"Anti-Evolution" Bill Is Introduced In Texas House

Representatives Ask For Law On Subject In State

Violation of Law to Draw Fine of $500; Mt. Pleasant and Stephenville Men Present Measure

Will Ban Books

Amusement Law Comes Up For Action Also; Transfer of Enforcement Is Sought In New Bill

(By Associated Press) AUSTIN, Jan. 10.—A so-called "anti-evolution" bill, forbidding instructors in state-supported schools to teach that "manaking evolved from a lower order of animal" was introduced in the Texas house today by Representatives J. W. Harper, Mt. Pleasant, and W. T. Graves, Stephenville.

The measure is similar to one in effect in Tennessee. It proposes a misdemeanor fine of not exceeding $500 for violation.

The bill also would make liable to prosecution any textbook commissioner adopting books which teach the theory of evolution.

Movie Law Brought Up. Responsibility of enforcing the ancient state law prohibiting operation on the Sabbath of moving pictures or other places of amusement where admission fee is charged would be placed on the shoulders of the sheriffs in a bill introduced in the house today by Rep. F. H. Prendergast.

The author, who celebrated his 78th birthday by offering more than 20 measures for consideration, would make it the duty of the sheriff or his deputies to close the place operating illegally. It would become proper for the city or county attorney to summon an officer and padlock the theater if the peace of

Tests of Formations Of Dirt And Rocks Made By The Santa Fe For Excavation On Underpasses

Tests of soil and formations of dirt and rock are being made by the Santa Fe Railway company, at points where the subways are to be built by the railroad and the city of Lubbock, namely the intersection of Avenue H and the railroad tracks, and at Broadway and the railroad tracks. It was learned at the regular meeting of the city commission Thursday afternoon.

Following these tests, which are being made for the purpose of determining approximate costs of excavating for building the subways, in order that the railway company may estimate these costs, it is expected that work of actual excavation to prepare for construction of

Harvard Man Says Flu Is Not Fatal

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10. (AP)—Dr. M. J. Rosenau, professor of preventive medicine at Harvard, and a member of the committee of scientists who recently announced discovery of a new pneumonia virus, said today that the committee will meet here immediately after the close of the conference on influenza called by the public health service.

Dr. Rosenau declared that in his opinion "no body ever died of influenza," and that deaths attributed to this disease were due to pneumonia. Committee members expect to go thoroughly into the influenza situation.

1929 Extensions Of Santa Fe Will Total 268.1 Miles

Hale Center-Parmerton And Seagraves Branch Extensions Included In List Of New Improvements

(By Associated Press) TOPEKA, Jan. 10.—Extensions of Santa Fe railway lines, part of which now are under construction, will add 268.1 miles to the system during 1929, it was announced here today.

The extensions were announced as follows: Cheyenne, Oklahoma, to Pampa, 80.6 miles; Lane City, Texas, to Thompsons, Texas, 35 miles; Hale Center, to Parmerton, 66 miles; Seagraves, Texas, into Lea county, N. M. and to Lovington, N. M., 86.5 miles.

As a safety measure approximately 328 miles of new automatic signals will be installed.

Replace Old Rails. Old rails over 605 miles of the system will be replaced with new. A new store building probably will be built at Cleburne, Texas, the announcement said.

No announcement was made concerning operation of the Orient lines recently acquired by the Santa Fe. The present mileage of the Santa Fe is 12,349.66 the announcement said. This figure will be increased to 13,353 miles with the Orient lines and the 1929 extensions.

California thus became the fifth of the seven states affected by the bill to ratify. With Wyoming, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico and California safely in the "yes" column, and Arizona almost certain to vote "no," Utah now is the key state, six ratifications from the seven states being necessary before the Boulder dam becomes a reality. The Utah legislature withdrew temporarily its ratification.

Confessed Slayer Is Stoical To Last and Chats With Fellow Prisoners; Talks With Priest

(By Associated Press) HUNTSVILLE, Jan. 11.—Game to the end and carrying out his boast that he would go to his death unshaken, Floyd Newton Byrnes paid with his life in the electric chair here early Friday for the slaying of three women in San Angelo.

The current was sent through his body at 12:23 a. m. and he was pronounced dead at 12:31 a. m. Byrnes paid with his life for the "hatchet murder" of three women, members of a wealthy San Angelo family. He confessed the murders and told officers that he slew the women and then mutilated their bodies with a hatchet. He was indicted for the death of Myra Juergens, a young girl, her mother, Mrs. W. J. Juergens and Myrna's grandmother, Mrs. Rosa Schirra.

Drunkenness Was Defense. He was tried only for murder of the girl and was given the death penalty. His only defense was that he was under influence of liquor when he committed the crime.

Throughout his last day on earth Byrnes maintained stoical calm as minutes ticked away and brought him to the threshold of the electric chair.

In the afternoon he talked earnestly with the Rev. Father Hugh

Extra Session Of Congress Forecast

Farm Relief and Tariff Legislation to Come Up For Consideration, Oregon Senator Predicts

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—An extra session of Congress, to be called about the middle of April, to put through farm relief and tariff legislation by July 4, was forecast late today by Chairman Hawley of the House Ways and Means committee, after a lengthy conference with President-elect Hoover.

Hawley, chairman of the House Ways and Means committee which has started hearings on tariff revision, emphasized that he was voicing his own views as Mr. Hoover himself had said nothing on the subject.

The Oregon member however, said it was his opinion the new Congress the seventy-first would be called together about the middle of April and that an attempt would be made to put tariff and farm relief bills through by the fourth of July.

During the campaign Mr. Hoover promised to call a special session if the farm problem were not disposed of by the present Congress.

State Treasurer Criticizes Moody On Centralized Government Plan

W. Gregory Hatcher Says Governor Has Plan Similiar To One Used By Kaiser Wilhelm Prior To World War; Plans Only Three Elected Officers

(By Associated Press) AUSTIN, Jan. 10.—"There is a great difference" between a centralized government and one in which the activities of departments are co-ordinated, Governor Moody said today in replying to a criticism by W. G. Hatcher, State Treasurer, of his annual message to the legislature.

"The most efficient and perfectly co-ordinated government that this world ever knew was the German kaiser's government in 1914," Hatcher said in the statement. "Governor Moody must have had this in mind when he wrote certain portions of his message to the Texas legislature. To achieve the 'perfect co-ordination' in the state government, which the Governor evidently covets or de-

Abernathy Denies Rumor Connecting Him With Asphalt Paving Companies

Backer Of Proposed Bond Issue Favors Concrete, He Says

Issuing a sweeping denial of rumors that he is or has been connected with any asphalt company, Monroe G. Abernathy, a leader of the Taxpayers' organization sponsoring the passage of $1,000,000 in county highway bonds, last night told The Morning Avalanche that he favors concrete construction on Federal specifications if the proposed paved roads project is successful.

Mr. Abernathy's statement came on the heels of direct question offered by an Avalanche reporter in efforts on the part of the newspaper and himself to clarify the situation which surrounds the road bond campaign. He told the Avalanche, a question was put to him that he was answering it not because he felt that he needed defense from the rumor but to help bring out the facts in the highway campaign.

Makes Statement. "I do not now and never did represent the Uvalde Rock Asphalt company, of San Antonio, nor any other asphalt company," Mr. Abernathy said in answer to the question. "I am not working for any type of construction in Lubbock county but I do favor the highest type of concrete construction under Federal specifications."

Mr. Abernathy also discussed the cost of the proposed project and explained the difference between the figures given in the petitions and those of the state highway department, which have been used by the Taxpayers' organization to support a point that $1,000,000 is not sufficient to carry the county's part of the project.

Explains The Figures. "The figures set forth in the petitions were placed therein with the approval and concurrence of the county judge (Chas. Nordyke, now retired) and three members of the commission (W. E. Brahear, N. A. Payne and Claude Denton) who promised to sponsor an election under this petition," he said.

He also told of a committee from The Taxpayers discussing with the county commission the matter of the county's part of the funds to be used in the hard surface. In the committee were C. E. Maedgen, Ollie Clem, P. Frank Brown, Joe Earhart and Mr. Abernathy.

State Treasurer Criticizes Moody On Centralized Government Plan

W. Gregory Hatcher Says Governor Has Plan Similiar To One Used By Kaiser Wilhelm Prior To World War; Plans Only Three Elected Officers

County Still Needs Paved Highways

Frankly, this is an editorial urging the voting of $1,000,000 in county bonds, to be applied upon the construction of a $3,000,000 system of hard surface highways over the state and federal designated routes in Lubbock county.

And, in continued frankness, this editorial is being written in an effort to secure, if possible, extra support for the passage of the bonds by a straight-forward presentation of the highway situation as it now stands in Lubbock county.

The Avalanche-Journal papers have made what they believe to be a fair, accurate and complete survey and investigation of the proposal. This action has resulted in the decision that the highway problem, as a whole, so far overshadows a few mitigating circumstances that the entire question simmers down to the point: "Does Lubbock county NEED and can Lubbock county AFFORD the paving program as proposed?"

Based upon this survey of the situation, a thundering "YES" is the only answer which can be returned to both parts of the question.

Looked upon in another light, Lubbock county CANNOT AFFORD to go without voting for a complete system of hard surface highways for many more years—and for three separate and distinct reasons:

In the first place the citizenship as a whole, both rural and urban, NEEDS paved roads for business reasons.

Secondly, east-west and north-south hard surface highways are being planned in counties around us and if Lubbock county does not move to join in these plans we shall some day find ourselves high and dry, between the paved roads, with traffic going around but NOT through our city.

Lastly, if bonds are voted and construction begins on a Lubbock county highway project BEFORE the State Bond Issue plan is placed into effect, we'll have our roads and have the cost of them taken up by the state in a much shorter time than we can expect to have our roads constructed entirely through the State Bond Issue system.

Of the chief points of opposition to the present proposal is, as the Avalanche-Journal survey shows, the designation of the Lubbock-Idalou route. While it may be true that this route is displeasing to some people, that point of opposition may be summarily dismissed by remembering that the proposition of paving the state and federal designated highways in Lubbock county far overshadows the route that any one highway may or may not take.

There are some circumstances connected with the present proposal which the Avalanche-Journal regrets. Yet these public lions are now and have always been basically in favor of paved roads as well as all other civic advancement and for this and the reasons stated above, urge the support of the citizenship in behalf of the bond issue.

Bandit-Killer In Building Permits Dallas Hits Again

Taxi Driver Is Struck Over Head by Passenger; Man Is Believed Slayer Of Youth; Officers On Case

(Special To The Journal) DALLAS, Jan. 10.—The bandit-killer who fatally wounded William Mann, 17, last Sunday was believed to have struck again tonight when Ralph O. Sisson, 21, taxi driver, was shot in the abdomen as he struggled with a passenger who had hit him over the head with an iron bar. Sisson was near death tonight.

Every available officer in the city was ordered to the scene of this shooting.

The manner in which the thug operated led officers to believe he was the same man who killed Mann, a high school honor student, and wounded his girl companion, Miss Mildred Drennan, when Mann resisted attempts to commandeer his automobile on a downtown street.

Rewards totalling $1,050 have been posted for the arrest of Mann's slayer. Of this amount $50 was contributed today by students of Forest Avenue high school.

Richards Is Given Trial Continuance

DALLAS, Jan. 10. (AP)—Ben C. Richards, Jr., today was granted a continuance in his trial for forgery until February 4.

A short time before the Judge had denied a motion for venue change, after three days' testimony as to whether Richards could get a fair trial in Dallas county.

Richards and A. A. Crabbe were indicted for forging the name "Clyde R. Vest" to two $1,000 checks posted as stakes in the Connally-Mayfield senatorial election. Arville L. Mathews, stakeholder, was shot to death at a busy street intersection after he had paid the $2,000 to a fictitious "Vest." Subsequently, a jury was unable to agree in a trial of V. Ray Adams, one of the bettors, for the slaying of Mathews.

Senate Passes Measure Unanimous and Sends It to House; Robison to Get Probe of Affairs

(By Associated Press) AUSTIN, Jan. 10.—Withdrawal from lease or sale of all oil and gas in Texas University lands was accomplished partially by the legislature today.

The senate by unanimous vote passed finally the Hornsby bill, repealing the leasing law of 1923 and sent it to the house, where it immediately was referred to the land committee appointed ahead of other committees to facilitate action.

The committee retired to consider the bill but deferred action until a night session in order to heard a chance to appear before it, give any one who desired to be

The repeal bill also cancel sale of leases on about 1,500,000 acres of land advertised by J. T. Robison.

Meeting In Courthouse Last Night Results In Enthusiastic Drive Today For Victory of Election

Deciding to wage a last-minute, whirlwind campaign, to put over the $1,000,000 county-wide road bond issue project at the election to be held here tomorrow, Saturday, a group of more than 50 representative Lubbock county men met at the courthouse Friday night for a two-hour discussion of different phases of the question and to map out a plan of battle to take the cause to the voters of the county.

Workers will go into every voting precinct of the county today. In the interest of telling the citizens why this election should carry and to urge them to go to the polls Saturday day there will be 200 or more workers actively engaged in getting voters to the polls.

Campaign Opens In Earnest. While the campaign, heretofore, has been one of inaction, it was the opinion of the gathering last night that the people have sufficient knowledge of the proposition, as gained from the campaign for the $2,004,000 election which was defeated on December 1, 1928, to know that the million dollars in bonds to be voted are to be used for paving all the state and federal designated highways that traverse Lubbock county, as this county's part in paying for such paving. The state and federal governments are

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

There is something solid and substantial and very graceful about a windmill. I remember one spring evening in Holland watching the strange and oddly beautiful windmills outlined against a dusky sky. Great arms moving in a stately grace catching the late afternoon breeze and turning it into power. And then, the following year, I remember Copenhagen and the great windmills and the great arms of the windmills and the great arms of the windmills and the great arms of the windmills.

nashum and thousands of human arms emulating the stately, arc-like motion of the Dutch windmills. And again, each of the movements were developing power, but this time power of another kind. Strong plant muscles, active circulation lithe and splendid grace.

I always have liked the windmill exercise, and had not others before me seen, recognized and reproduced the action. I should have done it myself in a perfect exercise.

"Mother, I want to go over to Dorothy's and play."

"No, you can't go. Her brother's sick."

"Oh, Dorothy's brother isn't very sick. I saw him out on the porch. Can't I go, Mother? I haven't seen Dorothy's new doll or anything."

"No, you can't go. They've had the flu over there and I wouldn't be surprised if Jim's getting it now. I don't want you to get sick. Now run and play. I want to finish this ironing."

Betty went back to her playthings pouting. After a while she went to the window and gazed longingly across the lot to Dorothy's house. There was Dorothy at her window beckoning.

"Mother, may I go over and stand outside and let Dorothy show me her doll from the window?"

"Oh goodness! Are you still talking about that? No, you'd better wait a day or two and then go. Ask Dorothy to come over here."

"You mean I can't go in because Jim's sick?"

"Certainly. That's what I've been saying right along. The house is full of flu, I'm sure. They've all had it."

Betty didn't answer. She was inside her coat by this time. Grabbing up her tam, she tore out of the door.

In a second she was back. "Mother, Mother! There goes Jim. He's going down the street. Now can I go in?"

Her mother looked out dubiously. Yes, there was Jim bundled up, head down, and walking very slowly. A sick-looking Jim, but Jim anyway. As it happened he was heading for the drugstore at the corner.

"Well, just a peep at Dorothy's playthings," she conceded. "Don't stay. Come right home. You know that house is full of flu."

Betty stayed an hour. Jim came back and went to bed. Dorothy, too, was sniffling and coughing.

Betty took influenza, so did her

Passage of Road Bonds In Election Saturday

Approximately 200 men, of which about 180 were Lubbock citizens, gathered in the banquet hall of Hotel Lubbock yesterday at noon in a joint meeting of the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs. With C. E. Maedgen as chairman, Lubbock county's highway problems and particularly the $1,000,000 road bond election set for Saturday, were discussed, and at the conclusion a rising vote was taken which was overwhelmingly in favor of passage of the bonds.

Addresses were made by J. H. Hankins, Mr. Maedgen, County Judge Robert Bean, County Commissioners W. L. Brashear, Claude Denton and N. A. Payne; W. D. Benson and Jerry J. Clements. Mr. Benson's talk was the only one in opposition to the present proposal.

Pleas for cooperation among the citizenship were made by Judge Bean and Mr. Hankins as well as by Mr. Clements and Mr. Maedgen while the three commissioners and the county judge went on record as favoring concrete construction.

Dorrance D. Roderick, president of the Kiwanis club, presided and Hunter W. Richardson, with Mrs. Will Tucker at the piano, led group singing.

Police were notified yesterday afternoon of the theft of a 1927 model Chevrolet coupe, belonging to C. B. Berry, from in front of the high school, between the hours of 9 and 12 Thursday morning.

Local People Are Much Interested In His Famous Treatment—Orgatone—Personal Representative Arrived Last Night

Mr. Harvey Martin, a personal representative of Harry Kessinger—the widely known health teacher and originator of the Orgatone treatment, arrived in Lubbock last night.

In connection with their visit, Mr. Martin said last night: "As a personal representative of Harry Kessinger, I will remain in Lubbock for several weeks. Prominent business men of Lubbock urged Harry Kessinger to give the people here the same benefits of his study and research work that he has given in some of the largest cities of the East and South, where he has spent several years helping thousands of sick and suffering people."

Mr. Kessinger yielded to the solicitations of these men, and made arrangements for his personal representative to visit Lubbock and while here has instructed me to prove to everyone how easy it is to guard against the inroad of ill-health as carefully as you do some of the other features of your life."

The following characteristic statement was made by Mr. Martin in an interview last night: "A coincidence which struck me very forcibly while coming down through the country was the very large number of people, pale, yellowish and sickly complexions. These people are suffering from weak stomachs which is undoubtedly due to the torpid condition of the liver and the lack of necessary juices obtained from absolutely fresh vegetables."

Allene Sumner

A rich man of Seattle, Wash., has been spending no little time since ye merrie Yuletide sending back all presents received by him which seemed to cost more than a dollar. He's in the same boat as various ladies' organizations which stipulate that each member may bring only a quarter gift to the Christmas party, but which must always have the quiet ready for the sisters who, carried away by the season of was-sail and revelry, try to slip in a pair of half-dollar shirred shoe trees.

Sometimes one's inclined to believe that the one who spends more than is stipulated by the bond has more real Christmas spirit in the bosom than the one who makes the to-do about Christmas being measured by price tags, and who proceeds to figure up the gift cost.

"LOVE IS ENOUGH"

Somewhat in the same vein is the story of the will of Fred Thomson, husband of Frances Marion, well-known scenario writer. Thomson willed all his property to his mother and little son, explaining that he did it at the request of his wife and in the knowledge that she was adequately provided for. He did leave her "my love and affection."

Willis like that don't hurt wives as long as the whole world knows the why. It's a will which insultingly overlooks them entirely, or the of a will at all, announcing to the world the husband's disregard of the wife, that cuts.

SHE'S SO VALUABLE

Raymond Young of Newark, N. J., is suing the United States Radium Corporation for $100,000 compensation for contraction of "luminous leprosy" in the company's dial painting shop by his wife, Mae Canfield Young. He places this amount as the only adequate compensation for "loss of a wife's and mother's services."

DID HE BEFORE?

The comment is probably unjust and perhaps unnecessarily cynical. But whenever one reads of suits brought by husbands placing their wives' services at certain rather high amounts, one wonders just how conscious they were of the value of said services before the suit was possible. Tell any husband that he couldn't replace his wife's work in the home for something like several hundred dollars a month and he'll laugh a sardonic "Ye-a-ah?"

ROBERTS GETS CHECK

Constable J. C. Roberts was the recipient of a $25 check Thursday from the Auto Theft Bureau, for his services in recovering a Chevrolet coach here recently.

The car was discovered on the highway north of town, at the Canyon, about three weeks ago, where it had evidently been left, as it was kept here for several days without anyone claiming it.

Hold a Council of War—against the Common Cold

The discoveries of modern science make overheating of the home a matter that seriously concerns every member of your family.

Years ago, shrewd old Benjamin Franklin thought that colds must have something to do with heating. Modern scientific men have proved that this is a fact. In tests in New York city schoolrooms by Dr. C. E. A. Winslow, professor of public health in the Yale School of Medicine, overheating by only two degrees caused a seventy per cent increase in respiratory illness.

Automatic Heat Control Prevents Overheating

Our unique "10-point Demonstration" shows you the one practical way to prevent overheating: To install an automatic temperature regulator on your home heating plant. Also explains how you obtain steady heat without anyone ever touching dampers or drafts — fuel saving—warm rooms to dress in, through clock control. Call here, or phone for an appointment at your own home any day or evening.

IT'S NOT HARD TO GROW THIN

People all about you can testify to that. Most of the slender figures seen today have been won in easy ways. Many have been won by Marmola prescription tablets, based on a modern scientific discovery. People have used Marmola for 20 years—millions of boxes of it. Now slender figures in almost every circle show what Marmola does.

A book in each box of Marmola gives the formula and states the scientific reasons for results. So users realize how and why effects are beneficial. A way which has done so much for so many deserves a test from you. Make it now, watch the results for a little while, then decide. Ask your druggist today for a $1 box of Marmola.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Eleventh Annual West Texas Chamber Of Commerce Convention Is Set For May 13-15 In El Paso; Plans Started

FORTY-SIX APPLY Notary Public Appointments Sought by Many Here

Lubbock county has, so far this year, 46 applicants for notary public appointments, according to Amos Howard, county clerk. These applications will be forwarded to Austin. Any others who desire to make application for appointments as notary public are requested by Mr. Howard to place their application during the present session of the state legislature, by filing their names with the county clerk's office here.

DAMAGE SUIT IS FILED W. T. Caswell Seeks $20,000 From Llano Oil Co.

A $20,000 damage suit was transferred from Gaines county to the Ninety-Ninth district court here yesterday, in which W. T. Caswell is suing the Llano Oil company for that amount. The suit involves oil and gas leases in Gaines county, the plaintiff alleging that he is the owner and holder of leases claimed to him and that the adverse claims of the oil company constitute a cloud and encumbrance upon his lease to his damage in the amount asked.

MOTORISTS PAY City Fines Light During Thursday Here

Motorists were the only violators of the city laws yesterday, according to the records of the police court. There were only three of these against whom fines were assessed, one being for $1 on a charge of double parking, one for $3 on a charge of driving past a stop signal and one for $5 on a charge of speeding.

NEW FORMULA SARGON A TONIC OF GREAT POWER

The instant and phenomenal success of Sargon is easily explained. Its effect is almost immediate. Thousands of half-sick rundown men and women who have taken it with the most astonishing and gratifying results, report that it seems to pick them right up and put them on their feet.

It is not only a powerful reconstructive tonic designed to impart tone and strength to the entire system, but it is a constitutional treatment as well and exerts a tremendous influence upon the processes of assimilation and elimination. It also contains other ingredients which are valuable for their influence upon the appetite and digestion.

Sargon is fulfilling its great mission. It is doing it in a new and revolutionary way. Sargon is accomplishing its result by helping Nature to correct the improper functioning of three all-important organs and fluids of the body it is designed to aid.

One of the basic ingredients in Sargon is designed to stimulate the liver to normal activity because, after years of medical research, it has been proven conclusively that seven out of every ten people, past the age of thirty, suffer from deficient bile flow caused by a sluggish liver. And unless the liver is performing its proper functions, the processes of digestion, assimilation and elimination become deranged, resulting in dyspepsia, gastro-intestinal disorders, auto-intoxication, constipation, hyperacidity and other distressing symptoms which are now so common in this modern age.

Another basic ingredient in Sargon is designed to build up the richness and vigor of the blood stream by increasing the amount of haemoglobin which the red blood corpuscles contain, and thus enable the blood to purify itself.

Still another principal ingredient in Sargon is designed to stimulate the all-important secretions of the endocrine glands, which form a network throughout the body and which science has learned govern our very outlook on life, making us either ambitious and alert or dull and depressed.

Sargon may be obtained in Lubbock from City Drug Stores; and in Slaton from City Drug Store. Copyright 1928 by G. F. Willis, Inc. Adv.

Era Of Big Purses Passes On With Death Of Tex Rickard

A.C.C. Wildcats Invade Local Stronghold Tonight To Battle Tech Cagers

Passing of Promoter Not Only Hard Blow To Big Business of Boxing But To Careers of His Many Followers

Comeback of Dempsey Will Determine Whether Big Gates Are Available; A Leader Is Lacking

By ALAN J. GOULD.
Associated Press Sports Editor.
NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—The confusion, the uncertainty and the somewhat bewildered look on the faces of those associated with the boxing game testify to the almost complete dominance of the sport by Tex Rickard.

You can read in these faces many questions, for the passing of Rickard not only is a hard blow to the "big business" of boxing but to the careers of scores who followed Tex and obeyed his dictates with implicit faith.

No leader yet has appeared to rally the forces of the ring in general or the garden ranks in particular.

Won Public Confidence
Rickard, over a long period of years, had won public confidence as well as that of most of the leading boxing figures.

It is quite conceivable that the era of big purses has passed on with Rickard. In fact the indications were last year that Tex himself had played the starring out.

Whether his "Rickard figures" are available probably will determine whether Jack Dempsey comes back.

Ruth Working Hard
It is safe to say there isn't a rookie in the country concentrating more upon conditioning himself for the coming baseball campaign than the still young and earnest Mr. Babe Ruth.

The big fellow is spending more pre-season time in the gymnasium than he ever has before, intent upon being in shape for a fast getaway.

Boxing Officials In Quandary Over Miami Beach Bout

Stribling - Sharkey Contest Probably Will Not Be Carried Out; No Chance Dempsey to Replace Tex

By Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Two of the strongest institutions in the boxing world, Jack Dempsey and the Madison Square Garden corporation, struggled vainly today over problems willowed by the late Tex Rickard.

Out of it came the strong probability that there would be no heavyweight match between Jack Sharkey and Young Stribling in Miami Beach under the direction of Rickard's successors. With the day, too, died and chance that Dempsey would step into the Garden to take over the post left vacant by the death of his friend and adviser.

While Dempsey told newspapermen the Madison Square Garden directorate had made no effort to interest him in management of the boxing business, heads of the Garden attempted to decide the fate of the bout Rickard had planned as the highlight of the winter season, the forerunner of an outdoor campaign he hoped would break all records with Dempsey again in competition.

To Investigate Gate Records
The outcome of that was a decision to search all available records of the late promoter, question tomorrow all those who had any part in the making of the match to determine how far plans had progressed.

If William F. Carey, first vice-president and treasurer of the corporation and Colonel John S. Hammond, acting general manager, find that legal contracts have been entered into with the fighters, the bout will take place as per schedule. Although neither Carey nor Hammond would discuss the point in

Strolling Down Sports Lane

With Allan Carney
Avalanche Sports Editor

Coch Frank Bridges Simmons University cagers pulled what Prexy Anderson, Abilene sport scribe called a miracle Wednesday night when they stopped the stampeding herd from Canyon. The Bisons were considered unbeatable after they had made monkeys of the Baylor Bears the week before. But we all learn sooner or later that no team gets so good that it can't be stopped.

However, with their captain out of the lineup the Buffaloes were undoubtedly handicapped. Crump has been one of the main cogs in the Canyon basketball machine for the past several seasons, and with him injured, the herd were considerably lacking in scoring punch. But at the same time credit must be given the Cowhands for playing a bang-up basketball contest. McCollum and Fitzgerald were the shining lights for the Simmons crew. The former poured 'em in the basket consistently to score a total of 15 points. A last minute rally by these two basket loopers eked out a win for the Baptists by a scant three point margin.

With the ban removed on practice games for the University of Texas Longhorn baseball team, Uncle Billy Ditch was presented with the greatest present that conference officials could have given the veteran baseball wizard. In addition to games with two major league teams the Longhorn mentor is negotiating with middle western college teams and Texas league clubs. The New York Giants open the Texas Schedule on March 6 in Austin and on March 12, the New York Yanks will be seen in action at the Texas capital, Notre Dame, Illinois. Michigan and the University of Chicago may be on the Longhorn schedule. Oskas team from Japan will meet the Steers in Austin on April 29 and 30.

Bo McMillan is being seriously considered as the successor to Matty Bell at T. C. U. as head football coach. Although the former "Flying Colonel" is under contract calling for two more years at Kansas A. and M. there are many reasons to believe that Bo would favor change to Fort Worth. Fort Worth is his home, most of his relatives live there and it would undoubtedly furnish him with ideal relations in the city. Bo has certainly had plenty of football experience and should know the game but many fear that he is not on a par with the remainder of Southwest conference mentors.

T. C. U. authorities announced last week that the new Frog coach would be named Tuesday of this week, but the selection has been delayed another week partly because of the illness of McMillan who is reported confined to a hospital in Manhattan suffering from an attack of pneumonia. If the school officials wait until Bo is able to come to Fort Worth, the selection is likely to be put off two weeks.

Joe Guyan, great Indian athlete and for years a player in the American Association league, has been added to the coaching staff of Clemson college.

Walter Holmer, Northwestern captain and fullback, this year may coach the freshman team at his alma mater next fall.

Mustang Flash, Signed By Connie Mack of Philadelphia Athletics, Has No Limit to His Confidence

Frogs Cede Cage Title To Porkers

T. C. U. To Open Campaign For Second Place With S. M. U. Mustangs Saturday Night; Cagers Green

(Special To The Avalanche)
FORT WORTH, Jan. 10.—With the hardest part of their season past, the Texas Christian University Horned Frogs began preparation early this week for the game with the S. M. U. Mustangs Saturday. The Bellmen will open their campaign for second honors in the loop in their game with the Ponies.

First honors in the conference this year are readily conceded to the Arkansas Razorbacks, whose play in downing the Purple squad in two games early in the week stamped them as one of the greatest teams ever to play in the southwest. Outside of the Hogs, the conference teams seem about evenly matched and a fierce struggle is expected over ranking.

The Frogs, with a green team, were outclassed in every department of the game except that of fight. To Lester Brumblow, football captain elect next season, goes the honor of being the fiercest fighter on the floor during the Arkansas games. Brumblow, who is playing his first year on the cage team, has earned himself a regular berth at guard, playing opposite Capt. Wallin.

Pony Star Gets $5,000 Bonus for Signing with American Club; Will Report in Spring

DALLAS, Jan. 9.—(P)—Since confidence is a distinct asset to the big league fledgling, providing he has something to back it up, the Philadelphia Athletics grabbed a jewel when they signed Redman Hume, baseball and football star of Southern Methodist University.

Hume, a pitcher by trade, will report to the Mack-men in the spring. He received a $5,000 bonus for signing.

Outside of his undoubted ability on the gridiron and the diamond, the Mustang star has been chiefly noted during his college career for his sublime faith in Hume. He has never yet seen the batter he didn't think he could strike out, nor faced a pitcher he didn't expect to slam out of the lot, nor met a football team he didn't feel like he could run ragged.

He is not cocksure his friends say, just sure of himself. Before the Mustangs played the Army eleven last fall at West Point, Hume very solemnly told the sport scribes he would score a touchdown. He not only did just that, but his all-around excellence gained the praise of eastern writers.

And Ray Morrison, Methodist coach, predicts it will take more than the major leagues have to offer to dampen the Hume spirit. The

Bible Visits New Football Quarters

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 10. (P)—Dana K. Bible, newly elected Nebraska football coach, arrived in Lincoln tonight. He will spend about ten days in Nebraska meeting the football players and Cornhusker followers. He said he did not have a list of assistant coaches worked out and that it probably would be several days before he would be ready to make an announcement as to whom he would have helping him.

Coach Bible will return to College Station, Texas, seat of Texas A. and M., after the brief stay here and return again in March for spring practice. He will move to Lincoln during the summer.

Telephone Girls Take Tight Game

Bell Telephone girls scored four points in an extra period last night to defeat the Montgomery Ward sextette 22 to 18 in a postponed game in the City Basketball League.

The teams were deadlocked at 18 all at the close of the regular game and the extra period was necessary.

Dates for other postponed games in the city loop have not yet been announced by league officials.

Mustang mentor expects him to make good, but as an outfielder, not a pitcher.

"He has confidence, and that's what it takes," Morrison explained. Hume has been one of the leading hurlers of the Southwest Conference for three years. His stick work, however, has overshadowed his brilliant pitching at times. He is fast as a flash, an accurate fielder and may be converted into a gardener by the Athletic strategists.

Two negroes have fought six times in Florida, each fight ending in a draw. That gets the fur-lined snowball for equalness.

Their sixth fight ended in a knockout of both fighters. Seems like this is an act that could be staged to advantage in many cities.

That fight was billed as a "take-all" affair on the purse. The way it ended the take-all wasn't merely on the purse.

Records disclose that no fighter who changed his name to enter the ring ever won a title. And somehow or other, it doesn't appear as if Jack Sharkey Cuckoo will alter the records.

Whatever you may say about the roughness of football, it can't ever be said that referees break a leg as in hockey. They don't get that active these days.

Two bowlers are staging a 60-game match. We suppose for a little pin money on the side.

And did you ever hear of the pitcher who had such a fast delivery that he could catch the runner as he shifted dogs on the bag?

Leading Stars of Nation Are Ready for $10,000 Los Angeles Open; Spectacular Contest Today

(By Associated Press)
SANTA MONICA, Calif., Jan. 10.—Fairways, Soldiers, 130, gathered by their major golfing battle, stacked irons today, resting until the start tomorrow of the three day drive of the $10,000 Los Angeles open. A few, however, put finishing touches to their games.

Tomorrow morning, when the first group marches to the first tee will mark the opening of a 72-hole struggle perhaps more spectacular than any of the three Los Angeles major events of the past.

Among those who will put the "big money" chase under way are Walter Hagen, British open champion; Leo Diegel, national professional king; MacDonald Smith, who will defend the Los Angeles open title, and Horton Smith, youthful pretender to the pro throne.

The list is not complete without mention of Tommy Armour, Washington, D. C., former national open

Tech Basketeers Meet First Stiff Opposition Today

T. I. A. A. Quintet Set To Uphold Reputation Of The Abilene Institution Over Matador Cagers

Coach Dalton Hill and his A. C. C. Wildcats came to town last night bent upon upholding their record with the Matadors on the basketball court. The T. I. A. A. basketeers will take on the Tech basket loopers in the Tech gymnasium tonight and tomorrow night to open a heavy season of court contests for the Scarlet and Black.

Little known of the strength of the Christians, but from all indications Coach Dalton's stalwarts are about on a par with the Tech aggregation. Both clubs are depending upon green material to bolster up their scoring attacks and should put up a fast exhibition in the two games here this week-end.

Victor Payne's hard-working cagers candidates put the finishing touches on their team play last night, going over old plays and working intensively on new formations. The Matador mentor is far from pleased with the progress of the crimson basketeers. Although the material on hand is up to normal, the cagers have shown a decided lack of teamwork as well as poor passing ability. The contest with the association team tonight will give the locals their first real test of the season.

Coach Payne has switched his lineup repeatedly in an effort to find his most effective scoring combination, and was uncertain last night as to the likely starters tonight. The following were mentioned as the most likely: Hunter and Hodges, forwards; Fisher, center; Kerr and Vinant, guards.

The game tonight will start at 7:30 o'clock.

Simmons Cagers Stop Buffs Again

ABILENE, Jan. 10. (P)—Captain Johnny Gregg looped 14 points to lead the Simmons University basketball team to a 33 to 17 victory over West Texas State Teachers college here tonight, giving the Baptists a sweep of their two-game series.

The Cowboys are considered favorites to win the Texas Conference cage title.

George Hauser, brother of Joe, the Athletics' first baseman, will be tried out as a pitcher with the Indianapolis club.

king; Cyril Walker, of Detroit, also ex-open title holder; Al Espinosa, Chicago who placed in the money in all western tournaments leading up to the $10,000 open.

The amateurs have notable representatives. George von Elm, Detroit, former national amateur champion, and H. Chandler Egan of Medford, Ore., will lead that contingent.

Oil Field Highway Meeting Scheduled

BORGER, Jan. 10. (P)—The next meeting of the Oil Field Highway, composed of counties in Oklahoma and Texas between the capital of Oklahoma and Dallas, will be held here next Thursday.

The highway will save a matter of eighty-five miles between Oklahoma City and the New Mexico line. It is routed through Borger and Pampa, and will bring hundreds of tourists to this section of the Panhandle.

After leaving the capital city, the highway branches off No. 66 U. S. highway from the east and goes through Wheeler, Pampa, Skellytown, Borger, Stinnett, Belle Plains, Dumas to Dalhart. Counties in this state which will be passed through are Wheeler, Gray, Carson, Hutchinson, Moore, Bailey and Dallam.

Rainfall Record

Good In Dawson

(Special To The Avalanche)
LAMESA, Jan. 10. (P)—The rain records for Dawson county, as recorded by Sam W. Moore, manager of the government station here, show the fall to measure 10.63 inches. This record was taken 10 miles south of here and does not record any thing near the total of precipitation that fell in other parts and the majority area of the county.

part of the county, as well as in other sections according to farmers who took regular measurements more than 30 inches fell. Most of the rains fell during the growing season of the year according to the records.

Records show the lowest temperature for 1928 to be January 1st, 14 degrees above. The highest temperature was recorded at 109 degrees on June 29 which was the hottest day in the year.

open forum, the Garden management believes that both Sharkey and Stribling should box in Miami Beach for a percentage of the receipts. Rickard had said he guaranteed Sharkey $100,000, and Stribling $40,000, for the match. Carey does not believe that contracts to the effect have been signed, although they were drawn up and forwarded to Rickard in the south. If they were signed, then the match will be staged on the original basis. Carey was conducting his declaration that the Garden directors want to conduct the bout, "but under a business-like arrangement."

Legislation

Heer fails to act on his own motion. A fine of not less than $200 or more than $500 is provided with the stipulation that the fine shall not be less than double the amount of income derived from the law violation.

"Places of amusement" are defined in the Pendergast bill as circuses or theaters and includes also "dances at disorderly houses with or without fees."

Presents Petition

The veteran legislator, who said the bill was accompanied by a petition signed by 800 voters of his district, asserted that the state Sunday theater law was violated.

Representatives Elwin Gerron of Waxahatchie and W. T. Graves of Stephenville put in a bill providing for the election of a state highway commission of five members from as many districts of the state. They would receive a salary of $5,000 annually.

The present commission of three members was appointed by the governor.

Every contract for highway improvement would be signed by the state highway engineer and approved by at least three members of the commission, the bill specifies.

Bonds of $5,000 each, approved by the governor, would be required of each member.

Bond Campaign

to put in two dollars to this county's bond, making the project a $3,000,000 one, in final analysis, with state and federal aid.

Any qualified, tax-paying voter, who was qualified to vote during 1928, may vote in Saturday's election. The qualifications are, if the holder of a poll tax for last year, as a watch, a musical instrument, and the owner of any property, such as real estate, that is subject to taxation, whether taxes were paid on it last year or whether the property was rendered for taxation or not—you are entitled to vote your convictions on this issue.

At Friday night's meeting County Judge Robert H. Bean and County Commissioners N. A. Payne, W. L. Brashear and L. C. Denton, went on record as favoring the best type of roads to be had and with the statements that if the $1,000,000 voted for bonds should prove to be insufficient to build the highways, then there would be ample funds available from other sources, without any further raise in taxation, whereby any lack could be made up—and none of the lateral county roads would in any way be affected as to the amount of maintenance funds to be expended on them.

On page 8 of this issue of The Avalanche, you will find a letter from an assistant engineer of the State Highway Department, with former County Judge Charles Nordyke's answer to it, which pertains to the sufficiency of funds to be raised by the State Highway voted in bonds. Late last night the wired in regard to this assistant Commissioner, R. S. Sterling, was engineer's opinion, Mr. Sterling being informed as to the Lubbock County commissioners' resolution about making up necessary funds, if necessary, which will also be found on page 8.

Santa Fe Favors Bonds
It was brought out at the meeting last night that the Santa Fe Railway company, which was opposed to the last bond issue, is not opposed to this one, but is favorable to it, and that an expression from one of their high officials, made at Slaton recently, was to the effect that the railroad would not oppose this election, but would like to see it carry.

County Judge Robert H. Bean, in his talk, stated that he did not see where the question of whether or not there will be sufficient money to pay for concrete roads should enter into this question, or as to whether that question could affect the result. He called attention to the fact that Hale county found it had a surplus of about $200,000 over the amount necessary to pave its highways, from the bonds voted for that purpose.

Speeches were made by J. H. Hankins, W. L. Brashear, L. C. Denton, N. A. Payne, C. E. Maedgen, Charles A. Guy, M. G. Abernathy, L. H. Hungate, Spencer Wells, T. W. Sawyer, E. L. Klett, Fred Spikes, J. J. Clements, F. E. Wheelock, and others.

Earl Hunt Named Stone's Manager

Announcement was made yesterday of the appointment of L. Earl Hunt, well known Lubbock dry goods man, as manager of the C. E. Stone Company store here, succeeding J. O. Harris. Mr. Harris has been promoted to manager in charge of opening new stores for the chain store concern, which now is operating 37 stores in Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico.

Plans, as stated by the company, call for the opening of almost an average of a new store every week during this year, the latest one opened being at Stamford early this week.

Committee To Aid Santa Fe
The directors authorized the president to appoint a steering committee to do everything possible to aid the Santa Fe to secure a permit for its proposed extension beyond Seagraves. It is planned also to appoint groups in nearby towns to work with the local committee in compiling testimony for presentation to the Interstate Commerce Commission in view of getting the permit before the proposed T. and P. extension is granted a permit to build to Lovington, N. M.

Tighten Traffic Laws
The directors went on record endorsing any plan that the city commission and the local police department might advance toward the better regulation of traffic during the time of fires. The cooperation of the public was requested in complying with the ordinances requiring motorists to pull to the curb when the fire siren is sounded, and a vote of sympathy was extended to the relatives of Ueuell Bryan, assistant fire chief, who met death Tuesday night in an attempt to miss a carload of motorists who had failed to comply with the ordinance.

The president was authorized to appoint a committee to secure a representative local attendance by the sale of tickets for the semi-annual meeting of the South Plains Incorporated in carrying on the $12,000 advertising campaign of the local Board of City Development was reported.

Report of the charter committee was accepted by the board and the president was authorized to appoint a budget committee for the year, another to set the date and arrange for an annual meeting of the chamber of commerce.

land commissioner for January, including the 103,000 acres which were to have been sold on January 2, the sale of a portion of which was stopped by an injunction issued by the state, joined by the university of Texas regents.

Investigation by a joint committee from the house and senate of the general land office and the administration of its affairs was possible, representatives Petch of Fredericksburg and J. J. Loy of Sherman having introduced in the house a concurrent resolution—not yet acted on—directing such action.

The committee would be composed of three members of the house and two senators, and it would be required to report its findings to the present legislature.

Legislation withdrawing the oil leases from the market is the result of a controversy between Robison and the Governor, Attorney General and the regents. Robison had refused to withdraw the acreage from the market in the face of advice from the attorney general and urgent requests of the Governor and regents to do so. The injunction followed.

commission would supply that, default without additional taxes," he said.

Mr. Abernathy was one of the leaders in the fight against the last proposed highway bond issue, which was defeated on December 1st, 1928, but during that campaign he and his co-workers pledged themselves to sponsor the present plan at an early date. Since the present plan got under way he has been working for the passage of the bonds.

Vote To Come Saturday
The matter will be decided Saturday, January 12, when the county's voters again go to the polls. Mr. Abernathy said he had the signatures of 1,000 county citizens upon a supporting the project and that he believed it would pass.

"Many of the men who signed this resolution are nominally opposed to bond issues," he said, "and I'll say frankly, that if the members of the Lubbock County County Roads association and their friends will enthusiastically support the measure at the polls, it will carry overwhelmingly. The 1,000 supporters signed to the resolution, added to members of the association and their friends, can put it over."

UNEMPLOYMENT IN ENGLAND

Conditions of unemployment that are described as terrible prevail in many of the industrial regions of England. There seems to be little hope of relief. Hundreds of thousands of men are unable to find work of any kind and are depending either upon charity or the government doles under the poor laws for the scanty supplies of food and clothing necessary to sustain their families.

It is said that the present conditions of unemployment are not due to a strike or similar industrial disturbance, but come about by reason of the fact that under normal conditions there are more workers than are necessary. During the war, when every able-bodied Englishman went into the military service, hundreds of thousands of men went to work in factories and other places employing large numbers of people, and when the war closed many of the women workers remained in their positions. This was satisfactory for a time because so many of the former soldiers were physically unfit for labor; but as normal conditions returned there came about an over-supply of labor which caused the government to undertake, through the payment of doles, the relief of the unemployed.

The only relief that seems to be available now is by the exportation of large numbers of men to Canada and other British provinces where they may find employment as farm workers. The British government is giving every possible encouragement to unemployed workers to seek positions abroad and is offering to provide transportation and to guarantee adequate wages to all who will accept the offer of work. Despite the dire need for work not many of the unemployed laborers look with favor upon this plan, and there seems to be little hope that it may ameliorate the distressing conditions that prevail throughout the country.

While we are sympathizing with England's unemployed, we should not lose sight of the fact that many people in America are not getting all of the work they can do by a good deal, and we should be busy trying to keep them employed. It is the idle minds that cause trouble. It is the idle boys and girls at school that gives the most trouble to the teacher and it is the idle mind of the business man that creates dissatisfaction among employers, and it is the idle mind of the unemployed, the discontent that brings on trouble. It is the duty of the nation to keep conditions in shape that there will be the minimum of unemployed so that there will be few who have room to complain of their condition. There is much undeveloped country in America and for that reason there should be no cause for much unrest on account of unemployed men and women, if the right sort of progress is made in the development of the section of country where nothing has yet been done along that line.

HOOVER BACK

President Elect Herbert Hoover is back in the United States from his good will tour to South America, and no doubt his visit will result in a great deal of good in the future. It will no doubt help to pay to him in his dealings with that country during his administration as President of the United States. Mr. Hoover, from all reports made a decided hit in Latin America. His modesty and courtesy won him friends wherever he went. He very tactfully avoided the discussion of political and frictional questions. He sought our common grounds in political and educational ideals and stressed the fraternalism of states. Commercial and financial relations, he asserted should be mutually beneficial since the tropics and the temperate zone are interdependent. In his addresses he emphasized the point that the United States had no desire to make aggressions on weaker states, and announced it as his purpose to recognize their rights of equal sovereignty.

By visiting Latin America Mr. Hoover has completed his international education. He has met the statesmen and leading citizens of that region and has learned to appreciate them. He has seen with his own eyes their magnificent cities and ports, their great mountains, their extensive plains and the density of their forests. He has shared the hospitality of the people, smiled with them in social gatherings, enjoyed the dignity and courtesy of their manners and henceforth can not but have toward them the attitude of a friend toward friends.

From all this Pan-Americanism should gain much in the future. There should be an era of good will. The suspicions of ignorance should give way to mutual confidence and the irritations of former years should be forgotten. President Hoover will have it in his power, during his term or terms of office, to bring the Americas together on a common basis of mutual respect and fraternalism.

False reports are the things that stand in the way of many progressive movements. People will allow some little report to influence them, and these reports are usually put out on the side that is trying to defeat progress. Reports of this kind are being used in the fight against the road bonds. Men of good thinking capacity are allowing things like this to influence them to vote against the bonds, when there is absolutely no truth to such statements. Let us all look at the road bonds from the viewpoint that all are acting in good faith, and no one will reap a reward other than through the benefit to be derived from the building of better highways.

A Washington Bystander

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—That language of the constitution, setting forth the "advice and consent" powers of the senate on treaties, certainly has given that august body a place all its own in the international scheme of things.

Senate importance in that respect reached its height in the days of the League of Nations battle and still obtains, witness the way the world hung with bated breath on the outcome of the ruction in the senate over Kellogg anti-war pact ratification. The fact that 61 out of 64 nations had approved the proposal in one way or another seemed of much less importance than the senate's reaction to it.

Senatorial Dress Changes. Yet with all this added prestige, senators fall utterly to dress the part as of yore. They follow the hapazard personal tastes in clothes and no unwritten law or custom compels them to don formal dress to appear on the floor.

The Bystander has not been able to find anybody who recalls seeing a senator show up for a session in golf bags. That is one touch of modernism as yet lacking. That youngest senator, La-follette of Wisconsin, however, has a habit of approaching the sartorial verge at times. He appears frequently in the matched blue shirt and collar effect popular with the younger generation of sporting instincts.

Bleaze of South Carolina had an innovation in dress to disclose when the present session started. It was a claret colored vest, worn with a gray business suit, and rather in keeping with memories of the old cotton squararchy of the south the Carolinian sometimes recalls in other ways. Hefflin of Alabama, of course, was in his usual winter ensemble of voluminous dark cutaway set off with cream colored vest and dark gray trousers; and Copeland of New York, equally of course, appeared in square cut dark blue with the invariable red carnation in his button hole.

Cutaways Remain.

A few of the senators, like Watson of Indiana, Overman of North Carolina, Bruce of Maryland, Ashurst of Arizona at Times, and also Curtis of Kansas, Shortridge of California and Robinson of Arkansas are often garbed in the formal cutaway. The rest, however, show preference for business suits as a rule.

Johnson of California has a weakness for dark brown square cuts; Bingham of Connecticut, possibly the tallest man in the senate, and Ashurst, who is just about as tall and wide shouldered, like gray homespun a lot. They tower enormously when thus dressed.

Warren of Wyoming, oldest of them all, is almost invariably in a long black of almost frock coat appearance. The starred blue of his Congressional Medal of Honor button, won during the Civil War, is always in his lapel and now and then a tie of startling red relieves the grave dignity of his costume.

The latest comer to the senate, Burton of Ohio, back from the second time in his second time in his career, is a recruit to the cutaway squad. You rarely see him dressed otherwise.

DANCE MARATHON IS OF LITTLE SCIENTIFIC VALUE

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygieia, The Health Magazine

When the marathon dancing craze attracted public attention a few months ago, people began to view with alarm the participants in these exhibitions. One physician who observed 102 participants in a contest that extended 1,252 hours has made available a record of his experience in the Journal of the Indiana State Medical Association.

The dancers moved themselves about for 40 minutes and then rest for 20 minutes; being removed from the floor in hospital carts; usually they were asleep before they reached their training quarters. During the first 10 days the chief complaints were sore feet, blisters, callouses, corns and bunions, although many of the dancers suffered with inflammations of the eyelids.

Mental Attitude. The first disturbance of the body of serious importance noticed was a change in the mental state after 10 days, when the contestants began to become hilarious, depressed, or irritable. These changes, in temperament were the result of continuous exhaustion.

At such times the dancers seemed to be semi-conscious, some of them suffering with delusions of hallucinations and some of them were so clouded mentally that they did not seem to know where they were.

A young widow developed a mental condition known as exhaustion-psychosis, becoming hilarious and bursting into tears alternatively, and developing the delusion that she was being maintained against her will in a place of ill repute.

Most of the contestants developed a fall in the blood pressure with disturbance of the rate of the pulse. However, in general, the heart did not seem to be permanently disturbed in any way.

Test of Fatigue. After all such dances prove nothing of value to scientific medicine, since conditions of severe fatigue occurring industry or associated with remarkable athletic feats provide a far better test of what the human constitution can undergo and still recover.

Such studies made in the past affirm again and again the remarkable factors of safety that exist in the human body and the tremendous ability that it has to overcome severe damage if given half a chance.

SO THINK WE

We think while there are nearly eleven months of shopping days till Christmas, there will be many of us who will put it off till the last day, and there will be a great many people who will also put off paying their poll tax till it is too late, too.

We think it very important that you get in line for that poll tax receipt. You will need it this year several times, and Saturday is the last time you will get to use your old one.

We think that by loaning enough money to Germany, Germany may pay enough to France and England, that they will be able to pay us back what they owe us on the war in dollars and cents.

There are just lots of folks who like to see business done in the old fashioned way. Some folks like to know what the public's money is paid out for, and there is not a single public institution that we know of that gives the public this information any more. They tell you that they have an auditor and his report is in the office, but who knows how to find the auditor's report, and who would understand it after it is given. There should be a published report of every item paid out and received by the county, the city and the independent school districts, not less than every month.

The tax payers would be glad to pay the cost to know just what every cent of money is paid for.

We think there should be strict enforcement of the laws of the city in regard to cars on the streets when the fire alarm is sounded. Every car in motion should turn off the curb and stop till the fire trucks have past if you know they are going to make the street you are on. There is great danger in rushing along the street while the fire equipment is rushing by. It is the consensus of opinion that the firemen of one of the firemen the other night, was caused by someone being in the street, and rather than wreck the car ahead the driver swerved to one side and tried to place the curb blind over before a wreck, and you know the result.

Just why every person who has a car, or can get one will rush to the fire when one breaks out, we cannot understand, but it is often the case that when the firemen get to the place where the fire is they cannot get on the job because of the number of automobiles parked and blocking the streets. There are enough firemen to take care of the fire if it can be taken care of at all and instead of being a help to them we are a hindrance. Stay away from the fires, or at least give the firemen plenty of room to work.

We think it a grand thing that so many of the blizzards that are predicted as coming to the South Plains have a blow out before they get here. This balmy winter weather is a mighty fine thing, and it suits the condition of many of our people's clothes.

We think people too often rush into things that they would not even consider if they would take the time to figure them out before taking action. There is one thing you have had to figure out, however, and that is the road bond question, and we think you should be ready to vote Saturday. Personally we are in favor of the bonds, and hope you will vote with us on

The Way Of The World

SAFE HUNTING

This country is far from a wilderness and the hunting is not so good as it was in the days of Daniel Boone, but there is still enough of it to make the safety of sportsmen a matter of concern. Seth Gordon, conservation director of the Isaac Walton league, has compiled some suggestions for hunters that both beginners and veterans will note with interest.

A human life is worth more than all the game in America—see clearly before shooting.

Carelessness with firearms is criminal—play safe an avoid accidents.

Helpful recreation and the thrill of the chase are a true sportsman's prime objectives always.

Observation of the law and eradication of the game hog are responsibilities no sportsman can evade.

A few fools with matches kill more game than many shotguns—prevent fires.

Only vandals destroy farmers' fences, injure their stock or disregard their wishes.

Real sportsmen never try their skill about farmyards, pastures, and on trespass signs.

Saving ample seed stock, and feeding it during the winter time will perpetuate the sport.

A clear conscience at the end of the trip and an invitation to come again beats a full bag.

STILL CHILDREN

Psychologists, at least some of them, tell us that many men and women who are apparently grown up are not really grown up at all—inside. They suffer from "infantile fixations." Experiences in youth have left a deep impression, and color their actions in later years. Symptoms are the habit of forgetting certain names, headaches from no apparent cause, and a tendency to dream.

The psychologists may be right. But they might go further. They might tell us truly that nobody quite grows up. We still have many of the foolish desires of childhood. Dignity or the fear of being laughed at or some sort of timidity restrains us from acting as much like children as we feel. Even at that there are few men who are not subject to attacks of infantilism. If you want to prove it, ask their wives.

WOMEN WORKING

Statistics show at least one in every eleven women in the United States has a job. This means, of course, in addition to home duties or in place of home duties. The new ways of women, the increasing number who go to work outside the home, is bound to make an amazing change in life in America if it keeps on.

The question, but anyway vote.

We think there is one good thing about the flu. The doctors recommend that we sleep plenty, and that we not take too much exercise. In other words the lazy may may not take the flu as readily as the fellows who are always doing around.

Opportunity is knocking at the door, and if you fail to respond you will be sorry later on, and we refer to the road bonds, that should carry by all means in the Saturday election.

PRESS COMMENT

GASOLINE USES BUILDERS OF HIGHWAYS

Gasoline users are builders of highways. There is a reason for it. This is the motor vehicle age. It is said by a high authority that at the beginning of the year 1929 there are 24,500,000 passenger cars, trucks, and busses on the roads and streets of America. This is not all. It is predicted by the same high authority that by the end of 1929 automobile registrations will be but a few less than 26,000,000 vehicles.

Statistics are interesting. They are informative. They tell the story of the rapid progress of the age. They tell the story of the direct payment of money for gas, tires, car depreciation and they likewise tell the story of the various taxes car owners are compelled to improve the highways of America. This for the lawmakers of Texas: This for the men and women who pay the gasoline taxes of America.

A total of $37,125,000.00 to the states as federal aid in road construction for the fiscal year, which begins July 1st, has been appropriated by the United States Secretary of Agriculture. Texas will receive $4,451,162 which is said to be nearly a million dollars greater than that for any other state. Of course, the funds will be expended according to the same provisions which have governed past expenditures.

In general, the states, for federal highway construction, pay half the cost of federal aid construction. Federal aid funds are administered by the Bureau of Public Roads and are available only for routes on the federal aid system which includes the main highways of the nation.

During the last fiscal year improvements were completed on 8,184 miles of federal aid roads which had not been previously improved with federal assistance and advanced stages of improvements were completed on 2,014 miles.

Now to obtain federal aid for Texas highways, the lawmakers of the state must provide the state highway commission with the necessary funds to meet the federal requirements. There must be a revenue guaranteed each year. Books of the highway department are closed each year. Unless the revenue is in sight, fixed so to speak for the year, then the building program will be blocked. There is a criminal statute which prohibits public servants from pledging the revenues of the year to come for the completion of the highway program of the preceding year.

It is announced that an average of $3.10 per automobile was expended by the federal government in the United States during 1928. This per capita amount is decreasing each year, as peak in federal aid was in 1920 when the federal government expended an average of $10.20 for each automobile in the country. Its expenditure in 1921 was $100,000,000 but the amount of expenditure per vehicle was $9.55. In 1919 the federal government expended $65,000,000 on highways. It is the contention of the American Motorist Association that with registration increasing approximately three times as fast as the highway building program, the form of increase federal aid should be given by the federal government in order to keep pace with the growing demand for more roads.

There is a high gallage tax coming on gasoline. This is the road building age, an age when the users of the roads are expected to pay for the roads. It is for the lawmakers to raise the revenue and to outline the building program.—Cleveland Times

THIS HAS HAPPENED

ASHTORETH ASHE, a beautiful stenographer from Boston, is having an exciting time on ship-board.

JACK SMYTHE, an Englishman whom she meets aboard makes immediate love, and kisses her during the first five minutes of their acquaintance.

She snubs him after that—but he warns her, just the same, against her roommate—MONA DE MUSSET, a glorious and mysterious lady. Mona has been very good to Ashoreth, presenting her with any number of beautiful gifts.

Smythe tells Ashoreth that the respectable women on board will have nothing to do with her if she continues to be intimate with Mona.

"You mean," she demands, "that she is notoriously immoral?"

Smythe inclines his head gravely.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVII

"Probably," Smythe was saying, "you do not quite understand, Miss Ashe."

Ashoreth drew angrily from his fingers on her arm.

"Oh, yes, I do," she flared. "I understand perfectly."

"I mean about Mademoiselle de Musset," he persisted. "It isn't quite the thing for me to tell you, perhaps—but—"

"No," agreed Ashoreth testily. "I don't think it is, Mona has been perfectly sweet to me. She has a heart of gold. And I don't know that I'm particularly concerned about her morals. They're not any of my business, I mean . . ."

"But you don't want the holier-than-thou sisterhood arrayed against you," he interrupted.

"Women have to run together. The pack makes it too tough for those who don't. You can't afford, for instance, to antagonize every respectable woman on this boat in order to take up the cudgels for a girl like Mona de Musset. It simply isn't done, that's all."

"But Mona has been my friend," cried Ashoreth. "And what do I care about other women—"

"Mona leaves the boat at Guadeloupe," he reminded her, "and the wretched old cats are making the round trip. You won't have time to fall in love with her."

"I know, I know. It will be more than a week before I rejoin the ship. Will be dreadfully alone."

Ashoreth tilted her chin defiantly.

"I don't care. I guess I can stand it. I'm certainly not going back on Mona."

"And you mean to go ashore with her this afternoon?"

"If she'll go."

In her heart Ashoreth began to hope that Mona might be indisposed. It was fearfully hot, and she had complained at luncheon of a headache.

They had stopped to lean against the rail. Flying fish raced along the side of the boat, like white flame dancing in the sunshine. When they had disappeared, a school of porpoises came, turning somersaults like awkward aquatic clowns.

"Oh, look," Ashoreth leaned over the side. "Did you ever see anything so funny in your life?"

The argument that she wore about her neck swung out into the sunshine. She beat her hands excitedly on the rail. And the bracelets on her wrists clinked merrily. Smythe took the ornament between his fingers.

"Mona's jade isn't it?" he remarked.

Ashoreth flushed.

"Yes," she said defiantly. "And I have one of her hats on. And this sweater is hers. And, in case you've been thinking I smell nice, I might add that the perfume is Mona's. And I use her powder and her bath crystals, and everything. I believe I'm even carrying one of her handkerchiefs. Yes—this little chiffon thing—my own all linen. Smell."

She flicked it under his nose.

"That perfume," she said, "cost $54 an ounce. It's Mona's of course."

Smythe dropped the medallion. "I wonder," he said, "if Mona had never given you a thing, if you'd be so fond of her. If, for instance, she was just a common every-day little tramp, without any jade, or French perfumes, or imported chapeaux—I wonder if you'd be so beautifully loyal then."

"Of course I would."

Ashoreth defended herself indignantly.

"I enjoy wearing her pretty things of course. That wrap I had on last night—the red one—was good. She gave me a new hat. She gave me any number of things. I rather hated accepting them—at first. Maybe I haven't very much pride. But I'm telling you the truth, anyhow. I'm not a fourflushing. And I'm being just as truthful when I swear that Mona's gifts haven't a thing to do with the way

I feel about her."

Smythe smiled cynically.

"Well, it's hard telling," he said. "I suppose you think you're being honest, anyhow. But, you know, I wonder sometimes if women are ever altogether honest—with themselves, or anybody else. Upon my word, I don't think so."

"I think women sell everything they've got. Friendship. Love. Loyalty. Everything. Courtesans sell their bodies—and drive a hard bargain with them. They're honest, at least. But all you respectable women, with your little lies and evasions. And your sickening delicacies. . . ."

"You know how Mona de Musset got that jade? It's a price you wouldn't pay for."

"Is that so?"

Ashoreth turned her back to the shingling sea and faced him squarely.

"You know perfectly well that I didn't know anything about Mona or her jade."

"And you didn't care," he taunted. "It wasn't policy to ask questions."

"Well, you didn't think I was going to ask her if she'd come by her things honestly?"

Ashoreth laughed. "Maybe you gave them to her?" she hazarded.

"Oh, no," he protested. "I've never given Mona anything."

"You wouldn't," Ashoreth told him rudely. "And I don't care what you think. Maybe it's the truth. Maybe I do like her, because she's been so generous. I don't know what difference it makes why I like her. It's enough isn't it, that I do? And you can talk your head off about her—and every old cat on board can cut me dead—I'd rather be with her than any of you!"

The Englishman bowed.

"Perhaps," he suggested insolently, "it will be more profitable." Ashoreth turned on her heel.

"You're the rudest person I ever knew," she told him.

"And you," he retorted, "you're a gold-digger."

She left him standing there and went to join Mona. But their deck chairs were empty, and Mona's back, with a box of chocolates, lay on her steam rug. Ashoreth threw herself down on the cushions.

She was furiously angry with Jack Smythe. He was the most preposterous person, she assured herself, that she had ever known. How could he think such utterly unbecomingly things of her?

She fondled Mona's jade tenderly. It was cold as ice in her hands. She knew that real jade is always cold, and she thought, fantastically, that if she had millions and millions of dollars she would live in the tropics, where it was always warm. And she would have jade to keep her cool. A couch, like Cleopatra's to sleep on. And jade things all about, to put her warm hands on. Medallions to wear on her breast. And bracelets to reach from her wrists to her shoulders. . . . Oh, wouldn't it be wonderful to be rich. And have just everything you wanted?

The thought of Sadie. Trivial, inconsequential little Sadie. Sadie had everything she wanted—or almost everything. Sadie was awfully generous, too. She had, for instance, given Ashoreth a perfectly marvelous negligee, and a nightgown and those darling little mules. And then she had loaned her that stunning camel's hair coat, and the suede hat to match.

Ashoreth's face grew suddenly hot. She held Mona's jade to her cheeks to cool them.

And all the time she was thinking, "Jack Smythe told the truth. I'm like the woman he told me I sell my friendship to."

Sadie. And Mona. I've taken everything they've given me—both of them. I've given nothing in return. . . . And in my heart I despise them both. Why, I'm just as bad as he said."

Retrospection may be salutary. But Ashoreth seldom found it pleasant. Dismissing the hateful notion, she picked up Mona's book. "There was something on the fly leaf in Mona's writing. She wrote if she really felt that way. Twenty-eight, perhaps. Or 30. It must be awful to know that you were growing old. Everybody was, of course. But 30—why, that was sort of getting middle-aged. Maisie always said if a girl wasn't married by the time she was 30 she never would be. Well, probably Maisie didn't want to get married, anyhow. Why should she? She had everything in the world. And love, besides. If Jack Smythe—and all the wretched old cats—knew what they were talking about.

Ashtoreth turned the pages of Maisie's book. Swinburne. She tried to remember what sort of a poet he was supposed to be. Was it Swinburne and Keats that everybody thought about together? Or was it Shelley and Keats?

"Some day," vowed Ashtoreth, "I'm going to read a lot of poetry, and the biographies of all the great poets." One really should.

She had heard something about Swinburne. But she simply couldn't place him. That was too bad. She'd have liked to say something casually about him, to sort of impress Maisie. You wouldn't think now that Maisie was the sort of girl who'd read poetry. Well, you couldn't ever tell.

Ashtoreth turned the pages. Here was something penciled. Something probably that Maisie liked. She read it slowly.

"From too much love of living,
From hope and fear set free,
We thank with brief thanksgiving
Whatever gods may be,
That no man lives forever,
That dead men rise up never;
That even the weariest river
Winds somewhere safe to sea."

Ashtoreth closed the book, and shivered. "From too much love of living..."

Saint Thomas, the first of the Virgin Islands, lay ahead. Its feet in the sea. And mist hanging over its mountains.

The passengers were flocking to the rail. Where was Maisie? (To Be Continued.)

Smythe makes more love to Ashtoreth and this time she likes it. In the next chapter.

Rate, Rules and Requirements of Classified Advertising

Lubbock Daily Journal
(Afternoon)
Sunday Morning Avalanche
(Morning)

All classified advertising will appear in both the Morning and Afternoon editions. All classified advertising is printed in the Lubbock Morning Avalanche first and the Daily Journal on the same date, no classified originating in the afternoon paper. Classified for Sunday's issue will appear in the Avalanche-Journal counting one insertion, as this paper is sent to subscribers of both the afternoon and morning papers.

AVANTAGE-JOURNAL
Combined Rates:
Minimum, each insertion $1.00
One insertion, per word $1.00
Two insertions, per word $1.00
Three insertions, per word $1.00
Five insertions, per word $1.00
Ten insertions, per word $1.00
Twenty insertions, per word $1.00
Fifty insertions, per word $1.00
One hundred insertions, per word $1.00
Additional consecutive insertions, 25% discount.

Our experienced ad taker will receive your ad and help you to word it, use the correct type and size, and make these accounts as "accommodation accounts" for our patrons and for our day only. No advertisements accepted on a "cash basis" order. A specified number of insertions must be given. We reserve the right to place all advertisements under the proper classification. Objections and remarks of thanks at regular classified advertising rate. The publishers are not responsible for any omissions, typographical errors, or any unintentional error that may occur. It is the advertiser's duty to see that the copy is correct in all particulars. All advertising orders are accepted on this basis only. Classified advertising accepted until 5 p. m. each day and 9 p. m. Saturday. For classified display advertising in the morning PHONE 13 or 14.

Lease Purchase Of Texas Confirmed

Undivided Half Interest In Phillips Leases In Two Oklahoma Counties Are Bought; Price a Secret

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 10. —
Confirmation of sale of undivided half interest in Phillips lease in Cleveland and McClain counties, south of Oklahoma City, to the Texas Company, was made today at Bartlesville by the Phillips Petroleum company.

Although the consideration was not divulged, previous reports placed it at $1,000,000.

Involved in the transaction were all holdings assembled by the Phillips Company in township five to fourteen north inclusive, and in ranges one east to five west, inclusive. A large block of acreage owned by the Phillips Company in sections 3, 4, 5, 8 and 9 in township 10 north, two west, was not included.

FUNERAL IS HELD

Mrs. Florence Lessing Is Buried In Abilene

ABILENE, Jan. 10. (P)—Last rites were held here today for Mrs. Florence Lessing, 40, a native of Bon-lay, India, who died here yesterday.
She went to Waco, with her parents, 24 years ago and moved to Abilene with her husband three burned to death today in a fire which destroyed the Baltimore apartment here. Six other persons escaped.

Use Spittoons Statues In Capitol May Chew

AUSTIN, Jan. 10. (UP)—
Although it is not on record that General Robert E. Lee, Jefferson Davis, Albert Sidney
Johnson, John H. Reagan,
James Stephen Hogg and Woodrow Wilson were tobacco chew-ers, convenient spittoons stand by their bronze figures in the state capitol rotunda.

The janitors have placed none by the marble bust of former Governor Miriam Ferguson which also stands in the capitol lobby. So far the statues have not been observed to expectorate but the spittoons give evidence that others do.

OPEN MARKET

H. A. Johnson to Buy Skins
From South Plains Area

Opening of a fur market in Lubbock at the Kirby McDonald Mule Barn, in the southeastern section of the city, was announced yesterday by H. A. Johnson, who is to be in charge of the market.

Mr. Johnson said yesterday that he would buy all kinds of furs and requests farmers and ranchers of this section to bring in their furs to him. He said that in his opinion this was the only market of this kind in the city.

tion was reported as not dangerous.

Dawson Co. Has 2 Noted Writers

(Special To The Avalanche)
LAMESA, Jan. 10.—Dawson county has the distinction of being the home of two very outstanding and reputed writers, who are not content unless, while they are daily engaged in their regular routine for chosen vocation, they pen for feature and magazine articles their many subjects which this western section offers.

Hamilton Wright, who lives in the south part of the county and pastor of both Sparenberg and Ackerville Methodist churches is well known in West Texas having served the Amarillo Daily News, Abilene Reporter, Fort Worth Record, Dallas News,
and West Texas Today. The other is a woman, Mrs. W. J. Beckham, who lives with her husband in the Hancock community, seven miles north of here. Mrs. Beckham writes for the Wichita Times, a Denton paper, and the Abilene Mornings
News, before coming to Dawson county.

These writers prepare feature articles constantly for the press and magazines that cover the middle West.

Annual Banquet Is Set For Jan. 14th

BROWNFIELD, Jan. 10.—The annual meeting of the Brownfield Chamber of Commerce, will be held on February 14 and includes a banquet at the Hotel Brownfield. Seven new directors will be selected and officers appointed, but the secretary will not be selected until after directors are fully organized and books audited. Several worthwhile projects have been put over during the past year and two or three others will be completed during the last month of the term.

I SAY, OLD BEAN!

ALPINE, Tex.—Beans, believed to be more than 800 years old, planted here by Mrs. A. C. Prude, have sprouted and a new species of beans may soon be introduced for orders for ham and beans. They were found in an ancient cliff dweller's cave in New Mexico.

SOFA PILLOWS

Hot days are passed pleasantly
if one takes it easy in a shady place with a little hand-sewing.
Sofa pillows are one suggestion.
One could even piece up little gaudy bits into quilted cushions that are very smart right now.

REGISTRAR'S OFFICE IS MOVED

Improvements continue to be made and the latest moving occurred when the Registrar's office was transferred to the first floor in the large room where the Physics laboratory formerly was located. The dark room is to be used as a work shop for the stagecraft class which is to make scenery for actual production. The new office of the registrar answers a long felt need for less crowded space and the old room has been converted into a class room

itor Thursday from Levelland.

Good News, Kiddies Find Substitute For Castor Oil

BRADY, Jan. 10.—(P)—At least one physician in Texas, and perhaps the United States, claims to have found a substitute for castor oil, a discovery which should please children and not displease grown-ups. It's pecan oil.
In an address on "New Uses of The Pecan," delivered before the executive committee of the recently organized West Texas Pecan Association at Brady, Dr. J.
F. Burt, practicing physician and prominent pecan grower of Junction, Texas, stressed the medical value of the pecan. He declared that pecan oil has not only as good laxative qualities as other oils, but is also less irritating to take.

Besides its laxative value, pecan oil, the Junction physician pointed out, has nutritive qualities and is particularly good for undernourished children, since it has rich vitamin content.

You can make any wallpaper washable by going over it first with sizing and then using a clear shellac. This is advisable for the bathroom, kitchen and children's room.
