Ask Us

Q. — Will the newspaper print the high school and junior high honor rolls for the six-weeks?

A. — The junior high has indicated it will release a six-weeks honor roll, but problems with the computer printout for Snyder High School have prevented them from having an honor roll until mid-semester.

Dow Jones average falls 110 points

Prices plunge in foreign markets

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock markets turned bearish today a week after their collapse as prices plunged in foreign markets, and the Dow Jones industrial average fell more than 110 points in the first 1½ hours of trading.

Stock prices fell in Tokyo and London and the negative sentiment continued in New York, where declining issues outnumbered advancing ones about 13-to-1.

In Washington, President Reagan opened talks with congressional leaders on deficit-reduction measures given extra urgency by the weakness in stock markets.

The Dow industrials fell 508 points last Monday, by far the biggest one-day decline in history, as the value of all U.S. stocks fell by more than half a trillion dollars.

The Dow average was down 110.58 points at 1,840.18 at 11 a.m. EST in the first day of trading after its biggest weekly decline in history. The average lost nearly 300 points last week.

About 110.3 million shares were traded in the first hour, compared to 72.5 million in the same period last Friday.

Last week's panic was tied to a wide variety of concerns, including worries about the weakness of the dollar and rising foreign interest rates.

Analysts said world stock markets were trying to achieve equilibrium.

"There is no consensus as to what value is in the stock market. That punctures confidence in a day-to-day sense. Once that breaks down then you have enormous volatility because then you don't have an anchor," said Robert Hormats, vicé chairman of Goldman Sachs International Corp.

Also in New York today, interest rates fell and the dollar moved off the lows it reached in overseas trading. Analysts suspected central banks had intervened to support the U.S. currency.

The dollar moved off the lows it reached in overseas trading, and analysts suspected central banks had intervened to support the U.S. currency. In early domestic activity, the dollar was trading at 141.70 Japanese yen and 1.7715 West German marks, down moderately from Friday's closing figures.

Meanwhile, in early New York trading, the yield on the government's bellwether 30-year bond fell to 8.93 percent, while its price jumped about $16.25 per $1,000 in face value.

The share index on the London Stock Exchaneell nearly 110 points in the first minutes of trading today, responding to a record drop in Hong Kong.

Trading was hectic in the first session since a four-day suspension.

Marchers advance Saturday

Snyder, Graham on to regional

The Black and Gold Snyder High School marching band, a perennial winner at district marching contests, was again chosen to advance Saturday after competition at Abilene's Shotwell Stadium.

In addition, twirling solo and ensemble competitions were held at the Abilene event and Snyder's Shannon Warren earned a first place designation.

SHS competed in the south zone competition for Region 2 against two other District 2-AAAA schools, Sweetwater and San Angelo Lake View.

The band was in competition also against schools marching in a north zone contest for Region 2 in Wichita Falls.

From the two events, Snyder and Graham were chosen to advance to the regional marching contest this Saturday in Wichita Falls.

At the district contest, Snyder and Sweetwater earned Division I ratings while Lake View was given a Division 3.

Marching bands were placed in one of five designations: Division I, superior; Division II, excellent; Division III, good; Division IV, fair; and Division V, needs significant improvement.

From Saturday's regional event, two more schools will be chosen to advance to the state marching contest in Austin. It will begin the week of Nov. 9.

The band is under the direction of Walter Reneau, assisted by Steve Hanson.

The band won sweepstakes honors last year, indicating a Division I in concert, sight reading and marching.

'Much Ado' Tuesday...

'Company' to offer student workshops

The actors which comprise The Acting Company, the "touring arm" of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, will offer two workshops for drama students at both Snyder High School and Western Texas College Tuesday.

They have agreed to offer the instruction as part of their visit here. The touring troupe is to arrive in Snyder early Tuesday.

The group will be in performance Tuesday night in Worsham Auditorium at 8 p.m. with their version of "Much Ado About Nothing."

Tickets for the play, updated to 1930s Cuba, will be on sale at the chamber of commerce office through 5 p.m. Tuesday. They will go on sale at the box office at 7 p.m.

Tickets are priced at $10 for reserved seats and $5 general admission. As of Monday morning, all reserved seats in the center section had been sold, but good reserved seating was said still available in both side sections.

Patron tickets, with approximately one-half of these said still available, are offered also for $25. The price includes a reserved parking spot and valet parking.

The Snyder performance has been secured through grant monies obtained by the fine arts committee of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce.

The Acting Company was founded in 1972 and now is in its 16th national tour. In addition to communities the size of Snyder, it has annual dates scheduled in such cities as Houston, Los Angeles and New York, where it is based.

Anti-drug film set at six elementaries

A film will be shown at each elementary campus Monday at 7 p.m. as part of the effort here to curb the use of alcohol and drugs among the young.

The film, entitled "Dick and Jane," is being sponsored by a new parents group, Rambo for Kids. It traces the lives of the characters "Dick and Jane" to what is described as a "disturbing conclusion."

A community-wide rally is due here Thursday also as part of events related to drug awareness in Snyder.

The rally will be in Worsham Auditorium at 7 p.m. and will feature local and area speakers familiar with the dangers of drug use.

It is sponsored by McDonald's, the Snyder Daily News and Snyder Drug Health Mart.

Church to host convention

Snyder's St. Elizabeth Catholic Church will be the host this weekend for the fifth annual fall convention of the Lubbock Diocese.

Speakers, leadership training, religious workshops, a business session and the installation of officers are planned during the two-day event Friday and Saturday.

Registration will be held from 2:45-3:15 p.m. Friday at the church. Assisting with refreshments during the two days will be St. John's Catholic Church in Hermleigh.

At 3:30 p.m. Friday, "Introduction to Leadership" will be the topic of guest speaker Steve Hay of Lubbock, followed by leadership training beginning at 4 p.m. from Vickie Lyons, Cheryl Adams and Molly Martinez.

After Liturgy and an evening meal to begin at 7 p.m., more leadership training is scheduled from 8 until 9 p.m. Friday.

Events on Saturday begin with registration from 8:30-9:15 a.m. The morning session will include an address from Dr. Jordan Grooms, Director of Christian Formation, Diocese of Amarillo. His topic is entitled "Look To Mary."

A business meeting is slated from 11 a.m. to noon.

After the noon meal, two workshops will be held concurrently, beginning at 1:15 p.m. One is entitled "Evangelization: Moving Onward." It will be conducted by Sr. Elena Gonzales and Maria Elena Arellano. The other one to be given by Deacon Behnke is entitled "An Enemy of Love."

At 2:45 p.m., a pilgrimmage to Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church will begin. At Our Lady, the closing Liturgy and installation of officers will be held.

The Litury will begin at 4 p.m. It will be officiated by Bishop Michael Sheehan, Monsignor Gonzales and priests of the diocese. The convention will adjourn at 5 p.m.

State's exit testing due here beginning Tuesday

Tuesday will begin two days of testing for Snyder High School juniors as they are given the state-mandated exit level TEAMS test.

Students must pass the test--consisting of two sections, mathematics and English language arts--to be eligible to receive a high school diploma in Texas.

The math test will be given to local juniors and to students who have failed one or more portions of the test Tuesday. The English language arts exam will follow on Wednesday.

Both tests will be given at the Scurry County Coliseum.

This year's juniors must meet higher standards on the TEAMS test. In July, the State Board of Education increased from 39 to 50 the number of items students must answer correctly in order to pass each section of the exam. There are 72 items on each part of the test.

Seniors taking the test again this year will be required to meet the standards in effect when they were juniors.

This marks the third year the test has been given. It was implemented as part of House Bill 72 mandates.

Across the state, it is estimated more than 200,000 high school students will be tested. Of this number, state officials say 15,000 seniors will retake the section of the exam they failed as juniors. Approximately 330 students who did not graduate last year because they failed the test have registered to retake it.

Students have four opportunities to pass the exit-level test, in the fall and spring of both their junior and senior years. The spring administration is scheduled for May 3-4.

Local

Court meets

Scurry County commissioners met briefly Monday morning to pay bills but were to reconvene at 12:30 p.m. to hear a management proposal for Cogdell Memorial Hospital from representatives of St. Mary of the Plains Hospital in Lubbock.

The Cogdell Board of Managers and medical staff members were also scheduled to attend the meeting, which was to last until about 2 p.m.

Luncheon set

The Scurry County Museum will honor volunteers at a noon luncheon Wednesday at the museum. Men and women who would like to serve as volunteers are invited also. There is no charge, but those planning to attend are asked to make reservations by calling 573-6107 by 4 p.m. Tuesday.

HHS Boosters

The Hermleigh Booster Club will meet at Hermleigh High School at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Final plans for the Halloween Carnival, scheduled for Thursday this year, will be discussed.

Jr. high game

The junior high eighth grade girls volleyball team and a team comprised of faculty members will play Monday at 7 p.m. at the junior high gym in a fund raiser for the student activity fund.

Tickets on sale at the door will be $2 for adults and $1 for pre-schoolers and students. Concessions will be available.

The teams will play the best five out of seven matches.

No food bank

The Snyder Ministerial Alliance Food Bank, located in the basement of First Baptist Church, will not be open Tuesday due to a shortage of food and funds.

The food bank will be open on Tuesday, Nov. 3, according to coordinator Bill Schiebel.

Boosters due

The Snyder High School All Sports Booster Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the SHS student center to view Friday's game film of the Tiger-San Angelo Lake View game.

In China...

Farmers to transfer land

BEIJING (AP) — China will allow farmers to transfer land, carrying further the agricultural reform policies that have resulted in the dismantling of communes and the spread of family farms, it was announced today.

Du Runsheng, director of the Communist Party's Rural Policy Research Office, said at a news conference that farmers will have the right to freely negotiate and receive payment for land rights.

Du met Chinese and foreign reporters on the second day of the 13th national Communist Party Congress, in which senior leader Deng Xiaoping is seeking affirmation for his nine-year-old policy of sweeping economic reforms.

Du was joined by Gao Shangquan, vice minister for the State Commission for Restructuring the Economy, who said China is pushing ahead in labor and management reforms but will move slowly on lifting price controls.

The nearly 2,000 congress delegates held group discussions today on a keynote speech Sunday by acting party chief Zhao Ziyang, who gave unqualified support to Deng's reform policies.

The proposed policy on land transfers is part of a major drive to find an outlet for surplus labor in the Chinese countryside, where 800 million of the nation's 1 billion people live.

About 70 million people have left the fields for industry this decade, and the government aims to reduce the farming population by 100 million by 1995.

Du said farmers who want to leave the land would be able to transfer it to people willing to fulfill their production contracts. He emphasized that the state will continue to own all land.

No time frame has been set for the new policy.

Since Deng's government abandoned the commune system around 1980, family farmers have signed contracts that commit them to produce a certain amount for the state and allow them to sell anything above that at private markets.

Until now, there has been no formal system for subcontracting land when peasants found jobs in industry.

Price reform is regarded as one of the toughest and most important problems facing the Chinese. Large government subsidies have kept prices of many basic commodities artificially low and resulted in shortages.

The government began removing price controls and eliminating subsidies in 1984, but has limited the changes because of widespread unhappiness over double-digit inflation for many necessities.

"We will persist in efforts, but proceed in a steady manner to maintain basic stability of prices," Gao said.

In a departure from the last congress in 1982, foreign reporters were allowed to attend Sunday's opening session.

However, today's session was not televised or open to reporters, and a three-paragraph dispatch from the official Xinhua News Agency provided the only information on it.

Zhao praised the 83-year-old Deng, China's undisputed leader since 1979, as a man of "foresight and sagacity" who initiated a "major historical leap" in Marxist ideology.

The speech implicitly placed Deng on equal footing with revolutionary giant Mao Tse-tung.

After the party congress ends Nov. 1, the Central Committee will meet to announce the party's new leadership.

Deng is expected to step down from the Politburo Standing Committee, the pinnacle of power in Communist China, along with two ailing, aged committee members.

They are expected to be replaced by younger, reform-minded officials.

Zhao, 68, is the only member of the five-member committee expected to retain his seat, although Deng is expected to hold on to his other key post, head of the Central Military Commission.

Jail systems told to reduce count

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly one in four U.S. jails with more than 100 inmates was under court order in mid-1986 to reduce prisoner populations, government figures show.

Jail population rose to 274,444 as of June 30, 1986, up from 223,551 three years earlier, a 23 percent rise, the Bureau of Justice Statistics said Sunday.

The overall occupancy rate in the nation's large local jail systems last year was running 8 percent ahead of rated capacity, the study concluded.

As of the middle of last year, 23 percent of the jails in systems containing more than 100 prisoners were under court order to reduce the number of inmates they housed.

A total of 166 jails, or 27 percent of the jails in large systems of more than 100 inmates, were under court order to improve conditions of confinement, with 86 percent of them cited for crowded living units.

The government found that local jails increasingly are being used to handle some of the spillover from crowded state prison systems.

The number of inmates held in jails because of overcrowding in other jurisdictions jumped 68 percent from mid-1983 to mid-1986. Some 7,400 inmates were being held in local jails last year for other authorities, mostly state prison systems, compared to 4,400 in 1983.

As of June 30, 1986, some 26 percent of jails in jurisdictions with more than 100 prisoners held inmates because of crowded conditions elsewhere, compared with 22 percent in 1985 and 21 percent in 1983.

The male inmate population in jails in mid-1986 topped a quarter of a million for the first time and men constituted more than 90 percent of all jail inmates.

Dear Abby

Man's Carelessness Turns Golden Treasure Into Trash

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago I purchased some gold coins, which represented several thousand dollars. It's not a great fortune, but I'm not a wealthy man and could not afford to throw it away. I foolishly kept these gold coins hidden in a shoe box in my closet.

I had not told my wife about it, and as you may have already guessed, she cleaned the closet and threw out the shoe box!

The morning after our trash was collected, I realized what had happened, so I went to the trash disposal company at 6 a.m. I was told that the trash collected the day before was already at the landfill, and my chances for retrieving the shoe box were one in a million.

Nevertheless, I went to the landfill where the foreman told me that had I followed the truck the previous day (as one woman had done to search for her wallet) I may have had a chance. He informed me that the only other alternative was to rent a bulldozer ($65 an hour) and sift through the 40,000 cubic feet of rubbish. He said a woman had recently hired the bulldozer hoping to find the $200,000 she had thrown out by mistake. (She never found it.)

Abby, I'm sure many of your readers have squirreled away small fortunes in their homes, so please print this. If my letter saves just one person's fortune, my loss will not have been entirely in vain.

LEARNED THE HARD WAY

DEAR LEARNED: Thanks for giving me the opportunity to dispense some valuable advice: Despite the restrictions on the hours of accessibility, the ideal place to keep valuables is in a safe-deposit box at the bank.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am 51 and my husband is 58. We have been married for 10 years. It's the second time around for both of us. What's bugging me? He always uses the words "I," "my" and "mine" instead of saying "we" or "ours."

In conversations with others, it's I, I, I. It's driving me up the wall. What are your thoughts on this? I love the guy.

WOE IS ME

DEAR WOE: I think it's time you looked this guy in the eye and said: "I love you, but I have had it up to here with your chronic 'I' trouble. Just listen to all the 'I's' and 'me's' in your conversation and give me a break because I feel slighted."

• • •

DEAR ABBY: You wrote: "Many have written to say they are sorry they quit taking piano lessons, but not one person ever wrote to say that he or she was glad they quit."

Well, let me be the first. From age 5 to 13, my mother forced me to take piano lessons. I advanced all the way to "The Skater's Waltz." Then one day, my teacher yelled at my mother, "Madame, you are wasting my time, your money and your daughter's energy. Give up!"

Abby, I still adore that teacher's memory. That honest, fearless man taught my mother and me that talent need not be musical.

I am now a happy artist. I draw, paint, create and guide others to be creative. I'm glad I was allowed to quit taking lessons. Today, I wouldn't touch a piano with a paint rag.

MRS. H.F. KING,
LAWTON, OKLA.

DEAR MRS. KING: You're not the only one who wrote to say, "I'm glad I quit." I received letters from readers — some now in their 70s — who still remember the pain of having their fingers whacked with a ruler, the torture of performing at recitals, the odious halitosis of their teachers, and the resentment of being forced to practice through their tears.

All right, I asked for it. Enough, already.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

M&F Plastic Pipe has variety of sizes

M & F Plastic Pipe is your locally owned dealer for polyethelene pipe, sales and rental, with a wide range of sizes and pressure ratings.

Polyethelene pipe is now replacing steel pipe and PVC pipe in many areas. It is much more versatile than PVC and more economical than steel. It's flexibility makes it easier to handle, therefore saving you time and labor. The durability of this pipe has been proven under all kinds of weather conditions and it can be respooled and re-laid several times without damage to the pipe.

They have spooling trailers, reel trailers and a spooling truck to handle pipe up to three inches. Pipe that is four inches or larger comes in joints and must be laid by hand. It is "welded" together by using an electric iron that melts each end of the pipe and then it fuses when put together. This eliminates the worry about leaks from bad threads or not being tight enough such as in steel pipe or the hassle of cleaning and gluing as in PVC.

Poly pipe can be used for water lines in homes, stock tanks, water wells, water supply for drilling, transfer lines, gas lines or production flow lines.

They will lay new or used pipe, provide you with valves, fittings, ditching, etc. to suit your needs and will also repair your lines, relocate it or replace it if needed.

M & F Plastic Pipe is owned and operated by Ricky and Teresa Trammell. Please feel free to call them or Darby K. Scott, manager, for prices or information at 573-8612.

Roemer offers 'helpful role' during transition

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — U.S. Rep. Charles E. "Buddy" Roemer III, a brash reformer whose "Roemer Revolution" toppled three-term Gov. Edwin Edwards, says his first act as governor-elect will be a smooth transition of power.

Edwards, a controversial Cajun populist who was seeking an unprecedented fourth term, gave up his campaign with a flourish Sunday after finishing second in the state primary.

"He may have the Capitol now if he wants it," an emotional Edwards told stunned supporters who had gathered at a hotel for what they hoped would be a victory party.

"It's the end of an era — in a positive way," said Roemer, a 44-year-old Democrat and son of a former commissioner in the Edwards administration.

Edwards, 60, assured by Saturday's primary of a spot in a Nov. 21 runoff, gave up the race after two other major challengers said they would back Roemer, who came from last place in the final weeks of the campaign.

Edwards, Louisiana's only three-term governor, pledged full cooperation with Roemer for the remainder of his term, which ends in March. Edwards had never lost a bid for public office in a career dating to 1954.

Edwards' third term was marked by his acquittal in a federal racketeering trial, a deep statewide recession triggered by depressed oil and gas prices, sharp cuts in the state budget, and a deficit pegged as high as $600 million.

Edwards, a former city councilman, state senator and congressman, was governor from 1972 to 1980. Barred by the state constitution from a third, consecutive term, Edwards returned in 1983 and beat Republican Gov. Dave Treen.

Until early last week, Edwards had said he expected to win a runoff against U.S. Rep. Bob Livingston, the only Republican in the non-partisan primary.

With all the votes totaled, Roemer had 522,344 votes or 33 percent. Edwards tallied 452,513 or 28 percent.

Livingston, who finished third with 297,875 votes or 19 percent, said he would support Roemer.

Secretary of State Jim Brown, the state's top election official who ran fifth in the governor's race, said he would declare Roemer governor-elect once returns are official.

Roemer said the race, in which five major candidates spent more than $13 million, turned around in the last 10 days when voters decided he could win despite refusing large contributions and donations.

Klansmen march in rain amid jeers

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — A march by 35 Ku Klux Klan members in the rain down the Texas side of State Line Avenue prompted jeers by some onlookers and curious stares by others.

Klan officials also held a membership rally at Spring Lake Park at Texarkana, Texas on Saturday.

The Texas-Arkansas border runs down the middle of State Line Avenue. Klan members marched about half a mile up the Texas side of the avenue, and then marched back on the same side of the street.

The Klan had not requested permission to march on the Arkansas side of the street, officials said.

Marchers ranged from an elderly woman walking beside a mother with a baby carriage to bearded men dressed in the trademark white robes of the Klan.

Six extra officers had been assigned to escort the marchers, said Texarkana, Texas, police Capt. Duke Schofield.

Methodist court rules...

Oral Roberts not a minister

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — There's been no comment as yet from the Oral Roberts Ministeries on the ruling by the United Methodist Church's highest court that the Tulsa televangelist is not a minister in the denomination.

"I haven't seen that story and there won't be any comment until normal business hours resume this week," Jan Dargatz, spokeswoman for the ministry, said Sunday.

The church's Judicial Council ruled that Roberts' position in the denomination is akin to that of a "lay pastor," and that he is not a minister, said Robert Lear of United Methodist News Service.

"He has frequently been identified as a United Methodist minister, and this clarifies that this designation is simply erroneous," Lear said Saturday.

He said Roberts would continue to be a local elder in Tulsa's Boston Avenue United Methodist Church, the individual church in which Roberts and his wife hold membership.

The Judicial Council, which met in San Francisco, heard the case of Roberts and others in his position in response to a request by the Oklahoma Annual Conference, a regional body of the church.

Although that request did not mention Roberts by name, it was made about the same time the church's Memphis regional conference criticized the evangelist's fund-raising tactics as "offensive, inappropriate and objectionable" and "harmful to the reputation and good will" of the denomination, said Lear.

The resolution was adopted by lay and clergy delegates to the conference after Roberts' controversial plea for funds earlier this year in which he said God would call him home — take his life — if he didn't raise $8 million by March 31. He said he raised in excess of $8 million.

Lear said Friday's night's ruling and the Memphis regional conference criticism "both represented some dissatisfaction and question about his fund-raising techniques."

Roberts joined the United Methodist denomination in 1968. His ministerial ordination from the Pentecostal Holiness Church was recognized by the church, and he became a United Methodist local elder.

That ministerial ordination was discontinued by the United Methodists the following year, but Roberts continued to be referred to as a United Methodist minister and local elder.

The Judicial Council ruled, however, that local eldership is not a ministerial position in the denomination.

Lear said the practice of using local elders and deacons were phased out between 1964-68.

Lear said he expected the ruling would have little impact on Roberts' evangelical organization.

"He's never really had that much involvement with the United Methodist Church. My guess is that people who put great faith in him will continue to do so and that people who had serious reservations about what he was doing would continue to do so," said Lear.

The ruling follows the withdrawal of certification in July from Oral Roberts University by the accrediting agency of the United Methodist Church.

That decision by the denomination's University Senate meant that students who received their theological training at the university no longer were eligible for ordination in the United Methodist Church.

Two suits to try

By James Jacoby

This week I invite you to watch two fictional declarers at work, Willy Nilly and Careful Charlie. Their counterparts can be found the world over. Which of these players do you most resemble?

Willy Nilly watched his opponents take the first three heart tricks and then switch to a club. He rose with the ace and made what for him could be considered an advanced play. He played his diamond queen, and a low diamond to the ace, and then ruffed a diamond with the spade 10. If diamonds were 4-2 (the most likely division), he could then draw trumps ending in dummy and cash two more diamond tricks for his contract. Alas, although diamonds were 3-3, trumps divided 4-1, so Willy was out of luck.

When Careful Charlie played the same deal, he too realized there was a way of protecting against the likely 4-2 diamond split, but he was careful enough to first find out how the trumps were divided. After the defenders took their heart tricks and then played a club, Charlie won the ace and played a spade to the nine. Then he cashed dummy's jack of spades. When East showed out on the second spade, Charlie knew that his only chance to make the contract rested with the less likely 3-3 diamond division. So he drew trumps and played three rounds of diamonds. When all followed on the diamonds, he discarded his losing clubs to make 10 tricks. Of course, if both defenders had followed to the second round of spades, Charlie would then have played the diamonds just as Willy Nilly had.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Legal Poteen stirs moonshine busters

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The government has taken more than a casual interest in the distillery run by Alvin Patterson and Sam McCrossan.

The two Irishmen are brewing and marketing a drink they call The Poteen. And poteen, as customs officers point out somewhat aggrievedly, is Ireland's brand of moonshine.

The brew looks, smells and tastes like poteen. The difference is that it's legal. But to get the license, Patterson and McCrossan had to wage a protracted battle against officialdom.

The idea was born, appropriately enough, in an alcoholic haze.

"About a year ago we were in the pub having a few drinks and as the crack (fun) increased, we got this idea to market a legal drink called poteen," Patterson, 39, recalled.

Patterson, a contractor, and McCrossan, a printer, are both blessed with the Belfastman's fondness for tweaking officialdom's tail. They freely admit they're no strangers to illicit liquor.

"I travel around Ireland, and I'd have picked up the odd bottle of poteen, like any Irishman," says Patterson.

His first step was to visit moonshiners in the countryside of counties Tyrone, Donegal and Antrim, searching for "that special taste, something we could call The Taste of Ireland."

The real thing, made from grain, fruit or potatoes, is supposed to smell faintly like a compost heap and slide down the throat "like a torchlight procession," as the Irish saying goes.

Poteen, usually pronounced po-CHEEN and sometimes spelled poitin, meaning "little pot," has always played a role in the Irish national sport of outwitting authority.

Patterson and McCrossan began brewing their product last month at a distillery in Ballymena, 33 miles north of Belfast, and soon attracted the interest of the authorities.

"It is our opinion that to describe a compound of spirit as The Poteen, poteen being the name in Ireland for a spirit being illegally produced ... is misleading," said a letter from Northern Ireland customs.

Patterson and McCrossan responded that their brew would not set a precedent, citing other products marketed here: a whisky called Sheepdip, a Hungarian wine called Bull's Blood, a perfume called Opium.

Customs conceded the point, but raised a new roadblock. The label showed a poteen still against a mountain backdrop. That, the authorities maintained, falsely suggested the drink was brewed out of doors. So out went the mountains.

The first 600 bottles were produced carrying a label on which an anonymous 18th-century doctor from Fermanagh is quoted as extolling the virtues of poteen: "killeth fleshworms, cureth ye scald of ye hed, keeps back old age, helps dijestion, enlighteneth ye heart," and so on.

This brought in the health department, worrying that some gullible soul might overindulge for medicinal purposes. So the label has to be changed.

Customs investigator Henry Snodden says the case is now closed.

Houston becomes smuggling hub

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston and South Texas appear to be a growing hub for illegal weapons trafficking, says a top official of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

"Houston is the biggest case-producing office that ATF has," Bernard LaForest, chief of the bureau's firearms enforcement division, said Saturday.

LaForest, along with Houston Police Chief Lee Brown, are among local federal officials taking part in a meeting of the International Association of Chiefs of Police in Toronto.

Among other things, participants are looking for ways to reduce global problems such as drug abuse, terrorism and AIDS.

He also said weapons deals can help sweeten already fat profits for narcotics traffickers.

Vote Yes
Proposition 8
PROGRESS
Looking to the future.
Tuesday, Nov. 3
Texas State Constitutional Amendment Election
Proposition 8 on the ballot may have a direct impact on Scurry County and efforts to locate a Texas Department of Corrections facility here. The proposition calls for the issuance of up to $500 million in general obligation bonds to finance projects for three state agencies--including the TDC.
This is the most economical method of financing for the state. Prisons will be built in Texas because of federal court orders. Scurry County citizens should again show their support for prisons by voting Yes on Proposition 8.
Members of the Economic Development Committee of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce believes that a big turnout of votes in favor of Proposition 8 will once again be a signal to TDC officials of local citizens' interest in the prison system.

Just when Bush thought he had it right, Reagan changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush got his tax line down just right. "I am not going to raise your taxes. Period," the vice president said, climbing on board Reaganomics a few days before President Reagan hopped off.

Bush, needing a way to separate himself discreetly from the president he's served for seven years, woke up last week, not just separated — he was left hanging.

His only consolation might be that he wasn't the only presidential candidate to suffer from the actions of a friend.

Rep. Jack Kemp twisted in the wind much of the week while his good friend Jeane Kirkpatrick publicly pondered a presidential bid generally seen as offering an alternative to the New York congressman.

With friends like these, Bush and Kemp have no need for enemies.

AP analysis

Mrs. Kirkpatrick, the former U.N. ambassador who won the hearts of conservatives with her tough rhetoric toward Marxists the world over, announced Sunday she had decided not to bet into the 1988 race.

But the prospect of a Kirkpatrick candidacy had kept the Kemp campaign in a dither. They put out word that Kirkpatrick was a closet liberal, soft on abortion, a self-described welfare-stater.

And the only thing the Kemp operatives achieved was a front-page chiding from the Manchester Union Leader, the New Hampshire newspaper that is a formidable force in the state's first-in-the-nation presidential primary.

One of the reasons Mrs. Kirkpatrick was described as reluctant to get into the race was her friendship with Kemp and her concern that her candidacy would destroy his chances for the nomination.

Perhaps even more chilling to Kemp than the potential competition was the fact that people the congressman hoped to attract always seemed to be looking for a stronger horse.

First there was the flirtation by another Kemp friend, Patrick Buchanan, who finally decided against running. Then Mrs. Kirkpatrick.

Even a Kemp ally like conservative fund-raiser Richard Viguerie has some problems with his style.

"Jack Kemp does not come across in a tough, forceful way," said Viguerie, "he's going to have to get tougher."

The vice president has problems of his own, the latest coming from the man in whose shadow he has served for seven years.

Always viewed with suspicion by fiscal conservatives, Bush took a tough anti-tax line when he announced his presidential candidacy Oct. 12.

"I am not going to raise your taxes. Period," he said.

That sounded unequivocal until he was interviewed on Cable News Network 48 hours later and dropped the "period."

"What I have said is if I were convinced that all the spending that could possibly be constrained or cut had taken place, then and only then would I consider a tax increase," he said.

When asked if he weren't waffling, the vice president said his position was the same as Reagan's and he returned to declaring he wouldn't raise taxes. Period.

Then Reagan waffled.

Opening his news conference last Thursday night, the president said he was ready for budget negotiations with congressional leaders and that everything, including taxes, would be on the table.

Bush, campaigning in Iowa the next day, was asked about taxes again.

"I'll support the administration," Bush said. "My view when I become president is there won't be any tax increase."

EDITOR'S NOTE — Donald M. Rothberg is the chief political writer of The Associated Press.

Report tougher on Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Liberal members of the congressional Iran-Contra committees have managed to write harsher criticisms of President Reagan into the latest version of the committees' findings, according to a published report.

Spokesmen for the Senate and House committees, however, declined to confirm details of a Sunday New York Times report which said the most recent draft accuses the Reagan administration of an attempted cover-up.

"While the president was denying any illegality, his subordinates were engaging in a cover-up," it quotes the summary as saying.

Senate committee spokesman Lance Morgan said the report, which contains more than 25 chapters, is still being prepared and revised, but he added, "I'm not going to comment on what's in it."

The committees investigating the sale of arms to Iran and the diversion of proceeds from those sales to the Nicaraguan rebels originally planned to release their closely guarded findings this Friday.

But declassification by the White House and printing of the report will delay its release for about two weeks, House committee spokesman Bob Havel said Sunday.

Havel, too, declined any comment on the Times report.

The Times said liberal members of the committee toughened language on Reagan's role. Two weeks earlier, conservatives had secured major changes in the report, including deletion of comparisons to the Watergate scandal that brought down President Nixon in 1974, the Times said.

The Times report did not disclose who provided the newspaper with material from an executive summary that will accompany the full report.

The newspaper quoted the summary as saying Reagan "created or at least tolerated an environment where those who knew of the diversion believed with absolute certainty that they were carrying out the president's policies."

Another quoted paragraph from the summary says: "Officials viewed the law not as a boundary for their actions but as an impediment to their goals. When the goals and the laws collided, the law gave way."

Illnesses may be unrelated

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My father recently died of primary amyloidosis at age 56. He had symptoms of manic depression for 15 years. The last two years, he also showed very mild symptoms of Alzheimer's disease. Is there any connection between these diseases?

DEAR READER — Amyloidosis is a chronic disease of unknown cause that is characterized by deposits, in various organs, of a waxy starchy protein called amyloid. The condition often occurs in association with bone tumors, tuberculosis, rheumatoid arthritis and bowel inflammation. Amyloidosis can affect skin, muscle, lungs, heart and liver; it is especially common in kidneys.

As the amyloid deposits increase in size and number, they affect organ functioning. Heroic procedures, such as kidney transplants, may have to be performed to maintain life. At present, there is no specific treatment for amyloidosis, other than therapy for the disease with which it is associated.

Bipolar mood disorders, otherwise known as manic-depressive illness, do not usually accompany amyloidosis, nor do Alzheimer's patients show amyloid deposits in the brain. However, there is a remote possibility that your father's amyloidosis could have affected his central nervous system. More likely, your father had two separate conditions. In any case, a postmortem examination would have enabled a pathologist to determine with certainty whether your father's mental changes were the result of amyloidosis.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm 31 and work the 11-p.m.-to-7-a.m. shift. Does it make any health difference if I sleep eight straight hours, or three in the morning and five in the evening?

DEAR READER — From a health standpoint, you are probably no better off sleeping a full eight hours than splitting up your sleeping time. The human body has a requirement for sleep that varies from six to eight hours. Some people seem to feel refreshed after two or three short sleep cycles.

Nonetheless, many people, whether by habit or genetic programming, become irritable or ill if they are prevented from getting all of their sleep in a single dose. If you feel comfortable and are alert with your sleep pattern, then it is OK for you to continue it.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Can humans get heartworm from dogs?

DEAR READER — Heartworm is transmitted to dogs from mosquitoes. Humans are not involved in the life cycle of the parasite and appear to be immune to the infection.

If you have questions about HIATAL HERNIA, you can get answers in Dr. Gott's new Health Report on the subject. Send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Hiatal Hernia.

Your Birthday

Oct. 27, 1987

Take time in the year ahead to increase your knowledge by studying subjects that you find enjoyable. These pleasurable interests could have a profitable result.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You may become involved in an incident today where you'll be tempted to meet pettiness with pettiness. However, to your credit, you'll rise above it. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If there are any inequities in your arrangements with others today, it could set the stage for future problems. Establish the fair example.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Put friendship above your materialistic concerns in an involvement with a pal today. Even if this person comes off better now, all will balance out later.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Performance, not appearance, is what really counts today. If you extend your best effort, don't worry about what associates may think.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A wily antagonist might try to put you down in front of your friends today. Treat this person's comments with indifference, as if a pop gun were being fired at a battleship.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Something that has been disturbing you can now be changed for the better. You might not be able to do so in one fell swoop, but it can be done a step at a time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Say what needs to be said to a friend today, but do it with tenderness and understanding. Criticism won't resolve the issue.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Unfortunately, not everyone with whom you'll be doing business today will be as honest as you. Be on guard so that people won't take advantage of you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your ability to awaken the spirit of cooperation in others is your greatest asset today. Enthusiastic allies can help do what you can't do alone.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In situations where you are motivated by unselfishness, things will work out better than you anticipate today. Be a giver, not a taker.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll adapt yourself with ease today, even with unfamiliar groups in unfamiliar surroundings. However, a pal who lacks your talent for fitting in may be envious.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Overcome uncertainties and meet your challenges head-on today. What appears to be overwhelming in your imagination will turn out to be a paper dragon.

USDA: farm bill helped farmers stay afloat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food Security Act of 1985 has been moderately successful in meeting goals set by the Reagan administration, the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service says.

But the agency analysis, prepared by economist Herb Moses, says that while the nation's agricultural situation appears to be brightening, with lower costs and "continued government support leading to high farm incomes," there is still a perception of widespread depression.

"Farm legislation has provided safe harbor for many farmers to restructure or pay down their debts, and ease the transition to a more competitive world market," the report said. "Legislation did not guarantee survival to farmers who were drowning in a sea of debt."

The report added: "Farmers who owed large debts, had small or negative cash flows and held land that in many cases was worth substantially less than they paid for it had no choice but to default on loans or be foreclosed."

Many banks are now feeling the ripple effect of those defaults, and a record number are forecast to close this year, many of them rural and agricultural banks.

"The conclusion: Farm legislation is working for the sector as a whole, although the cost is high and some farmers are still in financial difficulty. Government assistance has not rescued all farmers," the report said. "But to many viable farm operations, it has provided the assistance needed to get through a time when world competition could have put them out of business."

According to the analysis, the Reagan administration states three major goals for the 1985 legislation:

—Flexible commodity price supports to allow greater export potential.

—Consistency among commodity programs and policies on trade.

—Reduced government spending on agriculture.

As sharply lower supports and a less-expensive dollar took hold, U.S. farm commodities became cheaper for foreign customers. The law also provided export subsidies for selected markets through the Export Enhancement Program (EEP) and Targeted Export Assistance (TEA).

The tonnage of U.S. commodity exports is expected to be up 18 percent this year and the dollar value up 7 percent.

Consistency among programs, another goal, has shown some improvement, but there are some flaws.

"Despite acreage cutbacks, commodity production remains large, mainly because of good weather," the report said. "However, programs for export assistance (EEP and TEA, for example) are in place to whittle down large stocks."

On the plus side, a new conservation framework in the 1985 law is helping take millions of acres of highly erodible land from crop production.

"Protecting the land resource also reduces acres in crops, bringing about consistency between conservation and income support programs," the report said.

The third goal of reduced spending, has "not yet been fulfilled" but is drawing closer, the report showed. Commodity program outlays in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, 1986, were a record $25.8 billion. In the year just past, spending on those programs dropped to $23.1 billion, and the forecast for 1987-88 is about $16 billion.

Meanwhile, the net cash income of farmers — the difference between gross cash income from farming operations, including government payments, and cash expenses — rose to a record $52 billion last calendar year. Of that $52 billion net, direct federal payments made up $11.8 billion.

In 1987, net cash income is forecast to rise again to a range of $54 billion to $58 billion, with government payments accounting for $14 billion to $16 billion.

The government payments are also reflected in farm debt figures, the report said.

"Farmers have been cautious about expansion and business plans," it said. "Additional income in many cases has been used to pay down debts."

On the average, farmers nationally are expected to reduce their debt-to-asset ratio this year to 22 percent, compared with 24.7 percent in 1986 and 24.9 percent in 1985. Those numbers mean, for example, that for every $100 in assets held by farmers in 1985 they owed $24.90.

Inmate dies after fall during escape try

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — One inmate died and another was injured in a failed escape attempt from the Bi-State Justice Building, in which bed sheets from a cell were used, according to authorities.

A Bowie County prisoner who tried to climb down from the building's fourth floor on the sheets was killed when he fell to the pavement, authorities said Sunday.

A Miller County, Ark. inmate broke both legs after falling during the escape at about 8 p.m. Saturday, said Sgt. Bob Page of the Miller County Sheriff's Department.

The injured prisoner was identified by Miller County Sheriff's Sgt. Allen Jordan as Joseph Edward Gentry, 38, of Texarkana.

The sheets apparently separated, plunging the prisoners to the ground, said Don Johnson, a Texarkana, Ark., policeman.

The dead prisoner's name could not be released Sunday night because his relatives had not been notified, said Jordan. Another sheriff's spokesman said the dead prisoner was about 38.

Bowie County Sheriff Thomas Hodge said the prisoner who died was being held on a burglary charge and had recently been returned to Bowie County on a warrant.

Miller County authorities said Gentry was arrested in Fouke, Ark., on charges of disorderly conduct, hot checks, fleeing a police officer and felony theft.

The jail, which straddles the Arkansas-Texas line, houses prisoners from both counties. Page said the escape happened on the Texas side of the building.

Hodge said the prisoners had apparently forced open a fourth-floor window to escape. Authorities did not know how far the men had fallen.

Gary Owen, chief deputy in Bowie County, said Gentry was arrested a short distance from the jail and was taken to St. Michael Hospital.

Hodge said employees of the Arkansas Department of Correction, which has offices in the jail, heard glass breaking and went outside, where they found the Bowie County prisoner.

Diet Center offers sound program

Diet Center offers a sound nutrituional weight reduction program to lose weight quickly and easily. A year of free maintenance shows dieters the way to form proper and sensible eating patterns in order to keep the lost weight from being regained. Should a few pounds be gained while maintaining the weight loss, a one day controling diet gets this weight back off quickly. Dieters feel well while reducing on the Diet Center program due to proper nutritional food consumption.

Dieters lose weight and gain self esteem at Diet Center. As the dieter's shape improves, their feelings of self worth improve. Whether needing to lose five pounds or over one hundred pounds, it can be accomplished by following Diet Center's total program and with the help of Mary Woodall, a certified diet counselor. Mary understands the dieter's needs and feelings toward their bodies while overweight and relates to them for she has had to follow the program also.

Mary received her certification by attending Diet Center, Inc. counselor training schools in Rexburg, Idaho. The school has now been located to Arizona. Diet Center, Inc., is the leading franchise weight loss program with over 2,000 locations in the United States and Canada. Over a million pounds of weight have been lost at these various Diet Center locations.

Mary Woodall has helped many Snyder area men, women and children successfully lose weight during her five years as a diet counselor for Diet Center in Snyder. Mary joined Diet Center in 1982 and purchased the dealership shortly thereafter. She enjoys diet counseling on a one to one basis. Dieters are given program booklets to follow and their weight loss progress is recorded and graphed in these individual booklets for the dieter's information. Weight loss records are kept confidential. Mary finds dieters prefer morning weigh-ins and is open from 7:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. weekday mornings. Afternoon appointments are available by calling Mary at 573-8583 or 573-0517, or by stopping by Diet Center at 2310 25th Street in Snyder, Texas, located just five blocks west of the square on the Lamesa Highway. Whether your needs are to lose a few pounds or many pounds, Mary would enjoy helping. The cost per week is less that the price of a new outfit, and you will look much better in all your clothes after losing unwanted weight at Diet Center.

Group wants Halloween observance dropped

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Halloween is a pagan tradition with satanic links to child abuse, teen suicide, animal mutilation and murder and schools should not observe its customs, say members of an anti-occult group.

"One of our goals is to remove Halloween from the schools because it is actually Samhain, the highest event in the witches' calendar," said Yvonne Peterson, founder of Exodus, an San Antonio anti-occult group which sponsored a weekend conference on occult-related crimes.

To help combat occult practices, Mrs. Peterson told the San Antonio Express-News the group will ask state lawmakers to pass measures prohibiting students from checking out school library books on witchcraft without signed parental permission.

"We've started compiling lists from libraries," she said. "We've got parents willing to back us up. Believe me, we're very serious about this. We're going to take it to the state level."

The books are to be taken off the library shelves and placed in special containers or cases where a key is required to take them out.

"These are the 'how-to' books in our school libraries. The books that glorify witchcraft," Ms. Peterson said. "We're finding an average of 20 occult books in our school libraries. We would like these books placed in a locked book case where a student can check them out with a parent's permission slip.

"I just think the parents have a right to know."

Practicing an occult religion is not illegal, but police said there has been a recent surge of crimes linked to occult rituals.

Gerry Goldstein, the general counsel of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, said Exodus is facing a tough fight if it tries to block freedom of information guaranteed by the Constitution.

In a somewhat similar 1986 case, parents protesting the use of Jean Auel's "Clan of the Cave Bear" as required classroom reading were voted down by trustees of the Northside School District. The book contained some sexual references, including a rape scene and the brutalization of a Cro-Magnon woman.

Goldstein said any attempt to put books under lock and key sets a dangerous precedent of trying to control access to knowledge.

"If there is an attempt to limit access, I can assure you there's going to be an organized effort to stop it," Goldstein said.

'Dummy' officer suspended

DALLAS (AP) — Police say a traffic officer who was suspended after only four days on the job was just a dummy who didn't get the job done.

The officer, recruited from the Dallas Police Department's corps of first-aid mannequins, sat quietly in a parked patrol car as a speeding deterrent. Passing motorists weren't fooled.

"They were slowing down, but as soon as they got past, they figured the danger was over," said Capt. W.R. Patterson of the traffic division.

The department used it in three separate locations last week. Dallas City Councilman John Evans suggested the ploy.

"Every time I see a police car, I slow down," said Evans.

He said he thought the dummy officer would be cheaper than the real thing and have the same effect.

Patterson is not so sure, however. Motorcycle officers waiting down the street had to issue citations to 91 speeders before they convinced them the dummy was serious, he said.

But the mannequin did catch motorists' attention, Patterson said.

At home in the Metrodome...

Twins capture 1987 World Series crown

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - The party is on in Minnesota, home to the biggest home-bodies in baseball.

The World Series champion Twins returned to the Metrodome field for the last time in 1987 to take a bow before their fans. There couldn't have been a more fitting tribute.

Home, after all, was where it all happened for the Twins.

"Go party!" Gary Gaetti told what was left of a crowd of 55,376 as he and his teammates took their turn at the microphone. "And have a good time. You deserve it."

Even with the Metrodome half-empty, the roar still was deafening.

Never had a team won a World Series by winning all its home games without winning on the road. How could it have been otherwise?

The Twins built the best home record of any team in baseball this season, 56-25, but had the worst road record of any team to ever win a pennant, 29-52.

After hitting seven homers in the first six games - all but one at home - Minnesota had none in its 4-2 victory over St. Louis in Game 7 Sunday night. The Twins scored their go-ahead run with three walks and an infield hit by Greg Gagne, and the World Series MVP of the homer-happy Twins was a pitcher, Frank Viola.

The Twins got one of their runs on a questionable call by first-base umpire Lee Weyer. A bad call by Weyer, a National League umpire, took the Cardinals out of a possible scoring situation later in the game.

The Cardinals, who have been to three World Series in the '80s, came here with their home-run leader, Jack Clark, lost entirely and Terry Pendleton limited by injuries.

"They are the world champions. There is nothing to comment on," said Cardinals center fielder Willie McGee. "They are the best team in baseball.

Viola pitched eight innings, retiring 11 in a row after he allowed the second of two RBI singles in the second inning. Viola won Game 1 in Minnesota and lost Game 4 in St. Louis.

The Twins won the series under rookie Manager Tom Kelly, after losing 91 games in 1986.

When the Twins won Sunday night, they closed the longest gap between World Series titles in major-league history - from the 1924 Washington Senators to the '87 Twins. It was 62 years of futility that was supposed to end.

The turnaround did not come without change.

The Twins got Jeff Reardon from the Montreal Expos in February, and he had 31 saves. Dan Gladden, the only player on either team to hit in all seven games of the World Series, came in a trade from San Francisco last March. Don Baylor came over from Boston on Aug. 31, the cutoff date for postseason eligibility, and hit a game-tying home run in the sixth game.

Western Texas shows well at Texas Tech NIRA rodeo

LUBBOCK – Western Texas College didn't win, but the Westerner men's and women's teams did make their best showings of the 1987-88 Southwest Region rodeo season at the Texas Tech University NIRA Rodeo here last weekend.

Western's men finished in third place with 175 points while the WTC women were second in their division with 150 points.

"I feel real good. I think we did as well as we could with what we had drawed and everything," said Coach Bob Doty.

The rodeo concluded Southwest Region action for the fall. Five more rodeos will be held in the spring of 1988.

RAY BROWN

Odessa College ran away with the men's crown, scoring 315 points. Tarleton took second with 200, followed by Western, Vernon RJC with 140 and Texas Tech with 120.

Tarleton won the women's crown with 170.

WTC's ladies got most of their points in the breakaway roping where Tana Mahoney won the short-go and the average with times of 3.8 and 6.9 respectively. She clocked a 3.1 for second place in the long-go.

Teammate Sandy Scott went into the finals with a fifth-place 3.7, but took a no-time there.

Jessie Colburn gave WTC 40 points in the barrels. She placed third in the average with a 31.52 after taking third in the finals with a 15.65.

The only other WTC entry into the women's finals was in the goat tying. Scott clocked a 9.8 but was edged out of fourth place by Holly Sanders' 9.7.

WTC men got 155 of their 175 points in the steer wrestling where Ray Brown won the short go and the average. Brown took a 5.6 into the finals and won there with a 4.9. His average total was 10.5.

Teammate Scott Sharp was second overall in the event. Sharp had times of 4.9 and a third place 6.2 to turn in a 11.1 on two head.

Another WTC student, Clyde Himes, was third in the average with an 11.4. His 5.8 in the finals was also second behind Brown's 4.9. Himes earned individual points but was not a designated WTC teammember this week.

Western got 20 points in the bull riding where Michael Gaffney finished fourth in the average with a 143 and Adam Brewster was fourth in the short-go with a 72. Fourth place in each go or the average is worth 10 points; third place worth 20, second worth 30 and first worth 40.

WTC's Buddy Reed also made the finals with a 69, but did not score Sunday.

In other action, Wesley Henderson reached the finals of the saddle bronc but his scores of 63 and 65 were out of the running; Himes tied for fourth in the long-go of the calf roping with a 9.0 but broke the barrier in the finals; and Tom Figeroa and Vernon's Wesley Gouge clocked a 13.2 in the team roping finals for third place. Their 21.4 average was also in third place.

Former WTC students did well here also:

- Mistri Davis, now with ENMU, was second in the all-around with 90 points. She won the short-go in the breakaway roping with a 3.0, won the short-go in the goat tying with a 9.3, and was fourth in the average of the goat tying with a 19.3.

- Keith Hudson, TSU, won the calf roping with a 17.0 on two head. Don Eddleman was tied for fourth with an 18.1.

- Mike Carrillo, SRSU, was fourth overall in the bareback with a 139.

- Robert Fifer, ENMU, was third in the finals of the saddle bronc with a 67.

Eagles rip Cowboys; grind salt in wounds

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Buddy Ryan looked like the cat who ate the canary.

His Philadelpha Eagles beat the Dallas Cowboys, 37-20. But it was the Eagles' final touchdown, scored on the last play that lit up the veteran coach's face.

Ryan jested, "I had it planned that way."

At least, if he could have, that's the way he would have planned it.

The scenario began in Dallas three weeks ago. The Cowboys beat the Eagles, 41-22 in a strike game.

Late in the fourth quarter, the Eagles threatened. Dallas coach Tom Landry sent in defensive linemen Randy White, Ed Jones and Don Smerek to stop the drive.

Ryan accused Landry of running up the score.

When the strike ended and his regulars returned, Ryan reminded them of his feelings toward Landry.

"What goes around comes around," said Ryan.

And true to his word, when the chance came Sunday to rub it in, Ryan did. Thanks to a 37-yard pass interference penalty against Dallas, the Eagles got the ball at the 1 yard line. Keith Byars scored as time ran out.

The first thing the Eagles coach said after reaching the dressing room was, "I told you. What goes around comes around."

The reaction in the Dallas dressing room was quick.

Linebacker Steve DeOssie said of Ryan's words, "That's the ramblings of a pathetic, senile old man. "They (the Eagles) only did it to pacify Ryan's overinflated ego."

Landry declined to comment on the Eagles' last series.

Defensive end Clyde Simmons triggered the Eagles to their early lead. He recovered a fumble and blocked a field goal attempt that led to 10 points. Simmons also had 2 sacks.

Simmons, who had the best day of his three-year NFL career, said, "Dallas is going down. Everybody knows it. They know it. They've got a lot of rebuilding to do but they started too late."

Simmons said the Cowboys appeared to be "more frustrated with themselves than they were with us."

In addition to Simmons, Randall Cunningham and John Spagnola helped trigger the Eagles' victory. Cunningham threw two TD passes to Spagnola.

Dallas took a 3-0 lead on Roger Ruzek's 23-yard field goal in the first period. The Eagles' Paul McFadden tied it with a 45-yarder.

In the second quarter, McFadden sent the Eagles ahead, 6-3 on McFadden's 46-yard field goal after a Simmons fumble recovery.

They boosted it to 13-3 on Cunningham's 10-yard pass to Spagnola. Simmons' block of a Dallas field goal attempt set up the score.

The Cowboys came back 65 yards on 10 plays to score on Herschel Walker's 1-yard dive, and it was 13-10 at halftime.

Dallas tied it 13-13 in the third period on Ruzek's 25-yard field goal. The Eagles went ahead to stay, 20-13, on a nine-play, 75-yard drive capped by Anthony Toney's 1-yard sweep.

Philadelphia made it 23-13 on McFadden's 21-yard field goal after a fumble recovery. They upped it to 30-13 on Cunningham's 5-yard scoring pass to Spagnola.

Dallas recovered a fumble at its 49, and drove 51 yards in six plays, with Danny White passing the final 19 to Tony Dorsett. That made it 30-20.

Then came Buddy's revenge - 36 yards in six plays and Byars' dive for the score as time ran out.

Danny White completed 22 of 36 for 257 and one touchdown. The Eagles held Walker to 54 yards on 12 carries and Dorsett to 32 on 11.

Comebacks spark NFL teams as regulars return to action

by The Associated Press

It was a day of comebacks on Comeback Day for NFL regulars.

The strikers' return to action was marked by rustiness on the field, resentment from some of the fans in the stands, and scintillating rallies by a half-dozen teams.

One of Sunday's rallies came in Tampa, where Jim McMahon, making a personal comeback from shoulder surgery, ignited Chicago's surge from a 20-0 deficit to a 27-26 victory.

"Ideally, I would have just come in when we were ahead, dust the moss off and get used to things," said McMahon, who was sidelined last November. What moss? McMahon sneaked in for one score and passed to Neal Anderson for the winning TD.

In Miami, Buffalo's Jim Kelly hit 29 of 39 passes for 359 yards and two touchdowns, to lead the Bills back to a 34-31 decision over the Dolphins on Scott Norwood's 27-yard field goal 4:08 into overtime.

Pittsburgh quarterback Mark Malone shrugged off boos from the Steelers crowd Sunday and ignored the "Stay on Strike," banners that hung at Three Rivers Stadium. He threw a 12-yard fourth-quarter scoring pass to John Stallworth, then hit Stallworth for 45 yards to set up Gary Anderson's decisive field goal in a 23-20 triumph over Cincinnati.

The Oilers, Redskins and Packers didn't make it easy on themselves. Houston beat Atlanta 37-33 when Warren Moon - like Malone, booed most of the game - passed 14 yards to Curtis Duncan for the winning touchdown with 27 seconds left.

Washington, down 16-7 with six minutes remaining, stormed back on a 2-yard TD pass from Jay Schroeder to Kelvin Bryant and a 28-yard field goal by Ali Haji-Sheikh with 54 seconds remaining for a 17-16 win over the New York Jets.

Green Bay blew a 31-7 first-half lead to Detroit. Al Del Greco kicked a 45-yard field goal with one minute left, boosting the Packers back in front 34-33. Then Detroit's Eddie Murray missed from the same distance, giving the Packers a 1-point win.

San Francisco and Indianapolis also were behind before winning. The Saints moved ahead of the 49ers 19-17 when Alvin Toles scored on a blocked punt 1:36 into the fourth period. But Joe Montana found Mike Wilson for a 14-yard touchdown two minutes later and the 49ers held on, 24-22.

The Colts were down 6-0 to the Patriots in the first quarter. But a pair of replacement players made key plays as Indianapolis came back for a 30-16 victory for Coach Ron Meyer, who was fired by New England in 1985.

The New York Giants won the Super Bowl in January and didn't have a victory that counted since. On Sunday, they rectified that with a 30-7 rout of St. Louis before the first non-sellout ever for a regular game at Giants Stadium.

San Diego upped its record to 5-1, best in the AFC, with a 42-21 decision over Kansas City; Philadelphia took Dallas 37-20; and Seattle romped past the Raiders 35-13.

There will be two games tonight. The Rams are at Cleveland in the regularly scheduled contest. The Vikings were supposed to play the Broncos in the Metrodome on Sunday, but the seventh game of the World Series forced a switch.

Lady Tigers slap Andrews v-ballers

ANDREWS – Snyder's Lady Tigers overcame a few odds to defeat Andrews here Saturday, 16-14, 15-11, in a District 2-4A volleyball match.

The Tigers played the match without the services of Melody Pickering and Jennifer Alarcon, who had other commitments.

"It took us a while to get used to playing in different positions," said Coach Vicki Nelms. "Andrews blocked us real effectively at first. But after the first rotation we came back and started playing better together. We didn't give up even though we fell behind. We started hitting the holes and doing other things right. We just did a good job of adjusting."

Snyder improved to 15-10 overall and 9-5 in district play. The Lady Tigers go back on the road Tuesday to play San Angelo Lake View at 7:30 p.m.

"Lake View at Lake View is always tough," said Coach Nelms. "They will give you a lot of off-speed stuff. We'll work on adjusting to their kind of game today."

Scoring on serves for Snyder last Saturday were Denise Overton, 10; Becky Becerra, 9; Sandra Morin, 4; LaFon Williams and Sandra Powell, 3 each; and Kelly Walker, 2.

Snyder vs. Andrews

FINAL SCORE: Snyder def. Andrews, 16-14, 15-11.

POINTS SCORED: Williams, 3; Overton, 10; Morin, 4; Walker, 2; Powell, 3; Becerra, 9.

Cats club Lady 'Stangs; get set for San Angelo

ANDREWS – Snyder junior varsity girls whipped Andrews in a volleyball match here Saturday, 15-8, 15-1.

"We played good defense. They had a couple of good hitters and one little girl they put up there to block serves," said Coach Patti Grimmett, "but we adjusted real well. We had good hustle and good offense."

Scoring on serves for the young Tigers were Jennifer Pate 3, Cindy Srna 8, Teena Braziel 7, Annette Ramos 8, Shelly Tomlin 3 and Brandi Bell 1. Amber Adams, Anne Osborn, Kathy Armstrong, Angie Brewster, Veronica Rivas and Letisha Escareno also played.

Now 21-6, Snyder will play Tuesday in San Angelo at 6:30 p.m.

Frosh win

ANDREWS – Snyder rallied from behind to defeat Andrews in a freshmen volleyball match here Saturday.

The young Lady Tigers won 15-3, 15-10 after losing the first game 13-15.

Snyder, now 12-7 on the season, plays its final match on Saturday, Oct. 31, in Monahans. The freshmen will not make this Tuesday's trip to play San Angelo Lake View.

Scoring on serves for Snyder last Saturday were Monica Garcia, 18 points, 3 aces; Angie Burleson, 4 points, 3 aces; Liz Greathouse, 5 points, 1 ace; Robbie Braziel, 8 points, 3 aces; Angee Crawford, 6 points; and Camille Thompson, 2 points.

John L. Sullivan was nicknamed the "Boston Strong Boy" although relatively small for a heavyweight by modern standards. He weighed 190 pounds.

Churches lead anti-racing fight in the state of Texas

DALLAS (AP) — Many members of the Texas religious community are mobilizing against horse and dog race betting through sermons, donations, volunteers and even a country-western song.

"When the stakes get higher and higher, the faster and harder you fall," according to the ballad telling the story of a little girl begging her daddy to give up playing the ponies.

The recording was the latest effort by gambling foes to mobilize the state's church members to defeat the Nov. 3 referendum on horse and dog race wagering. The song was produced in Dallas and offered to Christian radio stations.

Many Texas churches have been in the vanguard against pari-mutuel wagering. They again are playing a central role, providing the bulk of donations and volunteers for the opposition campaign.

Anti-racing officials said ministers will take to the pulpits for sermons on what they call the evils of race track betting as the election nears.

"Some may see this as a David and Goliath battle with the forces of pari-mutuel gambling wearing the giant's armor," Sue Cox, head of Texans Who Care, a Dallas-based opposition group, said.

"If that's the case, so be it. We remember that David came out on top. ... The giant killer will win again."

A well-financed phone bank operation and mailings by pro-racing forces are designed to get out voters sympathetic to their cause. Polls show them in the lead. Supporters have tried to avoid public confrontations with church leaders.

"There's no need to get into arguments with them," said Al Poujol of Houston, president of the Texas Horsemen's Association. "There's no doubt in my mind they are completely outnumbered."

The association is backing the referendum.

Analysts say the winning side will be the one that does the best job of getting its backers to the polls in an off-year election.

"There's plenty of people out there, but it all comes down to who will be motivated enough to vote," Richard Murray of the University of Houston political science department said.

He said only about one in seven of the state's estimated 7.3 million registered voters would show up on Election Day.

A Texans Who Care booklet states that defeat of the measure "depends heavily" on church members who vote. "There must be an extraordinary surge of religiously motivated voting," it says.

The group has distributed more than 17,000 of the booklets, called a "church information packet" — a political primer that offers tips on get-out-the vote drives, pastor's columns for church newsletters, sample sermons and even a Sunday school lesson plan.

Group members also printed several thousand anti-gambling leaflets for churches to insert in their bulletins next Sunday before Tuesday's vote.

Opponents, besides counting on ministers, tried to spread their message with the anti-gambling song,

China has $1 billion annual arms program to Iranians

WASHINGTON (AP) — China has sold Iran as many as 96 Silkworm anti-ship missiles under a $1 billion-a-year program that is angering the Reagan administration and complicating efforts to end the Iran-Iraq war, U.S. officials say.

That anger boiled over last week as Iranian Silkworm attacks against Kuwaiti and U.S. targets in the Persian Gulf caused the administration to announce it would not grant Chinese requests to sell them some U.S. items with military uses.

The mild trade restrictions on China, coupled with a proposed ban on all imports from Iran, are part of a larger U.S. effort that Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Sunday was designed to produce, within 20 days, a vote by the U.N. Security Council for an arms embargo against the regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The campaign has moved slowly since July 20, when U.S. diplomacy produced a unanimous U.N. Security Council resolution, No. 598, calling upon Iran and Iraq to end the war that began in September 1980.

Iraq has said it is ready to end the war, but Iran has not.

Prospects seem poor for a Security Council resolution designed to embargo arms sales to Iran. The impasse demonstrates the limits of U.S. leverage against Iran, Iraq, the Soviet Union and China.

Both Moscow and Beijing have permanent seats on the Security Council, giving them power to veto any resolution, "and neither has been enthusiastic, to say the least," one official said.

Moreover, intelligence indicates that Chinese ships were continuing to deliver weapons, possibly including Silkworms, to the Iranian port of Chah Bahar on the Gulf of Oman outside the Persian Gulf, according to U.S. sources. They declined to be more specific about the deliveries.

The sources, like others quoted here, spoke only on condition they not be named.

Asked how quickly the United States would seek a Security Council vote on the embargo, Shultz said, "I think you can look at the days on your hands and maybe your feet."

"I think it's time to start focusing in here," Shultz said Sunday on the NBC-TV interview program "Meet the Press."

U.S. officials hold out little hope that Khomeini will end the war, but they do want to raise the cost of Iranian arms purchases.

Winter offensives in 1986 gave Iran control of the Faw Peninsula and last January put Iranian troops within 10 miles of Basra, Iraq's second largest city.

Ap analysis

Intelligence reports from the Iran-Iraq border indicate a new Iranian buildup along the border, one official said.

Shultz confronted senior Chinese leaders directly during a visit to Beijing last February, but "they looked us straight in the eye and denied that they are selling arms to Iran," one official said.

The situation has changed little since then.

The administration announced last Thursday that because of the arms sales, it would end a decade-long process of liberalization in licenses for the export to China of equipment that has civilian and military uses.

The official Xinhua news agency reacted angrily, quoting anonymous "observers" in Beijing as calling the U.S. decision "not reasonable."

Reasonable or not, there was no indication that the U.S. action would halt the flow of Chinese arms to Iran.

Students: officer never did fit in with the crowd

MIDLOTHIAN, Texas (AP) — Several Midlothian students say a rookie police officer on an undercover assignment at the high school was killed because his true identity had been discovered.

Capital murder charges were expected to be filed today against two Midlothian High School students who were arrested in the death of George William Raffield Jr., Police Chief Roy Vaughn says.

"He was a good officer and a good man," said Vaughn.

The students, one age 16 and the other age 17, were arrested after the officer was found shot to death Saturday, Vaughn said. A 23-year-old Midlothian woman was also arrested in connection with hindering apprehension, a Class A misdemeanor, in the case, he said.

Texas Ranger George Turner of Cleburn acknowledged that the blown cover was probably to blame for the slaying.

"Some of the students figured out he was narcotics officer," Turner told the Dallas Times Herald. "His cover was blown and he was murdered because of it."

Several Midlothian students who asked not to be identified told the newspaper that students had long suspected Raffield, 21, was a police officer planted at the high school to investigate drug use and sales.

The students said they became suspicious of the officer because he seemed older than the other students, drove a late-model pickup truck and was new at the school.

"No way did he fit in at this school," said one student who asked not to be identified.

David Swindell, 18, a former student who said he was acquainted with Raffield, said it was obvious the officer was trying hard to be accepted as a peer.

"When someone comes in new and they try to fit in so fast you know something is wrong," Swindell said.

Another student said students were so aware of his identity that some even called him "21 Jump Street" after a television series involving police and high school students.

"I don't believe the narcotics officer (Raffield) had any reason to believe he was fixing to be killed," Ranger Turner said. "He was deep undercover. There were very few people who knew of his existence."

"If anyone had known his cover was blown, he'd have been reassigned," the Ranger added.

Authorities first had theorized that the slaying resulted from a drug deal that went sour.

Arms treaty could be scuttled

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S.-Soviet summit might not occur in the remaining months of the Reagan administration if Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev continues to throw roadblocks in the way of an arms control agreement, Secretary of State George P. Shultz says.

Shultz met with President Reagan late Sunday afternoon for a briefing in the White House residence with national security adviser Frank C. Carlucci, the White House said.

The meeting was set "to receive a report on their recent meetings with Soviet leaders in Moscow," said a statement issued by White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

The spokesman gave no other detail except to say Reagan's chief of staff, Howard H. Baker Jr., his deputy Ken Duberstein and Carlucci deputy Colin Powell planned to attend.

Earlier in the day, Shultz said a U.S.-Soviet summit will occur when Gorbachev is "ready or, if he waits too long, maybe we won't be ready."

"This administration ends in January 1989. And as you get into the heat of the election campaign, it's no time for a Soviet leader to be here," Shultz said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press." "So there's only a finite amount of time, only a finite amount of patience with all of this."

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze raised the topic of a summit this fall during meetings in Washington in September, Shultz said, adding that during talks in Moscow last week, Gorbachev suggested that Reagan visit the Soviet Union next year.

Administration officials had voiced puzzlement at Gorbachev's sudden refusal Friday to fix a date for a summit, but emphasized that the decision should not block a treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Shultz said Sunday the administration was willing to sign a treaty with the Soviets, even without a superpower summit meeting, and he said he remains optimistic about such an agreement.

The treaty, applying to missiles mostly based in Europe, was the projected centerpiece of the next summit meeting between Reagan and Gorbachev. The two have met face to face twice before — in Geneva in November 1985 and in Reykjavik, Iceland, in October 1986.

Carlucci, who accompanied Shultz on the trip to Moscow, said Sunday that Soviet leaders indicated they would prefer to reach an arms agreement with the Reagan administration, but Gorbachev said he would be willing to wait for the next administration.

"He made the comment to the effect that, 'Well, if you don't come around to our position on this, I may have to deal with the next administration,'" Carlucci said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" that a summit may not be necessary to conclude an arms control treaty.

Going into the talks with the Soviets on Friday, Shultz was optimistic that many of the sticking points of an arms control agreement could be worked out. But Gorbachev informed Shultz during their meeting that he was not prepared to set a date to visit Washington for a third meeting with Reagan unless the White House agreed to limit research on the Strategic Defense Initiative, commonly known as "Star Wars."

Perot, education groups said at odds again

AUSTIN (AP) — H. Ross Perot was at odds with most education groups when he persuaded the Texas Legislature to pass one of the most sweeping education reform programs in U.S. history three years ago.

Education groups, suspicious of the Dallas billionaire and his plans, fought many of the key reform proposals, such as teacher competency testing.

Those suspicions were revived as Perot pushed to keep an appointed State Board of Education, officials said.

In a Nov. 3 referendum, Texas voters will be asked whether they want to retain an appointed education board by canceling next year's scheduled elections of board members.

In 1984, the current, 15-member board was appointed for four years. Unless the ballot proposal passes, it will be replaced by an elected panel in January 1989.

Perot insists that a return to an elected board would bring politics back into public education. He is financing an expensive media campaign to sell the proposal to voters.

"If we let that happen, we will have lost the reforms," Perot said. "Our children's futures are too important to risk playing political games."

The elected board of education embarrassed the state before it was driven from office in 1984, Perot claimed. He said some of those former board members "thought the world was flat."

The current, appointed board, however, "has done an absolutely first-rate job," he says.

Texas' four teacher organizations, the Texas PTA, the Texas Association of School Boards and other mainline education groups are unimpressed by Perot's arguments.

"In order to sell this (appointed board) to the public back in 1984, Perot and others said it would only be a temporary thing," Charles Beard, Texas State Teachers Association president, told the Dallas Morning News.

"They agreed that the state would return to an elected board in four years. Now they're going back on their word."

Sandy Kibby, legislative chairwoman of the Texas PTA, said her organization believes that elected officials provide better representation for the "grass roots."

"An elected board would be more accountable to our type of people," said Ms. Kibby.

A department spokesman said the fire fighters stood by until a utility company crew made repairs.

Bush, Jackson lead in polls

By The Associated Press

Although Vice President George Bush and the Rev. Jesse Jackson are the overwhelming primary choices of their respective parties in Texas, sizeable numbers of voters in the state have yet to make up their minds, a presidential preference poll conducted by two Texas newspapers indicates.

Bush would get the votes of 57 percent of the state's Republicans who say they'll vote in the March 8 primary, the poll sponsored by the Houston Chronicle and the Dallas Morning News found.

"He's the 400-pound gorilla right now in the Republican cage," said Richard Murray, a political scientist with the University of Houston's Center for Public Policy and the poll's director.

Drug raids pointing to long war against Jamaican drugs

DALLAS (AP) — The biggest hauls in a nationwide crackdown on Jamaican drug rings were in Dallas, but the raids last week were only solitary victories in what shapes up as a long war, say authorities.

Law enforcement officials displayed automatic weapons, bundles of cash and narcotics seized in the Dallas raids. A Jamaican woman was arrested as she got off a Miami flight at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Officers said Pauline Gibson, who is being held without bail on federal drug charges, had a kilogram of cocaine taped to her body.

"The war is not over," Phil Jordan, U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent in Dallas, said. "These people see the lucrative money that can be made from exploiting drug abuse."

Dallas police have linked Jamaican drug organizations to 44 homicides in the past four years and daily profits from cocaine sales averaging $400,000. The raids in Dallas were result of an 11-month investigation into an estimated 27 local drug organizations.

Federal officials said the gangs are responsible for at least 425 narcotics-related homicides nationwide and have dominated cocaine sales in several major cities.

The massive sweep of 14 cities and the District of Columbia netted about 140 gang members, officials said, with up to 100 suspects still at large.

Federal officials attributed to Texas authorities early detection of Jamaican drug activity the fact that more suspects were arrested in Dallas than in any other city targeted for the simultaneous raids.

A special task force of local and federal law enforcement officers was formed locally in November 1986 to deal with the Jamaican dealers.

Investigators want to consolidate cases against individuals already arrested, use their statements to obtain further arrests and identify additional Jamaican drug operations, said Capt. W.R. Rollins, who heads the Dallas Police Department's intelligence division.

He told the Dallas Morning News that additional federal funding has been obtained and the task force will continue to be a viable operation.

The Jamaican gangs' reputation as violent and cunning drug entrepreneurs has grown with proliferating business since their appearance in South Florida and the New York area in the early 1980s.

Police who first began investigating the Jamaican dealers in Dallas thought that perhaps 30 or 40 individuals were involved, Rollins said. Now about 300 have been identified in Dallas, he said.

Dealers operate out of apartments rented by individuals with no criminal history and good references, police said. The apartments, known as crack houses or gates, are used for short periods.

Apartments frequently are staffed by Jamaican teen-agers, police said, who use aliases if arrested and adhere to a criminal code of silence that is enforced by the threat of death.

Only small amounts of money and drugs are kept in the crack houses, which usually are located in lower-income, minority neighborhoods.

The most common drugs sold are cocaine powder and crack, an inexpensive cocaine derivative that is smoked.

Dallas criminal intelligence investigators said the gangs' operations seemed to have seeped into surrounding areas, such as suburban Grand Prairie and Garland.

"They're very shrewd businessmen. The operation is designed so that all levels and all locations are replaceable," said investigator Charles E. Storey. "We can't think that one strike is going to bring them down."

Hospital workers, patients exposed to asbestos

DALLAS (AP) — A hospital's current and former employees claimed they were contaminated by asbestos during building renovations and that workers and patients were exposed, a published report said.

The patients exposed to asbestos during the last 18 months include newborn babies at Parkland Memorial Hospital, according to hospital documents obtained by the Dallas Morning News.

Some of the complaints allege asbestos contamination in the third-floor newborn nursery.

Reports to Parkland safety officials dated Feb. 23, 1986 to Sept. 23, 1987 allegedly that employees were repeatedly exposed to asbestos, that the substance was improperly handled and was disposed of in hospital dumpsters.

Decline of the West?

Modern nations could lose clout

By Ben Wattenberg

(Second of six articles)

The principal actors and perhaps victims of the decline in birth rates are the people who live in that community of nations that are best described by these words: "modern," "industrial," "free." In addition to the United States, such a grouping would also include Canada, all of Western Europe, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Israel and Iceland.

Demographers have long understood the relationship between a modern society and lower birth rates. As people move from rural to urban settings, from farms to factories — factors of modernism — fertility falls. As incomes go up, as women move into the work force, as education increases — all factors of modernism — fertility falls. As technology yields better contraceptive techniques, as standards change to permit abortion — again, factors of modernism — then fertility falls. The direction of the trend is long established. It is the low level and the recent speed of descent that is so startling.

In order to see what the future may look like if we don't change our ways, let us make the following simple assumptions:

• The fertility rates in each of the modern nations will remain at 1985 levels (the latest for which figures are available), even though the rates actually will seem to be drifting somewhat lower.

• Legal and illegal immigration rates in the United States, including an estimate regarding the effects of the new immigration law, will increase U.S. population by 450,000 a year, that is roughly the latest "middle level" estimate endorsed by the Census Bureau.

• The fertility rates in the Third World, still very high, will continue to decline, as projected by the United Nations.

• Longevity rates will keep rising, as the United Nations projects.

Under such circumstances, what will happen? In the West, except for periods of war, plague, famine or depressions, population growth rates are already at their lowest levels in history and shrinking. Because of the echo effect of the Baby Boom — many more women bearing children, though at a very low rate — and increasing longevity, the time of actual population loss is delayed until a decade or two into the next century. But sooner or later decline sets in, as it already has in West Germany and a few other Western European nations. In the United States, due to a bigger Baby Boom and immigration, the process is moving at a somewhat slower pace, but clearly in the same direction.

In contrast to the projected shrinkage in the modern democracies, the communist-line nations will grow moderately. Today, as a whole, they have a total fertility rate, or TFR, of 2.3 births per woman. That is well above the replacement rate of 2.1. It is 28 percent higher than the 1.8 rate for the Western democracies.

What about the less developed world? Without much popular notice, the last 15 years have seen a tremendous and heartening decline in Third World fertility from a United Nations measured TFR level of 6.1 child per woman in 1970 to 4.1 in 1985. But today there are 1.8 billion women of childbearing age in the less developed world. Even if these women reduce their fertility as the United Nations projects, there will be a flood of Third World babies. Third World population, now 3.7 billion, is likely to rise to more than 8 billion by the middle of the next century.

Is this three-way split harmful?

During the last four decades, the community of free, modern nations has shaped and molded the nature of the entire world — economically, technologically, culturally, geopolitically and, in many ways, militarily as well. In the course of this Western dominance, we — the modern — have vastly improved our condition. We are more prosperous, healthier, more at peace and more free than ever before.

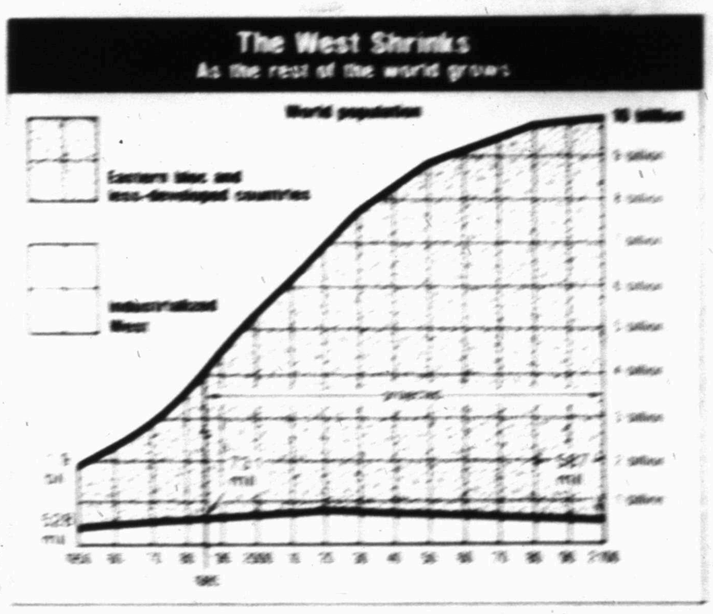
Second, they — the aspiring nations — have also gained. Ever more nations, life expectancy has soared, economic has expanded, real per capita has increased, literacy and communication have exploded. What caused the advance of the poor nations? Modernism. Westernism, call it what you will. There was medical technology that improved sanitation. There were new seeds that improved agricultural yield. There were multinational corporations that brought jobs and access to markets. There were translator radios, new roads, airplanes and — in more places than you might think — at least the beginnings of a democratic process.

Even the communist world has benefited. It has shared in some of technology. It has benefited from the geopolitical and military stability among the big powers.

In 1950, when the Western moment was at its early days, the population of the "free, modern world" comprised about 32 percent of the global population.

Today, we are 23 percent. In the early parts of the next century, we will be 15 percent. A reasonable extrapolation to the end of the next century brings the Western proportion down to about 11 percent. A question arises: Will our values continue to dominate in a world where our population shrinks from 23 percent to 15 percent to 11 percent?

Next: The economic effects.



Western industrialized democracies are accounting for an ever smaller percentage of the world's population. In 1950, Westerners made up 32 percent of the world's people, now they account for 15 percent, and, by 2050, demographers project that only 9 percent of the earth's people will live in the countries that today are Western democracies.

Undercover officer slain; charges are expected to be filed

MIDLOTHIAN, Texas (AP) — The fatal shooting of an undercover police officer, who had posed as a high school student in a drug deal that soured, was a tragic loss to the community, leaders said.

Capital murder charges were expected to be filed Monday against two Midlothian High School students who were arrested in the death of George William Raffield Jr., said Police Chief Roy Vaughn.

"He was a good officer and a good man," said Vaughn.

The students, one age 16 and the other age 17, were arrested after the officer was found shot to death Saturday, said Vaughn. A 23-year-old Midlothian woman was also arrested in connection with hindering apprehension, a Class A misdemeanor, in the case, he said.

The 17-year-old man was in Ellis County jail and the 16-year-old was held in the Johnson County Juvenile Detention Center pending a hearing, said the police chief. Texas Rangers continued their investigation in the case.

Midlothian Mayor Maurice Osborn said authorities were investigating rumors that one teenager held in connection with the shooting is the son of a Dallas police officer.

"I have heard that, but it has not been confirmed," he told The Associated Press. "But I have heard it from several sources."

He declined to elaborate. Osborn also said a rumor is circulating that at least one of the suspects was allegedly involved in satanic worship and that the area where Raffield was killed was known for such gatherings.

"The rumor's around but it's nothing I have ever heard before in the community. To the extent that the investigation has gone to this point, there has been nothing to indicate that," said Osborn.

He said that in a search around the slaying scene, law officers found no evidence to lead them to believe that the killing was linked to any cult.

Funeral services for Raffield were set Tuesday at First Baptist Church of Waxahachie.

Undercover drug investigations such as the one on which the 21-year-old Raffield was working are necessary in the battle against narcotics, said Osborn.

"That's part of what you have to do to effectively deal with drugs," said Osborn. "But we lost a very courageous young man and we sure would not want to see that come to naught."

Gramm recommends San Antonio judge to replace Sessions

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A state district judge was recommended by U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm to fill the federal court position left vacant by William S. Sessions.

In a press conference on Sunday, Gramm recommended that Judge Emilio M. Garza replace Sessions on the federal bench for the western district of Texas.

Sessions was scheduled to be sworn in as the new director of the FBI on Nov. 2.

Following Gramm's announcement at a San Antonio press conference, Garza said he would gladly accept the position if chosen.

"I am elated about the nomination, but I realize I have some big shoes to fill," the 40-year-old jurist said.

Garza, who graduated with a law degree from the University of Texas, has been presiding over the Bexar County court since April. He has been a practicing lawyer since 1976.

"It takes a great deal of effort to apply the law as best and fairly as one can," said Garza. "I very much believe that's the essence of our nation. We're one of the very few countries that swears allegiance to the Constitution, to the law."

Garza said Gramm telephoned Friday to tell him of the selection, adding that Sessions congratulated him by telephone Sunday afternoon.

"I believe that Emilio shares with me a deep conservative conviction, a belief in strict construction of the constitution and a belief in the sanc tity of human life," Gramm said.

The lawmaker said he expected approval of his selection, but added the Senate vote would probably not take place until early next year. Garza was one of five district judges being considered for the post.

Sources told the San Antonio Express-News they included David A. Berchelmann Jr., David Peeples, Tom Rickhoff and Susan Reed.

"It was a difficult choice," Gramm said. "There were really a half-dozen people who were qualified to serve on the federal bench. I couldn't have gone wrong with any one of them."

Gramm said Garza will first undergo an FBI background check before his recommendation goes before the American Bar Association for its comments. The Justice Department will then forward it to the president, who will make the nomination to the Senate.

Opposition alleges vote rigging in state ballot

PIEDRAS NEGRAS, Mexico (AP) — As citizens were completing voting in elections in northern Coahuila state, the opposition National Action Party in this volatile border city charged that the dominant party was rigging votes.

"We're here seeing ballots already filled out and boxes being stuffed," said Eleazar Cobos, mayoral candidate for the conservative National Action Party, or PAN in its Spanish initials, in this city of 130,000 south of Eagle Pass, Texas.

Private citizens reported that employees of at least two government plants here were required to turn in their voting cards before election day, presumably so votes could be filled out in their names.

"They took away my nephew's card because he was known as a PAN supporter," said Rosa Maria Sandoval, 27.

Santiago Elias Castro, mayoral candidate for the dominant Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, said, however, that his party was running fair elections Sunday.

"We're going to win as we've always done, with clean, transparent and peaceful elections so there's no doubt," he said in an interview at campaign headquarters.

Armed soldiers patrolled Piedras Negras where the municipal complex was gutted by fire three years ago during a post-election protest.

No incidents were reported Sunday at polling places.

A total of nearly 800,000 people were eligible to vote in the election for governor and for the mayors of all 38 municipalities in this vast state bordering Texas.

Official results were expected to be announced in about a week.

The PRI was favored to win the gubernatorial race and the majority of the municipal contests, including the capital of Saltillo and the major industrial city of Torreon.

Opposition parties, however, were expected to present tough challenges in the border cities of Piedras Negras and Ciudad Acuna and the steel-producing city of Monclova 130 miles south of the border. They also were expected to run tough races in several other smaller towns.

In Piedras Negras, Juan Gutierrez, a 33-year-old auto mechanic, said he voted for the PAN because "there's no law and nobody has any liberty here."

"No more PRI," he said.

But Sergio Galindo Cantu, a high school physical education teacher, said he voted for the ruling party because the current administration has improved the city through public works projects.

Eliseo Mendoza Berrueto, 56, the PRI's gubernatorial candidate, voted in Saltillo Sunday and then was scheduled to travel to Monclova, Piedras Negras and Torreon to support local candidates.

Current Gov. Jose de las Fuentes Rodriguez, who accompanied Mendoza on his stop here Sunday afternoon, told reporters that elections throughout the state had been carried out in "great harmony."

He warned, however, that the government "would not tolerate provocations of any kind."

Protests over vote rigging usually begin following the election.

Asked if the election would be fair, de las Fuentes replied, "of course, they always are in Coahuila."

The PRI has never lost a presidential or gubernatorial election since its founding in 1929.
