Begin survives no-confidence vote by a very narrow margin

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin survived a no-confidence motion by a narrow 58-57 vote today, beating back the most serious challenge to his government since he took office five years ago.

Two members of Begin's Likud bloc defected Tuesday, reducing the government coalition to 59 members in Parliament and raising the possibility that Begin would be defeated by the 61-member opposition led by the Labor Party.

Two independent deputies — Yigal Hurwitz and Mordechai Ben-Porat of the TELEM faction — announced today they would abstain, and the speculation at first was that the vote would end in a tie.

But the balance was tipped in Begin's favor at the last minute by Hanan Porat of the right-wing Tehiya Party, who abstained while his two colleagues voted against Begin.

The suspenseful drama built to a climax as the Knesset, or Parliament, took a roll-call vote in alphabetical order.

When Porat's name was called out and he replied "nimna" (abstain), Begin knew that he had beaten back the most dangerous challenge to his rule since he took office in 1977.

Porat's move was unexpected, but even if he had voted against Begin and produced a tied vote the government would have survived, because a draw counts as a victory for th government in a no-confidence vote.

It was the seventh no-confidence motion Begin has survived in 10 months.

Begin, 68, walking with a cane after breaking his hip last year, sounded chipper as he closed the six-hour debate. "The government will not fall today," he declared from the podium minutes before the vote.

Begin was elected to a second term of office last June. A no-confidence motion presented by Labor on March 23 in protest against the government's tough West Bank policies ended in a tie. Begin wanted to resign, but his Cabinet overruled him.

Today's cliffhanger vote was taken after several hours of debate on the Labor Party's motion, presented in protest against a 10.7 percent inflation rate in April. This pointed toward an annual rate of 136 percent, which would bethe highest ever in the Jewish state.

The two defectors, Amnon Linn and Yitzhak Peretz, said they quit Likud because Begin banned flights by El Al, the Israeli airline, on Saturday, the Jewish Sabbath, in response to the demand of religious parties in his government coalition.

Although a hawk, Linn said he was also dissatisfied with the government's handling of anti-Israeli unrest in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. He charged it failed to explore ways of co-existing with the Arabs.

With Begin's defeat of the no-confidence vote, he could try to govern without a majority while trying to get TELEM to join his coalition. Or he could call an election for a new Knesset, three years ahead of schedule, since opinion polls indicate Likud would win more seats than the 46 it now has.

If he lost the no-confidence vote, he would have to resign. He could then try to form a new coalition government, call an election or step aside and let the Labor Party try to form a majority coalition.

School revenue below planned spending, board members told

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

The Pampa school board looked at this fiscal year's budget, changed a property appraisal notification rule, contracted for school films, and set a date for bids for school construction projects at its regular meeting Tuesday.

The school board has made plans to spend $9,868,389, but only $8,348,232 in tax revenue has been collected through May 4. The district must collect another $1,520,156 to meet budgeted expenses.

Following the city's recent approval, the school board gave its nod Tuesday to changing a property appraisal notification rule, a change requested by city - school Tax Assessor - Collector Charles Rand.

The rule change allows the tax office to increase a property's appraised value up to $1,000, without notification to the property owner.

Next Tuesday at 5 p.m. was the time selected to receive bids for roof repairs at several Pampa schools.

Horace Mann and Wilson Elementary Schools will receive totally new roofs. Pampa High School needs a partial roof replacement, and Pampa Middle School needs roof repairs.

The board wants two separate bids for the roofing work: a bid for standard materials and a bid for urethane roofing.

Board members also approved a contract for school films with the Education Service Center. The fee for the films averages about $2 per student.

In other action the board hired several new teachers and approved resignations of several others, including the high school baseball coach.

The board hired seven new employees: Mary Gandy, history, middle school; Bryan Morris, math - coach, high school, Tammey Shimon, science, high school; James Walling, history - coach, high school; Brenda Coffman, second grade, Wilson Elementary; Donna French, music, Lamar Elementary; and Dorothy Barrett, school nurse.

The board accepted five resignations: Dottie Fraser, homemaking, high school; Gary Lehnen, history - coach, high school; Gary Haynes, math - baseball coach, high school; LaJuana Gibson, science, high school; and Connie Billingsley, fifth grade, Austin Elementary.

In other action, the board approved all due bills, including expenses to Rand for appraisal classes in both Amarillo and Austin.

GOP leaders dropping plans for savings in Social Security

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with an almost certain defeat on the Senate floor, Republican leaders are revising their 1983 budget blueprint to drop plans for $40 billion in Social Security savings while adding billions of dollars for domestic programs.

The changes would push the budget outline's projected 1983 deficit to $115 billion.

In the House, meanwhile, Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois was finishing negotiations today with conservative Democrats and moderate Republicans on an alternative budget to counter a package being pushed by House Democratic leaders.

House sources, who asked not to be quoted by name, said Michel's package projects deficits of $99.6 billion in 1983, $73.9 billion in 1984 and $45.7 billion in 1985, and includes deeper cuts in military spending, domestic programs and benefit programs than the Senate plan. No Social Security cuts are contemplated.

In the Senate, consideration of a spending outline stalled Tuesday while majority Republicans held a lengthy closed meeting. Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., emerged from the meeting to say, "I've been instructed to prepare a modification of the budget."

Not only will the Republicans drop the Social Security provision, but they also agreed to restore budget cuts totaling $3 billion previously slated for Medicare, student loans, veterans' benefits, space programs and housing, officials said.

The original Senate plan, drawn up by Republican leaders and approved by President Reagan, called for $40 billion in Social Security savings over three years — presumably through benefit cuts or increased taxes. Its backers contend this is the minimum necessary to assure the solvency of the giant pension system.

But with at least eight Republicans and virtually all 45 Democrats opposed, Domenici conceded it probably would fail.

The alternative, which Domenici and his staff were drawing up overnight, drops all mention of the $40 billion figure. In its place is a requirement that Congress take whatever action is necessary later this year to make the pension system solvent.

Officials said the changes in areas other than Social Security would add about $3 billion to spending for 1983 and $4 billion in each of the next two years.

Those increases, coupled with the decision not to seek the $40 billion in Social Security savings, produce projected deficits of $115 billion in 1983, about $90 billion in 1984 and about $60 billion in 1985.

Funnel clouds dance in area

The funnel clouds along the border area were sighted between Fritch and Texhoma. There were no reports of injuries.

Hailstones one inch in diameter pelted the Borger area.

Most of the heavy thunderstorm activity was confined to the Panhandle and South Plains.

Skies were mostly clear around the state early today although some fog was reported in Southeast Texas and along the coast.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 60s and 70s. Extremes ranged from 59 at both Amarillo and El Paso to 74 at Galveston.

Some early morning temperatures around the state included 69 at Wichita Falls and Dallas-Fort Worth, 68 at Houston, 70 at Corpus Christi, 71 at San Antonio and 64 at Midland.

Forecasts called for partly cloudy skies over most of the state today with scattered thunderstorms expected in North Texas, east of the mountains in West Texas and along the coast.

Highs were to be mostly in the 80s and 90s with temperatures climbing to near 100 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Lows tonight will be in the 50s in Northwest Texas and the 60s and 70s elsewhere. Highs Thursday will be mostly in the 80s with a few readings in the 90s.

Falkland Island peace talks in last hours

By The Associated Press

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said today Argentina's response to the latest Falkland Islands peace proposal "doesn't look very encouraging," and British newspapers reported she has already decided to invade the islands.

Mrs. Thatcher said in a British Broadcasting Corp. interview her government had not yet seen the full text of Argentina's response, but that "the gap looks big" between London and Buenos Aires positions on the disputed British colony Argentina seized six weeks ago.

At the United Nations today, Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said he thought he was in "the last hours" of talks with Argentine and British negotiators in attempts to end the dispute.

He did not elaborate, but a British source at the U.N. said Argentina's response had some new elements, "including some points of forward movement."

Argentine Deputy Foreign Minister Enrique Ros said after he presented his response to Britain's position Tuesday night it was intended to bridge differences and resolve the conflict peacefully.

Earlier, British landing forces were reported closing on the South Atlantic islands, and Mrs. Thatcher was quoted by the London Daily Express tabloid as telling Queen Elizabeth II that she has ordered troops to invade.

"Only the time of a British landing on the Falkland Islands seemed in doubt," the London Times reported today.

When Mrs. Thatcher's BBC intervier asked her opinion of Argentina's response, she said: "I'm afraid it doesn't look very encouraging."

She repeated Britain's demand that all Argentine forces on islands withdraw before any negotiations begin. She also repeated Britain's insistence that sovereignty is negotiable, and demanded the islands' natives retain local control in any interim government.

"I personally think that after this terrible experience, the last thing they will want to do is to have close associations with the Argentines," she said.

The tabloid London Daily Express reported Mrs. Thatcher informed Queen Elizabeth II "a decision has been taken to invade the Falklands, with the final timing still to be fixed."

At the United Nations, Argentine Deputy Foreign Minister Enrique Ros conveyed new proposals Tuesday night to Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar. He said the proposals, which responded to British proposals made Monday, were intended to "bridge and narrow the differences" between the two sides.

Perez de Cuellar delivered the Argentine proposals to Britain's U.N. ambassador, Sir Anthony Parsons, who said he was sending them to London for consideration.

The secretary-general's proposed framework for peace reportedly calls for a truce, a phased, supervised withdrawal of British and Argentine forces from the Falklands area, and a U.N. interim administration of the islands during negotiations on their future.

According to British and Argentine sources, the main stumbling blocks are:

—Britain's insistence that the Falkland islanders' local government bodies be restored during the interim U.N. administration. Argentina contends these are vestiges of British colonialism.

—A dispute over how far the British fleet would withdraw. Britain is willing to move its fleet 200 miles from the Falklands, nearly the distance of the Argentine mainland from the islands, but Argentina wants the task force much farther away.

Search continues for escapee

EL DORADO, Ark. (AP) — A Lubbock, Texas, man who ran from a Union County courtroom Tuesday and disappeared on a city street remained free today, authorities said.

Patrick Vance, 23, was appearing in court for arraignment on a burglary charge when he escaped, Sheriff August Pieroni said. Vance had been arrested May 3 at an El Dorado automobile repair shop.

A dispatcher at the Union County Sheriff's Department said today that patrol units were searching for Vance. Bloodhounds and an airplane had been used to hunt Vance on Tuesday.

Hinckley influenced by tranquilizers

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr., "burning with inner rage" and possibly influenced by tranquilizers, thought he had "no choice" but to fire on the president because the Secret Service had spotted his gun, a psychiatrist says.

Dr. David Michael Bear, testifying at Hinckley's trial Tuesday, also said the Colorado psychiatrist who treated the defendant before the March 30, 1981 shootings devised a "disastrous" plan of therapy for his patient.

Bear, who is returning to the witness stand today for cross-examination by government attorneys, concluded that Hinckley was too mentally ill to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct.

Hinckley has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity in the wounding of Reagan and three other men outside the Washington Hilton Hotel.

"There was no ability to plan, there was no ability to premeditate," the Harvard Medical School psychiatrist told the jury.

"Do I conclude he was logical and planning? My God, my sense of justice says absolutely not," he said.

That remark prompted U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker to inform Bear, "Your sense of justice is not sought here." The jury was out of the room at the time.

Bear said Hinckley told him during psychiatric interviews that he took four 5-milligram tablets of the tranquilizer Valium before leaving for the shooting scene.

Hinckley should not have been taking the drug at all, Bear said, because it makes psychotic people like Hinckley more aggressive.

"John Hinckley was burning with inner rage," he said. "It's very possible that Valium released this rage."

At the Hilton, Hinckley was amazed he got so close to Reagan without the Secret Service stopping him, Bear said.

"Their eyes were on me. hey saw the gun. Now I have no choice. I have to go forward and shoot," Bear said, recalling Hinckley's description of his thoughts.

Once Hinckley had emptied his .22-caliber pistol, he relaxed in a state of "steely calm," Bear said. At the time, the psychiatrist said Hinckley thought, "I'm relieved, it's over."

At the time of the shooting, Hinckley considered himself a failure because he had stalked former President Carter and was unable to kill him, Bear said. And he was also obsessed with actress Jodie Foster and grief-stricken over the murder of his idol, John Lenoon.

Bear said the decision to allow Hinckley to remain on Valium was among several crucial mistakes made by Dr. John Hopper, the Evergreen, Colo., psychiatrist who treated the defendant from October 1980 through February 1981.

Hopper, who had been hired by Hinckley's wealthy parents, testified he believed Hinckley suffered from anxiety and was upset because he couldn't find a career.

Hinckley is charged in a 13-count indictment with attempting to assassinate the president and assault with intent to kill Reagan, White House Press Secretary James Brady, a Washington policeman and a Secret Service agent.

Housing starts drop, personal income up

By The Associated Press

Housing starts fell in April by almost one third from the pace of a year ago, while the Reagan administration issued its gloomiest forecast yet on any recovery for the slumping economy.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday that new houses were started at the seasonally adjusted annual rate of 881,000 units, 6.4 percent below the March level and 32.3 percent below the April pace of a year ago.

On the brighter side, personal income continued its modest advance this year with a 0.3 percent rise in April.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders, said it is unlikely that housing can show much recovery unless interest rates fall sharply.

"It's a dismal picture," he said.

Mark J. Riedy, executive vice president of a lenders' group, the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, said, "It's not surprising, but it's disappointing at the same time."

On Monday, a Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. study forecast only moderate growth in the housing industry through mid-year.

Commerce officials previously had reported housing starts rising for five straight months through March, but revised figures released Tuesday showed a 0.4 percent decline in March rather than the 2.5 percent gain first estimated.

In Washington, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said the nation is in for anemic recovery, perhaps followed quickly by another recession, unless huge potential federal budget deficits are trimmed.

The economy is "starting to inch ahead, but it really hasn't gotten under steam yet," Regan told NBC News in the administration's bleakest forecast so far. If Congress can pass a reasonable budget, interest rates will come down and a strong recovery is possible, he said.

The Commerce Department also said Tuesday that personal income rose 0.3 percent in April, while personal spending climbed 0.5 percent.

The increase in spending — which many economists say must show strong growth if the economy is to improve — followed a 0.6 percent decline in March, the department said.

In other economic news:

—Two oil ministers predicted renewed world demand this summer for OPEC oil will save the struggling cartel from being forced to cut prices. Four Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' ministers were in Caracas, Venezuela, Tuesday for a strategy session.

—Armco Inc. said it will use voluntary retirements and unpaid personal leaves to reduce its corporate staff by about 150 jobs. The steel producer, citing a discouraging outlook for many of its businesses, said 20 temporary employees at its general offices in Middletown, Ohio, were fired Friday.

Shuttle rolled into assembly building

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia was towed 300 yards from its hangar early today to an assembly rendezvous with its rockets and fuel tank in preparation for its final test flight this summer.

The 100-ton spacecraft emerged from its hangar at 12:50 a.m. EDT and was swiftly towed on its landing gear into the cavernous Vehicle Assembly Building where the mating operation will take place.

The rollout was more than 13 hours late, a result of miscalculations by ground crews on the time needed to prepare the space plane for towing, said a Kennedy Space Center official.

"No major problems. There were just some bad guesses by technicians on how long it would take to complete each procedure" in the hangar on Tuesday, said spokesman Mark Hess.

The delay was expected to have little or no effect on the start of the reusable spacecraft's fourth mission, the final test flight before the shuttle program becomes operational in November.

The tentative launch date is June 27, but officials here say this may change after the shuttle is moved to the launch site next week.

Despite last-minute hangups Tuesday, Columbia's "turnaround time" in the hangar was a record 41 days. That compared with 53 work days by technicians who prepared the spacecraft for its third mission.

Acting Operations Director Al O'Hara said Columbia would spend only seven or eight days in the Vehicle Assembly Building, compared with 14 days the last time around.

In the 52-story assembly building, Columbia will be placed on a sling and hoisted vertically for the mating with its 15-story aluminum fuel tank and twin rocket boosters.

The shuttle is to be rolled out to launch pad 39A on May 26.

Columbia is to carry a top-secret military cargo on its fourth flight, a seven-day mission commanded by Apollo 16 veteran Thomas K. Mattingly. The pilot will be space rookie Henry W. Hartsfield.

In its hangar, Columbia had 1,032 of its more than 30,000 heat-resistant tiles strengthened and replaced, said spokeswoman Ann Skinner. Thirty-six of those fell off during its third flight.

Ten tile gaps remained to be filled, she said. Seven pieces of tile are to be installed in the assembly building and three, all in the forward area, will be installed at the launch pad, where access to them is easier.

Car dealers donated $323,350 to senators against federal rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifty-six senators who voted to kill a federal rule requiring used-car dealers to warn buyers of known car defects received a total of $323,350 in campaign contributions over the past five years from the chief lobbying group against the rule.

But Frank McCarthy of the National Automobile Dealers Association, which spearheaded the lobbying drive, said he doesn't think the donations "changed a single vote."

The Senate voted 69-27 Tuesday to veto the Federal Trade Commission regulation which would require the warning.

The congressional veto — the first ever of a FTC rule — now goes to the House, which is expected to follow the Senate's lead. The House has until May 26 to complete congressional action blocking the plan.

"It doesn't look good for us," said an aide to Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., a key backer of the rule in the House.

The FTC regulation would require dealers to disclose all known defects in each car they sell and to state whether the vehicle is covered by a warranty.

The rule would make car dealers subject to fines up to $10,000 for failing to disclose defects they know about.

The association's donations, made through its Automobile and Truck Dealers Election Action Committee, went to 36 Republicans and 20 Democrats who voted to throw out the rule, according to Federal Election Commission records.

Eleven other senators — nine of them Republicans — received contributions but opposed the veto effort.

Backers of the FTC rule blamed the dealers' intensive lobbying campaign for the lopsided vote, but said the campaign contributions were only part of the story.

"Car dealers are respectable citizens in every town in this country," said Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee. "They are often pillars of their community. A senator could think, 'why not give them my vote?'"

By vetoing the rule, "we are in essence saying to the public: we approve of shoddy dealers, we approve of cheats," Packwood said. "Most dealers are honest. But unfortunately, in every barrel there are a few rotten apples."

The senator with the most contributions from the dealers' association was Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., who received $15,500 over the five-year period, according to the FEC.

Jim Arbury, Riegle's administrative assistant, said the contributions did not influence the senator's vote for the veto. He said Riegle opposed the FTC rule because it does not apply to private used-car sales and would be ineffective in protecting consumers.

"It will give consumers a very false sense of security," Arbury said.

Arbury added that donations do not give contributors any special access to Riegle. "Anyone who wants access to his office gets access," Arbury said.

Jane Boorman, an aide to Sen. James Abdnor, R-S.D., who received $13,000, also denied any relation between the senator's vote for the veto and the contributions.

"He has always made a point of making his decisions independently of any contributions from anybody," she said.

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., also received $13,000 from the dealers and 10 others received $10,000: Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn.; Alan J. Dixon, D-Ill.; Jesse Helms, R-N.C.; Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.; Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H.; Paul Laxalt, R-Nev.; Alan Simpson, R-Wyo.; Steve Symms, R-Idaho; Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.; and John Tower, R-Texas.

Church leader claims Moon 'persecuted'

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon's conviction for conspiracy to evade income taxes is a 20th century equivalent of the persecution of Jesus Christ, says the president of the American branch of Moon's Unification Church.

"As with all of the world's great religious leaders, he has been met with hatred, bigotry and misunderstanding," Mose Durst said after the verdict Tuesday.

A U.S. District Court jury deliberated four days after a six-week trial before returning the guilty verdict against the 62-year-old Korean evangelist. The Unification Church leader could receive up to 14 years in prison when he is sentenced July 14.

Moon was convicted of filing false income tax returns to the Internal Revenue Service and conspiring to evade taxes on about $162,000 in personal income. An aide, Takeru Kamiyama, 40, was convicted with him in the tax evasion conspiracy and also of obstructing justice through lying and submitting false documents in an effort to block the investigation. Both are free on bail.

Durst said Moon's only comment was: "Don't worry. No problem. We will go forth. We are people of principle, not personality. Our life is a public life of righteousness and of service to the world." The evangelist, who lives on a church-owned estate in suburban Irvington, showed no emotion when the verdict was delivered, but some spectators brushed away tears.

Moon's attorney, Charles Stillman, had objected to a jury trial and said the verdict would be appealed.

On May 6, the Court of Appeals, New York state's highest court, ruled Moon's church was a genuine religious organization entitled to tax exemptions.

Durst charged that the jury in the income tax case was "snowed and bamboozled" by prosecutors who "repeated the word 'cash' over and over again until the jury was brainwashed."

He also compared Moon's conviction to the persecution of Christ "for treason against the state," saying the only difference is that "the way to get him in the 20th century is through the IRS."

But juror Freddie Bryant, a clerical assistant from the Bronx, said Moon's position "didn't have anything to do" with the verdict.

"We made an effort to push his publicized image out of our mind," she said.

Moon, who is married and has 12 children, became a permanent resident of the United States in 1973. According to the church, Moon was born clairvoyant and at age 16 saw Jesus in an Easter vision, during which he was ordered to carry on Christ's unfinished business.

Moon was charged with failing to report $112,000 in interest earned for 1973, 1974, and 1975 on $1.6 million in deposits in his name at the Chase Manhattan Bank.

He also was charged with receiving $50,000 worth of corporate shares without paying for them and failing to declare them as taxable.

Gulf states fugitive sought in Colorado

DENVER (AP) — Colorado law-enforcement authorities are looking for a Kansas prison escapee allegedly involved in a crime spree in Texas and Louisiana and described by the FBI as extremely dangerous.

Denver police at Stapleton International Airport said they were on the lookout for Kent David Kloster, 23, and the Colorado State Patrol also continued their alert.

FBI agents in Denver issued an all-points bulletin Tuesday for Kloster, who authorities believed was in Colorado after a crime spree in Texas and Lousiana.

Denver FBI spokesman Anthony Sibley said agents believed that Kloster, who has vowed that he will not be taken alive, might be heading for Stapleton International Airport in an attempt to leave the country.

Sibley said officers had received a report that Kloster might have been in Sterling, Colo., although there were no confirmed reports that he was sighted. Law enforcement authorities between Sterling and Denver were alerted Tuesday.

Kloster was transferred May 6 from the Kansas State Penitentiary at Lansing to the Kansas Corrections Department's Topeka work release center, said Howard Klink, administrative assistant to Corrections Department Secretary Patrick McManus.

Kloster did not return to the center, a non-secure halfway house for inmates nearing parole, following a job interview the morning of May 7, Klink said Tuesday night.

Kloster had been serving an aggregate sentence of five to 18 years at the state penitentiary for forgery, corruptly influencing a witness and either burglary or robbery, Klink said.

Sibley said Kloster is believed to have been involved in the kidnapping of two teen-agers in Dallas on Saturday.

Spaces open in seminars

A women's gun safety course, scheduled for Saturday, and defensive driving seminars scheduled for May 24 and 25, sponsored by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, still have spaces available for applicants.

Fees are $20 for the driving seminar and $15 for the gun safety course. The gun safety course will be taught by Pampa Police Detective Ken Neal.

To apply for either course, drop by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce in the Hughes Building.

Some Texas congressmen are millionaires

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Jim Collins, R-Texas, of Dallas not only is the wealthiest member of the Texas congressional delegation, but perhaps of the entire House of Representatives.

Financial disclosure forms, required by the Ethics in Government Act, were released Tuesday, showing Collins with income of more than $750,000 last year alone and assets of at least $5.3 million and perhaps as much as $10 million or more.

Other Texas congressmen with assets of at least $1 million are Sam Hall, D-Marshall; Ralph Hall (no relation), D-Rockwall; and Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont.

Because assets must be reported in ranges, it is not possible to tell exact income, assets or liabilities, unless the congressman goes beyond the form to specify exact amounts.

Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, had an 1981 income of between $60,667 and $132,667, including a delegation-high $14,150 in honorariums for 20 speaking engagements, more than half of them for $1,000. Hance's assets were in a range of from $300,000 to $1,025,000, including cattle and land holdings of his wife.

Other Texas congressmen whose lower ranges were below $1 million but their higher ranges were above the magic figure were Marvin Leath, D-Marlin; Ron Paul, R-Lake Jackson; and Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin.

The disclosure form asked congressmen to report assets as falling in the range of $1,000 to $5,000, $5,000 to $15,000, $15,000 to $50,000, $50,000 to $100,000, $100,000 to $250,000, and $250,000 or more.

Rep. Richard White, D-El Paso, reported assets of "more than $250,000." He might, or might not be, a millionaire, depending upon the worth of his three-fourths interest in a 25-unit apartment complex and one-tenth interest in a 66-unit apartment, both in El Paso County.

Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford; Jake Pickle, D-Austin; and Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, the House Majority Leader, also had holdings in the maximum category of "over $250,000" that would make them millionaires if high enough.

Stenholm's major holding is his farm and equipment near Stamford, plus isolated holdings in various farm coops in the vicinity of his home. Pickle's major asset is one-third interest in 958.5 acres in Travis County, and Wright reported holding stock worth more than $250,000 in Southeastern Resources.

Wright listed stock valued at more than $100,000 in BMW Drilling Fund and a similar investment in his Fort Worth home.

In accumulating outside earnings of $1 million or more, just in 1981, Collins reported receiving more than $100,000 in interest on a certificate of deposit at Republic National Bank of Dallas and more than $100,000 in capital gains on stock he held in Kennecott Copper and in Zale Corporation. He received more than $50,000 from four other holdings.

His major stock holdings include "more than $250,000" in AMF, Inc., Consolidated Industries, Crown Zellerbach Corp., First Southern, Philips Industries, Wayne Gossard Corp., CMA Money Fund, cash deposits (holdings, land and partners) and in the James M. and Dorothy D. Collins Trust.

Hall's largest holdings include half ownership in a Marshall shopping center, one-sixth interest in a Marshall hotel, half interest in 600 acres of land in Harrison County, and producing oil and gas royalties in Gregg and Harrison counties.

Paul, a gynecologist, listed five holdings worth more than $100,000 — his home, 40-acre farm and a medical building, all in Lake Jackson, plus a pension plan and a profit plan. He also reported owning a condominium and another home valued between $50,000 and $100,000.

Paul also listed liabilities between $215,000 and $565,000, most of them on his various real estate holdings.

Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston, was the only Texas congressman to break down his assets exactly. He reported holdings of $846,292 and a 1981 income of $35,000, not counting his congressional salary of $60,662. He had no debts.

Archer said he had $262,278 in stocks and bonds, $173,893 in real estate, $2,000 in mineral royalty interest, and a $4,000 automobile. Included in his holdings is his $173,000 Washington townhouse.

Stenholm was, like Hance, popular with business groups as a speaker. He reported making 17 speeches for which he received honorariums totaling $11,000. He reported turning over $3,000 of the total, for six speeches, over to various charitable groups in West Texas.

Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, made 10 speeches for which he collected $9,000 in honorariums, and listed 14 meetings throughout 1981 in which he received airline tickets and hotel expenses. The $9,000 was his total income for 1981, and de la Garza listed no liabilities and no assets.

Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, also reported no assets and no liabilities. His only income in 1981, other than his congressional salary, was $472 in interest from a savings account, he said.

Mickey Leland, D-Houston, reported $3,900 in 1981 income from honorariums, no assets, and between $15,000 and $50,000 in liabilities. However, he also reported eight stock transactions between $1,000 and $5,000 and one between $5,000 and $15,000 during the year.

Jack Hightower, D-Vernon, reported $20,029 in outside 1981 income, including his $14,105 pension as a former member of the Texas Legislature. He listed between $1,000 and $5,000 in assets and three debts to financial institutions — two loans in the range of $15,000 to $50,000 and one between $50,000 and $100,000.

Ralph Hall, while reporting assets of at least $1,275,000 and possibly as much as $1,685,000, also listed liabilities of at least $715,000 and maybe as much as $1.4 million.

Hall, like Hightower, is a "double-dipper," having drawn $15,865 in pension last year for his Texas Legislature service. Hall had 1981 outside earnings of between $62,365 and $141,365.

Hall's major assets are "over $250,000" in 354 acres in Hunt County. His stock in banks at Rockwall and Crowley also were valued in that highest category.

Fire officials to begin refinery investigation

KILGORE, Texas (AP) — A welding spark may have touched off the explosion that killed two refinery workers, hurled debris 800 feet in the air and sent flames soaring to heights visible 16 miles away, officials said.

Two other workers were injured when three storage tanks containing gasoline, naphtha, and diesel fuel exploded Tuesday morning at the Shore Company Inc.

Company officials said the blast destroyed one-third of the plant and caused more than $1 million damage, said Kilgore Fire Chief Paul Duckworth.

Witnesses said the metal tops from the tanks were blown more than 800 feet into the air and the flames were visible in Longview, 16 miles away.

The blast forced the evacuations of about 760 people in a three-block radius around the refinery for 2½ hours, including 460 elementary school students who were sent to another school after the explosion.

"We had quite a bit of potential in the fuel involved," said Duckworth.

He said about 150,000 gallons of gasoline, 20,000 gallons of diesel fuel and several thousand gallons of naphtha were stored at the refinery, along with 3,000 gallons of tetraethyl lead and 800 gallons of butane.

Firefighters worked to keep flames away from the lead and acid, Duckworth said.

"The explosion could have possibly been touched off by a welder's spark," he said. "It's one of several possibilities we'll be checking."

Killed were Pat Daniel Shea, a 31-year-old refinery welder from Dickson, Tenn., and 59-year-old G.O. Leach of Kilgore, a dispatcher. Leach apparently suffered a heart attack, authorities said.

"I had the fire chiefs in Longview and Tyler both saying they didn't have any trouble realizing that there was a fire here," Duckworth said.

Firefighters from those cities were called in to help battle the blaze, which was brought under control about 10:40 a.m. after it raged for more than two hours, fire officials said.

A Shore spokesman who asked not to be identified said he was sitting in his office when he heard something that sounded "like a sonic boom."

"There were probably about three explosions," he said, "One large one and two smaller ones. The best we can tell it looks like a third of our refinery was destroyed, but we can't set a dollar value on it."

State prisons lose appeal

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A federal appeals court has refused to end the court-ordered limits on state prison inmate population that caused Texas Department of Corrections officials to close prison doors last week.

The U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals, in a rare conference call hearing, rejected Tuesday a petition by El Paso County that sought to end the limits imposed by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's sweeping prison reform order last year.

The state prison system locked its gates to new inmates May 10 because a quarterly report showed it housed 300 more convicts than the 31,755 men the formula in Justice's order allowed.

However, Gov. Bill Clements ordered the prison system, the largest in the nation, reopened and the state Board of Corrections announced a new limited admissions policy Monday.

The TDC accepted eight inmates Monday and 217 on Tuesday, officials said.

According to figures released by the TDC, the prison system now houses about 31,650 male inmates. The approximately 1,500 female inmates are not affected by the court order.

The appeals court also Tuesday temporarily returned a state appeal of the order back to Justice's court.

The court said it sent the case back to Justice so he can eliminate from the state's appeal of two issues on which a settlement was reached months ago.

Attorney General Mark White said the two issues were the state's use of inmate supervisors and the ratio of prison support personnel to inmates. He said both issues were resolved out of court months ago.

He said the order to send the case back to Justice was just to remove the issues and would not affect the state's appeal of the order requiring the TDC to give every inmate at least 40 square feet of space.

El Paso County had asked the appeals court override Justice's order setting the limits and prevent the judge from interfering with another federal court order that set limits on the number of inmates in the county jail.

The court, among other things, ruled the county had not exhausted all its alternatives in district court, said El Paso County Attorney George Rodriguez.

The closing of prison gates drew fire from county jail officials who also have overcrowding problems.

Insect larvae died during takeover

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Cotton farmers who were relieved students did not kill 15 million beneficial insect larvae held hostage for five days now face financial hardship because most of the tiny captives died anyway.

Farmers said the loss of the insects — which feed on the eggs of cotton-threatening boll weevils — would be expensive because more insecticides will now be needed.

Students demanding more money for their school threatened during a five-day siege of a laboratory last week to kill the insects unless the government agreed to negotiate. The protesters ended the takeover Saturday, but assistant lab director Martha Cortez said it was already too late.

Ms. Cortez said Tuesday the deaths were accidental, resulting from changes in temperature in the laboratory during the siege.

Area farmers had pleaded with the students to spare the lives of the insects, which are released at the beginning of the cotton season to control the pests.

Ms. Cortez said the farmers now would have to make at least two extra applications of insecticide on their cotton to make up for the loss. Neither she nor the farmers could produce an estimate of the costs.

The larvae require a temperature of 78 to 80 degrees and humidity of 60 to 70 percent to survive. Ms. Cortez said she returned to lab Saturday to find that 68-degree cold had killed all but about 2.6 million of the larvae.

Lab director Helidoro Luevano said the deaths of the insects were not the fault of the students, who he said treated the lab with respect and even cleaned the building while they held it.

Meanwhile, about 5,000 students and farmers continued the protest with a march in downtown Juarez Tuesday. But student leaders said they still had received no word on whether the government will negotiate.

Student leader Fernando Reyes, 19, said the students still were counting on public support to make federal agriculture officials decide to negotiate.

Along border alien workers an institution

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Federal agents recently swept through businesses in several cities, arresting illegal aliens. But in El Paso, alien employment remains a part of doing business on the border.

"It's an integral part of the economy here," said El Paso Chamber of Commerce manager Mark T. Miles. "It always has been and it always will be. It's like talking about the weather. We know it's there, but there's not anything you can really do about it."

Immigration and Naturalization Service agents have arrested thousands of illegal aliens in cities like Dallas, Houston and Los Angeles in "Operation Jobs," a sweeping investigation aimed at halting employment of illegal aliens.

INS officials said the aliens were taking high-paying jobs in the interior of the United States, jobs that could be held by unemployed Americans.

But in El Paso and along most of the U.S.-Mexico border, arresting illegal aliens working in the United States is a never-ending attempt to halt something that has been accepted, tacitly, for decades.

While the raids were gathering headlines with their thousands of arrests, Border Patrol officers in the El Paso area routinely apprehended 794 working illegal aliens in April. Arrests for the first four months of the year totaled 3,539, according to Border Patrol intelligence agent Joe Aubin.

"Along the Mexican border, the enforcement effort on a continuing basis is stronger," said assistant chief agent Dale Cozart. "There is a constant pressure along the border because that's where the concentrations of border officers are."

But even with the stiffer enforcement, Cozart and Aubin admit there is no stopping the flow of aliens looking for jobs as long as there is work available.

"Every illegal alien that comes into the United States is coming for one reason — employment," Cozart said. "If you can remove the incentive for that person to enter, it's a real deterrent."

Legislation pending in Congress would allow sanctions against employers who hire illegal aliens, including a fine. Now, it isn't against the law to hire an illegal alien.

"People tell me that if it were a violation of the law to employ an illegal alien, then they wouldn't do it," Cozart said.

Tom F. Lee, a marketing analyst and pollster, says most major manufacturers in the El Paso area already are careful to make sure new employees are in the country legally.

"The bigger manufacturers know the INS is going to be looking at them," Lee said. "It's not worth the risk."

But as many as 10,000 illegal aliens still can find work in the area as yard workers, domestics, construction workers and laborers in smaller factories, Lee estimated.

Local businessmen say they don't think the illegal aliens are displacing American workers in El Paso, even though the city's unemployment rate has hovered around 9 percent since the first of the year.

Miles thinks unemployment figures are misleading and that there are jobs that simply are not being taken by Americans.

"If a person is motivated to get a job, he will get one," he said. "The people coming from Mexico are really motivated. If a person can come here from a foreign country with no knowledge of the language and get a job, then there are obviously jobs available."

The problem is that the jobs are not ones that most U.S. citizens would want — "rough work" like erecting fences, cleaning yards and stables, roofing and renovation work, he said.

Lee, who agrees with Miles' view, said most of the work is done on a cash basis and the illegal aliens often bounce from job to job in what he calls an "underground economy."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

To combat drunk driving

President Reagan's new Commission on Drunk Driving is a novelty in that it is not going to conduct one of those expensive "studies" and then file a report to collect dust on some bureau shelf. The problem of drunk driving needs more action than study, and much of the action already is taking place.

We already know — from the news columns if not from first - hand observation — that too many people are trying to drive their cars after they've had too much to drink. The fact that half of our fatal traffic accidents involve alcohol has been known for years. What is new is the determination of a growing number of citizens and their lawmakers to do something about it.

Enacting tough drunk driving laws and seeing that they are enforced is a state and local ressponsibility, not a federal one. The President's 30 - member commission will serve mainly as a source of information and guidance for those working on the problem at the state and local level. The goal is to turn an otherwise fragmented effort into an organized and systematic national campaign.

Different states are having different degrees of success in their campaigns to put teeth into drunk driving laws and to give their police and courts new tools to make the laws effective. The national commission can help sort out what works and what doesn't work so that the entire country can benefit by experience in the various states.

Dramataic declines in accienets and arrests have been reported as a result of crackdowns on drinking drivers which are highly publicized within a state or community. A research psychologist for the U.S. Department of Transportation, however, warns that these effects may not last unless there is a continuing effort to convince motorists that if they drink and drive they stand a good chance of getting caught, and if they get caught, they will not get off easily.

That will require sustained programs in law enforcement and public education. Only some profound changes in social and individual attitudes toward drinking and driving will bring a lasting reduction in the toll from alcohol - related accidents. As it is, such accidents have been killing an average of 70 people every day in the United States, and that's a national disgrace.

'Robots coming!'

"The robots are coming! The robots are coming!"

That's the cry of Peter S. DiCicco, district president of the New England International Union of Electrical Workers.

Mr. DiCicco, who regards himself as organized labor's latter day Paul Revere, says union members should feel as threatened by robots as were the colonists by British troops at the beginning of the Revolutionary War. Indeed, he doubts that unitns today can defend themselves against the electronic invaders.

Robots, in truth, have already established a major and expanding beachhead on the shores of the industrialized world. Surprisingly, their buildup has been in progress for about 30 years. Because robot inventor George Devol was unable during the 1950s to interest big business in his labor - saving devices, development fell to small compa ies. Consequently, the largest factor in U.S. robot industry has been a small firm, Unimation Inc., which had relatively modest sales in 1981 of $57 million.

But the robotics industry is spreading swiftly, spearheaded by such U.S. business giants as Internatinal Business Machines, General Electric, Westinghouse Electric, Bendix, and American Can. All of these heavy hitters have taken the plunge into the industrial robot market within the last year. That these firms are acquiring their technologies through licenses from German and Japanese producers admits to a melanchold lag in American research and development.

The star of a recent robot show in Detroit was a little IBM robot called "RS I," which picked up small electronic components and put them together into three different subassemblies. Thanks to a new computer programming language, this and similar robots can be easily instructed to perform tricky tasks. Indeed, less sophisticated robots are already hard at work for General Motors, Chrysler, and General Electric doing welding, heavy lifting, paint spraying, and other difficult or unpleasant work.

Labor leaders like Mr. DiCicco have good reason for alarm, for the company calculates a $50,000 robot costs General Motors about $6 an hour to operate against the $19 - an - hour cost for a member of the United Automobile Workers. Generally, therefore, the more robots U.S. industry installs, the lower its production costs and the more competitive it can be on world markets. The United States is already woefully behind in the robotics revolution. This country has 4,000 robots at work as against 16,000 in Japan, for example.

Despite their still - early developmental stage, robots are already toddling from factories toward home and office. Unimation has plans for "Isaac," a 4 - foot robot that will respond to voice command, cone out of the closet, take orders from guests, go to the kitchen, prepare the orders, and then serve them. Isaa will also be programmed to prepare coffee, put a Danish roll in a microwave oven and, finally, wash the dishes. Such a home androie with an on - board computer may be on the market within 10 years. This, we are advised, will be the equivalent of R2D2, the mechanical midget in the movie "Star Wars."

Meanwhile tinkerers in basements and home workshops around the country are building robots that observers in the field say will lead to real application advances. Portia Isaacson, a Dallas consultant who predicted the boom in personal computers and the development of pocket computers, asserts that the home - robot industry now is where the home computers industry was in 1975.

Robot enthusiasts go much further. They compare today's robot developments with the early days of the computer industry and see a parallel with the start of the long boom in electronics that followed the 1958 recession.

A growing cloud of EPA cuts

By ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The Environmental Protection Agency has devised an imaginative two - step strategy for evading its legal responsibility to minimize the dangers posed by air pollution.

First, the agency bows to the demands of the Chemical Manufacturers Association that no federal controls be imposed on "fugitive emissions" — leaks, direct process releases and other forms of industrial pollution that come from sources other than smokestacks.

The chemical industry argues successfully that EPA should, in effect, ignore "fugitive emissions" because it lacks both comprehensive information about the problem and the capability to measure and control those pollutants.

Then, to insure that it won't acquire that capability anytime soon, EPA proposes a drastic reduction of mt e than 50 percent in its already modest budget for research, development and evaluation of the requisite technology.

"The effect of this decision," says Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D - Vt., "is to permit new coke ovens to emit unlimited tons of noxious chemicals each year because all emissions from coke ovens are 'fugitive' emissions."

That program is only one of 70 public health and environmental projects identified by Leahy as targets for delay, reduction or abolition in EPA's proposed budget for the 1983 fiscal year, which begins in October.

Nobody denies that under President Reagan's leadership EPA's funding levels, personnel requirements and resource availability have sustained across - the - board cuts of 20 percent to 40 percent. The agency's total budget plummeted from $4.67 billion in 1980 to $3.03 billion in 1981, a reduction of more than 35 percent.

EPA Administrator Anne M. Gorsuch has insisted, however, that the quality of the agency's work will not suffer because of increased efficiency, delegation of the programs to the states and completion of research programs.

But internal budget documents submitted by EPA to the Office of Management and Budget, obtained by Leahy through unofficial channels, show that Mrs. Gorsuch has sought to deceive Congress and the public.

Those documents are replete with references to important environmental protection initiatives that "will be curtailed sharply," will suffer because of "a reduction in effort" and will be "more limited... than in the past."

Warns Leahy: "The Reagan administration is seeking to repeal the environmental laws passed overwhelmingly by a bipartisan Congress, by refusing to fund regulatory activities at realistic levels."

EPA's research and development program to deal with pervasive air pollution caused by nitrogen oxide, carbon monoxide and other photochemical oxidants has been allocated almost $18.5 million this year. But EPA sought only $12.3 million for the program next year, and the White House slashed that request to less than $11.5 million.

The public explanation for those proposed cuts cites "an effort to more efficiently schedule the work needed." Privately, however, EPA told the White House it planned "a reduction in effort across all the program elements" with only one exception.

EPA is seeking $11 million to finance water - quality research next year, a level of funding 42 percent below what the agency expects to spend on that activity this year and 56 percent lower than last year's expenditures.

The official explanation cites "the completion of major efforts" in dealing with 65 major pollutants. But the internal documents acknowledge that the cut is to be achieved "by a reduction in the level of effort."

The president's oft - stated goal of eliminating waste and ineffeciency within the federal government is almost universally shared by the electorate, but even critics of "big gover ment" have long cited EPA as a model of efficiency.

In the case of EPA, there never was much fat to cut — but that hasn't deterred the Reagan administration from slicing into muscle last year and bone this year.

Labor and the left

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

One of the carefully nourished myths of recent years is that the labor movement is free of apligists for the Soviet Union. Well, the myth is just that.

Consider the case of Jack D. Spiegel, an organizer for the Chicago District, Amalgamated Clothing & Textile Workers Union, AFL - CIO.

In a letter to the leftwing Nation magazine last month, Mr. Spiegel complained that the journal had permitted "anti - communist confessionals" in a recent issue. He angrily denounced those "writers who have swallowed the highly - financed, well - organized anti - Soviet propoganda of the ultraright and militarists."

Mr. Spiegel didn't hesitate to express his admiration for the Soviet Union, saying "Itr lays claim to a broader democracy than ours in terms of providing for social needs." In a masterpiece of understatement, he admitted, however, that the Soviet system has "civil liberties limitations for those in opposition." Yes, indeed, it has "civil liberties limitations" in the Siberian deasth camps pf the Gulag Archipelago.

As a subscriber to The Nation, Mr. Spiegel hopes that the magazine won't deviate from its traditional leftist line. He says it can "safely leave anti - communism and Soviet - baiting in the paws of yahoo scribblers for ultraright magazines."

The public has a right to wonder why the Amalgamated Clothing & Textile Workers Union hires as an "organizer" an individual with pro - Soviet views. Is Mr. Siegel's attitude the attitude of the union leadership? And what is the position of the AFL - CIO leadership with respect to such views?

The late George Meany, head of the AFL - CIO, was staunchly anti - communist. With Meany gone, however, the union federation may be moving in another direction.

The Richmond Times - Dispatch has taken note of a new direction. In an editorial, it noted that in 1979 "a devotee of the extreme left, Jane McMichael, was named director of legislation for the American Federation of Government Employees." The paper pointed out that "Ms. McMichael has been closely associated with the Institute for Policy Studies, an influential, far - left think tank. The very week of George Meany's funeral, she traveled with International Association of Machinists president William Winpisinger to Cuba for a discussion of undisclosed content with Raoul Castro, right hand man to his brother, Fidel, one of the world's leading sponsors of terrorism."

One of the most disturbing aspects of the contemporary governmental scene is that there isn't any mechanism for monitoring those individuals and groups that evidence sympathy for or involvement with our country's enemies. In the past, congressional committees conducted important hearings on internal sec ity matters. As Congress legislates in the labor area, it has a right to determine whether labor organizations are being used by those who are friendly to totalitarian regimes. Revival of the House Internal Security subcommittee and activation of a dormant security subcommittee of the Judicicary Committee is long overdue.

You feel depressed?

By PAUL HARVEY

If you are feeling depressed, you may be somebody special.

Sir Winston Chruchill suffered depression. He called his dark moods his "black dog," said sometimes "desperate thoughts" came into his head.

Astronaut Buzz Aldrin, the second man on the moon, suffered severe episodes of depression.

Nor is it a malady peculiar to our century. Depressive illness contributed to the classic literature of Dostoevski and Poe, Hawthorne and Darwin, Hemingway and Plath.

But for Hemingway and Plath, the depression led to suicide.

If you are feeling depressed, so are 4 to 8 million other Americans. One - and - a - half million Americans are presently being treated for depression, perhaps five times that many should be.

But while our nation donates and spends generously on research and treatment for other ailments, we are strangely stingy when it comes to mental health even though the tenth leading cause of death in the United States is suicide.

We are spending $200 per person per year seeking a cure for cancer, $100 per person per year on heart research — but only $6 on mental health.

And where there is some national organization fund - raising in behalf of cancer, heart disease, muscular dystrophy and an assortment of comparatively rare ailments, no national organization is fund - raising for mental health.

Yet, despite the scandalous frugality of our investment, much has been accomplished. Individuals heretofore institutionalized for years or for life are responding to drug therapy — frequently within days.

Tricyclic antidepressants now most effective in treating depression are Elavil, Trofranil and Nopramin

Eighty percent of depressive patients respond to these drugs.

But since the phenomenal 30 - year success with drugs our mental hospitals, virtually emptied, have been closing.

This frequently leaves the chronically disabled, with no sanctuary, back out on the street, to become criminals or victims of crime.

For anybody chronically mentally ill, the street is no less cruel than the snakepit.

At least one foundation with which I am acquainted has initiated a coordinated study of mental illness. The objective is to combine the efforts of many researchers, compare patient populations, hopefully to accelerate our understanding of the "unhelpable."

If their number could be reduced from 5 to 15 percent — down to 1 percent — it would redeem millions of people.

And, from a purely pragmatic point of view, it would materially reduce the $30 billion a year we now pay for health care and lost productivity and the incalculable cost of crime traceable to this cause.

Medicine made negligible progress against leprosy, TB and cancer until those diseases came "out of the closet."

Hopefully, mental illness is next.

Today in history

Today is Wednesday, May 19, the 139th day of 1982. There are 226 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 19, 1536, the second queen of England's Henry the VIII, Anne Boleyn, was beheaded.

On this date:

In 1585, Spain effectively declared war on England by confiscating its ships in Spanish ports.

In 1930, white women were given the right to vote in South Africa.

In 1935, British soldier and writer T.E. Lawrence — known as Lawrence of Arabia — died in a motorcycle accident at the age of 46.

And in 1945, more than 400 U.S. bombers attacked Tokyo in World War II.

Ten years ago: A bomb exploded in a washroom at the Pentagon, flooding several offices at the military complex. An anti-war group claimed responsibility.

Five years ago: Big game hunting was banned in Kenya to protect the dwindling wildlife that attracts tourists to that African nation.

One year ago: Five British soldiers were killed in an ambush by Irish Republican Army terrorists in Newry, Northern Ireland.

Voters in Pennsylvania, Oregon voted on primary candidates, issues

By The Associated Press

Pennsylvania voters living near Three Mile Island voted by a 2-1 margin against restarting the nuclear plant's undamaged reactor in a referendum that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission says will affect its decisions.

"This sends a clear message to the governor and elected officials. It's so decisive, it's better than our wildest dreams," said Kay Pickering of TMI Alert, an anti-nuclear group.

The vote Tuesday was conducted in three counties around the crippled Three Mile Island plant, scene of the nation's worst commercial nuclear power accident three years ago.

In other elections Tuesday, Oregon Gov. Vic Atiyeh easily won renomination for a second term over three Republican challengers, while followers of an Indian guru voted to incorporate a new 2,000-acre city in central Oregon.

In Pennsylvania, Gov. Dick Thornburgh and U.S. Sen. John Heinz, both Republicans, were unopposed for renomination.

The nuclear power vote concerned one unit of the Three Mile Island plant near Harrisburg, Pa., which has been shut down for three years. In a non-binding referendum in Dauphin, Cumberland and Lebanon counties, voters were asked: "Do you favor restarting TMI Unit 1, which was not involved in the accident on March 28, 1979?"

With 268 of 273 precincts reporting, returns showed 39,910, or 67 percent, voting against restart and 19,644 in favor.

Nuclear Regulatory Commission Chairman Nunzio Palladino has said the vote would affect decisions by the NRC, which will ultimately decide on any restart.

"I think we can call it a mandate to elected officials," said Susan Reider, of The Bipartisan Committee to Vote No. "We're heartened by it."

Robert C. Arnold, president of GPU Nuclear Corp., which operates the plant, said he was "reluctant to draw firm conclusions from the referendum vote" because of "the light turnout and the difficulty in addressing the complexity of this issue with a simple yes or no answer."

The three counties have 222,091 voters.

Both Units 1 and 2 have been shut down since the accident and efforts are under way to clean up radioactive contamination in Unit 2. The Unit 1 restart has been delayed by corroded steam generator tubes and a U.S. Court of Appeals order last week that the psychological impact of the accident on nearby residents must be considered in a decision on restarting the undamaged reactor.

In the Pennsylvania primary, U.S. Rep. Allen Ertel won the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, defeating three other candidates for the right to take on Thornburgh, who is seeking a second four-year term.

With 98 percent of the vote counted, Ertel had 419,021 votes, or 57 percent, to 143,893, or 19 percent, for his closest challenger in the four-man field, political consultant Stephen Douglas.

In the Pennsylvania Senate race, party-endorsed Cyril Wecht won the Democratic nomination and will face Heinz, an heir to the ketchup and food processing fortune, in November. With 86 percent of the vote tallied, Wecht had 315,494 votes, or 57 percent, compared with 128,582, or 23 percent, for his nearest rival, college professor John Logue.

Reapportionment has deleted two of the state's 25 congressional seats, and Democratic incumbents were pitted against each other in two new districts. In the 1st District, one of three in Philadelphia, Rep. Thomas Foglietta defeated fellow freshman Rep. Joseph Smith, 32,337 to 30,440, with 98 percent of the vote counted.

Foglietta had 52 percent of the vote to Smith's 48 percent.

In western Pennsylvania, Rep. John Murtha defeated Rep. Don Bailey, 26,550 to 21,850 with 91 percent of the vote counted. Murtha had 54 percent of the vote.

Pampa baseball coach resigns

Pampa High head baseball coach Gary Haynes announced his resignation during Tuesday night's school board meeting.

Haynes, who been head coach of the Harvesters the past two years, will go to work for Getty Oil Company, according to Athletic Director Bill Balcom. Bill Butler, Haynes' assistant this year, was promoted to the head position, Balcom said.

Also resigning was assistant football and track coach Gary Lehnen, who will be going to work for a Lubbock oil company.

Two recent college graduates have been hired as assistant coaches next year, Balcom said. Bryan Morris, a Southwestern Oklahoma State graduate, will assist with football and tennis while Jamie Walling, a West Texas State graduate, will help with basketball and baseball.

Haynes is the fourth Pampa High head coach to depart the coaching field this year. Volleyball coach Lynn Wolfe and swimming coach Jackie Stephens recently submitted their resignations. Football coach Larry Gilbert did not have his coaching contract renewed for next year.

Spurs' Gervin wants new contract

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — George Gervin, the NBA's leading scorer, wants a $1 million raise for each of the four seasons remaining on his current six-year contract, a San Antonio newspaper reported.

Gervin, the second most prolific scorer in the history of the National Basketball Association, signed his current $3.6 million contract in 1980. But the San Antonio Express reported Tuesday he is trying to renegotiate for an additional $4 million.

It would be the fourth renegotiation in Gervin's nine years with San Antonio. Spurs president Angelo Drossos had termed the current pact "a lifetime contract."

Drossos already had his hands full with pending negotiations to keep coach Stan Albeck and five free agent players when Gervin's reported dissatisfaction surfaced Tuesday.

"He wants them to either tell him they are going to give him the extension or trade him," the Express quoted a source close to Gervin as saying. "He wants to stay badly, but he doesn't want things to get ugly."

However, Drossos said neither Gervin nor his representatives had approached him about any renegotiation.

"I would be surprised if I am asked (to renegotiate)," Drossos said Tuesday. "When we reached the agreement two years ago, I think all parties concerned felt at the time, this is it, we're happy that we'll never have to do this again during George's career.

"As far as I know, that's the way it still is," Drossos said.

Gervin, 30, was not available for comment.

The two-year contracts for Albeck and his assistant, Morris McHone, expired after the Los Angeles Lakers eliminated the Spurs from the playoffs in four straight games.

Albeck has been mentioned as the possible new coach for Chicago or other NBA teams, but he has said he did not want to discuss it until after the season ended.

"I'm sure in the next few days Stan and I will be discussing his future," Drossos said. "I've said San Antonio has been happy with Stan. We would like him to continue as the coach. I have a lot of respect for him and the job he did. If Stan goes elsewhere, it will not be because I didn't want him."

Free agent players who also must be dealt with include guard Johnny Moore, who led the NBA in assists last season.

Guerrero's homer lifts Cubs past Dodgers, 2-1

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

One thing about Pedro Guerrero: He doesn't think small.

"I wasn't thinking single or double," the Los Angeles Dodger outfielder said about his trip to the plate Tuesday night leading off the bottom of the ninth inning against the Chicago Cubs. "I was thinking home run."

Guerrero translated his thoughts into action, belting a 3-1 pitch from Bill Campbell into the center field seats at Dodger Stadium.

The result was a dramatic 2-1 victory for the Dodgers over Chicago that saved some embarrassment for reliever Tom Niedenfuer, who had given up the Cubs' tying run in the top of the ninth.

"I knew I would hit one," said the confident right fielder who has delivered the long ball on eight other occasions this season for the defending world champions. "You've got to feel good after winning a game like that. (Manager Tom) Lasorda told me to get on base. But as I walked to the plate, I wasn't just thinking about getting on base."

Guerrero's blast off Campbell, 0-2, made a winner of Neidenfuer, 1-1. The Cubs had tied game in the top of the ninth when Keith Moreland and Leon Durham hit one-out singles to chase Dodger starter Bob Welch and pinch-runner Gary Woods scored on Larry Bowa's single off Neidenfuer.

In other National League action, it was St. Louis 2, San Diego 0; New York 7, Cincinnati 4; Atlanta 6, Montreal 4; Houston 2, Philadelphia 1 in 12 innings and San Francisco 2, Pittsburgh 1. Cardinals 2, Padres 0

Bob Forsch pitched a five-hitter and singled home a run and Gene Tenace blasted a homer as St. Louis blanked San Diego.

Forsch, 5-0, drove in the Cardinals' second run with a two-out single in the seventh after Tenace had walloped his homer leading off the inning. The right-hander walked one and struck out two.

John Curtis, 2-2, pitched eight innings for San Diego, allowing seven hits, and was locked in a scoreless duel with Forsch until Tenace slammed a 3-2 pitch for his third homer of the season.

Forsch had not won since beating Houston 5-4 on April 29, failing to get a decision in his last three starts. His last shutout came in 1979. Mets 2, Reds 4

Gary Rajsich hit a three-run homer, the first of his major league career in a four-run fifth inning, as New York defeated Cincinnati.

Randy Jones, 5-2, was the winner with relief help in the eighth from Neil Allen, who gained his 10th save. Cincinnati starter Bruce Berenyi, 4-2, lasted five innings and gave up all the Mets' runs.

Jones walked to start the New York fifth, Mookie Wilson singled and Wally Backman beat out a bunt to load the bases. Rusty Staub's sacrifice fly scored Jones to give the Mets a 4-1 lead and Rajsich then hit Berenyi's first pitch over the right field wall at Shea Stadium. Braves 6, Expos 4

Bob Horner and Chris Chambliss hit successive home runs in the fifth inning to send Atlanta over Montreal. The Braves trailed 2-1 before Horner opened the sixth with a game-tying homer off Expos starter Bill Gullickson, 2-3. Chambliss followed with another homer.

The Braves then sewed it up with three runs in the seventh. Dale Murphy brought home one run with a single. A throwing error by left fielder Terry Francona allowed another to score, and Murphy eventually scored the third run of the inning on Chambliss' sacrifice fly.

Phil Niekro, 2-0, struck out four and walked four before needing Gene Garber's relief help in the eighth. Astros 2, Phillies 1

Alan Ashby's two-out single in the 12th inning scored pinch-runner Scott Loucks from third base to lead Houston over Philadelphia.

Ray Knight, who earlier extended his batting streak to 15 games, opened the 12th with a double off reliever Ed Farmer, 1-2. After Jose Cruz flied out, Loucks, running for Knight, advanced to third on an infield out by Joe Pittman.

The Phillies elected to walk hot-hitting Phil Garner, who had hit in 14 of his last 16 games, to face Ashby. Ashby, who snapped an 0-for-17 slump with two hits Monday night, then spoiled the strategy by lining a single to center. Giants 2, Pirates 1

Rookie Bill Laskey pitched a four-hitter and batterymate Bob Brenly belted three hits and scored twice

Hoyt sets club record as Sox rout Rangers

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Lamarr Hoyt's winning streak is at 13 and counting, while Larry Herndon's home run barrage ended at four in a row, but both players have their names in the record books.

Hoyt, the Chicago White Sox' right-hander, is unbeaten in eight decisions this season and set a club record with his 13th consecutive triumph in a 10-2 rout of the Texas Rangers Tuesday night.

Meanwhile, Herndon, Detroit's left fielder, homered his first three times at bat and drove in seven runs as the Tigers outslugged the Oakland A's 11-9. Since he also homered his final time up Sunday against Minnesota, Herndon tied a major league record of four home runs in as many trips to the plate.

It was the 16th time in major league history a player hit four consecutive home runs over a two-game stretch. Pittsburgh's Ralph Kiner did it twice and the last American Leaguer to accomplish the feat was Baltimore's Don Baylor in 1975.

AL streaks were not limited to Hoyt and Herndon. Elsewhere, the California Angels won their fifth game in a row, defeating the Milwaukee Brewers 4-1; Minnesota rookie Tom Brunansky homered for the third straight game as the Twins outlasted the Baltimore Orioles 8-7, New York's Ron Guidry won his fourth consecutive game as the Yankees downed the Kansas City Royals, the Seattle Mariners blanked the Boston Red Sox 2-0 and the Cleveland Indians edged the Toronto Blue Jays 6-5.

Herndon hit his three home runs against Mike Norris — a three-run blast in the first inning and two-run shots in the third and fifth — but the streak ended in the seventh when he grounded out against Dave Beard.

Lance Parrish also homered for the Tigers, while Rickey Henderson, Danny Goodwin, Dave McKay and pinch-hitter Jeff Burroughs connected for Oakland. Burroughs' grand slam capped a six-run seventh that tied the score 9-9, but the Tigers went ahead in their half of the seventh on Richie Hebner's single, an infield out and Parrish's two-out single. Singles by Lou Whitaker and Alan Trammell scored Parrish. White Sox 10, Rangers 2

Chicago backed Hoyt's five-hit pitching with a 14-hit attack. Greg Luzinski drove in four runs with a double and two singles, while Carlton Fisk had two singles and three RBIs. Hoyt's 13-game winning streak is four short of the AL mark of 17 consecutive triumphs shared by Johnny Allen of Cleveland in 1936-37 and Dave McNally of Baltimore in 1968-69.

Hoyt, who was in the bullpen earlier in the season, has won all five of his starts and the White Sox have given him a total of 52 runs in those games. Angels 4, Brewers 1

Steve Renko pitched a three-hitter and retired the last 20 batters for his first complete game since 1980 and Bobby Grich hit a two-run homer. Renko completed only one of 23 starts in 1980 and started 15 games without going the route last season. It was his third start of 1982.

Nose leads face in broken bones

The nose seems to be asking for it. It sticks out there unprotected, leading the way wherever the body is headed.

That's probably why the nose gets broken more often than any other facial bone.

When that happens, it usually bleeds. The broken nose also may cause swelling, discoloration and tenderness about the eyes. It may grossly be deformed.

Treatment often is simple but can be complex, according to the Texas Medical Association. Nasal fractures that are not displaced require no treatment. With others, if the nose is not too swollen, a careful push of a physician's thumbs can correct the alignment with minimum discomfort. In this case, a nasal splint usually is not needed.

The best treatment for most broken noses, however, involves sedation and local anesthesia. With these, as much force as necessary can be put on the nose to set the fracture with little pain.

Almost all nasal fractures can be corrected with a special instrument. If the instrument is used, an external splint is necessary to control swelling and protect the nose.

After nasal fractures have healed, the nose still may appear deformed or cause breathing difficulties. Correcting these problems requires further surgery from three to six months after the injury.

In children, a broken nose can lead to serious impairment in growth and development. These fractures may be difficult to evaluate because of the bleeding, swelling and tenderness associated with the injury. Lack of treatment can contribute to outer and inner nasal deformity in adult life.

The numerous kinds of nasal fractures can be grouped into three categories; depressed, characterized by collapsed nasal bones; angulated, in which the nose angles to one side; and commimuated, in which are broken in more than one place.

Summer Safety Tips

Protect pet against summer hazards

BY M. W. HORNE D.V.M.
Fire and Safety Committee
Pampa Chamber of Commerce

Summertime is the season pet owners spend time enjoying their pets. It is also the time to take noted precautions.

One of the most noteworthy precautions is to avoid heat prostration. When your animal is locked in a car on a hot summer day, the inside temprature can soar in a matter of a few minutes. Always remember to leave a couple of windows down three to four inches and make those trips to the store short.

Another cause of heat prostration is failure to provide adequate water and shade for backyard pets. The water pan should be in a shady area and secured to avoid tipping over easily. You might install a drip attachment on your water faucet eliminating the pan altogether.

If you suspect your pet is showing signs of heat prostration, immediately dip the animal in water or wet him with cool water and contact your veterinarian. Sever brain damage can occure quickly.

One more common summertime occurance in the Panhandle area is rattlesnake bite. Since these bites frequently occure on the nose or shoulders, a tourniquet is not practicable. The application of an ice pack or cool damp cloth applied to the area bitten will help slow the spread of poison and swelling until medical help is obtained. Snake bites often become infected, and antibiotic therapy is usuallly indicated.

When camping or walking in the country, you should always be wary of wild animals, particularly skunks that do not try to avoid humans. Warm weather is a time when rabies become prevelant. Pet owners should always keep their animals current on innoculations. These innoculations protect not only the pet, but the owner as well.

Have a good summer, enjoy your pets, and keep these tips in mind.

SUMMER SAFETY TIPS
Protecting the Family Pet
1. PROTECT YOUR PET AGAINST HEAT PROSTRATION.
2. BEWARE OF RATTLESNAKE BITE.
3. BE WARY OF WILD ANIMALS.
4. KEEP ANIMALS CURRENT ON INNOCULATIONS.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS
Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebras in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

(1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacited. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals...call for in Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

EASY DOES IT — An old-fashioned rolling pin is used only for showing off the tops of these no-roll strawberry shortcakes.

Modern Strawberry Shortcake tastes old-fashioned

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

How do you like your strawberry shortacke? Many cooks still follow the original way of making that old-time dessert — they bake biscuit dough in a large, round pan. The moment the shortcake comes out of the oven, it is split, buttered, sandwiched together with strawberries and served piping hot with "pour" cream.

Other cooks — and I am one of them — prefer to make strawberry shortcake in individual form and serve it with whipped cream. It is a recipe of this sort I offer here. But no rolling of the biscuit dough is needed — it's patted out.

One hint: It is a good idea to have a helper (a sister, cousin, aunt or friend) at hand when the biscuits come out of the oven. To serve them warm, you have to fill and top them with berries and cream in short order. For this, four hands are better than two.

These biscuits are short and rich, so we advise splitting them carefully. But even if a few edges crumble, the strawberry shortcake will still taste wonderful.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKES

- 2 cups fork-stirred all-purpose flour
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- Sugar
- ½ cup (¼-pound stick) butter
- 2 large egg yolks
- ½ cup milk
- rge egg white, slightly beaten
- 2 pints strawberries (hulled, sliced and sweetened to taste)
- 1 cup heavy cream, whipped and sweetened to taste

In a large bowl stir together the flour, baking powder, salt and ¼ cup sugar. With a pastry blender cut in the butter until it is in fine particles.

In a 1-cup liquid measure, with a fork, beat the egg yolks slightly; gradually beat in the milk to blend; with the fork, stir into the flour mixture to make a soft dough. Divide the dough into 6 equal parts; form each into a ball. On a lightly greased cookie sheet pat out each ball, well apart, to a 3-inch round, moistening your fingers with the egg white to prevent sticking. Brush the tops with egg white; sprinkle with extra sugar.

Bake in a preheated 450-degree oven until golden — 10 to 12 minutes. (Tops may have some cracks.) With a wide metal spatula, loosen the biscuits and place each on a dessert plate. With a knife, split a biscuit horizontally, making sure that the top layer is thicker than the bottom one, to prevent the top from breaking. With a wide metal spatula or pancake turner lift off the top, leaving it on the spatula. Spread the bottom layer with strawberries and cream; replace the top layer; garnish with cream and strawberries. Fill and top the remaining biscuits, one at a time, the same way.

Makes 6 large servings.

Dear Abby

Who really counts in professional poll

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: In my opinion the Gallup Poll's list of the top 24 professions in order of their reputation for honesty, integrity and ethical standards reveals a high degree of non-professionalism.

Policemen, congressmen and salesmen would no doubt have ranked differently had the terms "police officers, members of Congress and sales representatives" been used, thus recognizing the important contributions women have made to these professions.

And why were nurses, secretaries, schoolteachers and other predominantly female professions omitted?

You can put "pollsters" down at the bottom of my list for integrity and ethical standards.

APPALLED IN PA.

DEAR APPALLED: Move over. A lot of readers were also appalled. But here's a letter from at least one who had a kind word for the piece:

DEAR ABBY: Seeing pharmacists ranked No. 2 on the Gallup Poll list of professionals in order of their reputation for honesty, integrity and ethical standards offered a small consolation to my husband who is a pharmacist.

He's sometimes treated like a pest when he phones doctors' offices to verify prescriptions as he is required to do by state and federal law.

He's insulted by rude, impatient customers who resent being kept waiting until "all that red tape" is completed before he gives them their prescriptions.

He's even faced a crazed drug addict whose trigger finger was nervous on the gun because my husband wasn't moving fast enough to fill his bag with drugs.

Small wonder none of our children want to follow in Dad's footsteps and become pharmacists.

SMALL-TOWN PHARMACIST'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: You think your husband has problems? Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Recently when the Gallup Poll listed the 24 most "respected" professions, the most important profession of them all didn't even make the list. I refer to agriculture! Since the beginning of civilization, farmers have performed the most indispensable service to mankind — feeding the people.

Farmers today have to be knowledgeable not only in agriculture, but also in veterinary medicine, politics, mechanics and economics — to name a few. They are also at the mercy of unpredictable weather, government policies and world politics.

Perhaps that's why, in a recent government survey, farmers are listed as having one of the highest stress levels of all workers.

NO RESPECT IN COLORADO

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Nuts to your suggestion that the cost of the wedding should be split 50-50 between the bride's family and the groom's.

I think the family that wants a big splashy wedding should foot the bill. If they both want it, they can split it, but if only one wants it, the one who wants it should pay for it.

PAID FOR THREE AND WANTED NONE

DEAR PAID: Your suggestion makes a lot of sense to me.

Erma Bombeck's

At Wit's End

After 12 years I've finally done it.

My living room carpet is one large continuous wall - to - wall stain.

I have only experienced this euphoria on one or two occasions. Once when I succeeded in picking nail polish off the last nail minutes before I got married. Another time was in 1974, when I called everyone to come to dinner and they did - at the same time.

They tell me the odds of having a room of this size go total stain is about one in every 15 billion homes.

I knew it would happen. To begin with, the carpet is white. There are things that go with a white carpet that the salesman never tells you about.

1. With a white carpet, you must remain childless for the rest of your life. This includes children who visit or peek in the windows.

2. You must never use the room. If you go beyond the ropes, you must be prepared to take the risk and pay the price.

3. Putting furniture in it is just asking for it. White carpet, cannot be expected to remain white in a room full of furniture legs.

4. If a dog comes within 500 feet of the white carpet, urine stains will materialize out of thin air and stay forever.

There are other characteristics of a white carpet. It has a pebble - in - the - water characteristic. A small piece of cheese from a canape will hit the carpet and within minutes spread to a diameter of three feet. A chewing - gum wrapper thrown carelessly on it will produce a brown spot that no amount of scrubbing can remove.

In retrospect, getting stains in the traffic areas of the room was a piece of cake. (Excuse the expression.) All someone had to do was walk through and the rug would part to receive a tomato caught in the sole, a newspaper with ink that rubbed off, chunks of mud that fell from the cuff of a jean and dirt from fingernails.

It's getting them under furniture without moving it that really takes skill.

But then I once had a footprint on the ceiling of the shower. Sometimes, I don't know how I do it!

How to save at supermarkets with coupons

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

AZUSA, Calif. (AP) — Earline Paulson taught her coupon-clipping pupils well, but none outshone the teacher in the final exam at a local supermarket. She took home $188.19 worth of groceries for $4.73 — a savings of nearly 98 percent.

Although the 18 women in her class had only eight three-hour sessions under their belt, they did pretty well too. Their savings ran between 30 and 69 percent.

Mrs. Paulson, who has been saving coupons for more than four years, said everything she bought during the class outing Tuesday night was "part of my normal family eating patterns." But she admits it took her about two months to collect the dozens of coupons that slashed her grocery bill so dramatically for items ranging from hamburger and fruit juice to paper towels and tortillas.

"People think I do this all the time, and I don't," she said. "But on a weekly basis I would buy $85 to $90 worth of food and pay $40 dollars — and that's just right off the top. By sending away I can get $15 or $20 more in refunds, so I'm actually paying only $20 to $25."

The 33 - year - old home economist has taught a Citrus Community College adult education course on saving money while shopping for about a year. Her strategies include keeping an eye out for direct mail offers and reading the packages on store shelves as well as clipping out coupons in newspapers and magazines.

The food retailing business is so competitive that there are offers for almost every kind of product at any given moment, she said. But besides being on the lookout for special offers, the dedicated bargain hunter has to be willing to switch brands.

"Maybe one month Lever Brothers will be offering a dollar off and the next month Procter & Gamble will offer $3 off, so one month you buy Procter & Gamble and on month from Lever Brothers," she said.

Mrs. Paulson also suggests working with friends. "Maybe I don't need cat food coupons and you do," she said.

With coupons in hand, shoppers often can save further by using them when an item goes on sale or taking advantage of chain store promotions that double the value of coupons.

Mrs. Paulson doesn't think it's necessary to visit three or four markets every week. She shops only twice a week, at one store each time, but she will switch neighborhood supermarkets on a given week to take advantage of promotions.

Among her favorite money savers are combination offers designed to encourage use of a group of products made by the same company.

"Food is one of the flexible items in our budget," she said. "It's one of the few things over which you have control."

And how did the supermarket feel about a fistful of coupons?

"The manager and assistant manager check me out personally," she says, "and they both wanted their wives to take the class."

From time to time this coming year you may be privy to some confidential information that could be profitable to you. Even if the returns might not be large, they'll still be worth considering.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Duties and responsibilities must be efficiently scheduled today, or you could end up working very hard with little to show for your efforts. Predictions of what's in store for you in each season following your birth date and where your luck and opportunities lie are in your Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You'll be in a sociable mood today, but you must be selective of the group you'll be involved with. A clique containing a sourpuss might spoil your day.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Situations where you use both your logic and charm will be carried off successfully today. In areas where emotions govern your actions, setbacks are likely.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll treat friends in accord with your views and opinions amicably today. However, you might come down too hard on those who disagree with you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A joint venture you're involved in might not be the blessing you first thought, because its disadvantages could outweigh its benefits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you have problems with others on a one-to-one basis today, the fault may not be entirely theirs. Ask yourself honestly if you're being too hard to please.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Important responsibilities should be attended to first today, while you are fresh and energetic. Tackling difficult situations when you're tired could lead to making serious mistakes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even though you will know what best serves your self-interests, there is a possibility you might yield to peer pressure today and do things against your better judgment.

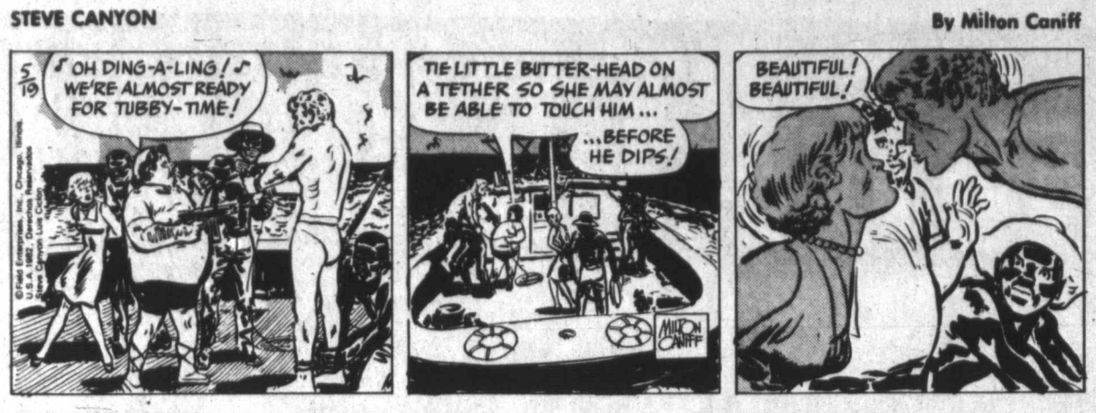

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Although you will be capable of holding your own in any given situation today, there is a chance you may assess things negatively and view yourself as the underdog.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be on guard today if you are participating in a friendly competitive game. The one you may go against might be someone who can't handle losing.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your financial prospects look encouraging at this time, provided you don't do any deficit spending. Think twice before taking on new long-term obligations.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Unless you select companions today who are as enthusiastic about the same things that interest you, they'll put a damper on your progress.

The hottest guessing game in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — At a recent Washington cocktail party, each of the 70 guests was handed a red jellybean and asked to deposit it in one of two glass jars. One jar was labeled "He Runs," the other, "He Runs Not."

No one needed further explanation. For one of the hottest guessing games in town is whether or not Ronald Reagan will seek another term as president.

Election Day is 2½ years away, and chances are, even the president doesn't know for sure.

The political and economic conditions that will prevail in 1984 are impossible to predict. But Washington without speculation would be like Reno without blackjack, so the guessing is fast and furious.

The party guests included VIPs from the White House and Capitol Hill, Republicans and Democrats, political analysts and reporters. When their jelly bean ballots were cast, the vote was 3-to-1 that Reagan will not seek another term.

"It was apparent from early on in the evening which jar was filling up faster," said party host Marty Plissner, who is political editor at CBS news in Washington.

The "He Runs" camp generally argues that it is unlikely that the president will accomplish his goals of reshaping government in four years, that Reagan is a healthy man who will stay until the job is done. These people are usually happy to be quoted by name.

"I definitely think he'll run, though a lot can change in two years," said Nancy Reynolds, a close friend of the Reagans and a vice president of The Bendix Corp. "The Reagans are settling in, and if the president feels he has a job to finish, he will (run.)"

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., another close friend of the Reagans, put it this way: "I hope the president sees fit, Lord willing and all that, to run for a second term. It's apparent from the magnitude of the problems we have here that it will take at least that long."

Richard S. Williamson, White House strategist for the "new federalism" program, predicted that Reagan will not make his decision for another 15 months.

"If his economic recovery plan is in place and he has reasserted world leadership and been successful with the new federalism, if all is done in fulfilling his dreams, he won't run again," Williamson said. "He is more likely to run if he feels the job is undone."

Of course there is sound reason for Reagan supporters to cast the "He Runs" ballot. In Williamson's words, "To make him a lame duck wouldn't help."

The president will be 73 years old in 1984 and, as one White House insider said, off-the record, "that plays a factor." They point also to the tightened security measures since the assassination attempt 14 months ago and say Reagan sometimes feels cut off from his friends.

Foundation has vast collection

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — If you're proud of your handsome record collection which occupies part of your den wall, your envy would spin at 45 rpm at the sight of Bob Pinson's collection.

Pinson, acquisitions director for the Country Music Foundation, oversees a collection of 85,000 country music records worth an estimated $500,000. Officials believe the records — 33s, 45s and 78s — represent half the country music ever recorded.

The foundation, which operates the Country Music Hall of Fame and Museum, began collecting the records in 1967. They are stored in a temperature-controlled (68 to 72F), basement-level floor below the hall of fame.

The records, dating back to 1922, are cleaned, cloged, placed in standard record jackets and stored vertically. Smoking is prohibited in the stack areas and there's a sprinkler system for further protection.

The foundation gets the records from record companies, donations, exchanges with the Library of Congress and from purchases at flea markets and garage sales.

"We have enough room for another three years in the stack areas," said Danny Hatcher, deputy director of the foundation.

A few of the records are worth hundreds of dollars on the collectors' market. "Blue Yodel No. 12" by Jimmie Rodgers, a 78 rpm recorded in 1933, is worth up to $1,000. "Movie MZAGG" BY Carl perkins, a 45 rpm recorded in 1955, is worth a couple of hundred dollars.

There are some old records the foundation doesn't have, and Pinson would like to talk to you if you have any Depression-era records by these string bands: Dilly and His Dill Pickles, Reave's White County Ramblers, Hugh Gillis' String Band, Smith's Garage Fiddle Band, the Carter Brothers and Son, and Wilmer Watts.

Farmer cooperatives declined during '70s

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 2,000 farmer-owned cooperatives disappeared during the decade of the '70s, half of them going completely out of business for various reasons, says the Agriculture Department.

The department's Agricultural Cooperative Service said Monday that its master list showed there were 7,790 farm co-ops in 1969-70. By 1979, the list was down to 6,445 co-ops.

Although the net loss was 1,345 cooperatives during the decade, the difference was accounted for by more than 600 co-ops which came into existence during that period.

The analysis was included in the May issue of Farmer Cooperatives distributed Monday. It was written by Diane Moore, a statistical assistant in the agency.

Fifty percent or 1,000 cooperatives went out of business in the decade, the report said. The reasons most often given were declining business or membership, financial trouble or poor management.

Other reasons for the decline in co-op numbers included:

—Nearly 18 percent or 352 cooperatives were merged or consolidated.

—About 13 percent or 261 were acquired by another organization or cooperative.

—Almost 10 percent or 195 were no longer operating as cooperatives.

—More than 10 percent or 204 organizations could no longer be located, refused to provide information identifying them as bona fide farmer cooperatives or could not be identified for other miscellaneous reasons.

"If the number of cooperatives going out of business, merging, consolidating or being acquired by other cooperatives or non-cooperatives continues at the same pace as during the 1970s, there will be fewer than 5,000 by the end of this decade," the report said.

The Agricultural Cooperative Service wants to keep its records as up to date as possible, it said.

"If farmers have organized a new cooperative recently or if a cooperative has discontinued operating for one of the reasons mentioned, please nofitify ACS," the report said.

When cooperatives go out of business, some time may pass before the information reaches the agency, meaning that their names are not removed from the list for a year or more.

In 1970, according to the report, 89 farmer-owned co-ops went out of business for one reason or another, followed by: 1971 — 136; 1972 — 135; 1973 — 151; 1974 — 21; 1975 — 89; 1976 — 7; 1977 — 92; 1978 — 196; and 1979 — 84.

The report said information about new or disbanded cooperatives can be sent to: Agricultural Cooperative Service, Statistics and ADP Group, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has proposed changing some rules and policies "to lessen the regulatory burden on the livestock and meat industries."

B.H. Jones, administrator of the department's Packers and Stockyards Administration, said Monday the proposals generally follow recommendations made by an agency task force last August.

The rules and policies relate to the Packers and Stockyards Act, which prescribes regulatory procedures affecting livestock and meat marketing.

"We've found ways to maintain reasonable protection for the public, while doing away with unnecessary or unduly restrictive rules," Jones said. "The proposals also will reduce reporting requirements, clarify existing regulations and reduce the cost of doing business."

One rule which would be eliminated currently prohibits meat packers from owning or managing custom livestock feedlots.

"We are proposing to issue a new policy statement regarding packer-custom feedlot operations suggesting that packers considering such an arrangement consult with us ahead of time and they should carefully consider if such arrangements would constitute a conflict of interest or result in decreased competition," Jones said.

"Suspected violations will be investigated on a case-by-case basis and appropriate actions will be taken if necessary," he said.

Written comments on the proposal should be sent by July 12 to: Packers and Stockyards Administration, Room 3039-S, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Shuttle back to California

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The space agency may move the fifth and sixth space shuttle landings back to the California desert, says a National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman.

However, a final decision has not been made yet, NASA spokesman Terry White said Monday night.

Both flights were scheduled to end on a new runway at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

NASA wants the Columbia, scheduled to make its fifth voyage in November, to be taken back to a Rockwell International plant near Palmdale, Calif.

Management must open doors

NEW YORK (AP) — The information and knowhow for correcting the lagging productivity problem are free for the asking, and so valuable it must be thought of as a catalyst. But it isn't thought. It is ignored.

Instead, management executives seeking to raise productivity call in outside management consultants. The consultants immediately seek the knowledge they need from those who possess it. They query the workers.

The first question they ask is: "What's wrong?" Usually they get an earful. They sometimes ask just one more question: "How do you think it can be fixed?" Again, they receive concrete, specific answers.

The answers, very sound ones, says George Labovitz, consultant and professor, are printed up between expensive covers and presented to management, along with a bill for consulting services rendered.

Too often, says Labovitz, management blames workers for lagging productivity, when in fact the blame lies with them. Rather than invite workers to participate, he says, managment ignores and blames them.

George Labovitz, 42, professor of management at Boston University School of Management and president of Organizational Dynamics Inc., preaches participative management with a conviction based in results.

"Management has to let people into the process," he says. How ironic, he observes, that management detaches itself from the reality, seeks to make decisions in a vacuum and then blames the workers.

The general thrust of participatory management is that it is easier to lower the river than raise the bridge, says Labovitz. That is, it is easier in a recessionary environment to cut costs than to raise sales.

If an employee contributes an idea that save $1,000, he explains, that saving often goes right to the bottom line. But for a salesman to make a similar contribution might require a $10,000 improvement in sales.

Oddly, the estrangement of management from its own workers seems to have developed simultaneously with what is often considered to be modern, professional management. But Labovitz feels that participatory management has conclusively demonstrated its practical superiority.

In Japan, for example, where each worker is also considered his own critic.

In fact, he preaches, the best run American companies are very much like well run Japanese concerns. They are combat-like organizations pulling together for a common goal.

Death car driver says 'don't drink and drive'

EASTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — A 20-year-old mechanic who was behind the wheel in a crash that killed his best friend has been recruited to discourage teen-agers from drinking and driving during this season of high school proms and graduation parties.

Carl Dawson was the perfect case for county officials who wanted a spokesman to warn teens against drinking and driving. His accident followed a night of partying. It ended with death on a country road where Dawson had tried to take a curve at 50 mph.

Dawson says he was like hundreds of other youths who drink and cruise in their cars, until the Dec. 12 accident that killed Brian Forrestall, 19.

"I killed him," Dawson says, reading from a roughly typed speech he has been delivering to high school students. Dawson is making the rounds of nine Hampshire County public high schools under an agreement with court officials.

Massachusetts' legal drinking age is 20.

Hampshire County assistant district attorney Charlotte Guyer had asked probation officers last year to come up with someone to talk to students about the dangers of drinking and driving. Dawson's case was just what she was looking for.

Last Dec. 12, he was behind the wheel of his family's 1975 station wagon. Forrestall was by his side. A buddy, home on leave from the Army, and a woman friend were in the back.

The car went off a curve, rolled over a stop sign and two trees, snapped a telephone pole and flipped over. Dawson and the two passengers walked away from the wreck. Forrestall was hurled out of the car.

In his speech, Dawson describes walking up to Forrestall's body and turning it over.

"His eyes were open and they seemed like they were looking right at me," Dawson says.

Dawson pleaded guilty to vehicular homicide in Hampshire District Court, where Judge George Keady approved Ms. Guyer's idea. Dawson also lost his license for four years and was placed on probation for three years. An 18-month suspended jail sentence hangs over his head.

"It may be boring to you, but I'm glad to come around," he told a group of students. "It might help somebody else.

"There's times you think that you're not drunk and you really are. Some people get busted for drinking and driving and some don't. The people who don't, think, 'Wow, the cops didn't catch me,' and they think they're cool. They're not," Dawson says in his speech.

"Parents are calling me, asking me to let their child hear him," said Assistant Principal John Naumowicz, who had 100 juniors and seniors from psychology and justice classes attend the speech.

Grand jury probe, creditors' briefings continue

DALLAS (AP) — A senior Braniff international executive has declined to document his allegations that sabotage of a computerized airline reservation system played a role in the airline's financial downfall.

Braniff Senior Vice President Sam Oats, who leveled the accusations against American Airlines last weekend, said they were based on statments made to him and documents turned over to him and the Justice Department.

But Coats declined Tuesday to identify the people who talked to him or reveal any of the documents.

"I have already stated my opinion about the criminal anti-trust investigation being conducted in Fort Worth. It would be inappropriate to say anything else at this time," Coats said in a prepared statement.

American officials have called the accusations "blatantly irresponsible and without foundation" and denied the computerized reservation system it operates was manipulated to damage Braniff.

American said it knew of only two instances when its computer reported Braniff full when it was not, and that both cases could be explained.

Other airlines and travel agents pay American to use the sophisticated reservation system, known as SABRE.

Some Dallas travel agents have complained the system consistently showed Braniff flights full when they were "wide open" and often lost or canceled reservations made on Braniff flights.

Creditors for the bankrupt airline were to reconvene today to continue briefings by Braniff executives on the current status of Braniff's assets and total debts.

"This debtor will be given an opportunity to reorganize," said Michael Crames of the New York firm of Levin & Weintraub, Braniff's main bankruptcy adviser.

"The creditors are intelligent enough to realize that if they sought a liquidation now, they wouldn't get it. If they sought their collateral now, they wouldn't get that either," he said.

Braniff owes 9,000 creditors about $1 billion. Of that, $732 million is secured by liens on Braniff equipment. The rest is unprotected by any collateral.

U.S. Reps. Jim Wright, House majority leader from Fort Worth, and Martin Frost of Dallas, have complained to President Reagan that thousands of Braniff employees are being denied emergency unemployment benefits to which they are entitled.

They complain that Reagan has refused to implement a section of the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978 which establishes a protection program designed to provide monthly compensation and the right of first hire on other airlines for employees affected by deregulation.

Two face murder charges in alleged mutiny

HOUSTON (AP) — Panamanian officials have freed three Filipino sailors under shipboard arrest, but they said two other crewmen will be extradited to Panama to face murder charges stemming from an alleged mutiny.

The three released Tuesday and vowed to return to their homeland had been held in connection with the slaying of their first officer and an alleged plot to kill seven others.

But Panama's Consul General Carmen Crespo de Pinzon said the trio was released "because their involvement was a misunderstanding." He said two other crewmen will be extradited to Panama today to face murder charges.

On Tuesday morning, authorities boarded the freighter Evergreen, docked at the Port of Houston, and questioned the crewmen individually about the murder.

Rodolfo Severino, the consul general of the Philippines, said he was on the ship during some of the questioning but he and his deputy were ordered to leave the ship after two hours because "our presence was influencing statements of the witnesses."

U.S. authorities became involved after the captain, Amos Hecht, an Israeli, radioed that a mutiny was under way. Agents said the ship's first officer, Dajit Suberoi, 42, of Jullundur, India, was killed in international waters, 110 miles south of Port Eads, La.

The captain navigated the ship into U.S. waters to get American assistance in controlling the situation, but by the time FBI agents and Coast Guardsmen from New Orleans arrived, the worst was over, U.S. officials said.

The ship then sailed to Houston, where it docked Monday morning and unloaded 13,000 tons of steel.

U.S. authorities took no criminal action because the crewmen were not U.S. citizens

Officers foil escape try

MALVERN, Ark. (AP) — Police planned to return a man to a Houston, Texas, jail today, one day after he locked a Hot Spring County deputy in a cell and briefly took over the sheriff department's radio.

After subduing Tim Ward, 18, of Terrace Park, Ohio, on Tuesday, officers transferred him to the Garland County Jail in Hot Springs for security reasons, authorities said.

Police had arrested Ward last week on a warrant for aggravated robbery and auto theft charges from Houston.

Ward's escape attempt began about 1 p.m. Tuesday when jailer Ron Smith opened a cell door to give Ward some food, authorities said. Smith said Ward threw a cup of water in his face, then ran past him and into the radio operator's room

Taste Smokers Convinced.

Former higher tar smokers report MERIT "Best-tasting low tar I've tried."

Can a low tar cigarette provide the taste incentive to switch smokers from higher tar brands?

Research consistently proves that MERIT can.

MERIT Taste Sparks Switch.

Nationwide survey reveals over 90% of MERIT smokers who switched from higher tar are glad they did. In fact, 94% don't even miss their former brands.

Further Evidence: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

MERIT Clear Choice.

In addition, extensive unmarked-pack tests confirm that MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar when compared against higher tar leaders.

Confirmed: The overwhelming majority reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Confirmed: When tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.
