DAYTON AGOG WITH FORCES WAITING FOR MONKEY TEST

Much Heralded Case Due To Come up This Morning

EVERYBODY READY

Little Chance For a Postponement Is Belief

DAYTON, Tenn., July 9.—Dayton tonight was waiting for 9 o'clock tomorrow morning and the opening of the evolution trial which has made the town famous.

At that hour a special term of the Rhea circuit court will convene and John T. Scopes will be arraigned before this court on a charge of violating the law of Tennessee which prohibits the teaching of theories of evolution in the public schools.

A technicality or two, perhaps is to be ironed out before the taking of testimony begins, but the case tonight had passed its last mile post on the long road to the court room and John Thomas Scopes' day in court seemed certain to begin tomorrow.

May Take Month.

Various estimates of the time necessary to try the case set a mimimum of two weeks an da maximum of one month.

For the first time in several preliminary maneuvers all the lawyers who will participate actively in the case are tonight within a rifle shot of the court house door. The defense outnumbered the prosecution three to two in arrivals of attorneys today.

Clarence Darrow reached Dayton from Chicago at dusk and was closely followed by Dudley Field Malone and Arthur Garfield Hays of the defense, who came from New York to complete the lineup.

Williams Jennings Bryan, Jr., from Los Angeles, in the early afternoon joined his father at the counsel table for the prosecution. A. T. Stewart, attorney general of the 18th Tennessee judicial circuit, official prosecuting officer of the state, arrived from Winchester as night fell.

A meeting of the defense lawyers this afternoon marked the first time that they have all met in conference.

Witnesses Coming.

The day brought the first of the defense scientific witnesses, Dr. William Goldsmith, Professor of biology at Southwestern college, who came from Winfield, Kan., to be available if needed to testify. Dr. Goldsmith said that evolution is "simply a process through which the present and future complex conditions of the universe have developed and will develop from the simpler pre-existing conditions."

"I will say that evolution has to do with the progress changes which are taking place in the entire universe," he said, "and it has no more to do with the monkey story than it has with the unfolding of a beautiful flower. It neither denies God nor does it teach that man came from monkeys." A significant incident to many here in connection with the opening of court tomorrow is that the special term of court, under the provisions of the law, automatically brings back the special grand jury. Should the prosecution decide that the pending indictment against Scopes is not strictly according to the letter of the law as has been suggested, he could be reindicted with dispatch tomorrow.

The defense was expected to move to quash the indictment and refusal of this motion by Judge John T. Raulston, presiding, would bring the much discussed case finally into court.

Honoring Teachers.

In a statement issued today, Mr. Bryan charged that the defendant, Scopes, as center of the present legal controversy, is working more serious injury to school teachers that "to any other class." He predicted, that "this harm" would be increased to an infinite degree by the establishment of the biology instructor's alleged views on the independence of the teacher.

The fundamentalist teacher advocated preserving "the present system" by which, he said, teachers are selected without regard to their views on disputed subjects. As a rule teachers respect the opinions of their employers, he believed.

"Protestant teachers do not offend Catholic students," Mr. Bryan declared, "and Catholic teachers do not offend protestant students and neither offend Jews. Republican teachers do not offend democratic students and democratic teachers do not offend republican students."

Under the present system, he said, "the personal views of the teacher are left free and the control of what is to be taught in the hands of these who employ the teachers." He insisted that these employers were "the tax payers and parents, acting through legislatures and boards of education."

Bryan Speaks Briefly.

Mr. Bryan spoke briefly today before the members of the Rhea county board of education, being introduced by Walter White, superintendent of county schools. Mr. White, introduced him as the world's greatest man and first citizen.

Emphasizing the value of education, Mr. Bryan declared in these remarks that religion should be placed yet higher in public esteem.

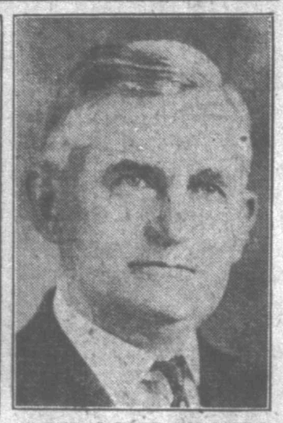

"It would be better," he said, "for Tennessee to give up school books than to abandon the Bible." He declared his belief in science but urged that it is necessary to know the science of how to live.

Attorney Promises to Have Defendant There Today

Constantin yesterday deposited a certified check for $3,000 to assure his appearance today. After waiting for some time for the defendant Commissioner Cotter accepted the promise of Harold Harper, Constantin's attorney that he would have his client in court tomorrow.

Constantin, who wishes to go abroad before facing an Oklahoma jury, offered through his attorney to give bond for his appearance in Oklahoma for trial. Maxwell S. Bible Doesn't Contradict Evolution, Chicago U. Dean Declares In Monkey Talk

CHICAGO, July 9.—(AP) — The Bible no more teaches or opposes evolution than it teaches or opposes a law of thermodynamics, Dean Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago Divinity school said tonight in an address at the university. He has been asked to testify for the defense in the Tennessee anti-evolution law case.

"The writers of the Bible used the language, conceptions and science of the times in which they lived," he said. "We trust and follow their religious insight with no need of accepting the views on nature of men who had no telescopes or other apparatus.

"Genesis tells us that night was made before day. Will the Tennessee legislature next pass a law against the laws of light which prove that night follows the temporary departure of the sun which puts the earth in its own shadow?

"We have to live in the universe science gives us. A theology that is contrary to reality must be abandoned o rimproved, but religion s no more to be identified with theology than a dinner is to be identified with the cook book."

"He who understands the Bible in accordance with actual facts has no difficulty in realizing the truth of its teaching that God is in the processes which have produced and sustained mankind. It is only those who are ignorant, both of the origin and nature of the Bible and of the facts in our universe, who are terrified lest science should make them lose their faith."

INFECTED MILK SALE STOPPED ON CITY ORDER

Tests Show Germs Exist In Products Brought Here

MAKE MORE TESTS

Whitworth Reiterates That "No Cause for Alarm" In Wichita Falls

What is regarded as the most important step yet taken in the campaign of the city health department against the typhoid fever outbreak here was reported Thursday by Dr. J. M. Whitworth, city physician, who has halted the sale of milk from a Wichita Falls dairy found to be distributing typhoid infected products. Definite proof that typhoid germs were present in the milk, which has been supplied to at least 20 per cent of the homes here where typhoid fever is present, came with the completion of exhaustive tests.

When the fever first appeared in excessive quantities, Dr. Whitworth and other members of the health department immediately got busy. Thorough inspections were started and an especially careful check fas kept on milk supplies since it was realized that in this lay a great source of danger.

The physician found one dairy here numbered among its customers several families in which typhoid fever appeared. Samples of this milk were taken and a complete culture test begun at once. One of these requires about two weeks for completion and the last examination, showing unmistakable signs of infection, was finished at noon Thursday. Orders were immediately sent out and milk from this dairy withdrawn from the market.

Dr. Whitworth said yesterday that this test was the first to be finished but that several others were now under way and all would be carried through. He hesitated to express an opinion as to their outcome, he said, but reiterated statements he has made repeatedly regarding the situation here "that there is nothin gto be alarmed about."

With these tests proceeding and a careful watch being kept on water, the health department is also prosecuting its campaign against the open toilet in Wichita Falls. This, according to many, is considered the greatest menace in the community and is one which the officials intend to eliminate. Notices are being given daily for connection of residence to the city sewer mains, and Commissioner Patton insists that wholesale arrests will be made if, at the end of a stipulated time, they are not connected. In this stand he has the support of Mayor Shepherd, other members of the city council, the health committee of the chamber of commerce and others.

Mayor Shepherd said yesterday after learning that one source of infection had been traced to the milk supply that he was extremely gratified.

"I think the situation is one we can handle," he declared, "and I am glad we are now able to put our finger on the cause."

No additional cases have been reported lately and in view of the thorough manner in which Dr. Whitworth is watching for new outbreaks it is believed that no spread of the contagion is now to be feared. Dr. Whitworth has enlisted the aid of all the doctors in town in promptly reporting to him any case of typhoid. He is taking personal charge of the investigation of possible causes for every case reported and it was through this work that the infected dairy was discovered.

Woman's Hand Rises In First Salute To Camp Mabry Ranks Passing In Review

AUSTIN, July 9.—(AP) — A feminine hand, touching the turned-down brim of a silk brocade hat, Thursday afternoon returned for the first time the woman commander in chief's salute to Texas troops, as 2,000 militia of the Texas national guard marched before her in Governor Miriam A. Ferguson's first review at Camp Mabry. Governor Ferguson, her personal staff and staff officers of the 36th division, held here the governor's review of the 71st brigade at Camp Mabry, while hundreds of Austin spectators were massed in the grandstand.

Six women stood in the first reviewing stand. Beside Governor Ferguson stood her five-year-old grandson, Ernest Nalle, Jr., dressed in his white uniform as colonel of the governor's personal staff. James E. Ferguson was fourth in the line, wearing civilian clothes. Three generals graced the front line: Major General John A. Hulen, division commander; Adjutant Mark McGee and as soon as the brigade staff passed, General Henry Hutchings, commander of the 71st brigade.

General Hulen stood at the left of the woman governor, then Mrs. George Nalle, former Governor James E. Ferguson, Miss Dorrace Ferguson, Mrs. Lena West Guinn of the Governor's office, Miss Ruby Long, Mrs. Mark McGee and Adjutant General McGee were the first line reviewers.

108 DEGREES REACHED HERE THURSDAY A.M.

Records for 1925 Broken; Light Rain Brings No Relief

All heat records for 1925 went by the boards here Thursday afternoon when the official thermometer of the observation station maintained by the Wichita Falls Electric company mounted to 108 degrees at 3 o'clock.

That yesterday was the hottest day of the year was not disputed by any one who got onto the streets and felt the sting of the blistering sun. It simply felt hotter—and was hotter.

Starts Early.

Old Sol was on the job early and by 9 o'clock was smoking things up in great shape. He came up out of a heavy bank of clouds in the east, but soon drove these to cover. Just before noon the thermometer hit 105, having crossed the 100 degrees mark about 10 o'clock. The early afternoon brought a continued ascension until at 3 o'clock it reached the record figure of 108. This was maintained until 4 o'clock when a gradual decline set in. At 5 o'clock the temperature had dropped to 107 and at 6 was a degree lower.

May Get Warmer.

Officials at the observation station said that despite the extreme heat yesterday, Wichita Falls has yet to see as boiling a day as June 15, 1924, when a temperature of 111 degrees was recorded here. They predicted, however, that this would be reached shortly if the present hot wave endures. No immediate relief is in sight, they said. A cloudy sky and threatened showers early in the evening had but little effect and hopes for a drenching rain were not realized.

THE WEATHER

LYRICS OF LIFE
By Douglas Malloch.
When Children Sing.

THE children seldom flatter, they
Have never very much to say
About the things that please them most.
Whoever plays the children's host
Need not expect some studied phrase
Your hospitality to praise.
But there's a better way, I guess,
To tell the day's a great success.
To tell the children like a thing—
It's simply when they start to sing.

You take them riding in the car:
A bit blase the children are,
You talk about the lovely fields:
A faint "uh-huh" is all it yields.
You speak about the splendid road,
Or some magnificent abode,
But though you bend a listening ear,
A faint "um-hum" is all you hear.
The children seldom say a thing—
But pretty soon they start to sing.

The children seldom flatter, though
They may be happier than you know,
The children have a better way
Their praise to speak, their words to say.
They have a way that matters more
Than pretty speeches at the door.
Perhaps your most expensive ball
Was not a real success at all.
Perhaps your most successful thing
The day you made the children sing.

Clouds a Plenty But Rain Passes City By To Fall in Petrolia

Dark overhanging clouds that came up from the west and south yesterday afternoon sent Wichitans scurrying for cover. Prospects of moisture went glimmering however when only a slight sprinkle fell here.

The water in the dark clouds had to fall somewhere though but it wasn't in Wichita county. Bowie reported a light shower late yesterday evening. A sprinkling was reported between Charlie and Byers in the afternoon and a heavier shower last night with prospects of still more. Petrolia also got a shower. Waurika reported no rain but Ryan went to bed last night with a hard shower falling over the community. The rain was short lived however. Seymour, Childress, Frederick, Altus, Henrietta, Electra and Iowa Park reported plenty of cloud but no rain. Motorists from Burkburnett late last night stated that a sand storm swept over the highway in the early evening and completed the devastation of the hot day. No rain was reported.

COURT DENIES PLEA TO OUST BANK RECEIVER

W. J. Mangum Retained Despite Motion of Henrietta Creditors

The application of creditors of the Merchants and Planters bank of Henrietta for the removal as receiver of the institution of W. J. Mangum was overruled Thursday afternoon by Judge P. A. Martin of the 89th district court. It was held that evidence presented was not sufficient to warrant Mr. Mangum's removal as a receiver for the bank.

Appointed in June, 1923.

He has served as received since June, 1923, when he was appointed by Judge Paul Donald of the 97th district court. Action against him was brought on grounds of alleged mismanagement of the bank's affairs and inefficiency.

Much of the afternoon session of court was devoted to testimony of creditors of the bank and to a lengthy report from a special auditor who was retained to go over the bank's books.

The case came to Wichita county on a change of venue rising out of the disqualification of Judge Vincent Stine of the Henrietta court who at one time was an attorney representing the institution.

Iowa Park Youth Given A. & M. Scholarship For Excellent Poultry Work

A scholarship at A. and M. college, coming as an award from president W. B. Bizzell and presented because of special aptitude in agricultural and poultry work, has been awarded to Reid Estes, 19-year-old Iowa Park boy who has attained remarkable success in these lines of endeavor. The scholarship is the first of its kind ever to be awarded in the history of the school, although one similar to it is to be given to an East Texas boy when he completes his elementary education in June 1926.

Young Estes is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Estes and was a prominent athlete of the school prior to his graduation. He was a member of the football and basketball teams and was also interested in tennis. His consistent winning of prizes at poultry shows, cobined with a thorough and intimate knowledge of agricultural resulted in his being taken on an extensive trip over the Fort Worth and Denver railroad lines where he made talks to many poultry and farm clubs.

Upon completion of his A. and M. training he expects to take up extension work.

In a letter to Supt. W. R. Bradford of the Iowa Park schools asking him to make the award to Estes, Da Bizzell said "I have heard a great deal about the accomplishments of Reid Estes and from what I can learn he is an unusually promising boy. I feel that the state of Texas can well afford to make some investment in the aptitude of boys of his promise."

DISCOURAGING REPORT COMES FROM STATE'S FARM BUREAU

Increased Acreage For Staple Produced at 6 Per Cent by Geo. Terrell

DISAGREES WITH U. S.

He Says He Cannot Obtain Basis for Government's Revised Planting

WASHINGTON, July 9.—(AP)— A corn crop one-fourth larger than last year's was forecast today by the department of agriculture, which placed prospective production at 3,085,000,000 bushels. That would be the third largest on record.

Wheat prospects improved 19,000,000 bushels during June, production being forecast at 650,000,000 bushels, based on July 1, conditions.

AUSTIN, July 9. — A sharp falling off in condition of cotton in Central and Southwestern Texas, due to dry weather, left the prospective yield of the state, on July 1 at only 61 per cent of normal, according to state Agricultural Commissioner George B. Terrell's compilation reports from every cotton-growing county.

Average Yield.

Texas cotton acreage is between 17,000,000 and 18,000,000 acres, Terrel said, or 6 per cent gain over 1924. Conditions now indicate a crop a million bales short of last year, he said.

Other crops, including grain, hay, sorghums and sweet potatoes, range about two-thirds of a normal crop, according to Terrell, with prospects of a considerable yield if rain comes. He urged the planting of feed crops, even this late.

The northwestern district of Texas promises to yield a 72 per cent cotton crop, Terrell said. Central Texas stands to yield only 42 per cent, and southwestern Texas 45 per cent. Other districts are: northern, 67 per cent; western, 64 per cent; eastern district, 72 per cent; average, 61 per cent.

Other Texas Crops.

Other crops were estmiated as follows, the figures representing the percentage of a normal yield predicted:

Corn, 49 per cent; hay, 65; peanuts, 73; grain sorghum, 65; syrup sorghum, 60; sweet potatoes, 67; ribbon cane, 53.

The statement of the agricultural commissioner in general is discouraging. "This has been the driest year in Texas for many years. What rains have fallen have been confined to small areas in different parts of the state, and crops are very spotted, owing to scattered and limited rainfall," he said. "A large area extending from Waxahachie to Corpus Christi has had so little rainfall that nearly all crops have failed, and it is not possible to make more than half a cotton crop in this great black land belt, where usually more than half the cotton is grown. The farmers in this section are selling their cattle and mules for anything they can get, because there is no grass for the stock and they are unable to buy fed." The commissioner goes into the cotton situation in detail:

Report in Detail.

"Our reports show an increase in cotton acreage of 6 per cent over the acreage of last year. The cotton acreage for Texas, based on the government estimate of acreage of 16,298,000 acres, made December 1, 1924, according to our figures, should be 17,275,880 acres. Based on the government's revised acreage published recently, the acreage should be 18,237,000. I do not know where the government gets the revised figures, as I have seen no report of how they were obtained. I have tried to obtain from the government the acreage as shown by the recent agricultural census, which should be the most accurate, but I have been unable to do so. I am frank to say I do not know what the acreage is, but it seems to be between 17 and 18 million acres, according to the most reliable information I can get.

"The drouth, boll weevil, and lice have done considerable damage in Texas. In the dry sections the lice have done serious damage, and boll weevil infestation and leaf worms are reported in the Rio Grande valley. Some poisoning is being done in the Rio Grande valley section.

"It is impossible to make a large crop with the best conditions in the future. Any estimate of production is a mere guess at this time, and government officials should not indulge in wild guesses, as these guesses are sometimes taken seriously by well meaning persons, and they are generally used by speculators to the disadvantage of the poducers. In fact no estimate of production should be made before September 1, and it should be made simulaneously with ginning reports.

"Boll weevils are reported in the big producing states of Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, and they may do great damage in the next 30 days.

Plenty of Fuel Oil In Vegetables For World, Dealers Told

CHICAGO, July 9.—Assurance of an inexhaustible supply of fuel oil from the vegetable kingdom has guaranteed that oil heating has come to stay, Morgan J. Hammers of Chicago, told 250 dealers in oil heating devices in convention here today.

"A paradox in situation," added Mr. Hammers "is that the burning of oil for heating purposes has been good business for the coal people. The distillation of oils from soft coal is developing rapidly and the coal producers are selling to the oil refiners."

No changes were reported in crude oil prices for the major districts; Pennsylvania crude, Bradford district, is quoted at $3.90 a barrel; all other grades $3.45 to $3.80.

Mid-Continent oils are quoted $1.35 to $2.35 a barrel, Gulf Coast crude, grade "A" $1.75; grade "B" $1.50 and California $1.25 to $2.40.

AUSTIN, July 9.—Devising of better methods to prevent natural gas waste in South and West Texas is the purpose of a conference of all operators in the gas fields ranging from Live Oak county to Houston, called for Monday by the state railroad commission. Railroad Commissioner C. V. Terrell, H. E. Bell, chief supervisor of the oil and gas division of the railroad commission, and a number of experts from the commission will attend the conference.

A short time ago, a well near Refugio blew out and is now wasting millions of cubic feet of gas each day, said Chief Supervisor Bell. "Oftentimes waste of gas is due to carelessness and wastelessness of operators. At other times, however, all possible care would not prevent the blowing out of a natural gas well, with the consequent large wastage."

News of the Fields

Petroleum Producers-Kemp & Kempner.

Petroleum Producers have abandoned their No. 1 Kemp & Kempner, located in block 54, Wichita Valley Farm lands as totally dry at 1850 feet.

Carter et al-Tubeville.

On the Turbeville land in section 124 of the Harris club ranch, central Archer county, Carter and associates have an oil sand topped at 1514 feet on which casing will be set and tested today.

Pace et al-Edgerly.

Pace and associates are abandoning their No. 1 Edgerly as a dry hole at a total depth of 2002 feet. This test was located in S. A & M. G. survey abstract 276, Wichita county and to the west of Burk station.

Cavin Lowry-Anderson.

On the Anderson tract near the center of the north line of block 19, S. A. R. survey, Archer county, Cavin Lowery and associates have a sand at 1419 feet. Casing will be set at once and cemented, preparatory to testing the end of the week.

Cranfill-Mills.

After drilling a sandy shale where the oil was expected on their No. 4 Mills, located in section 2413, T. E. & L. survey, Cranfill Brothers are abandoing as dry at 1435 feet. This well is located approximately four hundred feet to the west of their No. 1 producer.

Texhoma-Pace-Bernheart.

On their No. 1 Bernheart, located in the William McCarty survey, abstract 1488, north Young county, and to the nortwest of the Litchfield pool, Texhoma-Pace are drilling below 1150 feet to be completed as a dry hole at 1200 feet.

Texas Co.-Anderson.

Experiencing trouble in landing casing on their No. 1 Anderson, located 400 feet south and 150 feet east of the northwest corner of block 22, S. A. R. survey, Archer county, the Texas company as cleaning out above sand topped at 1431 feet, and expect to set and test within the next few days.

Humphries-Bass 1 Anderson.

On the Anderson tract to the north of the Norday well and located in the southwest corner of the north forty of the east eighty of block 49 SAR survey, Humphries-Bass have set casing and cemented on an oil sand topped at 1,430 feet.

Murchison-Fain, Hutchings.

Murchison and Fain are spudded on their number one Hutchings located 400 feet south and 1,800 feet east of the northwest corner of the south half of TE&L survey number 230. This test is approximately half a mile southeast of Olney townsite and is of particular interest the more so as it is one of the first wells in this district to be drilled with the new type gasoline rotary engine.

Texhoma-Rowland.

On their Rowland lease located in the Chambliss survey north Montague county the Texhoma Oil and Refining company have a five million gasser from sand topped at 731 and drilled to 753 feet. On their number A-1 Lemons in the same district but in the Samuel Little survey the plug was drilled at 724 feet but showed gas which was mudder off, and they are now drilling belof 800 feet.

Prairie-Waggoner.

The Prairie Oil and Gas will drill in tomorrow on their Waggoner wildcat, located on the center of the north line of the southeast quarter of section 45, block 4, H. & T. C. survey, Wilbarger county. Oil sand was struck at 2320 feet about 10 days ago at which time showing was made for a nice producer. Tomorrow the last act will be given showing whether this territory is also to be added to the list of producing properties of the much drilled Waggoner pasture.

Wright et al-S. Wilson.

On the Sanford Wilson lease east of Archer City Dr. Wright and associates have what appears to be the making of a wonder pool. Oil sand topped at 1,081 feet was drilled without a break for forty-seven feet, but due to running into the top with a large bit they were unable to get a satisfactory casing seat. The well is now drilling at 1,294 feet and should be on the sand from which Holmes and others have already tested a good many times about 1,300 feet, in the next few days.

Gulf-Waggoner

Flowing better than two hundred barrels a day from a sand drilled from 1,519 to 1,525 feet, the Gulf Production company's No. 2 on their Waggoner "R" lease, located 385 feet to the west of their number 1 in section 50 block 14 H&TC survey producing from a seventeen hundred foot sand gives this part of the field a place comparable to that of the South Vernon pool. With Humble's producer in the thirteen hundred foot sand about half a mile to the west and the two sands on the Gulf lease a real pool the like of which Vernon and the Waggoner pasture alone see mable to supply is the latest word. Due to this and the Humble recent completion other companies are moving in and this area may soon rival its co-partner to the west.

Oil Test at Tipton Down to 1,300 Feet

TIPTON, Okla., July 9.—The Otter Creek oil test, located north of Tipton, on the bank of Otter creek, is down to the 1,300-foot level with drilling progressing rapidly, says a report just received here. No further sands have been picked up, it is said. Several gas pockets have been encountered and two or three small sands which are said to be good indications.

Drillers hope to tap a sand at 1,600 feet, this being the joint idea of the drillers and geologists.

BIGGEST SALE IN HISTORY IS P-T. PROMISE

Perkins-Timberlake to Begin Clearance Sale This Morning

The biggest sale in the history of Perkins-Timberlake company is the promise of T. A. Bradley, advertising manager of the Wichita store.

With hundreds of dollars having been spent to advertise the big clearance sale, with all the territory in a radius of 60 miles of Wichita covered by circulars and newspapers, announcing the big semi-annual price cut, beginning this morning, the sale does promise some of the best bargains offered in the city in some time.

Three Floors Ready

The three floors of the big store at the corner of Ninth and Indiana have been rearranged and decorated for the occasion, with price tags showing the cut values on all merchandise. On the top floor the millinery and the ladies' ready-to-wear departments are all set for the opening rush, according to Mr. Bradley. Practically every garment in the ready-to-wear department has been cut in price by 20 per cent or more. All the hats have been cut.

On the main floor more saleswomen and men have been employed to see that everyone is promptly waited on. In the basement, however, the greatest preparation is being made. The bargain floor has only been open less than a year, the manager stated, and consequently has no carried over merchandise to place on sale. Everything in the basement has been cut in price, and some unsual bargain will be obtainable.

The sale is strictly what the name implies, a clearance drive. Efforts will be made to rid the store of all spring and summer merchandise, so as to make room for the fall clothes that are being bought in New York at the present time by the company buyers.

Every spring and summer article in the building has been cut in price, Mr. Bradley stated that in some instances the cuts were [illegible] much as half the cost of the garment. Emphasis is being laid on the fact that summer articles of clothing must go, and though the company lose a little on the sale of the article, it will gain by not having to carry the stock over one year.

In addition to the summer stock that has been reduced in price, practically all the merchandise in the entire store has been cut. All shoes, men's suits, gloves, hats, hosiery, ladies' clothing, trunks and toilet accessories have been greatly reduced.

Another interesting phase of the sale that is little known to the public is that all the spring and summer merchandise that is being placed on sale, is not stock bought saveral months ago. Much of the merchandise is entirely new to the store, having been bought within the past week or so in New York by buyers. Mr. Bradley says that this stock was bought at cut wholesale prices and consequently allows a still greater cut in retail prices that would have been possible had the article been carried over from spring.

The sale is being held in connection with the announced policy of the management to clear their stores of surplus stock twice each year, once in January to make way for the spring merchandise and again in July for the fall stock.

Each of the 27 associated Perkins-Timberlake stores will begin their July sales this morning, according to Mr. Bradley. Only seven of the stores go under the stock name of Perkins-Timberlake, but all will offer stock at reduced prices.

F. P. Timberlake, general manager of the chain of stores, R. D. Kennedy, manager of the local store, and buyers from practically every department on the three floors are in New York at the present time buying fall stock for the company. It is to make way for this merchandise that old stock must be moved out.

Main Floor of Perkins-Timberlake Store

The above shows a view of the main floor of the big Perkins-Timberlake store, corner Ninth and Indiana, where the semi-annual clearance sale will begin this morning. The sale promises to be one of the biggest of the sort ever staged in Wichita Falls and the best in point of values and stock that the company has ever put on in this city.

Unnamed Birth Certificate May Save Boy In California From Gallows For Murder

DALLAS, July 9.—On two birth certificate records here, hang the fate of Lewis Perry, former Dallas and Carrollton youth now in San Quenton penitentiary, California, waiting execution tomorrow for the murder of Policeman Glenn Bond.

Mrs. Jennie Perry, mother of Lewis is in San Francisco, claiming that Perry was born March 12, 1906, and if this is correct, he lacks three weeks of being 18, the California law prohibiting the death penalty under that age. The birth certificate upon which she bases her claim does not bear the name of the child, bearing the notation, "not named."

Contention that the certificate showing a baby born on Jan. 5, 1904, was filed the day after Oscar was born, and that the one showing the birth of another on March 12, 1906, was filed for Lewis. Official in the county clerk's office say all that can be done is to support her contention by affidavit, from his mother and other relatives.

Whether California authorities will place sufficient credence in the affidavits to reduce his sentence for the death penalty to a life term, Lewis Perry will not probably know until tomorrow.

A PLOW BOY WHO BECAME A COLLEGE PRESIDENT.

There is no royal road to greatness. In this glorious republic the accident of birth has nothing to do with the case. Opportunity is knocking at the door of every boy born under the folds of the flag of the free. Texas is an imperial commonwealth. It was a republic before it was a state of the American union. The founders of the republic carved it out with swords.

They were wise men, these fathers of Texas. They provided for the education of the youth of the commonwealth, the boys and girls who came after them. They declared that the wealth of the commonwealth should be taxed to provide adequate educational facilities and advantages for all the children of all the people. These fathers of old conquered a wilderness. They were herdsmen and tillers of the soil. Many of them had intellectual attainments and culture of the highest order. They believed in the principles of liberty, the aristocracy of the brain and the democracy of the soul.

They reserved an empire of land which should be used in the cause of education and for the education of children of the masses throughout the times. They builded wiser than they knew. Their vision was a vision greater than the wisdom or methods of many of those who came after them. They saw in the distance a system of public schools the first on the North American continent. They saw in the distance a university second to none in America.

It is a long call from an ambitious boy on a Texas farm to the presidency of the University of Texas. There is a long road to be traveled for one to win the highest honor in the gift of the people of Texas. For the presidency of a great university is the highest honor that the regents speaking for all the people can bestow upon any man. Walter M. W. Splawn traveled the road and the honor is his.

He came from the farm. His father cultivated a farm just as millions have cultivated farms in Texas and all other American states and have been the chief mainstays of the republic from Colonial days until this hour. President Splawn was an unknown in the not recent past. But he knew himself and from early boyhood he had been a student ever determined to equip himself for any position in his world of endeavor when the call should come and like every other ambitious youth he felt that the call would come some day.

He is a product of a Texas farm. He is a product of Texas schools and colleges, both public and denominational. He invaded the class rooms of distant colleges and universities to further equip himself for the battle of life and to be ready at all times to answer when Opportunity knocked at his door.

John J. Ingalls, in an exquisite poem, declared that Opportunity never knocks but once. Walter Malone, in another exquisite poem, answers Ingalls by saying that Opportunity was a daily knocker at one's door and that it would be well for the one upon whom the call was to be made to be ready at all times to answer the repeated knockings.

And so W. M. W. Splawn, when he was unknown, fitted himself to be ready at all times when Opportunity knocked and then passed on, not forever but to return at his own convenience. He was a member of the faculty of the State University when Pat Morris Neff was governor. Neff made him a member of the state railway commission when a vacancy occurred. The vacancy was Opportunity registering a loud knock for the boy who was reared on a farm and who had prepared himself to accept a new place in the world and not to be found wanting.

He accepted and it was then that his knowledge of economics, rail and otherwise, marked him as a man to be dealt with by those who direct the affairs of the people of Texas. Commissioner Splawn knew himself and he did not have to find himself in his new field of endeavor. He dealt with rail problems as they came before him and he did not dodge or evade or shift responsibility.

His published addresses caught the fancy of the people. His pungent handling of public questions forced him into the public picture gallery. He visited Washington many times. He appeared before the interstate commerce commission many times, and he made a most favorable impression upon these men who are said to be experts and who direct or control the railways of America and the freight and passenger traffic of this great country.

Time rolled on. This boy who was reared on a farm announced for re-election. There was no opposition. No contender appeared to attempt to wrest the office from him. He was renominated by the democrats of Texas, and then Opportunity came knocking again and the regents of the University of Texas selected W. M. W. Splawn as the president of the institution which the fathers of Texas had visioned long ago and one of the highest honors that it is possible to fall into the lap of any American citizen.

His election or selection was not an accident. Pat Morris Neff had picked Splawn for rail commissioner for the reason that he felt that Splawn was the best equipped man that offered and this his knowledge of economics and his other qualifications made him the man for the place. Then the people of Texas, or rather the democrats of Texas, renominated Splawn for the high office. It was not long until the last call came which transferred Splawn from one field of endeavor to another field and now the educator as president of the great University of Texas has a record to make in future years.

He is a Texan and he knows Texas. He does not live in the past. He salutes the rising and not the setting of the sun. He is of that Texas that is ambitious to go forward along educational lines and all other lines. He has an open road, but it is not a concrete highway nor is its surface smooth.

There are pitfalls and there are jagged rocks in that highway where he must travel. All his predecessors found the pitfalls. All his predecessors found the jagged stones. All his predecessors found the thorns as well as the roses.

But this is the law of life. If there were no barriers to be broken down, no rough places to cross, the monotony of living would weigh heavily upon the minds of the courageous, the clearsighted, the creators of new civilization, the men who are ambitious to live a life of service and write high their names on the scroll of fame.

The boy from the farm has traveled far. He is the president of a great university. Now his work has been cut out for him and the eyes of the people are focused upon him.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

Boys.

The other day on a golf course I heard a man of fifty, who had four boys of his own, berating a caddy because he could not find a ball which had been clumsily driven into the long grass.

The caddy, about ten years old, with little experience, was doing his best to keep back the tears, while he trotted to and fro frantically trying to find the ball.

Eventually it was discovered hidden under a patch of mown grass where it had rolled.

Without a word of apology, the player made another shot, and again lost a ball. "Now find that one," he said angrily to the caddy, "or I will report you to the caddy master, and you will never play on this course again. I never saw such a stupid boy as you are."

This was not only cruel, but it was a lie.

I happen to know the sons of the man, and they are just as stupid, perhaps stupider than the caddy.

But their father, nevertheless, thinks a great deal of them, and I wonder what he would say and do to a man who would talk to them as he did to the caddy, who is compelled to carry about heavy bags of golf clubs for short-tempered and inconsiderate old gentlemen.

Boys learn from their elders.

If they happen to be thrown among ill-natured old curmudgeons, who can blame them if they grow up to use bad language and bully the people who are working for them.

Young boys naturally look hopefully out on the world, and expect fair treatment from it.

Soon enough they will be disillusioned.

But the longer they hold to their illusions, the more can be expected of them when they become men.

A soured, suspicious boy is a distressing spectacle. Yet you find many of them among those who are compelled early in their lives to go out in the world to work to support themselves or to help to support their parents.

If golfers, who are men of at least moderate means, and often wealthy and independent, would think a little more about their own children or about their own boyhood, they would be more considerate of the youngsters who carry their bags, even if sometimes these youngsters happen to be surly or incompetent.

The game of golf, it is true, is filled with irritations, but there is never any reason for the player of the fits of fury of which the caddies are the victims, follow some particularly unskillful work on the part of the golfer.

We all pretend to be interested in the future and in the next generation. The best way to assure the prosperity of both is to do all we can to make life pleasant and encouraging for the children who are to remain here after we are gone.

And inasmuch as caddies are an increasing class, a little talk about treating them fairly just now may be worth making.

GENERAL BUTLER HAS HAD HIS FILL

General Smedley Butler of the United States Marine was loaned to the mayor of Philadelphia to clean up the Quaker city, to put down bootleggers and bootlegging joints and to eradicate crime and criminals. He has been on the job 18 months, and has finally admitted that he has been unable to clean up the Quaker city and that he will turn the job of fighting back to the local authorities at the end of the year.

He charges that he has been fighting political influence at every turn. He admits that he does not want any more political jobs. He says emphatically that he has had enough of serving the people. General Butler will return to the marines. He is known as the Fighting Quaker. He is as fearless as any man that ever smelled powder, but the republican politicians of Philadelphia and their democratic allies have put him away. They have filled him with disgust.

He could put down the criminal but he could not put away the politicians and their followers. And now a federal grand jury and a federal court will tackle the job of putting away the bootleggers and their protectors in the staid old city founded by William Penn. Pennsylvania is a wet state. That is, the cities and the towns are wet and the cities and towns control the political organizations of the commonwealth.

Gifford Pinchot is the governor of Pennsylvania. He is the only man that has triumphed over the big bosses for many years. His hands are tied. He could not control the legislature elected with him. Now the governor is going to make one more fight to make his state dry regardless of consequences and then retire to the shade of private life.

BLANTON HAS THE FIGURES.

Bert C. Blanton, a consulting industrial engineer of Texas, has the figures. Bascom N. Timmons had them a month ago. Bert C. Blanton says the net increase in the number of industries in Texas for the 25 year period, 1899 to 1924, inclusive, approximates 35.8 per cent and the aggregate capital investment is nearing the $800,000,000 mark while the value of products of Texas industries now exceeds one billion dollars per annum.

He estimates the total capital investment in seven major groups of industry in Texas today at about $695,365,000. These industries are power and light, petroleum refining, cotton compresses, gins and cotton and oil mills, food products manufactured, textile mills, ice and cold storage and cement manufacturing plants.

His survey shows the power and light industry leads all other classes or groups in Texas with a total capital investment of about $200,000,000 and that petroleum refining ranks second with an estimated investment of $175,000,000.

It must be true that the giant among all the states is coming out of its trance. Texas is a billion dollar agricultural state, a half billion dollar livestock state and its annual production of lumber is a very important item.

TEXAS FIGURES TELL THE STORY

According to the secretary of the Texas Manufacturers' Association in, 1900 the total value of manufactured products produced in the state amounted to only $92,894,000, while in 1923, according to the United States census they amounted to $979,667,812, and at this time they exceed one billion dollars.

There is a leader, the petroleum refining industry with nearly $400,000,000 in manufactured products annually.

Why crippel the institutions of higher education by niggardly appropriations? Why the miserly salaries paid to the judges of the higher courts, the governor and other state officials? Why not a living wage for the teachers of Texas?

MAKING THEIR OWN

Nations that formerly have been heavy buyers of England's cotton goods are now spinning for themselves but they continue to buy raw cotton in the United States. Why Not?

"KILLARNEY of the CHORUS"

Holiday Days Waiting in the Waiting Room.

By GLUYAS WILLIAMS

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

Killarney leaned down for a moment so that he could not see her face. The gray cat had come to have its back rubbed. Gently her hands picked it up and stroked it mechanically until its soft sound of contentment answered. It must be nice to be a gray cat, she thought vaguely, and never have any worries. Across the table from her Scotts face had gone furrowed.

"Killarney, what's the matter, why don't you speak to me?"

She looked at him at last. "Because your father was right," she said wistfully. "I ought never to marry you, Scott. I'll have to give you up to the other girl."

For a brief second recollection came to her of that flawless and cameo-like beauty—the kind that had been born to the best in the world and that nothing could throw into a panic. It was panic that Killarney McKenna herself was feeling but she fought it down.

"Don't you see, Scott—can't you see? If I let you go ahead and marry me now it'd just be dragging you down? Everything would be against you all the rest of your life—your father, your own people, everyone in business. There might have been some talk even if there'd been no objections but now—Scott, I would simply mean your ruin." A small, breaking sound ran through her voice. "That's what has come to me all of a sudden. It's come to me so clearly I know there isn't any mistake. I've always been afraid something must happen. You're on your way to success now, to a big place in the world. I never, never could forgive myself if I took all that away from you."

"Look here,' he said abruptly, commandingly, "who put those ideas into your head?"

"Just myself," she said softly "But they are there. I am right, Scott."

He said nothing while moments dragged interminably. "Next Sunday night,' he remarked finally, "my father is starting west on a long trip to look over some property. He tells me that I'm to go with him. But that isn't the whole of it. Lois George and her mother are going too, as his guests. We're to have a private car hitched onto that Thunderbolt of your—it's the fastest flyer headed in that particular direction. He was perfectly plain about what he means by it. Either I go along with them and come back with 'this show girl foolishness' ended in a satisfactory way, he said, or I can stay in New York and scratch gravel on the outside for myself—and you. I have to admit he's been very straightforward about it. He got where he is today by being a hard man to beat. He had the whole thing fixed half an hour after I'd shown him you."

"My picture?"

"Yes." He did not say that Morgan Revell had handed it back to him with hardly a glance at it, that his fathers rigid eyebrows had been drawn together in a black line, his face as expressionless as a mask.

There was something of that same fixed purpose in Scott's face now. For the first time Killarney McKenna was beginning to see the meaning of that rather square chin, the dominance in those eyes that had a way of holding yours. They were centered on her—bindingly, compellingly. In another moment she might be swept off her feet, all resistance gone, wanting only to be taken in his arms. But still the one right idea burned like a clear white flame.

A little, desperate rush of words came from her. "Scott—Scott, will you leave it all to me? Don't say anything, don't ask me anything—please! I'll decide it for both of us. It's my right and mine only. Be at this table an hour before your train leaves that night with your father and the—the other girl on it. If I'm here to meet you it means we'll go together no matter what happens. If I'm not here it's my message to you that Im giving you up to him and to her. And in the meantime I—I want to think. You mustn't try to meet me or talk to me. Go back and tell your father he'll have his answer from both of us then. Will you promise to do all that?"

"No," he shot at her almost fiercely. "I'll answer him myself inside an hour. It's you that I want."

Dawning across the table Killarney McKenna's very best smile came gloriously to meet him. It had in it all the blue of its old softness and also a tiny mist. He looked for one long moment down into the depths of her eyes and then settled back in his chair.

"Yes, Killarney," he said. "But you be here. "I'll promise."

Soundlessly the breath of a sigh escaped her. She had fought him off and beaten him. And she knew that after tonight she would never see him again. Scott Revell's "show girl foolishness" was being ended for his own good.

They were only two cans of plain tomatoes and a single can of very special asparagus, but nevertheless Killarney McKenna found that her eyes were straying to them all the while. It was not at all surprising that since that first night they had never even been touched—a can opener and memories one would like to keep somehow do not go together. They stood on a spotless shelf in the apartment kitchen looking down on her as she moved to and fro, a listless little figure in a wide, checked apron. She was getting supper for two—old Matin liked his Sunday suppers hearty and hot.

"Are ye comin' out soon, Killarney?" his voice rumbled from the living room where he sat in the wheel chair. These days he made it a point to call out guardedly and get an answer in same kind from her if she was long out of his sight. Twice lately he had awkwardly rolled his chair to the door of her room and found her curled in a crumpled heap on the bed, very weary and very forlorn. He had the story by heart—Killarney had come straight to his big shoulder with it.

For a moment his deep-set eyes had blazed with all their old fire. He had not been told quite all, certainly not that part about the "show girl foolishness." Wheel chair er no wheel chair, crippled legs or no crippled legs, Killarney knew he would have gone to face the man who had made that remark. Her lips twisted a little and she managed to get the cover on a smoking dish.

"There," she said quietly, putting it down on the table in front of him. "It's just beans but they're as brown as they can be."

It was a silent, strained meal. No show tonight, so there was no hurry about it. The table had been cleared and her father's battered pipe was vigorously alight before any words were spoken. Killarney stood by the window looking out, with beneath her the sheen of the rails and the glimmer of the signal lights. The week had gone. Scott Revell, his father and the other girl would pass tonight in their own palace of a car on behind the Thunderbolt.

"Ye're sure ye ain't going downtown?" came old Martin's question a shade wistfully. "Ye've just about time to get there nicely now."

She still stared into the night. "No," she murmured, "I'm not going to meet him, daddy. It's all over and done with. Or rather it will be when we see them go through."

She was right. She must be right. Desperately she had told herself that over and over during the days and nights that had dragged by. "I can't take a man and pull him down," she kept repeating soundlessly, while one small hand tightened on the window sash. "Can't cut him off from his own father and everything that's been his. Even if it means giving him up to that—that other one. I can't— I just can't."

Scott Revell had kept his promise as she knew he would. No attempt to see her through the week, no lettter or telephone call that would sway her from the purpose which he had no way of knowing. She knew that he was completely sure that she would meet him. Slowly, inexorably the hands of the clock on the mantel were moving on towards ten. As they crossed and touched the hour Killarney came across the room and stood fumbling with the worn turkey red cover of the table, not looking at her father whose eyes had not left her in a long time.

"He's there now," said Martin McKenna slowly. Behind them the door of the apartment clicked just the least and stood open but neither of them had heard a sound. The curtains at the windows stirred a little in this new-found breeze.

"Yes, daddy," the girl said tiredly. "Scott is there in that funny little French place waiting for me. And I won't be there. It will be the first time since we've known each other that I've failed him. But I have to, Daddy, I have to."

"And ye love him. De do, Killarney, ye do."

"I love him," she said simply, "with everything, I think, I have in me. And that is why I won't meet him. Marge Walsh and the others will call me a little fool tomorrow. Please, daddy, don't call me anything tonight."

She lifted her eyes to old Martin's face alight with sudden purpose. Down in that friendly, dim-shaded, queer restaurant of the Forties, Scott Revelle would be sitting, watching, watching, watching the door that would never open to greet her own coming.

"The place,' 'announced Martin McKenna suddenly, "has a tellyphone. I'm goin' to talk to it." With a swift turn he had swung the wheel chair and it headed for the table in the corner where the instrument stood. It did not, however, reach it. Killarney's hand were on it, Killarney's young strength had checked it, was holding it fast. In her wide eyes Martin McKenna saw something that caused him to sit back in quiet defeat.

"No, daddy. It's the one right thing I'm doing. It's my trouble—not yours. I've decided. I—I may break up into pieces, but I'll not have you or anyone else tell him what it is he really means to me."

She moved silently over and closed the door which had now swung a good quarter ajar on a bare landing. Then she reached up and turned low the burners in the chandelier so that the room was a chamber of half shadow. In a moment more she had moved the wheel chair into the window and had found a seat for herself beside it. Her hand stole out to be gripped by old Martin's rough one.

"Now," she said softly, "we'll just sit here and watch for the Thunderbolt to go with the three of them on her."

The minutes dragged and lengthened. Long ago he would have left the restaurant because he would have had her answer. He would be at the station. Now he would be boarding the car. Again and again little flashing pictures of their hours together were born, tingled with life, and drifted away. All behind now—all ended. She became aware that her father was speaking as though to himself. He too had been harboring previous memories.

"I never did think, Killarney, that it'd have to be the old Thunderbolt would play such a trick on my little girl. The old engine I drove all those years—and now she's to take the lad away."

"Yes," she murmured, "she's to take him away. But we'll talk to her tonight, daddy. She'll call back 'Good night, good luck,' to us just the same." There was a tiny quiver and her voice was still.

From far away came a faint whistling. She felt the grip of old Martin's tightening on her fingers. Off to the south there in the dusk the big driving wheels were turning, the swift tons of steel and plate were on their way. A few moments fore and, as remorselessly as destiny, they would sweep along the rails below, charging across half a continent.

"'Tis the Thunderbolt comin', Killarney. With good Jim Curley puttin' her through."

In the darkened room rose a small, pitiful cry. "And I was wrong, daddy, I was wrong. I had no right to take out of a man's life what he said was the best thing that ever came into it. Everything's there in him to win a whole world with and I wouldn't face it with him. I wouldn't let him have a hard time with me. I wanted to gve him a soft, easy way. It's a fight and a hard fight with someone who'll help beside him he wants most of all—there's no end and nothing could stop him then. That other girl—she isn't the kind to send him upwards at all. I've found him—and I've lost him. Oh, I know now—I was so wrong."

Trembling and defiant she was on her feet. In the distance down the deep cut glared the oncoming headlight, already the grinding wheels was beginnin to reverberate between the walls under the window.

"Daddy," cried Killarney tensely, "Jim Curley knows you? He trusts you?"

What Today Means to You

Cancer.

The planetary aspects of today denote more of an emotional urge than a practical tendency. They are rather complex, and while they do not counsel 'letting up" in the prosecution of any carefully devised plan, they do not imply any assured success. Under such conditions, and lacking assurance of achievement, it will be more politic, unless conditions compel a different attitude, to not attempt too much, but to be satisfied with the conscientious discharge of customary duties. The signs, on the other hand, combined with the emotional vibrations, indicate a responsiveness to love, and this, if taken advantage of, should be productive of the realization of your heart's desire.

Children born today will, regardless of sex, enjoy, during their early years, similar physical conditions; they will be normal in every way, and hsow every evidence of robusticity and vigor. A boy will continue along the same cause and attain maturity without any "setback." A girl, however, will, during her later childhood, develop signs of weakness and constant ill health. This condition can only be overcome by care, proper diet and outdoor exercise. In disposition and temperament, they will be rather self-willed, and show too little consideration for the feelings of others. They will sense a wrong very quickly and harbor resentment. They will always be difficult to understand and hard to control.

Is today your birthday If so, you are too timorous and retiring for your own good. Everyone, except yourself, realizes that you possess a high degree of natural ability, and one and all are surprised that you do not more successfully capitalize your inherent talents. You, while working faithfully and conscientiously for others, are afraid to trust your own efforts to do something for yourself. You apparently would rather be a doorkeeper in the abode of another than a prince in your own house. While blatant self-advertising is to be decried, while vulgar and loud astentation is to be criticised there is no success for the adoption of the other extreme, and excessive humility and exaggerated meekness will kill any chance of success.

You are naturally kind and sympathetic, and of a very loving and trustful disposition. If a man, you will be dominated by your wife. If a woman, you will, in all honesty and not for occult purposes, be a clinging wife.

Irrigation

The Government Method of Determining the Size of the Farm Unit.

It used to be that the settlers on government projects were limited to filing on 160 acres of land. This was identical with the amount allowed homesteaders on public lands any place in the United States.

After several projects had been built efforts were made to limit the size of the tract taken to 120, 80 and even 40 acres depending upon the projects. The idea was to provide as many homes as possible in the area reclaimed by irrigation.

Until recently no extensive study was made by any of the government agencies to determine the economic farm unit on the various proposed projects.

Now a different method is pursued. Before a project is built it is decided by a very thorough investigation what sized tracts should be sold.

A committee is appointed to make a survey of local conditions, the committee is composed of an experienced irrigation engineer, a soil scientist, a farm expert and such other authorities as is felt may be needed. This committee associates itself with another group of men chosen from the locality in which the project is to be built.

The local committee generally consists of a banker, a practical irrigation farmer, an engineer and such other citizens as may be necessary to give the investigators the proper local view point.

The engineering features of a project are not especially considered by those men. Such problems are worked out by the regular engineering corps. But they do consider everything which in their opinion may have to do with the success of the future farmers.

Soil conditions are deemed of great importance. How soon will the project waterlog; what kind of crops can be grown; what will be their value; are they readily marketable, are all questions that are taken up. Credit interest rates, and available money for loans are considered. In fact every factor which may make for the success or failure of an irrigation farmer is taken into account in deciding on how much land should be sold to each individual.

Through A Woman's Eyes

THE COMPANY YOU KEEP

A friend of the paper writes that her daughter has become intimate with some older girls in her class at school, girls whom for various reasons she considers improper associates, but that the child resents any interference in the choice of her friends.

"These girls," she writes, "are not only older than my daughter but they are among the least desirable element in the school. Yet when I speak to her about it, she says 'They can't hurt me. I can take care of myself."

The anxious mother should tell her daughter of a girl from an honorable and respected family who is in prison on a charge of killing her mother, which she did while in a frenzy to join companions whom her mother knew to be objectionable, for a gay evening. The distracted family say that she was always a good girl, but had gotten into bad company.

And to all remonstrances against these dangerous companions she had said, as many a girl on the same road has said before her. "Oh, I can take care of myself." But it turned out that she could not.

You can't walk through a den of wild animals and come out unscratched. You can't for any length of time breathe in a polluted, disease-ridden atmosphere and stay healthy. You can't enjoy the wild flavor of a toadstool and escape the poison. You can't, by all the rules of the game dance without paying the piper.

Nor is any girl clever enough to be able to play around with disreputable or questionable people for the excitement or whatever it is in their lives that appeals to her, take what she wants and remain free from the rest. It can't be done and it isn't being done.

In the first place there is her reputation. For that reason alone a girl cannot with impunity ignore the character of her associates. But particularly, you know the old saying about lying down with dogs and awaking with fleas. Eventually, and willing or not, she will have to pay the price.

That is why there is nothing more alarming to a mother, nothing more pitiable and hopeless to any of us who know the ways of the world, than to hear a girl say blithely: "I can take care of myself," while she deliberately ignores the first requisite of protecting and taking care of herself in her choice of the company she keeps.

Wife Shoots Actor; Says She Don't Know Why, And Spouse Says He Doesn't

NEW YORK, July 9.—Mrs. Edith Parker Davis, 22-year-old former Vanities girl, who came to Broadway from Oklahoma, was still in jail today for shooting her actor husband, Allen Davis. Earl Carroll, producer of the Vanities has been making arrangements for $10,000 bail, necessary to get her out. She insists she loves the man she seriously wounded.

"I don't know why; I don't remember anything about it; it's all a blank," she sobbed. She denied that she was jealous, though detectives credited her with references to another woman. She said they had quarreled, but about what she wouldn't tell.

Davis, an understudy to the leading man a Carroll's "White Cargo," is recovering from bullet wounds in his neck and jaw bone. He has declined to send a message to his wife and refused even to see her if she is released on bail.

"In a couple of days I may be better and change my mind," he said. "I don't know why she shot me."

Without his consent authorities cannot press the felenous assault charge on which Mrs. Davis is held. She awaits further hearing in court when physicians report on the actor's condition.

Mrs. Davis Tuesday night entered the apartment in the theatrical district where her husband was dining with Harry Wagstaff Bribble, playwright, and Melville Anderson, producer. She shot him, then tried to kill herself, but the pistol missed fire.

"Chickie," Screen Version of Great Novel Serial Coming to Mission Today

Does the modern girl have too much freedom?

Work on filming of "Chickie"—the attraction at the Mission next Sunday—which Earl Hudson produced for First National, was halted for an hour during production while Dorothy Maskaill and John Bowers argued the matter. Before the argument was over all the members of the cast were in it.

"Chickie" Modern Girl.

"Chickie" is the story of a modern girl—a girl who had too much freedom. And it was the story of "Chickie" which started the argument. Here is what the players in the cast had to say on the matter:

Dorothy Mackaill: "I do not think the modern girl has too much freedom. The modern girl is so different from the girl of our grandmothers' time that many cannot understand her. The modern girl can take care of herself at all times. She does not need bars across her windows."

John Bowers: "No matter how much a girl may know, she should be protected from danger. Too much freedom sometimes makes the girl more easy prey."

Hobart Bosworth: "In the old days the girls used to slip out the bedroom window at night when they really wanted to go somewhere. Today the modern girl frankly walks out the front door."

Why Worry Says Star.

Gladys Brockwell: "Why worry so much about the modern girl? She is a wonderful creature and is well able to take care of herself under all circumstances."

Myrtle Stedman: "I can't help but feel that there is too much freedom in the life of the modern girl.

More Truth Than Poetry

DISILLUSIONMENT

Perhaps suspicion is a vice,
As often we are told,
Perhaps it's not exactly nice
To be reserved and cold.
But when you find that new-made friends
Care not a rap for you—
But serve alone their private ends—
What are you going to do?

The beetles on my cherry tree
Had calmly staked a claim,
And with the tender leaves made free
Until the blue-jay came.
I watched him flit from limb to limb
And scatter them, like dust,
And thought I had a friend in him
Well worthy of my trust.

The drooping leaves regained their sheen,
The blossoms burst and fell—
And still he stayed upon the scene
And did his duty well.
Wherever bug or slug would seek
To dine upon a leaf,
One blow from that destroying beak
Despatched the skulking thief.

But when the fruit grew ripe and red
I found that I'd been wrong,
For my pretended ally fed
Upon it all day long.
Although he saved my cherry tree,
The azure painted elf
Had not been saving it for me—
But only for himself!

Spudders Clean Up On Dallas Series, Grabbing Final Contest, 8-1

ROBERTS WINS INITIAL GAME WITH TANNER

Domestics Take on Cats In First of Three Here Today

DALLAS, July 9.—Wichita made it three straight over the Dallas Steers taking today's game 8 to 1. Roberts, the new Spudder pitcher, kept the Steers' ten clouts well scattered. Wichita Falls infield did some lightning work marking up three double killings.

The Tannermen will appear at Wichita Falls Friday afternoon in the first game of a 10-day home stand. Fort Worth invades the Spudder lair for the first of a three-game series.

Start in Fourth

Wichita Falls got away to a one-run start in the fourth inning. Callaghan led off with a single to right. Distel sacrificed him to second. Fitzgerald singled through second, and Callaghan drew up at third. Bodie flied out to left, and Callaghan scored after the catch. Although Turgeon singled, the Spudders were unable to score any more in this inning.

The Tanner outfit stepped out and gathered three runs in the sixth. Callaghan drew a walk. Pence fileded sacrifice bunt by Distel, but hit the runner in the back with the ball. Fitzgerald singled to center, and Callaghan scored from second. Distel went to third. Bodie followed with a single to left, scoring Distel. Turgeon bunted safely down the third base line, filling the bases. Golvin hoisted out to left, and Fitzgerald scored after the catch. Bodie was thrown out attempting to take third. Turgeon stole second, and Dorman grounded out to short.

Four in Seventh

The Spudders broke out again in the seventh, scoring a quartet this time. Query started it off with a double to right. Roberts bunted to the mound. Pence fielded and pegged wildly to first. Query scored, and Roberts went to second. Callaghan singled to center, sending Roberts to third. Distel hit in front of the plate. Billings bobbled and the bases were full. Fitzgerald doubled to right, scoring Roberts and Callaghan. Eberhard went to the box. Bodie walked, again filling the bases. Gross muffed popup by Turgeon, but recovered and forced Bodie at second. Distel scored, Fitzgerald went to third. Fitzgerald was caught off third when Billings made a sweet throw to Segrist. Golvin singled to right. Turgeon went to third. They attempted a double steal and Turgeon was cut down at the plate.

Triple by Segrist and single by Eberhard gave Dallas its lone tally in the last half of the seventh.

Bulls on Display At Fair Grounds For Sport Fans

Fighters Plan Parade In Business District Noon Saturday

Sport followers who have had their curiosity aroused over the bull fights, Spanish and Mexican matadors, and everything, scheduled for the Fair park arena Saturday, Sunday and Monday evenings will be given the privilege of looking over the 30 bulls gathered for the fights by dropping out to the fair grounds any time today or Saturday.

The bulls, according to J. H. Letts, promoter, are of the fiercest and yet finest type of bovines that can be located in Texas. Most of the animals were obtained from the W. R. Lyons ranch near Byers, Texas. Every cowboy who has ever undertaken any kind of play with these animals has been chased to the fence in short order, says Letts.

The coterie of bull fighters who will participate in the performances have scheduled a parade through the business district for the Saturday noon hour. The municipal band will take part in the parade, and will play Saturday night at the fair grounds, said Letts. The performance is to swing under way at 8:30 o'clock.

Giants Split With Buccaneer Crew In Double Header

NEW YORK, July 9—(AP)—The Giants drew an even break with the Pirates in double header today, dropping the opener, 12 to 3, and winning the second game, 7 to 5. One game continues to separate the New York club from the leaders. Meusel's circuit wallop with two on base figured in the only Giant tallies in the first game. Kelly's homer with two on the sacks in the seventh inning decided the second game. Gowdy, New York catcher, was put out of the second game for protesting a decision.

But for an error in the first inning, when perfect play would have retired the side, the Buffs would have been shut out with but four hits. The Bears outplayed the Buffs at every point. Score:

Champions Rip Sox, 8-5 in 11 Innings

CHICAGO, July 9—(AP)—Chicago's defense went to pieces in the eleventh inning today after George Connaly, White Sox pitcher had been hit in the neck by a line drive off Rusel's bat and forced his retirement from the game. Kamm fumbled McNeely's grounder and Hooper let a hit go through him for another error and Lyons uncorked a wild pitch which gave the champions three runs and the game by a score of 8 to 5. Thurston pitched a good game until the ninth inning when he was driven off the hill. Connally was unable to stop the attack and the visitors tied the score forcing the game into extra innings. Cats Send Kemner Back to Ardmore

FORT WORTH, July 9.—"Dutch" Kemner, young right hander who made a fine start with the Panthers in the spring, then didn't go so well, has been returned to Ardmore. Fort Worth drafted him from there last fall.

Kemner made a fine record with Ardmore and with Marshall, of the East Texas league. The Panthers now have only one man over the limit. He is Calve and he is out of the game with a sore arm.

Howling Panthers Not So Mean After Losing Series

SHREVEPORT, July 9.—With darkness settling over the ball park, and just enough light for the fielders to keep trace of the ball, Tex McDonald cut loose with a two-base hit in the twelfth inning to score Rowland from first base and give Shreveport the final game with Fort Worth, 4 to 3. Rowland had singled and McDonald's hit went to the right center wall. It was a nip and tuck contest with Lefty Johns working the distance for the Texans. Lefty Thompson retired in the ninth in favor of a pinch hitter and Joe Gleason who relieved him on the mound was effective. In the early innings Konetchy hit two homers. Score:

Behind the steller pitching of Gabe Harris the Security National bank stretched its lead over the Twilight league and swamped the Wichita Falls Electric company by the score of 8 to 1. In the five innings played only one ball went to the outfield off Harris' delivery, this a double by Bob Riley. Both of George Ramsey's safties were of the infield scratch variety. Ramsey led the hitters with two out of two.

Brown and Stanfield both hit twice in three times at the bat. Stanfield's hits drove in four runs, two of his mates scored on each hit. "Oklahoma Lee 'Courtney was stopped by Eddie Kollman after the big bank club skipper had hit 12 times in 12 tries in the last three games. Courtney grounded out on his first time at the bat when Gleason knocked down his hot grounder and threw him out at first. The second time up Courtney stopped one of Kollman's slants with his ribs. On his final appearance at the bat he skied to Bob Riley.

The only run off Harris came in the fourth with the game already on ice. Whatley rolled out, Harris to Mathis. Montgomery mussed up Thurman's ground ball. Riley doubled past third, scoring Thurman. Gabe tightened and the next two batters went out by the grouder route.

Red George's error, Brown's crashing double down the third base line, followed by Sid Stanfield's scorching double to deep center scored the two runners.

Graves opened the second with a single to right. Martin walked. Gabe Harris drove them both in with a long triple to left. Montgomery took the third strike. Mathis walked. Thurman threw Brown's grounder away and Harris scored. Brown took second and Mathis third. Stanfield singled to center scoring Mathis and Brown.

The Bankers' score in the fourth came on Brown's three-bagger. Thurman took the relay from left field in time to get Brown at the plate as he attempted to score, but cut loose with a high throw over Lawson's head and Brown scored with ease.

Jim Slams Three Homers, Waco Wins

WACO, July 9.—James Cato Galloway of Waco came to bat too often for Beaumont here today and after the dust from Katy Park had cleared away from the race track it was found the lengthy Cub had poled out three home runs in the first four innings. Heavy hitting by other Wacoans enabled the team to beat the Exporters 15 to 0, with Red Bird pitching a steady game.

Tribe Noses Out On Macks, 13-11

CLEVELAND, July 9.—(AP) — Cleveland defeated Philadelphia today 13 to 11. Rain ended the game in the last half of the seventh inning with two Indians on and two out. At first it was announced that the scores reverted to the sixth inning, which would have made the result 13 to 8, but later ruling by official scorer in compliance with rule 20 of American league rules, made all that took place in the seventh legal. The Mackmen scored 3 runs in the seventh, driving Uhle from the mound. The Indians scored 6 runs in their half of the fifth inning and used all the Athletics pitchers but Stokes and Rommell roughly. The Indian's victory put them in sixth place, the Yankees failing to play to a decision. Score:

Walker Will Box Dave Shade, If—

NEW YORK, July 9.—(AP).—Mickey Walker of Elizabeth, N. J., world's welterweight champion, will meet Dave Shade of California, his most persistent challenger, in a 15-round decision match in New York state if a reliable promoter can be obtained to stage the match, the state athletic commission announced today after a conference with the two principals.

PAT CORBETT IRRITATED BY SPORT WRITER

Oklahoman Declares He'll Beat White And Scribe, Too

The American Legion fight program scheduled for the Eleventh and Ohio arena Thursday night, was rained out and postponed until tonight.

All the fighters billed are on hand, and champing for action, according to Promoter Don Wofford. There will be no changes made in the card, but the same slated for Thursday evening will be put on tonight promptly at 8:30 o'clock, he said.

He Will, Maybe.

Pat Corbett, the Oklahoma City welterweight billed with Tommy White, three-weight champion of Mexico, in the 12-round main event, became highly irritated at an article carried in The Record News Thursday morning, and declared that he would beat White, and maybe (we said maybe) go after the Record News sports editor next.

The article in question was a prophesy that White would win the decision over Corbett, not a knockout, but a point victory. Corbett declared that he is in the best condition of his career, according to Promoter Wofford, and that he not only expects to beat White, but probably knock the Texas city mauler kicking.

Bat on Hand.

Battling Jennings was on hand last night bemoaning the fact that old man Jupe Pluve had put in a hand and thwarted him temporarily in getting at Battling Bulger of Dallas. This pair are scheduled for a six-rounder.

Both Jack Denton and Joe Bernard, the Seattle scrapper, were all set for their six-round engagement.

There will be two four-round preliims, according to the promoter.

Missing Links About Dayton

DAYTON, Tenn., July 9.—(AP)—A desire that those concerned with the Scopes evolution case, "divest themselves of all ambition to establish any particular theory for personal gratification and that we all constantly inquire for the eternal truth" was expressed by Judge John T. Raulston today upon the eve of the trial.

* * *

BRYAN JR. WILL ATTEND THE TRIAL.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, JR., reached Dayton from Los Angeles this afternoon and joined his father and other prosecution counsel assembled for the trial of John T. Scopes beginning here tomorrow on a charge of violating Tennessee's law against the teaching of evolution theories in the public schools.

* * *

HARMS TEACHERS, SAYS W. J. BRYAN.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN believes that John T. Scopes, defendant in the Tennesse evolution trial, "is doing more harm to the teachers of the country than to any other class." This harm, he declared today, would be "indefinitely increased if his (Scopes') views as to the independence of the teacher were established."

* * *

"WAR OF MORONS" IS COMMENT OF TEXAN

AUSTIN, July 9.—"The John T. Scopes trial is nothing but a war of morons," Dr. Frederick Eby, director of the University of Texas summer school, declared here today in an address before the Austin Lions club.

PRESBYTERIAN TAKES ISSUE WITH BRYAN

DALLAS, July 9.—Taking direct issue with William Jennings Bryan, a fellow member and an elder in the same branch of the Presbyterian church, Dr. James E. Clark, of Nashville, Tenn., editor of the Presbyterian Advance, who will speak tomorrow before the Texas synod in session here, declared today that "Elder Bryan is laboring under a great mistage" in his position on the evolution question. The subject of his address will be "evolution and religion."

The total crop for the south will not likely be more than 13,500,000 bales."

BIGGEST CORN CROP IN YEARS PREDICTED

WASHINGTON, July 9.—(AP.)—Indications of an enormous corn crop, probably the third largest ever grown, slight improvement in prospects for wheat, prediction of the smallest potato production since 1919, and unfavorable fruit forecasts were set forth in the July crop report issued today by the department of agriculture.

With an acreage 1.5 per cent larger than last year's, corn production was forecast at 3,095,000,000 bushels, or 65,000,000 bushels more than last year.

Among the causes listed for the large increase were the high price of corn and a tendency to increase feed crops for livestock. The condition of the crop ranges from average to excellent outside of drouth areas in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas. In the corn belt the crop was thriving.

Wheat prospects increased 19,000,000 bushels during June, a forecast of 680,000,000 bushels now being made for this season. Winter wheat lost 3,000,000 bushels during the month but spring wheat prospects increased 22,000,000 bushels.

interpreted, adds new strength to the arguments which justify a religious interpretation of the world, he said, adding: "No where is there a no-God land. Wherever there is activity there is God."

Discussing the legal aspects of the Tennessee case at the same meeting, Dean James F. Hall of the University of Chicago law school, expressed the opinion that the Tennessee statute against evolution does not violate the United States constitution, and said there is considerable doubt whether it violates the Tennessee constitution. Legal objections that may be raised by the defense are of four kinds—that the indictment is legally insufficient in form or content, that the defendant, John T. Scopes, has not violated the Tennessee statue, properly interpreted; that the statue, even if violated, is invalid because forbidden by the constitution of Tennessee, or that it is invalid because forbidden by the U. S. constitution.

St. Roberts Wins Ohio Feature Of Grand Circuit

Crawford Grabs Tavern "Steak"—Kentucky Day Record

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 9.—(AP)—Taking the first and third heats earily, St. Roberts, neglected in the betting, won the seventeenth renewal of the Ohio, with a value of $5,000, one of the features of the grand circuit card at North Randol today, defeating a field of 12, 2:08 trotters including Thompson Dillon, Todd Hart and Trumpet.

Crawford, Thomas Murphy's improved horse, won the sixteenth Tavern "steak" another $5,000 event, taking the first three heats easily.

St. Roberts, owned by Willis Brothers, Clarksburg, W. Va., and driven by A. B. Willis, was kept off the early pace in each heat. He could not get up in the second, however, which went to Thompson Dillon, odds on favorite.

Crawford was the class of ten 2:12 trotters which started in the Tarven, setting his own pace in the first heat, he trotted the fastest quarter and half mile of the meeting, the time being 29 3-5 and 1:00 2-5, respectively. Hollyrood Jessie took the final heat when Crawford tired.

It was Crawford's second consecutive stake victory, he having won the Press last Thursday.

With the victory of Clara Dillon in the 2:10 trot, her second of the meet, Murphy brought his winning races to five. He also drove three seconds.

The world's trotting record for three-quarters of a mile was lowered against today when Kentucky Jay won the first heat of the 2:10 trot in 1:32. This clips 1-5 o. a second off the mark established by Lady Alethaire Monday. Kentucky Jay stepped the quarter in 29 4-5 seconds and the half in 1:01.

IMPROVEMENTS BEING MADE ON WICHITA CANAL

Weeds Being Cut And Other Conditions Are Being Bettered

Improvements of the open canal leading from the lake to the water plant is being undertaken by the city water department, which has a large force of men at work cutting weeds along the banks of the ditch, cleaning it and raising the sides to accommodate more water.

During the hit, dry spell it was found that the filter and pumping stations could handle more water than could be brought in from Lake Wichita through the canal; and it was also found that an increased supply was necessary to meet the demands of the city. For that reason it was deemed advisable to immediately increase the carrying capacity of the canal.

Alleged Woman Hot Check Expert Caught In Vernon Held Here

Cora O'Conner, a woman wanted in this city, Dallas and Fort Worth on charges of passing worthless checks, was arrested in Vernon Wednesday night by Officers McCormick and Reeves, working for the Retail Merchants' association of Wichita Falls, and brought here. Charges of passing spurious checks were filed against her, but later she was turned over to officers from Fort Worth and was returned there to answer similar complaints in that city.

A concerted drive has been launched recently by the officers on the hot check artists of this city. A number of them operating here have cost local merchants thousands of dollars and a part of the Retail Merchants' association service is in the running down and, insofar as possible, retreiving losses occasioned by the bad check passers.
