For 2 Big Nights Of Entertainment

Advance tickets for the 2 big nights of entertainment during the second annual Tumbleweed Festival go on sale here Monday.

Eldon Mahon, chairman of the festival committee, reported Friday that advance tickets for the 2 big stage shows and the 2 nights of competition in the Miss Tumbleweed of 1961 beauty pageant would go on sale at that time.

The advance tickets—$1.50 for adults and $1 for students—will be on sale at booths in City National Bank, Landau's Department Store, Baker Hotel and Marshall Variety Store.

All tickets will be $1.50 at the door at Colorado City High School gym at each night's performance, Mahon said.

Friday night, May 5, Homer and Jethro, comedy, hill-billy recording team, will furnish the entertainment.

Along with them, the 19 contestants in the Miss Tumbleweed beauty pageant will parade across the stage in the preliminaries of the contest.

Saturday night the Four Aces, pop-singing quartet and stars of Decca Records will perform. The finals of the beauty contest will be staged at that time.

The entry list has been completed for the pageant. Mahon reported. Miss Natli Lynn Smith, last year's queen, will crown the winner Saturday night.

LOCAL BANK DEPOSITS UP FROM LAST YEAR

Deposits in City National Bank of Colorado City are up $149,000 from April of 1960.

The total assets of the bank are up $120,000 from this date last year also. The bank reported this week after its annual Spring Call.

The assets are up approximately $120,000 to $7,184,000 as compared to $7,064,000 last year.

Loans have also increased during the year—from $2,069,000 last year to $2,197,000 at the present.

This year's call showed the bank's deposits down approximately $100,000 from the call last year which was made in March.

This is due to the annual slump in April, due to income taxes and other factors, bank officials said.

Actually deposits at the present as compared to the same date last year show that the bank has gained $149,000 in that 12-month period, they stated.

JAYCEES VS SPECIALS

Donkey Ballgame Set Tuesday Night

Baseball as you have never seen it before—and probably as will never be seen in Colorado City again—is what the Colorado City Jaycees offer here Tuesday night.

The brave, young Jaycees will mount donkeys at Little League field in Ruddick Park to do battle against an even braver, younger team—the Wallace Specials, a team from Wallace High School.

The baseball (?) game gets started at 8 p. m. with the 2 teams atop specially trained donkeys. The donkeys will operate, but only to the delight of the fans in the stands and the misfortune of the Jaycees and Wallace Specials.

Thrills, spills and laughs aplenty are the rule and not the exception when a battle tries to beat out a base hit or work around the bases for a score while mounted atop a frisky donkey.

All the fun won't come from the offensive side of the game. The defensive team is—thanks to a few more slight changes in the rules—forced to make all plays while attempting to stay atop more stubborn donkeys.

Other rule changes allow the use of a volley ball, basketball or any small rubber ball in the place of a baseball.

And the bats seldom resemble the real thing. They usually are broomsticks, short wooden boards or any other weapon the batters may happen to come up with.

Admission is $1 for adults and 50 cents for students. Tickets are on sale by all Jaycees.

"One minnow please!" Yep, that's what we told him.
"Whaddayamean?" asked the man in the bait house.
"We mean we wanta buy ONE minnow—that's all—no more," we answered.

"I want one too," said my fishing buddy, my son Sandy. "That'll make two."

Now, who'd ever thought the time would come when a fisherman would stop at a bait house and order ONE MINNOW for a day of fishing? Well, we did!

We were kidding, of course.
But don't laugh too loud because the two of us caught eight black bass, and used only three minnows each.

How'd we do it? It's an interesting tale.

It all dates back to a few months ago when Sandy and I heard about a Canadian firm called "Bait's Alive." All we learned was that the company manufactured a fish hook of unique design to which was attached what the makers called a "Minnow Sock."

Anyway we wrote Bait's Alive, asked them to tell us more about their new product, and ordered a few.

Remember when you were a kid and played with a wicker tube that often was referred to as a Japanese handcuff? Remember how you'd put one finger of each hand into opposite ends of the tube and the harder you pulled the tighter you stuck?

Well, the Minnow Sock works on the same principle.

The boys at Bait's Alive have developed a "sock" made of monofilament line. One end is tied to the shank of the hook, right next to the eye.
The other end is open.
Into this open end you insert a live minnow.

Believe you me that min-now will stay alive throughout a full day of fishing—unless you snag your hook so often that you finally render the bait helpless.

Your minnow swims along side the hook, in the sack, natural like. No hooking the minnow through the lips or under the dorsal fin or in the tail or through the eyes. Just slip the minnow inside the handcuffing sock and go about your still-fishing, trolling, or casting—as always.

My son and I gave this new invention a good test on Lake Travis as soon as the minnow socks arrived. We bought four dozen big Silver Shiner minnows—the kind they raise at Rockdale.

Fishing wasn't so hot that day. In fact we didn't see anybody hauling in fish, even the several boats were out.

Sandy and I trolled for six hours. Total score: 8 black bass, with the sock and bait attached at the desired distance from the bottom.

Nothing sensational about the haul—except that nobody else was catching fish and the only minnows we actually lost were those snagged in deep brush where we had to snap the line.

Another interesting feature of the experiment was the fact that bass would attack the minnows three, four, sometimes five times, trying to free the bait... even scaling and skinning the tail of the big Shiners in an effort to take the bait from the sack.
We wrote Wes Rose of Bait's Alive in Toronto, and told him about our experience and ordered several of his minnow-socked hooks in each size. Wes makes them in large (8/0 and 10/0); medium (3/0, 4/0 and 5/0); and small sizes (4, 2, and 1/0).

Wes says that the "sock" is tied to a specially designed nickle hook, with a pan shaped shank, because it allows the minnows more freedom of motion.

His idea was developed with three main thoughts in mind.

First—by far the largest proportion of a fish's diet consists of minnows.

Second—no device yet had been produced that would hold a minnow securely while still allowing it to swim and remain alive almost indefinitely.

Third—best position of min-now-to-hook is parallel.
For maximum hook exposure the sock and minnow should be on the left side of the hook.

Ordinarily the minnow is inserted into the sock head first. However, for certain conditions, some fishermen prefer the head at the point of the hook. In that event they insert the minnow into the sock, tail first.

I never could understand why Bait's Alive put such huge socks on 10/0 hooks.

Now I find that the big socks are especially designed for fishing with live frogs. Another clever thought!

Next time out we'll try them with some small perch as bait.

Minnows Socks should be equally as effective on the Gulf, using live shrimp as the tempter. For that matter, hunks of squid might be inserted in the sock, thus saving a man lots of re-baiting time. Anxious to try that too!
Wes also pointed out some other uses. For example—attaching the sock and its single hook to a spoon and trailing it bucktail like. Or using it in conjunction with any type of spinner or wobbler.

For still-fishing Wes recommends the use of a solid, plano wire leader, bent into an "L" shape. With this rig and a 10-foot line the minnow will struggle in a wide circle.

In fishing a heavy flowing stream a large sinker should be used on the end of the line, with the sock and bait attached at the desired distance
from the bottom.

Another point Wes emphasized is to select a sock to suit the size of the minnow. Also while inserting the minnow into the sock, keep it upright and push the sock open with thumb and fingers—not with the bait.
