Carter compromise on rates expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter "is realistic" and probably will accept a proposed compromise setting national guidelines for electric rates, even though he had asked Congress for mandatory standards, the chairman of a congressional conference committee said today.

Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., said that despite major House concessions on the electric-rate portion of the president's energy program, he expects Carter to take the compromise as the best he could hope for.

"I think he is realistic," Staggers told reporters.

Energy conferees were expected today to approve a watered-down version of Carter's plan that would leave the setting of electric rates to the states.

Carter wanted, and the House voted, to force utilities to revamp their rate-setting practices, including requiring them to offer electricity for lower prices late at night and to end discounts to big industrial users.

Staggers on Wednesday had termed the decision of House conferees to abandon Carter's plan for mandatory standards "almost capitulation," but he backed off that claim today.

He said the compromise now under consideration by conferees is stronger than the bill the Senate passed. While the mandatory standards are gone, the measure still would require states to consider such steps as lower nighttime rates — although adopting them would be voluntary.

"The guidelines at least provide a first step," Staggers said.

He said Energy Secretary James Schlesingercatld him today to find out what was going on. He said he told the Cabinet official the House conferees had no choice but to yield to strong Senate objections to the mandatory standards.

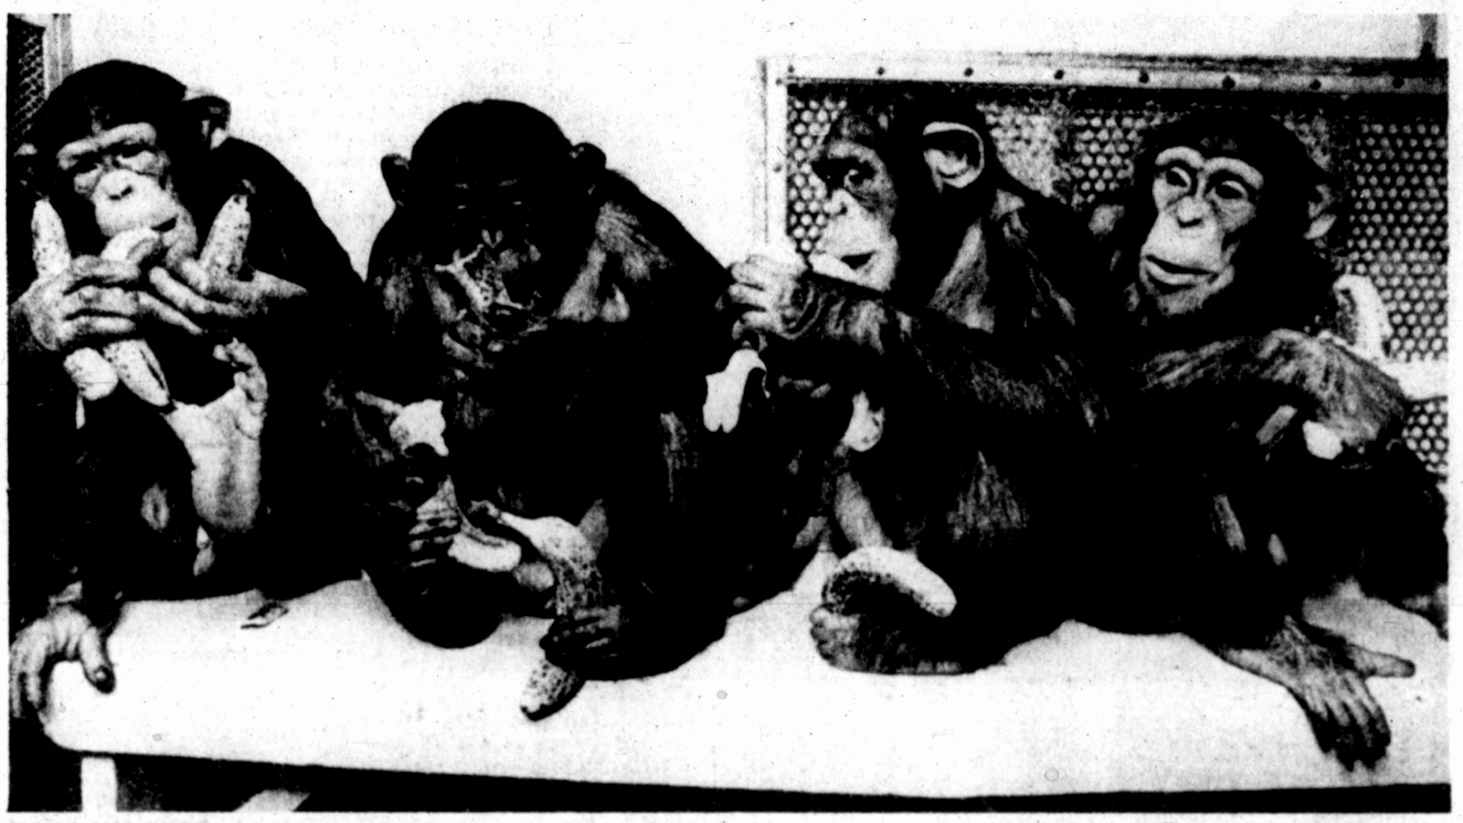

"He's in agreement with what we're doing," Staggers said.

House negotiators gave up their fight for the mandatory federal standards on Wednesday, yielding to Senate demands to leave the rate-setting authority with state regulatory agencies.

The House negotiators sacrificed the section to break an impasse that threatened to deadlock the committee, which is trying to resolve differences in energy bills passed by the two chambers.

Their retreat was a setback to Carter's hopes of salvaging in the conference committee those parts of his energy program that were rejected by the Senate.

Meanwhile, conferees on tax portions of the energy program agreed Wednesday to drop $6 billion to $7 billion in tax incentives passed earlier by the Senate by making four business tax credits available only through 1982 rather than through 1985.

Shah OPEC stand 'welcome news' at White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House today hailed as "welcome news" a statement by the Shah of Iran that the oil exporting cartel should "give a break" to consumer countries and forgo any increase for at least a year.

President Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, told reporters that the decision by the shah to work against an oil price increase "is an encouraging one and one we appreciate and find welcome news."

Powell said Carter made no pledge to meet Iran's requests for permission to buy additional quantities of advanced American military equipment.

The shah, who earlier this week said his country would "remain silent" on the question of raising oil prices, told a news conference late Wednesday that Carter had talked him into changing his position from one of neutrality to openly opposing a price hike.

"After perusing the world economic situation, we have come to this conclusion to give you a break," the shah told reporters.

Iran wields considerable influence in the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which meets Dec. 20 in Caracas, Venezuela, to discuss proposed price hikes.

Most other producing countries favor some price increase. Iraq has proposed raising the current world oil price of about $12.50 a barrel by 23 percent.

Experts calculate that the price of gasoline in the United States rises one cent for every 8 percent increase in the OPEC price.

The shah said eventual increases are inevitable unless the consuming nations begin strong conservation measures and new sources of energy are discovered.

On Monday, the shah told interviewers that Iran would let other OPEC members "carry the ball" at the Caracas conference.

He noted in that interview that Iran has been called a "hawk" on past

Discord abundant as Sadat Israel visit set

By The Associated Press

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt will visit Jerusalem for 36 hours starting Saturday night and will address the Israeli parliament, Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin announced today.

But Sadat will make the visit, which he has described as a "sacred duty," without the support of Syria and apparently with major opposition within his own country. His foreign minister resigned today.

In Beirut, Palestinian leader Yasir Arafat condemned the planned visit and urged Sadat to cancel it.

In his address to the Israeli parliament, Sadat is expected to call for Israeli evacuation of all lands captured in the 1967 war and establishment of a Palestinian state — standard Arab demands that Israel has previously rejected.

But the visit in itself will represent unprecedented recognition by an Arab leader of the state of Israel.

Begin announced the visit shortly after Sadat returned from Damascus, where he failed to win President Hafez Assad's support for the visit.

Assad called the visit a source of "deep sorrow." The trip has also come under fire from Iraq and Libya.

Egypt's official Middle East News Agency said that when Sadat returned to Ismailia, he received the official Begin invitation for the visit through U.S. Ambassador Hermann Eilts. It was accompanied by a message from President Carter, the contents of which were not disclosed.

Sadat accepted. The U.S. ambassador to Israel, Samuel Lewis, then called Begin, who made the announcement to visiting U.S. congressmen.

At the same time, Egypt's official Middle East News Agency announced that Sadat's foreign minister and key aide since the 1973 war, Ismail Fahmy, had resigned, a move that could indicate deep opposition within the country to the Jerusalem visit.

The agency said Fahmy's letter of resignation cited "new elements which affected the situation," an apparent reference to Sadat's trip. "I feel that I cannot continue in my post and that I cannot continue to share in shouldering responsibilities in these conditions," Fahmy wrote.

In Jerusalem, Begin told a group of American congressmen in the presence of reporters that Sadat would arrive Saturday and would pray in the Al Aqsa Mosque in Jerusalem Sunday before addressing the Israeli parliament.

Begin's office confirmed that the prime minister was referring to Saturday Nov. 19. The announcement came as a surprise to most Israelis who had not expected the Egyptian visitor before Nov. 24.

Begin said he hoped Sadat would also visit Yad Vashem, Israel's national monument to Nazi victims and a regular stop on all visits of foreign dignitaries. The prime minister said he expected to converse with Sadat in English.

Speaking to reporters in Damascus after their meeting, Sadat and Assad — allies in the October 1973 war — acknowledged that they had failed to reach agreement on the Jerusalem visit.

Assad said: "It is really painful to me that I was unable to dissuade and to convince him of the seriousness of this trip (to Israel) and its reflection on the Arab cause and on the Arab situation as I see it."

Despite the open disagreement, Sadat denied there was any rift between himself and Assad. The Syrian leader greeted Sadat Wed-

Terrified cab rider to turn to scripture?

The Los Angeles Times

CHICAGO — The Good Book to the contrary, there may soon be something new under the sun: Bible excerpts in taxicabs.

The American Bible Society Wednesday asked its regional offices in Los Angeles, Chicago, New York and Atlanta to study the feasibility of placing portions of the Scriptures in thousands of taxicabs nationwide.

It would be a sort of mobile version of the Gideon Society's effort to place Bibles in every hotel and motel room.

"We're thinking in terms of booklets," said G. Edward Nelson, an East Coast Regional Official for the non-sectarian Bible Society, "The kind of thing people going to an airport would throw down their attache case to pick up and read."

A private program to test public and taxi company acceptance of the concept will begin in Asheville, N.C., within the month when more than 50 cabs are stocked with portions of the New Testament.

"Right now we're only studying the possibility," said Nelson in a telephone interview. Before any decision is made, he said, fleet owners, cab drivers and church groups — who would be expected to finance the project — will have to be sounded out.

The idea originated with an Asheville allergist, lecturer and author, Dr. Claude A. Frazier, who found his inspiration in a Chicago taxicab more than a year ago. "I was getting into a taxi and noticed the driver had a Bible lying beside him. I'm used to seeing racing forms and magazines but not Bibles.

"I said to him, 'God is letting me know through you that we're going to have Bibles in taxicabs across the country,'"the doctor recalled in a telephone interview. "I felt like I was being led, that God had spoken to me through the driver."

Frazier contacted the Bible Society and later began drumming up support in a letter writing campaign to church organizations coast to coast. His first success came last month when local church groups agreed to pay for placing Bible booklets in Asheville taxis.

There is some doubt that the idea will be accepted in major cities, but Nelson thinks it will succeed in smaller communities where, he said, there are concentrations of "people of a more religious stereotype."

Nelson said the booklets used would probably contain portions of today's English Version of the Bible, popularly known as the Good News Bible. One candidate is a Bible Society publication called "Justice Now," which contains the books of Amos, Joshua and Micah. Another is entitled "Wisdom for Modern Man," and contains the Proverbs and Ecclesiastes. Others contain readings from the New Testament.

Cuban presence in Africa may hurt chances of renewed ties

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prospects for full restoration of diplomatic relations and business ties with Cuba appear dimmed following a secret Carter administration study showing that Havana is stepping up its military intervention in Africa.

The study, based on intelligence estimates, does not quarrel with the steps taken by the administration so far to end 16 years of hostility between Washington and Havana. But its judgment is that the pace should be slowed.

Sources here said an estimated 23,000 Cubans, 19,000 of them military, are now in Angola, where the Marxist government is fighting to suppress insurgents who keep a civil war flaring.

The New York Times in today's editions quoted high-ranking administration officials as saying that Cuba has a military presence in 11 other African countries as well and has suffered hundreds of combat deaths in Angola.

The Times said one administration policy-maker said the Cuban actions make restoration of full diplomatic relations "impossible."

The build-up in Angola as described in the administration study contradicts promises given by Cuba during the Ford administration that there would be a general decrease in Cuba's military presence in the former Portugese colony.

Hospital certificate OK delayed

Approval of a certificate of need for renovation and an addition to Midland Memorial Hospital has been delayed until Dec. 8, the Texas Health Facilities Commission announced today.

The delay in the certificate's approval will force postponement of hospital construction until after the date.

Mickey Cappadonna, president of the hospital's board of trustees, Wednesday had predicted a minimum three-week delay, depending on the commission's decision today.

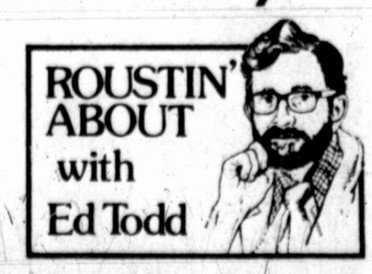

Maligned donkey has champion in society

A donkey, like the mule, has no equal — unless you consider the human species.

Well, these braying creatures of work and leisure have long been the butt of many a joke. You sometimes get the impression that they are mere quirks of nature. Come to think of it, the mule is.

Think it strange or not, there is an organized group that is endeared to these long-burdened beasts. It's called the American Donkey and Mule Society, Inc., which is holed up at Indianapolis, Ind.

The society puts out a quarterly journal, "Mr. Longears," which gives dignity to the mule, the donkey and the burro. The world knows that homage to these creatures has been long in coming.

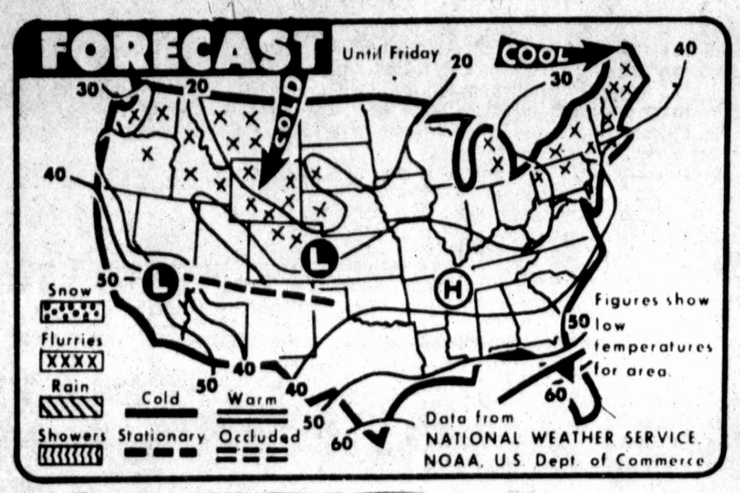

The publication tells of the luck and intelligence of the donkey and the mule, of their humility, the "depth of the donkey," and recounts a campaign to save the wild burro from extermination in the Grand Canyon.

Furthermore, "Mr. Longears" relates the role of the ass in Biblical

Davis jurors view door, request transcripts as deliberation begins

By MIKE COCHRAN

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A large white wooden door with a bullet hole was brought into the jury room today as nine men and three women pondered the fate of Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis.

Davis, 44, is charged with the slaying of his 12-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn, the night of Aug. 2, 1976, at his $6 million residence that was at the time the home of his estranged wife, Priscilla.

Mrs. Davis' live-in lover Stan Farr, 30, was killed in the shooting spree by a "man in black" that, Mrs. Davis said, also shot and wounded her and a visitor to the mansion, Gus Gavrel. Gavrel's girlfriend, Beverly Bass, was unharmed.

Forty minutes after the deliberations began early today jurors asked for a drawing of the door showing where Farr was wounded, but Judge George Dowlen ordered that the whole door be brought to the jurors.

The door has one bullet hole. Mrs. Davis testified it was through that door thar Farr was shot the first time. He was later shot three times.

The jurors also requested all the testimony of Mrs. Davis and statements from other witnesses, but Judge Dowlen asked them to be more specific about which parts of the testimony they needed.

About one hour later, the jurors asked for the Aug. 3 statement Miss Bass gave officer C. R. Davis, but Judge Dowlen told them the statement had not been entered as evidence.

The requests for the statements and testimony appeared to indicate the jury would spend more time than observers anticipated reaching a verdict.

Dowlen said the jury was giving "solid consideration to the case. Obviously, this is not going to be a 'one-hour' verdict. They are seriously considering the evidence."

He added the jurors would deliberate until he was "100 per cent convinced" that they cannot get a verdict.

"Nobody wants a hung jury," he added.

The jury has three choices: capital murder, murder, and acquittal. The first carries only two penalties, death or life in prison. Murder is punishable by 99 years or life.

Prosecutor Joe Shannon and his team are basing their case on circumstantial evidence because there were no witnesses to Miss Wilborn's shooting. However, ballistics experts testified for the state that a bullet found under the girl's body matched the slugs removed from Farr and there was an eyewitness to Farr's shooting — Mrs. Davis.

"I think if you believe that Thomas Cullen Davis shot and killed Stan Farr you have no choice and you've got to find him guilty," Shannon told the jury.

"If the same gun that killed Andrea Wilborn killed Stan Farr then you've got to believe beyond any reasonable doubt and with a moral certainty that the same person pulled the trigger."

Sadat visit set; discord not scarce

nesday with all the gun salutes and diplomatic fanfare proper to his rank, although informed sources said photographers were ordered not to take pictures of the two leaders when they made their customary embrace.

Assad and Sadat last clashed in public after Sadat reached a separate Sinai agreement with Israel afer the 1973 war.

But this time Sadat insisted he was not heading for Jerusalem to make a separate peace. "I'm going to tell the Israelis in their own den: If you want to live in this area, well, here are the facts."

He said 70 percent of Arab problems stem from an "inferiority complex." Asked whether he expected his visit to Israel to lift this complex, he said: "Absolutely. Absolutely. Absolutely."

The proposed visit also drew criticism from a small opposition party in Egypt. The National Progressive Unity Party, a consistent critic of the government, said in a statement: "This visit will only make Israel more adamant and stubborn."

Sadat indicated Assad did not pressure him to reject the invitation Prime Minister Menahem Begin issued in response to overtures from Sadat. But after he took off for Cairo, Assad told reporters his failure to dissuade Sadat was a source of "deep sorrow" to him.

One Arab diplomat suggested that Sadat came to Damascus to tell Assad he was going to Israel "to change the Israeli mentality about Arab intentions, and to show the world who is serious about peace and who is not." The semiofficial Cairo newspaper Al Ahram reported Wednesday that the purpose of the trip was to remove procedural obstacles to a new Geneva peace conference between Israel and all its Arab adversaries.

Sadat followed up his overtures that produced the Israeli invitation with a cable Wednesday to a to a leftist, peace-oriented symposium in Tel Aviv. In it, he expressed "the hope that your deliberations will prompt you to see the living reality of the Palestinian people and their inalienable right to statehood."

price hike proposals. Last year, the country backed a 10 percent increase.

The monarch's visit here took place amid marathon demonstrations in support and in opposition to his regime, but there was no repetition Wednesday of the outbursts of violence that marked the first day of his visit.

In contrast to the 124 injuries and 18 arrests resulting from Tuesday's violence, police reported only 10 injuries requiring hospital treatment and 10 arrests Wednesday.

As demonstrators arrived at Dulles International Airport on Wednesday night to board charter flights home, police set up a security check and said they confiscated dozens of baseball bats, hockey sticks, shovel handles, pipes and other implements.

In one incident Wednesday afternoon, an angry crowd of pro-shah militants charged anti-shah demonstrators near Capitol Hill, but police kept the rival groups apart.

Throughout the day Wednesday, the shah traveled to and from his appointments around the city amid extraordinarily heavy security.

The shah, who flew to Paris Wednesday night, held his news conference at Blair House, across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House.

He bitterly assailed the thousands who had come here to denounce his regime, saying they represented the forces of "interntional chaos and disorder and world revolution."

Press Secretary Jody Powell said Wednesday that no major decisions were reached on the sophisticated weaponry Iran wants to buy from the United States. Carter and the shah met for 80 minutes earlier in the day.

Powell said the two leaders discussed the human rights situation in Iran and reviewed a series of measures that country has taken in recent months to ease political repression.

Woman sane, center says

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Francine Hughes has been judged sane, less than two weeks after a jury found her innocent by reason of insanity of the murder of the ex-husband who beat her for years.

Her lawyer, Aryon Greydanus, said Wednesday that Mrs. Hughes had returned to her mother's home in Jackson, Mich., for a week of "rest and relaxation" before making future plans.

"As I anticipated, it was just a formality," Greydanus said. "It's all done as far as we're concerned. That's it. She's just as free as you and I are."

Although Mrs. Hughes could not be reached for comment, Greydanus said: "Of course, she's very happy. As far as we're concerned that's the end of the story."

Mrs. Hughes was interviewed for about an hour at the Center for Forensic Psychiatry in Ypsilanti, an examination required under conditions of the Ingham County Circuit Court verdict.

Attorneys rest cases

ODESSA — Attorneys on both sides rested their cases Wednesday afternoon in the murder trial of Lloyd Ray Poor and then proceeded to 161st District Court Judge R. L. McKim's chambers to decide the wording of charges to be read today.

Defense attorneys Michael McLeaish and Charles Winston, and District Attorney John Green were to present their final arguments to the jury when the court reconvened at 9 a.m. today.

The defense tried several times Wednesday to present mistrial motions, but was unsuccessful.

Poor is on trial for the July 6 stabbing death of of Roy Lee Davis. Davis was found dead in his west Odessa mobile home, and the 17-year-old Poor was arrested July 7.

Cooler days accompany front

Daytime temperatures in Midland are running quite a bit above the normal temperature of 67 degrees for this part of November, but they should cool down now since a cool front from the northeast passed through Midland early this morning, the weatherman said.

Skies should be clear through Friday. The low temperature tonight is expected to be near 40 degrees with winds becoming southeasterly tonight. Friday's high temperature should rise to the low 70s.

Wednesday's high temperature was 80 degrees and the overnight low temperatures was 39 degrees, the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

All area towns this morning reported clear skies and cool temperatures. It was a bit breezy in Lamesa, Rankin, Big Spring and Odessa.

Toasters cite best speaker

Named best speaker this morning at the regular meeting of the Tall Town Toasters was Tom Buford.

Most improved speaker went to Steve Williams, and Charlie Latch won both table topics and best evaluator. Steve Wright served as the meeting's "sparkplug."

Visiting astronaut guest at Lions meeting

Astronaut James Irwin was a special guest Wednesday noon at the meeting of the Downtown Lions Club in the Midland Hilton.

Introduced by Lion Frank Marlow, Col. Irwin spoke briefly concerning America's space program and its achievements. He said space technology is one of the most significant and useful in the field of science today.

The astronaut is in Midland this week, presenting programs at the high and junior high schools.

The program speaker at the luncheon session was Leonard Caryl, Midland structural construction engineer, whose subject was "The U.S. Economic Policy, Money and TRIM." He was introduced by Dan McAngus, program chairman.

It was announced that the club's annual Christmas party will be held Dec. 8 in the Midland Hilton.

Col. Irwin also spoke to the student bodies of both Midland High School and Lee High School Wednesday afternoon.

Col. Irwin said his July 16, 1971, moon flight "expanded the spiritual dimension of my mind and body."

Col. Irwin said the morning of the flight was beautiful and "we felt we had a 'rendevous with destiny in a gleaming white rocket."

Col. Irwin said he and the other astronauts, Cols. Dave Scott and Al Worden, had some tense moments as final checks were made, but became elated as the rocket blasted off and they began to leave the earth.

He did not mind that most people could not remember the first man to set foot on the moon, Col. Irwin said, let alone those who followed.

"That's not important," Col. Irwin said. "The important point is that they know we went.

Cols. Irwin and Scott spent almost three days on the moon as Col. Worden circled above.

He showed the students a film, which included scenes from a ride in the lunar rover, and Col. Irwin's test of Galileo's theory about falling objects in a vacuum.

Taking a feather and a hammer, he released both objects at the same time, and both hit the lunar surface at the same time.

When it came time to leave the moon, Col. Irwin said, the space craft left the moon "like a cork out of a champagne bottle."

"It was good to get back to earth food and something to drink besides Tang," said Col. Irwin, referring to his return to Earth.

Col. Irwin retired from the space program in 1972 after 16 years in the U.S. Air Force.

He began his career as a target tow pilot in Yuma, Ariz.

"One of the most humbling experiences I had was when I was up with a student pilot in a plane that crashed.

"We were both severely injured. At one point, doctors thought they would have to amputate my foot."

"I said to myself, 'Could this really happen to Jim Irwin, the hottest pilot in the sky?'"

For five bucks, you can get and wear, if you dare, a colorful T-shirt depicting an ass and lettered with the "American Council of Spotted Asses" logo. You can join the council by writing in care of P.O. Box 21, Fishtail, Mont.

It's not always fair to generalize and say that one animal is "dumber" or "smarter" than another. There, you really get into semantics amd sensitivities.

But some people will swear up and down that the mule and donkey, "stubborn" as they may appear, are a whale of a lot smarter than the horse.

The horse-fancier may disagree or, possibly, might very well disdain the contention.

All creatures, including "the misunderstood donkey," have their endearing, perhaps redeeming, qualities.

Don't they?

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The two young men are alike in so many ways — both students in the mid-20s who came to college here from their homes in Iran, both Muslims from middle-class families that are supporting them here, and both with intense feelings of patriotism for their troubled native land.

There the similarities end, and the pair seem as sharply divided as it is possible to be on the great issues of freedom, imperialism and ideology that have dominated the 20th century. As the shah and his shahbanou were touring official Washington Wednesday, one of these young men wore a hood and denounced his country's leader as a "fascist butcher" while the other waved a tiny Iranian flag in enthusiastic support.

Listen first to Ali Mohemade, pro-shah. Mohemade, 27, sports a heavy black moustache and has an open, friendly manner. As he bantered with his friends on a downtown street corner Wednesday while waiting for the shah to appear, he had a casual, almost collegiate air. He clearly was enjoying himself.

"I cannot say exactly why I like the shah," he said, struggling for the right expressions. "It's a feeling: I love him. In your case, someone could say, 'Jesus is a son of a gun,' but you still love him. I love the shah since he is the king, and he is a nice person."

Mohemade said he does not believe all the accusations that the shah is a dictator, that the shah is controlling the country through a repressive secret police organization, the SAVAK. "SAVAK is like the FBI," Mohemade explained. "It protects our people against those who want to do something against our country, against the shah, against everybody."

There is a believable, even compelling normality about Mohemade. He is studying to become an English language teacher because "you can get good pay." He is not out to change the world. In fact, he is having fun. "I am a Muslim, but I drink ...a little bit," he said with a laugh that his friends joined in.

Mohemade came to the United States six months ago and entered an English language program at a junior college in Dallas, Tex.; he couldn't remember the exact name of the college. Back home in Tehran, he said, his mother is a seamstress and his 12-year-old sister goes to school. His father, who was a government agriculture official, died several years ago.

Actually, that proved to be somewhat of a bonanza for Mohemade. The death brought a government pension that enabled the son to travel throughout Iran for several years.

"I had a good time," he explained. "I took a trip, lived in one city or another. I was like a tourist. I worked a few days a month, maybe. If you have money, why should you bother yourself with work?"

Mohemade said his family is supporting his study here and that he receives no subsidy from the government.

Reza Abrhamy, a friend who was listening to the interview, said that he, too, was suported by his family — but that on three occasions when he was low on cash he asked the Iranian government for help and received a total of $1,800 this way. "I wanted it to buy a car," he said.

Mohemade said he paid his own way to Washington, using money he had saved for the Christmas holidays. He does not plan to stay long. "It's cold here," he said. "I think I'll try it in the summertime."

About a quarter of a mile away, on the Ellipse just south of the White House, the young Iranian in the white hood broke away from a chanting circle of his friends and sat for half an hour with a reporter on a stone wall that surrounds the national Christmas tree.

He sat in the warm November sun, nameless for fear of government reprisal, his voice level, his right hand chopping home his points — the very picture of that special, fearful seriousness that goes with being revolutionary, and which Americans came to know so well in their own young protesters nearly a decade ago.

"In my family when I was growing up, the aura of SAVAK always stopped any political discussion," said the student. "My father would say, 'Stop! Saying that will get you into trouble. I don't want to be tortured, to be driven out of business.'"

This student, who is studying engineering at a university in Washington, said he plans to go home to work — yet he fears that, in doing so, he will be exposed to possible capture, at the very least to harassment. "You know, you just feel it in your guts there is no freedom of speech, no freedom of assembly, no security in choosing your own destiny."

Torture, he said, has been part of his life, something he worries about. "It's really unbelievable," he said. "But after a friend spent six months held by SAVAK, his brother said all his body was burned with cigrettes and this is quite a mild torture. I have heard they put underground people on toasting frames (over hot coals)."

The seriousness comes through in many ways. He is a good Muslim, he said: no drinking, no premarital sex. There also is the sense of normalcy, as in the case of the pro-shah student. This anti-shah student said he is being supported by his family, which is located in a medium-sized town in Iran. His father is in real estate, he has several brothers and sisters.

Most particularly, he emphasized, he is not a Marxist, though to the casual eye the posters and chants of his organization — the Organization of Iranian Muslim Students — may seem to have Marxist overtones.

Both Marxists and the anti-shah Muslims, he explained, may use the same terminology — "exploitation," "imperialism" — but the Muslims believe in a divine being, and the Marxists are godless materialists, he said. "We are against America and any other power, the Soviet Union included," he said. "We are opposed to foreign domination."

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah's International Women's Year delegation, which plans to sponsor an anti-homosexual resolution at the national IWY conference in Houston this week, has learned its display will be next to the National Gay Rights Coalition booth.

The Utah booth is to be manned primarily by Texas members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon), whose leadership has spoken out repeatedly against the gay-rights movement.

Utah got the last available space, after another group cancelled.

THE NEW 510. BEST ALL-AROUND DATSUN YET.

SEE IT ON THE NEIL DIAMOND SPECIAL TONIGHT AT 9 PM ON NBC-TV.

Bigger than the small cars, smaller than the big cars. We drove our engineers to the limits. We demanded a car whose performance, room and ride were bigger than the small cars'. A car whose price and handling were smaller than the big cars'. We demanded a lot. And we got it.

The new 510 is big where you need it. In leg room, hip room, family room. Datsun engineers even extended the front seat track for extra stretch-out room. And included power front disc brakes for extra stopping control.

The new 510 is small where it counts. On the outside, which means it can slip into the snuggest of parking spaces. And new steering which is light to the touch helps make it easy.

Levers, switches, gauges galore. The new 510 abounds in conveniences you won't find in every economy car. Stalks mounted on the steering column control lights, turn signals, wipers and washer. A multi-level air-flow system cools you all over and, wonder of wonders, defrosts and defogs even the side windows. An electric defroster helps keep the rear window clear.

Built to endure. Every new 510 hitches an all-steel, all-welded unibody to a 2-liter overhead cam power plant we've raced to test for endurance, and which won to prove it. MacPherson struts up front and a unique new 4-link rear suspension help iron out road wrinkles. And beefed-up insulation helps keep the noisy out-side outside. Just like the big cars.

Prices start at just $4,093.* The new 510 is a whole new class of economy car. A series of cars — Hatchback, Wagon, 2- and 4-Door Sedans — that brings you the luxury of creature comforts at no extra cost. Cars that economize without compromise, at prices that are pure Datsun.

35/25 mpg hwy mpg city

These are 1978 EPA estimates for the 510 Hatchback based on standard manual transmission. Your mileage may differ, depending on how and where you drive, your car's condition and optional equipment.

The new 510. It's Datsun, dedicated to perfection; driven to excellence. Drive the new 510 for yourself. You'll find it's not only the best all-around Datsun yet, it just may be the best all-around economy car yet.

NOBODY DEMANDS MORE FROM A DATSUN THAN DATSUN.

DATSUN. WE ARE DRIVEN.

'Over-the-Top' again

The United Way of Midland and proud citizens of the Tall City have done it again — exceeding a record goal in the annual United Way fund campaign.

The final report session Tuesday revealed $755,254 subscribed, 100.5 per cent of the $751,470 goal, and gifts yet are being received.

This is a tremendous, meaningful achievement, one of which every Midlander well may be proud. It represents a well-coordinated, enthusiastic, determined effort on the part of the hundreds of volunteer workers in the campaign, but more significant even, it represents a marvelous spirit of generous giving on the part of Midland business firms, organizations and individuals who believe in taking care of their own — the United Way.

It once again shows what can be done when citizens of a community present a united front in seeking to attain worthwhile goals.

This is the sixth year in succession that Midland has exceeded its United Way goal, and again this is a time for community-wide rejoicing.

Back in the early 1970s Midlanders made up their minds to do something about United Way — and that something was to meet their United Way challenge ... and they did just that then. They have repeated each year since, and the Tall City stands even taller as a result thereof.

Residents have accepted the United Way of giving as a means of funding the operating budgets of the 20 participating agencies. They have faith in the United Way of Midland and the United Way of giving.

Reaching a goal in excess of $750,000 in a city of this size isn't an easy task in any sense of the word, but it is much, much easier when a campaign is well-organized, as was the Midland effort; when officers, directors and volunteer solicitors perform so nobly in their assignments, again as they have in the just completed fund drive, and when residents are cooperative and generous in their giving — in typical Midland fashion. Team effort is the answer.

It's great to live and work in such a great community.

Congratula ions certainly are in order for United Way Campaign Chairman Deane Stoltz and his host of dedicated, hard-working, volunteer solicitors; to President Tony Martin and his fellow officers and directors; to all contributors — in fact to everyone who had a part in the successful campaign.

It was a great job, especially well done in every respect, from the initial planning through the solicitation phase, and Midland is an even better community because of it.

Soviet test ban bid

American diplomats are not yet persuaded, and understandably so, to order a halt in production of nuclear weapons in response to the recent plea sounded by Communist Party Chief Leonid I. Brezhnev for suspension of all nuclear explosions.

The semantics of the Soviet Union leader's call for a new treaty raises as many questions as were answered.

Those old-timers who have been dealing with the Soviets over a long period of time quite naturally wonder just what is behind Brezhnev's plea. It is a change of pace.

But the implied invitation to negotiate is an encouraging indication of Soviet flexibility, and this, too, is something new.

Two pacts already ban test explosions in the atmosphere, under water and in outer space. Another, awaiting Senate ratification, would limit underground testing to weapons under 150 kilo tons.

In the past, the United States has found Moscow unwilling to give up tests for "peaceful" purposes. A ban on weapons experiments, therefore, was considered futile by American negotiators when testing could take place under the guise of peaceful research.

The present Soviet initiative seems to envision two agreements —a "moratorium" on peaceful testing and a "ban" on weapons explosions.

The potential for Soviet deceit remains and the U.S. State Department is understandably wary. The U.S. must insist on a single treaty, which it has the technology to monitor.

Nevertheless, the surface intent stressed by Brezhnev coincides with the proclaimed objectives of President Carter.

The Russians seem to have taken a step toward meeting the U.S. half way.

They should be encouraged.

ON THE COMEBACK TRAIL

ART BUCHWALD

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — The CIA has announced that it plans to slash 820 clandestine agents from its payroll. These are cloak and dagger men and women, and their training has probably not prepared them for a job in the private sector.

It will be tough for these people to get employment. An interview with a dress company personnel director could go something like this:

"What did you do before?" the personnel director asks.

"I was in cloaks for 25 years," the former agent says.

"But not dresses? Why were you discharged from your previous employment?"

"I was replaced by a computer hooked up to a satellite and they told me I wasn't needed any more."

"What can you do?"

"I can transmit 120 words a minute in code from a radio no larger than a cigarette lighter."

"That's very good, but we really don't need anyone to do that in the dress business. Is there anything else you can do?"

"I can steam open an envelope, photograph the contents and seal it again so nobody will be the wiser."

"Are you saying you'd like to work in the mail room?"

"Not exactly. But you asked me what I could do."

"We really have no need for anyone steaming open mail. Could you tell me what else you're qualified at?"

"I can put an electronic bug in a room so nobody will be able to find it."

"That sounds illegal."

"Not if it's for national security reasons."

"We're in ladies' dresses. We don't have any national security clients."

"I can fix a guy's drink so he'll pass out in two minutes."

"That's interesting, but that isn't usually the way we treat our buyers."

"I'm good at break-ins. I can get in and out of a place in 15 minutes and the people will never know I've been there."

"Dear me. You do have a lot of talents, but none of them seems to fit in with the needs of our company."

"Wait before you turn me down. I know how to use invisible ink. I can write 'The Lord's Prayer' on the back of a postage stamp and no one will be able to find it."

"All we want is someone who can sell dresses."

"I can sell dresses. If a guy doesn't buy any. I know how to eliminate him without leaving a mark on his body."

"But you can't kill a person just because he doesn't buy one of our dress lines."

"I can turn him around and have him work for us instead of for them. I've done it many times."

"You must have been in an extraordinary business before you were laid off."

"I can't talk about it. You see this pen? It looks like an ordinary pen, right? But the ink is mixed with truth serum. You spill a drop of this ink on a man's hand and he'll start babbling secrets you wouldn't believe."

"Of course we always like to know what our competitors are doing, but using a pen like that wouldn't be worth the risk."

"All right. Take a look at this filling in my tooth."

"It's a very nice filling."

"That's how much you know. It's a cap for a cyanide pill. If someone tries to get any information out of me about the price of your dresses, I go 'chop' with my incisors and your secret dies with me."

"I'm sorry, but I'm afraid you're overqualified for selling dresses, Mr. eh, eh, eh..."

"Torchlight Four. As in 'We hear you loud and clear, Torchlight Four. Over and out.'"

WASHINGTON MERRY—GO—ROUND

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Utah's vexatious Judge Willis W. Ritter who has become a pain in the federal judiciary, may be in difficulty over his payroll practices.

The Justice Dept. was all set to lay the payroll charges before a grand jury last August but held off at the last minute. The department's Public Integrity Section, meanwhile, is keeping the controversial judge under "active investigation."

The 78-year-old Ritter is a roly-poly, white-haired gentleman with a round, red face. Blinking through glasses, he has the look of a beardless St. Nicholas who, however, is not at all jolly. On the bench, he scowls and perspires, dabbing his face with Kleenex.

He bullies attorneys, jails innocent bystanders and frees convicts at the drop of a Kleenex. Once he locked up a reporter briefly, without explanation, for picking his nose in court, so the bailiff later explained. Another time, Ritter cited two dozen postal workers for contempt because their mail-sorting machinery disturbed his courtroom.

He has been under constant fire for his judicial idiosyncracies. But the U.S. Attorney's office in Utah zeroed in on specific allegations that he had granted wrongful favors to his personal secretary and that he had also favored lawyers who represented him in private litigation.

Sources familiar with the payroll case say that Ritter allegedly authorized his secretary, Vickie Jolley, to continue drawing pay for four months in 1974 and another two months in 1975 when she did no work.

According to confidential Justice Dept. papers, the FBI "scheduled simultaneous interviews of (several) persons for the evening of Monday, August 22, 1977." Among other things, the agents were supposed to seek "the whereabouts and contents of Jolley's leave and payroll records" and "Jolley's relationship with Judge Ritter."

The Justice Dept. was prepared even to subpoena the judge's own files since the crucial records "would almost certainly be kept in the judge's chambers." A confidential document, dated August 10, mentioned "the possibility that fraud may have occurred," in the payroll case.

Unaccountably, the Justice Dept. canceled the grand jury but went ahead with some of the interviews. We have obtained the secret list of witnesses and questioned most of them.

They told us that Vickie Jolley "is gone most of the time" and that she does "extracurricular things for the judge." Added one court employee: "The judge is a mean man, better to the criminals than to the people who work here..."

The judge's secretary told us she was unaware of any investigation into payroll abuses. When we tried to pin her down, she said, "I have no comment" and hung up the phone. Judge Ritter refused to return our calls. In the past, he has boasted: "I am an old hand at telling the press where to go."

He has also complained that he is a victim of "malicious Mormonism," although it was a Mormon, the late Sen. Elbert Thomas, D.-Utah, who recommended him for the federal bench in 1949. Another Mormon, Sen. Jake Garn, R.-Utah, is now leading the fight to remove him from the bench.

Not long ago, the cantankerous Ritter strode into a Salt Lake City shop and spotted Garn's picture.

Sternly, the judge ordered the proprietor to remove the picture.

SECURITY PROBLEM — The lowest bid on a new Coast Guard cutter has been submitted by a Finnish shipbuilding firm called Wartsila. This has alarmed Sen. Henry Jackson, D.-Wash., who asked the Navy whether any classified equipment would be installed aboard the cutter.

Back came a private dispatch from Acting Navy Secretary R. James Woolsey, acknowledging that the Navy would provide secret equipment for the Coast Guard ships. He conceded that Finnish workers repair Soviet ships and that "highly capable Soviet technicians are present in Finland."

Therefore, he concluded: "The U.S. Navy considers that it is highly unlikely that any precaution exercised by the U.S. Coast Guard or the Finnish authorities would adequately protect Navy classified information."

Footnote.. A Coast Guard spokesman told us the decision on the contract will be made before the end of the year.

PLAYING WITH MATCHES — Each year, more than 4,000 children are burned to death and another 13,000 injured playing with matches. Now a New Hampshire inventor has developed a safer matchbook, yet the Consumer Product Safety Commission has treated it with massive indifference.

Inventor Robert Giglio's child-resistent matchbook works simply. The chemical igniter is placed in a narrower, almost invisible band across the botton of the front covers. Children would be frustrated by a dummy striker on the backside.

Yet curiously, the agency, which is supposed to protect the public from dangerous products, has virtually ignored Giglio's matchbook. A commission attorney told us that the inventor submitted his matchbook idea "too late" for its consideration. The commission, meanwhile, has scrapped plans for a child-resistant matchbook.

THE BIBLE
CAN YOU QUOTE IT?

By LAVINA ROSS FOWLER

1. Cummin, an aromatic condiment of the carrot family, is mentioned twice in the Bible. It is first in Isaiah 28:25-28 where the special way of threshing is described. For what did the scribes and Pharisees use it? Matthew 23:23

2. There is a similarity between cummin seed and fitches, which is an inferior type of wheat. Undoubtedly this is used as a figure of speech in Isaiah 28 and Ezekiel 4:9. What other grain is mentioned?

3. How did the eunuch urge Philip to baptize him? Acts 8:27-37

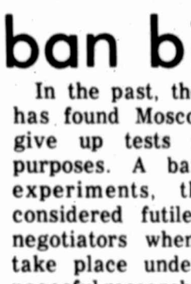

4. What great story hinges about the well in Sychar? John 4

5. "Charity suffereth long and is ——." 1 Cor. 5

NICK THIMMESCH

National Organization for Women's pressure tactics

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — Last spring I wrote about how the National Organization for Women (NOW), a bullying gang employing Fascist and Bolshevik tactics, threatened to inflict economic damage on a good piece of the citizenry by pressuring organizations not to hold conventions in 15 states which hadn't ratified the Equal Rights Amendment.

I didn't believe such an absurd boycott would ever take hold, but apparently it has. It is again time to take measure of this strong-arm oppression by the militant feminist movement.

A boycott can be justified when people suffer malicious injury or tyranny at the hands of an oppressor. In situations like that, I would be the first to sign up. But what evil have the hotel owners and merchants in Miami Beach, Chicago, Atlanta, Phoenix or Kansas City done? How have they harmed womankind?

The entrepreneurs in these convention cities did not take action against ERA, their state legislators did. Moreover, ERA is a debatable proposition. So far 35 states have ratified ERA, and 15 have turned it down. The ninnies who run NOW should admit that it is not inherently evil to support or oppose ERA.

If some collection of anti-ERA groups were able to pressure organizations not to hold their conventions in the state which ratified ERA, that would be just as low-down as what NOW is doing to businessmen and other citizens in the states which haven't gone for the amendment.

A boycott is a weapon used to counter what is perceived as religious, racial or political discrimination or oppression. The Arab boycott of firms dealing with Israel fits this discussion, though its merit is highly dubious. The U.N. sanctions against Rhodesia are based on that nation's racial policies. The longstanding boycott of Cuba had its origins in the disdain the United States held for Fidel Castro's Communist dictatorship.

There are so many empty-headed leaders of organizations who respond like Pavlov's dog to any strident stimulus from NOW that 50 groups have voted not to meet in the non-ERA states.

Leading the pack, quite expectedly, are the dunderheads who run the National Education Assn. (NEA), the union primarily responsible for the tragic decline in American public education. All manner of dimwitted gangs of educators, social workers, and psychologists have followed NEA's lead.

Anyway, managers of convention bureaus in Chicago, Miami Beach, Atlanta and New Orleans report that the boycott has caused their cities to lose many millions in convention business. This taste of success has caused NOW to try for even more. According to Martha Buck, NOW vice president, her organization will push the boycott idea on the thousands of women attending the International Women's Year Conference in Houston this week.

The effect of NOW's boycott on ERA? None, so far. Not one state so punished has changed its turndown of ERA. If anything, state legislators have been reinforced in their feelings about the closed minds that run NOW.

At NOW's convention earlier this year, the leadership attacked the Roman Catholic bishops of America, "boss-dominated" Southern Democrats, the traditional family notions of the Mormon Church, and also told lies about how all anti-ERA activities were the work of the "right wing" or worse in the United States.

NOW's outgoing president, Karen DeCrow, even demanded that Congress take away all federal funds from states which hadn't ratified ERA.

ERA should be discussed and debated. Its proponents have the most active and best finance organizations behind them. The federal government, which should be neutral on the question, just isn't. President's wives' stump for ERA, and $5 million of federal money is being spent to stage the IWY Conference. Its chairwoman, Bella Abzug, wants to ram a 25-point "Plan of Action," including a pro-ERA resolution, through the convention, politburo style.

Most of the strong-arm broads in NOW and other militant feminist outfits make me think of Queen Elizabeth I (she beheaded Mary, Queen of Scots) or Madame Defarge (in "Tale of Two Cities") or Anna Pauker (the Communist leader and hatchet woman of political dissidents in postwar Romania).

With these kinds of people, it's NOW or never, rule or ruin.

Conference to hear problems of foreign women

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS

HOUSTON (AP) — As a prelude to the U.S. national women's conference, women from more than 20 countries are preparing to tell their American sisters about the problems they face in achieving equality.

The consultation, which is bringing women from as many as 24 nations to Houston today, is sponsored by the State Department's Agency for International Development. The day-long session is focusing on a "human needs approach" to development and women's participation in the development process.

Arvonne Fraser, who is AID's coordinator for women in development, said five areas are being emphasized: food and agriculture, the female-headed household, legal rights for women, education and women's organizations as a political force.

The consultation precedes by a day the formal opening of the national women's conference, a federally-funded venture designed to identify the barriers to equality in the United States and make recommendations as to how they can be torn down.

This conference, which may bring more than 20,000 persons to Houston including about 2,000 delegates, is sponsored by the National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year. Its recommendations will go to the president and Congress.

The AID consultation is planned on a much smaller scale. About 35 international visitors will participate with a larger number of women from the United States.

They are in a position to describe first-hand how economic and social development can upset the traditional division of labor between men and women in their countries.

Some observers complain that development experts from industrialized nations may try to impose their ideas of appropriate roles for women and men upon developing nations which have different traditions.

For example, women have done from half to three-fourths of the farming in many parts of Africa on tribal lands. They have been responsible for feeding their own children.

The men cleared the land, hunted or tended grazing animals.

But a development scheme where a cash crop would be substituted for food crops could lead to malnourishment and hunger.

Land reform where men instead of the tribe would claim ownership, but where women could not, would be effective only until death, divorce or desertion. Then a woman and her children would be without land or a man to provide for them.

AID estimates that women contribute more than 40 percent of the world's food supply and cites an estimate by the Economic Commission for Africa which maintains that 70 percent of agricultural production there is carried out by women.

Education poses another problem. The ability to read is a basic qualification for entrance into the modern, technological world. But nearly two-thirds of the world's illiterate population is female, AID estimates. The numbers, although not the precentages, are growing.

Among the reasons for this literacy gap are the tendency by some parents in developing countries to keep girls doing domestic work at home instead of going to school and the problem of education for women coming to an end once the women begin bearing children.

The women the State Department has brought to the U.S. to discuss these problems have had a chance to visit various parts of this country and make some comparisons with their own.

Many have been in the United States more than a month. Each has had an opportunity to talk with Americans who are working in her field of interest.

Chija Kim Cheong, a senior researcher with South Korea's Institute of Family Planning, said that cultural traditions in her country are so strong that they are a barrier to achieving equality.

In South Korea's "man-dominated society," "The doors are open to women. But still, they feel awkward," she said in an interview.

"Even more than men, they will think, 'Oh, you're a lady. Why are you so aggressive? Are you taking a job opportunity from men? Why don't you stay home and take care of your family?' "

Many of the international visitors have a strong interest in the fate of the Equal Rights Amendment which is three states short of ratification.

Gagoitsiwe Sethokgo Sechele, a Botswanan coordinator of the Girl Guides Association, said she heard arguments on both sides of the issue.

"I feel it is very necessary after observing what is going on and what I have read I think the same things should apply in our countries."

She said that passage of the ERA in the United States would be a "guiding symbol" for the rest of the world.

Trinidad Conchu de la Paz, a doctor and administrator of a medcal school serving 10 million persons in the Phillipines, agreed.

William Clements Jr.

Clements wants Briscoe's post

DALLAS (AP) — William P. Clements Jr., a former Republican deputy secretary of defense who says he has no regrets about supporting Democrat Lyndon Johnson in 1964, has entered the chase for Gov. Dolph Briscoe's job.

Clements, who served in the Nixon and Ford administrations, entered the race Wednesday — a week after saying he was considering seeking the governor's seat.

Clements said he did not believe his support of Johnson in the 1964 election would hurt his chances.

"I have no apologies to make for that and I would do it again," he said adding that many others supported Johnson because Johnson "was a native son of Texas."

And, he said, "It gave us the opportunity to elect a Texan president."

The 60-year-old Dallasite may face former state GOP chairman Ray Hutchison in the Republican primary. Former gubernatorial candidate Henry Grover may also enter the race.

Hutchison, a former state representative, has said he intends to make his announcement on Nov. 29. Grover is expected to make up his mind before the first of the year.

Clements said last week he was encouraged to run by prominent Texas and national Republican leaders. His announcement last week that he was considering the race cooled off U.S. Rep. Jim Collins who also had expressed some thoughts about entering the race for governor.

Collins said he would find it hard to campaign against Clements.

Clements served as second in command in the Defense Department for four years during the Nixon and Ford administrations. In Dallas, he leads SEDCO, a large oil-gas well contract drilling and pipeline construction firm.

His wife, Rita, is a former Texas Republican national committeewoman.

Clements told newsmen he believes he can easily shift from national issues to states issues because of the importance of energy, military installations and the defense industry to Texas.

He also emphasized his interest in education through his service on the Southern Methodist University Board of Governors and his experience in agriculture as a ranch owner.

Boxer wins libel case against Mailer

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Attorneys for writer Norman Mailer and Playboy magazine say they intend to ask a federal judge to overturn a $105,000 jury award to a South Texas boxer who claims he was libeled by one of Mailer's articles.

The jury deliberated nearly five hours Wednesday before deciding that heavyweight Elmo Henderson, 42, should receive the money.

Henderson alleges he was libeled in a May 1975 article in the Playboy that incorrectly said he had been a patient in a Nevada mental institution.

The jurors said $5,000 was to be shared by Mailer and the magazine, with the other $100,000 to be paid by Playboy because it allegedly knew the statement was untrue before publishing it.

The attorneys said they would ask U.S. District Judge Owen Cox for a judgment overturning the jury's award and planned an appeal if that failed.

Henderson, 42, was a sparring partner for George Foreman during Foreman's preparations to fight Muhammad Ali in a heavyweight championship bout in Zaire in 1975.

Attorney W.J. Nutto — asking the jury not to give Playboy a license to print whatever it wanted to — contended Henderson had suffered mental anguish and damage to his reputation because of the story.

But David Krupp, representing Playboy and Mailer, argued that the boxer saw the case as a chance for a "big score." He also said the plaintiffs had not proven that Henderson's reputation had been damaged.

Krupp admitted, however, that Mailer and the magazine had made a "good faith mistake" in not checking to see if Henderson had been in a mental hospital.

Mailer testified Tuesday that Henderson seemed "a little unbalanced" in Zaire. He also said he heard another Foreman sparring partner twice say that Henderson had been in a mental institution.

Veteran students asked to sign up for benefits

Area veterans should sign up now for educational benefits for the coming spring semester at Midland College, according to Andrea Harrell, veteran affairs coordinator.

Continuing veteran students should submit their spring enrollment certifications immediately to avoid interruption of their benefit checks over the Christmas holidays, Mrs. Harrell said.

Continuing veteran students and new students may visit the Midland College office of veteran affairs to complete the necessary papers for the semester. The office is open from 8 a.m. until noon and from 1 to 5 p.m. weekdays in the administration building.

Enrollment cards will be available from 5 to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday in room 130 of the science-faculty building for those who are not able to come to the office during regular hours.

Questions comcerning veterans' educational benefits should be referred to Mrs. Harrell at 684-7851, ext. 135.

Firemen beating California blaze

By TED THACKREY JR.
And NIESEN HIMMEL
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — A force of 550 firefighters tightened their grip Wednesday on a blaze that had blackened more than 1,300 acres of canyon and hillside brushland south of Westlake Village in Western Los Angeles County.

Los Angeles County Fire Information officer Phil Killingneck said the flames, which at one point had burned to within two miles of expensive coastal homes, were 80 percent contained by sunset.

"And if the wind continues to lie down," he said, "we should get full containment during the night."

But fire officials remained reluctant to release more than a part of their force to return to home stations.

"We've let the tiredest — those who were on the Topanga Canyon fire before being sent here — take a rest," said Killingneck.

"But the fresher companies and camp crews are staying until we have it fully under control — which, we hope, will be sometime Friday or even earlier.

"It just depends on the wind ..."

The National Weather Service had words of encouragement:

Forecasters said the hot, dry Santa Ana winds that fanned Monday's fire and Tuesday's blaze to the west were not expected to return for the remainder of the week. Cooler ocean breezes were forecast for today.

In all, four homes were destroyed in the Topanga Canyon fire's 1,200-acre rampage, and another was severely damaged in the early hours of the second blaze.

Fire officials had originally estimated that at least 2,000 acres of chaparral-dotted brushland had been consumed, but this was downgraded to a little over 1,300 acres when they were able to make a closer inspection Wednesday morning.

A force of 50 men remained in Topanga Canyon, mopping up remaining hot spots, while another 600 concentrated on the flaring eastern front of the new fire to the west.

This major effort was successful in checking the flames Wednesday morning, and the firefighters were able to go on with the major plan of carving fire breaks at strategic points.

In terms of injuries the new fire was far worse than the one in Topanga Canyon.

Four Ventura County firemen were hurt while saving a threatened structure and Los Angeles County bulldozer swamper Michael Eubanks was critically injured when he was run over by a bulldozer Tuesday night.

Roads leading into the two fire areas were opened to residents again by Wednesday afternoon and fire officials seemed more hopeful than they had for days.

There were a few heart-stopping moments, however, when a third fire was reported gaining ground just a few miles to the west in Ventura County.

This blaze, in the Newbury Park area's foothills, had burned 10 acres of brushland by the time a force of 75 Ventura and Los Angeles County firefighters arrived. But low wind conditions and quick action held it back and it was reported fully contained in two hours.

Dallas 'bubble boy' flown to Boston for transplant

BOSTON (AP) — A 16-month-old Dallas infant, nestled in a plastic bubble to protect him against germs, has been flown to Boston where doctors are planning a rare bone marrow transplant.

The infant's 3-year-old brother went along on the flight Wednesday as a potential donor.

Tony Olivo has been in the bubble since birth because he has no defense against viral and fungal infection, said Dr. Joel Rappeport, a bone marrow transplant specialist at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. He said the condition affects the clotting of his blood.

The young boy was flown to Boston in a plastic bubble stretched across three seats in an American Airlines plane, according to an airline spokesman.

Hospital officals said Tony would be admitted immediately into a germ-free room at the Children's Hospital.

"That is our version of the bubble," said Nancy Buell, spokeswoman for the hospital, referring to a Houston youth who must live in a bubble to protect him from germs.

Dr. Rappeport said Tony was afflicted with a rare condition, Wiskott-Aldrich Syndrone.

"That is a complicated syndrome of immuno deficiency and abnormal number and function of platlets," he said. "You can say it is abnormal clotting cells."

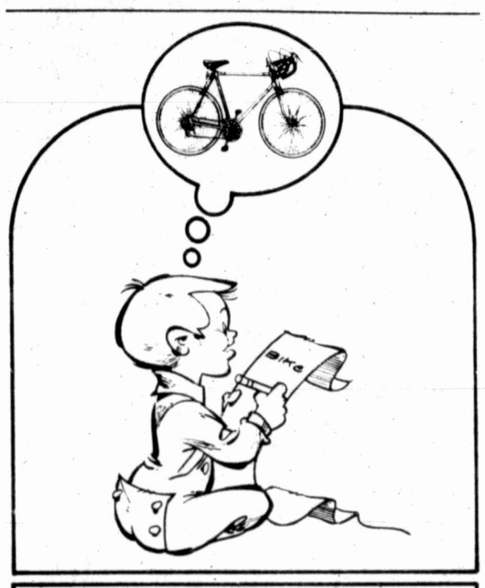

The surgery has been performed twice on children, Rappeport said, but neither patient was as young as Tony. "The transplant itself is a very simple thing," the doctor said. "It's the preparation that varies from patient to patient."

The airline provided additional personnel to the flight to monitor the flow of oxygen to Tony's bubble and to protect his ears from pressure. Lyons said employees at the airlines' flight academy and reservations center in Dallas contributed about $700 to cover fare and some living expenses for the boy and his family.

"We think he will be in Boston about three months," he said.

Lyons said Tony was placed in an "isolette, a little like an oxygen tent. It's probably a plastic bubble."

He said the procedure, an infusion of bone marrow, could take place by early December if the donor is well matched and the patient's condition is as diagnosed.

Food prices to continue rising, economist says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food prices will continue their "seemingly inexorable rise" next year, with the average family's food budget increasing 4 to 6 percent, a government economist says.

Kenneth R. Farrell, acting chief of the Economic Research Service in the Agriculture Department, said most of the increase will be due to higher costs for transporting, processing and selling food after it leaves the farm.

Another important factor will be higher sugar prices and their effect on a wide range of products, including soft drinks and bakery goods, Farrell said in a speech prepared for delivery to the annual Food and Agricultural Outlook Conference. The conference concluded today.

Price predictions for 1978 are tentative. They may change due to a number of uncertain factors, including the weather, energy costs and the impact of food legislation, he said.

For example, a new price support program for U.S. sugar producers has just been implemented, and President Carter has imposed new duties on imported sugar. Congress is considering ratification of an international sugar agreement aimed at boosting global sugar prices.

Farrell said there is little doubt that the new domestic price support program, aimed at guaranteeing domestic producers the equivalent of 13.5 cents a pound for sugarcane and sugar beets, "will significantly influence U.S. food prices" next year.

"It has been estimated that increasing the sugar support price to 13.5 cents per pound of raw product equivalent alone will increase domestic food expenditures in 1978 by one-half of 1 percent," Farrell said.

The Carter administration also has announced its intention of curbing grain plantings next year by requiring farmers to set aside 20 percent of their wheat land and 10 percent of their corn acreage from crop output.

Department officials say, however, that those programs will not increase consumer food prices because of huge reserves of U.S. wheat and corn.

Prospective large exports of grain to the Soviet Union and rumors that China may want grain are not expected to affect food prices significantly.

Overall, retail food prices this year are up 6.5 percent from 1976, he said, compared with a gain of 3.1 percent last year. Retail food prices soared 14.5 percent annually in 1973 and 1974 and then slowed to an 8.5 percent increase in 1975.

Farrell said grocery store food prices this year are expected to average about 6 percent more than in 1976, while food eaten away from home is up about 8 percent.

"Coffee prices alone will account for about half of the 6 percent rise in average grocery store prices in 1977," Farrll said. "The entire imported foods and fish group will contribute over three-fifths of the total."

But for 1978, he said, "It appears that most of the pressure on food prices will be derived from increased costs in the marketing sector and relatively less from imported foods and fish."

Vernie Lee Morse, 81, died Wednesday afternoon in a Midland nursing home after an extended illness.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Friday in Thomas Funeral Home with the Rev. W. W. Skaggs, assistant minister of Kelview Heights Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be at 4 p.m. in Coleman City Cemetery.

Morse was born Sept. 21, 1896. He had been a Midland resident since 1947.

Survivors include a son, V. L. Morse Jr. of New Orleans; two daughters, Ruby Lakey of Midland and Mrs. Dub Izzard of San Angelo; 13 grandchildren, and 10 great-grandchildren.

Firefighting soldiers encountering militants

LONDON (AP) — Tension and destruction mounted today in Britain's four-day old firemen's strike as militants tried to prevent hastily trained soldiers from fighting the nation's blazes.

The Home Office reported 12 fire-related deaths so far, including five children in Northern Ireland on Wednesday and today, but said none could be blamed on the walkout.

Tempers flared during a London power station blaze Wednesday when nonstriking senior fire officers commandeered a foam engine from a nearby firehouse.

The strikers seized it back, but troops later moved in and drove it away.

A team of part-time reserve firemen was kicked and spat upon when answering an emergency call. Militants also sabotaged some of their own trucks Wednesday and jammed fire station doors to prevent troops from taking the equipment.

The Greater London Council, the British capital's governing body, said it blanked out a strikers' pirate radio network in retaliation for earlier jamming of a key channel linking an emergency control center with mobile firefighting units.

The Council said it also cut off telephones at striker-held firehouses.

The firemen, making an average $115 a week, want a 30 per cent pay hike. But the government refuses to back off from its counter-inflationary pay curbs limiting increases to 10 percent.

Bishops uphold belief in sex within marriage

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Roman Catholic bishops are reaffirming their stand that sexual intercourse is morally right only within marriage and always wrong outside it.

At the same time, their doctrinal committee has denounced a Catholic theological study favoring more flexible standards. The two actions came Wednesday at a meeting of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

They approved a section of a new national teaching guide condemning contraception and sterilization, declaring that sexual intercourse is a "moral and human good only within marriage."

The bishops added that, "for a Christian, therefore, premarital sex, extramarital sex, adultery, homosexual behavior or other acts of impurity are forbidden."

Simultaneously, the bishops' doctrinal committee assailed as contrary to church teaching and morally unsound a recent theological study saying the ethics of sex acts hinge not on absolute rules but on the particular circumstances.

Carter kicked oilmen in teeth, Langdon tells railroad group

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Railroad Commissioner Jim Langdon, who retires in six weeks, told oilmen today that President Carter had given them a kick in the teeth and attacked them slanderously.

Langdon, whose resignation from the commission takes effect at the end of the year, spoke out shortly before the commission set the December oil production allowable once again at 100 percent of capacity.

As in the past, an exception was made for the rich East Texas field, whose allowable remains 86 percent.

"At a time when the industry should be getting a pat on the back and encouragement to work even harder than they now are, what do they get? A kick in the teeth from many of our so-called national leaders and a petty but slanderous attack upon the industry as a whole by President Carter for the failure of the petroleum industry to welcome and accept his poorly conceived, administratively unworkable national energy plan," Langdon said.

He said the handling of the energy crisis in Washington was characterized by "constant display of ignorance, incompetence and intemperance" and asserted that the nation was as far from a workable energy policy as it was four years ago.

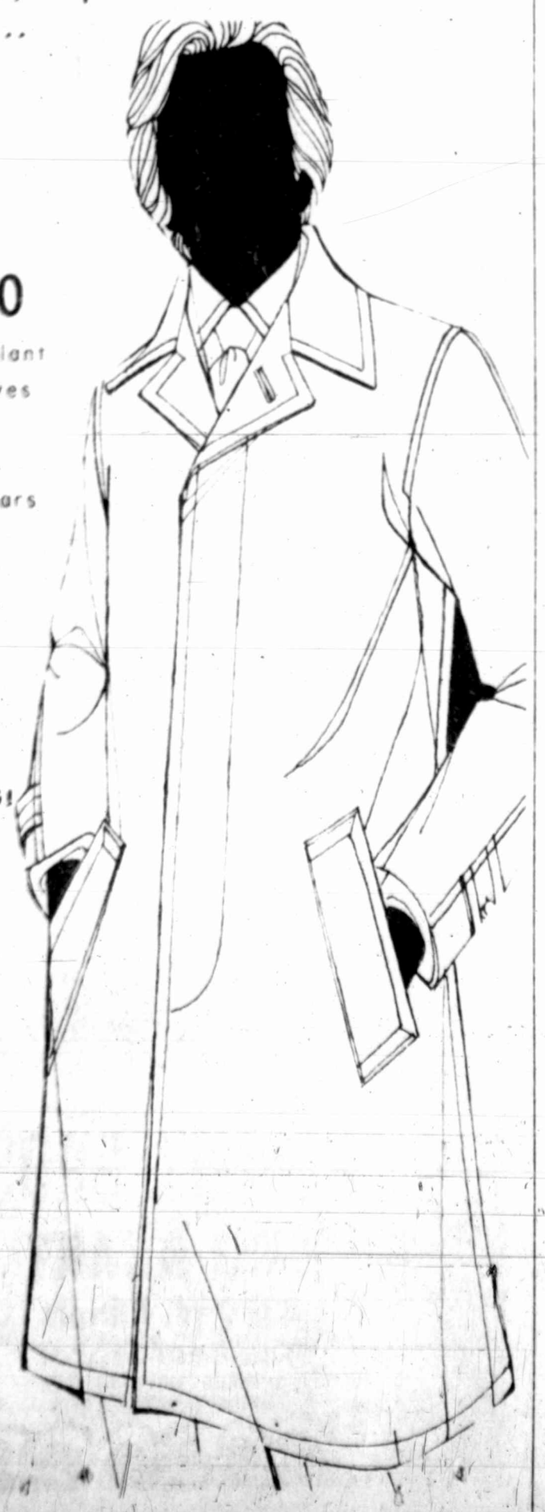

A similar note was struck by W. S Williams, Texaco's manager for special services for the Central United States.

He called the Carter energy program "little more than a massive tax program" and said, as other oilmen have, that it fails to provide adequate incentives to develop oil and gas supplies.

He quoted a study that he said indicated inflation in oil producing costs had withered the real price of old oil from the stated ceiling of $5.25 a barrel to less than $2.50 in 1970 dollars.

Sleeping habits follow person's 'body clock'

By EARL LANE
Newsday

Under normal circumstances, the human body adapts itself to a 24-hour day. People feel sleepy at about the same time each night; body temperatures rise and fall in a cycle of roughly 24 hours. The release of certain hormones also follows that pattern, known as a circadian rhythm.

But scientists have found there are persons who denied all the usual time cues of daily experience tend to fall into a circadian rhythm that runs for a period of about 25 hours. Several scientists have suggested the existence of a syndrome in which persons permanently live troubled lives on a 25-hour rhythm without really being aware of it.

Now, scientists at Stanford University's Sleep Research Center have reported the case of a 28-year-old man, blind from birth, whose "body clock" appears to run regularly on a rhythm of just about 25 hours.

Interestingly, the blind man's normal rhythm appears to be indistinguishable from the lunar day. When the scientists studied the man in a laboratory setting, they found — as they put it — "a remarkable coincidence between his sleep onset and local low tide." While the man's sleeping habits tended to follow the tide tables, however, the scientists do not ascribe his problems specifically to lunar forces.

Still, the blind man's case is an intriguing one, for it reaffirms the notion that the 24-hour rhythm is not universal in humans.

It is already known that some people seeking help for sleep disorders have sleep cycles that are out of phase. Many people experience mild versions of that when, for example, traveling across time zones on a long plane trip. When the day is quickly lenthened or shortened, the body's chemistry is thrown off, and it may take several days to readjust and get sleep habits back into phase, "jet lag" as it is known.

The blind man's case reported at Stanford suggests, however, that some people with sleep-wake disorders may be more than simply out of phase with the usual 24-hour cycle. They, too, may have "free-running" circadian rhythms that are somewhat longer than 24 hours.

The researchers asked the man to come into a sleep laboratory, where he was allowed to work, eat and talk to others, not by the clock, but only as he felt necessary or inclined. He was given access to the usual time cues (except, of course, perception of light) but not required to live by them. During the first 26 days in the lab, the man slipped into a 24.9-hour cycle (the lunar cycle is 24.84 hours) and was no longer bothered by insomina. Each day, his onset of sleep would occur about an hour later than on the previous day.

When he left the laboratory, however, the man tried unsuccessfully to adjust again to a 24-hour day. The research team then tried a 10-day laboratory test to force him into a 24-hour cycle. The test was started on a day when his cycle happened to coincide with "normal" sleep patterns. He was put to bed each day thereafter at 11 p.m., with orders to sleep. His watch, radio and books were removed. He was not allowed up until 7 a.m. The man was unable to make the adjustment. His nighttime sleep became progressively more disrupted and his daytime activities deteriorated as sleepiness increased. The researchers found that the man's body continued to operate on a 24.9-hour schedule, despite the intense pressure to train them to a 24-hour cycle.

Whether the man's case is more than a curiosity remains to be seen. In several other studies, other persons with varying degrees of blindness did not show evidence of "freerunning" circadian rhythms. But the Stanford team surveyed 50 persons with varying degrees of blindness and found that 38 of them complained of significant sleep-wake disorders.

'Big bang' occurred smoothly

THOMAS O'TOOLE
Washington Post

The Big Bang that marked the beginning of time and the creation of the universe was nowhere near as violent as cosmologists have suggested.

"What we see is evidence of a remarkably smooth and uniform event," said Dr. Richard Muller of the University of California's Lawrence Laboratory at Berkeley. "We see the leftover cosmic radiation of the Big Bang moving out in straight lines whereever we look in space. This suggests a very orderly origin."

Muller is one of three scientists at the University of California who have just concluded a series of experiments to measure the radiation left in space by the Big Bang. High-flying U-2 aircraft lifted their instruments to 65,000 feet, where there is little interference from other sources of microwave radiation.

What Muller, Dr. George Smoot and a graduate student, Marc Gorenstein, found was cosmic radiation — produced 15 billion years ago by the Big Bang — expanding near the edge of space at the same speed in all directions. So closely do the cosmic lines match that there was only a difference of 1 count in 3,000 in any two places the instruments searched.

Their findings do little to explain the Big Bang itself, Muller conceded, except possibly to make it even more mysterious.

"The Big Bang is still one of the biggest mysteries of cosmology," Muller said. "Nobody knows why it happened or where the energy came from to make it happen. Its uniformity is now its most distinctive feature, and we can't even begin to understand that."

One curious discovery made by the study is that the Milky Way galaxy, of which Earth is a part, is moving through space at a speed of 1.3 million m.p.h. heightening the curiousity is the finding that nearby galaxies appear to be moving along at matching speeds, no faster and no slower.

"This is a phenomenal rate of speed," Muller said, "when you consider how everything has slowed down since Creation. Things must have been moving then at close to the speed of light."

The way Muller and his two colleagues measured galactic speed was to measure the velocities at which their own instruments (namely Earth) were moving toward certain constellations, and then match those speeds of the sun.

"We found we are moving the least toward Aquarius and the most toward Leo, which are in opposite directions," Muller said. "It's hard to explain, but it's like running through a rainstorm — you feel it more in the front of the face."

Stock market declines

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices retreated today as Wall Street awaited the latest weekly Federal Reserve data on the money supply.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 5.72 at 831.34.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 7-4 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts noted some uneasy expectations that weekly statistics due from the Fed at the NYSE close would show an upswing in the money supply.

Such a development might be taken as a setback to recent hopes that the Fed would not feel the need to tighten credit any further in its efforts to limit monetary growth and restrain inflation.

White Motor rose 1⅝ to 10¼ in active trading. A former White Motor official said he hopes to make a tender offer for control of the company, and added that he believed two European automakers were also interested.

One of those concerns, Daimler-Benz of West Germany, asserted that it had no plans for any attempt to acquire White Motor.

The NYSE's composite index lost .18 to 52.35. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .06 at 118.69.

Volume on the Big Board came to 9.76 million shares by noontime, against 11.03 million at the same point Wednesday.

Columbia Pictures climbed 1⅛ at 19⅝. The company's much-publicized film "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" opened this week.

Ranger presents probe's results

Texas Ranger Eddie Almond presented the results of his investigation into the Nov. 6 Glasscock County shooting death of Tiburcio Girego Santome to state assistant attorney general Ed Idar and Dan Maeso at a meeting in Midland Wednesday.

However, the two investigators said their probe was not intended to reflect on the handling of the case by local officials.

District Attorney Rick Hamby of Big Spring also conducted an investigation into the case.

The two state officials are trying to determine if the Mexican national's civil rights were violated during the shooting incident, they said.

"Our presence does not in any way imply that local enforcement is not doing a proper job," Idar said. "This should not be viewed as an infringement of District Attorney Rick Hamby's prerogatives as district attorney to take any action advisable at the conclusion of the investigation," Ibar said.

According to an investigation directed by Hamby, Santome was shot to death by G. B. Thurwanger, a retired Martin County deputy sheriff, after Santome had been arrested by Glasscock County Sheriff Royce Pruitt.

Santome reportedly pulled a small kitchen knife while being taken to Garden City from St. Lawrence and attacked both Pruitt and Thurwanger after being loaded into the sheriff's car. Thurwanger then picked up a gun from on top of the dashboard amd fired at Santome four times, Hamby's report said.

Santome had been arrested at the annual fall festival in St. Lawrence, southwest of Garden City, for drunkeness and disorderly conduct.

Maeso said he and Ibar will return to Midland from Austin if the investigation requires it.

Hamby said he will present the results of the investigation to a grand jury within his district.

Goods, services output grows

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's output of goods and services grew at an annual rate of 4.7 percent in the third quarter, a much stronger showing than previously calculated, the Commerce Department said today.

The revised figures of the Gross National Product were well ahead of the 4 percent rate needed to keep the unemployment rate from getting worse. However, they were well below the unusually strong increases of 7.5 percent in the first quarter and 6.2 percent in the second quarter.

In a preliminary report last month, the department had estimated the GNP for July, August and September had grown at an annual rate of 3.8 percent.

The GNP measures the output of goods and services in the economy and is the strongest indicatoheicp2the nation's economic well-being and the outlook for jobs.

Exports and inventory investments by businesses pushed the figures upward in the new report.

The department also said corporate profits increased $7.6 billion in the third quarter to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $147.8 billion. However, after taxes were taken out, profits declined $600 million to $103.7 billion.

Dividends increased $2 billion to $42.3 billion.

Inflation during the third quarter was at a rate of 4.4 percent, after a 7 percent rate in the second quarter.

After adjustment for inflation, the GNP stood at $1 trillion, 346.1 billion for the third quarter, the department said.

The Carter administration says it thinks the GNP will return to a rate of about 5 percent at the end of the year. However, it is worried about another slowdown late next year, when the effect of federal programs to create jobs will begin wearing off.

Smokers urged to halt puffing

By The Associated Press

Smokers across the nation were urged today to stop puffing — at least for one day and possibly forever — in support of the "Great American Smoke Out," sponsored by the American Cancer Society and some local government and health organizations.

A spokesman for the society said the group hoped to get 10 million of the country's 54 million smokers to give up their cigarettes for the day. He said that in a similar program in California, 10 percent of those who quit for a day stopped smoking permanently.

Local society volunteers have been distributing "I Quit" pledge cards and petitions for people to sign and rallies and special programs were organized in many cities.

Celebrities and public officials in Detroit scheduled a "Smokeout Burnout" — a bonfire in which they pledged to toss their cigarettes. Georgia organizers planned a drawing for a "Cold (frozen) Turkey" for people who promised July 4th to give up smoking and have kept their word. Comedian Shecky Green, chairman of the anti-smoking program in Nevada, set up a "Great Smokeout Race."

A cancer society spokesman in Albuquerque, N.M., said the local organization's main effort would be concentrated in schools since the group feels "the big problem is among teen-age girls and young women."

Museum's director urges check return

Russell J. Ramsland, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, today urged prospective members of the museum to return their membership applications and checks.

Ramsland said the museum has received 145 renewals and new member applications so far, as compared to 203 in the final quarter of 1976.

About $37,000 more from the present membership drive will be needed if the museum is to remain even with last year's totals, he added.

Membership sales finance about a third of the museum's operating expenses, with the rest coming from admissions, gift shop revenues and year-end giving.

The museum president said the museum is "doing a unique job" in interpreting the Permian Basin and the oil industry to about 40,000 visitors a year.

"We think the museum deserves membership support if for no other reason than explaining what's involved in exploring and drilling for oil and gas, and showing oil people as they are: Americans who are doing a great job for the country," Ramsland said.

Anyone who has not received a membership folder and application card may telephone the museum at 683-4403.

"Probably not very much," Church responded, winning ready agreement from some of the other conferees trotted out by Powell.

As the Congress members departed, the press secretary tried to make the best of the situation.

"I want you to know," joked Powell, "that this was another presentation by your up-tight White House staff."

For many years, it was traditional for presidents to accept a live Thanksgiving turkey from representatives of the National Turkey Federation. This week, however, the responsibility fell to Vice President Walter F. Mondale.

As the presentation ceremony ended Tuesday, the vice president's press secretary, Al Eisele, turned to White House reporters and cracked, "I hope that puts an end to the 'whatever-happened-to-Mondale' stories."

A rash of such stories prompted Carter to telephone two newsmen last month to emphasize the substantive nature of Mondale's assignments.

WITH THE FLAG at half-mast, students at Toccoa Falls Bible College returned to classes Wednesday. The school was closed for more than a week after an earthen dam broke, sending floodwaters cascading through the campus. Thirty-eight persons died and one is missing. (AP Laserphoto)

DR. NEIL SOLOMON 'Smoker's heart'

Dear Dr. Solomon: You have mentioned quite often that smoking increases one's chance of having a heart attack. But isn't this a purely theoretical link? What actual damages does smoking do the heart?—Jeff P.

Dear Jeff: The damage that smoking does to the heart and the blood vessels shows up in post mortem studies. In one such study, the heart arteries of heavy smokers were found four times as much of the plaque buildup known as atherosclerosis, which clogs the blood vessles and leads to heart attacks. There is also a striking change in the tiny arteries called arterioles. The arterioles of heavy smokers had a degenerative thickening in 90 percent of the cases covered in another survey. The figure for more moderate smokers—those who smoke between one and two packs a day—was half this. And nonsmokers did not show any diseased condition at all.

These are all actual physical results seen under the microscope. And they are so characteristic that researchers refer to them as "smoker's heart."

Dear Dr. Solomon: Just in the past couple of months, two children have been hit by cars after dark on our lane. It is frightening—the drivers simply have not seen them walking along the side of the road. Isn't there something that could be done to protect children?

And all the rest of us, too.—Marion K.

Dear Marion: You are absolutely right. It is frightening. Pedestrian accidents are the leading cause of death for children between the ages of 5 and 14, and a great many of these accidents occur after dark. At night, a driver often doesn't see a pedestrian in time to stop or avoid him. In one survey, 87 percent of the drivers who hit a pedestrian at night said they could not see the victim until it was too late.

Reflective fabric and tape is an excellent attention-getter—it is visible at 500 feet or more in a car's headlights. A local fabric shop or department store may carry sew-on strips or reflective appliques. Bicycle and motorcycle stores are also good places to try.

If you cannot find anything in your neighborhood shops, however, here is a list of several places that carry them:

For a 2½-inch-wide armband, send $1.00 to Reflective Division, Fasson Company, 250 Chester Street, Painesville, Ohio, 44077.

For a package of 24 reflective safety iron-ons, send $1.00 to Reflective Iron-One, Safety Treads, Inc., P.O. Box 1888, Grand Rapids, Mich. 49501. (Specify which pattern you want: triangular, thunderbolt or flowers!)

For a pedestrian safety kit, including reflective armbands, stick-on tape and show reflectors, send $1.00 to: Box 33984, 3M Company, Dept. K, St. Paul, Minn. 55133.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Joint bake sale slated Saturday

Members of the Future Secretary Association at Midland High School and the Permian Chapter of the National Secretary Association will have a joint bake sale beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday in Dellwood Mall.

Proceeds will be used to finance activities for both chapters throughout the year.

Home baked pies, cakes, cookies, breads and miscellaneous baked items will be offered at the sale.

"This would be a good opportunity to purchase home baked goods for Thanksgiving," said Ms. Andrea Yarbrough, FSA advisor.

Food goes somewhere

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Buddy Cochran, the man convicted of ramming his car into a Ku Klux Klan rally, is rumored to be on a hunger strike, but if so, Sheriff Randy Howard wants to know where the food is going.

"He hasn't turned down any trays," Howard said Monday in response to news reports that Cochran was refusing to eat.

"We send in trays with food on them and they are coming out empty."

He will be sentenced Thursday at the Sumter County Courthouse in Americus, Judge W.F. Blanks said Monday.

Reeves, Pecos sectors draw wildcat projects

Exploration has been slated for Reeves and Pecos sectors.

Texas Pacific Oil Co. No. 1 Olsen has been slated as a 16,000-foot searcher for gas in Reeves, six miles northwest of Orla.

Location is 1,650 feet from north and east lines of section 18, block 57, T-2, T&P survey, four miles northwest of the Chapman Deep (Atoka and Fusselman) gas field.

Zinke & Philpy, Inc., Midland, No. 1 Pecos Valley Oil Co. has been scheduled as a 6,100-foot test in attempt to reopen Devonian oil production in the Thunderbird field of North Pecos.

Location is 660 feet from northwest and 1,200 feet from southwest lines of section 36, block 3, H&TC survey, nine miles southwest of Imperial. It is ½ mile southeast of the depleted Devonian oil pay opener, which was completed in October 1972.

Mid-American Oil & Gas, Inc., Houston, No. 1 Crump Estate is planned as an 11,500-foot undesignated Wolfcamp gas project in Pecos, three miles south of Wolfcamp production in the Gomez gas field.

Drillsite is 1,403 feet from north and 1,242 feet from east lines of section 87, block OW, EL&RR survey, 10 miles northwest of Fort Stockton.

The Lehn-Apco, South (Ellenburger) oil pool of North Pecos gained its fifth well and a location north extension with completion of C. F. Lawrence & Associates, Inc., No. 4 Merchant-State, 14 miles west of Girvin.

The 24-hour pumping potential was for 44 barrels of 41-gravity oil and 75 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 204-1. It finaled through perforations at 4,804-4,824 feet, following 2,500 gallons of acid on the producing section.

Wellsite is 1,667 feet from southeast and 2,168 feet from northeast lines of section 102, block 10, H&GN survey, 14 miles west of Girvin.

Hockley, Borden tests open two new fields

Discovery potentials have been filed on wildcats in Borden and Hockley counties.

The Borden discovery, Cleary Petroleum Corp No. 1 Clayton-Johnson, was completed from the Mississippian for a daily pumping potential of 9 barrels of oil and five barrels of water per day, through perforations from 8,638 to 8,676 feet.

Gas-oil ratio was too small to measure, and gravity of the oil is 36 degrees.

The project is bottomed at 8,866 feet and 5½-inch casing is set at 8,742 feet. The pay zone was acidized with 9,100 gallons and fractured with 10,000 gallons.

The Strawn was topped at 8,198 feet, the Mississippian at 8,587 feet and the Ellenhurger at 8,820 feet, ground elevation 2,547 feet.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 36, block 31, T-6-N, T&P survey.

The project is about 5 miles southwest of the Dalton area and the same distance northwest of the Gail, South area.

HOCKLEY STRIKE

Texas American Oil Corp. No. 1 Davis has been completed as a Clear Fork opener in Hockley County, five miles west of Snyer.

Operator reported a daily pumping potential of 60 barrels of oil and 60 barrels of water, through perforations from 6,110 to 6,301 feet. Gas-oil ratio was 120-1, and gravity of the oil 28 degrees.

Hole is bottomed at 6,380 feet and 4½-inch casing is set at 6,372 feet. The pay section was acidized with 7,000 gallons.

Operator called the top of the Clear Fork at 6,012 on ground elevation of 3,440.5 feet. Other tops reported include the San Andres at 3,047 and the Glorieta at 5,440 feet.

Wellsite is 467 feet from north and east lines of labor 1, league 17, Wichita County School Land survey.

Four WT areas draw sites for explorers

Wildcat sites have been staked in Borden, Terry and Hale counties.

Energy Sources, Inc. will drill No. 1 Ainsworth Estate, an 8,500-foot wildcat in Borden, six miles south of Fluvanna. It spots 150 feet from north and 2,780 feet from east lines of section 326, block 97, H&TC survey and ⅜ mile west of the Hataway (Strawn) field.

Cobra Oil & Gas Corp., Wichita Falls, No. 1-480 J. J. Delew is slated as an 8,200-foot wildcat in Borden, 15 miles northeast of Gail.

Drillsite is 1,000 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 480, block 97, H&TC survey, one location northwest of the Myrtle, North (Strawn) field.

HALE TEST

Clayton W. Williams Jr., Midland, has scheduled No. 1 C. S. Hudson, an 8,100-foot venture in Hale County, 18 miles southwest of Hale Center.

Location is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 2, block DT, HE&WT survey, two miles north of the Anton-Irish field.

TERRY PROBE

American Quasar Petroleum Co., operating from Midland, filed application to drill No. 1-20 Noble, a 10,200-foot prospector in Terry, 10 miles south of Brownfield.

Drillsite is 2,153 feet from south and west lines of section 20, block M, D. H. McNairy survey, 1¾ mile northeast of the Adair, Northeast (8,500 Wolfcamp) oil field.

Drilling set

Harken Oil & Gas, Inc., Abilene, plans to drill No. 1 A. L. Brothers as a ⅜-mile northeast offset to the opener of the Jack Grimm (conglomerate) field of Cottle County.

The project is scheduled for a bottom depth of 8,000 feet. It spots 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 9, IRR Co. survey, seven miles southeast of Paducah.

The discovery, Grimm's No. 1-A Brothers, finaled in July for a daily pumping potential of 30 barrels of 42-gravity oil and 18 barrels of water, through perforations at 7,090-7,102 feet.

Discovery announced

DALLAS — Texas Pacific Oil Co., Inc., acting as operator on behalf of an international consortium of oil companies, has another gas condensate discovery in the Gulf of Thailand. It is designated No. 16-D-1.

Limited tests in six separate Tertiary zones flowed at a total aggregate of approximately 48.5 million cubic feet of gas per day, with 445 barrels of condensate and some water.

The well should supplement gas and condensate reserves for the area in the Southern Gulf of Thailand. The gas area is 450 miles south of Bangkok and 130 miles northeast of Songhkla in Southern Thailand. Water depths are in the range of 250 feet.

Projects slated

Two pool sites have been staked in Eddy County, N.M., fields.

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 2-GK Eddy-State Communitized is planned as an 8,900-foot undesignated test, ½ mile northwest of the firm's No. 1-GK Eddy-State Communitized, recently completed extension to the Richard Knob (Morrow) gas area.

It spots 2,310 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 19-18s-25e, 11 miles southwest of Artesia. It also is one mile northwest of Morrow gas production in the Pemasco field.

No. 1-GK Eddy-State finaled last week for 6.426 million cubic feet of gas daily, through perforations at 8,603-8,641 feet.

Orla Petco, Inc., Midland, No. 2 Sanders is a ½-mile southwest offset to its No. 1 Pardue, recent Delaware oil strike, 3½ miles northwest of Loving.

It has a projected depth of 2,700 feet and spots 1,650 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of section 6-23s-28e.

The discovery finaled in September for 38 barrels of 41-gravity oil and 50 barrels of water daily, through perforations at 2,466-2,474 feet.

Wolfcamp well finals

Carl A. Schellinger of Roswell, N.M., has completed No. 1 Hahun-State as a third Wolfcamp gas well and one-mile southeast extension to that pay in the Rocky Arroyo field of Eddy County, 24 miles northwest of White City.

The calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 829,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 6,453-6,514 feet, after an acid treatment of 12,000 gallons.

A re-entry operation, it originally was drilled by Atlantic Richfield Co. as No. 1 Cauley Unit, and plugged and abandoned in 1968 at 7,610 feet. It has 412-inch casing set at 6,695 feet, the cleaned-out depth.

Location is 1,800 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 16-22s-22e.

Johnny repeats

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Johnny Ringger, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ringger, fell from a merry-go-round and suffered a broken arm.

The cast was removed recently after six weeks. Four-and-a-half hours later, Johnny slipped getting into a swimming pool and broke the arm again.

Alaska tanker runs made without incident

By WARD SIMS

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — After a shaky start, the Trans-Alaska oil pipeline is delivering crude oil from Prudhoe Bay to the marine terminal at Valdez with only an occasional minor problem.

Tankers large and small are churning through Valdez Narrows toward refineries in the Lower 48 at the rate of about one a day.

As of Nov. 1, more than 68,750,000 barrels of the estimate 9.6 billion barrels of recoverable crude at Prudhoe Bay on Alaska's North Slope had been pumped into the loading tanks at Valdez.

ENERGY
OIL & GAS

With 4½ months of pipeline operation on the record, William J. Darch, president of the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., says the integrity of the line and the standards of construction have been demonstrated satisfactorily.

Alyeska is the consortium of eight oil companies which designed and built the 800-mile, $7.7 billion line, and now is operating the long steel tube.

"Obviously, the extremely sophisticated system has not been yet completely debugged," Darch said, alluding to minor problems which still crop up.

"The combination of the extremely sensitive and sophisticated instrumentation, with the problems of Alaskan geography, means that we are learning still, and probably shall continue to do so for some time."

Noting that the 100th tanker is scheduled to sail from Valdez with cargo tanks filled with Alaskan oil this month, Darch said it is a signal to Alyeska "that in the language of today we've gotten our act together."

Problems plagued the construction project after the first oil entered the 48-inch line at Prudhoe Bay on June 20.

There were spills and accidents that kept pipeline engineers busy for more than a month, until the first crude from the North Slope started spurting in the tanks at Valdez on July 28.

The worst was an explosion and fire which leveled the pump house at Pump Station No. 8 just southeast of Fairbanks on July 8. One man died in the disaster, and reconstruction work on Pump 8 is still going on, with completion scheduled in January.

Alyeska estimates that it will take about a month after that for systems checking at the station, and that Pump 8 will go back on the line sometime in March.

Alyeska originally had planned to be running about 1.2 million barrels of crude a day through the line by this time, but the Pump 8 disaster intervened.

The daily flow rate on Oct. 31 was 754,000 barrels, but the flow rate varies from day to day. On Oct. 28, for instance, it was 695,000 barrels, on Oct. 26 730,000 barrels.

The daily average flow rate from oil-in on June 20 through Nov. 1 was 509,444 barrels.

"It depends on what goes on in the field, at Prudhoe, and it depends on what goes on in our own operation," Alyeska spokesman Sam Akin said of the daily flow rate.

"We may close down a pump at one of the stations for a few hours for some reason or another, and that will slow down the rate. There are all kinds of things that can affect it. It bicycles from one day to the next.

"We expect that it will hang around the 750,000-barrel figure until Pump 8 goes back on line.

"We will have the capacity then for the 1.2 million barrels a day we were originally to have had by now, but the amount to be moved depends on what the owners want moved.

"If they have a need for that much crude oil someplace, they'll brings ships in to Valdez to move it. If not, we'll be moving at lower quantities."

Coast Guard figures show that 90 tankers laden with North Slope crude had cleared Valdez through Nov. 1, with most destined for refineries in the Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles areas.

Upton field discovery reports potential test

A discovery finaled in Upton County, while Coke and Crockett areas drew sites for prospectors and stepouts in pools.

Holly Energy, Inc., of Dallas, has completed No. 1-A Amacker, an Upton County Devonian oil strike, 2⅜ miles northwest of Devonian production in the Amacker-Tippett, South field.

The 24-hour flowing potential gauge was for 53 barrels of 54.4-gravity oil and 47 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 13,207-1. It finaled through a 17-64-inch choke and perforations at 10,896-11,430 feet, following 4,500 gallons of acid and fracturing with 100,000 gallons and 132,000 pounds of sand.

Drilled to 11,734 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set on bottom, and it is plugged back to 11,680 feet. Top of the Devonian was picked at 10,855 feet, under ground elevation of 2,722 feet.

Wellsite is 1,000 feet from north and 4,250 feet from east lines of T. C. Jones survey 99. It is about 10 miles northwest of Rankin.

COKE SITES

ACR Exploration, Inc., operating from Abilene, filed permit application for a 7,000-foot wildcat to be drilled in Coke, about seven miles northwest of Robert Lee. It is No. 1 F. Price.

Drillsite is 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 311, block 1-A, H&TC survey, 1¼ mile north of the depleted Panther Gap (Pennsylvanian sand and reef) field.

WES-TEX Drilling Co., Abilene, No. 1 Harris Estate is slated as an oil test in the five-well oil sector of the Lygay field of Coke.

It is slated for a bottom depth of 6,200 feet, and spots 467 feet from most northerly northwest line and 467 feet from most northerly northeast line of Winfield Scott survey 11, 5½ miles south of Silver.

It also is ½ mile south and slightly west of the gas pay opener in the Lygay field.

CROCKETT ACTIVITY

Shell Oil Co. intends to drill No. 10-B Forristall a 6,750-foot test, in attempt to re-open Fusselman oil production in the Tippett, South field, and to dually complete as a lower Wolfcamp producer in the Tippett, West field.

It is 990 feet from southeast and 7,061 feet from northeast lines of section 41, block 31, H&TC survey, 10 miles southeast of McCamey. It is about 1,500 feet northeast of the depleted Fusselman pay opener, and surrounded by Wolfcamp production.

The Fusselnan pay opener was completed in June 1962. It was reclassified to open Fusselman gas pay in 1963.

Earnings increase

MGF Oil Corp. has announced record earnings and revenues for the nine-month period ended Sept. 30.

Consolidated net income advanced to $1,137,236 or 55 cents per share, compared to $601,712 or 26 cents per share for the comparable period in 1976.

The 89 per cent increase in earnings was due mainly to increased oil and gas sales and continued improvement in contract drilling operations, R. O. "Jack" Major, president, said.

Consolidated revenues for the nine-month period increase 18 percent to $11,156,350 from $9,492,801 in 1976.

Majors said consolidated working capital provided by operations increased 129 percent to $2,822,197 from $1,233,385 for the like period in 1976.

Geologists set meeting

The West Texas Geological Society will hold its regular noon luncheon meeting at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at the Midland Hilton.

James Zimmerman, geologist-in-charge of the Board for Lease, Texas University Lands, will present the program entitled "University Lands — What it is and how it Works."

Zimmerman is a member of WTGS, American Association of Petroleum Geologists, American Institute of Professional Geologists, Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists and Permian Basin Landmen's Association.

A graduate of Texas College of Mines and holding a B.S. degree in Geology from the University of Oklahoma and M.A. in Geology from The University of Texas, he has been in charge of University Lands since 1964.

He also is the author of a number of publications relating to mineral and oil and gas in the Permian Basin.

Permian Basin Empire sectors draw 96 locations

Last week operators staked 96 location sites in the Permian Basin Empire of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico. This is a decrease of seven from the 103 applications filed with the Texas Railroad Commission and the New Mexico Conservation Commission two weeks ago.

The count consisted of 21 wildcat locations and 75 development sites.

District 7-C, San Angelo, led in both wildcatting and development tests, with 11 wildcat applications and 25 field projects, while District 8, Midland, recorded three probe sites and 19 development tests. District 8-A, Lubbock showed four wildcats and 16 development sites.

Texas senators split on Social Security

WASHINGTON — Here's how Texas members of congress were recorded on major roll call votes November 3-8.

HOUSE

OPIC. Adopted, 285 for and 111 against, an amendment requiring that at least 50 per cent of financial backing provided by the Overseas Private Investment Corp. (OPIC) go to what the Small Business Administration defines as "small businesses." OPIC is a goverment corporation whose mission, in part, is to insure investments made overseas by U.S. companies. This amendment was attached to a bill (HR 9179) that already had recommended but not required strong backing of small businesses. The bill, later passed and sent to conference with the Senate, extends the life of OPIC until Sept. 30, 1981.

ROLL CALL REPORT

that 50 percent of OPIC financial backing be earmarked to samll businesses.

Reps. Jim Mattox (D-5), Olin Teague (D-6), Bill Archer (R-7), Jack Brooks (D-9), Jake Pickle (D-10), W. R. Poage (D-11), James Wright (D-12) Jack Hightower (D-13), John Young (D-14), Kika de la Garza (D-15), Omar Burleson (D-17), Barbara Jordan (D-18), George Mahon (D-19), Henry Gonzalez (D-20), Bob Gammage (D-22) and Abraham Kazen (D-23) voted "yea."

Reps. Charles Wilson (D-2) and Dale Milford (D-24) voted "nay."

Reps. Samuel Hall (D-1), James Collins (R-3), Ray Roberts (D-4), Bob Eckhardt (D-8), Richard White (D-16) and Robert Krueger (D-21) did not vote

ABORTION. Refused, 172 for and 193 against, to agree to Senate language allowing federal funding of abortions (primarily through Medicaid) when at least one of the folowing conditions is present: (1) The mother's life is endangered. (2) The mother would suffer long-term and severe physical damage. (3) The pregnancy resulted from rape or incest. With this vote the House refused to budge from its more restrictive abortion language, which allows federal funding only when the mother's life is endangered. The vote came during consideration of the conference report on the fiscal 1978 funding bill for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare. The House's refusal to go along with the Senate prepetuated the four-monthsold dispute between the chambers on abortion.

Rep. George Mahon, D-Texas, an advocate of agreeing with the Senate, said: "If we are intelligent enough to be spokesmen for the people of the U.S., we have got to deal in some degree of compromise in order to make our American system work."

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., an opponent of the compromise, said: "I will not sell out, for my own convenience or my political advantage or to be comfortable or to avoid being vilified further simply becuase the Senate wil not move."

Members voting "yea" favored accepting the less-restrictive Senate language on abortions.

Mattox, Eckhardt, Brooks, Pickle, Wright, Jordan, Mahon, Gonzalez and Milford voted "yea."

Archer, poage, Hightower, Young, de la Garza, Burleson and Kazen voted "nay."

Hall, Wilson, Collins, Roberts, Teague, White, Krugeger and Gammage did not vote.

SENATE

SOCIAL SECURITY. Passed, 42 for and 25 against, a bill (HR 9346) to financially strengthen Social Security, primarily by means of lagre increased over the next several years in employer and employee taxation rates and in the wage base upon which social Security taxes are levied. It was sent to conference with the House. A worker earning $10,000 annually would see his Social Security tax increased from its present $585 to $710 by 1986, while workers in higher wage brackets and employers would have their Social Security taxes increased in a greater rate.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., a supporter, said the bill would restore confidence on the part of Social Security's 33 million beneficiaries and the 104 million persons who pay into it.

Sen. Pete Comenici, R-N.M., an opponent, called the bill "probably the biggest tax increase to come before the Senate in the five years I have srved here," and added that he will vote not against Social Security but "against a bad bill, the enactment of which we may all come to regret."

Senators voting "yea" favored passage of the Social Security bill.

Sen. John Tower (R) voted "nay" and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen (D) did not vote.

SOCIAL SECURITY. Adopted, 59 for and 28 against, an amendment setting 70 years as the age at which a Social Security pensioner could be freed of an "earnings limitation" on outside income he or she takes in to bolster the Social Security check. This language was adopted in place of a more liberal proposal that the earnings limitation be lifted at 65 years. It was attached to HR 9346, the Social Security reform bill (see above vote). The bill was sent to conference with the House, where final versions of the earnings-limitation language and other provisions will be worked out.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, the sponsor, said the earnings limitation should be kept in force as long as is reasonably possible. To drop it at 65 years, he said, would mostly benefit high-income people such as doctors and lawyers and "transform, in a single stroke, a retirement program into an annuity."

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., an opponent, said the 65-year threshold would benefit "the teachers, the barbers, the small farmers" as well as upper income individuals. He said that to vote for Church's amendment would be to penalize "eight million senior citizens who have no right to work anymore."

Senators voting "nay" genreally favored lifting the limitation on outside income once a person turns 65 years old.

Bentsen voted "yea" and Tower voted "nay."

SOCIAL SECURITY. Favored, 42 for and 41 against, a proposal that, for the first time, would require employers to pay a greater share of the Social Security payroll tax than certain of their employees pay. That would be achieved by taxing employers on a larger wage base than employes are taxed on. This vote tabled an amendment to maintain the 50-50 split that has prevailed throughout the history of Social Security. It came during debate on HR 9346, the Social Security reform bill, later passed and sent to conference with the House. The House favors deeping the 50-50 arrangement.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., a supporter, said that the taxation formula endorsed by this vote would "take care of (Social Security's) short-term financing problem without placing too heavy a burden on the contributing employes."

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., an oppoent, said "it would be a serious mistake for the Congress to depart from the historic concept that the burden of financing Social Security benefits should be shared equally by the employer and the employe."

Senators voting "yea" endoresed the concept of shifting a majority of the taxation burden to employers.

Lockheed eyes Big Spring site

BIG SPRING — Lockheed Aircraft Service Co. of Ontario, Calif., has selected Big Spring as the sight for a possible aircraft maintenance plant, U.S. Sen. John Tower's office announced Wednesday.

Lockheed announced Wednesday that it would submit a bid on a recently proposed U.S. Air Force project for the operation of a depot level maintenance plant for the F-4C tactical fighter aircraft.

Tower, who is the ranking Republican member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said that Lockheed would submit its bid to the Air Force Dec. 6, and that a contract award to the winning company would probably be announced on or before April 1.

The Texas senator had met with Big Spring leaders Nov. 8 in Odessa to discuss the prospects for selection by Lockheed. Tower referred to the information given to the community, which anticipated that from 500 to 700 jobs could ultimately be created to support the maintenance and repair operation with a weekly payroll that could go as high as $250,000.

"Obviously Lockheed has recognized the inherent advantages of doing business in Texas. I know that the very positive, emergetic and cooperative spirit demonstrated by the citizens, business leaders and city officials of Big Spring had a lot to do with the company's decision," Tower said.

Huston improving

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor-director John Huston, who has had two operations this fall, has improved from fair to good condition.

But it's too early to tell when the 71-year-old double Oscar winner will go home, said a spokesman for Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Hollywood.

Huston, who won the Academy Awards in 1948 for writing and directing "The Treasure of Sierra Madre," underwent elective heart surgery on Sept. 25 for an aortic aneurism. He was operated on Oct. 28 to relieve abdominal blockage, a complication of the earlier surgery.

Expert says Jackson underrated president

By The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — We may have underestimated Andrew Jackson.

Historians have long credited our seventh president with a pivotal role in the nation's development. But a leading Jackson authority says a trove of Spanish historical treasure shows Old Hickory was more important than they thought.

Dr. Robert V. Remini of the University of Illinois, says Jackson, more than any other man, determined America's growth. The proof, he said in a telephone interview, is stacked ceiling-high in Spanish archives at Seville. Subsidized by a Nashville historical society, Remini traveled to Seville in 1975 to research his recently published work, "Andrew Jackson and the Course of American Empire, 1767-1821."

"It was almost like a revelation," he said. "Reading the documents there was seeing American history from a totally different point of view. I suddenly began to realize that it was Jackson more than any other man in American history who probably determined how this country took its shape. The expansion of this country was determined by Jackson more than any other man."

In Jackson's day, Spain was a North American colonial power. Spain and England stood on the frontier behind the shield of the Indians. Careful administrators, the Spanish kept and preserved detailed records. More than a few concerned "the Hero of New Orleans" and many found their way into the archives where they remain, largely unexamined.

"What you will have, if there is an altercation with Jackson as there was a number of times, are all of Jackson's letters to the Spanish as well as all of the letters written to him and all of the reports."

Among the papers Remini found was a letter from a Spanish official saying Jackson is a dangerous man, the empire's most formidable adversary.

A picture of a Tennessee frontiersman with transcontinental vision has emerged. "It was his vision really to want to wipe out the Spanish in Florida and to go in and take Texas and Mexico and finally to light on the shores of California and Oregon," Remini said. "He really felt that this country would not have the security it needed with the Spanish and the English on our borders. This was Jackson's vision, to prevent the country from being hemmed in."

Jackson, not Jefferson and his Louisiana Purchase, Remini said, is responsible for development of the South and West. "That," he said, "is his great contribution."

Lo Vaca profits, losses detailed

HOUSTON (AP) — Coastal States Gas Corp. says its subsidiary, Lo Vaca Gathering, made $6.1 million profit the first nine months of the year on sales of liquids stripped from gas but continues to lose money on natural gas sales.

The Wednesday report said the $6.1 million compares with $3.5 million in earnings the same period last year. The third period earnings totaled $2.2 million, up from $1.8 million.

Coastal States released its quarterly financial report Nov. 3. However, no reference to Lo Vaca was made until Wednesday's more detailed report to security holders.

The report said the losses on sales of natural gas from Lo Vaca's intrastate system were attributed to an inadequate interim rate set by the Texas Railroad Commission.

Woman writer has big objective

By CONNIE GRZELKA

NEW YORK (AP) — Instead of hankering for a Pulitzer Prize in literature, author Janet Dailey seeks a listing in the Guinness Book of Records for having written at least one book set in each of the 50 states.

Mrs. Dailey, who had hardly ever stepped out of her native Iowa until three-and-a-half years ago, has logged 110,000 miles nationwide and has produced 31 paperback romance novels set in 25 states since 1973.

She is the only American author of Harlequin books — all of the others are British — and she is also one of the publisher's most prolific writers. At the rate of 11 pages a day, the 33-year-old writer says she can complete a book in 16 days and currently has an output of 10 novels a year.

Mrs. Dailey says she dreamed of writing and traveling back in her early, Iowa elementary school days, but fate's fine thread didn't start spinning in that direction until 1969, when she began reading romances and "practically became an addict."

Two hundred romance tales later, she decided to write her own novel. In dribs and drabs, over a one-year period, she wrote — during lunch hours, coffee breaks and in spare minutes at home. She sent that first effort to Harlequin in 1973, and her "No Quarter Asked" was accepted for publication.

Her husband, Bill, not only encouraged her writing, but that very year decided to sell their Des Moines construction firm and home so that he and his wife could take to the nation's highways in search of new settings for her books.

Mrs. Dailey's own story reads somewhat like a Harlequin romance, she admitted while she and her husband were passing through New York City in the 31-foot recreational vehicle they now call home.

Right after high school, she went to work for Bill Dailey's construction firm as a secretary and married the boss twoand-a-half years later.

Dailey, who does all of the location research for his wife's books, says "she worked for me for 13 years, now I work for her." At the rate of 30,000 miles a year, he scours each new locale for regional flavor and detail by taking notes, going on sightseeing tours and reading travel brochures on weather, food and foliage particular to that area.

"If you took any of the heroes in my books," the author adds, "you'd find many of Bill's personality qualities — dominant, adventurous, quicktempered, a great sense of humor, a bit of a romantic and sentimental. He's not just a husband."

Mrs. Dailey, who rises at 4 a.m. every day to write, says she employs no formula in her work — only that the books have a happy ending. The sole guideline from the publisher, she continues, is that sex should not precede marriage, nor should it be explicit.

"When you allow the theater of the mind to take over, you find that you don't need all of that description.

"Ten years ago, you could've described the heroine as virginal, young and helpless. Today, you'd have to leave out the helpless," she maintains. "Women are more independent today, hence you can create more conflict between the dominant male and the independent woman."

When the Daileys pull into campsites across the country in their trailer-home, many campers recognize the author's name and word quickly spreads among her reading fans.

Although she has many titles to her credit, the latest being "Show Me," Mrs. Dailey remains a loyal admirer of other Harlequin writers. She beams when her husband mentions that her books have been translated into several languages and that three of her books are being considered for movie options.

While calling herself "a liberated woman" she goes on to say "my man is important in my life. When you're a liberated woman, you have the ability to choose — no matter how successful I am, without Bill, what is success?"

Top rating goes to Continental

LOS ANGELES — Continental Airlines has been rated as the top airline for domestic travel on a "weighted average," according to a survey by the Airline Passengers Association.

Total survey results show American Airlines as number one, but when considering total enplanements, which put American 12 million ahead of Continental's eight million, the weighted average favors Continental, by 30 percent versus 20 percent. Further, the statistics show that APA members flew on American 9,822 times in the past three years and 5,793 on Continental.

Continental was fifth on the survey among the categories of preferred airlines and in a second poll received the fewest votes of airlines to avoid. There were 16 airlines in the second poll.

Academy ceremony scheduled

The Permian Basin Law Enforcement Academy will hold graduation ceremonies for its 11th training session at 3:30 p.m. Friday in city council chambers of the Midland City Hall.

Instructors were provided from departments throughout the Permian Basin, and the school was funded by a criminal justice division grant through the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

Standards set by the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Standards and Education were followed throughout the training. Classes began Aug. 29.

The departments represented during the latest session and their officers include Midland Police Department, Ofelia V. Gonzales, Damon W. Shupp and Ernest R. Wakefield; Midland County Sheriff's Department, Phil B. Mathews; Odessa Police Department, Steven R. Ballew, Franklin M. Beam, John Albert Blanco, Robert W. Clanton, Clyde Everett Jones, Ronald G. Marquis and Paul Jerry McDonald. Big Spring Police Department, Billie Michael Eggleston, Maurice Ray Meek and William L. Teican, and Fort Stockton Police Department, Michael Steven McDole.

Lee, Midland cagers swing into action

By BOB DILLON

The 1977-78 high school basketball season has arrived.

Both the Midland Rebels and Midland Bulldogs are in action Friday night as the two Tall City outfits open on the road.

Lee travels to Lubbock to take on Coronado's Mustangs while Midland will hit the road for a two-game series in El Paso Friday and Saturday with the Riverside Rangers and El Paso High Tigers.

Both teams have four lettermen back from last year and are in the process of doing some rebuilding again this season.

Coach Paul Stueckler's Rebels have already had two pre-season scrimmages with Class AAA Odessa Ector and Snyder, while MHS Coach Don Humphrey's Pack had a scrimmage with Fort Stockton called off. "We haven't had any work with anybody but ourselves and the kids are mighty tired of that, so we are anxious to go to El Paso and see what we've got, " said Humphrey.

HUMPHREY IS in his second year as head man for the Purple Pack while Stueckler is the dean of District 5-4A coaches with 16 years under his belt at Lee.

"We have looked pretty good at times, " said Stueckler following Wednesday's scrimmage with Snyder in the Lee Gymnasium. Stueckler was pleased with his team's showing in an earlier scrimmage with Ector. "We didn't keep score in the Ector scrimmage and played five quarters against Snyder, " quipped Stueckler.

Humphrey will take 12 players to the Border City, leaving senior letterman and guard Brently Jackson at home. "Jackson has just completed a tiring football season and needs the rest."

BESIDES JACKSON, the other returning letter winners for MHS include Steve Brittain, a 6-1 senior guard; Walter Bryson, 5-10 junior guard and Kiffy Hickey, 6-3 senior center.

Rounding out the varsity roster for the Bulldogs are Robert Young, 5-9 senior; Tim Lucas, 6-1 senior; Charles Johnson, 6-3 junior; Brian Miller, 6-2 senior; Roy Lee Jefferson, 6-1 junior; Bill Fredrickson, 6-4 senior; Tracy Dotson, 6-2 senior; Rick Foster, 6-3 senior and Milton Sanders, a 6-4 junior.

Starters against Riverside Friday night will be Brittain, Johnson or Hickey; Jefferson, Fredrickson and Sanders.

Midland also plays Class AAA Pecos on the road Tuesday so most Bulldog fans won't get a look at the Pack until the Tall City Tourney in the Lee Gymnasium Nov. 25-26. At that time, Midland faces El Paso Parkland at 7:30 p.m.

STUECKLER WILL build around his four returning lettermen in Mike Richard, Joe Garner, Dave Stueckler and Mike Oestmann. Those four start with the fifth starter being Nate Goudeau, a 6-2 senior.

Richard is a 6-0 junior while Garner is a 6-0 senior. Oestmann is a 6-5 senior and Stueckler, a 6-2 senior.

Ernest Merritt, a 6-1 senior, has been a big surprise for Stueckler. "He (Merritt) is pushing real hard for a starting slot for us," said Stueckler.

The rest of the varsity roster includes Britt Stephenson, 5-7 senior; Mark Denny, 6-0 junior; Tyler Alcorn, 5-10 junior; Allen Forrest, 6-1 junior; Ken Van Hoozer, a 6-2 junior along with transfers Mitch Rad and Russell Eubanks, 6-4 senior.

Mike McGaha, a 6-4 junior who weighs 196 pounds, gives Lee some size, a spot that there is a big lack of on the backboards.

LEE FACES Coronado in Lubbock Friday and then comes back to the Lee Gym on Saturday night for a date with the Del Rio Rams.

The next action for the Rebs is the Tall City Tournament at which time they face Amarillo High in the 9 p.m. game on Nov. 25.

TED BATTLES

BATTLE SCENE

When someone asked Coach Tom Landry if there were any positive aspects of Monday's 24-17 defeat at the hands of the St. Louis Cardinals, he didn't mince any words in declaring, "There's never anything positive about a loss."

Landry apparently felt a defeat coming on. He had predicted that the Cowboys wouldn't go through without a loss earlier and it didn't make him any happier that he was right.

"We haven't played well in the last four games," he said. "I was hoping we could come up with a great effort tonight, but you don't get great efforts when you aren't playing well."

FOR THOSE who had visions of the Cowboys going undefeated to the Super Bowl championship, thus duplicating Miami's epic season of few years back, it was a disappointment.

For Landry, naturally, it had to be a dis-appointment in that Dallas didn't exploit its numerous opportunities and put the game and the NFC East championship away with it in the third quarter. With a four-game lead the Cowboys wouldn't have had another worry until the playoffs.

Yet, we can't wholly agree with Landry that defeats cannot have beneficial aspects. Although, he's right if he believes that all too often they are portents of more disaster.

LET'S SEE, the last time Dallas lost was to Houston in an exhibition game at the Astrodome. If they respond with the same fervor this time, it might just be enough to take them all the way. After the Houston embarrassment, the Cowboys went on a nine-game binge starting with a 31-0 humiliation of Pittsburgh.

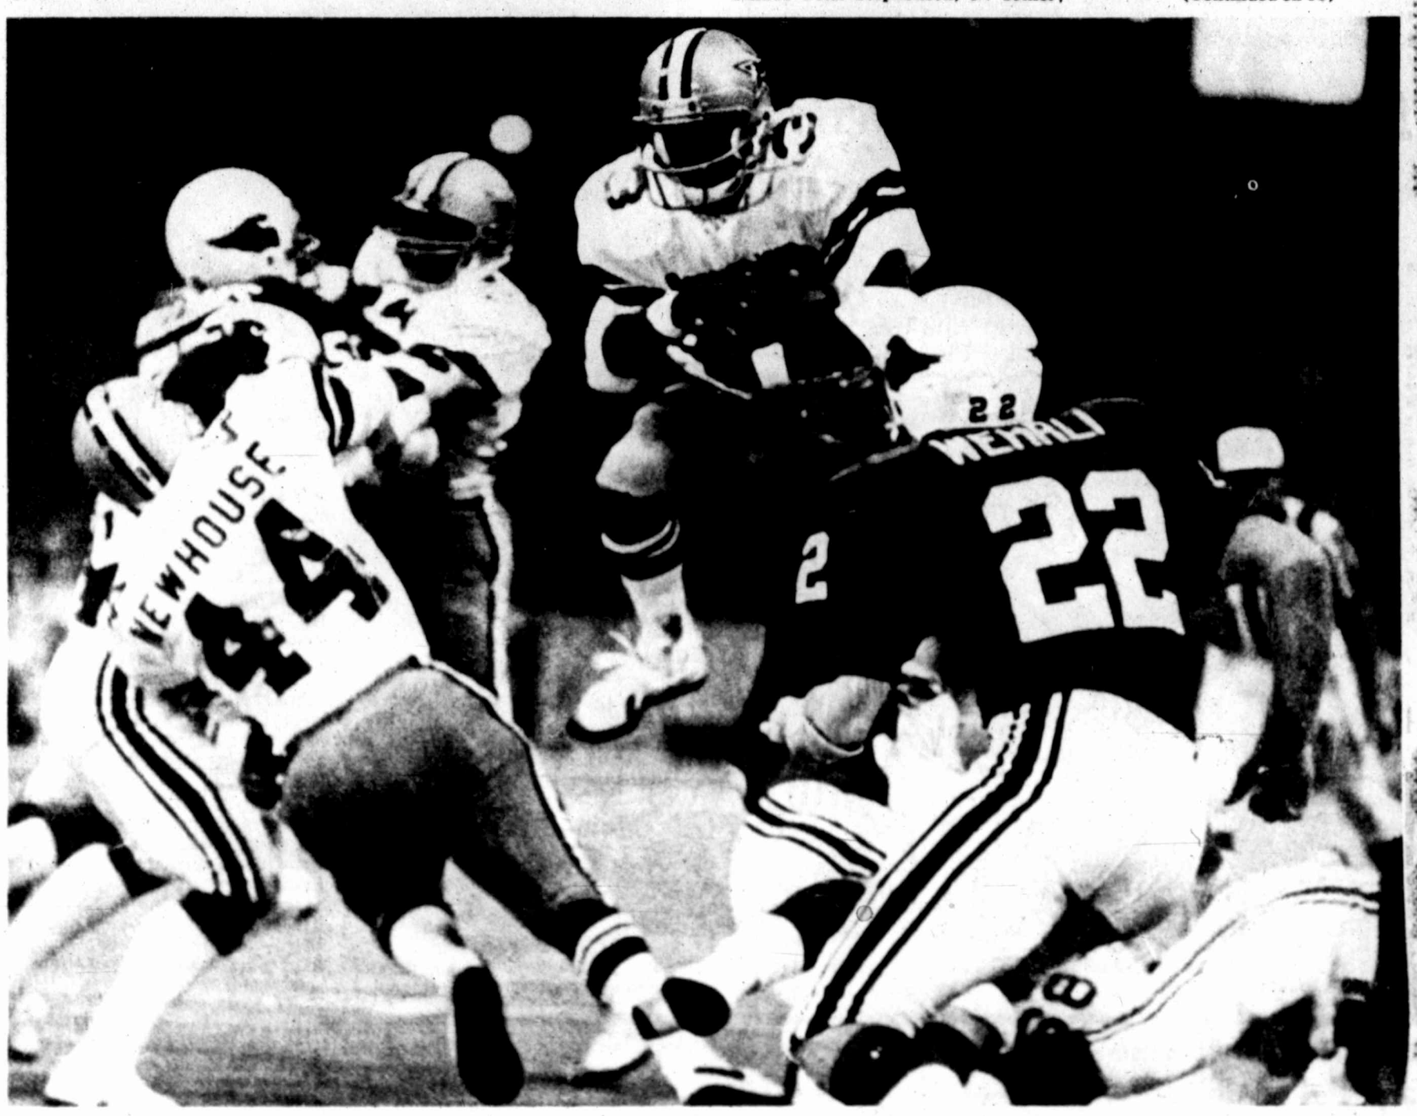

Then, too, the St. Louis loss keeps alive the NFL East race, which is good. One has only to hark back to last summer to see what can happen when a team ends all semblance of a contest too soon.

Los Angeles wrapped up the National League West for all intents and purposes in late April or early May. They coasted the rest of the way, no heat, no pressure. The Yankees , on the other hand, battled the Red Sox and Orioles tooth and nail to the wire and then struggled five games to eliminate Kansas City.

Of course, it doesn't always work out that way, i.e., Cincinnati-New York in the 1976 series, but maybe it was the pressure competition that gave the underdog Yankees the edge.

It has always been the belief here that a tight race is an intangible asset. In fact, another

A week's delay by bowls might produce real No. 1

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

For years, while head coach at Notre Dame, Ara Parseghian advocated a formula for deciding an official national champion in college football but saw his efforts end in frustration and stagnation.

The bowls were too deeply entrenched. They were too jealous of their vast civic and commercial enterprises to permit any infringement on their domain.

With no definitive plan for the bowl lineups, the year-end galas often proved useless in determining an undisputed No. 1 team. Thus the job was left to the polls, which frequently only compounded the controversy over superiority.

NOW THE college season is heading toward its climax with a veritable stampede of contenders storming toward the wire and a jam-up almost certain to fire regional passions and dissent.

Parseghian, now in private business but retaining a feel for the game as ace ABC commentator, has a suggestion for avoiding such chaos.

"Why not extend the bowl deadline another week, to Nov. 26?" he said from his office in South Bend, Ind. "It wouldn't be as good as having a championship playoff but at least it would add a little respectability to the rankings."

Notre Dame, No. 6 in The Associated Press poll and a prime bowl prospect, happens to be of the same mind.

THE FIGHTING Irish apparently will have the choice of playing No. 1 Texas in the Cotton Bowl or No. 2 Alabama in the Sugar Bowl with a victory abetting a bid for the national crown.

The trouble is, under the National Collegiate Athletic Association guidelines, the various bowls are allowed to start dippi g into the pot of goodiesafter Saturday's contests, leaving both top-ranked Texas and No. 2 Alabama with tough rivals to play Nov. 26. Texas plays Texas A&M and Alabama faces formidable Auburn.

"Look at the circumstances that can arise," Parseghian said. "When Notre Dame ended its boycott of the bowls eight years ago it did so with the understanding that it would accept a post-season bid only if it could enhance its position nationally.

"Suppose Notre Dame chooses to play Texas in Dallas. Should Texas lose to A&M — a possibility — the Longhorns would drop to fifth or sixth place in the polls, rendering the game of little national significance.

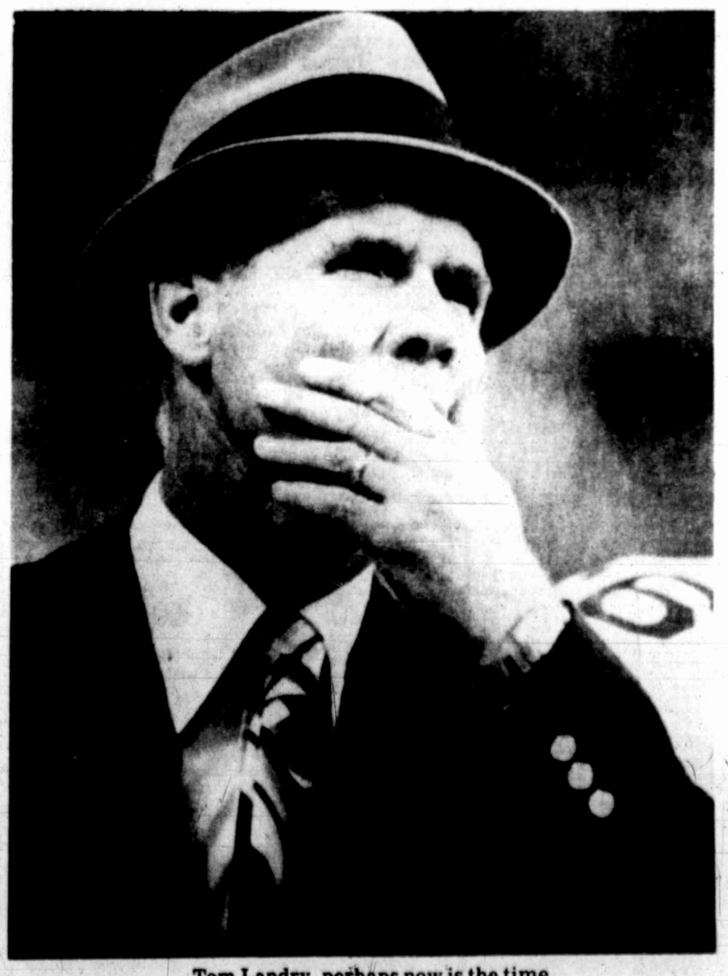

"ON THE other hand, suppose Notre Dame chooses to take on Alabama in the Sugar Bowl. Texas then probably would play the loser of the Ohio State-Michigan game. If Texas should lose, then there might well be four teams with 9-1 records, all with a claim to the national championship.

"This might be avoided with a week's delay of the picking date."

Here's how the bowl picture stacks up at the moment: Rose — Ohio State 9-1 or Michigan 9-1 vs. UCLA 7-3 or Washington 7-4; Cotton — Texas 9-0 vs. Notre Dame (9-1); Sugar — Alabama 9-1 vs. OSU-Michigan loser; Orange — Oklahoma 9-1 or Nebraska 8-2 vs. Penn State 9-1 or Pittsburgh 8-1-1.

"Conceivably," commented

Tom Landry, perhaps now is the time.

Chaparrals try Cisco again

ODESSA — After three season-opening victories, the Midland College Chaparrals suffered a 73-69 overtime loss at Cisco Tuesday night, but Coach Jerry Stone's young team will have an opportunity to make amends in a hurry.

The Chaps draw Cisco in the first round of the Odessa College Invitational Basketball Tournament at 4 p.m. today in the OC gym.

IT WILL be one of four first-round games of the annual jousting that will continue through Saturday with four games each day.

In other opening round games today, South Plains faces Ranger at 2 p.m. to complete the afternoon session. In the night session, Odessa plays St. Phillips of San Antonio at 9 p.m. and New Mexico Junior College plays Howard College, a matching of two Western Junior College Conference foes at 7 p.m.

The OC-St. Phillips and NMJC-Howard winners play at 9 p.m. and the losers at 4 p.m. Friday.

The Midland-Cisco and South Plains-Ranger winners play at 7 p.m. Friday and the losers at 2 p.m.

In Tuesday's game with Cisco, the Chaps led 33-28 at half and it was tied at 65 at the end of regulation play.

Carl Walker's 26 points provided the big impetus for Cisco while 6-7 Ricky Hudgins led the Chaps with 18 points.

BILLY BANKS hit four free throws in overtime and Michael Watson had a basket and two free throws.

MC had reeled off wins against McMurry JV, Laredo JC and Wayland JV to start the season.

DALLAS (AP)-Tom Landry made Tony Dorsett's homecoming complete Wednesday.

Landry, the coach of the once-beaten Dallas Cowboys, decided to make a fulltime employe out of the rookie running back, naming him to the starting lineup for Sunday's game against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"That's great...it's what I've been dreaming about," said Dorsett, who won the Heisman Trophy as collegiate football's all-time leading ground-gainer at the University of Pittsburgh.

"Tony's been running well and we feel we need him in there...it's nothing against Preston Pearson," said Landry. "He'll still share time with Tony."

Dorsett leads the Cowboys in touchdowns with seven and has averaged 4.7 yards per carry in his 522 yards rushing although he has played just half the time.

He also has caught 16 passes for 153 yards in nine Cowboy games.

Landry said the fact Dorsett played at Pittsburgh had no bearing on the starting announcement.

"Preston lives in Pittsburgh and it's an injustice to him if you want to look at it that way," said Landry. "I just felt it was time to do it."

Landry said he still plans to play the 13-year veteran Pearson whose forte is getting in an open field for Roger Staubach's passes. Pearson has caught 28 passes coming out of the backfield.

The Cowboys were riding an unbeaten string of eight games before St. Louis knocked them off 24-17 Monday night. The only offensive spark the Cowboys showed was when Dorsett was in the game.

"Tony got off to a slow start in training camp because of an injury and it took him time to learn our offense," said Landry.

"I knew it would come sooner or later," said Dorsett. "I was injured in training camp and fell behind. Also, the Dallas offense was a little more complexthan I thought but I've got it down now."

Dorsett also said he had to adjust to catching the ball.

"We didn't throw the ball much at college and that was something of an adjustment but I can catch it," said Dorsett.

Jays withdraw from market for Minnesota's Lyman Bostock

TORONTO (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays of baseball's American League formally ended their first free-agent shopping spree Wednesday night by withdrawing from the bidding for Lyman Bostock of the Minnesota Twins.

Personnel Director Pat Gillick of the Jays, alarmed at the price tag for the hard-hitting outfielder, finally dropped out of the bidding with a telephone call to Bostock's agent.

It's Andrews-Perryton and BB isn't Brigette Bardot

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
R-T Sports Writer

CANYON—The Andrews-Perryton AAA bi-district playoff clash here at Kimbrough Stadium at 7:30 p.m. Friday could be the biggest thing since Brigette Bardot.

Then again, the battle of double-Bs is covered in a cloud of mystery as game time approaches, and it could turn out to be a B-rated movie instead.

Of course, the double-Bs of mention are Andrews Booger Brooks and Perryton's Brad Beck, two of the most highly recruited backs in the state this year. Both own moves that would put BB to shame, and although neither would win a beauty contest, both can lull defensive units into quite slumber with shifty hips.

THE MYSTERY, however, concerns Andrews' quarterback Brooks, who suffered an ankle injury on the first play of the game against Monahans last week. The ankle is not sound this week, and The Booger has not been practicing with the team according to Andrews coach Tommy Watkins.

"At this time, I just don't know if Booger will be able to play or not," Watkins said Wednesday. "The ankle is better than it was over the weekend, but I don't see how he can possibly be at full speed by Friday. He has not been working out with the team."

"We may have to go with junior quarterback Jay McWilliams Friday. Jay has got a lot of confidence in himself, and he can do the job if Booger is unable to go. We have a lot of pride in our defense. The defense has played well all year, and we're just happy to be where we are. We will be ready to play regardless of what happens."

BROOKS, A 185-pound senior, has rushed for 969 yards this year, including a 273-yard performance against Fort Stockton two weeks ago in the battle for the District 2-AAA crown. Brooks has also completed 25 of 61 passes for 489 yards, has scored 14 touchdowns and passed for another nine. His heroics this year led Andrews to a 9-0-1 record and put the Mustangs in the playoffs for the first time since 1971 when Andrews lost to Brownwood in the AAA regional battle. Many say that Andrews will have to have Brooks to win.

Undefeated and untied Perryton is completely healthy, and the Rangers' veer attack features the running of halfback Beck, who has gained 1,590 yards rushing this year. And while colleges drool over Beck, the Rangers have an all-senior outfit on the field, the same team that lost to Gainesville, 28-22, a year ago in the AAA semifinals.

PERRYTON COACH Don Beck is not taking the game lightly even in view of the fact that Booger may not be ready for the game Friday.

"Andrews does everything well," Beck assessed this week. "Their defensive backs are impressive. They have one of the best backs in the state in Brooks, and their other backs are strong and capable. In fact, we just don't find any major weakness in Andrews. They will be the best team we have faced this year by far.

"You mark my words," Coach Beck added. "Brooks will play. He got hurt on the first play of the Monahans game, but he played an entire half against them and insured the victory. His ankle bothered him some in that game, but he'll be there with bells on against us. Just mark that down."

Even with the double-Bs aside, the two squads have talent to spare, and that's why the two teams have been ranked in the Top 10 all year.

ANDREWS HALFBACK Kenny Hearne has rushed for 782 yards this year, and his 6-yard per carry average is the same as Brooks. Halfback Joe Dan Barnes has 418 yards rushing and a 5.2-yard per carry average. Twins Eldon and Weldon Jones have been top receivers this season for Andrews along with Joel Gilliland. All have caught passes in excess of 140 yards this year for a total of nine touchdowns.

In addition to Beck's 1,590 yards rushing this season, Perryton's Brent Fletcher has 727 yards rushing and quarterback Tracy Gibson has 520. Gibson has also passed for 798 yards and nine touchdowns while completing 40 of 70 aerials. End Kelly Slaughter will lead all receivers on the field with 14 catches for 317 yards and four touchdowns. Gibson's other target is 170-pound end Joe Sooter, who cleared 6-9 in the high jump last spring.

BECK WILL be the biggest back on the field at 198 pounds, and he owns speed, which is the reason for his awesome rushing statistics.

Andrews appears to have a slight weight advantage in the offensive and defensive lines, and that could help the Mustangs.

Tackle Steve Kolb, and defensive and offensive starter, leads the beef parade at 225 pounds while guard Don Fulton tips the scales at 216 and Mark Munsell, a tackle, weighs 214. Munsell and Fulton are offensive starters.

Perryton's entire starting squad are seniors while Andrews only has two juniors on offense and defense. Tackle Kolb, guard John Hotchkin are the only starting juniors in the game unless Andrews is forced to go with McWilliams at quarterback.

Boogity meet Biggity

Brooks hurting, but Andrews has Hearne

TERRY WILLIAMSON

CANYON—Taking center stage this week prior to the Andrews-Perryton bi-district playoff clash here Friday night, has been the talk of the ankle injury to Andrews quarterback Booger Brooks and the awesome rushing statistics of Perryton's Brad Beck (1,590 yards this season).

Staying in the background—again—is Andrews halfback Kenny Hearne. He is used to it by now since The Booger has been the word in Andrews football this season, and for good reason. Still, Hearne is the over looked package of dynamite, and his story is worth telling. He is not a Booger Brooks, but a Kenny Hearne is one who should not be ignored.

Hearne, the 170-pound senior, is a success story without comparison. Everything he has done this season has been unexpected because he was not even supposed to be a starter this year.

IN FACT, Hearne was not even supposed to be a halfback. He was supposed to be a backup split receiver. It was almost by accident that he ever got a starting role.

And since everything he has done has been of the unexpected variety, there has been a lot of unexpected happenings in the Andrews offense.

Hearne was the second leading rusher in District 2-AAA this year with 782 yards for a six-yard per carry average. Only Brooks' 969 yards this year was more than Hearne in 2-AAA. In the championship game against Fort Stockton, which put Andrews in the playoffs, Hearne ripped off 132 yards, and was still over looked since Brooks rushed for 273 yards that same night.

And Hearne was almost over looked before the season started, and that would have been the biggest over sight of the year.

HEARNE DID not play football his sophomore year, and he was a split receiver his junior season. Andrews coach Tommy Watkins thinks Hearne has been a big part of Andrews' success this season.

"There is no doubt that we have been a better offensive team with Kenny," Watkins said this week. "It's amazing what he has done for us. You might say we just lucked out at getting him at a halfback post.

"When we were in the two-a-day workouts, we were trying everybody out at the halfback slot. The position was wide open and I guess Kenny was the last one we tried there. A lot of other people played well at the position, but we needed them in other roles. When we tried Kenny, he really opened our eyes. He's a strong runner."

There is good reason that Hearne was almost over looked according to Watkins.

"Kenny grew a lot between his junior and senior year, and he gained considerable speed," Watkins noted. "We had him as a split reciever when he came out his junior year because he didn't weigh as much then. I'm just glad we tried everyone out at that halfback spot."

Kenny may be the over looked hero on the Andrews squad this season, but with Brooks hobbled with the ankle injury, Hearne could be the man of the hour for the Mustangs.

If he is, he won't be over looked any longer.

Bowls seek prime TV spots for top ratings

By HOWARD SMITH

NEW YORK (AP) — Once upon a time football games were scheduled by the schools involved to suit the fans who would show up and watch. And if television wanted to turn up at the appointed time and aim some cameras at the field, that was fine.

The result was that fans in Dallas, Miami, New Orleans and Pasadena attended games at a normal hour and got home in time for dinner. And fans everywhere else sat close enough to their TV sets to get radiation burns and flipped the dial frantically to keep up with three games going at once.

BUT WITH the emergence of TV as a major bankroller of college football, the picture rhanged. Reasoning with some logic that three games going at once results in a smaller viewing audience for each one, TV and the bowl committees began spreading them out.

The Orange Bowl moved to New Year's night with satisfactory results. And the Sugar Bowl moved to New Year's Eve with disastrous results. Seems that people were reluctant to spend their New Year's Eve watching Alabama quarterbacks run the triple option. Fancy that.

So last year the Sugar Bowl people petitioned the NCAA's extra events committee for a change in starting time. They wanted to come back to a 1 p.m. start, same time the Cotton Bowl was to begin. They got 11:30 a.m. instead.

THE SUGAR Bowl had what was supposed to be the most attactive pairing last year, topranked Pitt with Heisman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett against Southeast Conference champ Georgia. But when the ratings came in the Sugar Bowl had been whomped by the Rose Parade, of all things, and was dead last among the four major games. The Rose Parade, which is televised by both NBC and CBS, beat Dorsett & Co. by a 2-to-1 margin.

The Sugar Bowl came back at the extra events committee this year and won. The Sugar Bowl will start at 1 p.m. The Cotton Bowl is not amused.

"We went through the channels and I suppose our persuasions were taken into consideration ... and then shelved," says a Cotton Bowl source. "People now have two choices. Our audience could be cut in half, that's the way my mathematics works."

IT HAS been suggested that the long arm of TV, ABC in particular, is involved in all this. ABC signed a whopping $118 million TV deal with the NCAA last summer. Is it possible the NCAA would be inclined to help out ABC in this matter as an unofficial part of the TV deal?

The basic problem is that there are four bowl games on the same day and they all want different starting times. None of them want to play in the morning where ratings are lowest and the mighty Rose Parade holds sway, or late at night when half the country is asleep and the other half is numb from an overdose of football. This year's solution is temporary and may be changed next year.

The major bowl games will be played Monday, Jan. 2, this year-instead of Sunday, Jan. 1. How come? "Because," says an NCAA spokesman, "the NFL has Sunday."

Michigan, Ohio State divide revenue cake

By DAN EWALD
The Grand Rapids Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — In two more days, the annual Boguys-against-bad guys, good-against-evil good-againstevil showdown will be staged before more than 104,000 persons and a national TV audience.

It will be the University of Michigan against Ohio State at Michigan Stadium Saturday for the Rose Bowl ticket.

Millions of words have been written depicting the strengths and weaknesses of both sides. A hundred times that many words are being used by fans in pre-game anticipation. In the end, only the 60 minutes on the field will count.

IT IS truly amazing, however, what those 60 minutes of football will produce in revenue for both schools.

"This will be the biggest money game ever at Michigan," Athletic Director Don Canham said proudly.

He should be proud. He personally worked tirelessly to make it that. And the numbers are staggering.

Conservatively speaking, from ticket receipts, TV rights, parking, concession and program fees, Michigan will make about $515,000 for banging helmets with the Buckeyes. The merchants of Ann Arbor will make even more.

Ohio State's cut totals approximately $322,000.

"WE'LL PUT the bands on the field for this one (normally they sit in the stands)," Canham said. "We're putting some extra seats around the field and we'll use even the bad seats in the stands." Those are the ones directly behind the team benches.

Bo and Woody's game plans can be dissected after Saturday's extravaganza. But the number breakdown goes like this:

—$244,000 for each school through a split of 61,000 tickets at $8 each.

—$44,000 for Michigan and $4,000 for Ohio State for 8,000 faculty tickets at $6 each. Michigan gets $5.50 for each and Ohio States gets 50 cents.

—$112,000 for Michigan and $16,000 for Ohio State for 32,000 student tickets at $4 each. Michigan gets $3.50 for each and Ohio State gets 50 cents.

—$58,000 each for TV rights. Each of the other Big Ten schools also gets the same cut for the telecast. Michigan gets an extra $15,000 because the game is at Ann Arbor.

—$20,000 in concessions — all for Michigan.

—$12,000 in programs — all for Michigan.

—$10,000 in parking — all for Michigan.

THOSE ARE Canhams's "conservative" projections. They are based on a 104,000 crowd and low concession figures.

Why do so many alumni, fans, friends and students pack into Michigan Stadium for the game when they could watch it on TV?

Midland Jaycees host Odessa in football

Midland's Jaycees will take a 5-0 record into Saturday's nine-man flag football game against the Odessa Jaycees at 2 p.m. at the Trinity School Field.

The Jaycees have a game tentatively scheduled Dec. 3 with the Stanton Jaycees while the annual Toy Bowl between the Midland Jaycees and the Midland Police Department will follow on one of the following two Saturdays prior to Christmas.

The Jaycees hold a 17-14 win over Fort Stockton Jaycees, a 26-0 win over Midland College Kappa Kappa; a 35-0 rout of the Monahans Jaycees and a 37-14 conquest of the Midland College Faculty.

Abilene's Fields, Stirman top 5-4A air, ground stats

Abilene High's Reggie Fields and Glen Stirman took home individual statistical honors for 1977 with Fields winning the rushing title with 705 yards while Stirman completed 51 of 112 passes for 937 yards.

Fields beat out Abilene Cooper's Ken Orr, the sophomore who gained 596 yards for a 5.3 per carry average. Midland Lee's Jeff McCowan was third with 549 yards.

Stirman's passing statistics included a league high eight TDs and a league high seven interceptions. Odessa's Neal Gray was second with 31 of 93 for 602 yards, including five TD strikes and six interceptions.

Cal Adams, Odessa, won the receiving title with 12 for 311 and 25.9 yards per catch. Five receptions went for touchdowns.

ORR WON the individual scoring title with 66 points, beating our Fields by 10.

However, when all of the individual spoils had been passed around, Odessa Permian, blanked in rushing, passing, receiving laurels, won the District 5-4A title with a 7-0 record and they did it with a defense that limited foes to 172 yards offensively a game.

Offensively, the Panthers, who meet Denton in Abilene Saturday in the bi-district game, weren't bad either, finishing second to Abilene with 285 yards per game. Abilene's winning rushing-passing totals came to 300 yards a game.

ODESSA — Odessa will host a Texas Tennis Association Designated Tournament this weekend.

Play will take place at University Gardens Racquet Club, Permian and Odessa high schools and Odessa College, with competition in four different age divisions.

Check-in time is 7:30 to 9 a.m. Friday at the University Gardens Racquet Club. The tournanent will begin at 10 a.m. and run through Sunday.

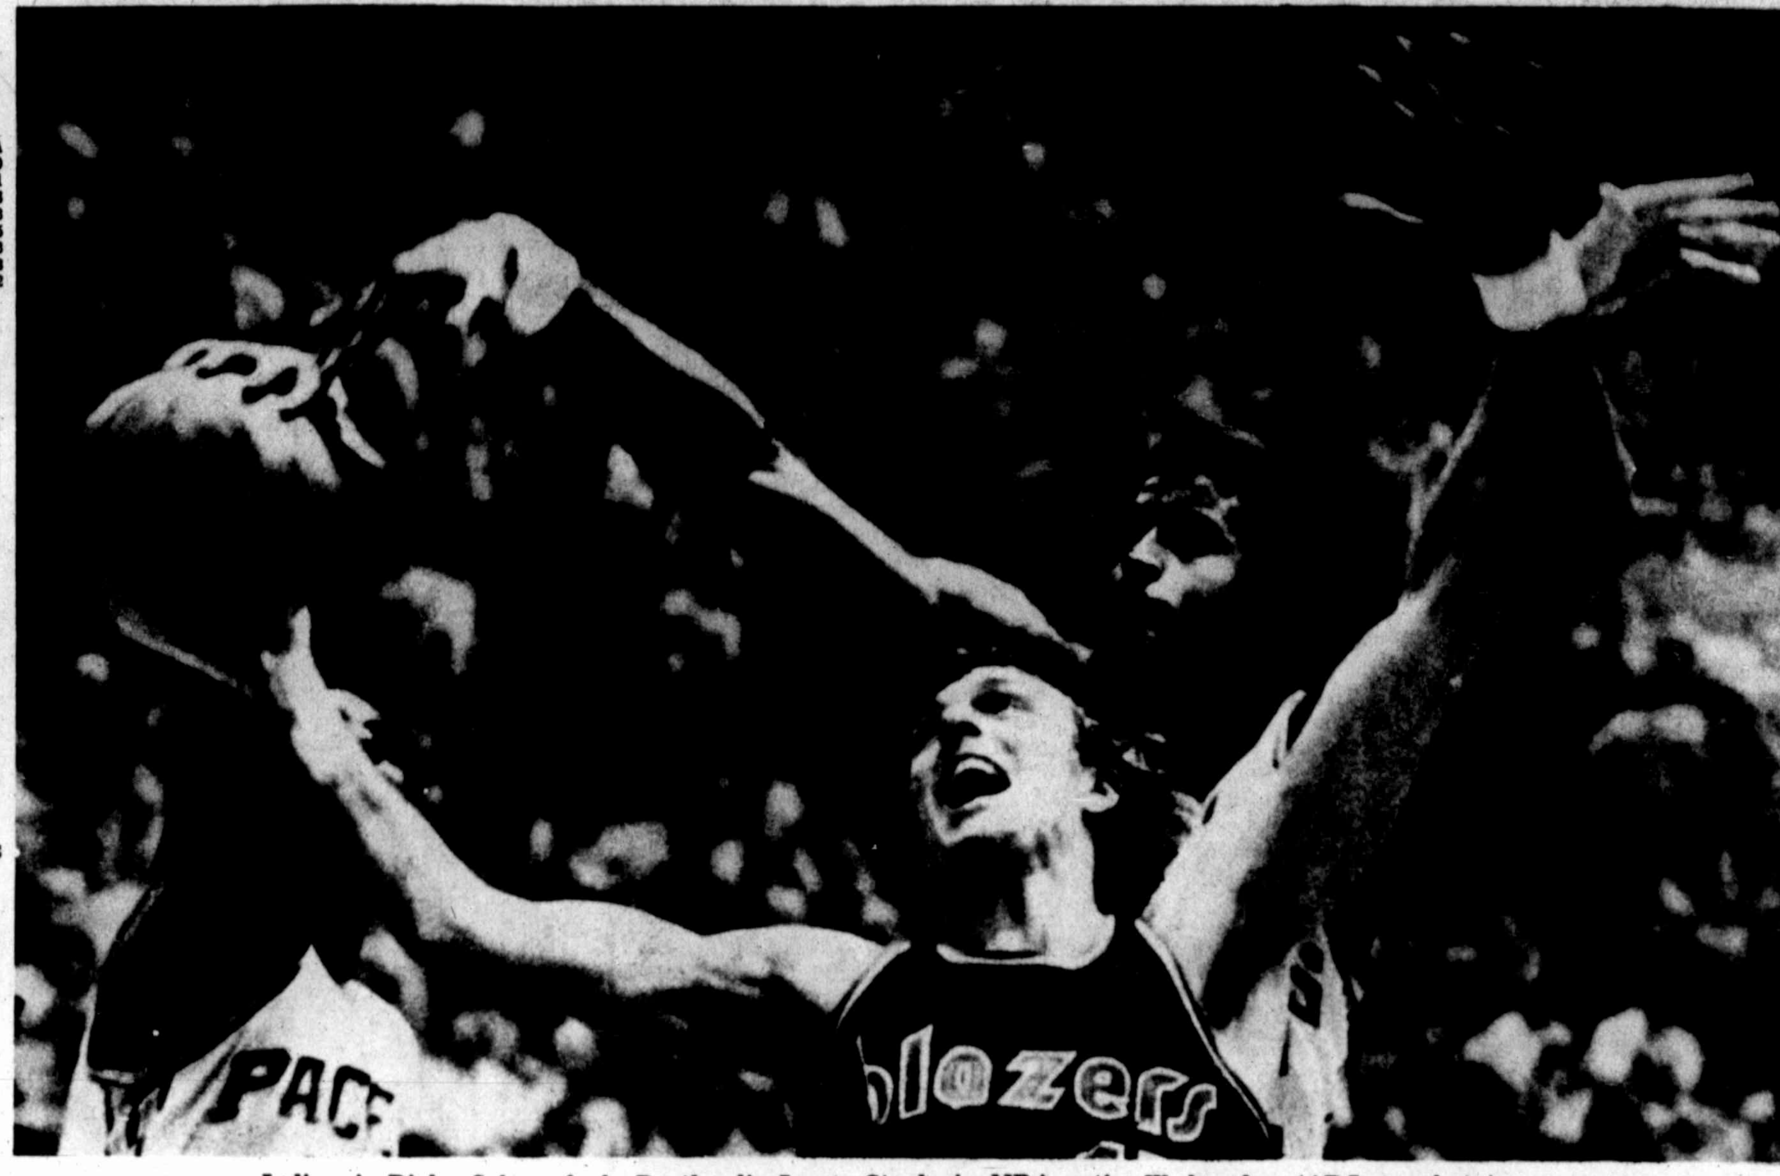

Girls 16 and 18 singles and doubles will be played at University Gardens, boys 16 and 18 will use the Permian courts, Girls 12 and 14 singles and doubles will utilize Odessa High, and Boys 12 and 14 singles and doubles will play at Odessa College.

Midland girls launch season

The Midland High girls basketball team will open its season tonight against Pecos in the MHS gym.

A junior varsity contest will precede the main event at 6:15 p.m., with the Bulldog and Eagle varsity outfits clashing at 8 p.m.

Pacers upset Blazers, 111-104

By The Associated Press

The Indiana Pacers unexpectedly won a basketball game and unexpectedly lost a player Wednesday night.

While Indiana, the last-place team in the Midwest Division of the National Basketball Association, was upsetting Portland's defending league champions, 111-104, fiery guard John Williamson became upset and walked out on the Pacers.

Williamson, eighth in the NBA in scoring this season with a 23.8 average, disappeared during halftime after collecting only four points in 17 minutes in the first two periods.

"I have no comment on John Williamson," a stunned Indiana Coach Bob Leonard said after the game. "I'm going to keep it strictly a team matter and won't have any public comment about the situation now. After we practice Thursday, I'll have something to say."

Celtics 131, Hawks 105

The Celtics, after a shaky 1-8start this season, won their third straight game and handed the slumping Hawks, 8-5, their fourth loss in a row.

76ers 101, Sonics 96

Julius Erving's 28 points helped the surging 76ers win their sixth game in seven outings since Billy Cunningham replaced Gene Shue as coach. The victory gave the 76ers an overall record of 8-5 and moved them into a first-place tie with the New York Knicks in the Atlantic Division.

Braves 101, Rockets 97

Billy Knight's 38 points and Randy Smith's 29 enabled Buffalo to overcome a brilliant performance by Houston's Moses Malone, who had a career-high 36 points and 29 rebounds.

"He (Malone) can be better than he was tonight," said Rockets Coach Tom Nissalke. "It's hard to believe, isn't it, especially when you realize he should be a senior in college."

Bucks 116, Nets 106

Dave Meyers' 29 points and 12 rebounds keyed Milwaukee's victory over the Nets, who were led by Kevin Porter's 26 points and 14 assists. New Jersey Coach Kevin Loughery, after being ejected with 41 seconds remaining following his second.

Probation-bound Kentucky's 9-1 record surprises even Curci

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Before the 1977 football season began, Kentucky Coach Fran Curci fielded the inevitable barrage of questions about his team's ineligibility for a bowl bid and its affect on morale.

Pointing to a grueling schedule, which included just five home games, Curci said Kentucky would be fortunate to survive the season, much less prove attractive to a bowl committee.

Ten games later, however, the Wildcats find themselves dressed up with a 9-1 record and no place to go, thanks to a one-year probation imposed by the National Collegiate Athletic Association for recruiting violations.

The nation's seventh-ranked team will spend the Christmas and New Year's holidays watching lesser teams command attention on television.

"I'll be watching them (the bowl games)," said junior safety Rick Hayden. "You always watch them anyway, but we'll sit there and think, 'that could have been us.'"

The season has been a huge success for Kentucky, which ended a 25-year post-season drought by throttling North Carolina 21-0 in last year's Peach Bowl.

Kentucky dropped its first road game this year to Baylor, 21-6, but went on to surprise even Curci by beating Penn State, LSU, Georgia, Vanderbilt and Florida away from home.

BOWLING BEAT

Shelton, Weeks share pin high

BY RANDY ISENBERG

Howard Shelton blasted a big 261 game and 653 series to pace Midland bowlers last week, however, Bob Miller provided the excitement when he converted the 7-10 split while bowling in the Chicano League.

Reggie Weeks also rolled a 261 while bowling in the Industrial League to tie Shelton for high game of the week.

Also bowling 600s were Weeks, 639; Junior Tipton 600; Dick Johnson, 615; Ray Sutton, 607; Scott Skidmore 606; Randy Isenberg 623; Joe Jeffers, 604; Jim Ledbetter, 603; Louis Lee, 603; Richard Moore, 616.

GLADYS MEREDITH 205, 204, and 579, Nita Duncan 245-571; and Petsy Wallin 207-201—774 led the way for women during the week.

Shelton's 653 was his second consecutive 600 while in the Petroleum National League, and his 261 was the second consecutive week that he bowled a game better than 250. Last week he rolled a 258. Richard Moore, bowling in the Accountants Mixed, bowled his second consecutive 600.

Bob Miller in converting the 7-10 the granddaddy split of them all, was like 99.99 per cent of all the other bowlers who have ever converted the split. He did not see it happen.

A teammate, who was waiting to bowl following Bob, plus the thunderous ovation told him what had happened. As most bowlers do, Senor Miller rolled his ball at the seven pin and then turned around realizing that "there was no chance" of making the King of Splits. Then surprise.

Holman increases pro bowling lead to 107

GLENDALE HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP) — Marshall Holman increased his lead to 107 pins as two-thirds of the field completed third-round play Wednesday in the $100,000 World Open Professional Bowlers Association Tournament at Northern Bowl.

The final third of the 192-man field was scheduled to complete third-round play Wednesday night.

Holman, of Medford, Ore., this year's fourth-leading money winner on the PBA tour with earnings of more than $53,000, finished with a 24-game pinfall of 5,463, a 227 average, while Pete Couture of Windsor Locks, Conn., was second with a 5,356 pinfall.

Seeking his fifth career title and second this year, Holman, 22, had third-round games of 213, 189, 193, 247, 208, 254, 258 and 226 for an eight-game total of 1,788 and a 223 average.

Couture, who never has won a PBA tournament, averaged 223 for his eight games, including a score of 289, high game for the tournament.

Veteran Dick Ritger of River Falls, Wis., an 18-time PBA champion, was third with a 5,237 pinfall. Dave Frame of Baldwin Park, Celif., was fourth with 5,206 and Jimmy Certain of Huntsville, Ala., was fifth with 5,160.

Takio Sakai of Tokyo, Japan, one of 15 entries from eight foreign countries, stood in 17th place with a 4,970 pinfall.

When third-round play is completed, the field will be cut to the top 48 scorers for the final eight games of qualifying Thursday. The top 24 then will roll 24 games of match play, with the top five advancing to Saturday's nationally televised championship round.

Jimmy Connors complains to officials about playing court surface's speed after loss to Dick Stockton 6-5, 6-5. (AP Laserphoto)

Stockton beats Connors again

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — By his own admission, Dick Stockton always seems to play well against Jimmy Connors.

"I have nothing to lose when I go against players of his caliber," said Stockton Wednesday night after edging Connors 6-5, 6-5 in a round-robin match of the $320,000 WCT Challenge Cup tournament at Caesars Place.

"I'm more relaxed out there against Jimmy than I'd be against, say, the No. 100 player in the world."

Stockton, of Carrolton, Texas, reeled off six straight points in the second set tiebreaker to cap a dramatic comeback after Connors, of Belleville, Ill., won three of the first four points. It was the third time this year that Stockton has upset Connors.

"It's not over yet," said Connors. "If I win tomorrow night I just might sneak into the semifinals."

In other matches Wednesday night, Vitas Gerulaitis of Kings Point, N.Y., evened his record at 1-1 with a 5-6, 6-4, 6-4 victory over Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., who is also 11, and Ilie Nastase of Romania raised his record to 2-0 by topping Australia's Rod Laver 6-5, 6-4. Laver dropped to 0-2.

Three matches are scheduled tonight; Stockton, 1-0, faces Australian John Alexander, 0-2, who was idle Wednesday, Connors meets Ken Rosewall of Australia, 1-0, who was also idle Wednesday and Nastase battles Tanner.

The semifinals are scheduled Saturday with the finals slated Sunday.

Connors complained bitterly to WCT officials after his match, saying the Supreme Court surface was much too fast. At one point, Connors threatened to leave the tournament.

The fast surface has favored the hard-servers during the Challenge Cup, and neither Connors nor Stockton was able to get a service break.

"I felt I was really lucky," said Gerulaitis. "I didn't feel I hit the ball well, I haven't played good tennis here yet. We have played so many tournaments this year that when you come to Las Vegas you just want to play well.'

Fast surface fails to slow down Dick Stockton, who scored upset win over Jimmy Connors at Las Vegas. (AP Laserphoto).

Dallas loss, although not recommended, might not be that bad. It might ward off any tendency toward complacency. And if we recall correctly, the last time Dallas went to the Super Bowl it was as a wild card, a team that had taken its lumps frequently, but grew in stature along the way.

Monday this was a Dallas team that obviously wasn't ready to play under the gun. When the two minute warning arrived and Dallas needed seven points to tie, the Cowboys looked like strangers to the situation and played like it.

EXCEPT FOR the Minnesota opener, won in overtime, the Cowboys simply haven't been challenged going into the final two minutes, until Monday.

On the other hand, the Cardinals were in the familiar pressure-cooker, desperately needing a win to stay alive and doing it after falling behind 14-3 in the first half. Even a Cowboys' fan must grudgingly concede the Cardinals responded beautifully to the challenge.

Dallas, it's true, squandered a chance to put the game away after Randy Hughes' interception in the third period, but St.Louis maybe should have been leading 3-0 at the time.

DALLAS' FIRST touchdown came after a 21yard drive off a fumble recovery and the 60-yard push a few minutes later bore fruit when Roger Staubach made an unscheduled dash for 22 yards when all of his receivers were recovered to set up a one-yard TD by Tony Dorsett.

In fact, that was Dallas' offense for the night and Dorsett contributed 21 yards of the 21-yard drive and 21 more on the 60-yard drive. No wonder Landry wants him in there.

Fairbanks finds pro 'edge' is mostly mental

By DICK BRAUDE

BOSTON (AP) — Chuck Fairbanks sat rigidly in his highbacked office chair and, unwittingly, spoke an obituary for his New England Patriots long before they buried themselves.

"The hardest adjustment in pro football from college is keeping a mental edge for such a long season," Fairbanks said before the Patriots had thrashed Baltimore, then virtually ruined their playoff chances with losses to Buffalo and Miami.

"The difference among pro teams really is very small. In college (at Oklahoma) we were clearly better than the other teams. Sometimes I had to tone players down.

"HERE, it's like two college seasons back-to-back," he added. "We have to stay up for a long, long time."

The Patriots, 5-4, have lacked that subtle mental edge this season.

Fairbanks gauges his players' attitudes at practices during the week, and several times this season he has said he feared the worst heading into National Football League Sundays.

Early season walkouts by star blockers John Hannah and Leon Gray not only subtracted talent from the team for the first three games — including two losses — but damaged team morale.

ASKED ABOUT the locker room impact of that unpleasant episode,

Fairbanks only shakes his head. Then he launches into a discourse on the "group pride" of a football team that creates a closely knit organization of players.

It doesn't take Sherlock Holmes' deductive powers to calculate that early season losses to the New York Jets and Cleveland were attributable in part to the absence of two well-liked players.

In the later defeats, to the Bills and Dolphins, the Patriots did not play so badly. But two teams that were supposed to be inferior to New England played much better.

Buffalo and Miami controlled the games. Those teams went into each contest with a furious desire to beat an opponent considered superior.

LAST SEASON, it was the Patriots with the mental edge as they stormed into the NFL playoffs for the first time.

Crippling injuries to halfback Andy Johnson and tight end Russ Francis have hurt the New England offense. But the loss of two players didn't cause the sporadic but significant mistakes that cost games.

Key penalties, missed blocks, pass interceptions and an occasional poorly called play are part of every season. But for the Patriots, they have come at the worst possible times.

"To win the Super Bowl," says Fairbanks, "everything has to fall right."

Twins' Mauch longs for Angels

ANAHEIM (AP) — Gene Mauch has one year remaining on his three-year contract as manager of the Minnesota Twins, and while he admits he's legally obligated, he leaves little doubt that he wants out.

The California Angels are interested in obtaining the services of Mauch to manage them in 1978. His fate rests in the hands of Twins' owner Calvin Griffith.

"My position is no different than it was when the season ended," said Mauch Wednesday from his home in nearby Rancho Mirage. "I told Calvin that while I was legally bound to the Twins for another season, I felt I had fulfilled by moral obligation.

"The premise on which I went to Minnesota was that here was a club ready to win, that everything would be done to insure that objective," added Mauch. "The club has now been decimated by the loss of good players and in my mind the premise is no longer operable."

"I have spent 14 of my 18 managerial years trying to build clubs and I am tired of it," said Mauch. "I want to win. It cannot truthfully be said that the Twins have a chance to win."

Midland, Lee cagers to launch seasons Friday on road

Lee has 47 players out for the junior varsity team under the watchful eye of Coach Greg Wright while over at MHS Coach Eddie Shirley is working with 16 candidates.

If there is a plus for Humphrey at Midland, it's the fact that his athletes have a much better attitude this year and are much more serious about winning. "We handle the ball real well and have good quickness, but a lack of height," added Humphrey.

Stueckler has a good-shooting team, but one that will have trouble rebounding with the taller teams.

Both coaches agree that Abilene High, Abilene Cooper and Odessa Permian will be the teams to beat on in District 5-4A play.

Seminoles eye Tangerine

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida State has already answered "yes." Now all the Tangerine Bowl has to do is ask.

The school's athletic committee voted unanimously Wednesday to accept an invitation, if offered, to play No. 16 Texas Tech, 7-2, in the Tangerine Bowl on Dec. 23. Florida State is 8-1 and ranked 13th.

Meanwhile, there were reports that the 4-3-1 Florida Gators were still being considered for a post-season bowl.

Invitations cannot be extended until after 6 p.m. Saturday, but Florida State Athletic Director John Bridgers said he expects the Seminoles to accept a Tangerine Bowl bid shortly after 6 p.m. Saturday.

The Seminoles play at San Diego State Saturday at 10:30 p.m., EST, and close their regular season at Florida on Dec. 3.

Bridgers said the athletic committee voted to send the team to the Tangerine Bowl after Coach Bobby Bowden said FSU players wanted to play in the Orlando game.

"Coach Bowden felt it would help recruiting," Bridgers said. "He likes Texas Tech as an opponent. He feels like it would be a real challenge to the team."

Another reason for accepting a Tangerine Bowl bid is that the game is played two days before Christmas, so the players will be able to spend the holidays at home, Bridgers said.

The Tangerine Bowl pays participating teams less than most other bowls, but Bridgers said other factors cited by Bowden outweighed money.

"My guess is we'd make between $150,000 and $175,000," he said.

Florida State officials said they turned to the Tangerine Bowl after Jacksonville's Gator Bowl rejected the Seminoles.

That rejection was widely denounced Wednesday in Tallahassee.

"For us to be snubbed by a local Florida bowl just galls me," said George Langford, president of the Seminole Boosters.

George Olsen, general manager and executive vice president of the Gator Bowl, said FSU was bypassed because officials of the game figured other teams would draw better.

Gator Bowl officials reportedly feared that Florida State will lose its final game to Florida, lessening FSU's attraction. Florida has beaten Florida State nine years in a row.

"All of us were disappointed," Bridgers said. "But they make the decision. I just think they miscalculated."

SHERYL FITZGERALD
Newsday

Although there is no known cure, diabetes need not prevent its victims from living successful and satisfying lives.

An estimated 10 million Americans suffer from that disease and its chronic complications, according to a booklet called "How To Cope With Diabetes," just published by the National Institute of Arthritis, Metabolism and Digestive Diseases.

And, according to the National Commission on Diabetes, the incidence is increasing so rapidly that diabetes is now the fifth leading cause of death by disease in the United States, even without considering the deaths caused by its complications. About 35,000 people die annually of diabetes itself, the commission said, while several times that number die from stroke, kidney failure, vascular disease or heart attacks to which diabetes was a contributor.

In addition, the commission said, juvenile diabetes is the leading cause of blindness and shortened life expectancy in children.

Basically, diabetes — or sugar diabetes or diabetes mellitus — is a condition that renders the body incapable of converting certain foods into the heat and energy needed for proper functioning. The National Institute booklet explains that sugars and starches are processed in normal digestion into a kind of sugar called glucose, which fuels the body.

But the glucose can be either used at once or stored for later use as needed. A hormone called insulin, secreted by the pancreas, is one of the substances used by the body to regulate that fuel supply — to tell it when more fuel is needed. When the right amount of insulin is present at the right time, the proper amount of glucose is burned.

In a diabetic, however, there is an impairment of insulin activity. Either the body doesn't produce enough of the hormone, or the insulin that is available is kept from proper functioning by other substances in the body.

Because of that, the glucose is not used properly; it accumulates in the blood and tissues and overflows into the urine. The cause of that loss of insulin-producing capacity isn't fully known, but there seems to be a strong indication that diabetes is inherited; sometimes, though, severe virus infections or environmental factors can cause it to crop up where no family history of the condition appears to have existed.

The early symptoms of diabetes are caused by increased sugar in the blood and urine. Because the kidneys excrete extra amounts of water along with excess sugar, the untreated diabetic will urinate more often and be thirsty more frequently.

Weight loss occurs because the sugar in the blood isn't being converted to fuel, thereby causing calories to be lost no matter how much the diabetic eats. Other symptoms that might signal diabetes and should be brought to a doctor's attention are:

-General weakness, drowsiness and fatigue.

-Visual disturbances such as blurring of vision.

-Slow healing of cuts and bruises.

-Skin disorders such as boils, infections and intense Inching — especially in the genital area.

But many diabetics, particularly those with milder adult onset diabetes, may have none of those symptoms. Or the symptoms may be so vague that they are not recognized as signals of diabetes.

The only way to recognize such "hidden diabetes," the booklet warns, is to have regular checkups that include the glucose tolerance test, in which the level of glucose n the blood is measured before and after the drinking a glucose solution.

With proper medical attention, however, the prospect of diabetes need not be a fearful one. The treatment may vary according to the individual course of the disease, but the main concerns to be looked at in treatment are diet, exercise and the use of artificial sources of insulin when needed.

Until recently, the diet prescribed for the diabetic was very rigid; but today, most diabetics are told they can eat pretty much the same foods as the rst of the family — meat, fish, eggs, dairy and cereal products, vegetables, fruit within reason and fats — cutting down only on sugar and sugar-rich foods like pastry and soft drinks. Overweight diabetics are usually urged to lose weight, however, since the weight loss will help relieve the abnormalities in sugar metabolism.

Exercise is believed important to the diabetic. Normal amounts of activity increase the body's ability to use the food ingested, and diabetics are urged to discuss with their physicians exactly what forms of exercise will balance well with the diet and medication programs that have been prescribed.

Some diabetics are able to control their conditions through such dietary and exercise methods alone, while other must have insulin injections.

The insulin is prepared from an extract of the pancreas of cattle and hogs. It must be used by all juvenile diabetics and many adults in order to maintain normal carbohydrate metabolism. Since 1957, there have been available some oral preparations for treating adult-onset diabetes, but a recent study indicates there is doubt about the safety of such drugs and about their usefulness as a way of controlling diabetes and its complications.

In fact, it is the consensus of studies conducted at 12 U.S. medical centers that oral antidiabetic drugs increase the risk of coronary heart disease more than either insulin and diet therapy, or diet alone.

Despite satisfactory control of blood sugar levels, however, complications — and to find out more about diets, summer camps, counseling and clinics — write to the American Diabetes Association Inc., 600 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10020; or to the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, 23 E. 26th St., New York, N.Y. 10010

DEAR ABBY

Mother gets 'surprise'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm still in shock from a telephone call I just received from a young woman informing me that I had an 18-month-old granddaughter! I was speechless. My only child is a 25-year-old college graduate. He's not married, not living at home, and he works 600 miles away. I see him only three times a year.

I phoned him and told him about the disturbing call I had just received. He calmly said, "It's possible." Then he told me he doesn't see the girl anymore, he's never seen the baby, and he has no plans to!

The baby's mother says she is 25 and still loves my son. But they decided a marriage wouldn't work out.

Abby, can I be a grandmother if my son accepts no responsibility for this child? The young mother invited me to visit her and see the baby.

Will I complicate matters if I go?—STILL IN SHOCK

DEAR STILL: First, get together with your son and find out why he is treating this matter so casually. From what he says, he may not even be the baby's father. Once his legal and moral obligations in this situation have been established, you can decide what role you want to assume in it—if any.

DEAR ABBY: You were too quick to agree with RIPPED OFF, who complained because a co-worker had bought a purse for a fellow worker as a gift from the office gang, and claimed it cost $21. RIPPED OFF later learned that the purse had been marked $16.98!

Consider these figures, Abby:

$16.98. . .purse
$1.02. . .6 percent sales tax
$2.00. . .fancy gift wrap
$1.00. . .gift card
Total. . .$21.00

This doesn't include the time spent shopping or the cost of transportation. And the poor woman probably skipped her lunch to boot.

This should serve as a warning to others who shop for a group: Get receipts for everything!—NO RIP OFF

DEAR NO: You're right. I shot from the hip on that one. Rip off my epaulets and demote me to buck private.

DEAR ABBY: My heart aches today for my 14-year-old daughter who went to a school dance last evening and wasn't asked to dance one dance.

When her older brother was her age, and popular with the crowd, I always encouraged him to ask the not-so-popular girls to dance, impressing upon him how much it could mean to a girl who might not otherwise receive one invitation to dance during the entire evening.

I was proud that he followed my advice. I wish other mothers would tell their sons the same thing. Will you help spread the word, Abby? It could mean so much to the girls.—ACHING MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You bet I will. An ounce of thoughtfulness can ease a ton of heartache.

BEFORE NOW

Ms. Cloud lost 19 1/4 pounds and 28 1/4 inches.

I recommend the program at Pat Walker's Figure Perfection Int'l to anyone who has an appearance problem. Anyone can lose weight--the secret is learning self-discipline. While in the program at Pat Walker's, one not only loses weight and important inches but learns the secret. I have had a weight problem all my life. At the age of 6, I weighed 62 pounds and continued to be heavy through junior high. My first year in college brought a tremendous weight gain and each year added a little more.

Various diets worked but I have always put the weight back on, never quite losing all I wanted to lose. A few years ago I found a diet I could live with successfully. I lost some weight before I started Pat Walker's but the inches would not budge.

Since participating in the program I have lost a total of 28¼ inches and regained muscle tone lost from neglect and weight abuse. I now eat with pleasure--always within reason. I feel physically better, my self-image is greatly improved and the benefits derived from Pat Walker's far outweigh imagined inconvenience.

The unique thing about the program is the rapid loss of inches. The weight loss is beneficial but the inch loss is more easily reflected.

The program at Pat Walker's is not deemed a miracle. Self-discipline in one's eating habits and programming oneself to come in regularly will change one's mind's eye view from a fat person to an attractive woman.

Women business owners face problems getting federal aid

By PENNY GIRARD
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — About seven months ago, Marilyn Andrulis, president of a small consulting firm specializing in technical research in such areas as anti-submarine warfare and cancer, applied to the Small Business Administration for help in securing federal contracts.

Her request that she be classified under section 8(a) of the Small Business Act which helps channel federal contracts to "socially and economically disadvantaged firms" was tentatively approved this spring. Negotiations were underway at her firm. Andrulis Research Corp., of Bethesda, Md., for contracts totalling about $645,000 when the SBA changed its mind about her qualifications, and dropped her from the program last month.

On Thursday, Ms. Andrulis filed a lawsuit for damages of $2.5 million against the Small Business Administration and eight of its top officials for its action against her and sought to be reinstated in the program.

Only a few women have ever been accepted for this minority business-oriented program. In her lawsuit Ms. Andrulis charged that the agency essentially was discriminating against her, a white woman with a PhD.

She also contended that the consulting firm, which she owns with her husband, qualified as disadvantaged because she is working in a complex technical field dominated by men.

Ms. Andrulis' case is one of the more vivid examples of the kinds of situations that women business owners have encountered as they begin to learn more about federal funds available to small businesses and seek to obtain some.

The problems of women business owners have surfaced increasingly in the past months in hearings in Congress and in executive departments. They will be a key element in the work of a new presidential Task Force on Women Business Owners which holds its first meeting Nov. 17.

Charlotte Taylor, executive director of the task force, described federal procurement procedures as very complex. "If you don't understand it, you don't win," she said in an interview. "Women who aren't plugged into the system, or who haven't done it before, operate on a handicap."

According to Commerce Secretary Juanita M. Kreps, in 1975 — the latest year of which statistics are available — women-owned businesses, together with other minority firms, received less than one per cent of the more than $130 billion spent by federal, state and local governments for procurement of goods and services.

"A significant number of women have evidenced a strong desire to become entrepreneurs and to take their chances in the free enterprise system," Mrs. Kreps said recently. "But their chances are not good."

According to recent Commerce Department reports, in 1972 women owned 400,000 firms, or approximately 4.6 per cent of all American businesses. But the department said these firms generated only three-tenths of 1 percent of the revenue for all firms.

These businessess tended to be solely owned by the woman and highly concentrated in retail and non professional service trades, the department said. A typical female entrepreneur, had fewer than five employees and grossed less than $51,000. This compared with gross receipts of more than $750,000 for the average firm.

To date, women have been traditionally geared to work as secretaries, bookkeepers, elementary school teachers, waitnesses, cashiers, registered nurses or household help.

According to one estimate, women make up 80 per cent of these fields, except for retailing where they comprise only 69 per cent.

Since statistics on women business owners are scant, if not non existent or outdated, there is no way to gauge the extent to which women have entered other areas traditionally dominated by men.

Ms. Taylor of the president's task force said a current survey of women-owned businesses "would probably show a much different complexion than 10 years ago."

Locating women's businesses, gathering information about them, as well as educating women about government contract procedures and available funds are considered to be key factors in encouraging such firms' participation in government programs.

"I think our big problem is lack of standards and data," said Ms. Taylor of the president's task force. Her comments were echoed by Michele Babbitt, an aide to Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., who said statistics involving women-owned businesses were "almost impossible to ascertain."

But there are some signs that the mounting attention now being paid to women as business owners, and as potential government contractors, is beginning to lead to action.

Woman's freedom found at home

By DIANE CLARK
Copley News Service

Vira Judge was 32 when her first husband was killed when a boiler in their laundry business exploded.

With three small children to support, ages 8, 6 and 10 months, she felt she had no choice but to go to work running the business. So she did ... and has regretted it ever since.

"The baby would just scream and cling to me when I went to work," she recalled of her life 25 years ago.

She had to leave her children with a housekeeper and soon she was getting reports that her kids were playing in the street.

Then, when she got home after an exhausting 10-hour day, she hardly had enough energy left to do anything at home.

The laundry burned the following year and had to be rebuilt.

"It was just so hectic ... my children were almost orphaned," said the woman who is bitter over having had to leave home to work when her family needed her.

She found out later, after she married Jim Judge and began doing income tax work in her home, that she would have been better off if she hadn't taken over the laundry.

"I realized that by going to work I sacrificed my Social Security widow's benefits.

"And I also found out by reading financial reports that women can earn half as much working out of their home but still have as much money to spend as they would with a full-time outside job," Judge said.

Working away from home means hiring a baby sitter, using more expensive convenience foods, buying work outfits, getting hair done, burning up gas to get to work, going to lunches with fellow employees, buying them gifts and so on.

That's why now this woman, a staunch Mormon, has embarked with what she describes as "almost a missionary zeal" on a crusade to make women aware that with a little imagination they can work out of their homes to bring in the extra money they need. About three years ago she started doing research on what money-making projects could be done in the home, or with the home as a base.

She read magazines and newspapers, looked through classified ads and got names from index cards advertising personal services in community grocery stores. She interviewed many people and found a variety of job ideas which she has just published in a book called "Home Work" put out by Deseret Book Co.

She told of one Utah woman who picked up $1,500 last summer in the form of earthworms, which she sold to people for fishing.

"I have a friend who takes in retarded children for foster care. She is divorced with three children of her own. By taking in three retarded children she can stay at home and gets a sense of self-fulfillment by working with the retarded youngsters." (She also gets about twice as much noney from the state by choosing retarded children over normal foster children.)

Teaching is a good form of earning money. "You can teach anything you can do that other people are interested in," Judge said. "Tutor kids who are having trouble in school, teach cooking, sewing, ceramics, crafts, physical fitness, just anything."

SAT scores report given DAR chapter

The Col. Theunis Dey Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, met in the home of Mrs. Donald N. Ewan, 3102 Stanolind St.

A report on SAT scores in the United States was given by Mrs. Jim Ormond, national defense chairman. The veterans' report was given by Mrs. Richard Henderson. She requested that Christmas gifts for patients in the Big Spring Veterans Hospital be brought to her home by Dec. 12. The gifts should be wrapped and labeled, she said.

Guests were Mrs. Hazel Turnbaugh of Tulsa, Okla., Mrs. Ernest Angelo Jr. and Mrs. Richard Rastetter of Winnetka, Ill.

Mrs. Ed Watts, chapter member, gave a history of needlepointing and displayed pieces of the art.

Mrs. George VanHusen, Mrs. John P. Butler and Mrs. Walter Hubbard attended a DAR division workshop in Brownwood, it was reported. Mrs. VanHusen is Texas DAR curator. Mrs. Hubbard reported on the meeting.

Mrs. Solon Crain presented a vignette, a description of the austere existence of American colonists.

Council conducts events

The Midland Council of Camp Fire Girls conducted a song and folk dancing workshop in Jane Long Elementary School, and there was an 8-hour Multimedia First Aid Course offered to Camp Fire Girl leaders Tuesday and Wednesday in the Red Cross Chapter House.

Mrs. Debbie Vardeman, elementary education graduate of Texas Tech University, conducted the workshop. She is a former Camp Fire Girl in Dallas and served on resident and day camp staffs with the Lubbock council.

The First Aid Course provided participants with basic First Aid knowledge. The Red Cross provided materials for the course, which was conducted by Mrs. Maurice Coldewey, Camp Fire Girls' secretary.

Her boots made for breaking bank

By JANE HAAS

When they pass out the "Mother of the Year" award, I'm pushing my great and good friend Prudence Pennypacker to the front of the line.

She'll be easy to recognize. She'll be the one in the hot pink espadrilles. That's all she can find in the back of her closet.

"My daughter's feet are killing me," Pru said yesterday over coffee and Danish. "They're eating us out of house and home."

Pru says it wasn't so bad when her daughter, Penney, ran around like a monk in sandals. "All she did was get dirty toenails."

Then Penney discovered tennis shoes.

"She doesn't even play pingpong but she's got to have tennis shoes that cost $45 a pair."

In between, Penney wore Earth shoes.

"Eight years of ballet lessons walked out the door. She even got corns on her heels."

But Pru insists nothing had prepared her for boots.

"Harry and I are trying to decide whether to heat the house this winter or buy boots," says Pru.

"Bad enough she's going to get hot feet, but tell me why she has to have real leather boots designed to climb the snows of Kilimanjaro and ward off snake attack?"

She says her husband, Harry, doesn't understand it.

"You know Harry. He's been stuffing newspaper into his old white bucks for years.

"Harry says as long as the Sunday classifieds hold out, he doesn't hardly feel the concrete."

Pru figures there's something wrong with the younger generation. She says they shove $12.50 jeans into $60 boots and top it off with a used "Star Wars" T-shirt.

"I think they have a foot fetish left over from years of riding around in car pools."

It is, I suggested, all part of today's unmaterialistic society. They ain't got no body — but, oh, do they have sole.

Open class not effective with low-income children

LAWRENCE FEINBERG (C
Washington Post

NEW YORK — A major government-sponsored research survey of how best to teach reading has concluded that structured methods that emphasize letters and sounds are substantially more effective with low-income children than informal open-classroom techniques that try to teach whole words and meaning.

The difference in favor of the code emphasis or phonics approach is "strikingly clear" in the first three grades of school, said Lauren Resnick, professor of psychology at the University of Pittsburgh, who directed the two-year study for the National Institute of Education.

However, after third grade when standardized reading tests increasingly measure understanding of complex material, children from poor backgrounds generally score low, she said, no matter what method is used to teach them.

On the other hand, children with stronger backgrounds usually read well, she said, regardless of how they are taught.

The survey of reading is based on research reports by more than 40 scholars throughout the country. Resnick presented its findings at the fall meeting of the National Academy of Education, a prestigious group of scholars.

"We really do know enough now to say that direct instruction works to teach the initial levels of reading," Resnick declared. "As a matter of routine practice we must include it in the early grades."

Resnick said the structured methods teach reading as a code with letters of the alphebet representing different sounds that must be combined according to definite rules.

Although the informal reading methods have no set program, she said they generally try to teach reading by starting with a child's own language and experience. Teachers often write out short stories that children themselves dictate or make use of simple basal readers with a vocabulary based on how familiar words are, rather than choosing words that show patterns of different letters and sounds.

In an interview recently, Resnick said the structured phonics approach probably works best becaus eof the nature of the English language itself.

"The sounds of the alphabet are systematic," she said. "Some children may induce the rules themselves, but not everybody can do that. They have to be helped. They have to be taught."

In addition, Resnick said, most curriculums for teaching individual sounds and letters are carefully planned out, unlike informal methods that rely heavily on the inventiveness of individual teachers and the diligence of their students. As a result, the structured methods make sure that children actually spend a certain amount of time on reading words while in informal classrooms the children may just be talking.

"The time on task itself may be the crucial thing," Resnick said. "In the structured programs, teachers control the time and tell kids what to do. When things are more loosly organized the kids may not actually spend much time on reading."

In a discussion among researchers at the meeting, Stephen K. Bailey of Harvard, the new president of the Education Academy suggested that the scores on reading tests may drop after the third grade because of the difference between word recognition, which phonics methods can teach, and the process of understanding a written passage, for which no reliable teaching method has been developed.

"There's ot just one process called reading," Bailey remarked.

Resnick agreed but added, "We might as well do what we know how to do, and then get busy on the more complicated job of teaching comprehension."

Children of well-educated parents are likely to pick up reading themselves without systematic instruction, Resnick said, because they usually have many opportunities to read around the house and also because their parents are likely to answer their questions about letters and sounds no matter what is happening in school.

Resnick said the "biggest evidence" on the effectiveness of structured reading methods comes from a nationwide study of Follow Through, a government-sponsored program in elementary schools for low-income children who attended Head Start nurseries. The program provided funds to try out about 15 different classroom programs, each supervised by experts who devised them.

Resnick said the most structured programs who the best reading scores with the highest being achieved by the Distar, developed by researchers at the University of Oregon.

Another major study favoring direct teaching methods, she said, was a survey of several hundred teachers in California schools, headed by David C. Berliner.

She said many other smaller studies and research analyses included in the survey also confirm the advantage of the structured teaching methods. She said almost everyone of them has been attacked because of shortcomings in research methods, but she said there is a "recurrent pattern" in the results that is persuasive.

CLUB NEWS ROUNDUP

MIDLAND SOCIETY, PARLIAMENTARIANS

The Midland Society of Parliamentarians met in the home of Mrs. George Farlow, 5002 Andrews Highway, for a program and business session.

Mrs. Fran Birdwell gave the program, "Motions to Bring a Question Again Before the Assembly." She used as her sources "Roberts Rules of Order Newly Revised" and "Texas Association of Parliamentarians Study Guide No. 1."

The motions to bring a question again before an assembly are, Mrs. Birdwell said, to take from the table, rescind or amend something previously adopted, discharge a committee and reconsider.

A "Parliamentarian's Cookbook" was distributed to members as gifts by Mrs. Suzanna Johnson. The book, containing favorite recipes of members, was compiled by Mrs. Johnson.

Mrs. J. Harvey Herd, president, reported three members of the society, herself, Mrs. Frank Shriver and Mrs. Johnson, were presented on a local radio station recently.

The next society meeting will be Feb. 21, with Mrs. Herd, 1411 Cuthbert St., as hostess. Mrs. Shriver will in charge of the program on "Motions Relating to Order of Business."

CMAPTER BS, P.E.O.

Mrs. Clark J. Matthews gave a program for Chapter BS, P.E.O. reporting on her tour of the Holy Lands. She showed a map and slides and played a tape recording to illustrate the theme, "I Walked Today Where Jesus Walked."

The hostess was Mrs. Ellis Mills, 1604 Winfield St. Mrs. James N. Allison was co-hostess.

The meeting Dec. 14 will be in the home of Mrs. John Brooks Campbell, 3204 Stanolind St.

Auxiliary reports volunteer services

The Women's Auxiliary, Inc., of Midland Memorial Hospital had a general session in the hospital's cafeteria.

Mrs. W. L. Peyton, volunteer chairman, announced 148 auxiliary members worked 1,973 hours during October. Members working more than the required hours were: LeRae Aaron, 26; Ann Anthony 20; Charlene Bridgman, 20; Norma Baumann, 28; Charlene Culpepper, 26; Dorothy Ferrell, 94; Nancy Hart 21; Em Haught, 42; Dixie Osborne, 27; Lois Parker, 24; Alyce Swann, 23; Betty Tull, 26, and Jane Wyant, 27.

The membership chairman, Mrs. Richard Cramer, reported the auxiliary now has 158 active, 119 contributing and seven honorary members.

Mrs. George Berry, Junior Auxiliary chairman, reported 18 girls worked 158 hours during October. The Candy Striper Award went to Diane Hamm. Cheryl Erxleben also worked additional hours.

Mrs. Ralph Geisler, memorials chairman, reported seven contributions during October.

Mrs. Loretta Lee of the Midland Speech and Hearing Clinic spoke on speech and hearing problems with children and adults.

CHICAGO (AP) — Double double, boil and trouble: the secret ingredients of the "Reggie, Reggie, Reggie" candy bar have leaked out of the pressure-tight cauldrons of the high security kitchens here at Standard Brands.

The lid was on for competitive reasons in the cavity industry because no ballplayer has been memorialized on a candy wrapper since the Baby Ruth bar came on the market decades ago in tribute to Ruth Cleveland, winsome daughter of President Grover Cleveland, who batted .286 (about the same as Reggie) in the old Potomac Little League.

It's no secret that the little ole lozenge makers put in many a bittersweet month over their Bunsen burners and steaming saucepans trying to boil up a candy confection that would suggest at first bite the essential Reggie Jackson.

They knew from consumer studies done in the Yankee dugout that, tastebudwise, Reggie never could be confused with Mr. Goodbar or Chuckles or Candy Kisses. Suggestions came from the vicinity of the water cooler that something on the order of a Snicker might be more appropriate, but that was before the titular bon bon hit those three home runs in the final World Series game.

Now it can be revealed, thanks to the treachery of an embittered ladle stirrer in the syrup shed, that the Reggie, Reggie, Reggie bar is encased in rich mocha chocotate whipped up into peaks and mounds and hillocks. These represent the ethnic barriers, the mountains of bias that the Philadelphia tailor's son has had to cross on his way to greatness.

Next comes a layer of taffy and fudge, symbolic of the give and take at contract time with George Steinbrenner and the Yankee front office.

There are no peanuts in the Reggie, Reggie, Reggie bar. No presidential slight is intended here, but Reggie Jackson just doesn't work for peanuts.

Near the center of this toothsome masterpiece are bite-sized bits of licorice, emblemtic of the dark double knits on the plate umpires, which Reggie chews up when questicning a strike call.

Thin stripe of molasses suggests the dignified manner in which the great man approaches a fly ball, a few cordial cherries in sour syrup evokes his relationship with manager Billy Martin and a streak of rum butter, lightly whipped, provides the tangy flavor of lazy winter afternoons in the offseason Puerto Rican league.

But down deep at the core of the Reggie, Reggie, Reggie bar is a soft and gooey center of rich marshmallow, capturing the quintessential Jackson, the man who gives away Thunderbird cars to sweet charit,, the way John D. Rockefeller used to hand out dimes.

The whole is topped off with a sprinkling of crushed nuts, a rueful reminder of the brand of bleacherites generic to Yankee Stadium, especially the oafs who toss the beer bottles and firecrackers and the one who hung from the scoreboard with his breeches at half mast in the second Series game.

Confected at great expense and wrapped in the pencil striped regimentals of the new York Yankees, the Reggie, Reggie, Reggie bar is a chocolate coated crispy chewey candy colossus that can't be beat when it comes to the crunch. Kids should get a kick out of it, jurisprudence notwithstanding.

Reember, a Reggie, Reggie, Reggie can be bought but never traded; at least that was sweet talk among the candy butchers last week up at the house that Ruth built, (Babe not Baby, that is.)

Growing number of bent coppers stain Scotland Yard's good name

EDITORS NOTE — Scotland Yard home of the indefatigable trench-coated detective, is in trouble, its own detectives under suspicion. A number have been convicted of taking bribes and more have resigned or have been fired. Now there's a new commander, and he may have to concentrate as much on his own force as on the criminal element outside.

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard has a tarnished image.

It is now better known as the home of the bent copper — London slang for the corrupt cop.

One investigation into police corruption was headed by a man who turned out to be the mastermind of a corruption ring.

For the past eight years, since corruption at the Yard was first uncovered, the London public has been exposed to a series of trials. A number of top commanders have been convicted, mostly for taking bribes from criminals, and 400 lower-ranking officers have been fired or have resigned.

The London Metropolitan Police, official name for the Yard, remains the only force in Britain immune to outside inspection. Scotland Yard is virtually a law unto itself, guarding its operational independence even in its time of adversity.

That independence is now in the hands of David McNee, a 51-year-old nicknamed "The Hammer" for his strikes against the underworld. But McNee, who takes over from Sir Robert Mark, must follow Mark's path of coming down hardest on the Yard's own men.

Mark, who initiated a series of sweeping reforms, warned before he retired: "Many other police officers, very senior ones, knew what was going on, may have been part of what was going on . .. and are still serving today."

Since the Times of London first exposed three detectives' taking bribes from known criminals in November 1969, a score of London detectives, some of them top men at the Yard, have been convicted.

Among the senior officers jailed for up to 12 years are Kenneth Drury, a onetime police commander who headed the Yard's crack gangbusting Flying Squad, for taking bribes from pornography racketeer Jim Humphreys; Commander Wally Virgo, former chief of the Yard's 3,500 detectives, holder of the Queen's Police Medal, highest award an officer can win, and 25 commendations, for taking money from pornographers; Chief Superintendent Bill Moody, former head of the Yard's obscene publications squad, known as "the Dirty Squad," and one of the masterminds of the corruption network. Moody once headed an investigation into police graft. It failed to turn up any evidence.

An internal investigation bureau has been set up to root out crooked cops, and a police complaints bureau that for the first time included civilians.

The Times says public suspicion still lingers and asks: "How was it that the scale of corruption revealed in ...the corruption trials went unnoticed for so many years by those Yard men who ranked higher than Bill Moody, Wally Virgo and Ken Drury?"

It adds: "The biggest scandal of all still needs to be investigated."

There are signs that "bent coppers" who evaded earlier purges are still active.

Three members of the Yard's Drug Squad, which figured in one of the corruption trials a few years ago, are suspended from duty after investigators disclosed a half-ton of marijuana seized in police raids had been resold by detectives.

Rich, 34, was a crack undercover agent who broke up three major dope rings and won the British Empire Medal in 1968 for disarming a drug-crazed gunman.

Yard men are reluctant to talk about the corruption that has stained their reputation, but one officer who retired earlier this year, articulated the doubts that the trials planted in many officers' minds about their colleagues.

"I knew two of the senior officers jailed for corruption," he said.

"Now I look at other men I've known, some of them in senior posts, and I find myself wondering whether they're straight or not.

Solid wastes project slated

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe announced Wednesday he has preliminarily designated the entire state of Texas as a single region for both municipal and industrial solid waste management.

Texas is expected to receive approximately $740,000 in federal funds next year for solid waste management.

Briscoe said he has told the Environmental Protection Agency the funds should go 58 percent to the Texas Department of Health and 42 percent to the Texas Department of Water Resources.

The health department will assist him in reviewing possible multiple regional designations for municipal solid waste, leaving a single statewide region for industrial solid waste management, he said.

Remains of old Indian dugout canoe unearthed

ORANGE PARK, Fla. (AP) — The skeletal remains of an Indian dugout canoe, believed to be from 200 to 300 years old, were unearthed recently from the bottom of Hall Lake near Keystone Heights.

The canoe, which predates the Seminoles and is believed to have been used by Timuquana Indians, was pulled from its watery resting place amid shouts of surprise and delight by curious bystanders.

Tom Ryan, former president of the Clay County Historical Society, headed the excavation effort in which Clay County Public Works Director John Bowles, County Commissioner Thad Crossley and other county employees took part.

Years of erosion had etched away the sides of the 19-foot canoe. Only the bottom of the pecky cypress dugout, scarred by burning, remained.

A pump was used to dislodge the sand surrounding the canoe. The workers lifted it onto a ladder and carried it to the beach.

The canoe was first discovered by Pat McGraw of Jacksonville while she was pulling out weeds from three feet of water in the lake in front of her weekend cottage.

"At first I thought it was a concrete block, and then a piece of wood," she recalled.

But after Mrs. McGraw and her son started scooping up the sand which covered the object they discovered it had sloping sides.

"I thought it might be an Indian dugout and told my husband, but he didn't think so," she said.

Mrs. McGraw, who says she is part Cherokee Indian herself and has been interested in Indian artifacts all her life, decided to call Ryan, who she knew was a history buff.

Ryan, pleased over the find, says the wood remains "give us a graphic view of the size, shape and configuration of the canoe."

The canoe was scheduled to be taken to the county barn where it will be buried in the sand for six months to cure the wood. Experts will then try various tests to date the canoe.

Mrs. McGraw says the canoe will be loaned to the Clay County Museum in Green Cove Springs, where it will be on display "until I can figure out what to do with it."

Old trimotor planes still move men, materials

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — They missed starring in the movie about "those magnificent men" but at the age of 39, the oldest flying machines of the Swiss Air Force do have their share of international stardom on screens and at shows.

And as a new economy drive is starting, officers and plane buffs are rallying against possible plans to scrap the venerable trimotor Junkers "JU-52" or sell them to collectors.

The three "aunts," as they are nicknamed, have been on active Swiss Air Force duty since 1939 and are believed to be the last surviving original machines of many thousands of transports produced by the German Junkers company before and during World War II.

With an average of 6,000 flight hours and a maximum speed of 160 miles per hour, they have covered a distance far shorter than their jet-age successors. But as multi-purpose craft, they are unmatched, according to their air force admirers.

They are still moving men and material, they are flying schools for would-be paratroopers, and they serve as commuting craft for Mirage jet fighter pilots. They have carried hay to starving Alpine deer during hard winters, they have performed in several war films, and they continue to be top attractions at international air shows.

"The Germans are just crazily sentimental about them but there are many others who are enthusiastic, too, when we fly them," said Major Hans Rudolf Haeberli, of the Swiss Air Force Command, who is an occasional co-pilot aboard an "aunt."

Every part has to be manufactured individually at the air force work shops, as stocks ran out decades ago. "But every mechanic feels specially honored if he gets an order," Haeberli explained.

Swiss purists are proud of the fact that all three JUs, easily recognizable because of their corrugated, metal-covered fuselage, are still equipped with the original engines.

"I understand there are some JU-52s still being flown in the United States but they are fitted out with new engines," Haeberli said.

In terms of fuel consumption, the planes are the least expensive in the Swiss Air Force. But maintenance "is a bit costly," Haeberli concedes. "Cost controllers repeatedly have wanted to liquidate the JU-52s but they have the entire air force against them. Operation safety is tops and tests of the material continue to be excellent."

Lawsuit involves Atlanta integration

ATLANTA (AP) — Black parents suing for a new school integration plan contend that rigid housing patterns have caused school segregation. But education officials contend that they are not responsible for housing patterns.

Dr. Karl Taeuber, a specialist in black population studies from the University of Wisconsin, testified Wednesday that Atlanta's neighborhoods are as segregated as they were in the 1950s, before the civil rights movement.

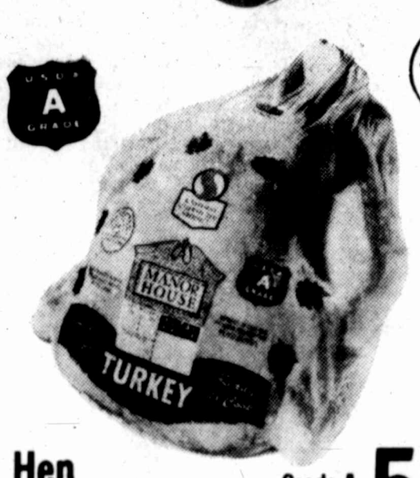

"The pattern of segregating whites from blacks has persisted throughout this period. It hasn't changed at all in the last 20 years," he said.

Taeuber appeared for the plaintiffs — 24 black parents — who are seeking a desegregation plan that would transfer students across city and county lines, integrating Atlanta's 90 percent black student population into predominantly white suburban schools.

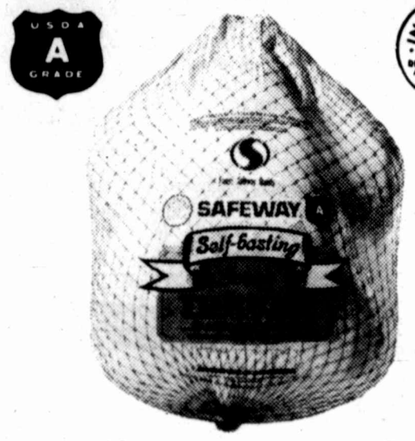

Atlanta's current school integration plan contains virtually no forced busing but allows a pupil to transfer to a school where his race is in a minority.

Cuba transforms stately Xanadu into restaurant

EDITOR'S NOTE: Arnold Zeitlin recently returned from Cuba where he accompanied Massachusetts businessmen and their wives who spent five days investigating trade prospects.

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN

HAVANA (AP) — For about $6, a Cuban farmer can dine on red snapper at a table in the baronial mansion of one of the richest families in the world, the du Ponts of Delaware.

The Communist government of Fidel Castro seized the 450acre estate in November 1961 and turned it into a restaurant, Las Americas, at the end of a peninsula near Varadero Beach, a resort 80 miles east of Havana.

Irenee du Pont, who died at age 86 in 1963, built the house, complete with nine-hole golf course, in 1929, right before the stock market crash.

Diners sit among du Pont's books, his original N.C. Wyeth paintings and even photographs of his wife and daughters, left virtually untouched on the furniture, as they were when the house was seized.

When the house was taken over, there was talk in Cuba of turning it into a nautical school for boys. Now Castro says it will be kept as evidence of Cuba's "reverence for the past."

Drinkers balance on tiny chairs in the cubbyhole bar in what used to be the du Pont wine cellar with five niches, one each for the wines of five countries.

In the main dining room, a velvet tapesty carries the verse of poet Samuel Taylor Coleridge:

"In Xanadu did Khubla Khan a Stately Pleasure Dome Decree ..."

Du Pont called the place Xanadu.

The main dining room is the show piece. It has high, woodbeamed ceilings. Its walls are hung with tapestries. A dining table set with damask linen seats a dozen in red velvet chairs.

The plates are gold-rimmed and set off by three wine glasses, plus a fourth for champagne.

The food is simpler than the furnishings, running to fish, roast pork, tenderloin tips and chicken soup. A party of eight ran up a bill of approximately $60, including Portuguese white wine at $1.90 a glass.

Atop the house is a pavilion, open to the sea breeze on four sides. It has a marble floor with an air chute to the firstfloor pipe organ, so its music can be heard from two stories below. The corners of the pavilion are decorated with stone carved in the shape of the prows of Viking ships.

Las Americas is far from being Cuba's most expensive restaurant.

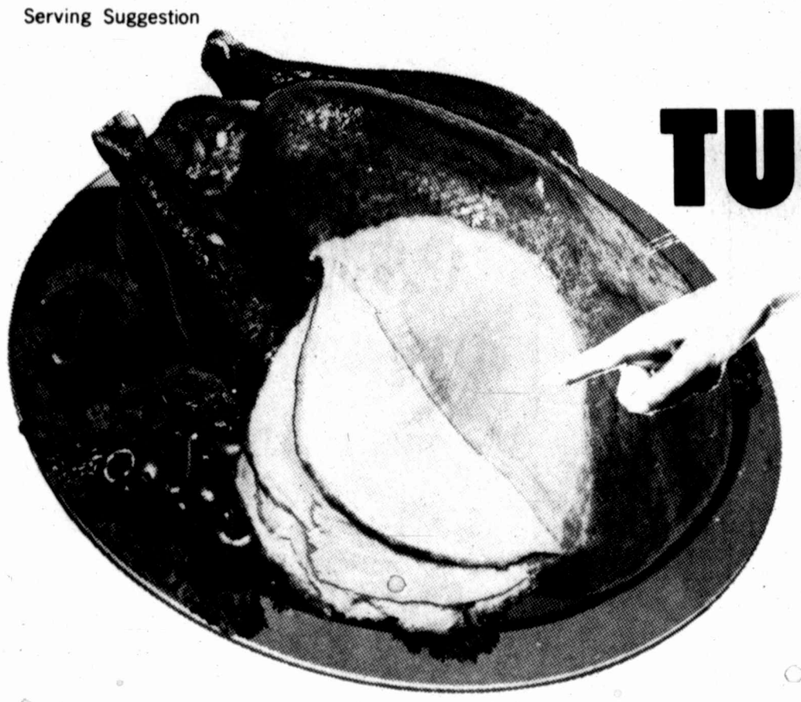

A group from a delegation of Massachusetts business persons discovered a candidate for that distinction in Havana. It was a restaurant called La Ruina, the ruin, built in 1973.

After ordering from a menu without prices the party was handed a bill for $625. Paying took almost every centavo they had.

"Lucky we were in a Communist country," said Norma Fine, a specialist in economic development in the office of Boston Mayor Kevin White. "We didn't have to leave a tip."

Black Forest factories corner market on clocks

The Los Angeles Times

SCHONACH, WEST GERMANY — The call of the cuckoo clock bird is heard from nearly every window in this village deep in the Black Forest.

Schonach is the capital of the world's cuckoo clock industry, which is centered here and in the surrounding villages of Triberg, Furtwangen, Schwenningen and Villingen.

Last year 1,000 kuckuck urh machers — cuckoo clock makers — turned out 700,000 hand-carved cuckoo clocks, 80 percent of which were shipped to 70 countries around the world.

Factory prices for the clocks begin as low as $20 and go as high as $1,000 each. Retail prices in America are 3 to 4 times that.

Cuckoo clocks have been the exclusive product of the Black Forest ever since a farmer in Furtwangen with nothing else to do in the winter of 1640 created the first of the clocks with the little bird that pops out and counts off the hour.

"The little farmer of Furtwangen was inspired by the cuckoo birds in the Black Forst," explained Gritta Haas, who with her husband, Herbert, owns one of the cuckoo clock factories in Schonach.

"We know when spring is here when the cuckoo bird starts his song every year in March," said Herbert Haas." He cuckoos 42 times a minute during the mating season, which lasts for about a month."

There are 15 cuckoo clock factories. They employ as few as 10 persons and as many as 70. All the factories get the movements for the clocks from the same factory in the Black Forest.

"We know when spring is here when the cuckoo bird starts his song every year in March. He cuckoos 42 times a minute during the mating season, which lasts about a month."

Herbert Haas

The face of the cuckoo clock is mainly the traditional hunting scene — a deer with antlers over the clock, a hunting gun, powder bag and horn, a rabbit and a pheasant — all hand carved out of linden wood.

The carvers follow the craft of several generations before that.

The cuckoo call comes from a pair of bellows made from goatskin. Women in the villages have been making the cuckoo clock bellows in their homes for three centuries.

The cuckoo clock factories where the clocks are assembled have been in the same families for generations.

"In the early years, the Black Forest farmers made the clocks during the winter when they had little else to do," said factory owner Haas, 46, who inherited his factory, Rombach and Haas, from his father.

The factory is on the first floor of Haas' three-story apartment on main street of Schonach, which is covered with snow six months of the year.

"Since the 1700s, making cuckoo clocks has been a year-round, fulltime occupation. Our industry keeps growing more and more each year," Haas said.

Cuckoo clocks have been exported to other parts of the world since 1760, when the first cuckoo clocks were shipped to France.

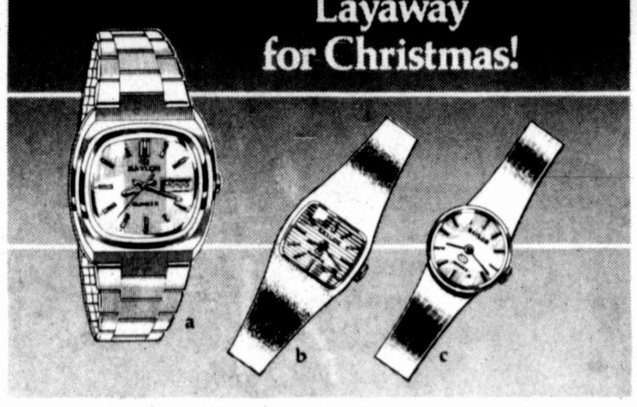

One of the biggest cuckoo clok stores is in Wiesbaden near Frankfurt, where Julius Stern sells more than 5,000 of the clocks each year.

Stern owns what is described as the biggest clock in the world.

Space agency turns salesman to offer specials on shuttle

By FRANK MACOMBER
Copley News Service

Now that the shuttle program has jumped its first big hurdle — free-flight tests at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. — the federal space agency is going into the marketing business.

NASA told Congress the shuttle would pay for itself eventually through the leasing of its facilities to scientific organizations and manufacturing firms eager to produce goods in the zero gravity of space. That was one of the shuttle's chief selling points.

Now the space agency must begin to make good on that claim, two years before the first manned test flights of the shuttle are scheduled.

So NASA already is offering consumer products industries what it calls a "getaway special" payload. It will cost from $3,000 to $10,000 to fly on a space-available basis in the shuttle cargo bay.

NASA believes the getaway special approach will lead to expanded participation by big companies in the larger Spacelab class payload area.

The agency's first venture was a success. By hiring the firm that handles Ford Motor Co.'s marketing in the Eastern United States, the agency was able to sell a getaway special payload to Ford.

The company handed NASA a check for $500 as earnest money for the payload. Ford officials say they haven't decided what to carry aboard the shuttle. But NASA has approved its request to use the payload as part of its 75th anniversary advertising campaign.

The Ford deal seemed to open the floodgates. Now NASA has received earnest money for more than 70 getaway special payloads from a widely scattered group of companies and individuals.

Most of the first are aerospace-oriented. Those that aren't are NASA's prime targets.

Jon Michael Smith, NASA's director of pricing and user agreements for the shuttle, belleves from 2 to 4 percent of the getaway special payload customers will buy larger and more expensive space later in the Spacelab.

Some of the getaway special subscribers who put up non-refundable $500 deposits seem unlikely shuttle passengers. They include Dow Chemical Corp., Battelle Memorial Institute, the Coors Beer Co. and Columbia Pictures.

To land more clients, NASA is negotiating with the George J. Abrams & Co., a New York consumer product consultant firm with ties to U.S. industry. Some of the Abrams targets are expected to be the Ciba-Geigy Corp., a pharmaceutical firm; Colgate-Palmolive Co.; Bristol-Meyers Co.; Purepal Pharmaceutical Corp.; Vick Chemical Co.; and Sterling Drug Co.

States differ on advertising legal aid fees

By KEVIN McKEAN

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Legal clinics, which thrive by advertising flat fees for simple law services, have multiplied rapidly since the Supreme Court guaranteed their right to advertise in June.

But leaders of the fledgling American Legal Clinic Association said the growth has been resisted by state bar associations despite the high court ruling.

Advertising is essential to the economic survival of the clinics, which attract customers by charging lower-than-normal rates.

Many clinics also set a flat fee schedule for such routine services as wills, name changes, uncontested divorces, simple criminal matters and bankruptcies.

The Supreme Court ruled in a case from Arizona that the First Amendment guaranteed lawyers the right to advertise. But the court added that the legal profession had the right to regulate the time, place and form of such messages.

Since the ruling, the number of legal clinics has more than doubled to 70 nationwide, said Davida Maron of the Washington-based National Resource Center for Consumers of Legal Services.

But few state supreme courts have yet adopted advertising guidelines, and lawyers who advertise are being warned that they do so at their own risk, she said.

The American Bar Association recommended guidelines in August for radio and print ads but is still studying the question of legal ads on television.

State bar associations have differed as to what the Supreme Court ruling meant.

Roofing color contributes much to looks of house

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

One way to keep your house from looking too much like your neighbor's is to install a roof of a different color. This can be done during the original construction or when a new roof is in order.

While this desire to avoid sameness is a laudable objective, the use of color should be considered primarily as an exterior decorating feature. Much has been written about interior decorating, but home owners are less than knowledgeable when it comes to the exterior elements of their houses. Yet it's the face of the home that is seen by more persons than the inside.

The roof is the largest unbroken visual expanse in most houses, so it must be considered the key to exterior decorating. Sidewalls and trim are subject to more frequent color changes, but you can expect to "live with" your roof color for up to 25 years.

Manufacturers of roofing have provided greater flexibility in exterior decorating by producing many new colors and textures in recent years. Asphalt shingles, the most popular type of roofing, offer an extensive range of colors. In addition to all the traditional roof colors, the shingles now come in such earthtone colors as browns, buffs, olives and slates.

Earthtone colors and the three-dimensional appearance of the new textured shingles not only relate a home to its environment, but can also be used to coordinate the roof with masonry walls and muted siding colors.

When it is used effectively, roofing color can make a house stand out as well as complement other color elements of the house. It is a definite part of exterior design, a part that can improve the entire structure. If the roof is light-colored, the eye is attracted to it, thus giving small or very low houses an added dimension. On a contemporary house, a white roof can create a sense of airiness. On a low-slung ranch, it makes the house seem taller. Entirely aside from the appearance standpoint, white helps to keep a house cooler, since it reflects part of the sun's heat, making it an ideal house topping in warm climates.

A dark roof works in the opposite way, especially when it is combined with touches of bright accent color low on the sidewalls. Dark colors help make the unusually tall or steep-roofed house seem less towering, which is why it is often used for certain two-story houses.

Be extra careful when choosing a roof color.

Here's answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — We are getting ready to fix and use an extra room downstairs. We are concerned about noise and want to keep it from going upstairs as much as possible, but we also want to keep the room itself as nonnoisy as we can. Do acoustical ceiling tiles really help? I have been advised that they are of little use and that it is far better to use drapes around the room. Is this true?

A. — No. Drapes are excellent sound-absorbers. So are carpets, upholtered furniture and many other non-hard surfaces. But if you do not use a sound-absorbent material on the ceiling, you nullify the effect of the other materials, since a flat, bare, hard ceiling will reflect sound more than anything else because its surface is so large. When sound hits a hard surface, it bounces back, producing what is called sound reverberation. Thus, the room itself will be noisier and so will the upstairs room.

Acoustical ceiling tiles absorb sound, which is why you usually see them in a restaurant with a large capacity. The next time you go into a large restaurant that is very noisy, look up. The chances are it does not have an acoustical ceiling. Now, if you combine a sound absorbent ceiling with other sound-absorbent materials, you will have a room which is quiet and which doesn't send any noise upstairs.

Q. — I had a bloody nose recently. Some of the blood dropped on the wooden arm of a living room chair. Nobody noticed it for days. Is there any way of getting out the stain? I haven't done anything yet.

A. — You will have to experiment. It is assumed that the wood has a varnish, lacquer or similar finish. If it has also been waxed, try removing all the wax with turpentine or a commercial wax remover.

There is a good chance this might also take off the stain. If not, rub the area with denatured alcohol. Let a little of it remain on the spot for a few minutes, then rub again. You can also try lacquer thinner (be sure there is plenty of ventilation), but this might also affect the finish, which then would have to be retouched. In an extreme case, you will have to use a varnish remover on the arm of the chair. When the finish is off, the stain will probably come with it. But some of it may have soaked into the wood, in which case the chair arm will have to be bleached, then refinished. In any event, unless the stain can be eliminated simply by taking off the wax or rubbing with denatured alcohol, some kind of retouching or refinishing is inevitable.

Q. — I recently bought a varnish, probably synthetic, which produced a high gloss finish that I do not like. Why is it that manufacturers put out high gloss finishes when nobody likes them?

A. — Nobody likes them? Millions of persons do! Besides, high gloss finishes are generally easier to clean and are usually preferred for surfaces subject to heavy use or severe treatment.

LASAGNE SUPREME

By Mrs. Don Spence

1 pkg. lasagna noodles
2 lbs ground beef
½ lb ground pork or ground Italian sausage
1 lb cream cheese
½ to 1 lb Parmesan cheese grated
1 large can tomatoes
2 small cans tomato paste
1-2 medium onions
2 cloves garlic
1 large green pepper
2 large stalks celery
2 large carrots
Spices & herbs: Salt, pepper, chili powder, onion salt, garlic salt, garlic powder, sweet basil, sugar, oregano, bay leaves. "1 cup smooth red burgundy wine", olive oil (enough to lubricate), margarine —1 or 2 pats

I Meat Sauce (Ragu)

A. 1. Dice onions; carrots & green pepper to be grated
2. Cup garlic cloves into small pieces.

B. Melt oleo & olive oil in large dutch oven and add above & saute until they cook down somewhat, 10-15 min. Stir frequently so as not to burn.

C. Brown meats in same pan eventually mixing with above vegetable mixture.

2 Season contents with the herbs & seasonings. Season 3 or 4 times during the entire cooking process.

3. After brown add seasoning, pour ⅓ of wine in. Add 2 or 3 times as you season.

4. Simmer Ragu covered 10 minutes.

D. 1. Add large can of tomatoes—if you feel you need liquid add juice—I do not.

2. Add 1 can tomato paste

3. Simmer 1½ hours to 2½ hours. Longer the better—remember to add all seasonings throughout. Only leave in bay leaves 5-7 min.

II. Lasagna

A. Prepare according to package directions; butter large baking pan—9x13 or similar

B. Put down 1 layer of noodles spread layer of ragu over this

C. Sprinkle small globs of cream cheese all over

D. Sprinkle parmesan cheese all over.

E. Sprinkle Mozzarella pieces all over.

F. Put next layer of noodles.

G. Repeat process until no more food left. Divide up as evenly as possible so as not to run but.

III Put in preheated oven 350 degrees and bake for 45 min. to 1 hour. (Use your own judgement—possibly 1 hour 15 min.) Bon appetite!

CHILE RELLENOS

By Mrs. John E. Malone

8 fresh green chili peppers (or canned long green chile)
½ pound longhorn cheese
Batter (see recipe below)

Green chile should be roasted directly over a gas or electric burner until the outer skin is easily peeled. After chile is roasted, wrap in a wet cloth and steam for about 10 minutes. slit chile open the long way. The seeds and veins are then removed from each chili pepper, but make sure to leave stem. Then stuff the chilie with the cheese. Close the slit by lapping over; roll prepared pepper in small amount of flobatter; fry in about one inch of deep hot oil until golden brown. Turn and brown other side.

BATTER FOR CHILE RELLENOS

To ½ cup flour add enough pancake flour or bisquick to make a total of 2/3 cup. Add ½ cup milk and 1 egg. Beat until smooth. The stuffed chile peppers should be dipped in the batter, holding chile by stem, then placed immediately in hot oil. After frying, stuffed chile pepper should drain on paper towel.

NOODLE BURGER CASSEROLE

By Mrs. Charles Durfee

8 oz. pkg. very fine noodles
1¼ lb. lean ground beef
1 medium onion, chopped
½ cup celery, finely chopped
4 oz. can mushrooms, stems and pieces, drained
10 oz. can cream of mushroom soup
10 oz. milk (fill emptied mushroom soup can)
1 small jar pimentos, cut up
1 cup cubed American cheese (approximately ½-inch cubes)
Small bag potato chips, crushed

Cook noodles according to package directions and drain. Brown meat in skillet and add onion and celery. Cook until onions are transparent. In a large bowl, dilute soup with milk; then add all other ingredients except potato chips. Season mixture with salt and pepper to taste. Bake in large greased casserole, topped with crushed potato chips, covered, for 30 minutes at 400 degrees. Then remove cover and reduce heat to 300 degrees for an additional 15 minutes. Serves 8.

UNCLE JOHN'S CASSEROLE EGGPLANT

By John R. Braue

Pare 1 eggplant and cut into 1-inch cubes.

Place in large pan and cook with 3 cups boiling water and 1 tsp. salt until tender. Drain well.

Add:
Pepper to taste
1 cup milk
1¼ cup dry bread crumbs
¼ cup minced onions
1 tbsp. sweet green pepper, chopped
2 eggs, beaten
1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
Mix well.

Place in buttered baking or casserole dish. Bake for 12 minutes in pre-heated 350 degree oven. Mix ½ cup melted butter or margarine and 1½ cups soft bread crumbs. Sprinkle over eggplant mixture. Increase oven temperature to 375 degrees and bake until golden brown.

BROCCOLI CASSEROLE

By Dorothy Maggio

4 stalks celery, chopped
5 green onions, chopped
1 stick margarine
1 medium can mushrooms, drained
2 tbsp. flour
1 roll garlic cheese, cubed
1 can cream of mushroom soup
3 pkg. frozen broccoli (cooked as directed) Bread crumbs

Saute celery, onions, margarine and mushrooms until tender. Add flour and mix well. Add cheese and mushroom soup and stir until cheese melts. Add cooked broccoli (chop it into pieces). Put mixture into baking dish and cover with bread crumbs. Bake at 350 degrees 30 to 40 minutes.

Serves eight.

SPINACH AND ARTICHOKES

By Mrs. Jerry W. Blankenship

2 pkgs. frozen chopped spinach
3 tbsps. butter
1 large onion, chopped fine
5-6 green onions, chopped fine
3-4 medium cloves of garlic, peeled and pressed
1 large can artichoke hearts
1 small carton sour cream or an 8 oz. pkg. cream cheese cut up in small pieces
Salt & pepper to taste

Cook spinach in a vegetable steamer until just thawed. Drain thoroughly. In a large skillet, melt butter and saute onions and garlic until wilted. Add artichokes that have been cut in half. Stir to blend. Add spinach and sour cream or cheese. Mix thoroughly and place in 2 qt. casserole. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until hot and bubbly.

I prefer to make this several hours before needed in order to give the seasonings a chance to blend. I then bake & serve.

GROUND BEEF NOODLE BAKE

By Mrs. Gene M. Coker

2 lbs. lean ground beef
1½ cups chopped onion
2 cloves garlic, chopped
½ teaspoon red pepper
8 ounces sharp cheddar cheese (shredded) (2 cups)
2-10¾ ounce cans condensed tomato soup
1/3 cup chopped pepper (green)
¼ cup chili sauce
2 tbsp. chopped canned pimiento
¾ tsp. salt
1½ cups soft bread crumbs
3 tbsp. butter or margarine (melted)

In skillet, cook beef, onions and garlic until meat is slightly browned and onion and garlic are tender. Drain off fat. Combine meat and onion with noodles, cheese, soup, chili sauce, pimiento, salt, red pepper. Mix well. Turn out into 13x9x2 inch baking dish. Combine crumbs and butter. Sprinkle on top. Bake in 350 degree oven 40 to 45 minutes or until hot. Trim with green pepper rings. Serves 12.

30-MINUTE COMPANY CASSEROLE

By Lyn Ryan

⅛ lb. lean ground beef beef
1/3 cup onion
1 (8-oz.) can tomato sauce with mushrooms
1 (8-oz.) can tomato sauce plain
½ tsp. salt
⅛ to ¼ tsp. pepper
Dash of cinnamon
10 oz. noodles, cooked and drained
1 cup cottage cheese
½ cup chopped green onions
½ cup grated American cheese (or cheddar if you prefer)

Cover bottom of shallow baking dish with cooked noodles, making a raised border around edges. Pour meat mixture over noodles. Spread cottage cheese over meat. Sprinkle with green onions and grated cheese. Pour on can of plain sauce. (I pour the tomato sauce on in strips as for lasagne). Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

NOODLE SIDE DISH

By JOYCE KEADLE

¾ package fine egg noodles (coiled vermicelli)
1 cup liquid shortening
4 eggs
1 medium size onion, chopped
¾ cup soy sauce
4 tsp. Accent or MSG
2 small cans mushrooms, drained

Cook noodles according to directions on package. Drain and rinse in cold water. Let stand in a cool skillet (usually put mine in the freezer for 10 minutes). Put in oil, onion and break in eggs. Turn on heat and cook mixture - stirring constantly. Eggs will look as though coddled and bubbly. This is the secret. Add mushrooms, Accent and soy sauce. Simmer a little longer. Add noodles and simmer few more minutes - stirring occassionally. This dish reheats well, so you can make it ahead of time.

P. S. For those of you that like liquid smoke - add about 1 tablespoon along with the soy sauce.

SQUASH CASSEROLE

By MRS. W. D. WATSON, JR.

1 medium onion, chopped
1 medium bell pepper, chopped
3 tbsps. oleo
4 to 6 yellow squash
Salt
Pepper
Grated cheddar cheese

Wash and slice squash into ¼" slices. Cook in salted water until crisp tender. Drain. While squash is cooling, saute' onion and bell pepper in oleo until onion is clear. In buttered casserole, place a layer of squash. Salt and pepper squash. Sprinkle over squash part of the onion and bell pepper mixture and then cover with grated cheese. Alternate layers beginning with squash and ending with cheese. Bake in 350 degree oven for 30 minutes.

EGGPLANT CASSEROLE

By Mrs. C.E. Thurston

1 medium eggplant
⅓ cup flour
1 tsp. salt
½ cup salad oil
1 lb. ground beef
2 (8 oz.) cans tomato sauce
2 tbsp. instant onions
1¼ tsps. salt
¼ tsp. garlic powder
⅛ tsp. pepper
⅛ tsp. oregano
2 tbsps. chopped parsley
1 cup cottage cheese
½ lb. mozzarella cheese - sliced
½ cup shredded cheddar cheese

Pare eggplant, cut crosswise in ¼ inch thich slices. Roll in flour mixed with 1 tsp. salt. Brown in small amount of oil. Drain on paper towel. Brown meat in same skillet, add tomato sauce, onion, salt, garlic powder, pepper, oregano and parsley. Cover and simmer 15 minutes. Skim off excess fat. Spoon half of sauce in a 8 x 12 inch baking dish. Cover with half the eggplant, all of the cottage cheese and Mozzarella cheese. Top with remaining eggplant, sauce and cheddar cheese. Bake at 350 for 20 minutes or until hot and bubbly.

HAM CASSEROLE

By Mrs. Wayne Mitchell

12 slices of bread trimmed. Cut hole in each slice as donuts. Make round.

2 cups diced ham. Place on top of broccoli. Put donut bread on top.

Beat 6 eggs and 3½ cups milk. Add 2 tablespoons of chopped onion and ¼ teaspoon dry mustard. Pour over the above (be sure it is moist). Set over night.

Bake at 325 degrees for a little over 1 hour. Serves 12.

SAUSAGE QUICHE

By NANCY GINZEL

9" pie shell, unbaked
½ pound hot sausage (top quality)
1 cup sour cream
½ cup milk
3 eggs
½ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. dry mustard
dash Cayenne
½ cup Swiss cheese, grated
½ cup cheddar cheese, grated
½ cup Mozzarella cheese, grated

Brown and thoroughly drain sausage. Combine sour cream, milk, eggs and seasonings and mix. Place sausage in pie shell and cover with grated cheese. Pour egg mixture on top.

Bake at 375 degrees for 30 minutes or till set & golden.

PERMIAN BASIN BLACKEYED PEAS

By Mrs. Clement H. Roberts

1 qt. fresh shelled blackeyed peas (with snaps)
3 slices bacon sliced in 1" pieces water
Salt & pepper

After preparing and washing peas, place in Dutch oven and cover with water. Add bacon and bring to boil. Lower heat to next lower level and cook until tender adding water as needed.* When ready to serve, season with salt and pepper to taste. Six generous servings.

*Cooking time varies - 1 hour on electric stove a little longer on gas range.

DIRTY RICE

By Mrs. Jerry Odom

Combine 1 can beef broth and ¾ cup rice and cook until tender.

Stir in 1 cup chopped onion, ½ cup chopped celery, ½ cup chopped green pepper, ⅛ teaspoon red pepper, dash of salt and ⅛ teaspoon garlic salt.

RICE AND CHICKEN CASSEROLE

By Phyllis Munsterman

1 box chicken rice-a-roni
1 14½ oz. can evaporated milk
1 cooked, boned and diced chicken
1 can cream of mushroom soup
½ cup chopped pimiento
¼ cup chopped green pepper

Cook rice-a-roni as per directions on box. Have chicken prepared before hand. Mix all the above ingredients in large casserole dish. Bake for 45 minutes at 350 degrees. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

TUNA CASSEROLE

By Mrs. Hunter Walter

1 small pkg. hash brown potatoes
1 small can tuna, drained
1 small container sour cream
2 tbs. margarine, melted
1 small onion
1 tbs. chive
1 tsp. black pepper

Serves 6.

CHICKEN & CHILIES

By Paula Ann Shigut

1 chicken
1 pkg. tortilla chips
1 can tomato soup
1 large can evaporated milk
1 stick oleo
1 onion
1 small can chopped chilies (green)
salt and pepper to taste

Boil and bone chicken. Saute chopped chilies and onion in butter. Add tomato soup, milk and chopped chicken and heat. Arrange ⅔ pkg. tortilla chips in large baking dish. Pour mixture over top. Put rest of chips on top.

Bake 350 degrees for 1 hour.

JIMMY'S CASSEROLE

By Mrs. Rosetta Baker

1 box macaroni and chees
1 can tomato sauce (small)
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 tablespoon margarine
2 cups diced ham (can use left-over)

Sear onion in hot margarine. Cook macaroni according to instructions on package. Pour tomato sauce in skillet with cooked macaroni. Mix in two cups cooked ham in macaroni and cheese; add all the other ingredients and cook about 10 minutes. Serve hot. This is a one-dish meal.

SPANISH DELIGHT

By Mrs. B. R. Brogdon

1 cup chopped celery
1 med. green pepper, chopped
2 lbs. ground meat

Brown all together and add 2 (6 oz.) tomato paste, 2 tbsps. chili powder, salt, pepper to taste. Simmer 1 hour, then add:

1 can of whole kernel corn,
1 lg. can of mushrooms
1 can of ripe olives, drained and sliced

Heat a few minutes or until macaroni is tender. Serve with tossed green salad and garlic bread.

Elemental steps offered on flaming desserts

The Washington Post

How pretty it looks! A waiter strikes a match, and the finale begins. Flames leap around a beautifully glazed duck or from atop a trembling souffle. The flames dies, but the impression lingers.

The cynical restauranteur will confess it's a better draw than a floor show.

Inspired, the customer tries to repeat the feat at home. Disaster. In the dining room, as guests watch with the intensity of spectators at the Anatomy Lesson by Rembrandt, the flame sputters and dies. In the kitchen the flames explode, threatening to burn the ceiling.

I retain a vivid memory of an early attempt to flambe a dessert. As the ice cream gradually turned to soup and burned matches collected on the surface, my elegant creation came to resemble the bleak panorama of a burnt forest on a winter's day.

Since then I've learned some elemental steps that take the uncertainty from a process and that can be as useful as it is appealing.

First, the choice of alcohol. Those high flames you see in restaurants often are caused by a high-octane source. Use 151-proof rum or a similarly super-charged liquor, and the flames burn bright.

They don't do much for flavor, however. Quality counts if you care about taste. Use brandy or whiskey you are willing to drink.

Equally important are the amount of alcohol, and when you add it. Often a carefully crafted restaurant sauce is ruined by the addition of too much liqueur in the dining room. Whether the alcohol is poured in early to a stew-type recipe for flavor and to turn off grease, or just before serving, it should not be used liberally and it should be burned off completely. (Sometimes a small amount of brandy or another liqueur is added to a sauce or to fruit without being flamed).

To achieve this, it is essential that the alcohol be hot, or be heated. In the kitchen, the easiest and safest method is to pour the alcohol into a small saucepan or a large ladle, hold that over the flame until the liquid nears the boiling point, then tilt the container so the liquid moves to the edge nearest the flame.

It will catch before it spills. this is particularly important when alcohol is being added to a sauce or another liquid. Pour it on directly, unlit, and chances are it will intermingle and fail to flame when a match is applied.

To insure a complete burn-off of the alcohol, the food should also be over a heat source. Gradually pour on the alcohol, then gently shake the platter or pan until the flame dies.

A dish coming directly from the oven, a dessert souffle for instance, provides its own heat beneath the liquid. Shaking, however, will help distribute the alcohol more evenly.

To flame food in the dining room, use a metal serving ladle or small sauceboat large enough so the alcohol is well below the rim. Heat the alcohol in the kitchen or over a chafing dish away from the table.

Have someone else strike the match and pour carefully. The flame will not go out quickly if the alcohol has been properly heated, so there is no need to rush.

There is also a semi-flaming technique that proved very popular in a French hotel where I worked. Dried herbs, branches of thyme and rosemary, were planted in racks of lamb fresh from the oven. As a waiter stood by, the herbs were ignited. The flame died quickly, but as the platter was whisked through the dining room, it left a trail of light but wonderfully aromatic smoke.

Here are two flammable recipes:

STEAK AU POIVRE

(4 servings)
4 strip, club or Delmonico steaks.
4 to 6 tablespoons black peppercorns
6 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1-3 cup brandy, cognac preferred
1-2 cup heavy cream
Salt to taste

Crack ("bruise") the peppercorns on a cutting board or a counter with the bottom of a frying pan or a rolling pin. Coat each side of the steaks with cracked pepper. Leave them for at least 30 minutes. Heat 4 tablespoons butter and the oil in a frying pan large enough to hold the steaks in a single layer. Cook the steaks as desired (allow about 4 minutes on a side for rare), salting and basting after turning them.

Remove steaks to a plate. Pour off cooking crease, return steaks to pan, pour on brandy and flame. Shake pan until flames die, then transfer steaks to a serving platter or plates and keep warm. Add cream to pan and reduce quickly over high heat. When sauce has thickened slightly, adjust taste with salt and a touch of brandy, remove from heat and incorporate final 2 tablespoons of butter with a whisk. Pour sauce over steaks and serve at once.

JACQUES PEPIN'S BANANAS FLAMBEES

(6 servings)
6 large, ripe bananas
1 stick (1-4 pound) unsalted butter
1-3 cup sugar
Juice of 1 1-2 limes
Juice of 1 lemon
1-4 cup water
1-3 cup good-quality dark rum

Trim the ends of the bananas (although ripe, they should not be soft) and cut a single slit in the skin of each from tip to tip. Place bananas on a cookie sheet or in a roasting pan and cook in a preheated 400-degree oven for 15 minutes. (The skins will turn black).

This may be done ahead. Leave bananas in skins at room temperature until serving time. Using a chafing dish or large frying pan, melt butter and add sugar, lime and lemon juices and water. Cook over high heat until the mixture becomes a caramel color. Remove bananas from their skins and add them to the sauce. Turn the bananas in the sauce to coat them. Pour in the rum, shake the pan and ignite (or heat and ignite rum and pour it over pananas). Shake pan over heat until flames die. Serve bananas topped with sauce (over ice cream, if

MINI RECIPES

If Chinese 5-spice powder is called for in a recipe and it's not on hand, you can try approximating it by mixing together equal parts of cinnamon, cloves, fennel, ginger and nutmeg (all ground).

A slotted, small-size serving spoon is a good investment. Use it for serving pickled beets, marinated fresh cucumbers and regular cucumber pickles.

The flavor of a cheese spread made with sherry, vermouth or brandy improves if it is chilled for a day or two before serving.

A Mideast dish that's become popular for snack time: pita stuffed with a savory chick-pea mixture. The chick peas may be pureed and mixed with minced scallion or chives, olive oil and lots of freshly ground pepper.

Buckwheat groats (called kasha in Jewish cuisine) add variety when they are served instead of rice, grits or potatoes with meat or poultry.

Ever add raisins to the tomato sauce you are using for stuffed cabbage rolls?

Many good Hungarian cooks say that the secret of making good goulash is to add a generous amount of onion.

If you have leftover cooked fish you can flake it and mix it with cooked rice. The combination is good heated in butter and served with chutney for a Sunday night supper dish.

What is New? Deviled Cheese Souffle

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Recipes for souffles are in some of our old-time American cookbooks; obviously over the years a good many cooks in the United States have made them successfully. Nevertheless, some present-day cooks have the notion that they are hard to prepare. Not at all. Anyone who is willing to follow directions and has a well-regulated oven can make a souffle and also a souffle pie.

The usual main-course consists of nothing more than an everyday white sauce to which is added a main ingredient and egg yolks; after this the egg whites are beaten and a big spoonful of them stirred into the sauce mixture. Finally the remaining beaten egg whites are folded in. It's as simple as that. Then if you have a wellregulated oven you're in business.

For a souffle pie, the souffle mixture is turned into a partially baked pie shell. One caution here: the pie shell will need a really high fluted rim that is "hooked" to the rim of the pie plate because if the shell sinks back during the prebaking it will not be high enough to hold the souffle filling. If you use a pi-crust mix for the shell, you'll need more of it than is usually suggested for a one-crust pie in order to make the high fluted rim.

When we tried the following recipe for a Deviled Cheese Souffle Pie we served it with a tossed green salad for texture contrast; the combination makes a pleasant main course for a light supper.

DEVILED CHEESE SOUFFLE PIE

Unbaked 9-inch pastry shell with a high fluted rim
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons flour ¾ cup milk 1½ cups grated (medium-fine) sharp or extra-sharp cheddar cheese, not packed down
3 large eggs, separated
4½-ounce can deviled ham

With a fork prick the bottom of the pastry shell; bake in a preheated 425-degree oven for 10 minutes; remove and set aside. In a medium saucepan over low heat melt the butter; stir in the flour; remove from heat; gradually stir in the milk, keeping smooth. Over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, cook until thickened and bubbly. Remove from heat and stir in the cheese. Whisk in the egg yolks, one at a time. Beat the egg whites until they hold stiff straight peaks; stir a large spoonful into the sauce mixture; fold in the remaining whites. Spread the deviled ham over the bottom of the below center in a prebaked pastry shell; preheated 425-degree pour in the cheese mix- oven until puffed, brown ture. Bake on the rack and a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 25 to 50 minutes. Serve at once. Makes 5 or 6 servings.

The French chef goes American

By The Associated Press

A soothsayer must have whispered to Julia Child, The French Chef of television fame: "You will do a new TV series, this time concerned with American cooking, and your programs will again be successful."

For Julia is working on such a series — and that's quite a switch. It will be some time, however, before the shows are aired. Meanwhile her latest book, "From Julia Child's Kitchen," (Knopf) is a mighty good read.

There's a recipe for a bitter sweet French chocolate cake in "From Julia Child's Kitchen" that was successfully tried by my recipe-tester, one of my neighbors and several other friends. It's a real delicacy. "To keep the cake light," Julia writes, "sifted cornstarch rather than flour goes in." Because of space limitations our adaptation of the recipe "runs in" the ingredients and slightly shortens the directions.

GATEAU AU CHOCOLATE

Blend 2 teaspoons instant espresso coffee and ¼ cup boiling water in a 6-cup saucepan, set in a larger pan of simmering water, and remove from heat. Break up 7 ounces semisweet chocolate and 2 ounces unsweetened chocolate; stir it into the coffee, cover and set aside to melt slowly until you are ready to use it.

Smear 2 teaspoons soft butter over the entire inside surfaces of two 8 by 1½-inch round onepiece cake pans. With wax paper line bottom of each pan, butter paper, then roll ¼ cup flour around in first pan to coat inside completely. Knock flour out into second pan, coat it and knock out excess flour.

Separate 4 large eggs, dropping the whites into a clean dry beating bowl and the yolks into a 3 to 4-quart mixing bowl. With a portable electric beater start beating the yolks, gradually adding 2-3rds cup sugar, and continue beating until yolks are thick, pale yellow and, when a bit is lifted in blades of beater, it drops off in a thick ribbon that slowly dissolves on the surface of the mixture — about 3 minutes beating.

Chocolate should now be soft. If not, remove pan and reheat water; remove from heat, set chocolate pan in again, and beat the chocolate with the portable beater until perfectly smooth. Beat in 4 ounces (1 stick) soft unsalted butter, 2 tablespoons at a time, then gradually beat the chocolate-butter mixture into the egg-yolk mixture.

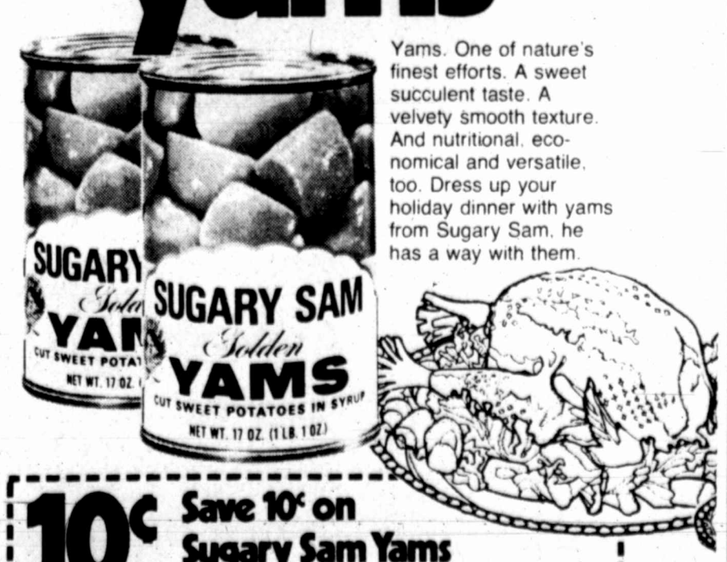

With clean beater blades, start beating the egg whites at moderately low speed for a minute or so, until foaming, and beat in ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar and a pinch of salt. Gradually increase speed to fast, and continue beating until egg whites hold their shape in soft peaks; gradually beat in 2 tablespoons sugar; continue to beat until they form stiff shining peaks.

Being sure chocolate and eggyolk mixture is smooth and soft — stir over hot water if it has stiffened — sift over it one quarter of the cornstarch, and scoop in one quarter of the egg whites; stir in with a rubber spatula. Then scoop rest of egg whites on top, sift over it onethird of the remaining cornstarch and begin to fold in as follows: Plunge rubbeer spatula down from top center of egg whites to bottom of bowl, bring to edge of bowl, then turn it as you lift it back up to the surface, thus bringing a bit of the chocolate up over the egg whites. Rapidly repeat the movement several times, rotating the bowl as you do so. Sift on half the rest of the cornstarch, continue with several rapid scoops of the spatula, then sift on the last of the cornstarch, and continue folding until blended. Entire folding process should take about a minute.

At once turn the batter into the two prepared cake pans; with a spatula run batter up the edge all around so cakes won't hump in the middle. Bang pans once. Bake in a preheated 350-degree

BRIDGE

Automatic signal may ruin defense

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Some bridge players fear that the curse of the gypsies will fall on their heads if they fail to signal high-low to show a doubleton. I have gone into this very carefully with the leading gypsies in the United States, and they all say that it has been years since they cursed anybody for this.

Opening lead — ♣ K

If East is afraid of the gypsies he begins a signal by playing the nine of hearts at the first trick. West obediently continues hearts since this is what the high-low tells him to do.

East can ruff the third heart, but then he is through. No matter what East returns, South can draw trumps and discard a diamond on dummy's last club or last heart.

SHOULD PLAY LOW

East should play his low heart at the first trick. Doubleton or no doubleton. East does not want a heart continuation. A high-low tells your partner to keep leading the same suit; and failure to high-low suggests a switch to a different suit.

West would naturally switch to a diamond, and East would get a trick with the king. East shifts back to hearts, and the defenders thus get two hearts, a diamond and a trump.

Use signals to tell your partner whether or not you want him to keep leading the same suit. Don't automatically tell your partner that you have a doubleton.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 1 NT, (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes. You hold: S-A8742; H-Q85; D-J10; C-AQ4. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three spades. This asks your partner to bid game in spades if he has three or more spades; but in notrump if he has only two spades.

Soviets buy more grain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is continuing its U.S. grain purchases, this time buying an additional 400,000 metric tons of corn.

It was the third Russian purchase in 24 hours, the Agriculture Department reported. The Soviets also bought 60,000 tons of corn and 100,000 tons of wheat.

The purchases are expected to offset a smaller than expected Russian harvest, estimated at 34 million tons, or 10 per cent less than U.S. experts had forecast.

Tourism growing China industry

By DAVID DAVIES
Agence France Presse

HONG KONG — For a country where there are no private cars, China has surprising traffic problems. On the outskirts of Canton during the evening rush-hour, serious traffic jams occur.

The composition of the stalled traffic is different from what is seen in nearby capitalist Hong Kong. Instead of Mercedes and Toyotas there are trucks, buses, tractors, strange little three-wheeled taxis and the Red Flag or Shanghai limousines reserved for senior cadres and official guests.

The drivers take the holdups philosophically, their impassive faces betraying little emotion.

The traffic problems seem to be caused by inadequate roads. In Canton itself traffic flows easily on the broad avenues around the Exhibition Hall but slows to a crawl in the older parts of the city near the Pearl River, dating from the 1920s.

Traffic jams even develop on the narrow two-lane country roads around Canton's White Clouds Airport. If a vehicle breaks down it immediately halts the traffic flow in one direction. Trucks, small tractors towing carts, buses, the occasional horse-drawn car and peasants pushing bicycles laden with huge burdens pile up in a long stationary queue stretching for a considerable distance.

Bicycles are, of course, the main means of transportation in urban areas, swishing along in an unending stream three or four deep.

The traveler accustomed to the frenetic pace of construction in Hong Kong and other major cities in the world is struck by the apparent lack of such activity in China, although a few cranes do stand out against the skyline.

Canton, which twice annually receives thousands of foreign businessmen attending the Trade Fair, has built a magnificent new railway station, a huge exhibition complex and several big hotels.

But the center of the city seems little changed from pre-liberation days. For the European or American visitor a visit to Shamian Island, where the foreign concessions used to be located, is a must.

The former houses of the Western Taipans (business magnates) are now occupied by Chinese familis and apparently divided up to make the maximum use of living space. The houses are all in need of paint but remain much as they must have looked in pre-liberation days. Beautiful Banyan trees lined the island's waterfront facing the broad Pearl River.

After Hong Kong's concrete jungle, Canton gives an impression of leafy boulevards and pleasant wooded parks. In the evenings a small biplane flies low over the district near the Exhibition Hall, spraying the trees with insecticide to kill mosquitoes.

Australian touring groups are numerous, mostly university students and their teachers or senior citizens. French and other European tourists are on the increase while the Japanese are also very much in evidence. One Japanese group encountered at the Great Wall of China drove out from Peking in a convoy of 25 buses.

China's hotel industry is still a long way bellow Western standards. Hotel rooms are generally adequate but beds tend to be hard and hot water supplies erratic. Service in hotel restaurants is slow and the sweet and sour sauce spilled on the table cloth during the evening meal is still there at breakfast next morning.

Air traffic is growing with China's acquisition of Boeing 707s and British Trident airliners to add to its Soviet-built fleet of Ilyushins and Anatanovs. But there are still only relatively few flights linking Peking and the various provincial capitals.

The railways have been given a face-lift with new concrete railway stations in such cities as Kweilin and Changsha where there are many foreign visitors. But many passenger trains are still being hauled by old-fashioned steam engines.

Peking is the high point of any China tour. The Great Wall, a few hours' drive from the capital, is still an awe-inspiring sight no matter how often one has seen it in pictures. The wall snakes its way over hills and mountains.

Another highlight is the Avenue of Animals on the way to the Ming tombs. In the middle of the countryside, the road is lined on both sides with life-size stone animals — horses, camels and elephants. Behind the animals there are trees on both sides of the road. Old China hands say that before the trees were planted the effect was even more striking as the stone animals stood out starkly on the treeless plain.

Among other places to visit are the Forbidden City — a staggering series of huge courtyards surrounded by traditional Chinese buildings with ornate curved roofs, the summer palace outside the city with its temples and huge lake, and Tien An Men Square in the city center.

Tien An Men Square is still a vast open space but its size has been much reduced by the building of a mausoleum housing the body of Chairman Mao Tse-tung. The building is in complete contrast with the traditional Chinese architecture of Tien An Men Gate and of the two other gates at the opposite end of the square.

Air Force officer's reinstatement ordered by appeals court justices

By TIMOTHY S. ROBINSON
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Court of Appeals here Wednesday ordered the reinstatement of an Air Force officer who was discharged after he said he would refuse to fire nuclear weapons on a civilian target.

In its apparently unprecedented 2-to-1 decision, the court said the proceedings that led to the dismissal of the lieutenant were improper and that he must be reinstated to active duty and paid $9,999.99 in back pay. The court also ordered the Air Force to reconsider its cancellation of his promotion to captain and to delete certain references to his position on nuclear weapons from his personnel record.

The ruling by U.S. Circuit Judges David L. Bazelon and J. Skelly Wright drew unusually harsh comment from fellow Circuit Judge Roger Robb, who said the ruling "violates the sound and established principle that it is not the business of the courts to run the military."

Robb said in a dissenting opinion that the courts had no rights to challenge the policy that "a soldier whose obedience to legal orders is qualified or selective has no place in the military."

The ruling could be appealed either to the full nine members of the U.S. Court of Appeals here or to the Supreme Court.

The case involved Lt. John H. VanderMolen, who was first assigned in Taiwan in 1967 as an intelligence officer involved in analyzing materials concering the People's Republic of China.

Three years later, he was transferred to a missile launch officer's course in Chanute AFB, Ill. In one of his early classes, an instructor asked VanderMolen and other students if they had any qualms about their work with nuclear missiles.

VanderMolen said it was at that time that he learned that the U.S. nuclear deterrent strategy may be in part premised upon the "extensive destruction of large population centers" and that the persons who launched the missiles might not know where they were aimed, the court said.

After counseling by his superiors refused to shake his belief, VanderMolen was removed from the program and reassigned to another Air Force unit. He said in his lawsuit that was the only action he expected as a result of his announced stand on nuclear weapons.

However, as the appeals court pointed out Wednesday, VanderMolen's Air Force career "began to slide precipitously," he was recommended for discharge and he received an honorable discharge over his protests.

The court ruled specifically Wednesday that the proceedings that led to VanderMolen's discharge were improper because he was not given the right to counsel, the right to a verbatim transcript and right to notification of specific allegations and other rights required by specific Air Force procedures. It did not rule on his claim that his constitutional rights were violated by the removal.

Mary Ballus, the attorney who represented VanderMolen before the appellate court, said the Air Force currently has a written policy that would permanently disqualify persons with beliefs similar to her client's from duty involving nuclear weapons.

She said that since his discharge, VanderMolen has attended law school and is currently an attorney in Alaska.

Robb said in his dissenting opinion Wednesday that he felt the Air Force was "entitled to discharge an officer who might refuse to obey a legal order, and I find no prejudicial defect in the discharge proceedings."

He charged the majority judges with having a "zeal to find something wrong with the discharge proceedings, so that this officer may be returned to duty."

Israel's 'unofficial' plans for Sadat visit under way

By DIAL TORGERSON
The Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — Israel Wednesday wrestled with the protocol paradox of how to greet a VIP guest who also happens to be the chief of state of an enemy nation.

Officially, the Israeli government is not yet making plans for the proposed visit of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. No one wants to be accused of premature enthusiasm if the trip falls through.

But the heads of the departments, officers, businesses, media and hostelries most likely to be affected by the visit admit they are making plans — or at least wondering how to make plans — for something which has never happened before, and which almost no one ever thought could happen at all.

Among the busiest was flag maker Yitzhak Berman, who, on speculation, was sewing Egyptian flags in his Jerusalem shop. No one has ordered any yet, but Berman says he can have 1,000 ready in a week. His shop is working overtime stitching the red, white and black banners.

"If he comes, and the Foreign Ministry orders them," he said, "then fine and good. If not, nothing will be lost. They will be snapped up by collectors."

The major Jerusalem hotels are already being swamped with reservations for visiting newsmen. Information officials who were talking Tuesday about perhaps 2,000 journalists, are now saying the Sadat visit might attract 4,000.

"Don't forget," said one government official, "there will presumably be journalists from the Arab world, too."

One U.S. news magazine, which has two men here permanently, was talking of bringing in 17 more. Television networks around the world were trying to book rooms for crews ranging from three to six people each.

It is, fortunately, a slack time in the hotel business here, coming before the December holiday rush. But several thousand guests would suddenly take up the slack. "We may have to put people in Tel Aviv and drive them up to Jerusalem in buses," an information official said. It is a one-hour drive from Tel Aviv to the capital.

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Less than a week before Secretary Cyrus R. Vance was to leave for South America the State Department recommended Wednesday that a license it held up for 19 months be granted to export nuclear fuel for Brazil's first atomic power plant.

The recommendation took most nuclear observers by surprise, partly because the State Department had given no signal it was coming, and partly because it is one of the few nuclear-fuel export licenses the State Department has acted on since the Carter administration came to power 10 months ago.

Still pending State Department approval are 32 licenses to export nuclear fuel to 12 countries. A few of the export applications are almost two years old.

The countries involved include Mexico, Belgium, France, West Germany, Japan, Sweden, Spain and The Netherlands.

Observers saw the State Department move as an offer of the olive branch to Brazil on the eve of Secretary of State Vance's trip to South America next week.

Vance leaves Monday for Argentina, then goes to Brazil on Tuesday and Venezuela Wednesday. The State Department's refusal to grant a nuclear-fuel export license had been a major issue in Brazil, crossing party lines and uniting most of the country against the United States.

So strained were relations between the U.S. and Brazil over the nuclear-fuel issue that when Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher went to Brazil last winter, he was snubbed by Brazilian diplomats. One minister canceled an appointment he had with Christopher, who on his way home went to the airport in Brazil without the customary diplomatic escort.

The export license involved is for uranium fuel to be used at a 626,000 kilowatt plant at Angra dos Reis, 120 miles southwest of Rio de Janeiro. The license application came in April, 1976, from Westinghouse Electric Corp. to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which passed it on to the State Department the same month.

The State Department held up the license, because Brazil has not signed the non-proliferation treaty prohibiting the spread of nuclear weapons, and because Brazil contracted with West Germany for a factory to reprocess plutonium from spent uranium fuel.

The keystone of the Carter administration's policy on the spread of nuclear weapons is against the extraction and use of plutonium, because it can be used to make nuclear weapons.

At least some observers see the granting of the export license as a concession by the United States to get Brazil to start talking about its plans for the plutonium factory that will be built for it by West Germany.

The United States has given up the idea that it might stop construction of the plutonium plant. What it wants to do now is to get Brazil to turn the plutonium plant into a "regional" reprocessing factory for spent fuel coming from atomic plants all over South America, including Argentina.

The plant the uranium is bound for is Brazil's first nuclear-power plant. It is expected to be ready to load the fuel in July of next year, and to begin generating electricity in September or October.

There is also the matter of a $200 million loan to Brazil from the U.S. Export-Import Bank for the plant's construction and for the purchase of the fuel.

State's recommendation that the Brazilian export license be granted does not automatically mean it will be. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission still must act on it before the uranium fuel is exported. An estimated 114,000 pounds of uranium worth more than $20 million is involved.

Sen. Gary Hart

Hart joins arms control speculators

By GEORGE C. WILSON
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Two weeks ago, former Deputy Defense Secretary Paul H. Nitze held a press conference on the latest arms control proposal President Carter has made to the Soviet Union.

Nitze presented a set a charts purporting to show how many missiles, bombers and warheads the United States and Soviet Union would each have left if the Carter proposals were carried out. The proposed new balance of terror would leave this country "in deep trouble," he declared.

A few days later, a high administration official held a so-called "backgrounder" to respond to Nitze. Under the rules of the backgrounder, the high official could not be named.

And this nameless high official told reporters he could not divulge the specific terms of the Carter proposals either. But reporters were assured these proposals would leave the United States and the Russians equal.

Wednesday, still another news conference was called on the SALT proposals, this one by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., who is a congressional adviser to the U.S. arms negotiators. Declaring he did not want to "leave the field to the opposition," Hart too said the U.S. proposals would be good for the country.

But Hart, like the unnamed official before him, said he was not at liberty to disclose what was actually in the arms proposals, adding he had cleared his prepared remarks with the Carter administration to make sure he was not letting out any secrets.

Helms opens firm

By BILL RICHARDS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Former ambassador to Iran Richard M. Helms has opened an international consulting firm here that he said Wednesday would concentrate on developing business interests in the United States for Iranian companies.

Helms, 64, also former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, said "I might be a go-between or represent Iranian interests who would want to do something in this country." He said he named his new consulting business the Safeer Co. because Safeer means "ambassador" in the Persian language of Farsi.

Helms was fined $2,000 and given a two-year suspended sentence Nov. 4 after he pleaded no contest in federal court here to two counts of failing to testify fully and accurately before a Senate committee considering his nomination to be ambassador to Iran in February, 1973.

The charges against Helms were related to his testimony on two occasions before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. He testified the CIA had not interfered in political affairs related to the late Chilean President Salvador Allende.

Helms' new role as prospective "go-between" for Iranian interests seeking business in the United States could possibly bring him into conflict with the U.S. regulations governing conflicts of interest for former federal employees.

The U.S. criminal code prohibits former government employees from taking part for at least one year in proceedings involving foreign individuals or corporations that might have fallen under their official responsibility.

SAM RENNICK

The Leningrad Seven

Religious slogans in English have appeared on several ambulances patrolling Leningrad, their driver apparently unaware they were openly publicizing the word of God, illegal in the Soviet Union. —United Press International

It was a dark, wintry November night in old Leningrad, and all good and sensible comrades were snug in their beds. Except at Leningrad University, where, in the foreign languages department, one light was burning. Dressed in black, with black greasepaint on their faces, and huddled furtively around Professor Tobakoff's desk were half a dozen students of both sexes. And Prof. Tobakoff.

"Tonight's target is the subway," the professor said, his voice low. "The motormen have been bribed. When they pull into the Tolstoy station, they will let their train sit 10 minutes, instead of the usual 30 seconds, in order that we may do with it what we will."

"What did you bribe the motormen with, professor?" a student asked. "Rubles?"

"Rubles shmoobles," Tobakoff said. "We all have rubles."

"What, then?"

"Apples, bananas, oranges," said the professor. "When, comrade, is the last time you had fresh fruit?"

"I have never had fresh fruit," the student replied.

"Precisely," Tobakoff said. "Now, I want you all to look at this." The professor produced a color photograph of a New York subway train. Every square inch of the exterior, not to mention the interior, was covered with graffiti.

"What's that, professor?" a student said.

"The New York subway," Tobakoff said.

"Razmoeytuv chertov?" ("Where's the train?")

"Speak English, comrade," Tobakoff said. "Don't forget this is an English class, at least occasionally."

"So where's the train?" the student said.

"The same place the Leningrad subway is going to be tomorrow morning," Tobakoff said. "Beneath the paint."

"Oh, that's grand," one of the female commandos said. "Are we going to write the same things they write in New York?"

"Don't be lewd, comrade," Tobakoff said. "We are going to continue our political campaign."

"But professor," another student protested, "if I write 'Brezhnev is a fink' so much as one more time I think I'll going crazy."

"I'll GO crazy," the student said.

"Correct," Tobakoff said, "and if losing your mind, which is already small, is the price you must pay, then so be it. Being a subversive in this country is no lark, comrade."

"It ain't exactly fun and games for them what obeys the law," another commando said. Tobakoff squirmed.

"Your English, comrade," he said, "is absolutely the worst, and you'd have failed this course long ago, I assure you, except that you can paint a mean streak." It was a fact Comrade Boris had singlehandedly and in less than a week's time inscribed in big baroque lettering 'Better Ded than Red' on every one of Leningrad's 2,000 taxis.

"If only you could have spelled it right, too," Tobakoff had said of the feat. Still, it was something.

"Professor, can I write 'Gromyko likes Chinese food' on the subway trains?" a commando asked.

"Of course, comrade, that's excellent," Tobakoff said. "Does he use chopsticks?"

"With a fork?" Tobakoff said.

"Might as well use your hands," said the student.

"Professor, you said you'd talk about the final exam tonight," another commando said.

"I was just coming to that," Tobakoff said. "You have all done well in Subversive English 101. Not an ambulance, not a bus, not a tram, not a cab in all Leningrad has not known your brush. After tonight, the same may be said of the subway, I'm sure. Which leaves just one fleet untouched. Who can guess what that is?"

"The Navy," Boris said.

"You are a nincompoop, Boris," Tobakoff said.

"Well, you said fleet," said Boris.

"Somebody else take a guess," said the professor.

"The police," said a commando.

"Precisely," Tobakoff said. "We are keeping the police busy, to be sure. Now, we are going to drive them mad. The final exam is to do to the police fleet what we have done to everyone else. When 'Brezhnev is a fink' and 'Gromyko likes Chinese food' appear on the side of every squad car in Leningrad, you will find your English professor most generous in his grading, I promise you."

ARTIST MICHAEL HOEYE, a former Midland resident, shows off two of his paintings, "Aerial View," left, and "Horizon," right, during a recent visit here. A graduate of Midland High School and Washington University, St. Louis, Hoeye now maintains a studio in New York City. His paintings are in corporate collections on the East and West coasts, and he is represented in numerous private collections. Hoeye will have a one-man show of his paintings in the spring at Midland College. (Staff Photo by Brian Hendershot)

The tombs date from the 2nd Century B.C. to the end of the 8th Century A.D.

The Han and T'ang murals make up an important new exhibition just unveiled in the Michener Gallery of The University of Texas. The gallery is located in UT's Harry Ransom Center at 21st and Guadalupe streets. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each Monday through Saturday, and from 1 to 5 p.m. each Sunday. There is no admission charge.

The murals present a variety of scenes, including those depicting horsemen and chariots, falconers, polo players, hunting scenes, court attendants, servant girls, shepherds, banquets, wrestlers and farm and nature scenes.

Sister carving career of her own

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — How does it feel being Dolly Parton's younger sister?

Stella Parton, a country music singer herself, is asked that almost every day she's on the road performing.

"I tell them it feels good," she said. "What more can I say?"

Stella, who has been to hairdresser's school, could spend a glamorous and exciting life working on sister Dolly's wondrous wigs. But she prefers a country music career of her own despite the dilemma of carving an identity separate from Dolly's.

She's making inroads on her sibling's spotlight. Her last single, "Danger of a Stranger," was a moderate hit in the United States and abroad. She also has recorded her second album, "Stella Parton Country Sweet," and recently began work on a third.

Her popularity has reached the point that Tammy Wynette called a West Palm Beach, Fla., radio station last spring while in Florida and requested one of Stella's songs.

But success has brought out detractors. She's capitalizing on her famous name, some say. Others speculate that Dolly has helped her.

The truth is that Stella has not asked her sister for favors and Dolly hasn't offered any.

"It wouldn't have been fair if I'd have asked her," said Stella, four years younger than Dolly.

They hardly ever see each other. They checked separately into the same Los Angeles hotel recently and neither knew the other was there. When they do get together, cooking, rather than careers, is a major topic of conversation.

Then there are the comparisons: singing style, appearance, everything. Stella regards the comparisons — disguised expectations of greatness — as compliments.

"I'm me and she's her," she said in an interview in her record company office. "Everybody is doing their own thing. There's room for both of us, but not for two Dollys."

She's shorter and slimmer than Dolly, appearing as fragile as a snowflake. Their voices are somewhat alike and both have dimples. While Dolly is enamored with wigs, Stella is fascinated by hats. She owns 200.

Like her sister, she moved to Nashville from her family home near the Smoky Mountains right after graduating from high school. Her first hit was "I Want To Hold You In My Dreams Tonight" in 1975 — 10 years after Dolly became famous. Five other releases followed.

'Romeo and Juliet' next from Dallas Civic Opera

DALLAS — The Dallas Civic Opera is preparing to raise the curtain on the second production of its new season.

Bellini's famous bel canto masterwork, "I Capuleti ed I Montecchi" (Romeo and Juliet) will be having its Southwestern premiere performances Friday, Sunday and next Tuesday.

Described as a masterful blend of passionate declaration and exquisite lyricism in the service of dramatic truth, the famous story of star-crossed lovers gains glorious operatic life through Bellini's musical inspiration. The drama is articulated in a series of closed numbers, arias, duets and two finales, encompassing a blend of lyrical and dramatic action.

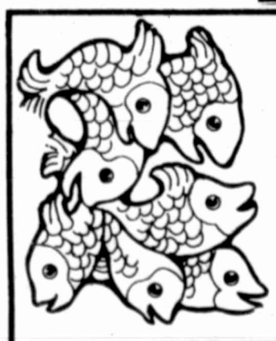

The DCO production will feature Marilyn Horne, one of the world's leading mezzos, in the "trouser role" of Romeo. Soprano Linda Zoghby, returning to Dallas after last year's triumphs in DCO's "Samson" and "La Boheme," will be seen and heard as Juliet. Joining them in the production will be Nicola Zaccaria as Capellio and Antonio Savastano as Tebaldo.

Friday's performance will be at 8 p.m., and the Sunday presentation will be at 2 p.m. The third and final performance on Tuesday will begin at 8. All will be in the Music Hall at Dallas' Fair Park.

Information on the availability of seating for the three performances may be obtained from the Dallas Civic Opera ticket office, 214-528-3200.

Two performances of popular show set

"The Sound of Music," one of the most popular musicals in American theatrical history, will have Friday and Saturday night performances in Lee High School auditorium.

ENTERTAINMENT

The production is a joint undertaking of the music, drama and art departments at LHS. Tickets, priced $2 for adults, $1 for students, will be for sale in the auditorium lobby before the 8 p.m. curtain each day.

"The Sound of Music," which starred Mary Martin as Maria and Theodore Bickel as Capt. Von Trapp in the original Broadway version, has since been in productions throughout the world and was made into an immensely successful motion picture, starring Julie Andrews as Maria.

The LHS production features Suzy Graham as Maria and Eddie Pleasant as Capt. Von Trapp. Other pivotal cast members are Jim LaFontaine, Chris LaFontaine, Liz Shrode and Terri Taylor. LHS choral students are in supporting roles.

The production is staged by Horace Griffin, drama director at LHS. Douglas Browne, director of choral activities at the school, will be on the podium to conduct the orchestra, which was rehearsed by band director Van Ragsdale. The sets for the show were designed and constructed by LHS art students.

'Madame Butterfly' opens season

FORT WORTH — For more than 70 years, the delicate and deeply moving story of Butterfly and her love for a young American naval officer has touched opera audiences around the world.

"Madama Butterfly," Puccini's melodic masterwork, will open the Fort Worth Opera's 32nd season, with performances scheduled Friday night and Sunday afternoon in Tarrant County Convention Center theater.

This will be the seventh "Butterfly" production given under the aegis of the Fort Worth Opera Association. The opera organization has produced the work in five of its previous 31 seasons, and once sponsored the opera when it was presented by the NBC touring company in 1956.

Fort Worth's most recent production of the tragic story of the pretty young geisha and the American naval officer for whom she waited in vain, was in the 1973 season. That production was so well received that talented young soprano Atsuko Azuma, who sang the title role, was invited to return to Fort Worth to star in the 1977 production.

Miss Azuma, a petite, Japanese-born singer who has sung Butterfly at the Metropolitan Opera and at Milan's La Scala, will be joined in the upcoming performances by Vasile Moldoveanu who, at the time he was signed for the Fort Worth production, was still unknown in the U. S. Since that time, the Romanian-born tenor has made his debut with the Met on tour and has been signed by several major regional opera companies, including those of Houston, Connecticut and Washington, D. C. Moldoveanu will be in the role of Lt. Pinkerton.

Other pivotal cast members of the Fort Worth production include baritone Ronald Hedlund of the San Francisco Opera, as Sharpless; mezzo Hilda Harris as Suzuki; tenor Douglas Perry as Goro and bass Edward Baird, singing both the roles of Prince Yamadori and the Bonze.

"Butterfly" is the opening production of Fort Worth's 1977-78 season, a season which also will offer productions of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," Mussorgsky's "Boris Godunov" and Strauss' "Die Fledermaus." The season will continue through next April.

Season subscriptions for the four-production series are still available, offering savings of 25 per cent over single ticket prices, and also giving purchasers the guarantee of of obtaining the same seats next season to see and hear famed diva Beverly Sills in "The Barber of Seville."

Season tickets range in price from $12 to $45, depending on seat locations. Special student-teacher subscriptions are available in certain locations of the theater, priced $10 to $20.

The season subscriptions may be ordered through the Fort Worth Opera Association offices at 3505 W. Lancaster, Fort Worth 76107, telephone 817-731-0833.

Single tickets for the upcoming performances of "Butterfly" will be for sale at the Convention Center theater box office before curtain time Friday night and Sunday afternoon. The Friday performance will begin at 8 p.m. and the Sunday presentation is scheduled for 2:30.

Culp has own success—of sorts

By JACQUELINE TRESCOTT
The Washington Post

Just 10 years ago Robert Culp and Bill Cosby were at the height of their popularity, whamming their way through a series of complex mysteries as two U.S. undercover agents in the television drama, "I Spy."

Culp masqueraded as an international tennis champion; Cosby as his trainer-masseur. On the set, Culp always got the lady; in real life, Cosby got the awards—Emmys for the best dramatic actor three years in a row.

Where is Robert Culp? Busy in his home in Beverly Hills, pursuing, he says, "the high-rolling career of writer and director." Generally, he adds, living the good life with his fourth wife, Sheila Sullivan, and his four children. "Right now I am looking at a bookcase that's about eight feet tall and has nine projects in various stages. That represents the last five years' work," says Culp.

Over the telephone Culp sounds very positive about his career, but periodically a wistfulness seeps through, almost as if he heard the Hollywood writer say, "Culp? He's sort of dropped out of sight." At one point, Culp says, "to do all these things, write, interest the producers, sell the property, a man should be 25, every energy is needed, but I enjoy what I do."

Now 47, Culp hasn't had a smash hit on television since "I Spy," which ran from 1965 to 1968, or in the movies since "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice" in 1969. He has worked regularly, appearing in a few episodes of "Police Story," "The Name of the Game" and "Colombo." In 1975 he starred in "A Cry for Help," a made-fortelevision movie about a disc jockey and a potential suicide. It was nominated for an Emmy.

A few years ago he did direct and star in, with Cosby, an adventure movie called "Hickey and Boggs." Says Culp, "It became a cult film, not Culp. It didn't earn me a nickel but the folks on the campuses like it and it is used in several film courses."

The rapport of Culp and Cosby grew into a real friendship that continues. Culp says he wasn't jealous when Cosby walked away with the awards. "No, I was the proudest man around," he says.

In the spring of 1968, when Martin Luther King Jr. was shot, Culp and Cosby went to Memphis and joined the marching garbage workers whom King had been helping. After the funeral, Culp recalls, "Bill,Sidney (Poitier) and I were sitting around, talking about what we could do. I decided to do a film on the Southern Christian Leadership Conference's Operation Breadbasket.

ODESSA — The Globe of the Great Southwest has initiated its annual patron drive in preparation for the theater's 1978 membership year.

The new season will be launched in the early part of 1978 with a production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's famous and beloved musical, "The Sound of Music."

The 10th annual Summer Shakespeare Festival next June through August will present two famous Shakespearean works, "Othello" and "Love's Labours Lost," plus a Moliere comedy, "Tartuffe."

Continuing the season in early fall will be a comedy classic, "Charley's Aunt," and the premiere production of a new stage work, "The House of Saul," by Agnes Sanford will conclude the season next November.

Parents' 'liberal trip' part of playwright's lifestyle

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — Sudden Broadway success isn't making Roberto Athayde rush to return to writing.

"I haven't written a word in three years," says the young Brazilian. "I feel I have nothing I want to say. My creative head is now in other things."

Such talk isn't typical of dramatists. They usually proclaim two or three projects in gestation. But non-conformity is Athayde habit.

"There was absolute freedom in my family," he says of his Rio de Janeiro origin. "They were all on a very liberal trip and I could always do what I wanted."

The Main Stem spotlight is on him now because of "Miss Margarida's Way," an odd, abrasive experiment in audience involvement at the Ambassador Theater.

The play, in which Estelle Parsons is the lone paid performer, concerns a domineering grade school teacher who indulges in sensual neurotic fantasies while cajoling and browbeating the audienceturned-pupils. Athayde himself directed.

The production began OffBroadway at the same theater where "A Chorus Line" started, and like that show developed word-of-mouth enthusiasm which lifted it into another midtown moneymaker for producer Joseph Papp.

Athayde (pronounced Ah-tahee'-day) wrote it six years ago when he was 21. Since then the play has had more than 50 productions in 25 countries.

"Everyone would like to dominate everyone and have total power," is his explanation of the show's wide appeal.

"I try to force people to recognize her in themselves and at the same time provoke them into hating her."

"Of course it can be understood as a metaphor of political dictatorship," says Athayde. "In Brazil they did a little cutting in an arbitrary pattern that didn't really hinder what it said." It was banned in Argentina.

He's staying away from his homeland right now, however, for a different reason: his wife is suing for alimony and divorce. That soured romance turned him off to any other alliance "to an extent, at least for a while."

"I have become more and more interested in directing and in making a movie," a tendency possibly intensified by awareness that "some of my plays are extremely peculiar and most guaranteedly noncommercial."

Tryouts begin tonight

The first of two tryout sessions to fill roles in "A Christmas Carol" will be held tonight at Midland Theatre Centre, 2301 W. Indiana Ave.

The dramatization of Charles Dickens' beloved Christmas tale will have a series of apecial performances in mid-December. The production is made possible by a grant to Midland Community Theatre from the Mobil Foundation Inc.

MCT director Rick Schiller, who will stage and direct the production, said adults as well as young people will be used in the cast. All interested persons in the community and surrounding area have been invited to come and read for parts in the production.

Tonight's auditions will begin at 7:30 p.m. A second audition session will take place at Theatre Centre at 3 p.m. Sunday.

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Carter led an all-out embrace Wednesday of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's projected visit to Israel, to dispel any impression of a grudging attitude toward the move which caught his administration by surprise.

Carter called Sadat's decision "very courageous," "unprecedented," and "constructive." A State Department spokesman labeled it "imaginative, constructive and helpful." A senior official termed it "a historical, psychological breakthrough."

At the same time, the president said, "No one knows what will happen," as "It's an unpredictable thing, but I believe it's a step in the right direction."

The administration, in sum, was elaborately revising its original skepticism of a week ago that the Sadat offer was only a dramatic gesture. Its significance can be huge, U.S. officials now fully agree, but the diplomatic interaction is wholly unpredictable.

"Clearly this is a dynamic change in the situation," State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III said Wednesday.

In non-diplomatic terms, that means the entire administration, along with other nations, is now highly unsure what the impact will be on the nearly year-long U.S. push for a new Geneva conference on the Middle East. It would be composed of Israel; all its Arab war adversaries (Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Lebanon); Palestinian representative still undefined, and the United States and the Soviet Union.

The Carter administration put its prime emphasis on sustaining its Geneva conference diplomacy in the immediate wake of Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin's quick acceptance on Monday of Sadat's specific offer to visit Israel. The Sadat initiative, while welcomed, must not be a substitute for Geneva, officials said.

That continues to be the basic U.S. diplomatic approach. Administration planners, however, do not want to appear to denigrate the undisputed significance of a first-time visit of an Arab head of state to Israel.

Psychologically, administration officials see the implications of such a visit as profoundly beneficial — provided it does not backfire badly. Diplomatically, it is the equivalent of introducing a wild card into a poker game which can change the value of everyone's hand, including Sadat's, in a manner which no one can predict.

Sadat, the U.S. official said, in presenting an all-Arab stand when he goes to Israel, runs the risk of over-stating a hard position, and antagonizing the Israelis, to avoid being accused of under-cutting militant Arab demands. Sadat in any event will call for total Israeli withdrawal from all war-won territory and creation of a Palestinian state, both roundly opposed by Israel, Egyptian diplomats emphasize.

At the opposite pole, the U.S. official noted, Sadat has the risk of understating the all-Arab demands, in the search for compromise with Israel, and exposing himself to charges of a sell-out from Abab militants.

If Sadat can surmount that double hazard, the American source said, then he could inject new life into the faltering drive for a reconvened Geneva conference.
