Pick your sound

While much of the nation is just getting around to discovering country music, West Texans have long been fans of "the Nashville sound."

Country superstar George Strait has set a stop on his national tour for March 28 in the Ector County Coliseum, while Wynonna Judd has selected Midland's Chaparral Center as the site for her solo debut concert on April 2.

Both artists have been responsible for dozens of hits, but which are your favorites?

Would you rather make "Amarillo by Morning"? Or, is "The Chair" more your speed?

Was Wynonna on target when she sang "Mama, He's Crazy"? Or is your sentiment "Love Can Build a Bridge"?

The Cityline COMMUNITY PULSE wants to know. Call 560-2400 and select category 1890 to express your opinion on your favorite song by each artist.

One free call to the COMMUNITY PULSE will allow you to vote twice — once for each singer, as well as leave a brief comment about either artist.

This special survey will remain open until Thursday, and results of your calls will be tallied and reported in Friday's edition of the Reporter-Telegram.

City's jobless rate

Midland's unemployment rate was unchanged from January to February, according to statistics released Tuesday by the Texas Employment Commission. Still, the rate remained at levels not seen since approximately four years ago, in the aftermath of the 1986 collapse in oil prices. The TEC put the Tall City's unemployment rate at 7.1 percent, unchanged from February. /1B

'Rock' figure dies

CLOVIS, N.M. — Services are scheduled Thursday for Vi Petty, who with her husband Norman founded the studio where Buddy Holly and Roy Orbison recorded their early songs. Mrs. Petty, 63, died Sunday of liver failure at Clovis High Plains Hospital. She had been in critical condition for 5½ weeks following complications from ulcer surgery. The Pettys gained national fame in the late 1950s and early 1960s when they opened the Norman Petty Seventh Street Recording Studio in Clovis.

City's Mobil operation survives national cuts

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

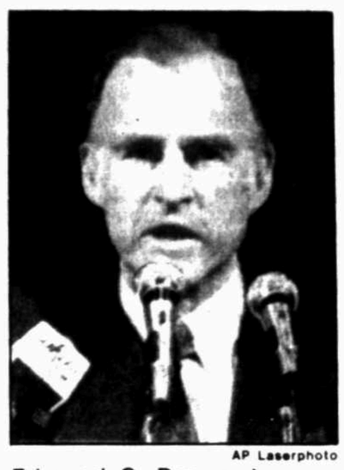

Mobil's Midland office has survived a radical restructuring plan by the oil company.

Mobil Exploration and Producing U.S. Inc. announced Tuesday it will reduce its domestic work force by 23 percent and close two offices, but said Midland will be one of four remaining producing regions, along with Bakersfield, Calif., Houston, Liberal, Kan., and New Orleans.

Regional producing offices to be closed are Denver and Oklahoma City.

Mobil, the largest producer of oil in Oklahoma, will transfer

Brown scores startling upset win over Clinton

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Challenger Jerry Brown scored a startling upset over Bill Clinton in the Connecticut presidential primary Tuesday night to slow the front-runner's march toward the Democratic nomination.

President Bush swept to Republican victory over dormant rival Patrick Buchanan and the nagging protest vote. He said the victory added to his optimism in "a screwy year."

The Democratic verdict, a 2-point victory for Brown, surprisingly stalled the Clinton campaign despite the Arkansas governor's claim that he'd expected a tight contest.

Turnout was low in the three-man count: Brown, 37 percent, Clinton 35 percent and former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas, who quit the campaign, 20

State slaps dust notice on Airpark

■ FAA to meet with Texas Air Control Board to remedy the situation, Airports Director Ken Day says.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Midland Airpark has been cited by the Texas Air Control Board for violation of the Texas Clean Air Act.

Airports Director Ken Day said the Federal Aviation Administration would intervene in the problem — generated by blowing dust as a result of a federally mandated mesquite-clearing project.

Recent clearing of vegetation at the facility coupled with high winds stirred up dust that annoys neighbors and drivers in the area. According to a letter to Airports Director Ken Day dated March 19, an inspection determined that Airpark's dust was creating "nuisance air pollution."

On that day, however, Day said the National Weather Service had issued a high winds warning and advised of blowing dust. He said the dust problem is an unfortunate situation that had "gotten way out of hand."

Now the situation will be handled by the two agencies, Day said.

He said the day a violation was recorded had unusual conditions, and that inspectors had visited Airpark one week before the violation and found nothing wrong.

Evening council meeting's a hit

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Boy Scouts, candidates for public office and eight people from one southeast Midland neighborhood were among the audience at the City Council's meeting Tuesday.

The approximately 90 attendees, a figure provided by Rick Menchaca, assistant to the city manager, topped the capacity of the council chambers at City Hall — although department heads were included in the count. The chambers, built in 1966, seat about 50 spectators.

Beginning at 6 p.m., the meeting moved to Midland Center where chairs for 150 were assembled. Evening meetings are expected to continue, one at the end of each quarter for an indefinite period of time. The plan is an experiment to determine if more residents would attend than during the day.

Although special meetings occasionally are held on evenings, most regular council meetings begin at 10 a.m. Some city dwellers had complained they couldn't attend because of their jobs.

"Acoustics were not the best," said City Secretary Bill Clanton of the room.

Ex-Midlander wins lotto logo contest

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A Midland native and former Reporter-Telegram employee is the first cash prize winner in the new state lottery.

No, lottery tickets are not yet on sale, and the scratch-off instant-winner versions of the tickets won't be ready for retailers until May. But Suzan Holten already has won $1,000 by designing the logo that will identify, market and promote almost everything associated with the Texas lottery.

A panel of celebrity judges picked Ms. Holten's design last Thursday as the winner from public entries. Her design was one of 16 finalists from more than 2,000 entries received in the Texas Lottery Logo Contest.

The same panel of judges also rated Ms. Holten's logo — a hand tossing a cowboy hat into the air amid a background of confetti and ribbons — against the official entry by the lottery's advertising agency, GSD&M of Austin. GSD&M's design consisted of a red star shooting across a blue Texas sky.

The final vote was kept secret until Tuesday, when Comptroller John Sharp announced Ms. Holten was the winner of the Great Lottery Logo Shoot-Out.

Ms. Holten, who now lives in Carrollton, was on hand to receive a $1,000 check from Sharp.

Ms. Holten, formerly Suzan Pervinsek, joined the Reporter-Telegram in March 1984, where she met her husband, Matthew Holten. In fact, she was succeeding percent.

PRIMARY: Voters also deliver message to Bush

The Connecticut upset instantly raised the stakes in the New York primary, the next major contest, two weeks away. Clinton can't afford more trouble there.

Clinton called Connecticut "a small setback." Brown described it as "a shocking upset" that would propel his anti-establishment campaign. He said Clinton doesn't own the Democratic nomination, the people do.

Brown said he'd won Connecticut because "people want change, I'm a vehicle for that. ..."

"This thing is now coming to New York and this will be the battle of where the party's going," Brown said in New York.

Brown said he'd been doubted, ignored and ridiculed for his anti-establishment campaign, but "it's going to grow, there's a momentum." He took the victory occasion to get in another televised plug for $100 pledges to his toll-free, fund-raising 800-number.

For all that, Clinton still holds a commanding delegate lead of more than 6 to 1 over Brown. He was winning 22 delegates to Brown's 21 in Connecticut, under an apportionment system based on congressional district vote shares. Tsongas took 10.

Democratic National Chairman Ronald Brown said Clinton is still on track toward the nomination. "It's not over 'til it's over, but I don't see anything in the results today that dislodges Bill Clinton from what appears to be a path toward the nomination," Brown said.

"We had a small setback in Connecticut tonight," Clinton told a New York City rally. "What it tells us is that the people of this country do not want this process to be over and we don't want it to be over, either."

He said he'd always expected the competition to go on until June 2, when New Jersey and California hold the last major primaries.

Clinton's remarks put the best face on the unexpected outcome, but the mission of any presidential campaign is to foreclose the process by winning it as swiftly as possible.

Brown, asked whether he had slowed Clinton's campaign, said, "The people have slowed it down."

With 99 percent of the precincts counted in the Democratic primary, it was:

Brown 62,718 or 37 percent.

Clinton 59,569 or 35 percent.

Tsongas 33,131 or 20 percent.

At home in Lowell, Mass., Tsongas said his share of the vote was a product of momentum and a validation of his message of economic realism. "It shows you what happens when I don't campaign," he joked. "I think next time I won't run."

In the Republican primary, the outcome was:

Bush 64,812 or 67 percent.

Buchanan 21,524 or 22 percent.

Nine percent was uncommitted, 2 percent for David Duke.

Bush said his "impressive victory" came from voters who understood that a president has to make difficult decisions, even when they hurt. "Cutting spending is a tough call, especially in a state where the economy is hurting," Bush said. One of his cuts was a submarine contract that accounts for thousands of jobs in Connecticut, a program Clinton supports.

He telephoned his thanks to about 50 campaign workers at a hotel outside Hartford. "I'm pleased with the results," Bush said. "This is a screwy year. Frankly, I'm much more optimistic now. The economy is starting to move and if it hasn't already, I hope it soon begins moving up there in Connecticut."

Buchanan said the Democratic decision showed that "Clinton is a weak candidate" and that the voters want to keep the debate open. "We're going to try to keep it open on the Republican side," he said. Buchanan had put his campaign on hold but said he intends to keep it going until the California primary.

Network surveys of voters leaving the polls showed more than half of the Democrats were dissatisfied with the two surviving candidates. About 55 percent of Connecticut voters said they would like to see someone else enter the race.

Roughly half the Democratic voters in the state did not believe Clinton "had the honesty and integrity" to be president, and 71 percent of the Democrats said they agree with Brown's anti-politics message.

Among Republicans, 41 percent disapproved of Bush's job performance.

WILDFLOWERS: Touring 'is a big thing nowadays'

(From 1A)

brushes, purple wild verbena, pink and yellow primroses, maroon and gold Mexican hat, red and yellow Indian blanket and yellow black-eyed Susans, to name a few.

In years past, the springtime sights of wildflowers were one of the best-kept secrets in Texas. People outside the Lone Star State bought into the misconception, fostered by Hollywood Westerns, that Texas was a flat desert with only an occasional cactus or tumbleweed.

The tourism industry is changing that. Word is getting out that Texas in the spring is a real-life scene from Walt Disney's "Fantasia," with wildflowers of every hue nodding their pretty heads in the countryside.

"Wildflower touring is a big thing nowadays," said Helen Havelka of the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation's Waco office. "We always get calls every spring from people wanting to know where the wildflowers are."

This year, the entire state will be accommodating wildflower watchers.

Travel counselors advise callers on where to see the best patches of blooms. The computerized file is updated weekly.

In addition, some counties are touting their own wildflower trails. Washington County, which includes Brenham, has its own hot line — (409) 836-3695, said Beth Anderson, a resource botanist with the National Wildflower Research Center in Austin.

The Austin area also will have a wildflower hot line, (512) 832-7125, according to the highway department. Callers will hear a taped recording of the best spots to see wildflowers there. The Highland Lakes Bluebonnet trails will be the first two weekends in April.

The National Wildflower Research Center, 2600 FM 973 North in Austin, is open for tours of blooming meadows and prairies. From April 4 until May 10, the center will open weekends from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. in addition to its regular weekday hours, 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

The center's Wildflower Days Festival is April 11 and 12. Events will include botanist-guided wildflower walks, lectures, gardening information and entertainment activities. Admission is a suggested $2 donation.

Anderson said wildflower plants and seeds will be sold to those wanting to take home some blooms. She said since many wildflowers are endangered species, it's best not to pick them. Instead, try growing them yourself — or simply take a picture.

For more information, call the wildflower research center at (512) 929-3600.

According to the Texas Department of Commerce's tourism division, there are more than a half dozen wildflower trails and tours being sponsored throughout April. Tourists may call the sponsors for further information.

Among them:

- Wildflower Fields on Tour, Eagle Lake in Southeast Texas, (409) 234-7353.
- Bluebonnet Backroads Tour, Colorado in South Texas, (409) 732-8385.
- Lanes & Byways Wildflower Celebration, DeWitt County in South Texas, (512) 275-5622.
- Fayette County Wildflower Trails, Fayette County in South Central Texas, (409) 968-5756.
- Bluebonnet Trails, Washington in Southeast Texas, (409) 836-3695.
- Spring Trails, Winnsboro in Northeast Texas, (903) 342-3666.
- Garden Gate Wildlife Trail, Yoakum in South Texas, (512) 293-6455.

In most areas throughout Texas, bluebonnets have begun to make tops, according to highway department reports. It seems to be early for wildflowers statewide, especially in North Texas, but some yellow and purple species are being reported along roadsides. Redbud and dogwood trees in East Texas and yucca plants in the south and west regions of the state also have been spotted.

Anderson said the bluebonnets and other wildflowers in the southern part of the state have had a head start over those in the Waco area. "It's looking real good going south of Austin, down to Corpus Christi, and around San Antonio and the valley," she said. In those areas, bluebonnets, Indian paintbrushes, spider lilies, spiderworts and some daisies are among the flowers now in bloom.

Frocks are out in East Texas, while bluebonnets and paintbrushes abound in the Highland Lakes area, Anderson said.

Out in the western parts of Texas, in Lubbock County, henbit is blooming. "It looks like a purple carpet," the highway department report says.

Redbud trees are in bloom around Paris in East Texas, while the Tyler district office reports both dogwoods and redbuds in bloom. South Hill Country locations in and around San Antonio report a green lush spring, with redbud, mountain laurel, acacia and huisache trees in full bloom.

What effect did the unusually rainy winter have on the wildflower crop?

"Bluebonnets in areas that are low-lying or where the soil is oversaturated in water won't be looking as good," Anderson said. "But in well-drained areas, such as the Highland Lakes, it looks like it will be a good year for bluebonnets."

She said the rainy weather may produce an unusual year.

Matthew as editorial artist. He later rejoined the Reporter-Telegram.

The Holtens left Midland in March 1988 for Carrollton, where they work for a graphics company, Information Retrieval Methods.

Winning a logo contest isn't new to Holten. She won the city of Midland's Centennial Logo Contest in 1985.

In designing the lottery logo, Ms. Holten said she and her husband were looking for Texas symbols, and "Texans celebrate by throwing up their hat in a crowd."

Ms. Holten admitted she never expected to win "in a million years" and added that "I'm sure my hometown of Midland will be proud of me and my new hometown of Carrollton will be proud of me."

She also confessed she did not vote in the election on allowing a state lottery. But, she said, "I knew it would pass."

When asked what she would do with the money, Ms. Holten said she might buy a lottery ticket. She also said she wanted to buy some new software that would allow her to do a better job on graphics, "buy some things around the house that I haven't been able to," and donate some to charity.

Former Dallas Cowboy running back Tony Dorsett led the panel of judges, which also included Gary Wilcox, chairman of the advertising department at the University of Texas at Austin; Austin pianist and blues singer Marcia Ball; Sandria Hu, professor of art at the University of Houston; Jimmy Jalapenno, an Austin artist and National Endowment for the Arts fellowship recipient; Austin graphics designer Bob Korba; and Austin-based TV reporter Ken Capps of KDFW-TV in Dallas.

DUST: Residents' complaints spark inspection

and grubbing, funded mostly by an FAA grant, are necessary for airplane safety. Mesquite around runways needs to be cut to ensure that airplanes with trouble have a clear view, they said.

"This is a short-term problem that will relieve long-term safety issues," Day said. "Everything was done according to federal guidelines."

Day must submit a response to the violation notice by April 3, but said representatives of the FAA will meet with those of the TACB to remedy the situation. He said penalties and fines — possible results of an air-quality violation — are not expected in this circumstance.

Citizen complaints sparked the inspection, according to the letter. Saddle Club South resident Don Book acknowledges that he is one of the complainants, but said there are others.

"It's terrible," Book said Tuesday. He said he's certain the dust is a health hazard, not just a nuisance.

Book asked the Midland City Council Tuesday to make changes to be sure the situation did not occur again. Council members said they planned to respond to the problem, but only Tuesday had been made aware of the situation. Day said later he had just received the letter.

Engineers estimate the project includes clearing of about 100 of Airpark's 500 acres.

"It's got to be more than that," Book said. Mesquite should have been cut yearly, he said, not left to grow to dangerous levels.

But airport staffers have said grass already is growing on the loose dirt, expected to hold it in place.

"What was management doing the last five years while the mesquite was growing?" Book said. "Something should have been done each year, ongoing, to avoid this."

responsibilities for the Oklahoma City office to its Houston office.

When the Denver office is closed, responsibility for Colorado and southeast Utah will be transferred to Midland, but Mobil spokesman Darlene Taylor said that would not necessarily guarantee more Mobil employees would be moving to Midalnd.

"It's too early to know the bottom line," Ms. Taylor said. "We will not know that until employees have had an opportunity to respond to an enhanced voluntarily separation package."

She said employees have 15 days to decide upon the separation package and, following that, Mobil will look at excesses and needs at various locations to determine how many employees will be needed where. Final determinations on employee locations are expected to be completed by early May. After that, the physical process of transfers will begin.

Ms. Taylor said the cuts will bring Mobil's domestic exploration and production group's staff to about 3,200 nationwide. Approximately 973 are expected to be cut.

"One thing is certain," Ms. Taylor said, "Midland will remain a major base of operations for Mobil in the U.S." She said Midland would retain two producing units and a technical team. The extent of responsibility of the Midland office will cover West Texas, New Mexico, Colorado and southeast Utah.

Managers of the new producing regions already have been selected and will help in the employee selection process.

In other consolidation moves, exploration offices at Houston and New Orleans will be transferred to Dallas, headquarters of MEPUS.

In a news release, Mobil said: "Our objective (in the restructuring) is to be equal to or better than the best of our competitors by focusing most of our capital and people on core fields."

PLIGHT: Port Arthur today underlines fate of blue-collar worker

(From 1A)

down-and-out corner of what is still called the "Golden Triangle."

Once, not too many years ago, good jobs with a secure future were abundant here. Port Arthur — home to the Chevron, Texaco and Fina refineries — was a shining star in the Gulf Coast petro belt.

Fathers worked, then handed their jobs on to their sons. A refinery worker with a few years' experience could expect to pull down about $40,000 — plus benefits.

That was then.

Now, unemployment stands at 14.5 percent. In the early 1980s, ship building and repair came to a near standstill. In the middle of the decade, Texaco laid off half its workers. Now — just as perennial civic boosters hint of better times ahead — Chevron has announced it will cut its 1,900-person Port Arthur workforce by 700.

Much has been written of the changing world of American blue collar laborers; of how this time, jobs lost won't return — a sad truth realized by thousands of petroleum workers.

Many former refinery jobs are now performed by contract workers, who earn a fraction of the pay and receive few benefits.

"You get one benefit — a paycheck every week," said millwright Roy Owers, 49. Once he earned $17 an hour. Now he makes $10 to $12.

Today, 17,300 Golden Triangle residents are hunting jobs.

"Oh, I can find a job all right," Pouch said. "I can always find a job."

Beneath the bravado, however, there is nagging doubt.

Pouch, 24, wants a job that offers benefits like health insurance for him and his family. His wife, Stacey, 23, doesn't work. They have an infant son, Tyler, and both have children by previous relationships.

He'd like vacations, too, and regular days off and — most of all - some assurance that he won't be back on the street when the work is finished.

The plasma spinner's fifth cycle whines to a halt and Couch peels himself off the leatherette medical table to collect his $13.

This is a procedure Pouch knows well — unlike the sellers of whole blood, plasma donors can be stuck two times a week. For Pouch, it's a steady income.

He's a handsome, muscular young man with blue eyes and brown hair pulled back into a pony tail.

He banters playfully with the receptionist as he collects his pay. He almost bounces to inner music as he makes his way to the street with his buddy, Mike Trahan.

Like Pouch, Trahan — trim, muscular and unemployed - lives with his young family in Port Arthur's old, ritzy silk-stocking district.

Their address: The Lakeshore Mission.

Port Arthur started as a dream — not a nightmare.

Almost 100 years ago, railroad magnate Arthur Stilwell was pushing his Kansas City Southern to its intended terminus in Galveston.

He ran out of money.

Fairylike creatures he called "brownies" visited him in his dreams, sagely advising him to build a port on the banks of Sabine Lake.

He later wrote that Port Arthur was the only city "ever located and built under the directions from the spirit world . . . so recognized and acknowledged."

In any event, it was advice well-taken. When oil gushed at nearby Spindletop in 1901, Port Arthur's dredged waterway to the gulf and excellent rail connections made it a natural site for oil refineries.

Refineries begat petrochemical and synthetic rubber plants.

First came Gulf Oil (now Chevron), then Texaco. Together with similar plants in Beaumont and Orange, they made the Golden Triangle a bustling, odorous economic hot spot.

Then came the bust.

In 1981, 14,050 residents of the Beaumont-Port Arthur area worked in oil refining or related industries. In 1991, only 5,800 did so.

In 1981, 8,050 area residents worked at jobs categorized as "manufacturing" — primarily ship building. Last year, that number had dropped to 3,900.

By 1960, the city's population had peaked at 67,000 — and from there it began an up-again, down-again slide. Despite the annexation of adjacent communities, Port Arthur's population had dwindled to 58,724 by 1990.

Even as the population dropped, serious crime rose. In 1985, 3,157 murders, rapes, robberies, aggravated assaults, burglaries, larceny and motor vehicle thefts were reported. In 1990, the total stood at 5,565, down slightly from the preceding year.

Demolition has been the downtown area's growth industry.

Oil has been a part of Aaron Pouch's life from the cradle. Born in a Port Arthur suburb, he spent his first eight years in the Golden Triangle.

His father, a Texaco tanker captain, later moved the family to a ranch near Kerrville. But domestic turmoil ultimately led Pouch to leave school in the 10th grade and drift back to the oil patch.

Pouch's father was gone from home for months at a time, but his mother shared his don't spare-the-rod philosophy.

Pouch bolted, living with friends and relatives in San Antonio, then Houston.

One of his brothers had a good job in a Port Arthur chemical plant. Pouch decided to join him.

"You just can't get in at one of the plants unless you know somebody," Pouch said. He got a series of jobs working for contracting companies.

Rather than go through a formal training program, Pouch said he would observe how other workers did their jobs. Sometimes he got a job as a helper.

Then, when a job calling for that particular skill opens, Pouch said, "you fudge a little bit about your experience on the application.

When jobs with contractors at the plants were scarce, Pouch often worked day jobs out of labor pools in Beaumont and Port Arthur.

What made the labor pool jobs worse was that the contractors often charged workers for transportation from the pool office to the jobs and for safety helmets, face shields, boots and other items needed to do the jobs.

"You might finish a 12-hour shift and be paid only $40 or $50," Pouch said.

But even those jobs were better than the ones Pouch had cleaning mortar from bricks from demolished downtown buildings. It took him two to four hours to clean 500 bricks and stack them on a pallet. He made $20 for every pallet.

"That was the worst job I ever had," he said. "It would skin up my hands like a meat grinder."

His contract position at the Chevron refinery ended abruptly when he wrenched muscles in his neck while lifting scaffolding.

By the time the doctor allowed him to go back to work, the refinery job was finished.

Pouch again was unemployed.

Pouch and Stacey had a whirlwind courtship to the rock beat of Snap's "The Power." They met at a nightclub.

Pouch was a good dancer. He was cute.

They moved in together that night.

Pouch's life was relatively stable then. True, the relationship with the mother of his first child had cooled, but he had a steady job as a furniture mover.

Sometimes he'd earn $200 a day. Although there were times when he brought home only 1/10th that much, generally there was money to go clubbing and have a good time.

"I sure do miss clubbing," he said ruefully. "It was great to go to the clubs and listen to the music and just have a real good time."

But the times weren't always so good.

On June 20, 1990, Pouch was arrested in a Beaumont club on a traffic charge. In his shirt pocket, police found a tab of LSD.

Pouch pleaded no contest to possession of a controlled substance and was sentenced to seven years probation. The judge deferred adjudication in the case, meaning the offense will be stricken from Pouch's record if he successfully completes probation.

The couple's relationship soured after Pouch was laid off and was forced into a succession of low-paying jobs. They were evicted from their house. Stacey went to live with her grandparents; Pouch with a brother.

Pouch and the brother quarreled, though, and he soon found himself on the street. From there, he moved to a Port Arthur mission.

"That place was terrible," he said. "It was nothing but dopeheads and drunks." Although he witnessed no violence, he lived in fear.

The word on the street was that Lakeshore Mission, run by former chemical plant worker Mike Swearingen, was different.

Drunks and people high on drugs weren't allowed. It was more than a flop — it was a place to rebuild lives.

Pouch moved there in September and liked what he found.

Not all the economic news in Port Arthur is gloomy. But the good news is relative.

A whole city of prisons is planned or under construction between Port Arthur and Beaumont. The lockups include a state prison and a new Jefferson County Jail, now being built, a massive four-unit complex of federal institutions and a state facility for juvenile offenders.

Together, those facilities will create 2,000 to 3,000 permanent jobs. "They won't pay as much as the refinery jobs," Port Arthur Mayor Mary Ellen Summerlin says.

But, Summerlin adds, the jobs are "recession proof."

Russian nuclear reactor fails, releasing radioactive gases

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — A failure in the reactor of a nuclear power plant outside St. Petersburg early Tuesday released some radioactive gases into the atmosphere, but all initial reports indicated the incident posed no danger to the public.

Although there was no suggestion that the leakage at the Sosnovy Bor plant was worse than officially described, the incident raised an immediate alarm in Russia, in Scandinavia and across Europe, all the more so since the plant is of the same design as the Chernobyl power station whose eruption six years ago made it a synonym for the potential horrors of nuclear power.

Concern over the maintenance and security at nuclear power plants in the former Soviet Union has been heightened by the breakup of the country and the economic chaos in its 15 successor nations.

There are 45 nuclear reactors across the land, including 16 with Chernobyl-type graphite-moderated light water reactors.

"From what they said, I don't see that this is an immediate health threat to the local population," said Thomas B. Cochran, senior scientist with the Natural Resources Defense Council in Washington, referring to the explanation of Russian officials.

"The more important question," he added, "is whether this is a precursor of a serious accident, which many people argue has a high probability of happening in the former Soviet Union because of lack of training and maintenance of these reactors."

A statement by the Russian Ministry of Nuclear Power said the No. 3 reactor at the "Leningrad" nuclear power plant at Sosnovy Bor, 60 miles west of St. Petersburg, shut down automatically at 2:37 a.m. after unspecified damage to one of the 1,600 channels laced through the graphite core of the reactor raised pressures inside it to a dangerous level.

The ministry said radioactivity was vented in the form of gaseous fission products, inert gases and iodine. The statement said radiation levels at the power plant were within acceptable limits at 8 a.m., and there was no change in radiation levels at the nearby towns of Sosnovy Bor and Zelenogorsk.

Officials said the reactor was being cooled, and an investigative commission had already begun work.

The Interfax news agency reported that most of the radioactivity remained inside the reactor building, and that no personnel had been exposed to dangerous levels.

Three Finnish inspectors who were working at the power plant at the time of the accident supported the Russian conclusion that there was no radioactivity hazard even in the area immediately surrounding the power plant.

S. Korean voters hand ruling party a setback

By James Sterngold
N.Y. Times News Service

SEOUL, South Korea — South Korean voters delivered a rebuke to President Roh Tae Woo Tuesday, as a strong showing by a new conservative party stripped his governing party of its majority in the national legislature, according to results announced by the government.

The ruling Democratic Liberal Party remains by far the most powerful in the Assembly, but the results were interpreted as a setback at a crucial moment. The more important race for the presidency is expected later this year.

Although Roh, a former army general, cannot run after his five-year term expires, the bitterly fought elections Tuesday had been described as an early referendum on the performance of his party and a sign of voters' thinking.

"We watched the election results with shock and disappointment, but we will accept the people's will," said Kim Yoon Hwan, secretary general of the ruling party.

On a chilly, overcast day, about 70 percent of South Koreans turned out to vote in the first balloting for the National Assembly in four years. It was the lowest turnout in recent times, but the polling was conducted calmly, a new experience in this young democracy's often violent political history.

Chung Ju Yung, the founder of the huge Hyundai industrial conglomerate, appears to have been one of the biggest winners in this important election campaign. The principal opposition party, the Democrats, also gained seats, and weight, in the legislature.

Chung, 76, left Hyundai and formed a new conservative party, the Unification National Party, just two months ago, and ran on the theme that it was time for Koreans to put a stop to official corruption and government mismanagement of the economy.

He appears to have tapped a deep vein of discontent over the intrusive manner in which the South Korean government controls the economy and society, a style that many feel is an outdated relic of the era when South Korea was still a developing nation and facing an imminent threat from the hard-line communist government across the border in North Korea.

With about 97 percent of the vote counted, the Korean Broadcasting System said it appeared the Democratic Liberal Party would win 110 seats and that the Democrats would take 74 of the 237 seats up for election.

Independents were expected to take 20 seats and the Unification National Party appeared to be winning in 23 districts. A small opposition party was ahead in one district. A fierce battle to gain the backing of the independents is expected to break out. Nine seats were still undecided.

Arab League team arrives in Libya for Pan Am bomb talks

N.Y. Times News Service

UNITED NATIONS — A seven-member Arab League team arrived in Tripoli Tuesday to discuss Libya's offer to hand over two men accused of blowing up a Pan American World Airways plane over Scotland three years ago with the loss of 270 lives.

But there was no indication whether Libya, which hopes to avert the threat of U.N. economic sanctions, intends to surrender the men to the Arab League representatives as its U.N. representative said it would Monday.

It was also unclear whether the League then intends to send the accused Libyans on to Britain or the United States to stand trial.

Libya's official press agency, Jana, published a commentary to coincide with the Arab League delegation's arrival that l...ened handing over the accused men to a "surrender" and saying it was odd the team should come to see Col. Moammar Gadhafi, the Libyan leader, during the holy Muslim fast of Ramadan.

"It is really strange that a committee comes during the last 10 days of Ramadan to talk about surrendering men and putting them on trial while they are fasting and praying," the Libyan press agency said. It was not clear whether the team had yet met with Gadhafi.

The United States, Britain and France want the Security Council to impose mandatory sanctions on Libya, including an embargo on civilian air travel to and from that country, if Tripoli fails to turn over the men accused in the December 1988 Pan Am bombing.

A French magistrate has also subpoenaed four other Libyans in connection with the blowing up of a French airliner over West Africa in 1989 with the loss of 177 lives.

After Libya said Monday that it had decided to hand over two of the accused men to the Arab League, the three countries pressing for sanctions agreed to suspend their campaign to give the Arab League team time to discover whether Tripoli is sincere.

But the Bush administration maintained the skeptical attitude. The State Department spokeswomen, Margaret D. Tutwiler, complained that Libya has still not submitted its offer in writing as the president of the Security Council asked it to do Monday.

One person dies in Jordanian hotel dinner fire

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Fire broke out Tuesday night during a Ramadan banquet at the Jordan Intercontinental Hotel, killing one person. At least 22 other people suffered smoke inhalation, as guests were stranded on hotel balconies for hours.

An Iraqi engineer, Amer Abdullah Hussein Janabi, 46, apparently suffocated after being trapped in an elevator, the state-run Petra news agency said, quoting a civil defense official, Nabil Qawar.

Hotel officials said there were only 36 guests staying at the multistory, five-star hotel in economically depressed Amman, but dozens of others were attending the banquet.

Some of the guests burned candles from balconies on upper floors to guide rescue workers, who used cherry picker trucks to rescue them. Some guests were stranded for several hours.

Officials said the blaze broke out at 7:30 p.m. in a tent set up for the banquet in a basement room, where dozens of people go each evening during the Muslim holy month of Ramadan to break their dawn-to-dusk fasts.

Syrian troops leave Beirut checkpoints

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian troops abandoned checkpoints on major street intersections around Beirut on Tuesday after a clash with Lebanese riot police.

There was no comment from the Syrian command or the Lebanese government on whether the move was linked to Monday's shootout, which left six people dead and began when Lebanese police tried to evict scores of Syrian vegetable vendors from sidewalks along an airport highway.

Lebanese media reported Tuesday that a committee of Syrian and Lebanese officers had settled the dispute.

Syrian troops abandoned dozens of sandbagged checkpoints in Beirut and along the coastal highways linking the capital to north and south Lebanon.

Tax cut 'show' let nation down

To those who closely followed the struggle in Washington to fashion a middle-class tax cut, the situation was totally absurd: politicians running around pointing their fingers at each other, a president who had already made it clear that he would veto any bill that contained a tax increase, and a nation of people obviously angry over the lack of leadership at the nation's capital.

In fact, there's only one way to explain last week's disaster in D.C. — politics! It was all "blue smoke and mirrors," and nothing in the interest of the working men and women on the streets of the nation.

There is no question that the middle class not only needs but deserves a reduction in taxes. There also is no question that if the federal government keeps spending without weighing the economic risks of that action, at some point the bill is going to come due; the only means of paying that bill is through the assessment and collection of taxes. Everyone knows that you must pay for what you buy.

So, it's a relatively simple matter to understand, that if the government wants to spend more money, it must collect more money and the only way to do that is through increasing taxes. Bush said no, that he would not permit any bill that increased taxes. He actually has already permitted too many tax increases. At some point, the debt must be paid and it can't be paid by spending more money.

Last week's "show," then, was merely the politician's version of "smoke and mirrors" — let's scurry around to make the folks back home think we're honestly working hard in Washington.

Well, here's some news for the people in Washington: the folks back home do not think their elected representatives are working. They're obviously too busy writing "hot checks" to do any meaningful work such as reducing federal spending or passing bills to increase jobs out in the real world.

How could the people in Washington make life more pleasant for the folks back home? They might try doing what's needed for the best interests of the nation overall. Or, some even say, they might simply do nothing — just go to Washington and draw their salaries.

That would be all that's needed. That and an end to their "hot checking."

Checking scandal revealed disdain

It has happened in Washington.

Officials elected to represent the people sometimes meet and talk to one another and to lobbyists so much that they lose touch with the folks they should be serving.

It happened with members of the U.S. House of Representatives, many of whom believed it was normal to kite checks in their special bank. Their moral compasses went askew. Everyone else did it. Constituents didn't know about it, so why worry?

Even after the check-bouncing mess became public, House leaders spared no effort to limit the damage. They floated proposals to name only a handful of the "worst offenders" while shielding the names of hundreds who abused their privileges.

Eventually, they succumbed to rising public outrage and pressure, all of which would not have happened had they done what was right in the first place. Nor would public anger have been so great had they confessed the error of their ways when the scandal was first revealed.

Because they are so out of touch with their constituents, they have no feel for the damage they caused to the institution of Congress directly and to the institution of government generally.

As a group, the recalcitrant House members have added to the public perception that too many elected officials are insensitive to standards of right and wrong, are misguided about their own importance, and are disdainful of their responsibility for their own misconduct.

Poll shows Americans oppose tax decrease

A recent ABC-Washington Post opinion poll found a 52 percent majority opposing a $400 annual income tax cut for most Americans.

The poll suggests at least two possible conclusions.

It may mean that most folks simply don't think $400 a year is enough to really make much difference in their personal circumstances. After all, when you sit down and figure it out, you're talking about seven bucks and change per week. That won't make anybody rich.

However, there may be more to it than that. The poll may be a welcome piece of evidence that Americans have grown weary of those politicians, Republicans and Democrats alike, who try to play the tax-cut game.

Yes, all of us would like to pay less in taxes. But we suspect a great many Americans are far more worried about their jobs — about being laid off — than about their taxes. If that's indeed the case, then Congress would be well advised to spend less time tinkering with taxes and more time working to get the national economy back on track.

JACK ANDERSON

Congress' palate comes before checkbook

WASHINGTON — If members of Congress had paid as much attention to the House Bank as they do to other matters — like what they have for lunch — the rubbergate scandal might have been caught on the first bounce.

Anderson

But, the slipshod operations of the bank went unnoticed by lawmakers for years. Even when the scandal first broke last summer, they didn't recognize how bad it was. They had their minds on weightier things, like food.

About the time the General Accounting Office was polishing off its damning report on bounced checks, the House leadership was congratulating itself on an ambitious culinary reform package for Capitol restaurants. Members had been bellyaching for years that the food and the service left much to be desired.

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., chairman of the House Administration Committee, spearheaded the reforms, with an emphasis on fresh veggies and a Southern accent to the meals. The House Members' Dining Room was refurbished under the direction of Heather Foley, wife and unpaid office boss for House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash.

These guys may not put too much stock in balancing a checkbook or a budget, but the quick resolution of the food crisis demonstrates that they know how to take care of business — personal business.

That image of a Congress that fiddles while Rome burns is what Americans are carrying into the voting booth this year. Congress takes care of itself while it allows the savings and loan scandal to mushroom into a trillion-dollar calamity. Congress runs up the national debt and gets free overdraft protection at the House Bank. Congress eats a salmon lunch for under $10 while America is brown-bagging it.

Over on the Senate side, they've also found that there is such a thing as a free lunch. The Senate restaurants and lunch counter operations spent $99,601 more than they took in during 1990, the most recent year audited by the General Accounting Office. That doesn't include the more than $2 million the Senate tossed in from taxpayers' money to pay for salaries, remodeling projects and new equipment. Nor does it include the $400,000 the taxpayers threw in to pay back an old loan. Nor does it include the free rent and utilities in the Capitol building. The bottom line — taxpayers subsidized their senators' lunch bill for well over $2.4 million in one fiscal year.

Paying back loans isn't a problem for the Senate when it can dip into the taxpayers' pockets. The $400,000 was borrowed in 1988 and promised for repayment in 1989. When the debt came due, the Senate simply appropriated $400,000 in tax money to the restaurant and called it even.

The House restaurants try to be self-sustaining, but it isn't easy when members sign the tab and then don't pay it for years. When that little indiscretion was exposed last summer, the outstanding amount owed the House food services system was more than $300,000.

Capitol Hill is indeed the "last plantation in America," a plantation that costs $2.3 billion a year to operate. There is free in-house medical service at a time when Congress can't pass a health-care bill. There is a $3,000 tax deduction for housing expenses when home affordability is at an all-time low for the common people.

Apparently, the facilities in Congress are the envy of the whole neighborhood. Late one evening, a congressman was startled to see a caravan of police cars and a limo pull up to a House office building. Police ordered the congressman to stand back. The door to the limo opened and out stepped George Bush, clad in sweats and sneakers, ready to work out in the House gym.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Mulroney proves to be Canada's comeback kid

For the first time since 1932, a pair of centrists are competing for the presidency of the United States. (President Hoover was coming up with radical ideas like reconstruction finance; FDR was soberly promising to balance the budget. We have polarized them in retrospect.)

Safire

As George Bush and Bill Clinton blur ideology in a mist of moderation, we can expect the rise of factions behind each side's lines.

The Republican far right — John Birchers, nativists, the resentment movement — have their embryonic third party behind Pat Buchanan.

The Democratic right — "Reagan Democrats" in the South and the suburbs — may have their embryonic fourth party behind techno-populist Ross Perot. (Jerry Brown, now a useful punching bag for Clinton, will see his protest vote divided between Clinton, Buchanan and Perot.)

To paraphrase Gertrude Stein, there is no left left. But some liberal-green amalgam must soon appear to assert left rights.

The United States would then be in a political stewpot similar to Canada, which has five factions, including its Quebec separatists. Our northern neighbor's Conservative prime minister, Brian Mulroney, is down to about 15 percent support in the polls.

What would the United States be like if our fractionation continued? A look at Canada suggests that it is possible for a national leader to be vilified by factions during his term and yet be returned to office — if he has the ability to assert the national interest.

Mulroney, a Quebecer who believes in a decentralized but cohesive Canada, was 14 points behind before his 1984 upset; he was 25 points down before his 1988 comeback; he's even further down now, with an election coming next year.

Why does he come roaring down the home stretch like a horse named Silky Sullivan? Because he expends his popularity in a few big causes. Mulroney is not an authentic right-winger, no Thatcher or first-term Reagan; but because he is only slightly right of center does not mean he is unprincipled. Mulroney is proof that even a centrist can have a core.

One of his causes is real free trade. Not "free and fair trade," that oxymoron that candidates use to fudge the issue in appealing to opposing consumer and labor groups.

The prime minister wants to complete the North American Free Trade Agreement, breaking down tariff barriers among Canada, the United States and Mexico, and ultimately extending through Latin America.

Bush and Clinton, sensitive to the "losing jobs" charge of the Brown-Buchanan set, tiptoe around this at election time. Canada is a tenth of our size but is our largest trading partner; we recently kicked it in the teeth on lumber and Canadian-assembled Honda cars, causing Mulroney to lament the "tin-pot dictator" action of his big neighbor.

He hastened to say this was not aimed at his friend George Bush. (But if the tin pot fits . . .)

Mulroney is that rare breed of Canadian politician — an unashamed admirer of the United States. Of course, Canadians who see Yankees as a pack of Sam Slicks revile Mulroney as a "lickspittle" and "toady;" he brushes that off.

Another cause he stands for is the reduction of big government. Canada's federal non-military spending has dropped from nearly 20 percent to 16 percent of GNP under Mulroney, the opposite of what's been happening here in the Reagan-Bush years. He has slashed the deficit in half as a percentage of GNP, which explains his low poll standing — budget-cutters draw anger.

And here's an object lesson to Bush and Clinton: Mulroney's interest in foreign affairs has made Canada a player on the world scene.

Though the smallest of the Group of Seven industrialized nations, Canada often stands the tallest on human rights; in Zimbabwe last year, its prime minister told Commonwealth leaders: "Canada will not subsidize repression and the stifling of democracy."

He's ideologically impure: Canada's socialized medicine turns off most American conservatives. But because he knows what he wants to do, and does not worry about expending his political capital while he's doing it, Brian Mulroney rates higher with American right-wingers than with our Canadian counterparts.

Centrist campaigning may bring temporary party fractionation down here as up there. Not to worry; on Election Day, the people can tell who's best for the whole nation.

Native American casinos have no reservations

From Connecticut to the Dakotas, from the roaring waters of the Atlantic Ocean to the blue waves of the Pacific, Indian reservations are now opening gambling casinos as a means of getting back what was taken away from them by the white man.

Buchwald

How did Native Americans wind up in the gambling business?

Big Bear told me, "Native Americans were always high rollers. Every time they shot at Captain Miles Standish, they yelled, Bingo. Now we're into gambling. When the U.S. government stole our land and wrote up all the rules for life on the reservation, nobody thought to ban gambling as a contact sport."

"Then what you are doing is legal?"

"Our lawyers say it is. Legal Eagle Whose Fees Are Bigger Than a Buffalo took it to court, and the judge ruled that it's OK to gamble on Indian land as long as the sky is blue or the night is black."

"That's good for everybody. The white man gets to see a reservation and you keep his quarters."

"Native Americans do not want to scalp the white man. They want to give something back."

"Such as?"

"This week we're featuring a $100,000 jackpot on our nickel slot machines, and if you roll five sevens in a row at the craps table we'll validate your parking ticket for a month."

"You really have this business down pat," I said in admiration.

"Once we fought the paleface, but now we bring him happiness. By the way, we are the only reservation within 500 miles that pays double for blackjack."

"Will you bring in top-flight entertainment?"

"We hope to sign up the great Native American singer, Frank Sinatra."

"I didn't know that Frank Sinatra was one of your people."

"We have many secrets that we have kept to ourselves."

"Does Sinatra know that he's a Native American?"

"We have never told him. Now we will in the hopes that he will sing for us at a reduced price."

"What's the name of your casino?"

"The Little Big Horn Casino and Bingo Parlor."

"I assume that all the employees are members of your tribe."

"That's right. Our dealers have been trained right here on the reservation. We don't want them to be tainted by Bugsy Siegel's methods of gambling."

"How are you different?"

"We pay off twice as much as Donald Trump for three cherries on our slot machines. Almost everyone who leaves Little Big Horn gets a tomahawk and a coffee mug."

I was impressed.

"When the first Native Americans greeted Christopher Columbus, they invited him and his crew to try their luck at roulette. Columbus refused, and for hundreds of years there was bloodshed."

I asked Big Bear, "What makes you so certain that you will succeed?"

He replied, "I never saw a white man who could make eight the hard way."

Atlantis lifts instrument package to study atmosphere

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The space shuttle Atlantis thundered into orbit Tuesday, carrying an array of scientific instruments to conduct atmospheric studies that could influence major policy decisions for protecting the global environment.

After a one-day delay caused by fuel leaks, the Atlantis was launched on its planned eight-day mission at 8:14 a.m.

Within hours, the seven astronauts were settled in orbit and busy preparing the 12 instruments for round-the-clock observations of the chemistry and physics of the upper atmosphere.

NASA officials said the launching was one of smoothest in memory, and flight controllers said the shuttle's performance was nearly flawless. This is the 46th shuttle flight, and the 21st since the Challenger disaster in January 1986.

"The whole flight is going very well, with no problems to speak of," said Lee Briscoe, mission operations director. He said officials were considering the possibility of extending the flight an extra day, providing a ninth day of observations.

Although the shuttle was 14 minutes late getting off the ground because of unsettled weather conditions, scientists said the computer programs directing the planned atmospheric research were quickly modified to adjust the timing of observations to coincide with different sun angles and other factors influencing such studies.

The Atlantis is circling Earth once every 90 minutes at an altitude of 184 miles, covering much of the globe by following an orbit always taking it to 57 degrees north latitude, then swinging down to 57 degrees south latitude.

In the mission's only anomaly so far, the shuttle's three main engines did not quite deliver the full thrust needed to put the Atlantis in its intended orbit.

Flight engineers said the shuttle was traveling about 4 to 6 feet per second too slow at the time it reached orbit, leaving it in an orbit ranging from an apogee of 184 miles to a perigee of 177 miles.

Because of the precise nature of some of the scientific experiments, it was necessary to refire the two orbital maneuvering system engines to circularize the orbit at 184 miles. This was accomplished early Tuesday afternoon.

Then Dr. Kathyrn D. Sullivan, a scientist who is one of the astronauts, began switching on and checking all systems in the research laboratory, which has been stored in the shuttle's cargo bay.

The laboratory is called Atlas, for Atmospheric Laboratory for Applications and Science, and is a multinational undertaking, involving NASA, the European Space Agency, Belgium, France, Germany, Japan, the Netherlands and Switzerland.

Officials identify abandoned elderly patient

POST FALLS, Idaho (AP) — An Alzheimer's patient abandoned at a dog-racing track has been identified as a retired auto company worker whose daughter checked him out of an Oregon nursing home last weekend, police said Tuesday.

John Kingery, 84, was left behind at the Coeur d'Alene Greyhound Park on Saturday night with a bag of diapers and a note identifying him as an Alzheimer's patient. His plight elicited hundreds of calls from people as far away as Europe offering care, advice and clothing.

"There's not many families that haven't been touched by Alzheimer's," said Mike Regan, spokesman at the hospital where Kingery is being looked after. "People understand. They're coming out of the woodwork."

Police Chief Cliff Hayes said officials of two Portland, Ore., nursing homes where the man had stayed in recent weeks called to identify him after seeing his picture on a television news program Monday.

Detectives contacted the man's daughter, Sue Gifford of Portland, "but she's not telling us a lot," Hayes said. Ms. Gifford checked her father out of a nursing home 365 miles away from Post Falls on Saturday morning, he said.

The Kootenai County prosecutor is reviewing the case, but there is apparently no Idaho law covering abandonment of an adult, Hayes said.

Kingery is staying at the Kootenai Medical Center in Coeur d'Alene, 10 miles east of Post Falls in Idaho's panhandle. Among the calls to the hospital was one from an Illinois Sunday school teacher whose class planned to send cards, Regan said.

Detectives were trying to find out how the man got from Oregon to Idaho, and who removed labels from his clothes and wrote a partially inaccurate note that was taped to his wheelchair, Hayes said.

Ms. Gifford, who works at a Portland ink company, told The Associated Press on Tuesday that "I put him in with Regency Care Center. I don't understand what's going on here."

Asked whether she knew how her father got to Idaho, Ms. Gifford said, "not for sure" but added she "maybe" had a good idea how it occurred.

Kingery was moved three weeks ago from the Laurelhurst Care Center to Regency Park Living Center, both in Portland.

Experts question effectiveness of jet's de-icing fluid

NEW YORK (AP) — The de-icing fluid used on a USAir jet half an hour before it crashed in a snowstorm normally wouldn't protect against ice for that long, two experts said Tuesday. A manufacturer of the fluid estimated it would be effective for no more than five minutes.

But John Lauber, head of a National Transportation Safety Board team investigating the crash that killed 27 people Sunday night, cautioned: "It's too early to jump on any pet theory."

How long the fluid works depends on the temperature, fuel, and the kind of wing, Lauber said at a news conference Tuesday night. He said he didn't think five minutes was a reasonable figure.

"There's no single number one can use to say how long a de-icer works," he said. He wouldn't elaborate on a possible range.

Lauber said investigators have talked to workers who did the de-icing, but haven't determined if it was done properly.

If ice builds up on the wings a plane has difficulty getting the lift needed for takeoff.

Lauber said evidence indicates the plane was traveling the correct takeoff speed — 128 to 130 knots — and the wing flaps were in the proper position.

The pilot, who died in the crash, had the plane properly de-iced at 8:29 p.m. and again at 8:59 p.m. before taking off at about 9:30 p.m., USAir president Seth Scofield said Monday. Scofield said the interval between the last treatment and takeoff was "well within standard operating procedure."

But the de-icing fluid used, known as Type 1, "just won't last that long," Richard Adams, a retired Federal Aviation Administration official whose expertise is aircraft icing, said Tuesday.

Gary Bradley, who chairs a professional engineering committee on aircraft icing, agreed: "In a snowstorm similar to La Guardia, where the snow was falling at about 1½ inches an hour, probably the fluid would not have lasted and it would have had to be re-deiced."

Depending on the manufacturer, Type 1 "has a holdover time . . . of a little under a minute to about five minutes," said Iris Charms, a spokeswoman for Octagon Process, an Edgewater, N.J., company that makes Type 1 and another cold-weather protectant for airplanes, known as Type 2.

Type 2 prevents the formation of ice for at least 30 minutes. But it's not allowed in most instances at La Guardia because of fears it will make the runways too slippery.

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said it is up to the pilot to determine how often a plane needs to be de-iced before takeoff.

Twenty-four people survived when Flight 405 crashed at the end of the runway and skidded into Flushing Bay.

Eighteen people died of drowning, four died from head or torso injuries suffered during impact and four from thermal or burn injuries, medical examiner's spokeswoman Ellen Borakove said Tuesday. One victim had burns, blunt impact and thermal injuries.

At the airport Tuesday, flatbed trucks carted pieces of the Fokker 28 jet to Hangar 5, where three dozen people analyzed them.

There were many crushed, twisted, mangled or charred bits, plus four recognizable pieces: the front of the fuselage, including the cockpit, the four-seat first-class section and a row of three coach seats; one wing; the tail; and an engine.

Airline magazines remained intact in the pockets of the blue first-class seats.

The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which runs La Guardia, allows the Type 2 de-icing fluid at La Guardia only on planes being stored for a long time at a gate.

Once a plane leaves its gate, the Type 2 fluid must be removed. Port Authority officials worry that Type 2 — which is about 300 times thicker than the Type 1 fluid — could make runways slippery if it falls off the wings, said Jim Muldoon, general manager for aviation services.

Panel to reject order for journalists' sources

WASHINGTON (NYT)— The special counsel investigating the disclosures of sexual harassment accusations against Judge Clarence Thomas asked the Senate Rules Committee Tuesday to order two journalists to divulge their confidential sources and reporting records. But the committee was on the verge of rejecting the request.

Sen. Mitch McConnell, a conservative Republican from Kentucky and a member of the committee, said the panel would reject the request rather than cause a confrontation with journalists and a test case over a reporter's privilege to refuse to disclose sources.

Most members have indicated publicly or privately that they are not in favor of pursuing the matter.

That decision would deal the inquiry a potentially devastating blow.

The special counsel, Peter E. Fleming, had hoped that the support of the committee, carrying with it an implicit threat of citation for contempt, would force Timothy Phelps of Newsday and Nina Totenberg of National Public Radio, and their news organizations, to cooperate in his investigation.

Fleming is trying to find who leaked the reporters information about what Professor Anita F. Hill told committee staff members last fall about Thomas's behavior toward her, or face citation for contempt.

McConnell said the senators might have agreed with Fleming's request if interrogating the reporters "was the only way to find out who leaked." But, he said, "there are a whole lot of other people who can be pursued," including senators and Judiciary Committee staff members. He added, "I think it is terribly important to find out who leaked."

Fleming had already subpoenaed the reporters, who agreed to appear for questioning but refused to respond to queries that might have helped him identify their sources.

Last week, Fleming issued subpoenas to the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. for the home and office telephone records of the long distance calls by the two reporters.

Fleming went a large step beyond that Tuesday, not only asking the committee, as expected, to enforce the telephone subpoenas, but requesting that the two reporters and their news organizations hand over notes, radio tapes that were not aired and names of sources.

His appeal appeared aimed at putting the senators on record as either backing a thorough investigation or substantially curtailing it.

Many legal scholars and journalists have argued that the First Amendment implicitly prohibits the government's interference with gathering of news. In a statement, the president of National Public Radio, Douglas J. Bennet, said: "We very much regret Mr. Fleming's efforts to force a constitutional confrontation. This is an outrageous assault on the First Amendment rights of journalists and of news organizations. The Rules Committee now has an opportunity to call a halt to a totally unjustified demand."

Fleming, in an interview today, said the Supreme Court and lower courts had not established the right of journalists to protect the identity of sources from official investigators "when the name of the source is relevant to the inquiry or the person asking for it has tried to ask for it from other sources."

Council starts discussion for 1993 budget

■ Council members learn they need to reduce expenses by between $400,000 and $500,000 to balance the budget with expected revenue.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Midland City Council members launched the process of setting next year's budget with informal discussion Tuesday and discovered they face problems before they even begin to juggle the numbers.

They learned they need to reduce expenses by between $400,000 and $500,000 to make the budget balance with expected revenue. The city already faces a budgetary shortfall this year, with cuts currently under way.

Some members advocated cutting services or personnel, but no one spoke in support of a tax increase. They used words like "drastic," "severe" and "realistic."

The council has tentatively scheduled a budget workshop for April 4, when they will examine the various plans and suggestions for balancing the budget. But until then, most of their ideas won't be made public.

At-large member J.D. Faircloth said he wanted to discuss his ideas in private, with individual meetings or memos to other members. Because of the Texas Open Meetings Act, a quorum of council members may not convene for discussion of city business without the public being allowed to attend.

"I want to talk about a lot of things that previously might have been sacred," Faircloth said. He said he might even excuse staff members that usually attend such meetings in order to discuss personnel decisions.

He said he didn't want to release the ideas to the public until he knew if a majority of the council would back them, or risk alienating staff members.

Faircloth touted his plan as a reorganization of the city work force. At-large member Bill Morrow said he would rather go with a more conservative approach, setting a "hold your own" budget with a more severe plan waiting in the wings in case the situation worsens.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said drastic cuts may not be in order yet.

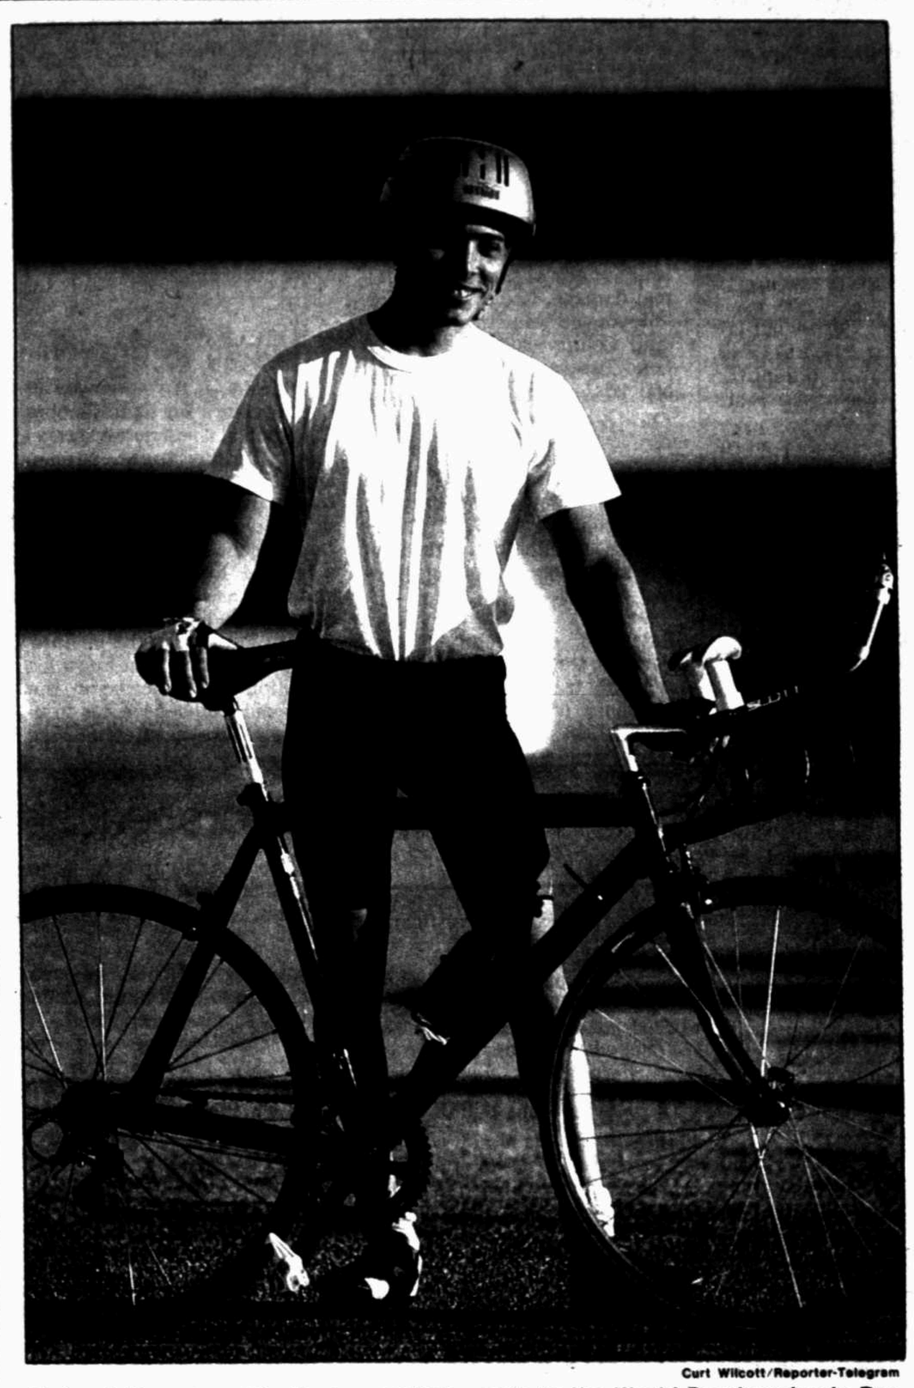

"What I've learned is it's better to keep it as smooth and level as we can," he said.

But Faircloth said his budgetary cuts will be a major issue in his campaign for mayor. Another candidate, Michael Trost — the only mayoral candidate to attend Tuesday's 4 p.m. briefing session — said Faircloth should keep his ideas out of the "back room."

Trost said he was upset to hear Faircloth say he wanted to keep information from the media and the public until a decision was made.

"That sounded like private, back-room politics," Trost said. "What I heard was, he made it

Richard Cypert, a Big Spring cyclist with cerebral palsy, aspires to compete in the World Paralympics in Barcelona in September.

Area cyclist hopes to be in '92 World Paralympics

■ Big Spring man with cerebral palsy hopes his time trial ride will be fast enough to allow him to compete in the games that follow the Olympics in Barcelona.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Going to college full time and working two part-time jobs has put the brakes on Richard Cypert's ambitions as a world-class cyclist.

Having cerebral palsy hasn't.

"I could be a whole lot better cyclist but I have to go to school and work," said Cypert, when asked whether his disability slows him down.

Despite the time restrictions, Cypert, 23, of Big Spring, aspires to compete in the 5,000 meter race at the 1992 World Paralympics in Barcelona, Sept. 3-14, which follows the regular Olympic games.

"In cycling events in the disabled division, I'm ranked No. 3," Cypert said. "If I had more time, I could do even better."

"My best time in competition for the 5,000 meter is 9.56. In practice, I've done seven minutes," he said.

At the National Paralympics in Long Island this summer, Cypert received a gold medal in the 3,000 meter race and bronze medals in the 5,000 and 1,500 meter races.

"I will find out April 15 whether or not I'm going to Barcelona. I was first told the top two (cyclists) then the top three. Now, I'm not really sure," Cypert said.

If Cypert runs a time trial of about 9.15 minutes or less, competing in Spain is almost guaranteed, he said.

Lawsuit costs county $85,000 in legal fees

■ Painter owes $21,000 to the lawyers who represented him in the lawsuit against the Commissioners' Court.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland County has paid out about $85,000 in legal services to defend the Commissioners' Court in the lawsuit filed against that five-member governing body last Aug. 20 by Sheriff Gary Painter.

Meanwhile, the sheriff on Tuesday said that he is in debt by $21,000 to his legal counsel, Dallas lawyers Marc Richman and Ken Mayfield, whom he had retained to fight his cause in Texas district court in February.

The sheriff said that he had raised slightly more than $4,000 to retain Richman and Mayfield.

"My lawsuit is over with," Painter said.

The sheriff lost that lawsuit, which he had filed last August to protest a Commissioners' Court order that was drafted to curtail his out-of-county reverse-sting operations.

It was the commissioners' Dec. 19-filed amended order which the case's presiding judge, Virgil E. Mulanax of Gilmer in East Texas, had upheld.

The Commissioners' Court had retained Vann Culp, a retired Texas district court judge, to represent the Commissioners' Court in the lawsuit, which is not entirely settled.

All told, Midland County paid the Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder Inc. law firm, for which Culp works, $86,568.23 in two checks: $45,996.27 last December and $40,571.96 in March. The fees, which take care of legal costs from Aug. 21 through Jan. 31, do not include expenses incurred in the trial of the case in late February.

'We wouldn't be paying any legal fees if he (Painter) hadn't sued us. It was the sheriff who decided to . . . sue the Commissioners . . .'

— County Judge Charles W. 'Bro' Seltzer

"We wouldn't be paying any legal fees if he (Painter) hadn't sued us," County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer said on Tuesday. "It was the sheriff who decided to go outside the county family and sue the Commissioners' Court."

Though the sheriff claims that his lawsuit is over, a spinoff of that lawsuit is awaiting trial.

In mid-1992, Mulanax is to return to Midland to decide who — the sheriff, the county or the state of Texas — is the rightful owner of approximately $1 million in forfeited drug money which had flowed into the sheriff's Drug Forfeiture Fund since 1987.

All but about $225,000, including interest, of that money already has been spent by the sheriff or otherwise disbursed for law-enforcement equipment or to pay informants and other fees.

Currently, the $225,000 is frozen and is in the registry of the district court.

"None of it (the money) belongs to them (the commissioners)," Painter asserted, "and there's no law that says they can have it."

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales and the Commissioners' Court apparently think otherwise.

Morales claims that the money belongs to the Texas Treasury, since Painter allegedly had no valid inter-local agreements, as required by law, to properly forfeit seized drug money outside of Midland County.

Most of the $1 million in forfeited drug money came from outside Midland County: elsewhere in Texas and from other states.

The Commissioners' Court, however, claims that most of the money belongs to the Midland County General Fund — from which money was taken to pay Culp for his legal services.

The sheriff is alleging that the Commissioners' Court and the attorney general "instituted" a lawsuit against him in order to get custody of the sheriff's forfeited drug funds.

"The commissioners are using tax money to sue me," Painter charged. "There's nothing in the law that gives them the right to the money."

Meanwhile, the sheriff is "still contending" that he and his deputies "have not done anything wrong" in their pursuit of drug traffickers and their illicit money outside Midland County and elsewhere in Texas and in other states.

Chamber honors teacher

Although cuddly teddy bears cropping up all over Linda Riley's classroom may seem to indicate she is a soft touch, the first-grade teacher declares otherwise.

"I really am strict," said the Lamar Elementary School teacher. "Some of my students will tell you that. I care about my students, but I expect them to learn."

Her firm resolve to see her students succeed — combined with her attitude of caring — garnered Ms. Riley the March Teacher of the Month award from the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

Ms. Riley was nominated for the award by a parent who applauded the teacher's diplomacy in convincing a reluctant youngster to take the challenge of participating in a program offering a higher level of thinking skills.

City's jobless rate unchanged

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Midland's unemployment rate was unchanged from January to February, according to statistics released Tuesday by the Texas Employment Commission.

Still, the rate remained at levels not seen since approximately four years ago, in the aftermath of the 1986 collapse in oil prices.

The TEC put the Tall City's unemployment rate at 7.1 percent, unchanged from February. A year ago the rate was 4.7 percent.

Meris Kidd, manager of the TEC's Midland office, said the fact that Midland's unemployment rate held steady was positive. But, she added, the statistics indicate Midland and Odessa are still feeling the effects of the national recession as well as continued weakness in the mining sector.

"Some of the cutbacks were seasonal in nature," she said, "but others reflected a weakened economy."

Midland's civilian labor force held at 49,600 in February and was up from a year earlier when the work force stood at 47,200. Total employment was also steady, at 46,100, up from year-ago levels of 45,000. Total unemployment remained at 3,500, up from 2,200 in February 1991.

In Odessa, the unemployment rate rose slightly, to 9.5 percent from 9.3 percent.

Among the TEC's metropolitan statistical areas, Midland placed 10th, tied with Houston, right above San Antonio. Bryan-College Station had the lowest unemployment rate in the state with 4.3 percent, followed by Austin, Amarillo, Victoria and San Angelo. Odessa placed 21st.

About 682,100 Texans were looking for work in February, some 39,700 fewer people than in January. However, TEC labor market analyst John Kruse said the January figures may have been overstated.

Kruse said the unemployment rise from a year ago is a sign that

Bell to consolidate service test center

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

In the second phase of streamlining operations, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. will consolidate its Special Service Test Center which employees 17 people locally.

"That function as well as the employees will be moved to Dallas in June," said Linda Basham, public relations manager for Southwestern Bell.

The employees — two managers and 15 others, mostly technicians — were given the option of moving with the job, taking early retirement if they qualify, or quitting.

"We know for sure that not all employees will follow their work," Ms. Basham said. Two employees have already chosen to stay in Midland and a few will probably retire, she added.

The Midland office of the telephone company currently employees 163 people.

At the end of last year, 16 Midland managers opted for a voluntary early retirement as part of a 22 percent cutback of managerial personnel in a four-state area. Several area managers also have been reassigned.

The elimination of the Midland Special Service Test Center is part of an overall streamlining of the company to keep telephone rates down, Ms. Basham said.

The latest cutback, like the managerial cutback, will not affect customer service, Ms. Basham said.

"We absolutely expect no change in the quality of service offered. That service can be as easily provided in Dallas as in Midland," she said.

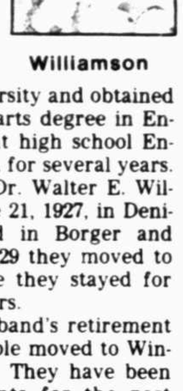

The center tests special circuits such as data circuits, Ms. Basham said.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Arson charge

Staff Report

A 35-year-old Midland man was charged with arson in connection with a late Monday night apartment fire on the northern edge of downtown, police and fire officials said. No one was injured in the blaze.

Dean Tryon, 1211 E. Estes St., is accused of throwing a molotov cocktail at the outside wall of an apartment at 606 Watson Street. The "cocktail" appeared to be a wine bottle filled with gasoline, fire officials said.

The fire scorched an outside wall but otherwise caused minimal damage, fire officials said.

Tryon remained in the Midland County jail on a $10,000 bond Tuesday, according to jail officials.

3-car accident

Two people reported minor injuries following a three-car chain-collision accident at Big Spring and Illinois streets Monday afternoon, according to police reports.

Drivers Michael Brooks Bates, 48, and John William Pace, 34, were stopping for traffic while traveling north in the 300 block of Big Spring when Pace's 1988 gray Chevrolet Caprice Classic was struck from behind by a 1986 gray Volkswagen driven by 40-year-old Wendell Leon Brown, according to reports. Pace's car then struck Bates' an 1983 gray Lincoln Continental.

Bates and Pace complained of minor "upper-body" pain, reports stated.

Brown, of the 3300 block of Durant Avenue, was cited for following too closely and for having an expired driver's registration, according to reports.

Bates was cited for having an expired driver's registration and not having liability insurance, according to reports.

Trapped in gravel

ODESSA — An employee of Southwestern Portland Cement Co. climbed a restricted "gravel pile" Tuesday night, slipped and became trapped in the pile for about an hour before Odessa firefighters freed him, Fire Department officials said.

Ismael Ramirez, age unknown, was in the emergency room of Medical Center Hospital late Tuesday night. A nursing supervisor did not know his condition but officials on the scene did not believe his injuries were life-threatening.

or getting a new teacher," Ms. Riley said. "I shared my feelings with the student that I was worried about my husband being gone for several months out of state to work. I put myself in their place. We deal with a lot of real life situations here."

The teacher said building self-esteem in her young charges is also "a big part of teaching."

Part of building confidence in first-graders involves teaching them to think for themselves and to try to find the answers to questions on their own.

A lesson in thinking for oneself often results when a child may question a photo the teacher has taped to the side of her desk. The photo, from a calendar, features a teddy bear who has just written "two plus two equals five" on a blackboard.

"I just wait for someone to say: This is wrong Mrs. Riley," the teacher said. "They don't all learn in the same way. But, you can find a way to reach them."

The first-grade teacher said she incorporates bears into the classroom whenever possible. She winds up a musical ceramic bear to announce the time when pupils need to move from one reading group to another. She has counting charts featuring bears and a stuffed bear attached to the classroom door. And pupils celebrating a birthday are honored with a birthday bear placed on their desk for the day.

"Students, at this age, really need manipulatives and hands-on projects to master concepts," Ms. Riley said. "We may work with paint, clay, or even wrap yarn around Easter eggs to make cocoons when studying the life of a butterfly."

The educator, who formerly taught and coached swimming in Laredo, was named Teacher of the Year, Woman of the Day and was a Golden Apple recipient there.

While they keep her on her toes, Ms. Riley said she runs the show. "I really am strict," she repeated. "This doesn't mean that I don't cry when they cry. One of my students had a younger brother pass away. And although I always say: 'We can solve the problem,' this is one time I had to say, we couldn't solve it. But we can cope with it. We have time for hugs and time for tears."

Even though Ms. Riley insists some youngsters think she is too strict, one student leaves her "little gifts" in the key hole of her class door.

"One morning I got here and there was a flower stuck in the key hole," she said, "I was especially happy to see it because it came from a quiet child."

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Fun fair scheduled

Staff Report

The fight against drug abuse in local schools will soon go another round as drug educators attempt to raise money for their cause.

The fifth annual "Just Say No" Family Fun Fair will be held at the Claydesta Atrium from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on April 4. The event is co-sponsored by Pappagallo, the Reporter-Telegram, KOSA-TV, Claydesta Corporation, KNFM Radio and Midland Independent School District Parent-Teacher Associations.

"The drug problem in our community and schools is still a most serious threat to our youth and our country's future. We feel that the monies raised in the past years by the 'Just Say No' Family Fair have made a significant difference in drug education," said Sally Reeder of Pappagallo.

Last year, Pappagallo raised $15,000 at the fair. In 1990, they contributed $10,000. Proceeds will benefit all Midland schools.

Also, a drawing will be held for a five-day, four-night trip for four to Disneyland, courtesy of Southwest Airlines. Tickets for the trip are $2 for one and $5 for three.

All contributions are tax-deductible.

At an awards banquet, Sgt. Lalo Camarillo of the Midland Police Department, sheriff's deputy Terry Lowe of Crime Stoppers and Mother's Against Drunk Driving organizer Faye Higgins received bronze medals showing the Midland skyline with the words Crime Prevention Commission circling the edges.

"This event is held annually to recognize people for their community crime prevention efforts," said Laverne Foster, who works for Midland Crime Prevention Commission president Nick Taylor.

Crime Prevention Commission members periodically meet to discuss trends in local crime and various means of reducing criminal incidents.

Members hope to add to their numbers by increasing the number of neighborhood watch programs in Midland.

Club starts league

The Boys & Girls Club of Midland will accept registration for the coed volleyball league through Friday.

The league is open to any child 6-18. It is free of charge for all 1992 club members. Membership is $3 a year. For more information call 683-5297.

The club also is open on Saturdays from 2-8 p.m. with an open gym program of basketball and volleyball. Gameroom activities and tournaments will also be offered on Saturdays. Membership is required to attend.

Midlanders honored

The Midland Crime Prevention Commission recognized three Midlanders recently for outstanding service toward reducing the frequency of crime in Midland.

CYCLIST: He first competed in 1989

(From 1B)

"I'm excited, but right now I have to put it on hold till I found out if I'm going," Cypert said.

"I could train so much harder if I knew I could go," he said.

Currently, Cypert trains about 75-80 miles a week at the now-defunct Air Force base in Big Spring.

Cypert began bicycling avidly about five years ago while working on a merit badge in scouting. "I had a friend who was a cyclist and we started riding together," he said.

Over time, Cypert's enjoyment of the sport led to his first competition against able-bodied riders in May 1989.

"I thought I'd try it and see how I'd do," he said.

Riding a bicycle purchased from a discount store, Cypert came in next to last.

"I figured I'd come in last," he said.

After that race, Cypert found out about competitions for disabled riders and began entering other races.

A member of the Disabled Sports Association of North Texas, Cypert said he doesn't just see himself as a disabled rider.

"I might try to race more in able-bodied competition. I don't know how good I'll be, but I'll try," he said.

Baby found clutching body of her dead mother

■ Man discovered near the scene confesses to stabbing the woman.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A baby girl was found Tuesday crying and clutching the nude body of her mother whose throat had been slashed and index finger chopped off, police said.

Police said the woman, identified as a 22-year-old Salvadoran national, was found lying on the porch of an abandoned building about 7 a.m. Her name was being withheld until family members could be notified, police spokesman Robert Hurst said.

A teen-ager on her way to school told police she heard the baby crying and checked the area, which is across the street from an elementary school in northeast Houston.

The baby, clad only in a diaper, had just turned 1 year old, Hurst said. She was treated for some scratches on her face at Texas Children's Hospital and released Tuesday afternoon into the custody of the Harris County Children's Protective Service.

"She's kind of whimpering like she hurts, but the doctors examined her and say she's fine," said Judy Hay, spokeswoman for the Children's Protective Service. "People have been cuddling her and she likes that."

The State

Ms. Hay said the baby's father had been located in Houston, but his name had not yet been released. She said the child could be released to his custody as early as Wednesday.

"For tonight, she'll stay in a foster home," Ms. Hay said.

Police said charges were pending against another man discovered sleeping in a nearby car by a business owner. The businessman, who awakened the suspect, called police after spotting blood on the 21-year-old man's clothes and scratches on his face.

The man in custody grabbed a suitcase from the trunk of the car and fled into nearby woods before officers arrived, but he was arrested a short time later at a bus stop.

Homicide detectives said the man had given a written confession in which he said he and the woman were parked in the car Monday night and got into an argument.

"He says he threw her out of the car and then stabbed her with a piece of broken window glass," Hurst said.

Police spokeswoman Sharon Thornton said the woman's throat apparently was slashed from ear to ear and she suffered multiple stab wounds. Her right index finger was severed.

Hurst said the man told officers he tried to drive away, leaving the woman and baby at the stabbing scene, but had to pull over because his car had a flat tire. He said he spent the night in the car.

"There's some indication both the victim and the suspect had been drinking and there's a possiblity that some drug use may be involved," Hurst said.

Rachel Navarro, who lives in the area, said the incident did not surprise her because of a growing crime problem in the area.

"Everyday there's something like this happening in this area," she said.

Perot last donated to presidential campaigns in 1980, records show

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot, who intends to finance his own campaign if he runs for president, has not contributed to the campaigns of others who have sought the office in the last dozen years.

Since 1979, Perot has contributed $45,100 individually to political campaigns — none of them presidential, according to Federal Election Commission reports.

Perot, who says he will launch an independent campaign if placed on the ballot in all 50 states, has almost evenly split his personal contributions between Republican and Democratic interests.

Perot's spending spans the campaigns of Democratic leaders like Illinois Rep. Dan Rostenkowski and Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia to conservative Republicans like Sen. Phil Gramm and Rep. Dick Armey, both of Texas.

While the bulk of Perot's contributions were made to Texas campaigns, he also gave money to out-of-state lawmakers. Beneficiaries included Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee; Byrd, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee; and Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., chairman of the Senate Select Intelligence Committee.

In Texas, Perot gave primarily to the campaigns of former Republican Sen. John Tower, and current Sens. Gramm and Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, as well as to Dallas-area congressmen.

His party contributions were split, although in earlier years, Perot gave more heavily to Republican causes.

In 1980, he gave $5,000 to the Republican Party's Texas Victory Committee, followed by a similar contribution to the National Republican Senatorial Committee in 1983.

The following year, Perot contributed $5,000 to the Texas Republican Congressional Committee. It wasn't until last year that Perot contributed money directly to the Democratic Party machine, with a $3,000 donation to the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee.

While Perot himself hasn't contributed to any presidential campaigns since 1980, his son, H. Ross Perot Jr., has.

The younger Perot, founder of Alliance Airport, gave $4,000 of his $80,300 in contributions since 1983 to four presidential campaigns, FEC reports show.

Perot Jr. gave $1,000 apiece to the Reagan-Bush '84 campaign, the John Glenn Presidential Committee in 1987, the 1988 campaign of House Majority leader Dick Gephardt, and to the Bush-Quayle '92 Primary Committee.

Hispanics accuse Texas National Guard of racial discrimination

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The American GI Forum has filed 20 complaints on behalf of Hispanic soldiers accusing the Texas National Guard of racial discrimination.

A report released by the organization's Corpus Christi chapter also calls for public hearings, restructuring the Guard, and recommends removing the adjutant general and suspending the Guard's chief of staff.

Gilbert Jasso, civil rights chairman for the Corpus Christi chapter of the GI Forum, said Tuesday that the complaints stem from "systematic statewide racial discrimination."

Many of the complaints come from Hispanic soldiers who say they have been, or are being, pushed out of service because of their ethnic background. They also include affidavits from Anglo whistleblowers who say Hispanic members have been dismissed for minor offenses or for no reason.

Capt. John Stanford, a National Guard spokesman, referred inquiries to the governor's office, where the documents were filed. "There wouldn't be anybody here" who has seen them, he said.

Many of the complaints come from Hispanic soldiers who say they have been, or are being, pushed out of service because of their ethnic background. They also include affidavits from Anglo whistleblowers who say Hispanic members have been dismissed for minor offenses or for no reason.

The GI Forum previously filed complaints in August on behalf of six Corpus Christi soldiers who said superiors subjected them to racial slurs, denied them promotions or fired them without sufficient cause. Some complained weight-control and physical fitness programs were administered more harshly to Hispanics.

An internal Guard investigation completed last month found no evidence of discrimination, but did find mismanagement of the weight-control program at the Corpus Christi armory. Investigators recommended that four of the six soldiers remain in the Guard.

The latest complaints were submitted Friday to Gov. Ann Richards and to Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, as well as members of the state House Mexican-American Caucus and the Senate Hispanic Caucus, Jasso said.

Chuck McDonald, a spokesman for Richards, said the governor's office would evaluate the GI Forum's concerns. But he said he believes the previous probe had been sufficient.

"We had hoped that it would appease the group," McDonald said. "I don't know how much more can be done at this point."

public that he had these ideas, but wanted to go in the back room and talk about them."

Faircloth said the situation is so serious, however, it warrants a new approach to budgeting. He advocated cutting the general fund's $30 million budget by 3 to 5 percent.

"We've got to find a million bucks," he said. "I think we've got to begin to think differently about the way we render service."

The April 4 workshop may be cancelled if it is not deemed needed, but city staff members are expected to begin receiving budget preparation materials by mid-April. At that point, they will want to know what type of expense cuts the council expects.

the national recession is hitting the state.

"I think it's pretty clear that the national recession, to some degree, has taken hold of the Texas economy. Most people seem to think the Texas economy, on balance, is in better shape than national economy. But it (the recession) has had an impact here," Kruse said.

Rosemary, garlic add savory taste to lamb

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

When I think of comfort food, tender spring lamb is one image that pops into mind. Leg of lamb was our Easter entree of choice while I was growing up.

Unfortunately, lamb often falls from favor when people experience strong-tasting meat. The secret to mild-tasting lamb is knowing what to look for in your butcher's case. The paler the meat's color, the milder the flavor.

I particularly love this lamb recipe for its simplicity and its sunny Mediterranean flavors: garlic, fresh rosemary and olive oil. To serve this succulent roast in spring-fresh style, arrange cooked fresh asparagus spears on the platter around the lamb, along with a few carrot curls and rosemary sprigs.

ROSEMARY ROAST LAMB
1 4- to 5-pound leg of lamb
3 cloves garlic, cut into slivers
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 tablespoon snipped fresh rosemary or 1 teaspoon dried rosemary, crushed
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ cup dry white wine, dry vermouth or chicken broth
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon snipped parsley

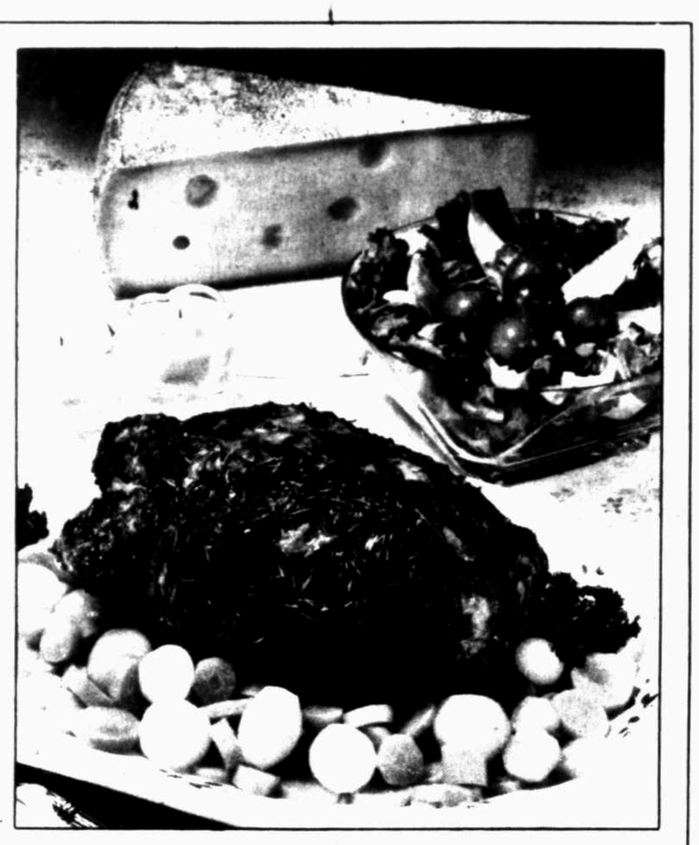

Remove the paper-thin, pinkish red layer from the outer surface of the lamb. Trim off fat.

Cut small slits in meat and insert garlic slivers. Brush with olive oil. Stir together rosemary, salt and pepper; rub onto meat. Place meat on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. Insert a meat thermometer into the thickest portion of meat, without touching fat or bone. Roast, uncovered, in a 325-degree oven for 1½ to 2 hours or until the thermometer registers 140 degrees.

Remove meat from pan, reserving juices; cover meat with foil to keep warm. For sauce, add wine, vermouth or broth to pan juices; stir to scrape up browned bits. Transfer to a small saucepan. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, uncovered, about 5 minutes or until liquid is slightly thickened. Skim off fat.

Stir together Parmesan cheese and parsley; sprinkle over meat. Pass sauce with meat. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Salt, vinegar chips' flavor is addictive

By Linda Anderson

Junk-food junkies take note: a new potato chip flavor has arrived in our supermarkets. Lay's, which has been a source of "nutrition" for junk-food-aholics for years, has introduced its Salt and Vinegar flavor potato chips. Now, before you scream "E-e-o-o-o!!!" and decide that there's no way in the world that salt and vinegar are going to sell as a potato chip flavor, I have to tell you that the English have been putting salt and vinegar on their "chips" (which I'm told are really french fries) for years and loving it. At least, that's what I've heard.

Anderson

Anyway, there's no way I'm not going to try a new-flavored potato chip, so I bought a bag to check out for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

Salt and Vinegar chips in a 6¼-ounce bag cost $1.49, according to the label, but I got one for 99 cents on sale. Price is about the same as other Lay's potato chips.

Label advertising is pretty generic: "Even after fifty years ... No One Can Eat Just One!" Then it goes on: "LAY'S brand Potato Chips were created when Herman Lay took fresh, wholesome potatoes and transformed them into delicious, crispy chips.

"Today, LAY'S brand Potato Chips are America's favorite! Each irresistible chip is consistently crisp, thin, light and seasoned to perfection. ..."

"LAY'S brand Salt & Vinegar Artificially Flavored Potato Chips add fun and variety to a well-balanced diet. While our products are not meant to be a basic source of nutrients, they can be enjoyed as part of a healthy diet." Then label advertising lists four things a one-ounce serving of these chips contains: (1) 11 "widely recognized nutrients" (true, the nutrition label lists 11 nutrients, but five of them are listed as less than 2 percent of the recommended daily allowance); (2) only vegetable oils; (3) only about one-fifth of salt per serving; and (4) about 150 calories.

The taste-test was a real surprise — literally. When I bought my first bag of the salt and vinegar chips, the woman who was checking me out said, "I've wanted to try those," so I said, "Let's open them up." She and I both tried the chips and agreed that they were unusual but tasty (the first taste is always the hardest). Then when I got them home, the youngest taste-tester thought they were weird but interesting. We found ourselves becoming addicted to the chips. The taste kind of grows on you.

On my way to Austin, I stopped at a convenience store in San Angelo and bought a bag of salt and vinegar chips, and the man behind the cash register said he too had become addicted to them.

But when I tried to buy a bag in Austin, a man who works for Lay's said the salt and vinegar chips aren't being marketed nationally yet, but are being test-marketed in other areas. He was surprised to find out we have them here in Midland, and said that other people who have tried them have requested that the chips be marketed nationally.

So far I have only met two people who have tried Lay's Salt and Vinegar potato chips and don't like them — everyone else loves them. I guess they are one of those things that you either love or hate with nothing in between.

Myself, I love them.

Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Roasted lamb is centerpiece for Easter feast in Greece

By David Smythe

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — A cloud of lamb-scented smoke covers the Greek countryside during Easter. Men tend fires to roast whole, milk-fed lambs, turning on spits. Resin-flavored charcoal dust and steam rise as fatty juices drip into pine ash.

The lamb is scored with shallow slits and rubbed with salt, pepper and lemon. It is then carefully cooked so as not to scorch the delicate flesh. Eventually, drip pans are attached to catch the juices. These pans may contain butter, lemon juice, thyme and possibly oregano and bay leaves.

There is a saying in Greece that goes something like: "Never eat the animal that pulls the plow." Perhaps this is why the Greek culture centers around lamb and not beef.

While roasting a whole lamb on a skewer may not be appropriate for an American observance of Easter, the following variation provides an interesting departure:

SOUVLAKI (LAMB KEBAB) IN PITA
1 2-pound boneless lamb leg
1 cup virgin olive oil
Juice of 2 lemons
2 tablespoons chopped fresh oregano
Salt and pepper, to taste
3 russet potatoes, peeled and sliced lengthwise, ⅓-inch thick
¼ cup red-wine vinegar
6 pita breads
3 large, ripe tomatoes, sliced
1 large red onion, sliced very thin
1 head romaine lettuce, shredded

Trim lamb and cut into 1½x1¾-inch cubes. Coat meat with oil, lemon juice, oregano, salt and pepper. Marinate in the refrigerator for several hours. Drain and reserve marinade.

Soak six wooden skewers in water for 20 minutes. (Or use metal skewers.) Thread four or five pieces of the lamb onto each skewer. Preheat charcoal grill for lamb. Preheat oven to 350 degrees for potatoes.

Blanch sliced potatoes in boiling, salted water for 5 minutes; drain. Coat cooked potatoes with reserved marinade; place on a sheet pan. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes, or until browned. Sprinkle browned potatoes with vinegar; keep warm.

If broiling lamb, preheat broiler. Grill or broil lamb medium-rare or medium, about 8 to 10 minutes, as desired.

Warm pita in oven; cut edges to open.

Remove lamb from skewers and place in pita pockets. Add sliced tomatoes, onions, cooked potatoes and lettuce. Makes 6 servings.

Big snack food trends are little

By Beverly Bundy
N.Y. Times News Service

Little is one of the bigger food trends of the 1990s. Tiny versions of larger standards, especially caloric treats, are the newest darlings of food company marketing departments. Mini Oreos, Ritz Bits, Brownie Bites, Mini Muffins, Mini Eggos and Mini Donuts are just some of the baby-size foods adults are buying.

Perhaps manufacturers are citing "fun" as much as portion control as the reason for downsizing because consumers are tired of being told that goodies they grew up with are bad for them.

Recently, Dunkin Donuts introduced minidoughnuts, smaller sizes of their regular doughnuts.

"The little size is fun, and doughnuts are fun," said Karen Fisher, Dunkin Donuts product marketing manager. "The small size lets consumers sample more than one variety, and the size is more convenient to eat."

Convenience, too, is behind Hostess' little line of snacks. Mini Muffins and Brownie Bites, packaged five to a bag, are geared to eating on the run.

Kerry Lyman, spokesman for Continental Baking Co., says portability is one of the driving forces behind both snacks.

"PEOPLE LOVE muffins, and muffin categories continue to grow; but we found that in certain situations, muffins are a problem to eat," Lyman said. "More and more, people are eating in their cars, at their desks or on the school bus. But take a bite of most regular-size muffins, and you'll end up with a lap full of crumbs.

"Mini Muffins are bite-size and can be popped whole into the mouth. Brownie Bites, too, are geared to avoid the crumbly problems of good, moist brownies. People love chocolate and they love brownies, and this way they can carry brownies with them anywhere."

"Bite-size" is a key phrase at Nabisco, one of the trailblazers in modern-day little foods. Nabisco introduced Ritz Bits in 1988 and followed that success with Triscuit Bits and Teddy Grahams. Since the summer of 1991, the company has been rolling out Mini Oreo cookies, the cookie we love to unscrew.

"Americans are very snack-oriented, and the market for on-the-go, hand-to-mouth snacks is continuing to grow," said Ann Smith, Nabisco spokeswoman. "Plus, people can eat five Mini Oreos and feel like they've eaten a whole lot when they've really just eaten the equivalent of one regular Oreo. Children seem to love them because they're a cookie that is just their size. It's taken a while to get the Mini Oreo in stores nationwide because they've been so successful in the markets we've opened that we've had trouble keeping up with the demand."

CHILDREN, TOO, seem to be attracted to Kellogg's Mini Eggo, one of 12 varieties of the frozen waffle line. While a Kellogg's spokesman says the product is very new, initial sales figures are "very pleasing."

Frito-Lay found in consumer studies that people wanted a chip they could eat in one bite. So, in January, the company introduced Bite Size Doritos, a chip half the size of its big brother.

"These chips are very snackable because they can be popped into the mouth in one bite," said Beverly Holmes, Frito-Lay spokeswoman. "The bite size is fun, and the chips are more portable. Our primary customers are teens, people in high school and college, but we're finding that these chips are popular with younger children, say those younger than 13."

All of these companies are babies when it comes to little food. The Hershey Foods Corp. began selling Kisses in 1907; the candy company's Miniature line followed in 1939.

DEAR ABBY

Family not honoring woman's work at home

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I do licensed day care in my home. I care for six children during the course of the day: five full time and one before kindergarten. I do craft projects and teach them basic numbers and the alphabet. The children range in age from 4 months to 4 years, plus I have a daughter of my own who is 2. My problem is that my family thinks that I don't work!

Van Buren

Last summer my mother came to visit from Los Angeles. I loved seeing her, but she made the comment that she would come and spend the day with me and bring my niece with her because my brother and sister-in-law work during the day. (Where would anyone get the idea that I don't work?)

My brother also shares this feeling. He is coming home from Germany with his new wife — he is in the Army — and he announced that "since I don't work," they could stay and visit with me during the day, and I could spend the evenings with them and their 2-year-old.

Abby, I love my family very much, but day care is my business, and I work very hard at taking good care of my "extended family" so their parents can work and not worry if their children are being well taken care of!

I would love to be the one visiting in the evening, when things are relaxed and enjoyable. I have tried explaining my feelings to them, but they don't seem to hear me. Can you help? — STEAMED IN WESTMINSTER, COLO.

DEAR STEAMED: Since you have already tried "explaining" that you work during the day, the next step should be to draft your doubting family to "assist" you for a day. If that doesn't confirm that you are up to your neck in responsibility, then nothing you or I could do or say will get through to them.

I wish you success in your venture. The parents of Westminster are fortunate in having someone as conscientious as you making your services available.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Lots of Hanky-Panky in Texas," I'd like to say that I am a married woman and I sometimes go to bars. Believe it or not, there is life beyond men!

I do a lot of things without my husband — including dancing. Just because you want to be with a girlfriend doesn't mean you want to be picked up — an unfortunate presumption many people still make these days. This is not the 1800s.

Perhaps "Lots of Hanky-Panky in Texas" should try liberating herself by dancing without a partner — or with a girlfriend — to remove all the sexual connotations that go with dancing with the opposite gender. She may find that it is truly dancing she enjoys — and nothing more. Wake up! The sexual revolution may not have occurred in Texas yet — but don't assume it's not in full bloom in Atlanta! — EQUALITY DEMANDED IN GEORGIA

DEAR EQUALITY DEMANDED: My Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary defines "hanky-panky" as questionable or underhanded activity, trickery, or sexual dalliance.

In my view, it should not be assumed that women who frequent bars alone or with other women are up to no good — any more than men are. It's possible that a woman will sit at a bar because she wants to have a drink or just relax and people-watch.

DEAR ABBY: I need you to clear up a disagreement. I recently met a very nice guy. On our first date he took me to a movie. The movie was good and we had a nice time. After the movie, he took me home. Now, here is the big question. Should my date walk me to my front door?

Please don't tell me about women's lib; I am just trying to find out what's proper etiquette on a first date. He feels it was not a big deal. However, I am 27 years old and he is the first guy who did not walk me to my door. — NETTIE IN N.J.

DEAR NETTIE: It's proper etiquette for a gentleman to walk a lady to her door on every date.

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy. It's all in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." Tex-Mex recipes can be more heart-healthy

By Teresa S. Johnson
N.Y Times News Service

WACO — With its reliance on frying, fatty meat and mounds of cheese, Tex-Mex cuisine does not have a heart-healthy reputation. In fact it's probably better known for its diet-busting capabilities.

But enchiladas don't have to be equated with cholesterol, according to Rosemary Gonzalez, a research dietitian at the Nutrition Research Clinic at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

She offered the following tips for heart-healthy cooking when preparing Tex-Mex foods.

■ Choose lean cuts for meat. For pork, select a loin blade roast or loin chops.

■ Consider alternatives to frying foods. Tortillas can be steamed or baked. Tortillas for enchiladas can be dipped in chile sauce instead of frying.

■ If frying, use vegetable oil, such as corn oil, and cook quickly so less oil will be absorbed. Try using half the amount of oil called for in recipes.

■ Trim all visible fat from meats before cooking and remove the skin from poultry.

Vegetables, beans, rice and fruit should make up a large part of each meal, Gonzalez said. Treat the meats as a side dish to lower fat intake.

Gonzalez offered the following recipe as an example of a traditional recipe made heart healthy.

CHICKEN ENCHILADAS

4 chicken breast halves
1 can (16-oz.) chopped tomatoes
1 can (10½-oz.) cream of chicken soup
1 can (4-oz.) chopped green chiles
1 teaspoon ground cumin
½ teaspoon garlic powder
1 cup chopped onion
2 cup shredded reduced-fat cheddar cheese
12 corn tortillas

Cut chicken into strips and cook. Spray baking pan with nonstick vegetable spray. Make sauce by blending tomatoes, soup, chiles, cumin and garlic powder. Warm in microwave or on stove. Assemble each enchilada by dipping tortilla in warm sauce to soften. Put 1 strip of chicken, 2 tablespoons cheese, 1 teaspoon onion and 1 teaspoon sauce on each softened tortilla. Roll up and place seam-side down in sprayed baking pan. When all enchiladas are in pan, sprinkle with onion and pour remaining sauce evenly over enchiladas. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes or until bubbly.

FRIJOLES COCIDOS

1 pound (2¼ cups) uncooked pinto beans
1 large onion, chopped (1½ cups)
3 cloves garlic, minced
2 teaspoon cumin
1 Tablespoon olive oil
½ cup green pepper, minced
½ cup green pepper, minced
½ teaspoon ground coriander (cilantro)
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper

Soak beans in water at least 4 hours or overnight. Drain beans and cover with fresh water in a large saucepan. Bring to a boil; reduce heat. Cover; simmer for 1 to 1½ hours or until tender. Saute onion, garlic and cumin in oil for 4 minutes. Add green pepper and continue to saute for 5 to 8 minutes or until tender. Drain beans; reserve ½ cup liquid. Mash beans and reserved liquid. Add sauteed vegetables and spices, mixing well. Makes 5½ cups. Serve in tostadas or stuffed green peppers or with steamed tortillas.

EL PASO — The Midland Lee Rebels will be on their home turf Saturday for the area round of the soccer playoffs thanks to El Paso Hanks' 1-0 victory Tuesday night over El Paso High in a bi-district game.

The Rebels, 15-1 and winners of a bi-district game on Monday against Burkburnett, will host Hanks (17-2) at 2 p.m. Saturday.

If El Paso High had won Tuesday's game, Lee would have had to go there for the area game.

Also, District 3 runner-up Abilene High was eliminated in the bi-district round Tuesday, falling 3-2 in sudden-death overtime to District 4 champion Wichita Falls Rider. Rider (15-2-3) — after needing two 15-minute overtime periods, a five-man shootout and three shooters in sudden death — advances to the area round against El Paso Del Valle (18-1), which downed El Paso Coronado 1-0 in Tuesday's other bi-district game.

Bulldogs batter OHS, 7-1

■ Midland High gains its first District 4-5A baseball victory as Dewayne Culpepper two-hits Odessa High.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Save for zingin' a couple of Bronchos in the final inning, Midland High pitcher Dewayne Culpepper put together a nice little piece of work Tuesday afternoon at Angels Stadium.

The Midland High senior lefthander two-hit Odessa High in a complete game performance as the Bulldogs won their first District 4-5A game of the season, 7-1.

The win improved MHS overall record to 5-11, 1-2 in district; OHS fell to 2-9, 0-3.

"Dewayne did a really good job. He was ahead of most of the batters, which gives pitchers a nice cushion," MHS head coach Rick Wood said. "The thing I'm most proud of is the way Dewayne kept people from stealing."

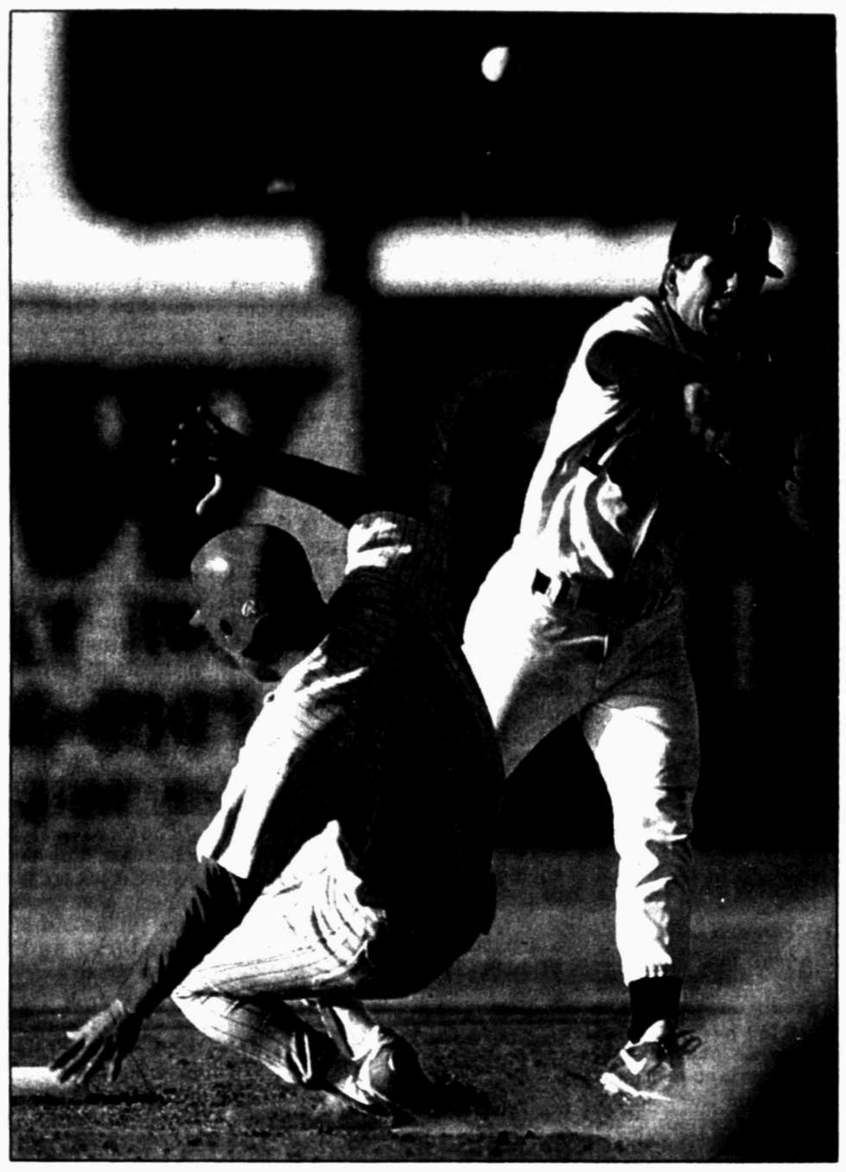

The Bulldogs had a little problem in Saturday's 17-16 loss to Abilene High as 17 War Eagle runners swiped bases during the 7-plus inning affair. Wood had his 'Dawgs hard at work in practice Monday to make certain a repeat performance wouldn't occur. The work paid off as not only did OHS fail to record a stolen base, the thought seldom even crossed the Bronchos' minds.

"He (Culpepper) pitched a good ball game," OHS head coach Milt Thompson said. "He wavered a little but that's understandable. He kept our kids popping up. Our hitters in the order just didn't hit. If he can keep us off balance like that then that's good for him."

In his start last year against OHS, Culpepper pitched a five-hit shutout.

Offensively, MHS worked for its runs, and didn't shy away from the sacrifice to get the job done. In each of the first four innings, the leadoff Bulldog reached base, and advanced when the subsequent batter laid down a sacrifice bunt.

Mojo upends Rebels, 10-9

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

ODESSA — It was just a pinch, but enough to rub salt in the Midland Lee Rebels' wounds.

With the score tied 7-7, Julian Urquidez led off with a pinch hit single that got the Rebels off to a two-run inning and the lead over Odessa Permian with three outs to go here Tuesday at McCanlies Field.

However, it also cost Lee its most effective pitcher of the day in Jason Baker, who had to sit out the bottom of the seventh because of the pinch hitter, as the Panthers came back with three runs to take a stunning 10-9 come-from-behind win in District 4-5A baseball play.

The victory sends Permian to 2-0 in district play, 6-9-1 overall, and a first-place tie with Abilene Cooper. The Rebels fell to 1-2 and 6-6 for a fifth-place tie with Midland High, a 7-1 winner over Odessa High. In other 4-5A play Tuesday, Abilene High took third place with a 3-0 win over San Angelo.

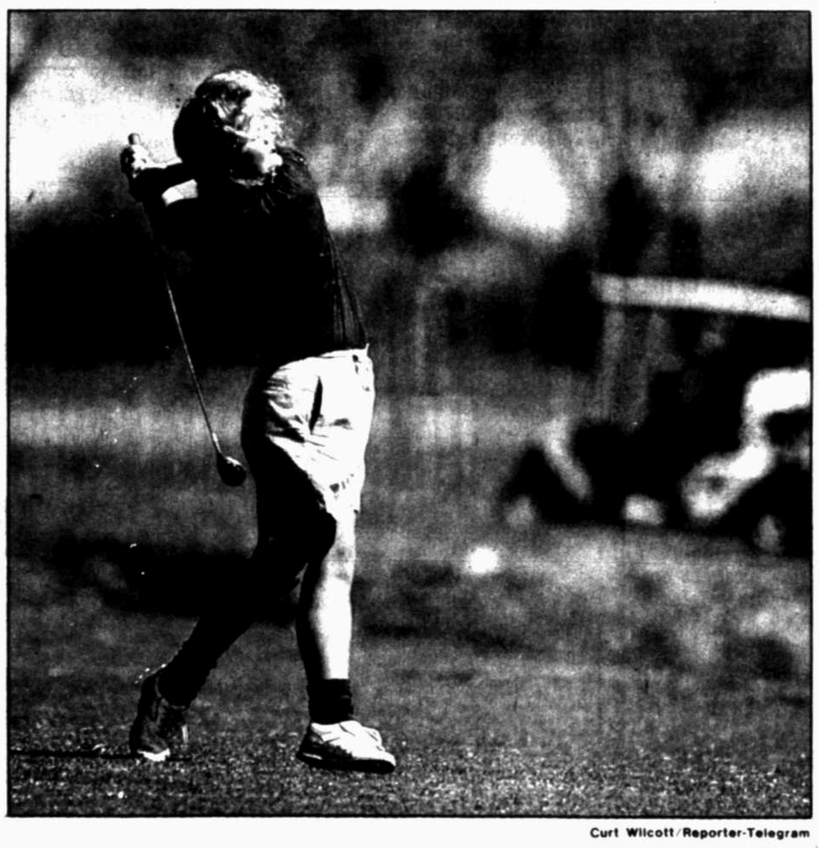

For Lee, the trouble began in the fifth inning — as it did Saturday in a 24-7 loss to Cooper — when starting pitcher Jimmy Patton began to tire and gave up three runs before Baker put the fire out to keep the score even at 7-7.

Baker, a junior righthander, lasted 1⅔ innings while allowing no runs on one hit with three strikeouts. He returned to the mound for the seventh, but Permian coach Bob Highley protested and Lee manned the mound with Brian Cordova, who was not allowed much warm-up time.

"It was a bad coaching mistake on my part. I got too involved in the

Winds affect 4-5A medalist race

■ San Angelo's Tiffany Ashley jumps out to an early lead with a windblown 84 in the district girl's golf opener.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Tear up the form sheets and start watching the weather reports if you want to keep up with the District 4-5A girl's golf race.

Gusty, miserable winds greeted the opening round of the 4-5A chase Tuesday at Ranchland Hills Country Club and were the deciding factor in the medalist race as San Angelo dark horse Tiffany Ashley, one of only two seniors playing in the No. 1 spot, took the lead with a windblown 84.

Going into the Tuesday round, Midland Lee junior Paula King and Abilene Cooper freshman April DeVries figured to be the favorites to win the two Region I berths available for individuals, but Ashley and Odessa Permian's April Scarborough (85) both lead the favorites, who came in with identical 86s to tie Permian's Kristin Kight for third place.

Of course, this is only one of four rounds on the tour, so just about anything can — and probably will — happen down the stretch. Bad weather

All-ACC Final Four still possible

Associated Press

The NCAA tournament operates with a free form geography that rarely concerns itself with the traditional boundaries of maps.

That is why, when the champions of the East, Southeast, Midwest and West regionals convene at Minneapolis next week, it could turn into an Atlantic Coast Conference convention.

With the tournament field down to the final 16, the ACC still has four teams playing — one in each region. So if Duke wins the East, North Carolina prevails in the Southeast, Georgia Tech gets through the Midwest and Florida State takes the West, the Final Four could be the ACC tournament all over again.

When the 64-team tournament began, there were a combined 11 schools from the Big Eight and Big East in the field. Now there are a combined two — Seton Hall from the Big East and Oklahoma State from the Big Eight.

Is there a message here?

"...In the 12 years I've been in the (ACC), one of the things I've learned is the league makes everybody better," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "The competition now from one through nine is so good that in order to survive you have to get better.

"This prepares you for NCAA play ... We are just tournament-tested as a conference by this time of the year. I think it's great for the league."

And great for the league's coffers, as well. Tournament shares are based on the number of games played. Each time an ACC team plays a game — they've had nine so far with Wake Forest the only loser, and there are a guaranteed four more this week — it adds to the conference's ultimate payoff from the NCAA.

With four of its five tournament teams still playing, the ACC had the best conference record in the sub-regionals. The Big Ten advanced three of its five teams — Indiana, Ohio State and Michigan — while the Great Midwest got two of its three — Cincinnati and Memphis State — through to the Sweet 16.

Then there were the Pac-10 and Southeastern Conference, each with four teams in the tournament at the start, each with only one — UCLA from the Pac-10, Kentucky from the SEC — still playing.

Duke, trying to become the first team to repeat as NCAA champion since UCLA in 1972-73, goes next against Seton Hall in the East. The region's other pairing has Kentucky against Massachusetts in the doubleheader Thursday night at Philadelphia. The final will be played Saturday.

The other Thursday-Saturday sequence is in the West, where Indiana meets Florida State and UCLA faces New Mexico State in the regional doubleheader at Albuquerque, N.M.

'Pudge' on verge of stardom?

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. — The Texas Rangers first noticed Ivan Rodriguez at a tryout camp in Puerto Rico.

Two Texas scouts saw a raw teen-ager of 15 making clothesline pegs to second base.

Rodriguez

"Put the gun on him," one Rangers scout told the other.

On the next throw by Rodriguez, the radar gun clocked him at 87 mph.

The Rangers signed him on the spot.

On June 20, at the age of 19 years and seven months, "Pudge" Rodriguez became the youngest player in the major leagues.

In fact, he was the third-youngest catcher in the majors since Gilberto Reyes (19 years, six months) in 1983.

His 88 games caught as a teen-ager were topped only by Frankie Hayes' 89 games with the Philadelphia A's in 1934.

"He is going to be a superstar soon," Rangers second baseman Julio Franco said.

"Ivan needs to learn a lot," said first baseman Rafael Palmeiro "but he is loaded with talent. Give him a full year and he will be some kind of a player. He's pretty amazing right now. Give him time he will be a superstar because he has all the tools."

As the St. Louis Cardinals discovered in a recent exhibition game.

Apparently not aware of "the Rodriguez rifle," the Cardinals tried to steal off him in the first two innings. Both runners were gunned down.

The Cardinals didn't run again until he was replaced in the lineup in the late innings.

In 1991, Rodriguez led American League catchers by throwing out 49 percent of the runners attempting to steal.

He also hit .262, which was topped only by Minnesota's Chuck Knoblauch (.281) and Cleveland's Mark Lewis (.264) among rookies with 250 or more at-bats.

Rodriguez worked with weights in the offseason and is 10 pounds bigger.

"I think it will make me stronger and I won't get tired towards the end of the season," Rodriguez said. "At times I got a little tired last year."

He's often compared to Johnny Bench during his rookie year with the Cincinnati Reds.

REBELS: Permian coach happy despite Panthers' seven errors game and should have had a pitcher warming up. I should have had somebody prepared for the last inning," said Lee head coach Jesse Benavidez.

When he didn't, Cordova came out cold to give up two walks then a base hit by Jeff Thomason that scored Jason Cothran to cut the score to 9-8. After pitcher Brian Bavousett, who struck out 11 Rebels in his own right while going the distance, hit a bloop single to shallow center to load the bases, Eric Louvin doubled to the right-center gap scoring the tying and game-wining runs in dramatic fashion.

"We had it in our hands and we needed a win right here. It makes it a little difficult (being 1½ games out of first place), but it's only the third game (of district). We're not out of it yet," Benavidez said.

While the Rebs tried to regroup from two consecutive losses, the Panthers rejoiced in their standing and ability to pull off the comeback.

Bavousett (5-2) ended the game with just three earned runs after the defense behind him committed seven errors and catcher Thomason allowed two passed balls. Still, Highley could not help but be high on his team.

"We feel real fortunate to beat a team as good as Lee, especially when we make that many errors. Brian's control was not what it usually is, and when he missed it was usually with good pitches for them to hit. But he's a competitor and got stronger those last couple of innings," Highley said.

The Rebels have the district open date Saturday, but filled the schedule by hosting Frenship in a doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday on Lee's Johnson Field.

NOTE: Abilene High head coach Dave Plymale stepped down from his position before Tuesday's game at San Angelo and asked to be reassigned. He will be employed as an AISD health teacher the rest of the school year, while eight-year AHS assistant Henry Willis takes over the Eagle reins. Plymale said the reason for his request was to pursue other business interests. He was 12-12 at AHS in his first season a year ago and the Eagles are 8-9, 2-1 in 4-5A this season.

MHS: Stanton, Greth each triple; 'Dogs travel to San Angelo next

From 1C

The tactic paid off on three occasions as the first Bulldog up eventually scored in the second, third and fourth innings.

"We did a real good job of bunting today," Wood said. "We don't have the long ball hitters, so we have to manufacture our runs."

Seven of MHS' nine hits were singles, with Jimmy Stanton and Richie Greth legging out triples. Stanton's long shot to the centerfield wall drove in two Bulldogs in the fourth, while and inning earlier Greth's opposite field three-bagger brought home Mike Melzer, who had singled to open the frame.

Both Stanton and Greth had two hits and two RBIs. Culpepper also finished with a deuce in the singles column, while Jeremy Burton scored a pair of runs.

Culpepper's work on the mound got stronger as the game progressed, which didn't come as a surprise to him.

"I get stronger the more I go on," Culpepper said. "The more confidence I get, the better I get. I was real confident in the later innings."

Culpepper's only bout with trouble — aside from allowing an unearned OHS run in the second — was loading the bases in the top of the seventh. OHS' Damon Petrey walked with one out, and then Culpepper hit Scott Holtzhaver and Kyle Braun on consecutive pitches to load the bases. The next two OHS batters, though, went down with a strikeout and a ground out to close the game.

"I was just trying to come inside at the knees on them," Culpepper said. "I wasn't trying to hit them."

Braun, who pinch hit and took Culpepper's second errant toss in the thigh, made a move toward the mound before common sense — and the home plate umpire — grabbed hold of him.

MHS travels to San Angelo for a 2 p.m. game Saturday, while OHS hosts district front-running Abilene Cooper.

UTEP overcomes ills on way to Sweet 16

Associated Press

EL PASO — While Texas-El Paso stands two victories short of a trip to the Final Four, the Miners have already cleared difficult hurdles that could have ruined their season.

The team heading into Friday night's Midwest Regional semifinals against Cincinnati is one that has overcome societal and athletic ills.

Less than a month before the season began, the NCAA slapped UTEP with sanction for several minor infractions. The punishment — three years of probation and cuts in scholarships — was light, but the administration fired assistant coaches Rus Bradburd and Greg Lackey.

Coach Don Haskins refused to talk about the NCAA sanctions on Tuesday. Asked about other adversities the team has faced, he said: "There are always obstacles."

"I don't think we were worried about the NCAA allegations as long as we got to play in the NCAA tournament we felt like everything was okay," guard Prince Stewart said.

"Things happen and you have to put them behind you and you have to keep going," he said.

Stewart, a senior from Lexington, Ky., speaks from experience.

Because of academic problems, he sat out during the 1990-91 season. He faield to pass enough hours and was unable to make them up in summer school.

Stewart started as a sophomore and junior for UTEP teams that went to the NCAA tournament and Haskins said last year that his absence affected the team.

Stewart has totaled ony 14 points in the Miners' tournament victories over Evansville and second-ranked. But his defensive play has been key in the victories.

"It made me more determined, more eager, more hungry," Stewart said. "It keeps you just remembering what it was like to sit out a whole year. It keeps you playing hard knowing how it feels not to be playing."

The Miners (27-6) opened Western Athletic Conference play this season facing more adversity: 6-foot-8 forward Marlon Maxey underwent arthroscopic knee surgery and missed UTEP's first three league games.

But Maxey's loss gave valuable playing time to the Miners' other inside men, Roy Howard, Ralph Davis and Johnny Melvin.

Just how valubale was evident in the Miners' upset of Kansas on Sunday night.

Ewing's 31 points lead Knicks

Associated Press

NBA

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing scored 16 of his 31 points in the first quarter Tuesday night and the New York Knicks held on for their fourth consecutive victory, 126-117 over the Orlando Magic.

Gerald Wilkins scored 11 of his 23 points in the first nine minutes of the third quarter, helping the Knicks take a 93-73 lead into the fourth period. They extended the margin to 23 on John Starks' 3-pointer with 11:45 to go.

But the Magic, who overcame a 20-point fourth-quarter deficit to win at Chicago on Saturday night, almost pulled off another dramatic victory. Trailing 102-85 with 8:27 left, Orlando outscored New York 24-12, closing to 114-109 with 1:59 remaining.

But New York, which leads the Atlantic Division by 4½ games over Boston, scored on its last six possessions to stay safely in front.

Cavaliers 128, Pacers 113

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Brad Daugherty had 32 points in his third career triple-double as the rampaging Cleveland Cavaliers dominated Indiana.

Daugherty added 11 rebounds and 11 assists in leading Cleveland to its eighth victory in nine games. The Cavaliers also won at home for the ninth straight time while ending Indiana's four-game winning streak.

The Cavaliers made their first 11 shots, taking a 24-7 lead on Mark Price's 3-pointer with 5:34 to play in the first quarter.

Bulls 116, Nuggets 103

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored 50 points, falling one shy of his season high, and Chicago continued to roll with a victory over Denver.

Jordan, leading the NBA with a 30-point average, scored 51 Thursday night against Washington. He led Chicago to its ninth victory in 10 games and 29th in 34 at home this season.

Reggie Williams led the Nuggets, who lost for the 29th time in 35 road games, with 31 points.

SuperSonics 128, Rockets 106

SEATTLE — Derrick McKey scored 23 points and Shawn Kemp led a 21-9 third-quarter spurt with seven points Tuesday night as the Seattle SuperSonics defeated the Houston Rockets.

The Sonics led 73-63 midway through the third period, then turned the gam into a rout with a 94-72 lead after three quarters.

The Rockets played without center Hakeem Olajuwon, who was suspended indefinitely by the team on Monday.

Trail Blazers 109, Mavericks 83

PORTLAND, Ore. — Terry Porter scored 19 points, nine of them during a 16-6 run in the third quarter, as the Portland Trail Blazers clinched a playoff berth and handed the Dallas Mavericks their 14th consecutive defeat and 22nd straight road loss.

The Trail Blazers' reserves outscored the Mavericks' bench players 50-23 while Portland's leading scorer, Clyde Drexler, finished with just 10 points.

Tendinitis sidelines Cincinnati's Rob Dibble

Associated Press

Cincinnati Reds reliever Rob Dibble will miss the rest of spring training with tendinitis in his right shoulder, and it's uncertain when he'll be able to pitch again.

An MRI exam Tuesday found no serious injury to Dibble's shoulder, which has given him problems this spring. The right-hander will be on a strengthening program for the next 10 days to two weeks, the Reds announced Tuesday night.

Dibble hopes to avoid opening the season on the disabled list.

"I'm not going to be out the whole year," Dibble said. "All the doctors agree I don't need surgery. I will be ready to pitch within a month, I promise you that."

Dibble, 28, had magnetic resonance imaging on the shoulder Tuesday afternoon at a Tampa hospital while the team was playing Philadelphia in Clearwater.

Reds consulting physician Richard Jolson recommended a 10-day program of weight lifting to strengthen the shoulder and arm, followed by a throwing program.

"If I'm ready to pitch one week into the season, I may not have to go on the DL," Dibble said.

The hard-throwing reliever has been ineffective this spring, giving up 10 hits, five walks and six earned runs in 6 2-3 innings for an 8.10 earned run average. His fastball lost its bite and Dibble complained of stiffness in the right shoulder.

Dibble saved 31 games last season and struck out 124 in 82 1-3 innings. Without Dibble, the Reds will rely on Norm Charlton and Scott Ruskin as their stoppers.

The MRI test was originally scheduled for Monday, but was pushed back a day because no anesthesiologist was available to prepare Dibble. An MRI is done in a cylinder, and Dibble is claustrophobic.

The Detroit Tigers, meanwhile, got some good medical news when Alan Trammell was cleared to resume spring training after his stiff back was examined by a doctor in Los Angeles.

"I'm going to play Thursday night," said Trammell, who returned from the West Coast on a red-eye flight early Tuesday. "I'd like to play anywhere from four to six innings. We'll see how it goes."

Trammell, who has played in only three spring exhibition games, was examined Monday by Dr. Robert Wadkins, an orthopedic specialist. Doctors, however, were unable to pinpoint what caused the inflammation that has sidelined Trammell since March 14.

If all goes well, Trammell is convinced he can be ready to take his regular spot in the lineup when the Tigers open the season April 6 at home against Toronto.

"I think the games remaining in Florida will give me enough time to get the feel for taking grounders again, and probably enough at-bats to feel comfortable at the plate," Trammell said. "It won't be like going in cold turkey."

John Kruk got back into the swing, sort of, for the Philadelphia Phillies on Tuesday after missing a week because of an inflamed left shoulder.

Kruk was a designated hitter in a morning game at the team's minor-league complex, but was pulled from the starting lineup for the afternoon's exhibition game against Cincinnati because he could not throw.

Kruk hurt himself while diving for a ground ball at first base on March 17, and now will be evaluated on a day-to-day basis. Team physician Phillip Marone said he did not think the injury would prevent Kruk from playing on opening day.

"As I told John, the major treatment is rebuilding the muscles around the shoulder," Marone said.

Marone likened the problem to that of Phillies pitchers Ken Howell and Jose DeJesus.

"DeJesus responded (to treatment). Howell did not respond and you know what happened to him," Marone said.

Howell missed all of last season after shoulder surgery and apparently will not pitch again in 1992.

Marone said about Kruk, "The positive part is that he is not a pitcher, so he has a better chance of responding favorably."

PUDGE: Texas touts Rodriguez

(From 1C)

It's a comparison Rodriguez relishes.

"I saw Johnny Bench play on TV," Rodriguez said. "I thought he was a great player. If somebody feels I should be compared to him, then fine because I thought he was the best catcher in the majors."

Remarkably, Rodriguez wasn't in awe in his first season in the majors.

"You would have thought someone in his first year in the majors would have a little awe but Ivan didn't," Texas general manager Tom Grieve said. "I know I did. He's just amazingly mature."

Rodriguez, who got married during the season last year, and his wife are expecting a child in about two months.

"I feel very relaxed going into this season," Rodriguez said. "I know our pitchers better and I believe my defense can get better."

The only criticism against Rodriguez was his errors on throws to first base trying to pick off enemy runners.

"We want him to be a little more controlled on that this year," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said. "We want him to do it more in the team concept."

Rodriguez threw out 34 of 70 basestealers last year, which placed him second in the major leagues.

"I can do better," he said.

Rhode Island advances double overtime

Associated Press

NIT

NEWTON, Mass. — Jason Alexander made a 3-pointer with 34 seconds left in the second over time, and Rhode Island survived three Boston College shots in the final 17 seconds for an 81-80 victory Tuesday night in the second round of the NIT.

Jeff Kent led Rhode Island (22-9), which advanced to the quarterfinals, with 19 points. Abdul Fox added 17 and Kyle Ivey-Jones had 15.

Bill Curley had 30 points and Howard Eisley 22 for Boston College (17-14).

After Boston College's Malcolm Huckaby made a 3-pointer with 54 seconds left to move the Eagles ahead 80-78, Alexander hit his long jumper from the right side to win the game.

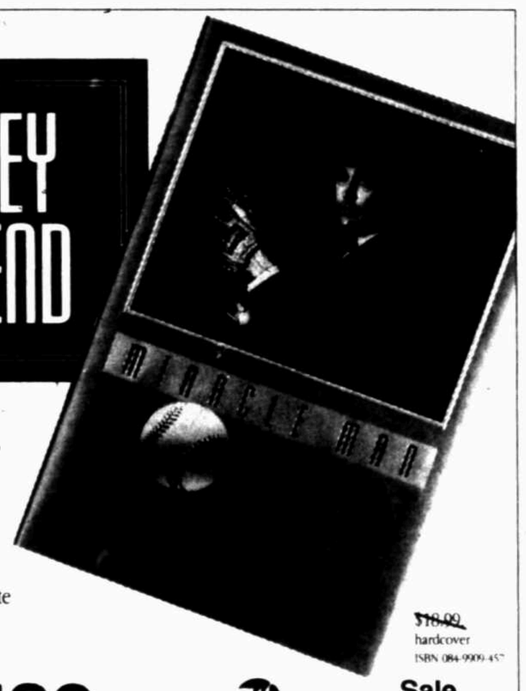

Utah 60, Arizona St. 58

TEMPE, Ariz. — Byron Wilson scored the last of his 16 points on two free throws with 25 seconds as Utah defeated Arizona.

Utah (22-10) rallied from a six-point deficit in the final 3½ minutes to earn a home game against Rhode Island on Friday.

Arizona State (19-14) got 24 points from freshman Mario Bennett, who scored his team's first nine points of the second half.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Nurture an artistic or musical talent that has been neglected in the recent past. A challenging new work assignment in June will increase your self-confidence. Renew your passport if planning to travel abroad for business next September. A business obstacle will be overcome and long-term financial gains recorded by December. Ask for a raise early in 1993.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Aretha Franklin, sportscaster Howard Cosell, feminist Gloria Steinem, rock star Elton John.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): There could be an obstacle in your path today and possibly some cross words, too. An intelligent concession will solve everything. Romance perks up your spirits this evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Think before you speak. Critical comments could disturb work relations or undermine a recent agreement. If romance has been tense lately, focus on your platonic relationships.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An unwise financial or employment change could cause chaos. Do not let your anxieties get the best of you. Pie-in-the-sky proposals will not bring the results you want.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Work pressures could lead you to lock horns with someone whose cooperation you need. Be careful not to say something you will regret. Emphasize team spirit. Tackle household chores.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Apply your will power to a tough task. Diligent effort sparks a wonderful transformation. Be cautious in financial matters. Business must come before pleasure tonight; loved ones understand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Rev up for a busy day! Romance or favors are easily won. Welcome changing circumstances. Dress to impress if attending a business dinner or convention.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may have to put your time at someone's disposal today. Do not become impatient at this turn of events. Favorable influences make it possible for you to tie up loose ends rather quickly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Romance begins to heat up. Avoid taking any action that gives the impression you are doing something underhanded. Today's efforts have greater value than you can imagine.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your relationships on the home front improve. Loved ones are willing to assume more responsibility. Catch up on routine work at the office. Rocking the romantic boat tonight would be a mistake.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Those of you whose values are spiritual rather than worldly will benefit most today. A fortunate trend favors your close personal relationships. Put more excitement into romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may be glad to get back into your routine today. Try not to dwell on an upsetting experience. Take a more imaginative approach to a work project.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A stroke of good luck improves the atmosphere at work. The day gets off to an excellent start. An unexpected reunion with an old friend can give you a decided business advantage.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are outgoing, competitive and eager to win the approval of people in authority. Their cleverness in the classroom could make them more popular with the teacher than with their peers. Willing to work long hours to achieve success, these Aries strive hard for professional status and financial security. Highly choosy about their mates, they tend to marry later in life. The ideal spouse will share their ambition and dedication to work.

The bidding:

2 ♣	2 ◇	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	5 ♣	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠

Sometimes, all the salient features of a hand can be determined even before you play to the first trick. Cover up the East-West cards and decide whether you can equal South's performance at a contract of five clubs after the lead of the king of spades.

South did not feel the quality of the club suit quite merited a vulnerable three-club preempt. However, when North showed a good club raise with the spade cue-bid, South jumped in clubs and North elected to raise to game because of the diamond honors behind the bidder.

West led the king of spades and the hand was soon over. Declarer won the first trick in dummy with the ace, led the jack of clubs and, when East followed low, shot up with the ace to fell the king. With the king of diamonds onside, declarer lost only two heart tricks.

No, South was not a peeker. Neither was declarer a disciple of The Rabbi, who formulated the rule: "When the king is singleton, play the ace." Declarer had good reason for spurning the percentage play of the club finesse in favor of the drop.

Had West held both the ace and king of hearts, the defender almost certainly would have selected a high heart as the opening lead rather than the king of spades from a holding headed by K Q 10 at best. And since East did not respond to West's opening bid, that defender could not hold the king of clubs in addition to a high heart. Ergo: West held the king of clubs, and the only chance for the contract was to find it singleton.

Starship captain Kirk to fill new saddle for Derby fest

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — William Shatner, most familiar at the helm of the fictional starship Enterprise, will be in the saddle during next month's Kentucky Derby Festival.

Arrangements aren't final, but Shatner is expected to lead the 37th annual Pegasus Parade on horseback April 30, parade officials say. The week-long festival climaxes with the race on May 2.

Shatner

Last year's grand marshal was Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf.

"I'm just telling everybody that we have to go to another galaxy to top Schwarzkopf," festival chairwoman Carol Hebel said.

Shatner, who played Capt. James T. Kirk on the long-running NBC "Star Trek" television series, owns a horse farm and is gaining a new kind of stardom in horsing circles for his acumen for raising and training horses.

PARIS — Brigitte Bardot said she severed her contract with a French television station after it allowed a comedy special to delay broadcast of one of her documentaries about endangered animals.

Ms. Bardot, 57, the sex idol-turned-animal rights activist, Tuesday released her letter to TF1 canceling four future "SOS Animals" programs.

Her 'SOS" documentary scheduled on listings for 10:30 p.m. Monday wasn't shown until 11:45 p.m., upstaged by a special feature on popular French stand-up comics.

"My programs are serious documentaries ... not a filler that you can show later and later as the years go by," she wrote to TF1 chief executive Patrick Lelay.

TF1 has shown a dozen "SOS Animals" documentaries over the past three years. Despite late time slots, their ratings generally are high.

PARIS — Undersea explorer Jacques-Yves Cousteau presented plans Tuesday for a floating marine laboratory big enough to carry a helicopter, hydroplane and minisubmarine.

Cousteau designed the 216-foot-long, 52-foot-wide, wind-driven vessel he calls, "Calypso II" for monitoring the "general health of the planet," he told a news conference.

The 81-year-old Costeau, an international advocate for the environment through his research and documentaries, didn't say what research the vessel would undertake.

Nor did Cousteau say what the ship would cost other than to say he hoped to build it by 1995-96 if he raises enough money for the project.

President and Mrs. Carter received the Notre Dame Award.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — The rich forget the poor too easily, former President Carter told a University of Notre Dame audience.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn Carter, became inaugural recipients on Monday of the Notre Dame Award, an honor established by the Roman Catholic university to recognize humanitarian service on a global scale.

The wealthy assume their rights to good health care, jobs, homes and safety, Carter said.

"Many people do not have any of those things," he said. "The tendency is to wipe that out of our minds, or address it in superficial ways."

Since leaving the White House in 1981, the Carters lend their energies to an array of causes in this country and abroad: low-cost housing, mental illness, immunizing poor children, improving grain production in Africa, among others.

"I think it's so important for us to get to know and love the people of the world," Mrs. Carter said in accepting the award.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Grand Ole Opry star Boxcar Willie is recording a long-lost song written by the late Hank Williams Sr.

The song, "If I Didn't Love You," was found recently by Hillous Butrum, one of Williams' band members in the early 1950s.

"It was never recorded," Boxcar Willie said Friday. "The only record of it was on a radio show. Hillous got the transcriptions somewhere."

Boxcar Willie said he got two encores after doing the song on the Opry two weeks ago.

Williams, who died Jan. 1, 1953, recorded such hits as "Your Cheatin' Heart," "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry" and "Lovesick Blues."

Prices gain

NEW YORK — Natural gas futures jumped Tuesday to their highest close of the year, perking up an otherwise dull day in the energy market.

Much of the rise in natural gas seemed to be based on technical trading considerations, but analysts said recent cold weather throughout much of the nation was also having an impact.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in May settled at $19.22 per barrel, up 9 cents. Lower-grade sour crude for delivery in May settled at $16.50 per barrel, up 12 cents.

Posted prices from local purchasers were mixed, with Scurlock Permian maintaining a price of $17.75, Navajo Refining raising its price 25 cents to $18 and Texaco Trading and Transportation raising its price 25 cents to $18.25. Phillips Petroleum put its price Monday at $18.40 per barrel.

Natural gas for delivery in April settled at $1.418 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 7.2 cents from the final price Monday, when gas had also shown a sharp gain of 7.8 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Natural gas had not been above $1.40 since late December and has made a big recovery since setting a record low of $1.02 at the Mercantile Exchange on Jan. 24.

Dollar slumps

NEW YORK — The dollar was mostly lower in light trading Tuesday as the market awaited further reports to confirm improvement in the U.S. economy.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 133.80 yen, down 0.40 yen from Monday's close.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7200 from $1.7170 late Monday.

In New York, one dollar fetched 1.6635 marks, down from 1.6665 the day before.

Stocks fall

NEW YORK — Prices fell in uncertain trading on Wall Street Tuesday, led by a drop in automotive stocks after the nation's big carmakers reported sales sagged in mid-March.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 11.18 points to 3,260.96.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 4 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Kerr-McGee cuts

OKLAHOMA CITY — Kerr-McGee Corp. laid off 160 of its 6,000 employees worldwide Tuesday as part of a cost-cutting move.

Company spokesman Dow Dozier blamed the economy and its effect on the energy industry.

RTC shows off remaining assets

■ Thrift bailout agency describes to potential investors the $23.25 billion portfolio of properties up for sale in Texas.

By Evan Ramstad
Associated Press writer

DALLAS (AP) — About 1,000 potential investors gathered in a Dallas hotel Tuesday so the government bailout agency could show what's left to sell from the portfolios of failed Texas thrifts.

It's the tough stuff.

Real estate, more than half of it raw land, represents about one-third of the $23.25 billion in assets the Resolution Trust Corp. still needs to sell in Texas, the state where the most thrifts failed.

Of the $34.2 billion in failed thrift assets that have already been sold, only $3.0 billion has been real estate.

"Raw land is extremely difficult to sell," said Jim Messec, director of the Dallas-Fort Worth RTC office. "We have some programs coming up we think will sell a lot of it."

Chief among them is a series of 21 auctions, virtually one each week, around the state where raw land valued below $500,000 will be sold without reserve, or minimum, asking price.

"If you properly advertise a product . . . give it plenty of exposure and have a significant number of bidders, the market is going to speak," Messec said. "Whatever that price seems to be, that price will come out in the auction process."

The agency last summer crossed the threshold where it had sold more in Texas than it has remaining to sell. It did so chiefly through sales of securities and mortgages to banks interested in interest-bearing, and therefore moneymaking, assets.

On Monday, RTC chief executive Albert Casey announced a restructuring aimed at cutting the agency's 8,000-person workforce in half by next year. The move eliminates a layer of management, including a regional office that employs 200 in Dallas.

The regional office presides over field offices in Dallas, Houston and San Antonio. Under the restructuring, the activities of the San Antonio and Baton Rouge, La., field offices will be moved to Dallas, likely resulting in more RTC employees than the 450 now in the city.

The RTC, created by Congress in 1989 to tidy up the savings and loan mess, aims to finish its work by the start of 1996 and Messec said the restructuring is part of the agency's evolution.

"Our business is going out of business," he said.

There are only two problem savings and loans — MeraBank Texas and Sunbelt Federal Savings FSB — that could add to the RTC's asset portfolio.

"We don't anticipate any more," said RTC spokeswoman Teresa McUsic. "If we do get some, we think they will be very small and not have much impact on our asset count."

Of the $23.3 billion worth of assets left in Texas, nearly half are assigned to the Dallas office.

Messec said that office aims to sell $3.5 billion this year. The agency touted its financing packages during the three-hour seminar.

Midlanders will see little change, Team Bank says

Staff Report

Customers at Team Bank — Midland can expect to see very little change due to the purchase of Team Bank by Banc One Corp., according to Stacy Frye of Team Bank's marketing department in Dallas.

Banc One, through its Bank One Texas operations, has a location in Odessa.

The deal, expected to be completed during the fourth quarter, according to Frye, calls for the exchange of shares in Bank One for each share of Team Bancshares. Total value of the transaction is $782 million or $82 per share of Team Bancshares. The number of Banc One shares to be exchanged is subject to adjustment of up to 10 percent based on the stock's market value.

The merger of the two companies, both known for their focus on consumer banking, would create the state's second largest bank company with about 200 branches and over $19 billion in assets. Only NationsBank, with $35 billion in assets, is larger. The merger, applauded by a majority of analysts, is subject to regulatory approval.

Team Bancshares is the state's sixth largest bank with assets of $5.5 billion. It was formed in 1989 by Ronald Steinhart, chairman and chief executive officer, in a federally assisted takeover of Texas American Bancshares.

Banc One, based in Columbus, Ohio, entered Texas in 1989 with the purchase of 20 banks of MCorp. Since then, it has acquired such thrifts as Bright Banc Savings Association and Benjamin Franklin Savings Association.

U.S. needs technology to keep oil, gas production flowing, expert says

■ Director of Sarkey Energy Center at Oklahoma University speaks to Permian Basin OU Club.

Staff Report

Dan O'Neil, Oklahoma University vice president and director of its Sarkey Energy Center at Norman, said today that more federal funds were needed for energy research.

Speaking to a gathering of the Permian Basin OU Club, he said only $50 million of the Department of Energy's $2 billion budget went for oil and gas research, and that the United States needed technology to keep its own oil and gas production flowing.

O'Neil, who was formerly with Georgia Tech in an administrative research capacity, said something was very wrong when only $50 million of the $19 billion federal research funds goes to oil and gas research.

He said the $50 million Sarkey Research Center was one of the best things to happen to OU and that the university intended to aggressively seek energy research funds and hoped to impact national energy policy in the process.

O'Neil said the aim was to make Sarkey Energy Center one of the top five energy research centers in the country. He also noted that OU intended to aggressively pursue intentions to bring federal energy research facilities now at Bartlesville under the wing of OU.

In other research, he said OU had been selected as one of five sites in the world to monitor global warming. He said earth radiation and not green house gasses were now thought to be the main culprit in global warming.

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases ... even more!

➥ OK ... but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday - Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

An initial $100 deposit is required.
