Six Army Fliers Die In Brooks Field Plane Crash

Official Inquiry Into Sinking Of Vestris Is Ordered

Two Shiploads Of Survivors Arrive To Tell Stories

Charges of Inefficiency, Indecision and Delay Almost Unanimous Against Ship Captain

108 Die In Waves

Survivors Give Many Causes For Ship's Sinking; To Probe Tragedy Today; Ships Coming In.

(By Associated Press) NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Two shiploads of survivors of the Lamport and Mott liner Vestris arrived today to unfold details of one of the most horrible of maritime disasters.

An official inquiry has been ordered, based upon their almost unanimous charges of inefficiency, indecision and delay against Capt. William J. Carey and his crew.

Blame Is Made Interspersed in narratives of heroism—and of brutality—of narrow escape and of suffering, invariably appeared assertions that if proper steps had been taken by the ship's executives and crew, most if not all of the 108 now dead would be alive.

Even with the 800 call to long-dead, efficient handling of the Vestris life-saving equipment by those responsible would have brought most of the 108 out of danger, declared survivors today—48 full hours after the Vestris plunged off Virginia.

These are charges which United States Attorney Tuttle announced that he will begin to investigate tomorrow. But Captain Carey himself will never be called to answer them.

Captain Jumps Into Sea For after saving the women and children under his care drenched in a boiling sea from shattered lifeboats, his passengers and crew leaped.

Actress Shot On Rochester Stage

California Woman Dies Of Bullet Wound As She Starts On; Shooting Is Accident, Belief

(By Associated Press) ABILENE, Nov. 14.—Mrs. Gene Gladstone, 42, Pullerton, Cal., actress, fell tonight in a theatre at Rochester, Fla., county, near here, a revolver in hand, and a bullet in her heart, as she started to walk on the stage. Members of the cast said she apparently tripped and fell, discharging the pistol accidentally.

Fisher county authorities questioned members of the troupe, who thought the pistol, a "prop," was loaded and believed the shooting was inadvertent.

Mrs. Gladstone died almost instantly.

Members Are Appointed To Work Out Highway Plan

AUSTIN, Nov. 14. (P)—Governor Moody said today that at least 25 of the 31 members of the state advisory highway commission which will work out a program of highway legislation for the 41st legislature have been appointed.

CITY HANGARS Are Predicted

EDGEWATER GULF HOTEL, Miss. Nov. 14. (P)—The airport of the future will be operated just like a modern downtown city garage, Major Frank M. Kennedy of the army air corps declared today in an address before the American Institute of Steel Construction.

Major Kennedy, who, as the official observer of the United States army, crossed the Atlantic in the dirigible ZR-1, now in Los Angeles, predicted airplanes would be taxed up to the morning up line at the storage hangar and the pilot could be given a check for the day by the hangar superintendent.

Tragedy Lights And Shadows

(By Associated Press) Here and there in the stories told by the Vestris survivors were little human incidents that sparkled brightly against the background of terror, distress and death.

Ocean Is Austere Host The ocean is an austere host, especially to men and women suddenly introduced to it after enjoying cozy quarters aboard ship. But it might have treated the Vestris survivors more severely than it did. The steamer sank in the Gulf stream, and passengers and crew were unanimous in saying that the water in which many spent long hours of waiting was really warm. Some even preferred to hang over the sides of lifeboats for the ocean was warmer than the air.

There was one horrible drawback to that sharks' school of these voracious creatures of the deep seemed to come from nowhere—as they always do—and many were the bodies they mutilated.

Can't Forget Oyedol No man or woman who went through the ordeal will forget last Monday night. Thunder, lightning and rain added to the terrors of these human beings plighted. And then there were the searchlights of the rescue fleet which the Vestris radio had summoned. Long, slender white fingers groped through the darkness—friendly hands seeking to extend aid, but missing those who needed succor so badly. Many passengers testified that the realization of aid tantalizingly near, yet never quite finding the little boats and human forms bobbing among the waves, brought despair.

Women and Children First Of course it was "women and children first" when Captain William J. Carey gave the order to abandon ship. The Vestris carried 37 women and 13 youngsters, some of them babies. But the two boats into which they were loaded crashed against the side of the ship as they were being lowered into the sea, spilling and crushing the occupants. How many lives were lost in this disaster within a disaster is not known, but some placed the number at thirty.

Survivors criticized Captain Carey for his delay in summoning aid and in lowering the boats, but none denied that he did his best. Captain Carey and his second steward, Alfred Duncan, were standing on the tilted deck as passengers and crew struggled with the boats. The Vestris was listing to starboard.

Lubbock Building Is Near 3 Million

Only $18,181 in building permits is needed for Lubbock to reach the grand total of $3,000,000 for this year, it was revealed Wednesday, when the issuance of a $10,000 permit to J. B. Massey for a new store building was made. With this permit this month's total is placed at $44,830, while that for the year is now $2,981,919. It is believed the three million dollar mark will be exceeded before this month has passed.

Mr. Massey's permit calls for a one-story brick store building, 70 by 30 feet in dimensions, to be located at 2335 Avenue Y.

CITY DADS TAKE RIDE

The Beaumont Commissioners Consider Airport

BEAUMONT, Nov. 14. (P)—The Beaumont city commission held a session today in the cabin of a monoplane while the plane was 1200 feet above the city. Discussion of a new 240 acre airport was held, while the city fathers looked down at their domain. A resolution calling for the purchase of the new tract was read.

SLATON GETS RAIN

One-Inch Fall Recorded There Tuesday Night

(Special To Avalanche) SLATON, Nov. 14.—One inch of rain fell here Tuesday night, causing delay to cotton picking and injury to opening cotton. Farmers would welcome continued dry weather as an aid to harvesting of crops.

Coast Destroyers Remain On Watch For More Bodies

Manning, Masoutin and Modoc Patrol Spot of Ill-fated Liner for More Survivors or Dead

Jap Consul Found

Little Hope Given That Any Other Survivors Are Yet Alive; Jap Consul Is Found On Waves

(By Associated Press) NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 14.—Only three sturdy coast guard destroyers remained tonight out of the fleet of rescue craft which had kept watch off the Virginia Capes in the hope of finding survivors or bodies from the foundered steamer Vestris.

They were the Manning, Masoutin and Modoc. The coast guard headquarters had ordered them to keep up their vigil until every hope of further rescue efforts had been abandoned.

Because of boiler damage from the heavy seas the destroyer Shaw was ordered to return to New York tonight by coast guard headquarters and she bore to that port the bodies of five victims, including one identified as that of Major Yoshio Inoue, who was enroute to Buenos Aires to assume the Japanese consulate. Major Inoue's wife had been saved by the battleship Wyoming.

Four other coast guard destroyers which were on the scene—the Davis, Wilkes, Tucker, and Ascutt—were ordered today back to their home bases. The Tucker is returning to New York with seven bodies.

Dumas Fails To Appear at Austin

Lubbock Man Cannot Be Located, Although Attorney Says He Had Misunderstood Trial Date

(By Associated Press) AUSTIN, Nov. 14.—J. H. Dumas of Lubbock, whose two $2,500 bonds were forfeited in district court Monday when he failed to appear in answer to charges of murder and conspiracy to murder in an alleged "dead bank robber reward frame-up" had not appeared here tonight.

Warren Moore, attorney for Dumas, who was in Houston today said the latter had misunderstood when he was to appear for trial here, and that he had instructed Dumas to report to State Ranger Captain Frank Hamer.

Hamer's Seen Him "I haven't seen anything of him," Captain Hamer said.

The ranger officer went before the Upton county grand jury which indicted Dumas and Carl "Red" Woods who is in jail here now.

Moore said Dumas had understood that he was to report here November 24 and related that he had been "working for the Liberty county sheriff."

Paul A. Dana, representative of the Radio Corporation of America in South America and passenger on the Vestris, and Mrs. Clara Ball, a stewardess on the Vestris, were called the pluckiest pair he had ever seen by Captain Schuyler Cummings of the American ship, who rescued them. They had been floating in the water for 22 hours at the time of their rescue.

Dana tells his story of the floundering and the subsequent hours of terror in the following story.

Texas Convict Is Shot Attempting To Make Escape

Guard's Bullets Down W. C. Folsom On State Prison Farm; Tried Escape Before; Probe To Be Made

(By Associated Press) HUNTSVILLE, Nov. 14.—W. C. Folsom, a prisoner at the state penitentiary here, was shot to death today when he attempted to escape from guards at the Gore state prison farm, south of Huntsville, where he was working on a well.

Folsom, with two other prisoners, were taken to Gore farm, where women prisoners are kept, earlier in the day by Guard Arthur Thomas from the state penitentiary here.

The convicts returned to work, but after a few moments, Folsom started walking toward Gus Grey, dog sergeant at the Gore farm. Grey ordered him to stop, but Folsom walked on, cursing the guard, and shouted: "I don't have to stop. Go ahead and shoot."

Was Carrying Tobacco Grey fired from the hip, one bullet striking Folsom in the neck and another in the chest. The convict died a few minutes later.

The guards found that Folsom was carrying a handful of tobacco, and said he probably intended to throw it in Grey's eyes and make another dash for freedom.

Prison officials said evidence in the shooting will be presented to the grand jury here.

County Lake Gets New Fish Supply

About 1,500 fish, including black bass, crappies, bream, goggle-eyed perch and rock bass, were placed in the Lubbock county park lake, east of town, Wednesday, by N. A. Payne, county commissioner, and W. J. Harper, representative of the state game hatchery.

The stock of fish was furnished by the state, most of the finny tribes members being small, but some fairly large size. Another supply of game fish was taken to Levelland, also, for stocking a lake there.

Famed Master Visits City On Golden Jubilee Tour

John Philip Sousa's travel experiences have not all been as the director of Sousa's Band. Long before he began touring the United States and other nations of the world with his own concert band, he journeyed for a while as orchestra leader for light companies and dramatic theatrical companies. Therefore, he knows the "mysteries of the road" from another angle than that of appearances on the concert stage, similar to the one he makes at the Tech Gym this afternoon and tonight.

And he traveled differently, in the days when he conducted orchestras from the pit, than he does now. When he arrives in Lubbock this morning, at 11:45 o'clock, from Amarillo, he comes aboard his special train, prepared for transporting his large personnel of instrumentalists, soloists, their instruments and baggage. As an indication of the immense cost for this organization to travel, the Tech College has guaranteed Mr. Sousa $2,000 for his stop here.

Is Golden Jubilee Tour Sousa's tour of the country this season is called his Golden Jubilee Tour, commemorating his fiftieth year as a conductor and the thirty-sixth annual tour of his world-famous band.

Some of the features of his two concerts here are instrumental novelties by a sextette of flutes, a triple octet of clarinets, a sextette of trombones; Miss Marjorie Moody, soprano; soloist, Miss Winifred Bambrick, harpist; Howard Golden, xylophone; Edward J. Heney, saxophone; Noble P. Howard, euphonium; Edmund Wall, clarinet; William Tong, cornet, and Jay G. Sims, trombone.

Following the matinee performance, Mr. Sousa will judge a high school band contest, in which several high school bands from South Plains cities will compete. Tech College is giving a beautiful silver loving cup to the winner. After the contest a musical band, composed of all visiting band musicians, will play a selection, which Sousa will direct.

All Lubbock school children will be admitted to the matinee for 50 cents, including reserved seats. Among special numbers to be

Negro Gets Death For Robbery Case

Silas Jorman Gets Quick Verdict from Jury; Must Face Trial for Attack On Cook County Woman

(By Associated Press) SHERMAN, Nov. 11.—Death in the electric chair awaiting him for robbery with firearms of Mrs. R. H. Haasemphill, Silas Jorman, Houston negro, still must face trial for an alleged attack on the same woman.

A jury here today after six minutes deliberation convicted Jorman of the robbery charge and set his penalty at electrocution. Criminal assault charges still are pending against him for an alleged attack on Mrs. Haasemphill in her home near Valley View.

Mr. and Mrs. Haasemphill were the major witnesses in the robbery trial.

Baptists Ban Loud Speaker

MINERAL WELLS, Nov. 14. (P)—The loud speaker may be all right for weak-voiced lecturers, but Texas Baptist preachers have no need of such aids. This was demonstrated here today at the Pastors' and Laymen's conference preceding the Texas Baptist general convention. When those on the program became "warmed up" to their subjects frequent adjustments were necessary because of the loud tones in which the ministers spoke.

Finally, after Rev. Elmer Ridgeway of San Angelo had spoken. The instrument was removed. It may have seen its last service in a Baptist convention.

Resolution For Bringing Baptists Together Defeated

"Peace Council" Fails In Dallas; B. J. Albritton Elected President And Lamesa Gets 1929 Meet

(By Associated Press) DALLAS, Nov. 14.—A move intended to bring the Baptist Missionary Association of Texas and the Baptist General convention back into one organization after a separation of 28 years failed today when the Missionary Association, meeting here, voted to table a resolution calling for a "peace council" of representatives of the two groups.

Vote Follows Debate The vote came after prolonged debate.

The resolution was introduced by the Rev. Allen O. Binkle of Lockhart. It asked that a mass meeting be called of all Baptist churches in Texas to discuss a settlement of differences and effect a reconciliation.

Had the resolution been adopted by the missionary organization it was planned to bring it before the Baptist general convention now in session at Mineral Wells.

Closes Break The movement was intended to close a breach in the Baptist constituency of Texas which resulted

HYPER FLIGHT

1228 By NEA Service Inc. AUTHOR OF "WHEN A GIRL LOVES" "LOVE FOR TWO"

THIS HAS HAPPENED: JERRY RAY thinks that here is a delusion and decides to marry for money. Her plans for a vacation at Atlantic City are spoiled by the loss of the money she had denied herself to save. Nothing remains but to go camping with her roommate MYRTLE on the north shore of Long Island.

Their camp is wrecked when an airplane owned by ALESTER CARSTAIRS crashes into it. The others escape injury, but Jerry is knocked up unconscious by DAN HARVEY, the pilot. Alester drives her to the doctor, who finds that her injury is not serious.

On the way back, Alester stops at an inn for dinner and seems amused when Jerry refuses a drink. He introduces her to LEONTINE LEBAUDY, who invites them to a big party. Alester shows Jerry a gay time during her two weeks' vacation and tells her that he loves her madly but does not ask her to marry him. Myrtle warns her against him, but a letter from her mother revealing poverty and illness decides her to continue her efforts to win Alester. But how will she be able to purchase a suitable frock for the party he has invited her to.

Unable to borrow enough from Myrtle to buy the new gown, Jerry gave way to the temptation to take a last tunic from the store where she worked for the evening—intending to slip it back in stock the next morning before it could be missed.

Alester gave her arches to wear, so that her appearance satisfied her but Leontine and her friends taunted her into drinking. Her dancing partner, urged by a jeering crowd, throws her in the pool to bring her in. Dan appears and drags her out after knocking her abductor down. He wants to take her home but Alester calls him "imprudent" and takes her home himself. Jerry is in a panic when she realizes what has happened to the store gown—especially when Myrtle tells her that there is a special detective watching the stock that week.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI
Jerry's knees nearly caved in under her as the meaning of Myrtle's words became clear.

"I didn't steal it," Myrtle said, whispering like a frightened child. "I just borrowed it."

"Yes," Myrtle agreed. "It looks like it. That's the way people treat borrowed things all right. For Pete's sake take it off before you stand there and shake to death."

Jerry did not move. Her eyes were wide and set. To Myrtle she looked as if she was petrified with fear.

"Here," she said and began to pull the dress from Jerry's shoulders. It dropped and lay in a heap on the floor at Jerry's feet. Out of it Myrtle ordered and Jerry mechanically obeyed. Then she forced Jerry to remove the rest of her soggy garments, rubbing her bristly afterward with a bath towel.

"Now get into bed," she said, thrusting Jerry's nightgown into her hands.

"You'd better tell me all about it," she said later when she crawled in beside Jerry, who lay with her face buried in her arms on the pillow.

Jerry told her, in snatches of words broken by gasps which suppressed sobs drove from her tortured throat. Myrtle remained silent until Jerry came to the pool incident. Then she threw an arm over Jerry and sought to comfort her.

"Maybe it isn't as bad as it looks," she said hopefully. "If they let you get away with it, I guess it means they didn't see you take it."

"But I can't return it now," Jerry moaned despairingly. "And if I don't I'm a thief."

Myrtle considered. "Can't you get the money to pay for it?" she asked.

Jerry shook her head against Myrtle's shoulder.

As they talked on into the night without reaching a solution of Jerry's problem, the conviction that she must return the dress and make a full confession or expose herself to the charge of theft, became more palpably planted in her mind.

And there was the dreadful possibility that she wouldn't be allowed to tell the truth—that it was known already that she had taken the tunic.

By morning she was pale and hollow-eyed. Myrtle looked at her with worry in her eyes.

"Brace up, kiddo," she said encouragingly. "Mr. Barlow is big-hearted. I guess you'd better make a clean breast of it to him. Tell him the same as you did to me last night. Maybe they'll let you make it up out of your pay, or they might even wait and hold it out the next time they hand us the commissions."

Her words cheered Jerry a little. She gathered up the ruined tunic and inspected it with the faint hope that it could be cleaned and then returned. She had considered this possibility during the night.

That hope died instantly. A jagged rip was discovered in the delicate lace. It must have caught on the edge of the pool when Dan pulled her out, Jerry thought.

She wrapped it up in some crumpled tissue paper from a shoe box and put it in her felt bag. She could show Mr. Barlow how she had carried it away from the store.

The urge to make full confession and the desire to get it over with at once drove her to wait outside the door leading to the manager's private office long before nine o'clock.

"Whoa, and you up here?" his secretary asked when she saw her there.

"No one it's . . . personal," Jerry said.

"What's back to back to you?" she asked and permission to step in.

"You'll be late," his secretary warned Jerry as he passed into the inner office.

"It doesn't matter," Jerry answered tensely. "Please tell him I want to see him about something very important. Right away please."

The secretary was touched by the appeal in her voice and manner. "All right," she said. "But I doubt if he will see you now."

"He must, he must," Jerry cried; "ask him."

The secretary gave her a closely scrutinizing look and followed Mr. Barlow into his private office.

"There's a girl out here who seems nearly distracted about something," she said gravely. "I think you'd better see her. Mr. Barlow, there's nothing on your appointment list that can't wait until nine-twenty."

Mr. Barlow lifted keen, understanding eyes to her face.

"Send her in, Miss Stahl," he said.

In less than a minute Jerry stood before him, twisting her fingers spasmodically about the old felt bag in her hands.

"What's your name?" Mr. Barlow inquired as he watched her from under bent, concentrated brows.

"Miss Ray—Jerry Ray," she answered swiftly.

"Sit down, Miss Ray," he motioned to a chair by his desk. Jerry took it, sitting bolt upright.

"Now, what do you want to see me about," he went on, trying to make it easier for her with his kindly accents. He had seen women on the verge of panic before . . . he wanted especially shoplifters . . . he wanted to avoid a scene of that kind.

Jerry thrust the felt bag toward him, over his mahogany desk. "It's in there," she said gaspingly; "a tunic. I took it. Oh, I didn't steal it, Mr. Barlow. I just wanted to wear it once—it wouldn't have been missed."

Mr. Barlow leaned over the desk and took up the felt bag. Jerry caught her breath when he began to open it. He lifted out the tunic without a word and unfolded it.

"It . . . I . . . had an accident," Jerry said weakly. "It's ruined, I guess, but I'll pay for it if you'll let me."

Mr. Barlow turned his attention to her.

"This is a very serious matter, Miss Ray," he said quietly. "I hope you realize that."

"Yes, yes, I do," Jerry cried. "but I didn't dream that it would turn out like this. There's lots of used things brought back to the store. I was so very careful until . . . until they threw me . . . until I had the accident."

Mr. Barlow reached out and put a soothing hand on her arm to quell her rising hysteria.

"Don't be frightened," he said. "Just tell me the truth. You'd better begin at the beginning. I think."

He was familiar enough with human nature to know that a girl with Jerry Ray's fine record had not taken merchandise from the store without an urgent reason.

Jerry tried to tell him something of her need. But it soon became apparent to her that Mr. Barlow did not consider her explanation satisfactory. There wasn't much excuse she knew, for virtually stealing a dress merely for the express purpose of wearing it to a party.

She groped for new words to make him understand.

"You see I . . . I . . . I couldn't let my friend down . . . oh, Mr. Barlow, sometimes a girl just has to have a party dress! You don't know what it means to have everything in your life depending upon a dress and yet not have the money to pay for it . . . she broke off, scanning his face in forlorn hope.

"But you spoke a while ago of paying for this tunic," Mr. Barlow reminded her. "How will you do that if you hadn't the money yesterday to pay for it?"

A great deal—far more than she guessed—depended upon Jerry's answer. Mr. Barlow knew that girls who attended parties at roadhouses often received expensive favors, sometimes with hundred-dollar bills tucked into them. If one of his girls . . .

"I haven't any money," Jerry said helplessly. "but I can live on half my wages, somehow until the tunic is paid for."

Mr. Barlow's face showed his relief.

"I'd like to let you do that, Miss Ray," he said pityingly. "but the discipline we must maintain here forbids it. In fact I should not like it to become known throughout the establishment that we are letting you off so easily."

Jerry fastened her eyes upon him in mute suspense.

"We can't keep you with us," he went on. "You can see the bad effect it would have upon any employee who might be tempted to do as you did."

He looked away from her.

"In a store that employs thousands of girls we can't be too careful . . . but I shall not insist that you reimburse us for our loss," He pressed a button.

"Miss Stahl will see that you get the money due you and at the proper time you will receive whatever you have earned in commissions."

Mr. Barlow did not look at her again.

Jerry rose and passed out the door.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

THE PRICE OF BEAUTY IS NOT PROHIBITIVE

The first thing I'm going to do for you, my dear M. J. B., is to tell you that I think that it's nothing short of criminal for a woman of your age, or ten years your senior, for that matter, to look as badly as you say you do.

Of course, I'm assuming that you are writing the letter to me. You tell me you are "aged beyond your years" and "haggard and old looking." I know just how easy it is to look one bit less good looking than it can be. You don't have to be pretty, M. J. B. Stop wishing for the unattainable, and take a beauty inventory of yourself. Your face doesn't have to be pretty according to the standards of the artist. Your nose doesn't have to be perfectly straight, or your eyes deep, dark and lovely. What you have to do is look alive, interested, well-groomed and well cared for.

Well, to begin the cure, you want to take your cultivating the "up-lift" habit. Keep your head up. Stretch those lazy chin muscles until the fatty tissues in your face are well defined.

It will prove an excellent beginning, and it will aid in the other treatments I am going to suggest to you.

If you take my advice, you will set aside a definite time night and morning for your home beauty treatment. Not when you arise—I know perfectly well the hurry and rush that attends the early morning hours, and any treatment you give yourself when you are tense and nervous will prove quite hopelessly second-rate in results. Isn't there a quarter of an hour just before lunch time that you could call your own and keep just for the one purpose of coaxing your face back to youthfulness?

At night it isn't so difficult. Ten minutes can always be added to your bath hour, even if it does take ten minutes away from bed. It will be well worth it in the long run.

Suppose you can't buy bleaching cream. Surely, there isn't a woman alive who doesn't know about the whitening properties of cucumber and lemon juice. Suppose softening and nourishing creams are beyond your purse limits? What about honey and milk blended together into a smooth, creamy liquid? What about buttermilk, or even mutton tallow, if you are as low financially as all that? Why, your great-grandmother and mine knew the homely ingredients which go into some of our most expensive modern beauty preparations.

Remember, every one of you, wherever you are, that it's mighty poor business to permit your face to look one bit less good looking than it can be. You don't have to be pretty, M. J. B. Entertained On Tuesday Evening With Affair At Church

Prolonging through an evening of fun, business, school days, men and women in the First Christian Berean class enjoyed a monthly social Tuesday evening in the class room at the church. Hostesses for the occasion were Mesdames Fred Childress, Leo Edwards, Anne English and Jewel Davis.

The room was arranged to represent a day school and Mrs. Walter P. Jennings, teacher of the class, assumed the role of school teacher for this party. Geography, language and spelling and the Friday afternoon exercises were features of the entertainment. Rev. Walter P. Jennings and Sam J. McFarland, as school trustees, made talks.

Those who attended brought basket lunches which were spread and eaten. There was an attendance of about fifty.

After the party there was a business session during which minutes were drawn for a Christmas party on December 18 and plans were made to have an attendance quota of 150 realized by December 16.

The Woman's Day

Allene Sumner

By

Summer

So rarely do I find myself agreeing with a mere male on the subject of "women—what ails 'em most?" that the discovery of such agreement must be straightway handed on.

I find myself in strange accord with G. D. Eaton, a magazine editor. Discussing "Freedom for Women," such observations as these interest me:

"Even fewer women than men are able to see that there is a vast difference between freedom and independence and I know none of the freedom-shouters who has the least conception of the latter word. Someone is always footing the bill for them and paying it."

I grant that a lot of these vehement hussies have their freedom, but almost always it is costing some man a pile of jack or, if not a man, then a mother who gave over the idea of freedom not later than the day her daughter was born.

"I know a good many free women, but I do not know any one of them who is making her own living or, at best, only sporadically so."

I was inclined to object at this point until I remembered that the differentiates twist "freedom" and "independence." Hes right—the women who are making their own living in toto, and good ones, too, are not the women who squawk about "freedom" or approach their earning of bread and butter in any spirit of a theory being worked out.

They simply buckle down to it as a taken-for-granted thing, exactly as does a man earning his own living and that of others. Whether it's enjoyable or not is not often thought of; it just has to be done, and that's that.

Mr. Eaton continues: "I do not mean to say that there aren't some women who battle their own way in the world. Indeed, there are considerable numbers of them, even in New York, who just valiantly against life, and with much less squawking than the average man, but they pay their own way and as for freedom, they know that it does not exist. But such women have some conception of independence, some conception of pride."

They know that most of us pay for what we get in this world, that some pay more and that the rest are either very lucky, very clever, or very unscrupulous, or all three. And I believe that the freedom-shouter is, if successful, unscrupulous and, if unsuccessful, simply stupid.

But such women have some conception of independence, some conception of pride."

"What men, I ask, have freedom in the sense of the word as it is demanded by the women of today? Precisely those men who like the women, accept gifts and gratuities, who borrow and who bellyache about restrictions."

"What most 'emancipated women' do not realize, of course is that, while trying to get rid of the traditional liabilities of womanhood, they are trying to retain the traditional assets—all in the name of doing down tradition and seizing freedom. They want the old security and the new liberty. It is a sad reflection on men that they permit this. Let men shut down on money and insist on loans being repaid and some women will learn independence. What of the others? Why, they will work in the home, just as their husbands will work in the shop, office and factory, and the measure of their independence will correspond with the measure of independence of the men in the shops, offices and factories."

I merely mean to say that the woman who accepts money from a man should take care of him, bear children by him and take care of them, too.

"If children and keeping a home are intellectually distasteful then accepting security without raising children falls in the same plane for it is intellectually dishonest unless the woman is an honest opportunist and cynic, which few of them would admit, with their 'ideals' of freedom."

I pause to take just a little issue with Mr. Eaton on this point. Granted that, in this day of easy physical living, no woman without children has a real job on her hands or contributes enough to earn her keep, how about the thousands of wives who want children, whereas their husbands do not?

Exhibit of West Texas Displayed In Many States

All-West Texas Booth Draws Much Comment; Shown In Kansas City and Chicago Livestock Shows

(Special To Avalanche)
STAMFORD, Nov. 14.—The All West Texas Agricultural exhibit sponsored by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce is now packed ready to be taken to the American Royal Live Stock Show in Kansas City. This exhibit has recently been taken to Shreveport, La., to the Louisiana State Fair, and Beaumont to the South Texas Fair by B. M. Whitaker, agricultural manager of the organization. After the Kansas City showing which will be held from November 17 to 24, plans will be completed whereby the exhibit will be taken to the Inter-National Live Stock Show at Chicago.

At Shreveport the exhibit attracted much attention because of the great range and variety of products grown in West Texas which were exhibited.

Score Card is Outlaid
This variety is greater than has been exhibited in former years because the score cards, which must be followed in order to win prizes, were disregarded and no attempt was made to limit the display in order to win a prize. In this way the exhibit will be worth much more advertising value.

At Beaumont great interest was manifested in the West Texas Chamber of Commerce exhibit, the official magazine and pamphlets, which advertised West Texas towns and sections to other parts of the state. This literature was also distributed in Shreveport and aroused quite a bit of interest.

In addition to this literature was furnished by the numerous member chambers of commerce telling of the advantages of their particular town and section. This was in great demand.

Luncheon Clubs Take-Interest In Father-Son Feast

With distribution of tickets to the Fathers and Sons Gala Jamoree which is to be held on the evening of Tuesday, November 20, beginning at 4:30 o'clock at the Tech gym, growing in numbers daily, a marked impetus was given to the event at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Rotary club Wednesday noon, an another impetus will be given at the luncheon of the Kiwanis club today noon.

At five o'clock this afternoon the general committee of the Fathers and Sons gala celebration will be held in the offices of Blodgett, Greenhaw and Dwyer, over the First National bank, where the committee will be worked out to make this the biggest thing of its kind ever pulled off in West Texas.

Williams is General Chairman
Rev. L. G. H. Williams is general chairman of this committee, and has assisted him on the executive committee, George W. Dwyer, and J. A. Riley. Other committees are given as follows:

Location: A. C. Jackson, Cecil Horne, and Hubert Allen, Finance; Warren P. Knox, Dean J. M. Gordon, Program; W. R. Rix, K. N. Clapp and J. W. Crowley, Gate; Alex C. McDonald, A. A. Bradshaw, R. H. Martin, J. M. Hunt and Curtis Bond, Serving; L. C. Ellis, J. C. Kaykendall and F. B. Williams, Publicity; Al Hill, Jerry Clements and W. C. Rylander, Transportation; Homer D. Grant, Rural; Charles Whitacre, Neil Wright, D. F. Eaton and Tom White, Acquaintance; R. E. Cone, L. C. Lincoln and R. D. Mackey.

The acquaintance committee is very anxious to secure the names and addresses of fatherless boys in town. They will have a number of useless fathers who will take the boys to the jamoree and will be for the evening make-believe fathers and sons.

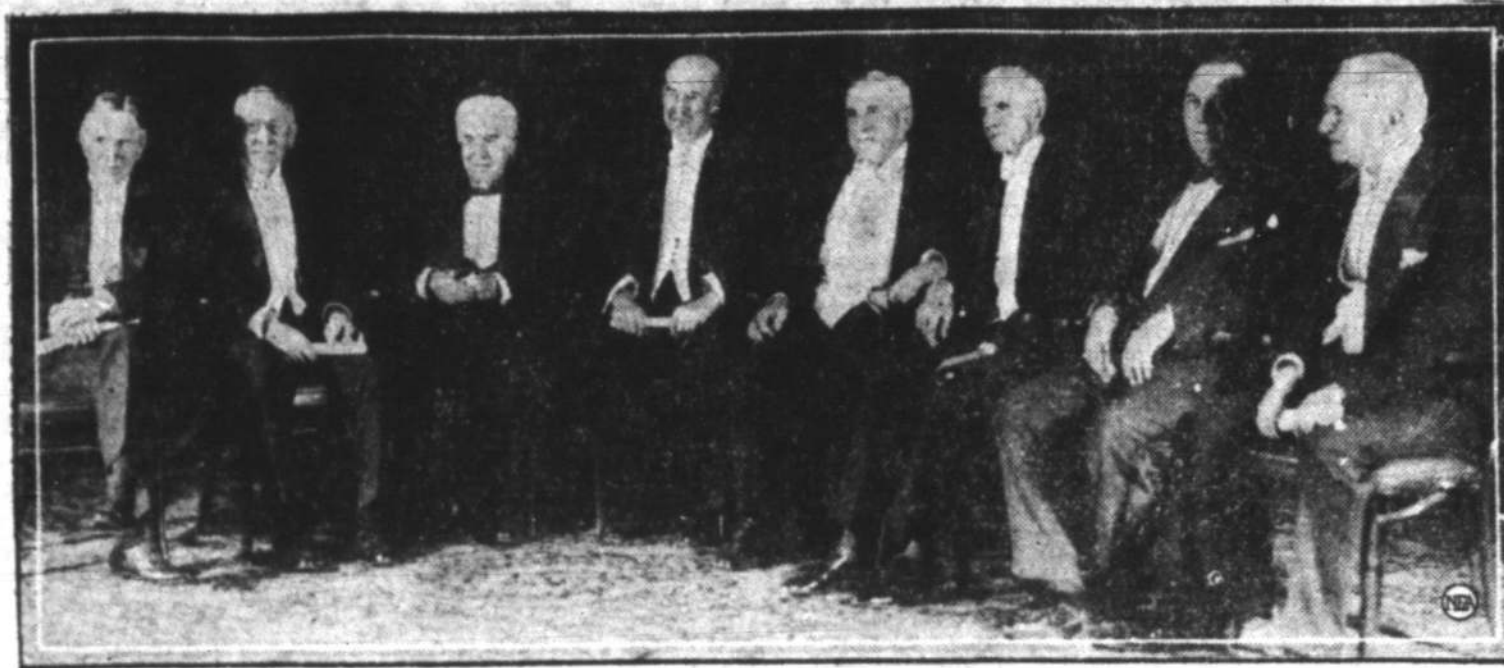

Denver Rails Are Laid On Highway
Following a controversy between the Fort Worth and Denver Railway company and the Texas Highway department of several months duration, Wednesday witnessed the beginning of construction of the railroad's line across joint highways Numbers 7 and 8, in the southern part of the city.

During the controversy the state highway department had kept a guard at the point where the railway crosses the highway and one of the department's giant tractors was parked to block effort of the railroad to lay their rails across the street. The guard and tractor were removed Wednesday morning and workers began laying the rails.

The details of agreement reached between the state highway department and Denver officials were not learned. At the point where the rails cross the joint highways, 7 and 8, is where these two thoroughfares are joined for about a mile south of the city and about half a mile from the business center. The two highways branch out south of town one leading to Slaton and the other to Tahoka.

BIDS ARE ASKED
Highway Work To Be Made In Hudspeth and El Paso
AUSTIN, Nov. 14. (AP)—Bids for building drainage structures and gravel surface on twenty miles of highway 130 in El Paso and Hudspeth counties were asked by the State Highway department today. They will be opened on November 16 and it is estimated that the work will cost about $100,000.

Farmers of Angelo Section Plan Big Turkey Shipments

(Special To The Avalanche)
SAN ANGELO, Nov. 14.—With the expectation of shipping three carloads of turkeys from this point to the eastern Thanksgiving market, the Farmers Co-operative Poultry association has opened its packing and dressing sheds receiving birds until next Wednesday.

Already more than 2,000 birds have been dressed and packed in cars. Poultry men in this section favor the co-operative market plan as evidenced by the 325 members.

Men who do not care to ship their birds in the pool may sell to the association for the prevailing market price, which is 22 cents per pound. However, members have not failed to secure more for their turkeys in any past year by shipping in pool lots.

After Wednesday, the association will close its sheds until December 1, when Christmas shipments will be sent.

Dr. Carter Holds Lecture on Drama

Dr. A. L. Carter, head of the English department at Texas Tech will lecture on the subject of "The Modern Drama," at 7 o'clock tonight, in room number 207 of the Administration building. It was announced Wednesday that the lecture will be the second of a series of 12 in the course of study on the drama. The course is open to those interested in the drama, for both credit and non-credit students and may be taken for graduate or undergraduate credit. The fee for the course is $10.

Tonight's lecture will be dismissed in ample time for those attending to also attend the concert by Sousa's band in the Tech gym.

Dr. Sam Dunn Off On Hunting Jaunt

Dr. Sam G. Dunn left yesterday for Ft. Worth where he will join his brother, Dr. Nelson Dunn, and a party of friends who will go into South Texas on a deer hunt. Dr. Dunn expects to be absent from the city for about ten days. Mrs. Dunn and their baby daughter, Karamia, accompanied Dr. Dunn as far as Metairie where they will visit in the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Rufus Moore, parents of Mrs. Dunn.

United Daughters of Confederacy To Meet In Annual National Convention In Houston, November 18; Plans Made

Memorial Services of By-Gone Days to Feature Sessions: World War Vets To Be Honored

(By Associated Press)
HOUSTON, Nov. 14.—All committees have been designated and programs have been printed for the annual national convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy which will begin with special church services here November 18 and continue throughout most of next week.

At least 2,000 persons representing chapters in widely scattered states will attend the convention in the opinion of Mrs. John Wilcox of Houston, general chairman of the convention.

A memorial service, remarkable for its beauty and impressiveness, will be conducted Wednesday afternoon of the convention week. Miss Decca Lamar West of Waco will read a memorial to the late Gen. Felix Robertson of Waco, longest surviving general of the Confederacy, who died last summer.

Other memorials will be read to Mrs. Augustine Smythe of Charleston, S. C., former president general of the U. D. C., Mrs. Mildred Rutherford, author of a history of the Confederacy and a book on flags of the South, and Gen. Edgar Taylor of Virginia, past commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans.

Adults Contract Children's Diseases
Adults can, and do, contract many children's diseases. And, usually, they suffer from them much more than children do. For instance, many adults contract worms, an ailment usually associated with children. Sometimes they suffer intensely and take expensive medical treatments, without realizing that worms are the cause of their troubles. Yet, the symptoms are the same as in children, loss of appetite and weight, grinding the teeth and restlessness, itching of the nose and anus, and abdominal pains. And, the same medicine that cures and harmlessly expels round and pin worms from children will do the same for adults—White's Cream Vermifuge, which you can get at Lubbock Drug Company.

Four men who served with distinction during the World War and who are lineal descendants of Confederate veterans will be presented service crosses by the U. D. C. th night of November 22.

They are Col. Ike Ashburn of Houston, Col. Beaumont B. Buck, San Antonio, Col. Leroy S. Bowman, Charleston, S. C. and Sept. Eldridge Moore, Austin.

Slaton Citizens Boost Highway Plan In County

Leaders In Town To Do Active Work Towards Bonds Issue; Believe Election Will Be Successful

(Special To Avalanche)
SLATON, Nov. 14.—In support of the highway bond issue to be voted on in this county on Dec. 1, when voters will pass upon bonds amounting to $2,004,000 for hard-surfacing county and state highways, a group of Slaton citizens will do some active work in behalf of the bonds, campaign leaders say.

Meetings with Slaton people and with those of nearby communities will be held, at which complete discussion of the bond issue will be had, it has been announced. Arrangements will be supervised by Slaton, officers of the Lubbock County Good Roads association, which was organized to work for a well-balanced program of hard-surfaced roads in the county to serve the best interests of the county as a whole.

Section is Entitled
According to specifications in the petitions calling for the election, all state highways in the county and several lateral roads would be hard-surfaced if the bonds are voted. Some of these lateral roads serve Slaton, while others serve other sections of the county. Slaton people are contending that this section of the county is entitled to all the roads outlined in the proposed plans, and that the bond issue should carry by an overwhelming majority.

Varied Program Is Given Rotary

Dr. Paul W. Horn who was in charge of the Rotary program, at the club's regular weekly noon luncheon Wednesday, in speaking of Armistice Day observance urged Rotarians to declare an Armistice as citizens, on three subjects now before the citizenship of Lubbock.

These subjects were, politics, good roads and athletics, suggesting that folk forget the past political campaign, iron out their differences on the good roads project and get behind the Tech football team in their battle with the Simmons Cowboys here Saturday.

World Peace was the subject for an address by Dr. W. A. Jackson, head of the department of government at Texas Technological college. His suggestions were that local citizens would be aiding world peace by uniting their efforts toward thorough harmony in all local, state and national affairs, and by our dealings as a nation with other nations, through Rotary International.

leak, he said, the hold was filling with water and he had been bailing with a bucket—all night. The cargo had shifted, too, and the ship had tipped clear over until the water was on a level with my windows on the top deck.

I dressed as quickly as I could, ate the banana which was all my steward could get for my breakfast, and went up on the bow port deck.

Cargo is thrown overboard—all the stuff they could handle. It looked like bales of cloth and such stuff. Their derricks weren't working so they couldn't get rid of the heavier things, like automobiles.

A little crowd of men stood up there, leaning over the railing and watching the crew throw the stuff overboard, some of them had come out with their life preservers on. They looked badly scared. Although I had dressed myself that morning with the idea that I might have to leave the ship before the day was over, I tried not to take such a dark view of the thing. Some of us did what we could to cheer the more timid ones—told them this was just a precaution and so on.

Well, anyway, we've got a nice day to be wrecked on," one of the men remarked with a grin.

Officers were going about, cheery but noncommittal. They never told us anything. I never knew until after the Vestris had gone down that they had even sent out an SOS, although when I went into the smoking room for a little while that morning and tried to read and divert my mind, I thought I heard the radio sort of sputtering.

"Once I went back to my cabin to try to rescue money that I had left in a trunk, no use—the trunk was under water and wedged in under bunk. I got my passport, stuck a pack of cigarettes in my pocket and left for good."

Ship Kept Tipping
The ship kept on tipping. It looked to me as though she had a list of 45 degrees. You could hardly walk on the deck.

At 10:30 the women and children were brought up and were told to put on life preservers. Still we got no definite information from the officers or crew.

The women were wonderful. Some of them were crying quietly—but there was no hysteria. One of them held in her arms a baby not more than 8 months old. All the children had been bundled up. They knew now that they would probably have to leave the ship.

"Isn't this fun?" I said to one little fellow with bright blue eyes, trying to cheer him up. He looked at his mother, who was crying and nodded solemnly.

At 11:30 they started to launch the life boats over the port side—the side that was up as she listed. Then the trouble began. It took them two hours to launch those boats. An operation that usually takes about ten minutes.

Launching is Slow and Painful
The difficulty was that the lifeboats kept catching on the sides of the ship. The outside of the lifeboats were covered with clapboards, like a frame house, and these would catch on the overlapping steel plates of the ship's hull. They tried to hold the lifeboats out—away from the ship—by pushing with axes. It was a slow and painful process.

"Boat No. 8—the lifeboat to which I was assigned, had a hole torn in her side as they were letting her down. They patched it up with a piece of tin before they let us in, but the tin didn't hold. When the boats were about 20 feet from the water, they told us to climb down the rope ladder and get in. Two boats were filled with women and children before they filled No. 8.

"In No. 8, before I got in, were ten women and two children—two youngsters about six or eight years old. One of them was Clara Ball, with whom I subsequently floated on the piece of wreckage. Another was Mrs. Inove, wife of the counselor of the Japanese embassy at Buenos Aires. The ship's bar tender was aboard, and our crew consisted of four negro sailors.

Slips As Boats Fall Away
"Three minutes after we pulled away, the Vestris keeled over on her side and sank."

"I think one of the funniest things I saw was 40 men—apparently all those left on board—racing madly down her side and diving off from her keel."

"One boat never got away at all. It was still on deck when she sank. They had tried to launch some from her starboard side, but they had to cut them away before they could be filled."

Just a Little Puff of Steam
"She went down silently—with just a little puff of steam. Her boilers must have been cold. The engine room had not been functioning all morning."

Just a few minutes after we pulled away, our lifeboat began to fill with water. The tin patch tore away. She had air compartments, however, so that we could stay in her, even after she was under water.

"But the women tried to keep calm, although the tears streamed down their cheeks. There was no screaming."

"One of the children began to whimper. His mother, hastily drying her eyes, tried to comfort him by saying, 'Don't cry, baby, don't cry.'"

Wave Capsized Boat
"It wasn't long before a big wave came along and capsized us. I got caught under the lifeboat as she turned over. I wasn't hurt, except for a little scrape on my neck. As I struggled out from under, I saw a woman's foot bob up. I grabbed it and hauled her with me. It was Mrs. Ball."

"One of the women had been drowned when the boat tipped over. Most of the occupants came up, however, including the children."

"We all got on one side, pulled and managed to right it again. The women and children climbed in. The waves were pounding it to pieces. The air compartments stored under the seats, tore loose. She was breaking up."

"Great black waves—they looked to be 100 feet high from where we were—kept pounding down on us. We were kept pounding down on us."

Children Disappear
"The children disappeared and the women—all except Mrs. Ball. 'I saw a piece of wood—wreckage—floating in the water near by. Come on,' I said. We swam to it."

"Take hold of one end," I told her, and I'll take the other. She did so—never a whimper out of her. We then proceeded to make ourselves as comfortable as we could—to wait for help."

"The water was warm—warmer than you find it in an indoor swimming tank. It was so warm, in fact, that you hardly gasped when you plunged in. The fact that it was warm probably helped save our lives. But it was enervating, too."

Mrs. Ball was fully dressed—with a coat and sweater on under her life preserver. She had on gloves, which certainly saved her hands. Mine are all cut up.

What in the world is that you have stuck in the front of your life preserver? I asked her.

Wanted to Save Slipper
She grinned and pulled up a slipper. Her feet were so narrow, she explained, that she had a hard time getting shoes to fit, and she wanted to save this pair if she could."

Through the afternoon we clung to the spar. It wasn't so bad, except for the waves. Our life preservers held us up, and having something to cling to made it easier to keep our heads out of the water.

Only every now and then a great big wave would come crashing down on us, almost knocking the life out of our bodies and smothering us in foam.

I think the hardest thing was to keep from getting excited and floundering about. We had to save our strength and not move about unnecessarily. Mrs. Ball was wonderful. She showed from nerve. Never a whimper out of her."

Waves Prove Barrier
Several times during the afternoon we tried to haul the lifeboats, but they couldn't hear us or see us because of the waves. I don't think they passed us up deliberately. It's pretty hard to spot swimmers in waves like those."

Toward sunset it began to cloud up. And then a thought flashed into my mind that made me feel a little sick all over. Sharks.

I don't know whether Mrs. Ball ever thought of them or not. If she did, she kept still about it.

During that long night of waves and wind and rain we clung to the spar—talking intermittently. She told me that she was a stewardess. When we made for the spar and for several hours after we had attached ourselves to it, I had no idea who she was.

I confess that we spent a good deal of time cursing out Captain Carey for not setting those radio messengers out earlier. Mrs. Ball had heard that one went out at 8 o'clock Monday morning and had been cancelled.

Was Tough Break
We agreed, though, that it was a tough break for the Captain. Nobody likes to admit he's licked, but I have to admit that I thought the Vestris would ride it out."

I'd like to know if it's true, though, that he sent out an SOS at 8 o'clock and then cancelled it. The night went on. Several times we saw the search-lights of ships. They were too far away to see in them, but it gave us hope. And several times fish brushed against my body in the water and I swammed. Mrs. Ball never said a word. If she noticed them, she was unfeeling. What I was never let on at all. I decided to hold on, anyway, and wait until a shark actually attacked me before I let go."

At dawn came the worst moment of all for us. As the dawn broke, a ship in sight. And our piece of wreckage was being towed to her. We had to hold on while using it for a support."

Wrecking Is Sighted
At about 11 o'clock we sighted the Wyoming. She must have been 20 miles away. But our spar was practically gone.

How about it? I asked Mrs. Ball. Shall we swim for it? Without a word, she started off toward the Wyoming. I kept by her side.

We had been swimming for an hour when I looked back and saw the American shipper. She was only about a mile away, and coming toward us.

I tore off the tail of my shirt and waved it wildly in the air. They saw it. A boat was lowered.

As we got up alongside, they threw out a rope. I fastened it around my body, under my arms, and grabbed Mrs. Ball. I had an idea that when she could give in, she'd go quickly. I was right.

They hauled us into the boat and then hoisted us up in one of those rope cages they use for hoisting cargo. We never could have made it climbing a ladder. We were too weak."

I never was treated more tenderly in my life than I was on the American shipper. The doctor ripped my clothes off, gave me a couple of shots of whiskey and on alcohol rub and told me to go to sleep, which I certainly did. When I woke up, the steward was ready to shave me. My clothes were all dried.

I guess there's just one thing more. About five minutes after we were hoisted aboard the American shipper, a dead body floated alongside. And two sharks."

PATRIOTIC PROGRAM
The patriotic program held at the high school auditorium Tuesday evening under the auspices of the civic department of the Civic-Culture club, drew a large crowd. The program was a review of history from the time of the discovery of America. About 75 pupils from all grades in the school took part in the pageant and the numbers by the girls' choral club, directed by Mrs. Lillian Butler, and the "French Harp Ukulele orchestra" directed by Mrs. J. B. Caldwell was especially enjoyed. The pageant was directed by Miss Ruby Dan Smith. The Civic-Culture club officers were more than pleased with the ticket receipts. The proceeds of which go toward a "student loan fund." The —positively last longer!

The Women Know Coal!

AFTER all, it is the housewife who has to meet much of the coal problem. To be everlastingly firing and dusting is one of the things that wears a woman out.

And it is all so unnecessary! For the women CAN have clean coal—and thousands of them have it. DIAVOLO Coals are clean. They require far less watching, firing and dusting. They are long-burning, quick to ignite and hot, singularly free from soot.

DIAVOLO Domestic Coals give the housewife genuine heating comfort with less work. They cut the labor of going over the house with a dustcloth, time after time, and not getting anywhere. That is why countless women KNOW DIAVOLO Coals and prefer them.

Why not enjoy these advantages? Use DIAVOLO Coals for warmth, cleanliness, economy. The time and work they save can be used in far more congenial ways. You really ENJOY DIAVOLO Coals!

CRIMINAL TOLERANCE

The apathetic attitude of the public toward crime is largely responsible for the increase in crime, we believe. The reduction of crime does not depend so much on prosecution and the courts as it does upon the attitude of the public. If the courts and the prosecuting attorneys and the juries know that the public sentiment is with them in the enforcement of the laws of the country they will go a long way further in trying to enforce the law. Our argument then places the responsibility upon the people rather than upon the prosecutors and the courts. Too many good men fail to accept jury service, and will not even stand pat and express themselves favorable to the enforcement of some of the laws and that is the reason that courts and juries are sometimes rather indifferent about the conviction of criminals. There is not an outcrop of enforcement of the actions of peace officers that there should be. Too often people take the part of the offender rather than the officer, when something is done that is a bit out of the ordinary in an effort to enforce the laws of the country. We are of the opinion that court records will bear us out in the statement that there is a live interest in the enforcement of the laws the laws are pretty well enforced, and criminals halted before the bar of justice are given their just deserts.

It is true that our entire legal system suffers from a superabundance of red tape; that complicated and unnecessary laws often allow criminal cases to be drawn out, through the medium of delay and appeals, and in many instances prove the undoing of justice. This also, is due to public apathy in regard to the making of laws, and the failure of the public to demand a more efficient system.

If convicted, the criminal always has recourse to parole boards, pardon laws, good conduct reductions of sentence, appeals and other means to effect his liberty, with the aid of well meaning but often misguided reformers, who likewise prey upon public apathy. According to Mr. Strawn "life imprisonment" means, on the average about five years, and there are few criminals who actually pay the penalties assessed.

Reformers cry out against the laws and "systems" which permit this condition; but so long as the public is willing to condone crime or maintain an apathetic attitude, any effort to suppress crime or prevent its gradual expansion will prove fruitless.

SMITH'S SPEECH

Those who listened over radio to the speech of Alfred E. Smith, defeated candidate for president on the democratic ticket, and those of us who have read the speech as given in the leading newspapers of the country, agree that it had the proper ring to it, that it showed good sportsmanship, and that it showed that there was no malice in the mind of the defeated candidate. His defeat was accepted in the proper way, and his advice to the people of the nation was to forget the little differences that arose during the campaign, and get in line for a harmonious, good sensible administration under the leadership of Mr. Hoover.

Even those who did not support Mr. Smith in the recent campaign were pleased to hear him make this speech, and it made for him many friends because of the broadminded views that he expressed and the good advice that he gave. There is nothing to be gained from harboring a hatred in the heart for anyone, and especially is this foolish in matters of government. We must all live under the administration of whoever is elected president of the United States, and there can be no success or happiness in a nation where the people do not get along in making the very best out of every situation. This is true from local conditions to world wide, and we should count the matter ended and join hands in putting over all local programs that confront us.

In Lubbock we have many local issues to be thrashed out. The most important of these at this time is the good roads program that is being put on. It is a question wherein there is a difference of opinion, and there will be argument on both sides of the question, but there should never be other than a friendly discussion of the question, for there may be good points on either side, and people should get the straight facts in the matter and none other should be put out. The road bonds should go over on their merits, and not on misstatements, and while we are not accusing anyone of making any statements that are not true, it is almost an invariable thing that they get terribly warped, and figures get scrambled to such extent that there might be some one misled. It should all be figured out exactly what it will cost to maintain the bonds, and pay them off so that the voters will know exactly what they are voting on, and quit at that.

Lubbock has probably the best system of schools in the state and there are more educational advantages here than any other town in Texas, and for that reason there is no wonder that there is a constantly increasing population and people are wanting homes in Lubbock.

Communities are not built by division. Community opposition is good for the community, but professional "agitors" are an abomination to a community.

Crime fellow has suggested that music is a cure for crime. Well now suppose that we make the crime some of these would be soles that some of these communities are forced to listen to. We believe that would probably be more severe punishment than a life term in the penitentiary.

A Washington Bystander

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—When President Coolidge retires to private life next March, he will have had six years of experience in what has come to be an angel of life at the White House that takes up a lot of presidential time. That is the business of posing for movie and still camera. Never before has a president been so thoroughly pictured to the world as Coolidge. There is a film record of him that would make a history without words of his administration. And he has disclosed, also, a keen interest in the stage business of these appearances. He has ideas of his own as a movie director on what the arrangement of background groupings and actions of principals and the like should be to give the best results. Generally speaking, Coolidge has always been ready to go through a scene a second time if necessary for the pictorial biography that was in the making.

Coolidge Talkie-Shy. With the introduction of the "talkies" to the movie world, however, there was apparent at once considerable more reluctance to pose on the president's part. It is conceivable that he felt it out of keeping with his habitual verbal caution to appear suddenly to the movie-going public as a light chatterer of the films. Also, it is considerably more trying, of course, to pose for the talkies. A lot of preliminary arrangements and tests are necessary and all this is burdensome to the subject of a two-dimensional picture.

The difference in the Coolidge attitude toward silent pictures and talkies was sharply emphasized when the camera men assembled at the White House in legions to picture his farewell to Herbert Hoover just before election.

After their conference, the president and his distinguished guest strolled out to face the cameras in the beautiful setting of the south front of the White House. They came down a path and as they neared the clicking battery of movie cameras some one called a request that the president get a little action into the scene. He turned smilingly to Hoover, then gestured toward the White House as though inviting his party's presidential nominee to take possession on his return from California. It was a nice touch and Mr. Coolidge's own idea.

President "Ad Libs."

Then the talkie crew took over the job. There was a lot of testing and calling of directions before Coolidge and Hoover were told to "go ahead." They exchanged farewell greetings and the president wished the candidate a safe journey to California. But another test showed their voices had been too low pitched to make an adequate record. The whole business was to do over again, and right there Coolidge amiability broke down. He plainly felt that once was enough, and it looked as though there would be no talkie record of the event until a belated and breathless "still" photographer arrived. Mr. Coolidge promptly decided that this late coming action into the scene. He turned smilingly to Hoover, then gestured toward the White House as though inviting his party's presidential nominee to take possession on his return from California. It was a nice touch and Mr. Coolidge's own idea.

And it was not until that second talkie shot was in the making that the president added to his exchange with Hoover the wish for the California's safe return, presumably to occupy the White House that got so much "play" in the newspapers at the time.

EPIDEMIC OF DENGUE IS BLAMED ON MOSQUITOS

BY DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor Journal of The American Medical Association
And of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

A few years ago a notable outbreak of dengue or breakbone fever occurred in Florida, and the relationship of mosquitoes to the spread of this disease was rather definitely established.

In August and September the most severe outbreak of dengue known to medical records occurred in Greece, particularly in Athens.

Although few cases have been occurring in Athens since September, 1927, the outbreak in 1928 was explosive in character. For instance, 1,268 deaths occurred in Athens in August, and 413 of these were verified as due to dengue; 592 deaths were recorded in Piraeus, of which 176 were due to dengue.

In Athens 239,000 people were affected September 4 by the dengue, which had not yet disappeared from the community. The epidemic spread over most of Greece, particularly in the islands and coast towns.

In the distant past an epidemic such as this occurring in one country was likely to spread rapidly throughout the world.

SO THINK WE

We think it seems to be impossible for people to realize that they are constantly in danger, and especially when they are driving automobiles, and crossing railroad tracks. We cannot see why people should rush upon the railroad track without first making sure that there is no train within a mile of them or even more.

We think that "all things are for the best." It proved so in the case of the policeman who recently was laid up in bed with a broken leg. He was accused of being implicated in a mysterious case of a lady being burned in a furnace on his best, and an effort was made to drag him into the plot, but he had a complete alibi, and one that none can successfully deny, which will mean that in this case a broken leg was for the best for him.

The progressive city that is without an airport is just about as much out of style as the fellow that drives an ox wagon in the days of automobiles.

We think that there possibly has never been anything that has been discovered that will give them such a pain as the toothache.

We think it is a pretty good thing that an effort was not made to create the earth in a five day week, for there would have been about half of the things left undone.

We think it is a peculiar thing that so many people can give good advice who have shown no signs of having made a success. Possibly they can tell a fellow where they made their mistake however.

We think that grandfather's pipe might well be considered a souvenir to the family, for after about fifty years it is comparatively indestructible.

We think possibly why many apes look like human beings is that both have thirty-two teeth to begin with. About the only advantage that the ape has over a man is that he does not have to attend parties, he does not have to vote, and he does not have to go to a help yourself grocery store, and was a sack of oats off to the house.

We think that the streets of Lubbock should all be marked. There is no way at this time of telling what street you are on, unless you have plat of the town and happen to get started on the right name and run the map through, or ask some one who happens to know, and there are very few of that kind of people in Lubbock.

We think that a college bred girl does not always make a kitchen maid wife.

We think the reason that we know that Scotch people write all of these Scotch jokes is because the Scotch are really not very humorous anyway.

We think that at least two thousand boys should be present at the father and son's meeting next week.

We think possibly the reason that Herbert is going to South America is because there will be no one there who can apply for a job as cabinet members and Mr. Hoover does not want to make any hard feelings. We presume that is one of the reasons why he calls it a good will tour.

We think we should inform ourselves well on the road situation, so that we can vote intelligently. Do not depend too much on reports.

We think that people who continue to carry stickers on their windshield are not much inclined to sooth the political feeling.

We think that the people of Lubbock should show their appreciation of the great crowds that will be here to celebrate the arrival of the Denver. Several special trains are coming this way, and they will bring several hundred people. Let's show them Lubbock. It is something to be proud of.

We think that the people of Lubbock should show their appreciation of the great crowds that will be here to celebrate the arrival of the Denver. Several special trains are coming this way, and they will bring several hundred people. Let's show them Lubbock. It is something to be proud of.

We think that people who continue to carry stickers on their windshield are not much inclined to sooth the political feeling.

THE WAY OF THE WORLD

BY GROVE PATTERSON

WHAT IS GOVERNMENT?

We have a careless way of thinking that the government is one thing and the people are another. We think of the government as standing at one side ready to enforce something or other on the people—even against the people's will. Of course the government and the people are one and the same thing. The reason we do not have prohibition in this country instead of merely a large amount of talk about prohibition is that not enough people want the enforcement of prohibition. The government—which is the people—cannot enforce upon the people what the people do not want.

ENFORCEMENT

Please note that in the paragraph the thing referred to is not "prohibition," but the "enforcement of prohibition." It is very probable that most of the people actually do want prohibition. They have voted in favor of it and they would doubtless do so again in practically every state in the union. But it is also apparently true that they do not want it enforced to the degree that would make it impossible for them to have a drink quietly on the side.

The well-to-do want it enforced on the poor and the poor are perfectly willing to have it enforced on the well-to-do. A great number of people—perhaps the greater number—believe prohibition is a splendid idea, always deserving of their vote. But enforcement—that is another matter.

THE MOUNTAINEER

One can understand the perplexity of the mountain man in the south. He can not understand why he can not turn his corn into liquor as properly as he can turn it into meal. It is his corn, and he is willing to do it quietly and unobtrusively. He is further perplexed when he finds himself in prison looking through barred windows at his free and respectable brethren who bought the product of his corn.

It is a strange situation wherein the thief goes to jail, while the buyer merely turns to another market.

CHECKING UP

Now that election is over we will do well to look back over some of the things we have believed and some of the things we have said. After a time of abnormal excitement and distorted opinions it is proper to check up on ourselves and try to recall just how we acted and what we said. All with a view to not being quite so absurd in the next campaign.

For they some time get terribly tangled. Get the straight of the matter. Find out just how much it will cost you on your taxes, and then vote your sentiments. The people are to be satisfied in this matter. It is money that they must pay, and they should be well and correctly informed in the matter.

AMERICA REGARDED RESPONSIBLE FOR GERMANY'S DEFEAT

(By Count Felix von Luckner, former Commander German Raider "Sea Eagle")

(Felix von Luckner, born in Germany, ran off to sea at the age of 13 after being of school in which he was not interested. He traveled to Australia as cabin boy on a Russian craft where he found employment in the kitchen of a hotel before working his way to America. He was in the United States a short while before returning to Germany in 1900 to enlist in his country's navy. He was made a lieutenant in 1903. During the World War he commanded the Raider, disguising it as a Norwegian ship, and sank 13 merchant vessels in the Atlantic and Pacific during two months. He boasted that he never killed a man, though he took many prisoners, and that he obtained fame as the "Sea Devil." Count von Luckner has been lecturing in the United States during the past year.)

America is the only country which is responsible for the defeat of Germany in the World War. It is the only country which could have won the war and which would have the strength to win another war, should there be one immediately. A number of other wars in Europe have been won by the United States, but it is bound to do so because every country here must look out for itself as part of the white race against the invasion of Asia.

There can be no war among the powers of Europe so long as the present situation continues, and it is bound to do so because the countries which are inhabited by the white race are crowded together on a continent smaller than any others. To fight among themselves would only invite the eastern powers to take possession.

America is already the only effective stronghold of the white race, because it is self-sustaining and protected by its position. With the Atlantic ocean on the one side and the Pacific on the other there is no chance for invasion from any point which could not be protected. Battleships would be of little use in bombarding coast towns because they are too apt to be the prey of airplanes and submarines.

Culture has traveled always from east to west. Beginning in China it spread gradually to India, Persia, Egypt, Greece and Rome and up through Europe to Great Britain where it began its long westward sweep to America. As it has traveled it has developed until now modern culture is traveling back from America to the Orient. With this sweep of culture has come a series of wars in which the civilized countries have taken the territories they needed for the comfort of their people. Now, with the east taking on our culture, they may be the next to attempt expansion, and in such a case America would be the surviving white country.

SUMMARY

The October consumption report of the Census Bureau came in much larger than was expected and created considerable buying power in the American market. Liverpool cables were better than due but after the advance, profit-taking and hedge selling brought about a reaction and the close was practically unchanged from that of Tuesday. The cotton market is in a friendly and until the trade believes that the crop is going to be small in comparison with wants, fluctuations will be minor with no abrupt changes in either direction. We favor the long side and suggest buying on any setback.

Manchester cable, "Improved cloth sales to Egypt and South America. Fair yarn demand."

CENSUS BUREAU CONSUMPTION REPORT
Cotton exclusive of linters consumed during October 618,788 bales. In cotton growing states 474,374 bales. Held in consuming establishments October 31, 1,104,961 bales. Held in public storage and at commercial warehouses 4,683,581 bales. Imported 27,440 bales. Exported 1,246,793 bales. Linters consumed during October 76,063 bales. Held in consuming establishments 108,067 bales. Held in public storage and at commercial warehouses 45,963 bales. Exported 11,286 bales. Number of spindles active during October, 50,315,068.

New Orleans: Domestic cotton goods markets report more interest on part of buyers.

WEEKLY CROP AND WEATHER REPORT

In Arkansas, picking and ginning were somewhat delayed by showers the first part of the week, but good progress was made thereafter. In all sections where picking has not been completed from the Mississippi valley states westward the weather was generally favorable and gathering the outstanding crop made satisfactory progress. Late bolls are reported as opening rather slowly in parts of northern Alabama. In Oklahoma there was much cloudy, damp weather and occasional rains which made generally unfavorable conditions for picking and ginning with further damage to staple by dampness. In Texas wet soil interrupted harvest the first part of the week but good advances were made there during the latter part of the week.

McCurran, Okla.: Only about 10 per cent of the cotton crop picked. Weather of late very unfavorable.

DAILY STATISTICS
New Orleans: Total spot cotton sales in southern markets yesterday 84,604 bales against 25,415 bales the same day last year. Sales thus far this week 73,318 bales against 56,793 bales same time last year. Sales thus far this season 2,616,594 bales against 2,101,926 bales the same time last season.

Strikers Wanted Their Children With Them in Prison

Among the 26 striking employees of the Allen-A Hostery Mills of Kenosha, Wis., who were sent to jail when they refused to pay picketing fines of $100 are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gled, shown at the top with their children. The couple wanted to take their children along to jail, but federal authorities intervened and the children are being cared for by friends. Below are Mr. and Mrs. James Bennett, who were married a few days before their sentences started and are spending their honeymoon in jail.

profit taking on the part of wheat owners than could be digested at once.
Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled 1-2 to 7-8 cent net higher with corn 3-8 to 1 cent up, oats showing 1-8 to 1-4 cent gain and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 25 cents.

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, Nov. 14. (AP)—The mightiest stock market in history raced madly on today, piling up total sales of more than 5,000,000 shares for the third consecutive day, for the fourth day this month, and for the fifth day in the market's existence. Heavy selling in some of the old line favorites was more than offset by a vigorous upturn in a group of new leaders, and about 30 issues broke into new high territory.

The day's sales totaled 5,426,800 shares, surpassed only by the record of 5,670,600 shares established Monday. The ticker was left hopelessly behind the transactions, and ran for an hour and 20 minutes after the close.

The same confusion of opinion that this abnormal market has brought forth persisted, with some operators looking for a fairly sharp reaction in the near future, while others maintained that corrective movements will be only minor in character. A large increase in brokers' loans was expected generally in the Federal Reserve compilation, to be announced after the close tomorrow, but this seemed to cause no considerable concern. The statement of President Simmons of the Exchange last night that more and more we must accustom ourselves to the financing of business through the use of brokers loans rather than commercial paper, was a reassuring factor.

Call money was in supply at 6 percent all day, and there was no calling of loans, although the dividend and interest disbursements tomorrow will be large. There was a slight easing in commercial paper.

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK

FORT WORTH, Nov. 14. (AP)—Liberal receipts of both cattle and calves at Fort Worth today cleared at prices that were not far from steady, although weakness was shown in one or two divisions of the trade. Butcher and beef cows proved slow at levels steady to around a quarter lower.

Several sales of grass slaughter steers at 10.25 and 10.35; good fat cows in carlots up to 8.50. Butcher cows found an outlet around and under 7.00; low cutters at 4.00 to 4.25. Nearly two dozen carlots of heavy stock calves sold at 11.00 to 12.10; straight stock steer calves at 11.50 and up. Heavy slaughter calves at 10.25 and less.

A further downturn of about ten cents occurred in hog prices today. A part load of smooth butchers topped at 8.80, and best truck hogs sold at 8.65. Bulk 165-220 pound hogs 8.25 to 8.75.

Sheep and lambs was of peddling volume, quotably steady. Three decks of short fat lambs brought 11.50 to 12.00 and four decks mixed classes and grades remained unsold.

KANSAS CITY LIVESTOCK

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 14. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Slow trade on killing the 11-market circuit; finished steers and yearlings are coming in such limited numbers that they are regarded as specialties with the sales no criterion of general conditions. The quality of the beef steers available is good; steady prices were maintained on good light weights, but others ruled weak to lower with demand fairly narrow; for the in-between weights; moderate declines were also put into effect at several points on fat the stock and light yearlings; stockers and feeders moved at steady to easier prices; demand at the various centers varying from slow to fair. Chicago had a top of 18.00 on finished yearlings and realized 17.40 on long fed heavy steers; aggregate receipts estimated at 48,700 were 6,000 more than a week ago but 2,000 short of a year ago.

Liberal receipts prompted another sharp decline in the hog market but the loss was slight considering that the week's supply to date is 115,000 heavier than the same period last week and 50,000 more than a year ago. Prices were unevenly steady to 15c lower with some strength shown at Kansas City and St. Joseph on the lighter weights; the day's top of 6.00 was paid at St. Louis and Chicago; total offerings were around 36,400 against 34,750 last Wednesday and 33,400 a year ago.

HOUSTON, Nov. 14. (AP)—W. H. McCorn's home made burglar trap worked but it worked too well with the result that the Houston man had to go to a hospital for first aid treatment for a bullet wound in his hip and spent several days at his home convalescing.

Fearing that a prowler might try to enter his home McCorn strung a wire across the doorway and attached it to the trigger of a gun. One morning McCorn forgot the trap and walked into the wire.

Third Conference Baylor Workers Held In Plainview

Greater Baylor Campaign Committee to Meet Nov. 20; Horton to Talk in Mineral Wells This Week

A third conference of all district 18 workers for the greater Baylor University campaign to raise $2,000,000 in the state at large, will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 20, in Plainview, according to E. W. Providence, chairman of district 18 who has called the meeting.

Campaign workers assembled in Lubbock last week to map out details of this state-wide drive.

Rev. J. Pat Horton, pastor at Plainview, has been asked to make the four-minute talk at the Baptist General convention of Texas this week in Mineral Wells, to report on campaign progress in district 18. Chairman Providence spoke recently at Wilson to the Brownfield workers' conference for the campaign.

Among the new campaign recruits is Rev. J. E. Anderson who has been elected associational missionary of West Plains association who wired to headquarters that he was ready for all campaign work.

PROPOSAL 'S KILLED

Montana Refuses to Adopt Federal Pro Laws Code

HELENA, Mont., Nov. 14. (AP)—An initiated proposal to adopt the federal prohibition laws as the liquor code of Montana was defeated by voters of this state a week ago, according to final tabulations by the Associated Press. With the vote from 37 scattered and sparsely settled precincts still missing, the proposal was running behind 7,443 votes.

A movement for a state lottery has been started in South Africa.

First "All Women" Jury Praised by Judge For work in Damage Suit

(By NEA Service)

WARREN, Pa., Nov. 14.—The first all-women jury to try a civil case in common pleas court in the history of Pennsylvania—and, it may be, in the history of the whole country—has finished its job. And, like many other juries, it has failed to satisfy everybody.

Judge D. U. Arndt commended it in open court for its excellent work, thanking them for the close attention they had given the evidence and for the thorough manner in which they had considered the issues involved while deliberating.

But attorneys for the losing side have already filed a motion for a new trial.

The case at issue involved a controversy regarding payment for the cutting of some timber. It was understood in court circles that attorneys for both sides selected women for the jury because they felt a jury composed exclusively of women could reach a decision quicker than one which had several men in the box.

The trial lasted for three days, and the jury began its deliberations late in the afternoon. At 10:20 that night it reported, handing in a verdict for the plaintiff in the action and awarding him damages in the sum of $3,422.

Court attaches here believe this was the first time in the history of the nation that a jury composed exclusively of women sat in a case. The trial, for this reason, attracted the attention of lawyers throughout western Pennsylvania.

TEACHERS TO MEET HERE

Home Economics teachers of Lubbock and adjoining towns will hold a regional meeting at Lubbock, December 7 and 8, the first day at the local high school and the second day at Tech. Miss Margaret Weeks is to be director of the meet.

The object of this meeting is to promote professional growth in the field of Home Economics and to discuss problems dealing with the teaching of the subject.

Miss Lillian Peck, who formerly lived in Lubbock, and who is State Supervisor of Home Economics, will be here for the event.

FACULTY DINNER FRIDAY

The annual dinner of the Texas Technological college faculty will be held tomorrow evening at the college cafeteria.

TO HAVE WEINER ROAST

Members of the Home Economics club will hike to the County Park tomorrow afternoon where they will have a weiner roast. This meeting will see the initiation of new members, and all girls who have not announced their intention of joining the organization but expect to do so are urged to sign a paper which is placed on the bulletin board in the Home Economics building.

It is announced that due for the club are to be paid to either Marjorie Sanson, who is treasurer, or Auvana Hufstader, chairman of the membership committee.

Although this club is composed primarily of girls from the school where it derives its name, all girls in any school are invited to become members.

Four Thousand Go Through Armour's New Branch Plant

Enthusiastic Reception Is Given New District House Here; The Officials Are Present

Approximately 4,000 Lubbock citizens were guests of Armour and Company, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 9:30 p. m. Wednesday, at the formal opening of that company's new branch house here.

"I have never seen a more enthusiastic or more complimentary crowd in my life," declared J. C. Milton, of Chicago, advertising manager. "It proves the fine spirit of West Texas and justifies our placing a branch house in Lubbock. We want to sincerely thank all people who cooperated in making this opening one of the most successful in Armour's history. Our only means of showing our appreciation is to give as good service as we can through our dealers to the people of the South Plains."

Muscle Is Given

While the crowds were inspecting the new plant, sampling food-stuffs, grape juice, and looking over all the multitudinous products the company has to offer, music was furnished by Newell Hughes and his colleagues, of Tech college.

In addition to Mr. Milton, company executives from Chicago, headquarters of the concern, included J. A. Lynch, assistant general manager of all Armour branch houses; N. W. Fitzgerald, bakers' supply department; and J. A. Downey, advertising.

Branch managers from West Texas who were here for the opening were: J. P. Evans, Abilene; W. C. Denman, Brownwood; W. P. Lindsey, San Angelo, and S. E. Woods, Amarillo.

R. C. Harvey, livestock buyer for the company in West Texas and part of New Mexico, who makes his home in Lubbock, was here for the event, also.

CAR IS STILL MISSING

The small coupe belonging to Raymond Goodard, which was stolen Sunday night from in front of the 19th Street Baptist church, had not been recovered by local officers yesterday. No trace has yet been found of the machine.
