Public gets 'call to arms'

Midlanders don't back Clinton

By Katherine Poteet

Staff writer

In an area that carried former President Bush in the 1992 presidential election, it is not surprising that few residents have any support for President Clinton's actions since he took office 28 days ago.

Of a group of Midlanders informally polled Monday, less than half were willing to give Clinton any support.

Most were very vocal in their disappointment and disapproval of Clinton's first days, especially in the areas of gays in the military and tax increases.

"I am adamantly disappointed," said Sam Carter, store manager for Bag & Baggage of Midland. "As an ex-military man, I oppose a president who slipped out of serving, making policy for something he has no love or

U.S.' 'economic destiny at stake,' president says

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton issued an economic "call to arms" Monday night, asking Americans in a televised address to accept a painful package of tax increases and spending cuts as the price for rebuilding the nation's economy.

The president lambasted the 12 years of Republican economics and said that the stakes are high as he readies his own program. "Change this fundamental will not be easy nor will it be quick," he said. "But at stake is the control of our economic destiny."

School financing plan is to be on May 1 ballot

By John Powers

Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — A proposal to equalize financing of the state's public school system now is in the hands of Texas voters.

The Senate voted 27-4 on Monday to go along with a House-approved constitutional amendment that would allow the state to "recapture" a limited amount of local taxes from property-rich school districts to share with poor districts.

The proposed amendment will be on a statewide ballot May 1.

The Texas Supreme Court has ruled the state's public school financing system is unconstitutional because it relies on local property taxes for about half of its funding. This discriminates against school districts that do not have much valuable property to tax, the court said.

State District Judge Scott McCown has said he will impound all state school funding, effectively closing most schools, if the Legislature does not have an equal funding plan in place by June 1.

Most lawmakers contend the only options are some form of recapture; a massive consolidation of school districts; or a new taxing system, such as a state income tax, to provide the money needed to bring poor districts up to par with rich districts.

If voters approve the amendment, the Legislature would have flexibility in how it recaptures local tax money. However, the amount it could take would be limited statewide to 2.75 percent of state and local funds, or currently about $400 million out of $8 billion in total funding.

'I'm going to ... tell the world that it is an ill-conceived notion for those who would rather have junk in our schools than some of the good things that we've mandated.'

— Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur

Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, said lawmakers could approve a plan to:

■ Legalize the County Education Districts now in use, which shares property taxes among districts on a county or multi-county basis. The Supreme Court has ruled the system, which created 188 CEDs for tax purposes from the state's 254 counties, is unconstitutional be-

Hillary Clinton reshapes image of president's wife

By Paul Recer

Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Everybody was alerted, by months of newspaper, magazine and television reports, that the wife of the 42nd U.S. president would be a different kind of first lady.

Hillary Rodham Clinton has not disappointed. She's alarmed, intrigued, amazed, delighted, outraged and enthralled, but she hasn't shrunk from the challenges of her new life in the White House.

In her first weeks, Mrs. Clinton has been a whole cast of characters.

First, she was the traditional modern first lady of inauguration day, satisfying the style demands of that role with a dignified gown that pleased and a rounded hat that didn't. And the next day, she was the duti-

Employers' failure to pay Social Security may leave some workers in poverty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of people work for cash — washing dishes, harvesting vegetables, cleaning homes and office buildings. But when they retire from the nation's underground economy, there may be no monthly Social Security check to protect them from poverty.

It's not clear how many employers fail to pay Social Security taxes for their workers, although the issue is the subject of an Internal Revenue Service study. But there are signs it is a sizeable number.

The IRS estimated in 1991 that only one-fourth of an estimated 2 million household employers filed the required tax forms for their workers.

And a Social Security Administration official told congressional investigators that 1989 data showed farm employers were at least three times as likely as other employers to fail to report or to under-report their workers' earnings.

Experts say thousands of workers could wind up in

The agreement would set a new overall production level for the cartel of 23.6 million barrels a day from March through June.

Storm rips off roof of school

Associated Press

Hundreds of students took shelter Monday from high winds that ripped part of the roof off their school as a storm dumped rains in North and East Texas and produced snow in western sections of the state.

No injuries were reported at Cornerstone Christian School and King's Kids Day Care Center in Waxahachie. But winds gusted to almost 70 mph in the area south of Dallas while the National Weather Service warned of a possible tornado.

"We heard a big boom and we were running down the stairs," said student Lacretia Reader.

"We were scared. We were running all over the place," she said as another student, Kathy Reynolds, nodded in agreement.

Brent Green, a teacher, said he told his students to leave an upper floor as winds began to tear shingles off the roof.

"We were prepared. We had practiced tornado drills, so the kids evacuated the classes," said school spokesman Hank Moore. "We had them in the halls through the storm and then took them to the gym."

Moore said about 350 youths — from toddlers to eighth-grade students — were in the building as the storm struck after 8 a.m. He said the building's two floors sustained extensive water damage.

Power lines were also snapped by the winds, which were clocked at 69 mph on the Ellis County super collider construction site, said Waxahachie police officer Nita Bustamante.

She said straight-line winds caused the damage in Waxahachie, about 30 miles south of Dallas.

Several funnel clouds were sighted Monday afternoon in Anderson County, said a sheriff's dispatcher in Palestine. But no damage was reported following the sightings and NWS warnings of possible twisters in Cherokee, Henderson and Smith counties.

Weather forecasters, who had posted a tornado watch for North Texas, extended it to eastern and central parts of the state as the storm front and an accompanying low-pressure system moved eastward.

The watch, effective until 5 p.m. CST, covered 41 Texas counties in an area along and 100 miles east and west of a line stretching from southeast of Temple into Louisiana.

The weather service also posted a snow and blowing snow advisory for the northern Texas Panhandle and Oklahoma Panhandle. Freezing rain was falling in the South Plains.

Rainfall amounts from the low-pressure system exceeded one inch in parts of North Texas.

High is to be in mid-40s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-40s and northeast winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a low in the lower 30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be mostly cloudy with a high in the lower 50s.

After an overnight low of 36, Monday's high reached 66, compared to the record high for that date of 83 set in 1986. The record low was 17 set in 1936.

STATE

Diverse storms hit Texas on Monday, producing snow in the Panhandle and thunderstorms for much of the rest of the state, including 70 mph winds in parts of North Texas and funnel clouds in parts of East Texas.

In West Texas, a cold front brought snow to the Panhandle and showers and thunderstorms to other areas. Winds gusting up to 69 mph accompanied cloudy skies. Temperatures ranged from 30 at Dalhart to 76 at Sanderson.

The forecast for North Texas includes low temperatures in the 30s and 40s with cloud cover likely over the region. Highs in the 50s are expected.

Bitterly cold conditions are predicted for West Texas with snow in the Panhandle, increasing cloudiness in the Far West and partly cloudy skies in the Big Bend. Lows should drop as low as the teens in the Panhandle, while highs into the 70s are anticipated along the Big Bend of the Rio Grande.

South Texans can expect partly cloudy conditions with showers and thunderstorms, some possibly severe, in South Central and Southeast Texas. Lows in the 50s and 60s and highs in the 60s and 70s are expected.

NATION

Several storms moved across the nation Monday, bringing up to 1½ feet of snow to Arkansas, baseball-size hail to Texas and unseasonably cool weather to Hawaii.

A winter storm watch was posted for Tuesday for parts of Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia.

A warning of gale-force winds was posted for the lower Great Lakes.

At midday Monday, rain and thunderstorms reached from Mississippi to Oklahoma, while snow fell on the Tennessee Valley, parts of the lower Ohio Valley; the central Mississippi Valley; the central half of the Plains; the Rockies and higher elevations of the Southern Plateau.

About 18 inches of snow was on the ground at Mountain Home, Ark., and heavy snow in the northern and western part of the state disrupted electrical service and closed schools.

Schools also were closed in southwest and south-central Kansas, where more than 7 inches of snow fell. Up to 6 inches fell on parts of Nebraska and Oklahoma.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

CALL: President blames GOP policies

(From 1A)

"More Americans must contribute today so that all Americans can do better tomorrow," the president said in his first prime-time speech from the Oval Office.

Clinton's economic program — to be unveiled in a speech to a joint meeting of Congress on Wednesday night — will be a far cry from the middle-class tax cuts that he advocated during his campaign.

During his 11-minute preview, Clinton said he had hoped to improve education, reform health care and create jobs "without asking more of you." However, he said, "I cannot — because the deficit has increased so much, beyond my earlier estimates, beyond even the worst estimates from last year."

Promising to spread the pain among all, Clinton said 70 percent of the taxes he would propose will "fall on the shoulders of those who make more than $100,000 a year." An administration official said Clinton meant that seven out of 10 of the higher taxes would affect the wealthy — not that they would pay 70 percent of the additional burden.

The payoff from his plan, Clinton promised, will be "millions of long-term, good-paying jobs, including a program to jumpstart our economy with another 500,000 jobs in 1993 and 1994."

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole delivered a crisp response to Clinton's address, expressing skepticism that the administration was cutting spending far enough before asking for more taxes.

"We've both heard lots of speeches about 'sacrifice,' but we'll be working with you to make certain that sacrifice isn't just a presidential code word for more taxes, more spending and more mandates from Washington," Dole said. "That's the kind of sacrifice that will break the back of middle-class America, and lead us right into economic ruin."

■ Related story/7A

Clinton's plan envisions roughly $500 billion in tax increases and spending reductions on many popular programs over four years to cut the deficit. Big corporations and wealthy Americans face significant boosts in their income tax rates.

One part that will affect all Americans is a broad-based energy tax, based on the heat content of fuels, including electricity, coal, oil, natural gas and gasoline. Clinton has said the heat-content approach would be more progressive than a tax based strictly on sales.

The Oval Office appearance was part of a public relations blitz to overcome resistance in Congress and among the public. GOP leaders were sharpening their opposition in advance. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said that "when Democrats say 'sacrifice,' they really mean 'taxes.'"

Warning that special interests will try to kill his plan, Clinton said, "Those who have profited from the status quo will oppose changes we make, every step of the way. They've already lined the corridors of power with high-priced lobbyists. They are the defenders of decline, but we are the architects of the future."

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said he hoped people wouldn't rush to judgment on Clinton's program.

"I emphasized that while it's not likely that any one of us will agree with every single point in his economic program, it has to be viewed as a whole," he told reporters at an AFL-CIO meeting in Florida.

Clinton's speech amounted to a lecture on the nation's economic problems and a hint of the solutions he proposes to fix them. Using charts and graphs — much as Ross Perot did last year — Clinton blamed the woes on the policies of Ronald Reagan and George Bush.

"My message to you is clear: the price of doing the same old thing is far higher than the price of change. That's why you sent me here, not to keep this seat warm but to work for fundamental change."

Over the past 12 years, Clinton said, "the federal deficit roared out of control."

"Look at this," he said, referring to one graph. "The big tax cuts for the wealthy, the growth in government spending, and soaring health care costs, all caused the federal deficit to explode. Our debt is now four times as big as it was in 1980."

He said that as the deficit increased, "investments in the things that make us stronger, smarter and safer were neglected: less was invested in eduction, less in our children's future, less in transportation, less in local law enforcement. An awful lot of your money was wasted."

Rep. Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky., came away from a meeting with Clinton saying he expected the president to propose higher taxes on tobacco and alcohol. Clinton also is prepared to seek restrictions on Medicare payments for doctors and hospitals but not increase premiums for the elderly.

Monday night, Clinton promised to "chart a course that will enable us to compete and win."

He said, "My message to you is clear: The price of doing the same old thing is far higher than the price of change."

"If you join with me, we can create an economy in which all Americans work hard and prosper," the president said. "This is nothing less than a call to arms to restore the vitality of the American dream."

The Clinton plan calls for spending increases to stimulate the economy: $15 billion for an investment tax credit to help small companies buy new machinery, and $16 billion for job-intensive projects like highway and bridge construction. There also will be increased spending for child immunization programs and Head Start.

Clinton wants Congress to approve the $31 billion stimulus plan within three to four weeks, and then enact the remainder of his economic program by August, said spokesman George Stephanopoulos.

In a fast followup to his Wednesday night speech, Clinton will make a two-day speaking trip beginning Thursday in St. Louis, Mo. He'll also stop in Chillicothe, Ohio, and the Hudson Valley area of New York, probably Hyde Park. On Sunday he'll fly to the West Coast to promote his plan. His Cabinet also will barnstorm the country; the plan calls for each secretary to return to his or her home state. For example, Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen will address the Texas Legislature; Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy will address the Mississippi Legislature.

Stephanopolous said Clinton's plan would contain about 150 specific spending cuts. "This is going to be more spending reductions than any package in the past," he said. "He's serious about cutting spending."

attachment to. And, he is not in tune with what the public wants on this.

"He has also gone back on his promise not to tax the middle class," Carter said. "That's how he got the middle-class vote, by saying that only the rich will be taxed. And, now he is asking the middle class to accept increased taxing. I didn't vote for him, but I told myself that I would give him 100 days. And, now, only one-tenth of that, you can already see where we're going. He is a very clumsy president."

Don Hale, production foreman for Wagner and Brown, agreed.

"I don't like him," he said. "He is doing a very, very poor job. He has gone back on all his promises, except for gays in the military, which I oppose. Yeah, he made sure he kept his promise to them."

Hale's wife Lisa, a homemaker, said she thought Clinton was "doing fair," but didn't give the president her full support.

"He hasn't lived up to everything he said he was going to do," she said.

"He's doing pitiful," said James Van Stavern, an interior designer. "Absolutely, perfectly pathetic. He is not living up to anything he said he would do."

Greg Raines, a Foot Locker employee, said that although he had not really kept up with the president's actions since the election, he was opposed to gays in the military.

"He's running the nation like he ran Arkansas, and that's not saying much," said Jerry Norman, who is self-employed. "He's raising taxes and putting gays into the military. It's like a slap in the face to conservatives. Instead of focusing on the economy, he goes for things like abortion, gays and repeals everything Bush put in place. I give him a big, fat zero."

Ron Stringer, store manager for Radio Shack of Midland, also had little sympathy for Clinton.

"Everyone predicted that he would be wishy-washy and he has been," he said. "He needs to take a stand on something."

Suzanne Hamilton, a waitress at Golden Dragon, disagreed with Clinton's actions on gays in the military.

"We need to go back to the Bible on that," she said. "It's a tough issue that he's not willing to face."

Although David Cavitt, a Region 18 Education Services Center employee, said he was disappointed in Clinton's initial days, he was willing to give him the benefit of the doubt.

"I think he is moving too fast on some things, but then again, he is awfully young," he said.

Cavitt's wife Martha, a homemaker, agreed.

"I disappointed too, but I think we need to give him a chance," she said. "He hasn't been in the office long enough."

"Given the circumstance, he's doing about as well as could be expected," said Gerald Ritchie, associate regional director for the education services center. "He has inherited a big mess and he has a lot of housecleaning to do."

"He's doing pretty good overall," said Sandra Ritchie, a homemaker and Ritchie's wife. "I'm glad to see that he is finally concentrating on the deficit."

"Jobs are up," said Ricky Martinez, a Foot Locker employee. "I'm satisfied with that."

"I think he has a lot of good ideas that he is trying to put into place," said Lisa Muniz, a homemaker. "I'm optimistic about him."

The new accord would mark the first time since the gulf crisis that Kuwait has allowed its output to be reduced. The country's oil industry was virtually destroyed after being overrun by Iraq in August 1990.

OPEC delegates conceded that their work may not boost prices much. But they said it should at least hold them steady in the coming months.

WIFE: Hillary Clinton portrays many roles

ful wife of a populist leader, shaking hands for hours as an endless line of people snaked its way through the house at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

She was the first hostess at a White House dinner for 130. Photographers snapped her picture checking place settings in the presidential banquet room, a chore every housewife in America understood. And for her first interview after inauguration, she talked not of some grand government plan or complex issue of the day, but of food and cooking.

She was also "Hillary" to her "Bill." The presidential pair whispered and laughed together in captured moments of privacy on a public stage, and one Sunday morning they walked, hand-in-hand, into church, just like couples all over the land.

Lawyer Hillary quickly signaled that hers was not to be only a traditional first lady tenure. She moved into one of the power offices of the West Wing. And it became clear that when Americans elected Clinton, they chose a team, not just a man.

The president put his wife in charge of the administration's health care reform, and one fine morning, Mrs. Clinton headed to the Capitol. She went from office to office, and her presence and mission rumbled through those corridors like a thunderbolt of change.

One senator called her performance "extraordinary" and exclaimed: "It's the first time in 19 years that I really think something's going to happen on health care." Clinton had named his wife to head an administration task force charged with recommending a new national health-care policy within a hundred days.

Mrs. Clinton's role has caused arched eyebrows in a capital city that has been known to occasionally bathe in gossip, rumor and controversy.

Clinton's top spokesman, George Stephanopoulos, was asked during a national television interview show Sunday whether Mrs. Clinton was a more powerful force than Vice President Al Gore in the new administration.

"Oh, the vice president and the president work closely together every single day," Stephanopoulos responded on NBC's "Meet The Press."

"He (Gore) is clearly the constitutional officer in charge of the responsibilities he's been given by the president," the spokesman said. "The president also relies on the first lady, but I don't know that I would get into that kind of a choice."

Mrs. Clinton also brought a first-ever White House connection to the "good ole' girl network," the growing cadre of savvy, accomplished women who are claiming a greater share of America's management. She helped her husband plug into that network to fill his Cabinet. Her desk became one of the key stops on the way to high government service. Candidates often were interviewed first by Clinton and then by Mrs. Clinton.

Though the system stumbled in a search for an attorney general, the final presidential Cabinet now holds more women than any before.

Last week, Mrs. Clinton became the compassionate leader, a steely advocate for a people in trouble. She journeyed to Pennsylvania and talked to ordinary folks about what was wrong with the nation's health care system.

There was, among the citizens, a "growing sense of personal vulnerability and personal insecurity because of the way our health care system has failed us," she said.

Though she warned that "there are people and interests in this country who do not want change," there was an aura of resolve that, in fact, change would come.

Hillary Rodham Clinton also had one other role, usually played far from public view.

She's "Mommy" to Chelsea, a 12-year-old suddenly thrust into national view. Mrs. Clinton helped her daughter get settled in a school that is strange and new and far from Chelsea's best friends in Arkansas. And Mrs. Clinton was there for Chelsea's first game on her new soccer team. It was a 4-1 triumph.

Published comment about Chelsea's looks sparked a roar from the first mom. "It's sad," said Mrs. Clinton in a Redbook interview, "that people don't have anything better to do than be mean to a child."

Mrs. Clinton has also played mother, in a way, with people in the White House, ordering changes she believes are good for them. She banned smoking and ordered menu changes that put more nutritious food on the White House tables.

The many roles of Hillary Rodham Clinton have not pleased everyone. Some people have been skeptical, saying she is not a Superwoman and shouldn't try to be. Some believe it improper for Clinton to give his wife such a prominent role in government.

Some are actually enraged. Sir Bernard Ingham, who was press secretary to Margaret Thatcher when she was prime minister of England, called Mrs. Clinton "the unacceptable face of nepotism."

But polls suggest most Americans are pleased and fascinated with Mrs. Clinton and the new image she brings to the job of first lady.

A Gallup Poll taken for CNN and USA Today showed that 67 percent of 1,001 Americans surveyed said they had a favorable opinion of Mrs. Clinton.

That, by the way, was two points better than her husband scored on the same question.

PAY: There's a lot of cheating, official says poverty when they retire because their employers failed to report some — or any — of their earnings to the government. Social Security retirement benefits are based on a worker's lifetime, reported earnings.

(From 1A)

"There is an awful lot of cheating going on," says Dan Schulder, legislative director for the National Council of Senior Citizens. "It's scandalous."

Commerce Secretary Ron Brown and Zoe Baird, President Clinton's first nominee for attorney general, called attention to the situation when they acknowledged they had not paid Social Security taxes for their domestic help.

But other occupations — farmworkers, day-laborers, janitors, restaurant and hotel help, some construction workers — are also affected by employers who fail to pay taxes on their workers' earnings. Many are immigrants, people of color, or people who don't speak English, experts say.

"It's a class issue as well as a racial issue," Schulder says. "It's one of the messy, dirty little secrets of our society."

Under the law, an employer who pays a worker more than $50 in any quarter of the year also owes Social Security and Medicare taxes. The employer and the employee each are required to pay 7.65 percent of wages, although some employers pay the full amount.

It takes roughly 10 years in the work force to qualify for a Social Security pension, and lesser time to qualify for disability or survivor's benefits. The maximum monthly retirement benefit for an individual is $1,128 and the average check is $653.

Social Security used to pay a minimum benefit of $122 a month, but the Reagan administration and Congress eliminated that in a cost-cutting move in the early 1980s.

The biggest checks go to middle- and upper-income workers. But the benefit formula actually is skewed to provide a more generous return to low-wage workers in comparison to taxes paid.

A full-time worker who retired this year at 65 after a lifetime of minimum wage work would qualify for a monthly Social Security check of $496.

Low-income retirees or disabled workers may also qualify for Supplemental Security Income (SSI), a welfare program. But the benefits, even when combined with food stamps, often are not enough to pull someone out of poverty.

"There's no doubt about the fact that people on SSI are the poorest of the poor," says Arthur Flemming, chairman of the Save our Security Coalition. "They have to decide each day whether to spend the small amount of cash that they have for food or housing or clothing."

The maximum monthly SSI payment is $434 and the average is $362, although some states may supplement that amount.

Not all needy retirees or disabled workers, particularly those in rural America and those who do not speak English, are aware that they may be eligible for SSI, the General Accounting Office told Congress last year.

The agency said hired farmworkers are especially at risk of not getting Social Security benefits or of receiving smaller checks than they should.

Flemming, who was secretary of health, education and welfare under President Eisenhower, says several million people are eligible but don't receive SSI benefits.

SSC: Group to determine extent of interest in project

(From 1A)

They will attend the monthly breakfast at Midland College for small and minority owned businesses, and an afternoon reception at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's Center for Energy and Economic Diversification.

Depending on the degree of local concern, the commission may return to Midland in April for a conference to inform businesses "how to get to the table, how to get to play" a part in the super collider project, Moore said.

"I expect there will be enough interest to do that," Moore said. "We would like to come back and put on a program."

Although the majority of contracts for the superconducting super collider, located in Ellis County about 30 miles south of Dallas, have been awarded in the five-county surrounding area, "that doesn't mean they have a lock on contracts," Moore said.

The tentative conference will provide one-on-one contact with business representatives to provide information on the contract process and answer questions.

"This is the largest construction project in the country, maybe the world," Moore said.

"It is projected . . . that the construction will be done into the year 2000," he said. "And we expect activity to peak in 1996-'97."

"There are thousands of procurement actions each year from large to small," he said.

Of the estimated $8.2 billion cost of the project, roughly 60-70 percent of that will be awarded for contracts, Moore said. In the first three-quarters of last year, $52.2 million in contracts were awarded by the super collider laboratory.

Contracts range from the actual construction work to development of technologies to providing supplies.

The super collider is a particle accelerator that will be housed in a 54-mile oval tunnel and used to develop new technologies through research.

VOTE: Senators OK plan

cause it represents a statewide property tax.

■ Create a statewide recapture system where money from property-rich districts would go directly to the state and then be redistributed.

■ Combine the two ideas, with a system to share money within each county, and an additional statewide recapture from the 30 or 40 richest counties in the state.

Senators also approved a separate amendment that is part of the House package, although Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, expressed strong reservations about it.

The amendment would allow schools to ignore state mandates, such as pupil-teacher ratios, if the Legislature does not provide the money to pay for them.

Parker said there are schools that still don't offer the essential courses required by state law.

"I'm going to vote for the package because I've got to gag down that part to try to keep the schools open . . . but I'm going to fight . . . that second part (in the statewide election) and tell the world that it is an ill-conceived notion for those who would rather have junk in our schools than some of the good things that we've mandated," Parker said.

Several senators said they agreed with Parker, and would vote for the amendments because they represent the only politically feasible compromise the Legislature would approve.

Even with recapture, the richest districts would be able to spend $1,500 to $2,000 more per student than the poorest districts, said Sen. Jim Turner, D-Crockett.

Turner said the California courts recently ruled that state's school system must reduce its disparity in spending per pupil to no more than $200.

Hope is best medicine

Associated Press

Life deals unfair blows — catastrophes without solutions such as chronic illness or disability — for which the best medicine is hope.

A disabled child, an alcoholic husband, a mother with Alzheimer's, yourself diagnosed with an incurable disease, or the loss of a job, home or lover — these are things, Sondra Forsyth wrote in an article in the current issue of Cosmopolitan, that will not yield to quick-fix formulas.

Once you have admitted that your problem is more than temporary, the first step toward the rewarding life you deserve is to recapture hope. That's the view of Charles R. Snyder, a psychologist at the University of Kansas in Lawrence, who said, "I'm not talking about optimism. That's nothing but a vague, almost childlike belief everything is going to turn out all right. High-hope people, on the other hand, have not only the determination to succeed but a clear idea of the practical steps necessary to accomplish what they've set out to do. You might say optimists have plenty of fuel, but the truly hopeful have a full tank and a road map."

DEAR ABBY

Warning: Men get breast cancer too

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: (I never thought I'd be writing that!) I am a man in my late 60s, average in most respects — with one exception: I am recovering from a radical mastectomy as a result of breast cancer.

Van Buren

It started with a lump in my right breast, which proved to be malignant. My oncologist said that approximately 5 percent of all breast cancers occur in males. They are often fatal for two reasons: (1) Very few men are aware that males are subject to breast cancer, and therefore do not check themselves for lumps as women do. (2) The lump is usually ignored until it spreads beyond control.

If you print this warning, it could save many lives. You may use my name. — PAUL B. HOOD, LANTANA, FLA.

DEAR MR. HOOD: How good of you to write! Thank you for planting that idea in the minds of many who otherwise would not have given it a second thought. Good luck to you.

Gentlemen, when you have your next checkup, mention this to your physician.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single mother with two small children to support, so I took a second job as a waitress in a very popular, high-class restaurant.

We were exceptionally busy one evening and I had two tables — both with three people at the table.

One party of three ordered very expensive dinners, which included the best wine in the house, and they ran up a really big bill. The other party of three had an average-sized bill.

Well, the party that had the really expensive dinners had to get to the theater, so they asked me to give them their bill in a hurry. By mistake, because I was so rushed, I gave them the bill for the table of three who had ordered the cheaper dinners. Abby, they paid the bill and walked out, knowing full well that the check they were paying was not theirs!

To make a long story short, because I didn't want my boss to know I had made such a dumb mistake, I paid the difference out of my own pocket. Since I was so new on the job, I was afraid I might have been fired if I couldn't even keep the checks straight.

It's too late for me to do anything about this, but just about everybody in this town reads "Dear Abby," so I hope you publish this so those people will see it. I want them to know that they ate their dinner at the expense of my children. — LOST OUT IN LONG ISLAND

DEAR LOST OUT: The chances are small that the people for whom this is intended will see it, but it may remind all hurried servers to make sure they present the check to the proper table.

DEAR ABBY: A simple cure for a barking dog: Spray the dog with a water hose. It may take more than once, but they usually learn quickly.

I learned this from a professional dog trainer when I had my own puppy. — PENELOPE TOLVA, PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR PENELOPE: This will work fine for your own dog, but how about a neighbor's dog that's too far to reach with a water hose, but can be heard clearly in the middle of the night — four houses away!

For Abby's favorite family recipes, send a long, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet No. 1, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Home cooking avoided by offspring

By Erma Bombeck

I have always been stunned when a restaurant posts a sign that reads "HOME COOKING."

Bombeck

Half of the population would eat at home if they thought it was that great, and the other half doesn't even know what home cooking is.

Eating at home is something I could never get our kids excited about. The biggest form of punishment I could threaten them with was, "Shape up or I'll send you to bed WITH dinner!"

For years, mothers thought they could actually compete with fast foods. I could have propped my mouth open with a fork and had my kids yell their orders into it, but it still wouldn't have been the same. They still would have wanted to eat out.

Even the best cook in the world can't duplicate a hot dog served from a trailer at the ballpark, dropped in the dirt and drowned in watered-down mustard.

I can't remember when we started to refer to eating out as a "treat," but I remember why. Home cooking fell out of favor because stupid rules were enforced at the family dinner table. Children were not allowed to pull up a chair for the dog at dinner. He had to hide under the table and lick their fingers every chance he got.

Parents lost it when their children tried to have fun with their food, such as dangling a french fry from their noses or hanging an onion ring over each ear. Children couldn't spit on their food if they didn't like it. They had to say, "No, thank you, I don't like zucchini."

Children realize early that ambiance is work. There are dishes and silverware to wash and dry, napkins to fold and crumbs to sweep up. With fast foods, you just bag it and send it to that big landfill in the sky.

I have grown kids who eat breakfast in their cars, fax orders for lunch and go out to dinner. Their refrigerators hold film; they store tennis balls in their microwaves.

I gave one of them a wok for Christmas. "What's it for?" he asked.

"You can dump a lot of vegetables and a little meat in it and make dinner," I said.

"Where are the vegetables and the meat?" he asked, rummaging through the tissue.

"You have to buy them."

"At the same place where I can carry out?"

"I suppose so."

During a recent visit, I lifted the lid of his wok. His unpaid bills were stored there.

Children advised on 'street' safety

Associated Press

The following are some "street safe" tips for kids from Flora Colao, director of the Greenwich House Children's Safety Project in New York City:

■ Keep your backpack closed.

■ Don't scrounge in your backpack for a key or other objects when on the street. You are a better target if you looked preoccupied.

■ Wear your backpack on the front of your body, if it makes you feel more comfortable.

■ If you think you're being followed, go into a store. Tell the store owner right away.

■ If you're stopped on the street, start yelling. "Get the police!" "Get me help!" "I'm being followed." "Let me in!" Don't ask, tell!

■ If your assailant does not have a weapon, throw down your backpack and run.

■ If your assailant does have a weapon, talk softly and try to stay calm. Tell them what you are doing at all times.

Nation's economy is hard pill to swallow

Wednesday will be President Bill Clinton's moment of truth. That's when he's scheduled to reveal to the American people his plan for the economy, and to a great degree it could determine his political future.

Americans have been uncertain about the economy for months. During the Christmas season, shoppers seemed to draw some relief from Clinton's election and his claim that he was a president of change. Americans had overwhelmingly shown at the polls in November that change was needed by picking Clinton.

After he was in the Oval Office and his realization of what he could actually accomplish in the face of the soaring federal deficit was sobered by hard, cold facts, Clinton began cutting himself loose from his earlier talk of a middle class tax cut. Administration officials have even begun to talk about other ways to deal with the economic crunch such as raising the retirement age for Social Security benefits, but even mentioning Social Security is enough to increase the number of letters flowing to the White House every day.

The hard reality Clinton is encountering is not going to disappear, as well he knows. What's more, the economic plan he will unveil Wednesday is going to anger and disenfranchise a number of Americans no matter how he devises it. The simple fact is that the United States Congress has been spending more money than the nation takes in each year in tax receipts — running up an annual deficit in the billions of dollars — and now there is a $3 trillion public debt. And the Congress is still spending more than the nation takes in.

In a nutshell, there is no painless way to resolve the nation's economic problems. Clinton's economic plan should make that clear. He should tell the nation it's time to pay the fiddler.

Clinton's plan will no doubt be bitter medicine, but as long as it is fair Americans can live with it. If it's not fair, Clinton will feel the wrath of the American public sooner than he ever expected.

Texas teen-agers face silence on sex

The knee-jerk reaction to the future of sex education in Texas' schools isn't helpful. We're seeing a lot of it lately in reaction to Senate Bill 20, which already appears to be dead in the water because of the ill-advised public outcry against it.

Those who oppose the concept of sex education are really saying, "I don't teach this in my own home, and I'll be danged if I want it taught in the schools, either, because I'm afraid those teachers will teach my kids something I can't or won't teach them about, anyway."

The dichotomy of the situation is that the schools wish parents would discuss these topics with their children. Teachers don't want the job. Boards of education don't want to spend countless hours in fruitless and no-win discussions over whether these topics should be taught. Parents in the United States don't want the job either, and many are ill-equipped for the work in any case.

So what's a teen-ager to do? No wonder so many are confused about their values. Education — the facts frankly but tastefully presented — is the only way American society can stop the terrible phenomenon of children having children, millions contracting a fatal disease, or children who are brought into the world only to suffer being unloved, unwanted or abused.

Cisneros gives plan for housing homeless

Congratulations to new Housing and Urban Development Secretary Henry Cisneros for developing a plan to use vacant federal resources to help the homeless as well as those who need low cost housing.

Under Cisneros' plan, facilities at closed military bases and other unused federal facilities would be converted to be used as housing . . .

This is particularly pleasing . . .

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Feb. 16, the 47th day of 1993. There are 318 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 16, 1862, during the Civil War, about 14,000 Confederate soldiers surrendered at Fort Donelson, Tenn. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant's victory earned him the nickname, "Unconditional Surrender Grant."

On this date:

In 1804, Lt. Stephen Decatur led a successful raid into Tripoli Harbor to burn the U.S. Navy frigate Philadelphia, which had fallen into the hands of pirates.

In 1868, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks was organized in New York City.

In 1923, the burial chamber of King Tutankhamen's recently unearthed tomb was unsealed.

In 1937, Dr. Wallace H. Carothers, a research chemist for Du Pont who invented nylon, received a patent for the synthetic fiber.

In 1945, during World War II, more than 2,000 American troops dropped onto the island of Corregidor in the Philippines.

What's delay in prosecuing 'Iraqgate'?

WASHINGTON — Did the Bush Department of Justice — eager to avoid embarrassing Saddam Hussein or his bankers in 1989 — make a conscious effort not to find out what the CIA knew about the huge fraud discovered at the Atlanta branch of the Banca Lavoro?

Safire

The staff of the Senate Select Intelligence Committee was suckered by excuses from key Justice officials that they were too busy responding to their in-house "investigator" to answer the Senate, precisely why the patsy prosecutor was hired. But its recent Senate report adds useful new evidence to the Iraqgate scandal.

"The first Justice Department request to the Intelligence Community," it says, " . . . did not go out until August 3, 1990, almost a year to the day after the raid on BNL-Atlanta."

When a career prosecutor six months earlier told Laurence Urgenson, the Bush appointee who took control of the case in Washington, "we've got to search all of the files," the Urgenson response was, "I'll let you know what I want you to do when I want you to do it."

Why the delay? Look at the date: Aug. 3 was the day after Saddam invaded Kuwait, ending Bush's courtship. Foreign policy, not a search for justice, drove this prosecution.

During the year that the attorney general's men were averting their eyes from CIA data showing BNL-Atlanta was in cahoots with Rome higher-ups.

On Nov. 17, 1989, FBI officials — employees of the Department of Justice — cautioned CIA not to give their "Rome knew" information to Justice because it would become "discoverable" in the Atlanta trial. "The defense attorneys may well request CIA files on the BNL affair," the CIA claims FBI officials said, "and claim that CIA had prior knowledge of the financing to Iraq. Especially because the U.S. attorney in Atlanta is a former CIA officer ... "

This FBI-CIA conspiracy flies in the face of a Supreme Court ruling, Brady vs. Maryland, and of Rule 3.8(d) of federal rules of professional conduct, that require the government to disclose any evidence that shows the defendant to be innocent.

One month later, the CIA agreed with the FBI not to show its evidence to the Department of Justice, noting "we have devised ways to protect our information and sources against discovery by the defendant . . . "

CIA lawyers now claim this was "an inartful reference" to anti-graymail statutes, but a second CIA message in the same month gives the lie to that: "an FBI official had recommended against submission of the report 'noting that every paragraph contains damaging information which is clearly discoverable . . . " Said the CIA supervisor, quashing the dissemination: "It's just as well to have fewer reports that are going to wind up in court."

The name for this abuse of due process is "contempt of court." FBI officials contend the documented CIA testimony is untrue."

After following the Senate report with the release of the CIA inspector general's report, the departing director of Central Intelligence, Robert Gates (who wants no aides pointing at him before a grand jury), rejected his IG's call for "appropriate disciplinary actions" and forgave everyone because Gates could see no "willful intent not to be responsive."

In the same mistakes-were-made way, a rearguard in the Justice Department issued an unsigned statement that Justice was "pleased with the results, which note no wrongdoing by Departmental personnel . . . "

Clinton sells out on 'deal' with Israel

The Clinton administration has made its first big foreign policy blunder and told its first bald-face lie to the American people.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher accepted Israel's "deal" on the Palestinians it deported last Dec. 17 and promised to protect Israel from any U.N. sanctions. That's the blunder.

Reese

Christopher said that Israel's offer to allow 101 back in now and the rest, nearly 300, a year later meets the conditions of U.N. Security Council Resolution 799 and no further discussion is necessary. That's the bald-faced lie.

Christopher is not mentally retarded. In fact, he's smart. Resolution 799, which the U.S. voted for, demands that Israel immediately allow all the Palestinians to return. Christopher knows, as does any fourth-grade student, that 101 does not equal 396 (the number left after Israel admitted 16 had been deported by mistake) and that a year from now is not immediate. Hence, he chose to lie.

Apparently, when a former president of the Israeli lobby boasted that they had Clinton in their pocket, he wasn't kidding. It's become a standard political custom, since Dwight Eisenhower, the last American president to back the U.N. instead of Israel, to sell American foreign policy in the Middle East to the Israeli lobby in exchange for campaign contributions.

Well, Clinton has made a serious blunder and the bitter irony is that, in caving in to Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin — who made a mistake and is too stubborn to admit it — Clinton has done Israel no favors.

The Clinton position undercuts not only the moral authority of his administration but the moral authority of the United Nations. It cuts the legs off of every Palestinian and Arab moderate in the Middle East, not only in the West Bank and Gaza but also in places like Egypt, Jordan, and the Gulf States. It grants a victory to Saddam Hussein, the Iranians and the Islamic extremists.

Because Clinton is too cowardly to stand up to the Israeli lobby even when the Israeli government is clearly in the wrong, as in the case of the deportees it is, the peace process will collapse and people will die.

It is bad enough for anyone to die in defense of a just cause but dying because some politician was playing ward politics with American foreign policy is about as useless a reason to die as I can imagine.

Christopher's bull not withstanding, the peace process is dead. It is simply impossible — literally impossible — for Palestinians, even though they desperately want the peace process to continue, to negotiate while the deportees are kept out and in the face of the Clinton administration's betrayal of the U.N. Security Council.

After all, the peace talks themselves are based on U.N. Security Council resolutions. If Clinton is too cowardly to enforce 799, which would cost Israel nothing, Palestinians would be foolish to believe he would back those resolutions that call for Israel to give up land in exchange for peace.

In America, the reality of politics is the enemy of hope. You keep hoping for some political leaders with integrity and backbone and they keep disappointing us. Well, there is nothing we can do about it. Money in America today is a more powerful king than old George III ever thought of being.

Don't let anyone tell you that the absence of the peace process just means the status quo ante. Since deporting the 413 Palestinians on Dec. 17, Israelis have shot to death almost 30 others, including children. One of these children was a girl 8 years old. How an 8-year-old girl clutching a little tin of milk can be seen to be a threat to a soldier in a flak jacket with an automatic weapon is beyond my ken.

But that's the reality Palestinians face in the occupied territories. They want peace through negotiations but if they are denied that, don't think for a second they will accept continued oppression.

The consequences of Clinton's sellout are ominous, tragic, and long-lasting.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Japan discovers tonic to help 'get up, go'

For years and years Americans have been looking for some sort of concoction to take as a pick-me-up.

That's how Coca-Cola became so popular in its early days.

Grizzard

Coke was supposed to be an elixir that would cure the tireds, the doldrums, and the blahs. There's the old rumor early Coca-Cola had a bit of cocaine in it. That rumor has never been confirmed, but when new Coke appeared several years ago somebody wondered, "What did they do? Take the cocaine out?"

Older Americans, like my own father, called Coca-Cola "dope." I can hear him now, "Let's go in here, son, and get us a cold dope."

Then, there was the infamous Hadacol. It was to be the remedy of all time for the puniest, and it sold like wild fire until somebody figured it was all that alcohol that made Hadacol so effective as a lifter of spirits.

Remember SSS tonic? "Say, 'Yes, yes, yes,' to SSS," went the commercial. There was also "Serutan."

"And don't forget," went its commercial, "Serutan spelled backwards is 'natures.' "

We were all trying to avoid "tired blood" back then. "Tired blood" — also known as "iron deficiency anemia," was what you took when, as they used to say back in the '50s, your "get up and go, got up and went."

Now, of course, it's health food that's supposed to cure what ails you. My problem is I don't like health food. I don't eat seaweed, trail mix, or organically grown Jerusalem artichokes. As a matter of fact, I don't eat artichokes from anywhere, even Beirut.

So what does a guy like me do when his "get up and go" says adios, when he's tired, overworked, and needs a little something to get through the rest of the day?

I think I've found it. I was going through the newspaper the other day and came across quite an intriguing article from Japan.

It was about medicinal tonics that have become a billion-dollar industry in Japan. These tonics, explained the article, are aimed at "exhausted Japanese, from children cramming for exams to executives working late on reports — in fact, anyone who seeks that extra burst of energy."

One can buy a small bottle of such tonics from anywhere from $1.20 to $24. The cheaper tonics, said the article, contain vitamins, amino acids, caffeine, and minerals such as calcium and iron.

The more expensive tonics, however, are a bit more exotic. How exotic?

Pretty damned exotic.

They include Korean ginseng and essence of the genitals of deer, turtles or snakes.

The article did not explain what exactly is the essence of the genitals of deer, turtles or snakes (I didn't know snakes had genitals) or just exactly how it is captured and how it is put into those little bottles. All of which I would really like to know. Maybe a follow-up to the article will explain.

Anyway, users of the tonics are enthusiastic about them. The article quoted a 28-year-old Japanese man who works for a computer firm as saying:

"My diet is unbalanced. I have no time for breakfast. I eat too much precooked food, and not enough vitamins or vegetables. I drink tonic to make up for my diet."

Sound like you?

It sounds like me. My breakfast usually is several cups of coffee. I love Wendy's hamburgers for lunch and you can add broccoli, asparagus and spinach to my list of hated vegetables.

I could use a few bottles of the Japanese tonics myself, but I'm not too sure about drinking anything that includes the essence of the genitals of deer, turtles and snakes.

If I drink it, would I want to run through the woods, sun on a log after a nice swim or slither through the grass with my beady eyes and darting tongue?

Or would I spend all my time chasing girl deer, turtles and snakes?

The more I think about it, all that sounds like a lot of fun, as long as I could get the taste out of my mouth.

Strategy to re-ignite economy may result in explosion of new jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just how much bang will taxpayers get for the billions of bucks President Clinton wants to spend to re-ignite the economy? If state and local officials are right, the answer is an explosion of new jobs.

Already, the competition for that one-time shot of federal money is shaping up as fierce.

As Clinton puts the final touches on his package of 1993 tax breaks and job-creating projects, potential beneficiaries are lining up with ideas on how to spend the money.

"We have the need," Nevada Gov. Bob Miller said recently. Nevada, he said, needs millions in additional federal tax dollars to repave Interstate 80 across northern Nevada, build a new bridge over the Colorado River and improve rail yards in the Reno area. And that's just for starters.

"Beyond the absolutely essential, we have the merely important," he said. The second tier of his wish list includes a high-speed rail line from California to Nevada.

Other states and cities have chimed in, too. Oregon, for example, wants "tens of millions" to replace a Civil War-era canal that is the sole source of water for the city of Albany, and $18 million for sewer improvements in East Springfield.

The political maneuvering has already begun.

Trying to elbow out the competition, Iowa Rep. Jim Nussle complained recently that Fort Wayne, Ind., was pushing for $27.1 million in federal stimulus money for park projects that include repairing a kid's petting zoo.

"I do not believe that such projects should compete with more critical highway projects at this time," Nussle said. His idea? Spend that money in Iowa to improve interstate highways and other roads.

Clinton says the economy needs priming because too many people are still out of work — despite indications the economy is slowly improving. Clinton is likely to call for a $31 billion stimulus package, about half in tax breaks for business and half in jobs-related government spending.

Administration officials have said the stimulus package could include at least $4 billion in extra spending for highways and mass transit, as well as increased spending on waste-water treatment plants and other environmental projects; more money for summer youth jobs programs and adult worker retraining; and expansions of child immunization and the Head Start pre-school programs.

The president is expected to unveil the package in his Wednesday night speech.

Whatever its components, a key element of the package is likely to be public works spending. The goal, Labor Secretary Robert Reich says, is "an immediate rush" of jobs at a time when 9 million people remain unemployed.

The administration is hearing plenty of advice on how to get that "rush."

The National Governors Association estimates that spending an extra $3 billion on highways this year would create 63,000 construction industry jobs. And another 63,000 jobs would be generated by the "ripple" effect of extra corporate profits and worker wages from the added construction activity, the governors said.

Doubters find fault in the stimulus plan.

Douglas Holtz-Eakin of Syracuse University's department of economics argues that projects to rebuild or repair roads and bridges require so much advance planning that they are inappropriate ways of jump-starting the economy.

"In the end, any stimulus effects will fade; the projects are completed and the jobs disappear," he said recently. "Thus, there is no long-run gain in the economy. Worse, if the projects are not carefully chosen, we will have squandered valuable capital in exchange for a transitory economic boost."

Local government officials say the benefits of a stimulus go beyond merely adding jobs.

The Clinton stimulus plan also is expected to include more money for Head Start, the child development program whose current budget of $2.77 billion is projected to serve 721,300 disadvantaged pre-schoolers.

Each $100 million in extra spending for this year would be expected to enable Head Start to serve an extra 20,000 children and add about 4,000 people to the Head Start staff.

Reich has said some of the stimulus spending will go to summer jobs programs for unemployed teen-agers. If that is used for the Summer Youth Employment and Training Programs run by the Labor Department, it might provide services for an extra 50,000-60,000 kids for each $100 million of extra spending, judging from the result of a $500 million expansion of the programs last year.

Studies offer hope of reduced cancer rate

BOSTON (AP) — Breast cancer is 100 times as common now as it was in the Stone Age, a finding that suggests ways to dramatically reduce the frequency of the disease, a researcher said Monday.

Studies of Stone Age child-rearing also suggest that babies who sleep with their mothers may be at lower risk of sudden infant death syndrome, a researcher said.

The studies, presented at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, are products of the new field of evolutionary medicine. Its central tenet is that human society has changed drastically since the Stone Age but human biology hasn't.

Humans evolved to function under Stone Age conditions, which persisted for millions of years, and they are now out of sync with their environment in ways that lead to disease, researchers said.

"From the standpoint of our biology and chemistry, we're still Stone-Agers," said one author of the breast cancer study, Dr. S. Boyd Eaton of Emory University in Atlanta. "But our biology operates under different circumstances from those for which it was designed."

The determinations of Stone Age lifestyles come partly from fossil evidence but mostly from studies of present-day tribes of nomadic hunter-gatherers, who are the closest modern equivalents of Stone Age humans, Eaton said.

American women currently face a one-in-eight or one-in-nine lifetime risk of developing breast cancer, according to the National Cancer Institute in Washington, D.C. The risk in Stone Age women was about one in 800 or one in 900, Eaton said

He found that women in hunter-gatherer tribes begin menstruating earlier than women in Western societies, have their first child earlier, have more children, nurse more frequently and have earlier menopause.

All of those lower breast cancer risk by reducing the rate at which certain cells divide in the mammary ducts inside the breasts, Eaton said.

While he would not recommend that American women begin having children at age 13, as Stone Age women did, he said that hormonal injections could be used to mimic Stone Age conditions, possibly producing dramatic declines in breast cancer rates.

"We by no means advocate doing this willy-nilly for all women now," he said. But studies should be done to determine the value of mimicking the hormonal changes associated with Stone Age child-rearing, he said.

Such treatment could also lower the risk of endometrial cancer and ovarian cancer, he said.

James J. McKenna of Pomona College in Claremont, Calif., another evolution medicine specialist, took his cue from the observation that mothers in hunter-gatherer tribes sleep beside their infants.

In preliminary studies of mothers and infants sleeping together and apart, McKenna found that infants who slept with their mothers slept a lighter sleep than those who slept alone, possibly making it less likely for them to die in their sleep.

"Maybe we're encouraging babies to sleep too deeply, too long, to soon," McKenna said.

Teachers' strike looms in already tense city

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nearly forgotten amid the apprehension over two racially charged trials is the prospect of a strike next week by 28,000 teachers in the nation's second-largest public school system.

The teachers union worries that a walkout Feb. 23 would put pickets and thousands of students on city streets at a time when tensions are running high.

"It has us frightened to death," said Catherine Carey, a spokeswoman for the United Teachers-Los Angeles union.

"We don't want our people hurt, we don't want anybody hurt ... especially the kids. That would be tragic. That's why we hope an agreement can be reached in the next week," she said.

If mediation efforts fail, the teacher walkout is scheduled to begin during the federal civil rights trial of four white police officers accused of beating black motorist Rodney King. That trial is now in the jury selection stage.

And it would start shortly before the state criminal trial of three black men charged with beating white trucker Reginald Denny during last year's riots.

The rioting, sparked by the acquittals of the four officers in state court, left more than 50 people dead and caused nearly $1 billion in property damage.

Police Capt. Dan Schatz said he agreed that a strike could make a tense situation worse. "The tensions in schools mirror those in the community," he said. "For that reason, we are taking all precautions."

School board member Mark Slavkin said if the union wants to prevent trouble, it should abandon plans to walk out.

"There's no way you can have a strike that will not do great damage to this city, period," Slavkin said.

The union has called the strike to protest a cumulative 12 percent pay cut the school board imposed last fall to bridge an estimated $400 million deficit in the district's $3.9 billion budget.

School officials say cuts in state funding exacerbated by California's recession left the district no choice but to cut wages for all employees, not just teachers.

"The feeling out there is the teachers are the only ones taking cuts," said schools spokeswoman Diana Munatones. "That's not the case. All employees are taking cuts. It's an economic hit for everyone."

Teachers and district officials want to avoid a replay of a bitter 1989 teachers walkout, which pitted teachers against administrators and at some schools teacher against teacher.

Hopi-Navajo boundaries dispute defies settlement

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Clarence Blackrock has lived all his 63 years in the Cactus Valley-Big Mountain community on the Hopi Indian Reservation. He considers it his home, his land, his heritage.

But Blackrock, like most of his neighbors, is a Navajo. And despite his strong religious and ancestral ties to the land, he will be forced off it unless Navajo and Hopi leaders settle their century-old dispute over use of the land.

More than three decades of legal battles among the tribes and the federal government appeared on the way to resolution in November when a federal mediator announced a settlement giving the Hopis $15 million and 500,000 acres of land off the present reservation.

But now the agreement appears to have collapsed under the weight of criticism from state and local government officials, white landowners, environmental and outdoor enthusiasts and the Navajo families.

At issue are several hundred thousand acres of high desert in northeastern Arizona. It is rugged, inhospitable land, scorched by the sun in the summer, bitterly cold in the winter.

Navajo Chairman Peterson Zah says it is a poverty-striken region of dilapidated houses where cold, rain and snow find their way inside. There are few paved roads, no running water. Schools and social services are either inadequate or nonexistent.

But Blackrock and the 250 or so Navajo families who occupy the land are unwilling to leave.

"It is our ancestral land, our birthplace," Blackrock said through an interpreter during a recent congressional hearing. "All we want is to live the lives that our forefathers taught us."

The latest proposed settlement, reached during months of secret negotiations, would give the Hopis $15 million from the federal treasury plus two ranches consisting of 500,000 acres of private, state and federal land south of the Grand Canyon.

In exchange, the Navajo families would be given 75-year leases on the Hopi land.

Student doctors file appeal for reinstatement of surgeon

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Student doctors appealed Monday for the reinstatement of transplant pioneer Dr. John Najarian as surgery department chairman at the University of Minnesota medical school.

The surgeon who saved the life of little Jamie Fiske with a pioneering liver transplant operation a decade ago was ousted last week in the wake of accusations he mismanaged a transplant drug program.

About half of the university's 105 resident student doctors held a news conference after an hourlong meeting with university president Nils Hasselmo, who stood by his decision to remove Najarian after 25 years in the job.

"We want the people of Minnesota to know that the loss of Dr. Najarian's leadership jeopardizes the future of the surgical training program at the University of Minnesota," chief surgery resident Jaime Mayoral said. "He is the main teacher. He is the one we're here for."

Najarian, 65, has said he will continue doing surgery, research and teaching at the university.

The world-renowned surgeon began developing the experimental anti-rejection drug Minnesota Antilymphocyte Globulin, or MALG, before he came to the University of Minnesota in the mid-1960s.

MALG is made from blood taken from horses that have been injected with human white blood cells. Used after organ transplants, it helps keep the patient's immune system from attacking and destroying the transplanted organ.

The university for years failed to comply with Food and Drug Administration requirements to get the drug approved, and last summer the FDA halted all sales of MALG.

There are also allegations the university made huge profits from the $10 million-a-year sales of the drug, which it produced for 150 transplant centers around the country.

Richard Condie, who headed the MALG program, was fired last fall after university auditors discovered he had received about $62,000 from the sale of a MALG byproduct to a Canadian company. He is challenging his dismissal and denies any wrongdoing.

Najarian has said he deserved to be removed as head of the MALG transplant program because the problems occurred on his watch, but said his removal as surgery department chairman was too harsh.

Under FDA rules, Najarian was the "primary investigator" who ultimately was responsible for ensuring the drug was used properly.

In a letter to Hasselmo, the student doctors said they fear Najarian's ouster will hurt the school's ability to attract top-notch residents and faculty and that the quality of health care in Minnesota will suffer.

"It's been our position all along that it's going to take public opinion to change this situation," surgery resident Anders Ulland said.

Navy, Marines brace for Tailhook sex abuse scandal report

WASHINGTON (AP) — As it braces for the release of the Pentagon inspector general's report on the Tailhook sex abuse scandal, the Navy and Marine Corps have quietly laid the groundwork for dealing with the report's complex legal fallout.

The report is expected to be so explosive in nature — and detailed in its findings of sexual misbehavior and other misconduct — that scores of officers are likely to be referred to courts martial or recommended for a series of lesser disciplinary proceedings.

The report, by Pentagon Inspector General Derek J. Vander Schaaf, will deal with the Tailhook convention in Las Vegas in 1991, where several dozen women complained they were groped and fondled by Navy and Marine Corps aviators. The report, expected to be released by the end of this month, is also supposed to take up any attempts to cover up misconduct that might have taken place.

The charges could prove devastating to the highest ranks of the service if senior admirals are accused of failing to halt the tawdry activity that had been known to have taken place for years at the convention.

"It's going to be ugly, no doubt about it," said one senior officer whose own boss could be among those targeted.

The Navy and Marine Corps have each chosen a high-ranking officer to decide whether the cases against individuals named in the report should be sent through an administrative process convened by an individual commander — known as a "captain's mast."

A court martial is called to try the most serious charges — and is automatically required in the case of felonies. A captain's mast deals with non-criminal acts that usually involve disciplinary matters.

The establishment of the so-called "central convening authority" for each service is to ensure a fair and equitable treatment for each of the accused, Navy officials said.

The commander of the Navy's surface ships in the Atlantic, Vice Adm. J. Paul Reason, is likely to be tapped for one job, while Marine Maj. Gen. Charles Krulak, the commander of the combat development command in Quantico, Va., is expected to assume the second post.

Part of the problems encountered during the Navy's initial probe resulted from the fact that some of those who may have faced punishment in the scandal would have been judged by higher-ranking officers who also attended the event.

The two officers do not "have to be bound" by the report issued by Vander Schaaf, said one senior military legal officer. However, the material gathered in the report could be used to establish "probable cause" to pursue the matter through the military legal system, said the officer, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In regards to some of the expected charges to emerge from the Tailhook report:

■ If officers are found guilty of indecent assault consummated by battery — the equivalent of unlawful touching — they could face a maximum sentence of six months imprisonment.

■ If a service member is sentenced to be separated from the service with a "punitive discharge," or is to be confined for more than a year, he is entitled to an automatic appellate review of the conviction and sentence.

■ An accused may elect to be tried by a military judge alone, who will determine guilt or innocence, as well as any sentence to be awarded. The great majority of courts martial in the Navy and Marine Corps are tried before military judges sitting alone.

In the case of the captain's mast, the maximum punishment meted out could be 30 days "house arrest" in quarters or 60 days restriction to base.

The months-long probe conducted by the office of Vander Schaaf will go beyond documenting previous allegations of grabbing and fondling of women pushed through a "gantlet" at the 1991 Las Vegas aviators convention and the subsequent mishandling of the Navy's initial investigation of the incident, according to one report.

Many states declare living wills invalidated if woman is pregnant

Associated Press

Plan all you want. The soul searching and sense that goes into a living will is all for nought in most states if a woman is pregnant when it is needed.

Only Arizona and New Jersey ask women to indicate in their living wills what medical treatment they would want should they become hopelessly comatose or be declared brain-dead while they are pregnant.

In 23 states, a woman's request not to be kept on life-support is invalidated if she's pregnant, no matter the stage of her pregnancy.

Nancy Klein didn't have a living will when a car accident in 1988 left her comatose while she was pregnant. She agrees with her husband's decision to get her an abortion because doctors said it would improve her chances of recovering.

"I don't think a woman should be forced to be an incubator," she said over the weekend from her home in Florida.

All 50 states and the District of Columbia have laws allowing advance directives on medical care. They provide either for a living will, which indicates a choice for life-sustaining health care should a person become unable to make such decisions, or through medical proxy, which names someone else to make such a choice.

A survey by the Center for Women Policy Studies found 12 of those don't address pregnancy, making it likely courts would decide the matter.

Twenty-three states automatically invalidate a woman's living will at any stage of pregnancy, it said.

Four other states invalidate advance directives if the fetus is viable, generally considered sometime in the second trimester, while 10 states won't allow removal of life-support if it is probable that the fetus could develop to the point of live birth.

"The thing that is most gripping is that we are living with this false sense of security that we can make this rational decision for what we want, discuss it with our families, (write a living will), and every bit of that can be overruled by the state," said Leslie Wolfe, executive director of the Washington-based center.

Last fall, a German woman who was 13-weeks pregnant when a car accident left her brain-dead was kept alive for six weeks until she miscarried. The parents of the 18-year-old balked then agreed to try to continue the pregnancy.

The case prompted debate throughout Germany on medical ethics, with doctors and their supporters saying it would be homicide to turn off her life-support machines; and critics asserting the woman's body was being used as a "brooding machine" without consideration of her right to die with dignity.

Live births from comatose women are rare.

Dr. Robert White, director of neurosurgery at MetroHealth Medical Center in Cleveland, said that in most cases, a woman miscarries when she is severely injured. In many cases, she recovers before the baby is born.

Barbara Blodgett was one of the exceptions.

Although she had no living will, she had a premonition before a 1988 car accident left her comatose when she was three months pregnant.

"She said, 'Mom, if anything happens to me, if anything goes wrong, I want him to be named Simon if he's a boy," her mother, Barbara Valenzuela, said from their home in Yakima, Wash.

Mrs. Blodgett gave birth to a healthy 8-pound boy after five months in a coma. A month later, she regained consciousness.

At the time, doctors at University Hospital in Seattle said it was only the fourth successful birth from a comatose mother they could document.

Senator seeks repeal of tax break for drug companies in Puerto Rico

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., an outspoken critic of prescription drug costs, said Monday he will seek to repeal a major tax break for drug companies and other industries with manufacturing operations in Puerto Rico.

Pryor said Section 936 of the tax code has become "nothing but a gigantic tax windfall for the pharmaceutical industry" costing the Treasury $3 billion a year.

He proposed replacing it with a far less generous credit based on the actual wages the manufacturers pay workers on the island rather than their profits.

The drug industry defended the tax credit, claiming its incentives account for one-third of the 900,000 jobs in Puerto Rico.

Other industries, including electronics and apparel manufacturers, also avail themselves of the credit.

The Puerto Rico USA Foundation, a business coalition, denounced Pryor's proposal. Carl A. Nordberg Jr., the foundation's executive director, said it "would undermine U.S. corporate competitiveness and cause Puerto Rico, with a per capita income less than half that of the poorest state, to make an unfair and grossly disproportionate sacrifice."

Pryor suggested using the money saved to give the self-employed a 100 percent tax deduction on health insurance premiums.

Pryor's move comes just three days after President Clinton denounced the drug industry for "shocking" price increases over the past decade.

The president, upset over the rising price of childhood vaccines, complained that drug industry profit margins were rising four times faster than those of the average Fortune 500 company.

His domestic policy adviser, Carol Rasco, met at the White House Monday on the vaccine question with Gerald J. Mossinghoff, president of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, and executives from Connaught Laboratories, Inc, Merck & Co., Lederle Laboratories and SmithKline Beecham.

The industry executives issued a statement afterwards saying they sought "to correct misinformation" about vaccine prices, which Clinton said had risen in the 1980s from $23 to more than $200.

They said 80 percent of those price increases were for added protections, including a federal excise tax to compensate injured children, two additional vaccines for meningitis and hepatitis B and added doses to boost immunity levels.

They said the major immunization problem was reaching children in low-income, inner-city families. "The companies expect to work with the administration to decrease the barriers to full immunity of all American children," the executives said.

CAF donates funds to MC's aviation program

■ Midland College's aviation program receives a financial lift from the CAF

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Midland College's aviation maintenance technology program got a lift Monday thanks to a contribution from an organization dedicated to keeping old war birds flying.

Representatives of the CAF B29/B24 Squadron handed a check for $1,000 to MC President David E. Daniel — at the MC aviation hangar — to be used for scholarships.

"We hope the check can be used for possibly two $500 scholarships for aviation maintenance students needing financial aid," said squadron representative Tom Cloyd of El Paso.

"Last year, we brought the B29/B24 headquarter-based squadron of the CAF here (near Midland International Airport)," Cloyd said. "It was our first year in the new facility. At times, we needed a little help with technical problems and it was convenient to walk across the street and get help (at MC's aviation maintenance hangar and classroom site)."

Cloyd said another CAF member, John Meyer, logged more than 500 volunteer hours with the squadron while simultaneously attending the college's aviation program. Meyer recently received his certification in airframe maintenance.

While the CAF airplanes are older and larger than the college's aircraft, Meyer said "the basic systems are the same."

Meyer, who retired from the oil business before becoming an aviation student, said he received training in the college program and practical application working on CAF airplanes.

"The planes are basically flyable here (in the MC hangar), but we don't fly them, while all the CAF planes are flyable," he said.

Cloyd said he hoped funding the scholarship would be an annual event. "And we would like to see the scholarship recipients volunteer some hours with the CAF," he said.

MC president Daniel said the scholarships would be a boost for two aviation students. "The program is a little more expensive to go to than our other programs," he said.

'At times, we needed a little help with technical problems and it was convenient to walk across the street and get help (at MC).'
— Tom Cloyd

"The whole concept of emphasizing our airport and aviation maintenance is sound," Daniel said. "Aviation maintenance will surely develop one day as all the pieces of the puzzle fit together. There is no reason why we can't be an aviation center. We are beginning to see the first fruits of our investment."

The college president said "city planners — and even people beyond this city — have been looking ahead to the aviation industry."

"It could benefit economic development and education. We look forward to a continuing relationship with the CAF," he said.

Jury selection begins today

■ Judge John Hyde begins selecting jury members for the capital murder trial of a 28-year-old church secretary

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Jury selection in the capital murder trial of Curtis Dean Purser, 20, is set to begin today.

Purser is accused of the Nov. 13, 1991, murder of 28-year-old Brenda Branch, who was stabbed 36 times while working as a secretary at the Living Way Four Square Church, 419 Alta Ave.

Jury selection is expected to take about 10 days before testimony begins in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court.

If convicted of the offense, Purser faces either life imprisonment or the death penalty.

A co-defendant in the robbery-/murder case escaped the death penalty last week by accepting a plea agreement for a life sentence. As a result, Gearld Kelly, 21, will be eligible for parole in 35 years.

District Attorney Al Schorre has declined to comment on why the agreement was sought and whether Kelly would testify against Purser.

In his plea agreement, Kelly admitted to aiding Purser in the murder.

Kelly was arrested the day after the murder on a violation of parole charge and subsequently charged in the murder two weeks later.

Purser was arrested and charged with the crime on April 15, 1992.

During the last few weeks, Judge Hyde has heard pre-trial motions concerning the Purser case. One motion by the defense, and still under consideration by the judge, has been a request to suppress evidence and statements made by Purser.

Purser remains in the Midland County Central Detention Facility with bond denied.

Committee OKs pro-business bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Two controversial pro-business bills continued their romp through the Legislature Monday, but not before former Attorney General Jim Mattox stirred debate by accusing legislators of being in the pocket of the tobacco lobby.

"This is a compromise under the watchful eye of a bunch of folks who have gotten a bunch of money out of the tobacco industry," Mattox said.

He was referring to a products liability bill that would make it harder for people to file claims against manufacturers of defective products, including cigarettes.

The bill received the support of the House State Affairs Committee on a vote of 9-1 Monday and will be forwarded on to the full House.

The measure has already received unanimous support in the Senate.

"What we ought to be doing is passing laws that help people sue the merchants of death," added Mattox, who says he will announce this week that he is running for U.S. Senate in the May 1 special election.

The State Affairs Committee approved a separate bill by a 10-2 vote that would make it harder for persons in other countries, who claim injuries from a product with a Texas connection, to file suit in Texas. That measure will also be taken up by the full House.

Mattox said the products liability bill is like "a train on greased tracks through the Legislature." He called on the full House to take tobacco industries out of the legislation.

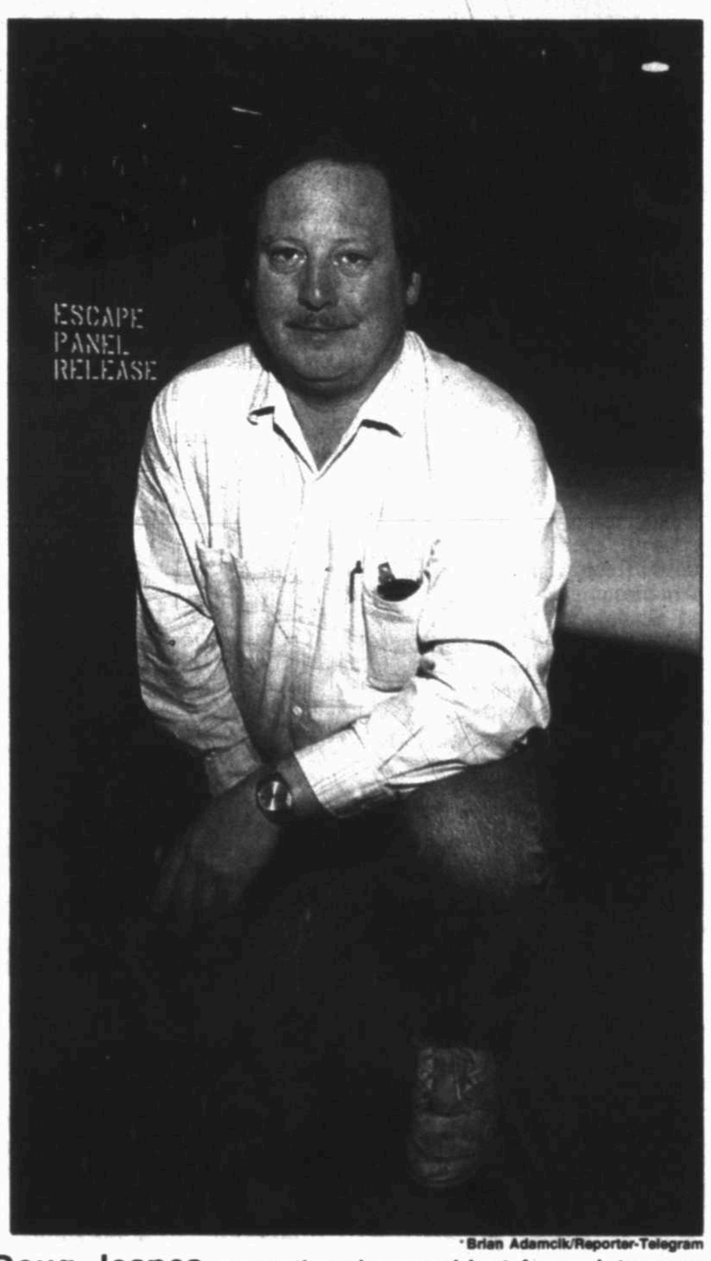

Legislators shouldn't expect any "rewards in heaven" for passing the bill, Mattox said, calling it the "direct result of the clout that the merchants of death — the tobacco companies — can put on the legislative process."

Committee members bristled over Mattox's remark that legislators are in the pocket of the tobacco industry. If he is going to make such accusations, he should provide names, they said.

Doug Jeanes, executive vice president for maintenance for the Confederate Air Force, is recruiting volunteers.

Jeanes keeps CAF flyin'high

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Doug Jeanes' mission with the Confederate Air Force is to "Keep 'Em Flying" — to raise those rare vintage warbirds to high flight from aircraft boneyards.

"Once you are hooked on airplanes, you are hooked," said Jeanes, the CAF's 36-year-old executive vice president for maintenance at Midland International Airport.

Since his boyhood, when he built flew, broke and repaired model airplanes, Jeanes has been fascinated by flight and airplanes, particularly those that were flown durug World War II.

"It is just really amazing," he said of the quality of those increasingly rare warbirds. "The planes were built and designed to only last a couple of months until they were shot out of the air. And here, 50 years later, they are still flying."

But only a relatively few are in flight.

Last week, there where 141 warplanes in the CAF's Ghost Squadron — the flying museum which comes under the umbrella of the Midland-based American Airpower Heritage Group. This week, there are 140 CAF aircraft.

Early Monday morning, the CAF's only British Supermarine Spitfire fighter was destroyed in a fire in the Canadian Warplane Heritage Museum Hangar at Hamilton, Ontario, near Toronto.

"It's been down about three years, awaiting (and undergoing) restoration," Jeanes said of the Spitfire, which this year was to go on tour in Canada and in the United States with the British Hawker Hurricane fighter and the four-engine British Avro Lancaster bomber.

Among the five aircraft destroyed in the fire in the wooden World War II-vintage hangar were the Spitfire, the Hurricane, and an American-built Avenger, an aircraft carrier-borne torpedo bomber.

"That's a hazard of the business," Jeanes lamented.

The Lancaster was saved from the fire, which caused the renovated hangar to collapse.

The Spitfire, which was the only CAF aircraft in the museum fire, is beyond repair and only recently had been assigned by the CAF headquarters to the National Capital Squadron in the Washington, D.C., area.

"A big phase our (the CAF aviation) history is kind of gone," Jeanes said of the Spitfire, which for the CAF represents the Battle of Britain.

Today, only about three Spitfires are in airworthy condition

College musicians earn state ensemble honors

Staff report

Two Midland College musicians played last week in the Texas Junior College All State Band, which performed for the annual convention of the Texas Music Educators Association in San Antonio.

Margaret Enriquez was selected as first chair in the flute section and Susan Martin was named 11th chair in the clarinet section. They are the first Midland College students to have been selected for this all-star ensemble.

The selection process began last fall when musicians from throughout all the community colleges in the state sent in audition tapes, 295 of them. From those were selected the all-state performers, who then auditioned again for their section positions.

"Although this is the 19th year for the Texas Junior College All-State Band to perform, it was the first year that musicians from Midland College auditioned for the group," said Don Grant, coordinator of instrumental music and director of the college's jazz ensemble.

Grant and Walter Osadchuk, conductor of the Midland College Community Band, attended the TMEA meeting with the MC students. Both Miss Enriquez, a graduate of Midland High School, and Miss Martin, a graduate of Lee High School, perform with the

GARY OTT

Being a contradiction can add spice to your life

More rambling thoughts from a semi-tangled brain ...

— It is a very old cliche, of course, but there is still a lot of truth in the words, "a person should work hard and play hard."

— Sadly, it seems that more and more people just flat out don't like their jobs and, as a result, don't enjoy being at the office. And, if a person doesn't like his job, he's not going to work hard. It's as simple as that.

Ott

— Great quote from a country-western song: "He's a walking contradiction, partly truth and partly fiction."

— Speaking of contradictions. My favorite people are those who are terribly jaded and cynical about day-to-day living but, at the same time, possess a lust for life that is contagious and fun to be around.

— The Texas Board of Education recently ruled that it is OK for girls to participate in high school football. I have no problem with that, although I remember high school girls being far better at playing mind games than engaging in physical activity ... especially when "the game" involved my body.

— Overheard: "A girl I used to date just joined a convent. She said having nothing was better than having me."

— That reminds me of the guy who said, "My wife left me for another woman."

— Educators these days are catching a lot of flack and in many cases it is well-deserved. Still, a good teacher can have a positive impact for life. Or as Henry Brooks Adams once said, "A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops."

— It's too bad that a woman can't be comfortable going alone into a bar or a restaurant or even a movie. There's always a nagging concern, legitimate or not, that the message being sent forth is, "Hey, guys, I want to be picked up." I guess that means there is still a double standard in our society, and, frankly, it's not fair.

— Any movie featuring Jack Nicholson, even in a supporting role, has got to be entertaining. "A Few Good Men" is the latest example.

— Many of these new movies, with their high-tech special effects and multimillion-dollar budgets are indeed powerful accomplishments, but somehow I still prefer the old musicals where boy meets girl, boy loses girl, and, in the end, as a happy song falls out of the sky, boy wins back girl. The two of them then dance down a spiraling staircase and live happily ever after, or at least until the final credits roll across the screen.

— Speaking of special effects in movies, if you ever start wondering what it would be like to be aboard a plane that is crashing, go see "Alive."

— It is always fun to read a book that is set in a city where you used to live. As the author meticulously describes the streets and buildings you feel as though you are back home.

— But enough of this lighter stuff. Let's move on to the really important subjects. Ready? Good.

— I'd like to go on record as saying I think Michael Jackson should quit grabbing his private parts when performing in public.

— Ditto for Madonna.

— What they do in private is their own business, but when in public they should exercise more self-control. It's not that hard to do. You just keep your hands busy so they are not tempted to wander places where they are not supposed to be.

— If you and I are expected to behave as adults, then it is not asking too much for them to do so, as well. If nothing else works, Michael, just put your hands in your pockets. What we can't see, can't offend us.

PLANES: Midlander restores aircrafts

(From 1B)

in the United States, and about a dozen are flying in Great Britain, said Barbi Woods, the CAF's public relations coordinator.

"It's a tremendous loss," Ms. Woods said of the CAF's Spitfire. "Not only was it one of our rare warbirds, it was the only British combat aircraft in our fleet."

The restored Spitfire, which had been valued at $1.5 million but was uninsured, the Hurricane and the Lancaster bomber were to fly to Midland for the CAF's AirSho'93. Just recently, the Spitfire's four-bladed propeller, which was powered by a Rolls-Royce Merlin in-line engine, had undergone a $35,000 rebuilding project in Germany.

The Lancaster still is scheduled to appear in October's show.

Even while Jeanes mourns the loss of the Spitfire, he, nevertheless, is recruiting CAF volunteers to join an aircraft restoration team to work on CAF aircraft — one at a time.

Of the 140 airplanes in the Ghost Squadron, about 90 are in airworthy condition, about 30 are undergoing maintenance, and about 20 are in storage awaiting restoration.

"We are always looking for volunteers to do various things," Jeanes said. It's not true that the CAF is only looking for pilots or aircraft mechanics, he said. "We need everybody. We need carpenters to build display cases, electricians to run wiring, anybody to clean up, wash and wax."

And the CAF wants to put together a good team of volunteers working on a "regular or irregular basis to do a lot of progress in restoration."

"We want to have a (CAF) headquarters restoration team. That's what I'm shooting for," said Jeanes, who is a licensed pilot, airframe and power-plant mechanic, and inspector.

Jeanes spent three years restoring a Schweizer TG-3A glider in San Antonio, where he operated an aircraft restoration shop before he was hired to serve on CAF's headquarters staff in Midland. He also worked on the Feiseler Storch, a German liaison aircraft.

Of the 140 CAF aircraft, about a dozen are assigned to CAF headquarters in Midland and others are in CAF squadrons and wings across the nation. Among CAF warbirds based in Midland are the Boeing B-29 Superfortress, the Consolidated B-24 (LB-30), the Mitsubishi A6M Zero, Schweizer TG-3A, Messerschitt Bf. 109, the Heinkel He. 111, Lockheed C-60 Lodestar, the P-82 Twin Mustang, the Vultee BT-13, two SNJs (T-6s), and the Feiseler Fi-156-D Storch.

Among CAF aircraft currently in Midland but on loan here from CAF wings and squadrons are the Lockheed P-38 Lightning, the Grumman FM-2 Wildcat, the Curtiss P-40 Warhawk, and the North American B-25 Mitchell.

Of his early interest in airplanes, Jeanes said that "My Dad and I always talked about World War II. I was interested in the whole time period."

His father, who served in the war, was in those Big Bands. "I grew up with a musical background," Jeanes said. "Everybody in my family played music." Jeanes played the trombone, and his father, the coronet.

Both were wrapped up in that romantic and sentimental Big Band music of the 1930s and 1940s that has strong appeal to many CAF members.

"I always liked that time period," Jeanes said. "I always felt like I should have been born in that time period."

Jeanes, a CAF member-colonel since 1980, revels in working on vintage aircraft. His basic love is working with "dope and fabric" in restoring older aircraft. "It's kind of like painting on canvas. It's something not too many people know how to do any more.

"There's plenty of work to be done by unskilled labor," Jeanes said. "The airplanes were built by unskilled labor during the war. That's the kind of people I would like to see" at CAF headquarters and "learning about airplanes while they are working on them."

Early morning blaze guts women's clinic

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Authorities began investigating the cause of an early Monday morning fire that destroyed a women's clinic frequently picketed by anti-abortion protesters.

By late afternoon, officials said they still did not know how the fire started at the Reproductive Services clinic in the Stonegate Professional Building.

"We do not know the cause at this time," said Corpus Christi Police Chief Henry Garrett. Garrett said the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms was sending an agent from its Houston office to help investigate the fire.

No one was injured in the fire, said Corpus Christi Fire Chief J.J. Adame. The building was a total loss by the time the fire was put out at about 4 a.m.

"It's still too early to say how it started," said Adame.

Other offices in the building were occupied by a computer software company, a family medical practice and the building manager.

Corpus Christi, a city with about 200,000 residents, has often been the site of protests by anti-abortion and pro-abortion rights groups. In 1991, voters rejected a city charter amendment that would have declared "human life begins at conception."

When Jim Hickey was Nueces County sheriff three years ago, he refused to send deputies to assist the city police in removing anti-abortion protestors from the doors of women's clinics that performed abortions.

Both Hickey and his wife Jan are vocal critics of abortion.

BILLS: Lawmakers pass legislation

(From 1B)

money tied to the tobacco lobby while he was in office, said he couldn't immediately produce a list of lawmakers who have received money from the special interest group.

Business interests and lawmakers supporting the measure say it will weed out frivolous lawsuits and strike a fair balance between the rights of companies and consumers.

The products liability bill would also prevent lawsuits from people who are injured by federally approved vaccines, including those for people with HIV and the AIDS virus.

"A lot of manufacturers are not going forward (with vaccines) because of liability," said Rep. Curtis Seidlits, D-Sherman, who is sponsoring the measure in the House.

"We want to continue these services. If we don't have or encourage these type of drugs, what will we do then?"

Tom Smith, a spokesman for the state chapter of Public Citizen, said people who have been injured by federally approved vaccine for HIV and AIDS should not be inhibited from filing lawsuits.

"What if the vaccines cause unforeseen illnesses or fails?" Smith said. "Are we creating another huge potential pool of injured folks without leaving a system of compensation?"

The second bill seeks to overturn a Texas Supreme Court ruling in 1990 that allowed a group of farm workers in Costa Rica to sue two companies in Texas for injuries they said they suffered from handling a pesticide manufactured by the companies.

The workers say they became sterile after handling a pesticide made by Shell Oil Co. and Dow Chemical Co.

"I am concerned we are sending out a message that the life of a foreign worker means less than an American worker," said Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, who voted against the measure.

Officials seek fatality culprit

This week Odessa Crime Stoppers is seeking information which could help solve a fatality hit and run accident that occurred in the 2500 block of East 8th Street in Odessa on Nov. 11, 1992, at approximately 11:30 p.m.

Marvin Wright, Jr., was walking north acorss East 8th Street when an unknown type vehicle travelling westbound struck him and knocked him to the north curb. The vehicle then left the scene. A passing motorist saw the body and summoned the police and ambulance. Wright was pronounced dead at the scene.

The Odessa Police Department has no leads, and is asking for the public's help in solving the crime.

The first caller with information that leads to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons involved in this crime could receive up to $1,000 this week only.

Call Odessa Crime Stoppers at 333-TIPS or Midlabd Crime Stoppers at 694-TIPS. Callers can remain anonymous.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Warrants

Midland Municipal Court began its concentrated warrant service Monday with 67 warrants being served and cleared, officials said.

Anyone who is on warrant for non-appearance, has unpaid fines, or believes that they may have an outstanding warrant should come to the court and resolve it. Failure to do so could result in the person being arrested and jailed, officials said.

The Municipal Court operating hours are 8:30 a.m. - 5 p.m. on Monday through Wednesday and Friday. The court is open until 7 p.m. on Thursday. Citizens may call the court at 685-7315 to receive further information on times when the judges will be seeing warrants.

Scam

Staff report

Midland police have arrested a person they believe has been involved in a money-making scam in the city for the past several weeks.

The person was arrested Monday night, but no more information was available at that time. The name of the suspect would not be released until formal charges are made.

The person is believed to have been involved in looking up residents' names and addresses and then calling them, claiming to have lived near them at one time. The person then went on to say that his or her car was in the repair shop and the shop would not take a credit card. The person then asked the resident to lend him money for the repairs.

Police are asking anyone who may have been a victim of this scam to call the Police Department to pursue charges. Those who have called before the arrest need to call again, authorities say.

■ Opponents: Bergstrom study misleads

AUSTIN — Estimated costs of converting Bergstrom Air Force Base into Austin's airport are misleading, say officials who support a failed plan to build a new airport in nearby Manor.

"This is typical of the deceit we've seen throughout this process," said Travis County Judge Bill Aleshire, who has said the Austin City Council refuses to appropriately compare Bergstrom to Manor.

According to a study conducted by KPMG Peat Marwick and presented to the City Council last week, converting Bergstrom into the city's airport would cost $600 million.

Voters would be asked to raise about $400 million of that through bonds being proposed in a May 1 referendum, according to the consultants' plan. The rest of the price tag would come from such sources as federal grants and the airlines, the plan said.

The $400 million in bonds would be 45 percent less than voters approved in 1987 for a new airport to be built in Manor, northeast of the city.

■ Woman's kindness results in carjacking

SAN ANTONIO — An elderly woman who wanted to help three teen-age girls who were hitching a ride soon found herself staring at the muzzle of a gun.

The 74-year-old motorist was robbed at gunpoint Sunday, then shoved out of her vehicle, said police.

The woman, who asked that her name be withheld, told police that she was leaving the Terrell Wells Post Office on Sunday afternoon when the teens asked for a ride to their home.

But one of two 15-year-olds threatened her with a chrome-plated handgun, then demanded personal possessions and forced her from her car behind a vacant store, police said.

"The woman wasn't injured in this," a police officer at the department's south patrol station, who declined to be identified, said. "They just scared her, mostly."

He said the 15-year-olds and one 13-year-old girl were in custody today at the Bexar County Juvenile Detention Center. They were found inside the woman's car about 30 minutes after the carjacking.

The woman said the girls threw some of the woman's personal possessions out of her car during their ride. She said she would never again stop for strangers.

■ Officers arrest Dallas man in slaying

FORT WORTH — More than 100 people witnessed the weekend shooting death of a Dallas man at a cafe's parking lot, police said.

Officers arrested Joel Ronnell McCoy Sunday after Darion Scott was gunned down earlier in the day outside the East Side Cafe in Cleburne, south of Fort Worth.

McCoy, 19, remained Monday in the Johnson County Jail in lieu of $250,000 bail bond on a murder charge, said Joann Hunt, a sheriff's spokeswoman.

Cleburne police said Scott was shot several times in the head shortly after midnight. The 19-year-old man died later at Walls Regional Hospital in Cleburne, about 30 miles south of Fort Worth.

■ FBI arrests suspect in 1978 slaying

HOUSTON — The first fugitive to appear on Texas' Most Wanted list has been arrested in Panama and charged with killing a Pasadena man more than 14 years ago.

Edward Harold Bell, who had eluded capture since forfeiting $125,000 bail bond in January 1979, was arrested in Panama City on Sunday, the Federal Bureau of Investigation said.

Bell was being held in a Panama City jail while efforts to extradite him to Harris County were initiated, FBI officials in Houston said Monday.

Authorities said Bell's arrest resulted from tips they received after his case was featured last Dec. 2 on the television program "Unsolved Mysteries."

Bell is accused in the Aug. 24, 1978, shooting death of Larry Dean Dickens, 26, of Pasadena.

Bell shot Dickens three times when Dickens would not return his keys, authorities said. Witnesses said Bell shot Dickens with both a .22-caliber pistol and a rifle.

■ Authorities add charges in porn case

HOUSTON — Harris County authorities have filed two more charges against a self-employed photographer arrested after police seized thousands of sexually explicit photographs and videos of children from his apartment.

Detectives from the Sheriff's Department child abuse unit on Sunday filed charges of indecency with a child and sexual performance of a child against Larry Lynn Wallace, 44.

Wallace was arrested Thursday and charged with one count of aggravated sexual assault of a child. He was being held Monday in the Harris County Jail in lieu of $200,000 bond, authorities said.

Detectives were sent to Wallace's Houston-area apartment last week after a former girlfriend complained to police that he had taken nude photographs of her 8-year-old daughter.

Authorities said Wallace, who specialized in family photos, had elaborately equipped his place to produce huge quantities of photos.

■ Church-goer slain following services

CARTHAGE — A man was shot to death Sunday at his church as he visited with other worshippers after morning services, police said.

Romeo Parker, 34, was shot several times inside the Mount Zion CME Church at about 12:15 p.m., police and witnesses said. Parker died a short time later.

"The shooting occurred inside the church. After he was shot, Parker ran outside and collapsed on the sidewalk," said Carthage Police Chief Duane Baushke. Baushke said police recovered a .380-caliber handgun believed to have been used in the shooting.

Deary Deral Roberson, 28, turned himself in to police and was arraigned on a murder charge by Justice of the Peace Pat Davis. Roberson remained in the Panola County Jail Monday on $100,000 bond.

Victims recount horrors; support bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Targets of "stalkers" urged lawmakers Monday to protect them with passage of legislation that would criminalize obsessive and threatening harassment.

Kathleen Krueger, the wife of U.S. Sen. Bob Krueger, sobbed as she talked about a man she said has been harassing her and her husband for the past eight years.

She played a recording of a message left on their telephone, in which a man said that he would kill anyone who wronged him.

"It's up to you to protect yourself from that. I'll carry out the job. You better be scared of that you (expletive), and you better get to me before I get to you," the man said.

Mrs. Krueger showed the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee dozens of tapes and a folder of letters she said came from the man.

Thomas Humphrey, who was Krueger's pilot during the Democrat's unsuccessful senatorial campaign in 1984, was sentenced to prison in 1989 after pleading guilty to making threatening telephone calls to the Kruegers.

He was released, but has been sent back to prison twice for continuing to threaten the Kruegers. He remains imprisoned, but will probably be released in the next several months, Mrs. Krueger said.

She urged lawmakers to pass the bill, saying it would make it easier to prosecute people who constantly terrorize their victims.

"I am still terrified of being alone with our two little girls. We have tried to make sure that someone is with me day and night," she said.

State Rep. Brian McCall, R-Plano, said his bill was similar to one passed by a Senate committee last week that would make "stalking" a specific crime, and allow for increased punishment for repeat offenses.

"All stalkers have one thing in common. After repeated rejection, they invariably turn violent," McCall said.

Other legislation introduced Monday by Rep. Sherri Greenberg, D-Austin, was aimed at restricting access to addresses and telephone numbers from public agencies.

Under Ms. Greenberg's bills, people could make their home address confidential so that it could not be released by either the Texas Department of Public Safety or Texas Department of Transportation. Currently, both agencies must release that information for a small fee when it is requested, she said.

Another measure by Ms. Greenberg would allow customers of publicly-owned utilities to make their home telephone number and address confidential.

"This legislation will not stop stalking. But it will guarantee that individuals can close the most common outlets for unlisted addresses and phone numbers," she said.

But a media group said attempts to make certain information confidential could prevent the release of information that is needed by the general public.

"There are all kinds of legitimate reasons to know the kinds of information associated with these public records," said Ann Arnold, vice chair of Texas Media. "The solution is to penalize those individuals who are causing the problem rather than limit the public's right of access to information," she said.

Houston, San Antonio tops gun permits list

HOUSTON (AP) — The federal government has issued far more licenses to sell firearms in Houston than in any other major U.S. city — nearly double the number issued in the second-ranking city, San Antonio.

According to statistics provided by the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the agency has issued 1,791 federal firearms licenses to Houstonians as of this month, which puts the city at the top of the list of the nation's 50 largest cities.

The number of gun dealer licenses issued in Houston is almost double that of San Antonio, where 908 licenses were issued.

By comparison, the nation's largest city, New York — which has a population more than four times greater than Houston — has only 131 firearm dealer licenses. And Los Angeles, the nation's second-largest city, has 444.

There were 2,857 gun dealers' licenses issued in Harris County and 20,440 in Texas, the Houston Chronicle reported Monday.

It's difficult for officials to compare how many guns are purchased in various cities because there is no standard gun registration nationwide.

Nevertheless, federal officials acknowledged that the large number of gun sellers in Houston and the region has made it exceedingly difficult to ferret out violators, such as vendors who sell guns to minors.

Furthermore, some national experts who advocate controls on gun purchases believe the ease of purchasing guns in cities such as Houston may contribute to the increase in violence across the nation.

"Any police officer will tell you that the greater the gun density in an area, the greater the risk the officer will have to come up against those guns," said Hubert Williams, president of the Police Foundation, a non-profit Washington-based organization that studies police-related matters.

Guns increasingly have become the most common weapon in assaults and murders, according to health officials in Houston.

But gun-control opponents have noted that crime rates are no higher in Houston than in cities with strict gun control. Washington, D.C. — where handgun sales are banned and there are only 35 gun dealers — regularly posts one of the highest murder rates in the nation.

However, federal officials also say that cities such as Houston, where guns are easily accessible, have become major sources of weapons for cities such as New York and Chicago. Texas and Houston also have become major scurces of gun smuggling to Mexico, where only the military and law enforcement officials are allowed to carry guns.

Larry Butler, a Houston-based compliance officer with the ATF, said the large number of federal gun selling licenses in Houston may be related to the ease of buying guns in the city. Butler said the incentive to become a gun dealer is diminished in other cities that have bans or restrictions on sale of handguns or require more paperwork of prospective dealers.

"Some cities and some states have pretty stringent licensing requirements. Texas has no licensing requirement and no particular enforcement organization," he said.

However, some other cities where gun laws are nonexistent or weak had far fewer gun sellers' licenses issued. Dallas had 735 licenses, Fort Worth 403 and Miami 864.

To obtain a three-year, renewable gun dealer's license from ATF, Houstonians must pay a $30 fee and provide proof of identification and state residency. The federal agency runs a criminal check and checks to see if the prospective dealer is over 21.

Murder victim's parents still grieve 16 years later

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press writer

The nightmare won't go away for Sandra Rodgers.

She goes to sleep with it. When she wakes up, it's still there.

"When you wake up in the morning, when you don't have full control of your thoughts, it goes over and over and over in your mind," Mrs. Rodgers says.

Sandra Rodgers, 54, and her husband, Joe Dell, 57, of Borger, live daily with the grief of their daughter's horrible death almost 16 years ago.

Abbe Rodgers Hamilton, 19, six months pregnant, was hacked to death, stabbed an estimated 20 times in the neck with a hunting knife and nearly decapitated, by an intruder who walked into her unlocked home May 3, 1977 as she was taking a late morning nap.

"You think: what if, what if, what if,'" says Mrs. Rodgers, who lives just a few blocks from where her daughter died. "You try not to think but you do."

The man convicted of killing their daughter, Samuel Hawkins, a professional meat cutter believed responsible for dozens of rapes, last week got within about two hours of the Texas death chamber before the U.S. Supreme Court halted his scheduled lethal injection.

AP Laserphoto

Joe Dell and Sandra Rodgers, parents of murder victim Abbe Rodgers

The Rodgers are disappointed, angry and frustrated.

"It keeps going on and on," Rodgers says. "I just can't see any reason for delaying it this long."

The high court, considering appeals filed by Hawkins' attorneys, did not say why it granted a reprieve. If the justices choose to not review the case, a Texas judge then can reschedule Hawkins to die in 30 days. If the court review results in a reversal, the case effectively starts all over for Hawkins, 49, who confessed to the killing and whose nearly 15 years on death row make him among the longest-serving of the 368 convicted killers awaiting execution in Texas.

"You have no power," Rodgers says. "You're more or less waiting on everyone else."

"You spend a lot of time trying to stay sane," his wife adds. Asked how she does that, she replies, "You go through the motions."

After getting the word late last Tuesday that Hawkins remained alive, she spend a restless night, finally dozing off around 5 a.m.

The Rodgers' do not share their pain alone. Friends and neighbors offer support.

"You're glad to know people are thinking and praying for you," Mrs. Rodgers says.

David Jackson, who has worked side by side with lab technician Joe Dell Rodgers for more than 30 years, was so frustrated when the court delayed the execution last week he wrote to each of the Supreme Court justices.

"This nation's justice system is not providing justice for its citizens," Jackson said. "The Samuel Hawkins trial and its results have not served justice. This case has been drawn out for 16 years after the crime. It has destroyed the victim's family by having them relive Abbe Rodgers Hamilton's murder each time another legal ploy is used by Hawkins to escape the punishment of law.

"This case has made a mockery of justice."

"He came over and told me he'd written this letter," Rodgers says. "He wanted to know if I had any objections. I thought it was great that he took it upon himself to do this.

"The letter pretty well expresses my feelings also."

The Rodgers believe Borger also felt the ill effects of their daughter's death. Such violent events were not commonplace in the Panhandle town of about 17,000.

I think the whole town changed after this happened," Mrs. Rodgers says.

"I just hesitate to even answer the door, especially after dark," her husband adds.

ICS files rising Medicare claims

New law requires doctor's office to take on heavy burden of filing

Nearly 150,000 claims are filed through the Dallas Medicare office a day , and the burden of filing the rising stacks of Medicare claims has been placed on the doctor's office.

According to the staff at ICS Insurance Assistance, in September of 1990, it became a law that anything covered by Medicare must be filed by the provider.

ICS Insurance Assistance saves doctor's offices the time and the investment of filing Medicare claims. An electronic Medicare filing service and qualified professionals with an extensive Medicare background allow ICS to recover claims quicker, with less errors.

"The doctor can hire ICS for less money than to hire someone else to handle the Medicare claims." said Carole Walker, owner of ICS. At ICS, we have extensive training so we can answer questions quicker."

Carole, who acquired ownership of ICS in 1990, said that ICS originated when the previous owner saw a growing need for assistance in filing Medicare and secondary insurance claims in the doctor's office.

"The majority of our clients are Medicare age and their insurance claims become very confusing," Carole said.

"There were a great many people who had no idea how to file, added Nelle Drummond, who has been assisting clients with filing medical claims at ICS since May, 1988. "It becomes very overwhelming to the family to have to deal with insurance problems as well as the trauma of illness."

Clients are freed up from the burden of incorrect filing and confusing procedures that typically delay payment, while ICS acts on their behalf to receive the benefits they are entitled to.

"We have extensive Medicare experience and can handle all the problems that may occur from incorrect filing," Carole said. "We make sure that every claim is followed through from Medicare to your private insurance companies, and then organize it in a manner that's easy to understand."

Your file is available any time you have a question or would like to check on the status of any claims, and your file is completely confidential , she added. When using the services of ICS, you can be assured that all insurance checks and information come directly to you.

One client, Lelland Foster, has relied on ICS' services since 1988 and claims that their assistance has saved him a lot of money.

"They know the proper procedures and people to contact," he said. "If you have other medical insurance, they do a complete job of following up."

A low annual fee of $165 per person, plus sales tax, takes care of filing assistance for all your medical claims for the year, regardless of the number of doctor's visits or hospital stays.

ICS caters to their clients and will even come to your home to pick up and deliver paperwork if you are homebound due to surgery or illness. Call 694-2375 to arrange for an appointment and let ICS take care of your medical insurance filing. Services include:

- All medical claims with private insurance companies. When your doctor files Medicare, ICS will file your supplements.
- Handling office charges, hospital and clinic charges -- all your medical bills for the year.
- Making sure you receive all the benefits you can from your private insurance coverage and Medicare.
- At your request, will consolidate all your information and give you a yearly report for tax purposes and review.

Clients like Lelland Foster (left) have found that ICS Insurance Assistance can save him time and money when dealing with medical insurance. Carole Walker and Nelle Drummond, of ICS, review files with Mr. Foster.

Country Elegance concentrates business in hometown

Jeanne Jackson, owner of Country Elegance, is bringing business back to her hometown by concentrating efforts in the Midland Park Mall store.

Although Country Elegance originated in the Permian Mall in Odessa four years ago, Jeanne has been a resident of Midland for 26 years and sold her store in Odessa last month so she could concentrate on making the one in her hometown "bigger and better."

Jeanne and her husband Don Jackson, who helps her run the store, just marked their first anniversary of Country Elegance in Midland Park Mall this month.

Country Elegance, which has become well-known for quality handcrafts, displays a variety of works ranging from victorian to southwestern themes.

"Most of our crafts are made in West Texas so we can support the Permian Basin," Jeanne said. "Even though I knew there was a lot of talent here, I didn't know there were so many unique and talented craftsmen before I started this business."

In all, a total of 50 local craftsmen bring their works of art to display and sell at Country Elegance on a consignment basis. The crafts range from tole painting, a handpainted wood carving, to ceramics, furniture, clothing, jewelry and anything to decorate the house or yard.

"I only handle quality merchandise," Jeanne said. "We screen our merchandise -- if it's not done right, I send it back."

Jeanne's love of crafts is clearly demonstrated by her careful selection of quality handcrafts. Her first love was in oil painting; however, today, she has combined her love of crafts and her skillful talent in a store that gives local craftsmen an opportunity to share their work with the public.

Jeanne and Don Jackson display some of the unique handcrafted cows that are popular at Country Elegance. The store, located in Midland Park Mall, specializes in handcraftmanship made by local craftsmen.

Quality craftsmen are always encouraged to bring their unique works of art to Country Elegance.

While most of their time is spent in recruiting new craftsmen and assisting customers with their selections, both Don and Jeanne bring their share of talent to Country Elegance. Don is handy with some of the woodworking, and Jeanne adds to the selection of tole paintings and handmade clothing, allowing her to apply some of her own artistic background.

Country Elegance has something to fit everyone's pocketbook. Choose from a selection of gifts that are unique as well as affordable, such as the Aggie puzzles, crocheted rugs, button covers, jewelry and southwestern pottery lined with 22 kt gold.

The sports plaques, one of the newest items, are especially popular for Dallas Cowboy fans. According to Jeanne, they haven't been able to keep Troy Aikman in stock.

One of the hottest selling items is the bath kid, a soft sculpture of a girl or boy climbing into the tub that sells for $15.99.

Crafts portray themes for all seasons to decorate the home and yard, and to give people the opportunity to shop for Christmas decorations year-round, Country Elegance has added a Christmas room that will display Christmas decorations throughout the year.

To keep their customers coming back, Country Elegance offers cheerful refunds, special orders and layaway plans, and they accept all major credit cards.

They are conveniently opened during mall hours from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and from 1 to 6 p.m. on Sunday. Call 520-4026 for further information.

Chap showdown

■ It's finally here. Midland Lee meets Abilene Cooper for the District 4-5A basketball championship.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

The long-awaited Chaparral Center District 4-5A showdown has finally arrived. Midland Lee vs. Abilene Cooper. Winner wins a state basketball playoff bye — not to mention an undisputed district championship.

Both teams roll into the Chap tonight with identical 10-1 district records. Lee is ranked No. 10 in the state, but its lone district loss came at the hands of these same Cougars, who enter the game 0-for-1 in Midland, having a loss to Midland High as its only district blemish and a 10-point loss at the Chap last year to Lee.

And while both teams are playoff bound after tonight, it's that first round playoff bye that is the plum at the end of the string.

Meanwhile, Midland High travels to Abilene High to wrap up regular season play. MHS enters that game without needing a win, but the Bulldogs do want to put that 20th victory of the season in the hip pocket. Still, MHS is going to finish third and head for bi-district play next week, win or lose.

But eyes will certainly be on the 8 p.m. game unfolding at the Chap. For once, a district schedule has been drawn for high drama. It's the giants of Cooper against the three-point machine of Lee.

"It's the showdown," Lee coach Jon House said. "We have worked hard to be in the position to play for a district championship and I know our kids are looking forward to it. This ought to be a good one."

Lee will have to face the ever-present force of District 4-5A scoring leader Andrae Patterson, a junior who is 6-9 and highly recruited by colleges all over the nation. Also, seven-footer Chris Paddock, a senior, is back in the lineup after missing much of the district season with an injury.

"Paddock didn't play against us when we lost the first time," House said. "With him in the game, it slows them down, but helps them on the board. I think it's a wash for them as far as we are concerned.

"We've just got to press and run and get more transition points than we did last time. We've been averaging about 24 points a game with transition points, but only got 10 against them. If Cooper decides they want their big men to score, we may end up having to trade threes for their twos. It could be an interesting game."

Lee has set a single season Rebel record for three-pointers this year with 210. Martin Lattibeaudiere has 88 treys and that has helped propel him to Lee's all-time career scoring leader with over 1,500 points. Senior David Wilson is averaging just over 23 points per game and he has over 1,000 career points.

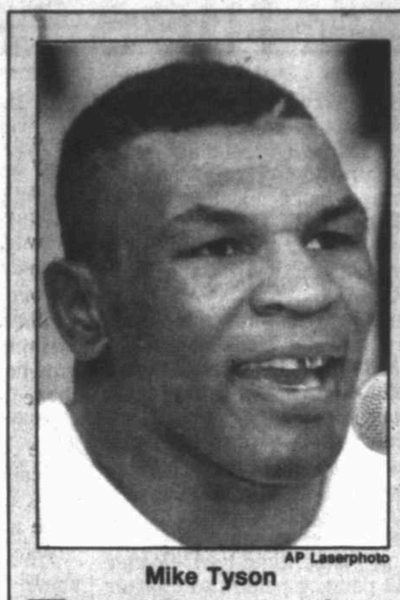

House said a loss to Cooper wouldn't be the end of the world, but he would like the win.

"I think our kids would like to have the district championship. You also get a bye in the first round, but no one is easy in the playoffs anyway," House noted. "We can overcome a loss to Cooper, but I don't want to have to do that. You never want to enter the playoffs with a loss."

Midland High's game with Abilene High appears to have little working for it since no changes in the standings will occur either way. However, try telling that to MHS coach Jack Stephenson.

"I know it's important to me, and I think it's important to the team," Stephenson said of the game with AHS. "With all the things that this team has gone through this year, I think it's important for us to get that 20th win. That's a mark all teams shoot for during the season. That's what we will be

Lady Bulldogs to meet El Paso Andress

Staff report

Midland High's Lady Bulldogs will meet El Paso Andress Saturday at 1 p.m. in Alpine in the area round of the Class 5A girls' state basketball playoffs.

Andress defeated El Paso Eastwood, 56-54, in bi-district action.

MHS head coach Jim Raughton was in El Paso scouting the game and chose the neutral site in Alpine instead of flipping a coin for a home-and-home scenario.

Andress, 23-3 this season, finished thr regular season tied for first with El Paso Burgess in District 1-5A.

In a district playoff game last Friday, Burgess defeated Andress 66-50 to give Andress the No. 2 seed in the playoffs.

While Raughton was in El Paso, assistant coach Carol McCann guided the Lady Bulldogs to a 66-47 win over the Seminole Maidens in a playoff practice

MHS kicks at first place

Staff report

Midland High got off to a slow start in the District 5 soccer race by losing to cross-town rival Midland Lee, but the Bulldogs will be trying to grab a share of first place today when they host the undefeated Abilene High Eagles at 4:30 p.m.

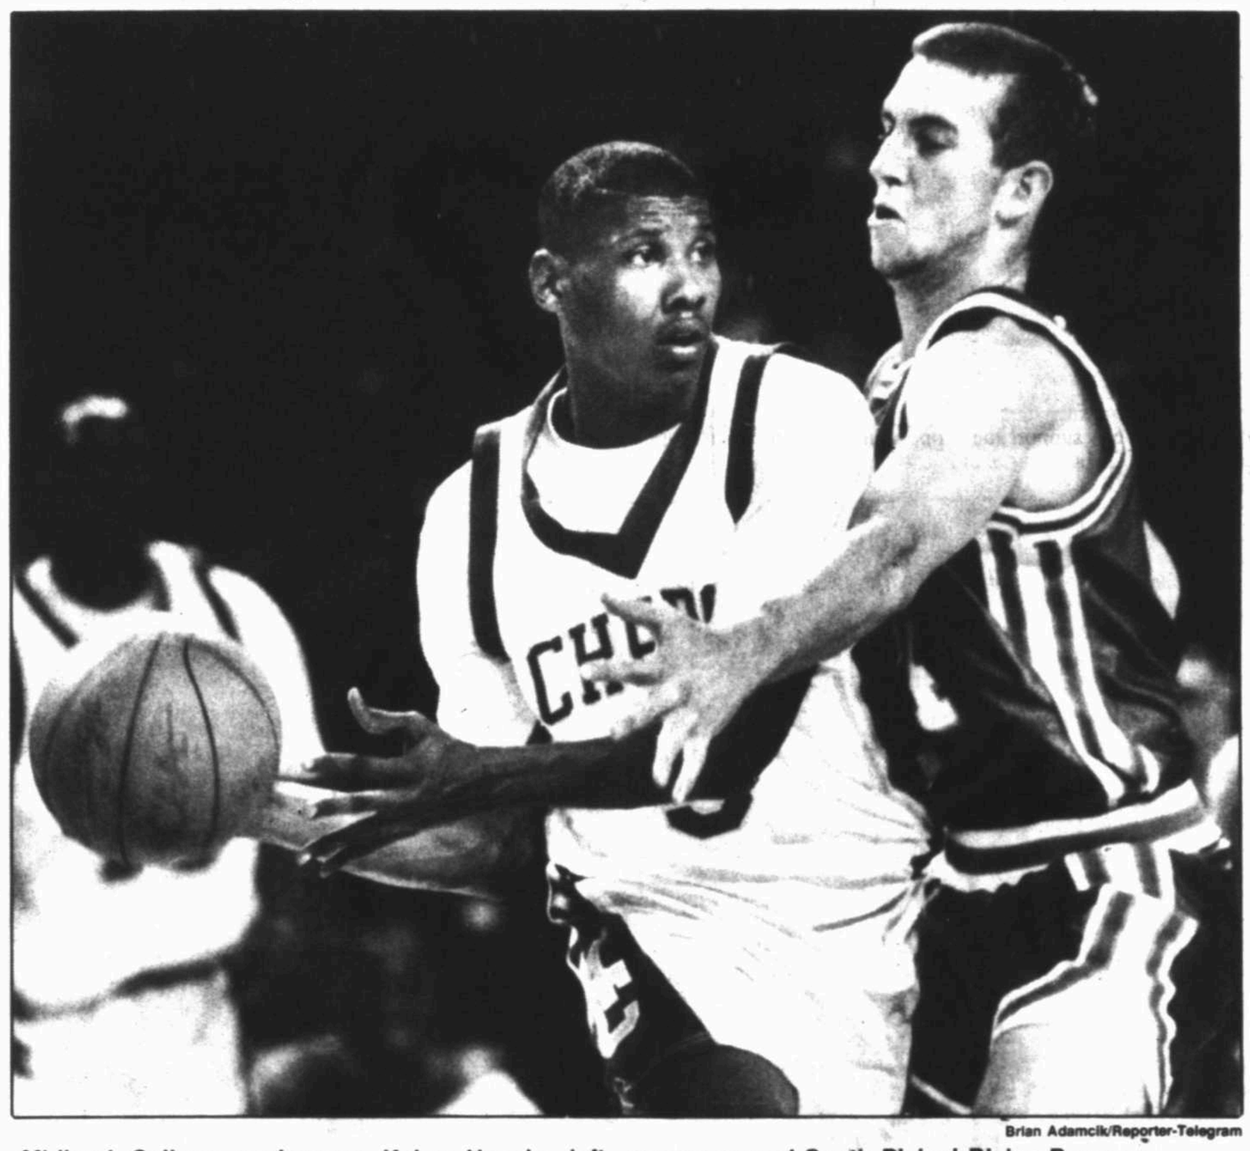

The Bulldogs have won four games in a row since that loss to Lee and stand perched to challenge the Eagles for first place. Abilene High is 5-0 in league play and 13-0 on the season while MHS stands at 4-1. Midland High's only loss in a 10-1 season thus far is to defending District 5 champion Lee.

So, between MHS and AHS there is only that one loss in 24 matches. It should be a war.

But Midland High can't rest, win or lose, since the Bulldogs have that second date with Lee at 2 p.m. Saturday at Midland High.

Lee will travel to 0-5 Abilene Cooper today for a 5:30 p.m. match in an effort to stay in the playoff hunt. Lee and San Angelo are just a step behind the Bulldogs with 3-2 league records. It's easy

Chaps back in playoff hunt

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Amazing.

The word conjures up thoughts of over-zealous television football announcers looking for a superlative during a Game of the Week blowout.

But the way the Midland College Chaparrals came from the dead in the second half Monday against South Plains to secure their 73-57 win was the very reason the word amazing was ever invented in the first place.

Down by 16 at the break, MC went on an unstoppable stretch in the first 15 minutes of the second half, outscoring SPC 35-2 to go from a 44-28 deficit to a 63-46 lead with 5:36 remaining. The Chaps outscored SPC 45-13 in the final 20 minutes.

The win gives MC a 4-6 record and a fourth-place tie with SPC in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play with only two games remaining.

Elsewhere in the league, Odessa defeated Howard in Big Spring, 82-76, and New Mexico JC downed NMMI, 84-70.

The comeback of the season was a game that left SPC head coach Ron Mayberry bewitched, bothered and bewildered. At one point during the Chaps' incredible turnaround, Mayberry, who had almost rubbed an indentation in his temples from trying to figure a way out of the debacle, looked down the court at MC head coach Steve Green, shook his head, and said to Green, "Just get me out of this game."

In the waning moments, even a referee yelled over at Green, "Helluva comeback, coach."

There were two clear cut explanations afterward as to why the turn of events occurred.

"We played way over our heads in the first half," Mayberry said, "and then we looked up at the scoreboard and said, 'Gawd, we're ahead.' I told you we were horrible. I've never seen a team choke it down the way we choked it down.

Blast '78 wins Phoenix tournament

Staff report

PHOENIX, Ariz. — The Midland Blast '78 Under-15 boys won the Under 16 Flight 2 boys championship title here Sunday in the 14th annual President's Day Soccer Tournament, which is the largest winter tournament in the United States with over 330 teams competing in various age groups.

And the title came in dramatic fashion as Alex Jacobs scored with 15 seconds left in the title game to give Blast a 2-1 win over the Tucson Celtics.

The championship game was reduced to 25 minutes due to rain and muddy fields and the Blast got off to a slow start with the Celtics scoring eight minutes into the title game. However, Matt Johnson tyed the game on a breakaway goal on a pass from Tim Tipton.

Jacobs then landed the game winner with time nearly out, scoring on a shot from the 20-yard line.

The Blast qualified for the finals after a 1-1 tie with the Cisco Renegades, the Arizona state champions. The score was knotted at 0-0 at the half, but Tyson Yarborough scored with an assist from Roger Belizaire from 18 yards out to give the Blast a 1-0 lead with 15 minutes left in the game. The Renegades answered back with a penalty kick for a 1-1 tie and then got another penalty kick opportunity, which was blocked by Blast goalie Carey Gentry. Gentry allowed only two goals and had 37 saves in the tournament.

Blast also defeated the F.C. Dynamo's, the Pennsylvania state champions, by a 1-0 score when Yarborough scored off a shot deflection. Gentry had the shutout in that game.

In the first game of the tournament, Blast took a 3-1 win over the Phoenix Firebirds. Johnson scored twice and Dustin Huber added the other goal. Gentry was in goal the first half and Jacobs in goal the second half.

The defensive play of John Hardell, Glen Abrams, Russell Sanchez, Sterling Fllis, David Rhodes, Chris Owen and Clay Boyd also aided the four victories.

Blast was coached by Manu Sanon and Tim Miller.

Jordan's 32 sinks Kings

■ NBA Roundup

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored 32 points and the Chicago Bulls beat the Sacramento Kings 119-101 Monday, ending their three-game home losing streak.

Scottie Pippen added 26 points for Chicago. His three-point play capped a 9-0 run at the start of the fourth quarter that put the Bulls ahead 94-78.

The Kings lost for the eighth time in nine games. Wayman Tisdale and Anthony Bonner each had 18 points and Lionel Simmons 16 for Sacramento.

Chicago played without starting forward Horace Grant, who has a bruised back.

Jordan scored 20 points in the second quarter in helping Chicago take a 61-46 halftime lead. Bonner had 12 points in the third quarter as the Kings closed to 81-78.

The game was tied at 36 when Chicago began to pull away in the second quarter. The Kings broke out to a 14-4 lead, with eight of those points from Tisdale.

The Bulls then found their offense and outscored the Kings 24-10 in the last 8:19 of the period to take a 28-24 lead. Pippen led the Bulls with nine points.

Cavaliers 110, Pacers 105

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Mark Price celebrated his 29th birthday with 25 points and John Williams scored four points in a four-second span late in the game as Cleveland handed Indiana its seventh consecutive loss.

The win was the Cavs' third straight and eighth in nine games, while the Pacers are in their longest losing streak since Bob Hill became head coach in 1990.

Indiana closed to 99-98 when Reggie Miller sank a 3-pointer with three minutes to go. Price, however, answered with a 3-pointer over 7-foot-4 Rik Smits as the shot clock wound down on Cleveland's next possession, putting the Cavaliers back ahead by four.

Spurs 102, Clippers 99

LOS ANGELES — David Robinson scored 22 points, including the go-ahead dunk with 10 seconds remaining, as San Antonio survived a 14-point fourth quarter to win their eighth straight game.

Dale Ellis kept the Spurs in the game when they went stone-cold from the floor in the fourth period. He scored nine of San Antonio's 14 points in the quarter and finished with 22.

After Robinson put the Spurs ahead 100-99 with his fastbreak dunk, the Clippers' Ron Harper missed a short jumper and Sean Elliott rebounded for San Antonio.

Elliott was fouled with 0.5 seconds left and made both free throws for the final margin.

Jazz 112, Timberwolves 91

MINNEAPOLIS — Karl Malone scored 16 of his 38 points in the third period on 7-for-7 shooting as Utah continued to dominate Minnesota.

The Jazz are 3-0 this season against the Timberwolves, with an average margin of victory of 20 points.

Malone, who made 16 of 20 field-goal tries in the game, also had 12 rebounds for Utah, while Jeff Malone scored 19 points and John Stockton had 12 assists. The Jazz shot 54 percent from the field to Minnesota's 45 percent.

Chuck Person had 26 points for the Wolves, who have lost six of seven home games. Christian Laettner scored 14 of his 20 points in the second half for Minnesota.

Utah outscored the Wolves 34-17 in the pivotal second period, when Minnesota had just two field goals in the final nine minutes.

Bucks 128, Hornets 122

MILWAUKEE — Frank Brickowski scored 20 points and Milwaukee's reserves, led by rookie Jon Barry, held off a late rally as the Bucks beat Charlotte.

Barry, getting a chance to play because of an elbow injury to Todd Day, scored a career-high 18 points, including 12 in the fourth quarter when he hit a pair of 3-pointers.

Alonzo Mourning had 29 points, 12 rebounds and six blocked shotsw, while Dell Curry scored 24 points for the Hornets, who had their four-game road winning streak snapped.

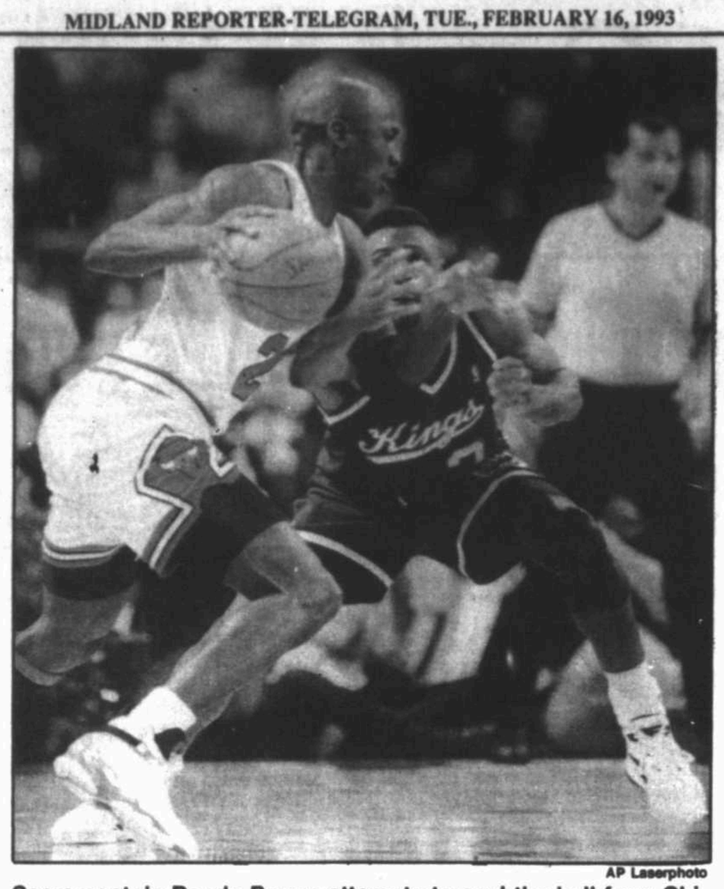

Heat 130, Nuggets 129

MIAMI — Miami, after six consecutive overtime losses this season, finally got a victory for extra work, beating Denver in double overtime on Glen Rice's two free throws with 11 seconds left.

Steve Smith had 21 points, 12 assists and 10 rebounds for the Heat — the second triple-double in franchise history — before fouling out in the second overtime.

Two baskets by Rice, who scored seven points in the second overtime, gave Miami a 127-121 lead, but two free throws each by Reggie Williams and LaPhonso Ellis made it 127-125 with 1:01 left.

Williams, who scored 25 points for the Nuggets, then stole the ball and scored to tie the game with 54 seconds to go.

CHAPS: MC sets sights for Waco's Region V

(From 1C)

If they can't do anything better than that, they don't belong out there."

And from Green: "I can honestly say it was nothing I did. They did it all. They put themselves in a jam and then got themselves out of it. All of the credit goes to those 10 guys with white pants on."

The comeback started with Terrance Rone opening the second half with a field goal followed by a three-pointer. After Rone's quick five, Kirk Ford stepped to the line and nailed two free throws and the Chaps had cut the lead from 16 to nine in less than two minutes. When MC went ahead 46-44, the 18th point of their run, the crowd of 1,500 gave the Chaps a standing ovation, something rare around these parts this season.

Ford finished with a game-high 16 points, while Rone finished with a double-double, 11 points and 11 rebounds.

Sophomore Kelon Haynie's play was almost perfect in the run, as was Richard Edwards'. Together, they combined for 18 points, 13 of which came in the 15 minutes stretch.

"Steve Walston was relentless on the glass," Green said, "and Richard Edwards came off the bench and ignited us a little bit."

The Chaps were dominating on the glass, outrebounding SPC, 48-23. Thirty-five of MC's snatches came in the second half.

"Before the second half started," Mayberry said, "I looked over at my assistant and said, 'I hope we score this half.'"

It was a statement that almost came true.

For SPC, virtually nothing went in. The Texans, who shot 65 percent in the first half, hit on just 4-of-19 shots (21 percent) in the second half to finish the game at 39 percent from the field. The Texans got their first basket of the second half at the 13:29 mark. They didn't score again until 3:25 remained in the game.

Haynie said Green's halftime talk finally turned on a light in the players' heads.

"We just pumped it up, that's all we had to do," Haynie said. "The talk coach gave us at halftime inspired us. He just said everybody had to come out and play hard. Now we have to turn that 15 minutes into 40 minutes.

"This game here is going to carry over. We're going to Waco, definitely."

The Chaps will be off Thursday before New Mexico JC visits Chap Center next Monday. As to whether Monday's second half momentum will carry over is anyone's guess.

"I guess we'll find out," Green said.

Pitchers avoid arbitration

Associated Press

■ Baseball Roundup

Pitchers Jeff Montgomery of Kansas City and Mark Portugal of Houston avoided salary arbitration on Monday by coming to contract terms.

Montgomery, who led the Royals with 39 saves, agreed to a three-year deal worth $11 million including an option year.

Montgomery, 31, received $2.46 million last season. He had asked for $4.3 million a year and the Royals had offered $3.25 million.

He had 39 saves in 46 opportunities with a 2.18 ERA in 1992. His 39 saves were the third highest in club history, trailing Dan Quisenberry's 45 saves in 1983 and 44 in 1984.

Portugal, who spent part of last season on the injury list, avoided arbitration by signing a one-year contract for $1,875,000 with the Astros.

Portugal was asking for $2,225,000 and the Astros offered $1.5 million.

He was 5-2 with a 2.74 ERA in his first 11 starts last season, but he was 0-1 in his next four starts and went on the disabled list on July 17. He underwent surgery July 24 to remove bone chips and a spur from his right elbow.

In an arbitration case held on Monday, Chicago Cubs first baseman Mark Grace had his hearing before arbitrator Harold Bloch. Grace is asked for $4.1 million and the Cubs offered 3.1 million. Grace hit .307 last season with nine homers and 79 RBIs when he made $2,312,500.

The Cincinnati Reds went to a salary arbitration hearing Monday with All-Star infielder Bip Roberts.

At the hearing in Chicago, Roberts asked the arbitrator for $3.9 million, up from his $1.55 million of last season. The Reds offered $2.7 million.

Starting pitcher Tim Belcher, the only other Reds player awaiting salary arbitration, is scheduled for his hearing Thursday in Chicago.

In an agreement reached over the weekend, the Philadelphia Phillies and pitcher Terry Mulholland agreed to a one-year contract for $2.6 million to avoid arbitration.

Mulholland, 13-11 in 1992 with a 3.81 ERA, asked for $3.1 million and was offered $2 million. He made $1.25 million last season.

In other news on Monday:

— Pitcher Yorkis Perez, a perennial prospect since signing a pro contract at age 15, agreed to a Triple-A contract with the Montreal Expos. Perez, now 25, spent last season pitching in Japan. He has been with five major league organizations, but has appeared in only three big-league games, all with the Chicago Cubs in 1991. He was released earlier this month by Seattle.

— Veteran infielder Jim Gantner, who's been with the Milwaukee Brewers for 15 years, moved near retirement when the team announced he would go to spring training as a coach. Gantner is the AL's all-time leader in fielding percentage for a second baseman at .992.

Pitchers Brian Bohanon and Barry Manuel agreed to one-year contracts with the Texas Rangers.

Bohanon was 1-1 with a 6.31 ERA in 18 games, seven of them starts, for Texas last season. He also pitched at the Triple-A and Double-A levels, combining to go 6-3.

Manuel will miss about three months of the upcoming season after undergoing surgery on his right elbow last week. He was 1-0 in three games for Texas last season, and spent most of his time at Triple-A Oklahoma City, going 1-8 with a 5.27 ERA.

Tech races to win

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Will Flemons scored a home court record of 47 points in leading Texas Tech to a 117-99 victory Monday night over Oral Roberts.

The victory marks the first time the Red Raiders (12-9) of the Southwest Conference have won nine non-conference games in a season. Kenny Bohanon led Oral Roberts' Titans (5-16) with 32 points.

After scoring 14 points in the first half, Flemons exploded for 33 in the second half. He also had 13 rebounds, 4 steals and an assist.

Jason Sasser also had 13 rebounds for Tech.

Texas Tech never trailed after Flemons gave the Raiders an 8-6 lead.

The titans came no closer than nine points in the second half as Tech used 3-point goals to pad its lead.

Lenny Holly scored 23 points and Koy Smith 20 for Tech, while Sasser added 13. Behind Bohanon for the Titans were Ray Thompson with 22, Chris McKinney with 19 and Matt Crain with 18.

SOCCER: Lee faces Cooper

(From 1C)

to see that Saturday's outing between the two local teams could have a huge bearing on how the playoff race shapes up for the second half stretch run.

Odessa Permian, 2-3, takes on San Angelo in the other District 5 game today while Odessa High hosts Amarillo Palo Duro in a non-conference game.

The Midland Lee girls, playing their first soccer season, will carry a 4-2 record into the 4:30 p.m. match today with San Angelo at the Lee field. Midland High's girls have an open date.

Stanton nails Reagan County

Staff report

STANTON — The Stanton Lady Buffaloes downed Reagan County, 77-59, in a practice game Monday as Laura Herm and Kindra Woodfin each had 18 points.

Stanton, which regular season play at 16-8, also got 15 points from Sande Bundas and 14 from Stacy Tollison. Sonja Hopper had nine rebounds.

Stanton will play the winner of tonight's district playoff game between Van Horn and Anthony in the bi-district round of the Class 2A playoffs at a site and time still to be determined.

Firing sparks ABCA protest

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The board of directors of the National Association of Basketball Coaches met by phone for 1½ hours Monday, talking about how and whether to protest the firing of California coach Lou Campanelli.

With a 10-7 record and a young, promising team, Campanelli was unexpectedly dismissed last week.

"Our hope at this time is to issue a statement Tuesday," Jim Haney, NABC executive director, said. "This firing of coaches at mid-season is an issue that we have to address. There have been four so far this year in Division I, and we understand two more have not been announced.

"In this particular case, there are a couple of bases left for us to touch before we say anything."

The NABC is powerless to stop the firing of coaches, who answer to the chief executive officer at each school. But the coaches' group, trying to take a more active, public role, could bring embarrassment with its command of widespread media attention.

"We're very sensitive to the fact that the presidents have the authority to make decisions, whether we like the decisions or not," Haney said. "We're trying to get a sense for what happened and how it happened and develop an appropriate response. The broader issue of coaches being fired in-season is a great concern."

Campanelli, who signed point guard Jason Kidd, one of the most highly sought prospects in the nation last year, won 19 or more games in four of his first five seasons.

"The biggest thing we're in total agreement on is that the guy wasn't given any hearing before they fired him," said Iowa State coach Johnny Orr, president of the NABC. "On the 24th of January he got a phone call from the chancellor congratulating him on the good job he was doing. He got a letter from the guy who fired him saying good job, keep it up. Then two weeks later they fire the guy."

The NABC board consists of 16 coaches, including Duke's Mike Krzyzewski, Kansas' Roy Williams, Southern Cal's George Raveling and Louisville's Denny Crum.

New Orleans wins big

Associated Press

■ Top 25 Roundup

NEW ORLEANS — Melvin Simon scored 19 points and No. 21 New Orleans held Louisiana Tech to 13 points in the first half Monday night en route to a 69-41 rout.

New Orleans (19-2, 13-0 Sun Belt Conference) has won 16 of its last 17 games and is tied with No. 8 Cincinnati for the second-best record in the Top 25.

The Privateers took control after an early 4-4 tie, going on a 26-6 run in which Louisiana Tech (6-15, 3-11) made just one field goal.

Mark Dick's 3-pointer with 33 seconds left was the Bulldogs' only basket in the final 11 minutes.

No. 18 Tulane 63, Canisius 41

NEW ORLEANS — Carlin Hartman scored 15 points as No. 18 Tulane survived a sloppy shooting night and beat Canisius in a non-conference game.

The Green Wave (17-4) fell behind 10-2 as they failed to score a basket in the opening 5:55, but they came back to take a 33-19 halftime lead and were comfortably ahead throughout the second half.

Astros' Finley donates money

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros owner Drayton McLane's generosity spilled over to one of his players Monday when center fielder Steve Finley donated $250,000 to begin his own charity organization.

Finley, who signed a 3-year, $10.4 million contract last week, said the goal of the fund is to encourage children to stay in school and live a drug-free life.

McLane has spent $69 million to sign five players, including Finley, since taking over as owner.

Free agent signee Greg Swindell, who grew up in Houston, bought an 18-seat box and will distribute the tickets to family and friends throughout the season.

Finley and his wife, Amy, also said they could purchase 20 full season tickets and use them as incentives for children who complete designated challenges.

playing for."

Stephenson is pleased with where his Bulldogs stand at present.

"I feel we're playing better than any time this season, and now is the time to do that. Our kids have come a long way, and we've worked out some kinks. I tell my kids all along, that if we get a break here and a break there, anything can happen. We feel like we can play with any of the teams around."

Senior Antwan Goodley has also passed the 1,000-point career mark and Stephenson says that senior Mike Melzer has set the school's single season assist mark.

Win or lose, House has set up a practice game with Plainview for 3 p.m. Saturday in Brownfield.

"We'll play regardless," House said. "We want to keep the kids in the mode of playing two times a week."

Stephenson is also thinking of playing a practice game, but that game had not been locked up as of Monday.

TYSON: Hearing held

(From 1C)

that jurors in the case should not have been allowed to hear a tape recording of a telephone call that Desiree Washington made to report the assault.

Testimony from three witnesses the defense claims can contradict part of Washington's testimony should have been allowed, Dershowitz argued.

The appeals court, which could order a new trial or let Tyson's conviction and 6-year sentence stand, did not say when it would have a decision.

Marion Superior Court Judge Patricia Gifford barred the three from testifying, ruling in part that they came forward too late. Dershowitz told the appeals court that his defense team was delayed by spending extra time with the witnesses to make sure they were truthful.

"It is unfair to punish Mike Tyson because his lawyers acted in good faith," Dershowitz said.

Dershowitz also argued that the judge erred by not letting jurors consider whether Tyson mistakenly believed Washington consented to sex.

And the appeal questions the judge's selection, charging prosecutors manipulated court assignments to place the case before a sympathetic judge.

Arguing for the state, chief deputy attorney general Lawrence Reuben said Dershowitz was trying to distract the appeals judges from the legal issues at hand.

"This appeal is not about reweighing the evidence, as the defense would have you do," Reuben said.

The two sides presented oral arguments before the three-judge panel for about two hours, ending shortly after noon.

Afterward, boxing promoter Don King said he was optimistic that Tyson's conviction would be reversed.

"I think it was a travesty what happened here," he said of the rape conviction. "But that's what makes America so great, to have an opportunity to redress for recourse."

Neither Tyson nor Washington, of Coventry, R.I., attended today's session.

Dershowitz said he was going to the Indiana Youth Center west of Indianapolis to tell Tyson about the hearing.

Tyson, 26, was convicted Feb. 10, 1992, after Washington told jurors he raped her nearly seven months earlier in his Indianapolis hotel room.

SMU hires assistants

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist coach Tom Rossley fired three assistant coaches and hired four more on Monday in an off-season shakeup of the Mustangs football team.

Rossley hired Tommy Adams, defensive line, who spent the last eight seasons as an assistant at Sam Houston State; David Knaus, linebackers, who was the defensive coordinator at Appalachian State the past four years; Bill Maskill, defensive assistant, who was an assistant at Wake Forest the past three seasons; and Vincent White, receivers, the offensive coordinator at the University of the Pacific.

Dismissed were Rusty Russell, Mike Washburn and Curtis Jones. A fourth coach, Tim Lewis, defensive backs coach for the last four years, resigned to take a similar position at Pittsburgh.

"This group brings exceptional talent and experience to SMU," Rossley said. "The fact that we were able to attract such high quality coaches is a credit to our program. I'm very optimistic about our future."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your practical, down-to-earth ways win you new respect from friends and competitors alike. May marks the beginning of a period of strong financial progress. Various business patterns change in midsummer, with you becoming the beneficiary of favorable trends. Although you have friends from all walks of life, you are especially attracted to people with artistic tendencies. By September, romance will play a more prominent role in your life. Do not be surprised if your family responsibilities increase in November. Younger relatives follow your example.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer James Ingram, historian George Kennan, tennis star John McEnroe, actress Gretchen Wyler.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Scattering your energies will slow you down. Know your priorities and stick to them. Hit the relationship trail with greater understanding. You can make real headway.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It is easier to understand a love match now. Candid communication is the key. Do not be afraid to discuss serious issues. All business signals are "go." Move forward at top speed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are acquiring widespread prestige by doing skillfully what only you can do. Younger people look up to you. Keep an open mind in key conversations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Troubleshooting for a VIP or family member boosts your credibility and image. It may be necessary to go the full distance for this person. Pace yourself in order to get everything done.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A financial or property agreement is feasible, even if authorities do not immediately agree. Do not let an overly long meeting or talk throw your schedule out of whack.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You sense the importance of improving home or work via new methods. Build rapport with your customers or clients by offering top-notch service. Seek legal or vocational advice for a young person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Compromise on practical matters, but do not sell yourself or your standards short. Escapist thinking should be avoided in favor of direct action.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Favorable aspects influence contracts, trips and business transactions today and tomorrow. You may be getting clearer signals of gains to come. Go forward on all cylinders.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Meet your obligations promptly despite distractions. Those with careers in writing or speaking must choose their words carefully. Romance turns chilly tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): "Cooperation and compromise" should be your motto now. Changing priorities can produce surprises and altered plans. Go with the flow instead of insisting on having your own way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your efforts are finally producing results. A new cycle of activity begins now. Clever, original speculative ventures involving friends or groups are in the spotlight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You reach an important agreement with someone in a position of authority, or with a large company or institution. Money is involved. There may be minor delays, however. Ration your energies.

Opening lead: ?

We are indebted to Dr. George Rosenkranz's excellent book More Tips for Tops for this deal from the 1989 Mexican Nationals. Study only the West hand and the auction, then select your opening lead before reading on.

THE PICTURE IS COMPLETE

North's heart cue-bid showed a limit raise or better in spades. Even opposite a limit raise and only three trumps, game rated to be a shoo-in, so South got there by the shortest possible route.

The author sat West, playing with his favorite partner, Eddie Wold. Without East's double, West would surely have led the ace of hearts. It would then have taken a diamond shift at trick two to defeat the contract one trick.

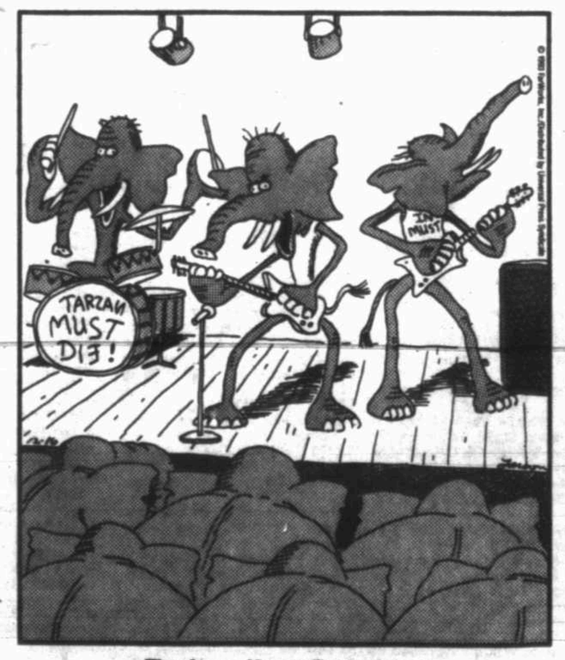

The double, however, pointed the way to a better defense. Dr. Rosenkranz reasoned that by bidding two suits, the second at the three-level, East had to have 10 or 11 cards in those suits. Also, East was unlikely to have doubled four spades with a spade void. Therefore, East had to very short in the fourth suit, diamonds.

For the opening lead West selected the ten of diamonds, a suit preference signal for the higher of the other two side suits, hearts. East ruffed the diamond, dutifully returned a heart to partner's ace and scored another diamond ruff. The ace and king of clubs completed a two-trick set.

As the great Terence Reese once wrote: "There is no such thing as a blind opening lead; just deaf opening leaders!"

Crystal Gayle enjoys not having to depend on albums

INDIANAPOLIS — Country singer Crystal Gayle, named to receive an Indiana Governor's Arts Award, says being a veteran star spares her the pressure of depending on her latest album for fame.

"I have developed over the years a career where I don't need records or to record to do things," Gayle said. "I'm thankful for that. Nowadays, it's not easy to do, especially when there are so many new names out there."

Gayle, 42, born Brenda Gail Webb in Wabash, will be in Indianapolis today to receive the award at a ceremony also honoring actor Karl Malden and seven other artists.

"It's just nice to be honored where you grew up," said Gayle, who lives in Nashville, Tenn.

Gayle, youngest sister of country legend Loretta Lynn, is best known for the 1977 hit, "Don't It Make My Brown Eyes Blue." She still performs about 100 shows a year and continues to record. But more of her time is spent with her husband, Wabash native Bill Gatzimos, and their two children.

She said she isn't sure how long she'll maintain her trademark floor-length hair.

"Every now and then I want to (cut it) and I realize it's a trademark," Gayle said.

LOS ANGELES — Former "Sea Hunt" TV star Lloyd Bridges was back on the high seas on Monday, spending the Presidents Day holiday aboard a cruise ship with his son, actor Beau Bridges.

L. Bridges

Prior to boarding the Crown Princess luxury liner in Miami, the elder Bridges acted in a scene filmed for an upcoming "Hot Shots" movie sequel.

"It was shot in the morning underwater; it was an underwater sequence, a little spoof on 'Sea Hunt.' Then, I got on the plane that afternoon," Bridges told KTLA-TV.

The television station interviewed the Bridges father-son acting duo during a live satellite report from the deck of the Crown Princess as it sailed in the Caribbean.

Bridges said his next shipboard activity would be a competitive game of table tennis with his son. "We're going to play a very strenuous game of pingpong," he said.

"I'm going to beat the socks off this guy here," Beau Bridges replied.

PHOENIX — Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor remembered Thurgood Marshall fondly at a commemorative service at the First Institutional Baptist Church.

Marshall, the first black Supreme Court justice and the lawyer who successfully argued the 1954 Brown vs. Board of Education case that ended school segregation, died of heart failure on Jan. 24, 1993.

"He always had a joke or an anecdote. In the 10 years I served with him, I never heard the same one twice," O'Connor said Sunday.

"His credo was to always do the best he could with what he had," she said. "He saw the world exactly as it is, but pushed on to make it what it could become."

NEW YORK — Mary Hart of "Entertainment Tonight" says motherhood has given her a new outlook on life.

Hart, 42, gave birth to her son A.J. a year ago.

"I continue my career with a different perspective now," she says in the March issue of McCall's magazine. "I want more of a balance, so I can take A.J. to the doctor and spend as much time as I can with him."

Hart is also making sure she and husband Burt Sugarman, 54, a millionaire businessman, don't lose sight of each other.

"We arrange dates with each other," she says. "We've gone away a couple of times since A.J. was born, which I think is important in maintaining the relationship."

McCall's says that Hart, who reportedly makes a seven-figure salary, is so popular that the show was flooded with letters from upset viewers when she took maternity leave in 1991. Her first night back gave the show its highest ratings of the season.

NEW YORK — Singer-songwriter Lenny Kravitz, ex-husband of former "Cosby" kid Lisa Bonet, is enjoying bachelor life on an island in the Bahamas, where he is building a home and recording studio.

The dreadlocked guitar player says he prefers music to sex.

"Maybe I just don't care that much about sex," Kravitz says in the March issue of Details magazine. "It's great, but I believe music's better."

Kravitz, whose biggest hit was "It Ain't Over Til It's Over," has just finished his third album. It's called "Are You Gonna Go My Way." His previous albums were "Let Love Rule" and "Mama Said."

Kravitz, son of actress Roxie Roker, who played Helen Willis on "The Jeffersons," and TV executive Sy Kravitz, grew up in New York City. He and Bonet split up in 1991. They have one child, Zoe, born in 1989.

Kravitz says he has fallen in love with the Bahamian island of Eleuthera.

Loss of fuel causes last operating bakery in Sarajevo to close

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Sarajevo's misery hit a new low Monday as the last operating bakery ran out of fuel and the capital's 380,000 residents were told to stay indoors because of fierce shelling.

Snow was back on the streets of the embattled city. A natural gas pipeline was cut and electric power was available through only one precarious line.

Food problems mounted as city leaders refused for a fourth day to distribute U.N. aid to protest U.N. failure to get supplies to eastern Bosnia, where up to 200,000 Muslims are reported trapped in pockets of land surrounded by ethnic Serbs.

Ten trucks carrying food and medicine to the eastern Cerska region were stuck on the Serbian-Bosnian border. Alemka Lisinski, a spokeswoman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, said Bosnian Serbs refused to let them through. About 40,000 Slavic Muslims reportedly sought refuge at Cerska.

At the United Nations, envoy Cyrus Vance called Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic by telephone to appeal for passage for the aid convoys, said a U.N. source. The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, gave no details of Milosevic's response.

In Sarajevo, mortar shells thudded in the downtown and shells fired by government forces hit some Serb positions. Sarajevo main hospital said three people were killed and 18 wounded Monday.

Bosnian radio reported that many areas of the city and suburbs were shelled and that the western suburb of Dobrinja was still being hit in the evening, with its residents taking shelter in basements.

Serbs began besieging the Bosnian capital soon after Bosnia's majority Muslims and Croats voted for Bosnia's secession from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia a year ago. Bosnia's Serbs opposed secession.

Heavy fighting also reportedly flared in the Serb-held enclave of Krajina in southwest Croatia. Fighting between Croats and ethnic Serb resumed last month after a yearlong truce.

In the latest casualty count from the Bosnian war, the government listed 134,208 people killed or missing in areas under Bosnian control. Serbs have captured two-thirds of Bosnian territory.

Western officials estimate the Bosnian death toll at more than 18,000, but acknowledge that is conservative. They say 1 million were made homeless.

The government reported 146,158 people wounded, and said 64,050 of them will be invalids because of amputations or major injuries.

At Sarajevo's only remaining bakery, manager Enver Kazazic said gas and diesel supplies ran out and ovens produced no loaves Monday for the first time in the war.

"Sarajevo is now a town without bread," he said.

He said 2,500 loaves left over from Sunday's production were delivered to hospitals. The main hospital alone needs 4,000 loaves daily and refugee centers need 10,000, he said.

Although there is adequate food in Sarajevo at the moment, baking ingredients and other supplies are increasingly in short supply as the government refuses aid. Also, very few homes have enough fuel or cooking facilities to make bread, one of the staples in the war-torn capital.

Eastern Bosnia was under heavy attack Monday by Serb artillery and tanks, Bosnian radio reported. It said villages were flattened and 19 civilians killed by mortar fire.

Brig. Gen. Hussein Abdul Razek of Egypt, the U.N. commander in Sarajevo, is departing as part of a normal rotation. In a farewell message he called the war "a real disaster which shocks our civilization, our feelings as human beings.

"There must come a time when the fighting does end, for the sake of the children."

His successor has yet to be announced.

In other developments Monday:

■ French Health Minister Bernard Kouchner, returning to Zagreb from a visit to Sarajevo, said he secured agreement among Bosnia's warring parties for a prisoner swap Tuesday involving 54 prisoners held by Muslims at Tarcin, 54 prisoners held by Serbs at Batkovici, and 108 Serbs held by Bosnian Croats.

■ Yugoslav President Dobrica Cosic denied allegations Bosnian Serbs systematically raped Muslim and Croat women in Bosnia.

But Biljana Plavsic, a deputy to Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, acknowledged rapes did occur — "but the assertion that (rape) was part of a Serbian strategy is untrue."

■ A Yugoslav barge flotilla reached Ukraine, refusing Romanian orders to stop along the Danube River, Romanian state TV said Monday. There was concern the vessels would pick up cargo and return, a violation of the U.N. embargo.

■ After talks with Turkish President Turgut Ozal, President Zhelyu Zhelev of Bulgaria urged Russia Monday to "intervene more actively" in the Balkan crisis. Zhelev backed the latest U.S. initiatives for peace in Bosnia.

Trade embargo hits hard for Haitian workers

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Down where the capital's proud central plaza trails off into unpaved alleys, clusters of jobless men sit amid the skeletons of cannibalized cars.

Many are mechanics, free-lancing for the auto parts and repair shops whose peeling signs — "7 Freres," "Jerusalem," "Super Star" — line the crowded streets. Others are hoping for any odd job, perhaps lifting or pushing a broken-down car.

Life was never easy in this junkyard row, where the impoverished nation's battered cars come to be patched up or die.

But in the 17 months since an army coup and a U.S.-led trade embargo, it's turned horribly hard.

"You see how skinny I am?" said Cantave St. Louis. The gaunt, 61-year-old repair man picked at the front of his threadbare shirt. "I can't find work."

He stood outside a repair shop that bore a grease-stained but still colorful mural of Jesus Christ, his head ringed by small doves.

The shop's owner, who identified himself as Leget, gripped a tiny well-thumbed Bible and crossed his bare feet in the dust and metal shavings.

He explained in Creole how the competition was killing him.

"There's less work, so to meet expenses I must charge more for it. But the people can't afford to pay more. No work. No money."

For the mechanics, a good day can mean the equivalent of $5 in pay. But with their ranks swollen by workers who've lost steady jobs elsewhere, good days are elusive.

Jean Elie, 32, used to work in a service station. After the coup he was let go, and now he haunts the lower Champ de Mars, often going several days without earning anything.

The Champ du Mars is a grassy, tree-lined downtown plaza with statues of the country's founding fathers and a bandshell where national celebrations take place.

When Elie returns home empty-handed, his wife is stoic. "She understands how it is," he explains. The couple have a 3-year-old daughter, and 2-month-old son.

Even before the coup, in which soldiers ousted elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Haiti was on a downward slide. Unemployment in the hemisphere's poorest nation was perhaps 40 percent. The gross national product had slipped about 20 percent in the last decade, standing at a meager $391 per inhabitant.

The embargo has proved full of leaks and loopholes, however, and has not dislodged the army or a powerful conservative elite accustomed to ruling Haiti.

Prince Charles lays wreath at Mexican monument

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles laid a memorial wreath at a national war monument Monday before going to meet with Mexico City's mayor and other officials on the first official day of a visit to Mexico.

Charles, who arrived here Sunday evening from Houston piloting the controls of a Royal Air Force jet, was later to tour a public housing project and meet with Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

The Prince of Wales laid a wreath at the monument to the "Ninos Heroes," or "Boy Heros," six military cadets who jumped off the walls of Chapultepec Castle rather than surrender to U.S. invaders during the 1846-47 Mexican War.

Charles greeted about 200 school children waving Mexican flags and Union Jacks at the monument.

The heir to the British throne comes to Mexico after a three-day trip to the United States, his first outside Europe since the announcement of his separation from Princess Diana.

After laying the wreath Charles was driven to city hall, where he was to meet with Mexico City Mayor Manuel Camacho Solis and exchange gifts.

Later the prince was scheduled to meet with urban experts to discuss some of the pollution and development problems of this city of 18 million, before touring a public housing and meeting with President Salinas.

During his four-day official visit to Mexico, Charles will fly to Guadalajara, site of a deadly gasoline explosion last April, and tour some of the reconstruction sites funded by the British government there.

Later he will meet with businessmen, play a polo match in Mexico City, and visit an archeological site and an insect-dye producing center in the southern state of Oaxaca.

Gulf states seek to counter Iran's submarines

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — The wealthy Persian Gulf states are turning their attention to anti-submarine warfare, unheard of in the region until Iran recently bought Russian submarines.

In the past, navies took third place in the defense priorities of gulf states, after air and land forces. That is changing rapidly, experts say.

As the new dimension in the area's weapons buildup since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, anti-submarine warfare holds center stage at a five-day arms exhibition that opened Sunday with displays by 350 companies from 34 nations.

"There's now a definite concern, particularly in the southern gulf, about the Iranian submarines," said Richard Coltart of Britain's Marconi Defense Systems, which produces anti-submarine weapons and detection equipment.

The Iranian navy took delivery in December of the first of three Kilo-class diesel-electric submarines from Russia. It was the first country in the oil-rich gulf to acquire such weapons.

That changed the regional balance of naval power. The submarines could threaten tankers outside the Strait of Hormuz, the narrow entry to the gulf, which is the source of 20 percent of the world's oil supply. The subs also could threaten entry into the Red Sea.

Saudi Arabia, Oman and the United Arab Emirates — the countries with the most coastline on the Arabian Peninsula — appear the most concerned. Canada has approved a proposal to sell the Saudis four Halifax-class frigates, a technologically advanced warship with anti-submarine weapons.

"The Kilos are a very distinct danger," said Ian Ewart, an anti-submarine warfare specialist. "They have the capacity to wreak havoc with their torpedoes and mines as well as covert commando operations against coastal oil installations."

Ewart said predicted it could take the gulf states five years to develop a truly effective capability to combat submarines.

Apart from acquiring ships and aircraft capable of fighting subs, the countries will need to lay sonar detection systems on the seabed as Western navies did in the Atlantic to spot Soviet subs during the Cold War.

Iran denies aggressive objectives, but it has worried its Arab neighbors with a major military buildup, of which the submarines are a part.

Vice Adm. Douglas Katz, commander of U.S. Navy forces in the region, said the purchase of the submarines "is beyond what is considered necessary to provide for Iran's security."

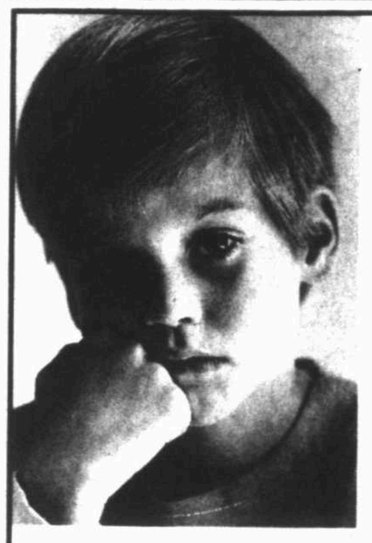

In addition to bolstering naval forces, the Arab states have been spending heavily to build up their air defenses and armies since the Gulf War.

On Monday, the United Arab Emirates gave Westinghouse Electric Co p. a $300 million contract to install a command-and-control system for the UAE's air-defense network. A day earlier, it announced a $3.5 billion contract to buy 390 French tanks and 56 support and recovery vehicles.

A flotilla of U.S., British, Russian, Italian and Dutch warships, most with anti-submarine warfare capability, are docked at Abu Dhabi's Mina Zayed port as part of the arms exhibition, one of the biggest ever staged in the region.

The U.S. Navy frigate USS Samuel B. Roberts is among the ships. It was nearly sunk by an Iranian mine on April 14, 1988, while escorting Kuwaiti tankers during the Iran-Iraq war. Ten sailors were injured in the explosion and fire.

Dollar overseas

LONDON — The U.S. dollar was mixed against the major currencies in light European trading Monday. Gold prices also were mixed.

Trading was quiet with traders unable to take any direction from U.S. markets. There was no foreign exchange activity in the United States because of the Presidents Day holiday.

In London, the British pound was unchanged at $1.4180.

La Quinta settles

SAN ANTONIO — La Quinta Motor Inns Limited Partnership on Monday announced a tentative agreement with dissident unitholders to halt a takeover bid.

The agreement calls for the partnership, which owns 31 of the approximately 210 La Quinta motels nationwide, to increase its annual distribution from 80 cents to $1.

In addition, the partnership's general partner La Quinta Motor Inns Inc. must purchase up to 15 percent of the 3.98 million partnership units by July 1994. The step remedies the dissident group's chief complaint — that the managers of the inns had little or no stake in their financial performance.

In a statement, La Quinta said its purchase of the units would "minimize disruption of the continuity of the business operations of the partnership."

La Quinta Motor Inns Inc. earlier this month reported an $8.8 million loss for 1992, partially due to costs from a restructuring imposed after a 1991 battle with stockholders. The company earned $129,000 in 1991.

Adidas stake

LONDON — Robert Louis-Dreyfus, who for the last three years has helped stabilize the giant British advertising company Saatchi & Saatchi PLC, will put his marketing and financial experience to work restoring another battered company: Adidas AG.

A group including Louis-Dreyfus said Monday that it had acquired a controlling stake in the troubled German athletic shoe company from Bernard Tapie, a French investor and politician, for $370 million.

Louis-Dreyfus, who had previously said he would leave Saatchi this spring, will become the president of Adidas, whose profits and market share have withered in recent years under intense competition from Nike and Reebok.

The transaction, which had been widely rumored in the last few weeks, follows the collapse last year of an agreement to sell Adidas to the Pentland Group, a British sporting goods company.

Pentland abruptly pulled out of the deal in October after it studied Adidas' books and Tapie rebuffed its attempts to negotiate a lower price.

Energy tax will be 'tough sell'

■ Broad-taxed proposal will 'get everybody mad,' administration official says.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The energy tax that President Clinton is poised to propose is certain to upset nearly everyone from consumers to oil producers.

But administration officials, expecting a tough sell, say that could be a plus.

"It gets everybody mad," said an administration official who requested anonymity. "That's shared sacrifice. The question is how much will (industry and consumer groups) oppose it."

Administration and congressional sources, speaking in advance of Clinton's speech to the nation Monday night, said the president was moving in the direction of a broad-based energy tax. It would be pegged to the heat content of a particular fuel. It would apply to all fuels and could affect the cost of everything from driving a car to heating homes and factories.

The energy tax idea "is worse than a sales tax" on fuel, said John Hughes of the Electricity Consumers Resource Council. "It goes after energy as if energy is a sin."

Consumer groups and liberals could be in the forefront of the opposition.

While less visible than a gasoline tax, a broad-based levy would hit the poor and middle class harder than the well-to-do. That's because poorer families spend a greater proportion of their money for fuel and utilities.

"These taxes are about four times as tough on the middle class as they are on the rich and about eight times as tough on the poor," said Citizens for Tax Justice, a group financed chiefly by labor.

The proposed tax would be based on a fuel's British Thermal Units, or BTUs. One BTU is the amount of energy required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit.

Because it is based on energy content, the tax would hit coal the hardest, then natural gas, then oil. Analysts estimate a 12-cent tax per 1 million BTUs could raise $10 billion in tax revenue. Such a tax would add 11 percent to the price of coal, 7 percent to natural gas and 3 percent to oil.

Most lobbying groups were closed Monday for Presidents' Day. But those spokesmen available to comment had little good to say about an energy tax.

Some industry groups previously declared their opposition in hopes of subverting the idea before it was announced.

"An energy tax is a Marie Antoinette levy. It's a piece of cake for the economic upper crust, but slices significant dough out of the pockets of daily breadwinners," Larry Hobart, head of the American Public Power Association, said in a letter to Clinton.

The association, which represents municipally owned utility companies, also said the proposal could worsen unemployment, as industries lay off workers to compensate for higher costs.

The administration is prepared to argue that an across-the-board tax is fair, in part because of the historically low taxes and prices Americans pay for energy, compared to other nations.

Studies have shown that consumers in Japan and Europe, for example, pay two or three times as much for fuel as Americans.

But industry groups said raising energy taxes at home will undermine one of the few competitive edges American businesses enjoy.

Firm is to rent cellular phones

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — A rental company plans to offer cellular telephones through machines that will release units to consumers with good credit cards.

In April, Metro Cellular Rentals plans to bring cellular telephone rental machines to airports, hotels, amusement parks, shopping centers, car agencies, lobbies of big corporations and other heavy pedestrian traffic areas.

These units — called Automated Cellular Distribution Centers — are shaped like big phones.

Customers would insert a major credit card into the unit and a deposit ranging from $500 to $750 will be approved or rejected. If approved, a door pops open and a telephone kit comes out. The kit contains an activated cellular telephone, a 110 volt charger, two batteries and other accessories.

The cost is $5 a day plus $1.50 per minute of airtime, the company said. There is no turn-on fee. There are 12 phones in each machine.

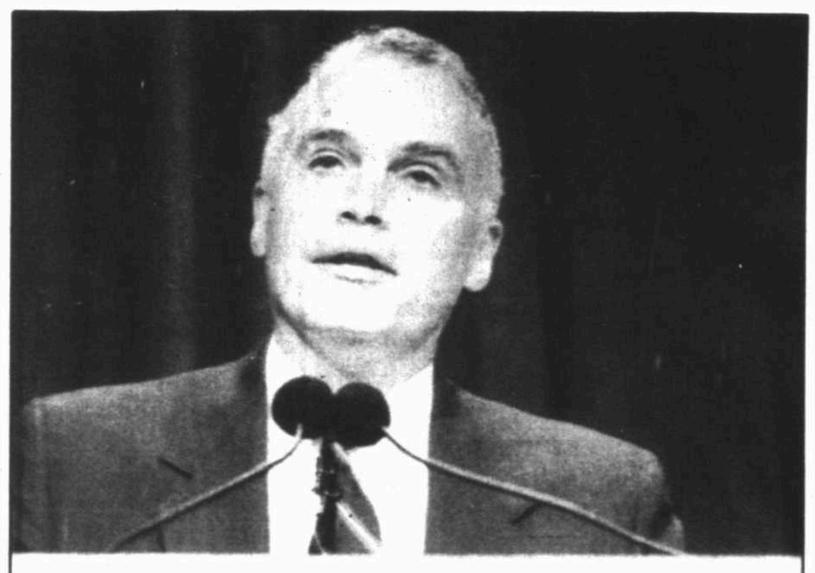

"I felt that transportation and communication is more important to the business community than anything," said Gary Wendt, a suburban Chatsworth resident who is the co-owner of Metro Cellular.

Temporary transportation needs are being met by rental car companies, Wendt said, but not communications.

So when he saw an ad for rental telephone machines made by a Sims Communications Inc., a Delray Beach, Fla. company, he asked questions.

Sims president Don Marks said the venture took $3.5 million and four years of research.

Banking on the growing need for cellular phones, Wendt plans to have 250 telephone rental units in place within a year.

IBM to unveil more powerful minicomputer

N.Y. Times News Service

IBM is to introduce today a series of more powerful minicomputers and software products in an effort to rejuvenate its midrange computer business.

IBM's AS-400 family of minicomputers has been one its bright spots in the last couple of years, posting strong growth and profits. But its minicomputer sales slipped alarmingly late last year, especially in Europe, where IBM gets about half its minicomputer revenues, analysts estimated.

Some analysts said the sales slippage was mainly a result of the weak economies in Europe and Japan and was not a shift away from IBM machines. By December, the AS-400 sales began to pick up again, they said.

Nonetheless, IBM faces increasing competition in the market for midrange computers, which, broadly defined, are machines priced from $15,000 to $1 million.

Traditional rivals like Hewlett-Packard, Digital Equipment and NCR offer minicomputers with the Unix operating system, an industry standard software, or "open" system.

And new companies like Sequent Computer Systems and Pyramid Technology have entered the minicomputer business with machines built around lower-cost microprocessor technology that also run on open software systems. The IBM machine uses a proprietary operating system.

In the mid-range computer market, IBM still holds the largest share, at roughly 22 percent. The AS-400's big edge is the thousands of existing software applications, from data base programs to general accounting, that have been written specifically for the IBM machine.

Still, the rival microprocessor-based machines are cheaper, and more software applications are being written to run on their open systems.

"The AS-400 has got to keep up with this new breed of minicomputers because that's where the industry is heading," said Gary Dvorchak, an analyst for Hambrecht & Quist Inc. in San Francisco.

Sears is recalling about 400,000 faulty Kenmore dishwashers

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 400,000 Kenmore dishwashers sold over the last three years are being recalled because of an electrical problem with their timers that could cause them to catch fire, Sears Roebuck & Co. said Monday.

Owners should stop using the dishwashers immediately, Sears said.

About 30 of the machines have experienced timer failures caused by overheating and shorting out, the retailer said. Four of them have developed fires bad enough to cause smoke damage to surrounding counter tops and cabinets.

Sears said it is sending letters to all customers who purchased one of the affected Kenmore models between February 1990 and October 1992. The company is also asking owners who have not received letters to check their dishwasher's model number.

Owners can arrange for free repairs by calling (800) 998-8470.

Federal law limits 'holds' banks put on checks

By Bill Doyle

Q: I'm tired of being ripped off by my bank, broker, mutual funds and others who handle my money.

Doyle

My bank's literature states it takes five working days for out-of-state checks to be credited to my account. Recently, I received a notice from the bank that I was overdrawn — six days after a more-than-adequate out-of-state check was deposited.

There oughta be a law.

A: There is. It's a piece of federal legislation called the Expedited Funds Availability Act.

Since Sept. 1, 1990, the "holds" banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions and other depository institutions have been allowed to place on checks has been limited to two business days on local checks and five business days on nonlocal checks.

For this purpose, a local check is defined as one written on an account at a depository institution located in the same Federal Reserve check processing region as the institution on which the check was drawn. There are 48 such regions.

It's clear your problem is that there was at least one nonbusiness day between the time you deposited that nonlocal check and the day your bank marked your account as overdrawn.

Q: I deposited $900 in cash — nine $100 bills — in my checking account at my bank's local branch. That brought the balance in my account to $1,145. I mentioned to the teller that I was going downtown to pay bills with checks.

She told me not to write checks for more than $245 that day, or I would be overdrawn. When I protested, she called the manager over. He said the same thing.

Isn't that crazy?

A: Sort of, but it follows the letter of the regulations.

Deposits by cash, U.S. Treasury checks, state and local government checks, cashier's checks and wire deposits generally must be made available for withdrawal the day after deposit — not the day of deposit.

Q: When I mail a check to an out-of-state mutual fund to buy shares, the money is withdrawn from my bank account the following day. Considering the two-day and five-day holds placed on checks I deposit, how can that be?

A: Chalk it up to rapid mail delivery and that mutual fund's practice of depositing checks as soon as they arrive. Many funds, brokerage firms and other business organizations bundle up checks for deposit quickly — sometimes every hour or half-hour.

Then, through courier services, the checks are sent to the banks on which the checks were drawn, where the amounts involved are immediately deducted from depositors' accounts.

The process can be accomplished in one day's time.

Q: In December, I received notice that a municipal bond I owned had been called for early redemption on Jan. 1. I sent my bond certificate to the bank trustee for the bond issue. My return receipt showed the bank received the certificate on Dec. 28.

I phoned the bank Jan. 7, asking about my check for the bond's redemption price. I was told that checks for that group of bonds were scheduled to have been mailed Jan. 7, but "errors had been found" and the new mailing date was to be Jan. 12.

Finally, on Jan. 25, I received my check. So, other people had the use of my money for almost a month. Who?

A: That bank. As trustee, the bank had the money in house to pay off the bonds as they were presented for redemption. Your check should have been mailed to you no later than Jan. 2, the first business day after the call date.

Tell the bank you want interest from Jan. 1 through the date the check was mailed to you and, if you don't get it, you'll see the bank in small claims court.

WHAT?!? NEWSPAPER ROUTES?

That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your "day job." Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

Fact: 95% of our Distributors NOW are ADULTS supplementing their income with Route Distributorships!

Fact: Our Distributors make from $400 to $800 monthly AFTER expenses. Some earn even MORE!

The catch? You've got to be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING or what? If you are, and you have dependable transportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

CALL 688-2700 and start making that extra car payment today!

CUTS - N - STUFF has boothes for lease. $75/ week, first month free. 686-9207.

WEEKLY & MONTHLY INCOME

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of it few "Special Allowance" routes, available March 1, 1993. This larger route receives a $50 check each Friday, in addition to the regular monthly route profits. The route is in the Washington Park area.

As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a 7 day a week-commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.

Newspaper distributors provide great supplement income for housewives/ mothers, senior citizens, college students, or any other adult wanting to "Moonlight".
Apply in person 201 E. Illinois or call circulation 688-2700
