TOUSSAINT TO DIE--VERDICT

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

By H. N. F.

Congressman Thomas L. Blanton of Texas voted for the Fordney Emergency Tariff bill. He voted against the Fordney Act. Congressman Blanton is a very spectacular individual. He is not a free trader. He believes that if the finished or refined products are to be protected by tariffs, then the raw materials or staples of the farm should be protected. Chairman Fordney denounced the opponents of the republican tariff measure as free traders. Blanton would not stand for this and he made a declaration of his atitude as follows: "The gentleman from Michigan is not against free trade more strongly than I am. As I have said before, let me repeat, that in Mexico, South America, Australia, Europe, Asia and Africa, there exists an entirely different state of conditions, a different standard of living, a different standard of working hours, a different standard of wages, a different standard of necessities, morals, intelligence, hopes, ambitions, and aspirations. Mexican peons are content to work for a miserable existence. Chinese and Japanese laborers are perfectly satisfied to work from 10 to 14 hours each day for less than 20 cents pay, to live on rice, to go almost naked, and to let the future take care of itself. As a loyal democratic American, I am not willing to force our intelligent, ambitious, deserving laborers, in the city factories and upon the farm and ranches, to freely compete in their American markets directly with the peons and slaves of the universe. I stand for upholding American standards. I deny that the democrats of this nation stand for free trade. I deny that free trade has ever been in any democratic platform. I deny that the few democratic leaders who have advocated free trade have truly represented the majority of the democrats of this country. I am in hearty accord with and am willing to follow the policy outlined by such statesmen as Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, and Jackson on this subject, and while it is necessary for the United States to collect $500,000,000 annually through the customhouses, I am in favor of so distributing such duties as to equalize the cost of production in this as against that of all competing foreign countries, on every product of the American farms and ranches, as well as the industries of our nation. This is incidental protection to the extent of maintaining American standards and ideals." And right there, Blanton had Fordney on the hip.

Attorney General C. M. Cureton is here for the week in conference with Judge Carrigan getting ready for the taking of testimony in the Red River boundary case. Attorney General Cureton now serving his second term is one of the busiest of men. The state of Texas has eleven cases pending on the dooket of the Supreme court of the United States and the Lord knows how many more it will have in the near future. There are boundary cases, passenger rate cases, freight rate cases, a case from Pope county involving the tribal right of the only tribe of Indians to the manner born, Texas is an imperial commonwealth and her near neighbors are willing at all times to grabe rich slices of Lone Star territory. W. E. Cureton, the father of the attorney general is a pioneer Texan and was a lawmaker in the long ago. The Culbersons, father and son, were very close to him, and he looked upon "Old Dave," as the natives of East Texas called the great constitutional lawyer and, leader as one of the greatest statesman the South had ever produced. W. E. Cureton and his sons have a ranch near Lordsburg, N. M., and at the ranch and later in California the veteran Texas lawmaker and farmer will spend August dog days and the golden days of September. General Cureton will be here all the week, as the taking of testimony in the boundary case will begin on the eighteenth of August. Oklahoma grabbed "No Man's Land" or Greer county and if Oklahoma succeeds in grabbing the lied river, Mexico may become emboldened and annex the Rio Grande and its northern boundary line from Brownsville to El Paso.

There are more former lawmaker citizens of Wichita Falls than there are millionaires in the oil fields. This reminds H. N. F. that Railroad Commissioner Earl B. Mayfield says that state rights have been assassinated and the railroad commission act fathered by Reagan and Hogg emasculated by the makers of the Esch-Cummins transportation act. Hogg gave the people the railway commission and the stock and bond law. The latter law squeezed the water out of railway and other securities; the former gave the state the right to make freight and passenger tariffs. H. G. King of this city was a member of the twenty-second legislature. Of course he was very young at the time and represented the people of the proud old county of Burleson. James Stephen Hogg was governor and Charles A. Culberson was attorney General, which also reminds H. N. F. that the gentleman from Burleson was the author of the "long and short haul" provision of the Hogg Railway Commission act. Judge James W. Swayne, Tarrant county was the leader of the Hogg forces

CONGRESSMAN BLACK SAYS DECREASE IN FREIGHT RATE WILL GREATLY AID FARMER

The Record News presents today an article by Congressman Eugene Black of Clarksville, regarding some of the problems confronting the country and congress today. This is the first of a series of similar articles by different members of congress which will be printed in this paper within the next few days.

BY EUGENE BLACK, M. C.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Many remedies have been suggested for the help of agriculture in its present plight, and for the revival of business from the stagnation which envelops it. Some of these suggestions have been good, some bad, and others indifferent. But there is one thing which everybody agrees if done would help the situation, and that thing is a reduction in freight rates. I do not mean a radical and unreasonable reduction, but a real, substantial one, taking into consideration the changed economic conditions which now prevail. At a time when the purchasing power of a bushel of wheat, a bushel of corn, a pound of cotton at today's prices payable at the farm when expressed in prices of the things the farmer needs and buys, is lower than it has been at any time within the last twenty-five years, it is absolutely inexcusable that freight rates should remain at the level where they were fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission in August, 1920. When the situation arises like this freight rate question, we naturally ask.

1. What is it? 2. Why is it? 3. What can be done about it.

Now as to question No. 1, What is it? The average receipt per ton mile, class 1 railways, was 0.715 in 1917. The coresponding average at the present time is approximately 1.22, indicating an increase of nearly 70 per cent since 1917, or to express it in figures, the operating revenue of the railroads for the year ending December 31, 1916, was $3,596,865,766 and for the year ending December 31, 1920, was $5,360,195,790.

Why the Increase?

2. Why this increase? The short answer to that is: Increase in operating expenses. By far the largest item in this increase has been the increase of wages to employees. In 1917, the increase to employees amounted to an aggregate sum of $270,905,748; in

COMMITTEE TO HEAR MELLON ON TAX BILL

Expect Old Bill to Be Largely Rewritten in Effort to Simplify Tax Problems in Future.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Treasury Secretary Mellon is to appear tomorrow before the house ways and means committee and is expected to present the revised copy of his memorandum containing possible new sources for taxation.

Chairman Fordney said Mr. Mellon would discuss railroad financing with which four government departments—the treasury, war finance corporation, railroad administration and interstate commerce commission—have to do.

It is expected, however, that the secretary will be questioned and some of the revisions made in the original memorandum presented on Monday.

The nature of the changes has not been disclosed. Republican members of the committee held two extended sessions today discussing with Dr. T. S. Adams, a treasury tax expert, the grouping of various administrative features of the bill and other changes which would make for simplification in determining taxes.

The extent to which the present law is to be rewritten by the committee remains to be determined but if the suggestions made by treasury experts are followed, the old bill will be largely rewritten. This probably would delay its presentation to the house considerably beyond the time hereafter expected.

Chairman Fordney and other members say it is proposed to go very carefully into all phases of the subject since the bill is expected to stand for a number of years.

YANK TROOPS TO STAY IN GERMANY

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—A number of resolutions relating to withdrawal of American occupation forces from Germany, long pending before the house foreign affairs committee, are not expected to be acted on this session, if at all.

"It is my personal view," Chairman Porter said today, "that American soldiers will remain in Germany until we have adjusted our affairs with that country, which I trust will occur in the next sixty or ninety days."

EASTERN ROADS URGE FURTHER CUT IN WAGES

Refuse to Cease Asking for Reductions and Seek Abolition of Overtime Labor Scale.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The attitude of the big eastern railroads toward further wage decreases and the elimination of time and one-half for overtime for engine, train and yard service workers, will be communicated to the Big Four railroad brotherhoods and the Switchmen's Union of North America next week. That was announced tonight following a conference here between a conference of the railroad executives of the eastern president's conference and the heads of the railroad organizations concerned.

Until the conference has taken final action, it is understood that the referendum vote and the making of agreements under the recent award of the railroad labor board, reducing wages twelve per cent effective July 1, will be held in abeyance.

The union chiefs today asked the attitude of the railroads on the following questions:

"If the operating officials of the railroads will restore the wage rates in effect on June 30, 1921.

"If all demands for further decreases will be withdrawn.

"If all demands for the elimination of time and one-half for overtime and radical schedule revision will be withdrawn and not pressed again for a stated period."

The railroad executives, according to a statement they issued, pointed out that to grant the first request "would mean an increase in wages of approximately twelve per cent at a time when all other wages are coming down" and to accede to the second would be assuming that "no further decreases are or will be warranted by reductions in the cost of living."

The union chiefs were told that in granting the request for the withdrawal of the demand for elimination of overtime the railroad officials would be "taking the question of time and a half for overtime out of the hands of the labor board, where it is now under discussion, and violate every agreement the men now have with their respective roads, each of which has a terminating or revision clause.

After hearing the arguments presented by the labor men in behalf of their requests, the railroad officials informed them that they would make a report to the president's conference which will take final action. The conference will meet next week.

MILITARY SITUATION IN MOROCCA IS UNCHANGED

By Associated Press.

MADRID, Aug. 3.—Advices from Melilla where Spanish troops have been fighting against Moroccan tribesmen today asserted the military situation there was unchanged. Food supplies and ammunition were still being transported by air planes to isolated troops. No additional casualties were reported. Authorities have been instructed to prevent men between the ages of 20 and 26 from leaving Spain in order that all potential soldiers may be available in case of necessity.

GREEKS ARE WARNED AGAINST ADVANCE ON TURKISH CAPITAL

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The allies have warned Greece that an advance on Constantinople by her troops, which now are engaged in war with Turkish nationalists, will not be tolerated, it was authoritatively stated here today. No grounds exists, however, it is added, for believing that Greece contemplates any such advance.

HIGH OFFICIALS RESERVE BOARD RESENT CHARGE

Accusation by John Skelton Williams Brings Fire From Governors Harding and Strong.

"Ignorant and Inaccurate" Statements Charged to Former Comptroller of Treasury.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Criticism of federal reserve system credit policies which was continued today by a congressional commission by John Skelton Williams, former comptroller of the currency, aroused resentment on the part of the system's two highest officers, Governor Harding of the reserve board and Governor Strong of the New York Reserve Bank.

In one of the frequent verbal interchanges Governor Harding charged across the committee room, swinging his fist, but was halted by struggling associates just in front of his adversary, who remained cool but was rising for the threatened encounter.

A few minutes later Mr. Strong, while reading to the commission a report which charged Mr. Williams with "false and misleading statements" was interrupted by the former comptroller who shouted: "That statement of yours is false."

Governor Strong, however, continued reading and presently referred to Mr. Williams as being "jealous of his prerogatives."

"And that's a lie, too," the latter interjected.

"At this point I request the committee to require the comptroller to make oath whether he has stated the whole truth or not," Governor Strong exclaimed.

Chairman Anderson ruled amid the confusion that it was "not feasible to adopt the policy at this stage of the game.

Both federal reserve officials with a number of associates had sat apparently unmoved during two days along with an audience which numbered many senators and representa-

AIR FIELD SELLS FOR MERE SONG

Barron Field, Costing More Than Million, Brings Only $24,000.

By Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Aug. 3.—Barron Field, one of the original three government flying fields here, was sold at auction today for $24,000 to the Kelly Salvage Company of Fort Worth. Parker L. Crouch of Des Moines, Iowa, represented the government in the sale.

The field was one of the most picturesque in the country during the training of the United States and Canadian fliers here during the world war. It was erected in 1917 at a cost of approximately $1,250,000.

Many aviators who made the supreme sacrifice for their countries overseas trained at Barron Field. During the days of the war it was the scene of several fatal accidents.

The other two original fields, in 1917 designated as Taliaferro Fields Nos. 1, 2 and 3 by the United States air service, were sold several weeks ago. Carruthers Field at Benbrook near here was the scene of the fatal accident in which Vernon Castle, the dancing master, lost his life.

HOT TRAIL LEADS TO EXPECTATION OF BANKER'S CAPTURE

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3—Ben Newmark, chief investigator of the state's attorney's office, waited tonight for further word from the Mexican border concerning the movements of Warren C. Spurgin, fugitive president of the Michigan Avenue Trust company.

Within the last 48 hours Spurgin's trail has become hot and Mr. Newmark is confident that reports received from Marfa, Texas, yesterday, will be followed soon by a message telling of Spurgin's capture.

It was learned today, through announcement by Assistant States Attorney James H. Mc-Shane, that the books of the trust company had not been audited for two years. The law, McShane says, requires an audit by the state bank examiner's office once a year. The states attorney's office has engaged an auditing company to undertake a complete audit of the books.

SENATE VOTES ENGROSSMENT BURKETT BILL

Neff Enforcement Measure Provides for Removal of Municipal, County or State Officials.

Ouster Proceedings Filed by Attorney General on Affidavit of Five Reputable Citizens.

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Aug. 3.—By a vote of 13 to 11 with two pairs, the senate passed to engrossment today the Burkett law enforcement bill providing for methods of removing officers who refuse or fail to enforce the laws. The bill provides that proceedings to oust municipal, county or district officers shall be instituted by the attorney general upon affidavit of five reputable citizens of the county in which the officer resides. District judges are exempted from the bill.

Atticus Webb, superintendent of the anti-saloon league, was forced to leave the senate chamber when Senator Parr asked that the rule be invoked as to privileges of the floor. Late today he filed with Lieutenant Governor Davidson a request that he be allowed as a representative of home and state the privileges of the floor as a reporter. Senator Bailey objected and on his motion the request was referred to the committee on rules. Rev. Webb will be allowed to appear before the committee and show why he should be allowed the floor.

The house completed today the A. and M. budget of the appropriation bill and accepted the John Tarleton college without change. They were on the Grubbs vocational college budget when they recessed over night.

JURY DECREES SON MUST PAY WITH HIS LIFE FOR MURDER OF FATHER

After a forty-five-minute deliberation during which three ballots were taken, a jury in the Thirtieth District court late Wednesday afternoon returned a verdict of guilty and assessed a penalty of death against Henry J. Toussaint, former army officer and engineer, for the murder of his father, O. H. Toussaint, local contractor and business associate of the condemned son.

The verdict is the first in which the death penalty has been assessed against a white man in the history of the county. The death penalty is rare against white persons in the state. Barring unfavorable action by higher courts, or pardon by the governor, the verdict means that the accused will be hanged at the county jail at a date to be set soon.

Although apparently affected, the accused maintained that control which has been one of his characteristics since the time of his arrest, as the verdict was read by Judge H. F. Weldon, a few minutes before 6 o'clock.

"Tell my wife that everything is all right. We'll appeal the case," was the only comment made by the convicted man as accompanied by an officer he slowly walked back to the county jail where he has been confined since his arrest on February 7, the day following the murder of the father for which he now stands convicted. Before a curious crowd he unconcernedly sat in the county jail yard a few minutes before he entered the building.

Wife Breaks Down

The wife, against whom the condemned man had filed divorce proceedings previous to the killing and who returned to him as soon as he was arrested, and who again returned here from her parents' home in Pennsylvania a few days before the opening of the seven-day trial, burst into uncontrollable sobs as the verdict was announced.

She was surrounded by friends who took her to a rest room. The tragic figure of the trial was apparently completely broken down at the verdict which she as one of the main witnesses for the defense had tried to avert. She regained her composure later when she left the courthouse.

The first two ballots taken after the jury retired was 11 to 1 in favor of the death penalty, the one voting for penitentiary for life. The third ballot resulted in the verdict. The verdict was reached at 5:30 p. m., 45 minutes after the jury had retired. Some delay resulted in the announcement of the verdict due to the absence of Judge H. F. Weldon. He was recalled to the courtroom and the verdict announced.

Tells Jury to Uphold Law

"In all confidence and conscience the state of Texas calls upon you to stiffen your backbone in order that the laws of the state may be vindicated, that others may be deterred from similar acts and that the accused may pay for the most heinous crime that he committed—to retire to your room and after a thorough consideration return with the verdict 'We, the jury, find the defendant guilty as charged by the indictment and assess his punishment as death.'"

With these words District Attorney Wilson placed the fate of Henry J. Toussaint, self-confessed patricide, in the hands of the jury late Wednesday at the conclusion of one of the most powerful arguments ever presented in a local court in a criminal case, according to statements of several members of the local bar.

Following speeches of C. C. McDonald, Luther Hoffman and B. Y. Cummings for the defense of two and a half hour duration, Wilson in his second argument before a jury since his appointment as district attorney several weeks ago, arose to conclude for the state at 3:10 p. m. In the presence of a crowd that packed all available space in the courtroom of the 30th district court with a heat and congestion that was oppressive, he spoke for one hour and a half.

Makes Powerful Summary

Taking one after another of the defenses set up by the three previous speakers, accepting every challenge that had been fired at him, following up in logical sequence every contention of the state, repeatedly pointing to the accused who sat with bowed head a few feet from him, the district attorney within a fe wminutes after he started speaking had the attention of the courtroom until in a powerful summary at the conclusion he told why the state demanded the life of the former army officer, graduate engineer and the man who according to the speaker took the life of his father and business associate last February in "one of the most cold blooded

ATTACK UPON MRS. BENNETT YET UNSOLVED

Woman Asserts That Intruder Declared His Purpose Was to Murder Her.

Police Believe Solution of Mystery May Not Be Entirely Solved for Several Weeks.

The mystery surrounding the attack committed Monday afternoon on Mrs. W. D. Bennett, 1309 Sixteenth street, was no nearer solution at the end of investigations Wednesday than on the night before, according to the announcement of City Detective Jack Miller, who has been giving his entire time to the case.

Belief that the investigations may drag on for several weeks or even months before it is ultimately unraveled was expressed by Police Chief Morgan. "However," Chief Morgan said, "We will unravel the case, whether it takes us six days or six months or longer."

While asserting that it was highly possible that she could have been mistaken in the color of her assailant, Mrs. Bennett remains firm in her belief that it was a negro, who attacked her, according to officers who have conversed with her.

A conversation which Mrs. Bennett late Monday told City Detective Miller took place during the attack, and which Detective Miller asked newspaper men to refrain from announcing was made public Wednesday.

"Quit you're killing me," Mrs. Bennett said she told her assailant as she gasped for breath, to which she received the reply of either "that's what I was sent here to do," or "that is what I came here to do."

This was declared by Detective Miller to have been one of the chief reasons which prompted officers to believe that the attack was for the purpose of wreaking personal vengeance and that the woman is mistaken in her belief that her assailant was a negro.

ARGENTINE FLYER SETS HIGH RECORD

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 3—Eduardo Olivero, an Argentine flying man who served in the Italian army during the war in which he attained the rank of captain and won five medals has just set a new South American flying record for altitude by attaining a height of 26,240 feet.

He may have gone higher, for 8,000 meters was the most the instrument would register and Olivero lost consciousness for some time on attaining this height. The record height was reached in one hour and fifteen minutes.

The flight was made in exceptionally cold weather. The machine used was an Italian biplane.

TEXAS CHIEF PAYS ANOTHER CASH DIVIDEND

Declares Payment of 75 Per Cent Following One of 50 Per Cent Three Months Ago.

Company One of Survivors of Boom Days; Payments From Oil Runs Aggregate 600 Per Cent.

Payment of a cash dividend of 75 per cent by the Texas Chief Oil company was announced Wednesday by Henry Hobbs, president, from the local office, the headquarters of the company. Three months ago the company paid a 50 per cent dividend. Its returns to stockholders since organization in May, 1919, aggregating 600 per cent. The dividend was paid entirely from oil runs, officials state.

The payment of this substantial dividend after weeks of "dollar oil" was regarded as much of a "further" in local oil circles as was the bringing in of the company's first well, the famous Texas Chief, in the summer of 1919, effecting the record extension to the northward from the Burk Waggoner discovery well, and proving up considerable territory.

As one of the very few small companies that survived the boom days, it has interested big outside investors to a great extent, as well as local interests.

The company is associated with the Haskell group, headed by ex-Governor C. N. Haskell of Oklahoma, now of New York City. The Haskell group also having the distinction of not passing a dividend, regardless of any circumstances that have arisen.

WEEVIL IS ACTIVE IN COTTON BELT

Government Reports Fair Progress for Crop; Weevil Stopped in Texas.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—While rainfall was generally very light in the cotton belt the last week, moderate to heavy falls occurred in the Atlantic coast districts and caused an increase in weevil activity in Georgia and South Carolina, said the weekly national weather and crop bulletin issued today. The cotton pest also is very active in many sections of the Mississippi Valley, especially in Alabama, but dry weather in a marked decreased in its spread in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, the bulletin said.

Prospects for cotton by states follow:

Texas—While making fairly good progress, crop needs rain and there are complaints of shedding and plants dying.

Oklahoma—Making fair progress in north and west sections but deteriorating in south central and southeasterly portions.

Arkansas—With favorable climate crop is fruiting well in west and fairly well in central south.

Georgia—With cultivation nearly finished, condition and progress reported poor.

South Carolina—Satisfactory growth reported, but fruiting ranges from poor to only fair generally, with weevil numerous and doing much damage, except in north.

North Carolina—No material change in condition.

Florida—Rains causing shedding.

The crop is poor to fairly good in Mississippi and fair generally in Alabama and Tennessee, the bulletin said.

BULGARIA AND JUGO-SLAVIA DISCUSS PEACE

By Associated Press.

SOFIA, Aug. 3.—Bulgaria and Jugoslavia are moving slowly toward reconciliation. The opposition which the Greek policy meets in certain great and small powers has somewhat facilitated this drift.

Mutual desire for a free outlet to the Aegean sea draws irresistibly the two Slav neighbors to Saloniki and Kavala.

Taking advantage of the dificulties which are actually surrounding the Greeks, some of the powers are busy at work in Belgrade and Sofia to bring as soon as possible the two countries together.

Czechoslovakia, in her attempt to reestablish a Slav block which would strengthen her Orient policy, uses all her influence with the Serbs to overcome the resistance and the animosity of the Serbian Nationalists.

The French representatives in Sofia are also active for this reconciliation which they wish to place under the patronage of France. They favor here the idea of a personal union of Bulgaria with Serbia for it would facilitate the creation of a Slav bloc to counterbalance, up to a certain extent English influence in the Near East. At present the French are the closest advisers of the Sofia government.

JURY DECREES THAT SON MUST PAY EXTREME PENALTY FOR THE MURDER OF HIS FATHER

murders in the annals of Texas crime."

At the conclusion of the speech after all exhibits and documents had been handed to them the jury retired to their room under instructions from Judge H. F. Weldon. Just before going into their room following a statement by Judge Weldon that they could have any testimony they might want, S. J. Ashmore, juror, asked that the testimony of Mrs. Eric Burns be given him.

Crowd Expects Verdict.

The crowd was slow in dispersing apparently believing that a verdict would be returned before nightfall, although several members of the local bar expressed the opinion that no verdict would be reached until some time today. Judge Weldon left the court house with instructions that he be called should the jury decide to report.

The speech of District Attorney Wilson was preceded by three and a half hours of arguments by the defense including the one-hour speech of John Davenport, special state's attorney. When Davenport concluded, the defense shifted their previously announced order of speaking, having C. C. McDonald follow him instead of closing for the defense as had been previously planned.

The charge to the jury after considerable delay and objection by defense counsel, was read to the jury at 10 a. m., Wednesday. It included the general charge as to what constituted murder. The charge as to the defense of insanity around which the defense objections centered and regarding which several bills of exceptions were taken, was as follows:

"As to his mental condition at the time with reference to criminal liability, it is peculiarly a question of fact to be decided by you from all the evidence in the case, before, at the time of and after the act. It is not necessary that insanity should be permanent in order to absolve the person from punishment prescribed by law. It is sufficient if it shows he was insane at the time of the commission of the act.

"If you find and believe from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant killed O. H. Toussaint as alleged in the indictment, but at the time he did so he was insane, a paranoic or was suffering from a delusion or delusions he was sane in all other of the transactions of life, and at the time of the killing by reason of such insanity, paranoia, delusion or delusions of persecution by the deceased, the defendant's mind was in an impaired and unsound state so that for the time being it deprived him of the knowledge of the right and wrong of the killing so that he did not know the nature and quality of the act, then you will acquit him on the ground of insanity and so say by your verdict."

Attacks Insanity Plea.

John Davenport in opening for the state following the charge to the jury spoke for one hour devoting most of his time to an attack on the insanity plea of the defense as testified to by experts. Taking up various phases of the accused life he attacked the plea as lacking several essential characteristics of the type of insanity claimed.

Apparently due to the argument of Davenport the defense opened with C. C. McDonald who has charge of the major part of their plea of insanity as supported by expert testimony. He closed at noon and was followed in the afternoon by Luther Hoffman and B Yancey Cummings. The three attorneys centered their arguments around the definite plea that the accused plan was suffering from paranoia, a form of delusional insanity. The accused man, they contended was in the second stages of the mental disease, having systematized delusions that he was being persecuted by his father, the victim.

They dwelt at length on the evidence expert and otherwise, which tended to prove not only the insanity of the accused, but his father from whom they contended he had inherited the mental disease. Dramatic and oratorical effects were not absent in any of the three arguments.

Brother's Absence Stressed.

The most dramatic point of all the arguments was that which occurred in the plea of District Attorney Wilson centering around the absence of Rudolph Toussaint, brother of the accused and son of the victim.

Apparently realizing that the district attorney would mention the absence Attorney Cummings referred to it and by intimation made it appear that if the brother had believed the accused sane the state would have had him in attendance at the trial. He referred again to the letter which the accused received Monday from the brother, written in Maine. In the letter the brother who is three years younger than the accused, said that he was unable to attend the trial because of a lack of finances. The letter concluded by saying "may the court have mercy on you, God bless you." Attorney Cummings referred to the matter just before closing his argument.

After he had addressed the jury a few minutes District Attorney Wilson took up the absence of the brother.

Argue Brother's Letter.

Declaring that it was but a natural expectation that a man would come to the aid of his brother when in trouble if he believed him deserving regardless of obstacles that might have to be overcome, pointing out that the natural supposition in this case was that the brother would be a witness for the defense and that if he was unable to come the defense had the right to secure depositions from him which by law the state is not allowed to do, the district attorney forcibly replied to the defense attack.

"Would that brother have expressed the wish that the "court would have mercy on him" had he believed that te defendant (pointing his finger at the accused) was not responsible for what he had done. Is that the wish of man who believes another to be innocent?" asked the speaker near the close of his argument as he read the letter which he had sent for to the jury.

"No, no, gentlemen of the jury, we cannot but conclude that the absence and silence of that far away brother, the only man in whose veins runs the same blood as the accused, means that the defendant in this case already stands convicted of the crime of killing his father in the opinion of he who knows him best."

The speaker scored again for the state in answering a contention of the defense that the state attorneys should have had a trial in county court testing the sanity of the accused when they were informed in February that the accused would plead insanity.

"You attorneys for the defense well know," said the speaker, "that all you have to do is to file the proper affidavits stating you believe him insane and the trial as to his sanity could be had."

"Why did you not do it if as you say he is insane?" "Why should we, who have never believed him anything but a cold blooded murderer bring about a trial to test his sanity? The duty if it devolved on any one devolved on you and yet you failed to do it."

The speaker took up in order the defense offered, defended every state witness, some of which had been attacked by defendant's attorneys and then toward the conclusion of his argument sketched the life of the accused in a vivid manner from his birth up until the time he committed the crime. The speaker was not vindictive and although dramatic on occasions spoke in a quiet tone most of the time directing his remarks to the jury which gave him marked attention.

NEW BUSINESS TO COME BEFORE LEAGUE SESSION

By Associated Press.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Aug. 2.—A new international Masonic club has been born in Sioux City. It is known as the High Twelve International. E. C. Wolcott is president and William M. Morhaiser is secretary. Headquarters of the new organization are to be maintained in Sioux City.

The High Twelve International was created by a special committee of the Sioux City High Twelve club. The purpose of the club is to give the same opportunity to the younger Masons as is afforded by such organizations as the Rotary, the Kiwanis and the Lion luncheon clubs, although membership in the club is limited to Masons.

Secretary Morhaiser says: "The purpose of the International is to unite all members of Masonry in the happy bonds of a social hour, and that thereby they may inform themselves in the truths of Masonry, to inspire, encourage and expand those virtues which will aid in the upbuilding of the principles of good government, in the advance of education, in the upbuilding of its membership, in honorable and successful living and in the promotion of social fellowship."

Membership in the International will be limited to cities having two or more blue lodges and a population of 25,000 and upward, and will be for groups of business, professional and industrial men organized in local High Twelve clubs. The number of charter members required to organize a local High Twelve club will be determined by the International, and will be based upon the various factors of the particular city where the club is to be organized. Membership in the local club will consist only of those men who have three or more degrees in Masonry and are in good standing at the time application is made.

Mr. Morhaiser said that while the club is not an official Masonic organization yet, it is composed of men who are bound together by the ties of Masonry.

BUFFALO PROBLEM REVERSES SELF IN YELLOWSTONE PARK

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo., Aug. 3.—The problem of the buffalo has reversed itself.

A few years ago the monarch of the plains was chief figure in the drama of a dying species. The problem today is how to feed and take care of the rapidly multiplying herds.

Yellowstone provides a huge hay ranch for the sole purpose of feeding the buffalo when winter snows have covered the grazing pastures. But so rapidly is the park herd growing that this ranch will soon provide insufficient food.

The question is now being taken back to Washington by Edward C. Finney, first assistant secretary of the interior, under whose supervision come the national parks. Mr. Finney has just ended a tour of inspection here, accompanied by Park Superintendent Horace Albright. To show him the growth of the herd a "buffalo run" was arranged and in a spectacular stampede more than 500 animals were driven down from hill and plateau.

There is still another problem. About 100 young buffalo have made their appearance this year and most of them are bulls. Now bulls are not as popular as cows and yet, under the present laws, they may not be killed. Furthermore park officials already have almost run out of places to give them to.

So the secretary has somewhat of a "pigs is pigs" problem on his hands.

JAPANESE PLANNING TO ELECTRIFY RAILROADS.

TOKIO, Aug. 3.—Japan is planning to electrify her railroads. Electric engines will be used on the main lines for passenger trains.

HIGH OFFICIALS RESERVE BOARD RESENT CHARGES

tives allied with the "agricultural bloc," while Mr. Williams elaborated three general charges. He said first that the board had encountered undue lendings to a New York banking group during the last two years, for speculative uses, while forcing liquidation in southern and western agricultural districts, and that it had allowed extortionate interest charges and generally failed to "ease down" inflation.

Governor Harding today rose out of the audience and demanded a hearing on personal grounds to deny allegations concerning himself as Mr. Williams had made them, and presently, with Governor Strong, produced from the confidential files of the reserve board's offices correspondence and reports to back Mr. Williams' criticisms.

To answer letters and memorandums read by Mr. Williams and which he said he had sent to his associates in the reserve board during 1920 and 1921, protesting their policy and course, Governor Harding demanded and received permission to read a single letter of response which the board made to Mr. Williams in 1921.

"The federal reserve board feels constrained to say," the letter said, "that your action * * * has demonstrated the futility of discussions with you on questions of honor or fair play."

Mr. Williams' criticism of the board's handling of credit problems as contained in the correspondence and repeated to the congressional commission were characterized in Governor Harding's letter as "ignorant and inaccurate, misleading."

"The object seems to have been merely to make a record during your tenure of office of statements to be handed to the public later," the letter said in part. "As an appeal to prejudices and sympathies, and not to reasons."

The Harding letter further said that Mr. Williams' criticisms were generally "trivial, irrelevant or susceptible of no definite constructive interpretation" and added that "a failure to comply with you cannot be said a failure to challenge your statements."

As to the criticism of lending to New York banks the Harding letter said that out of "a disordered mass of details and statements" forwarded by Mr. Williams it had been "impossible for the board to understand what action" he desired taken.

The letter said also that out of 80 meetings of the board preceding Mr. Williams' retirement from office he had "attended 18 during their entire time, 18 during a part of the time and during 44 was absent from the city."

It was charged also that Mr. Williams had circulated the board's letters on credit matters and refused to tell the board to what person or persons they had been sent.

The reading of the letter resulted in a remark from Mr. Williams about "poison gas" and retorts in which Governor Harding asserted his own desire during all of the preceding controversy within the board to settle matters peaceably, but to fight if necessary.

Strong read extracts from an official confidential report made to the board by him on the New York banking system. It referred to Mr. Williams' semi-official reports as "ignorant and misleading," and accused him of "violations of propriety and disloyalty to his associates."

One New York bank which Mr. Williams said held $130,000,000 in federal reserve loans, Governor Strong declared, held also $112,000,000 in government securities, adding that "most of its loans were made to carry purchases during the war," while it was lending $18,000,000 directly or indirectly to its own officers, Governor Strong said, it held $15,000,000 in liberty bonds as collateral, and additional securities as well.

Mr. Williams charged that 30 per cent interest rates in New York money markets meant the starving of farming districts.

"Had the comptroller understood the workings of the reserve system," Governor Strong responded, "he would have understood those rates resulted from the constant withdrawal of funds from New York to send to other sections of the country."

"Much of the credit pressure resulted from organized movements from various parts of the country," Mr. Strong continued, "to withhold commodities from their usual markets."

"A general denial is hardly an effectual answer to specific charges and complaints," Mr. Williams said, when his turn came again, and later he expressed the opinion that the New York bank, dealing with reserve funds "passed money out with prodigality" during periods which borrowers elsewhere were being restricted.

He concluded his two-day discussion with observations that "there never had been the currency inflation in this country some people believed," that there was "present improvement from the lowering of interest rates" and that "farmers are entitled to get, through the reserve system, nine months' credit on warehouse certificates for their produce, though dealers and profiteers should be restricted."

The reserve officials will be given their formal hearing tomorrow.

Summary of the Toussaint Case.

O. H. Toussaint, local contractor, 60 years of age, former hotel proprietor of Washington, D. C., found dead on Filmore street near the Avenue J. intersection on Sunday night, February 6th. Two bullet holes in his body either of which would have been fatal.

His person had been searched and all traces of identification removed. Just previous to killing he had left the home of Eric Bruno, living on Fillmore street.

Following an investigation conducted by Lee Huff, then chief of police, the son of the slain man, Henry J. Toussaint, associated with his father in the contracting business here, confessed to the officer on the afternoon of the day following the tragedy.

Accused said in confession that he killed his father because he feared he would be disinherited. Also said the father had caused separation from his wife who he was suing for divorce at that time.

Was indicted by the grand jury of the 30th District court in February and his case was set for trial during that month. Granted continuance until June term.

Trial opened July 27th in the 30th District court before Judge H. F. Weldon. Four days taken to select jury. Taking of evidence starts Monday, August 1st. Defense pleads insanity.

Found guilty and death verdict returned August 3rd.

ALL NAPLES MOURNS SON WITH VOICE OF GOLD; BODY LIES IN CHAMBER OF DEATH AS BURIAL PLANS ARE MADE

NAPLES, Aug. 3.—All day the body of Enrico Caruso lay in the room where he died, for at the last moment it was decided that the burial should not take place until tomorrow. By special permission of King Victor Emmanuel, services will be held in the Basilica of the church of San Francisco Di Paola, a famous edifice resembling the pantheon of Rome and constructed by Ferdinand I.

After this ceremony the body will be taken to the cemetery and placed in the family vault.

The mayor and perfect of Naples will speak on behalf of the city and government respectively, and it is probable that the American consul will deliver a brief address in behalf of the American government and the city of New York, which Caruso called his second home.

Naples is in truth a city of mourning, and from all parts of Italy have come expressions of grief, many of them of a tender nature, because of late years Caruso had by the mastery of his art and his kindness of heart found his way into the warm affections of the people. Therefore of the thousands who passed his bier today there was none whose personal grief was not apparent.

One of the most touching scenes came when the godmother of the singer, Signora Maria Castaldi, went to the hotel to inquire how Caruso was faring. She was set at the entrance by Giollo Staffelli, the impressario, who informed her of Caruso's death. The aged woman was overcome with grief; then entered the Chappelle Ardente and knelt beside the body and prayed.

Only yesterday his aged stepmother came to the hotel hoping for his recovery. She met an intimate friend of the family and greeted him with the query: "How is Enrico?" The friend was unable to answer, burst into tears, and the mother, with dire forebodings, was led upstairs, where she broke into cries of anguish, and fell on her knees by the bedside.

The little daughter Gloria was taken into see the body of her father today; she only knew that something dreadful had happened, as her father could not speak to her. Mrs. Caruso is bearing her sorrow with fortitude.

The American ambassador, Richard Wasmburn Child, has sent the following message to her: "All the personnel of the embassy join with me in expressing our profound grief at your loss, which is a loss to the whole world. America feels as much as Italy the loss of him whose heart and voice were of gold. We are at your disposal for whatever can be done."

SAYS BRITISH FACE NEW ERA OF PROSPERITY

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Settlement of the coal strike, after more than three months' idleness, the return of cotton operatives to work and the last minute agreement in the engineering industry have completely transformed the business, industrial and economic aspect of Great Britain, says the American Chamber of Commerce in its official monthly summary of trade.

Wage reductions have now been effected in practically all important industries, including coal, cotton, woolen, road transport, tramways, gas works, engineers and railwaymen. The cost of living, meanwhile, continues to fall according to official figures. During June the index figure fell from 128 to 119, a decline of nine points.

The bank rate has been suddenly reduced to 6 per cent. This is believed to be due to action of the Federal Reserve bank of New York which reduced its discount rate to 6 per cent. The policies of the Bank of England and the Federal Reserve bank have run on aparallel lines for some time.

The British government will give a grant of $5,000,000 to foster cotton growing in the British empire. This will replace the former promise of $250,000 a year for five years. The grant will come out of the profit made in marketing Egyptian cotton during the war.

September 30 has been fixed as the commencing date for the new anti-dumping bill. Discussions in committee point to the fact that a tax of 66 2-3 per cent may be imposed by the act and that under the depreciated exchange section, a duty of 500 per cent will be necessary in some cases.

The effects of the coal stoppage and general trade depression are reflected in the revenue returns for the quarter ending June 30, which show a deficit of 67 millions sterling, revenue being less by 111 millions as compared with the same period last year.

The production of pig iron during May was only 13,600 tons and steel 5,700 tons. In May, 1920, figures were 739,000 tons and 846,000 tons respectively. The low output was due to the coal strike.

The American Chamber in London announces it will shortly issue a trade report dealing with office appliances and labor-saving devices in Great Britain.

The International Chamber of Commerce recently finished its deliberations here. The American section placed all its facilities at the disposal of the delegates.

SAY LIFE UNSAFE AFTER ARMENIA'S ACQUITTAL

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—The acquittal of Suleiman Teilirian, the Armenian murderer of Talat Pasha, the wartime grant vizier of Turkey, has prompted the former Premier Radoslavoff of Bulgaria to quit Berlin, where he has resided since the armistice.

"No former statesman's life is safe in Germany since the Armenian has been acquitted," declares Radoslavoff, who considers the German court's verdict as "a dangerous incentive to the primary instincts as they prevail in the Near East and the Balkans."

RATE REDUCTIONS WOULD AID FARMER DECLARES BLACK

1918, there was a further increase amounting to $874,331,209; in 1919, a further increase amounting to $229,315,081; and in 1920 a still further increase amounting to $855,087,919. Therefore at the end of 1920 the railroads found themselves with a pay roll of more than $2,000,000,000 greater than at the beginning of 1917, and indeed, their aggregate pay roll of $3,742,496,985 for 1920 was $146,000,000 more than the entire operating revenues of the railroads in the year ending December 31, 1916.

Of course with the increase in pay roll of such gigantic proportions, and also other increased items of expense such as increased cost of coal and steel, the director general, during government operations and the Interstate Commerce Commission after the roads were returned to private control, had to increase rates.

What Can Be Done?

3. What can be done about it? The remedy is very simple, but not easy of application. It is: Reduce the operating expenses. And it is at this pont that government regulation comes in. The recent decision of the railroad labor board which ordered a reduction in employees' wages averaging 12 per cent, was wholly inadequate to meet the situation. Under that decision, the higher paid employees were only reduced an average of 7 per cent. When we consider that the average monthly wage rate of freight engineers (local freight) in 1917 was $175.64, in January, 1920, this had increased to $239.16, which was further increased by the wage award of the railroad labor board in July (retroactive to May 1, 1920, to $275.99; when we consider further that the corresponding averages for passenger engineers were $185.93 in 1917, $253.13 in 1920, and $288.82 after the 1920 wage award, we are bound to feel, it seems to me, that 7 per cent decrease in the wages of these higher paid employees is not enough to harmonize with changed economic conditions which we now face.

I would be the last man in the world to want to do the railroad employees an injustice, but I do earnestly feel that this decision of the railroad labor board does not place upon them their fair part of the decline which has occurred in prices. I hesitate to advocate congressional interference with a board which congress itself, has established, yet after all, the board is the creature of Congress, and the important thing is to see that the people get some relief from the present impossible situation. Therefore, if the railroad labor board does not show a keener appreciation of the situation from the public's standpoint, then it has thus far shown in its decisions, congress will be compelled to amend the law in a way that will give the people some relief.

Speed Up Valuation.

Another thing which I think is of vital importance in arriving at a just solution of the freight rate problem is to speed up the completion of the valuation of railroads which has been proceeding for several years under the direction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Congress should at once appropriate all the money that is necessary to have this work completed at the earliest possible date. It would be money well spent from every point of view. For the purpose of rate making, the Interstate Commerce Commission, under the direction of the Cummings-Esch bill has placed the aggregate value of all the railroads at $18,900,000,000. Many well informed persons who have given study to the transportation subject think this valuation is very much too high. Whatever the valuation is, be it more or less, than the tentative figures fixed by the commission, should be arrived at just as soon as possible.

The railroads are entitled to earn a reasonable return upon an honest valuation under economical management. The public has no right to expect less, and should not be compelled to pay more. So, as I see it, the two big essential requirements to freight reductions are:

1. A further reduction in the railroad pay roll, keeping in mind of course the cost of living and a fair deal to the employees. 2. Completion of railroad valuation, and if it shows there is water in the present valuation of $18,900,000,000 fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, then squeeze every bit of the water out and base the rates only and solely on the real valuation. There are other economies which can be put into effect of a more or less important nature, but it is very certain that both of the above things I have suggested must be done before there is a real solution of the problem.

Let us quit talking about vague and indefinite remedies and get down to the real heart of the problem.

There are many interesting historical sights in Lucerne, but one of the most interesting is the famous lion of Lucerne, carved out of the side of a grotte from a model by Thorwaldsen, to commemorate the defense of the Tuileries in Paris, August 10, 1792, by the Swiss guards, who were massacred by the mob.

SCHOOL COURSE TO DISPEL SECRECY OF MODERN BA... G

By Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., A... 3.—Plans of the American Banke... sociation to dispel mystery about ...anking the public thought by taki... the bank to the public school this fall were outlined to the American Institute of Banking here today by John H. Puelicher of Milwaukee. Mr. Puelicher is chairman of the association's committee on public education.

By showing that they occupy a useful place in society, the bankers hope to cut the foundation from under a radicalism that thrives on ignorance of the services of the banking business, he said.

"Ten lectures on banking have been carefully prepared, one for each month of the school year, starting with next September," Mr. Puelicher related. "The banker nearest the school is to deliver the lectures to the 7th and 8th grades of the common school, to the high school and the college. He will simply refer to the outlines for ideas and background, localizing the story, using illustrations and incidents familiar to the children.

"He will show them specifically what banking is, telling them about its origin and its purpose in our commercial scheme. Then, after two or three visits, the banker will invite the school children to the bank and permit them to visualize that which has been talked about.

"The lecture outlines have been sent to the superintendents of public instruction of all of our states and to many others in the teaching profession. Scores of letters have been received from educators approving the plan and promising active co-operation.

"Many financial magazines have agreed to publish each month the lecture to be delivered the following month. Text book publishers are planning to enlarge chapters on banks and banking in the treatises on economics. School boards have agreed to endorse the work."

A picture show party, which everyone agreed was different from anything seen before, featured by peanut "music" stunts, the "high speed" Bebe Daniels feature "The March Hare," was given by the Comus club Wednesday night at the Palace theater. The theater was reserved for the night and no restraint was put on the members of the party, either against eating peanuts or reading the sub titles.

One unique feature of the show, the idea of Manager Robert Sparks of the Olympic theater, who helped the club stage the affair, was naming persons in the audience for parts in the picture. This caused a great deal of merriment.

Another feature of the party was the installation of danger signals at selected points in the audience to warn of the opinion of the chaperones.

THIS MAN SAYS HEAD TO FOOT HE ACHED FROM

"Tanlac certainly has been a friend to me and I wouldn't be back in the fix I was in for all the money in San Antonio," was the emphatic statement of Gus Barboieris, 504 South Mittman St., San Antonio, Texas.

"I suffered for twenty-five years with rheumatism and indigestion and I don't know what else was the matter with me. I have gone to bed at night feeling like I was going to choke to death. I fell off in weight until I weighed only one hundred and twenty-eight pounds. I had rheumatism in my left shoulder and I couldn't move my arm without suffering agony and some days, especially in damp weather, I ached from head to foot. I tried sulphur baths and everything else I ever heard of that was good for rheumatism but I kept growing worse all the time. I got so I dreaded for night to come because I couldn't sleep. My stomach was in a terrible condition and no matter what I ate it would nearly kill me.

"Tanlac has just seemed to make me over entirely. I eat anything I want and nothing ever disagrees with me. My rheumatism is gone and I sleep all night long without so much as turning over. I haven't had a pain of any kind since I finished my first half bottle and have gone up in weight from one hundred and twenty-eight pounds to one hundred and forty. I am eating pork for supper, something I wouldn't have dared to do a month ago. I feel better than I have in twenty-five years. If I couldn't get Tanlac any other way I would be willing to walk forty miles for another bottle. There's something about it that certainly straightens out a man's trouble and makes him feel fine all the time.

Tanlac is sold in Wichita Falls by Miller Drug Store; in Electra by Tarlton Drug Store; in Burkburnett by West End Drug Store, and by all leading druggists.—Adv.

A WIFE IN THE MAKING

BY PHYLLIS PHILLIPS

JEALOUSLY RULES

What Arline had failed to see, in her great joy at having Ned seem to really want her again, was that Arthur Hamlen and Cherry had both come back to the veranda to dance, and were standing, hesitant, for an instant, as though trying to decide whether to dance with each other or not.

Ned had seen them immediately, however, and again the angry blood had pounded in his head, as he thought of the falseness of that pretty little wife of his, standing so innocently before him in her fluffy white dress and soft smile. Well, she would see just how gay a time he could have with other women, it would do her good. Take some of the conceit out of her, maybe.

And with this thought in his mind he drew Arline, all delighted, to him, even as Cherry stood gazing, fondly thinking that surely now her Neddy would be wanting a dance from her.

And with abandon he danced with his starry-eyed partner, this infuriated husband. He looked down into her eyes as often as possible, and enjoyed to the full the responses that flashed from Arline's face and eyes to his own. It soothed his nerves, flattered his flaunted vanity and caused him to really wonder if, after all, these soft ,non-independent girls like Arline were not the best sort for a man like himself?

Arline seemed infinitely lovely and womanly in every way, to Ned, as he danced with her. And every now and then he felt her whole being lean towards him supplicatingly.

Here was a girl who would give up the whole world for the asking. This Ned well knew. She had loved him for three years now unswervingly. That, in itself, was a recommendation after what he had seen tonight. And at one time she had almost offered herself to him in a rash moment at the end of a bitter quarrel, when she had been overwhelmed with joy at their reunion. Yes, she was that kind of a generous soul, this Arline. He had been a fool not to have responded to her fire and saved himself his present heartache. Girls like Cherry, girls that let all men kiss them for the asking. What did Arthur Hamlen think of him now ?

Again, at these wild thoughts, he suddenly strained the girl in his arms to him slightly, but not so slightly that Arline, all alertness now, did not get it. She smiled up at him through humidly love-lit eyes.

"Come," he commanded, almost roughly, "we'll sit out the next two dances. Come!"

The Woman Citizen

The Trinity in Government

It is not alone in religion that we have the trinity. We find it also in our triune government—national, state and local.

If we were subject to three masters, we should think ourselves very much oppressed, and we would be, which goes to show that our threefold government is not master, but servant, and we manipulate the wheels within wheels so harmoniously that we are scarcely aware of its triune nature. If we thought we could be better served by a one-form government we could easily make it so; but which two of the three should we eliminate?

Suppose we tried to get along with only the national government? All our affairs would be administered from a remote capital. Imagine San Francisco or St. Augustine unable to erect a school building, pave a street, or try a chicken thief without action from Washington, D. C.! Justice would not only be long delayed, but impossible, as those administering affairs at so long range could not know local conditions. The mass of detail would hopelessly clog the wheels of progress. Even should such a regime be possible, it would be in continual danger of immense corruption. It would not be elastic, adaptible, or responsive to the wishes of individual freemen. No, we must have our smaller and close-at-home governments! We would not have freedom without them.

Suppose we dispense with all but the state governments. In that case, we would fall into petty quarrels among ourselves. Larger states would tend to swallow up the weaker ones, as Prussia did the rest of Germany. We would be easy prey to ambitious neighbors. We could undertake no great works, like the federal postal service; the Panama canal; agricultural development; educational, health or welfare activities. Jealousies and misunderstandings would make it impossible for citizens to move easily from one state to another and to intermingle. Worst of all, we would have to be continually armed, each state against every other, and walls and standing armies would be required.

If we atempted to discard all but our local governments, this condition would be immensely multiplied, and we would have an anarchy of cities second only to an anarchy of individuals.

Three-in-one, our government makes for (1) a dignified and forceful front to the world outside; (2) large enterprises; (3) peace among the states; (4) a swift, sympathetic and responsive agent close at hand for each citizen; (5) above all, a chance to exercise local self-government without which we freedom-loving Americans could never be content.

Long live our governmental trinity.

WHEN THE BABY HAS THE COLIC.

WHAT to do! What to DO! is the frantic appeal of both father and mother when baby has the colic. He generally elects to have it at the big hours of night or the hours of morning and to walk the floor with him then, well, it is out of the question—unless, of course, he INSISTS.

Colic is indigestion, very painful and very disagreeable, but babies frequently grow fat on it. And yet, it is a serious condition in the case of the frail baby. An upset condition of stomach and bowels, acquired in infancy, may follow the victim all the way through life, and the ordinary case of indigestion takes much longer to recover from than is realized. After an attack of indigestion, one should be a long time coming back to normal diet. The stomach needs a good rest before it will again be perfectly sound and healthy.

Colic, indigestion, is caused by eating too much or too rich food. It may sometimes be prevented by ollowing the baby to nurse a shorter time. By doing this he gets not only less food, but also does not get the rich "strippings" which come last. For the bottle baby, use more cleanliness in preparing the food and bottles and nippies; dilute food with water.

When baby actually has colic, relieve him. Undigested food in the stomach and bowels causes gas. Feed him warm water to wash out his stomach and warm it up. Give him an enema of warm water. Unless there is something more the trouble with him than ordinary colic these processes will relieve and he will go to sleep. If he is not relieved by such treatment the case is more serious and the doctor should be consulted.

Open Doors In Business

The Architect, I.

It would seem that women, who spend most of their lives and activities in the home and know by experience a multitude of little ways, unknown to men, in which the house could be improved would naturally be household architects. This might be true if planning the arrangement were all there is to architecture. More than almost any art it is comprehensive, including mathematics, knowledge of the building trade, market conditions, materials, papers, fabrics, wood, cement, brick, diplomacy and tact in dealing with people, and knowledge of what people desire in the building they are to occupy. This last implies a knowledge of a multitude of activities and what they each require. A theater must be built very differently from a print shop and both from a store or a house. In short what should an architect not know? He, or she must, with all this knowledge, be a shrewd business man with excellent management both of finances and of those employed under him, or he may be capable as a worker but not make the due money out of his work.

With all these difficulties architecture as a profession is not closed to women, but unless a girl is eager to work hard and long, and unless she has genius for such work to begin with she will never make a brilliant success at architecture. Besides the qualifications and difficulties, there is strong prejudice against a woman architect. The building of a structure is the matter of a lifetime with most people and they want to feel absolute confidence in the architect who has charge of it, and they have not yet learned to feel this for the woman architect. She will still be thought a novice, and from the nature of society has not yet been around among the building trades and markets to gain information as much as her brother has. Women are entering all these fields and the prejudices against them are being gradually overcome and if a girl is certain she will persevere and live up to the requirements, working strenuously many years for small pay, while she is learning architecture, then she may feel assured that she will earn and grasp success.

WOMAN-I-TORIALS.

Comes now Sir John Cockburn before the Woman's Freedom League of London and says, lecturewise, the female always selects her mate except in the human species. "The reason is that man has had almost the monopoly of bread winning. The fair sex should make the proposal."

Every year'll be leap year by and by!

Until recently Japanese women have been prohibited by law from attending political meetins, or joining political associations. In response to a petition signed by thousands of women, this law has been repealed.

TAKES CARE OF 5 CHILDREN

Mrs. Taylor's Sickness Ended by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Roxbury, Mass.—"I suffered continually with backache and was often despondent, had dizzy spells and at my monthly periods it was almost impossible to keep around at my work. Since my last baby came two years ago my back has been worse and no position I could get in would relieve it, and doctor's medicine did not help me. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have found great relief since using it. I keep house and have the care of five children and I am very thankful I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound such a help. I recommend it to any woman suffering as I was before I used it."—Mrs. MAUDE E. TAYLOR, 5 St. James Place, Roxbury, Mass.

Backache is one of the most common symptoms of a displacement or derangement of the female system. No woman should make the mistake of trying to overcome it by heroic endurance, but profit by Mrs. Taylor's experience and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

WOMAN'S SPHERE

Just what is "woman's sphere" in our changing world is a question which is worrying many people. Who was it said, "Woman's place is in the home," and by what authority?

It is the political economists who presume to answer. They take us up into a high hill and give us a far look backward at ourselves.

They show us primitive man with but one want—food. This—fish, nuts and berries—he ate, like the lower animals, where he chanced to find it. Presently he began to cook it, making his first step upward.

His second want is shelter, and he made clothing and his wigwam of skins, bamboo, and foliage.

At first he was able to provide for only one—himself. The first recorded incidence of one individual looking out for other than "number one" was when Eve offered the apple to Adam, and no good came of that.

Soon man was able to cultivate food and to lay it up, thus becoming able to support more than himself, and this gave him the ability to provide for his third want—a mate. Woman is not "second fiddle," but third.

The support of an adult female was not undertaken by man from kindness, nor because of legal arrangement, nor with any reference to the continuance of the tribe, but because it is the third instinctive want of man.

The first two needs satisfied, the third asserts itself. This was so from the beginning and will continue until the "crack of doom" when there will still be "marrying and giving in marriage." It is so among the pelt-robed cave man and the silken garbed lord of the castle.

Willingly has man assumed the support of his female, and as naturally has woman added to that support what she makes and saves. She has spun and woven blankets, nets and garments; has prepared the fish, flesh and vegetables, making them more palatable, nutritious and less perishable; has brought water from the spring; and kept the hut in a sort of decency.

But woman has never produced as much as she consumes; a margin is left to be provided by the male. Man's motive in taking her was never mercenary. Away back, he knew that "two could not live as cheap as one."

A third draft upon his resources is likely soon to occur—the arrival of a child or two or more. This also he accepts with the same cheerful philosophy. It not only brings him more individuals to support, but it lessens for a time, frequently for a long time, the contributions which the wife is able to make to the family support.

As children increase in number, the family instinctively shares with these the sum of resources, often giving even better to the latest arrival. When the time arrives that the number to be provided for is greater than the means of support, it lowers the family standards. If this condition prevails in the tribe it is a destructive influence. In each group of persons there are many unmarried or childless or with but few children. How much responsibility these have toward the overburdened is still an unsettled question. Governments are attempting to solve it, and France,, especially, is making generous provision for large families.

In the animal world individuals vie with one another for the capture of sustenance, the mother even killing her own offspring in the contest for food. The sick, old, weak, and deformed are trampled upon and killed out in a time of food scarcity, while the fittest costume all available food, grow stronger and bigger, breed only among themselves,, and grow into a larger and stronger species from generation to generation.

In man this is not true. The family unit makes all members stand together and share alike in spite of pain, hunger, or even death. Preference is generally given to the younger and weaker. Father and mother deny self to hush the cry of the child. The contest is between families, as units, to secure supplies. The best and largest and finest individuals sacrifice themselves for the support of weaklings, and the "survival of the fittest" is upset.

Only by co-operation may man advance. By organized business and government he must co-operate in producing, thrift, preservation, distribution and the maintenance of health standards. In this, from the first, man and woman have co-operated. Formerly women's industry and part in regulating these was all in the home where the raw materials were brought. Civilization is more and more taking these out of the home. What is more instinctive than that woman should follow them—should go where they are?

This she is doing, but the old relations remain exactly the same. We still have man, prime factor in family support; and woman, as ever, making her contribution according to her ability. Only methods have changed or ever will change. The primal instincts, the wholesome red blood still sings in the veins of woman!

BOWMAN BEATS BEARS 2 TO 1, HURLING BEAUTIFUL GAME AND WIELDING A WICKED WAR CLUB

By C. F. CARTER.

Well, Dick Humphries wired the baseball association yesterday that he had decided not to play any more league ball this season—but whatthaell do we care? Hail! Hail! The gang's all here, so whatthaell do we care? Hail! Hail! Abe Bowman's staging a come-back. Hail! Hail! Whatthaell do we care now?

By gosh, gang, but ain't it the truth? Abe Bowman beat the Bears yesterday 2 to 1, and showed all the stuff that made him a great twirler in the Western League last season. Big Abe held Johnny Nee's Bruins to one two-bagger and four separated singles, two of which were infield raps that the runner beat to first by a hair; he struck out 5, including Bowen, Connolly and Hruska, all hard hitters; he was steady and cool at every stage of the game—and he collected two hits out of three times at bat, drove in the tieing run and scored the run that won for the Spudders.

Yes, brother, we'll go down in black and white with the statement that Abe Bowman put up one of the prettiest pitching-hitting exhibitions turned in this season by any twirler in the loop—and it did us good to watch the big right-hander put it over. There isn't a more conscientious worker on the club than Abe, nor one who more earnestly wants to help keep the Spudders out in front. Well, he did it yesterday—stuck the Spuds in first place, by gravy!

The Bears grabbed their one run in the opening frame, after Tex McDonald had thrown out Frankie Fuller. Tullos walked, went to second on a passed ball and continued to third when Bowen singled to right. Connolly singled through the box, scoring Tullos and sending Bowen to third. Danny Gross grabbed Henry's grounder and threw Bowen out at the plate—and Abe speared Ewell Gross's liner for the third out.

From that point on the game became a battle between Abe and Bob Couchman until the Spudders broke it up in the seventh. Time and again the locals threatened to score, but on every occasion were turned back by the fighting Bears.

Punch Is Lacking.

In the third frame, Abe singled sharply to left after Kitchens had made the first out. Bescher kicked in with another single that placed Abe on third, Bob reaching second on the throw from right field. Ewell Gross threw out his brother, Danny, and Couchman struck out Tex McDonald.

Again in the fifth a Spudder tally seemed certain, but the old punch was lacking for the time. Kitchens led off with a single to right, and stole second. Bowman fanned, and Kitchens went to third when Bescher beat out a bunt down the third base line. Bob pilfered the second sack. Salm sent Bischoff in to hit for Gross, and "Smiler" drew a pass, filling the cushions. Tex McDonald had another great opportunity, but it wasn't Tex's day with the willow, and he took a third strike. Clark ended the inning by grounding out to Henry.

But in the seventh the punch was there, and the home brew bagged the game. Kitch opened the fire works with a double inside third, and Abe Bowman brought him home with a clean single to right. Bescher dropped a Texas leaguer in right and Abe went to second. Tanner forced Bob at second, Abe reaching third. Tex pounded a sacrifice fly to Joe Connolly, and Bowman reached home with little difficulty. Danny Clark struck out.

Those two runs were quite enough. Abe was going strong, and a one-run lead was all he needed. The bears made trouble in the eighth, but Abe pulled out after they filled the bases on him. Clark threw out Fuller. Tullos walked and Bowen flied to Jake Miller. With two gone, Connolly bounced a hot one out of Abe's glove, Tullos reaching second. Henry repeated the blow, filling the sacks—but Clark took care of E. Gross's grounder for the final out.

Today we expect to take another by a one-run margin. That's Johnny Nee's jinx, y'know. Get a one-run lead on the Bears, and they're gone. that's all.

PRESS BOX PATTER

Good morning, fans. Have you glanced at the percentage column yet? They look pretty classy sitting up there in the driver's seat, eh?

The Cats are darn close behind, did you say? Well, what of that? They're BEHIND—and the Spudders are going to be on the top rung of the ladder when the 1921 season closes.

Danny Clark showed the fans yesterday why the Wichita Falls Baseball association forked over $4000 to get him here; he was all over the lot, and handled six chances beautifully—and they weren't easy rollers by considerable.

'Gene Leopold is in the seventh heaven of baseball bliss these days. "My man," as he proudly calls Cecil Griggs, is going like a whirlwind, and 'Gene's voice makes the grandstand rock every time Cecil comes through in the field or at bat.

Griggs certainly pulled a lallapazazza on Henry in the third, when the latter hit to right with Joe Connolly perched on second base and two men gone. The ball was traveling like a bullet, and for a brief second Cecil, it seemed, misjudged its speed. He turned, however, dug in his spikes, raced back and to the side, shot out his gloved hand and speared the ball. It didn't seem possible he could hold the smash—but he most positutely did.

Tiner pulled another wonderful catch in the sixth frame, when he stuck his back, head and hand against the left field fence with a crash—and nailed Jake Miller's wallop off the boards.

Abe Bowman showed he had something on the ball, when he struck out Tullos, last man up in the fifth, and then made it three in a row by fanning Bowen and Connolly as a sixth-inning starter.

Chick Bowen chased Bob Bescher's Texas leaguer all the way to second base in the seventh canto in a desperate effort either to catch the pill on the fly or pick it up. Chick grabbed it at his shoestrings for a starter but couldn't hold the ball—but he ran 'er down at last back of second base. The former Holy Cross player made a great try.

COLE'S MANAGER REFUSES RETURN BOUT WITH ARNOLD

A. J. Breman, manager of Walter (Kid) Cole, Bukburnett featherweight, who recently won the decision over Jack Arnold, claimant of the Texas featherweight championship, states in a letter to the sporting editor of The Record News that he is not ready to give Arnold a return match until the latter shows he is entitled to it."

Referring to the earlier meeting of the two at Drumright, Okla., when Arnold claimed a knockout and Cole declared he was fouled, Breman says:

"As is the case when a fight ends this way, the public was dubious whether Cole was fouled or knocked out. For that reason I rematched Cole with Arnold. The result of the second meeting showed clearly the superior of the two, yet McGilvery, Arnold't manager, is now seeking a third bout. McGilvery's pecuniary rewards were good, and this is probably the reason he is anxious for another match. But Cole is not entirely in the game for money alone, and for the reasons given above, and in order to play fair with the public, I am opposed to Cole meeting Arnold. Perhaps at a later date when Arnold has shown he is entitled to it, I may be in favor of a third meeting.

"Cole is ready, however, to meet the best boys of his weight, 122 pounds, at any time."

"MY CHANCE IS COMING," SMILES TOM

Tommy Gibbons is drawing the lion's share of publicity these days. His coming bout with Georges Carpentier next October will give him a place in the pugilistic sun—the exact place being determined by his showing. Gibbons believes he will show the public that he is the logical man to meet Dempsey.

BAN JOHNSON SAYS "VERY GOOD LESSON HAS BEEN TAUGHT"

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Failure to secure convictions in the trial of the seven former White Sox players was a disappointment to President Ban Johnson of the American league, but he declared in a statement today that a "very good lesson has been taught."

"The trial uncovered the greatest crime it was possible to commit in baseball," President Johnson said.

"The fact that the outfit was freed by a Cook county jury does not alter the conditions one iota or minimize the magnitude of the offense," added President Johnson.

"The players are as odious to a clean and right-thinking public as the crooks and thieves they dealt with. The energetic prosecution of the state clearly indicates that crimes of this character will not be permitted to go unchallenged."

JOHNNY EVERS SICK; DENY REPORTS CUBS HAD CANNED HIM

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—John Evers, manager of the Chicago Nationals, who is confined to his hotel with a cold, was said to be much improved tonight, according to Dr. E. N. Redden, his physician. The doctor said Evers had a high fever last night and it was at first feared pneumonia would set in. It may be two or three days, it was said, before Evers will be about.

The absence of Manager Evers from the ball park today led to rumors that he had been dethroned following a meeting of the stockholders of the club. That was emphatically denied tonight by Wm. Veeck, president of the club. William Killifer, veteran catcher, is acting manager in Evers' absence.

FARM NOISES ARE CURE FOR SHELL SHOCK, IS REPORT

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 3.—The symphony of droning mowers, cultivators and threshers is a specific for shell-shock. Of the thousands of war veterans who turned to agriculture at the conclusions of hostilities virtually all have recover from the effect of shell-shock. A recent survey, on the other hand, does not indicate that this is true of the returned soldiers who settled in the cities.

Besides regaining health at a far more rapid pace than their city brothers, the farmer soldier generally have experienced more pronounced prosperity. For their crops last year they received approximately $14,000,000. The return this year, on the fact of preliminary estimates should be 25 per cent greater.

Many of the 25,000 soldiers who have taken farms under the Soldiers' Re-establishment act were not in good health when they turned farmers. Today the average soldier-farmer is in ruddy health and sound finances.

In aiding the men the government has made loans aggregating more than $110,000,000. The Soldier Settlement Board, under direction of Major John Barnett, purchased over 150,000 horses, mules, cows, oxen, sheep and swine; 200,000 chickens and thousands of dollar's worth of farm machinery.

Nearly 5,000,000 acres of land have been cultivated, and last year 300,000 acres of virgin soil were broken. The men produced 10,000,000 bushels of grain, besides great quantities of hay, green feed, butter, milk, cheese, fruit and vegetables.

Signal success attained by the former soldiers has resulted in a flood of applications from other war veterans who now recognize the opportunities of Western Canada.

The dean of Exeter has had clocks placed in both pulpits of his cathedral to warn preachers to keep within reasonable limits.

EGYPTIAN COTTON SUCCESSFUL CROP IN WESTERN STATES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Egyptian long-staple cotton is being grown in the Colorado, or Grande river valleys of California and Arizona.

It is a new industry in this region that has been made wonderfully fertile through irrigation. The protection of this industry against destructive competition from long-staple cotton imports from the Nile river valleys was sought by Californians. This was the origin of the unsuccessful fight waged in the house for inclusion in the Fordney tariff bill of a 15 per cent duty on cotton having a staple of 1¼ inches in length, or more.

Credit is given former Secretary of Agriculture James Wilso nof Iowa, by Representative Julius Kahn of California, for starting the cotton industry along the Grande river, in California and Arizona and making possible the development there of hundreds of thousands of acres of land into prosperous cotton fields.

"In 1909 Secretary Wilson sent for me, saying he had good news," Kahn stated in explanation of the history of cotton growing in the Grande river valleys. "He told me that reports made to him by experts and scientists of the department of agriculture showed that the soil, climate and general conditions in the Grande river valley of California and Arizona were very similar to those in the Nile river valleys and that he intended to start an experimentation to ascertain whether long-staple or Egyptian cotton could not be grown in the Grande river valleys.

Long Staple Long Neglected.

"The secretary had $44,000 which he said he would use for the purpose of making the experiment. In twelve years, from that small expenditure, a great cotton industry has sprung up in the Grande river valleys. Nearly 60,000 acres of lands are being planted in cotton, and the last crop brought over $50,000,000. The Goodyear Rubber company has a 10,000-acre cotton plantation in the California valley and is contemplating moving there a part of its great automobile tire plant that it may be near the raw product and save in transportation costs. The long-staple cotton is used by the company in the manufacture of cords for its tires."

There is very little long-staple cotton grown in other sections of the cotton belt of the United States, although in recent years there has been conducted a campaign of education among the Southern cotton growers to induce them to abandon their short-staple product and turn to cultivation of the long-staple variety. Experts have held that this was possible through improvement of soil and selection of seed.

The discoverers of America found the short-staple cotton plant growing wild in the South. While the cotton planters since that time have extended the cotton-growing area and have adopted many improved methods of handling the crop, it is stated that little attention has been given the subject of improvement of the staple. Attempts made by specialists to grow the long-staple Egyptian and Sea island cotton on the Atlantic coast have not met with great success

RACE HORSE FAN CELEBRATES HIS 101ST BIRTHDAY

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 3.—"Dad" Quick was welcomed by the habitues out at the race track recently. For the first time in a 100 years or so he missed an opening day. He was too busy to go, having to complete a saddle for one of the jockeys. For, although he will be a hundred and one years old next October, "Dad" still works away in his little saddlery shop on Powell street to which came orders for racing saddles his specialty, from as far away as Australia and Brazil.

"Dad" Quick was born in England just a few months too late to count George II among the sovereigns he might have met. He emigrated to the United States about the time they put the first passenger train on the rails in England, and he helped Elias Howe in 1844 to make the first six sewing machines the world ever saw. Not being much over forty years of age when the Civil War broke out, he enlisted and fought for the North.

A rolling stone, he has followed the ponies all over North America, finding his way here from Francisco a few years ago. He is playing the pari-mutuels today just as he used to play the handbooks. Last meet, he says, he cleaned up $600 and he has a nice roll with him at Brig house Park today. By and by when he gets older he thinks he may reform, but a young man, he says, ought to be allowed his little fling at gambling.

The proprietor of a barber shop in the basement of one of the big New York hotels pays $50 a day rent.

LEMON DROP NOT CAUSED LOCALLY

The unusual drop of $8.50 a box in the price of lemons taking effect Tuesday was not caused by local market conditions and an oversupply of the commodity in this city but was a change dictated by the lemon market, over which local conditions have no control, according to information obtained from a local jobber Wednesday. When lemons were posted at $8.50 and $9.00 instead of $12.00 and $12.50 the local commission houses were confronted with a loss of several dollars a box on the supply on hand.

The cause for the drop is said to be a slackening in the demand in some parts of the country as the summer approaches an end.

Potatoes advanced 25 cents a hundred pounds Wednesday in the price which local jobbers pay to growers. However, the wholesale price asked of retailers in this city remains the same.

GUILTY CONSCIENCE YIELDS STOLEN LOOT

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Aug. 3.—Pangs of conscience brought about the recovery of approximately $1,200 worth of stolen goods here late last night.

The Tobin book store was entered last week and the goods stolen. Last night a man telephoned Mr. Tobin saying his conscience was hurting him. He then told Mr. Tobin where the stolen goods could be found. Mr. Tobin went to the place designated and found the stolen merchandise.

"Phi-Phi," a light musical comedy has completed a run of 1,200 consecutive shows in a Paris theater, having been put on the first time the night of the armistice, November 11, 1918, at which time it was pronounced a failure by all Paris critics except one.

RECENT GAINS EXTENDED ON STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Recent gains in the stock market were extended in the early trading today but the list subsequently relapsed and sold off to a heavy close. The reaction was attributable primarily to profit taking. By the end of the day early gains among the representative issues were replaced with losses ranging from substantial fractions to 2 points. Trading was on a moderate basis. Sugars and some of the oils were forced down several points.

Further adjustment of steel prices lent interest to the action of the steel group, which moved within a narrow range, selling off with the general list late in the day.

The Iron Age in its weekly summary took the view that the leading steel producers showed a willingness to name prices which would bring business, adding that the improvement in other industrials soon will be felt in iron and steel. Higher money rates had a tendency to check operations for the long account. Call money renewed at 5 1-2 per cent and loaned at that figure throughout the day.

The bond market continued to show an improving tendency with Southern Pacific convertible 4's rising almost 2 points. Liberty bonds were higher.

CANADA ANXIOUS FOR IMMIGRANTS REJECTED BY U. S.

MONTREAL, Aug. 3.—Three thousand people, who had planned to emigrate to the United States, are stranded in Antwerp, according to cable advices, because of the new U. S. Restriction act. Most of them are Poles. A steamer that sailed recently was scheduled to carry 850 but sailed carrying only 250. Steamers refuse to carry more than the monthly quota allowed by American law. They would be compelled to return the surplus to Europe at the company's expense.

A suggestion has been made here that the steamers bring these people to Canada, dropping them en route to New York at St. John's or Quebec. Canada would welcome the settlers the United States rejects. Millions of acres remain unsettled in Western Canada. Here the Europeans would find welcome and homes. Canada's greatest need is population and its greatest asset land. The country is making a big bid for agricultural settlers.

"The United States Restriction act is bound to prove an immense benefit to Canada," said Colonel J. S. Dennis, of the Canadian Pacific railways, one of Canada's foremost authorities on immigration and colonization. "The new law has created a wonderful opportunity for Canada. People who now desire to leave European countries are a better type than the usual immigrants. They are substantial farmer people. If it were not for the disturbed conditions in Europe they would not think of leaving their native land. Large numbers of these home builders, barred from the United States, are turning to Canada. We expect heavy settlement in the western provinces in the next year."

FEW BUYERS SEND WHEAT PRICE DOWN

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Dearth of buying orders and especially of any from Europe led to a setback in wheat prices today. The market closed heavy 1 1-2 to 2c net lower, with September 1.23 1-4 to 1.23 1-2 and December 1.26 1-4 to 1.26 1-2. Corn lost 1-2@5-8c to 5-8@3-4c and oats 1-8c to 3-8@1-2c. In provisions the outcome was unchanged to 12 1-2c down.

At first the wheat market displayed some firmness. Lack of export demand, however, soon began to have a bearish influence, which was greatly increased later by word that the seaboard had resold a quantity of wheat to shippers here. The close was at the lowest level of the day.

Corn proved to be weak from the start, as a result of plentiful moisture and a likelihood of large receipts soon. Large stocks in sight depressed oats notwithstanding bullish estimates of the 1921 yield.

Provisions went lower with hogs and grain, despite export sales of 2,000,000 pounds of lard.

COTTON GAINS DESPITE CROP REPORT ISSUED

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 3.—For a while in the early trading today cotton showed pronounced strength but after the issuance of the weekly crop reports from the government the tone softened and reactions came about, the reports being considered much more favorable than expected and altogether more favorable than it was gathered they would be from the monthly report on the crop, issued Monday. The tone was steadier in the late trading so that the close was a net gain of the day of 13 to 15 points.

On the opening the more active months were depressed 2 to 3 points by the poor showing of Liverpool but new buying in considerable volume was met and it soon caused an advance. This buying was based on almost altogether the expectations that the weekly reports would be highly unfavorable. Before they were out at 10 o'clock prices were sent 28 to 30 points higher than the close of yesterday.

The market commenced to lose ground after the ring had listened to the reports that an advance was pared down until it amounted to only 8 points on the more active months, October sinking to 12.43. At its highest October traded up to 12.65, rising from 12.32 around the opening. Much of the cotton taken on in the early hours by longs was thrown overboard and for a considerable period the ring was unable to absorb offerings except at declining prices. Much of the selling was caused by the statement that dry weather had decreased weevil activities in the western belt.

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Influence of small crop estimates was reflected by early advances in the cotton market today, but increasing offerings were again encountered around the 13 cent level for October and reactions followed a more favorable weekly weather report than anticipated. December sold off from 13.54 to 13.28, and closed at 13.34 with the general list closing steady at a net advance of 5 to 14 points. The market opened steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 11 points in response to disappointing Liverpool cables and scattered southern selling. Early offerings were readily absorbed around the initial prices, however, and the market soon turned firmer on trade buying and covering promoted by bullish private crop advices. Before the end of the morning active months showed net advances of 20 to 30 points with October selling at 13.02 and January at 13.45. This carried October back to within a point of the best price touched on Monday, but there seemed to be a renewal of scattered southern selling at this figure and the weekly report of the weekly bureau was evidently a disappointment to early buyers. At any rate the market reacted under scattered liquidation with near months selling back to nearly last night's closing quotations. On the decline trade buying was in evidence and last prices showed rallies of several points from the lowest.

CONDEMN FAKE FIRE SALES IN MERCHANTS TALK

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Fake fire sales were decried and predictions made that sharp legitimate advertising would cause a flood of business by speakers before the national congress of retail merchants here today.

W. Frank McClure, chairman of the advertising council of the Chicago association of commerce, which had charge of today's meeting, said that advertising would "bring such a flood of customers that goods can be marked low and small profits on one customer will mount to large figures on many customers."

J. A. Davis, manager of the advertisers and investors protective bureau of the association, told the retailers that "truth in advertising has become as necessary as truth in the home."

COL. PRYOR AND THE FIGHT FOR A TARIFF ON HIDES.

Hon. Martain Mulcahy Harfis, the brilliant editorial writer of the San Antonio Express is of the opinion that the fight for a protective tariff on hides is not yet over. The quoted letter to Col. Ike P. Pryor is from a man who is identified with the Southern Tariff Association, and is dated from Washington of recent date:

Dear Mr. Pryor: I have your letter of July 16 and am always glad to hear from you. The Fordney tariff bill, as finally passed by the House, gave meat a rate of 2c per pound and hides on the free list. The adverse action on hides was caused by the House refusing to give leather a compensatory duty. The Payne-Aldrich bill gave the leather industry a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem and an effort was made to revive this rate, but the temper of the House was antagonistic toward the leather industry, as their representatives had been asking for free hides and protected leather, and when they voted down leather the Eastern Congressmen who were supporting hides broke ranks and boosted hides upon the free list. We feel quite certain, however, that the Senate will take care of both hides and leather with a favorable duty. The wool schedule is also unsatisfactory in that it gives a specific rate of 25c per pound, provided it does not exceed 35 per cent ad valorem, which, of course, reduces the rate to 4c or 5c per pound. We are holding a Southern Tariff Congress at Greensboro, N. C., on August 15 and 16 to give full consideration to these matters, and will then appear before the Senate Finance Committee and ask for amendments to the bill. We do not consider that there will be any great difficulty in convincing the Senate that these inequalities should be taken out.

Hides are on the free list and the republican congressional leaders are determined that they shall remain on the free list unless the tanners and leather merchants of New England are given costly compensatory legislative favors. Millions of American voters, democrats and independents, voted for a change in 1920. They are getting it. A republican congress has devitalized the federal trade commission and made it impotent. This concession was demanded by the packers. More than this: The compromise judgment in the case of the government against the packers, arranged by former Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, has been abrogated by the so-called packers act given the people by a republican congress.

Six years ago Colonel Pryor, as the president of the American Live Stock Association, opened the fight on the packers. The movement was launched in the city of El Paso and Colonel Pryor and his fellow cattlemen raised a fund of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to conduct the campaign. Colonel Pryor was the chairman of the committee sent to the national capitol. This committee interviewed Woodrow Wilson, then president of the United States. Pryor and his lieutenants told the president that the packers had created a monopoly and that the producer and consumers of meat were at the mercy of "the big five." President Wilson ordered the Federal Trade Commission to investigate the charges and the commission investigated.

There has been a war on ever since in the halls of congress. A. Mitchell Palmer forced a compromise. This compromise provided that the packers should sell their stock yards and belt line railways and confine themselves strictly to the packing business.

In the campaign of 1920, forgetful of the favors shown them by Woodrow Wilson and a democratic congress, thousands of cattlemen deserted the democratic party and their votes and their money helped to elect Warren G. Harding president of the United States.

It is the irony of fate that a republican congress has given these men free hides, that the federal trade commission has been robbed of its stinger and that in future the big packers of the country, so bitterly denounced by Colonel Pryor and his friends, in the days of democratic control, in future may have all the protection they need if there is a friendly secretary of agriculture in office in the city of Washington.

"Politics makes strange bedfellows." This is an ancient and a trite saying. Wilson gave the cattle raisers all the recognition they demanded. Congress has given them a dead Federal Trade Commission, hides on the free list and a Morgan bankers pool of fifty millions to tide the livestock industry over the lean and menacing after-the-war years.

These are matters of history. The Record-News has no fight to make on the packers; no brief for the defense of the cattle raisers. The latter asked the government for bread; they were handed a stone.

THE CORN CROP IN RELATION TO BANKING.

In the August issue of Commerce Monthly, the magazine published by the National Bank of Commerce in New York, there is an interesting article concerning the corn crop in relation to banking. The writer says the skillful corn belt farmer stands, not in the traditional relation of agriculturist to banker but in the relation of manufacturer to banker. Since the major portion of the American corn crop is marketed in the form of hogs, and hence ultimately as pork products, he is not primarily the producer of raw material, but the maker of a highly finished product.

A result of this clean-cut relation of the farmer to his banker, whereby he is a borrower on a short time basis and against self-liquidating assets, is the extension of the use of bank checks. This has reached proportions undreamed of by the dweller in large cities. This substitution of bank credit for cash in country communities is one of the great accomplishments of American banking.

The period of unusual agricultural prosperity which terminated with the price declines of 1920 afforded an opportunity for the entire corn-belt to establish itself on the satisfactory financial basis of the older parts of the corn country. This in large measure it failed to do.

Failure to take advantage of a favorable situation was not through lack of desire to do so, but failure to understand how it could best be done. The great prosperity of the war years, the latter part of 1919 and the first five months of 1920, was quite as new an experience to many country bankers as it was to the farmers who were their customers.

Farmers and country bankers did not differ from other large sections of the business community in their lack of knowledge of how to take advantage of prosperity. The form of investment they knew best was investment in land. Efforts on the part of farmers with extra capital to secure corn land which promised good profits because of high prices resulted in speculation in farm lands, which has left the country face to face with a farm mortgage problem which is now a vital factor in the entire problem of agricultural credits.

It is not yet clear as to how the farm mortgage situation is to be met, for the indebtedness incurred by the purchase of farms at inflated values must now be liquidated by the sale of farm products at prices practically identical with what they were before the war.

In areas where there are many mortgaged farms, many bank loans will continue frozen until the mortgage loan market improves. The problem cannot be solved by efforts to maintain prices of farm products above the international market.

Even if this could be done, it would be so detrimental to the entire economic position of the United States as to react on agriculture, with consequent failure to accomplish the desired end.

Moreover, every attempt made since the war to support prices by artificial means has ended in disaster. The only possible solution appears to lie in mortgage renewals for long periods.

When farmers have learned the need of supplying a fair proportion of their own working capital, and not until then, can a recurrence of the present situation be avoided. Then local banks are under the heavy obligation of helping them to recognize this necessity.

If sufficient liquid capital is to be kept available safe methods of short time investment must be provided for these funds. The time certificate of deposit, to a certain extent, affords such a method, and experienced farmers in many localities also buy to considerable amounts the notes of other farmers whose credit is known to them.

There is much yet to be done, however, both as to providing adequate facilities for short-time investment and in educating farmers to their use.

Good long-time investments declares the monthly must be made readily available to farmers. They will thus gradually become familiar with other types of investment than farm lands and permanent improvements, while at the same time they will learn to eschew unsound enterprises.

Farmers of the corn-belt, because of the nature and conditions of their occupation, are primarily business men rather than tillers of the soil. When they come to a full realization of this, that region will not only be able to finance itself, but it will offer a potential investment market of great promise.

GEORGIA FRUIT CROP DOUBLED THIS YEAR.

Shipments of peaches and watermelons from Georgia for the 1921 season have surpassed all previous records, according to information just compiled by the Southern Railway.

Including shipments of July 22nd, the Fruit Growers Express, which furnishes the refrigerator cars in which all the Georgia peaches are moved, reports that 10,264 cars of peaches had been shipped from Georgia and 300 additional cars are expected. The total movement for 1920, as reported by the Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates of the U. S. Department of Agriculture was 5,663 cars.

Including shipments of July 16th, the Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates reports that 10,110 cars of watermelons had been shipped from Georgia as compared with 5,258 for the same period last year and 11,103 for the total 1920 movement.

Prices received for both peaches and watermelons have yielded the growers good returns. It is estimated that $1.50 per crate, or $700 per car of 476 crates, is a fair average of what growers have received for peaches, f. o. b. shipping point. For 10,500 cars this would bring the Georgia growers $7,350,000.

For watermelons, $200 per car, f. o. b. shipping point, is considered a conservative average price. Prices paid at Macon on July 21st were reported by the Bureau of Markets as follows: 26 lb. average $165-$185, 28 lb. average $225-$260, 30 lb. average $275-$300, 32-34 lb. average $325-350. At $200 per car, a crop of only 12,000 cars would bring the Georgia growers $2,400,000.

The results of the season have shown that the freight rate is only one of the factors entering into the successful marketing of a perishable crop and that where intelligent methods of distribution and selling are employed the growers can get a satisfactory return at prices which the consumer is willing to pay, under the freight rates which now prevail, declares the economist of the transportation line.

THE AGE OF BULLETS

I sat tonight beneath a tree, to read some gems of thought, and passing gunmen shot at me, to try new gats they'd bought; a bullet hit me in the knee, and I am sore distraught. Long years ago young men had guns, as lads have guns today, but then they sought the woodland runs, to shoot the stag at bay, or in the evening brought home tons of rabbits in a dray. And when we heard a gun's report, in woodlands or in fens, we'd say, "The boys are having sport, they're shooting snakes or hens; 'tis well that hunters should cavort among our dales and glens." Now, when we hear a firearm bark, we shudder and lament, for death, which loves a shining mark, has gathered in some gent; some gunman, creature of the dark, has shot him for a cent. We know that laws and things are wrong whene'er a fire arm booms, since bandits shoot the weak and strong and fit them for their tombs, and murdered men still jog along beneath the hearse's plumes. We have so many laws, odsfish! forbidding this and that, but statesmen do not seem to wish to squelch the bandit's gat; some buckshot came just now, kerawish, and spoiled my Sunday hat. "Verboten" is the sign we see, where'er we look, by heck! And divers kinds of liberty are made by law a wreck; but when I sit 'neath vine and tree, a bullet wounds my neck.—Copyright by George Matthew Adams.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

IN MONTREAL.

Evidently it pays in Montreal to "face the mountain."

ROOM TO LET—567 Maplewood avenue, Outremont—Beautiful room in an ideal location, new, modern house, home comforts and privileges to right party, facing the mountain. —E. Strauss.

Nine-year-old girl travels alone from Witkovice, Austria, to Bridgeport, Ohio, to join her parents. One reason she left Austria was to avoid learning how to spell the name of the town.

Secretary Hughes says Russia is an economic vacuum. But there always seems to be plenty of torrid ozone there.

WELL PERHAPS.

Dear Roy—Paragraph in the "Tribune:"

"The game was a butchers' duel between Johnson and Leonard."

Perhaps they used meat balls, eh? —Harry Thompson.

Headline says: "Angry Husband Hits Wife of Sixty-five With an Axe." A wife of sixty-five has altogether too many husbands.

PROFESSOR STEINBRUGGE SAYS:

Are you a wife? Theoretically, you should be a help and comfort to your husband. Do you assert too much individuality and do you wish to shine too much on your own? Marriage is a partnership and you are not the senior partner. There is no need of a senior partner in a successful firm.

Being a woman, you have the advantage of getting at your conclusions with the aid of your intuition. You may realize progress and its meaning, but progress has got to be attained according to certain well-defined laws. Naturally you are an incentive to your husband, but he has got to carry the load. Should he quit you would find that the load is heavier than he let you think it was. Perhaps you think that your husband is neglecting you. Some husbands do, but the average do not.

We have often been accused of being an extravagant nation. Thrift is advised by our big men and we are advised to invest our savings in standard securities. When we try to follow out this advice and buy securities in companies which are supposed to represent the national wealth and resources, we are surprised to find out that through mismanagement and overcapitalization—to use a slang expression—we are stung. Would it not have been better to have spent the money and at least gotten something for the money?

It is not possible to encourage thrift unless the results of thrift are made worth while. That is a law and there is relatively about it. The example should come from the top and spurious securities should not be allowed to exist.

It is not my intention to start a colony and publish a newspaper about what is right or wrong. I have too much sense of humor for that; but this subject is worth thinking about.

THEY MUST BE ODD.

DOGHILL PARAGRAFS
By GEORGE BINGHAM

The Depity Constable today was seen taking the measurement of Sile Kildew's tracks in the mud across the road. So far as is known Sile has not done a thing to be arrested for, but the Depity says it won't hurt to have the tracks on file if anything should happen.

The Wild Onion school teacher looked through the dictionary today and to his surprise found several words spelled the other way.

Miss Flutie Belcher was seen to sigh and look wishful at the postoffice this morning. Must be expecting a letter.

Breakfast Stories

Rose, the garrulous domestic, can give you facts of history—international, dramatic, scandalous—right off the bat without a moment's hesitation.

"How do you manage to remember these things, Rose?" inquired her employer the other day.

Then Rose came back with the infallible rue for memory training.

"I'll tell ye, ma'am," says she. "All me life never a lie I've told. And then ye don't have to be taxin' yer memory to be rememberin' what ye told this one or that one, or how ye explained this or that, ye don't overwork it and it lasts ye, good as new, forever."

Mr. and Mrs. Speakrite can agree on almost anything, but the subjects of pronunciation has always been an exception. Mr. Speakrite insists that the vowel sound in words like hog or dog should be short and snappy, while the wife would rather call a dog a bound or a bog of swamp than pronounce the words as her husband does. She thinks a broad, long sound should be given to the vowels in such words.

The other morning the husband asked for a second cup of coffee at breakfast. "I suppose you mean c-a-w-f-e-e," his wife suggested.

At this point their two bopefuls, Willie, three years old, and Donald, five took up the family argument. "Mother says 'c-a-w-f-e-e,'" Willie remarked to his brother. "What do you say?"

"I say cocoa," was the tactful answer of the astute five-year-old Donald.

THEOCRITUS.
(North American Review.)

Not of war, nor of tears did he build his song,
For the hills and the fields and the shepherd throng
Are caught in his delicate net of words,
With the dread wood nymphs and the gray sea birds.
"Daphnis," he sang, "Daphnis is dying now,
Ye violets bear thorns, ye cattle
bow
Your heads and weep for Daphnis."
And he sang
Of Polyphemus till the meadows rang,
Of Aechines he sang; then bowed
his head,
And sang of Amaryllis loved, yet dead.
Then in a gladdened tone he told the tales
Of goatherds' loves in still Sicilian vales.
There the cidada with a noisy note
Chirped in the pine tree while the poet wrote.
Within his verse he caught the hum
of bees
That haunt the flowers underneath the trees.

"RECORD NEWS IS CORRECT"

(From the Denison Daily Herald.)

Referring to Europe's need for cotton goods, the current number of Hearst's International says:

"A cotton sheet in Paris costs twelve dollars. A good linen sheet costs about fourteen. Usually linen is is worth twice as much as cotton. The cotton comes from America; the linen is home-grown. There is absurdity in the fact that our cotton warehouses are bursting while cotton is so scarce in France that the average person can not afford to buy it.

"On a certain morning recently the the writer sat in a police court in Berlin and saw a number of vagrants brought before the judge. Every one was well clothed, except for shirts and socks. Almost anybody can afford to buy a suit of woolen clothes in Germany, but when it comes to buying cotton shirts, cotton underwear, or cotton socks, the prices are prohibitive.

"Cotton goods in England are extremely high-priced. Irish linen is almost as cheap.

"The world wants and direfully needs American cotton; it will buy American cotton, ravenously, as soon as it can get credit or money.

"The war finance corporation at Washington can not do anything better than grant some of its billion-dollar credit for cotton sales. The need in the world-at-large is piling up behind the dam and we ought to see a pleasing overflow before many months have passed."

Commenting on the situation disclosed by the article above quoted, the Wichita Falls Record-News expresses the following opinion:

"There are two million southern families interested in cotton culture. There are millions of families indirectly interested.

"Texas is the banner cotton producing state. Texas bankers and merchants and business men of all descriptions are vitally interested. There was a July forecast of eight million three hundred thousand bales of American cotton and the August forecast may cut this estimate to eight million bales. It is safe to predict that Texas will produce this year, more than two million five hundred thousand bales.

"When the spinners of the world get busy again there is going to be a strong demand for American cotton. When the shippers and jobbers of cotton goods of the world get busy, the bears and the gamblers of the world are going to hunt tall timber.

"There is going to be a minimum supply of cotton in the face of a maximum demand. Cotton is the garment of democracy and 90 per cent of the population of the world who wear covering, buy the garment of democracy when they have the money or the credit.

"Hope is said to spring eternal in the human breast. There is a reason for it. This old world has jogged along regardless of bloody wars and commercial upheavals for ten thousand years. It will continue to jog along in future as in the past for thousands of years to come. All peoples and all nations will work out their own salvation in future as in the past.

"There will be tides of prosperity and periods of depression in future as in the past, but the trend is ever upward; the movement is ever onward and so it is written in the Book of Destiny."

The Record-News is correct. The world needs cotton and the supply will fall far short of the estimated production. But were the supply further reduced by one-half, would that fact have any effect on the market price of the product? Or, to state the proposition in another way, were the supply doubled in quantity and the market still further depressed would that create a demand in Europe where the greatest need exists?

The fact that cotton garments are not being worn by Europeans is not due to the supply of the staple, visible or prospective. Neither is it due to the price demanded for the garments. Were they obtainable across the seas at even lower prices than they bring on the American market, the people would still go without them for the good and sufficient reason they have not the money to pay for them. It doesn't matter how cheap a much needed commodity may be, if the would-be purchaser is without the price there can be no trading.

Extending credit to Europe will not alter the situation. Europe owes us more money now than it will be able to pay in the next fifty or one hundred years. To grant them still further credits will only be making bad matters worse. There is but one solution of the problem as this paper sees it, and that is to establish trade relations with Europe on a basis of exchange. Europe can not buy of us unless it can sell to us. We cannot sell Europe, for they have not got the money. Europe can not sell her people in this country, for the tariff wall we are about to erect which will serve as an effective barrier to trade.

The only hope for the cotton raisers is to still further reduce acreage and produce just sufficient to supply the domestic market. If he raises more than is so required, the surplus will be a dead loss—unless congress can be made to see the error of its ways and by proper legislation make available the markets of the entire world for the products of the soil.

Who's Who

COUNT PLUNKETT.

A prominent figure in the peace parleys between the British government and the Sinn Fein has been Count Plunkett, a member of the De Valera delegation.

Count Plunkett, late director of the Dublin museum, is a noted archaeologist and a distinguished lecturer on archaeological subjects.

COUNT PLUNKETT

He is closely identified with the Royal Irish Academy of Dublin, which contains many of the most valuable documents and historical records in Ireland. Some years ago, when a valuable collection of old Gaelic ornaments were discovered in the bogs of Ireland, it was Count Plunkett who secured them for the nation. These wonderful gold treasures of early Gaelic civilization are now a prominent exhibit for visitors to Dublin, and are historic proof of social life in the eleventh century.

Count Plunkett's son, Joseph Mary, a young poet and dramatist of great promise, was executed Easter week for his part in the rising. He was one of the seven signatories of the proclamation of the Irish republic. Two younger sons were also arrested and are still in jail.

Count Plunkett was elected to the British house of commons some years ago, but as a Sinn Feiner in good standing refused to take his seat.

CONDITIONS HERE BETTER THAN MOST PLACES, SAYS RIGGS

A complete line of the most up-to-date models of men's clothing and furnishings will be included in the fall stocks of the Riggs Clothing Store, 611 Eighth Street, declared J. F. Riggs Wednesday on his return from a 30-day purchasing tour of northern and eastern cities.

Mr. Riggs stopped in Washington for a few days while en route to trade centers and visited the United States senate and house of representatives. On the return trip he stopped for several days at Enloe to attend the bedside of his mother, Mrs. Nancy Cooper, whose death occurred early Monday morning.

Commenting on trade and financial conditions throughout the nation, Mr. Riggs declared that he finds Wichita Falls in better condition than any city he had visited.

MARRIAGE HAS ITS TRIBULATIONS, SAYS CITY FIREMAN BATTLE

Being a a bridegroom has its embarrassing features, according to the assertions of J. T. Battle, fireman at the central station.

Tuesday afternoon Miss Mary Parrish and Mr. Battle were married in Iowa Park. They returned to the city early and Wednesday morning Battle resumed his usual duties. All seemed well and quiet, congratulations seemed the order of the hour until nearly noon, when Battle asserts his companions began to show their "real nature."

A slide, head first, down the "greased pole" and a short confinement in the city jail were among the inflictions visited on Battle by his mates. Mr. and Mrs. Battle will make their home in this city.

AGRICULTURAL CREDIT BILL IS AMENDED

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Disposition of amendments to the agricultural credits bill was begun by the senate today but a vote on passage of the measure, which is framed by the administration as a substitute for the original Norris bill, went over.

Two of a score of pending amendments were adopted after a hard fight. One offered by Senator Smith, democrat, South Carolina, would authorize loans by the war finance corporation to associations of agricultural producers, and the other, offered by Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, would authorize the corporation to take up $100,000,000 in bonds of the federal farm loan system.

The Smith amendment was contested hotly.

The Harrison amendment was adopted without a record vote or particular opposition.

Senator Pittman, democrat, Nevada, offered an amendment which went over until tomorrow to amend the farm loan law so as to permit loans to entry men on government reclamation projects, a proposal similar to those pending by Senators Borah, republican, Idaho and Ashurst.

OPPOSITION IS MANIFESTED TO NEW DISTRICT

Some opposition to the redistricting plan as it affects Wichita County, in the new bill now before the senate committee on senatorial districts, is anticipated from residents of the proposed district, according to announcements Wednesday night.

The proposed bill, which has as its chief sponsor Senator W. H. Bledsoe, places Wichita Falls in district No. 23, as follows; Hardeman, Foard, Knox, Wilbarger, Baylor, Wichita, Archer, Young and Clay.

The original bill as proposed by residents embraced Wichita, Wilbarger, Clay, Montague, Archer, Baylor and Throckmorton. Persons in favor of placing these counties in the Wichita Falls district, declare that it was believed that all these counties are deeply interested in the oil industry and could be combined in a single district to good advantage. Young County was also believed a logical unit for this district.

J. D. Parnell, local business man, commenting on the proposed district, said that residents in Hardeman County preferred to be included in the Lubbock district on the contention that their principal industry is farming and stock raising, as are Foard and Knox Counties.

Other proposed nearby districts are: No. 22, Montague, Jack, Wise, Denton, Palo Pinto and Parker.

No. 24, Scurry, Fisher, Jones, Haskell, Schackelford, Stephens, Callahan, Eastland, Taylor, Nolan, Mitchell and Throckmorton.

Besides Mr. Riggs the deceased is survived by one daughter, Mrs. E. J. Box of Enloe.

VARSITY CLUB ALSO OPPOSES CUT IN SALARY

The Wichita Falls Varsity club, composed of former students and graduates of institutions all over the country, went on record at its meeting Tuesday as opposing any cut in the appropriations of the state legislature and for educational institutions and recommending that the legislature restore appropriations for the state schools.

Institutions affected by the curtailment of funds appropriated for their maintainence are the University of Texas, Texas A. & M. college and the College of Industrial Arts.

The resolution as presented by the committee appointed to draw up a resolution embodying the spirit of the matter, is as follows:

"Whereas, the university of the state of Texas has contributed largely to the development of the men and women of the state, and thereby to the welfare of the state, and

"Whereas, the establishment and maintenance of the well equipped universities with teaching forces of the highest character and learning is becoming a more and more vital need in all parts of the world, and

"Whereas, the state of Texas has never established universities beyond the needs of the state nor equipped nor manned them beyond a desirable status, and

"Whereas, there is in the state of Texas, urgent need of greatly enlarged educational facilities, not only in rural and city subordinate schools, but in the university and vocational training, and

"Whereas, it is believed any curtailment in appropriations recommended for the universities of the state, will most seriously handicap the most efficient and socially economical operation of the state universities for service to the people of the state, and therefore,

"Be it resolved, that the University club of the city of Wichita Falls, most earnestly recommends that the legislature rescind any action toward reduction in appropriations for the universities of the state and restore appropriation to not less than committee recommendations as submitted to the legislature, and

"Be it further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the representative in the legislature from this district, Mr. B. F. Johnson, a member of this club, with the recommendation that he do all in his power to carry into effect its recommendation, and that copies be given to the newspapers of the city."

INCREASE IN FREIGHT REPORTED

Freight business on the Fort Worth and Denver railroad, as indicated by the number of cars moved, shows an increase of 25 to 30 per cent over the previous month from the figures of July business, according to O. M. Smith, general agent. This increase, he says, is not only due to the season of the year (a natural increase due to wheat movement being customary) but is marked by an increase in all of the lines handled by the road.

Oil business, which for some time experienced a wonted slump, is now picking up and, according to Mr. Smith, gives promise of better things. Freight in less than car lots also is registering an increase.

Although the wheat has been harvested in the immediate section of Wichita Falls there is still a fairly heavy traffic on the Denver line from points farther north and west where harvesting is later than here.

Confidence that the revival of business will follow the signs seen in the picking up of freight business is felt by Mr. Smith, who says that periods of depression in business are generally accompanied by light freight shipments and that a revival in freight business is generally the first sign of better times.

in the senate and his vote made the commission act a law. The old dogma of states rights appears to be as dead as the dodo but there may be a resurrection some time and the followers of Jefferson may again come into their own. Mayfield as a candidate for the senate, hopes to breathe the breath of life into the state rights corpse, but southern democrats who supported the eighteenth and nineteenth amendments to the constitution of the United States were responsible for the bludgeoning of state rights and were in at its death.

Posterity must uphold the torch of liberty set ablaze by the Pilgrims, President Harding said in his address at Plymouth. "Just as these Pilgrim Fathers drew together ample community authority to make the Nation and still preserve the freedom of those who oppose, so must we guard against the supreme centralisation of power at home, and the superstate for the world," said the president. "More, we must combat the menace in the growing assumption that the state must support the people, for just government is merely the guarantee to the people of the right and opportunity of that people to support themselves."

EXTRA MILK
It's the extra milk that more than pays the slight difference in cost between Purina Cow Chow feed and other rations. Try two sacks to each cow and you will see why Purina Cow Chow is the most used quality ration in the country.

Caruso Is No More
But His Voice Will Live Forever
The great tenor returned to the beloved city of his birth to die. After all the honor and glory which Fortune showered on him in the largest cities of three continents, he returned to Naples to enter upon his long rest from which there is no awakening.
All the love and pathos of his eventful life is contained in his last record, which has just been released in the August list of Victor records.
"T m'ARRICORDO e NAPULE"
The voice of voices rolls out, clear and golden, telling the loves, the joys, the sorrows of life in that ancient city of southern Italy, as no voice has ever told them before.
To hear it as it was sung, and as Caruso wanted you to hear it, play it on a VICTROLA.
Thanks to the Victor Talking Machine Co., Caruso's wonderful voice has been preserved for all time. And his records will be doubly treasured now that he is no more.
