prices and possibly some of his own treasures to raise $10,000 as a reward for the stolen slippers.

"I don't think the people who took them are normal," Smith said. "They stole what many people regard as a piece of history. It's blowing my mind."

Judge calls creature claims unbelievable

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — A federal judge has ruled that an artist's claim that film producer George Lucas stole his space creatures in filming "The Empire Strikes Back," is "overwhelmingly unbelievable."

U.S. District Court Judge William Orrick said on Wednesday that evidence presented by artist Lee Seiler of a copyright violation was "unbelievable, often bordering on the incredible...and disturbingly contradictory."

Seiler had sought unspecified damages, injunctive relief, rights over the popular film in the "Star Wars" series and a cut of Lucas' revenues and profits from movie-related paraphernalia, such as costumes and books.

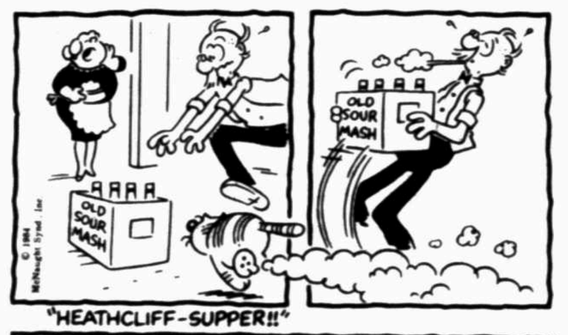

Seiler charged that Lucas had unlawfully used three Garthian Strider extraterrestrial characters the artist said he created in his book "The Garthian Culture."

Seiler said he designed the characters in 1976 and 1977, but he did not copyright them until 1981, 1982 and 1983. "The Empire Strikes Back" was released in 1980.

Seiler said most of his original artwork had been destroyed in 1979 when a house he was building at Boonville, Calif., was flooded.

Because the originals were destroyed, Seiler presented copies and reconstructions of his artwork.

Students move out of basement to center stage

NEW YORK (AP) — It started in 1959 as an after-school project in the basement of a church in Brooklyn's Bedford-Stuyvesant. Today, the Fournier-Grego Performance Center has 450 youngsters learning about theater, dance and music, and has seen its students go on to parts in such Broadway hits as "Sophisticated Ladies," "Eubie" and "The Tap Dance Kid."

"We try to give them a professional environment that will develop skills and allow them to take what they get here in training and discipline and apply it to whatever they choose to go into," said Bob Fournier, executive director of the Brooklyn Heights facility.

The Performance Center celebrates its 25th anniversary this year. Its students attend sessions after school and on Saturdays. Most win scholarships to professional schools, and some have entered such dance companies as Alvin Ailey and Martha Graham.

Actress proves blondes don't have all the fun

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Movie newcomer Deborah Shelton can tell that blondes don't always have more fun.

The brown-haired actress auditioned for a part in Brian De Palma's new thriller, "Body Double." The part called for a blonde, but Miss Shelton got the part.

After that, she auditioned for the part of a hooker on CBS' "Dallas." Again, the script called for a blonde, but she got the part and a three-year contract.

Ron Howard was interested in her for his new film, "Coccoon," but she couldn't return for further auditions because of her "Dallas" commitment.

Dennys McCoy, a spokesman for Miss Shelton, a beauty queen, said she has also received offers to do diet and exercise books, sponsor a line of fashions and open diet and exercise clinics.

6 ♠	Dble	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

Bold bidding can pay off. But you must have skill to land adventurous contracts.

North's jump to four spades over the takeout double has our wholehearted approval. His hand was useless for defense, and it was obvious four spades could not be hurt badly. And the preempt could make it difficult for the opposition to find their best spot. We admire South's imaginative leap to slam. West licked his chops in anticipation of a resounding penalty.

West led the king of hearts, ruffed in the closed hand. Declarer entered dummy with the king of trumps and ruffed another heart. Ace of diamonds and a ruff provided the entry for another heart ruff, and a diamond ruff completed the stripping of the red suits from both declarer's hand and dummy.

The only remaining problem was to hold declarer's club losers to one. Declarer led a low club from the table and, had East carelessly followed with the two, declarer would have ducked and end played West. But East saw the threat and made the excellent defensive play of inserting the nine.

Declarer was about to try the finesse when he noticed that the only low spot missing was the two. If East had that card, the contract was on ice. If West had that card, declarer had to hope that East had started with a bare nine. So declarer ducked the club!

West was forced to win, and he was faced with losing alternatives. A club would be into declarer's A-Q tenace, while a red suit would permit declarer to discard a club from the board while ruffing in his hand. Either way, the slam was secure, and West's magnificent hand had been reduced to naught.

Searchers scour reservation for missing colonel

Ivy

KAYENTA, Ariz. (AP) — Teams of searchers led by Navajo guides struggled through remote Monument Valley in search of a colonel still missing after a B-52 crashed with a blast so bright that a witness 10 miles away said it was "like the sun coming up."

One crew member was killed and five were injured when the bomber, flying a low-level training mission out of Fairchild Air Force Base near Spokane, Wash., scraped a mesa in the Navajo Indian Reservation and exploded, officials said.

A team of Air Force searchers led by Navajo guides searched treacherous terrain Wednesday and found no trace of Col. William L. Ivy, said Maj. Tom Koch, public affairs officer at Kirtland Air Force Base, N.M.

A 21-member investigative team headed by Col. Bob Marquette of Minot Air Force Base, N.D., commander of the Strategic Air Command's 5th Bomb Wing, was to arrive today at Hunt's Mesa, 13 miles northeast of Kayenta, Koch said.

The team was delayed Wednesday in Farmington, N.M., by storms, he said.

Crew members told rescuers lights on the bomber's control panel "went to red" and they bailed out.

One crewman "saw it (the mesa) on the screen and he said to the pilot to come pull it up," said Bill Crowley, who owns a guide service in Kayenta. "He said he heard a crash and thought...it just skimmed the top of the mesa and they was alright, but then at that point somebody yelled eject."

"It happened so fast they were asking each other what happened," said a doctor, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "It sounds like they were flying low, scraped the mesa, tried to bring her up and it burst into flames and they ejected."

Ivy, 43, of Stockton, Calif., had a parachute equipped with a radio locating beacon but was not riding in one of the bomber's six ejector seats, and officials didn't know whether he got out or went down with the plane.

The dead man was identified as Sgt. David W. Felix, 26, of Faribault, Minn., the gunner.

The survivors were picked up by helicopter early Wednesday and flown to San Juan Regional Medical Center at Farmington, where their conditions were listed as good and fair, said spokesman Tim Mercer.

S.D. Saarela, a member of an Air Force ground crew at the site, said the crew had time to prepare for the crash but that finding the parachutes near the wreckage showed "they didn't have much time."

Frank Rodriguez, a tour guide for Monument Valley Navajo Tribal Park, said the B-52 was about 200 feet above the ground, lower than others he'd seen over the park, a frequent training route for low-level missions.

"It was like a sunrise," said Rodriguez, who was four miles from the crash. "Everything was just orange."

"The plane appeared to hit just below the lip of the mesa and explode and raise up to the top of the mesa, where a second explosion occurred. There was a third explosion on top of the mesa," Rodriguez said.

"It was just like the sun coming up," said Dan Benally, a shepherd who saw the explosion from 10 miles away. "It was just a ball of fire."

The wreckage, scattered "on the absolute edge of the mesa...looked like some tin cans tossed by the side of the road," said Roger Burr, a reporter with the Farmington (N.M.) Daily Times who flew over the site.

F-111D fighter slams into hill, killing crewmen

CARRIZOZO, N.M. (AP) — An Air Force F-111D fighter-bomber on a low-level training mission slammed into the side of a rocky hill and exploded, killing its two crewmen, authorities said.

"The biggest piece (of the craft) we could find was maybe a 3-foot-square piece," Lincoln County Chief Deputy Sheriff Charlie Cox said after the crash Wednesday night about 15 miles north of this south-central New Mexico town. "We didn't find any survivors."

The names of the dead crewmen were being withheld until relatives could be notified, said Sgt. Victoria Raun, a public affairs specialist at Cannon Air Force Base. The swing-wing plane was based at Cannon, about 180 miles northeast of the crash site.

The weather was windy with spotty cloudiness when the plane crashed at 7:48 p.m., said Cox.

Gordon Barham, a rancher, said he and his wife, Jan, were sitting in the living room of their trailer home when the plane plowed into foothills two or three miles away.

"I saw a little flame and then a great big ball of fire and then it shook our trailer," he said. "It was a pretty good boom."

The plane "blew up and it's such a rough area that it hit on. There's big boulders on the side of the hill," Barham said. "Parts are scattered out approximately 500 yards.

"The elevation is 6,200 feet here, and I imagine that's the elevation that the plane hit," Barham said.

Dr. Arthur Rudolph, Saturn 5 program officer, right, looks on as Dr. Werner von Braun gestures at a news conference on the Saturn 5 rocket, after its successful flight in November 1967. Rudolph has left the United States forever and renounced U.S. citizenship rather than face Justice Department charges he "worked thousands of slave laborers to death" building Nazi V-2 missiles during World War II. At left is Rocco A. Petrone, launch operations director.

Government reveals 'deal' struck with ex-Nazi

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government kept secret for nearly a year its deal for a leading German rocket scientist to give up his U.S. citizenship instead of facing allegations he worked slave laborers to death building V-2 missiles for the Nazis in World War II.

The Justice Department announced Wednesday that Arthur L.H. Rudolph, who designed the Saturn V rocket which took U.S. astronauts to the moon, left the United States last March. He left on a non-stop flight from San Francisco to West Germany and is barred from ever re-entering the United States.

In accordance with an agreement he signed with the Justice Department in November 1983, Rudolph, now 78, renounced his citizenship at the U.S. consulate in Hamburg, West Germany, on May 25.

Neal M. Sher, head of the department's Office of Special Investigations, which is assigned to hunt Nazi war criminals in this country, said the U.S. government does not know where Rudolph is now. He said Rudolph signed the agreement when shown the evidence the U.S. government had gathered against him during the last several years.

Sher said word of the agreement was held until now "because we didn't want to announce it until the State Department put its final stamp of approval on the renunciation of citizenship." The paperwork on that was only completed a week to 10 days ago, Sher said.

Sher said the U.S. government gave no advance notice of its actions to the West German government because it did not know Rudolph's final destination. "But there are indications that local German officials are aware of what happened to him," Sher said.

West German government offices were closed by the time word of the Justice Department announcement reached Europe.

A close friend and co-worker of the late German rocket chief Wernher von Braun since 1934, Rudolph ultimately became chief coordinator for the Saturn V and supervised its planning, design, production and testing for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

As part of "Operation Paperclip," the U.S. Army secretly had brought Rudolph and 118 other German rocket experts on Von Braun's team to the United States after World War II — at a time when they also were being sought by the Soviet Union.

Sher said that Rudolph served from September 1943 to April 1945 as chief operations director for V-2 missile production at the Mittelwerk (Central Works) underground rocket factory in central Germany and during that time participated in the persecution of forced laborers, including inmates from the Dora-Nordhausen concentration camp.

After 571 British bombers destroyed the Nazis' V-2 factory at Peenemuende on Aug. 17, 1943, Adolf Hitler ordered production resumed at the underground factories in the Harz Mountains.

Former aide testifies there was dispute, not conspiracy

NEW YORK (AP) — A special aide to President Lyndon Johnson, testifying for retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland in the general's libel suit against CBS, said there was a dispute over how to count enemy forces in Vietnam, but no conspiracy to keep estimates low.

Robert W. Komer, who held the rank of ambassador, testified Wednesday in U.S. District Court that it was decided not to include enemy civilians in force estimates because data about their numbers were unreliable.

Komer was the second witness for Westmoreland in the retired general's $120 million lawsuit, which charges a 1982 documentary falsely accused the general of conspiring to undercount enemy troops in order to convince President Lyndon B. Johnson the war was being won.

The broadcast, "The Uncounted Enemy — A Vietnam Deception," said the surprising strength of the January 1968 Tet Offensive was evidence of a plot by military intelligence officials to suppress truthful estimates of enemy troop strength.

Komer countered CBS correspondent Mike Wallace's reporting on two important points:

— That there was a "conspiracy at the highest levels of American military intelligence to suppress and alter critical intelligence on the enemy in the year leading up to the Tet offensive."

— That Westmoreland ordered a military official "not to allow the total (of enemy troops) to go over 300,000."

Bipartisan group studies effectiveness of Constitution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Constitution's 200th birthday is three years away, but a bipartisan group is already studying what changes might be made to improve the way government works in the future.

"We want to find out if it is possible to improve the decision-making process and the accountability of public officials," Lloyd Cutler, counsel to former President Jimmy Carter and co-chairman of the Committee on the Constitutional System, said Wednesday.

While many people blame elected officials, particularly the president, when things go wrong in government, Cutler said, "Some of us have concluded there isn't that much wrong with the people — there is something wrong with the structure."

The 250-member committee, which includes about 150 former and present members of Congress, the Cabinet and the White House, aims to have its recommendations in hand by mid-1985.

That timetable would allow for any possible action by Congress in time for the 1987 bicentennial of the Constitution's signing in Philadelphia.

Besides Cutler, the other co-chairmen are Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., and C. Douglas Dillon, a former Treasury secretary. The committee's members include Pennsylvania Gov. Richard Thornburgh and author James MacGregor Burns.

Lawyer attacks action by FCC head

WASHINGTON (AP) — An attorney challenging the license of a Kansas radio station for airing racial hate programs says the "ideological bent" of the Federal Communications Commission's chairman is preventing agency action.

James M. Weitzman, a Washington attorney who has volunteered his services to residents fighting to take over KTTL-FM in Dodge City, said he was astonished Wednesday when FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler delayed a vote on the license challenge.

The FCC had been expected to formally order a license renewal probe of KTTL during its regular meeting, but postponed action at the last minute. Fowler announced the item had been pulled from the agenda at his request, but offered no further explanation.

It was the second time Fowler had pulled the KTTL case off an FCC agenda.

Weitzman charged Fowler was sidestepping his responsibility to enforce the law.

"We can't help but believe that the chairman's ideological bent is somehow coloring his handling of this matter, because it has now been a year and five months and this commission still hasn't taken any action," said Weitzman.

NATION IN BRIEF

New poll shows Reagan's lead slipping after debate

NEW YORK (AP) — Democratic challenger Walter Mondale has narrowed President Reagan's lead since their first debate but still trails by 12 percentage points, according to a new ABC News-Washington Post poll.

The poll, released Wednesday, gives Reagan a 54 percent to 42 percent lead with 4 percent undecided. In a similar poll conducted before the Oct. 7 presidential debate, Reagan was shown leading Mondale 55 percent to 37 percent, with 8 percent undecided.

The question asked in both surveys was: "Suppose the election were being held today. For whom would you vote: Reagan and Bush, or Mondale and Ferraro?"

On another question, 46 percent of the respondents said after the debate that Mondale had strong leadership qualities compared with 34 percent before.

Reagan was judged to have strong leadership abilities by 69 percent in the early poll, 70 percent in the recent version.

Kennedy data reviewed

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — No more documents from the investigation of David Kennedy's drug-related death will be released until at least Monday, said a judge who planned to meet with prosecutors to review the information.

Caroline Kennedy, the 26-year-old daughter of President John F. Kennedy, on Wednesday denied reports that she might have entered her cousin's room at the Brazilian Court Hotel shortly before he was found dead of an overdose.

A hotel concierge has told police Miss Kennedy "could have" gone into the room where Kennedy died April 25, according to documents Circuit Judge John Borin already has ordered released.

Sect's founder indicted

WARSAW, Ind. (AP) — The founder of a fundamentalist faith-healing sect has been indicted for the first time in connection with the deaths of members who allegedly died because they prayed rather than seek medical attention.

Hobart E. Freeman, who founded the Faith Assembly in the early 1960s, was indicted Wednesday along with James and Ione Menne of Warsaw, whose 15-year-old daughter Pamela died Sept. 16 of chronic kidney failure.

They are charged with reckless homicide, criminal recklessness and neglect of a dependent.

Disney workers to vote

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — About 2,600 maintenance workers at Walt Disney World vote today and Friday on a contract proposal reached after a deadline was extended twice, union officials said.

Details of the three-year pact were not released pending the outcome of ratification voting.

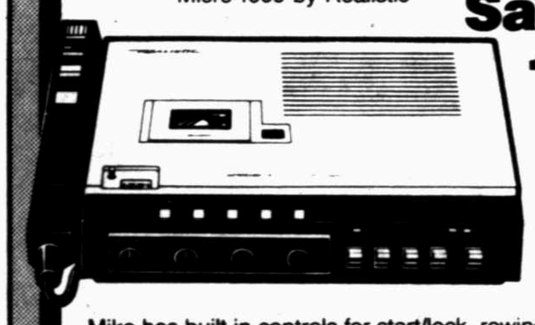

Meanwhile, about 1,800 ride operators, ticket sellers, restaurant workers and janitors at Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif., returned to work Wednesday after accepting a two-year wage freeze and some job security guarantees.

Not all chest pain is angina

Dear Dr. Solomon: Will you please discuss angina and what causes it? If a person gets chest pain, does that mean that he has angina? If not, how does a doctor decide who does and who does not have it? — Allie, Helena, Mont.

Dear Allie: Angina represents an imbalance between the demand for oxygen by the myocardium (a part of the heart) and the supply of oxygen. Angina may be provoked by exercise or by psychological stress, and is relieved by rest.

Not all chest pain indicates angina. Pneumonia and pleurisy, for example, can be associated with chest discomfort, but they do not indicate the presence of angina.

I find in my own patients that their history often reveals the presence of angina. If a patient tells me he gets chest pain when he plays tennis for a while, but that it goes away when he rests, I am at least suspicious of the diagnosis. If a nitroglycerine tablet placed under the tongue also provides relief, I am more certain. An exercise stress test may also help to confirm the diagnosis.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My sister is 54 years old and lives in another city. During a visit wirth her I was surprised to have her tell me that she uses tranquilizers. I don't mean to say that she uses them to excess, but she was the kind of person that never took any medication and this surprised me. Isn't it unusual for someone to start using tranquilizers at that age when she never used them before? — Augie, Houston

Dear Augie: According to the National Institute of Mental Health, about seven of every 10 long-term tranquilizer users are over 50 years of age. In general, the patients that participated in this study did not use tranquilizers so much to cope with emotional problems but because they were experiencing stress or had chronic health problems.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have tried getting involved in a jogging program, but after a while I begin to itch and feel very uncomfortable. Can you suggest something I can do about this? — Eleanor, Augusta, Ga.

Dear Eleanor: Some people have what appears to be an allergic reaction to exercise; it may be manifested as itching, flushing and nausea. I have found in my own patients that antihistamines may help.

Diet 'best medicine' for osteoporosis

By CHARLYN FARGO
Copley News Service

Three days after a trip home from Florida, Ann woke up and couldn't get out of bed. A subsequent X-ray showed a collapsed vertebra.

Six weeks later, she had another fracture. They kept occurring over the next three and a half years. Total: 13.

Diagnosis: Osteoporosis.

"If I would have known several years ago it was preventable, I wouldn't have had it," she said. "It starts when you're 40 and progresses.

"When I had my first baby, the obstetrician told me the baby would take calcium from me, but that didn't mean a thing to me. At that time, doctors didn't know about osteoporosis."

The situation was further complicated by a later hysterectomy. "I didn't drink milk, and they didn't prescribe any (estrogen) hormones during that time."

Doctors since have begun prescribing calcium supplements and sodium fluoride (to harden the bones), but the fluoride has aggravated Ann's ulcer problem. She's also on an estrogen hormone to build bones.

"I tell my three daughters to drink milk, exercise — and, should they have a hysterectomy at 45 like I did, take estrogen.

"They can prevent all this. For me, I know what I've got. I need to know how to live with it."

Some 15 million Americans suffer from osteoporosis, a disorder defined as a reduction in the amount of bone without any changes in its chemical composition. It develops over a lifetime.

Women are eight times more likely to have osteoporosis than men; it strikes one in three white women after menopause and one in four white women over the age of 65. (Caucasian and Oriental women are more susceptible to osteoporosis because they generally have a smaller bone structure and thinner bones than do men or black women.)

"It's a very important public health problem," says Sandra Eardley, a registered dietitian. "We've bred a whole generation of kids who grew up knowing nothing but soda pop and KoolAid."

If Mom didn't push you to drink milk — a great source of calcium and of vitamin D, which helps the body absorb calcium — you may be part of a new generation that faces a critical lack of calcium. And Mom might not have realized that she didn't outgrow the need for calcium, either.

"Everyone still thinks one of the things you normally expect when you get older is brittle bones," says Mary Kolb, nutritionist with the American Dairy Council of Illinois. "In most cases, it's preventable."

As the U.S. population lives longer, it's anticipated that the significance of osteoporosis as a public health problem will become greater for an increasing number of people.

Several recent government surveys reveal that substantial segments of the U.S. population, in particular women age 12 and older, have calcium intakes below the recommended daily allowances.

One study by the Public Health Service of the Department of Health and Human Services found that, during the years of peak bone mass development, ages 18 to 30, more than 66 percent of all U.S. women fail to consume recommended amounts of calcium. After age 35, the percentage increases to 75 percent.

In a study cited by Dr. Louis Avioli, director of the division of bone and mineral metabolism at Washington University School of Medicine, 17.9 percent of 290 women tested between the ages of 45 and 49 had osteoporosis. Of 514 women between the ages of 55 and 59, more than 57 percent had osteoporosis.

Those at greater risk are:

Caucasian and Oriental women.

Light-skinned, fair-haired women.

Women with especially small or thin skeletons.

Women who didn't eat enough calcium-rich foods when they were pregnant or breast-feeding infants.

Smokers.

Women with sedentary lifestyles.

People who lead stressful lives. During times of tension, grief, anxiety and illness, the body absorbs less calcium.

Osteoporosis usually occurs after menopause, when loss of estrogen accelerates calcium loss in the body. A woman who has had her ovaries removed increases her chances of getting osteoporosis to 50 percent. A lack of estrogen seems to increase the breakdown of bone tissue. A woman who has not had children also is at greater risk of developing osteoporosis.

Symptoms include back pain, loss of as much as five to eight inches in height, tooth loss, hip fractures and curvature of the spine.

It is not a new disease, however.

"It's just that other problems, like cancer and heart disease, involved a greater portion of people," Eardley said. "And there hasn't been much research until recently. Much of the results of the past few years are just now being published, so we've become more aware of the problem. As young medical physicians get out into communities, they're looking for it."

But it's not easily detected. While the disease begins between age 30 and 35, it isn't usually discovered until age 60.

"You can't tell in an X ray until 25 percent to 40 percent of the bone mass is gone — then you're considered a risk," said Kolb, the dairy council nutritionist.

A recent issue of Nutrition News says, "There are still no biochemical techniques for calcium-status assessment, and measurements of bone mineralization are insensitive to short-term deficits in calcium adequacy."

Further complicating the process is that calcium absorption is affected by so many other things, including fiber in the diet, protein and alcohol consumption, age, pregnancy, disease, calcium and vitamin D status, and lactation.

The best prevention? A calcium-rich diet and exercise.

Dreamers' hearts stop during test

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON — Some sudden deaths during sleep may be explained by the discovery that some people's hearts stop beating for up to nine seconds during dreams, according to a study published today.

"I don't think this is a frequent phenomenon, and I don't think one could conclude that sleeping is in any way dangerous to your health," said Dr. Anne M. Gillis, who participated in the research appearing in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The researchers could find no reason for the pauses of up to nine seconds, and it was uncertain whether the stoppages can cause people to die in their sleep, said Ms. Gillis, a researcher at Stanford University.

But, she said, "It is possible that in a very small percentage of patients, this type of phenomenon could cause a serious cardiac event, like sudden death."

The researchers found the heart pauses in four people ranging in age from 27 to 35 who had sought medical help for vague chest symptoms, such as mild pain and palpitations.

The results of ordinary electrocardiograms were normal. But when the four were attached to heart monitors around the clock, they found their hearts stopped beating a few times a night.

Their heart beats and brain waves were compared, and it turned out that the interruptions occurred only during rapid eye movement, or REM, sleep. This is the period of dream sleep when people's eyes dart about as though they are watching a dream.

In all, the four people were monitored for a total of 11 nights. During this time, there were 42 episodes of heart stoppage lasting more than two seconds and seven longer than five seconds with the longest lasting nine seconds.

In an editorial accompanying the report, Dr. Leonard A. Cobb of Harborview Medical Center in Seattle said the four cases "appear to be medical curiosities, and it seems unlikely that these observations have immediate relevance to the huge number of persons at risk of sudden cardiac death."

However, he added that the pauses "could conceivably be implicated in at least some instances of nocturnal cardiac arrest."

The four people studied in the research directed by Dr. Christian Guilleminault were either physicians or paramedics, and Ms. Gillis said this probably had something do with the discovery of their conditions.

"They may have had a more extensive evaluation than the average individual, just because it was thought that they would need that additional reassurance," she said.

Two of them also complained of fainting after being awakened during the night, and one had occasional lightheadedness. These three eventually were given pacemakers to keep their hearts from beating too slowly.

Two of these people have been followed for several years. Their fainting and dizziness has stopped, but they still have abnormal heart rhythms.

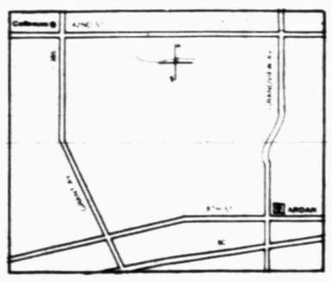

Why their hearts stop is a mystery. However, the researchers speculate that the episodes could result from some abnormality of the parasympathetic nervous system, which slows the heart during sleep.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Museum changes Sunday hours

The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum will open on a one-time basis at noon Sunday as opposed to the regular 2 p.m. opening. Closing will remain at 5 p.m.

"We're just trying to see if by opening two hours earlier on Sundays we can expand our service to the community," said Ed Rowland, the museum's director. "We would only consider a permanent change if there was sufficient public response."

The Petroleum Museum is a contemporary museum devoted to the oil industry and the history of West Texas. The museum opened in September 1975 and expanded with an additional wing in November 1981.

In addition to its regular exhibit, the facility features a program of temporary exhibits. The current temporary exhibit is "Tumbling Tumbleweeds," the story of Texas' "favorite" vegetation in photographs, informational panels and music.

Located at 1500 Interstate 20, the museum's other operating times are Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Local photographer's works chosen

GREEN BAY, WIS. — M. Andrews of Midland and Luther Smith of Fort Worth are among 39 photographers from 15 states whose work was selected for the Midwest Photography Invitational II Exhibit at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay.

"The current show, which drew 564 entries by 94 artists around the country, may be regarded as national in scope but with a Midwest regional focus," said Karon Winzenz, curator of arts at UW-Green Bay. Juror for the show was Jerry Dell, associate professor of communication and the arts and photography at the university.

The exhibition will hang through Nov. 11. Starting in January, most pieces in the show will go on tour to campuses and community galleries in Minnesota, South Dakota, Iowa, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio and Wisconsin.

Club stages 'mock war night'

NEW YORK (AP) — The 30 Marines who went into Area the other night were a bit bewildered.

They didn't expect to see tanks in the middle of the dance floor and missiles suspended from the ceiling of the Manhattan night spot.

And they were really confused by the people dressed up as terrorists. But it was all in off-beat fun as the celebrity-filled club put on a mock war night.

Show leaves audience wondering about size of actresses' closets

By GUS STEVENS

ENTERTAINMENT

HOLLYWOOD — Now we know why Lynda Carter and Loni Anderson decided to return to series television as a team. So they could have their own fashion show. Stylish and expensive, they dash around the Bay area, solving crimes and rattling off lines to match their cuteness.

Wonder Woman and the slinky receptionist from "WKRP" had been out of steady work for a couple of years, although each has from time to time appeared in made-for-television movies and, in the case of Miss Carter, in her own specials.

These women, who claim to be great pals on and off the screen, said that they jumped at the chance to appear together. A viewer might presume that they were anxious to further their careers by accepting roles that could force them to stretch their talents.

But the only thing they're stretching is their credibility as they climb into one De la Renta outfit after another while they play private-eye fashion plates.

People once believed that Superman was the world champion at changing outfits in the twinkling of an eye. In "Partners in Crime," the ladies have a non-peek Gucci phone booth on every block so that during their Saturday night hour on NBC their outfits are magically different minute by minute.

In one episode, there were so many wardrobes coming out of the closet that I had trouble telling the outfits of the good guys from the outfits of the bad guys. In the old westerns you always knew.

This show featured Vanessa Williams as a guest, playing a rock singer on tour in San Francisco. Miss Williams, who stepped out from under her Miss America crown last summer because a photographer who was not a gentleman took advantage of her, meets the Bay area press as she gets off the plane.

"You think the earthquake shook San Francisco?" she says to a reporter. "Come and see me in concert and I'll show you what shakin' is all about." Is that class or what?

But wait. A character in a three-piece white suit, white felt hat, white mustache and white eyebrows, is following her. He's forever leering and drawing a switch-blade across his throat as she stares helplessly. Whitey should be easy to pick out in a crowd, but Miss Williams' bodyguards never can nab him.

Then Miss Williams' manager also shows up in a three-piece white suit, which leads me to think he might be the bad guy, except that I know he can't be. I'm getting lost in men's apparel.

Then Miss Carter appears in a white suit, white hat and carrying a white bag. Maybe she's the villain. Impossible, because it's her series. The thread of an already-confusing story line by Halston is fraying.

Early in the hour Miss Carter swishes about in a gray turtleneck, gray pants, gray cape, gray felt hat, gray bag and gray shoes. Perhaps her gun was designer gray, but she didn't take it out of her bag.

In the following scene Miss Carter is resplendent in a black suit, black hat and black bag, no doubt because she's going to a funeral.

After the funeral she is wearing a red uniform, posing as a hotel maid so she can check out a suspect's bedroom. Nothing much happens in the hotel room except that the assistant manager barges in and scolds her for shirking. Those who shop at Gump's do not do beds.

For their night at the Geary Theater, Miss Carter is back in basic black, looking basically smashing. She's much faster at changing clothes than Miss Anderson, but then Miss Anderson usually is carrying her bass fiddle.

When the two women relax at home to recap their kicky adventures, Miss Carter is in yet another black outfit while Miss Anderson wears red.

Sophia Loren turns 50 without regret

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

It is not easy to define just when the sexy starlet becomes an actress, becomes a superstar, becomes an international institution. But it does happen.

Sophia Loren, who has never bothered to be coy about her age — the birthday has been in the almanacs, unchanged, for years — turned 50 on Sept. 20 without a wince or a regret, which is presumably not too hard even in an age-conscious civilization, if you look like Sophia Loren.

Tan, fit, her face unlined and without the help of cosmetic surgery, Loren looks younger than she is, although the sexy, earthy excitement of the early years has evolved into a regal but lively beauty.

Memory, baffled, says that she has held star status for so long she must be more than 50. The confusion may arise because in her most memorable film, Vittorio De Sica's "Two Women" from 1961, she played a mother in wartime Italy. She played her so powerfully and well (receiving an Oscar) and for a director who was one of the founding spirits of the early postwar Neo-realist era in Italian cinema, that it takes a moment to realize she was not yet even a teen-ager when World War II ended.

Sophia Loren

By now she is an authentic institution, in the way film stars of great magnitude become institutions. She has published an autobiography and played her own mother in a television biography of herself. Now she is on the road promoting a book she has written (with Kathy Matthews) called "Women and Beauty" (Morrow).

SHE OFFERS some predictable specifics on makeup, dress and diet (including the encourging word that pasta may not only not be fattening but may be an aid to thinning). But the most interesting and earnest passages are aimed at the emotional and mental aspects of beauty.

The most startling revelation, on what is a fairly limited scale, is that she likes to stay up late eating junk food and playing poker and Scrabble, cheating at the former and preferring the latter.

"Poker is all cheating, isn't it?" she noted philosophically. "You have to be a good cheat at poker. I sometimes make it very well."

She plays Scrabble in English, having learned it in English and finding it less fun in Italian. She confounds her opponents, she says, by knowing the Italian and Latin roots of obscure words which, on challenge prove to be in the dictionary. She defeated Richard Burton often, and Peter O'Toole, who was a bad loser. "When I am making a big smash, triple score this and double that, Peter would mess up the whole table."

She recently filmed, in Italy but in English, a television movie for NBC called "Aurora," which will air Monday and then play theatrically elsewhere in the world. She is a mother on a desperate quest to locate her son's father to underwrite an expensive operation the boy needs to save his sight. Loren's own younger son, Eduardo, who is 11, plays the boy.

"HE'S ALWAYS wanted to be an actor and he sees all the movies. I thought he'd calm down after doing the film and would see the hard work it is. But he is more passionate than ever."

Loren and her husband, Carlo Ponti, developed the project themselves and took it to the network. The scrips that arrive unbidden are rarely very inviting, she says. "And if there's nothing I want to do, I prefer to stay home with my children."

It is not an easy time in the Italian cinema; the glory days are over and she notes with sadness that fewer Italian films reach the United States and fewer still do much business. "Even Fellini does not have a success here as he used to, but he is such a genius."

Loren remains fiercely proud of "A Countess From Hong Kong," Charlie Chaplin's last film, in which she co-starred with Marlon Brando and Chaplin's son Sydney. "I still think it's a lovely film," she says. "The critics were wrong to be so unkind to it. It is often on television and each time I see it I appreciate all the grace and elegance of it, just what you could expect from Charlie Chaplin. Maybe it's even better on the little screen. It is an intimate film."

Like most true film stars, Loren has survived the cruelest tests of all, bad and gaudy films in which she was cinched up, dolled up and used more as decor and decolletage than as a warm and sensitive actress. But she proved — as early as "Two Women" — that she was intelligent as well as handsome, and in "A Special Day" in 1977, co-starring with her old friend Marcello Mastroianni in another wartime drama and playing against her beauty as a defeated housewife, she made clear again that she is a performer of considerable range.

SHE HAS occasionally in recent years seemed to be more in the news than on the screen and the trauma of the 19 days she spent in a women's prison in Italy in 1982 has not faded.

"They were the worst days of my life. I had to do it; it was the only way I could come back to Italy to see my mother and my sister ever again.

Sleeping on airplanes key to success

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Allan Carr, who has produced such hits as the film "Grease" and the Broadway musical "La Cage aux Folles," likes to reveal the key to his success.

"I know how to sleep on airplanes," he said. "That's my greatest asset."

It's a necessity because Carr, who has four residences in Beverly Hills and Malibu, Calif., Honolulu and New York, travels a lot.

He keeps a telephone at hand, barking into it intermittently while answering an interviewer's questions. "I'm a Gemini and I can do three things at once," he said.

Indeed he can.

At the moment, Carr is co-producing a New York appearance by the Royal Shakespeare Company, working on a film called "Silence" and is looking ahead to a Christmas 1985 opening for "La Cage aux Folles" in London and a 1988-89 musical to be developed for opera star Placido Domingo.

He's also supervising arrangements for a national tour of "La Cage aux Folles," beginning Dec. 11 in New Orleans. The Tony Award-winning musical opened at the Pantages Theater in Hollywood last month.

Carr doesn't have much time to enjoy the amenities at his Beverly Hills home, which was built by film producer David O. Selznick for Ingrid Bergman and which Carr has equipped with a video room, game room, wine cellar and private disco.

But he does use the weight room, and has hired two exercise trainers to help him combat a weight problem. "A Gemini has to have two of everything because I could talk one of them out of it," he said.

Carr, 42, originally wanted to become a columnist. His inspiraton was Walter Winchell, whom he met when he was 11 during a family vacation in Miami Beach.

"I just started to talk to him. I knew who he was," said Carr, who found himself 20 years later occupying a penthouse apartment that had once been Winchell's.

As a teen-ager in Highland Park, Ill., Carr saved money from after-school jobs and invested in plays. "In those days I could invest $750. The least a person could invest in 'La Cage' was $25,000," he said.

He picked hits, including "Auntie Mame" and "The Happiest Millionaire."

"Nobody could believe I had invested money in these shows and I was only a junior or senior in high school," he said.

After studying at Lake Forest College and Northwestern University, Carr went into show business full time.

Along the way, he's been an impresario, a promoter, a screenwriter — he co-authored "Grease" — and a personal manager for such stars as Peter Sellers and Ann-Margret.

He was named "Producer of the Year" in 1978 by the National Association of Theater Owners. His last movie project was "Where the Boys Are."

With his eye for hits, Carr bought the musical rights to the play "La Cage aux Folles" before the film became an international hit. And he acquired film rights to "Grease" at a time when no one else wanted it, he said.

Carr said he picks hits by "instinct and feeling." He also attends public screenings around the country to gauge the public's taste.

"If you do just what you want, you're a dilettante," he said.

As a producer, his job includes selecting plays or books to adapt, buying the rights and obtaining financing from banks, private investors and corporations.

Nobody ever had a better time getting even.
