Kidnap threat made against DEA official

WASHINGTON (AP) — Colombian narcotics smugglers are believed to have offered as much as $350,000 for the kidnapping of Drug Enforcement Administration chief Francis M. Mullen or another senior DEA official, an agency spokesman said.

"This threat is being taken very seriously," DEA spokesman Robert Feldkamp said Sunday.

Feldkamp said concern over the top-level kidnap threat — as well as intensive efforts to hunt for a DEA agent abducted in Guadalajara, Mexico — has led DEA to request stepped-up border searches of vehicles crossing into this country from Mexico.

Motorists waited for as long as two hours Sunday at the busiest crossing point, between Tijuana and San Diego, as Customs Service officers searched more than half the vehicles entering the United States. Delays had ranged up to nine hours Friday night at the same border crossing.

"We want to send a message to drug smugglers that the U.S. government is not going to crumble under their threats," said Mike Fleming, a Customs spokesman in San Diego.

In Mexico, U.S. drug agents and Mexican authorities have been searching for DEA agent Enrique Salazar Camarena, missing since Feb. 7 when four suspected drug traffickers were seen forcing him into a car in Guadalajara.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters Sunday that "we have been in close and frequent touch (with Mexican officials) both at the working levels and at the highest levels" in dealing with the abduction.

Speakes said these contacts have involved Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid, but he declined to provide further details.

Feldkamp, the DEA spokesman, was asked about a report in Newsweek magazine that quoted intelligence sources as saying Colombian "drug lords" were seeking to have Mullen kidnapped and then exchanged for six accused Colombian drug traffickers in custody in the United States and Spain.

"Based on intelligence that DEA has received coming out of Colombia, we have reason to believe that the traffickers have put a price tag possibly as high as $350,000 on the head of the DEA administrator or another high DEA official," Feldkamp said.

Jury expected to begin deliberation in arson case

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

Jurors are to decide today whether Ector County Commissioner Willie Hammond or former City Councilman Keith Weddel are guilty of criminal involvement in the alleged Nov. 1981 arson of the O'Michael Building in Odessa.

As his attorney Warren Burnett noted in opening statements last Monday, Hammond, 44, could lose his "livelihood" in political office if convicted of conspiring to have the building burned and aiding in setting it afire on Nov. 25, 1981.

If convicted of those two charges and two counts of perjury alleged in the federal indictment, Hammond faces a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison and a $40,000 fine.

A final conviction, regardless of whether he received probation or jail time, could signal the end of his career as county commissioner. Burnett is expected to appeal any conviction.

Weddel, 53, faces a maximum sentence of 15 years in prison and a $20,000 fine if convicted of conspiring and aiding in having the building set afire. His attorney, Travis Shelton of Lubbock, will likely appeal any guilty verdict and sentence rendered in the Midland federal court.

Judge Lucius Bunton has set aside two hours for federal prosecutors to sum up their case. Prosecutors Ellen Byers and Thomas McHugh presented evidence and brought about 20 witnesses to the stand in their case — which stretched from Monday afternoon to late Friday afternoon.

Bunton allotted one hour each for Burnett and Shelton to sum up their cases for the jury — which lasted part of Friday and most of Saturday.

The judge said Saturday he expected the 12 jurors to begin their deliberations about 1:30 p.m. today.

The jurors will be deciding how much of the conflicting testimony to believe.

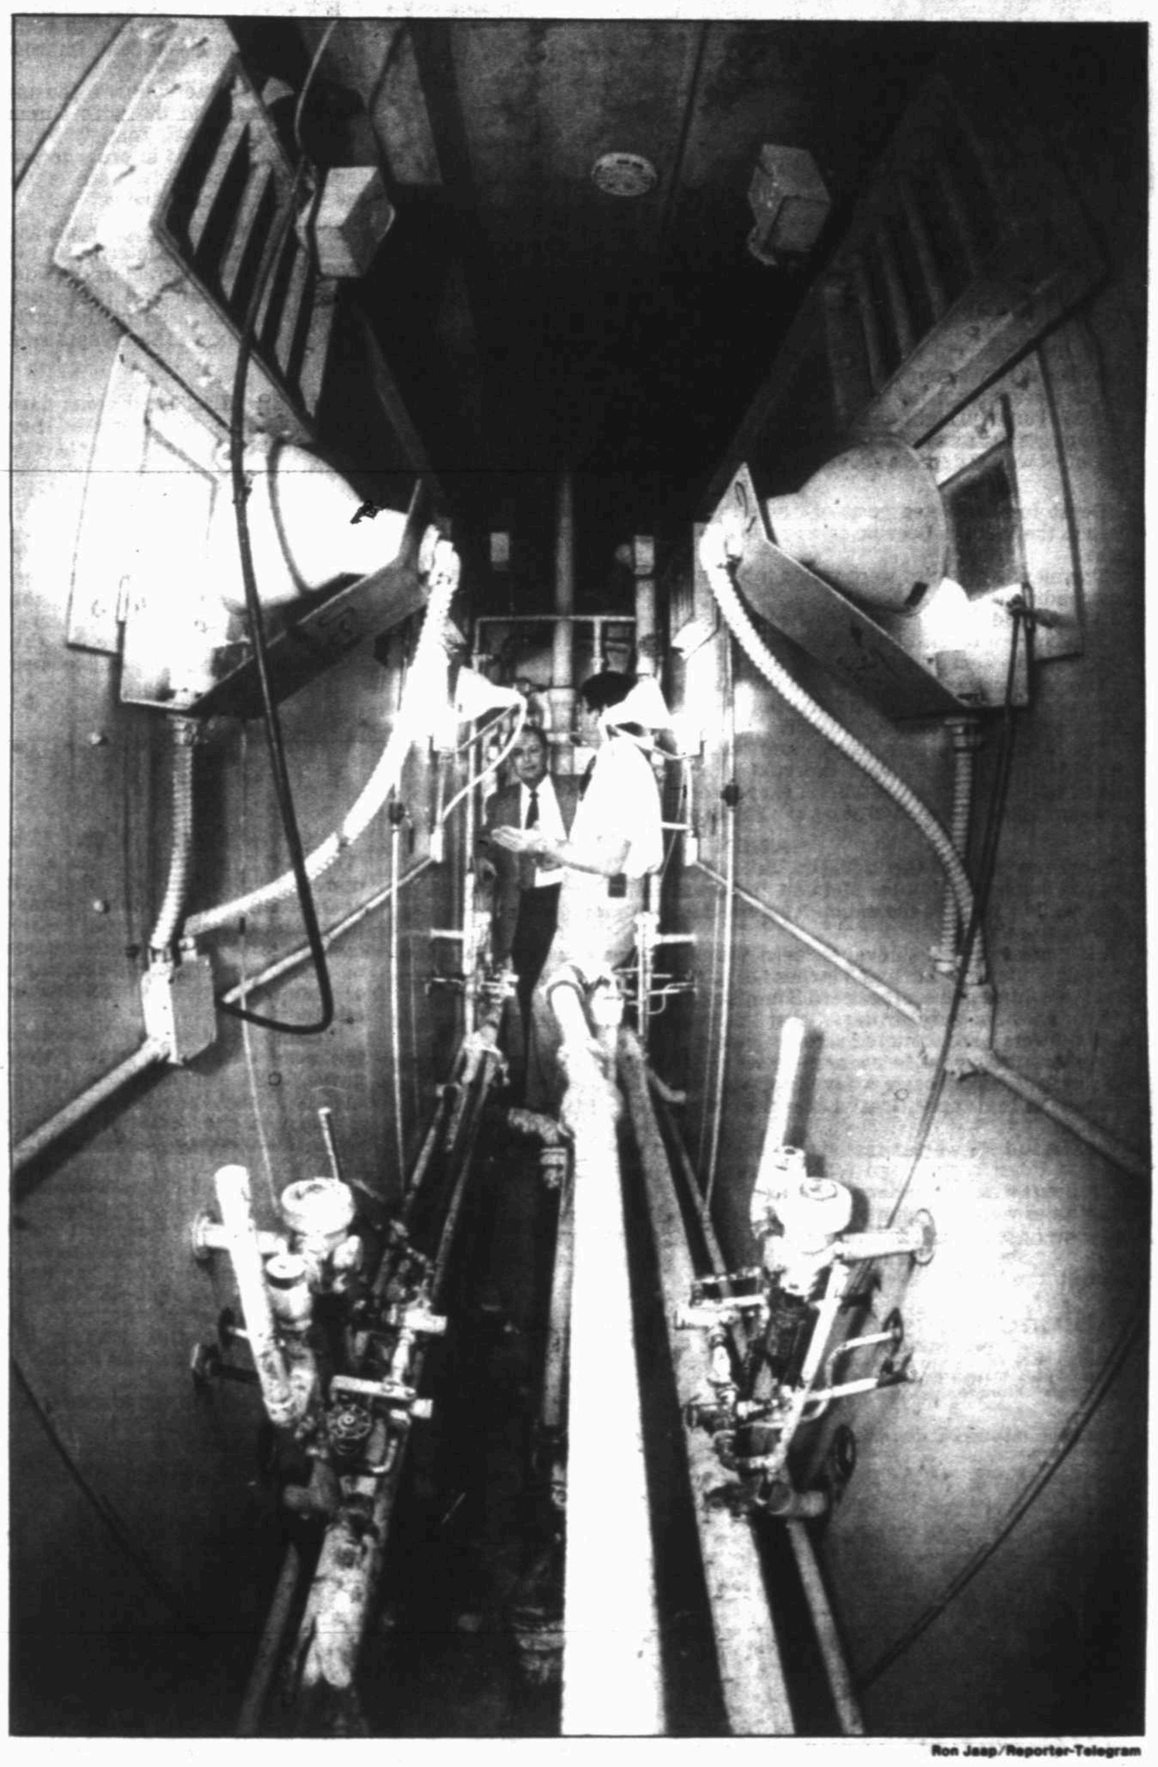

Federal witnesses, including two key people who admitted being in federal custody, have linked Hammond and Weddel to the alleged arson. But defense witnesses have recalled different circumstances, particularly in regard to the cause of the fire.

Testimony of a state fire marshal and Odessa inspector was that the fire was set deliberately using a flammable liquid. But three captains with the fire department insisted the fire was not as severe as was described by the inspectors. They also said the fire was accidentally caused by an electrical short in the buiding's wiring, rather than arson.

Bunton intended to finish the trial Friday, but problems developed on Tuesday that prompted him to keep the jury from hearing much testimony. Throughout the trial, the defense has discovered statements and other federal documents it was to have been provided with before the trial, which the government's attorneys had not released.

Bunton recessed for most of Tuesday to give the defense time to review some of those documents, including 30 pages of grand jury testimony from John Thomas Peterson.

Group gearing up for parade

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

They're putting the buffalo in front of the parade.

Close behind will be a five-mile string of Midland history, from stagecoaches to motorcycles, announced the Midland Centennial Commission as it gears up for the "parade of the century." The group is currently looking for float participants, manpower and financial help.

"We're recruiting different companies and organizations to help out," said Hank Henry, parade chairman. "It's kind of early, but we want to give them time to think about ideas."

The parade will be held July 4 as part of the Midland Centennial Celebration scheduled events.

"The main thrust of the parade will be a chronological depiction of the history of Midland," said Henry.

"The historical part will be at the beginning of the parade," said Robin Jackson, executive director of Midland Centennial. "The marching bands, Shriners on motorcycles — the normal things you see in a parade will be at the end."

The parade as planned will begin after opening ceremonies of the Centennial celebration.

"The Jaycees will dedicate the Centennial Plaza and then the parade will start," said Ms. Jackson. "After the parade, there will be a fried chicken dinner (at a charge) and entertainment at the Plaza, which is open to the public."

Other opening ceremonies include the arrival of stagecoaches, a raising of the flag at the courthouse with the national anthem and a three-gun salute with muzzle and loaded gun.

A small herd of buffalo will head the parade followed by Indians and Spaniards in period costumes, buffalo hunter and buffalo hide wagon and a float with Spanish musicians and dancers.

In addition to the buffalo, various other animal life will march through Midland streets including longhorn cattle, sheep and Hereford cattle.

Several national, state and local historical events such as The Alamo, the War of Ribbons, the surveyors' formation of Midland County and Betsy Ross designing the American flag, will be featured, as well.

The parade will be the longest one planned in Midland's history.

"It will have to start and end in one place," said Ms. Jackson. "With buffalo you can't end in some place miles from where the trucks or vans that brought them are parked."

The parade committee hopes to form a parade about four to five miles long and circle around the courthouse at some point in the parade.

Brown: Jail design inefficient

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a six-part series on the Midland County Jail issue. This article deals with jail problems that are not necessarily obvious, but could turn out to be quite serious.

JAIL ISSUE
Part Two

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Midland County Jail is neither a monster nor a pussycat.

But by some measures, it has deteriorated alarmingly. By other standards, it was so well built and planned in the early 1970s that it was deemed as one of Texas' finest jails and is still functional.

Now, more than 11 years after it was christened as the fifth floor of the 1929-30 vintage down courthouse, it's in limbo. Critics say the jail needs to be overhauled or scrapped and replaced by a safe and secure but "bare-necessity" jail capable of serving the community well into the 21st Century.

But its administration has not been assaulted.

"It's probably one of the best-run jails in the state," said Mark H. Dettman, Midland County attorney. Dettman advises the Commissioners' Court on legal matters and defends — so far successfully — the county, sheriff and commissioners in federal civil-rights cases filed by inmates. "It has a professional operation as far as I'm personally concerned."

Sheriff Gary Painter's man in charge of the jail is Capt. G.W. Thompson of the Special Services Division. Lt. Richard Sexton is jail administrator, and Lt. Bennie Cureton is in charge of the jail's day-to-day operation. The complex is manned by 17 jailers who work in four overlapping 10-hour shifts.

"FOR ITS TIME, it was top-notch," Dettman said. "It lacks a lot of things," such as total electronic locking, adequate lighting and sunlight, a prescribed exercise area, and sight-and-sound separation of men and women inmates.

MIDLAND CENTENNIAL 1885-1985

Mrs. Bush will be guest at luncheon

From Staff Reports

Barbara Bush, wife of vice president George Bush, will serve as special guest during a luncheon to benefit the "Midland Need To Read" council Feb. 28 at Midland Center, it was announced today during a scheduled press conference.

Mrs. Bush, a long-time advocate of nationwide adult literacy programs, will appear between 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m., according to Jim Henry, board member and chairman of the council's fund-raising committee.

Henry asked that persons attending the box luncheon donate $10 to the citywide effort. Proceeds will go to support the program, initiated to provide tutorial services to functionally illiterate adults.

"The community does not offer literacy to adults. That's something we in Midland want to stress."
— Jim Henry, 'Need to Read' council

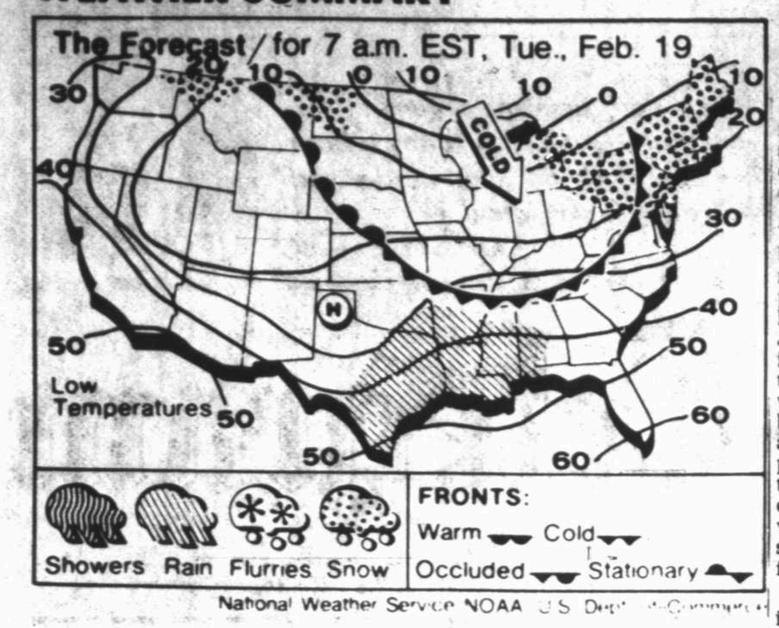

"The community does not offer literacy to adults. That's something we in Midland want to stress," he said. "Mrs. Bush has been a long-time supporter of such programs. That's why we're so excited to have her here."

Janice Langdale, literacy council coordinator, reported an estimated 14.3 percent of Midland's adult population has not completed eight years of education. The statistics, based on 1980 census figures, is below the nationwide average of one out of five adults who are functionally illiterate, she said.

"Midland Need To Read" currently offers tutorial services to 11 adult students over the age of 25. Funding to initiate the program was provided through a $20,000 grant from the Texas Education Agency.

An estimated 1,400 luncheon invitations were mailed last week to various individuals, business leaders and organizations associated with the program. Several hundred other invitations are available by contacting Geoff Barnett, Wilcox Building, Suite 208; or the Occupational Tech Building at Midland College.

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts snow for Tuesday for the Great Lakes and Northeast and rain from Texas to the central Gulf States.

Cooler temperatures, cloudy skies expected in Midland

From Staff and Wire Reports

Cloudy skies will accompany cooler temperatures in the Midland area Tuesday as forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport are calling for lows in the mid-30s tonight, warming to only the mid-50s Tuesday. Light and variable winds will continue through Tuesday.

Sunday's high was 18 degrees below the 1977 record of 82. This morning's low of 44 was 32 degrees above the record low of 12 set in 1942.

STATE

Dense fog blanketed parts of Texas this morning, dropping visibility to zero in the Victoria-Beeville area and to about 100 yards in the Wichita Falls area.

Travelers' advisories were issued in the areas because of hazardous driving conditions.

A low cloud cover was reported over the western two-thirds of the state.

Winds were from the south and southeast across most of the state, with winds speeds generally at 5 to 15 mph.

Temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s this morning, except in the 30s over the Panhandle and the northern South Plains. Early morning extremes ranged from 35 at Amarillo to 62 at Brownsville.

The National Weather Service said occasional drizzle would occur today in Central Texas. Highs were expected to range from near 50 in the Panhandle to the 50s and 60s elsewhere, excpet for readings in the 70s in the Rio Grande Valley and near 80 along the Big Bend.

NATION

Snow moved into the Missouri Valley today and frigid temperatures gripped much of the upper Midwest, the Great Plains and the Rocky Mountains, while a band of the nation from the South to southern California had mild weather.

A low pressure system over western Minnesota sent snow into the middle Missouri Valley. As much as 3 inches fell in less than three hours over parts of south central and southeastern South Dakota.

Snow showers were scattered over the lower Great Lakes and rain and snow showers were scattered across Missouri.

Temperatures were below zero in sections of northern lower Michigan and upper Michigan early today. Readings in the single digits to teens were reported in the upper Great Lakes region, northern Plains and northern Rockies.

The 50s and 60s were common over central and southern Florida, most of the Gulf Coast region, and from eastern and southern Texas across the desert Southwest to southern California.

Fair skies were common over the Atlantic and Gulf Coast states, most of the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and central Pacific Coast.

JAIL

"It's a good jail up there" despite its "technical difficulties," Dettman said. "I guess the best way to describe the jail right now is adequate, minimally adequate."

However, County Commissioner Win Brown, who said the jail is becoming "a pile of junk," said any repairs of the jail would be a "temporary stop-gap measure." He speculated that the Texas Commission on Jail Standards would close the jail if the $9.9 million jail election, tentatively planned for May, fails to meet voter approval. An $11.69 million bond issue to expand the courthouse and build a jail was defeated at the polls two years ago. Brown said there's "no way" the current jail could be brought up to standards without a major overhaul, which, he said, would be impractical and ineffective.

"The design of the jail is most inefficient," he said, and trying to repair or renovate the jail ultimately would be wasted efforts. "All you'll do is patchwork; you can't improve the efficiency."

Bill Harral, the county's consulting engineer, said the jail's plumbing is in "such bad shape" that it should be "replaced in order to protect the health and welfare of the jail personnel and inmates."

Cost of overhauling or replacing the plumbing has been estimated at $500,000 by two contractors, he said. The jail was built and the courthouse was renovated in the early 1970s by way of a $1.95 million bond issue.

"SEWER LINES and vents have deteriorated to the point that they leak constantly, and sewer gas is constantly present in the plumbing chases," Harral said in a report. He was joined by master plumbers R.V. Culp and Ronnie McDonald, who is the county's inspector, former Jail Capt. Bill Decker and the Reporter-Telegram in recently inspecting the jail's mechanical systems. Harral said daily maintenance of the plumbing is "almost impossible" due to the design and installation of the plumbing system.

"...The system has deteriorated to the point that total replacement will be necessary in order to meet the state plumbing and health codes."

Jack Crump, planner for the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, noted that the jail's plumbing system has passed the Jail Commission's inspections. However, he said Supervising Inspector Joe Slater has been checking the functions of the water-sewer system and not scrutinizing the mechanics. So far, he has checked to see if the toilets flush, if the drains are open and if the lavatory water runs freely.

In addition, Crump said the jail's smoke-purging system apparently has not been found in non-compliance with Jail Commission regulations.

But Painter said the smoke- and fume-purging system "has been tested and found to be inadequate" by the inspector.

"It's not completely satisfactory," he said. "It does work, but it's not completely satisfactory." However, neither the plumbing nor the smoke-purging equipment was cited as deficient by Slater in his 1984 report on the Midland County Jail.

THE JAIL HAS five roof-top exhaust fans to remove fumes and smoke, the No. 1 killer in most fires, in the event of fire. The jail also is equipped with smoke detectors.

"The potential for fire up there is almost zero," noted Dettman, "but it's still a potential problem." Smoking in the jail is prohibited.

Among other flaws in the jail's plumbing are the main water connections. The jail's domestic and fire-water lines were connected together when the jail was built in the early 1970s.

"In the event of fire, it is questionable that adequate pressure would be maintained at the fire stands to effectively put out a large blaze," Harral noted.

"If you put a (fire-engine) pumper in there," said Culp, "you're going to blow your commodes off the walls."

Compounding that, said Harral, a registered civil engineer, is the possible contamination of the domestic — drinking — water by stagnated water in the fire-water lines.

"The water probably could also affect the health and welfare of the courthouse personnel and the jail inmates."

Culp, who ferreted out plans of the jail's mechanical system, said the county commissioners had "approved it (fire and domestic water) to be mixed together that way." He faulted the hook-up.

"It (plumbing system) needs to be replaced if they keep the jail up here," Culp said. "It's going to have to be." He recommended getting a sledge hammer "and knocking everything out."

Decker said repairs on the jail's mechanic system have been common.

"WE'VE BEEN FIXING stuff as soon as it breaks," Decker said, "but we can't get it fixed fast enough until something else breaks."

Flush valves on the commodes will not operate correctly because of the lack of sufficient water pressure.

"The problem has been prevalent ever since the jail was added," Harral said.

Instead of being independent from the rest of the courthouse, the jail's sewer lines were connected to the sewer lines in the existing courthouse. As a result, commodes and lavatories on the courthouse's first floor overflow at times of peak usage, Harral said.

In addition, the jail's roof-top heating and air-conditioning systems, which are independent from the rest of the courthouse, need to be replaced, Harral said. In need of replacement, too, is the roof. Cost of a new roof would be about $80,000, and cost of replacing the heating and cooling units would be about $75,000.

The commissioners had authorized patching of the roof but opted not to replace the roof or the jail's heating and air-conditioning systems and decided not to authorize major repairs or expansion of the jail because of the once-pending construction of a new jail.

The jail's roof has leaked from the outset, and noted Sexton, water occasionally drips from the jail into the 238th State District Courtroom on the courthouse's fourth floor.

FURTHER, Harral said the construction of a roof-top exercise area would have to be on stilts to clear the mechanical equipment, including emergency smoke-purging exhaust fans, the emergency power generator and the heating and cooling units. Such a raised and anchored exercise platform six stories high "does not lend itself to an economical solution."

He speculated that even if the jail's cell space were expanded, as suggested by Midland businessman Bill Williams and the Committee of Concerned Voters, from a 101-bunk jail to a 129-bunk jail, the space would be inadequate within five or six years.

The jail's 101 bunks are in five tanks and 28 single cells:

— 17 bunks in each of 17 special-purposed single cells.
— 11 bunks in 11 single cells.
— 24 bunks in four cells.
— 15 bunks in three cells.
— 22 bunks in 11 cells.
— 12 bunks in a dormitory-type cell.

Instead of trying to upgrade the existing jail, Brown recommended "proper long-range planning," which to his notion would include construction of a new jail designed to meet or exceed state jail standards. "We (commissioners) have done in-depth studies" on the jail situation and have "spent untold weeks delving and digging into the problem." The solution is not a "baling-wire proposition" but a new jail, he said.

"What we are trying to do is solve our own problems before the federal government comes in...They have never been as efficient as local governments."

Tuesday: Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter reviews state-deemed flaws in the jail. In another story, County Attorney Mark H. Dettman traces the evolution of prisoners' rights.

Westmoreland drops suit against CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — Retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland has abandoned his $120 million libel suit against CBS over a documentary that accused the Vietnam commander of suppressing information on enemy troop strength, aborting a 4½-month-old trial, a CBS lawyer said today.

Westmoreland agreed "to dismiss the case without cost to either party," CBS attorney David Boies told Associated Press Radio.

"Each of the individual defendants was involved, yesterday (Sunday), when this (agreement) happened," Boies said today. "I think it's fair to say they're all very pleased."

The decision came just days before the conclusion of testimony.

Asked if the network has been vindicated, Boies replied: "Oh certainly, oh certainly."

However, he refused to say the decision to drop the suit was a victory for CBS.

"I don't want to try to characterize it one way or the other. I think the event speaks for itself," Boies said. "I think perhaps General Westmoreland's counsel wants to characterize it, but I think, given the fact that the case has been dismissed, it's really not up to me to try to characterize that as a victory."

"CBS has been saying from the begining that this was a controversy that really didn't belong in a court, that really ought to be in a debate among historians and...journalists and is not something that could really be susceptible as being resolved by a judicial case," he added.

Earlier, a source close to the network, speaking on condition he not be identified, had said the one-paragraph agreement signed Sunday evening stipulated that the case would be irrevocably dismissed and that CBS would make no apology or payment to Westmoreland. The network agreed not to try to force him to pay its court costs and legal fees, the source said.

Westmoreland, 70, filed his libel suit in 1982 after CBS broadcast a documentary that accused him of suppressing information which would have warned U.S. leaders in 1967 that the Vietnamese communist force was much larger than had been reported.

The documentary, "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception," said Westmoreland insisted that intelligence reports showed no more than 300,000 communist troops despite indications the number was in excess of 500,000.

Westmoreland feared that higher figures would undermine political support for the war, the broadcast said.

Westmoreland maintained that no information was suppressed and that CBS distorted an honest disagreement among intelligence analysts to make it appear he had deliberately misled his superiors.

Telephone calls to Dan M. Burt, Westmoreland's chief attorney, were not answered. CBS spokeswoman Iris Raylesberg said the network would make no comment before a news conference later today.

Westmoreland's case was badly battered during the past two weeks when two of his former top aides in Vietnam testified in favor of CBS.

Retired Maj. Gen. Joseph A. McChristian, who had been Westmoreland's chief intelligence officer from 1965 to mid-1967, said Westmoreland stopped him from sending an unfavorable enemy strength estimate to Washington on grounds that the figures would have been a "political bombshell."

Then retired Col. Gains Hawkins, who had been chief of Westmoreland's order of battle staff in Saigon, testified that Westmoreland established a "command position...not to exceed 300,000 total, bottom-line enemy strength," despite evidence to the contrary. The order of battle is the military's official estimate of enemy strength.

The Washington Post, quoting unidentified sources, reported today that "some of Westmoreland's friends, attorneys and financial backers suggested that he drop the case" after Hawkins' first day of testimony.

Burt had raised $2.5 million for the case but has so far spent more than $3 million.

Efforts to be made to segregate materials

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

An attempt at a cooperative effort with small-chain and privately-owned grocery stores to segregate questionable magazines and movies was announced this morning by respresentatives of Midlanders for Decency and the Midland County District Attorney's Office.

A petition containing 1,175 signatures from citizens concerned with the availability of materials not deemed "hard core" but "heavy R-rated" was presented today to District Attorney Al Schorre.

"What we'd like is to not have them at all," said Dem Merren, an independent geologist and head of Midlanders for Decency. "But I think that's going to be pretty much up to the district attorney."

According to Merren, Midlanders for Decency was formed last year when "the (adult) magazines were all over town. They were too easily accessible. They were increasing in numbers and they were getting worse and worse."

"We had voluntary compliance from 7-Eleven and Stop 'N Go and a lot of the larger chains and they've taken the adult magazines and segregated them under the counter so they were not available to minors," Schorre said. "We're attempting to get the voluntary compliance from retailers to do that in smaller chains and in the neighborhood grocery stores."

But the effort is being expanded to include questionable video cassettes that are rented in small- and large-chain stores and are openly displayed, according to Midlanders for Decency representatives Daniel Vestal, pastor of First Baptist Church; Raymond Schaeffer, pastor of First Assembly of God; and Dick Spencer, pastor of Midland Christian Fellowship.

"We want to at least get them where they are not generally displayed," Schorre said. "We feel that, with last year's raid (on two video rental stores), we've eliminated all the hard-core pornography films from the community. But there are still some heavy R-rated ones that are being rented and displayed next to 'Bambi' films."

Schorre said "provocative" slipcovers have prompted the concern.

The district attorney's office plans to extend invitations to local retailers within a month for a meeting on the subject.

"We hope to reach an agreement with some sort of voluntary compliance," he said. "I think most of the retailers are good people and that this situation has kind of crept into their stores. Most are not aware of the content of their materials."

By asking for a cooperative effort in in-house monitoring of materials which arrive in bulk from national distributors and segregating those deemed "adult", Schorre said he felt the action would have better results.

"But that's not to say if we don't find some hard core pornography, we wouldn't go ahead and conduct the 'raids.' "

Schorre said the films and magazines in question are not considered hard-core. "I doubt if you're ever going to get a jury, even in Midland County, to find some of these materials pornographic." But the upcoming trial of two video parlors which were raided Sept. 13, should set some standards for pornography in Midland. "I don't think there is any doubt about their content," he said. "They were fairly explicit."

The attempt to segregate less offensive material was two-fold, Schorre said:

"First, to protect minors. Second, to not expose people to it who would find it objectionable.

"I don't think anybody should be exposed to it in a public grocery store or supermarket," Schorre said. "Especially when they're in there to pick up a can of soup."

JURY

Peterson, 45, took the stand Monday, remained under questioning part of Wednesday and returned to the stand Thursday for a few questions. He told jurors he and Hammond had set up the arson.

He recalled one meeting at an Odessa cafe with Hammond and Weddel, during which Weddel suggested he wanted to collect the insurance claim on the building after it burned. Weddel testified no such meeting ever occurred, while Hammond did not take the stand during the trial.

The testimony of Peterson and the two men who said they set the fire varied in many places. His brother, Lawrence Earl "Cotton" Peterson, and L.C. Burditt of Midland told jurors they set the fire after being contacted by John Peterson to do the job.

Prosecutors have contended Weddel bought the property with former Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant and attorney Ray Stoker Jr. in July 1980 in speculation a proposed civic center would be built on the site and the owners would sell the property to the city at a profit.

When a bond issue to finance construction failed in December 1980, Weddel, Hammond "along with other persons whom (they) recruited and hired," conspired to have the building burned, according to the government indictment.

Hammond, who owned no interest in the building, aided in the conspiracy and acted as go-between in return for a payment, according to the federal case.

He described as "just speculative" the reported link with plans to trade the prospective kidnap victim in return for release of the six traffickers.

Asked what type of security steps DEA was taking in response to the threat against senior agency officials, Feldkamp said, "We had already taken extra precautionary measures when the first threats began coming out in early January, and we have done some other things that I cannot characterize."

PARADE

The committee has put out a list of themes for companies or individual considering entering the parade.

Other float ideas are those depicting an antelope hide wagon, U.S. Army, covered wagons, foundation of courts — 1885, first election, first Commissioner's Court, cowboy carnival, water (barrel) team, first water well, pioneer women, early-day churches, early-day schools, Legal Tender Saloon, first businesses, lumber yards, coal, blacksmith shops and the oil industry.

Also mentioned were old farm equipment, old cars, law offices, old outhouses, chuck wagons, banking, newspapers, opera house, Yucca Theater, Scharbauer Hotel, Hogan Building, the Depression, oil boom and bust, Hereford cattle, electronics and modern Midland.

"We encourage groups to come up with their own ideas for entries, subject to the approval of the committee," said Ms. Jackson.

Groups wanting to help fund or to represent one of the key eras or events mentioned in Midland's history may contact Henry at 561-6576, Ms. Jackson at 686-1985 or Dorothy Strickland at 686-5340.

Jury selection begins in alien-transport trial

HOUSTON (AP) — Jury selection began today in federal court in the trial of two sanctuary movement workers accused of illegally transporting two Salvadoran aliens.

Court officials summoned 90 people for possible duty in the case.

Jack Elder, 41, and Stacey Lynn Merkt, 30, are charged with conspiring to smuggle, smuggling and transporting two Salvadorans last November.

Elder is the director of Casa Oscar Romero, a Catholic Church-sponsored shelter for Central Americans in San Benito. Ms. Merkt is a volunteer at the shelter.

"We're counting on an acquittal, for sure," Elder's wife, Diane, said Saturday.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela of Brownsville, who granted a change of venue request, will preside.

The trial was moved from Brownsville earlier this month after Vela ruled that an impartial jury could not be seated in the border city. Vela had denied numerous other defense motions to have the case dismissed, but did grant the change of venue motion.

The judge's gag order prevents Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Guerra, defense attorneys Steve Cooper and Lisa Brodyaga and the defendants from talking about the case in public.

Last month in Corpus Christi, Elder was acquitted on charges of transporting three Salvadorans in March 1984. The jury agreed with defense contentions that Elder did not further the Salvadorans' movement into the United States by merely giving them a ride to the bus station.

Ms. Merkt is on two years' probation on a similar conviction last May in Vela's court. The judge warned her to refrain from aiding the Salvadorans and told her if she ever came up before him again, he would jail her.

Defense attorneys argued that the publicity surrounding the other trials would make it impossible to find an impartial jury.

Mrs. Elder said there is a large Salvadoran community in Houston and expects support for the sanctuary movement, whose leaders say the Salvadorans are political, not economic, refugees.

Most Mexicans who fled rally will be deported

EAGLE PASS (AP) — Immigration authorities today began preparing to deport dozens of Mexicans who fled across the border into Eagle Pass following a violence-laced political rally, but officials said they expected some to apply for political asylum.

David Carmichael, Border Patrol agent in charge in Eagle Pass, said he expected most of the 59 Mexicans who spent the night on cots at a city facility two blocks from the International Bridge to return.

"I think the majority will go back," Carmichael said today after 15 armed Border Patrol officers loaded the aliens into five vans for the short trip to the Port of Entry.

Over 100 Mexicans fled across the border Sunday when gunshots left up to four people injured during a political rally, Carmichael said. All but 59 had returned home by late Sunday, he said.

Some of those remaining said they would resist efforts to force them back across the border.

"We won't return. We'll demand political asylum," said Jose Gabriel Espinoza.

Carmichael said the Mexicans would be allowed to ask for asylum during processing at the Port of Entry today. Otherwise, the aliens were free to leave for Mexico at any time, he said.

Mexican state police reported three people were wounded in the violence Sunday across the border in Piedras Negras, while Mexican municipal police reported four injuries.

The mad dash across the Rio Grande occurred after police rushed a crowd blocking the bridge, Espinoza said. He said the incident occurred during a peaceful rally by about 3,000 people to protest the state's failure to settle a dispute over the Dec. 2 city elections in Piedras Negras.

Espinoza and other dissidents are supporters of the opposition National Action Party that contends Institutional Revolutionary Party "stole" the election from them. The PRI, as it is known by its Spanish initials, dominates Mexican politics.

Piedras Negras was the scene of political violence Dec. 29 that left one man dead, at least 80 injured and the municipal complex burned. That violence also was in protest against the disputed Dec. 2 election.

Edward Leija, a U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service inspector, said at least one woman was shot when a gunman began firing.

"All we know is that somebody fired shots and that people hit the ground or started running," said Leija.

Felipe Perez, the local judicial police commander, blamed the shots on one of the National Action supporters, but Espinoza said none of the demonstrators had weapons.

Espinoza said 101 Mexicans ran across the bridge into Eagle Pass, but that 42 returned to Piedras Negras after members of their families came to get them.

West Texas town has laid-back lifestyle

GAIL (AP) — There aren't any fast-food restaurants in this West Texas hamlet. In fact, the few residents do without a lot of things that most people take for granted.

With 189 people, Gail is not only the largest town, but the only town, in Borden County, which the 1980 Census showed to have a population of 859.

In exchange for laid-back living, citizens have come to live with the fact that they must travel at least 35 miles to buy groceries or other necessities.

"We're one of the few, if not the only, county in the entire state that doesn't have a gas station," County Judge Van York said.

"We had one a while back, and there's rumor that we're going to have a new filling station, but right now we don't have one," York said.

According to a recent five-year study by the Census Bureau of wholesale and retail sales in the Texas, Borden County ranked as the lowest of the surveyed 252 Texas counties in retail sales with an average of only $136,000 a year.

In addition to trips for groceries or gasoline, residents of Gail also must travel to the borders of the 900-square-mile county to see a doctor, dentist, or even a lawyer.

"If you need to get groceries or see a doctor, and you live on the east side of town, you go to Snyder; if you live on the south side, you go to Big Spring; if you live north, you go to Post; and if you live west, you go to Lamesa," York said. "They're all an equal distance from here."

Likewise, other everyday conveniences taken for granted in the city are an everyday problem in Borden County, named after dairy production millionaire Gail Borden.

The county has five different phone exchanges, four different electric companies, and water has to be piped in from adjacent Dawson County.

"I guess that's one of the things that has curtailed our development," York said. "We're sitting above an ocean of salt water (the Santa Rosa aquifer), but there's no fresh water down there."

Fewer than a dozen businesses dealing in wholesale and retail sales can be found in the county, and most of those are dirt construction companies whose prosperity is contingent on the success of the county's major industries — oil production.

However, the county's development — or lack of it — has led to a way of life that could almost be considered a paradise to some, York is quick to point out.

Cuts undermine foundation of housing program

DALLAS (AP) — The nation's government-assisted housing system is facing deep budget cuts that could shake the structure to its foundation, The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

"Clearly, 1985 is the year when all of us, all the departments and agencies of government and all the American people, must make small sacrifices for the national good," HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. said earlier this month.

But former HUD executives and local directors of public housing authorities say the proposed cuts by the Reagan administration would threaten the very existence of the system of government-subsidized housing, The News reported as part of its 14-month investigation into federally supported housing programs.

"The fact is that this administration is ideologically opposed to these programs and is using the deficit issue as an excuse to terminate or cripple them," said Robert W. Maffin, executive director of the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials.

President Reagan has proposed cutting 47 percent from the budget of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, the agency that funds and oversees more than 90 percent of the federally subsidized housing, The News reported.

For the 1986 fiscal year, the administration proposes a two-year moratorium on construction of apartments and on issuance of additional rent-subsidy vouchers that allow low-income people to use government assistance in the private rental market.

The administration also would cut operating subsidies to housing authorities 10 percent, reduce special assistance to "troubled" projects 40 percent and eliminate 90 percent of HUD funds for renovating older projects.

The National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials, which represents about 2,200 of the nation's local housing and community development agencies, estimates an immediate need for 100,000 new government-assisted apartments.

Although 3.7 million households live in federally subsidized apartments, more than 80 percent of those eligible for assistance are not served, according to an unpublished 1984 HUD study. The study also found that "at the very lowest incomes...the programs accomplish almost nothing. 94 percent remain unserved."

The proposed budget cuts would fall most heavily on large, deteriorating projects, which are occupied overwhelmingly by minorities, while other budget cuts would curtail housing opportunities for low-income families outside the projects, said William Ratzlaff, president of the association of housing and redevelopment officials.

"What we are going to have is public slums," he said. "I'm not talking about the troubled housing authorities that HUD's always talking about. I'm talking about good housing authorities."

Pierce said the housing programs "are to be returned to full strength once the immediate fiscal emergency is past...HUD is not getting out of the housing business."

Since Reagan took office, annual appropriations for federally subsidized housing have shrunk from more than $30 billion to about $10 billon. If Reagan's 1986 budget is enacted, spending on federally subsidized apartments will drop below $500 million — less than 2 percent of the level when he took office, The News reported.

Cushing Dolbeare, former president of the National Low Income Housing Coalition, said the federal government loses four times as much annually on "indirect" housing expenses — primarily tax exemptions for mortgage interest — as it spends on low-income housing programs.

But Pierce said he believes "that the balance the president has proposed between housing and urban development expenditures and other proposed expenditures is fair and appropriate."

Patricia Robert Harris, HUD secretary in the Carter administration, said spending so little in the face of current needs "is a disaster."

"It is coldblooded; it is hardhearted," she said. "But apparently the American people don't mind."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, February 19, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You have new appreciation for the medical profession when someone's health improves. Find out what is lacking in an important relationship and work to set things right. A positive attitude brings new alliances in business and romance. You get a second chance at domestic happiness. Profits rise when you delegate the routine chores to others and concentrate on creative projects. Save money for investment purposes. Hanging on to a special piece of property could be a very shrewd move. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Actor Lee Marvin, singer Smokey Robinson, Britain's Prince Andrew, Keith Atherton of the Oakland A's, Texas Rangers pitcher Dave Stewart.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A secret project is aided and abetted by someone who works behind the scenes. Good timing is the key to greater success in business and romance. Strike while the iron is hot!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Adopting new business methods saves you both time and money. Guard your health by setting aside more time for rest and relaxation. Romance founders. You could decide to jump ship!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be very cautious when signing important documents. Long-distance phone calls save you time and travel expenses. Suggest alternatives to someone who feels trapped.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A younger person seeks your advice. Withhold your answer until you have more information. An emotional upset fades following a candid chat. Forget past grievances and build for the future.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your finances show improvement thanks to a last-minute loan. Keep your emotions in check when dealing with business associates. Emotional outbursts are considered very unprofessional.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A good day for dealing with credit matters. You and an attractive member of the opposite sex enjoy true intellectual rapport. Buy property for investment purposes. Your foresight brings rich rewards.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Family obligations get the lion's share of your attention now. Work done on a small scale goes better than larger projects. Pay more attention to joint real estate holdings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Domestic chores and routine work go according to schedule. Do-it-yourself types can save lots of money. Read all instructions and safety warnings. Loved one is more affectionate than usual.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cultivate the contacts you meet through old friends. You may decide to seek professional advice on conducting a job search. A change in an important relationship keeps you guessing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your personal affairs continue to dominate your thoughts. Get on the ball! There is important work to be done. Postpone making travel plans until more facts and figures are available.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good news arrives from clients overseas. Profits soar! A personal relationship is sensitive now and requires careful nurturing. Go ahead and make the first move. Greater rapport is possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Indecision could slow you down early this morning. Do not despair. An unexpected phone call or letter helps you make up your mind. You hear from someone you long to see.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠7 ♡J652 ◇AQ9 ♣AJ752
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—We are going to break a cardinal rule. We do not like rebidding one no trump when we have a singleton in partner's suit, but all other options are even less attractive. We reject two clubs because of the poor quality of the suit, and two hearts would be a reverse, showing a far stronger hand.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ65 ♡KJ1072 ◇AK93 ♣AK93

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ◇	Dble	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Another difficult hand. We abhor passing partner's low-level double when we do not have a card in the enemy suit to lead through declarer, but what are our choices? Partner should be short in hearts, and we do not have the strength to reverse or to commit the hand to the three-level. Our fast defensive tricks and overall strength should be enough to ensure the contract's defeat. Pass.

The bidding has proceeded:

1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—One of the reasons for opening this hand is because it is a two-suiter. There is no reason, then, why you should not treat it as such. Bid two clubs.

♠K1054 ♡AQ8 ◇76 ♣A973
The bidding has proceeded:

What do you bid now?

A.—You have a minimum opening bid and, therefore, you should plan to take no more than one additional bid unless partner forces you. If you rebid one spade and partner then takes a preference to clubs or bids no trump, you will feel guilty about having suppressed your fine heart support. You can avoid that problem by raising to two hearts now.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Since partner has shown a minimum opening, the most you can hope for is a combined count of 25 HCP. You have a flat hand, and that warrants a 1-point deduction. Because of these negative factors, it's doubtful that you can make a game, so don't endanger your partial by getting too high. Pass.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

Technical problems can't keep stars from coming out

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Stewart, Rock Hudson and Billy Dee Williams high-kicked with the Rockettes and comedian Whoopi Goldberg cleaned up her act in a one-night stand for the Actors' Fund of America.

They were part of the biggest show biz event of the season, as music, song and tapping toes filled Radio City Music Hall Sunday night, with Walter Cronkite and Barbara Walters leading a special tribute to achievers in the arts and sciences.

It was "Night of 100 Stars II," a $5 million extravaganza of 308 sports, television, film and Broadway personalities. The show, originally scheduled for three hours, ran over 5½ hours long as technical and production problems snagged the spectacle.

"I've been waiting to come out since 5 o'clock," quipped comedian Whoopi Goldberg in her persona of an over-educated junkie. She was entertaining a fidgety audience while a dance number was restaged for the television crew taping the show for a later airing.

The audience grew even more restless by the time Cronkite and Miss Walters saluted such luminaries as dance pioneer Martha Graham, civil rights activist Rosa Parks, Nobel laureate Linus C. Pauling, Pulitizer Prize-winning novelist John Updike and educator Kenneth B. Clark.

"They are special stars who felt the need to widen horizons," Cronkite said.

Another segment paid tribute to such fashion designers as Halston, Fabrice, Mary McFadden and Carolina Herrera with stars modeling their creations.

But the beaded beauties and silky shifts were upstaged by Raquel Welch, who stole the segment by simply walking on stage in a clinging white strapless gown.

The evening's show stopper, a monumental tap dance number, earned one of the few standing ovations and pleased the audience when it was redone for a better camera angle.

Gregory Hines, Hinton Battle and Honi Coles tapped with Christopher Walken, Dick Van Dyke, Chita Rivera, Debbie Allen, Ginger Rogers and a stage filled with other stars.

The closing, featuring such stars as Hudson, Stewart, Carol Burnett, Mayor Edward I. Koch and Tony Randall kicking with the Rockettes to "One" from "A Chorus Line," also had to be redone because of a staging problem.

In a segment saluting New York City, Leonard Bernstein conducted the Radio City orchestra while Peter Allen swung on a moon, Carol Channing sang with Big Bird, Joe Namath crooned "When You're A Jet, You're A Jet All The Way" and a bus full of Muppets, led by Kermit the frog, got through "New York, New York."

Hal Linden, Michele Lee and Nancy Dussault emceed a circus parade featuring stars from every prime-time television series, with a quartet of "Dynasty" celebrities — Joan Collins, John Forsythe, Linda Evans and Diahann Carroll — getting the biggest hand.

The audience rose to its feet as Lord Olivier walked slowly on stage following a film tribute showing clips from several of his films. Also honored were Lana Turner, Danny Kaye, Sidney Poitier, Robert Preston, Dustin Hoffman and Robert DeNiro.

Edward Kennedy Jr. gets new artificial leg

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Edward Kennedy Jr., whose right leg was removed to save him from bone cancer 11 years ago, "feels like he has his leg again" after being fitted with a new, lighter artificial limb, a friend says.

The 23-year-old son of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., was fitted with the new leg Saturday at the Sabolich Orthotics-Prosthetics Center here, said center head John Sabolich.

Kennedy

Sabolich, who designed the prosthesis made of aluminum and titanium, said his creation is more pliable than old-style artificial limbs which must be fitted through painful trial and error. Its motion is smoother and should eliminate some painful rubbing, he said.

Kennedy has been touring the nation speaking on the rights of the handicappped and disabled, whom he prefers to call "physically challenged."

The new leg allows more freedom of movement, said George DePontis of Miami, Fla., editor of a magazine for the handicapped and a friend who traveled to Oklahoma with Kennedy.

"It's a revolutionary prothetics. Teddy feels like he has his leg again," DePontis said.

Kennedy said the new leg feels "completely different" from what he has been wearing.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country entertainers, including comedian Minnie Pearl and singer Roy Acuff, are applauding plans to broadcast the famed Grand Ole Opry radio show live on cable television.

The Nashville Network plans to begin televising the 59-year-old country music show on April 13. The first show will be a one-hour special, to be followed by a half-hour show every Saturday. Officials at the Opry here said radio broadcasts of the show will remain unchanged.

"I'm certainly happy that they'll give the fans an opportunity to see the Opry as it's broadcast," said Miss Pearl, who began doing her comedy act at the Opry in 1940. "I get fan letters from people all across the country saying they wished the Opry was on TV on a regular basis."

"I hope they let me work it," she added.

"It'll be wonderful," said Roy Acuff, the 81-year-old "king of country music" who's been performing on the Opry since 1938. "It will be good for the Opry and good for our state. I hope TV shows the Opry as it is and doesn't dress it up too much."

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Auto racer John Clark Gable, movie legend Clark Gable's 24-year-old son, married the daughter of a California real estate broker, says a spokesman for the club which held the reception.

Gable married Tracy LaRae Yarro at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Art Weller, weekend switchboard operator at the Bel-Air Bay Club, said Sunday. The reception was held at the club after the wedding.

Gable, a graduate of Santa Monica City College, was born four months after his father's November 1960 death. His mother died in May 1983 in Houston.

The bride, whose age was not disclosed, is a graduate of Charles Ross School of Cosmetology and is the daughter of real estate broker Ralph Yarro Jr.

A formal wedding announcement appeared in Sunday's Los Angeles Times, but no date for the event was given. Weller said he could not recall whether the wedding was this month or last and said the club's records were locked up for the weekend.

MARSHALL, Texas (AP) — "Final Cut," a movie to be shot next month on Caddo Lake along the Texas-Louisiana border, pulls a switch on conventional filmmaking by pitting bad good guys against good bad guys.

A Southern, rural county sheriff steals little kids and sells them into white slavery until his plans are thwarted by a group of stunt men. Filming of the movie was announced Saturday at a news conference in Marshall.

Filming should lasting three or four weeks, said Weldon Finney, production coordinator for Forward Productions Inc. of Dallas.

The low-budget, $2 million movie will be produced by Gary Paul, owner of Texas Stuntmen Association, who will also star in the movie.

Paul said the company has already been in Marshall doing some preliminary work, and they have received assistance from the Harrison County Sheriff's Office and Sheriff Bill Oldham.

Asked about Oldham's reaction to the basic premise of the movie — a corrupt sheriff — Paul laughed and said, "I can't speak for him. He will have to speak for himself."

While the real-life sheriff gets along fine with the film crew, the producers have different plans for the movie lawman who steals children.

"The sheriff meets his Waterloo in the end. I'm not saying how, but he gets what he deserves," Finney said.

Life as drama

Some subjects lend themselves naturally to the relatively recent television format called the docudrama — programs that are part documentary and part drama.

In fact, on certain historical subjects such as dramatizations on the life and times of George Washington, the Watergate scandal, the John Kennedy White House years and others, the format of docudramas actually serves the public good by bringing to life people and topics previously only read about. The format for docudramas actually can enhance the learning experience by putting history into a context easily understandable by today's society.

But there also is a danger in putting certain subjects into the docudrama format and that danger was never more vivid than in last week's airing on CBS of "The Atlanta Child Murders."

It's been only three years since Wayne Williams, a 25-year-old black Atlantan, was convicted to murdering two young black adults. He also was incriminated in the slaying of 21 black children in Atlanta in the period of 1979 through 1981.

In the docudrama, however, the viewer was left with the unmistakable impression that Williams was railroaded into prison on flimsy evidence in the interest of quieting community fears regarding the slayings and, more importantly, of saving Atlanta's good reputation that helped a booming tourism industry.

That's hardly the case. The Wayne Williams trial lasted nine weeks during which more than 200 witnesses took the stand. Prosecutors linked Williams to the victims through some 700 pieces of clothing, carpet fibers and dog hairs. Furthermore, blood stains were found in Williams' car.

The Atlanta child murders constituted a highly emotional case and the scars on the good people of Atlanta still show, but if the CBS producers truly believe Williams did not receive a fair trial, they should have said so in a straight documentary rather than attempting to weave it into a questionable combination of fact and fiction.

At the beginning of the showing, CBS ran a disclaimer noting that some of the dramatization was based on fact and some fictionalized. After watching the showing, a large number of Atlantans were outspokenly upset because of the way in which the Williams case had been depicted.

We believe they had a right to be upset. As noted earlier, some topics lend themselves well to the format of docudramas: This obviously was not one of them.

Day of reckoning

By the year 2000 — and that isn't too many years away — the federal, state and municipal governments in this country will require sewage facilities costing at least $108 billion just to keep water quality from getting any worse than it is now.

This estimate has been developed by the Environmental Protection Agency as the basis of a new plan it will soon propose to Congress for providing loans and grants to states requiring sewer improvements and new construction.

The plan is suggested for eventual replacement of the current federal $2.4 billion-a-year program of direct grants to municipalities for sewage treatment plants and related facilities. The Reagan Administration has called for an ending of this arrangement by 1990.

While the EPA proposals have not been fully blueprinted, it is estimated that about $60 billion may be needed in areas eligible for federal aid to install reserve capacity facilities to meet expected population growth. In addition, $48 billion may have to be spent on sewage facilities that do not qualify for federal aid.

The costs faced by all levels of government in the next 15 years to assure water quality may appear enormous but they are dwarfed by the amounts which the nation is prepared to spend on military defense.

When Congress gets the final report of EPA on essential sewer construction, it would do well to give the country's health and sanitation needs the same positive attention it routinely accords defense. Widespread pollution is capable of doing as much damage to this country as enemy action.

Another View: Twisting history

There is something about the truth that just isn't good enough for CBS. It has to play with it and embellish it until it becomes a "docudrama," which means part documentary and part drama.

The trouble is that the viewer can never be sure which is "docu" and which is drama. That is exactly what the problem was with the much-hyped two-part CBS docudrama, "The Atlanta Child Murders."

Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, the Atlanta police, the state attorney general, and a great many of the people living in Atlanta are outraged that CBS felt it necessary to add an undetermined amount of fiction to its one-sided portrayal of the city's efforts to solve the child murders and the events that led to the conviction of Atlantan Wayne Williams.

Atlanta officials claim that the CBS docudrama invented statements and twisted evidence to make it appear that police bungled the case and that Williams was framed. Since CBS agreed to run a disclaimer preceding the showing of the two-part series that said "some of the events are fictionalized for dramatic purposes" who's to know what was fact and what was fiction in this presentation?

What CBS fails to realize is that this kind of reshaping of the record, if continued, could cause the public to become totally disenchanted with CBS' ability to tell a story straight. The format leaves too much to the discretion of the writer. If he is inclined to stretch the truth, or mangle it when he pleases, the results can be mostly drama with precious little docu.

If CBS felt that there was evidence suggesting that Wayne Williams was framed, it could have presented it in a documentary without intermingling fiction in the account. Certainly there were ample dramatic events that occurred in this long, traumatic hunt to solve the Atlanta child killings to sustain the interest of viewers without the need to enliven it with the writer's inventions.

The American people are entitled to get their history straight. They don't need high-paid fiction writers doctoring up the record to make it read the way they think it should.

U.S. won KAL propaganda test

WASHINGTON — When the Soviets shot down a Korean Air Lines 747 with 269 passengers and crew on Sept. 1, 1983, American embassies around the world were immediately ordered to report the reactions of foreign governments and press. The State Department wanted to know just how big a black eye the Soviets had given themselves.

Jack Anderson

Hundreds of recently declassified cables, reviewed by my associate Lucette Lagnado, show the keen interest Foggy Bottom had in what was clearly regarded as a propaganda windfall for the United States. Here are some of the most significant results of the worldwide survey conducted by U.S. embassies:

— Washington was particularly interested in determining which, if any, communist countries would issue flat-out condemnations of the Soviet shoot-down of the KAL plane. "Any notable — i.e., out of sync with Moscow — reactions ... (would) be of interest, both to us and to our Korean friends," stated a cable sent out within days of the incident. The tally that resulted showed only three communist governments had "actively denounced" the Soviets: China, Yugoslavia and Romania.

— In this hemisphere, there were a couple of gratifying surprises: The leftist government of Nicaragua and the Marxist regime in Grenada "joined in the unanimous expressions of concern" by countries in the region. The Nicaraguans backed off a bit at a meeting of the Organization of American States, where they said, "The facts are not yet in on the incident."

— The State Department was especially interested in the reaction of Italy's Communists, who were described as "paralyzed by the Soviet action."

"The incident and the delayed Soviet reaction caused considerable concern for Communist officials," the cable stated, adding that some members of the party's youth group had even joined a protest staged outside the Soviet Embassy in Rome. "The Communist Party," the cable summarized, "has attempted throughout the episode to make clear that it had nothing to do with these Soviet actions and should not be blamed for them."

— Washington was anxious to see whether the military regime in Poland would toe the line like most of Moscow's satellites. The Warsaw embassy reported that Poland generally was obedient.

"Polish media coverage of the KAL incident continues to be heavy and to follow the Moscow line," the embassy cabled. "Polish news agency continues to support the Soviet version of events with numerous ... selective quotes from Western news sources. ... In the spectrum of coverage that we have seen from ... Eastern European posts to date, Poland appears to lie on the less militant end."

— Among Western non-communist groups, only West Germany's Green Party took an openly anti-American position. When the Bonn government announced plans for a boycott of flights in and out of the Soviet Union, the Green Party objected.

"The Greens said this action was not an appropriate answer to the shooting down of the Korean airliner and the deaths of 269 people," the embassy reported, "(and that) if one wants such a boycott, one should impose the same boycott against American flights in order to point out American co-responsibility."

— In Latin America, the embassy cables were almost openly gloating. "Soviets took a black eye in Peru," the Lima embassy reported. "The Marxist left's attempts to explain away Moscow's brutality only augmented nation's revulsion and diminished credibility of those who ... defend Soviet Union. This included Communist deputies. ... The United States has clearly advanced its position in this unstable country."

The embassy in Costa Rica was pleased to report that a Soviet Embassy representative failed to show up for a talk show discussion of the shoot-down with a U.S. diplomat, so the show was broadcast without the man from Moscow.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE: The decision of the Folger Library, one of Washington's most prestigious academic institutions, to stop producing Shakespeare's plays because of federal budget cuts, has drawn a surprisingly virulent protest from some distinguished capital residents.

One target of their scorn is Amherst College, which administers the library endowed by the late multimillionaire, Henry Clay Folger.

Critics have lambasted the Massachusetts college for shutting down a facility that brings ghetto kids into contact with Shakespeare, while continuing to fund such events as afternoon tea parties and seminars on esoteric Shakespearean lore. One congressional committee is considering investigating Folger's use of $343,000 a year from the National Park Service.

Library director Werner Gundersheimer admitted he was astonished at the venom shown by the save-the-theater stalwarts, but insisted, in the words of the immortal bard, "We're getting a bum rap."

ADDING UP THE REGS: The federal government's regulations have grown at an incredible rate in the past two decades, particularly in the social area. One yardstick is the Federal Register, where all new regulations must be published.

In the mid-1950s, the register published 10,000 pages a year of new regulations. By 1970 that figure had doubled, and by 1980 the new rules took 74,000 pages.

According to a study prepared by Murray Weidenbaum, former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, the cost to industry of complying with the government regulations over the past three decades has been about $100 billion — which has been passed on to consumers.

'Silent Scream' viewing aborted

WASHINGTON — Although President Reagan had watched his own copy of "The Silent Scream," Vice President George Bush and presidential chief of staff Donald T. Regan both turned down invitations to last week's White House screening of the anti-abortion video.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Bush saw a few minutes over television of the film's depiction of a fetus being aborted and, according to an aide, "it even further strengthened the vice president's opposition to abortion." But he declined to see the video in its full 30 minutes, and has no plans to do so.

Don Regan's absence reflected the senior staff's irritation with Faith Whittlesey, assistant for public liaison, in scheduling the screening. White House Counsel Fred Fielding stopped Whittelsey's plans to distribute copies of the video to all members of Congress on grounds that would be illegal government promotion of a private venture.

CLARK'S LONELY FAREWELL

The unnoticed departure from Washington of William P. Clark, a Reagan favorite for two decades, followed the president's failure to mention him in White House swearing-in formalities for Donald Hodel, his successor as interior secretary. Clark was present, watching silently from the back of the room.

White House insiders believe that Clark's hasty resignation, at a moment when he was very much enjoying his job, was the result of something Nancy Reagan said or did during New Year's festivities at Walter Annenberg's Palm Springs estate. Although routinely invited to the party, Clark confided to friends he did not think he would be all that welcome.

Mrs. Reagan, strongly influenced by deputy chief of staff Michael Deaver, turned against Clark months ago on grounds that his anti-Soviet hard line was hurting the re-election campaign. Right after the Palm Springs party, Clark astonished friends with his decision to return to California, but never explained why.

BYE-BYE, BYRD?

Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd was so severely wounded by the 11th-hour attempt of Sen. Lawton Chiles to replace him, even though it fell short, that Senate Democrats are increasingly certain they will elect a new leader in the next session.

Byrd did not help himself with his participation in the widely-criticized Democratic response to President Reagan's State of the Union message. According to grumbling from the Senate Democratic cloakroom, individual favors for colleagues by which Byrd has maintained his power are no longer adequate to overcome worries about his image that were focused by the Chiles challenge.

Chiles himself is given little chance to beat Byrd next time. The runaway favorite is Sen. Dan Inouye of Hawaii, third-ranking Senate Democrat as their secretary.

KEMP VS. NEW RIGHT

New Right operative Paul Weyrich has been complaining in private meetings about Rep. Jack Kemp's public downgrading of social issues compared to economics and foreign policy.

Weyrich contrasts Kemp's coolness with courting of the religious right by less conservative possibilities for the 1988 presidential nomination: Vice President George Bush and even ex-Delaware governor Pierre du Pont.

When Weyrich criticized Kemp in a recent strategy session with Republican congressmen, Rep. Vin Weber of Minnesota protested. Weber, who would play a major part in any Kemp-for-president campaign, noted that even the Rev. Jerry Falwell of the Moral Majority no longer thinks a school prayer amendment is necessary.

Elitists trip on Alaskan rejection

The Alaska Legislature has struck a blow for reason and sanity which should be applauded by all taxpayers who resent being bilked of their money by junk-makers and their toadies in the name of art.

Charley Reese

In 1978, a pile of steel junk which a sculptor clains is art was installed outside the State Court building in Juaneau. The taxpayers had paid its creator, Robet Murray, $40,000 for it.

The shape of the sculpture is difficutl to describe since it is just a collection of bent pieces of stell. Non-representational art, I think the hoity-toity crowd calls it.

Well, in the spring of 1984, the Legislature voted to remove it and replace it with a war memorial. the sculpture, called "nimbus," was unbolted and rmoved last month to its current resting place, a storage yard.

There are a lot of interesting aspects to this matter which provide insights into one of the processes by which taxpayers get fleeced by elitists who think God put taxpayers on earth for the sole purpose of providing them with the funds with which to indulge their whims and fancies.

The elitists, of course, are outraged. Imagine, the audacity of th elected representatives of the people disposing of a piece of property which the people paid for. As far as elitists are cocerned taxpayers are supposed to provide aoney, not advice on how it should be spent.

Keith Appel, an Anchorage sculptor, is typical. "It's a poor commentary on democracy if you ask me. Artists havwe rights, too ... you don't mind being evaulated by people whose opinion you respect, but the legislature has no right to be jurying. It's absolutely criminal."

Let us note a couple of things. The artist's rights were not violated. He was paid in full for his work. That work now belongs to the State f Alaska which has the perfect right to display it anywhere it chooses, including a storage yeard.

Note, too, Appel has no respect for the people's elected representatives. thye are qualified to provide the dough but, of course, not qualified to decide whether what the dough is to be spent on is worth it or not. he thinks it's criminal to question the judgment of elitists.

Christ D'Arcy, director of the Alaska State Arts Council, called it legislative censorship. Since when is it censorship for the owner of a piece of sculpture to decide where he wants to put it?

You see, what happens when government gets into the business of buying or subsidizing art, a little crowd of elitists get hold of th urse and spend it to subsidize their cronies or their own tastes in art. That's one reason why the budget for art at every level of government should be zero.

Artists should be granted the biesings of freedom. If they can produce something someone wishes to buy, fine; if not, too bad. there is no more reason to subsidize art than there is to subsidize Exxon or Ford Motor Co.

A totally free market in art would provide a living for good artists and would get rid of the bd ones. Art is basically communication and the problem with most people who claim to be artists is that they have nothing inside them worth communicating. Their art reflects that. Their little minds are confused, self-centered, and illogical and so is their art. Let those who produce art for art's sake buy their own art and get their noses out of the public trough.

It's grand to see that the people of Alaska have elected representatives who will not be intimidated by a fe elitist snobs. It would be even grnder if we could launch a national scrap metal drive and collect all the junk cluttering up public grounds.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, February 18th, the 49th day of 1985. There are 316 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

One hundred years ago — on February 18th, 1885 — Mark Twain's "Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" was published in the United States for the first time. (The book had made its debut in Britain and Canada in December 1884.)

On this date:

In 1546, one of the leaders of the Protestant Reformation, Martin Luther, died.

In 1564, the artist Michelangelo died in Rome.

In 1735, the first opera to be presented in the U.S. — titled, "Flora, or Hob in the Well" — was performed in Charleston, South Carolina.

In 1861, Jefferson Davis was sworn in as president of the Confederate States of America in Montgomery, Alabama.

Artificial heart recipient 'stable'

Murray Haydon

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Murray P. Haydon's vital signs remained stable today after he became the world's third permanent artificial heart recipient, and one of his doctors said Haydon has less to worry about than the average open-heart surgery patient.

The 58-year-old former autoworker was listed in critical but stable condition at Humana Hospital Audubon, where surgeons implanted the mechanical heart in a 3½-hour operation Sunday.

"Haydon rested well last night," George Atkins, a Humana spokesman, said early this morning. "There have been no complications."

"I can't think of anything right now that I would be tremendously worried about," Dr. Allan M. Lansing said Sunday.

Haydon "has the usual problems of any open-heart patient, minus the chance that he might develop something wrong with his heart," such as an irregular rhythm, said Lansing, medical director of Humana Heart Institute International.

Sunday night, Haydon's vital signs were stable and he was being weaned from the respirator that helped him breathe, said Atkins.

Haydon was "awake and aware and able to move all his limbs and extremities," Atkins said.

Juanita Haydon visited her husband Sunday while he was still under anesthesia, and though he did not open his eyes or speak, he was able to squeeze her hand, said Robert Irvine, a Humana spokesman.

She kept repeating, "Murray, I love you," according to Humana photographer William Strode, who was in the room.

Lansing observed the operation during which Dr. William C. DeVries scooped out the weak and deteriorating ventricles of Haydon's heart and stitched the Jarvik-7 mechanical heart into place.

The operation was expected to last 4½ hours — a record pace in itself — but took an hour less, thanks in part to an absence of scar tissue.

The first such implant, on Barney Clark in 1982, took 7½ hours. The second, on William J. Schroeder last November, took 6½ hours.

"Gonna start charging for this procedure, we're getting so good at it," DeVries quipped to other members of the surgical team, which finished the operation before 11:30 a.m.

"It went perfect, couldn't have gone better," said DeVries, the only man authorized by the federal government to perform the implants.

He followed as Haydon was wheeled on a bed to the hospital's intensive-care unit, checked the maze of tubes and wires in the high-tech cubicle, and patted his patient gently on the chest.

"He's got good color, hasn't he?" DeVries said.

The operation was videotaped by Humana and an edited version, with DeVries' comments, was replayed for reporters.

The tape included a close-up shot of the plastic and metal device in place before DeVries closed Haydon's chest.

The Jarvik-7 clicked and pumped distinctly as compressed air was fed to it through flexible tubes that will protrude permanently from Haydon's chest.

Surgeons at Humana Hospital Audubon in Louisville, Ky., replace the heart of Murray P. Haydon with a Jarvik-7 artificial heart.

Lansing said the only major difference between the second and third implant was that Haydon was immediately given a drug to prevent blood clotting. Schroeder wasn't given anti-clotting medicine until a few days after surgery.

He suffered a series of strokes on Dec. 13, the 18th day after his surgery. Doctors considered blood clots to be among the likely culprits.

Schroeder, who is recuperating in a private room on the same floor of the hospital as Haydon, reportedly replied, "That's good," when told Haydon had breezed through surgery.

Lansing said Sunday's operation was "more routine" than was Schroeder's implant, and the surgical team was "extremely comfortable and confident."

"It was even quieter and more calm and there was not quite the tremendous excitement" in the operating room Sunday, Lansing said.

Before the operation, doctors said Haydon was stronger and healthier than the first two artificial heart recipients and thus stood a better chance of living a relatively normal life with the plastic heart.

"I feel much better, I feel much more confident in this situation than I did with Mr. Schroeder," the last artificial heart recipient, said Lansing.

Schroeder, in his 85th day on the artificial heart, is recovering from a fever, the latest in a series of complications that have delayed his release from the hospital.

Clark lived 112 days with the device but never left the Salt Lake City hospital where he underwent the operation.

Haydon, who smoked cigarettes for 40 years, suffered from cardiomyopathy, a progressive deterioration and swelling of the heart that left him unable to get out of bed and unable to leave the hospital for the past three weeks, Lansing said.

Burger renews call for new national court

DETROIT (AP) — Congress should create a new national court to help ease the "inexorable growth" of cases reaching the Supreme Court, says Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

Burger, speaking Sunday to about 2,000 members of the American Bar Association at its mid-year convention, called for the formation of an "intercircuit panel" that would field cases sent to it by the Supreme Court.

"Years ago we passed any sensible limit on what the Supreme Court should be asked to do," said Burger, one of nine Supreme Court justices. Burger has called for formation of such a new court in the past.

"(When) Chief Justice (Earl) Warren took office at the beginning of the 1953 term, there were 1,463 cases on the docket," Burger said. "In the term completed last July, there were 5,100 cases on the docket."

He said 88 Supreme Court decisions were signed in the 1969-70 term, Burger's first term, compared with 151 last term.

Under the new court system, "the Supreme Court would have the option to refer cases involving circuit conflicts and interpretation of federal statutes to the intercircuit panel," Burger said.

"Years ago we passed any sensible limit on what the Supreme Court should be asked to do...In the term completed last July, there were 5,100 cases on the docket."

—Justice Warren Burger

Burger proposed that the Supreme Court appoint one appeals judge from each of the 13 federal circuits — nine to sit on the new court and four as reserves.

Burger said the new court would be a five-year experiment, and would sit in Washington four weeks a year.

Burger said Congress has been slow to act on his proposal.

"Why is it so difficult to grasp the reality that, just as we need more police and more courts to deal with automobile traffic than we did 75 years ago when there were very few automobiles, we need something more to deal with the avalanche of cases coming to the Supreme Court?" he said.

Teen who saved drowning sister one of 15 heroes commission honors

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Barbara Kastl proudly remembers her son, David, as a "gallant" teen-ager who died trying to save his younger sisters from drowning in Lake Michigan.

Kastl, 17, of Southgate, Mich., was one of 15 Americans and Canadians to be honored today by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission for their heroism. Five of the awards of $2,500 and a medal were awarded posthumously.

Mrs. Kastl's teen-age girls got caught in strong undertow while swimming in choppy Lake Michigan on a weekend outing in Gulliver, Mich., on July 3, 1983.

Mother and son quickly paddled out in a raft and reached Diane, 14. Susan, 16, made it to a sandbar on her own. Suddenly, however, the rescuers were in trouble, too.

"We were all in the water hanging onto the raft and then a wave came and knocked David and me off," Mrs. Kastl, 41, recalled in an interview Friday. "We just struggled about 10 feet away from each other. We couldn't help each other."

David never made it back to shore.

"I know David did something gallant," Mrs. Kastl said. "It makes me proud. I know he died helping his sister."

The Pittsburgh-based commission has honored 6,892 heroes with more than $15.5 million in cash awards and medals since it was founded by industrialist Andrew Carnegie in 1904.

The commission also cited:

—Peter P. Bobetich Jr., 35, of Baden, Pa., who saved two women from a burning apartment in Aliquippa, Pa., on Aug. 2, 1984.

—Joseph W. Gardner, 36, and Orval Herbert Roulston, 44, both of Douglas Lake, British Columbia, who rescued an injured rancher from exposure on Douglas Lake on Dec. 7, 1982.

—The late Michael A. Gigliotti, 57, of Haverhill, Mass., and the late Joseph G. Gallo, 61, of New York City, who died trying to save a woman from drowning in the Atlantic Ocean at Salisbury Beach, Mass., on Aug. 18, 1984. The woman survived.

—The late Robert B. Granaas, 24, of Trenton, Mich., who died from suffocation while trying to save a co-worker overcome by fumes while cleaning a gasoline storage tank at Detroit Metropolitan Airport on Oct. 10, 1983. Both men died.

—Robert J. Henderson, 42, of Opa-Locka, Fla., who saved the life of a co-worker stabbed in Miami on March 29, 1984. Henderson also was stabbed.

—Wallace L. Jensen, 51, of Oberlin, Kan., who saved the life of a 2-year-old girl but could not save her 26-year-old mother. The two were involved in an accident with Jensen's truck in Oakley, Kan., on Feb. 28, 1984. Jensen suffered second-degree burns on his hands.

—The late Joseph W. Manford, 27, of Boonsboro, Md., who died trying to save a woman from drowning in a pond in Hagerstown, Md., on July 14, 1984.

—Timothy M. McKeown, 13, of Millersburg, Pa., who saved an 8-year-old girl from drowning in a creek in West Fairview, Pa., on June 21, 1984.

—Michael R. Santino, 32, of Soap Lake, Wash., who saved a 62-year-old man from his burning home in Soap Lake on July 30, 1984.

—Kent A. Self, 20, of Addyston, Ohio, and Konstantinos Tallman, 34, of Cincinnati, who rescued a Cincinnati police officer from a man who was stabbing him on Dec. 6, 1983.

—Kevin J. Stone, 19, of Norfolk, Neb., who helped save a man who was involved in a traffic accident and, aflame, jumped into the Platte River on June 10, 1984.

Iwo Jima flag-raising 'kept guys from going off their rockers'

Copley News Service

The famous photograph of the Feb. 23, 1945, flag-raising on Mount Suribachi on the island of Iwo Jima during the fierce Marine battle there was taken by Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal.

To Marines on the island locked in bitter combat with the Japanese, the flag-raising was inspiring.

"That was the most tremendous morale booster and was what kept the guys from going completely off their rockers," said then-Platoon Sgt. Jim Gibson.

Lt. Gen. Joseph Fegan said, "When the flag went up, it was a very moving moment. The world stood still for a minute."

"Men openly wept when they saw the flag go up," recalled one Marine.

But according to Marine Corps records, another flag had been raised earlier and photographed by a Marine Corps combat cameraman who had scratched his way to the top of the mountain along with a 40-man combat patrol from the 2nd Battalion, sent by the commander, Lt. Col. Chandler Johnson, to seize and occupy the crest.

Sgt. Louis R. Lowery, a photographer for Leatherneck Magazine, assigned himself to the patrol to photograph the attempt to scale Mount Suribachi.

A small 54-by-28-inch flag had been brought ashore from an attack transport by 1st Lt. George G. Wells, the battalion adjutant.

Johnson ordered the flag to be raised if the patrol succeeded in reaching the summit.

The patrol reached the rim of the crater about 10:15 a.m. and immediately got into a short, hot firefight with a Japanese defending force. While the fighting was going on, some of the men found a piece of Japanese pipe, attached the flag, and raised it at 10:20 a.m.

The men who raised that first flag were 1st Lt. Harold G. Schrier, Platoon Sgt. Ernest I. Thomas Jr., Sgt. Henry O. Hanson, Cpl. Charles M. Lindberg and Privates 1st Class Louis C. Charlo and James Michels.

Marine Corps records show that shortly after the raising of the first flag, an unidentified Marine went aboard a beached landing ship and got a larger 96-by-56-inch flag.

As the second flag was being carried up Mount Suribachi, Rosenthal saw it and "instantly started in hot pursuit," the Marine records said. The patrol carrying that flag was comprised of Sgt. Michael Strank, Cpl. Harlon Block and Privates 1st Class Franklin R. Sousley and Ira Hayes.

When the men came to the crest of Suribachi, Schrier ordered the new and larger flag raised as the first one was lowered.

Strank and his patrol fastened the larger flag to a second pipe and then tried to set it in the hard ground, Marine accounts say. Two men with the patrol, Hospital Corpsman 2nd Class John N. Bradley and Pfc. Rene A. Gagnon, helped them.

The six men were straining and struggling to raise that flag when Rosenthal shot the photograph that has become famous.

Freed American journalist feels 'just fantastic' after his escape

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — American newsman Jeremy Levin, abducted by terrorists nearly a year ago in war-torn Beirut, said today he felt "just fantastic" after five days of freedom. He was on his way home aboard a White House jet.

Levin, with one arm around his wife, Lucille, waved to reporters at Rhein-Main air base in Frankfurt, West Germany, before the couple boarded the Air Force C-135 for a flight to Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington.

Jeremy Levin

The journalist, who was assigned to Lebanon as Cable New Network's Beirut bureau chief, received medical treatment at a U.S. military hospital in West Germany.

He was kidnapped March 7, beginning what he described as 11 months of solitary confinement in a building where he says four Americans who are missing from Beirut and believed kidnapped might also have been held captive.

Levin said he freed himself from chains early Wednesday and stumbled in the dark until he came upon to Syrian soldiers in eastern Lebanon. Syria turned him over to U.S. officials in the Syrian capital of Damascus.

The shadowy group Islamic Holy War claimed responsiblity for the abduction.

Levin, 52, who had an unkempt beard and was wearing pajamas when he first came to freedom, had shaven off the beard but sported a mustache when he left the airport. He wore a gray suit and brown overcoat and was hatless in the subfreezing but sunny weather.

"Hi, you guys," he shouted to about a dozen reporters and photographers at the tarmac. Asked how he felt, Levin said, "Just fantastic." He did not give a formal statement.

Before boarding, Levin and his wife shook hands with U.S. Consul William Bodde and each hugged Bodde's wife, Ingrid.

Air Force doctors at the Wiesbaden Regional Medical Center in Germany examined Levin over the weekend and found him "in satisfactory condition," according to a U.S. Embassy spokesman, Robert C. Heath.

Heath said in a prepared statement that Levin suffered "thorn puncture wounds to his feet during his escape and suffered mild malnutrition and some weight loss during his captivity.

"He also suffered from gastrointestinal and skin infections which have been resolved. Further medical evaluation and observation will be conducted in the United States," according to a diagnosis attributed to Dr. Winters Mabry, the hospital's chief of professional services.

President Reagan telephoned President Hafez Assad of Syria over the weekend to thank him for Syrian help in the safe return of Levin.

Vietnamese, Thais trade fire across border

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese and Thai gunners exchanged fire today across the Thai-Cambodian border after Vietnamese soldiers tried to seize a hilltop inside Thailand as part of an attack on Cambodian rebels, a Thai officer said.

The senior military officer, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said fighting around O-Bok, about 185 miles northeast of Bangkok, began Saturday when Vietnamese forces tried to take the hilltop. Thai villagers were killed by Vietnamese shells, he said.

Thai units pushed the intruders back into Cambodia, the officer said.

Vietnamese troops were apparently trying to attack guerrillas of the non-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

The clash between the Thais and the Vietnamese was one of several since Vietnam launched a dry season offensive three months ago against the Liberation Front and communist Khmer Rouge, two of three resistance groups in a coalition, headed by deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

The groups have vowed to oust the Heng Samrin regime installed by communist Vietnam soon after it invaded Cambodia in December 1978.

Ousted in the invastion were the Khmer Rouge, under whose brutal regime hundreds of thousands of Cambodians died during the 1970s.

Thai military officers also reported fighting in the Phum Thmei-Phnom Malai area Sunday night and this morning, as Khmer Rouge guerrillas driven from these strongholds in last week's fierce fighting attempted to harass Vietnamese lines.

The Vietnamese strikes emptied Khmer Rouge civilian camps south of the key Thai border town of Aranyaprathet, forcing more than 35,000 people to flee to two United Nations-supported sites in Thailand.

About 20,000 refugees were moved by truck and bus Sunday from the plain of Khao Sarapee to a reportedly safer area about six miles to the south at Khao Ta Ngoc. An additional 16,000 to 17,000 refugees will be ferried from Nong Pru, another camp, to Khao Ta Ngoc, possibly today.

The Thais reported capturing seven Vietnamese suspected of spying in the area of Aranyaprathet.

In the past, however, a number of Vietnamese soldiers have crossed the frontier seeking asylum in Thailand and asking to go to the United States and other Western nations.

The Vietnamese began their offensive Nov. 18, striking successfully at a series of Liberation Front camps, north of Aranyaprathet, and then turning their guns on the Khmer Rouge to the south.

Meanwhile, China's Foreign Ministry spokesman, Yu Zhizhong, reiterated Peking's support for the resistance fighters.

WORLD IN BRIEF

South African police kill two women in riots

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Policemen shot to death two black women after a crowd threw stones at a house, police said today, describing riots that reportedly began after banning of a meeting to protest rent increases.

The women were in a crowd that was fired on Sunday by guards from the government agency that runs the black township of Katlehong, east of Johannesburg, said Lt. Henry Beck of the police force.

Monitoring groups say at least 150 blacks have been killed in rioting since last August.

The violence, sparked by rent increases and other grievances against the white-minority government, has flared up again in recent weeks.

Germans deliver food

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — East and West German air crews have been running relay flights to deliver bags of wheat to resettled victims of Ethiopia's famine, Western diplomats say.

They said food bound for the drought victims in southeast Ethiopia were transferred from West German planes to East German planes at Dire Dawa, capital of the Harrarghe region, because West German officials oppose direct support for the Ethiopian government's controversial relocation program.

The diplomats spoke on Sunday on condition of anonymity.

East Germany and the Soviet Union, supporters of Marxist-governed Ethiopia, back the plan to move 1.5 million people from their homes in the northern regions of Wollo and Tigre to more fertile parts of the country.

Gas linked to infant deaths

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Nearly 25 percent of the babies born to mothers affected by the poison gas leak in Bhopal died soon after birth, the Hindustan Times has reported.

More than 2,000 people were killed after methyl isocyanate gas leaked from the Union Carbide pesticide plant in Bhopal on Dec. 3.

The Times also quoted hospital sources as saying as many as 30 percent of the babies born to mothers in the worst-hit areas had low birth weights. It said doctors had not yet established a direct link between the gas and the infant deaths and low birth weights.

In 1981, India's infant mortality rate was 139 for each 1,000 live births. That nationwide figure might not reflect the rate in a specific low-income area, such as the Bhopal slums hardest hit by the gas leak.

Where does student fit in?

By GEORGE VECSEY
N.Y. Times News Service

COMMENT

NEW YORK — Somewhere in the state of North Carolina today, there is undoubtedly a young college student wondering what exactly is going on at North Carolina State University. Lct's say she is 5-feet-2 -inches tall, wants to be a science teacher, is working hard for grades at a junior college — and cannot dunk a basketball. Can't even dribble one.

No college officials wrote her a letter a day begging her to attend their schools, the way Jim Valvano and his literary Sancho Panza, Tom Abatemarco, did for Chris Washburn. ("Follow the Pack! We get great exposure on TV," Abatemarco scrawled.)

The future science teacher assumed she was turned down by State because her Scholastic Aptitude Test scores were, let's say, only 800 — and State has a healthy average of 1030 for entering freshmen. But the other day she read in the paper that State had accepted Chris Washburn, whose combined SAT scores last year were 470 — 70 points above the minimum. But of course, Chris Washburn can dunk a basketball.

"I don't want to mislead anybody," says Hardy D. Berry, the assistant vice chancellor at North Carolina State. "Chris Washburn was recruited by this institution as an athlete."

BERRY defends the flexible process that brought Chris Washburn to State, saying: "I insist it's working for higher education." But he concedes: "I think it's used more for athletes. Everybody's very competitive."

The world could only have guessed at Chris Washburn's qualifications if he had not been arrested and convicted of stealing a five-piece stereo set in his dormitory. As part of the trial proceedings, his school records were requested by the court, and eventually became public.

Perhaps the most glaring figure on Washburn's school record was the 470 SAT score — 70 points above the score for signing one's name. Many highly respected authorities discount the SAT scores as culturally biased, and every college can point to successful students who had scored below the average.

The courts have often supported the principle of affirmative action by admissions offices, and many members of the National Collegiate Athletic Association can make a reasonable argument against imposing a minimum of 700 on the SAT as a requirement for a scholarship. But any way you look at it, 470 is a ludicrous score for a major school like North Carolina State.

"Chris Washburn was diagnosed earlier as having learning disablities," says Berry of North Carolina State. "But when he attended Laurinburg Institute, he was qualified for admission here. The SAT is not the dominant factor at State."

ALL WELL and good, except that basketball and Chris Washburn have become an embarrassment to residents of the state. The first embarrassment was the letter-writing campaign by the two coaches, as documented in a Sports Illustrated article last fall. The second embarrassment was the guilty plea by Washburn, who insisted the theft was a prank that went wrong.

Wake County Superior Court Justice Milton Reid took the plea seriously and sentenced Washburn to 46 hours in jail, to be served on the first anniversary of the theft next Dec. 19-21. He also imposed a stringent series of probation provisions that include:

—Payment of $1,000 of personal funds to the state's victims' compensation fund.

—Mental-health counseling by a practitioner appointed by the court.

—Drug and alcohol therapy (no drug or alcohol charges have been made or suggested in the case) and 30 hours of confrontational therapy.

—Donation of 200 hours to a center for mentally retarded children.

—Performance of 100 hours of "heavy housekeeping tasks" at a home for persons on parole.

—Maintenance work for 20 hours for the Raleigh Police Department.

—Surrendering his driver's license for 90 days.

—Subject to an ongoing search warrant "at reasonable times."

Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini, showing the wounds of his war with Livingstone Bramble, left, isn't ready to throw in towel yet.

Mancini not finished yet

By TIM DAHLBERG

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini wasn't quite ready to call it a career after having his face carved up for the second time by a crafty Livingstone Bramble. But if he listens to those close to him, he may have stepped into the ring for the last time.

"If it was up to me, I'd tell him to forget about it," said Mancini's father, Lenny, a former top lightweight contender himself.

"My own feelings are I'd rather this be the end," added Dave Wolf, Mancini's manager.

The former World Boxing Association lightweight champion, however, said he needed more time to reflect on his brief but at times spectacular career before making a decision.

"I'm not going to answer that now," the 23-year-old Mancini said Saturday night after dropping a close but unanimous 15-round decision to Bramble. "My impulse right now would be to hang them up. I've had a good career but right now I just need some tender loving from my family."

Mancini, who failed in his effort to win back the lightweight crown Bramble took from him last June by a 14th-round knockout in Buffalo, N.Y., was cut early and couldn't see out of his left eye after Bramble's punches swelled it shut in the eighth round.

BUT WITH a near sellout crowd of 11,758 cheering his every move, Mancini rallied late in the fight to pull within one point on all three cards of the ringside judges. The effort won him some respect from the champion.

"I don't think anybody can give me a fight like that," said Bramble, who unlike Mancini was unmarked after the grueling bout. "Ray fought with a lot of heart, he just wasn't going to quit."

Mancini pressed the attack throughout the fight but Bramble appeared to land punches more often and more effectively than the challenger. Bramble rocked Mancini with combinations to the head on several occasions and also scored well to the body.

A COMPUTER analysis of the fight used by Home Box Office showed that Bramble connected with 674 of 1,220 punches, while Mancini landed 381 of 1,349 punches.

"I knew I won the fight, Ray Mancini knew I won the fight," Bramble said of the close decision. "There's no way they could take the fight from me."

Denise Lanz 4-5A's MVP

Knapp, White make all-district

From Staff Reports

Midland High senior Denise Lanz, who averaged 16.3 points per game, was named as District 4-5A's most valuable girls basketball player as league coaches picked their annual All-District team.

Nikki Graham of Odessa High was named as the outstanding sophomore in the league. Lanz and Graham were the only two singled out for special honors.

League coaches picked a 10-player All-District team, a five-player second team and a five-player honorable mention list.

Midland High, who placed in a tie for second place with Midland Lee before losing a bi-district contest to Lubbock Monterey 63-54 Saturday in Lamesa, was represented on the first team by guard Deidra Knapp, who averaged 8.3 points per game. Lee placed senior Diane White (7.1) on the elite squad.

League champion Odessa Permian, a bi-district loser to Amarillo High, 68-44 Saturday night, landed Jan Carr, Sheree Itz and Lee Ann Rudd on the team. San Angelo had Shawn Sweeten and Anita Allgood.

Other first teamers were Leisa King of Abilene Cooper and Big Spring's Monique Jones, the only junior on the first teamer.

Lee's Megan Pace was a second team pick along with Abilene High's Jennifer Wolfe and San Angelo's Annie Stobaugh, all seniors. Two juniors were second team picks in Cooper's Angela Dunn and Permian's Sandy Houston.

Honorable mention selections were Tina Knight, Midland High; Denise Hatch, Lee; Julie Blavier, Permian; Briana Haggard, Odessa High and Chris Griffin, Permian.

Knight and Hatch are seniors while Haggard and Griffin are sophomores. Blavier is a junior.

Elliott fast on gas

Outduels Yarborough for first

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Slow-talking, fast-driving Bill Elliott conquered every challenge with a burst of speed in winning the $1.2 million Daytona 500 Sunday.

The drawling redhead from Dawsonville, Ga. dueled early with fellow front-row starter and co-favorite Cale Yarborough, then fended off a late challenge by Neil Bonnett to win the biggest race of his budding NASCAR Grand National stock car career.

Elliott, driving the sleek red and white Ford Thunderbird in which he set an all-time stock car qualifying record of 205.114 mph in winning the pole position here, nearly ran away from the field after Yarborough was sidelined early by an engine failure.

But, with the aid of a series of late caution flags, Bonnett got back into the fight.

"I gotta give credit to the car," said Elliott. "I couldn't believe it when the race started and Cale and I ran away.

"I felt Cale would have been there (at the end) if he hadn't gone out."

Bonnett led as late as six laps from the end, after the last pit stop, but Elliott and all the other drivers knew he had the fastest car on the track.

"I didn't know if I was gonna be able to get back by him," Elliott said. "I knew they were going to do everything they could to keep me back there."

Elliott did pass Bonnett on lap 195 and Bonnett spun off the track and out of the race moments later when his engine blew.

Daytona 500

"Bill Elliott could beat me anyway, so I had nothing to be afraid of. I figured maybe I could hold him off, or he would get held up, or something," said Bonnett.

"Something in the engine came loose. It dumped stuff onto the tires. When it happened, the best I could do was hold on. My Budweiser (team) boys gave me a strong car today. If I blow in all 30 races, but we run like this, I'll be happy."

Bonnett trailed the rocket-like Elliott by nearly 25 seconds before a slowing car brought out only the second caution flag of the race on lap 161. The two tops cars were nose-to-tail when the green flag came back out on lap 165, and Bonnett, with some drafting help from teammate Darrell Waltrip, jumped into the lead one lap later.

He stayed on top until the leaders pitted again during another caution period, this one caused on lap 173 when Dick Brooks' Thunderbird lost a wheel.

This time, Elliott's Coors-sponsored Ford beat Bonnett out of the pits and, when the green flag dropped on lap 178, the powerful Thunderbird pulled steadily away. But, Lennie Pond's spin on the main straightaway, brought out the caution flag again just nine laps from the end.

This time, Bonnett faked as if he was going to follow Elliott into the pits and stayed on the track, moving into the lead. But, Elliott, running with new tires, roared by on the backstretch of lap 195 after the green flag waved again.

As the leaders came through the front straight, Bonnett's engine blew and he slid into the infield grass, narrowly avoiding a wall and causing the fifth and final caution period.

The track went green for one more lap and Elliott easily held off the second-place Pontiac Grand Prix of Lake Speed, finishing about seven car-lengths ahead. Waltrip's Chevy was third, a lap down, followed by Buddy Baker's Oldsmobile and the Ford of Ricky Rudd.

The 29-year-old Elliott, the fastest rising star in Grand National racing, averaged 172.265 mph. The four late caution flags cost him a shot at Baker's 500-mile record of 177.602 mph, which he set in winning this race in 1980.

The winner earned $185,500, an all-time stock car record.

Elliott and Yarborough, showing their touted strength to a national television audience and more than 125,000 spectators at the sprawling racetrack, took turns in the lead until Yarborough went out just 63 laps into the 200-lap race on Daytona International Speedway's historic 2.5-mile, high-banked oval.

Midland's Bobby Hillin finished in ninth place, his best since joining the NASCAR circuit on a fulltime basis. He previously had two 11th places finishes.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

4-5A title game Tuesday REALLY means something

While keeping the ear to the ground just in case there are any thundering hooves on the horizon, it seems like I've been hearing a lot of talk lately that the Midland Lee-Abilene High one-game playoff at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Big Spring isn't a big deal.

The talk says that it really doesn't matter who wins the district playoff game because both teams go to the state playoffs anyway. It is true that both are headed into the playoff brackets, but some news over the weekend makes the Lee-AHS tussle more than just a little important.

Tuesday's winner will play Amarillo Palo Duro, District 3-5A's runnerup, in the bi-district round of the playoffs. The loser Tuesday will have to face Lubbock Monterey, the 3-5A champion.

Experience says that it really doesn't make much difference if you play a district's No. 1 or No. 2 team. Both are usually competitive and first glance would say that is true again. But things have changed.

The team that draws Palo Duro may have a big advantage in the first playoff step because the Dons have dismissed two starters from the team, including Ronnie Stieger, a 6-foot-3 forward who is averaging around 20 points per game. The other is guard Gerry Smith.

The two were picked up recently for credit card abuse and have since been dismissed from the team. Any time you get a chance to play a team that has lost two starters, you usually take it.

Well, to get the chance to tip-off with Palo Duro, you have to be declared as District 4-5A's champion — which means you have to win Tuesday. Now, does Tuesday's game give you the feeling of a warm-up contest?

This is not to say that Tuesday's loser has no chance against Monterey, but you can bet it will be a tough assignment. Palo Duro, however, is without two key starters and has to be down mentally from the events of the past week.

Who will win Tuesday? That's a tough one at this point. The two teams have met twice this season and we are all left wondering which game represents the real Eagles and the real Rebels.

Lee crushed Abilene in Midland, 91-74, the first time while the Eagles burned the Rebels, 87-74, in the second meeting in Abilene. It's anyone's guess what will happen on a neutral court. Both own identical 11-3 district records.

In Lee's win over the Eagles, the Rebels got 25 points from Brian Marczynski, 23 from Raymond Morney, 20 from Derek Westbrook and an additional 13 from Anthony Dickens. Mickey Russell led AHS with 22 while Greg Lowry and Kirt Robinson each had 18.

In the second meeting, Marczynski was held to a meager eight points, one of the three times this season he hasn't been in double figures. Abilene's Cliff Johnson improved from 12 to 19 as the Eagles put five players in double figures.

Both teams come at you from a lot of different directions and if you happen to catch a night when both are hot, you could have a game of classic proportions. This could be better than real playoff stuff.

And to the winner goes Palo Duro.

Is Chap's ring career over?

Midland's day in the boxing spotlight may be more than a brief fling, if the enthuasiasm of the CBS crew handling arrangements here are reflected back at the home office in New York.

Mike Stevens, manager of the Langford Chaparral Center, advises that CBS was as impressed with the Chap's suitability for staging a TV boxing show as it was with the size of the crowd.

"They were really impressed with the seating arrangments and how the building lends itself to boxing," Stevens says.

This isn't the first time the Chap Center has attracted lavish praise from outsiders.

Back when Sports Illustrated was doing a piece on one-time MC All-America Spud Webb, the lighting was something they hadn't expected and, maybe out of surprised gratitude for ideal shooting conditions, couldn't heap enough praise on the MC campus arena.

Apparently, the fight Robin Blake-Adolfo "Chile" Medel was close enough to warrant a rematch. That, however, is unlikely until after Blake get his title shot.

Another possibility for a Center appearance could be heavyweight Willie de Witt, the Olympic Gold medalist, who has Midland backing.

It may be that nothing may come of it for a while, but at least they know we are here. Now, if Sugar Ray Leonard will just keep his experience with West Texas' water to himself...

SMU BASKETBALL may be scoring some points for Mustang football.

A couple of seasons ago, you'll remember SMU had to settle for a Sun Bowl appearance, despite a team that was worthy of New Year's Day attention.

The rap was that SMU just wasn't a nationally-known college football-wise. Sure, it had had a couple of good years, but the Ponies lacked the magnetic TV pull of an Alambama, Texas, Oklahoma, Ohio State, USC, Nebraska or....dare I, Boston College.

What's more, the charge continued, "they don't bring any fans to their games so they just aren't a good bowl team."

Despite, the late season slump, SMU's basketballers are making people sit up and take notice, whereas fans just yawned at the 11-0-1 football team three years ago, the team that would have been No. 1, if it had a glamor name.

Coach Dave Bliss has taken on some of the big names of basketball this year and has brought a lot of attention and respect to the SWC school. That happens when you beat Louisville, Kentucky, North Carolina and Oklahoma, even if you lose to North Carolina State.

The TV exposure from playing such teams seems to have brought the kind of recognition to SMU basketball that the football team, for all its talent, never quite achieved.

Football coach Bobby Collins probably is enjoying it all, hoping the cagers' good press will rub off.

SMU points for showdown against Raiders

By Associated Press

There will be some tough scraps between now and Feb. 27, but that's the date Southern Methodist gets its chance for revenge against Texas Tech in a return match that could decide the SWC title.

Texas Tech is locked in a second-place tie with Texas A&M after upsetting Arkansas 52-50 in Fayetteville on Saturday. The Red Raiders and Aggies, who knocked off Texas Christian 67-60, are just a game behind the Mustangs.

Arkansas had won 19 straight games in Barnhill Arena and it was the first time the Red Raiders had won a game there since 1974. "Our team didn't respond to the challenge of playing for the championship," said Sutton. "Maybe our players don't know what it takes to win. We just don't lose here."

Tech and A&M are 8-4 and a full game behind Southern Methodist's 9-3 record. Arkansas is now 8-5.

Sutton is now 119-7 in games played on the Arkansas campus.

The jockeying continues until the final day on Sunday March 3 when SMU is at Houston in the regular season finale.

The SWC post-season classic will be held in Reunion Arena March 8-10 with only the ninth place team being eliminated.

Blackburn wins playoff

San Diego Open

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — By most accounts, Woody Blackburn's lackluster PGA career should have been over years ago.

A consistently mediocre professional who earned $1,837 in 1979 and later missed the cut 20 times in 21 golf tournaments, Blackburn, 33, hit bottom last year, losing his PGA card and being forced to requalify with the rookies in order to play on the tour.

HIS PLAYOFF victory in Sunday's Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego Open, then, hardly could have been more gratifying. Blackburn turned back Ron Streck on the fourth extra hole, won a solo tournament for the first time in his 10-season career and pocketed $72,000 — nearly half as much as the $151,297 he earned on the tour from 1976 to 1984.

"Satisfying," he said. "A lot of people look at the last four or five years of my career and say, 'Why do you still play?' I joined the Tour because I thought I was good enough to win. I still do."

On Sunday, Blackburn was ready and willing, but not immediately able. A model of consistency from Thursday's first hole until the 17th of regulation on Sunday, he could have wrapped up the tournament on the 18th green, but three-putted from 15 feet to bogey and allow Streck into a playoff.

"I had putted so well, it seemed, the whole tournament until the 18th green," said Blackburn, who admitted feeling nervous down the stretch. "But Ron had been playing so well that I didn't think I could lag down there and three-putt for a 5."

He went for the cup on his first tap, but rolled it about 5 feet past. His pressure-packed try for par, which would have sealed the championship, slid off to the right.

BLACKBURN and Streck then engaged in a miserable playoff, with both players spraying their tee shots wildly and missing putts that could have decided the tournament championship.

It was an ironically poor conclusion to a tournament in which Blackburn and Streck tied the Williams record for 72-hole totals, their 269s, 19 under par, matching Tom Watson's performance here in 1977. Blackburn also set a 54-hole total with an 18-under 198, and the 36-hole cut, 5-under-par 139, was a record.

Blackburn and Streck went par, bogey, par on the first three holes of the playoff, but on the fourth — the 501-yard, par 5 18th — Streck slapped his second shot into the water hazard in front of the green. He took a penalty stroke, chipped to about 25 feet and missed a putt for par.

That left it to Blackburn, who had reached the green in two. He lagged up from 25 feet to within 1½ feet of the cup, then, visibly nervous, lipped out his short birdie attempt.

After a gesture of helplessness, Blackburn, putter in his left hand, tapped in the winner.

"It feels so good to finally do what you're capable of doing," he said, crediting the victory to a reconstructed swing, which he began working on during last season's doldrums.

STRECK, WHO trailed Blackburn by one stroke after Saturday's third round and appeared sullen after losing the playoff, left the Torrey Pines course before reporters were able to speak to him.

It was the second straight year the Williams tournament has been decided by a playoff — in 1984, Gary Koch beat Gary Hallberg on the second extra hole — and the second time Blackburn has been involved in a sudden victory showdown. He lost the 1981 Quad Cities Open on the eighth playoff hole to Dave Barr.

Rangers outbrawl NY Islanders, 9-3

NHL

Associated Press

Life on the road was disastrous for the New York Rangers. Life at home is proving very prosperous.

The Rangers went 0-6-1 on a recent road trip, managing only 18 goals. They returned to Madison Square Garden this weekend and their dormant attack awoke with a fury. The Rangers followed an 8-7 victory over the NHL champion Edmonton Oilers on Friday with Sunday night's 9-3 pasting of their archrivals, the New York Islanders.

Ron Greschner had two goals and an assist and rookies George McPhee and Grant Ledyard sparked a five-goal, 6½-minute outburst in the second period with goals 39 seconds apart.

"It was a big weekend, looking at the standings," Greschner admitted. "We have to play every game like this, like it's a playoff game, with more intensity."

Rangers captain Barry Beck, who scored a shorthanded goal in the second-period blitz against goalie Kelly Hrudey, agreed with Greschner.

"But by no means have we turned it around," he added of the Rangers, who are fourth in the Patrick Division, only three points ahead of the Devils. "But to beat two good hockey teams with good efforts is uplifting.

"We shouldn't be in this position but we are going to start to do something about it."

With the Rangers on top 7-2 and 35 seconds remaining in the second period, a full-scale brawl erupted. Bryan Trottier of the Islanders grabbed Steve Patrick in a head lock and slammed him into the boards, then several fights broke out.

Clark Gillies belted rookie Tomas Sandstrom and Rangers defenseman Steve Richmond came to the aid of his Swedish teammate. When goalie John Vanbiesbrouck slugged Duane Sutter, Islanders goalie Kelly Hrudey raced in from center ice and slammed into Vanbiesbrouck.

Referee Andy Van Hellemond handed out 113 minutes in penalties and both goalies were ejected, along with Gillies, Richmond, Sutter and James Patrick of the Rangers.

"I had to (fight)," said Hrudey. "I don't know why he (Vanbisebrouck) did what he did. That was the only thing I could do.

"Vanbiesbrouck tells me he is not a fighter but why did he do what he did? I feel better staying at center ice, then I have only half the ice to go to get in."

Vanbiesbrouck claimed Sutter had sucker-punched Sandstrom.

"Sutter deserved what he got from me," said the rookie netminder. "He deserves what he gets from everyone. I don't think he fights his own battles. He expects Gillies to come in.

"I had to retaliate for Sutter hitting Tomas again. I thought I had to sacrifice myself at that time of the game for the good of the team."

Nordiques 4, Maple Leafs 3

Alain Lemieux's goal with only 93 seconds to go gave Quebec the victory and sent Minnesota to its sixth loss — with one tie — in the last seven games. The North Stars fell two points behind third-place Detroit in the Norris Division.

Maple Leafs 5, Whalers 4

Dan Daoust's second goal of the game, 1:30 into overtime, lifted the Leafs. Daoust converted his own rebound. Peter Ihnacak also scored twice for visiting Toronto. Ken Wregget stopped 17 shots in the third period.

Black Hawks 4, Red Wings 4

Denis Savard had two goals, including the tying tally in the third period. Detroit was led by Ron Duguay with three goals and an assist, giving him seven career hat tricks.

Devils 2, Jets 2

New Jersey jumped ahead 2-0 on goals by Joe Cirella and Jan Ludvig. But the Jets rallied with a 45-shot barrage to gain the tie. Laurie Boschman lifted the hosts within 2-1 on a second-period power play, then Brian Mullen tied it 65 seconds into the final period when he deflected a Dale Hawerchuk shot past goalie Hannu Kamppuri.

Lakers work Magic on Bird, Celtics

NBA

Associated Press

The Los Angeles Lakers and Boston Celtics are not scheduled to play again this season, so there was a special meaning to Larry Bird's post-game comments. "I hope we get the opportunity to play them again," said Bird, who had 33 points and 15 rebounds in the Celtics' 117-110 loss to the Lakers Sunday.

If the two teams are to meet again this season, it would have to be in the NBA Championship Series. Last year, Bird was the Most Valuable Player as the Celtics beat the Lakers in a seven-game series.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson was given a large measure of blame for that Los Angeles loss, but on Sunday he was at his best, scoring a season-high 37 points and collecting 13 assists as the Lakers won their seventh straight and split the two-game series with Boston.

"Me and Larry do a lot for our teams, but it's not a personal battle," Johnson said. "A lot of people say I can't do this or I can't do that, but today I just went out and showed what I can do and had fun."

Michael Cooper's basket with 2:12 left broke a 103-103 tie and started a run of nine straight points by the Lakers. James Worthy, who had 24 points, had a three-point play with 1:30 to go for a five-point lead and Johnson made four straight free throws in the final minute to make it 112-103.

Warriors 125, Bullets 121

Purvis Short scored 46 points and Golden State won for only the 12th time in 53 outings by beating Washington in double overtime.

Warriors guard Lester Conner scored the first four points of the second overtime, and the Bullets never caught up.

Bucks 125, Bulls 105

Sidney Moncrief scored 21 points and Terry Cummings 20 in Milwaukee's rout of Chicago.

Suns 115, Pacers 97

Alvan Adams scored 23 points and Phoenix took control of a close game with an 18-9 streak against Indiana in the last 7½ minutes of the first half.

Trail Blazers 115, Kings 96

Rookie Sam Bowie scored 21 points and keyed a second-quarter spurt that lifted Portland past Kansas City.

The Blazers, who have won five consecutive games, trailed 31-25 after the first quarter. But Bowie scored seven points and blocked two shots as Portland outscored the Kings 29-19 in the second period for a 54-50 halftime margin.

Hawks 91, Clippers 90

Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins had 36 points and scored the game-winning basket on a twisting layup with three seconds remaining.

Bud Black signs contract

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Lefthander Bud Black, Kansas City's top winner in 1984, has signed a two-year contract with the Royals, avoiding today's scheduled arbitration hearing.

Although terms of the contract were not released, it is believed Black, 17-12 last season with a 3.12 earned run average, could earn up to $1.2 million in the next two seasons if he reaches all the incentives included in the deal.

Black, 27, becomes the fourth-highest paid pitcher on the club, behind Dennis Leonard and Dan Quisenberry ($800,000 apiece annually) and Larry Gura ($650,000).

General Manager John Schuerholz said Saturday the Royals were hedging against salary inflation by signing Black to a two-year pact.

Debbie Mueller finished 2½ minutes ahead of Eefje Van Wissen to win the Tokyo women's championship in the 30-kilometer (18.6-mile) Ome Marathon — a race with 11,121 runners...

AUTO RACING— Ari Vatanen captured his fifth consecutive world championship rally Sunday, leading from start to finish to win the 35th Swedish Winter Rally in a Peugeot 205 Turbo. The Finn never really was challenged during the three-day rally through snowy roads in west Sweden. He finished 1 minute, 49 seconds ahead of Sweden's defending world rally champion Stig Blomqvist in an Audi Quattro...

GOLF—Houston won its second straight Crown Colony tournament at Lufkin Sunday with a final round 360, finishing 11 strokes in front of Oklahoma State. The undefeated Cougars improved their record to 152-0 in tournament play. Scott Verplank, Oklahoma State, was medalist with 139.

BOXING—Colin Jones, stopped in the fourth by WBA champion Donald Curry, wants another title fight. A severely gashed nose ended Jones' third attempt at winning the world title. After the Curry fight, Jones' manager, Eddie Thomas, wanted the 25-year-old Welshman to retire. But Jones said, "I believe it would be ridiculous to retire now and then in a couple of years be itchy for a return.I might as well get it out of my system now and when I finish, call it a day for good.I've had three tries and without a doubt I believe there's another bid left in me."...

SKIING—Sweden edged Switzerland to win a World Cup men's cross-country relay at Sofia, Bulgaria. The Swedish team of Jan Ottoson, Thomas Wasberg, Erik Oestlund and Gunde Swan covered the 40 kilometers in 1 hour, 39 minutes and 42.9 seconds...

Hey, Dad..er...Skipper

Dale Berra faces dilemma

By DAVE ANDERSON
N.Y. Times News Service

Ever since the Yankees acquired Dale Berra as a Christmas present for Yogi Berra, the 28-year-old third baseman has been searching his soul for the answer to the toughest question of all — how should he refer to his father, the manager, in the dugout? Should he call him Skip, as in Skipper, the way most baseball managers are addressed by their players? Or should he call him Dad, the way most fathers are addressed by their sons. And after several wrenching weeks of reflection, the son, according to his mother, Carmen, has arrived at a decision.

"Dale told me, 'I guess I'll go ahead and call him Dad,'" the mother says. "'It'd be tough to go to Skip now.'"

As the Yankees approach the start of spring training, at least that has been settled, as all of baseball's problems usually are when Valentine cards are in the mail. Dave Winfield, for example, has spoken lately of wanting to "bury the hatchet" with George Steinbrenner, not in him as in the past. And the Yankees' principal owner speaks tenderly of Rickey Henderson, as he will until the first time the new centerfielder gets thrown out trying to steal.

"But really," Carmen Berra says, "I don't see any problems with Yogi and Dale, knowing the two of them as I do. If there are any problems, it'll be worked out. Dale doesn't expect preferential treatment, and knowing his father, he won't get it. Yogi's too professional to do that. Dale is too professional, too."

In his eight seasons with the Pittsburgh Pirates as a right-handed batter, Dale Berra had a .238 batting average. But in a sense, he has been a professional for 20 years. He remembers going to spring training with his father in 1965 when Yogi joined the Mets as a coach after having been dismissed from his original term as Yankee manager even though his team won the 1964 pennant before losing the World Series to the St. Louis Cardinals in seven games. At the Mets' workouts, Dale would shag fly balls in the outfield during batting practice.

"I was catching major league fly balls when I was 8 years old," he recalls proudly. "And when I got a little older, Eddie Yost, the Mets' coach, would hit me ground balls."

LATER ON, when Yogi was the Mets' manager, he occasionally took Dale on a road trip. During the games, Dale would sit in a corner of the dugout. Afterward, he often would ask his father to explain the reasoning behind his strategy.

"One time," Dale was saying recently, "I remember asking him why he didn't pinch-hit for Jerry Koosman?"

"Yeah, I remember that game," Yogi said, brightening. "I think we were in L.A. or Frisco, maybe San Diego."

"The Mets were down a run, they had a man on first with one out and he let Koosman hit. I couldn't understand that."

"What inning was it?" Yogi asked.

"The eighth, I think," Dale said.

"No, it couldn't have been the eighth," Yogi said. "One run down, I wouldn't have let a pitcher hit in the eighth, not one run down. It must have been the sixth, or the fifth."

"No, no, it was the eighth," Dale said, "I remember you told me later that Koosman was a good bunter, 'I wanted him to bunt.'"

THEY WERE both laughing now, each a little unsure of the actual situation that existed that day, but can't happen this season. In the American League, pitchers don't bat. But their family debate is what baseball is all about. By its nature, it creates debates, as it surely will this season between the Yankee manager and his son, the third baseman.

"Debates," the mother says. "Of course, we have debates. We're always talking baseball around the house."

Dale has been married for nearly three months, to the former Leigh O'Grady, but they live only a few minutes from his parents' home in Montclair, N.J., only a short drive from Yogi Berra's Hall of Fame Racquetball Club in Fairfield, where the third baseman works out almost every day. Through his years as a Yankee coach and as their manager last season, Yogi usually was limited to checking the Pirates' box scores to see how Dale did. But the mother attended many of Dale's games.

"I'd fly to Pittsburgh sometimes, and I'd usually drive to Philadelphia when they played there," she says. "When they played the Mets at Shea, I never missed a game. Dale's a very solid player. He's better than his record shows. I always felt better when I watched him play than when I looked at the box scores."

During the years when Dale was playing high school and sandlot baseball, Yogi saw him play only occasionally while trying to remain incognito. He would park his car out beyond the left-field foul line and watch the game from there. But in the late summer of 1975, after Yogi was dismissed as the Mets' manager, he and Carmen drove around the New York-Penn League where Dale was a 19-year-old rookie third baseman at Niagara Falls.

"What did you do," Yogi was asked later, "after the Mets fired you?"

"We just got in the car and took a trip," he is supposed to have replied. "I just wanted to get away from baseball."

"But where did you go?"

"Cooperstown," he said.

WASHBURN, who remains in school and on scholarship, was dropped from the squad by Valvano after the arrest. The school is leaving it up to Valvano to decide if Washburn can return, which seems like an abdication of responsibility by the chancellor.

The most likely scenario for "Coach V:"

The counselor indicates Washburn needs some immediate goals — he passed all four of his courses last semester — and satisfying probation. Valvano reinstates Washburn "for the good of the kid" a few days before the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

A few teachers at North Carolina State seem to have misgivings about the Washburn affair, but Berry says other people think Washburn "has been unduly penalized. His privacy has been invaded. He's been made to seem like he's some kind of pariah. And, in fact, he's a conventional athlete."

Asked if Chancellor Bruce Poulton and other school officials are re-evaluating the role of big-time sports at State, Berry says: "I think the public expects a school to be competitive. There is a beneficial aspect to it — interest in the institution that would not be there otherwise.

"The history of American sports is tied in with education," he adds. "Who can forget that Amos Alonzo Stagg helped give an identity to the University of Chicago, one of the great institutions in our country?"

The University of Chicago long ago divested itself of big-time sports, but somehow remains one of the finest schools in the country. Berry also defends big-time sports for helping to pay for all other sports, male and female.

One State teacher said: "Every coach in the ACC knows they cannot win the conference championship without recruiting people who are incapable of graduating from a four-year college."

But Berry counters: "The classic myth of the four-year degree is just that. Only 26 percent of incoming freshmen earn degrees within four years here. I know plenty of solid citizens who went to college but did not get their degree."

He says North Carolina State's goal for Washburn "is to get his life in perspective. Since the age of 12, 13, 14, he's been told he's the greatest."

MANCINI

The victory earned Bramble, an unorthodox native of the Virgin Islands, $515,000 but more importantly put him into position for potentially lucrative fights against unbeaten Hector "Macho" Camacho or Aaron Pryor. If he wants to remain the WBA champion, however, he must first face top contender Tyrone Crawley in a mandatory title defense within 90 days, a fight neither Bramble nor his manager, Lou Duva, want.

"He's on a roll now, why shouldn't he be able to be in spectacular fights?" asked Duva. "That fight (against Crawley) is a dud."

Two Olympic medalists also appeared on Saturday's card and both came away with victories.

Virgil Hill of Grand Forks, N.D., who won a silver medal at 165 pounds, needed six rounds to take a decision over David Vedder of San Jose, Calif., while the 119-pound gold medalist, Maurizio Stecca of Italy also went six rounds in taking a decision over Kid Castillo of Los Angeles. Stecca's brother, Loris, a former 122-pound pro champion, also won, scoring a third round knockout over Tony Cisneros of Phoenix, Ariz.

Learning opportunity

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

At Taylor Child Care Center, Pam McDonald teeter-totters with preschoolers in the playroom. Ms. McDonald is among 2,400 students participating in the Midland Independent School District's Vocational Education Program.

Educators, business leaders and students agree that the concept benefits the entire community: Schools and businesses working together to provide learning opportunities for students.

Midland is no exception.

According to Dr. Charles P. Thompson, coordinator of vocational education for the Midland Independent School District, the educational excellence issue has led to a recognition by business leaders and educators that the quality of public schools largely determines the work-readiness and productivity of the local labor force.

With that in mind, MISD's vocational program is forging ahead, expanding in different directions to allow students onhands experience in the business world.

The program has emerged as an important cog in the quest for educational excellence in Midland, said Thompson.

"In order for the public schools to succeed, they need the support of the business sector as well as parents and the community," he noted.

Who are the program's participants?

The lengthy roster includes students like Daniel Carter, Lana Tompkins, Nellie Garcia, Helen Shaw, Pam McDonald as well as 2,300 other high school youth. And the list of local employers is almost as long as that of the employees.

Dr. Mark Miller, veterinarian at the Animal Clinic and Hospital, 3537 Andrews Highway, said of the program: "It can help a youngster to determine his course of study or what his future is going to be. If he (the student) can get firsthand experience, he may be able to decide whether he likes it (the profession) or not."

Carter, a Midland High School senior, substantiated Miller's statement.

"Veterinary medicine has always been kind of an interest to me, but I really didn't know if I would like it until I got into it. It's the only way you can really know," he said of his part-time job at the clinic.

Miss Garcia, a part-time nurses' aide at West Wind Care Center, 2000 N. Main St., said she, too, decided on a chosen vocation based on the experience she received through the program.

But a tremendous amount of responsibility also is associated with holding down a job, the Lee High School senior said. "I've got to be responsible for the patient's total care. I know that I have to be here because they depend on me."

Cindy Hilton, co-owner of A.A. Valentino's Florist, 164 San Miguel Square, explained from a business owner's standpoint that the program provides "reliable and inexpensive labor" in cases where the needs of a business do not require an additional full-time employee.

"The day-to-day operation of this business does not indicate the need for another full-time employee. "Lana (Tompkins) is capable of doing a lot of busy work that we'd have to do ourselves. Sometimes we forget she's only 16 years old," she said.

Although Midland High School seniors Helen Shaw and Pam McDonald admit they enjoy their work as part-time teacher aides at the Taylor Park Child Care Center, 1321 Goode St., both enrolled in the program for different reasons.

DEATHS

Rudy R. Elizondo

Elizondo

Rudy R. Elizondo, 54, of Midland, died Saturday afternoon in a Midland hospital.

Services will be at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday at the Wilshire Park Baptist Church with the Rev. Chris Osborne, pastor, officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Elizondo was born June 6, 1930, in San Miguel, Mexico, and was reared in McAllen. He served in the Marine Corps in Korea. Following his discharge, he moved to Odessa where he lived until moving to Midland in 1956. He married Shirley Hartigan July 2, 1958, in Odessa. Elizondo was employed by Dunlap's Department Store for 18 years. At the time of his death he was serving as assistant manager. He was a Catholic.

Survivors include his wife; three daughters, Leigh Ann Elizondo of Denton, Jo Beth Boyer of Lubbock and Vicki Lynn Burfield of Midland; five sisters, Emma Pena and Olga Hinojosa, both of McAllen, Noemi Gonzales of Reynosa, Mexico, Elida Guerra and Elsa Aston, both of San Antonio; and a granddaughter.

Henry B. Autrey

Henry B. Autrey, 54, of Midland, died Saturday in a Midland hospital.

Graveside services will be at 11 a.m. Tuesday at Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Bill Simpson, pastor of Tall City Baptist Church, officiating. Arrangements are being handled by Ellis Funeral Home.

Autrey was born May 20, 1930, in Mineral Wells where he was reared. He moved to Midland in 1950 following four years of service in the Air Force. He was employed as a truck driver. He married Wyvonne Thompson July 4, 1961, in Odessa. He owned and operated Triangle Grocery and Bait Store at Lake Spence for five years.

Autrey was a member of Wilshire Park Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife; a son, David R. Autrey of Midland; a daughter, Paula Autrey of Midland; and two grandchildren.

Francis Marion Bolt

BIG SPRING — Francis Marion Bolt, 78, of Big Spring, died Saturday in a Lubbock hospital.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday in Nalley-Pickle and Welch Rosewood Chapel in Big Spring with burial in Trinity Memorial Park.

Mrs. Bolt was a homemaker, a member of the Church of Christ and had been a resident of Big Spring for 30 years.

Carl H. Tippie

BIG SPRING — Carl H. Tippie, 78, of Big Spring, died Sunday morning in Big Spring.

Graveside services will be at 11 a.m. Tuesday in Trinity Memorial Park under the direction of Nalley-Pickle and Welch Funeral Home.

Tippie had been an oil field worker and had been employed in the Maintenance Department of Forsan Schools. He had been a resident of Big Spring since 1930 and was a member of the East Fourth Street Baptist Church.

Irma Hughes

Irma Hughes, 84, of Midland, died Saturday night in an Odessa hospital.

Services were to be at 1:30 p.m. today in the Ellis chapel with the Rev. J.B. Stewart officiating. Burial was to follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Hughes was born Jan. 2, 1901, in Upshur County. She married John H. Hughes Aug. 2, 1918, in Upshur County. They moved to Midland in 1937 where she and her husband operated the Hughes Jewelry Company. He died in 1956. Mrs. Hughes continued to operate the jewelry store until her retirement in 1970.

She was a member of First United Methodist Church and the Norman Reed Chapter of the Order of Eastern Star as a Beauceant.

Survivors include a daughter, Maxine Hawk of Midland; two granddaughters and two great-grandsons.

Pallbearers were to be Frank Hawk, Michael Moran, Dave Holmes and Steve Rossler.

Texas cities face huge insurance rate hike

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Texas cities will have to pay up to 800 percent more for municipal insurance — if they can even get it — in the wake of insurance-industry losses and increasing risks, insurance officials say.

But as Texas cities scramble to meet the costs, cities in other states are panicking, Texas Municipal League Director Bill Martin said Sunday.

"I get several calls a day from cities in other states that are in sheer hysteria, wanting to know how we're handling it," Martin said. "The cute euphemism that's being is used is 'non-renewal.' They can't find anything. They're naked, bare, without coverage."

Besides the rate increases spurred by last year's losses and declining profits in the municipal risk business, some companies have even canceled their contracts with cities.

CIGNA insurance company, for instance, "non-renewed" its coverage with Grand Prairie in October. St. Paul pulled out from Port Arthur and the city's premiums doubled in one year. Irving's premiums tripled.

San Angelo stayed with the Texas Municipal League pool insurance but is paying $169,180 more than budgeted for liability and property insurance, city officials say.

Because municipal risk is traditionally considered bad business, some companies, like Aetna, are withdrawing completely. Others, such as St. Paul, will bid on property, but not liability insurance.

Cities no longer enjoy governmental immunity. If an attorney is aggressive and frames a case properly, it can be taken to federal court where almost any grievance can result in damage claims under the 1983 Civil Rights Act, Martin said.

Texas has not felt the impact as much as other states because the insurance industry considers it to have a more stable local-government market, Martin said.

"The view of Texas cities is they are very well managed," Martin said. "They find business-like solutions to problems. And the legal environment is not as volatile as, say, California. Yet."

City officials and insurance consultants said they saw the first indication in mid-1984, but were not concerned because no one expected a drastic change, said Robert Lazarus of Robert W. Lazarus & Associates Inc., a risk management and insurance counseling service in Plano.

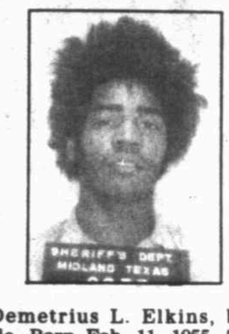

"During the last quarter of 1984, things just went haywire, in public and private coverage," Lazarus said. "In December, when we saw the proposals, it was just unbelievable what they were coming in with. Everyone was shocked."

In a few extreme cases, cities have had 500 percent to 800 percent increases. The trend is for 50 to 150 percent increases, Lazarus said.

Korean, Vietnamese gangs draw women into prostitution

HOUSTON (AP) — Some Korean criminals have joined forces with Vietnamese gang members here to draw young Korean women into working as prostitutes, a Houston vice officer says.

At any one time, 200 to 300 Korean women are working as prostitutes in Houston, and some are "virtually bought and sold" among prostitution houses, Houston police Detective Neal Leonard said.

Several Korean madams who operate houses of prostitution in Houston's Montrose area — where the businesses often are billed as nude modeling studios — hire Vietnamese gang members to do their "heavy work" in dealing with prostitutes, Leonard said.

Some Korean women come to the United States after "paper" marriages are arranged with U.S. servicemen they've never met, Leonard said. The serviceman is paid a fee for becoming a husband and the Korean bride gets a ticket to the United States.

Seasoned prostitutes regularly visit military locations such as Killeen, near Fort Hood, to "brainwash" young Korean military wives into leaving their husbands for "well-paying jobs," Leonard said.

CRMWD to launch 15th year of cloud seeding

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — The Colorado River Municipal Water District will launch its 15th year of cloud seeding in April.

For the past 15 years, the Texas Department of Water Resources has cooperated in the project, and the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation also assisted for a time. Budget cuts forced out the U.S. agency and now threatens to do the same to the state, according to a news release from CRMWD.

But the district is continuing on the theory the work has possibilities for increasing precipitation in the drainage areas of its two reservoirs — Lakes J.B. Thomas and E.V. Spence.

Ray Jones, meteorologist for CRMWD, is hopeful that 1985 will be better than the past two years, which were back-to-back droughts. The best that can be said for operations last year is that in the target area things weren't as bad as control counties outside the target. During 1984, stations within the target area averaged 9.08 inches of rainfall from May through September. Outside the area the average was 8.8 inches.

The past year was an anomaly — more rainfall to the west and northwest than in the target and downwind counties. The target area lies between Big Spring and Roscoe, and O'Donnell and Sterling City. Statistically, downwind counties benefit almost as much as the target because seeded clouds drift in that direction.

No hard scientific conclusions have been established in all the years the district has been in weather modification, according to the news release, but there are statistical data which strongly suggest the project has helped increase rainfall. For instance, in the seeded years (1971-83) in which crop data is available, the departure from the normal in cotton yields in the target area has been 49 percent and in the downwind counties 45 percent. In the upwind counties the departure of increase was 6 percent.

In seven of the last 13 seeded years, cotton yields in pounds per acre for the seeded counties have surpassed cotton yields for downwind and upwind counties.

An analysis of precipitation shows a 31 percent departure from normal on the positive side for the seeded stations in the target area compared to a plus-8 departure from normal for the unseeded stations. Average rainfall for May-September for seeded stations was 13.85 inches over the project's life, while that for unseeded stations was 12.19 inches. This difference, particularly in critical portions of the growing season, can have a considerable effect on crop yields.

Although CRMWD's main concern is with increasing inflows into the two reservoirs, crop yields may reflect a correlated volume of run-off.

Midland men arrested in burglary of house

From Staff Reports

Two Midland men were arrested early Sunday morning in connection with a burglary of a house at 1808 E. Oak.

According to reports, the description of a 1977 Pontiac Grand Prix seen leaving the scene of a reported burglary was radioed to police shortly after 11 a.m. Sunday. The men, ages 49 and 43, were arrested at the intersection of Fairgrounds Road and Kentucky Avenue at 11:45 a.m. by police who spotted the car.

The men are expected to be arraigned today.

An $800 heater unit and a $200 water heater were reported stolen from the house, owned by the FDIC. The items were recovered from the men's car, according to police.

A clerk in the fine jewelry department run by Zales Corp. at Dillard's, 4511 N. Midkiff Road, reported the theft of $11,500 in jewelry Saturday night.

Becky Faught, 3600 N. Loop 250 No. 1033, told police gold cuff links, tie tacks and rings were taken from a display case between 8:40 p.m. and 8:55 p.m. Saturday. There were no witnesses to the incident.

Ms. Faught told police a similar incident occurred last month. According to reports, the theft of more than $11,000 worth of rings was reported by employees of Zales Corp. Jan. 18.

A Ford half-ton pickup was reported stolen from the driveway of the Pat Stanley residence, 900 W. Indiana. The pickup, valued at $4,000, was unlocked and reports said a set of keys was placed under the floor mat or in a pocket in the upholstery.

Jim Hoisager reported a burglary of two cars at the Honda of Midland used car lot, 4040 W. Wall. Entry into the vehicles, parked on the east side of the building, was gained by breaking out windows. A $600 AM/FM cassette stereo was stolen and damage to the windows, dash and wiring was placed at $1,750.

Max Cuellar, 208 E. Washington, reported a burglary of a vacant house he owns at 208 W. Washington. According to reports, the house was entered between 11 a.m. Feb. 10 and 11 a.m. Sunday by someone who forced open a door. A $250 50-gallon water heater and $150 wash basin with a cabinet were taken. Damage to several water heater pipes was placed at $40.

Sandra Painter, 3609 Caldera No. 172, reported to police the burglary of her 1979 Chevrolet Camaro, while it was parked in the apartment complex lot between 7 a.m. Saturday and 7 p.m. Sunday. A $120 pair of prescription glasses, $55 pair of sunglasses and $30 worth of cassettes were taken. The car stereo sustained $75 worth of damage, reports said.

Bogus delivery nets drug suspects

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Sometimes you can't even trust someone sending a bouquet on St. Valentine's Day.

Undercover police narcotics officers, trying to figure a way to get past the iron-barred front door of a San Antonio home to make a drug arrest, borrowed a delivery van from a florist's shop and sent a "delivery man" to the door with a $15 bouquet of red carnations.

When he rang the doorbell and said he was delivering a Valentine's Day bouquet, the operation went just as planned. Right away, a man opened the door.

"He fell for it," one of the agents, who asked not to be identified, said.

Suspect sought in burglaries

From Staff Reports

A suspect believed to have been responsible for the Friday night burglary of a business and the attempted burglaries of two buildings nearby is being sought by members of the Midland County Sheriff's Office.

According to reports, the burglary at CTS Truss Co. on Highway 80 near Water Wonderland occurred between 5:15 p.m. Friday and 9:45 a.m. Saturday. A stereo and check protector, valued at about $400, were reported missing. Entry to that building was gained through an open door.

Footprints at the scene match those found at Gaffey Inc., a business nearby. According to reports, a door was damaged but entry was not gained.

J. Hobbs, Co. reported the same type of incident when employees discovered a damaged door Saturday morning. Entry was not gained.

In other complaints filed with the sheriff's office, $6,000 worth of drill bits were reported stolen from the Johns Drilling Co. yard, on Highway 80 near Midland Regional Air Terminal. Reports said a fence was cut to gain entry to the yard.

Drug probe results in two arrests

From Staff Reports

A joint investigation by narcotics officers in Midland and Odessa who were accompanied by state narcotics officers Saturday resulted in the arrest of two Midlanders and the confiscation of cocaine with a street value of $70,000.

Paul David Barrows, 25, and Brenda Sue Price, 19, both of Route 9, Box 342, Space 81, were arrested after narcotics officers conducted a probable cause search.

Officers seized three ounces of a substance believed to be cocaine during the search, according to Midland police.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine arraigned the couple Saturday. Barrows remained in Midland County Jail this morning on a $100,000 bond and Ms. Price remained in jail on a $50,000 bond.

Houstonians recall flight made 75 years ago today

HOUSTON (AP) — Seventy-five years ago today, a crowd of people stood in a field near South Houston and peered upward as a French aviator made the first recorded manned flight over Texas.

The flier, Louis Paulhan, was paid $20,000 for soaring over the small community just southeast of Houston. The flight was co-sponsored by The Houston Post and the Western Land Co., which developed South Houston and was promoting a forerunner of an industrial park in the area. Each put up half the money.

Paulhan circled once over the crowd before smoothly landing his French-built Farman bi-plane.

At the time, South Houston was a recently incorporated hamlet of a couple hundred residents, and the city owned one implement — a grader that was used to level off the field for Paulhan's plane, Meador said.

The flight was six years after the Wright Brothers flew their plane in Kitty Hawk, N.C., and almost a decade before the meager beginnings of commercial aviation in Houston.

One of the spectators was W.W. Walker Sr., who later would become a pioneer aviator and probably the first native Houstonian to fly.

Walker clutched his Eastman folding camera in hopes of catching a shot of Paulhan soaring overhead. His son, W.W. Walker Jr., an aviation buff and amateur historian, says it is almost certain Louis Paulhan was the first man to fly in Texas, since no records of earlier flights exist.

"I have heard over the years mention of others. But I don't think so, I just don't think so."

LEARNING

Ms. Shaw said, "I thought about it (enrolling) at the last minute, but I really didn't think I'd get in. I have a 2-year-old baby and I thought it might help.

"I have to look at these kids as my own. When I get home my baby is my total responsibility," she said.

Miss McDonald, on the other hand, explained, "When I graduate I want to go on to Dallas to become a model. I like working with children. It's taught me to be more independent. I don't want to be dependent upon my parents for the rest of my life."

Deputies pursue armed robber

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County sheriff's deputies this morning were in pursuit of a ski-masked armed robber who held up Wilson's Corner, an Odessa grocery store.

The robber, wearing a green ski mask and believed to have a beard, got away with between $180 and $200 and was headed south toward Crane on U.S. Highway 385 in a white-and-red 1977 Pontiac car.

Initial reports said the robber was blond and of stocky build.

No one was injured in the robbery, which was reported at 10:15 a.m., and no shots were fired, according to the Ector County Sheriff's Office.

The car used for the robber's getaway was found abandoned later this morning.

New parents find their babies wonderful, disruptive

By JANE FERRELL
Hearst News Service

"How to Stay Two When Baby Makes Three," looks innocuous enough, a slim paperback with a plain cover and no pictures. But its premise falls into the category of things-neither-my-mother-nor-anybody-else-ever-told-me. Having a baby can disrupt a couple's life as much as enhance it.

The authors of "How to Stay Two When Baby Makes Three" are Marsha Dorman, a social worker and mother of five, and Diane Klein, a nursery school and day care teacher and mother of three. They wrote the book because after they had children, they realized that no one told them how much time it took to care for an infant. No one told them their sex lives wouldn't really return to normal in six weeks. No one told them their husbands might get jealous of the attention the infant was receiving. No one told them having a baby would leave little time for being alone with their husbands.

"I really did not think the experience would in any way affect my relationship with my husband," says Klein. "I believed the myth that it would enhance my marital relationship."

WHEN HER HUSBAND became upset because he felt left out, when she thought he wasn't spending enough time taking care of their child, when the popular image of two happy adults standing arm in arm gazing at their happy sleeping child dissolved in the screams of a colicky baby who just wouldn't go to sleep and needed to be walked from 2 a.m. to 4 a.m., "I believed that something was wrong with me or the relationship."

She began to realize her situation was common, "that it was part of the adjustment" of becoming a parent, which takes six months to three years, the authors say.

Klein and Dorman, who have been friends for 15 years, decided to write about what happens to a couple's relationship after a baby is born. They interviewed 50 new parents and parents-to-be about their expectations and their problems; they talked with health professionals about how they counsel couples about their relationship and the place of a child in it.

Sex is one of the myths tackled in the book; it won't be the same as it was before the baby for a while, the authors warn. The first time couples have intercourse after delivery is very painful to many women. If a woman breast-feeds her baby, her nipples may become relatively desensitized. If the woman cares for the baby by herself, she may be too exhausted to want to have sex. And cuddling with an infant 18 hours a day may be more than enough closeness for a woman.

ANOTHER CONSIDERATION in a couple's sexual activity is that some men suddenly regard their wives as mothers, and confuse them with their own.

"Our interviews reveal that few couples are aware that they view motherhood as a process which transforms a sensual woman into a madonna. Madonnas are cherished and adored, but not touched or fondled," wrote Dorman and Klein.

Klein and Dorman propose a few exercises to get a husband and wife to think about how their backgrounds affected them growing up, and how their child may be affected. They also advise making a list of how much involvement they expect from their parents in their new role as grandparents, and asking the prospective grandparents to make lists of their expectations.

"When people try to live up to the myth of being a superparent, they get caught," says Dorman. "They might feel selfish for taking a day off or an evening to themselves. But there's no job you can do 24 hours a day without a break. Of course, we're not saying take time away at the expense of the baby. We're not advocating poor child care."

PEOPLE WHO THINK that being a parent means sacrificing everything might disagree with Klein and Dorman's emphasis on a couple's relationship. But their reasoning is as follows:

"Parenting is the most important job in our lives and we do it with the least preparation," says Klein. "If you're unhappy in what you're doing, you're not going to be good at it. You're going to begin to resent the child, your spouse, and hate yourself. A new baby's needs can be met without completely sacrificing your own needs."

Also, says Dorman, although a person can get a lot of satisfaction and love from caring for a baby, the parent still has adult needs that the baby can't meet. The parent must look to his/her mate, not the baby, to fulfill those needs.

SOME PEOPLE HAVE criticized "How to Stay Two When Baby Makes Three" as being overly focused on the negative parts of becoming a parent. Klein responds:

"Newborns aren't babies forever. We want people to see child-rearing as stages, instead of thinking each stage will be forever. At work, when you have a hard assignment that takes a lot of time, you know it's not going to be forever. With children, we lose that perspective."

Caring for baby full-time job

Hearst News Service

How much time does an infant take in a mother's day? All of it, say mothers who've gone through the experience.

"Nobody told me what it would be like," said one mother, who had her first child four months ago.

The following schedule was a fairly typical day with her daughter when she was one month old. (The mother prefers to remain anonymous; she doesn't want to let her friends know how depressed she was the first few weeks.)

The authors of "How to Stay Two When Baby Makes Three" emphasize that every baby is different, no schedule is the same.

— A.M.: 12:10: change diaper and feed baby; 1:05: back to bed; 2:40: change and feed baby; 3:30: back to bed; 5:45: change and feed baby; 6:55: back to bed; 8:30: bathe and dress baby; 8:45: feed baby; 9:45: eat breakfast; 10:00: change baby; 10:10: give baby bottle of water; 10:30: change baby; 10:45: feed baby; 11:30: baby naps, I nap.

Dr. Spock's 'baby bible' revised for 1980s lifestyle

Hearst News Service

Dr. Benjamin Spock, the world's most famous pediatrician, has updated his baby book — for the first time with the help of a collaborator — to include the latest in pediatric advice.

Spock, who has written column in Redbook magazine for more than 20 years, was joined by his new associate, Dr. Michael B. Rothenberg, for a question-and-answer interview in the March issue of the magazine and explained why "Baby and Child Care" has been revised for the fifth time.

"There's always new information coming out, especially in pediatrics," Spock said. "You could revise the book every year, but of course that's impractical and too expensive. So I've revised it about every 10 years."

Spock, 81, said he took on a collaborator because, if he follows the 10-year revision rule, he may not be around for the next one and "this was my last chance to play a part in future versions of the book."

Some of the new material involves cholesterol. Rothenberg, 58, a pediatrician and child psychiatrist on the faculty of the University of Washington School of Medicine and the staff of the Children's Orthopedic Hospital and Medical Center in Seattle, said even children should avoid excessive cholesterol intake.

"If your family has a history of heart problems," he said, "your child's cholesterol level can contribute very significantly to later hardening of the arteries and heart attacks."

He said the earlier children establish good eating habits — including restriction of salts, sugars and fats — the better.

Spock and Rothenberg recommend eggs not be introduced until a baby is 9 months to a year old. Not only are eggs high in cholesterol, but recent research indicates babies can't absorb the iron in eggs and egg yolks interfere with the baby's ability to get iron from other foods.

Even later on, they recommend a maximum of three yolks a week.

The pediatricians were asked about "junk foods" such as hot dogs, packaged lunch meats, potato chips and soda.

"My advice regarding those 'junk foods' is, Stay away!" Spock said. "Keep them out of the house. Don't let your children eat them and don't eat them yourself."

Rothenberg reassured mothers about fat babies, saying not to worry until the baby was 10 percent above normal weight.

"Babies, on the average, are heavier than they used to be in their first year of life," he said, "but you shouldn't worry about obesity until your own doctor consults his weight chart and tells you your baby is no longer in the 'normal' range."

Spock added that a fat baby doesn't mean a fat adult.

"A few years ago there was a theory going around that once a baby put on weight in infancy, he or she was stuck with thousands of fat cells that would stay around forever, begging for calories, dooming that child to fatness for life," he said.

"In the last two or three years several studies have totally disproved that theory."

Other changes in Spock's baby bible include not introducing solid foods until four to six months because recent studies indicate babies cannot digest solids earlier, and not introducing orange juice until 9 to 12 months to avoid allergic reactions.

Rothenberg told Redbook parents must do what they find comfortable for them, and said that Spock had written the most important words on child-raising on the first page of the first edition of "Baby and Child Care."

"Those words are still there in this edition," he said, "and I hope they will be there forever: 'Trust yourself. You know more than you think you do.'"

'Wanted' posters carry photos of missing children

By LARRY GREEN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

CHICAGO — They are America's new "wanted" posters: everyday items that carry the photographs not of the nation's notorious criminals but of its missing children.

And they are about to to become a fact of daily life across the United States.

The faces of missing children have quickly become a familiar sight on the sides of milk cartons distributed by more than 100 local dairies across the nation. Soon they will begin to appear on thousands of Chicago buses and subway trains.

And in California, 100 million grocery bags each month, or a quarter of all those distributed, will carry the faces of children who may be runaways or abduction victims or who have simply disappeared.

After that, similar pictures may arrive with monthly utility and charge-card bills. Posters of missing children could turn up in banks, at car washes, in shopping malls. In Kansas and Missouri, pictures of missing children are already being enclosed in some photo-processing envelopes. Cereal companies, a pasta manufacturer and an egg-carton maker are exploring the possibility of putting such pictures on their packages.

"Wanted posters never got the distribution that these pictures are getting," said Jay Howell, executive director of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, a non-profit clearinghouse for information, based in Washington, D.C. "I think we'll see a whole lot more. This is an issue that is ripe for technology and innovative solutions.

"We see (the posters) as an effective way to reunite young persons with their families," Cmdr. Joe P. Mayo, head of the Chicago Police Department's Youth Division, said.

Annually 1.5 million children are reported missing, according to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. An estimated 20,000 to 50,000 are victims of crimes, and up to 500,000 are taken from the parent who has custody by the one who does not. An additional 1 million are runaways, a spokesman for the center said.

So far, the new programs to find missing children have had only one success. Recently a Lancaster, Calif., teen-ager, Doria Paige Yarbrough, who had been missing since early November, saw a television report that showed her photo on an Alta-Dena Dairy milk carton and decided to return to her family.

The California Grocers Association announced that, starting in mid-March, it will cooperate with local law enforcement agencies to print photos of four missing children on the sides of grocery bags every month.

The national center's Howell said that supermarkets seem to be the most promising sites for publicizing missing children. He said that, in addition to printing pictures on food packages and bags, photos could be displayed in the supermarket.

In Chicago, 1 million riders daily on 3,000 buses and trains will see the pictures of four new missing children each month. "Please Help Us Find Our Children," the posters say over a Chicago police phone number.

Telephone listening service lends ear to latchkey kids

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — People who listen by phone to adults who are lonely, depressed and confused are starting to listen to latchkey kids, children who go home from school to an empty house wh.'e their parents finish their work or play day.

Contact-Dayton, a local franchise of an international telephone listening service, has begun publicizing the attentive ear it extends to youngsters. In this country, the agency has more than 100 centers, but only a handful offer the service for children, said Jeanette Parisi, director of education for the group. Children are encouraged to call if they are frightened, lonely, or need to hear a friendly voice.

"Calls will probably be shorter in duration for kids calling because they're lonely or scared. In some places they call it a warm line. We're kind of aiming it for latchkey kids," who are waiting for an adult to come home, she said.

Children's calls in other cities with contact centers varied from problems such as dropping a glass of milk or having a fight with a friend to coping with divorce, Mrs. Parisi said. The service is open to anyone within the local calling area, she added.

The Contact organizations began after an Australian minister decided there was a need for a suicide prevention crisis-type phone line, Mrs. Parisi said. "Over the years it s been used by a lot of people not in a life-or-death crisis, who need to . k to someone about the stresses i their lives," she said.

Carolyn Thomson, a volunteer in the program, says that in an increasingly impersonal society, sometimes an anonymous voice on a telephone can strike a responsive chord.

"Our society has become so complex, and neighborhoods are different. Everybody's working, working. People need to touch each other," Mrs. Thomson said.

"Usually the calls we get are from people who are lonely. We get some from people who have mental, emotional, health problems," she said. The volunteers have a list of agencies to offer callers who ask for referrals.

"We're trained to listen, because we basically feel people have the solution inside themselves, and they need to hear themselves. A creative listener can help them help themselves," Mrs. Thomson said.

The approximately 75 volunteers work 12 hours a month at phone lines which are open 14 hours a day most of the time and all night on Fridays. Volunteers at the local center field about 550 calls per month, about twice the number being handled a year ago. They get 50 hours of training over 16 weeks, where they learn some psychology.

"We are not there to solve the person's problem. We're there to help them solve it and stick with them while they're going through it," Mrs. Parisi said. "We try not to give advice, but sometimes in a crisis situation we have to."

The Contact organization is private, funded in part by churches, businesses and individual donations.

"We don't represent any one church," Mrs. Parisi said. "We have, I think, the greatest ecumenical scheme I've ever been involved in."

Volunteers awarded 'Thanks Badges'

DEAR ABBY

Husband's use of blanket gives wife chill

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The football season is over, but the score is not yet settled. Please tell me who made my husband look bad. (I'll call him Joe.)

Joe and I, both in our mid-40s, attended a football game. Knowing how cold it can get toward evening, I wore a warm coat and urged Joe to do likewise. He insisted he would not get cold and wore a light windbreaker. Fortunately, I took a blanket along — just in case. Sure enough, the game was barely started when Joe got cold, so I gave him the blanket.

Meanwhile a young woman in her mid-20s that we know only by sight sat down beside my husband. She was wearing only a sweatshirt and a pair of jeans, and kept commenting on how cold it was.

At halftime I went for coffee. When I returned, I found my husband and this young woman under the blanket! (They didn't even notice that I had returned.) After being ignored for about 15 minutes, I excused myself with a headache and went to the car.

I later learned that while I was gone, Joe's boss came by and mistook the young woman under the blanket for our married daughter, and when he learned she wasn't, he was startled.

Now Joe blames me for going to the car and making him look bad. He said his boss has been acting cool to him ever since.

Abby, I say if my husband looked bad under the blanket with a woman he hardly knew, with me gone, he would have looked bad with me there. What do you say? — NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: I say you made your point. Your husband was out of bounds; he's lucky you didn't kick him in the end zone.

DEAR ABBY: May I respond to "Seeing Red," whose husband together with his sisters gave their parents a portrait of "just themselves" for Christmas. All were grown and married with children, but no spouses or children were included in this portrait.

"Seeing Red" should see the light. Today, with divorce practically epidemic, married children are wise to give their parents a portrait of "just themselves" — sans spouses.

Divorces occur in the best of families, then subsequent marriages usually take place and stepchildren are added, but the immediate family never changes.

I speak from experience. We have four grown children. They have all been married and divorced. Three have since remarried.

I do not have one recent picture of all four children without their spouses, and I don't care to display pictures with ex-mates who are no longer members of this family. Some divorces are less bitter than others, but none are so painless that I would enjoy looking at their pictures.

I hope "Seeing Red" sees this. — SEEING REALITY

DEAR SEEING: I hope so too.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Firefighter's Wife," who was upset by the complaints she heard about the sirens and lights of the volunteer fire trucks. Her husband is a volunteer fireman and puts his life on the line for no pay.

I live in a very small town, and we also have a volunteer fire company. When the siren sounds, my children run to me and we hold each other and say a prayer for the firemen and for whoever it is who needs them. The siren is a time to reflect on those in need and those who may sacrifice their lives.

Not everyone in a community is ungrateful. She just ran into the "one bad apple." — GRATEFUL IN MILLSBORO, DEL.

Proceeds of the ball will benefit the League's community projects, including adult basic education, As Parents Grow Older, audio visual screening, cardiopulmonary resuscitation, Children's Dental Clinic, Directory of Community Services, Exploratory Experiences for the Gifted and Talented, Haley Library and History Center docent program, Hearthstone (emergency shelter), Hospice, Junior League Singers, Next-To-New Shop, Perinatal Clinic, Tape Lending Library and Young People's University.

Mrs. Robert B. Houser is Charity Ball chairman, with Mrs. Chris Scharbauer as decorations chairman and Mrs. Sam Bakke as assistant decorations chariman.

Experts say fathers now displaying more affection

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — In days not so old, fathers were distant, if not downright cold, to their sons. The prototypical father of the 1950s was after all his son's instructor in appropriate behavior for American men. And 30 years ago, it was inappropriate for American men, even fathers and sons, to kiss and embrace or exchange terms of endearment such as darling.

It still is inappropriate, apparently, although less so and among a slowly decreasing number of men.

"Fathers and sons are participants in a male culture that emphasizes a certain toughness, and this makes the expression of love between them difficult," said Zick Rubin, a professor of social psychology at Brandeis University. But Rubin said he has found a lot of young adult sons talking about their fathers' reserve and lack of tenderness, and of how they are trying to be different.

The existence of an emotional distance between fathers and sons is undeniable: witness repeated stories of young men whose fathers greet them with handshakes and maintain a stolid front.

"There was plenty of love between me and my dad," said Slaton L. White, a senior editor at Field and Stream magazine. "But at some point he stopped kissing me good night and started shaking hands. I took it then as a sign of my growing up. I see now that it was also a form of distancing — he still embraced my sisters." Then, too, White recalled, "While my father would tell his daughters about his youth, he told me nothing. Whatever I learned about him, I learned from my sisters."

Studies of fathers and infants tend to support the notion that men distinguish between sons and daughters in displays of affection or emotion; for example, they hold their 2-day-old baby boys aggressively, while they cuddle their 2-day-old baby girls.

Not that fathers are less loving. "There is consistent evidence that they do more with sons than with daughters, but that they do so in 'safe' contexts — especially in play — and in well-defined, socially acceptable ways," said Ross D. Parke, a psychology professor at the University of Illinois at Champagne-Urbana and author of "Fathers" (Harvard University Press, 1981).

Such behavior still leaves an emotional distance, however. Rubin suggested that, in part, this is because fathers still pass on messages of masculinity to sons, such as, "Stay cool and keep your reserve, especially with other men."

John Munder Ross, a psychoanalyst, teacher at Cornell University Medical College and co-editor of "Father and Child: Developmental and Clinical Perspectives" (Little, Brown, 1982), said research has found "dads still hellbent on proving they are men — mechanically minded, competent and, to an extent, stoic." They treat their sons accordingly.

Most of the experts interviewed mentioned fathers' fears of homosexuality, in themselves or their sons, as a factor. Almost all emphasized the children's role. "At some point boys will push their fathers away, protesting that kissing is for babies," said Ross.

"My own response is likely to be an adaptation to my son's growing up and to his sense of maturity," said Michael W. Stamm, a Manhattan lawyer. Stamm, who has a son who is 6 and a daughter who is 1½, says he hugs and kisses his son "a lot and without feeling self-conscious." However, he anticipates a day when his son will squirm when hugged and ask him to stop.

Boase honored

Lucille R. Boase, certified professional secretary, was awarded the Second Wind Hall of Fame Inc. Certificate by Irmalee N. Ingrham, CPS, during a recent meeting of Permian Chapter, Professional Secretaries International.

The award is presented to recognize senior persons who caught a "second wind" by serving others, and to encourage everone to take active part in community affairs. Recipients are of senior age, retired or not, and are involved in meeting others' needs.

Nationwide there are about 500 Second Wind Award winners. Workers for the National Board and for local chapters are volunteers who provide cost-free leadership. Records and photographs of winners are kept in the National Record Books of Achievement on exhibit in the public library of Henderson, N.C., founding city.

Second Wind Awards were begun to show gratitude expressed to seniors who are making life more pleasant for everyone.

Bells fill home

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — The dull black farm bell that once summoned toilers from the nearby fields stands mute in Stirling I. Frantz's yard in North Whitehall township.

Its muteness breaks when his children and grandchildren return to his Copley home for a visit.

The metallic device rests atop a post. The exterior door of the recreation room, formerly an old farm kitchen, frames the bell and post. It's an interesting view from an old-fashioned bar in the room.

The room reflects Frantz's conservative tastes in such things as barn board wood on the walls, pointed stone, antique lights, collectibles and social witticisms.

But the blackish bell beside the house hints ever so lightly of the bells within the dwelling.

The recreation room holds a few, mostly sleigh or harness bells. The bulk of the musical instruments, whose origin relates to Asia, are displayed in a large cabinet in the living room.

Hundreds of bells are in the cupboard. The bell collection includes brass, glass and china ones. Tones vary from the light tinkle of a dinner bell to the brassy resonance of a large, hand-held butcher bell.

All this from a man who admits to not being "musically inclined."

Frantz doesn't play the bells, "but I like good music. I like basic ideas and basic things," says Frantz, as he sits at the bar puffing a pipeful of aromatic tobacco.

Dollar prices fall

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell in Asian trading today but recouped some of the loss in Europe, in what dealers said was a thin market. Gold prices firmed slightly.

Dealers attributed the drop on the Asian markets to reports that the Bank of Japan had intervened on the open market to sell dollars.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing 256.55 yen from Friday's 259.20.

But when markets opened in Europe, the U.S. currency recovered. By midmorning it was mixed in comparison with last Friday's late rates and just under the record levels set Thursday, the climax of a two-week dollar surge.

In London, against the yen, the dollar at midmorning was back up to 258.30.

Against the British pound, the U.S. currency was virtually unchanged — $1.1029, compared with $1.1025 Friday.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was planning to fly to Washington Tuesday for talks with President Reagan and Treasury officials in which, her aides said, she would make a strong case for American moves to deflate the dollar.

On Friday, the head of her ruling Conservative Party, John Gummer, blamed the yawning U.S. budget deficit for soaking up the world's capital. "America is importing the savings of the rest of the world and exporting the inflation," he told American reporters.

Dollar trading today was thin, due to holidays in America, Hong Kong and West Germany's Rhineland, dealers reported.

Against other currencies at midmorning, one dollar bought:

–2.7838 Swiss francs, up from 2.7815

–10.0120 French francs, up from 10.0025

–3.6945 Dutch guilders, down from 3.7020

–2,020.00 Italian lire, up from 2,019.75

–1.33970 Canadian dollars, down from 1.34025

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $305.90 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $303.75. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $304.95.

In Zurich, the bid price was $305.00, up from $304.50 late Friday.

The Hong Kong gold market was closed for the Chinese New Year.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $6.33 a troy ounce, up from Friday's $6.27.

Bullock expects worst budget situation ever

DALLAS (AP) — If oil pumped riches into Texas' pockets in the 1970s, the 1980s may be the decade when Texas can't count on the crude.

Oil prices are slipping, and the decline could signal an end to an era when oil created one-fourth of Texas' economy and fattened state coffers with tax money.

"We've hit the crunch," said a University of Texas at Austin professor.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock told legislators this week to expect "the most terrible budget situation here in Texas that you could possibly imagine."

With a glut of oil on world spot markets and continued conservation by consumers, the per-barrel price of oil threatens to fall below $25, analysts say.

The slide has sent state legislators here and in other oil-producing states such as Oklahoma and Louisiana scrambling to cover budget shortfalls. In Texas, the shortfall is estimated at $1 billion, and there is talk of state college tuition hikes, legalized horse racing and other measures to cover the loss of oil revenue.

Businesses recovering from a crippling downturn in the industry two years ago are warily tightening their belts again.

And Texas residents — even if their only exposure to crude comes when they fill their car's gas tank with the refined variety — will eventually feel the effects of every dollar drop in the price of a barrel, experts say.

"We have a real serious problem — a state too dependent on oil and gas. Even if someone's job is not in the energy industry, their state and local tax bill will reflect the lower price" of oil, said Thomas Plaut, economic forecasting manager for the University of Texas at Austin's Bureau of Business Research.

A $1 drop in the average price of a barrel of Texas crude equals a $40 million loss in oil severance taxes paid to the state, the Texas comptroller's office estimates. In Louisiana, the figure is estimated at $40 million to $45 million, and in Oklahoma, $11 million for each $1 drop.

When other sales taxes and franchise taxes paid by the oil industry are included, that single dollar costs state coffers $70 million a year in Texas.

"Oil has a profound effect on the fortunes of Texas," tax information director John Moore said. "Throughout the '70s, we depended on oil because the price was going up. Warnings that we ought to diversify our tax structure fell on deaf ears.

"We were in the money," Moore explained.

Now legislators are juggling funds to try and cover the budget shortfall without resorting to a tax hike.

Only sales tax dollars exceed oil and natural gas taxes as a source of revenue in Texas. The three together make up 60 percent of money collected.

As recently as 1983, the energy industry was also responsible for 30 percent of the sales tax collected. Today, it provides 19 percent.

The state could lose more than $600 million over the next three years as severance tax revenues decline from as much as $1.3 billion in 1982 to $802 million by 1987, according to Legislative Budget Board figures.

Although many economists and industry insiders say the gradual decline in oil prices will not shut down companies and lay off thousands of Texas workers as low prices did in 1982-1983, wariness about the future has already hurt the industry and the government.

Lawmakers may double college tuition in Texas to help make up the difference, but the state would still be among the nation's lowest in tuition.

And in oil-rich areas of the state, producers say drilling, investment and morale are all down.

The rig count in the Permian Basin of West Texas dropped from 400 in November to 332 this week, said Ed Thompson of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Although some drop in numbers of rigs is common at the beginning of the year, the budget board predicts a three-year decline in active rigs and 100 million less barrels coming out of Texas in 1987.

The association has lost about 100 members over the last year, Thompson said.

"They've gone out of business, or couldn't afford the $100 membership fee — they were using it just to stay alive," he said.

The spot price for West Texas crude dropped from $29.80 per barrel in September to as low as $25.20 a barrel in early January, analysts said. The current selling price is about $27.50.

A Midland independent looking for investors on his drilling projects calls that "demoralizing."

"You have to work real hard to keep producing. We've been in this business all our lives," said John Wilson, who inherited the trade from his father.

"We take it as another kick in the head and go on."

Although Texas has diversified its economy with more banking, medicine, computer, high-tech manufacturing and other industries, the effort is not far enough along to counteract oil's slump, Plaut said.

"The economy on the (Interstate 35) corridor — Austin, San Antonio, Dallas, Fort Worth — looks all right, but everyplace else in the state is almost totally dependent on oil."

Union leaders blast Reagan's new budget

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — The AFL-CIO's executive council opens its annual winter meeting today with a visit from Walter F. Mondale and a blast at President Reagan's new budget.

Mondale is thanking AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, secretary-treasurer Thomas R. Donahue and the 33 union presidents who sit on the council for an early political endorsement from the general board of the 13.7 million-member labor federation.

The endorsement in October 1983, more than four months before the start of the primary campaign season, gave Mondale a big boost toward the Democratic nomination for president. But Reagan swept 49 states in the general election and AFL-CIO officials have been pressed to explain whether the Mondale endorsement was wise.

"I think we made the only decision that we could have made," William H. Wynn, president of the 1.3 million-member United Food and Commercial Workers union, said at a news conference Sunday.

"I think that we had the misfortune of coming up against a candidate that is extremely popular," he said. "I think that we made the right choice. I don't know how a labor person could have endorsed Ronald Reagan."

The council's opening session is focusing on Reagan's budget for fiscal 1986. Kirkland and several individual union presidents in the AFL-CIO already have condemned many of the proposals, especially the $31 billion increase in the defense budget.

Kirkland has called for a surtax to pay for any boost in defense, to avoid imposing cuts on programs for the poor.

Solid growth bolsters fourth quarter profits

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Solid economic growth continued to bolster corporate profits in the fourth quarter, but the rising dollar on currency markets took a toll on profits in industries that depend on exports or compete significantly with imports.

Over all, after-tax earnings probably were about the same in the fourth quarter as in the third quarter, after adjusting for seasonal differences. But they were still high by historical levels, not much below the record set in the first quarter of 1984 when the economy was roaring at an annual growth rate of more than 10 percent.

According to a compilation by The New York Times of fourth-quarter earnings reports from 247 companies, 129 corporations showed improved profits compared with the same period the previous year (including 13 that were in the red in the 1983 period), 72 showed a decline in profits, 3 were unchanged and 35 posted a loss. No comparison could be made for 8 companies.

"Profits were held down in the fourth quarter by price weakness," said Roger E. Brinner, chief economist of Data Resources Inc., a consulting company based in Lexington, Mass. He noted that part of the weakness in prices was the result of competition from a deluge of less expensive imports.

Brinner also noted that gains in productivity slowed as the economy left the recession further and further behind. That means that labor unit costs rise at almost the same rate as prices, curtailing profit growth.

Many industries felt the impact of the rising dollar. Exporters found that their goods did not sell very well because they were more expensive in relation to foreign currencies. And imports, made cheaper in dollar terms, flooded into the domestic market, replacing some American production and holding down prices and profits in many sectors.

The fourth quarter capped a record year for profits in America, but earnings were most pronounced in the first half of the year when economic growth was strongest. Profits declined from an annual rate of $150.6 billion in the first quarter, to $150.2 billion in the second quarter, to $141.7 billion in the third. Data Resources estimates that fourth-quarter profits were at an annual rate of $140.9 billion.

"There tends to be some slowing of profit growth as a recovery matures," said John J. McAuley, an economist with Chemical Bank. "You continue to get profit growth; it's just not so strong."

Average profit performance figures conceal enormous differences among companies, even within industry groups. For example, while Chrysler's profits rose more than fourfold over the fourth quarter of 1983, General Motors' declined by 32 percent, in part because of strikes late in the year.

The automotive sector has been shielded to some degree from import competition by "voluntary" controls on Japanese imports. Another sector that won protection by voluntary import restrictions is the steel industry, which had another difficult quarter.

PAS to meet Wednesday

The monthly meeting of the Petroleum Accountants Society of the Permian Basin is set for Wednesday, at Ranchland Hills Country Club in Midland.

The speaker for the 5:30 p.m. meeting will be Mr. Al. E. McClellan of Houston, who will discuss the new guidelines for revenue audits.

McClellan received his bachelor's degree in business administration and his master's in professional accounting from West Texas State University. He was certified a public accountant in May of 1974. He has worked for several oil companies, currently serving as secretary-treasurerof K-B Exploration Co.

McClellan is a member of the Council of Petroleum Accountants Societies (COPAS), the Texas Panhandle Petroleum Accountants Society, the Texas Society of CPAs and American Institute of CPAs and the National Oil & Gas Accounting School.

Tensions growing in coal strike

MATEWAN, W.Va. (AP) — A coal processing company threatened to fire striking workers who do not return to work today, but United Mine Workers members say they have no plans to end their bitter 4½-month walkout.

The back-to-work ultimatum was issued by James Slater, president of the Sprouse Creek Processing Co., a subsidiary of A.T. Massey Coal Co. "I'm offering everybody their job back," said Slater.

Slater, who said he planned to resume full-scale operations today with or without the strikers, published a newspaper advertisement last week telling the employees to return to work or face permanent replacement.

Miners call Sprouse Creek's plan to resume coal production "strike busting," and its non-union employees "scabs."

"Federal labor law prohibits a company from firing a striking worker," said Robert Phalen, an officer of UMW District 17, the union's largest political subdivision.

About 2,500 miners went on strike Oct. 1 against Massey and other coal companies in southern West Virginia, eastern Kentucky and western Pennsylvania. Massey says it needs concessions if its companies are to remain profitable, but UMW miners say the company's real goal is breaking the union.

The dispute has led to violent confrontations, with miners swinging baseball bats and axe handles at non-union workers hired by Massey to cross UMW picket lines.

So far, a handful of people — perhaps eight or 10 — have been injured in the incidents, although police say the injuries have been slight. Damage to non-union workers' cars and trucks has been more extensive, however, and two people have been arrested so far on property destruction and battery charges.

Doctors: Tools needed on planes

NEW YORK (AP) — You are in a chair reading a magazine, and suddenly you find yourself grabbing your chest and gasping for breath. You are having a heart attack. Someone has to help. But where does that help come from if the chair is 35,000 feet above the ground?

And how good will that help be?

When a medical emergency occurs aboard an airplane, getting the plane down quickly is the airline's first concern.

The policy is to get the passenger on the ground for treatment because traveling at speeds of 600 miles per hour makes for a tough diagnosis," said Tom Tripp, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association, an airline industry trade group. The pilot decides whether to divert the flight, sometimes conferring with a doctor among his passengers or on the ground.

Passengers who suffer heart attacks and other medical emergencies aboard commercial airline flights over the continental United States are no more than 30 minutes from an airport where emergency help is available, said Tripp.

But some industry observers and doctors say the stricken passenger may not get the help he needs in those critical 30 minutes because the medical kits the planes carry are inadequate.

The airlines oppose upgrading the kits; they say their crews would not be trained to use them and the drugs could be stolen.

Another potential problem with onboard medical kits is their use by unqualified passengers. For example, doctors such as psychiatrists or dermatologists might volunteer to help even though they were not competent in emergency medicine, said Dr. John McCann, medical director of Pan American World Airways.

"We have even had cases where individuals identify themselves as physicians, only to find out that was not the case," he said.

No government agency or airline industry group keeps track of medical emergencies aboard planes. The industry estimates that of the more than 300 million passengers who fly commercial planes each year, 50 to 100 people die in flight, and about 300 aircraft are diverted for medical emergencies.

Medical training for flight crews varies from airline to airline, but it is generally limited to basic first-aid care, spokesmen for several airlines said.

The Federal Aviation Administration requires each plane to carry a medical kit containing bandages, ammonia inhalants, splints, burn ointment and antiseptic swabs.

"Basically, you can find the same equipment in a Boy Scout camp," Dan Smith, manager of consumer affairs for the International Airline Passengers Association in Dallas, said about the medical kits.

"It really is a joke in terms of what the airline industry is now including in the emergency medical kits," said Craig Floyd, a legislative assistant to Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y.

Biaggi and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., last year introduced legislation to make airlines improve the kits. The legislation included a "good Samaritan" clause to protect the airlines and those who aided stricken passengers from subsequent lawsuits.

Airborne Medical Emergencies

Their proposed kit would contain stethoscopes, blood pressure cuffs, needles and syringes, suturing devices and a variety of medications for the most common emergencies, said Floyd.

Flight crews would not be required to use the kits, said Floyd. A survey by the passengers association said three out of four domestic flights have a physician among the passengers, and the kits would be for their use.

No action was taken on the Biaggi-Goldwater legislation, and although it will be reintroduced this year, Congress is unlikely to act on it because the FAA has proposed its own upgraded kit, said David Traynham, a staff member of the House subcommittee on aviation.

Fred Farrar, a spokesman for the FAA, said the proposal calls for "more in the way of drugs," but he wouldn't elaborate. The proposal is being reviewed and will not be released until it receives Reagan administration approval, he said.

The Aerospace Medical Association, a group of 3,900 doctors and nurses that includes airline medical directors, has recommended an improved medical kit containing "basic diagnostic tools" such as stethoscopes and blood pressure cuffs and some medications, said Dr. Rufus R. Hessberg, executive vice president of the group.

Last summer at a hearing on the issue by the House subcommittee on aviation, letters were introduced from doctors who volunteered to help but could do nothing without adequate equipment.

In one case, "a passenger with known diabetes and hypertension suddenly became comatose and cyanotic. The airplane had no stethoscope, no blood pressure cuff, and no emergency medications. Without these tools, I was helpless to treat, despite much experience as an emergency room physician."

The passenger survived, said Dr. Willa Drummond, a doctor with the University of Florida College of Medicine who wrote the account.

"That was one of the worst moments of my life, when I walked up there and saw it was just me and this guy and no help at all and no equipment," she said in a telephone interview. "I knew right off the bat, there were five or six things that could have been wrong with him, and five of them were serious and one was not serious, and fortunately, that's what we had."

In another case, "a diabetic had taken his morning insulin and did not eat lunch that day. The resulting low blood sugar produced a grand mal seizure. Three physicians (all qualified to treat the emergency) aboard were unable to provide definitive treatment because of the complete absence of any support equipment. Even cardiopulmonary resuscitation adjuncts were unavailable."

The passenger was in a semiconscious condition when he was taken from the plane by paramedics, said Dr. Michael Diamant, a Santa Barbara, Calif., anesthesiologist who wrote the account. What happened to the passenger is not known.

Diamant said two anesthesiologists and a cardiologist were on the plane, but "when you're faced with a situation like that and you have no ancillary help or support or equipment, there is not much to do except basic life support things that people are taught who are not physicians," he said.

The Los Angeles-to-Atlanta flight was diverted to Oklahoma City and was on the ground 15 minutes after the emergency occurred.

Emergencies come to airport paramedics

NEW YORK (AP) — At O'Hare International Airport in Chicago, ambulances are sent on emergency runs on an average of two or three times a day.

At Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport, paramedics last year responded to 1,572 calls and transported 618 people to hospitals.

At LaGuardia Airport in New York City, paramedics respond to an average of one or two cases a week where stricken passengers are taken from planes.

At the nation's busiest airports, paramedics don't have to rush to emergencies. The emergencies come to them.

"The biggest percentage of our runs are planes coming in with passengers who have problems while up in the air," said Kathy Minogue, a paramedic at O'Hare.

In December, one of three airport ambulances at O'Hare was dispatched for 42 medical emergencies, 31 cuts and fractures, one mentally disturbed person, four cardiac emergencies and 13 special duties, such as flights with landing problems. Medical emergencies include allergic reactions, high fevers and all problems not in the other categories.

At Hartsfield in Atlanta, two-thirds of emergencies involve airline passengers, said Deputy Fire Chief Thomas Brown. Of the 1,572 calls last year, 21 were heart attacks and six were respiratory arrests.

At the Los Angeles airport, paramedics are dispatched "a couple of times a day," said Vince Marzo, a spokesman for the Los Angeles Fire Department. He estimated that life-threatening emergencies occurred twice a month.

Although ambulances at the major airports are equipped with life-sustaining equipment, passengers at most airports must be taken to hospitals for treatment. Of the nation's 25 largest airports, 16 had no doctor on duty and six had no ambulances, according to testimony at a hearing on airline safety last year before the House Subcommittee on Aviation.

Spokesmen for the airline industry say a stricken passenger on a domestic flight is never more than a half hour from an airport where help is available. "You'll find that's not unfavorably comparable to some of the response times in some metropolitan areas," said Tom Tripp, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association.

But some industry observers say the landing time must be added to the time it takes an ambulance to get from the airport to a hospital.

Congress concerned about sanctuary movement

WASHINGTON (AP) — With nearly 200 churches around the country involved in the growing sanctuary movement for Central American refugees, the latter-day underground railroad is creating ripples in Congress.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service and the United Nations estimate there are 500,000 Central Americans living in the United States, many of whom are Salvadorans and Guatamalans who say they were tortured, attacked or marked for death in their strife-torn homelands.

The Reagan administration says most of them are here for economic rather than political reasons, and, contends they face no real threat at home, opposes a congressional proposal to halt deportations for two years.

The State Department says political violence is waning and contends the sanctuary movement is at least partially a political vehicle for protesting U.S. support of the Salvadoran and Guatemalan governments.

Some Democrats accuse the administration of being equally politically motivated in its assessments.

"The State Department and the administration often want to think things are better than they are for their own strategic position," said Rep. Bob Edgar, D-Pa. "But religious leaders and the U.N. refugee commission say there is a great deal of attack and targeting of serious government critics. The appearance of dissent can in fact put somebody on the death list."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., suggested the administration may be compromising refugee safety in an effort to buttress its assertion that the Central American situation has improved.

"I'm not about to see extra pressure brought on...refugees to send them back to prove there is no problem," said Leahy.

Laura Dietrich, deputy assistant secretary of state for human rights and humanitarian affairs, said in a recent interview that "we do not see a pattern of persecution in such numbers that would warrant" a blanket hold on deportations.

Citing reports of declines in civilian deaths and death squad killings last year, Ms. Dietrich said: "By anybody's estimation...things are getting better in El Salvador. It's not just the State Department painting a rosy picture."

She said a survey of 294 returned refugees last spring failed to turn up any problems, nor have monthly reports submitted by deportees to an international volunteer organization. "We would know by now if somehow people were being harmed on returning to El Salvador," she said.

Sanctuary movement has aided between 400 and 500 Salvadoran and Guatemalan refugees since it began in March 1982, according to the Chicago Religious Task Force, which coordinates much of the underground activity.

"Part of our function is to call attention to military intervention in their countries," said spokeswoman Darlene Gramigna. She said 185 churches were participating as of Feb. 11.

Alerted by news reports of illegal smuggling and harboring of refugees, the Immigration and Naturalization Service conducted a 10-month undercover investigation that culminated last month in indictments against 16 sanctuary workers and the arrest of more than 50 refugees. Trial was starting today in a separate case involving two sanctuary workers in Texas.

The arrests, indictments and local church involvement — ranging from Seattle, Phoenix and Houston to Philadelphia and St. Paul, Minn. — have made sanctuary a significant conern for many politicians.

NATION IN BRIEF

Girls expelled for taking vitamins wait for ruling

ELIZABETHTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Two of six girls expelled from Elizabethtown Area High School for taking harmless, legal vitamin pills are awaiting a judge's ruling on their request to be reinstated.

School Superintendent Philip Daubert said five of the girls didn't know what they were taking and intended to get high.

School officials saw "the beginning of something unimaginably horrible. This is the devil as far as they're concerned," said attorney Lewis Maltby of the American Civil Liberties Union, who represents Holly Shaffner, 16.

Miss Shaffner and and Tammy Myers, 15, who said she used a B-complex vitamin to help her complexion and keep warm in cold classrooms, asked Judge Ronald Buckwalter of Lancaster Common Pleas Court to reinstate them at the 1,000-student school. Miss Myers said she regretted taking the pills to school.

Delta drops AIDS ban

ATLANTA (AP) — Delta Air Lines has abandoned the idea of prohibiting AIDS victims from taking its flights.

Delta had notified the federal Transportation Department that if airline studies found AIDS victims presented a health hazard to other passengers, it would implement the rule, airline spokesman William Berry said Sunday.

The rule "has never been enforced, and never been planned to be enforced" Berry said.

Berry said Delta's concern stemmed in part from a flight when a passenger identified himself as an AIDS patient and asked for extra space to rest.

AIDS, acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which is incurable and often fatal, most often strikes homosexual men and intravenous drug abusers. Health officials do not believe it is spread through casual contact.

Children to be evicted

LOS ALAMITOS, Calif. (AP) — Although children of horse trainers and grooms have lived with their parents at Los Alamitos racetrack for years, up to 100 children face eviction by authorities.

"All we are concerned about is injuries to small toddlers because there are horses back there," says track security manager Peter Tisbo.

Under state law, only licensed employees may enter stables, track officials said.

Itinerant workers and their children have been allowed to live in 10-foot by 12-foot "tack rooms" bordering stables, but officials said evictions would begin today.

"I've raised six kids at the track," one 43-year-old groom identified only as Sally said. "These kids haven't done anything. Why are they all of a sudden slamming down on us?"

'Event' closes power plant

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — The Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant's Unit 1 reactor was shut down "because we had to find out what made the pumps stop," says a Pacific Gas & Electric Co. spokeswoman.

NOTICE OF INTENTION TO CONDUCT WEATHER MODIFICATION OPERATIONS IN THE STATE OF TEXAS

Date of the first of three weekly publications of this notice: February 4, 1985.

1. Notice is hereby given that North American Weather Consultants, a professional weather consulting company, 1521 East 3900 South, Suite 103, Salt Lake City, Utah 84124 intends to file an application with the Texas Department of Water Resources for a State Permit to conduct weather modification operations to change or attempt to change the natural development of clouds for the purpose, objective, period, and by the methods summarized below.

2. North American Weather consultants submitted an application for a Texas Weather Modification license on December 11, 1984.

3. The purpose of the weather modification operation is to increase rainfall. The objective is to affect the water resources of the City of San Angelo. The period of the proposed permit is April 15 through October 15 for a four year period beginning in 1985.

4. The proposed weather modification operation is to be conducted for and on behalf of the City of San Angelo, P. O. Box 1751, San Angelo, Texas 76902.

5. The proposed weather modification operation is to be carried out in an "operational area" and a "target area" to cause the intended effects to occur only in the target area. The operational area includes all of Irion, Tom Green, Reagan, and Glasscock Counties and portions of Sterling, Coke, Schleicher, Crockett, Upton, and Midland Counties. This area is bounded by the following points a point on the Martin-Midland County line four miles east of Interstate 20, south to a point on the Upton-Crockett County line four miles west of the Reagan County line, southeast to the City of Ozona, east to the intersection of Sutton-Schleicher-Crockett County lines, east along entire Schleicher-Sutton County line, north along Schleicher-Menard and Tom Green-Concho County lines, west along Tom Green-Runnels County line, northwest to the intersection of highway 163 with the Sterling-Mitchell County line, west along Sterling-Mitchell and Glasscock-Howard County lines, then west to starting point.

6. The area to be affected by the proposed weather modification operation is the target area. The target area includes all of Irion County and portions of Glasscock, Sterling, Tom Green, Schleicher, Crockett, and Reagan Counties. This area is bounded by the following points: a point at the intersection of highway 87 with the Glasscock-Sterling County line; due west for 20 miles to a point in Glasscock County; due south to the City of Best; southeast to a point on highway 163, 10 miles south of the City of Barnhart; due east to a point on highway 2084, 8 miles north of highway 190; due north to a point on highway 380, 8 miles east of City of San Angelo; northwest to a point 10 miles due east of the intersection of highway 87 with the Glasscock-Sterling County line; due west back to the starting point.

7. The methods and materials to be used in conducting this operation are summarized herein: a licensed meteorologist will select cumuliform clouds for cloud-seeding using a dedicated weather radar display, standard meteorological data, and forecast techniques to direct seeking aircraft equipped to dispense the seeding particles, silver iodide crystals, into cloud tops or into updraft air at cloud base.

8. The Texas Water Commission shall, if requested by at least 25 persons, hold a public hearing in the area where the operation is to be conducted prior to the issuance of a permit. No public hearing will be held on this application unless a request for a hearing is made within 30 days of the date of the first publication of this Notice. Requests for a hearing should be made in writing to the Office of General Counsel, Texas Department of Water Resources, P. O. Box 13087, Capitol Station, Austin, Texas 78711 Telephone (512) 475-7836.

9. Requests for further information about the proposed weather modification operation should be made to the Weather and Climate Section, Texas Department of Water Resources, same mailing address as above. Telephone (512) 475-6318.
