U.S. Proposal Breaks Peace Talks Deadlock

By United Press International

A U.S.-MEDIATED compromise presented in overnight bargaining broke an agenda deadlock Sunday that had threatened to cancel Egyptian-Israeli peace talks and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance reinstated his once-postponed plans to join the meeting.

The Egyptian delegation flew to Israel after the compromise, but vowed not to budge on demands for Israeli withdrawal from occupied territories and Palestinian self-determination.

Israeli officials said the talks will open Tuesday morning in Jerusalem — one day behind schedule.

Vance, who Saturday night abruptly postponed his departure for Jerusalem, left Washington at 9 p.m. CST Sunday to join the talks.

President Anwar Sadat gave the go-ahead for Egyptian participation after meeting with top policy advisers on the last-minute compromise to break a deadlock over the scope of discussion of the Palestinian question.

An official communique following Sadat's three-hour session with his National Security Council said Washington had relayed the compromise proposal through Ambassador Hermann Eilts in night-long bargaining.

The statement did not give details on the proposal.

New Draft Submitted

"The United States submitted a new draft representing the views of the various parties which can be considered a suitable working paper" for the talks, the Egyptian communique said.

In Tel Aviv, Prime Minister Menahem Begin said the United States had been instrumental in reaching a compromise on the agenda wording.

In Washington, officials said the U.S. role was to act as both mediator and message carrier.

American officials were unable to weigh the effect of the dramatic postponement of Vance's trip, but the announcement was followed almost immediately by the compromise.

Only hours before the breakthrough, Sadat had expressed pessimism on the outcome of the political talks, saying he saw no hope of agreeing with Israel on a declaration of peace principles.

Egyptian Delegation

The Egyptian delegation, headed by Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel, flew to Tel Aviv Sunday afternoon and went by car from there to Jerusalem.

Kamel said on arrival that Egypt will stick by its demands for complete withdrawal from occupied land and self-determination for the Palestinians.

"Certain basic facts have to be faced with courage and clear vision," he said.

"There can be no peace with the occupation of land. There can be no peace with the denial of national rights of the Palestinian people, foremost among which is the right to self-determination."

In a brief planeside ceremony in Tel Aviv, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said, "We shall listen very carefully and attentively to what you have to say and on our side I want to promise you that we shall speak frankly and will be most forthcoming."

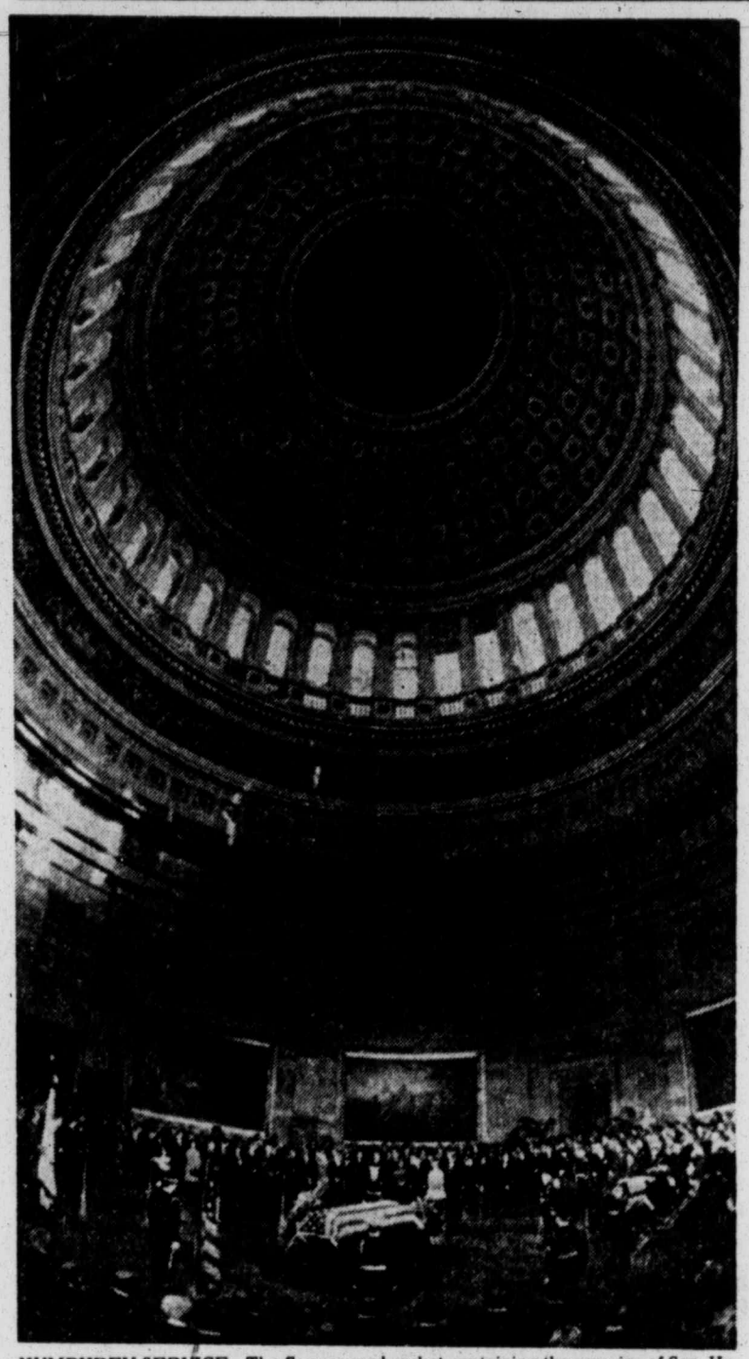
Israeli leaders have said they have no intention of giving up all the land seized from the neighboring Arab states in the 1967 war or going beyond the proposed granting of limited self-rule to the Palestinians.

Israeli sources said Kamel and Israeli leaders would meet for informal consultations Sunday night.

Begin also said the military talks in Cairo will resume this week and run parallel with the negotiations between foreign ministers in the Israeli capital.

"I may say we will have now a non-short period of direct negotiations between the committees to establish peace," he said, speaking with visiting U.S. congressmen after Kamel's arrival.

Begin said the invitation to Defense Minister Ezer Weizman came from his Egyptian counterpart, War Minister Mohammed Gamassy.



HUMPHREY SERVICE—The flag-covered casket containing the remains of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., rests in the Capitol Rotunda Sunday during a memorial service. Following the service the body was flown to Minnesota for burial today. (AP Laserphoto)

Capitol Tribute Paid Humphrey

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hubert H. Humphrey was eulogized by President Carter on Sunday as "the most beloved of all Americans," and an inspiration to all the presidents of his time.

At a memorial service in the Rotunda of the Capitol, beneath the great dome, Carter spoke in farewell to the Minnesota senator, former vice president and sometime political rival, saying that when Humphrey first visited him in the Oval Office, "I felt that he should have served there."

Former Presidents Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford, and Lady Bird Johnson, the wife of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, were among the official mourners at the nationally televised service.

"We and our families are here today to testify that Hubert Humphrey may well have blessed our country more than any of us," Carter said.

Leaders Pay Tribute

Before the flag-draped coffin of the fallen Happy Warrior, the leaders of American government gathered in Washington's final tribute. The Senate in which he served, the House, the Cabinet, the Supreme Court, all assembled where Humphrey had lain in state since Saturday, while thousands of citizens filed past the coffin.

Humphrey's body was taken from the Capitol after the service by military pallbearers and driven to Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington. From there, it was flown aboard a presidential jet to Minnesota. It was to lie in state in the Minnesota Capitol Sunday night and this morning before funeral services in St. Paul and burial this afternoon in Minneapolis.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale and his wife, both Minnesotans, joined Mrs. Humphrey for the flight home. Carter planned to fly to Minnesota today to attend the funeral.

Joined In Eulogy

The president and vice president both noted in their eulogies that Humphrey had asked for celebration of the future rather than mourning at his services. And as the service ended, they joined — at Carter's request — in singing "America the Beautiful."

Tenor Robert Merrill sang that hymn. Then Carter stepped over to speak to him, and the singer asked that everyone join in singing. Carter held the hand of Muriel Humphrey, the senator's widow, as the service ended.

Mrs. Humphrey, in a pale pink outfit, sat between Carter and Mondale, who was Humphrey's political protege. Violinist Isaac Stern, a cellist and pianist, played chamber music to open the service. Stern was a friend of Humphrey's. So was Merrill. And, as the eulogizers said, so were countless others, in the United States and around the world.

"He was simply incredible," said the grieving Mondale, recalling his first meeting with Humphrey 31 years ago. "When he said that life was not meant to be endured but rather to be enjoyed, you knew what he meant. You could see it simply by watching and listening to him. ...

"He taught us all how to hope and how to love, how to win and how to lose. He taught us how to live and, finally, he taught us how to die."

And although Humphrey never realized his greatest goal, the presidency he sought so long, Mondale said that he achieved something more rare and valuable than that office.

Country's Conscience

"He became his country's conscience," Mondale said.

Carter and Mondale both spoke of Humphrey's early advocacy of civil rights for black Americans, the issue that split the Democratic Party in 1948. Twenty

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police in New York and New Jersey Sunday raided a $100-million-a-year gambling operation and arrested 11 reputed members of the Vito Genovese crime family, officials reported.

Rain Spatters Over Plains; Prospect Of Snow Forecast

A-J News Services

CLOUDY SKIES blanketed all but the extreme southeastern corner of Texas Sunday and a light but steady rain fell over the South Plains most of the afternoon and early evening.

Only a trace of rain was recorded in Lubbock, as in most area towns, but the heavy cloud cover kept the high temperature from climbing to its forecast mid-50 degree level.

The official high reading in Lubbock Saturday was 48 degrees while the low dipped to 27. Today's weather pattern should be more of the same, National Weather Service officials say, with the high expected in the mid 40s and the lows falling into the middle teens.

A travelers advisory for the Lubbock region was issued late Saturday afternoon as the probability of more rain mixed with snow increased as a Pacific cold front moved inward, triggering the soggy weather.

Precipitation Chances High

Forecasters say there is a 50 percent chance of precipitation tonight, including the possibility of snow accumulations of one to two inches. The possibility of precipitation is expected to decrease to only 20 percent by tonight.

Temperatures across the state Saturday ranged from 40s and 50s in the northern half of Texas to the 60s and 70s ahead of the front in South Texas. Late Saturday afternoon temperatures ranged from 40 degrees in the Dallas-Fort Worth area to a warm 75 degrees at McAllen.

A warming trend, however, should return to the South Plains Tuesday, with high readings expected in the 50s.

The wet weather pattern extended over much of the western United States, with California still reporting heavy rainfall. San Diego received 2.86 inches of rain Saturday and the Sacramento and Russian Rivers rose to near or above flood stage because of the rain.

Forces From Homes

Dozens of families in Rio Linda in Central California were forced to leave their homes and some residents resorted to rowboats to navigate through front yards.

Two persons were feared dead in San Diego after being trapped inside a car immersed in eight feet of water. Eight other persons were rescued by lifeboat from a flooded house.

Frosty temperatures dipped into the deep South Sunday while northerners braced themselves for another blast of Artic cold.

Utility crewmen in the Northeast worked to repair powerlines that had snapped during a crippling ice storm during during the weekend.

Temperatures dropped into the 20s as far south as the Gulf Coast of Mississippi, Alabama and northern Florida. Jackson, Miss., reported a regional low of 15 degrees and frost warnings were issued for southern Florida through Sunday.

Frigid air swept across the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and New York, with a number of cities along the lakes reporting below zero readings.

Nearly 170,000 customers in Long Island, N.Y., and Rhode Island were without power or heat because of ice storms Saturday that snapped brittle power lines and knocked out service for hundreds-of-thousands of homes. Long Island Lighting Company officials predicted it may be Tuesday before some of the customers get service back.

About 67,000 Rhode Islanders shivered because of the power lapse while more than 100 power company crews worked overnight to reconnect feeder lines and to reconnect lines to individual homes.

In New Jersey, Public Service Electric and Gas Company officials said about 70,000 of its customers, primarily in the northern part of the state, had no electricity sometime over the weekend. Jersey Central Power and Light Company officials said about 22,000 persons serviced by that company lost power.

Store Clerk Killed In Heist Here

A 19-YEAR-OLD grocery store attendant was murdered late Sunday during an apparent robbery of a grocery store just outside the city limits.

Sheriff's deputies were called about 10:45 p.m. to Vera's Grocerette on W. 4th Street about 1 1/2 miles east of Loop 289 where they discovered the body of a black male sprawled on the floor behind the cash register.

A ransacked cash register stood open and cash and spent bullet shells lay scattered on the floor near the victim's body. Deputies also said the robbers apparently had gone through the slain man's pockets.

Although officers had not determined the name of the victim late Sunday, Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy ruled the man's death a homocide — the first of the year for both the city and county, and the first time in at least three years that a murder had been committed during a robbery attempt.

Officers said the attendant had been shot twice with a small caliber pistol in the eye and the chest.

A woman customer discovered the body about 10:30 p.m. and notified police who then called the Sheriff's Department. Deputies said the man appeared to have been dead about an hour when they arrived on the scene.

The body was taken to Rix Funeral Directors.

Chemical Spilled During Derailment

UHRICHSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Five families were evacuated from their homes Sunday when eight Conrail freight cars derailed and one carrying a flammable chemical spilled some of its contents.

About 3,500 gallons of the 29,000 gallons of tetrahydrofuran in the tank car soaked into the ground around the overturned car.

The chemical, which is used for cleaning plastic pipes in manufacturing, was en route from Houston to Buffalo, N.Y., police said.

Third Trial Opens Today For Union Leader Boyle

MEDIA, Pa. (UPI) — W.A. "Tony" Boyle, the once powerful leader of the United Mine Workers, will go on trial for a third time today in connection with the 1969 slayings of union rival Joseph "Jock" Yablonski, his wife and daughter.

Boyle, 76 and ailing, is accused of ordering the assassination of Yablonski, his bitter rival in the 1969 UMW presidential election that was won by Boyle. The federal government later set aside that election and ordered a new one, which was won by the now-incumbent Arnold Miller.

The prosecution contends that Boyle ordered Yablonski's slaying because Yablonski was scheduled to testify before a federal grand jury about alleged corruption in the UMW.

Shot After Election

On Dec. 31, 1969, three weeks after the union election, the Yablonskis were shot to death by hired gunmen as they slept in their home in Clarksville in western Pennsylvania.

Boyle was convicted in April 1974 of first degree murder and was serving three concurrent life sentences in the Western Penitentiary in Pittsburgh when the state Supreme Court granted him a new trial last January.

The court ruled that Delaware County President Judge Francis J. Catania had violated Boyle's constitutional rights when he refused to permit defense testimony from a government auditor.

Trial Postponed

Seven jurors had been selected at Boyle's second trial last September when the defendant was stricken with chest pains and taken to a hospital. The trial was later postponed and the jurors excused.

Last spring, Catania issued a "gag order" on pre-trial proceedings in the case.

No public disclosures were made about a closed-door hearing held last Wednesday. But it was believed that Special Prosecutor Richard Sprague, wanting Boyle placed under medical custody, asked for the revocation of Boyle's $250,000 bail on which he was released from prison last March.

Boyle, who attempted suicide in 1973 just before he was scheduled to begin a three-year sentence in a federal prison for misuse of union funds, is reported to be suffering from a heart condition,

Justices' Ages, Health Key To Court's Future

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With five justices nearing age 70 or older — and several in questionable health — President Carter may get the chance to place a personal imprint on the Supreme Court that could last into the 21st Century.

By Jan. 20, 1981 when his term ends, five of the nine justices could have chosen by virtue of long service to retire on full salary of $72,000 a year. Two more would be eligible for retirement if he serves another term.

Federal judges are appointed for life without any age limits. But a justice may retire at full salary at 65 after 15 years on the federal bench, or at 70 after 10 years.

Members of the court who could step down at full salary now or before 1981 are Chief Justice Warren Burger, 70, and Justices William Brennan, 71, Potter Stewart, 63, Thurgood Marshall, 69, and Harry Blackmun, 69.

Justices Byron White, 60, and Lewis Powell, 70, could do so during a second Carter term.

Justices William Rehnquist, 53, and John Paul Stevens, 57, are the "juniors" on the court, who could not choose full retirement until 1990 and 1985, respectively.

Three justices have had health problems.

Brennan, the court's senior member, is being treated for a malignant growth on vocal chord and is missing January arguments. His doctor says a complete recovery is expected.

Blackmun has just returned to work after prostate cancer surgery. He also is said to be fully recovered.

Marshall suffered a heart attack in 1976 and has had other medical problems in recent years, including two bouts with pneumonia.

In view of his campaign speeches, Carter will be under strong pressure to name a woman or a black, particularly if Marshall, the court's first black member who has been ailing, should leave.

Judge Shirley Hufstedler of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals is mentioned most often as a likely woman candidate. She is widely admired for her abilities, is 52 and — most important — a Democrat.

A leading possibility among blacks is Solicitor General Wade McCree, who left the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals bench to become the government's chief advocate before the high court. Marshall took the same route.

"There's not much rhyme or reason to how presidents pick Supreme Court justices," said Prof. A.E. Dick Howard of the University of Virginia Law School. "If Carter wanted to be guided by precedent, there's no obvious source."

In 1968, Richard Nixon campaigned against the court led by Chief Justice Earl Warren and eventually succeeded in altering its legal philosophy — particularly in the criminal field.

The four Nixon appointees — Burger, Blackmun, Powell and Rehnqkist — now control the voting, usually joined by White and often by Stewart.

Brennan and Marshall are the only two left of the one-time "liberal" Warren Court. Lately they have had considerable support from Stevens.

Presidents previously took their high court appointments less seriously than today. Presidents Lyndon Johnson and Harry Truman leaned toward cronies, and President Dwight Eisenhower named four appointees with widely varying constitutional philosophies.

In any event, Howard noted, many people have come to grief predicting how a man will vote upon donning a justice's robes. An example, he said, is Stevens, the court's junior member appointed in 1975 by President Gerald Ford.

"Given his career as an antitrust lawyer and his opinions on the 7th Circuit, one would have predicted a moderate to conservative voting pattern," Howard said. "But he is clearly left of center."

Because President George Washington started from scratch, he managed to make 10 Supreme Court appointments before he left office at the end of his second term.

Otherwise, the appointment record goes to President Franklin Roosevelt, who in almost four full terms appointed eight justices.

Carter cannot serve so long, since the Constitution has been changed to limit a president to two terms. But given the age and health of many of the justices, Carter — particularly if he is re-elected — could shape the court with appointments whose rulings would affect Americans for the rest of this century.

Judges Choose 14 Finalists For Pageant

Fourteen young women, each hoping to be awarded the crown of Miss Lubbock, presented a diverse show of talent Sunday in the J.A. Hodges Community Center in a preliminary judging round for the Miss Lubbock Scholarship Pageant.

All 14 contestants will return on stage Feb. 11 in the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium where Miss Lubbock and a court of four runners-up will be selected by five judges on the basis of talent, on-stage appearance and swimsuit competition.

Miss Lubbock will represent the area in the Miss Texas Pageant in Fort Worth later in the year.

Originally 17 contestants had been scheduled to perform at Sunday's competition, but three failed to appear.

Old Building Burns In Ex-Navy Yard

BOSTON (AP) — A fire in the former Charlestown Navy Yard where the famous wooden battleship Old Ironsides is berthed has gutted a 19th century building.

The building, constructed in 1888 and representative of the classic architecture in what's become a redevelopment area of the Boston waterfront, was one of many planned to be retained in future development of the yard.

Ethics Committee Eyes Tongsun Park

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — U.S. Rep. Bruce Caputo, R-N.Y., said Sunday the House Ethics Committee will negotiate with the South Korean Embassy in Washington to get Tongsun Park to testify before the committee about alleged influence-buying on Capitol Hill.

Caputo, a member of the committee, said he received word of the decision in a telephone call from the panel's special counsel, Leon Jaworski. Caputo did not indicate whether the Korean Embassy will be approached directly or through the State Department.

The congressman left the South Korean capital Sunday after sitting in as an observer for two days of intensive questioning of Park, a Korean businessman and central figure in the payoff scandal.

The questioning was conducted by a team of U.S. Justice Department officials and by Korean investigators.

Though describing Park's answers as "forthright" and "revealing," Caputo told reporters here that the testimony "would not be enough for ethics committee probers." He noted that the Justice Department is interested in violations of criminal law but that the committee wants also to uncover any conduct violating congressional rules.

Caputo was not allowed to join in the closed-door questioning, conducted in English at the South Korean prosecution offices. An agreement the Justice Department negotiated with the South Korean government excludes the ethics committee from the proceedings.

The interrogation sessions Thursday and Friday represented the first time Park has undergone questioning since he was indicted by a U.S. grand jury last August on 36 counts of bribery, mail fraud and other charges for his alleged effort to buy congressional support for the South Korean government.

Treaty Foe Plays Down Byrd Statement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leader of a conservative effort to thwart the Panama Canal treaty says Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd's endorsement of the pact won't carry the clout that it might on some other issues.

"My suspicion is that this one is unique, and leadership isn't going to make nearly the difference," Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., said after Byrd's announcement that he will fight for the treaty, provided some of its security provisions are tightened up.

The declaration by the West Virginia Democrat is expected to attract some other senators who had been uncommitted on how to vote, and thus won strong praise from the White House. However, whether the treaty can gain the two-thirds majority needed for ratification remains in doubt.

Meanwhile, Byrd revealed Sunday that he has advised President Carter to step up the administration's push for public support of the pact.

In an appearance on the NBC-TV interview program "Meet the Press," Byrd also said he believed the Senate could amend the treaty by using "a parliamentary maneuver" that would be aimed at avoiding the need for renegotiation of the pact.

Byrd refused to speculate on the number of senators supporting the treaty, but said further clarification is needed on the right of the United States to defend the canal and to have priority passage for ships during wartime.

"If we can nail in these points, then we will give this assurance to the American people ...," Byrd said.

Laxalt said that continued U.S. control over the canal is the "gut question" as a so-called "truth squad" strikes out across the country to campaign for public opposition to the treaty.

Its opening attack on the treaty originally was scheduled for Monday but was postponed for a day because Laxalt and other senators in the group wanted to attend the funeral of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn.

Nashville and Atlanta were knocked off the list and the tour now is scheduled to begin Tuesday, with Miami the first stop. Other stops were to include Covington, Ky., Cincinnati, St. Louis and Denver, winding up in Portland, Ore., on Saturday. William Rhatican, a spokesman for the Committee to Save the Panama Canal, said other points might be added.

Financed by eight conservative organizations at a cost of up to $100,000, the anti-treaty "blitz" follows closely a tour by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, who campaigned for three days last week in behalf of the proposal. At each stop there will be appearances and speeches by senators, congressmen and other political and public figures opposing the treaty.

Like Vance's effort, the campaign focuses mainly on states with senators who may be wavering on the issue or facing re-election pressure.

Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., who is seeking re-election this year, has been a special target of the treaty foes, which is why Nashville was on the original list.

The treaty needs 67 votes to pass the Senate, and the latest tabulation by the conservatives shows about 55 in favor and 28 opposed, six less than needed to prevent ratification. There actually are two treaties, but they are considered indivisible.

The treaty calls for the canal to be turned over to Panama in the year 2000, after which the United States and Panama would share responsibility for defending it.

Carter and Panama's Gen. Omar Torrijos issued a joint statement last fall to clarify this point, saying it meant the United States would have priority access to the canal and would be able to use military force if necessary to defend it.

To try to placate opponents who insist that is not enough, Vance said the Carter-Torrijos statement could be attached to the treaty.

INVESTIGATION ASKED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Idaho Republican Congressman George Hansen is asking the General Accounting Office to investigate whether government regulations were responsible for recent fatal explosions in grain elevators. Hansen said he believes there is strong reason to suspect that the regulations of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration and Environmental Protection Agency "are actually the cause of explosions and heavy damage." Hansen is a former grain buyer and elevator manager.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible®
Rev. 19:9-20, The Living Bible

9 And the angel[2] dictated this sentence to me: "Blessed are those who are invited to the wedding feast of the Lamb." And he added, "God Himself has stated this."[3]
10 Then I fell down at his feet to worship him but he said, "No! Don't! For I am a servant of God just as you are, and as your brother Christians are, who testify of their faith in Jesus. The purpose of all prophecy and of all I have shown you is to tell about Jesus."[4]
11 Then I saw heaven opened and a white horse standing there; and the one sitting on the horse was named "Faithful and True"—the one who justly punishes and makes war.
12 His eyes were like flames, and on His head were many crowns. A name was written on His forehead,[5] and only He knew its meaning.
13 He was clothed with garments dipped in blood, and His title was "The Word of God."[6]
14 The armies of heaven, dressed in finest linen, white and clean, followed Him on white horses.
15 In His mouth He held a sharp sword to strike down the nations; He ruled them with an iron grip; and He trod the winepress of the fierceness of the wrath of Almighty God.
16 On His robe and thigh were written this title: "KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS."
17 Then I saw an angel standing in the sunshine, shouting loudly to the birds, "Come! Gather together for the supper of the Great God!

18 Come and eat the flesh of kings, and captains, and great generals; of horses and riders; and of all humanity, both great and small, slave and free."
19 Then I saw the Evil Creature gathering the governments of the earth and their armies to fight against the one sitting on the horse and His army.

20 And the Evil Creature was captured, and with him the False Prophet,[7] who could do mighty miracles when the Evil Creature was present—miracles that deceived all who had accepted the Evil Creature's mark, and who worshiped his statue. Both of them—the Evil Creature and his False Prophet—were thrown alive into the Lake of Fire that burns with sulphur.

Drama Of Death Appears In Treasure Exhibit

By JEFF W. HENDERSON
A-J Correspondent

The raging storm swept in from the middle of the Gulf of Mexico, driving everything before it, including four heavily laden treasure ships sailing from Vera Cruz, Mexico, to Spain.

In the holds of the ships were cowhides, liquid amber, sugar, silk, wool and $10 million in gold and silver. According to the records, this amount included about two million silver pesos, newly minted in Mexico City.

The storm was not one of the dreaded hurricanes of the fall, but an equinoctial, a sudden and deadly wind typical of the Gulf in the spring.

All the sailing ships could do was run before the wind and hope for the best. However, three of the ships ran out of ocean before the storm abated, and they ran aground in the shallow water off Padre Island on the Texas coast.

The disaster happened in April of 1554.

It is now possible to view some of the artifacts of the shipwrecks in a show called "Treasure, People, Ships and Dreams," on the lower level of the Institute of Texas Cultures in San Antonio at the Hemisfair Plaza.

GUARDS ENTRANCE — A verso — a small, swivel-mounted, deck cannon — guards the entrance to the Spanish galleon exhibit. The display is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, except Mondays, with free admission.

The exhibit, the result of eight years of research and underwater excavation by the Texas Antiquities Committee, can be viewed in the Institute from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., daily except Mondays, through Jan. 29. Admission is free.

To go along with the exhibit is the book, Treasure, People, Ships and Dreams (the same name as the show), which includes pictures of the artifacts and copies of the paintings from the exhibit that depict the shipwrecks. The book can be purchased in the Institute gift shop.

In the exhibit itself, you can see a deck bombard — a breech-loading cannon — and a verso — a small, movable, swivel-mounted, musket-like cannon. The cannons were heavily encrusted with sea growth after lying on the sea bottom for more than 400 years.

All of the restoration work for the exhibit was done by the Antiquities Committee and the University of Texas' Balcones Research Cneter.

Also on exhibit are brass straight pins (the sewing type), belt buckles, shipboard tools (only the metal remains of a sledge, an auger, an adze and a spike), pewter dinner plates and a lead patch evidently used to repair a portion of the hull of one of the ships.

The coins brought up from the wrecks, as well as a couple of gold bars, hold the viewer's attention the longest. It's not hard to linger there in front of the case and dream of pieces of eight and doubloons and sailing the Spanish Main.

What's amazing about these coins is the way they were discovered. After 400 years under the sea, the coins weren't just lying there on the bottom waiting for the first diver to come along and pick them up.

The coins were found in conglomerations of calcium carbonate, magnesium hydroxide, metal corrosion products, sand and various forms of shells, coral, barnacles and plant life. The encrustation surrounds the objects in layers and is concrete-like in hardness.

The encrustations are brought to the surface and X-rayed to get an idea of what metal objects are inside. Then, very painstakingly, the encrustation is removed through various processes, including very delicate dentist-like work with hand-held pneumatic chisels.

Up on the main floor of the Institute, a film is shown twice daily (9:30 a.m. and 4 p.m.) which shows the underwater excavation and the laboratory restoration of the artifacts on exhibit. The film is called Graveyard of the Gulf.

In one scene, you can watch the recovery of a large, iron ship's anchor; then, after the movie, you can walk down to the display and see that same anchor on exhibit.

The story of the shipwrecks of the Santa Maria de Yciar, San Esteban and Espiritu Santo is a tragic one.

More than 400 passengers and crew set out from Vera Cruz, bound for Cuba to join up with the Spanish fleet for the journey to Spain. There were four ships, including the San Andres, which escaped the storm, making the initial journey.

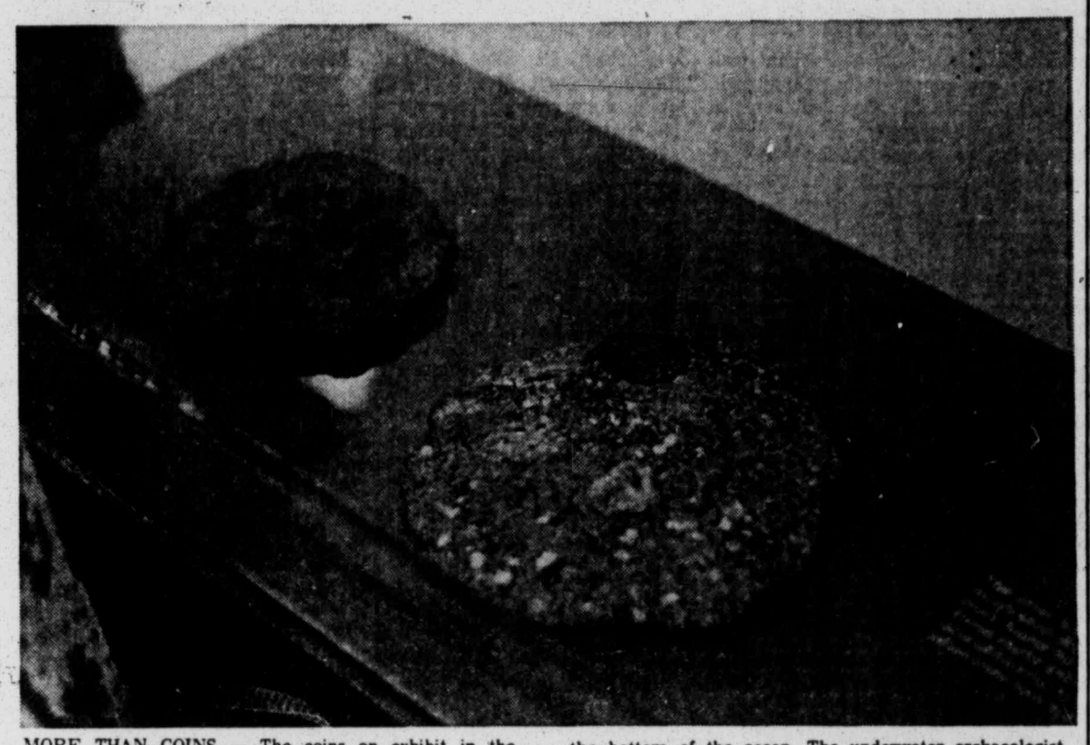
Most of the passengers of the wrecked ships made it to shore on Padre Island; however, this fact was not known by the San Andres. The surviving ship had written off the other three as lost with all lives. The general location off the Texas coast was noted for later salvage efforts.

On board the Santa Maria, whose records still exist, were 40 passengers and 27 crewmembers. Three of the passengers were prisoners — including Dona Catalina de Ribera, a young woman on her way to Spain to face charges of conspiring to murder her husband.

The young woman survived the sinking of the ship only to die with most of the rest of the survivors from Indian attacks. The survivors had only two crossbows for protection after the wreck, and these two weapons were lost in crossing the Rio Grande as the party tried to walk to Tampico.

About 300 of the passengers and crew died in the wrecks or from the Indians. There is no record of how many survived the ordeal.

When the exhibit closes in San Antonio at the end of January, it will be moved to Corpus Christi (February-March), Lubbock (April-June), El Paso (July-August) and on to Houston (August-October).



MORE THAN COINS — The coins on exhibit in the "Treasure, People, Ships and Dreams" display at the Institute of Texas Cultures in San Antonio weren't just lying on the bottom of the ocean. The underwater archaeologist brought up concrete-like encrustations, which contain coins and other relics. (Correspondent's Photos)

Glib Solutions Not Expected In Carter Address

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will deliver personally a no-quick-fix State of the Union address Thursday that will call for a national effort to grapple with economic and other problems that defy easy solutions.

Aides said Carter, in his nationally broadcast appearance before a joint Senate-House session at 9 p.m. EST, will set forth his legislative goals for the new year without attempting to submit a laundry list of administration proposals.

The relatively brief presidential speech — estimated to take less than 30 minutes — will be supplemented by a longer written message that will be submitted to Congress at the same time.

Traditionally, State of the Union addresses serve as the starter's gun for each annual congressional session and mark a formal enunciation of administration goals for the coming year.

Informants said Carter plans to lay particular stress on his economic priorities for 1978, including a $25 billion tax cut, a new anti-inflation effort and the related problem of completing work on a stalled energy program laden with economic significance.

They said Carter also will discuss government reorganization, including a planned major overhaul of the civil service system.

Although these sources reported that domestic concerns likely will account for more than half of Carter's message, they said he will not neglect his drive for Senate ratification of the Panama Canal treaty or his hopes for peace in the Middle East and a new arms curb agreement with the Soviet Union.

One aide said the president will emphasize a national need to face up to nearly insoluble problems, discussing not only his responsibilities in this regard but also those of the people as a whole.

Carter, he said, will caution against looking for quick fixes and will point out that if solutions were easily achievable, they would hve been adopted long since.

Several months ago, White House assistants were saying Carter erred in 1977 by not placing sufficient emphasis on the difficulties of problem-solving. They said then he may have raised public expectations too high.

A presidential associate privy to private administration polls said this week that recent public opinion samplings indicate public expectations are quite limited and realistic.

Work on the message was begun last month, with Carter participating in the preparation of a broad outline as a guide for his speechwriting team. Much of the writing was done here while the president was making his world tour.

One source sad the president did not see a complete draft of the speech until this weekend. Carter took the draft with him to Camp David, Md., to work on it during a family sojourn.

Huge Arms Expenditure Said Needed In Europe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States must spend between $6 billion and $7 billion for additional tanks, planes and supplies if it wants to use three extra divisions to reinforce NATO in a European war, the Congressional Budget Office said Sunday.

CBO's study on NATO forces considered the role of the three divisions added to the active Army since 1974, bringing its total strength to 16 divisions, and their possible use as reinforcements on the North German Plain — the expected location of any communist-led attack.

If such items as tanks and artillery are not pre-positioned in Germany as they already are for other reinforcing U.S. units, CBO analysts said the extra units probably wouldn't be able to get into the battle in time to prevent loss of strategic territory that leads to Belgian and Dutch ports.

CBO's study gave options for Congress in its consideration of next year's budget and the U.S. role in NATO.

President Carter's $126 billion defense spending plan — to be submitted next week — is pegged to a three percent increase in programs for European defense, and he already has announced plans to station more troops in Germany.

The study said there were some drawbacks to increasing spending by $6 billion to $7 billion over the next five years.

It said most European forces are less ready than U.S. units are in the face of an intense attack, and that expanding the American role still further "could be providing a disincentive to Europeans to make improvements in their own forces."

The plan calls for doubling production of the new XM-1 battle tank when it starts in 1980, putting the additional tanks in new stockpiles in Germany. It also would provide an additional wing of F-16 fighters, increased ammunition supplies and a new U.S. headquarters in north Germany.

A cheaper alternative — $3 billion to $4 billion — would provide additional F-16's and tank-killing A-10 light bombers, but the study said this would neglect portions of ground defense lines that are "relatively weak."

Another option, aimed at reducing U.S. spending on NATO until allies improve their own forces, suggested deactivating the three new divisions and cutting back aircraft and ammunition purchases.

It would save an estimated $15 billion to $16 billion, but the CBO study said there was little likelihood Congress would want to go entirely in that direction.

Four Plead Innocent To Shooting Charges

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Four persons have pleaded innocent to charges of murder and conspiracy in the May 10, 1977, shooting death of polygamist leader Dr. Rulon Allred.

Third District Judge Ernest R. Baldwin Jr., heard the pleas Friday from Mark Earl Chynoweth, 25, Dallas; Lloyd V. Sullivan, 51, Denver; Victor Lee Chynoweth, 30, Sedalia, Colo., and Ramona Marston, 18, Denver. Baldwin scheduled trial to begin March 20.

Six other defendants, including polygamist cult leader Ervil LeBaron, 52, also have been charged in Allred's death, but are still being sought.

Allred, 71, a naturopath, was believed to have been the spiritual leader of between 3,000 to 5,000 polygamists in the West. He was gunned down in his office in Murray, a Salt Lake City suburb.

AN EDITORIAL:

HHH-Ever A Happy Warrior

REGARDLESS OF how one may have felt about some of his political philosophy, the fact remains that Sen. Hubert Horatio Humphrey wrote a chapter in the nation's history which will not soon be forgotten.

His death, after a long and valiant bout with cancer, was a mark of the man himself, courageous, dignified, even ebullient at times in the face of tragedy.

The fact that he did not gain the highest elective office he ever sought, the Presidency, took nothing away from his stature as a Senator, a Vice President, a Man.

IN DEATH, Humphrey joins a select company of American political figures.

They, like him, aspired to the White House, yet are remembered not for that but rather their valued services in other capacities—as senators, cabinet members, ambassadors, elder statesmen.

As such, they often contributed as much or more to the welfare and integrity of the nation, the American people and Democracy as the Presidents with whom they served.

Such is the case for Sen. Humphrey, the "Happy Warrior."

IN DEATH, HE joins a select circle of persons such as Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, William Jennings Bryan, Adlai Stevenson, all of whom made their marks other than as occupants of the White House.

Like them, Humphrey is honored not for what he might have been, but for what he was.

What distinguishes a democracy from all other political systems is not merely the fact of individual liberty. It is also the opportunity it gives the talented and ambitious individual to play a role in shaping and directing the destiny of his fellows, an opportunity enjoyed by only the very few within the ruling power circle in the one-party, totalitarian state. Soviet history lists no Webster or Clays or Humphreys.

IT IS GOOD that Sen. Humphrey was able to see for himself, the esteem in which he was held by his fellow Americans. Long before he succumbed, he was given a preview by his colleagues and admirers of the eulogies that now attend his passing.

In 1948, as liberal freshman senator from Minnesota, Humphrey's eloquence put over the then controversial Civil Rights plank in that year's Democratic platform. From that time on, he was a force to be reckoned with, in his party and the Senate, where he was elected majority whip in 1961.

Humphrey's first try for the presidency was in 1960, when he lost the Democratic nomination to John F. Kennedy.

He won the nomination in 1968, having served as vice president under Lyndon B. Johnson, but narrowly lost the election to Richard Nixon, mainly, some said, because of his refusal to condemn Johnson's Vietnam policy.

And, though visibly aged and weakened following a cancer operation in 1976, he did not rule out another try in 1980. He was the eternal optimist, not only about his personal career, but about his country. He was a believer in the future and in the ability of free men to shape that future to their own desires.

He never attained the grand prize. But few major pieces of social legislation of the past three decades do not bear the HHH stamp—from federal aid to education to Medicare to child nutrition programs to conservation acts.

But, perhaps his greatest contribution was in the way he lived his life, political and personal. Ever the "Happy Warrior," he not only showed us how to live, but how to die...with courage, dignity, honor.

AN EDITORIAL:

Jobs Abound 'Across Board'

THERE'S GOOD news ahead for the working man and woman.

Jobs for the remainder of this decade and into the first half of the 1980s should be progressively less difficult to find.

The reasons are several, according to The Conference Board, a nonprofit economic research organization which has surveyed employment trends for the next 10 years in its monthly magazine "Across the Board."

THE MOST important of these is a progressive slowing in the growth of the work force.

At the beginning of the 1970s, an average two million new job seekers were entering the labor market every year.

The beginning of the next decade is expected to see the newcomers down to 1.4 million a year.

This, combined with continuing moderate growth in the Gross National Product (GNP)—which will stimulate expanded employment opportunities—means there should be proportionately fewer job seekers competing for jobs available.

LOOKING ONLY a few years ahead, "Across the Board" sees the unemployment rate down to 5 per cent or less, levels that "would have been regarded as unattainable or inflationary in 1977" and which should disprove those economic pessimists who, on the basis of the performance of the past several years, have been telling us that high unemployment is built into the U.S. economy.

Such an improved employment picture will indeed be good news for the nation's laboring millions, and for everyone with a stake in a healthy economy—which is all of us.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Soviets Make Mockery Of Good-Faith Pledges

WASHINGTON—The Soviet Union is continuing to violate the SALT agreements on nuclear arms, with hardly a peep of audible protest from the United States.

Revelations on this subject have come from several sources in the past—the respected journal, "Aviation Week," former Chief of Naval Operations Elmo Zumwalt and Maj. Gen. George F. Keegan, former chief of intelligence for the Air Force.

Now we have an even more comprehensive disclosure from another highly qualified spokesman—former Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird.

Writing in the December "Reader's Digest," Laird asserts that the Soviets have made a mockery of the SALT accords on several counts, pushing ahead with a military build-up and attempting to conceal these actions from the United States.

ALL THIS HAS occurred, moreover, even as negotiations have been in progress for new accords with Moscow that would require reliance on Soviet good faith.

"The evidence is incontrovertible," Laird says, "that the Soviet Union has repeatedly, flagrantly, and indeed contemptuously violated the treaties to which we have adhered.

"This evidence has been withheld from the Congress, the press, and the public.

"I believe there is no longer any excuse for denying the American people and their representatives facts whose suppression profits only our enemies."

PROTESTS FROM THE United States, and publicity concerning Moscow's violations, have been absolutely minimal.

Laird's disclosures on these matters confirm the earlier revelations of "Aviation Week" and others, but are additionally significant for two reasons:

They suggest not only that Soviet violations have continued under the Carter administration, but that they have "increased progressively."

Also, given Laird's status as a former GOP official and confidant of President Ford, they underscore the gravity of the cover-up that occurred under the previous Republican regime.

Laird tells us that "among some in the Ford administration, evidently, the desire to see detente work was so intense that they sought to suppress—or at least minimize the significance of—intelligence revealing Soviet violations.

"WHEN PRESIDENT Ford was asked at a press conference about the violations...he truthfully stated that he knew of no Soviet cheating. I promptly shared with him the intelligence that should have been brought to his attention much earlier."

In December 1975 it was revealed that Dr. Henry Kissinger, when serving as national security adviser to President Nixon, had suppressed dissemination of intelligence data showing Soviet violations.

As the New York Times judiciously phrased it, Kissinger had "arranged to limit the circulation of intelligence reports on Soviet violations."

IN OTHER WORDS, we have a continuing flow of evidence indicating the Soviets have simply ignored the restraints imposed upon them by the original SALT agreements, even as these have been hailed in Washington as auguries of global peace.

Mosow is rather clearly pursuing a strategy of arms superiority while we mark time and let our own defenses dwindle.

Rather than waking up to the peril that confronts us, however, our officials have bottled up the data concerning Soviet duplicity in order to keep the dream of "peace" alive.

The policy of detente, it seems, is dictating our perception of the facts, rather than the other way around.

It's time this whole affair was subjected to thorough investigation by the Congress.

Study In Courage And Integrity

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

America, Unorganized

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Late Friday afternoon, Jan. 6, a middle-level Pentagon bureaucrat named Dr. Percy Pierre flashed a green light that handed a defense contract to one outstretched tentacle of Japan's octupus-like Mitsubishi cartel, showing again how the U.S. often goes about global business in a pleasantly absent-minded daze.

Pierre, an Assistant Secretary of the Army, rejected congressional appeals against awarding this particular machine tool contract for the turret of the new XM-1 tank to Mitsubishi motors. That left two questions unanswered:

* Does it serve the national security to give another country U.S. defense production involving technology (in this case, machine tools) in critically short supply?

* Is it in the U.S. economic interest to award government contracts even a close ally whose international trade policies are under pressure from the Carter administration?

CONSIDERING U.S. requirements to hold down defense costs and avoid a protectionist war, the answer to both questions might have been yes.

Distressingly, however, there is no sign either question was ever asked by Pierre or, far more significantly, by any higher official.

In contrast to Japan, Incorporated, the handling of this case exposes America, Unorganized.

Chrysler Corp., which won the turret contract on the XM-1 tank, recommended the machine tools subcontract for Mitsubishi Motors, which is owned 15 per cent by Chrysler (and 84 per cent by Mitsubishi Heavy Industry).

Mitsubishi's bid was around $54.1 million, compared withe the second lowest bid of $6.4 million by Carlton Machine Tool Co. of Cincinnati.

When Rep. Willis Gradison of Cincinnati protested, followed by other Ohio Congressmen, the matter went to Dr. Pierre—a 39-year-old electrical engineer who began his first military post last May after six years as dean of engineering at Howard University.

PIERRE'S STUDY concentrated on one point: did the award of the subcontract violate the "buy-American" act? When he found it did not, the subcontract was routinely approved.

The question of supplying secret technology to Japan is brushed off by the Pentagon on grounds that the subcontract technically is with the oddly named Android Corp. of Madison Heights, Mich., "surrogate" American company for Mitsubishi.

But more importantly, no consideration was given to U.S. capability in tank production, revealed by the 1973 Mideast war to be far behind the Soviet Union's.

Placing reliance on Japan undercuts hopes for enhanced domestic tank production capability.

"THIS IS APPALLING," one former defense official told us. "I am sure that nobody in authority even considered this properly."

Indeed, answering a query from us, the official Pentagon spokesman replied the matter was decided by the Cincinnati project officer with the sole policy consideration, apart from low bid, being the buy-American act.

Actually, the spokesman was wrong, in view of Pierre's role. But the upper reaches of the Defense Department did not get involved.

Nor did the Pentagon even think of asking advice from the office of special trade representative Robert Strauss—a remarkable omission considering the current crisis of U.S.-Japanese trade relations.

Those relations are particularly sticky in the area of machine tools. Today's 21 per cent share of the U.S. machine tools market by foreign imports compares with 14 per cent just three years ago.

GRANTING DEFENSE contracts to Japan is dubious on broader economic grounds. Strauss is making another trip to Tokyo to press the Japanese again to restrain subsidized exports and expand restricted imports.

The American envoy whose government is awarding defense contracts to the Mitsubishi cartel must be viewed with puzzlement by his Japanese counterparts.

They could scarcely know that the tank turret decision was made well below Strauss's level by the anonymous Dr. Pierre.

Rep. Thomas Luken, representing a congressional district adjoining Cincinnati, found that out when he visited Pierre's Pentagon office Jan. 7. Pierre said no regulation had been broken, therefore the Japanese contract must go through.

Luken, a Democrat, having had enough of "the old Army game," sent a telegram to President Carter urging him to cancel the contract for Android-Mitsubishi in the national interest.

Any favorable response from the White House would signal new interest in giving America, Unorganized, a coherent national strategy capable of competing even with Japan, Incorporated.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Can We Keep It?

IN 1978 OUR energy crisis would fade—everything would be coming up roses—if we could look forward to solar energy.

Rooftop water heaters, space vehicles, etc., already use sun power. The Energy Research and Development Administration now has at least 193 residential and 31 nonresidential government-aided solar energy projects.

These include 10 office buildings, four schools, three hotels and one library.

To demonstrate solar energy, the ERDA has also chosen 34 residential buildings in 22 states and the Virgin Islands—part of ERDA's plan involving 1,300 residential and 200 nonresidential buildings by 1980.

THE LARGEST WILL be a $1 million central energy project at Trinity University, San Antonio. It will provide heat, hot water and air conditioning for a gymnasium and six dormitories.

And the Shell Oil Company, affiliated with a solar-power concern, tells me that by the year 2000, solar energy may supply 15 percent of our country's present energy demand.

The sun gives off energy at an astounding 564 million tons per second. This is about seven million times the generating capacity of all the United States power stations.

It is sending 200 billion megatons of pure, pollution-free energy down to earth. But only green plants are capable of turning it into useful energy.

IN THEORY, A solar energy system could provide about 20 percent of our needed energy. But it remains costly. For commercial use, the output would cost today about 400 times more than local utility-produced electricity.

Specialists prefer a solar farm, located in such places as the deserts of California, New Mexico, Texas, Utah, etc.

Immense lenses gather the sunlight, focusing on special pipes. The radiant energy, heating the pipes, makes 1,000-degree Fahrenheit temperatures possible.

The pipes contain a transfer heat fluid (liquid sodium) translatable into electric power. This is now done in breeder reactors.

But how to store the energy to practical use? Batteries, electronic chemicals, etc., are used. But specialists prefer liquid hydrogen to convert energy into fuel.

ANOTHER OPPORTUNITY looms—solar power satellites like those for weather, military intelligence, etc., orbiting continually in space.

Collecting the sun's energy 365 days a year, satellites could convert this into microwave energy by proven principles and beam it down to earth 24 hours a day at about six times the potential power of an earthbound solar farm.

A major challenge centers on improving the solar cells to 20 percent of theoretical possibility; resulting in a bigger solar satellite payload. Many believe this is the key toward solar energy in the future.

Ultimately, solar energy will enter its commercial stage. But that is a long way off in meeting the dangerous crunch which we call our energy crisis.

Lightly Speaking

President Carter calls it an energy program. Down in Texas, we call it a gasectomy.

Once upon a time a swinger was a fellow who had one fastened to the underside of the front porch roof.

You can tell the real race fans at the Indianapolis 500 Speedway. They're the ones who are looking at turbochargers instead of stripped down bodies.

JAY HARRIS:

A Peanuts Pinup?...

THAT CALENDAR on your desk or the one on the wall, or wherever, may be as up-to-date as tomorrow.

But, chances are it was conceived and possibly even printed and packaged a year or so ago.

At least, that is the story of a Texas-sized company, which turns out the daily reminders of when to pay the bills, see the doctor and overlook birthdays and anniversaries.

And, according to a spokesman for the Dallas office of Brown & Bigelow, which says it is the largest maker of calendars in the nation, not only are the 1978 products already sold, but those for 1979 are printed and are being distributed.

If that isn't enough to boggle the mind, then consider that artists are putting the finishing touches on designs already approved for 1980 while others are thinking up new ideas for 1981!

WE HAVEN'T seen one, but according to an item in The Dallas News, one of the company's big sellers for 1978 has been calendars featuring miniature doll houses.

Seems about three years ago, someone noted the new fad of collecting the mini-doll-units and decided that might get as much attention as a pinup type. It has.

Another favorite comes as no surprise. "We have been using Norman Rockwell on our calendars for the past 50 years," Don Wolfe, a director of the company's product planning and development in St. Paul, says.

Other items which catch the public's fancy feature Art Linkletter and his sayings from kids, food, and cats and dogs.

ALL OF WHICH is a commentary of sorts on the fellow credited with creating the calendar in the first place, one Julius Caesar.

And the one who updated it, Pope Gregory XVIII, who probably would blush in technicolor if he could see some of the big hits in some circles, including those with provocative girls wearing little more than a smile.

We had never really thought about it, but the calendar business, all over the world, is big business with a capital $$$. In the U.S. alone, it is a $340 million industry. It is estimated that up to one billion calendars a year are published, about four for every man, woman and bill collector in the nation.

Cost of calendars can range from a few cents to several dollars. They come to sit on desks, hang on walls, fit in wallets and pockets or serve as date books. Some people wouldn't be without one. Others abhor the thought.

TO US, EXCEPT for a plain, medium-sized one on the wall and a smaller standup one on the desk, we think of calendars as pieces of art or memorablia.

Recently, we received several in both categories. One was from the Canadian Embassy in Washington.

The fold-down front put it this way: "A Canadian Calendar for 1978, Showing Castors (also known as Beavers), feuilles D'erables (also known as Maple leaves), and other emblems, symbols and icons of Canada, along with commentary on their origins and uses.

Inside, one runs across this data: "The original Canadian beaver was six feet tall, with teeth the size of shovels. He scared few men, women or children, for there were few to scare. He lived in an underwater lodge the size of a ballroom and chopped down full-grown trees as if they were toothpicks.

"THAT WAS around ten thousaned years ago, and Canada had just melted out of the ice age.

"The Indians found a smaller beaver and adopted him as a clan emblem and model which he continues to this day—a good father, an industrious citizen, a faithful husband and a dam-good builder..."

And don't ask where the Beaver Hat came from!

The whole thing brings back memories of a journey to Canada for the world-famous Calgary Stampede some years ago...

Then there is the medium-sized wall calendar from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Japan. It depicts Japanese paintings from the 16th to the 18th Century.

Inside, on very good paper, are reproductions of such things as Autumn Grasses, Cormorant Fishing, Landscape With Sun and Moon, and other artworks of a time past.

An unusual feature is that the days of the months are strung out in two lines across the bottom of the page. In other words, the decor is the thing, not the date.

TWO OTHERS which rank high on our list come from "Beautiful Ireland" and the Republic of South Africa.

The one from Ireland depicts everything one might expect from the Emerald Isle, impressive scenery, rugged people, color. The one from the RSA is especially treasured since we have been there three times in as many years. It is one of the more impressive and faithfully depicts the scenery of the lovely nation.

There are scenes around Johannesburg, in the ancient Drakenburg mountains, sub-tropical Durban, along the "wild coast" and Capetown's fabled Table Mountain, not to mention jungle and industrial scenes—again a spur to warm memories of people and places.

No study of calendars would be complete without mention of the Snoopy calendar, Peanuts' 1978 Date Book, featuring all of Charles M. Schulz' favorite characters.

Some of the witticisms and philosophy are worthy of note.

For instance, Lucy shouts: "Life is going by too fast for me...Stop the Clock!" and Peanuts' observes: "Summer is almost over..summers always fly...Winters walk!" To which we add, if we didn't have calendars, would we know?

YOU ALSO CAN consider yourself a Seasoned Citizen if you recall just which of Fay Wray's several talents made her so well suited for the role in "King Kong." Credit her scream. So chilling and thrilling was Fay's lyrical terror that the moviemakers closed her up in a sound room after the picture was almost finished to let her scream at will so they could splice in a few more of her ripping punctuations here and there as needed.

Now it's claimed the largest city in the United States by far is not Jacksonville, Fla., nor Juneau, Alaska, but Honolulu, Hawaii. Most of it's water, please note.

Carter Gains 'Pluses' From Business, Labor

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of stories that assess President Carter's first year in office from the perspective of various segments of the American public. Today's story deals with the views of business and labor leaders.)

First In A Series

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a shaky beginning, President Carter ended his first year in office with a good deal of support from some key leaders of both business and labor.

Although there were some dissenters, this support seemed substantial enough to help get Carter's second year in office off to a good start.

Fears Unjustified

Labor leaders seem a little less enthusiastic in 1978 than they were a year ago when Carter took office, while business leaders say many of their early fears have proven to be unjustified.

Carter's retreat from plans to push for the elimination of some business tax breaks in 1978 brought a sigh of relief from many businessmen.

Carter won especially high marks from businessmen for opening lines of communication to the business community, while labor leaders praised his support for a big increase in the minimum wage, welfare reform proposals and support for changes in labor laws.

Among business leaders, there was praise for provisions of Carter's new tax program which are intended to stimulate business investment, and his commitment to streamlining cumbersome government regulations.

'Placid Period'

Irving S. Shapiro, head of the influential Business Roundtable and chairman of E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., said much of the controversy from Carter's first year in office should be over and that the stage is set for a "placid period" for Carter in 1978.

"They had their share of difficulties, but they came into the latter part of the year in reasonably good shape, avoiding some of the mistakes they made early in the year," he said in an interview.

Business leaders tended to give Carter better marks for the economy's performance in 1977, than did labor chieftains. Shapiro said he thought the economy under Carter was "functioning at a fairly decent level."

But George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, the nation's largest labor organization, criticized "the continued slack in the economy and the high rate of unemployment," which he said clouded the other Carter achievements during the year.

Meany said that while it is still too early to make a judgment on Carter, there were many "pluses" during his first year and that Carter has "brightened the land" with a sense of hope and a spirit of inspiration.

Business, Labor Differ

Not surprisingly, businessmen criticized Carter for some specifics that labor leaders praised.

Some business leaders, for example, disagreed with Carter's support for a higher minimum wage, while labor leaders singled this out for their praise.

Shapiro agreed that unemployment, which was at a three-year low of 6.4 percent in December, was a "big challenge" for Carter, along with reducing the rate of inflation. "It will take time, but progress can be made in that area," he said.

Another generally good assessment of Carter's first year in office came from John D. DeButts, chairman of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., who said "business viewpoints are being given a respectful hearing these days" in the White House as well as in Congress.

Among evidence of this, he said, were the administration's withdrawal of its $50 tax rebate proposal at mid-year and the administration's actions to protect American industry against unfair competition from imports.

DeButts heads the Business Council, an organization of top corporate executives that serves as a line of communication between government and the business community. The Business Roundtable, headed by Shapiro, advocates specific governmental policies.

Because of the prestige and influence of the two organizations in the business community, the support of Shapiro and deButts is of major importance to the Carter administration, just as is the support of Meany of the AFL-CIO.

But there are others with influence who did not feel Carter's 1977 performance was deserving of much praise.

Richard L. Lesher, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said chamber surveys reveal that most businessmen are disappointed in Carter. "There were a lot of promises, sometimes over-promises. Expectations were too high and delivery a little too low," he said in an interview.

Like Shapiro, Lesher said businessmen were made uneasy by Carter's blast at the oil industry for allegedly trying to sabotage the administration's energy bill. He also criticized administration support for the increased minimum wage and for labor law changes.

Wilson S. Johnson, president of the National Federation of Independent Businessmen, which has 520,000 small business members, said small-business men were "thrown a curve" by Carter's support for the minimum wage, and that they are distressed over his apparent retreat from his commitment to reduce the budget deficit and balance the budget.

"I feel very, very strongly that small business has not had the same consideration as labor, farmers, even big business," Johnson said in an interview. But he said Carter will deserve praise if he follows through on plans to reorganize the Small Business Administration to make it more effective.

One labor leader who had give nCarter early support was Terry Herndon, executive director of the National Education Association and its 1.7 million members, mostly school teachers. Herndon says he is "still reserving judgment" on Carter.

Herndon criticized the lack of progress on a bill to grant bargaining rights to public employees and on a separate Cabinet-level department of education, which the NEA wants.

However, it is highly unlikely that Carter could even fully satisfy all labor and all business leaders, simply because their stated needs often conflict and because major pressure groups rarely admit they are fully satisfied.

He probably has done well in a year to have established major support in both sectors.

DeButts, for one, said business influence on the administration will continue to depend on the merits of tis viewpoints and how well it presents them.

Russian Team Continuing Experiments

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet cosmonaut team aboard the Salyut 6 space station completed more experiments Sunday as two of the four men prepared to return to Earth after five days in orbit, Tass reported.

Cosmonauts Vladimir Dzhanibekov and Oleg Makarov are scheduled to travel home Monday in the Soyuz 26 capsule. They rocketed up to the space station Wednesday to resupply cosmonauts Yuri Romanenko and Georgi Grechko. Romanenko and Grechko will remain in orbit.

With the departure of Soyuz 26, the cosmonauts' three-part space station will be reduced to the Salyut 6 lab and the Soyuz 27 capsule.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, said the cosmonauts carried out a technical experiment Sunday "for the orientation and stabilization of the complex, consisting of an orbital station and two docked spaceships."

This was done "with the aim of optimizing the methods of control of complex space systems," Tass said. No further details were given.

The cosmonauts also planned to complete a Soviet-French biological experiment on the cell division processes of micro-organisms under the weightless conditions of space, Tass reported. The test samples were to be transferred to Soyuz 26 and returned to Earth for further study.

Two More Refugee Bodies Recovered

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — The recovery of two more bodies accounts for all 15 Vietnamese refugees from a boat that capsized during a storm off Malaysia, police said Sunday.

They said nine of the refugees drowned and six swam ashore after the disaster Saturday in the South China Sea near the Malaysian port of Terengganu, where the vessel had stopped for supplies.

Major Tax Filing Fiasco Corrected

By RAY DE CRANE

One of the major fiascos of last year's tax-filing season was the story on the Sick Pay Exclusion.

For years, employees who were absent from work because of a sickness or injury and whose pay was continued during this period of enforced absence, were permitted to exclude from taxable income as much as $100 a week.

Eighth In A Series

Although the 1976 Tax Act was not passed by Congress until September of that year, the lawmakers killed the Sick Pay exclusion retroactive to Jan. 1, 1976.

Literally hundreds of thousands of workers who were idled between January and September because of sickness or injury, and who had counted on this tax benefit, were denied its use.

Well after filing deadline, Congress reacted to the uproar that went up and passed a new law. The Sick Pay exclusion was continued for a full year, until Jan. 1, 1977.

The change will not affect anyone filing a 1977 return now. But the benefits can still be claimed by anyone who qualified in 1976 and were denied its use, or who neglected to claim it because it was then against the law.

There are still two years remaining in which claims for a refund may be made. If you had Sick Pay in 1976 and did not claim it on your last year's return, you should file an amended return, Form 1040X, and claim the benefit now.

But as of Jan. 1, 1977, the Sick Pay exclusion is gone for good. In its place is the Disability Pay exclusion.

Under its terms, the same $100 weekly maximum exclusion applies, but it can now be claimed only by employees under 65 who were forced into early retirement because of a total and permanent disability.

The payments they may exclude are limited to the payments received, or $100 a week, whichever is less.

If you are married, a joint return must be filed in order to claim the exclusion. Furthermore, the exclusion is reduced dollar-for-dollar by the amount the adjusted gross amount (including the disability income) exceeds $15,000. Thus, if the combined incomes of husband and wife on the joint return are $20,200 or more, there is no disability pay that may be claimed.

In addition, Form 2440 must be filed to claim the exclusion. A feature of Form 2440 is its requirements for a physician's certification to permanent and total disability.

TEN MURDERS — Pasco County Sheriff John Short, right, and deputy Tom Berlinger, left, examine a site 12 miles north of Tampa, Fla., where one of four bodies have been found. String Of Murders Puzzling To Police

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A month after New York's "Son of Sam" shot his first victim in 1976, a woman's body was found in a secluded area near here. Another body was found in a similar area, shot with a similar gun, last October, when Los Angeles' Hillside Strangler began his spree of killing.

While national attention was focused on the New York and Los Angeles murders, officials here have been trying to determine if nine Tampa Bay murders of striking similarity are the work of the same person.

Most of the victims were prostitutes, dancers or barmaids in bars and strip joints on the Dale Mabry strip that connects Tampa to MacDill Air Force Base. Most were found on lonely rural roads in the three-county area surrounding the city. All lacked personal transportation on the night they disappeared.

But police so far are reluctant to publicly link all the killings.

"We honestly don't know if it's one or a number of individuals involved in these deaths," Sgt. Ron Poindexter, a Hillsborough County detective assigned to the 25-member group that has been investigating the murders since October, said in a recent interview.

"To say one man did it wouldn't be truthful, and to say the killings are unrelated wouldn't be truthful," he said. "We just don't know."

"The girls are definitely being more careful about who they go with. There's some crazy person around," said Jill, a 20-year-old prostitute who said she was leaving the area because of the fear that pervades the collection of bars, all-night restaurants and motels.

Some of the women say police should do more to stop the killings. But police say the women's wariness of helping their antagonists has hindered the investigation.

"We're dealing with a small sect of people who work or frequent the strip," said Hillsborough Capt. John Cacciatore. "Some of these women may have solicted five men on the night they died and the last one may be the murderer. But no one is coming forward with information."

Some reports link as many as 12 deaths to the case.

Split Leaves Hurt Feelings In Adair Firm

HOUSTON (UPI) — Oil well disaster fighter Red Adair says he was surprised and hurt by the departure last month of his two chief lieutenants to start their own business.

Asger "Boots" Hansen and E.O. "Coots" Matthews announced a few weeks ago they were leaving Red Adair Oil Well Fires & Blowouts Control Co. to form se Boots & Coots Inc.

Adair was optimistic that younger hands would take the places of Hansen and Matthews, who were key men on important operations.

"It's like having a ballclub and your halfback quits you," Adair said. "Sometimes you find out your second-string player is better. I've got some young men who have been with me 12 or 14 years. They're experienced.

He said he doubted there were enough runaway oil and gas wells to support another operation of the same type.

"A lot of other people have tried to go into this business and failed," he said. "I will still be in business when they (Hunsen and Matthews) are out of business. They're going to have to root hog and root me out."

But observers said there is plenty of work for both companies and Hansen and Matthews, who have spent the month organizing and have yet to work their first job, said they expect to have their share.

"I don't see any problem getting jobs," Hansen said. "We been doing his work for him for the last 10 years. When companies called Red Adair for a job, they got me and Coots."

"People in the oil field know Boots and I do the work," said Matthews. "We are his competition and we plan on getting jobs."

Friends of all three have tried to remain neutral. One, who declined to be quoted by name, predicted a reunion.

"They're all great guys," the friend said. "They may flare up, but any one of them will give you the shirt off his back. Personally, I think they'll be back together again in a year."

Each side at first refused comment on the split of the firm, founded in 1959 and famous since for conquering runaway oil and gas wells in such a way that the wells could be reopened later.

In a recent interview, however, Adair said, "I didn't know a thing about it. You can't work with someone for 20 years and something like this not hurt you. I never let them down. I made them what they are today. I've been fair with them all my life."

Udair, 62, said the split arose from Hansen's and Matthew's dissatisfaction about a proposed new joint stock effort to be called Red Adair International. He said they became "greedy, demanding more" of a share than he offered.

Hansen and Matthews complained they were not treated fairly by a man reputed to have become a millionaire while keeping them on a payroll, albeit in the $100,000-plus bracket.

"When Red first started out, he talked about how we were going to do this and we were going to build something for our future, but he never wanted to turn loose of any of it," Hansen said.

Adair said he had never taken Hansen and Matthews in as partners before because there were no large amounts of stock involved.

"This is strictly a cash operation," he said. "As long as I sign the checks, I run the company. I'm not going to sit in my office and let someone chew me out. I told them if they thought they could do better, then hop to it."

Parents Forgive Daughter's Killer

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — "We love this special person from the bottom of our hearts," said Golden Bristol of the man who murdered her daughter.

The tiny housewife from Dearborn, Mich., confessed to a little nervousness as she spoke to a group of inmates in the prison chapel at California Men's Colony. She and her husband, Bob, had driven 2,000 miles to see their "special person," prisoner Michael Keeyes, who was convicted of murdering their daughter, Diane.

The body of Diane, then 20, was found in 1970 in San Diego's North Park area. She had been strangled. She had been selling encyclopedias door-to-door.

The Bristols said God led them on their mission, a journey of forgiveness that prompted their "friends and loved ones to shake their heads because they could not understand."

"We harbored no hatred, no revenge," Mrs. Bristol told the congregation of 60 prisoners Saturday night. "We knew God could make something good out of this pain."

Mrs. Bristol said that in 1970, when she and her husband received "the devastating news that our daughter Diane had been raped and brutally murdered, it cut like a knife into the depths of our souls. We had the normal human reaction of grief and anguish.

"Didn't I have the right to be filled with a red-hot hate? But where would it have gotten me? It wouldn't have brought my daughter back."

After Keeyes' imprisonment, the Bristols, a religious couple, began a correspondence with him through the Rev. Joe Mason, director of the Prison Mission Association in Riverside.

The special service was arranged by Keeye's prison buddy, Charles "Tex" Watson, a former member of Charles Manson's bloody cult. Watson, who is serving a life sentence in the 1969 Tate-LaBianca murders, is a student chaplain and had originally planned to conduct the service himself, but backed out because of the publicity the meeting inspired.

Keeyes first admitted to the Bristols that he didn't quite understand their act, told his fellow convicts that "people like the Bristols give meaning to the word 'forgiveness.' It's always comforting to know someone cares."

Then, choked by emotion, Keeyes turned to the Bristols and said, "God bless you, folks," then threw his arms around them both.

"You don't have to commit a horrible crime to be lost," Bristol told the inmates. "You just have to ignore Jesus Christ."

"What would make us the happiest," Mrs. Bristol said, "is when he (Keeyes) accepts Jesus Christ."

Saturday's unusual meeting was arranged by a prison missionary group, with the help of prison chaplain Stanley McGuire and Watson, who spoke to the Bristols by telephone last week.

McGuire said he realized many would consider the rendezvous bizarre, but said, "It's not strange in a spiritual sense, it's not odd at all."

"This was one of the greatest services we've ever had," he added. "You saw the power of God really working in human life tonight."

McGuire said that Keeyes had an attitude of contrition about the crime, adding that "If he hadn't, he could not have gone through all of this."

The San Diego judge who sentenced Keeyes to life imprisonment in 1973 said Keeyes was "cunning, calculating and callous — the most vicious killer I have encountered in my career."

"We view this person as one of value and worth," said Mrs. Bristol. "We are interested in him as a total person. Not for what he did, but for what he can become."

FACE OF A COWBOY

Walter Clifton of Star Route, Portales, N.M. is one of many good West Texas cowhands who drifted over into New Mexico and settled. A native of Roaring Springs, Clifton trapped one winter on the Matador Ranch and built a tank for Uncle Gus Stearns at Dumont, when he was a 13-year-old button. Later, he went to work for the "CV" part of the Mill Iron Ranch and from there to the "Bridle Bit" part of the Mill Iron. He broke horses around Amarillo and in New Mexico, worked for John Kidd and Esau Bilberry. Finally, Clifton filed on a section of land and made an "eating-living" breaking horses for neighbors.

Bus Crash Maims Many In Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — An interstate bus skidded off a highway in northern Colombia and plunged down a 30-foot-deep ravine, killing at least five passengers and injuring 22 others, police said Sunday.

The accident occurred Saturday near Medellin, Colombia's second largest city. Police said "mechanical problems" may have been the cause.

Congressman Finds Secret List Of IRS

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service made a secret list of 25 Idaho residents it considered "potentially violent toward Western Region IRS personnel," said Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho.

Hansen released copies of the list at a public hearing he conducted Thursday on the IRS.

Hansen recently accused the IRS of trying to purge Mormon agents, of investigating individuals who complained of high taxes and of planning armed door-to-door searches in Eastern Idaho in which agents would demand showing of tax returns.

He said the list of potentially violent persons was "a crazy overreaction in the agency" and "could actually cause a violation of your civil rights and maybe even a loss of your life."

He said the list was in a letter from F.R. Rowe, regional IRS inspector at San Francisco, to the district director at Boise.

Asked to comment, Phillip Sansotta, regional IRS director at Boise, said he had been told to check into several allegations by Hansen and file a report with Washington.

"I wish I could discuss that part of it. I cannot right now. What they want to do is go over the things themselves," he said.

IRS public affairs officer Leon Levine said in a telephone interview last week the agency does not tolerate harassment and discrimination of taxpayers.

"We have a nationwide procedure that provides for gathering by direct tax-related information. In this we have lots of safeguards built in. If any tax information gathered is contrary to laws and regulations, it would not be tolerated," he said.

Much of Hansen's hearing Thursday concerned capital gains tax problems of victims of the 1976 Teton Dam failure and flood who were reimbursed by the government for their property losses.

Hansen said the hearing was to determine what change may be needed in IRS rules and to examine attitudes of IRS employees toward helping flood victims.

Return Of Relics Aids U.S. Relations

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Hungary looks on the return of the Crown of St. Stephen as a sign of improving American-Hungarian relations and detente, Vice Premier Gyorgy Aczel told a meeting in parliament.

"The socialist Hungarian nation of today has received the ancient relic with appropriate dignity and respect," said Aczel, a member of the Hungarian Communist Party's Politburo. His speech, delivered Friday, was carried in Sunday newspapers here.

The 1,000-year-old crown and other royal regalia, symbols of Hungarian nationhood, were returned by the United States Jan. 6. They had fallen into the hands of U.S. troops at the end of World War II.

Truck Ban Eases Peking Street Jams

TOKYO (AP) — Peking authorities have imposed a daytime ban on trucks to ease traffic jams in the Chinese capital, the official Hsinhua news agency reported Sunday.

The ban took effect Jan. 10, Hsinhua said in a report received here. It said a new belt road for trucks is being built along the curve of the demolished city wall, and four large suburban truck stops are planned as well.

Without giving details, the agency also said the people of Peking have been organized to help policemen control traffic. Hsinhua said the city had five times as many motor vehicles in 1977 as in 1965.

A Capsule View Of Tastes, Interests And Attitudes

...in men of the year

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's dramatic Mideast peace initiatives caused him to be named Time magazine's man of the year of 1977. Here is some data on previous winners of the annual title:

•Time's first man of the year was aviator Charles Lindberg in 1927.

•The first woman of the year was the Duchess of Windsor, then Wallis Warfield Simpson, in 1936. Queen Elizabeth II (1952) was the only other woman to win sole possession of the title. In 1975, the award was shared by 12 prominent women.

•With the exception of Gerald Ford, every U.S. president since Franklin D. Roosevelt has been man of the year. FDR won the title a record three times — in 1932, 1934 and 1941.

•Richard Nixon was the only person to be named the man of two consective years, 1971 and 1972. (He shared the second title with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger) Ironically, 1973's man of the year was Judge John Sirica, whose probing of Watergate helped bring about Nixon's downfall.

•Three other presidents were twice named man of the year: Harry S Truman (1945 and 1948), Dwight D. Eisenhower (1944 and 1959) and Lyndon B. Johnson (1964 and 1967)

•Other two-time winners were British Prime Minister Winston Churchill (1940 and 1949), Soviet leader Joseph Stalin (1939 and 1942) and George C. Marshall, as general in 1943 and as secretary of state in 1947.

•Large groups to have recieved the title include the American fighting man (1950), the Hungarian freedom fighter (1956), U.S. scientists (1960), the 25-and-under generation (1966) and the Middle Americans (1969).

...in film awards

Woody Allen's 'Annie Hall' appears to be the critics' choice as best film of 1977. Both the National Film Critics Society and the New York Film Critics' Circle voted the romantic comedy thir film of the year, while the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures ranked it second after 'The Turning Point.'.

Here are other awards handed out by the three groups:

Best actor: Art Carney for 'The Late Show' (National Film Critic), John Travolta for 'Saturday Night Fever' (National Board of Review), John Gielgud for 'Providence' (Critics' Circle).

Best actress: Diane Keaton for 'Annie Hall' (National Film Critics, Critics' Circle), Anne Bancroft for 'The Turning Point' (National Board of Review).

Best supporting actor: Edward Fox for 'A Bridge Too Far' (National Film Critics), Tom Skerritt for 'The Turning Point' (National Board of Reveiw), Maximillian Schell for 'Julia' (Critics' Circle).

Best supporting actress: Ann Wedgeworth for 'Handle With Care' (National Film Critics), Diane Keaton for 'Annie Hall' (National Board of Review), Sissy Spacek for 'Three Women' (Critics' Circle).

Best director: Luis Bunuel for 'That Obscure Object of Desire' (National Film Critics, National Board of Review), Woody Allen for 'Annie Hall' (Critics' Circle).

Each organization also listed its top runners up in the best picture category.

Both the National Film Critics and the New York Critics Circle ranked 'That Obscure Object of Desire' and 'Close Encounters of the Third Kind' in second and third places. Leading also among National Board of Review members were 'Annie Hall,' 'Julia,' 'The Late Show,' 'Saturday Night Fever,' 'Equus,' 'The Picture Show Man' and 'Harlan County, USA.'

If all this isn't confusing enough, wait until the Academy Awards are handed out in the spring.

...on weight

American men and women gained a total of 320 million pounds over a recent 10-year-period, according to a government survey. The report disclosed that the typical adult male weighed four pounds more at the end of the decade than he did at its beginning, while the typical adult female put on one pound.

According to The World Almanac, these are the average weights of Americans of average build and height (5 feet 9 inches for men, 5 feet 3 inches for women):

Age	Men's Weight	Women's weights
18-24	164	132
25-34	174	139
35-44	179	148
45-54	177	150
55-64	178	153

The typical man is 20 to 30 pounds overweight, while the typical woman carries around 15 to 30 excess pounds.

...in ports

The romantic days of clipper ships and river steamboats are long past; nearly all the great transoceanic liners have been retired. But the seas, rivers and waterways continue to bear a large portion of U.S. commerce.

According to The World Almanac, leading U.S. ports in 1975 commerce were:

Port	Commerce (short tons)
1. New York	177,814,618
2. New Orleans	140,409,268
3. Houston	83,674,039
4. Baton Rouge	60,225,734
5. Baltimore, channels	52,661,448
6. Philadelphia	52,029,803
7. Norfolk, Va.	49,742,717
8. Chicago	42,589,058
9. Tampa	39, 857,660
10. Corpus Christi	35,487,454

...in basketball

Oh, to be young, tall and athletic — if only for one basketball season. The National Basketball Association's highest paid players earn as much in a single year as many Americans do in an entire lifetime.

Here are the estimated salaries of the NBA's top moneymakers:

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Los Angeles Lakers	$625,000
Pete Maravich, New Orleans Jazz	600,000
Bob McAdoo, New York Knicks	500,000
Julius Erving, Philadelphia 76ers	500,000
David Thompson, Denver Nuggets	500,000
Bob Lanier, Detriot Pistons	450,000
George McGinnis, Philadelphia 76ers	450,000
Ernie DiGregorio, Los Angeles Lakers	450,000
Bill Walton, Portland Trail Blazers	400,000
Rick Barry, Golden State Warriors	400,000

...in children's books

That a book doesn't have to contain dirty or polysyllabic words to be a bestseller has been amply demonstrated by the success of such childhood heroes as the Cat in the Hat, the Wizard of Oz and Charlotte the Spider. Here is a list of this century's books from '80 Years of Bestsellers: 1895-1975':

1. 'Green Eggs and Ham,' Dr. Seuss (1960)
2. 'One Fish, Two Fish, Red Fish, Blue Fish,' Dr. Seuss (1960)
3. 'Hop on Pop,' Dr. Seuss (1963)
4. 'Dr. Seuss's ABC,' Dr Seuss (1963)
5. 'The Cat in the Hat,' Dr. Seuss (1957)
6. 'The Wonderful Wizard of Oz,' L. Frank Baum (1960)
7. 'Charolette's Web,' E.B. White (1952)
8. 'The Cat in the Hat Came Back,' Dr. Seuss (1958)
9. 'The Little Prince,' Antoine de Saint-Exupery (1943)
10. 'The Little House on the Prairie,' Laura Ingalls Wilder (1953 ed.)
11. 'The Little House in the Big Woods,' Laura Ingalls Wilder (1953 ed.)
12. 'My First Atlas,' Hammond (1959)
13. 'Love and the Facts of Life,' Evelyn Duvall and Sylvanus Duvall (1950)
14. 'Egermeier's Bible Story Book,' Elsie E. Egermeir (1923)
15. 'Go Ask Alice,' Anonymous (1971)

...in teen hair

If your teen-age daughter seems to spend half her life washing her hair, she's not alone. A recent poll by Seventeen magazine revealed that the average adolescent girl washes her hair 5.3 times a week — and 42.7 percent of those surveyed shampoo seven times a week or more.

Here are other highlights from Seventeen's hair care survey:

•Girls are wearing their hair shorter today than when the magazine made a similar survey in 1975. One-quarter now wear their hair at chin length, and another 27.1 percent have hair of eartip length or shorter. Two years ago, almost 70 percent had hair of shoulder length or longer.

•The typical teen girl spends $2.51 a week for hair care products.

•Hair spray, hair colorants and permanents are nearly two times more popular among teenagers today than they were two years ago.

•Nearly all the survey participants — 93.5 percent — have hair dryer at home. Some 71.3 percent have heated styling rods (curling irons) and 45 percent have electric roller kits.

•Leading hair problems among the teen girls are: oiliness (42.6 percent), split ends (38 percent), lacks body (29.1 percent), and dryness (20.1 percent).

•More than three-fourths of the respondants wash their hair in the shower. the second most popular shampooing site was the sink, followed by the bathtub.

•Leading type of shampoo among teen girls is a non-alkaline (ph balance) formula. Following in popularity are: oily hair shampoo, baby shampoo, herbal, shampoo for regular-normal hair, fruit fragrance, anti-dandruff, protein and natural-organic.

...at the cemetery

Anthropologists tell us the practice of marking the graves of the dead has been around for more than 20,000 years. Here are some more recent facts about burials from the Monument Industry Information Bureau:

—Three-quarters of those questioned in a recent poll said they want memorials for their own graves. But more than 90 percent want them for the graves of their loved ones.

—Most people put off buying monuments until the need arises. But 56 percent agree that purchasing memorials prior to death would significantly reduce family emotional pressure.

—Workmanship was the most important consideration in selecting a monument for 79 percent of those questioned. Following in importance were price, material and design.

—The least expensive type of monument is a flat marker, which usually costs between $100 and $700. The prices of upright monuments begin at $300, while a family mausoleum will run you at least $6,000.

—Persons aged 35 years or older made 82 percent of all monument purchases.

—Buying monuments is more often than not women's work. Largely because of their longer lifespans, women make 57 percent of all monument purchases.

Unique Library Reflects History Of Macao Enclave

MACAO (UPI) — Few cities claim their libraries as a major attraction but even the bookworms have gone through the Macao National Library cover-to-cover.

Just off the main square of this picturesque Portuguese enclave on the southern coast of China sits Leal Senada, an impressive late 18th-century building and site of the library.

Leal Sanada is replete with European charm — ceramic passageways, a gargoyled garden and teak walls that creep 30 feet up to hand-carved ceilings dotted with brass chandeliers.

Until 1835 Leal Senada housed Macao's Senate and thereafter the municipal chambers, now including the National Library which overflows with 70,000 books.

On dark teak shelves sit worm-eaten volumes, most of them gilt and leather bound, in English, French, Portuguese and Latin — some dating back 450 years.

The library's director, Dr. Henrique Senna-Fernandes, explained the hodge podge collection, an odd variety of tomes ranging from Portuguese Catholic catechisms to vintage French telephone directories, was formed.

"In the old days the wealthy families here all had private libraries. As wealth diminished [illegible] fortunes were lost," he said, "[illegible] the older books came here."

No Dewey Decimal System desecrates this sacristy for book browsers. "The Brewing Industry — A Book on Business," printed in London, rests next to "Mon Jardin," a romantic French guide to gardening written in the 19th century.

An elderly Chinese librarian helped locate an 18th-century volume on human anatomy. It was stacked with atlases, she said, because they're the same size.

In rough stacks in front of the well-worn shelves stands what Senna-Fernandes says is one of the world's rarest collections of pre-revolution books on China.

It includes a directory of famous families of old Shanghai, a description of court life by an empress' lady in waiting, poetry, novels and countless documentaries of life under the Chinese warlords.

"Now the library is used mostly by housewives, students and civil servants," said SennaFernandes. "Some students come from overseas to do research on China and religion. Last year a student of Chinese snuff bottles did research here."

"I shouldn't be the library director," said Senna-Fernandes, who has a private legal practice and is headmaster of the 100-year-old Marshall School. "But the governor appointed me, so what could I do?

"Only in Macao..." he added with a smile and a shrug.

"The library is too small now," he said. "We need a new one, but without air conditioning. It would ruin the books. They've existed under these conditions (extreme heat and humidity) for centuries, some of them."

Although he favors growth and expansion, Senna-Fernandes feels progress is hurting Macao, a lazy little outpost on the South China Sea that traditionally has served as a haven for short-term tourists from Southeast Asia's more hectic cities.

"During the last five years construction has been destroying the old city. There is no dignity to the new buildings," he said, looking out 12-foot-high windows at the mix of Portuguese colonial and new tiled box buildings along Avenida de Almeida Ribeiro, one of Macao's busiest streets. "This is my only objection to progress."

Mayor Glasscock Seeking Funding

HONDO, Texas (UPI) — Mayor Woody Glasscock, who drew national headlines last year attempting to get federal funds for a civic center, now is applying for $250,000 in government funds for a flood control project.

During the city's unsuccessful bid for funding last year, Glasscock wrote a tongue-in-cheek letter to President Jimmy Carter requesting hardcore unemployed persons who would not work be sent to Hondo. Glasscock said in the letter the town could not get federal funds because its unemployment rate was too low.

Of the latest funds request, Glasscock remarked: "We probably won't get it. The bureacrats said last time we had a lack of need."

Glasscock has announced he will run for Congress in the Democratic primary race for the seat to be vacated by Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, who is running against Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

Japan Honors Youth With Annual 'Day'

TOKYO (AP) — Japan observed its annual "Coming of Age Day" on Sunday in honor of the 1,520,000 youths who in the past year turned 20, the nation's legal age of adulthood.

The Statistics Bureau of the prime minister's office said that of those reaching 20 some 770,000 were men and 750,000 women.

Roy Rogers Okay Following Surgery

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) — Cowboy star Roy Rogers was "recovering quite nicely" Sunday from open-heart surgery, said a spokeswoman for Little Company of Mary Hospital.

"He had a very good night," said Eileen Durkee, nursing supervisor. "He is in the cardiac recovery room and is recovering quite nicely."

Rogers, 66, had triple bypass surgery Saturday to clear a blocked artery in his heart. Dr. George Broder, who performed the operation, said the singer-actor had "a very strong heart."

Vermont Town Home For Trapp Family

STOWE, Vt. (UPI) — "How do you solve a problem like Maria?" sang the perplexed nuns in "The Sound of Music." The answer has yet to be found.

At 72, Maria remains an unsolved problem. She rips around Vermont's Green Mountains in her tiny aquamarine car, hikes, swims, rides horses and still has the strong-willed spark that made her life story in the musical one of the most beloved in stage and screen history.

Broken Arm

"I was a wild creature," Maria recalled while sitting in her study, her newly broken arm in a sling. "Julie Andrews and Mary Martin were too gentle — like girls out of Bryn Mawr."

The tourists who flock to the Trapp Family Lodge, a ski resort, like religious pilgrims do not want the answer to the problem.

Maria said she was "quite fed up" with the publicity the family drew until an incident a few years ago.

"A father of a young family said to me, 'This is the highlight of our vacation. We saved for a whole year; now you have made the whole trip.' In a time like ours, so lacking in joy, if I can bring real joy just by stopping and smiling, it is a privilege."

Modern Fairy Tale

The story of the musical family is a modern day fairy tale. It began in Salzburg, Austria, in the 1920s and 1930s when the young Maria was sent to take care of widower Baron Georg von Trapp's seven children. The convent girl and the navy captain fell in love, married and had three more children.

The family first sang together for fun, but after winning a music festival began to tour European stages.

Von Trapp, who did not sing professionally with the family, had lost his money when his bank failed. At times, the family literally sang for their supper.

Hitler's Rise

When Hitler rose to power, von Trapp, who had been awarded the Austrian equivalent of the Congressional Medal of Honor in World War I, refused a position in the German navy.

Rather than face an uncertain future, he took his family to America, where they were scheduled for a concert tour.

Unlike the film version, which shows the family leaving the country in a dramatic dash over the mountains, they went to Italy by train and later took a ship from Norway to America.

If a film sequel were made, the camera would pan the lush Green Mountains surrounding Stowe and focus on the browngabled Trapp Family Lodge sitting atop 1,500 acres of crosscountry ski trails.

Familiar Stowe Figure

Maria, almost always in traditional Austrian costume, is a familiar figure in Stowe. She wore a red skirt and sweater, which she called "civilian clothes," for her interview, brushing off the importance of the fractured arm.

"It was incredibly stupid," she said. "I was walking toward the house with a young girl I had invited for lunch. A car drove by and a person asked for my picture. I turned around and said, 'But let me get in the sun.' I then fell into nothing — a ditch! I leaned against the car and said, 'Please take the picture now.'"

Maria is constantly written up in magazines and asked for speaking engagements. The message of her story, she said, is how one family, faced with a crisis, followed the will of God.

"I always told my children, 'Find the will of God and do it,' even in the little things," she said. "Our life consists of living minute by minute. Someday a big minute will come and you must be prepared."

Baron von Trapp

Baron von Trapp died in 1947 before seeing any of his children marry. As in the film, the "captain," as he was called, used a boson's whistle to call his children from various parts of their Salzburg estate. But unlike the film portrayal, "He was kindness personified," said daughter Eleonore. "He was not a marionette, he was a very loving person."

According to Eleonore, or "Lorli," as she is known, the captain was reluctant to see his family perform but accepted it as God's will that they sing for others.

"It almost hurt him to have his family on stage, not from a snobbish view but more from a protective one," she said.

The children, from oldest to youngest, are Rupert, Agathe, Maria, Werner, Hedwig (deceased), Johanna, Martina (deceased), Rosemarie, Eleonore and Johannes.

Rupert is a doctor in Hadley, Mass. Agathe runs a kindergarten in Glyndon, Md. Maria is a missionary in New Guinea. Werner owns a dairy farm in Waitsfield, Vt. Johanna lives in Austria. Rosemarie works in an international house in Townsend, Md. Eleonore, a housewife, lives near Werner. And Johannes is general manager of the lodge. There are 27 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Although the family is often pictured en masse, Johannes says, "We are all individuals. We resent being stereotyped."

A forester by profession, Johannes, 38, created the successful cross-country ski program at the lodge.

The youngest of the flock, Johannes said he found singing great fun. "By the time I was 12, I had traveled around the world.

"We were a damn fine ensemble, highly disciplined," he said.

He said the family does not sing together any more, and hopes the second generation of Trapps will "do their own thing."

According to Johannes, the movie had no real effect on the lodge business. The 54-room lodge had a 93 percent occupancy rate last winter and takes up to 900 skiers on a busy day.

State Suit Annoying

A pending state suit against Johannes, his mother and sister, Maria, involves "a small amount of money and a great annoyance," Johannes said.

The state is seeking $26,000 in unpaid state income taxes from the three for the years 1964, 1965 and 1966. State officials said the matter is strictly an "accounting procedure" and does not indicate any kind of fraud."

Although singing was fun for Johannes, Rupert, 66, remembers it as hard work.

"It wasn't easy ... we practiced four or five hours a day," he said in his Massachusetts home.

But when listening to a record of the family singing 16th and 17th century madrigals, Rupert became misty-eyed.

The von Trapps officially disbanded as a singing group in 1956, years after Rupert struck out on his own. He earned a medical degree at the University of Innsbruck in 1938, and later was drafted into the army to work as a medic. He received another medical degree from the University of Vermont when his Innsbruck credits were not accepted and began his general practice in Adamsville, R.I.

According to Rupert, "The Sound of Music" was "all wet." It portrayed him as a girl.

Lubbock Woman Reports Rape, Shooting Try

An 18-year-old Lubbock woman told police Sunday she was raped at gunpoint by a man who drove her to an uninhabited area of town and then tried to shoot her when she fled.

The woman told officers she had been at a city club with the man and some friends earlier in the night, but after the assailant had taken everyone home but her about 8:15 a.m. Sunday, he asked if she would go to a store with him before he took her home.

She agreed, she told the officers, but when they passed the store, and the man kept driving, she said she became worried and tried to leave the car.

After arriving at a vacant area of town, he told her to be quiet and began making advances, she said.

She jumped from the car, but fell and was forced to return to the vehicle when the man reportedly pulled a gun and fired at her as she lay there.

After raping her, she told police, the man drove her to an Oak Street and Weber Drive address and let her go.

Police were looking for a named suspect late Sunday.

Earlier Sunday, officers who stopped a vehicle for traffic violations eventually arrested four persons for possession of marijaana.

Officers said they noticed a strong smell coming from the car when they pulled it over. Upon checking, the officer reportedly found traces of a substance believed to be marijuana inside the vehicle, but let the occupants leave without arrest.

While the officer was checking the inside of the vehicle, however, someone allegedly had dropped a plastic bag of marijuana outside the automobile.

The car was stopped again and all four occupants were arrested.

Police also arrested a 17-year-old man and an 18-year-old man for possession of marijuana after officers stopping the auto they were in for a traffic violation reportedly watched a plastic bag being thrown from one of the vehicle's windows.

A 51-year-old man, Juan Flores of 2306 Ave. H No. 21, told police he was stabbed in the hand about 9:45 p.m. Saturday by a man who entered a 13th Street cafe to complain that the man's son was dating his daughter.

Burglars, many of whom appear to have needed television sets to watch Sunday's Super Bowl classic, made large hauls from Lubbock residences.

Television sets were reported stolen from the homes of Robert Gibson Jr., of 2410 E. 9th St., Pete Elias of 4806 Detroit Ave. and Adrena Joyce Marks of 1607 35th Place.

Stereo systems were taken from the homes of Dennis Munger of 2806 20th St. rear, Janice Rogers of 1706 Cherry St. and Vickie Edwards of 3013 Harvard St.

Sheldon Sedberry of a 2901 Ave. A business told police someone took $122 worth of clothing from his firm between 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Arthur Timmons of 3405 33rd St. reported the theft of $100 of old coins from his home early in December.

Mike Ray Knox of Levelland told officers his car was parked outside a Slide Road business Saturday when someone removed $195 worth of leather goods from inside.

Consecrations Set By Anglican Body

DENVER (AP) — Breaking away from the Episcopal Church, the presently forming Anglican Church in North America plans to consecrate its first bishops Jan. 28 in Denver.

Among the bishops-elect to be consecrated is the Rev. James. O. Mote of Denver's St. Mary's church, the first parish to split from the Episcopal Church in the current protests over its ordination of women.

A score or so of parishes have taken similar steps. Identities of the present church bishops who will consecrate the break-away bishops have not been disclosed. Church tradition requires at least three bishops in good standing to consecrate other bishops.

Jury Pondering Photography Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal court jury resumed deliberations Sunday in Berkey Photo's $300 million anti-trust suit against the giant Eastman Kodak Co. The case went to the jury Saturday after 115 days of trial.

Berkey claims Kodak had an unlawful monopoly in the amateur photography market that was gained in part by charging lower prices for flash products sold in Kodak "kits" and through illegal combinations with other firms in restraint of trade. If the jury decides in Berkey's favor, a separate proceeding would be held to decide a damages amount.

Canal 'Fact Squad' To Begin Campaign

CONCORD, N.H. — Gov. Meldrim Thomson, chairman of the national Conservative Caucus, says a "fact squad" of conservatives will begin a nationwide campaign Monday to fight ratification of the proposed Panama Canal treaties.

Swimsuit Maker Paid, Olympic Panel Told

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission has told the U.S. Olympic Committee that coaches who chose swimsuits for the U.S. team got substantial sums of money from the manufacturer selected as the official supplier for the past 14 years, it was learned Sunday.

The agency told the committee the situation could appear as a conflict of interest, which in turn "could have the potential for undermining the respect for amateur athletics and the fairness of commercial competition."

The case was disclosed by a newsletter "FTC Watch," which obtained letters sent by the commission to the U.S. Olympic Committee and to lawyers representing the swimming suit company, Speedo International Limited of Palo Alto, Calif.

The letters, made available to UPI, show the FTC told the company on Jan. 3 it had conducted an anti-trust investigation and was closing the case because it felt no action by the government was warranted. It told the firm, however, that it was turning over some of the information it uncovered to the U.S. Olympic Committee.

In a letter to Col. F. Don Miller, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee in New York, the FTC said the situation "may give rise to the appearance of a conflict of interest."

The letter adds:

"Information provided to the FTC in the course of this investigation indicates that the U.S. Olympic Committee selects team uniforms for both the men's and women's swim teams representing the United States in Olympic competition.

In each Olympic games since 1964 the suit chosen for both the men's and the women's swim teams has been Speedo.

"In 1973, when Speedo was selected as the men's and women's uniforms for the 1976 Olympic games there were at least seven coaches paid substantial stipends by Speedo to serve on the swim suit selection committee. In addition, each of the six coaches for the 1976 men's and women's Olympic swim teams were also paid by Speedo.

"Though this situation may have no effect on the team suit selected, it creates the appearance of a possible conflict of interest which may be harmful to both the integrity of the U.S. Olympic Committee and to the continuation of competition between the manufacturers of racing suits. Winning a medal in the Olympic Games brings high honor to both the amateur athlete and to the U.S. Olympic Committee.

"At the same time, however, the publicity given to the swimmers benefits the company whose equipment is used as the U.S. team uniform. If this commercial advantage were perceived to be the result, however indirect, of payments to some members of the selection committee this could have the potential for undermining the respect for amateur athletes and the fairness of commercial competition."

The agency told the committee that it believes any person who receives any kind of compensation from equipment manufacturers should be banned from participating on any Olympic committee panel which determines what equipment is used.

Levelland Youth, Stabbed At Dance, Reported Better

A-J Correspondent

LEVELLAND — A 15-year-old Levelland youth was in serious condition in Lubbock's Methodist Hospital late Sunday with stab wounds reportedly suffered during a fight here late Saturday.

Levelland authorities were still investigating the episode Sunday, but said Devan Martinez was transferred from Levelland's Cook Memorial Hospital to the Lubbock facility late Saturday in critical condition.

His condition had improved to serious Sunday as had the condition of another youth injured in the same altercation. Cecil Almeida, 17, of Levelland was being treated for his wounds in Cook Memorial Hospital Sunday.

Authorities said the two were wounded in an argument over a table at a Levelland dance at the county fair grounds about 10 p.m. Saturday. The two were trying to seat themselves at the table when another man objected and pulled a knife, police said.

The black-footed ferret, a small furry animal related to the mink and the common European ferret, has black feet and masked eyes like a raccoon.

Sir W.S. Gilbert, English poet and playwright of Gilbert and Sullivan operetta fame, was born on Nov. 18, 1836.

Business & Industrial Review

TYPICAL OF LOCAL INSTALLATIONS — Robertshaw operating automation for buildings, as shown here in part, is one of the available services and products from A & C Alarm, a total concept Lubbock firm.

Fire, Security, Burglary Detection Systems Among A & C Alarm Services

"We cannot conceive of anyone who could not use one or all of the services of the A & C Alarm Co., Inc., total concept corporation involved in all phases of building security and construction."

After all, the business of this modern, progressive firm at 4606 34th St., phone 792-2381, includes the security and fire alarm industry, sound and clock systems, temperature control, automation, computers and closed circuit TV areas.

And note these recent forward steps:

A entirely new radio dispatching system has been installed to speed company operations through its mobil units.

And all-new PBX equipment has been installed in its answering service, making for more efficient operation at even less cost for the customer!

Also, A & C is adding complete secretarial service, beginning in February!

Established back in April of 1976, the locally owned corporation takes pride in its products, its services and its ownership. Directors include Pat Custer, president and chairman of the board; George Miller, James M. Mangum, Mike Thomas, Russ Bedell, Robert R. Norris and C.B. Carter.

Professional Approach

Custer was chief engineer for a security construction company for three years and also marks five years with a nationally known manufacturing corporation.

Qualified personnel is a big factor in the A & C Alarm Co. success and service record. Professionals head every operation.

Wayne Sullivan handles the Robertshaw temperature control operations. Previously with a large national temperature control company, he heads up the A & C contract sales and client negotiations. A longtime Lubbockite, he is a Texas Tech graduate.

Russell Bedell is vice president and operations manager. He had worked for a national security and temperature control company for five years before joining A & C. He is in charge of the technical aspects and engineering, supervising the installers. He is a graduate in engineering from Texas Tech.

Lease Or Purchase

Both purchase and lease arrangements are available at A & C Alarm Co. which maintains a 24-hours emergency service, monitoring calls around the clock. (A computer printout of all incoming calls is maintained.)

Also, the firm owns a subsidiary corporation, Associated Design Industries, a Robertshaw temperature control licensee.

Another subsidiary company is Tele-Entry of West Texas, making available Tele-Entry, the telephone controlled pre-entry security hot line said by the firm to work better and cost less than any system on the market today.

Qualified Staff

Engineers with degrees design and supervise installations at A & C Alarm Co., Inc. It maintains state licenses and provides a most, most comprehensive service to the commercial and residential community with actually all types of detection systems.

"May we have the privilege of explaining and showing in detail how one or more of our services and work for you?"

PROFESSIONALISM, LATEST EQUIPMENT FACT AT A & C

Cinderella Beauty School, Pivot Point Affiliate, Invites Inquiries

"Have a beautiful future . . . the Pivot Point way . . . at Cinderella Beauty School, located one block west of Slide Road, two blocks north of South Plains Mall, at 5401 Aberdeen Ave."

"Choosing the right profession is all-important," points out Winnie Vaughn, owner. "You want one that offers financial security, independence, prestige and the fulfillment of making others attractive and happy.

"Too often, people allow productive years to pass and settle for an ordinary income. That's why we point with pride to our graduates and new enrollees who have made the wise decision and have aimed for higher goals . . . competent professionals in the rewarding field of hair designing.

"Because of our affiliation with Pivot Point International, we can offer you the perfect blend of cosmetology and education, our complete, comprehensive curriculum and the exclusive Pivot Point Training. Pivot Point is highly reputed in the beauty industry and is recognized as the leader and authority in the educational field of cosmetology."

At Cinderella Beauty School one is taught this outstanding program by a staff of most qualified cosmetology instructors.

"The end results will be a supremely competent You!"

"Learn faster and perform better in the shortest possible time" is the invitation of Winnie Vaughn and staff, phone 792-4439.

"Our approved Pivot Point school teaches the Pivot Point International Scientific Approach to Hair Design Program."

"It is pointed out that Pivot Point students receive exclusive advantage. You become a member of the International Hair Designers Club, the largest of its type sponsored by world champions and leading educators."

Pivot Point Student Package

"As a club member, you receive the Pivot Point student package, a complete learning library of book courses, with photos, describing each step to perform all facets of hair designing and hair cutting. Your book course includes The Scientific Approach to Hair Design book, Five Popular Hair Cuts book, Fourteen Classic Hair Styles book, and Charisma I Techniques book."

'Plus Aura'

"Plus Aura is the ultimate hair design course with each month one learning a completely new course in women's and men's services: form designs, perming, precision cutting, coloring, air waving, make-up and more. It is everything the modern hair designer must know. In addition you receive a Hair Designer Club card, club pin and international certificate. You will be taught the complete cosmetology program by your teachers, with the incomparable Pivot Point audio and visual aids."

Post-Graduate Benefits

"Only Pivot Point graduates receive a certificate good for two tuition-free, stimulating Advance Hair Designing classes, work hundreds of dollars," according to Winnie Vaughn of the local school. The training can be taken at one's convenience, up to two years after graduation.

"You become eligible to further your talents to become a Pivot Point Master Hair Designer, the beauty world's ultimate goal. Through progressive degrees of specialized training, it all adds up to the most rewarding and exciting beauty training you've dreamed possible.

"Enroll now; come in and talk to our registrar who will be happy to answer your questions and help you start on a lifetime career of beauty. Or, if more convenient, we will be happy to answer your questions over the phone, 792-4439 or 792-4430."

Price Slashes Emphasized In Hagood's January Clearance

January Clearance is underway, beginning today, at Hagood's Plants, Crafts & Gifts, the "different" shop at 83rd Street at Indiana Avenue.

Very, very good savings have been arranged in this Clearance Sale that comes soon after the shop's first anniversary.

Many items are marked at one-half price during the event, with scores of others at 20 per cent and 30 per cent reductions.

All Christmas-related decorations are at half price.

Remember — the sale starts today, so the suggestiion is "to come early for best selection".

Workshops Loom

While at Hagood's, in its big, modern building, it would be well to note its several advantages, even other than the diversified stock.

Workshops are held periodicly, with these in February to include "gold leafing" and "windmills".

Special workshops are planned on mini and full size canvas, for the oil enthusiast.

Tole classes also are conducted.

One should inquire for full details regarding date and other pertinent information regarding these popular workshops.

Gift Selection

Among the stock items noted in the attractive shop are music boxes and gorgeous candles in the gift department, Bucilla and Elsa Williams Needle Crafts, plaster art, scads of macrame supplies, decoupage boards and more.

A very good stock of artists' and craft supplies is stocked.

Lawn, Garden Needs

Also . . . it is time to plan ahead to spring and summer outdoor activities; and Hagood's carries a good selection of outdoor lawn and plant accessories including fertilizers.

A special invitation is extended to attend the January Clearance Sale, not only profiting but becoming acquainted with the type shop that is Hagood's, with so very much to offer.

Remember, Hagood's is in new, extensive and attractive quarters at 83rd Street at Indiana Avenue, phone 795-0520. Master Charge and Visa purchases are welcomed.

PROVOCATIVE STOCK, MEANINGFUL SALE — Billie Hagood of Hagood's Plants, Crafts & Gifts, is shown with a segment of the wide stock there. Note the needlepoint, the many gift items, etc., with these seen as especially good buys during the January Clearance Sale.

FACILITY PRIDES IN 'PLUS BENEFITS'

'Good Life For Its Residents' Seen Foremost Quaker Manor Consideration

"It costs no more to enjoy the best!"

In this vein, attention is directed to Quaker Manor, Inc., nursing facility with special care at 4403 74th St.

Quaker Manor has multiple and evident benefits, with the residents of the facility served in exceptional manner.

Established about five years ago as a locally operated enterprise, Quaker Manor, Inc., has been quite well accepted, as indicated by its full occupancy and a waiting list.

Qualifying for old age assistance and welfare as an Extended Care Facility, Type 3, Quaker Manor provides 96 beds, and the exceptional care is correctly hinted by the large staff of 60 employees and the spacious facilities throughout.

Janell Burns, lifelong Lubbock resident with eight years experience in the nursing home field, is administrator.

Shirley Anderson, LVN, is director of nursing.

Eight LVNs are on duty to provide 24-hour-a-day care.

All residents must have doctors' referral, and all medications are by doctors' orders.

No extended contract period is involved, and residence can be for any length of time, in no instance necessarily permanent.

Planned activities are a part of the program, including games, entertainment and numerous craft pursuits.

An activities director, Iva Brady, is included on the staff, aiding in knitting projects, crochet, art work, etc.

Attention also is directed to University Convalescent Center, under the same ownership, but located at 2400 Quaker Ave., where Ed Burns, Jr., is administrator.

Physical facilities at each, and the qualified, interested personnel make residency at each a very pleasant experience, more than a few "who know" will attest.

Long On Scene, Texas Testing Lab Outlines Multiple Services

Through Texas Testing Lab, at 201 Paris, has been in Lubbock since back in 1929, some may possibly not realize that together with its many other capabilities, the firm offers full service in concrete and asphalt design and inspection, even aggregate analysis.

And soil analysis for engineering purposes.

Also it maintains full lab capabilities for water analysis, using approved American Public Health Association methods and the atomic absorption test.

What a service for cities, for industry and even for residences, all at affordable cost.

Feed and grain analysis is another service.

Appreciated By Contractors

Contractors of the area have benefitted to great degree from Texas Testing Lab, as the firm has tested for numerous major area jobs.

Quality control work for foundries is another service, as is steel tensile testing.

Actually, testing never before available in this area at an independent lab is now available at Texas Testing Lab; phone 763-4518, in Lubbock.

This statement cannot be taken lightly, for after all, it comes from a firm proven by decades.

Its history goes still further back, as it was established in Dallas in 1926. The Lubbock branch was added three years later, and now there are four Texas locations for the Dallas-based corporation.

Full-Service Lab

Texas Testing Lab is a full-service laboratory offering services in both chemical and engineering. It offers chemical analysis using modern equipment with electronic balances, pH meters, a spectrophotomer and an atomic absorption unit.

Texas Testing Lab is believed to be the only lab in the entire region to have this atomic absorption unit with its unique capabilities enabling numerous agriculture tests, biochemistry tests, environment tests, food products, forensic chemistry, geochemistry, industrial analysis, metallurgy, petrochemical, pharmaceuticals and cosmetics, and even plastics and fibers testing.

This apparatus not only speeds analysis but increases the accuracy of results over the old "west lab" techniques.

Texas Testing Lab is set up to do analysis on cottonseed, sunflower and other oil seeds. It also is capable of other analysis on agricultural products including vegetable oil, plant tissue and soil analysis. Fertilizer, water, microbiological and other analytical testing is available.

Testing is in accordance with standard of the American Oil Chemist Society, American Public Health Association, the Association of Official Analytical Chemists and other accepted standards.

The professional staff includes Joseph B. Schiel Jr., PhD, who is branch manager. Schiel did his dissertation of "The Ecology and Distribution of Plant Parasitic Nematodes on Three Farms in Southern Illinois".

The chemical section is headed by lifelong Lubbock resident Ginger Davis who is a graduate of Texas Tech University with her masters degree in Food Technology and with minor in Chemistry. She is rated among the top 10 in the nation in vegetable oil analysis.

For a revelation in services, in efficiency, in capabilities, visits and inquiry at Texas Testing Lab are cordially invited, even heartily recommended.

Soil results can be ready in two days, with water results the same day!

Analytical services are most comprehensive, whether for cottonseed meal, cake, oil; for sunflower seed and other seed; for tallow, water, agricultural products; and even construction materials testing and inspection, involving concrete, steel, asphalt, soils, etc.

Most, most likely, Texas Testing Lab, chemists and engineers, can perform a vital service in your own operation. May we have the opportunity?

Business & Industrial Review

Children's Shoe World Meets Quality, Fit, Fashion Needs

"Actually famous for fit, fashion and value, Children's Shoe World, at 3624 50th St., takes pride in remaining at the forefront!"

In keeping with this policy, the Baby Dear line of shoes has been added for the child not yet walking.

Children's Shoe World has earned the title of "your footwear headquarters". After all, it is "the largest in West Texas"

It is qualified in unmistakable manner to meet today's needs in regular and corrective footwear.

Provision of the right facility and the interest and qualified assistance of its staff contribute to the firm's success in the things that count.

Boots, Galoshes

Examples of the exciting current offering include gaucho type boots, dingo boots, and (note this, for sure) a complete assortment of rubber footwear — overshoes, galoshes.

A complete line of Child Life and Lazy Bones shoes are stocked. The Child Life really "dressy", slinky patent shoes are in top style, and available here.

One's doctor's prescription is gladly filled in these famous shoes at Children's Shoe World; after all, the firm works in close harmony with the doctor, following his advice and prescription. It would do no less as the largest store in West Texas serving orthopedic needs.

Those visiting the store within recent weeks have found that it has been most attractively and functionally remodeled and enlarged for maximum customer service through arrangement, display and atmosphere.

It all adds to the fact that the people at Children's Shoe World are capable and honest in their effort to meet the needs of all children.

Alan Allgood, co-manager, brings to the Lubbock area many years of shoe fitting experience. He emphasizes, and correctly so, that parents should be conscious of their children's foot problems, then bringing them to Children's Shoe World where "we can take care of your needs".

Wanda Teal, co-manager, is a native Lubbockite and began servicing little feet here back in 1951. She has been with the firm since its opening in 1967, and is fitting the second generation of many families.

Rounding out the very capable staff is Glenn Hobgood, another who recognizes and emphasizes the importance of proper fitting for the children.

This is a staff worth knowing — and depending upon.

E.R. Handly, owner and founder, takes pride in the services rendered, in the staff capabilities, in the progress and continued growth of the business, knowing that well-pleased customers tell others!

"If you have never shopped Children's Shoe World (the largest in West Texas serving orthopedic needs, remember), then a new experience and treat awaits, for we take pride in putting you, our customer, number one!"

The entire personnel at this unique children's shoe headquarters believes that it is much more important to fit a child correctly in a quality shoe best for his or her feet than it is to simply make a sale.

Even with all the comfort and correct fitting, which is stressed, the Children's Shoe World is well aware of style and brand names, and continually keeps abreast of what is new and best.

Correctly fitted shoes for the youngster is among the most important items in the healthy development of his or her body, each staffmember agrees. From the vital "first step" days until the feet are fully formed for normal growth, the child deserves the best in shoes.

Remember — an extensive line of regular and corrective footwear for children is the rule every day at Children's Shoe World, 3624 50th St. in Lubbock.

Store hours are 9:30 a.m. until 6 p.m. (including Saturdays).

Both BankAmericard and Master Charge are welcomed.

Alan Allgood, Wanda Teal and Glenn Hobgood have the extensive experience in fitting regular and orthopedic footwear; they know how to recognize the possibilities of foot troubles in youngsters. Most important, they will be the first to recommend that you consult a doctor before making a shoe choice if there is the slightest possibility of complications.

"Isn't this the type of firm to which you should trust your children's feet?"

'Everything For Complete Wedding Reception' Marks Catering Service

Wouldn't dependance upon Mrs. Camp's Pastries be a good resolution in assuring mealtime enjoyment throughout the new year?

Not only are delicious pastries always available, but in 1977 announcement was made that Mrs. Camp's Catering Services also are available!

So . . . if a wedding looms within the weeks ahead, or if there is an anniversary, shower, business or club gathering that would be made more memorable, a greater success with expert catering, then Mrs. Camp's should enter the picture.

Imagine . . . everything for a complete wedding reception, including the most beautiful cakes ever, punch, nuts, finger sandwiches, mints, coffee, silver service, the complete bride's table! Yes, complete table decorations including flowers, candelabras and everything.

And . . . still at Mrs. Camp's, 4005 34th St., phone 792-2343, the solution to every pastry need is presented . . . for pastry goodness any day and for the most elaborate of special occasions.

"Come by, view and select, and learn for yourself why Mrs.Camp's continues to serve in an outstanding manner

Although a large stock always is in the cases at Mrs. Camp's, special orders and special decorating requests for "your special situation" are heartily welcomed and encouraged at the modern 4005 34th St bakery.

Aside from the delightful products, attention also is called to the attractive, convenient and modern quarters of Mrs. Camp's, all designed for maximum customer service, at 4005 34th St.

Every operation at the facility is for finest preparation, display and service related to superior bakery products.

The modern home is thoroughly in keeping with a steady progression of improvements and expanded services of the veteran firm.

"Come by, inspect the premises, note the conveniences, and become one of the growing family of Mrs. Camp's customers who recognize the tastiest in pastries and know where to get them!

Mrs. Camp's is truly outstanding in specialty baking.

Specializing in custom orders, Mrs. Camp's "does one job better," concentrating all efforts at this one location and this one field.

The custom party cakes, wedding cakes, anniversary cakes and many other products are not only the most delicious to be found, but they are veritable works of art. The skilled decorators create designs or use the customers' design in cakes for special occasions, baking and preparing on as little as one-day notice.

Twelve different types of cookies are baked daily.

Only fancy pecans are used in the nutty cookies; no other nuts are used.

Nine pie varieties are baked daily, including fruit, chess, pecan, cream and whipped cream.

French pastries also have made a lot of friends for Mrs. Camp's.

Cakes and other bakery goodies are stocked in the cases at all times, and many decorative creations are in stock, sometimes eliminating need of special orders for a particular occasion.

Wedding cakes are delivered within the Lubbock city limits.

TREES, SHRUBS TO BEAUTIFY — AT WOOLCO

Packaged Shrubs, Trees Among New Woolco Center Arrivals

Woolco's big Garden Center presently is privileged to feature packaged shrubs, shade trees, fruit trees, berries and dwarf trees at low, low prices!

These packaged plants are top quality merchandise and are being featured during remainder of January and in February in a center aisle promotion.

The packaged shrubs include red althea, willow, wegelia, crepe myrtle, red dogwood and quince.

Packaged trees include silver maple, weeping willow, fruitless mulberry, purple plum, redbud, white birch and Arizona ash.

The Garden Center also will feature pecan trees, including Mahan pecan, Stuart and Western varieties.

Also featured in the Garden Center are fruit trees, including red apple, Elberta peach, Moorpark apricot, Bing cherry, Bartlett pears, nectarines and Burbank plum.

Also in the Woolco Garden Center are packaged dwarf fruit trees.

And in the center aisle promotion, be sure and note the Brown Turkey fig, Celest fig and Texas everbearing fig trees.

Packaged evergreens are still another current feature and include compact arborvitae, juniper and Austrian pines.

"Be ready for landscaping achievement . . . select and save now at Woolco in this most unusual but beneficial promotion."

Furniture Items, For Every Room, Reflect Woolco Quality, Pricing

"In what better way could one start the new year off right than with a new living room group or bedroom group from Woolco?"

Furniture for every room of the house is stocked in Woolco's furniture department.

Also there are dinettes, bars, unfinished furniture, music centers, room dividers, end tables, coffee tables, storage and wardrobe cabinets, parson tables, stools, fireplace screens and hassocks.

When it is recognized that these bear quality line labels, yet still are presented at low Woolco prices, the advisability of a visit to the department becomes evident.

In the floor covering department, Woolco has carpet in numerous colors and styles for the living room, bedroom and bathroom, some conceivably have not realized.

Woolco also has beautiful, functional area rugs, three or five-piece bath sets, too, in many colors and styles.

In the paint department, Woolco again comes through with quality, selection and bottom prices. Stocked is Lucite wall or house paint, artists supplies, wall covering, Majestic wall or house paint, even ladders, brushes, roller and pan sets.

"Woolco proves by its stock and its prices that there is meaning in the slogan . . . 'We want to be your favorite store'."

Bowman Reveals New Lubbock Manager, Stresses Wide Stock

Appointment of Joe Swan as manager of the Lubbock operations of Bowman Lumber Co., Inc. at 8301 S. University Ave. has been proudly announced by Donald L. Smith, president of the firm.

Swan has been employed at Bowman's for the past five years, and he has served as assistant manager for the last two years.

After attending New Mexico State University, Joe and his wife, Karen, moved to Lubbock where Karen now teaches at Monterey High School.

Swan and his staff want to serve each customer to the best of their ability.

"Whether your home building needs are large or small, Smith invites you to come to Bowman's and let Joe and his staff serve you."

Alert to customer service, Bowman's continually makes significant improvements.

It prides in a friendly, capable staff, and in a wide selection of products and services found to be advantageous to the South Plains.

Staff To Trust

Meet some others of the staff:

Cindy Harrist has been promoted to manager of the Lawn & Garden department, and she invites attention to the quality and selection found in this prominent sector of the Bowman operation.

Walter Johnson, well known on the Lubbock and area building scene, is contractor salesman. (Walter has 37 years experience in the Lubbock building trades.

"Butch" Peak is in charge of the extensive hardware department.

Craft, Art Classes, Supplies

Inquiry is invited for the schedule of classes in metal sculpture conducted by the highly respected Mike Gowen.

JOE SWAN NAMED MANAGER

Melba Mayberry conducts oil painting classes at Bowman's, and one also is invited to ask for schedules and details regarding these popular classes. (A full line of art supplies, featuring the Grumbacher line, is stocked.)

Then there is the Floor Fashion Center that has so much to offer in brightening and renewing the home.

Firewood

Also, there is good supply of oak firewood now stocked, with either pick up or delivery available.

See . . . as popular as is Bowman's for its lumber and building supplies, a lot more is offered at the big, convenient center, of interest and benefit to every family member.

Bowman's, founded back in 1889, has been located in Lubbock at the modern, spacious South University quarters since 1971. There is easy access and plenty of parking room. Hours are 7:30 a.m. until 6 p.m., six days a week.

"The latchstring is out at Bowman's; come out and meet Joe Swan and his staff and see for yourself how Bowman's does more for you."

Parts, Sales, Service, Rentals Among W.M. Smith Electric Firm Benefits

Dependance upon the W.M. Smith Electric Co., 1911 Clovis Road, is nothing new to industry throughout West Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Oklahoma and Louisiana!

The Lubbock branch of the Dallas-based company was established in 1952, and the growth of the firm here reflects the quality and demand of the services offered.

Check the many products and services:

Compressors

Air compressors are one of the specialties, with two major lines represented: Kellogg-American and Gardner-Denver.

Compressors are available in both tank mounted and stationary type, and either new or rebuilt ones are stocked up to 150 hp.

Smith rebuilds all makes of compressors, from the smallest to the largest.

Hoists

Sales and service for all makes of hoists, including the Budget line, is another key segment of the business.

Motors

W.M. Smith Electric is distributor for three major lines of electric motors: General Electric, U.S., and Baldor, in all sizes.

Furthermore, the firm has parts for everything it sells, offering service on everything sold, also.

A staff of qualified mechanics and trouble shooters is maintained at all times.

Wire-in and installation of irrigation motors is another area-appreciated service provided by the company.

Pick-up and delivery is provided, and service men are on call day or night. Facilities in the shop enable prompt attention and repair in any emergency need.

History Recounted

Herb Witcher is vice president and manager of West Texas operations of the company. In fact, it was in August, 1952, when he opened the Lubbock office as a one-man operation.

"There was just a trickle of business at first. But as Herb's old Chevy pick-up truck became a familiar sight on the streets and roads in and around Lubbock, business picked up — fast. Night and day service at a fair price, which was what Herb offered, was a way of winning friends! By the spring of 1953, Herb had four men working for W.M. Smith Electric Co., Lubbock branch."

And how the firm continues to grow!

"The people of Lubbock and a wide surrounding area have been mighty nice to W.M. Smith Electric Co., Witcher says, "and we appreciate it more than we can tell you."

Geared For The Job

The present large, all-brick building of the firm at 1911 Clovis Road was constructed in 1957, and facilities within it were designed for maximum service.

"And possibly some of this service meets a need for you, in your own industrial or farming operation."

Sale and rentals of motors and generators is a popular service, as is repair and installation of electric motors, controls, hoists and cranes, welders, air compressors, rectifiers, pumps, transformers, etc.; machine and metalizing, dynamic balancing and other services.

"Chances are you already have used one or more of the services of W.M. Smith Electric Co. if you have ever had need of air compressors, electric motors and equipment or the related parts and supplies."

As the W.M. Smith Electric Co. pointed out in an Avalanche-Journal advertisement upon opening of the present offices in 1957:

"If you're willing to work, you 'can't hardly' miss in a dynamic, fast-growing city like Lubbock. Under Herb Witcher's leadership, our Lubbock office has doubled its volume of sales and service each year since 1954."

"This same brand of service continues — and can save for you, too."

Farmers Group Independent Agents Affording Many Aids

"Surely, the services of a Farmers Insurance Group independent agent should fit into your plans in 1978, just as they have for many in the year just concluded."

Two of these agents are featured this week, Joe Schoenig, head of the Schoenig Insurance Agency at 7402 University Ave., and Rick Dyer of the Rick Dyer Insurance Agency, 3534 34th St.

Each point out that "if you already are utilizing the services of a Farmers Insurance Group agent, you know the benefits; if not, then likely you should inquire and profit accordingly."

There are several offices manned by Farmers Insurance Group agents in Lubbock; in fact, there are some 18 such agents affording "anything in insurance" the Farmers Insurance Group way.

All Agents Introduced

These agents are being introduced periodically on these pages of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

Schoenig is featured this week in conjunction with focus of attention on the modern, new office building just completed and now occupied by his agency.

He has been with Farmers Insurance Group for seven years.

Shortly after Thanksgiving of this past year he completed construction of his own impressive and functional building at 7402 University, with everything designed for fullest service to the customer.

"You can buy insurance most anywhere," Joe points out, "but from us you buy service."

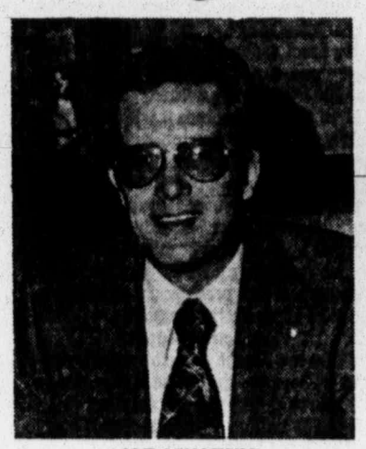
A native of the area, Schoenig was born and reared in Clovis.

A Lubbock resident since 1961, he is a graduate of Monterey High School and attended Texas Tech. He is married to the former Carol Hilbun of Pampa, and the couple has one son, Coby, age 2 1/2.

Schoenig's insurance service record is most enviable, and scores throughout the region rely upon him for "everything in life, auto, casualty, fire, commercial, crop and hail insurance.

He invites old friends and new ones alike to come by and share his enthusiasm about the new offices he has provided to better serve in the insurance field, meeting the multiple insurance needs of today.

Rick Dyer is another of the very capable and enthusiastic Farmers Insurance Group independent agents.



JOE SCHOENIG

With the group for three years, he knows insurance and can render highly qualified service, whether in life, auto, fire, commercial, boat, home owners, etc. He is especially knowledgeable in the field of homeowners insurance.

A native of Lubbock, Dyer starred in basketball at Monterey High School, attended South Plains Junior College, Levelland, on a basketball scholarship, and also attended Texas Tech. He is married to the former Pat Keith, also of Lubbock and a Lubbock High School graduate; and the couple has one daughter, Ericka, age 6.

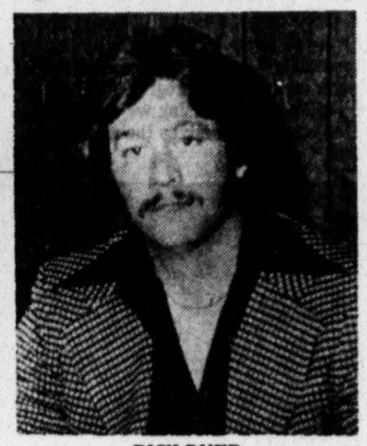
Rick especially, enjoys "people" and "selling" and has found in the Farmers Insurance Group way of doing business the solution to these pleasures, expressing genuine satisfaction in being able to render service in a field of his choosing.

"Anything in insurance" is the correct image of Farmers Insurance Group, Los Angeles based organization celebrating its 50th anniversary in 1978 and one that has been represented in Lubbock for over a quarter century.

Eight office locations are now utilized in Lubbock. These are located at 3328 82nd St. (the district office); 2221 34th St., 5106 Slide Road, 5602 Slide Road, 3534 34th St., 3409 50th St., 4417 50th St., and 7402 University Ave.

Agents Named

Among the local Farmers Insurance Group agents are Jerry Rose, Jim White, Don Busby, Rick Dyer, Gene Cribbs, Gary Jeter, Dick Heath, Allie Baxter;



RICK DYER

Joe Schoenig, John Hatchett, Howard Havery, Lee Robertson, Lanny Harris, Don Freeman, Jere Smith, Presley Schofner and Philip Wilbanks. Bill Hatchett is district manager.

Each is thoroughly versed in the full spectrum of insurance services — auto, fire, life, truck, boat, commercial, liability and all.

IRA Outlined

Special attention is directed to the IRA-Plus savings including such features as:

Allowable savings contributions are 100 per cent tax sheltered.

McWhorter's Truck Center Always Modern, Professional

"Let us prove that McWhorter's, Inc., Truck Center at 213 N. Ave. U in Lubbock, serves best!"

Increased parts stock, added bays, heavy duty front end machine, and even a U-bolt bending machine are among the additions of recent months.

Any U-bolt can be made right here in the McWhorter's shop, with a large stock of materials and the correct machines for fabricating a bolt to order.

Now, McWhorter's Truck Center has four truck front end and frame machines.

Look at some other of the services and products — all at this one location:

Air-Ride truck seats are stocked, as are MGM brakes.

A good inventory is maintained in truck and trailer brake drums, and an inventory of truck and trailer springs also is kept.

Suspension Units

McWhorter's at 213 N. Ave. U. also can overhaul Hendrickson suspension units on the big trucks. (Exchange walking beams are kept to speed the work on the units, with drivers being able to go on their way in less than a day.)

For RV Needs, Also

And — a quite good stock of electric brakes is available for recreational vehicles, boat trailers, etc.

McWhorter's is distributor for electric brakes for every need — for trucks, trailers, etc.

Frame, front end work and other services are available for the RV needs, just as for trucks.

Experienced Management

The big McWhorter's Truck Center is managed by long-familiar manager Bob Dean (26 years with McWhorter's).

Durwood Hallman, assistant manager, has 27 years with the firm; and Alvin Morris, service manager, also has 27 years as a valued staffmember.

Leonard Gordon, mechanic, actually is the longest-tenure McWhorter's staffmember, still on the job and serving capably just as he has done since March 1946!

Versatile Facility

The large building at McWhorter's can service any length and size vehicle (that is legal on the highway) inside, without extending through any doorways.

Ten huge trucks and trailers can be accommodated at one time within the Center at the bays. Even more vehicles can be served if detached from trailers or if of smaller size.

Even showers are provided and appreciated for truck operators; a sleeping area is available for these truck drivers while their vehicles are being repaired.

Pick-up, Delivery

McWhorter's, Inc., Truck Center is especially noted for its pick-up and delivery service on trucks and trailers, with this particularly advantageous on fleet job drum turning and brake shoe relining.

Truck and auto owners alike have discovered that the front end alignment, brake work, wheel balancing, frame straightening, etc. at McWhorter's assures satisfaction as only experts can guarantee.

The firm's promise is emphasized on all repairs;

"It must be right or we make it right."

McWhorter's backs this policy with professionalism throughout the staff, and with the best in equipment and facilities.

The Center was established at its present spacious headquarters in 1951, is staffed by men long on experience and "know how," and each takes a personal interest in the job at hand.

Frame straightening and the rebuilding of wrecked trucks by McWhorter's is known by fleet owners and operators from Dallas on to the West Coast.

Thirty-ton and 50-ton jacks are part of the specialized equipment that gets the job done.

Wheels can be balanced without removal. Alemite and Stewart-Warner wheel balancers, together with Bear front end alignment equipment, are included in the equipment.

The 35-ft. truck frame machine at McWhorter's is one of the largest in a multi-state area.

Suspension Units

Truck and trailer front end and frame parts are stocked.

Among other services are rewiring and repair of lights on trucks and trailers, replacement of trailer 5th wheel king pins, repair 5th wheels of any make, overhaul vacuum booster brakes, and the installation of tacographs.

McWhorter's Brake Shop is distributor for a host of famous-name products.

Check the products, the service and the workmanship; you'll like the McWhorter's way of doing business!

CUSTOMER SERVICE ASSURED — McWhorter's Truck Center in Lubbock has a record of expansion to meet the needs of every year and every decade. The U-Bolt machine demonstrated here by longtime assistant manager Durwood Hallman is one of the modern pieces of equipment enabling this outstanding service.

Major Showdowns Faced By Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The election-year session of the 95th Congress opens Thursday with a brim-full agenda that harbors potential for a number of major showdowns with President Carter.

Among the touchiest issues are national energy policy, ratification of the Panama Canal treaties, an administration proposal to increase the defense budget and, possibly late in the year, strategic arms control agreements.

Relationship Friendly

Despite some sparring last year, Carter and Congress maintained a polite, if not friendly, relationship. Many of the issues that divided them were resolved through compromise.

But the nature of much legislation facing Congress in the second year of Carter's presidency is so far-reaching and so politically tinged that the uneasy relationship of the inaugural session could be severely strained.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill and Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd appear in complete agreement on the session's priorities and they hope it will end by Oct. 1 so those up for re-election can campaign full-time.

Energy Top Priority

O'Neill and Byrd both give energy top priority, as last year. Along with Carter, they seem reasonably optimistic a package can be assembled.

Noting the Senate in 1977 devoted 30 percent of debate time and 40 percent of its roll call votes to energy, Byrd said, "foremost will be, of course, completion of work on the energy program."

O'Neill adds, "We think we can get it on the president's desk by the middle of March."

Senate and House negotiators spent weeks late last year trying to agree on a five-part energy package acceptable to both chambers and the president. But they were stymied by a provision on the price of natural gas.

Once the question of gas prices is settled, O'Neill said, "everything else will fall into place."

When and if Congress agrees to energy legislation, the Senate and House will move in separate directions.

Canal Treaty Second

Byrd lists action on the twin Panama Canal treaties as the No. 2 priority item.

He predicts, and no one disputes him, that "one can expect hot, long, bitter, voluble and volatile debate."

Byrd also understands it will be as difficult a vote as any senator is going to face because of emotions the issue has generated and the certain political fallout.

For instance: Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker already has been warned by Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., that he can forget any possibility of conservative support in a presidential nomination bid if he votes for the treaties.

Tax Action Sought

While the Senate goes through its agonies on Panama, the House is expected to push through Carter's proposed tax cut of about $25 billion. Byrd also wants early action on the tax cut.

But the Carter proposal may include very little in the way of promised tax reforms, which probably will be put off until 1979.

Carter's proposal to increase the defense budget may not sit well on Capitol Hill.

"If there is to be an increase in defense, it should not be a criteria for cutting back on economic stablization programs," O'Neill said. "No way are we going to cut jobs programs because we have to increase defense."

If the strategic arms limitations agreement reaches the Senate in time for action it, too, would be the subject "of divisive feeling and hot debate."

Other Issues

When it comes to other issues, O'Neill feels the House will complete action on welfare reform and Byrd thinks that "some so-called reform legislation" also might clear the Senate.

Byrd also lists the Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill, labor law reform, already passed by the House, no-fault automobile insurance, and — if the legislative climate is right — a bill to create a consumer protection agency.

O'Neill gives high priority to government reorganization plans that may be submitted, predicts passage of Humphrey-Hawkins and other job-creating measures, and will give another go at election day registration and the consumer protection agency.

Three House investigations, which so far have produced nothing, will continue — an inquiry into alleged bribery operations by South Koreans and probes into the assassinations of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr.

Two Florida Coeds Killed By Attacker

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A club-wielding attacker crept into a sorority house at Florida State University early Sunday and brutally beat four young women while they slept, raped one of them and strangled her and another, police said.

A short time later, nearby, another Florida State University student who was not a member of the sorority was severely beaten.

"We haven't found any link between the two attacks," said Carl Swanson, a Tallahassee police spokesman. "There doesn't seem to be any tie-in, but we're still investigating that possibility."

After autopsies were performed on the dead women, who had been sleeping in separate rooms, a sheriff's official said both were choked to death, at least one by bare hands, and one had been raped.

Assailant Spotted

Police said all the women in the Chi Omega sorority house were asleep during the attacks against the four residents, but the assailant was spotted by one woman as she returned shortly after 3 a.m. from a date.

"She saw a man running down the stairs and out the front door. He was carrying a club or a limb or a piece of wood of some sort," said Swanson.

Swanson said the girl heard moaning in the upstairs rooms, found the injured women and called police.

The intruder apparently entered through an unlocked side door.

The slain women were identified as Margaret Bowman, 21, and Lisa Levy, 20, both of St. Petersburg. Police did not say which had been raped.

The other two victims shared a room. They were identified as Karen Chandler, 21, of Tallahassee, and Kathy Kliner, 20, of Miami.

Also attacked about two hours later was Cheryl Ann Thomas, 21, of Richmond, Va., who lived in a duplex three blocks away from the sorority house.

Alabama Town Rocked By Massive Blast

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — An explosion that officials said was set off by a natural gas leak rocked downtown Auburn early Sunday, demolishing several businesses and shattering windows in a six-block area. No injuries were reported.

The devastating blast occurred in a cluster of businesses including a restaurant and specialty shops. It erupted shortly after 8 a.m., about one hour before churchgoers would have congregated for services at Auburn Methodist Church across the street.

Fire Chief William Mitchell described the damage as the worst he had ever seen and said it was caused by a natural gas explosion. But the exact location of the leak was not known immediately.

Residents Awakened

Many residents in and around the town of about 27,000 people were awakened by the shock waves which were felt several miles away. Minor damage was reported on the campus of Auburn University, adjacent to the blast scene, and heavy plate glass windows throughout the downtown area were shattered.

Authorities said at least 40 buildings, in addition to those at the blast's center, were damaged in varying degrees, but Mitchell said no dollar estimate had been placed on the destruction. Alabama National Guardsmen were called in to control spectators and protect businesses.

The fire department had been alerted earlier in the morning of a gas leak at the intersection of Gay and Magnolia streets, where the explosion occurred, and Lt. Tamp McDonald was across the street investigating when the blast erupted.

"Like Bomb Going Off"

"I was coming up the street when I heard it blow," said the veteran firefighter. "It was awful. I turned and ran and jumped into the car. It was like a bomb going off."

McDonald, who remained on the scene, escaped injury although the area where he was standing was littered with charred rubble from the explosion.

Alabama Gas Co. crews shut off service to downtown Auburn and some outlying areas as temperatures hovered near freezing

Poisonous Sludge Flows From Dam

TOKYO (UPI) — A dam holding back poisonous sludge on the earthquake-shattered Izu Peninsula broke Sunday, releasing about 3.5 million square feet of mud contaminated with sodium cyanide into a nearby river.

Health authorities immediately ordered towns along the lower reaches of the Mochikoshi River to stop using its water.

The dam held sludge from a gold mine operated by the Chugai Mining Co. It was partially breached by aftershocks of Saturday's earthquake, which had a magnitude of 7 on the open-ended Richter scale.

The river flows north 10 miles from the mine to the sea near the city of Numazu, 100 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Early Monday, authorities reported 13 persons dead, 11 still missing and 61 injured in the quake and its 150 aftershocks. All the deaths and injuries occurred on the Izu Peninsula, where the main force of the temblor was concentrated.

The peninsula is a resort area, noted for its hot spring hotels and its spectacular coastal scenery.

Authorities said 24 homes and shops were totally destroyed, and 87 others had major damage. Partial damage was reported for 1,295 other buildings.

WOMEN ASTRONAUTS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. space agency has chosen six women to break the astronaut sex barrier and three men as its first black astronauts, agency sources said Sunday.

Third Boyle Trial Begins

stomach disorders and spinal problems.

Because of this, there was speculation that A. Charles Peruto, a prominent Philadelphia defense attorney who became Boyle's lawyer after the first trial, may seek another postponement.

Others Convicted

Eight other persons have been convicted or pleaded guilty in the case. Two of those were star prosecution witnesses at various trials and have since been given new identities and moved to unknown locations.

The case was moved to Media in 1974 by the sate Supreme Court under a change of venue after it was argued that Boyle could not receive a fair trial in Washington County, Pa., a soft-coal region where the Yablonskis lived.

Nixon Ends Exile To Honor Senator

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a quiet participant in the ceremonies honoring Hubert H. Humphrey, former President Richard M. Nixon ended on Sunday 3½ years of self-imposed exile from the nation's capital.

Nixon hadn't returned to Washington since he resigned the presidency and vacated the White House in August 1974 at the height of the Watergate scandal.

"It seemed a good time for him to come back ...," said Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., not always a supporter of the former president.

Hatfield and dozens of other Republican notables including former President Gerald R. Ford, former Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller and Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker met informally with Nixon following the ceremonies in the Capitol Rotunda.

Nixon Virtual Recluse

For many of them, it was the first time they had seen Nixon since he stepped down. Since then, Nixon has been a virtual recluse at his home in San Clemente, Calif., with the exception of a trip to China and a series of paid interviews with television personality David Frost.

Congressional sources said Nixon, upon learning of Humphrey's death Friday night, asked whether there would be any objection to his attending the ceremony.

Sources said the request was relayed to Humphrey's widow, Muriel, as she accompanied her husband's body from Minnesota to Washington on a presidential airplane.

Asked if she would object to Nixon's presence, Muriel replied, "Absolutely not," according to a person who was present.

During his flight to Washington and before and after Sunday's ceremonies, Nixon was unavailable to reporters. Aides said the former president simply wanted to pay tribute to an old political opponent without drawing attention to himself.

Nixon was reported staying at a private home south of Middleburg, Va., more than an hour's drive from the capital.

The political careers of Republican Nixon and Democrat Humphrey often clashed, their rivalry climaxing in the 1968 presidential election. Nixon defeated Humphrey by a narrow margin after the Democratic Party split over the Vietnam War.

During much of the ceremony, Nixon, who celebrated his 65th birthday Jan. 9, stood almost as stiffly at attention as the five honor guards who surrounded the flag-covered coffin containing Humphrey's body. He appeared ruddy-faced and generally healthy, although the awkward physical movements remembered from past White House ceremonies were the same.

Full Of Memories

The Rotunda was full of memories and personalities from Nixon's political career and his 5½ years as president. Chief Justice Warren Burger and Associate Justices Harry Blackmun and William Rhenquist — Nixon appointees to the nation's highest court — were there.

In another quarter of the Rotunda were dozens of House members, with whom Nixon served before he was catapulted to national prominence as former President Dwight D. Eisenhower's vice president.

Seated in a row with Ford and Rockefeller and their wives, Nixon was accompanied by his daughter Tricia, who had flown here from her home in New York City. Nixon's wife Pat remained in California.

In their eulogies, both President Carter and Vice President Walter Mondale took official cognizance of Nixon's presence.

Mondale said the fact that Nixon, Ford and Lady Bird Johnson were present served as evidence of "the love and respect" in which Humphrey was held by politicians of all views.

Carter noted that Humphrey was a forgiving man, not one to hold a grudge. Then, nodding to Nixon, he said that when Humphrey lost the 1968 election, "without bitterness he gave his support to the new president."

As the ceremony ended, Carter held Mrs. Humphrey's arm and both turned to greet Ford and his wife Betty. Ford kissed Muriel, and after a moment's hesitation so did Nixon, who then introduced Muriel to Tricia.

FBI Freeing More JFK Documents

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Another half ton of FBI documents on the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy will be made public Wednesday, with the file on the slaying "open-ended" and a congressional investigation still underway.

The first installment in the massive 200-volume FBI assassination file, costing $188,000 to compile, was released last month. The 40,001 pages exploded no time bombs but revealed the incredible efforts expended by an army of FBI agents in running down every tip and rumor on the Nov. 22, 1963 murder.

The second installment of 58,000 pages will cover the continuing investigations from September 1964 — where the first batch left off — up to recent times.

To Show Nothing New

The Warren Report, issued in September 1964, concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald alone assassinated Kennedy and that small-time nightclub owner Jack Ruby killed Oswald a day later. Nothing in the first installment of the FBI papers showed any other finding, although there were tantalizing tips and tidbits of information, all of which were run down to the satisfaction of the bureau.

An FBI spokesman, who has seen all the material, said the documents to be released Wednesday would contain nothing dramatically new.

"I really don't think there's going to be any major new revelations from this new material any more than there was in the material just released," he said after opening up the first batch.

Dispute Predicted

"Of course, the people (conspiracy buffs) who make a business of this will dispute that. I understand some of them are already saying the true stuff is what was never written down."

As recently as last year, a Gallup poll showed 50 percent of Americans asked about the Kennedy murder still believed in a conspiracy. The FBI still actively pursues any new "tip" coming in and its file is "open-ended." A House Select Committee on Assassinations set up last year has been meeting regularly, mostly in closed session, but has yet to come up with anything tangible on the Kennedy case or the murder in Memphis, Tenn., in 1968 of civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. that refutes previous evidence.

What the FBI files so far have shown is that the bureau carried out an enormously meticulous job in conducting 25,000 interviews and reinterviews, ballistic and laboratory tests in trying to lay at rest rumors that the Soviets, Cubans, Nazis, Ku Klux Klan, Big Business, the Mafia, CIA and the FBI, itself, among others — separately or jointly — were involved in a sinister plot to kill the president.

Harbored Misgivings

They also showed that although FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover never doubted within hours of the killing that Oswald was the trigger man — "in the category of a nut" — he harbored misgivings in the first weeks after Dallas that Oswald may not have acted alone. FBI agents said Ruby insisted "no one else was involved" when he shot Oswald and quoted Ruby as saying he had simply brooded over the Kennedy assassination "until he reached the point of insanity."

Bungling Bandit Nabbed In Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — An Alaska resident thought he was robbing a bank when he handed a note demanding money to the man behind the cage in Dallas last week.

What he didn't know was that he was inside a post office and the man at the window was a security guard.

Dallas police said the 37-year-old man from Anchorage, who they did not identify, actually had two notes.

The first one said: "I've got a gun and I'll blow your head off." The other one read: "I need help. . . give me your gun."

The guard, seeing no weapon on the would-be robber, promptly pulled his own weapon.

When police arrived, the bungling bandit promptly said he was guilty and said, "I just tried to hold up this bank."

Police said he was a bit embarrassed when he learned he was at the post office. "You mean this ain't even a bank," he muttered.

Humphrey Paid Tribute; St. Paul Services Set

years later, Humphrey led that party, divided again, this time over the war in Vietnam, in a presidential campaign that barely lost. Nixon defeated him, and it was Humphrey's death that led the resigned president to return to Washington for the first time since Watergate and its aftermath forced him from the White House.

Nixon flew to Washington from Los Angeles Saturday on a commercial airliner, and planned to return today. His daughter, Tricia, accompanied him at the service.

Carter said that he had known Humphrey best since entering the White House, "and that's when I needed him most." During that year, he said, Humphrey provided support and the advice of "a wise and honest counselor."

Differed During Campaign

That was so, Carter said, despite their differences during the 1976 campaign and "my own harsh words, spoken under pressure and in haste." With Humphrey considering one last campaign for the Democratic nomination, Carter had said that the Minnesota senator was a loser, and was too old to be president. He quickly apologized. Humphrey did not enter that race.

"At critical times in our history, the United States has been blessed by great people who just by being themselves give us a vision of what we are at our best and of what we might become," Carter said in his eulogy. "Hubert Humphrey was such a man."

And in closing:

"He asked...that this service be a celebration and, in a way, that's what it is. Even as we mourn his death, we celebrate because such a man as Hubert Humphrey was among us. The joy of his memory will last far longer than the pain and sorrow of his leaving."

Died Of Cancer

Humphrey died Friday night of cancer at his home in Waverly, Minn. His body was flown to Washington on Saturday for final honors at the Capitol.

Carter and Mrs. Carter waited in the cold at the top of the U.S. Capitol steps to escort Mrs. Humphrey to the service in the Rotunda. The president walked down those familiar steps with Mrs. Humphrey as the coffin was borne by military pallbearers to the cortege for the last journey back to Minnesota.

Organization Strives For Decent Housing Goal

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Ann Quigley lives in a two-bedroom unit in a low-income housing project in eastern New Orleans.

"And the only way I'd leave is if they carry me out," she said.

Another happy tenant is Janice Berkley, whose babysitting income pays for her $137 rent for a one-bedroom apartment.

Their apartments are part of the largest private non-profit housing program in the United States. Their landlord is the Volunteers of America, who have worked for decent housing for the poor, the elderly and the handicapped since their inception in 1896. The VOA currently has more than 18,000 tenants in 22 low-income centers nationwide.

Mrs. Quigley's apartment, like the 300 others in the brick two-story complex, has a glass patio door opening onto a grassy courtyard. Others facing the parking lot have small front lawns.

She has a dishwasher, airconditioning and carpeting.

"And peace of mind," she said. "If you need somebody right away for an emergency or something, they come."

Mrs. Quigley said her landlords sweep out trash-can areas daily. Garbage is collected three times a week.

"If somebody lets their place go down or get trashed up, they put a health notice on the door and make them fix it up or get out," she said.

Janice Berkley was babysitting for families in the complex when her cousins, who lived there, told her of a vacancy.

"They were real pleased that I was doing the babysitting, and they took my application, and a couple of days later they said I could move in," she said.

She said her rent has been increased $17 in the two years since she moved in. She said she was given several months notice of the increase. Her only complaint was management's failure to provide a playground or activities for children, although it sponsors bingo and rummage sales for the elderly.

"A couple of months ago they had to turn off the gas because the pipes weren't insulated right, and they gave us $10 a month off our rent because of the inconvenience," she said. "I've seen plenty of people pay a lot more without getting the service."

The apartments are in 20-unit buildings surrounding a community center.

A VOA bus takes elderly residents to grocery stores or a nearby shopping mall.

Several public telephones are on the property. City buses run in front of it.

We were hard put to find a dissatisfied tenant.

One, Mrs. Hilton Slade, said the managers are lax with Vietnamese families. Sh said they rout through trash bins and fail to keep their apartments clean.

"It just burns me up they let them in here, and my husband works and pays taxes," Mrs. Slade said.

Col. Ray C. Tremont, housing program administrator, credits professional management and tenant responsibility for succeeding while government-run projects decay into slums.

"Management is the key word," Tremont said in an interview from the organization's Southern Region headquarters.

He said professional managers, some with college credit and backgrounds in human relations, run the complexes like private enterprises.

"Sometimes people in lower economic levels don't know how to adequately maintain property," Tremont said. "We view these projects as an ownership for the term of the mortgage, up to 40 years, and heavily stress good management with preventative maintenance."

VOA housing was developed in cooperation with Housing and Urban Development programs that offer low interest loans for building or renovating existing housing for the ioor, elderly and handicapped.

The complexes average 200 units each. They feature one-to four-bedroom apartments with dishwashers, garbage disposals, air-conditioning, carpeting and drapes.

"There's no difference between them and an apartment you might go out and rent for yourself," Tremont said.

"It's a beautiful program because it is a concept for total care, total living."

Complexes for the elderly include reration areas and dining rooms providing food service.

Buildings for families have day care centers.

"The purpose of the VOA is to ... respond to the needs of the people who live there," Tremont said. "We have counseling, day care, programs such as Meals on Wheels ..."

He said the social services are paid for with government funds or are operated by the VOA, the United Way or other non-profit groups.

Poverty is not an eligibility requirement, Tremont said. Tenants who fail to meet HUD poverty guidelines are charged full market value in rent. Families are not forced to move if their incomes increase. Income status is reviewed annually, and rents adjusted accordingly.

The VOA does get tough with residents who default on rent or damage the property.

"Failure to pay rent would be reason for eviction," Tremont said.

He said rent default has been less of a problem since HUD initiated a subsidy program to keep rents of low-income families below 25 percent of their income.

Tenant committees at each complex help on-site managers coordinate security and grounds maintenance. Final operating decisions are made by the managers.

Residents also are held responsible for their treatment of the property.

"I don't know why public housing can't take as strong a stance as we do in stressing tenant responsibility," Tremont said. "If we find a tenant abusing an apartment, we charge them a damage fee. They are minimal amounts, but you have to look at the total picture."

Tremont said strong management enables some complexes to earn surpluses. Such profits are deposited in HUD-controlled funds and used for improvements and maintenance.

"The funds are held in receipt accounts and can only be disbursed by HUD," he said. "I couldn't even dip into the till."

Tremont said non-profit housing projects never will replace public housing. But he predicted more organizations like the VOA will accept responsibility for running low-income facilities efficiently, and keep housing for the poor from deteriorating into ghettos.

"That doesn't mean they don't show some wear and tear after 15 years, but they certainly are not slums," he said. "They are decent units that anyone would be happy to live in."

Democrats Sense Late Start Futile

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the immediate aftermath of Walter Mondale's five-day campaign-style blitz of the West, there was a nagging feeling the effort may have come too late to do much good for Democratic hopefuls this November.

"We should have made this trip months ago," said a top administration strategist after last week's swing through states Gerald Ford swept in the presidential election — New Mexico, Colorado, Montana, Utah, Idaho, Washington and Nevada.

He said the administration's "war on the West" is bunk. Most of the actions which infuriated westerners were the result of court orders or laws passed by Congress.

But the "war" notion festered so long without administration action that a brick wall of opposition has been created which may now be too high to scale for eight western Democratic governors up for reelection, the strategist said.

The vice president's visit originally was scheduled for November but Mondale stayed in Washington to fight the still unresoved energy battle with Congress.

Even before Mondale arrived, however, the administration began to soften its stand on pending regulations to implement a 1902 law limiting farms receiving water from federal projects to 160 acres per person.

Mondale visited towns "we usually just fly over" — Grand Junction, Colo., where sheriff's deputies sport brass stars and black ten-gallon hats; Reno, Nev., where old ladies in lace-trimmed dresses yank slot machine levers all night; Pullman, Wash., where some grade school students guessed Walter Mondale was "a circus clown"; and Great Falls, Mont. where ranchers carried signs telling him, Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus and Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland to "Go Home Three Stooges."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. A reader told you that he is getting $81.52 a month on a $10,000 annuity which would leave an estate. I enclose a brochure from a religious organization which seems to yield much less--and for life only... no estate. A. We'd better split up this question so as to eliminate as much confusion as possible.

(1). The reader you quote thought his program guaranteed leaving an estate. That doesn't make it so--as I tried to explain in that column. He had bought a refund-type annuity from an insurance company (in contrast to a "life-time" contract). The refund type requires that the insurance company pay him $81.51 a month for so long as he lives. If he doesn't live long enough (about 123 months) to collect all the $10,000 he paid in, his heirs will get whatever he does not collect. In other words, if he dies in the 122nd month, they'd get an estate of $81.51. If he lives 124 or more months, his heirs get nothing. An estate is NOT assured by this program.

(2) Completely ignoring the "refund-estate" question, it is meaningless to compare annuity benefits without taking into consideration the age and sex of the annuitant. Younger persons and females get less from an annuity.

(3) Now as to the smaller payout as listed in the brochure you sent along: The church group offering the annuity is engaged in doing religious and charitable work. The money you give it for an annuity not only yields you a lifetime income (no estate is involved) but also gives you certain tax advantages and also continues religious work in which you are interested.

Let's face it, the organization will provide you a lifetime income, but it is also in business to do something for the church. It therefore pays out a bit less, although tax advantages in this type of contract could conceivably make up any difference between its payments schedule and that of an insurance company run for profit.

Also, you need not buy the religious annuity for cash, turning over, instead, securities and property in which you may have a taxable gain.

You can't compare the two annuities dollar for dollar.

Q. In discussing anniuties, how about the inflation problem? An annuity provides fixed income. Would it not be better to keep money in the bank, and have capital to draw on in case of emergency?

A. An annuity is not designed to cope with inflation. (I have been shown some which have an annual inflation factor – about 3 percent annual increase–built in. But I've found that in some cases the benefit base from which this 3 percent increase starts is lower than in the non-flexible programs).

So if you buy an annuity contract, you automatically forsake inflation protection for what should be a currently higher-than-securities yield. For example, if (because of your age) you can get $1,000 or $1,200 a year from $10,000 paid for an annuity you must be prepared to offset inflation during your lifetime with the $150 to $350 a year more received from this contract than could be obtained from, say, an 8 1/2 percent corporate bond. Furthermore, there is some tax shelter in annuity payments since they include return of part of your own capital (which is not taxable).

Obviously, since you want to reduce your vulnerability to inflation as much as possible, annuities payments are best delayed. To retire at age 52, for example, on an anniuty income could well be inviting 30 years of inflation an d with only a fixed income to cope with it.

Comparing annuities with bank accounts is very much like counting apples and horses. They are two different media and I know of no way to weigh the advantages or disadvantages of one against the other.

Q. Please print the address of Houston Lighting which pays 8⅜ percent. I'd like to buy the security.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — President Carter should stop American sales to the Soviet Union of goods that can be used for military purposes, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said Saturday. HEARTLINE: I am 66 years old and I am on Medicare. I do not have any supplemental insurance to help with my Medicare payments. This summer my niece and I are planning a trip to Europe. If something should happen to me while in Europe, will Medicare cover me? E.S.

A. No, Medicare would not cover you for any medical problems or bills you may encounter on a vacation in Europe. Medicare will cover in all 50 of the United States and the American territories. Those territories are Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa and Puerto Rico, and the territorial waters of each. Medicare is good in Canada if you are en route to or from Alaska (direct route) or if you live in the United States in an area on the border of Canada or Mexico at a location where a Canadian or Mexican hospital is closer than an American hospital, or if an emergency occurs while you are in the U.S. and a Canadian or Mexican hospital is closer than a United States hospital.

For people who are now on the Medicare program or will soon be turning 65 and going on Medicare, Heartline now has available their brand new 1978 version of "Heartline's Guide to Medicare." This book is still written in easy to understand question and answer form but the 1978 issue has much more information. Insluded in the new issues are the new deductibles for part "A" medical insurance, more items and conditions that Medicare covers, a more concise explanation of reasonable charges, and detailed instructions on how to fill out your Medicare claim form.

You can receive the 1978 Heartline's guide to Medicare by sending $1.75 to Heartline's Guide to Medicare, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. This book is completely guaranteed, and if you are not satisfied your money will be cheerfully refunded. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: This spring my husband and I are going to be taking a little vacation. We are going to be on a very tight budget as we live on social security and my husband's company pension. We would like any information you may have on saving money during our trip. C.R.

A. One thing that vacation travelers touring the U.S. by car need to take into account when figuring their budget is local taxes. State taxes on cigarettes and gasoline, as well as local and sales taxes on other items may increase expenditures unexpectedly.

- Connecticut has the highest sales tax on the nation.
- Delaware's and Washington's high tax on gasoline is the same as Connecticut.
- Massachusetts and Florida's sales taxes equal Connecticut's on cigarettes.
- Texas has the lowest gasoline tax.
- As of July 1, 1976, there were no state sales taxes in Alaska, Delaware, Montana, New Hampshire, and Oregon.

Note that all state taxes on cigarettes and gasoline are in addition to the Federal taxes on these items.

Future Greatness Factors Will Vary

By LOUIS HARRIS

Americans believe that the combination of factors that will make this country great in the future is somewhat different from the one that made it great in the past.

In order of importance, Americans attribute America's present greatness to "rich, natural resources," "a hardworking people," "scientific research," "industrila know-how" and "technological genius." As they look ahead, people are convinced that the United States will depend more on scientific research, industrial know-how and technological genius, and less on natural resources and hard work.

Also gaining in importance as factors that will mark this country great in the future are: "government that responds to people's needs," "giving every race and creed an equal chance to get ahead" and " a free, unlimited education to all qualified."

Out of 20 major factors tested in a Harris Survey of 1,520 adults nationwide, six are projected to be more important factors over the next 25 years than they were in the past. The shifts:

—At the top of the list is "scientific research." While 89 percent feel this was an important factor in past greatness, an even higher 91 percent majority believes it will be a major factor in America's success in the next 25 years.

—"Technological genius" is felt to have been a key element in America's past greatness by a 75 percent majority. Seventy-eight percent believe it is a key to future national greatness, while 80 percent continue to think that industrial know-how will also be crucial. It is clear that Americans have not lost their traditional faith in our country's ability to solve problems through scientific innovation.

—"A government that responds to people's needs" is named by 61 percent as having made a major contribution to the country's greatness in the past. A much higher 70 percent think this opening up of the governing process will play an even more important role in the future. This result points up the profound impact of the Watergate episode on public opinion, as well as the deep-rooted determination of people to be included in the governing process.

—While 59 percent believe that "giving every race and creed an equal chance to get ahead" has been a major contributor to this country's greatness in the past, a more substantial 70 percent feel that this will be a key factor in the future. Despite deep divisions over such matters as housing discrimination and affirmative action, Americans are convinced that racial progress will take place, and they take considerable pride in this prospect.

—In the past, according to 72 percent, a major contributor to the country's greatness was a "free, unlimited education to all qualified." In the future, a higher 75 percent think that such educational opportunity will contribute to the country's greatness.

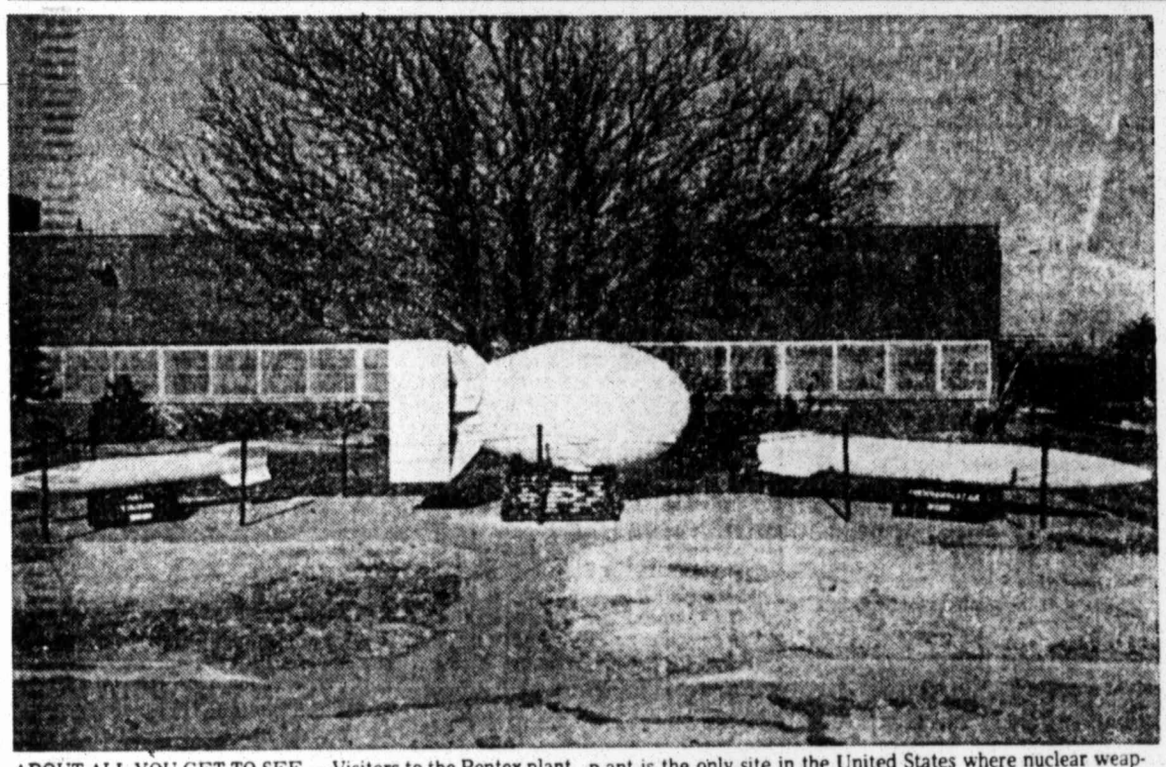
—Down in 19th place on what made America great in the past, cited by only 47 percent, are "outstanding political leaders." A higher 51 percent believe such leadership will be a key to the country's future greatness. This is a modest sign that faith in political leadership is beginning to be restored in the nation.

—At the bottom of the list of what made the country great in the past is "having a government that regulates industry," mentioned by 30 percent. Looking ahead, 36 percent mention government regulation of industry as important to future greatness. This is a reflection of the growing unhappiness of people about big business and their concern about business abuses.

In sharp contrast to these six areas, which appear to be growing in importance in the estimate of the public, two areas are marked by sharp declines:

—Compared with a high 89 percent who feel that "rich natural resources" were a major contributor to our national greatness in the past, 77 percent feel that our resources will be highly important in the future.

—A substantial 87 percent believe that "hardworking people" were a major reason for our national greatness in the past. Only 76 percent feel that this factor will be important in the future.



ABOUT ALL YOU GET TO SEE — Visitors to the Pentex plant outside Amarillo only get to see the administration building, with its display of nucler weapons of three generations. The p.ant is the only site in the United States where nuclear weapons are assembled. (AP Laserphoto)

Amarillo-Based Complex Assembles Nuclear Bombs

AMARILLO (AP) — Just as carburetors, steering wheels, ashtrays and radios move down an assembly line and end up as cars — so detonators, explosive components and plutonium head for Amarillo and become nuclear weapons.

The assembly point is a technological complex, a security-conscious city of its own 17 miles northeast of Amarillo — the Pantex Plant.

At present, Pantex is the only site in the United States where nuclear weapons are assembled.

Should President Carter gives the go-ahead for neutron bombs, Pantex will assemble them. Congress has already appropriated funds for the new bomb.

Neutron bombs are designed to leave buildings intact but kill people by spreading massive amounts of radiation.

Mason & Hanger-Silas Mason Co. operates the plant under a contract with the U.S. Department of Energy. A five-year extension of its contract was signed last year.

Visitors may go to the administration building, a squat structure whose garden display consists of three generations of nuclear weapons. Visitors may not go past the administration building to tour the 10,000-acre complex.

Pantex is part of the government's Albuquerque Operations, which includes four other facilities that contribute their products to the Panhandle assembly line.

According to a government report, electrical, electromechanical and mechanical components come from Missouri; detonators and explosive components from Ohio; plutonium from Colorado; and neutron-generating devices, or nuclear triggers, from Florida.

Plant Manager Ross Dunham said, "When nuclear weapons are shipped out of here to the military, they are ready for use."

In addition to its role as an assembly point, Pantex serves as a place to take assembled nuclear weapons apart. Nuclear weapons maintenance and repair is also handled.

With about 2,000 employees and an annual $30 million payroll, the facility is one of the largest employers in the Panhandle.

The site's military history dates back to 1942 and an Army ordinance plant. It returned to civilian use after the war, but the Atomic Energy Commission (now Energy Research and Development Administration) selected it in 1951 for a nuclear weapons program.

Dunham said pacifists bearing placards have appeared at Pantex from time to time, but strict security has kept espionage problems away.

A fatal accident occurred for the first time in March, when a chemical explosive detonated during a non-nuclear experiment. Three Pantex employees were killed.

"There is almost no danger of detonation or radioactive leakage," Dunham said. "We have one of the best safety programs in the world to prevent that sort of thing."

Public Apathy Apparent In Lake Board Voting

Buffalo Springs Lake is the most complete recreational facility in Lubbock, but many area residents, judging from last year's election of directors for the lake's governing body, apparently don't take much interest in it.

This year's candidates for Lubbock County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1 director say they hope that will change when polls open Saturday.

The five district directors serve staggered terms with three seats expiring this year. Candidates this year are Danny Edwards and Joanna Doss, and the two incumbents, Cubby B. Key and W. D. "Billy" Sims.

Long-time board member V. G. Browning is not seeking re-election, leaviing open at least one spot on the board for a new director.

Last Year's Election

All the candidates say county residents' interest needs to be greater for the lake and its management. In last year's board election, where six persons pulled in votes (or a vote) for two expiring seats, only 162 out of the county's 79,000 registered voters went to the polls.

The 1976 directors' election was more hotly pursued, turning 1,194 votes. Lake manager Jim Segrest, who won praise from all candidates on this year's ballot, suggested 1976's voter turnout was due to more aggressive campaigning by the candidates.

However, the eventual winners, Browning, Key and Burl H. Kizer, who resigned about six months ago and was replaced by Sims, each tallied more than twice the votes of any of the losers. It was not a close race.

Lake Use

Edwards said the lack of voter response at election times does not reflect the number of persons who use lake facilities. "I don't understand why more people don't get out and vote considering all the people who use the facilities... I'm surprised more people didn't file as candidates," he said.

Mrs. Doss said she does not feel Lubbock County residents know Buffalo Springs is their lake and they can vote for any candidate regardless in which precinct they live.

Mrs. Doss, only the second woman to make a bid for the board since its inception in 1956 (the first woman candidate was defeated), has taken out an ad in The Avalanche-Journal informing people that county taxes bought and paid for the lake.

Sims said, "The lack of interest by people at the polls reflect a positive side on how the lake is run. I think if we had a real problem they would come to the polls."

Special Interests Threat

A low turnout, however, is dangerous because special interest groups could lure people to vote their way, thus gaining control of the lake's governing board, Sims said.

"People don't come to vote because there's no ax to grind," said Key, reflecting Sim's sentiments. Key, who is seeking his second two-year term, added that another factor is that the lake is small.

What does Segrest feel would prompt voter interest? "Run an article on it the day before the election."

Candidates' Objectives

What are the candidates' objectives if elected or re-elected? Mrs. Doss wants to set up a public information program about the lake; Edwards wants to maintain the present "excellent upkeep" of the grounds; Sims said he will work to continue the "harmonious working relationship" between directors; and Key forsees a possible outdoor theater at Buffalo Springs Lake.

Key, owner of several auto supply shops who had odd jobs at the lake 35 years ago, said, "People are hungry for entertainment."

He said that hunger could be fed with an outdoor theater at the lake similar to the summer outdoor show, "Texas," at Palo Duro Canyon, only on a smaller scale.

Key said accomplishments by the board during his term included the addition of a concession stand and sewage improvements. "I think we've accomplished quite a bit the last two years," he said.

Gate Admission

Referring to the lake's 50 cents per person gate admission, Key said ground maintenance is paid for by the people who use the facilities, rather than being a burden on taxpayers.

When the district has enough money, Key said, a long-range plan might be implemented which, among other things, calls for the outdoor theater, a concession stand accessible by boat and a swimming pool at the lake.

He said, however, directors have voted down the swimming pool idea in the past because it was not believed it would be profitable.

Mrs. Doss said too many persons in the county do not realize the lake was paid for by their taxes, and that a public information program should be inititated by the district to inform residents of that fact.

Mrs. Doss, a housewife who lives at the Real-Life 'Kotter' In Ohio Successful Working With Misfit 'Dead-End Kids'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Get an A in Charles Tennant's class and he'll buy you a steak dinner. Get an A or a B, and he may get you a job.

For the past four years Tennant, 35, has been working with ninth-grade students who often are classified as "dead-end kids" — chronic hooky players, students with bad grades and bad attitudes.

Of the more than 100 students he has taught in four years, only eight have been fired by employers, Tennant says, and the scholastic improvement of the students has been even better than he thought it would be.

Tennant's work is part of a federally and state-funded work-study program under which students attend school half a day and work the rest of the day.

There are three basic rules in Tennant's class: no skipping school, pay attention and perform on the job.

He has another rule that no student can report for work who has missed school. And all must have savings accounts.

"We really build strong relationships. You gain respect of children once they know you are sincere and care," said Tennant, who has taught for 14 years.

Most of his students are placed in fast-food restaurant jobs, but Tennant said that for the first time, he recently placed two pupils with a local bank and an insurance company.

The two 15-year-old girls are the youngest employees the firms have ever hired, he said.

It's up to Tennant to find the jobs for his students.

"I've got my secrets with employers," he said. "If a store manager is smoking a 20-cent cigar, I'll bring him a $1 cigar. If the manager has a new addition to the family, I'll buy a gift."

His students, 14 and 15 years old, earned a total of $47,000 during the past two years, which Tennant claims is the highest earnings of any work-study group in the Columbus public school district.

Work-study courses are taught at 19 of the districts 23 high schools with a total enrollment of 500 school children. For Tennant and others, the program is the only course they teach.

Tennant says about eight or 10 students drop out of the program each year because they are unable to adapt to the rules, and he almost gave the class up the first year.

"Kids were getting fired or suspended. I didn't know how to cope," he said.

But he says he learned through trial and error, and now "I'm really having a ball."

Confidence Claimed On Upswing In U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — A survey of 5,000 households across the nation shows consumer confidence is in an upswing, the Conference Board said Sunday.

The board, a private economic research organization, said 27 percent of those polled rate business conditions as being good, compared with 24 percent in November. There was a slight increase in those who said they expect to purchase homes, a new or used car, and those who think their incomes will rise.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I stopped volunteering in my children's school when I was giving a reading and comprehension test one day to a group of seventh graders and discovered I was reading on a fifth-grade level.

Not only that but one of them came to me later and advised, "We were like you before our teacher participated in an in-service training program in pupil diagnosis and prescription and measured us on a set of criterion-referenced tests covering interim performance objectives."

Somehow between Spot chasing those lousy sticks all day and show and tell, education lost me.

I only go to parent-teacher conferences for the bridge mix and the punch anymore. To tell you the truth, I can barely remember when objectives weren't back to basics, classes "structured," teachers in terms, and interaction didn't sound dirty.

Educators have become so proficient at speaking educationese that I find myself having to translate for my son's teacher.

"Hello, Miss Sawyer," I said the other night. "I'm Wesley's mother." She frowned. "The home authority figure?"

"Of course, please have a seat."

"I see by Wesley's report card that he's been goofing off while you're out of the room."

She was straining to comprehend. "Translation: Rodents in the absence of their feline adversaries are prone to divert themselves."

"An excellent analogy."

"At home, we either threaten him by turning off 'Laverne and Shirley' or give 'em a rap. Translation: Motivate him through fear or eliminate an electronic visual completely."

She nodded.

"Perhaps it would be less sweat if we could work together." Miss Sawyer winced. "Or to put it another way, a combination of the facilitator and the facilitatee feeding into the learning program that is designed to enhance the concept of the learning program with a minimum of perspiration."

She smiled. "Articulation between the non-academic community and the post-secondary world is one of the classic unsolved education problems which we seem to have alleviated."

I'm not sure, but I think Miss Sawyer just said she favors birth control.

Exercise Enjoyable In Spa Setting

By JANICE JARVIS
Family News Staff

Whether people admit it or not, the work ethic creeps into everything that people do — even the way they play. A set of tennis becomes a chore, a round of golf a tool for shaving inches off.

"It's unavoidable," explained an exercise enthusiast. "If you want to stay in shape nothing replaces good hard work." But that good hard work is easier to swallow when it's in a spa setting, with saunas and whirlpools to help coax the pounds off.

Spas began as luxurious retreats that only the very rich could afford. But, health fads today have put new demands on spas. In the 1960's spas became increasingly popular, and could be found in almost any town. Then the market peaked and the collapse followed. There are few spas that remain in operation today, but the survivors are as popular as ever.

Although less prevelent, spas are affordable now, and that may be at least partially the reason for their popularity. Even if the work is hard, spas pamper people in a way most exercise programs don't.

As more and more people become aware of phsyical fitness, spas offer a two-fold advantage — practicality coupled with luxury.

For some spa goers, luxury has become a necessity and the most convenient way to stay in shape. Increased emphasis on health and fitness has practically turned exercise into a criteria for happiness.

In the past that just wasn't true. "It used to be that if a man let himself go, his wife just looked the other way," explained Bob Heinsheimer, manager of a local health spa. Today if she's in shape she'll nudge him on his way to physical fitness. Likewise, if a man enjoys working out, he may encourage his wife to cash in on the benefits.

When used properly, spas offer a woman the chance to be sleek and trim. Some men claim they enjoy the sense of well being that comes with exercise, and toned muscles are only a side benefit.

In a society where the emphasis is on sexuality, spas have captured a large market. "Women may not admit it, but deep down inside they have the dream of being in great shape," said Heinsheimer. Almost everything surrounding women is geared toward sexuality, and a slim figure and sexuality go hand in hand, he added.

Men too are equally as victimized by the spa's appeal to their egos. "A lot of men played sports in high school or college, then they hit middle-age and discover they're not the athlete they thought they were," noted Heinsheimer. The equipment at spas may not make them a pro quarterback but it does replace lost muscle tone.

For non-athletes, spas have just as much appeal. Sometimes it's the thin, underdeveloped man who wants the chance to develop muscles. "Maybe in school he didn't participate in sports because he never could make the team," explained Heinsheimer. Since spa exercises are on an individual basis there is no team to make, no competition to loose to.

Once a person starts to get in shape, psychological changes occur as well as physical ones. "Knowing they're in shape gives them a sense of acceptance," said Heinsheimer.

Another advantage spa goers are discovering is freedom from lifetime commitment. Todays spas come a lower price without a contract clamping down on people's sense of freedom. The price still adds up to the $100 plus price range but as more spas follow the trend of no contracts, more people are inclined to invest. If a person comes regularly the price is worthwhile, but they won't get results if they join and never come, according to Heinsheimer. "If getting in shape is something a person really wants to do, the money isn't a problem, since they'll get what they're paying for," said Heinsheimer.

Because spas offer people a chance to exercise in privacy, anyone of any age can feel comfortable in the spa atmosphere. "As pounds are shed so are inhibitions," noted Heinsheimer.

Exercise then becomes an addictive thing, said Heinsheimer. And like most addictions, kicking the habit, is one most addicts would rather avoid, especially when the adiction is such a positive one.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am having a terrible time with my 22-month-old daughter. She bites her playmates when they won't do what she wants. The other children are approximately her age. I have tried hitting her, scolding, talking, even biting her back (lightly), which I was told to do in desperation. I can't have her biting children. What can I do? Should I keep her away from other children completely? — E.B.

Forget the hitting and scolding. The former is the worst possible kind of child "psychology," the latter usually without effect. Biting back is a horrible move, even in desperation. It puts you at her level in a biting contest.

Look for a resonable explanation for this behavior. You may have to resort to some home psychology to find it.

She might be disturbed by something at home, something she cannot explain, but for which this bit of hostility seems a suitable outlet. Often an initial biting incident can set off a chain-reaction battle of wills, with scolding and spanking followed by more biting, and so on. She might be jealous of other children her age. More attention to her non-biting moments is in order. Is the father overdominant? Is discipline too strict? There can be many causes.

Another possibility: She could be having problems with certain teeth that arrive at about this age and can be troublesome — enough to make her want to use this form of "teething" but not enough to make her cry with pain. It makes her irritable.

All you can do is to investigate these possibilities. If you have to, you can try keeping her away from her playmates for a spell. Make it clear why this privilege is being withdrawn.

It is not uncommon for children this age to bite others, but it has to be discouraged for obvious reasons. I think she'll lose this complex soon, but I can sympathize with your present dilemma.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My type of allergy is called allergic rhinitis. In a book dealing with allergies I read of a type of rhinitis they say is not allergy but caused by "vasomotor conditions." Would you explain this condition for me. The book said nothing more than that. — Mrs. D.A.

The result is the same, whether it is allergic rhinitis or vasomotor rhinitis. The nasal membrane becomes swollen, boggy and pale. With allergic rhinitis, the cause can be laid to a sensitivity — pollen (hay fever), dust, animal dander, and the like. With vasomotor rhinitis, the membranes react similarly to cold, humidity, or changes in position.

There is really little more to say because both are so similar. In fact, vasomotor rhinitis may actually be an allergic rhinitis for which the specific cause is not known. Have the sinuses checked into.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there any best time of the month for a woman to examine her breast? — P.T.

Given a choice, probably the best time is when her period stops, if she is having periods. If not, any set day of the month is OK, say on the first. That's just for convenience in remembering.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me the symptoms of not getting enough vitamin B-12. Also, what would be a normal daily intake? — B.M.N.

Because the need is so low (measured in millionths of grams) a deficiency is rare for anyone getting any amount of meat, fish or poultry. When a deficiency arises, it is almost always due to an inability to absorb it normally. Only the very strictest of vegetarian diets would cause a deficiency. Symptoms are widespread, including tonuge soreness, weakness, and other signs of anemia. In fact, it is the body's inability to use this vitamin in our food that causes pernicious anemia.

LIBERATED SOCCER

ROME (WNS) — Women's Liberation has come to soccer in Italy and Holland. Women players and women's teams in each country are affiliated with their respective nations' ruling soccer organizations and get equal treatment for international matches. Sportswomen in some other European nations are threatening severe action if they don't get free invitations to male championship games "the way Dutch and Italian girls do."

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Your answer to Living a Nightmare did the police across the nation a disservice. You said, "The wife has to call the police while he's still hitting her (a neat trick) or enlist the help of the children or neighbors: By the time the police show up the skunk is acting like a pussycat. He says, 'She's nuts.' The police believe him and that's the end of it."

No, Ann, we do not believe him. Don't you think we have eyes and can see what he has done to her? It's true we can't arrest a man and take him away for busting up his own furniture, but many times my partner and I have offered to take the wife to a friend or relative until she can contact an attorney. Ninety-nine per cent of the time she refuses. I can't count the number of times we have arrived while the husband is actively beating the daylights out of his wife, and what do you suppose happens when we finally get him pulled off of her? She turns around and clabbers us with a chair or a lamp. I have scars to prove it.

So, Ann, when you say, "The police believe him and that's the end of it," you're way off. We want to help but there is only so much we can do. — Been There And Back

Dear B.T.A.B.: You are right. What's more, dozens of police officers have been shot trying to break up family fights. It's dangerous duty and more often than not a thankless job. My apologies.

Dear Ann Landers: It has become fashionable for women to wear blouses unbuttoned very low — and no bra. On those who have good figures it looks quite attractive.

At several parties recently I have seen women with whom I am quite friendly wearing blouses unbuttoned almost to the waist. Everything, and I mean everything, is visible from the side view. These women are not cheap trollops — they are respectable and decent. The question is, should I tell them? Incidentally, they are all married and their husbands don't seem to mind. — Dilated Pupils

Dear Di: These women know what they look like — from all sides. So do their husbands. My eyes have also popped at some of the sights I've seen but I keep my mouth shut and I think you should, too.

Dear Ann Landers: A major complaint among handicapped persons, especially the blind, is the prevailing lack of social acceptance by the non-handicapped.

Blind persons are demonstrating effectively their abilities to perform in occupatianal situations, achieve mobility skills, acquire varied educational levels, and are intellectually conversant on tapical issues. Nevertheless, they are isolated by their peers who do not consider them acceptable as social companions.

A blind club member, unless aggressive to a fault, will most likely be passed by as a candidate for office. Club members entertaining guests in their homes frequently do not extend invitations to those who are handicapped.

If a blind person is denied social acceptance for the same reasons that a non-handicapped individual is found socially unacceptable, it is understandable. But to be rejected solely because of blindness is a social barrier difficult to overcome.

Miss Landers, please encourage your readers to look beyond one's visual handicap for the real person behind the sightless eyes. — Sincerely, Don Nold

Dear Don: Thank you for giving us something to think abaut today.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A1073 ♡AQ93 ◇8 ♣KQ82
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	Pass
Dble.	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. Your prospects of defeating four spades are bright but, if the opponents are reliable bidders, don't make the mistake of doubling. That could only help declarer in the play. However, if you know that your opponents are prone to take a plunge every now and then, a speculative double could reap a rich reward.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q105 ♡J9873 ◇95 ♣KJ4
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Dble.	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	2 ◇	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—By first doubling and then bidding his own suit, partner has shown an excellent hand. Thus far you have promised him nothing, yet you have useful values. We suggest you show your stoppers in the enemy suit by bidding two no trump. If your side does have a game, no trump is the most likely spot.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♡9 ◇KQJ82 ♣AJ1063
The first three players pass. What action do you take in fourth seat?

A.—Your hand would be worth an opening bid in any other position but, in fourth position, we suggest that you pass and throw in the deal. Your opponents almost certainly have a good fit in one of the major suits, so why fight what probably will be a losing battle by opening the hand for them?

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K10 ♡AKQJ6 ◇6 ♣J9872
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ◇	2 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—If you weigh your distributional values properly, your hand is certainly worth a move toward game. In fact, we wouldn't criticize a direct jump to four hearts, but that might punish partner unnecessarily for bidding under pressure. A sounder approach is to bid three clubs, which allows partner to evaluate his holding in your second suit.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ ♡Q82 ◇K93 ♣98742
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	1 ♠	Pass	1 NT
Pass	2 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—For the moment, we really don't know what partner is aiming at. However, his cue-bid of opener's suit is unconditionally forcing. Since you have two top honors in partner's suit, a bid of two spades at this point is sufficient. Partner should clarify the meaning of his cue-bid at his next turn.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J87 ♡Q5 ◇K8652 ♣A83
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Dble.

What action do you take?

A.—Normally, you should redouble when holding 10 points. Here, however, that would leave you badly placed for the rest of the auction. You don't have enough to double the opponents if they land in a black suit, and your length in partner's suit is insufficient to offer delayed support. You can solve your problems by bidding one no trump now—that should facilitate your rebids, if any.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K754 ♡K83 ◇AKJ7 ♣106
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner has made a move toward game. Despite your near minimum point count, the fact that almost all of your points are in aces and kings increases the worth of your hand considerably. To bid less than four spades is inexcusable.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠4 ♡AQJ85 ◇872 ♣K965
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three no trump. Partner's bid has allayed any fears you might have about a spade weakness at no trump. And if partner's bid was a strength-showing bid in support of hearts, he has the opportunity to rebid four hearts over your three no trump. Either way, you are bound to end up in the best spot.

Oswald: "Let's discuss your first bid when you have one five-card suit, one four-card suit and enough cards to warrant action."

Alan: "You should bid the five-card suit almost all the time. So we might look at the exceptions."

Oswald: "The first exception is in responding to partner's suit opening when you have enough for a response but not enough to go to the two level. Today, most experts play that when responder goes to the two level he shows at least ten points and promises a rebid."

Alan: "North has just eight high-card points. He responds one spade. A few South players would raise to two spades. North would struggle along and either make it or go down one depending on how he played the hand."

Oswald: "A better rebid is two diamonds. South would play there and lose two hearts, a club and a trump to collect an overtrick."

Alan: "A two-club response would get to the same spot this time but the future partnership would be damaged when North, who had practically promised another bid, failed to make it."

A Vermont reader wants to know what a match point is.

It is a term in duplicate scoring. Each hand is counted separately and you score one-half a match point for each pair you tie and 1 match point for each pair you beat. In a nine table game you can score eight match points if you beat every other pair.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Folks:

If you are like I am and do your own sewing, and that box is full of dress patterns...you and I both know there is one favorite pattern in the lot!

We use it as a basic because it fits. We change it when making new garments by adding different sleeves, collars, etc. But still there is that one old pattern we love dearly. It's probably about ten years old. Mine is!

But the trouble with my pattern is that it was so dilapidated, torn, and wrinkled that it was hard to use.

Many people who sew like to cut new patterns from newspapers or brown paper. Somehow, it's not the same as the old pattern.

I rejuvenated my favorite basic pattern (I had two, one an old shorts pattern and the other my basic dress style) by putting an old quilt on my floor, covering it with one sheet of newspaper — yep — here's another use for that newspaper — and tearing off sheats of waxed paper and covering the newspaper with it.

Lay your tissue pattern, right side up, on top of this waxed paper and get out that old iron. Turn it on medium heat and iron the tissue paper pattern.

Know what happens?

The wax from the waxed paper will adhere to the pattern, thus giving it body and making it last longer!

Sometimes, the two pieces of paper sorta stick together and if you desire you can leave them this way — just trim off the excess wax paper around the pattern piece — otherwise, carefully peel the two pieces apart.

If you separate the two and find the pattern is still too limp to suit you, just turn the pattern over, use fresh sheets of wax paper and repeat the process.

You'll have added new life to that old pattern and hopefully, given yourself a lift as well...

Good luck and successful sewing! — Heloise

CHICKEN SALAD PACIFICA

2 cups peeled, sliced fresh nectarines
2 cups diced cooked chicken
1 cup sliced celery
¼ cup mayonnaise
½ tsp. grated lemon rind
2 tsp. lemon juice
2 tsp. soy sauce
1 tbsp. finely chopped onion
½ tsp. granulated sugar
¼ tsp. ground ginger
⅛ tsp. pepper
Salad greens
¼ cup toasted slivered almonds

Combine nectarines, chicken and celery in large bowl. Blend all remaining ingredients except salad greens and almonds. Toss chicken mixture lightly with dressing. Chill. Serve on crisp greens.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise:

A wife was complaining to her husband that she wouldn't be able to go to the country club because her hair was straggly, stirngy, "dirty" and looked like the "witch of the wispers."

The husband said, "Never mind, doll, you'll be right in style." — Dan Foote

LEAGUE SEMINAR — "Reaching Out: Communication, Motivation and Personal Growth" will be the theme of a seminar for members of the Junior League of Lubbock at 10 a.m. Tuesday. Dan Baker of San Antonio will conduct the seminar. Baker, a native Texan, has conducted management and sales seminars throughout the country. He is the author of "Take a Break."

Dear Heloise:

When making cupcakes or cornbread muffins, I find that using an ice cream scoop with a thumb release to place the batter in the muffin tins is so much easier and takes less time than filling them with a spoon, etc.

You do not have a messy muffin pan to clean up either and the muffins come out more uniform in size. — Ruth T.

Dear Heloise:

I use a plastic bag to line my rectangular wastepaper basket but could never get it to stay put without resorting to an elastic band of some sort.

One night while sitting in the emergency room at the hospital, I noticed what a janitor did when changing the liner in the wastebaskets there.

He merely tied a knot in one corner of the open end of the plastic bag and it slipped over the basket slick as a whistle, taut as could be.

I was so glad to learn this little trick that it made me feel my time had almost been well spent sitting there. (As it turned out, nothing was seriously wrong with my child.) — H.B.

Dear Heloise:

When using tiebacks on curtains, put one loop on the tieback through the other loop. Then, instead of having two loops to keep in place properly on the nail that holds them, you have just one — which stays in place just fine.

No more falling down when you use the window shade, etc. So much easier! — Mrs. Margaret Schultz lake and also has held part-time jobs at the recreational site, says she favors the lake admission charge to get in, and that it is not simply a way to take advantage of the fact it is the only lake in the county.

Officials Say Public Lacks Interest In Lake

County Taxes

While saying she is open to suggestions on how else the district could pay its bills, she feels it would not be fair to use county taxes when many of those coming to the lake live outside the county.

She said the district needs to try to attract more overnight campers. "All we get now are skiers, fishermen and picnickers."

Mrs. Doss also thought a suggestion box at the front gate at the lake might make the district more aware of what those who use the facilities want.

Sims, owner of a trailer business, was asked by Segrest to fill the vacancy left by former director Burl Kizer who resigned about six months ago because of business interests. Sims also served on the board from 1970-71.

Sims said he chose not to seek re-election after his first term because it was taking too much of his time away from his business. He says he has the time now to serve on the board.

Future Looks Good

Sims sees no real problems facing the board in the near future.

The lake's governing body has "quite a bit of business sense," he said. "I think we've got quite a bit to offer right now... we've got a lot going for us."

The lake should first be thought of as a recreational facility and then as a residential area, Sims said. Buffalo Springs has 185 residents and 300 lot leases.

Segrest estimates about a million persons, including lake residents, go through the gates yearly. The grounds encompass 225 surface acres of water and 7 1/2 miles of shoreline.

Edwards, whose father, J. S. Jr., was on the the first board of directors, said he decided to run in December when he learned Browning would not seek re-election.

The Slaton farmer said his main objective if elected would be to continue the "fine work" the board has been doing.

"I would like to see the place kept up as well as it has the past several years," Edwards said. "I think they do a whale of a job."

Edwards, who thinks the election's outcome is a toss-up, said his interests for the lake are fed by the fact he goes there frequently, and formerly lived there.

The self-proclaimed fisherman said he would like to see fish spawning stepped up at the lake.

Campaign Expenses

Mrs. Doss says her campaign expenses will total at least $600 after printing and distributing literature on the election, gas consumption and taking out newspaper ads.

The other three candidates say they will spend no more than $100 in the race. Mrs. Doss said her high expenses are due partly because if she is elected she will be breaking a long-time tradition by becoming the first woman to serve as director on the Lubbock County Water Control and Improvement District. — JACK DOUGLAS

Ice Threatens Ships On Great Lakes

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard on Sunday asked iron ore carriers and other freighters entering the Great Lakes to travel in convoys because of severe icing on the lakes.

Three Coast Guard cutters led a convoy of three freighters from Cleveland Sunday morning to the upper Great Lakes. Over the weekend, the Coast Guard said it freed several ships that had become ice-bound.

PEOPLE — PLACES — THINGS

Migrating Robins Pull Annual Bender

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Every year, migrating robins flock into Fort Myers to take advantage of the sunshine, warm weather and other ammenities — such as Brazilian pepper berries.

The fermenting berries make them "drunk as coot," says Charles Foster, Audubon Society president for Southwest Florida. "I've seen them put on some real good shenanigans after they've been in those berries."

Local residents have reported seeing tipsy robins doing aerial acrobatics, chasing each other on the ground, running into solid objects and literally staggering.

Bill Hammond of the Lee County Nature Center said the birds run some risk since the bright red berries contain a toxic substance that can build up to lethal levels if consumed in large amounts.

Officials Worried By Boa Skins

MIAMI (AP) — For some people, one boa skin is one too many, but U.S. Customs in Miami has 200 of the things to try to get rid of.

The rule books don't say much about boa skins, so Customs has asked for a court order authorizing the agency to send the skins back to Colombia.

The boa skins have been in storage for 1½ years — since they were shipped through Miami International Airport bound for Michigan without the needed export permit. The skins are used for belts and handbags.

Customs also has a couple of lizard skins. They don't want those either.

Rains Return Californian's Job

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — So how wet is it in northern California? It's so wet Don Neudeck has finally returned to work as California's flood operations chief.

"My business cards are right again," Neudeck beamed as rains filled the region's rivers and streams Sunday, the 23rd day of rain in 30 days.

During the past two dry years Neudeck toiled at a somewhat different task — chief of the state Drought Information Center.

Survey Ranks God First In Iowa

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — In Iowa, a survey concludes, people tend to believe in God and state troopers — but not labor unions, government agencies or real estate agents. They also have more confidence in grocery stores than in the FBI.

Those are some of the findings in the latest copyright "Iowa Poll" released in the Des Moines Sunday Register.

Iowans were asked to rank 39 governmental, business, religious and social institutions.

The top six were God, the Iowa Highway Patrol, banks and financial institutions, the medical profession, hospitals, and organized religion and churches.

The bottom six were real estate agents, Iowa Farm Bureau, state government regulatory agencies, federal government regulatory agencies, organized labor and other farm organizations.

WATCHING AN INTERCEPTION — Denver quarterback Craig Morton is surrounded by Dallas Cowboys Randy White (54) and Charlie Waters (41) as they watch one of Morton's passes being intercepted in first quarter Super Bowl XII action. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Roger Staubach steered the Dallas Cowboys through a sea of Super Bowl mistakes Sunday for a 27-10 victory over the Denver Broncos to capture the world championship of professional football.

Staubach threw one touchdown pass to Butch Johnson in the third quarter and running back Robert Newhouse hurled another on an option play to Golden Richards in the fourth as the Cowboys picked apart the Denver secondary.

Tony Dorsett, forced out of the game in the third period with a twisted right knee, scored the other Cowboys touchdown on a 3-yard run after Dallas intercepted the first of four passes off Broncos quarterback Craig Morton.

The Broncos had boasted that Dallas' only serious receiving threat was flanker Drew Pearson, but Pearson did less damage than any of the other targets in the Cowboys' arsenal.

Johnson made a circus catch in the end zone on a 45-yard bomb from Staubach in the third quarter and Richards grabbed Newhouse's pitch for Dallas' wrapup TD.

Efren Herrera kicked field goals of 35 and 43 yards but missed three other attempts that would have given Dallas a much more comfortable margin through the middle quarters of one of the National Football League's messiest championship games.

Time after time, the fierce "Doomsday II" defense of the Cowboys forced vital Denver turnovers and finally, just as they had predicted, the Dallas defenders chased Denver quarterback Morton clear out of the ball game.

Morton, a former Cowboy who had thrown only eight interceptions all season — lowest of any passer in the American Football Conference — had four aerials picked off in the first half alone. He finally was lifted in the middle of a Bronco offensive series and replaced by Norris Weese, who moved Denver to its only touchdown of the game.

Morton, not a mobile quarterback, was a sitting duck for the fierce Dallas defensive rush. Weese, a scrambler, had better success, but not much.

There were a record 10 fumbles by both teams, setting a Super Bowl high water mark for sloppiness. For a while, the game threatened to become a Turnover Bowl with mistakes by both teams all over the field.

But Staubach created order from the chaos and the Cowboys defense short-circuited Denver's attack.

The Dallas "Flex" is a defense that depends on each player holding his position, avoiding the trap blocking that sets so many offenses in motion. On Sunday, the Cowboys were not only staying in their lanes, they also were ruining Denver's.

On successive series in the first period, Morton threw soft passes that were easily picked off by Dallas defenders. Each time he threw the ball with Cowboys defenders on top of him.

The first time, the Broncos were on their own 29 when Randy White and Charlie Waters swarmed Morton. As he was heading for the hard Superdome artificial turf, the Denver quarterback threw the ball. It floated softly into the arms of Randy Hughes of Dallas at the Broncos' 25. In first down, Staubach hit Billy Joe DuPree for 13 yards. That gave Dallas a first down at the 12 and three shots into the line by Newhouse and Dorsett moved it to the 3. On fourth down and inches,

Superdome —That's In Orleans

CINCINNATI (AP) — "What state is the Superdome in?" said the voice on the other end of the phone.

"Louisiana," came the reply.

"I thought the game was in New Orleans?" the caller persisted.

"It is," he was assured.

"Well, isn't New Orleans in Alabama?"

If half the U.S. populace was glued to the television set on Super Bowl Sunday, the other half must have been dialing newsrooms and wire services with trivia questions. Or so it seemed.

The calls range from the bargain-hunters — "Hello A&P? Do you have fresh chitlins today?" — to the cloak-and-dagger type.

"I have CIA documents that prove a friend of mine — who was shot down in 1950 — is alive in a Russian prison camp. This could be bigger than Watergate. No, I'm sorry, I can't give you my name."

The friendly saloon wagers always lead by a landslide. Just ask any sports department.

Here's a sampling received Sunday by The Cincinnati Enquirer as the Dallas Cowboys and Denver Broncos battled for NFL supremacy.

"How much money did Steve Cauthen earn in 1977?"

"Who holds the record for the longest field goal in the National Football League? Here, tell my friend. I say Horst Muhlman had one over 60 yards." (He didn't. Tom Dempsey did.)

"What's the Guinness record for holding your head under water?"

"How many times in a pro basketball game do they switch ends?"

"What year was the 'Heidi' game?"

"Hey man, do foxes climb trees?"

"Are there any snakes in Canada?"

A female caller disputed a TV commentator's statement that Super Bowl XII was the first one held indoors.

"They played in Houston one year," she said, scolding a veteran sportswriter who answered the phone.

"That's right," he replied. "But it was played at Rice Stadium."

"Rice Stadium????"

Still intact at the end of the day was the office record 'for shortest question-and-answer conversation.'

It happened a couple years ago and it went like this:

"What year did Pete Rose win rookie of the year?'

"His first," came the reply.

"Thank you."

Broncos Saved Worst For Last

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — They saved their worst for last.

A Denver Broncos team which played relatively error-free football in 16 previous games lost four fumbles and suffered four interceptions Sunday in bowing to the Dallas Cowboys 27-10 in the Super Bowl.

"All those turnovers are hard to explain," said Denver running back Jim Jensen. "So many times this season other teams did that for us."

"We had seven turnovers in the first half alone," said wide receiver Haven Moses. "You don't do that against a good team like Dallas."

"We did just about everything wrong there was to do wrong," said quarterback Craig Morton, whose four interceptions set a Super Bowl record.

"I was embarrassed," said all-pro defensive end Lyle Alzado.

But outright dejection was not the prevailing mood in the Denver locker room. Most of the Broncos praised the Dallas defense, which they said was responsible for some of the turnovers. They promised that the Broncos had learned something from their first Super Bowl and would return.

"Dallas was just overwhelming defensively," said Coach Red Miller.

Morton, who had suffered some frustrating seasons at Dallas and New York before returning to the Super Bowl to face his old team, said the Cowboys' defense was uncanny.

"They seemed to know almost every play we were calling," said the 13-year veteran who was a key player in the Broncos' best season ever. "I tried to audible but they even read some of those. They had a great rush. They took everything away from us."

Morton said he was "disappointed" in his performance but felt "blessed that I'm here. You might expect me to be more disappointed, but we've accomplished too much."

Turnovers Killed Broncos

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "I don't think I've ever seen the football bouncing around like that," said Aaron Kyle, the young Dallas cornerback who scooped up two of a record 10 Super Bowl turnovers Sunday.

Denver coughed up the football eight times and Dallas twice. Four of Denver'sturnovers in its 27-10 loss to Dallas came on interceptions tossed by quarterback Craig Morton, another Super Bowl record.

All-Pro safety Charlie Waters of the Cowboys said he was surprised at Morton's ineffectiveness.

"I didn't think Craig would put it up for grabs like that," Waters said. "But our secondary made things happen out there. They said before the game that our secondary was our weakest link. That's a joke.

"Earlier this week, Craig said he hoped he would see me blitzing. As it turned out, it was me who blitzed and caused him to throw his first interception."

The blitz — using a linebacker or defensive back in addition to the linemen to rush the quarterback — was part of the Dallas defensive game plan, said tackle Randy White.

"We knew going in that one of the keys was putting pressure on Craig Morton, so that's what we did," said White.

"We've been putting that kind of pressure on quarterbacks all year," said Waters. "We came in planning to blitz and we did it."

Kyle, a second-year pro, said he had picked off only one pass in his career before Sunday and had never recovered a fumble.

"I guess I picked the right time," he said. "A game as important as this one, you really want to make the big plays. Everybody was making them tonight. Everybodyelse was hitting them and making them give up the football. The ball just happened to bounce my way."

Denver wide receiver Rick Upchurch said the fumbles were due to an excess of enthusiasm.

"That happens to a team sometimes," he said. "But we're young and we'll be back."

Injuries Plague Super Bowl XII

Dallas went for all the marbles and Dorsett burst into the end zone for the touchdown.

Now Denver started again, this time from the 40. On second down, Morton dropped back and found Ed "Too Tall" Jones draped over him. His pass was tipped by middle linebacker Bob Bruenig and picked off by cornerback Aaron Kyle at the Dallas 46.

Kyle took the ball 19 yards to the Denver 35 and Staubach went to work again.

Newhouse and Dorsett ripped off 27 yards on two plays. But then the Broncos stiffened and the Cowboys had to settle for Herrera's 35-yard field goal and a 10-0 lead.

At the end of the period, Denver had managed only eight yards in total offense — three rushing and five passing. Things did not improve for Denver in the second quarter, which was played almost entirely in the Broncos' end of the field.

On Dallas' first possession of the period, Staubach threw passes of 11 yards to Preston Pearson and 19 to DuPree as the Cowboys marched to the Denver 19. On a third-down play, Staubach was forced to scramble and finally threw for the end zone.

Denver's Bill Thompson picked the pass off, but the officials ruled that Staubach had stepped out of bounds, ending the play and washing out the interception.

Television replays were inconclusive, but there was no dispute in the Superdome, where replay screens — used for most events — had been lofted to the ceiling by NFL officials and not used.

The reason given was that they interfered with television lighting.

On the next play, Herrera kicked another field goal, this one for 43 yards and a 13-0 Dallas lead.

On Denver's next series, Morton was intercepted again — this time by Bennie Barnes. The Cowboys moved downfield with the help of a muffed punt by Bronco John Schultz, but this time Herrera was wide with a 43-yard kick.

Morton's first decent completion was wiped out by Jack Dolbin's fumble following his 15-yard catch. Hughes recovered, setting up another chance for Herrera. But he missed again, this time on a 32-yarder.

On Denver's next play, Morton hit Riley Odoms for 10 yards, but he fumbled the ball away to Hughes. Then Dallas gave it right back with DuPree catching a 16-yarder from Staubach only to fumble the ball to Denver's Tom Jackson.

Mark Washington picked off another Morton pass with six seconds left in the half. But Herrera missed his third field goal try in a row, a 44-yarder on the final play before intermission.

Denver got a break at the start of the second half when the Cowboys had 12 men on the field on a fake punt that came up short. The Broncos converted the error with Jim Turner's 47-yard field goal, 1 yard short of the Super Bowl record set by Kansas City's Jan Stenerud in 1970.

But Dallas bounced right back as Johnson took Staubach's 45-yard pass on his fingertips and tumbled into the end zone for a touchdown that made it 20-3. When he landed, Johnson dropped the ball, but he had already crossed the plane of the end zone for a spectacular touchdown.

The Broncos weren't finished yet. Rick Upchurch, zigging and zagging all the way, returned the kickoff a Super Bowl record 67 yards to put Morton in business at the Cowboys' 26. On first down, Larry Cole barreled in on Morton, whose hurried pass nearly was intercepted by Jones.

At that point, Denver Coach Red Miller realized that Morton simply couldn't escape the Dallas rush and lifted his quarterback in favor of the more-mobile Weese, the bearded second-year man from Mississippi.

The change seemed to lift the Broncos and they scored their touchdown after former Cowboy Jim Jensen had kept the drive alive by going 16 yards to the Dallas 1 on a fourth-and-one play. Rob Lytle scored the touchdown.

That made it 20-10 and when Dorsett and Staubach were forced to the dressing room at the start of the fourth quarter, Dallas could have been in trouble.

Staubach had wrenched his right hand and Dorsett was limping on his bad right knee. But the Dallas defense refused to bend.

They harrassed Weese into three straight incomplete passes and took charge of the game. Then, when Newhouse threw his option pass touchdown to Richards, the issue was settled.

It was only the second time a halfback pass has been tried in the 12 years of the Super Bowl and it was the first one to be completed.

In the game, Denver managed only 11 first downs and between them, Morton and Weese put together only 61 yards passing compared to the 217 that Dallas gained through the air. Of that total, Staubach accounted for 182, completing 17 of 25 attempts.

Danny White filled in for him after the wrenched passing hand became too painful.

Dorsett and Newhouse kept the Denver defenders occupied on the ground, gaining 66 and 55 yards, respectively.

When it was over, Dallas had its second Super Bowl championship on its fourth trip to the title game and Denver — playing for the championship for the first time — had ended its Cinderella season on a dismal note.

The Dallas victory was the first for a National Conference team since 1972, when the Cowboys beat Miami in Super Bowl VI. The American Conference still holds an 8-4 edge in the championship series which began 11 years ago to the day — Jan. 15, 1967 — when Green Bay defeated Kansas City in Super Bowl I.

The game, the first shown in prime time, also was one of the longer Super Bowls, running 3 hours, 35 minutes.

Defensive end Harvey Martin and tackle Randy White shared the game's Most Valuable Player awards, the first time in Super Bowl history that two players were selected for the honor.

Dallas Credits Defense, Foe

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Dallas wide receivers Golden Richards, Butch Johnson and Drew Pearson sat at their dressing room stalls smiling and thanking Bernard Jackson.

Dallas' 27-10 Super Bowl victory was fashioned by a crackling defense and two great catches by a wide receiver corps maligned by Denver safety Jackson earlier in the week.

"Jackson can go study those films now and find out what kind of receivers we have," said Pearson. "All he did out there was smile a lot. Butch beat him and Golden beat him."

Johnson caught a 45-yard scoring pass from Roger Staubach in the third period for a 20-3 Dallas lead, then runningback Robert Newhouse uncorked a 29-yard touchdown toss to Richards after the rallying Broncos had cut the deficit to 20-10.

"I was playing with a cracked thumb when I made my catch. We thought we could beat Jackson deep," said Johnson, who soared over the goalline, then dropped the ball.

"I felt I had broken the plane of the goal," said Johnson. "I heard Jackson complaining. He sure talks a lot."

Richards said the fullback pass from Newhouse, the first time Dallas had used it this season, took advantage of Jackson.

"He told me I wasn't very good and running kind of funny early in the game," said Newhouse. "I never heard another word out of him after that."

Jackson had called Richards a "once-in-a-while receiver" and said Kansas City had better receivers than the Cowboys.

The Dallas defense, which had a picnic with four interceptions off former teammate Craig Morton, dominated the Broncos' offense until reserve quarterback Norris Weese moved the team in the second half.

"I predicted that Craig wouldn't last the game because of his lack of mobility," said safety Cliff Harris. "He just couldn't handle the blitzes. Beating Craig really made it sweet.

"I was glad to see them take him out of there because I knew if he had time, he could complete the passes."

Dallas linebacker Thomas Henderson said, "I told Craig once to throw me one. He was throwing them to everybody else."

Longhorns 'Baffling' To Lemons

By The Associated Press

The coach of the surprising Texas Longhorns is a bold-faced liar for saying third-ranked Arkansas couldn't be beaten in the Southwest Conference this year, says Abe Lemons — coach of the Texas Longhorns.

"Yeah, I said they couldn't be beaten, but you can't always believe what I say," Lemons said Saturday night after unranked Texas stunned the unbeaten Hogs 75-69 in Austin before a SWC record crowd of 16,288.

"Some of the things I say are true, and some of them are not true," added Lemons. "We just baffle me."

Crafty junior guard John Moore — fronting an airtight Texas zone defense — forced the weary, sluggish Razorbacks into repeated mistakes and pumped in 20 points as Texas maintained its early-season SWC lead.

The loss snapped Arkansas' record of 19 consecutive SWC victories and dropped the Razorbacks to 2-1 and third place behind Texas Tech, which fed on TCU, Baylor and Rice last week to fatten its SWC mark to 3-1.

"If I had it to do over agan, when we were leading 33-27 in the first half, I would have pulled them (Texas) out of their zone," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton, whose Hogs dropped to 14-1 for the season.

"This was our fourth game in eight days and we should have conserved our energy and slowed things down a little," added Sutton, who used only one substitute against Texas.

The Razorbacks had staggered through three games last week, while Texas, now 12-2 for the season and 4-0 in the SWC, brushed off Houston 100-89 on Tuesday and rested until Saturday night.

"I saw them play the other night and I thought they looked sluggish," said Lemons. "We felt we had a chance to deflect some of their passes if we could keep our hands up."

The Longhorns forced the Hogs into 19 turnovers — marring a sensational shooting performance by the Hogs, who hit all seven free throws and 58.5 percent of their field goals.

"No matter if you're ranked third in the country, you've still got to go out and play the game," said Moore. "We couldn't let them walk through the conference two straight years."

Sidney Moncrief, hitting all of his free throws and nine of 11 field goals, paced the Razorbacks with 24 points. Marvin Delph had 17 and Ron Brewer added 16 — only two of those coming in the second half.

Blue Devil Cage Team On Track

By The Associated Press

Duke basketball is back.

The Blue Devils, with one of the richest traditions in college basketball that includes more than 1,000 victories dating back to 1906, are recovering from some hard times. Over the past six years they've won 76 games and lost 82, and their 14-13 record last season was the first winning mark in five years.

But this winter Coach Bill Foster, who spent his first three years at Duke trying to pick up the pieces of a crumbling program, has an exciting young team which is off to a fast start. And the folks in Durham, N.C., are going wild over the Blue Devils once again.

A wildly cheering crowd of 8,500 filled Cameron Stadium Saturday and helped Duke to one of its biggest victories in recent years, a 92-84 upset of second-ranked North Carolina.

"We came out four hours before the game to warm up," said Foster, "and there already was a crowd. It helped psych our players up."

Sophomore center Mike Gminski led the way for Duke with 29 points as the Blue Devils played their best game of the season, forcing 22 North Carolina turnovers with a tenacious 2-3 zone defense that prevented the Tar Heels from getting the ball inside.

"I've never seen a team put it together like Duke did today," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith.

Eighteen of the Top Twenty teams were in action Saturday, and North Carolina was not the only major casualty. Third-ranked Arkansas bowed before Texas 75-69 and No. 8 Syracuse was upset by Pittsburgh 86-81.

The other Top Ten teams were winners as No. 1 Kentucky whipped Louisiana State 96-76, No. 5 Notre Dame edged St. Bonaventure 79-78, No. 6 Indiana State defeated Drake 92-80, No. 7 UCLA easily topped Oregon State 77-60, No. 9 Louisville beat Georgia Tech 90-84 and No. 10 Kansas routed Oklahoma 91-61.

Luck Changes On Friday 13th

TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Friday the 13th arrived in all its splendor at the Lubbock High gymnasium. If you don't believe it, just ask Jimmy Fullerton.

The Coronado basketball coach watched his offense work for the good percentage shot. Then the shots were rolled off the rim by an invisible black cat, right coach?

"Well, it was one of the first times where we got the ball where we wanted to all night and the ball wouldn't fall. Jay Norton had a bunch of good shots which wouldn't go and (Steve) Ahlenius did, too," Fullerton said.

The Coronado cage coach leaned on a chair in the Mustang dressing room, shook his head and said, "You're going to have those kind of nights once in a while, I guess."

Fullerton described his team's mistakes as "error of commission, not omission" and expressed satisfaction with his team's effort. Each team played aggressively in the District 4-AAAA opener and the officials ushered their whistles through an extensive workout.

Neither side could complain of any prejudice from the officials because a total of 57 fouls were called with 29 on Lubbock High and 28 on Coronado.

"They called a lot on both sides but you've got to hand it to Lubbock High. They were hustling for the loose ball whenever they had a chance. And they stepped up and hit the free shots while we didn't convert ours," said the CHS boss.

One player, Lubbock's Scotty Garcia practically lived at the foul line in the fourth quarter, sinking 13 of 15 charity shots in that stanza alone. The outcome pleased Lubbock coach C.E. Carmichael, who had watched his team's non-district record slide to 3-16.

"I'm happy for the players," the LHS coach said. "They've suffered through a lot of adversity by losing those close games... The effort was the best we've had all year."

The Westerners hadn't intended to copy any four-corner tactics from North Carolina's playbook. But when necessity called in the game's final minute, the strategy worked well enough. LHS began the game with seven eligible players available and three of them had fouled out with 1:05 left in the game.

"You don't expect that to happen. You figure out of 30 games a season, you will play 7 or 8 players. That's the first time that's happened to us," Carmichael said.

During the district schedule, a player can play in only two games a week. Since Ricky Montoya and Stan Matthes had played in the junior varsity game, they had played twice. Another varsity reserve, Sammy Phillips, missed Wednesday's workout and failed to show up for the game. Therefore, the LHS coach promoted junior Gilbert Mata (6-4, 190) from the JV. Mata fouled out but played nearly half of the game, scored four points and added much-needed rebound strength.

"Mata takes up a little more room inside and helps us on defense. So we're going to keep on using him. We're going to swing Ron Jenkins at both post and forward and swing Pete Del Busto at forward and guard. And Ricky Johnson is going to play more at forward, too," Carmichael said.

The necessity to experiment resulted early as starting LHS forward James Williams commmitted his fourth foul with 36 seconds left in the first quarter. Williams sat out all of the second and third quarters but returned as other teammates reached foul trouble in the final minutes. The patchwork job continued until the final buzzer but things like that happen on Friday the 13th, don't they coach Fullerton?

Rain Postpones Phoenix Open

PHOENIX (AP) — A steady overnight rain forced a postponement, at least until Monday, in the completion of the $200,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

A possibility existed that the tournament's final round will be canceled entirely and Canadian veteran George Knudson, the 54-hole Leader, will be declared the champion.

The rains began shortly after Knudson holed an eight-foot, go-ahead birdie putt on the 18th hole of Saturday's third round and continued throughout Saturday night and Sunday morning. It left the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club in unplayable condition with greens, tees and bunkers flooded with standing water.

The continuing rain made it impossible for tournament officials to work onthe course. The postponement was announced at 9:45 a.m. CST after a 2½-hour delay in the scheduled start of play.

Monday's play, if held, will be telecast nationally by CBS-TV on a tape-delayed basis beginning at 3-4 p.m. MST.

More rain is forecast for Monday and there was no assurance officials would be able to complete play. PGA Tour regulations provide that the tournament can stretch through Tuesday. With the forecast and the probability the course would remain unplayable, there was a possibility the round would be canceled.

If that happens, as it did in the 1974 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, Knudson would be named the winner on his 10-under-par total of 203 for 54 holes.

He took the lead Saturday with a 66 that included a "phantom" birdie which, somehow, was not detected either by the on-course scorers or the national television announcers.

That omission caused vast confusion and erroneous reports that four men were tied for the lead.

In fact, however, Lee Trevino, defending champion Jerry Pate and Jim Simons were one shot back of Knudson at 204. Trevino had a third-round 67, Pate and Simons 70s.

Rod Funseth was another stroke behind at 205.

ET Leading LSC

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Defending champion East Texas State jumped on two of the hottest teams in the Lone Star Conference last week to establish early superiority in the LSC basketball race.

Jim Gudger's Lions beat Howard Payne, 76-71, Tuesday night and then mauled Southwest Texas State, 96-81, Saturday to win their first two LSC games at home.

Borger Finds Year Makes A Difference

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The Borger Bulldogs may currently feel like the Rodney Daingerfield of high school basketball. Shoot, they ain't getting no respect.

Last year the coach Duane Hunt and the 'Dogs were crusing to a District 1-AAA championship, a regional title and a state playoff berth.

But oh how people's memories begin to slip.

The Bulldogs, the second place team in class AAA last year after losing to — you guessed it — Daingerfield 72-68 in the finals down in Austin, are currently off to a slow start this time around.

In its District 1-AAA opener against Perryton Friday night, the Bulldogs were trumped 49-43. And in Borger, mind you.

"We got in foul trouble awfully fast on them and that hurt our chances," explained Hunt. "Perryton's also has a good basketball team. They wouldn't let us get the ball inside to our big man (6-6 Tom Perry) all night."

So far this year, Borger, — which ended last year's banner season with a 28-5 mark overall and 8-0 in loop play — has posted 13 wins against eight setbacks.

But shed no tears. No AAA team up in the north country has really been burning down the barns when it comes to the W-L department. (Levelland is tops with a 10-5 mark, followed by Borger and then Perryton's 11-11 record.)

Hunt pointed out the majority of the Bulldogs' setbacks came at the hands of class AAAA teams. As far the others, he couldn't explain their poor records.

"We've played in some tough tournaments over in Oklahoma and also against some top AAAA schools," he said.

The obvious question for the 12-year Borger mentor is, of course, "how does the 1977-78 team stack up against last year's team?"

"Obviously we're not as strong," Hunt said. "We lost four good ballplayers. That speaks for itself."

The lone returner for Hunt is Perry, a 22-point performer so far this year. (Against Perryton, Perry got in foul trouble fast and set out much of the game.)

Along with inexperience, Hunt said faulty outside shooting and poor rebounding has been the Bulldogs main faults this year.

"We just don't have the big men we need to go under the board and control it," Hunt pointed out.

Perry is the top careem man, averaging 10.4 rebounds an outing.

Although Borger maybe having its troubles, Hunt says it is still too early to count them out of the race.

"We are going iron our problems out," Hunt said. " Like I said, it is still awfully early. And we play two rounds of district, you know. Anything can happen."

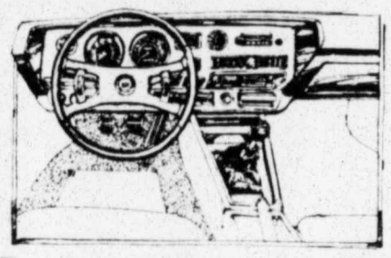
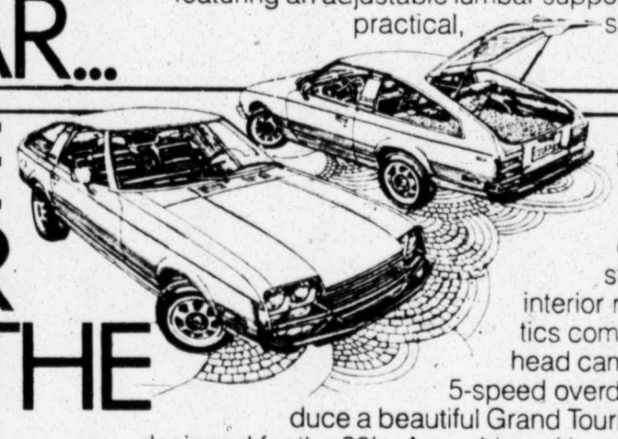
THE CAR OF THE YEAR...



Motor Trend Magazine's Import Car of the Year. The new 1978 Toyota Celica. An aerodynamic beauty enveloping the best Toyota engineering of our time. A car which meets or exceeds all 1980 Federal fuel economy and safety standards. The car which best met Motor Trend's criteria for styling, quality, comfort, acceleration, braking, handling, fuel economy and ride. The Import Car of the Year. The 1978 Toyota Celica. Here's what the Car of the Year and the car of the 80's offers you...

Efficiency and comfort. Exemplified by: a cockpit full of instrumentation. A newly designed GT driver's seat featuring an adjustable lumbar support. And the GT Liftback's practical, split, fold-down rear seat.

THE CAR OF THE 80's.



Style and engineering. The 1978 Celica's new aerodynamic body contributes to increased stability, acceleration and interior room. These characteristics combine with a 2.2 liter overhead cam engine and a standard 5-speed overdrive transmission to produce a beautiful Grand Touring machine. A machine designed for the 80's. A machine with welded unitized-body construction to help make it last. The Celica. Three models—the ST and GT Sport Coupes and the GT Liftback (pictured).

Toyota quality is a line of cars. If a Celica is not what you had in mind, one of the 26 other Toyota models probably is Many with the same Celica standard features, like 5-speed overdrive transmissions. All built Toyota tough. If you can find a better built small car or truck than a Toyota...buy it.

YOU GOT IT.

BUDDY BARRON & Company

DEAR BUDDY'S Advice to The Homehunter

DEAR BUDDY: I was on the dodge out in Farrar Estates and saw this big brick home on the corner. What's the low down?
...BUTCH CASSIDY

BUTCH: You can steal this 3 bedroom 2 bath home, it has the formal living and dining room, and separate den. The low down is $66,950.00

DEAR BUDDY: I'm investigating a home behind your sign at 2612 74th Pl. I would like to inspect the inside. Do you have a warrant?
...SHERLOCK HOMES

SHERLOCK: This clean 3 bedroom, 2 bath home doesn't have a "print" on it. The warrant is elementary. Just give us a call.

DEAR BUDDY: How soon will the new house at 4819 9th Street be ready? I'm tired of wandering around and need a place to hang my clothes. ...GYPSIE ROSE

GYPSIE ROSE: It's show time now! I know you'll enjoy this relaxful home after a day of bumps and grinds and all 3 bedrooms have "big" closets. Great entertaining area.

"We're going to sell more cars by making less on each sale. For starters we've reduced the price of those cars in our last ad, again, to the absolute minimum"

Al Griggs, New Cars Sales Manager.

"You want top dollar on your trade-in and we'll do our best to see that you get it, whether you're buying a new Buick or a quality used car."

Bill Holmes, Used Car Sales Manager.

Richard Dickey, vice President.

"You're interested in financing that will fit your budget and we are too. Let us prove, "if you can buy any new U.S. car you can afford a Scoggin-Dickey Buick".

C.L. Strickland, General Manager

"You've been asking for greater selection. We will do everything we can to see the car you want in your color, with your options, is here when you're ready to buy"

"Concern for the customer has always been our dominant company policy-as we start our 49th year, we're certainly determined to keep it that way."

John Scoggin, President.

Ol' King Tut Given Jazz Funeral (Late) In Crescent City

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The ceremony was about 3,000 years late, and there wasn t any body or coffin, but New Orleans gave an Egyptian pharoah a jazz funeral fit for a king Sunday.

The only departure involved was the transfer of an art exhibit — The Treasures of Tutankhamen — from the Museum of Art here to Los Angeles.

The Olympia Brass Band and a huge, umbrella-waving, foot-stomping second line of mourners at the museum gave King Tut a musical sendoff usually reserved for the greats of jazz.

"It don't matter the king's been dead for 3,000 years," said Olympia Band leader Harold DeJan. "The older the better. We play all the old traditional tunes, you know."

The 12-piece band and the dancing second-liners paraded up one side of the museum's quarter-mile drive to the somber strains of "Just a Closer Walk with Thee" and other dirges befitting the death of a loved one.

At the museum steps, trumpeter Milton Batiste gave a rhythmic eulogy, like a Baptist preacher.

"King Tut's gotta go!" said Batiste.

"Yeah!" said the crowd.

"Gotta go someplace else!"

"Yeah!"

"Where someone else can see him!"

"Yeah!"

"While he was here, he had a good time!"

"Yeah!"

"Everyone had a good time in old New Orleans!"

"Yeah!"

"So let the good times roll!"

And they did, and the return trip down the drive was filled with joyous music — "Didn't He Ramble," and "When the Saints Go Marching In."

Meanwhile, the exhibit was as popular as ever. More than 865,000 people saw it here.

Carter Plans To Choose Issues More Carefully

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter says he "learned a lot" from his first year in office and plans to be more choosy now in selecting the issues that get his personal attention.

In a recent interview with visiting news editors, Carter also said he plans no changes in his "superb" Cabinet or top-level White House team.

It is also clear he will maintain his folksy, no-frills personal style as he proceeds through his presidency — but he might do a little less talking about morality and marriage, what with the marital frictions disclosed within his own family and staff.

One frequent criticism of the Carter style is that he often becomes enmeshed in trivial matters, even to deciding himself who may use the White House tennis court.

"I am going to reduce substantially the number of issues in which I am personally involved before the public and let the Cabinet officers do more of that, which I think will be better," Carter said in the interview.

Having met 65 visiting foreign leaders during his "get-acquainted" period, he said the time has come to reduce that sort of activity, too:

"I think I will be able now to meet with and negotiate with leaders in a much more discriminatory way, just where my presence is necessary."

As for his family life and physical well being, the president said "it wouldn't be possible to improve" on last year.

He means to keep sending his relatives on the road as his emissaries — as Rosalynn, his mother and sons did last year — and will also do more traveling abroad himself.

One area where the Carter style will change, though, is in his relations with Congress.

He readily admits, now, that he piled too many proposals on the legislators in his first year, from energy conservation to government reorganization, and got his hopes for action too high.

"Without any criticism of the Congress," he said, "I underestimated the time it takes for Congress to act on major controversial bills." n

This year, he said, he and his staff will consult "much more intimately with Congressional leaders and their staffs before we send to the Hill a specific bill of any importance."

Said one top Carter aide: "The day of fighting duels is over. I think we are more confident now, and more aware of what we can and cannot do."

He has two priority goals on Capitol Hill: Passage of a comprehensive energy bill and Senate ratification of the Panama Canal treaties.

This week, he will submit a $25 billion tax reduction proposal, reportedly including some far-reaching tax reforms.

Of the men and women in his Cabinet, he said he would not make a single change by choice.

"They are individualistic," he said. "They run their own departments without interference from me."

He also said he likes his own White House staff set-up, with nearly all the high level aides familiar faces from Georgia and no chief of staff guarding the door to the Oval Office. He said that door will remain open to top staffers.

Adviser Hamilton Jordan and press secretary Jody Powell are expected to rule the roost as first among equals in their respective domains, however.

And international trade negotiator Robert Strauss, a former Democratic national chairman, is also moving into the inner circle as a presidential troubleshooter on many fronts — not just economics.

Sex Pistols Conclude U.S. Tour

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Sex Pistols, Britain's controversial punk rock band, wound up their U.S. tour with a wild weekend concert in which they threw garbage at a dancing, yelling audience that occasionally erupted into minor fights.

Screaming, cursing and spitting at the Saturday night turnout of some 5,000 fans, the biggest audience of the group's 10-day tour, the Pistols guzzled beer on stage, stripped off their shirts and blared their tunes in an hour performance followed by an encore.

The fans at the Winterland music hall, some dressed in punk garb with orange hair, razor blade ornaments and torn T-shirts, threw paper cups and other garbage at the Pistols, whose leaders are named Johnny Rotten and Sid Vicious. And the Pistols fired the garbage back.

Four or five members of the audience rushed the stage but were quickly dragged away by officials. There were minor fights, but no major disturbances. The rush at the performers was reminiscent of the Pistols' Dallas performance, when a woman jumped on stage and punched Vicious in the nose.

Jeff Burd, 21, of Santa Cruz, Calif., a member of the predominantly young audience, described the Saturday night performance as "an event" and said the band's spit tunes and other frenzies didn't bother him.

Cynthia Summers, 29, of San Francisco, said, "I like something that's got a really hard driving beat. Their lyrics are more honest than this garbage porno in the media. I think they will accepted eventually as the Beatles were."

The Sex Pistols, who originally were denied entry into the United States because of their arrest records in Britain, were preceded in their Saturday performance by two other punk rock groups, the Nuns and the Avengers.

Fans began lining up in the rain eight hours before the performance. When the concert started, the Pistols, who first gained notoriety when they insulted Queen Elizabeth II in song, went into their usual antics, blowing their noses into rolls of toilet paper thrown onto the stage.

Spokesmen for the band said they planned to leave for Scandinavia next and might return to the United States in the spring. The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, which first denied entry to the Pistols, was persuaded by the Warner Bros. record firm to let them in for the current tour.

Coalition Possible In Italy

ROME (AP) — Political sources said they believed Premier Giulio Andreotti was conducting negotiations over the weekend on a new cabinet to succeed his minority Christian Democrat government, scheduled to resign Monday.

The government crisis began when the Socialists and Republicans demanded Andreotti's party give the Communists an official role in the government. Abstentions in Parliament by the Communists have kept Andreotti's cabinet in office for 17 months.

The Communists have demanded a part in the government since Andreotti worked out a six-party agreement on basic issues in July to cope with rising inflation and unemployment, a slump in industrial production and a wave of political violence.

The Communists previously had been satisfied with their role as outside supporters of the cabinet formed following elections in June 1976, in which they got one-third of the vote.

The Socialists and Republicans joined forces with the Communists in claiming the minority cabinet was no longer in a position to deal with the issues, and only an emergency government including all six parties could pull Italy out of its crisis.

Andreotti met with the leaders of all six parties Saturday, confirmed later that three parties had decided to withdraw their support of the government, and said he would resign Monday.

Socialist floor leader Vincenzo Balzamo emerged from his meeting with Andreotti saying the premier conducted his talks like "premier-designate" rather than like an outgoing government leader.

President Giovanni Leone was expected to begin consultations with party leaders Tuesday and designate Andreotti to form the new cabinet, possibly on Thursday.

The Christian Democrats have rejected Communist bids for a share of power. The party has said it will not only refuse Communist ministers in the new cabinet, but also will reject any demand that the Communists become part of the parliamentary majority.

Andreotti's role as premier-designate will be to renegotiate a program and support for the government, not changing the Communist role, Christian Democrat sources said.

The Christian Democrats were said to be trying to talk the Socialists into the government or to be ready to name leftists to cabinet posts, but not Communist Party members.

Andreotti was working on a new program to discuss with the other parties later this week, Christian Democrat sources said. They stressed inflation has been cut to about 17 percent, although unemployment was at 9 percent and industrial production was 15 percent below 1976 levels.

All parties have said they oppose early elections and expressed confidence that an agreement would be found to keep parliament in office for another three years.

In 1976, the Communists received 34 percent of the vote.

Russians Call Carter 'Unrealistic'

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Carter administration is trying unrealistically to achieve a peace between Washington's hawks and doves that is possible only in "Biblical myths," Pravda said Sunday.

"In real life," the Communist Party newspaper said, "the hawks in the United States have stronger vocal cords and are more militant and enjoy immense support, both financial and political."

Observer Vladimir Bolshakov, writing in the newspaper's International Weekly Review section, used the Biblical analogy to explain what it said were contradictions in Washington's policy toward Moscow.

Bolshakov complained that while preparing for the current round of talks on troop cuts in Central Europe, Washington was increasing its military presence and arming Western Europe with new weapons like the neutron bomb.

And he said that on the day talks on a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty resumed in Geneva, the Pentagon announced the conclusion of tests of the Tomahawk missile.

"All this taken together can escalate the arms race to such a point where nothing can stop it," Bolshakov said.

Judging by White House actions, Bolshakov said, the Carter administration is "trying to reach something similar to the Biblical peace between the wolves and the lambs, between the hawks and the doves.

"However, all this is possible only in Biblical myths, while in real life hawks in the United States have stronger vocal cords and are more militant and enjoy immense support," he said.

Ecuadorian Vote Watched Closely By Other South American Juntas

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Ecuadorians voted on a new constitution Sunday in a referendum that could break the almost solid wall of military rule in South America.

There was widespread confusion among the 1.6 million voters about the issues involved, where to vote or even whether their names were on registration rolls that were 200,000 names short because of computer failures.

The choice was between two civilian-rule constitutions drafted by lawyers appointed by Rear Adm. Alfredo Poveda's junta, which seized power from another military regime two years ago. Ecuador is now in its sixth year of military rule.

The government has said presidential elections will take place July 16 even if voters heed opposition calls to reject both constitutions. It plans to impose the constitution winning more votes, even if it does not win a majority.

Because no date has been set for the new president to take office, some political observers suggest that the junta intends to rule indefinitely, until it decides to install a civilian government.

But they say a resounding "no" might create enough popular pressure to force the three-man junta to step aside for an interim successor and allow a civilian takeover after elections.

The military-spawned constitution that had been expected to win the most votes would nearly double the electorate by enfranchising an estimated 1.5 million adult illiterates, and would provide strong guarantees for workers' rights and a president elected for five years. It was known as the "new" constitution.

The alternative disallowed voting by illiterates, emphasized the role of elected legislators in deciding workers' rights and provided for a four-year president.

Voters could reject both by making two marks, instead of one, on ballot papers.

The voting was watched closely by seven other South American military governments that have been debating options on possible routes back to civilian rule.

The 4,000 polling booths in this nation of 6 million people were guarded by troops armed with rifles and fixed bayonets. The soldiers were prohibited from voting.

No disturbances were reported, but thousands gathered at polling places in the metropolitan centers of Quito and Guayaquil — many trying to ascertain whether they were on the rolls. Eligible voters faced a $200 fine if they did not vote.

A survey by the Ecuadorian Press Agency showed that 29 political, professional and other bodies, including the large labor syndicates and newly enfranchised student groups, favored the "new" constitution, four backed the alternative and 14 opposed both.

Front-running presidential candidate Assad Bucaram endorsed the "new" constitution as progressive and an "affront to the oligarchy."

Ecuador has had 16 constitutions since 1830. But this was the first time voters were asked to choose their form of government.

Oil Center Inspected

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Energy Secretary James Schlesinger arrived in this eastern Saudi Arabian oil production center Sunday to inspect the operation of the fields.

"It is always essential to have a feel for operations as opposed to the kind of theories one lives with in the departmental headquarters," Schlesinger said.

The secretary came here from four days of discussions in Riyadh, the capital, with Crown Prince Fahd and oil minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani.

The Saudi government radio said Schlesinger and Saudi officials had some differences. It did not spell them out, but quoted Schlesinger as saying the United States and Saudi Arabia were in complete agreement on other points necessary for relations between the two countries.

Schlesinger was accompanied by U.S. Ambassador John West. They were met at Dhahran by John Kelberer, new chief executive of the Arabian American Oil Company, which handles most of Saudi Arabia's crude oil production.

The secretary will inspect drilling, refining and loading facilities along the eastern coast Monday before returning to the United States.

CAR SALES RECORD SEEN

DETROIT (AP) — This year should be a record year for car sales, according to A. Gary Shilling, senior vice president for the securities firm White, Weld Co. The Wall Street analyst predicted Friday that new car sales, including imports, will hit 11.7 million units in 1978 in the United States.

Finns Beam TV Show To Soviets

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Some Soviet citizens got their first look at Farrah Fawcett-Majors over the weekend when "Charlie's Angels" premiered on Finnish television and was beamed across the Gulf of Finland into the U.S.S.R.

The series opened with heavy advance publicity, and one Finnish newspaper suggested that wives should be happy because the show would keep their husbands at home.

Miss Fawcett-Majors is no longer a star on the show, but an estimated 1 million Soviet citizens in Estonia and Karelia states will see her in the reruns that will be televised by Finnish stations.

Two Award Winners Begin New Movie

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Academy Award-winning actors George Kennedy and Ernest Borgnine, along with actress Elke Sommer, begin filming a mystery-adventure movie here next month.

The film, tentatively titled "The Double McGuffin," will be directed and produced by Joseph Camp, whose credits include the two "Benji" dog adventure films.

The plot involves teen-agers at a boarding school who play tricks on the local police chief, played by Kennedy. Borgnine is the villain and Miss Sommer an ambassador.

Rhodesia Tries To Stem White Exodus

"Just think for a moment of all you gave up
When you made up your mind to leave here.
The sunshine, the women, the songs round the campfire,
The fishing, the life and the beer..."
———Folksinger Alison Biggs

By KENNETH F. ENGLANDE
A-J Special Correspondent

SALISBURY — Remember the Vietnam-era bumper stickers that said: "America.. Love it or Leave it?"

The United States, with 220 million people, could afford to sound hardhearted. The white minority gavernment of Rhodesia, which rules 268,000 Europeans and 6.8 million blacks in a country the size of California, cannot.

In 1977 roughly 900 white Rhodesians each month took what is derogatorily referred to as the "yellow route," the "chicken run" or the "gap," fleeing their home country for what they feel will be better lives in South Africa, Great Britain, Canada, Australia, South America and the United States.

It was the worst emigration record in the country's 90-year history, exceeding the pace set in 1964 when political instability was rife on the eve of the declaration of independence from Britain.

Clearly the loss of such large numbers of whites, when Europeans already are outnumbered 25 to 1 by blacks, could not be ignored by the government, which wants to keep as many whites as it can in the country.

Even in the face of a possible political settlement leading to black majority rule, the problem could not be shrugged off. The exodus is weakening the country politically, economically and morally.

The Standard Bank, one of the country's largest and most powerful financial institutions, addressed the problem pointedly — and pessimistically — in a recent Economic Bulletin:

"Until there is a political settlement there are no grounds for expecting any change in the pattern of migration. Indeed, depending upon the nature of that settlement when it comes, even then the position may well continue to deteriorate since the advent of majority rule is almost certain to mean an immediate, though hopefully short-lived, upsurge in white emigration."

The question is, what to do about it.

In partial reply, the government is sponsoring a determined, if not altogether ethical, campaign to keep the white population as stable as possible.

The open-ended advertising campign, backed by the Misistry of Information, Immigration and Tourism, is designed to reach Rhodesians through every form of communication: newspaper, radio and television and the movies.

KEEP THE WHITES IN RHODESIA — One of a series of ads sponsored by the Rhodesian government, designed to keep the country's whites, outnumbered 25-1 by blacks, in the country. The white emigration record in 1977 was the worst in the country's 90-year history and prompted the campaign.

Operating under the slogan: Once you're a Rhodesian, no other land will do," the campaign is headed by pixieish Ian B. Campbell, an affable, graying native of Rhodesia dedicated to keeping a white presence in the county, which will be re-named Zimbabwe by the blacks.

As a basic premise, Campbell said the government recognizes that Rhodesians, like people everywhere, are mobile.

"Twenty-five percent of the people in the world migrate," says Campbell, "no one is here to stay permanently.

Wish They Were Back

"Some Rhodesians must move to enhance their careers. Ninety per cent of the people who retire go to the coast, but we have no coast. So we lose them. And, let's be honest, we have people who are forced to leave because of the war," Campbell said.

"Their wives get tired of having their husbands away in the security forces and of sanctions (trade restrictions limiting imports) and they say, 'bugger this, let's move.' But 90 per cent of those have been gone a couple of months and they want to come back.

"We're aiming this campaign at trying to reduce white emigration. Once you get there (out of Rhodesia), you have no money to come back. We aren't trying to change the minds of those leaving for a good reason; we just want them to think twice. We are trying to show Mr. and Mrs Rhodesia this is not a bad country," Campbell said.

One of the basic ways the government has decided to do this is through newspaper advertising.

"We can't advertise for people to come to Rhodesia, it's against UN sanctions.

Those Still In Rhodesia

Instead the government tries to reach those still here.

One ad screams at the reader in 48-point type: "Don't get talked out of what you've got here.

"Admit it," says the smaller print, "you've got a pretty good life in Rhodesia .... You and people like you planned it. Built it. Paid for it. Fought for it. And died for it. It's yours and your family's ... You have a right to a part of Rhodesia. And don't let anyone tell you diferent (sic)," Campbell said in the last two years 45 percent of the people immigrating to Rhodesia were former residents who returned because they were disillusioned with conditions elsewhere.

"Every one of these (returnees) know what they're coming back to — callups and all. They are finding overseas living conditions compared to Rhodesia are damned high. They're finding it difficult to get a job, so they come back. We want to show them the grass is not greener on the other side," Campbell said.

"Leave Rhodesia now and you could spend the rest of your life regretting it," says another of the ads. "You know the old adage 'act in haste — regret at leisure'? Well, there have been plenty of Rhodesians who have left in a fit of depression or uncertainty who are bitterly regretting their hasty decisions now. They long for the sunshine, the wide open spaces, the clean cities, beautiful homes in big gardens. And safe streets to walk in .... For your own sake as well as the future of Rhodesia, think very carefully before you make your decision," the ad says.

It's only a small step from trying to convince Rhodesians the grass is not greener to trying to show it definitely is brown. Although some of the earlier ads in the campaign were content to list the advantages of remaining in Rhodesia, some of the later ones went further by making other places look downright unattractive.

"Most countries tell us what's wrong with ours. Now we're going to tell you what's wrong with theirs," says a deep-voiced announcer over the government-controlled Rhodesia Broadcasting Co.

The Bad News

"Canada:" the voice says, "Immigration formalities are almost insurmountable for Rhodesians. Little hope of early halt to rise in unemployment. Ever-existent conflict between French-speaking and English-speaking population.

"United States: Unemployment rate seven per cent. Crime rate up 11 per cent last year. Seventy-five serious crimes committed every hour in New York in 1976. Inflation rate 7.2 per cent as at May 1977," the commercial says.

A still later plea definitely aimed at discouraging Rhodesians from going to Britain was a piece of copy headed, "Who'd swop (sic) Borrowdale (a Salisbury suburb) for Birmingham (England)?"

It featured a half-dozen pictures of children in what appeared to be dire circumstances. One photo showed two chilren peering through a wire fence.

"They wish they had a world without fences, to play in," said the copy. Another showed a young girl standing dejectedly in the rain. The caption read: "She wishes the sun would sometimes shine for her."

The ad drew immediate, critical response from Birmingham officials.

"Plenty Of Fresh Air"

"The advertisement makes me want to spit," said Mrs. Freda Cocks, Birmingham's lord mayor. "Our city has plenty of fresh air."

"They (Rhodesians) are not being fair in using this type of publicity," said Birmingham Councillor Harold Blumenthal.

It was later learned that Birmingham was chosen as the victim because of the alliteration with the word Borrowdale, and the pictures were not taken in England.

"They were taken locally," said an executive at the agency commissioned to develop the campaign for the government.

Campbell denied knowledge of the particulars in the controversial ad, saying he left the details up to the agency, even though the copy had to be cleared by his department.

CONTROVERSIAL AD — An ad, sponsored by the Ministry of Information, Immigration and Tourism, purports to compare conditions in Salisbury with Birmingham, England. In reality, all the photos appearing in the ad were taken in Salisbury.

Painting an equally dismal picture of the fate awaiting those who leave Rhodesia for Britain is a folksong entitled "Bushwallah" by Alison Biggs, a Briton who immigrated to Rhodesia several years ago.

Best Type Of Advertising

Although not part of the campaign, the song has the enthusiastic backing of Campbell's department, and it has become popular on radio programs aimed at Rhodesian soldiers.

"Get up in the morning,
You look out on London,
You feel like a piece of wet rag," the song says.

"The sky's grey and dismal.
The gutters are running,

You re-light a second-hand fag.
And your suits are all crumpled,
Your collars are filthy.
Your shoes have curled up in the rain.
You take a quick bite of your marmalade sandwich
And run for the underground train ...."

Despite the criticism of the campaign, mostly generated by the Borrowdale-Birmingham ad, Campbell said the government planned to continue the program, but he was not yet certain what form Phase Two would take.

"We have to assess the results to see where we will go. We might print some bumper sticker saying something like 'I've got staying power' or 'Here I am and here I'll stay.' We're also thinking of publishing letters from people who made the mistake (of leaving).

Bleak Future Prompts Exodus From South Africa

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Some cracks are appearing in the once-solid South African white community. Property values are dropping in the face of racial unrest and an uncertain political future; the numbers of whites leaving are mounting and the nation is suffering a "brain drain." Here's a report.)

By MATT FRANJOLA

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — For the first time since 1960, when racial tensions also ran high, the number of whites leaving South Africa is outstripping the number of whites coming in to seek a new life in this racially segregated land.

For those leaving, it is a decision based on what they see as a bleak future of increasing black-white hostility and possible bloodshed.

Patrick McDuling is one of the whites going away.

"I'm pro-South Africa, but not pro-government," he says. "I don't want my kids to fight for this government. I can see a war situation developing which nobody can win."

Early Roots Abandoned

McDuling is a 33-year-old bachelor, an accountant whose roots reach to the earliest Dutch-descended Afrikaner settlers.

Born and reared in the eastern coastal province of Natal, McDuling is the son of a local policeman of Scottish descent and an Afrikaner mother. Unlike most of the highly skilled emigrants, who are generally English-speaking, McDuling was reared in a home where the Dutch-based Afrikaans language was spoken almost all the time.

At a small farewell party for close friends, McDuling said of his decision to go to Australia: "I'm looking 15 years into South Africa's future. Violence is inevitable. I can't seek any light at the end of the tunnel."

Population Drain

The latest figures released by the government Statistics Department showed that 22,400 persons left South Africa between January and October 1977, as opposed to 11,900 in the same period in 1976. Immigrants in the same period numbered 21,000, in contrast with 41,000 in 1976, a net 10-month loss of 1,400.

White flight from South Africa began after racial rioting in 1976 in which more than 600 blacks died. In 1977 mounting international pressure, internal unrest, a depressed economy and difficulty planning a future in troubled times fueled the exodus. Property values in the past two years dropped by 40 percent. While wages remained fairly constant, prices rose.

For example, a sprawling ranch-style house with a pool and tennis court on an acre or more of land in Johannesburg's well-to-do northern suburbs that sold for $100,000 two years ago now sells for $60,000 or less. In the first week of the new year, prices for white bread rose 25 percent from 23 cents to 29 cents a loaf. Industrial sugar went up in 16 months by 128 percent, from $124 a metric ton to $283, causing caused price increases for other foods.

The quality of life in South Africa, though still good, has declined with the economy and rising international pressure. Youths face a military draft that was recently increased from one to two years.

The change can be seen at many of Johannesburg's posh golf clubs, once jammed on weekends. At the exclusive Wanderer's club, a twosome arrived recently at 9 a.m. at the first tee without waiting.

Noting the lack of golfers one player said: "Times are hard and prices have gone up. Many chaps can't play Saturday and Sunday like they used to."

Loss Of Trained People

Missing more frequently from South Africa's golf courses are doctors, architects, engineers and other professionals — the people leading the country's brain drain. Their skills make them more desirable as immigrants, enabling them to safely navigate myriad immigration regulations of their adopted nations. But getting money and valuables out of South Africa can be a problem.

Individuals and families are allowed to take out assets worth a maximum of $34,500. Small items of high value, such as diamonds or solid gold Krugerrands, are in demand, as are antiques and art, which can be easily carried out by friends.

Intellectuals head the emigration list. According to the Statistics Department, from last April through September, 57 doctors arrived, 124 left; seven dentists arrivedm 14 left; 14 architects arrived, 44 left; 57 civil engineers arrived, 106 left. On the other hand, 960 clerical workers arrived, 863 left; 87 agricultural workers arrived, 27 left, and 148 nurses arrived while 121 departed.

About 50 doctors settled in Houston, Texas, forming an enclave which has become known locally as "Little Jo'burg."

In addition to the United States most of those leaving South Afriea emigrate to Britain or Israel. Most of the immigration continues to come in from Britain.

Emigrating doctors generally indicate they believe there is no future for their children here, that they must leave while they are young enough to adapt and that urban terrorism is on the increase.

According to H.R. de Wet, acting secretary for immigration, the main reason for the rise in emigration is "the present economic situation." Dr. J.J. le Roux, assistant secretary of the South African Medical Association, said the reasons are that "doctors can double their incomes overseas, plus other factors such as the uncertain atmosphere."

As for McDuling, he said he was leaving "to get away from politics and get on with living. The politics of race is always on television, in newspapers and in social conversation.

"I've followed politics since my university days," McDuling said, "and although there's been some desegregation, the situation is worse now because of the intransigence of (Prime Minister John) Vorster, South Africa's isolation in the world and black militancy.

"I don't want to raise kids in this atmosphere."

Hardening racial attitudes by many and the rise in power of the South African security police, who can imprison anyone indefinitely and without charge, were other reasons for McDuling's decision to leave.

Indicative of his concern for the police, McDuling asked, "I'm not going to get into trouble for talking, am I? I'd like to be able to come back on a holiday without being arrested. There're some things I'd rather not say."

Vietnamese Charges Spark Fears Of Further Warfare

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — A Vietnamese claim that Cambodian troops invaded and attacked several villages last week has sparked speculation that Hanoi may be trying to justify further military action against Phnom Penh.

Hanoi radio reported over the weekend that Cambodian soldiers had launched attacks beginning Jan. 4 in seven Vietnamese provinces along the border between the two Communist neighbors.

They were the first reports on the border war released by Hanoi in more than a year of fighting that reached a peak when Vietnamese troops invaded Cambodia last month.

Some observers in Bangkok believed the reports by Hanoi — which has maintained throughout the war that its attacks were in retaliation for Cambodian raids on Vietnamese civilians — were aimed at preparing world opinion for another major drive against Cambodia.

The Hanoi reports said the Cambodians attacked seven Vietnamese border provinces ranging from An Giang in the south to Kontum on the northern end of the disputed frontier.
