Painful 'cure' for economic ills warned

TORONTO (AP) — Sir Geoffrey Howe, Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, warned the world's bankers and his fellow finance ministers today that the cure for global economic ills may be even more painful than the disease.

Speaking to the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, Howe also called for quick agreement on a "substantial" increase in IMF resources — a proposal only the United States is opposing.

The speech from Britain, the closest ally the Americans have in economic policy, further isolated the United States, which stands alone in predicting an early rebound for the global economy and rejecting the need to strengthen international financial institutions.

"The question is, are we in the grip of a worsening disease or has its progress been checked?" Howe asked before the delegates from 146 countries.

"We need to remember that treatment and cure can initially seem as painful — indeed more painful — than the disease, and that convalescence can be frustrating and testing," he said. "We need continually to check our diagnosis, and be sensitive in our prescription."

Howe said world recovery would require reduced government deficits — especially in the United States — and he urged private banks to "show a matching responsibility" in dealing with massive loans to developing countries whose ability to repay has been damaged by the recession.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told the meeting Monday that President Reagan's economic policies are about to spark a worldwide recovery.

Other speakers at the opening session of the four-day joint annual meeting of the IMF and World Bank described the state of the global economy as grim. Some suggested that strains on the world financial system were becoming dangerous.

They called for immediate action as dramatic as a new conference to consider replacing the IMF and the World Bank, redoing the work of the landmark 1944 conference at Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, where a new world financial order was erected from the ruins of World War II.

Regan said recent declines in U.S. interest rates and inflation "provide only the first inkling of the real benefits that the U.S. and world economies will realize from the president's economic program."

Because of U.S. policies, Regan said, "The stage has been set for a strong recovery that is becoming more probable and more imminent with each passing day."

Other speakers presented a gloomier view.

Finance Minister Ernane Galveas of Brazil, designated to speak for all Latin American countries, blamed the policies of the developed nations for widening the gap between rich and poor.

"In the face of this dismal picture the industrial countries, who determine the economic fate of the world, sit as if paralyzed," Galveas said.

Danish Economic Affairs Minister Ivar Norgaard, representing the 10 nations of the European Common Market, said that since 1980, "Hopes of a revival in growth have been repeatedly disappointed and at present the growth performance of the world economy is still discouraging."

Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau described economic conditions as "worse than any since our beginnings," when the government-sponsored financial organizations were created at Bretton Woods.

"These hard times, and these perceptions of looming crises, are generating fear in the minds of some of our people," Trudeau said.

Robert Muldoon, Prime Minister of New Zealand, said the global economy was so bad that "growing numbers of countries and some private banks are clearly at risk."

Developing countries owe more than $500 billion to foreign banks, governments and organizations including the IMF and World Bank.

In the weeks before the annual meeting opened, the world's bankers were rocked by the disclosure that Mexico — whose foreign debt of $80 billion is the largest of any country — couldn't meet its payments and by Mexico's decision to nationalize its banks.

Watching and waiting

A Swiss policeman, armed with a machine gun, Monday peers around the corner of the entrance to a house near the Polish embassy in Bern, Switzerland.

Terrorists release two from embassy

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Armed terrorists who are threatening to blow up the Polish Embassy released two women hostages today and met face-to-face for the first time with a government negotiator, a federal police spokesman said.

The raiders, calling themselves "The Polish Revolutionary Home Army," still are holding nine hostages, according to federal officials. They are demanding the Polish government lift martial law and release all political prisoners, and have set a deadline of 10 a.m. Wednesday (4 a.m. EDT).

Ulrich Hubacher, spokesman for the federal Justice and Police Ministry, said a member of the special 24-man crisis team met for an hour with the gunmen in the embassy after nightlong telephone contacts with the terrorists.

He refused to discuss the meeting in detail, but said more face-to-face negotiations were likely.

Hubacher identified the two freed women as embassy employees, but Polish sources here said they were Irene Matusiak and Stanislawa Antoniewicz, both in their 50s and wives of embassy employees.

Late Monday night, the terrorists released a pregnant woman from the white stucco mansion in the middle of Bern's diplomatic sector. The woman, identified by the Polish sources as Malgorzata Luczak, a clerk-typist at the embassy, was hospitalized for treatment for shock.

Hubacher originally said police believed there were 14 hostages in the embassy, but later reported there were only 12. Swiss authorities said all of them are Poles.

The government-run Warsaw radio quoted the embassy's commercial counsellor as saying there were still 10 hostages, two of them women. It was not clear if the official, who was not named, was among them.

"The Swiss government is committed to ending this siege as soon as possible and saving the lives of the hostages," Hubacher said. The spokesman refused to say what tactics might be used.

Police have agreed to bring food and water to the door of the embassy building, he said. This morning, a doctor was permitted into the embassy to treat a hostage with hypertension, Hubacher said.

Hubacher scoffed at reports that the Swiss have received permission from Warsaw to storm the embassy, characterizing the claims as "pure interpretation of (Monday's) communique" from the martial-law regime urging Bern to "ensure the security" of Polish diplomats.

The communique, carried by the official Polish news agency PAP, said, "The Swiss ambassador in Warsaw has promised in the face of this act of terrorism, the authorities of his country will take all indispensable measures to restore normal working conditions to the embassy and the security of its staff."

The news agency reported today that Poland's military ruler, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, had formed a crisis team and the Foreign Ministry called in Swiss Ambassador Roger Campiche to demand the hostages "be guaranteed safety."

A radio commentator charged that "the embassy siege is one of the elements of a bigger plan of action against Poland."

The leader of the terrorists, identifying himself as "Col. Wysocki," told the Associated Press in a telephone interview Monday that his group has 55 pounds of explosives, and machine guns.

He said they would "blow away this shack and everyone in it," if their demands were not met within 48 hours — by Wednesday morning.

Wysocki did not say how many people were in his group. Another member of the band, in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp., said there were 13. Hubacher said there were at least two gunmen and "probably more."

The Polish government in Warsaw refused to comment on the demands. But the official news agency was quick to report the incident and tie the terrorists to the suspended Solidarity union and its supporters in the West.

PAP said the terrorists' demands were "similar to those addreands. But the official news agency was quick to report the incident and tie the terrorists to the suspended Solidarity union and its supporters in the West.

Arafat gets 'hero's welcome' at Arab League summit talks

FEZ, Morocco (AP) — Arab leaders began secret talks today on President Reagan's Middle East initiative and other possible peace plans after giving PLO chairman Yasser Arafat a hero's welcome that included a 21-gun salute.

Leaders from 15 of the 22 Arab League countries were discussing a joint peace strategy for the first time since the creation of the state of Israel in 1948.

The first item on their agenda was the June 6 Israeli invasion of Lebanon that forced the dispersal of Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas from their west Beirut stronghold.

The talks reportedly will continue with a discussion of separate peace plans by Saudi King Fahd and Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba. But Moroccan officials said those talks will be overshadowed by Reagan's peace proposal.

The Bahrain-based Gulf News Agency said most of the leaders at the three-day summit are tentatively backing Reagan's plan, which has been rejected by Israel.

Delegation sources said it was particularly significant that Fahd and Syrian President Hafez Assad arrived Monday at the conference site, an ornate 12th century palace, in the same automobile.

Assad led a boycott of a scheduled Arab League summit last November, forcing cancellation of the meeting. The Syrian leader was protesting Fahd's peace plan.

Assad has made no public comment on Fahd's plan, but Syrian sources said his presence here showed he now was prepared to discuss it.

Fahd's proposal implicitly calls for Arab recognition of Israel in return for total evacuation of Israeli-occupied territories. The Bourguiba plan — first proposed in 1965 — calls for Arab acceptance of a 35-year-old United Nations scheme to partition Palestine into Jewish and Arab enclaves.

Reagan's plan calls for election of an autonomous "domestic authority" to govern the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip in assocation with Jordan. Reagan also called on Israel to immediately cease the establishment of new Jewish settlements in Arab territory.

Israel has rejected all three plans. In apparent defiance of Reagan, the Israeli authorities last week announced plans for new Jewish settlements.

Hassan welcomed Arafat and the chiefs of state in a four-minute speech that mentioned none of the issues before the summit. Five Arab countries were represented by ministers and only Libya boycotted the summit. Egypt was excluded from the Arab League after signing a peace treaty with Israel in 1979.

All the Arab leaders were at the Fez airport to meet Arafat who was warmly greeted by Hassan and a 21-gun salute — an honor normally reserved for heads of state. Reporters and photographers were barred from the first encounter between the Arab leaders and the PLO chief since the Israeli invasion.

Moroccan television later showed all the chiefs of state in turn embracing and kissing Arafat in an elaborate display of affection.

The summit went into private session immediately following a speech by Hassan in which he said the summit discussions would be in strict secrecy with only the heads of delegations and two advisers admitted from each country.

He said only Moroccan Foreign Minister Mohamed Boucetta was authorized to make announcements on behalf of the summit.

With call expanded, legislators find special session bigger job than anticipated

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas legislators met in special session today to consider threatened depletion of the state's unemployment benefits fund and immediately found they had another job ahead.

Gov. Bill Clements expanded the call of the session to include a bill that would allow school districts to borrow money before tax rolls are complete.

Plans called for the Senate to debate the education measure this afternoon.

Committee hearings to consider legislative proposals on the unemployment and education issues began shortly after the opening ceremonies.

In a pre-session caucus, the senate elected Sen. John Wilson, D-LaGrange, as its assistant presiding officer for the special session. Wilson, 43, is finishing his first senate term after serving eight years in the House.

Clements, in calling the special session, said he hoped the session would be over in two or three days

Others, mostly Democrats who would like to embarrass the Republican governor with a hot controversy just before election, want a permanent solution that would not pass the problem on to the 1983 Legislature.

Still others would like Clements to open the session to other subjects.

Rep. Ralph Wallace, a Houston Democrat, said he and about 50 other lawmakers want the session expanded to include utility rate relief. He said legislation has been introduced to prohibit Houston Lighting & Power from charging its customers for a $362 million investment on the canceled Allens Creek nuclear project. Wallace's legislation will get no action unless Clements expands the session.

State Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum has asked Clements to let legislators amend a law that prevents school districts from borrowing money until their property tax rolls are certified and tax rates set. Bynum said numerous school districts, including Houston and Fort Worth, may run out of money because the new property reappraisal program has delayed preparation of tax rolls.

The special session will be the third since the Legislature adjourned its 140-day regular session June 1, 1981.

Clements called the special session because Texas Employment Commission officials said the fund that pays jobless benefits could run dry by November. The fund has been drained at a record rate by layoffs resulting from the recession.

Countdown continues 'on schedule'

MATAGORDA ISLAND, Texas (AP) — Workers are "right on schedule" today for the Wednesday morning launch of the first U.S. rocket to be assembled and launched by a private firm, officials of the company said.

"They've made up the lost time and everything now is right on schedule," said Glen Cole, the daughter of Space Services of America Inc. president David Hannah.

Crews early Monday successfully fired the sixth of a series of small test rockets to check radar and radio communications that will be used when they attempt to launch a 37-foot solid-fueled rocket called Conestoga I. A seventh small test rocket is set for launch today.

The Conestoga will be launched Wednesday morning from the southern tip of this island and roar upward to a point 192 miles over the Gulf of Mexico, carrying a payload of 1,097 pounds. The payload will be sent into a spin and eject about 400 pounds of water, carried as ballast, which will fall as a cloud of ice crystals.

The rocket will splash into the Gulf about 259 miles from the Texas coast after a flight of 10½ minutes.

Walt Pennino, spokesman for the Houston firm, said workers fell slightly behind schedule over the weekend when they discovered a "spurious signal" from some of the electronics aboard the rocket. The problem was corrected and Mrs. Cole said late Monday the launch plans were on schedule.

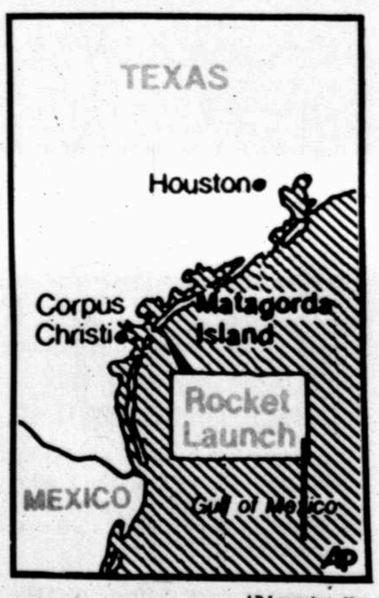

Conestoga I is built around the second stage motor of the solid-fueled Minuteman missile. Space Services bought the rocket motor earlier this year from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The firm then hired an engineering firm to assemble the rocket and to launch it at a total cost of about $2.5 million.

Hannah said last week he thought his company was "on trial" because of a spectacular failure in the first rocket it financed. That rocket, called Percheon, was a liquid-fueled device much more complicated than the Conestoga I.

The Percheon exploded during a pre-launch engine test on the Matagorda Island test pad. The keorsene and liquid oxygen propellant ignited and enveloped the pad in a fireball that shot 200 feet into the air.

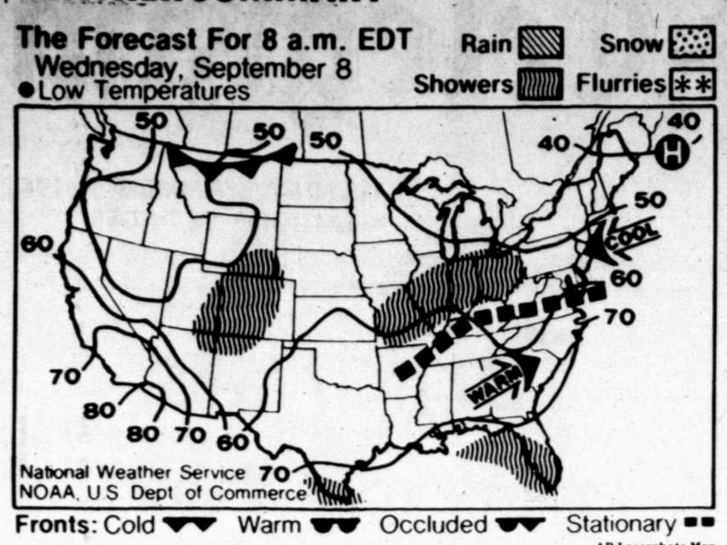

Hannah said the accident set his company back by six months and led the firm to select another type of rocket and a different launch team.

The Houston company has 57 investors who hope to develop a launch system capable of putting satellites into low Earth orbit for commercial customers.

Police have suspect in professor's death

AP Laserphoto

Police in New York City have apprehended a suspect in the death of University of Florida professor Howard Appledorf, who was found slain in his Gainesville apartment Sunday morning. Appledorf, best known for his support of junk food, lived alone and had had past problems with check forgers.

NEW YORK (AP) — A possible suspect in the slaying of a University of Florida professor, whose suffocated body was found near the remains of a ritual feast, was arrested early today after a chase through Manhattan, police said.

Sgt. Thomas Fahey said the possible suspect and a car also sought in the investigation were seized at about 1 a.m. He said the district attorney's office ordered that no more information be released.

The trussed body of Howard Appledorf was found Sunday morning lying face up on a couch in his Gainesville, Fla., apartment. His head was stuffed into a canvas bag of ice and swathed with sheets and pillows.

Three men in a recent check forgery case involving the 41-year-old victim were being sought for questioning about the gruesome slaying, and a nationwide alert was issued for the professor's stolen car, a dark blue Pontiac Firebird.

Four plates and the remains of a meal of submarine sandwiches were left around his body, the apartment was strewn with trash, and the words "murder" and "redrum" — murder spelled backward — were written on the walls.

"It is our deduction that it was possibly vengeful, or burglary, and the individual walked in the door during the course of the burglary," Gainesville police Capt. Richard B. Ward said Monday. He said there was "reason to believe that a number of items were taken," but wouldn't elaborate.

Appledorf lived alone. Police found his body after investigating reports of a burglary.

Three men involved two weeks ago in an attempt to forge a $900 check on Appledorf's account were being sought for questioning, Ward said.

The three men had been released from jail last Thursday after the case was settled out of court at Appledorf's request, State Attorney Eugene Whitworth said Monday.

"There are many people we want to question," Ward said. Asked if the three were suspects, he said: "I would use the term, 'We want to question them.' There are a number of suspects."

An autopsy Monday showed that Appledorf, a nutritionist best known for his defense of "junk food," died of suffocation. The coroner said he died Saturday, but couldn't pinpoint the exact time.

A friend of Appledorf's, retired teacher Peter Fresneda, said the professor had been threatened after refusing to post bail for one of the men in the check forgery case.

He said Appledorf had known the man and had let all three spend one night in his apartment near the university campus.

Ward said Appledorf never reported any threats to the police.

The killers, he said, were in the apartment "a number of hours. Exactly how long, we don't know."

"They had a feast or ceremony at some point in time while the crime was occurring," he said, adding that at least three people — and possibly more — were involved.

Sorry, but cool weather won't arrive

That good ol' West Texas weather fooled us again.

Although many Midlanders were looking forward to cooler temperatures, the mercury is not expected to budge any lower than the 90-degree mark.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it should continue to be partly cloudy with Wednesday's high settling in the low 90s.

But with the sun descending earlier these days, Midland nights are expected to continue in the 60s with tonight's reading in the mid-60s with light and variable winds.

Tuesday's high of 95 was relatively cool compared to the record 104-degree high recorded in 1948. And the overnight low of 65 was warmer than the record low of 57 recorded in 1957.

Labor's woes highlight labor's day

By The Associated Press

Unemployed workers helped swell the ranks of Labor Day marchers around the nation, while union leaders kicked off the autumn campaign season with blistering attacks on President Reagan, blaming him for the highest jobless rate since World War II.

But millions of other Americans simply gave themselves a holiday on Monday's 100th anniversary of the annual salute to labor, jamming beaches from California to Connecticut, rafting down the Arkansas River, watching auto races in Indiana and South Carolina, and chomping a few hot dogs before the season of falling leaves and football.

At least 434 people died in traffic accidents around the nation during the three-day holiday weekend. In Arizona, where state police set up controversial roadblocks on major highways, more than 200 motorists were arrested for drunken driving.

MORE THAN 100,000 people marched down Michigan Avenue in Chicago for the city's first Labor Day parade organized by unions in 40 years, although sentiments were no brighter than the gray skies.

"This is the most gloomy Labor Day since the Great Depression," said Adlai Stevenson III, the Democratic candidate for governor.

The national jobless rate stood at 9.8 percent in July and August, and labor leaders used the occasion to slam Reagan's economic policies.

"Not since the Great Depression of the 1930s have there been so many workers unemployed, so many houses threatened with mortgage foreclosures, so many farmers and small businesses being pushed into bankruptcy and so many families with no place to turn...," said James J. Wengert, president of the Iowa Federation of Labor in Des Moines.

"Listen to American labor, Mr. President," said United Mine Workers union president Sam Church, speaking at a rally in the West Virginia coalfields. An estimated 41,000 UMW workers are laid off, and Church accused Reagan of taking the nation on "the road to disaster."

AN ESTIMATED 400,000 people marched up Fifth Avenue in New York, where the first Labor Day parade was held Sept. 5, 1882. One sign defined Reaganomics as "rich get rich, poor get poorer, workers get the shaft," and a hearse carried a drawing of a tombstone labeled "PATCO, 1968-1981," referring to Reagan's firing last year of striking air traffic controllers.

Coming to the president's defense was Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, who said in an interview that Reagan was sensitive to "the ills of unemployment" and predicted the jobless rate will improve this fall.

In Detroit, hit hard by the slump in domestic car sales, about 400 people gathered under rainy skies to cheer Democratic candidates. United Auto Workers president Douglas Fraser, busy with Chrysler Corp. negotiations, sent a statement saying the day should be viewed "less as a holiday than as a day of protest."

About 2,000 people marched along a nine-block parade route in Indianapolis for the city's first Labor Day parade since 1942. "I think it's a good idea. I think it'll be a yearly event," said Don E. Todd, the president of a UAW local with 2,300 members laid off from a General Motors diesel plant.

"With 10 million unemployed, we don't have that much to celebrate this Labor Day," said Charles Thompson, president of a labor council in Springfield, Mass. Two local newspapers marked the occasion by printing nearly 800 free classified ads for unemployed workers seeking jobs.

IN SAN ANTONIO, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland asked union members to carry their complaints to the voting booth as he helped unveil a statue of Samuel Gompers, the labor pioneer and founder of the American Federation of Labor who died in 1924.

"We're seeing 50 years of (labor) progress lost," said Kirkland. In another speech, he said Reagan and his advisers "have brought the art of the confidence trickster to the highest councils of government." He urged the 15 million members of the AFL-CIO to go to the polls Nov. 2 and "take another person with them" to make the voice of labor heard.

Spirits were sunnier in Tulsa, Okla., where about 4,000 contestants joined the Great Raft Race down the Arkansas River.

Indiana representative found dead; Police have no motive, death cause

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Adam Benjamin Jr., D-Ind., was found dead in his Capitol Hill home today, District of Columbia police said.

Benjamin, 47, was found by a congressional page who had gone to awaken him, police reported.

Police did not immediately give a cause of death.

The third-term Indiana Democrat was first elected to the House in 1976 and re-elected easily since then.

He was seeking a fourth term and had had no opposition in the May primary.

A member of the House Appropriations Committee and chairman of its transportation subcommittee, Benjamin was a key figure in legislative battles over congressional pay increases.

A graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., Benjamin served in both the Marine Corps and the Army before earning his law degree at Valparaiso University in Indiana.

He is survived by his wife, Patricia Ann, and three children.

Benjamin served in the Indiana Legislature before being elected to Congress.

He was born Aug. 6, 1935 in Gary, Ind., and lived in Hobart, Ind.

Woman dead, passenger injured in Monday accident near Sheffield

SHEFFIELD — A Florida woman was killed and a passenger in her car was injured after she fell asleep at the wheel on Interstate 10 about 11 miles east of here Monday.

Roberta Bermann Rosenberg, 43, of Miami, Fla., was pronounced dead at the scene. A passenger, 25-year-old Michael Allen Rosenberg, also of Miami, was reported in good condition at Iraan General Hospital. He suffered shock and abrasions in the accident, which occurred about 9:10 a.m. Monday.

According to the Department of Public Safety, the Rosenberg woman was eastbound on the interstate when she fell asleep and lost control of her 1979 Datsun station wagon, which rolled three and a half times, throwing her from the vehicle.

Her body was taken to the James Dennis Funeral Home in Iraan.

Man charged in Crane shooting death

CRANE — Odis Harold Turner, 27, of Crane has been charged with the Sunday shooting death of a 29-year-old Crane man and is being held under $50,000 bond.

Rickey Ray Roberson sustained a single gunshot wound in the upper torso from a high-powered rifle in an incident which occurred at Turner's home, located 2½ miles east of Crane, at approximately 8 p.m. Sunday. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Peace Justice Wilma Clark.

The shooting came as the result of a domestic squabble, according to a Sheriff's Department spokesman.

Suspect sought in Odessa robbery

ODESSA — Police here are searching for a man who held up the Foodway Supermarket at 826 W. Clements Monday and got away with an undisclosed amount of cash.

A woman clerk at the store said the man came in armed with a pistol about 8:45 p.m. and demanded money. The suspect, who fled on foot, was described as Mexican, about 25 years old, 5 feet, 7 inches tall, and weighing 150 pounds. He wore a white cap, khaki pants and a plaid shirt.

Gay caucus leader says petition response to ruling

HOUSTON (AP) — A ruling that declared a Texas sodomy law unconstitutional probably inspired a police officer's union here to circulate petitions opposing the recruitment and hiring of homosexuals, says a Houston Gay Political Caucus leader.

Ray Hill, a founder of the local Gay Political Caucus, said Monday the petition probably was drafted in response to last month's ruling in Dallas by U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer.

The judge struck down the law because it prohibited sodomy between members of the same sex but not between members of the opposite sex.

Mike Wood of the Houston Police Officers Association said the petition was drafted because "we believe that the city is now formulating policy" to recruit and hire homosexuals to this city's 3,000-member police force.

However, Hill said he had heard nothing of plans to recruit gays, and efforts to contact city officials at their homes and offices on the Labor Day holiday were unsuccessful.

Several cities, including Los Angeles, San Francisco and Minneapolis, already are recruiting gays for their police forces, Hill said.

The police union voted unanimously in favor of the petition drive at a meeting Thursday night, Wood said. However, he declined to estimate how many of the union's 2,500 members cast ballots.

The document probably will be presented to Mayor Kathy Whitmire and to city council members, he said.

The petition says, "the hiring of known and admitted homosexuals is not in keeping with the attitudes of all present officers now employed and would not reflect the attitudes and values of a majority of the citizens of Houston.

"We further feel the hiring of known and/or admitted homosexuals would undoubtably foment controversy and conflict," it reads.

Odessa boy dies

ODESSA — An Odessa boy died after he fell into a fence post hole in the back yard of his home at 1802 Juanita early Monday night.

Two-year-old Pedro Martinez fell headfirst into a 24-inch-deep post hole that caved in on him about 7:40 p.m. Monday, according to the Ector County Sheriff's Department. He died of suffocation and was pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital.

"There were several holes in the back yard," said a sheriff's deputy. "Some of them were filled and some weren't."

Rosetta Kinard, right, watches her three sons, from left, Russell, 11; Stanley, 13; and Alvin, 9, play checkers in their New York City apartment. The three boys will all repeat grades this fall. School systems in New York and other cities across the nation are reevaluating the practice of holding students back — and many are deciding that the practice may be more beneficial than detrimental.

Educators reevaluating practice of having students repeat grades

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

Rosetta Kinard's three sons have been forced to repeat grades in New York City's public schools so many times she's almost lost track.

This fall, Russell and Alvin Kinard are "left-backs" at P.S. 21 in Brooklyn's Bedford-Stuyvesant section. They are among tens of thousands of school children nationwide who are repeating classes this fall, in many cases because school districts have stiffened promotion and graduation standards.

Russell, 11, will repeat fifth grade and Alvin, 9, third grade. Stanley, 13, will advance to eighth grade in a special education class at a junior high.

Russell, a soft-spoken boy who aspires to be a lawyer, also repeated fourth grade. Initially upset, he has resigned himself to another year in fifth grade.

"It'll help me," he says. His mother is not so sure; she's afraid her boys are not getting the extra help they need to catch up.

IN NEW YORK, about 9,500 fourth graders and 20,000 seventh graders may be held back for failing promotional tests in reading and math. More than 15,000 youngsters retook the tests this summer in hopes of being promoted.

The numbers are up markedly from 1978, when 7 percent of the fourth and seventh graders repeated. Last year, the first time the tests were used, 9.4 percent of the fourth graders and 14.7 percent of the seventh graders flunked.

In city after city, the story is similar:

—In Dallas, 11,200 children attended after-hours classes last spring to avoid being left back. In May, 7,396 children in grades one to six were flunked, but 2,262 were promoted after summer school.

—In Oklahoma City, 780 elementary students were kept back, up from 590 a year ago. The city allows parents to override the teachers' recommendation against promotion, but only 123 parents signed such waivers, compared with 232 last year.

—Benton Harbor, Mich., initially flunked 459, or 22 percent, of its kindergarten, first and second graders, but later promoted 154 who went to summer school.

—In Washington, D.C., 6,300 elementary students — one in six — may be held back for failing to master basic skills. A record number went to summer school to make up the work.

—In Atlanta, 5,375 elementary and high school students, or nearly 8 percent, will repeat this fall. Nearly 1,000 first graders, or 19 percent, were kept back, up from only 224, or 5 percent, two years ago.

EDUCATORS "HAVE put some meaning and some bite into the word 'discipline'," said William C. Robertson, principal of Peoria, Ill., High School. Social promotion — advancing a child regardless of performance — has come into disrepute as educators have re-evaluated what repeating can do to — or for — a student.

James T. Guines, associate superintendent of the Washington, D.C., schools, said the notion used to be that it seriously harmed children's self-image to be kept back while their peers moved ahead.

But it is even worse to put them in over their heads, said Guines, adding, "I hate to say it, but nobody likes a 'dummy.' So if you got in the eighth or ninth grade and you couldn't read or compute, your alienation from your peer group led to disciplinary problems."

Stiffer standards can be expensive and cause legal and other problems for schools. Parents who applaud the principle of making schools tougher may rebel when their child is left back.

"Everybody is for standards, but it's for somebody else's kid," said Guines.

Bombings have made mayor tired, angry

LIHUE, Hawaii (AP) — The mayor of the island of Kauai, whose office has twice been damaged by bombs, says he believes the attacks stem from his support of a controversial resort development.

"I'm angry," said Mayor Eduardo Malapit as he surveyed broken windows and splintered wood in his private office. "I'm angry because there are some people out there who are happy about this."

The latest bomb, which sent pellets ricocheting through Malapit's office in the County Building, was placed on a window ledge, said Police Maj. Roy Higa.

The building was locked and unoccupied when the bomb exploded just after 9 p.m. Sunday, and there were no injuries, Higa said. Damage from the blast, which could be heard half a mile away, was estimated at several thousand dollars.

A similar bomb, also placed on a window ledge, exploded through the mayor's outer office in January 1981. There were no injuries and no arrests were ever made.

Malapit, 49, a two-term Democrat, announced in August that he would not seek re-election this year.

"Thank heaven my family and I will no longer be a part of the political life on this island come Jan. 1," he said after the latest bombing.

"The picture of my baby is smashed on my table, my diploma which I gave to my father is shredded and the map of the Philippines has a hole in it," said Malapit, who is of Filipino ancestry.

The mayor said he believed both bombings are related to his support of a 150-unit condominium and hotel development at Nukolii.

He refused to revoke a construction permit for the project even though residents voted by a 2-1 margin in a November 1980 referendum to return the area's zoning to agriculture use.

Opponents, led by a group known as The Committee To Save Nukolii, said the development was inappropriate in the area of pristine beaches and sugar cane fields.

The island, which has 46,000 residents, depends heavily on agriculture but has three concentrated hotel-resort developments. Millions of Americans saw its lush scenery in the movie "South Pacific."

The mayor, in a view subsequently upheld in court, said the developers of the Kauai Beach Village already had a $4 million investment in the project and should be allowed to continue.

Boy's shoes aid rescue

CASTAIC, Calif. (AP) — A 2½-year-old boy was reunited with his parents after a search team tracked his sandals' tire-tread print three miles from where he had been lost in the woods.

Ricardo Diaz, who had disappeared Sunday afternoon, was found thirsty but safe early Monday morning after 11 hours in the brush near Castaic Lake, 40 miles north of Los Angeles.

Although hundreds of people had been at the lake over the holiday weekend, the volunteer team was able to pick out the boy's tracks from the many footprints.

"We were able to pick up his tracks along a channel that extends from the lake," said Jerry Hicklin, captain of the Sylmar-Santa Clarita Valley Search and Rescue team.

"We were lucky in that the boy was wearing sandals with a tire tread," he said.

The boy was found sleeping under a bush and returned to his parents.

NOVEMBER 2, 1982

PROPOSITION NO. 1 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 1 proposes a constitutional amendment that prohibits any state ad valorem tax. Receipts from previously authorized state ad valorem taxes that are collected after the effective date of the proposed amendment shall be deposited to the credit of the general fund of the county collecting the taxes and may be expended for county purposes. Taxes collected before that date shall be distributed by the legislature among educational institutions eligible to receive those funds under prior law. The proposed amendment also repeals a section of the Constitution levying an ad valorem tax for a construction fund for 17 state colleges and universities.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment repealing the state property tax."

PROPOSITION NO. 2 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 62 as amended by Senate Joint Resolution 10 proposes a constitutional amendment that would eliminate the $80,000,000 ceiling on state welfare aid during any fiscal year.

The amendment would set the state welfare spending limit at $160,000,000 for the 1982-1983 biennium.

The amendment further provides that, for each subsequent biennium, the maximum amount spent for state welfare shall not exceed one percent of the state budget.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to authorize the legislature to provide assistance through the appropriations process to needy persons and to place a ceiling on payments for needy dependent children at one percent of the state budget."

PROPOSITION NO. 3 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 8 proposes a constitutional amendment that would exempt machinery and equipment used in the production of farm and ranch products from taxation. No dollar limits would be imposed and the exemption would apply to corporations and partnerships as well as to families and individuals.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment exempting implements of husbandry (agricultural machinery and equipment) from ad valorem taxation."

PROPOSITION NO. 4 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 77 proposes a constitutional amendment that would authorize the Legislature to set a four year maximum term of office for board members of certain water districts and conservation and reclamation districts.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing the Legislature to provide terms not to exceed four years for members of governing boards of certain water districts and conservation and reclamation districts."

PROPOSITION NO. 5 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 119 proposes a constitutional amendment that would authorize Tarrant and Bee counties to hold county-wide elections to abolish the county treasurer's office by majority vote.

Should the county treasurer's office be abolished, the duties, powers, and functions of that office would be transferred to the county auditor or the successor to the auditor's functions.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to abolish the office of county treasurer in Tarrant and Bee counties."

PROPOSITION NO. 6 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 6 proposes a constitutional amendment that would raise the constitutional interest rate limit on state general obligation bonds from 6% to 12%. The new 12% ceiling does not, however, apply to bonds issued by the Veterans' Land Board.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment increasing the maximum interest rate allowed on state general obligation bonds to a weighted average annual interest rate of 12%."

Trump Coup Tommy had been showing his usual form at the bridge club — his bidding was straight out of a horror story and he had continually found double-dummy ways to convert ten tricks to nine. But the pleasure he obtained from this hand made up for any deficiency in his score.

Few sane players would consider a bid of four hearts on Tommy's cards. Those who did elect to compete would choose a double. That would have led to the completely hopeless contract of four spades. Not that four hearts seemed any better — you or we would probably have been happy to settle for down two when we got our first look at dummy. But not Tommy — he was in his element.

He won the first trick in hand with the ace of diamonds and, warned by the double that nothing good was likely to happen in the trump suit, he cashed the ace and king of clubs and ruffed a club in his hand. His aim was to score as many of his low trumps as possible by ruffing. Next came a low spade to dummy's jack, and the last club was ruffed. Declarer exited with the queen of spades.

To avoid being end played, West won the ace of spades and exited with his last spade. Declarer and dummy were each down to three trumps, a spade and a heart, while West still had a trump. West was about to learn what people meant when they said that too much of a good thing can be bad.

Tommy led a spade, and West was forced to ruff. He had nothing but trumps to return, and dummy's eight won the trump lead. This time declarer led dummy's diamond. West was again forced to ruff and now he had to lead away from his king of trumps into declarer's A-Q tenace. So Tommy racked up ten tricks — two spades, a diamond, two clubs, two club ruffs and three trumps!

A routine hand for Tommy!

People on home parenteral nutrition can have good life

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father will be coming home from the hospital soon but the way I understand it, he will have to be fed through a tube that sticks into a vein. I'm glad that he'll be coming home, but what kind of life is that? What can he look forward to? — Terry, Detroit

Dear Terry: According to your description, your father will be on home parenteral nutrition, and what he has to look forward to is a life that can be very satisfying.

One person who has studied the problem surrounding home parenteral nutrition is Karin Ladefoged, of Rigshospitalet in Copenhagen. She followed seven women and six men, 24 to 62 years of age, for one year. And she found that although all reported some physical distress, nine considered themselves healthy or fairly healthy. None of the 13 patients were strong enough to hold outside jobs, but six did most of their own housework.

Ms. Ladefoged also found that the patient engaged in normal or near normal social and leisure-time activities; however, five of the patients, who were over 55 years of age at the time they became ill, had stopped all sexual activity. Sexual relations for the other patients were reported to be normal.

I do not mean to suggest that home parenteral nutrition is trouble-free. Six of the patients reported psychological symptoms but, overall, nine of the 13 patients were considered to have a fair quality of life.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Your recent letter to A.R. about a "clumsy" child really struck a raw nerve with me. I could probably write pages, but I will try to condense this letter. As a child, I also was considered "clumsy." In school, I was never chosen for a team in any athletic event. I could not even run well. When the teacher put the bar at the lowest point in gym class, I could not even get over that. In 1942 I took my Army physical. When I had to squat-down, I fell over. The M.D. still passed me into the Army. I could not run two miles before breakfast. I could not get through an infiltration course. I could not get through an obstacle course. I ended up on limited service and from there to Burma for 2½ years in the engineer corps. When our daughter had problems, my wife took her to our pediatrician. He said with his finger in her face, "the reason your daughter does not run around the school yard (as required) is because you baby her. If you didn't baby her, she would do it!" My wife then took our daughter to a neurologist. She has Charcot-Marie-Toothe. I then went to an M.D. and was diagnosed first as having Roussey-Levy and now as Frederick's Ataxa. I have claw feet. If I step on a small stone, my ankle turns so badly that I fall to the ground. So, with the many podiatrists that I saw, with the many M.D.'s that I saw, no one could see an obvious problem. For me, living all these years without knowing my problem, has had a terrible emotional effect on me. One that I will never recover from. — Mr. E.F., Miami, Fla.

Dear Mr. E.F.: I empathize with you. Not knowing what the problem was all these years. It must be a great relief to finally know and to have a name for it.

For J.J. (Detroit): I find my anti-smoking injection in the arm works better and is less painful than the injections in the ears and nose. That is why I have not used any shots in the ears and nose for the past several years.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Segregationists 'frightened,' says bishop

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — South African leaders who support racial segregation are "powerful but frightened," according to an Anglican bishop here to address a convention of Episcopalians.

"The people who are perpetrators of injury in our land aren't sprouting horns or tails," said Bishop Desmond Tutu, a black South African who has opposed his country's policy of apartheid, or racial segregation.

"They're just ordinary people like you and me. We are talking about ordinary human beings who are scared," he said. "Wouldn't you be if you were outnumbered 5-to-1?"

Tutu, 50, and Vice President George Bush were the scheduled guest speakers today at a joint session of the Episcopal Church's House of Bishops and lay-clergy House of Delegates. The church's six-day governing convention opened Sunday.

Tutu, the general secretary of the South Africa Council of Churches, lost his passport last year for his outspoken criticism of apartheid. U.S. churches used diplomatic channels to secure limited travel documents for Tutu's trip.

Until he arrived Sunday, it was uncertain whether he would be allowed to come, said Presiding Bishop John M. Allin of the U.S. Episcopal Church.

The 3 million-member church is part of the worldwide Anglican communion of 28 national churches totalling 70 million members, including the Anglican Church of South Africa.

Bush, Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor and Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, a former U. S. ambassador to the United Nations, all intervened on Tutu's behalf, Allin said. Mrs. O'Connor is an Episcopalian. Young is a former minister in the United Church.

Tutu spoke at New Orleans's Grace Episcopal Church of how shocked he was to be allowed to leave his country.

"I'm surprised, but a Christian is one who keeps being an eternal optimist," he said.

Tutu was recently given an honorary doctorate of sacred theology by Columbia University in New York, which described him as a "fearless advocate of justice."

Columbia President Michael I. Sovern called Tutu a "a beacon" leading his people "to peaceful opposition to the injustices of apartheid and a symbol of hope for a unified South Africa."

Tutu was not allowed to attend the ceremony, and Sovern went to Johannesburg to present the degree.

The sparkle's fading

Much has been written in recent years about the "lure" of the Washington, D.C. scene — the fantasy life, supposedly, of the wealthy and the powerful that has been immortalized in books and on the silver screen. It isn't all that way, though, and each year we are reminded of that fact when public servants — many of them respectable, high-caliber officials choose not to remain in the nation's capital.

That's the case this year as three senators and 22 members of the House of Representatives are calling it quits for various reasons.

Not all the departures are regrettable, of course. In some instances members of Congress have served long, admirable terms and are retiring to other interests. Such is U.S. Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the Joint House-Senate Economic Committee.

"It is simple that when one has done the same thing for 28 years, as I have, he ought to think about doing something new," said Congressman Reuss, who's now intending to combine law, teaching and writing in Washington and Wisconsin.

No, those we should be concerned about are the ones like Rep. William Brodhead, D-Mich., who is quitting after eight years in the House. Says the congressman, "I'm subject to tremendous ethical conflicts all the time. Pressure all the time. A declining standard of living ... very superficial personal relationships. I don't think people realize what a lonely job this is."

Anyone who doubts the pressures associated with a congressional lifestyle has only to read a daily newspaper or listen to an electronic news report. It's true the members of Congress have what many would consider an admirable lifestyle. But the pressure is constantly there, unavoidable.

And while it's true that Congress had brought some of the pressure to bear on itself by the conduct of various members, it's also true that collective labels and generalities brush all. A congressman resigns amid speculation and circumstantial evidence of wrongdoing and, regrettably, the general public assumes the worst. That's human nature.

While there is an argument in favor of a degree of "turnover" in the Congress, such necessarily entails losing some good people. And in this day and time the nation cannot afford to lose good elected officials.

Perhaps we should not be so quick to judge.

Blowing the cover off

Not much news has been coming out of Afghanistan recently, and for good reason. The Soviet Union has barred Western reporters from covering the invasion.

The Kremlin obviously does not want the world to learn of the extent of its brutal aggression. It also wants to cover up the successes of the Afghan soldiers who are fighting back. Here are some of the developments the Kremlin is covering up:

— The Russian troop commitment in Afghanistan has been increased from 50,000 to 90,000 since the invasion was launched in December, 1979.

— Afghan rebels barged into a Soviet-backed Communist Party rally and killed an estimated several hundred party members and workers.

— Despite the infusion of more Soviet forces, Afghan gunmen continue to harass their oppressors with regularity in Kabul, Kandahar, Paghman and surrounding hillsides.

— A group of Afghan rebels stormed a jail in Kandahar and freed 80 inmates being held by the Russians.

These are some of the news items that have leaked out from Afghanistan's borders despite the attempted news blackout. What they tell us is that the brave people of Afghanistan, like the brave people of Poland, are fighting on against communist overlord who would enslave them, and are not about to give up.

The best news out of Afghanistan is that the Soviet gauleiters are sufficiently embarrassed by Afghan resistance that they do not want the word to get out. That is a fact they cannot cover up.

Middle East realism

President Reagan took a strong new initiative on the Middle East when he recently delivered a television talk to the nation and a letter outlining peace plans to the Israeli government.

It was expected that the Israelis would reject the initiative, but that is simply the first reaction of the government in Jerusalem. Many in Israel will welcome the president's new leadership.

Mr. Reagan, with the help of his new secretary of state, George Shultz, and secretary of defense, Caspar Weinberger, must continue to press for a just and lasting peace along the lines suggested in the president's talk.

For the first time, it appears that the Reagan administration is interested in developing a Mideast policy of its own, based on realities in the region, on this nation's historic dedication to the principles of self-determination and justice for all peoples, and on our own strategic interests in the region.

That's good. We have a heavy responsibility for finding a peaceful solution for the problems of the Middle East. We helped create them.

Another View:

A look into history

A proposal in the U.S. Senate to institute tuition credits — income tax credits for parents who send their children to a private school — ran into a filibuster by opponents.

There are arguments pro and con on this sensitive issue but one advanced by Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., merits attention because it misreads American history.

He opposes the credits "because public education is the keystone of our democratic government and it is the duty of all individuals, whether parents or not, to support it." The argument implies that there wouldn't be a democratic system in the United States without public schools. History says otherwise.

Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., points out that no government-operated schools existed in America prior to 1819. "Before then," Packwood said, "most grade schools and high schools were church run, even though they were open to anyone who wanted to go. Local governments levied all kinds of taxes — on liquor, on gambling — and gave money to churches to operate those schools. That was direct support."

However valid other arguments against tuition tax credits may be, the concept that democracy could not have existed without public schools is historically inaccurate. Until 1819 democracy did exist without them.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Diplomatic change seen in Benin Republic

WASHINGTON — Strange tales are filtering out of the steamy jungles of the Benin Republic, a self-identified Marxist-Leninist state that might be described as the Albania of West Africa.

Jack Anderson

Benin, a former French colony, is a Pennsylvania-size sliver of land on the underside of the African hump between Nigeria on the east and Togo and Upper Volta on the west. Since 1972, it has been ruled with erratic oppression by a former army major named Mathieu Kerekou.

The word from the seven-member U.S. mission in Benin is that "the signs are good" for closer relations with the United States, following a cabinet shuffle by the 42-year-old president last April. This is noteworthy because Kerekou's favorite pastime used to be denouncing Americans as "imperialist pigs."

Our last ambassador there was James Engle, who arrived in 1974 just a few days before Kerekou announced that he was making Dahomey, as the country was then called, a Marxist state, and planned to exterminate the old ruling class.

Most of his intended victims managed to flee the country. One who did not, according to rumor, was a high official who was caught in bed with Kerekou's wife and summarily executed.

Despite Kerekou's habit of calling Engle in for long lectures on the joys of Marxist-Leninism, coupled with demands for more U.S. aid to "help our self-realization as a socialist state," the ambassador tried to get along. But it was sometimes hard to take the country seriously.

For example, when Kerekou announced in 1975 that Dahomey would henceforth be known as Benin, a top-secret document was prepared for President Ford, stressing the importance of proper pronunciation in dealing with the Beninese. U.S. officials should "take care in maintaining the distinction between the 'Benin Republic' on the one hand and 'banana' or 'benign' republic on the other," the briefing paper warned, explaining: "In English, the pronunciations are very similar, and offense could be taken if the nuance is missed."

On Feb. 12, 1976, Engle was summoned to Kerekou's office for an audience that outdid his previous experiences by a country mile. He related it in a top-secret report to Ford, titled, "Benin-U.S. 'Diplomatic' Relations." My associates Dale Van Atta and Joseph Spear have seen a copy of the report. Here it is in full:

"Ambassador Engle received 'barbaric treatment' from Benin President Kerekou when summoned to the presidential palace Feb. 12. After an insulting reception, the ambassador was preemptorily dismissed from the meeting.

"The foreign minister thereafter arranged a 'confrontation' with a kangaroo committee of inquiry, which tried to establish the ambassador's incompetence and dishonesty.

"The ambassador feels he 'won' whatever intellectual exchange there was."

In the space for personal comment, Engle added: "My incredible adventures of Feb. 12 must surely be counted among the most outrageous experiences any American chief of mission has ever undergone at the hands of the top leadership of any government. It is reasonable and proper at this point for the U.S. government to consider whether we should remain at all in Benin."

Ford recalled Engle, and no ambassador has been sent to Benin since.

But Kerekou, perhaps made uneasy by the attempted overthrow of the Seychelles president by white mercenaries, may have decided he'd better patch things up with the United States. According to one intelligence source, ideology will pose no problem for Kerekou. Benin went "Marxist" in hopes of getting its share of Moscow gold. "I don't think they knew what Marxism is," the source said.

Footnote: Kerekou's tutorial sessions weren't limited to ambassadors. He lectured Pope John Paul II on socialism and foreign affairs for half an hour on a papal visit to Benin last February.

ONE-UP ON PETE: When Rep. Paul (Pete) McCloskey, R-Calif., visited Israel last month, he was already regarded with suspicion by Israeli officials for his outspoken sympathy toward the Palestinians. Misgivings escalated to outright hostility when he met first with Yasser Arafat in Beirut.

Hoping to break the ice at a meeting with Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, McCloskey introduced his aide Amber Scholtz pointedly as "my Jewish administrative assistant." Far from mollified at this fence-mending gesture, the combative Sharon responded by introducing "my Jewish press assistant and my Jewish aide-de-camp."

SPOOKED SPOOKS: Secret CIA documents reveal deep distress over the revelations starting in the mid-1970s of the agency's meddling in Latin America. "Most Latins were already convinced that the 'CIA was everywhere' for every conceivable purpose, and now they are even more credulous of the most lurid allegations to that effect," one internal document complained.

As for Latin American leaders, the CIA observed that "not much in the substance of the disclosures" came as a surprise, and they couldn't understand "what useful purpose" was being served. Conservative regimes in particular were "distressed (at the) hairshirt mentality" in Washington, the CIA noted. Those governments "like to think in big-power terms (and) accept manipulation as an inherent responsibility of a strong nation," the report explained.

INSIDE REPORT:

Shultz wins backing of Robert Strauss

WASHINGTON — After one hour alone with Robert Strauss, Secretary of State George Shultz won the backing of the influential Democratic power broker for President Reagan's Mideast peace plan — especially important because of Strauss's high visibility and prestige in the American Jewish community.

Rowland Evans

Strauss, who has a closer relationship with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak than any other U.S. politician, has been asked to help President Reagan with both Israel and the Arab states. He was President Jimmy Carter's Mideast peace emissary after the 1978 Camp David accords.

Robert Novak

A footnote: The White House ordered Shultz to arrange long briefings with former presidents and secretaries of state in an effort to show a united U.S. front to Israel and the Arabs. One message: Even if Israel rejected the Reagan plan, the president "is committed to carrying through."

BOB MICHEL RISES

Secret Democratic polls reveal a significant rise during August in the fortunes of beleaguered House Republican leader Robert Michel in his Peoria, Ill., district.

Michel has been targeted for defeat by the National Committee for an Effective Congress (NCEC) and other liberal political action groups. His district, no longer so Republican after reapportionment, is wracked with high unemployment. Nevertheless, the latest polls reflect admiration of his role as a congressional leader and give him a widening though not safe lead over G. Douglas Stephens, his 31-year-old neophyte Democratic challenger.

A footnote: The same secret Democratic poll shows an abrupt drop in Michel's district during August by former Democratic Sen. Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic nominee against Republican Gov. James Thompson.

DERWINSKI TO ACDA?

Conservative senators and Reaganite bureaucrats in the national security bureaucracy are pushing hard for a top spot at the turbulent arms control agency for outgoing Rep. Ed Derwinski, the conservative Illinois Republican who lost his primary election as a result of redistricting.

ACDA Director Eugene Rostow has failed to win strong White House backing for the Senate confirmation of his two top aides, Robert Grey and Norman Terrell. They face a Senate filibuster by the conservatives because of their service in past Democratic administrations.

The conservatives, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, are eyeing this solution to end the long deadlock over Grey and Terrell: Derwinski to get Grey's job as deputy ACDA director, Grey to be demoted to a lesser job, Terrell to be dropped. White House personnel aides like the idea, but insiders say Rostow might resign.

HATFIELD'S REVENGE

An angry Sen. Mark Hatfield, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, warned President Reagan privately two weeks ago that a veto of the $14 billion supplemental bill would cost him his program of economic aid for the Caribbean Basin. But he was privately blamed by the White House for the veto.

Hatfield was described as "livid" at the mere thought the president might veto the over-priced money bill. The main reason for the veto is what one White House aide called "Mark Hatfield's pet rocks" — such as some $250 million for job training.

If the veto is sustained, Hatfield will be in excellent position to exercise his own veto of the Carribean Basin Initiative by excluding it from all future money bills. Such revenge could hurt U.S. relations in the volatile Caribbean area much more than it hurts Ronald Reagan.

TIP'S SON FOR MAYOR

Prominent figures in the Massachusetts Democratic Party are prodding Lt. Gov. Thomas O'Neill III, son of Speaker Tip O'Neill, to resurrect his political career by running for mayor of Boston next year against veteran incumbent Kevin White.

Tommy O'Neill leaves public office at the end of the year following his failed bid for governor, but nobody expects him to quit politics for good. If he follows advice from party leaders to try for mayor, he will join a crowded field.

White, who intends to seek a fifth four-year term for mayor next year, is considered highly vulnerable and a distinct underdog. His most powerful adversary could be state Senate President William Bulger, a highly-respected conservative and foe of court-ordered busing. Bulger has said nothing publicly, but is privately interested.

CHARLEY REESE

Mexico woes will ripple through U.S.

Mexico, as you may have heard, is busted. It's $80 billion in debt to foreign banks and hasn't got any money. The question is, who was stupid? Mexico for borrowing that much or the banks for lending it?

Charley Reese

I recall reading a few years ago an article in Foreign Affairs, the journal of the Council on Foreign Relations, which is the foreign policy arm of the big banks. The gist of the article was — in very high tone language, of course — that people who thought banks had overlent to foreign countries were simply wrong.

They were not wrong. The banks were wrong, or more precisely, greedy. And, for the sake of precision, let me point out we're talking about the 10 or so very big banks, not your neighborhood bank unless you happen to live next door to Citcorp or the Chase or one of the other mega's.

It will be interesting to see if they can manage to repossess Mexico. The United States has already extended a couple of billion of our own funny money to prop up their funny money economy. They are supposed to be advance payments for oil and other goods.

No doubt there are some folks who think they will make out from Mexico's misfortune. When an economy goes bust, there are always some bad guys, but there is usually also a revolution and Mexico's will likely be violent and probably Marxist. It will take weeks at least before the pressure builds to that point.

But if the violence breaks out, we will get more wetbacks, not only of the usual variety who are just plain people trying to stay alive with honest work, but the Mexican rich who will be looking for a place to light with their loot before some modern-day Emiliano Zapata parts their hair with a machete.

Besides bad government, Mexico has too many people and too little rain in the northern half of the country. I feel sorry for the Mexican people. They deserve a better government than they've had for the last 60 years.

Anyway, if you think revolutions in Nicaragua and El Salvador are a problem, wait until you get one in Mexico with 70 million people.

The elite in other countries, including ours, are trying to figure out a way to bail out the elite in Mexico. The banks don't want to write off the loans because that would set off a nasty chain-reaction. They are already trying to prop up Poland and there is a whole long list of other countries lined up behind Mexico and Poland to go belly-up.

As in our own case, it's bad government which tries to grow rich on credit or in some cases just by looting the labor of the people and in some cases, both at the same time.

One of the first things Mexico did when it began to face up to bankruptcy was to freeze dollar deposits. If you have a dollar in a Mexican bank, as of this writing, you can convert it only to pesoes at the official rate. What that amounts to is expropriation.

Personally, I don't feel sorry for any so-called American firm which gets stung because they're in Mexico to take advantage of cheap labor, often at the expense of American workers whose jobs the corporations exported south of the border.

Maybe they will learn a good lesson. American workers demand a living wage, but they rarely take over your plant and shoot you. When the full impact of Mexico's bankruptcy hits the Mexican people, I would not want to be the manager of a Yankee-owned plant in Mexico. Mexicans are not overly fond of us gringoes even in the best of times; in the worst of times, they are very apt to use any handy gringo as a sacrificial scapegoat.

Aside from the impact on banks and the probable flood of refugees if Mexico goes violent, our main problem will be to stop the big banks from hanging the American taxpayers with their losses. They are very good at doing this; so beware.

Family, other disputes part of Nevada primary

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Sen. Howard Cannon, accused by his opponent of being part of a "good old boy" crowd in Congress, is facing a tough battle for renomination in a primary Sept. 14 that has been made into a family affair by other candidates.

One couple is taking a team approach with the husband running for the Republican Senate nomination and the wife for the House.

Elsewhere, a former state senator and one-time blackjack dealer is being challenged for a House nomination by her ex-husband, who named his dog as campaign manager and is accused of being a spoiler. Their divorce settlement went all the way to the state Supreme Court.

Challenging Cannon, 70, in the Democratic primary is Rep. Jim Santini, 45, who has spent eight years in the House.

Cannon, a 24-year-veteran of the Senate, has criticized Santini as a pawn of "big oil" interests that have provided large campaign donations and for being a "boll weevil" Democrat who has sided with Republicans in Congress.

Santini has retorted that Cannon won't disclose how he became a millionaire while in Congress, hasn't used his seniority in the best interests of the state, and is part of the "good old boy" crowd in Congress that has pushed the nation to "the brink of a national economic disaster."

Cannon's involvement in the pending Chicago trial of a top Teamsters union official and others for allegedly trying to bribe the senator has not developed into a major campaign issue. Cannon has not been charged.

Also running are two unknowns, Pete Tolotti and Oldrich Brabenec of Reno.

On the Republican side, the race is between Chic Hecht, Rick Fore, Jack Kenney and Sam Cavnar, all of Las Vegas, and political novice George Briscoe of Pahrump.

Fore, 37, a wealthy developer, has waged the strongest campaign. But he has been criticized for his short tenure in the state. He moved to Nevada in 1979.

Hecht, 53, entered the race late, but is a formidable candidate because of his eight years as a state senator and active role in the party.

Cavnar is making his fifth bid for a state office. All his previous efforts have fizzled, but this time he has come up with a "team" approach — his wife Peggy, a former state assemblywoman, is one of three Republican candidates in the 1st Congressional District.

Running on the Democratic side are former Nevada Gaming Commission Chairman Harry Reid, the odds-on favorite; ex-prostitute Dorothy Rolfe; and two others.

In the newly created 2nd District, former state Sen. Mary Gojack, a Reno Democrat, is being challenged by her ex-husband John. Gojack who, while he denies it, has been labeled a spoiler candidate.

Gojack said his experience as a lobbyist, union executive and businessman qualifies him. He declared himself a serious candidate — and then named his dog as his campaign manager.

Mrs. Gojack recently refused to participate in a one-on-one debate with Gojack, saying, "I might consider debating the brains of that campaign, so he'd better send over his dog."

Mrs. Gojack is considered one of the strongest candidates in the seven-way race. She was the Democratic nominee for U.S. Senate in 1980 and pulled in nearly 40 percent of the vote in what had been considered a throwaway race against Republican incumbent Paul Laxalt.

Son's behavior embarrasses mayor

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mayor William H. Hudnut says he was "upset and embarrassed" by his teen-age son, Theodore, who borrowed a marked squad car assigned to the mayor.

On Saturday, Marion County sheriff's deputies had to take the keys away from Theodore Hudnut, 18, said Col. Robin E. Funk.

Funk of the sheriff's department said the youth was allowed to leave the scene with friends.

"Had there been any abuse of the car other than driving over to a friend's house, different action would have been taken," he said.

The squad car was provided to Hudnut by the sheriff's department after the shooting attack in May on LaPorte Mayor A.J. Rumely Jr. In that incident, Rumely was injured and his wife was killed at their home by an intruder.

The youth said his father gave him permission to drive the squad car while his own auto was being repaired, said Deputy Scott A. Robinett.

But the mayor said no one in his family is authorized to use the vehicle.

Theodore, the mayor's youngest child from a first marriage, lives with his mother but occasionally stays with the mayor and his wife.

Wallace trying for fourth term as primaries held in four states

By The Associated Press

Alabama voters were deciding today whether to give George C. Wallace the chance for an unprecedented fourth term as governor, and primary elections were also being held in Arizona, Connecticut and Florida.

"I'm going to be governor again," predicted the 63-year-old Wallace as he spoke to a Labor Day rally in Tuscaloosa. But the one-time bantamweight boxer, paralyzed below the waist from an assassination attempt during a run for the presidency in 1972, would not say if he expected to gain a clear majority in the primary.

His two rivals for the Democratic nomination are Lt. Gov. George McMillan and House Speaker Joe McCorquodale. If no one wins a majority today, the top two finishers will be forced into a Sept. 28 runoff.

"It's hard to beat them all at one time," Wallace said.

The Democratic incumbent, Fob James, is stepping down after a single term. Montgomery Mayor Emory Folmar is unopposed in the Republican primary.

In Arizona, Gov. Bruce Babbitt and Sen. Dennis DeConcini, both Democrats, seem assured of renomination. Babbitt's only challenger died last month, although his name remains on the ballot, and DeConcini has a nominal challenge from Caroline Killeen, an energy crusader from Tucson.

Battling for the Republican nomination for Senate were state Rep. Pete Dunn and Dean Sellers a Mesa real estate developer.

Babbitt's Republican rival in November will be either Senate President Leo Corbet or Glendale auto dealer Evan Mecham.

In Florida, Sen. Lawton Chiles has no Democratic primary opposition, but three Republicans are vying for the nomination to oppose him in November. They are George Snyder, a Sarasota businessman and former Maryland state senate president; state Sen. Van Poole of Fort Lauderdale; and Palm Beach County prosecutor David Bludworth.

Gov. Bob Graham, also a Democrat, is expected to win renomination over Bob Kunst, self-styled spokesman for Florida homosexuals, and Fred Kuhn, a Homestead businessman.

Over 400 killed in weekend traffic

By The Associated Press

At least 428 people died in traffic accidents around the nation as millions of Americans took to the road for the three-day Labor Day weekend.

The National Safety Council had estimated beforehand that between 460 and 550 people might die on streets and highways during the period from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Monday.

Take two aspirin ... carefully

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The medicines you take to help can wind up making you sicker if you're not careful about when you take them and what you swallow them with.

Is a sip of water enough or do you need a whole glass?

When the label on the bottle says "after meals" does it mean immediately after or two hours later?

What happens if you take vitamins with your prescription drugs — without telling your doctor what you're doing?

INTERACTIONS BETWEEN different types of drugs or between foods and drugs can cause illness or even death. If your doctor does not provide detailed instructions about how to take your drugs — or if you don't follow those instructions — you could experience serious side effects or make the medicine worthless.

A program proposed by the Carter administration would have required patient package inserts, dubbed "PPIs," to provide consumers with detailed information about 10 drug classes representing more than 300 individual drug products. The Reagan administration has moved to scrap the program in favor of voluntary labeling by manufacturers.

Consumers, meanwhile, will have to take steps to protect themselves.

JOSEPH GRAEDON, a pharmacologist and author of "The People's Pharmacy" and "The People's Pharmacy — 2," says there are several things you can do to avoid trouble.

First, says Graedon, you should make sure you know the name of your drug and the reason it is being prescribed. Many drugs with similar-sounding names — and spellings — have different uses. Ask the doctor to pronounce the name of the one prescribed for you and have him or her spell it so you can write it down.

Ask exactly when you should take your pills. In general, the instructions "take on an empty stomach" mean at least one hour before meals or two hours after. The phrase "with meals" means just before, during or immediately after eating. And "eating" means a regular meal — not just a snack.

The most common liquids people use to wash down their medicines are fruit juices, milk and water. But fruit juice can reduce the effectiveness of some important antibiotics, including penicillin, Gradeon says. Milk doesn't mix with iron and interferes with the proper absorption of tetracycline antibiotics.

AS A GENERAL RULE, Graedon says, it is safe to take a drug with a glass of water. A glass. Not a sip. "Skimping on liquid can reduce the amount of drug that gets into your bloodstream by as much as one-half," he warns.

Foods can be just as dangerous as drugs when it comes to interactions.

The Food and Drug Administration points out, for example, that licorice extracted from natural sources contains a substance which, when consumed regularly in high amounts, can cause blood pressure to rise and could counteract the effects of medication prescribed to lower blood pressure.

ONE OF THE MOST hazardous reactions, according to the FDA, is the one between monoamine oxidase or MAO inhibitors and a wide range of aged or fermented foods.

MAO inhibitors are often prescribed for depression or high blood pressure; they can react adversely with things like pickled herring, salami, sharp or aged cheeses, yogurt, sour cream, chicken livers, avocados, soy sauce, beer, Chianti wine and even bananas.

Some drugs are particularly irritating to the digestive tract; many people are familiar with the potential dangers of aspirin and already take substitute mediciations.

But Graedon says similar reactions also occur with common arthritis and asthma medicines which generally work better and are less likely to cause trouble if they are taken with, during or after a meal.

GRAEDON SAYS AMERICANS often take more drugs than they need, but he says the warnings about overuse of drugs should not lead patients to ignore the medicines that can help them. "While there have been abuses and scandals, never forget that drugs also save lives," he says. "We may be an overmedicated society, but that does not mean you throw away the life raft when the ship is sinking."

Government official: Genetic counseling can help reduce numbers of mentally retarded babies born

By JOHN JACOBS
Hearst Feature Service

The number of mentally retarded babies born each year could be cut in half with proper genetic counseling, thus saving taxpayers a minimum of $1.5 million for each baby not born, according to the Reagan administration's top official for the mentally retarded.

Fred Krause, executive director of the President's Committee on Mental Retardation, said that "at least 50 percent" of the 164,000 new cases of mental retardation each year could be avoided by a combination of genetic counseling, pre-birth screening of high-risk parents, prenatal genetic diagnosis, screening of newborn infants and early treatment of affected children.

KRAUSE SAID 6.5 MILLION Americans — 3.5 percent of the population — suffer some degree of mental retardation. The federal government spends $4 billion a year on 52 programs for the mentally retarded, and Krause said that the lifetime care of a mentally retarded person costs at least $1.5 million in tax money and could cost double that.

Krause said that genetic counseling would provide information with which parents then could make up their own minds about what steps to take. "There is no case I know of," Krause said, "where the patient says to a doctor, 'I want to have a defective child.'"

These are his suggestions for reducing the frequency of mental retardation:

• GENETIC COUNSELING. In this service, trained professionals analyze the risk of genetic disease among people, for example, who have a family history of birth defects or genetically-caused disease. If such a family has already had one child born with a defect, counseling would focus on the statistical likelihood that another baby would be born with defects.

• SCREENING OF NEWBORNS. Certain diseases, such as PKE, an inborn metabolic absence of an enzyme, or congenital hypothyroidism, which frequently causes retardation, can be diagnosed by testing a sample of a newborn baby's blood, and dietary treatment can be started before brain damage begins.

• COMMON SENSE PRECAUTIONS. These include keeping babies away from brain-damaging lead in paint, ceramics and magazine pages, and making sure babies are strapped into car seats when in automobiles. Children of migrant farm workers, Krause said, sometimes eat clay, which contains pika, a chemical compound that can damage the brain.

• GENETIC DIAGNOSIS. These are tests on a fetus to provide information to parents on the chances of having a defective baby. Techniques include radiography, ultrasound and — most commonly — amniocentesis, which involves inserting a needle into the womb of the pregnant woman and withdrawing amniotic fluid, which can be analyzed for abnormal conditions.

As women get older, the chance of producing a baby with Down's syndrome (mongoloidism) increases. For the woman under 30, the chances are less than one in a thousand. By age 35, the chance has increased to one in 400. By age 40, the risk is about one in 100. By age 45, it is one in 32 and by age 50 it is one in 10.

Toxic shock syndrome still causing illness, deaths

By VICTOR COHN
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Toxic shock syndrome is causing almost as much illness as it did during the height of the scare in 1980, and the products some authorities blame for it — high absorbency tampons — are selling nearly as well as ever.

Starting Dec. 20, the Food and Drug Administration for the first time will require manufacturers to print notices on or inside tampon packages advising women to use only the least absorbent kind needed.

Although toxic shock syndrome (TSS) once caused near hysteria, it is now almost ignored.

This is partly because women have become accustomed to the convenience of tampons, and giving up familiar brands because of a slight chance of developing toxic shock syndrome seems almost as preposterous as walking to avoid the danger of car accidents. "You can't tell young women not to use tampons," an FDA doctor said. "That's part of their culture now."

PHYSICIANS, IT IS TRUE, are not reporting toxic shock cases to state health departments as often as they once did, medical statisticians said, so reported totals are down in some states.

But latest figures from the federal Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta show that about 50 cases a month still are occurring, with a 3.3 percent fatality rate. Surveillance in Minnesota, a state that carefully monitors all hospital admissions, shows almost as many cases as in early 1981, when the nation was still in the throes of the toxic shock scare.

THE SUBJECT IS STILL one of mystery and medical controversy. The Journal of the American Medical Association recently aired the views of Yale statisticians who think the case against tampons is biased and unproved.

They said that all the early publicity about toxic shock syndrome strongly linked it with menstruation and, soon, with tampons. They said this could have biased all subsequent observations simply by alerting women and doctors to suspect the disease following tampon use.

What are the facts? From a strict scientific viewpoint, they remain uncertain. The subject is new and no one can claim true "proof" of almost anything about this disease.

And yet:

• THE OVERWHELMING majority of medical officials and investigators believe more strongly than ever that tampon use is associated with most cases. This majority includes CDC officials in Atlanta as well as members of an Institute of Medicine study group at the National Academy of Sciences.

• THE MINNESOTA HEALTH Department, which has continued to search for all toxic shock cases, is convinced that high-absorbency tampons continue to be the main triggers of infection, with the amount of absorbency the key to how risky a product is.

• THE DISEASE, however, is not exclusively one of women, or women using tampons, though women are more affected than men, and women aged 15 to 24 are most affected. Some cases occur in menstruating women not using tampons; some in women after childbirth. In men and women, other cases are mainly associated with infections from burns, boils, cuts, abscesses, insect bites and "you name it," one health official said.

• THE GUILTY "BUG" in all cases is apparently a particular strain of staphylococcus, possibly one that either first appeared or first flourished in the late 1970s. The staph bug produces a toxin or toxins that cause the symptoms. Most cases respond to antibiotics, though in a few there may be long-term ill effects.

The disease is still uncommon, as diseases go. By official statistics, even tampon-using women have only about one chance in 10,000 of contracting it in a given 12-month period. The actual risk may be five to 10 times greater — there is good evidence that several thousands of cases are going unreported — but the threat of contracting toxic shock syndrome still is not great.

THE VERY NAME toxic shock syndrome was unknown until 1978, but by June 1980 CDC had counted 130 victims. By early 1981 the number had dropped to around 50 a month, and it has stayed close to that.

The typical symptoms include sudden fever and vomiting or diarrhea, or both, sometimes headache, sore throat and aching muscles, then within a few days a red, sunburn-like rash and, often, severely falling blood pressure, the "shock" part of the disease, causing kidney failure and disorientation.

In June 1980, CDC epidemiologists determined that most of the victims — like more than 70 percent of the 70 million American women of menstrual age — used tampons. In September, when it became clear that Procter & Gamble's high absorbency Rely was the tampon most (but far from entirely) involved, the manufacturer ended Rely sales.

P&G STILL MAINTAINS there was "no defect" in Rely. It is still fighting lawsuits by affected women or families. So far, it has appealed a $300,000 award to one woman's survivors. It settled another case out of court.

CDC epidemiologists continue to think Rely Super was the riskiest tampon. However, Dr. Michael Osterholm of the highly regarded Minnesota Health Department maintains that Rely was identified principally because it had the lion's share of "the high-absorbency market."

"The risk of TSS was more closely associated with tampon fluid capacity (absorbency)" than with any one brand, Osterholm wrote in the April Journal of Infectious Diseases.

Osterholm also studied the absorbency of tampons made in 1979-1980. Playtex Super Plus, o.b. Super Plus, Tampax Super Plus, Kotex Super and Playtex Super were all in the highest-absorbency group with Rely Super. In a mid-group were o.b. Super and Playtex Regular; in a somewhat lower absorbency group, Kotex Regular, o.b. Regular, Tampax Super and, the least absorbent, Tampax Slender. Since then, he says, Kotex has reduced absorbency and one other maker, which he said he cannot name, has increased it somewhat.

CDC'S DR. ARTHUR REINGOLD calls the Minnesota evidence against absorbency "interesting" and demanding of more study but still unproved. A CDC comparison of 50 affected women with 150 who were unaffected detected no connection with tampon absorbency.

But the CDC study was a small one, and the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology told women in October 1980, "it would be prudent, at present, to discontinue the use of the newly developed, super-absorbent tampons." The Institute of Medicine group last June advised "minimizing" use of high absorbency products.

DIET CENTER®
"The Natural Way to Lose Weight!"
When you decide to lose weight,
COMPARE!

There are hundreds of ways to lose weight. Diet Center suggests that before you start any reducing program, you compare. Consult your doctor. Talk to people who have been on the programs you are considering. Ask yourself if this is a plan you can live with, one that will enable you to keep weight off once you have lost it. If you will do this, we are confident that you will select Diet Center.
The following is a basic introduction to the Diet Center Program.

we don't:	we do:
Use shots or drugs to stimulate weight loss. This would not conform to our totally natural approach.	Employ a 100% natural food supplement that stabilizes the blood sugar level and eliminates hunger.
Use prepackaged foods. We know that in order to maintain your weight loss, you must learn to plan your own meals.	Provide a comprehensive education in food selection and preparation techniques from natural sources.
Rely upon ketosis or any other unhealthful, physical state to promote weight loss.	Provide 100% of the daily nutrient requirements as outlined by the U.S. RDA and the 7 U.S. Dietary goals.
Make unrealistic claims as to the speed or effectiveness of our weight-loss program.	Achieve an average weight loss of 17 to 25 pounds in 6 weeks, a rate that can be sustained as needed.
Use computers or group therapy to overcome the uniquely personal problem of excess weight.	Meet daily, in private, with each dieter to determine and solve individual problems and chart progress.
Employ celebrities to present Diet Center in our advertising messages.	Publish unsolicited testimonials from real people who have overcome real weight problems at Diet Center.
Charge for any additional services beyond our basic reducing phase of the program.	Provide weekly classes in nutrition and behavior modification and a lifetime maintenance program, free of charge.
Require contracts or charge more than a fair price for the honest service that is rendered.	Encourage dieters to remain on the program only as long as they feel they are receiving their money's worth.
Employ high-pressure sales tactics to "sign you up" on our program. When you are ready, we are ready.	Offer a free, introductory consultation to supply you with the information needed to make your own decision.

We're Diet Center, and we've been helping people lose weight for over ten years. Our program works, and it's totally natural. There are over 1,350 Diet Center locations all across the United States and Canada. Call your local Diet Center Counselor today; it could change your life.

AT WIT'S END
Terrible toos strike everyone

By ERMA BOMBECK

A couple of years ago, mothers everywhere isolated a chunk of frustration out of their time frame and called it the "Terrible Twos."

The label stuck and today it still conjures up a picture of a 35-inch child with a lighted fuse coming out of each ear, three sets of feet and eight arms whose main purpose in life is to measure the stress factor of a mother.

Little is said about the "Terrible Toos."

For that matter, no one is quite sure at what age the Terrible Toos strikes, but it zeroes in on children who sometimes suffer from it for the rest of their lives.

If you want to stay up late and watch TV, your mother tells you you're too young. On the other hand if you throw a temper tantrum, your father reminds you you're too old.

If you want to play basketball, the coach tells you you're too small. An hour or so later when you want to play on the swings, the playground supervisor tells you you're too big.

Your grandmother tells you you're too small for the training bra, yet when you go to the movies and want to pay a child's price, the manager tells you you're too big.

If you want to wear heels on a date, you're too tall.

If you want to ride a two-wheel bicycle, you're too short to reach the pedals.

If you ask an embarrassing question, you're too young.

If you want to sit on your mother's lap, you're too old.

No one who has ever broached the subject of marriage with their parents has been anything but too young, yet if you cry over it, you're too old.

If you wash dishes, you're too slow.

When you eat your ice cream, you're stuffing it in too fast.

If you're ambitious, you want too much and are in too big a hurry.

If you're satisfied with what you're doing you're too lazy to succeed.

We have all suffered from the Terrible Toos. We're always too early or too late, too fat or too thin, too unhappy or too silly.

In 18 years of writing this column, it has either been too long, too short, too late, too serious, or too far out. Will I ever be older than too?

DEAR ABBY
Dry mouth sufferer now wets whistle

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to thank you for an article that you ran recently that has given me more relief and comfort than I can describe.

I am 83, male and reasonably healthy, but in recent years I've been terribly troubled with a dry mouth – especially at night. I complained to my doctor. He just shrugged his shoulders. Then I read your column in the San Francisco Chronicle, and my prayers were answered! In response to a letter asking why a person would use a mouth spray in public, you quoted a dentist who said that as a result of disease, medication, radiation therapy or simply aging, a number of people suffer from "xerostomia" (dry mouth), causing acute discomfort, tooth decay, inability to eat, swallow or talk, as well as difficulty in wearing dentures. He suggested a "saliva substitute" – available at drugstores.

I immediately phoned my druggist, and he had never heard of a "saliva substitute," so I told him to call his supplier and order it. He did, and the next day I picked it up and used it. Abby, I will be eternally grateful to you and that dentist. No more dry mouth! God bless you. Sign me — GRATEFUL IN PARADISE, CALIF.

DEAR GRATEFUL: I'll print your letter for the benefit of others who suffer from dry mouth and are not aware of "saliva substitutes."

DEAR ABBY: Recently I attended a lovely wedding and reception. I was invited by Nancy, a cousin of the bride. I had never met the bride or groom, but I accompanied Nancy because she needed an escort.

I didn't know whether a gift was expected of me, or even appropriate. Under the circumstances, should Nancy have provided the gift from both of us? Should I have offered to share the cost of Nancy's gift? Or should I have sent my own gift? Please give your opinion for future reference. — EMPTY-HANDED ESCORT

DEAR ESCORT: A note of appreciation and good wishes would have been appropriate, mannerly and adequate.

DEAR ABBY: Now I've seen everything: a letter from a man who bathes too much! He claims his wife likes him better when he is not freshly bathed, so he bathes only two or three times a week and everybody's happy.

What do you want to bet that SHE hates to bathe, and if she can get her husband to bathe less, he won't notice how bad SHE smells. —SQUEAKY CLEAN IN KENT, OHIO

DEAR SQUEAKY: The response to that letter was nothing to sniff at. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I can understand the wife who didn't want her husband to bathe too much. My husband has a very special, subtle scent all his own, which I love. He works out with weights on alternate days, and bathes afterward. He rarely bathes in between unless he's gotten overly warm or dirty. Yet in the four years we've been married, I've never noticed an unpleasant body odor. When he's away on business, I sleep on his side of the bed in the comfort of his scent. Not only does his skin have a lovely fragrance, he has a very sweet breath, with kisses sweeter than strawberries and cream.

And lest you think I am somehow insensitive to unpleasant body odors, I work with a man who could wilt an artificial plant at 20 paces. — SCENT-SITIVE IN SEATTLE

Jones spends most of his time on tour

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Tom Jones cut his first record in 1964. Six years later, after performing in England, Europe, Japan, the United States and South Africa, the South Wales native had gone from working as a laborer in his hometown of Pontypridd as a youth, to superstar status with an international reputation.

In 1970, he spent part of his American tour performing in Las Vegas. As he was finishing up in Vegas, Jones and his group, who then lived in England, accepted an invitation. The invitation was to leave him richer in friendships as well as in memories.

It was also to leave him the proud wearer of the 1968 RCA (Rodeo Cowboys Association, later changed to Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association) world championship bull riding belt buckle — a momento he still wears onstage today.

"I was down on the ranch, the Paul ranch, in 1970 I think it was," Jones said in a recent telephone interview. Pausing to think it over, Jones began again, his brusque Welsh accent much heavier when he talks than when he sings. "Yes, it was 1970. I had just finished in Vegas. I had some time off and I was invited to go to the ranch. So we did.

"WE WENT DOWN there and we had a great time," Jones recalled. "George Paul was alive then and they put on a rodeo for us. We had four or five memorable days down there and as I was leaving I admired his belt buckle that he had won in 1968. I said, 'What a great looking buckle.' He took it off and gave it to me. I've worn it ever since."

A native of New Mexico, Paul was the 1968 RCA bull riding champion. Not too long after this visit, Paul was killed when his private plane crashed. When he first acquired the buckle, Jones wore it onstage because "it's a very attractive buckle," but since Paul's death, Jones said, "it's a sentimental gift to me now."

Jones continues to play Vegas, spending two months of the year there.

"I'm there four times a year, two weeks at a time," Jones said.

While in Vegas, as well as when he travels on tour, Jones shifts his life to a night schedule. In past years when he would finish at 2 a.m. in Vegas, he would remain up until 8 a.m., eating breakfast right before he went to bed.

"I USED TO DO that, but I found out I was putting on weight, so now I don't eat before I go to sleep," Jones said laughing. "I eat breakfast when most people are eating their dinner. When I work Vegas, I eat breakfast at 6 o'clock in the evening because I get up about 4 o'clock in the afternoon."

Jones spends the time between 4 and 6 p.m. working out. But he devotes more time to remaining physically fit when he is at home in Los Angeles.

"I work out as much as possible especially when I'm not on the road. When I'm at home in Los Angeles, I've got a small gymnasium in the house, I punch a heavy bag and I lift weights and all that kind of stuff, to try to keep in shape to go onstage, because I think when you're onstage you should give somebody something to look at as well as listen to."

Touring represents a large part of Jones' time. It is much easier for him to tour now that he lives in this country.

"I'm on the road for about seven months of the year, on and off; we spread it out through the year. I come on the road for a month and then I'll take a week off. It's not bad.

"Living in Los Angeles has made it a lot easier. When I lived in England, I had to come over for six or seven months at a time and do the tour straight through."

HIS UPCOMING Midland performance at Chaparral Center falls into the second week of one such four-week tour which began in Denver, Colo. Tickets for the 8 p.m. Thursday concert are available at Endless Horizons and Chaparral Center.

A U.S. resident, Jones has lived in Los Angeles for the past six years. During the three months of the year he is at home, he records. Jones has just cut an album, "Tom Jones Country," and a new single, "A Woman's Touch," which are currently "just getting into the record shops."

He enjoys doing live shows because when he records he said, "It's very difficult for me to know which direction to take when I make a record, whether to do a country record, or a rhythm and blues or a big ballad. But onstage I can do the whole thing so the show is a mixture of rock'n'roll, rhythm and blues, country and western, some standards and then I do a medley of the songs that I've recorded myself."

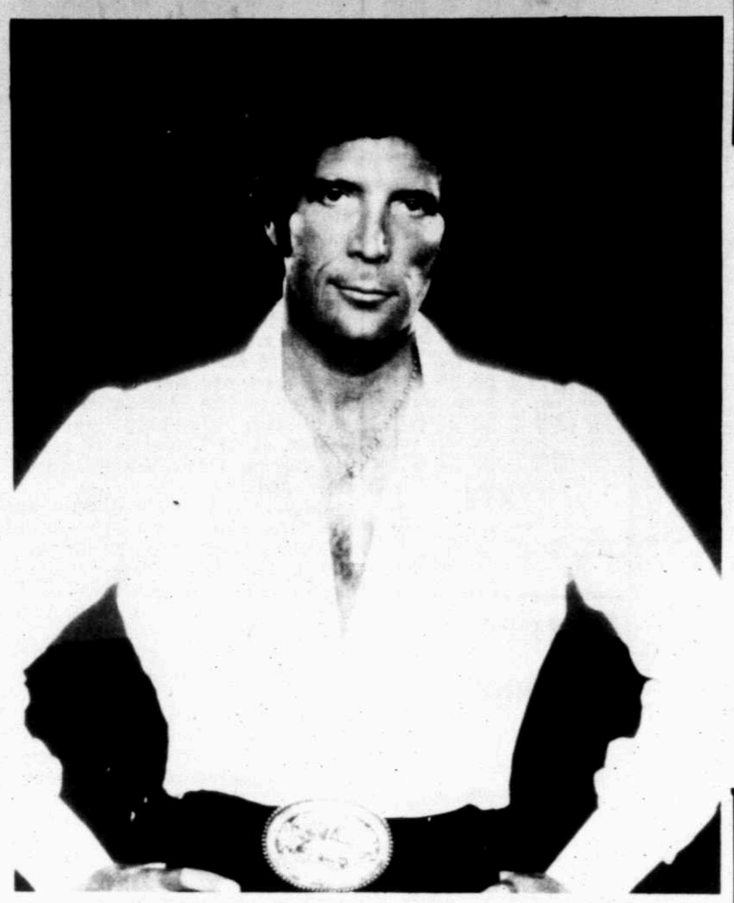

Jones' career began in his homeland, Wales.

"I started off in South Wales. When I was 16 years old, I started singing in clubs (often after working all day in a laborer's job) and then I got my first hit record when I was 24. And it just went from there," Jones said. Pausing, he added, "But I had to move to London from Wales — you could only work in clubs and ballrooms and things like that (in Wales) — I had to go to London in order to record. They weren't making records in Wales at the time. Now I think they do.

"That was in 1964. It just got bigger from there."

He credits his London television series, "This is Tom Jones," produced by ABC, as providing the necessary impetus to his career — the boost which he feels sold him to American audiences.

"We recorded them in London, they went out worldwide, but what we were doing, we were aiming at the American market because I've always wanted to be accepted in America. Most singers, most foreign singers, don't feel that they've really arrived until they make it in the United States."

Tom Jones performs in Midland Thursday at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center. In a recent interview, Jones discussed his upcoming show, his life and one of his momentoes — the belt buckle he always wears onstage. Tickets for the concert may be purchased at Endless Horizons and Chaparral Center. Onstage first will be comedian George Wallace.

Pope to postpone trip to Spain until after election

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II has decided to postpone his planned trip to Spain until after the Oct. 28 Spanish parliamentary election, the Vatican announced today.

The official Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, said the pontiff would make his trip to Spain in early November instead of mid-October.

Panciroli did not give any official explanation for the postponement but some liberal and church political leaders in Spain were known to think that the pope's trip might be used to influence voters.

'Randy Andy' photographed with showgirls

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew, living up to the nickname "Randy Andy," was photographically splashed across the pages of a British tabloid today, his arms around two showgirls.

The picture in the Sun showed the 22-year-old second son of Queen Elizabeth II with one arm around Carol Hungerford, 27, and the other around Carole St. James, 28. His feet were propped atop the table in the officers' mess of his ship, the aircraft carrier HMS Invincible.

The two women were part of a troupe that was flown in to entertain the fleet that helped recapture the Falkland Islands in June. After putting on a show for the Invincible's crew, they attended a party in the officers' mess that lasted until 3 a.m., the paper said.

British tabloids have nicknamed Andrew "Randy Andy" because of his taste for pretty women. The Sun said he was "grinning from ear to ear" as the two girls and their 18-year-old partner Tracy Thomson, who make up the dance act Dream, went through their scantily-clad routine during the show for the crew.

The Sun quoted Ms. St. James as saying: "He's a very attractive man, and he knows it. He's certainly a flirt and it's quite clear he likes being with the ladies...

"He told us to call him 'H' and kept introducing us as 'these beautiful girls.' I was singing 'You made me love you' and he sang the second verse to me. Other people kept coming up to talk to him but he never left us...

"He said he wants to see us again when he gets back to London. He didn't take his eyes off us when we were dancing. The ship was moving so much I thought I might fall into his lap. That would have been nice."

Why Mexico is in trouble economically

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mexico's economic troubles have sent shock waves throughout the financial community, especially in the United States. Mexico owes U.S. banks billions of dollars, and the economies of the two countries are extensively intertwined. U.S. bankers say their fears were not reduced by last week's government takeover of the private banking system. Here are details in question-and-answer form.

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Thousands of Mexicans used to cross the U.S. border every day from communities throughout the Rio Grande Valley to go shopping or sightseeing. Thousands more hopped planes for New York, Chicago, Los Angeles or other cities for more of the same.

Commerce was also brisk on the Mexican side of the border, with U.S. shoppers and tourists taking advantage of bargain prices.

No longer. The Mexican government, struggling with the nation's worst recession in 70 years, has issued new currency control regulations that limit the flow of dollars in both directions. It also took control of private Mexican banks to halt the exodus of badly needed funds.

Q: What has happened?

A: The bottom has fallen out of the Mexican economy after a period of unparalleled prosperity. The oil boom has stopped. Ambitious projects to develop industry are stalled. It is predicted that unemployment and inflation will soar.

The reasons for the crisis: The country has been borrowing heavily abroad. It suddenly found itself spending much more than it was earning. The government did not react quickly enough to the continuing drop in prices of oil, silver, coffee and other major exports.

Q: What steps have been taken to solve the financial crisis?

A: President Jose Lopez Portillo took over the Mexican banking system last week and imposed full exchange controls, saying the banks were to blame for $14 billion in savings leaving the country in recent months. The government previously had frozen $13 billion in dollar accounts in Mexican banks.

The Mexican peso, devalued twice this year has been fixed at 70 pesos to the dollar for most transactions after dropping as low as 250 to the dollar in panic trading to buy dollars on the black market.

Economists are not sure how the measures will solve the basic problem — raising the $14 billion to $17 billion Mexico needs this year to meet payments due on its $81 billion foreign debt.

Many analysts partly blame American and other foreign banks for the crisis because of careless and overeager lending.

Q: How does this affect the average Mexican?

A: A government austerity program withdrawing subsidies has doubled prices of tortillas and other basic foods, gasoline, electricity and other essential services. Rents are higher.

Thousands of state and private workers have been laid off, feeding an already serious problem of unemployment and underemployment that affects 40 percent of the working-age population.

Mexicans traveling outside the country will legally only be able to obtain $250 per person, drastically limiting their buying power. Many observers think a black market in U.S. dollars will flourish.

Q: Will this cause unrest and other turmoil?

A: The government actually won support from workers' groups and socialist opponents in expropriating the banks, which Lopez Portillo said had been "sacking the country."

While anxiety about the economy is prevalent at all levels, all rumors about troop movements and disturbances in the provinces have proved false.

Despite differences within the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, there is no sign it will lose its 53-year control over Mexican politics.

Q: Why is the crisis important to the United States?

A: Mexico is the United States' third-largest trading partner after Canada and Japan, and one of its principal suppliers of oil. It is right next door, sharing a sparsely patrolled border some 1,760 miles long.

U.S. banks hold the bulk of Mexico's foreign debt.

Continental denies Texas move planned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An airline spokesman on Monday denied published reports that Continental Airlines plans to move its headquarters from Los Angeles to Houston.

The Daily Breeze of Torrance said the Los Angeles-based airline planned to move to Houston as a first step to a complete merger with Texas International.

Texas Air Corp., parent company of Texas International and New York Air, acquired 51 percent control of Continental last year after a fierce takeover battle and shareholders approved financial combination of the two companies in July.

"There are no plans at this time for Continental to move to Houston," Texas International spokesman Bruce Hicks said from his Houston home. "Such a move is one of a number of options being looked at ... but it is one of 15 or 20 options being considered.

"We have said that at some point, it makes sense to have a single airline, but just what that point is, is still under consideration," Hicks said. "There is no announcement planned and no announcement is imminent."

The newspaper in its Monday editions that Texas Air Corp. Chairman Frank Lorenzo could announce a general outline of the move as early as next week.

The newspaper quoted an unnamed Continental official as saying Texas International's 36 DC-9s will be repainted in Continental colors and that Texas International name will be retired.

"I don't know of any plans this month to begin any identity change," Hicks said. "We said in our proxy statement to shareholders in the spring that the Texas International name will begin to change in the fall to more closely identify ... with Continental and Continental's name will remain. Officially, I'm not going to go beyond that.

"But there is no question that the Continental name will not change."

Hicks said a number of Continental and Texas International operations have been combined and a revamped schedule that eliminated competing flights went into effect in June.

"TI management already has substantially taken over head office functions," a Continental employee who requested anonymity told the Daily Breeze.

"The next step is to merge more," the newspaper quoted Continental spokesman Jack Gregory. "We're doing it a little bit at a time. There's no need to rush anything."

Continental employs about 3,500 people in the Los Angeles area and the newspaper said Continental President George Warde would discuss a move to Texas with those employees later this month.

Hicks said he knows of no planned discussions between employees and Warde.

"There are a lot of things being considered, a lot of things being looked at," Texas Air Corp. spokesman John Carlson told the newspaper.

Continental spokesmen could not be reached at home for comment Monday, but Hicks said he could speak for both Continental and Texas International.

At the July shareholders meeting, Lorenzo said Continental had a "very severe productivity problem," but added, "we expect to continue operating the airlines as two different entities."

Continental lost $60 million last year and Texas International lost $47.2 million. The two companies have a $295 million long-term debt, which was restructured in July.

The newspaper said financial considerations apparently made it impossible for the two airlines to continue operating separetly.

"Everyone recognizes we have to start making some money," Carlson said. "We've got to get our act together."

August construction statistics down

Building permit activity in Midland in August fell behind the rate recorded in August a year ago, and behind the July, 1982, rate, but cumulative totals for the year to date are still running ahead of last year's figures, according to data from the city's Permits and Inspections Department.

The city issued 191 permits for a total valuation of $11.77 million this past month, compared to 285 permits for construction valued at $31.71 million for the same month a year ago.

In July 1982, the city issued 282 permits for construction valied at $16.12 million.

Last year by Aug. 31, the city had issued 1,980 permits worth $182.9 million. This year's totals have already surpassed that figure, reflecting increased permit activity and construction in the first six months of 1982.

By Aug. 31, the city had issued 2,260 building permits in 1982, for construction valued at $214.02 million.

The number of building, electrical, and plumbing inspections performed by city employees continues to run ahead of last year's totals also, as the city keeps tabs on new commercial and residential construction projects.

Of the 191 permits issued in August 1982 the city approved 44 new single family residences, (down by 50 percent from July's total), three duplexes, one apartment of 15 units at 3007 W. Louisiana, the Plaza Motor Inn motel of 29 units, located at 32306 W. Front Street, and seven mobile homes.

In July 1982, the city had issued permits for 96 new single family residences.

Under August's commercial construction heading, the city approved a day care center at 1321 S. Goode, one fast food restaurant for Midland Park Mall, four office buildings, (4110 N. Big Spring, 2500 N. Big Spring, and at Midland Regional Air Terminal), a tire center and one retread shop, two warehouse/offices, one parking garage at 505 N. Carrizo, and the Mission Square Shopping Center on N. Big Spring Street near ClayDesta Plaza.

Total valuation of the commercial work was $6.37 million; it was $3.44 million for the single family residences. The total for the month, when all permit categories are included, came to $11,769,019, less than half the figure in August a year ago, when the total was $31,710,987.

In addition, the city granted 35 commercial and 76 residential alteration permits during the month.

Marietta shareholders favor Bendix offer

NEW YORK (AP) — Bendix Corp. says about 58 percent of the outstanding shares of the Martin Marietta Corp. have been tendered to Bendix, representing a "clear referendum by Marietta shareholders" in favor of Bendix's takeover offer.

But a Martin Marietta spokesman says the figure provided Monday in a Bendix statement is "meaningless."

Bendix is trying to gain control of Martin Marietta through a buyout of its outstanding stock before Martin Marietta can do the same to Bendix.

Bendix said it received tenders for 20.6 million Martin Marietta shares, well more than were sought under its $1.5 billion takeover bid. Bendix had offered to buy up to 15.8 million shares by a Saturday night deadline.

"The results are a clear referendum by Marietta shareholders in favor of the Bendix offer," said Bendix Chairman William Agee.

But Martin Marietta didn't concede defeat. "The number of shares tendered is meaningless at this point, since there are withdrawal rights in effect," a spokesman said.

It is possible that "Martin Marietta can vote the Bendix stock before Bendix can vote the Martin Marietta shares it might buy," the spokesman said.

Bendix had surprised Martin Marietta officials with an Aug. 25 offer to take over the Bethesda, Md.-based company for $43 a share, or $1.5 billion. Martin Marietta instead said it would try to acquire Bendix, offering Bendix shareholders $75 a share, or $1.8 billion.

Both companies took the battle to court, with Martin Marietta charging Bendix in a Baltimore federal court suit with manipulating the market in Martin Marietta stock by leaking information about the impending takeover bid.

Last Thursday, Bendix asked a federal judge in Detroit to block Martin Marietta's takeover bid, and asked for damages against the Martin Marietta board of directors for what interference with its initial offer.

U.S. District Judge Joseph Young, handling Marietta's suit in Baltimore, ordered the second case brought before him.

Martin Marietta is an important aerospace contractor and has significant business in aluminum and construction materials. Bendix is a prime suppliier of components to the automobile, aviation and defense industries.

IPAMS head resigns, replacement sought

DENVER, The Independent Petroleum Association of Mountain States, (IPAMS), announced recently that Lawrence E. Siegel, executive director, will be leaving the association in mid-October to serve in a volunteer program in central Mexico.

W. H. (Bill) Leach, IPAMS president, said, "Under Larry's guidance this past 2 1/2 years, IPAMS has nearly doubled in size to over 1,800 members and initiated many new programs that will serve the industry for years to come. His ambition to become a volunteer in a foreign land is typical of his devotion to serving others. It is with deep regret that we accept his resignation."

According to Leach, a search committee headed by Robert L. Manning, Jr. has been appointed to find a successor to Siegel. Interested candidates may contact the IPAMS office in Denver.

Money supply reported up

NEW YORK (AP) — The amount of cash in circulation rose more than expected in the latest reporting week, apparently standing in the way of further interest rate declines soon.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Friday that the money supply increased $1.5 billion in the final week of August.

"The Fed is marking time," said David Jones, an economist at the securities firm of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. He said he did not expect the Fed to further reduce its discount rate, which is the rate it charges on loans to financial institutions.

As a result, Jones and some other economists said they did not expect further declines in the prime lending rates for corporations any time soon. The current rate is 13.5 percent at most banks.

Aluminum contract talks fail

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The United Steelworkers union and the nation's three largest aluminum producers have failed to reach agreement on reopening the current contract to reduce labor costs.

The two sides ended their talks Friday after the week-long effort failed to produce any results.

"Even though a great effort was made, the parties have been unable to come to an accommodation. As a result we have concluded our discussions without a solution," said USW district director Bruce Thrasher.

Thrasher told a closed-door meeting of the union's policy-making Aluminum Industry Conference that the contract talks with the Aluminum Co. of America, Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. and Reynolds Metals Co. were "on friendly terms with no hard feelings."

The companies and Thrasher said informal talks will continue on the aluminum industry's problems before the current contract expires in May 1983.

Europe responds to embargo

LONDON (AP) — Officials of four West European governments have drafted responses to the U.S. embargo on supplying the Soviet Union with equipment for the Siberian natural gas pipeline.

"Various proposals for action were put forward in a spirit of cooperation and solidarity bearing in mind the wider interests involved," a Foreign Office spokesman said of the meeting of British, French, West German and Italian representatives.

No details were provided Friday, but a British official said there was "no question" of the countries backing down from their defiance of President Reagan's embargo on supplying the Soviets equipment made under U.S. license with American-designed parts.

The officials will report back to their governments before deciding whether to hold another meeting, to which the Americans might be invited, the Foreign Office spokesman said.

Automobile sales up or down

DETROIT (AP) — As auto imports grabbed a record 32.7 percent of the U.S. market during the month, new car sales of the major domestic automakers plunged to lowest daily selling rates in 20 to 21 years.

The five major U.S. carmakers Friday said they sold 164,616 cars in the Aug. 21-31 period, down 32.9 percent from 245,330 in the period a year ago. The daily selling rate of 18,291 was the lowest since 17,748 were sold each day in 1962.

For the month, the domestic automakers sold 409,411 cars, down 32 percent from 601,741 in August 1981. The daily selling rate of 15,747 was the lowest since 15,169 were sold daily in the month in 1961, but analysts it actually was an improvement over the past two months.

The import companies reported 198,980 cars sold in the month, up 1.5 percent from 196,058 in August 1981. Their 32.7 percent share of the market topped their record 31.9 percent share last December.

"You just can't compete with a $4,600 car," said one auto industry analyst, attributing the increase to lower car prices for Japanese autos.

Powerful computer unveiled

NEW YORK (AP) — International Business Machines Corp. has introduced its most powerful computer, the 3084, and has also unveiled a new member of its 3081 series, IBM's second-most powerful line of mainframe computers.

At the same time, IBM Friday cut purchase prices for its two existing 3081 model groups, the D and K, by about 10 percent; raised the lease and rental prices of those machines by up to 10 percent; and cut by up to 25 percent the contract maintenance charges for those computers.

With the introduction of the 3084 and the new 3081G model group, IBM's family of "advanced" mainframe computers, in order of performance, now starts with the 3084, followed by the 3081 model groups K, G and D, and down through the 3083 model groups J, B and E.

The 3084 "was expected" and is mainly aimed at providing current 3083 and 3081 customers the ability to upgrade their machines, said George Elling, industry analyst with Bear, Stearns & Co. "It is for the people who need more processing power, more memory," he said.

Brewer bankrolls minorities

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Anheuser-Busch Cos. Inc., the nation's largest brewer, has announced a $5 million fund to finance minority-owned beer distributorships.

Wayman F. Smith III, Busch's vice president for corporate affairs, also said the brewery will cooperate with a major black university to train potential owners of the distributorships.

Smith Friday told local and national civil rights leaders at the brewery's headquarters in St. Louis that the announcement was not in response to recent criticism from the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Jackson, president of Operation PUSH of Chicago, has said he would recommend a nationwide boycott this week of Anheuser-Busch products in selected cities unless the brewery agreed to involve more blacks and black businesses in their operation.

PUSH is an acronym for "People United to Save Humanity." Its Philadelphia affiliate and a group called the Black Clergy of Philadelphia ended their six-month boycott of Coca-Cola Co. products with the signing Thursday of a hiring and promotion agreement.

Coca-Cola agreed to seek to increase the percentage of black employees to 20 percent of its work force over the next 30 months.

Mutual fund sales near $1 billion

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sales of mutual funds other than short-term funds amounted to $976 million in July, according to the Investment Company Institute, the national association for the mutual fund industry.

Sales of these funds in June were $1.07 billion, including a special underwriting of one fund for $245 million. A year ago July they were $743 million.

Redemptions dropped to $515 million from $540 million in June and $626 million in July 1981.

Thus, funds other than short-term funds had net sales of $461 million in July, $526 million in June and $116 million a year ago.

Assets of these funds rose slightly to $54.6 billion from $54.2 billion in June. A year ago July they were $57.3 billion.

Assets of short-term funds increased; limited maturity municipal bond funds rose to $8.9 billion from $7.9 billion in June and money market fund assets climbed to $213.0 billion from $201.6 billion. Sales of the latter funds in July amounted to $53.2 billion, the largest monthly volume ever.

Defending champs keep on winning

Tracy Austin gets low to return a ball in her match against Virginia Rizici in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships in New York. Austin won the match 6-1, 6-3 to move into the quarterfinals against Hana Mandlikova.

NEW YORK (AP) — Defending champions John McEnroe and Tracy Austin moved into the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships Monday along with top-seeded Martina Navratilova, while upsets eliminated ninth-seeded Yannick Noah in the men's singles and No. 6 Wendy Turnbull.

Kim Warwick of Australia, who upset seventh-seeded Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina in the opening round, shocked Noah 5-7, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4 to also advance into the quarters on the hard courts of the National Tennis Center.

Turnbull fell to 18-year-old Gretchen Rush, a wild-card entry who was just graduated from high school in June, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2.

Extracting revenge for his loss in the French Open, third-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia crushed Sweden's Mats Wilander 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 in a night match. The victory moved Lendl into the quarterfinals.

McEnroe easily ousted Matt Doyle 6-3, 6-4, 6-4; Austin romped past No. 14 Virginia Ruzici of Romania 6-1, 6-3, and Navrtilova breezed by Andrea Leand 6-1, 6-2 in the warm, sunny weather.

Warwick also defeated Noah in a Volvo Grand Prix tournament in Denver in February where he reached the semifinals. But, since then, he won only three more singles matches before the U.S. Open, the world's richest tennis tournament where the men's and women's winners earn $90,000 each.

The 30-year-old right-hander has been hampered for the past two years with tendinitis in his right shoulder. But after dropping the first set, Warwick grabbed the first three games of the second, then served out to even the match.

He broke Noah in the fifth game to even the third set, then won the final three games to pull ahead.

In the final set, Warwick jumped out to a 4-1 lead, lost his serve in the sixth game, then held serve to close out the 2-hour, 49-minute match.

A two-time winner here, Austin raced past Ruzici in 71 minutes as the Romania committed 15 unforced errors to just seven by Austin.

Austin's quarterfinal foe will be fifth-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, a 6-4, 6-2 winner over Vicki Nelson.

Despite winning here last year, the 19-year-old Austin is seeded third this year, a spot she feels is fair.

"I have no complaints about that," she said. "If you look at the record here, but that's not what they go on. They go on the computer on the year, so that is fair."

McEnroe dominated Doyle, a Californian who plays Davis Cup for Ireland because of his parent's heritage. Going for his fourth consecutive U.S. Open title, a feat which has not been accomplished since Bill Tilden in the early 1920's, McEnroe took the opening set by breaking his foe in the fifth game.

The New York left-hander opened the second set by breaking Doyle, then lost his service for the only time in the match. He immediately broke back for a 2-1 lead, then served out the set.

He closed out the two-hour match by breaking Doyle in the ninth game at 15.

"I don't think I played better than I did yesterday (Sunday, when he downed Vince Van Patten 6-3, 6-2, 6-2)," McEnroe said. "My concentration is going to have to be better from now on. You've got to get your mind on the match and don't let things distract you."

Rush enrolled at Trinity University in San Antonio, Texas, the week before the Open started. She advanced to the fourth round by defeating Pam Teeguarden, 11th-seeded Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia and South African Jennifer Mundel.

Also posting victories Monday were fourth-seeded Andrea Jaeger, 6-1, 6-1 over No. 13 Kathy Rinaldi; No. 7 Pam Shriver, 6-3, 6-1 over Ros Fairbank of South Africa, and Bonnie Gadusek, 6-0, 6-0 over Elise Burgin.

Navratilova ran her 1982 record to 68 victories in 69 matches and will now face her doubles teammate, Shriver, in the quarterfinals.

Leand, last year's surprise when she reached the round-of-16 after upsetting Renee Richards, Jaeger and Julie Harrington, posed no threat to Navratilova, whose only loss this year came in the finals of the Avon Championships in March to Sylvia Hanika of West Germany.

Navratilova is going after her fourth consecutive Grand Slam title, having won the Australia Open last year and the French Open and Wimbledon titles in 1982. A victory here also would give her the $1 million Playtex Challenge bonus, an award given the woman who wins four tournaments on four different surfaces.

The Czechoslovakian-born left-hander is seeking her first U.S. Open title. She lost in the finals here a year ago.

Lendl was the first of four seeded players Wilander upset enroute to his title in Paris earlier this year. This time, Lendl didn't allow the young Swede to get into the match.

The Czechoslovakian right-hander broke his opponent in the opening game, and Wilander, who lost a 6½-hour decisive Davis Cup match to McEnroe in July, never recovered. Lendl also broke the Swede in the fifth game in taking the first set.

Blasting away from the baseline and occasionally coming to the net, Lendl dominated Wilander, facing only seven break points — four in the first set and three in second — in the match. He broke Wilander in the first and fifth games of the second set and the first and seventh games of the final set to advance to a quarterfinal meeting against Warwick.

Barnes' entries sweep Futurity

Midland horse finishes 4th in richest race

RUIDOSO DOWNS (AP) — Oklahoman Marvin L. Barnes knew the kind of horse it would take to win the All-American Futurity — three straight defeats during the growing years of the world's richest quarter horse race had provided him with that much.

Mr. Master Bug proved he was that type of horse Monday when he outran nine other 2-year-olds to win the $1 million first place check in the 440-yard race that offered a record, total purse of $2.5 million.

"When I first broke him I knew he was going to be a runner," said Barnes after the victory that made him the first quarter horse owner to win a million dollars in a single race. "I've never had one this good."

Actually, Barnes never has had a better day at the races. His filly, Miss Squaw Hand, finished second to earn another $342,500 for the Ada, Oklahoma horseman.

The one-two finish also wiped out years of frustration for Barnes, who from 1966-68 saw three of his horses beaten in the futurity. It was during those years that the All-American began to attain notoriety because of its skyrocketing purse.

"This makes up for all of it," Barnes said.

Prior to Monday, Barnes had not had a horse in the All-American since 1968, when his outstanding filly Lady Bug's Moon finished second to Three Oh's.

"I didn't have the right kind of horses to get back in it," he said. "You have to have a real runner to get here."

Barnes and his wife Lela said they had no immediate plans for the money.

"I'm going to change the check into dollar bills and look at it," Barnes joked.

Mr Master Bug won the futurity with a devastating closing kick, overtaking his stablemate Miss Squaw Hand and the early leaders in the race, Neat Creek and Call Me Favorite.

Neat Creek finished third to earn $153,500 for owners J.G. Cavasar and P.E. Davis Jr., both of Beeville, Texas, while Call Me Favorite was fourth.

Winning for the eighth time in 10 starts this year, Mr Master Bug covered the distance in a slow 22.20 seconds, and paid $4.20 to win, $4.80 to place and $3.60 to show.

With the victory, Mr Master Bug became the second-leading quarter horse money winner of all time, with winnings of $1,344,591. Only Higheasterjet, winner of the All-American Futurity in 1980 and the All-American Derby in 1981, has earned more.

The victory was the second in the futurity for trainer Jack Brooks of Edmond, Okla., who also saddled the 1978 winner Moon Lark.

The race was marred by the breakdown of co-favorite Yankee Win. The brilliant filly, who had won 10 of 11 races this year, fell just before she hit the finish line, shattering a bone in her right front leg.

Owner Jerry Rheudasil of Lewisville, Texas said the leg was placed in a cast, and said it was "50-50 chance" on whether the filly that earned more than $400,000 in her first year of racing could be saved.

The 10-horse field got away cleanly from the starting gate at the top of the and for a while it appeared Neat Creek would pull off an upset. But the gelding could not hold off Miss Squaw Hand and Mr Master Bug in the final 100 yards.

Yankee Win, winner of the Rainbow Futurity at this same New Mexico track in July, was never a factor and had started to drift in toward the inside rail before going down about 15 yards from the finish line.

Miss Squaw Hand, ridden by Jerry Burgess, boosted her earnings to $374,582, while the third-place finish for Neat Creek, with Joe Ruiz aboard, hiked his earnings to $174,567.

Martin, who had the wind knocked out him in when his horse in an earlier race Monday fell, said Mr Master Bug took control midway through the race.

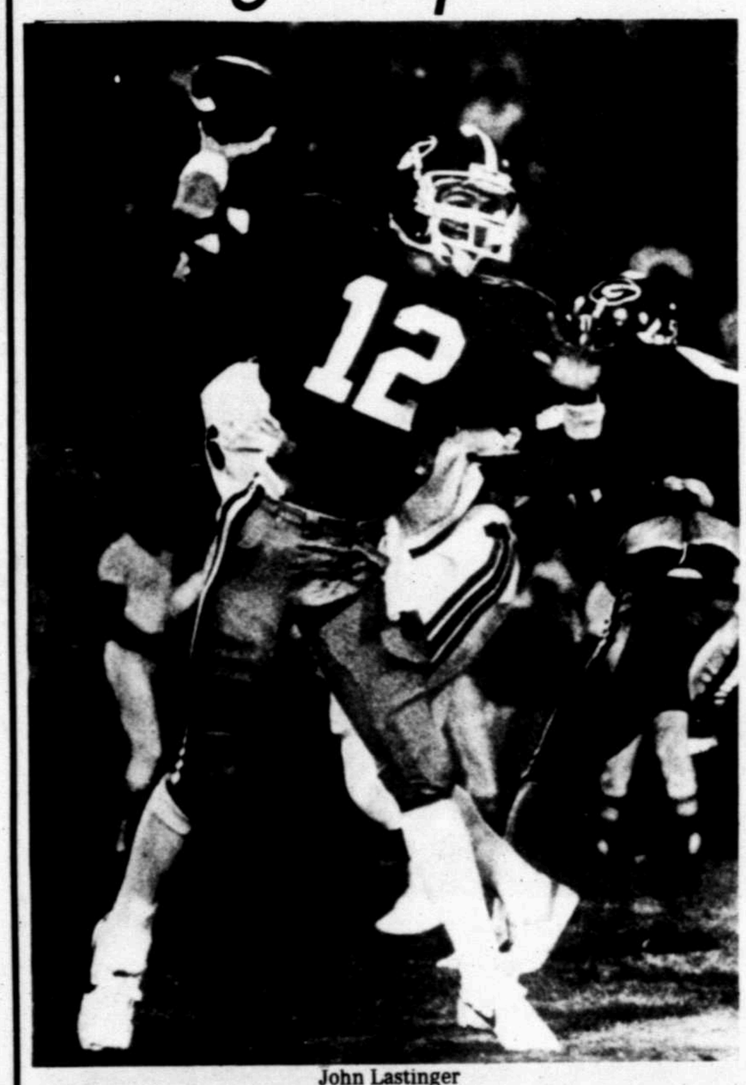

"Seventy-five yards from the gate, he was running all the way," Martin said. "The further he goes, the better he gets."

The order of finish and amount of money won after the top three included Call Me Favorite, $105,500; Amy Jo Mito, $77,500; No Tell Motel, $73,500; Dynago Victory, $69,500; Lucks Lucky, $65,500; Easy Mito, $60,500; Yankee Win, $51,000.

The All-American concluded the 1982 racing season at Ruidoso Downs, with several records set on the closing weekend. Monday's handle of $1,250,384 was the highest in the track's history. And the $4,369,353 bet during the final five-day holiday weekend also set a record.

Georgia squeezes by national champs

Walker's appearance adds spark

John Lastinger

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — A shaky beginning turned into a winning night for John Lastinger, Georgia's untested junior quarterback who faced college football's defending national champion in his first starting assignment.

"We reached down and found a way to win," Lastinger said Monday night after seventh-ranked Georgia ended No. 11 Clemson's 13-game winning streak 13-7 with two-time All-American Herschel Walker seeing action despite his broken thumb, but mostly as a decoy.

"It was not a picture perfect game by any means, but the main thing is we won the game," said Lastinger, who was erratic for most of the first half before connecting on passes of 27 and 9 yards to set up Kevin Butler's 39-yard field goal that gave Georgia a 10-7 lead nine seconds before intermission.

"THAT LAST drive just before the half helped me quite a bit," said Lastinger.

And the presence of Walker, who broke his right thumb on Aug. 21, also helped put some spark in the Bulldogs in the nationally televised encounter between the game's last two national champs.

Walker's best decoy effort came on his first play with 10:03 left in the first half. He lunged toward the left sideline, drawing a swarm of Tiger defenders, but the pitch went to Tron Jackson instead, and he raced toward the left side on a 41-yard scoring sprint that was nullifield by a penalty.

Butler's late three-pointer in the second quarter provided the victory margin. He also kicked a 23-yarder just over five minutes into the third period.

MISTAKES SET up both touchdowns in the game.

William Perry fell on a Lastinger fumble at the Georgia 11 on the Bulldogs' second series in the game and three plays later Homer Jordan scored on a quarterback draw and the Tigers had a 7-0 lead after 7:51 had elapsed.

Defensive end Dale Carver's blocked punt gave Georgia a deadlock on the third play of the second quarter when teammate Stan Dooley caught the ball at the two and was hurled into the end zone by Clemson defenders.

"It was just a bust on their part," said Carver. "The guy on the outside didn't pick me up, and I ran in there free."

Most of the pregame hoopla had centered on Walker's playing status.

"I WENT in the first half as a decoy, but Coach (Vince) Dooley made the final decision at halftime," said Walker.

"I was surprised a great deal he used me to run the ball," Walker said. "My thumb got hit some, but right now it's feeling great.

"There were some holes there, but I just didn't hit them," he said. "I guess I was worried about fumbling."

"It was a defensive struggle in every sense of the word," said Dooley. "I didn't think we would ever get anything going offensively."

The defeat didn't stop Clemson Coach Danny Ford from clinging to hopes of repeating as national champions.

"We are not out yet," he said. "We just have to go back and work hard to improve each week."

Palmer back on top again

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Jim Palmer had been on a steady decline. His arm was dead. The pall bearers had been selected, and they were waiting impatiently to carry him from the mound.

First, he was tired, then he was sore. He was too old. He was 36, after all. He wanted to go to the bullpen. Maybe that would help. Maybe he should be traded or just quit. He said as much in a moment of pique — thinking out loud again.

Then, Baltimore Orioles pitching coach Ray Miller told him to just shut up and pitch.

Well, how do you like that?

It worked.

A la Steve Carlton.

PALMER, A three-time Cy Young winner, once again is the best pitcher in the American League.

Palmer has won 11 in a row for a 13-3 record. His last two appearances have been complete-game shutouts over Toronto and Minnesota. He hasn't lost a game since May 30 when the Orioles were shut out 6-0 by Toronto. His earned run average, the barometer of pitching, is 3.24 and falling. He has six complete games, 91 strikeouts and just 50 walks in 1801-3 innings.

When approached, Palmer declined to speak about his pitching, the Orioles hot streak or even the weather. He was pleasant about it, but he was following orders. It was only fair then that Miller should act as Palmer's surrogate, since he told him to shut up.

"HE HAS become a more complete pitcher now than ever," Miller said.

"Jimmy rebuilt his arm completely this winter. He can throw his fastball 87 miles an hour on our gun, which means it would register about 91 or 92 on the ABC gun.

"He has four pitches — fastball, curve, slider and change. Whatever pitches he can get over on a given day, he has complete command over."

Palmer began his streak with a 2-3 record, during which time he made four relief appearances. In early July, with a 7-3 record, he missed 15 days with a sore arm. "He had a little arm problem," Miller says. "He rushed it a little in the cold weather."

HE RETURNED to action on July 18 in a no-decision start as the Orioles defeated Seattle 8-4, and since that time, he has been amazing.

"He's had that perfect delivery his whole life," Miller said. "That arm speed and his intelligence have been why he's been so great.

"In the first five or six years of his career, he had that 95 to 100 mile an hour fastball, and it really jumped," Miller said. "Many successful pitchers have had that, and then, all of a sudden, they lose five or six miles an hour. But Jim can throw 90 or he can throw 80, and he still gets that lift on the ball. It must be his delivery, but it's been a phenomenon to me."

THE QUESTION still remained to be asked. Then, why did you tell him to keep his mouth shut?

"When he went out at the beginning of the season, he had two or three real good games but got no decision," Miller says. "The writers would come to him and say, 'Jim, what was wrong today?' Jimmy's such a perfectionist, it would bother him. And I don't believe he needs to defend his ability to anybody.

"The guys come in and say maybe he is washed up. Then, I tell them to go look at all the pages on him in our media guide. Look at what he's done, and then come back and tell me what's the matter with Jim Palmer.

"WHEN JIMMY has to explain himself, he's such a perfectionist, that he'll go out and try to do something different to make it better, to make it perfect.

"He's such a perfectionist that he's probably the only guy in the world that can be disappointed when he throws a shutout, but a guy like him, that's so close to perfection on each pitch, has an extremely high chance of success. And that's been the story of his career."

Take that 3-0, one-hit shutout he pitched against Minnesota last Saturday, for example. Manager Earl Weaver tells the story.

"PALMER WALKS the first batter in the ninth inning, so I've got to go out there and talk to him," Weaver says. "He tells me he's tired, that I'd better have somebody ready.

"Hell, he's only given up one hit, and he's worried that I might have to take him out. I made him a promise, though. I told him this, 'You won't have to pitch to the winning run.'

"Thank goodness he got the next three guys out — bang, bang, bang. Hell, he was throwing a one-hitter."

Tulsa beats El Paso in TL

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Donnie Scott hit the winning run in the bottom of the ninth to give Tulsa a come-from-behind, 3-2, victory over El Paso in the first of a five-game Texas League Championship series.

The game Monday night was a pitching duel between Tulsan Mike Mason and Dan Burns of El Paso for the first six innings.

In the seventh inning, El Paso took both runs on a two-out single by Dan Davidsmeier to score Bill Foley and Jon Hansen.

Tulsa scored all three runs in the bottom of the ninth on a walk to Shake Moore, a single by Curtis Wilkerson, a walk to Dave Stockstill and three consecutive singles. Each of the singles drove in a run on hits by Mike Rubel, Tommy Dunbar and Scott.

Tulsa had no outs when Scott hit the winning run.

The winning pitcher was Dennis Long in relief, 6-1. The losing pitcher in relief was Bob Gibson, 6-2.

Tulsa leads the series, 1-0.

Two no-hitters spoiled by miscues in 7th

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

Toronto's Dave Stieb and Milwaukee's Doc Medich each took no-hitters into the seventh inning during different games.

Stieb, pitching against Oakland Monday, made one mistake in the seventh, recovered and went onto win a game that meant little in the American League standings.

Medich, meanwhile, made one seventh-inning mistake against Detroit, then another and another as the AL East-leading Brewers dropped a contest in 10 innings to the Tigers.

"I was thinking no-hitter, and that was kind of a dumb pitch," said Steib, who gave up a one-out homer to Tony Armas in the seventh. Stieb settled for a two-hitter as Toronto downed Oakland 3-1.

"I tried to get a little sneaky by throwing a changeup to Armas. I was thinking that he'd be looking for something hard," Stieb said. "I've never thrown him many changeups."

Stieb upped his record to 14-13, the most wins ever by a Toronto pitcher in the team's six-year existence.

Medich lost his no-hitter when Glenn Wilson led off the Detroit seventh with a single. The Tigers went onto beat Milwaukee 6-5 on Tom Brookens' 10th-inning homer off Medich, 10-12.

The loss reduced Milwaukee's lead in the AL East to three games over Baltimore and 3½ over Boston, which both won Monday.

"Doc said he was still strong in the 10th," said Milwaukee Manager Harvey Kuenn. "He pitched well to everyone but Brookens. That is going to happen."

Brookens was matter-of-fact about his game-winning blow.

"I hit something off-speed," said Brookens, who entered the game in the eighth as a defensive replacement. "I don't know what it was — probably a slider. But it broke right over the plate and I hit it."

Detroit cut Milwaukee's lead to 3-2 in the seventh, and then took a 5-3 lead in the eighth, helped by double steal in which Lou Whitaker swiped home.

Ben Oglivie's two-run homer tied it in the eighth, and the Brewers came close to winning in the ninth before Detroit shortstop Alan Trammell threw out Ed Romero at the plate.

Milwaukee's Robin Mount waits to put the tag on California's Reggie Jackson as he slides into second base. Jackson tried to take second on a deep fly ball to center field but the throw from Brewer's Gorman Thomas was on time to cut down the sliding Jackson.

Orioles 8, Yankees 2

Scott McGregor and Sammy Stewart combined on a five-hitter as the Orioles won their ninth in a row and 16 of their last 17.

Lenn Sakata knocked in three runs for Baltimore as McGregor, who had struggled in his last two starts, went to 13-12.

The Orioles, who strongly rely on their bench, got a pinch-hit, two-run homer by Benny Ayala. It was Baltimore's 11th pinch-homer of the season, an AL record.

New York's Roy Smalley broke the shutout with a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth.

Angels 8, White Sox 6

Brian Downing hit his second grand slam of the week as California beat Chicago and pulled within one game of Kansas City in the AL West. Juan Beniquez had a two-run single and Bob Boone added a run-scoring hit as the Angels scored four runs in the eighth to erase a 6-4 White Sox lead.

Steve Renko, 11-6, picked up the victory in relief.

Tony Bernazard homered and had an RBI double for Chicago.

Red Sox 0, Indians 3

Jim Rice drove in five runs for Boston with a homer, double and two singles. His 21st homer of the season, a three-run shot, gave the Red Sox a 3-0 lead in the first inning.

Carl Yastrzemski had added two-run homer, his 14th of the season and 440th of his career, along with a run-scoring single.

Mike Torrez, 8-8, got the win and Bob Stanley picked up his 13th save with 3 1-3 innings of relief.

Mariners 6, Royals 2

Floyd Bannister upped his AL-leading strikeout total to 169 by fanning seven Royals, including Willie Wilson — the league's leading hitter — four times. Bannister, 12-10, pitched eight innings in sending Kansas City to its third straight loss.

He settled down after allowing George Brett's 20th homer, a two-run shot, in the first inning.

Todd Cruz homered for Seattle and Bruce Bochte knocked in two Mariners runs.

Rangers 4-11, Twins 3-7

Jim Sundberg's three-run homer highlighted a seven-run fourth inning that carried the Rangers to a second-game victory and sweep of the Twins.

Billy Sample's two-run blast in the seventh inning of the first game snapped a 2-2 tie and keyed Texas' victory.

Kent Hrbek homered in both games for Minnesota, which has lost five in a row.

Despite 'fishy' swing Carner wins Rail title

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — JoAnne Carner is taking a well-deserved vacation after snaring her third straight LPGA tournament, but she says — perhaps half in jest — that the time off may be too strenuous for her to extend the streak.

"I don't seem to play too well after coming back from going fishing — I guess all that casting throws off my swing."

After a rocky start Monday, Carner's swing was right on as she birdied six of seven holes on the back nine at one point to zoom to a 14-under-par 202 and $18,750 in first-prize money in the $125,000 LPGA Rail Charity Classic.

Carner said she was inspired to victory after some sloppy play midway through the third and final round of the tourney on the 6,281-yard, par-72 Rail Charity course.

"I couldn't get fired up until I bogeyed the 10th hole and then I just got irritated with myself and said, 'Go out there and do it. You know you're playing well,' " said Carner, who birdied six of the next seven holes.

Her 14-under-par 202 topped runner-up Susie McAllister by six shots and third-place finishers Jo Ann Washam and Cathy Morse by eight.

Only a par on the 14th hole stopped Carner from tying the LPGA record of seven birdies in a row. "It just curved off at the cup. I almost had it."

Carner's victory followed triumphs in the World Championship of Women's Golf in Shaker Heights, Ohio and the Henredon Classic in High Point, N.C. She intends to take two weeks off to "go fishing" before playing in the Safeco Classic in Seattle later this month.

Nancy Lopez holds the LPGA record of five consecutive victories. Carner was the last women's golfer to win three in a row before Monday, also accomplishing the feat in 1980.

Remarked Morse, "Carner's almost impossible to beat right now. When she gets hot like that, you almost have to aim for second."

Aggies lose tight end to operation

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Aggie junior tight end Mark Lewis underwent knee surgery Monday morning and will be sidelined for the rest of the season, Texas A&M officials said.

Lewis was injured late in the third quarter during A&M's 38-16 loss to Boston College on Saturday night.

Stargell has his finest hour

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

What if they threw a party for Willie Stargell and 38,052 fans showed up at Three Rivers Stadium? Naturally, the Pirates would win and Stargell would get a base hit.

So, with the Pirates ahead of the New York Mets 6-1 in the eighth inning Monday, those 38,052 friends of Stargell stood as one and thanked him for 21 years of wonderful memories. And, following a two-minute standing ovation, Stargell got his 14th pinch hit of the season, a single to center field off Mets rookie Doug Sisk — who was pitching his first inning in the majors. That made Willie Stargell Day a total success.

Following his hit, Stargell was removed for a pinch-runner and left the field to a long ovation. He also stepped out of the dugout to tip his hat as the cheering continued.

Afterward, an emotionally spent Stargell, who will retire after the season, said to waiting reporters, "Please wait until tomorrow. I'm just ..."

The festivities, which included an hour-long pregame ceremony during which Stargell received numerous gifts — and a telephone call from President Ronald Reagan — drew the largest crowd to Three Rivers since Opening Day 1981, when 40,332 people attended.

"He has never lost his compassion and humor," Reagan said. "He is one of the great ones."

"Thank you, thank you, good loving people," said the 41-year-old Stargell during the ceremonies as he dabbed his eyes with a towel which hung from his neck. "This is without a doubt my finest hour."

After the ceremonies, Stargell, who led the Pirates to World Championships in 1971 and '79, shook the hands of both Pirates and Mets players, many of whom warmly embraced him.

Pirates reliever Kent Tekulve thanked Stargell for "teaching many of us what this game is all about.Pops, we love you.".

Tony Pena's three-run homer in the sixth inning keyed the Pittsburgh triumph. Rick Rhoden went the distance with a seven-hitter and Lee Lacy also homered for the Pirates.

Giants 8, Braves 2

San Francisco, held hitless by Tommy Boggs for six innings, scored all eight runs on nine hits in the final three innings after Boggs was removed for a pinch hitter. Boggs was making only his second appearance since being sidelined with a rotator cuff injury since April and was scheduled to throw only 80 pitches. So Braves Manager Joe Torre sent up Bob Porter to pinch-hit for Boggs in the sixth, despite the no-hitter.

After Boggs left, Jack Clark, the first batter to face reliever Steve Bedrosian in the seventh, bunted for a single to break up the no-hitter. Jeff Leonard's bloop double and an RBI single by pinch-hitter Champ Summers tied it 2-2.

Leonard and Milt May had RBI singles in the eighth and the Giants added four runs in the ninth.

Atlanta's defeat, coupled with the Dodgers' victory, cut the Braves' lead in the West to a half-game.

"It's no time to get romantic and ruin some kid's arm," Torre said.

"I knew the plan was to let me throw only about 80 pitches," Boggs said, "but it's the dream of every pitcher to throw a no-hitter. So I asked Joe to let me stay in. But I knew what he was going to say and he said it."

Dodgers 7, Reds 2

Five RBI by Steve Garvey and Jerry Reuss' seventh complete game, a five-hitter, carried the Dodgers, who reached Mario Soto for 15 hits, the most given up by the Reds' ace this season. Garvey slammed a three-run homer and Rick Monday and Ken Landreaux also homered for LA. Cesar Cedeno homered for Cincinnati.

"Over the course of the season, the key is to not get down," said Reuss. "When you play with the teams you have to beat, you have to win."

Cubs 4, Phillies 3

Chicago won for the seventh straight time at home against the Phillies as Bill Buckner's double keyed a three-run fifth.

"I guess we get a little more excited against the Phillies because we have so many ex-Phillies on this team," said Buckner, who scored twice and drove in his 92nd run of the year.

Cardinals 1, Expos 0

Joaquin Andujar's five-hitter and pinch-hitter George Hendrick's ninth-inning single were enough for the Cardinals, who stretched their East Division lead to 1½ games.

Montreal starter Bill Gullickson, who held St. Louis to four hits through eight innings, got out Tommy Herr to start the ninth. Ken Oberkfell singled but Lonnie Smith flied out. Keith Hernandez singled, with Oberkfell stopping at second, setting up Hendrick's clean single up the middle off reliever Woodie Fryman.

"The guy hit the ground ball, but we couldn't catch it," said Expos Manager Jim Fanning. "I don't mind the challenge of facing a guy off the bench with a veteran reliever."

Padres 4, Astros 2

Chris Welsh threw a four-hitter and Broderick Perkins and Terry Kennedy had run-scoring doubles, offsetting Alan Ashby's two-run homer for Houston.

Sigel beats young upstart to win U.S. Amatuer Golf Championship

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Jay Sigel, a 38-year-old veteran with a houseful of golf trophies, was nervous reaching the final round of the 82nd U.S. Amateur for the first time in 16 appearances.

However, he conquered his nerves and won the national championship Sunday with an 8 and 7 victory over young David Tolley, an upstart from the University of South Carolina who had upset four rivals en route to the final round.

"I wanted the championship so badly, never having made the finals before, that I was nearly sick to my stomach," Sigel said. "This week, everything fell into place. Winning the national amateur I may retire and take up fishing — but I don't think so."

Sigel, a Philadelphia insurance man who won the British Amateur in 1979, settled down after a shaky start and took command on the 10th hole of the scheduled 36-hole showdown at The Country Club. He played the last 21 holes in 2-under-par.

"To win your country's national championship — not demeaning the British Amateur — is the greatest thrill of my life in sports," Sigel said. "I apologize for not being able to describe how I feel. It's really unbelievable. To make the finals is something. To win really blows your mind."

Sigel, who began winning golf tournaments, while Tolley was learning his ABCs, ended years of frustration starting on the 10th green.

"I sank a four-foot putt for a birdie and that seemed to turn things around," Sigel said. "Until then, I really wasn't playing defensively. I was just playing lousy. Then I got things going. David didn't have a good day, but he hung in there. He's a better player than he showed today."

"This has been a great week," Tolley said. "I came here just hoping to qualify for match play. I did that and I'm proud of the way I played getting to the final round."

In the long run, experience paid off for Sigel, an 11-time Pennsylvania amateur champion with a 9-0 record in Walker Cup matches since 1977, the year he was beaten in the U.S. Amateur semifinals.

Tolley, a 22-year-old resident of Roanoke, Va., simply lacked the overall game, even though he had won four previous matches against such players as Walker Cuppers Corey Pavin and Jim Holtgrieve, and All-American Jim Hallett.

Tolley didn't even make the South Carolina team until the last two matches last spring. His credentials this year include a 17th place finish in the Roanoke Valley tournament and runner-up in the infamous Foxpuss Amateur in Virginia.

However, Tolley didn't wilt at the sight of Sigel in the windup of the tournament. He started aggressively, winning the first hole as Sigel took a bogey 5. Then he won the fourth and ninth holes as Sigel struggled to reach the first turn all even.

However, Sigel apparently was playing possum. He won the 10th hole with a birdie 3, and went on to take four more holes for a 5-up lead after the 18-hole morning round.

Sigel built the advantage to 7-up by winning the 20th and 22nd holes, both as Tolley took bogeys. Tolley came back to win the next two holes, but Sigel applied the pressure to the comeback bid by sinking a 45-foot putt for a birdie 2 on the 25th hole.

Sigel closed out the onesided match by winning the 28th and 29th holes with par.

LEARN HOW TO BECOME A MILLIONAIRE IN REAL ESTATE EVEN IF PRICES ARE NOT GOING UP!

NOTHING DOWN

"MAKING IT" IN A RECESSION WITH NO SPECULATION, NO NEGATIVE CASH FLOWS, NO "BALLOONS" AND NO RISKS!

"There are at least seven ways to make money in real estate assuming no appreciation. Real estate is the only major investment that did appreciate last year, but you can make big money safely even if it doesn't!"
—Bob Allen

"If you're going to make money you've got to be out of step with the world. You're buying when others are selling . . . selling when others are buying!"
—Hollis Norton

Gold has dropped from $800 to the $300 range. Silver has dropped from $50 to $10. Diamonds have dropped about 50%. Most other major investments have gone down in value, but REAL ESTATE went up in value about 3% last year. For those who knew how to buy it CREATIVELY, it went up much more! BUT . . . you don't even have to buy it to make great profits in real estate. Many people are becoming CREATIVELY SELF-UNEMPLOYED because their no-cash investments are bringing them more income than they could make on their jobs. A little information brings FINANCIAL FREEDOM, and it can happen to you!

Can't do it in a recession, you say? YES, you can! It's even EASIER in so called bad times, and thousands are doing it (as shown on the TV documentaries, "Making It!" and "Success!"). Over 90% of all millionaires made their fortunes in real estate and with the NEW, CREATIVE methods of buying, plus recessionary drops in some real estate prices, there's NO BETTER TIME THAN NOW. It takes little or no cash, and only a few hours of simple instruction.

A major university studied the successes of those who practice the methods taught by Robert Allen ("Nothing Down" and "Creating Wealth") and Hollis Norton ("How To Make It When You're Cash Poor"). They projected that 20,000 persons who've learned the simple concepts taught by these men buy over $20,000,000 worth of real estate A WEEK! That's over $1 BILLION A YEAR!

Almost every one of those people started learning "how-to-do-it" in a free seminar presented by Robert Allen and Hollis Norton. The free ninety-minute seminar will demonstrate some SPECIFIC "NOTHING DOWN" techniques you can use right away. You will also learn one of the many ways to ELIMINATE NEGATIVE CASH FLOWS, how to become FINANCIALLY FREE in FIVE YEARS OR LESS, how anyone can quickly establish GREAT CREDIT, how to earn MORE THAN 50% on your little-or-no-cash investments, and scores of other NEW, creative facts! You can buy depressed-price real estate with LESS THAN 10% INTEREST RATES, and even get interest-only financing NOW!

Just want to own your own home or trade up to a better one? Five years ago about 10% of all home sales were creatively financed. Now, the "ROBERT ALLEN NOTHING DOWN" revolution has occurred, and in the past year, MORE THAN 60% of all home sales are financed with the techniques taught in "NOTHING DOWN." (In some cities, more than 90% of all home sales involve creative financing.) Most real estate experts agree, if you want to buy a house in the future YOU MUST know CREATIVE FINANCING techniques.

Take ninety-minutes out of your life to attend this no cost, no obligation, illustrated lecture. You'll learn about America's fastest, simplest, safest road to success and financial freedom. The "Nothing Down" seminar is not just a variation of the old, "fix-up-the-dump" concept with a different name . . . it's a whole new 1980's program for success used by thousands across the country. Attend the no cost, no obligation, ninety-minute "Nothing Down" success seminar. It's presented by a successful associate of the two famous multi-millionaire investors, ROBERT ALLEN and HOLLIS NORTON. (Starting time is 8 P.M., but come early for a good seat. Please . . . no children under ten!)

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 150 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%.
