Negotiators resume arms limitation talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. arms negotiator Paul H. Nitze met for more than two hours with Soviet Ambassador Yuli A. Kvitsinsky today and afterwards said the talks on limiting medium-range nuclear missiles will resume next Wednesday.

"They are continuing," Nitze said on returning from the Soviet mission to U.S. delegation headquarters.

The meeting next week would come one day after West Germany's parliament concludes debates on accepting U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles. West German arms experts have said the Soviets consider that the "cut off" date for the talks in Geneva.

The Soviets have repeatedly threatened to walk out of the talks when new U.S. missiles are deployed in Europe, but are apparently waiting for the debates in West Germany. The first cruise missiles arrived in Great Britain on Monday.

Today's session followed a 35-minute meeting Tuesday — the shortest plenary meeting in more than 100 negotiating sessions since the intermediate-range nuclear force talks began two years ago.

President Francois Mitterrand of France predicted Wednesday that the Soviets would walk out of talks in Geneva when the first Pershing 2s are deployed in West Germany next month.

He said, in a national television interview, he did not think "the rupture would last a long time" and promised that France would "use all of its means" to help the negotiations resume if they are broken off.

The NATO missiles, including 108 Pershing 2s and 464 cruises, are to be deployed over the next five years in West Germany, Britain, Belgium, Italy and the Netherlands, to counter 243 triple-warhead Soviet SS-20s already targeted on Western Europe.

Officials at the State Department in Washington said the U.S. and Soviet delegations were scheduled to hold a "working group" meeting in Geneva Wednesday, and had "not requested a recess" for Thursday.

The working group was to discuss a new U.S. proposal aimed at reducing the number of U.S.-Soviet warheads to 420 each. This would cut but not eliminate the number of Soviet warheads already in place and the U.S. missiles to be deployed.

European governments affirmed their support for deployment in their countries.

British Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine said installation of the cruise missiles would continue despite angry protests that has resulted in scores of arrests in Britain this week, many of them at the Greenham Common air base where the cruise missiles arrived.

In Italy, where NATO plans to station 112 cruise missiles in Sicily, the Chamber of Deputies adopted the government's deployment plan by a vote of 351-219. An opposition proposal to delay deployment one year and extend the INF talks was defeated by the chamber, the lower house of Parliament.

The European Parliament in Strasbourg, France, rejected Greece's proposal for a six-month delay in the missile deployment by a vote of 170-107, expressing its "dismay" at what it called the Greek government's attempt to disrupt West European "unity."

Smokers 'adopt' new habit

BY DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

A cigarette bonfire in a Georgia town kicked off today's Great American Smokeout as nonsmokers cajoled the addicted into quitting for 24 hours with cold-turkey sandwiches, chances at free vacations and friendly support backed up by "gum and candy and clubs."

Eight psychiatrists put taped messages on a nationwide hotline, offering tips for what the American Cancer Society hoped would be 20 million people trying to kick the tobacco habit in the 7th annual event.

An estimated 19 million of the nation's 55 million smokers participated last year. The society hopes its "adopt-a-smoker" theme, calling on nonsmokers to help smokers get through the day without a cigarette, would enlist even more this year.

Smokers were warned that lighting up today in the west Georgia town of Carrollton, population 15,000, could be especially dangerous to their health because of a town-wide pledge to quit.

"If I see a cigarette being smoked, I may cut it in half with a scissors or douse it with cold water, whatever it takes," said Daniel Jackson, public educaton chief for the society's local branch.

Mayor Tracy Stallings, a pack-a-day smoker, threw away his cigarettes at noon Wednesday and joined about 250 people at a Wednesday night rally where the high school band played. A half-dozen smokers threw packs into a bonfire.

At Sundstrand Data Control, a suburban Seattle electronics firm that has non-smoking and smoking stalls in restrooms, inspector Pam Cour "adopted" three smokers who pledged to quit.

"We'll bring in gum and candy and clubs to keep them in line," she said, laughing. "It's kind of a game."

Mayor David Coeyman of Concord, N.H., admitting "I'm not proud" of his heavy habit, took the challenge from Somersworth Mayor George Bald. The stakes: A rickshaw ride for the winner around his city hall, with the loser doing the hauling.

Bald, who heads the state smokeout, quit two years ago to avoid the consequences — riding backwards through town on a donkey. Last year he challenged Dover Mayor Raymond Hennessey to quit, and wound up marching in the Dover Christmas parade in red flannel underwear.

At the Monmouth Mall in Eatontown, N.J., the cancer society's local unit was raffling off frozen turkeys and serving cold turkey sandwiches to remind smokers of the fastest, surest way to quit.

And science students in Morris County, N.J., were competing to draw the best computer caricature of actor Larry Hagman, national chairman of the event.

Congressmen may call session

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders, worried over a wider war in Lebanon or that President Reagan may order new military operations in Central America, have agreed to call the House and Senate back into emergency session if necessary during the year-end recess likely to begin this week.

Congress, nearing the end of the first session of the 98th Congress, is scheduled to reconvene Jan. 21. Under normal rules, only the president would be empowered to reconvene both houses between sessions.

But sources said Wednesday that Democratic House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and Republican Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. have settled on an adjournment resolution that would allow them — rather than Reagan — to call senators and House members from their home states back to Washington in November, December or January.

In addition to the possibility of increased U.S. involvement in El Salvador or Nicaragua, there is also fear of a widening war in Lebanon, where 2,000 Marines are part of a peacekeeping force in Beirut.

Another concern is the remaining American troops in Grenada. Under the 1973 War Powers Act, they would have to be withdrawn by Dec. 24 unless Congress decided they could stay.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Tuesday that the troops would be out by Christmas, therefore there was no need for Congress to reaffirm the Dec. 24 deadline. Nonetheless, some senators and House members said they would like to reconvene if American forces are still there by late December.

Noting the buildup of U.S. naval forces off Lebanon and Reagan's decision to invade Grenada last month, Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd Jr. asked: "What if something should happen in El Salvador or Nicaragua?"

He said it is up to House and Senate leaders to make "sure that the Congress will be able to fulfill its constitutional responsibilities when American servicemen and servicewomen are sent off to fight and sometimes to die in foreign lands."

Democratic sources said Byrd wants Congress called quickly back into session if there is a sudden new military expansion by the United States in the fighting in either El Salvador or Nicaragua, or in Lebanon.

One Republican leadership aide portrayed the plan as routine and unrelated to any specific fear of Reagan administration policies in Central American or Lebanon. Congress mafie similar plans before adjourning for its summer recess in August.

In the House, a number of senior Republicans, including Reps. Barber Conable of New York, and Lawrence Coughlin of Pennsylvania, signed a letter from about 40 House members urging congressional leaders to reconvene Congress if need be in the upcoming recess.

"The current presence of American military forces throughout the the world makes it vital that Congress be in a position to act quickly should a crisis arise," said the letter, written by Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y.

Medical school dean says documents not withheld

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A medical school dean admitted that he was worried about civil liability, but denied ever "intentionally or deliberately" withholding any documents from an investigation into unexplained infant deaths.

Dr. Marvin Dunn, dean at the University of Texas Health Science Center, testified Wednesday during a five-hour hearing concerning a contempt of grand jury motion filed against him.

State District Judge David Berchelmann Jr., who denied the defense's request to dismiss the charge, scheduled final arguments for tonight.

A Bexar County grand jury has been investigating a string of suspicious infant deaths at the pediatric intensive care unit of Medical Center Hospital between 1978 and early 1982.

District Attorney Sam Millsap filed the contempt charge Nov. 3,

'Rollback' takes on new meaning in Odessa

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Not too long ago, any reference in Texas to a "rollback" would likely have occurred at the local coffee shop in a dispute over the last glazed donut.

But Texans, and particularly Odessa residents, have grown more familiar with this term recently as area taxpayers unhappy with local governmental entities' tax rates are attempting to force Ector County, its school district and the city of Odessa to roll back their tax rates.

In the past two weeks, a group of Odessans submitted petitions to the three taxing entities that is the first step toward forcing rollback elections in accordance with Texas tax laws.

Ector County Judge Jan Fisher accepted petitions bearing 13,581 signatures, ECISD board chairman Bill Turner was presented 334 petitions with nearly 13,000 signatures and Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant received a similar number from this group of citizens indicating their displeasure with the three respective tax rates.

While the city maintains it is not subject to the rollback since it did not increase its effective tax rate more than the 8 percent that is required to give the residents the petition option, the school district and the county will be forced to call the rollback elections should the number of signatures validated within the next two weeks total 10 percent of the area's voters.

At the basis of the rollback issue is the reappraisal of property values completed by the Central Appraisal District. Many residents' land has doubled in its appraised value, partially because of the time lag since the property was last appraised.

Confusion over the new code has separated the taxpayers and the taxing entities, with the citizens convinced that tax rates are higher than necessary. The entities, while suggesting sympathy for the residents, insist that cuts will need to be made in services and staffing to bring down the tax rates.

Although the voters must still be called on to determine whether the tax rates will be rolled back, the county and city have already begun looking for places where cuts can be made.

Ms. Fisher, who has also had to deal with a $500,000 deficit in the county's budget since taking office Jan. 1, has been holding emergency budget sessions this week in an effort to identify the additional $2.5 million in cuts that will be necessary to bring the county's budget back to the rollback level.

Explaining that much of the problem is due to past administrations' "optimistic" approach to finance, Ms. Fisher has begun studying "people cuts" that are expected to account for the bulk of the $2.5 million reduction.

A proposed budget amendment Ms. Fisher is proposing would allow the county to adapt to the cuts should voters approve the rollback. Because the county's present budget is based on a 32.5-cent rate that would be reduced to 31 cents by the rollback, measures must be taken soon to avoid another budget deficit.

"If we continued with the budget we have now, we would be in the same situation as last year, only worse," she said. Ms. Fisher said the $500,000 deficit was caused by the Commissioners' Court failing to make an adjustment despite a warning from the county auditor in 1982 that expenditures on building expansions had exhausted reserves that could have been used to make up the deficit.

"They're spending their money before they even get it," said Bill Norton, one of the leaders of the petition group. "In all three branches, this is just poor management."

Norton's interpretation of the tax code has convinced him that all three entities have exceeded the 8 percent increase on the effective tax rate, prompting him to present Mayor Bryant with the petitions. The mayor insisted that the city did not qualify for the rollback provisions, but said "we will go through whatever motions are necessary."

Pointing out that taxpayers should be willing to pay for services, Bryant said "I'm as concerned as anybody about increases in taxes."

Local health club manager probed

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

State Attorney General Jim Mattox has filed a consumer suit against a man who operates a Midland health club after the man's Austin studio closed last month in the wake of financial difficulties and "numerous complaints" about the spa's operation.

Neal Johnson, president of the now defunct Total Fitness Inc. in Austin, was named in the suit filed Nov. 4 in Travis County by the consumer affairs division of the state attorney general's office.

"The suit was precipitated by our investigation and numerous complaints," Assistant Attorney General Henri ten Brink said Wednesday.

The Austin studio closed Oct. 30 when the landlord padlocked the doors for non-payment of rent, according to Johnson, who said the club had about 10,000 members and that he's preparing to file bankruptcy.

Johnson said he manages the newly opened Total Fitness Center at 2215 Midland Drive for two local people, one of whom is a former employee of his. It was decided to keep the same corporate name to avoid having to change stationery, he added.

The Midland studio, which opened in late August, advertises a one-year membership for $39 and no monthly dues for the first six months.

The suit alleges that Johnson engaged in false and misleading business practices in operating the Austin studio, a violation of the Texas Consumer Protection Act.

It further alleges that he violated the law by advertising a location where facilities were not available and by selling memberships for another location that closed soon after it opened.

Although the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin says no written complaints have been filed against the Midland Total Fitness Center, one woman member said the studio does not have certain facilities claimed in its ads.

The Midland woman, who signed up about six weeks ago, said it doesn't have Grecian steam, the desert dry sauna, or the whirlpool.

The studio's assistant manager, Pete Macias, said today that those facilities are available for male members and "are coming" for women in the form of an "all ladies figure salon," which is planned for the club. The club has about 2,500 members, according to Macias.

Johnson, who also manages a Total Fitness spa in Waco, said he's been in the health club business for 22 years and that he "would never intentionally rip off anybody. It's a very competitive business.

"I did go broke, but I would never take a dime. I would never intentionally cheat or hurt anybody."

Johnson blamed his business problems on a competitor and said the competitor has been placing copies of a Nov. 5 Austin American Statesman story on the windshields of his Midland clients.

"When I visited with Mr. ten Brink, he acted like I was already guilty," said Johnson. "He assumed a bunch of stuff my competitor told him.

"I don't know why he filed the suit. I had bad rapport with him. Maybe that's why he's pursuing this as hard as he is. We had complaints, yes. But every club gets complaints. The more members you have, the more complaints you get."

A spokeswoman for the Waco Better Business Bureau said her office has not received any complaints about Total Fitness there.

Injuries minor in Hawaiian quake

HILO, Hawaii (AP) — Windows shattered, ceiling plaster fell and more than 20 houses were rocked off their foundations in a strong, minute-long earthquake that frightened Hawaii Island residents but caused only minor injuries, officials said.

"The damage will run into the millions. We have homes and businesses that were totaled," Harry Kim, administrator of the Hawaii County Civil Defense Agency, said after Wednesday's quake, which struck at 6:13 a.m. (11:13 a.m. EST).

The quake, Hawaii's strongest in eight years, registered 6.7 on the Richter scale of ground motion and was centered on the southwest flank of Mauna Loa volcano, about 70 miles southwest of Hilo, said the Pacific Tsunami Warning Center in Honolulu.

It was felt on all major islands in the chain, but damage was limited to Hawaii Island, where authorities said only six minor injuries were reported.

Store windows broke and merchandise toppled to the floor in downtown Hilo. A large steel awning fronting the Agasa Furniture and Music Store crashed to the sidewalk.

Kim said most damage was minor but that 20 to 35 homes were heavily damaged or destroyed. He said a precise count was unavailable because few residents were insured for earthquake losses. Insurers often provide damage estimates.

Scientists at the U.S. Geological Survey's Hawaiian Volcano Observatory, who are predicting a major eruption at Mauna Loa within the next year, detected no volcanic activity related to the quake.

In Hawaii Volcanoes National Park, a section of the Crater Rim Road at the summit of Kilauea Volcano was swept into the volcano by one of two landslides reported on the island. Neither damaged buildings, but crews worked for hours to clear debris that closed the main highway from the park to Hilo.

In the community of Volcano Village, a few miles from Kilauea's summit, six houses moved 2 to 4 feet off their foundations, said Sybil Spencer, a free-lance reporter who toured the area.

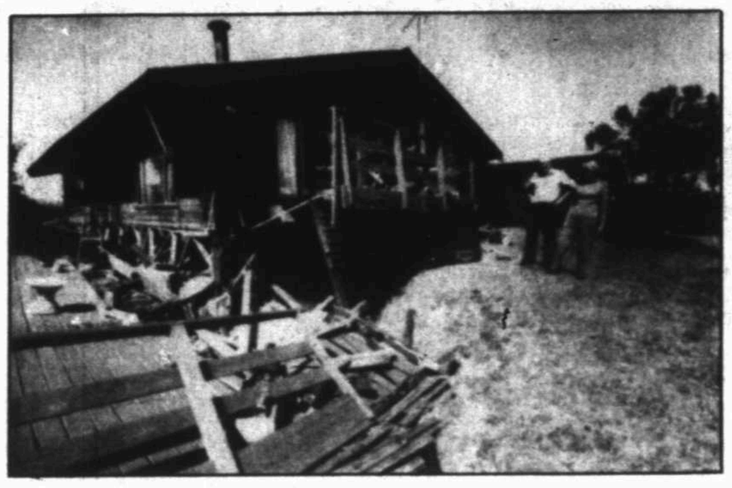

"There was extensive structural damage. The homes looked like they had been twisted. The ceilings and the walls are all buckled. All the water tanks were knocked down so they have no more water," Ms. Spencer said.

"One man had a garden where all the rows had been straight. Now they are all curved," she said.

Electricity and telephone service was restored in all but a few small pockets within a few hours, police said.

The quake was Hawaii's strongest since November 1975, when a quake that measured 7.2 on the Richter scale produced an ocean wave which killed two campers.

An earthquake of 6 on the Richter scale can cause severe damage in the local area. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage.

Smoking shortens many lives

Surgeon general warns of increase in heart disease

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Unless cigarette smoking habits change, one tenth of all the people alive in the United States today could die prematurely of heart disease, the surgeon general said today.

People who smoke two or more packs of cigarettes a day are 200 percent more likely to die of the disease than non-smokers, while average smokers are 70 percent more likely, said Surgeon General C. Everett Koop in the government's annual report on the effects of smoking on health.

Heart disease each year kills 170,000 Americans, 30 percent of whom smoked, the report said.

The risk of dying from the disease increases with the number of cigarettes smoked each day, the total years of cigarette smoking and the degree of inhalation, the report said.

"Unless smoking habits of the American population change, perhaps 10 percent of all persons now alive may die prematurely of heart disease attributable to their smoking behavior," Koop said.

"The total number of such premature deaths may exceed 24 million."

However, the risk of heart disease from cigarettes is reversible when smokers give up the habit, according to the report. And, the number of deaths from heart disease has been declining for several years.

Smoking also has declined, most sharply between 1966 and 1970. Between 1964 when the first surgeon general's report was released and 1980, the proportion of smokers in the population declined about 25 percent.

However, Dr. Edward N. Brandt Jr., the assistant secretary for health, said of the new study: "The overall finding of this report is clear: cigarette smoking should be considered the most important of the known modifiable risk factors for coronary heart disease in the United States."

Half of all American deaths each year — 960,000 of 1.98 million — are attributable to cardiovascular diseases. About 565,000 of these are from heart disease.

By comparison, cancer killed 416,000 Americans in 1980. According to the 1981 surgeon general's report 129,000 people who died of cancer were smokers.

The Tobacco Institute, the trade association for the nation's cigarette makers, disputed the report's conclusions and said the evidence of a cause and effect relationship between smoking and heart disease is inconclusive.

The group argued that some major research studies which led the federal officials to draw their conclusions are unreliable.

"Whether cigarette smoking is causally related to heart disease is not scientifically established," the institute said in a 44-page booklet on smoking and heart disease which it prepared in anticipation of the surgeon general's report. "Only further epidemiological, experimental and clinical research can provide answers about the mechanisms and causes or causes of this leading cause of death in the United States."

Women have lower heart disease death rates than men, in general. But women who smoke heavily and inhale deeply have comparable death rates to men, according to the report. Women who use birth control pills and smoke raise their risk of heart attacks tenfold beyond women who neither use oral contraceptives nor smoke.

Figures compiled by the institute show that Americans spent $25.3 billion on tobacco products in 1982 and $23.4 billion or 93 percent of that was for cigarettes. Cigarette consumption averaged 3,746 cigarettes per person during the year, compared to the peak figure of 4,345 in 1963.

The report made these other points:

—Cigarette smoking aggravates and accelerates the thickening of arteries, which is known as arteriosclerosis.

—Smokers are two to four times more likely to die of sudden cardiac death than non-smokers.

—The link between smoking and strokes is confined to smokers under age 65.

—Smokers who used only pipes or cigars do not appear to have substantially higher risks of heart disease than non-smokers.

Odessa residents petition for rollback of tax rates

The school district would not be affected by the rollback until its next fiscal year, but officials must also begin considering the potential consequences of the rollback on their finances, estimated at $2.2 million.

Deputy Superintendent Lloyd McKee emphasized this cut would put a further burden on the school district. State aid, which was cut by $900,000 last year, is expected to be reduced by a similar amount for the 1984 fiscal year, and utility costs are projected to increase by approximately $700,000 during the coming budget year.

Cuts will be made in staffing, planned raises and new programs, predicted McKee, warning that this would hurt the quality of the district. "Anytime you do that you're going to affect your quality flow," he said.

Admitting that any rollback would force the entities to sacrifice something, Norton said "the economy is just not there anymore."

"They just went hogwild," said Norton, referring to the entities' spending during the boom times.

"They got caught with their hands in the cookie jar," he said. "We're just slapping it and telling them to put it back there."

Ms. Fisher suggested that the county might have "bit off more than they could chew" by funding a park system and other services during these periods and suggested that taxpayers might see their "pet programs" cut because of the rollback.

"You can't have your cake and eat it too," she said. "Unfortunately, I have to be the one who has to cut the cake."

Senate approves new federal credit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today voted to renew the federal government's credit, giving the Reagan administration authority over the next three months to borrow another $225 for every woman, man and child in the United States.

Government credit ran out on Nov. 1, a day after the Senate rejected a higher debt limit as a protest against record federal deficits. By a 58-40 margin, the Senate agreed shortly after midnight to boost the old $1.389 trillion borrowing authority to $1.45 trillion — enough to last through about mid-February.

Unless the higher credit limit becomes law, the Reagan administration says, some government checks will start bouncing on about Dec. 1. But the fight isn't over yet because the House voted to give the administration the full $1.615 trillion authority it asked. Senate and House negotiators will have to work out a compromise between the two figures.

Before approving the higher debt limit, the Senate used a technicality to avoid a straight yes-or-no vote on a proposal to raise taxes and cut spending by $78 billion to slash the record federal deficit over the next three years. On a 65-33 vote, the Senate refused to consider the package, which was put together by Sens. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., chairman and senior Democrat, respectively, on the Budget Committee.

That vote left considerable doubt that Congress will take any significant action until after the 1984 elections to reduce projected $200-billion-a-year deficits. But leaders of the House and Senate tried to keep the deficit-reduction drive alive.

The Senate planned to consider today a $28 billion, three-year package that includes $13 billion in tax increases and reductions in the growth of federal health programs.

The Senate Finance Committee planned to begin voting today on efforts by its chairman, Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., to write a $150-billion, three-year package of spending cuts and tax increases. This would include a 2 percent tax on most forms of energy, a surtax of either 2 percent or 5 percent on individuals with incomes of more than about $45,000 a year, and a limitation on the automatic annual tax cuts due to begin start taking effect in 1985.

—The House was preparing the rules for a debate Friday on several proposed anti-deficit packages. One, already approved by the Ways and Means Committee, would raise about $8 billion over three years, chiefly from high-income investors and the life-insurance industry. Other proposals, which together could total as much as $73 billion, would delay other scheduled tax reductions and close off several tax benefits now available to investors and corporations.

Hanging over all the suggestions for cutting the deficit was Congress' plan to adjourn Friday until Jan. 23. Leaders have indicated the adjournment might be delayed if there is evidence of progress in the fight against deficits.

Man hurt in oilfield accident

A 22-year-old employee of Hondo Drilling Co. remained in "extremely critical" condition this morning at Midland Memorial Hospital following an oilfield accident 10 miles west of Garden City at about noon Wednesday.

Monte Williams of Post suffered severe head injuries and multiple fractures. He underwent "several hours of surgery" Wednesday during which his left hand was amputated, according to a hospital spokesman.

A Department of Public Safety spokesman said Wednesday there was no report of an explosion. A spokesman for Hondo Drilling Co. said no details about the cause of the accident were known this morning.

Cropduster uninjured in mishap

ANDREWS COUNTY — A cropduster who was flying too low Wednesday escaped uninjured before his plane caught on fire in northeast Andrews County close to the Gaines County line.

Glenn Hogg of Lamesa apparently was flying the 75 Piper cropduster too low when he banked to the left and the left wing tip of the plane dipped into soft dirt about 3:30 p.m., a Midland Department of Safety spokesman said this morning.

Hogg managed to get out of the plane before it caught on fire, the spokesman said.

Grand jury's arson probe recessed

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The federal grand jury probe into alleged racketeering, mail fraud, and explosive material violations supposedly revolving around the suspected arson of an Odessa office building recessed Wednesday.

In two days of considering evidence, the 23 grand jurors interviewed several subpoenaed witnesses, including Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant, Ector County Commissioner Julian Pressly, chain liquor store owner Tom "Pinkie" Roden and past and present Odessa Chamber of Commerce officials.

The probe, led by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, apparently stems from the 1981 fire of the downtown Odessa O'Michael Building, which is adjacent to a site once proposed for a civic center.

Bryant, former City Councilman Keith Weddel and Odessa attorney Ray Stoker Jr. were among owners of the fire-gutted building, which has since been sold and renamed the Jackson Center.

Ector County Commissioner Willie Hammond, who reportedly has been investigated by the FBI, was not subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury but was invited to do so. He declined and retained an attorney, Warren Burnett, to represent him.

Ector County District Attorney Mike Holmes initially investigated the O'Michael Building fire but dropped complaints against two men who had been charged with arson.

Two assistant U.S. Attorneys from San Antonio were in Midland this week to meet with the grand jury, which is to resume its probe into the case next month.

Judge sets execution date for condemned murderer

ROCKPORT (AP) — Condemned murderer Doyle Skillern, one of eight inmates whose lawsuit may force the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to prove that drugs used in executions are quick and painless, has been ordered to die Dec. 15, one day after a fellow inmate is scheduled to be put to death.

State District Judge Ronald Yeager set the new execution date without a hearing, said the death row inmate's attorney, Shannon Slayer of Corpus Christi.

Yeager was not his office and could not be reached for comment.

Skillern, 47, was convicted of capital murder in the Oct. 23, 1974, slaying of state narcotics officer Patrick Allen Randel in George West, Texas. Skillern has received three execution stays, and his case currently is being reviewed by the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Salyer said he was appealing the execution order, and Live Oak County District Attorney Thomas Bridges predicted Skillern would be granted his fourth stay.

"I expect he'll get a stay," Bridges said. "I think Judge Yeager set the date to just move the case along. It's been in the 5th Circuit now for some time."

Skillern's execution is set to begin just 24 hours after Thomas Andy Barefoot, 38, has been ordered to die by injection for the slaying of a Harker Heights, Texas, police officer.

Skillern and another man, Charles Sanne, were both convicted in Randel's death at a 1975 trial in George West. Skillern received the death sentence, and Sanne was sentenced to life in prison.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals reversed the conviction, and Yeager moved the case to Rockport for a second trial.

In the second trial, both men were convicted of capital murder and given death sentences. However, the state appeals court reduced Sanne's sentence to life in prison. Sanne is currently being held at the Eastham Unit.

Skillern and seven other death row inmates in Texas and Oklahoma filed the suit, claiming the FDA had violated its own rules in refusing to regulate the use of drugs in executions.

Last month, a federal appeals court in Washington, D.C., ruled the agency must prove that the drugs are quick and painless or outlaw their use.

Twelve states permit or require execution by injection, but so far only one prisoner has been put to death that way — Charlie Brooks, of Fort Worth, last December.

Execution by injection generally is accomplished with a combination of potassium chloride to stop the heart.

Coast Guard ends search for crew

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The Coast Guard has suspended its search for five crewmen who disappeared from an oil rig supply boat that capsized about 35 miles off Port Aransas Nov. 9.

One crewman was rescued after surviving for more than a day in an air pocket inside the 155-foot-long boat. Five others were trying to get in a raft as the boat was sinking, the one survivor said.

"We've searched the whole area for seven days now," Petty Officer Bruce Barton, of the Coast Guard's District Rescue Coordinating Center in New Orleans, said Wednesday.

"We really didn't have any more clues," he said.

Barton said the search effort, which involved the U.S. Navy and Air Force, commercial helicopters and boats and the Coast Guard, was suspended at dark Wednesday, pending further developments.

"We completely used all our resources and search-and-rescue talents to try to locate the people who were missing," Barton said. "We've done everything possible that we know of."

Searchers had hoped four of the crew members still were alive on a life raft that was missing from the partially sunken vessel. The fifth crewman, who is presumed dead, slipped out of the grasp of a seaman on the boat that discovered the disabled Laverne Hebert.

A diving team hired by the boat's owner, Gulf International Marine Inc. of Houma, La. rescued the sixth crewman, Hayes Bonvillian Jr. also of Houma.

Bonvillian, a cook, survived by keeping his head in an air pocket formed in the buried bow end of the boat, he said.

Few TSU grads pass bar exam

HOUSTON (AP) — Law students at Texas Southern University had the lowest passing percentage on the most recent state bar examinations, while those at Baylor University scored the highest, statistics from the Texas Supreme Court and Board of Law Examiners show.

Passing grades on the examination were down sharply overall, with only 69 percent being allowed to practice law, statistics showed. The statewide passing rate in recent years has been between 81 percent and 85 percent.

According to results released Tuesday, the Houston-based Texas Southern University had only 17 of 124 law students — 14 percent — passing the bar exam. That was the worst record among the state's eight laws schools on the test given in July.

South Texas College of Law in Houston had the second worst rate, 65 percent. The University of Houston, at 69 percent, matched the state average.

Of the other schools, the University of Texas had a 76 percent passing rate; Southern Methodist, 77 percent; St. Mary's University in San Antonio, 80 percent; Texas Tech, 85; and Baylor, 93 percent.

The Texas Southern passing rate traditionally has been low. In 1978, a state commission reported that from the 1974 to 1977, more graduates of that school flunked the bar exam than all other state law schools combined.

The State Bar of Texas, meanwhile, has formed a special task force to improve the school.

"All of us (on the Supreme Court) are concerned about TSU," Justice William Kilgarlin, a former district judge in Houston, said. "We do not intend to lower the standards, but we are concerned about people spending 3½ years of their life (in law school) and not being able to pass the bar exam."

Texas Southern Law School Dean James Douglas said while the problems at the school have been building over 35 years, it will take three or four years to solve them.

"It's a problem, we recognize it's a problem," Douglas said. "We did not do as well as everyone ought to. I don't think we have any excuse."

Among the problems is the school's admission policy of accepting students "who are not predicted to do as well as others," he said.

Firm working to get rid of insect 'bully'

WINNIE (AP) — A Houston chemical company is spending more than $2 million to develop what it hopes will be an environmentally safe product to get rid of fire ants, the bully of insects.

A fire ant "will kill anything that lands in his territory. Other insects have to wait until he's finished eating before they can eat...and when he gets through there's nothing left," said George Moore, product director for Stauffer Chemical Co.

Stauffer Chemical is applying its Pro-Drone insecticide in an experiment against fire ants on open range land near Winnie, about 60 miles east of Houston.

The chemical mimics the ant's juvenile sex hormone and stalls development of worker ants, said Dennis J. Paustenbach, a toxicologist at Stauffer.

'Alligator' takes trip to Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) — When they got the call, authorities weren't sure what to make of it: an alligator in one of Oahu's reservoirs?

Al Wilson Sr., taking a break from a nearby roofing job when he saw the creature in Oahu's Nuuanu reservoir, says he was asked if he'd been drinking.

"We get many calls like this — many of them crank calls," said Bernard Shinbara, head of the state Department of Agriculture plant quarantine branch, which was asked to check into the report.

Through binoculars state officials now have seen the reptile for themselves.

It's believed to be a caiman, a South and Central American relative of the American alligator.

"They can be ferocious and are a lot fiercer than their American cousin, although the American alligator is larger," says Jerome Marr, curator of the Honolulu Zoo.

Volunteers shed crocodile tears for science

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — People shed tears because they are happy, sad or angry — or because they've got something in their eye. At Tulane University's Tear Analysis Laboratory, volunteers cry for science.

The lab breaks teardrops into their basic chemical components, giving researchers a fountain of information about the human body — and hope that tear analysis might one day replace some painful blood tests and spinal taps.

In their first project, researchers found a Vitamin A deficiency among people with a malady known as "dry-eye syndrome," said Dr. Peter R. Kastl, director of the lab, which is less than a year old.

Other work has linked one group of tear chemicals to rheumatoid arthritis and shown that tears can help detect and prevent eye diseases.

Kastl also hopes to learn whether tears can be used to detect the presence of pollutants or drugs in the body.

He wants to develop tear tests that will replace painful blood tests and spinal taps.

To get the tears for study, volunteers take a healthy whiff of an onion slice, then carefully remove the tears from their eyes through a thin glass pipe, where the droplets are collected.

In collecting the droplets, researchers have to be careful to separate "reflex tears" from "basal tears."

Reflex tears flow as an emotional reaction to a happy or sad experience or as a physical reaction to irritation caused by pollution, foreign particles — or onion slices.

Basal tears are the ever-present wetness in the eye that keeps the eyeball moist, sterile, nourished and protected.

Collecting the right kind of tear isn't easy, Kastl said. "If you irritate the eye while collecting the tears you'll generate more reflex tears and dilute the volume," he added.

Kastl has high hopes for his tear lab.

Japanese displaying more confidence in diplomacy

TOKYO (AP) — President Reagan will find a Japanese government more confident in its foreign policy during his four-day visit that begins Wednesday.

Both in symbol and substance Japan has emerged as a more assertive force in international politics in recent years and it has clearly identified itself with the interests of the West.

One U.S. official has called the change from just a decade ago "quite remarkable."

The Foreign Ministry, in a recent report, said Japan should affirm its position as a "member of the West" with roots in the Asia-Pacific region and make international contributions commensurate to its economic might. It added that Japan's defense capabilities must be improved with the realization that deterrence based on a balance of power sustains world peace.

Before this foreign policy had been given little emphasis in Japan.

From 1600 until Western powers forced the Japanese to open their doors in the mid-19th century, feudal governments forbade almost all foreign contacts. The rush to industrialize in the first half of this century ended in Japan's defeat in World War II.

That brought occupation by the United States and years of subservience to U.S. policy, tempered by a deep strain of pacifism and a reluctance to speak out on international issues.

Signs of diplomatic independence emerged with the 1973 oil shock, when Japan, dependent on imports for 99 percent of its oil and determined to protect its hard-won economic prosperity, carefully crafted better relations with petroleum-producing Arab nations.

But the watershed for Japan's foreign policy came in 1979 and after, according to Hisahiko Okazaki, the Foreign Ministry's director general of the Research and Planning Department.

In 1979, he said in an interview, the Japanese public learned that the Soviet Union was deploying troops on Japanese-claimed islands off Hokkaido, Japan's main island, and had assigned aircraft carriers to the Pacific. That was also the time of the U.S. hostage crisis in Iran, a Chinese-Vietnam border war, Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia and the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

These developments "impressed the Japanese people of the severity of the world situation," Okazaki said. There was, he added, a shift "toward a more realistic attitude."

Prime Yasuhiro Nakasone, who has scheduled a meeting alone with Reagan during the visit, succeeded Zenko Suzuki a year ago as government leader and head of the long-dominant Liberal Democratic Party.

Drug growing hair wherever it drips

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A drug being tested as a hair restorer seems to be producing results on some volunteers' balding pates — and also on some ears, and wherever else it may drip.

The hairy ears belong to a dedicated jogger who joined the testing project at Tulane University, where dermatologist Dr. James Storer is supervising a one-year study of the drug minoxidil. While running, the jogger worked up a sweat that carried the substance from his scalp to the tops of his ears.

"It would be great in a movie, but not on the street," said Storer. The jogger cured the problem by wearing a sweatband.

Storer is one of 20 dermatologists nationwide conducting one-year studies sponsored by Upjohn Co., makers of minoxidil. It has worked best on people in the first stages of baldness, he said, although "I don't know what to tell you about the person that is really just as slick as a goose."

Storer estimates that one-third to one-half of the 95 volunteers at Tulane had seen their hair grow thicker and darker since beginning the experiment. However, he warned that the estimate was not scientific, but "right off the top of my head."

Biblical-era wildlife has been set free in Israel

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

MITZPEH RAMON, Israel — It would not have been unusual when King David was on the throne in Jerusalem or when Jesus was preaching by the Sea of Galilee, but it was something of an historic event recently when a small herd of wild donkeys loped freely across the Negev Desert.

Biologists from the Israel Nature Reserves Authority set free eight onagers — the wild ass mentioned in the Bible — as the culmination of a 20-year-program to revive the wildlife that roamed the Middle East in biblical times.

It was the first time that a species of biblical-era animals, carefully bred in captivity, had been returned to the wild in Israel. The Nature Reserves Authority plans in time to release other such animals, reversing the impact of hunters, pollution and the encroachment of civilization.

"This is not just a donkey, this is a noble donkey," Avinoam Lourie, chief biologist of the organization, said as the fence holding the onagers was removed.

In size about midway between a domesticated donkey and a horse, the onager can run at speeds of up to 40 miles an hour, Lourie said, and, he claimed, it can maintain a steady speed of more than 30 mph for as long as an hour. It can go for up to three days without water.

The herd, bred at the Hai-Bar Wildlife Park near the southern port city of Eilat, was released into a desert wilderness area called Ramon Crater about 100 miles north of Eilat and about 50 miles south of Beersheba. The leader of the herd was fitted with a radio transmitter to permit conservationists to track its movements.

The onagers were transported to their new home several weeks in advance of their release and were penned in a small area surrounding one of three natural springs in the 270,000-acre desert area where rainfall is only about two inches a year. The object was to allow the animals to become accustomed to their new surroundings before they would have to cope with the harsh environment.

With Uri Baidats, director general of the Natural Reserves Authority, and a few journalists looking on, the fence was removed. There was a brief moment when it appeared that the animals preferred the comfort of captivity to the freedom of the wild. They seemed to be in no hurry to move away from the spring.

"It is the hottest part of the day now, and they must be taking it easy," Baidats said. "If we did it a few hours earlier or a few hours later, I'd guarantee they'd go."

But the hesitation was brief. The donkeys, perhaps lured by hay that had been scattered beyond the pen, ambled out of captivity. A few minutes later, the herd broke into a trot despite the 95-degree heat and disappeared over a desert hill.

Will the small herd of onagers be able to take care of itself in a wilderness that is already home to leopards, hyenas and wolves?

"The book says yes, but there is no guarantee," Lourie said. "We hope they have the instinct to protect themselves."

The onager's place in the Bible is marked by Jeremiah, who wrote of "a wild ass used to the wilderness," and by Job, who wrote, "Who hath loosed the bands of the wild ass?"

Some scholars believe that it was an onager that Jesus rode into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday before his crucifixion. If so, it was miraculous; not before nor since have onagers allowed themselves to be ridden.

The animals that were set free are Persian onagers, a species that still runs wild in parts of Iran and Iraq. They are very close relatives, although not biologically identical, to the Syrian onagers that inhabited the Middle East for at least 4,000 years before the species becamed extinct sometime in the 1930s, when it was hunted for its hide.

The Israeli Society for the Preservation of Nature and the Nature Reserves Authority have been working since the 1950s to restore biblical animals. The organizations run two wildlife parks, one near Eilat for desert animals and the other near Haifa for Mediterranean species. Some of the animals protected in the park are extinct in the wild and others are faced with extinction.

Rising lake could cause damage

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The rising Great Salt Lake could cause $480 million damage if it climbs another 3 feet by spring, according to a state study.

The lake caused an estimated $100 million damage before peaking at 4,205 feet above sea level last June 30. After the summer evaporation period, the lake rose again, hitting the 4,205 level earlier this week.

Temple Reynolds, director of the state Department of Natural Resources, said it is too late to do anything about next spring's flooding.

The department engineering study said that each inch of lake rise between 4,207 and 4,208 feet would cause $19 million damage.

The rising level affects freeways, railroads, bird refuges, recreation facilities and lakeside industries.

The study said the cheapest and quickest method of partially reducing the rise would be to breach the Southern Pacific Railroad causeway across the lake. The southern arm of the lake is higher than the portion north of the lake.

The Legislature last summer rejected breaching the causeway.

The study listed other ways of controlling the lake level, but Reynolds said, "To do all these things runs into the hundreds of millions of dollars."

The study said water could be pumped from Great Salt Lake to the western desert, but it would cost $50 million to $60 million and would take two to three years to construct the system.

Storing water upstream in reservoirs along the Bear River system also would take years and millions of dollars.

House votes to withhold delinquent child support payments from checks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parents who fail to make child support payments on time will find the amount automatically deducted from their paychecks under a proposal that is now in the hands of the Senate.

The House late Wednesday passed the bill 422-0.

"Children from all economic classes will receive protection" under the bill, said Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J. "A family no longer need fall onto the welfare rolls to get the government to help them."

Proponents estimated that more than $3.9 billion in child support due is not paid each year, affecting about 4 million children.

The key provision of the bill would require states to impose mandatory wage withholding after a parent is 30 days late in support payments.

Rep. Barbara B. Kennelly, D-Conn., who also pressed for the measure, said there is growing sentiment in the Senate for the child support provisions. But she was unsure if it could get to the Senate floor before the adjournment tentatively slated later this week.

The House measure is one of a number of proposals that had been put together by the Women's Congressional Caucus to try to improve the economic status of women in America.

If passed by the Senate without any changes, the bill would go into effect in 1985.

Presently, the federal government provides financial incentives for states to collect child support payments from individuals who have not been making these payments and whose spouses are therefore collecting Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) money.

The bill would also repeal the present incentive payment to states of 12 percent of AFDC child support collections. It would be replaced with a guaranteed incentive equal to 4 percent of AFDC collections, plus 4 percent of non-AFDC collections.

Under the bill, all states would automatically have to begin withholding child support from an employee's paycheck when the amount owed equals one month of support payments. Pensions, royalties, and state income tax refunds could also be tapped for the child support payments, said Mrs. Kennelly.

Reagan campaign had Carter papers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Classified foreign policy documents from the Carter administration have been discovered in files from President Reagan's 1980 election campaign, according to the head of a House investigation.

"We've found some 'your eyes only' type of stuff. That means classified — the highest classification," said Rep. Donald J. Albosta, D-Mich., chairman of the human resources subcommittee of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

Albosta, whose panel is attempting to learn how Carter White House materials reached the president's campaign, said he has turned over information to the FBI, but he declined to say whether it involved the classified documents.

Lane Bonner, an FBI spokesman, said he had no comment on the congressman's statements.

Albosta made the statements in an interview Wednesday after announcing that Jan. 26 is the tentative date for the start of public hearings that could see both Carter and Reagan White House officials called to testify under oath.

He said the hearings are needed to resolve "conflicts" in statements given by some of the 165 Carter and Reagan people interviewed by his subcommittee since the probe began five months ago.

Albosta declined to assess the sensitivity of the classified documents or say whether they were found in the Reagan campaign archives at the Hoover Institution at Stanford University or in personal files maintained by former Reagan campaign staffers.

He said he did not know how the classified documents reached the Reagan campaign.

But he said: "Somebody violated the law if they distributed classified material."

Albosta said the information he gave to the FBI was "obviously" relevant to its criminal investigation, which FBI Director William Webster said last week was "substantially finished."

Until Wednesday, Albosta's public statements about his investigation had not mentioned classified materials.

The probe's public focus had been on a briefing papers used to prepare Jimmy Carter for a pivotal campaign debate against Reagan and on daily activity reports from Carter's National Security Council.

Several Reagan campaign people, including Budget Director David Stockman and White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III, have acknowledged that briefing papers reached the campaign. Richard V. Allen, Reagan's former national security adviser, has said he received the activity reports when he was foreign policy adviser for the Republican campaign.

None of the Reagan aides has said anything publicly about how the materials were obtained.

Albosta said he hopes hearings will resolve conflicting accounts received by his investigators.

"What we have is several different statements being made by different people that are contrary to one another," Albosta said. "We need to resolve those, and I think we have to do it in a public forum."

To date, the most apparent public divergence in statements came in letters written to Albosta last summer by Baker and CIA Director William Casey.

Cerebral Palsy money stolen from counter

HAMLIN, W.Va. (AP) — A jar containing donations to a Christmas fund for a young cerebral palsy victim was stolen from a restaurant counter, an employee says.

Ermal Chapman, who works at the Snak Shack, says the money being collected for 13-month-old Kristi McComas vanished last week along with a mysterious woman wearing a baggy black coat.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., is flanked by Eunice Shriver, left, and Caroline Kennedy, daughter of the late John Kennedy, , during a congressional tribute to the slain president

Kennedy remembered

WASHINGTON (AP) — With music from "Camelot" and black-and-white news clips as backdrops, congressional leaders paid tribute to John F. Kennedy in the Capitol Rotunda where the slain president's body lay in state two decades ago.

"We are here to recall what he did with his life, not to lament what we lost with his death," said Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., who took Kennedy's seat in the House when the young congressman was elected to the Senate in 1952.

Glenn advocates tax surcharge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Glenn voted for Ronald Reagan's tax cuts in 1981, but the Democratic presidential hopeful now says federal deficits are so threatening he is calling for a 10 percent tax surcharge to roll back the last year of those cuts.

Glenn accused Democratic presidential rival Walter Mondale of making promises he can't keep because his proposals for new programs would balloon spending by $89 billion to $203 billion each year.

"He promises to cut President Reagan's record budget deficits — and to 'cut them fast,'" Glenn said. "But that's another promise he just can't keep. Because just as you can't increase revenues by cutting taxes, neither can you cut deficits by increasing spending."

A Mondale official charged that the Ohio senator's second attack on Mondale this week showed Glenn's campaign is slipping.

"Tonight's speech indicates the desperation of the Glenn campaign," said acting Mondale campaign chairman Jim Johnson. "First, Glenn voted for 'voodoo economics'; now he's using voodoo arithmetic to attack Mondale. I don't blame him for wanting to shift the spotlight from his support of $200 billion deficits."

Glenn attacked both Reagan and Mondale in a speech at Georgetown University Wednesday.

He said deficits, which topped $195 billion last fiscal year and threaten to hover around $200 billion for years to come, could place an unbearable burden on future generations.

"That is why I am proposing a progressive surtax of 10 percent on personal and corporate income," he said. "Revenue from the surtax would not go to new spending, but would be earmarked to deficit reduction."

Glenn aides explained he is calling for a 10 percent hike in marginal tax rates. A family in the 30 percent tax bracket would find themselves in the 33 percent bracket. This could mean, for example, a $2,000 annual family income tax bill would rise to $2,200.

The final year of Reagan's tax cuts included a 10 percent chop in margin rates effective last July 1.

Glenn said his surtax — plus postponing tax indexing due in 1985 — would save $80 billion a year by 1988. He had previously called for a tax hike, but this was the first time numbers were added to the concept.

Glenn highlighted policy differences between himself and Mondale, who is leading in many opinion polls.

"The American people know that a candidate who promises everything to everybody can't be serious about controlling the federal budget," Glenn said. "Mondale says he hates deficits as much as anyone — but the promises he has already made would be extremely costly."

Glenn placed Mondale among those Democrats who "would replace the do-nothing Reagan policies of the 1920s with the do-everything policies of the 1960s. To hear them tell it, the only difference between Republicans and Democrats is the way we would spend the deficit."

Insurance executive to manage Jackson's presidential campaign

Jesse Jackson

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arnold Pinkney, a Cleveland insurance executive who worked for the presidential campaigns of Hubert Humphrey and Jimmy Carter, will manage Jesse Jackson's bid for the Democratic nomination.

Jackson campaign spokeswoman Florence Tate said Wednesday that Pinkney will take over the job of campaign manager from Preston Love, who will become deputy campaign director in charge of administration.

She said the Jackson campaign wanted a manager "who had experience with a national presidential campaign. Mr. Pinkney just became available."

Judges refuses missile request

NEW YORK (AP) — Saying his courtroom was the wrong place to decide the issue, a federal judge for a second time refused a request to halt the placement of U.S.-built cruise missiles in Great Britain.

Reps. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., and Ted Weiss, D.-N.Y., on Wednesday joined lawyers from the Greenham Women against Cruise Missiles in seeking a week's delay in installation of the missiles at the Greenham Common air base near London.

The suit said British protesters suffered "psychological injury" since missiles began arriving Monday.

U.S. District Judge David N. Edelstein said the lawmakers should have brought their complaint to Congress and that even if he granted the request, it wouldn't necessarily prevent nuclear war.

Burn victim to return to class

BOSTON (AP) — Seven-year-old David Rothenberg, recovering from burns he suffered when his father set him on fire, left a check-up with doctors' permission to return to school for three hours a day.

A spokesman for the Shriners Burns Institute, where the New York City boy had the check-up Wednesday, said his progress was so good that doctors removed a special protective collar. David has been attending classes for two hours a week and receiving tutoring at home since leaving the Boston hospital Sept. 23.

David was burned over 90 percent of his body last summer when his father, upset because he thought his ex-wife would not let him see the boy again, set fire to him in a California motel room.

Suspended judge to transfer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A once-suspended judge criticized for making disparaging comments about sexual assault victims is being transferred from felony cases to family court to clear a backlog of paternity cases.

Milwaukee County Circuit Judge Christ Seraphim "feels he can be more effective in family court," chief Judge Victor Manian said Tuesday.

In 1980, Seraphim was suspended for three years on allegations that included harassment of defendants and witnesses and improper advances toward women. Since returning to the bench in July he had been under fire for, among other remarks, saying a 16-year-old victim in a sexual assault case was "no angel."

Drought warning in effect

EWING TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Two major rainstorms largely bypassed three big reservoirs that feed the Delaware River, and a drought warning remains in effect for parts of four states, say officials of the Delaware River Basin Commission.

The reservoirs, in New York's Catskill Mountains, picked up an inch of rain over the weekend but just half an inch from a storm Tuesday that dumped two inches on New York City, commission engineer John Rattie said Wednesday.

The commission, which regulates use of river water by New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware, imposed the warning last week after the reservoir supply dipped below 110 billion gallons.

AFL-CIO to pressure company

WASHINGTON (AP) — The AFL-CIO is launching a campaign to pressure Litton Industries, a major defense contractor, to guarantee the rights of employees to organize and maintain unions.

In Wednesday's announcement, the AFL-CIO called Litton "the nation's number one labor violator" and accused the company of "union-busting" tactics.

Howard D. Samuel, president of the AFL-CIO's Industrial Union Department, said the unions want Litton shareholders to pressure the company, the 68th largest U.S. corporation, to adopt a "code of conduct" guaranteeing union rights.

Robert Knapp, director of public affairs at Litton, called the union's accusations "absolutely ridiculous."

Ophthalmic solution recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — A New Jersey company is recalling 1,200 bottles of an ophthalmic solution used by glaucoma patients because the bottles contain a weak concentration of the medication that can cause serious eye damage.

Optopics Laboratories Laboratories of Fairton, N.J., told the Food and Drug Administration on Wednesday that it was recalling bottles of Steri-Med brand Pilocarpine 4 percent ophthalmic solution with the lot number 4632. The bottles were distributed nationwide in August and September of 1983.

The drug is used to control intraocular pressure. The recalled batch is mislabeled as 4 percent strength instead of 1 percent strength.

Corridor dedicated to women

WASHINGTON (AP) — A corridor of the Pentagon is being dedicated to women who have served in the U.S. armed forces dating back to the Revolutionary War.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger on Wednesday dedicated the corridor and pledged to work for "a future which offers women every opportunity." In one of the exhibits along the corridor are dog tags worn by his wife as an Army nurse in World War II. The Weinbergers met on a troop ship bound for the Pacific front.

About 200,000 women now serve in the armed services.

Prosecutors want stiff penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prosecutors want former South Carolina Rep. John Jenrette's sentence in the Abscam case to be as stiff as those given to other congressmen convicted in the scandal.

Jenrette, a Democrat found guilty of bribery and conspiracy, is expected to be sentenced before Dec. 12.

Steps should be taken in event of localized disaster

Hearst Feature Service

Pragmatists agree there would be no survivors in the event of the ultimate disaster; preparation for an atomic holocaust is just not possible. But there are lesser, more localized disasters, and prudent people prepare themselves for those.

There are earthquakes, floods, fires, airplane crashes, cyclones, chemical spills, pipeline leaks and explosions. Small and large, these are disasters which seldom give warning and are often devastating to their victims.

Children's Hospital Medical Center in Oakland, Calif., has compiled a comprehensive two-page Family Disaster Plan and Personal Survival Guide. It could be a life-saving plan for almost any disaster.

The project committee which put it together recommends family meetings at least once a year to discuss and update your plan, and to determine what training, equipment and supplies are necessary. The committee also urges that the following steps be taken:

— LEARN how to protect yourself from falling objects, smoke, fire and caustic fumes.

— Take a first aid course, available through your Red Cross chapter.

— Learn how and where to shut off utilities.

— Draw a plan of your home, showing the location of exit windows and doors, utility cutoffs, first aid kit, food, etc. Show it to baby sitters and houseguests when you are away.

— Establish places to meet in and around your home, and away from home — a park, school, or a Red Cross shelter, for instance.

The leaflet lists the specific amounts of supplies and equipment to have on hand in categories including food, water, sanitation, fuel and light, kitchen supplies, medical supplies, and general equipment such as a transistor radio and a fire extinguisher.

IT IS advised that you inspect your home and make the following changes, if necessary:

— Secure water heater, refrigerator, tall and heavy furniture to wall studs.

— Move heavy items to lower shelves.

— Install clips, latches and other locking devices on cabinet doors.

— Provide strong support and flexible connections on gas appliances.

— REMOVE OR isolate flammable materials.

Instructions concerning what to do during an earthquake include the following:

1. If you are indoors, get under a table, desk or bed, or brace yourself in a strong doorway. Stay away from windows.

2. If you are out of doors, move to an open area away from buildings, trees, power poles, brick or block walls and other objects that could fall.

3. If you are in an automobile, stop and remain in it until the shaking stops. Avoid stopping near trees and power lines, on or under overpasses.

4. If you are in a high-rise building, get under a desk until the shaking stops. Do not use the elevator to evacuate. Use the stairs.

5. If you must evacuate, post a message in a prominent spot advising where you can be found. Take with you:

— MEDICINES and first aid kit.
— Flashlight, radio and batteries.
— Important papers and cash.
— Food, sleeping bags/blankets and extra clothes.
— Make arrangements for pets.

Having accomplished all that, you can say a little prayer and go about your everyday business secure in the knowledge that you've done everything within your power to safeguard your family. The rest is in other hands.

Items needed to be prepared for disaster

Hearst Feature Service

Should a disaster occur, each family must decide what to store for its particular needs. For example, you should remember prescriptions for family members who are chronically ill. Pregnant and nursing women also often have special needs. There are, however, certain basic supplies that all families would need in an emergency.

It's good common sense to be prepared in the event of a disaster. Children's Hospital in Oakland, Calif., recommends that you store at least a two-week supply of food, water and other emergency items. Here's a guide to help you prepare for a disaster.

Survival:

Water: two quarts to one gallon per person per day.
First aid kit: ample and freshly stocked.
First aid book: know how to use it.
Food: canned or dehydrated; pre-cooked and/or requiring minimum heat and water (consider infants, pets and other special dietary requirements.)
Can opener.
Blankets or sleeping bags for each member of the family.
Radio: portable, battery-operated; spare batteries.
Dry chemical fire extinguisher.
Flashlight: spare batteries and bulb.
Watch or clock: battery or spring wound.

Sanitation Supplies:

Large plastic trash bags for trash, waste, water protection and ground cloth.
Large trash cans.
Hand soap.
Liquid detergent.
Toothpaste and toothbrush.
Feminine supplies.
Infant supplies.
Toilet paper.
Newspapers to wrap garbage and waste. Can also be used for warmth.

Safety:

Heavy shoes for every family member.
Heavy gloves for every person cleaning debris.
Candles.
Matches dipped in wax and kept in waterproof container.
Clothes: complete change kept dry.
Knife: sharp or razor blades.
Garden hose for siphoning or firefighting.

Cooking:

Barbecue: charcoal and lighter or Sterno stove.
Plastic bags: various sizes, sealable.
Pots: at least two.
Paper plates.
Plastic utensils
Paper towels.

Tools:

Axe.
Shovel.
Broom.
Crescent wrench to turning off gas main.
Screwdriver.
Pliers.
Hammer.
Coil of ½-inch rope.
Coil of baling wire.
Plastic tape.
Pen and paper.

Car Kit:

Non-perishable food: store in empty coffee cans.
Bottled water.
First aid kit.
Flares.
Fire extinguisher
Blanket.
Sealable plastic bags.
Critical medication.
Tools: screwdriver, pliers, wire, knife.
Short rubber hose for siphoning.
Small package of tissues.

Cops driving mustangs

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Drivers in V-8 powered Mustangs cruising down Florida highways at high speeds won't have to worry about being pulled over by state troopers. They are state troopers.

The Florida Highway Patrol says it's adding the smaller, more powerful sports cars to its fleet, figuring to save gas when its officers give chase.

Forty high-performance Ford Mustangs, lined up in neat rows, were unveiled by Col. Bobby Burkett, the highway patrol's director, Highway Safety Director Robert Butterworth and Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter at the patrol Academy.

"Here we do see a marriage of cost efficiency and safety," said Gunter, who took one of the stick-shift Mustangs for a spin around the parking lot.

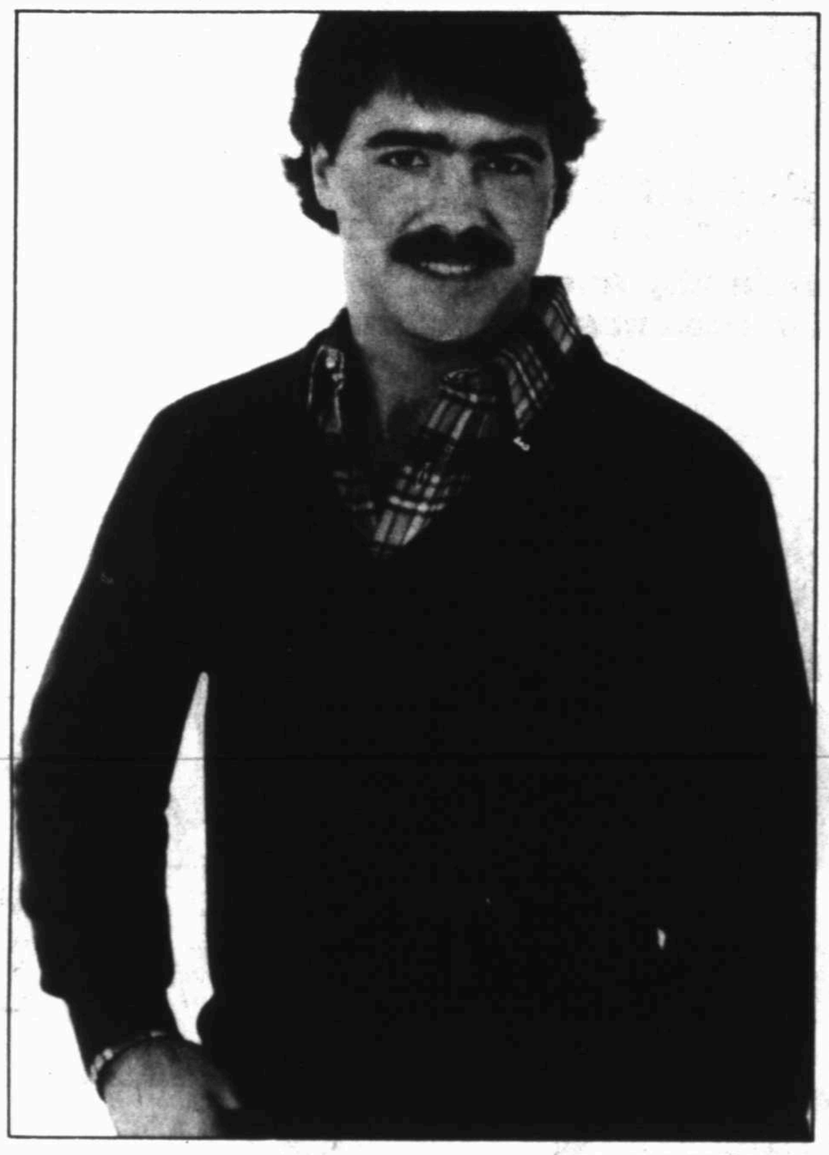

The cars will get better gas mileage and enable troopers to turn around and catch up with speeders in only five to seven miles instead of the 15 to 20 miles it now takes in slower, full-size cars, said Butterworth. "This means we will not have two speeders on the highways for 15 or 20 miles."

The Mustangs are painted the patrol's cream-and-black colors and have blue flashers on their roofs.

Troopers in the new cars can expect fewer arguments if the experience of State Trooper Mark Freemon is any indication. He's been patrolling in the Lake Placid area in a Pontiac Trans Am similar in appearance and performance to the Mustangs.

"A lot of people want to talk more about the car than they do about the violation," said Freemon.

Feminists rejoice at Foat verdict

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Feminists rejoiced at Ginny Foat's acquittal on murder charges, although a founder of the National Organization for Women says the case of the former California NOW president has divided the women's movement.

Ginny Foat

"It's one of the best pieces of news that I've had in my lifetime," Ivy Bottini, a founder of the original NOW chapter in New York in 1966, said after Wednesday's verdict in Gretna, La. "It was so unjust what was happening to her."

"She has gone through the legal process and the process has said she is not guilty," said Sandra Farha, the current California NOW president based in Santa Monica, a Los Angeles suburb. "Those are wonderful words to hear."

Ms. Foat, 42, was acquitted by a Louisiana state District Court jury of the 1965 murder of Argentine toymaker Moises Chayo, who was clubbed to death with a tire iron. The chief prosecution witness was John Sidote, a former husband of Ms. Foat, who she claimed was out for revenge because she left him after five years of beatings and psychological abuse.

Ms. Bottini said NOW's perceived lack of support for Ms. Foat has divided feminists. "They were more concerned with their image than they were with the truth," she said.

"I've heard people in Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York, Long Island, New Jersey, people who, one way or another, are really disillusioned," she said, noting that she quit NOW over the issue.

"I think the organization treated Ginny Foat totally shabbily," she said. "They literally ought to beg her and apologize to her for the pain they put her through. To me, they're no longer a feminist organization. They're a piece-of-the-pie organization. There's much more to feminism than what they stand for."

Shelly Mandell, the NOW member whose inquiry into Ms. Foat's background triggered her arrest last January, did not answer repeated phone calls to her home Wednesday.

When Ms. Foat was arrested, NOW sources said Ms. Mandell had sent a letter to Jefferson Parish in Louisiana asking about Ms. Foat's criminal background because the two were rivals for NOW leadership spots.

However, Ms. Mandell has denied those reports as "absolutely not true." She said she urged Ms. Foat to seek the California NOW presidency and did not oppose her bid to become vice president of the national organization.

As far as Ms. Foat's future with NOW, Ms. Farha said that while Ms. Foat remains a member, she cannot appoint her to any post.

Ginny Foat had turbulent life

GRETNA, La. (AP) — Ginny Foat thought it was all behind her — a sordid life on the run as the brutalized companion of a two-bit hustler. She had become a poised businesswoman involved in California politics.

But then it was all threatened by scandal.

Charged with a murder that occurred 15 years ago, she took the witness stand in the little courtroom here to deny the accusation, sobbing out the tale of a woman sorely used by life. She was acquitted of the charge on Wednesday.

She wore white gloves, but her disclosures included a dark secret — she had borne an illegitimate son 20 years ago.

Her arrest in Burbank Jan. 11 on the charge that she killed Buenos Aires toy manufacturer Moises Chayo in 1965 abruptly interrupted a career in California's feminist politics.

John Sidote, 45, the second of four ex-husbands, said Ms. Foat, now 42, lured Chayo out of the bar to rob him and they wound up beating him to death for his $1,400 bankroll.

Ms. Foat denied it, saying Sidote implicated her to get even with her for divorcing him in 1970.

Sidote claims Chayo was only the first of two men killed by Ms. Foat to keep them in traveling money during December, 1965. Donald Fitting of San Francisco was slain near Lake Tahoe, Nev., shot three times in the head. The only clue: tracks of a man and a woman around the body.

The Fitting case could not be mentioned in court here because Nevada dropped that murder charge. There was no independent corroboration, as required by Nevada law, but Sidote's plea of guilty drew a 25-year sentence for manslaughter.

By the time Sidote decided he was ready to testify against her in this trial, Ms. Foat had become president of the 40,000-member state chapter of the National Organization for Women and a contender for national NOW presidency.

She did not run for re-election, telling fellow activists to save her a place.

Some California feminists saw Ms. Foat's arrest as a conspiracy against the movement, but even her closest friends acknowledged they knew little about Ginny Foat's past. Testimony indicated it was a hard life in the fast lane.

Her senior picture in the 1959 high school year book in New Paltz, N.Y., was captioned: "In and out of trouble...." She worked as an airline stewardess, but lost the job when she married. She said later that was her first taste of sex discrimination.

That first marriage was annulled — a disgrace, her 72-year-old mother testified, because it was the first in her family's history.

Part of the friction in that marriage came from her early political activism, she said. She said she helped organize the 1963 civil rights march on Washington, headed by the Rev. Martin Luther King.

She also studied business and psychology at City College of New York, but never graduated.

It was around that time that Foat became pregnant. She met Sidote later at a posh upstate New York resort where he was a singing bartender.

He swept her off her feet, she said, made her feel important, made her feel beautiful. The second time she came in the bar he had her Scotch already poured, grabbed the microphone and sang, "There'll Never Be Another You."

They were married in 1967, but in 1965 they went on what prosecutors called an odessey that took them from New York to Florida, Baton Rouge, New Orleans, and then Nevada and California. All the time, according to her testimony, he beat and threatened her.

But she stayed with him. When Sidote was convicted in 1968 of killing a teen-ager at the bar the couple owned in Torrance, Calif., she refused to leave him, she testified.

After her 1970 divorce, she married Raymond Foat, a restaurateur, and she launched a successful career as a caterer.

By 1973, Ms. Foat was actively involved in the women's movement and began working with NOW and other political groups. After another marriage, which she brushed off as having lasted only a month, she discovered politics.

In 1980, Ms. Foat was a Kennedy delegate to the Democratic National Convention. Earlier this year, she was named a delegate to the state Democratic convention in Sacramento.

In July 1981 she was elected California NOW "coordinator," the chapter's first full-time paid president.

Bus resumes partial service

By The Associated Press

A Greyhound bus pulled out of an Alabama station to the jeers of union members today as the nation's largest intercity bus carrier resumed partial service despite a two-week-old strike.

The resumption of service in 27 states was marred before it began by two accidents — one of them fatal — as the company trained replacement drivers. Police said neither accident was caused by the bus driver.

In Detroit, a busyard was struck by firebombs.

In Mobile, Ala., a crowd of about 50 strikers this morning shouted "Scab bus" and tried to block the path of what was scheduled to be the first Greyhound bus to return to the road. The trip to New Orleans was delayed by 10 minutes, to 7:25 a.m. EST, by state inspectors checking to make sure the bus was fit and the replacement driver was qualified.

Only two passengers — not counting reporters — were aboard, one of them a man who said he was heading to Texas to look for work.

Meanwhile, contract talks in Phoenix, Ariz., between Greyhound and union representatives continued past midnight but recessed a few hours before the first scheduled run.

Greyhound said guards and escort vehicles would help buses through anticipated corridors of protesting strikers.

In Phoenix, federal mediator Sam Franklin was guiding talks Wednesday between Greyhound Lines Inc. management and the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, which represents 12,700 workers who refused to accept the company's demand for wage and benefit cuts.

Greyhound said it has hired 1,300 replacement employees and expected 1,600 strikers to cross picket lines.

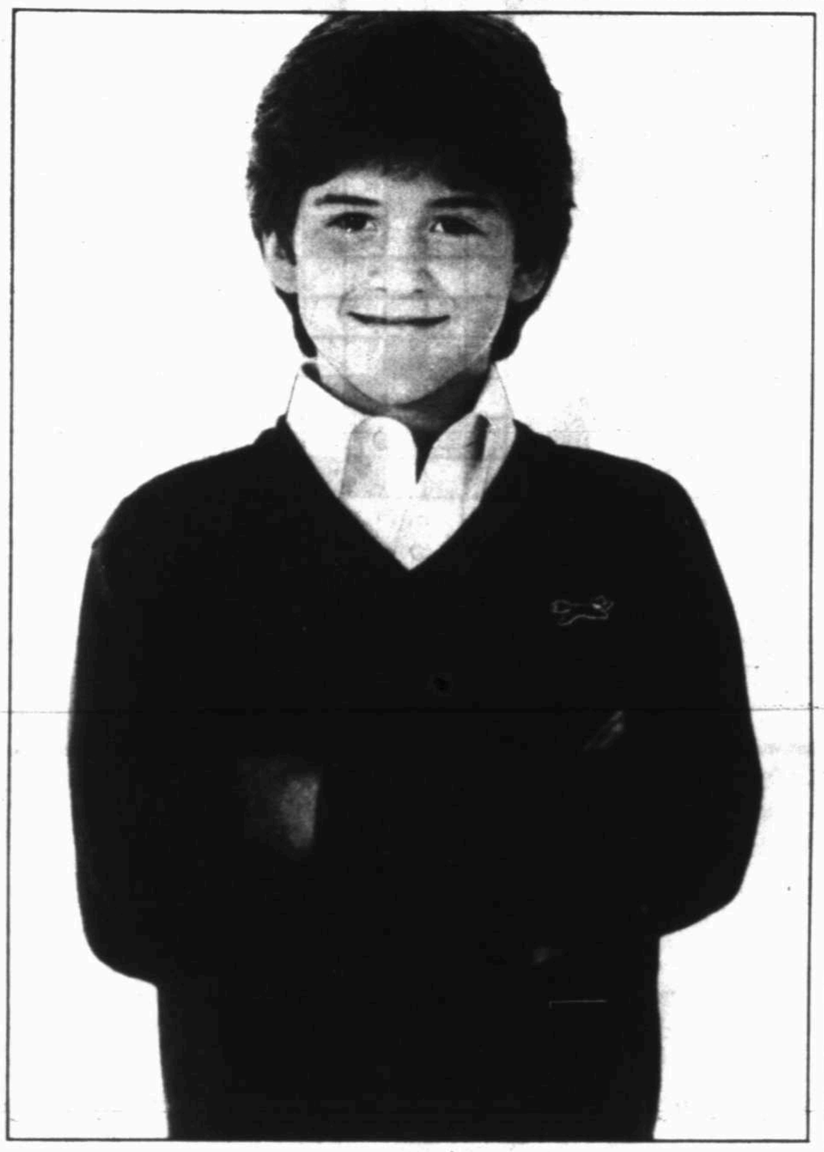

The union predicted only half that many workers would return, despite a company ultimatum for employees to come back or lose their jobs. Union officials also questioned the ability and training of new drivers.

A woman was killed Wednesday when her car pulled in front of a Greyhound bus on a training run in Fresno, Calif. The auto driver failed to yield the right of way, said highway patrol spokesman Ted Eichman.

The Greyhound driver, who had experience driving intercity buses for a Juneau, Alaska, sightseeing company, "was fully exonerated" and would not be penalized, Greyhound's Ms. Lorant said.

In Detroit, a second crash Wednesday was triggered by a striker in a car who braked sharply ahead of a Greyhound bus, police spokesman George Anthony said.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, November 18, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: French artist-scientist Louis Daguerre, Gilbert & Sullivan's Sir William Gilbert and Philadelphia Philharmonic conductor Eugene Ormandy were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actress Linda Evans, pollster George Gallup, astronaut Alan Shepard and actress Brenda Vaccaro. Someone who criticizes your work is jealous of your accomplishments. Be pleasant, but keep your distance. Marine biologists and physicists make some real breakthroughs. A new job comes through a friend. Keep home life happy and rewarding by reassuring mate of your love. A young person may be too dependent on you. Be supportive but encourage him to think for himself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Deal with stress before it affects both romance and business. It is time to chart your own course. Others follow your lead. The little things you do now will pay rich dividends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep your promises. New contacts bring results sooner than anticipated. Celebrate with someone who shares your interests. You meet a challenge head-on and emerge victorious. Good luck accompanies romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Settle a longstanding debt. Do not run up new credit charges if you are already having trouble paying the bills. Get together with an old friend to lick a business problem.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You accomplish the most when you work alone today. A phone call from a school chum turns your weekend plans upside-down. Behind-the-scenes alliances help someone land an executive position.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keep your emotions under control and things will begin to look up in business. Unequal treatment must be corrected. Check the insurance coverage on your valuables before taking a trip.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Return phone calls promptly. Discussing money with an outsider will only invite trouble. Rely on the experts to interpret a contract. Member of opposite sex distracts you from work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your ambitions are fired by what you see someone else accomplish. Self-discipline is essential if you hope to reach your goals. You find a novel solution to a nagging problem.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Let others think they are in control and then slip quietly past them. A family feud can be ended with a phone call. Dress the way you feel this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Seize an opportunity that arises today. It could be the chance of a lifetime! If cash is in short supply, improvise. Good luck accompanies you on a business trip.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Give work top priority now. A useful tip sets you on the road to success. Your social life accelerates. A financial deal requires the assistance of a lawyer or accountant.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Delegate some of your work in order to have more time for thinking and planning. Once others understand a problem they will be eager to help. Make the most of your talents.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Handle your finances personally to prevent costly mistakes. Sticking to conventional business methods will keep you out of hot water.

Puppets' creator won't quit

SAUGATUCK, Mich. (AP) — Burr Tillstrom, whose puppets Kukla and Ollie became TV stars in the late 1940s, maintains a rather low profile these days, though he still keeps a schedule laden with special projects.

Tillstrom won't acknowledge the word "retired," even if preceded by "semi" or "somewhat."

"You never retire from thinking," says the TV pioneer. "I can't keep my mind still. Nothing has changed. I don't think people in the arts ever retire. How can a painter turn off an idea?"

During TV's Emmy awards show in September, Tillstrom, the puppets and Fran Allison, who was their straight woman for a decade on NBC and then ABC, appeared to present the award for the best children's show. Tillstrom had been on the stage before. His honors include three Emmys, and two Peabody awards.

Even though their program, "Kukla, Fran and Ollie," hasn't been on TV regularly since the late 1950s, Tillstrom says he hasn't called it quits.

Foremost on his mind these days are two things: completion of a book and a retrospective photo and film exhibit on "Kukla, Fran and Ollie" for the Museum of Broadcasting in New York. That show will run through November.

In addition, there are the occasional live concerts, his work at Saugatuck's Ox Bow summer art colony where he is a board member, and guest lectures at Hope College.

The book, a fairy tale entitled, "The Dragon Who Lives Downstairs," is to be published this winter. It originally was written as a TV script for the Kuklapolitan Players — the puppets Tillstrom has added to his ensemble over the years.

"It's a real old-fashioned fairy tale," Tillstrom says of the story. "It's kind of, if I may use a term, 'Thurberesque.' James Thurber was a great hero of mine."

Tillstrom says he spent the summer preparing for the museum show, screening kinescope recordings of the show. "The show was live," he says, "and we didn't film it or tape it like shows do today."

Tillstrom says he keeps tabs on what's happening in show business from his Saugatuck home, a converted shed once used to dry fishnets.

The window-enclosed backroom serves as Tillstrom's workshop. It contains a bench where he makes and repairs puppets, and a desk.

Tillstrom keeps a small apartment in Chicago, but he says he has more or less settled in Saugatuck. During his days as a TV regular, he repaired his puppets here in summer after the TV season — five live shows a week, for 44 weeks — had ended.

Even simple hands require a modicum of care. At the bridge table, pessimists make money.

East's jump overcall showed the values for at least a sound opening bid. West's raise was justified because of his distributional values, but East elected to go no further because his hand was better suited to defense than offense.

West led a diamond and declarer won in dummy. Thoughtless play now would lead to defeat. Suppose, for example, that declarer were to lead a trump. East follows low and the jack wins. When West shows out, declarer abandons trumps and leads a spade to the king and ace. East now plays ace of hearts and another and, because of the bad club break, declarer can make no more than nine tricks — a spade, a ruff and the ace of diamonds on the table, and five trumps and the ace of clubs in hand.

The careful declarer has no problem making the hand — with an overtrick to boot. It takes nothing more than sound technique.

After winning the ace of diamonds, declarer simply leads the king of spades from dummy at trick two. East wins the ace, but declarer is a tempo ahead and no defense harms him.

Suppose East returns a diamond. Declarer ruffs, cashes the ace of clubs and ruffs a club. He discards a club on the queen of spades and ruffs another diamond. Then comes a club ruffed high on the table. East can overruff or not, as he pleases, but the defenders cannot get any more than their two major suit aces.

The secret is simple — don't touch trumps if you intend to ruff in one hand or the other. But show the hand to your friends and see how many start with a trump at trick two.

Good neighbors

Crime prevention officers from the Midland Police Department gave valuable advice to about 300 homeowners from a 50-block section of the city Tuesday. But the advice should be heeded by residents of every Midland neighborhood.

The message was intended to stimulate public participation in an effort aimed at reducing the number of residential burglaries plaguing that area. They were told they can help law enforcement officers by being aware of what goes on in their neighborhood and getting involved in the life of that neighborhood.

The program the officers explained to homeowners is called "Neighborhood Watch" and is based on the strength of numbers. Ten sets of eyes and ears are better able to watch a neighborhood than one or two sets. People who live in a neighborhood obviously know that neighborhood better than a handful of police officers who, because of the demands of their jobs, can only visit the neighborhood infrequently.

Neighborhood Watch is easy to organize, said the officers. "All you have to do is get a neighborhood involved, get to know your neighbors better." The key to the program, the officers stressed, is knowing who belongs in a neighborhood and who doesn't belong.

The officers did not urge the homeowners to become directly involved in trying to apprehend criminals. That's the rightful duty of law enforcement officers and should be left to them. What they stressed was that neighbors should be more neighborly and get involved in crime prevention by notifying the proper authorities of suspicious individuals in a neighborhood. "What we want you to do is band together, just like you are now, and let us know what's going on," Officer Ron Benton told the gathering Tuesday evening.

That's good advice and a quick lesson in the value of being neighborly.

Act of disrespect

It is, presumably, part of the price of freedom that we must pay in this country. But having to put up with the likes of Larry Flynt is a high price.

It is not enough that he has become wealthy by purveying what he purveys in his Hustler magazine.

He must also shout obscenities in the U.S. Supreme Court and defy a judge in Los Angeles.

The fact that he was the victim in a shooting a few years ago and is permanently crippled as a result does not give him license to violate decency in public places.

Our institutions in this country belong to the people who created them and who have the power to change them. Disrespect to the people's institutions is an insult to the people.

Another View:

Veto the milk bill

President Reagan has an excellent chance to demonstrate his commitment to budget discipline by vetoing the milk-subsidy bill passed by Congress last week.

The measure would bring to the already bloated dairy-price-support program the disreputable technique of paying subsidies to farmers for the products they don't produce.

In winning its latest victory, the dairy lobby had to mow down an unusually broad range of opposition, including not only consumer groups and the food industry, but major farm groups and livestock producers as well.

In one sense the lobby suffered from its own past success. Overly generous government-purchase guarantees have spawned a national dairy herd that vastly exceeds the demand for its products.

Even big giveaway programs and previous price-support restraints have failed to make a dent in the mammoth stokpiles of dairy products that last year cost the government almost $3 billion to purchase and store.

Despite general recognition in Congress that tough measures are needed — and strong though belated opposition from the administration — the dairy lobby extracted a compromise, trading a 4 percent reduction in the price-support level for the government's agreement to pay farmers $10 for each hundred-pound reduction in milk production.

The bill would also reduce by half the assessment farmers must currently pay to cover part of the cost of the price-support program.

Supporters of the compromise claim that it will save more money than the much sharper price-support reduction proposed by Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., and ultimately supported by the administration.

But the dairy diversion scheme is likely to produce even more disastrous results than last year's PIK program, which spent billions of dollars in a futile effort to trim the huge wheat surplus.

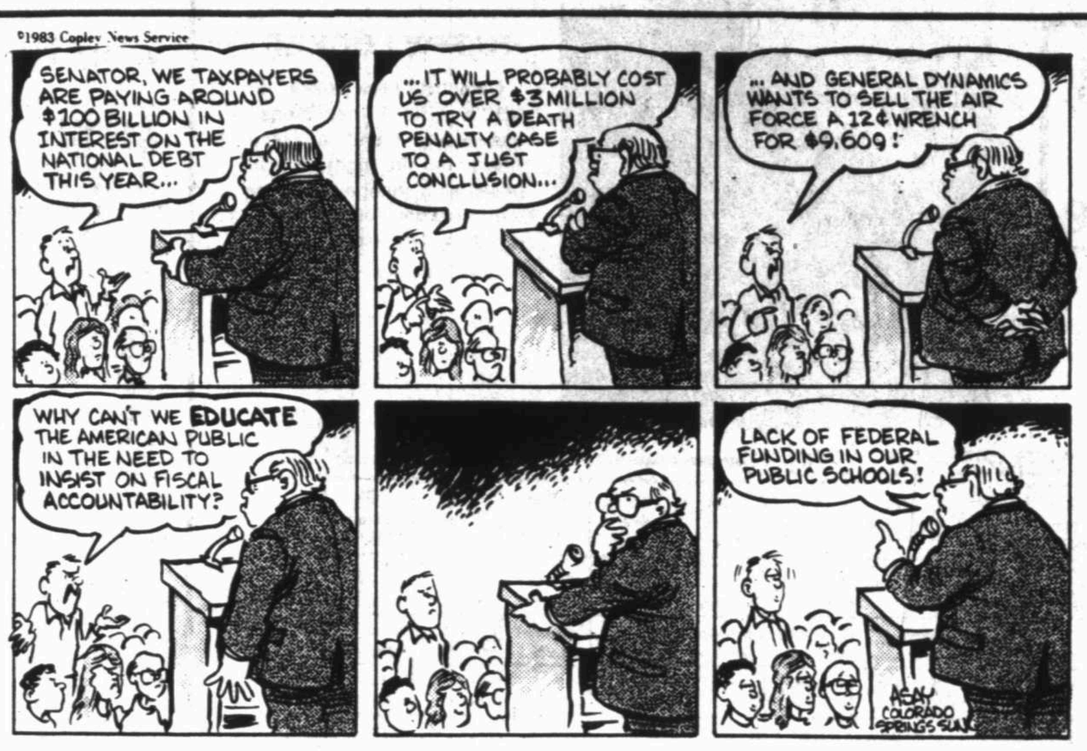

Because cows can be moved, whereas land cannot, evading the production controls will be even simpler. At the least, farmers can take the opportunity to send aging cows to slaughter — many will be paid for herd culling that they have already done — and then build up new stock just in case Congress has the courage to let the program expire in 1985.

With elections in the offing, Congress is eager to curry favor with the generous dairy lobby. But the president should not let Congress off the hook so easily.

The tax-paying, milk-buying public will not enjoy the spectacle of the government's doling out huge payments to large and prosperous dairy producers — some will get over $1 million.

And the small farmer, in whose name the entire edifice of dairy supports has been constructed, will continue to exist precariously at the edges of an industry that has grown too fat feeding at the public trough.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Time running out for lovers

WASHINGTON — Their romance never had a chance. Richard Bouvia and Elizabeth Castner met by mail. He was shut up in prison; she was confined to a wheelchair, her muscles atrophied, unable even to use her hands except to press buttons. It took her four or five hours to peck out painfully a simple letter to him on a typewriter with one finger.

Jack Anderson

They were born losers. Richard had been raised in poverty and had never been able to break out of it. He finally tried robbery and failed at that, too.

Elizabeth's handicap had been more than her parents could handle. They had entrusted her to institutions after she was 10. For the next eight years, she saw her mother only twice. Her father, by his own admission, was "cold" to her. She felt unloved, unwanted.

Then Richard was transferred to a prison near her home in San Diego. She made regular visits. Under the stern eyes of prison guards, they reached out to one another. After Richard was released, they saw each other every day for four months. Then on Aug. 25, 1982, she became Elizabeth Bouvia.

For the ex-convict and the paraplegic, marriage was not easy. Richard tried, really tried, to earn a living. But for an unskilled worker at a time of high unemployment, the best he could get were occasional janitorial jobs. So they scraped by on welfare.

Elizabeth was strong-willed. She had fought her way through San Diego State University and, against all odds, had earned a bachelor's degree in social work. Friends say she gave strength to Richard.

But the struggle to survive became wearing, with Elizabeth wracked with pain and Richard boiling with frustration. They moved to Iowa, but she couldn't take the poverty. She fled to her father's home in Oregon, then called Richard and asked him to join her.

Again, they faced life together. But again, they were beaten down. He couldn't find work. They depended on welfare checks from California, which they no longer were entitled to collect. They felt like criminals, fearful that they might be caught and have their sole support cut off.

One day, Richard disappeared. "I just left," he said. "I just walked out. I just had to get out." He didn't tell Elizabeth where he was until he reached Iowa. Then he telephoned her and said he was sorry.

She went back to an institution — the general hospital in Riverside, Calif. Then around last September, as Richard remembers it, Elizabeth called him. "Come and get me," she pleaded. They would find an apartment and try again, she promised.

Richard didn't have a penny, so he started hitchhiking to California. He was stranded near Cedar Rapids, Iowa. For 47 hours, he couldn't get a ride. Hungry and bedraggled, he looked up the Salvation Army.

He tried to telephone Elizabeth, collect, because he had no money. The hospital refused to accept the charges. He had the telephone number of a friend in Riverside but had left it in a pair of pants at his sister's house. She had no telephone, so he had to write for it. That took 10 days.

He learned from the friend that Elizabeth was front-page news. She had lost the will to live. But she was so crippled that she couldn't even commit suicide. So she was suing for the right to die. She wanted to stop eating.

A frantic Richard begged the Salvation Army for the bus fare to rush to Riverside. He went straight from the bus station to the hospital. But Elizabeth wouldn't see him. Finally, he arranged a visit through her American Civil Liberties Union attorney.

"She was cold," said Richard. "She wasn't the same person I married." Richard tried to explain why had hadn't arrived earlier, but she wouldn't listen.

He understands; at least he thinks so. "All through her life, nobody cared, nobody loved her," he said. "When I didn't show up, she thought I didn't love her."

He wants her to know that he does love her, that he wants her to live, that he will do his best to make their marriage work this time. He has stopped by the hospital and left small, intimate gifts. But she won't see him.

So Richard wrote her a letter. But he feared she would never read it. So he sent it to me and asked me to print it. In tomorrow's column, I will publish Richard Bouvia's appeal to his wife to stay alive.

GEORGE F. WILL

What's in a name? Maybe a lot!

WASHINGTON — Civilization is strict and picky and will not put up with what some people are up to up in North Dakota. They are campaigning to drop the word "North" and have their state known just as Dakota.

George F. Will

If you are, like me, discomposed by change of any sort, you pray that the name-changers will temper their enthusiasm with lucidity. But passion is at a boiling point. Some North Dakota chauvinists are saying that when "North" is dropped, South Dakota will be known as Lower Dakota. Today the northern prairie seems frighteningly like the Balkans in 1914, a powder keg.

A state leader says many Americans think North Dakota "produces nothing but blizzards and rocks." In fact it produces oceans of wheat, so perhaps it should be renamed the Ukraine, after what should be the breadbasket of the Soviet Union.

The leading name-changer says, "America thinks we're too dumb, too broke or too old to move." A name change would, he thinks, make the state more attractive to commerce and tourism. Also, it would put the state early in the roll call during balloting at political conventions, so it would be "part of the action." A weak argument, that. What action? Who cares, when delegates vote to ratify what voters in primaries have already decided?

Never mind. If North Dakotans want a name that will cause outlanders to think warm thoughts about it, why don't they name their state Bermuda? Yes, yes, there already is a Bermuda, but there are millions of people named Smith and the confusion is not unmanageable.

This controversy has aroused a political scientist at the University of Dakota (let's give this a try). In his essay, "A Better Neighborhood without Moving," Lloyd Omdahl notes that Montanans have a whole book of "NoDak" jokes — sort of like Polish jokes, making fun of North Dakotans. Omdahl says that if North Dakota changes its name, Montana will have to import someone literate to re-write their book for them. (I told you, there is Balkan bitterness up there. Borders may soon be closed, National Guard units mobilized.)

Perhaps strange things are to be expected in a state that has a capital city named after a jelly donut (which every right-thinking Middle Westerner calls a Bismarck). In any case, the laws of political physics guaranteed a reaction and now some folks want to drop the "Dakota" and be known as "North." That is, perhaps, the stoics' choice. But names like North Dakota or South Carolina are at least informative: They tell you where something is — above another Dakota or below some additional Carolina.

No such defense can be made of the names of the four "New" states —York, Jersey, Hampshire and Mexico. They are not new anymore and should be renamed for what comes immediately to mind when each is mentioned: Crime, Turnpike, Presidential Primary and...well, not much comes to my mind at the mention of New Mexico, except the memory of a drive from Gallup to Tucumcari. But it would be rude to name a state Ennui.

Besides, as New Mexico's license plates announce, that state really is a "Land of Enchantment." Which brings me to another of North Dakota's problems — its license plates.

A poetic license plate affects me the way even the meanest flower that blows affected Wordsworth: It stirs thoughts too deep for tears. But some states have to be watched. Illinois has shamefully shrunk the words "Land of Lincoln" almost to the point of disappearance. Is someone trying to sneak in the slogan "Land of Charles Percy"? Idaho's plates say, robustly: "Famous Potatoes." Surprisingly, no state has yet rented the space on its plates for a commercial slogan — "Looks like a Stroh's Light Night in Indiana." But states advertise themselves: '10,000 Lakes," "America's Dairyland," "Big Sky," "Wild Wonderful."

But North Dakota's plates say "Peace Garden State." Oh my. If you were to ask a North Dakotan what that refers to, you would insult him; ask anyone else, you get a glassy stare. If North Dakota is serious about changing its image, it should put on its plates some advertising language–say, "Golden Beaches" or "Swaying Palms."

When Mrs. Will and I go off on our second honeymoon (she says it will be the first; she does not count the one we spent in faculty housing in East Lansing, Mich.), it will be to North Dakota — or perhaps North Florida, as North Dakota may then be known. We will enjoy the surfing. Or perhaps the blizzards. What does it matter to honeymooners?

ART BUCHWALD

Harassment better on weekends!

There seems to be more talk and lawsuits concerning sexual harassment in the office. A recent survey indicated that while few women complained of being physically harassed by males, many maintained they were verbally abused by their male co-workers.

Unfortunately, verbal sexual harassment is still a much cloudier area than anyone wants to admit.

Art Buchwald

When I go to lunch by myself I have the bad habit of listening to conversations at the next table. When two or three girls are lunching together the conversation seems to concern the various men in their office. "Tommy is a teddy bear, but Harry is a dirty old man."

Wanting to know where a man should draw the line when it comes to harassment in the office, I turned to three female office workers sitting next to me at Scholl's Cafeteria the other day and said, "I beg your pardon, I'm doing an article on sexual harassment and I was wondering if you ladies could help me define the difference between verbal harassment and old-fashioned flirting in the office."

One of the girls replied, "If you like the guy and think he's cute, he's flirting with you. If you don't like him, he's harassing you."

A second girl said, "If Arnie, whom you've had your eye on, asks to have dinner with you, tell all the girls in the office. If Charley, whom you can't stand, invites you, tell your boss."

"Then what you're saying is that verbal harassment in the office is really a judgment call. It isn't what's said but who says it?"

The third lady in the party said, "There's a lot more to it than that. Lilly was dating a fellow from our office, and he stayed over in her apartment once or twice a week. Then he dumped her and wouldn't talk to her. His silence was far more harassing than anything he had ever said to her."

"Correct me if I'm wrong," I continued, "but it seems to me in the old office mating game, many men and women who are now married admit they didn't like each other at the beginning, but eventually fell in love. If office harassment had been as big an issue then as it is now, maybe the couple would have never gotten together, and the guy, instead of cutting the lawn for the girl of his dreams, could be doing five years in the county workhouse."

"The difference is that in the past," one of the girls said, "a girl had no choice of who harassed her. Now the law says it's our decision."

One of the other ladies added, "It's also a question of who holds the power. If your superior implies your position with the firm depends on how nice you are to him, that's harassment of the worst kind."

"But if you like him, would that still be harassment?"

"If he's married, that's one thing. If he's fun and single, it could be a different story."

"Are there cases in your office," I asked, "where women harass men that they are attracted to?"

They all laughed. "We're not made of stone. Why are you writing an article on this?"

"Because if women can go to court over verbal harassment in an office environment, men may become too frightened to say anything to you girls. It could take all the romance out of your jobs, and no one would look forward to coming to work any more."

"Do you have a solution?" one of the women asked me.

"Yes, I do. I think when you first apply for a job you should be asked on your personnel questionnaire if you want to be verbally harassed or not. If you say yes, then you must describe the type of guy you want to be harassed by and the type you wouldn't be caught dead with. Your superior could then notify all the males in the office accordingly, and everybody would be spared the consequences."

The girls thought this over. Then one of them said, "It will never work. We might not want to be harassed by George on Monday, but when the weekend rolls around, and we don't have anything to do, we should have the right to change our minds."

Greek Cypriots stage work stoppage protest

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Greek Cypriots staged a work stoppage today to protest a declaration of independence by the Turkish-occupied north. The government said it would rely on diplomacy, not force, in dealing with the secessionists.

The strike call, issued by trade union federations, was for "complete inactivity" for one hour, including the closure of all shops, offices and schools in the Greek Cypriot sector of the divided Mediterranean island.

The unions said the work stoppage was designed "to strengthen the unanimous" opposition to the Turkish Cypriots' declaration Tuesday and to consolidate support for "the government's measures against the Turkish decision." On Wednesday about 10,000 high school students participated in a peaceful anti-secession demonstration in Nicosia.

Spyros Kyprianou, president of Cyprus, and Rauf Denktash, president of the secessionist state, visited foreign capitals to rally support for their respective causes. Both were expected to arrive in New York later today for an emergency session of the U.N. Security Council.

Kyprianou met in London today with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and other top officials to brief them on the former British colony. He blames the new crisis on Turkey's military government, which recognized the new Cypriot state after an emergency Cabinet meeting in Ankara.

Denktash was in London on Wednesday night, but a British Foreign Ministry source said the visitor received the greeting customary to a vice president, and the ministry refused to recognize him as president of an independent nation.

The 10 Common Market countries, including Britain, have condemned the Turkish Cypriots' secession declaration. So has the United States and several other nations.

Dentash said he was "amazed and astounded" by Britain's refusal to recognize the Turkish state. "Cyprus is as much our country as it is Greece's," he said.

A Turkish Foreign Ministry spokesman, Nazmi Akiman, said in Ankara today that Turkey had accepted a British proposal for urgent talks between the two nations.

Reagan denounces declaration

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Foreign Affairs Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration publicly condemned the Turkish Cypriot declaration of an independent republic on Cyprus to help short-circuit what it feared would be efforts by the Greek government and pro-Greek congressmen here to retaliate against two developments vital to U.S. strategic interests.

They are the new pact allowing the U.S. continued use of military bases in Greece and the pending congressional measure granting a record $760 million in military aid to Turkey. The unilateral move is embarassing to the Reagan administration because both Greece and Turkey are valued NATO allies.

State Department officials conceded that they knew 10 weeks ago that the Turkish minority on Cyprus would declare its independence but did not know precisely when they planned to take the step on the northern third of the island. 'We were taken by surprise," an official insisted.

"We comprehend their reasons although we do not agree with them," the senior policymaker said. "We had no alternative. We had to take a position. We did everything we could to try and avert it," he added, including bringing pressure on the Turkish government to discourage the move.

But even the Turkish government did not know when Rauf Denktash, the Turkish Cypriot leader, planned to act, the official said. Once he did, the Reagan administration had no

Spyros Kyprianou

Rauf Denktash

choice but to publicly slap his wrist in order to preserve two important recent strategic gains for the United States.

The first is a recently-negotiated five-year pact with Greece that allows U.S. forces to continue using a dozen Greek military facilities considered vital to the defense of NATO's southern flank. The second is an evolving pact with Congress to provide record military aid to Turkey.

A senior State Department official explained that the U.S. had to go through the motions of condemning the Turkish Cypriots for their unilateral action or risk losing both the Greek bases agreement and the record $760 million in arms aid that Congress is on the verge of granting to Turkey.

"The bottom line is that Congress is not exactly a Turkish vehicle," the official said, underscoring the fact that there are less than 100,000 Americans of Turkish descent compared to more than two million Americans of Greek ancestry.

Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D.-Md., and Paul Tsongas, D.-Mass., both of Greek origin, help lead the pro-Greek lobby in Congress. There currently are five congressmen of direct Greek descent "but there is almost no congressman without a significant number of Greek constitutents," the official said.

"That's a fact of life. It's not a bad fact of life but one we have to live with," the State Department official said. He explained that the Reagan administration had lobbied long and hard over the last nine months to get the record $760 million in military aid for Turkey.

It has cleared initial hurdles but still must be voted on by the full Congress before it adjourns. The Greek army, although smaller, is considered at least three times more modern than the Turkish army. Both nations are valued NATO allies of the United States.

"The Eastern Mediterranean is a very strategic region. It underpins our whole Middle East strategy and all our relationships in the area, not least of all with Israel," a Pentagon official said. He explained the U.S. Sixth Fleet literally could not operate in wartime without bases in Greece and Turkey.

"Look at a map," the official said. "The Soviet Union and its allies physically overhang the area. It is our bases in Greece and Turkey that prevent them from moving in." Neutralizing these bases is "essential to anyone who may be considering invading any country in the Middle East."

U.S. officials hope that the successful conclusion of a new bases agreement with Greece will also yield other fruits for American diplomacy. The State Department believes that Greece now may soften its anti-American rhetoric on the stationing of new U.S. medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe.

Palestinian rebels declare victory

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian rebels today declared victory in their war against Yasser Arafat, but he vowed to fight on as a pocket of his besieged loyalists held out north of Tripoli.

Lebanon's state radio reported that Arafat had ordered his troops in northern Lebanon to cease fire, but the chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization told reporters today he would continue fighting.

"It is difficult. But we have no choice," Arafat said in a brief news conference at his headquarters in Tripoli. One of his hands was wrapped in a bandage, but he said it was "not a wound." He gave no further explanation.

In Beirut, the 1,600-man U.S. Marine contingent of the multinational peacekeeping force began its rotation today after a six-month stay in Lebanon. The stint included the Oct. 23 truck-bombing that killed 239 Marines and other U.S. servicemen, the worst terrorist attack on the U.S. military since the Vietnam War.

Lebanese police said the death toll had climbed to 43 from Israel's air raid Wednesday on a Bekaa Valley base of pro-Iranian extremists suspected of engineering truck-bomb attacks on U.S., French and Israeli posts in Lebanon.

Arafat and his aides said there were still some loyalist fighters in positions on the southern edge of the Baddawi Palestinian refugee camp, taken by the rebels in fierce hand-to-hand fighting Wednesday. The camp was Arafat's last Middle East stronghold.

Most of today's fighting was in an area called Mankubin, just southwest of Baddawi. Rockets, machineguns and rocket-propelled grenades were being fired by both sides.

"We will win. I keep telling you," Arafat claimed.

One of Arafat's spokesmen, Mohammed Shaker, said the Syrian-backed rebels were sweeping the camp to stifle resistance. The rebels already hold positions on the north, east and southeast, as well as inside nearly all of the camp.

The rebel leader who personally led Wednesday's assault and capture of Baddawi declared a total victory.

"We've won the war and we have finished Arafat," said Ahmed Jibril. "We shall not move a single inch toward Tripoli."

Jibril spoke today at Arafat's one-time headquarters in the camp. He urged Arafat to surrender and "receive the punishment he deserves for the mistakes and crimes he committed against the Palestinian people."

Unconfirmed radio reports said 100 were killed and 600 wounded in the final assault on Baddawi.

The PLO war in north Lebanon broke out Nov. 3. On Nov. 6 the mutineers overran the loyalist camp of Nahr el-Bared, and Arafat's men fled to Baddawi. It was not known how many loyalists were in Baddawi when the mutineers fought their way in.

The PLO rebels accused Arafat of abandoning military struggle against Israel, but Arafat said the mutiny was part of an effort by Syria to gain control of the PLO.

The state radio said a tentative count of casualties during the two-week PLO war showed 345 combatants and civilians were killed and more than 800 wounded. Beirut police said the figures could go much higher.

In Israel, military sources quoted by Israel radio said officials decided to launch the Bekaa Valley air strikes after it became clear the United States did not intend to retaliate for the Oct. 23 bombing of the Marine headquarters in Beirut.

A U.S. official in Washington, speaking on condition he not be named, said the United States would not comment on possible retaliation, and that it was not consulted in advance about the Israeli raid.

However, the political bureau of Lebanon's largest Shiite militia, Amal, charged today that the raid had U.S. endorsement.

U.S. not informed by Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials say the Israelis may have done the United States a favor by attacking suspected pro-Iranian terrorist bases in Lebanon, but the officials insist they were ignorant of the Israeli plans.

"There was no consultation with the United States, no coordination," said John Hughes, the State Department spokesman. But Hughes declined an opportunity to disapprove of Wednesday's attack on the bases near the Syrian border.

"The Israelis did what they did," he said. "It was their decision and we have no comment on that strike."

Israeli jets hit Shiite Moslem guerrilla bases near Lebanon's border with Syria Wednesday in reprisal for the suicide bombing Nov. 4 that killed 29 Israelis and 32 Lebanese prisoners in Tyre.

Hughes and other U.S. officials left the impression that they approved of the Israeli strike, while stressing Washington was not in any way involved in the planning or execution.

Hughes said the Israelis may have struck at the same group of terrorists who directed the bombing of the U.S. Marine headquarters in Beirut on Oct. 23 in which 239 Marines were killed.

President Reagan had said soon after the attack on the Marines, and before the attack on the Israeli troops, that "those who directed this atrocity must be dealt justice. They will be."

Primate opposes protests

LONDON (AP) — The Roman Catholic Primate of England said today that anti-nuclear demonstrators have no right "seriously to defy the law" in protesting the arrival of the first U.S. cruise missiles in Britain.

More than 600 activists have been arrested in three days of British demonstrations, including 90 on Wednesday.

Meanwhile, President Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania called on the superpowers to "renounce the siting of new missiles in Europe...(and) start withdrawing and scrapping the ones in place."

In Bonn, the opposition Social Democrats said today that party leaders had voted to oppose deployment of U.S. missiles in West Germany.Alfred Dregger, parliamentary leader of the governing Christian Democrats, called the Social Democrats' decision "a vote against NATO."

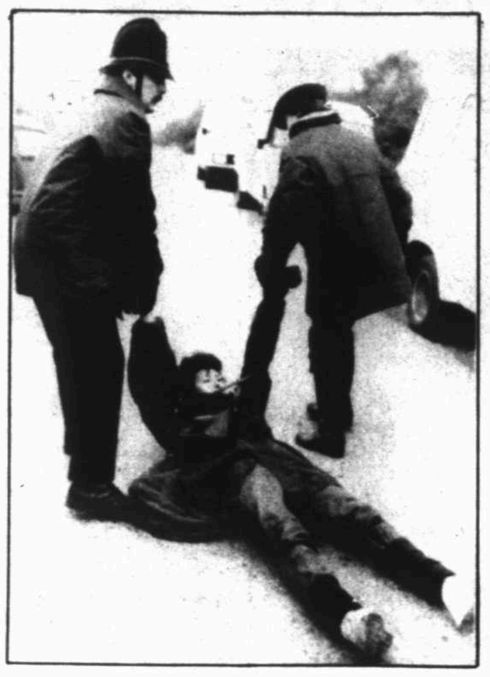

Did Brezhnev shoot Andropov?

LONDON (AP) — Under the headline "Was Andropov Shot?" the Daily Express on Thursday cited reports circulating in Western Europe intelligence circles that Soviet President Yuri Andropov had been shot and wounded in the arm by the son of his predecessor, Leonid Brezhnev.

Early editions of the British newspaper available here Wednesday night said the reports claimed the alleged Kremlin shooting by 51-year-old Yuri Brezhnev in a family feud is the real reason for Andropov's three-month absence from public view.

However, Brezhnev's office reported Thursday that he was still on the job at the Foreign Trade Ministry, a possible indication the report was not correct.

The Daily Express said the reports, which it said emanated from Moscow KGB sources, had spread through intelligence circles in London and elsewhere in Europe.

'Reagan doctrine' indicated

WASHINGTON (AP) - Nicaragua says the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada and American-backed operations against the Sandinista government represent a new "Reagan doctrine" that threatens the sovereignty of all hemispheric nations.

In a speech Wednesday night at the Organization of American States, Nicaraguan Vice Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco said the new doctrine is the contemporary version of "gunboat diplomacy" and "dollar diplomacy" of previous American presidents.

Costa Rican reveals neutrality

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — President Luis Alberto Monge said he will declare Costa Rica's permanent neutrality today and denied reported plans to have U.S. army engineers work on projects along the country's troubled border with Nicaragua.

Monge said Wednesday that Costa Rica's neutrality declaration will be made in a speech tonight to be broadcast by radio throughout Central America. Monge said he will announce plans to include the right to neutrality in the constitution.

In El Salvador, meanwhile, leftist rebels claimed they killed 21 soldiers in an ambush of a U.S.-trained battalion in the mountains. In Dallas, a high U.S. Defense Department official gave a speech in which he denounced Salvadoran death squads.

Monge said the declaration is the "culmination of a process that began in the extraordinary declaration of 1949, when the army was dissolved in an expression of unilateral disarmament."

Aquino testimony continues

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The general who was suspended after failing to protect Benigno Aquino testified today that 1,199 men were assigned to protect and arrest the opposition leader at the airport where he was assassinated.

Gen. Luther Custodio, testifying at a hearing of the panel probing Aquino's Aug. 21 slaying, also acknowledged that video cameras had been deployed to monitor and record events on the tarmac when Aquino was shot.

However, while not directly denying the existence of a videotape of the slaying, he said, "We usually do not record what we monitor."

Kidnappers contact brewery

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The kidnappers of millionaire brewer Alfred Heineken and his chauffeur have contacted the brewery's negotiators by telephone, the Amsterdam daily De Telegraaf reported today.

The newspaper said a Dutch-speaking person claiming to be one of the abductors, had called twice to Heineken's villa in the seaside resort of Noordwijk, 22 miles southwest of Amsterdam, where it is believed some members of the brewery management have been stationed.

English town still tooting its horn

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer

RIPON, England — In this sleepy town in northern England, someone has been responsible for blowing an ox horn in the market square every night for 1,097 years — ever since Alfred the Great said it was the thing to do.

In Alfred's day, the long, low moan of the horn meant curfew was in effect and everyone had to be in their homes. Now, the nightly ceremony at 9 o'clock is a big tourist attraction, along with Ripon's impressive cathedral dating to the 12th century.

Although it can't be proved, townspeople swear there has never been a night since the year 886 that someone didn't blow the horn, and they give some of the credit for that to Joel Bastow, an American.

Bastow, who is originally from North Attleboro, Mass., has been Ripon's deputy hornblower since 1977. He is 44 years old and wears black-rimmed glasses, a mustache and goatee and a button that says, "I'm not a tourist, I live here."

Until recently, Bastow's job was to fill in when the official hornblower, Derek Tyreman, took a night off. But after five years of hornblowing, Tyreman quit in September, leaving Bastow to take over until a replacement was found.

On Nov. 1, the town council appointed a new hornblower: Alan Oliver, a 28-year-old postman. There were two other applicants for the part-time job, which pays $3 a night, plus traveling expenses of $1.50.

"They asked me to take the job," Bastow said in an interview, "but I couldn't handle it with a family, knowing I would have to be in the same place every night at 9 o'clock."

Bastow, who by day is a civilian computer analyst at the U.S. satellite communications station in nearby Menwith Hill, gets paid by the hornblower whenever he fills in.

He takes his duties seriously.

One night, he forgot he was supposed to blow the horn until his wife reminded him just in time to get to the market square by 9 p.m.

"Now, I have clocks all over the house set to go off at 8:30," he said in an interview.

Having broken his foot in a softball game, Bastow showed up at the market square one recent night wearing a plaster cast, along with the ceremonial three-corner hat, greatcoat and white gloves.

Standing at a monument at the center of the square, he faces a clock on the town hall across the street. Precisely at 9, he slings a two-foot South African ox horn over his shoulder, puffs out his cheeks and lets loose with a 15-second blast.

Grenada's economy studied

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — A White House task force visiting here today seeks to encourage private enterprise to do what 4½ years of socialism failed to accomplish: keep this tiny island-nation away from bankruptcy.

The visit is the first of a series of international efforts to assist the recovery of a country described by one U.S. official as "flat broke."

Jay Morris, deputy administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, or AID, heads the eight-member fact-finding team which will hold three days of talks with businessmen and government officials.

Other members include representatives of the U.S. state and commerce departments, the Export-Import Bank and the Peace Corps.

Ted Morse, deputy director of AID in the Caribbean region, said U.S. investors and businessmen had submitted 200 requests for information about business and investment opportunities in Grenada.

Task force members were meeting with government officials to help establish private investment policies, Morse said. After conferring with businessmen here, they will return to Washington to report their findings.

"Obviously, this economy is going to take off...on the dynamics of the private sector" to provide jobs, investment and tourism, Morse said.

AID has committed $3 million for rehabilitation projects in Grenada, invaded by a U.S.-Caribbean military force Oct. 25 to topple the Marxist military junta which overthrew and executed leftist Prime Minister Maurice Bishop.

The United States stopped aid to Grenada during the Bishop years and excluded the country from President Reagan's Caribbean Basin Initiative, which provides grants and trade incentives for Central America and the Caribbean.

U.S. officials say $3 million is a small fraction of the assistance needed for restoration and development programs for such an economically devastated country.

"Our analysis of the budget shows they are flat broke," Morse said.

There was "extremely heavy" borrowing from commercial banks and much of Grenada's trade with communist countries was on a credit or payment-in-kind basis, he added.

Only two area teams remain in playoffs

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

And then there were two.

Only two area teams are left in the area playoffs, and both face weekend dates that will determine how long the football season in 1983 will be in McCamey and Crane.

Naturally, it is time to put up or shut up where the playoffs are concerned. Losses at this stage mean elimination, as the state halves the playoff field each week from here on out. Only 32 class AA and AAA teams remain, and both the Badgers and the Cranes utilized runner-up regular season finishes to get into the elite field. McCamey is 8-3 after a 40-19 stunner over Marfa in bi-district action last week. Crane, 10-0-1, escaped a date with previously unbeaten Kermit, 6-0.

AGAINST MARFA'S Shorthorns, the Badgers broke open a tight one-point ballgame in the fourth quarter, exploding for 20 points to win easily.

And, the Badgers had to come from behind. McCamey lead the ballgame at the half, but Marfa's Cosme Roman hit two touchdown passes to give the 'Horns a 19-14 lead in the third quarter. McCamey answered loudly. Heath Stephens rambled in on a 28-yard run to regain the lead, and the Badgers simply overpowered Marfa in the fourth quarter.

A blocked punt and two long scoring runs by freshman speedster Rodney Terry of 60 and 71 yards broke the 'Horns back. Terry had three TD's on the night. Muscular fullback Robert Day closed out the blowout with a 15-yard scoring jaunt. On the night, McCamey rolled for 340 yards on the ground.

McCAMEY COACH Buster Leaf's first Badger team has an interesting challenge Friday at 8:00 p.m. in Andrews against 9-2 Farwell. At New Deal last year, Leaf coached against Farwell in a bi-district game, which New Deal won 26-0.

Leaf cautions that Farwell is still capable. "Originally they had nine starters back offensively and defensively from last year," Leaf said. "But they've lost three people. They run a wishbone option and have an All-South Plains quarterback."

Leaf expects Farwell to throw the ball, and says the Badgers have made some adjustments to contend with Farwell's wide-open attack. Preparing for a wishbone team that can throw isn't easy.

"You can't change too much late in the year, but we've had to adjust to stop their option," Leaf said.

The Badger option, meanwhile, is in capable hands with Terry, Day and All-District quarterback Ray Zarate. "Ray's a fine young man. He's had a very good year, he's smart, and he's done a tremendous job." Leaf also praises Zarate's defensive skills. Zarate had not played varsity defense before this year, but now Leaf has him going both ways.

IN CRANE, head coach Rickey White gets an extra day to prepare for the Golden Cranes' regional playoff against 9-2 Electra. Electra was a 28-7 bi-district winner last Saturday over Marble Falls.

The teams are playing in Mustang Stadium in Sweetwater Saturday at 7:30, and the extra day should make things easier for all concerned.

"It makes it a lot easier on the fans," said White. What made it easy on the Crane fans last week was a home playoff date, and the Golden Cranes needed every edge in their close win over Kermit. Kermit had surrendered only 27 points in 10 regular season outings, and the Golden Cranes didn't strike paydirt against the Yellowjackets. Instead, they rode the strong, dependable leg of tackle/placekicker Don "June Bug" Bishop, who hit field goals of 42 and 31 yards for all the points.

White was asked after the Kermit battle what kind of advantage a man like Bishop provides. "About six points," he joked. White was in a congenial mood early this week, but game faces tend to get tighter as game day nears. White and the Golden Cranes are still hungry.

"Once you're in the playoffs," said White, "when you lose one you're through. But, you can't lose more than one."

ELECTRA POSES a unique problem: the Golden Cranes don't see them often, or really at all. White has hit the films like studying for an algebra exam. "It's the first time we've played them," he said, "In fact, we had to get out the map to see where Electra is. But they can play football." White is most concerned with Electra's Charlie Lott. "He's 6-3, 195, and one of the best backs I've ever seen. He's got great speed. Their team is tremendously quick, but not very big."

White is paying Lott a heavy compliment. Two of his own backs who answer to the name of Vasquez are pretty solid country runners.

The Golden Cranes are healthy, physically and mentally. "Our attitude is real good," White said. "We'll be ready."

PSJ rush finds new recruits

HOUSTON (AP) — Phi Slama Jama, the fraternity of the tall on the University of Houston campus, has just completed its rush for the 1983-84 basketball season and have some new recruits for another run at the NCAA Final Four.

Seven-foot Akeem Abdul Olajuwon, a leader of the pack last season, is back but sky-walking Clyde Drexler and muscleman Larry "Mr. Mean" Micheaux are gone.

That leaves Coach Guy Lewis with two starting positions to fill from a team that compiled a 31-3 record last season and lost in the NCAA championship final 54-52 on a last second shot to North Carolina State.

The team, tabbed Phi Slama Jama because of its penchant for dunk shots, will be shorter but quicker and less powerful.

"This team is completely different from last year," Lewis said. We're not as good a rebounding team. Last year we had a big front line but this year, other than Akeem, we've got a very small front line."

Lewis' starting lineup for Saturday's opener against North Carolina State in the Tip-Off Classic at Springfield, Mass., will include returning starters Olajuwon, point guard Alvin Franklin and forward Michael Young.

The newcomers will be Benny Anders, an off-the-bench sensation in 1982-83, and Braxton Clark, the nation's leading junior college scorer with a 34.8 point scoring average last season.

CLARK WILL be asked to do more rebounding this season.

"I'd like him to play as much like Micheaux did last year as possible," Lewis said of Clark. "Larry took a lot of pressure off Akeem last season and we need someone to do that this year."

Olajuwon had 68 dunks, 175 blocked shots, and averaged 13.9 points last season. In the Final Four, he had 40 points, 41 rebounds and 19 blocks against Louisville and North Carolina State.

Lewis says Olajuwon is even better this season.

"His biggest improvement is in rebounding and that's where we needed it the most," Lewis said. "His biggest weakness is he still tends to put the ball on the floor, which allows double teaming to be very successful."

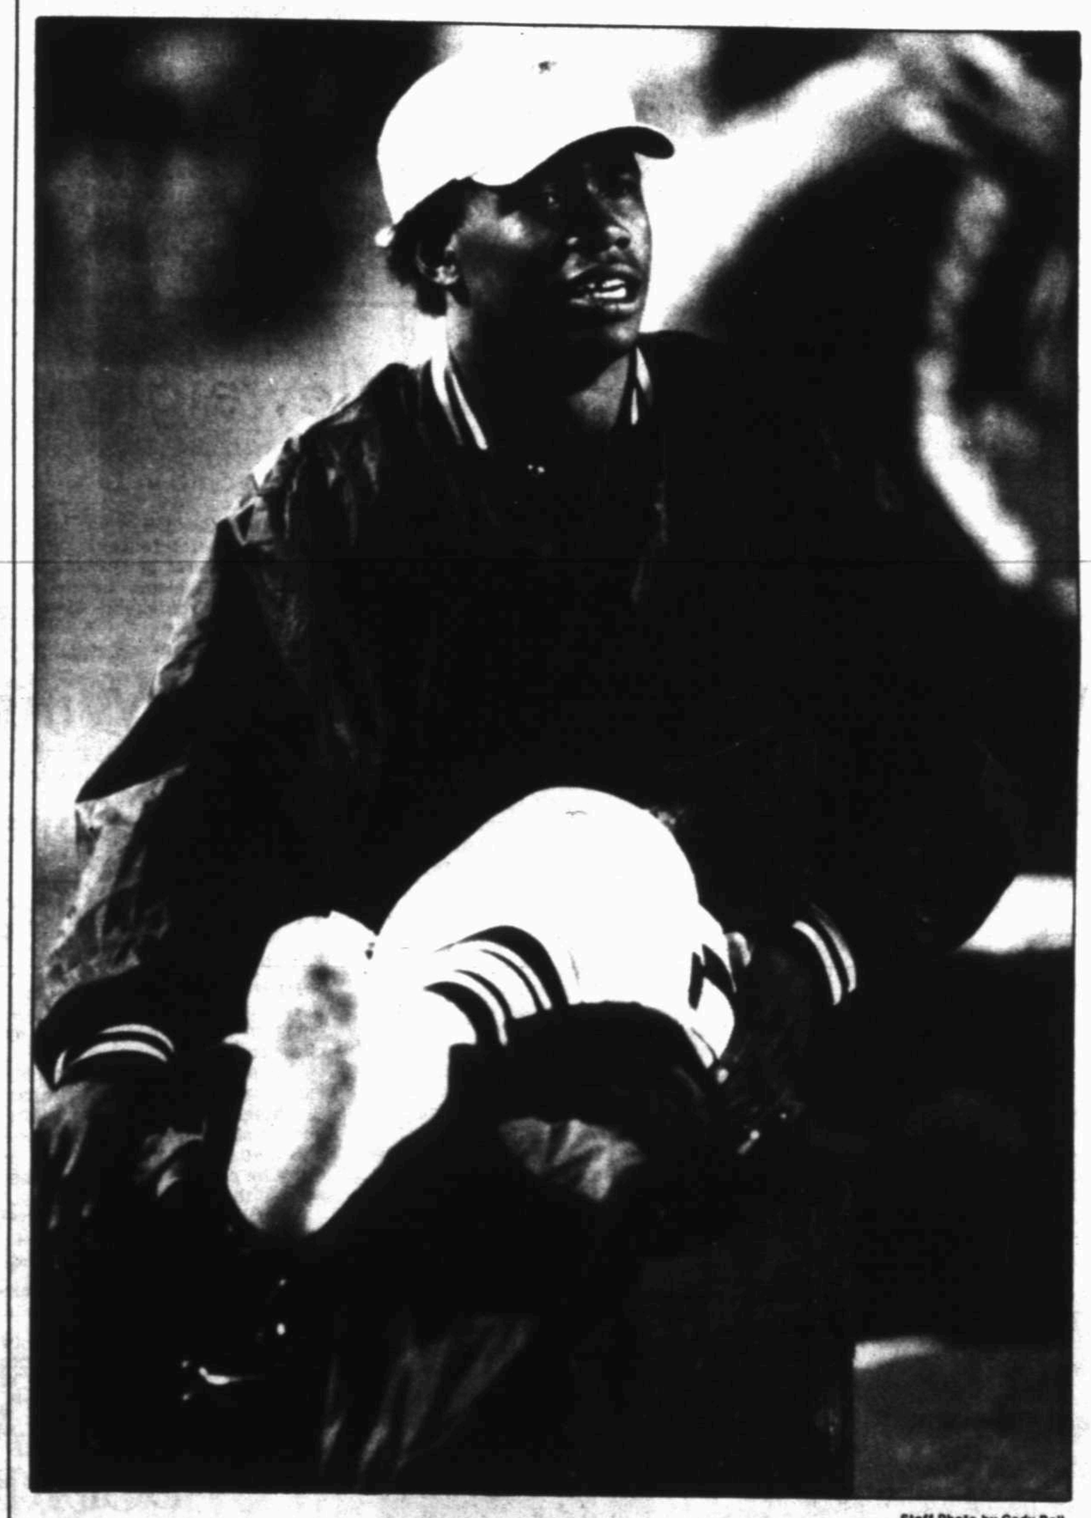

Lewis said consistency from Olajuwon would be necessary if the Cougars hoped to have a season similar to last year.

ARKANSAS AND Southern Methodist are expected to challenge Houston for the Southwest Conference title. Houston made a rare 16-0 sweep in the SWC last season.

SMU Coach Dave Bliss' biggest assets include 7-foot center Jon Koncak, the team's leading scorer and rebounder last year, and depth at the post position.

Lee Rebels' Johnson:

A stronger defense when he's in lineup

Midland Lee linebacker Michael Johnson sat out the second half of the Odessa Permian game with a knee sprain. But he is back in the lineup for the playoffs and the Lee defense is rolling.

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Just how important is middle linebacker Michael Johnson to the Midland Lee Rebels?

Consider some facts. Through Lee's first seven games, the Rebels had given up a mere 37 points. In the next two games, Lee gave up 35 points. Those two games just happen to be when Johnson was out with a knee sprain.

THE SAGA continues. Johnson returns for the Midland High game. A shutout resulted. In the bi-district game, Amarillo High managed a meager three points. So in nine games with Johnson playing, Lee has given up 40 points and 35 without him.

"I think that should say something about how valuable he is to us," said Lee assistant coach Eddie Wolski. "I don't know how you can argue with that. He makes things happen on defense."

In 11 games, Lee has allowed only 75 points. That means Lee gives up only an average of 6.8 points to an opponent per game. That also means that Lee should win if they can score and kick an extra point.

It is no secret that Lee's defensive unit has been awesome in 1983. Johnson, who has been in on 130 tackles, 17 unassisted, is one of the reasons.

"There is no question that we missed Michael when he was out," said Lee head coach Spike Dykes. "Anytime you have an athlete with his abilities out of the lineup, you miss him. He has height and speed, all the tools necessary to be a great linebacker."

RIGHT BEFORE the half of Lee's 20-7 victory over Odessa Permian, Johnson went down with a sprained knee. He missed the 52-12 victory over Big Spring and the 23-21 loss to Abilene Cooper. It was a period that Johnson hated.

"I felt like a player-coach who couldn't play," said Johnson. "I was disappointed that the defense slacked up. I don't like to see other teams score against us.

"I found myself getting hoarse after every game I couldn't play. I thought I was going to lose my voice. I kept screaming at those guys when the other team was about to score."

Johnson doesn't feel he is solely responsible for Lee's defensive success or failure, but like all those on the defensive unit, he takes a lot of the blame when things do go wrong.

"With me out and Reggie Ellis out about the same time, we put a lot of pressure on the defense. We had some people out there who never started before. But when me and Reggie and Billy (Cornelius) are in there, we think we can stop anyone," said Johnson. "Thomas Manley and Scott Hicks now have a lot of experience too, so we are in good shape at linebacker."

Lee linebacker coach Earl Miller also praises Johnson. "I don't think I've ever had one like him and we've had a lot of great linebackers here. No one has the knack of getting to the football like he does. He covers up a lot of mistakes of the defense.

"He has so much speed and quickness that he sometimes over-pursues a play, but he is never out of control and can usually recover. He's strong enough to reach back and take a runner down with one arm if he has to."

LEE ASSISTANT Van Tom Whatley said of Johnson, "He is the real leader of the defensive team. He won't let any of them let up out there. He's always in the game and he doesn't mind telling the others to suck it up."

Johnson was born in Ballinger, but moved to Midland at the age of four. Football in Midland is what he considers his life.

"It seems like I've been playing football all my life. I started playing flag football in kindergarten. I didn't play linebacker until the seventh grade, but that's were the action is and I like it."

Johnson was in on 10 tackles last Saturday against Amarillo High in Lee's 30-3 bi-district victory. He likes Lee's chances in the playoffs.

"I thought Amarillo High played well, but we played excellent. That's what you have to do every week in the playoffs," noted Johnson. "I'm excited about the playoffs, but so is everyone else. We've got the potential to go all the way and we believe that. Now we just have to do it and not talk about it."

Cornelius and Ellis had around eight tackles each against AHS Saturday, so you can see that Lee's active linebacking corps is not dominated by Johnson alone.

"Our linebackers have been good this year. Reggie and Billy both have their share of tackles and big plays," said Miller. "They are going to get to the football."

TED BATTLES

It isn't the same game today Jim

Jim Brown is talking menacingly of a comeback if Franco Harris of the Pittsburgh Steelers breaks his National Football League career rushing record of 12,312 yards.

Jim is getting all upset for naught. At 47 he's old enough to realize that all-time records are meaningless. Players nowadays don't even play the same game he did back in the 1950s and 1960s. That goes for all sports.

It's not that today's athletes aren't better. They should be. They've benefited from the evolution of the sport over the years. Training methods are better. Equipment is superior, lighter more streamlined. Techniques have improved and today's athlete eats better. McDonald's, Wendy's and Taco Bell weren't even around a couple of decades ago.

THE ATHLETES who could be better than the athletes of yesteryear aren't physically suitable for the game today, so they are no longer playing. Sports have become so specialized now that football today is no closer to football of 30 years ago than soccer is.

It's a little like calling this year's Nebraska team the best ever as one Looney writer did earlier this year. You just can't compare different eras. There are too many variables. The game changes. The rules are different and the criteria for selecting players is no longer what it once was.

In most cases, today's super stars would find the game of 30 years ago too strenuous, too demanding.

By the same token, the athletes who once dominated are playing golf or baseball. The evolution has been such that they no longer have a place.

Changes in the rules, watered down rosters, inflated schedule lengths and the ability to concentrate on a restricted phase of the game all serve to make breaking the records relatively routine, in most cases. The exception is Jim Brown.

YOU CAN knock off 20 points on batting averages, thanks to the concrete playing surfaces of today in baseball. And maybe put back five or 10 points, courtesy of the current vaccum cleaner gloves.

Sprinters enjoy the benefit of all-surface tracks, but perhaps, along with basketball players (although the 10-foot basket is no longer much of a challenge) best reflect the improvement of today's athlete.

However, one is inclined to scoff at today's pole vault records. Hey, until they break Meadows' and Warmerdam's records using bamboo poles, they are all suspect.

But Brown is the classic example of the folly of comparing one era to another. What did Jim play, eight years, 10-12 games a year? Franco is closing in on his NFL rushing records after 10 or 11 years and 16-game seasons. Good grief, it has taken Franco the equivalent of "eight extra years" to get close.

HOW CAN Brown take a challenge like that seriously? That's like comparing Joe Louis worrying about what Larry Holmes might do to his reputation.

Tony Dorsett, in his fourth year at Pitt, beat the records Marshall Goldberg set in three years with the Panthers back in the 1930s, and he did it without making a tackle. Goldberg also played defensive halfback. Today Goldberg probably wouldn't even be drafted.

When Brown came to the Cotton Bowl in 1957, he not only was an awesome runner, but a linebacker as well. In fact, Syracuse lost to TCU, 28-27, because Brown, who scored all of the touchdowns for Syracuse, missed one of his extra point attempts.

Despite his threats, Brown probably will be discouraged from making a comeback. After all, if he came back and led the league in rushing, he'd destroy the credability of today's record-holders.

A new generation of 'Champions'

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

A generation ago, when the world was a nicer place in which to live, tykes gathered around their radios to listen to the travails and ultimate triumphs of "Jack Armstrong, the All-American Boy."

During the commercial breaks of these half-hour dramas, a sports idol of the period, a Babe Ruth or a Lou Gehrig, would break in with an exhortation which went something like this:

"Now, boys and girls, if you want to grow up to be strong and brave like Jack Armstrong, don't forget to eat your Wheaties."

People who heard those words 50 years ago are now papas, mamas, grandfathers and grandmothers, TV has replaced the talk box and Jack Armstrong's adventures appear mild compared with the gun-totin', car-chasin' and head-bashin' of T. J. Hooker, Mr. T and Simon and Simon.

But the spirit of strength and goodness, as conveyed by a cereal box, goes on. Now it's a blond, handsome Olympic champion or some other outstanding amateur athlete making the appeal on a TV screen during Saturday morning cartoons.

Over the years, Wheaties have become a continuing thread in the fabric of our social structure — "as American as baseball, Kate Smith and apple pie.".

The producers of the cereal, General Mills, Inc., touched many a nostalgic nerve when they gathered many of their illustrious alumni to New York this week for the 50th anniversary of their theme: "Wheaties — Breakfast of Champions."

They included Red Barber, one of the original radio baseball broadcasters; Olympic gold medalists Bob Mathias and Bob Richards, basketball great George Mikan, Yogi Berra, Phil Rizzuto and other baseball personalities.

The event also launched a "Search for Champions" campaign in which outstanding amateur athletes from throughout the country are chosen to grace the cereal box.

THE LATE Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig were among the first to endorse the product, and both figured in interesting radio foulups that have become part of the industry's deathless lore.

Gehrig had been signed to endorse Wheaties but later was lured away by a rival product, Huskies, no longer in existence. On a national radio hookup Gehrig was giving his commercial spiel, which ended with, "Kids, don't forget to eat my favorite cereal — Wheaties."

Newspapers had a field day with the slip of the tongue, generating publicity for both products which would not have been otherwise possible.

Babe Ruth was in a studio rehearsing one his commercials promoting Wheaties as an ingredient for cookies.

"So, boys and girls," he said, "ask your mother to buy Wheaties so you can have some of these wonderful kookies."

"Babe," amonished the director, "it's cookies, not kookies. Let's try it again." The Babe tried two more times. Each time it came out "kookies."

"Aw, I know it's cookies," said the Babe. "I'll be okay."

So on he went — live — but at the end he repeated "kookies."

The staff gasped. There was an awkward pause. Then the Babe growled — for all the country to hear: "I'm a SOB if I didn't say 'kookies' again."

BESIDES THE "Jack Armstrong" show, the cereal also sponsored widespread radio baseball broadcasts, starting with one station, WCCO in Minneapolis, in 1937 and spreading in a few years to 95 stations in various major league and minor league cities.

Red Barber, later renowned as "Voice of the Dodgers," first broadcast with the Cincinnati Reds in the early 1930s.

Although scores of the nation's sports celebrities were used for endorsements, Bob Richards had the longest exposure as official spokesman — 13 years, from 1958 to 1970.

When Wheaties had a contest for the best baseball broadcaster of the Midwest in 1937 the winner was a young man working out of Des Moines. His prize: A paid trip to Hollywood. Ronald Reagan went, stayed, later became president of the United States.

The last athlete to be pictured on a Wheaties box was Bruce Jenner, 1976 Olympic decathlon winner.

Utah's gamble on Eaton helps snap Boston streak

By The Associated Press

Seven-foot-4 Mark Eaton was so slow and unpolished that he hardly played as a collegian at UCLA. The Utah Jazz took a chance on him, however, and sometimes the gamble pays off with aces.

Eaton scored 10 of his 17 points in the final quarter and blocked two shots in the final three minutes as the Jazz snapped Boston's nine-game winning streak with a 122-109 National Basketball Association decision Wednesday night.

"Eaton was the difference. He was the whole story," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "What did he do — block 10 to 15 shots? He would not let us shoot inside. None of us shot from the outside."

NBA

Eaton, the heaviest player in the NBA at 290 pounds, actually rejected six Boston shots as the surprising Jazz improved their record to 5-5 before a crowd of 12,743, the club's largest attendance since it moved to Utah in 1979. Boston is 9-2, still the best mark in the league.

In other NBA games, Philadelphia tripped New York 102-97, Detroit edged Seattle 122-120 and Phoenix beat Cleveland 115-104.

The Jazz led 94-85 at the end of the third period, but the Celtics cut that to 98-96 with 7:19 left in the game on Larry Bird's basket from the corner. Bird, center Robert Parish and guard Gerald Henderson keyed the 11-4 Celtics spurt.

Parish, who finished with 25 points to lead Boston, scored on a turnaround jump shot with 4:26 left to cut Utah's lead to 103-100.

Then Eaton saved the Jazz, blocking a shot by Bird with 2:43 to go and scoring at the other end. Less than a minute later, Eaton rejected a shot by Boston's Kevin McHale and converted a three-point play to put Utah up 109-100 with 1:49 left.

The Jazz held the lead from there with the help of three technical foul calls on the Celtics.

"Mark can do anything," Jazz Coach Frank Layden said. "But he isn't always on the floor. If he gets his minutes, he then shows production."

"I wanted to get a rebound, block a shot, do anything to just get something going," said Eaton of the closing moments.

Once the Jazz rebuilt the lead, Eaton said, "All I could think was, 'We're beating the Boston Celtics. We're beating the Boston Celtics.' "

John Drew and Adrian Dantley, the NBA's leading scorer, led the Jazz in scoring with 29 and 26 points, respectively. Drew had 14 points in the second quarter to help the Jazz take a 68-59 halftime lead.

McHale finished with 24 points, while Henderson had 19 for the Celtics. Bird, the fifth-leading scorer in the league with a 26-point average hit only four of 15 shots for eight points.

76ers 102, Knicks 97

Julius Erving scored 28 points, five of them consecutively down the stretch, to help Philadelphia capture a home victory over New York.

Erving tapped in a rebound with 1:22 to go to break a 95-95 tie, then followed that with a free throw and a layup to put the 76ers ahead 100-95.

Andrew Toney added 23 points and Moses Malone 21 for Philadelphia, while Bill Cartwright led the Knicks with 20.

Suns 115, Cavaliers 104

At Phoenix, Walter Davis scored 35 points, including a three-point play at the start of the fourth quarter that put the Suns ahead to stay against Cleveland.

The Cavaliers, who got 24 points from Lonnie Shelton, led for most of the first three quarters and had a 74-72 lead going into the final period. But Davis' three-point play gave the Suns a 75-74 edge and started a 33-20 advantage in the fourth quarter.

Pistons 122, SuperSonics 120

Kelly Tripucka scored 31 points for the Pistons at Detroit and twice hit field goals immediately after Seattle had pulled to within one point in the fourth quarter.

Bill Laimbeer added 28 points and 13 rebounds for the Pistons, including 17 points in the first quarter. Isiah Thomas had 27 points for Detroit, which beat the SuperSonics for only the third time in their last 19 meetings.

Jack Sikma led Seattle with 25 points.

Tickets for the game will be $3 for adults and $1 for students.

Western finish will determine Winston winner

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — It's showdown time on NAS-CAR's Grand National stock car circuit.

The Winston Western 500, the finale of the 30-race Grand National schedule, will be run Sunday with the Winston Cup championship to be won by either Bobby Allison or Darrell Waltrip.

This is the third straight year that the season championship has come down to this race.

Two years ago, Waltrip came in leading by 83 points and wound up winning his first Winston Cup title by 53 points when he drove to a sixth-place finish while the charging Allison won the race.

Last November, Waltrip, who has chased down Allison each of the past two years, had a 22-point lead going into this 500-kilometer event.

Waltrip finished third, behind winner Tim Richmond, while the frustrated Allison suffered through tire and engine problems and was a disappointing 16th.

"That one hurt," Allison admitted. "Two years ago, we knew it would take a miracle to catch Darrell. But, last year was certainly more disappointing and depressing. We thought we could win. Instead, we came up short — again."

This time, Allison has held onto the point lead, and goes into Sunday's race 64 points ahead of Waltrip. The 46-year-old veteran, who never has won a Grand National championship, needs to finish 13th or better to keep Waltrip from equalling Cale Yarborough's record string of three straight Winston Cup titles (1976-77-78).

"I don't know if he (Allison) will be conservative or go for it," Waltrip said. "But I know we're going to have to try to win the race and just hope. I know I'd like to be closer going in."

Practice began Thursday, with qualifying for the first 25 positions scheduled Friday. The rest of the 35-car field will be filled Saturday.

Johnson one of Rebels' major college prospects

JOHNSON IS another of Lee's major college prospects. He is going to have a good variety to chose from.

"Michael will be a great college player," said Miller. "He has the height and quickness right now to play college ball. Colleges like that height in the middle. I think he could play anywhere he wanted to."

Amarillo High coach Larry Dipple said of Johnson, "You can tell the Lee defense is built around that middle linebacker (Johnson). He is an awesome player. You don't see many like him in high school."

And now Johnson and his defensive unit goes against the pass-happy and undefeated Rockets of Irvin Friday. It will be another big test for the Rebel defense.

"We'll play well. We know what we have to do," said Johnson.

So, cash that in the bank.

SMU apologizes for Sun Bowl statements

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Southern Methodist officials have apologized to this West Texas city and Sun Bowl officials for some remarks their football players made about El Paso, and a bowl spokesman says "everything should be fine now."

"We're looking forward to the game and I think once these men get here, they'll see the Sun Bowl is just great," said Tom Starr, Sun Bowl executive director.

While bowl invitations cannot be issued until Saturday, Starr said SMU and Alabama are expected to be asked to play in the Dec. 24 Sun Bowl.

That announcement, made earlier this week, disappointed some SMU players, who had hoped to play their final game of the season in a New Year's Day bowl, Starr said.

"They've been the best team in the country for the last three years and they wanted a chance to prove it in a New Year's Day bowl," Starr said Wednesday. "I don't think they were consciously trying to put down the Sun Bowl or El Paso. They were just angry at the New Year's Day bowls for not picking them."

The athletes' comments about the Sun Bowl ranged from: "El Paso. Pitiful town." to: "We're talking about getting seriously shafted."

"I'm not fired up about going to El Paso," said quarterback Lance McIlhenny. "I believe we deserve better than that."

THE NO. 6-ranked Mustangs have two games left against Arkansas and Houston. Their only loss is to Texas, which can earn the Cotton Bowl Saturday with a victory over Baylor.

SMU was under consideration by the Sugar Bowl before a deal was made between the winner of the Michigan and Ohio State game.

Despite the players' comments, Starr said SMU Athletic Director Bob Hitch told him the team voted Tuesday night on whether to play in the Sun Bowl.

"They voted unanimously to come," Starr said, adding that Hitch formally apologized for the remarks.

"I can understand their frustration, but once they've been here, their frustration will go away," Starr said.

He said the negative comments "just kind of roll off my back. I don't want to see anybody putting down El Paso, but I think these guys were just upset. I know that they're good men."

He said he has heard nothing but positive comments from Alabama.

"Everything's very good from there," he said.

Western New Mexico lands three on All-RMAC team

DENVER (AP) — Western New Mexico placed three players on the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference all-conference first team.

Place kicker Carey Starnes and kick returner Jay Ogle were named to the offensive unit and Mike Arent was picked for the defensive line.

Starnes tied the RMAC record for field goals in a season with 14 on 21 tries, while Ogle averaged 15.5 yards per punt return and 25.5 yards on run-backs of kickoffs.

No players from New Mexico Highlands, New Mexico's other RMAC team, were named to the squad.

League champion Mesa College topped the all-conference selections with 11 players.

The Mavericks, 9-0-1 overall and 7-0-1 in the RMAC, captured their second straight league title under head Coach Bob Cortese. Six Mavericks were selected to the first offensive team, while five were named to the top defensive squad.

Quarterback Bill Monson, who set an NAIA record with 178 straight passes without an interception, was a key member of the offensive unit, as were running backs Russ Hodgson and Jerry Larghe.

Hodgson led the league in rushing, averaging 110.6 yards per game, while Larghe was the leader in overall yards at 1,023 yards for 10 games. Tight end Keith Howard, who averaged 16.2 yards on 22 catches and six touchdowns, earned offensive accolades, as did linemen Jeff Peak and Mike Berk.

Defensively, linemen Dean Haugum and Tony Streno, linebackers Jeff Tootle and John Mark Chisholm, and defensive back Tim Donohoue were named to the first-string RMAC unit.

Southern Colorado placed the next highest number on the all-league first team at five. Herman Heard led the pack at running back after gaining 1,011 yards this season.

Unbeaten Moriarty meets defending AAA champion Artesia Friday night

By The Associated Press

Unbeaten Moriarty, its 21-game winning streak very much in evidence, meets defending champion Artesia Friday night in the quarterfinal round of the Class AAA high school football playoffs.

The collision between the No. 2 ranked Pintos and No. 4 rated Bulldogs tops the four-game card in the opening week of the AAA playoffs.

Top-ranked St. Pius, 9-0, will be at home Friday night against Raton, 7-3; Silver City, 7-3-1, travels to Portales, 6-3, and Los Lunas, 7-3, is at Bloomfield, 8-3.

The Moriarty-Artesia clash is expected to be the closest battle and in light of that, Moriarty school officials spent part of this week adding bleachers along the sidelines at the high school stadium.

The Pintos captured back-to-back Class AA football titles in 1981 and 1982 and moved into Class AAA this season without breaking stride. They ran off 10 straight victories en route to the District 2AAA title and haven't lost a football game since September 1982.

Moriarty Coach Ted Hern says the streak isn't on the minds of his players.

"We haven't felt any pressure," said Hern. "We're the new kid on the block and so most people don't expect too much from us."

Artesia Coach Mike Phipps, however, has made the streak a part of his psychological menu for his Bulldogs this week.

"They are 21-0 and have won two straight state championships," said Phipps. "Anytime a team has won 21 straight, you have to think about it."

WHAT MAKES Moriarty different from most other teams is its offense. The Pintos are one of only two teams in the state that run the supposedly outdates single wing and Phipps says he hasn't seen it in 20 years as a player and coach.

"Our main problem will be finding the football," said Phipps. "In that offense everyone in their backfield is spinning, turning and moving and we're not even sure how we're going to line up against it."

Moriarty can run a variety of plays off the single wing and most of them originate with back Ken Keller, who has rushed for 1,426 yards and 24 touchdowns this season.

"Keller could play for any team in the state," Phipps said. "He's as good a back as we've faced this year."

Artesia will counter with a dimunitive but deceptively fast halfback in senior Jeff Sanders. Sanders has churned out 1,129 yards this season.

The Bulldogs posted a modest 5-5 regular season record, but three of those losses were to AAAA members Roswell, Hobbs and Carlsbad early in the year.

The Silver City-Portales matchup will reunite a pair of old playoff rivals.

Portales beat Silver City 20-16 in the 1981 title game and Silver City pulled ot a 17-16 win last year in the quarterfinal round of the playoffs. Silver City eventually lost to Artesia in the championship game.

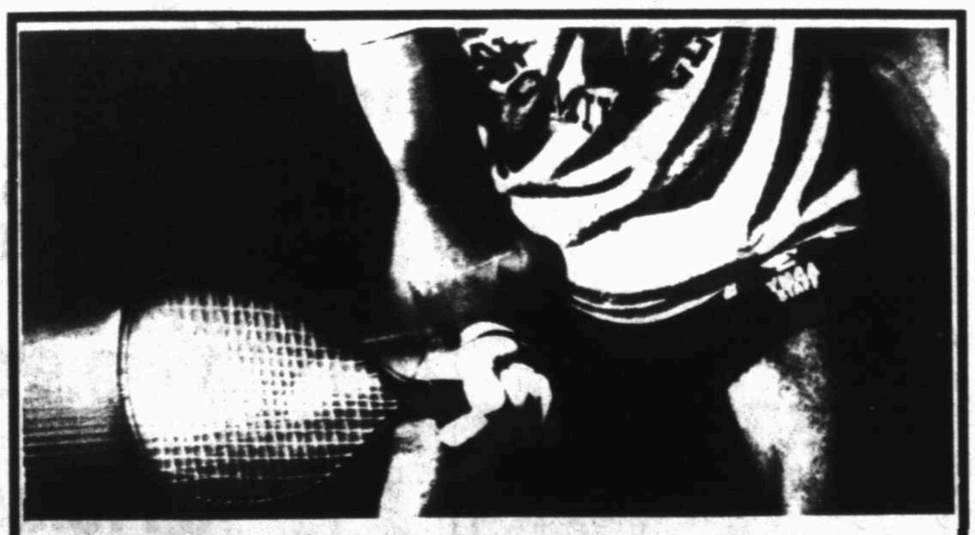

Silver City won its eighth straight District 3AAA title under Coach George Janes and is working on a five-game winning streak while Portales was the champion in District 4AAA.

St. Pius rolled through its regular season schedule en route to the District 5AAA title. The Sartans are 19-2 over the last two years and are heavily favored to beat a Raton team that finished second to Moriarty in 2AAA.

Bloomfield has won six straight games, including a 14-12 win over Truth or Consequences last week in a preplayoff game. Los Lunas, the runner-up to St. Pius in their district, got to the playoffs with a consistent performance throughout the season.

The Class AA semifinals will also be played this week with Animas, 8-1, at Jal, 7-4, and Eunice, 7-4, traveling to Tularosa, 7-3.

Animas trounced Clayton 41-14, Jal beat Estancia 25-8, Eunice trounced Santa Rosa 33-15 and Tularosa beat Laguna Acoma 31-6 in last week's quarterfinals.

Blake defends Kings from Canucks' attack

By The Associated Press

It's tough enough being a rookie in the National Hockey League. When you're a rookie goaltender and you aren't sure where you stand in your team's plans, it can be murder.

Mike Blake knows all about that. The first-year goalie for the Los Angeles Kings was sent to the minor leagues during training camp, then recalled when Coach Don Perry reconsidered. He opened the season sharing the goaltending duties with veteran Mario Lessard.

Slowly, Blake moved ahead of Lessard in the Kings' net and now is No. 1. Against Vancouver Wednesday night, he stopped 30 shots to register the team's third straight victory, a 5-2 decision over the Canucks.

"I feel very confident in the net now," said Blake, who was at his best in the second period when he stopped a half-dozen shots on a Vancouver power play. "I'm pleased with my play. I know I can play better. Coming up with saves is the name of the game. The team's playing a lot steadier in front of me now."

Blake feels more secure now with the Kings, who moved into a tie with Vancouver and Calgary for second place in the Smythe Division.

"My confidence has been restored since I've been playing," he said. "If you have a bad game in the net, you could always bounce back the next night because you know you'll be starting."

Fellow rookie Kevin McClelland scored twice for Los Angeles.

"We weren't great tonight but it wasn't a 5-2 game either," said Vancouver Coach Roger Neilson. "We've been in every game this season so far, but two, and one of them was tonight. It's been a little frustrating.

"The turning point came in the second period when Blake came up with six or seven saves on our power play."

Sabres 6, Jets 5

Buffalo made short work of Winnipeg in overtime. Defenseman Mike Ramsey slapped home a shot 17 seconds into the extra period.

The Sabres trailed 3-0 after 10:56 of the contest, but they relentlessly climbed back and led 5-4 before Morris Lukowich tied it at 6:45 of the third period.

Phil Housley and Sean McKenna both had a goal and two assists for Buffalo.

NHL

"Scotty (Sabres Coach Scotty Bowman) didn't say much after the first period," said Ramsey. "He said just to keep going. They just had a short flurry of three goals. Otherwise we played well."

"It's a situation of a missed check, a shot and it's game over," said Jets Coach John Ferguson.

Rangers 4, Capitals 1

The Rangers made a complete turnaround from their last meeting with Washington, a 7-4 victory for the Capitals. Goalie Glen Hanlon made 27 saves, while Reijo Ruotsalainen (who had eight shots), Don Maloney, Anders Hedberg and Mark Osborne provided the goals.

"The big thing was the forwards were coming back to help all night," said Hanlon, who is 4-0-0 at home. "We played well defensively the whole night.

The Capitals, whose only goal was by Chris Valentine on a power play, stopped New York's streak of 10 consecutive games with at least one power play score.

Maple Leafs 3, Penguins 2

Pittsburgh remained the only NHL team without a victory at home (0-9-1). Greg Terrion snapped a 2-2 tie with a breakaway goal at 3:11 of the third period, taking a pass from Billy Harris and beating Penguins goalie Denis Herron.

Toronto goalie Mike Palmateer was ejected in the second period when he was the third man into a fight between the Leafs' Dave Hutchison and Pittsburgh's Kevin McClelland. He

Duck stamp may earn a million

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

William Morris of Mobile, Ala., may earn $1.5 million to $2 million for his painting of two widgeons, selected as the design for the 50th anniversary federal "duck stamp."

Hunters must buy a $7.50 duck stamp before going into the field to seek migratory waterfowl — ducks, geese and other birds. More than 2 million will be sold, bringing in more than $15 million to buy and preserve wetlands habitat.

The golden anniversary stamp, bearing a tiny reprint of Morris' watercolor painting, goes on sale July 1. Morris will make his money from sales of commemorative prints by art dealers.

"My life since Wednesday (Nov. 2, when his design was picked by judges in Washington) has really taken a major change," Morris, 38, said. "It's unreal. The quiet life in Mobile is over."

An "insatiable" waterfowl hunter and fisherman who has no formal art training, Morris said the fact that his picture will be on the duck stamp means something special.

"We're losing literally hundreds of thousands of acres a year in wetlands," Morris said. "We're just gradually having all the wildfowl in a vice and we're slowly closing it down.

"OBVIOUSLY there's a desire for living around water, people's natural attaction to water. This is a water planet, let's face it. But it's these kinds of programs, and others like Ducks Unlimited (which buy and preserve wetlands), that can help. I don't know whether we're stopping the vice, but maybe we're slowing it down."

Since the duck stamp was inaugurated for the 1934-35 hunting season, more than 84 million of them have been sold, bringing in $256 million for the national wildlife refuge system.

The system now includes 417 refuges and 90 million acres of land, 2.5 million of which were purchased with duck stamp funds.

Morris, who said he is quitting his job as an electrical equipment salesman to go into art full time, began painting as a hobby.

"Living in Alabama, the natural thing I turned to, the first painting I did, was a painting of (University of Alabama football Coach Paul 'Bear') Bryant," he said. The painting and prints sold, but Morris "wasn't sure whether people were accepting me as an artist or were buying subject matter. Then I did a marine scene of a shrimpboat which enjoyed a great deal of success. I turned to wildlife in 1980."

IN 1983, one of his paintings was chosen for the Alabama waterfowl stamp and "the natural step after winning the state stamp is to pursue the federal stamp," he said.

He chose widgeons for his subject because there are some in the area, and for both technical and artistic reasons.

"I had heard that the engravers for last year's entry had a real problem with the entry because the entry had a strong light source on the painting," he said.

"I heard that one of the strong criteria for this year's judging would be how well it would engrave," he said. "I felt the widgeons offered the strong contrast that would be an engraver's delight. Also I felt like that it was a colorful enough bird to provide the initial impact that was needed."

Natalia learning winning tradition

NATALIA (AP) — Dub Wells makes the five-mile trip from his Lytle home to Natalia High School five days a week.

When you're the undefeated football coach at Natalia and get your team into the playoffs — and that team thrashed Lytle 42-0 — fans in both South Texas towns talk.

"I live in Lytle, a block from the high school football field," said Wells, who coached there before moving south down Highway 81 to Natalia.

"When I came here five years ago, there was a lot of concern about me living in Lytle,' he said. "I think some people thought I might try to throw the Natalia-Lytle game.

"Now people in Lytle probably resent me living in Lytle more than the people in Natalia do," he said.

While one 10-0 record hardly makes a dynasty, Wells has put together 6-4, 5-5, 6-4, 7-3-2 and 10-0 seasons. He and some of his players think they are establishing a winning attitude at a school never known for winning football tradition.

"You can learn how to lose and like it," Wells said. "It can be habitforming. But winning can be habitforming too."

"These kids think they can win all the time, even when maybe they shouldn't," he said. "This is a foundation."

LAST YEAR, the 2A Mustangs captured their first bi-district title since 1950.

Wells got his first indication of what his players could do in the second game, against Southside. The Mustangs overwhelmed Southside 42-7 this year, after losing 25-6 the year before.

In the next game, Natalia came from behind to edge La Vernia 14-12.

"When we got behind, the kids didn't push the panic button," Wells said proudly.

The Mustangs also had a scare against Sabinal, finally winning 3-0.

"We outplayed Sabinal and had six penetrations, but only one field goal," Wells said. "I started to worry about us because it was like we weren't concentrating. We couldn't do anything inside the 20."

The big game, of course, was against arch-rival Lytle, when the Mustangs rolled up 416 total yards.

"There was no bragging or big talk," Wells said. "These kids don't show a lot of outward emotion. They don't stick their fingers in the air saying they're No. 1."

"We have no stars on this team — just good, solid athletes," he said. "There's not a kid on this team I wouldn't want to talk to five years from now. I couldn't say that about other kids I've coached."

NATALIA'S 1983 success story hasn't been surprising, according to a couple of Mustangs.

"At the beginning of the year, we set a 10-0 goal," said cornerback Clinton Shellhouse. "This kind of year will make next year more successful. We've gotten used to winning."

"I feel we are setting a winning tradition," said quarterback Ted Juarez. "We all play as a team and not as a bunch of individuals. There are no personal rivalries on this team."

Their coach readily agreed.

"When I came here, there was very little external pressure to win," he said. "The best thing you could do was beat Lytle. If you could do that, the season was made."

"These kids didn't have the expectations I had," he said. "I believe we started to teach them how to win."

Japanese players demoralized by American salaries

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's baseball commissioner says Japanese players are demoralized by the higher salaries paid to Americans playing there, and indicated the day may come when teams consist only of Japanese.

Takeso Shimoda, a former ambassador to the United States, was quoted by the Japan Times today as saying, "Japanese technical skills are improving. Someday Japanese teams should be composed solely of Japanese players. This is the ideal situation, but I do not know exactly when that time will come."

Each of Japan's 12 pro teams is permitted to have two non-Japanese on its roster. Nearly all the foreigners are Americans, most of them coming here after careers in the U.S. major leagues.

Shimoda said most Japanese players feel they are better than the Americans playing here.

"About 80 percent of the American baseball players who come to Japan are not very good. They are old, they are at the end of their careers, and they are not really contributing to the game," Shimoda told the newspaper, an English-language daily.

Among the Americans is Reggie Smith, the former major league slugger, signed by the Yomiuri Giants in 1983 for nearly a million dollars, the paper said.

Salaries for the foreigners average four to five times those paid to their Japanese counterparts, the article said.

Smith, 39, hit .285 and had 28 home runs despite being hampered by injuries, and the Central League champion Yomiuri Giants came within a game of winning the Japan Series, played between the winners of the Central and Pacific league champions.

The winners of the Pacific League, the Seibu Lions, were greatly bolstered by the presence of two of the top foreign players in Japan. Terry Whitfield, a former major leaguer, slugged 38 home runs, 109 RBIs, and hit .278 for the Lions, while teammate Steve Ontiveros, a another former major leaguer, was second in the Pacific League with a .321 average.

There were about 22 Americans playing in Japan's two pro leagues last season. In the Central League, five Americans were among the top hitters, while in the Pacific League, seven American hitters were among the leaders, including four of the top seven.

Shimoda also said he was upset by the large amounts of money young Japanese stars earn from commercial endorsements.

"If young players get huge amounts of money to build luxurious mansions (condominiums) and buy luxurious foreign cars, they no longer have motivation," he said.

Drug problem puts Medich's medical career on hold

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Former New York Yankees' pitcher Dr. George "Doc" Medich, arrested for writing illegal prescriptions, won't return to his full practice until he kicks his drug dependency, according to officials at Children's Hospital.

Medich, 34, who spent 11 years in professional baseball, was arrested this week for improperly writing prescriptions for pain killers and muscle relaxants. A Children's Hospital official announced Wednesday that Medich is being treated for a drug dependency.

Since July 1, Medich, a former pitcher for the Yankees, Pittsburgh Pirates and Texas Rangers, has been working in the residency program at Children's Hospital as part of a five-year specialization in orthopedic surgery at the University (of Pittsburgh) Health Center. Hospital officials said they learned of his drug habit only last week.

"We saw to it he immediately underwent medical care and observation," said Dr. William F. Donaldson, medical director at Children's.

"Until we can be assured by the people who are caring for him that he is not under medication, he will not go into the operating room. (But) he is still seeing patients," Donaldson said. "As far as I'm concerned, he was handling his residency very well. He's such a fine person, and he's a good doctor.

"The appropriate way for us to look upon it (the drug problem) is an illness. When the people treating him indicate he is OK, he will go back to his regular duties."

MEDICH, HOWEVER, sees both his license to practice medicine and his new career in jeopardy. He also risks the possibility of one year in jail and a $5,000 fine for each of the seven prescriptions he is charged with writing.

Between July and October, Medich allegedly wrote prescriptions at an Oakland pharmacy for several drugs, including 121 tablets of Percodan, a pain killer; a high blood pressure medication called Catapres; the muscle relaxant F lexeril and an anti-inflammation drug called Indocin.

The attorney general's office said the prescriptions were written either for ghost patients or for patients who never received the drugs.

Like Valium, Percodan is a drug that is often abused and can lead to dependency.

Medich's case has been forwarded to the state medical licensing board, which reviews drug-related charges against persons handling or providing prescriptions.

Dr. Shirley Hall, director of Western Psychiatric Institute and Clinic in Pittsburgh, said the problem of drug dependency by doctors has become more widespread in recent years.

ATT expects increased profits despite breakup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. on Jan. 1 will not threaten the dividends currently being paid to stockholders, and thanks to an improving national economy, overall profits should actually increase in 1984, the company says.

Unveiling more than 13,000 pages of financial information and projections filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission, AT&T and seven soon-to-be-independent regional Bell companies said they planned to increase slightly their cash dividends in the first quarter of 1984.

For comparison purposes, the increase works out to the equivalent of a $1.365 quarterly dividend compared to the $1.35 paid now on each existing share of AT&T stock.

In other words, someone who owns 10 shares of AT&T stock now receives $13.50 in quarterly dividends. For the first quarter of 1984, that same individual will receive a 30-cent cash dividend for each of his AT&T shares — or $3 — plus $10.65 from the seven regional companies, for a total of $13.65.

AT&T AND THE new regional companies, on a consolidated basis, also projected total net income next year of $8.7 billion. The projected net income for the "new" AT&T in 1984 totals $2.1 billion, compared to $6.6 billion for the seven regional companies combined.

AT&T refused to predict what its fourth-quarter performance this year would be, meaning it was impossible to compare the combined 1984 projection of $8.7 billion to calendar 1983 results.

Other figures made clear, however, the companies are projecting improved earnings. For example, for the 12 months ending June 30, AT&T said its net income had totaled $7.2 billion. Expressed another way, AT&T said its earnings per share totaled $7.88 during the year ending June 30, while the 1984 projections show a combined figure of $8.70 per share.

Company officials attributed their 1984 projections to the improving economy, the slowdown in inflation, and increased investments in facilities on which the companies are allowed to earn a regulated profit margin.

AT&T is giving up ownership of its 22 wholly owned Bell System companies on Jan. 1 to comply with a government antitrust settlement. The 22 Bell companies, in turn, are being divided among seven regional companies. Under AT&T's reorganization plan, existing stockholders will keep their stock in AT&T while also receiving one share of stock in each of the seven regional holding companies for every 10 shares of their AT&T stock.

TRADING IN THE stock of the "new" AT&T and the seven regional firms will begin Nov. 21 on a "when-issued" basis, meaning transactions are binding but stock certificates won't be available until mid-February. AT&T and the regional companies had to produce prospectus statements for the SEC and their stockholders before such trading could begin.

AT&T executives acknowledged Wednesday stockholders won't find the prospectus easy reading. For example, one financial table contrasts projected 1984 revenues and earnings with actual performance for the year ending June 30, 1983. Using that table, all but one of the seven regional companies are facing a drop in operating revenues next year.

The problem, however, is that the 1983 figures reflect the lines of business in which the Bell companies are engaged now, including such things as intrastate long-distance service, while the 1984 figures are based solely on the businesses the companies will be engaged in after the breakup. The two amount to "apples and oranges," said AT&T financial officer Robert E. Allen, "and there is no way I know of to make a comparison (for the regional companies) with 1983 to 1984."

Allen also noted the projections are based on an assumption that the Federal Communications Commission will allow a new system of customer "access charges" to be imposed in April. That system calls for residential customers to begin paying their local phone company $2 a month to offset a reduction in subsidies from long-distance service. If Congress enacts legislation it is now considering to overturn the FCC's plan, all the projections would change significantly, Allen said.

Study charges agency not monitoring gas prices

By KNUT ROYCE
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Natural gas producers may be illegally overcharging customers hundreds of millions of dollars because the federal agency responsible for monitoring the prices is failing to do so, a congressional study has charged.

At issue, according to the study, is the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's "apparent inattention" in ensuring that cheap gas from wells that entered production before 1973 is not being sold as more expensive new gas.

The study is a staff report prepared by the oversight subcommittee of the House Committee on Energy and Commerce. The subcommittee's chairman, Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., asked the commission to respond by Dec. 4 whether it has the tabulated data needed to review what he termed the "systematic pattern of 'questionable' pricing" by gas producers.

The underlying problem, according to the report, is that the commission has failed to enforce pre-1973 gas prices set by the 1978 Natural Gas Policy Act (NPGA) because it has not crosschecked pre-1973 contracts against pre-1973 gas well production starts, which are the pricing benchmarks.

THE STAFF REPORT argues that the commission has only tabulated pre-1973 contracts. It says that tabulation of those contracts, most of which are long-term, do not show whether the gas comes from wells that started production before 1973 or after—the so-called "spud" dates.

The commission has the spud dates on a contract-by-contract basis, but those documents are in storage and their data have never been compiled, according to a subcommittee source.

The prices of different vintages of gas under the 1978 decontrol act are substantial. The ceiling price last year for large producers of pre-1973 gas, for example, was 81 cents per thousand cubic feet. The same gas coming from newer wells could be sold for about $2.20. Special contractual riders, such as passing on taxes, can drive the prices up slightly.

The commission argues that it is charged with establishing "incentive pricing" to encourage exploration for new gas. Asked why spud dates of pre-1973 gas are not being monitored, spokesperson Rachelle Patterson said it was "because this is not required for compliance with the NPGA."

A SUBCOMMITTEE source, who asked not to be identified, said, "Well, that's a new line."

The energy committee and the oversight subcommittee have clashed with the commission on the question of monitoring prices of "old" gas for nearly a year. Charles M. Butler III, until recently the commission chairman, had been pursuing the Reagan administration's policy that all gas should be speedily decontrolled, and last year said that the commission should find administrative ways to increase gas prices.

The subcommittee noted that 41 percent of pre-1973 "contract" gas with large producers was selling last year for more than the maximum of 81 cents per thousand cubic feet permitted for pre-1973 "spud" gas, accounting for 70 percent of the $2 billion paid by pipeline companies for that gas.

Union Oil, for instance, sold the gas to Texas Eastern for $3.13. At the other extreme, Gulf Oil, bound by old long-term contracts, was selling the same gas for 39 cents.

ASKED BY THE committee earlier this year to explain why pre-1973 "contract" gas was selling for more than than pre-1973 "spud" gas, the commission responded that this was because half of the pre-1973 "contract" gas was coming out of wells that began producing after 1974, thus qualifying for the highest rate of $2.20.

The committee quickly pointed out that simple mathematics showed that this claim was improbable, since the average price was about 90 cents. The other 50 percent of the gas would have had to be sold at a "negative price."

The committee also found that the average price of all old gas, including the 1973-74 "biennium" gas, was $1.30 last year, or 34 percent above what would have been the price had it escalated through inflation alone. It said that there may be valid reasons to account for the difference, but that the commission had not provided the data to support them.

In his sharply-worded letter to the commission, which was dated Nov. 4, Dingell charged that earlier requests for information had been "inadequate." "The subcommittee wants those questions (on the vintage pricing of old gas) resolved," he wrote, "not put off by further evasive responses and speculations from the commission staff."

He threatened to hold hearings on the pricing dispute or to institute "other processes," presumably subpoenas, to get the data.

Patterson, the commission's spokesperson, said "a detailed response" was being prepared.

TAE reports higher revenues, less loss

Texas American Energy Corporation, Midland, reported its results for the third quarter and nine months ended Sept. 30, 1983, which included a third quarter write-off as discontinued operations of the remaining net book value of its refinery which had been closed since 1981.

For the nine month period ended Sept. 30, 1983, consolidated revenues from continuing operations were $138,424,000, as compared with $127,427,000 during this same period in 1982. The loss from continuing operations during this period was $405,000, or $.06 per share, as compared with a net loss of $1,113,000, or $.16 per share from continuing operations during the first nine months of 1982. The loss from the discontinued refining and gasoline brokerage business in Michigan, including the third quarter charge of $3,200,000 for the write-off of the remaining net book value of the idle facilities and the accrual of estimated future costs related to those facilities, was $3,564,000, or $.52 per share for the nine month period. This compares to a loss from discontinued operations of $251,000, or $.04 per share during the same period in 1982.

Total working capital provided from operations (cash flow) for the nine month period was $11.6 million, an increase of $1.8 million over the similar period in 1982. These funds were primarily used for capital expenditures.

For the three months ended Sept. 30, 1983, consolidated revenues from continuing operations were $30,540,000 as compared with $30,209,000 for the same period in 1982. The loss from continuing operations was $2,029,000 or $.30 per share, compared with a loss of $1,452,000 or $.21 per share a year earlier. These losses are primarily attributable to the seasonal nature of the company's gas utility. The loss from discontinued operations was $3,315,000 or $.48 per share, as compared with a loss of $81,000 or $.01 per share during the third quarter of 1982.

In reporting on the decision to write off the refinery and brokerage business during the quarter, William F. Judd, president, stated, "Although in the overall picture the refinery has been a positive contributor to both income and cash flow since it was acquired in 1976, with the advent of decontrol of oil prices and the related termination of the entitlements program in January 1981, the refinery began operating at a significant loss. As a result it was closed late in 1981 and mothballed in early 1982." He continued, "We have been carrying the net cost of the plant and equipment as 'idle plant' since 1981 and have continued to provide depreciation while we explored alternatives for utilizing the facility or selling the plant site."

Power struggle grips Getty Oil

By the Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — A simmering power struggle between Getty Oil Co. and its largest shareholder bubbled to the surface Wednesday, thrusting into public view a backscenes rift that has been brewing for months. The development also raises the possibility that members of the Getty family are feuding as well.

The focus of the wrangle is a petition filed Monday in Los Angeles County Superior Court on behalf of Tara Gabriel Galaxy Gramaphone Getty, the 15-year-old grandson of J. Paul Getty, founder of Getty Oil and reputedly the world's richest man when he died in 1976.

The petition asks the court to appoint San Francisco-based Bank of America as corporate co-trustee with Gordon P. Getty — Tara's uncle — of the Sarah C. Getty Trust, which owns 40.2 percent of Getty Oil's common shares.

The company said Wednesday that it had filed its own motion supporting the petition "because (the firm) agrees with the petition ... that the late J. Paul Getty intended that a corporate trustee serve with Gordon P. Getty...."

A hearing has been set for Dec. 27.

Industry insiders view the company's move as an attempt to diminish Gordon Getty's power at a time when he reportedly is displeased with Getty Oil's management and is maneuvering for more control over the Los Angeles-based company.

Moses Lasky, a San Francisco attorney for the trust, reacted vehemently when told of the original petition filed on behalf of Tara Getty.

"It has no merit or substance and will be opposed," Lasky said Wednesday in a telephone interview from San Francisco. "There is not (a corporate co-trustee), and there is not going to be one. Someone is very misguided.

"I don't know what is stirring Mr. (J. Paul) Getty (Jr.)," he added, referring to Tara's father, who asked the court to appoint Los Angeles attorney Seth M. Hufstedler to act as the youth's guardian for the purposes of pursuing the case.

"Tara is — what? — 13 years old? I'm sure he doesn't know what's going on," Lasky said.

Told that Getty Oil was supporting the petition, Lasky remarked, "interesting, very interesting," but refused to comment further.

Asked if the company's action represents a violation of an agreement it entered last Friday with the trust and its other major shareholder, the J. Paul Getty Museum, Lasky again refused to comment.

Among other things, the agreement increases the shareholders' oversight of management's activities.

The company and Hufstedler contend that a trustee vacancy exists because the senior Getty had directed that, upon his death, Security Pacific National Bank serve as a co-trustee with Gordon and the late C. Lansing Hayes, a former Getty Oil director. Security Pacific never assumed the position, so the vacancy has existed for more than seven years.

Energas Company honors area employees

Chamber committee meets highway chief

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

Robert Lanier, the new chairman of the State Highway Commission, was in Midland Wednesday to discuss the Loop 250 project with members of the Midland Chamber of Commerce transportation committee.

The committee has requested the state to expedite funding for completion of three interchanges along Loop 250 — at Midkiff Road, at Midland Drive and at Highway 158.

Grant Billingsley, executive vice president of the chamber, said the committee's request was made in an effort to avoid further congestion and traffic problems along the Loop.

Lanier told committee members that he understood the problem but said the state currently does not have enough money to properly maintain existing highways, much less construct any new ones. Lanier said the state requires an additional $1.2 billion in order to fund current projects across the state.

Accompanying Lanier were Marcus Goode, executive director for the highway department, and Bill Lancaster, district engineer for this area. State Sen. Bill Simms, D-San Angelo, whose district includes Midland; and State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, also attended the meeting.

John Aldridge, chairman of the transportation committee, said he was not surprised by Lanier's statements.

"We had hoped that he (Lanier) would be able to shed some new light on our problem out here," Aldridge said. "We, along with the many citizens of Midland, just don't feel like the Loop has been built as fast as it could have been. We believe Midland is going to take off again and we don't want to be caught with a highway that won't handle the growth of Midland."

The only way the three interchanges can be built, he said, is if the state is able to find additional funding.

Aldridge said the highway department is considering three possibilities:

—Raising the gasoline tax five cents per gallon.
—Raising the state automobile registration fee.
—Implementing a tax on accessory automobile parts.

Of the three, Aldridge favors increasing the gasoline tax.

Aldridge said his committe plans to monitor the legislature's progress on this funding issue. He also cautioned that until additional funding is acquired, the highway department will be unable to help the city and complete the needed construction.

Good economic signs reported

By The Associated Press

In a sign the economic recovery is still on track, the government reported that factory use rose in October to 78.6 percent of capacity — the 11th straight monthly rise — and further gains are forecast.

The Federal Reserve Board said Wednesday that capacity use was up 0.5 percentage points from September, which in turn had been up 0.9 percentage points from August.

Factories have been able to increase their use of capacity in the past year as they received more orders for manufactured goods. Economists see more gains ahead.

Last month's gain was the smallest since January's 0.3 percentage point increase, but Robert Ortner, chief economist at the Commerce Department, said it was "still nice" and not surprising in light of a report Tuesday on output by American industry.

That report said industrial production also rose for the 11th straight month in October, and that the gain also was smaller than most recent ones.

Industries slowed production dramatically during the recession, pulling the operating rate back to 69.6 percent of capacity last November, the trough of the recession. By comparison, capacity utilization had averaged 82.4 percent in the 15 years starting in 1967.

In other economic developments Wednesday:

—Henry Kaufman, chief economist at the Salomon Brothers investment firm, predicted that interest rates will rise by 1 to 1½ percentage points in the coming year. Kaufman added, however, that "there is considerable room for upward adjustments in interest rates without materially affecting the economy."

—American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and the seven regional Bell telephone companies that will be created Jan. 1, 1984 said in a Securities and Exchange Commission filing they expect increased profits next year. They also said they expect to slightly increase their cash dividends in the first quarter of next year.

Martin re-elected to League post

Tony A. Martin of Midland was re-elected to a two-year term as treasurer of the Texas Research League at the 31st annual meeting of the privately financed governmental research organization recently. Chairman of board and chief executive officer of the First City National Bank of Midland, Martin has been a member of the board since 1979.

Other new officers are chairman T. Boone Pickens Jr., president and chairman of the board, Mesa Petroleum Co., Amarillo; and vice chairman Doyle Rogers, vice president-Texas, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., Dallas.

The League is an Austin-based nonprofit corporation that studies the problems of state and local government.

Job market improved in 41 states

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says the job market improved in 41 states from September 1982 through last September. But the gains in those states were dampened by increases in unemployment in nine states and the nation's capital.

The largest decreases in joblessness during the year-long period were registered in Arizona, New Hampshire and Rhode Island. In those states, unemployment rates plunged three or more percentage points, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said Wednesday.

Here are the September unemployment rates in the 50 states and the District of Columbia, compared with those rates a year ago, as reported on a seasonally unadjusted basis:

West Virginia, 15.1 percent, up from 14 percent; Michigan, 12.3-14.5; Alabama, 12.2-14.8; Louisiana, 11.6-11.2; Mississippi, 11.3-10.8; District of Columbia, 11.1-10.5; Ohio, 11.1-12.3; Kentucky, 10.0-10.1; Pennsylvania, 10.0-10.9; Illinois, 9.8-12.1; Washington state, 9.5-11.3; New Mexico, 9.4-9.3; Tennessee, 9.3-11.3; Arkansas, 9.1-8.9; Indiana, 8.9-11.2; Oregon, 8.6-10.3; Texas, 8.6-8.0; South Carolina, 8.6-10.6; Nevada, 8.4-9.9; California, 8.3-9.7; New York, 8.3-8.4; Missouri, 8.2-9.0; Wisconsin, 8.2-9.9; Florida, 8.1-8.2;

Also, Arizona, 7.9-11.0; New Jersey, 7.7-8.6; Alaska, 7.6-7.9; Oklahoma, 7.5-6.5; Utah, 7.5-7.6; North Carolina, 7.4-8.6; Idaho, 7.3-8.4; Delaware, 7.2-6.8; Maine, 7.1-7.3; Massachusetts, 7.0-7.4; Georgia, 7.0-7.6; Wyoming, 6.9-5.7; Rhode Island, 6.7-9.5; Montana, 6.6-7.2; Minnesota, 6.5-7.3; Hawaii, 6.2-6.7; Colorado, 5.9-7.9; Iowa, 5.9-7.5; Maryland, 5.8-8.1; Virginia, 5.1-7.4; Vermont, 5.0-5.9; Connecticut, 4.9-6.5; Kansas, 4.7-6.7; Nebraska, 4.5-5.7; South Dakota, 4.2-4.9; North Dakota, 3.7-4.5, and New Hampshire, 3.6-6.5.

Dollar higher

LONDON (AP) — The dollar, following an overnight rise in New York, rose against all major currencies in early European trading today. Gold prices fell by around six dollars an ounce.

One London dealer blamed gold's drop on the dollar attracting investors after being boosted by a prediction from Salomon Brothers Inc. chief economist, Henry Kaufman, in Boston that U.S. interest rates would rise.

Higher interest rates make dollar-denominated investments more attractive.

Texas is Conoco Country.

Part V

When fire victims need specialized treatment, they can rely on the comprehensive burn facilities of Hermann Hospital in Houston. When unwed mothers need shelter, they can turn to the Edna Gladney Home in Fort Worth. When the young people of Moore County need a place to learn sports and other constructive activities, they can count on the YMCA. These organizations, as well as many others in Texas, know they can depend on companies like Conoco for help to continue and expand their essential services.

This year alone, Conoco is providing more than $1 million to hospitals and health agencies, colleges and universities, youth projects, social programs, and other worthy causes throughout the state. We help minorities develop job skills through support of SER-Jobs for Progress in Houston. Women for Justice, which provides counselling for women in trouble with the law, benefits from our aid. And the arts—from grand opera to ballet—receive Conoco's support.

When Texas organizations need a helping hand that money can't provide, local Conoco employees reach out by volunteering their time and services. For example, you'll find our people participating in the March of Dimes Teamwalk, acting as interpreters for non-English-speaking hospital patients, serving as advisors for Junior Achievement programs, and raising funds for causes ranging from public television to leukemia.

We believe that supporting programs like these helps make Texas a better place to live and work. And that's important to us, because Texas is Conoco Country.

Senate Democrats unveil 22-point industrial policy

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Senate Democrats Wednesday unveiled a comprehensive 22-point industrial policy that would greatly expand the federal government's role in promoting and financially assisting specifically targeted industries.

The package, a product of nine months' work by a Senate task force headed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D.-Mass., was described by sponsors as vitally needed to correct the country's basic economic problems and end rampant unemployment.

The policy thrust, Kennedy told a news conference, would be to offer programs aimed at rebuilding the economy, bringing about balanced economic growth, guiding the revival of industrial institututions and strengthening the nation's international economic position.

The package called for the creation of a Council on Economic Competitiveness and Cooperation, made up of representatives of labor, business and government. There would also be a National Development Bank, whose activities would be directed by the council, which would invest private and public funds to shape economic development.

THE PROPOSAL WAS approved unanimously by the Senate Democratic Caucus "to meet the twin challenges of international competiton and technological change."

Proponents cite Japan's successful policy of targeting specific industries for favorable bank financing, tax incentives, research aid and other benefits as an example of how government can direct growth.

Outside Japan, industrial policy has often had dismal results. For many years, West European nations have poured vast amounts of aid into their steel industries, which still remain weak and inefficient.

Industrial policy proposals are expected to be included in the 1984 Democratic platform. They are also likely to be denounced by Republicans and some Democrats as totally unecessary.

Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd admitted at a press conference that industrial policy proposals will go nowhere unless the Democrats win the White House. President Reagan staunchly opposes increased government intervention in the economy.

SOME 30 INDUSTRIAL policy bills are currently before various congressional committees, offering various prescriptions for curing the ailing economy.

The business community has generally been opposed but labor unions are pushing the concept with all their political power.

Opponents of the industrial policy idea have been skeptical that the federal government would be better than the workings of the free market in picking industrial winners and losers.

President Reagan, leading the Republican opposition, insists that the government could hurt the economy if it tried to intervene in the marketplace to prop up outmoded industries and install protectionist measures that could trigger retaliation abroad.

Reagan has said many times that the government already has a vast array of tax incentives, trade policies, subsidies and loan programs targeted to specific industries.

EVEN SOME DEMOCRATS, led by Charles L. Schultze, the Brookings Institution economist who served as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers in the Carter administration, have rejected the concept.

In a Brookings Institution article, Schultze maintained that "the belief the U.S. is de-industrializing has no basis in fact," saying he found no evidence that, under even moderately prosperous conditions, U.S. capital and labor could not make gradual transitions from declining to advancing industries.

In releasing "Jobs for the Future," Byrd said the report would provide Congress with a "broad, forward-looking platform on which we can stand. We do not offer magic answers or tricky slogans. Rather, we have proposed a serious and comprehensive response to the challenges that lie ahead."

In addition to the council and the bank, the package called for innovative programs to accelerate the development and commercialization of new products and processes and provide strong support for continued basic research.

Steel workers divided

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Although they presented a united front under the late United Steelworkers President Lloyd McBride, two international officers vied today to succeed him in a race that union leaders said was too close to call.

Union Vice President Joseph Odorcich and Secretary Lynn Williams both claimed Wednesday to have the support to emerge from today's executive board vote as interim president of the union's 750,000 working and 450,000 unemployed members.

The winner will serve until a special election is held. Union officers met Nov. 6, hours after McBride died, and agreed not to campaign until after the Nov. 10 funeral.

Since then, "there's been as much campaigning as is possible to cram in," said Odorcich, 67, the chairman of today's board meeting.

Odorcich claimed support from "more than a majority" of the board members, including treasurer Frank McKee.

But Williams, reportedly McBride's choice as successor and the first Canadian to hold international office in the union, said he also was "very confident" of victory. His backers included Leon Lynch, USW vice president for human affairs.

"Good Oil and Gas Loans Are the Safest Loans in America Today."

Given all the negative press about energy these days, a lot of people are down on the oil and gas industry. They blame it for all kinds of problems.

But that's exactly the opposite of the way we feel at ClayDesta National Bank.

Our bank was started by oil people, is owned by oil people, and is dedicated to serving oil people. We know the business. We like it. And our philosophy isn't going to change just because the economy changes.

Simply stated, good oil and gas lending practices lead to good oil and gas loans. At ClayDesta National, we base energy loans on the value of proved producing properties.

Our people know what they're talking about. We're one of just a handful of Texas banks with oil and gas lenders and engineers on staff. The intelligent professional analysis of proven reserves is the foundation of sound oil and gas lending. And since reserves are going to be there, we know good energy loans are the safest loans any bank can make.

Independent oil operators risked everything they had to establish this great industry. They're still the backbone of it today. And we stand behind 'em.

If you'd like to know more about the way ClayDesta National feels about energy lending, give us a call at 683-2265.

You'll be surprised at how much better you'll feel when you talk to bankers who are high on energy.

You've never seen a bank like ClayDesta.

GOP women's group tries to alter 'country club' image

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Lou Brown

Texas Federation of Republican Women is "Alive and Kickin'" and will be trying to change its "country club" image during the 1984 elections, according to Lou Brown, who turned in her gavel last week after presiding over the 8,500-member organization's biennial convention in Fort Worth.

It wasn't the best two years in the party's state history — bickering spilling over into all Republican groups. But that should be over and TFRW set its goals last week in deciding what it wanted to do next year.

"1982 was a stormy year for us politically," she said of the Republican Party in general. "The election results were difficult."

Party morale scraped bottom last spring during a meeting in Midland of the State Republican Executive Committee. It was here during an evening session that two women from the splintered factions slapped each other. One of them was a member of TFRW.

In the ensuing months a new party chairman was elected, money was raised to pay off the state party's debt and Lou Brown carried out her duties in keeping the individual TFRW clubs moving.

It's the largest women's organization in Texas, she said, with 160 clubs, and ranks third or fourth in the nation.

A MEMBER OF Republican women's clubs in Midland since 1964, Mrs. Brown ended her state post while at the same time taking on the national position of being a member-at-large on the National Federation of Republican Women's executive committee.

"The Republican Party is still coming of age in Texas," she said at her home-office. Strength of the women's clubs vary from weak in Democratic-controlled El Paso to very strong in conservative North Dallas. "It's a very diverse federation."

Mrs. Brown interpreted a large part of her job as state president to mean visiting each of the clubs. Whether or not the rest of the Republican Party was fighting, these individual clubs were still meeting regularly.

"Regardless of what the top leadership is doing, these clubs will meet and have programs. The best thing a president can do is go into the individual communities and inspire those members to do more, patting them on the back. They are to educate and inform the public on every level of government," said Mrs. Brown.

By the time she hit the Fort Worth convention, Mrs. Brown's efforts had been noticed by others. She received a proclamation from the Democratic Tarrant County Commissioners.

NOT ALL REPUBLICAN women think alike and that became evident during work on the resolutions.

Cutting smoking

Suzan Smith cut off smoking during the 1982 Great American Smokeout.

Broken jaw helps woman break the smoking habit

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

When Suzan Smith decided to quit smoking a year ago, she had an unusual crutch.

Her mouth was wired.

Actually, it wasn't something she requested to help her break the habit. Her jaw was broken when her wisdom teeth were pulled out.

Waking up and finding her mouth wired shut was a shock. Apparently, she recounted while rolling her eyes, the dentist had slipped while chiseling her choppers.

Smoking seemed impossible with the unexpected and unwanted constraint.

"The first week, I did all kinds of stuff to try to get around it," said Ms. Smith, public relations director at Parkview Hospital. "I thought, 'I'll be damned if I'm not still going to smoke.'"

But it was difficult to inhale without being able to move her jaws and trying to work her lips around a cigarette was almost impossible.

During the second week of being bound by the dentist's blunder, she gave it up.

When the wires were removed, she said she thought, "If I've gone three or four days without smoking, why should I go buy a pack of cigarettes now?" Besides, she reasoned, 1982's Great American Smokeout had arrived.

Still, after smoking since the age of 13, it wasn't exceptionally easy.

"I smoked until I was 22," she said, admitting she had been up to two packs a day for awhile. "I don't know how much I smoked when I first started. You know how it is — like when you got the chance, you chain-smoked. It was probably about a pack a day."

She added with a laugh, "But it picked up when I got a car."

The few relapses during her year-long endeavor came during nights of partying.

Liquor goes good with a lighted cigarette.

"That's when I fell off the wagon," she said, grinning.

But the morning after, she admitted the guilt feelings set in. "I would have a big guilt complex."

But she succeeded — partly because she began dating an anti-smoking fanatic.

"I'm not hard-core about it," she said grinning. "Like I don't care if someone smokes in my apartment or not. But he does."

Ms. Smith said she never gained weight while abstaining from tobacco, although she chewed up a lot of fingernails.

"I was all prepared to pork out," she said. "Initially, I drank a lot more liquids all day long.

"I also found myself peeling labels off of bottles — like beer bottles or whatever. I've got nervous hands and I think that's one reason why I enjoyed smoking so much."

She admitted the habit also helped her put off some aspects of work.

"When I'd be absorbed in a lot of paperwork, I'd maybe smoke a cigarette in between sentences or something," she said, winking.

The urge for a puff perhaps still hits at times. But because it's never strong, Ms. Smith is one of the fortunate ones who won't think of this Great American Smokeout Day as a such a drag.

Midlander waltzes into big-time films

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

After waltzing across the country, Joe Reed of San Antonio found his rose deep in the heart of West Texas.

However, this isn't a love story. It's an adventure tale; one which almost missed making the movies.

A stunt driver who owns his own company, Reed wrote a script for an action-adventure tale. Perseverance led to success. He was rescued from the sound of no one listening when he called Midlander Linda Bond.

"When you're new in the business and you're an independent producer you can afford to listen to everybody," Ms. Bond said in a interview.

A producer and on-air announcer for a local television station from 1975 to 1981, Ms. Bond formed her own multi-media production company, The Producers, in 1981. Along with producing commercials and "lots of little odd jobs," The Producers handled the publicity and casting for "Waltz Across Texas," which was filmed in Midland in 1981 and released in 1982.

County appraisal board finds work can be fun — occasionally

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

There can be fun in work. Occasionally.

"You've got to have a little levity in these serious matters," Joe Nuessle said, as chuckles and laughter tapered off in Wednesday's Midland County Appraisal District Board meeting.

"That sure beats frowning at one another," said Charlie Welch, who's leaving the board.

The humor, from whatever source, was just a fleeting thing in the meeting, which ranged from gravity to the light-hearted laughs that ease tension.

The five-member board passed out some laurels for efficient management and courteous and efficient cooperation; contracted with Pritchard & Abbotts, valuation engineers, to set the countywide mineral valuations; talked about insurance and scheduled its last meeting of 1983 on Dec. 14, when Welch promised to give his farewell.

"That's going to be my swan song," said Welch.

"We want to hear you sing it, anyhow," said Gil Tompson, board chairman.

Odessans for Decency concerned about children

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

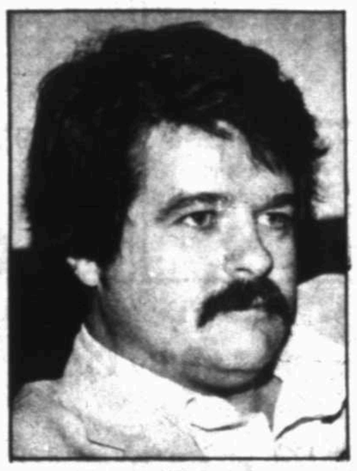

ODESSA — John Cope says he just wants to create a decent environment for his children to grow up in.

They are 1, 5 and 8 years old. A boy and two girls. The oldest comes into the office with her mother in the afternoon and tells him about her school day.

And the president of Odessans for Decency rededicates himself to work now for all of their futures.

Odessans for Decency was established in 1981 by Cope and other Odessa businessmen with the initial goal of combating pornography in the city. Since then, the political action group has tackled massage parlors, a rock singer and cable television, and has its sights set on state legislators who control laws regarding topless bars.

"I'd like my kids to grow up in a city that's got a good environment and that's got a positive influence," said Cope. "The only influence that you see mostly is what I would call negative influence...I want them to grow up with a positive image of sex, and not with a distorted image that they are to be, or they are to treat others, as just a means of some type of sexual self-gratification. I'd like them to respect individuals for what they are as human beings created in God's image. I guess that's the bottom line."

John Cope

Cope is convinced the efforts of Odessans for Decency already has had an impact on the city's less-than-Pollyanna-ish environment.

"We stopped Playboy Escapade, a cable program that shows soft porn, from coming here to the city," he recounted. "We were effective in getting the massage parlor ordinance passed a couple of years ago. We were having a real problem with massage parlors being fronts for prostitution. So the city and county had a joint meeting and passed a massage parlor ordinance requiring those which worked for massage parlors to register with the police department. They had to receive a license and wear a certain type clothing. They couldn't run around naked in there. As a result, I don't know if we have any illegitimate massage parlors. Some of them even closed down."

When OD first was established, Cope added, six adult bookstores lined the downtown streets. "We called on the city to enforce the zoning laws and as a result about four of them just went out of business," he said. "They were ordered to stop or they would be prosecuted." Others relocated outside city limits.

OD also tangled with controversial rock singer Ozzy Osbourne, whose efforts to hold a concert in Ector County Coliseum were battled by the group.

"We took it as far as we could take it — commissioners court, a federal judge — and they said they'd let him come," Cope recalled. "There were a lot of people praying. We organized prayer chains, and he got sick (and canceled)...I think God was responsible. I think prayer reached the hand of God. I've seen God intervene in so many things."

Cope believes fervently that such establishments as porno houses and topless bars lead to increased crime.

"There's an interesting statistic that came out that showed a decrease in crimes in the city and the county in 1983 from 1982," he noted. "Rapes have gone down in the city. In the county they've increased. There's no porno shops in the city, but there are in the county."

Cope pointed out a Cleveland, Ohio Police Department study which indicated "a very close correlationship between many types of crimes and the ever-increasing exposure of hardcore magazines and movies."

The study went on to report that the rate for rapes in census tracts with pornography outlets was near double that for the city as a whole, and that in four particular census tracts containing 10 porno outlets, the rate for rapes was four times the average.

"Out of the top three tracts in which rape is the highest," the report continued, "two of these tracts contain pornography outlets while the third borders on a tract which contains two pornography outlets." The rate for rapes in those three tracts was seven times the city-wide average.

But the unknown behind-the-scenes results of porno also concern Cope.

"Odessa right now has a 70 percent divorce rate, which is higher than nearly anywhere else," he noted. "Who knowns what happens subtly, when a guy reads a porno magazine and then goes home and beats his wife and kids? There's a lot of things that subtly happen that we never hear about."

Cope believes that creation of a good environment could lead to an economic boost.

"I think that if we can help change the image of the town, it'll attract more diversified industry here," he said. "I do believe that industry wants to locate in an area where they're going to have stable workers."

While OD watched County Attorney Steve Groh gain a commercial obscenity conviction recently against adult bookstore manager Jimmy Wayne Wright, Cope is aware of the difficulties the group will have in outlawing topless bars in the city.

"There's going to have to be a change in the legislature," he noted. "We try to get all the candidates for local office and state office to respond to a questionnaire we send out to get their philosophy. Some of them respond and some of them don't. We make those responses known. We try to get involved in the policies that our opponents have been involved in for years. We've just been naive to the fact of how things work."

OD also is involved in letter-writing campaigns to officials.

An on-going project of OD, says Cope, is educating the public through speaking engagements.

"We're contacting a lot of church groups and going out and presenting the facts," he explained. "We just keep plugging away. I maintain that there's a better way to live, that God has rules that we are to live by, and if we live them we'll have joy and peace and we'll have a good life."

Do you want to hear the truth about yourself?

Do you want to hear the truth about yourself?

Get a friend — one of those rare friends who revels in being frank and candid in imparting great personal truths about yourself. Find a dear, loving friend who's so blatantly forthright that you cringe at every utterance of her voice.

Shut up.

She smiles.

"Your dandruff is unsightly."

Don't look so closely.

It must be my nerves.

You're not impressed. Let the "snow" fall; it's natural.

"How," she asks, "does dandruff flaking off a pretty woman's head strike you?"

Adversely.

You're impressed.

She suggests a medicated shampoo.

You give it a try.

A good friend tells you when you're being dishonest and lying and cheating again.

"A lie's a lie," she admonishes. "Rationalization doesn't change a lie into a truth."

This rare breed of friend tells you that "cash-register honesty" is no real measure of integrity.

"You're a thief if you've stolen from yourself," she says.

What have I stolen?

"Time, for one thing."

A good friend invades your privacy even when you're alone.

"You know how to size up your character?" the friend pries.

How?

"By how you spend your time when you're absolutely alone?"

Oh.

Your good friend is telepathic.

"Things aren't suiting you right now, huh?"

That's true.

"You know how to change them?"

Turn people into robots and places into toys?

"Silly," she says. "Get into right thinking."

How?

"Right action leads to right thinking."

She's so smart.

"You think you can think yourself into perfection, into sanity. You think you can learn to play the piano by thinking about it and doing nothing? If you do, infinity won't be long enough."

Your friend even trods on the sacrosanct.

Sex.

"How's your sex life?"

Huh?

You stutter.

"That's what I thought."

She doesn't ask about love. She didn't need to.

"Ed," she asks, "how old are you?"

Who's old? I'm only 39; she's known that for years.

"Age hasn't helped you much."

What's this insolence? Control your temper. Remember, never assault a lady, especially with words. This gal's a straightshooter.

"You're still living in the same foggy yesterday, while missing out on the only time you have to be alive, which is right now," she says in all of her impertinence.

I shutter at her honesty. I want to tell her to shut up. I'm going to tell her to butt out of my business and mind her own.

"Enough?" she says. She must be listening to my thoughts. "Want me to shut up? Tell me to shut up."

No.

Services for J. Ellsworth Powell, 69, of 2201 W. Golf Course Road, will be at 1:30 p.m. Friday in the Lutheran Church of the Risen Lord in Odessa, with the Rev. James Otterness, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Sunset Memorial Garden at Odessa, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

Powell died Wednesday morning in a Midland hospital following a heart attack at Midland Regional Airport.

He was born April 6, 1914, in Houston. He graduated from the University of Southern California with a degree in architecture. He opened an office in San Angelo where he worked for several years before moving to Fort Worth and then to Odessa in 1940. He then lived in Austin for 11 years, moving to Midland in 1977. He was a member of the Lutheran Church of the Risen Lord in Odessa, the Chamber of Commerce, the American Institute of Building Design and the Texas Institute of Building Design.

Survivors include his wife, Marsha Powell of Midland; two daughters, Joan Donohue of Victoria and Deborah Brown of Odessa; a brother, Frank Powell of Blythe, Calif.; a sister, Mrs. W.H. Atkins of Havasu Lake, Calif.; and four grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Lutheran Church of the Risen Lord in Odessa, or the American Heart Institute.

Josephine Bishop

FREDERICKSBURG — Services for Josephine Crumbley Bishop, 62, of Fredericksburg, sister of Estelle Howard of Big Spring, will be at 3 p.m. Friday in Beckmann Funeral Home with the Rev. Raymond Woodruf officiating. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

She died Wednesday afternoon.

She was born April 16, 1921, in Junction and was a 1939 graduate of Eola High School. She married Charles Bishop June 10, 1952, and they lived in Corpus Christi until 1971, then moved to Fredericksburg.

Other survivors include her husband, a daughter, two sons, a sister, seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

R.H. Banks

Services for R.H. Banks, 78, of 1603 Delmar, were to be at 11 a.m. today in Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Donald Hafemann, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, officiating. Burial was to be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Banks died early Tuesday morning in a Midland hospital following a sudden illness.

Pallbearers were to be G.D. Johnson, Glenn Rainwater, Gus Meillor, David Penick, A. Fields and Paul Smith.

Randall Bowling

BIG SPRING — Services for Randall "Ruby" Bowling, 28, of Big Spring will be 3:30 p.m. Friday in Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home's Rosewood Chapel with burial in Trinity Memorial Park.

He died Tuesday evening in a Lubbock hospital.

Sherman Padgett

BIG SPRING — Services for Sherman Augusta Padgett, 46, of Big Spring will be 10 a.m. Friday in Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home Rosewood Chapel with burial in Trinity Memorial Park.

He died Tuesday evening at a Big Spring hospital.

Byron Hudson

Byron Brooks Hudson, 74, of Memphis, Tenn., father of Dr. William P. Trotter of Midland, died Wednesday in a local hospital after a lengthy illness. Services are pending with Memphis Funeral Home and local arrangements were conducted by Thomas Funeral Home.

He was born Jan. 3, 1909, in Memphis, where he was a long-time resident.

Other survivors include his wife, Jesalyn Hudson of Memphis; a daughter, June Harris of Memphis; and three grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be sent to Hospice of Midland.

Larry R. Webb

WINTERS — Services for Larry Ray "Cody" Webb, 26, of San Angelo and formerly of Midland, were to be at 2 p.m. today at Winters Memorial Chapel. Burial was to be in Lakeview Cemetery, directed by Winters Funeral Home.

Webb died Monday afternoon in an oilfield-related accident near Christoval.

He was born March 12, 1957, in Winters. He moved with his family to Brownwood in 1963. They moved to San Angelo in 1968, where he graduated from Lake View High School in 1976. Following graduation, he moved to Midland, moving back to San Angelo in 1983.

Survivors include his father, Bobby Joe Webb of Abilene; his mother, Wanda Rae Rigsby of Abilene; his grandparents, Mrs. Allen Jackson of Tuscola, Mr. and Mrs. Aurthor Webb of Abilene; three brothers, Billy Joe Webb, Billie Randall and Collin Rigsby, all of Abilene; and two sisters, Terri Fuller of Odessa and Vickie Webb of Abilene.

Appraisal board finds fun in work

Welch, a former Midland County commissioner who has been on the board since its inception in 1980, will be joined by C. Wallace "Wally" Craig in leaving the board. Craig, who defeated Welch for the Precinct 2 commissioner's post in 1982, is rounding out his second year on the board. Craig, a real-estate broker and a former president of the Midland Independent School District board, was appointed to the appraisal board by MISD trustees. Welch was appointed by the Midland County Commissioners' Court.

Welch will be succeeded by Walt Holton. He served with Welch on the original five-member board in 1980 and was appointed to a two-year term beginning in 1984 by the Midland County Commissioners' Court and Greenwood ISD. In his earlier stint, Holton, a Midland oil operator, was appointed by the Midland County Hospital District.

Succeeding Craig will be Margaret Cowden, a former MISD board member and a "fantastic lady," said Welch.

Remaining on the board are Gil Tompson, chairman; Nuessle, Midland's city attorney; and David Grimes. Tompson and Grimes were named to the board by MISD, and Nuessle was appointed by the Midland City Council.

By state law, only city, county and school district boards may appoint persons to the appraisal board, which may — and in Midland County's case does — represent other taxing entities within the county. Before enactment of the law, Midland College and the hospital district could make appointments to the board.

Following presentations by Pritchard & Abbott and Capitol Appraisal Group of Austin, the board selected Pritchard & Abbott, which had done valuations in previous years for the district, to appraise minerals.

"I have the utmost respect for your deliberations," Boyd Latham Jr., Capitol's executive vice president, told the board after his company lost in the bidding. Pritchard & Abbott's Jim Rapier said his firm would "endeavor" to work closely with the board.

In other business, the board:

—Consulted with Don Crawford, insurance representative for Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Texas. "The way things are now," Crawford said, "you can get sued over anything whether you're right or wrong." Said Grimes: "Some insurance companies are just the pits." He did not cite Crawford's company.

—Discussed unemployment compensation. "I think it's just plain immoral," Tompson said of the appraisal district having to reimburse the Texas Employment Commission in a particular case. A former appraisal district employee quit her job and took a higher paying job with an oil company. Three months later, she lost that job, applied for unemployment compensation through the TEC and received compensation for being out of work. The appraisal district, not the oil company, reimbursed the TEC. The district now is considering obtaining a non-reimbursing plan in which the district would pay to TEC 1.4 percent of the first $7,000 earned by each of the district's 28 employees; the cost would be $2,744 annually. That amount was less than what the district paid recently. "I have no zeal either way," Nuessle said.

—Passed a resolution commending Midland County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry and her staff for "fine cooperation and courtesies" in assisting Ferguson Map Co. of San Antonio, which prepared property maps to complement detailed aerial photographs of the county. Said Roland Wilkinson, the district's chief appraiser, "Rosenelle's office has been super."

—Commended Wilkinson on his first year in the appointed office. "He's made this year a lot easier for me," said Tompson, who then addressed Wilkinson: "You've done a wonderful job." Said Nuessle: "We can say that unanimously. I've had really good help from an excellent board, while we're passing out accolades." Craig, caught up in the humor, asked if there were "any more" laurels before another resolution was passed.

—Cited cooperation between the chief appraiser and Frances Shuffield, tax assessor-collector for Midland County. Craig noted the "tremendous improvement" in the operation of the chief appraiser's office and in the cooperation with Ms. Shuffield's office since Wilkinson was hired a year ago.

—Welch suggested the newly-formed Community National Bank be given an opportunity to bid on becoming the appraisal district's depository: "We have as many banks as we used to have filling stations," said Tompson. Welch said the bank would open in January.

City plagued by burglaries

As a rash of burglaries continue to plague Midlanders, city police investigated a burglary Wednesday in which more than $11,000 worth of items were reported missing.

Ken Hamilton, of 1510 Cloverdale, reported television sets, a video recorder, telephones, stereo equipment, assorted coins, a vacuum cleaner, ammunition, a CB radio and jewelry worth a total of $11,580 were taken from his home between 6 p.m. Tuesday and 8:30 p.m. Wednesday. Entry apparently was gained by breaking a window with damage estimated at an additional $150.

Lauro Colombo, of 5216 Treemont No. 1413, reported items worth $1,275 were taken from her home sometime between 7:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. Wednesday. Missing items included a microwave oven, television set, sewing machine, stereo, movie camera and two other cameras. Entry was gained by prying open the front door.

An electric drill, saw and smoke detector, valued at a total of $1,170, were reported missing from a storage building occupied by Ranger Construction Co. at 3613 Montclave. Mike Sharp, an employee, reported the burglary occurred sometime between Friday and Wednesday.

Lee Richter, of 4318 Thomason, reported the theft of a $250 Weed-eater from a trailer parked in front of his residence. The theft took place sometime between Oct. 21-31.

Midlander waltzes into big-time films

"I decided to go with Joe and help him produce a movie ('The Rescue')," Ms. Bond said.

"But I found along the way that I can't do it all myself. There are lots of agents and lots of technicalities and accountants that I just don't know. So I have combined my company, The Producers, with Cinema Productions in Dallas. We're going to be producing the movie. They'll be the executive producers, and I'll be the producer on the movie."

The partnership became official today when Cinema's president, Bob Mittendorf, and executive producer, Bill Wilson, met with Ms. Bond in Midland to announce the filming of not only "The Rescue," but also "Eagle," the story of a lonely boy and an old Indian which will be shot in Jackson Hole, Wyo. Both will be family films.

Mittendorf has a business and film background. A graduate of Southern Methodist University with a degree in marketing, he attended graduate school in cinema arts at UCLA. He has worked in a production capacity in 11 independent feature films, including "Molly Maguires" and "Dime Box," and has written, produced and directed six featurettes. Mittendorf wrote the screenplay for "Eagle."

Wilson, who has been living in West Germany for the past five years, began his career in Vienna on a Peter Sellers movie for Universal — "The Prisoner of Zenda." Other movies he has worked on in a production capacity include "Fire Fox," "Hopscotch," "Green Ice," "The Night Crossing" and, most recently, "The Neverending Story."

William Tannebring will direct both films. He has produced and directed several hundred television dramas and segments of, among others, "That's Incredible," "Sesame Street" and "Super Rich."

Three production reels were to be shown during this afternoon's press conference including a preview showing of a segment of "That's Incredible." In it, Reed performs a $25,000 stunt — he jumps three helicopters, with the blades turning, on a motorcycle.

"We'll have similiar stunts in the movie," said Ms. Bond.

In this business as in all others the talk at some point turns to money.

"We've already raised half (budget is $1.5 million) for 'Eagle,' but we're just starting to capitalize 'Rescue;' it's a $2 million budget," Ms. Bond said.

"Some people will say it can't be much of a movie, if it's only got a $2 million budget, but we are minimizing costs by using Texas locations, excellent Texas crews, young actors in key parts and older, more established actors in cameo roles. We are negotiating on Bruce Penhall, a national racing champion, the good looking, blond rookie on CHIPS last season."

Other names Ms. Bond mentioned were Michael Parks, for the federal marshal role, and Ned Romero, for the role of the old Indian in "Eagle."

Once "Rescue" and "Eagle" are completed, Ms. Bond hopes to concentrate on movies shot in West Texas.

"This is the beginning of what I hope will be a movie production headquarters in West Texas, producing many feature films, helping diversify our economy and utilizing area talent and crews."

Republican women try to change their image

One group wanted to pass an Equal Rights Amendment; the majority rejected it. But, said Mrs. Brown, it was defeated because of the wording was changed by various members. "They strayed from the original resolution," which she felt was a sound proposal.

It called for "enforcement of the existing laws to prevent sex discrimination" and that the ERA be brought up in Congress under the "open rule" so protective amendments may be offered to clarify its actual intent.

This ERA proposal "would have been a good one for the Republican women to have passed. We're not against ERA. We're against the national one — it's too wide open."

Under the national proposal, if a woman is barred from using a men's restroom the case could go to the Supreme Court and separate restrooms wouldn't be allowed. In the military, she continued, women couldn't be barred from positions for which they weren't qualified.

Mrs. Brown feels the ERA proponents are after the private sector to comply, and that the problem is not with the federal government. "They want equal pay for equal work in the business world, which is fair. If a man and woman equally qualified applied for a job, the company would probably give it to the man. The ERA people are trying to use the federal government to force the private sector to change its employment practices."

"It's been a 20-year change in the United States; change is gradual," she continued. "Republicans don't deny the situation is there. We just see a different way to handle it."

What does puzzle her is why the White House is reluctant to get into the issue. The proposal that was killed at the state convention would be a logical resolution for the administration to support, she said.

Although a press release billed a panel discussion as a talk on the gender gap, Mrs. Brown said that wasn't the topic. Four female state representatives talked on the assistance needed once they're in office.

THE TERM "gender gap," said Mrs. Brown, "is just a buzz word."

Another one of the resolutions passed by the delegates outlined President Reagan's accomplishments for women. It cited reduction of the marriage penalty on income taxes, increased tax credits for child care, strengthening of the pension/retirement rights for military wives and equalized military promotion procedures for all servicewomen, awarding of more contracts and dollars in loans to female-owned businesses and appointment of more women to his cabinet and the first woman to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Polls showed that in the 1982 elections more women voted Democratic than Republican, said Mrs. Brown. But what hasn't been noted is that more men voted Republican, she added.

Rather than pit the women against the men in next year's election, she said, she would rather see the two "work together to be a strong Republican Party."

The state party chairman in Texas has always been a man because it's traditional. "A woman hasn't come forward. That's where women are wrong in thinking they can't do it. I think it will happen in the near future."

THE STATE and national party will be aiming for the younger woman in trying to build up membership next year, according to Mrs. Brown. As society has changed, so has what TFRW is offering these women.

"We're setting up babysitting and having more breakfast and evening clubs. We want to make them want to belong," she said.

"We've noticed the younger group is more liberal, more militant, until they become mothers or property owners or start investing. Then they show a change in attitude as far as government is concerned. We're trying to appeal to this person that Republican policies are important to them."

The "country club" image of Republican women has prevailed too long. TFRW is seeking women from all income levels, she said. "We want them to see that lower taxes give more buying power and food for their family."

The group is trying to appeal to women who must work and keep house and raise children.

"Our society is changing. The woman who is the homemaker and doesn't work will soon be the small minority," said Mrs. Brown. "The homemaker who doesn't have to work is most fortunate. Today, it takes 1½ to two salaries for a family."

MH-MR employees protest lie detector tests

AUSTIN (AP) — Some workers of the State Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation are protesting a recent rule requiring polygraph tests if accused of patient abuse.

The new ruling also says so-called lie-detector tests are mandatory if an employee is accused of drinking, use of drugs or other illicit activity while on duty, said Wakie Martin, spokesman for the Texas State Employees Union (AFL-CIO).

Martin said the petition signed by more than 1,000 MH-MR employees will be presented to the MH-MR board when it meets here Friday.

Lawyers to answer queries in Mattox case

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Houston lawyers whose secret testimony led to the commercial bribery indictment of Attorney General Jim Mattox were asked to answer questions about the case in public today.

Thomas R. McDade and J. Wiley Caldwell of the Houston firm of Fulbright and Jaworski were ordered to appear in state district court to answer questions by Mattox's defense attorney, Roy Minton.

McDade has told reporters of his complaints against Mattox last summer, but until today neither he nor Caldwell had ever made the accusations in public while under oath.

A trial date for Mattox, who is accused of threatening to ruin the public bond business of Fulbright and Jaworski, has not been set. A pre-trial hearing is scheduled for Dec. 1.

Today's depositions had originally been scheduled in Houston, but they were switched to Austin at the request of District Attorney Ronnie Earle. Earle has not said why he wanted the statements switched to Austin.

District Judge Mace B. Thurman issued an order late Wednesday afternoon saying the depositions would take place in his courtroom, which effectively opened the proceeding to the public and the press.

Normally, depositions are held without a public audience. During a deposition, a witness is sworn in and asked questions, just as though he were on the stand during the trial.

Mattox was indicted Sept. 13 after a 2½-month grand jury investigation prompted by McDade's accusation that the attorney general threatened last June to use his official power to hold up Fulbright and Jaworski's bond packages.

Attorney General Jim Mattox

The bond proposals prepared by law firms require the attorney general's approval and represent millions of dollars of income for the lawyers.

McDade said Mattox was angry because McDade was trying to interrogate the attorney general's sister in a $1.7 billion lawsuit involving Mobil Oil Corp. McDade is a defense lawyer in the suit against Mobil, and the state, represented by Mattox, is one of the plaintiffs.

Mattox has denied making the threat and said the felony indictment against him was initiated by Mobil Oil as a way of intimidating him.

'Freeze' campaign plans to heat up GOP convention

DALLAS (AP) — An anti-Reagan group's announcement that it will be staging major protests during next summer's Republican national convention has disturbed city officials who are in charge of security for the gathering.

"They're serious business," said Assistant City Manager Levi Davis, who until this week had said he was not anticipating any major demonstrations at the convention.

The Freeze Reagan/Bush Campaign, a coalition of groups that includes the Youth International Party, or Yippies, plans to bus thousands of protesters from around the country to Dallas when the GOP leaders gather here in August.

The Yippies are a group of political radicals who came to prominence at the 1968 Democratic Convention in Chicago.

Davis said he learned last week that fliers advertising the group's 1984 convention protest were distributed in London at an anti-nuclear rally. Tuckerman said thousands were passed out last weekend at an anti-Reagan protest in Washington.

Davis said projections for security arrangements were based on few, if any, protesters showing up. But Tuesday, Davis told the Dallas Times Herald that the Freeze group's plans would change his projections.

Several other groups have said they plan protests at the convention, but city officials have previously given little credence to the claims.

"It still doesn't give me an idea of the magnitude," he said. "I heard about some of their activities when I talked to the police in New York. They're into disrupting traffic and things like that."

Assistant Police Chief Bill Newman said that if the Freeze organization is affiliated with the Yippies, then "it's going to be a pretty militant group."

Newman is in charge of the city's security arrangments during the convention.

Dean Tuckerman, a New York member of the Yippies, said the group will meet in Dallas over a three-day period this weekend to plan its strategy. The convention protest, he said, would draw at least 60,000 people and serve as a "focal point for an entire year's worth of protests."

A wall system combined with window creates a focal point in this living room setting furnished with a pair of short sofas as well as comfortable lounge chair.

Small room has spacious feeling

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. I'm moving into a condominium and am wondering how to furnish my tiny living room so it is comfortable.

I like to do some entertaining but mostly I want comfort and practicability.

I have to buy furniture. What should be the starting point?

The room is 15 by 13 feet with no fireplace and only one northern window. — R.P.

A. A pair of short sofas and lounge chair with ottoman might be better for you than a long, standard sofa and perhaps a couple of chairs. Short sofas can be arranged opposite each other or at right angles to form an L.

A lounge chair with ottoman can give you daily comfort for stretching out on. The ottoman can be used as extra seating when entertaining.

To give you the most spacious feeling, choose sofas in a plain fabric and put the design on your lounge chair. Devise a focal point in your room to arrange the furniture around.

Contemporary wall systems, with cabinets and both open and closed shelves, are good items for small rooms because of their aesthetics and storage qualities. Often, wall systems can be fitted around existing windows to maximize room arrangement.

Q. I am moving into a new house with three bedrooms, a living room and a family room.

I would like to give my place a contemporary look with bright colors. What would be an elegant color scheme for my home? — C.T.

A. You probably need to get some inspiration from other exciting rooms and reproduce what especially appeals to you.

Q. I have a problem with my clear glasses that I wash in my automatic dishwasher. After a period of rewashings, each glass shows what looks like a scum or mineral deposit that defies removal.

I have tried ammonia, lemon juice, vinegar, Windex, Lime Away and TSP. Is there some commercial cleaner or chemical that will do the job? — C. Leonard J.

A. To keep the shine on crystal or clear glassware, it should be washed and dried by hand, not put in an automatic dishwasher. The water which is hard dries on them, leaving a deposit or residue.

If Lime Away or white vinegar does not clean the glasses, the finish on the glass may be damaged beyond remedy.

Furniture styling becomes dramatic

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

If bright colors and showy styles are indications of optimism, then the furniture industry is on its way to recovery from the past few years of bleak sales and little design excitement.

At the recent High Point, N.C., Furniture Market, dramatic — even flashy — furniture was the rule at all taste and price levels.

One way to create excitement is to make furniture that puts the purchaser into a world of fantasy. A number of manufacturers took this tack. One, for example, added exact copies of 27 furniture gems from the great castles of England to an existing collection.

The Baker Co.'s "Stately Homes of England" collection includes examples of furniture from homes such as Longleat, Blenheim Palace, Clivedon and Penshurst.

Not only did Baker copy two fine Adam pieces belonging to the Duke of Argyll and in use at his home at Inverary Castle in Scotland, but the company snagged the duke himself, who as Baker's guest gave a speech extolling the virtues of the copies.

The message was clear: You too can live like a lord with furniture every bit as good as his. The furniture ranges in price from $900 for a mirror to $14,000 for a secretary copied from the original at Howick Castle, which makes it quite expensive.

Okra tasty pickled

OKRA PICKLE

This is the sharp-tasting old-fashioned kind.

10-ounce package frozen small okra
⅓ cup sugar
⅔ cup cider vinegar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon mixed pickling spice

Cook okra according to package directions; drain, put into a bowl or refrigerator dish.

In a small saucepan, over moderate heat, stir together sugar, vinegar, salt and the spice until sugar dissolves and mixture boils.

Simmer, uncovered, 10 minutes; strain over okra,, discard spice.

Cover tightly and refrigerate overnight. Drain before serving.—(AP)

DEAR ABBY

Grateful mother praises pooch

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Dog Tired," who hates animals, that while on vacation it was one of those "stinking animals" that brought my 4-year-old son back after he had been lost for three long hours in the woods. When I saw our beautiful German shepherd tugging our son by the sleeve of his sweat shirt, I could have kissed that dog's feet!

I thank God every day for creating such a noble animal! – DOG LOVER IN ELMIRA, N.Y.

DEAR DOG LOVER: My mail has been running 100-to-1 in favor of dogs. But here's one that has me stumped:

DEAR ABBY: Tell the woman who hated barking dogs to go to Holland. The dogs there do not bark. I visited my daughter and her husband in Holland two years ago, and their golden retriever didn't bark at all.

They moved to Germany, where all the dogs bark, and now their dog is barking, too. Did you know that dogs learn to bark from barking dogs? And if a dog has never heard another dog bark, it won't bark either? – MRS. M. IN HUNTSVILLE, ALA.

DEAR MRS. M.: My dog expert says that dogs bark instinctively, whether they have heard another dog bark or not.

But that's only the "arf" of it – the exception is a barkless African breed, the basenji.

DEAR ABBY: When "J." answered my ad for a non-smoking roommate, she admitted that she smoked but was 'trying to quit." I told her that I would encourage her efforts to quit smoking and I accepted her. It's been six months and J. is still smoking! She keeps promising to quit but she's still smoking.

I really dislike it because (1) I am a nurse and I know what smoke does to the lungs; (2) she smells bad; (3) even though she smokes only in her room, the rest of the apartment smells of smoke.

Since I advertised for a non-smoker, do I have the right to tell her she will have to move? – CLEAN LUNGS

DEAR CLEAN: You accepted J. as a roommate knowing that she smoked but was trying to quit. She thought she could, and you thought you could help her. You were both mistaken. Talk turkey. Tell J. if she isn't "clean" by Thanksgiving, she will have to find another roommate.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is probably more common than most people think. I am a battered husband. My wife and I have been married less than two years, and because of this problem, we're both seeing therapists individually and she goes to group therapy. I am writing not only for myself, but for all those men who are beaten by their wives and are too ashamed to tell anyone. We hear a great deal about wife-beating but very little about husband-beating.

Can you direct me to some kind of support group to help me deal with this whie my wife and I try to work it out? She is aware that she beats me, except when she is actually doing it. And believe it or not, we really love each other.

If there are no support groups of this kind available for men in the Manhattan, N.Y., area, how can I go about forming one? — FRIGHTENED IN MANHATTAN

DEAR FRIGHTENED: I know of no support groups for the battered husband, but if there is one in your area, you local mental health association or your therapist can direct you to it.

As for forming one, because (as you stated) most batterd men are too ashamed to come forward, it would be difficult to recruit members. Ask your therapist if he can put you in touch with fellow victims.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Sewing machine functions unlimited

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

As you know, once I had read the advance information on New Home's new Memory 6000 machine, I could not rest until I got a hold of one. Well, I have it and it is like having a brand-new toy with no limits on how often I can play with it!

Have you ever wished for all your buttonholes on any one garment to be precisely the same size? They can be.

Would you like to be able to "write" full names or even sentences in script or block? You can do it.

Would you like to embroider an alligator on your shirt or a penguin on your shorts? You can.

Would you like to have a memory bank that will store over 30 stitches? Or will "play back" a stitch at your request?

When a new machine comes out, I try to gain access to it at least long enough to test it so I can fill you in on whether or not it is worthwhile. I do hope you take the time to visit a sewing machine dealer so he can show you the memory 6000. It is the most fascinating "toy" I have ever had.

If you have not shopped for a new machine in the past 10 or 15 years, you are probably going to be stunned at the price tag. Like cars, houses and sliced bread, the price of machines has gone up. However, before you faint dead away, consider this:

A good machine, well cared for, will last for years and years.

A good machine, well cared for, will not "go out of style."

Dorothy Fuldheim was the first woman in the nation to have her own television news show. That was 1947, and 35 years later, the 89-year-old newswoman is still with the same Cleveland station. "La Fuldheim" is shown here interviewing Barbara Walters, a woman who knows a few things herself about tv interviews.

First lady of television still shines on screen

By The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

CLEVELAND — She was the first woman in the nation to have her own television news show.

The year was 1947, and Dorothy Fuldheim was 54. Thirty-five years later, the 89-year-old newswoman is still with the same station, WEWS, Channel 5.

Clevelanders call the 5-foot-tall, red-haired Fuldheim "Cleveland's Grande Dame," "the Thinking Man's Redhead," and "La Fuldheim."

She is on the air five days a week, at noon, 6 and 11 at night with two different news commentaries on every subject under the sun. She still leads the pack in the ratings.

She also does daily interviews and answers questions on her "Ask Dorothy" call-in show.

She has won scores of local and national journalism awards and has received a number of honorary degrees. A chair in communicating arts is named in her honor at Cleveland State University and a Cleveland theater is named for her.

"You would think people would get tired of me after seeing me day after day, night after night after all this time," she said in her flower-filled office in the WEWS studio.

"People are forever sending flowers. One man has sent me a bouquet a week for the last 20 years," she said. "They know I love chocolates. I don't take lunch. I just munch on chocolates. So, they send chocolates."

Everyone in the city knows Fuldheim — cabbies, cops on the corner, merchants, shoppers, office workers, homemakers, students, even little kids.

"It's crazy. I have a driver who picks me up in the morning, deposits me at the studio at 9:30 and calls for me at 6:30 in the evening," she said.

"Last night we were stopped for a light. A couple of the ladies of the evening spotted me, waved and yelled: 'Hi, Dorothy.'

"I don't know why, but I yelled back: 'How's business?' 'Comme ci, comme ca,' one replied. That describes the economy as well as I know."

She goes on, hardly pausing for breath: "In this business you have no secrets. I get these calls, like: 'I'm only saying this for your own good, honey, but don't wear that dress again, the one you wore on tonight's 6 o'clock news. It was atrocious.'

"One woman called recently and told the switchboard operator: 'She looks white tonight. Is she sick?' "

Before television, Fuldheim worked in radio. She interviewed, among others, Adolf Hitler, Albert Einstein, Madame Chiang Kai-shek, Helen Keller and several presidents.

"I threw Jerry Rubin off the air when he became vulgar during an interview," she recalled. "It takes a lot of guts sometimes. I take unpopular stands. I'm always for the underdog."

Wine bottles have makers' codes

DONCASTER, England (AP) — To a football fan, a punt is a kick. To a wine aficionado, a punt is a mark on the bottom of a wine bottle.

The punt mark is the glass container manufacturer's exclusive mark. It generally takes the form of a raised symbol, an initial or a logo, according to Dr. Peter Jones, an industry expert.

"They are called punt marks because, in glass container manufacturing terms, the punt is the base of the container," explains Jones, materials manager for the Emhart glass container manufacturing unit in Doncaster. "The word originated in the days of hand processing when the bottom or punt of a bottle was held by a metal rod while the operator completed the making of the bottle."

Jones notes that the word "punt" in glassmaking terminology comes from the Italian word pantello, meaning "a small point." This was later corrupted to "pontil," to "punty," and, finally, to "punt."

Wine experts disagree on when punt marks first appeared, although some authorities believe the marks had become common by the 16th or 17th centuries.

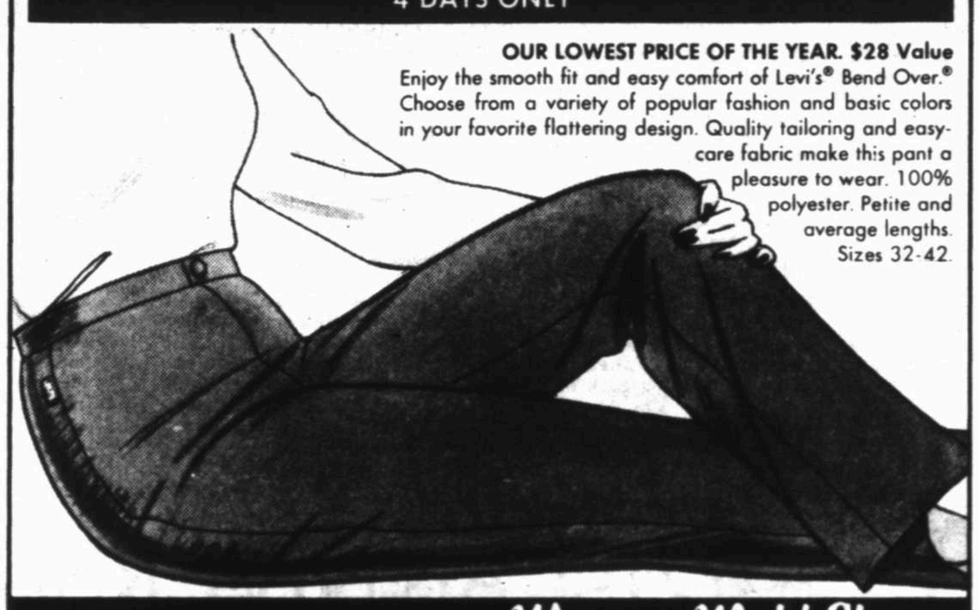

Jones reports he has traced one punt mark back to the third century during the Roman occupation of Britain.

Bill warns about drinks, pregnancy

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrons of taverns, liquor stores and restaurants that serve alcohol in New York City may soon be seeing posters warning that drinking can cause birth defects.

The City Council, on a vote of 28-4, recently passed a measure requiring an estimated 8,000 establishments to post signs that say, "Warning: Drinking alcoholic beverages during pregnancy can cause birth defects."

Failure to post the signs could result in a $100 fine.

The measure has the blessing of Health Commissioner David Sencer and aides to Mayor Edward Koch said they believed he would sign it.

"We think a lot of birth defects can be prevented by women not drinking during pregnancy," said Jerry L. Crispino, a Bronx Democrat, who sponsored the measure.

"If we can save some children from birth defects just by putting up signs, we ought to do it," he said.

He said there are estimates that the city pays up to $75 million annually for the lifetime care of babies born with alcohol-related birth defects.

The measure had been languishing in the council for years and was amended to exempt the owners of grocery stores that sell beer.

AT WIT'S END

Ambiance can too be eaten!

By ERMA BOMBECK

My husband's idea of ambiance is a restaurant with restrooms marked with a graphic ewe and ram, a cook with a tattoo on his tongue, and a dog asleep in a booth.

He says you can't eat ambiance. I say you can.

I think dining out should be a high matched only by the exhilaration you experience when you finally pull on the tights in your aerobics class. He wants to get in to eat right after Dan Rather and out by the time the NFL kicks off.

The way I figure it, if I wanted to eat in a dump, I'd stay at home.

Men don't seem to understand that women love the idea of not having to wash the silverware between each course and being able to grind butter stains into the linen and not soaking it. They love violets on the table in December, and candles that don't smell like citronella.

They love the luxury of large tumblers that don't smell like creme rinse when you bring them to your lips. They love being asked if something is to their taste, rather than, "Do you know what that green vegetable looks like? A festered sore."

I know some men who even get up to dance with their wives between courses. My husband eats like he has five minutes to catch the last flight leaving a country before the communists take over.

I have always believed you can tell how long a couple have been married by watching them eat out.

Those married under five years never eat the bread. They spend less than three minutes ordering. They always toast something with their wine. They always have a request for the musical group.

Those married under ten years eat off one another's plates. They always order more butter. They ask for a doggy bag when they order the meal.

Those married 25 years or more don't talk. They just eat. They drink Scotch and soda with their meals. If they can't read the check, they light a match.

All of our lives, my husband and I have fought over ambiance. He says waiters in white gloves have a skin disease to hide. The gift of a rose is a bribe. Violins cause stomach disorders. Cooking at your table saves on the heating bill.

One night the late Arthur Godfrey invited us to dinner. As we arrived 20 minutes late, he smiled and said, "Well, if it isn't the last happily married couple in North America."

We were. But that was before my husband found out valet parking would cost him a dollar and he parked our car at the loading dock behind the hotel and I walked a mile and a half in gravel in open-toed shoes.

Arthur never mentioned the fact that my husband and I ate at separate tables that night. Maybe he didn't notice.

May elected club president

Elizabeth May has been named president of the Midland Junior Woman's Club. Other officers for the 1983-84 year are Cheri Hill, vice-president; Melissa Henthorn, secretary; Kathy Dill, treasurer and Rebecca Turner, publicity chairman.

The Midland Junior Woman's Club was founded in 1969 as a study club and a federated Woman's Club. Designed to meet the needs of younger women, it is no longer federated.

With 65 members, the club encourages fellowship and promotes social welfare through charitable, educational and recreational programs.

Parade of Homes, a fund-raiser for charity and Story Hour, acommunity service, are two of the club's projects.

Parental perceptions of infants studied

Hearst Feature Service

PALO ALTO, Calif. — Parents develop astonishingly elaborate ideas about their children's personalities before they are born, and don't change those views very much after birth, new research by a team of Stanford School of Medicine behavioral scientists shows.

"We do not know what the implications are for later parental perceptions or for infant development," the Stanford group told the convention of the American Academy of Child Psychiatry.

The researchers studied 35 couples who were predominantly white, middle-class and well-educated, and ranging in age from 22 to 38. None of the women had ever before experienced a pregnancy lasting beyond the first trimester, none of the couples knew the sex of the fetus the mother carried, and none had children living at home.

Before their children were born, mothers and fathers made these kinds of judgments about them:

"Great personality. Positive outlook on life, like both of us. Outgoing. A lot of energy. Full of spunk. A challenge to keep up with at times. I don't see a shy, retiring baby" — father.

"Fairly laid-back and mellow, but stubborn" — mother.

"Quiet. Genuinely warm. Sensitive. Given to deep, emotional feelings. Reflective" — father.

"Slightly impish, but good-natured. Inquisitive and healthy. Physically strong. Not passive or a milquetoast" — mother.

A month after their children were born, parents characterized their babies in these ways:

"He's going to be a worrier. He's got little wrinkles on his forehead. He's very sober. He doesn't have a sense of humor" — father.

"Feisty, strong, definite likes and dislikes. Very curious, anxious to explore. Physically strong — I'd always expected that" — mother.

Best to stick with the money

By ADELE SCHEELE

Q — We are facing a major change in my husband's job. He has been a manager for a large retail store for 12 years and has excellent benefits, including a month's vacation and pension. His company is moving from Texas to California. We don't want to move there because of California's expensive housing.

We are considering his changing to another company or even starting our own business. We have savings to draw on. What can you advise us?

A — My first thought is to stay with a company that rewards its employees so well and take the risk of moving with it. The company may help you with a housing allowance, and you can use some of your savings. Or you can rent out your Texas home and rent something in California for a year or until you think you'll stay.

From your brief description, you don't sound like entrepreneurs, so I'd forget about starting your own business. And for your own satisfaction, your husband should also look around at other retail chains and see what the market really is. Only then can the right decision be made.

Q — I am planning to go to college in the spring to study fashion merchandising. Until then, I'd like to get a job in the field, but no one will hire me without experience. I am willing to start at the bottom. I always read your column. It clears up lots of my questions.

A — You are caught in the great Catch-22: You can't get a job without experience and you can't get experience without a job! Try these steps:

(1) Go to every fashion manufacturing company and department store in town and ask for a job. Tell your experiences in high school — activities, clubs, sewing your own clothes, etc. — anything that shows you are reliable and willing.

(2) Go to the college's placement center and ask for a beginner's job with any of the companies they send graduates to. It's worth the chance.

(3) If you have no experience at all in anything, go get some right now, even as a volunteer clerk in a local political office or your church.

(4) Find out when a fashion merchandising convention is scheduled to come to town and go hang out at the exhibit booths. See who is too busy and offer your help free. You could be rewarded with leads or a job.

Q — I read your column about starting your own business and it gave me some ideas. But I am still puzzled. I am 22 and want to start my own business so that when I'm 40, it will pay off.

My main obstacles are lack of finances, lack of experience, lack of college degree. But I love photography and interior decorating; I'm creative, a problem-solver, and a "handy-woman" who can fix anything. Where do I begin?

A — Go with your love — photography. You could continue your education at night at an art school, and work by day as an apprentice to a photographer whose work you admire. Ask around for names.

If nothing happens, try for hands-on experience at a photographic studio, even at a department store. Think about what kind of photos you like taking — if it's portraits or on-the-scene action shots, consider being an intern for a newspaper's photography department.

Your business will be in the arts — whether working as the professional artist (photographer or interior decorator) or else as owner of, say, a poster shop or chain of shops.

Bamboo blooms mysterious cycle

Botanists don't know what mysteriously triggers the blooming of bamboo about every 30, 60 or 120 years.

After bamboo blossoms, however, it dies within a few years.

New seedlings have been known to take five to 10 years to mature.

Window washer highly accomplished at job

OTTUMWA, Iowa (AP) — The lone figure slowly works his way across the fourth story of the Big T Office building to clean another window.

It's a typical Sunday morning. Nothing unusual.

Except for the fact that 56-year-old Wayne Carr, of Ottumwa, doesn't use a harness as he walks the 10-inch ledges.

"It's really just as safe as falling off a log," Carr quips. "No — it's really safe.

"I guess if you're afraid of heights it might be a little difficult, but I've never been afraid of heights. But I do notice that the heels of my shoes hang over the edges."

Carr, who has spent the past 38 years in the construction field, started walking the steel on 4-inch I-beams on tall buildings.

"I didn't have a harness at that point," Carr said. "And I guess I just got used to it that way. Who knows? Maybe I'm just part monkey."

Carr worked with his father, who started the Carr Construction Co. in 1938, taking over the business for himself in 1962 after his father died.

Now Carr's son, Paul, 28, has heard the calling and he works alongside his father.

"It kind of makes you feel like you're accomplishing something," Carr said. "Having your boy follow in your footsteps."

And when Carr says footsteps, he isn't kidding.

Paul has been known to take his turn climbing along the ledge and wiping the windows on his father's building.

But don't tell Wayne's wife, Phyllis.

For at least one Sunday morning out of every month for the past 11 years, Carr has been missing from home for what he estimates is about 2½ hours as he makes his rounds.

And at least one Sunday morning out of every month for the past 11 years, Phyllis Carr has spent an edgy 2½ hours waiting for her husband to come home.

She feels stuck in government job

By DR. ADELE SCHEELE

Q - I'm writing to you out of sheer desperation. I have been employed by a state department of labor for over seven years and mever had a poor performance evaluation. The CETA program, which pays my salary, is coming to and end.

I have over 12 years of experience in personnel, including a B. S. in personnel management. However,for some unknown reason, I am having quite a bit of difficulty in securing interviews. I am in a state of shock trying to figure out why.

Although I have been with the state agency for seven years, my job has involved contact with companies in the private sector. I have a lot of recruiting and interviewing experience which should give me a good chance.

Is there some unwritten law that governmentemployees are not qualified for any position in the private sector? Is working for the government more of a liability than an asset? I feel trapped.

A — It only feels like a liability. But remember the opportunity lies in the work, not the method of applying for the job. For your government job, no doubt you put in your application seven years ago and were accepted according to your experience and degree. That is in the civil service mode for middle-level employees.

Business does not work like that. It is based on more than experience. I suggest that you get personally involved with the connections that you do have. Meet for breakfasts or lunches or at professional associations, or through your church group, or through whatever opening feels good to you.

In addition, take the time before your layoff to explore which industry you'd really like your personnel experience to be a part of and start doing some research. Read their journals, find out about their meetings, and if you have any opportunity to invite them to consult or to speak while the CETA program lasts.

There is no easy way to find a job. I would be lying if I said there was. Certainly it's harder to transfer from one kind of system to another, but it's certainly not impossible. Think of the advantages you have. Think of the direct experience you have and which industries would be most interested.

Because government service is huge, don't look for a small company but instead very large ones. People in personnel are trained to solve problems as they are brought to them and for the most part not to go out and find them. You're going to have to get yourself away from a waiting position into a far more active one and it may be difficult at first for you. However, like medicine, it's good for you and will stimulate ideas and talents that may have been dormant.

Q — I've been working as a secretary for a utility company in one city for 10 years. I have tried to transfer to another city for almost six years. My husband moved there to find a better job and I was on child care leave. My husband had a serious back operation and cannot take a chance on leaving his job there to go someplace else. He thinks no one will hire him with a big scar on his back.

I am living with my parents right now until my transfer goes through. I have tried everything — taken tests, physicals, talked to the union and the head of personnel, but I am told this city is not hiring and hasn't been for six years.

I am in big trouble and have gone to a counselor for my stress and depression. Can you help?

A — If the utility company isn't hiring and hasn't been for six years, then you cannot, not for one minute more, continue to apply to them. You have to go to another company.

Take almost anything right now, to get you out of this depression and to bring some money in. And while you're waiting, look for an inexpensive night course to get yourself some more advanced skills.

Dr. Scheele answers letters from readers in her column. Write to her in care of this newspaper.

Freebies for senior citizens

Copley News Service

Everyone would like to find something for nothing now and then. Here are a few packets of information that are specifically designed for the elderly, information that you won't want to miss.

Fiber Facts

Information about what makes a body healthy is sadly lacking in this country; and practice sadly follows suit.

But help is on the way. With this packet of four booklets on the importance of fiber in the diet — The High-Fiber Diet, Irritable Bowel Syndrome, Constipation and Hemorrhoids — you will be well informed about the functions of your whole digestive tract.

The booklets suggest several ways to avoid many of the digestive ills that plague this nation. One of the best solutions is to alter your diet. Fiber is something we hear a great deal about these days — and for good reason. Adding an adequate amount of it to your daily food intake will perform a natural cleansing of your whole system — a secret Europeans have known for years.

So join in the national celebration of "knowing thyself" and send for these booklets. Offer good through Dec. 31, 1983.

Directions: Send a postcard.

The Golden Age

Have you ever wanted to saunter up to the ticket booth of some fancy recreation area, flash your own special card and say, "Half price for me and my friends"?

In short, have you ever wanted to feel like a big shot in the little world of nickel-and-dime entrance and use fees? Well, here's your chance. Send for this free leaflet on Golden Eagle, Golden Age and Golden Access Passports and feel like a million.

Each of the passports is available to the public either for free or for a small fee. The Golden Eagle Passport allows the bearer — who is under the age of 62 — entrance for one calendar year to recreation areas administered by the federal government. The passport costs $10, but waives entrance fees for both the passport holder and his or her family or passengers in their noncommercial vehicle.

The Golden Age Passport — available to those adventurers who are over the age of 62 — is a free lifetime entrance to those same federally administered parks. It also gives the passport holder a 50 percent discount on parking, camping and other recreational fees.

The Golden Access Passport is available to the blind or other permanently disabled who are exploring this country. It also allows free admission to the parks and 50 percent discounts on other fees.

The leaflet supplies all the information you will need on where and how to obtain these "golden" treasures. All you will need do is tell 'em "Mugsy sent me" at the door. Offer good through Dec. 31, 1983.

Directions: Send a postcard.

Former senator leaves Capitol Hill for ivory towers

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Fred Harris, the former U.S. senator and presidential candidate, traded in the high-pressured atmosphere of Capitol Hill for the tranquil academic life. But that doesn't mean he's just taking it easy these days.

The former Democratic senator from Oklahoma walked away from politics after his unsuccessful presidential bid in 1976 to teach political science at the University of New Mexico. It's a decision he hasn't regretted.

"I've been really lucky," he said. "I've had three different careers. In all of them, I've felt useful and worthwhile. I liked them all. But I wouldn't want to go back to being a lawyer or politician."

In addition to his teaching duties, frequent speeches, a constant line of visitors to his office and work on a book on Mexico, Harris has found the time to work on a report for Gov. Toney Anaya on the problems of higher education in New Mexico.

"I don't know of anything that's more important to our state," Harris said in a recent interview. "Investment in higher education is the only way I know to raise our per capita income and build new jobs, new industry in the state."

Harris, 52, is chairman of the Governor's Commission on Higher Education, appointed by Anaya to propose long-term solutions to financial problems faced by the state's colleges.

He is reacquainting himself with the glare of television lights and a steady dose of lobbying in an attempt to get more funding for the state's colleges when money for education is short nationwide.

"I think it's something that needs to be done," he said.

Memories of Harris' unsuccessful try for the Democratic nomination in 1976 were revived recently when the Rev. Jesse Jackson entered the 1984 race. Some feel Jackson may have the same impact on this election as Harris did eight years earlier, when his ultra-liberal campaign apparently siphoned off just enough liberal votes to help Jimmy Carter beat Morris Udall in some key early primaries.

Harris, who served as senator from Oklahoma from 1964 to 1972 after taking over an unexpired term, campaigned on a populist platform in 1976. He dropped out shortly after a fourth-place finish in the New Hamphire primary.

"I could have stayed in Washington as a lawyer and I could have made a...lot of money," he said. "But the trouble was people really didn't want me to join their firms as a lawyer. They really wanted me as a lobbyist, which is what a lot of legislators do.

"It would have been kind of embarrassing going back around and lobbying my colleagues. To me, this is a much better life."

A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of Oklahoma, Harris has taken to academia with a vengeance. He belongs to several campus committees, has been a Fulbright scholar in Mexico and has taught one semester at the National University in Mexico City.

Youth makes transition from barnyard to Harvard Yard

Hearst Feature Service

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — It's a long way from the coastal mountains of California's Mendocino County to Harvard Yard, but except for a touch of homesickness and normal freshman jitters about grades, Grant Colfax is making the adjustment just fine.

"Things have calmed down pretty much," said the 18-year-old wunderkind, who drew international media attention after he was admitted to Harvard even though he had never attended school.

Colfax and his three younger brothers received all of their education from their parents at their mountaintop home near Boonville, Calif. David and Mickey Colfax, part of the back-to-the-land movement of the '60s, were both teachers who decided on at-home schooling for their children at the same time they gave up their own academic lives. They still live in a backwoods house without electricity.

Despite that, Grant Colfax met Harvard's rigid entrance standards. University officials called his admission unprecedented.

Colfax said the media blitz surrounding his first two weeks at Harvard was "embarrassing." He went from never having watched television to appearing on the Johnny Carson show, "which convinced me I don't want to be in show biz."

When he arrived in Cambridge, he was besieged by reporters from as far away as Australia. All that has died down, and the backwoods scholar is completely absorbed in academic life. Well, almost completely. He admits he has a crush on one of the girls across the hall.

Colfax says the change from studying at home hasn't been that bad. "There is a lot of work; it isn't that hard, it's just the quantity of it. It requires a lot of organization. I have to learn to calm down at times. I have to learn I can't learn every detail like I could at home."

That lesson came swiftly.

"After my first chemistry test I came out almost in tears because I had done so poorly," he said. "I felt so bad I called home and told them I might not make it."

His intuition was correct: He got only 54 percent of the answers right. But on the Harvard curve, that was good enough for an A; 39 percent was worth a B on the test. His other midterm grades in his pre-med course of studies were an A in math, an A in Spanish and an A-minus in chemistry.

Colfax was one of only nine students selected for a freshman honors seminar on psychological issues in medicine.

"There were 90 applications," said Dr. David Funder, a psychology professor who conducts the seminar. "I wanted to find people able to work independently, who didn't need to be spoon-fed, who were well prepared." Colfax more than met those qualifications, Funder said. "He's very energized and well-organized," the professor said, describing him as "a pretty remarkable young man."

Fellow students were reluctant to discuss Colfax, having long since grown weary of talking to reporters about the celebrity freshman.

GULF OIL CORPORATION WANTS ITS SHAREHOLDERS TO KNOW:

That by voting FOR your Company's proposed Reorganization you are making sure that the holders of a majority of Gulf's shares voting at a meeting will elect ALL the members of your Company's Board of Directors.

We believe that the planned Reorganization is important for your Company's future and to our goal of maximizing value for our shareholders.

A group headed by T. Boone Pickens is opposed to the Reorganization, and is using the Special Meeting of December 2 as an indirect way to gain support for its plan to create a royalty trust which, in our opinion, would be disadvantageous to Gulf and its shareholders.

We want you to know why.

Our individual shareholders would be penalized.

According to a document that the Pickens group has prepared and is distributing to select holders of Gulf stock, but apparently not to individual shareholders, Pickens acknowledges that the distribution of a royalty trust interest by Gulf would have tax consequences for Gulf's shareholders who are individuals.

A royalty trust unit, when distributed to the individual shareholders of Gulf, would be subject to income tax up to the maximum rate of 50%. Most importantly, the shareholder would receive no cash to pay this tax.

Our institutional and corporate shareholders, we believe, also should be opposed to a royalty trust.

Distributions of royalty trusts, in our opinion, have done little if anything to enhance shareholder wealth over the long term. For a large, integrated oil company, creating a royalty trust is like sailing in uncharted waters.

Stripping Gulf of its oil and gas properties would reduce its asset base and earnings potential. In addition, by channeling the profits from our properties directly to trust units, we would eliminate forever cash flow to reinvest in our business. This could impede Gulf's ability to compete against other major integrated oil companies and could result in a reduced overall value of Gulf.

WE BELIEVE THAT THE BEST WAY TO PROTECT YOUR INVESTMENT IN GULF AND MAXIMIZE YOUR FUTURE RETURNS IS TO SUPPORT YOUR BOARD'S RECOMMENDATION. VOTE FOR THE REORGANIZATION PROPOSAL BY SIGNING AND DATING THE WHITE PROXY CARD TODAY.

If you have previously signed a Blue opposition proxy, you have every right to change your mind. Remember the latest dated proxy is the one that counts.

If your shares are registered in "street-name" with your brokerage firm or bank, only they may vote your shares, and only upon receipt of your specific instructions. To ensure that your shares will be voted, at your earliest convenience please instruct the party responsible for your account to execute a WHITE proxy on your behalf.

If you have any questions or need assistance in voting your shares, you are encouraged to call Georgeson & Co. Inc. at (212) 440-9800 in New York, or D. F. King & Co., Inc. at (212) 269-5550 in New York, (312) 236-5881 in Chicago, or (415) 788-1119 in San Francisco. Please call collect. Gulf has also established the following toll-free numbers: 1-800-255-4853, and for Pennsylvania residents only 1-800-222-2152. If you cannot get through on the toll-free lines, we encourage you to call collect on the Georgeson & Co. Inc. and D. F. King & Co., Inc. telephone numbers.

Note: Gulf has engaged Merrill Lynch Capital Markets of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Incorporated to act as special financial advisor to Gulf, including assistance in the solicitation of proxies. Gulf has agreed to pay Merrill Lynch an initial fee of $50,000 and an additional fee of $150,000 per month. Merrill Lynch will be reimbursed for its out-of-pocket expenses and will be indemnified against certain liabilities, including liabilities arising under the federal securities laws.

Bach's Mass in B minor set for this weekend

ENTERTAINMENT

Johann Sebastian Bach's Mass in B minor will be performed for the first time in the Permian Basin Saturday and Sunday by the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale.

Saturday's performance is set for 8 p.m. at First Christian Church, Odessa. Sunday's will be held at First United Methodist Church, Illinois Avenue at Main Street, at 2:30 p.m. Both performances, which are conducted by Dr. Stanley Engebretson, the chorale's director, will include a chamber orchestra drawn from the Midland-Odessa Symphony.

"One of the exciting things about this piece is that it really offers you the chance to immerse yourself in the piece," Engebretson says. "It's like great theater, it makes you laugh and weep and think. It pulls you along from moment to moment within the work. It's more than just a concert piece, it's really a theatrical experience.

"One of the reasons we perform our concerts in the church is because of the aesthetic and acoustical setting," Engebretson says. "When you have the chance to hear the music ringing around you, it enhances the overall effect, much more than a concert hall can."

The 120-voice chorale is made up of people from Odessa, Midland, Big Spring, Andrews and Monahans. "Rather than hiring a lot of guest artists to come in, I've decided to use our own talent within the chorale, which is very strong," Engebretson says.

Soloists from Odessa include Mary Jan Sikes, Lisa Harwell, David Morrow and Jane Clancy Debenport. Midland soloists are Bonnie Hanssen, Debra Patchell, John Fleming, Denise Krieger and Bert Bostic.

Mass in B minor was written late in Bach's life, while he was employed as cantor of the St. Thomas Church, Leipzig. The composition of works, written from 1733-1738, was completed in 1748, two years before his death.

Next to his music, Bach's religious faith was his comfort and refuge, and nearly all of his music was a form of worship.

This work, Engebretson says, "goes through all the different elements of the Catholic Mass text. What's so wonderful about it is that it describes these elements with musical gestures.

"Probably the best example is the crucifixion and the immediate resurrection right afterwards, which is portrayed in the music. In the crucifixion there are weeping themes and, of course, the resurrection is just an explosive moment. It's one of the most beautiful moments in the piece."

Mass in B minor is, Engebretson says, "one of those rare pieces where all the elements come together in a magnificent sound. It has some of the most exciting music ever written."

These performances mark the third in the symphony's subscription series. Season membership and single tickets will be available at the door.

'Day After' makes powerful point

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — Imagine sleek missiles rising high over a crowded football stadium, headed, presumably, for targets in the Soviet Union. Or picture Lawrence, Kan., in rubble and white-powder ash, its wretched populace governed by firing squad.

Or consider this horrible and numbing scene, when Stephen Klein (Steve Guttenberg) realizes that no shelter, no store of food and water, can arrest the devastation of nuclear holocaust:

"You can't see it. You can't feel it. And you can't taste it. But it's here, all around us. It's going through us like an X-ray, right into our cells."

Make no mistake. "The Day After" on ABC is an extraordinary and powerful statement in support of nuclear disarmament. Never before has a TV movie offered an audience less hope, or reason, for survival in the aftermath of nuclear attack.

"The Day After" asks whether there is life after nuclear war, and millions of Americans will see Sunday night that there is not.

The film, two hours and 15 minutes long and $7 million in the making, dramatizes the imagined consequences of nuclear catastrophe in the American Midwest. The message, graphic and brutal, is one of despair: "We're lucky to be alive," Eve Dahlberg, played by Bibi Besch, tells her husband, Jim (John Cullum). "We'll see how lucky that is," he replies.

Some psychiatrists and educators warn that "The Day After" is not for the young and impressionable. Others suggest that the film be watched only in the company of friends and family.

Nicholas Meyer

THE MOVIE has polarized competing sides in the nuclear arms debate like no previous television show, though ABC denies that "The Day After" is political in content. The timing, though, is remarkable: the first American-made cruise missiles planned for deployment in Western Europe arrived in Britain less than a week before the air date.

A reference in the film to Pershing 2 missiles, which are planned for deployment in West Germany later this year, was stricken from the script to avoid suggestion that the two events — broadcast of "The Day After" and installation of American missiles in Europe — were in any way connected.

The film is divided roughly into two parts, the first dramatizing life as usual against an ominous backdrop of mounting world tension, the second depicting the aftermath of the attack.

"The Day After" opens with a panoramic sweep of the Kansas countryside. There are rumblings of confrontation in Europe, but no one appears particularly worried. Dr. Russell Oakes (Jason Robards) is more concerned about his daughter's plan to move to Boston. And Denise Dahlberg (Lori Lethin) is busy getting ready for her wedding, three days away.

Then the radio reports Soviet troops are invading West Germany. Moscow is being evacuated. And from long-silent tombs on the U.S. plains, Minutemen missiles are launched.

THE PEOPLE watch the white tails in the blue sky, knowing that Soviet missiles — perhaps earlier, perhaps later, it doesn't really matter — have also been launched. Those missiles, directed at Kansas City and the surrounding area, are in flight and unstoppable, a half-hour away.

"Where does one go from Kansas City?" a hospital colleague asks Oakes. "The Yukon? Tahiti? We're not talking about Hiroshima anymore. It was peanuts..."

The cast, with the exception of Robards and Cullum, is more or less anonymous, and with reason. "What we don't want," Nicholas Meyer, the director, said in an article in TV Guide magazine, "is another Hollywood disaster movie with viewers waiting to see Shelley Winters succumb to radiation poisoning."

The film originally was produced as a four-hour miniseries, to be broadcast over two nights, and that was considered too long to hold a troubled audience. The final version could have been shortened even more without diminishing its effectiveness.

London Film Festival has more than 230

LONDON (AP) — Boasting over 130 feature films and 100 shorts, the 27th annual London Film Festival opens to the public today.

But once the festival has its last screening Dec. 4, Ken Wlaschin, program director, is leaving London to become the new artistic director of the Los Angeles International Film Exposition, known as FILMEX.

"I'm looking forward to the challenge of running a film festival in the capital of the film industry," Wlaschin, 49, said. He has held his post as program director of the London festival and of Britain's National Film Theatre for 14 years.

He acknowledged that film is not a cultural medium that gets top priority in London, a city often eclipsed cinematically by New York and Paris.

"Cinema is treated better in Paris, since people of any cultural standing are expected to have seen certain films," he said.

"In London, it's all, 'Have you seen the new Stoppard play or the new hit at the National?' There's not the same sense of needing to be up on film."

Wlaschin said public awareness of cinema in London may increase as the British film industry continues to grow. The successive Best Picture Oscars won by "Chariots of Fire" and "Gandhi" have boosted confidence in local film activity.

Wlaschin is pleased, too, with the large scope of this year's London Film Festival offerings, encompassing over 40 countries.

Asia alone is represented by 17 films, including "The Ballad of Narayama" from Japan, which won the Grand Prize recently at the Cannes festival, and the Chinese "My Memories of Old Beijing," similarly honored at Manila.

Special appearances will be made by Lillian Gish and James Stewart. Miss Gish will speak Nov. 29 in connection with two D.W. Griffith films, "Broken Blossoms" and "The Wind," in which she stars.

Stewart will talk in December on four rarely seen Alfred Hitchcock films in which he stars: "Rope," "Rear Window," "The Man Who Knew Too Much," and "Vertigo."

Among the American offerings will be several films that have already opened in U.S. theaters: Sidney Lumet's "Daniel," the low-budget films "Lianna" and "Liquid Sky" and the comedy, "Trading Places," which has grossed over $90 million since its release in the United States June 8.

Theater group looking for one good dog

Midland Community Theatre is holding "dog auditions" Saturday at 3 p.m. for its upcoming production of "Annie."

Annie is the musical adaptation of Harold Gray's original 1924 comic strip "Little Orphan Annie." It will be staged by MCT Feb. 10 through March 24. Scattered musical rehearsals begin in December and full-time rehearsals begin Jan. 2.

Auditions for dogs suitable for the role of Sandy will be conducted on the main stage at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

"People auditions" for "Annie" will be held Dec. 3 through 6 in the Redfern Room and Theatre One at Theatre Midland. The audition schedule is:

—Dec. 3 from 1 to 5 p.m. for children ages 7 through 14.

—Dec. 4 from 1 to 5 p.m. for children and adults.

—Dec. 5 from 7 to 10 p.m. for adults only.

—Dec. 6 from 7 to 10 p.m. for adults and children.

Parts are available for seven girls ages 7-14, two boys ages 7-14, 10 women ages 20-55 and 12 men ages 20-60. Those interested in working in various technical areas of the production may come to auditions and fill out a backstage volunteer card.

"Annie" will be directed by Don Bachmann, MCT's executive director. Musical direction will be provided by Tom Roberts, choir director of First Presbyterian Church.

Audition material is available at Theatre Midland's business office. For more information call 682-2544.

Co-host of 'Ripley's Believe It or Not' confesses she loves filming oddities

By VALERIE GRECO
Hearst Feature Service

Holly Palance, co-host with her father Jack on "Ripley's Believe It or Not," confesses that she loves challenges. Filming the ABC-TV series with its segments about the world's oddities suits her perfectly.

Palance says that doing the show is "a lot like being at camp." She's been lowered on ropes down the enormous Hollywood sign in Los Angeles, crawled over by fire ants in Texas, lost in the Mohave Desert and surrounded by a lake full of alligators near New Orleans.

"I was a little nervous with the fire ants," she admits. "I never would have done it if a team of scientists hadn't been there." Before putting her arm into a nest of the lethal ants she donned a protective glove coated with a white powder the ants couldn't get through. "On my own, if I find a spider in the shower, I'm not that great about it," she says.

Simba the lion frightened her a lot more. Filming at the Popcorn Zoo in New Jersey, a refuge for mistreated animals, she was sitting beside the lion's cage when he suddenly put his paw through the bars and took a swipe at her. "I never thought I could sprint that quickly. I flew!"

Traveling to the location of the world's oldest living thing, a creosote bush in the Mohave Desert, was "like a scavenger hunt," she says. "The directions to get to it were like 'Take Old Lady Lane until you get to a pile of rocks with three paper plates.' We got lost because we turned at a pile of rocks with three beer bottles instead."

On another episode, her husband, director Roger Spottiswoode, wanted her to join the parade of the Queen's guard at Windsor Castle. "They take their job of guarding very seriously," she says with a laugh. "I started to march along with the Beefeaters when one of them suddenly lifted me under my arms from behind and carried me back up on the sidewalk. But when the guards returned, I waited until they were farther along and then I started," she says mischievously. "That time we got it."

She loves working with her husband, who directs many of the "Believe It or Not" segments so they can be together. She also played a small role in his latest film, "Under Fire," recently released. Palance wants to do another feature film with her husband and she's slated to do a "Movie of the Week" for Columbia Pictures.

Growing up as the daughter of Jack Palance "was wonderful," she states. She went to school in Berlin, Geneva and Rome, "learning all the languages, which I've since forgotten, and being exposed to all those cultures."

She loves traveling and isn't tired of it yet. "I still haven't been across the whole United States," she says ruefully. "Roger, who's English, has been cross-country twice."

Palance admits to being a "closet writer." She's got two screenplays written and does rewriting on some of her "Believe It or Not" scripts. She'd like to do more writing and to pick her own subjects. Monument Valley, "one of the most extraordinary landmarks in the world," and the Loch Ness monster are two segments she'd love to do. She refuses to do stories that are "macabre or death-oriented."

West Texas Youth Orchestra to hold first 1983-84 concert

The West Texas Youth Orchestra will hold its first concert of the 1983-84 season Sunday at 7 p.m. at the Globe Theatre in Odessa.

The orchestra, directed by guest conductor Dr. Thomas Hohstadt, musical director for the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Association, will perform works by Bach, Hindemith and Sibelius. Featured soloists are Barry Friemel, baritone, Lee High School; Matt Miller, trumpet, Odessa High School; Jennifer Leshnower, violin, Permian High School; and Karen Eggleston, violin, Midland High School.

The West Texas Youth Orchestra, now in its third season, is composed of gifted young musicians from throughout the Permian Basin who have committed their time to weekly rehearsals at the Midland-Odessa Symphony rehearsal hall at Terminal. Members are accepted throughout the year by audition.

The orchestra is conducted by Charles Nail and coached by The Thouvenel String Quartet of Midland.

All performances are free and open to the public.

McMurry choir to present 'Elijah'

ABILENE — The McMurry College Oratorio Choir will perform Mendelssohn's "Elijah" Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Radford Auditorium at McMurry College.

The choir, composed of McMurry students, faculty and members of the Abilene community, numbers 90 singers. The choir is directed by Betty Karol Wilson, director of choral music at McMurry.

The performance has a strong dramatic element and centers on the story of the conflict between Elijah and Baal in the Old Testament.

Cartoonist to speak in Lubbock

LUBBOCK — Berke Breathed, creator of the comic strip "Bloom County," will be speaking at the University Center Theatre at Texas Tech University Monday at 8:15 p.m.

Breathed, who attended The University of Texas at Austin, will speak on his art and inspiration for "Bloom County," syndicated by the Washington Post two years ago. "Bloom County" appears in 250 newspapers across the country.

Tickets, priced at $3, may be purchased at the door.

'Happy Days' comes to Okinawa

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The cast of ABC's "Happy Days" is off to Okinawa to do battle with the U.S. forces stationed there. On the softball field, that is.

Henry "The Fonz" Winkler, Anson "Potsie" Williams, and Marion Ross, plus former performers in the series, including Linda Purl, Cathy Silvers, Kevin Sullivan, Laurie Mahaffey, Cary Schuman and Harris Kal, will play various military teams on Okinawa before leaving Nov. 20 for vacation in Tokyo.

Archaeological inspector to speak on pyramids

Zahi Hawass, chief inspector of the archaeological district of Giza, Egypt, will give a free lecture and slide program at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., tonight at 7:30 p.m.

Hawass, in the United States on a Fulbright Scholarship at the University of Pennsylvania, will talk about recent discoveries and new interpretations regarding this ancient land and the origins of the pyramids as he takes the audience on a journey down the Nile River.

Hawass has worked with the antiquities of Egypt for over a decade. He has held the position of inspector of antiquities at numerous archaeological sites along the Nile Valley, and has been an archaeology consultant to the UNESCO organization of the United Nations and the Arab League.

In his excavations, Hawass has discovered a village for King Cheops and a tomb for the architect of the great pyramid. He has also developed new theories about the origins and construction of the pyramids.

His Midland talk is co-sponsored by The University of Texas of the Permian Basin Travel Study Program and the museum. For more information call the museum, 683-2882.

Former TV detective casts himself as cop

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "The funny thing is, every time I want to do a part other than a detective, I get a lot of resistance," says Mike Connors. "And my first time at bat as a producer I pick a script in which I play a cop."

Connors, who spent eight years as television private eye "Mannix," produced and stars in the theatrical film "The Doorman." Connors had been wanting for some time to get into independent production and the script was brought to him by his friend, actor Tony Lo Bianco, who was director.

Film companies find treasure in vaults

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — On a recent weekend when "The Right Stuff" was drawing an average of $6,485 per theater and "Never Say Never Again" only $2,829, another movie collected an average take of $6,725.

The winner was a 29-year-old thriller, "Rear Window," starring James Stewart and the late Grace Kelly.

"Rear Window" appeared on only 46 screens, compared to 1,231 for "Never Say Never Again." But its success has prompted additional film companies to search their vaults for other potential money-makers.

Universal Classics, a division of MCA-Universal, is planning to follow "Rear Window" with other films acquired from the estate of the late Alfred Hitchcock: "Vertigo," "Rope," "The Man Who Knew Too Much" and "The Trouble With Harry."

"We'll have up to 120 prints of 'Rear Window,'" says Kelly Neal, new head of Universal Classics, "and we'll be making more dates for Thanksgiving and Christmas. 'Vertigo' opens in Los Angeles on Nov. 16 and will open soon in New York, Washington, Boston, San Francisco and perhaps Seattle. We're investigating the possibility of releasing it in some theaters in the original (widescreen) VistaVision process.

"Reissues are a good idea, but it's a question of having the right films. The Hitchcock films are unique, because they had been out of circulation for a long time. There was curiosity about seeing 'The Leopard' in its uncut version. Not many old pictures have the same qualities."

— Charles Schweger, head of Columbia Pictures Classics

"WE'LL BRING out 'Rope' in January and all of the Hitchcock films will be released within six months. I can hardly wait to look into our catalog for other movies that might get the same treatment."

Another success story is 20th Century-Fox Classics' "The Leopard," the 20-year-old Luchino Visconti film starring Burt Lancaster.

"It's not as big as 'Rear Window,'" said Fox Classics marketing director Jane Alsobrook, "but it went into New York for a three-week run and has stayed a couple of months. It's doing well in Washington and Los Angeles.

"We found the negative in Rome at its original length, three hours and five minutes. It had been released in this country 25 minutes shorter and dubbed into English. We retained the Italian version and had it subtitled into English in Brussels."

Warner Bros. has had a modest success with the 1954 "A Star Is Born," starring Judy Garland, which the Motion Picture Academy helped restore to something near its original uncut version. Premieres to benefit film restoration were held in five cities, and now the film is being released by Warner Bros. Classics.

"WE'RE PICKING certain cities because we have only a few prints," says Bill Grant, director of Warners Classics. "We're not realizing a great deal of money from 'A Star Is Born,' but it's getting some action. The same with Stanley Kubrick's 'Barry Lyndon.' Our next release will be 'Around the World in 80 Days,' which we recently acquired."

Classics divisions are something relatively new in major companies. They were formed to market films without mass appeal — foreign-language movies and low-budget, high quality domestic films. The principal buyers are the art houses or repertory theaters which appeal to discriminating audiences.

Reissues are not as easy as they seem, observes Charles Schweger, head of Columbia Pictures Classics.

"We don't have any in release at the moment," said Schweger. "Reissues are a good idea, but it's a question of having the right films. The Hitchcock films are unique, because they had been out of circulation for a long time. There was curiosity about seeing 'The Leopard' in its uncut version. Not many old pictures have the same qualities."

THOSE interviewed by the Associated Press agreed that a big part of a film's reissue value depends on how much television exposure the movie has had. Old films that have been withheld from television because of rights restrictions imposed by the producers will have more appeal when resurrected in theaters.

Films that have appeared on television would have to have some new dimension, such as added footage or improved projection and sound to be successful as a theatrical reissue.

There's no question that films for revival must be selected with care, says Fox's Ms. Alsobrook.

"There are not many around that have the appeal of the Hitchcock films, which hadn't been seen for 20 years," she said.

Actress goes from 'Best' to 'Star'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Few people could understand it when Mariel Hemingway, the tall, muscular star of "Personal Best," was cast as a Playboy centerfold in "Star 80."

But director Bob Fosse saw in her the quality of innocence he was looking for.

Miss Hemingway had lobbied long and hard for the role before Fosse agreed to let her read for it.

There was the matter of her small-busted figure. She had breast implants. "Bob Fosse was worried that I was doing it just for the film," she said, "but I told him I was going to do it anyway...I decided that I didn't want to go through life being looked on just as an athletic tomboy."

In "Star 80" she plays the role of Dorothy Stratton, the young Playboy Playmate and actress who was killed by her husband, who then killed himself.

'100 Stars' come back for more

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The entertainment world has seen "The Godfather II" and "Jaws II," so why not "Night of 100 Stars, Part 2"?

Broadway producer Alexander Cohen announced recently that he will stage another star-filled gala at Radio City Music Hall on Feb. 14, 1985, for ABC.

The first "Night of 100 Stars" produced far more than 100, the celebrities turning out en masse because the event benefitted the Actors Fund of America.

"The fund needs another $1.5 million to open offices in Chicago and Los Angeles," Cohen said. "Then it can help anyone in the entertainment community who is in need."

Governor gives party for employees

Gov. Brown

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — When Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. and his wife Phyllis George Brown, throw a party, they don't scrimp on the guest list. About 10,000 people were invited to their most recent bash.

The reception Wednesday at the Governor's Mansion, which featured punch in crystal bowls and hot cider in silver servers, was for state employees to get together with their boss. Brown cannot succeed himself and will be leaving office when Gov.-elect Martha Layne Collins takes over.

Hundreds of visitors stood patiently in line Wednesday, gawking at Chinese vases and antique furniture.

Of the 10,000 people invited, "we thought maybe half that many would show up," said Pat Capito, director of the mansion. "It looks like we're going to get more than that."

Flynn

BOSTON (AP) — When Raymond Flynn campaigned for mayor, he vowed to call off meter maids who ticket cars in congested city neighborhoods. Now Flynn is mayor-elect, and he wasted no time in getting first-hand experience about the problem.

On Wednesday — the day after he won the election — Flynn got a $15 ticket outside the Parkman House on Beacon Street, where he was having lunch with outgoing Mayor Kevin H. White.

Flynn, 44, "had no complaints with the ticket," said press spokesman Frank Costello. He immediately sent an aide to City Hall to pay it.

"It was the quickest ticket paid in Boston history," Costello added. "It was paid before the ticket was registered in the system at City Hall."

Trudeau

TORONTO (AP) — It comes as little surprise, but Margaret Trudeau has filed for divorce from Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, six years after the couple separated following months of sensational headlines dealing with her jet-setting exploits.

Papers requesting a no-fault divorce were filed in the Supreme Court of Ontario on Wednesday, according to Mrs. Trudeau's lawyer, Michael Levine.

The jet-set lifestyle of the 35-year-old Mrs. Trudeau has made her a favorite of gossip columnists.

The prime minister, a devout Roman Catholic, is not expected to contest the divorce, which could take up to a year to go through, Levine said in an interview Wednesday night.

Mrs. Trudeau, who has dated Fried Kemper, a wealthy Ottawa businessman for several months, is not planning to remarry, the lawyer said.

Trudeau's office said the prime minister would have no comment.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — CBS correspondent Marlene Sanders says she has managed to combine a hectic career and a family life by having a supportive husband, good household help and not letting herself feel guilty about working.

Ms. Sanders, 52, was the keynote speaker for Wednesday's YWCA Tribute to Women luncheon in Lincoln.

The correspondent, who joined CBS News in 1978 after years of reporting for ABC, also said opportunities are much greater for women in news today than in years past, although top management remains a male bastion.

Ms. Sanders anchors the Saturday edition of Newsbreak on CBS and is a regular contributor to CBS News Sunday Morning. She frequently anchors news broadcasts on the CBS Radio Network.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Comedian Skip Stephenson, upset by a critic who panned his singing, ran an ad in the Omaha World-Herald to respond. The newspaper's Roger Catlin had written that Stephenson, a fixture on NBC-TV's "Real People," tripped over the words in three numbers during a benefit performance Friday night for Stephenson's alma mater, Holy Name School.

The review also said Stephenson "almost derived wicked glee from telling jokes about religion and sex in an audience with priests and nuns in the front row."

Stephenson said his main concern was with Catlin's "wicked glee" comment.

"Any reference to sex was quite innocent, and I was not telling jokes about religion," he wrote in the ad published Wednesday. "I was telling jokes about life in parochial school as a kid."

The comedian admitted flubbing some songs, saying he didn't have enough time to rehearse.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Former U.S. ambassador to Britain Walter H. Annenberg has given $1 million toward renovation of the Colonial Williamsburg Information Center.

The donation from the Walter H. Annenberg Fund was announced Wednesday by Charles R. Longsworth, president of Colonial Williamsburg, who called it "an extremely generous gift from a thoughtful American."

Annenberg owns Triangle Publications, which publishes "TV Guide."

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Milton Stiefel, 83, founder of the Ivoryton Playhouse in Essex and a director who gave Will Geer and Katharine Hepburn their start in the theater, died Monday of a heart attack.

Stiefel directed many Broadway plays but is best remembered as the founder of the theater. He bought the playhouse in 1928 and by 1941, more than 125 Broadway plays had been produced at Ivoryton, each directed and staged by Stiefel. He retired in 1976 and sold the playhouse.

NBC show taken off air

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Bay City Blues" has been pulled from NBC-TV's batting order, but the network says it will give the struggling series about life in the minor leagues another chance this winter.

Three other low-rated shows pulled several weeks ago by NBC to revamp the storylines will return, but it was not certain how long they will remain. The shows are "For Love and Honor," "Manimal" and "The Rousters."

"Bay City Blues," from the same production team as "Hill Street Blues," will make its last appearance Tuesday, Nov. 29, after encountering poor ratings despite critical acclaim.

"Everyone agrees 'Bay City Blues' is an excellent show made under superior production auspices," NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff said Wednesday. "It hasn't been making it on Tuesdays.

"We continue to have faith in this well-made series and we will bring it back after the first of the year."

"Bay City Blues" has been in ratings trouble since its premiere this fall. In the most recent Nielsen ratings period it was ranked No. 66 out of 67 shows rated.

"For Love and Honor," a drama about the men and women of an Army airborne unit, will return at 10 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 6, taking over the time period vacated by "Bay City Blues."

Tartikoff said "For Love and Honor" will now feature a serialized form which will provide a "continuous storyline flow."

"Manimal" will return at 9 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 3. The show is an adventure-fantasy about a man who has the ability to transform into different animals to fight crime.

"The Rousters" will be given a two-week period to improve its ratings. It will be telecast following "The A-Team" on Tuesdays, Dec. 20 and Dec. 27. The series is a lighthearted adventure about a carnival security agent named Wyatt Earp III. Both "The Rousters" and "The A-Team" are produced by Stephen J. Cannell.

Disabled athlete to appear on Wheaties cereal box

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Disabled athletes can also be champions, and wheelchair racer George Murray says his appearance on cereal boxes next year will help make that point to millions of Americans.

"Personally, it's the chance for me to have an effect," said Murray, one of two people to first cross the United States in arm-powered wheelchairs in 1981. "It's a vehicle, the opportunity to get the message out that wheelchair athletes are legitimate athletes, too."

General Mills selected Murray, a University of Illinois graduate student, as one of six top amateur athletes in its "Search for Champions" contest this year. Murray's photograph is expected to appear on boxes of Wheaties next summer, about the same time the World Wheelchair Games are being held at the university.

"I think the significance of it is not me, per se, being on the box," said Murray, a Maine native who is studying for a degree in therapeutic recreation. "It's a major consumer corporation recognizing a disabled athlete that's important."

Advertised as the "Breakfast of Champions" for 50 years, Wheaties boxes have featured the photographs of many sports figures, but never a handicapped athlete.

Murray, whose father was also confined to a wheelchair after an automobile crash, was injured in a hunting accident.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Hyperactivity often qualitative

Dear Dr. Solomon: Would you please explain what is meant by hyperactivity? I have three brothers and two sons, and it seems to me that it is normal for a boy to be hyperactive. — Mrs. F.O., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Dear Mrs. O.: You raise a valid question, particularly since the assessment of what constitutes hyperactivity is in large part subjective. Very often it is the quality of a child's behavior, rather than the quantity of the behavior, that marks it as hyperactive.

For example, a youngster on a playground would be expected to run around and generally to be active; however, a hyperactive child would be one whose behavior was disorganized, unpredictable, and socially unacceptable. You can understand why two people might come to different conclusions about a diagnosis of hyperactivity after observing the same child.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I recall reading in your column at various times that a person can lower his blood pressure by cutting down on the amount of salt he uses or by losing weight. But suppose someone cuts down on the amount of fat he uses, without cutting down on salt or losing weight? Would this have any effect on his blood pressure? — Alfred, Hoboken, N.J.

Dear Alfred: The results of a study conductd in Finland indicate that a low-fat diet might result in at least a short-term reduction in blood pressure; however, the long-term effects of such a diet are not known.

Of course many people would benefit from a reduction in their fat intake, regardless of the effect of such a diet on their blood pressure.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother was given a drug and the doctor warned her that one of the side effects might be photosensitivity. Can you explain what this is? It sounds as if she shouldn't have her picture taken. — Sue, N.Y.C.

Dear Sue: Some people on drug therapy may experience an adverse skin reaction (such as a rash) when exposed to ultraviolet light. Therefore, these patients should either avoid sunlight or use an effective sunscreen.

A variety of drugs, including oral antidiabetic agents, have been implicated in this condition.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that women who have children have less of a chance of getting breast cancer than women who do not have children? — Amy, N.Y.C.

Dear Amy: Dr. Edward J. Trapido, of the Harvard School of Public Health in Boston, reports that the number of children a woman has appears to affect her risk of developing breast cancer. He adds, however, that the decrease in risk is strong only for women who have had at least five children.

For Bertha, Wilmington, Delaware: Exercise is not only for individuals who need to lose weight. Many people find it tends to relieve anxiety and tension, improves self-esteem, and generally, makes them feel better, both physically and mentally.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Debbie Allen talks about living at The Clusters:

"There's a lot of activity around here. Like this aerobics class.

"I can swim, play tennis, aerobics, jog. I can stay in good physical shape just living at my own house.

"I've lived here 8 months and I've been an apartment dweller for several years. I looked at several other complexes, but they were all the same...just four walls, a bathroom and a kitchen. This one is quite different. It has all the other luxuries."

No other Midland apartment community combines a multitude of activities with truly luxurious living. Featuring your choice of decorator wall coverings, side-by-side icemaker refrigerators, built-in micro-waves, ceiling fans, dishwashers, washers and dryers, trash compactors, mini-blinds and French doors to patios/balconies.

Come and visit and you'll see why Debbie Allen says, "I would really hate to move from here...I love it."
