'Terra Nova'...

WTC production earns high honor

The Western Texas College production of "Terra Nova" was chosen over plays offered by other West Texas colleges and universities last weekend and will now likely advance to a five-state play competition scheduled in Fort Worth Jan. 20-27.

As a warmup for this contest, a final hometown performance is tentatively scheduled here Jan. 19.

This past weekend, three individual actors in the production were singled out for awards, as was the play's direction, costume design, makeup, special effects and the play program--marking the greatest success of a WTC production to date.

The play was honored in El Paso at the "Texas West" competition of the regional American College Theatre Festival (ACTF).

"Terra Nova," a drama dealing with the doomed 1912 English expedition to the South Pole, received both the "Critics Choice" and the "Director's Choice" award.

This will qualify it for competition in the Five State Regional Festival offered through ACTF in January.

The right to perform there won't be absolutely known until another regional play competiton is completed next weekend in Louisianna. The chance is considered slight, however, that sufficient plays would be chosen there to "bump" WTC.

Also singled out at the El Paso contest were Jim Rainbolt, who played the Norwegian explorer Amundsen; Jeff Milburn, in the role of Captain Scott, the leader of the English expedition; and Bobby Mendez, one of Scott's men whose injury led to the death of his fellow explorers.

Rainbolt, a WTC student from Post, was chosen as both Best Actor in a straight drama at the festival and as one of the actors singled out for "Irene Ryan" honorary awards.

Aquino's position said strengthened

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government praised the foiling of an apparent coup attempt in the Philippines, and the chairman of a House foreign affairs panel said President Corazon Aquino emerged in "a much stronger position."

"We are pleased that this reported coup attempt failed," State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said Sunday in reiterating the Reagan administration's "strong and unequivocal support" for Mrs. Aquino.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., said exposure of the plot and the showing of military might to stabilize Mrs. Aquino's government "clearly pulled the rug out from under" Juan Ponce Enrile, the defense minister.

Enrile was fired Sunday, along with the rest of Mrs. Aquino's cabinet. The dismissals came after weeks of rumors that Enrile's men were plotting a coup against Mrs. Aquino.

Armed Forces chief, Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, deployed troops Saturday night, stopping forces backed by ex-President Ferdinand E. Marcos and some "elements of the military" from what he said were plans to set up a government to rival Mrs. Aquino's.

Coup attempt foiled

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino's spokesman said today that nearly 200 people plotted to topple her government and that the coup plans were one of several factors in her decision to restructure the Cabinet.

The spokesman, Teodoro Benigno, said a new Cabinet will be announced in a day or two, and that two to four members, including Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile as earlier announced, were out. She had asked all members to resign on Sunday.

Enrile's replacement is retired Gen. Rafeal Ileto, 66, a West Point graduate. He said today an "informal investigation" should be launched into the plot. Benigno indicated there would be no severe punishment for the coup planners.

Meanwhile, it was reported that negotiators for the Communist Party and its New People's Army guerrillas have demanded that the government suspend acceptance of U.S. military aid during a proposed cease-fire. Chief government negotiator Teofisto Guingona said the demand, made by Romeo Capulong as a condition for agreeing to Mrs. Aquino's request for a Christmas truce, was unacceptable.

Beningo said about 180 plotters, described as diehard loyalists to ex-President Ferdinand E. Marcos and military rebels backing Enrile, met Saturday at the home of Antonio Carag, a prominent Marcos supporter with links to Enrile. He said they planned to take over the National Assembly and void the Feb. 7 elections won by Mrs. Aquino.

Chief of Staff Fidel V. Ramos discovered the plot through infiltrators and "checkmated" their plans, Benigno said.

According to official accounts, Ramos deployed troops around key installations in the capital Saturday night.

Sex ed. remarks still due

Snyder school officials remind local parents that public comments are now sought related to a proposal to offer a sex education study unit as part of health classes offered here next spring.

Those interested have been asked to preview at the school administration building material to be offered with the class.

Dr. Tom Scannicchio, assistant superintendent for curriculum, said less than 10 parents had been by to look at the material as of Friday.

The district will conduct an open forum Tuesday night to allow additional public comment regarding the proposed study unit.

It will be at 7 p.m. at the junior high school auditorium.

School board members are to be on hand also, and have listed as an action item the possible adoption of the curriculum.

If approved, the course would be a two-week unit taught in health classes offered at the fifth grade, seventh grade and high school-level. While dealing mainly with sex education, the course is described as a study of "human growth and development."

The material they have recommended includes, at the fifth grade level, such topics as the onset of puberty. In addition, it describes the physical changes which occur in boys and girls during this development phase.

The reproductive systems for both sexes are illustrated and discussed as well.

At the fifth grade level, boys and girls will be offered instruction in different classes.

Seventh grade material discusses sex role stereotypes and begins to deal with such subjects as pregnancy, intercourse, the menstral cycle, breast development, masturbation and veneral disease.

The discussion of sexually-transmitted diseases will include information regarding the AIDS virus.

Pilots seek input with airport board

Six members of the Scurry County Pilots Association presented the names of three individuals to fill upcoming vacancies on the airport board during the regular session of county commissioners Monday. Three of the five positions are due to expire at the end of the year.

"Our association would like to have some input as to the makeup of the Scurry County Airport Board," Jimmy Thompson, president of the association, told court members.

The pilots recommended the names of association members Roy Idom, Tommie Mills and Lynn McLarty.

Noting that the appointments will take place during their Jan. 12, 1987, session, commissioners took no action on the request.

In other business, the court delayed action on a proposal by Duane Force with the law offices of Gates-Steen in Austin. The firm offered to begin collecting delinquent taxes for the county at a 15 percent fee. The firm currently collects delinquencies for Snyder and Ira ISDs.

Commissioners indicated they plan to sign a contract with the firm pending resolutions from the city council and the college board. The county currently acts as the collection agent for both of those entities.

Arrest follows break-in

Police arrested a 17-year-old suspect Monday morning in connection with an apparent Sunday evening burglary of the Skinny's store on East Highway.

Roy Martinez of 312 25th St. was taken into custody by city officers just after 2 a.m. Monday on charges of disorderly conduct and resisting arrest. These charges followed a call to a reported fight at a residence in the 1100 Block of 28th St.

The burglary was reported to police at 3:57 a.m. Monday as a newspaper delivery man said he discovered the glass

Q. — Is there any regulation on the height of a chimney in Snyder so that irritating smoke could be carried away instead of bothering neighbors?

A. — There is a regulation that the chimney must be at least 2 ft. above the highest part of the roof, but this is a fire safety rule rather than related to smoke. City officials speculate the chimney height would have little effect since the problem of smoke not venting away properly is most often caused when individual chimneys are sized too large for the fire box area. This often occurs when free-standing fireplaces are connected into an existing brick chimney.

In Brief

Snow possible

by The Associated Press

Rain mixed with some light snow fell early today over the Trans-Pecos and Big Bend areas of Southwest Texas and showers and thunderstorms cover most of the eastern half of the state.

Forecasts called for the possibility of some scattered light snow today and tonight in the Big Bend area, the lower Pecos Valley and the Concho Valley.

Showers and thunderstorms were expected to continue over the eastern half of the state through tonight with the rain expected to continue over Northeast Texas Tuesday.

Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed some scattered gains today, following through on its rally late last week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.80 to 1,897.36 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers and losers were evenly balanced in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 527 up, 528 down and 483 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 20.90 million shares as of 10 a.m.

Vandals strike

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — Vandals went on an early morning rampage through a high school, smashing trophy cases, ripping out water fountains and sparking a fire that did about $1.5 million in damage, officials said.

The Sunday morning blaze destroyed Garland High School's administrative offices, and school officials think the vandals may have used reams of paper from those offices to start the fire, fire Capt. Tommy J. Weston said.

It was the fourth reported case of vandalism in the Garland school district in three weeks.

Millions spent on weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nations of the world are spending $1.7 million a minute on weapons, a historic high, while one adult in three cannot read and write and one in five lives in poverty, according to an annual study.

Military expenditures in 1986, the United Nations' International Year of Peace, are nearly $900 billion, about 6 percent of the world's gross national product, according to the private report compiled by Ruth Leger Sivard.

Last year, military spending was estimated at $810 billion, and since 1960, at $14 trillion.

The United States ranks first in military expenditures. It also tops the list in arms exports, military technology, military bases world-wide, nuclear reactors and nuclear warheads and bombs. It ranks seventh in life expectancy and 10th in spending on public education per person.

The Soviet Union is second in weapons spending. But it ranks 44th in life expectancy and 48th in infant mortality. It is spending about $4 million a day just on the war in Afghanistan, where more than 100,000 Soviet troops have fought anti-communist rebels since 1979.

Together, the two superpowers, with less than 11 percent of the world's population, account for 60 percent of the military expenditures, 23 percent of the world's armed forces, more than 80 percent of the weapons research and 97 percent of all nuclear warheads and bombs.

Mrs. Sivard is a former chief of the economics division of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. The report, which covers spending in both 1985 and so far this year, was sponsored by the Arms Control Association, The Rockefeller Foundation and other private groups.

The study estimated that the United States spent roughly $268 billion in 1985 on weapons, and the Soviets about $237 billion. The Soviet budget, which is generally disregarded by Western analysts as vastly understated, lists military spending at $22 billion to $25 billion.

"Not only are they (the United States and Soviet Union) the undisputed leaders in military strength but, with an enormous investment of resources, they have steadily pushed the frontiers of technology to new levels of destructiveness, escalating the dangers of conflict throughout the world," Mrs. Sivard said.

In a section called "Reversing the Tide," Mrs. Sivard records a single major arms control agreement in 1986.

Long delays hinder police abuse probes

HOUSTON (AP) — Long delays hinder internal investigations of Houston police officers accused of abusing citizens because of record-keeping problems, a backlog of cases and a shortage of workers, The Houston Post reported.

The police Internal Affairs Division is also hampered by biased policies in checking out complaints against officers, The Post reported in a copyright story.

In more than 200 cases documented in police records, the special unit took so long to investigate that state law prohibited Police Chief Lee Brown from suspending officers longer than 15 days without pay, the newspaper reported Sunday.

Suspected officers are kept on duty for months even in some cases with substantial evidence of wrongdoing, The Post said.

Although most officers never draw a single complaint, some have been under investigation virtually their entire careers, the newspaper reported.

One officer, who chalked up 25 complaints in seven years, was fired in 1984, but the city's Civil Service Commission reinstated him after 37 days without pay, according to The Post.

Some 117 officers each drew more than 10 complaints between July 1977 through December 1984. Of those, 91 remain on duty today. The number of complaints jumped from 583 in 1977 to 1,539 in 1985, according to the newspaper.

In a letter, Brown responded to the investigation by promising that records of misconduct by Houston police officers will be computerized in order to correct some problems.

The internal unit has sought a computer to help speed complaints through the system and to prevent theft or loss of records such as those missing on 1,043 officers, The Post reported.

Brown said his department had some failures in monitoring employees but defended his force.

"To my knowledge, no other major police department has an internal affairs and review process as extensive and as objective as the Houston Police Department," he said. "We strive to make this department the best in the country and we will not tolerate any conduct which falls below our standards."

Police have gone to great lengths to nab officers where evidence clearly indicated wrongdoing, sometimes conducting aerial searches and using out-of-town detectives to snare officers suspected of narcotics activity, accepting bribes and theft, the newspaper reported.

Brown said he also plans to ask the Legislature to change state law that has prevented his department from removing some officers because officials did not discover misconduct in time or because the investigation took more than six months.

The Post said it reviewed 6,771 complaints of alleged misconduct by at least 3,268 officers from July 1 through Dec. 31, 1984

Farmers show thanks for their hay with turkey meal

By G.G. RIGSBY
Associated Press Writer

Drought-stricken farmers who received hay from their Midwestern counterparts will show thanks and try to publicize that their plight is not over when they feed a turkey dinner to 400 people in Pelzer, S.C., Wednesday.

People from at least seven states are expected to attend the "Second Thanksgiving" feast at the farm of Tom Trantham, who became a national spokesman for Southeastern farmers after he described his near-bankrupt condition on network television.

Trantham said the celebration is much like the first Thanksgiving in America, so it's been dubbed "The Second Thanksgiving."

Farmers from Michigan, Kentucky, Iowa, Texas, Illinois and North Carolina are expected to join South Carolina farmers in the feast sponsored by Conoco, a DuPont subsidiary.

"It's like the Cherokee and the Blackfoot and the Crow who helped the Pilgrims," he said. "It's the same concept, only it's the Iowans, the people from Illinois, and so forth."

Trantham said the help from other states has made the difference between bankruptcy and getting by for some farmers. The farmers will be eating turkey beneath a tent on loan from a man who auctions cattle.

"It's kind of ironic," Trantham said. "The man who could have been selling my farm has lent me his tent."

There will be no head table. "We did this together," he said.

Trantham said the drought has brought good people to the surface in the same way the agitator works at his dairy. "The cream rises to the top," he said.

Illinois farmers say they are organizing a 50-truck convoy to haul corn and hay, with trucks arriving at Trantham's farm starting Monday.

NASCAR race car drivers from North Carolina who drove trucks to the area this summer will repeat the trip.

Motel owners in nearby Greenville have donated the use of more than 100 rooms for visiting farmers. A local high school choir and a band that made a music video about the relief effort will entertain guests Wednesday.

Elementary school children are making decorations for the dinner and area women are baking desserts for the event.

Trantham said the dinner is a chance to emphasize that the problems from this year's drought will last into the winter. "I don't feel like we're in as bad a shape as we were in July, August or September, but the feed we lost in '86 is the feed for our cattle this winter," he said.

Opinion Is Split About Boy Who Prefers Bowling to Sex

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Hallelujah! My faith in the younger generation has been restored after reading the letter from the 17-year-old young man signed "Opting for Abstinence." He said he has had sex, and thinks that bowling is more fun. How refreshing for a teen-ager to request more letters about barking dogs, people who are too fat, too short or were born on Christmas — anything but sex, for a change. You would do well to listen to him, Abby.

SEVENTY AND SICK OF SEX

DEAR ABBY: Please don't listen to that 17-year-old kid who is "Opting for Abstinence." At 17, what does he know? I like the way you choose a variety of subjects. You deal with human problems, and sex happens to be part of being human — and a very important part, in case "Opting" isn't aware of it. Just keep on giving us whatever comes in your mail, Abby. We don't need censorship by weeding out the letters dealing with sex.

OPTING FOR TRUTH IN DENVER

DEAR ABBY: Re the young man who said bowling was more fun than sex: Please publish the address of his bowling alley.

ED REDD

DEAR ABBY: "Opting for Abstinence" has a right to opt for anything he wants, but please don't change your format. I've learned a lot from your column over the years (I'm a 37-year-old married man now), and am all the better informed for it. I have yet to see anything I considered harmful for a child to read. Our daughter is 11, and she reads it every day. Your column has opened some healthy discussions in our family. Keep up the good work.

H.H.J., SEATTLE

DEAR ABBY: I think your column is a very interesting peek at people, their attitudes, insights, concerns and problems. I look forward to it daily because it lets me know that I am not alone. Sex is very important to a lot of people; that's why it's such a popular topic. Let's hope "Opting" will mature enough to appreciate its value. There is a real need today for psychiatrists, psychologists, priests and Dear Abby. Nobody else will listen.

JUNE IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR ABBY: I agree with that 17-year-old boy wholeheartedly. We are bombarded with sex in the media every time we pick up a newspaper or magazine. Daytime television is unbelievable. And some of those call-in radio talk shows are so explicit, it's embarrassing. My husband and I are in our late 60s, and we have turned off the radio many times and played Scrabble instead.

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH

DEAR ABBY: I have a message for that 17-year-old boy who says sex is boring and bowling is more fun. I have tried both, and sex has it all over bowling. Besides, you don't have to change your shoes.

CHARLIE

DEAR ABBY: I enjoyed your column on whether gentlemen really do prefer blondes, but what's the big deal about being a blonde? Anyone who wants to be a blonde can be one in a couple of hours. I am a 66-year-old widower, having recently lost my wife of 40 years, and if you were to ask me my preference, I would say, "Give me a woman about my age with naturally gray hair." She lets me know that she does not feel the need to camouflage her real self. She's self-confident, mature, and not ashamed to admit to the world that she's old enough to have gray hair. She's an honest woman who may be interested in a relationship with an honest man.

HONEST ABE

DEAR ABE: I'll bet there are a lot of mature women out there who have never dyed and are dying to meet you.

5 prison officials are suspended following landfill investigation

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — Five Texas Department of Corrections officials have been suspended after an investigation of unauthorized landfill sites at their prison, a TDC spokesman says.

Two of the five Beto I Unit officials have been recommended for dismissal, spokesman Charles Brown said.

TDC director Lane McCotter is expected to rule on the recommended dismissals in the next 10 to 15 days, Brown told the Palestine Herald-Press in a story published Sunday.

Brown said Allen W. Hopkins, 60, general projects superintendent in charge of new construction, and Andy McGuire, a construction supervisor, were suspended with action pending on their recommended firings.

Disciplinary action, including suspensions, was taken Wednesday against assistant project superintendent Oscar L. Odell and construction supervisors Terry W. Squyres and Roy E. Millsaps, Brown said.

Odell and Squyres were suspended for a month each and will be placed on one year of disciplinary probation after they return to work, Brown said. Odell also received a reduction in pay, he said.

Millsaps was suspended for 15 days with six months of disciplinary probation, the spokesman said.

TDC's internal affairs division submitted a report of their seven-month investigation to prison officials last week. The investigation included excavation of some landfills constructed without state officials' permission.

Brown said the report will not be released until final action is taken against Hopkins and McGuire. He and other prison officials refused further comment until the report is released.

Hopkin's attorney, Douglas Lowe of Palestine, said the action is unfair to his client.

"It is our position that the rights of my client have been violated and that the department may be liable for a large amount of damages if they maintain their position," Lowe said.

Hopkins has not been informed of the specific allegations against him, other than being accused of inappropriate conduct, Lowe said.

Odell, reached at his home, said he had no comment about his suspension.

Calls made by The Associated Press to the homes of McGuire and Squyres were not returned. Millsaps also could not be contacted by telephone.

The newspaper earlier quoted unidentified prison employees who said that useable construction material was buried in at least three locations in the Beto I Unit.

Brothers of charity live in poverty in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Two New Zealanders and an Indian sleep on mattresses on the floor, have one change of clothing and earn no salaries as they help carry out Mother Teresa's work with the forgotten and abandoned.

"We have a dream, a vision God loves us," Brother Chris, 35, of New Zealand said. "We feel called to the poor, to the needy, to find life and meaning in all this."

He and Brothers Gerry, 31, and Julius, 27, appear to be successful in providing services in Houston — ranging from distribution of food, clothes and furniture to job counseling — in a black ghetto where some 65 percent of adults are unemployed, church officials said.

Because the brothers live in the neighborhood, residents know and trust them, said Pat Smith, a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church in Humble. She started working with them in a summer program for children last July.

Now Ms. Smith and her 21-year-old son, Tim, help out with Friday night Bible classes, she said. The three are a tremendous resource for people in the area, said Father Adam McCloskey, pastor of St. Mary's.

"They're trying to make available so many things we take for granted, like helping kids with their schoolwork and visiting the elderly," he said.

"They've also set up a children's library and a lending library for adults in one of the buildings they've acquired where they keep clothing and food and anything else they can get," he said.

The men live in spartan surroundings like their mentor, Mother Teresa, who moved to the slums of Calcutta, India, to work with the poor.

The brothers live among Houston's poor without air conditioning, a car, television or radio. They survive on small contributions and donations from local church groups and other interested persons.

"We're living through divine providence, to put it in theological terms," Chris said with a smile.

Under the program, the brothers have no choice in where they will work. They go where directed by the Los Angeles headquarters of the Missionary Brothers of Charity order that Mother Teresa established.

Julius, who joined the order eight years ago, planned to be a priest in Kerala, a southern state in India where he grew up.

"But then I heard about Mother Teresa's order and I wanted to work with the poor," he said. "I feel I'm doing more good as a lay brother. I can come more close to the people, understand them and their problems."

Seed exports are blossoming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seed exports have sprouted into a huge business, with roots extending into many countries seeking to grow their own American-type vegetables and corn, says the Agriculture Department.

According to a report in a forthcoming issue of Foreign Agriculture magazine, U.S. seed exports have tripled in the last decade to nearly $364 million in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

The European Community accounted for $136.7 million of the seed purchases, followed by Mexico at $48.6 million. Other major buyers included Japan, $32.8 million, and Canada, $23 million.

Vegetable seeds represented 36 percent of the sales last year, followed by corn, 25 percent; forage, 16 percent; sorghum, 9 percent; soybean, 5 percent; flower, 2 percent; and all others, 7 percent.

"The large size of some of the major crops in the United States gives the U.S. seed industry an advantage in developing new strains," the report said. "The enormity of these crops also encourages private investment in research and development."

For many years, research and development has been aided by "the close cooperative relationship between private industry and public institutions like the Agriculture Department and the land-grant universities," the report said. The public institutions generally concentrate on longer-range basic research, while private companies apply the information to develop and improve new lines.

One way of encouraging private investment in the seed business has been for the government to grant patent-like protection for new discoveries under the federal Plant Variety Protection Act.

"This act helps ensure that the people who do the work are the ones that reap the benefits, thereby making it profitable to continue their efforts," the report said.

Exports have received a boost from the industry's American Seed Trade Association, which helps establish, maintain and expand markets for U.S. seeds, the report said. The cooperative nature of work done by the association and USDA has led to a number of export crops.

"For example, up until recently Saudi Arabia was a very difficult market for U.S. seeds to penetrate because of trade barriers," the report said. "However, the Saudis were very much in need of new seed varieties to achieve their goal of self-sufficiency in grain production."

As a result of teamwork between the association and two Agriculture Department agencies, the Foreign Agricultural Service and the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, the difficulties of meeting Saudi certification and plant standards were overcome. In 1984, the Saudis bought 102,000 metric tons of U.S. seed wheat.

The association has prepared a brochure, Seeds of Success, for use in overseas promotion. It has been translated into Spanish, Portuguese, Franch, German, Italian and Japanese.

Recent advances in biotechnology have raised the potential for rapid strides in genetic development of seeds that are resistant to drought, cold, diseases and insects, the report said. Scientists also are devising ways to move plant genes with desirable characteristics.

Gumming up the works

By James Jacoby

Jimmy Kauder comes from a bridge-playing family. His late father was a well-known life master; his mother, Mary Jane Farell, won numerous North American and international championships. Jimmy was a formidable adversary, but I have not seen him for a while at North American championships. However, this report from a friend who played with Kauder recently at a California rubber bridge club shows that he is as sharp as ever.

Although you may not like the bidding, accept it and then place yourself in the East chair with Jimmy Kauder. Against the four-heart contract, partner leads the two of spades. Declarer wins the ace and plays a diamond to dummy's queen immediately. You win the king of diamonds. What next? If you routinely return a spade, note the consequence. Declarer will win the king and play A-K of hearts. When declarer realizes trumps are not breaking, he will resort to making the contract by scoring his trumps "en passant." He will play a diamond to the ace and ruff a diamond, then a club to the queen and another diamond ruff. Finally, a club to the ace and another club. If at any time East trumps in front of him, South will shed his little spade. If East discards a spade, South will make the 10th trick with another small trump.

Kauder casually dropped a monkey wrench into all of this intricate bridge machinery by playing a club back after winning the diamond king. Now declarer could not return to dummy the required number of times to get three ruffs in, and the contract had to fail.

Democrats excited about new political opportunities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walk up to a Democratic politician these days and mention Iran and the response is likely to be an animated recitation of how the Reagan administration has mishandled its secret dealings with the Persian Gulf nation.

Not so long ago, the reaction would have been tight-lipped and defensive. At best, the Democrat might have pointed out that Jimmy Carter managed to get all 52 hostages home safely after 444 days of capitivity in Tehran.

The new response to the mere mention of Iran was evident this past weekend when members of the Democratic National Committee met in the capital.

The 1986 election returns were enough to put the party in an upbeat mood. When the Senate convenes in January it will have a 55 to 45 Democratic majority after six years of Republican control.

Clearly, as the party looks ahead to the 1988 presidential campaign, the mood is more optimistic than at any time since the post-Watergate years of 1975 and 1976.

For the first time since Ronald Reagan humbled the Democrats in 1980, party leaders are seeing evidence of a crack in the president's powerful hold on the support of the American people.

Politically, the big question is whether Iran will remain an issue. With the Thanksgiving and Christmas holiday periods approaching, many Americans might stop paying attention to the headlines about arms sales to Iran.

But in January, the Democrats will have full control of Congress and the ability to raise questions about administration policies.

"If more comes out, if this becomes an even bigger fiasco than it is now, I think you are going to see one of the biggest foreign policy confrontations since Vietnam," predicted Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

And there are Democrats who think the party might come out well in such a confrontation.

Harrison Hickman, a Democratic pollster, told party officials that the recent disclosures about administration dealings with Iran have given the Democrats "an opportunity to reassert ourselves on foreign policy and military defense issues."

Where Iran is concerned, said Hickman "voters have a sense of who the good guys are and who

the bad guys are. What Reagan has done is he has dealt with a bad guy."

Nothing has so encouraged the Democrats to be more aggressive on the issue as the apparent disarray among Republicans.

Hickman cautioned the Democrats against being perceived as too shrill on the issue.

But, at this point, most Democrats at the weekend meeting didn't regard that as a problem.

"Most of the shrillness has been heard from members of this administration about each other," said Tom Donilon, who was a top official of Walter F. Mondale's 1984 presidential campaign.

Man charged with slaying his in-laws

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — A Henrietta man was charged with capital murder after he got into an argument with his in-laws at a bowling alley and allegedly shot them to death, police said.

Jerry Lynn Simpson, 21, was ordered held without bond Sunday after being charged with the deaths of Bobby Joe Murdick, 40, and Judy Gail Murdick, 33, police said.

The Wichita Falls couple was shot to death Saturday night after a family argument at the Village Bowl, according to a police affidavit.

Murdick, a lieutenant with the city fire department, died from a gunshot wound to the right shoulder, officer John Bailey said. Mrs. Murdick, a medical receptionist, died early Sunday from a gunshot wound to the left cheek.

Under Texas law, a person can be charged with capital murder — which can be punished with death by injection — if more than one person was killed.

A police affidavit says the Murdicks went to the bowling alley with two of Mrs. Murdick's children and another couple at about 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Simpson and his wife — Lisa, Mrs. Murdick's daughter — arrived later, and witnesses said Simpson appeared to be intoxicated and had to be assisted when his turn came to bowl.

He then became "verbally abusive and began to shout profanities," and Murdick escorted him outside after telling him that alcoholic beverages were not allowed in the bowling alley, the affidavit says.

Soon after, Simpson re-entered the bowling alley, allegedly carrying a .357 Magnum Ruger handgun than he fired at the Murdicks.

Another couple said they wrestled Simpson to the ground and got the gun out of his hand before he kicked away from them and fled. Officer Jerry Morgan said he arrested Simpson without incident a short time later.

'Rodeo' escapade earns priest $300

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — When is an Episcopal priest like a rodeo cowboy?

The Rev. Delbert Achuff, associate rector of the Pro Cathedral Church of St. Clement, found the answer one day, submitted it to Reader's Digest and got $300 for his effort.

This little entry from Achuff appeared in "All in a Day's Work," a series of job-related anecdotes, in October's Reader's Digest:

"My morning had been hectic and now, with three minutes to spare, I was vesting for celebration of noonday holy communion. As I rushed down the hallway tying my cincture around my waist, the fringed end caught in the back of a chair, which began to follow me.

"I snapped the rope to free it, but the chair fell over and skidded toward me. Just then a fellow priest emerged from the office across the way. 'Well, Father,' he said, 'how long does it take you to tie its legs?'"

There was only one problem with the blurb: Reader's Digest misspelled his name, listing him as the Rev. Del Achufft.

Achuff's wife, Louise, had a possible explanation as to how the error occurred.

"Episcopal priests often put a cross after signing their names," she said Sunday. "They probably mistook the cross for a T."

MIA remains can't be ID'd

DALLAS (AP) — Very few of the remains of missing-in-action servicemen returned from Southeast Asia can be positively identified, and saying they can be is cruel to their families, a researcher says.

Dr. Michael Charney, a forensic anthropologist and professor emeritus of physical anthroplogy at Colorado State University, said he has examined the remains of 19 servicemen identified by the military and concluded that the identification can be verified in only two of them.

Charney, in Dallas Saturday to address a meeting of Vietnam veterans, said military officials "were making judgments that nobody could make. So I have been tearing at them ever since. It's not right to do this to the families. They should tell them the truth."

Charney, 74, is director of forensic science laboratory at Colorado State. He said he is an expert on bone identification and facial reconstruction and one of 34 certified forensic anthropologists in the United States and Canada.

Charney said he told a House subcommittee in September that if his sample of 19 investigations held for all returned MIA remains, 90 percent have been misidentified.

But Col. Keith Schneider, a Defense Department spokesman, said Sunday that it was "complete and total rubbish" to contend that 90 percent of MIA remains have been misidentified.

Charney said his work has changed the way the military refers to the identification process, a contention Schneider disputed.

At one time, Charney said, military officials claimed that identifications were biological, but "they no longer say the bones match."

"Now they say identification is made by exclusion," he said. "That means that if several people have been found and one hasn't, what is found is the missing person."

Schneider said the military has never claimed that identifications were purely made by forensic means and said it was "rather amusing" that Charney would say that his efforts led to a change in military procedure.

"We've said that identifications are based upon all the material that is available," he said, including medical records and crew manifests.

Charney, 74, said he and other experts have become involved with the identification question because families of MIAs want to be sure whom they are burying.

Schneider said that three independent forensic scientists visited the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory in Honolulu last December and examined cases involving more than 30 MIAs, including a case where the remains of 13 servicemen had been mingled together.

The scientists said most of the identifications were sound and legally supportable, according to Schneider.

Of the 13 commingled bodies, the panel agreed with two of the identifications, Schneider said. Though the panel did not support the Army's identification of the other 11 bodies, it did not say the military had misidentified them, he said.

Higher education fate is undecided

AUSTIN (AP) — The fate of Texas' higher-learning institutions will be in legislators' hands when they convene in January, chairman Larry Temple of the Select Committee on Higher Education says.

"The jury is out on our committment to higher education," Temple said Saturday in a panel discussion on "New Texas" at the University of Texas College of Communications.

The second annual Allan Shivers Conference was part of the College of Journalism's Sesquicentennial project devoted to the future of Texas in the information age.

Temple noted that the recent special legislative session made deep budget cuts, mostly in higher education, and approved only a small tax increase.

"When the Legislature meets in the spring, it seems to me, that it may determine for a couple of decades what we do in the economy of this state as it relates to higher education," Temple said.

Another panelist, economist Ray Perryman of Baylor University, said his 20-year economic prediction for Texas showed a 2.9 percent growth rate for the state, slightly higher than the national prediction of 2.7 percent.

"It is the response of the people of Texas that causes me to be optimistic," Perryman said. "The state always does a little bit better than expected. The people have a can-do spirit."

But Robert Reinhold, a New York Times reporter based in Houston, said he was skeptical of optimistic forecasts for Texas.

"The oil bust revealed very deep weaknesses in Texas' economy," Reinhold said. "Texas is still very dependent on certain industries and has no particular advantages to compete for new industries. The can-do spirit can help but you have to know what you are doing."

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, keynote speaker, said Texas is in a transition era where it must choose mediocrity or excellence.

"We are in the transition of an old economy that depended on natural resources to a new economy that depends on advanced technologies. From an economy that had little foreign competition to one that lies in a world of heavy foreign competition," Cisneros said.

"From a Texas in which job creation seemed to be a federal responsibility to an era in which the states are on their own and job creation is now on the state level," Cisneros said.

"The real question this Sesquicentennial year is not what people have done who traveled this way before, but what will we do as this generation's contributions."

Texas delegation traveling to Israel

DALLAS (AP) — Israelis are growing crops where Texans can't, and a group of Texas farmers, educators and businessmen spent two weeks touring the Middle Eastern country to find out why, officials say.

Led by Texas Agricultural Commissioner Jim Hightower, the 41-member delegation was assembled by the Texas-Israel Exchange, an organization which aims to bring Israeli farming techniques to Texas farms and help Israel export its agricultural technology.

"There's a lot of interest in this in Texas," said Hightower. "What we've been doing isn't working, and Israel seems to have some of the answers."

The delegation saw demonstrations of dry-land farming techniques in the Negev Desert, where a guide explained how farmers could grow crops and fruit trees with less than 4 inches of rain a year.

"This concept is much more advanced than what we have in Texas," said Walt Horne, a Houston botanist and lawyer. "I've spent a lot of time in Presidio and Marfa, and a lot of this is directly applicable."

When he first visited Israel in 1984, Hightower said he became convinced that Israeli expertise in irrigation, crop diversification and farmer cooperatives could aid Texas farmers.

After a reciprocal visit to Texas from Israeli Deputy Agriculture Minister Avraham Katz-Oz, the exchange agreement was signed in 1985.

"I'm not sure Washington likes the idea of us running around dealing directly with nations," Hightower told The Dallas Morning News. "But it's the fact of the federal system that you can."

The organization is funded by a state grant of less than $10,000 and contributions from Jewish groups, said its director, Sara Ehrman.

The group's first project will be a 100-acre demonstration farm at Laredo Junior College, where Israeli experts will recommend crops and techniques that could be viable in the region.

Other programs planned for McAllen, El Paso and Brownsville could include fish farms, greenhouses and a system that turns cow dung into methane gas, fertilizer and animal feed.

Though the exchange is supposed to go both ways, much of the talk centered on what Israel can give to Texas. But Hightower said the delegation discussed sharing Texas' expertise in breeding beef cattle, as well as joint research and scientific exchanges in many fields.

More chicken than beef will be consumed

WASHINGTON (AP) — It looks as if 1987 will be the year when consumers for the first time will eat more poultry than beef.

The latest Agriculture Department projections show that Americans will consume an average of 73.8 pounds of beef next year, retail weight, and 78.6 pounds of poultry, mainly from broilers and turkeys.

Fat is grown, not 'absorbed'

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is it true that people who work in kitchens can absorb fat through the skin and put on weight?

DEAR READER — Not true. Fat is not absorbed through the skin. Overweight people who work in kitchens are fat because they eat too much. A more significant health problem among kitchen workers is their tendency to inhale smoke- and fat-laden vapor that is produced by the cooking process. Ventilation fans help relieve this air pollution, but inhaled material can be a problem in crowded, smoky kitchens.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What's this I hear about male menopause? I can understand midlife crises, but not menopause — men don't have the equipment!

DEAR READER — Oh, but they do! Just you wait! Male hormone is a necessary constituent of normal sexuality and bodily functioning. As men age, testosterone production falls off.

Experts do not yet understand why some men are bothered by low hormone levels and others are not. However, as they grow older, certain unfortunate males experience hot flashes, mood swings, depression, loss of sexual urge, impotence and genital shrinkage. As with menopausal women, menopausal men can be helped by the administration of hormones.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My friend just had a baby. When she puts him down to sleep, she turns on the ceiling fan and a floor fan that blows directly on him. She says he is naturally hot, but I don't think this is good for the baby. Who is right?

DEAR READER — That depends on where your friend lives. In a hot, humid, un-air-conditioned environment, the use of fans is appropriate. In the usual temperate climates, it is not.

Babies are no hotter or colder than adults. I usually recommend that parents dress babies in the same amounts of clothing that the adults use. If you are hot, the baby probably is, too. What makes babies so vulnerable is that they are unable to get up and turn off the fan, shut the window or put on more clothes. Therefore, parents must meticulously monitor the baby's environment to make sure that the child is comfortable.

Accusers have convictions

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Nine women who have at least 29 convictions for drug-related charges, prostitution and theft will testify against a judge accused of coercing female defendants to have sex with him, officials say.

Six of the witnesses have been convicted of drug violations, one of felony theft and two of aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Sunday.

In addition, four of the witnesses have been convicted on more than one prostitution charge.

Of the nine, all but two have appeared as defendants in State District Judge Tom Cave's courtroom. The government's principal witness against Cave is expected to be a former prostitute to whom Cave once was engaged.

Cave, Fort Worth attorney Ronald Aultman and bail bondsman Joe Dorsey Adams were indicted Nov. 14 on charges of offering the women leniency in exchange for sex.

The men are scheduled to enter their pleas in federal court on Wednesday. Cave and Aultman have denied the charges, while Adams has refused any comment.

Cave, 56, is accused of soliciting at least nine women to have sex with him between 1982 and 1986. He is accused of having sex with five women and making sexual advances toward four others who refused him.

Cave's attorneys have said that because of the witnesses' criminal records, the judge's accusers are not worthy of belief under oath.

"Our trial strategy is to let the jury get to know both Judge Cave and his accusers," said defense attorney Tim Evans.

U.S. Attorney Marvin Collins acknowledged that the criminal records of the witnesses "makes them less likely to come forward and makes them less believable if they do."

The woman expected to be the government's chief witness was convicted of prostitution twice in 1981. Cave said last summer he intended to marry the woman, but the engagement was later called off.

A federal grand jury charged that Cave had sex with her about 90 minutes before she was to appear in his courtroom on March 5, 1984. In that appearance, Cave refused to revoke her probation even though the state said she had violated terms of her probation, according to court records.

The woman was serving a five-year probation for possession of cocaine.

Another government witness pleaded guilty to three counts of prostitution June 9 and was sentenced to four days in jail. In February and March, she was arrested twice on prostitution allegatons in 10 days, court records show.

Prosecutors tried seven times to revoke her probation for credit card fraud before Cave agreed to send her to prison, the newspaper said.

The indictment claims Cave took the woman to his house Sept. 6, 1982, "put his hand on her leg and told her she knew what he wanted."

A month later, Cave allowed the woman to be released without posting a cash bond, according to court records.

Complaining about self boring habit

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe complains about his life when he's not rattling on about some esoteric thing, asks a lot of questions and mumbles "uh-huh" a lot when you talk.

Jack keeps calling things "far out," tells you his feelings and just tries too hard to be nice.

Who is more boring?

New studies suggest it's Joe.

The research is among the first in "interpersonal boredom," a line of study that could lead to help for "chronically and excessively boring persons," researchers wrote in the November issue of the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology.

"We're all boring sometimes and we're all interesting sometimes (but) some people are more boring than others," said Mark Leary, assistant psychology professor at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N.C., who wrote the report with three students.

Harry Reis, psychology professor at the University of Rochester in New York, called the work "a first step in a whole new direction that we need to know more about."

The experiments were based on a survey of undergraduate students and analyses of brief conversations between undergraduates who had just met. More work will be needed to see if the findings apply to other kinds of people and situations as well, Leary said.

In one experiment, 42 students suggested a total of 210 things other people do that bore them, which researchers distilled into 43 themes for a second survey of 297 students.

That survey found that the most boring behaviors were banality, such as talking about trivial or superficial things or showing interest in only one topic, and "negative egocentrism," which essentially meant complaining about oneself and showing disinterest in others.

The least objectionable behaviors were "boring ingratiation," which meant trying to be funny and nice to impress others, and a mixture of distracting behaviors, such as going off on conversational tangents or overusing small talk or slang.

An example of slang is, "Hey wow, man, this was far out, it was too cool," Leary said in a telephone interview. "It gets a little old."

A second study focused on five-minute conversations between 52 pairs of strangers. Transcripts were reviewed by 12 undergraduates who rated a randomly chosen person in each conversation for "boringness."

Unemployed pipefitter shoes horses

SILSBEE, Texas (AP) — Former pipefitter Kent Stockton says he decided to take a bet on horseshoeing as a new livelihood when his resources were running thin after eight months of unemployment.

"I had bought a couple horses before my unemployment hit, and I saw a demand for a reasonable, dependable farrier," he says from the small Silsbee home, where horses graze complacently in the front yard.

"I was sitting here about to starve to death and had to do something. So I decided to take a gamble," said Stockton, a Bridge City native.

Using what was left of his savings, Stockton went to Oklahoma State University earlier this year to study the craft for six weeks.

Now Stockton is a successful farrier, running a one-man business in the small town of Silsbee, about 20 miles north of Beaumont. A farrier is a person who fits horses with horse shoes.

The six days of Stockton's work week start before most of his customers are awake and lasts all day, basically because putting shoes on about eight horses a day takes almost a whole working day.

Stockton logged more than 7,000 miles in a two-month period, making house calls around Southeast Texas.

Returning to Silsbee where 14 other farriers operate, Stockton realized earning a diploma wasn't the toughest part of the job. He also had to win the acceptance of the tight-knit horse-owning community.

Word travels fast in horse circles if you do a good job, and even faster if you don't. But a few local ranchers took a chance on the new farrier, helping Stockton establish a reputation.

"A horse carries about 75 percent of its weight on its front feet, so it's a lot more complicated than just taking a shoe and nailing it into place," Stockton told the Beaumont Enterprise-Journal.

Two 15-year-olds held in rape-slaying

HOUSTON (AP) — Two 15-year-old boys who escaped last month from a state juvenile detention facility are being held for the rape and shooting death of a Houston woman after one of them helped officers recover the body, authorities said.

Police found the body of Cathy Lynn O'Daniel, 26, Saturday in an isolated area four miles south of Alvin, investigators said.

The youths were arrested Thursday in the victim's car in Greenville, about 30 miles northeast of Dallas, said Sgt. J.J. Freeze of the Harris County Sheriff's Department.

One of the teens told police about the slaying, and the suspected murder weapon was recovered in Alvin, he said.

Investigators planned to ask prosecutors to have the youths certified for trial as adults, Freeze said. Both remained in custody today.

The woman's body was found face down and covered with grass in an open field about a quarter mile from a dead-end dirt road, Brazoria County Justice of the Peace G.E. Webb said.

She had been sexually assaulted and shot several times with a small-caliber pistol, authorities said.

The victim, who had been missing since Monday, apparently was abducted from a service station in northeast Houston when she stopped to put water in her radiator, said Sgt. J.J. Freeze of the Harris County Sheriff's Department.

She was forced to drive the teen-agers to Brazoria County where she was killed, Freeze said.

Authorities believe one of the suspects called the victim's brother and told him that his sister had had an argument with a boyfriend and was going away for a few days, Freeze said.

The two escaped from a juvenile detention facility in Fort Bend County last month, Freeze said. Texas Youth Commission officials said they were legally prohibited from divulging information about the youths.

Lubbock High clips Tigers

Toby Christian led the way as Lubbock High ran off 11 points at the start the fourth quarter and went on to defeat the Snyder Tigers here Saturday night, 58-47, in a non-district varsity basketball game.

Snyder trailed by as many as 10 points early in the contest but had pulled within four points, 39-35, on a pair of Brad Gartman free throws just before the start of the fourth period.

Christian, a 6-6 senior who has already committed to Baylor University, took over in the start of the final eight-minute period, however. He took advantage of consecutive Snyder turnovers to score seven straight points and give the Westerners a 46-35 advantage with 7:01 left. A pair of free throws from Ryan Christian and a short jumper from Alfredo Molina put the visitors in control for good, 50-35.

Snyder had fallen behind 17-9 in the first quarter and later 21-11 early in the second. The Tigers were able to rally, however, midway through the quarter. Chris Garrett stuck in three points, Terry Garza nailed a 13-footer, and Gartman popped a free throw as Snyder pulled within three points, 23-20 with 2:41 to go in the half. The score was 29-25 at intermission.

Both teams began to get into foul trouble in the third quarter. Five players got their fourth foul in the period, including Snyder's Trey Tippens and Reynaldo Gomez.

Snyder had chances to pull even with the Westerners late in the third quarter, but was unable to. The Tigers missed five free throws in the final 3:14 of the period, including three which were the front end of bonus situations.

"We had a chance to even things up right there if we just make some free throws," said Snyder's Coach Larry Scott, who was bemoaning the Tigers 17-of-39 effort from the stripe. "Then, those turnovers early in the fourth quarter kinda set the tone for them. When Lubbock High needs points, they go to Christian or to Molina. It's Christian's third year to start for them and he's a proven player."

Snyder kept switching defenses in the game and shut Molina down in the second half. He scored 20 for the ballgame, but all but 18 were in the first two quarters. Christian notched 15, including a five-for-five effort from the charity stripe.

Snyder was led by Garza's 13 points. Garrett had 9 and Tom Marvin added 7.

WTC Westerners split a pair

WACO -- Western Texas College's Westerners split a pair of high-scoring basketball games at the McLennan Community College Highlander Classic here over the weekend.

The Westerners, 3-3, will join WTC's Dusters for a double header tonight at 6 and 8 o'clock in Cisco.

Western lost its opener to No. 3 ranked Jacksonville, 139-120, then broke a three-game losing skid on Saturday by nailing Temple, 102-80.

"I thought the guys showed a lot of character by coming back Saturday against Temple," said Coach Phil Spradling. "We had lost three straight and it would have been easy to get down. They (the losses) were against teams I think we could have beaten but we weren't playing well. We'll go to Cisco tonight and try to get another win."

Kevin Kendrick, a 6-3 sophomore from Dallas, led Western Texas in its win over Temple. He hit 10 of 12 field goals, including four three-pointers, for 24 points, and set a new Westerner assist record with 15. The old record of 14 was set in the 1979-80 season by Ronald Portee.

Alvin Lee's 29 points was team high for the game. Harvey Marshman scored 18 and had 11 rebounds while Amos Jones put in 17 points.

Johnny Reece led Temple, 2-7, with 15 points.

In the game Friday, undefeated Jacksonville used its blazing speed and pure shooting to outgun the Westerners.

"They get back so fast. They can really score. I think they had 10 guys from New York," said Coach Spradling. "Their game plan is to outscore you. Usually when you score 120 points you expect to win. We wanted to slow them down but it's tough because the kids get into the flow of the game and everybody wants to score."

Lee led Western with a 46-point effort, just one shy of his Westerner record of 47. Kendrick and Jones seared the hoop for 20 points each and Marshman added 17 and had 11 rebounds.

Jacksonville, 10-0, got 40 points from Terrence Brodnick, 31 from Robert Hokett and 28 from Lamont Thornton.

Dusters chalk overtime win

BIG SPRING -- Western Texas College got the challenge it needed Saturday afternoon and rose to the occasion at the Hawk Queens Classic here. The Dusters, who had been outscoring opponents by about 22 points, nipped Angelina College in overtime, 75-73.

The victory gives Coach Kelly Chadwick his best start ever, at 10-0.

"It was a good ballgame, the kind of ballgame we needed. It should help us realize that when we get a big lead we need to keep our intensity. It also shows that if we get down we have the ability to come back," said Chadwick.

He was referring to the fact that Western led by 14 points late in the first half, but eventually trailed by four before tying the game and sending it into overtime at 67-67.

"Lisa Thompson hit some pressure free throws and Brenda Welch and Gi-Gi Robinson hit a couple of crucial baskets to send it into overtime," said the coach. "And we played real well in the overtime."

Angelina was led by the hot hand of major college talent Denise Ballenger, a 5-5 guard, who scored 40 points.

"We really played good defense," said Chadwick. "The Ballenger girl is rated as the No. 2 point guard in the U.S. She's just a tremendous athlete."

Janice Patton, a 5-9 freshman, added 10 points for the Lady Roadrunners.

Western got 26 points from Welch and 15 from Wendy Milner. Lisa Thompson poured in 11 while Robinson and Kayla Thompson scored 8 apiece and Dee Ann Marr added 7.

Western went 11 minutes of the second half without scoring a basket.

"They packed it in a tight zone and we couldn't relax and put it in the goal," said the coach. "Finally, we began to play our game and we came back."

Welch, Milner and Lisa Thompson were named to the all-classic team.

The Dusters keep their unbeaten record on the road tonight to play Cisco at 6 p.m. They return home for the WTC Thanksgiving Classic on Friday and Saturday.

SHS Lady Tigers are nipped by Hereford ballclub, 39-37

BIG SPRING -- Snyder varsity girls led most of the way but couldn't hang on for the victory as Hereford defeated them 39-37 in the Spring City Basketball Tournament here Saturday morning.

The Lady Tigers, 0-3, look for their first win Tuesday when they entertain Colorado City at 6:30 p.m. in Scurry County Coliseum.

"We led the whole ballgame until the end when we got in foul trouble and we had some critical turnovers," mused Snyder Coach Ken Housden. "We had some chances. It just wouldn't fall for us."

Hereford chased Snyder into the final seconds and finally went in front with less than a minute to play. The Tigers had a couple of shots at the baskets in the final seconds, but couldn't find the hoop.

Snyder got 16 points from Stephanie McKnight and 11 points and 7 rebounds from Teri Sue Henry.

Hereford was led by Suzy Kalka's 12 points. Carmen Brockman, a 6-2 post, managed 11.

Snyder led on the boards 28 to 26 and had a good night from the line by hitting 9 of 11 free throws.

"We're improving. We're going to come around, I think," said Housden. "It's just going to take a little time."

Tyson earns title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - Mike Tyson, 20, became the youngest man to win a heavyweight boxing title as he knocked out Trevor Berbick in the second round here Saturday night.

It was Tyson's 26th knockout. His 28 fights have totaled just 77 rounds.

JV girls overcome Hermleigh varsity

Snyder junior varsity girls upped their season record to 2-0 with a 67-46 victory over Hermleigh's varsity hoopsters over the weekend.

The young Lady Tigers will play again Tuesday, hosting Colorado City at 3:30 p.m. in Scurry County Coliseum.

The game was a close one until the fourth quarter, when the Tigers outscored the Cardinals 23-9. A key factor for the Cardinals was Jill Roemisch. She scored 32 points but fouled out in the fourth period. Beverly Sandefur added 8.

"We had a hard time containing Jill at first," said Snyder Coach Vicki Nelms of Roemisch, who was a member of the Tiger varsity last season. "We got out of our full court man and went to a half-court and dropped back into a 2-3 zone off of it. We did a better job of containing her. She fouled out in the fourth and we were able to take advantage."

Snyder got a fine game from Teena Braziel, who had 23 points, 9 rebounds and 11 steals. Dana Fenton scored 10 points and had 8 boards while Beth Alvis added 9 points. Shelly Tomlin managed 11 rebounds and 3 assists.

Zales's favors buyout

DALLAS (AP) — A takeover deal sweetened with $640 million in cash was finally enough to convince the world's largest jewelry retailer that a merger with Canada's second-largest jeweler isn't such a bad idea, Zale Corp. officials say.

After six years of offers and repeated flat refusals, Zale Corp.'s board of directors relented Sunday and said it favors the all-cash buyout offer from Peoples Jewellers Ltd. of Toronto.

Directors for Irving-based Zale agreed to urge their stockholders to accept a tender offer of $50 per share for all Zale stock. The offer comes from Peoples and Swarovski International Holding A.G. of Zurich, Switzerland.

"They (Zale's board) changed their mind because the price and terms had changed for the better," said Dolph Simon, Zale's senior vice president and general counsel.

He told The Dallas Morning News he could not elaborate further on whether Peoples' management had discussed its plans for Zale, the company's employees or its executive management.

The Zale board said it would recommend accepting the offer on the condition that the deal be closed before year's end so stockholders could take advantage of lower capital gains tax rates in 1986.

The Zale and Lipshy families, which together own about a third of the company's stock, have agreed to sell their shares. Donald Zale is chairman and chief executive officer of Zale Corp. and Bruce Lipshy is president.

Peoples already owns 16 percent of Zale's stock, so the company likely will be able to obtain 51 percent of Zale stock, as required for the deal to close, Zale officials said.

The tender offer by Peoples and Swarovski, a manufacturer of jewelry and crystal that is one of Zale's suppliers, was made Oct. 29 and had been further developed in recent discussions between the company and the Peoples-Swarovski group, officials said.

Zale rejected three offers of cash and notes that Peoples had made on its own since February. Zale's offer with Swarovski was the first all-cash offer made during the takeover try.

In February, Peoples proposed to pay $35 a share in cash, along with $5 of preferred stock for each Zale share. In March, Zale's board rejected a second bid from Peoples of $35 in cash per share and preferred stock with a face value of $7 per share.

In June, Zale flatly rejected Peoples' third takeover bid valued at $500 million in the form of $42 cash per share and a stock issue worth $4 per share of Zale preferred stock.

Peoples first made a run at Zales in 1980. The companies signed an agreement on Feb. 20, 1981, that allowed Peoples to hold up to only a 21-percent stake in Zale until the year 2002.

Zale employs 12,000 people worldwide and had sales of $1.1 billion in 1985 from almost 1,600 retail units in the United States, Great Britain, West Germany, Guam, Japan, Australia, Puerto Rico and Switzerland.

The chain, founded 62 years ago by the Zale family in Wichita Falls, Texas, has in recent years embarked on a strategy to change its image from "the diamond place" to a jewelery retailer with a broader appeal.

Peoples, a publicly traded company, has 302 outlets and posted 1985 sales of $127.9 million in the year ended Aug. 31.

Parked car hit

The 300 Block of 36th St. was the scene of a minor traffic mishap Saturday morning.

Racing stock auctioned off

FLORESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Talk of horseflesh mixed with recollections of the 1960s as about 500 people gathered at former Gov. John Connally's ranch over the weekend for a race-horse auction.

Connally had announced he was selling his quarterhorse and thoroughbred racing stock to devote all his time to his real estate business in the wake of the state's economic downturn.

On hand Saturday were horsemen such as Joe Schreiber of New Braunfels, who examined the yearlings like a doctor.

"This is going to be a big filly," he said to a nearby trainer. "She's got a lot of length and a lot of leg under her."

At the other end of the stables, Connally said of the 130 horses: "You hate to see them go. You get attached to them. That's the beautiful thing about horses."

When asked about financial problems, the former governor said, "I don't really want to get into that here," but he said he planned to restructure debts and expected better financial times within 60 to 90 days.

Talking with guests at the 4,000-acre Picosa Ranch, south of San Antonio, Connally reminisced about the days he was governor, bypassing mention of the 23rd anniversary Saturday of the day he was shot and President Kennedy was killed in Dallas.

"In the mid-'60s I thought we should have had pari-mutuel wagering in this state," he said. "I also thought we should have had liquor by the drink."

He said he opted to push for liquor by the drink instead of pari-mutuel betting.

"That was 20 years ago and pari-mutuel wagering should have been passed 25 years ago," he said.

Pope begins tour

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Pope John Paul II began his Australian tour today, kissing babies, calling for universal peace and bringing cheers when he ended his arrival speech with the words of the national anthem, "Advance Australia fair."

Prime Minister Bob Hawke, other government officials and a crowd of several hundred people — mainly women and children who waited several hours in the hot Canberra sun — greeted the pontiff at the heavily-guarded Fairbain air base.

The pope arrived from Christchurch, New Zealand, aboard an Air New Zealand Boeing 767. His two-week Asian-Pacific tour has included stops in Bangladesh, Singapore, and Fiji. He is scheduled to visit the Seychelles before returning to Rome on Dec. 1.

In Australia, he was greeted by a 21-gun salute and a navy guard of honor. He bowed to the national flag as he reviewed the guard.

Hawke escorted the pope to a dais, tucking his arm under the 66-year-old pontiff's elbow to help him mount the stairs. In a welcoming speech Hawke noted it was the Polish-born pope's second visit to Australia. The first was in 1973 as a cardinal.

Hawke said the pope's "great expedition" to Australia, a 7,000-mile trip that will take him to every major city on the continent in six and a half days, would daunt a man of less energy and commitment.

"You will meet openness, friendship and enthusiasm from all Australians," Hawke told the pope.

The pope drove from the airport to Mass at the national exhibition center.

Before leaving New Zealand earlier today, the pope's final Mass was marred by a heavy rainstorm and the arrest of a woman who broke through tight security.

About 25,000 people attended the open-air Mass at Lancaster Park rugby stadium in Christchurch, New Zealand's third-largest city.

Officers went to that location and recovered a microwave oven, 13 cartons of cigarettes, a package of disposable diapers, and a number of adult magazines.

Martinez was officially charged with the burglary just before 8 a.m.

Bond for Martinez on the burglary charge had not been set at 10 a.m.

Remarks sought on sex education

At the high school level, "facts and myths" related to sex would be taught.

Emphasized throughout the study unit is the need for parent-child communication as part of the sex education process.

Adoption of the study plan has been recommended by a new "self-evaluation" group formed by the district. It is comprised of both district staffers and individuals from different segments of the community.

Individuals drawn from the community for the newly formed Advisory Committee on Education for Self Responsibility include Ken Branam, Kathy Roberts, Bid Cooper, Velma Clay, Mike Jordan, Paula Pierce, Vernest Tippens, Judy Billingsley, Kaye Holley, Mrs. David Beaver, Nancy LaRoux, Domingo Quintela and Anita Felan.

Dole says Shultz should be more supportive of Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican leader Bob Dole says Secretary of State George Shultz should be more supportive of President Reagan, even if that means Shultz shares the blame for secret U.S. arms sales to Iran.

Although Dole said that only Reagan ultimately can end the political turmoil enveloping his administration, he also said Republicans are finding it difficult to speak up while Shultz fails to do so.

"It creates a lot of problems for a lot of us who trust the president and want the the president out of this mess ... it was a mistake," the Kansas Republican said of the arms sales during an appearance Sunday on CBS-TV's "Face The Nation."

"But I must say it's rather difficult for us to move center stage if the players around the president are bickering among themselves and all looking for cover," he added.

Dole and other members of Congress continued to raise questions about the wisdom of the arms sales to a country officially categorized by the State Department as a terrorist state, while Reagan, returning from a weekend at his Camp David, Md., retreat, waved off news reporters, refusing to comment.

More questions were sure to be raised today during a hearing the House Foreign Affairs Committee scheduled on the Iranian issue.

Shultz has emerged as a key target of administration critics, along with White House chief of staff Donald Regan and Vice Adm. John Poindexter, the president's national security adviser.

Former President Gerald Ford said at a Michigan fund-raiser Sunday those responsible for the arms deal should resign. He would not name names, but said the president "needs new leadership in the National Security Council."

Edward J. Rollins, a former top political adviser to the president who headed Reagan's 1984 campaign and was a longtime White House aide, said today that Reagan should make "some staff changes."

"Adm. Poindexter, I think, as the architect or the implementer of this plan probably needs to go if you ever want to get the congressional support that you need," Rollins told "CBS Morning News."

Reagan insists the arms shipments were not meant as a trade to win freedom of American hostages held in the Middle East.

The Wall Street Journal reported today that the Reagan administration informed congressional leaders last week that another purpose of the covert arms deal was to open a new supply route to the Moslem guerrillas battling Soviet forces in Afghanistan.

The newspaper quoted unnamed intelligence sources as saying that Iranian officials had agreed to pass 100 of the 2,008 TOW antitank missiles they received from the United States along to the neighboring Afghans.

While Reagan has admitted the Iranian arms deal was fraught with risks, the president has refused to call it a mistake.

Newsweek reported that former President Richard Nixon called the White House before last week's news conference to say that the president should admit he made a mistake. But, the magazine quoted a White House aide as saying advisers could not bring themselves to recommend that course because "Reagan doesn't believe that he made a mistake."

Computer age schools are turning to VCRs

NEW YORK (AP) — The videocassette recorder is becoming the latest technological darling of educators convinced it is tailor-made for average students who benefited least from the classroom computer revolution.

"Video usage may be the strongest new element in instruction in the '90's," concludes a new report, "Microcomputer and VCR Usage in Schools," by Quality Education Data Inc., a Denver-based firm which distributes marketing information about schools.

Leading the way has been Hawaii, whose schools rank 50th in the number of microcomputers per student in the 1985-86 school year, but which has found that VCRs are highly useful for reaching students with diverse cultural backgrounds in a physically isolated setting, according to the report.

The California Department of Education last year bought and distributed a VCR for every public school in the state, and a survey found that 40 percent are using instructional television.

cilmen Troy Williamson and Ralph Williamson and WTC President Dr. Harry Krenek noted the proposal will be presented during the next scheduled meeting of each entity. The city council will hold its regular session on Dec. 1 with the college board meeting on Dec. 8.

Although not a scheduled agenda item, Skip Fulkerson with S-F Data Processing Co. of Odessa informed the court about the possibility of placing a small business computer in the county clerk's office to facilitate meeting new election standards recently proposed by the Secretary of State's office.

Fulkerson currently assists the county clerk with election printouts and computer cards.

Your Birthday

Nov. 25, 1986

Additional revenues will come your way in the year ahead, but you must manage each situation prudently. The same type of opportunities might not come around again for a long time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your public image is a trifle more fragile today than you may realize. Don't put yourself in a position where envious associates could take potshots at you. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Usually you are a rather consistent person, but today there's a chance you might be both unduly negative and unrealistically optimistic.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today, try to get more out of your head than you do out of your purse. Don't spend money for something that you can acquire through shrewd trading.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You will be judged today by the company you keep. Be sure to select companions who will enhance your image instead of detracting from it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you are handling a delicate matter for another today, treat it with the same respect you have for your personal affairs. Carelessness could be costly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is not a good day to take financial risks in areas about which you know little. If you are going to gamble, at least be sure you know the ground rules.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be extremely careful how you handle critical negotiations today. You could win all the small points at the expense of losing the big ones.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You've inflated the value of an idea you've been toying with, but this doesn't mean you should discard it completely.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Strive to be mindful of your budget today. Don't go on a spree, hoping you'll have funds later to cover what you spend now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be the one who calls attention to any faux pas you make today. If you do, associates will help rectify matters, rather than embarrass you about them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you do not put a proper value on your services today, persons for whom you work won't do so either. Misplaced modesty reduces your compensation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today, you might be appointed spokesperson for something that involves your group of friends. Start out with tight plans so that things don't get out of hand.

Government offers silver dollar sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Mint, which has been swamped by gold fever for the past month, expects its new American Eagle silver dollars to be just as popular with the public as the its high-flying gold coins.

The new silver dollars, the first silver bullion coins ever produced in this country, were being put on sale for the first time today.

Mint officials and coin traders alike predicted a sell-out of the initial offering of 1.4 million silver dollars.

Just like the American Eagle gold coins, the silver dollars will be sold for the price of their bullion content. But with silver selling for a little over $5 an ounce compared with more than $380 an ounce for gold, the silver dollars will be in the range of more people's pocketbooks.

The mint is counting on this fact, plus a spill-over in enthusiasm for the gold coins, to boost silver sales.

"We expect to mint 5 million silver dollars by the end of the year. That is a lot of production, but we think they all will go," said Donna Pope, director of the U.S. Mint.

"Dealers figure if the American public loved the gold Eagle so much, then they are going to love the silver Eagle because it is at a price that almost everybody can afford," she said.

Like the gold coins, the silver dollars are not being sold directly to the public but instead are being sold to a network of 26 authorized dealers who then resell the coins to coin shops, banks and other retail outlets.

The dealers were to place their orders and receive their allocations today. The coins should be available to the general public by the end of the week.

To meet demand, the Mint has added extra presses and has gone to around-the-clock operations at the San Francisco Mint, where most of the silver dollars are being made. It has also started producing silver dollars at the Denver Mint.

The silver coins, which will be offered only in one-ounce sizes, are slightly larger than the old silver dollars. They feature a "Walking Liberty" design on one side, which was used from 1916 to 1946 on U.S. half-dollar coins. They contain 99.9 percent silver compared to 90 percent silver in the old silver dollars.

"It's a big coin and the most silver, silver dollar ever issued by the Mint," Mrs. Pope said.

Route 66 signs sold

AUSTIN (AP) — It was the end of the road for Route 66.

The last 116 signs that marked the famous highway, which now snakes across Texas maps as the decidedly un-romantic Interstate 40, were sold to a private bidder for $70 apiece Saturday.

The bids started out higher at the state-surplus auction of memorabilia from the highway made popular by a television series and a song, but James Tullos of Athens waited until the price dropped to $70 before raising his paddle.

He said he wanted the signs as "just an investment." And before auction officials could even finish counting up the number of signs he bought, he had sold three for $80 each to disappointed would-be bidders who didn't get their bids in soon enough.

Among bidders who didn't wait for the price on the 2-foot-square signs to drop to $70 was Cherry Tullos, James' wife. She bought one for $72 and also successfully bid for a large shield-shaped sign for $160.

"I was hoping for maybe four (signs)," Mrs. Tullos said after her husband's surprise purchase, which cost him $7,910 for the 113 signs he kept. "I would have been tickled to death. I'm not so happy now."

Mailed-in bids, made on the floor of City Coliseum by auction company employees acting as proxies, started the bidding high when the sale of 277 signs started with the large shield-shaped signs.

A&M corrals lioness to carry rare embryo

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Even to the untrained eye, it's pretty obvious that Delilah is not your average backyard pussy cat.

First of all, she eats 4 to 8 pounds of horse meat a day.

And then there is the matter of her toys. No dainty ball of catnip for Delilah. No sir. Instead, she likes to bat around a big, fat, black bowling ball to keep herself amused during her lonely hours.

But more than that, what sets this cat apart from the pack is Delilah's role in the struggle to save some of her more exotic sisters from extinction.

The 300-pound, 8-year-old African lioness that Texas A&M University Professor Duane Kraemer keeps at his country home near the university is the focus of research that eventually may determine if more abundant types of exotic felines could serve as surrogate mothers for embryos taken from endangered species.

Currently, the research is aimed at developing a non-surgical method for removing embryos from cats. Taking an embryo from a cat without putting her through surgery is less threatening to the mother, a paramount consideration in dealing with animals that are disappearing from this planet, such as the Asian lion.

"We can't afford the stress of surgery when there are only a few individuals to a species," says Sandy Hurlbut, a graduate student at the A&M College of Veterinary Medicine. Hurlbut, who has worked extensively with Delilah, is developing techiques that may be useful in the non-surgical removal of embryos from felines.

Delilah serves as a good subject for the research because African lions are plentiful. "Most of the zoos are using contraceptives on the African lions," says Kraemer, an international leader in the study of embryo transfers. "They are very reproductive in captivity, and we feel she is a rather logical choice to act as a recipient."

Delilah came into the A&M fold as a cub a few years ago when she was admitted to the small animal clinic at the Veterinary College as a patient. Around that time, research was beginning on embryo transfers in domestic cats and there were plans to extend that work to endangered species. Because of that, the veterinary physiology research program decided to take Delilah when she outgrew the small animal clinic facilities.

It was no small decision. "When you accept an animal like this, you accept the responsibility for life," says Kraemer, who agreed to move Delilah to a cage the size of a living room near his home seven miles from campus.

Not only does Delilah have a healthy appetite — she eats about $1,500 worth of food in a year — her personality is liable to take on a peculiar bent at any moment.

For example, she likes to roar, a sound that is something akin to the bellowing of a bull. "And we have neighbors within hearing distance," says Kraemer.

"I spent several nights on a cot out here at the end of her cage when she first came out here. She wouldn't roar when I was out here," says Kraemer.

The kitten-sitting didn't work Delilah couldn't help herself, so Kraemer has explained the strange noises coming from his yard to those neighbors. New neighbors are warned about Delilah's nightlong songfests, and things have worked out pretty well.

Kraemer and his wife, Shirley, have grown used to the nightly interruptions, which can occur as often as every hour and a half when Delilah is in heat. "We always wake up and go back to sleep," says Kraemer, "It's just like having a baby."

Delilah also likes company, and reacts lovingly when the veterinary students make their daily trips out to feed and exercise her and clean her cage.

Chemical Pump Service Serves Many Oil Patch Needs

Chemical Pump Service, owned locally by Tom Machen, serves the needs of the oil patch, by carrying a full line of Texsteam Electric Drive Injectors. The 4100 Series Texsteam Injectors are positive displacement, plunger-type pumps which are gear driven and utilize electric motors, V-belts or other rotating drives as the power source. The unit's gear drive is housed in a precision-bored, heavy cast iron case with anti-friction bearings on the high speed shaft. The output gear, made of high strength alloy iron, is supported in a special bearing arrangement assuring extremely long life with maximum rigidity.

The entire worm-gear drive mechanism runs in a lubricant bath for longer operating life, even under the most adverse operating conditions.

The Texsteam 4100 Series can by used for chemical injection and for handling corrosive fluids.

Because these units can be equipped with from one to eight heads, a wide range of additives may be accurately handled from one installation. This versatile pump has found wide acceptance for use in refineries, LACT units, salt water floods, tank batteries, process plants and in water treatment for boilers

The Texsteam 4100 Series Injectors are easy to install. No expensive foundation or piping is required. These pumps will give you many years of economical and trouble-free service.

In addition to Texsteam Electric Drive Injectors, they also carry Western, Calgon and Percision Pumps and Bendix, Wico, Fairbanks Morse and American Bosch Magnetos.

Also ask about Magneto sells and repair as well as Poulan and Shindaiwa chain saws and all types of chain saw sharpening.
