Senators undecided about Tower

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Tower's pledge to swear off alcohol if approved as defense secretary left two undecided Senate Democrats unmoved today and pledging they will go over all evidence on the nominee's character before deciding how to vote.

"I think you have to review all the evidence. I'm trying to be open-minded, judicial and fair about it," Sen. Howell Heflin of Alabama, one of several Southern Democrats still considered open to the White House lobbying effort for Tower, said on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Sen. John Breaux, D-La., said on the same program that he would vote against Tower if the vote were today despite the embattled nominee's extraordinary pledge on Sunday.

"I think that if we have a serious doubt, if any senator has a serious doubt about the competence of a candidate, that he should err on the side of safety," said Breaux. "In that case, it indicates voting negatively."

Asked whether Tower's promise to refrain from drinking had swayed him, Heflin said he plans to read the classified FBI report on Tower today and "will review the evidence of the drinking problem."

■ Related story — 2B

Heflin said he will consider "does he have a drinking problem that might be a detriment to the United States national security" and "does he have a temptation propensity that might return to drink."

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said on CBS "This Morning," meanwhile, that Tower's vow should put the drinking questions to rest "because John Tower is a man of his word...So I think that particular issue ought to be gone."

Tower made his pledge against the alcohol in televised interviews Sunday, saying he would be "obliged to resign" if he broke the vow.

At the same time, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said he might reconvene Armed Services Committee confirmation hearings to hear testimony in public about the former Texas senator's drinking habits.

The committee chairman coupled his statement with a complaint that the White House was leaking information from the FBI's background report on Tower in a bid to rescue the nomination.

Nunn's Democratic-controlled committee voted 11-9 along party lines last Thursday to recommend that the full Senate reject Tower's nomination, with the chairman citing allegations of excessive drinking by the nominee.

The comments today and Sunday were a prelude to an intense week of political maneuvering over the nomination, which the full Senate is expected to debate beginning at midweek.

President Bush intends to take personal charge of the lobbying campaign for Tower.

City employee Danny Robertson makes some minor adjustments to a new pump being installed at Wadley-Barron Park off A Street. The pump was installed to reduce the chances of neighborhood flooding.

Pump should curb pond's flooding

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

Low tide at Wadley-Barron Park?

That's been the look during the past week at the A Street pond haven for ducks and other assorted feathered creatures.

According to city officials, the pond was purposely lowered four to five feet in depth so that workers could install a new pump aimed at curbing neighborhood flooding.

City Engineer James Robertson said work on the project began last week. "We lowered it (the pond) just enough to dry up the inlet area leading to the pumphouse."

Midland City Council approved purchase of the $6,800 pump following numerous complaints by neighborhood residents last July when heavy rains pushed the pond over its banks.

Engineers have recommended on occasion that the pond area be further excavated to the southwest and that additional underground lines be placed along A Street with portable unit connections.

City Manager Fred Poe said he still favors permanent connections at the site for those units as kind of a fail-safe mechanism in the event of a torrential downpour.

Such connections would eliminate the need to pump excess water up onto A Street or require workers to lay portable lines on the road itself.

Poe estimated the additional underground connections would cost the city between $60,000 to $70,000 — a cost he said could be offset over a 10 year period, given the fact that it costs taxpayers about $3,000 every time workers are called out.

But much of what engineers have proposed was nixed when city residents rejected a $3.5 million drainage program last September. The program was part of a larger $17.4 million bond package.

Bush promises to keep troops in South Korea

By MATTHEW C. QUINN
Hearst News Service

SEOUL, South Korea — President Bush gave a hearty blessing to South Korea's democratic reforms today while pledging to keep U.S. troops in the country as long as they are needed and prodding the leadership to open South Korean markets more to U.S. exports.

Bush's five-hour visit here was the first by a U.S. president since South Korea's 1987 elections that marked sweeping political changes.

Following a red-carpet military welcome where he reviewed Korean troops at the joint U.S.-South Korean K-16 military base, Bush traveled by a U.S. helicopter on his stops in and around the capital to bypass crowds of demonstrators protesting his visit. Thousands of riot police lined the streets to keep the protests in check.

After arriving from Beijing, Bush was flown immediately to the Blue House, the presidential mansion here, for a meeting with President Roh Tae-woo, a 56-year-old reformer who won his country's first direct-vote presidential election in December 1987.

Bush and Roh dined on grilled salmon and Korean delicacies washed down with Dong Dong Joo, the nation's traditional milky rice wine. Then Bush, signing the Blue House guest book, wrote, "Long Live U.S.-Korean relations."

In an address to the National Assembly later, Bush declared: "I have come here today as the leader of a faithful friend and a dependable ally. I am here today to ensure that we work together in all things."

Bush commended Roh's government for seeking rapproachment with North Korea, a policy the American president called "creative diplomacy" and "building bridges to the North."

But Bush also cited "hard realities" and noted that North Korea maintains the world's fifth largest military, said to number more than 1 million, "a force deployed just 25 miles north of here."

"Our most important mission together is to maintain the freedom and democracy you fought so hard to win," Bush declared. "As president, I am committed to maintaining American forces in Korea and to support our mutual defense treaty. There are no plans to reduce U.S. forces in Korea."

The United States maintains 43,000 troops in South Korea, and American forces have been here continuously since the start of the Korean War in 1950. In recent years, passionate anti-American protests directed at their presence have mounted.

North Korea, led by 76-year-old dictator Kim Il Sung, issued a statement declaring that the vow to retain U.S. troops in South Korea was "a revelation of the U.S. imperialists' unsatiated ambition for permanent occupation of South Korea."

On the tense trade issue, Bush said South Korea had benefited from open markets in the United States and, "We must expect fair accesss to the markets here and I believe President Roh understands that."

In his address to the National Assembly, Bush made a strong appeal to the country's powerful farmers, who are influential in the legislature, to open up their markets to U.S. porducts.

"Protectionism is fool's gold," he told them.

"Nothing will stop the engine of Korea's economic growth faster than new barriers to international trade," he added.

Although the U.S. trade deficit of nearly $10 billion with South Korea is tiny compared with the $60 billion U.S. deficit with Japan, the Korean trade barriers have become another source of friction. American farmers claim that only miniscule amounts of U.S. fruits and vegetables are allowed in the country.

Bush said bluntly: "We also cannot overlook that your economic success has created concerns" in U.S.-Korean relations.

"For the American people and for the Korean people as well, reducing our bilateral trade imbalance will be both a challenge and an opportunity," he said. "The challenge will be to resist calls for protectionism; the opportunity will be to expand the prosperity of both our countries."

The last American president to visit South Korea was Ronald Reagan in November 1983. At that time, authoritarian President Chun Doo Hwan was in power. He stepped aside and designated Roh as his successor in 1987. Roh faced three challengers and won a plurality of the votes.

Clements: Texans to use influence for SSC funding

By JENNIFER DIXON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texans will undoubtedly cash in their chips and wield their influence in Washington when Congress considers financing the super collider, Gov. Bill Clements said Sunday on the eve of a round of high-level talks to discuss SSC strategy.

"Cashing chips is a normal process in (the) congressional cycle of considering the budget," Clements said during a break in the National Governors' Association winter meeting.

"So if you're talking about will we in Texas use our influence, and I'm talking about a proper influence within the Congress itself, undoubtedly we will. Because it's important to us in Texas."

The Department of Energy wants to build the multi-billion dollar giant atom smasher on farmland south of Dallas, but Congress has yet to commit to construction of the high-energy physics project.

But President Bush, an adopted Texan, recommended in his budget to Congress that $250 million be appropriated in fiscal 1990 and that a portion of the funds be used on initial construction.

Clements said he does not consider funding for the super collider in jeopardy and is confident the money will be appropriated.

"I have good reason to believe that. I think the leadership in both the House and the Senate are totally in accord that it should be funded and I think it will be funded," Clements said.

Clements said he believes the decision to build the super collider "has been made. It's merely a question of the funding."

But Congress last year, in appropriating $100 million for the project, decreed none of the money could be used for construction.

"I'm not going to comment about last year," he said. "We're in another year. We're in another session. We're in another time frame and the time has come to spend some money for construction. The time has come to increase the budget request and the necessary funds to carry forward the plan and I think the Congress will be responsive. I really don't have any doubt about it."

Clements is scheduled to meet today with Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Energy Secretary James Watkins.

He plans a White House meeting Tuesday with National Security Adviser Gen. Brent Scowcroft, as well as sessions with Texas Democrats Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and House Speaker Jim Wright of Fort Worth.

"My major goal is to make the contacts I think will be helpful, and not only helpful but necessary, with regards to the super collider," Clements said.

"I will be discussing the funding of the super collider, as well as the current program and the intricacies of that program, and what we hope to accomplish here in this next year," Clements said.

County denied chance to join voting rights suit

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton today denied Midland County's request to join a lawsuit that challenges judicial districts in 15 counties, including Midland.

Bunton also suggested that if any changes are needed in the judicial districts to make them comply with the Voting Rights Act, they would be made in time for the 1990 elections.

During a hearing in federal court this morning, Bunton ruled that Midland County had no legal status in the case, but he allowed district judges from Dallas, Houston and Austin to intervene in the case as individuals.

He also allowed intervention of black former judges from Dallas and Houston who lost elections after their appointments to unexpired terms.

Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman said he suspected the county will appeal Bunton's ruling and seek to pursue intervention status, but he also will talk to Midland's three district judges on whether they wish to join the case as individuals.

"When we filed the intervention request in November they didn't want to," Dettman said.

Dettman noted that the majority of plaintiffs in the original case live in Midland County. "We feel we are in the best position to give the court the necessary evidence," he said.

Bunton also set a July 11 trial date in the case that could order single-member districts in the 15 counties with 170 judges targeted by the League of United Latin American

Ramses could have been Texan

By SUZANNE GAMBOA

DALLAS (AP) — Although some native Texans might not take too kindly to "foreigners," there is one they have welcomed without hesitation, even going as far as to say he has what it takes to be a Texan.

Of course, there's no way Ramses the Great can become a Texan. He died centuries ago. But that's not stopping this state from drawing comparisons between its residents and the great pharaoh who Egyptologists believe ruled in the time of the biblical Moses.

Dallas is the final stop in a six-city tour of the Ramses the Great exhibit, which opens here Saturday and runs through Aug. 27 before heading to Cairo, Egypt. The exhibit is made up of a 3,000-year-old collection of Ramses' possesions and other Egyptian aritfacts.

A Bloomingdale's advertisement in the March issue of Texas Monthly magazine heralds the exhibit with a Texas flair.

Dolly, an Asian elephant born recently at Busch Gardens in Tampa, Fla., receives one of her 12 daily feedings from Roman Schmidt, director of elephant breeding, as her mother, Sally, watches. When Dolly was born Dec. 30, 1988, she weighed 185 pounds and brought Busch Gardens' captive Asian elephant breeding population to 22, the largest in the world.

TOWER

But Tower wasn't waiting for Bush to return home from his Asian trip.

"Noting the principal concern of Senator Nunn and other members of the Senate relative to my confirmation as secretary of defense, namely the extent to which I may engage in excessive use of beverage alcohol, let me state that I have never been an alcoholic nor dependent on alcohol," Tower said in a statement he read on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley" and Cable News Network's "Newsmaker Sunday."

"I hearby swear and undertake that if confirmed, during the course of my tenure as secretary of defense, I will not consume beverage alcohol of any type or form, including wine, beer or spirits of any kind," he said.

Tower also vowed that if he broke his pledge not to drink, he would step down. "I think I'd be obliged to resign if I broke the pledge. I've never broken a pledge in my life," said the former senator.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole called Tower's pledge "very, very significant" and urged Democrats and Republicans to reassess the nomination.

"My view is it ought to be a new ball game. We ought to sit down and try to work it out and spare any hard feelings," Dole said.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Tower's pledge "is another factor to be considered" as he agreed to a meeting with Dole today.

Nunn had no comment on Tower's pledge, according to Arnold Punaro, a member of the Armed Services Committee staff.

Bush begins courting undecided Democrats on Tuesday in hopes of capturing enough votes for Tower to win confirmation. Democrats hold a 55-45 majority in the Senate, meaning Bush must pick up at least five Democrats to assure Tower's confirmation.

Tower, in the interviews, also read from a letter from his doctor saying tests last month found that he had normal liver functions and there was no evidence of alcohol impairment or alcoholism.

In the interview with CNN, Tower acknowledged that he was a heavy drinker during the 1970s but denied that he had a drinking problem. "Drank to excess. I wouldn't say that I had a problem. That is to say, I wasn't hooked on it; I wasn't dependent on it. I did drink too much," he said.

On the ABC program, the onetime chairman of the Armed Services Committee and former U.S. arms control negotiator conceded that there was a point in his life when he changed his drinking habits.

"Twelve years ago, I gave up spirits. I used to be a pretty good scotch drinker. I haven't tasted scotch in 12 years. After that I had only wine, and perhaps an occasional martini, occasionally a little vodka with smoked salmon, caviar, something like that. That was just occasionally.

"I really essentially (have) been a wine drinker. Now my only consumption is wine at meals."

Tower has been dogged by allegations of both excessive drinking and womanizing.

Pressed by interviewer Sam Donaldson about whether he would pledge not to see women, the former senator asked the ABC newsman to define womanizer in what became a heated exchange.

"Now, when allegations are raised that you're a womanizer, should you take a pledge not to go out with women?" Donaldson asked.

"I'm a single man. I do date women," said the twice-divorced Tower.

Nunn, in an interview on NBC, criticized the White House for "selectively leaking" portions of the FBI report on Tower and raised the possibility of additional hearings on the nomination.

"If they continue to do this or if they put out information that they claim is a true representation of the FBI report and we decide it is not a true representation, then we would have no alternative but to open the hearings and go back and subpoena some people and have a full public airing of this," Nunn said.

The White House is preparing a version of the confidential FBI report for public release in hopes of demonstrating that allegations against Tower are baseless.

Economists think nation will be able to avoid recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — Economic growth will slow significantly this year while inflation and interest rates both rise, but the country should be able to avoid a recession, the nation's top business economists predicted today.

The National Association of Business Economists says a survey of its members found them slightly more optimistic about the economy's fortunes in 1989 than they were just three months ago.

However, three out of four of the economists still believe President Bush will have to deal with an economic downturn in the first two years of his presidency.

That represented a decline from the 89 percent who last November expected a recession by the end of 1990, and the number predicting a recession this year showed an even bigger drop — from 40 percent three months ago to 19 percent now.

But the belief that the current expansion, which has already lasted a peacetime record of six years, will keep steaming ahead for two more years is still a minority view held by just one-fourth of the economists surveyed.

The median forecast for growth this year, as measured by the gross national product, was 2.7 percent, up slightly from a 2.5 percent estimate made three months ago.

That is still one-half percentage point lower than the Bush administration's estimate that the GNP will expand at the robust clip of 3.2 percent in 1989.

The administration is counting on faster growth to bring in more revenues and help it lower the budget deficit without the need to resort to higher taxes.

On the question of interest rates, another critical component of the budget deficit because of the cost of financing the $2.7 trillion national debt, the business economists see short-term rates hitting a peak of 8.5 percent this year and then beginning to decline to 7.8 percent by the end of 1989.

The administration is forecasting substantially lower rates for this year.

The survey was taken before the Federal Reserve boosted the discount rate on Friday to a three-year high of 7 percent. An increase in the discount rate, the interest the central bank charges to make loans to commercial banks, is the most dramatic gesture the Fed can make to show its determination to push the cost of credit higher and dampen inflationary pressures.

The business economists expressed strong support for the Fed's inflation-fighting battle, with 70 percent expecting the board to boost interest rates further.

While expressing an urgent need for Congress and the administration to reach an agreement on a credible deficit reduction plan, the business economists generally supported Bush's stand against new taxes. Only about 15 percent of those surveyed said they believed tax increases should be emphasized over cutting government spending.

Among the government programs which should face the knife, a large majority of the economists, 72 percent, favored slashing farm subsidies.

POND

Poe said the new unit now being installed will pump at a rate of 3,000 gallons per minute — nearly 1,200 gallons more than what the current unit can distribute. "What that means now is that we can empty that lake without the portables."

Robertson said city workers have removed silt and other materials such as duck feathers and aluminum cans from a caged-area that protects the pumphouse itself.

Once everything has been completed, Robertson said natural groundwater seepage should restore the pond to its original level.

Citizens as well as black and Hispanic plaintiffs who filed the suit in Midland.

Bunton postponed the trial from the original April start, but he rejected a request from Special Assistant Attorney General Renea Hicks that the trial be delayed until November and that the court not attempt to make changes before the 1990 election.

Hicks said it is probably too late for the Legislature to make changes in the current session, and suggested that if changes are needed they could be done in 1991, with new census data, to limit disruption of the judicial system.

"I won't say now if it will target the 1990 election, if any targeting is done, but I suspect it won't be 1992," Bunton said. "If there's a violation, there's a violation."

Bunton also said he would consider a suggestion that he appoint magistrates in the 15 affected counties to hear evidence on each county's case in the Voting Rights lawsuit. "In some areas we may use that approach," he said.

Attorneys for LULAC said they are dropping 29 counties from the lawsuit. The amended lawsuit will seek to order single-member judicial districts in Harris, Dallas, Travis, McLennan, Ector, Midland, Jefferson, Galveston, Fort Bend, Tarrant and Smith counties and a district that includes El Paso, Hudspeth and Culbertson counties.

RAMSES

"Think Big," the ad reads. "In another lifetime, he probably would've come from Texas."

The ad extols the pharaoh's legendary life as a ruler and conquerer and extends an invitation to exhibitgoers: "If you're into power in all its fascination, see this exhibit."

As the state anticipates the exhibit opening, words like "power," "empire," "riches" and "wealth" are being tossed about, touching the Texas braggart nerve.

A Dallas television station also told viewers that Texans and Ramses have much in common.

Ramses' demand to build things on a grand scale and the reality that he was a larger-than-life figure in his time would have qualified him for Lone Star State citizenship, the staion reported earlier this month.

"Texans have egos, this man would have made a great Texan," said Kathy Douherty, public relations director for Shotwell and Partners, Inc. "I can say this because I'm a native Texan."

And the exhibit will be set up at the state fairgrounds, home of the Cotton Bowl, where the Texas Longhorns and Oklahoma Sooners fight battles that some say are on the scale of those fought by Ramses.

"When people think of Texans, they think of something big or monumental and Ramses was big and monumental," said William McKenzie, chairman of the Dallas Museum of Natural History Association, which is presenting the exhibit.

The exhibit's featured artifact is a giant granite statue carved in the pharaoh's likeness.

But while Ramses immortalized himself in the 27-foot colossus, Texans perpetuate their heritage by erecting 52-foot-tall "Big Tex" at the State Fair every year.

McKenzie said he expects the six-month exhibit at Fair Park to bring between $85 million and $120 million to the city and area.

Downtown Neiman-Marcus has set up a display window with Egyptian themes and is selling a pair of exclusive jeweled evening purses. One bag is in the likeness of the pharaoh's head, and the other is a scarab, an Egyptian beetle.

The store is asking a king's ransom for the bags — $3,890 each.

Hotels are offering rooms "fit for a king" and what they advertise as "Colossal" deals that include reduced room rates, complimentary exhibit tickets and limousine rides to and from the museum.

In conjunction with the exhibit, the Dallas Convention and Visitors Bureau is inviting the public to "get all wrapped up in Ramses" by dressing as their favorite pharaoh or Egyptian queen for a costume party.

Perhaps Ramses could do for oil-depressed Texas what he did for Egypt.

BUSH

Since then, this nation of 42.5 million people has seen a steady drive toward democracy and economic prosperity. Its gross national product, or total goods and services, is now more than $100 billion.

Although Roh, like Chun, is a military man, he has led in a number of democratic reforms.

A free press abounds, labor unions are active in demanding higher wages and better working conditions and almost daily student demonstrations are tolerated.

Seoul, which had a population of 2.5 million in 1960, has quadrupled to more than 10 million and is the fifth largest city in the world.

Bush is expected to arrive tonight in Washington, where he faces a furious uphill battle to save his nomination of former Texas Sen. John Tower to be secretary of defense, a nomination rejected last week by the Senate Armed Services Committee. A vote by the full Senate is expected Thursday.

Thousands evacuated after railroad derailment explosion

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Fire touched off by a train derailment spread to another railroad tanker car early today, forcing thousands of people to keep out of their homes and schools, authorities said.

Only one of the four cars of highly flammable butane that caught fire Sunday night was burning shortly before dawn, but then fire started at another car, said Lt. Richard Summerlot of the Akron Fire Department. Firefighters stood by, waiting for the fire to go out.

The burning cars were among 17 that derailed from a CSX Transportation train on the grounds of the B.F. Goodrich Chemical Plant, Fire Chief George Romanoski said.

"I was watching TV and I heard something and saw the whole sky light up," said Minnie Herrington, 40, who was brought to a shelter with her four children, ages 4 to 11.

"It sounded like a gunshot."

Thirteen people were treated at Akron General Hospital, most suffering from inhalation of smoke and fumes. One man was admitted, in fair condition.

About 1,500 homes within a half mile of Sunday evening's accident were evacuated, police said. They estimated the number of evacuees at 2,000.

Shelters were set up at Kenmore High School and the University of Akron for those who could not stay with friends or relatives.

Schools in this city of 250,000 were closed and metropolitan bus service was canceled today because the city bus garage is near the derailment site, Summerlot said. Businesses in the area also were closed today, he said.

The 45-car train was en route from Willard to Akron and back to Willard when the derailment occurred, CSX spokesman Lloyd Lewis said.

The cause was under investigation.

Nine cars carried highly flammable butane, Lewis said. The eight other cars that derailed carried non-hazardous materials such as vegetable oil, clay and sand, he said.

Another car on the train contained butadiene, which may produce hazardous smoke when burned, but it was too far from the burning cars, Mayor Don Plusquellic said.

There was some concern, however, that the fire could spread to the Goodrich plant, which also housed butadiene, he said.

Butane is non-toxic when burned and is used as a fuel and an aerosol propellant. Butadiene is a petroleum derivative used to make synthetic rubbers and resins.

"The area was evacuated because of the danger of explosion in the surrounding tank cars," said Romanoski.

He said evacuees would not be allowed to return to home until the fire was extinguished.

NATION

Poll: Half say another nuclear accident likely

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly a decade after the Three Mile Island accident, half those polled believe another serious nuclear power accident is likely, and eight in 10 people favor stricter safety standards.

An Associated Press-Media General survey found support for continued use of nuclear plants now operating. But most opposed building new plants or starting up completed plants that are not yet in operation.

Overall, 55 percent said they supported use of nuclear power to generate electricity.

But 56 percent of the 1,162 adults polled said it is impossible to store radioactive waste from nuclear plants safely. And while most said the plants are safer now than a decade ago, 50 percent called an accident likely.

The national poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

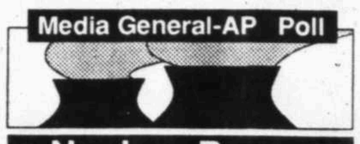
The survey was conducted Jan. 4-12 in anticipation of the 10th anniversary of the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident. The Three Mile Island accident, which began March 28, 1979, destroyed a reactor at the Middletown, Pa., plant.

Considerably tighter federal regulation of the commercial nuclear power industry followed the accident, and a solid 63 percent in the poll said they believed U.S. nuclear plants are safer than they were 10 years ago.

Nonetheless, an overwhelming 79 percent said the federal government should be even tougher when it comes to enforcing nuclear safety rules. And 62 percent said governors should be empowered to shut down nuclear plants in their states.

Backing for nuclear power was markedly higher among men and Republicans. Two-thirds of those groups supported nuclear power generally, compared with half the Democrats and independents and just 45 percent of the women polled.

When asked to rate the chance of a serious accident at a U.S. nuclear plant, 11 percent overall chose "highly likely" and 39 percent said an accident was likely, for a total of 50 percent. Thirty percent said "unlikely" and 14 percent said "highly unlikely," for a total of 44 percent.



AP

Six in 10 women and as many Democrats called an accident likely, compared with four in 10 of the men and the Republicans. Among respondents with postgraduate schooling, just 37 percent called an accident likely; that swelled to 58 percent of those who has not gone beyond high school.

Produce prices to rise after freeze damage

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Temperatures were climbing back toward the 70s and the price of produce also was expected to go up because of damage from a record-breaking cold snap.

"I had a fellow with 500 acres of cucumbers and peppers in south Hillsborough (County) call me this morning to tell me that they're completely gone," said Tom Burgin, a produce broker in Plant City.

At the wholesale level, Burgin said, a bushel of peppers that cost $7 to $8 last week probably will cost him $25 to $30 and will come from Mexico or the West.

Florida's produce industry is estimated at more than $1.1 billion annually, compared with the $1.3 billion-a-year citrus industry that appeared to have suffered only minimal damage from the cold wave that arrived Thursday.

Unseasonably warm weather earlier this winter contributed to losses because it induced farmers to plant early, said Reggie Brown, spokesman for Orlando-based Florida Fruit and Vegetable Association.

"From talking with several growers yesterday, we did experience quite a bit of damage on the real cold-sensitive crops — cucumbers, watermelons and squash — and some damage on peppers and tomato crops," he said Sunday.

He said he expected the crop loss would be up to 30 percent of potential yield.

"What I see is a disaster," Roger Harloff, a Palmetto tomato grower and packer, said Saturday as he stood in a 1,000-acre tract of young plants. About three-quarters of the plants were dead and blackening in the bright sunlight. They had been exposed to 26-degree temperatures for more than four hours that morning.

"We're all about in the same boat down here," Harloff said.

Tomatoes are the state's largest produce crop, valued at almost $490 million in 1987, the latest figures available.

Bill Butler said the damage was the worst in the 10 years he's worked at Ruskin Vegetable Corp., which ships fresh produce to some of the largest grocery store chains and terminal markets in North America.

Dukakis: Kemp's talk doesn't match budget

AP Laserphoto

Governors William Clements Jr. of Texas, right, and Tommy Thompson of Wisconsin chat during the first plenary session of the National Governors' Association Winter meeting in Washington Sunday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis told new Housing and Urban Development Secretary Jack Kemp today there is a "yawning gap" between his optimistic talk about solving urban problems and President Bush's federal budget proposal.

Dukakis, the governor of Massachusetts, injected a reminder of the 1988 presidential campaign with his remarks to Kemp during the annual winter meeting of the National Governors' Association.

The HUD secretary, who himself sought the Republican presidential nomination last year, described his hopes for using tax incentives and private enterprise to reinvigorate cities to a committee of the association.

When Kemp took questions from the governors, Dukakis said "I applaud" Kemp's efforts and noted many of his proposals have already been put to work by states and cities.

But Dukakis then asked him to reconcile his enthusiastic talk about solving problems of poverty, homelessness and housing with Bush's budget, which would provide no new spending for subsidized housing and would cut some federal money to states and cities.

"On the other hand, as I look over the president's budget, there is a yawning gap between what you're saying and what's in there," Dukakis said.

He pointed to Bush's proposal to further cut back the Community Development Block Grant program, which Dukakis said governments use as public capital to attract additional private investment in housing and other development projects.

"The budget does need some reworking," Dukakis said.

Kemp responded, "I think the president, despite criticism to the contrary, has evidenced a good faith effort to work with the Congress." He said "it's obligatory upon the Congress" to work in cooperation with the president on the budget.

Kemp cited the restraints on the federal budget but pledged, "I can assure you that I am going to do everything I can to make sure that there is adequate funding for those programs that work."

Bush's budget director, Richard Darman, declined an invitation to meet with the governors. But they heard a frank assessment Sunday from the chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, Sen. James Sasser, who warned, "We're fresh out of cash here in Washington."

An Associated Press survey of governors before their arrival found that most state executives respect Bush's "no new taxes" pledge and are holding off on calls for raising revenue to reduce the federal deficit.

Governors in both parties said that Bush's promise of a "kinder, gentler America" suggested his administration will be more receptive to state needs than was President Reagan, whose administration dramatically reduced federal aid flowing to states.

"I think he's already shown himself more receptive to domestic problems," said Republican Gov. Thomas Kean of New Jersey, who cited housing as the top domestic need.

Michigan's Democratic Gov. James Blanchard said Bush "has the potential of being, from Michigan's point of view, a better president than Ronald Reagan. Not necessarily more popular, but more compassionate."

Billy Tipton's masquerade puzzles jazz musicians, family

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Billy Tipton kept to himself as his jazz trio toured the West.

He never went swimming in the motel pools. Waiting for a call from the group's manager, he'd say, or didn't want to burn his fair skin. He stayed in a separate room, and didn't talk much about childhood or family life. When he did talk, he'd say he came from a broken home and was sent to live with an aunt.

Drummer Dick O'Neill considered Tipton to be his best friend, but even he was shocked at what the saxophone and piano player had been hiding.

"Billy Tipton was a biological female," pathologist George Lindholm said after an autopsy on Tipton, who died Jan. 21 from a bleeding ulcer.

Interviews with family, friends, colleagues and jazz afficionados shed little light on Tipton's early years; even her age is uncertain. Kitty Oakes, who lived as Tipton's wife after 1960 until they separated about 10 years ago, told a funeral home Tipton was born Dec. 29, 1914, in Oklahoma City and was raised in Kansas City, Mo. But no birth certificate has been found.

What is known is that Tipton, a saxophone and piano player who liked to write vocal arrangements, performed with the Jack Teagarden, Russ Carlyle and Scott Cameron bands before forming the Billy Tipton Trio in the 1950s.

"He gave up everything," Oakes, who adopted three sons with Tipton, told The Spokesman-Review newspaper. "There were certain rules and regulations in those days if you were going to be a musician."

But jazz experts, including several women who played in bands in the 1930s, said that while there was discrimination, they doubted that a talented musician would have had to pose as a man to make it in the industry. They point to Mary Lou Williams and others who became famous as jazz musicians and composers.

"When I first started, I was skipped over unless they couldn't get anybody else," said pianist Norma Teagarden, sister of Jack Teagarden. "At that time, it was hard to break in with a band, especially if you played saxophone.

"There was a lot of resistance. There were not many women in that business anyway. You've got to be on the road so much, you can't very well be married, unless your husband was one of the group."

"I was a piano player and didn't have any problems" joining a jazz band, she said. Having three brothers who were established musicians probably helped, said Ms. Teagarden, who performs in San Francisco two nights a week.

Marion McPartland, a jazz pianist who hosts a National Public Radio jazz show, said, "It's such a strange story, I don't feel it any part of my own career. I can't identify with somebody doing something like that.

"There were many women jazz players around, in lots of bands...I can only say that I've been fortunate in that I've never even had the feeling of hopelessness she had to do a thing like that," McPartland said.

"The bands were mostly men and I would think in the 1930s, where they were on the road doing one-nighters a lot, having a woman on the bus...had a sort of inhibiting effect on the language used, and so on," said Stanley Dance, who has written eight books on jazz musicians. "From that point of view, a lot of males would not welcome the woman.

"Still, it seems a little bit extraordinary to have done that."

"It certainly was unusual to find a white woman playing piano in jazz bands," said George Simon, a jazz critic. "I don't think that society was really well prepared for (women jazz players). Even jazz, which was as liberal a society as you could find, there wasn't that much integration."

O'Neill said the clamor over the role reversal overshadows the fact that Tipton was a fine musician with a keen sense of humor.

Investigators focusing on jet's door locks

HONOLULU (AP) — Federal investigators focused on a jumbo jet's cargo door locks as the cause of an accident that killed nine passengers, and United Airlines inspected the baggage compartment hatches of all its Boeing 747s.

The Coast Guard, meanwhile, ended a sea and air search of the Pacific 100 miles southwest of Honolulu after recovering 57 pieces of debris from the United flight.

Flight 811 took off Friday for New Zealand with 354 people and was about 100 miles from Honolulu when the fuselage ripped open as the plane flew at 22,000 feet. Nine passengers were sucked out of the 18-year-old jetliner and are presumed dead.

The pilot, Capt. David M. Cronin, lost power in one of the four engines and shut down another when a fire indicator light went on, but the plane returned safely to Honolulu International Airport.

Among the items recovered were seat cushions, an overhead compartment, a section of fuselage, safety instruction cards and personal items including baby shoes and a teddy bear, authorities said.

Neither human remains nor the cargo door was recovered Sunday, said Lee Dickinson, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator.

"Obviously, if we had the door it would be very helpful to us," he said Sunday night, but added that other information could pinpoint the cause.

"We are focusing on and looking at the latching mechanism," said Dickinson. "We're also trying to get a better handle on these latch pin supports and comparing them to others."

Investigators have determined that the right, forward cargo bay door had been closed electronically, with eight latching mechanisms along the bottom, attached to the plane's frame, as well as a latching mechanism and a hook pin on each side, said Dickinson.

A warning system that would have alerted the cockpit if the door were not closed properly worked during a test Sunday, Dickinson said. He said he did not know if a warning light went off when the cargo door tore off the plane.

Dickinson said there was no evidence that metal fatigue — weakness caused gradually by long-term use — or sabotage had caused the accident, and that FBI explosives experts had been sent home.

United's special checks of the latches, seals, fittings and other parts of the door mechanisms of its 30 other Boeing 747s were to be completed by early today, said airline spokesman Rob Doughty.

"Nobody told us we had to do this," he said. "It's a precautionary decision based on the area that was impacted in this incident."

Besides the new inspections, United President Stephen Wolf said mechanics licensed by the Federal Aviation Administration would inspect each 747 cargo door upon arrival and would oversee the closing of each 747 cargo door before takeoff. The closings have been handled by ramp personnel, his statement said.

Acid rain action quick, positive

Twenty-four hours after he vowed action to curb acid rain, President Bush was making good on his word in Ottawa. His recent meeting with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney produced what the Reagan administration could never manage — a proposed remedy rather than more studies. That's good news for the Northeast.

Acid rain's source is well known. It's a byproduct of fossil fuels, such as oil and coal, which produce nitrogen oxide and sulfur dioxide when burned. The emissions, mostly from smokestack industries, mix with the atmosphere and produce nitric and sulfuric acids, which drift over the landscape and descend in the form of rain on lakes and forests, including the Adirondacks.

In his first budget address to Congress, Bush made pointed reference to the Reagan record of insisting that more studies precede any acid rain legislation. Critics charged the administration with bowing to pressure from utilities and industries concerned about the high cost of reducing emissions with expensive scrubber equipment.

As time dragged on environmentalists grew more concerned about the increasing acidification of lakes and forests, and so did the Canadians, who have been acting to curb acid rain for the last four years. For example, Canada has adopted strict limits on the use of high-sulfur fuel and mandated the use of smokestack scrubbers.

As well intended as those regulations were, however, they couldn't stop drifting emissions from American plants. As a result, Ottawa has been seeking a commitment from Washington to adopt similar restrictions, but with little success.

Now Bush says the time for study is over and the time to act has come. We agree.

While he still needs to establish specific timetables to reduce smoke-stack emissions, he at least has a proper sense of urgency. "I have in mind as fast as possible," Bush told reporters in Canada.

Ironically, that's what Drew Lewis, the Reagan administration's special representative on acid rain, was saying in January, 1986. Even Congress sensed the danger and mandated reductions of 9 millions tons of sulfur dioxide and 4 million tons of nitrogen emissions — all by 1987.

How significant that Bush's first foreign trip as president should be to a neighbor worried about a common environmental danger — and how beneficial for both nations if a strict, specific accord is reached shortly.

Another View:

Spain's siesta ends

An unsung story of real significance is Spain's emergence as the booming Sun Belt of Europe. Many Spaniards now refer proudly to their country as the California of the Continent.

Spain's economy is growing by more than 5 percent annually and capital investment is at 15 percent, robust figures that outpace other European nations, American, European and Japanese companies are rushing to build factories at the rate of $4 billion a year. AT&T just opened a $220 million semiconductor factory north of Madrid. Ford Motor Co. is constructing a $68 million plant in the southwest. General Electric plans to build a $1.7 billion plastics plant in southeast Spain. Nissan Motors, Sony and Matsushita Electric Industrial have opened factories near Barcelona.

Japanese developers are building retirement communities along the east coast and the Dutch have built hundreds of greenhouses in the warm south to grow tomatoes and cucumbers for the northern European markets. Madrid's modest skyline is changing rapidly with high-rise buildings. A 50-story condominium tower, one of Europe's tallest buildings, is under construction in Benidorm, a seaside resort on Spain's east coast.

The complex reasons for Spain's belated economic boom began with the free-market orientation of the Spanish government. Although Prime Minister Felipe Gonzales is a socialist, he is a Margaret Thatcher on economic matters. His government has offered generous incentives to lure foreign companies, removed a prior-approval process for foreign investments, lifted exchange controls on foreign businesses, and relaxed rules on laying off workers.

Even though foreigners began embracing Spain during the 1980s as it became a stable democracy, the Spanish boom really began in 1986 when the country joined the European Community. With the brightened prospects that all trade barriers will be removed by the European Community by 1992, Spain is seen as the frontier of opportunity, offering a large, competent labor pool from a higher-than-average unemployment rate, relatively low wages; and plenty of reasonably priced land. "There are not many countries that will grow as fast as Spain," said Rainer Klinke, manager of the Deutsche Bank's Madrid office. "You have to go where the action is."

It is no longer true that "Europe stops at the Pyrenees," as Spaniards and other Europeans used to say. That Spain's long siesta from world affairs is ending, that it is being integrated into the global mainstream is especially significant for Latin America.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Feb. 27, the 58th day of 1989. There are 307 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on Feb. 27, 1939, the U.S. Supreme Court outlawed sit-down strikes.

On this date:

In 1801, the District of Columbia was placed under the jurisdiction of Congress.

In 1807, poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was born in Portland, Maine.

In 1861, in Warsaw, Russian troops fired on a crowd protesting Russian rule over Poland. Five marchers were killed.

In 1883, the first practical cigar-rolling machine was patented by impressario Oscar Hammerstein, grandfather of Broadway librettist Oscar Hammerstein II.

In 1922, the U.S. Supreme Court unanimously upheld the 19th Amendment to the Constitution that guaranteed the right of women to vote.

In 1933, Germany's parliament building in Berlin, the Reichstag, burned down. The Nazis, charging a Communist plot, used the fire as a pretext for suspending civil liberties.

In 1972, President Nixon and Chinese Premier Chou En-lai issued the Shanghai Communique at the conclusion of Nixon's historic visit to the People's Republic of China.

In 1973, members of the American Indian Movement occupied the hamlet of Wounded Knee in South Dakota, the site of the 1890 massacre of Sioux men, women and children. The occupation lasted until May.

In 1982, Wayne B. Williams was found guilty of murdering two of the 28 young blacks whose bodies were found in the Atlanta area over a 22-month period.

Ten years ago: Jane M. Byrne confounded Chicago's Democratic political machine as she upset Mayor Michael A. Bilandic to win their party's mayoral primary. Byrne went on to win election as mayor the following April.

Bush nominee's gesture backfired

WASHINGTON — Richard Armitage has a bad habit of rallying to the defense of the wrong people. If George Bush nominates him, as planned, to be an assistant secretary of state, Armitage could face some tough questions about the time he rushed to the defense of a Vietnamese woman who was running an illegal gambling operation.

Jack Anderson

It happened in 1985 when Armitage was an assistant secretary of defense involved in high-level talks with the Vietnamese on missing American prisoners of war. Nguyet Thi O'Rourke was a Vietnamese refugee married to an American man and living near Washington, D.C. She was arrested for running an illegal football pool in the Washington suburb of Arlington, Va. Court records filed by police tied her to Raj Kumar Bansal, who was described in police records as a big-time gambler and loan shark with ties to organized crime.

But to Armitage, she was just an old friend whom he had met in the 1970s in Saigon. So, when O'Rourke got in trouble, Armitage wrote a letter to the Arlington County Court, on Defense Department stationery, asking for leniency. He vouched for her integrity and asked the court to consider the Vietnamese culture, where "gambling is a much more normal and accepted pattern of behavior than in our own."

The President's Commission on Organized Crime perked up its ears. We reported in a series of columns in 1986 and 1987, that the commission investigated Armitage's relationship with O'Rourke and her ties to Bansal. Armitage said he knew nothing about any organized crime connections.

O'Rourke ended up pleading guilty to conducting an illegal gambling operation, and spent 30 days in jail, but not before another run-in with the law. While she was awaiting trial on the gambling charges, she was stopped by police when leaving a high-stakes gambling operation near Washington with $3,850. O'Rourke and a companion were in a hurry to get out. The companion had fired a machine gun during an altercation inside.

Armitage's letter in support of O'Rourke was written three months after that incident.

Congressional sources told our associate Scott Sleek that they are studying the O'Rourke case and plan to present their findings to the Senate during Armitage's confirmation hearings for assistant secretary of state for Far East and Asian affairs.

Our reports on Armitage in 1986 drew the attention of Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot, who has taken up the cause of missing Americans in Southeast Asia. Perot wondered if the O'Rourke incident would damage Armitage's credibility with the Vietnamese. He took his concerns to then-Vice President Bush. "What does it take for a U.S. government official to lose his security clearance?" Perot wanted to know.

Later, we reported that then-National Security Advisor Frank Carlucci secretly asked Perot to stop stirring up trouble for Armitage.

The O'Rourke case is not the only time Armitage has taken pen in hand to defend the accused. We recently reported that in 1988 he wrote a letter on behalf of the Defense Department to several members of Congress asking them to go easy on Japan's Toshiba Machine Co. Toshiba had illegally sold submarine parts to the Soviet Union that allowed the Soviets to build quieter subs. As punishment, Congress was considering strict sanctions against the sale of Toshiba products in the United States.

Armitage, who was an assistant secretary of defense, implied in his letter that the value of the submarine parts was debatable, even though intelligence reports at the time estimated it will cost the United States billions of dollars to counter the new Soviet technology.

SELF-POLICING — Under pressure from Congress, the cosmetics industry says it is on a consumer-awareness drive. The makeup manufacturers are trying to keep consumers better informed about the chemicals in beauty products and they are stepping up their safety review of ingredients linked to cancer. In a series of columns, we highlighted the potential health hazards of products such as hair spray, makeup and artificial nails. Cosmetologists are at the greatest risk because of prolonged exposure. The wholesale products used in salons do not have to carry ingredient labels. Trade associations are pushing the makers to voluntarily label products for labeling of wholesale products. But the industry doesn't have the best track record when policing itself. The federal government invited the industry to voluntarily register product ingredients and to report complaints, but less than half of the manufacturers responded.

MINI-EDITORIAL — George Bush sounds like he may be eating his campaign words about ethics. As a candidate, Bush promised high ethics in government. But as a president whose nominees have not been universally respected, Bush said the other day, "I hope I haven't created something that just carries things too far." If "too far," means that the voters expect him to keep his promise, maybe Bush did carry things farther than he planned.

Art Harris understands Rushdie's situation

No leader of a nation has ordered Art Harris killed, but there have been some phone calls to his home.

"A man called me the other morning and said God was going to get even with me," Art Harris was telling me.

Grizzard

"He said I shouldn't have written about Jimmy Swaggart because Swaggart is a man of Jesus." That's the kind of thing you like to hear before you've had your first cup of coffee.

The Salman Rushdie novel "The Satanic Verses" has awakened the kooks of the Moslem religion to violent thoughts and actions. Art Harris has had only a few phone calls, but he is, in fact, going through a period that is at least kin to the Rushdie episode.

Art Harris is the guy who nailed Jimmy Swaggart.

As a reporter for The Washington Post he was dispatched to South Carolina to cover the Jim and Tammy Bakker saga. There, his digging chronicled Jim Bakker's lavish lifestyle, financial excesses and alleged secret bisexual life. He was also the first to report that Jessica Hahn, the scarlet woman in the Bakker affair, was more vixen than victim.

After Jimmy Swaggart's teary confession of unspecified moral failure last year, Art Harris' research led him to New Orleans where he tracked down the prostitute who said evangelist Swaggart had paid her to act out various sexual fantasies.

He wrote that story as a freelancer for Penthouse.

Art Harris wasn't through. His latest was the interview with the New Orleans stripper who told of more Swaggart sexual shenanigans. That ran in Penthouse as well.

That has led to the telephone calls and the threat of a mega-million dollar libel suit Swaggart has filed against Harris and Penthouse.

Art Harris can't say a lot about the case, but he does say of the New Orleans stripper, "I believe her story. Otherwise I wouldn't have written it."

The Ayatollah Khomeini has called Salman Rushdie a blasphemer.

Jimmy Swaggart and his people are referring to Art Harris as a "porno writer."

Nope.

Art Harris is simply a reporter who got hold of a story and wouldn't let it go.

"What people must understand," he says, "is televangelism isn't just about saving souls. It's about ratings and market shares. It's a billion-dollar industry."

Art Harris' work has hit the Swaggart people square in their pocketbooks. Before Art Harris, Jimmy Swaggart had the number one television preacher show. After Art Harris, Swaggart has fallen to No. 3, and that's saved a lot of old people and ignorant people a great deal of money. Those who continue to support Swaggart should realize it's their money that is going to pay for Swaggart's legal fees in the suit.

Salman Rushdie had every right to author his book. If it offends you, don't read it. The same for the producers of the movie "The Last Temptation of Christ." If it offends you don't go see it.

Art Harris isn't a porno writer. He has a wife and two small children and he is a serious journalist.

I've know him for 15 years. We worked together in the features department of the Atlanta Constitution.

I once assigned him a story on the city's pigeons. He thought I was crazy, but he did the story anyway and it was probably the best story ever written on city pigeons.

Now, Jimmy Swaggart's flock of pigeons is dwindling in numbers because of Art Harris. Praise Allah, God and the printing press.

CHARLEY REESE

U.S. can meet defense needs — if it wants

Which do you think costs more — the United States Army or people's clothing, accessories and jewelry? The answer is the clothing, accessories and jewelry. Expenditures for those items in 1986 were $209 billion; the Army for Fiscal Year 1989 will cost only $78.2 billion.

Charley Reese

For the amount of money Americans spent eating out in 1986 — $155.2 billion — plus the amount Americans spent on tobacco, $34 billion, you could fund the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps for one year and have a billion or two in change.

Americans spend more on toys than on the B-1 and the Stealth bombers combined. For Fiscal Year 1989, the Defense Department's research and development costs are $37.5 billion whereas Americans spend $54 billion in one year on just shoes and furniture.

Total Defense Department budget authority for FY 1989 is $290.2 billion, or less than 30 percent of the federal budget.

Two points: don't let the left wing convince you that the federal deficit is driven by defense spending. It's not. It has not been. It is not likely to be. We spend less, in terms of percentage of GNP and in terms of percentage of the federal budget, than we did in the 1950s and 1960s.

It is non-defense spending that drove up the deficit and the federal debt and it is non-defense spending that the welfare-staters in Congress are so reluctant to cut.

The problem we have as a nation, aside from the willingness of so many people to engage in outright deception, is that we don't seem to be able to think straight.

For example, defense expenditures rationally should be driven by the threat against us and by the national strategy for dealing with it. In our country, the national strategy, such as it is, is driven by the budget. People sit around in Washington and talk in terms like, "It's only fair to cut defense if we're going to have to cut domestic spending." Or, "Congress is going to cut and so the Pentagon will have to decide what it really wants to lose."

You can see the intellectual stupidity of such an approach if you can imagine that type of conversation going on inside a fort under siege by hostile Indians.

Well, if we have to use the hymnals to heat the fort, then you guys on the stockade are going to have to contribute the stocks of your rifles. Well, you can only have so many bullets and so much powder, so you guys decide whether you want to each shoot fewer times or just eliminate some of the men who are firing.

Too often, the defense budget is discussed as if we existed alone on the planet and spent money on defense for no real purpose other than to amuse ourselves. Now if you are a left-wing sap who thinks the expansionism and lethality of the Soviet Empire is merely a fiction created by American defense industries then you may continue to stare at your navel. No rational discussion is possible with irrational people.

If, however, you have not lost the ability to reason and have not reached the point where you simply evade facts that are disagreeable, then you can plainly see that our defense spending should be driven by the threat against this nation and the dollars needed to defend us.

That means it is not entirely under our arbitrary control. We can decide what we will do on our side of the fence but we cannot decide which weapons the Soviet Union will build and deploy or what the Soviet strategy will be.

Prudent men and women, recognizing that the only thing we know for sure about the Soviet Union is that it is in an unstable situation, will not quite yet beat the swords into plowshares. History shows that instability can result in war; that as often as not, domestic problems are cured not by domestic reforms but by foreign adventures.

We have the resources to meet our defense needs. What we may not have is the will or wisdom.

Khomeini wants Soviet alliance

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini told Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze during an usual 1½-hour meeting that he wants strong ties with Moscow to help fight the "devilish" West.

Also Sunday, Iranian legislators put forward a bill calling for a vote on whether to break ties with Britain, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

Last week, Britain pulled its diplomats out of Tehran to protest Khomeini's death decree for British author Salman Rushdie.

After the audience with Khomeini, Shevardnadze met Prime Minister Hussein Musavi and delivered an invitation for him to visit Moscow, according to IRNA.

It said Shevardnadze did not ask Khomeini to withdraw his order for Moslem zealots to assassinate Rushdie, whose novel "The Satanic Verses" is considered blasphemous by many Moslems.

Britain reportedly had asked Shevardnadze to press Khomeini to give Rushdie a reprieve, but IRNA said, "There was no mention of the (Rushdie) affair in Shevardnadze's speech."

Shevardnadze, the highest ranking Soviet official to visit Iran since the 1979 Islamic revolution, met Khomeini two days after the Iranian spiritual leader declared that Iran does not need relations with the West.

He has been widely condemned in the West for issuing the death decree.

Khomeini has in the past criticized Moscow for its officially atheist ideology, but Iranian officials have recently noted that the Soviet Union's 50 million Moslems are being allowed greater religious freedoms under President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Iran's Cabinet declared Sunday it is united behind Khomeini, Tehran Television reported.

"Your children are united as a single hand against the enemies of Islam," it quoted a Cabinet statement as saying in a dispatch monitored in Nicosia.

The declaration appeared to be a signal that government leaders want it made clear that, though they may have differ strongly on many policy matters, they are solidly behind Khomeini in the Rushdie affair.

Publisher of 'Satanic Verses' considering labeling unsold copies with apology

LONDON (AP) — The publisher Viking Penguin is considering labeling unsold copies of Salman Rushdie's "The Satanic Verses" with an apology in an effort to defuse Moslem protests over the novel, a newspaper reported today.

On Sunday, thousands of Shiite Moslems demonstrated in Lebanon and Iran in support of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's order Feb. 14 that Moslems seek out and kill Rushdie and his publishers.

In London, a senior Viking Penguin editor attending an emergency meeting of the Writers' Guild of Great Britain said hardback copies of the novel were selling so well that a paperback edition, due out in August, might be delayed for "crude commercial" reasons.

But the editor denied reports that Viking Penguin was considering canceling the paperback edition to appease Moslems who consider the novel blasphemous.

"We are continuing to make the book available," he was quoted as telling The Guardian, a London daily newspaper. "It's simply not possible to keep up with demand."

"If there is a way to keep the book in print and prevent further loss of life, and if the way to do that is print some form of apology, then maybe we should do that," he was quoted as saying. He asked not to be identified because of the death threats.

At least 16 people protesting Rushdie's novel have been killed in India and Pakistan in clashes with police since Feb. 12.

Thousands of American Moslems protested the novel over the weekend in Boston and New York, where they gathered at a Viking Penguin office to demand that the novel be banned in the United States.

About 5,000 pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems burned effigies of Rushdie during a march in Beirut, Lebanon, on Sunday.

Tehran television reported thousands of Moslems also demonstrated in the Iranian holy city of Qom, chanting "We are at your service Khomeini" and "Death to America!"

The British Writers' Guild gave its unanimous support to Rushdie at Sunday's one-day seminar, and it called for worldwide support for "the right of all people to express their ideas and beliefs."

Some writers deplored suggestions that the remaining unsold copies be labeled with an apology or a warning. They pointed out that the book is a work of fiction.

"There's such a thing as a right to offend," said Mervyn Jones, a spokesman for the Campaign Against Censorship. "If you don't have that right, you don't have any literary freedom."

Efforts to reach the publishers failed because its offices were closed and no one answered the telephone.

The Sunday Times of London had reported that Viking Penguin, seeking ways to quell the furor, was willing to talk with British Moslems and might rule out a paperback version if they call off their protests and try to persuade Islamic nations to do the same.

The Council of Mosques in the northern England city of Bradford on Sunday called on Islamic countries to boycott all Penguin books until Rushdie's novel is withdrawn "with an apology to all Moslems."

Council leader Sher Azam also raised the possibility of a meeting with the publisher, saying: "If there is a will, there is a way; and we are willing to talk to anyone."

More than 60,000 Moslems live in Bradford, where demonstrators have burned copies of Rushdie's book.

Rushdie, who was born into a Moslem family in India, has been in hiding since Khomeini issued his execution order on Feb. 14. Iranian clerics have put a bounty of up to $5.2 million on his head.

All 12 European Common Market countries as well as Norway, Sweden and Canada, have recalled their top diplomats from Iran to protest the death decree, though no diplomatic ties have been formally broken.

Last week, however, religious leaders in Tehran called for a break in ties with Britain.

IRNA said more than 100 of the 270 deputies in Iran's Parliament sponsored a bill Sunday to put relations with Britain to a vote and Parliament is to take up the measure Tuesday, at its next session.

The English-language Tehran Times said Sunday that hostile relations with the West stemming from the Rushdie novel opened "all doors" to improving ties with Moscow.

It said the two main irritants to better relations with Moscow — the Soviet supply of arms to Iran's enemy in the eight-year Iran-Iraq war and the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan — were now gone.

At their meeting, Khomeini stressed to Shevardnadze the importance of "the expansion of strong ties in various dimensions in confronting the devilish acts of the West," Tehran Radio reported.

It broadcast extensive parts of the meeting at Khomeini's home. IRNA said it was believed to be the first private meeting between Iran's 88-year-old revolutionary patriarch and a foreign minister.

Mandela tells wife not to publicly discuss bodyguard scandal

Mandela

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Jailed black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela has told his wife to make no further public statements on the scandal over her bodyguards that has seriously tarnished her image, her lawyer says.

The imprisoned African National Congress leader gave Winnie Mandela the instructions at a meeting Sunday of more than three hours at Victor Verster Prison outside Cape Town, said her lawyer, Essa Moosa.

She did not speak to waiting journalists when she left the prison, and Moosa declined to comment on other details Sunday.

The controversy has prompted major anti-apartheid groups to denounce Mrs. Mandela, herself a prominent activist.

Anti-apartheid groups say the bodyguards, known as the Mandela United soccer club, waged a "reign of terror" in Soweto, the black township outside Johannesburg, and have renounced Mrs. Mandela for ignoring their appeals that she disband the group.

Four people with links to Mrs. Mandela and her bodyguards have been killed in the past two months and two bodyguards have been charged with murdering one of them, 14-year-old activist Stompie Seipei.

Mrs. Mandela has denied any wrongdoing and claims the scandal stems from a plot to discredit her.

She has given brief interviews to a few journalists but has not held a news conference or issued statements to explain her role.

Mrs. Mandela visited her husband Feb. 15 and decided to act on his instruction to disband the soccer club and remove team members from her house.

Mrs. Mandela, a trained social worker, formed Mandela United in 1986, saying she wanted to organize activities for youths congregating on streets near her house.

But the group, numbering as many as 30, grew into an unofficial force of bodyguards who seldom played soccer and have often antagonized members of the community.

The controversy came to a head last month when three young men told a Soweto community meeting the bodyguards abducted them from a church residence, took them to Mrs. Mandela's home and beat them.

Takeshita: Japan WWII aggressor

TOKYO (AP) — In a reversal of his earlier remark on Japan's role in World War II, Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita said today there was no denying Japan was an aggressor in the conflict.

"It is regrettable that my unsatisfactory remark invited criticism" from other Asian countries, Takeshita said. China had been especially indignant.

Takeshita said today that Japan caused grave damage to neighboring countries through the war. "There is no denying our country's aggressive actions during the war," he said.

In a Feb. 18 parliamentary committee session, Takeshita said the question of whether Japan was an aggressor in World War II would have to be decided by future historians.

The remark touched off sharp criticism from countries that suffered brutal invasions by Japan before and during the war.

China's Foreign Minister Qian Qichen, who attended Emperor Hirohito's funeral on Friday, urged the Japanese government to cease promulgating what he said he viewed as distortions of Japan's militaristic past.

Qian met Friday with both Takeshita and Foreign Minister Sousuke Uno.

Italian and Soviet newspapers have also accused Takeshita of evading the issue of Japan's wartime aggression and failing to draw lessons from history.

The question of war responsibility is sensitive in Japan because of debate over the personal role of the late emperor.

Duarte wants direct talks with guerrillas to begin immediately

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte has accepted leftist rebels' proposal to hold direct peace talks, calling for them to begin Tuesday in Guatemala with a three-month cease-fire in place.

In a nationwide television and radio address Sunday night, Duarte also addressed the guerrillas' offer to participate in and accept the results of the presidential election if it is postponed for at least four months.

He advocated postponing the vote, which is scheduled for March 19, until April 30 and proposed that a referendum be held on the issue if the government and rebels cannot resolve it in talks.

Duarte did not say when such a plebiscite might take place.

A meeting in Guatemala would be the first direct negotiations since October 1987 between the U.S.-backed government and the insurgents it has been fighting for nine years. The last talks ended in stalemate.

Duarte, 63, said he was proposing "a new search to put an end to the armed conflict that is covering our country with blood," proposing that a cease-fire begin Tuesday and run at least through June 1.

The civil war has killed an estimated 70,000 people, most of them civilians.

There was no immediate comment from the rebels on Duarte's proposal.

The Faribundo Marti National Liberation Front, a revolutionary army of about 7,000 combatants, proposed last month that the presidential vote be put off until September.

The offer was a dramatic turnabout and the Bush administration said it was "worthy of serious and substantive consideration."

The rebels have boycotted and condemned all five previous national elections this decade, contending they have not been free and fair and were part of a U.S.-imposed plan to put a civilian facade on a military-dominated government.

The insurgents, during talks with representatives of political parties in Mexico last week, indicated they would be willing to accept an election as early as July. They said they needed at least four months to shift from a military to an electoral campaign.

The rebels also offered to lay down their arms if the country's armed forces were significantly cut and the police force reorganized.

Duarte, a Christian Democrat, said Sunday that the legislature should name three representatives to take part in the Guatemala talks. He said the 13 parties should name one person to participate.

He did not say if he would head the government delegation, nor how many members of the executive branch would take part.

The legislature is controlled by the rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance, or Arena, which is favored to win the presidential election.

Arena has adamantly refused to accept any postponment of the vote.

The army, the country's most powerful institution, also has said postponement of the election would be unconstitutional and threatened to take power if voting is postponed.

When the guerrillas made their original proposal Jan. 24, Duarte said postponement of the elections beyond March 31 would be unconstitutional.

Graham mayor Ed Hinson, left, and City Manager Larry Fields have a cup of coffee and discuss the $5,000 reward being offered to anyone who can provide them with a lead that will land a new industry or business in the city.

Graham offers reward as new business incentive

By MIKE COCHRAN

GRAHAM, Texas (AP) — "Wanted: New Industry.

"$5,000 Reward."

So say printed enticements distributed by city fathers in this feisty little North Texas town of 9,000 near the sparkling waters of Possum Kingdom Lake.

Graham wants new business and industry and is willing to pay someone for finding it.

Who's eligible for this cash bonus? All of us. But be warned that the bordello business is a no-no.

"The Graham Industrial Association and the Graham Chamber of Commerce will confidentially and professionally follow up on your suggestion," the "Wanted" posters proclaim.

"If your recommended company successfully locates in Graham and provides at least 10 new jobs for a least six months you will receive a $5,000 check for providing us with the contact person."

Graham is neither the first nor the last city to woo new industry with incentives and innovative schemes, but the reward program does have a fresh new touch to it.

Greed's the word that comes readily to mind, but the Graham Covenant, as author Robert Ludlum would call it, really is just a cash inducement to help rescue a small Texas town stricken by the oil slump.

"We will give $5,000 to anybody and everybody who can provide us with a lead that results in a new industry or business coming to Graham," Mayor Ed Hinson tells anyone who'll listen.

"We want to get the attention of all Graham citizens — clerks, truck drivers, gas station attendants — and give them the chance to do something for Graham and help themselves in the process."

But Hinson and City Manager Larry Fields, who concocted the scheme at a "board meeting" of local coffee drinkers, stress that anyone is eligible to win the bounty.

The Graham Covenant maintains that the city can offer available manufacturing, warehousing, distribution, office space, acreage for new construction, utilities, a productive labor force and, for new employes, a quality of life that features abundant hunting and fishing opportunities.

Deer, turkey, quail, duck and dove lure hunters from the Dallas-Fort Worth area 100 miles to the east, and the bass fishing at Possum Kingdom, while spotty, is among the best in the state.

"That's what drew me to this part of the country," said Fields. "They're catching some big bass down there now, including a couple of 13 pounders."

But bass and birds aside, these folks are deadly serious, which they demonstrated by hiring an executive director in February to orchestrate the joint chamber-industrial association program.

Their choice was E.H. Sheffield, an East Texas native with an impressive record of procuring new industry for a couple of Dallas suburbs.

"In both Lancaster and Lewisville, he was involved extensively in expanding and locating new industry for those communities," says Glyn Gilliam, president of the industrial association.

"He brings a wealth of experience to the newly created position, having served for more than 30 years in chamber management and economic and tourist development."

Uniformed officers become drug experts

STATE

DALLAS (AP) — A half-dozen black men lay face-down on the floor of an abandoned, smokey apartment as a handful of officers stood over them with guns drawn.

"OK, you first," Senior Cpl. Dean Steinberg gestured to one of the men. Steinberg patted him down, removing a wallet, some crumpled papers and fragments of a copper mesh pad. "What are you doing with this? Did you know this was commonly used to strain crack?"

"No, sir. Some drug addict put that there," the suspect replied, as Steinberg and other officers exchanged dubious looks.

In Dallas, where the crime rate has risen consistently over the past decade, uniformed patrols have become expert in detecting drug operations and paraphrenalia on their beats. They watch abandoned houses and apartments, check out new or expensive vehicles parked in run-down neighborhoods and question groups of suspicious-looking characters. Invariably, their work becomes drug-related.

"This is a day-in, day-out battle," said Lt. Don Richie, who heads the evening crew at Dallas Police Department's central division. "They come in here in the vacant, run-down projects. They sleep here, use it for a dope flophouse. They may be here for a day or two and move on."

Sgt. Earl Newsom, who supervises patrols in the central division, ducked under a plywood board to step inside one dilapidated house. "They use a lot of these vacant places to deal dope," he said, clambering through the broken glass strewn in every room. "The city requires the owners to board them up, but they still break in. They steal the copper out of the plumbing to sell for scrap metal, whatever. A lot of the abandoned houses are used for a 'shooting gallery,' " a place to barter drugs and get high.

"You never know what you're coming up against," Richie said. "You saw the officers crawling through the cracks in the walls going after (suspects). How else do you confront this but to take it one case at a time?"

Last year, Dallas officers confiscated about $22.5 million worth of drugs and another $5.6 million in drug dealers' assets, said Capt. E.R. Walt of the Narcotics Division.

"I can't give you any percentage of how much of the crime is drug-related in Dallas; nobody can," Walt said. "But assuming the average crack addict uses three rocks a day at $20 a rock, that's a $20,000 a year habit." Multiplied by the amount of stolen goods it takes to get $20,000 from a fence, Walt said the average addict must steal about $200,000 worth of goods each year to support his habit.

"Most crack addicts don't work and couldn't afford it if they did," Walt said. "So there's a lot of stuff stolen."

In Dallas, a 3 percent increase in crime overall last year made roughly one in every 5.7 residents a victim of crime in 1988. As much as 80 percent of those crimes could be drug-related.

"People commit crimes to get money to support drug habits, like crack, cocaine and marijuana," Police Chief Mack Vines said. "Most of your seven major crimes — auto thefts, burglaries and the like — have some link to drugs."

Last Wednesday, 685 crimes were reported in Dallas between midnight and 11:59 p.m. Of those, nearly 80 percent were classified among the seven major crime groups of murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, auto theft, larceny and burglary.

That day, Newsom's patrol officers stopped two men carrying drug paraphernalia and "fake crack," a piece of soap whittled to look like the cheaper form of cocaine; accosted two teen-aged boys who were huffing liquid correcting fluid and paint thinner while riding a moped; and broke up the gathering at the vacant apartment where eight men and a woman apparently awaited a supplier.

"Nobody knows how much crime is drug-related," Newsom said. "In some areas of town, it's 100 percent drug-related. In some, it may be only 10 percent drug-related. One thing's for sure: there has been more violent drug-related crimes in the last three years."

Walt attributes that change to a greater availability of crack, a purified and less expensive form of cocaine that is processed and smoked in rocks.

"Crack monsters are really dangerous," Walt said. "Not as dangerous as someone on PCP or angle dust, but certainly more dangerous than heroine addicts.

Horse drugging problem threatens industry

DALLAS (AP) — As Texas nears the threshhold of legalized gambling on horse racing, the racing industry is trying to cope with a serious problem involving performance-altering drugs, a Dallas newspaper says.

A bettor's chance of wagering on a drug-free race is improving but still is slimmer than the public may think, says The Dallas Morning News.

In the last 18 months, new testing methods have been used to detect racehorse drugging and the industry has been forced to reassess its willingness and ability to find and punish chemical cheaters.

The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration is nearing the end of a yearlong investigation into racing-related drug violations in New Mexico and West Texas, and it expects to present evidence to a federal grand jury in Albuquerque this spring.

But the Texas Racing Commission is working to give the state's new pari-mutuel industry a shot at starting clean and staying clean.

Racing officials say that Texas, which approved pari-mutuel racing in November 1987, has a chance to avoid mistakes made in other states.

The main problem is the many varieties of performance-altering drugs that are available and trainers' apparent willingness to use them in order to gain an edge on the track. More than 100 substances have been found in samples of urine and blood taken from racehorses in the United States.

By last spring, 49 trainers had been suspended in New Mexico for drugs found in their horses. More than half of those trainers were Texans.

Allegations of horse doping in New Mexico became so strong that in 1987 the governor appointed a new racing commission and gave it a mandate to clean up the industry. The commission hired a tough director — former FBI Assistant director William Meincke.

Meincke has now been handed the reins to set the future of Texas horse racing as its top regulator.

Many owners are aware that horses are being chemically "hopped," but only care about the end results, the newspaper said.

E.D. Calvert of Denton, Texas, who owns three horses disqualified for positive drugs testing in New Mexico in 1987, said his own lackadaisical attitude was at fault for his horses being caught.

Improved testing procedures are catching more drugged horses in other states, but former Illinois racing chemist John McDonald advocates pre-race testing.

Technicians among Texaco employees donating blood; a person donates about one pint of blood each time.

Howard Scott holds his arm in the air right after donating; this allows the blood to clot faster.

Blood drives replenish supply

In recent weeks, the Permian Basin Blood Center has expanded its hours in hopes of attracting donors needed to offset shortages of Type O blood.

Seems the shortage hasn't stopped at Midland County's borders.

"We've gotten calls from all over the country asking if we have blood to sell," blood center director Nancy Bacon said. "Unfortunately, as far as the group of Type O people are concerned, we don't have a lot of extra on hand."

Despite on-going efforts to restock the blood bank, hospital officials warn that if blood isn't donated locally the bank will have to turn to the bigger cities, such as Dallas and Houston, for help.

That would defeat the purpose of the local bank, whose supplies are dependent upon donations from Midlanders as well as from those in the outlying communities of Stanton, McCamey, Monahans and Andrews.

Mrs. Bacon estimated that the blood bank goes through about 300 units of blood per month. However, she added that the law of supply and demand determines what constitutes surpluses and shortages.

For example, because many physicians rely heavily on O-negative blood — commonly known as the universal donor — in emergency situations, shortages often result until the blood bank can track down those donors and restock the shelves.

"We could have lots of blood on the shelf, but if we don't have O-negative and we have a patient up in obstetrics who's bleeding, then we have a shortage," Mrs. Bacon said.

Supplies can fall short for any number of other reasons, including an outbreak of influenza or another communicable disease. When this occurs, the blood center must turn people away, causing the supplies to dwindle even further.

While the blood center encourages all Midlanders to give blood, Mrs. Bacon noted that they must go through a screening process for the protection of the donor and the recipient.

"Generally, if a person is in good health and feels well they are probably considered eligible to donate," she said, observing that the center is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday.

To be eligible, a donor must be between the ages of 18 and 65 years, weigh more than 110 pounds, have had no major surgery within the last six months and no minor surgery within the last six weeks.

No one who has had a tattoo, skin graft, acupuncture or ear piercing within the last six months will be accepted. Also, a potential donor must not have given blood in the past eight weeks.

FBI quietly fighting spies in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — FBI agents are quietly fighting a large-scale counterespionage battle in Houston against spies for foreign governments.

The agency has made the effort its top priority, fearing these spies are monitoring technological, medical and energy research in Houston, said Andrew J. Duffin, special agent in charge of the Houston office.

Guarding against secret foreign infiltration of the massive superconductor project at the University of Houston has been one of the agency's efforts, the project's director, Paul Chu, told The Houston Post.

An FBI spokesman, Johnie Joyce, called the foreign intelligence effort the "No. 1 priority" of the local office.

"Our commitment in terms of agents and other resources committed to foreign counterintelligence is far and away greater than what is committed to any other single priority program," Joyce said.

He declined to say how many of the bureau's estimated 200 agents work on spy cases, but Duffin said the number represents less than 50 percent of the force.

Duffin cited several of Houston's high-profile industries as likely targets of foreign spies. They include NASA, the Texas Medical Center, the oil industry and local universities. He also pointed to the large number of foreign consultants and the exchange student population as potential sources of foreign agents.

"These make for fertile areas for...representatives of foreign governments not all that friendly with the United States," Duffin said.

Officials fear puppy may have rabies

From Staff Reports

Officials are concerned that a Mexican-born chihuahua puppy that bit a Midland toddler Sunday on the right arm may have rabies.

The owner of the tan chihuahua puppy, described only as a Hispanic man in his 30s, should call Midland Animal Control officials immediately, said Coy Willis, that office's director.

The puppy is to be quarantined for at least 10 days to determine whether it has rabies, Willis explained.

The father of the 2-year-old girl, bitten Sunday at about 1 p.m. in Ida Jo Moore Park, is offering the dog's owner a reward if he comes forth, he said.

The toddler's family and the owner of the dog had been talking in the park before she was bitten, Willis explained.

During that conversation, the toddler's father apparently discerned the dog had been born in Mexico, Willis said.

Willis said dogs born in Mexico may have a higher incidence of rabies.

The child's family apparently left the park after she was bitten without getting information about the dog's vaccination history from its owner.

The dog's owner was in the park with his three daughters, aged 4- to 8-years-old and an elderly woman, the toddler's father explained.

Should the dog not be located, the toddler will undergo a series of rabies vaccinations, Willis added.

"If anybody has any information on the whereabouts of the dog, I urge them to call us," the animal control director said. "We're just trying to protect the health and safety of the little girl."

Midland Animal Control's phone number is 685-7420.

Newspapers urge Tower's withdrawal

DALLAS (AP) — Dogged by allegations of drinking and womanizing, defense secretary-designate John Tower has been urged by newspapers in his home state to ask President Bush to withdraw his nomination.

Tower's nomination is a "monumental mistake," the Fort Worth Star-Telegram said in a Saturday editorial. The newspaper also said the former Texas senator would serve Bush best by requesting the withdrawal.

"A graceful withdrawal by Tower, complete with presidential regrets and praise would cut the president's losses, protect the White House from further erosion of its position, vis-a-vis the Senate, and preserve the opportunity for later bipartisanship," the Star-Telegram said.

If Bush found another candidate for the position, he "would not bring to this vital position the political and personal baggage that would encumber Tower," the newspaper said.

Bush told reporters in Tokyo Saturday that he would meet individually with 10 or more Democratic senators after he returned to the White House today.

The Armed Services Committee, of which Tower is the former chairman, voted 11-9 along party lines Thursday to recommend that the full Senate reject the Tower nomination.

"I cannot in good conscience vote to put an individual at the top of the chain of command when his history of excessive drinking is such that he would not be selected to command a missile wing, a SAC bomber squadron or a Trident missile submarine," Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the committee, said in leading other Democrats in voting against Tower.

The Austin American-Statesman wrote that it would be difficult for Bush to have other nominees approved if the Senate must vote on Tower.

"President Bush's dilemma now is whether he can sustain a defeat on the Senate floor over the nomination and hope to get his government running by summer's end," the American-Statesman said. "A fight over Tower may so incense the Senate that other nominees for sub-Cabinet positions that also require confirmation by the Senate will face more difficult than necessary, slowing down the whole process of forming a government."

SPELLING BEE 1989

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1989 Regional Spelling Bee April 15 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through April 14. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

mis'kre-ant

miscreant — (noun) The word "miscreant" comes from the Old French "mes" meaning "not" and "croir" meaning "to believe." Combining these words, it is easy to see why the original meaning of "miscreant" was "unbeliever." More specifically, during the Middle Ages, "miscreant" meant an "unbeliever" in religion — a heathen or a heretic. Now the word has lost its religious sense and is used in a more general way to describe a "scoundrel" or an "evil, villainous" person.

Cause of grass fire still unknown

From Staff Reports

City of Midland Fire Department officials had not determined this morning the cause of an expansive south Midland County grass fire that totaled a house, barn and fence Sunday.

Twelve firefighters battled the 5,500-acre grass fire for more than 12 hours, said John Shumake, a fire department communications supervisor.

In addition, the Northeast and Greenwood volunteer fire departments assisted in putting out the blaze, he said.

The fire was located in the area of County Road 140 and County Road 1220, Shumake said.

The huge grass fire was one of several that occurred Sunday, though the others were much smaller in scope, the supervisor said.

BLOOD

Donor reactions, such as fainting, occur among a small percentage of those who give blood. Many times this is brought on by tension, especially among first-time donors, according to Mrs. Bacon.

"When a person has a reaction, it's a very real, physical thing even though it may have been caused by a lack of food or by apprehension. That is not cause not to come in unless they've had very serious reactions before," she said.

To avoid complications, the blood center encourages people to eater before donating and to rest, avoid strenuous exercise, refrain from lifting heavy objects and drink extra fluids after giving blood.

Dogs' roles create trends

Breeds' popularity rise when 'star is born'

By BOBBIE MEYERS
New York Times News Service

A dog with star quality can raise public consciousness about a breed — even a cartoon dog.

"Every time they re-release '101 Dalmatians,' everyone wants a Dalmatian puppy," said Marjorie Doane, secretary of the Dalmatian Club of America in Jonesboro, Tenn. "You walk down the street with a dal and every little kid says 'Oh, Mom, there's Pongo!' "

But this awareness can also cause a breed to become suddenly trendy, which is worrisome to fanciers and conscientious breeders. "Anything that brings the dogs to the forefront is very nice," said Doane. "But breeders don't like to see a breed become too popular. Then you get people who are unknowledgeable breeding them and unless you are selective the quality diminishes."

"It's speculation on our part about what causes increases in registration figures," said Roberta Vesley, director of the American Kennel Club library in New York City. "But there probably is some correlation between a dog star and an increase in registration for that breed. When the Spuds MacKenzie commercials came out people would call and say 'what is he — I want one.' "

Television and movies sell dogs, but the dogs also do a selling job in whatever medium they are used, according to marketing experts. A recent survey by a New York ad research firm found that four of the top 10 television commercials have dogs in them, and only one of the commercials is for dog food.

WE MIGHT never know how many tickets Edward sells for "Accidental Tourist," but the opposite effect will be noted by breeders and at the AKC by the ringing of the phone.

"It's a little soon right now, but it would not surprise me if we start getting calls about Cardigans," said Vesley.

If "Accidental Tourist" precipitates a boom of interest in Cardigan Welsh Corgis, corgi breeders are prepared.

"We discussed it at a recent board meeting," said Betty Floyd of Stone Mountain, Ga., secretary of the Cardigan Welsh Corgi Club of America. "We decided we'd just be very careful where our dogs are placed. Not everyone needs a Cardigan Corgi."

Cardigans are the lesser-known of the two types of corgis. Pembroke Welsh Corgis are the tail-less variety beloved by the Queen of England.

Currently undergoing group psychiatric counseling for heel-nipping — the dogs, not the queen, that is — the royal corgis are often photographed en masse, a herd of short-legged, bob-tailed foxes following their mistress around the royal grounds.

But, royal preferences aside, this is the year of the Cardigan.

"I'm real tickled about the breed finally getting some recognition," said Floyd. "They aren't as well known as the Pembrokes. There are 40 to 1 Pembrokes to Cardigans," she said.

"They are very, very intelligent," she said. "We have to spell B-A-double-L around here or ours will go crazy looking for it and make us throw it for him."

THERE ARE dangers in buying a trendy breed without doing some research first," AKL librarian Roberta Vesley agreed. The "in" breeds may have special requirements in grooming or care or peculiarities that should be considered.

"The Chow is a unique breed in temperament and looks," she said, noting that the breed has crept into the list of the top ten most populous breeds in the past few years. "It has a tremendous coat and a very different personality — it just may not be the best pet for any home."

Top Ten breeds in registrations for 1987 were Cocker Spaniels (105,236), Poodles (85,400), Labrador Retrievers, Golden Retrievers, German Shepherd Dogs, Chow Chows, Beagles, Miniature Schnauzers, Dachshunds and Shetland Sheepdogs.

Of these breeds, all except the Chow Chow have long been popular, Vesley said.

"The breeds that remain popular for a long time have so many good qualities," Vesley said. "Goldens and Labs stay popular because they are so easy to live with, low maintanence dogs with minimum grooming requirements."

Poodles are smart and come in different colors and sizes, Vesley said. Another appealing feature is that they don't shed and are ideal for people with allergies.

CORGIS STAND latest in a long line of canine breeds to be popularized by show business exposure. Here are just a few:

- Bull Terrier: When Spuds MacKenzie became a spokesdog for Budweiser, Bull Terrier registrations began to rise, said AKC representatives.
- Border Collie: Although it is not a breed registered with the AKC, the organization received many questions about Border Collies a few years ago due to Mike, the black and white Border Collie who upstaged Bette Midler in "Down and Out in Beverly Hills."
- Jack Russell Terrier: The television show "Hooperman" has helped raise the recognition quotient of Jack Russell terriers, a breed once known only to the horsey set.
- Dalmatian: Even a cartoon star can initiate a frenzy for a particular breed. Dalmation breeders say every time Disney's cartoon feature "101 Dalmations" is released people it causes a renewed flurry of interest in the breed.
- German Shepherd: German Shepherds have been a favorite in the film world, but Rin Tin Tin was the most famous of them all. He was considered "brilliant" at stunts and acting. Jean Harlow was with him when he died and he was succeeded in his roles by his son and grandsons.
- Collie: Lassie, one of MGM's biggest money earners in the 40s, was trained by one of the most famous film dog trainers, Rudd Weatherwax. The original Lassie was actually a male Collie. Lassie and his offspring won "Patsy" awards for performing animals in films and television.
- Mixed Breed: A shaggy mongrel rescued from an animal shelter, Benji is probably a cocker spaniel, poodle, schnauzer mix. Benji's last film made $22 million.

Star of 'Accidental Tourist' is canine ham

By BOBBIE MEYERS
New York Times News Service

Academy Awards are coming up. Some of us are debating the merits of Dustin Hoffman's performance in "Rain Man" and William Hurt's in "Accidental Tourist." Others, however, are downright dogmatic in their choice of best performance by a male.

For some, Edward the dog in "Accidental Tourist" is the star of the season.

The point is, this dog wasn't just playing a dog — the canine version of a John Wayne playing John Wayne. It wasn't type casting ...

It was Acting! — thank you.

Remember the growl and the bared teeth? Acting!

And who can forget the pitiful look at the top of the basement steps — the wrinkled brow, the doleful expression? Acting!

Edward, played by Champion Codan's Star Spangled Banner — Bud, to his friends — is a 2-year-old Cardigan Welsh Corgi owned by Kim Barger of Merced, Calif.

A common Hollywood deal is for animal trainers to buy the type of dog they're looking for, train it and use it in the film and then sell it back to the originial owners for half price, said Joyce Swain of Fullerton, Calif, one of Bud and Cody's breeders.

Boone Narr and Sled Reynolds, Bud's trainers at Hollywood Animal Rentals, were so impressed with Bud, however, that they opted to keep him for future projects.

"He turns into a ham when the cameras are on him," Swain said. "That's a corgi trait. They were very impressed by how trainable he is and that he actually acts like a movie star. He seems to know what he's doing."

When Bud was done with his part in "Accidental Tourist" he was returned to Swain since he still needed three points to complete his championship. Swain took him to dog shows to finish this title.

A show dog has a limited routine in the ring — he stands, he trots around the ring, he stands again. Pretty boring for a star, so Bud beefed up his part.

"He started doing all sorts of tricks in the ring and we didn't know how to turn him off," Swain said, laughing. "Sometimes he would bark three times and sit up, sometimes he would shake his head and turn around."

"We didn't know what signals were triggering the behavior so we didn't know how to stop it or what he was going to do."

Bud's part in the movie also called for him to snarl and show his teeth, not a normal type of behavior for Cardigan Corgis, according to fanciers of the breed.

"Some people were afraid that the dog came over as nasty-tempered," Swain said. "But I think if you know what's going on (in the story), you know the dog is grieving. He's suffered a loss and is not handling it well."

Acting!

Cocker spaniel man's favorite best friend

The cocker spaniel, the most popular dog breed in this country since 1984, remains on top, according to registration figures compiled by the American Kennel Club.

There were 108,720 cocker spaniels listed last year, a gain of 3,484 over 1987.

Labrador retrievers, with 86,446, have moved into second place, displacing poodles, with 82,600.

Beginning in 1959, the poodle was America's top dog for 25 years, until it was nudged out by the cocker spaniel.

Handling someone else's unruly child tricky

By Dr. LAWRENCE KUTNER
New York Times News Service

"I wanted to strangle the kid!" said Walter Simmons, a marriage and family therapist in Yorktown Heights, N.Y., recalling the behavior of a guest at his daughter's sixth birthday party.

Although Simmons did not yield to the temptation, his anger and frustration highlight the difficulties that arise when parents consider disciplining other people's children.

At the party, one child wouldn't sit still during a magic show and began elbowing the children on either side of him. Since the child's parents were not around, Simmons asked the child to sit quietly. Five minutes later the child's elbows were flying again.

"I picked him up and took him away from the rest of the group," Simmons said. "I looked at him eyeball to eyeball and explained that his behavior was not permitted in our house. He agreed to behave properly."

Following the magic show, the children took turns trying to break open a pinata with a plastic baseball bat. When that child's turn came, he grabbed the bat and started hitting the other children over the head. Simmons took the bat away and, keeping a check on his own responses, escorted him elsewhere until they both calmed down.

Birthday parties often trigger aggressive behavior among children under the age of 7 or 8. Children of that age have not yet developed a sense of empathy and, therefore, experience little joy from someone else's celebration. They often feel ambivalent or jealous when another child is the center of attention.

These feelings, when combined with the extra stimulation of ice cream, cake, entertainment and party games, can become overwhelming and some children lose control. Their disruptive, acting-out behavior is contagious.

"Children at parties show a primitive mob psychology," Simmons said. "When they sense a momentum of mania, they become bolder."

Such out-of-control behavior is much less common when young children are playing in small groups.

Instead, parents are more likely to observe arguing, taunting or teasing. Although that behavior may not be pleasant, unless it is dangerous parents need not be as concerned. In fact, certain kinds of fighting between young children can serve a very useful purpose.

"Parents often rush in too early," said Dr. Alan Entin, a family psychologist in Richmond, and president-elect of the American Psychological Association Division of Family Psychology. "Let the two children handle it. Until that child does something that you think is hurting your child, it's really between the two of them."

"The common arguments that young children get into can teach them ways of solving social problems," said Dr. Susan Seidman, a developmental psychologist at the Rockland Children's Psychiatric Center in Orangeburg, N.Y.

"Most often, emotionally healthy children are more constrained when they are with other children than when they are at home," said Dr. Norma Feshbach, chairwoman of the department of education at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Feshbach and other child psychologists say one reason is that children feel more secure in their relationships with their parents than in their relationships with other adults. They know that their parents will love them even if they do something bad.

"It's a more serious problem when a child is controlled at home and uncontrolled at school or at other people's houses," she said.

In own house, parents make rules

New York Times News Service

Coping with other people's misbehaving young children is often more complex and emotionally draining for parents than disciplining their own. Playing with sharp objects or running into a road require immediate reactions from all adults. But what about table manners or language?

The child may come from a family with different standards and expectations. The child's parents may interpret another adult's attempts at discipline as an affront to them or, at an extreme, as an assault upon their child. Yet by permitting another child behavior of which you do not approve, are you giving a mixed and confusing message to your own children?

"The basic guideline for parents of young children is, 'In my house, I make the rules,' " advised Dr. Darwin Dorr, director of clinical psychology at Highland Hospital in Asheville, N.C., and editor of "The Psychology of Discipline" (International Universities Press, 1983).

"With little kids, it's fruitless to give them too many reasons. You should simply teach them the rules and repeat them."

Even so, young children may not be aware of alternative actions that adults take for granted. Telling a 4-year-old not to speak with a mouthful of food may do little to change his behavior unless he is also told that he should swallow the food before speaking.

Telling children that roughhousing indoors is not allowed may not be as effective as providing them with another activity that allows them to burn off energy.

Large groups of children require different tactics.

"Once young children are out of control in a group situation, it's very hard for them to gain control unless they're removed from that setting," said Dr. Susan Seidman, a developmental psychologist at the Rockland Children's Psychiatric Center in Orangeburg, N.Y.

She recommends taking the child to a different room and giving the child something quiet to do, like reading a book or listening to a tape.

"If that doesn't work, it isn't appropriate to be punitive," Seidman continued. "Call the parents. Tell them that their child is having a hard time handling the activities."

Children's ills often misdiagnosed

Associated Press

Each year, children and their parents pay more than 100 million visits to doctors. Fast and accurate diagnoses are important for young patients who can go from mildly to extremely ill much quicker than adults.

But according to Dr. Donald W. Schiff, president of the American Academy of Family Physicians, "misdiagnosis in children is a very important problem." Why? Because young children often lack immunological reserves. To make matters worse, there are no conclusive diagnostic tests for many childhood diseases. Adding to the problem, symptoms may not be clearly defined during the early stages of children's illnesses. And very young children may not be able to say exactly where it hurts.

Parents can help by following some simple procedures and diagnostic rules outlined in Ladies' Home Journal.

Taking a child's temperature is an important step. Call the doctor if a child six months old or younger has a temperature over 100 degrees F. For children older than six months, call if it's 101 degrees F or higher.

Count the breaths a sick child takes per minute, counting one inhalation and exhalation as a breath. Sixty breaths per minute is normal for newborns; 50 for one-year-olds; 40 for two-year-olds; 24 for children six and over. Rapid, noisy or labored breathing may signal pneumonia, asthma or other respiratory illnesses.

Watch for changes in appearance. Paleness may mean anemia; yellowish skin may indicate jaundice. Loss of appetite can also be a sign of illness, especially if other symptoms are present.

Be sure to ask a child when a pain started, where and how often it hurts. In preverbal children, persistent crying may indicate an infectious disease or gastrointestinal illness.

Be alert to repeated episodes of vomiting. In older children, recurrent vomiting may be a sign of serious conditions.

DEAR ABBY

Limit-testing brat also tests guest

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When "Truly Enraged" complained that her guest's children behaved badly in her home, you said she had every right to discipline them.

Hooray! What if you are a guest in someone's home and there is a child there who acts rudely? One small guest took it upon herself to start kicking me for no reason at all. I was very embarrassed and could not hit a 4-year-old with her mother looking on. I had no idea what to do, so I finally left the party.

Since I am engaged to the son in the family, I will be seeing this little girl frequently. What do you advise?

The child's mother refuses to discipline her child, and I do not care to be abused by a pint-sized bully. — PROBLEMS IN PARAMUS, N.J.

DEAR PROBLEMS: First I'll tell you what NOT to do. Don't get into a power struggle with a 4-year-old who is obviously making a bid for attention and testing her limits.

Resist scolding her, and ask, in all sincerity, "Why are you kicking me?" Then wait patiently for her reply.

She will have accomplished her mission in gaining your attention, and you will have reached out to her in a non-combative way that will open the door for further dialogue.

I hope you realize that this child is probably jealous of "the other female" (you) for having captured the male in her family.

DEAR ABBY: I laughed when I read the letter from "Flabbergasted," the woman whose physician of many years didn't know that she wore dentures. It can happen. It happened to me when I was being examined by an Army doctor many years ago. He looked into my mouth and said, "My, your teeth are beautiful — not a filling or cavity!"

I said, "I hope not — they're false."

He looked into my mouth again and said, "You're right. They are." — ALSO FLABBERGASTED IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ALSO: Read on for a letter that takes the platinum stethoscope:

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more letter in regard to a physician's indifference?

For more than 20 years, I've had the same good doctor for my routine checkups, physicals, Pap smears and so forth. He is one of the best doctors in town and is on the staff at one of our leading hospitals.

After a pelvic examination this year, he asked, "Have you ever had a hysterectomy?" (I'm 56 years old.) I replied, "Never," which is true.

I still can't get over it. Can't a doctor tell from the examination? — FLABBERGASTED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR FLABBERGASTED: He should be able to. (Could there have been extenuating circumstances?)

DEAR READERS: How can a person handle the seemingly impossible and withstand the unbearable? Let Arnold Beisser tell you.

At age 25, as a recent Stanford Medical School graduate and a national tennis champion, this handsome 6-footer "had it all." Then polio struck, leaving him completely paralyzed from the neck down — unable to breathe outside an iron lung.

Now a professor of psychiatry at the University of California at Los Angeles, Dr. Arnold Beisser has written a book. It's "Flying Without Wings," published by Doubleday ($15.95). In it, he describes how he made a new life for himself with what he had left — his mind.

This book is a godsend to the disabled, and a useful guide for anyone who has suffered a tragic loss and has asked himself, "Why did this have to happen to me?"

Oddly enough, this jewel of a book is an "upper" — filled with humor, peace and hope.

Give yourself a gift, and read "Flying Without Wings." You will be a kinder, wiser and more compassionate person for having read it. I am.

P.S. If your bookstore doesn't have it, ask the people there to call Doubleday and order it — on the double.

Don't put off writing thank-you notes, letters of sympathy, etc. because you don't know what to say. Get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (postage is included).

Preventative measures could save many lives

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Medical experts say 65 percent of all deaths and disabilities occurring before age 65 are preventable. With preventive measures 400,000 American lives could be save annually, it is estimated.

The major causes of premature death and disability in adults are heart disease, cancer, stroke and motor vehicle accident, according to the NewHealth Center here. The center conducts a health status evaluation program to assess an invividual's medical risk factors and offer a corrective action plan.

Data on file at the center show that overweight individuals, as a group, have more motor vehicle accidents and are more likely to suffer heart attacks. Excessive stress also shows up as a major factor in road accidents, heart disease, stroke and cancer.

Soft drink quenches record world thirst

ATLANTA (AP) — Niagara Falls could flow at its normal rate for two hours. An Olympic-size swimming pool could be filled 213,000 times. One of the towers of New York's World Trade Center could be filled 80 times — from the first floor to the 110th.

Flow with what? Filled with what? The volume of Coca-Cola soft drinks consumed around the world in 1988.

According to the company, it sold more than 200 billion servings of soft drinks in 160 countries during 1988, a record volume worldwide.

If those servings were in 12-ounce cans, placed end-to-end, they would circle the earth 429 times, make 23 round-trips to the moon, be 5,000 times longer than the Great Wall of China.

Glasson posts third victory in 10 months

From Wire Reports

MIAMI — Billy Glasson score his third win in 10 months and became the 100th golfer to surpass $1 million in earnings when Mark Calcavecchia made a double bogey on the final hole of the Doral Open after pulling his second shot into the water.

Glasson shot a par 72—275 for his fourth pro victory in a seven year career.

Fred Couples, who completed his 68 and 276 total well before Glasson and Calcavecchia played the 18th hole, was second alone.

The double bogey on the final hole dropped Calcavecchia back into a tie for third at 278 with U.S. Open champ Curtis Strange and Bruce Lietzke. Strange shot 69 over the final round and Lietzke had a 71.

Littler birds 'em

NAPLES, Fla. — Gene Littler birdied two of the final three holes Sunday to capture the Senior Challenge after Harold Henning made a double bogey at the 16th hole to lose the lead. Littler finished at 7-under-par 209, two strokes ahead of Henning.

Henning fell to five under with his double-bogey at the par-3 16th hole. Henning needed two shots to get out of a buried lie in a greenside bunker. Littler, meanwhile, sank an eight-foot birdie putt at 16 to go to 6-under.

Miller Barber shot a 71 to finish alone in third at 2-under 214. Lou Graham shot a 71 and Bob Charles a 72 to finish another shot back in fourth.

Becker wins again

PHILADELPHIA — Second-seeded Boris Becker won his second Grand Prix title in as many weeks, wearing down No. 3 seed and two-time defending champion Tim Mayotte 7-6 (7-4), 6-1, 6-3 Sunday in the $602,500 U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis Championships.

Kemper to King

PRINCEVILLE, Hawaii — Betsy King's 67—202 Sunday gave her a second straight Women's Kemper Open title. She also won it in 1984. Jane Geddes was two strokes back.

Landry...'Never again'

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Tom Landry will probably never coach again "because it would just be hard, not being in the Cowboys' blue."

Landry, in an exclusive interview with The Associated Press on Sunday, said he wanted no part of the new Dallas organization.

"It wouldn't be fair to keep me around, hanging over everybody's shoulder," he said in his first interview since being replaced Saturday night.

And even though he was the only coach the Cowboys had in their 29 years, Landry said, "People will forget me pretty quick."

Landry was fired after Arkansas oilman Jerry Jones bought the team. Jones and Tex Schramm, the Cowboys' president and general manager, flew to Austin to tell Landry he was being replaced by Miami Hurricanes' head coach Jimmy Johnson.

JOHNSON was Jones' roommate on Arkansas' national championship team in 1964.

The AP interview took place in Landry's office at the Cowboys' headquarters in Valley Ranch, 25 miles northwest of Dallas, where he was cleaning out his desk.

Tom Landry

Landry said he knew his career was finished when Jones was announced as the new owner.

"No one had to tell me. I would have had to be pretty stupid not to know when they got on the airplane to come see me," Landry said. "They could have saved the trip because all they did was tell me I was fired."

THOUGH it was an emotional experience, Landry said, "I'm not upset over what happened. I've never been one to get that upset because I accept people as they are. Sure, the firing could have been handled better, but I won't get upset over it."

Asked about politics, Landry said: "No, I don't think that politics is for me. But it would be hard for me to stay inactive, and I'm probably going to do something."

Landry said it might have been best if he had stepped down three years ago, but that he felt an obligation to bring Dallas back to one more Super Bowl. The Cowboys went 3-13 last year, the second worst season in their history.

"I probably should have gotten out, but I really enjoyed the challenge of bringing a team to that game. In fact, I probably enjoy the challenge of it more than the actual game," he said.

"I KNEW I was taking a chance, but sometimes it's not what you know as much as in this case, who you knew. And I didn't know Jerry Jones."

Wade, Oil Can apologizes

Associated Press

Most of the news from the Boston Red Sox' spring training camp in Winter Haven, Fla., continued to come from off the field on Sunday.

Pitcher Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd apologized to Wade Boggs for suggesting the All-Star third baseman should see a psychiatrist as a sex addict.

A few hours later, Boyd went into a rage when confronted by writers in the clubhouse, shouting obscenities.

However, Red Sox General Manager Lou Gorman and Manager Joe Morgan said that Boyd had apologized to Boggs for his remarks regarding his teammate's four-year affair with Margo Adams.

"He told Wade he didn't mean anything by it," Gorman said. "He said he didn't say things that way, the way it came out in the paper.

"He asked Wade, 'Are we still friends?' and Wade said yes. It's much ado about nothing."

Boyd became the first Boston player to criticize Boggs publicly since Adams detailed her affair with Boggs in Penthouse magazine.

Camp News

George Steinbrenner gave ringing endorsements to new manager Dallas Green and to first baseman Don Mattingly, the subject of numerous offseason trade rumors, in his annual State of the Yankees address on Sunday.

Steinbrenner said of Green, who represents the 16th managerial change in his 17 years of ownership, "I will bet you he will be there at the end of the World Series when we win it. Dallas is going to surprise you. He will do a very good job."

Steinbrenner has had a dramatic shift in his attitude toward Mattingly, who infuriated the owner last August when he said Yankees' players receive money but no respect. Trade rumors swirled around Mattingly from that point on.

Steinbrenner said, "The more I think about it, Donnie was within his rights to say what he said when he said it." ...

Bob Horner, trying to land a job with Baltimore, hit the first batting practice home run of the workouts on Sunday.

Spring Medical Report

Baltimore pitcher Pete Stanicek, who had missed two days of practice with a bad back, resumed practicing Sunday. He said it will take "a couple of days" to get back to 100 percent.

At OU, winning is only thing?

TULSA, Okla. — The question of the day in Oklahoma is not whether John Tower should be confirmed or Ollie North freed from trial. The dinner-table, locker-room issue in these parts is whether the University of Oklahoma should dismiss its head football coach, Barry Switzer.

Although bad-news blows have been popping around Switzer like a string of firecrackers, it seems clear that he is not going to resign.

And although editorials in Oklahoma City and Tulsa newspapers have called for a change, pro-Switzer fans are as fired up as his critics and showing far more strength.

The coach has the backing, for example, of Gov. Henry Bellmon, even though Bellmon is a graduate of Oklahoma State University.

Last week Bellmon showed up at a press conference wearing a red OU blazer and gave Switzer his blessing, despite his deep concerns expressed later about the controversy swirling around the Sooner football program.

NO DEFINITIVE count has been taken to show public sentiment on the issue, but The Tulsa World conducted a telephone poll of its readers last week. Free calls were tallied on whether Switzer should resign, and the response was 1,608 for resignation and 5,145 against, or 76 percent to 24 percent in Switzer's favor.

A Tulsa television station, KTUL, took a 50-cents-a-call telephone poll and got the same message — 2,014 for dismissal, 6,852 against — 77 percent for Switzer.

"Basically, we got three themes from the pro-Switzer people," said Alex Adwan, editorial page editor of The World.

"First, OU and Switzer are not responsible for what every football player does. Second, everyone is innocent until proved guilty.

"The third argument was, 'He's not hired to be a baby-sitter; he's hired to win those games.'"

This seems to echo Switzer's own philosophy, as he once expressed it to his team: "The greatest reward in football is winning. That's the most important goal there is. That's why they have scoreboards."

The 51-year-old coach has had a winning percentage of .844 in his 16 years at Oklahoma, the best record in college football among coaches now active.

Switzer's current troubles started Dec. 19, when the National Collegiate Athletic Association put the Sooners on three years' probation.

Andrews keeps its dream alive

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

The Andrews "Dream Team" kept its dreams alive with an lopsided area playoff win over Pampa Friday night. But don't think Coach Frank Bice's team looked past the Harvesters despite the 69-44 rout.

"Our magic number was one going into this game," guard Gym Bice said. "We're just taking it one at a time."

The next brick on the wall separating Andrews from a state tournament berth is Burkburnett. The Mustangs face 29-3 Burkburnett in a Class 4A Region I semifinal at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Abilene's Mabee Complex.

Other area boys teams had a similarly easy time of it in their 1989 playoff debuts. Greenwood rapped Fredericksburg 64-44, while Lamesa dumped Alpine 66-46.

Greenwood, 20-11, will face 24-7 Bowie in a Class 3A area playoff at 8 p.m. in the Abilene High gym, while Lamesa, 23-9, will face 28-6 Dimmitt in another 3A area game at the Texan Dome in Levelland Tuesday. Starting time for the Lamesa game was unavailable at press time.

Andrews-Burkburnett

The Mustangs shot less than 50 percent against Pampa, but a killer full-court press cut into Harvester hopes like a scythe.

Gym Bice led the 'Stangs with 24 points despite seven-for-25 field goal accuracy, while Ara Baten and Damon Clay scored 15 and 10 points, respectively.

Greenwood-Bowie

Coach Robert Chaney's Greenwood Rangers loosened up Fredericksburg's defense with the three-point shooting of Kane Harris in the first half, then went inside to the likes of Tom Marvin in the second 16 minutes.

Harris hit three three-point shots in the first half, while Marvin led the Rangers with 15 points. Harris added 14 and Randy Donnell scored 10.

The Rangers held Fredericksburg to 31 percent shooting from the floor, but Bowie may be significantly stronger than Fredericksburg based on a record that includes a nearly perfect mark against other 3A schools.

The Jackrabbits, based about 50 miles north of Fort Worth, have lost to the likes of Class 4A playoff qualifiers Burkburnett and Saginaw Boswell, while Greenwood lost to District 4-5A runnerup Midland High.

Coach Gayno Shelton's Bowie five are paced by posts Chris Cornelius (14 ppg) and Scott Ewing (13 ppg). But Shelton hopes for balanced scoring against Greenwood.

"I know they're balanced. I just hope we are," Shelton said. "Greenwood is a well-coached, fundamentally sound team with no weaknesses."

Bowie drilled Ballinger 83-38 in their bi-district matchup Friday.

Lamesa-Dimmitt

The Tors rolled to their seventh straight playoff berth despite losing leading scorer Dwight Mason to disciplinary reasons for the stretch run.

Sophomore Bert Butler picked up much of the scoring slack in Mason's absence, while senior Ernest Maxwell provides leadership and junior Lavert Hawkins does a little bit of everything. In addition, the Tors have been getting outstanding reserve play from guard Dewayne Hall and post Bryant Edwards.

The Tors looked to be odd-man-out despite a drop to Class 3A this season, but Coach Wayne Roberts' bunch knocked off Slaton and Brownfield in successive home

Landry departs with a curt 'See Ya'

Battles

Tom Landry had his loyal supporters and there were those who felt it was time for a change, but no one was happy with the way it happened.

It was inevitable that a new owner would clean house and bring in his own man, but Landry, after all these years, and all the successes, deserved to leave with more dignity. And, maybe, despite the disappointments of recent seasons, a word or two or maybe a refrain of Thanks for the Memories.

This corner, frankly, would have liked to have seen Landry get the opportunity to bring the Cowboys back to their previous pinnacle, the 1970s when Dallas' record of success was the envy of everybody except perhaps the Raiders and Dolphins and, of course, the Steelers.

MAYBE THE game had passed Landry by as his critics had claimed. Just as likely, the well ran dry...the cupboard was suddenly bare. That's what parity is all about. You build a winner, hang around at the top for a while and then it's time to rebuild.

The Raiders, Steelers, and Dolphins are experiencing the throes of anguish.

But Tom is gone and his departure is only the tip of the iceberg. Tex Schramm no longer will be the official spokesman for the club, although he will still be around.

The coaching staff is job-hunting, the veterans, the memory of deeds past, who have been hanging on, may now be destined retirement or a change of scenery.

You can bet Steve Pelleur will serve in a secondary, if even that, role in Dallas' offensive scheme.

AND ALL of a sudden, Troy Aikman, the UCLA All-America, who was the third string all-Pac-10 quarterback, no longer is the apple of the Cowboys' eye.

With Johnson coming from the University of Miami, Steve Walsh, his junior quarterback of last season, is almost sure to follow. Chances are Dallas fans will have an opportunity, first hand, to see if he has the arm for the NFL.

In the opinion of pro scouts, at least those influencing Dallas' decisions, Aikman has the stronger arm, despite the feats of Walsh at Miami.

NEW OWNER Jerry Jones declares unequivocally that Johnson will make the Cowboys instant winners, his skills are that great. That sounds almost ominous for Johnson.

Maybe he will, but he inherits an aging team and you just don't go out and round up the necessary talent it takes to produce an immediate winner, as is possible in college. Patience is required and the Bobby Beathard ability to cityslick a rival GM in a trade or spot the potential in unclaimed talent.

Johnson has proven he is a winner at Oklahoma State and Miami, but he didn't do it without talent.

One wonders what may happen if Johnson doesn't work the expected miracle.

Meanwhile, Landry heads for premature retirement. What will he do? Maybe he'll enter politics where a man with his scruples would be welcome.

Undefeated, undisputed, and unmerciful

By DAVE ANDERSON
N.Y. Times News Service

Tyson

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — As the undisputed, undefeated and unmerciful heavyweight champion, Mike Tyson reigns as ruggedly as only a few in boxing history have.

With his fifth-round destruction of Frank Bruno on Saturday night, Tyson now has a 36-0 record with 32 knockouts. But the champion's dominance should be measured not so much by another swarm of his savage punches as by the British challenger's right hand that momentarily wobbled the 22-year-old champion in the first round.

One small punch for Bruno, one giant punch for all those other heavyweights out there who hope to dethrone Tyson someday.

Moments after Referee Richard Steele ended Bruno's impersonation of a heavy bag, boxing critics were quick to remember Tyson's brief shimmy in the first round. As if that right hand proved that Tyson were human after all, that he might be vulnerable to a big puncher.

BUT MORE than anything else, that thought of a potential defect in Tyson only proved how much boxing critics have come to expect of this primeval gladiator.

Throughout the champion's career, historians could remember only four punches that have even rocked him:

Bruno's right hand. Tony Tucker's right uppercut in the opening round of their 1987 bout when Tyson unified the heavyweight title. James (Bonecrusher) Smith's right hand in the final round after that cautious college graduate hugged Tyson for 11 rounds in order to survive. And the blurred memory of a punch by James (Quick) Tillis back in 1986 when Tyson was still a teen-ager.

Of those punches, Bruno's right hand appeared to have impressed Tyson the most.

"It was harder," Tyson acknowledged later, "than the uppercut Tucker got me with."

SOONER OR later, Tyson will be hit even harder. Probably even knocked down. Possibly even knocked out. Except for Rocky Marciano, it's happened to all the famous heavyweight champions. Joe Frazier was the Tyson of his time, but George Foreman wrecked him. And when Foreman appeared invincible, Muhammad Ali absorbed all his big punches and knocked him out.

But none of today's current contenders appear sturdy enough to absorb Tyson's battering while trying to batter him. Notice that Bruno and Tucker stunned Tyson in the first round, before each found himself more concerned with how to protect himself from Tyson's assault.

Asked about his next opponent, Tyson mentioned Jose Ribalta, a Cuban heavyweight now living in Miami who is listed 19th in the latest Boxing Illustrated heavyweight ranking. The champion remembered that Ribalta "gave me a tough fight" on Aug. 17, 1986, in Atlantic City before Tyson stopped him in the 10th round.

Evander Holyfield, the former cruiserweight champion who goes against Michael Dokes on March 13, has been appraised as Tyson's most dangerous future foe. But until Holyfield establishes his credentials, the most deserving challenger is Carl (the Truth) Williams, the No. 1 contender on the Boxing Illustrated list.

ODDLY ENOUGH, for those who wonder about Tyson's ability to take a big punch, the champion's biggest box-office opponent might be George Foreman himself, if the 41-year-old former champion earns it.

Despite 15 consecutive knockouts in his comeback after having been a Texas preacher and rancher for a decade, Foreman still needs to conquer a ranked contender in order to convince the boxing public that he deserves a title shot.

But if Foreman were to nail Tyson with one of his clubbing right hands, it could be interesting, especially if Foreman were to follow up with another big right hand.

In order to dethrone Tyson, somebody must be able not only to stun him (as Bruno, Tucker and Bonecrusher Smith did), but to hurt him before he can regroup and charge. That's how Foreman dethroned Frazier in Kingston, Jamaica, in 1972.

Tyson, meanwhile, keeps insisting, "I feel I can beat anybody." And he surely can. But in his competitive arrogance, he someday can also beat himself.

FOR ALL the punches he landed Saturday night, he missed many others. He appeared to be a boxer without a specific plan.

But when asked about his new and inexperienced cornermen, Jay Bright and Aaron Snowell, he minimized the absence of Kevin Rooney, his longtime trainer whom he discharged in December.

"Kevin would've just said, 'Punch to the body,'" Tyson said. "I basically know what to do. When somebody's in there punching at you, it doesn't matter who's in your corner."

Not true. Sometimes a boxer's cornermen are the difference between winning and losing a tough, tedious decision that can turn on a late round. But so far Tyson hasn't really had a tough, tedious fight that was up for grabs.

When he does, he'll miss Rooney's advice. But in his competitive arrogance, Tyson apparently assumes he doesn't need advice.

Football scholarships and recruiting were stringently reduced, and Switzer was accused of failing to "exercise supervisory control."

WITHIN the next two months, five players were arrested. Three were charged with rape, one — quarterback Charles Thompson — with selling cocaine to an FBI agent and another with shooting his roommate.

All this has left five players suspended and Switzer and the university embarrassed.

Even the university's interim president, David Swank, told CBS Sports, "We probably became a little lax because of the great athletic success we have had, and so we maybe let things slide more than we should."

The defense focuses on the fact that in a big program like OU's, half a dozen bad apples don't represent the 80 or 90 other players.

Switzer himself, interviewed after Thompson's arrest, said the player "did it for the reasons most people do, for the money." The coach also leans on the defense that he cannot be every player's wet-nurse.

IT WILL take at least another season to see the full reaction from the university, its athletic department, and Switzer himself, who can't absorb any more shocks. A new president is to be selected, and he may be heard from in athletic matters.

Also, there's a big mob of fans out there who will figure in decisions to be made, and right now they seem to be leaning Switzer's way.

Winning scores for more than 30 years have created a Sooner subculture, if not a religion, and the more than 70,000 seats in the stadium only begin to tell the extent of the football fervor.

The feeling flowered during the coaching years of Bud Wilkinson, whose teams won 47 consecutive games in the 1950s. Switzer is the heir to that tradition and has lived up to it on the scoreboard.

It's doubtful he'll ever equal Wilkinson's popularity. Wilkinson ran for the United States Senate in 1964 and lost by only 21,000 votes in the year that his Republican ticket mate, Barry Goldwater, ran 197,000 behind in Oklahoma in the race for president.

In the subculture, attending home games has grown into a ritual of red and white carnations, caps and jackets, neighborly tailgates on the practice field, reunions at fraternity and sorority houses and a general air of hoopla.

People drive in from the far corners of the state and beyond; a home game is a social and sociological event.

Many Oklahomans have sought for years to fight off a cowboy-and-Indian state reputation, and some found Sooner football a preferable, if not perfect, image.

Line forms at University of Miami

By STEVEN WINE

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — University of Miami football coach Jimmy Johnson left the school's athletic offices Sunday, on his way to Dallas and the office occupied for 29 years by Tom Landry.

Although Johnson told reporters that he would answer no questions until a Tuesday news conference in Dallas, Miami athletic director Sam Jankovich said he expected to lose five or six assitant coaches, who will go to the Cowboys with Johnson.

One of those leaving could be Gary Stevens, Miami's assistant head coach. Stevens wants to replace Johnson, but Jankovich said he'll conduct a national search before naming a new coach.

"I think it's a given we would lose Stevens," if he isn't chosen as the Hurricanes' next head coach, Jankovich said.

Although Jankovich declined to name the assistants most likely to join the Cowboys, he said: "Nobody has resigned as yet. I think you'll see a maximum of six going to the Cowboys, and a minimum of five."

Secondary coach Dave Campo said he expects to join Johnson in Dallas. The Miami Herald quoted sources as saying that defensive coordinator Butch Davis, offensive line coach Tony Wise and receivers coach Hubbard Alexander also will follow Johnson.

Other candidates for the job listed in Sunday's Herald were Louisiana State coach Mike Archer, Washington State coach Dennis Erickson, West Virginia coach Don Nehlen, Duke coach Steve Spurrier and Fresno State coach Jim Sweeney.

Tex no longer official Cowboy spokesman

By MARK GODICH

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Texas E. "Tex" Schramm's last official act as spokesman of the Dallas Cowboys was to announce the transfer of ownership to Arkansas oilman Jerry Jones.

No, the outspoken president and general manager wasn't dealt the same fate Saturday as Coach Tom Landry, who after 29 years became the only coach the Cowboys have ever fired.

But as Saturday's night's news conference unfolded, it became painfully evident to Schramm that his influential role was changing. He stood to the side — arms folded, a pained expression on his face — as Jones explained his "hands-on" plan for running the Cowboys.

On his role in day-to-day activities: "I plan to be into socks and jocks. I'm going to examine each facet of the organization. The Cowboys will be my life."

On his participation at the NFL meetings: "I am the owner. I will make the vote."

On his relationship with Schramm: "The newspapers said my 24-year-old son will be an apprentice (to Schramm). Well, you got that wrong. This 46-year-old boy is going to be an apprentice."

As enthusiastic as Jones was, Schramm appeared equally distraught. Earlier, he had traveled with Jones to Austin for a 40-minute meeting with Landry. His voice cracked and tears welled in his eyes as he spoke of the end to his 29-year relationship with Landry.

"It was a very difficult meeting," Schramm said. "Very, very sad."

He fought back tears.

"It's tough when you break a relationship like we've had for 29 years," Schramm said. "But we have to move forward."

That was as expressive as the usually outspoken Schramm was Saturday night. For the first time, he appeared nothing more than a spectator during the proceedings. His responses were short, often elusive.

On where he sees himself fitting in with the organization: "We'll see."

On former owner H.R. "Bum" Bright's remark that Landry's firing was simply a part of business: "He's speaking the facts."

On whether he will retain his 3 percent ownership in the Cowboys: "I imagine I will for right now."

For 29 years, Schramm has been recognized around the National Football League as spokesman for the Cowboys.

His competitive nature perhaps shows through best at Cowboys games, where he is a study in intensity. Schramm watches from the press box — that's where the most action is, he has said — and has been known to shoot abruptly from his chair, pound his fist on the table and openly criticize officials' calls.

LANDRY

Landry said in a way he feels sorry for Schramm.

"Tex has really showed a lot of emotion through this whole ordeal, and I guess that's understandable when you've been around someone as long as we've been around each other. But Tex will probably have a harder time than I will, because it looks like he's going to have some hobbles (restrictions) put on him."

Landry said he decided to clean out his desk Sunday "because I wanted to get it ready for the new guy when he comes in. And I won't be around to get in the way."

Landry said he and his wife, Alicia, probably will go on vacation to Palm Springs, Calif.

"I guess I might get together with Darrell (Royal) and the boys and get my golf game in shape," Landry said.

He also said, in a way, his wife was happy he was leaving.

"You know how a coach's wife suffers, and she suffered last year. I can handle the critics, but it was hard to see someone you love being hurt by all the words," he said.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Attention to detail will pay off in ways you never expected. Do not be overly trusting. You will be at your most vulnerable in April. The fact that you are a bit naive is part of your charm. You bring high hopes to a new and wonderful love relationship. Count your pennies and you will hang on to more of your dollars. Exercise is not the total answer to staying in good health. Regular dental and medical checkups nip problems in the bud.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Broadway star Tommy Tune, auto racer Mario Andretti, cartoonist Milton Caniff, actor Charles Durning, scientist Dr. Linus Pauling, actress Bernadette Peters.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Forget any hard feelings and look to the future. It is important to put past anxieties behind you so you don't overlook certain golden opportunities. New alliances enjoy favorable influences.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will be proven right, but that alone will not open closed doors. Study ways to improve communication. You gain the most when you work on your own. Close relationships grow more rewarding.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Patch up a lovers' quarrel before it ruins your whole day. You could make important points with the boss by compromising on a minor matter. You find new ways to increase your income.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not hesitate to isolate yourself if solitude will help you bring a project in on time. Your recent moodiness could cause trouble with a romantic relationship or sibling. Pace yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Money will be very much on your mind. Take the initiative in building a better relationship. An incoming message could have a positive impact on your career, family life or education — perhaps all three!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your responsibilities to yourself are important, too. You are moving into a position where you can really stretch your talents. Big profits are possible. You are at your most persuasive today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could find yourself on the outside looking in unless you act quickly on a college or career matter. Someone you meet by chance could play a big part in your future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your charisma is at a peak. You can do almost anything you desire. Others begin to realize what a great communicator you are. Expand your sphere of influence. Smile a lot.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Being more indulgent is not the best answer to a recent child-parent problem. Talk things out. Those traveling or starting new jobs have good luck. Be persistent. Rewards are on the way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Remain flexible and a money situation will turn in your favor. You benefit from playing by the rules and observing protocol. Too much rich food could put you out of commission. Show restraint.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A health upset could drain your energy. Follow the doctor's advice and you will snap back quickly. Take an honest look at your role in a relationship and you will gain valuable insights.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Carry through on your promises. Handle a headstrong young person gently but firmly. There are hidden aspects affecting a money situation. You know the right response to give in business negotiations.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ ♡94 ◇Q973 ♣A10972
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—You are not sure what partner is looking for with his three-heart bid, but you really don't care! You can show your stoppers in the black suits by bidding three no trump.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K6 ♡8 ◇K72 ♣AQ107652
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—With no first-round control outside of your suit, a jump to three clubs would be a distinct stretch. For the moment, you can do no more than rebid two clubs and await further developments—if any.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ102 ♡85 ◇6 ♣AKQJ93
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—This time, no one can question your strength for a jump to three clubs, yet that would not be the right bid. When you have an opportunity to show a four-card major suit at the one-level, you should seize the chance rather than rebid a six-card minor. Bid one spade.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q3 ♡KQ82 ◇AQJ532 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♠	?

What action do you take?

A.—You are not strong enough to double and then, over partner's probable one spade response, bid two diamonds. Therefore, be content with a simple overcall of one diamond.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K ♡KJ1065 ◇AQ6 ♣J864
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—It might seem automatic to complete the picture of your distribution by bidding two clubs (two hearts promises a six-card suit). However, rather than make a bid which suggests extra values when you have such a poor suit, we suggest a rebid of one no trump. That's only a little white lie and limits your hand.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQJ96 ♡AJ1073 ◇J ♣74
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—This is close, and we'll accept anything other than a pass. The aggressive ones will go straight to four spades. The more conservative will make a trial bid of three hearts, the suit in which they need some help.

Hutton awarded $9.75 million in fraud trial against MGM

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oscar-winning actor Timothy Hutton, who sued MGM for allegedly deceiving him in 1983 about the demise of the motion picture "Roadshow," has been awarded $9.75 million in damages from the studio.

A jury found Friday that the studio committed fraud and breach of contract.

Hutton, who won an Academy Award for his role in the film "Ordinary People," said studio executives told him the picture, about a modern-day cattle drive, was being called off because director Richard Brooks had suffered a heart attack. Actually, MGM lost interest in the movie after a change of management, the actor said.

The monthlong trial included testimony from other "Roadshow" actors, including Jack Nicholson. Nicholson resolved matters with MGM several years ago, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

MGM is now owned by Turner Broadcasting.

"Turner is very surprised and disappointed in the verdict and will seek a further review," a company attorney said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Liz Claiborne Inc. soon won't have Liz Claiborne as boss.

Ms. Claiborne, 59, said Sunday she will retire in June as chairwoman and president of the major clothing design house she founded. She is one of the few female chief executives of a major U.S. company.

The company also announced that Ms. Claiborne's husband, Arthur Ortenberg, who co-founded the company, will retire from his position as vice chairman of the board of directors. Both will remain as board members, the company said.

"We are looking forward to making time to devote to personal interests and to enjoying the fruits of our labors," the couple said in a statement.

Vice Chairman Jerome A. Chazen will become chairman upon Ms. Claiborne's retirement, the company said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Dickerson, the first woman TV news correspondent and now a commentator for Fox Television, has married former Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead.

The couple was married Saturday at Dickerson's home in Washington.

In 1960, she became the first woman TV correspondent, covering Washington, political conventions and civil rights for CBS and then for NBC. Whitehead, who until last month was the deputy secretary of state, is the chairman of AEA Investors Inc., a New York investment company.

Paycheck

ORIENT, Ohio (AP) — Johnny Paycheck is in prison for shooting a man in a bar. But he said that doesn't mean his country music career has to stop.

Paycheck, 50, began serving a seven- to 9½-year sentence this month. He won't be eligible for parole for at least 5½ years.

The singer, best remembered for his 1978 hit "Take This Job and Shove It," wants to record an album with other inmate musicians and use the money to help pay medical bills for his wife, who has cancer.

"We didn't have no insurance," he said. "I have attorney bills, doctor bills. When I had the money and I could have put it away, I didn't have much sense."

MEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Shuttle astronaut Rick Hauck returned to Tufts University, his alma mater, with the brown and blue college flag he took into space with him in 1984.

Hauck, 48, said NASA has become a much stronger agency since the Challenger explosion.

"We had all our eggs in one basket before," said Hauck. "Now both military and civilian space programs are developing unmanned missions as an alternative."

Hauck is leaving his career in space to work at the Pentagon in Washington.

"I know I'll miss going into space," he said Friday. "It's a wonderful thing to be in 4½ million pounds of machinery launched into the heavens."

NEW CANAAN, Conn. (AP) — A woman who was caught driving David Letterman's sports car and once broke into his house has been arrested again, this time while wandering in the comedian's foyer, police said.

Margaret Ray, 36, was arrrested Friday night and charged with one felony count of trespassing and one misdemeanor count each of possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia, police said Sunday.

She was being held on $5,000 bond, and was to be arraigned today.

Police Capt. Michael Angelastro said he could not say how she got inside the house. He declined additional comment.

Ray was arrested last May as she was driving Letterman's $80,000 Porsche. She had come under suspicion because she didn't have $3 to pay a toll.

Police said Ray identified herself as Letterman's wife and introduced her 3-year-old son who was in the car as David Letterman Jr.

Letterman refused to press charges.

A few days later, police arrested Ray at Letterman's three-bedroom house in New Canaan. She apparently had moved into the house with her son and lived there for a couple of days while the star of NBC-TV's "Late Night With David Letterman" was out of town, police said.

In September, a judge ordered her to give up contact with Letterman except through the mail and to remain at Fairfield Hills Hospital, where she had been undergoing psychiatric treatment.

She also was ordered to return to her hometown of Crawford, Colo., upon release from the hospital.

NEW YORK (AP) — Roy Eldridge, one of the great innovators of the jazz trumpet who gained prominence with Gene Krupa's band and later toured with Benny Goodman, has died at age 78.

Eldridge died Sunday at Franklin General Hospital in Valley Stream. No cause of death was given. His wife, Viola, died three weeks ago. They had been married 53 years.

Fellow jazz trumpeter Jon Faddis said Eldridge was "one of the most exciting" jazz trumpeters.

"One mistake that experts make is to say that he was the 'link' between Louis Armstrong and Dizzy Gillespie, but he was much more. He was a giant in his own right," Faddis said.

A native of Pittsburgh, Eldridge came to New York City in 1930 and played in Cecil Scott's band and later with Teddy Hill and Connie's Hot Chocolates.

He gained national attention when he was the featured trumpeter and singer with Krupa's band from 1941 to 1943, becoming one of the first black jazz musicians to be a permanent member of the brass section of a white band.

Rise in short-term rates expected

By KENNETH N. GILPIN
New York Times News Service

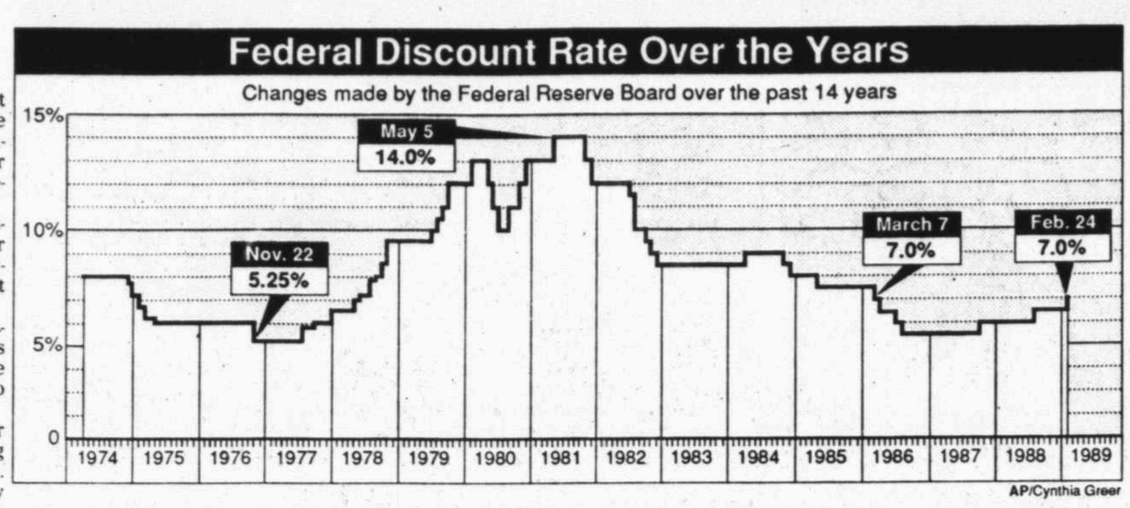
NEW YORK — Short-term interest rates may move a bit higher over the next week or so, credit market analysts say, even without any further credit tightening by the Federal Reserve Board.

On Friday the Fed raised its discount rate (which it charges member banks for short-term loans) to 7 percent, from 6.5 percent — its highest level since April 1986.

This action came after Wednesday's report that consumer prices had risen 0.6 percent last month, the biggest monthly increase in two years.

On Thursday and Friday major banks raised their prime lending rate to 11.5 percent, from 11 percent. This puts the prime, the rate used by banks to set charges to many borrowers, at its highest level since October 1984.

Market participants said short-term rates may move higher because their levels do not fully reflect the sharp half-point increase in the federal funds rate that took place Thursday. This closely watched rate is the interest charged on overnight loans between banks.



The jump in the federal funds rate, the second in two weeks, pushed it to a range of 9¾ to 9⅞ percent. In the wake of the tightening move, however, yields on short- to intermediate-term Treasury notes failed to move up in tandem with the rise in the federal funds rate.

January machine-tool orders fall 27 percent

New York Times News Service

Orders for American-made machine tools, reversing a two-month pattern, dropped by 27.1 percent in January, according to a report scheduled to be released Monday by the industry's trade association.

Analysts said the decline resulted from seasonal weakness and lower foreign orders.

Compared with the figures from January of last year, machine-tool orders were down by 22.4 percent.

Last month the Association for Manufacturing Technology reported that for all of 1988 orders had risen 69.5 percent.

Machine-tool orders reached $230.8 million in January, compared with $316.4 million in December, the association said.

Foreign orders declined by 55.5 percent in January, while domestic orders were down by 19.7 percent for the month.

James J. Paper, an analyst with Kirkpatrick, Pettis, Smith, Polian Inc. in Omaha, said that many plants operated at a lower rate in December and that some closed for weeks during the month.

As a result, he said, many manufacturers refrained from ordering machine tools.

"The winter season tends to produce erratic numbers," he said.

Machine tools are power-driven devices that cut or shape metal parts used in everything from appliances to vehicles.

Economists consider their sales and their level of orders to be important indicators of capital spending patterns by makers of large products like automobiles and aircraft.

"Although January orders have shown a decline, we remain confident that the industry is back on the right track," said Albert W. Moore, the association's president.

He attributed the decline in part to manufacturers' decisions to defer orders until the Bush administration's economic policies were better known.

"We have a new administration at the helm in Washington, and it is not unusual for business investors to sit back and take a look at things during a transitional period," Moore said. "Manufacturers both here and abroad are watching the as-yet-unknown Bush administration."

Moore said that "Americans must import less and export more," adding that it "is crucial to American manufacturers that their government's policies help — and not hinder — them as they move ever more aggressively into world markets."

Nonetheless, some machine-tool makers said that despite the industry's declining level of orders in January, customers had been active seeking price estimates for new projects.

Regulators extend bids for MCorp

By GREG STEINMETZ
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Regulators have given investors until April 3 to submit takeover bids for troubled MCorp.

Analysts viewed the announcement of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. as a way to drum up bidders and demonstrate an ongoing interest in resolving the bank's problems.

"Establishing and publicizing a date will ensure that the banking and financial communities are on notice of the FDIC's continuing interest in considering all reasonable alternatives for resolving MCorp's problems," FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman said in a prepared statement.

So far, the only confirmed bid for the bank comes from MCorp management, which has offered to inject $800 million into its banks in exchange for $1 billion in government money.

Wells Fargo & Co., a big California bank, and leveraged buyout specialists Kohlberg Kravis & Roberts Co. also have inspected MCorp's books in possible preparation for a bid. A group tied to Chicago's Pritzker family also is interested.

Ohio's oil producers struggling

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — In a state known for agriculture, retail expertise and football, the plight of Ohioans crippled financially by the 1986 collapse of the oil industry collapsed in 1986 is a little-known tale.

Richard Salavage, an independent oil producer in Newark, has all but sold his Central Energy Co. to spend more time building his new real estate development company.

"It (Central Energy) just hasn't been at all profitable. I've got a family to support. My oil and gas business for several years provided a nice living, but we can no longer expect to maintain our lifestyle that way," Salvage said.

Salvage, with a master's degree in business, has something to fall back on. But for many, the energy business was all they had.

"It's difficult to diversify. I'm third generation and it's all I know," said Nancy Chiles, who runs Newark-based W.E. Shrider, which has been held by her family since 1929.

Ms. Chiles said she hasn't made money in three years.

In 1981, with oil prices near their highest levels ever, the industry employed about 15,000 people in Ohio. Since 1984, more than half of those jobs have been lost, said Barry Ferguson, public affairs manager for the Ohio Oil & Gas Association.

An industry worth $1 billion in Ohio earlier this decade is now barely worth $600 million, the association's figures show. Last year, 1,252 Ohio wells were plugged, 200 more than in 1987. In 1981, only 286 wells were plugged.

"It did result in a large percentage of layoffs for those who worked in the industry," said Michael Biddison, chief of the oil and gas division of the Ohio Department of Natural Resources. "I lost contact with a lot of other individuals in the industry."

Of Ohio's approximately 63,000 wells, 1,334 were drilled in 1988, according to DNR figures.

Jud Noble's Columbus-based Noble Oil Corp. plugged 35 wells in 1988 and laid off more than half its workforce when oil prices bottomed out.

American attacks Continental suit

FORT WORTH (AP) — American Airlines officials say the claim by Continental Airlines that American has engaged in racketeering is a "moral outrage."

Airline officials made the comment late last week after Continental mounted a public relations attack against American and United Airlines, saying it intends to take its $1 billion racketeering suit against the two airlines to a jury trial later this year.

United officials in Chicago declined to comment on Continental's statement. But officials at Fort Worth-based American responded angrily, calling Continental's contention that American has engaged in racketeering a "moral outrage."

It was not the first time that the two Texas-based airlines have waged a public war of words. They have waged philosophical, public relations and fare wars off and on for most of this decade.

Thirteen airlines filed an antitrust suit in 1985 against American and United, complaining that the carriers' computer reservations systems, Sabre and Apollo, were biased and steered passengers unwittingly to their flights.

All but Northwest, USAir and Texas Air Corp., parent of Continental and Eastern have dropped out of the suit. And USAir acquired 11 percent of United's Apollo system when a consortium including it and four European airlines bought 49 percent of that system.

Continental, a Houston-based airline, filed more charges under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act.

If American and United are found guilty of violating the act, they could be forced to pay treble damages, or up to $3 billion.

Those rules outlawed "display bias," the listing of the host airline's flights ahead of those of competitors on travel agents' computer screens. Studies have shown that agents typically book customers on flights listed near the top of screens.

Trader sanctions don't indicate degree of abuse

WASHINGTON (AP) — A huge jump in disciplinary actions at the Chicago Board of Trade and Chicago Mercantile Exchange does not necessarily indicate the degree of abuse by commodities traders, a General Accounting Office official told Congress.

Richard Fogel, assistant comptroller general at the GAO, an agency that is an investigating and auditing arm of Congress, said results of an FBI investigation into commodities trading may give a better idea of abuse at the board and the exchange.

The testimony came late last week at the first Senate oversight hearing of the year on the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, a federal agency which faces reauthorization by Congress.

The GAO says the number of contracts traded at the Mercantile Exchange grew from 40 million in 1984 to 80 million in 1988, and at the Board of Trade from 80 million to 140 million during the same period.

In that same period, the number of traders sanctioned for violations on the floor of the Mercantile Exchange went from 13 to 105, while sanctions at the Board of Trade went from a low of eight in 1985 to a high of 32 in 1986. In 1988, the Board of Trade sanctioned 13 floor participants.

Fogel said that from 1984 to 1988, Mercantile Exchange fines for trade practice abuses were a total $3.6 million. For the same period, comparable Board of Trade fines were $811,000.

Fogel told the Senate Agriculture Committee that the figures could mean that an oversight system is working well, or that it needs improvement because it is not finding abuses or punishing offenders severely enough.

But Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., called the number of sanctions taken against traders "pitiful" compared to the volume of trading.

The number of members expelled on both exchanges averaged about two a year, Fogel said. He said that according to exchange officials, permanent expulsion or lengthy suspensions are viewed as more severe than fines because they deprive members of their livelihood.

Fogel said commission officials told the GAO that they could not comment on their involvement in identifying or investigating alleged abuses until after any indictments stemming from the FBI probe are issued.

April contract breaks $18 barrier

Oil prices picked up this morning where they left off Friday, led by a rally in the gasoline pits.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, unleaded gasoline for March delivery rose 0.37 cent to close the day at 50.11 cents a gallon after trading 79 points higher during the session.

Crude oil for April ended Friday up 24 cents at $18.07 a barrel, breaking through what analysts said was an important resistant point at $18. By midmorning today, the price had added another 18 cents to stand at $18.25

Analysts said crude prices got a boost from a short-covering rally in the oil-products pits, mainly gasoline, with brokers buying before the March contracts expire on Tuesday.

Dealers also continued to scramble to lock in fixed-volume deals before summer, said Jayne Ball, commodity oil broker and analyst with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

"People are worried about gasoline supplies and about (higher octane) regulations even though they don't take effect until May," she said.

Dollar braces for interest shuffling

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mostly lower in quiet early European trading today. Gold prices rose.

Foreign currency dealers said the market is bracing for an expected international interest rate reshuffling and a host of U.S. economic indicators due out later this week.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 126.00 yen, down 0.29 yen from Thursday's close. Japanese financial markets were closed Friday because of the state funeral of Emperor Hirohito. Later, in London, it was quoted at 126.35 yen.

In London, one British pound cost $1.7530, slightly more expensive for buyers than $1.7520 late Friday.

Bullion dealers said the dollar's softness nudged gold prices higher, but that each time gold moves up to the $391 level, profit-taking brings it back down.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $390.65 a troy ounce, up from $390.20 bid late Friday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $390.75.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.95 a troy ounce, down from Friday's $6.04.

Dow closes worst week since August

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices suffered a sharp setback Friday at the hands of rising interest rates, closing out the market's worst week in more than six months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials tumbled 43.92 points to 2,245.54, extending its loss for the week to 79.28 points.

That ranked as the average's biggest weekly decline since it fell 81.61 last August.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by nearly 4 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 327 up, 1,191 down and 443 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 160.68 million shares, up from 150.37 million in the previous session.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $39.16 billion, or 1.36 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slumped 2.37 to 161.72.

Standard & Poor's industrial index fell 5.77 to 331.33, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 4.92 at 287.13.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market dropped 3.11 to 399.96. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 321.49, down 1.74.

Darman predicts quick start to budget talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a week of tough questions over what critics see as big gaps in President Bush's 1990 spending plan, Budget Director Richard Darman expressed optimism that serious negotiations will soon begin with Congress over a compromise budget.

Darman predicted Friday that in the next two weeks the administration and congressional leaders will begin crafting a compromise budget for fiscal 1990, which begins next Oct. 1.

Democrats in Congress have insisted they want the White House to put more details about Bush's budget on the record before they enter into negotiations.

Regulators defend Third World debt policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal bank regulators, in a report to Congress, rejected charges that their policies discourage banks from forgiving part of the huge debt owed by Third World countries.

"Current regulatory policy and accounting policies have not prevented banks, that were otherwise inclined to do so, from participating in a wide range of negotiated debt reduction transactions with borrowing countries," three regulatory agencies said in a report Friday to the Senate Banking Committee.

Critics of current policy say banks should be permitted to spread the effects of recognizing losses over several years. Currently, they must reduce profits by the full amount of any addition to loss reserves.

Feds look to cut $2 billion from farm programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — No decision has been made on how to squeeze $2 billion out of farm programs to meet federal spending goals, but analysts are looking at all possibilities, Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said.

"We'll find a way to do so, because that's a requirement of the (budget) process," Yeutter told reporters Friday. "Agriculture will have to play its part in that process."

The $2 billion in cuts will have to be whittled from programs in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Union Carbide pays $465 million settlement

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Union Carbide Corp. has paid the $465 million settlement ordered by the Supreme Court for the Bhopal gas leak, but the court also began hearing a petition asking the settlement be raised to $600 million.

The Danbury, Conn.-based company made its payment Friday, four weeks ahead of the deadline imposed by the court.

Hearings began on a petition by the Association for Socio-Legal Literacy asking that compensation for the 1984 disaster, which killed more than 3,400 people, be increased to $600 million.

Co-insurance clauses can be the difference between have a house re built or coming away with a meager check, insurance experts say.

Rebuilder: One in 10 homes underinsured

HOUSTON (AP) — A Georgia widow sat crying on a tree stump in her backyard, surveying what was left of her charred home.

Even though she had homeowner's insurance, seven contractors refused to rebuild her house. The reason: It wasn't insured for enough money to rebuild it at current construction prices.

Inadequate insurance coverage is a serious problem for thousands of American homeowners, according to Nelson Bean. Bean's catastrophe reconstruction company, the Evans American Corp. of Houston, volunteered to rebuild the widow's house for less than cost.

Bean says the problem exists because most people do not understand coinsurance. He says policy owners should read the fine print — before catastrophes occur.

"With proper insurance representing just 3 percent of monthly housing expenses for home buyers, there is no reason why every homeowner should not be adequately protected," says Bean, who has supervised insurance-funded reconstruction of more than 5,000 homes.

The consequences of underinsurance can be tragic. Consider the case of an elderly Tennessee woman whose lifelong home was destroyed by fire. Although Bean wanted to help her, his company was unable to bridge the gap between her insurance coverage and the cost to rebuild.

Her home, which would cost $40,000 to rebuild, was insured for $20,000, but because of a co-insurance clause, she could collect only half. So instead of having a comfortable home in which to live out her life, she was left with a $10,000 insurance check.

These experiences left a lasting impression on Bean. His company now rebuilds commercial and industrial losses rather than single-family homes, but Bean continues to warn homeowners against the hazards of underinsurance.

Although the Insurance Information Institute estimates that 95 percent of homeowners carry household insurance, Bean conservatively estimates that about 10 percent of all homes are underinsured. His estimate is based on nearly a decade of experience in meeting homeowners sorry to learn that their insurance alone cannot replace their homes.

Bean says underinsured homeowners face some very unpleasant choices. They must pay the difference between insurance and replacement or settle for less of a home. Some, like the Tennessee woman, are unable to rebuild.

Bean says the most common mistake homeowners make when buying insurance is failing to read and understand the co-insurance clause.

The co-insurance clause states that the homeowner must insure the home for a certain minimum amount of the replacement value, usually 80 percent, before the insurance company will pay full replacement cost. If the home is insured for less than the co-insurance limit, the company will pay only that percentage of the cost for repairs.

For example, if a $100,000 house is insured for $50,000 — 50 percent of replacement value — the insurance company will only pay 50 percent of the replacement cost, or $25,000, if the house is destroyed.

Bean says most homeowner policies feature co-insurance clauses, the insurance industry's way of sharing the risk with homeowners who do not buy sufficient insurance.

"Most homeowners have no idea what the co-insurance clause is until their house is damaged," Bean says. "They thought they had made careful preparations, and then they are shocked to find out that they face serious additional expenses."

He adds that most reputable insurance agents will try to explain the importance of co-insurance to consumers, but insurance companies cannot force people to buy adequate coverage. Some homeowners understand the dangers of insuring under the co-insurance limit but take the risk anyway to save a few hundred dollars in premiums, Bean says.

How much is enough?

HOUSTON (AP) — Tips for homeowners to determine the actual amount of insurance needed:

■ Base coverage on the home's current replacement value. Replacement value is what it would cost to rebuild today. It is not the same as market value or purchase price. Replacement value does not include the cost of land, which does not burn up or blow away.

■ Update coverage annually to allow for inflation in construction materials and labor. A local building contractor or insurance agent can be a good source of information.

■ When the replacement value of the home is determined, add at least 10 percent for the costs of reconstruction, which is proportionately more expensive than new construction. Demolition and clearing costs alone can add 8 to 10 percent.

■ Take steps to avoid preventable catastrophes such as fires by installing smoke detectors and removing fire hazards. Organizations such as the Insurance Information Institute are excellent sources of information on home safety.

Buyers check home, inspectors for flaws

By ANDREE BROOKS
New York Times News Service

Evaluating the qualifications of a home inspector has never been easy.

And it may become even more difficult in the coming months as professional and trade groups battle over who is more competent to make inspections.

There are no formal college degree programs for home inspectors.

Nor do they have to be licensed by the state, a requirement that usually entails taking an examination.

Theoretically, anyone can set up shop as a home inspector. And as more people do just that, professional engineers are increasingly insisting that they alone have completed the rigorous formal training needed to do competent inspections.

"There was this one guy who said a house was sliding downhill," said Warren Cronacher, an engineer from Rockville Centre, N.Y.

"The sellers lost the sale. It was a totally incorrect call. The stoop had settled."

Members of the American Society of Home Inspectors say they are being maligned.

They maintain that the educational and practical requirements of the organization are just as rigorous and perhaps even more meaningful than those of an engineer.

They say the tests given to prospective members examine knowledge directly related to home inspections rather than covering the broader background of a professional engineer.

The independent contractors and remodelers who also handle home inspections say they are equally qualified because they have spent their lives working on houses, and thus have the most experienced eye.

Although inspections are not required by law, most home buyers today have them done, to check on everything from structural integrity to termites.

In the last three years the controversy over who should perform inspections has intensified, as licensing boards of four states — Colorado, New York, Ohio and Washington — issued policy statements suggesting that the inspection of any building, including single-family homes, constitutes the practice of engineering and is therefore limited to state-certified engineers.

More states are expected to follow suit.

What does this mean for the consumer?

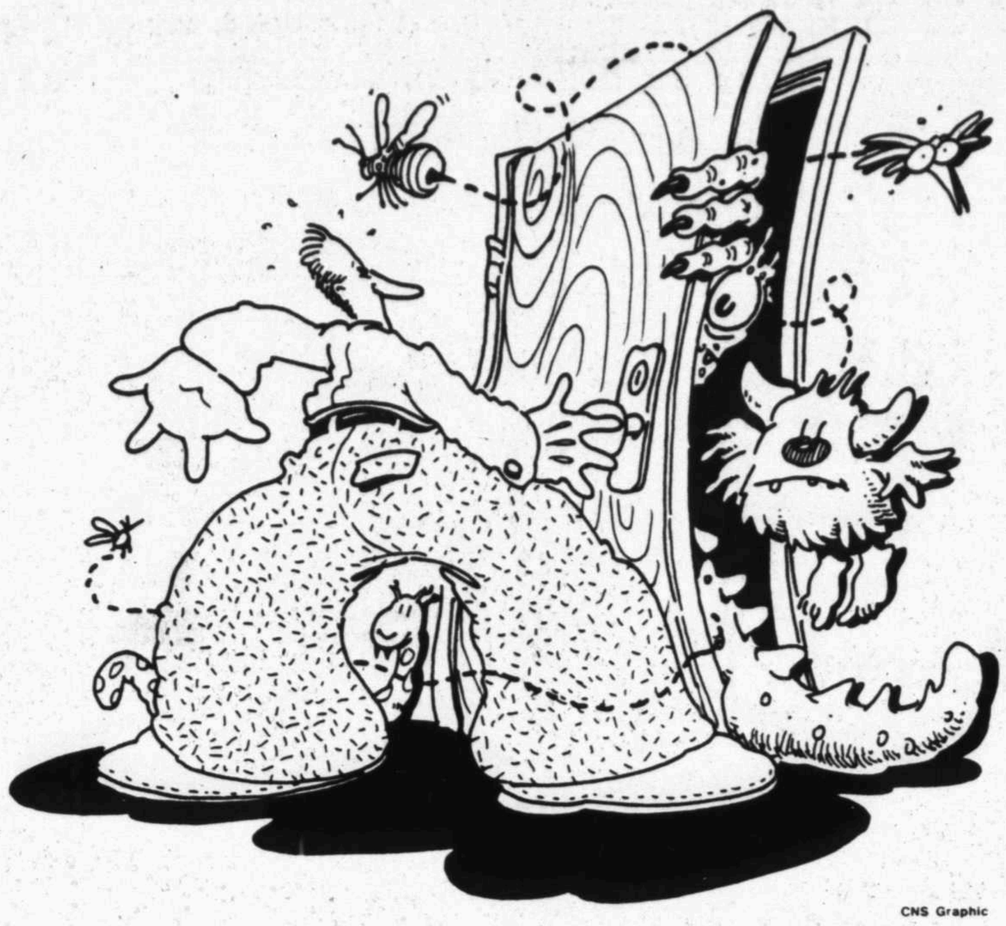
First, it is important for buyers, sellers and even brokers who make referrals, to understand that such statements do not imply a change in the law.

"There is no attempt to interrupt the right of anyone to do business," said Douglas Hasbrouck, executive secretary of the New York State Board of Engineers and Land Surveyors, which issued its statement on Dec. 3.

"What we said is not legally binding."

Rather, he said, the aim was to help the board and its staff members to investigate consumer complaints better by more clearly differentiating between legal and illegal practices.

Only a state-certified engineer, for example, has a right to prescribe corrective measures for a structure; everyone else is restricted to comments on the visual appearance of various parts or systems, and prescribing remedies without state certification is a felony.



CNS Graphic

A home inspector might only note that a certain beam looks "deteriorated"; an engineer may offer his professional opinion as to whether that deterioration is significant and even the type of correction that might be needed.

Comments on visual condition, the home inspectors say, were all they ever included in their reports.

"We regularly referred a buyer to an engineer if a more detailed evaluation was necessary," said Cole Greenberg, president of the New York chapter of ASHI.

The danger, the inspectors say, is that policy statements will persuade the public to use only professional engineers, even though home inspectors provide an important service.

If that happens, they say, the cost of an inspection could increase sharply if there were not enough professional engineers to meet the demand.

Besides, Greenberg said, hiring a professional engineer to inspect a single-family house is "like hiring a surgeon to put on a Band-Aid: it's unnecessary."

It now costs about $300 to have the average three-bedroom suburban house inspected, and everyone in the business tends to charge a similar price to remain competitive.

Cronacher, however, suggests that there is a difference among inspections.

A report from an engineer, he said, is more comprehensive because it is allowed to include an evaluation and a recommendation for remedial action.

The controversy over who should perform inspections has intensified, as licensing boards of four states — Colorado, New York, Ohio and Washington — issued policy statements suggesting that inspection single-family homes constitutes the practice of engineering and is therefore limited to state-certified engineers.

One from a home inspector is not. Thus, someone who uses a home inspector may have to contract for a further inspection from an engineer if the first look turns up a problem.

But Harry S. Rosenthal, general counsel to ASHI, noted that the official designation of professional engineer, which allows someone to put the initials PE after his name, covers a multitude of disciplines, many not directly related to a residential structure.

The National Society of Professional Engineers confirmed that its 75,000 members include civil, structural, mechanical, industrial, electrical and hemical engineers, among others, all of whom may use the PE designation and many of whom handle home inspections.

It is necessary to delve into an engineer's background, said Arthur Schwartz, the society's general counsel, to determine the education and experience he or she brings to a job.

All members of the society must have a bachelor's degree in an engineering specialty, have four years of practical experience and have passed a state licensing exam in a discipline.

The president of the American Society of Home Inspectors, David Surette, maintains that engineers are lobbying for the new policy statements because, "We are making so many inroads into the business and they are getting upset."

Although it is too early to tell what difference the more restrictive policy statement will make in New York State, it has had an impact in Colorado, which adopted the wording in March 1984.

Skip Campbell of Denver, ASHI chapter president at that time, said the main difficulty lay in explaining to real estate brokers, who traditionally made the referrals to home inspectors, what the statement actually meant.

Many mistakenly assumed the Colorado state licensing board's position paper was a new law, and business among ASHI members dropped 20 percent, Campbell said, adding, "We had to do a lot of work to get everyone to understand that nothing had really changed."

NATION IN BRIEF

Appeal begins in Marine case

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — An officer charged in the death of a Marine corporal who was abandoned in the desert has been convicted of disobeying an order, sentenced to four months in the brig and dismissed from the Corps.

First Lt. Allen Lawson, 25, was sentenced Saturday in the death last year of Lance Cpl. Jason Rother, 19, of Minneapolis, who was left in the Mojave desert when maneuvers ended. Rother was not reported missing for nearly two days.

Search teams found only his equipment and an arrow made of stones at his post, and his remains were discovered Dec. 4.

A military jury of eight officers found Lawson disobeyed an order to post road guides in pairs and to submit a list of the guides to the officer charged with picking up the Marines.

He was found innocent of the more serious charge of willfully disobeying the order.

Several officers in Rother's battalion were reassigned after a Marine investigation of the incident, and two sergeants who were Rother's immediate superiors were convicted by a court-martial and reduced in rank.

No further charges were expected.

The conviction will be reviewed by Major Gen. O.K. Steele, the commanding general of the 2nd Marine Division who convened the court-martial.

Thieves steal watches from museum

BALTIMORE (AP) — A collection of 18th century pocket watches that filled a case at the Baltimore Museum of Art has been stolen, officials reported.

The antique English pocket watches, valued at about $150,000, are believed to have been stolen between 3:30 p.m. and 4:15 p.m. Saturday, said Brenda Richardson, the museum's deputy director.

She said the watches, most bequeathed to the museum in 1931, are gold; many are enameled and a few decorated with diamonds or pearls, although some have imitation jewelry.

Ms. Richardson said she was optimistic about recovering them "because there was physical evidence" found by police and "because there were a lot of people in the museum."

The display case in the European decorative arts gallery was pried open. It had been "very well secured," Ms. Richardson said.

Pupils won't pretend to be criminals

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — School officials have removed from a workbook a page that asked elementary special education pupils to pretend to be criminals.

One youngster drew a picture of himself behind bars and wrote that murder was his make-believe crime.

The Fort Smith School District received a complaint about the exercise, which was deemed of questionable usefulness and will not be repeated, said deputy superintendent Johnny Owen.

Owen said the assignment was only recently brought to the district's attention. The workbook was distributed in October to five special education pupils at Sunnymede Elementary School, he said Friday.

The deleted exercise read: "Did you ever think about doing something terrible? Pretend that you did it. Describe the crime you committed, and make your own mug shot and fingerprints."

An adult found one youngster's drawing and response, and questioned Sunnymede Principal Jane Wiswall about it. Ms. Wiswall would not comment about the exercise Friday.

The exercise was contained in a work called "Anti-Coloring Book-Pad 2," which encourages creative coloring and is used as a supplemental text. No other assignments in the book were considered offensive and the book will continue to be used, Owen said.
