FLAG DAY

EMBLEM OF DIGNITY AND JUSTICE

Speaking at the Flag Day celebration, Washington, D. C., on June 14, 1914, President Woodrow Wilson said: "This flag for the future is meant to stand for the just use of undisputed national power. No nation is ever going to doubt our power to assert its rights, and we should lay it to heart that no nation shall henceforth doubt our purpose to put it to the highest uses to which a great emblem of justice and government can be put."

"It is henceforth to stand for self-possession, for dignity, for the assertion of the right one nation to serve the other nations of the world — an emblem that will not condescend to be used for purposes of aggression and self-aggrandizement; that it is too great to be debased by selfishness; that has vindicated its right to be honored by all nations of the world and feared by none who do righteousness."

Local Student In Speech Workshop

Denton, Texas—Miss Loretta Broucker, 602 East 4th Street, Burk Burnett, is enrolled this summer in the Children's Theatre Workshop at Texas Woman's University.

Burkburnett "Heritage Week" To Be Observed June 20 Thru 25

The post office at Burk Burnett—reportedly named by a president of the United States—issued two money orders on the first day it opened, Oct. 2, 1907.

One, for $1, went to The Times Publishing Co. of Wichita Falls.

The new post office money orders and cash records were inscribed in the books by the first postmaster, Mrs. Maggie Weaver. The present postmaster, W. T. (Dub) Zimmerman, recently found the books while going through some post office records.

The books will be displayed either at the post office or in Burk Burnett business establishments — during "Heritage Week," June 20 through 25, marking the town's 59th birthday.

Various businesses will display historic artifacts during the week and special observances are planned.

The first postmaster's son, Orville Weaver, who now lives in Oklahoma, will be presented Monday with photostats of the books his mother kept. Weaver and his wife will be Zimmerman's guests at the monthly luncheon at the Burk Burnett Chamber of Commerce at Town Hall Monday. And Zimmerman will present the photostats.

Burkburnett began with a lot auction on June 6, 1907.

According to legend, its name was suggested by President Theodore Roosevelt, who knew and admired Burke Burnett, a North Texas ranchman about the turn of the century.

WHO DECIDES ON DRUGS

The medicare bill, which is to go into effect July 1, 1966, was passed in considerable haste. The strongest kind of political pressure was used to force it through Congress and to side track with little consideration other proposals for meeting the medical needs of the elderly. As a result, medicare is far from being a model piece of legislation, whatever one may think of the principals it represents.

An officer of a leading drug company has pointed to one of its glaring defects. Nearly half of the 200 drug products most frequently prescribed by physicians are excluded from government payments under medicare. And the reason for this is that they do not appear among the approved reference books selected as the principal guides to be used in the medicare program.

In the spokesman's words, "It is fascinating to me that we've got the Food and Drug Administration set up to license companies to sell drug products in the United States, but that this agency's approval isn't used as the criterion for acceptability to medicare."

Certainly, the physician is the one who should decide what drugs will be most beneficial to his patients, whether or not they are under medicare. In this respect, as in others, the hastily-enacted law is in urgent need of amendment.

A MANIFEST ABSURDITY

There is an absurd contradiction in political attitude toward organizational growth. On the one hand there is government—centralized, all-powerful government—growing by leaps and bounds. The popular new name for it is creative federalism. By direct controls and by the growing burden of taxation, federal authority is becoming all pervasive. The only recourse for those who do not favor growing authoritarianism is the polling booth. But the effectiveness of this checkrein is becoming questionable as government exerts more and more economic influence on voters by providing benefits to large groups of voters on a blanket basis. On the other hand, there is the continuing concern expressed by regulatory authorities over the dangers of "big business"—the businesses and industries that feed, clothe and house the people and provide them with necessities and luxuries on a scale never before known in history.

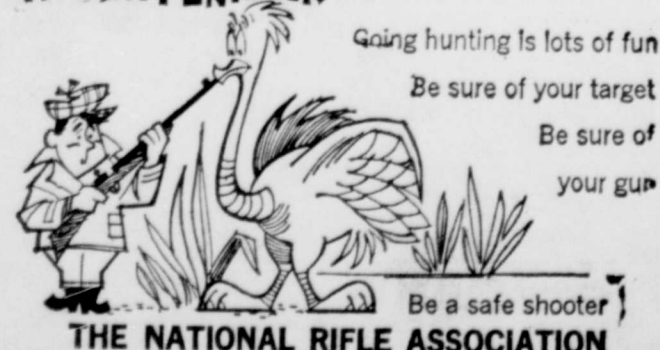

Recently the Federal Trade Commission, in what one expert called "the most far-reaching decision ever reached in the merger field," barred a major food chain from acquiring any other food retailing concern for ten years without prior approval. Similar bans may be imposed on other large food retailers. The antitrust order is significant because it appears to be in line with the objectives of the National Food Marketing Commission, a special study group established by Congress.

To the average person, if there is one industry that has served the country well, and has demonstrated a remarkable capacity for meeting the needs of more than 190 million consumers, that industry is the food industry, including the retail distribution segment of it. Their philosophy of moving the largest volume of goods possible at minimum prices can hardly be described as anything but in the public interest.

It is totally incongruous for a government that continually preaches the virtues of its own bigness to turn around and seek to curb the growth of a business simply because it is big. This defies national explanation. If mere bigness is evil, it is doubly evil in government as there is in the case of big business. Government concern over size alone is a manifest absurdity.

NEW LOOK in STEEL

Newest thing in steel is tin coated steel foil. It is only two thousandths of an inch thick, about the equivalent of an ordinary magazine page. Heat it, chill it, poke it, soak it, glue it, laminate it. It can be used in thousands of ways — yet it is steel and you know what that means in strength and durability.

This disposable pie pan is one of many products that can be made of steel foil. Contents are easily removed. The pan holds firmly while you serve individual slices. Simply toss away after use.

One of the greatest potential uses for new steel foil is in construction of corrugated containers. A 50-pound nail box with foil laminated to the cardboard has more than three times the compression strength than the same box without foil. Strength of foil also helps keep nails and other sharp products from piercing the box.

Another possible use of steel foil is for packaging the new freeze-dried foods. Steel foil's toughness and impermeability to moisture make it an ideal material. Sharp points and edges of freeze-dried food cannot penetrate steel foil. Contents are kept kitchen fresh and sealed, ready for instant use.

The Texas Forestry Association was organized at Temple in 1914 as a non-governmental, non-profit, statewide, privately supported, educational organization, promoting the fullest economic development and utilization of our forests and related resources.

IT'S UP TO YOUBy
Howard E. Kershner, L.H.D.Official Cheating

IT IS now standard practice in at least a dozen New York City schools to upgrade the records of students on transcripts sent to colleges, or to omit their failures to obtain passing grades. School officials admit that it is dishonest, but state that it is necessary in order to get young people into the city universities.

But if a student cannot make a passing grade in high school there is little hope that he will be able to do so in the university. If professors and school officials resort to basically dishonest practices, what can be expected of the students? If men and women will not be truthful, there is no hope of maintaining free government. If public officials will not keep their promises to the electorate, there is no way of choosing the most capable men to administer public affairs. If witnesses will not tell the truth in the courtroom, juries and judges cannot administer justice among us.

We read of a senator who cheated at Harvard — of widespread cheating on grades at one of our military academies — and of a great lapse in standards of truthfulness. There is, moreover, widespread violation of biblical Commandments.

What has happened to our peaceful and law-abiding society? The youth of my generation were taught to believe in God and to respect and follow the teachings of the Bible. But it is no longer so, and moral law has grown dim in the conscience and mind of the American people, so that it no longer governs their actions.

But organized society cannot exist without discipline. If we are unwilling to discipline ourselves by voluntary loyalty to the moral law of God as set forth in the Bible, summarized in the Ten Commandments, a degree of chaos and lawlessness will come upon us that will make inevitable some sort of authoritarian regime. Then we will become the victims of a cruel police state. This has already happened to a large part of the world, and we are not immune.

We may fear God and keep His Commandments and thereby enjoy peace, self government and prosperity, or we shall become the terrorized victims of the tyrants in their efforts to impose some sort of man-made discipline upon men who have rebelled against the laws of God.

Useful Area

According to the Southern Pine Association, one of the most useful areas for wood's resiliency is the structure that supports floors.

Since this structure carries the entire weight of the house and all its occupants and contents, lumber's ability to sustain shock is invaluable. This "cushioning" effect also assures walking comfort.

SALT OF THE EARTH

There is no higher compliment to speak of some one as the salt of the earth. There is no vital element in human biology than ordinary salt — sodium chloride.

This compound is only one of the "salts", a class of chemical compounds formed when an acid combined with an alkali. Yet everyone knows what we mean by an unadorned term salt.

Salt is a constituent of water, of the soil, of plants, of every living cell and tissue. The proper exchange of salt in the human body between blood and tissues is essential to life. Impairment interferes with the proper fluid content of the body and with the electrical elements of tissue functions. When something goes wrong with the handling of salt in the body, it is a serious trouble.

Essential Factor
Salt is the metallic content of sodium chloride — the sodium — is the essential factor in the proper functioning of salt within the body, and of its disturbances. Sodium chloride is one of the elements known as electrolytes. It bears important relationships to calcium and potassium in body chemistry. Its utilization is related to the function of the adrenal cortex, an important factor in Addison's disease (a disturbance in salt metabolism or adrenal cortical failure). More common impairment of salt metabolism is the excessive salt loss due to perspiration.

In hot weather, causing so-called heat cramps, preventable by the use of more salt on the food or by taking salt tablets. In certain forms of heart and kidney disease, excessive sodium retention may cause water-logging of the tissues.

Habitual use of too much salt is ordinarily handled by the kidneys without difficulty, but it may be a factor in weight control.

Low Sodium Diet

When the doctor prescribes a low-sodium diet, commonly called "salt-free", he doesn't mean diet without salt. That would be detrimental, and impossible, since salt is contained in all foods, even when not intentionally seasoned.

He means a diet low in sodium. He means that he wants you to refrain from working the salt shaker so hard, and to cut out salty foods such as smoked and cured meats, sea-foods and ocean fish, pickled foods and canned foods with sodium benzoate preservative added (read the label). He may also recommend bread baked without salt, unsalted crackers, and dietetic fruits and vegetables canned without added salt. Seasonings permitted are herbs, onion, garlic, vanilla, paprika, parsley, pepper, peppermint, vinegar, and non-sodium salt substitutes.

Dairy products are usually unrestricted in a low-sodium diet, except that sweet instead of salted butter is used, and low-sodium cottage cheese is favored over other varieties.

Know Your Enemy

Household Pests Take No Summer Vacation

Any housewife can tell you: even in Summer there's no vacation from housecleaning. While hubby's off fishing and junior's playing baseball, she's engaged in a never-ending war against household enemies, such as mold, mildew, fungus, insects and bacteria. In fact, far from calling an armistice, these fiends step up action in warm weather; they love it!

To help the homemaker engaged in this dirty war, here are some tips for a clean fight. First, make constant check ups on trouble spots. Dark, damp places, such as under and around bathroom fixtures, are favorite camps for mold and mildew. Clean these places with a good detergent and keep them as dry as possible. Closets too invite mildew as a frequent guest and leather shoes and boots are often the unwilling hosts. Air closets often and spray with an effective disinfectant, such as Pine-Sol. Refrigerators need constant cleaning at this time of year: don't give mold the upper hand by keeping food too long. Insects too seem to take over in summer. Before they get out of control arm yourself against them with a good bug killer. Spray around plumbing fixtures, under appliances, around the kitchen garbage container, and in storage closets.

And finally, if she's to win the war against these common household enemies, the homemaker's arsenal must include the 4 D's of effective weaponry — Detergent, Deodorant, Disinfectant, and plenty of "we-have-not-yet-be-gun-to-fight-Determination!"

TEXAS POISON CONTROL CENTERS

Texas county agents have been supplied with a revised list of the poison control centers located in the state. The last was provided by the Texas Department of Health. Poison centers are designed to provide information, treatment and public health information. The services are available to local physicians who may not be acquainted with the proper treatment and antidotes for specific pesticides or other poisonous materials. Entomologists of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service emphasize the importance of keeping doctors informed on what pesticides or other chemicals are being used in an area. The time interval between onset of poison symptoms and initiation of treatment is often critical.

Give The Family A Dutch Treat

Cooks who care always add charming touches to even the simplest foods, as did the Borden Kitchen in glamorizing Dutch chocolate ice cream into a Chocolate-Marshmallow Pie decked with marshmallow flowers and chocolate cutouts—tulips, of course. To make marshmallows bloom, flatten the large size, then snip with kitchen shears dipped in hot water. Leave the center intact. For the simple tulip silhouettes, melt together over hot (not boiling) water 1/2 cup semi-sweet chocolate morsels and 1/2 teaspoon vegetable shortening. Spread melted chocolate in a thin, even layer on waxed paper; chill. Cut out with small cookie cutters or by following a paper pattern. It's easy to go Dutch and create this conversation piece.

Chocolate-Marshmallow Pie

(Makes one 9-inch pie)

White Coconut Crust:

2 tablespoons butter
1-1/3 cups (one 3-1/2 oz. can) flaked coconut

With a spatula, spread butter evenly over sides and bottom of a 9-inch pie plate. Firmly press coconut evenly against bottom and sides of pie plate. Bake in a moderate (325°F.) oven for 15 minutes, or until light, golden brown. Remove from oven. Chill thoroughly. Fill with Chocolate Ice Cream Filling.

Chocolate Ice Cream Filling:

1 quart (one-half 1/2-gal. pkg.) Borden's Dutch Chocolate Ice Cream
1 cup Campfire Miniature Marshmallows
Marshmallows and chocolate cutouts, optional

Let ice cream soften at room temperature until of spreading consistency. Add marshmallows; mix well. Spoon mixture evenly into chilled White Coconut Crust. Place in freezer for 1 to 1-1/2 hours, or until firm. If desired, before serving garnish top of pie with marshmallows and chocolate cutouts.

MISS KATHERINE FRICKE IS BRIDE OF JOHN MULLER, JR.

Miss Katherine Ann Fricke, daughter of Mrs. Ernest Fricke and the late Mr. Ernest Fricke, of Cisco, Tex., and Arnold John Muller, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Muller of Burkburnett, Tex., were married Saturday, June 11 at 7:30 p.m., in a double ring ceremony at the Redeemer Lutheran Church in Cisco. Rev. J. W. Keenan, pastor of the church, officiated.

Musicians were Mrs. Kenneth Leach, organist, and Miss Lois Konz, soloist.

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza over taffeta fashioned in the heirloom silhouette. The fitted bodice featured an oval neckline scalloped with lace and long tapered sleeves. Both bodice and skirt were appliqued with peau d'ange lace. The skirt fell from a natural waist and graduated to back fullness to sweep to a chapel length train. Her pure silk illusion veil was topped with a crown of pearls and she carried a white orchid with Stephanotis garlands on a white Bible. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, J. W. Gerhardt.

Matron of honor was Mrs. James Wuensche, cousin of the bride, Temple, Tex. Bridesmaids were Misses Janice Justice, Cisco, and Pennie Muller, sister of the groom, Burkburnett.

The bride's attendants were identical full length gowns of yellow peau de soie with boned lace bodice, empire waistline, short sleeves, and a round neckline. Headpieces were matching roses with attached veils. They carried bouquet garland arrangements of white glads centered with yellow pom poms.

Terri Smith, niece of the groom, was flower girl, and Perry Smith, nephew of the groom, was ring bearer. Candelights were James Gerhardt, cousin of the bride, Rising Star; and Tony Miller, nephew of the groom, Amarillo.

Best man was Leonard Muller, brother of the groom, Burkburnett, and groomsmen were Jack Jamieson, Fort Worth, and

GOOD FOOD, FAST SERVICE

Have you ever stopped to notice the numerous eating places, from restaurants deluxe to greasy spoon eateries, which advertise "good food, fast service"?

Actually, the two concepts do not belong together. Good food should be enjoyed in leisure and quiet, not in haste and din. Our modern food habits, especially the shortened lunch of the working population, do not take this important fact into account. From top executive to the lowest employee on the industrial totem pole, the hasty lunch is the rule.

Even the executive, who is commonly reputed to take three hours for lunch, is more likely to bolt his lunch and use the remainder of the time drawing diagrams on the tablecloth, drinking martinis, and discussing business.

Banquets, Too

Even the ceremonial banquet is hurried; everybody sits on the edge of his chair until the tables are cleared and the speaking begins, and then everybody goes to sleep, sometimes including the speakers. Good food was made to be enjoyed. It should be eaten in appropriate leisure, and digested in a state of pleasant relaxation.

"Okay, friend," I hear you saying, "but try and do it!"

I know, I know. I too have stood poised behind the line of stools at the lunch counter, eager to pounce on the first empty place. I too have wolfed down the frankfurters and beans and even insulted the cool server by gulping it down instead of savoring it as should be savored.

I too have burped my way to the office. I speak from experience—and you know how acid I mean. My stomach, the busy-man's lunch, felt like the distorted and you-know-what on TV.

Custom Hard To Break

I know, too, that it is hard to break the chain of custom, which has tended to reduce the lunch period to a 30-minute abatement, in order to allow 15 minutes earlier closing time. I know that there is little use in expecting workers to rise, even though they have nothing to lose by their dyspepsia.

Yet I would suggest that we remember the dietetic wisdom of Solomon, who declared: "a dinner of herbs, where there is a peace, is better than a stalled ox and its therewith," and respectfully phrase his sound advice: "Have a luncheon at leisure, when there is, than a banquet in haste and distress therewith." It is not done, too, if one makes the most of his limited time, and gets a bit of relaxation or a short rest in the fresh air, even in the best of lunch "hours." As you see, it's an idea. Try it some time. It beats an antacid.

Pageant With A Purpose

Time was when beauty contest winners were just that—beautiful and nothing else. Contest judges valued the physical attributes of the contestant—paying little heed to whether this pretty doll had a mind of her own. An off-key rendition of "Un Bel Di," a graceless answer to a judge's question, did nothing to hinder a beautiful girl from being crowned Queen.

New emphasis on the thinking woman as well as the well-groomed one is exemplified in such contests as America's Junior Miss Pageant, held in Mobile, Alabama, co-sponsored by John H. Breck, Inc.

The Pageant is a traditional event in Mobile, since it was developed from the long-ago Azalea Trail Festival—in which only local girls were permitted to promenade. Last year, however, 40,000 girls from every state in the Union participated in 900 local and state pageants before 50 finalists were selected.

Contestants, chosen from high school seniors of each state, are judged on scholastic achievement, creativity, character and poise. Each contestant also has a chance to look her best—with free beauty advice and aids like Miss Breck Hair Spray available at the Pageant's fully-equipped beauty salon.

This year's America's Junior Miss, Diane Wilkins of Wauwatosa, Wisconsin, is active in community affairs, has a "B" average in school, and will study medical research in college. Her hobbies of dancing, basketball, and writing show her creativity in many fields. Diane typifies today's ideal high school senior—combining poise and brains.

WASHINGTON "SMALL BUSINESS"

By WILSON HARDER

One of the problems of modern journalism is covering the whole story due to the fact that space is so limited. A case in point is the treatment often given to Rep. Otto Passman of Louisiana.

Because he has been such a strong opponent to the foreign give aways called for by the U.S. in aid, he is often dismissed in print as some kind of a stormy petrel without the real meat of his opposition being presented.

C. W. Harder

Recently the Congressman made quite an extensive statement on the whole matter of the U.S. foreign give away.

He brings to light the fact that while the so-called Mutual Security bill is heavily publicized, it all but escapes notice that in some 15 other bills before the Congress there are additional foreign aid grants.

He claims that the total of these bills before Congress total over $8½ billion for fiscal 1967, and that the interest on the money already borrowed to give away around the world is $11½ billion.

Making reference to the fact that the argument is often used that other nations have some type of foreign aid, he points out that they are operating on the same basis as they have for generations. They make short term loans at "banker" terms with substantial rates of interest. On the other hand, the United States faces a catastrophe.

he says, the U.S. is borrowing money to give away at a time when the U.S. public debt exceeds by $24 billion the combined public debt of all the rest of the world's nations.

He also refers to the argument advanced that foreign give away funds promote domestic business because so much of the money is spent for U.S. produced products and commodities.

This is a fallacy, he points out. In a normal trade relation foreign nations would buy from the U.S. the items that are now given them. In payment for these items they would either export goods of their own to the U.S., or pay in dollars or gold.

But the way it works is that with the gifts from U.S. being free they use the dollars they gain from exports to the U.S. to make demands on the disappearing gold supply.

The figures he releases on the gold situation are startling. In the last 12 years the U.S. gold stock has gone from $23½ billion to $13½ billion.

The Congressman also states "Most of those who act as bankers, and who have the right to commit this nation to billions of dollars in gifts and grants for programs throughout the world, could not by any fair evaluation qualify to serve on the board of a small bank. They are conforming bureaucrats."

The Congressman is firm in his belief that unless the people are given all the facts, and aroused to protest, the United States faces a catastrophe.

Disease, poverty and poor food habits are just as responsible as food shortages in conditions of malnutrition and undernourishment. UNICEF experts claim. Nations expecting to overcome this condition in their population must develop long-term programs for hospitals, health centers, and home care, they say. Ignorance of food needs and values; untreated diseases, with emphasis on insufficient medical care for children; lack of sound wearing programs and the ever-present factor of over-population with no means of coping with it must be corrected.

WORD POWER!

One of our popular publications, encourages the learning of new words, and in each edition prints a few words that we can add to our vocabulary.

Words have swayed thousands, even changed the course of history. It is through the use of words that men are saved.

"For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe."... "Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men."

ATTEND CHURCH... HEAR GOD'S WORD PREACHED

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Versatile Pole-Frame

According to the Southern Pine Association, wood pole-frame is a versatile system of construction — equally well adapted to farm buildings or seashore vacation homes.

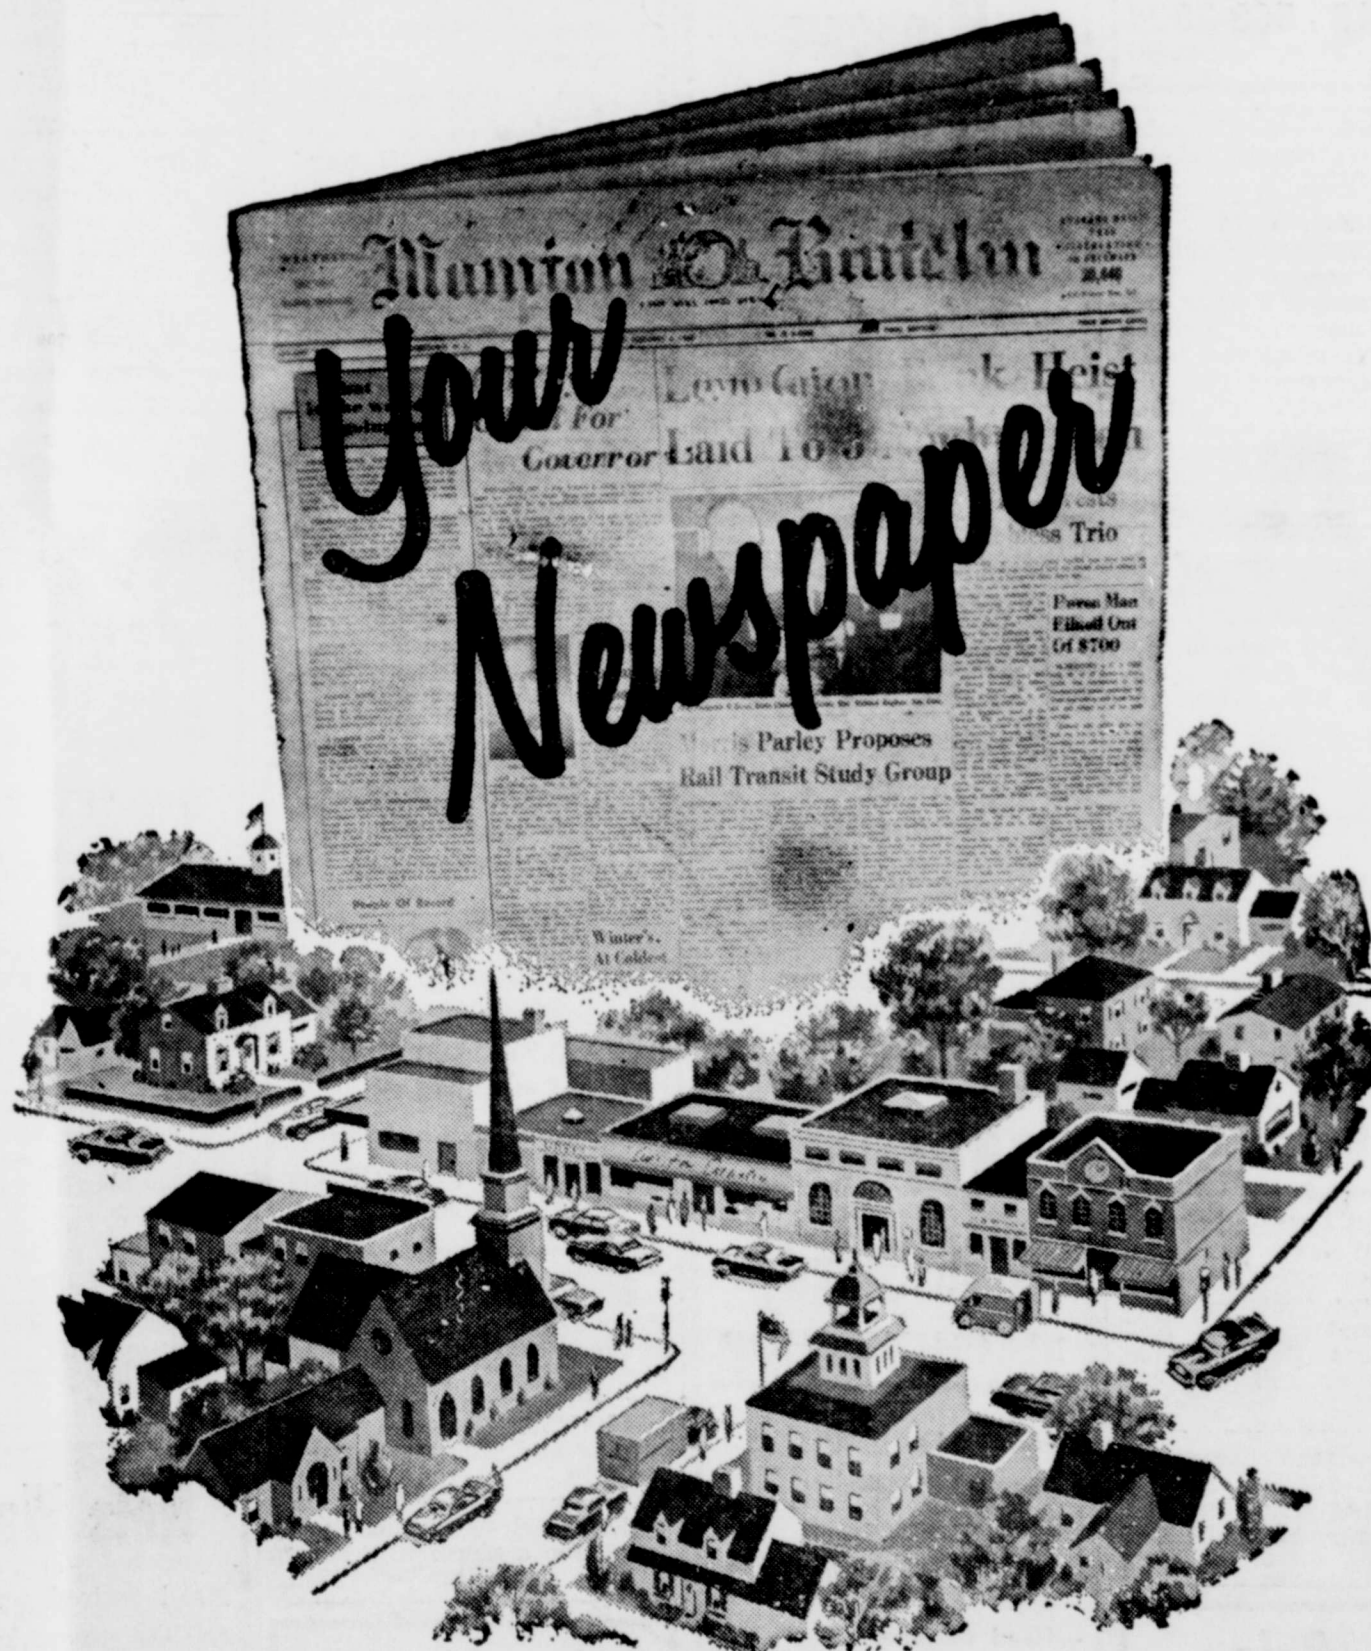

Pressure treated wood poles are imbedded directly in the soil with lumber utilized to complete a simple but sturdy structure. In the case of vacation homes, the house is built around the upper extremities of the poles, for protection against hurricane spawned tidal waves.

A lot of wives would be perfectly happy if they didn't talk things over with other women.

Former Resident Retires Recently

Retirement is not the time to quit, but an active period when we should do what we haven't been able to do under the pressure of a job. Dr. Randall D. Watkins, professor of physical education at the University of Wyoming, told a crowd of nearly 300 persons who had come to honor him and Mrs. Watkins at a retirement dinner at Crane Hill cafeteria Friday night.

Outlining his own philosophy on retirement, Watkins pointed out that most people when they go to work in a place check on retirement benefits. "As the time rolls along toward retirement we sometimes forget what we had planned to do. I've been looking forward to retirement for four or five years," he said. "But when it arrives it's not as much fun as you think it would be. You hate to leave friends, even for a short period of time each year."

Dr. Watkins was a coach at Fairview High School west of Burkburnett from about 1931-1941 and has many friends in this area.

Word has been received here that Mrs. Ben L. McDonald is visiting with her son, James R. McDonald, and family in Farmington, New Mexico. They came here to be with her when she had surgery in May and she returned home with them for a few weeks visit. She is reported to be recovering nicely. Mrs. McDonald states that "The Burk Star and News is like getting a letter from home."
