RECEIVES NEW ROAD WORKING EQUIPMENT

A new H. P. one man road maintainer, was added to the equipment of this State Highway Section, under supervision of Sanford Roe, last week and Jacob McDonald, who will operate this machine, was familiarizing himself with its operation this week. Mr. Roe's section now has two of these H. P. one-man maintainers, a five-ton caterpillar for heavy work and three graders. The H. P. one-man maintainer is a combination machine, having an eight-foot blade and a scarifier, either or both of which may be used at one time, and the frame is built onto a Fordson tractor.

Mr. Roe was in San Angelo Monday for a meeting of the Highway foremen and supervisors of this District, and brought back the information that a State Highway Engineer would be here the last of this week or the first of next, to lay out the road change on South Llano, beginning at the ten-mile crossing. One of the purposes of the San Angelo meeting was to arrange some concerted and uniform method of assisting in the enforcing of the new law governing the weight of loads carried by trucks. A communication furnished by District Engineer Joe Gresham, is found in this issue and those operating trucks on the Highways, should familiarize themselves with the provisions of the law and avoid prosecution. The Highway Department is taking steps to see that the law is enforced and as it is a law that is necessary for the protection of the roads, the public will be interested in seeing it enforced.

HALLOWEEN BRIDGE

The ranch home of Mrs. Joe D. Watson was a scene of much merriment Thursday, when she so graciously entertained the members of the Laf-a-Lot Club and guests with a Halloween bridge party.

The spacious living room, with its decorations of black cats, witches, pumpkins and the glow from the orange candles made a very weird setting.

As soon as all guests arrived a plate luncheon, consisting of baked chicken and dressing, fruit salad in orange cups, buttered bread sandwiches and hot tea, was enjoyed by the guests.

In the game of bridge, Miss Fae Taylor received a box of candy for high club prize; Mrs. Lee J. Corkill for second prize, received a box of pretty stationery. Mrs. Van Martin was awarded a dainty orange bud vase and Mrs. John D. Phillips was presented a pair of hand-painted orange shoe trees, for first and second guest prizes. Miss May Hill was consoled with a pumpkin.

The tallies, napkins and plate favors, as well as the decorations and candies, carried out the Halloween motif.

In the afternoon hot tea and pumpkin pie topped with whipped cream and pecans, were served.

On account of a heavy run of advertising this week, it was found necessary at the last minute to leave out two ads. of considerable size and to run one on the front page, a practice that this paper has never indulged in, but with insufficient time to print two extra pages, and get out on time this week, we had to do this.

Roland St. Clair had the misfortune of getting an arm broken Tuesday in a fall off the curb on the east side of the Wiggley Drug Store.

STEPS ARE TAKEN TO ENFORCE ROAD LAW.

San Angelo, Texas, Oct. 26.—At a recent meeting of the State Highway Commission, Division Engineers were instructed to take steps to see that all motor vehicles operating in this State have paid correct license fees, and are not carrying loads in excess of their registered capacity.

In Division No. 7, lists of all trucks, tractors, trailers and busses registered will be compiled from the Tax Collector's records and furnished Maintenance Superintendents and Section Foremen of the various counties, whose duty it will be to report any violations of the motor vehicle laws to the county officials.

While it is not intended to place the Maintenance forces of the State Highway Department in the position of Highway police, it is intended that drastic steps, if necessary, be taken to insure that Highway laws are complied with, especially those that pertain to overloading vehicles, which if continued will result in hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of damage to higher type pavements, besides undue wear on gravel and earth roads.

The Maintenance forces in this Division have their hands full in maintaining the roads, and if owners of motor vehicles will acquaint themselves with and comply with registration laws, it is to be hoped that minimum of them will be used in checking up on and reporting such violations.

It is therefore urged that all owners of motor vehicles who are not at present complying with the laws, inform themselves and immediately comply with same in order that the counties and State receive all taxes due them and our existing roads be not damaged by excessive loading.

W. T. Bendy, District Highway supervisor, was here today looking after road maintenance work for the Highway Dept.

FORD MOTOR COMPANY PRODUCTION RECORD.

The Ford Motor Company's production record moved up to a higher peak than ever during the last week. Figures given out by the company Saturday afternoon, showed that for the week of October 17-23, the domestic production totaled 49,004 cars and trucks, a record for any six-day period, according to information received by the Junction Hardware Company, local Ford dealers.

The biggest day for the week, which reached a new record, was last Tuesday, when 8,466 cars and trucks were produced.

MORE POLO.

Last Sunday was a big day on the Watson Divide. In addition to a fine polo game between Junction and the Divide boys, a big crowd enjoyed dinner and supper of barbecued chevon and all the other good things to eat that only the Watson Divide people know how to serve. Quite a number of Junction people spent the day there.

Pierce Hoggett, Wat Turner, Marvin Skaggs and Doug Nance represented Junction, while Joe Watson, Millard Bennett, Marvin Cowsert, Sam Nance and Bustr Wolf represented the Divide, in the game which resulted in a score of 11 to 2 in favor of the Divide.

Marvin Cowsert has been elected Captain of this team and any teams desiring a game can get in touch with him.

During a rest period an accident happened that looked for a time as if it would prove very serious. Marvin Skaggs rode up near another player's horse, and in some way caught his spur in a rope that was tied to the other man's horse. The horse became frightened and in getting away pulled Marvin off his horse and dragged him about thirty yards, but he was not injured.

WHEN MONEY WAS THE SCARCEST THING

By Edgar White in Youth's Companion.

In these days of enormous circulation of legal tender it is hard to realize that there ever was a time when people would go for months without ever seeing a dollar bill. Money was so scarce that silver dollars were cut into quarters with a chisel and each piece was called "two bits." Almost anything was legal tender, but Uncle Sam had to have cash before he would deliver a letter to the recipient. Here is an authentic incident, related by a merchant of Macon County, Missouri, that illustrates the difficulty people had in getting a little real money:

A farm hand was notified that a letter from Virginia was awaiting him in the post office at Bloomington, Missouri, and that on it were charges for twenty-five cents. The man was unable to borrow any money, though he had plenty of friends who would have given him many dollars' worth of provisions or of anything else that he might need. In a day or two he learned that a man some twenty-five miles away wanted some chopping done and was willing to pay real money for it. Anxious to get his letter, the farm hand walked twenty-five miles to the timber, worked two days for twenty-five cents in cash, walked back to Bloomington and paid to get his letter out of the post office. Such incidents were not rare.

In a recent talk about the early methods of doing business a man, who kept a general store in Macon, referred to the security that people in the rural districts enjoyed from the thieves before the war between the states, he said:

"In some of the larger stores there were big iron safes that opened with an enormous glass key. It turned a simple lock, and a modern 'cracksmen' would have laughed at it. But the big key and the strong iron safe looked good to the people of the town.

"The safe in our store at Huntsville was a sort of bank for the few who had money. Its good reputation as a safe place of deposit was never questioned until Bill Anderson and his guerrilla gang swooped down on the town in September, 1864, smashed the safe and took the money. Among the loot was three hundred dollars that belonged to Tad Austin, who had been a schoolmate of Anderson's. Tad needed the money badly that he had the temerity to walk through the rough riders up to the chief and demand it. Anderson shook hands with him, pointed out the 'treasurer,' ordered him to give Tad whatever amount he claimed.

"The things we sold at our store in the fifties striped stick candy, hoar-hound, candy kisses wrapped in paper with affectionate mottoes, writing paper, quills, ink, axes, plows, nails, drugs,—the variety was not large, for there were not so many complaints then,—dry goods, boots and shoes, grindstones, skiffs, clothing and story books.

"The finest food in the world was within reach of the poorest man. Choice venison hams sold for twenty cent a pair. Quail were twelve cents a dozen. There was virtually no price on eggs, they were so cheap, and the same was true of wild honey. But with all those delicacies so plentiful, the pioneer craved mackerel, herring and salt fish! And the store had to keep them in stock.

"Tobacco, as I said, was the farmer's money crop. If he put out a good crop, his credit was good at the store. North Missouri raised a tremendous amount of tobacco. The product was treated and casked in large frame buildings called to bacco factories and transported to Glasgow on the plank road. There it was loaded on a steamer for St. Louis, where it was transferred to another steamer and shipped to New Orleans. From New Orleans our tobacco went to Liverpool, which furnished us a steady market at good prices until India went into the business and then our farmers quit raising tobacco and turned to corn and wheat.

"Before the era of the traveling salesman the head of the firm would go to St. Louis to choose a new lot of goods. The big wholesale houses of St. Louis were on the levee, on Main street and on Second street, almost within arm's reach of the river. Our goods would come up to Glasgow on boats and from there would follow the toll road to Huntsville. That toll road was the pioneer's idea of an improved highway. A company that was capitalized for twenty-five thousand dollars built it. There was a toll gate every five miles. The stage coaches, freight wagons and private carriages all used the road, and it paid a dividend every year until the railway came into our neighborhood.

The return of the merchant was followed by a night reception at the store, where he would graphically describe the incidents of his journey, how the boat behaved and its troubles with sandbars, the famous statesmen and planters he had met either at the Southern or at the Planters' Hotel, and how Broadway was looking. How we young fellows did envy the man who was able to travel such a mighty distance and talk with nonchalance of steam boat captains, hotel proprietors and policemen in uniform."

PRESIDENT PROCLAIMS THANKSGIVING DAY.

Washington.—President Coolidge has proclaimed Thursday, November 26, as Thanksgiving Day, when gratitude should be expressed for "many and great blessings" which have come to the people during the past year.

The Nation has been brought with safety and honor through another 12 months, the proclamation said, at peace at home and abroad, with the public health good, with harvests and industries productive and labor well rewarded.

"The season approaches when in accordance with a long established and respected custom a day is set apart to give thanks to Almighty God for the manifold blessings which His gracious and benevolent providence has bestowed upon us as a Nation and as individuals.

"We have been brought with safety and honor through another year and through the generosity of nature. He has blessed us with resources whose potentiality in wealth is almost incalculable; we are at peace at home and abroad; the public health is good; we have been undisturbed by pestilence or great catastrophe; our harvests and our industries have been rich in productivity; our commerce spreads over the whole world, and labor has been well rewarded for its remunerative service.

"As we have grown and prospered in material things, so also should we progress in moral and spiritual things. We are a God-fearing people who should set ourselves against evil and strive for righteousness in living, and observing the golden rule we should from our abundance help and serve those less fortunately placed. We should too in gratitude to God for His many favors.

"Now, therefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, president of the United States, do hereby set apart Thursday, the twenty-sixth day of November, next, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer and I recommend that on that day the people shall cease from their work and in their homes or in their accustomed places of worship, devoutly give thanks to the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received, and to seek His guidance that they may deserve a continuance of His favor.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the city of Washington, this twenty-sixth day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred twenty-five, and of the independence of the United States of America, the one hundred fiftieth.

"CALVIN COOLIDGE,"
Seal (By the President).
Frank B. Kellogg, Secretary of State.

Recently a florist in a New York suburb gave his wife a new lawn mower for the birthday present. This equals the husband who gave his wife a new axe for her wedding present.

The promoters of the Marble Falls Textile Mill contend that the plant will be ready for operation by early spring. What a wonderful sight it will be to see Burnet County Cotton converted into cloth right here at home, and the machinery for this immense enterprise will all be driven by water power that has been going to waste for years. The textile mill is just the beginning of great things for Marble Falls. One enterprise calls for another, and the cheap power is a factor that enters into the combining of capital to bring about development. We look upon the cotton mill project as a wonderful opportunity for investment. The management that has characterized the organization from its beginning is bound to make the investment attractive in the years to come.—Marble Falls Messenger.

LEARNED A LESSON.

Once a farmer had 1,800 bushels of wheat, which he had sold, not to one grain merchant but to 1,800 different dealers, a bushel to each. A few of them paid cash, but far the greater number said they would pay later. A few months passed and the man's bank account ran low. "How is this," he said, "my 1,800 bushels of grain should have kept me until another crop was raised, but I have parted with the grain and instead I have a vast number of accounts, small and scattered, that I cannot get around and collect fast enough.

So he posted a public notice and asked all who owed him to come and pay quickly. But few came. The rest said: "Mine is only a small matter and I will come and pay you some other day." Though each account was very small, when they were all put together it meant a goodly sum to the man and enough to enable him to pay his own bills and meet his needs. Things went on thus. The man got to feeling so badly that he fell out of bed and awoke. Running to his granary, he found the 1,800 bushels of wheat still there.

The next day he went to the publisher of his home paper and said: "Here sir, is pay for your paper, and when next year's subscription is due you can count on me to pay you promptly. I stood in the position of an editor last night, and I know how it feels to have his honestly earned money all over the country in small amounts."

The moral is: "Go thou and do likewise."—Chatsworth (Ill) Plaindealer.

FORD NEWS STORY.

Despite the growing general tendency towards the closed type of car, the touring car is the biggest selling automobile in America. Severe weather give closed cars great sale impetus and in the north sections of the country where the climate is rigorous, the closed types are favorites. In "fair weather" districts, however, the performance of the open cars of family size is sufficiently pronounced to turn the balance for the entire nation.

In this connection reports of the Ford Motor Company received by the local Ford dealers, the Junction Hardware Co. show a demand for touring cars which is unusual for this season of the year and which calls for a production of 100,000 of these cars during October.

The touring car always has been the most popular in the Ford line. The exceptional demand at the present time, however, may be accounted for by the new features of comfort and convenience which have been incorporated in the improved type.

Addition of a door at the driver's left, storm curtains which afford complete protection and open with doors, greater leg room and a more attractive appearance in the general lines of the car have all contributed to bringing increased popularity to the five-passenger open type.

TEXAS MAY BE ABLE TO SUPPLY RUBBER.

Alpine, Texas.—More than 1,000,000 acres of wild and semi-arid land in the upper border region of Texas may supply part of America's rubber needs.

This region is again covered with a commercial growth of guayule shrubs.

It is from these shrubs that rubber was formerly extracted. Fifteen years ago a guayule rubber factory was constructed at Marathon, a few miles east of here, and operated successfully until the wild growth was exhausted.

The reappearance of the guayule plants has led many persons to believe that extensive rubber manufacturing will soon be under way in Texas.

FACTS ABOUT HEN—WHICH TO KEEP OR CULL

These are Culls:

1. Hens that are unnaturally light in weight, showing little life, dried up legs, dull sunken eyes, head long and snaky, long beak.

2. Hens that show any signs of sickness, of crippled, deformed or undersized for the breed.

3. Hens that persist in sitting or being broody.

4. Hens with dried-up combs, hard and survey in appearance dull eyes.

5. Hens showing thick, hard or gristly pelvic bones, hollowed, or close together.

6. Hens showing lack of capacity in body formation, that is, too short a distance between the pelvic and keel (or rear end of breast bone). In the larger breeds at least three fingers width should show there. In the smaller breeds two fingers at least.

7. Early molters, hens that begin in May and June to shed their feathers.

8. In all breeds that are supposed to have yellow legs, skin and beak, hens retaining these colors strongly are usually the poor layers.

Hens to Keep:

1. Hens with bright, soft red combs and big, round bright eyes, broad skulls, beak medium length strong and slightly curved.

2. Hens showing an average fair weight for their respective breeds.

3. Hens that do not molt before the last of August or first of September. Plumage may be dry, more or less disheveled or broken up, especially the ends of the main tail feathers.

4. Hens showing a soft, (not flabby) abdomen, loose, soft skin.

5. Pelvic bones flexible and wide apart, two and a half to four inches or more.—Goldthwaite Eagle.

FIVE MILLION FEET GAS WELL

H. O. Westerfield of Cisco, who has been drilling for some time past on the White ranch, was in Brady this week and reported having brought in a fine gas well, with an estimated flow of 5,000,000 cubic feet. The well is located about one mile southwest of Mercury, and about a mile east of the Cooper shallow oil field. Mr. Westerfield struck the gas flow at 380 feet, after passing through several small showings of oil. His object in coming to Brady this week was to secure permit from the county commissioners for the construction of a pipe line to Mercury for the purpose of piping gas for heating, illuminating and all domestic purposes.

Mr. Westerfield is very enthusiastic over the possibilities of developing a real oil and gas field in McCulloch and says he will start next week on drilling a bunch of wells in the immediate Mercury vicinity.—Brady Standard.

OLD SPANISH TRAIL NEWS

Old Spanish Trail Headquarters state that over 15,000 West Texas travelogs have already been distributed. The demand is proving that editions of 20,000 copies are not sufficient, altho an edition of this size costs over $1,000 for printing and engraving work alone. These travelogs give complete mileage, road condition, population and other information from St. Augustine to San Diego. They specially carry a wealth of detailed information about West Texas, including San Antonio and El Paso. The demand for the travelogs is due to the fact that tourists want to enjoy all the territory between Florida and California. Now Louisiana, West Texas and Arizona offer good tourist attractions.

Schools all over the United States find the information so carefully compiled that they are using the travelogs for teaching physical geography and old history, without question. Old Spanish Trail literature will be the means of educating the people concerning the opportunities and attractions of the Southwest. Not only are the school children learning of West Texas in their studies, but they take the travelogs home and the fathers and mothers throughout the nation are learning of this country. Old Spanish Trail officials are now trying to arrange for an edition of 50,000 travelogs filled with pictures of the country and its industries all across from Florida to California.

MR. HALBERT WRITES

The following letter from the Chairman of the Chevon Publicity Committee, which is doing everything possible to give chevon the popularity which it deserves, was printed last week in the A. A. C. B. A. section of the Edwards County Leader and will be of interest to goat raisers:

"Brother Dollahite:

"Your A. A. C. B. A. page sounds and read good. If you run the Chevon Publicity Committee all the time put it in like this, 'Publicity Committee of the Sheep and Goat Raisers Association of Texas.'"

"If you don't it will sound like a committee of the A. A. C. B. A. Savey."

"Was in Fort Worth last week, and a carload of fat young 77 pound chevons sold at 3 cents, and same day 80 pound muttons sold for 8 cents — Too much difference when both dress about 50-50, and eat like 60-40 in favor of chevon when barbecued. Now we ranchmen all know chevon is at its best when barbecued. But man alive, I've eaten it cooked more ways than you have fingers and toes and it is good every way. A chevon kid roast is better than on old negro's 'possum and taters.'"

"People cannot always get barbecued chevon when they want it, so let's tell 'em to cook a kid like they do a chicken and it will be good."

"Very Chevonly yours,
"B. M. Halbert."

Another reason why it's inconvenient to be a poor country editor is the fact that with a special invitation to attend a big dinner and four polo games on the Watson Divide, we are forced to remain on the job today (Wednesday) to help get out The Eagle. We know they are having a great time out there and somebody ought to be there to look after Mr. Garrett of the Butt & Garrett Grocery, to keep him from getting run over, or to see that O. W. Cardwell, who extended us the invitation, does not eat too much.

The National Shipping Board has been a flat failure, financially and otherwise, if current reports are to be relied upon. The Philadelphia Ledger says: "The Board has had seven chairmen and only one of these has been experienced in shipping. Its total assets today is hardly $300,000,000. Its losses in nine years of operation have reached the gigantic sum of $3,000,000,000." The Board is composed of seven commissioners, appointed from different parts of the country, at an annual salary of $12,000 and expenses. If this is a fair sample of government owned and operated enterprises, it would be natural to suppose that the government would be bankrupt in a few years if it owned and operated more business. Unless there is a revenue to the government in the operation of a merchant marine, why tax the people of the nation to maintain it? It would be less expensive to junk our ships and go out of business.

A SIGHT CELESTIAL

The Emperor Trajan, hearing the Rabbi Joshua say that "God is everywhere present," observed, "I should like to see him."

"God's presence is indeed everywhere," replied Joshua, "but he cannot be seen, no mortal eye can behold his glory." The emperor insisted. "Well," said Joshua, "suppose we try to look at one of his ambassadors." The emperor consented. The Rabbi took him into the open at noon-day, and bade him look at the sun in his meridian splendor.

"I cannot—the light dazzles me."
"Thou art unable," said Joshua, "to endure the light of His creatures, and canst thou expect to behold the resplendent glory of the Creator? Would not such a sight annihilate you?"—"Goodnight," Lectures on Bibliographical Literature.

GOD'S WAYS.

We may not understand God's ways, yet we know they are best. A gardener, who had treasured a beautiful rosebud, was distressed because it had disappeared, and a king invited him to his hothouse, where the little rose had been transplanted lest it should be chilled by the autumn frost in the garden. Just so, God sometimes transplants the little rosebuds in his paradise of love, where they blossom and bloom in a more radiant beauty and glory than was possible in this world of sin and death.

We may not understand why the clouds gather thick and fast, but some day they will be lifted, and in that better land we'll understand. The days seem long and dreary, and the nights are dark and chilled, but if we are faithful, some day, somewhere, we will meet with earth's weary and worn pilgrims, and then we'll understand.—Ex.

W. B. Holland was in town yesterday to transfer title to his 700 Springs ranch which he sold to W. L. Orth of San Antonio. Mr. Orth is a railway conductor. His son, Christie Orth and wife will move to the ranch shortly. Mr. Holland has not decided where he will locate as yet.

While in town Mr. Hubbell asked that his ad. in the Eagle be discontinued, as he had already sold all his pears. He placed the ad. with instructions to run it three times, but one time convinced him that advertising in the Eagle pays, as the one insertion "sold him out".

MY TRIP ABROAD

By Sol Frank in Stephenville Tribune.

London, Stratford-on-Avon, Chester and Liverpool.

To the average tourist, especially to the American tourist, London is probably the most interesting city in the world. There is so much to see that is of common interest to the English speaking people, that there seems to be a closer bond of interest, than among other nations. I found the English people the most agreeable and courteous people, by far than any other people. During our three weeks' stay in London, at the hotel, we met Englishmen from British provinces from all over the world, and found them all very agreeable; and they in common with all other people, liked the Americans. Now I will proceed to mention a few more places we saw while in England.

Buckingham Palace since 1837 has been the London residence of the Sovereign. It derives its name from the Duke of Buckingham, who built on the site early in the XVIIIth century a mansion that subsequently superseded the old palace of Somerset house, as the residence of the Queen Consort. It was at Buckingham Palace that King Edward VII died. The Palace contains a range of richly appointed state apartments, and is noted for the collection of paintings and other works of art.

Kensington Palace, the former residence of the Sovereigns, occupies the site of a private mansion that was acquired in 1689 by William III. The palace was a favorite residence of William III, and Mary, his wife, both of whom died here. It was in this palace that Princess Victoria was born in 1819, and it was here that she received the announcement of her accession to the throne. Hampton Court Palace is about 15 miles out from London. This fine group of buildings consisted originally of four great courts and was built in 1520 by Cardinal Wolsey for his own occupation, but to court favor with King Henry VIII, presented Hampton Court to the King, who converted it into a Royal Palace. Hampton Court covers eight acres of ground, and contains over a thousand rooms. For over two centuries the Sovereigns were continually in residence here, and Cromwell also made use of the palace. We spent a day out there, but could no more than make a rapid survey of the premises. Cardinal Wolsey's apartments are kept intact, and are very interesting. We were particularly interested in Wolsey's closet, with its gilded ceiling and pannelled walls, and it is the oldest part of the buildings.

Windsor Castle was the most interesting place we visited outside the city. It is about 20 miles out, and is quite a city, probably of 25,000. For eight centuries Windsor Castle has been the home of the English monarchs. From Windsor Castle the Royal line takes its name. We were conducted through the Royal apartments, and other portions of the castle, but as it would take a book, and then some, to tell what we saw, we will have to refrain from attempting any description. While in Windsor, we went through an old building used as a dungeon several centuries ago, where all kinds of instruments of torture were shown. In the upper part of this building, which was reached by tortuous steps, almost inaccessible, we saw an old clock made by a blacksmith, which must have been at least ten by twenty feet, and would run a year without winding. It was the clock that rang the Curfew, which Gray speaks of in his elegy on a "Country Churchyard," where he says: "Curfew tolls the knell of parting day." We saw the church and the church yard, and a statue of Gray in the distance. All these things were of great interest to us.

The Tower of London is a wonderful old building. It is both a castle and a tower. In this tower were the most of the political prisoners kept and punished. Here are seen many of the instruments of torture, and it is almost unbelievable, that such tortures could have been inflicted by a so-called civilized and Christian people. But this is only another evidence what unrestrained, unchristianized human nature will do. We were in the British Museum several days, but it would take several months, to see everything, and longer if you examined them thoroughly; and the entire world has been thoroughly searched to get specimens of everything. It is said that what they could not buy or beg, they stole, or took by force. Athens, Jerusalem, Rome, Constantinople, Cairo, Alexandria, and all the ancient cities now in ruins, have been called upon to contribute to her collection. It would be an education for anyone interested, to spend a few weeks in this wonderful museum, the greatest one no doubt, in the world. I have been in museums in Cairo and other large cities, but have never seen anything to compare with this.

We went to see the Bank of England, but was informed that visitors were not admitted, or no one except depositors, or those who had special business. As we were neither, we failed to get in. It is rather an unpretentious old building, in looks, not to be compared to many bank buildings even in some of the smaller American cities.

There are so many old historical places in London, that it is difficult to mention them, but will mention a few that may be of special interest. Among places that interested me, were Dr. Johnson's house, much of his furniture, and other mementoes have been preserved, among them a copy of his dictionary, that was compiled here. Dr. Johnson will be remembered as one of the greatest men of his day, and was contemporary with Dickens and Thackeray, and other great writers.

We saw the house where Dicken lived, and wrote the "Old Curiosity Shop," but to the shame of London, this building now is used as a tailor shop. I will mention only one more place in London, which was of special interest to me, and that is: "Ye olde Cheshyre Cheese Restaurant." This old restaurant, which was partially burned in the great fire of 1666 was rebuilt in 1667, and remains today, as it was then, as to all appearance. Here assembled Dr. Johnson, and Boswell and Dickens, and read and discussed their literary works, over their tea and wine. This seems to be the favorite place for these great literary men to meet. We took lunch there, and were shown over the premises, which is quite different from buildings of the present day.

When we left London we went to Stratford-on-the-Avon, Shakespeare's home. A Shakespearean play was on while we were there, but as my daughter was not well we did not get to see it. However, we saw the house in which he was born, and also the place where he died, as well as the church in which he was baptized, and in which he was buried. We went out several miles to see "Ann Hathaway's House," where Shakespeare's wife was born and raised. The Hathaway family has occupied that house for six centuries, until recently, when it was sold to the nation. They have furniture in it that is several hundred years old, and several pieces are just as Ann left them, nearly three hundred years ago.

From Stratford we went to Chester, one of the most famous cities of all England. It is probably the oldest city in England, and the walls still stand that were built by the Romans. However, the old city only, is enclosed by these walls, which is forty or fifty feet high, and probably twenty feet wide. These walls were built by the Romans as a protection against their enemies and were used afterward by the warring factions in England as a protection against each other. From Chester we went to Liverpool, from where we sailed for New York. Liverpool is a large commercial city of probably a million people, and is the greatest cotton market in the world. It is well known that Liverpool controls the cotton market of the world.

In closing this series of letters, I want to thank the editors for their patience in publishing them, as I had not the remotest idea of prolonging to the extent I have, when I began them. If any one has derived any benefit from them my efforts have not been in vain. Later on, I may give an account of our return trip from Liverpool to New York, and home.

MISS RILEY ENTERTAINS.

Miss Jewell Riley entertained her many girl and boy friends with a Halloween play party Friday evening at her parents' home.

The Halloween decorations were featured in the spacious living room. Black cats, bats, witches and Jack o' Lanterns dangled from every nook and corner, while little white figures danced to and fro.

The masked black cat handed out fortunes that had been written in lemon juice. The witch in order to read them held them over the lighted candle.

Special games and contests that had been selected by the hostess, were enjoyed immensely by the guests.

Pop corn, peanuts and Halloween candies brought the evening to a pleasant close.

HALLOWEEN PARTY.

Misses Lois and Blix Hankins complimented their house guest, Miss Elma Evans of Rock Springs, with a Halloween Party and dance at the home of their parents last Wednesday evening.

Halloween decorations graced the living room, giving it a spooky appearance. Numerous contests were enjoyed by the young folks. Miss Lura B. Taylor received a large stick of candy for having written the most superstitious ideas.

The young men were presented with Halloween caps and the young ladies with Jack o' Lanterns.

After the contests and dancing, hot chocolate, orange and chocolate cookies were served.

NEW BAPTIST PASTOR.

Rev. Deagel of Bastrop County, in response to an invitation on the part of the local Baptist Church, was here last Sunday and preached to the membership of that church.

At a conference that day, the membership voted to call Rev. Deagan and he accepted. He will return sometime this week and will preach at the regular hours Sunday morning and evening. The new pastor has been a country missionary in Bastrop County.

Fred Holmes, who has been with The Eagle for several months, left the first of this week for the Rio Grande Valley country.
