Competing at Play Day

Two of the approximately 25 youths who participated during Sunday afternoon's Gray County 4 - H Play Day at the rodeo grounds were intent on their events when action was stopped by the camera. Ginger Woodward, 16, left, was competing in the golfette event while Kathy Taylor, 13, right, was entered in the stake racing event. The Play Day was held to raise funds to assist the Larry Parker family whose mobile home and possessions were lost in a fire last week. (Staff Photos by Bruce Lee Smith)

EPA wants more lead out of gasoline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is preparing to strengthen rules requiring a reduction in the amount of lead in gasoline, handing environmentalists one of their biggest victories since the Reagan administration took office.

The EPA, which earlier had planned to weaken the lead standards, is expected to propose regulations mandating removal of an additional 31 percent of lead in gasoline over the next eight years.

The recommendations were contained in a memo sent to EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch by Kathleen Bennett, head of the agency's air program. Officials at EPA, who asked not to be named, said Mrs. Gorsuch is expected to give her approval to the changes soon.

The package represents a dramatic policy reversal for the administration which had put the lead rule on a regulatory "hit list" because of complaints from small refiners that it was driving them out of business.

While the rule does provide some relief to small refiners, it is not as much as they had wanted and it clamps tighter controls on refineries producing 96 percent of the nation's gasoline.

When the EPA gave notice in February that it was considering weakening current standards, environmental and health groups charged such a change would be disastrous to small children, who are most susceptible to lead poisoning.

The EPA received a total of 700 comments on its proposal to weaken the standards with the great majority opposing any change. One of EPA's own consultants submitted a study predicting there could be an additional 500,000 cases of lead poisoning nationwide in pre-school children in 1983 if the standards were relaxed.

A recent government study said 675,000 American pre-school children — 4 percent — currently have excessive levels of lead in their blood. The study said the number went to one in five among black children from low-income families.

Lead poisoning can cause kidney and brain damage as well as anemia, mental retardation, and in extreme cases, death.

In her memo, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, Ms. Bennett said, "Relaxation of the regulations is not warranted. New studies support the concept that lead emissions should be minimized."

The key change being recommended is a switch in how the lead limit is set for each refinery. Currently, refineries can average no more than 0.5 gram of lead per gallon of gasoline. But the rule permits averaging of the refinery's production of both leaded and unleaded to arrive at that level.

Donovan investigated again for mob ties

NEW YORK (AP) — Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan, dogged for the past 18 months by allegations that he is linked to mobsters, is again under investigation by a special prosecutor, a Reagan administration source says.

Leon Silverman, a New York attorney who five weeks ago concluded an investigation of allegations against Donovan, is looking into new assertions that the labor secretary had been involved with organized crime figures, the source said Sunday night.

Donovan was not immediately available for comment, and a spokesman said the Cabinet officer would probably have nothing to say on the subject. Repeated attempts to contact Silverman by telephone were unsuccessful.

An FBI spokesman would neither confirm nor deny that the FBI or Silverman had reopened the probe.

However, the administration source, who spoke on conditions he not be identified, said Silverman was looking into fresh allegations that Donovan, as executive vice president of Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J., had ties to organized crime figures in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

There was no indication of who the source of the new accusations might be, but in the earlier investigation, FBI informants with criminal records testified that the labor secretary had dealings with underworld crime figures. Donovan said the informants lied.

Silverman apparently never closed the books on the matter even though he concluded on June 28 that there was "insufficient credible evidence" to warrant prosecution on allegations the labor secretary had connections with mobsters, witnessed payoffs to union officials to buy labor peace, and participated in New Jersey highway construction bid-rigging schemes.

Reagan admits losing patience over Mideast

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who earlier said "the bloodshed must stop" in west Beirut, met today with Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir amid signs the United States is becoming impatient with Israeli military policies in Lebanon.

Reagan told reporters Sunday it was "absolutely imperative" that the new, U.S.-arranged cease-fire reached earlier in the day "not be violated by anyone."

The cease-fire was threatened today, however, as Israelis and Palestinians traded small arms and morter fire.

Reagan spoke with reporters Sunday hours after Israel overran Palestinian positions at Beirut's airport in the most devastating attack since Israeli troops sealed off the city in June. That attack ended with the latest cease-fire.

Throughout the crisis, Reagan has not criticized Israel directly. But his overall tone when he spoke with reporters Sunday suggested uneasiness with Israeli policies.

Asked what he would tell Shamir at today's meeting, Reagan said, "I'll be firm...this must be resolved and the bloodshed must stop."

He declined to say whether this represented a get-tough policy toward Israel but added, "You can say that we're going to have a serious discussion and I think they'll understand exactly how we feel about this."

Shortly before Reagan spoke, Shamir arrived at nearby Dulles Airport and told reporters that the United States and Israel are pursuing parallel objectives in Lebanon.

Both favor the emergence of a strong central government and the removal of all foreign forces from the country, he said.

But, in Jerusalem Sunday, a senior Israeli official, who asked not to be identified, said the United States and Israel have differing perceptions on prospects for an early end to the crisis.

He said the United States had told Israel the negotiations had reached a "decisive stage" with the Palestinian guerrillas showing signs of willingness to discuss a timetable for their departure.

However, Israel believes the Palestinians are "deceiving" the United States and are playing for time in hopes that Israel will ease its blockade of west Beirut, the official said.

In his remarks at the White House, Reagan said he did not believe Israeli forces would leave until Palestinian and Syrian units depart.

With the crisis almost two months old, Reagan made it clear he is unhappy with the continuing cycle of violence in which eight cease-fires have been agreed to only to be broken.

Asked whether he had lost his patience, the president said, "I lost patience a long time ago." At the same time, he said "there has been progress made" in ending the stalemate.

Canadian fire continues out of control

FORT NELSON, British Columbia (AP) — The Alaska Highway was reopened today as winds pushed away a curtain of smoke from a raging forest fire on the Yukon border that has consumed 400,000 of pine and spruce, the authorities said.

About 300 motorists, many of them U.S. citizens on vacation, drove their camper vans toward Alaska after waiting over the weekend for a roadblock to be lifted. Police said, however, that the roadblock could be reimposed if the smoke returns.

The fire stretched for 55 miles at one point parallel to the highway, firefighters said. It was believed started a week ago today by a bolt of lightning and was centered north of this outpost town in the northeastern corner of the province, spilling into the Yukon.

The land here has suffered drought for three years. Rains came Sunday, however, and helped the firefighters, who were confining their efforts to the few populated areas and to power lines and telecommunications stations.

School begins in four weeks

How to pay for milk money, lunch money, new shoes, pants, pants, socks, shirts, dresses and paper and pencils for school kids may once again be on the minds of Pampa parents, as the first day of class and a new school year draws near again.

Classes for all Pampa public schools begin Monday, Aug. 30.

Teachers must report for in - service meetings a week earlier on Monday, Aug. 23.

Enrollment for elementary students and middle school sixth graders is from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m., Wednesday, Aug. 25th at each student's school.

School buses for enrollment run at their regular times and will take kids home at 10:30 that morning.

Students in grades seven through 12, who attended Pampa schools last year, are not required to enroll this year. A schedule of classes will be mailed to previously enrolled students.

Parents with children who have never attended Pampa schools should contact their new schools and enroll between August 9th and August 20th.

Anti-foreign crimes, extreme right on rise

BONN, West Germany (AP)- Crimes against foreigners and membership in neo-Nazi organizations and other right-wing extremist groups are on the rise in West Germany, the Interior Ministry reports.

Attacks on foreigners by right-wing extremists are also increasing, figures from the ministry show.

Interior Minister Gerhart Baum warned several weeks ago of "clearly growing agitation against foreigners."

He said "growing support of the use of force" and the old Nazi principles of racism and nationalism are being used to agitate against the large foreign population who came to West Germany in the postwar years looking for jobs they could not find at home.

Among the extremists, racism "is being been elevated, so to speak, to a national principle," Baum said.

Most of the foreign workers are Turks. During the boom years of West Germany's "economic miracle," most Germans were glad to have them to do the less skilled, poorer paid jobs the Germans didn't want.

Now that unemployment is climbing here as it is elsewhere in the West, out-of-work Germans want those jobs.

The government recorded 297 crimes against foreigners last year, a 150 percent increase over 119 such crimes recorded the year before.

Indications are that the trend is escalating this year, Interior Ministry spokesman Klaus Westkamp said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Membership in right-wing extremist groups increased by 500 people to a total of 20,300 in 1981 although the number of the groups dropped by two to 73, according to the Interior Ministry's figures. Of these, 18 acknowledge they are neo-Nazi groups.

The number of crimes with connections to members of right-wing extremist organizations is greater than at any time since the end of World War II, according to the Interior Ministry. There were 1,824 such crimes in 1981, the ministry said, an increase of 181 over 1980.

One such crime this year, in June, was the murder of two black Americans and another foreigner by a neo-Nazi, Helmut Oxner, in a Nuremberg discotheque. Oxner, 26, who had connections with the right-wing Nationalist Democratic Party, also wounded three other foreigners with gunfire before killing himself.

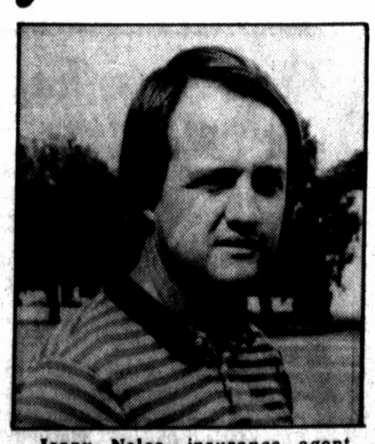

Less sensational attacks — the bombing of restaurants popular with foreigners and beating up foreign youths — are commonplace.

Officials are also concerned about a recent poll showing two-thirds of the West Germans questioned want foreign workers to go home. The officials are also worried about the appearance of political groups that openly campaign against the foreigners.

In the city-state of Hamburg, an anti-foreigners' slate ran in the elections June 6. It got barely 1 percent of the vote.

Q and A

Should flat rate federal income tax be adopted?

Jerry Noles, insurance agent, Pampa:
It is much fairer than graduated tax. Everybody ought to pull his own weight. The lowest bracket should pay something. And the super rich have enough loopholes they wind up paying no tax.

Sharon Balcom, teacher, Pampa:
It seems like a fair way — something needs to be done about our tax system. Everyone would agree the middle - income taxpayers bear the brunt of taxes the way the system is now.

Jewett Scarbrough, Pampa:
It's a good idea. I like the idea of everybody paying the same amount, and it deletes the loopholes. Without a lot of research or thought, I like the idea.

C.B. Hawkins, gas plant superintendent, Pampa:
I favor it. The American people need to think everbody pays a fair share. Many people are not interested in working overtime. They feel the government gets most of the money for the extra hours.

Jo Ann Tate, bookkeeper, Pampa:
I don't think people should be penalized for making more money; they earn what they get. Even if only one person in the family works, he should pay the same tax (rate) as a family with two incomes.

Abrupt meeting

Three Pampa men had an impromptu and abrubt meeting Sunday when their vehicles collided at the intersection of McCullough and Hobart, just south of the city limits. Investigators said Eugene Ray Baggerman, 19, 928 S. Wilcox, was driving south on 70 and failed to yield the right of way at the intersection. The Baggerman pickup, (center), then was slammed by a car driven by Kevin Dale Murray, 23, 629 N. Christy. The crash impact pushed Baggerman's truck into a another pickup, driven by Warren Wayne Steddum, 52, 412 Powell. Since the wreck happened outside the city boundary line, the DPS was called to the scene to solve the puzzle of who did what to whom, and they issued a citation to Baggerman.

Geriatric crime soars among the elderly in South Florida

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A disturbing national trend toward more crime by the elderly is magnified in Dade County, where 20 percent of the residents are over 65. One official calls it "geriatric delinquency."

Police say crimes by the area's elderly population have more than doubled in 10 years. FBI statistics show that nationally, 198,000 people 60 or older were arrested in 1980 — twice the figure of 1970.

In Dade County, more than half of all 1980 larcency charges were filed against defendents 60 or older, the Miami Herald reported Sunday. The most common charge: shoplifting.

"They're caught stealing lipstick, perfume, night creams, even cigars," said County Judge David Gersten. "They're not stealing to eat. That's a popular misconception."

Arrests among the elderly in unincorporated Dade County jumped 29 percent from 1980 to 1981, according to FBI figures. Statewide, arrests of people at least 60 years old rose by nearly 100,000 over five years, from 364,328 in 1977 to 463,454 in 1981.

Gerontologist Alvin Malley calls the trend "staggering." His federally funded Advocate Program for Seniors counseled 500 clients last year, 75 percent for shoplifting.

In nine out of 10 cases, those arrested are first offenders. They may be affected by "geriatric delinquency" — closely resembling juvenile delinquency, Malley said.

"They act just like kids do when they're not getting the attention they need. These people are suffering escalating losses of loved ones, physical prowess and self-esteem," he said.

In Miami Beach, for example, 76-year-old Pauline Drieben was recently arrested for the first time in her life, charged with stealing $2.29 worth of cough lozenges.

Mrs. Drieben, in a conversation witnessed by a Miami Herald reporter, told arresting officer Chuck Hayes that she was "confused."

Mexican government hikes prices

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government today imposed sweeping increases in the prices of bread, tortillas and gasoline, saying all Mexicans must accept sacrifices at a time of economic crisis.

The Ministry of Commerce, in a surprise announcement late Sunday night, said the increases, effective immediately, would double the cost of both corn tortillas and white bread rolls, and would increase gasoline, other fuel and electricity prices as much as 66 percent.

The government acknowledged the increases would hurt consumers, but said the measures were necessary to cut costly government subsidies.

The new prices set the cost of tortillas at 10 cents a pound and rolls at two cents each. Both are staple items in this nation of 70 million people, where the minimum legal wage is the equivalent of about 95 cents an hour.

An estimated 45 percent of the nation's labor force is either unemployed or underemployed.

Gasoline prices in this oil-exporting nation were hiked 66 percent from the equivalent of 46 cents to 77 cents for a gallon of regular gas and from 77 cents to $1.15 for a gallon of premium. Diesel fuel went up from 19 cents to 31 cents a gallon.

The nation is rich in crude oil reserves, but is suffering a deep monetary crisis because of sagging international crude oil prices and a foreign debt expected to close the year at $80 billion.

The ministry said price subsidies on all the products were depleting the nation's weakened coffers. Even with the increases, it said, subsidies to tortilla and bread producers would not be totally eliminated.

"During the last five years, production cost increases for bread were absorbed by growing subsidies," the ministry statement said.

It also said energy costs were growing with skyrocketing demand, forcing the new price structure.

"In contrast with the more developed countries, where a clear tendency toward decreased energy demands has been observed, in Mexico the disproportionate consumption of gasoline has continued," the ministry said.

Burglarized homes may await occupants

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Police here say 245 people chased to higher ground by rising water from an overflowing lake may find their homes ransacked and burglarized when they finally are allowed to return to their flooded neighborhood.

National Guardsmen continued to patrol the 16-by-13 block flooded area Sunday.

Five people were arrested over the weekend on varying charges after trying to enter the restricted area, according to Police Lt. Wayne Johnston.

He said three apartments already had been discovered burglarized, adding that residents of this Panhandle city probably will report more burglaries when they are allowed to return home either Tuesday or Wednesday.

Two pumps working to drain the overflow from the rain-swollen lake had lowered the water level by five or six inches early Sunday, but the murky floodwaters still stood three to four feet deep in some homes, apartments and businesses, police said.

Sgt. Ronnie Luetkahans said police were issuing passes to people who had legal business in the flooded neighborhood.

The neighborhood was flooded for the second in less than a year when a summer deluge dumped almost 4¾ inches or rain on this city late Thursday and early Friday. Officials had worried they could get additional rain over the weekend.

"It looks pretty right now. The last I heard about the weather is it might rain Tuesday," said Luetkahans.

"Two pumps are going," he said. "The water is down five or six inches."

The manmade lake, known as Dunivan or Lawrence Lake, does not have any natural drainage and he said he does not believe the pumps can lower the water level enough to allow most people to move back into their homes before Tuesday.

City officials have estimated the damage could exceed the $21 million worth of destruction caused by the last lake flood less than a year ago.

Difference in who is being quoted

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When the subject is economics, who are you going to believe, the Reagan administration or Reagan aministration officials?

There is a difference.

As required, the administration has issued its midyear budget reiew and forecast, a document that speaks of a significant recovery later this year and a 1983 budget deficit kept to $115 billion.

But even before its release, and immediately after it too, high administration officials disavowed it as overly optimistic.

Murray Weidenbaum, retiring chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, called it unrealistic, prior to release.

The behavior of Donald Regan, Treasury secretary, suggests doubts. He declined to give the expected briefing on the document.

Earlier, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige separated himself from the optimism, saying that over the short term the forecast was off the mark.

These are only some of the confusing aspects of the administration's program. How was such a document produced; that is, where did the ingredients come from — from the realm of reality, hope, politics?

Doubts within the administration, which produced the report, are multiplied outside by those who analyze it. Is it just a mistake that couldn't be corrected in time? A bureaucratic bungle? A public relations release meant to boost hopes? Or, is it even to be taken seriously?

The biggest doubts seem to be about the size of the budget deficit, about which the Reagan people have a record of unjustified optimism.

If the administration is correct in saying the deficit will be kept to $115 billion, then the question is how the Congressional Budget Office can add up the same numbers and reach a total of up to $151 billion.

And why the consensus of private sector forecasters, including those in big business and academe, think a figure as low as $115 billion is out of the question unless there is an unforeseen economic surge.

Confusion probably wasn't eased when the president during the past week reiterated support for a constitutional amendment to balance the budget, and congratulated a banker who lowered the prime lending rate.

Many people, it seems safe to say, are perplexed by advocacy of a budget balance from a president who defends record high budget deficits.

Pampa juvenile nabbed in station

A Pampa juvenile was nabbed in the act of an attempted burglary in White Deer Sunday night, according to Carson County Sheriff Connie Reid.

Reid said deputies were called by citizens to the Williams Brothers' Texaco station about 8 p.m. Sunday.

The sheriff said the citizens watched the youth break into the closed service station.

Skellytown deputy LoVell Kennard was first to arrive at the station, followed a short time later by Panhandle Deputy Warren Hart.

Upon arrival, the deputies found the youth hidden inside the station's restroom, according to Reid.

Reid said deputies put the collar on the juvenile and placed him in juvenile detention at the Carson County Jail.

The sheriff said the juvenile was a runaway from Pampa, who was on probation for another offense.

He said the youth was caught before anything could be taken from the station.

Reid said the youth has been referred to juvenile authorities in connection with the attempted burglary.

Last witnesses to be called in lawyer's trial

HOUSTON (AP) — Prosecutors planned to call the final witnesses today in the trial of William Chanslor Jr., a prominent lawyer accused of plotting to buy a hard-to-trace poison to kill his invalid wife.

Prosecutor Jim Lavine said he was prepared to call four rebuttal witnesses and predicted the case would go to the jury later today.

Chanslor is charged with solicitation of murder and conspiracy to commit murder. If convicted, he could be sentenced to 20 years in prison and fined $10,000.

The 50-year-old defendant was arrested April 21 at a Houston hotel, carrying two specially marked capsules he believed contained the deadly poison, ricin.

Chanslor, a former University of Texas football player and past president of the Houston Trial Lawyers Association, testified last week he only agreed to make the poison available to his wife, Sue, after her pleadings for death became "a constant thing."

He insisted he did not plan to administer the almost untraceable toxin and never intended to kill her.

"I could have divorced her. I could have put her in a nursing home or I could have given her an overdose of prescription drugs if I had wanted to get rid of her," Chanslor told the 12-member jury.

Chanslor's 42-year-old wife is paralyzed on her left side and has been confined to a wheelchair since suffering a stroke three years ago.

Testifying for the defense last week, Mrs. Chanslor said she "begged and pleaded" for her husband to help end her misery.

Fine Arts 'happening' planned

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

The Pampa Fine Arts Association's 1982 "happening" will be held on Labor Day, Sept. 6 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. in Central Park.

There will be no charge for most activities, but any proceeds from individual participation events will be contributed to the city's Park Beautification Fund.

The association is now soliciting the work of area and regional artists, speakers and performers for the event.

This year's theme is "Chautauqua," named after outdoor traveling shows put on for the entertainment and education of rural and small - town Americans in the 1800s and early 1900s.

Pampa's Chatauqua will not travel, but the association said it will provide speakers, musicians, artists and dancers for attendees.

Each exhibitor will set up shop under awnings, tents, or parachute covers, or in the open along the park trail.

In addition to selling their arts and crafts, exhibitors will be expected to demonstrate their work or explain work in progress.

The Fine Arts Association is looking specifically for stained glass makers, quilters, leather crafters, weavers, saddle and tack craftsmen, painters, potters, photographers, sculptors, musicians, dance groups and other performers.

Exhibits from other cultures, such as oriental, Indian and Mexican arts and crafts, would also be appreciated.

To enter, or for more information, call Lee Cornelison at 665 - 4071 or 665 - 2439; Faustina Curry at 665 - 8838; or Anne Lemons at 669 - 9447.

Pretrial hearings begin in judge assassination case

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Extensive publicity and the admissibility of FBI electronic eavesdropping are the focus of a hearing today for defendants indicted after a massive investigation into a federal judge's slaying.

Defense attorneys argue the FBI electronic surveillance should be suppressed because it violated the Fifth Amendment rights and client-attorney and marital privileges of their clients.

U.S. District Judge Williams S. Sessions scheduled a pre-trial hearing today on about 45 remaining motions filed by lawyers for six people indicted by the grand jury that investigated the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

The motions include, among other things, requests for Sessions to disqualify himself from the scheduled Sept. 28 trial and to move the proceeding out of San Antonio, and possibly out of Texas because of extensive pre-trial publicity.

Wood, 63, was shot in the back on May 29, 1979, outside his San Antonio townhouse. At the time of his death, Wood was scheduled to preside over the drug-related criminal enterprise trial of Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, 39, of El Paso.

Chagra is accused of paying convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson, 43, to shoot Wood. Both men are charged with murder of a federal judge, conviction would carry a mandatory life sentence.

Harrelson, Chagra, his wife, Elizabeth, 29, and his lawyer-brother, Joseph Chagra, 35, are charged with conspiracy to murder Wood and with obstruction of justice. Harrelson's wife, Jo Anne Starr Hararelson, 43, is charged with perjury and conspiracy to obstruct justice. Mrs. Chagra's father, Leon Nichols, 51, is accused of income tax evasion.

Joe Chagra's attorney, Billy Ravkind of Dallas, has said the FBI tapes are the most critical issue.

If the tapes are barred, said Ravkind, the rest of the government's case would "tumble like dominoes."

Dallas television station KDFW aired a series of reports last week based on copies of transcripts it said it obtained of conversations, secretly recorded by the FBI, between Jimmy Chagra, his wife, brother and former cellmate.

The station said the transcripts quote Jimmy Chagra talking about arranging the killing of Wood and hiring a man to kill former U.S. Attorney James Kerr.

The station said the transcripts also show Chagra plotting to escape from prison and quote him discussing an idea to kill Harrelson so he could not talk to authorities.

Sessions ordered the transcripts sealed, but copies were distributed to defense attorneys. The station did not say where it obtained its copies.

Defense attorneys are seeking a change of venue because of extensive publicity surrounding the investigation of the Wood assassination.

Several newspaper and television reporters and their reports about the case have been supoenaed by Tom Sharpe Jr., representing Harrelson. Sharpe has asked that the trial be moved to Colorado on grounds publicity would prevent a fair trial being conducted anywhere in Texas.

Defense lawyers had filed at least 127 motions since the six people were indicted April 15. But Sessions disposed of most of the requests with orders signed over the last few weeks, at one point signing 37 orders a day.

Jimmy Chagra and Harrelson are serving long prison terms for convictions in other cases, Nichols was freed on $50,000 bond the day the indictment was returned, and Mrs. Chagra, Joe Chagra and Mrs. Harrelson have been jailed on high bonds.

Boom times have left the oil patch

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Two years ago, as the price of oil rose dramatically, the crude and the money flowed freely in this area of the Permian Basin.

Now, unemployment has doubled, prefabricated offices and homes are for sale, and an oilman says the only use for glistening glass office towers in nearby Midland may be as grain silos.

The oil boom has turned to oil gloom.

"For the first time in my six years here I'm seeing a lot of 'For Sale' signs," said Philip Marcum, executive vice president of MGF Oil Corp., a Midland independent driller and producer.

"If business stays the way it is, come around Christmas oil executives in Midland aren't going to be worrying about bonuses. They'll be worrying about their jobs," he said.

Local oilmen say a surplus of oil on the world market has dropped the price of the only resource in the Permian Basin, once an ancient sea floor. High interest rates and a lack of a national energy policy also have undermined the local economy.

"If something unexpected happens — if the Saudis start pumping lots of oil — we won't see any drilling here and all these silver buildings will have to be made into grain silos," Marcum said.

Marcum's company, which earned $10 million in net profit last year, lost $1 million during the first quarter of 1982 and is projecting losses of another $3 million before 1983.

"Look at the faces out there. They're grim," said Chuck MacGuire, a traveling jewelry salesman sitting at a bar in an Odessa nightclub.

MacGuire said he spends 365 days a year on the road and sees speculators, hustlers and business promoters in every boom town.

"I used to see those flashers — I call 'em '90-day-wonders' — in here. Now I meet 'em somewhere else and they're flat broke," he said.

"But the guys in here now, they're scared ... they're under a lot of pressure," MacGuire said. "They're trying to hang on till the bitter end."

Unemployment in Odessa has shot up from 3.9 percent in December to 8.4 percent in June, said Stan Whitley, assistant manager of the Odessa office of the Texas Employment Commission.

The number of welders, roustabouts, roughnecks and service workers looking for work through the TEC grew from about 300 per month to about 3,000, Whitley said.

In the sister city of Midland, unemployment increased from 3.1 percent last December to 7.6 percent six months later.

The end of oil exports from Iran in 1979 drove the price of a barrel of oil from $13 to $45, shaking the nation's economy but bolstering the economy in the Permian.

But the slump of 1982 has forced many of the basin's newer immigrants from the industrial North to leave the area.

Plane crash kills one

PORT ARANSAS, Texas (AP) — Two Corpus Christi residents remain hospitalized after a weekend plane crash at Mustang Beach Airport near here that killed one man.

Susan Finch, 16, was in critical condition late Sunday at Memorial Medical Center in Corpus Christi with a fractured spine and other multiple fractures.

The pilot of the plane, Glen Hosey, 22, was in poor condition with multiple fractures and face lacerations after undergoing surgery Sunday.

Nueces County Constable DeeWayne Mathews identified the dead man as Monty O'Bryan, 21, of Corpus Christi.

Witnesses said the single-engine Beechcraft Sundowner circled the runway, stalled and then crashed Saturday afternoon.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Taking a new look at an 'Old Relic'

The final report of the U. S. Gold Commission may eventually be seen as an important step on the road to monetary sanity in the United States.

The panel's recommendations are modest and not very surprising in themselves. The most meaningful are that the United States not return to a gold standard, but that the U. S. should start minting gold coins that would be exempt from sales and capital gains taxes.

The commission's membership was appointed by Treasury Secretary Donald Reagan and was a fair reflection of the nation's financial - political - economics establishment. Few expected it to seek to hinge the monetary system on gold, but what it did propose might put us on a path out of our current economic thicket.

For almost 50 years, economists of varying degrees of sophistication have been trying to persuade us that gold is a "barbarous relic" of earlier, unhappier times, and that we had learned enough about how the economy functions to take matters into our own hands. Rather than depending on the fluctuating value of a piece of metal, we would have wise economic planners to control the money supply, manipulating and "fine tuning" the economy to assure prosperity for all.

The results of this reliance on central planners are now apparent. Those entrusted with the management of the money supply turned out to be shockingly human. Sometimes they did fairly well, whether through sagacity or in spite of themselves, and sometimes they handled the job terribly.

It turned out that, even with the power to create money fromd debt, the Federal Reserve system often found itself frustrated by events beyond its control and the victim rather than the master of an increasingly complex economy.

And always, there was that subtle temptation. When you can trun debt into money, the temptation to abuse that power is always present. If you are a politician, you can buy votes by handing out benefits and sending the bill to future generations. If you are a creature of politicians, you will not often thwart their desires. And the desire of the politician is almost always for easier money.

With our economy now hurting badly from years of those monetary manipulations, it is not surprising that people are taking a new look at the "barbarous relic" and speaking with some seriousness of a return to some version of a gold standard.

Too much has been made of the mythic qualities of gold. In tales of romance, adventure and greed, it's easy to lose sight of the fact that many civilizations have chosen gold as the basis of money and not becuase of some magical qualitites the yellow metal possesses but rather for commonsense reasons.

Gold is malleable, easy to test for purity, transportable and relatively rare. Its supply is relatively stable and predictable. For these reasons and others, most people trust gold as money, and that is the real test of a monetary instrument. The price of gold may fluctuate, but people have more faith in a currency backed by gold than a currency backed by a politician's promise.

The fact that a U. S. Gold Commission was authorized, appointed and permitted to discuss the subject of gold as money is an encouraging sign. It indicates a growing awareness that there are alternatives to political manipulation of money, perhaps even a weariness with the results that manipulation. Progress may come in slow halting steps, but the Gold Commission has at lehst taken the first step.

Reagan keeps support

Democratic party leaders had a field day at their mid - term convention in Philadelphia blasting the Reagan administration's policies, but no one laid a glove on Reagan himself. Why not?

Despite a severe recession and some obvious disarray within administration ranks, Reagan's approval ratings in the polls have actually gone up in recent months from the low 40s to about 50 percent.

And nearly every poll shows that Americans generally regard the president as honest, uncommonly decent and well intentioned. These are finding that any recent president would have envied.

More importantly, perhaps, the polls suggest that a majority of Americans are prepared to give Reagan's policies the time they need to begin showing results. The public's patience on the economy must be considered particularly noteworthy given the current unemployment rate and other indicators of economic distress.

Most Americans seem to understand that Reagan inherited an array of economic problems that have been piling up for at least a decade, and in some cases much longer. They also seem to understand that turning all this around while fending off a sometimes obstructionist Congress cannot be accomplished in 18 months

The IRA shows ugly face

Lots of Americans harbor romantic notions about the Irish Republican Army and the nationalist cause associated with it. But the contemporary IRA showed its true face in London recently.

The terrorist bombings that killed nine persons and wounded 52 others were criminal acts committed by criminals. Among the victims seriously wounded were children and old - age pensioners, some of whom may die. The miracle is that many more were not maimed or killed.

The "military targets" of these two attacks were a ceremonial cavalry troop on parade and a British army band playing for a crowd of tourists and British civilians, including many children.

Sinn Fein, the political arm of the Provisional IRA and the group that claimed responsibility for the bombings, declared that it had acted in defense of the internationally recognized right of all peoples to self - determination.

Self - determination? The Republic of Ireland has been a free and independent state since 1922. The six northern counties that remained an integral part of Britain did so by choice then and do so by choice now.

Even Sinn Fein doesn't deny that any plebiscite today in Northern Ireland would be won by Ulster loyalists, despite a 13 - year campaign of IRA terrorism intended to drive the British out and force a union with the Irish Republic.

The London bombings may presage a renewed terrorist campaign within England itself. If so, it is probably timed to deter the Thatcher government from granting a larger measure of home rule to Northern Ireland.

Sinn Fein might want to consult the Argentines, now experts on the subject of Margaret Thatcher's resolve, about the prospects for cowing the present British government.

In the meantime, those Americans who have contributed funds for Irish nationalists in Northern Ireland would do well to consider whether their dollars are going for humanitarian aid, or terrorist bombs. As the carnage in London demonstrated once again, terrorism is a scourge and its perpetrators are evil men whatever their cause.

Trouble in a 'banana republic'

By - ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — "Being an American probably saved my life," says Cynthia Lee Morin. "If I was a Guatemalan or a Honduran, they would have killedme."

Miss Morin, a 31 - year - old registered nurse from Los Angeles, is alive today, but she lives with the memory of an 18 - hour - long traumatic experience during which whe was abducted, robbed, physically abused, interrogated by secret police officers and twice forced to fend off rape attempts.

A companion, a 30 - year - old Guatemalan doctor, was not as fortunate. His badly beaten, mutilated and partially decomposed body was found recently in a freshly dug grave on a river bank in northern Honduras.

The terrifying experience of the young medical volunteers provides the most recent evidence that armed conflict in Central America no longer is confined to El Salvador but is spreading throughout the region and poses an increasing threat to the safety of the U. S. citizens in countries including Honduras, Guatemala and Nicaragua.

A New Jersey native who moved to California in 1962, Miss Morin was working as a critical care nurse in a Burbank, Calif., hospital when she volunteered earlier this year to serve as a nutrition specialist at a refugee camp in Honduras.

Her services were welcomed by Concern, a private relief organiaztion based in Ireland with offices in Santa Ana, Calif. On June 8, the refugee camp in which she was serving was visited by Dr. Oscar Giron, a Guatemalan working for Project Global Village, a development agency based in Portland, Ore.

The two were driving to a nearby city the following day when their pickup truck was halted by four uniformed Honduran soldiers and two armed men in civilian clothes.

After being ordered into a ravine, the two relief workers were separated. "I could hear Oscar moaning," recalls Miss Morin. "I had a feeling they had killed him."

With an estimateed 25,000 refugees in Honduras, most of them fleeing violence in Guatemala and El Salvador, there is a desperate need for relief workers — but those volunteers increasingly are finding themselves the targets of abuse.

Only one week before the episode involving Miss Morin, a female French doctor was rousted from her bed at 3 a. m. and taken to a local police station for interrogation.

Last year, two Honduran volunteers working for a Catholic relief agency were taken from their home, tortured in front of their family and then murdered.

Miss Morin, who says that until recently she was neither interested in nor familiar with politics of the region, now believes that "our foreign policy is one of the reasons why thousands of Hondurans are starving."

Indeed, Honduras is the quintessential "banana republic" — a country whose modern history is inextricably tied to U. S. corporations, which view it as a private plantation to be exploited for the production of export crops.

On three separate occasions between 1912 and 1924, this country's military forces intervened in Honduran affairs, ostensibly to provide "stability" to its government. In fact, they were protecting and promoting the commercial interests of the United Fruit Co.

Throughout most of this century, virtually all of Honduras' fertile agricultural lands suitable for growing bananas have been controlled by United Fruit (now renamed United Brands), the Standard Fruit Co. (now a subsidary of Castle & Cooke) and a handful of other American firms.

One of the most revealing episodes in the history of U. S. - Honduran relations occured in 1975, when it was disclosed that United Brands had paid $1.25 million to a high - ranking Honduran government offical in return for relief from that country's banana export tax.

Shortly before the bribe was revealed, United Brands Board Chairman Eli Black committed suicide by jumping from his firm's 44th - floor corporate offices in New York City.

That tradition of exploitation explains much of the region's hostility to "yanquis" such as Miss Morin. Central Americans still fear the United States' power, but they long go lost respect for this country's honor.

Truth and packaging

By DON GRAFF

Ronald Reagan, should anyone need reminding, is a superb communicator.

He is a genial master at getting points across and winning over audiences, as witness a visit earlier this year to the Voice of America offices on the occasion of the government broadcasting agency's 40th anniversary.

Regaling the staff with an account of his own experiences as a young radio announcer reconstructing baseball games from telegraph reports, the president demonstrated how effectively imaginative language could transform a routine out at second into a heart - stopper for the listening audience.

The truth was there, he said as the laughter subsided, but "attractively packaged."

Packaging is also the point of a report the president has received from the United States Advisory Commission on Public Diplomacy. This is an autonomous bipartisan group set up by Congress to report annually to the president on the VOA and its parent organization, the International Communication Agency, and it is concerned that accuracy and objetivity may give way to "stridency and propaganda."

While endorsing the need for boldness in programming, the commission warned that credibility is VOA's most precious asset. It could be seriously damaged by "actions and policies which are easily misinterpreted and cast doubt on the organization's commitment to truth..."

The actions and policies to which the report referred have been the cause of external criticism and internal dissension for the past year. It could be a problem of oversell, but they have been interpreted as seeking to change VOA's focus from information to propaganda.

Precisely that was the point of an itnernal memo, leaked to the Washington Post last September, proposing that the VOA cease behaving as a journalistic enterprise and regard itself as a propaganda agency in the business of selling U. S. interests to foreign audiences as advertising sells soap.

The author, Philip Nicolaides, briefly coordinator for commentary and news analysis, has since resigned, one of a rash of departures on both sides of the divisive issue that has shaken the VOA staff. Among the next to depart may be most of the members of the advisory commission. The White House is reported considering replacing up to five of the present seven.

A recent replacement is VOA Director John R. Hughes, who took over the job July 1 saying he intends to increase the editorial opinion content of broadcasts. He has signed on an editorial writer assigned to articulate the government's view on issues in daily contributions to VOA programming. The editorials will, however, be clearly identified as such and will not intrude upon news content.

That assurance — and Hughes' credentials as a Pulitzer Prize winner in foreign reporting and former editor of the Christian Science Monitor — may allay some of the internal and external concern.

Meanwhile, those involved in the Washington wrangle over truth in broadcasting might give some thought to a recent lesson form London.

The British Broadcasting Corp., which set the standards for objectivity in broadcasting back in World War II, drew criticism during the Falklands war by not taking a more decidedly British line. It reported both British and Argentine versions of developments.

BBC obbjectivity earned the displeasure of Margaret Thatcher among others. But by the end of the conflict it had also earned recognition as the only reliable source of information, especially in Buenos Aires.

The British experience is proof again of a basic truth about truth: It is best served not by packaging but by being kept simple and straightforward.

Latin America- quicksand

By PAUL HARVEY

At the entrance to our National Archives Building in Washington, D.C., is engraved with this message: WHAT'S PAST IS PROLOGUE: STUDY THE PAST.

A D. C. cab driver is said to have paraphrased that admonition in his own words: YOU AIN'T SEEN NUTHIN' YET!

Said another way, "Men who refuse to learn from history are destined to repeat it."

And so we do.

Historian A. T. Mahan, in his volume, "The Influence of Sea Power Upon History," published in 1889, sought to warn us that Central and South American countries are chronically internally politically unstable.

He acknowledged that such instability inevitably invites outsiders to try to move into a divided country and conquer it — and milk its resources.

But as long ago as then he could see that Latin America's tropical states would become quicksand, gradually but inexorably swallowing up intruders.

And he deduced that volatile Latin Americans would continue to squabble among themselves, but with a resistance more potent than any Monroe Doctrine, would repel intrusion.

The Church learned that; the Spanish learned it; the Dutch and the French and the British learned it. Castro is learning it.

AMERICA TOO SOFT TO SURVIVE?

Haitians — are paying smugglers up to $1,500 to sneak them illegally into the United States.

Haitians — many diseased, most illiterate, with no legal "right" to be here, nonetheless are demanding and getting "rights" which our Constitution intended for citizens.

Immediately, the illegal alien receives an average $119 a month plus free medical care.

Next our government is asking for millions to finance a job - training program for them — so that you will pay your money to train them to take your job.

And the National Labor Relations Board and the courts have decreed that illegal aliens are entitled to full protection of the National Labor Relations Act.

And that's not all.

There is evidence that the illegals, encouraged by certain politicians, are registering and voting!

And, when California sought to prosecute them — organizations representing these criminals went to court and stopped the state.

Our nation's immigration laws are openly challenged by people who have no business being in this country — and once here they hold open the door for more.

Has the America you love become too soft to survive?

Today in History

Today is Monday, August 2, the 214th day of 1982. There are 151 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On August 2, 1934, Adolf Hitler became dictator of Germany.

On this date:

In 1610, English navigator Henry Hudson entered the North American body of water now known as Hudson Bay.

In 1824, one of the nation's most famous thoroughfares was opened — New York's Fifth Avenue.

In 1971, the United States said it would support seating Communist China in the United Nations but would oppose the expulsion of Nationalist China.

In 1980, a powerful explosion ripped through the main railroad station in Bologna, Italy, killing at least 55 people.

Ten years ago: Egypt's Anwar Sadat and Libya's Moammar Khadafy tentatively agreed to merge their countries within a year.

Gardening by Moon Signs

August -- the month of harvest

BY LOIS BOYNTON

The Moon is Increasing: 1 - 4: 19 - 31. The Moon will be Decreasing: 5 - 18.

The fruitful Signs are: 6 - 8 (Pisces); 15 - 16 (Cancer); 24 - 25 (Scorpio).

The Semi - Fruitful Signs are: 1 - 3 (Capricorn); 11 - 12 (Taurus); 21 - 23 (Libra); From 12 noon the 28th through 30th (Capricorn).

The Barrer Signs are: 4 - 5 (Aquarius); 13 - 14 (Gemini); 17 - 18 (Leo); 19 - 20 (Virgo) 26th until 12 noon 28th Sagittarius).

The Moon rules the unconscious, instinctual processes in nature which are devoid of personality. This includes the oceanic tides, plant and animal life, the unconscious in human beings, and the mass - mind of the crowd. All are rhymically attuned to the cycle of the Moon's phases and signs.

Because of this conclusion the behavior of that which is without personality can be accurately predicted. This is the basic principle upon which these Moon - signs are based.

August is a rewarding month, a payoff month, the cornucopia month, it is a time of harvesting, if you have done your work well. A time of resting on your laurels a bit.

For the weeds should all be dug out, the roses pruned, the deadheads all removed, and such chores all done. For now is the time for reaping the harvest and adding up your blessings.

In gathering herbs for drying, wait fot a sunny day, give the dew a chance to dry from the plants, cut a few stems, wrap a rubber band around the bouquet, and hang it upside down in a cool, dry shady place. Using a rubber band is better than a string because it contracts as the stems shrivel, preventing them from falling loose. After a few days when they are perfectly dry, crumble the foliage and store it in a jar for winter use.

Cornstalks are particularly rich material for the compost bin. So after the crops are harvested, pull the stalks up and chop them with hedge clippers into 6 or 8 inch pieces and add them to the compost.

Garlic is one of the most carefree crops in the garden. When the stems lose all trace of green and the tops bend over the garlic is ready to be harvested. Use a fork to ease the plants out of the growns. Dry the cloves for several days, then store in a mesh bag so the air can circulate around them. This should be done the 17th or 18th. Be sure to destroy the seed pods growing on the top of the stems, if you do not want a crop of garlic all over the place next year.

The 15th and 16th is the time to take cuttings from your geranium plants. Snip off stems about 3 inches long. Then strip each stem of all but three or four top leaves and leave them to dry for a day to prevent rotting.

Moisten the stem end in water then dip into rootone powder. Then set the stem into a pot of sand mixed with vermiculite. They will wilt a bit, sprinkle with water every 2 or 3 days. In about three weeks they will root. Then repot them in regular potting soil.

We have been asked how to determine the ripeness of cantaloupes. This is sometimes difficult. One sure method is if you will look carefully at the stem end of the melon you will find a disk of fibrous tissue at the point where the stem joins the melon. As the melon ripens this disk begins to separate from the fruit. When fully ripe this disk will slip off the fruit at ths lightest pressure of your thumb or finger. You will know that you are in for a real treat, there is nothing better or more satisfying than a ripe cantaloupe from your own patch.

In observing hedges over town we see that some do not understand how a hedge should be pruned. It should be trimmed in such a way that the hedge is narrower at the top than at the bottom. This allows the sun to penetrat to the bottom of the hedge, otherwise the hedge would become sparse and spotty.

Until a hedge is full grown, or about the size you want it to be, one pruning in mid - summer is about all that is necessary. Then two or three clippings a year may be needed to keep it within bounds. One pruning before growth starts in the spring, the second about mid - June and the third in early August.

Fall is often the best season for growing vegetables, the diease and insect problems are less, and some vegetables actually taste sweeter when they mature during cool weather. Broccoli, kohlrabi, collards, kale and spinach taste better when touched by frost.

Since the weather is still so hot when a fall garden is planted the seed bed needs special care, it should be watered daily sometimes twice a day, a light mulch of straw over the ground will help to shade the bed and preserve the moisture.

Harvest the onions the same time as you do the garlic. You will notice that some of the stalks of the onions are thicker - necked than others. These will not keep well so plan to use them first.

If you have beans growing in your garden that you are planning on drying. Leave them on the vine until the pods have turned completely brown, then pull up the entire plant and store in a dry place. When the pods are crisp, shell the beans and place in glass jar and store for cooking next winter.

If you are growing Chinese Lantern plants and wish to know the best time for harvesting them. Pick them when the little globes turn orange, if you pick them while they are still green, they will not turn that brilliant orange color.

Divide Irises if they have been growing for three or four years. They should be divided, or the blooms will become few and the rhizones mat and compete with each other for soil nutrients. Dig carefully wash off excessive soil. Examine all roots to be sure they are sound. Discard any that feel soft.

Before replanting add bonemea to the hole. The rhizomes are set in shallow holes on a neatly mowed lawn look ragged and untidy. Get some cleaning fluid at your service station, put it in a sprinkling can and cover the unwanted grass with it. We do this on a barren sign when the moon is decreasing. It really works.

Lift and divide oriental poppies. Sow columbine seed August 24th and 25th in the back of your beds where you wish to have them grow, they will be up in a couple of weeks.

Important ways to stop losing

By DAVE BRUMMETT

In our western society no one wants to be a loser. We are winners! The American culture is incapable of suffering the "agony of defeat." Yet, there are thousands in our perceptive view who seem to be losers, and definitely not winners.

Recently, the British Open golf tournament was played, with the best golfers in the world on the old course, trying their best to win the 1982 prize trophy. Even though many entered, there was only one winner, Tom Watson. What happened to the others?

Last football season the Dallas Cowboys made it all the way to the playoff game prior to the Super Bowl. At the beginning of the season there were many teams, each wanting to be crowned champion. The San Francisco 49ers won. What happened to the others?

In World War I and II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War, our opposition was skillful, ready to defeat the United States of America any way possible. We are the winners always! How does this happen over and over? We don't lose.

If you seem to be one of those who lose often, one way to stop losing is to be patient. In couseling, most individuals admit their impatience, how it gets them into jams which could have been avoided. Some want to learn the art; few want to admit the desire to change. A small number of people attain the important skill.

Patience gives us time to think through circumstances and make an appropriate decision. A patient person gives a child the oportunity to change his behavior instead of be disciplined. The person with patience will accept another individual's mistakes and be less critical and more supportive of him.

Tom Watson used patience to win the British Open this year. Patience is a vital part of one's state of mind in order to stop losing.

Another way is to be consistent with caring. Less child abuse would transpire if parents were more consistent with their expectations, which otherwise are confusing to youngsters.

Consistency improves trust in myself and with others. I can depend on myself by being consistent. You can expect my commitment to continue as consistency is seen.

The Dallas Cowboys were inconsistent when they played San Francisco and lost. If they become consistent in their play, they will be Super Bowl champions again. As we learn to consistently care about our jobs our families our social and religious activities, the losing pattern most of us are accustomed to feeling will stop dominating our way of life. Consistency gives mental alertness the chance to expand and include sincerity.

Through a sincere person, we can accept him for who he is without expecting more than he is capable of giving, which is to have unreal expectations. A sincere person is dedicated to his task. He can be counted on. He knows that his presence is needed in order to meet particular goals. Sometimes sincerity diminishes when pressure is applied.

In the wars in which our country has participated, these fighting men and women were mostly sincere in their purpose — to win and return home alive.

This sincerity is best recognized in not giving up and losing. Even those who lost their lives as soldiers did not lose becuase they were giving, risking themselves through sincere belief in their commitment. None of us lose as long as we are giving our best efforts, even though some make it look that way.

For a person to stop losing, he must believe in himself, as the best in whatever he invests himself. Belief in one's self is the most powerful force he has to conquor negative feelings, a sense of incapability, a lack of motivation or loss. Most of us lose by doubting ourselves.

At the same time that I am believing in myself, you are beginning to believe in me.

The Top of Texas Vietnam Veterans Association in Pampa is composed of men who are learning to believe in themselves, their capabilities to keep jobs, get an education, have better relationships with their families and help each other. This belief is being recognized by their associates in society, which has been proven in ways.

They are putting an end to losing. For us to give up losing, we never give up on ourselves, and endure throughout the entire ordeal regardless of the intensity.

Endurance proves to one's self that I am patient, consistent, sincere and gave my best, put forth the desire to feel the "thrill of victory." I am never a loser when I give my best self.

(Dave Brummett, MDiv, will accept questions and answer them in this weekly column. Address letter to the Top O' Texas Counseling Center, Suite 530, Hughes Building, Pampa, Texas 79065.)

Dear Abby

Family's form of punishment is criminal

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading your column for years, and never have I been so furious with you as I am now!

"His Uncle" wrote to say that at a family reunion his 6-year-old nephew was caught playing "doctor" with a 5-year-old girl cousin, so the boy's mother painted his genitals with Mercurochrome and made him sit naked in front of his relatives while they made fun of him!

Abby, if this is what that boy was made to suffer in public, God only knows what kind of abuse that helpless child is subjected to at home! The uncle felt "guilty" allowing the boy to be put on public display and ridiculed, and asked, "Is there anything I can do beyond some sincere praying?"

I fully expected you to chew that uncle out but good, telling him in no uncertain terms that those who participated in the jeering were guilty of child abuse! Instead, you nonchalantly said, "All kids play doctor. Just be sure your nephew knows he committed no serious crime, and should not repeat the deed." Then all you had to say about the boy's mother was that she was both "cruel and unfeeling."

I hope you get thousands of letters protesting your inadequate answer.

LONGTIME READER

DEAR READER: The number of letters I received from outraged readers set a new record. You are right; my answer was inadequate. Incorporating suggestions from readers, how is this for a second try:

DEAR UNCLE: The boy's mother should be reported to your local child-protective agency. She's obviously ignorant, sadistic and unfit to raise a child. Furthermore, if not one person present (including you) realized that a child should not be punished and ridiculed for doing what every child does naturally (exploring out of curiosity), you all need couseling in sex education and parenting.

But why was the boy alone "punished"? The girl was also a party to the incident. (She may have even instigated it.) By assuming that the boy took advantage of her, you perpetuate the "bad boy — good girl" stereotype.

Children depend on adults to protect them, and adults who would stand by and permit a child to be abused are as guilty as the abuser!

DEAR ABBY: I have been divorced for eight years. When I was married I lived in another state. After the divorce I moved back to New York, which is 3,000 miles away from my ex-husband.

In the eight years since my divorce, my ex-husband has never once visited our child. He doesn't even call to talk to the boy. My son has no idea what his father looks like!

In the beginning I asked him many times to come and see his son, but he refused with different excuses. He has visitation rights, but never uses them.

My question: Should I just take my son to see his father? What effect do you think it would have on the boy?

BETWIXT AND BETWEEN

DEAR B. AND B.: Do not just "take" your son to see his father, knowing that he has chosen to completely ignore the boy. To force a rejected child on his father could be a devastating experience for the boy, and ruin any chance for a future relationship.

For the sake of both your son and his father, suggest that your "ex" get professional help in order to at least face seeing the child he fathered. If he flatly refuses, write him off.

Old games for young kids

Ground rules for street games

If you're looking for news ways to marvel and amuse your children, try the street games you played when you were a kid.

In case you've forgtten the rules Anne Winfield, consumer advisor for F. W. Woolworth, offers these pointers for playing marbles, jacks, hopscotch and jump rope.

Marbles - Marbles games, basically, fall into three categories: chase games in which two or more players take turns shooting at each other along a course; enclosure games in which marbles are shot at other marbles contained within a marked - off area; and hole games in which marbles are shot or bowled into a series of holes.

While there are 57 different marble games, the simplest one invloves capturing marbles from a circle or square drawn on a smooth dirt surface. Each player drops in his ante, and the contestants then take truns at shooting the marbles out of the enclosure. When "playing for keeps," you win all the marbles you knock out.

"Hundreds" is a simple one - hole game for two players. Dig a hole and draw a shooting line 8 - 15 feet from it. Then try to shoot your marbles into the hole. The first player getting his shooter in the hole receives 10 points, and can either go back to the line for another shot at the hole or shoot at his opponent. A player hitting another gains 10 points and the one hit loses 10. Getting 100 points can take a long time.

Jacks - There are 12 ways to play jacks. The basic game, "ones," is played by scattering all jacks on the floor. Toss the ball, pick up one jack, and catch the ball in the same hand on one bounce. Transfer the jacks to the other hand and proceed as before until all jacks are in that hand. (In all games no jacks may be moved except those being played.) Variations on this game can be made by picking up two, three, four or all six jacks for each bounce. "Downs and Ups" can be played by keeping the jacks and the ball in the right hand. Throw ball up again, pick up all jacks, and catch ball in right hand.

Hopscotch - All you need is a stone and a chalk diagram. The object os to toss a stone onto a marked - off box on the street and hop in specific patterns without touching any of the line. You can't change the hopping foot during any given play, or touch the other foot or any part of your body to the ground, except where the game call for that, as in straddling. Straddling consists of jumping to a stride position in two spaces, one foot on each side of the line. When you throw the stone it must land within the box and can't touch the line.

Jump Rope - There are no formalized rules in jump rope. The key to starting a group game is deciding who will be first ender. Two are needed to turn the rope, and the first ender gets the next turn at jumping. Here are some old favorite from the 3,000 variations of jump rope chants:

Strawberry shortcake
Cream on top
Tell me the name of your sweetheart.
(Hop alphabet until you get to first letter of name then hop name.)

Mabel, Mabel set the table
Don't forget the salt and pepper
Red hot pepper (turn rope very fast and count each turn)

The first Girl Guide patrol in North America was founded at Savannah, Ga., in 1912.

COOL IT DURING THE SUMMER

Summer can be an unnecessarily dangerous time of the year. In our enthusiasm to participate in summer activities, we can go beyond our physical limitations causing the body to become overly stressed. This can result in heat stroke, heat cramps, or heat exhaustion.

These reactions usually occur when large amounts of water, salts, or both, are lost through profuse sweating following strenuous exercise or manual labor in an extremely hot atmosphere.

Elderly persons, small children, chronic invalids, overweight people, and alcoholics are especially sensitive to circulatory reactions, particularly if they live in a normally moderate climate.

Although everyone regardless of age or sex is a potential victim, males are considered generally more susceptible because of their physical make-up.

About 75% of energy produced by muscle activity in the body is in the form of heat. Heat is dissipated by vasodilation of surface vessels, perspiration, and panting. Females can usually endure more external heat than males because their subcutaneous tissue acts as an insulator which aids in optimal thermal maintenance. But at the same time, it hampers loss of heat. Therefore, although the male is more likely to succumb to problems induced by insufficient heat loss, both sexes must watch out for heat-induced afflictions. Preventive measures include getting plenty of water and micronutrients.

The person who exerts himself heavily during the summer such as the athlete, sports enthusiast, or manual laborer should supplement excessive fluid loss. Drinks low in refined sugar are best. The sweeter the drink, the longer it remains in the stomach, and thus the longer it takes to replace the fluid lost from the body. Alcoholic beverages are contraindicated.

Health authorities often recommend electrolydic drinks because they replace vital minerals lost in perspiration and metabolism. There are numerous electrolydic drinks which are commercially available.

Although older people often succumb to heat, the prime victims are children. The basis is the same as that which causes this group to be the prime victims of all sports injuries: unrestrained enthusiasm to participate and the zeal for peer acceptance keep the child from quitting until exhaustion is severe.

Summer danger is not limited to the direct effects of heat alone. As the individual's body temperature builds and fatigue sets in, coordination and discretion are affected. The person becomes more negligent . . . and this invites other types of injuries.

Doctors of chiropractic, who treat many types of summer-related injuries, recommend the following rules:

(1) Drink plenty of fluids in the summer.

(2) Try to get plenty of ventilation in indoor work or play areas.

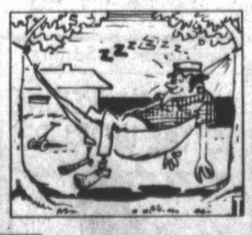

(3) Take more frequent rest breaks than you do during the winter.

(4) Shade your head from the strong sun with a cap if working out of the shade for long periods of time.

(5) Avoid heavy meals before and after strenuous exercise.

(6) If a heat injury occurs, seek immediate emergency treatment.

(7) Maintain your health year-round. Your reaction to heat is influenced by the functions of several systems of your body. To assist in gaining balanced function, doctors of chiropractic strive to remove structural impairments which may interfere with the body's adaptive powers. This procedure reduces tension and aids your natural restoration, maintenance, and resistance capabilities.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

A weeding-out process is likely this coming year. Ties and projects which haven't worked out to your benefit will be eliminated. New, fruitful interests and helpful associations will be developed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's possible that today your mate might not see things in the same serious light as you do. It isn't worth arguing over; loosen up and relax. Predictions of what's in store for you in the seasons following your birth date and where to look for your luck and opportunities are in your Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Normally you're the first person to realize that nothing is handed one without effort expended, but today you may not be that realistic.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Lady Luck is not sitting on your shoulder today, so if you're smart you'll repress your gambling urges. In fact, move cautiously in all financial dealings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your position may be too unyielding to enable you to see the opportunities around you today. Soften your stance and let others show you the way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you run into a roadblock today, check with those making headway to see which routes they are following. Several paths may lead to the same goal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The last thing you should do today is to let yourself be enticed into spending funds which you know you shouldn't. If your inner voice says "no," take heed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Regardless of what type of individual you encounter today, be nice to all you meet. One whose trappings aren't too impressive may be a super person underneath.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) That trump card you may have planned to play today should not be depended upon. When you aren't looking, someone may change the rules.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't let yourself be pressured into accepting something which you know isn't right. Stand by your principles, but bow out as gracefully as possible.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If your present objectives are not developing the way you'd like, drop them for the moment. Don't become frustrated; wait till conditions improve.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Especially with co-workers, be extra-careful today that you don't accidentally blurt out something which was not meant for all ears. It'll go against you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Before you realize it today, you could get caught up into an expensive social event. The quickest way out is to "remember" a prior obligation.

Aaron, Jackson, Chandler, Robinson inducted into Baseball Hall of Fame

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — On the day they both were inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame, Frank Robinson said he finally was through chasing Hank Aaron.

"It seems like I've been chasing him for a long time," said Robinson. "It seems like I've always been one step behind or one year behind him.

"When I broke in, all the talk was about Hank Aaron, and I must say we've had a long and friendly rivalry on the field," Robinson said.

Robinson, an MVP in both leagues and now manager of the San Francisco Giants, made his acceptance speech on the steps of the Hall of Fame library Sunday. His induction followed those of former New York Giants shortstop Travis Jackson and A.B. "Happy" Chandler, post-World War II commissioner of baseball, and preceded that of Aaron.

Jackson and Chandler were selected for induction by the Veterans Committee, while Robinson and Aaron were elected by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America in their first year of eligibilty, having been retired as players for five years. They were the 12th and 13th players inducted in their first try.

Robinson was the 13th, but he gave his acceptance speech first.

"...I finally caught up with him. I'm hitting third," Robinson said, looking toward Aaron, still awaiting his turn to address the crowd gathered for the inductions. "And he's on deck. I'm going into the Hall of Fame before he does."

Aaron was named on 406 of the 415 ballots cast by 10-year members of the baseball writers group, while Robinson received 370 votes. Only Willie Mays, who was inducted in 1979, received more votes than Aaron with 409.

"It's been a long, winding road," said Aaron, who was the last man to make it to the major leagues from Negro League baseball. "I've been extremely blessed in my lifetime."

Aaron, whose 755 career home runs erased the revered record of 714 by Babe Ruth, said he wanted to pay particular respect to Jackie Robinson and Roy Campanella, two of the men most responsible for breaking baseball's color barrier in post-war America.

"A man's ability is limited only by his lack of opportunity," Aaron said, addressing the crowd of several thousand. "Twenty-three years ago, I took the talent God gave me and developed it to the best of my ability, but I never dreamed I would be standing on the same steps where Robinson and Campanella stood."

Aaron, now director of player personnel for the Atlanta Braves, joined the Braves as a player in 1954 in Milwaukee. He remained with the club when it moved to Atlanta in 1966 and played the final two years of his career, 1975 and '76, with the Milwaukee Brewers.

Among the many lifetime major league records he holds are career runs batted in (2,297), at-bats (12,364) and games (3,298).

Robinson, who became the first black manager in the major leagues when he became player-manager of the Cleveland Indians in 1975, started with the Cincinnati Reds in 1956. In 1966, he was traded to Baltimore, where he played for six years before short stints with the Los Angeles Dodgers, California Angels and Indians.

He was named MVP of the National League in 1961 with 37 homers and 124 RBI for Cincinnati, then was named MVP in the American League in 1966 with 49 homers and 122 RBI for Baltimore, becoming the only man to earn the honor in both leagues.

Jackson, 78, was one of the best shortstops of his era, revered especially for his powerful throwing arm and vast range. Jackson also had a career batting average of .291, including a .339 average in 1930.

Chandler became the oldest man inducted into the Hall at age 83. He succeeded baseball's first commissioner, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, after Landis' death in 1944 and served six years. He fought for the desegregation of baseball and championed Brooklyn Dodgers General Manager Branch Rickey's signing of Jackie Robinson. Chandler also helped institute the players pension and was voted out of office in 1951 by owners who felt he sided too staunchly with the players.

"I saw Grover Cleveland Alexander and Dazzy Vance playing for the House of David to get enough money to live on," Chandler said in explaining his fight for a pension. "It just wasn't right."

Vin Scully, veteran Los Angeles Dodgers broadcaster, won the Ford C. Frick Award for baseball announcers.

LeFlore returns to pace Sox victory

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Center fielder Ron LeFlore returned to action and had a head in Chicago's 4-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox. Luckily for the White Sox, he had a hand in it, too.

After sitting out two weeks because of (1) a suspension for reporting late to the ballpark and (2) his wife's illness, LeFlore was back in the starting lineup Sunday and made his presence felt.

"I contributed," he said after driving in two runs with a double and a sacrifice fly in a 4-2 victory over the Red Sox.

But what had the crowd in Chicago's Comiskey Park buzzing was the ball Boston's Gary Allenson hit in the sixth inning which appeared to bounce off LeFlore's head and roll to the wall as Allenson circled the bases on the four-base error.

"See, you guys don't even know what happened," LeFlore explained. "It didn't bounce off my head, it bounced off the bill of my cap. I drifted back when I should have run. When I stuck my glove up, I lost it in the sun."

In other American League games, the Kansas City Royals made it four in a row over the Baltimore Orioles 4-2, the Cleveland Indians downed Milwaukee 4-1 in the first game of a doubleheader with the Brewers taking the nightcap 7-2, the California Angels trimmed the Seattle Mariners 9-4, the Texas Rangers downed the New York Yankees 4-2, the Detroit Tigers defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 8-5 and the Minnesota Twins outlasted the Oakland A's 8-7.

Football tickets go on sale Aug. 16

Season tickets for the 1982 Pampa High football games go on sale Aug. 16 to the public, but previous season ticket holders have first crack at the seats they held last year.

Previous ticket holders have the opportunity to purchase the same seats before the tickets are offered to the public, according to Pampa High Athletic Director Bill Balcom.

Tickets are $15 this season, which is higher than last year due to Pampa's change in districts, Balcom said. The Harvesters drop from District 3-5A to District 1-4A, which includes Brownfield, Canyon, Dumas, Levelland, Lubbock Estacado, Lubbock Dunbar and Borger.

Tickets may be bought at the Athletic Business Office on Decatur next to the football stadium, or by sending a check or money order to Football Ticket Sales, Pampa High School, 111 East Harvester, Pampa, Tex. 79065. The business office is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Previous season ticket holders must buy their tickets by Aug. 13.

Pampa's first home game is Sept. 10 against Clovis, N.M. The Harvesters open the season Sept. 3 at Hereford. Other home games are Oct. 15 Dumas, Oct. 22 Brownfield, Oct. 29 Canyon and Nov. 12 Borger.

Baker leads Dodgers past Braves in hall of fame tribute to Aaron

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

While Hank Aaron was having his day in Cooperstown, N.Y., Dusty Baker was having his in Atlanta.

"That's sort of my tribute to him on the day he was inducted into the Hall of Fame," Baker said after hitting two home runs in Aaron's old stomping ground at Atlanta Stadium to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 9-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves Sunday.

Ironically, Baker's game-winning blast in the seventh inning almost landed on a sign commemorating the spot where Aaron hit his 715th homer in 1974 to break Babe Ruth's record.

"I wasn't trying to hit a home run, but it's funny I almost hit his sign," Baker said. "Hank's a close friend and he was like my father figure when I was with the Braves."

The Dodger victory, by the way, completed a four-game sweep of the Braves and put Los Angeles within shooting range of the National League West leader, 6½ games behind in third place. It left San Diego six games back in second after the Padres beat Cincinnati 8-6.

In other NL action, the Montreal Expos trimmed the St. Louis Cardinals 5-4, the Chicago Cubs whipped the Philadelphia Phillies 7-2, the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the New York Mets 5-4 in 10 innings and the San Francisco Giants topped the Houston Astros 4-2 in 10 innings.

Baker's seventh-inning shot off Carlos Diaz, 2-1, gave the Dodgers a 5-4 lead and Pedro Guerrero immediately followed with another homer to provide Los Angeles with a two-run cushion.

Baker came back with his second homer of the game and his 20th of the season in the eighth, a two-run shot that followed Ken Landreaux's RBI single. The victory went to Dave Stewart, 6-6, who worked the final four innings without yielding a run.

Padres 8, Reds 6

Terry Kennedy cracked three hits and Sixto Lezcano doubled home two runs, highlighting an early scoring spree that carried San Diego over Cincinnati. The Padres scored seven runs in the first three innings off Charlie Leibrandt, 3-7, and coasted to their third straight victory.

John Curtis, 7-6, pitched 51-3 innings for the victory and Luis DeLeon posted his 10th save for the Padres after coming into the game with a no-out, bases-loaded situation in the ninth and giving up three runs, two on an error by third baseman Luis Salazar.

Expos 5, Cardinals 4

Al Oliver capped a three-run rally in the seventh inning with a run-scoring single as Montreal came from behind to beat St. Louis.

The Expos trailed 4-2, but tied it on a two-run triple by Jerry White. One out later, Oliver delivered his big single off reliever Jeff Lahti, 2-2.

The Cardinals had gone ahead 4-2 in the sixth on Ozzie Smith's sacrifice fly.

Reliever Jeff Reardon, 4-1, earned the victory but needed help from Woodie Fryman, who pitched the final 12-3 innings for his seventh save.

Cubs 7, Phillies 2

Leon Durham's two-run homer highlighted a three-run first and Chicago went on to beat Philadelphia and snap an eight-game losing streak before a crowd of 57,652 at Veterans Stadium..

Chicago starter Dickie Noles, 7-9, worked 72-3 innings and, with the help of reliever Lee Smith, ended Philadelphia's four-game winning streak. Smith relieved in the eighth after Philadelphia scored twice.

The victory was Noles' first over the Phillies in two starts since being traded by Philadelphia to Chicago last December.

Durham's homer off Dick Ruthven, 8-9, provided the Phillies with a 3-0 lead in the first and gave the Cubs all the runs they actually needed.

Pirates 4, Mets 3

Bill Madlock's tie-breaking home run with two out in the 10th inning lifted Pittsburgh over New York.

Madlock's 11th homer of the season came off reliever Terry Leach, 1-1, and made a winner of Kent Tekulve, 7-5, who pitched 11-3 innings. Rod Scurry got the last two outs for the Pirates, gaining his eighth save.

Toppled

Japanese tanker "Nikko - maru" floats on her side beside the damaged breakwater in the Yokohama harbor Monday morning, after Typhoon "Bess" slashed across Japan's main island of Honshu late Sunday and early Monday. No injuries were reported in this accident, but the typhoon left 42 dead, at least 37 missing and damaging thousands of homes in landslides and flooding. (AP Laserphoto)

Reagan trying Midwest fence mending

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is trying to mend fences today with Midwestern grain farmers, key Republican constituents who reacted cooly to his refusal to negotiate a long-term grain sale to the Soviet Union.

Reagan was flying to Iowa for an 18½-hour overnight visit, three days after announcing he would consider extending for one-year the agreement governing the U.S.-Soviet grain trade.

His aides say they are concerned not just about the reaction to Friday's announcement, but also about the impact of continued high interest rates on farmers. They say the cost of borrowing money is of greater importance than any one nation's grain purchases.

Reagan planned to speak to the 25th annual convention of the National Corn Growers Association in Des Moines and then fly by helicopter to visit a 500-acre farm owned and operated by Donald Dee and his sons, Allan and Eric, near State Center, Iowa, about 41 miles northeast of Des Moines. The Dee family grows corn and beans, and is raising 1,200 pigs and hogs.

On Tuesday, Reagan flies to Hartford, Conn., to speak to the centennial meeting of the Knights of Columbus, before returning to Washington in late afternoon.

The president had been under pressure from Republican allies from the Midwest to help bail out the grain producers, whose bountiful crops have driven down prices at a time when they have been stung by high interest rates.

With several Republican Midwestern governors not running for re-election, there has been concern about the GOP's chances in the region this November.

A long-term grain agreement would have helped in the approaching election. But the administration feared negotiating such an agreement would appear hypocritical to Western allies who it had pressed to cut off assistance for a Soviet natural gas pipeline.

Opposition to the pipeline has been the theme of the president's response to the Soviet-supported military crackdown in Poland.

But in the Midwest, a near-record wheat harvest is underway and grain bins are near the bursting point. As a result, farmers are seeking any help they can get in the way of exports.

Rolf Craft, chairman of the Iowa Republican Party, said today's visit reflected an effort to solidify support among farmers "and make sure they don't go off in the other direction."

Craft said "it would have been excellent" politically had Reagan opted for a long-term grain agreement.

Varel Bailey of Anita, Iowa, president of the Iowa Corn Growers Association, said producers had hoped for more than they got, for "any news that would give any optimism to the corn market."

"We out here in the country don't know all the ins and outs of the political situation" and must trust the administration to do what's best for the United States, said Bailey.

Keith Heffernan, spokesman for the corn growers group, said that while his organization would like greater trade with the Soviets, "we view his report in favor of a one-year extension as a positive signal that we are going to negotiate. This opens the door."

Maurice Van Nostrand, of AGRI Industries, Iowa's largest grain cooperative, was more critical:

"Up until 10 days ago, the (grain) trade generally thought we would see the grain agreement expanded, so this is a disappointment. I don't think the present agreement reflects either the needs of Russia or the huge supplies we have available."

Senate vote near on budget admendments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is moving toward approval this week of a constitutional amendment to balance future federal budgets. But a record $98.5 million tax hike to trim more immediate deficits may hit a snag.

The tax hike, written by Senate Republicans and zipped through both chambers of Congress, has encountered stiff opposition from conservative House Republicans. They have vowed to try to defeat a final version expected to be framed this week.

Meanwhile, supporters of the balanmendment that has been under debate in the Senate for most of the past month claim they now have the necessary two-thirds majority — or 67 votes — needed to pass it.

The Senate resumes debate on the legislation today, with about two dozen amendments still pending — including a proposal by Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., to establish a two-year federal budget cycle to replace the current yearly budget.

Senate leaders believe they can fend off all the remaining amendments, with a final vote expected by Wednesday at the latest.

The House Judiciary Committee also will begin hearings this week on the balanced budget proposal, although supporters say they anticipate a harder time in the House than in the Senate.

If ratified by three-quarters of the states, the amendment would prohibit the government from spending more than it takes in, except in times of war or if permitted by a 60 percent vote by both chambers.

Negotiators for the House and Senate will hold their first session on the tax increase bill Tuesday.

The bill would increase federal taxes on cigarettes and telephones, boost business taxes, require taxes to be withheld on interest on dividends and more sharply limit medical deductions.

The conference committee will be working on the Senate bill. At the urging of Democratic leaders fearful of becoming identified with an election-year tax increase, the House last voted 208-197 last to use the Senate version as the basis for a compromise — without doing any of its own work on the bill.

But a group of some 80 House Republicans, led by Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., an original author of the big tax cut bill enacted last year, is unhappy with the move to short-circuit the House and say they will fight to kill the tax bill.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., says the tax measure could be defeated unless President Reagan wages a major effort to line up GOP votes.

In another budget battle, the House on Tuesday could find itself debating a proposed 4 percent ceiling on cost-of-living increases for government and military retirees.

Republicans in the House had sought to avoid a separate vote on the proposal.

Loyalists in control, but fighting continues

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Rebel snipers were holding out in Nairobi and fighting continued at one air base outside the capital, but President Daniel Arap Moi appeared to be in control of the country today after crushing an attempt by junior air force officers to overthrow his civilian government.

The Kenyan leader said Sunday night in a broadcast that "the uprising by the air force has been crushed by our army and police."

Government sources said more than 300 air force personnel had been detained. But the leader of the attempted coup, identified by military sources as a Col. Odipo of the 50th Air Cavalry Battalion, was not among those captured, officials said.

Press reports in neighboring Tanzania said a military plane with four Kenyan air force officers aboard landed at Dar es Salaam's international airport. The officers were being questioned by the police, the reports said.

The military command gave rebels holding out until noon today (5 a.m. EDT) to surrender. Lt. Gen Abdul Mohammed, who led the loyalist forces, said in a broadcast those who didn't would be dealt with "ruthlessly."

It was Kenya's first coup attempt since the pro-Western, east African country got its independence from Britain 19 years ago.

Moi, 58, has been in power since 1978, when he succeeded the late Jomo Kenyatta, Kenya's revered first president and the architect of the country's independence. Moi was Kenyatta's vice president.

Last month he pushed through a constitutional amendement making his Kenya African National Union (KANU) the only legal political party. Since then he has been rounding up leading KANU opponents.

There is also public discontent over the stagnating economy, unemployment and a decline in real income because of a 20 percent annual inflation rate.

One rebel broadcast said: "Rampant corruption and nepotism has made life almost intolerable in our society. The economy is in a shambles, and the people can't afford food, housing and transport."

Military sources said fighting continued late Sunday near the Embakasi Air Base, eight miles south of Nairobi, where the rebellion was launched at 3 a.m.

The sources said the main rebel forces had been subdued.

Bess Truman is in hospital

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former first lady Bess Truman, 97, was "resting comfortably" early today after being admitted to Research Medical Center over the weekend with irregular breathing and pulse, hospital officials said.

Dr. Wilson Miller, attending Mrs. Truman while Dr. Wallace Graham, her longtime doctor, was out of town, said Sunday he was cautious about being optimistic because of the patient's age.

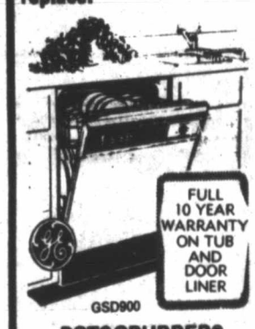

"But I think she'll probably go back home again, probably in just a few days, maybe a week," he said.

Mrs. Truman, who lives in nearby Independence, was listed in serious but stable condition in the intensive care unit because of her age.

Graham, who kept in touch with the case by phone, said in a prepared statement that Mrs. Truman, the nation's oldest first lady, was experiencing a condition known as hyperkalemia.
