Weinberger encourages Afghan refugees

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger mingled with cheering Afghan exiles at a teeming refugee camp Saturday and told them the United States backs the guerrilla war against Afghanistan's government and its Soviet allies.

"Your struggle for freedom and your willingness to fight against overwhelming odds is bound to succeed," he told several thousand Afghan refugees at the camp in Nasser Bagh in western Pakistan, 100 miles northeast of Islamabad. The tour was covered by state television.

After his remarks were translated, the exiles shouted "Allah-O-Akbar (God is Great)!"

Weinberger, who is visiting Pakistan for three days, said "the U.S. will continue to do whatever possible for the success of the struggle of the Afghans against Soviet occupation."

About 3 million Afghans have fled into Pakistan since Soviet forces intervened in their country in December 1979 to help crush a Moslem guerrilla uprising against the Moscow-backed government.

"I want to assure you that you are not alone," Weinberger said. "The world recognizes your enormous sacrifices and enormous courage."

He told them, "You have demonstrated, day after day, what freedom-loving people can do, and you have demonstrated your determination to defeat the Soviet Union."

He also accused the Soviets of bombing Afghan villages to avenge guerrilla attacks on Soviet convoys, and said the occupiers acted "in callous disregard to human values."

"The whole world approves of your struggle and the Afghans will have continued help from the world community," he said. "I am honored to meet you."

Malik Nazir Gul, an Afghan elder speaking for refugees, told Weinberger: "We will continue our holy war against the Soviets, and will not submit to the material supremacy of the Soviet Union."

Gul thanked the U.S. administration for its moral support and refugee aid.

Since the Soviet intervention, the United States has shipped more than $200 million in food to Afghan refugees. Officially, the United States denies that it is arming the refugees, although the Soviet government has accused the Reagan administration of sending weapons to them through Pakistan.

Afghanistan's state-run radio said Saturday said students and teachers of Kabul University assembled in the Afghan capital to denounce Weinberger's visit.

In a broadcast monitored in Islamabad, the radio quoted university president Assadullah Habib as calling Weinberger's tour part of "another conspiracy against Afghanistan." It also quoted Habib as denouncing American "intervention in progressive countries and peace-loving movements."

After Weinberger toured the refugee camp, he met in Islamabad with President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq. U.S. and Pakistani officials said Zia told Weinberger he is satisfied with the flow of U.S. weapons that have come as part of a $3.2 billion aid package to Pakistan.

Half the money is made available as U.S. credits for military sales, and half comes as economic assistance.

Workers ready Odessa's new bank for opening

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

ODESSA — The same employees of National Bank of Odessa — which was declared insolvent Friday night — were working overtime this weekend to prepare a new bank for greeting customers Monday, the First State Bank of Odessa N.A.

With the assets of failed National Bank of Odessa — excluding its commercial loans — owners of the newly-created bank plan an aggressive lending program, saying they have a strong cash position. They will continue to make energy loans — the kind that caused NBO to fail, the new owners told the Reporter-Telegram Saturday evening in an interview.

NBO was closed by the Comptroller of the Currency at 6:26 p.m. Friday and placed under Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation receivership. The bank had almost $82 million in depository accounts.

The Odessa bank posted an $18.98 million total loss for the first two quarters of 1983. When it closed it had a negative equity capital position of about $9 million — meaning its assets had been overrun by its liabilities.

DEPOSITORS WILL suffer no loss, even if they have funds in excess of the $100,000 insurance limit with NBO. Directors and stockholders of NBO will have no position in the new bank.

First State Bank of Odessa will be part of Abilene holding company Independent Bankshares Incorporated, which has total assets — after five pending bank acquisitions are complete — of roughly $800 million. About $550 million of the assets are in its Abilene lead bank. N.A. means the Odessa bank is a national, not a state, bank.

Brad Stephens is president and Syd Niblo chief executive officer of Independent Bankshares. Both have extensive banking backgrounds. They arrived in Odessa Saturday to look over their new acquisition.

Stephens, 32, described the bank holding company as "a West Texas company" which could just as easily have been started in Midland or Odessa as in Abilene. It is a 3-year-old venture. "We look forward to the fresh start of operations in Odessa," he said.

Continental still flying

HOUSTON (AP) — A strike by pilots and flight attendants Saturday forced financially weak Continental Airlines to cancel or delay more than a dozen flights, but company officials said the carrier would keep flying.

Most Continental flights departed on time even after the Air Line Pilots Association and the Union of Flight Attendants went on strike, angry over the layoffs of 70 percent of Continental's work force and pay cuts for remaining employees of about 50 percent.

"Continental is flying," said airline spokesman Bruce Hicks.

But Dennis Higgins, spokesman for the Continental chapter of pilot's association , maintained, "We seeing more and more planes being parked. Some passengers have told us that they even noticed a difference in the operation. We think that within two days the operation will be halted."

The pilots and flight attendants walked off their jobs shortly after 2 a.m. CDT, one week after Continental filed for reorganization and protection from creditors under federal bankruptcy laws.

Hundreds of pilots and flight attendants — many wearing their uniforms and carrying placards — picketed in front of ticket counters, along concourses, in hangar areas and outside airport terminals in many of the 25 cities now served by Continental.

"Things are looking good," said Gary Thomas, spokesman for the Continental chapter of the pilots' association. "This is building and we're locking arms."

Was Odessa 'framed' by murder rap?

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

ODESSA, Texas — Odessa, admits newspaper editor Tom Nickell, is rowdy. No doubt about it. But murderous? Not really.

Nickell said the recent designation of Odessa by an anti-handgun group as the murder capital of America was based on a statistical fluke. What's more, he said, it is hardly the mecca of trigger-happy gunslingers that some suggest.

"Whatever wild West tradition we have, which is pretty minimal, the myth of two guns on each hip is not true," he grumbled. "The statistic itself is a lie."

Nickell, managing editor of the Odessa American, referred to FBI figures that were used by the National Coalition to Ban Handguns, a Washington-based anti-handgun group, in proclaiming Odessa the most homicide-prone city in the country in 1982.

As Newsweek put it:

"For Murder Capital U.S.A., it isn't much — just a depressed oil town in an arid stretch of West Texas. But last week little Odessa, with 29.8 homicides per 100,000 residents, gunned its way past Miami to take dubious honors as the most perilous city in the nation...at least according to the National Coalition to Ban Handguns."

It seems that 31 of Odessa's 100,000-plus citizens got themselves shot, stabbed, strangled, blown up or beaten to death in 1982, although guns were the runaway favorite as the murder weapon.

"If we had another 100,000 people and another 29.8 murders, the statistics would start being meaningful," protested Nickell. "And another 100,000 still, with another 29.8 murders, that would be significant. But the way they've done it is a joke, and not a very funny one at that."

To the dismay of image-conscious citizens, reporters have pounced on Odessa as a coyote might a jackrabbit.

"Community leaders citywide were bombarded all last week with phone calls from hot-shot media types — national television news researchers, weekly news magazine reporters, scribes from the country's heavyweight newspapers in New York and Los Angeles," the American noted in a Sept. 25 editorial.

"They all wanted to know just how dangerous it is to live in a lawless West Texas town, the last of the great frontiers where everyone walks around with six-gun on his hip and beer in his hand."

Grumped Police Chief Alan Stewart: "Odessa is nowhere near as dangerous as cities like Miami, Dallas or New York."

Jack Cowan, a columnist at the neighboring San Angelo Standard-Times, wrote a satirical yarn about a night in Odessa dodging bullets, grenades, landmines and machinegun fire.

Mayor Bob Bryant might not have helped matters much when he was quoted as saying: "Maybe it goes back to the code of the West, people reacting by reaching for a gun."

Soviets protest U.S. 'aggressors'

MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Soviets, herded by police and organizers with megaphones, marched past the U.S. Embassy and down a dozen windswept Moscow streets Saturday in a massive demonstration for peace and against "the shameful American aggressors."

Organized by the Communist Party at schools and workplaces and through radio and newspaper announcements over two days, marchers were ferried to the rallying points by buses to join in the biggest demonstration seen in Moscow outside official holidays like the Nov. 7 Revolution Day.

Demonstrations not sanctioned by authorities are forbidden in the Soviet union and always broken up by police. Moscow's only unofficial peace group has been harassed over activities that include nothing more than circulating petitions calling for trust between the two superpowers.

Radio Moscow said 500,000 people took part in Saturday's "mass anti-war manifestation" on a bitter cold and occasionally snowy day, converging on parks, stadiums and the government university with split-second precision.

"Today the people of Moscow came out to raise their voices for peace, to protest the madness of the arms race," said Valentina Tereshkova, the first woman in space.

She spoke from a platform erected in front of the ornate, colonnaded entrance to Gorky Park. Behind her hung a 30-foot-high banner proclaiming "Peace" in red letters. About 100,000 people crowded into the square in front of the stage.

About 8,000 gathered at Moscow State University, about 20,000 at Lenin Stadium, an additional 10,000 at the Olympic Stadium on Peace Avenue, and tens of thousands of others went to parks around the capital.

In sharp contrast to the boisterous anti-war demonstrations familiar to Westerners, the columns of marchers for the most part walked in orderly silence.

Starting the march at the stroke of 11 a.m., they converged on the rally points simultaneously as loudspeakers burst forth with Yevgeny Yevtushenko's martial poem "Russians Don't Want War." By 1:05 p.m., every marcher had gone home.

The demonstrators — ranging from 3-year-olds bundled in ski parkas to matrons with fur hats and leather coats — chanted, "We Vote for Peace" when prompted by organizers stationed every 20 yards in the columns.

Passing the American Embassy on Tchaikovsky Street, a mile-long, five-abreast column whistled and shouted "Shame on the American Aggressors" as a half-dozen off-duty Marines watched from a balcony flying an American flag.

Policemen walked every 100 feet along the sides of the column while others directed traffic away as it passed over Crimean Bridge and down to Gorky Park.

There, marchers generally stood in staid silence, stamping their feet and huddling against the cold. Occasionally, they responded to speeches with automatic chants and shouts.

A 19-year-old student talking with an American reporter turned, lifted his right arm on signal during one speech and then turned back to the reporter without interrupting his sentence.

The pitch of anti-American statements has risen with the approach of the December starting date for deployment of NATO missiles in Europe, and since the Soviet attack on a South Korean airliner killed 269 people and prompted worldwide expressions of outrage.

Letters from citizens accusing the United States of using the airliner for a spy mission — as the Kremlin has said — have appeared in large numbers in the press, which is strictly controlled by the government.

And peace activists in the European nations to receive the new missiles have protested. Western officials have said some of those demonstrations are Soviet-inspired.

One Soviet official acknowledged privately that the march was organized as a follow-up to President Yuri V. Andropov's sharp rejection of President Reagan's latest arms reduction proposals, but added, "Just look how many are here. The people are happy to do it. They want to come out and show support for the government."

The demonstration had a strong anti-American theme. Placards and banners — most of them professionally lettered — bore such slogans as "We Oppose the Shameful American Aggressors," and "No to New American rockets in Europe."

NATO is scheduled to deploy 572 new U.S. missiles in Western Europe beginning in December unless an arms accord is reached with the Soviets before then.

The Soviet news agency Tass issued what it called "a statement issued by the participants" in the demonstration accusing the United States of "plans (that) would sharply increase the nuclear danger for the peoples of the whole of Europe."

"We see on TV that American people are just like us, they don't want war, they want peace. The problem is the U.S. administration," said one student.

A 17-year-old, huddling in her boyfriends' arms and bundled up so tightly that only her blue eyes and a shock of blonde hair were visible, said: "We came so all the world could see how we feel, how the Soviet people want peace."

"We don't need war," said a man in his 40s. "What we need is to play soccer, tennis, run. We should compete to see who can jump the highest, not who can build the most missiles."

All declined to give their names.

Americans join freeze march

By The Associated Press

Hundreds of Americans in 200 cities took part in 10-kilometer walks Saturday and raised hundreds of thousands of dollars to campaign for a nuclear weapons freeze.

Marchers in Maine called their effort "Legs Against Arms," and one of the dozen contingents in Illinois paraded past Reagan's boyhood home in the town of Dixon.

More than 1,000 people turned out in downtown Cleveland, but in most places, the turnout was much smaller.

Rich Zeichik, the national coordinator for Freeze Walk of the national Nuclear Weapons Freeze Campaign in Santa Rosa, Calif., said Saturday evening that walkers had raised an unofficial $610,889 in pledges and cash from 169 of the day's 200 walks. He said the cash amounted to about $250,000.

There were 14,941 walkers and 118,764 sponsors, Zeichik said. Another 37 walks were scheduled for the coming weeks, he said.

In Augusta, Maine, about 100 arms-control advocates marched from the statehouse to the site of the Democratic presidential straw poll, which was won by former Vice President Walter F. Mondale.

Among the speakers greeting paraders at the Augusta Civic Center was Erhard Eppler, leader of the West German Social Democratic Party, who said "in order to get disarmament, you first need a freeze."

Employees prepare for opening

"WE'LL BE GETTING to know the community and its needs — and providing a positive banking service to Odessa," Stephens said. In a soft economy, with lending slowed at some Permian Basin banks, Stephens said FSBO will try "taking up the slack." It will do so carefully, since the Midland-Odessa area "is a new deal to us."

Niblo, 47, said, "We have always felt that banks should be lenders — commercial and consumer — in the community they draw their strength from. A good loan to a good person is the best asset a bank can have. Banks can invest in government and municipal bonds — but bonds don't open checking accounts, and don't become your good customers after 20 or 30 years."

Niblo said, "We hope to expand further in West Texas. We're just delighted to have the opportunity to come into the Odessa market."

The U.S. economy is weak, according to Niblo, and the oil economy has been "especially difficult." But while looking forward to better times, the First State Bank of Odessa will try to pump much-needed capital into the local economy by making a lot of loans, he said. "We hope to be making good loans immediately. We're under pressure to loan some of this money."

"This bank, when it opens on Monday, will be as liquid and as strong in its cash position as any bank in the U.S. All we have retained from NBO are its installment loans, a lot of cash, and furniture and fixtures," Niblo said.

FDIC WILL WRITE the new bank a $47 million check for remaining assets, like commercial loans, which it will retain and try to liquidate. Thus, the First State Bank of Odessa will be capitalized at $80 million on Monday, mostly in cash.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas announced approval of the application from Independent Bankshares Inc. to acquire First State Bank of Odessa N.A. "as a denovo institution formed to acquire certain assets and assume the liabilities of National Bank of Odessa pursuant to the emergency provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act." The approval was effective Saturday.

Independent Bankshares owns the First State Bank of Abilene and another bank in Wylie — with bank acquisitions pending in Wellington, Stamford, Olton, Littlefield and Muleshoe. The public company is listed in the NASDAQ securities market under IBSI — an issue selling recently at a $13 ask price.

On the FDIC bidders list for banks that come up for sale, the two men attended an informational meeting in Dallas Thursday and their successful bid came through Friday. The holding company paid a $1.2 million premium to FDIC for the bank's deposits and will put $4.2 million in cash into the new bank immediately.

Stephens and Niblo will hold a meeting with the former NBO employees today. Most of the NBO staff, including officers, will be retained. Niblo called them "a very competent group. We are contemplating re-electing the present officers of the bank."

OF CHANGES in the banking industry, including a new rule that has taken the interest rate ceiling off for longer deposits, Niblo remarked, "Banking has always been a heavily regulated industry — now becoming deregulated. I don't know where that will lead. But our philosophy in the past has been to offer all the financial products available to us, and try and be aggressive." Any bank must exist within its marketplace and stay competitive, he added.

Lewis Greene of the FDIC transfer team told the Reporter-Telegram Saturday, "...everything is going smoothly as far as I can see. The former employees of the National Bank of Odessa have been very cooperative, and have done everything we asked them to do, working late into the night Friday. You couldn't find a nicer group of people."

Greene said the FDIC "asked them to stay late and perform various functions for us, such as balancing out the ATMs (automated teller machines), counting the cash in the bank's vault and making sure things are in order."

The employees were asked to do these tasks, Greene said, "so we could have an orderly transfer (of ownership), and so the owners of the new holding company will know what they're getting.

"The new bank opens Monday morning," Greene said. "There should be no interruption or inconvenience to the customer, and that's what's important."

Separate burglaries reported

Wigs and earrings valued at a total of $400 and cowboy boots worth $2,400 were missing following separate incidents which occurred Saturday.

Ishmael Hernandez reported a burglary at the Wig Trend, 309 N. Mineola at 1:30 p.m. Eight wigs, valued at $300, and 120 pairs of earrings, valued at $130, were missing following the incident, which apparently occurred sometime last week. Entry was gained through a bathroom window.

Paula Neatherland reported the theft of four pairs of cowboy boots from Cowtown Boots, 4400 N. Big Spring, at 1 p.m. Total value was placed at $2,400.

In other action, the burglary of a residence at 4400 Palmer was reported by David Gross, of the same address. A rifle and camera, valued at a total of $875, were reported missing. Entry was gained through a northside window.

A roto-rooter, valued at $360, was taken from the backyard of William Adams, 3012 W. Ohio Ohio. The theft was reported about 6:30 p.m. Friday.

C.P. Olgin reported a burglary of a vacant residence at 708 N. Tilden about 6 p.m. Friday. An AM/FM radio and a couple of tools, valued at a total of $280, were taken during the incident, which occurred sometime between Tuesday and Friday. Entry was gained by knocking a wooden panel out of an eastside door.

First meeting of Trailmates set

The first meeting of Trailmates, a group for mothers and their children in kindergarten through fourth grade, will be at 7 p.m. Oct. 10, at the Alamo YMCA, 901 Midland Drive.

The group meets once a month and for special events, which include out-of-town campouts, picnics, swimming, skating, bowling and a carnvial.

Persons interested in joining the group may call 682-2551 or 694-2528 for more information.

Temperatures mild across state

By The Associated Press

A weak area of high pressure brought sunny skies and mild temperatures to most of Texas Saturday, while a weak low pressure system in New Mexico caused scattered cloudiness in the western portion of the state.

Temperatures rose into the 80s in the afternoon.

Highs in the 80s and 90s were forecasted for Monday with early morning temperatures in the 50s and 60s.

Airlines encounter stormy weather

By CHRISTOPHER LINDSAY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Continental Airlines is battling with employees over a drastic reduction in pay and jobs, Eastern Airlines employees are fighting their boss' demand that everyone take a 15 percent pay cut and the Air Line Pilots Association is mulling over a nationwide strike to draw attention to the airlines' plight.

"The confrontation couldn't have come at a worse time for the industry," says Sindlinger & Co. Inc., a private economic forecasting and polling organization.

The latest travails of the nation's airlines again shine a spotlight on a business struggling with high costs, unhappy employees, too many airlines and too few passengers.

The airlines, which together lost some $2 billion over the past 3½ years, had looked to this summer as their salavation — a peak vacation flying period that would allow them to put away some cash for the lean winter months.

Instead, airline traffic was up only a bit from 1982's depressed levels, and a new survey points to an even darker outlook in the next few months — a generally thin time for airlines anyway.

Sindlinger says the number of American households planning flying vacations in the next six months dropped from 14.3 million households in August to 7.1 million in September.

The drop, Sindlinger said, comes at "the very time this labor-management conflict is coming to a showdown."

Continental shut down a week ago and filed for bankruptcy court protection from creditors, then abrogated its union contracts and resumed business as a slimmed down "New Continental" with fewer employees, whose pay was cut in half.

Employees were enraged, calling for a strike, but Continental vowed to keep flying, strike or not.

Chairman Frank Lorenzo's bold move — using Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy code to break the contracts despite having almost $60 million in the bank — faces a legal test. Lorenzo argues the law does not expect a company to wait until its treasury is empty before it tries to reorganize.

The national pilots organization threatened a one- or two-day nationwide strike as "a last resort" if Congress did not step in to relieve some of the pain that followed the 1978 deregulation of the industry, the pain of fare wars and new competitors.

Alfred Kahn, the Cornell University economics professor who was the architect of deregulation in the Carter administration, said the current turmoil, particularly the suffering of Continental and Eastern, should come as no surprise.

"If you take an industry that for 40 years has been protected from outsiders and from itself and deregulate it, this is what you get," he said.

He said airlines that were "quick on their feet" to adjust to change would prosper. He cited People Express, USAir and Piedmont Aviation.

USAir, the smallest of the 11 major airlines — those with annual revenue of more than $1 billion — reported a record profit of $28 million in the second quarter of the year and a six-month profit of $26 million.

People Express, the no-frills new airline born after deregulation, earned $4.2 million in the second quarter, $3 million over the first half. People Express, which has low fares while charging for services like meals, earned a tidy $1 million in 1982, its first full year in operation.

Group's 'murder rap' stirs little happy talk in Odessa

The New York Times said editorially that Odessans, unlike Miamians, seem more relaxed and "ho hum" about their statistical dilemma.

Observed the Times, "In Odessa the killings tend to occur among people who know each other: drinking pals, poker buddies, husbands, wives and their jealous friends.

"Odessa is an oil town that attracted many new residents during the boom. Now, with the bust, they have plenty of time for arguing and drinking and expressing their frustration by means of violence."

Perhaps the unkindest cut of all came from Molly Ivins, a columnist with the Dallas Times Herald.

"For you neo-natives who have not yet sorted out one West Texas metropolis from another," she wrote, "Odessa is an armpit about 30 miles down the road from an equal armpit named Midland. ...

"The only 'bidness' in Midland-Odessa is 'awl': The owners live in Midland, the workers live in Odessa. Midland is rich and Republican, Odessa is working class and Democratic.

"Odessa is more fun, of course, but now crime statistics show they've been having too much fun out there."

After reading that, Nickell laughed and said:

"Molly's right when she described this part of the country as an armpit. Actually, we think we've been upgraded. Some people refer to another part of the anatomy."

Odessans are a resilient breed and possessed of a special sense of humor, reflected in part by a recent campaign to adopt "Odessa is Crude" as their oil-inspired city motto.

Odessans seem to embrace the rare ability to laugh at themselves, but "At the same time, I think most people out here laugh loudest at the Eastern reaction to a phony statistic," Nickell said.

"Much of the fun of being in Odessa and West Texas in general," he added, "is that there's so much to be against — whether it's murder, racism, questionable politics or a New Yorker's opinion of West Texas. ...

"These are tough times and people are not as friendly as they were a while back. But the national story paints us as being more dangerous than Miami, St. Louis and even Houston," he continued.

"It's a lie. As I said in an editorial, 'Which town would you rather walk through after dark?'"

Three shot at football game

TEMPLE (AP) — A 20-year-old man was charged Saturday with shooting one of four people wounded at a high school football game during what police say was a dispute over a girlfriend.

Prince Angelo Ellison of Temple, who was arrested Friday night after the gunfire erupted beneath a vistors' grandstand, was arraigned Saturday on a charge of attempted murder. Peace Justice Joe Harrison set Ellison's bond at $7,000.

One of the wounded remained in critical condition Saturday.

Dwayne Morrison, 17, a junior at Temple High School, was shot in the abdomen and underwent extensive surgery at Scott and White Hospital Saturday morning. Yolanda Chestnut, 17, a senior, was shot under the arm and listed in serious condition Saturday. Byron Moore, 15, a freshman, who was shot in the back and listed in fair condition.

An unidentified fourth person was treated and released.

Ellison was charged with shooting Moore, but police Lt. Denny Knight said information on the other victims would be given to the district attorney's office Monday.

Ellison was a former student at Temple High School, which was playing Killeen Ellison Friday night when the gunfire began about 9:40 p.m., witnesses said. Only one small-caliber pistol was used, police said.

Knight said the incident apparently stemmed from "an altercation that's been going on for several days."

"I understand the suspect and one of the wounded had been arguing about a girl the last two or three days," Knight said. Knight said he didn't know with whom Ellison allegedly had the feud.

Dr. John Hendricks, a physician at Scott and White, said shots broke out underneath the stadium seats during the second half of the game, a few minutes after he and his daughter arrived at the stadium.

"There were three young people, all with gunshot wounds. A couple will require surgery," said Hendricks, who rode in the ambulance that took the injured to the hospital.

Paramedics and volunteers attend to two injured youths Friday night after a shooting at a high school football game in Temple, Texas. Three teen-agers were injured in the shooting incident shortly after 10 p.m. underneath the stadium after the gunman apparently became involved in an argument with at least one teenager.

Hendricks said he watched about three minutes of the game before he heard the shots.

"By the time we got there, it was just a crowd and three kids on the ground," he said.

"Everybody's a little tight-lipped about the cause of the shooting. It was apparently some sort of altercation," Hendricks said.

Kilgore grieves over slayings

KILGORE (AP) — The yellow reward posters taped to Kilgore storefronts don't say "Wanted: Dead or Alive," but they might as well.

In the barber shop, at the Lion's Club, over the lunch counter or in the mayor's office, residents are still reeling from the execution-style slaying of five people abducted from a fast-food restaurant nine days ago.

They all speak of one thing: revenge.

"People come in here and they say they ought to kill them as soon as they catch them," said Diane Renkema, shift supervisor at the Pizza Inn, just down the road from the local Kentucky Fried Chicken outlet.

FOUR KENTUCKY FRIED Chicken employees and a visitor were abducted about 10:30 p.m. Sept. 23, taken to a secluded East Texas oilfield 18 miles to the south, laid down in the dirt and shot in the back of the head. A back door at the restaurant was found open and about $2,000 was missing.

"If they catch them, I think they ought to take them out and shoot them in a field just like they did to those people," said Ms. Renkema.

Since the slaying, gun sales at local pawn shops have soared, an ice cream store now closes at 9 p.m. and Pizza Inn employees have stopped taking the garbage out at night through the back door. The night manager of another fast-food restaurant has bought a gun.

POLICE HAVE FEW CLUES and fewer suspects, but they speculate that the killers might be local residents because the isolated murder site was unlikely to be familiar to strangers. But Kilgore residents are confident a $50,000 reward will shake loose some leads.

"The people of this town want a hanging," said barber Jerome Denmon. "I believe it would be pretty hard to find a jury around here that would not believe in capital punishment.

"This has really changed the town," Denmon said at his barber shop in downtown Kilgore. "It will be a long time before people forget it — if they ever do. It's always there."

Before Sept. 23, the 11,300 residents of Kilgore had little more to worry about than how the local high school football team or the nationally ranked Kilgore Junior College team would fare this season. They talked about the parade appearances of the famed Kilgore Rangerettes drill team or drilling in the East Texas oil fields.

KILGORE HAS NOT always been so peaceful: 53 years ago, prospectors discovered the largest oil field in the United States under the town, and the "roughnecks" who flocked to the oil fields brought trouble to town.

National Guardsmen quelled riots in the 1930s, and the Texas Rangers eventually snuffed out such "frontier justice" practices as lynchings and shootouts.

But Kilgore residents are crying out for a kind of modern frontier justice, and Mayor Mickey Smith is working to keep his citizens calm.

"A LOT OF people have been talking about that — an eye for an eye, that kind of stuff," Smith said. "I understand their feelings. I'm angry, and quite frankly, I believe in capital punishment. ... But we will bring them to trial under the law."

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Money may be main issue

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Before the 1983 Legislature convened, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby predicted the three main issues would be money, money and money. As things stand now, it appears a major issue for any special legislative session will be money.

And if one had to draw up a list of issues for the 1985 Legislature, money would have to be at, or very near, the top.

The problem which any special session of the Legislature will have to consider, and which will have to be looked at any special session dealing with teacher pay, as Gov. Mark White would like, is where the money is going to come from, and that ultimately means taxes.

THE 1983 SESSION MANAGED to avoid implementing any major overall tax increases, but the 1985 session may not be that lucky.

And Comptroller Bob Bullock is cautioning legislators, and the public, that they needn't expect any sudden upsurge in State revenues.

Bullock reports his office is doing a "complete revenue estimate" now and that the State has completed fiscal 1983, with that estimate expected in a week or so.

But Bullock cautions that there appears, based on preliminary figures, to be "no appreciable change" in the revenue estimate which was used by the Legislature in setting the current biennial budget.

"Strictly tentative" figures, he says, show the sales tax is "not doing as well as we had anticipated," while oil income is "doing better."

"IN SHORT," BULLOCK REPORTS, "there is a balancing out."

One area of concern for the Comptroller's Office, and for State budget writers, is the effect of Hurricane Alicia on insurance premium tax payments to the State.

A 1979 law permits insurers to offset losses from such storms, on coverage in coastal areas, against their premium taxes.

Representatives from Bullock's office and the State Board of Insurance met last week to assess the impact that the losses could have on state revenues.

While Bullock's not prepared to forecast what the State's situation may be in 1985, when the next regular session of the Legislature occurs, he will predict that "we'll probably have a number of tax proposals."

BUT, HE ADDS, "I don't think there will be any great groundswell on behalf of the Texas people asking to be taxed...Nobody's written me saying they want to be taxed more."

The exception to that may be the State gasoline tax, Bullock notes.

"Of all the proposals for taxes that I've heard, there seems to be more sentiment for that type of tax than anything else," he comments.

There has been considerable editorial support for improving highways, with some support specifically for increasing the State gasoline tax to do that, he says.

"I HAVE NOT SEEN THAT on any other tax," Bullock adds.

Bullock notes the State currently is operating under a budget of around $28 billion annually while requests by State agencies to the 1983 session came to over $38 billion.

"I don't think agency requests will be any smaller, or that highways will get any better...or that the number of school kids is going to get any smaller," he says.

Bullock's "educated guess" is that State revenues aren't likely to get appreciably larger or appreciably smaller before the next session, and that chances are there won't be any "excess money" for 1985.

BULLOCK HAS BEEN looking at alternative taxing strategies, at the request of Lt. Gov. Hobby, but has suspended work on that project temporarily — partly to see the results of tax changes in some other states.

"Twenty-two states increased gasoline taxes this last go-round," he says.

But, he comments, determining whether to raise taxes, and what taxes to raise, is "not my job, and it's not the job of the school teachers or the highway department."

Bullock may be involved in making some taxing recommendations, directly or indirectly, due to his service on the Select Committee on Public Education, headed by H. Ross Perot, which seems inclined to recommend a financing proposal as part of its recommendations on overhauling Texas' school system.

Toxicity moving to base

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Water tainted with an industrial solvent is trickling toward Carswell Air Force Base and the drinking water supply of suburban White Settlement, an Air Force official says.

An Air Force consultant found low concentrations of the hazardous chemical, 1,2-transdichloroethylene, in one of four water monitoring wells at a General Dynamics plant near an old landfill.

The contaminated water is moving slowly to the southeast toward the air base and could reach White Settlement's municipal water supply in 30 years, Air Force Maj. Mike Madrid said.

The disclosure of contamination contradicts an Air Force statement on July 8, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Saturday. Madrid said then that "every test indictates there is no pollution of the Paluxy Aquifer," an underground source for water wells that serve General Dynamics, White Settlement and other communities.

CRIME STOPPERS

Council to concentrate on business of fencing

During the time it takes to read this article, at least two citizens in Texas will become statistics of property crime.

In Texas during 1982, a citizen became a victim of theft every 63 seconds, a household or business was burglarized every two minutes, and a motor vehicle was stolen every six minutes. According to the Texas Department of Public Safety, a property crime occurred in Texas every 36 seconds during 1982.

Over 90% of all crime in Texas is classified as property crime. The criminals who make their living by taking the possessions of hardworking citizens depend on a means to dispose of their stolen good quickly and cleanly. That means is the fence.

Without the person who buys, trades, and sells stolen property, burglary and theft would not be the billion dollar business in Texas it is today.

For the month of October, the Governor's Crime Stoppers Advisory Council is concentrating its efforts on stopping the lucrative business of fencing. If any citizen has information concerning people involved in the buying, selling or trading of stole property, they're asked to call their local Crime Stoppers program or Texas Crime Stoppers toll-free at 1-800-252-TIPS anytime, day or night.

Crime Stoppers will pay cash rewards for information leading to the arrest and felony indictment of those people who deal in stolen goods. Citizens will not be asked their names, and will be given a unique code number for reward purposes.

The Governor's Crime Stoppers Advisory Council is also asking citizens to contact their local police department to find out how to protect their property and better identify it in case of theft. Marked goods provide greater risk and difficulty in reselling, and fences often refuse to deal in identified property.

Judges expresses relief at Lucas guilty plea

Henry Lucas

HENRIETTA (AP) — A orth Texas judg says he's relieve that a drifterwho claims to ave killed 150 wmen nationwide enterrupted a pr-trial hearing to lead guilty to on of seven murders with which he isharged.

Henry Le Lucas, 47, on Friday avoided th first of several scheduled murdr trials around Texas by suddenly clnging his plea to guilty in the September 1982 slaying of Kate Rich, 0, of the nearby North Texas community of Ringgold.

Lucas pleded guilty in exchange for a 75-yea prison term.

"I feel lik the world's been lifted off my shulders," State District Judge Frank Douthitt told The Associated Press in a telephone interview shortly after the hearing.

"Technically speaking, I have jurisdiction, but basically, I'm through (with the Lucas case)," the judge said.

Lucas was scheduled to have gone on trial in mid-October for the murder of Mrs. Rich, a woman with whom Lucas and his 15-year-old common-law wife lived during the summer of 1982 while Lucas did odd jobs for the woman.

Lucas was being held in lieu of $1 million bond set by Douthitt, and the judge had imposed a gag order because of the publicity that surrounded the case after Lucas began talking from his jail cell about the scores of other women he claimed to have killed.

Lucas has told authorities that over the past eight years he killed women — mostly hitchhikers — in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, California, Oregon, South Dakota, Minnesota, Illinois, Michigan, West Virginia, Florida, Louisiana, New Jersey, Oklahoma and Missouri.

Douthitt said Friday night that as far as he knew, Lucas' decision to plead guilty "just came up today. I was out of town until 1 o'clock, but was not particularly surprised. I guess it's called judge's intuition or something."

Friday's pre-trial hearing began at 1:30 p.m. but when Don Maxfield of Wichita Falls, Lucas' court-appointed attorney, announced that his client was ready to plead guilty, Douthitt declared a recess to let both sides work out the details. The hearing reconvened 2½ hours later.

"I was approving for two reasons. One, it has the same effect of a life sentence because of his age — he's 47 — and two, it would save a lengthy, expensive trial for Montague County," the judge said.

Lucas has been charged in Denton County in the death of Frieda Powell, a runaway from Jacksonville, Fla., who had been traveling with him. Lucas led authorities to her remains in a ditch alongside Interstate 35 after he had taken officers to a grave where Ms. Rich had been buried.

Other murder charges pending against him include the Ector County strangulation death in 1981 of Beverly Joyce Luttrell, 46, of Odessa; the March 1982 stabbing death of Delon Marie Wilkinson, 22, of Houston and the murder of 19-year-old Kathy Whorton of Bastrop, La.

Medicare change pressures hospital to contain costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to contain the exploding cost of medical care, the federal government put into effect Saturday a new system setting in advance what Medicare will pay a hospital to treat various ailments.

With the change, patients may find an emphasis on shorter hospital stays and fewer amenities during their visit, a spokesman for the hospital industry said.

"In the past, a physician might have been more receptive to a patient saying, can't I stay another day to rest up?" Bruce McPherson, executive director of the American Hospital Association's office of policy analysis in Chicago, said Friday in a telephone interview.

MEDICAL PERSONNEL WILL be under pressure not to order any more tests or procedures than are needed, he said. "The bottom line will be, is it really necessary?" McPherson said.

Because the new system puts a premium on cost-cutting, "hospitals are probably going to have to pick and choose more carefully what amenities, or luxuries, are offered to patients," McPherson said, citing hospital aesthetics and menus as examples.

Under the prospective payment system ordered by Congress at the administration's request, hospitals will know exactly what Medicare, the federal health insurance program for the elderly and disabled, will pay for treating a patient with a particular ailment. Price tags will be set for treating 467 different ailments.

NINE REGIONS HAVE BEEN set up, with nine different price schedules based on prevailing wage rates. Within each region, there is an urban and a rural price schedule, said Dr. Robert Rubin, assistant secretary for planning and evaluation at the Department of Health and Human Services.

If a hospital is able to keep the cost of treating a patient below the scheduled fee, it keeps the difference. If the cost exceeds the schedule, the hospital absorbs the difference.

The system went into effect at about 1,700 hospitals on Saturday, the beginning of the federal fiscal year, he said. That is approximately 25 percent of the total number of hospitals slated to go under the new plan, he said. Others will begin when their fiscal year starts.

THE PLAN WILL MEAN no change in an individual patient's financial situation, Rubin said, because it doesn't allow the hospital to charge a beneficiary any more than he or she would have been charged under the old system. Under that system, a hospital's reimbursement was based on what it claimed as "reasonable costs."

McPherson said his members, who include some 6,300 hospitals, generally favor the new system over the old, but have some concerns about how it will look after the phase-in has been completed.

The old system, he said, "was a no-win situation. If a hospital was able to contain costs, there was no financial reward. There were upper limits on what costs could be incurred and they were fairly arbitrary. A hospital could contain costs and still find itself over the limit. Now the hospital knows up front what it's going to be getting and can budget with that in mind."

During the first year of the new system, payments will be based 75 percent on an individual hospital's historical costs, and 25 percent on regional averages. Over three years, this ratio will be reversed.

AN OFFICIAL OF THE Congressional Budget Office summed up fears by some that the system could result in less access to quality care by Medicare beneficiaries.

"One reason for this is that if hospitals faced lower payments they might respond by admitting fewer Medicare patients — particularly those most costly to treat," said Nancy Gordon, assistant director for human resources at the CBO, in testimony before Congress when it was considering the change.

"Moreover, some hospitals with a large proportion of Medicare patients might experience serious financial problems and be forced to postpone modernization or to close," she said.

Rubin said the new system "places a premium on cost-effective, high-quality care" and has safeguards to protect against Medicare patients being slighted.

HE SAID HOSPITALS can be expected to increase the things they do best. For instance, if a hospital did bypass coronary surgery well, it would increase the number of such operations because the cost of performing additional ones would be less. Hospitals that did not do a lot of that surgery probably would get out of it altogether.

About 29.4 million Americans participate in the Medicare hospital program, which cost the federal government $50.9 billion in 1982. Roughly two-thirds of the total went toward hospital costs.

Health care costs rose more than 12 percent last year, about three times the national inflation rate. It is hoped the system will hold down the rate of Medicare increases, but it won't avert a financing crisis in the Medicare hospital trust fund.

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that prospective payment will buy about one year's time for Medicare but that the program still won't be able to pay bills on time beginning around 1990 unless Congress takes further action.

Psychiatric, long-term, children's and rehabilitation hospitals are excluded from the prospective payment system. Hospitals in New York, New Jersey, Maryland and Massachusetts will not switch to the new system because those states already have their own cost-control systems.

Girl found in trash

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A baby born without a complete brain and found in a college wastebin by nursing students will remain a welfare case while the state decides her legal fate, officials said.

The 6-day-old girl — who is missing about 85 percent of her brain, with only a brain stem — was found bruised and cold under wads of paper towels in a women's restroom trash can at Boise State University's Science Education Building.

The baby was born Monday in a restroom stall, police said. Her mother has not been found, but police did say they found fingerprints and hair in the stall and were looking for the woman.

Dr. Margaret Watkins, a neonatologist, said the baby has only about 15 percent of her brain. Babies with such impairments have a life expectancy of three to six months, but some can live considerably longer with proper care, Ms. Watkins said.

Owner Harvey Ball, of Harvey's Gun Shop in Luverne, held .30 caliber bullets similar to those he sold two suspects in the ambush killings of two Ruthton bankers Thursday morning. The men entered the store around 2 p.m. and bought 100 rounds. They also bought more ammunition at another store. This was the last confirmed sighting of the two, although a search continues.

Police searching for suspects

LUVERNE, Minn. (AP) — Armed with arrest warrants, police searched Saturday for a farmer and his son accused of ambushing and killing two executives of a bank that had foreclosed on their farm.

Felony arrest warrants citing two counts of second-degree murder each for James Lee Jenkins, 46, and his 18-year-old son, Steve, were issued by Lincoln County Sheriff Abe Thompson early Saturday.

Bulletins have also been issued to law enforcement agencies in Minnesota, Iowa, South Dakota and Wisconsin. But Thompson said, "It's such a widespread hunt, if they had moved we would have had contact, you'd think. I have no reason to believe they have left the state."

Thompson said revenge may have been the motive behind the shooting deaths of the two executives whose bank foreclosed the elder Jenkins' small dairy farm in 1979.

Rudy Blythe, 42, owner and president of the Buffalo Ridge State Bank of Ruthton, was found dead with three bullet wounds Thursday morning in a roadside ditch in front of the former Jenkins farm.

The body of Deems "Toby" Thulin, vice president and loan officer, was discovered in a car behind the three-story farm house. He had been shot in the neck. Both bank officers were from Ruthton, a farm community of 332 people.

Authorities say the suspects lured the bankers to the vacant, overgrown farm with a call the night before, saying they wanted to buy the land.

The Jenkinses were last seen five hours after the shootings, about 30 miles south of the farm, buying shotgun shells, 100 rounds of .30-caliber ammunition, a flashlight and the wrong-sized battery, merchants in Luverne said.

Protester jailed for contempt

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — An attempt by a suburban tax protester to make a citizen's arrest of a judge for allegedly violating "the supreme law of the land" backfired when the man was jailed for contempt.

Daniel M. Gross, 45, of Landisville appeared in a civil suit accusing him of failing to pay taxes from 1978-81 to the Hemfield Union School District and the Lancaster County Tax Bureau.

After a discussion of "what is income" and "who is a taxpayer," Gross handed Common Pleas Judge Michael J. Perezous a "citizen's arrest warrant" accusing Perezous of, among other things, aiding "a fraud to dilute and debauch the money of the United States."

Perezous ordered Gross jailed for six months and fined $5,000.

Ex-convict gets $500,000

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A man who spent nine years in prison for a crime he didn't commit will receive $500,000 in the settlement of a lawsuit against the attorney who defended him in 1972, his new attorney says.

Francis P. Hemauer, 60, was sentenced to 60 years after being convicted of rape, attempted murder and abduction in an attack on a 15-year-old girl in Milwaukee. But the district attorney's office reopened the case in 1981 and asked for dismissal of the charges.

Tests established the attacker's semen, found on the victim's clothing, showed he had type B blood, but Hemauer has type A blood.

Robert Habush, who represented Hemauer in the suit, said Friday that Potomac Insurance Co. of Philadelphia, the insurance company for Hemauer's former attorney, agreed to pay $500,000.

Canadian consul robbed

NEW YORK (AP) — A 20-year-old Manhattan man was arrested Saturday and charged with robbing a member of the Canadian Consulate outside his city residence, Housing Authority police said.

A man approached Sean Brady, 40, outside a building on East 86th Street at about 6:30 a.m., announced he had a gun and ordered him to turn over his money, said Sgt. Joseph Gaschler of the Housing Authority. The thief fled with $93.

Housing Authority Officer Michael DiLello arrested Joseph Hart a half-hour later near Hart's home, a block away from the robbery site.

Times Mirror buys ACT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Times Mirror Corp. has become sole owner of American Cable Television (ACT), a struggling company founded in Phoenix, Ariz., by Bruce Nerrill.

Times Mirror, which already owned half of the company, bought the remaining 50 percent interest from Nerrill on Friday.

In April, ACT "announced problems in meeting interest payments" to lending banks, Times Mirror spokeswoman Elizabeth Higashi said.

Mormon Church president attends General Conference

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball, who has made no public appearances for more than nine months because of illness, on Saturday attended the opening session of the faith's 153rd Semiannual General Conference.

Kimball, 88, appearing extremely feeble as he walked slowly on the arm of his personal secretary to his seat, sat down and almost immediately appeared to go to sleep, his head falling forward on his chest.

Kimball's appearance, his first at a general conference in a year, was particularly significant for church members who revere him as a prophet of God.

Gordon B. Hinckley, Kimball's second counselor, held the church leader's hand in the moments before the conference convened. In Hinckley's opening remarks, he expressed regret that Kimball's health "does not permit him to speak."

"Though his body is tired and weak," Hinckley added, "the force of (his) leadership is felt throughout the church in all the world. It is an agent that binds us together as followers of the Lord Jesus Christ."

Marion G. Romney, Kimball's 86-year-old first counselor, also entered the Mormon Tabernacle with assistance in his first public appearance in many months. Romney was described by Hinckley as in poor health and unable to deliver a message to the thousands of faithful gathered in the tabernacle in Temple Square.

Mormon general conferences, held on the first weekends of April and October, draw thousands of local church leaders from around the world. They hear general officers of the church address matters of doctrine during morning and afternoon sessions both days and in another two-hour session tonight for the faith's all-male priesthood.

Hinckley is conducting the conference jointly with Ezra Taft Benson, 84. As president of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, Benson becomes the church's next "prophet, seer and revelator" after Kimball dies.

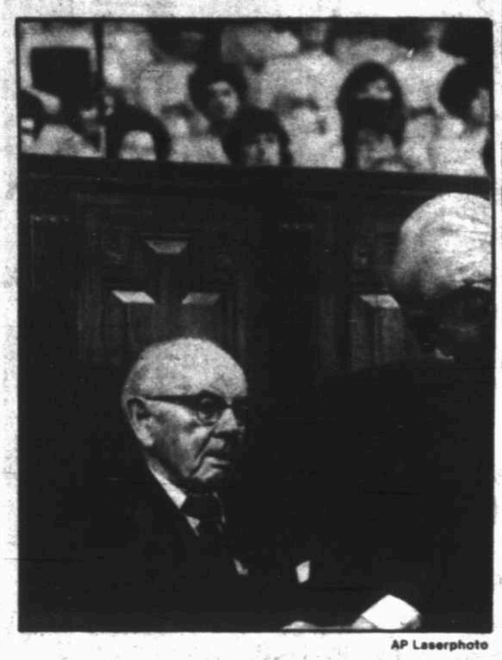

In his opening remarks, Benson voiced a major theme of the conference, that faith in Jesus is "the fundamental principle of our religion."

"Faith in him means trusting that he has all power over all men and all nations. There is no evil which he cannot arrest," Benson said. "This earth is his rightful dominion. Yet he permits evil so we can make choices between good and evil."

For months, the 73-year-old Hinckley has been the only member of the ruling First Presidency healthy enough to work daily on the affairs of the 5.2 million-member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Speaking to students at church-owned Brigham Young University on Sept. 20, Hinckley said he had "been under tremendous pressures," but added the administration of the church's vast spiritual and secular affairs has not suffered without Kimball and Romney.

Some employees at church headquarters here say privately there is an unusual backlog of business requiring the attention of the First Presidency.

Court appealing verdict in favor of producers

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The judges of the U.S. District Court in New Orleans have appealed a ruling that threw out their contempt charges against the CBS television network.

The court asked the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to review last month's ruling by U.S. Judge Earl Veron of Lake Charles.

The 14 judges of the New Orleans district took the extraordinary step of hiring their own lawyers to prosecute contempt charges against CBS.

U.S. District Judge Adrian Duplantier held the network in contempt after producers refused to let him see the script of a "60 Minutes" news program on alleged New Orleans police brutality before it was broadcast.

Reagan: Employment improving

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Saturday that economic recovery has brought "a rising tide of employment" for communities across the nation.

Offering an upbeat assessment of the economy, Reagan declared in his weekly radio address that the outlook for America is good and getting better.

"Will the economic recovery last and the job market continue to improve? I believe the answer is yes. I'm bullish on America," the president said.

He said his optimism came from "solid evidence that America has turned the corner toward long-term economic expansion. If all of us act responsibly, we can enjoy a renaissance of growth, progress and opportunities free from the ruinous inflation and record interest rates of old."

Reagan said findings from a private survey of 11,400 employers in 354 cities indicate that America's job picture will improve during the next three months, and it's likely to get even better after April."

"The rising tide of employment is reaching across America into communities large and small, farms and factories, and it's helping people from all walks of life," he said.

The president said that "60 percent of jobs lost in the construction industry during the last recession have been recovered."

Comparable figures for other industries, he said, include 70 percent of recession-lost jobs in furniture and fixtures, 90 percent in rubber and plastics, and 90 percent in automobiles.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas, giving the Democrats' response to the radio speech, criticized the Reagan administration over the "astronomical growth" of federal budget deficits. He noted that the deficit had climbed to $207 billion for the just-ended 1983 fiscal year.

Wright said the deficits "keep interest rates up. They soak up capital which could be used for private investments in job-creating enterprises. In these ways they choke off economic recovery and perpetuate unemployment."

Six die, seven hurt in shooting spree

AGANA, Guam (AP) — Police today captured a prison parolee wanted in a "mad dog" shooting rampage that left six people dead and seven wounded over three days, authorities said.

The parolee, identified as Irvin R. Ibanez, 24, was arrested after fleeing to a neighbor's house in Dedo, a community about five miles north of Tumuning on this Pacific island, said Judith Guthertz, the island's director of public safety.

Two other men left Ibanez's house by car, and officers followed them in a high-speed chase to a pizza parlor in Tumuning, she said. Shooting broke out before the men were arrested. Police found a semi-automatic rifle in their car, she said.

Two neighbors of Ibanez were arrested for assisting him, and a purse snatcher who became involved in the car chase also was picked up, said Ms. Guthertz.

Police later determined the two men arrested at the pizza parlor weren't suspected of being accomplices in the shooting spree.

Heavily armed officers continued to comb the island, Ms. Guthertz said.

The attacks — including an assault on two young police officers, resulting in the death of one — prompted Gov. Richardo J. Bordallo to fly back to Guam from a conference on Saipan.

He termed the assailants "psychopaths and mad dogs," and the island's director of public safety said the men, thought to be armed with automatic rifles, are considered extremely dangerous.

All police leaves were canceled and officers were put on 12-hour shifts to take part in the manhunt. Bordallo said the FBI, federal drug agents and the U.S. Naval Investigative Service have agreed to assist local police.

Ms. Guthertz said Ibanez, recently was released from Guam Penitentiary after serving 18 months for assaulting a man with a machete.

Identities of the other two men were unknown, she said.

Some of the killings may be the result of bungled robbery attempts, Ms. Guthertz said.

The first shooting occurred early Wednesday in the parking lot of the Club Maxim following a fight over a pool game in the nightclub, said Lt. Benny Quitugua.

Anthony P. Ignacio, 23, was fatally wounded, and two U.S. Navy sailors sitting in a nearby car.

Gunbattle leaves 57 dead

SAKRAND, Pakistan (AP) — A gunbattle between soldiers and anti-government protesters left 57 people dead and at least 50 wounded outside this rural town in southern Pakistan, hospital workers said Saturday.

Military government accounts of the Thursday shootout have said eight people were killed and 45 wounded after troops were ambushed by at least 300 armed protesters. Officials have refused to elaborate on the incident, which came three days before today's local elections.

It was the latest major outbreak of violence in Sind province between the army and the Movement for the Restoration of Democracy, which is demanding the resignation of President Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq. The group is boycotting the elections, claiming they are a farce.

Workers at the Tehsil Hospital, who refused to be identified for fear of government retribution, said that 15 soldiers were among the 57 dead in the hourlong firefight. Most of the victims were taken to Nawabshah, about 12 miles north of Sakrand, because the hospital has very limited facilities, they said.

A government press release Thursday said the clash occurred about midday when security forces arrived to clear debris from the national highway, where an army patrol had been ambushed Wednesday and four soldiers killed.

Three heavily armed truckloads of soldiers and two vanloads of police carrying rifles guarded the battleground Saturday and refused to answer questions.

Sind province in southern Pakistan has been plagued by political violence since the Movement for the Restoration of Democracy was established seven weeks ago to demand the resignation of Zia, who seized power in a 1977 military coup.

Philippine businessman, editor arrested for sedition

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Philippine government pressed its claim Saturday that communists plotted the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino, and police charged a top businessman and a newspaper editor with sedition, a capital crime that could bring the death penalty.

Opposition lawyer Joker Arroyo said of the latest claim the communists plotted Aquino's death, "Ignore it." Aquino's widow, Corazon, said the man the regime cited as witnessing the killing was "a liar."

On Friday, police arrested Rogelio Pantaleon, a vice president of the Ayala Corp. Pantaleon told a news conference Saturday that police suspected that a 32-page booklet, a memorial tribute to Aquino, was seditious. A court hearing on the charges, which carry a possible death penalty, has been set for Oct. 10.

Rommel Corro, editor-publisher of the tabloid Philippines Times, which was padlocked by government agents Friday, also was charged Saturday with inciting sedition. Corro turned himself in after Manila newspapers reported he has being hunted by the military.

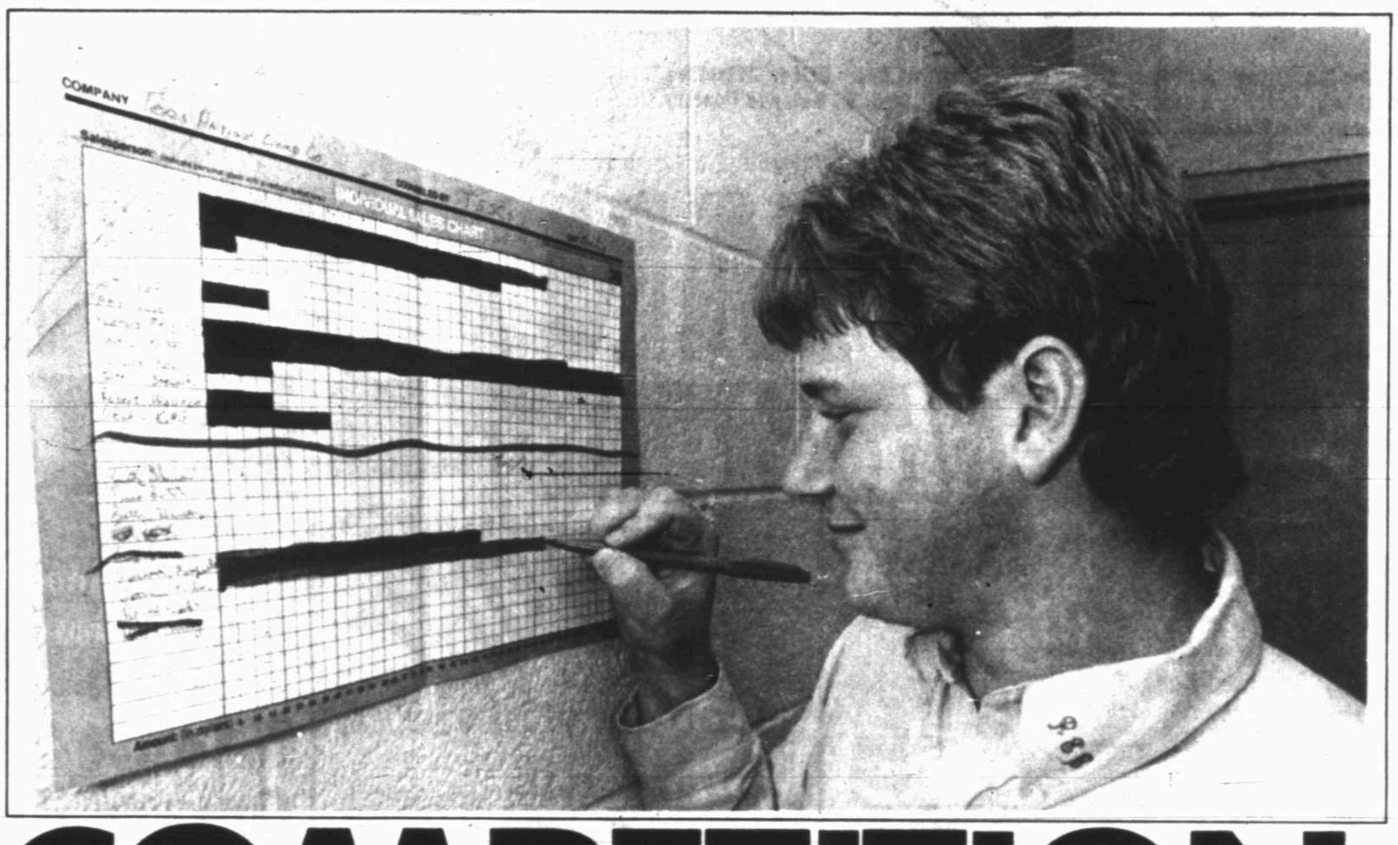

According to a military news release, undercover agent Rosendo Cawigan said Aquino's assassination at Manila airport Aug. 21 was ordered by Rodolfo Salas, described as head of the Central Committee of the Philippine Communist Party.

Cawigan, a one-time bodyguard to Aquino, was quoted as saying Salas wanted him to kill the opposition leader but that he refused and was later told the communists had recruited Rolando Galman instead.

The news release said, however, that Cawigan wanted to murder Aquino on his own because he feared Aquino would have him killed for previously testifying against him.

It said Cawigan was at the airport with a .45 caliber pistol bent on killing Aquino Aug. 21 when he heard shots and recognized the man lying on the tarmac.

Soldiers shot the man identified as Galman 16 times after Aquino fell. A Japanese freelance writer has said he saw soldiers shoot Aquino. Opposition leaders also accuse the government of complicity in the assassination, a charge Marcos denies.

Soviet rocket catches fire; Cosmonauts forced to eject

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Soviet rocket burst into flames on a remote launch pad in Asia last week, forcing the ejection of three cosmonauts who parachuted to safety, U.S. intelligence officials said Saturday.

The sources, who asked to remain anonymous, said the cosmonauts may have been injured in the accident last Tuesday.

The accident is as serious a setback as the manned Soviet space program is known to have suffered, the sources said.

The cosmonauts were saved when their Soyuz spaceship was jerked away from the booster by an escape rocket mounted atop the capsule, the sources said.

They said the flash fire occurred as the liquid-fuel rocket was about to blast off and send the cosmonauts, one of whom may have been a woman, to relieve the crew aboard the orbiting Salyut 7 space station.

The sources said there is a possibility the cosmonauts could have been hurt in the accident because of the abrupt ejection. Their mission was designated T-10, as it would have been the 10th mission of the Soyuz-T program.

"The escape rocket really pulled the capsule away with a slam bang. The cosmonauts are subjected to 15 Gs for two to three seconds," said one source, referring to a gravitational force 15 times that normally felt on earth.

"That's like driving a car into a tree," he said.

The sources declined to say where they got their information, but it is known that the United States has an intelligence network that includes spy satellites and radar listening posts along the Soviet border.

Earlier reports were that the T-10 rocket had exploded on the launch pad, but the sources said they were fairly certain the accident was caused by a fire. They did not rule out the possibility of a blast, however.

The Soyuz rocket is fueled by some 270 tons of highly flammable kerosene and liquid oxygen.

The Soviets have not made any public announcements about the incident. Myron Nagurney, senior duty officer for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said Friday night he had no information about such an accident.

The cosmonauts now aboard Salyut 7 were scheduled to come home this week or next. It is not known how much longer they will now be forced to remain in orbit.

Sino-Soviet talks seen as important

PEKING (AP) — A recent visit by Deputy Foreign Minister Mikhail S. Kapitsa of the Soviet Union heralded no breakthrough in Chinese-Soviet relations and tangible results were slight. But foreign diplomats here see it as the beginning of a significant process of communiction between the two countries.

Peking and Moscow have been at odds since the early 1960s over questions of Communist Party ideology and other matters. At the time, the Chinese under Chairman Mao Tse-tung frowned on Nikita S. Khrushchev's break with Stalinism and his opening of trade and other links with the West.

While formidable obstacles to normalization of relations remain, both sides in the recent meetings identified similar views on various international issues and discussed the problem of Vietnam and Cambodia — the No. 1 obstacle — in detail, according to foreign diplomatic sources.

China reaffirmed its independent foreign policy and said it would never join an international united front with the United States and its allies against the Soviet Union, the sources said.

Both sides agreed on substantial expansion of trade and cooperation in nonpolitical areas, the diplomats said, and agreements could be signed at the next round of consultations this month in Peking.

It was the first time that China invited such a high-ranking Soviet official for substantive talks on improving relations since the two countries split in the 1960s.

Before leaving, Kapitsa said his talks represented "a new channel of communication on international problems" and that Vice Foreign Minister Qian Qichen of China accepted his invitation to continue the new dialogue next year in Moscow.

"While high hurdles remain, at least they are talking," said one diplomatic analyst. "They wouldn't have done this a couple of years ago and the fact of the visit itself is important.

"The moves on both sides may be tactical but confidence-building measures in nonpolitical areas may improve the atmosphere, temper mutual suspicions so that one day the obstacles can be handled."

China says the obstacles to normalization are Soviet backing for Vietnam's military presence in Cambodia, the presence of Soviet troops along the Chinese-Soviet and Mongolian borders and the Soviet military intervention of Afghanistan.

Major improvements are expected in nonpolitical areas. Trade, worth the equivalent of $300 million in 1982, is projected at more than $815 million this year and in the next year another substantial increase is expected, according to the diplomatic sources.

Chinese-U.S trade totaled $5.1 billion in 1982 and fell to $2.1 billion in the first half of this year.

Although only 10 Chinese and Soviet students are enrolled in exchange programs this year, the number will increase substantially in the next two years, the sources said.

China quietly has been inviting Soviet experts to examine its outdated Soviet-built plants and is ready to sign an agreement for the Soviets to modernize a handful of major plants, the sources added. Czechoslovak experts have made feasibility studies on upgrading other plants and a Hungarian delegation has been discussing the modernization of more industries.

Thousands of Soviet and East European technicians built Chinese industries in the 1950s but were withdrawn abruptly in the early 1960s with the Chinese-Soviet split, leaving thousands of unfinished projects.

China also is interested in help in its steel and coal industries and in buying or bartering timber from Soviet Siberia.

On the political side, Kapitsa and Qian discussed the obstacles in detail, especially Vietnam's presence in Cambodia which China considers a threat to its security, the sources said.

The Soviet delegation, without yielding ground, agreed on the necessity to sort out the problem and the need for a settlement, according to sources who called that part of the discussions an important step.

The Soviets also are said to have argued that China's worries about Vietnam's actions in Southeast Asia should not propel Peking toward the United States.

Sense of normalcy sought in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Druse snipers prevented Red Cross workers from retrieving corpses Saturday in battle areas of the Chouf and Aley mountains, state radio reported.

The workers were ordered into the mountains by a civil-war truce committee, composed of representatives from the army and Druse, Shiite Moslem and Christian militias. It deployed the Red Cross teams as part of an agreement to return normal services to the war-torn country.

The workers were able to reach some areas, but the state radio said snipers blocked Red Cross teams from entering mountain zones held by the Druse leader Walid Jumblatt's militiamen.

Jumblatt said he would attempt to maintain the six-day-old cease-fire despite minor violations. He also said he would go to any "safe place" for a national reconciliation meeting, delayed by haggling over a site.

Such a meeting has been proposed to settle the factional differences that have caused civil turmoil in Lebanon since 1975. The latest round pitted the army and Christians against the Druse and Shiites.

Jumblatt, at a news conference at his family's Chouf mountain stronghold of Mouktara, insisted he would not accept a force composed of U.N. troops or the multinational force to police the cease-fire.

Sharp disagreements over the composition of a force to oversee the truce has raised fears that fighting will start again before the issue is resolved.

Jumblatt said he fears deployment of a U.N. force could lead to a permanent partition of Lebanon, like that of Cyprus, which is divided into Turkish and Greek sectors.

He also claims the multinational force would not fairly enforce the cease-fire because part of its job is to help President Amin Gemayel's army assert control over areas long held by private militias and armed groups.

The truce committee has been meeting since last Wednesday to arrange ground rules for further disengagement of military factions. It has ordered the opening of the highway south of Beirut and removal of militia checkpoints.

Reporters who traveled the coastal highway leading from Beirut to Israeli-occupied territory just north of Sidon on Saturday said militiamen from the right-wing Christian Phalange Party had dismantled their checkpoints.

State radio said police will soon begin sending patrols down the highway, indicating police rather than the army would supervise opening of the highway to a normal flow of traffic.

The cease-fire committee, in a statement broadcast on state radio following its fourth meeting, said it agreed to launch an extensive drive today to repair damaged water and power lines around Beirut and in Lebanon's central mountains in order to return conditions to normal.

It said the committee also continued working for an exchange of captives held by the Druse militiamen and their Christian Phalange enemies.

Jumblatt said he expected such an exchange as early as today. He said his side held about 20 people and the Phalange about 220.

Nabih Berri, leader of the Shiite Moslem Amal militia allied with Jumblatt's Druse fighters, suggested Saturday that some troops from the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, sent to form a buffer zone along the Lebanese-Israeli border in 1978, could be used temporarily to help police the cease-fire.

But he insisted they fly the flags of their individual countries, not that of the United Nations, and that they report to the cease-fire committee, not to U. N. headquarters. Troops from 10 nations comprise the force.

Jumblatt said the Druse had pressured Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas to leave the Chouf mountains and would soon have them out of the Aley mountains just to the north.

Gemayel's government has sought to portray the fighting as between the army and invading Palestinians as well as Druse, but Jumblatt has maintained most of the opposition force was Druse.

Pope condemns affairs

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Saturday criticized the double standard that permits men to be unfaithful to their wives and said both men and women must be true to their spouses.

Pope John Paul II

In a speech to Mexican bishops, the pope said he deplored what he saw as a "certain tolerance" for men who have extra-marital affairs that result in "parallel families," a practice that is not unusual in Mexico.

"In your effort for family unity do not cease to insist in the substantial identity of the duties that lay upon husband and wife," the pontiff said in Spanish.

"The unions could not be morally justified by the fact that the material necessities (of both households) are met," he added. "Adultery is unacceptable from the point of view of Christian morality."

He also condemned alcoholism and said it "breaks the balance, the peace and the sense of duty and provokes serious effects in the decomposition of the family."

Protesters attack neo-Nazi group in Germany

FALLINGBOSTEL, West Germany (AP) — Riot police fired tear gas and water cannons Saturday to disperse some 1,000 protesters trying to break up a meeting of a neo-Nazi party. Nine officers were injured, police said.

Demonstrators showered police and neo-Nazis with sticks, stones and paint, and officers arrested 42 protesters, according to police spokesmen.

Protest organizers urged the crowd not to fight security officials.

"We are here to stop the Nazis only," said one protest leader, appealing to the throng through a bullhorn. "We want to hinder the fascists only."

Several neo-Nazis began throwing stones back at demonstrators from the other side of a police line, but were quickly stopped by police.

Hundreds of riot police ringed the Heidemarkt hall, where some 300 members of the right-wing National-ist Party of Germany and 500 invited guests were meeting.

Demonstrators with crowbars tried to attack several cars arriving at the meeting site but were stopped by police, the spokesmen said.

Police said demonstrators began leaving the scene after the National-ist Party's meeting got under way.

Meanwhile, some 2,000 members of the West German Trade Union Federation met to protest the existence of right-wing groups in West Germany. The meeting was held in Bergen-Belsen, site of one of the infamous World War II concentration camps.

Prince cancels trip to Manila

LONDON (AP) — Buckingham Palace said Saturday Prince Philip canceled a trip to the Philippines this week because the International Equestrian Federation, which he heads, has switched its annual meeting from Manila to Switzerland.

The spokesman refused to comment on published reports that the Manila meeting was canceled to avoid showing support for Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos in the aftermath of the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino. The palace would not say why the meeting was switched.

Nigel Dempster, the Daily Mail's gossip columnist, said Marcos "has now lost the morale-boosting visit from Prince Philip, whom he was due to entertain to a private luncheon next week."

He quoted federation spokesman Max Amman in Zurich as saying: "Some of the party — I name no names — do not want to appear to be supporting a regime which they feel is less than benign. Manila is not the safest place in the world and we have no security problems here."

Prince Philip will fly to Zurich on Wednesday for the three-day meeting and then continue to Southeast Asia as president of the World Wildlife Fund for meetings in Hong Kong, Thailand and Malaysia, the palace spokesman said.

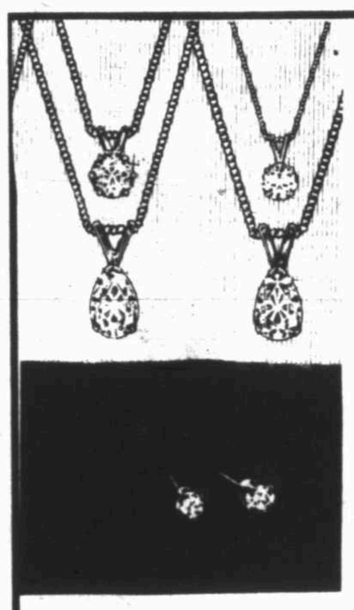

Home of official fired upon

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Four people in a car opened fire at the British ambassador's residence, but there were no reports of casualties and it was not known if any of the bullets hit the building, police said Saturday.

The ambassador, P.W. Summerscale, and his wife were not at the residence at the time of the attack late Friday night, police said.

Civil guards at the residence, in the Laurels neighborhood on the highway leading west to Santa Ana, returned fire as the attackers fled, police said.

No other details were immediately available.

Tech rides field goal to victory, 3-0

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech and Texas A&M have been accused of doing a lot of things in this annual blood-letting, but one thing they are rarely accused of was playing defense.

This is a series in which they have combined for more than 40 points in nine of the last 11 meetings. Last year, it was 24-15 Tech and fans complained that both had lost their offensive touch.

ONLY ONCE since 1965 have they failed to score less than 30 points between them, and you have to go back to 1963 to find a shutout. That year Tech won 10-0. Compared to Saturday's game, that was an offensive orgy.

The 52,109 fans, representing the ninth largest crowd in Jones Stadium history and watching in ideal weather, were treated to a 3-0 Texas Tech win.

It was the Neandrathal Football at its best, one in which defense was dominant. There was even a quick kick by A&M and a 72-yard punt by Tech's Dennis Vance that rocked A&M back to its two-yard line in the fourth quarter.

THE OFFENSES took the night off. They looked like guys who were picked from the leftovers after the defense and JVs selected their players. It wasn't really that bad. The defenses were good, but the guys in the striped shirts were better. They threw the flag 18 times and that's just counting the ones that were accepted. Every time somebody did something good, a yellow flag was on the ground.

The game's offense was wrapped up in Texas Tech quarterback Jim Hart, who broke 58 yards on a keeper-option to set up a 51-yard field goal by Ricky Gann. The way this game was played so far back in time, it's a wonder they didn't penalize Gann for not drop-kicking.

"We had three or four busted plays tonight, in addition to the flags," said Hart. "Last year, we had one busted play all year."

Of his big run in the second period, Hart recalled, "It was an audible play to the left. The Aggies over-shifted and I had time to make the adjustment. As I swung outside to the right side, the free safety overran me and I was in the clear. I have 4.7 speed in the 40, but those Aggie defensive backs run 4.4, so I just set a straight course."

WHEN DARRELL Austin finally ran him down, it wasn't until Hart reached the A&M 15. The drive, that had begun on the Tech five, bogged down and Tech faced fourth down at the A&M 34.

"I didn't say anything to him (Gann)," Hart admitted. "He's Mr. Automatic. I just went to the sideline. Besides, I didn't think three points would be that big of a factor."

It turned out it was, because the Aggies could never get Alan Smith, their answer to Gann, within "drop-kick" range.

Tech, now 2-1 and 2-0 in SWC play and in first place, kept the offensive pressure on A&M in the second half, despite drive-killing snafus. Hart almost broke all the way in the third period. With second and 18 at the Aggie 42, Hart kept right and cut back against the grain for 32 yards to the A&M 10.

"It was the same play as the one in the second quarter, only I cut back hard," Hart said. "There were two Aggies chasing me and then they were both on the ground." He was informed that the two pursurers had collided and knocked one another down.

Tech drove to the one-yard line before surrendering the ball. That's when A&M pulled its third down quick kick. It wasn't a bad one either, carrying from the two to the Tech 49.

Hart wound up with 93 yards rushing and that includes 28 yards in sack losses. Rod Bernstine led A&M with 70 yards on 18 carries.

WHILE THE fans may not have been that enthralled by a defensive struggle, Tech defensive coordinator Jim Bates was in his glory in the fourth period as he rallied his troops while they took a breather on the bench. "This is football at its best. When it's 3-0 and the game is tighter than" a Scotsman's wallet "you get to make it happen. That's just the way we want it." Bates, however, used something more basic than "Scotsman's wallet" in his description.

A&M, now 1-3, never got closer than the Tech 40 in the second half and its longest drive in the second half was 29 yards.

"They are a good team," said Hart, "but they seem to be a team playing not to lose rather than one trying aggressively to win. We had plenty of chances to lose, but we kept our composure."

Bears rip Cougars, 42-21

HOUSTON (AP) — Baylor quarterback-fullback Allen Rice ran for three 1-yard touchdowns, Alfred Anderson scored two more and Houston's offense self-destructed with seven turnovers Saturday as the Bears rolled to a 42-21 Southwest Conference football victory.

Houston, the No. 6 ranked rushing offensive unit in the nation, lost five of 10 fumbles and two interceptions with three of the miscues leading to Baylor touchdowns. Another fumble stopped a UH drive at the Baylor 2-yard line.

Rice's three 1-yard dives and a 25-yard sprint by Alfred Anderson provided Baylor with a 28-14 halftime lead behind the triple quarterback combination of Rice, Tom Muecke and Cody Carlson.

Anderson fueled Baylor's ground game with 142 yards on 17 carries.

All three of Rice's touchdown runs came from the quarterback position where he lines up in goal-line situations.

The Cougars, struggling offensively desipite impressive yardage totals, came up with their own dual quarterback combination of sophomore Quince Harris and freshman Greg Landry.

Harris, getting his first collegiate start, directed the Cougars 59 yards to a 1-yard plunge by Dwyane Love early in the second quarter.

Landry, thought to be headed for a red-shirt year, came into the backfield late in the second quarter, hit three of three passes and handed off to freshman Raymond Tate on a 6-yard touchdown run.

After a scoreless third quarter, Landry's fumble at midfield set the Bears in motion to Anderson's second touchdown run, a 1-yard dive. Then with 2:43 to play, Carlson hit Bruce Davis with a 12-yard touchdown strike, adding to Houston's embarrassment.

Harris hit flanker David Roberson with an 11-yard touchdown pass as the final buzzer sounded.

The Cougars dropped to a 2-3 season record and a 1-1 SWC record while Baylor now is 3-1 overall and 1-1 in conference play.

Houston's bad luck continued in the final moments when Love ran 44 yards for an apparent touchdown, but the score was nullified by a clipping penalty with 1:42 to play.

Baylor needed only 5:14 of the first quarter to take a 14-0 lead on Rice's first 1-yarder and Anderson's 25-yard run.

Anderson's run was set up by the first of four first-half UH turnovers, an interception by Harris at the UH 29 that was picked off by linebacker Alan Jamison.

Love lost fumbles to rover Aaron Grant and linebacker John Breit on Houston's next two drives.

Junior high coaching is just a beginning for some Ambitions lead to greater things

Alamo Junior High seventh grade coach K.C. Carmona gives instructions to players.

(EDITORS NOTE: This is the first story of a three-part series on junior high football coaches)

Ambitions. They give people something to work for in their careers, striving for bigger and better things. The coaching profession is no different.

Most coaches fresh from college start their careers in the younger schools — elementary or junior high — and then, as they gain experience, move on to the high school and college levels.

At Alamo Junior High, Mike Taylor and K.C. Carmona are two newcomers to coaching and each has a slightly different goal in mind.

"Someday I'd like to be a (high school) varsity coach, that's my first ambition," said Taylor, a 1982 graduate of Angelo State and second-year coach at Alamo. "I don't know for sure about being a head coach though. I'd like to stay in this area. My wife and I are both from Kermit. I'd like to stay in the Midland, Abilene or San Angelo area."

Carmona, another Alamo coach, would also like to reach the varsity level of coaching and "maybe some day small colleges," said the 1982 New Mexico State grad and first-year coach. Carmona played linebacker for two years before giving up football to concentrate on his coaching future.

"If I had a chance to go pro or something, maybe a major college (to coach). Pro would have been a good experience."

Since he didn't feel he had professional capabilities, Carmona didn't go out for football his junior and senior years. "I didn't see much future in it," he said, "but it (the two years he played) helped my coaching."

BOTH COACHES are enjoying their time at Alamo and each sees the importance of what they are doing now, what they are doing to further the playing careers of future varsity players.

"I enjoy the kids and I enjoy sports of all kinds," said Taylor, who also does coaching duty in basketball and track. "I think our job is very important. This is where the kids start off. Even though I'd like to move to varsity someday, I feel this job is very worthwhile. I like the competition of coaching at any level, the challenge to beat the other guy's team."

"It's good to see these kids make improvement," said Carmona. "You can tell at this age who has the potential and in the future you can feel good about when they move up and become stars. You can say 'I had a part in it.'"

And, that's the most important job of a junior high coach. Teach the kids now so they are ready to play later.

"Basically, we work to teach kids the basics and if we win in the process that's good," said Taylor. "My kids are playing hard and are learning discipline, which is another thing they have to learn for varsity."

Razorbacks claim 38-21 SWC victory over Frogs

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz calls the plays but has enough confidence in quarterback Brad Taylor to let him change them.

That paid off Saturday in a 38-21 Arkansas victory over the Texas Christian Horned Frogs.

Taylor, who hit nine of 16 passes for 223 yards, changed a Holtz-called play at the line of scrimmage and gave the ball to Derrick Thomas, whose 23-yard touchdown run tied the score 7-7 in the first period.

"The first touchdown was an audible, because I could see they were going to blitz, and it as it turned out, Thomas had to break only tackle to score," Taylor said.

Arkansas' last touchdown, an 80-yard scoring toss from Taylor to Keith Kidd, was also the result of a last-second decision by Taylor.

"I decided to call an audible and I hit Kidd real quick," Taylor said. "A tackler missed Kidd and then it was all over."

Holtz said, "I had a lot of respect for the kids — the way they came back after last week's loss (13-10 to Mississippi). With that Arkansas traditon, I knew we would come back.

"Early in the game, everything that could go wrong did, but I feel better leaving this place today than I did two years ago. Two years ago, we left here and we were 0-1 in the Southwest Conference race."

TCU Coach Jim Wacker said Arkansas was "a lot better team than the one we saw against Ole Miss."

Wacker said it was obvious his team could not bounce back after last week's 21-17 loss to Southern Methodist.

"The SMU game was a devastating loss," Wacker said. "I thought we would come off of it better than we did. Arkansas really ran tough and we missed a lot of tackles."

Arkansas, which was playing its first league game, improved its record to 3-1. TCU, which has now lost 24 of its last 25 games with Arkansas, dropped to 0-3-1 overall and 0-2 in SWC play.

The Horned Frogs scored first on a five-yard touchdown run by Kenneth Davis. Taylor took over with his strong passing arm after Thomas' TD run.

Taylor winged a 46-yard pass to Mark Mistler for the go-ahead touchdown and put TCU away with an 80-yard scoring shot to Kidd in the fourth period.

Arkansas led 17-7 at halftime as Greg Horne contributed a 37-yard field goal with just 11 seconds before intermission.

Arkansas stretched its lead to 24-7 early in the third quarter when freshman Billy Warren scored his first collegiate touchdown on a four-yard run. TCU quarterback Anthony Sciaraffa then romped five yards for a touchdown, but Horne hit a 40-yard field goal and Kidd slipped behind the Horned Frog secondary to receive Taylor's second scoring pass.

David Davis ran one yard for a fourth-quarter TCU touchdown, but Horne connected on this third field of the day from 19 yards out.

Arkansas' ground game, which had undergone criticism after last week's loss to Mississippi, came alive against the Horned Frogs.

The Razorbacks ground out 241 yards overland with sophomore Carl Miller getting 75 on 12 rushes.

Kenneth Davis rushed 15 times for 91 yards for TCU, but Sciaraffa was still the offensive bright spot.

Sciaraffa completed 11 of 18 passes for 185 yards and also rushed 19 times for 47 yards.

The leading receiver in the game was James Maness of TCU, who caught six passes for 125 yards. Mistler was the leading Arkansas receiver with three catches for 79 yards.

The victory gave Arkansas a 37-21-2 alltime lead in the series.

A Parents' Day crowd of 28,310 watched the regionally televised game.

Texas has it easy against Rice, 42-6

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Junior quarterback Rob Moerschell threw two touchdown passes — the first of his college career — and long-striding freshman Edwin Simmons raced 76 yards for a score as No. 2 Texas trounced Rice 42-6 Saturday night in a Southwest Conference football game.

The game, Texas' SWC opener, was part of the school's centennial celebration.

Rice, which broke a 15-game losing streak last week with a 22-21 victory over Southwestern Louisiana, did little to spoil Texas' birthday party as Rice quarterback Phillip Money was intercepted three times and sacked seven times for 44 yards in losses.

Texas, warming up for its annual intersectional game with Oklahoma at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas next week, got a chance to use quarterback Todd Dodge in the fourth quarter. Dodge, who was Texas' No. 1 quarterback before separating his left shoulder in a Sept. 9 scrimmage, threw a 9-yard touchdown pass to Russell Hays.

Texas linebacker Mark Lang intercepted a Money pass on the third play from scrimmage at the Rice 21 and tailback John Walker scored from the 8 with 11:51 left in the first quarter to the delight of 70,005 fans.

Safety Jerry Gray's interception at the Texas 49 set up the Longhorns' second touchdown, a 22-yard pass from Moerschell to Bill Boy Bryant. It was also Bryant's first score as a collegiate.

Moerschell beat the halftime clock with a 52-yard pass-run touchdown toss to Brent Duhon, who had not caught a pass in Texas' first two games this season.

A 19-yard Moerschell-to-Duhon pass in the third quarter carried to the Rice 3, and Moerschell scored from the 1-yard line.

Simmons, 6-foot-4 and 220 pounds, burst threw the left side and sped 76 yards for a touchdown with only 43 seconds left in the third period.

Texas is 3-0 for the season and Rice is 1-4.

Texas, ranked No. 1 in the nation in total defense, reinforced its standing by not allowing Rice inside its 38-yard line until the final minutes of the game.

Southern Methodist blanks Texas-Arlington

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Freshman Jeff Atkins and sophomore Reggie Dupard each gained more than 100 yards rushing and led 13th-ranked Southern Methodist to a 34-0 Saturday night win over out-manned Texas-Arlington in a non-conference football game.

Dupard gained 168 yards on 13 carries, including a 69-yard touchdown on the second play of the fourth-quarter, while Atkins added 140 yards on 21 carriers and a 9-yard first-quarter touchdown.

SMU quarterback Lance McIlhenny completed six of 10 passes for 123 yards, including a 51-yard touchdown to freshman Ron Morris, and ran the Mustangs' unbeaten string to 20 games, the longest such streak in the NCAA Division I.

By halftime, Atkins had 114 yards on 15 carries and McIlhenny had completed six of eight passes for 143 yards. Dupard did the bulk of his damage in the fourth quarter.

The Mustangs now have a 5-1 alltime record against UTA.

Wyoming posts WAC win over UTEP

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Wyoming running back Walt Goffigan ran 13 times for 130 yards, including a 31-yard touchdown, and Jeff Westphal ran for two more TDs in Wyoming's 49-17 Western Athletic Conference football victory over Texas-El Paso on Saturday.

It was UTEP's conference opener, and the Miners fell to 1-4 overall. Wyoming is 2-0 in the WAC and 3-2 for the season.

Wyoming was able to run to the outside against the Miner defense. Goffigan, Westphal and running back Mike Wiedeman accounted for 300 of Wyoming's 444 yards on the ground. The Cowboys had 510 total yards.

Wiedeman carried 17 times for 100 yards and a touchdown, and Westphal had nine carries for 71 yards and his two TDs.

The Cowboys scored on their first four possessions as they rolled to a 35-7 halftime lead and they didn't have to kick the ball away until the second half. Meanwhile, UTEP managed 367 yards against Wyoming's defense.

The Miners mounted their first successful drive in the second period after Wyoming reserve quarterback Dave Gosnell was intercepted by Raymond Morris. UTEP tailback Ernie Jackson scored on a 7-yard run.

HPU's Mike Jones countered with a 47-yard field goal in the first quarter but the Bobcats added another touchdown on a 3-yard run in the second quarter by Billy Booker.

HPU quarterback Andy Townsend connected with fullback Mark Salmans on a 26-yard pass for a third-quarter score. But SWT scored a touchdownm, field goal and safety in the fourth to ice the game.

SFA wins, 27-25

NATCHITOCHES, La. — Stephen F. Austin University consumed 4½ valuable minutes on a 73-yard fourth quarter drive that ended with Tod Weder throwing the last of his three touchdown passes to Floyd Dixon, preserving the Lumberjacks' 27-25 football victory Saturday night over Northwestern Louisiana.

Weder's touchdown passes went for 8 yards to Doug Jefferson in the first period, for 26 yards to James Noble in the third quarter and, finally, to Dixon in the closing moments that clinched the victory.

McMurry tips Tarleton

STEPHENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Efram Jackson went 68 yards on a draw play for a touchdown and McMurry's defense stopped Tarleton State twice inside the 10-yard line late in the game for a 7-3 Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association football victory Saturday night.

Jackson intercepted the pass with 5:19 left in the first quarter for the lone touchdown. Vince Oldag booted a 38-yard field goal for Tarleton early in the second quarter.

Angelo State wins

CANYON, Texas (AP) — Angelo State's Glen Saterfield scampered 47 yards with an intercepted pass and Mike Thomas added a 28-yard field goal as the Rams outpaced West Texas State 10-3 in a non-conference college football game Saturday night.

Young passes BYU to narrow victory over UCLA

PASADENA, Calif. — Quarterback Steve Young, who leads the nation in total offense, accounted for 325 yards and fired two touchdown passes Saturday to lead Brigham Young University to a 37-35 non-conference college football victory over winless UCLA at the Rose Bowl.

Young completed 25 of 36 passes for 270 yards and rushed for 55 yards on 13 carries as the Cougars, playing UCLA for the first time ever, raised their record to 3-1. The defending Rose Bowl champion Bruins, off to their worst start in 40 years, fell to 0-3-1.

Despite the loss, UCLA quarterback Steve Bono, starting his first game for the Bruins, established a school record by passing for 399 yards. The junior quarterback completed 25 of his 33 throws and threw three touchdowns, the last a 36-yarder to Mike Young with 26 seconds remaining.

But UCLA's attempted onsides kick was then recovered by the Cougars, who ran out the clock.

Steve Young gave the Cougars the lead for good after only 3:21 of play when he tossed a 9-yard touchdown pass to Mike Eddo.

Arizona, Cal kiss

BERKELEY, Calif. — Gale Gilbert hit David Lewis on an 80-yard touchdown pass play to begin a California comeback after the Bears trailed Arizona 26-3, and Randy Pratt kicked a 22-yard field goal with 48 seconds remaining to give Cal a 33-33 tie with the third-ranked Wildcats Saturday.

Cal scored its first touchdown on the catch by Lewis during an incredible sequence of big plays in the third period of the regionally televised Pacific-10 football game. The Bears outscored Arizona 16-0 in the fourth quarter.

Gilbert, the junior quarterback who passed for more than 300 yards, threw a 61-yard touchdown pass to Andy Bark with 8:32 left in the game and cut Arizona's lead to 33-23. A pass from Gilbert to Bark set up a 3-yard TD run by Scott Smith with 4:26 left and Pratt's field goal came after linebacker Hardy Nickerson recovered an Arizona fumble at the Wildcat's 21-yard line.

California, playing its first Pac-10 game of the season, came out of the thriller with a 2-1-1 record. Arizona, which had allowed a total of 22 points in its first four games, is now 2-0-1 in the conference and 4-0-1 overall.

Auburn nips Florida State, 27-24

AUBURN, Ala. — Randy Campbell connected with Lionel James on a 15-yard touchdown pass with 1:59 left Saturday, lifting 10th-ranked Auburn to a 27-24 college football victory over No. 17 Florida State.

Florida State quarterback Kelly Lowery had powered over for two short second-half touchdowns, giving Florida State a 24-20 lead with less than six minutes to play.

But Campbell directed Auburn on a 74-yard scoring march with the ensuing kickoff, capping it with the scoring flip to the wide-open James before a crwod of 79,600.

Auburn linebacker Gregg Carr solidified the Tigers' third victory in four games by intercepting a pass by Lowery at the Auburn 24 in the final seconds.

Florida State now is 2-2.

Tide wins, 44-13

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Walter Lewis passed for three touchdowns and ran for one as Alabama took advantage of Memphis State mistakes to trounce the Tigers 44-13 in a non-conference football game Saturday.

Lewis, hitting 12 of 19 passes for 156 yards, connected on scoring passes of 7 yards to Joey Jones, 36 yards to Greg Richardson, and 8 yards to Joe Smith as the sixth-ranked Crimson Tide improved its record to 4-0.

Memphis State took a 10-0 lead on a 27-yard field goal by Don Glosson and a 4-yard scoring pass from Danny Sparkman to Ricky Sparkman. Greg Montgomery set up the touchdown by recovering a fumble at the Alabama 2.

Florida rips LSU, 31-17

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Lorenzo Hampton scored on a 58-yard pass and set up a second touchdown with a long run Saturday night to lift 12th-rated Florida to a 31-17 Southeastern Conference football victory over 16th-ranked Louisiana State.

Florida, 4-0-1, blunted an LSU comeback in the final two minutes and Neal Anderson ran 76 yards for a clinching touchdown with 33 seconds to play as the Gators pushed their SEC mark to 2-0.

Dawgs win again

ATHENS, Ga. — Sophomore tailback Keith Montgomery scored two touchdowns Saturday to trigger 11th-ranked Georgia to a 20-7 Southeastern Conference football victory over Mississippi State, the Bulldogs' 19th consecutive league triumph.

Georgia, 3-0-1, took a 17-7 halftime lead on a 52-yard first-period field goal by Kevin Butler and Montgomery's 1-yard touchdown plunge and 9-yard pass reception from John Lastinger in the second quarter.

Butler added a 27-yard field goal in the fourth period to close out the Georgia scoring.

Mississippi State, 2-2 overall and 0-2 in the SEC, scored its only touchdown on quarterback John Bond's 16-yard run midway through the second period.

Georgia, in capturing its SEC opener, has won 22 straight games at Sanford Stadium.

Tar Heels wreck Tech

ATLANTA — Scott Stankavage passed for two touchdowns and scored once as fifth-ranked North Carolina twice overcame 14-point deficits to beat Georgia Tech 38-21 in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game Saturday.

Stankavage, the nation's passing leader, fired a 30-yard scoring strike to Earl Winfield on the first play of the final quarter, putting the Tar Heels ahead for the first time, 24-21, and triggering a three-touchdown burst.

Tech fell to 0-4 for the first time since 1900.

Wolfpack explodes

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Tim Esposito completed 17 of 27 passes for 221 yards and scored one touchdown as North Carolina State claimed a 38-15 Atlantic Coast Conference football victory over Wake Forest Saturday.

Esposito dashed 3 yards on a bootleg with 33 seconds left to put the icing on the Wolfpack's first conference victory. N.C. State is 2-2, 1-1 in the ACC.

The loss snapped Wake Forest's three-game winning streak and dropped the Demon Deacons to 3-2 in their conference opener. Also, Michael Miller's first-quarter scoring run also ended the Demon Deacon streak of 12 straight quarters without allowing a touchdown.

Wolfpack tailback Joe McIntosh, the conference's second leading rusher with 112 yards per game, ran for 118 yards on 27 carries. Wake Forest tailback Michael Ramseur, seventh in ACC rushing, carried 19 times for 118 yards. Neither scored a touchdown.

Miami rips Duke

DURHAM, N.C. — Quarterback Bernie Kosar threw for 250 yards and two touchdowns as No. 15 Miami of Florida set a school total offense record en route to a 56-17 college football victory over Duke Saturday.

The Hurricanes, 4-1, rolled up 613 yards, surpassing the 582 yards gained against Elon College in 1941. Miami also passed for 381 yards, breaking the record of 343 yards set against Houston in 1969.

Illinois stuns No. 4 Hawkeyes, 33-0

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Quarterback Jack Trudeau fired three touchdown passes in the first half and Chris White kicked four field goals Saturday as Illinois upset fourth-ranked Iowa 33-0 in a Big Ten Conference football game.

Most of the scoring came early, as the helpless Hawkeyes watched Illinois roll up a 17-0 first-quarter lead, then add 10 points before the half ended.

Trudeau opened with a 54-yard scoring bomb to Mitch Brookins and followed with TD passes of 9 yards to Cam Benson and 6 yards to David Williams. Trudeau completed 23 of 32 passes for 286 yards before being replaced by Ken Cruz in the fourth quarter.

White, who accounted for the only scoring in the second half, kicked field goals of 20, 30, 45 and 47 yards.

The Illini defense put tremendous pressure on Iowa quarterback Chuck Long, who was sacked seven times for losses totaling 55 yards.

Iowa's only scoring opportunities ended with a sack at the Illinois 20, a bobbled field goal snap at the Illini 24 and four unsuccessful plays from inside the Illinois 2-yard line.

The victory, before a capacity crowd of 73,351, improved Illinois' record to 3-1. Iowa also is 3-1.

Huskers rout Syracuse

LINCOLN, Neb. — Top-ranked Nebraska's do-it-all offense did it again with three touchdowns by quarterback Turner Gill and two by I-back Mike Rozier in a 63-7 destruction of Syracuse.

The only bright moment for the 3-2 Orangemen was the standing ovation they received from the Husker partisans after a 69-yard touchdown pass in the final quarter from reserve quarterback Greg Christodulu to running back Larry Morris.

Nebraska, 5-0, extended the nation's longest college winning streak to 15 and gave Coach Tom Osborne his 101st collegiate coaching victory.

OSU crushes Gophers

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Tailback Keith Byars ran for three touchdowns, and eighth-ranked Ohio State converted five of eight Minnesota turnovers into 35 points, crushing the Gophers 69-18 in a Big Ten Conference football game.

Byars, a 226-pound sophomore, was not expected to play early in the week after suffering a sprained knee in last Saturday's 20-14 loss to Iowa. However, he recovered and scored on runs of 1, 22 and 33 yards against the Gophers.

Ohio State beat Minnesota for the ninth straight time in Columbus and raised its overall record to 3-1, including 1-1 in the league.

Minnesota fell to 1-3 overall and 0-2 in the conference.

A 29-29 kisser

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Ralf Mojsiejenko's third field goal of the game, a Ross-Ade Stadium record 59-yarder with one second remaining that gave Michigan State a 29-29 tie with Purdue, provided an important lesson in life, Spartan Coach George Perles said Saturday.

Sophomore Clark Brown, making his first collegiate start for Michigan State, brought the Spartans within range for Mojsiejenko's tying field goal. Brown passed 30 yards to Donald Rolle, ran 2 yards and passed 6 yards to Robert Morse before Mojsiejenko connected in the final second.

Wolverines are back

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Tailback Kerry Smith ran for three touchdowns, leading 14th-ranked Michigan to a 43-18 victory over Indiana in a Big Ten Conference football game Saturday.

Smith, who rushed for 57 yards on eight carries, had TD runs of 1, 12 and 18 yards as Michigan improved its season's record to 3-1, including 2-0 in the Big Ten.

Irish win one

BOULDER, Colo. — Freshman quarterback Steve Beuerlein, making his first collegiate start, engineered five scoring drives, and sophomore tailback Allen Pinkett rushed for 132 yards and a touchdown as Notre Dame manhandled Colorado 27-3 Saturday in college football.

The victory snapped a two-game losing streak for the Irish and squared their record at 2-2. Colorado saw its two-game winning streak end and fell to 2-2.

Midessa rugby splits with pair San Antonio

The Midland-Odessa rugby team, playing its' first ever match in Midland, split a pair of games against the San Antonio rugby team Saturday at Alamo Junior High.

The match pitted the defending Texas State champions, Midland-Odessa, against one of the better teams in their league. Midland-Odessa's first side (simplified, the 'varsity' half), was awesome in their debut, blowing past San Antonio 37-8.

In the second side match, San Antonio escaped with a hard-fought 12-4 win.

Midland-Odessa coach Morris Lasater's first teamers, known as the Mad Dogs, dominated from the start, building a 19-0 first half advantage. "We've been getting good workouts, and today I think it showed," Lasater said between matches. "We've got a lot of speed." The defending champs return 14 regulars and two substitutes from last year's squad. These numbers are especially comforting considering the rugby team plays 15 at a time.

The second side could not maintain any consistency offensively, a diametric reversal from the first side's efforts.

Midland-Odessa now prepares for a major challenge in Albuquerque next week in the 42-team High Desert Classic. Lasater's team won their major tournament entry last year in Austin, and plans on being a factor in New Mexico.

Hostetler 'keeps' WVU unbeaten, 24-21

MORGANTOWN, W. VA. — West Virginia quarterback Jeff Hostetler's 6-yard keeper around right end with 6:27 left capped a 14-play, 90-yard drive and lifted the seventh-ranked Mountaineers to a 24-21 victory that ended seven years of frustration against arch-rival Pitt.

West Virginia, which trailed 21-14 at the intermission and had been in Pitt territory only one other time in the second half, began its six-minute, game-winning drive at its 10-yard line after being called for clipping on a punt return.

The methodical march climaxed a second-half rally that began with Paul Woodside's 49-yard field goal late in the third quarter and gave the Mountaineers a 5-0 record for the first time in 21 years.

The game-winning drive against the nation's third-ranked defense included a 12-yard pass from Hostetler to Rich Hollins, runs of 10 yards by Pat Randolph and 16 by Ron Wolfley and a key 10-yard keeper by Hostetler on third-and-10 to the Pitt 21.

Pitt, which suffered its second straight setback and is 2-2, had taken a 21-14 lead on John Congemi's tie-breaking 35-yard touchdown pass to Bill Wallace in the second period.

A record crowd of 64,076 jammed into 4-year-old Mountaineer Field, which officially seats 50,512.

West Virginia had dropped nine of its last 10 meetings with Pitt and trails the series 52-23-1.

East

Penn State on a roll

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Freshman tailback D.J. Dozier rushed for 196 yards, including touchdown runs of 1 and 50 yards, to lead Penn State to a 36-25 college football victory Saturday over Rutgers.

The defending national champion Nittany Lions, who won their second straight game after an 0-3 start, also were led by quarterback Doug Strang's touchdown passes of 6 and 31 yards to split end Kevin Baugh.

Strang, who completed 11 of 26 yards for 173 yards, also set up Nick Gancitano's 19-yard field goal in the fourth quarter with a 34-yard pass to Baugh. Gancitano also had field goals of 36 and 42 yards.

Rutgers lost its third in a row to fall to 1-3.

BC survives Temple

PHILADELPHIA — Quarterback Doug Flutie ended a 47-yard drive with a touchdown pass to running back Steve Strachan to give Boston College an 18-15 fourth-quarter victory over Temple in college football Saturday.

Boston College, 4-1, was lagging 15-10 when Flutie capped a nine-play drive with a 4-yard pitchout to Strachan with 3:08 to go. Flutie then passed to tight end Scott Gieselman for a two-point conversion.

Temple, 1-3, threatened to counter the touchdown by marching from the Owls' 12-yard line to the Eagles' 28 with less than two minutes in the game. But the drive stalled and Jim Cooper's field goal attempt narrowly missed.

Harvard nips Army

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Jim Villanueva, who missed two 47-yard field ggal attempts, kicked a 26-yard game-winner with 5:58 left as Harvard defeated Army 24-21 in college football Saturday.

Harvard, 2-1, had squandered a 14-0 lead and trailed 21-14 after three quarters. But, Mike Dixon's 75-yard return with an interception and Villanueva's extra point tied the score 30 seconds into the final period.

The winning drive began at the Harvard 40 and stalled at the Army 8. Villanueva then kicked the decisive field goal, dropping Army's record to 1-3.

Butler shocks Brown

PROVIDENCE — Sophomore quarterback Doug Butler passed for 362 yards and three touchdowns and an alert Princeton secondary intercepted four passes in the second half as the Tigers turned back Brown 27-16, Saturday in Ivy League football.

The Tigers, now 1-1 in Ivy League play and 2-3 overall, took the lead for good early in the third quarter on an 80-yard drive with the second half kickoff.

Cavaliers kick Virginia

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Rick Badanjek scored two touchdowns and Jess Atkinson booted three field goals as 19th-ranked Maryland handed stubbborn Virginia its first loss of the season, 23-3, Saturday.

Virginia, 4-1, after twice stopping Maryland inside the 2-yard line and intercepting a pass at the 13, still was in contention at 13-3 after Kenny Stadlin kicked a 37-yard field goal for the Cavaliers with 12:48 left.

But the Terps, 3-1, drove 75 yards to set up Badanjek's second 1-yard TD run, and then Atkinson kicked his third three-pointer from 35 yards with 2:30 remaining.

Malcolm Pittman ran 91 yards with the ensuing kickoff to the Maryland 6, but Virginia failed to score.

Badanjek, who rushed for 89 yards, scored his first TD in the second quarter after the Terps had turned over the ball after three cracks from the Virgina 3.

Dallas out to protect 4-0 mark against Vikes

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have been to the Metrodome in Minnesota only once before.

Showing uncharacteristic emotion, the Vikings beat the Cowboys 31-27 in the regular-season finale and earned a playoff berth despite Tony Dorsett's record 99-yard touchdown run.

Of course, the Cowboys had already clinched a playoff spot. This Sunday they come in with a perfect 4-0 mark to protect against the 3-1 Vikings. The last time Dallas went 5-0 was 1977 when they won the Super Bowl after a 8-0 start.

"To give you an idea of the way this series goes," Vikings Coach Bud Grant said, "neither team has won two in a row since we beat Dallas in 1970 and 1974. Since 1974 it's been Minnesota, Dallas, Minnesota, Dallas, Minnesota. Will that continue? Stay tuned."

Cowboys Coach Tom Landry isn't giving or taking anything away from the Vikings, despite being a 3½-point favorite.

"Minnesota has a lot of talent," Landry said. "Their defense is very active."

The Vikings defense beat Detroit last Sunday with eight sacks, five interceptions and blocked punt for a touchdown.

The Cowboys beat New Orleans last Sunday with luck. Anthony Dickerson sacked quarterback Kenny Stabler in the end zone for a safety for the 21-20 victory. Six turnovers by Dallas and seven sacks of quarterback Danny White contributed to a game Dallas might have trouble explaining how it won.

Landry called the victory "miraculous."

Grant said, "You have to be good and lucky. You have to be good so the luck is meaningful."

Both teams will need some luck to avoid more injuries, particularly the Vikings who have 10 players on injured reserve. Steve Dils is starting for the second straight week after Tommy Kramer was lost with a knee injury. Recently acquired Archie Manning still is waiting in the wings, however.

"I think I got rid of the jitters last week," Dils said. "I think the pressure's on Dallas, though. They're the favorite."

The latest Minnesota injury victim is right defensive end Mark Mullaney, who is out for six weeks with a broken collarbone. Randy Holloway, who had three sacks last week, will replace him. The Vikings may get wide receiver Sam McCullum back this week. McCullum has been out since the preseason with a broken thumb.

Dallas linebacker Bob Breunig is questionable and the Cowboys signed Bruce Huther, who has not played with the Cowboys in three years, to back him up.

"We're fortunate to have Bruce able to play," Landry said. "He can step right into our defense because he knows it so well. Nobody else could."

Huther played for Dallas from 1977 to 1980.

Also Dorsett may have to run with the ball in his left arm because he has a soft cast on his cracked right wrist.

Germain leads
San Jose Classic

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Dot Germain capped a 6-under-par 67 with her second 30-foot putt and Sharon Barrett shot a 68 Saturday as they joined Australian Jane Crafter for the lead going into the final round of the $175,000 LPGA San Jose Classic.

Some 45 players had to complete their opening round early Saturday after rain made the Almaden Golf and Country Club course unplayable in the late afternoon Friday. Light sprinkles hit late Saturday but did not affect the play.

Colbert leads by two in Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Jim Colbert shot a 4-under-par 66, set a seasonal scoring record for 54 holes and stretched his lead to two strokes Saturday in the third round of the $300,000 Texas Open Golf Tournament.

Colbert, seeking a second victory in Texas this season, has completed three trips over one of his favorite courses, the 6,525-yard Oak Hills Country Club, in a spectacular 194 strokes.

That is, by four strokes, the lowest 54-hole total this season. And, for a few moments, he was flirting with a couple of all-time records.

Colbert, who had a 62 in Friday's play, was 7-under-par for the day with five holes to go. He need to play those five holes in 2-under to tie both the all-time Tour record for 54 holes (191) and the all-time tour record for consecutive rounds (125).

"It would have been nice. My name isn't exactly jumping out of the record books. But it just wasn't meant to be," Colbert said. He played those last five holes 1-over, missing a 2-foot par-saving putt on the 15th, then failing to convert birdie opportunities on the last three holes.

"I putted well, but not as well as yesterday. The ball wasn't just diving in the hole like it did yesterday."

It is a good idea to bypass the gas station water hose as a way of filling your RV water tank. Invariably, the water nozzles of these hoses are contaminated with oil, dirt and debris. By the same reasoning, a gas station's air hose should not be used to pressurize the tank. Traces of oil and dirt find their way into compressors and can travel through the air hoses into water tanks. For the purpose of filling your water tank, stow a 25-foot hose in the bin. You may even find it worthwhile to buy a small air compressor for pressurizing purposes.

Indians defeat Red Sox on 'Yaz Day'

BOSTON — Pinch-runner Carmen Castillo scored the tie-breaking run on rookie Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd's wild pitch with two out in the ninth inning and the Cleveland Indians went on to a 3-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday behind Lary Sorensen's five-hitter.

After Castillo scored, Kevin Rhomberg singled home George Vukovich with an insurance run as the Indians handed Boyd his eighth defeat in 12 decisions.

With the score tied 1-1, Andre Thornton led off the ninth with a double and gave way to pinch-runner Bake McBride. After Ron Hassey grounded out, pinch-hitter Broderick Perkins reached on an error by third baseman Wade Boggs. Castillo ran for Perkins and Vukovich followed with a single, but McBride was thrown out trying to score.

Castillo took third and Vukovich second on the throw. Boyd then uncorked a wild pitch, scoring Castillo.

A crowd of 33,491 packed Fenway Park for "Yaz Day", a tribute to retiring Red Sox slugger Carl Yastrzemski. Yaz was lavished with gifts and tributes in rain-delayed pre-game ceremonies which lasted nearly an hour. The Red Sox designated hitter grounded to the right side four times in a row.

Brewers 10, Tigers 1

DETROIT — Jaime Cocanower pitched a six-hitter and Roy Howell drove in five runs with a single and grand slam homer to lift the Milwaukee Brewers to a 10-1 victory over the Tigers.

With the Brewers leading 5-0, Howell wrapped up the victory in the seventh by belting an 0-2 pitch from Howard Bailey into the upper deck in left for his third homer of the season and fifth career grand slam.

Cocanower, 2-0, making his third major league start, struck out one and didn't walk a batter. The right-hander allowed one hit in each of the first three innings, but the Milwaukee infield bailed him out with three double plays.

Blue Jays 4, Twins 3

TORONTO — Ernie Whitt crashed a three-run home run and Doyle Alexander won his seventh consecutive game to pace the Toronto Blue Jays to a 4-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Alexander, who lost his first eight decisions, tied a club record for most consecutive wins with his nine-hitter. He walked just one batter and struck out three in going the distance for the fifth time this season.

Whitt keyed the Jays four-run fourth inning with his 17th homer of the season.

Royals 4-7, A's 1-3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Dan Quisenberry saved both games of Kansas City's doubleheader sweep of the Oakland A's, extending his major-league record to 45 as the Royals captured 4-1 and 7-3 victories.

Pinch-hitter Leon Roberts rifled a two-run double to highlight a four-run ninth inning for the Royals in the second game. In the opener, George Brett and Willie Aikens smashed consecutive home runs in the sixth inning.

In the second game, Mike Heath and Mike Davis hit solo homers for the A's in the sixth and eighth innings, respectively, to tie the score 3-3.

But with two on and no outs in the ninth, Oakland's Tom Underwood relieved loser Jeff Jones, 1-1, and Roberts greeted him with his game-winning double. Butch Davis added a two-run single later in the inning.

Mike Armstrong, 10-7, who pitched three innings, allowed two baserunners in the ninth before Quisenberry got the last two outs.

Yankees 5, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE — Omar Moreno scored on John Stefero's error in the top of the 12th inning to give the New York Yankees a 5-4 win over the Baltimore Orioles.

With Moreno and Dave Winfield at second, Don Baylor grounded to third. Moreno was caught in a rundown between home and third and catcher Stefero threw to an uncovered third base. The ball went into left field, allowing Moreno to score.

The victory went to Rich Gossage, 13-5, the fifth New York pitcher, while Bill Swaggerty, 1-1, was the loser.

Angels 6, Rangers 5

ARLINGTON, Texas — Jerry Narron, who had only two hits in his 21 at-bats this season, hit a solo homer in the eighth inning to give the California Angels a 6-5 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Bob Lacey, 1-2, the third of five California pitchers, got the victory although facing only two batters. He came in in the seventh inning and immediately gave up a two-run single to pinch hitter Bill Stein that let Texas pull into a 5-5 tie.

Odell Jones, 3-6, was the victim of Narron's blast to right field.

Giants post 4-1 win over Dodger bench

LOS ANGELES — Rookie Mark Davis and Gary Lavelle combined on a four-hitter to lead the San Francisco Giants to a 4-1 decision over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda benched all his regulars following the 4-3 triumph over the Giants Friday night when they clinched the division title.

The 22-year old Davis pitched shutout ball until the ninth, when the Dodgers scored on three straight singles, the last one by Candy Moldonado. Lavelle got the last two outs for his 19th save.

The Giants, improving their season's record over the Dodgers to 12-5, scored a run in the second inning off Burt Hooton, 9-8, when Chris Smith walked, reached second on an infield out and scored on Jeff Ransom's single.

Phillies 5, Pirates 3

PHILADELPHIA — Rookie outfielder Jeff Stone tripled home two runs in the eighth inning to rally the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The score was tied 3-3 when Von Hayes walked to start the Phillies' eighth. Rookie catcher Darren Daulton sliced his first major-league hit, a single to left, moving Hayes to second.

Tim Corcoran then dropped a sacrifice bunt advancing the runners to second and third. After Luis Aguayo struck out, Stone hit a line drive to right that went over the head of oufielder Doug Frobel. It was Stone's second triple in two innings.

Reliever Porfi Altamirano, 2-3, the fifth of six Philadelphia pitchers, was the winner with relief help from Don Carmen. Cecilo Guante, 2-6, was the loser.

The Phillies had tied the score 3-3 in the seventh on an RBI triple by Stone and a run-scoring single by Juan Samuel.

Reds 6, Astros 4

HOUSTON — Tom Foley's run-scoring single in the third inning capped a four-run rally that triggered the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-4 victory over the Houston Astros.

Trailing 4-1 after two innings, Dallas Williams walked and Skeeter Barnes singled with one out off loser Mike Madden, 9-5.

Paul Householder doubled Williams home and Duane Walker drew a walk to chase Madden. Bob Knepper came on and allowed a sacrifice fly by Dann Bilardello and RBI singles by Alex Trevino and Foley to put the Reds in front 5-4.

Barnes' RBI single in the eighth gave the Reds an insurance run.

Houston scored four runs in the first inning on Jose Cruz's run-scoring groundout, Kevin Bass' two-run single and a run-scoring single by Tim Tolman.

Mets 5, Expos 4

NEW YORK — George Foster hit a three-run homer in New York's four-run first inning, and the Mets held on to beat the Montreal Expos 5-4 in the first game of a doubleheader.

The second game was rained out and rescheduled as part of a doubleheader Sunday.

Mookie Wilson led off for the Mets with a double and scored on a double by Hubie Brooks. Right-hander Bill Gullickson, 17-12, then hit Darryl Strawberry with a pitch, and Foster hit his 28th homer.

Cardinals 3, Cubs 2

ST. LOUIS — George Hendrick belted a tie-breaking home run in the eighth inning to lift the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Bob Forsch, 10-12, who pitched a no-hitter in his last start, gave up five hits in his eight-inning stint. Bruce Sutter pitched the ninth inning to gain his 21st save.

Hendrick's 18th homer of the year, off reliever Craig Lefferts, 3-4, snapped a 2-2 tie.

The Cardinals took a 2-0 lead in the first on Andy Van Slyke's triple that followed a walk to Willie McGee and a single by Hendrick.

The Cubs tied it in the fourth as Bill Buckner singled and Mel Hall slammed his 17th homer.

Nebraskans win Run For Health

Lisa Durban repeats as 10K women's champion

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

As far as college football goes, 1983 has been the year of the Nebraska Cornhusker.

Saturday morning, Midland got a little taste of that Husker power when two native Nebraskans took firsts in the Midland Memorial Hospital's Third annual Run For Your Health at the Midlander.

Tom Bowmaster, a former student at Nebraska, claimed the 10K part of the Run with an outstanding time of 32:37. Carol Jochum, who ran tarck and cross country at Kearney State in Nebraska, was the top woman finisher in the two mile. Jochum's time was 13:32.

Bowmaster calls Odessa home these days. Of his relatively easy win (he finished almost two minutes ahead of second place Brian Barrett), Bowmaster said "it's the best one I've had since I moved here."

Bowmaster's race strategy was unique, if not unplanned. "I thought Stallings was in the 10K, and he was way ahead so I just tried to stay up with him." Stallings in this case meant Steve Stallings, who has already won two 10K events in the past three months.

But Stallings was competing in the faster paced two mile, which he won narrowly. Bowmaster's mistake proved to be just the solution, as he finished ahead of Barrett by 1:49.

John Harris grabbed third in the 10K with a time of 34:29, only three seconds behind Barrett.

Among the women racers, Lisa Durban was the initial female finisher with a time of 40:48. Both Durban and Bowmaster are repeat winners, having taken first place finishes in the 10K last year.

In the two mile, Stallings time of 9:56 was very tight because Joe Tighe was nipping at Stallings' heels. Tighe was edged out by a single second. Tighe and Stallings were recent winners at the Miller Run For Fun, and provided an excellent two mile event.

George Acquaye took third with a time of 10:32 in the two mile.

Jochum's finish was quite competitive as well. She hasn't trained for a racing career since college, and in fact credited her recent career to a dare.

"Somebody dared me to run, so I said OK. I didn't train for it, then I won one." Jochum's second running career was born.

"If I was training, I could probably run the two mile in 11-12 minutes," said Jochum, who teaches aerobics at the Midlander. "The 20-29 age group is good for me, but a tough age group. It's where most of the good runners are."

In a one-mile event for youngsters 12 and under, Murray Steel had the top time among the boys with 6:16. Tommy Whytlaw took second place with a 6:30, and third place was a draw one second later between Chris Bakke and Stallings' son Jeremy.

For the girls, Elizabeth Ameel posted a 6:50 to take first, followed by Shannon Grainer's 7:22 and Darla Bowersock's 7:44.

Arlene Strickland, Midland Memorial's Run organizer, felt the race went well, not an easy task considering the 350-plus runners entered. "Last year we had about 130 less entered," said Strickland. "We tried real hard to make this a runner's race. I've been planning for a year to get to the point where we'd give the runners what they want." Strickland praised the Midlander's role. "They are a fine group and were very co-operative."

Improvement most important thing

So far this year, the challenge of coaching hasn't been too successful for either coach at Alamo. Going into Saturday's games, neither coach had won a game in two outings, but both feel like success is near.

"We're 0-2 so far but we've only been scored on three times," said Taylor, who coaches the seventh grade National Conference Grey team.

"But, we've been out-offensed. The kids are improving each week."

A coach can't ask for much more.

(Part two of this series will run in Wednesday's Reporter-Telegram)

Lee Maroon nips Lee White, 7-6

Lee Maroon nipped Lee White 7-6 Thursday to kickoff a weekend of action on the freshmen and junior high football fronts.

Midland Purple came back Saturday and took a 26-0 road win over winless Odessa Bowie. Midland Gold, however, fell 20-12 to Odessa Hood at home. In other ninth grade action between Odessa schools, Crockett blitzed Ector 20-0 and unbeaten Nimitz escaped Bonham 20-14.

In the eighth grade Midland-Odessa Conference, Midland schools took two lop-sided victories over Odessa opponents with Alamo ripping Crockett 40-0 and unbeaten Goddard blanking Bonham 34-0. In a game between Odessa foes, Ector defeated Nimitz 13-6 and Bowie defeated Hood by a 16-0 margin.

In the eighth grade Midland City Conference, Alamo and San Jacinto fought to a 6-6 tie while Trinity nipped Goddard Red by a 14-6 margin to remain unbeaten.

In the seventh grade American Conference, San Jacinto Green posted a 28-0 shutout over Goddard Red while Goddard White won a 22-2 decision over Alamo Sacrlet. Alamo Grey defeated San Jacinto White by a 26-6 score. Goddard White is unbeaten in that league.

In the seventh grade National Conference, unbeaten Goddard Red handed San Jacinto Green its first loss with a 16-6 victory and Goddard White remains unbeaten after a 12-0 win over Alamo Scarlet. San Jacinto White won a 12-6 decision over Alamo Grey in the other game.

Midland Baptist wins, 29-13

The Midland Baptist Temple Eagles recorded their first victory of the season Saturday with a 29-13 victory over the Carlsbad Matadors in a six-man football game.

David Percy had 130 yards rushing and Richie Carter added 123 yards to MB's potent attack. The Eagles are now 1-1 on the year.

Percy scored on runs of 60 and 15 yards while Rex Scott caught touchdown passes of 40 and 12 yards from quarterback Kevin Little.

Carlsbad is 0-3 on the year.

Hoss' easy Texas style fits with Cotton Bowl image

AP Laserphoto

Jim Brock...checks the schedules.

AN AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS - He's called "Hoss" because that's what he calls everybody else.

His delivery is an "easy Texas" style of country boy, down home, back-patting charm.

The message is served like butter spread on a sweet roll. His low-key sermon: Give the Cotton Bowl some ink, tube-time, or audio, if you can, Hoss.

Jim Brock is a one-man Barnhum without the luxury of pink elephants and building-sized billboards. His circus runs one day a year. But he works at it 365.

When he's not courting the media, which he has known well since his days as a sports information director at Texas Christian, Brock is shaking hands and joking with and doing favors for coaches, athletic directors and school presidents.

Name an NCAA Division One school and somebody there knows the Hoss. In fact, some may not even know his name. But they've heard of or met that chubby, fast-talking, cigar-chewing stump of a guy called "Hoss."

Oh yeah, doesn't he have something to do with the Cotton Bowl?

Brock is the executive vice president of the Cotton Bowl, an event which started its annual run in 1937.

It's a big business now and not the shoestring operation it was that New Year's Day TCU and Dutch Meyer beat Marquette 16-6 in the inaugural.

Brock signed over checks for $1.85 million total to both Pittsburgh and SMU (The Mustangs got to keep $600,000 and the rest went to their Southwest Conference brethren) for last January's tilt.

"Yeah, it's a real big business, Hoss," said Brock. "We've got a multi-million contract with CBS."

Not to mention the 75,000 seats the Cotton Bowl sometimes sells out.

The pressure is intense. The heat is on from the networks to get the most attractive pairing possible.

"When the national title started hinging on how the bowl games came out then the pressure came down on everybody," Brock said. "The bowl really isn't the reward (for the players) it used to be.

"It used to be more of a fun game for two teams that had successful seasons. No more. There's pressure for the national rankings and the TV ratings."

The Cotton Bowl did well in January when SMU beat Pitt 7-3, considering the Sugar Bowl had the national title matchup between Penn State and Georgia.

The bowl ratings breakdown, based on the percentage of television sets watching, was: Rose 24.5, Sugar 24.4, Cotton 19.4, Sun 13.3, Fiesta 11.7, Peach 10.8, and Orange 8.9.

"The bowls pumped $28 million into college football, hoss fly," said Brock. "That shows you how big a business it is. And it's very competitive."

The Cotton Bowl is blessed with an anchor host team each year, the SWC champion.

But the scrap for a guest team with lofty national ranking credentials can be an ulcer-producing one.

"We've had a No. 2-ranked team (Texas and SMU) come out of our bowl the last two years but we haven't had a national champion since Notre Dame beat Texas in 1978," Brock said. "They jumped from fourth to first. That shows you how important the bowls in the final national rankings."

The Cotton Bowl Selection Committee headed by John Scovell will hit the road after the Texas-Oklahoma weekend to begin its search for a proper guest team for the Jan. 2, 12:30 p.m. kickoff. (Jan. 1 is a Sunday and the bowls won't take on the National Football League playoffs).

The invitation date is now Nov. 19 but Brock is leading a charge to get it put back a week.

"The bowls are going to self-destruct if they don't unite, particularly the New Year's Day Bowls (Rose, Orange, Cotton, Sugar and Fiesta)," Brock said. "Of course, we've been in a blood and thunder thing with the Fiesta and hope they come around."

The Cotton Bowl moved to an earlier starting time and blistered the Fiesta in the TV ratings in head-on competiton.

The Nov. 19 signing date has Brock perplexed because such important meetings as Oklahoma-Nebraska and Auburn-Alabama come later.

Whatever, the Cotton Bowl will be sitting pretty if the SWC champion has an unblemished record like SMU did last season. An attention-gathering game will be guaranteed because of the interest in the mythical national champion.

By then a man called "Hoss" and his committees will have visited North Carolina, West Virginia and all those other potential guest teams.

There won't be any strangers on the line when Brock calls and says: "Hoss fly, can you visit Big D for a week?"

They will already have met Hoss Brock one way or the other.

Islanders, Wayne seek 5th straight

The NHL

By Associated Press

The magic number is five in the National Hockey League this season.

The NHL's 67th season begins Tuesday night with the New York Islanders seeking their fifth straight Stanley Cup championship. Wayne Gretzky, the nonpareil center of the Edmonton Oilers, will be after his fifth consecutive Most Valuable Player award as he again challenges the 200-point plateau. And the 1,680-game season will feature something new — five-minute, sudden-death overtime periods to decide tie games.

The Islanders, who open the season in Quebec Tuesday night — Pittsburgh visits St. Louis in the other first-night game — certified themselves as professional sports' most successful expansion franchise by capturing their fourth Cup in 11 years last spring. Now, they "Drive for Five," chasing the Montreal Canadiens' all-time record championship run, set from 1956-60.

"This team has shown so many times it has what it takes," says Islanders right wing Bob Nystrom. "When we've wanted something, we've gotten it."

FIRST, THE Islanders must go through the 80-game regular season and try not to regard it as merely a warmup for the playoffs. Last year, they struggled all season, unable to get motivated properly. They wound up second in the Patrick Division to Philadelphia and tied for sixth overall in the points race.

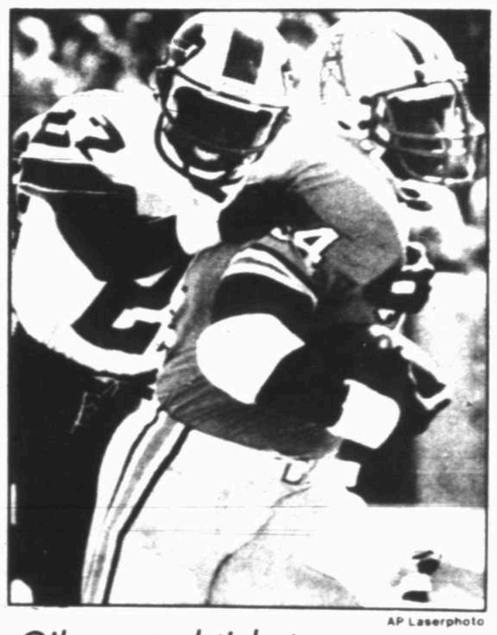

"Every bad thing that was written about us last year was probably true at one time or another," said Islanders center Bryan Trottier, who comes off a subpar (for him) campaign. "Four or five guys a night wouldn't be playing well but it was never the same four or five."

If the Islanders get to the Cup finals again, they'll find a slightly different format. The home-ice advantage for the championship series will be determined by the overall record of the Campbell Conference vs. the Wales Conference during the season. And, similar to the World Series, the first two and final two games of the best-of-seven series will be played in one city, with the third, fourth and fifth contests in the other city.

There won't be as many ties this season because of the introduction of overtime for the first time in regular season play since 1942. There were 127 tie games in 1982-83.

At the end of regulation time, there will be a short rest period, then the clubs will resume playing. The first team to score wins the game. If, after, five minutes elapse no one has scored, it will remain a tie.

THE ST. Louis Blues were saved in an 11th hour deal as a group led by California businessman Harry Ornest took over the team. But the Blues did not participate in the drafting of amateur talent last June and their financial standing is uncertain.

Old wounds still there

Houston Oilers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers and Houston Oilers used to stage some of the National Football League's fiercest wars.

The two Central Division rivals twice played in physical AFC championship games. Hoston fans still debate the Steelers' controversial 27-13 victory in 1979, when the officials stripped wide receiver Mike Renfro of an apparent touchdown catch.

But since the Steelers became less than super after seemingly annual trips to the Super Bowl and former Oilers Coach Bum Phillips took his cowboy hat to New Orleans to coach the Saints, Steelers-Oilers game have lost much of their significance.

The two teams play today in Three Rivers Stadium, with the Steelers, 2-2, hoping to reverse a sudden inability to win at home and the Oilers, 0-4, just wanting to win, period. That's something they haven't done since the second game of the 1982 season.

"Sometimes I think we don't believe in ourselves. We have good enough players here," said Gifford Nielsen, who became the Oilers' starting quarterback last week when Archie Manning was traded to the Minnesota Vikings.

"We just don't believe we can win," he said. "I was here when we played Pittsburgh in the AFC championship game two straight years, and now we're having a hard time winning a game."

Nielsen passed for 251 yards and Earl Campbell ran for 142 yards, but the Oilers were beaten last week by the Buffalo Bills 30-13. The week before, the Steelers crushed the Oilers in Houston 40-28, once leading 33-7 in the second half.

"I'm concerned about any opponent we play," said Steelers Coach Chuck Noll. "And Houston is a concern to us, no doubt about it. We have to play better. And I expect we'll see more running than we did the last time."

The Steelers limited Campbell to 40 yards in Houston, but he carried 30 times against Buffalo.

"We've been shutting off the run and we want to play the pass, but then we haven't been making the play," Noll said. The Steelers led the New England Patriots 23-21 last week until Steve Grogan threw a game-winning touchdown bomb to rookie Stephen Starring.

The Steelers, who have an 84-21 record in Three Rivers Stadium, have lost their last three home games, dating back to last season. They are 2-0 on the road this season but 0-2 at home.

"The only thing that bothers me is that they're going to introduce the offense before this week's game," said quarterback Cliff Stoudt, booed frequently while throwing three interceptions against the Patriots.

The Steelers rank high in most major NFL offensive categories, but have been bothered by turnovers. "We're playing winning football," Noll said. "Mistakes have killed us."

The Steelers hope that wide receivers John Stallworth and Greg Hawthorne will be able to play. Both missed the Patriots' game with leg injuries, and Stoudt said he frequently had timing problems with rookie receivers Gregg Garrity and Paul Skansi.

Trummy Young

Three new musicians to play at Jazz Classic

The seventh annual Midland Jazz Classic begins Tuesday and runs through Oct. 9.

Brian Torff, Peter Appleyard and Trummy Young are playing in this year's classic for the first time.

Musicians returning for this year's event include Milt Hinton and Jack Lesberg, bass; Derek Smith, Ralph Sutton and Buddy Weed, piano; Jackie Williams, Jake Hanna and Gus Johnson, drums; Ed Polcer and Warren Vache, trumpet/cornet; Carl Fontana and Bill Watrous, trombone; Kenny Davern, clarinet/soprano sax; and Flip Phillips and Scott Hamilton, sax.

Torff's professional career as a bass player began in 1974 when he toured with singer Cleo Laine for two years. During this time, he worked with jazz pianists Mary Lou Williams and Erroll Garner.

In 1976, he began a three-year association with jazz violinist Stephane Grapelli. Between tours with Ms. Grapelli, he performed regularily with pianist Marian McPartland. Torff's arrangement of the McPartland composition "Ambience" was a 1980 Grammy Award nominee.

In 1979, Torff began a 3½ year collaboration with pianist George Shearing which resulted in extensive touring and cutting two albums, "Blues Alley Jazz" and "On a Clear Day." In addition, Torff has cut albums with Tony Bennet, Jackie Cain and Roy Kral, Mary Lou Williams and pop artist Steve Forbert.

For the past eight years, Appleyard has been the featured vibraphone soloist with the Benny Goodman Sextet. As such, he has played every major concert hall throughout the world from Carnegie Hall, New York City, to the Royal Albert Hall, London. An Englishman by birth, Appleyard immigrated to Canada in 1951. He has, for the past four seasons, hosted his own award winning television show, "Peter Appleyard Presents," seen on every major television station and network throughout Canada.

In 1977, Frank Sinatra asked him to appear at the Uris Theatre in New York City for a two-week engagement with Ella Fitzgerald and Count Basie. He was awarded the Scarborough Civic Award of Merit in 1978 for his outstanding achievements in music in Canada and throughout the world.

Trombonist Trummy Young started playing professionally with Booker Coleman's "Hot Chocolates" in 1929. Since that time he has, among many others, played with Tommy Miles Orchestra, Earl Hines, Jimmy Lunceford, Billie Holiday, Benny Goodman, Dizzy Gillespie and; from 1952-63, Louis Armstrong.

Songs written by Young include "Taint Whatcha Do It's the Way How You Do It," "A Lover is Blue," "Easy Does It," "Whatcha Know Joe," "Trav'lin Light," "Thru for the Night" and "Sorta Kinda."

Other players performing for their first Midland Jazz Classic include Herb Ellis, guitar; Jack Sheldon, trumpet/cornet; Jim Galloway, clarinet/soprano sax; and Bud Shank, sax.

Performance times are Tuesday through Friday 8 p.m. to midnight, Saturday 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. and Oct. 9 from 2 to 6 p.m. This year's classic will be held at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Cost remains at $125 per seat for all six performances. (In past years, patrons have bought co-op seats — two tickets for $250 split among six or fewer couples.) No seats are available on a nightly basis. Tickets may be purchased by calling Max Christensen, 682-5334.

'The Big Chill' about disillusioned youth

ENTERTAINMENT

When the '60s came to a gasping halt, war-weary activists laid down their anti-big business placards and shuffled off into the sunset of economic necessity like so many generations of disillusioned youth before them.

That is one of the messages of "The Big Chill," written by Lawrence Kasdan ("Raiders of the Lost Ark," "The Empire Strikes Back," and "Return of the Jedi"), and Barbara Benedek and directed by Kasdan. And it is a chilling reference to how things change without really changing.

Friendships, too, are immutable in this ensemble acting effort which reunites seven University of Michigan alumni for the funeral of their "leader," Alex.

Having long since gone their separate ways, we see the members first as they learn of Alex's death and later as each one unpacks at the home of Harold (Kevin Kline) and Sarah (Glenn Close).

It is in these moments that Kasdan captures so skillfully the personalities and peculiarities of each person. What lasts but seconds tells volumes about the members of this circle of friends. Each one is someone we've known from that time, stereotypical but familiar.

Despite the reason for their reunion, "The Big Chill" is curiously crammed full of warm and touching moments as the seven and Alex's '80s girlfriend, Chloe (Meg Tilly), get to know one another again.

Harold, the host for the weekend, is an entrepreneur on the verge of a making a fortune; his wife, Sarah, a doctor and former lover of Alex's; Meg (Mary Kay Place) is a lawyer who has given up dreams of socialized law and now has dreams of motherhood; Sam (Tom Berenger) is a Tom Selleck look-alike TV star; Karen (JoBeth Williams) a beautiful and bored housewife; Michael (Jeff Goldblum) a gossip magazine journalist; and Nick (William Hurt) is a cynical Vietnam veteran.

Together, they work with the ease that comes from knowing one's place in the scheme of things. But Alex's apparent suicide has seriously disturbed the continuity of this group, all the more so for his previous part in it. And the conflict of "The Big Chill" comes from the inevitable sorting out of what went before and what is left.

Strangely enough, for these predecessors of the "me" generation, the weekend is loaded with confessionals and introspection. We discover Sarah's affair with Alex, Nick's sexually incapacitating war wound, Karen's lust for Sam, his for her, and Michael's for anyone, and Meg's desire to be a husbandless mother.

All the while the music of the Rolling Stones and Creedence Clearwater Revival play in the background and grass gets passed as a reminder.

But ever watchful is Harold's video tape player and camera that Nick uses to psychoanalyze himself and later the others adopt for their own catharsis. It is a constant reminder and apropos symbol for the struggle each has in coming to terms with the present.

What is not satisfying in this otherwise entertaining and thought-provoking movie is William Hurt's character, Nick. He represents what was perhaps the single most disturbing incident of the '60s, the Vietnam war. And it is not enough to make him resentful and bitter about the experience, he must also carry with him a wound that defies the continuation of life itself. As such, Nick still has the anger of the sixties and is for that reason somewhat at odds with the others. They ignore or deny his experience, which is his main topic of conversation, and the suggestion is that only Chloe in her unconstructed "now" generation attitude of acceptance can offer him any answers.

"The Big Chill," rated R, takes us back to a time few people call "the good ol' days," and handles its children with sympathy. The acting is superb and the glib script suits the generation that started all the right sentences but then left them dangling. Even for those who have grown up in another decade, "The Big Chill" will amuse and enlighten. After all, it's about life and living, friendship and fragility — common to any generation.

Real P.I. helps 'Simon & Simon'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It was a day like any other day for Logan Clarke. The telephone rang at 8 a.m. and there was another dead body in an alley.

"They needed some clues," said Clarke, a private detective who is the technical consultant for the CBS private eye series, "Simon & Simon."

Clarke, 32, offers the producers investigative tips culled from his own cases. Hehas worked as a private detective for 12 years. He has been shot at, had a partner killed and had a car trunk slammed on his head.

'Shrew' packed with pleasant surprises

Audience enjoyed performance

A Review

Friday night's audience for "The Taming of the Shrew" may have left with a clearer understanding of why it's been 19 years since Midland Community Theatre has staged Shakespeare.

For a 20th century thespian (especially one of Texas origin) to speak the words of the master playwright where they can be understood is not an easy task. Those who perform Shakespeare must not only have perfect diction, they must have perfect early modern English diction. But that's not enough. Almost as importantly, they must understand the lines they are speaking.

More often than not Friday that was not true.

However, "Shrew" was packed with pleasant surprises, charged with energy and moved at a fast clip perhaps because it was staged in the round and the characters were in constant movement on and off stage.

Written in 1593-94, "Shrew" is among Shakespeare's earliest works. Ted Strickland, MCT's assistant director, staged the production commedia dell'arte style — a form of Italian comedy, performed by wandering troupes of professional players, in which improvisations were made on an established plot. (MCT's production contains numerous improvisations.)

Although the circus set (designed by Brett Batterson) may have been a surprise for the audience, once the production began — complete with jugglers, acrobatics and a singing dog — audience members were willing to believe whatever happened. What a pity that so many of those onstage did not share their willingness. They had not internalized their multiple roles.

The play was at times very funny. However, too many players rushed ahead with their lines when their words were lost in audience laughter.

In spite of the problems, the audience enjoyed the evening. For most, the outstanding features of the production outweighed the negatives as evidenced by the laughter throughout and the standing applause (not as much of a standard item in Theatre Two as it is in Theatre One) at the play's close.

Marguerite Keane as Katharina was so shrewishly captivating, she stole not only the show, but the audience as well. Most consistently bidding with her for the audience's favor and receiving it were supporting actors John Phillips as Hortensio and Carl Yowell as Grumio. All three could be understood and knew what they were about.

Tony Condit's portrayal of Petruchio was like the production itself. It increased in believability as the evening progressed.

But the closing scene, the one which belongs to Kate (Katharina), was spoiled for those unfortunate enough to be sitting where another cast member blocked their view. Without fail, this scene needs to be designed so that all can see the leading lady.

Kate (Marguerite Keane) captures her father, Baptista Minola (Darrell Ward), and her sister, Bianca (Dianne Brown) in this scene, taken during rehearsal, from Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew." The production, which opened Friday, will run for nine performances closing Oct. 15. For reservations, call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

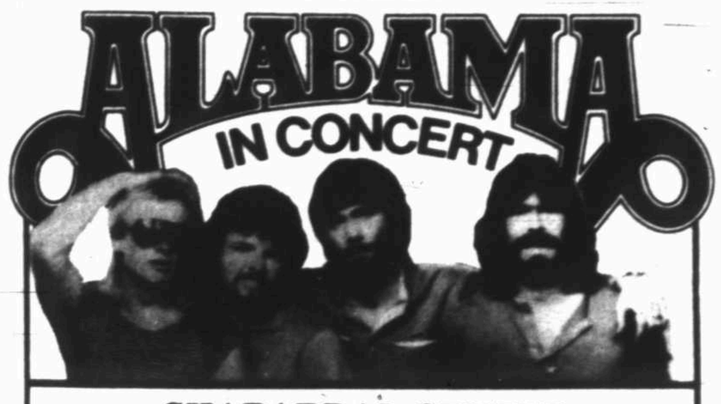

Lost 'Oz' film clip to be shown

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Ray Bolger, looking nearly as nimble as he did as the Scarecrow, broke into song: "We're off to see the Wizard, the wonderful Wizard of Oz."

Looking on were Liza Minnelli, whose mother, Judy Garland, starred as Dorothy in the 1939 production of "The Wizard of Oz," Jack Haley Jr., whose father was the Tin Man and Mervyn LeRoy, who produced the classic film.

They were gathered at a celebration of the 65th anniversary of Robert L. Ripley's newspaper cartoon strip, "Believe It or Not." A long-lost film clip of the jitterbug number, which was cut from the movie, will be shown tonight on ABC's "Believe It or Not."

Jack Palance and his daughter, Holly Palance, co-hosts of the show, were also co-hosts of the celebration. Haley is the producer.

Ty and Linda Morris

'Music for Merry Heart' series finale

"Music for the Merry Heart: Show Tunes and Novelty Songs" concludes the Museum of the Southwest's four-part Notable Notes Series today at 3 p.m.

Performers for the free concert are Ty and Linda Morris. "Music for the Merry Heart" will be an informal mixture of well-known show tunes such as, "People Will Say We're in Love," novelty numbers such as, "Jose, the Temporary Reindeer," and a group of party/fellowship tunes accompanied by guitar.

Ty Morris Jr. has been minister of music at Crestview Baptist Church since 1974. He is also director of the Singing Men of West Texas.

A music graduate of Hardin-Simmons University and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Morris is a member of The Centurymen, 100 ministers of music selected from throughout the Southern Baptist Convention and sponsored by SBC's Radio-Television Commission. This month The Centurymen will take a 17-day tour of the People's Republic of China.

Mrs. Morris, a voice graduate of The University of Texas at El Paso, worked on her masters degree at Southwestern University with Virginia Seelig.

Active in Crestview's music ministry as singer, pianist and handbell ringer and director, Mrs. Morris has been featured in this area with solo roles in Handel's "Messiah" and last year's production of "Amahl and the Night Visitors" at Crestview.

The couple has presented duet performances in Texas, New Mexico and Missouri. In 1980, the two were conference music leaders for Recreation Leadership Week at Ridgecrest Baptist Assembly in North Carolina.

Author: Men long for war

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Feminist author Carolyn Heilbrun says men long for wars to get away from women.

She told an audience of 250 women here Friday that if women swelled the ranks of the military there would be fewer wars.

"If we're going to have armies, we ought to have women in them," she said. "If we want the rights in the world, we have to take the same risks.

Ms. Heilbrun, who lives in New York City, has written five books, including "Reinventing Womanhood."

Conflict of needs

Midland city and school district officials are wrestling with two complicated problems that create what one city official has termed a "conflict of needs."

The issue cropped up again this week when school district officials asked the city council to close portions of two streets just west of Midland High School. Those streets run through the campus and create potential hazards for high schoolers, say school officials.

City council members responded that they would close the streets — in return for the school district allowing the city to extend Louisiana Avenue through the DeZavala campus. That's a proposal that has been in the works and publicly talked for many months. It's also a project the city wants to get going on to provide an additional direct artery into Midland and to expand the city's one-way street program.

While a trade-out is being talked in this situation, which is understandable, city officials really should go ahead and grant the school district's request on the streets near Midland High School. That need is obvious since the sections of C Street and Ohio Avenue in question fundamentally serve students and school personnel, and closing them won't unduly inconvenience anyone else.

The DeZavala question is far from resolved. Need for the Louisiana Avenue extension isn't pressing, but the city would like to have an additional artery into downtown from that area. That's understandable, but there is the question of safety and traffic congestion around the elementary school that still needs to be resolved.

A logical course appears to be for the city to grant the school district's request for the street closings near Midland High and to continue negotiations and study to resolve the DeZavala question within the next few months.

Changing times

It seems like only yesterday that the average 17-year-old American male was widely regarded by his elders as a "crazy, mixed-up kid" presumably obsessed with sports, cars and girls — not necessarily in that order.

That fragile generalization has been put to a long overdue rest by the appearance before a subcommittee of the House Committee on Science and Technology of a 17-year-old Milwaukee high school honors student in the role of an expert witness.

And an expert Neal Patrick undeniably proved to be. The young man and a few of his buddies had used a home computer and a telephone line to break into dozens of the nation's largest computer systems, including the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico and the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York.

In his testimony, the Milwaukee youth — solemnly and respectfully addressed as Mister Patrick throughout the hearing — told how he and his companions randomly tapped into the systems out of an intellectual curiosity and in a spirit of adventure. He followed this up with some practical suggestions on how computer systems can protect their storehouses of knowledge and stressing the need to educate people on the ethics of computers.

The House committee is to be congratulated for seeking out this young man for his advice and it would do well to ponder the sober conclusion he reached after discovering the easy access he attained to the systems: "If someone with a sinister intent had accessed them, the damage could have run into the millions of dollars and that's just the dollar value."

Another View:

Brazil's test case

The crucial case, among the world's debtor countries, is Brazil. If Brazil can maintain its solvency and work its way back to steady economic growth, it will have set the pattern for the other debtors. If it fails, it is very likely that other failures will follow. The only other country owing as much money is Mexico, which enjoys large oil revenues. There are many countries with poorer prospects than Brazil, but they all owe much less. That's why Brazil is now the test of any strategy for debt management.

The International Monetary Fund has worked out an agreement with Brazil under which it and the commercial banks will provide additional credit while Brazil adjusts. But Brazil's part of the bargain is to adjust rapidly, and some Brazilians have objected that the reduction is too sudden and too harsh. The alternative, unfortunately, is not a gentler adjustment. That would require a larger flow of new lending to Brazil, and that won't happen.

It is useful for Brazilians to remind themselves that the IMF is not their adversary. It is essentially a middleman, allocating loans from a stream that has diminished sharply over the past year. The amount that it has promised Brazil already strains the upper limit of the range that it will probably be able to deliver. The alternative to the present IMF program for Brazil is not an easier one, financed by more foreign loans, but fewer loans and a far greater risk of financial collapse.

The chief reason for the enormous inflation rate in Brazil is the indexation of wages. Indexation is very popular, and a lot of politicians there are apprehensive about limiting it as the IMF agreement requires. But that's a reform that Brazil — and not only Brazil — ought to carry through as a matter of basic social equity. Indexing is very cozy for people who keep their jobs. But it means that when a recession arrives and income falls, the full brunt of it falls on the unemployment rate.

Brazil is now in the third year of a recession, and income has fallen by 10 percent since 1980. The key question is how fast the Brazilian economy can be turned toward growth again. It can probably be done rather quickly, but it will require three conditions. It will require economic policy changes in Brazil, beginning with reduced indexation. It will require Americans to hold off the protectionists and keep their markets open to Brazilian exports, as President Reagan promised on Tuesday. And it will require the U.S. Congress to pass the legislation expanding American support for the IMF, without which economic hardship in Brazil and many other places will become extremely and unnecessarily severe.

ART BUCHWALD

Youthful political propaganda

Almost every time President Reagan gives a speech he makes reference to a letter he received from some student backing him on the particular issue he's trying to push at the moment. It has always made me wonder if the president ever gets mail from kids who don't agree with him.

Art Buchwald

Well, it turns out he does. Sen. Orrin Hatch angrily brought it up in the Senate a few weeks ago. In an emotional speech he revealed the White House averages 100 letters a day from school children voicing their fears about nuclear war.

Hatch maintained that these letters were inspired by teachers who belonged to the National Education Association, and cited a book NEA had published titled, "Choices: A Unit on Conflict and Nuclear War." The book encourages pupils to write to the president and world leaders to express their fears.

The senator from Utah said he was outraged by the anti-president bias in the letters, which he described as "pervasive evidence of political propaganda."

The NEA denied their book was responsible for the anti-nuclear mail because only 3,000 had been sold. (With a title like that I believe them.)

My first reaction to Sen. Hatch's speech was that I was happy to learn there were 100 students a day who could still write letters. This shows the country's educational situation is not as bad as it has been painted.

The second was that the letters had somehow been read by top aides in the White House and had gotten under their skins.

But then, I had to come down on the side of Sen. Hatch and here is why. School children do not have the intellectual capacity to express themselves on something as serious as nuclear war. They don't understand it and never will. All they are doing are mouthing the biases of their parents and teachers who have been influenced by the liberal anti-Reagan media.

No child has ever seen a "window of vulnerability" close up, nor does he or she understand the importance of hardened MX missile silos, multi-warheads, first-strike capabilities and all the other little things that go into maintaining a superior deterrent arsenal. All the kids seem to worry about is getting killed.

Playing on this gut emotion, teachers tend to point out the negative side of the nuclear arms buildup, and never mention the fallout from the pluses. Is it any wonder President Reagan is getting so much mail from school children telling him that they are afraid of nuclear war?

Sen. Hatch doesn't like it and neither does the White House. Pupils are supposed to write to the president telling him how much they love him, and how much they pray for him, and how happy they are his policies are working to get us out of a recession. Those kind of letters written from the heart are passed all around the White House to make everyone on the staff feel good.

The ones instigated by pro-freeze teachers have no place on the president's desk. He hears from Congress and from misguided grown-up doves all day long. He doesn't want to be told the same thing by a bunch of scared school kids.

There is no law you can't write to a president disagreeing with him on what he is doing. But sending pervasive political propaganda to the White House goes beyond the boundaries of good manners. To paraphrase Sen. Hatch, "If a student doesn't have anything good to say about the nuclear arms race — he shouldn't say anything at all."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Dying man predicted hard times

WASHINGTON — The nation's economy will hit the skids again a few months after the 1984 election — unless the Federal Reserve Board revises its policy. That's the glum prediction of Robert E. Weintraub, for 20 years one of the government's most respected economists.

Jack Anderson

Sadly, Weintraub won't be around to see whether his forecast comes true — nor to use his considerable influence to keep it from happening. A few weeks after he issued this warning, he died of a stroke at the age of 57.

What worried Weintraub was the erratic manipulation of the nation's money supply by the Federal Reserve Board. He was fearful that the Fed's policy — or the lack of one — would doom the American economy to lurch from one recession to another.

He felt there was still time for Fed Chairman Paul Volcker to pull back on the Fed's reins, allowing the economy just enough headway to advance without runaway inflation. "But I think it will take political courage, and I'm not sure it's there," Weintraub told my associate Michael Binstein.

By relaxing controls on the money supply, the Fed has touched the spurs to the economy. Weintraub said this was good politics but poor economics. It would give the Republicans a deceptive economic boom, he said, long enough to impress the voters when they go to the polls next year.

But then he expected the economy would stumble and falter. "The economy as I see it will begin to deteriorate after the election," he said in the foredooming tone of a prophet from Gomorrah.

For many Americans, economics is just one of life's mysteries. Such arcane economic factors as the money supply are considered to be up there with nuclear physics as matters best left to the experts. Even the experts in economics rarely agree on anything.

Yet they influence decisions that affect us all. They help to determine whether the prices we pay for necessities will go up or down, whether we can afford homes of our own, and even whether we'll have jobs.

As senior economist for the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Weintraub was a trusted adviser to both Republicans and Democrats. He kept a critical eye on the Federal Reserve Board, whose manipulations he mistrusted. He scorned the secrecy in which the Fed makes its policy decisions — and hides its mistakes.

Weintraub was a devout advocate of monetarism, the school of economic thought which holds that the supply of money is a crucial factor in the nation's economic health. Briefly stated, the thesis is that if the money supply grows too fast, inflation will inevitably soar; if it grows too slowly, the economy will stall.

The Fed can expand or shrink the money supply in various ways. It can discourage the demand for money, for example, by raising the interest rate it charges banks for reserve funds. This would reduce the flow of money into the economy. It can also affect the money supply by raising or lowering the amount of reserve funds that banks must keep on hand and therefore cannot lend out.

Most commonly, though, the Fed affects the money supply by controlling the purchase or sale of government securities. Buying them puts more money into circulation; selling them draws money out of circulation.

In his professorial way, Weintraub would patiently explain how the Fed's present course — letting the money supply grow too rapidly — will precipitate another recession just as the country is recovering from the last one. He would trace the economic cycle: loose money, followed by high inflation, followed by high interest rates. Like a high dam, the forbidding interest rates would impede the economic flow. Then, as economic activity dried up, recession and unemployment would follow. This would wring inflation out of the economy the hard way.

The monetarists make a persuasive case from the boom-and-bust history of the past 30 years. The annual growth in the money supply averaged only 1.9 percent between 1954 and 1964. During that period, the gross national product grew at a moderate but sustained rate of 3.6 percent a year. Inflation averaged only 2 percent, unemployment was 5.4 percent and Treasury bills were paying 2.8 percent.

Then came the massive spending for the Vietnam War and federal social programs, launching the loose money-inflation-recession cycles. By 1980, the inflation rate had reached 9 percent, and the Treasury was paying 15.7 percent interest to attract T-bill buyers.

Then the Fed tightened the money supply, triggering the recession and high unemployment that cut inflation to less than 5 percent. When the economy failed to pick up fast enough to suit the White House's political purposes, the Fed suddenly reversed itself and started pumping money into circulation. The annual growth rate reached 14 percent — well above the growth rate that pushed inflation into the double digits in the late 1970s.

GEORGE F. WILL

Socialism struggling in Britain

LONDON — Democracies are reputed to be as impatient as the wind. But in spite of doubled unemployment and a drop in industrial production three times as severe as in other industrial powers, in June Margaret Thatcher was re-elected. In fact, she became the first prime minister in this century to govern through almost a full Parliament and be re-elected with a majority large enough to guarantee that she can govern through a second. The world is a wide heath open before her.

George F. Will

If she is not quite in clover, it is because in a three-way race 57 percent of the voters voted against her party, which received fewer votes than in 1979 — fewer than when losing in 1964. But the Labor Party's share of the vote fell in 1970, 1974 and 1979, and in 1983 that party resembles the schooner Hesperus.

In June, the party lost 20 percent of the vote it got in 1979. Only 39 percent of union members voted Labor. Labor candidates ran second in only 132 of the 630 constituencies. Candidates of the Liberal-Social Democrat alliance ran second in 312. In 11 general elections from 1945 through 1979, just 82 Labor candidates lost their deposits (received less than 12.5 percent of the vote). In 1983, 119 did. Socialism has come upon hard times.

Vernon Bogdanor of Oxford, writing in Encounter, argues that socialism has suffered two serious defeats in this century. The first was in 1914, when socialism's internationalist pretensions were swept aside by nationalism and war fever. The second was in the Depression, when the European right, not the left, was the principal beneficiary of capitalism's crisis.

The recession of the 1970s and 1980s, and its aftermath, may involve a third defeat.

Regarding Britain, Bogdanor asks: If a socialist opposition cannot defeat a government that has doubled unemployment and seen a 20 percent fall in production — larger than in the 1920 slump — what relevance has such socialism to today's societies?

The recent sputtering of the capitalist growth engine put socialists, not conservatives, on the defensive, because the sputtering was considered a result of the left's agenda — policies that take too much risk out of, and put too much equality into, society. But look around: Clearly there is a role in government for socialists willing to play it.

Italy's socialist government is trimming the welfare state in order to shrink Italy's deficit. Portugal's socialist government is denationalizing industries and tightening the money supply: Interest rates are 10 percent above the inflation rate. Spain's socialist government is trying to hold wage increases to half the inflation rate, and is not trying to nationalize much. Greece's socialist government also is trying to cut real wages.

In Europe, from north to south, governments are administering what the Economist (of London) calls "means-test socialism." Denmark's government has started paying sick leave on the second rather than the first day of a worker's absence — and absenteeism is reported down as much as 25 percent. In Holland, many benefits are being cut or frozen as the share of resources devoted to social spending contracts. Even Sweden's government has proposed a budget that would reduce real wages 4 percent. And in France, Francois Mitterrand says: "We were dreaming a bit, it is true, in 1981....We were intoxicated." Since 1981 France's rate of increase of social security spending has been halved, and subsidies to housing and transportation have been cut.

But in Britain, the socialists are in danger of being eclipsed as the principal opposition party (by the Liberal-Social Democrat alliance). In 1983 Labor had an implausible program (more nationalization, higher public spending, unilateral disarmament) and an elderly, almost dottering leader (Michael Foot).

Now Labor has a young (41), presentable leader — presentable in the sense that his charm and rhetorical flair blur the hard edges of his extremism. Neil Kinnock represents Labor's repudiation of its NATO-oriented, "atlanticist" foreign policy from Prime Minister Atlee through Prime Minister Callaghan. He favors the foreign policy Moscow wants Britain to have: unilateral nuclear disarmament and, implicitly, neutralism.

Regarding domestic policy he says things like: "Freedom which depends on an ability to pay is no freedom but only a privilege." A columnist in the Spectator notes, wearily, that if one wants to travel to France one must pay for a ticket, so presumably Kinnock thinks the freedom to travel is "only a privilege."

There are, today, two dramas in British politics. One is Thatcher's attempt to reverse Britain's economic decline. But even more important for the West is the Liberal-Social Democrat attempt to supplant Labor as the alternative governing party — the loyal opposition.

Reagan looks like winner when armed with truth

By WILLIAM RANDOPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — The world likes a winner and President Reagan measured up to that status in his strong move for peace which backed the Soviet Union more tightly into a defensive corner. Endorsing the president's initiative to reduce nuclear weapons was the NATO alliance which now rallies around the U.S. and the near-certainty of installation of Pershing-2 and cruise missiles on the continent.

Acceptance of these missiles was an unknown quantity by our allies concerned over peacenik protests at home until President Reagan offered concessions to "allow peace to have a chance." The president's offer made at the opening of the U.N. General Assembly attracted an overwhelmingly favorable response not only from our allies but many on the sidelines of the Third World.

I was particularly struck by a Churchillian-like phrase delivered by the president to the Soviets: "The door to an agreement is open. It is time for the Soviet Union to walk through it."

It was an eventful occasion indeed for nuclear arms control, until the Soviet Union responded with a lame statement from U.S.S.R. chairman Yuri Andropov that the president's plan was "unacceptable."

Andropov, who hasn't been seen in public for about a month and is known to be ailing, parroted what Red Army marshals said earlier and spent more time arguing with the president about the downed South Korean commercial plane than he did on missile deployment.

The Andropov statement came a day after Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko called them "lopsided" at a Moscow luncheon with Czechoslovak puppets. Gromyko chose not to attend the U.N. meeting.

EDITOR'S REPORT

Andropov's reply has only served to cement the peace and unity drive of NATO launched by President Reagan. In this context, the stern reaction of French President Francois Mitterrand was a pleasant surprise. He totally rejected Soviet demands that French nuclear missiles be counted among NATO forces. France, he asserted, had just 98 nuclear warheads, in its independent force. Britain similarly has said the same thing.

One of the major points President Reagan made in offering to reduce medium range missiles in Europe — also obviating emplacement of new warheads in the next few months — is verification. This is something the Soviets always shunned, dating back to proposals from Gen. Eisenhower. They are even likelier to indulge in greater charades now that the U.S.S.R. has built up a large nuclear arsenal pointing at both Europe and Asia. Ultra-secrecy is another of their weapons.

At this point, it's hard to guess who is running the Soviet show. Andropov is trotted out for the occasional ceremonial and then presumably returns to the physicians. A sustained reasoning among Western Kremlinologists is that for the first time the military calls all the shots, political, internal, domestic and external.

This never happened before since the Bolshevik revolution when the military took its orders from high-up commissars. Remember that the marshals stage rare press conferences to camouflage shooting down of the South Korean aircraft and have engaged in advising Middle East clients like Syria to stick it out in Lebanon.

It was Speaker O'Neill who personally negotiated the House side of the bill permitting our Marines to stay in Lebanon for 18 months. He spoke persuasively of "Americanism" and called on the House to support the bill strongly. It did, 270-to-161. The Senate followed suit within 24 hours. President Reagan was moved and encouraged by the resounding congressional endorsement. He thanked members for their bipartisan spirit, "the hallmark of a successful foreign policy." It certainly shows that persuasion and personality surmount petty politics.

Our allies and friends have enthusiastically hailed the action. Critics on the president's far right grouse about bipartisanship. They seem to want it all one way, theirs. President Reagan knows that firm leadership doesn't mean recklessness. That's where the left and the right often meet in mutual objectives. The president is restoring world leadership to the U.S. which President Carter, I'm sorry to say, caused us to lose.

So, the fabric of the Atlanti alliance, which had begun to show signs of wear and tear, has been restored by the earnest efforts of President Reagan which the Soviets unrealistically reject. They also are behind the intransigence of Syria which repudiates any effort to have them withdraw from their fortified stronghold in Lebanon where presently 50,000 Syrian troops are encamped.

It began six months ago with 30,000 in the Bekaa Valley, now swollen to nearly double with Soviet-supplied armor. Red Army officers also are assigned to the Syrians along with Soviet-manned Sam-6 batteries.

Further, in cahoots with the Soviets, the Syrians told the U.N. that the world body cannot have their observers police the shaky cease-fire in Lebanon. Speaking for Pesident Hafez al-Assad, Syria's delegates indicated strongly that they will oppose any settlement or withdrawal in Lebanon.

The fast answer from Moscow suggests to people who have lived and spent careers in the Soviet Union that the U.S.S.R. is more interested in seeing the Middle East convulsed rather than peaceful. Besides, the U.S. wants to help the legal government of Lebanon and the 18-month approval by Congress is something the Kremlin didn't like.

It's my hunch that the mess in Lebanon will not be adequately resolved unless there is satisfactory partition with a voice given to Syria.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Your decision

To The Editor:

In regard to your article on Shirly Dossey, the scab: She holds herself and the rest of the scabs in quite high esteem to say they know us better than our families. No way!

I have asked none of them for blood, to co-sign on a note, for special information or a shoulder to cry on. Perhaps they are asking for one now.

There is nothing special about buying cookies and so forth from kids; we all do that!

You ask us to remember you. Sure I remember you. You sat at a desk and did paperwork with the same job title as me because you were physically unable to do the same work; yet you did this same work with no problem while I was out on strike.

Yes, I remember you when we worked on the same job location and you threw a fit because I was off for a few hours when my first grandchild was born — OK'd by my boss. You wanted the time off for yourself. I have more time with the company and was entitled before you.

Scabs, you knew when you crossed that picket line that dollars meant more to you than the friendships you refer to. All of those things you mentioned under friendship you turned your back on when you made the decision to cross that line.

None of you were worse off financially than the young mothers, who are the sole support of their small children, who paid the price for benefits you now enjoy with everyone else.

Why don't you grow up and live with the decision you have made? I could respect it more.

This is America. If we find it offensive to ride in the elevator with you, have coffee with you, or have anything to do with you, we are exercising the same choice you exercised when you crossed that line.

Not so special

To The Editor:

As per the article "Speaking Out" by Shirly Dossey in Sunday's paper, Sept. 18, 1983, I too have bought cookies, when I had a freezer full before I even had a child. I too have given blood when it was needed. But none of that makes me or anyone else special.

The union went on strike to get better benefits for the employees. For example, the paid vacations, paid holidays, sick leave, seniority rights, wage increase, pension, insurance plans, safety laws, workmen's compensation laws, Social Security, time and one-half for overtime, unemployment benefits and job security. The union tried to keep these benefits and improve on them where the company was trying to take some of them away.

The benefits we have were fought for long before she or I ever started working for the company. I cannot see betraying all of my fellow coworkers because I was once their friend. I want to remain their friend so I backed what the union stands for. That was my decision.

I also had the same choice to make, only I did not cross the picket line. The union may not always be right, but you have to stand for something, if not the union then the company. The company wanted to take away the benefits. Are the people that chose to cross the picket line giving up their benefits that the union got for them?

Other side

To The Editor:

Thought you might like to hear the other side of the story on Shirly Dossey's story in "Speaking Out" in the Sept. 18th paper.

To Shirly Dossey and the others like her, I say, you relinquished your right to be our friend the very moment you crossed the picket line. Instead of helping our purpose you were helping to defeat it. If your conscience told you to cross because you needed the money, there wasn't a one of us who didn't. In fact, we are still struggling to catch up. But it was worth our staying out of work just to let the phone company know we meant business.

The supervisors didn't appreciate you and we darn sure didn't appreciate you.

So who do you think was the winner? You are going to reap the benefits we won (what a shame). But on payday I won't have to feel ashamed. Will you? I hope so!

PTA recruiters

To The Editor:

The Midland City Council PTA joins "Alabama," the award-winning musical group, and National PTA honorary membership chairmen for 1983-84, in encouraging the people of Midland to join PTA.

PTA is the largest non-profit, voluntary organization in this country. The purpose is to make better lives for all children. Decisions are made that determine the education and destiny of a child. These decisions are not generally made in school. They are made by the school board, state legislature and even the Congress. In order to be a part of this decision-making process, one must belong to a group which is part of a state and national organization.

All of you have an opportunity to invest in our children by joining PTA. Dues are $1.50 in elementary schools to $2 in secondary schools. You may join anytime until Oct. 15 by contacting the office at any of our schools.

Remember you do not have to have a child in school to become a concerned PTA member. Remember PTA works for schools, students, parents, teachers, administrators and our communities. PTA works for you! Join PTA today!

Pigeon pride

To The Editor:

I appreciated the article in the Tuesday, Sept. 27, paper about the pigeons; thanks for letting me be aware of what was happening.

Being somewhat of a conservationist, I feel someone must stick up for the pigeons. Now don't get me wrong; I am not bird-crazy or anything, but as far as Midland being a bird sanctuary, I feel if someone read that sign to the birds they are being grossly misled and they better flap their wings and high-tail it out of here.

From what I have seen, it's not such a hot place for birds. Note the misfortune of the pelican a year or so ago of stopping in Midland on route to the South and was shot.

Since I chose to make Midland my home, I would like to see some wildlife, some birds and such and maybe a domestic pigeon make it theirs. After all, aren't they also God's creatures and don't they make life just a little more pleasant by being around.

Traffic talk

To The Editor:

The city of Midland and Midland College have created a traffic problem which has the potential for causing tragic fatal accidents.

The city has directed three lanes of traffic into two lanes at the entrance of the college on Garfield St. and Maxwell St. The eastbound traffic from Maxwell, a main access street onto Garfield, has the right-of-way on a green light to turn right. At the same time the exit traffic from the college has a green light to turn left from two lanes onto Garfield. They do not have the right-of-way to turn left into the oncoming traffic, but they violate the law by not yielding to oncoming traffic anyway. Three just does not fit into two.

An equally hazardous condition has been created at the entrance to the college. Traffic turning left into the college has 270 feet to merge, in the same lane, with traffic turning left onto Maxwell. Sometime someone is going to look away for an instant, then a headon collision will occur with disastrous results, all because the city of Midland chooses to ignore the safety of citizens. The solution to this problem seems beyond the capability of Midland's traffic department. They should at least let everyone know who has right-of-way.

If I or my family are injured at this city-created deathtrap, I am going to hold Midland and Midland College fully responsible. If I live, I will certainly see the city and college officials in the courthouse.

Misinterpreted

To The Editor:

I felt that the article on "Senioritis" in Sunday's paper (Sept. 18, 1983) misinterpreted my stand on the issue. I made a comment of not being sheltered by my parents. That thought does frighten me; however, the reporter failed to mention that I am ready to face the challenges that college life offers. Having been away from my parents for no more than three days, while touring our nation's capitol, makes me want to strive more for survival in a diversified atmosphere. Also, while plans for a definite college were not stated, two were mentioned and my major was made very clear. I will pursue a major in business.

I was very honored to be interviewed by the Reporter-Telegram; however, Sunday's issue on "Senioritis" altered that attitude. In my opinion the viewpoints that I commented on were disarranged and my intelligence was insulted.

Tuning up TV

To The Editor:

A big "thank you" to Bill Modisett for last Sunday's article about TV's place in our lives. He very aptly made the distinction between the neutrality of a tool and its potential for constructive or destructive use. Those of us who feel we own a TV set rather than being owned by one feel the negative far outweighs the positive on our TV menu and we share the following concerns:

1) For the many precious children who watch anything, everything, anytime, with the parents' blessings. Indeed, some even provide them with their own private set.

2) For the parents who during their children's formative years have spent an average of 37,520 hours per person staring at the electronic marvel, but "did not have time" to take them to the park, read to them, go watch that play at school, or just talk to them.

3) For the sponsors who are letting younger and younger children be portrayed in their commercials as seductive little sirens a la Brooke Shields. (Is this intended to give less of a stigma to increasing sexual crimes against children?)

4) For all of us who deplore to see evil triumph but stay snug in our little righteous cocoons. The caterpillar who chose to stay in his, found out too late it had become a casket.

So, write those letters to sponsors, either to blast or praise. Call your stations, share your views, boycott products if necessary and above all let the tube know who is boss!

Local lacking

To The Editor:

I assume most newspapers have some difficulty deciding what percentage of their stories should come from wire services or with local bylines. One might even argue Midland is affected most by world, national and state news and least by local events; therefore most of the stories in the Reporter-Telegram should come off the wire.

As a newspaper reader living in Midland, I cannot agree. Surely it allows me to get an in-depth report, but I am bombarded with news outside my community through TV newscasts. Even local news divides its attention between Odessa and Midland. It is Midland I know the least about and I have no other resource but my newspaper, but the Reporter-Telegram does little to fill this void.

For example, I just finished reading today's paper: Monday, Sept. 26th. Four sections with 32 pages and, excluding the ads, one article (a special interest story on the cafeteria manager at Midland High School) devotes itself to Midland. Two stories (a sports report and the story regarding the Continental Airlines shutdown) deal in part with Midland. Even the editorials speak to national issues exclusively.

As stated, I recognize the importance of news supplied by news services, but surely I'm not the only reader who realizes you call yourself the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Futile effort

To The Editor:

In a recent meeting of the Midland County Commissioners and the Midland City Council, our chief of police suggested that the city police department bill the county sheriffs department for services rendered to county officers by city officers. This would, of course, result in counter billing from the county to the city for services — an exercise in futility which, if implemented, would result in added administrative and clerical expense for the taxpayers with no benefit to either the law enforcement groups or the public.

Also, a gentleman appeared on TV news recently and suggested an increase in charges to the public for ambulance service provided by the fire department. The reason, he told his audience (with a big smile), "Odessa has increased their fee and we always try to keep up with Odessa." It seems to me that an increase for this reason, would be "keeping up with Odessa" in reverse. If Midland's fee is less than Odessa's, it indicates that we simply have a better managed, more efficient fire department.

Midland Police and Fire Departments are to be commended for overall efficiency and generally dedicated personnel with few exceptions. However, if for no other reason than to maintain credibility, official suggestions and proposals should be reasonable, productive and documented before they are publicized.

Postal plans

To The Editor:

Your article several weeks ago about the Postal Service's plan to open a retail window at its station in Mesa Verde Shopping Center is a classic example of bureaucratic stupidity. The article stated that "customer response and revenue generated from stamp sales and mailing parcels will determine if the retail window will remain open." It went on to state that the monthly expenses will run "about $3,000-$4,000" and that if the window is not used enough to cover expenses, it will be closed except for a couple of weeks during Christmas.

I suppose from all this that the postmaster thinks Midlanders are going to increase their mailings enough to generate an additional $3,000 to $4,000 in revenue just because stamps can be bought at one additional location. I further suppose that he thinks the only additional costs which the U.S. Postal Service will incur (assuming that the citizens do, in fact, begin mailing more letters, etc.) from all this are those associated with manning the new window. How about the salaries of the letter carriers, the cost of operating vehicles, etc., etc.?

The real problem here is the operation of the Graves Station. As I'm sure everyone who has ever stood in line there will agree, if a clerk were to be on duty at each of the four counter positions (which has never in my experience been the case, although there are always plenty of semi-idle employees within eyesight) a large part of its problem would be solved. The lines would be shorter and would move faster and much of the outside traffic congestion would be eliminated. All those cars outside belong to the folks lined up inside who are being accommodated by one or two clerks.

BILL MODISETT

You just have to do something

Bill Modisett

Just the other day, here in Midland, a friend of my wife's made a commitment — a commitment to stand up for those being threatened by attackers.

More and more Americans are making this woman was driving when she saw a man get off of his motorcycle and begin beating on a young woman. The girl being beaten reminded my wife's friend of her own 23-year-old daughter, so without considering her own safety or other possible ramifications, she jumped out of her car and pulled the man off the girl.

Why did she do it? "I just felt I had to so something," said my wife's friend. "I just couldn't stand by and let him beat on her."

That's encouraging. Today, we hear all too many stories about women being raped or old people being mugged while healthy American bystanders just watch — or turn their heads in shame. If that trend continued, this would become a nation terrorized by outlaws.

Don't say "It won't happen to me." Crime is increasing, lawlessness is increasing and eventually it's going to wash over you. You're not going to avoid it. You're going to either sink or learn to swim — in a hurry.

I'm not advocating vigilante justice by any means. Taking the law into your own hands is just a shortcut on the road to anarchy. What I am advocating is fighting back as a means of protecting a lot of Americans who need and deserve protection, but aren't getting it.

The day is long past when law enforcement officers could walk the streets to ensure the safety of the residents of a community and their property. Oh, don't get me wrong; law enforcement still tries to protect us, but there are just too many places to be at once, too few officers and too little tax money to hire more. That's true in Midland, but it's also true in most other cities.

In recent months, though, some concerned individuals have began fighting back. In Florida, a man went to the aid of a woman whose car was surrounded by threatening men. She was saved. Minnesota legislators enacted a law that requires that state's residents to give assistance to others in emergency situations or face a fine.

The list continues — men who stop rape assaults, women who protect old people or children from would-be abusers.

You can sit on the sidelines where it's safe because of the fear of being injured yourself or the fear of retribution from the lawbreakers or legal entanglements. That's the safe way out; it's also the cowardly way out.

What's the point? The point is some people aren't taking violent acts lying down anymore. They're getting involved and they're changing lives in doing so. It's a great feeling.

Isn't that what it's really all about. We can sit back and let hoodlums push society around, or we can take the initiative to make our streets, our neighborhoods, our communities safer for everyone.

It's a matter of caring about others. Says my wife's friend of the incident she got involved in: "Maybe I was being too nosy, but I just didn't want to see her hurt."

If that's being nosy, we need more nosy people in this world.

Museum of the Southwest will be closed on Mondays

Beginning Monday the Museum of the Southwest will be closed to the public on Mondays.

Administrative offices will remain open as usual, Monday-Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Public hours at the museum will be Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2 to 5 p.m.

The decision to close the museum one day a week was made by the board of trustees Sept. 14 based upon staff recommendations.

Increased visitation, especially on weekends, demands more time for cleaning and maintaining the galleries. By closing on Mondays, the museum will be able to save money and also have an in-house work day.

"We have tracked visitation at the museum and Mondays are the least popular with the public," said Anne Sherburn, development and public relations officer for the museum.

"Traditionally, museums across the nation close on Monday. Being open every day except Mondays, Christmas, Thanksgiving and New Year's Day, the museum is still providing comprehensive community service."

In addition, requests for use of the museum for luncheons, receptions and special meetings by community groups has increased. By closing one day a week, the museum will be able to accommodate more requests.

"When the museum is open to the public, we like to keep all of our limited space open. And until we expand, there is no private meeting space for any group."

Original members of this 12-year old Rhode Island-based band include Greg Piccolo, vocals and tenor sax; Al Copley, piano; Doug James, baritone sax; Rick Lataille, alto and tenor sax; and John Rossi, drums. The newer members are Bob Enos, trumpet; Ronnie Earl, guitar; Preston Hubbard, bass fiddle and bass guitar; and Porky Cohen, trombone.

Guralnik will be performing with the Midland-Odessa Symphony this week.

"Chopin Lives" will be presented Monday at 8 p.m. at Odessa's Permian High School Auditorium and Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Midland's Lee High School Auditorium.

Hypnosis nothing more than concentration

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

In the background soft, peaceful music is playing. You're lying down, eyes closed and body fully relaxed. The music is almost celestial, making you think of stars, or perhaps trickling water.

You can imagine yourself lying on the grassy banks of a small stream, feel the sun warming your face, the wind caressing your cheeks, smell the warmth of the earth, hear the soft rustling of leaves and grass. You feel you're part of the land, the sun, the sky. You blend with the elements, begin to float, drifting with the slight breeze....

Hypnosis. Some imagine it to be a relaxing and peaceful experience. Others conjur up frightening images of something akin to witchcraft — a loss of control over one's actions and will.

"Hypnosis is an altered state of consciousness," explained Bettie "Sam" Brannen. "It's deep concentration. It's something that holds your attention to where you block out everything else. All of you have experienced self-hypnosis in a small kind of way." Being mesmerized by a fire or daydreaming are examples.

Ms. Brannen teaches a self-hypnosis class at Midland College. The course is recommended for supervisors and mid-management personnel, and she insists it can help people with everything from losing weight to becoming more self-confident to learning foreign languages more quickly.

"I CAN PROMISE you miracles," she told her students, "and changes of attitude to change your life. You will succeed in self-hypnosis.

"But," she qualified, "never, ever set goals so high that they're humanly impossible. They must be realistic and they will take time."

Ms. Brannen formerly was a hypnotherapist for the Permian Basin Center for Mental Health and Mental Retardation and opened the Hypnosis Counseling Center of the Permian Basin in Odessa.

"I got interested in hypnosis and self-hypnosis in the early '70s," she explained. "At that time we didn't call it hypnosis per se. We called it guided meditation."

That was a stigma attached to the practice — one which still has not been totally dispelled, even though hypnotherapy is now accepted by the American Medical Association.

"Now, I think, it has come into its own as being a valid theraputic tool," she said, pointing out that some doctors and dentists use it for pain control.

AT ONE TIME hypnosis was commonly used as a magician's stunt, making people believe a hypnotist could control a person's actions. But local experts stress hypnosis is merely a state of intense concentration.

"There's no boogy-bear associated with hypnosis or self-hypnosis," Ms. Brannen asserted. "It's a fantastic way of self-improvement. You only have to fear that which you are not willing to reveal within yourself."

In Texas a person who practices hypnotherapy must be registered. However, a license is not required to practice hypnosis.

"Hypnotherapy can be dangerous if done by an amateur," she warned, saying anyone seeking it should make sure the hypnotherapist is registered.

Two common misconceptions are that a person in a hypnotic trance is unaware of his surroundings and what is happening, and that he can be made to do things against his will.

"IN SELF-HYPNOSIS you are awake," Ms. Brannen said. "You are totally aware of everything going on around you, but your concentration is so intense you see pictures in your mind. In a hypnotic state you will do absolutely nothing that is against your own value system. You would not do anything that would endanger yourself or another person."

TESCO's statement changing

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland residents may notice a difference in their electric bills this month, but it won't be in the form of of a lower charge.

According to Sara St. Clair, spokesperson for Texas Electric Service Company, fuel costs will become part of the company's base rate.

This means there no longer will be a fuel charge statement on the bottom of the TESCO bill.

"If the customer calls our office, we'll be glad to tell him how much of the charge is for the fuel we use to make his electricity," Ms. St. Clair said.

TESCO's base rate, approved by the Public Utilities Commmission, is what the electric company can charge the public. The PUC has established a fuel charge which will be in effect this month. The charge is arrived at using the fuel costs for the year ending June 30.

Ms. St. Clair said TESCO purchases fuel to make electricity. Because of today's fuel cost, it makes up about half the total cost of providing electric service.

"A long time ago fuel was included in the base rate," she said. "As the years went by, the increasing cost of fuel has become a big part of the bill. It fluctuated. You couldn't depend on it staying the same every month."

Until this month the TESCO bill would show kilowatt hours times the base rate. In addition it would show a separate "factor" for fuel cost.

"Now the amount for the fuel will be fixed and will not change from month to month," Ms. St. Clair said. "This does not mean your bills will go down.

"Because the charge for fuel will be in base rates and will not change on a monthly basis, the 'fuel factor' which has been printed on the bills will no longer appear," she said, adding "the only people who will notice the change are those who noticed it in the first place."

The changes are a result of an amendment to the PUC Regulatory Act passed during this year's legislature session. The amendment abolished the automatic fuel adjustment.

The new procedure means a fixed fuel charge will remain in effect for 12 months at a time. The base rate will remain the same through December.

"However, the PUC will decide a new charge which will be in effect during 1984," Ms. St. Clair said, explaining that any over- or under-recovery of fuel costs can be adjusted at the end of that period when a new 12-month charge is approved by the PUC.

St. Ann's Fair livens up afternoon

The bearded fellow, decked out in a black hat and matching garb, eyed a color photograph of himself.

He was standing next to a teepee, made of two-by-fours and dyed sheets, and dummy Indians. He was wielding a rifle, wearing a badge and holstering a sidearm.

"I'd make a good sheriff," said the rough-looking white man, Larry Bromley. With him was his fair wife, Elsie. "I call her my Borden lady."

Bromley's Wild West scene was but one of the sideshow attractions at the 35th annual rendition of St. Ann's Family Fair to benefit the parochial school.

The event was overrun by the usual fare: Hordes of people spending their money in coin-tosses, bingo, chances for gifts and cash, food and drink.

Kids were running around with images of rainbows, hearts and ice-cream cones painted on their faces. Balloons after the likeness of the Goodyear blimp, ET and Jaws were floating around.

"All right, already!" shouted a woman at the horse-race booth.

Shoppers meandered among the food-beer-games booths with bags of used-books, second-hand whatnots or homemade foods sold at the fair.

Jack Flautt called out bingo numbers for the sedentary fair-goers in St. Ann's Parish Hall. About 300 persons were playing $1 blackout bingo, and a win was imminent.

"I believe we've got a bingo," announced Flautt.

"Boo!" came a subdued cry.

"No bingo," he said in correcting himself.

"Yea!" came a roar.

A call or two later, a winner came to the fore.

"I've got ants in my pants," said 10-year-old Jennifer Cook, who won a bicycle on the call of I-22.

"I bet you're happy right now, aren't you," said a passing player, who was carrying a fan of bingo cards.

"You're lucky," Jennifer's mother, Colleen, told her daughter, "because you weren't getting one of them for Christmas."

In a dusty lot behind the hall, the midway was bustling with roller-coaster, Ferris wheel and carousel rides and a Devil's Dungeon, which posted this forewarning: "No refund...if you chicken out."

Back on the asphalt, the backside of a ticket booth depicted an overblown painting of a uniform policeman, Lt. Conklin. He looked gruff and stern, but was harmlessly plastered on the woodworks. He barked in cartoon fashion: "Hey! You kid, with the beer!"

The message was clear enough, even to beer peddlers, who were carting their kegged product to booths.

"We hardly have any trouble," assured a real policeman, Sgt. Hank Norton, who was making his rounds about the fairgrounds.

The announcer's booth was busy with talk and messages, including those about missing parents and youngsters.

"Mary, we have a boy by the name of John Paul looking for you," said Mike Fitz-Gerald.

Later, he again keyed the microphone and asked for a favor. "If the person who took my radio two years ago would bring it back, we could give you the game scores."

Another Fitz-Gerald, his brother, Jim, was in the announcer's booth wearing a tag with a curious name — "Yes."

"Yes, you can use the telephone; yes, you can call somebody," said the "yes" man.

"Yes, our feet are tired," said Mike Fitz-Gerald. "Yes, you're the prettest girl in town."

Over at the dunking booth, a cowboy-type guy trying to act the smart-aleck role tempted a blonde to zero the softball in the bull's-eye and get him wet.

She missed again and again...until she moved closer.

"Hey," he yelled, "what's wrong with you? You don't know how to throw."

She scored.

Splash. He shut up...but only for a while.

Couple questions insurance firm's 'high-risk' rating

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

In 28 years of driving, Muriel never got a traffic ticket...until last November.

State police clocked her at 68 mph in a 55-mph zone on the "barren Kansas highway" while she and her husband, Walter, were on vacation. She paid the $40 fine.

Walter has a flawless driving record. The only insurance claim he ever filed was more than 25 years ago after his car window was broken in a burglary. "He's never had a claim since, and I've never filed a claim," she said.

"Neither one of us has an accident record," said Muriel, 44.

Suddenly, Muriel felt as if an automobile insurance company had labeled her and Walter as the world's worst drivers. They became bad risks.'

Here's what happened: In August, Muriel talked with an Odessa insurance agent and got the family's 1983 Dodge van and 1977 Chevrolet Blazer insured. The cost: $839 per year. Muriel and Walter (not their real names) were deemed such low risks by the agent that they were allowed a 20 discount below the state rate. This was after Muriel told the agent that she did have a speeding ticket on her record. Just one.

"No problem," the agent assured her.

"They were told up front" about the sole traffic offense, said Muriel, who views herself as an honest citizen.

A month later, Walter and Muriel were rated "high risk" drivers. Their low-risk policy was rejected by the insurance company's headquarters in the Dallas-Fort Worth area. The Odessa agent who sold them the policy apparently was no longer with the company.

But for almost double the original fee of $839, Walter and Murial could get another policy at 50 percent above the state rate. Neither wanted to pay the $1,791 for less coverage than they had in the original policy.

The "70 percent swing in the rate" incensed her.

"There was no discussion. No negotiation was allowed," Muriel said. " 'You have a ticket,' " she said a headquarters insurance spokesman told her. " 'We're offering you alternative insurance. That's our policy.' "

They shopped around for another insurance company even before they got their refund.

For $936 a year for both family vehicles, Walter and Muriel purchased a policy for low-risk drivers from another company through a Midland agent.

"Walter was very truthful with them," Muriel said. "He was up front" and confessed his wife's driving record. The agent assured Walter the rate would not change.

Was the first insurance company acting legitimately?

"Possibly," said an insurance technician for the Texas Insurance Board in Austin.

By law, an insurance company may cancel a policy within the first 60 days after issuance "for no reason whatsoever," he said. After that, cancellation is allowed if there's a default on paying the premiums.

The technician noted that a company may offer a customer a policy at 20 percent below the state rate if the customer has had no moving traffic violations in the last three years.

If there is a moving violation, as in Muriel's case, an insurance company may offer a more costly policy from another firm within that insurance group for so-called high-risk drivers. Some, however, don't, he said.

He cited one national company which may reject a customer's insurance application because of a single traffic violation and offer no alternative plan. The company may suggest that the driver apply at another firm.

In Muriel's case, was she manipulated?

"She might be," said the technician, "but probably legally."

Legal or not, Muriel was offended by the jacked-up premium.

"We're a high risk?" she asked.

"That's the first and only traffic ticket I have ever had. I didn't cause an accident. There was no claim for damages. No other person was harmed because I was not abiding by the law."

GARY OTT

How do you address this manner of address?

It is not the type of problem that makes you forget about the dangers in Lebanon, but still, it is a situation that needs to be addressed.

I'm talking about names. Or, more specifically, what is a grown-up 31-year-old man supposed to call his equally grown-up 60-year-old father?

At first glance this would seem to be a routine matter. After all, the possibilities are endless. Yet, when put in practice none seem to work quite right.

For example, most of us grew up referring to our fathers simply as "daddy." It was short, succinct and to the point. It also worked nicely in sentences such as "Daddy, can I have some money?" Or, "Daddy, I absolutely must have the car tonight."

The problem is, once a man starts approaching middle age himself he can feel rather foolish labeling someone "daddy," even if that person happens to be his rightful father. This is particularly awkward when one's peers are listening to the conversation. It simply does not project the manly image most of us are desperately seeking. To use the word "daddy" in a serious vein could mean that you have limp wrists and a fish-like handshake. And, Lord knows, no REAL man wants that kind of reputation.

So, suffice it to say, we should drop "daddy" from our list of possibilities immediately.

That leaves us with several synomyns such as "dad," "pops," "father" and "the old man."

Again, none is quite right.

"Pops" is fine if you happen to be a preppy from some sissy Northeastern state like Connecticut or Rhode Island. But in Texas using "pops" will result in arched eyebrows and behind-the-back smirks. And rightfully so.

"Dad," on the other hand, seems like the logical choice...except if you grew up saying "daddy," it is virtually impossible to suddenly cut it down to "dad." Invariably the extra "d-y" will pop out of your mouth and before you know it you're saying "daddy" again. And we've already discussed the peer pressure associated with that word.

"Father" has a nice ring to it, I suppose, but the reference is much too formal. You might introduce him as "father" at a black tie affair, but around the house it is rather stuffy. The last time children used that word was on the TV series, "Father Knows Best" and it has been off the air now for some 20 years, which should tell us something about the word's viability.

"The old man" was perfect during our teenage years but somehow when you get on the backside of 30 that phrase starts sounding a tad disrespectful. He may not be perfect but he certainly deserves to be known as something better than "the old man." After all, he of all people knows he's getting up in years. He doesn't need some smart-aleck son reminding him.

So where does that leave us?

No one knows. But, as for me, I've tried everything. "Hey you." "Dude." "My man." "Cat." Everything. Still, nothing works.

As a result, we've had no choice but to become good friends which, in turn, has allowed me to call him by his first name. The practice does draw stares from time to time, but it beats being known as "daddy's" little boy.

Midlander's sister named peace justice

Hazel Jackson Lewis, 48-year-old sister of Midlander Roscoe V. Jackson, has been appointed justice of the peace in Falls County near Waco.

She is the first black woman to hold the JP office in Marlin, the Falls County seat.

"I'm definitely proud of that," said Jackson. He said a friend through research in Austin determined that his sister is the first black woman in Texas to serve as a peace justice.

Mrs. Lewis succeeded Justice of the Peace Robert McGruder, who died in office.

"I thought a black person should get the job because Judge McGruder was black," Mrs. Lewis told the Waco Tribune-Herald. "I'm hoping my being appointed will give some other black women the incentive to realize they can do something."

"I know some people look at it as not being a great job, not much prestige. But I know...it's a great responsibility."

Mrs. Lewis simply applied for the JP job with the Falls County Commissioners' Court and got it. To keep it, she'll have to run for election. She foresees no problem in the position just because she's black.

Hazel Jackson Lewis

"We've gotten away from the prejudice stage," Mrs. Lewis said. "There's no reason to look back, other than to better yourself."

Hance, Gramm find roles change

By T.LEE HUGHES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Once they were like two peas in a political pod.

Rep. Kent Hance was Gilbert to Rep. Phil Gramm's Sullivan; Gramm was Lennon to Hance's McCartney; Hance was Rogers to Gramm's Hammerstein.

Both congressmen were first elected as Democrats from Texas in 1978, compiled conservative voting records and then broke with their party leadership to play key roles in support of President Reagan's economic program of 1981.

Now they find themselves on opposite sides, one still a Democrat but the other now a Republican, and each seeking his party's nomination in a contested primary to square off in next year's U.S. Senate race in Texas.

"Obviously, Phil was and now is more comfortable as a Republican," says Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, who considers himself a friend of both. "...It was a decision that Phil made, whereas Kent made the decision that he was more comfortable as a Democrat."

Their backgrounds, at least, are remarkably similar. Both men were products of traditional, working class homes; Hance raised by a father who worked as a mail carrier and a mother who worked as a secretary and Gramm by a widow who worked double shifts as a practical nurse to support her family.

Hance went on to get a law degree, practiced law in Lubbock and taught at Texas Tech University. Gramm earned a Ph.D in economics, taught at Texas A&M and worked as an economic consultant.

Both did well financially, Hance listing investment assets of between $402,000 and at least $670,000 by 1978, the year he was first elected to Congress, and Gramm assets of between $105,000 and $215,000.

Among the best and the brightest of the freshman congressmen of 1979, Hance, 40, and Gramm, 41, were among a new generation of Democratic conservatives — articulate, aggressive, hungry for influence and determined to make their voices heard.

As a result, both became active in the Conservative Democratic Forum, created in 1980 as a vehicle for conservative Democrats to marshal their influence, a group of about 40 congressman who, collectively, became known as the "Boll Weevils."

Stenholm, who emerged as the coordinator of the CDF, says its members were "beginning to make the decision that we were going to do more than just sit back on 'red neck row' and complain about the direction the Congress and our party was going, that we had to do something positive about it."

Then came the "Reagan revolution" of 1981, when the newly-elected Republican president sought to sharply curb increases in government social spending and to implement a massive, multi-year reduction in taxes.

The Republican program had a natural appeal to the Boll Weevils; it was also to severely test their loyalty to their party, a loyalty that in Texas stretched back to the post-Civil War era.

Dramatically, Gramm and Hance both bolted party ranks, Gramm to co-sponsor the president's 1981 budget package and Hance to co-sponsor the tax cut proposal, both of which were opposed by the Democratic leadership.

Today, Gramm says he co-sponsored the Reagan budget as a matter of economic principle, as the result of "15 years of economic research which related the growth of government to the decline in efficiency and productivity, to the growth of prices and to the swelling of interest rates."

Hance, whose district had voted heavily for Reagan in 1980, as had Gramm's, says he co-sponsored the tax cut for two reasons: "One, the president was new, and the public wanted him to have a chance to implement his policies. And second, I've always been one for tax cuts."

But their actions angered powerful members of the Democratic leadership. And the way each reacted to that anger ultimately was to impel them along their very different political roads.

"I guess one thing I would say is that Kent displays a more practical West Texas common sense approach to various questions, whereas Phil is a little more inflexible," says Stenholm, who is supporting Hance in the Democratic primary.

"I'm not implying that Phil does not have common sense," Stenholm says, but that "Kent has shown a little more flexibility in dealing philosophically for the same goals."

Hance's big problem was Democratic Rep. Dan. Rostenskowski, the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, which has jurisdiction over tax legislation and on which Hance sits. Rostenkowski was furious with Hance for his sponsorship of the tax cut proposal. And that unhappiness began to manifest itself in various ways.

"I guess probably the most humorous (was) somebody on the committee staff kept exchanging my chair for a chair that did not have rollers or wheels on it," recalls Hance. "So to move up to the desk, well, I had to pick my chair up and everybody (else) could roll up to the desk."

Once, as the committee prepared to leave for a trip to Baltimore, Hance climbed on the bus to find the seats marked with name tags for all committee members and staff personnel — except him. Hance had to find a seat in the back.

And in August 1981, when the committee made a trip to China, Hance was left behind. He says, "I don't know that I officially got bumped. They just never did call me to tell me the details on the trip."

Hance's reaction was conciliatory.

"I was just nice to people, and went out of my way to be courteous and nice, even when a few weren't that courteous and nice," he says.

In 1982, Hance also sought unsuccessfully to modify the tax cut he had co-sponsored, supporting a delay of up to half a year in the scheduled 1983 cut tied to curbs on cost of living increases for most government benefit programs.

In addition, he recruited conservative Democrats to run for Congress and raised about $250,000 for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, a good part of it from independent oilmen who contributed to his own campaigns.

"It was apparent to me that if I was going to have influence within the (Democratic) caucus, within the party, and maintain my philosophy, I had to be active," says Hance.

He says that "I knew that the more money I raised, the more influence I would have on who got the money and be able to have more influence with those members."

Hance's voting record in 1982 also reflected a shift, even if only a slight one, away from the president, according to Congressional Quarterly, the respected scholarly journal of congressional activity. In 1981, Hance had a presidential support rate of 71 percent on legislation, but in 1982 that dropped to 62 percent, Congressional Quarterly studies showed.

Gramm's presidential support rate, meanwhile, jumped from 75 percent in 1981 to 84 percent in 1982, according to Congressional Quarterly. The presidential support gap between the two congressmen, once only four percentage points, had widened to more than 20.

Moreover, Gramm refused to make peace with the Democratic leadership.

"I was unwilling to do that, because I had been right," Gramm says today. " I didn't have any apologies to make.

"I wasn't going to give money or go out and raise money to elect people who were voting against the national interest in some cases," he says. "I wasn't going to throw votes or refuse to take positions I believe in to get back in (their) good graces."

Gramm's standing among Democrats was not helped by an article in the Atlantic magazine in December 1981, which reported that Gramm had acted as a "spy" at Democratic budget strategy meetings for presidential Budget Director David Stockman. Gramm to this day denies the allegation, and contends that Democratic leaders had it in for him long before the article appeared.

Particularly unhappy with Gramm was House Democratic Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth, who had supported Gramm for a seat on the influential Budget Committee, from which Gramm launched his support for the Reagan budget.

"I'd rather not comment on what happens between members, but I think it's honest to say that Jim did feel betrayed and that it was a personel thing between him and Phil," says Stenholm.

Hypnosis nothing more than deep concentration

Another common misconception is that weak-minded people are more susceptible to hypnosis. "This is completely opposite," she insisted. Almost anyone can be hynotized, although it is easier for people who can concentrate well and have strong imaginations.

Some people are frightened by the more unusual aspects of hypnosis. In a hypnotic trance a person is said to be able to go back into his subconscious, or what Ms. Brannen calls the primitive conscious mind, and recall events of his life. She compares the primitive conscious to a computer that stores anything a person has ever experienced.

Another bizarre aspect of hypnosis is past-life regression. "There are those who believe and have experienced it, and there are those who say it cannot be done," she said. "I don't know that I care if it's real or imagined. If someone believes in it, it can be therapeutic to them."

"I really believe the most help you get from hypnosis is gradual growth toward a self-fulfilling autonomy or self-worth," she said.

TO INTRODUCE THEM to self-hypnosis, Ms. Brannen has the students lie on the floor. The lights are dimmed and she turns on a cassette of soft, relaxing music.

They close their eyes and relax. Softly, she gives them instructions: "Take a deep breath and exhale. Again. Concentrate on your breathing. Now visualize each part of your body going into total relaxation."

Starting with the toes she instructs them to consciously relax every part of their bodies. Then she guides them through a "trip" — for example, asking them to imagine themselves walking through a forest. The students are to pay close attention to each detail, using all their senses in the imaginary journey.

They drift in and out of the hypnotic state, losing track of time. If they are successful, the creation of their imaginations seems more real than the room, the hard floor and the voice they are listening to but not really hearing.

Vital signs are slowed during hypnosis, as they are during sleep. So the body doesn't undergo a shock, it is important to "count out," or come gradually out of the trance, she said.

One session is not going to result in change, she tells them, but with several sessions and constant reinforcements they can change attitudes and habits.

"If you want to accomplish what you came here to accomplish you must use your own inner resources and be creative," she said.

Housing Authority to concentrate on hiring new director, secretary

Hiring a new executive director and secretary will be the priority item when the Midland Housing Authority meets at 2 p.m. Wednesday in City Hall Council Chambers.

Fred Kester, who held both those posts, announced at last month's meeting he was resigning, effective Sept. 30.

The board will hear reports dealing with two housing rehabilitation programs and an update on a proposed facility for low-income persons.

Susan Howell, Community Development coordinator for the city, and Horace Berry, rehabilitation inspector, will look at the status of the 1982-83 program using Community Development Block Grant funds. Also, the status of the 1983 program using funds from the Jobs Bill will be updated.

Ms. Howell will report on the recent approval by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development of Midland's proposed Langtry Village, Inc. It will be located east of Hillcrest Manor, a housing project for low income elderly and/or handicapped persons. Langtry Village will be built for the same purpose and should consist of 300 units in a five-story building.

Single man gives up search, heads back to his old crowd

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

John Dowler is not exactly a loner.

He's a single guy in search of other singles who are tired of being lonely.

He apparently found no relief in Midland and left.

Three weeks after he arrived here from Scottsdale, Ariz., where he was president of a singles group, Dowler left West Texas and headed back west.

But he had hopes of getting a singles club started in Midland after he was frustrated by not finding one — outside of Sunday school classes for singles — in Midland. That's not exactly what he had in mind.

He was looking for some rap sessions, socializing, partying and casual dating and bar meetings.

"You're going to have a tremendous amount of friendship from it," said Dowler, who was president of the 195-member East Valley Singles in the Scottsdale-Tempe-Mesa area. "It's supposed to create togetherness" and eventually mating. "That's the underlying purpose of it."

An organization for singles "helps those people who have trouble meeting people in the same situation" — living alone due to divorce, death, desertion, happenstance or out of choice.

"They get to know each other and forget their problems."

Back in Arizona, the singles club held campouts, boondocks parties, weekend trips, Saturday night house parties, Valentine's Day and other celebrations, and Hawaiian luaus with roasted pig and hot rice.

"If you're single, you'll love it," said Dowler.

Rap sessions may deal with "sex and the single person, the single person's lifestyle, how to cook, how to get a job."

As a person progresses among other singles, he becomes "more confident, more relaxed."

Dowler was persuaded that there's a market for a singles club in Midland.

"I understand that there's a tremendous number of single people in Midland," he said.

Dowler has been single for nine years, "although I haven't been 'single, single' " all that time. "I've been involved with other women at sometime or another."

A well-run singles group possibly could help singles avoid pitfalls of mate- or relationship-shopping: "Getting involved with the wrong guy at the wrong time."

Occasionally, a couple within the singles group may marry but return to the singles group to visit their old friends, he said.

The singles club attracts "lonely people who just want to be with people," Dowler said. They may want to do some "social dating — no involvement, nothing serious, no personal involvement." In non-singles club settings, the single person may have a fear of "crowds, a fear of getting shot down."

Members within the singles group tend to be discreet, he said, and just want to feel comfortable with one another.

Mostly, the singles group affords companionship.

"Just talk," said Dowler. "You have someone to talk to."

TCLU trying to halt Autry execution

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Civil Liberties Union is trying to stop the execution Tuesday of a condemned killer it says didn't get a fair trial because his lawyer didn't tell the jury about his troubled upbringing.

James Autry, who is scheduled to die at midnight Tuesday, was convicted of the April 29, 1980 slaying of a Port Arthur convenience store clerk.

TCLU attorney Stefan Presser filed appeals Friday with the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals and State District Judge Leornard Gilbin of Beaumont, arguing that the jury didn't know enough about Autry's background before sentencing him to death.

Attached to the appeal were affidavits, including two signed by Autry and his sister, that described beatings they and their mother received from a father they said often was drunk.

Hearing continued

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A Texas Water Commission hearing on the renewal of two waste-water discharge permits for the city of Odessa has been continued until Nov. 29, said the commissioner examiner in the case.

Testimony in November will be presented by the city and county of Midland, which are opposing the renewal of the permits for Odessa's South Dixie Water Reclamation Plant and the East Water Reclamation Plant, said the examiner, Kaylene Ray.

The hearing, which convened for two days in Odessa and three days in Austin, is to conclude by Dec. 2. Attorneys for Midland and Midland County are to present five witnesses, Ms. Ray said.

In Friday's testimony, Texas Department of Water Resources hydrologist Thomas A. Glab said the discharge route for both water treatment plants are the same. Effluent is discharged into Monahans Draws, which runs eastwardly to south of Midland and through Midland County, and then to Johnson's Draw, Mustang Creek, Beal's Creek and into the Colorado River.

Midland opponents to the discharge contend the waste-water is contaminating the underground fresh water zones and occasionally floods farm and ranch land and damages county roads.

The department is recommending that the permits be renewed, Glab said. However, evidence in the case will be presented to the three-member Texas Water Commissioner for a final decision on whether the permits should be renewed and if Odessa should find alternative means to dispose of or to use the water.

Odessa claims the treated waste-water is fit for agricultural uses.

The South Dixie Water Reclamation Plant has an average daily discharge of 9.8 million gallons, and the East Water Reclamation Plant, which is in Midland County, has a daily discharge of 5.22 million gallons. The maximum discharges for the plants are 14.7 million gallons for the South Dixie plants and 7.8 million gallons for the East plant.

Orthopedic surgeon works, plays hard

Midlander in Profile

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

He likes to fly airplanes, but he crashed one a year ago.

He likes to race cars, but a broken leg, back, elbow and knee put the brakes on that hobby.

He works hard for three months and then takes off for a week of scuba-diving in the Caribbean.

When you enter his office, the blaring beat from a Laura Branigan cassette beckons as you draw closer to the door marked private.

Under a large Stetson hanging on the wall, complete with feathers, band and a gunshot hole, sits a preppily-dressed Dr. Jerry Cochran.

"I'm more comfortable during knee surgery than I am at a party — and I love to party," he says with a grin.

HE FLIPS A switch on the stacked stereo in the cabinet behind him and the pulsating beat diminishes — somewhat.

"I was born in Ada, Okla.," he begins. That explains it.

The 36-year-old orthopedic surgeon has been practicing in Midland a little more than two years. When he went to college at the University of Oklahoma, he planned on being an engineer. He thinks he didn't miss by much.

"Orthopedics is nothing more than human engineering," he says. "It's the very pinnacle of medicine because the development of the actual indoskeletal is the epitomy of paleontology, which is the latest form of development. Jellyfish have hearts but they don't have bones. Does that make sense?

"Doctors, in reality, don't cure anything — they just fix it 'til they get better," he says. "My patients come in, I can fix it, they go away and they're normal. I have immediate gratification. That's great. I have to have it like that or I'm very frustrated."

He jumps up to check an X-ray of a hand.

On his table is a small black box. Battery operated, it has an on/off switch and an Ask button. Several dark lights are set above Yes, No, Maybe, Definitely, Better Not.

"I use that to play the stock-market," he explains as he walks back into the room. "Go ahead, try it — ask 'Should I buy any IBM stock today?' "

The No Way button shines red.

"Good advice," he says.

"I like to turkey hunt, pheasant hunting. I like to hunt with a camera — that's the most challenging. I like underwater photography," Cochran says. "Other than that, I just work."

NINETY PERCENT of the work he does is with arthroscopy, examinations done by using a scope inserted into a joint. Most of the arthroscopy he uses is for knee injuries.

Dor ald Donahue invented knee surgery in the 1930s. Cochran, who trained under him in St. Francis Hospital in Wichita, Kan., thinks he's the greatest.

"I'm crazy about him."

In the late 1950's, a Japanese medical student named Mikida Watanabe began using arthroscopy for knee surgery.

"Actually, he had a friend who was a neurologist, and they're always sticking scopes up everything — which gave him the idea," Cochran says by way of explanation.

He loves doing knee surgery now, although he says at one time he didn't.

"During my residency, in those days, I hated it," Cochran said. "It was a pain in the ass — that's spelled a-s-s."

PROCEDURES WERE lengthy, sometimes taking an hour to diagnose the patient. The surgery often would last three to four hours.

It changed with arthroscopy, Cochran says, and he enjoys it.

"It's not for everyone," he says. "There are only about 250 of us in the country. It's kind of like building one of those little wooden model ships — it can be frustrating. Only one out of every 100 that start training in arthroscopic knee surgery finish."

Arthroscopic surgery makes up about 90 percent of the knee operations he does.

"I love it," he says. "Ladies don't have scars anymore and athletes aren't out for the season. You know, the average person goes bankrupt in 22 days. With arthroscopic knee surgery, they're up walking on it that night.

"The odd thing is most people (surgeons) have trouble with the orientation," Cochran says. "You're in a dark room and you're looking at a screen across the room.

"When I do this, I feel I'm actually in the knee."

However, he admits with a grin, he refused to have knee surgery following his race-car accident four years ago.

DESPITE HIS numerous scrapes and spills and the hole in his Stetson, which he swears was part of the initiation ceremony of a select hunting group in South Dakota, he hopes to begin flying again.

Until then, he's content to continue scuba-diving off Belize, east of Guatamala, where he plans to retire and write books.

"Anytime you do anything, you have to realize there is a price you pay," he says.

"Besides," he adds with a grin, "I'm getting to be a rather elderly gentleman."

"Orthopedics is nothing more than human engineering. It's the very pinnacle of medicine because the development of the actual indoskeletal is the epitomy of paleontology, which is the latest form of development."

Thirty years of Service and Over $300 Million Strong

Red Cross, Salvation Army ready to help

Every time disaster strikes, whether it is a plane crash, an apartment fire or severe weather, the American Red Cross and the Salvation Army, are able to provide relief services.

They also offer other programs to the community.

When Midland's fire engines are called to an emergency, the Red Cross knows about it. For a serious fire, a team of trained volunteers stand ready to provide temporary shelter, clothing, food and other necessities for the fire's victims.

The same services are provided to victims of disaster who are left homeless.

Each case is followed through until problems are resolved. Disaster services are provided to the victims free of charge.

The case of two families, who were assisted by the Red Cross, reveals the human aspect of disaster relief. Ironically, both incidents occurred the same night in November, 1982.

The first family, two adults and four children, had just moved to Midland. The parents had found employment for the first time in a while and the children were adjusting to their new schools.

Suddenly, a fire struck. Even though only one family member was injured, the blazes destroyed their bus-turned-home.

The American Red Cross aided the family by giving them purchase orders for food, clothing, funishings and household items such as sheets and towels.

Today the family is living in their newly remodeled "bus."

In emergency situations, the Midland Chapter of the American Red Cross keeps the lines of communication open — even when telephones aren't working. Above, Mary Sadousky of the ARC operates the emergency communication system. In disaster situations, it allows the base station at the ARC office to be in constant contact with volunteers operating emergency vehicles.

A separate fire that same night robbed another family of everything they owned.

As the young couple was peering out of their apartment window they noticed a bright glow coming from the unit next door. They ran out to warn other tenants. Hours later, only a pile of black ashes remained of their living quarters.

Just days before the incident, they had moved in all their possessions including presents from their wedding earlier that month. The bride even lost her wedding ring which she had taken off to wash dishes.

The Red Cross was on the scene that night and made sure the couple had somewhere to stay. The agency also helped replace food, clothing and essential household goods. They have since started their new life together again.

Nationally, in the last calendar year the American Red Cross spent more than $39 million on disaster relief.

The Salvation Army, perhaps best known for providing local social services, is also an important member of the disaster relief community.

Like the Red Cross, the Salvation Army is federally mandated by Congress to deliver disaster assistance. These services, were called into action earlier this month in the Houston area to help flood victims cope with their losses.

The last Salvation Army report disclosed it had distributed meals, provided shelter and offered other services valued in excess of $1 million.

Some emergency centers are still operating in the clean-up phase of the operation and will continue for about one week.

Closer to home, the Salvation Army delivers one of its primary services, Family Emergency Assistance. The program is designed to meet the basic requirements of a family in need. Assistance is usually a special voucher to pay for food, clothing or utility expenses on a one-time basis.

Transient Emergency Assistance in Midland, operated by the Salvation Army and a coalition of area churches, received attention during the boom years 1981-82. Hundreds of job seekers swarmed into a growing city that seemed to promise jobs and prosperity for all.

I recently attended a seminar in the Petroleum Club on "Managing Your Savings Dollars." I would like for you to clarify some of the information presented at the program. I would like to know what a Zero-coupon Certificate of Deposit is, and what are its advantages and disadvantages? Also, I would like to know if the speaker said that interest rates usually are two percent below the current inflation rate, and if it is possible to get a projected computer comparison between different types of investments? — G.D.S.

ANSWER: Jim Bell, account executive with Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner and Smith, Inc., was the person conducting the seminar. He says there is a misunderstanding as to what he mentioned about interest rates in comparison with inflation rates. Normally, he says, interest rates range about two to four percent ABOVE the inflation rates.

As to a Zero-coupon CD, it is basically a debt security issued without coupon payments, according to Bell. This means the certificate is without interest payments, with the return to the investor the difference between the low original purchase price and the redemption value at maturity. The CD is discounted from the face value and the amount of the discount depends on interest rate and maturity date.

As as example, Bell pointed out that an investor placing $1,000 in a Zero-coupon CD at 50 percent of face value, could expect to receive $2,000 at maturity in approximately six years. This is based on a savings and loan calculated yield of 11.85 percent, with maturity date as Oct. 11, 1989. Calculated yields vary with banking and savings and loan institutions offering this type of investment.

The Zero-coupon CD is just one in a series of tax shelters available. The "draw back," Bell says, is that the Internal Revenue Service can declare a certain amount of interest each year for this type of investment and this amount becomes taxable.

Bell says that a computer comparison of different investments and their projected yields is really not feasible because of the many variables involved. He said it would be difficult for the novice investor to understand the various assumptions, etc.

Bell also pointed out that his company has a client information desk staffed by qualified personnel ready to answer any questions. He also advises consulting a financial adviser when making investment decisions.

Would you please check ads run by Dr. C. D. Haynes in The Reporter-Telegram in December 1982 and find out the address for former patients to write for their records? — Mabel Harland, Odessa

ANSWER: The address given by Dr. Haynes was P.O. Box 5153, Midland, Texas 79704. By the way, the advertisements were published in January 1983, not December.

Can you find out the correct name of a man, I think his name was something like Swartz, who spoke in Midland 20 or 25 years ago on the dangers of Communism? He also is the author of several books on Communism. — S.G.

ANSWER: According to Mrs. John P. Butler, the name of the lecturer is Dr. Fred Schwarz, who now is the "head" of the Christian Anti-Communism Crusade. Mrs. Butler says the address of the Christian Anti-Communism Crusade is P.O. Box 890, 227 E. Sixth St., Long Beach, Calif. 90801-0890.

The Quarter Horse Show, which runs through today, opened the pre-fair horse festivities.

The Saddle, Walking and Roadster Horse Show this Thursday through Oct. 9 will be drawing 300 entries from Texas, Mississippi, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Tennessee.

The coliseum will liven up Oct. 12 and 13 when events by the National Cutting Horse Assocation and the American Quarter Horse Association take place.

The weekend of Oct. 14-16 will afford horse buffs a color array of 616 Appaloosa, Palomino, Pony of America, Paint and miniature horses.

The Hunter and Jumper Show will be held Oct. 17 and 18.

During Oct. 20-23 wind-down of the Fair, the classic and graceful Arabians will perform in the coliseum, and the draft horses, mules and donkeys will be shown in the livestock pavilion. The 300 Arabian entries will be in native costumes, and the park events will feature the high-stepping action and formal driving classes. Draft horses, donkeys, and mules will be in the closing activites.

Twelve horse shows make up the "Best of Shows."

Texas AAM sets convention

FLOYDADA — The American Agriculture Movement of Texas will be holding a convention in the Holiday Inn in Plainview Nov. 4 and 5.

The AAMT is suggesting that its members and others interested in the movement's goals make plans to attend the convention.

Farm economy changing

COLLEGE STATION — The agricultural economy of the nation is in a stage of transition along with agriculture itself and policies affecting agriculture, says economist Dr. Ronald D. Knutson of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"We simply cannot continue to go down the same commodity program path of the past 50 years," he said.

Major policy changes seldom take place.

"Instead, changes are generally incremental and deal with particular problems at a moment in time."

Proposed changes are being debated.

"Goals of agriculture and food policy from the 1940s through much of the 1960s were to raise farm income to the level of non-farm income," said Knutson. "A shift in goals occurred in the early 1970s simultaneously with the adoption of more export-oriented farm policies."

The economist noted that "farmers increasingly talk of the need for a long-range agricultural and food policy — an 8- to 10-year farm bill that would avoid the post-election year rush to prevent reversion to antiquated permanent legislation as well as the almost yearly farm bill revision."

TAEX official promoted

COLLEGE STATION — Dr. Delbert O. Black, personnel officer for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service for the past 10 years, has been named associate director for the TAEX's fiscal and management affairs.

Black will provide administrative leadership and coordination of fiscal operations, personnel management, and agricultural communications and computer services.

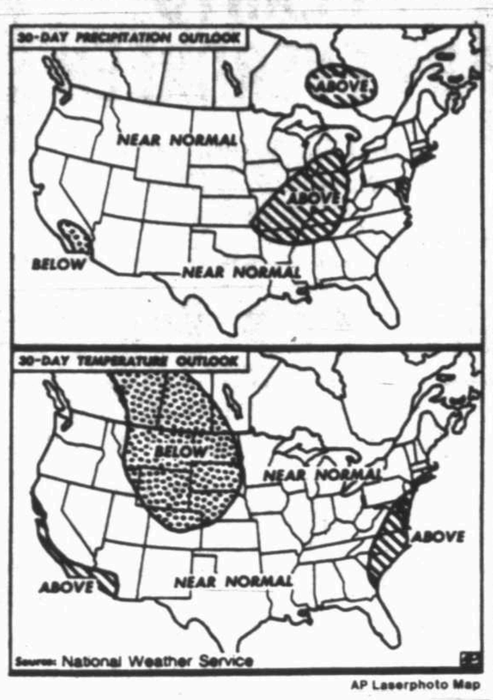

Cattle feeders to gather

AMARILLO — The 1983 Texas Cattle Feeders Association annual convention will kick off Nov. 13 in San Antonio's Hyatt Regency Hotel for a "most stimulating and exciting get-together that Texas cattlemen have had in years," according to Lee Wilcox, TCFA's communications director.

"This year's convention offers a host of exciting speakers, some top-notch educational programs and a chance to mix and mingle with the tops in the cattle industry," he said.

Sessions will deal with strategies for success in cattle raising, exports and balancing cattlemen's lives.

Speakers will include Charles E. Koontz, general manager of the Olton Feedyard at Olton; Henry G. Cisneros, mayor of San Antonio; James Humes, speech writer for Presidents Eisenhower, Nixon, Ford and Reagan; Dr. Ann McGee-Cooper, author and consultant in creative thinking and "building brain power"; Don Butler, chairman of the U.S. Meat Export Federation; Jim Mullins, chairman of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, and W.J. Waldrip, president of the National Cattlemen's Association.

Much South Plains cotton damaged in record freeze

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — As much as 15 to 20 percent of the South Plains cotton crop was damaged in the record-breaking freeze of two weeks ago, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Losses were considerably higher in some counties north of Lubbock where the crop had been heavily irrigated in early September and was in lush condition, Carpenter said in his weekly crop report.

The freeze, about six weeks earlier than normal, also heavily damaged late-planted grain sorghum and soybeans and a few remaining vegetable crops, Carpenter said. High winds accompanying the cold front blew over a lot of mature corn in the Panhandle and South Plains and caused blowing sand which damaged some mature cotton.

However, the norther also brought good drying weather to much of the state, boosting harvest operations, Carpenter said. Cotton harvesting extends from the Uvalde area through Central Texas north to the Red River, and some early harvesting is under way in West Central Texas and the Trans-Pecos area.

Some grain sorghum harvesting continues in North Central, Northeast and West Central Texas, and harvesting has started in the Trans-Pecos area. A little corn is still being harvested in North Central Texas, along the Upper Coast and in the Uvalde area, and harvesting is gaining momentum in the Panhandle and South Plains.

Peanut harvesting has started in west central areas and will start soon in central and eastern areas.

Some early pecan varieties are starting to hull, and a bumper harvest is expected, said Carpenter.

Ranchers in western areas of the state are continuing to battle drought conditions, Carpenter said, and are busy culling herds while providing feed and water for stock they are keeping.

AGRICULTURE

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: The mid-September freeze caused heavy damage to irrigated cotton and late grain sorghum and soybeans. Cotton losses are estimated at 1/8 to 1/4-bale per acre. High north winds also blew down a lot of mature corn. Some farmers are baling freeze-damaged grain sorghum for hay. Sugar beets look good and harvesting is about to start. Most wheat farmers are waiting for rain to plant.

SOUTH PLAINS: Cotton losses due to the record-breaking freeze on Sept. 21 are estimated at 15 to 20 percent. However, losses are considerably greater in counties north of Lubbock where the crop was heavily irrigated in early September and was in lush condition. Freeze damage was also heavy in late-planted grain sorghum and soybeans. High winds with the cold front blew over some mature corn and damaged some mature cotton in southern counties.

ROLLING PLAINS: High winds from mid-September cold front blew some cotton out of the burr and snapped twigs holding pecan clusters, causing considerable losses. Cotton is maturing but crop prospects are only fair due to the season-long drought, which has also reduced mung bean yields. Most producers are waiting on rain to plant small grains. Cattle feeding and watering continue.

NORTH CENTRAL: A little corn and grain sorghum are still being harvested, and cotton harvesting is about to start. Peanuts are maturing and should be ready to harvest in a couple of weeks. Farmers continue to prepare land for small grains, with some seeding under way. Pastures could use more rain.

4-H 'building on experience'

4-H has a proud 75-year heritge that forms the basis of this year's National 4-H Week theme, "4-H: Building on Experience." This will be a year-long theme for the program in Texas and across the nation, and it will get special emphasis during National 4-H Week, October 1-8.

National 4-H Week is a special time for members and leaders to promote the nation's largest youth organization and to bring some recognition to its contributions. Over the years millions of 4-H'ers have gained valuable leadership experiences and learned practical skills that have improved their quality of life.

Today almost five million youth across the nation between the ages of 9 and 19 are gaining valuable learning experiences through 4-H, 187,000 of those in Texas. The Texas 4-H program reaches boys and girls through more than 2,000 community based clubs and another 900 short-term project groups.

4-H'ers are engaged in some 50 different project areas in which they gain lifelong skills through the program's "learning-by-doing" concept. These pojects had their beginning 75 years ago when special Corn Clubs were organized for boys in Jack County. First focusing on such traditional areas as crop and livestock production and canning and sewing, 4-H projects now deal with a wide range of subjects, including small engines, rocketry, veterinary science and the use of computers.

The 4-H program is conduced in each state through the Cooperative Extension Service and is backed by the state's land-grant university (Texas A&M University for the Texas program) and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Some 22,000 adult and teenage 4-H leaders boulder much of the responsibility for the 4-H program in Texas.

A number of local activities and programs are being planned in Midland County to support the 4-H theme. The first event is the annual awards program scheduled for October 2. At this time 4-H'ers will be recognized for their contributions.

On October 8 a Showmanship Clinic has been planned to assist all 4-H'ers who have horse, beef, swine and lamb projects.

On October 15, the annual Midland County Open 4-H Horse Show will be held at the 4-H arena.

Golden Spurs 4-H Club will be sponsoring a Halloween Carnival for all youth on October 22. This carnival will be open to everyone.

On October 29 we will have the Midland County 4-H Three-Wheel Rodeo. This is a new activity for Midland County and all youth are invited to participate, and the public is invited to attend. It will be at the Midland County 4-H Arena, located behind the County Exhibit Building on East Highway 80. For more information regarding this Three-Wheel Rodeo please call the County Extension Office, 682-9481, Ext. 433.

"4-H: Building on Experience" highlights the educational projects which help young people gain practical skills, develop good nutrition and health habits, explore career opportunities, generate leadership capabilities, and become involved as citizens in their local communities. The 4-H program is open to all youth, ages 9 to 19, regardless of socio-economic level, race, color, sex, religion or national origin. For additional information regarding 4-H in Midland County please call your County Extension Office.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

'Compulsive' behavior excludes pleasure

Dear Dr. Solomon: As a college freshman, I am still in the process of forming opinions. But one thing I've decided is that some college students like to use words that they don't even know the meaning of. Whenever someone studies or cleans his room, he is called "compulsive." What does "compulsive" actually mean? — Timmy, College Park, Md.

Dear Timmy: Dr. Gary D. Tollefson, of the University of Minnesota at St. Paul-Ramsey Medical Center, says that someone with a compulsive personality disorder tends to exclude personal pleasures or relationships. He or she avoids emotional expression or compassion, and seldom becomes involved in informal relationships. One important characteristic of the compulsive personality is the desire for control.

Many compulsive people are good workers; some, however, may get so bogged down in details that they are prevented from working effectively.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What should a parent do if a child has a fever? I don't like to call the doctor every time my son sneezes, but I don't like to ignore an illness either. Do you have any suggestions? — Mrs. G.U., Duluth, Minn.

Dear Mrs. U.: Dr. Richard H. Rapkin, of the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey in Newark, suggests making the child with a fever as comfortable as possible. If he is shivering, cover him with a blanket. It he is sweating, remove the cover. A physician should be called if the child's temperature exceeds 102 degrees, since this indicates the presence of an infection that calls for medical attention.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have heard the term biofeedback used a number of times and, in fact, I have used it myself. But to tell the truth, I don't really know what it means. Would you explain? — Ms. A.W., Denver, Colo.

Dear Ms. W.: Biofeedback is a technique that shows certain activities of a person's body. A variety of instruments are used to measure such things as heart rate, blood pressure, and skin temperature, and the information is conveyed to the patient almost immediately.

Biofeedback is now being used for a number of disorders including headaches, hypertension, anxiety and pain.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Do men enjoy having their breasts stimulated? I'm talking about straight men, not homosexuals. — Ms. D.L., Fort Worth, Texas

Dear Ms. L.: Dr. Joseph Lamberti, of the University of Missouri School of Medicine in Columbia, says that stimulation of the male breast can indeed by pleasurable. Stimulating any part of the body can be enjoyable, and the breast is no exception.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm reaching the age where many of my friends are beginning to have prostate trouble. Do all men have these problems as they get older. I'm beginning to think that it happens to everyone who lives past 70 years of age. — Herman, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Dear Herman: Prostate problems are not uncommon, but that does not mean that they occur in everyone.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter is wearing a brace for scoliosis and the doctor recommends that she do exercises. What is the purpose of the exercise while she's wearing a brace? — Mrs. J.F., Montreal

Dear Mrs. F.: A brace restricts the extent to which muscles are able to function and this may cause them to weaken. Similarly, a brace does not permit the joints to move normally and they will stiffen. An exercise program can prevent this loss of strength and flexibility.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was recently told that I have rheumatoid arthritis. Can you tell me what causes the condition and what the outlook is? — Mr. T., Medford, Ore.

Dear Mr. T.: It is not possible to answer the question you raise. Dr. Edward D. Harris, Jr. of the Rutgers Medical School in New Jersey, points out that no one knows what initiates the process. Moreover, the outcome varies considerably from patient to patient. Rheumatoid arthritis has been known to improve spontaneously, especially during the early stages of the disease.

It should be apparent that compliance with your physician's instructions is one way to help bring about a satisfactory long-term outcome.

Dear Dr. Solomon: You have written before about the possible side effects of various drugs. My uncle has started receiving treatment for tuberculosis and he says the doctor wants to check him every once in a while for side effects. What kind of side effects are drugs that are used to treat tuberculosis likely to cause? — Dale, Augusta, Ga.

Dear Dale: Two drugs that are often used in the treatment of tuberculosis are isoniazid and rifampin, and both may have a harmful effect on the liver. The effect appears to be age-related with isoniazid — that is, the older the patient, the more likley that liver toxicity will occur. The drug is discontinued in any patient who develops symptoms that suggest hepatitis.

Patients taking rifampin should be aware that the drug may diminish the activity of other medications they may be receiving. This is particularly important for patients who are being treated by more than one physician.

For Lillian, Montgomery, Ala.:

Obesity itself may be a cause of infertility. Physicians from the University of Mississippi Medical Center report that 10 of 13 obese women who lost more than 15 percent of their weight through dietary restriction were able to become pregnant. They were part of a group of 18 obese women who had been considered infertile.

For Mr. L.R., Dallas, Texas: The fact that a diabetic man may be at risk for organic impotence does not preclude the possibility of a psychological cause of impotence. Diabetics are not immune to depression, guilt, marital problems or other emotional problems that can lead to impotence.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

POSITIVE THINKING

Let your attitude provide motivation you need

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

How can anyone feel dull in this exciting, action-packed world. It's a pity but there are human beings who find life uninteresting — for whom there is just no inspiration, no motivation.

The important thing to realize is that none of us have to be that way. A life packed with excitement and enjoyment is possible. Unlimited reserves of new zest for living are available to everyone. I am constantly meeting men and women who have discovered this fabulous fact.

One day last spring I traveled a couple of hundred miles by car with one of the most enthusiastic, vibrantly alive men I have encountered anywhere. The weather that day was curiously changeable, bringing warmth, cool breezes, varying clouds, showers and sunshine in rapid alternation. The countryside was clothed in spring freshness.

At every turn in the road my companion found some cause for delight. "What is more beautiful...," he asked, indicating the fields we passed, "than a flock of sheep in a green meadow like that?"

A few minutes later, marveling at long shafts of sunlight cutting down through heavy overcast, he exclaimed, "Looks like a light from heaven above, doesn't it?"

And the next moment, with a wave of his hand in the direction of a handsome old brick house set amid stately pines: "Ah! There you have early America at its best!"

Noticing a little stream splashing down a hillside and under a little bridge, he remarked about the beauty of "clear, cold water surging over clean washed rocks."

Great dark clouds came billowing up from the horizon and he drew a deep breath of rapture saying, "Just look at the rugged grandeur of that sky!"

At length we stopped for gasoline. I found myself wondering whether my exuberant friend would find anything to trigger his admiration at the rather ordinary-looking service station. Sure enough — along one wall of the building three lilac bushes stood covered with blossoms. Now, for me no flower has greater charm than the lilac. Each year I look forward to its springtime blooming. But never have I heard anyone become as ecstatic about a lilac bush as this amazingly zestful man.

"I have seldom met a man with as much enthusiasm as you have. How do you get it?" I asked.

"Well I had a lot of trouble and hard going, but I got on top of it. Now I'm just excited, that's all." One by-product of his new aliveness, he added, was that he now had much more confidence in his ability to cope with problems.

What happened to that man can happen to any of us. In the course of events the zest and enthusiasm of youth tends to abate as we grow older. Poets through the centuries have lamented this melancholy process:

The youth, who daily farther from the east
Must travel, still is Nature's priest,
And by the vision splendid
Is on his way attended;

At length the man perceives it die away,
And fade into the light of common day.

As we move into adulthood we tend to become preoccupied with life's difficulties and responsibilities. We lose sight of our early dreams. We get tense, anxious and weary. We may even grow listless and dull.

But by becoming positive in the mind a person can be renewed. Life can become endlessly scintillating, satisfying and exciting.

Bighorn sheep moved into wildlife area

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

SIERRA DIABLO WILDLIFE MANAGEMENT AREA — Twenty-four desert bighorn sheep from Arizona and Nevada have found a new home in brood pens in the rugged Sierra Diablo range north of Van Horn.

Fifteen sheep from Nevada arrived July 22 and 10 from Arizona on Aug. 3 to supplement about 25 head roaming free in the mountains. With the breeding stock, Texas Parks and Wildlife officials hope to make bighorns self-sustaining in a region in which hunters and domestic sheep and goats once caused their extinction.

"They're doing good," said TP&WD wildlife biologist Jack S. Kilpatric of Marfa, who is in charge of the project. "We've only lost one, a year-and-a-half-old lamb that failed to adapt to the pen. Cause of the death was a mole in the lungs brought on by stress."

The breeding program was made possible by construction of four pens, ranging from 8½ to 10 acres in size, with $202,000 in funds donated by the Texas Chapter of the Foundation for North American Wild Sheep and Texas Bighorn Society.

Last Saturday Kilpatric and TP&WD officials captured two rams roaming the range and placed them with the 14 ewes from Nevada. Previously, rams had been withheld from both groups of ewes to prevent lambs from being born in the winter months.

"What we want is March lambs instead of January," said Kilpatric. "The weather is milder and they'll have a better chance of survival...Some of the ewes might've been bred before we got them from Arizona and Nevada, but we're hoping they weren't. If that's the case we'll have some December and January lambs and it's too cold a country for that."

TP&WD plans to fill the two remaining pens with additional breeding stock. If good lamb crops result from the project, excess sheep will be released each year to free-range the 200—square-mile Sierra Diablo.

"When we get the bighorn sheep herd in the Sierra Diablos to where it will sustain itself, we will probably move the excess sheep to other mountain ranges," noted Kilpatric. "We have to be sure there's not more predators there than sheep when we release them, and we can't go into any area where there's any domestic sheep or goats to compete for food...or spread disease."

Kilpatric said only the Eagle Mountains and possibly the Quitman Mountains currently meet those criteria. But "once we demonstrate that we can re-stock these sheep, I suspect people will show interest in cleaning up their mountain ranges so they can have sheep too."

The Sierra Diablo is one of only three locales in Texas in which desert bighorns have been re-introduced. The project failed due to predators at Black Gap Wildlife Management Area, where probably less than 10 sheep remain, while 18 head are on the Chilicote Ranch near Valentine.

The last observation of native Texas desert bighorn came in 1960 in the Sierra Diablo, where seven sheep were released to range free in 1973 and seven more in 1979.

'Neighbors' honored

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK — The third annual Good Neighbor Day will be held Saturday, Oct. 22, at Rio Grande Village in Big Bend National Park.

International Good Neighbor Day was developed to recognize the relationship the park has with its neighbors in both the United States and Mexico, according to Superintendent Gil Lusk.

The activities will include arts and crafts displays, food booths featuring Mexican and American foods, folk singers, a dance group from Ojinaga, mariachis, and school children activities.

Trees again available

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. — Lincoln National Forest this year will again sell Christmas trees to individuals for their personal use.

A total of 4,400 trees will be available for cutting in five areas of the forest. No fir trees will be sold on the Cloudcroft District due to the damage being caused by the spruce budworm infestation. Some fir trees will be available in the Mayhill District, which is unaffected by the insect build-up.

Permits will be available about the first of November for $5 and will entitle the holder to a tree up to 10 feet in height. Applications will contain the location of the cutting areas and the species available.

Round-up kicks off

ABILENE — The 24th annual Cattlemen's Round-up for Crippled Children kicked off last week at Abilene Auction with a successful sale that saw a record 309 head of cattle bring $115,836.

Persons wishing to donate livestock for upcoming sales should call West Texas Rehabilitation Center, 915-692-1633.

The Cattlemen's Round-up for Crippled Children benefits West Texas Rehabilitation Center's programs for the handicapped. More than 10,000 handicapped children and adults will be treated free of charge this year on campuses in Abilene and San Angelo.

Mathis will return

STANTON — Jimmy Mathis, formerly Martin County judge and Stanton city manager, will return to Stanton to accept the city manager's position left vacant by the resignation of Joe Benton.

Mathis was to assume duties Saturday. He served as Stanton city manager from 1973-1975, when he was appointed Martin County judge. He resigned that post in May, 1981 to farm near Amherst.

Oil well is dry hole

ANDREWS — An oil well that was the center of controversy when nearby residents opposed its placement near their homes in Andrews city limits has turned out to be a dry hole.

Restoration planned

FORT DAVIS — The post hospital and officers' quarters at Fort Davis Historic Site will be restored with funds from the Federal Jobs Bill, according to superintendent Douglas McChristian.

Custom-milled and treated lumber will be used to duplicate the original porch on the number two officers' quarters and to replace the non-historic porch on the post hospital. The new buildings will be treated periodically with a preservative rather than pain for stimulation of the original decking.

First bale weighed in GARDEN CITY — Glasscock County's first bale of cotton for 1983 has been claimed by Henry Chudej and B.J. Haviak of Glasscock County Co-op.

The bale weighed 462 pounds.

CARLSBAD CAVERNS NATIONAL PARK — Fall and winter hours have resumed at Carlsbad Caverns and Guadalupe Mountains National Parks.

At Carlsbad Caverns, the visitor center will be open from 7:30 a.m.-5 p.m. (Mountain Time), with complete walk-in trips through the caverns available between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. Big Room trips which begin with an elevator descent are available from 8 a.m.-3:15 p.m.

Bat flight programs will continue through October or until the bat colony migrates. They are held nightly at the cavern entrance, with the flights occuring about sunset.

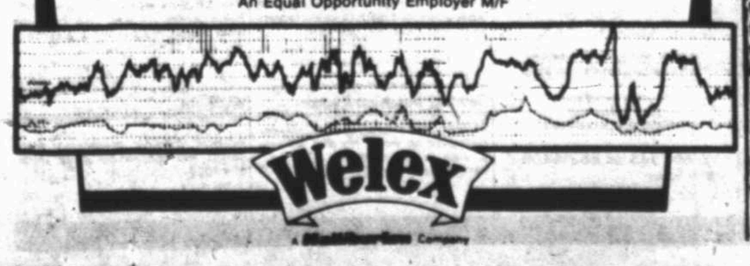

Lantern trips at New Cave in Slaughter Canyon will be offered only on weekends until next spring, with two trips offered each Saturday and Sunday at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

A GOOD USED CAR... MORE CAR FOR THE MONEY.

Year in and-year out cars depreciate in value. You've heard it. But it's not true! Cars only depreciate each year in price, not in value, because the next year's models have arrived.

There's a difference between price and value. Today's late model used cars, specially those that received good care, actually can give you as much value as a new one. When you can buy a good used car for thousands of dollars less than a new one, that's real value. Our reputation for offering good value for the money is your best assurance... buying your used car.

"It's good to have a place where you really like to live."

Debbie Allen talks about living at The Clusters:

"There's a lot of activity around here. Like this aerobics class.

"I can swim, play tennis, aerobics, jog. I can stay in good physical shape just living at my own house.

"I've lived here 8 months and I've been an apartment dweller for several years. I looked at several other complexes, but they were all the same...just four walls, a bathroom and a kitchen. This one is quite different. It has all the other luxuries."

No other Midland apartment community combines a multitude of activities with truly luxurious living. Featuring your choice of decorator wall coverings, side-by-side icemaker refrigerators, built-in micro-waves, ceiling fans, dishwashers, washers and dryers, trash compactors, mini-blinds and French doors to patios/balconies.

Come and visit and you'll see why Debbie Allen says, "I would really hate to move from here...I love it."

Ennis Cole has been the Beefeater at the ball since it began in 1965.

BEEF EATER

Text by Lisa Gerlock

Though his character is more commonly seen in the United States on the Beefeater Gin label, Ennis Cole has dressed in a costume that has become a trademark for one of society's biggest events in Midland.

Since the Beefeater's Ball conception in 1965, he has greeted guests and escorted women on a red carpet to the door of the event, sponsored by the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center.

Cole has lived in Midland since 1953. He moved here from Dallas when he was 19 years old. He went to work with an oil company. Since that time, he has built businesses such as Cole's Lawn Service and Midland Spray Service. He is a cattle rancher and has "some investments in oil," he said. He added he has half-interest in C&W Construction.

Because he knew many of the Beefeater's Ball founders, through his businesses, he became involved in the charity. Mrs. Durward Goolsby, treasurer of the board of directors for the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center asked him if he would would be their Beefeater, he said.

It takes him about 20 minutes to put on the red tights, knickers, ruffled tunic with black and gold trim, flat-topped hat and white gloves.

Though the hat has worn and been replaced a couple of times, the costume worn at every ball is the original, made by Mrs. Ken Griffin and donated to the league, Mrs. Goolsby said.

Cole volunteers his time at the ball and gives money to the CP Center ever year, "because it is a good cause," he said.

He enjoys doing it because he knows "almost everyone" he greets at the affair and he likes seeing everyone happy.

"Everyone is friendly, jolly and laughing," he said.

The beefeater, originally called a yeoman in England during the 1400s, meant "holder or retainer on a feudal manor."

Years ago, the yeomen were nicknamed Beefeaters, thought to have started in Tudor days, when servants ate large quantities of beef provided by their masters.

The yeomen became an indepedent class of small landowners. They were famous for their sturdiness and patriotism. King Henry first organized the Yeoman of the Guard, as a group of bodyguards, in 1485.

Though today's yeomen still serve as royal bodyguards, it is only on formal occasions.

An appointment to the Yeoman of the Guard is honorary.

Ball has colorful history

History of the Beefeater's Ball reveals minor headache-causing incidents:

— One year its tent was blown-over

— Another year its goldfish were eaten

— And another time its jewelry was stolen.

But the tradition has brought together yet another and this year marks the tenth Beefeater's Ball.

The ball, sponsored by the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center, will be presented at7 p.m., Friday, at the Midland County Exhibit Building, East Highway 80.

The black-tie event traditionally features an auction of steers and other items, ballroom dancing and a dinner.

The affair began with 57 "donors of cattle," in 1965 and has grown to 265 sponsors, up 25 from last year's number.

The Beefeater's Ball was organized 18 years ago, under the direction of Charles Priddy, then chairman and often referred to as "father" of the Beefeaters. Though new chairmen are named for the every-other-year event, Priddy still supports it.

"I don't that he has missed one yet," said Mrs. Durward Goolsby, board member and treasurer of the Cerebral Palsy Center.

Other founders of the black-tie affair were Jess Ann Thomason, Mrs. Herbert E. Ware Jr., Mrs. Robert M. Wynne, Mrs. Roy Davidson and Mrs. Durward Goolsby. Non-members of the service league who volunteered were Bill Blakemore, Mrs. William Aikman and Bill Gilmore.

According to Mrs. Goolsby, the group who came up with idea — Mrs. Aikman, Gilmore, Priddy and Blakemore — wanted "something unique and different for West Texas. They wanted it to be black-tie, have it in a barn and they decided to auction cattle. That was where the western flavor came in."

The name "Beefeaters" was appropriate for the event because it was for those who enjoyed eating beef, she said.

Held at the Blakemore Exhibit Barn for its first three times. The ball was moved to Stonegate North on Saddle Club Drive in 1971, where it was also planned to be in 1973. Because strong West Texas winds blew the brightly-colored guest tent down two days before the event, the location was moved at the last minute.

Since 1973, it has been held at the Midland Exhibition Center on Highway 80.

Beer sales stifled in move

Copper pot not dry

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Robert's Copper Pot, a Midland restaurant, has long been known for its extensive collection of foreign beers. At the time, however, the delicatessen-style restaurant can't sell alcoholic beverages.

The restaurant's recent move from its original location at 3211 W. Wadley Ave. to the Mission Square shopping center created the situation.

Instead, customers who purchase a meal are offered a complimentary Strohs or, if they prefer, wine.

"We've owned the beverage license for over five years," said Robert Conklin, Robert's Copper Pot's owner and namesake, "But it's stationed at the old address."

So, Conklin said, the Midland City Council has to approve moving the license before he can sell alcoholic beverages again.

To keep its loyal clientele, Conklin said, the restaurant's manager, Yish Naftel, is paying for beer out of his own pocket to give away to diners until the license move is approved.

"We're maintaining our customers," Conklin said. "The loss of revenue is pretty high."

He said he is not especially annoyed with the problem.

"The law is the law," he added.

Customers are not taking unfair advantage of the free beer, Conklin said.

"We have some high-class customers here," he said. "They don't drink much when they know somebody else is buying. They know it has to come out of someone's pocket."

Conklin expects to be able to sell alcoholic beverages at the new location by the middle of next month, and said the beer supply will last until then.

Meanwhile, his beer collection is stored in a warehouse. When it is moved into the restaurant, Conklin said he will be able to sell 104 different brands, which he claims is the largest in-stock collection in Texas.

Only four brands in the collection are American beers: Strohs, Shiner, Anchor Steam and one brand that will vary.

The restaurant's beer list, posted on the wall above the now almost empty cooler, includes beers from many lands.

Listed are Krakus from Poland (which Conklin said is now very difficult to get), Tsing Tao from the People's Republic of China, Sapporo from Japan, Red Stripe from Jamaica, Leopard from New Zealand and Pilsner Urquel from Czechoslovakia, as well as many German and English beers.

Robert's Copper Pot's most popular beer is probably the German beverage St. Pauli's Girl, he said, although his personal favorite is the Mexican beer Negra Modelo.

A beer called Old Peculiar from England is on the list, but it is not the one he considers the most unusual.

That honor, said Conklin, goes to Duvel from Belgium. The name means "devil" and he said it is a strong brew.

"If you drink six of them you can sell your soul to the devil," he said. "It's been the poorest seller we have, incidentally."

Staff Photo by Paul Gilbert

Beefeater...

The event's 18 years of history bring back some memories for Mrs. Goolsby. "One year, we auctioned some live ducks. The ducks were put in a pond we had as a decoration. The ducks ate all the goldfish we put in the pond," she said.

Another year the members made treasure chest centerpieces and filled the miniature trunks with their own costume jewelry. When the women returned the following day to pick up their belongings, the jewels had disappeared.

Every other year, children's service league members and volunteers from the community decorate the exhibit building to a theme of far away places.

A Spanish theme was created for the first Beefeater's Ball. Other years have had atmospheres of Paris, the Orient, Atlantis — the city under the sea — and the Mississippi River.

This year, Beefeater's will take guests to the Big Apple, complete with a stroll through Central Park and other surprises.

A 9 x 20 foot mural of Manhatten's skyline, created by Beefeater's artist Mrs. Robert R. Thames Jr., will cover one wall of the exhibition center.

The Joe Reischmann Orchestra of Dallas, was the original entertainment of the Beefeater's. "He was not young when he started with us," said Mrs. Goolsby. After Reischmann's death in 1973, the Mal Fitch Orchestra, also of Dallas, has played for the ball.

The Midland Cerebral Palsy Center is owned and operated by the Chilren's Service League.

Other functions of the service league are to aid medically indigent children, provide volunteer aid to the city and county health department clinics — the well-child clinic, the prenatal clinic and the immunization clinic.

Volunteers of the league work as receptionists, clerks and other positions, hire professional therapists and provide facilities for special education classes under the jurisdiction of the Midland Independent School District.

On the season's off years, the service league sponsors a benefit fashion show.

This year's chairman is F. Ferrell Davis and co-chairman John McGuigan. Other committee chairmen are Mrs. Tom McIntosh and Mrs. Bruce Pope, decorations; Henry Shaw and James P. Crawford, executive director of Midland Cerbral Pasly Center, construction; Mrs. Ervin C. Philpy, special decoration effects; Mrs. Robert M. Wynne, park construction; Mrs. David Buthman, special painting; Mrs. Bill Cotner, arena; Mrs. Ron Holcomb, lighting effects; Mrs. James W. Richard, sewing and costumes; Mrs. William Henry, buffet; Mrs. Earl Bruno and Mrs. Floyd Miller, powder room decorations, Mrs. Edward Gemmill and Mrs. Joseph Schley, entrance; Mrs. Cecil Aycock and Mrs. Durward Goolsby, liason; Mrs. Roy Davidson, publicity; Mrs. A.E. Simmons and Mrs. Herbert Ware, plants; Mrs. Paul Morris, supply; Mrs. John Wetzel, Mrs. Tom Stovell and Mrs. Hugh Frenzel invitations; Mrs. John Gould, Jr. and Mrs. Jack Manaugh, dance floor; Mrs. James Ingram, centerpieces coordinator; and Mrs. George Patterson and Mrs. Michael McKinney, food for "barn workers.".

Mrs. George Patterson is the center's chairman of the board and Dr. Charles Younger is the medical director for the center.

This year's auctioneer will be Gayle Ingram of Quitman. Betty Jo Munn is the auction clerk. The event will be catered by Don Strange of San Antonio and Mr. Tommy Stewart, cattle coordinator since original ball is again rendering his services this year.

Victim speaks to save others

YORK, Pa. (AP) — John Heim sits quietly in the wheelchair in his room at the Colonial Manor Nursing Home in York. He is dressed in a T-shirt, sneakers and warm-up pants, and at 6 feet 2 and about 155 pounds, he has the build of an athlete.

But he can't dress or feed himself or help himself out of bed in the morning. And he doesn't get out much of the time.

Seven years ago, when Heim was 15, he was in a car accident that police said was caused by a drunken driver. The accident left him paralyzed from mid-shoulders down.

Until this year, Heim felt "like a bum," because he couldn't work or support himself. Now he is the president of a new corporation, A Victim Speaks.

The firm was formed recently by his nurse, Evelyn Mason, so Heim could travel to neighboring schools and tell students about surviving a serious alcohol-related accident.

The big difference between AVS and other anti-drinking and driving campaigns is that Heim presents himself directly to the audience as a victim, he said.

"Most programs emphasize the number of young people killed in accidents, but we don't emphasize death," Ms. Mason said. "We emphasize those who go on living with severe mental and physical difficulties.

Luck charm: A chicken

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

HARTFORD, Conn. — Forget the rabbit's foot and the four-leaf clover. Bring on the chicken, either Southern fried or baked Italian-style. That's the good luck charm that works for Boston Red Sox player Wade Boggs.

Boggs eats chicken every day during the baseball season. And does his culinary good-luck charm work? Could it be the chicken that fuels his hitting power?

Who knows? But he has led the major leagues in batting average and total number of hits most of the summer. And he is not about to tamper with success. During his eight years in the pros, his chicken consumption has risen steadily — and so has his batting average.

Boggs's main meal of the day is mid-day, before the 25-year-old hitting sensation heads for Fenway Park to warm up before a game.

"We eat 1 1-2 chickens a day," Boggs said during an interview at the ballpark .

"My wife (Debbie) and daughter (4-year-old Meagann) eat half a chicken, and I eat the other one."

Boggs began the chicken ritual in earnest in 1977, when he was playing in the minor leagues in Winston-Salem, N.C.

"I'd have it three times a week, mainly because it was economical, easy to digest, and I felt better," he said. Boggs said he thinks the sense of well-being contributed to the rise in his batting average.

His wife, Debbie, also remembers those early chicken-eating days in the minors. "On those days (when he ate chicken), he got more hits. He's very superstitious," she said in a telephone interview. "I'd have pork chops to give him a break from chicken, but he found he didn't do as well."

Boggs, however, has racked up impressive statistics. Last year, as a rookie with the Boston Red Sox, he hit .349. As of Monday, Boggs had a .363 average — good enough for him to lead both the American and National leagures.

His batting talent is a natural subject for sportswriters, while his preference for chicken has prompted many news stories and television spots. The Boggses have been photographed and filmed eating chicken so often, they now refuse photo requests in their home.

Because of the publicity, Boggs's fan mail often includes recipes. "We get recipes from all over the country," Debbie Boggs said. "We're getting about 100 a week. Poultry farmers in the (Boston) area have been bringing cookbooks to the ballpark."

Debbie Boggs said she has tried some of the recipes. Their favorite so far was a lemon-barbecued chicken.

Boggs likes his mother's chicken and yellow rice and her chicken and dumplings, but his No. 1 dish is his mom's fried chicken. He said she soaks chicken parts in buttermilk for three hours and then fries them in grease.

It has been a long-time favorite. "Every Sunday, we would have fried chicken," said Boggs, an Omaha, Neb., native. "It was a ritual."

His wife's best chicken dish is her Italian chicken, he said. It's a simple dish, Debbie Boggs said: Mix the contents of a package of dried Italian dressing mix with a stick of softened butter. Spread half the mixture on chicken parts and bake 30 minutes at 400 degrees F. Turn the parts, spread with remaining butter and bake another 30 minutes.

Another Boggs favorite is Debbie's lemon chicken: Mix fresh lemon juice (and dry mustard, if desired) into a stick of butter, and spread on chicken. Sprinkle chicken with oregano and bake at 400 degrees F for one hour. She bastes the chicken with the butter sauce as it cooks.

As might be expected, Boggs faces some good-natured ribbing from his teammates. But during the season, Boggs sticks faithfully to his chicken regimen, even eating poultry when the team is on the road.

On a charter flight last month from a game in Toronto, Boggs tried a new chicken dish, which he dubbed "air chicken." "It was excellent," he said of the shrimp-stuffed chicken served on a USAir charter flight.

Boggs is candid about another food preference — hot dogs.

Boggs has had a taste for hot dogs since 1977. "He eats hot dogs after each game," Debbie Boggs said. "And the only ones he'll eat are Fenway Franks. He says they taste better."

"I used to be able to eat four or five but now I'm down to three," he said of his post-game frankfurter meal.

Hot dogs are about as close to red meat as Boggs gets during the year. He says he eats meat maybe once a month during the season, "but never before a game."

"If I go to a famous steak place, I might try one," he said.

Off-season, when the Boggses return to their home in Tampa, Fla., he switches to fish. "My freezer is full of trout, redfish and bass," he said. But he still manages to squeeze in a chicken dinner twice a week.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Jeans and work shirts were put aside for more conservative dress when the membership of Midland Community Theatre gathered together last Sunday evening for the annual meeting. Before getting down to the serious business at hand, the group enjoyed a lovely cocktail spread provided by Act IX, MCT's support group.

It was fun to see many familiar faces in the convivial crowd and to make the acquaintance of some newcomers. I enjoyed a visit with Allene Kleweno, who with her husband, Walter, moved to Midland for the second time last year. A professional storyteller and former children's librarian at the Albuquerque Public Library, Allene has retired from full-time work in her field, but now has an exciting story time program going for youngsters at the Museum of the Southwest and a local bookstore. I hear she also delights children with her storytelling at birthday parties.

After visiting with some of the other women present, it is apparent in this high-tech age that computer widows are becoming as commonplace as football widows. Lucy (Mrs. Bob) Boykin and Linda (Mrs. Jim) Hicks both said their husbands were home playing with their new computers, while Sally (Mrs. Martin) Mogford and Jim (Mrs. Gus) Waterman and yours truly were among those who left their spouses watching football.

A few of the other theatre supporters present were Nancy and Dr. Billy Cook, Florence and Phil Whealdon, Betty King, Virginia Flood, Ann and Joe Hathaway, Ruth and Dave Hoff and Evelyn and Dr. Norman Gould.

Highlights of the meeting were the presentation of the Ham Hock of the Year Award to Jack Fox for outstanding volunteerism and the announcement of an exciting 1984 season, beginning with the hit Broadway musical, "Annie," in February and concluding in December with Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman's "You Can't Take It With You."

JOHN MUIRE of Denver and his fiancee, Katharine (Kit) Larsen of Duncanville, were in town recently for a weekend visit with his parents, Beverly and Forrest Muire. While here they were honored at a couple of pre-nuptial parties.

Peggy and Jack Armstrong, Sally and Wade Whiteley, Patti and Wat LaForce and Liz and Bill Adam hosted a "Honey-Do" shower in the Armstrong home. Wine and cheese were served from a table decorated with a striking arrangement of yellow and white mums, sliced honeydew melons and other fresh fruit on a brass tray. A large, personalized pegboard was used to hold the many clever gadgets and cooking tools presented to the honorees.

The following day a ranch breakfast was held at the home of Elaine and Fred Gist. Co-hosts were Sarah Lew and David Grimes, Schatzie and Charles Tighe, Betty Jo Morgan and Nancy Hull.

The menu consisted of biscuits, cream gravy, eggs ranchero, tenderloin, pinto beans, prickly pear jelly and coffee laced with cinnamon. Western decor included a pair of lariat wreaths adorned with plaid bows on the patio gates and a Navajo saddle blanket and cowboy gear on the serving table.

Kit's friend, Susan Stephens of Sherman, was a special guest at the parties.

Sally and Eric Hanson entertained for the couple in late summer with a backyard hamburger feast at their Midland home. Additional parties have been given for the bride in both Austin and Dallas.

Following an autumn wedding in Dallas, the couple will make their home in Denver, where the John is district land manager for Cabot Petroleum.

A DINNER PARTY at the Holiday Inn honored Mary Jo and Jack Darden on their 35th wedding anniversary. Hosts for the delightful occasion were their six children and families: Debie and Jack Darden Jr. of Oklahoma City, Amy and Bob Paschich and Megan of EL Paso, Carol and Roy Darden, Christi, Jacob and Melissa of Midland, Michael Darden of Houston, Alice and Paul Darden and Anna Marie of Lubbock and Lynn and Pat Darden of Kermit.

Joining the family gathering were Jack's brother and his wife, Bert and Mary Darden of Lubbock, and friends Debbie Raggio of Houston and Lisa Baker and David Brimberry of Lubbock.

A further celebration was held at the Darden home that afternoon in honor of Megan's second birthday.

The Darden's were married in Waxahachie on September 4, 1948, and moved to Midland in 1957. They are the immediate past presidents of the Downtown Lions Club and its auxiliary, the Lion Tamers. Jack is a geologist for High Plains Exploration.

Study says infants spit up less if placed on stomachs

BOSTON (AP) — For three decades, mothers were told to make their infants sit after eating so they wouldn't spit up. But researchers have reported that this advice is wrong and actually aggravates the problem.

Studies in the early 1950s suggested that very young children would have better luck holding down their milk if they were kept upright after meals. To make this easier, a molded plastic infant seat, sometimes called a chalasia chair, was designed and quickly became popular.

Mothers everywhere adopted the habit of feeding their new babies in the seats and leaving them there for a snooze.

"Probably every upper middle class mother owns one," says Dr. Peter F. Whitington of LeBonheur Children's Medical Center in Memphis, Tenn.

But now, Whitington and colleagues have found that not only does the seat not help, its use makes babies spit up more than if they were simply put to bed on their tummies.

Spitting up — what doctors call gastroesophageal reflux — happens to all babies, and nearly all outgrow it within a few months. But for a few, the problem is serious. They may hold down so little food that they fail to grow.

"We conclude that the infant seat, rather than being therapeutic in gastroesophageal reflux in children under six months of age, is actually detrimental, when compared with simply placing an infant prone," the doctors wrote in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors said their discovery may help explain why the problem seems to be increasing in the United States. Some pediatricians report that 25 percent of mothers complain that their babies spit up excessively, Whittington said.

"In recent years," the researchers wrote, "the increasing availability and use of the infant seat may actually have produced an increase in gastroesophageal reflux, which, ironically, physicians have treated with further use of the infant seat."

The doctors based their conclusions on nine babies who were fed and then either put in infant seats or placed face down in bed. During two-hour followup periods, they averaged 16 episodes of spitting up while sitting and 10 while lying down.

Two of the babies spit up 30 percent to 96 percent of the time when sitting during the followups, but this fell to zero to 3 percent when they were lying down.

"Simply placing the baby face down in bed is better than putting him in a chair to prevent reflux," Whittington said in an interview.

In an accompanying editorial, Drs. William F. Balistreri and Michael K. Farrell of Children's Hospital Research Foundation in Cincinnati noted that almost all babies outgrow the problem and need no therapy.

They recommended new research to find out whether the chairs have contributed to an increase in esophagitis, an inflammation of the food tube that can be caused by too much spitting up.

Fitting homemade slacks considered 'a royal pain'

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

Dear Betty Kinser: I desperately need advice on how I can perfectly fit a pair of slacks. All my slacks come out wrinkled below my buttocks.

I am 5-foot-3, weigh 127; my waist is 31 and my hips 37½.

Is there some adjustment I should make when sewing my slacks? — Alvina Marinshaw, Oroville, Calif.

Ah, slacks! They are a royal pain when it comes to fit. But, take heart. You are not alone.

The wrinkling you mentioned is excess fabric that is pushed there because the crotch curve is too high on the body. Quite often the crotch curve at the same time is too short, reaching the inseam before it should.

To correct, redraw the crotch curve on your pattern, lowering the curve, exaggerating the curve and lengthening the curve point at inseam. Sound hard? Not at all. Just pull out your trusty little curved ruler, find the crotch curve on it, and relocate the curve on your pattern.

If you are uncertain about just how much lowering and lengthening to do, make an experimental pair of slacks, one on which you can cut, trim, pin and mark.

Cut your trial slacks from an old sheet, muslin or any inexpensive woven fabric. When cutting, make your crotch curve point at least 2 inches longer (it can be whacked off later). Cut the rest of the curve as is.

Stitch garment together, making crotch curve seam ½ inch lower than marked seam line and stitching inseam on marked seam line. Trim curve seam allowances. Try slacks on.

Not right? Take slacks off, restitch curve and upper inseam ¼ inch from first stitching, trim. Try on again.

Keep stitching, trimming and trying on until you have the perfect fit.

I wonder when pattern makers are going to realize we are not shaped the way they think we are!

Congratulations Linda!

Berg Motors of Midland congratulates Linda Bond, winner of the Bonus Prize in Cadillac's "Win at Wimbledon" Sweepstakes. Ms. Bond won a trip for two to the 1984 Wimbledon competition, including round-trip airfare, five days luxury accomodations and center court tickets to the Wimbledon semi-finals and finals. Berg is pleased to be the dealership where Ms. Bond took her winning test drive of the new Cadillacs.

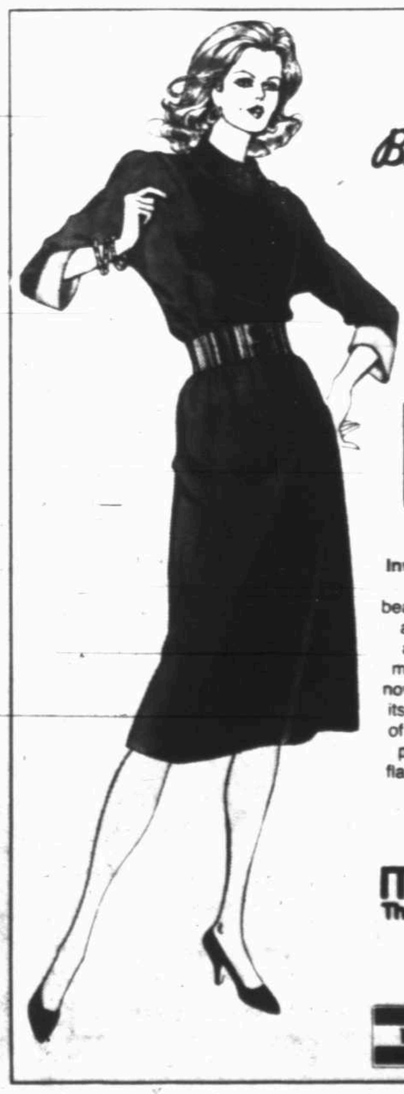

"We went into Berg during the Win at Wimbledon Sweepstakes and drove two of their cars. I really liked the smaller Cadillac, the Cimarron. That's all we had to do, a test drive. Then we got notification that out of 32,000 people, we had won the trip to Wimbledon. My whole feeling about life is that you never win if you never try—and we won! Im grateful to Berg and to Cadillac for giving us the chance."

Some coaches work miracles

By ERMA BOMBECK

Hey, don't get me wrong.

I'm not anti-school sports or anything, but you have to admit, coaches change not only the metabolism, but the entire personality of a child in a matter of weeks.

It's like a miracle. In late summer, parents send them a kid who hates showers, cannot stoop to pick up a towel, has a grip that won't support a bag of garbage, wouldn't walk 50 yards to close a door during a blizzard and considers a haircut a violation of his civil rights.

Several weeks later, a subservient football player emerges.

Just think about it. What do you think your son would say if you asked him to "slip into these purple satin knee-length pants and put a helmet on your head and in the driving rain run this little football 73 yards and then report back to me"?

I know what my son would do. He would take legal steps to put me in a home. He won't even wear a shirt at the dinner table.

The problem is that the parts of the body developed by the coach only work when he is around.

The same kid who can commit 35 plays to memory on the football field can't remember to put gas in the car.

The magic fingers of the receiver who can pick a ball out of the air with the grace of a ballet dancer cannot turn off a simple light switch when he gets home.

The same body that can endure below-zero weather, rainstorms and searing heat can't stand to go out and bring the paper inside.

Parents are obviously doing something wrong. Maybe we need to get tougher. If they're late for dinner, maybe they ought to sit on the bench for a couple of weeks and watch us eat. If they drop their fork at the table, maybe a couple of laps around the house would shape them up. If they stay out too late and break the house rules, why not order them not to sweat for two weeks?

Upholstery fabrics add glamour

Upholstered furniture can glamorize a room and give it a special "look and feel." It complements other furnishings and adds warmth and beauty to your home. Selecting upholstery fabric for your furniture in the right color, texture and style is like adding a touch of make-up to give a soft and glowing appearance.

But the array of available fabrics, like cosmetics, is dazzling. How do you make the correct choice? You'll find it easier if you consider these important questions with each piece you plan to buy:

— Do I like it?
— Will it fit my needs and lifestyle?
— What about durability and wearability?
— How will it clean?

You will find some suggestions below that will help you select the right upholstery fabric and add the glow of glamour to your home.

What makes you like the look of a chair or sofa? It's the color, the shape, the line, the texture or the pattern of the fabric.

Color is the most exciting and least expensive decorating tool. Red, yellow and orange are warm, happy, inviting colors. Blues, greens and violets are cool and restful.

Many of the best-dressed rooms enjoy patterned upholstery fabrics. They don't show soil quickly, and are an easy way to plan a room color scheme.

Each family has its own lifestyle and its own needs. You will have to consider what activities will take place in each room before you shop for the upholstery fabric to glamorize it. A damask is lovely for a seldom sat-in living room, but it may need replacement very rapidly in a family room that is used by active children. Some fabrics are more durable than others and you are the only one who can decide how much durability is needed in the different rooms of your home.

Health, beauty supplies freebies

Copley News Service

The price of looking good and feeling good is going up every day. So isn't it nice to find a few freebies that can help you in the quest for fitness and beauty? Try these: a medicated ointment sample, a personal health record and a guide for surviving in the great outdoors.

Medical History

Everyone can make medical history. In fact, everyone should make medical history!

It's just good sense. Of course, we don't mean making history by having some bizarre disease or undergoing a new operation. Rather, you should make such history by filling out The Personal Health Record from Metropolitan Life. Then your medical history will be down in black and white, available for immediate reference should you suddenly take ill or be hurt.

If accurately maintained, a health record can prove itself mighty useful. It can prevent irritation when looking up information prior to routine doctor or hospital visits, or when faced with stacks of application forms for insurance, school admission or passports.

More important, perhaps, is that such a record — accessible to your family and doctor — can mean more speedy diagnosis of emergency conditions and prevention of needless medical tests, excessive X-rays and other procedures.

One hopes never to need the use of a medical history like this — but, should the need arise, having one available could save your life. It's certainly worth a couple of postage stamps. This offer is good through Oct. 31, 1983.

Directions: Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ask For: Personal Health Record.

Mail To: Metropolitan Life, One Madison Ave., New York, NY 10010.

Soothing Sample

If you are missing work, guzzling cough syrup, using boxes of tissue, and generally feeling miserable, you may well be suffering from that familiar affliction, The Common Cold. If you are, the usual regimen of aspirin, rest and plenty of liquids may be wearing a bit thin.

Rawleigh's Medicated Ointment might be a source of additional relief, and the one-tenth ounce sample tin of this product will probably be enough to see you through to better health. Formulated in a gelatin petroleum base, the ointment contains oils of camphor, menthol and eucalyptus — a fragrant combination indeed!

Virus may cause AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists studying hemophiliacs say they have uncovered more evidence that a virus may be involved in spreading AIDS, the mysterious and deadly disease that destroys the body's defense against infection.

An unusually high number of hemophiliacs, who are at increased risk of getting AIDS, show signs of being exposed to a virus that also infects many AIDS victims, says a study published in Science magazine.

The finding adds weight to some scientists' suspicions that the virus, called human T-cell leukemia virus or HTLV, plays a key role in AIDS. But there still is no direct evidence that it causes the disease, they add.

"HTLV is the leading suspect agent as the possible cause of AIDS, and these findings strengthen that potential relationship," Dr. Myron Essex of the Harvard School of Public Health said in a telephone interview.

Studies of blood from 172 people suffering from hemophilia, an inherited blood disorder, but who show no signs of AIDS, found that about 12 percent have evidence of exposure to the virus, the report said.

Gene mutation may cause cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers at the National Cancer Institute have identified a specific genetic mutation in a lung cancer patient that appears to be a contributing cause of the cancer, but they say that the mutation alone may not be enough to transform normal cells into cancer cells.

Some other genetic alteration appears to be required along with the newly discovered mutation, researchers said Tuesday.

The mutation was found only in the patient's tumor cells, not in normal lung tissue — compelling evidence that it is involved in the cancer process, the researchers said.

Previous studies in the laboratory had suggested that the mutation might cause cancer, but this is believed to be the first confirmation of those results in a patient, the scientists said.

"The fact that normal cells from a patient don't have the mutation is an important point," Stewart Aaronson of the cancer institute said.

He is one of the researchers who studied the mutation in the laboratory. The studies with the patient were done by Mariano Barbacid, also of the cancer institute.

"In my opinion, I think it validates all the work that has been done (in cancer genetics) until now," Barbacid said in a telephone interview.

There are several reasons why the mutation alone might not change normal cells into cancer cells.

For one thing, Aaronson said, the odds are that such a mutation occurs hundreds of times in the first year of an infant's life. If cancer appeared every time the mutation did, no one would survive into adulthood.

Heart drug new

BOSTON (AP) — A powerful drug that strengthens weak hearts could revolutionize the treatment of congestive heart failure — a condition affecting 4 million Americans — by replacing digitalis, the standard treatment for two centuries, doctors said in a report today.

The still-experimental medicine, called milrinone, has so far been tried on about 80 patients in the United States.

A report on the experience of 20 of "the sickest heart failure patients that exist" shows that the drug dramatically improves the condition of people who are bedridden and unhelped by other drugs.

The researchers found that unlike other drugs that initially looked promising, this one produces no serious side effects, even when used regularly for more than a year.

"If its lack of side effects is borne out in studies of larger number of patients, including the less acutely ill, then I think it would revolutionize the treatment of heart failure," said Dr. Donald S. Baim, who directed the study at Boston's Beth Israel Hospital.

The new medicine, developed by Sterling-Winthrop, probably will be approved by the Food and Drug Administration for general use within the next year or two, doctors said in today's report in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Some bargain hunters search secondhand shops to find:

Silver lining

Pat Bradford, owner of Second Time Around, models a burgundy and grey silk ensemble by Victor Costa, $40 and burgundy leather sling pumps by Fanfare, $12.

"Midland is a good place for second hand clothes because wealthy people turn their wardrobes over quickly."

Pat Bradford, owner
Second Time Around

During her lunch hour, Anne bought a short-waisted green wide-wale corduroy jacket, a 100 percent wool tweed skirt to match, a yellow oxford cloth shirt and a pair of brown leather pumps. She paid $18.98 for her purchases.

She bought the items at a secondhand clothing store in Midland.

"Midland is a good place for second hand clothes because wealthy people turn their wardrobes over quickly," Pat Bradford, owner of Second Time Around said. "They don't want to be seen in the same thing twice."

Five shops in Midland, Next to New, Salvation Army Thrift Store, Second Time Around, Rags to Riches and TradeArama, sell used clothing at bargain prices.

Not all of the garments are fine labels or designers but the quality of much of the clothing found in used clothing shops is very good or excellent, said the store owners.

It's not unusual to find a dress by Oscar de la Renta or a pants suit with a Victor Costa label at Second Time Around, said Mrs. Bradford.

Tired of paying high prices for her clothes at retail stores, Mrs. Bradford said, "I can dress in better quality clothes for less money at a resale store. So I decided to open my own store."

All the clothes on the store's racks and shelves are on consignment or are unsold items from local stores. The clothing is priced according to quality and condition. Mrs. Bradford said she buys items to suit a variety of tastes, not just her own.

All "better garments" at her shop cost from $20-$200, or about one-third of the original price, she said.

An Albert Nipon evening dress was reduced from the original price of $280 to $170.

"People are a little bit ashamed to be seen in here," she said, "They say 'I'm afraid to buy this because someone else might recognize it and know it's theirs.' "

Her customers are from all economic backgrounds, she said, including professionals' wives. "An elected state official's wife bought a mink coat here."

Dressed in an attractive designer label fuchsia suit she bought second-hand, Mrs. Bradford said people shouldn't be embarassed about wearing used clothing."It's an alternative way of shopping."

"At a resale store you can get a dress for the same price or less than you would pay for something that is poor quality at an inexpensive store," Mrs. Bradford said.

"Better garments" and maternity clothes are her top sellers, she said.

All garments are dated and prices are reduced by 25 percent after a month and are 50 percent off after 60 days. All clothes, except wedding dresses and furs not not sold after 90 days are donated to charities, she said.

The junior league store, which funds several community programs through shop sales, offers good quality clothes in good condition at reasonable prices.

"The quality of our clothing lately has been really high," said store Manager Betty Lou Garrigan. The shop's racks and shelves include designs by Evan Picone, Albert Nipon, Peck and Peck, Butte Knits, John Meyer, The Villager, Jantzen and White Stag.

Coats, dresses, skirts and sweaters are in demand now, said Dorothy Cox, the shop's only employee. "Pants aren't as popular this year," said Mrs. Cox.

Classic styles such as pleated and A-line skirts, oxford cloth shirts, pullover and cardigan sweaters and blazers never go out of style, she said.

A 100 percent wool pullover sweater by John Meyer was priced at $3 and a gold corduroy blazer with leather elbow patches was marked $5.

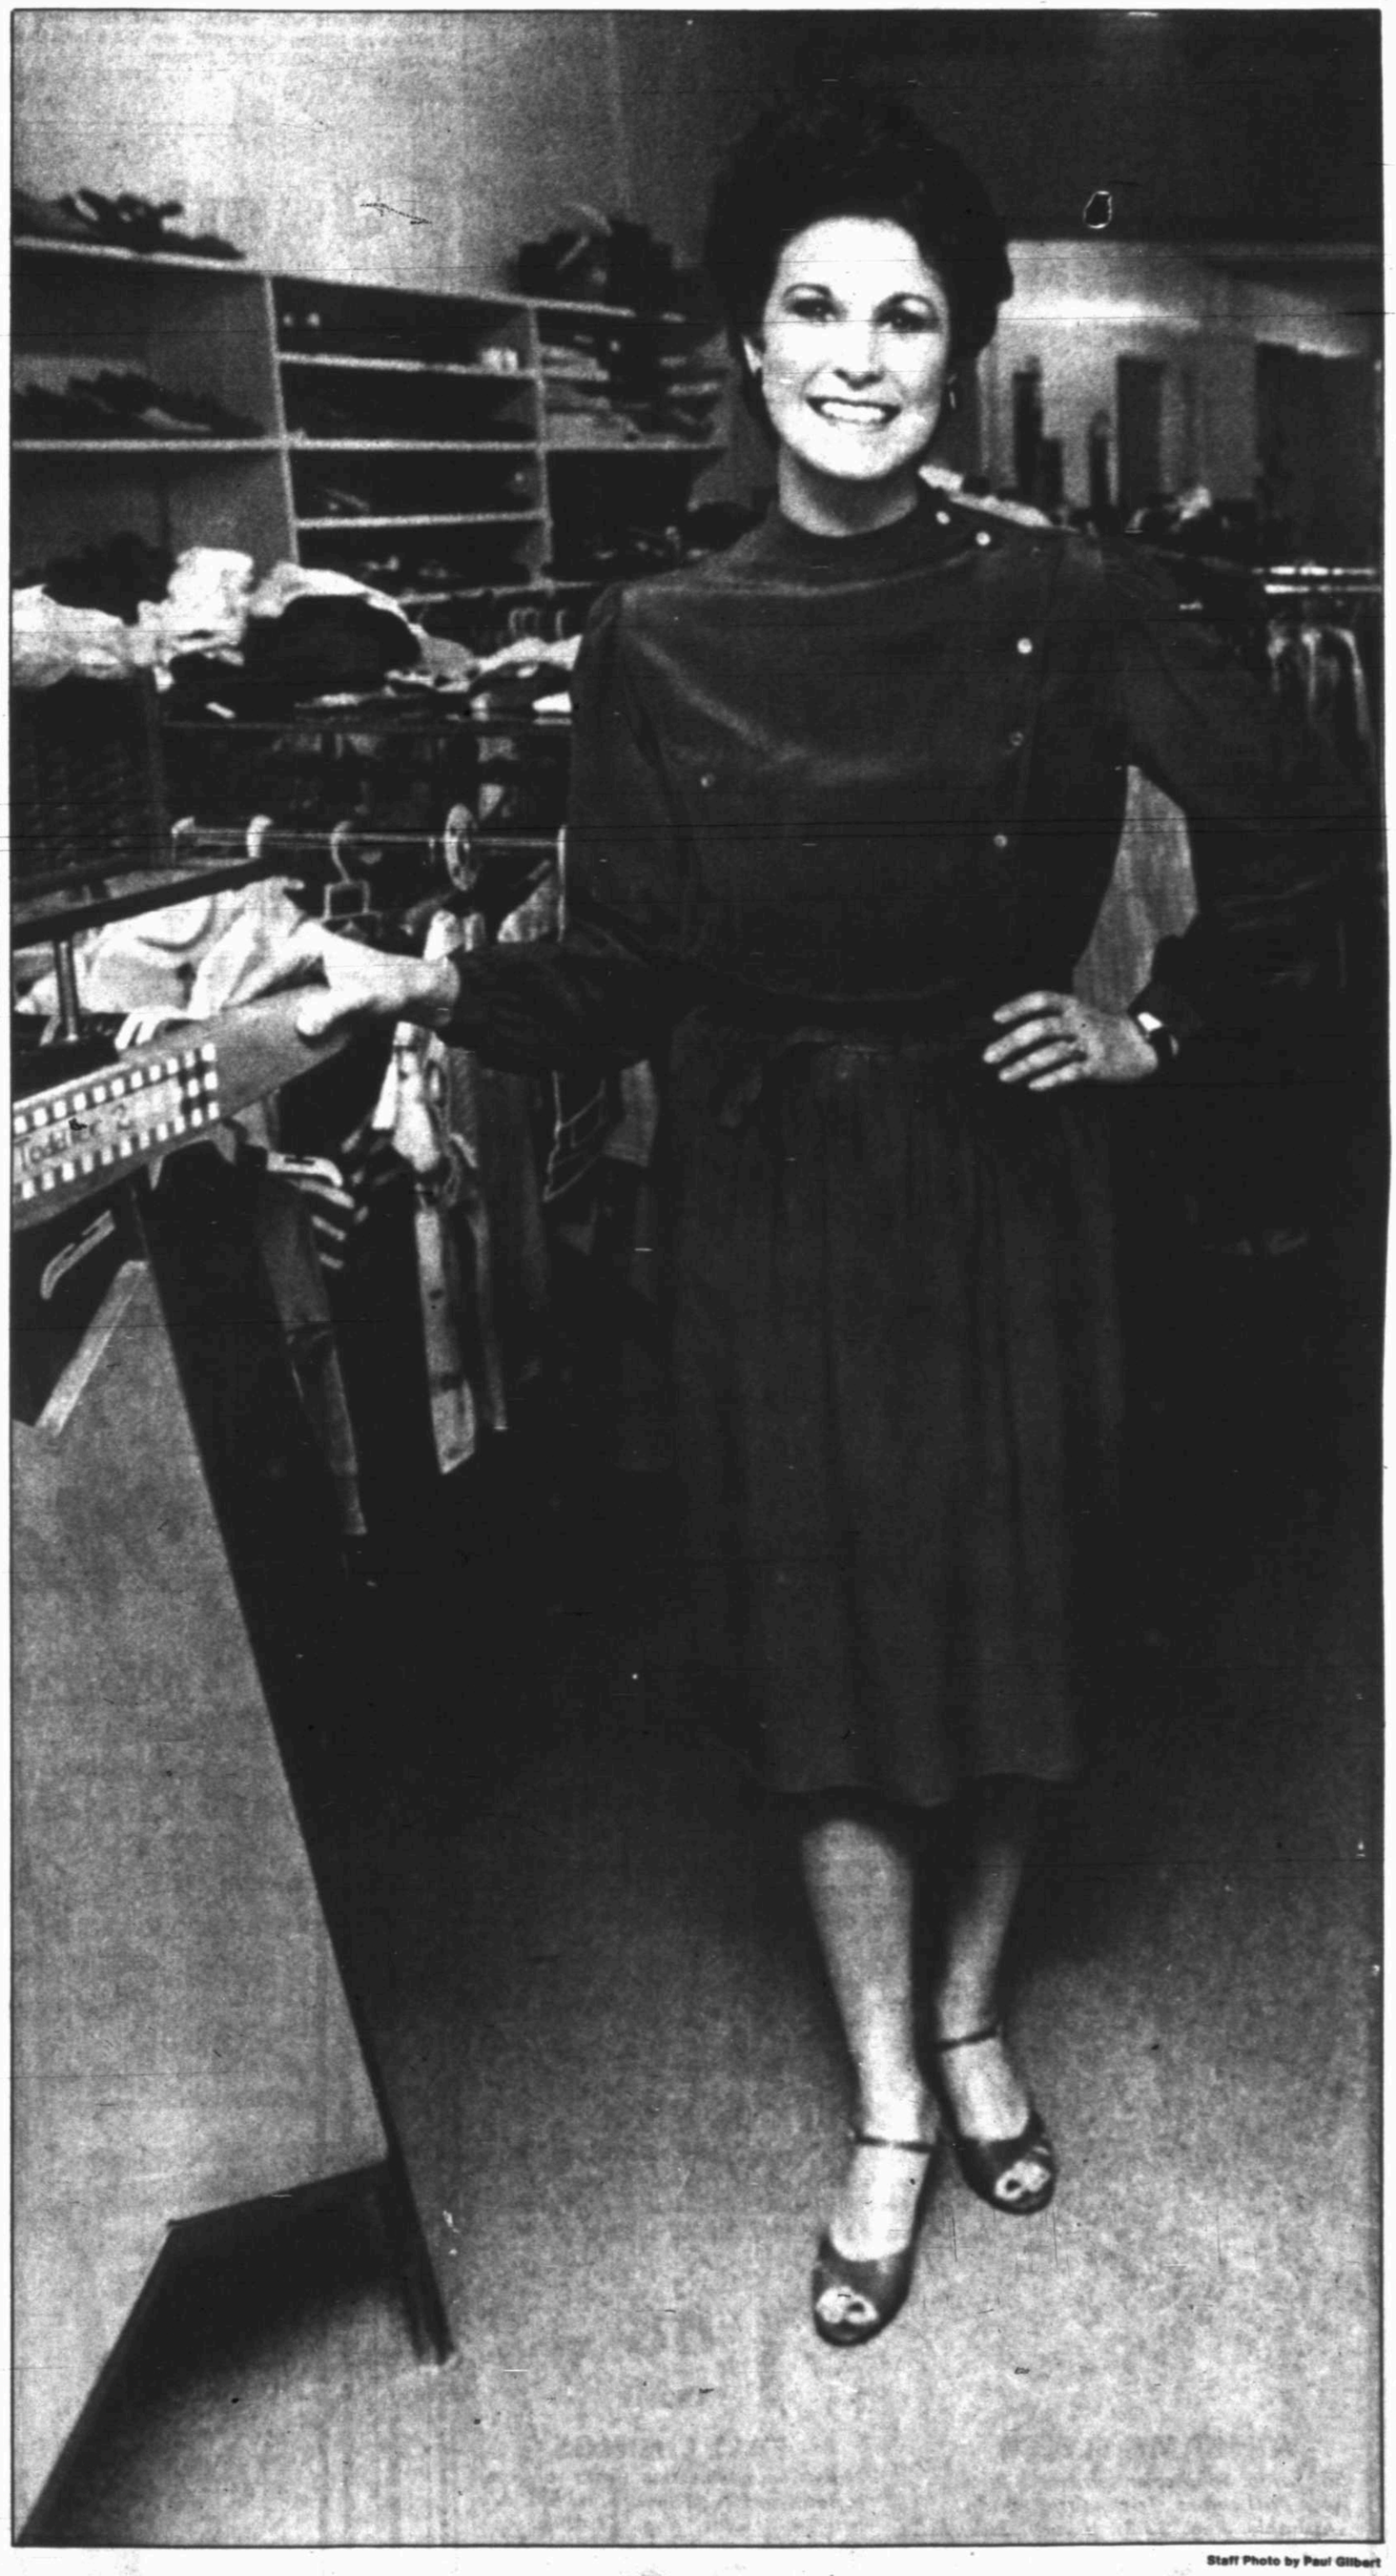

Much of the clothing donated to Salvation Army's thrift store is worn but still has a lot of mileage on it, said Mrs. Major Jack Camp. All items are donated and money earned from clothing sales funds Salvation Army projects.

"We give away almost as much as we sell," Mrs. Camp said.

Not only poor people shop at the thrift store, she said. "They shop here for coats and jackets — the things that are so expensive in stores."

A number of items in the store are "pretty nice," she said. "Anyone who knows clothing could find a pretty good outfit."

At the store, a 100 percent cashmere coat in fair shape was priced at $5, a woman's wool suit cost $3 and a cotton blouse cost $1.25.

"Since you can get a blouse for 50 cents, people will buy four or five," said Louise Tryon, the store's cashier.

Rags to Riches clothes are all sold on consignment, said co-owner Vicki Cupp. The new shop carries garments for all ages, sizes and tastes, she said.

Mrs. Cupp and her partner, Kathy Credicott said they decided Midland needed another used clothing store because of the economy.

"People are having to make some changes somewhere," she said.

Ethel Seybert, manager of TradeArama, organizes the store's shoe stock.

Maternity clothes and uniforms such as Girl Scout dresses and nursing whites are popular items at the store.

Their customers are mostly lower income, she said, "and people who know what to look for are looking for a bargain and find it."

Hunting for used clothing is "a very efficient way to save money," said Ethel Seybert, manager of TradeArama.

The consignment shop is a gold mine of accessories from shoes to hats. It is even stocked with underwear. But Miss Seybert added,"I would never wear used underwear."

The manager suggests shoppers know their measurements and take tape measures with them since the store doesn't have fitting rooms.

"We aren't going to mark dresses $20 since people can't try them on.

"Many people will find a particular label that fits them and and they look for that."

Labels on the racks include Jantzen, Bobbie Brooks and Saks Fifth Avenue.

The trend to wear classics is sending many people her way, she said. "You can get used classic styles at a cheaper price here."

"Some of our customers say it's neat to be able to get something from Neiman's without going to Dallas. That's what attracts so many people. There's no telling what you'll see. It's a bazaar of clothing from Saks to J.C. Penney.

She added, "It's an 'in' thing now to be smart with your money."

Government exceeds bounds speaker says

Framers of the U.S. Constitution designed government as a simple structure. They believed in the concept that government should do little more than provide basic security of life and property. But that concept has changed in recent years, said Dr. Roger Olien to a joint meeting of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

He spoke at a luncheon recognizing Constitution Week. Attending were members of the Lt. William Brewer chapter and the Col. Theunis Dey chapter.

Olien first related the Constitution's original intent and then turned to the changes made, focusing on increasing regulation and the oil and gas industry.

For the first 150 years, the changes were few, according to the professor. But the last 50 years have seen numerous changes. Though many of the decisions of the Supreme Court were intended to extend liberty, the consequences have been the opposite.

Olien quoted from writing of Virginian George Mason, who objected to a strong central government. He then turned to the oil and gas industry as an example because of its importance to this area, citing the regulations which agencies have imposed on its operations.

An unofficial fourth branch of government is growing in strength, Olien contended, and that is the regulatory and financial bureacracy.

Logic of the various agencies is that they will tell citizens what they can do for themselves — a reversal of principle, according to Olien. Since the Korean War many regulations have been placed on oil and gas.

Other agencies which increased regulations include the Environmental Protection Agency and Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Olien said there are some hopes the administration has started reducing bureaucracy, but the efforts haven't gone far enough. Citizens can't rely only on the president, vice president or congress. The problem is wherever federal jurisdiction has taken root.

"Legislators and citizens have assumed when the psalmist said, 'I look unto the hills whence cometh my help' that he meant Capitol Hill in Washington."

Olien also discussed the new Handbook for Texas which covers all parts of the state. He said Texas should promote its unique history in its Sesquicentennial celebration in 1986. It should be a celebration of human values and achievement which have built a strong vital economy and achievements, he said.

'Buckle up' best advice writer says

By Jimmy Thorton
Copley News Service

I wear a seat belt in my car and ask people riding with me to do the same. A friend frequently reminds me a friend of his was killed because he was strapped in a seat belt and drowned in his wrecked car.

And he refuses to buckle up.

The American Council on Science and Health, a non-profit consumer information group, reports surveys show many people avoid wearing safety belts because they think it is better to be "thrown clear" of the car in case of an accident, or because they worry that a fastened belt would keep a crash victim from getting out of a burning or submerged vehicle. So my friend's concern isn't unique.

Then, too, some people believe back-seat passengers don't need belts, or that it's all right for a child to ride on an adult's lap. According to the council, all these beliefs are false.

Studies show that people who are thrown clear are 25 times more likely to die than they would have been if they had stayed in the vehicle.

In rare accidents where a car catches fire or goes under water, people who wear seat belts are more likely to survive because they have a better chance of remaining uninjured and, therefore, being capable of getting out of the car.

Back-seat riders need belts to prevent them from being thrown into front-seat occupants in a crash. And the forces of a crash are so great that a child in an adult's arms is ripped loose and flung against the car's interior.

California law requires that small children be restrained in either a car seat or seat belt.

Style show set

Midland's Texas Hairdressers and Cosmetologist Association will sponsor a fall trend release style show Oct. 7, 8 p.m.-10 p.m., in the Paragon Building, 600 Marienfeld.

The Midland salons will observe National Cosmetologist's week, Oct. 2-8, with their presentation of the lastest in fall and winter trends in hairstyles , haircolors ,ake-up, fashions and accessories modeled by at least 20 representatives of local merchants. KMID-TV personality Becky Neighbors will emcee the event. A cash bar, served the Last Tycoon, will be available.

Admission is a minimum donation of $15 at the door. Proceeds will benefit the West Texas Rehabilitation Center in Abilene.

Chuck Wilcox recently was elected treasurer of THCA's state board of directors. He was also named president of the local affiliate, along with new officers Alwana Vaughn, first vice president, Herman Montoya; second vice president, Liz White, secretary, Serge Hanson, treasurer and Patti Earl, historian.

Bivalves survivors

Brachiopods are the ultimate survivors, the only animals that have been around for more than 600 million years.

Moreover, most species of the hard-shelled bivalves still retain the same form and humble lifestyle as their distant ancestors.

Unlike clams, which they vaguely resemble, brachiopods have two shells of uneven size. Colors range from pink and white to dark brown and black.

They also have few internal organs, enabling them to exist with a minimum of effort, according to the National Geographic mgazine.

Army suffered heavy casualties

Napoleon's army of 363,000 men began its advance on Moscow in June of 1812.

Men and horses were sickened by mass sunstroke and bad fodder, making Napoleon's plan for an early success impossible.

By the end of the year when the French forces retreated from Moscow, the casualties of fighting, cold and starvation had reduced France's army to one-third of its original size.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Herbs practical winter house plants

By ELVIN MCDONALD

Fall arrived in New York squarely on the equinox, bringing with it welcome rains, followed by cool blue-sky days, the sort that make gardeners ecstatic. I'm just back from a summer spent mostly on the road, eager to clear our last season's growth and get the next in the ground.

In my travels I stopped to get acquainted with my editors at the Emporia (Kansas) Gazette and was pleased to find numerous healthy potted plants in the offices. Kathrine White, who now oversees publication of this famous small-town newspaper, says she grows all winter an abundance of leaf lettuce and aragula in large pots of compost kept in cool, sunny windows.

On the spot, Mrs. White and I were hard pressed to properly spell aragula. In New York every greengrocer has a different spelling.

Another name for aragula is rocket or roquette, and that is the way it is listed by the J.A. Demonchaux Co., 827 N. Kansas, Topeka, Kan. 66608, a mail supplier of French vegetable seeds. No matter what you call it, aragula is a delectable salad green.

Mrs. White and I also exchanged success stories in growing herbs as winter house plants. Basil does beautifully in any sunny, warm spot or fluorescent-light garden. Sunny but cooler sills are better for chives, rosemary, bay and thyme.

It is possible to dig parsley plants from the garden and grow in winter pots, but since this herb is a biennial, the natural inclination for these is to bolt, preparatory to flowering. Better to grow winter harvest from seeds planted now, in the large pots of moist compost specified by Mrs. White.

Q. What kind of alcohol and how much do I use as a spray against plant bugs?

A. Use one pint rubbing alcohol to a gallon of water. Mix well and apply by dipping or spraying. First wash the buggy plant with dishwashing detergent and water (6 tablespoons to one gallon water), rinse and allow to dry. Then apply the alcohol treatment and keep the plant out of direct sun until dry. This is a safe and effective way of dealing with aphids, mites, mealybugs and scale.

Quick Take: Four exceptional gardening books from England have arrived via Merrimack Publishers' Circle (99 Main St., Salem, N.H. 03079): "Bonsai" by Christine Stewart (beautiful color plates, excellent how-to drawings; $17), "Ferns for the Home and Garden" by Gillean Dunk (color inserts, drawings, text, make this sure to please any fern person; $13), "Flower Crafts" by Emma Wood and Jane Merer (ideas and inspiration for decorative crafts with flowers, fresh, dried, pressed, stencilled, modelled, painted, of paper, fabric and embroidered; $15), and "Palms" by Alec Blombery and Tony Rodd (culture indoors and out, with more than 200 color photographs; $25).

Q.T.: Keep dormant caladium tubers warm (about 60F.), dry and dark.

Designer pulls fashion strings

By The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — It's a tunic. It's a shawl. It's a hood. It's only part of a dress by Tadashi Shoji. The Japanese-born designer, who now lives here, may have set a world record in versatility recently when he introduced his newest fashions.

His black tunic-shawl-hood is the top layer of a white sheath. Other convertible styles include a jump suit to wear a dozen different ways — sleeveless or long sleeve, tight-or loose-waist, with a high or a low neckline.

You have to pull a few strings to make these clothes stay put. They do not have zippers or buttons, and none of the parts are detachable. "I compare them to folded paper," he explains, and the Japanese art of origami comes to mind.

THE PARENTS ASSOCIATION FOR CEREBRAL PALSY CHILDREN wishes to acknowledge and express our sincere gratitude to the following, for their combined efforts in presenting "DAYS OF WINE AND ROSES" and contributing to the style show's success.

There are special types of "presser feet" available for your sewing machine that can help you adapt to a variety of different sewing situations: A zipper foot is designed to sew very close to a raised edge during straight stitching. It can also be used for applying and covering cording. A hemming foot turns a narrow hem and stitches it in one operation with either straight or decorative stitches. A gathering foot locks fullness into every stitch while a roller foot is used to feed hard-to-handle fabrics, such as nylon, polyester or vinyl, between the throat plate and the needle. An even feed foot is used for sewing hard-to-feed pile and stretch fabrics. And, there are more!

Whether you are a professional seamstress or a beginning sewing student join your friends who already are familiar with LEGGETTS FABRICS. We have just about everything you can imagine in the world of sewing...patterns, fabrics, notions plus our staff is always ready to answer your particular questions. We are located at 1541 Parkway, Odessa, 362-8255 and No. 9 Plaza Shopping Center, Garfield at Wadley in Midland, 683-3101. Visa and Master Card. "Quality, Your Only Real Bargain". Adults act like adults kids say

Copley News Service

MODESTO, Calif. — James Enochs has what he calls "shocking" news for educators and parents.

"Kids want adults to act like adults," declares the assistant superintendent of this city's school system.

"They want to know who's in charge. They want rules to guide them and they want to know what adults expect from them. If kids understand we are not giving diplomas away, they will come to school and they will learn."

Enochs' solution is a program called "The Fourth R — Responsibility," a plan that many people in Modesto believe has restored educational standards in this Central Valley town.

As chief architect of the plan, Enochs says it is "not a clever panacea, but a modest proposal to restore some of the fundamentals our schools abandoned in the 1960s."

The Fourth R had its start long before the present hue and cry for educational reform. Shortly after his promotion from high school principal in 1976, Enochs — who admits to being the kind of person "who likes to shake things up" — began studying what was going wrong in the 20,000-student system.

He found truancy, student misbehavior and vandalism on the increase. Teachers believed they had no allies in the district's central administration. The city's 100,000 residents were growing increasingly dissatisfied with the district's performance.

He then produced what he calls "a scaled-down version of Martin Luther's 95 Theses" which, instead of being nailed to the schoolhouse door, was sent home to parents and teachers. It read:

"It is essential that a public institution clearly define itself, say unequivocally what it believes in and stands for.

"The development of responsible adults is a task requiring community involvement. It cannot be left solely to the public schools.

"The principal tasks of the public schools cannot be achieved if a disproportionate amount of time and resources must be given to maintaining order.

"Parents must consistently support the proposition that students have responsibilities as well as rights and the schools have an obligation to insist upon both.

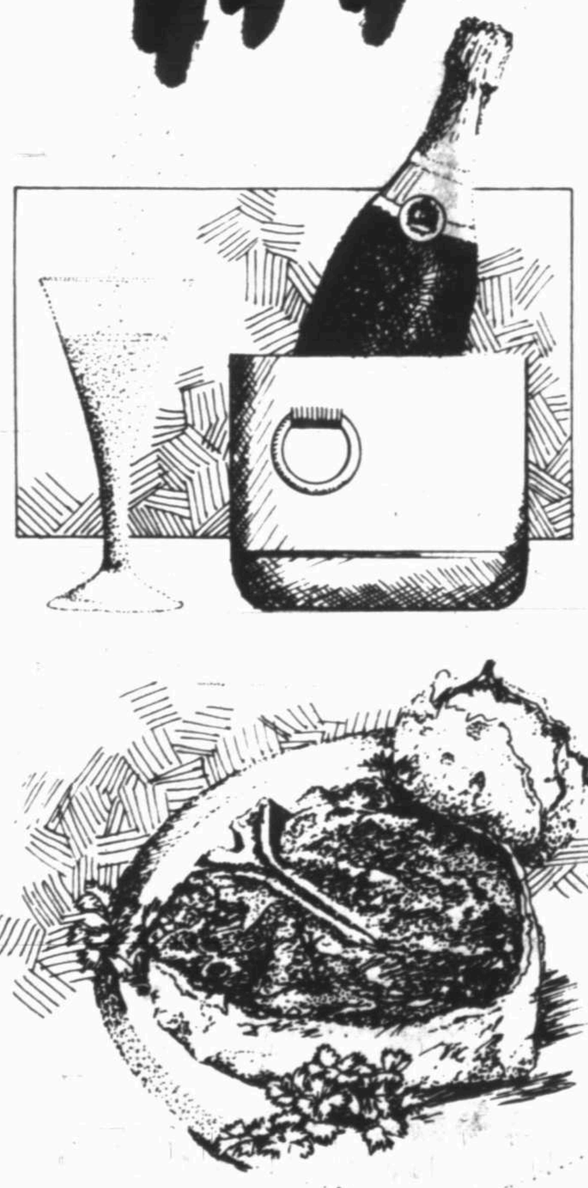

"High performance takes place in a framework of high expectations; standards without rewards and consequences are not standards at all.

"The full responsibility for learning cannot be transferred from the student to the teacher.

DEAR ABBY

Mother wants to nurse infant in public

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: As a new nursing mother I have a complaint: Where can I nurse my baby in public? I feel comfortable in movie theaters if I sit in an inconspicuous place and am fully covered. But I keep running into trouble at restaurants. I don't want to offend anyone, and I would gladly retire to the rest room to nurse my baby if I am asked to by the management, but nine times out of 10 there is nowhere to sit, so I have to sit in a stall. Not only is it uncomfortable for me, it's irritating for those who may be standing in line waiting to get in.

Obviously nursing mothers should avoid restaurants at nursing time, but that's not always possible. If restaurant owners would place a chair in their rest rooms, there are thousands of us who would be grateful. Abby, will you please make a plea for us? - T.S. IN BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

DEAR T.S.: 'Tis said, "All the world loves a lover," but unfortunately, the same cannot be said of the nursing mother, judging from the difficulty she encounters while trying to nurse her baby in a public place. It would be ideal if all restaurants provided comfortable accommodations for nursing mothers, but few restaurants can afford that luxury.

Meanwhile, mothers would be wise to nurse their babies almost anywhere else if possible, since most restaurant rest rooms are crowded, poorly ventilated and invariably smoke-filled. They're hardly a suitable place to feed Junior.

DEAR ABBY: Ever since grade school I've been called a "slut," and I'm 17 and I still have that reputation. I'm ready to settle down with one guy and have a meaningful relationship, but what guy is going to want to settle down with a girl who has that kind of reputation?

I'm decent now, but whenever I make new friends, one of my old friends passes on the old rumors. Abby, I want so much to have a husband, home and children. I have so much love to give, but no one will give me the chance.

How do I prove that I have changed? My life is so empty without someone to love. -- JUDGED WITHOUT A TRIAL

DEAR JUDGED: You are to be commended for changing your ways, but it's very difficult to change your reputation. If you are able to move to another neighborhood or town and make a fresh start, do so.

If that's not possible, determine to conduct yourself in a decent, respectable manner, and the word will spread. Don't waste your energy regretting your past; learn from it. Good luck and God bless.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Imaging locates disease

Hearst Feature Service

Magnetic resonance imaging — a new diagnostic technique that uses no X-rays — may be the best method for finding diseases in the brain, the spinal cord and the interior of bones.

Because it can distinguish normal from diseased brain tissue with unprecedented accuracy, it could lead to better diagnosis of senility. And magnetic resonance imaging appears capable of spotting conditions likely to lead to strokes, perhaps permitting corrective treatment, said Dr. Michael Brant-Zawadski of the University of California-San Francisco.

Not yet approved for clinical use, but being tested at the University of California and other medical centers, the technique may also allow earlier diagnosis of multiple sclerosis and other nervous system diseases. Also known as nuclear magnetic resonance, the technique has been under development for years, but is only now approaching government approval for clinical use.

Its advantages over conventional X-rays and even CAT scanners (computerized X-ray devices that yield cross-sections of the body) are many. NMR uses no radiation, yet still produces detailed cross-section and other views of the inside of the body. The images of internal organs are not obscured by bones, and different kinds of tissues are sharply distinguished from one another.

The images made by X-rays and CAT scanners reflect the way in which tissues of different densities transmit radiation. But some tissues or organs are very similar in density to tumors, so the diseased portions are hard to see.

NMR, by contrast, yields images that reflect the differing chemical composition of body tissues or diseased areas. The patient is placed inside a powerful ring-shaped magnet. When switched on, it creates a magnetic field that causes the nuclei of hydrogen atoms in the body to line up like tiny magnets. Since much of the body contains water, hydrogen is very prevalent.

Doctor studies AIDS

Hearst Feature Service

With the number of suspected AIDS cases among children across the United States now more than 50, a San Francisco pediatrician is trying to start a system to monitor the growing problem.

Dr. Arthur J. Ammann of the University of California at San Francisco reports that acquired immune deficiency syndrome among certain groups of children is growing as the disease affects more and more adults.

"I believe that AIDS in children and infants does exist, and that increasing numbers of cases will be reported in the pediatric population as the problem increases in the adult population," Ammann wrote in the Journal of the American Academy of Pediatrics. "It would be prudent to begin an infant and childhood AIDS registry to document and evaluate as many cases as possible."

Ammann wrote that more than 50 children have been treated at four clinics, including UCSF and Albert Einstein Hospital in New York, for ailments that have the same symptoms as AIDS.

Moral Majority leader Jerry Falwell has used the incidence of AIDS among children as evidence that the deadly disease is threatening the average American family.

The documented cases, however, are only of children born to women in certain high-risk groups - particularly intravenous drug abusers, Haitians and prostitutes. There is no evidence that AIDS in infants is due to contact with homosexual men, researchers agree.

The CDC lists 12 AIDS cases in people under 20 years of age, but does not distinguish between teen-agers, children and infants.

Alcohol abuse hits miltary

Hearst Feature Service

ANAHEIM, Calif. — An unexpected surge of heavy drinking in the armed services has hurt American military performance and prompted a Pentagon campaign against alcohol similar to its recent war on drug abuse, Defense Department officials say.

"Dramatic action is required. The military needs to be operationally ready," Dr. John Mazzuchi of the DOD's Office of Drug and Alcohol Abuse Prevention told the 91st convention of the American Psychological Association, meeting here.

Military officials who appeared at the convention declined to link the increase in drinking to wider use of alcohol throughout American society, speculating that it was tied, instead, to curbs on drug use in the military.

Mobil's own records spark questions

Did the company make extra millions?

By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

Internal Mobil Oil Corp. records ... show the company made at least $75 million in profits from complex transactions involving Saudi crude oil during part of 1980 and 1981.

WASHINGTON — The world was short of oil and prices were soaring when, in April 1979, Saudi Arabian oil minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani announced a strategy to help protect the international economy: he directed four major U.S. companies to pass along Saudi Arabia's relatively low oil prices in world markets.

The companies that have access to most of Saudi Arabia's oil, Mobil Oil Corp., Exxon Corp., Texaco Inc. and Standard Oil Co. of California, all agreed to comply. Mobil — dependent on Saudi Arabia for half of its crude oil supply — established "a company-wide policy of not selling Saudi crude directly or indirectly for more than" the official price set by the Saudis, a company spokesman said last month.

Internal Mobil Oil Corp. records raise questions about Mobil's compliance with the Saudi directive and show the company made at least $75 million in profits from complex transactions involving Saudi crude oil during part of 1980 and 1981.

A Mobil spokesman, however, issued a categorical denial, saying that Mobil made "no additional money or profit" reselling Saudi crude oil during this period, and asserted that Mobil documents obtained by The Washington Post are being misinterpreted and merely reflect routine crude oil transactions and bookkeeping practices.

Yamani and other Saudi officials declined to comment.

THE RECORDS SHOW that Mobil sold tanker loads of Saudi crude oil at the official Saudi price to five Japanese oil companies. The records also show companion transactions on identical volumes of non-Saudi oil aboard other ships. Mobil sold this oil at a higher price to the same Japanese customers and bought it back the same day or within days at prices $4 to $9 a barrel lower. The result was substantial profits from transactions in which Saudi crude was the only oil received by the Japanese customer.

In other words, according to the records, a number of Mobil's transactions with the Japanese oil companies were on two parallel tracks: on one track, Mobil provided Saudi oil at the official price, in line with Yamani's directive; on the second track, Mobil sold and bought back on paper identical volumes of non-Saudi oil, resulting in profits one step removed from the Saudi oil.

The records show that Mobil sold tanker loads of Saudi crude oil at the official Saudi price to five Japanese oil companies.

Mobil's records for 1980 show that the sales on both tracks were part of a single transaction and were assigned one contract number within Mobil.

There is no indication from the records that these transactions violated any law. Nonetheless, Mobil's dealings with its Japanese customers illustrate how Mobil, the second-largest company in the United States, reconciled its commercial interests with a foreign policy initiative of its major supplier. As the largest oil producer in the Middle East, Saudi Arabia was seeking to enforce its lower prices on a global scale while Mobil's special access to Saudi crude oil presented the company with large profit opportunities.

The price of Saudi crude more than doubled during the oil crisis, but the Saudis were more restrained than other oil-producing countries. Saudi Arabia was pumping about 9 million barrels of crude oil a day at a price $4 or more below average world prices. This relatively small margin of price differential carried an enormous profit potential.

OF THE $75 million in profits documented for this article, $35.6 million was listed in Mobil records as net balances from nine transactions involving Saudi oil in 1980, and $39.1 million was recorded as "profit" from "sales of crudes acquired on exchange" during the first half of 1981.

All of these profits were taken from transactions in which Mobil was supplying more Saudi oil to Japan than was required by contract. How much total profit was made in this manner from Mobil's roughly $2 billion in annual crude oil sales to Japan could not be determined. Other Saudi oil under the contract was sold at the official Saudi price in standard transactions, according to the records.

The Japanese, who lost 18 percent of their oil imports when Iran's oil fields were shut down by revolution in 1979, were willing to pay a premium for additional supplies of Saudi oil. Even with a premium, Saudi oil was a good buy for the Japanese and, compared with other crudes being offered to the Japanese by Mobil at the time, was lower in sulfur content and higher in its yield of gasoline and jet fuel.

Mobil spokesman Herbert Schmertz said that Mobil "did not sell Saudi crude, directly or indirectly, at prices in excess of official selling prices." On the contrary, he said, Mobil bent over backward to maintain a steady supply of oil to its Japanese customers and to be fair to them at a time of critical shortage.

In a series of interviews and in a letter to The Post, Schmertz gave a general explanation but declined to address specific figures in Mobil's records that show a "net balance" or "profit" resulting from these transactions.

THERE IS NO question from the records of each Mobil transaction with the Japanese firms that Saudi crude oil was always sold at Saudi Arabia's official price. But, according to Mobil's records, such a sale at times represented one-half of the total transaction. In the second part, according to the records, an identical amount of non-Saudi oil was sold and bought back at different prices to create an immediate profit for Mobil.

The following example from Mobil's records shows how one complete transaction worked:

Under contract No. 81-80, dated July 10, 1980, and approved by Gerald T. Owens, then president of Mobil Sales & Supply Corp., Mobil agreed to provide additional Saudi crude oil to one of its Japanese customers, Fuji Kosan Co.

As a first step, on July 17, 1980, Mobil sold Fuji Kosan a tanker load of oil produced in the tiny sheikdom of Dubai. The selling price for the 675,482 barrels was $36.51 a barrel.

The next day, July 18, Mobil bought back the same load of oil for $27.46 a barrel, resulting in an overnight profit of $6.1 million.

The Dubai oil never changed hands and, at the time of the paper transactions, was on the high seas, destined for another Mobil customer in Japan.

WITH ITS PROFIT in hand, Mobil shipped on another tanker an identical amount of Saudi crude oil to Fuji Kosan on July 27 and charged the official Saudi price of $27.46 a barrel.

The Saudi oil was aboard the supertanker Fujikawa Maru, and the Dubai oil was aboard the tanker Asia Maru-2. Mobil records pertaining to both shipments are part of contract No. 81-80.

Those records show that the only oil received by Fuji Kosan from Mobil was Saudi oil. The records also show a $6.1 million "net balance" due Mobil that was paid by the Japanese firm on July 25 as "final settlement" of the transaction.

This is the "net balance" that Mobil spokesman Schmertz declined to address specifically. Schmertz also said that Mobil would not entertain any additional questions about the transactions. He said he had no faith in The Post to interpret additional data fairly. He gave this general explanation, which he said was more than adequate:

Schmertz said that Mobil had access to only so much Saudi crude oil and, therefore, tried to distribute it fairly between Mobil refineries and outside customers, such as the Japanese oil companies. The Japanese customers had signed agreements with Mobil to accept a certain percentage of Saudi crude and a certain percentage of non-Saudi crudes during the oil shortage, he said.

SUBSEQUENTLY, some of the Japanese firms requested extra supplies of Saudi crude, Schmertz said. In these instances, Mobil proceeded as if the Japanese customers had already purchased the higher-priced non-Saudi oil. Then, Mobil entered into a "barrel-for-barrel exchange" with the Japanese firm, in which Mobil received back the higher-priced oil and gave up an equal amount of Saudi oil, he said.

"Since Saudi crude was involved, it was decided, in view of the Saudi edict applicable to Mobil, that the price of the Saudi crude would be the Saudi OSP (official selling price) and, therefore, the price of the exchange crude (non-Saudi oil) would also be the Saudi OSP," Schmertz wrote.

Mobil received back the more-expensive non-Saudi oil at the low Saudi price through such an exchange. "The total cost to each party was the same and the average cost was the same," Schmertz said. He challenged any suggestion that "a company which receives, through exchange, more than its basic allocated quantity of Saudi crude, should have his average cost reduced."

Schmertz questioned the basis for "an article on this subject, related to events far removed from the United States and printed three years after the fact."

He said the Mobil transactions did not violate "any U.S. laws, regulations or policies. ... The Japanese refiners and their government were all pleased with them. The only plausible purpose (for an article) we can perceive is an attempt to present a distorted interpretation of these transactions in the hope that it will cause difficulty for Mobil with the Saudi government. We find it more than a bit ironic that The Washington Post has suddenly become a 'guardian' of Saudi Arabian interests."

FORMER MOBIL SALES & Supply Corp. president Owens, in a series of interviews during July, verified documents outlining some of the transactions and defended Mobil's actions vigorously. Owens, 56, said during these interviews that it would be "an accurate accounting statement" that Mobil's Japanese customers at times ended up paying more for Saudi crude oil than the official Saudi price.

The former Mobil official, who remains a consultant to the corporation, said the transactions in question were the "exception, not the rule." He said the transactions were always initiated by the Japanese customers who were desperate for additional supplies of high quality Saudi crude oil. Also, Owens said the profits were justified because Mobil had arranged to acquire large quantities of non-Saudi crude to meet the terms of its supply contracts in Japan. If a customer did not want to accept his full share of non-Saudi oil and wanted to receive Saudi oil instead, he should have to pay for the disruption to Mobil's supply system, Owens said.

Also, "in order for that deal we made (in Japan) ... to be fair to us, it was critical that some amount of profit be derived as if we were running it (the Saudi crude) in our own system," he said. "It would have to be (profitable) in order to be fair. That's part of Americana, that's Americana personified ... with the stars and stripes forever."

Said Schmertz in his letter, "The large basic allotments of Saudi crude made by Mobil to our Japanese customers actually enabled them to achieve lower average costs than the average of our own affiliates — hardly a policy with the objective of maximizing our profits."

Owens said he knew of Mobil's obligation to comply with the Saudi directive: "We were aware of the fact that Saudi (crude oil) had to be sold not only cosmetically, but also effectively at OSP (offical selling price)." Asked how the Saudis would have reacted to these profits, Owens said he is sure they would have understood. "It wouldn't cost me a minute's loss of sleep ... that would cause me zero embarrassment vis a vis Zaki Yamani," he said.

AFTER CONFERRING with Schmertz, Owens wrote a letter to The Post on Aug. 3 criticizing two Post reporters for "confusion" and "lack of understanding." Owens wrote that his statements were being misquoted and taken out of context. What Owens had characterized as Mobil's "profit" from the transactions during several interviews in July, he said were "totally immaterial" matters in his Aug. 3 letter.

However, in a telephone interview this week, he confirmed the accuracy of his statements used in this article.

Owens, who speaks fluent Japanese and maintains an office at Mobil's headquarters in New York, retired from Mobil last February after a 20-year career in international crude oil sales.

When the oil crisis struck, Japan was Owens' largest and most important international customer for crude oil not used in Mobil refineries.

"We, of course, were beseiged with requests and impassioned pleas" from the Japanese for additional supplies of crude oil, Owens said, especially Saudi crude.

"It appeared to Mobil," said Owens, "that Saudi Arabia would continue to be the biggest dove among the producers and that they were operating their pricing levels in a manner that kept the economic stability of the world in view."

There is no indication from the records that these transactions violated any law.

Decontrol could be crazy world's Christmas present

DENVER — "Congress has a real opportunity to give American consumers an early Christmas present this year by passing natural gas legislation that reduces prices while assuring development of future supplies," George H. Lawrence, president of the American Gas Association, said recently.

Speaking before the Gas Processors Association regional meeting, Lawrence listed four legislative goals that need to be accomplished before consumers can realize real benefits from gas pricing legislation this year. They are:

— Limit take-or-pay provisions in producer-pipeline contracts to 50 percent of deliverability for the next three years;

— Permanently ban favored nation's clauses which are inflationary, anti-competitive, and which have no place in today's gas industry.

— Remove federal government restraints on natural gas sales; and — Repudiate any effort to put more federal controls on the gas transportation system (mandatory pipeline carriage) and endorse the specific regulatory steps recently put in place to encourage voluntary contract carriage.

"These are the legislative steps the gas industry, and its consumers, need in order to assure an orderly transition to decontrol of the field price of new gas by January 1, 1985, with the incentives which will work for new exploration and development, and to remove the restraints on utilizing the supplies which this will bring forth."

"Again," Lawrence said, "the step the industry does not need is mandatory contract carriage, with its imposition of new controls at a time when the industry is trying to get out from under nearly 30 years of federal field price regulation."

Lawrence emphasized that "our highest immediate priority is the enactment of legislation which will bring gas price relief - and the key word here is immediate." He pointed out that the legislative proposals now under active consideration are extremely complicated and incorporate serious problems for distribution and transmission companies.

"The mandatory carriage proposals fail to recognize the steps already being taken by pipelines to provide delivery of excess gas production and the efforts of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) to encourage voluntary carriage arrangements," Lawrence said.

"The outlook for the natural gas industry is bright. Prices are beginning to level off and, in many cases, come down, and the supply and gas reserves position is most favorable."

"I would caution those who, for whatever reason, would threaten this progress with complicated, unworkable legislation to be careful. What they wish for, they may get," Lawrence said.

ARLINGTON, VA. — "Crazy world absurdities" caused by natural gas price controls are hurting consumers and threatening the energy security of the United States, a Conoco Inc. executive said recently.

"Decontrol is the way to restore sanity to America's use of its natural gas resources," said Cathy Wining, Conoco's director of natural gas regulatory services. Wining spoke at a meeting of national officers and state presidents of the U.S. Jaycee Women.

"It (decontrol) will result in competitive prices for natural gas, assure adequate supplies at the least cost, and lessen our dependence on foreign oil, thus helping to increase our national income," she said.

The Natural Gas Policy Act was enacted in 1978 to help solve shortage problems that erupted during the early seventies, Wining said. But the law proved to be a crazy quilt of more than two dozen different categories of gas, each with its own set of prices and rules, she added.

The result has been severe price distortions and increased costs to consumers despite the current gas surplus, she said. The regulations have encouraged the production of high-cost imported gas, the Houston-based Conoco executive said.

Further complicating the situation are "take-or-pay" contracts for high-cost gas, which were negotiated by pipeline companies during the gas shortage to guarantee supplies, she said. Now we have abundant supplies of cheaper gas, but the pipelines are obligated to take the more expensive gas, she said.

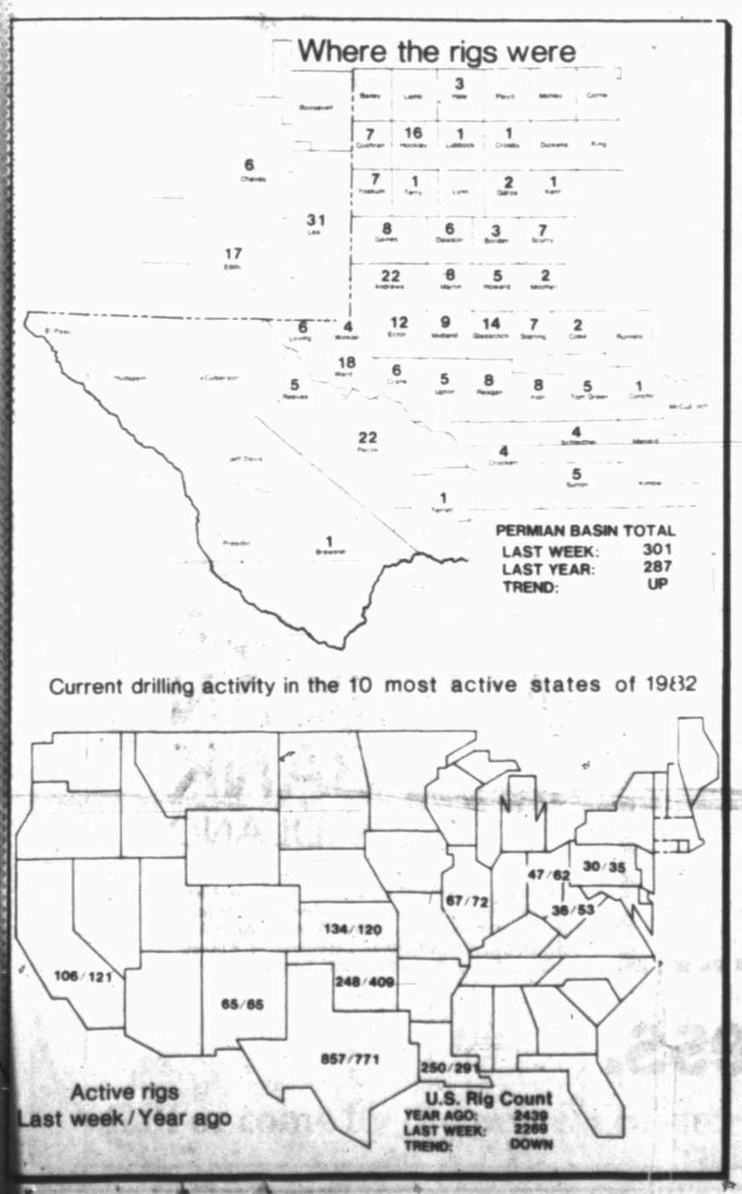

The high gas prices have forced some industrial users to switch to fuel oil, increasing consumer costs even more because residential users have to pay more of the fixed charged for gas transmission and distribution, Winning said.

And as industrial users switch to oil, she continued, the Unied States becomes more dependent on foreign oil.

"Artificial pricing of natural gas and the various 'crazy world' absurdities of regulation ultimately become a plague upon the gas consumer," Wining said.

Allowing the price of natural gas to be set by the market, instead of the government, will benefit the consumer in the same way that decontrol of U.S. oil supplies resulted in lower prices and increased supplies, she said.

"Now is the time to decontrol natural gas," Winning concluded. "There would not be a fly-up in prices, and it would be a good time to make a transition into a free market and let prices stabilize."

Natura reports sale, restructuring of debt

Natura Energy Corporation (NASDAQ: NATU) has reported the sale of property interests and the receipt of a commitment to restructure its bank debt.

The company disclosed that it consumated the sale of a 10 percent working interest in its East Texas Prospect in Polk County in August, 1983 for $400,000 cash. The company retained a 9.25 percent working interest in the prospect and the discovery well, the Alabama-Coushatta P1-9 well. The company has entered into a gas contract and pipeline construction should be completed and the well producing by late October.

This sale, along with the sale of an undeveloped lease for $100,000 cash in July, have allowed the company to reduce its bank debt by $236,000 since June 30, leaving the company with $400,000 of remaining bank debt.

On September 22, the company received loan commitments from another commercial bank and a small business investment corporation, which will provide the company with a combined $500,000 line-of-credit, a significant portion of which will be classified as long-term debt. Subject to the completion of satisfactory loan agreements, the company anticipates the rearrangement of its current bank debt on or before its due date of October 18.

These items in addition to the austerity program instituted in June and the reducton and deferment of a portion of its office space lease costs previously announced has put the company in a positive cash flow position and anticipates remaining so in the near future. The company is still considering preparing either a public or private offering of additional capital stock to further strengthen the company's financial position and plans are being made for additional drilling on the East Texas Prospect in Polk County before year end.

Did Mobil comply with Sheik Yamani's instructions ?

YAMANI DISCLOSED his price directive in an April 1979 meeting with reporters in Geneva. It was reiterated in a letter to the chairman of the Arabian American Oil Co. (ARAMCO), the consortium that includes Mobil and the three other American oil companies: "The companies shall pledge not to sell to any ... party at prices in excess of the those fixed by the government," Yamani's deputy wrote on April 1, adding, "Please notify the companies transporting Saudi oil of the necessity of submitting certificates from auditors confirming the adherence of the companies to the instructions of the State as of the beginning of this year."

Frank Jungers, the former longtime chairman of Aramco, said the oil company partners in the consortium historically have taken such directives "very seriously. ... My experience with Yamani on any directive," said Jungers, "especially when he speaks out publicly, is that he means what he says."

William Smith, a spokesman for Exxon in Washington, said his company strictly adhered to the Saudi directive and never charged more than the official price — directly or indirectly — for Saudi oil. Spokesmen for Texaco and Standard Oil of California (Chevron) declined to comment.

During late 1979, according to Owens and Japanese oil executives, Mobil negotiated new supply contracts for the coming year with its major Japanese clients: Maruzen Oil Co., Daikyo Oil Co., Asia Oil Co. and Fuji Kosan Co. Under the new agreements, Mobil reduced the amount of Saudi crude it had been supplying from nearly 100 percent of the total volume to about 50 percent. Mobil agreed to fill out the rest of the contract with oil from other Middle Eastern countries, such as Dubai, Kuwait and Egypt.

Soon after the contracts were signed, according to Owens, some of the Japanese customers, Fuji Kosan in particular, "pleaded" with Mobil to supply a greater proportion of Saudi crude. Officials at Fuji Kosan insisted that other types of crude oil offered by Mobil would not run for technical reasons in the Fuji Kosan lubricant refinery, Owens said.

MOBIL'S RECORDS show that at least once a month between mid-1980 and mid-1981 Mobil supplied additional Saudi oil to one or more Japanese companies by substituting it for other crude types in the complicated transactions.

On May 14, 1980, records show that Owens approved transaction No. 61-80 in which Fuji Kosan would get an extra allocation during the following month of 626,000 barrels of Saudi crude oil.

By first selling an identical amount of Dubai crude oil to Fuji Kosan for $33 a barrel and buying it back two days later for $5.50 a barrel less, Mobil made a profit of $3.4 million, records show.

The sale and buy back of Dubai oil occurred between May 26 and May 30 and involved two oil tankers, the Kollbris, carrying 426,000 barrels, and the Shinko Maru, carrying 200,000 barrels.

Then, on June 7, Mobil shipped to Fuji Kosan the promised Saudi oil aboard the supertanker World Duke.

At the end of the transaction, the only oil Fuji Kosan had received was Saudi oil, but it had paid $3.4 million more than the Saudi government price to get it.

THE DUBAI OIL USED for the sale and buy back was shipped as planned to other customers. Maruzen Oil received 426,000 barrels and Daikyo Oil, 200,000 barrels.

A Mobil cable dated May 19, 1980 shows that the Dubai oil sold to Fuji Kosan and bought back was destined for other customers.

In July 1980, Owens approved a series of transactions to provide Fuji Kosan with 1.4 million barrels of additional Saudi oil over three months in a manner "identical in concept" to the May transaction, according to a cable written by one of Owens' staffers.

The first such transaction was numbered 81-80 and is the same transaction referred to at the beginning of this article.

Owens said he sometimes planned the complicated transactions in advance. "It was done quarterly," he said, but "once you've done something special and unique and spontaneous ... it grows like topsy (since) they (the Japanese) love the quality (of Saudi oil), rather than fight about it each time, rather than having 400 cables going back and forth, you do it quarterly."

RECORDS SHOW that Fuji Kosan paid more than $25 million over the Saudi official price for Saudi crude oil provided in a half-dozen similiar transactions with Mobil during 1980.

On Oct. 29, Mobil sold 750,000 barrels of Dubai crude to Fuji Kosan and bought it back the same day at a lower price resulting in a $6.3 million profit, according to the records. The oil was aboard the Japan Adonis and the paper sales occurred as the ship cleared the Indian Ocean on its way to the refinery of another Mobil customer. Having paid this premium, Fuji Kosan then received an identical amount of Saudi crude oil at the official price, the records show.

In November 1980, Mobil twice sold and bought back Dubai crude oil on the supertanker Mobil Kestrel, resulting in more than $8 million in profits while simultaneously shipping identical amounts of Saudi crude oil to Maruzen Oil Co. and to Daikyo Oil Co.

In this instance, the invoices from the transaction were recorded out of sequence. In the first sale and buy back with Maruzen, Mobil sold the Dubai crude to Maruzen on Nov. 21 and did not buy it back until Nov. 28, according to invoices. During the seven-day interim, however, Mobil's paperwork shows that on Nov. 25, Mobil sold the cargo of the Mobil Kestrel to Daikyo while, according to records, it still belonged to Maruzen.

Schmertz said in a telephone interview that at times invoices can get out of sequence without affecting the outcome or validity of the transaction.

MARUZEN AND Daikyo each received 482,000 barrels of Saudi crude at the official price under the arrangement. And through the sale and buy back transactions, each firm paid Mobil an additional $4.1 million, a total of $8.2 million in profit. The destination of the Mobil Kestrel was a Mobil refinery in Singapore.

Owens repeatedly emphasized that Mobil had arranged to acquire certain volumes of Dubai, Kuwait and other crudes to meet the total needs of the Japanese customers and, therefore, Mobil should be compensated for any disruption to its system. "To me, it's very simple," Owens said. "The man bought Dubai and (Saudi) Arabian, and because of concerns over quality, he wanted to undo a portion of the deal, and nobody, not Zaki Yamani, not The Washington Post, not Norman Vincent Peale nor J. Edgar Hoover would want me to do anything else."

Records show that in late 1980 Mobil twice gave up some Saudi crude to oil trading firms in exchanges for Dubai crude, which could be sold to the Japanese firms at higher prices. According to records, Mobil obtained the Dubai oil on the Mobil Kestrel by trading away some of its Saudi crude to international crude oil trader Marc Rich & Co.

Moreover, one Japanese oil company that did not have a supply contract with Mobil, Mitsubishi Oil Co., negotiated with Mobil officials in October 1980 to buy some Saudi crude oil on a one-time, or "spot" basis. Owens approved the sale of 486,000 barrels of Saudi oil to Mitsubishi at the official Saudi price. But at the same time, Mobil used a tankerload of Dubai oil bound for a refinery in the Philippines to obtain an additional payment from Mitsubishi. Dubai oil on the tanker Marilena bound for Bataan Refining Corp., then partially owned by Mobil, was sold to Mitsubishi for $16.5 million and bought back within days for $14.5 million, resulting in a $2 million Mobil profit.

OWENS SAID HE did not recall the transaction and declined to check Mobil's records. Schmertz declined to comment.

A senior Mitsubishi executive in Tokyo who examined the records of the transaction said his company's apparent intent in the sale and buy back of Dubai oil was to pay Mobil a premium on an identical amount of Saudi crude oil that was delivered in a separate shipment.

During the first six months of 1981, Mobil documents relating to its sales of crude oil to Japanese firms show eight transactions in which Mobil sold Dubai or other non-Saudi crude oil to three of the Japanese firms, Maruzen, Fuji Kosan and Asia Oil. Immediately after these sales, Mobil received the same amount of non-Saudi oil back through "exchanges" for separate shipments of Saudi crude oil. A Mobil summary of the transactions shows that Mobil received the non-Saudi oil back at the lower Saudi price. After the non-Saudi oil was delivered to its ultimate customer, Mobil recorded a "profit" from "crudes acquired on exchange."

The total "profit" for these eight transactions in early 1981 was $39.1 million, according to the documents.

Owens attributes much of Mobil's commitment to Japan to his personal attachment to the executives of the Japanese oil firms Mobil has supplied over the years.

"I'VE DONE business for a long time with those people," said Owens, "I play golf with them four times a year, I know their children. To throw them out in the world and have them buy from Marc Rich, I think that would have been immoral. I couldn't live with myself. ..."

Owens said Mobil did not unfairly profit from its sales of Saudi crude in Japan during the crisis. "We had a right," Owens said, to cancel the contracts in Japan, adding later, "I hate to defend altruism, it galls me."

"We were the fair-haired boys," he said. "They (the Japanese) gave us a medal and we were thanked by the business community."

Owens read the text of a June 1980 cable to Mobil from an executive of Fuji Kosan, which said, "We always appreciate your utmost efforts to assist ... (us) to grow under the difficult and unforeseeable circumstances prevailing in the petroleum industry. And I am very much pleased to have the opportunity to express my heartfelt gratitude to you. ..."

In the Aug. 3 letter to The Post, Owens said, "If the sole purpose of your proposed article is to complement Mobil for its continuing to supply substantial volumes of crude to independent oil companies in Japan during a time of crisis when other major oil suppliers had drastically curtailed or completely discontinued such supplies, and when the crude was sorely needed for Mobil's own refining and marketing affiliates, then the article would at least be accurate, whether or not contemporaneously newsworthy."

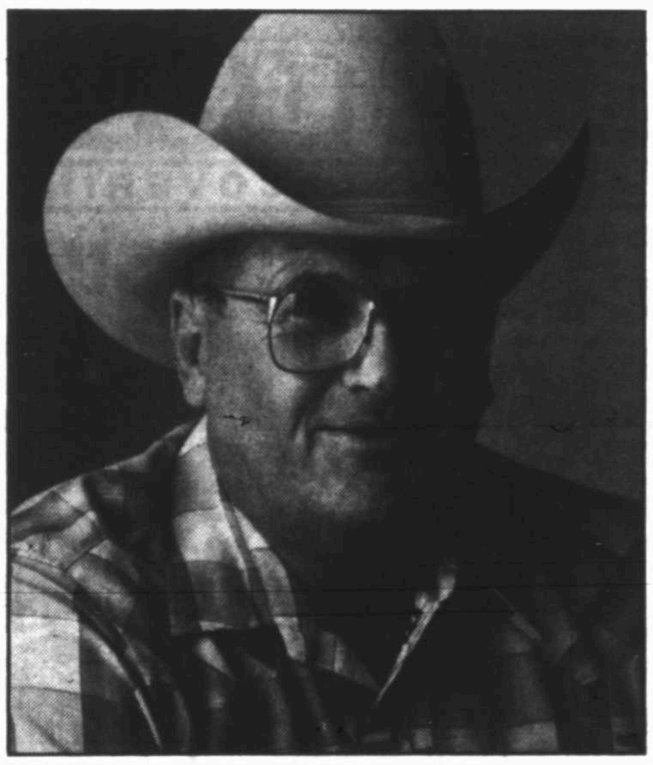

In an interview this summer, one senior executive at Daikyo Oil offered this assessment of his company's relationship with Mobil during this period:

"Given circumstances prevailing at the time, it was unavoidable that we pay some kind of premiums (for Saudi crude) ... Our purpose was to get the necessary volume of crude at the lowest prices." As for the Saudi directive, the Daikyo official said that the method Mobil chose to structure transactions was a matter between Mobil and the Saudis.

Efforts to attract new industry getting under way

AUSTIN — Efforts to attract new industries to Texas are getting underway this month at the Economic Development Commission (formerly the Texas Industrial Commission), with a direct mail campaign.

Joseph D. Ferran of EDC says the initial mailing will go to 5,700 electrical and electronics manufacturers, with other industries to be solicited during the new fiscal year.

EDC is aiming particularly at fabricated metal manufacturers, electronic and electrical equipment makers, and machinery manufacturers.

In addition to the mailout, EDC is using a national advertising campaign, aimed at chief executive officers.

Ferran says EDC is confident that "we will have a pretty good year" as far as new industrial locations are concerned, with the improvement in the economy nationally, and EDC's recruiting efforts.

"We do see a trend, beginning back last April, with a rise in the number of industrial prospects calling on us, compared to the similar period a year before," he reports.

Last year, the agency worked with 30 industries establishing 32 new plants — which Ferran says provided 22,156 new jobs in Texas.

"We feel there is a trend of growing confidence in the national economy," he says.

"We anticipate the next 12 months should be good in Texas."

State Board of Insurance set a hearing for 9 a.m. Oct. 19, on its proposed rule to prohibit the sale of blanket accident policies as alternatives to worker's compensation insurance coverage.

Hermitage Health and Life Insurance Co., Brentwood, Tenn., earlier led a successful fight against an emergency rule adopted by SBI.

Two Texas carriers and an industrial employer joined Heritage in opposing the rule, leading to the current rule-making effort.

SBI contends that the blanket policies are legal as a supplement to, but aren't legal as a substitute for worker's compensation coverage.

The agency has been struggling with the problem for almost three years.

State Banking Board members adopted permanent rules regarding notice of bank charter applications (with newspaper publication), but delayed consideration of rules on charter hearings.

Treasurer Ann Richards said she feels it would be better to wait until the new banking commissioner is appointed and has had a chance to review the proposals.

Department of Banking staff members are continuing to work on proposed rules on automated teller machines and point of sale terminals for board consideration.

Title insurance matters will be considered by the Board of Insurance at a Nov. 9, hearing in Austin — with more than 40 items already submitted for inclusion on the agenda.

One proposed item, from the board's staff, is proposed consumer information, as required under legislation passed by the 1983 Legislature, setting out whom consumers should contract in the event of a dispute or complaint.

The proposed language tells consumers to contact the agent who issued the policy, or to write the company — and then to check with the Board of Insurance.

The title insurance panel of the State Bar is proposing that premium on mortgage policies, and owner policies where improvements are planned, be paid in installments under some circumstances.

Under such conditions, coverage would be limited to less than face value, with the premium being paid as value increases.

The committee argues such a change would eliminate a major obstacle developers have faced in obtaining mortgagee policies rather than binders.

Air Control Board staff members are reviewing comments received during a seminar on health risk assessment as related to air pollution - in an attempt to identify methods and procedures to be used in evaluating exposure and air quality information.

ACB is attempting to determine what pollutants really need to be regulated, and at what levels, from a health standpoint, however, Roger Wallis, executive assistant to ACB head Bill Stewart, notes the effort is complicated by a lack of scientific information on the effects of contaminants on human health.

The problem is particularly difficult when attempting to assess effects of contaminants at low levels, he commented.

Travlers bring millions to Midland, study says

AUSTIN —Last year Midland County received an estimated $112.4 million in spending by U.S. travelers, a national study commissioned by the Texas Tourist Development Agency has disclosed.

Its rate of growth, 9 percent over 1981 receipts, was identical to that for the state as a whole.

The travel study, done by the U.S. Travel Data Center in Washington, D.C., found that the county last year had 2,500 travel-related jobs, with a payroll estimated at $23.8 million.

It also realized an estimated $1.4 million in local and county taxes paid by travelers.

The study measures the economic impact of all overnight trips and day trips at least 100 miles from home. Thus it includes spending by Texans as well as by out-of-state visitors.

For the state as a whole 1982 travel meant $13.7 billion to the Texas economy.

The 9 percent increase over 1981 traveler spending was five times greater than the 1.8 percent growth of the U.S. travel industry.

Travel industry employment last year in Texas rose to 283,917.

The figure was up 4 percent over 1981 - six times above national travel industry employment which fell 2 percent last year.

Texas also received an estimated $316.8 million in state taxes paid by travelers. Another $161.6 was paid in local and county taxes.

The travel data center said that the state figures would have been "substantially higher" had it been able to include estimates of spending by international visitors to Texas.

A separate study for the tourist development agency found that 9 percent of last year's 35.4 million visitors, an estimated three million persons, came from outside the United States. Nearly half were from Mexico.

MoPac moves center

DALLAS —The Missouri Pacific Railroad of the Union Pacific System will transfer its customer service center operations in the Midland-Odessa area to its Dallas office effective October 1.

Tracing and billing of shipments, as well as car detention and demurrage charges, ordering and releasing cars and switching orders can be handled simply by calling a toll free telephone number. For Texas industries the number is 1-800-442-1666; out of state industries should call 1-800-527-5805.

The change will enable the railroad to obtain better utilization of its computerized customer service facilities. The transfer of operations to the Dallas office will not affect switching or train services for industries in the Midland-Odessa area.

No further changes in the railroad's service in west Texas are contemplated at this time.

Economic change raises basic questions about future

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Economic change, exacerbated by the recent deep recession, has raised basic questions about the future of the American work force and the prospects for economic growth and prosperity.

The debate has raised such issues as whether widespread, long-term unemployment should be considered inevitable, what might be the mix of available jobs between manufacturing and service sectors as well as high technology and heavy industry and to what extent training programs can alleviate worker displacement and youth unemployment, increase productivity and restore competitiveness.

As a result of all of this handwringing, dozens of organizations and political groups are searching for answers to help the jobless find work and create new jobs for the future.

The Congressional Joint Economic Committee (JEC) explored the role of business and industry in retraining structurally unemployed workers Monday in the third of four hearings on industrial policy and the training needs of American workers.

The Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition will hold a national conference October 19th on "shaping the work force of the future," aiming toward a legislative agenda that could be taken up by Congress later this or early next year.

AMONG THE PANELISTS will be Pat Choate of TRW, Inc., author of "Retooling the American Work Force"; Robert Kuttner, author of "The Declining Middle"; David Birch of MIT, Ken McClennan of the Committee for Economic Development, Robert Taggart of the Remediation and Training Institute and Perry Quick of the Roosevelt Center for American Policy Studies.

Synfuels

A report released by the Senate Oversight of Government Management Subcommittee has concluded that the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corp. (SFC) has been stymied by serious conflict within its seven-member board of directors.

Based on hearings held last July, the subcommittee's 111-page report said that the SFC has made little progress in funding synfuels projects because of division within the board of directors. It has also been handicaped by industry doubts about the administration's commitment to the program and uncertainties about the corporation's policies, as well as shifting economic and energy conditions.

Subcommitee chairman William Cohen, R- Me., said the evidence suggested that the corporation has operated more like a "family-run corporation than a public entity charged with the responsibility of wisely investing billions of tax dollars."

THE CORPORATION was created in 1980 to foster the development of a commercial synthetic fuels industry in order to reduce U.S. dependence on imported oil. Among the findings:

The corporation's management did not heed warning signals of serious problems, including a critical consultant's report, repeated criticisms from the part-time directors, and negative comments in an industry survey.

The corporation awarded 51 sole-source contracts totalling more than $600,000 to individual consultants. In some instances, the SFC failed to provide adequate evidence that the selection of the contractor was not due to bias or favortism.

Cohen concluded, however, that although the corporation has made little headway in granting financial assistance to synfuels projects, the SFC can yet make an "enormous contribution to our nation."

Water Alliance

A congressional group, responding to the growing threat of a major national water crisis, will announce creation Friday of the National Water Alliance.

The executive committee will be made up of Reps. Thomas F. Foley, D- Wash., Robert Roe, D-N.J., and John Hammerschmidt, R-Ark., and Sens. Robert Dole, R-Kan., Dave Durenberger, R- Minn., and Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.

Water resource experts from across the country have been warning of the inevitability of a serious crisis. The panel's mission will be to focus attention on water problems and assist in the development of a sound national water policy.

In announcing the panel, Dole will warn that "a frightening pattern of inadequate preparation and planning, increasingly complex and conflicting resource demands, and an inevitable financial shortfall of staggering proportions have set the stage for a series of local, regional, and national disasters and reaction on a crisis-by-crisis basis simply is not good enough."

The panel hopes to create a national water policy by the spring of 1985 (after the presidential election year), conduct a public education campaign and act as an arbiter in settling disputes, thus avoiding time-consuming court battles.

Petroleum Demand To Stabilize

U.S. Total U.S. consumption of petroleum this year is projected to be about the same level as in 1982, according to the Energy Information Administration (EIA). In 1984, however, oil demand is projected to go up about 5 percent, the first year-to-year rise in oil consumption since 1978.

New Environmental Policy Group

A new non-profit public policy research and analysis organization focusing on national environmental, energy and natural resources legislation will be launched today (Thursday). The group will be headed by Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., the founder of the Environmental and Energy Study Conference, a congressional service organization with 85 senators and 295 representatives as members. The new organization, called the Environmental and Energy Study Institute, will be separate from the congressional group.

D'Amato Blasts Canada

U.S. Trade Representative William Brock's laudatory remarks praising Canada for its cooperative trade practices with the U.S. have come under fire from Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y. In a letter to Brock, D'Amato pointed out that subsidized Canadian agricultural products have flooded the U.S. market, forcing many northeastern farmers out of business. He urged Brock to bring this matter to the attention of the Canadian government.

Security At Power Plants

Since the middle 1970's, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and power plant operators have taken steps to reduce the vulnerability of power plants to attempted acts of sabotage. But a new General Accounting Office (GAO) evaluation discloses that further improvements can be made by screening nuclear power plant employees to reduce the number of potential saboteurs and strengthening the physical security systems to ensure their compatability with other plant safety systems.

Around and About

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce is urging Congress to enact broad regulatory reform legislation, warning that unless Congress acts the Reagan administration-imposed administrative reforms will be subject to change by subsequent administrations...Lyn Nofziger, a longtime advisor to President Reagan; Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., and 63 others will speak Oct. 9 - 13th at a Washington conference with the theme "Pre-Election Year Economic, Political and Investment Perspectives."...The space and defense industry Thursday will announce creation of the American Space Frontiers Committee which will raise and spend $1 million for political candidates who endorse a space-based missile defense system .... The Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Subcommittee will hold a hearing today on legislation regarding cargo preference, the mandatory carrying of certain foreign trade goods on U.S. flag vessels...Rep. G.V. Montgomery, D-Miss., is demanding an explanation from the Small Business Administration as to why it has granted only $3.2 million in loans for veterans for fiscal 1983 although Congress earmarked $25 million for that purpose...The Whirlpool Corporation reported to the Energy Department it used 17 percent less energy in its manufacturing operations in 1982 than it did in 1978.

NOW THE BIGGEST SELECTION OF CDs YOU CAN FIND IS RIGHT IN YOUR OWN BACKYARD.

Here, in Texas, Merrill Lynch is the place to shop for CDs. Our programs include as complete a range as you can find anywhere, with maturities from six months to 14 years. For example:

Short and long-term CDs. Locked-in interest rates, the safety of FDIC or FSLIC insurance, and semiannual interest payments make these CDs ideal for savings. Maturities range from 6 months to 10 years.

Zero Coupon CDs. Ideal investments for IRA, Keogh and other tax-advantaged accounts. At maturity you receive a lump-sum payment of two, three or four times your investment.

These Certificates of Deposit are covered by more FDIC or FSLIC insurance than available at any one bank.

Because when you buy through Merrill Lynch, you get the added advantage of access to the largest secondary market for CDs in the industry.

If you need your money prior to maturity, you can sell your CD at the prevailing market price, and avoid the substantial interest penalty typically associated with early redemption at a bank.

While not obligated to do so, Merrill Lynch has maintained and fully intends to continue maintaining this secondary market.

Talk to a Merrill Lynch Account Executive near you. No one else can give you more help with more kinds of investments. No one else.

INTRODUCING THE AGGRESSIVE GROWTH FUND FROM SHEARSON/AMERICAN EXPRESS.

If patience isn't your strongest virtue and a little risk-taking doesn't faze you, we have a mutual fund just for you.

Introducing the Shearson Aggressive Growth Fund.

As an investor in this fund, your dollars will primarily search out small- to medium-sized companies with star potential. There will be risks. But there'll also be the potential rewards to match.

Frankly, what the fund will do is something that's tough to do on your own. It will monitor and analyze hundreds of undervalued growth companies. And since the stocks of such companies can rise and fall in unexpected patterns, the fund will buy and sell these stocks actively.

And since the fund is part of the Shearson Group of Funds, you can shift* your invested dollars to a variety of other specialized mutual funds with a simple phone call to your Shearson/American Express Financial Consultant.

The minimum investment will be $1,200. To find out more, call or write. Now.

The Shearson Aggressive Growth Fund.

Pursuing profits aggressively is a matter of putting minds over money.

*There's a $5 each-time transfer charge when you move your money from one fund to another. This charge stays at $5 no matter how large the amount of money you move.

Cattleman's Steak House, 3300 N. Big Spring in Midland, offers you top quality food at a reasonable price, along with the best service in town. Treat yourself to an evening out at Cattleman's, and you will see what makes it so special. Just one trip and you'll be hooked.

You owe yourself a treat at Cattleman's

You are the most special person in the world! Yes, you should consider yourself the most precious thing you have. And you deserve to be treated! No matter who you are or what you do, Cattleman's Steak House, at 3300 N. Big Spring in Midland, is the place to go. Top quality food at a reasonable price makes Cattleman's truly a treat. Stop by tonight and celebrate! Treat yourself and your special friends or loved ones to an evening at Cattleman's.

All it takes is one trip to Cattleman's, and you'll be hooked for life. Owners Bill and Pat Henkle have provided for you a pleasant, relaxed atmosphere combined with a friendly and efficient staff. That winning combination will make you want to go back again and again. But, although the atmosphere and service are excellent, nothing can quite compare with the delicious food.

Mouth-watering appetizers at Cattleman's range from mountains of fresh onion rings to shrimp cocktail, fried zucchini, or even excellent fried mushrooms. If you prefer, you may order a hot bowl of homemade soup, steaming chili, or even frito pie. And the salad bar can easily become a meal in itself.

To complement your dinner, Bill and Pat offer you a good selection of wines, champagnes, and sherry, at prices to fit any pocket book, from inexpensive to exquisite. They serve only the premium beers, those which are considered by most to be the best.

Now comes the steak, cooked to perfection. Dinner steak, club steak, or ribeye would be the perfect way to satisfy your appetite. Sirloins come in all sizes, from a single serving up to service for eight. T-Bone is an old favorite at Cattleman's, and comes in three sizes to fill even the hungriest appetite. Prime rib is the choice of many hungry diners (when available).

But steak at Cattleman's is not the only specialty, seafood is quite popular, too. Delicious fried shrimp, oysters, scallops, catfish, and even frog-legs are available at Cattleman's. And even though every item on Cattleman's menu may be considered a treat, you owe it to yourself to try their chicken fried steak. Other popular menu items include chicken strips, hamburger steak, and Virginia ham steak. All entrees include a hearty baked potato and a trip to the excellent salad bar.

For those with not such a large appetite, Bill and Pat provide the all-American hamburger or cheeseburger, each available in two sizes. Or try their jalapeno burger to spice up your meal. Grilled cheese, ham and cheese, steak sandwich, and a delightful turkey, ham, and cheese sandwich are some of the other items available for lesser appetites. The salad bar is available not only with the meal, but as a meal in itself, also.

Special child's plates are available for the little ones. Beverages include tea, milk, soft drinks, and coffee. And if you have any room left after the steak, the desert is absolutely heavenly. Top your meal off with scrumptious blueberry or cherry cheesecake or delicious pecan pie. Hours at Cattleman's Steak House are from 10am to 2pm and 5pm to 9:30pm, Monday through Friday, and 5:00 to 10:00 Saturdays. Cattleman's is closed on Sunday's. Give yourself the treat you deserve. Ignore the construction on Big Spring Street and come on in to the paradise atCattleman's Steak House. Even if the parking lot is full, come on in. It almost always is, but you rarely have more than a five minute wait to be seated.

Become a better you at Behavioral Motivation

Your subconscious is the seat of all emotion, imagination, creativity, learned responses, and memory, etc. Anything that the subconscious is responsible for may be altered if the motivation is there. By replacing the unwanted habit or response with a new and better response, and then reinforcing these new responses daily, you can change anything about yourself that you want to. Some of the more common are bad habits such as smoking and overeating, but what can hypnosis do for you?

You must realize that if you want to change something about yourself, simply changing your conscious mind will not be enough. You must change you subconscious. That is why you do things such as biting your nails without evr thinking about doing it, your subconscious mind controls all of your actions. In order to change something about yourself, you must change your subconscious.

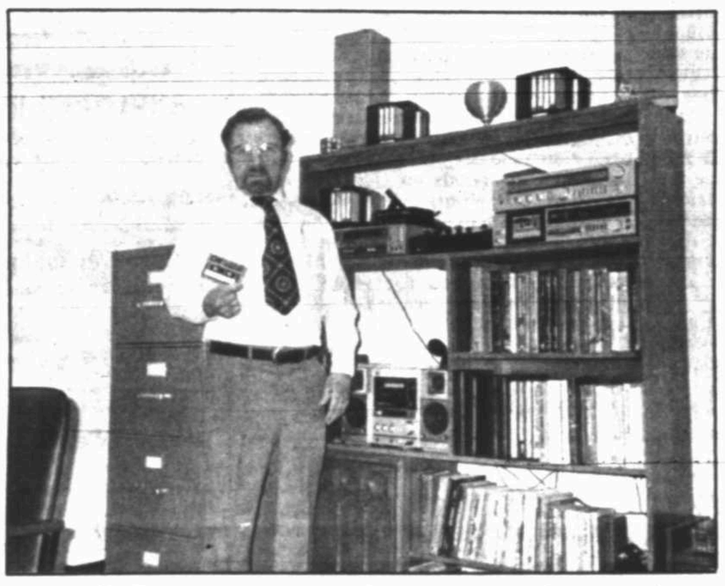

One thing that is not realized by many people is that hypnosis can help you with your memory work. This is especially important for many of those who are going back to school, be it grade school, high school, or college. The best way to remember things is to relax and just let the information stored in your brain present itself to you. Have you ever tried to remember something when you were exicted or rushed? It's much harder to do than when you are relaxed. Hypnosis is simply a state of relaxation. When in a hypnotic trance, the subconscious mind is open to suggestion for change. You can change anything about yourself that you want to.

Other things that may be altered would include things such as superstitions. For example, fear of missing a pin in bowling or fear of missing a golf ball. If your subconscious believes that you are going to miss, then more than likely you will. Changing the subconscious so that fear is no longer a dominant factor will drastically improve the performance or ability of a person to play a game. Fear of flying or fear of public speaking are two other fine examples of things that may be altered through hypnosis.

Even behavioral patterns such as overeating or smoking are easily changed if the motivation is there. This is treated basically by getting you to become what you picture yourself to be. Motivation is a key factor. You must want to change before you can change. You must realize what you can do for yourself and get the subconcious to respond to your own thoughts. We teach you motivational techniques, how to become what you want to be.

Other cases which may be treated and are presently being treated are some impotency cases, backaches, migraines,other assorted aches and pains, and even insomnia. Here again, the key factor is to learn how to relax and let your subconscious take over. By learning how to relax, you also learn how to better cope with stress. Stress reduction is an important learning and motivational technique in hypnosis.

If you have a particular problem within yourself that you don't quite know how to deal with, behavioral hypnosis may be able to help. If you would like more information on these motivational techniques and how they may help you, call Frank McFarlin at Behavioral Motivation Institute at 694-5485.

Frank McFarlin can help you become more what you picture yourself to be through behavioral modification. You can change your unwanted habits and emotions, as well as memory and many aches and pains through this method. Give him a call at 694-5485.

Average lawyer earns $60,808, study reveals

The average lawyer working in business & industry receives $60,808 in annual salary and bonus (up 6.8 percent in the past year, while the Consumer Price Index rose 3.9 percent), with 10 percent making under $30,900 and 10 percent over $95,800. Who's the highest-paid lawyer (in business/industry/government) in the U.S.? The lowest? Composites representing these individuals were drawn by Steven Langer, using data from his recent survey of 282 organizations.

The highest median total compensation is found in San Francisco ($60,372), Boston ($58,400), New York City ($57,900), Los Angeles ($55,200), and Dallas/Ft. Worth ($53,800). The lowest median incomes are found in the Mountain States ($43,200) and the Pacific States— excluding San Francisco & Los Angeles ($45,000).

Those employed by manufacturing/extractive firms make sifnificantly more than those employed by non-manufacturing firms ($56,700 vs. $48,300). The highest median incomes are paid by transportation services ($64,500) and manufacturers of food/beverage/tobacco products ($64,000). The lowest median total incomes are those provided by banks and other financial institutions ($44,009) and insurance companies (47,118). Total compensation tends to rise with the size of the organization. The median income is $47,059 in organizations with under 500 employees, increasing to $54,000 in organizations with 10,000 employees or more.

By length of experience, income rises regularly from $30,000 for those with under one year of experience to $80,650 for those with 30-plus years of experience (an increase of 169 percent). The same pattern was found by age of individual and by year of J.D./L.L.B.

The highest-paid functional areas for attorneys are administration/management and international law ($92,300 and $66,500 respectively). Of the other seven functional areas studied, the lowest incomes went to those engaged in probate/trust law and insurance/negligence/compensation law ($37,600 and $43,800 respectively).

Supervisory responsibility for other professionals is correlated strongly with total compensation. Attorneys who supervise ten or more professional subordinates have a median income of $98,875, 131 percent more than the $42,769 of those with little or no supervisory responsibility.

Without naming names, the lawyer with the highest income is the Chief Legal Officer for a utility or a firm producing chemical/pharmaceutical/plastic/rubber products with 10,000 employees or more. Naturally, the firm as at least 25 lawyers on staff. This individual is undoubtedly located in the New York City area, and has 20 years of experience or more. While the median income of Chief Legal Officers is $76,000, this individual's total annual compensation is well in excess of $300,000.

At the other end of the income spectrum, the lawyer with the lowest income works in the Mountain States for a paper/printing/publishing firm with 5,000 — 9,999 employees, including two to four lawyers. This individual is in a non-supervisory position, deals with real property law, and has less than one year of experience. His or her total annual compensation can be as low as $16,600, although the median income of non-supervisory attorneys is $43,000.

Para-legal assistants (semi-professionals who perform limited legal tasks under the close supervision of an attorney) have a median annual income of $21,164. Ten percent of this group earn under $15,500; 10 percent over $30,000.

Street musicians consider Paris Metro 'paradise'

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

PARIS — Chris Rueff, a lanky 30-year-old Californian, carefully sorted through the equipment he needs for his work: a guitar, an American passport, two harmonicas plus neckbrace, a small tin for collecting money, a bracelet for his biceps, and a "carte orange," entitling him to a month's limitless rides on the Paris Metro.

"Bonne chance! (good luck)," shouted Jean-Luc, proprietor of a cafe near the Chatelet Metro station patronized by the growing army of street musicians in Paris. It was 9 a.m. A haze of heat and pollution hung over the River Seine, and the rush hour was petering out. The ideal time to start working the Metro.

Over the next hour, Rueff made 100 francs — around $12.50 — riding subway cars from Chatelet to the Champs Elysees and entertaining fellow travelers with a mixture of rock and blues. Within three hours, his pockets were weighed down with 10- and 20-centime pieces. Hoarse from singing above the roar of the Metro, he emerged blinking into the sunlight.

THE PARIS METRO is a street musician's paradise. Its 130 miles of track and 358 stations provide good and not-so-good musicians from all over the world with a captive daily audience of some 2 million people, each of whom spends an average of roughly 40 minutes a day riding the subway.

In theory, it's illegal to perform in the Metro. There's a sign drawing attention to the fact in every wagon and, as likely as not, a singer belting away at his guitar right underneath.

What makes the Paris Metro unique is not just the number of musicians, but their imagination and ubiquity as well. On other subways, the performers generally restrict themselves to playing music in the corridors. In Paris, they jump onto the trains and provide almost every conceivable type of entertainment — from classical music to puppet shows to a four-member steel band.

The regulars were recently joined by a drunk who handed his hat around after an impassioned denunciation of France's Socialist government. He seemed to make quite a lot of money from the amused travelers.

The Chatelet station is at the center of the Paris street musicians "scene," according to Rueff. Close to the capital's historic core, it lies at the hub of four separate subway lines. The entertainers' favorite is the one that leads to the Champs Elysees via the tourist attractions of the Louvre, the Tuileries and the Place de la Concorde.

RUEFF KNOWS ALL the station regulars: the undercover policemen, the guards, the pickpockets, the cleaning staff and, of course, the other performers. The musicians come from all over the world, including a refugee from Soviet Georgia who plays with an Israeli. The largest contingent are the Argentinians, who produce their own Spanish-language magazine called The Voice of the Voices of Chatelet.

"A lot of the guys around here treat this like a 9-to-5 job with a break for lunch," said Rueff. "They have to earn enough money to support their wife and five kids. For them, it's entirely uncreative. Many of them have been singing the same song for the past six months."

Rueff, who is a bachelor, writes his own songs — timing them to last exactly one Metro stop. He regards each ride to Champs Elysees and back as a separate performance in which he entertains his fellow travelers with a mixture of swing, rock music and blues. On the last two stops, still playing his harmonica, he "bottles" — the term used by street musicians for collecting money.

CNS Photo

Paris is a city noted for its arts, such as these exhibits along the Right Bank in the Place du Terte. Less well-known are the musicians who play on the Paris Metro subway.

ON A GOOD day, Rueff can get the whole carriage stomping feet and applauding in time with the music. On a bad one, he has to contend with hecklers telling him to go home to America.

"I try to make contact with people by looking them in the eye. Watch how people behave in the Metro. It's as if they were in a state of depression. They're starving for people to look at. They send out signals. If you can shoot the signals back, you've got a whole thing going," he said.

French austerity program puts damper on holidays abroad

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

PARIS — When Finance Minister Jacques Delors told fellow Frenchmen back in March that they had to cut down on holidays abroad, his stated aim was to deliver "a psychological shock" to a nation that had been living beyond its means.

He seems to have succeeded in doing just that — but not in quite the way he intended.

The French, who have never regarded respect for authority as a national virtue, have invented ingenious ways of getting round the restrictions. Evading the $375 limit on money that can be taken abroad is a cinch for anybody really intent on spending a vacation in an exotic place. It can even be an amusing challenge.

SURVEYS DO SHOW, however, that the French are spending less money on holidays this year. The reason seems to be less the currency restrictions than the weak franc and the fact that the French are beginning to feel a financial pinch. Rather than taking off to Italy or Spain, they are staying home this year or renewing acquaintances with long-forgotten country cousins.

This change in habits is remarkable for a people as determined to defend hard-won privileges as the French. The mania for les vacances became something of a sociological phenomenon in the 1970s. Some pundits argued, perfectly seriously, that the up-tight French need holidays more than, say, naturally relaxed Americans.

ONE OF THE Socialist government's first acts on coming into office in 1981 was to give everybody a fifth week of annual paid leave.

Making sacrifices is more traumatic here than in more disciplined countries such as West Germany and Britain. It has not been made any easier by the invasion of cocky American tourists suddenly discovering that, thanks to a soaring dollar, Europe is affordable again.

Pictures of happy-looking Americans in shorts or checkered pants, seated around swimming pools at the best hotels and slugging down champagne, have become the journalistic cliche of the season. So too have articles about half-deserted beaches and worried restaurant owners complaining that nobody is bothering to eat a full three-course meal anymore.

THERE WAS AN immediate outcry back in the spring when the government announced the currency restrictions as the centerpiece to a new group of austerity measures. Angry travel agents demonstrated in Paris. Old ladies who had never set foot outside France wrote letters to the newspapers complaining about an outrageous attack on individual liberty.

Suddenly holidays became a loaded political issue. Daniele Mitterrand, the president's wife, announced that she would not accompany her husband on foreign trips anymore "out of solidarity" with disappointed vacationers. Not to be outdone, Finance Minister Delors let it be known that he would not be taking a vacation at all, except possibly to spend a few days with his aged mother-in-law.

SEVERAL OTHER ministers and leading opposition figures cancelled planned trips to America, announcing that they would take a patriotic holiday in France instead. One of the rare exceptions to the vacation-at-home rule was Communist Party leader Georges Marchais, who decided to go ahead with his annual vacation in Bulgaria.

According to statistics compiled by the Ministry of Tourism, the number of French crossing frontiers was down 10 to 15 percent in July. Earlier this year, officials predicted that the currency restrictions would dissuade 1.3 million people from spending holidays abroad.

INFORMAL SURVEYS suggest, however, that many people are flouting the currency regulations. At the American Express office in Rome recently, two young French workers produced wads of bills totaling 40,000 francs ($5,000) from the linings of their jackets and asked for travelers' checks in dollars. The transaction would have been illegal in Paris, but in Rome the desk clerk happily obliged.

"The restrictions are crazy," said one of the youths. "We'd been saving money since last year for a six-month trip to Africa and weren't going to let anybody stop us. Everybody's doing the same thing."

OTHER METHODS OF avoiding the restrictions include borrowing from friends abroad against paying for their holidays in France, renting one's house out to tourists and getting paid abroad, or pretending to travel on business.

One unfortunate side effect of the campaign to persuade the French not to go abroad was the impression it created that resorts in France would be overcrowded. The government did not help matters by declaring that it would accommodate foreign tourists in army camps if necessary.

Careful planning makes travel with child easier

DENVER (AP) — Don't let the prospect of traveling with children overwhelm you, advises Karen Hagaman of the Samsonite Traveler Advisory Service, who is a parent herself.

Try to keep take-along toys to a minimum, but you may want to pack that one favorite stuffed animal that your youngster must have in order to fall asleep, she suggests.

"Timing can be critical," she points out. "If you've got a plane or a train to catch, allow enough time to arrive at the airport or station, check your bags and see that children use restrooms before boarding.

If you're traveling with a baby on a particularly long trip, Ms. Hagaman offers these tips:

— Pack a tote or carry-on bag with plenty of diapers, premoistened towels and perhaps a colorful picture book to amuse your child.

— If your child likes juice, bring some in the new asceptic boxes, which take up less space and don't need refrigeration.

— Give the child a bottle during airplane takeoff and landing to help equalize ear pressure and minimize discomfort.

— If you're planning to rent a car, ask about getting a child's safety seat when you make reservations. Companies usually charge a returnable deposit for the service. Keep in mind that some states have mandatory laws requiring drivers to put children under a certain age in safety seats.

— A parent driving alone with a small child should use a safety seat even if not required by law. With the child securely fastened in a safety seat, you can keep your full attention on the road.

— If you'll be traveling by plane, train or bus, try to pack as much as possible in a suitcase that can be checked. Just keep necessities in a tote or carry-on, preferably with shoulder strap to keep your hands free.

Americans traveling to Hong Kong for purposes of gainful employment or for study at a local university must apply at a British consulate or embassy for the appropriate visa. These visas normally take two months to process and require an employer or academic sponsor. Men bringing their families may apply for dependents' visas for family members at the same time they apply for their employment visa. Women, however, cannot sponsor dependent visas for their husbands. Accompanying husbands must qualify for residence in their own right.

Tourism in Texas still growing

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite the recession, travelers in Texas last year spent $13.7 billion, up 9 percent from the previous year, the Texas Tourist Development Agency said today.

The agency, quoting figures compiled by the U.S. Travel Data Center in Washington, D.C., said the Texas travel industry's rate of growth was five times that of the national travel rate, which grew by only 1.8 percent.

State taxes paid by travelers reached $317 million, the agency said, while another $162 million was paid in local taxes.

Travel-related jobs in Texas increased to 283,917, up 4.1 percent. Nationally, travel employment fell 2 percent.

The travel payroll in Texas was $2.9 billion.

Harris County led the 254 counties in Texas with travel receipts of $3.3 billion. Dallas County had $3.1 billion and Tarrant County $1.2 billion.

Fourteen more counties collected $100 million or more in travel money, including, in order:

Bexar $805 million, Travis $358 million, El Paso $346 million, Cameron $301 million, Nueces $274 million, Galveston $217 million, Hidalgo $189 million, Jefferson $174 million, Potter $165 million, Lubbock $162 million, McLennan $114 million, Midland $112 million, Webb $108 million and Bell $100 million.

Among Charleston's charms is the graceful architecture of its historic homes.

Charleston a city with history

By EVELYN KIERAN
Copley News Service

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Lying on the beautiful little mahogany table in my spacious, gracious room at the Planters' Inn, right across from the old market in Charleston, was a copy of the Junior League cookbook, "Charleston Recipes," with a note suggesting the guest take it home as a souvenir.

Never one to pass an opportunity to expand my appreciation of the culinary arts, I quickly picked it up and started to read. As is often the case, some knowledge of the foods beloved by a community is a great help in understanding the basic culture of that community.

"We are what we eat," said the wise Voltaire. The cookbook seemed a good place to begin the lesson on Charleston.

The first receipe is for St. Cecilia Punch. Previous research had brought forth the information that St. Cecilia, the patron saint of music, was also the patron of Charleston's annual Debutante Ball, an affair so exclusive that the time and place of its happening is kept secret until the very last minute, and its guest list zealously guarded from all but the anointing committee.

THE PUNCH traditionally served at the ball is made as follows:

"Slice six lemons and cover them with a quart of brandy. Allow to steep for 24 hours. Several hours before ready to serve, slice a whole pineapple into the bowl with the lemon, add 1½ pounds sugar, one quart green tea, one pint heavy rum and one quart peach brandy. Stir well. When ready to serve, add four quarts champagne and some sparkling water. Pour over a block of ice to make 80 or 90 servings."

That ought to get the ball off to a good start. Wow!

The rest of the book is filled with anecdotes and receipts that soon had my mouth watering and my appetite rising. The chapter on shrimp, traditionally served from breakfast on through the day, the oyster stews, the cooter pie (that's terrapin to you, Yank) and the rice receipts from Hopping John to Limping Susan reveal a lot of Charleston history.

FRESH FISH, particularly fine shellfish, have always been abundant in the waters that surround the city. The first rice seed was brought to Carolina about 1685 from Madagascar and soon became Carolina's No. 1 crop, thriving in the hot sunny marshlands adjoining the rivers (and disappearing with slavery when cheap hand labor was no longer available).

The frequent call for exotic spices bespeaks a wide sea trade. And the sum total of the volume tells a great deal about the heritage of hospitality which is an integral part of Charleston.

Hospitality — and history — are Charleston's most important crops today, and the two are inexorably intertwined — for which the most casual visitor is eternally grateful. It would be easy to spend a week, or a month, or a lifetime in this most gracious of cities, exploring its past, admiring its present, participating in the joyous life of the town.

AS TO HISTORY, ah, there's the tragedy, the irony — and the interest. In a fine volume, "A Short History of Charleston," author Robert Rosen asks:

"Is Sullivan's Island the Ellis Island of black America? Or is it the scene of Edgar Allen Poe's "The Gold Bug?" Or is it just a nice ocean-front suburb? Is the old Exchange Building a fancy architectural jewel designed to house 18th century assemblies? Or is it the ghoulish prison of the Revolution, the place where George Washington greeted his fellow citizens?"

The answer is that it is all those things. And more.

From the very beginning in 1670, Charlestown, as it was called then, bore the stamp of Restoration England, the merry old England of easy virtue, of great (and often bawdy) theater, of fast horses (and faster women), Charlestonians recreated the luxurious, pleasure-filled lifestyle of their forebears.

EVEN THE TERRIBLE decimation the city suffered in the Civil War never really quelled the spirit. It is a city which has produced great works in all the arts. The city that was Charleston after the war, produced "Porgy and Bess," "The Charleston" of the '20s, the preservation movement and the Spoleto Festival.

Foreign drug laws tough

The Associated Press

While some states have lightened penalties for posession of marijuana and other drugs, government officials warn travelers that most foreign laws remain tough.

In 1981 some 1,250 Americans wound up in foreign jails on drug charges, according to U.S. government statistics.

And once you are arrested overseas there isn't much the U.S. government can do to help, according to warnings from the Customs Service and State Department.

If you are arrested, consular officials can visit you, provide a list of local lawyers, notify your family, and intercede with officials to see that any rights you have under foreign law are protected.

But they cannot get you out of jail, provide lawyers or pay your legal fees or fines.

And if you are arrested in another country, you are not covered by United States laws or the Constitution.

Bicyclists explore Loire Valley

By DALE RUSSAKOFF
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

By day, they called us mesdemoiselles. There we were in our shorts and T-shirts, savoring croissants, French bread and cafe au lait at breakfast, stuffing the leftover baguettes into our packs and biking off into the countryside. We went where our moods moved us — to chateaux, cathedrals and dungeons, to abbeys and antique shops, pedaling through vineyards and wheat fields and whole landscapes of sunflowers.

Just before nightfall, we transformed ourselves. Filthy and famished, we checked into the nearest two-star hotel, locked our 10-speeds in the garage, bathed, donned the one dress we each stashed in our packs and set out for a three-star restaurant where — it never failed — they called us mesdames.

THIS WAS THE vacation my friend Helen and I concocted on a bleak Sunday afternoon last winter. We wanted a trip with all the comforts befitting our station as reasonably well-heeled 30-year-olds, but none of the baggage. No itineraries, no lists of important sights to visit, no binding reservations for hotels, train rides or car rentals. We also wanted all the adventure and serendipity of a college student's trek through Europe, but none of the financial constraints.

"How about bicycling in France?" asked Helen, who on that cold, dreary day hadn't ridden her bike for eight years. "Brilliant!" said I, who hadn't ridden mine in six months.

AT THE TIME, neither of us knew how to repair bicycle gears or brakes or even how to change a flat bicycle tire. While we consider ourselves physically fit (we are fair-weather joggers who run up to four miles a day), we had doubts about enduring rides of up to nine hours a day on unfamiliar terrain. We also had visions of our bicycles being stolen or disfigured in transit.

Improbably, everything went our way. Our bikes arrived intact at Orly Airport and never broke down the entire trip. Neither of us suffered exhaustion or serious muscle strain, the weather was unseasonably cool, the sun shined every day, the franc was cheap (8 to the dollar) and the countryside, to our surprise and delight, turned out to be fairly flat.

WE TRAVELED 210 miles through the Loire Valley, defined by the Loire, Indre and Vienne rivers, a region of rolling hills but few steep ones.

Only once did we fear we had taken on too much — the first day, which turned into a 24-hour ordeal of dragging two crated bicycles through three airports and two train stations, and at last into the Loire country. From then on, we felt largely prepared for bicycling on unfamiliar turf.

In the weeks before our departure, we took crash courses from friends on how to disassemble our handlebars and pedals for packing (Helen bought a new French bicycle a month before our departure), and how to fix flats and change tire tubes. We added such words as "brakes" and "stuck gears" to our French vocabularies.

WE ALSO IGNORED our athletic friends, who claimed we were not fit enough for the journey. But in a token bow to caution, we scrapped our initial plan to bicycle in Brittany, where the hills are steep and the distance between sights is 40 miles or more. Instead we chose the Loire region, the French chateau country that is so filled with beautiful medieval castles, churches, farmhouses and ruins that we could justify a stop every 10 or 15 miles.

We had plotted our route in advance, using finely detailed Michelin maps that show every dirt road, water tower and windmill as well as the major routes and famous chateaux. We figured we would easily bike 30 miles a day and, consulting the Michelin red guide, selected two-star hotels spaced about that far apart for each night.

THE HOTELS accepted reservations by telephone from Washington, with no deposit, so we were free to change plans once en route. This allowed us to ease into a vacation pace.

For the first day, we kept carefully to the routes we had mapped in advance, reaching the chateau at Villandry and its extraordinary formal gardens by midday, and arriving at Langeais, site of a medieval chateau and exquisite tapestries, by early afternoon. We followed a dike road on the south bank of the Loire, appropriately designated by the Michelin map as "picturesque stretch of road." Extending for miles in front of us were lush river valleys, dotted by gray and white stone farmhouses, small churches and every now and then an elegant chateau.

OUR HOTELS WERE well accustomed to bikers, although most guests arrived in more formidable vehicles. Monsieur and Madame Hosten, proprietors of our hotel in Langeais, welcomed us with a warm, "Bonjour mesdemoiselles, les bicyclistes," when we cycled up to their door in our helmets and sweaty clothing.

They and other hotel managers allowed us to lock our bikes in the hotel garages. The Hostens readily reserved a table for us in their restaurant that night, and introduced us to a specialite de la Loire: sparkling white Vouvray wine with a touch of strawberry liqueur, served in the hotel's small garden court.

AFTER A DAY of staying the planned course, we grew eager to explore out-of-the way villages, chateaux and abbeys. As Helen put it, we "got chateaued out." After seeing Azay-le-Rideau, the tiny jewel of a chateau that sits on the Indre River near Langeais, we biked deep into the countryside toward a delicate stone chapel at Champigny-sur-Veude. This tranquil town appeared to draw few tourists, and there were only four other people in the Chapelle St. Louis, marveling alongside us at the magnificent 16th-century Renaissance stained glass windows depicting the life of St. Louis. The windows rival Sainte Chapelle's in Paris.

ON THE WAY to Champigny, and from there to Chinon, where Joan of Arc proved her sainthood in 1429, we traveled farm-to-market roads through huge, glorious fields of sunflowers, wheat, corn and grapes. From the crests of hills, the earth resembled a grand, impressionist canvas, so bathed in light that the sun seemed to radiate from inside the sunflowers as well as the sky.

As the hours and days passed, we became adjusted to life at a bicycle's pace, noticing more scents, more tiny chateaux tucked in the hills, more of everything. We decided that bicycling is perhaps the most pleasing speed at which to view the world. In cars, the small wonders along the way are relegated to a blur. On foot, there is almost too much time to look around and, inevitably, to stare at one's feet. But on a bicycle, a clump of pink, white and violet wildflowers blurs just slightly, shimmering like a small work of art.

EACH DAY OF biking seemed to take us closer to the region, its history and people, ushering us back into the Middle Ages.

Airlines push wider seats

Hearst Feature Service

It could be called the battle of the bulge. The dogfight between airlines has taken a new dimension: wider seats for full-fare business passengers.

British Airways boasts that it has "the world's widest airline seat." TWA advertises "room with a view" where there is "not a crowd in the sky."

The reason for such hyperbole? The airlines have discovered that the best way to attract business passengers is to offer roomy seats far from the madding crowd of coach travel.

"It is quite honestly what I consider the most remarkable marketing success in airlines systems," said David Venz, a spokesman for TWA, which ripped out all of its first-class seats and put them in mid-section cabins reserved primarily for business travelers. First-class travelers, in turn, got sleeper seats that recline like a dentist's chair.

At a time when as many as 80 percent of coach passengers pay discount fares, airlines are especially eager to lure business travelers, a steady clientele willing to pay full fare and even a premium for a bit of extra comfort.

"The businessman wants space. He doesn't want to be crammed up with screaming kids. It's definitely a good selling point," said John Lampl, spokesman for British Airways, which recently invested $12 million in plush 24-inch-wide seats for business-class passengers.

Although most companies won't allow employees to travel first class, many are willing to pay business-class fare so their executives won't arrive at their destinations worn and frazzled, airlines report. "Most Super Club passengers have their costs subsidized by the company, or are independently wealthy," Lampl said.

Executives sometimes pay a hefty price for those few extra inches of stretching room. On British Airways, a roundtrip flight between Seattle and London costs $2,780 for "Super Club" service, more than twice the cost of coach fare.
