BGCT to meet

CORPUS CHRISTI — A faceoff between moderate and conservative factions begins this week as the Baptist General Convention of Texas meets here to decide the future of funding Baylor University. At stake is the $4 million the Baptist school receives annually from the BGCT. A vote will be held today on the matter. About 8,000 delegates are expected to attend the convention's annual meeting today and Tuesday to choose the convention's president and adopt a nearly $70 million budget./2B

Useless words

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. — Don't tell Lake Superior State University to "get with the program." And don't suggest a "viable alternative" to that phrase, either. The school has been compiling a list of useless and overused words since 1976, releasing annual recommendations on those it feels should be banished from the English language. Along with the aforementioned cliches, other banned phrases include "angst-ridden" and "cautiously optimistic." School spokesman Tom Pink says the 3,500-student school receives hundreds of entries each year. The deadline for this year's list is Nov. 30. Lake Superior State will publish its "All-time Dishonor List of Words Banished from the Queen's English" in January.

Gorbachev honor

MOSCOW — Former Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev will be honored by Germans on the anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall in thanks for Soviet policies that set the stage for the end of communism. He is to receive an award and be named an honorary citizen of Berlin in ceremonies today, the third anniversary of the wall's demise. Before leaving Moscow, Gorbachev told reporters he considered the award "a symbol of the great changes that are taking place in our relations. This is important not only for our two peoples but also for Europe and the world at large."

Athletes' salaries

NEW YORK — Playing basketball is only an income supplement for superstars like Chicago Bulls guard Michael Jordan, who tops Forbes magazine's third-annual ranking of the world's highest-paid athletes. The really big bucks come from product endorsements, which earned Jordan an estimated $32 million in 1992. That's on top of the $3.9 million he made dribbling and slam dunking, Forbes said in its athlete ranking, released Sunday./2A

Painter has surgery after heart attack

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter was in critical but stable condition at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center after suffering a heart attack early Sunday morning.

According to a statement from the hospital, Painter, 45, began experiencing what he believed to be indigestion with chest discomfort and heartburn. His wife took him to the emergency room at about 9 a.m. Sunday, where it was discovered that he was in the process of having a heart attack.

Dr. Joseph G. Suckarieh, cardio-thoracic surgeon, said a vessel on the right side of Painter's heart had 99 percent blockage, which caused the heart attack. A clot-melting medicine was administered and Painter was moved to the Intensive Care Unit.

'Everything went smoothly and he is doing very well.'

— Dr. Joseph Suckarieh

Suckarieh said Painter felt better but was still experiencing chest pain. A cardiac catheterization revealed blockage in the main left artery and two other vessels.

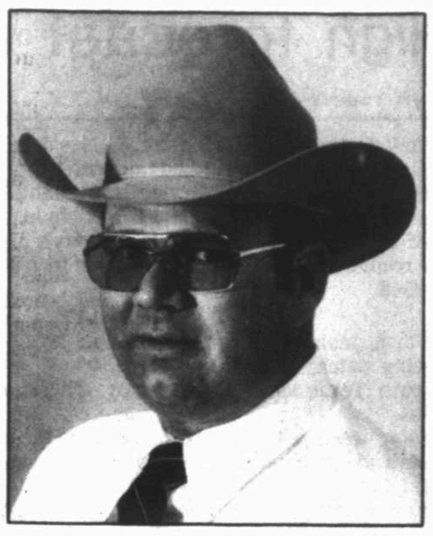

The sheriff underwent quintuple-bypass surgery for approximately five hours, from 2:30-7:30 p.m. He was then moved to the Cardiac Care Unit.

"Everything went smoothly and he is doing very well," said Suckarieh, who performed the surgery. "The surgery took a little longer due to the extra blood from the clot-melting medicine, but there were no surprises."

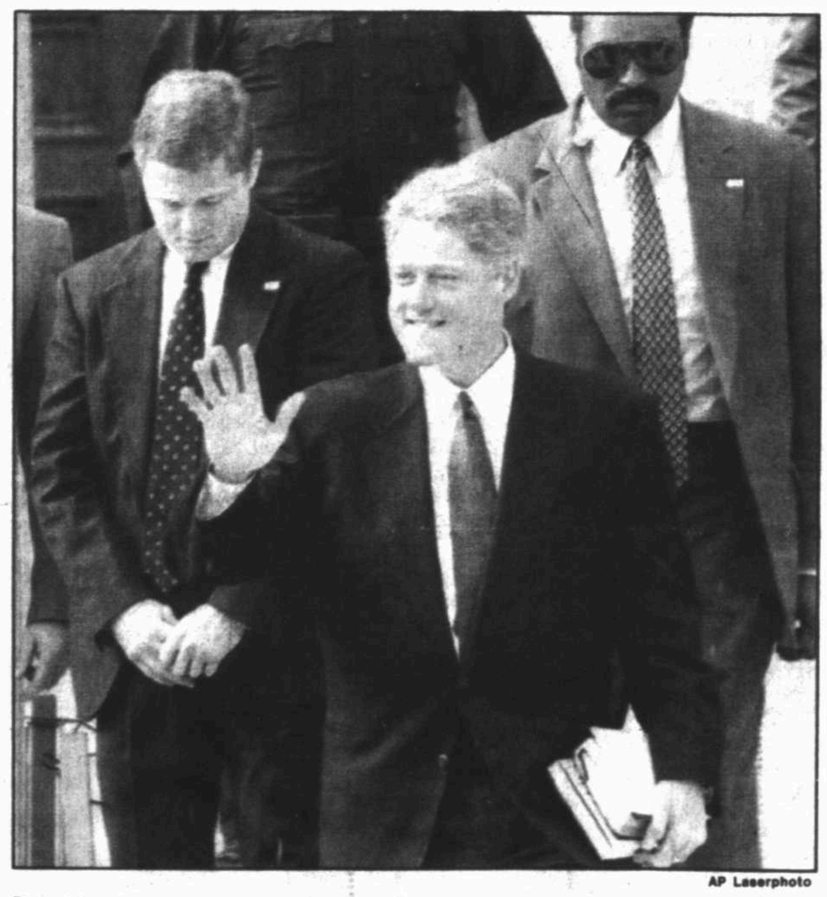

He said that Painter should remain in the hospital for about a week, with two days in the intensive care unit and five in a regular room. After leaving the hospital, the sheriff could spend about four to five weeks recuperating at home.

The Midland County sheriff's office did not make a statement on Painter's condition, but reported that Deputy Sheriff Jim Chancellor will assume the sheriff's duties until Painter returns.

"I was surprised, shocked and concerned to learn of Sheriff Painter's heart attack," Midland County Judge Charles Seltzer said of the elected county official. "I believe I speak for the entire Commissioner's Court, indeed for the entire Midland County family, when I say that our thoughts and prayers are with the sheriff and his family. We all wish him a speedy and complete recovery."

President-elect Bill Clinton waves to the crowd as he leaves Immanuel Baptist Church Sunday morning in Little Rock.

Clinton 'mixes' with folks back home in Little Rock

By John King
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — There was Bill Clinton the Sunday after his election, still running, this time from a galloping media horde intent on capturing his every step and word. Right, left and right again he veered on a new jogging route that confounded photographers who popped up on the streetcorners.

"I don't know," he said quietly after he finally slowed down and was asked if he would ever get accustomed to the fuss. "I like just being able to mix with people."

Reflecting on the days ahead, Clinton said his weekend in the governor's mansion was devoted largely to rest, and some reading of transition materials. With key appointments looming large — his economics team, the White House chief of staff, his secretaries of state and defense — Clinton said he was uncertain if any personnel announcements would come this week.

"I'm going to work hard but not rush decisions," he said. "I was so exhausted after the election I couldn't read very much for two days."

Vice President-elect Al Gore was due back in Little Rock for transition meetings today, as were other senior advisers.

Dole wants inquiry into prosecutor

■ Senate majority leader calls for investigation into Walsh's indictment of Weinberger in the Iran-Contra scandal.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole on Sunday called for an investigation of Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh and said President Bush should consider pardoning all defendants in the scandal.

Dole called Walsh's office "a Democratic hotbed of Democratic activist lawyers." A special prosecutor from the Justice Department should be brought in to determine "whether or not politics played any part" in a new indictment of ex-defense secretary Caspar Weinberger, Dole said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Walsh, a Republican, was deputy attorney general in the Eisenhower administration.

Walsh denied there was any political motivation in the second indictment of Weinberger, handed up four days before the election. It disclosed Bush's role in a Jan. 7, 1986 meeting about the Reagan White House's arms-for-hostages deals with Iran. The president spent the final days of the campaign fending off questions about the scandal.

Dole said the Oct. 30 grand jury charge against Weinberger was obtained by a newly hired Walsh aide, James Brosnahan, who contributed $500 to Bill Clinton's campaign and whose law firm contributed $20,000 to the Clinton campaign.

Lawrence Walsh

Dole suggested Clinton's campaign got advance notice from Walsh's office about the new Weinberger charges, because a Clinton-Gore press release reacting to the indictment and focusing on Bush was dated Oct. 29 — the day before the indictment.

Clinton aides have said the date was a misprint and that they obtained information for their press release from wire service accounts after the indictment was handed up.

Walsh, in an interview Sunday with The Associated Press, denied that there had been any communication on the new Weinberger charge between "me or my office with anyone" in advance of the indictment, except for an interagency group of

Bush to join elite group of retirees

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is about to join the nation's most elite group of pensioners — and the costliest to taxpayers.

With the inauguration of Bill Clinton as his successor Jan. 20, Bush will bring to five the number of former presidents — joining Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan in comfortable, taxpayer-provided retirement.

The cost, including Secret Service protection, totals $17.2 million this year for the first four. Congress will have to provide more money next year to cover Bush's retirement.

"The budget did not contemplate him becoming a former president," said Bill Early, budget director for the General Services Administration.

Even without the security, the taxpayers' bill for a generous, six-figure pension, office space, staff and travel expenses approaches

Oil well explodes when drillers hit gas pocket

■ 31 families evacuated after Exxon well ignites near Hawkins.

Associated Press

HAWKINS — Drillers hit a natural gas pocket and an Exxon oil well exploded in a giant yellow ball early Sunday, forcing 31 families from their homes in this East Texas town.

No injuries were reported.

"It's still burning," firefighter Larry Pack said Sunday afternoon. "It'll probably be burning for three to four days."

Exxon spokeswoman Jean Cole said Gibson Drilling Co. of Kilgore, under contract, was drilling at 2,100 feet when the well ignited at about 1 a.m. Ms. Cole did not know how many workers were there.

Gibson officials did not immediately return a telephone call Sunday afternoon.

Hawkins Fire Department dispatcher Roy Robertson said the blaze was under control.

But, Robertson said: "It's got the whole sky lit up."

The well just north of downtown Hawkins is one of about 300 Exxon has in Wood County. They produce about 13,500 barrels of oil daily.

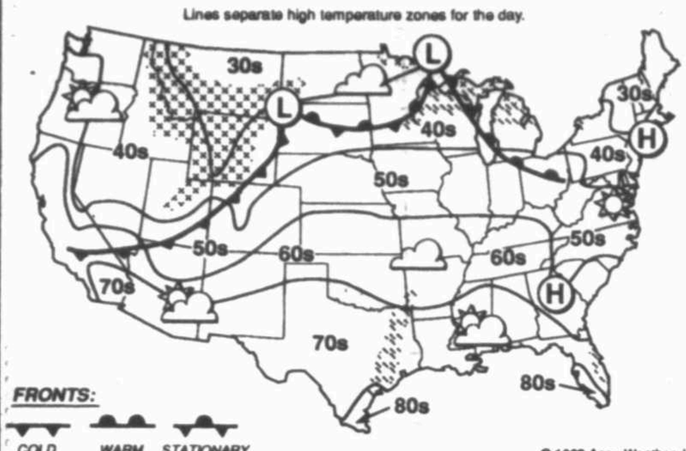

About 1,300 people live in Hawkins, about 100 miles east of Dallas on U.S. 80.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Accu-Weather® forecast for noon, today.

Lines separate high temperature zones for the day.

Via Associated Press

High forecast near 80

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high near 80 and winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the mid-40s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be fair with a high in the mid-70s.

After an overnight low of 44, Sunday's high reached 76, compared to the record high for that date of 89 set in 1988. The record low was 27 set in 1948.

STATE

Warm, moist air from the Gulf of Mexico streamed north Sunday, causing patchy drizzle and rain.

South Texas skies were cloudy. The sun shined brightly in West Texas.

A low pressure trough extended from the Rockies down through West Texas and produced a strong southernly wind with gusts to 30 miles an hour.

Widely scattered rain showers were reported from the Dallas-Fort Worth area south to near Waco and as far east as Texarkana. The temperatures across North Texas were generally in the 60s.

Down South, temperatures at 3 p.m. varied from 60 degrees at rain-cooled Hondo to 78 degrees at Brownsville.

The state's hot spot at 4 p.m. was McAllen's 78 degrees. The coolest city in Texas was at the time was Longview, with 56 degrees.

The South Texas forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies today with a few showers or thunderstorms possible. Highs will be mostly in the 70s to near 80 degrees.

In West Texas, it will be mostly sunny except for some early morning low clouds.

The forecast for North Texas calls for mostly cloudy skies with a slight chance of showers. Lows today will be from the upper 50s to lower 60s.

NATION

Snow and freezing rain fell across the northeastern United States on Sunday, sending cars sliding off icy roads. Fierce winds and heavy snow hit Alaska.

The rest of the nation was mainly dry, after widespread sub-freezing temperatures overnight.

Afternoon temperatures pushed no higher than the 30s across the northern Atlantic coast, Great Lakes area and upper Mississippi Valley.

Up to 5 inches of snow fell in Michigan. The Dakotas and Minnesota also had snow, along with freezing rain and drizzle that glazed roads. Many cars and trucks went off roads in North Dakota.

Snow also fell over parts of the northeastern United States, including the first snow of the year for southeastern Massachusetts, where several automobile accidents resulted.

A heavy snow warning was posted through today for Alaska's Yukon Valley, with wind gusts of 70 mph forecast. A thunderstorm near St. Paul Island produced snow pellets a quarter-inch in diameter.

Temperatures dipped below freezing across a large portion of the nation east of the Rockies overnight. Freezing temperatures were reported as far south as the central Gulf Coast states.

Afternoon temperatures were only in the 40s and 50s from northern Alabama to the Carolinas. An overnight frost warning was posted for parts of South Carolina.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

MIXES: Clinton jogs, talks to folks before breakfast, church services

(From 1A)

Clinton said he would not interfere with President Bush's final two months, shaking off questions about Republican attempts to get Bush to pardon Iran-Contra scandal defendants and about European trade talks.

"I'm not going to have any official comments for a while," he said. "I just don't think I should say much right now."

His remarks came after a three-mile morning jog, as the president-elect decided to walk for another 25 minutes and chat with several reporters concerning matters minor and momentous: the after-taste of victory, the busy work ahead for his White House and statehouse transitions, his hopes for an eventual vacation, the adjustments ahead for his 12-year-old daughter, and his nostalgic feelings for the tiny state that launched him on his way.

He said he expected to be in Arkansas all week.

"There are a slew of things you never think about," he said. "There's an inaugural to organize, a campaign to shut down, letters, acknowledgements, record packing. I have quite a lot of work to do on the governor's transition."

His abrupt change of life came clear to him, Clinton said, during a round of golf Saturday with an old friend, attorney Webb Hubbell.

"It was really funny. . . . All of a sudden he looked at me and he just broke out laughing and I said, 'That's not the right response' " to a president-elect, Clinton said. "And we laughed some more."

Clinton followed his morning exercise with services at Immanuel Baptist Church, where the minister offered a prayer for the president-elect, and then lunch with Hillary and Chelsea, his daughter. Then, Clinton said, it was back to work on the transition.

"I've still got a lot of reading to do," he said as he walked back to the Governor's Mansion. The run ended, traditionally, at McDonald's, where Clinton paid for a cup of coffee with a $5 bill and had his every post-jog stretch chronicled by a dozen photographers.

He was angry when photographers followed him golfing Saturday, but seemed more resigned to his celebrity Sunday. Playfully, he altered his usual running route to confound the cameras waiting along his usual path.

The president-elect said he'd love a vacation but predicted it would be a while before he takes one. When he does, it may be his last break for a long stretch.

"The way things are going, I've got a notion that there won't be a lot of vacations in that first year," he said. "There is a world of work to be done."

Clinton called a state Cabinet meeting for today and likely will meet with Lt. Gov. Jim Guy Tucker. But Clinton said he had no timetable to resign, because of the appeal of a court ruling clearing the way for Tucker to take over when Clinton resigns.

Then, of course, comes the search for a new home in Arkansas, since the Clintons will have to vacate the Governor's Mansion. So far, he said, he and his family haven't thought much about that.

"We've just been trying to get rested up," he said. "We just sat around and talked to each other to get collected."

Aides are searching for a school in Washington for Chelsea, but Clinton said she would finish the school term here and dance with her ballet troupe in the annual presentation of "The Nutcracker."

Along the walk, Clinton offered a guided tour of Little Rock, pointing out a homeless shelter, an historic cemetery, an auto-body shop founded by an Indian immigrant whose two daughters rushed out to greet Clinton. "A fascinating American dream story," he said.

Twice during the jog, one of Clinton's Secret Service agents jumped into a car for a break — the president-elect has quickened his pace.

At every corner was someone hoping to meet the new president.

Jim and Kathy Hickle of Peoria, Ill., drove all night from Memphis after visiting Graceland to catch a glimpse of the candidate, now president-elect, nicknamed "Elvis."

"We need some help," Jim Hickle said, asking Clinton to help area farmers by boosting ethanol production.

"We think we've figured out how to do that," Clinton said.

Near the mansion, Reece Dollarhide dashed up and asked for an autograph. "I haven't felt this way since President Kennedy was elected," he said. "I'll do my best," Clinton said.

Clinton hopped the fence of the mansion grounds to hasten his return home — he was running late for church — and pondered leaving all this behind.

"It's going to be really tough for me," he said. "I love this place, the people have been so good to me."

Economists to aide Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill Clinton will soon summon business leaders and economists to Little Rock, Ark., to advise him as he cements plans to stimulate the stagnant economy, leaders of the president-elect's transition team said Sunday.

Part of the discussions will focus on Clinton's plan to create a high-level council to coordinate economic policy, transition chairman Vernon Jordan and Warren Christopher, director of the transition team, said in separate television interviews.

Clinton made the weak economy the prime issue of his successful election campaign against President Bush, and has vowed to focus on it immediately after being sworn in as president.

"Some time very soon . . . the governor will convene in Little Rock business leaders, economists, a variety of people with expertise in the economy and international economy," said Jordan, appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Jordan said the meeting would be "about priorities and about his approach and about his new approach of having the economic security council very much similar to the National Security Council."

On CBS's "Face the Nation," Christopher said the Little Rock meeting is "very much in the planning stage" but he expects it to happen in the next few weeks.

He said the gathering will include "people who run big companies or who are well known in the economics field."

Forbes ranks Jordan as highest-paid athlete

NEW YORK (AP) — Playing basketball is only an income supplement for superstars like Chicago Bulls guard Michael Jordan, who tops Forbes magazine's third-annual ranking of the world's highest-paid athletes.

The really big bucks come from product endorsements, which earned Jordan an estimated $32 million in 1992. That's on top of the $3.9 million he made dribbling and slam dunking, Forbes said in its ranking of 40 top athletes, released Sunday.

Jordan's contract with athletic footwear maker Nike Inc. for about $20 million is the most lucrative in sports. Deals with Wilson Sporting Goods, Gatorade, General Mills, McDonald's and other companies make up the rest of his take.

At 29, Jordan won't even bat an eye at any offer worth under $1 million, says his agent, David Falk. Since he first appeared on the Forbes list in 1990, Jordan has earned $60 million.

No. 2 on the list was boxer Evander Holyfield, with earnings of $28 million. Auto racers Ayrton Senna and Nigel Mansell were third and fourth respectively, with Senna earning $22 million and Mansell taking home $14.5 million.

Veteran golfer Arnold Palmer, who makes most of his money from endorsements, was fifth with $11.1 million.

The highest-ranking woman on the list was tennis star Monica Seles, the winner of the Australian, French and U.S. opens this year, with earnings of $8.5 million.

Tennis player Jim Courier, the highest-paid newcomer to Forbes' list, came in at No. 9, with income of $9 million, only a third of it from playing tennis. Courier recently inked a deal with Nike worth about $4 million a year, joining court rival Andre Agassi as the company's tennis endorsers.

The minimum annual income needed to make this year's best-paid athletes list grew from $3.9 million to $4.6 million.

SCANDAL: Walsh denies political motivation

(From 1A)

intelligence experts from the Bush administration. That group reviews all pending indictments in Walsh's Iran-Contra investigation ahead of time for possible classified information.

"That's the only group that had any advance information about the indictment," Walsh said.

Walsh added that political contributions by Brosnahan before Walsh's office hired him are "it seems to me irrelevant."

Any suggestion the Clinton campaign was tipped off to the indictment is "ridiculous. There's just not a shred of truth to it," said Clinton spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers. She said the campaign found out about it from reporters.

The new indictment — based on Weinberger's own notes — disclosed that then-Vice President Bush participated in a Jan. 7, 1986 discussion of trading 4,000 TOW anti-tank missiles for five American hostages. Bush has always maintained that he didn't realize until mid-December 1986 that the Reagan administration was swapping arms for U.S. hostages held in Lebanon.

Dole said Bush should consider pardons for all Iran-Contra defendants, not just Weinberger, because "if you're going to do one, you do them all."

Senate Republican Whip Alan Simpson cautioned against presidential pardons for figures in the Iran-Contra affair in the remaining 11 weeks of the Bush administration.

"I'd be very careful of that," Simpson said on NBC's "Meet the Press." He didn't elaborate on his view, and when asked whether that meant he thought a pardon would be a mistake he said, "I'm not saying that. I think he ought to be very, very careful."

Simpson said he thought the new Weinberger indictment was politically motivated — calling it "one of the cheapest shots of the whole campaign" — and he said it had hurt the president in the final days of the race.

The Washington Post reported Saturday that White House aides and Vice President Dan Quayle are advising a presidential pardon. It said no formal recommendation has been made to Bush, and that mid-level aides discussed the issue with the president on his return flight from Houston to Washington on the Wednesday after the election.

Robert Bennett, one of Weinberger's lawyers, on Friday declined to comment on whether he has talked to White House officials about the possibility of a presidential pardon.

JOIN: Taxpayers support former presidents half a million dollars for each of the former presidents — and more in the case of Reagan: $770,900 this fiscal year.

(From 1A)

But security is the most expensive item. Only Nixon among the former presidents does not have full-time Secret Service protection. He waived all Secret Service protection in 1985.

Congress has provided $15 million for Secret Service protection of the other three former presidents this year.

"It's 24 hours a day," said Early. "That's expensive — and it's forever."

By law, former presidents are provided with a yearly pension equal to that of the current salary of a Cabinet secretary. This year, the amount is $143,800.

In addition, the government provides for the rental of office space and staff salaries for the rest of a former president's life.

The salaries can total $150,000 for the first 2½ years, and $96,000 a year after that.

But Bush won't even be limited by that until July 1993. He will have $1.5 million to spend on the six-month transition from office.

The cost of Bush's office space won't be known, Early said, until Bush decides where he wants to locate. If no government office building is available at the place he selects, the government will rent private space.

The high cost of offices in downtown Los Angeles, where Reagan maintains his office, is the main reason his expenses are greater than the others. Carter has his at the Carter Library in Atlanta. Ford's office is in Palm Springs, Calif., and Nixon's is outside New York.

The government also pays for travel, postage, printing, telephones and other expenses of the former presidents and their staffs.

EXXON: Well fire continues to burn

(From 1A)

Pack, who fought the fire through the night, said he watched the rig melt, crumple and fall amid flames as high as 80 feet.

"Once it starts to blow in, everything will start shaking and you've got about a minute to clear out of there," Pack said. "The rig just starts trembling. It's like the old fashioned gusher — you know something's coming up, and it's not supposed to be."

The vinyl siding on a house across the road wrinkled from the heat, he said.

Pack said about 40 emergency workers were pulling away some cooled diesel engines and stripping steel from the site. Representatives of the Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates oil and gas production, arrived at about 4 a.m., he said.

Pack said authorities will have to drill a slanting well 200-250 feet from the burning well to drain away pressure.

Exxon is housing the evacuated families in Tyler hotels, Pack and Ms. Cole said.

Fears of fraud and violence overshadow Mexican elections

CIUDAD VICTORIA, Mexico (AP) — Voters chose a governor Sunday for Tamaulipas, the state along the Texas border where an opposition coalition is trying to upset Mexico's ruling party.

Election activists from groups nationwide said they expected fraud, but the candidate of the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party said the vote would be clean and that he would win handily.

About 1 million people were eligible to vote. The ballot included governor, 43 mayors and 19 state deputies.

Polls opened at 8 a.m. and closed at 6 p.m., but some polling stations opened more than two hours late because officials did not show up on time. Results were not expected before today.

In repeated radio announcements on Friday, outgoing Gov. Americo Villareal called for a peaceful vote. But fears of violence, particularly along the Texas border, persisted.

The State Electoral Commission said it would call in the army if anyone tried to disrupt the voting.

In the southern state of Oaxaca, where voters were choosing municipal officials, at least six people were reportedly injured in election-related violence, the official Notimex news agency reported.

Three people were slashed Sunday in a knife fight between supporters of ruling party and opposition candidates in Tuxtepec. A day earlier, two local officials were beaten and slightly injured in separate incidents. Police said two suspects had been arrested.

On Friday, gunmen shot Gloria Altamirano de Robles, major of Tlacolula, 310 miles south of Mexico City. She was listed in critical condition after undergoing surgery, Notimex reported.

In Tamaulipas, the conservative National Action Party and the leftist Democratic Revolutionary Party joined forces to back businessman Jorge Cardenas, a two-time mayor of the border city of Matamoros.

His 34-year-old son, Gustavo Cardenas, was a candidate for mayor of Ciudad Victoria, the state capital.

Tamaulipas would be only the third Mexican state to be governed by the opposition.

The mostly rural Gulf of Mexico coastal state has been a stronghold of the governing party for most of the 63 years it has held power, much of the time through corruption and vote fraud.

But since President Carlos Salinas de Gortari took office in 1988, he has promised greater democracy. This year alone, the conservative opposition party won the statehouse in Baja California.

Economist and congressman Manuel Cavazos Lerma, the governing party's gubernatorial candidate, said his party expected to win by a 5-to-1 margin because of an economic agenda modeled after Salinas' reform policies.

Colombia declares state of emergency after rash of bombings kill nine, hurt 60

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — President Cesar Gaviria declared a national state of emergency Sunday after leftist rebels detonated more than 30 bombs across Colombia, killing at least nine people and wounding 60.

Gaviria made the announcement after calling an emergency Security Council meeting with his Cabinet on Sunday morning to discuss measures to combat Colombia's 35-year-old rebel insurgency.

The state of emergency will be in force for 90 days and during that period the government will assume extraordinary powers: Gaviria will be able to order actions against rebels without consulting Congress or the courts.

Presidential spokeswoman Daisy Canon, who made the announcement of the state of emergency, said Gaviria will go on national radio and television at about 8:30 p.m. (7:30 p.m. CST) to further discuss the scope of the action.

Before the top-level meeting, Gaviria's interior minister, Humberto de la Calle Lombana, said the guerrilla attacks were unprecedented and called for a state of emergency.

Earlier Sunday, the president said: "It's now the hour to confront, without truces — in the military, judicial and legislative fields, and with the support of citizens — those who have become the worst criminals of the country."

The blasts and other terrorist attacks came a day after Gaviria went on national television and denounced Colombia's rebels.

Leftist rebels of the Simon Bolivar Guerrilla Coordinator movement began a bloody offensive on Saturday, killing 26 policemen who were protecting oil drills at a petroleum field in southern Colombia.

Drug dealers have also targeted police. They have killed 20 officers in the past 10 days in retaliation for the death of Brances Muoz Mosquera, the security chief for Pablo Escobar Gaviria, a fugitive drug trafficker.

Authorities say the Medellin cocaine cartel is paying hired assassins the equivalent of $2,100 for each policeman they kill in Medellin, Escobar's base and Colombia's second largest city after Bogota. Three of the people killed in the overnight attacks in Medellin were police.

Gaviria said Saturday night that the rebels had lost their ideological base and vowed to take a tough stance against them.

"One cannot make peace with those who have abandoned the ideal of revolution for a juicy bank account based on kidnapping, drug trafficking, extortion and murder," Gaviria said.

The Simon Bolivar group comprises the three remaining rebel factions in Colombia: the National Liberation Army, the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia and a dissident faction of the Peoples' Liberation Army.

Four other insurgent groups have demobilized and signed peace treaties with authorities during the past three years.

Bombs exploded overnight Saturday alongside public buildings or banks in Bogota, Medellin, Cucuta, Armenia, Pereira, Turbo and other cities. The worst violence occurred in the Medellin area.

A bomb at a bank in Medellin left two dead and three wounded, and three police officers and a civilian were slain, said Ivn Felipe Palacios, a city official.

In La Ceja, a city near Medellin, four bombs went off in bank offices, killing two people and wounding 15.

It is the second time a state of emergency has been invoked by Gaviria since a new Constitution became law in July 1991. Gaviria declared the first last July 9 for three days to modify the law and prevent traffickers from being freed if they had been held more than 180 days without being called to justice.

Gaviria has been president since August 1990.

Israeli jets bomb Muslim hideout in Lebanon

EIN EL-TINEH, Lebanon (AP) — Two Israeli warplanes bombed a hideout of the Shiite Muslim group Hezbollah in southeast Lebanon on Sunday. Police sources said four guerrillas were killed in the bombing, which set off a round of rocket attacks on Israel and its self-proclaimed "security zone."

The fighting occurred the day before Arab-Israeli peace talks were scheduled to resume in Washington.

The tit-for-tat attacks continued into the night. Israel and its allied militia in south Lebanon responded to the rockets with artillery shelling of Lebanese villages and an attack by helicopter gunships.

The police sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said six others were wounded when the warplanes struck the base of Hezbollah, or Party of God. They said the raid destroyed two building on the outskirts of the village of Ein el-Tineh.

The village is in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley just north of Israel's self-designated "security zone" along the border.

Hezbollah's Voice of Islam radio station in the south reported the air strike but made no mention of casualties.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli military command confirmed the raid on the Iranian-backed guerrillas, and said the jets returned safely to base.

Israeli planes continued low-altitude flights over the Bekaa Valley throughout the afternoon. Hezbollah gunners fired anti-aircraft rounds at the planes but scored no hits.

At 9:30 p.m., Hezbollah fired seven Katyusha rockets, three of which landed in the northern Israeli town of Nahariya and four in the eastern sector of the security zone, a security source in south Lebanon said.

An hour later, Israel and its allied South Lebanon Army militia shelled villages opposite the eastern sector. Radio reports said there was then a 10-minute raid by helicopter gunships, which strafed three villages and a suspected rocket launching pad area.

There was no immediate word on casualties in the rocket attacks or the artillery and helicopter assaults.

The air strike was the 36th against targets in Lebanon this year, according to Israeli army count. Thirty-seven people were killed and 97 wounded in the earlier air raids.

The last two strikes were on Oct. 27, when suspected guerrilla bases in the Bekaa were hit. They followed a Katyusha rocket attack the same day on the northern Israeli town of Kiryat Shemona in which a 14-year-old boy was killed.

Many of Israel's air raids have targeted the Hezbollah, which has vowed to drive Israel out of Lebanon. Israel carved out a 440-square-mile "security zone" when it withdrew the bulk of its forces from Lebanon in 1985.

Bush moves wisely in the battle of the blush

War with Europe: an inconceivable thought that suddenly isn't so inconceivable. This war, however, would be of the post-Cold-War variety — fought not with bombs and bullets but with escalating barrages of trade restrictions.

The Bush administration was firm and right on Thursday when it announced it would impose punitive tariffs on European white wines. That may lead to a trade war and jeopardize completion of the Uruguay Round of international trade talks. But these immense risks have to be taken.

Europe has violated agreements and refused to make amends. For President Bush to capitulate would undermine the credibility of trade agreements past and present and deal a crippling blow to economic growth everywhere.

The controversy goes back to the 1960s, when Europe agreed to keep its markets for soybeans and other oilseeds open to U.S. exporters. The European Community subsequently undermined the agreement by subsidizing its farmers to grow oilseeds. U.S. exports plummeted and after the United States protested, two international panels ruled in America's favor.

Under international trade rules, the EC then had two choices. It could have compensated the U.S. for the lost exports or cut back the production subsidies. It did neither. Nor would it agree even to arbitrate.

For six years, America has fought to resolve the matter without rancor but without success — until Thursday. It announced that in 30 days it intended to impose punitive tariffs tripling the U.S. price of European white wines and raising the price of imported ingredients of pet food and cooking oils.

At a superficial level, the U.S. action looks rash and irrational. The EC has threatened to respond with retaliatory tariffs. That could set off a spiral jeopardizing the Uruguay Round and, therefore, $200 billion in world trade a year. Why risk that? In a word, credibility. The Europeans, by their own admission and international finding, are breaking an agreement. After six years of walking the last mile, the U.S. must either back down — stripping future trade agreements of credibility — or take the only legal measure left.

Far from rashly, the Bush administration acted prudently, obeying international rules scrupulously. It could have targeted $1 billion of European exports; it limited this step to $300 million worth. It could have imposed the tariffs immediately; instead it put such action off for 30 days.

If the administration had drawn an inflexible line in the dust, it would warrant condemnation. The world is on the verge of a monumental trade pact that will open up economies as never before to foreign investment and trade in services, food, intellectual property and textiles. To squander that achievement for the sake of U.S. oilseed farmers would be a tragic error.

But the U.S. has made no such mistake. The Bush administration is looking ahead to when it, and the Clinton administration, will have to sell the Uruguay Round treaty to Congress. That won't be possible if the U.S. has shown itself unwilling even to defend existing agreements.

The way out is for Europe to avoid retaliation against the U.S. once the 30-day grace period ends, then dedicate itself to figuring out how to honor its trade obligations. Europe triggered this trouble. Now it is up to Europe to keep an ugly skirmish from turning into global disaster.

Medicare horrors don't seem to stop

WASHINGTON -- Camilla Bourque learned first-hand how macabre the methods of Medicare can be.

Bourque's late husband, Philip, had always been able to function independently despite the amputation of both his legs. But a bout of congestive heart failure and emphysema made it impossible for him simply to lift himself from a chair and into his prosthetic legs. His doctors suggested a seatlift chair.

Anderson

His Medicare insurance carrier overruled his physicians – for reasons that raise questions about how rational the rationing of Medicare care is for the nation's elderly. Medicare officials say they furnish such seatlift chairs, but only if the patient suffers from a disease of the legs. As a double amputee, Philip Bourque, 75, was out of luck.

Gale Swiech is a 42-year-old sufferer of spina bifida, a spinal defect requiring intensive at-home care from her 72-year-old father. Her Medicare carrier refused to pay for the $400-per-month dressing for an infectious wound on Swiech's hip that doctors say is chronic and needs to be redressed twice daily. Her case is under appeal by a local Medicare advocacy group.

"It's like seniors are being put through bureaucratic water torture just to secure their rights under Medicare," Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., told our associate Jan Moller. "It's pretty clear there are enormous holes in the federal government's oversight" into private insurance companies that handle Medicare claims.

Also under fire is the Health Care Financing Administration – the agency that pays the bills for Medicare. As a keystone of President-elect Bill Clinton's domestic agenda, the $117 billion Medicare program, serving the nation's 35 million elderly and disabled, is expected to receive renewed scrutiny. The House Select Committee on Aging plans hearings when Congress reconvenes in January, and has been unearthing a trove of tragic stories.

Some of the hearings will focus on whether the HCFA has been laggard in policing insurance carriers, causing a rash of underpayments and wrongful denials. By failing to punish carriers who wrongfully deny or underpay claims, some believe the indifference has been the way the Bush administration has found "a back door" way to cut Medicare.

"Thousands of our clients call Medicare and get no response," says Diane Archer of the Medicare Beneficiaries Defense Fund. "The program is a never-ending nightmare for beneficiaries and health-care providers. The simplest problem can take a patient's lifetime to correct. As a result, many problems never get resolved."

Examples of needy elderly getting the runaround are at near epidemic levels, according to Medicare activists, and are far from the exception. Some other cases dug up during the Aging Committee probe also show how mindless the Medicare maze can be.

When a 66-year-old California woman was diagnosed with Cardio-Pulmonary Obstructive Disease, her physician prescribed an electric machine that distributes medication through a breathing device, which retails for a mere $119. The Medicare carrier, however, would not pay for the purchase of the machine. Instead it told the patient to rent the machine for $43.86 a month.

In other words, Medicare could have paid for 10 machines.

Many of the cases collected by the committee revolve around the reimbursement for power-operated vehicles such as electric wheelchairs and three-wheel scooters that allow otherwise bedridden patients to enjoy the semblance of a normal life.

Typical is the case of an 84-year-old sufferer of scoliosis, arthritis, a heart condition and who had only one arm. These conditions clearly limited his mobility, and his doctor prescribed an electric wheelchair. The man's daughter went to buy a wheelchair but was stopped by the Medicare carrier, which said it would only reimburse for the rental, not purchase, of such items.

The catch, however, was that the daughter couldn't find a single supplier that would rent rather than sell because, she was informed, insurance carriers don't cover the high maintenance costs associated with rentals.

In short, there were no wheelchairs to rent, and the only option was for the man to enter a nursing home.

CHARLEY REESE
Stockdale's lion heart repays pygmy Perot

James Stockdale, Ross Perot's running mate, has made a study of the Roman philosopher, Epictetus. Stockdale himself found a use for stoicism, a stern philosophy, when he was a prisoner of war in North Vietnam.

Reese

It is indeed a stern philosophy. Epictetus was a slave to a former bodyguard of the Emperor Nero. Rome at that time was no place for the faint-hearted. Stoicism sought a path by a which a human being might find peace of mind.

Essentially, Epictetus said all things are divided into only two categories–what we can control and what we cannot control. In the category of what we can control, there is only one thing–our own minds. Thus, the stoic attempts to train himself to control himself.

"What then must a man have ready to help him in such emergencies?" Epictetus said. "Surely this: he must ask himself, what is mine and what is not mine? What may I do; what may I not do? I must die, but must I die groaning? I must be imprisoned, but must I whine as well?"

In another place, Epictetus said, "Each man's master is the man who has authority over what he wishes or does not wish, to secure the one or to take away the other. Let him who wishes to be free not wish for anything or avoid anything that depends on others; or else he is bound to be a slave."

It was amusing to watch the reactions of journalists to Stockdale's appearance on the vice presidential debate. They were all much aflutter.

As far as Stockdale is concerned, he is doing something Ross Perot asked him to do. He is doing it because he feels an obligation to repay Perot for his kindness and his actions on behalf of American prisoners of war. Other people's speculation or expectations are of no concern to Stockdale.

"What disturbs men's minds is not events, but their judgments on events," said Epictetus. "For instance, death is nothing dreadful...the only thing dreadful about death is men's judgment that it is dreadful. And so when we are hindered, or disturbed, or distressed, let us never lay the blame on others, but on ourselves–that is, on our judgments."

One of the great examples of human courage is a Roman senator, Priscus Helvidius. For some reason, he and the Emperor Vespasian, got at cross purposes and the emperor stopped him outside the Roman Senate and told him not to come in.

"You can forbid me to be a senator," he replied, "but as long as I am a senator, I must come in."

"Come in then and be silent," the emperor ordered.

"Question me not and I will be silent," the senator said.

"But I am bound to question you."

"And I am bound to say what seems right to me."

"But if you say it, I shall kill you," the emperor warned.

"When did I tell you I was immortal? You will do your part, and I, mine. It is yours to kill and mine to die without quailing."

And both did their parts. Priscus Helvidius spoke his mind and the emperor killed him.

In this effeminate age it is instructive to read of courage. There are members of the U.S. House and Senate who are terrified of lobbyists who can do nothing more to them than withdraw campaign contributions and call them names. These cowards are men only in an anatomical sense–if that. Stockdale, who is cut from the same cloth as Priscus Helvidius, is out of place on today's political pygmy stage. Most people cannot understand him, much less appreciate him.

ANOTHER VIEW
French abortion pill tests administration

A new study of the French abortion pill RU-486, which indicates that the pill can also effectively prevent pregnancy when taken up to 72 hours after intercourse, offers yet another compelling argument for the Bush administration to abandon its ban of the pill and allow thorough testing in the United States.

The pill, used safely and legally in China and some European countries, does more than terminate first-trimester pregnancies. It also shows promise in treating breast, brain and adrenal cancers, endometriosis, glaucoma and Cushing's syndrome, a metabolic disorder.

A logical way to ensure safer use is to allow it to be tested here and, if it is as sound as researchers in other countries have found it to be, legalize it.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Nov. 9, the 314th day of 1992. There are 52 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 9, 1938, bands of Nazis began roaming the streets of Germany and Austria, looting and burning synagogues as well as Jewish-owned stores and houses in a pogrom that became known as "Kristallnacht" ("Crystal Night").

On this date:

In 1872, fire destroyed nearly a thousand buildings in Boston.

In 1918, Germany's Kaiser Wilhelm II announced he would abdicate. He then fled to the Netherlands.

In 1935, United Mine Workers president John L. Lewis and other labor leaders formed the Committee for Industrial Organization as part of the American Federation of Labor.

LEWIS GRIZZARD
Baseball finally has a true W-O-R-L-D series

Even as a kid baseball fan, I used to wonder why they called it the World Series. How could it have been a WORLD Series since no baseball teams from any part of the world except the United States had a chance to play in it?

Grizzard

Take something like the World Goat-Roping Championship. You'd have goat ropers from all over, and some skinny guy from Nairobi would outrun everybody else to the goat and win the title.

They play baseball in Japan, Cuba, Mexico and other countries, but did teams from any of those places ever get a chance to play in the so-called World Series?

Never.

That's why I'm glad the Toronto Blue Jays won the American League Championship Series over Oakland.

Finally there will be a team from outside the United States playing in the World Series. It's only fair.

I hear some 11th-graders in the U.S. can't locate on a map the state in which they live. So, for their benefit – and assuming they can read – let me point out where Toronto is.

It's in Canada. Ask your teacher to find it for you on a map.

That's Canada. The capital of Canada is Ottawa. The national anthem is "O Canada," and it also has the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to go around singing to Jeanette MacDonald – if they aren't catching poachers.

I first learned about Canada and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police also as a lad. One of my favorite television shows was "Sergeant Preston of the Yukon." The Yukon is in Canada and Sergeant Preston was a Royal Mounted cop. His faithful dog was named King, and a fine dog he was.

At the end of every episode Sergeant Preston, having rounded up the poachers or having found out who was singing off key to Jeanette MacDonald, would say, "Well, King, this case is closed."

If Lassie could understand, "Go get 20 feet of rope, Lassie, Gramps has fallen in the well again," I suppose King could understand , "Well, King, etc."

What else Canada is known for is its cold weather. I know a poem about the weather in Canada.

"Here's to Canada/Land of the Snows/ and cold, God knows."

But don't worry about World Series games being played in Toronto in a blizzard. There's a roof over Toronto's baseball stadium. Canada is one place baseball ought to be played indoors any time after Labor Day.

Somebody just told me my stepbrother, Ludlow Porch, the famous radio talk show host, has a chicken on his show that predicts the winners of sporting events, and the chicken picked the Braves to win it all.

"If the chicken is ever wrong," I was told, "they're going to fry it, so the chicken doesn't pick his winners lightly."

And all this reminds me of a talking-dog-baseball story.

Guy goes into a bar with his dog, and says, "Bartender, if my dog can talk can I have a free drink?"

The bartender replies, "There's always some freeloader in here with a talking dog, but OK let me hear what your dog has to say."

The guy asks the dog, "Who hit the most home runs in major league baseball history?"

The dog barked, "Rrrroof!"

With that the bartender kicks both the guy and dog out of the bar.

Once they stop rolling in the street, the dog says to the guy, "Sorry, I completely forgot about Hank Aaron."

One dies from shooting spree following H.S. football game

RICHARDSON (AP) — Police arrested two suspects Sunday in a shooting after a high school football game, resulting in the death of one student and the beating of another.

No charges had been filed against the male and female taken into custody at about 5:45 p.m. in Pleasant Grove. Police continued to search Sunday for two other suspects.

Sean Patrick Cooper, 17, was shot once in the chest Friday night after assailants forced him from his car near the Berkner High School parking lot, officials said.

The suspects beat passenger Alex M. Kuo, 16, and drove off in Cooper's car. The incident followed Berkner's 28-13 football defeat at Richardson High School.

About 200 students were on Berkner's campus to greet buses carrying the players, drill team and band.

About 11 p.m., the suspects drove up in two cars, got out and began firing.

"One of them said, 'You all want some of this?'" said Lance Augspurger, 17. "I threw my girlfriend down on the ground."

"They drove up right in the middle of the parking lot in front of everyone," said Andy Trevino, 18. "I got down on the ground and ran into the bushes as soon as I could."

Some witnesses estimated 20 to 30 shots were fired in the parking lot. Trevino said someone later collected "a handful of shells" that appeared to have been fired from a .22-caliber gun, from a .30-06 caliber gun and from a shotgun.

Witnesses said one car was driven by a female Berkner dropout accompanied by two older, armed men. The second car contained at least two other males, they said.

Friends of the victims said Cooper, who was fleeing, unwittingly followed the suspects into an alley. Cooper stopped nearby.

One gunman shoved a shotgun into Cooper's car as the student tried rolling up his window, friends said. After he was ordered out of the car, Cooper wrestled with his assailants and was shot.

Kuo also began fighting with them and was beaten with a gun on the head and his upper body, according to friends.

The suspects drove away in Cooper's Mazda RX-7, police said. Dallas police found the car Saturday evening in an alley.

Cooper died at Richardson Medical Center. Kuo was treated at Richardson Medical Center and released.

Children head back to school after gas leak

VICTORIA (AP) — A gas leak which forced the evacuation of nearly 700 elementary school students has been fixed and school is expected to begin again today, a Victoria Fire Department official said.

The leak in the pipe at Dudley Elementary School was found and capped off Thursday, but early Friday morning tests detected the smell of more natural gas, which forced the cancellation of classes for the day.

Victoria Independent School District maintenance crews worked Friday and Saturday to drill four 3-inch holes in the hallway of the school. Using an air compressor, natural gas vapors were removed from beneath the building.

11-year-old boy saves sisters from house fire

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — An 11-year-old boy used a bicycle pump to break a bedroom window and save his younger sisters from a fire this weekend.

Joshua Tidwell couldn't open the front door of his home when the fire began Saturday afternoon. So he called 911, broke the window and climbed out with Rebecca, 6, and Brittany, 2.

He said the pump looked like a good tool.

"That's why I used that instead of my skateboard," Joshua said.

Assistant Fire Marshall George E. Robinson Jr. said the blaze started from an extension cord hooked to a computer.

Clifford Tidwell had advised his son of escape routes to use in case of fire.

"I told him we may never have to use this, but you never know," Tidwell said.

Tidwell and his wife, Karen, had to work Saturday and left the children by themselves for about two hours. Tidwell said he believed Joshua was a responsible boy.

"Obviously he proved that today," Tidwell said.

Damage to the rental house was estimated at $15,000, Robinson said. The only injuries were minor cuts to Rebecca's arms from the window's broken glass, Robinson said.

Judge stops selling clothes from chambers

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County judge who has been selling golfing clothes out of his chambers for weeks apparently has closed up shop, courthouse workers say.

Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Jim Barkley, 51, had been peddling garments to lawyers in the Harris County Criminal Courts Building.

His selection included golf shirts, hats, tote bags and fingertip towels. In addition, his wife, Ann, had been providing monogramming services.

But courthouse employees said Friday the merchandise is gone. Barkley was not in his office Friday, and he could not be reached for comment Sunday.

"I'm not doing anything in here that conflicts with my job as a judge," Barkley said last week. "The attorneys can buy stuff, but there's no obligation."

Marsha Floyd, first assistant Harris County attorney, said county officials can operate such businesses under certain restrictions, including filing a business report with the county auditor by Jan. 1 of each year and giving the county treasurer all profits.

She also said the judge was not under investigation, and she had no evidence he was not complying with the law.

DEAR ABBY

Modern-day Santa Claus is looking for a few good souls

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, I bumped into an old friend in a supermarket around holiday time. "What are you doing for Christmas this year?" I asked. He replied, "Every year, the wife and I take the money we would have spent on each other and we give a needy family a Christmas tree, a Christmas dinner with all the trimmings, toys for the kids, and gifts for the entire family.

Van Buren

"Last year, 'our' family had nine children, and it was the first Christmas they had a tree."

I thought it was a great idea and asked if I could help. He then proceeded to help me by finding another family that was down on their luck.

Over the years, this has become my ritual. Many people get depressed around the holidays. I never am, and when people ask me what I want for Christmas, I say, "I'd like for some underprivileged family to have a good Christmas ... do you want to help?"

I'm telling this story because all it took was a small seed planted in me to bring happiness to others. There are a lot of people who slip through the cracks, children who don't receive toys from Toys for Tots, children whose names aren't hanging on a Christmas tree in a mall somewhere. I find these people through my church.

You can't believe the warm feeling you get when you walk into a home on Christmas Eve and know that had you not put forth the effort, that family would have had nothing. To me, that's what the Christmas spirit is all about.

Abby, please help me plant some more seeds. –ANONYMOUS IN AUSTIN

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Thank you for a terrific suggestion to pass along to those who have the resources and desire to prove that the spirit of Christmas is still alive and flourishing.

DEAR ABBY: How do you get to know a lovely new daughter-in-law? She is very quiet. She never initiates a conversation, and only answers "yes" or "no." – NEW MOTHER-IN-LAW

DEAR MOTHER-IN-LAW: She is probably very shy and somewhat intimidated, so it's up to you to initiate a conversation. And when you do, don't ask questions that can be answered with a "yes" or "no."

Invite her over to your place, and ask if she wants to go shopping with you — for groceries, clothes or whatever. The more time you spend together, the better acquainted you will be in due time. You don't say whether she has parents in town; if she hasn't, do whatever you can to acquaint her with her new surroundings. Just make her feel accepted and a welcome addition to your family.

DEAR ABBY: My husband never misses your column. He gets the paper first, and you are the first thing he reads. He just loves it when you apologize for making a mistake. He says, "It takes a big person to admit when they were wrong — you should try it sometime, honey."

He really liked your column on hugging. He took your advice and started to hug me. He is 6 foot 3 and weighs 260 pounds. I am 5 foot 4 and weigh 115 pounds. He got so carried away with the hugging business, he broke three of my ribs. I am still taped up. — HURTING IN CHEYENNE, WYO.

Friday night ritual ends till next year

It has become as much a part of the high school experience as homecoming dances and senior proms.

Every Friday night students of all ages, all races and all backgrounds come together as one. They put past differences aside and unite behind one goal. For a three-hour period only one thing matters: winning the big game.

It is Friday night football.

Of all the memories those students will store away, none will be sweeter nor more lasting than sitting in the stands on a cool autumn night watching their team beat a bitter rival in a crucial high school football game.

It is the things books and movies are made of.

And no where is that excitement greater than in West Texas.

But it goes beyond just the students. Adults become a part of the scene, too. No matter how "important" a particular game might be, the stands invariably are filled with screaming fans, each rooting for their favorite team, their son, their boyfriend, their classmate.

It occurs all over the country.

But for those teams who did not qualify for the state playoffs, such as Midland High and Midland Lee, the Friday night ritual has come to an end . . . at least for this year. The lights have been turned off. The stadiums vacated. The uniforms put in storage.

A certain quietness has returned to the campuses.

Another season has passed.

All that is left are the memories.

But for a high school senior, who will soon be branching off into new worlds, those memories will always be special. As he grows older he will find himself reflecting more and more on the past.

And, without a doubt, there will come a time when his mind drifts back to a Friday night. For a few fleeting moments he relive the past.

A smile will creep across his face.

For it gets no better than that.

The Friday night glory never ends.

DEATHS

Archie Edwards

Services for Archie Edwards are to be at 3 p.m. today at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Rev. Don Mitchell, of Westside Church of Christ, officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Mausoleum under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Edwards

Edwards died Sunday at his residence.

He was born March 6, 1926, in Roby, where he grew up and attended school. After graduation, he entered the U.S. Navy in 1944 and was stationed in Hawaii.

He worked for Burton Lingo Lumber Yards for many years. He retired from working as a window clerk at the Village Post Office in 1988 after 20 years with the U.S. Postal Service.

He was a member of Westside Church of Christ.

Survivors include his wife, Muriel G. Edwards of Midland; two sons, Donald Archie Edwards and Duane Gill Edwards, both of Odessa; a daughter, Deneice Schuette of Midland; two brothers, Tommy Edwards of Monahans and Sherwood Edwards of Kermit; three sisters, Inell Goforth and Jimmy Lee Palmer, both of Roby, and Ardell Gilbert of Corpus Christi; seven grandchildren; 13 nieces; and 14 nephews.

Pallbearers are to be Thomas Wolf, Dale Wolf, Lloyd Joiner, Gene Shrode, Milton Lary, Jim Lorenz, Ricky Martin and Harold Sikes.

Honorary pallbearers are to be George Spradley, Steve Stevenson, Bob Parrish, Wilbur Harkness, Travis Lary and Irvin Jarrett.

Memorials may be made to Hospice of Midland or Westside Church of Christ.

Elmer Bagwell

Services for Elmer Ray Bagwell, 78, are pending with Grace Chapel Funeral Home.

He died Saturday at a local hospital.

Grace Guthrie

Services for Grace R. Guthrie of Midland are to be at 1 p.m. today at First United Methodist Church with Dr. Russell Parchman officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Guthrie died Friday at a local hospital.

Pallbearers are to be R.O. Smith, Ted Johnson, Patrick McMair, Thomas Coleman, John Grimland and Roy Jeter.

William Cockrell

Graveside services for William Aaron Cockrell, 85, are to be at 1 p.m. Tuesday at the Breckenridge Cemetery in Breckenridge. Services are under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

Cockrell died Sunday at a local hospital.

He was born May 21, 1907, in Graham and was a retired Protestant minister.

He was preceded in death by his wife, Lillie Mae Cockrell, in 1961.

Survivors include a son, Curtis Cockrell of Midland; a brother, Rayford Cockrell of Fort Worth; and two grandsons.

Baptist convention decides on school funding

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A faceoff between moderate and conservative factions begins this week as the Baptist General Convention of Texas meets here to decide the future of funding Baylor University.

At stake is the $4 million the Baptist school receives annually from the BGCT. A vote will be held today on the matter.

About 8,000 delegates, known as messengers, are expected to attend the convention's annual meeting today and Tuesday.

They also will choose the convention's president and adopt a nearly $70 million budget.

The clash over Baylor stems from the differing views Baptists have about the interpretation of the Bible.

Conservatives oppose what they consider liberal influences at Baylor. Last year the convention relinquished three-fourths of its control of the university's governing board, an issue that upset conservatives further.

Moderates, meanwhile, see Baylor as a university that promotes a free exchange of ideas while maintaining a Baptist focus.

"I would hope that whatever we do here would bring glory to God as opposed to promoting any particular personal agenda," said the Rev. Wellington A. Johnson, pastor of St. John Baptist Church in Corpus Christi.

The meeting will include ministers and members of the state's 5,500 Baptist churches.

This is the first meeting since the convention approved the controversial Baylor plan. The plan allows the convention to elect only 25 percent of the Baptist-run school's governing board.

The university's Board of Regents elects the remaining 75 percent.

"The fundamentalists said for many years that they wanted to take over Baylor, and now that they see they can't do that, they want to divorce Baylor from the convention," said Mike Bishop, a Baylor spokesman.

Some Baptists had considered suing Baylor over the change in the 147-year-old institution's charter. They were opposed to the release of nearly $6 million in convention funds that had been frozen following the charter change and not dispersed until after the convention vote.

"Baylor is no more a Baptist school now than TCU (Texas Christian University) or the University of Texas," said the Rev. Miles Seaborn, pastor of Birchman Baptist Church in Fort Worth. He was an unsuccessful candidate for vice president at the convention last year.

"They literally stole that university. I have no animosity toward Baylor, but we need to let them go," Seaborn said. "And they can't come back to get the money we give to schools that are for God's word."

Baylor receives the most funding from the convention, which gives money to seven other Texas universities: Dallas Baptist, $1.6 million; Wayland Baptist, $1.53 million; Hardin-Simmons, $1.51 million; Houston Baptist, $1.50 million; Howard Payne, $1.47 million; East Texas Baptist, $1.41 million; and Mary Hardin-Baylor, $1.4 million.

San Marcos Academy high school receives $415,211 from the convention.

If Baylor were to lose the convention's funding, the school would have to turn to individual churches for help.

Both sides agree that the Baylor funding dispute is just one part of an ongoing struggle dating back to 1979, when conservatives began taking control of the 15-million-member Southern Baptist Convention, the national organization that works with state conventions on Baptist projects.

U.S. says hired informant smuggled cocaine

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who was a soldier-of-fortune in the war on drugs now sits in jail awaiting trial on charges of smuggling tons of cocaine on the side, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

Rodney Norris Matthews worked for years as a drug-smuggling pilot for the U.S. Customs Service and the federal Drug Enforcement Administration, the Chronicle reported in a copyright story. His undercover work began with the Texas Department of Public almost a decade ago.

Matthews helped put a dozen or more cocaine smugglers in federal prison, but he was paid handsomely — about $2.5 million by one federal agent's estimate.

However, Matthews now is in jail awaiting trial on charges of smuggling more than 26 tons of cocaine behind the backs of his customs and DEA handlers, the Chronicle said.

At the time of his arrest in June, prosecutors claim Matthews owned a ranch in Wyoming, a house and plane hangar in Florida, a private airport in Damon, Texas, 10 race horses and two luxury automobiles. In addition, the government is attempting to seize $500 million officials claim Matthews earned as a result of his illegal drug importations.

Customs officials declined to comment on Matthews because of his pending court case, according to the Chronicle.

Matthews maintains that all of his drug-smuggling activities were on behalf of one government agency or another and feels he is caught in the middle of political infighting involving the federal drug agencies, Texas authorities and U.S. prosecutors in Florida.

In a telephone interview from a Florida jail, Matthews told the Chronicle that in the last seven or eight years, he has been involved in 30 or more conspiracy investigations with federal drug agencies and the DPS.

Because of his long relationship with the different agencies, he said he did not always demand written authorization or immunity prior to becoming involved in an undercover investigation. Now, prosecutors are trying to use that against him, he said.

"I'm sure they can find some things that I'm going to have trouble showing where I had direct authorization," Matthews said.

Matthews also said prosecutors are attempting to build a case against him by offering sentence reductions to the very people he helped put in jail.

"There are prisons full of people who are biting at the bit for an opportunity to testify against me, especially people who I put there," Matthews said.

Several of Matthews former associates, now in federal prison, allegedly have told investigators that Matthews was regularly bribing law enforcement officials to help him safely bring cocaine into the country, according to sources.

Matthews said he did not know of any corrupt drug agents, but confirmed that federal prosecutors and customs internal affairs agents were probing possible payoffs.

"They accepted the fruits of my labor," Matthews said. "And now they are prosecuting me."

Survey shows campuses safer than cities

DALLAS (AP) — A spot survey of crime reports at 19 Texas colleges shows the campus remains a safer place than the cities in which most people live.

Violent crimes — including murder and rape — occur less frequently on the campuses than in the outside world, the reports show.

Federal law requires colleges and universities starting this school year to release crime statistics to students and employees.

Eighteen schools gave their crime figures to The Dallas Morning News upon request. Figures for Paul Quinn College in east Oak Cliff were compiled from Dallas police reports.

The survey showed no murders taking place at any of the 19 schools during their latest annual reporting period. Those schools had a combined student population of 272,458.

But in Texas last year, there were 15.3 murders per 100,000 residents, according to the FBI's Uniform Crime Reports.

Nibal Petro, a senior at Southern Methodist University, considers SMU one of the safest places in Dallas County partly because of the school's security escort service.

"It's safe enough to walk at night, but you know you're putting yourself in danger anywhere in America if you're walking alone at night," said Ms. Petro, 24.

One rape and two robberies were reported on the suburban University Park campus during the past school year.

On a per capita basis, the chances of being raped in Dallas are more than 10 times greater than the risk of rape on any campus surveyed.

No rapes were reported at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth, where campus Police Chief Oscar H. Stewart attributes a very low rate of violent offenses to aggressive, concerned officers and a measure of good luck.

Still, TCU recorded 53 burglaries and 14 auto thefts.

"No place is going to be totally safe," he said.

But TCU remains much safer than the cities of Fort Worth and Dallas because, Stewart said, the school has more officers per square mile of territory.

Ten aggravated assaults were reported during the 1991-92 school term at both El Centro College in Dallas and the University of North Texas in Denton.

Paul Quinn led the schools in projected rates for burglary — 1,715 per 100,000 residents — and motor vehicle theft — 214 per 100,000. But burglaries occurred in Dallas at nearly twice Paul Quinn's rate, and the city's rate for auto thefts was 11 times greater than the school's.

The best of the low rates was reported at the University of Dallas in Irving.

The small Catholic school near Texas Stadium reported no violent crimes, no burglaries and just three motor vehicle thefts.

Daughters of Republic of Texas opens new museum

AUSTIN (AP) — After three years in storage, such things as a cannon from Texas' war for independence from Mexico and a desk used by O. Henry went on display Sunday.

The Daughters of the Republic of Texas Museum, which was without a home for three years, has found a new home for its artifacts.

The organization's new museum is in north Austin, the former home of a savings and loan. Renovation of the building began in February.

The Daughters of the Republic of Texas first started a museum in 1903 in a room in the east wing of the Capitol.

The museum outgrew that room and in 1917 moved to the nearby Old General Land Office Building, where William Porter — who used the pen name O. Henry — once worked as a draftsman. The museum remained there until restoration of the building began in 1989.

On Nov. 6, 1991, the 100th birthday of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, the group bought the savings and loan building.

Because the new facilities are small, about 3,000 square feet of exhibit space, the items will rotate every 90 to 120 days to lend variety to the museum. The museum, which also serves as the group's state headquarters, also has a small gift shop and a hands-on area for children.

School groups already are booking tours. Carl McQueary, the museum's director, said he thinks Texas' colorful history will capture students' interest.

"If you get them at a young age, you've got them for the rest of their lives," he told the Austin American-Statesman. "It's a generational thing."

One of the major attractions is a small iron cannon that Mexican officials gave to the residents of Gonzales in 1831 for protection. In 1835, when Mexican officials tried to take the cannon back, the residents flew a flag reading "Come and Take It" and fired the first shot for Texas independence.

In 1836, Texas won its independence from Mexico and became a republic. The United States admitted Texas to the union in 1845.

"People don't realize that it was a country with its own currency, its own laws, its own government," McQueary said. However, he added, the exhibits are not limited to Republic-era items.

Another gem in the museum is "Texas Wild Flowers," a book of 100 paintings by Eliza Griffin Johnston for her husband, Confederate Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston, who was killed in the Civil War battle of Shiloh.

The Daughters of the Republic of Texas formed in Galveston in 1891 to help future generations preserve Texas history.

The Wall heals a nation over the past decade

WASHINGTON — They were left in a small, white cardboard box — one smooth gold wedding band, large enough for a man's finger, and one petite silver ring bearing the tiniest of diamond chips.

Like so many of the objects left there over the past decade, the pair of rings placed anonymously at The Wall speaks with a singular eloquence of the lives of the men who fought the Vietnam War and the names inscribed in the black granite of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

Accompanying the rings, on an unevenly folded sheet of lined paper, was a note that told the story of Robert R. Melton, of Lexington, N.C.

He was assigned to a supply unit and frequently volunteered for dangerous missions to resupply combat units by helicopter. He left Vietnam briefly in 1966 to go home to marry his hometown sweetheart, Judy.

Six months later, he died, shot down on a mission south of Saigon.

Melton's mother placed the two rings atop his casket at his funeral. Twenty years later, they somehow washed above ground, and were discovered near the grave by a friend who had served with Melton in Vietnam and who was paying his respects on Memorial Day, 1986.

The friend tried, but failed, to return the rings to Judy. So Bobby Melton's friend did the only thing he could think to do. He took the rings to The Wall in Washington, placed them in a box near Bobby's name and wrote a note.

"Judy chooses to forget this part of her past and does not want the rings," he wrote. "I know these rings meant a great deal to Bobby and Judy.

"Therefore, I feel they should be placed where his spirit resides."

As Veterans Day approaches, tens of thousands of people are planning a pilgrimage to Washington for a celebration to mark the 10th anniversary of The Wall, officially called the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. The unequaled power of the monument can be expected to do what it consistently has done for Americans: provide the one place where people set aside differences about the way the Vietnam War was fought and reflect on the price the country paid to fight it.

A decade after the Nov. 13, 1982, dedication of the memorial, the once blazing controversy over its unorthodox design is all but forgotten, overtaken by the tremendous public response over the past 10 years. It has become the most frequently visited memorial in the United States, attracting about 2 million visitors a year, surpassing the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument.

Designed to spur reflection on the personal sacrifices of war, the memorial lists the names of the Vietnam War's 58,132 casualities on two polished and reflective black granite walls. The two sections of wall meet in a V and are carved into the ground in a grassy section of Constitution Gardens, near the Lincoln Memorial on the Mall.

The names begin at the vertex of the V below the date of the first casualties in 1961, continue along the east wall to the end, then resume on the west wall until the list concludes back at the vertex with the last casualties in 1975. The names bring the war full circle, and are grouped so that survivors experience The Wall much the way they did the war. The people they knew are found together roughly during the time of their tour of duty in Vietnam.

Visitors travel down a slope toward the center of the V, the memorial's deepest point, and are literally engulfed by the magnitude of the toll of the war. The air grows still; visitors fall silent or speak in whispers.

Police arrest Lamesa man in stabbing death

Staff report

LAMESA — A Lamesa man was in jail Sunday and another was dead following a stabbing incident Saturday night.

Arthur Lewis Harris, 49, was initially charged with aggravated assault. The charge was later upgraded to murder and Justice of the Peace Denise Dyess set bond at $25,000.

According to a Lamesa police report, officers responded to a possible fight in progress at 311 NE 5th at 9:40 p.m. Saturday. Upon arrival, officers found David Cortez, 34, who been stabbed several times, according to the report.

Cortez was transported to Medical Arts Hospital in Lamesa, where he underwent emergency surgery. At 5:30 a.m. Sunday, he was transported to University Medical Center in Lubbock, where he later died, according to the report.

Initial autopsy reports indicate that Cortez died of multiple stab wounds.

Officers arrested Harris at a nearby residence.

The residence where the stabbing occurred is believed to be an establishment where alcohol is illegally sold, according to the report.

The case is still under investigation.

Youth OK after falling into well

BROWNSBORO (AP) A toddler was home Sunday after being rescued by volunteer firefighters from cold water at the bottom of an abandoned 40-foot well.

Zachary Joliff, 2, was released Saturday after treatment at East Texas Medical Center in Athens, authorities said.

Zachary had stepped on a piece of tin covering the shaft on his grandmother's property. As the tin buckled, his aunt grabbed him. But she lost her footing and he slipped from her grasp and fell into shoulder-deep water at the bottom of the well, authorities said.

"The baby was hollering for his mom and dad; he was saying, 'Help me, help me, somebody help me" said paramedic Debbie Cowart.

When authorities arrived, Ms. Cowart said, the toddler was holding an electrical cord his father had dangled to him.

Brownsboro is about 90 miles southeast of Dallas.

■ Pumpkin' chunkin' teams vie for record

MILTON, Del. — The skies over a Delaware cornfield were full of flying squash as 10 teams competed in the seventh annual World Championship Punkin' Chunkin' competition.

The De-Terminator team set a new record Saturday by hurling a pumpkin 852 feet. Never mind that it veered off course and splattered in the crowd. It broke the record of 776 feet set in 1990.

The team used centrifugal force provided by a 1970 Chevrolet engine to win.

Other homemade contraptions included Flipper, based on a crossbow design, and a crude catapult.

"These aren't factory-made machines," said John Ellsworth, one of the originators of the event. "They can fall apart, fly apart, throw in the wrong direction or just generally misbehave."

The event, which began as a way to get rid of leftover Halloween pumpkins, drew a crowd of several thousand spectators.

No explosives are allowed. The pumpkins must weigh between 8 and 10 pounds. Each team gets three throws.

The winning team used to get only a year's bragging rights as World Champion Punkin' Chunker. This year they took home $250 and a trophy.

De-Terminator beat Ultimate Warrior, last year's champs and the former record-holder.

"We were beat by a superior machine," said Ultimate Warrior designer Bill Thompson. "Next year we'll be back bigger and take it back."

■ One dies in sporting goods store shooting

FLORENCE, Ala. — A sporting goods store owner was arrested after a rampage that left the owner of a competing business dead.

David R. Smith, who is going through bankruptcy proceedings, was apprehended Saturday in the parking lot of Russell Sporting Center after Milton Russell was shot, authorities said.

After Russell's slaying, Smith "apparently returned to the showroom and started firing at customers and other employees," police spokesman Lt. Tony Logan said.

Police believe that Smith then got a rifle from his vehicle and started shooting through the showroom window.

Logan said an employee of the store grabbed a gun from a display and fired a shot through a window of Smith's Chevrolet Suburban, striking Smith in his right arm. A witness identified the employee as Mike Russell, the owner's son.

■ Chemical cloud sickens mall patrons

PORTAGE, Mich. — A chemical gas was discharged in a crowded mall Saturday, sending nearly 140 people to hospitals, police said.

The unidentified chemical was released about 4:20 p.m. in the Crossroads Mall, said Mark Barnes, Portage Fire Department battalion chief.

The chemical's effects were similar to those of Mace or tear gas. "We do not know what it was," Barnes said.

He said authorities believe the gas was discharged as a prank. He said witnesses saw a group of youths running through the mall after the cloud appeared.

"They were laughing and coughing and choking at the same time," Barnes said. "Unfortunately, I don't think they understand how serious it is."

No one had been arrested Saturday night.

About 2,000 people were inside the mall when the chemical release first was reported, he said. The two-story mall was evacuated for about 90 minutes.

"It was just all so quick," said Gaby Garza, an employee at The Chain Gang, a jewelry store in the mall. "Everyone was just out of control, choking and coughing."

About 135 people were being treated Saturday night at Borgess Medical Center and Bronson Methodist Hospital, both in neighboring Kalamazoo.

Bronson operator Laura Horein said 78 people were taken there complaining of burning eyes, chest and throat spasms and headaches. None was admitted.

Between 45 and 50 people were taken to Borgess with similar symptoms. Nursing supervisor Pat Day said none was expected to be admitted.

GOP seeks redefinition after election loss

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sobered by their abrupt fall from power, Republicans are arguing vehemently among themselves over what went wrong and how to get back in sync with American voters.

They are a party at a crossroads of ideas, of generations, of leadership.

There are deep philosophical divisions among the factions trying to commandeer the party and among the men dreaming of the 1996 White House race. And while the election of a new party chairman in January could offer some hint of a new GOP direction, the ultimate resolution is four years down the road when primary voters will pick a new standard-bearer.

The intervening years promise a continual struggle among pragmatists, ideologues and those simply disillusioned with the old guard. Already there is sharp debate. Has the party adopted too much of the religious right social agenda or not enough? Has it strayed too far from supply-side, trickle-down economics or not far enough?

Moderate Labor Secretary Lynn Martin, in the running for party chairman, squared off against conservative strategist Angela Bay Buchanan last week in a typical confrontation.

Buchanan, who managed her brother Patrick's presidential campaign, said Republicans won't win again until they reinforce their conservative base. She has called for a new chairman who opposes abortion and supports "traditional values."

"We can't be out there pandering to different groups," Buchanan said Friday on a TV talk show. "What we need as a party is to stand for something."

Martin, who supports abortion rights, said the GOP already stands for something — individual rights and limited government — and can't behave like a church dictating what people should believe.

She criticized the convention and, by implication, its controversial "family values" pitch. "You can't build a party on hate," Martin said. "You have to go back to the people's agenda."

Younger Republicans who study public opinion for state-level races are convinced the "people's agenda" has moved from no-new-taxes to quality-of-life issues such as education, health care and dependent care for children and the elderly.

"Dependent care makes a lot of sense to me because I'm raising my children and worrying about my parents. These issues make sense to me because I'm living them," said Republican pollster Bill McInturff, part of the Baby Boom generation.

"There probably are Republican solutions to these issues but they haven't been powerfully communicated to the electorate," he added.

A campaign strategist also of Baby Boom vintage said the party had become "a little stale" after so much time in power. "Voters are caring about things that have slipped us by. It's harder for the older generation to understand that," said the strategist, who insisted on anonymity.

Jim Pinkerton, a young Bush campaign adviser, said he and many others "agitated for a more activist, Jack-Kemp-like approach to domestic policy," but were rebuffed. He called the Bush administration "intellectually bankrupt ... no longer functional or viable."

That was one of the milder GOP assessments of the administration and the campaign. Inept, frustrating, stupid and pathetic were some of the others.

Jack Hawke, chairman of the North Carolina GOP, blamed the Bush defeat on "consultants who sit in Washington and make money off the party. Every decision has been made behind closed doors with an elite in Washington."

Hawke said those "powers that be" more than a year ago talked him and other Republican National Committee members out of calling on Bush to oust his economic team.

Hawke said the economic team was "out of step with the things that should be done" and Bush's advisers were out of touch with the widespread perception of a poor economy.

"I don't think he had one political adviser or one economic adviser that I could take down to my home in Lizard Lick and talk to folks at the store and communicate with them," Hawke said.

Some consider Kemp, the Bush administration housing secretary who calls himself a bleeding-heart conservative, a 1996 prospect who might bridge the gaps between center and right, inside the Beltway and outside.

Reading of names begins at Veterans' Memorial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reading of the 58,183 names on the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial began Sunday in a moving tribute marking the 10th anniversary of the black granite monument.

At noon, the first of 1,000 volunteers stood at the memorial, known as the "wall," and began reading the names of all veterans of the Vietnam War, living and dead. The reading will continue around the clock until 8 a.m. CST Wednesday.

Among the volunteers were activist Jesse Jackson; CNN correspondent Peter Arnett, who covered the war; ABC correspondent Jack Smith; and Jan Scruggs, a Vietnam veteran who worked to get the memorial built and organized the 10th anniversary ceremonies.

Stewart Green, who served from 1967 to 1968 and again in 1969-70, said, "It was a very traumatic experience for me. ... My fellow schoolmates that we went with ... the four of us that went over there, three of them didn't come back. It was like really moving for me."

Another veteran, William Wright, told a reporter, "I can see troops in formation and it all comes back. ... It hurts; it hurts a lot."

Some 2.5 million people visit the wall every year, making it the most-visited memorial in the nation's capital. It also has become an emotional shrine for many Vietnam veterans and their relatives and friends.

The reading of the names is among the events planned for Veterans Day and the memorial's 10th anniversary. Activities will include a parade Wednesday and reunions for servicemen and women.

In 1979 Scruggs, haunted that those killed in that war would fade into obscurity, vowed to build a memorial that would list every one of them by name.

And for the past year Scruggs, now 42, has worked full time organizing the 10-year commemoration, which began Friday.

"Last summer I began thinking about the 10th anniversary of this memorial, and how this was really an opportunity to finish the job I had started — this whole idea of healing the nation's wounds, of doing something positive to help the nation put Vietnam behind it," said Scruggs, who lives in Columbia, Md.

He now makes his living as a motivational speaker.

One project that makes it easier for people to be reunited is an electronic database set up near the memorial and at hotels. Veterans can register their names, addresses and where they're staying in the Washington area so their friends can locate them.

Clinton shifts attention from Midwest to Mideast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Until now, the Midwest has been more on Bill Clinton's mind than the Mideast.

But the president-elect will have to tune in to that troubled region if for no other reason than the Arab-Israeli peace talks taking place at the State Department in Washington.

Conscious of the fragility of the peace process launched by the Bush administration one year ago, Clinton made a point after his election of promising continuity in U.S. Middle East policy.

But beyond that broad brush stroke, campaign advisers say, little has been filled in.

Arabs and Israelis, resuming their talks Monday after a week's break for the elections, are eagerly waiting for a signal — any signal — from the Clinton transition team.

The need to maintain the momentum of the talks during the transition appears to be of concern to the Bush and Clinton camps.

It was the subject of a lengthy meeting Thursday between Israeli Ambassador Zalman Shoval and Dennis Ross, James Baker's top policy aide at the State Department who moved with him to the White House last August to help Bush's re-election efforts. Ross is moving back to the State Department for the remainder of the administration, and one of his prime tasks will be to shepherd the peace talks.

Clinton, in the very early stages of forming his transition team, has not decided who will handle Middle Eastern issues.

But Ross or other Baker aides might get in touch with Clinton foreign policy advisers to "reach an understanding on their common interest" of keeping the talks moving, suggested Martin Indyk, director of The Washington Institute of Near East Studies and an informal adviser to the Clinton campaign.

A mandate from the Clinton transition is essential if Baker or State Department officials are to have any influence with the parties between now and January, experts agree.

The talks owe their birth and infancy to the skilled midwifery and nursing of former Secretary of State Baker. And if they agree on nothing else, Arabs and Israelis and Democrats and Republicans are in accord on one thing — that without an active U.S. role, the negotiations will languish and die.

"If they collapse, you're looking at tremendous instability in that area," said James Zogby, President of the Arab American Institute and a prominent Democratic activist.

But Clinton comes to the talks with a handicap. Real or perceived, the president-elect is viewed as a supporter of Israel who does not enjoy the same trust or personal relationships that George Bush has in the Arab world.

Clinton "needs to enhance his credibility in the Arab world," said William Quandt, a Middle East expert and former aide to President Carter.

Bush gained the trust of the Arab world, in part, by daring to openly criticize the powerful pro-Israel lobby in Washington and by taking on Israel's former government over its support for Jewish settlements on Palestinian lands.

His decision to help Kuwait and defy the powerful leader of Iraq also won Bush some enduring friendships among moderate Arab leaders such as Saudi King Fahd and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

Clinton, on the other hand, has had little if any contact with Arab leaders. He has spoken of the "ties of conscience" that bind Israel and the United States, has stated his opposition to a Palestinian state, and criticized Syria's President Hafez Assad for his "egregious" human rights abuses.

"There's a lot of apprehension about the peace process, based on campaign statements by the candidate and his staff," said Khalil Jahshan, Executive Director of the National Association of Arab Americans who serves as an informal adviser to the Arab delegates at the peace talks.

The future of Jerusalem is one example of the sensitivities and pitfalls Clinton faces as he gingerly approaches the Mideast issue.

"Jerusalem is the capital of the State of Israel and must remain an undivided city accessible to all," Clinton said last summer, departing from the Bush administration's position that the status of the city — holy to all three major monotheistic religions — must be determined by negotiations.

Responding to angry reaction from Arab Americans, Clinton aides hastened to explain that he meant to say that Jerusalem is considered by Israel as its capital — and that the United States does not plan to move its embassy from Tel Aviv where most foreign embassies are located.

"Let's hope that the rhetoric is simply that, and that we'll see a difference between campaigning and governing," said Jahshan.

Central California man kills six before suicide

MORRO BAY, Calif. (AP) — A man apparently seeking revenge for being evicted from his home and banned from a card club killed six people and wounded another in separate shootings before killing himself, authorities said Sunday.

Lynwood Drake III, 43, shot himself Sunday morning while authorities were talking by phone to a woman he took hostage after the shootings, said San Luis Obispo County Sheriff's Sgt. Tom Wiley. The hostage wasn't hurt.

Authorities said the killings began Saturday evening when Drake went to a Morro Bay house with a pistol. He killed Norm Metcalf, 27, and Danny Dizek, 32, and wounded Jeffrey Sidlen, 27, police said.

Then, at a nearby house, 79-year-old Andrew Zatko was shot to death in front of his live-in companion, silent film actress Gladys Walton, police said.

Later in the evening, according to police, Drake armed himself with a shotgun, drove to a card club in nearby Paso Robles and killed two men and a woman.

Authorities later found Drake with the hostage about 10 miles away at a home in San Miguel.

Drake, known to locals as "Crazy Jim," had also been barred from the card club for being a troublemaker, the newspaper reported.

Dallas drubs Detroit

■ The Cowboys avenge last year's playoff loss and move to 8-1 on the season with a 37-3 victory over the Lions.

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — The Dallas Cowboys repaid an old debt Sunday, even if they didn't want to admit it.

Emmitt Smith scored three touchdowns and the Cowboys avenged a pair of losses to Detroit last season with a 37-3 rout Sunday, the Lions' worst home loss in 28 years.

"It's nice to win a game anytime, but we weren't really looking at this from a revenge factor," Smith said. "We were just looking for a win. And this is a very big win, because we've started the second half of the season 1-0 and this is good for our momentum."

Not since the Lions lost 34-0 to Johnny Unitas and the Baltimore Colts at Tiger Stadium in 1964 had they been beaten so badly at home.

Last season, Detroit defeated the Cowboys 34-10 in the eighth game of the regular season, then bombed them 38-6 in the NFC playoffs.

This time, Smith scored twice in the first half as Dallas rolled to a 20-3 lead. The Cowboys kicked a field goal with 20 seconds left in the game to complete the romp.

"We really downplayed the revenge factor all week," Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said. "It wasn't a very good feeling walking into the Silverdome yesterday, but we try to take each opponent on a week-to-week basis.

"It's a different year. There are different players. And it's a different situation. If there is a revenge factor in football, it's not with this football team."

Detroit's Barry Sanders gained 108 yards on 18 carries against the NFL's best defense against the run. It was only the second time this

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Lawrence Taylor's stellar career with the New York Giants appears over.

The perennial All-Pro linebacker and NFL career leader in sacks completely ruptured his right Achilles' tendon in the third quarter of Sunday's 27-7 victory over the Green Bay Packers. The recovery period for such an injury is about four months.

Taylor announced earlier this year that he was retiring at the end of the season.

"It was a complete tear," team physician Dr. Russell Warren said. "We'll perform the surgery early this week.

MANILA, Philippines — The Senate committee on sports will reopen an investigation of the Philippine Little League team following allegations that fraud led to the loss of the world series title, the chairman said today.

Sen. Jose Lina said the committee would study charges by the Philippine Daily Inquirer that all 14 players on the team were ineligible and that officials even faked names on official documents.

A team from Zamboanga won the series in Williamsport, Pa., last August by beating Long Beach, Calif., 15-4. But Zamboanga was stripped of the title a few weeks later after it was learned that eight of the players were from other cities.

HOUSTON — The AFC Central Division has found a way to get healthy. All they need is to play the Houston Oilers.

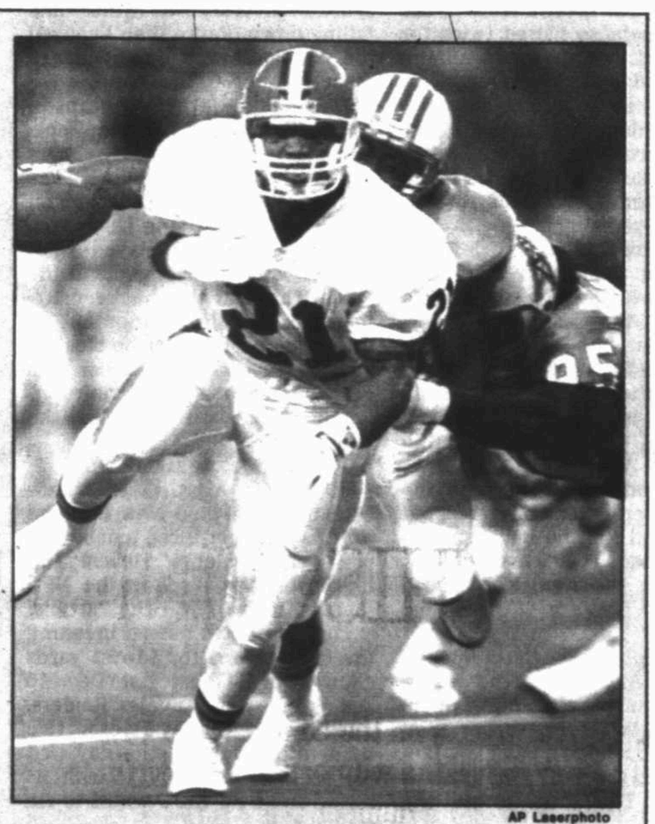

It was Cleveland's turn Sunday as the Browns beat the Oilers 24-14 in a game highlighted by a 73-yard fumble return by Stevon Moore and two touchdown passes by Mike Tomczak.

The Browns (5-4) rebounded from last week's 30-10 loss to Cincinnati that snapped a three-game winning streak while the Oilers (5-4) dropped their second straight game to a division foe.

"I think the team was really fired up about disproving all the experts, particularly the ones with the Houston media," Cleveland coach Bill Belichick said. "I thought we played our best game of the year, which was what we had to do."

Hurricanes ascend to top ranking

Associated Press

Miami, which has lost the No. 1 ranking twice this season, regained the top spot again in Sunday's Associated Press college football poll.

The Hurricanes had the weekend off, but moved up a notch after then-No. 1

■ COLLEGE POLL

Washington lost to Arizona 16-3 Saturday.

Miami is only the fourth team to be No. 1 three different times in one season. The others were Notre Dame (1947), Tennessee (1951) and Alabama (1962).

The Hurricanes (8-0) received 61 first-place votes and 1,549 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The other first-place vote went to Alabama (9-0), which rose one spot to No. 2 after beating LSU 31-11.

Futch masterminds Bowe's turnaround

■ Veteran trainer Eddie Futch helps Riddick Bowe land Friday's heaveyweight title bout against champion Evander Holyfield.

By Phil Berger
N.Y. Times News Service

It was January 1989, and the fight manager Rock Newman needed a trainer for the heavyweight he had just signed, Riddick Bowe. The one he had in mind was Eddie Futch, the soft-spoken, knowledgeable man who had trained champions like Don Jordan, Smokin' Joe Frazier, Ken Norton, Larry Holmes and Michael Spinks.

On Friday night in Las Vegas, Nev., when Bowe (31-0, 27 knockous) fights for the heavyweight title against the champion, Evander Holyfield (28-0, 22 knockouts), Futch will be in the challenger's corner, but it took some convincing to get him there.

Futch had made a vivid impression on Newman back when Newman was managing a light-heavyweight champion named Dwight Braxton (later known as Dwight Muhammad Qawi).

"In March 1983, Futch was the trainer for Michael Spinks when Spinks and Dwight fought a light-heavyweight unification bout," said Newman. "That was as close as I've ever come to seeing a strategy do as much to beat a fighter as the fighter himself."

Futch's plan for that bout was simple.

So did Braxton. But Futch had instructed Spinks to use his left hand — jab and hook — and never throw the right until Braxton did. The brawl that the public had anticipated never materialized, as Spinks fought and won a strategic victory.

"And after, everybody said, 'Braxton didn't do much,'" recalled Futch. "But that was because Spinks didn't let him do much."

Newman was sure that Futch was just the man to work with Bowe and reform the heavyweight's reputation. As an amateur, Bowe was widely regarded as lackadaisical, primarily because of the passive resistance he had offered to Lennox Lewis in the heavyweight gold-medal final at the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea. When he turned pro after losing that bout, the fighter was disparagingly called "Riddick-ulous."

The line was that Bowe just didn't care, that he was a head case. Newman insisted that Bowe had fought with serious injuries at the Olympics and had been misperceived.

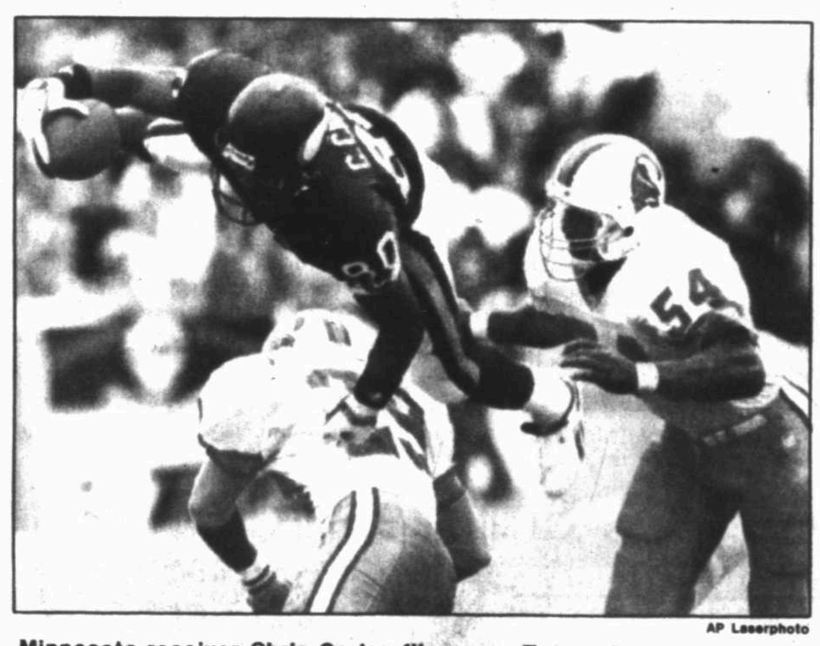

Newman's view was one that Futch didn't share, at first.

"The reports on Bowe were more or less negative," Futch, 81, said recently. "His heart was questioned after the '88 Olympics. On the basis of the information I came by, I told Rock no."

Newman, a former car salesman, went into his hard-sell and persuaded Futch to evaluate Bowe, a Brooklyn native, for himself.

"I never told Bowe it was just a look-see that Eddie agreed to," said Newman. "Eddie asked me not to. He wanted to

Bills bounce Steelers

Associated Press

■ NFL ROUNDUP

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Forget the four-game funk. The real Buffalo Bills are back.

Jim Kelly threw three touchdown passes and Thurman Thomas rushed for 155 yards Sunday as Buffalo beat back the Pittsburgh Steelers 28-20 and stayed tied for first place in the AFC East.

The challenge of playing the up-and-coming Steelers — a tough young team with that entered the game with the same record as the Bills — seemed to snap Buffalo out of its doldrums. The Bills had looked bad over the past four weeks, barely beating the New York Jets and New England after losing to Miami and the Los Angeles Raiders.

This time, the Bills had their best offensive day since Week 4. They opened up a 21-6 halftime lead and held off a second-half comeback by the Steelers.

Pittsburgh's defense, which had allowed only seven touchdowns all season, surrendered four TDs to the Bills.

Thurman Thomas finished with a career-high 37 rushes for his 155 yards and added 4 catches for 30 yards. James Lofton caught two of the scoring passes from Kelly, who completed 26 of 33 passes for 290 yards. Offensive lineman Mitch Frerotte caught the other touchdown pass, his second of the season.

NFL: Bengals take down Bears in OT, 31-28

(From 1C)

Monday.

Pittsburgh is 6-3, but has five of its last seven games at home.

Barry Foster, the AFC's top rusher, started slowly but finished the day with 77 yards on 22 carries. It was only the second time all season Foster has finished with under 100 yards rushing all season.

The Steelers were intent on showing themselves as a conference contenders and on avenging a 52-34 defeat the Bills inflicted on them in Week 2 last season. Neither happened.

Instead, the Bills jumped out to a 15-point halftime lead.

Pittsburgh took the second-half kickoff and moved 54 yards for their first touchdown, a 12-yard pass from Neil O'Donnell over the middle to Ernie Mills.

For the second time in the game, however, the Steeler secondary lost track of Lofton and he was all alone to catch a 45-yard touchdown pass down the right sideline that reinstated Buffalo's 15-point lead.

Bengals 31, Bears 28

CHICAGO — Jim Breech's 36-yard field goal 8½ minutes into overtime capped a comeback from a two-touchdown deficit and gave the Cincinnati Bengals a victory over the Chicago Bears.

The Bengals (4-5) had tied the game with 59 seconds left in regulation on Boomer Esiason's third touchdown pass, a 23-yarder to Carl Pickens. That Cincinnati made it into overtime was due as much to the height as to the hands of the 6-foot-2 Pickens, who outleaped 5-9 defensive back Lemuel Stinson in the end zone.

The Bears (4-5) got the ball first in overtime and moved to their 45 before Chris Gardocki punted to the Cincinnati 17. Harold Green, who rushed 25 times for 117 yards, handled the rushing and Esiason completed an 18-yard pass to Rodney Holman to set up Breech's winning kick with 8:39 elapsed in overtime.

It was the second overtime victory provided by Breech's foot. He kicked a field goal on Sept. 13 as Cincinnati beat the Los Angeles Raiders 24-21.

Chicago had a chance to avert the extra period but Kevin Butler's 52-yard field goal attempt into a swirling wind was short with three seconds remaining.

Eagles 31, Raiders 10

PHILADELPHIA — Making a one game cameo appearance in place of the slumping Randall Cunningham, Jim McMahon completed 12 of 24 passes for 157 yards and a touchdown to lead the Philadelphia Eagles to a victory over the Los Angeles Raiders.

The Eagles (6-3) had lost three of four coming in, prompting coach Rich Kotite to bench Cunningham for one week. Kotite insisted after the game — as he did during the week — that Cunningham will start next week at Green Bay.

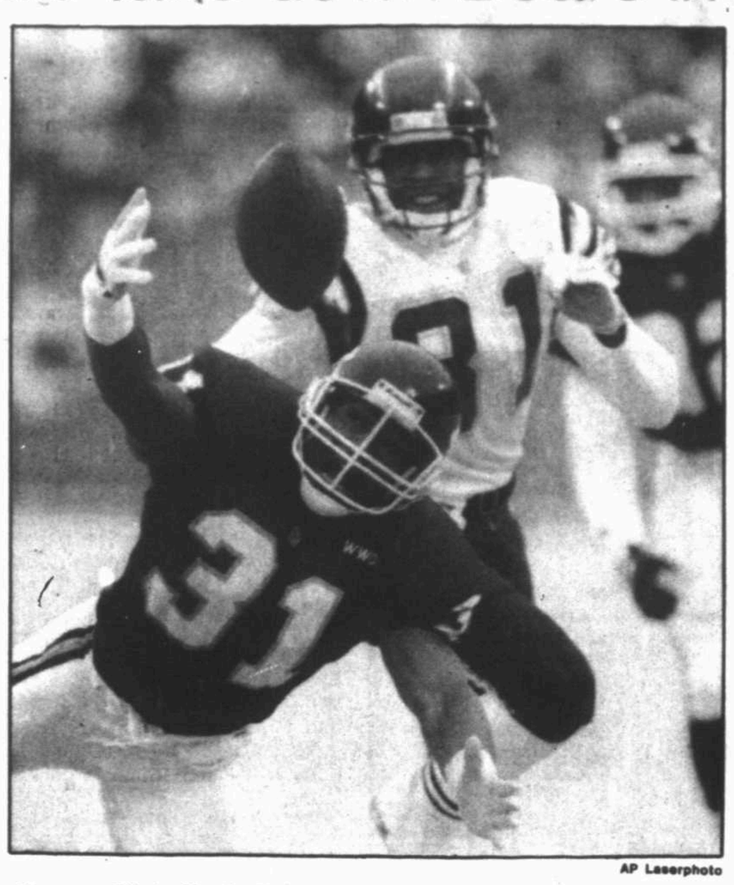

While McMahon was getting the job done, Raiders' starting quarterback Todd Marinovich was getting embarrassed.

Marinovich was replaced by Jay Schroeder with 8:21 to go in the second quarter after he completed just three of 10 passes for 25 yards and was intercepted three times.

McMahon, directing a conservative offense, got help from Heath Sherman, who carried 9 times for 81 yards, including a 30-yard third period touchdown. Herschel Walker carried 20 times for 47 yards and two touchdowns.

McMahon's biggest play was a 42-yard TD pass to Fred Barnett for a 17-3 lead in the second period.

The Eagles' defense, which had an off week in last week's loss to Dallas, held Eric Dickerson to 28 yards on nine carries and Marcus Allen to 23 yards on six carries. It also registered four sacks.

Kansas City's Kevin Ross (31) breaks up a pass intended for San Diego receiver Nate Lewis in the Chiefs 16-14 win.

The Raiders (5-4), coming off a bye week, crossed mid-field only twice in the first half, getting a 22-yard field goal by Jeff Jaeger the second time.

Vikings 35, Bucs 7

TAMPA, Fla. — The Vikings defense didn't get its first shutout, but it did get its two touchdowns.

Carlos Jenkins returned a fumble 22 yards for a touchdown and Chris Doleman returned an interception 27 yards for a score as the Vikings' defense scored twice for the second week in a row in Minnesota's win over Tampa Bay.

Roger Craig scored on runs of 1 and 5 yards and Anthony Carter slipped through a crack in Tampa Bay's defense on a 10-yard TD run before Minnesota lost its shutout with 4:33 remaining.

The victory was the sixth in the last seven games for first-place Minnesota (7-2), which completed a sweep of the season series between the NFC Central Division rivals. The Bucs (3-6) have lost five straight after getting off to their best start in 12 years.

Jenkins picked up a fumble caused by Al Noga's sack of Steve DeBerg and ran 22 yards in the first quarter. Doleman intercepted a backhand flip the Bucs quarterback unloaded to avoid another Noga sack and went 27 yards to give the Vikings a 28-0 halftime lead.

Dolphins 28, Colts 0

INDIANAPOLIS — The Miami Dolphins, surprised at home by Indianapolis two weeks earlier, used a pair of touchdown passes by Dan Marino and short TD runs by Mark Higgs and Tony Paige to beat the Colts.

It was the Colts' second straight shutout loss since their 31-20 victory at Miami, and it snapped the Dolphins' losing streak at two games.

Higgs rushed for 107 yards. Marino hit 22 of 28 passes for 245 yards, including 186 yards and touchdowns to Keith Jackson and Fred Banks in the first half as the Dolphins (7-2) took a 21-0 lead.

The Colts (4-5) crossed midfield only once in the first half and reached the Miami 30 early in the second quarter when Rohn Stark faked a punt and passed 17 yards to Mike Prior. Two plays later, a pass by Jeff George was intercepted by Vestee Jackson, and Indianapolis did not get another first down before halftime.

Giants 27, Packers 7

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — As hard as they tried, the New York Giants couldn't give away the game to the Green Bay Packers.

So Green Bay, trailing by six points and given a second chance by New York, handed it right back on Reyna Thompson's 69-yard interception return for the clinching touchdown in the Giants' victory.

The key series came with 4½ minutes remaining. Pepper Johnson intercepted a weak pass by Brett Favre and, while returning it, made several turns rather than falling down. Favre then knocked the ball loose and Sanjay Beach recovered for Green Bay.

Two plays later, Thompson stepped in front of tight end Jackie Harris, grabbed Favre's pass and sped down the sidelines. The quarterback missed a tackle on the only chance to stop Thompson.

Lawrence Taylor played what was probably his last game in the NFL. The star linebacker ruptured his Achilles' tendon late in the third quarter after he blocked a pass. Taylor, who earlier this year announced he will retire after the season, was carted off the field.

Saints 31, Patriots 14

FOXBORO, Mass. — The New Orleans Saints held New England to 122 yards, got three touchdown passes from Bobby Hebert and took over first place in the NFC West with a win over the Patriots.

The Saints just missed breaking the club record for fewest yards allowed of 117 set last Dec. 16 against the Los Angeles Raiders. They sacked Tommy Hodson five times after starting the day tied for second in the NFL with 28 sacks, and held the Patriots to six first downs.

It was the fourth time in their five-game winning streak that the Saints held an opponent under 200 yards. They gave up 154 a week earlier in a 23-21 win over Tampa Bay.

The Saints (7-2) tied their second best start ever and broke a tie for the division lead with San Francisco, which plays tonight against Atlanta. The Patriots (0-9) played without eight injured starters and hospitalized coach Dick MacPherson, who has acute diverticulitis.

Redskins 16, Seahawks 3

SEATTLE — The Washington Redskins scored their first offensive touchdown in 15 quarters and Chip Lohmiller kicked three field goals for a victory over the Seattle Seahawks.

The defending Super Bowl champion Redskins (6-3) came back with a strong defensive performance after losing to the New York Giants 24-7 last Sunday night. The Seahawks (1-8) lost their sixth straight game for the worst start in the franchise's 17-year history.

The Redskins' offense finally produced a touchdown after going 14 straight quarters without a touchdown, scoring on a 26-yard pass from Super Bowl MVP Mark Rypien to tight end Terry Orr at 4:32 in the fourth quarter.

Rypien completed 21 of 30 passes for 248 yards and one touchdown with one interception. Seattle's Stan Gelbaugh completed nine of 24 passes for just 75 yards with two interceptions.

Chris Warren of the Seahawks rushed 19 times for 103 yards.

Cardinals 20, Rams 14

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Johnny Johnson scored his second touchdown of the game on a 10-yard run with 2:04 remaining to lift the Phoenix Cardinals to a victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

The Cardinals (3-6) turned two fumbles by the Rams' Cleveland Gary into touchdowns, the first on a 6-yard run by Johnson in the third quarter. Greg Davis provided Phoenix' other points with a pair of field goals, but he also missed twice.

Johnson's game-winning touchdown came moments after the Cardinals had a touchdown called back. Phoenix cornerback Aeneas Williams picked up a fumble by Gary at the Cardinals' 31-yard line and ran it back for a touchdown.

But, as Williams neared the goal line, some 30 yards beyond any Rams player, Cardinal defensive end Eric Swann was called for an illegal block. So instead of having a touchdown, the Cardinals had to start from the Los Angeles 40.

Phoenix was able, however, to drive down to the winning score, with Johnson providing 32 of the yards on five carries.

Broncos 27, Jets 16

DENVER — John Elway threw an 80-yard touchdown pass to rookie Arthur Marshall for the longest regular-season completion of his career, and the Denver Broncos overcame four turnovers to beat the New York Jets.

Wymon Henderson returned an interception 46 yards for another score as Denver (6-3) won its eighth straight home game. The Broncos are 18-2-1 against AFC East teams at Mile High Stadium since 1969.

Denver appeared to be in jeopardy after two quick turnovers early in the final period.

The Jets (2-7) converted Brian Washington's interception into a field goal to cut Denver's lead to 20-16. Less than two minutes later, Denver receiver Shannon Sharpe fumbled after a 9-yard reception, giving the Jets possession again at the Denver 47-yard line.

Two plays later, however, Denver cornerback Le-Lo Lang stripped the ball from Freeman McNeil and recovered at midfield. The Broncos converted that miscue into an insurance score six plays later as Greg Lewis bulled 1 yard with 6:54 left. Elway's 24-yard pass to Marshall set up the TD.

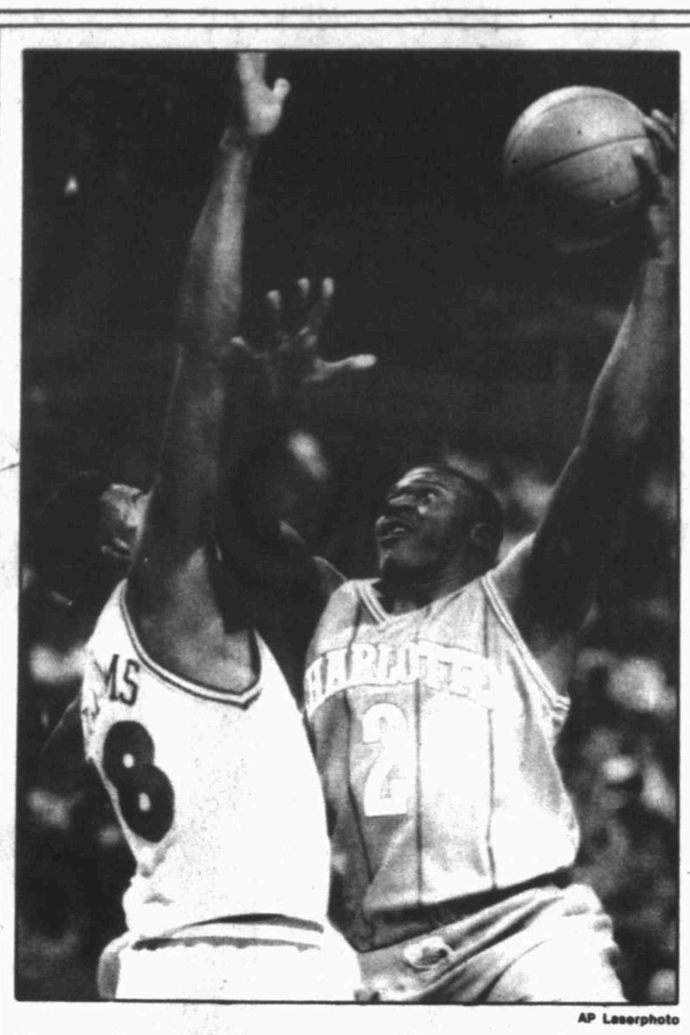

Chiefs 16, Chargers 14

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Nick Lowery kicked a 36-yard field goal with 54 seconds remaining, lifting Kansas City to a victory over San Diego and stopping the Chargers' four-game winning streak.

Dave Krieg, slumping recently as the Chiefs lost two of three, hit three consecutive passes to set up Lowery's kick. After the Chargers punted to the Kansas City 33 with 3:18 remaining, Krieg moved the Chiefs to midfield, then found Willie Davis for 25 yards to the 25.

Three running plays put the ball on the 18, and Lowery then booted his third field goal of the game and the 300th of his career.

It ruined a comeback engineered by Chargers quarterback Stan Humphries, the AFC offensive player of the month in October.

Cavs sting Hornets

Associated Press

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Brad Daugherty took advantage of a size mismatch and scored 25 points on nearly perfect shooting Sunday night as the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Charlotte Hornets 127-107.

The 7-foot Daugherty, playing against a Charlotte lineup that started no one taller than 6-8, made nine of his first 10 shots from the field and all seven of his free throws. He also grabbed 12 rebounds.

He finished 9 of 11 from the field, a sharp turnaround from his 6-for-16 performance in Friday night's loss to Chicago. He missed nine of his first 10 shots in that game.

Trail Blazers 123, Nuggets 104

PORTLAND, Ore. — Clyde Drexler scored 29 points, 16 in the third quarter, as the Portland Trail Blazers opened their season with a victory over the Denver Nuggets.

■ NBA ROUNDUP

Drexler showed no ill effects from the arthroscopic surgery he underwent on his right knee six weeks ago, making 9 of 12 field goals, most of them from long range.

He was 5 for 5 from the field and scored 16 points in the third quarter, when the defending Western Conference champions led by as many as 28 points. He also had a team-high nine rebounds.

Kings 124, Lakers 114

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Sacramento ended 18 years of frustration at the Forum as Mitch Richmond scored 29 points and Wayman Tisdale added 25 in a victory over the Los Angeles Lakers.

The Kings had lost 43 straight regular-season games and two playoff games at the Forum since beating the Lakers 105-95 on Oct. 20, 1974.

POLL: Aggies up to No. 4

(From 1C)

If Miami and Alabama remain undefeated and 1-2 in the rankings, they will meet in the Sugar Bowl for the national title. Miami is trying to become the first team to win consecutive championships since Alabama in 1978-79.

"I feel pretty good, but the season isn't over yet," Miami receiver Horace Copeland said. "We still have to play Syracuse and San Diego State. I'm not too happy yet."

Miami lost its No. 1 ranking for the first time after struggling to beat Arizona 8-7 in late September. But Arizona helped the Hurricanes on Saturday by ending Washington's 22-game winning streak.

"It makes our one-point victory over Arizona look real good," Miami defensive tackle Mark Caesar said. "There should be no doubt who's No. 1."

Michigan (8-0-1) climbed one place to No. 3 after beating Northwestern 40-7, and Texas A&M (9-0) moved up a notch to No. 4 with a 40-18 victory over Louisville.

Florida State (8-1) rose one spot to No. 5 after routing Maryland 69-21, and Washington (8-1) fell to No. 6. Nebraska (7-1) remained No. 7 after overpowering Kansas 49-7, and Notre Dame (7-1-1) remained No. 8 after handing Boston College its first loss, 54-7.

Arizona (6-2-1) jumped three places to No. 9, the Wildcats' highest ranking since 1983, and Syracuse (8-1) stayed No. 10 after downing Virginia Tech 28-9.

Florida was 11th, followed by Georgia, Colorado, North Carolina State, Stanford, Mississippi State, Boston College, Southern Cal, Ohio State, Kansas, Washington State, Penn State, Tennessee, Hawaii and North Carolina.

Hawaii (7-1), which defeated Colorado State 24-13, was last ranked in 1989, when it peaked at No. 23.

Boston College (7-1-1) plunged eight notches, while Southern Cal (5-2-1), Kansas (7-2) and North Carolina (7-3) each fell seven spots. Southern Cal lost 23-9 to Stanford, and North Carolina was beaten 40-7 by Clemson.

DALLAS: Smith's three TDs give him 12 for season season the Dallas defense had given up 100 yards rushing in a game.

(From 1C)

But it didn't help the struggling Lions (2-7), who finished with 201 total yards.

The Cowboys (8-1), who rolled up 158 of their 398 total yards on the ground, led 14-0 after one quarter and never were threatened.

"Dallas is just a good football team, and they are better than we are," Detroit coach Wayne Fontes said. "After last season, this should have been a classic confrontation. They have progressed just like we wanted to. But we've had some terrible breaks in the last year."

Smith, who gained 67 yards on 19 carries, has 12 touchdowns this season, tying the club record he shares with Tony Dorsett and Herschel Walker.

Troy Aikman, getting plenty of time to throw, completed 16 of 25 passes for 214 yards, including a 15-yard TD strike to Michael Irvin. Aikman, who had one interception, also downplayed the revenge factor.

"When we played them last year, we made some turnovers, and they beat us pretty handily," Aikman said. "But I think we would start getting into trouble if we started thinking we need a win just because of revenge."

Irvin had five catches for 114 yards and rookie Curvin Richards, in mop-up duty after Smith was finished, gained 82 yards on 16 carries.

Rodney Peete completed just 6 of 10 passes for 69 yards with two interceptions before going out with a slight concussion in the third quarter. Erik Kramer finished up, but clicked on only 3 of 7 passes for 21 yards, with one interception.

"Rodney's OK, but I was going to make the change anyway," Fontes said. "We are having a lot of trouble scoring. But that isn't just Rodney. There are 10 other guys out there with him."

Detroit lost its fourth straight game in the Silverdome. The Lions were undefeated a year ago at home.

"I'm just numb," Lions flanker Willie Green said. "I never thought we'd go through this again. Not after what we did last year."

Jeff Campbell lost a fumble on the first play of the game. On their second possession, the Lions drove from their own 1 yard line to the Dallas 35 before Thomas Everett made the first of his two interceptions.

Lin Elliott, who had field goals of 25 and 42 yards for Dallas, appeared to have kicked a 30-yarder to start the scoring in the first quarter. But the Lions' Jerry Ball was flagged for holding, giving Dallas a first down at the Detroit 7. Smith scored on the next play.

Aikman began the Cowboy's next possession with a 38-yard strike to Alvin Harper, giving Dallas first-and-goal at the 4. Smith gained 3 on the first snap and scored on the next, capping a 42-yard drive in three plays.

The Lions' only score came on Jason Hanson's 36-yard field goal with 9:12 left in the second quarter. Dallas settled for Elliott's two field goals for a 20-3 halftime lead.

With Aikman and Irvin hooking up on a 57-yard strike, the Cowboys opened the third quarter by racing 75 yards in four plays for Smith's final TD, a 1-yard dive.

Later in the quarter, Aikman completed 5 of 5 for 47 yards in a 73-yard, 10-play drive that ended in his TD toss to Irvin for a 34-3 lead.

Elliott finished off the scoring with a 30-yard field goal.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Positive thinking will take you far and let you accomplish a great deal. Communicate your zeal to others and they will provide the enthusiastic teamwork needed in early 1993. Record financial gains are possible in March. Your flair for the dramatic could create some interest in you as a political candidate next summer. Be certain the timing is right if you are contemplating switching careers. A change of residence will hold special appeal in autumn of 1993.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get an agreement in writing so that you can be absolutely certain of your financial position. Define your views clearly to leave no doubt about where you stand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An issue that has been clouded finally becomes clear. Read the fine print of any document you are asked to sign. Shun the spotlight this evening to be alone with your one-and-only.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A better financial arrangement between you and your mate should give you a greater sense of security. Build a firm foundation for the future. Find out where you stand in money matters.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day to take care of unfinished projects and important financial matters. You have the incentive to cut through red tape and leap over obstacles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are terrific at getting things organized. Put those credit cards away and buy only what you can afford. Someone influential is evaluating your work performance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be cautious about any new venture that requires a large cash investment. Consolidate recent gains on the home front by working on a project with your mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get ready to make some major changes. A mistake can be corrected if you show ingenuity. Upgrade your skills by enrolling in a class or reading self-help books. Mate is supportive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The emphasis today is on playing to win. Trust your heart about romance. A lot of good can come from alliances, even long-distance ones. Short business trips are favored.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be on the lookout for unusual opportunities. Follow up a financial or employment tip with alacrity. A partner inspires you to new creative heights.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Bide your time about entertaining new contacts; nothing may come of them. A feeling of being unappreciated will soon pass. Money can be safely spent for personal pleasure.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your mate or partner could resent a recent decision; let the storm die out before explaining your thinking. Developing a sense of your own power is crucial now.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friends will come through for you in a pinch. Being overly critical of other people could cause them to avoid you. Spending some time alone will do wonders for your mental outlook.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are passionate, patient and skeptical. Even if they sit quietly and say not a word, their presence is always felt.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10 ♡K952 ◇KQ107 ♣AJ74
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—In support of hearts, your hand revalues to some 16 points, which is borderline for a simple raise to two hearts and a jump to three hearts. Since only the jack of clubs might be a wasted value. We favor the aggressive action. Bid three hearts.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10 ♡K83 ◇AQJ86 ♣QJ98
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—The clue to this answer lies in the previous example, where we had four-card support for partner's suit and the same high-card count. With only three hearts, this hand is not as good as the first, so we would treat it as a minimum opener worth only an immediate raise to two hearts. Rebidding two clubs is a distant second choice.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ ♡97 ◇1093 ♣KJ1054
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Only two bids come into consideration—a rebid of two clubs or one no trump. (If you're one of those "inventive" souls who bid one spade, skip the rest of this quiz.) Since this is essentially a balanced hand, we opt for one no trump, even though the diamond stopper is nonexistent.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠6542 ♡74 ◇109853 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Dbl

What action do you take?
A.—You passed initially because you have nothing, and not even four-card support for partner's suit changes that. No matter how you look at the hand, it's miserable. Pass, and spare partner from getting into trouble.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J109542 ♡963 ◇A ♣1098
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—There is no law that says you have to rebid a six-card suit, especially this poor one. Chances of finding partner with support are slight, and you know you have a combined eight-card heart fit. Take a preference to two hearts.

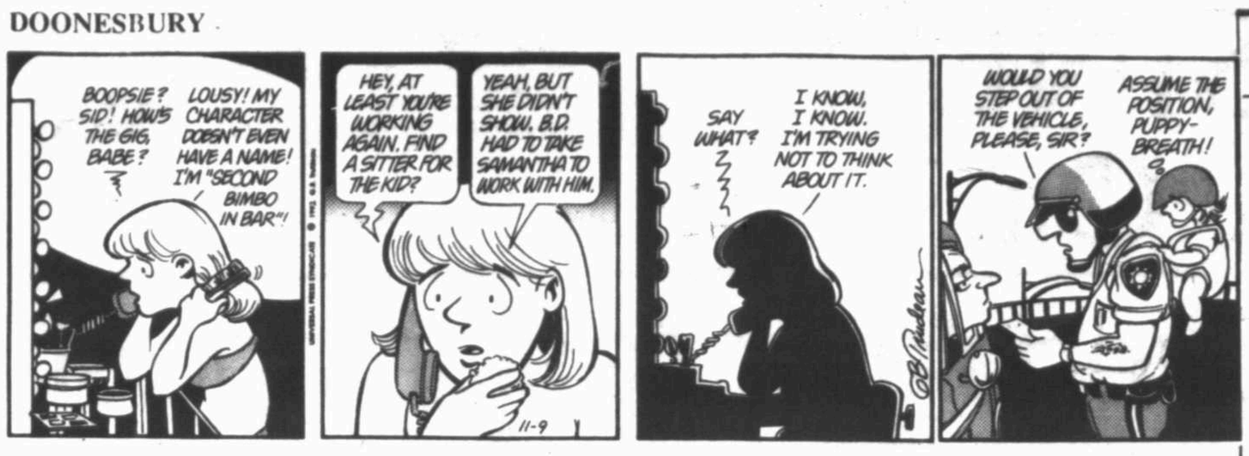

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKJ74 ♡AJ9875 ◇7 ♣K
What is your opening bid?
A.—It's simply a question of whether you rate the hand worth a reverse, in which case you should open one heart; or not, in which case you open one spade and rebid hearts as cheaply as possible. Exchange the king of clubs for a low heart and one heart, followed by a reverse into spades, would be clear-cut. As it is, our choice is an opening bid of one spade.

Eddie Murphy's fiancee gives birth to 7-pound boy

ENGLEWOOD, N.J. — Eddie Murphy and fiancee Nicole Mitchell are the new parents of a 7-pound, 7-ounce baby boy.

Mitchell gave birth Saturday morning to Miles Mitchell Murphy at Englewood Hospital, said the actor's publicist, Terrie Williams.

"Love's all right," Murphy said in a statement.

Mitchell and Murphy are expected to wed in March. The baby, their second, was named after jazz trumpeter Miles Davis.

Their daughter, Bria, is 3 years old.

RADNOR, Pa. — "Tonight Show" host Jay Leno has denied rumors that NBC has threatened to fire him if the show does poorly in the ratings sweeps.

"Word of honor, it's not true," Leno said in an interview published in the Nov. 14 issue of TV Guide. "Yes, I feel like I have a sword hanging over my head, but I'm the one who's gone to NBC to say I'd quit if I began to do poorly, not the other way around."

The New Yorker magazine reported last week that if ratings don't improve, the network plans to replace Leno with young-audience magnet David Letterman, whose "Late Night" show follows Leno's.

NBC confirmed Leno's version, calling the New Yorker report "nonsense," TV Guide reported.

Leno said his ratings among the 18-to-30 age group were up about 10 percent.

"As for David Letterman breathing down my back, well, David is the best," he said. "We were friends going into the ring, and we'll be friends going out. If David ever did take over the show, I'd wait a month, call, and say, 'Hey, can I be a guest?' "

LOS ANGELES — Anthony Hopkins, winner of an Academy Award for his portrayal of a cannibalistic killer in "Silence of the Lambs," has a low-key definition of his craft.

Hopkins

"It's weird, it's simple and it's a job," he said in an interview to air Tuesday on the syndicated TV show, "A Current Affair."

While downplaying the art of acting, Hopkins stressed that he loves it.

"I can always be somebody else," he said. "I love to create characters around me. I don't know why. Maybe it means that I ought to go to a psychologist."

Hopkins portrays the vampire slayer Van Helsing in the soon-to-be-released horror film "Bram Stoker's Dracula."

PITTSBURGH — Billy Ray Cyrus told concert-goers he would visit a 4-year-old transplant patient, but fatigue, bad weather and overseas obligations prevented him from making the trip, Cyrus' manager said.

Cyrus on Thursday invited the crowd in South Bend, Ind., to join him in visiting Charlie Fourstar at Presbyterian University Hospital in Pittsburgh.

However, the flight from Indiana was delayed by a storm. Cyrus had a show in Buffalo, N.Y., Saturday night, after which he had to fly to London, said his personal manager, Jack McFadden.

He said Cyrus sent a video message and a gift Saturday to Charlie, of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation in northeastern Montana.

Charlie was in critical condition Sunday, five days after receiving a new liver, stomach, small intestine, large intestine and pancreas.

Charlie has listened to Cyrus' songs and covers of those songs by The Chipmunks during her recovery. Her grandmother, Odessa Fourstar, said, "If anybody can make her move, it's him."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Mark Chesnutt says he stays in touch with common people who keep him abreast of what they like to hear.

"I talk to these people that are outside the music business," he said in an interview published Saturday in The Tennessean. "I hang out with them. I fish and hunt with them. I go to beer joints with them. I talk to them and I find out what they like."

He lives in East Jasper, Texas, and says he has resisted moving to Nashville because "I'm afraid I'd lose touch of who I was. I believe it shows in my music how I was raised and who I am."

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Penn State football coach Joe Paterno has donated $250,000 to the school's Pattee Library, where he met his wife 30 years ago.

"The single most important thing that we can do to move this institution ahead to where it should be in the year 2000 is to come up with a commitment to having an outstanding library," he said.

Paterno heads a committee charged with raising $5 million in private money for a $19.8 million expansion of the library. As an assistant coach at Penn State, Paterno met his wife, Sue, at Pattee Library.

"I have made some investments and had some things that have come to me as a result of being a football coach; shoe contracts and things like that," he said. "I felt it was only fair that I do my share."

Digital moves

BOSTON — Robert B. Palmer, the new president and chief executive of the Digital Equipment Corp., said that the company was being restructured into eight to 10 "customer focused" business units by the end of the year.

Managers of the individual units would have "complete responsibility for business strategy, investments, revenue generation and profit and loss statements," he said.

Addressing the company's first annual meeting of shareholders since he succeeded Digital's founder, Kenneth H. Olsen, in July, Palmer said he would announce the specific units and the executives in charge of each by the end of December.

Palmer also said that he expected to cut up to $300 million from the company's $1.8 billion engineering budget, in part by rethinking the company's product line.

Stocks flat

NEW YORK — The stock market showed little movement Friday, biding its time as traders studied new signs of a gradually strengthening economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 3.78 points to 3,240.06, trimming its gain for the week to 13.78 points.

Advancing issues held a narrow edge on declines at the New York Stock Exchange.

The Nasdaq composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 2.74 to 616.82, reaching an eight-month high.

Chief S&L regulator resigns post

■ Timothy Ryan, director of the Office of Thrift Supervision, is leaving to pursue business interests.

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — The nation's chief savings and loan regulator is resigning after 2½ years of presiding over the unprecedented closing of more than 700 failed institutions.

Ryan

In a speech prepared for delivery today to the annual convention of the Savings & Community Bankers of America, Timothy Ryan announced he will leave Dec. 4 as director of the Treasury Department's Office of Thrift Supervision.

He is the second senior financial official to depart since President Bush's defeat last week. Treasury Under Secretary David Mulford, architect of the administration's international economic policy, announced his resignation just two days after the election.

Ryan's chief deputy, Jonathan Fiechter, a career regulator, will take his place on an acting basis. Ryan, an attorney, said he will pursue business interests outside government but said he did not know yet what.

President Bush's selection of Ryan in April 1990 was attacked because his background was in labor and pension law, not financial institutions. He succeeded M. Danny Wall, a former Senate aide who Democrats blamed for cloaking the true magnitude of the thrift crisis before the 1988 election.

Ryan too has been criticized for putting a rosy gloss on statistics by publicly releasing data only for privately owned S&Ls, treating the insolvent-but-still-open institutions warehoused by the government as if they didn't exist.

But, he's been credited with vigorously pursuing not only the former executives of failed thrifts but also the attorneys and accountants who advised them.

He drew the ire of fellow lawyers when he had his agency freeze the assets of major law firms, forcing it to quickly fork over multi-million-dollar payments to settle the government's charges.

Under Ryan, the agency also censured Neil Bush, the president's son, for his actions as a board member of the failed Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association in Denver.

Ryan said the most difficult part of his job, and the part he regards as his greatest accomplishment, was the orderly closure of 730 insolvent S&Ls, transferring them to the Resolution Trust Corp. for dismantlement.

"When you close 700 financial institutions with $400 billion in assets, you affect a tremendous number of lives," he said. "In the beginning it was somewhat depersonalized and easier. But later, when I put people out of business ... it was people I knew.... There were heartrending calls."

Ryan said he is frustrated that he is leaving office with the cleanup unfinished. He estimates an additional 104 institutions with $63 billion in assets will fail over the next two years.

Thrift executives convene for a fresh start

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The nation's savings and loan executives opening their annual convention today are looking for a fresh start for their industry after years of losses and bad publicity.

Charles Keating Jr. and other villains of the S&L debacle have been driven from the boardrooms into courtrooms or jails. And the institutions that managed to escape government takeover during the last five years have reported six consecutive quarters of profits.

The industry's trade group even has a new name: the Savings & Community Bankers of America. It is attempting to rise from the combined ashes of two trade groups whose fortunes waned during the 1980s along with the business they represented: the U.S. League of Savings Institutions and the National Council of Savings Institutions.

Nevertheless, the pall of the as-yet unfinished taxpayer bailout begun by President Bush still hangs over the industry. And a deep division of opinion remains over what its future should be, or whether it even has a future.

According to the president of the new S&L trade group, Paul Schosberg, "There's an enormous energy in the industry these days," he said. "These people see themselves not only as survivors, but as victors. They've come through a period of tremendous testing."

Nearly 3,000 executives, spouses and exhibitors are attending, a 28 percent increase over the combined attendance at the League's and Council's conventions last year.

Schosberg warned against "a sense of euphoria" but said, "The numbers speak for themselves. ... This is a far cry from where the industry was a few years ago."

Others, however, cannot even muster Schosberg's cautious optimism about the S&L business, let alone euphoria.

Economist R. Dan Brumbaugh of San Francisco, author of a new book, "The Future of American Banking," said large losses on commercial real estate loans remain embedded in the portfolios of a significant number of thrifts.

And some of the institutions earning the greatest profits are doing so only because of the unprecedented wide gap between short-term interest rates on deposits and long-term rates on loans and securities the institutions invest in.

"If short-term interest rates rise unexpectedly, the profits can evaporate overnight. ... The gains can be given back almost instantaneously," he warned.

L.L. Bean opens shop in Tokyo

TOKYO (AP) — The traditional outdoor look back East came to the Far East Sunday when L.L. Bean opened its first overseas shop.

Shoppers formed a line before the green, two-story store opened in Jiyugaoka, a residential and shopping area in western Tokyo.

Many shoppers were wearing jackets with L.L. Bean logos, bought through catalogs.

"Everything I have on today is L.L. Bean, except for my briefs, which I bought from Land's End," said Shinya Sato, an IBM Japan employee.

"I like L.L. Bean because it has a conservative touch and also the image of East Coast America," Sato said.

In opening its first shop in Japan, L.L. Bean did not face the obstacles of American giant Toys R Us, which had to contend with a Japanese law designed to protect small retailers from large stores.

After a three-year struggle, Toys R Us opened its first store — 43,970 square feet — in December.

The L.L. Bean store has 5,000 square feet. The company plans to open four more in Japan.

Aside from some Japanese-made items such as divers' watches and women's shoes designed for small Japanese feet, 95 percent of the goods in the shop are imported from Maine, said Leon Gorman, the president of L.L. Bean.

In the camping section, Michiko Watanabe, a university student, was studying knives and flashlights displayed in a glass case, comparing prices with those in the company's mail-order catalog.

Continental to pick bidder

NEW YORK (AP) — Continental Airlines planned to announce a decision today on its choice of a bidder to buy the airline.

Continental's board members and creditors met during the weekend in New York to choose from at least two bidders that had made formal offers by last Monday.

Neither officials of Continental nor the two bidders said Sunday whether a decision had been made.

The airline said it canceled a 12:30 p.m. CST press conference today, but planned to announce the decision anyway by the deadline set by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Helen Balick.

Balick, who has been overseeing Continental's reorganization since the airline filed for Chapter 11 protection in December 1990, will have the final say over who actually buys the carrier.

The two known bidders were a group composed of Air Canada and Fort Worth investors James Coulter and David Bonderman; and a group led by Houston businessman Charles Hurwitz and Aeromexico.

Air Partners had initially suggested a $425 million bid and Hurwitz and Aeromexico had a $400 million bid on the table. Neither side would put a precise amount on their final offers.

Air Canada and Aeromexico made their bids in conjunction with U.S. investors to satisfy federal laws limiting how big a stake a foreign company can hold in a domestic airline.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investor seeks municipal bond certificate

By Bill Doyle

Q: My broker totally ignores my requests to sent me the certificate for the $20,000 school board bond he purchased for me in mid-1991. I want the bond registered in my name and the certificate delivered to me.

Doyle

When the broker did not return my phone calls, I resorted to sending letters by certified mail, to which he has not responded.

His firm sends me monthly statements and checks for the bond interest. But the brokerage charges a $50 annual account fee. When I refuse to pay that fee, it is deducted from the interest check.

I called the state securities department and was told this is a common problem and nothing can be done about it.

I consider the failure to send me my property to be theft. What should my next step be?

Q: Find out if the bond comes only in book-entry form, meaning no certificates are printed and ownership is recorded on computers. When that's the story, as it is with an increasing number of municipal bonds, you must hold your bond in an account at a brokerage or bank.

However, many municipal bonds, those issued by states and their political subdivisions, come in book-entry and registered form. If that's the case with your bond, demand that the certificate be sent to you.

The quick way to find out if your bond is available in registered form would be to telephone the school board that issued it. I suspect you will learn the bond is "book-entry only" and you are stuck.

Q: I have two accounts at a brokerage firm. One is a rollover individual retirement account with more than $100,000 of zero-coupon U.S. Treasury bonds maturing in about 15 years. In the other account, I have just one municipal bond.

My broker has lied to me so often about fees and other things, I want to transfer both accounts. My fear is that if I request a transfer, the brokerage will liquidate my securities and it will be a terrible mess to straighten things out.

Is there a safe way to transfer my securities to another institution?

A: Sure. Don't even mention to your present broker that you want to make the transfers. Instead, select the brokerage or bank to which you want to move your accounts and ask that financial institution to handle all details.

You then sign the necessary papers authorizing the transfers and things should be taken care of in reasonably short order, even though some brokerages have been known to drag their feet in shifting accounts elsewhere.

Readily marketable securities, such as stocks and most bonds, can be transferred quickly. There can be hang-ups moving limited-partnership units and some other investments, resulting in long delays and, even, failure to complete transfers.

A word of warning: Your complaints about fees might not be over. The brokerage from which you move the accounts might hit you with transfer charges. Brokers are allowed to levy any fees they please.

So, in picking the brokerage or bank to which you transfer the accounts, be certain to obtain — in writing — a description of all fees that institution charges.

Q: I say the book-entry arrangement for municipal bonds — forcing investors to hold such bonds in accounts with brokers and banks and giving brokers carte blanche to hit those investors with outlandish fees — is a rip-off. Do you agree?

A: Absolutely. However, it must be pointed out that all brokerages do not levy such fees. Most waive those charges for customers who buy or sell securities frequently, thereby producing substantial brokerage commissions.
