Public Services (check'em) available Christmas day

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

Simply because it is Christmas Eve or Christmas Day, does not mean Pampans will not face some sort of emergency situation.

In the case of this happening, here is some information on how to handle the problem.

The Pampa Police Department will have their regular force on duty both days, according to Police Chief J. J. Ryzman. Any police emergency will be handled the same way it would be any day.

Chief Paul Jones of the Pampa Fire Department said all three fire stations will have their normal amount of firemen and will be prepared to handle any fire emergencies in the usual manner.

Southwestern Public Service Company will not be open these two days, a spokesperson said. If an electricity emergency should arise, phone the emergency number at 669 - 7432.

Manager Gary Stevens of Southwestern Bell Telephone is the person to call if an emergency problem occurs with the telephone. The office will be closed, but he can be reached at 665 - 2233.

City Manager Mack Wofford said city hall will be closed on the eve of Christmas and Christmas day. Commercial sanitation trucks will be working Christmas Eve, however, he added. Call 665 - 3881 for any emergency problems concerning water or sewer service.

"It's just another day," a spokesperson for Gray County Sheriffs Department said. Sheriffs officers will be at work as usual on Christmas and will handle emergencies in the regular manner.

The Pampa Senior Citizens Center will be closed Christmas Eve and Christmas day. It will reopen with the regular activities on Wednesday.

Should any person 55 or over want Christmas dinner, the Salvation Army will be providing the traditional turkey and dressing with all the trimmings.

According to Lt. David Craddock, Army members will be taking dinners to 20 - 25 of the Meals on Wheels people. A dinner will also be served in the church located at 701 S. Cuyler. The dinner is mainly for senior citizens, Craddock said, but if anyone is alone and needs the meal, he thinks there will be enough to go around.

Bus schedules will be the same as usual, a spokesperson from Continental Trailways said, adding "We don't have holidays."

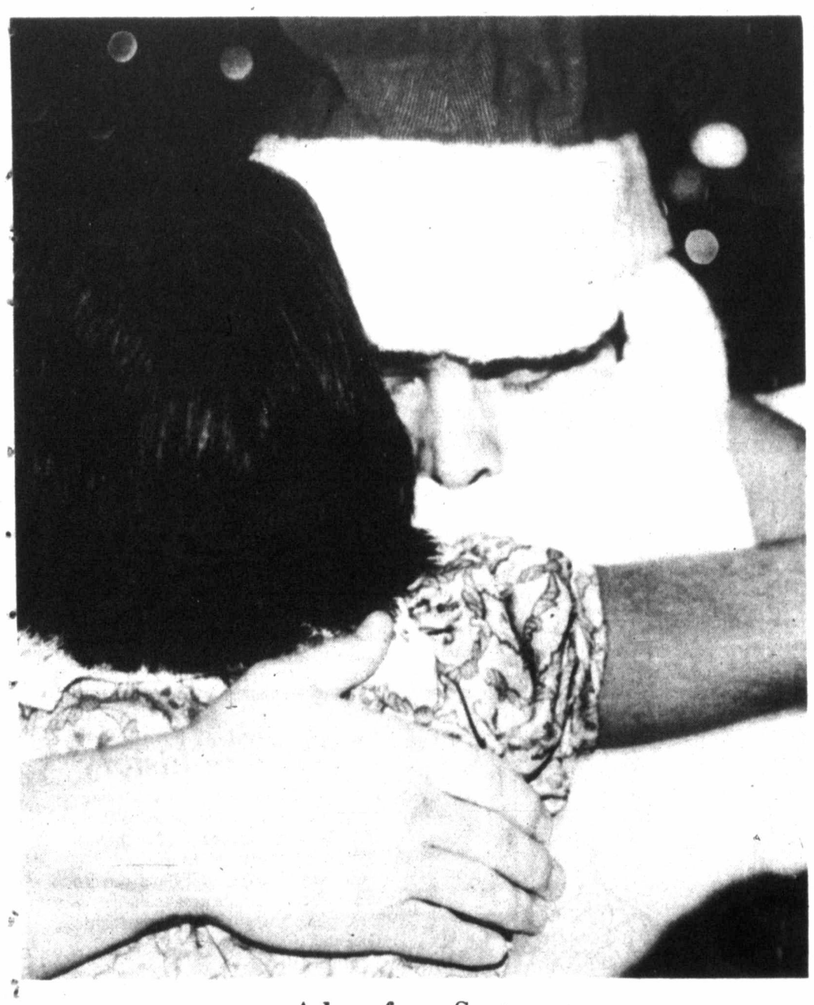

Metropolitan Ambulance Service will be providing the same services as they would any day.

Mrs. Gobin, nursing supervisor at Highland General Hospital said the emergency room will be fully staffed over the holidays. The regular "doctor on call" will be answering any emergency calls.

KPDN will be having Christmas music beginning at 3:06 p.m. Monday. A one - hour concert by the local high school choral department will be featured at 2:00 p.m. Christmas day. Another special program at 6:00 p.m. Christmas will feature the Cal Farley's Boys Ranch Choir in concert.

Special Christmas programming will be broadcast by KGRO beginning at 6:00 p.m. Monday and continuing through to sign - off at 12:00 a.m. Wednesday.

In an extended forecast from the National Weather Service in Amarillo, the weather should be partly cloudy to clear Monday through Wednesday with a gradual day to day warming trend. The high for Monday should be in the 40s with temperatures rising to in the 60s for Wednesday. The low for Monday evening should be in the upper teens with it warming to the 30s by Christmas morning.

Against Vietnamese attack

Thailand army on alert

SAE O, Thailand (AP) — Thai troops along the Cambodian border have been reinforced and put on alert to repel a Vietnamese army invasion intelligence analysts fear may be launched against Cambodian guerrillas hiding in the jungles of Thailand, the Thai supreme command said Saturday.

A command spokesman said "several thousand" Thai troops have been deployed along the border in anticipation of an attack the army believes may come before New Year's Day.

Contingency evacuation plans were issued to 250 foreign relief workers at the Khai I Dang refugee camp seven miles from the border. There are no plans to move the camp's 80,000 Cambodians.

The Vietnamese invaded Cambodia a year ago and toppled the radical communist government of Premier Pol Pot. Since then, Vietnamese troops and forces of the new, Hanoi-backed Cambodian government of Heng Samrin have been trying to wipe out pockets of Pol Pot guerrilla resistance. The guerrillas often use sanctuaries in Thailand as staging areas.

The Vietnamese have shelled the positions periodically. The spokesman for the Thai military command in Bangkok said Vietnamese artillery has been moved forward to a position that indicates a heavy ground attack is being prepared.

Col. Prachak Sawangchit, district commander for the most sensitive portion of the border, said the Vietnamese have five infantry regiments totaling 7,500 men across the border facing his troops in Prachin Buri province, 125 miles east of Bangkok.

These troops are believed to be supported by tanks, armored cars, artillery and engineers, bringing total Vietnamese strength in the region to almost 10,000 men. There are estimates that 200,000 Vietnamese soldiers are in Cambodia.

Prachak said he believed the Vietnamese would be no match for Thai troops if a head-to-head fight develops because the Vietnamese have "low morale, a lack of confidence and bad logistics."

He said a regiment-sized Vietnamese attack inside Cambodia Dec. 4 failed to rout poorly equipped, non-communist "Khmer Seri" guerrilla opponents of the Heng Samrin regime.

"If they cannot get past the Khmer Seri," he said, the Vietnamese will be no match for Thai troops in reinforced border defenses.

Following the initial attack on the Khmer Seri at Ban Kalor, north of his command post, Prachak said, some 30,000 new refugees poured into Thailand. But when the Cambodians counter attacked, all but 1,400 of them returned to Cambodia.

The last time the Thai military in the border region was put on full alert was on Oct. 18 following a massive Vietnamese troop buildup that drove tens of thousands of Cambodian refugees into Thailand. That alert came after more than 30 mortar rounds were fired into Thailand from inside Cambodia, killing five refugees.

Julia Wassell recalls Yultide days of old

By MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

This year Julia Wassell will spend Christmas a little different from most of us — in a nursing home, but come Tuesday, memories of the previous 93 holiday seasons will no doubt flood her mind.

Wassell will be 95 Jan. 2 and in her many years, she remembers Christmases on her childhood Illinois farm as well as those celebrated during the Depression and both world wars.

Her memory is not that of a young woman's, yet somehow her quiet reminisces are filled with the joys of those forgotten happy, carefree days.

Softly, she speaks in general terms, remembering little of what her childhood Christmases in Illinois were like. But of what she does remember, Wassell says the ways of celebrating this Christian holiday haven't changed so much since 1885 when she was born in Mittasfild, Illinois.

"It hasn't changed that much as far as the way we all celebrate Christmas. It's still pretty much the same," Wassell says.

But she believes people have forgotten the real meaning of Christmas.

"Too many people think Christmas just means giving and getting presents and that's sad," she explains. "Christmas is the birthtime of Christ — and that makes it a very special time of year for me."

But part of her memories of this "special time of year" are naturally tied into what the arrival of Santa meant to an Illinois farm girl.

Wassell remembers that as a young child in the 1890s, her father handled the gift exchange, buying presents for her and her four brothers and sisters, but they didn't exchange presents with each other.

"I always got a doll for Christmas," she says, with a twinkle in her eye. "And I always got real excited about opening my presents.

"Beforehand, we would all tell Santa Claus what we wanted for Christmas," she said. "And if a church nearby had a special Christmas service, we would all go."

She lived with her seven-member family on a farm without a Christmas tree, she says.

The traditional holiday song, "I'm Dreaming of a White Christmas" brings back memories for her of the Illinois snows, especially those at Christmas time.

"Every time I hear it I think of all the times it snowed around Christmas Day in Illinois," Wassell says with a nostalgic tone of voice.

But Wassell remembers the big holiday meals, a seemingly major affair which was complete with turkey and all the trimmings.

"We didn't eat all day long like some people, but we sure had a big meal," she says, chuckling.

Even though she lived on a farm, come Christmas day, she didn't have to worry about getting up at 5 a.m. to milk the cows before finding out what Santa had left the night before.

"Oh, my brothers always took care of it," Wassell says, a smile on her face. "I didn't have to do that."

The happy times of innocent childhood Christmases faded with the onslaught of the Great Depression of 1929. For Wassell and other Americans it meant spending less money.

"Sure, we had to tighten up our belts," she explains. "We were forced to spend less in the Depression than we were during wartime."

Those wars, fought when Wassell was in her 30s and 50s, were not happy times, she says, but it helped when the men could come home to be with their families.

Wassell, who has been in the Pampa Nursing Center since August, will remember this Christmas of 1979 also.

Texans die in plane crashes

By The Associated Press

Two plane crashes claimed the lives of three Texas men late Friday and early Saturday.

Ricky Hugh Fielding, 26, of Abilene, was killed when his Cessna 172 crashed on a Bosque County ranch in central Texas. Authorities said they believed the plane crashed early Saturday morning.

No cause has been pinpointed for the crash.

Two hunters died Friday night when their plane crashed 100 feet from Interstate 10 four miles southeast of Comfort in Southeast Texas.

James B. Youngblood, 40, of Jasper, and Hardy Blake Carlton, 40, of Colmesneil, were killed when their Cessna 182 hit a hill in foggy weather.

A Department of Public Safety spokesman said the crash occured about 8 p.m. Friday, but the plane was not found until 7:30 a.m. Saturday.

Officers said the men were headed for Ozona on a hunting trip.

Investigators said the man may have been trying to land the plane on the highway, since there are no public landing strips or airports nearby.

Weather

The forecast calls for windy and cooler conditions through Sunday with a 20 percent chance for snow. Sunday's high will be in the mid 40s; the low in the mid 20s. Winds will be westerly at 15 to 20 mph, shifting to northwesterly at 20 to 30 mph and gusty Sunday.

Local economy 'looking good'

American communities are facing economic setback due to three critical issues of the day - inflation, interest rates, and the Iran crisis.

The Panhandle, however, has a different and very optimistic outlook.

Bankers and businessmen of Canadian, Miami, Wheeler and Pampa voiced their views on the economy, based on sales, local depositors, and loan movements.

Diversification in the four county area lends to the healthy economic situation. Farming, ranching, oil, gas, industry and the influx of small business gives a stable base to the region.

In the 1930's the depression hit hard, and all over, people were affected. Panhandle area residents of that time admit to "close money" but Dean Monday who came to the Panhandle in 1931 said "it was easier here than in many areas. Jobs were available and people worked."

According to the bankers and businessmen the recession that is supossedly here, hasn't been experienced in this area.

Roy Sparkman of Pampa sees one slowdown that has hit nationwide and is reflected in the Panhandle area, "housing is slow."

Interest rates have caused the housing market to be slow. Sparkman of Security Federal said "when the Federal Reserve raises its rates to stop economic movement it hits housing disproportionately, there is no lack of money for cars." Chairman Volcker of the Federal Reserve Board in a memo promised as long as the inflation is high, money will be high.

Bankers in Miami and Canadian agreed people would move to the area but there are actually no places for them to live.

Canadian bankers Mike Slovacec, Don Davis, and Don Schaef expressed concern over the lack of housing available in Canadian. According to Dan Schaef of The First National Bank "Canadian could grow more if there were more places for people to live. They aren't many rentals, and new home construction has been slowed. Inflation is not so much the reason as lack of lots to develop."

Canadian is unique in its lack of useable land for housing. According to Mike Slovacec," bordered by the Canadian River, excellent ranchland, and high price gas and oil leases, the great demand for land has driven prices up and almost out of reach to new home buyers".

Doug Howard of Pampa explained "bankers are trying to make money available in one form or another and new methods of real estate financing are available. Pampa needs some aggressive builders for apartments and housing, when interest rates lower, we will hopefully see these builders".

Area businessmen agree that new car sales have slowed, but are not critical.

Wheeler's Pete Burton explained "three things are going on: we have too many vehicles in stock, interest rates are too high and profits are down."

Used car sales according to Bill Derr of Pampa "have experienced no slow down, this month has seen an increase. Small car sales are counting for very few. The person who drives less than 20,000 miles a year is not finding a small car all that necessary."

Deposits in local banks are experiencing a steady growth and according to Bill Kindle of Pampa's Citizens Bank, "total deposits in Citizens bank are at 37 million compared to 31 million of last year." Statistics show that Americans save only 4.1 percent of their income compared to 25 percent in Japan and 15 percent in Germany.

Aubrey Steele of Security Federal revealed that "Pampa's ecenomy is very strong we are well above the national average. Loan volume for 1979 was 18 to 19 million."

Aubrey Steele of Security Federal explained "Pampa's economy is very strong and well above the national average. Our loan volume for the five banks was 18 or 19 million in 1979.

Scott Daugherty of First State Bank in Miami explained the workings of agricultural loans. "Agricultural loans are seasonal, but for what it costs to raise crops or stock, farmers and ranchers aren't getting their money back. Beef goes from the feedlot at .69 to .70 a pound and sells in the supermarket for much more."

The small margin of profit realized by ranchers can be lost easily.

OPINION PAGE

This little ol' visit was mighty expensive

Political observers have noted the relationship between a president's standing in the popularity polls and the amount of time he spends traveling abroad.

Historically presidential visits take place at times when the chief executive needs a boost in his domestic popularity. Remember Nixon's visit to Egypt at the height of the Watergate crisis? Nixon's popularity at the time was only a few points lower than Presient Carter's current standing. Carter recently visited Japan and Korea; like Nixon's visit to Egypt, it didn't do much to improve his position in the polls, but the television coverage was great. What is not usually mentioned in the news coverage of these ceremonial presidential visits is how much the charade is costing the taxpayers.

For those who hadn't guessed, these presidential visits are unsurpassingly expensive. Congressman Bill Dickinson, R-Ala., recently issued a report detailing some of the cost of Carter's Japan-Korea visit. Like everything the government does, it cost more than appearances suggest.

It is much more complicated for the president to travel than it is for a tourist on a commercial flight; it is even more complicated than maintaining Air Force One and its crew. For the president to get to the Far East required Air Force One plus two similar backup aircraft in case something went wrong. The cost of flying three large aircraft, as big as many commercial lines, and maintaining their crews is itself incomprehensible. Congressman Dickinson estimates these three planes burned 200,000 gallons of fuel on the excursion.

Other aspects of a presidential visit are just as costly. The Alabama congressman points out that on every trip the chief executive is accompanied by a host of communications personnel, Secret Service agents, and a variety of political aides. All these necessary companions require transport of themselves and their sometimes bulky equipment. The second largest plane in the Air Force is the C-141; it took seven C-141s to haul the gear and personnel for the Japan-Korea visit.

One of the pieces of equipment transported was a heavily armored car, but that was not the weightiest item on the checklist. Using its largest aircraft, a C-5A, it took a total of 11 aircraft to deliver the president to Japan — not bad for a small town boy from Georgia.

The cost of the extravaganza was astronomical. Using Air Force statistics, Congressman Dickinson estimates the aircraft cost for the presidential visit was $1,053,040. At a time when the military complains about a lack of fuel the 11 planes necessary for Carter's visit consumed 1,647,200 gallons of fuel. This is only a partial look at the cost of the trip.

Carter's journey, as Nixon's to Egypt, was a state visit — unofficially part of his job — but undoubtedly there was at least some political motivation behind it. Some presidential visits seem totally aimed at image making.

Considering the cost, we recommend that it might be better to send a representative, who can buy a ticket on a commercial carrier, rather than transporting the president and his entire entourage. Then everyone would know he was politically motivated. If Carter has to speak with someone directly he should use the phone.

This will not result in network news coverage showing the president being applauded by mobs of foreigners, something which used to impress Americans. But it will result in saving money. For that we would applaud him.

Taxing proposition

Inflation and energy clearly dominate the political agenda heading into Campaign '80, but that doesn't mean the tax revolt of yesteryear has necessarily run its course.

Two of the three tax-related measures that appeared on ballots during elections earlier this month were overwhelmingly approved, while a third was narrowly defeated.

Voters in California slapped a constitutional limit on increases in state and local spending by a margin even greater than that garnered in 1978 by Proposition 13, the tax-cut initiative that triggered a national revolt. A different but related spending limitation was adopted in the state of Washington by a 2-to-1 margin.

Only in Oklahoma did the voters go the other way, rejecting — barely — a measure to lower the state's personal income tax.

Although filing deadlines for 1980 ballot propositions are still months away, up to a dozen more tax-related items seem likely to qualify for voter consideration next year, according to the Coalition of American Public Employees.

Leading the way once more is Howard Jarvis, the "father" of Prop. 13, who is now pushing a constitutional amendment to slash California corporate and personal income-tax rates in half. An alternative proposal, which would lower taxes for low- and middle-income Californians while raising them for upper-income individuals and businesses, may also qualify for the ballot.

Other measures to reduce state income taxes are circulating in Alaska, Massachusetts, Michigan and Montana.

Spending limits have been proposed for the 1980 ballot in Arizona, Florida, Massachusetts and Ohio.

And property-tax reductions have qualified for the ballot in Florida, Nevada and South Dakota and have been proposed in Massachusetts, Ohio and Utah.

These are just the measures most likely to qualify for voters' consideration, in the view of CAPE. All told there are more than 40 tax-related ballot items being proposed in 14 states.

Strange case of rental cars

The 1979 Carrying Coals to Newcastle Award goes to the General Services Administration, the federal government's building-management and "housekeeping" agency.

With the exception of the major auto-rental companies, GSA probably owns and operates the country's largest fleet of motor vehicles.

The total of 86,317 vehicles includes 42,511 passenger cars, 4,972 station wagons, 2,885 buses and assorted trucks and ambulances. Thousands are assigned to the Washington area because it has the greatest concentration of government departments, agencies and employees.

But GSA recently turned to a car-rental agency for autos to carry the heads of its regional offices from Washington airports to a week-long, late September "retreat" for senior agency officials in Gettysburg, Pa.

GSA offered various explanations for renting the cars, including one version that held that the cost of paying drivers to ferry the government cars to and from the airports made the price of the commercial autos competitive.

The day Christ was born

By Jim Bishop

(Seventh in a series of eight)

The little family was to leave Bethlehem on their return to Nazareth when Joseph awakened the next morning early and sat in silence until Mary opened her eyes. She saw the frown and asked if he was troubled. Yes, he said, he was. In the night he had had a dream. He saw an angel, the same one he had seen before. The angel was agitated. "Rise!" he commanded. "Take with you the child and his mother and flee into Egypt! Remain there until I give you further notice. Herod is on the point of searching for the child in order to take his life!"

Mary had no doubt about the course they should pursue. They must hurry to Egypt. If an angel ordered this, then God had told the angel to do it.

Joseph realized that Mary was right. He paid the innkeeper that day, and bought some food for the saddlebag, and stocked up with water. He told no one that he was leaving, or in which direction he would travel when he did.

When the blue dark of night set in, Mary mounted the little ass, held her baby against her breast, and the young man yanked the halter strap and started to plod along the white-stoned road south to Egypt.

It seemed strange to Joseph, walking toward the great desert, that anyone would want to hurt a baby. Any baby. It seemed even stranger that God was keeping this one a secret. The only ones who knew that this tiny jostled, sleeping burden behind him was the Son of God were the despised and poor shepherds of the fields, and the despised and rich gentiles from Persia. The king of all Judea, Herod the Great, had heard about the infant Jesus, and his reaction, according to the angel, was to plot a murder.

Why? Joseph begged to understand.

Herod's palace was a place of splendid courtyards and many oil lamps on the west side of Jerusalem, about three hundred yards from a place called Golgotha, or Calvary. Men of importance were rushing, on this night, in and out of the palace. Herod the Great was in a towering rage. Many, he said, would pay for the trick which had been played upon him. Many would die.

Spies had come to him from several quarters. The first ones said that the Magi had remained in Bethlehem two days and had left for Persia, skirting Jerusalem to the south. This showed that they had no intention of keeping their promise to return to the king with news of the new-born messiah. Other spies had been sent at once to Bethlehem to find the baby and his parents and bring them to the august presence of Herod. But these had returned with bad news indeed: the little family, it seemed, had lived in a stable beneath the inn, and both stable and inn were now empty.

Herod had ordered his soldiers to arrest the innkeeper and his wife, but torture could bring no further information than that they had no room at the inn for the expectant mother, and had permitted her to live in the stable with her husband and newborn. The king was seventy years of age, and very ill, but his rage enslaved him.

The census, he roared. That would provide a solution to the problem of the make-believe messiah who had come to exact tribute from the gullible Jews. He called an aide and ordered him to go to the Roman tribune now in quarters at Fortress Antonia and to ask in the name of the king for the names of all families who had infants.

Wait, Herod screamed. We must first find out how old this particular baby is. Call my councilors!

The learned ones came in, their striped cloaks betraying the trembling of men underneath. How long, said Herod, had that accursed star been in the sky? No one knew. They had not looked for a star. Herod moaned and sobbed and pounded the wall with his withered fists.

The soothsayers said that the strange bright star could not have been in the heavens long, or else astrologers among the Jews would have broadcast the news. They would also have made their own dire predictions about it. This, they reasoned, made it likely that the star was on a path across Persia toward Bethlehem and that it had begun its flight recently.

A year ago? shouted Herod. A week ago? I must find out the age of his little majesty. The councilors looked at each other and said surely no more than a year. Probably far less.

Herod sent the courier to the Roman tribune. He was to ask, in the name of the king, for a list of all Jewish families who had male sons two years of age or less. The census would reveal the status of every family -- how many members, what age. When the list was copied, he wanted it given to his chief of guards and he wanted squads of soldiers sent to Bethlehem, Jerusalem and every town and village in the area.

The soldiers were under orders from the king to tear the babies from their parents and to either kill them on the spot with the short sword, or take them out in batches and cast them from the cliffs.

There would be no exemptions, even among the babies of the soldiers themselves. This must be done at once, so that no spurious pretender to the throne could grow up and lift the scepter from Herod's cold hands.

In fact, while he thought about the matter, Herod the Great dwelled upon the idea of killing his own son, Herod Antipas. He too aspired to this throne, the throne on which none but the one Herod, the Great Herod, would sit. He said nothing at the moment, but mentally marked his son for death within the week.

Within a few days, the slaughter of the innocents began. In every village, anguish and wailing followed the visit of death. In Jerusalem, some of Herod's soldiers wept because they had to kill the babies of fellow soldiers. All up to the age of two were slain because to fail by one baby would have brought death to many soldiers.

The news mollified King Herod. He asked many questions about the killings, and was pleased that his officers had done an efficient job. Surely the so-called baby king was among the many who died in the swift raids.

For a while, his peace of mind improved his health. To celebrate this feeling of tranquility, the king ordered his son Antipater to be executed at once. When this was done, Herod felt even better because there was no one in all the nation who aspired to his throne.

He was, for a time, almost benevolent. Then he was seized with a fit, and fell to the floor of his palace. His councilors and officers were summoned and they stood around in a little group and watched the king strangle slowly. There was nothing they could do to help him, and, apparently, there was no wish to ameliorate his last hour.

When Herod's final gasp subsided in a gasp of resignation, the councilors moved to inform the nation, and Caesar Augustus in Rome, that the king was dead.

He had followed the infants, but he did not join them.

Your kickback is going up

by Paul Harvey

Politicians and labor leaders and prosperity--all conspired to encourage Americans to demand more pay for less work.

They got it.

Now they are getting paid off in stage money.

This will help explain two things--our shrinking dollars and our international trade imbalance.

The Labor Department confirms that American workers' wages increased the third quarter--but productivity declined.

Workers are paid more for producing less--what they produce has to cost more.

Wages per man-hour in the United States increased 8.8 percent.

Work output per man-hour decreased .7 percent.

No wonder cars made in American cost so much more that Americans are buying foreign cars instead.

There is yet another cruel backlash resulting from this quest for more pay for less work.

The more pay is taxed more.

One of the most selfish sleight-of-hand devices which politicians employ is to espouse higher wages for workers--knowing full well that the higher wages will push workers into higher tax brackets.

That way government gets more tax revenue without the politicians having to raise taxes.

Taxpayers in 1964 returned to government in taxes 12 percent of their earnings; this year they will have to kick back 18 percent!

And this increase has come, mind you, while the politicians were boasting to you that they were "reducing taxes."

Federal income tax rates were reduced in 1964 and again in 1965--some 25 percent.

While the politicians were boasting, "look what we did for you!" they knew that your annually higher wages were shoving you into higher tax brackets--so that you would be sending to Washington more, not less, of your income.

The official tax rate goes down but actually you pay more taxes.

Your income has been keeping pace with inflation.

During the past five years prices have increased 137 percent.

But so has your income increased about 137 percent.

The pinch comes because your higher income has put you in a higher tax bracket.

So the money your average family of four has left over for spending this year is $1,056 less than five years ago.

Project this ahead and next year looks worse.

Next year prices will increase eight percent plus.

Your wages will increase eight percent plus.

But because of higher taxes you will have $505 less spendable income than this year!

Here is the rule of thumb: A 10 percent increase in income will increase a family's federal income taxes by 16 percent.

That's right--you and I can't win unless we do two things: demand of ourselves increased output to match increased income, and demand of our government less spending, less taxes.

We'll not get ahead until we do.

Hooray for us

After years of talking about the energy crisis, Americans finally are doing something about it. Unofficial but reliable statistics for the first nine months of the year show a significant reduction in gasoline consumption.

Some of the decrease can be traced to the gasoline shortage last spring. In both May and June, for example, consumption of gasoline was more than 750,000 barrels per day lower than during the comparable months in 1978.

But in the July-August-September third quarter of 1979, when supplies were again plentiful, consumption was down almost 500,000 barrels per day, a reduction of close to 6.5 percent compared with the same period in 1978.

Questions loom as courtroom saga of Cullen closes

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Composing a farewell column recently for the enduring courtroom saga of Cullen Davis, Dallas writer Brian Woolley said wistfully:

"Had it been sold as fiction, the public would have rejected it as preposterous, overblown, too laden with stereotype characters and outworn gimmicks, too lathered with blood, lust and corruption for even the most insatiable addicts of Texas gothic."

And now, suddenly, it's all over, he said: "A Texas gothic horror story has ended at last."

Well, not quite.

Since Davis' acquittal Nov. 9 on murder conspiracy charges, his ex-wife Priscilla wounded herself and almost shot the chief prosecutor and his girlfriend.

Another ex-wife, Sandra, announced plans to sue the multi-millionaire industrialist for increased child support payments.

FBI informant David McCrory made an informal request for $25,000 that was introduced into evidence but now lies unclaimed in a Catch 22 melodrama.

Priscilla's one-time boyfriend, W.T. Rufner, won himself a $15 judgment from Davis, a fraction of what he sought for his memorable testimony as a reluctant defense witness. He claimed Davis owed him $368 in expenses, part of which he said he spent on good whisky and bad women.

Another defense witness was convicted of a felony firearms offense, but jurors deadlocked over punishment and triggered a mistrial.

Plaintiffs in several personal injury suits, including Priscilla, vowed anew to press their civil cases despite the dismissal of criminal charges against Davis.

Those suits total roughly $20 million, the residue of an Aug. 2, 1976, shooting spree at the $6 million Davis mansion.

The largest suit, $13 million, is expected to be the first set for trial. It was filed by Gus "Bubba" Gavrel Jr., 25, one of two wounded survivors of the bloody midnight rampage.

Priscilla, 38, also was wounded. Her lover, Stan Farr, 30, and her daughter, Andrea Wilborn, 12, were killed. Young Gavrel remains crippled with a bullet lodged in his spine.

In 1977, an Amarillo jury acquitted Davis of killing Andrea. The related charges were dismissed after his acquittal six weeks ago on the murder conspiracy-solicitation indictment.

That charge stemmed from an August 1978 episode in which Davis was accused of plotting the contract murder of his divorce judge.

The first attempt to try that case, in Houston, ended with a hung jury.

Davis' legal expenses over the last 40 months are unknown. A Dallas newspaper put the figure at $5 million, but other sources say his freedom cost him almost twice that.

However painful, he can afford it.

Kendavis Industries, the privately owned, billion-dollar business empire, turned a $57 million profit in 1975.

Cautious congress complies

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was what Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd dubbed a "cautious Congress," this first session of the 96th. And few of his colleagues would dispute that assessment.

"We started out with Proposition 13 on everyone's mind," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill. "We wanted no new major legislative programs. We wanted more oversight."

And that's pretty much what the nation got, the House leader says.

Thus the first session of the 96th Congress, which ended early Friday morning with final approval of the $1.5 billion aid-to-Chrysler bill, may be remembered more for what it didn't do than for what it did.

It didn't produce a lot of legislation. It didn't investigate much. It didn't spend a lot of money compared to previous Congresses. And there weren't any vetoes.

It didn't complete work on the bulk of President Carter's energy program — including the oil taxes that are supposed to pay for all the rest. And it wasn't able to muster the votes to block Carter's oil price decontrol plan, either, despite several tries in the House.

The SALT II treaty never made it to the Senate floor.

Congress didn't reduce taxes, reform Social Security or contain hospital costs.

"I think Congress responded in a responsible way to the mood of the American people," Byrd said. "It was designed to be a cautious Congress, not one of formulating new programs."

That said, there were a few major bills that did emerge from this "do-nothing" Congress.

There was the Chrysler bill — the biggest federal bailout of a U.S. company yet. And Congress gave the nation a standby gasoline rationing plan, created a new Cabinet-level Department of Education, and passed bills to carry out the Panama Canal treaties and to establish a new relationship with Taiwan to accompany the president's recognition of the People's Republic of China.

So what's ahead?

Many bills left pending at the end of 1979 were expected to be approved in early 1980 — including most of Carter's energy measures.

House conferees reached tentative agreement shortly before the Christmas recess on a $227 billion tax on the extra revenues the oil companies take in because of price decontrol. They also agreed on a $20 billion subsidy for synthethic fuels.

And agreement was reportedly close on a measure to establish an Energy Mobilization Board to oversee major-federal energy projects and to cut federal red tape where needed.

'Fires of Joy' hearld Christmas

LA PLACE, La. (AP) — The log structures stand along the levee strung out like primitive watchtowers. All is calm. All will soon be bright.

All that remains now is for the logs to be put to the torch in one of the strangest Christmas traditions in the land.

Also, one of the most colorful. Come Christmas Eve, a 16-mile stretch of the mighty, meandering Mississippi River will be transformed into a blazing corridor of light.

"This should be a good year," said Rick Weidman, who grew up with the custom and rather takes it for granted. "I counted more than 100 between here and Grand Point. Some of them are more than 30 feet tall, most at least 20 feet."

The origins of the tradition are lost in the folklore of the southern Louisiana bayous. Local historians figure it has been an annual event for nearly 150 years.

Some say it was a custom brought here by French priests in the 1830s. Others say it was a German import. In this part of Louisiana, Schexnayders almost outnumber Le Blancs.

"Wherever the original idea came from," Weidman said, "the idea nowadays is to build a bigger bonfire and throw a better party than the people in the next town."

From La Place (pronounced Plahz) upriver to Grand Point, six other villages occupy the east bank of the river: Paulina, Convent, Lutcher, Gramercy, Garyville and Reserve.

The custom is said to have started in the Convent-Lutcher area and spread up and downriver from there.

It also spread across the river to the west bank, although the towns on the west bank are fewer and smaller and the people over there somehow less enthusiastic in their pyromania.

Clements claims port project sick

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says his diagnosis of the proposed Superport project shows a troubled program in need of immediate help.

"I would not say it was dead. The more proper term is that it is sick," he told his Friday news conference.

The governor said time is "literally running out" on the project.

The plan is to build the port 26 miles south of Freeport. It would consist mainly of buoys attached to pipelines that would carry oil from supertankers to storage tanks on shore.

The Texas Deepwater Port Authority has a $2.4 million state allocation to finance the project through bonds. Those bonds would be retired by oil companies that use the port.

But Clements said "there's not a single signed contract in hand" from oil companies.

"Right now they have about 700,000 barrels a day tentatively committed," he said.

Clements estimated about 1.5 million barrels of oil a day would be needed to retire the state bonds. He said the oil companies backing the project have not asked for his assistance, but "if they need my help they know it's available."

Former U.S. Rep. Bob Casey, now chairman of the Texas Deepwater Port Authority, has said he will quit if the necessary committments are not in hand by the end of the year.

During his weekly session with reporters, Clements said state officials are trying to figure out how to keep a Galveston shipyard from becoming a regional dumping ground for nuclear waste.

He was responding to a federal officials' statement that Todd Shipyards is among 50 sites being looked at for use as a dump site beginning in 1984.

"Whether it's a short list or a long list, I'm opposed to it," he said.

Clements suggested federal officials look to New Mexico for a dump site. He said the Alamogordo area — site of the first atomic bomb blast in 1945 — meets all the prerequisities.

"It is contaminated. It is federal land. Why go elsewhere? It's just that simple," he said.

Clements also told reporters they have misinterpreted his relationship with Attorney General Mark White. Just before the news conference began, White scurried out of the governor's office and past reporters.

"I promised the governor I would not work the crowd he assembled," White told reporters who tried to question him.

Clements said he has a "very good working relationship" with White. The two have exchanged some heated words about the Mexican oil spill.

White, representing the state, filed suit against SEDCO — a drilling firm founded by Clements. The Mexican national oil company was using equipment leased from SEDCO at the site of the Campeche blowout.

The governor said White is helping write proposed wiretap legislation.

'Battlelines' form in trial

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The battle lines are drawn and both sides are entrenched for what could be a marathon struggle in court over the future of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood.

Garwood returned to the United States last March after nearly 14 years in Vietnam to face allegations of desertion and collaboration with the enemy.

And last week, the lanky 33-year-old sat silently in a crammed courtroom at Camp Lejeune as a hearing got under way to determine whether he will face a court-martial.

Garwood, a native of Indiana, has worked as a mail clerk at the military post since May, with his rank frozen at private first class.

He has denied the allegations raised by former prisoners of war in Vietnam, contending he was captured in 1965 while working as a jeep driver and held prisoner until his release.

Prosecutors fired their first salvos in the hearing with the testimony of former prisoners who encountered Garwood in Communist prison camps in South Vietnam some 10 years ago.

Defense attorneys argued that Garwood was merely one of many "spiders in a jar" — Americans who cooperated with their Communist captors out of fear.

Dermot Foley, Garwood's civilian lawyer, has used a scattergun approach aimed at one target: establishing that whatever Garwood did in Vietnam was done with the desperate motive of survival.

Prosecution witnesses testified that Garwood lived outside the fenced area for American prisoners, that he occasionally guarded other Americans and carried guns, and that he told Americans he was a lieutenant in the North Vietnamese army.

JP confirms girl murdered

DALLAS (AP) — Examiners have found evidence that Elizabeth Lynn Barclay was shot to death, Van Zandt County Justice of the Peace C.B. Wiley has confirmed.

Investigators combed the East Texas countryside near Wills Point Saturday looking for clues to the girl's murder.

Her decomposed body was found near a rural Van Zandt County road about 45 miles east of Dallas Thursday morning. She was abducted Oct. 23 as she walked to a store near her North Dallas home.

Although Dallas County medical examiners have issued no cause of death, Wiley said there were signs she was shot at least twice in the chest.

He said three .45-caliber shells were found at the scene, "but we do not know whether they are connected. They found quite a few shells, all different calibers." Wiley said the area often is used for target practice.

Wiley said a Texas Ranger saw what appeared to be bullet holes in a blouse found near the remains, a disfiguration on the girl's ribs possibly from a gun blast, and a cut on her head that could have been a stab wound.

Dallas Police Lt. B.G. Maroney said police have received a few calls from the public since the body was discovered.

No clues in escape police say

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Authorities said they had no new clues Saturday to lead them to three women who escaped from the Texas Department of Corrections.

"We have no new leads on it right now," said prison spokesman Rick Hartley. "They are still classified as escapees."

The three convicted robbers, whom Hartley said were "pretty rough little cookies," are considered dangerous because of their records. Officers do not believe the women were armed when they escaped, however.

They broke out of TDC's Goree Unit between 11 p.m. Thursday and 2 a.m. Friday by removing an air conditioner in an office and crawling out the window, Hartley said. They then scaled a security fence.

Hartley said bloodhounds tracked the women, all from Harris County, as far as Interstate 45.

"We have reason to believe they either had somebody assist them by having a vehicle close by, or they hitchhiked a ride on I-45," Hartley said. "As far as which direction they went, that's still up in the air."

The fugitives were identified as Sylvia Jean Brown, 37, Patricia Ann Watson, 32, and Mary Lou Santellana, 30. All were described as short, and Hartley said Miss Santellana was tatooed with a star and a scorpion.

Miss Brown, 5 feet tall and weighing 110 pounds, was serving a 25-year term for aggravated robbery. Miss Watson, 5 feet 2 inches tall and 135 pounds, was serving a 20-year term for robbery. Miss Santellana, 4 feet 11 inches and 134 pounds, was serving a 25-year term for aggravated robbery.

Police searching for leads

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Police searched Saturday for leads in the stabbing death of a retired cook who apparently had been tortured before being stabbed 35 times.

Pedro Garcia, 72, was found Friday in the bedroom of a small apartment he rented in the southwest part of the city.

NRC orders look at design of nuclear plant

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has ordered a review of earthquake stress designs of all nuclear power plants after finding an error in computer calculations at the Seabrook atomic power station, top NRC officials confirmed Saturday.

The order could result in the closing for repairs of any plant where the problem exists, the officials said.

"If, in fact, other plants have made errors in the spectra (test calculations) they used and they've underestimated seismic forces, they'd have to fix them. This would likely lead to shutdowns," said James Knight, the NRC's assistant director for engineering.

Early this year, the agency ordered five nuclear plants to shut down because of uncertainty over whether the plants could withstand earthquakes. Checks determined there were no problems, and all were allowed to resume operation.

The scope of the latest problem will not be known until the plant operators have completed the inspections.

"Apparently, somebody made a mistake which turns out to be a significant error, and now we've got to determine how widespread it may be," said Roger Mattson, director of the NRC's division of system safety. "The order has gone out to all operating nuclear plants and to every plant under construction — more than 160 operations."

The problem concerns quake-proofing requirements determined by possibly faulty computer studies of what the vibrations from earthquakes would do to the plant and its internal systems.

"This could be serious because of the possibility that inadequate construction and supports of the hundreds of pipes vital to the reactor's safety systems could break during an earthquake," Mattson said in a telephone interview from Washington.

The problem surfaced earlier this month when engineers at Seabrook were responding to an NRC bulletin warning that the published weights of valves used at Seabrook and other plants were incorrect.

The NRC said Seabrook repeated earthquake stress tests, called amplified response spectra, based on the revised weights of the values and discovered original calculations were wrong.

On Dec. 13, the NRC sent all plant operators "an early notification of a possible signficant matter." Officials said they "didn't make a big deal of it" because of the crush of other duties.

Knight said every component in a power plant must be designed and constructed to withstand the virbrations from an earthquake.

"When an earthquake shakes the power plant it sets up a response, different frequencies of vibrations.

Innocent victim of auto wreck 7 years ago, dies

LOS ALTOS, Calif. (AP) — Gail Tietjen was twice the innocent victim of highway tragedy. Once she recovered, to face seven years of struggling to lead a normal life and to learn to laugh again.

Last week she did not survive.

After overcoming brain damage and the ridicule of strangers, the 25-year-old woman who had rebuilt her life lay dying in a pile of crumpled metal and glass shards.

Her small car had been hit head-on by a wrong-way driver on Highway 85 in Cupertino, police said. Ninety minutes later, Miss Tietjen died from massive head injuries. Gail's family held services for her Friday in Los Altos.

The driver of the other car walked away from the crash. Beth June O'Donnell, a 59-year-old nurse, was arrested on suspicion of manslaughter and felony driving while under the influence of alcohol, authorities said.

For the victim's family, grief was tinged with anger and incredulity.

"When you have one near-fatal accident in your life, you think it can't happen again," said Gail's sister, Ann Gaskell of Saratoga.

"Things like this are only supposed to happen once to someone."

The family recalled how in 1972 Gail was given up for dead one summer night, when police officers found her two hours after her date had wrecked his sports car while driving under the influence of alcohol.

She had been a homecoming princess, a National Honor Society member, a freshly graduated high school senior with two scholarships to Stanford University and a dream to be a doctor.

When Gail woke up from a coma several days after the accident, she did not know her family. She did not know herself. She lost her independence and her outgoing personality.

Painfully she learned how to care for herself, and, after three years, her sister said, Gail learned how to laugh again.

Learning disabilities plagued Gail, and she had to exchange science courses for art studies. She graduated from Stanford in 1978 with an art degree.

She also mastered the art of ignoring the taunts of those who could not understand why the attractive woman did not do things like everyone else.

"Gail was determined to lead a perfectly normal life. She didn't want to talk about the accident and she wanted people to accept her without excuses," Ms. Gaskell said.

Refugee spends first Christmas in U.S.

MIAMI (AP) — For all of her 14 years, Nilda Cadenas lived in Cuba, a land where Christmas was banned by government order.

This year, for the first time, Nilda will be able to feast, laugh and celebrate "Nochebuena," the joyous Cuban tradition of Christmas Eve.

Nilda, her 11-year-old brother Marcos Tomas, and five other Cadenas family members arrived in Miami on Friday as part of 227 former political prisoners and their relatives on a flight from Cuba.

The Castro government has opened the island up in the past year, allowing exiles from the United States to visit, and freeing prisoners long held for political offenses.

Nilda's older brother, Carlos, served seven years in jail for three attempts to flee Cuba.

Wide-eyed as they watched immigration workers and took their first sip of a cola drink, the Cadenas youngsters said they had only a vague idea of Christmas.

"We never heard anything about it in school," Nilda said. "All they told us about was Marx and Lenin."

Marcos nodded. "We went to religion classes, where we were told about Christ and others, but were told it was all a fantasy," he said.

After Fidel Castro assumed power in 1959 he put a stop to religious holidays including "Nochebuena," — the celebration of Christ's birth that had long been traditional among large Cuban families.

Until then, in villages across the island, families would gather on Christmas Eve for a feast of roast pig, black beans and wine. At midnight, all would go to the village church for a special Mass celebrated by three Roman Catholic priests.

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has ordered nine members of the Church of Scientology released from prison pending the appeal of their criminal convictions.

U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey on Friday issued the order after the U.S. Court of Appeals said three of the church members should be released during their appeals. When Richey sentenced the nine earlier this month, he ordered them jailed during their appeals. They were convicted Oct. 26 of plotting to steal government documents about the church, infiltrate government offices and kidnap a church official who decided to help expose the crimes.

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's now up to the Energy Department to decide whether to approve the interstate sale of 300 million cubic feet of natural gas from Mexico.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission on Friday approved the sale. The Energy Department and the FERC share jurisdiction over the proposed import of Mexican natural gas by Border Gas Inc., which is a consortium of six interstate pipeline companies. The companies want to buy the gas at an initial price of $3.625 per million Btu's (British thermal units, a measure of heat content). The price would be adjusted quarterly to reflect changes on the world market.

TEXAS

By The Associated Press

A cold front moved into Northwest Texas early today, bringing with it brisk winds and slightly cooler temperatures.

Forecasts called for the possibility of some light snow in the Panhandle by nightfall, ending Sunday morning.

Elsewhere, forecasts called for scattered showers and a few thunderstorms across most of the state.

Highs were to range from the 40s in the northern sections of the Panhandle to near 80 in South Texas. Most of the state was to have readings in the 50s and 60s.

Mostly cloudy skies prevailed during the pre-dawn hours. Some showers were reported along the gulf coast and in eastern sections of the state, but rainfall amounts were light. Corpus Christi had the most with only .02 of an inch.

Fog reduced visibility to about a mile at Del Rio and in the Fort Worth area.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 50s and 60s except for the mountains of Southwest Texas and in the northern sections of the Panhandle where the mercury dipped into the 30s before dawn.

NATIONAL

By the Associated Press

As heavy fog blanketed the upper Mississippi Valley, reducing visibility to near zero, rain spread from eastern Texas through the Ohio Valley into the Great Lakes region.

There was snow early today over the Rockies, with heavy snow in Utah and the New Mexico mountains. Showers were scattered along the West Coast, with light rain on Florida's Atlantic Coast.

Temperatures around the nation early this morning ranged from 12 degrees in Rumford, Maine, to 68 degrees in Corpus Christi, Texas.

The national weather forecast for today calls for snow flurries in central New England, changing to rain. Showers are expected to spread across the Appalachians, the Ohio and Tennessee Valleys, the central part of the Gulf coastal states, most of the Mississippi Valley and the southern Plains.

The rain is expected turn to snow over parts of the Rockies. The Pacific Northwest is also due for scattered rain.

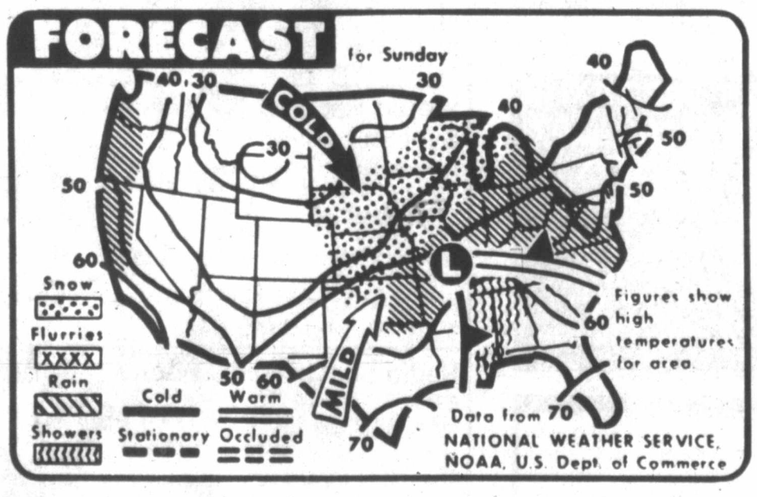

Here are some early morning temperatures and conditions around the nation:

Eastern U.S.: Atlanta 41, partly cloudy; Boston 34, cloudy; Cincinnati 44, rain; Cleveland 41, rain; Detroit 39, rain; Miami 63, partly cloudy; New York 37, cloudy; Philadelphia 34, foggy; Pittsburgh 34, cloudy; Washington 38, cloudy.

Central U.S.: Chicago 48, foggy; Denver 34, cloudy; Des Moines 31, foggy; Fort Worth 61, cloudy; Kansas City 43, hazy; Louisville 46, rain; Minneapolis-St. Paul 23, foggy; Nashville 48, cloudy; New Orleans 62, cloudy; St. Louis 53, foggy.

THE NATIONAL Weather Service forecast for Sunday calls for rain along the Pacific coast and snow will cover the Great Plains as far east as the Great Lakes. Rain is expected east and south of the Great Lakes through the Ohio Valley and showers are predicted for the Mississippi Delta.

Police search for suspect in killing

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Police scoured a southwest Amarillo neighborhood today, searching for clues in the stabbing death of a 53-year-old man.

The body of Roy L. Hammitt was discovered Friday, about two weeks after the victim was stabbed to death, said Lt. Marvin Richardson of the Amarillo Police Department.

However, Richardson said he doubted there was any connection between the murder and the unsolved slaying of a housewife last October, just few blocks from where Hammitt lived.

Medical examiners said Hammitt, a retired government accountant, suffered multiple stab wounds — two in the chest and one in the arm.

Police searched the yard and alley in an unsuccessful attempt to find a possible weapon.

Neighbors notified authorities early Friday afternoon after they noticed Hammitt's newspapers and mail had piled up, Richardson said.

Police climbed through a window and found the victim lying on the floor of his cluttered bedroom. However, police were uncertain whether the widower's house had been ransacked.

It was difficult for pathologists to determine Hammitt had been murdered because the body had deteriorated severely and two poodles in the house had gnawed on the body, Richardson said.

A 1977 Chevrolet Nova belonging to Hammitt was missing, Richardson said, but was found Friday afternoon in the parking lot of a bowling alley.

Farmers pushing to harvest cotton crop

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Cotton farmers in the plains and West Texas are hoping to get their crop in by the end of the year, barring further weather delays, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

In his weekly crop report, Pfannstiel said 15 to 20 percent of the crop remains to be harvested in some counties. Much cotton is being field-stored in modules to avoid tie-ups at overloaded gins.

An excellent cotton crop already has been harvested over most of the state despite heavy hail losses in the South Plains, the state's premier cotton growing area.

Pfannstiel said the state's livestock picture continues mixed. Most stock are in good shape in the eastern half of the state but are declining in South and West Texas due to prolonged dry weather and poor grazing.

Rains the past week should boost grazing on small grains although moisture still is needed in some areas. In parts of South and West Texas supplemental feeding has been heavy for some time. Many ranchers also have been culling herds sharply to reduce the number of animals to be carried over the winter.

Citrus harvesting has been heavy in the Rio Grande Valley as the demand for gift fruit peaks. Fruit quality is good although the crop will be short due to extensive freeze damage to trees last winter, Pfannstiel said. Some soybeans, sugar cane fall vegetables are to be harvested in the Valley.

Reports from district Extension agents showed these conditions:

PANHANDLE — Temperatures near zero early this week halted cotton harvesting, 80 percent complete in some counties. Gins have large backlogs. Yields have been good. Cattle are grazing some irrigated wheat and crop stubble. Range cattle are being fed.

SOUTH PLAINS — Cotton harvesting made little progress during the past week due to rain and snow. About 10 percent of the crop remains out; yields have been good. Much of the crop is field-stored to avoid tie-ups at gins. A few carrots are still being harvested. Wheat should improve with recent rain but more is needed. Livestock are being fed.

ROLLING PLAINS — Freezing rain and snow halted cotton harvesting the past week. Up to 95 percent of the crop is in in some counties; yields have been good. Recent rain should help small grains, but the area remains dry. Wheat is providing virtually no grazing, and stock water supplies remain low.

NORTH CENTRAL — Scattered rains the past week should help small grains for winter grazing, but most of the area remains dry. Most wheat is up but is making little growth. Oats look good and are providing some grazing. Pecan harvesting continues, and farmers are busy getting land prepared for spring planting. Cattle remain in good shape, with feeding active.

WEST CENTRAL — Rains last week slowed cotton harvesting but gave a boost to wheat fields. However, more is needed. Cotton harvesting is in the final stage; yields have been good to excellent. Harvesting of an excellent pecan crop is about complete Livestock feeding is heavy due to poor grazing and cold weather.

CENTRAL — Last week's rain will help small grains, but much more is needed replenish soil moisture. Pecan harvesting remains active, but some nuts will not be harvested due to low quality and low prices. Supplemental feeding of livestock is heavy due to poor grazing and cold weather.

EAST — Good rains the past week will help small grains; some oats are being grazed. Pecan harvesting continues, with crop 50 to 95 percent in. Pecan losses have been heavy due to scab disease in some areas. Livestock are in good shape, with supplemental feeding active. Market prices are off.

SOUTHEAST AND UPPER GULF COAST — Rains and cold weather halted spring planting preparations last week. A few pecans remain to be harvested; yields have generally been good to excellent. Cattle are in good shape, with feeding increasing due to the cold weather.

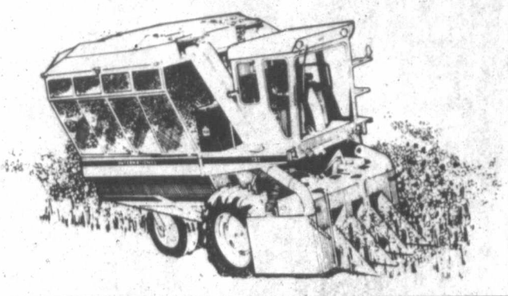

SOUTH CENTRAL — Rains should boost wheat and oats and improve grazing prospects. But cold weather is hampering growth. Pecan harvesting is about complete; yields have been good to excellent. Livestock are in good condition, with feeding increasing due to wintery conditions.

SOUTHWEST — Rains last week should give a boost to small grain pastures. More wheat and oats have been planted due to the rains. Supplemental feeding continues due to lack of forage. Fall vegetables are still being harvested in the Winter Garden, and deer hunting continues at a good pace.

COASTAL BEND — Soil moisture remains short although some locations got rain last week. More rain is needed for small grains, which have grown little so far. The pecan harvest is virtually complete. Farmers are busy getting land in shape for next spring's crops. Cattle are in fair shape, with feeding active.

NORTHEAST — Rains last week should help small grain pastures; however, cold weather is limiting growth. A few fields of soybeans still remain to be harvested, and an excellent pecan harvest continues. Livestock are in good shape, with feeding in full swing due to cold weather.

FAR WEST — Rain fell in scattered locations last week, delaying cotton harvesting but helping small grains. Cotton harvesting is 75 to 95 percent complete, with excellent yields. Livestock are grazing irrigated wheat. Calving and lambing are starting, and feeding continues to increase.

BRUCELLOSIS REGULATIONS:

A series of meetings was held over the Panhandle area this last week relative to proposed changes in state brucellosis regulations. There are obvious advantages over the old program, which reflect intense, yet successful negotiations by representatives of the Texas Cattle industry. Without an approved Texas plan, a federal quarantine is almost certain.

The current program for eradication of brucellosis was judged to be unworkable by a majority of Texas cattlemen in 1975. At their request, a National Brucellosis Technical Commission was established to evaluate the program. National Brucellosis Technical Commission members also found it to be basically unworkable and recommended major changes. The Texas Animal Health Commission has negotiated at the national level and with other states to obtain changes in the first draft of the new rules proposed as a result of the Technical Commission's report. These rules define the minimum federal requirements for the various state regulatory programs. The final draft of the Uniform Methods and Rules contains a series of compromises which have been sought by representatives of the Texas cattle industries.

The legislature has provided major new funds to implement the new program.

The Animal Health Commission is committed to negotiating for an economically affordable and yet epidemiologically sound program for the regulation of bovine brucellosis in Texas.

After hearing the information presented and questions of concerned cattlemen answered, I believe this new program will be a big step in the direction toward the clean-up and elimination of brucellosis in cow herds.

A hearing will be conducted Feb. 6, at 9 a.m. in Amarillo at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd. West. This hearing will give producers the opportunity to express their views about the brucellosis and the proposed rule changes.

I have copies of the proposed rules in my office. Give me a call at 669-7429, or come by the extension office located in the Courthouse Annex, Highway 60, East, Pampa, for your copy.

COTTONSEED FOR CATTLE

The cotton crop across the state has been real good for the most part. Cattlemen interested in saving money on their protein supplement cost, should consider using cottonseed. There is some time and expense to be considered in obtaining the cottonseed, since we don't have a cotton gin nearby.

As a means of comparison using only the value of protein furnished as the basis and using the value of cottonseed at $120 per ton, cottonseed cake is worth $207 per ton; 20 percent cubes - $100 per ton; 36 percent blocks - $180 per ton; alfalfa hay at 17 percent - $85 per ton; and 32 percent liquid feed at $160 per ton.

These values per-ton reflect only the comparative values based upon what the protein from cottonseed costs. Also, in addition, cottonseed has about 15 percent to 20 percent more energy than cottonseed cake does. These values do not consider availability, transportation, labor and storage costs. However, cattlemen can see that cottonseed are a reasonable surce of protein for cattle and the extra energy is an additinal bonus.

The pretty poinsettia you received this year does not have t be thrown away when it fades. With proper care, it will last for years, and with a little extra work you may coax it to bloom again. During the winter, keep the soil evenly moist by watering when surface begins to dry out. Keep plant in bright, indirect light, but not in fully sun. When plant begins to fade, cut it back to four inches and move to a pot with fresh soil and begin fertilizing once a mnth to stimulate new grwth. By fall it should be green again and you can stop fertilizing. Now is the time to try to persuade it to bloom. In lateSeptember,start giving the plant 14 hours of night by putting in a darkcloset or cvering with a box from dinner time to breakfast the next morning. Do this, without falil and in about three weeks, the plant will start turning color. Continue for seven or or eight weeks, and you poinsettia should be in full bloom in time for Christmas. Good luck!

4—H Projects Save Money:

Through 4—H projects, boys and girls can learn new skills that can save money. 4—H, the youth education program of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, serves more than 160,000 boys and girls between the ages of 9 and 19. Nationwide, membership in 4—H is more than five million.

Clothing and gardening projects are several areas in which 4—H'ers can learn to save money.

More than 520,000 4—H'ers are enrolled in clothing projects in the U.S. If each member sewed only one garment per year and saved one—half of the purchase price of $20, total savings would be more than $5 million. 4—H'ers can use sewing skills throughout their lifetime, thus multiplying savings for themselves and their families.

Gardening projects that help 4—H'ers learn to grow vegetables reach some 270,000 youths in the U.S. A recent survey showed that 4—H'ers with gardening projects save an average of more than $30 for their families each year. That's more than $8 million nationwide.

In gardening as in the clothing project, young people learn a variety of other skills, such as management techniques, and acquire attitudes such as cooperation, self-esteem and self-confidence which will enrich their lives.

Whether you live in the city or country, 4—H has something for you. For more information, contact the County Extension Office, 669—7429.

Former home of guerrilla chief attacked

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Three black gunmen today attacked the former Salisbury home of black nationalist guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe and wounded two of his nephews, police said.

The attack came one day after Rhodesia's black leaders signed a peace agreement in London aimed at ending the nation's seven-year guerrilla war.

The small, two-bedroom bungalow in the black township of Highfield was crowded with Mugabe's relatives, including his 75-year-old mother Vorna and two sisters, Sabena and Brigit.

The wounded were Patrick Mugabe 12, who was shot through the leg, and Innocent Mugabe, 27, whose cheek was grazed by a bullet.

"We are very frightened," said Mrs. Sabena Mugabe, 47, a nutrition and health specialist who now owns the house. "There is nothing we can do to get enough security. The attackers may well come again."

The other sister, Brigit, said she saw a car cruise past the house five times before the men inside opened fire.

"This is partly intimidation and partly an attempt to destroy Robert's family," she said. "It is the government attacking us — one of the internal leaders did it.

"So this is peace — to come and kill women," she added.

Police said the gunmen fired three bursts from automatic weapons at the veranda. They also hurled a grenade but failed to pull the safety pin and it didn't explode, police said.

The gunmen got away, the added.

There was no immediate explanation for the attack, nor any official word on who the attackers were. Police said the weapons they used were Soviet-made.

Officials have expressed fears for the safety of Mugabe and his fellow guerrilla chief, Joshua Nkomo, when they return to Salisbury under terms of the British-sponsored peace treaty.

Mugabe and Nkomo, co-leaders of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance, have been spearheading the anti-government war that has claimed more than 20,000 lives in the past seven years.

Jarvis is back in tax cutting action

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Howard Jarvis, the tax rebel who shook California's political establishment with a $7 billion property tax slash, is back — this time with a proposal to cut state income taxes in half.

"The tax revolt is continuing," Jarvis said Friday after elections officials announced that his latest initiative had qualified for California's statewide ballot next June.

The measure, which would cut more than $5 billion out of the state treasury during the next fiscal year, had nearly 100,000 more signatures than needed with 54 of the state's 58 counties reporting.

Jarvis estimates the proposal, known as Jarvis II, will mean a savings of $50 a year for the average taxpayer and claims it will result in 200,000 new jobs in the state.

Several state officials have warned that approval of Jarvis II, dubbed Jaws II by its critics, would have a disastrous financial impact on state and local governments.

Besides cutting income taxes in half, the proposal would put into the state constitution a requirement that state income tax brackets be adjusted annually to keep up with inflation.

That is intended to prevent workers who get cost-of-living raises from being forced into higher tax brackets.

A new state law includes that "indexing" requirement, but it will be phased out after two years unless extended by legislators.

Jarvis II is the third major government cost-cutting proposal to go before California voters since June 1978. Last month, they approved a government spending-limit sponsored by Paul Gann, who joined with Jarvis to author the property tax cut, Proposition 13.

MILFORD, Va. (AP) — An Amtrak engine was heavily damaged but there were no reported injuries in a collision between the train carrying 156 passengers and a tractor-trailer truck, authorities said.

Police said the train sheared off the rear section of the trailer loaded with sheet steel in the accident at a crossing Friday. The truck's driver, George Evans of Richmond, was charged with failure to yield, police said.

WINONA, Minn. (AP) — Two armed robbers wearing Santa Claus suits escaped with two packets of diamonds, valued at an estimated $20,000, from Morgan's jewelry store here, police said.

No shots were fired and no one was injured in the robbery Friday, police said. The men, carrying a bag for their loot, drew their weapons, demanded diamonds from a safe and fled in a car parked behind the store, according to police.

Gov. Carlos Romero-Barcelo of Puerto Rico said the appointment "is a source of immense pride for every Puerto Rican."

Against Iran

U.S. wants economic sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is asking the United Nations to marshal international support for limited economic sanctions against Iran in an effort to gain release of the 50 Americans still held hostage in Tehran.

In seeking the sanctions, the president warned Friday that "for a peaceful resolution (of the crisis) to be achieved, it is now clear that concrete action must be taken by the international community."

American diplomats at the United Nations are talking today with members of the Security Council, trying to line up the nine votes required for a resolution imposing sanctions. They said they did not know how the council would vote.

Carter underscored his warning Friday that "other remedies are available to us" with a Pentagon announcement that the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Nimitz, accompanied by two cruisers, will head for the Arabian Sea next week.

Carter delivered a short, blunt address at the White House, announcing the decision to seek U.N. sanctions. "The world community must support the legal machinery it has established so that the United Nations and the International Court of Justice will continue to be relevant in settling serious disputes," he said.

The administration paved the way to request sanctions earlier this month by securing a Security Council resolution and a World Court ruling that the hostages be freed.

Iran has ignored both, maintaining a demand that the deposed Shah of Iran be returned to that country for trial.

Under Article 41 of the U.N. Charter, the Security Council may now impose an array of economic sanctions. In most nations of the world, a Security Council resolution will trigger laws automatically enforcing the sanctions.

State Department officials, briefing reporters after Carter's address, said it would be up to the Security Council to decide the extent of the sanctions.

The officials, who asked not to be named, insisted they wanted "meaningful" sanctions and would rather fail trying to get them than accept "symbolic" action.

But they said the United States would not at this time ask the United Nations to stop the flow of oil out of Iran or the flow of food and medicine into the country.

With those critical commodities excluded, the sanctions could cover a wide array of imported manufactured goods, ranging from weapons to oil drilling equipment.

Officials acknowledged they had no way of knowing whether the sanctions, if imposed, would lead to release of the 50 hostages held in Tehran since Nov. 4. "We have a problem with knowing what motivates the authorities in that country," one official said.

IRA is sending special gifts in bomb blitz

SLONDON (AP) — The Irish Republican Army is behind the Christmas blitz of letter bombs addressed to prominent Britons, an anonymous caller said, as Scotland Yard admitted it faced "almost insurmountable" odds in trying to track down those sending the explosive "Christmas gifts."

A man who said he spoke for the IRA called the Dublin office of the British Broadcasting Corp. Friday night and said the militants were behind the barrage of letter bombs that began arriving in Britain earlier this week.

The caller, who gave a secret code name frequently used by the IRA in past communications, said the campaign was planned to spotlight what he called the inhumane treatment of inmates in Northern Ireland's Maze Prison, where IRA guerrillas and Protestant extremists are held.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements announced the appointments Thursday of Mrs. Farris Sharp of Dallas and Mrs. Jo Rene Newton of Kingsville to the Teachers' Professional Practices Commission.

Their terms extend to Aug. 31, 1981.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The student body association of Southwest Texas State University has filed suit in federal court to reinstate former Associated Students president Roy Battles.

U.S. District Judge Jack Roberts set a Jan. 9 hearing on a motion for a preliminary injunction.

Battles and former student body vice president Jon Hudson were removed from their student jobs Oct. 1 after they renewed a $100 a year contract with attorney Joseph Saranello of Houston to represent the student body association.

President Lee Smith of Southwest Texas State, at nearby San Marcos, said he removed Battles and Hudson from office because they had failed to seek regents' approval before rehiring Saranello.

The Austin American-Statesman identified Saranello as one of the "San Marcos 10," who were expelled in 1969 after a peaceful but unauthorized anti-Vietnam war demonstration on campus.

——— AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Youth Council may provide medical care to youths in its custody even though they object to such care, Attorney General Mark White held Thursday.

"The objections of a minor to medical treatment may in the ordinary course of things be overidden by TYC," said White in an opinion requested by Ron Jackson of TYC.

White also said TYC has authority to consent to medical care for its wards in the absence of parental consent.

"When TYC has notice of a parental objection to medical treatment the TYC should seek a judicial determination of its authority," White said.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A new section of the Education Code that prohibits public schools from hiring personnel through a private employment agency is constitutional, Attorney General Mark White said Thursday.

The law, effective Aug. 27, states, in part:

"A school district may not employ in any position an applicant who is referred to the district for employment by a private employment agency. Any contract between the district and an applicant who is referred to the district by a private employment agency is void."

The law also prohibits school districts from listing employment opportunities or paying a fee to such agencies for referrals.

White's opinion was requested by Chairman Joseph Saar of the Texas Private Employment Agency Regulatory Board.

HOUSTON (AP) — Mayor Jim McConn says the action could mean a property tax hike or a cut in city service but Houston's 16,000 employees have received another 3.5 percent pay increase.

Raises granted this year now total 12 percent.

McConn and Louis Macey, the councilman McConn defeated last month for a second two-year term as mayor, voted against the action, saying it should have been delayed until a new and enlarged council takes office in January.

The 12 percent pay hikes will cost the city about $35 million a year.

The council delayed action on a recommended 16 percent increase in water rates now and another 15 percent hike after 12 months. An engineering and consulting firm said the increases were based on inflation and a need for financing capital improvement bonds.

HOUSTON (AP) — A $38 million proposal for a special lane for buses on the state's most congested freeway has been endorsed by the Metropolitan Transit Authority board.

A resolution to use and maintain the Gulf Freeway facility was approved after the board heard a report from Bill Ward of the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Ward said the bus lane from downtown to the southeast city limits would be part of a project to widen the freeway from six to eight lanes. He said the busway would be financed by the Federal Highway Administration and could be in partial service by 1984.

HOUSTON (AP) — The FBI says a skeleton found in a Brazoria County rice field may be the remains of a pilot who disappeared a year ago.

Milton Sims, 28, Spring, and a twin-engine plane disappeared Dec. 16, 1978. The bullet-scared plane was found two days later inside an abandoned Texas City sirport hangar.

Investigators said a bullet hole was in the skull of the skeleton found Sunday.

The plane disappeared while on a charter flight from a private Houston airport. The owners have speculated the plane was skyjacked after it left Houston.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Holidays do not create depression but they can heighten the gloom of people already depressed, says a University of Texas psychologist.

"It's not often that you see someone who is well adjusted, has lots of friends and gets along socially suddenly plung into depression just because it's Christmas," said Dr. James Clack, associate director of the Counseling and Psychological Services Center.

However, a depressed person may feel completely alone in the world.

"It's like everyone else is sitting down to carve the turkey and you're heading to Whataburger — if it's open," Clack said.

Clack said those with holiday depression should not ignore their problem even if they feel better after the holidays. "Severe depression around the holidays is a symptom," he said. "Sufferers should seek counseling even if they seemingly return to normal later."

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Burnham Robinson, a speech and language specialist in the Fort Worth school district, has been elected president-elect of the Texas State Teachers Association for 1980-81.

Robinson will assume office as president-elect June 1 and will automatically become president of the TSTA on July 15, 1981.

He will be the first black to serve as president of TSTA.

Robinson defeated Don Berry of Duncanville 27,183 to 21,926 in statewide voting.

He was president of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association in 1976-77.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has named Vice Chancellor Edward Brandt Jr. of the University of Texas System as chairman of the governor's Medical Education Management Effectiveness Council.

Others named to the council are Dr. Kenneth Ashworth, commissioner of higher education; Dr. Ralph Willard, dean of the Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine; Dr. Richard Lockwood, vice president of the Texas Tech University School of Medicine; and Dr. Frank Harrison, president of the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio.

The council has been directed to suggest methods of reducing costs in the medical educationhealth sciences sector of higher education.

Clements earlier appointed similar councils for higher education and state agencies.

He said in a statement he would meet with agency heads Friday for the first formal review of progress.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Cotton exports — boistered by large movements to the People's Republic of China — are rising dramatically, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said Thursday.

Brown said the Port of Galveston is expected to ship more than two million bales by the end of the year, which is a sharp increase over 1978. He said Corpus Christi officials report their movement of more than 150,000 bales in 1979 is three times that of a year ago.

Figures from Port of Houston authorities show nearly 491,000 bales shipped out through August, an increase of 38 percent over the same period last year, Brown said.

Texas had a bumper crop of 5.7 million bales this year, he said.

"Selling is the name of the game and we are doing all we can to help merchandise this king of crops, Texas cotton," Brown added in a statement.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Fort Worth teacher Nancy Hilger and Virginia Stacey of San Antonio, a teacher in the Lackland Independent School District, have been elected without opposition as directors of the National Education Association.

It will be Ms. Hilger's second three-year term on the board. Ms. Stacey succeeds Fred Reininger of San Antonio, who was not eligible for re-election.

The new terms begin Sept. 1.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Catholic Conference has called for a ban on capital punishment, stating, "the sanctity of life at all stages of its development must be safeguarded."

The conference, which represents 3½ million Texas Catholics, distributed a statement Thursday that also proposes higher wages for law officers; adequate legal defense for all accused of crimes; a token wage for state prison inmates; and the elimination of restrictions on job opportunities for ex-convicts.

It also recommended more community-based correction programs.

The statement was written at the direction of the conference's board of directors, which includes all the Catholic bishops in Texas, and was unanimously approved by the Conference General Assembly this fall.

Conference officials indicated copies of the statement will be distributed to legislators.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements urged Texans Thursday to respond to appeals for aid to starving residents of Cambodia.

The governor said that international agencies have advised that cash, rather than goods, is urgently needed.

Railroad commission begins investigation into train collision

ORANGEFIELD, Texas (AP) — A freight train was standing still on the tracks when it was struck by an Amtrak train because of congestion caused by an earlier derailment, Southern Pacific Railway officials said.

The Texas Railroad Commission has begun an investigation into the cause of the wreck between the 13-car passenger train and the 141-car freight train.

Fifty persons on Amtrak's Sunset Limited, including 13 children and six Amtrak employees, were injured in the crash Wednesday night. They were treated for bumps and bruises and released from three hospitals in the Beaumont area.

Amtrak bused the 125 passengers on the New Orleans to Los Angeles train to Houston Thursday morning where they were placed on another westbound train.

"We struck a standing train in a rainstorm, but the real question is —, why was the freight train standing there?" said Amtrak spokesman John Jacobson of Washington. "I'm not suggesting this freight train was the guilty party, but obviously there is something unusual about a freight train standing in front of a scheduled passenger train."

In Houston, Southern Pacific spokesman Tony Aleman acknowledged the freight train was standing still at the moment of impact, about 9:30 p.m.

"There was train congestion there because of a derailment earlier in the day at Beaumont. The (freight) train involved was waved onto the siding, but there was already another train in the siding and that's why he was occupying the main line," he said.

He said there were red lights along the track ahead of the Amtrak train warning the engineer to slow to no faster than 20 mph. Aleman said the Amtrak train "proceeded at the restricted speed of less than 20 mph" but still could not avoid the collision.

Aleman said the caboose struck had reduced lighting. "The caboose probably had no power. The crew members had gotten off the train to walk it (inspect it) and placed a lighted lantern on the rear platform. They also turned the lights on on a deadhead caboose (a second caboose being taken back to the rail yard)."

DALLAS (AP) — Twenty elected officials have formed the Dallas County Elected Officials Association to lobby for a 10 percent pay raise.

The 15 Democrats and five Republicans voted unanimously to pressure county commissioners into giving about 3,000 county employees a cost-of-living raise in February.

But the three commissioners say the county can't afford the raise, which would cost $4 million next year.

DALLAS (AP) — Human error has been ruled the cause of the near collision of two Southwest Airlines jets at Love Field last week.

Fred DeWitt, Love Field tower chief, said he will review the air traffic review board's findings to determine if any disciplinary action should be taken.

"One of the controllers made the error," he said. "He got distracted with Dallas-Fort Worth Airport tower people on some information he was coordinating."

DeWitt said the near-miss occurred at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 12, when a Southwest Boeing 737 was holding for takeoff on the same runway where another 737 was landing. The planes missed by 200 feet.

DALLAS (AP) — A $350,000 airplane stolen from Love Field this week has been discovered with the aid of a pilot and a sloppy job of altering an identification number.

A Dallas police investigator said Thursday the twin-engine Beechcraft Baron would be returned to Love Field from Galveston Friday. The plane is owned by Calto Oil Co. of Dallas.

Vehicle theft investigator Willie Taylor said a pilot landing at Galveston's Scholes Field noticed the sloppy numbers and informed the control tower.

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — The Department of Housing and Urban Development will resume insuring mortgages on homes described as being in a high-risk area for plane crashes.

A Navy study two years ago recommended the neighborhood near the Dallas Naval Air Station be cleared of homes because of the chance for an air disaster.

HUD suspended insured loans to the area, but now will resume them because no air disasters have occurred, said regional HUD director Irving Statman.

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest's largest regional accounting firm and one of the nation's Big Eight firms will merge effective Jan. 3.

Alford, Meroney & Co., a regional firm based in Dallas, and Arthur Young & Co., an international firm with Southwest headquarters in Dallas, announced the merger Thursday.

Arthur Young has wanted to expand its Southwest operations for some time, and "everywhere we went, we found that the Meroney name was the class name in town," said William I. Webster, southwest region managing partner.

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Municipal Power Agency's purchase of 6.2 percent of the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant has been approved by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

DALLAS (AP) — Aubrey Gene Hester and Leland Burnell Hall pleaded guilty Thursday to charges of conspiring to defraud the Dallas Independent School District.

The pair, along with former DISD maintenance supervisor Richard A. Winger, were indicted last week in connection with a federal corruption investigation into the district's business practices.

Winger pleaded innocent to the 24 counts of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and mail fraud. Hester and Hall agreed to reduced charges in exchange for their testimony against Winger.

TMPA entered into an agreement almost a year ago with Texas Utilities Generating Co. to purchase a percentage of the plant near Glen Rose in Somervell County. TUGCO will operate the plant, now under construction, for Dallas Power & Light Co., Texas Electric Service Co. and Texas Power & Light Co.

The NRC approval will add TMPA's name to the construction permit. It is believed the agency will pay about $180 million for its share.

DALLAS (AP) — The general manager of the State Fair of Texas says serious problems will result if the state highway department places a concrete batching plant and equipment yard near the fair's entrance. The plant would produce concrete used to build roads.

Wayne Gallagher told the Dallas Park Board Thursday the plant would diminish traffic flow substantially for Fair Park.

The highway department wants to build the plant while it constructs State Highway 352 adjacent to the park. Gallagher said the highway probably wouldn't be finished for three years.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Attorneys notified a U.S. district judge Thursday they have settled a $1 million damage suit against the cities of Dallas, Hurst and Garland out of court, apparently for $25,000.

The suit was filed by a police informant who was wounded by officers during a Dallas supermarket holdup in 1976. Harold Heitzman said he notified officers that a man had offered him $500 to drive the getaway car in a supermarket robbery.

Heitzman said police told him to go along with the man. But as the robber ran from the store, he was met by a barrage of gunfire and Heitzman suffered 11 wounds.

Garland city attorney F.D. Eckert said Dallas paid $20,000, Garland $3,500 and Hurst $1,500.

DALLAS (AP) — A U.S. Labor Department strike force will begin investigating employers who fail to meet minimum standards when they hire undocumented workers.

Bill Belt, regional aministrator for employment standards and training, said the special force will begin its work after Jan. 1. He said they will concentrate on violations mainly in the construction and service industries.

The Dallas area strike force comes after a successful experiment in Houston, where 180 employers have been ordered to pay $448,672 in back wages to 1,550 employees.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — An Arlington businessman was sentenced to 15 years in prison Friday for mail fraud, arson and obstruction of justice.

Robert Allen Marshall, 37, pleaded guilty to trying to collect $300,000 insurance after burning down his van customizing plant and then trying to arrange for the murder of a government witness.

The witness, Daniel Martinez, a former Marshall and Sons employee, was given a three-year sentence after pleading guilty to arson charges.

DALLAS (AP) — An 18-year old University Park woman escaped her abductor by diving from a moving car headed for East Texas Friday morning.

Police said Lisa Morgan and Mark Pellettrer were leaving a Dallas nightclub when a man approached the couple and asked for a ride. They refused the request at first, but became frightened and let him enter the car.

Police said the man pulled a knife and forced Pellettrer from the car; then drove Miss Morgan toward East Texas on Interstate 20. She managed to dive from the car, and was picked up by a truck driver.

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas consumer affairs department is visiting discotheques this weekend to enforce a new ordinance prohibiting the clubs from using fake dress codes to keep out minorities.

The revisions in the public accommodations law were approved by the City Council Wednesday. The panel voted unanimously to keep discos from enforcing dress codes unless they are posted in clear view at the entrance.

A department spokeswoman said investigators probably would make spot checks to see if dress codes were posted.

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — A Garland woman claiming she was falsely arrested filed a $250,000 suit in federal court Friday against the City of Garland and the Garland Police Department.

Teresa Mae Carter, 19, said she was roused out of bed and arrested a year ago for a traffic ticket she had paid two months earlier.

She claims her constitutional rights were violated and that she suffered "much anxiety, distress and embarrassment, physical pain and mental injury."

DALLAS (AP) — Local officials have responded unenthusiastically to American Airlines' proposal for a radically different terminal at DallasFort Worth Airport.

Airline officials appeared before the airport board's operations committee to propose the $305 million terminal with long corridors instead of a simicircle terminal similar to those now in use.

But board members say they are taking a wait-and-see attitude while airport staff members review American's proposal over the next few months.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department has recorded 35 hunting accidents in the state in 1979 — the lowest annual total in 20 years.

The 35 accidents resulted in five fatalities. The 1978 figures included 83 accidents involving 19 deaths.

"With only a few days remaining to hunt in 1979, it appears we will record the fewest accidents and fatalities in 20 years," said T.D. Carroll, hunter safety coordinator.

HOUSTON (AP) — Mayor Jim McConn and his runoff opponent spent a combined $1.37 million on their mayoral campaigns.

McConn, who won a second two-year term, reported spending $895,509, including $281,104 in the runoff. Councilman Louis Macey reported spending $475,687, including $207,615 in the runoff.

McConn reported receiving $933,833 in contributions, Macey $477,213.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has named Thomas J. Marquez of Dallas to the Texans' War on Drugs Committee. Marquez, 41, is director of Electronic Data Systems Corp.

Clements also made two appointments to the Texas Workers' Compensation Advisory Committee. John H. Coffman of Dallas and Fran Markantonsis of Houston were chosen. Coffman, 59, is president of Union Bankers Insurance Company. Markantonisis, 31, is an attorney.

PARIS, Texas (AP) — A burglar in this Northeast Texas town may be the envy of every squirrel in town. Police said a thief broke into the Washington Street Food Mart and stole more than a ton of unshelled pecans.

A police spokesman said 2,210 pounds of pecans were discovered missing Thursday morning, but the burglar apparently grew tired of his task, because he left several hundred pounds untouched.

Store owner Mrs. Vergil McFadden offered a $150 reward for the return of her pecans.

There were no suspects in the case.

Big quake due within decade

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An earthquake of devastating proportions is expected to strike California — probably in a populated area — within the next decade, two seismologists say.

The chance of such a quake is now about 50-50, and "every passing year these odds will steadily increase," says the report by Bruce A. Bolt, director of the Seismographic Station at the University of California in Berkeley, and Richard H. Jahns, professor of geology and applied earth sciences at Stanford University.

They said the quake will probably have a Richter scale reading of more than 7. The Richter scale measures ground motion, and a quake with a magnitude of 7 is classified as a "major" earthquake, capable of inflicting widespread damage.

Bolt and Jahns, writing in the journal of U.C. Berkeley Institute of Governmental Studies, based their prediction on measurements of strain along California faults, and on historical records of earthquake occurrence for hundreds of years.

They said the next large quake is likely to strike a populated area, mainly because of the state's increasing urbanization.

"In fact, of California's principal urban concentrations, all except the Sacramento and San Diego areas appear to be exposed to fairly high levels of seismic risk," they wrote.

The only major earthquake in the United States to occur in a heavily populated region was the San Francisco quake of 1906, they said. That quake, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, was estimated at 7.9.

But "metropolitan areas in both Northern and Southern California are certain to be hit by major earthquakes in the future," they said.

The seismologists say California's response to the danger of a great quake is inadequate.

Forming the California Seismic Safety Commission in 1975 was a positive step.

Egypt hears the same tune as Iran

CAIRO (AP) — He condemns Western music, attacks the inequalities between rich and poor, rails against "international Zionism" and tells his followers their only salvation lies in strict adherence to Islamic law.

He is Sheikh Abdel Hamid Kishk, a 47-year-old blind Moslem preacher whose fiery rhetoric often sends echoes through Egypt of that of Iran's revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Unlike Khomeini, Kishk lacks a national following and says he does not advocate revolution because it is not called for in Islam's holy book, the Koran.

But the popularity of the round-faced, bearded preacher is one example of the resurgence of Islamic fundamentalism in Egypt under the gradual political liberalization instituted by President Anwar Sadat four years ago.

Overflow crowds numbering in the thousands attend his Friday sermons in the "Eye of Life" mosque in Cairo's Kubba district and disciples sell cassette recordings of his preachings throughout the city at $2 apiece.

Kishk, dressed in a long robe and wearing a white turban with red skullcap, stepped to the microphone at a recent service and said:

"Treacherous winds have hit us, once from the atheist East and once from the corrupt West, and afterwards our youth became devoted to books on sex and corruption."

His followers, many kneeling on newspapers in the crowded alleyways of the low-income neighborhood behind his sand-colored mosque, responded with cries of "Allah!"

Kishk strikes perhaps the most responsive chord when he lashes out against the rich, who enjoy privileged lives while many Egyptians struggle on a per capita income of less than $300 a year.

He even turned this argument on the Mufti of Cairo, a high-ranking official in Egypt's Islamic establishment which administers about 5,000 of the 20,000 mosques under Egyptian government supervision.

The issue was a new law giving women more rights in divorce and inheritance proceedings, legislation that was vigorously supported by Egypt's first lady, Jihan Sadat.

Kishk accused the Mufti of "misquoting God's verses" to give legislators a pretext for changing the Koranic dictums permitting polygamy.

"Your eminence the Mufti knows that when you enter the grave you will enter it alone," Kishk thundered. "The Mercedes won't enter with you, nor your chair and you won't have your checkbook to one of Cairo's banks."

Such criticism led to Kishk's arrest and six years in jail under the socialist regime of the late President Gamal Abdel Nasser, who viewed the fundamentalists as a threat and suppressed them. Kishk's followers say he is still under constant surveillance by security police.

Kishk doles out money and advice to the needy who line up outside his office door almost daily. At one such session, he gave cloth to a mother unable to buy her daughter a dress and referred a young student to a doctor who gave free medical care. Both kissed his hand in thanks.

"Our Islamic cause doesn't intend revolution against anything, but it gives us guidance to correct deviations," he told a Western reporter. "There are no attackers among us. We are defenders."

Similar views were expressed by Omar Tlemsany, editor of "Al Daawa" (The Call).

Carol Burnett says it is time to pay her dues

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I used to wonder why I was so fortunate to have so many wonderful things happen to me. Now it's time to pay my dues."

Comedian Carol Burnett was talking about what has happened since she and husband-producer Joe Hamilton went public about the drug addiction of their daughter Carrie, 15. What began as a family confessional — in magazines, on TV shows, in press interviews — has become a crusade.

Ms. Burnett finds herself inundated by letters and telephone calls.

She is planning benefit performances in Houston Dec. 29 and Los Angeles March 29 to aid Houston's Palmer Drug Abuse Program, which she credits with saving Carrie from becoming a vegetable."

The star is flooded with requests to speak. She'll appear before parents but not children — "they won't listen to me; kids need someone they can relate to, a person 18 or 19 who has been through the dope scene."

Ms. Burnett has been pursuing the campaign with the same energy she has devoted to her career as a star in television, films and the theater.

It all started two years ago when Carrie joined other girls in sneaking off from classes, at an exclusive west side school, for sessions with marijuana and Quaaludes. She later admitted that the dope made her feel important and helped feed a driving ego. She was up to two grains of cocaine a day before her parents began wondering about her poor grades and erratic behavior.

The confrontation between parents and daughter was bitter. This past summer, Joe and Carol forced Carrie to enter the Palmer program, which treats addicts as outpatients; Carrie lives with a sponsor and attends public school in Houston. Her recovery has been so successful that the Hamiltons decided to disclose the entire experience.

"Not all of the reaction has been favorable. I get letters from people saying, 'Why air your dirty linen in public?' I've also had adverse comments from pot smokers — and from the manufacturers of dope paraphernalia."

The latter has become a sub-crusade for Ms. Burnett. She is astonished at magazine ads for such things as "a pre-teen pot kit complete with practice alfalfa grass" and "a 'Star Wars' ripoff, a toy gun to blast smoke into your lungs."

At a Beverly Hills store where she shopped for her children's jeans, she found on sale all kinds of devices for the use of pot, coke, heroin and other drugs. She bought a few, had them explained to her by a police detective, then talked about them and the story on Michael Jackson's KABC radio show.

"The next day I received a wire at home from the manager of the store, thanking me for pointing out the problem," Ms. Burnett says with an edge to her voice. "I sent him a dozen roses to snort."

What does Ms. Burnett advise parents with addicted children?

"I never tell them what to do. I tell them: 'This is what I would do in the same situation.' Then it is their choice, their responsibility.

"The first thing I would do is not feel guilty. You didn't cradle that child in your arms and say, 'I'm going to make you so miserable that you'll be driven to dope.' You were not out to psychologically destroy your son or daughter so they would have to use a needle or snort cocaine.

"The second thing I would do is seek help. You can't do it yourself.

It's Mr. Bill

He has blond hair and blue eyes, but you'd never peg him as a TV star. He's shorter than Dick Cavett. His voice is higher than Wayne Newton's. And he's totally antisocial. Everytime he meets someone on his show, he gets all bent out of shape.

Yet on most Saturday nights when the TV announcer proclaims, "Hey, kids, it's time for 'The Mr. Bill Show,'" a four-inch lump of Play-Dough becomes an entertainment giant.

Mr. Bill is, quite simply, a star. Fan mail pours in every week. His face adorns T-shirts from Billings to Biloxi. His recently published biography is selling briskly even though it's shorter than Billy Martin's temper and sells for $4.95. He's even become a movie star — the semi-redeeming social value in "Mr. Mike's Mondo Video."

Just why Mr. Bill has captured the hearts (if certainly not the minds) of the under-30 crowd is harder to nail down than Bill himself. On "Saturday Night Live," the NBC program that showcases his meager talents, he's not ready for The Not Ready For Prime Time Players.

And Bill, with his not-so-proverbial feet of clay, can't really be called a hero, though he's been through more close scrapes than Evel Knievel and has fallen off the Empire State Building and lived to tell the tale.

At best, Mr. Bill is a classic survivor of the '70s, with a resilience that Wile E. Coyote would admire. At worst, he has become America's favorite whipping boy. Every episode of his show brings new cruelties to the wee fellow and his lumpy dog, Spot — either at the hands of the villainous Sluggo or through the misguided intentions of Mr. Hands. Decapitated. Crushed. Bent. Spindled. But mostly mutilated.

With each new mini-disaster, Mr. Bill's star rises while Walter Williams, the shaper of his character, tries harder to avoid the public eye.

Nation is facing crisis

HOUSTON (AP) — Secretary of Energy Charles W. Duncan Jr. says the nation faces a potential crisis that is more complex than any situation it has ever faced in peacetime.

"We are in a time of transiq-tion from a social and economic infrastructure that has been built for nearly a century on the premise of cheap, easy, accessible petroleum, a premise that, unfortunately, is no longer relevant," Duncan said.

He said the nation must face the situation squarely.

"Are we going to manage this situation, or are we going to respond to crises and slip back into complacency between crises," he said.

"There is no choice. We must manage this evolution, or we will be doing a disservice to ourselves and future generations."

That, Duncan recently told the National Petroleum Council, is why President Carter has put forward the most comprehensive energy program the nation has ever seen, "because it takes such a broad plan to move this nation forward to an energy diversified 21st century."

Duncan said the situation is not just an American problem but a worldwide problem that is of serious concern to the industrialized nations and the developing nations alike.

He said the International Energy Agency that includes 20 of the world's leading industrialized nations has taken the unprecedented step of binding national ceilings for imports of foreign oil for next year and putting in place a mechanism to monitor national oil supplies and each nation's performance in staying within its ceiling.

As a result, he said, the countries will be able to move rapidly to adjust their ceilings and take the necessary actions individually to match oil availability, meeting again in the first 90 days of 1980 to assess the supply and import ceiling balance.

"This action by the IEA underscores the concern of the member countries about the disarray in the national oil market and their awareness that the consuming countries must act individually and collectively to adjust to their demands to meet the inevitably shrinking supply of liquid petroleum," Duncan said.

"In this country, we are already seeing signs of recognition of the reality of the problem. The sudden realization that continued alterness to potential oil shortages was to be a way of life in this country was shocking and perhaps even frightening to many Americans. Perhaps that was necessary."

Duncan said it is encouraging that the American people in every area and in every level of society appear to be gradually building a consensus about how to use the vast energy resources available here at home.

Duncan said America has been, from its beginning, a nation on the move, a nation in transition.

"We have not been static technically, industrially, socially, or economically," he said.

Hostages to receive U.S. bonds

HOUSTON (AP) — The U.S. Embassy hostages in Tehran are to receive U.S. Savings Bonds from Houston.

A certificate for $50 bonds will be sent to the family of each of the hostages.

The gifts, made possible by contributions from citizens and businesses, were announced Thursday at a luncheon launching the city's U.S. Savings Bond drive.

Bush says he is confident

HOUSTON (AP) — George Bush says he is absolutely convinced he will be one of the two top contenders for the Republican presidential nomination next year.

Bush would not say who he expects the other top candidate to be but the former United Nations ambassador said he is putting together the best political organization of the Republican Party has ever seen in the early presidential primary states.

He said he will get one-fourth of the Arkansas delegates and that he is gaining strength in New Hampshire and Puerto Rico.

As to Iowa's Jan. 21 primary, Bush said, "We'll do better than expected."

"It will be hard to go to New Hampshire if we don't do good in Iowa," he said.

In his hometown only briefly between campaign swings, Bush made his remarks at a reception given him by the Circle R, the fund-raising arm of the Harris County Republican Party.

Bush said his campaign is strong in the New England states.

"Yes, I was born in Massachusetts," he said. "Yes, I grew up in Connecticut, and, yes, my mother was born in Maine."

Hostages to get Christmas card

HOUSTON (AP) — A radio station says a 10-foot Christmas card has been sent to the hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Station KAUM reported the card signed by hundreds of Houstonians was flown to New York and then to Zurich, from where a team of ABC reporters carried it on to Tehran aboard a Swissair plane.

KAUM said an ABC correspondent in Tehran took the card to the embassy.

Meanwhile, postal officials said about 133,000 pieces of mail for the hostages had been processed in Houston.

FBI agent will not testify to jurors

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Attorney Tony Canales says a state grand jury has been advised it will not hear testimony from an FBI agent subpoenaed in its investigation of the Reggie Lee Jackson case.

Canales said Mary Sinderson, head of his civil rights section, advised the grand jury proper procedure had not been followed in seeking testimony from the agent.

Canales said only a local U.S. attorney or the U.S. attorney general can authorize such testimony and that no such authorization had been requested either before or after Ms. Sinderson's grand jury appearance.

A federal grand jury also is investigating the death of Jackson. Two policemen have said Jackson was shot when he pointed a gun at them as he and a second man sought to flee after being stopped Sept. 26 on a traffic matter. Several civilians have contended no second man was involved and that they heard someone, apparently Jackson, pleading for his life.

Canales said Ms. Sanderson was not subpoenaed to appear before the state grand jury.

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has authorized the seizure of Iranian assets to help cover a $21.6 million debt claimed by an Alabama firm.

Plane crashes claim 11 lives

Four private planes, two of them battling dense fog, crashed in accidents in Florida, Arkansas and Illinois, killing all 11 persons aboard.

A small plane crashed into a downtown Orlando Fla., lake early today, missing the high-rise lakeside apartments, and killing all four passengers, authorities said.

Orlando Police Sgt. John Todd said the plane took off from Herndon Airport shortly after midnight and "went directly into the lake and sank."

Divers recovered two bodies inside the sunken twin-engine Beachcraft, and two others were found at the bottom of Lake Eola.

The identities of the victims were not immediately available and the destination of the plane was not known.

Authorities said at least eight persons jumped into the water in an effort to save the passengers.

In Arkansas, an Iowa farmer died Friday when a Cessna 182 crashed into the woods west of Jessieville in Garland County.

Authorities said James L. Bittle, of Iowa City, Iowa, was alive after crash about noon, but died before an ambulance arrived.

Witnesses said the plane had been circling in dense fog before crashing.

Authorities were uncertain where the flight originated, or where it was headed.

In another Arkansas accident, three executives of Sterling Stores Inc. of Little Rock and the company pilot were killed Friday when their twin-engine Cessna airplane hit a radio transmitting tower in dense fog, crashed and burned near Locust Grove.

The victims were identified as Ben Johns, 62, David McClanahan, 44, Frank A. Bauer, 61, and Jack Starr, 37, the pilot.

They were headed from Little Rock to Batesville, authorities said.

WASHINGTON

MILFORD, Va. (AP) — An Amtrak engine was heavily damaged but there were no reported injuries in a collision between the train carrying 156 passengers and a tractor-trailer truck, authorities said.

Police said the train sheared off the rear section of the trailer loaded with sheet steel in the accident at a crossing Friday. The truck's driver, George Evans of Richmond, was charged with failure to yield, police said.

WINONA, Minn. (AP) — Two armed robbers wearing Santa Claus suits escaped with two packets of diamonds, valued at an estimated $20,000, from Morgan's jewelry store here, police said.

No shots were fired and no one was injured in the robbery Friday, police said. The men, carrying a bag for their loot, drew their weapons, demanded diamonds from a safe and fled in a car parked behind the store, according to police.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Jose A. Cabranes has been sworn in as the first native of Puerto Rico to be a federal judge on the U.S. mainland.

"I'm damn proud of it," Cabranes said after taking the oath Friday from Sen. Abraham Ribicoff at Yale Law School. Cabranes, whose 39th birthday is today, has been a social activist, author, college professor and private lawyer. He is resigning as Yale's general counsel to assume the judgeship.

Gov. Carlos Romero-Barcelo of Puerto Rico said the appointment "is a source of immense pride for every Puerto Rican."

ATCHISON, Kan. (AP) — Some 500 persons were temporarily evacuated from schools and plants when toxic chlorine gas was found leaking from a tank at a solvents plant, authorities said. 4

But the leak from a one-ton cylinder at the Midwest Solvents plant Friday was repaired and the evacuation order was lifted about four hours later.

El Salvador hostage coming home

SUCCASUNNA, N.J. (AP) — Deborah Loff, a Peace Corps volunteer in El Salvador, is coming home for Christmas after being held hostage for 10 days by leftists occupying a public market.

The 25-year-old former bank clerk was released unharmed Friday and planned to fly to Newark today in time for a holiday homecoming with her family in this Morris County community, family members said.

Roger Loff, 21, one of her two brothers, said Miss Loff had not been planning to come home for Christmas, but the Peace Corps offered to pay for the airfare after the woman's ordeal.

"She does have plans to go back there to finish up her projects," said the 21-year-old Loff. Added 17-year-old Gary: "She really loves her work. She loves the people."

Roger said their mother had talked to Miss Loff by telephone.

"She sounded good and excited to be released. She was well treated and happy that she was no longer confined," he said.

"We're just looking forward to seeing her," he said.

Miss Loff, a health specialist who joined the Peace Corps in July 1978, was working in a market district of San Salvador when she and eight Salvadorans were taken captive Dec. 12. Four of them were set free with her Friday, while four had been released earlier.

The mayor of San Salvador successfully negotiated the release of the hostages, Peace Corps officials say.

The leftists involved in the dispute, members of the February 28 Popular Leagues, demanded reduced rental rates for market stalls and higher wages for market workers. Mayor Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes said he would offer a remedy immediately after the Christmas holidays.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said Miss Loff "looks good and she is in good spirits. She was not harassed."

Stall vendors pay about 60 cents a square yard per month for space in the markets, and want the rent reduced to 30 cents. They also complain policemen help themselves to food and other items while on duty.

The mayor said earlier the cuts the leftists were demanding would "mean bankrupting the marketplace system."

The February 28 Popular Leagues takes it name from the day in 1977 when army and police forces fired on demonstrators protesting fraud in the election of Gen. Carlos Huberto Romero as president. More than 100 persons died in the main plaza during the shooting.

Romero was overthrown in a coup in October. A military-civilian junta now rules the Central American country.

Five die in crash

AUGUSTA, Kan. (AP) — A car and train collided early today at a fogbound crossing southwest of Augusta, killing five persons and derailing two freight cars, the Butler County Sheriff's office said.

Officials said a sixth person was critically injured when the car collided with a Santa Fe freight train just after midnight.

Names and ages of the victims, all in the automobile, were not immediately available. Deputy Sheriff Howard Bishop said the victims appeared to be in their mid-20s.

Bishop said the automobile struck the 31st car of an 87-car freight. The impact derailed two freight cars, blocking the east-west line, he said.

The automobile was carried 160 feet down the track.

"They just didn't see the train until they were on top of it," Bishop said. "Visibility was nearly zero at the time of the accident."

In order for our employes to spend the holidays with their families, the following early deadlines and publication schedule will be followed during the Christmas Season.

The Pampa News will not be published on December 25th, Christmas Day, or on January 1st, New Year's Day.

How to help allergic children

By RICHARD M. O'NEILL, M.D.
(Fourth in a series)

Few experiences are more frightening than watching one's child suffer an allergic reaction. Fortunately, parents, educators and health professionals can do much to reduce the severity and frequency of allergies in children.

The first step is health education to help parents understand and cope with the various forms of childhood allergy: rhinitis (nasal allergy), eczema (skin allergy) and asthma (respiratory allergy). This education should begin before the couple's first child is born.

This education is especially helpful for parents with family histories of allergy, for they have the heredity potential of producing allergic offspring. Non - allergic families can also give birth to allergic children, however.

Therefore, it is a good idea for all parents - to - be to learn as much as possible about childhood allergies from physicians, from health - education classes or from reading.

Proper nutrition is important for the expectant mother of a potentially allergic child. During pregnancy, she should avoid foods to which she is allergic.

If possible, the newborn should be breast - fed. This is especially recommended if either parent's family has a history of cow's milk allergy. If the mother cannot breast feed, a substitute formula such as soy may be used.

Introduction of solid foods such as cereal and vegetables should be delayed until the potentially allergic infant is about 6 months old. Increased food intolerance may occur when solids are started too early.

Some foods -- including eggs, wheat, citrus fruits, tomatoes, nuts, fish, shellfish and strawberries -- are more likely than others to cause allergic reactions. These potential allergens should be introduced cautiously -- one at a time over several days -- while the child is watched for allergic symptoms.

Any offending food should be eliminated, of course. But it is important to be sure of the allergy; mistaken removal of essential foods from the diet may cause malnutrition, which is far more serious than an allergy.

The next step for parents of an allergic child is allergen - proofing the house, especially the child's bedroom. If that room has been freshly painted, the child should sleep elsewhere.

Do not smoke near the child or in his or her room. Eliminate possible allergens such as dogs, cats, feather - stuffed pillows, stuffed toys, mattress dust, wool rugs and blankets, rug pads (synthetic ones are acceptable) and mold.

Do not allow the child to play in dusty areas, such as attics. Air conditioning, electrostatic filters and micropore filters can be effective at reducing dust and pollens in the house.

Moderate exercise is helpful for increasing the allergic child's lung capacity. However, too strenuous exercise can lead to wheezing (exercise induced asthma).

Exposure of the allegic child to sick people, especially those with respiratory infections, can lead to illness and precipitate an asthma attack. Children become more immune as they grow in size and strength; usually they no longer "catch everything" by the time they reach the first grade.

Allergic children and their families are understandably subjected to increased emotional stress.

Allergy attacks, doctor appointments and hospital stays often interfere with school, play and family plans. Family members may subconsiously reject the allergic child because he or she creates problems. The mother may see her severely asthmatic child's condition as hopeless and withdraw from caring.

The allergic child may withdraw emotionally if he or she perceives a lack of parental support.

Christmas something special to orphans

Their tiny faces lit up like a string of lights on a Christmas tree as Santa Claus handed out the brightly decorated packages. They sang Christmas carols, ate cookies and played games, as many families do this time of year.

The family just described is not your everyday ordinary family. However, for the sixteen orphans at the Panhandle Catholic Childrens' Home, east of Panhandle, this is the only family they have. Even those who have gone to college come home to the orphanage to share Christmas with their "adopted" siblings.

The Pampa High School Red Cross Youth organization returned to the home for their tenth year in a row to share in the joy that Christmas brings these children. Following fund raising and gift buying, the organization held their tenth annual Christmas party for the children bringing Santa Claus along as a special guest.

Each child wrote their own special letter to dear ol' St. Nick requesting the toy or present of their choice. These letters were distributed equally among the homerooms at the high school, where money was donated or raised to purchase the gift. "The high school kids were so generous," exclaimed Mary Lynn Case, adult advisor of Red Cross Youth. "If it weren't for them, the party would not be possible."

"There were four children added since our Thanksgiving party, which we didn't know about until a few days before the party," reflected Case. "I went into one class and told them about the problem and walked out with $20 in my hand. One teacher alone helped me out by giving an added $20."

Many special talents and people were responsible for the party, which according to Sister Valentina, head of the home, is the biggest and most looked forward to by the children. Meganne Walsh, Red Cross Youth President, was credited by Case for "getting it all together." Rocky Bynum, a 1978 graduate of Pampa High, returned from college to again portray the childrens' beloved friend, Santa, while Mats Kristiansson, Pampa High School's AFS student from Sweden, came along bringing his guitar to play and sing carols with the children. Many former Red Cross Youth members arrived from college to again take part in the event.

Each child was given two nicely wrapped presents from Santa Clause, in return for a kiss and a hug. They were also given a Christmas card with $7 cash for each to spend at his or her desire. According to Case, $5 of each $7 was from Red Cross, while the other $2 was donated by a 1970 Red Cross member. Besides the individual gifts, the organization purchased a microscope and several games for the entire home.

The evening of fun came to an end as the Red Cross members loaded up and began the short trek home. However, the fun had just begun for the children as they all played happily with their new possessions. As one Red Cross member recalled, "I felt a feeling that I will never be able to explain."

My prerogative

Usually, I focus my columns on the high school students, however, this week I want to express a few feelings towards the majority of the citizens of Pampa.

Last Tuesday evening the Pampa High School Choral Department presented a concert at M.K. Brown Auditorium, to which the public was invited and admitted free of charge. To be frank, I believe there were more choir members at the concert than spectators.

I, as a member of the choir, would like to say thank you to the small handful of people arriving to see the choirs in concert. If it were not for that few, our endless hours of hard work would have been an entire waste.

I don't understand why more people do not take an interest in the fine arts at Pampa High. The choir, band and drama departments have all won numerous awards in past years and I am sure this year will be no different. And somehow we do it without the support of a few of our hometown citizens.

I spoke once about how the lack of support effects our athletic teams. Don't you think the same thing goes for us? When the curtain opens and the choir witnesses an audience of only 50 in a 1500 seat auditorium, believe me, it can cause a sour first note.

I am not saying this is the case every time. I do remember the fine turnout at our production of "Oklahoma!" But we do have other concerts and we, as do the other departments, need your undivided support. These kids are talented, and without encouragement, that gift of talent could go to waste.

Our Christmas concert is for your entertainment. Granted, we have a lot of good times getting it together, but we could be spending that time on more important music such as that of contest. I'm just sorry more people did not get the Christmas cheer that we intended to give at our concert. And again thanks to those who did come.

--DD--

This time of the year is my favorite because it gives me a chance to be with the ones I love, whether they be friends or relatives. I would extend a personal Merry Christmas to all of them, however the list is much to lengthy to print. So I would like to say that I pray for a safe and happy holiday for every one of my friends, relatives, teachers and all of my faithful readers. MERRY CHRISTMAS!

--DD--

PERSONAL NOTE: Merry Christmas Mom & Dad!

Agricultural news

Copies of the 1979 edition of the Farmer's Tax Guide is available in the Gray County Extension Office, Courthouse Annex, Pampa.

Farmer's Tax Guide is designed to explain how the tax laws apply to farming situations. It gives examples and illustrations showing how different items should be reported on your federal income tax return. There are also samples of records and tax forms illustrating how good records help you prepare an accurate tax return and pay only the correct amount of tax.

New developments in the tax law are summarized under Items of Interest. A number of changes have been made that will affect the amount of tax you pay. Some of the chahges will reduce your tax. For instance, the allowance for personal exemptions for dependents has increased from $750 to $1,000. Also, the zero bracket amounts have increased.

Roy Clark is set to act as one of the hosts for 'The Sensational, Shocking, Wonderful, Wacky '70s,' a two-hour NBC-TV special airing New Year's Eve.

The show, produced by Dick Clark, recaps the 'decade without an identity,' looking at not only the entertainment side, but the news events, the heroes, and those who have left us during the '70s.

On a recent appearance on 'The Tonight Show,' Roy Clark commented on some of his earlier hit records. Many of our readers have asked about a source for those first hit recordings. The Roy Clark – Collection—two complete albums of Roy Clark hit singles on one eight track tape—is available along with an 8 x 10 photo and a career bio sheet, for $9.95 postpaid from Writers Country Enterprises, Box 2112, Asheville, N.C. 28802.

UNIVERSITY OF Washington Coach Don James had a somewhat "heated" conversation with game officials shortly before the start of the Sun Bowl game at El Paso Saturday. The conversation concerned which footballs were to be used for the game. James may have lost the argument, but his Huskies won the game, 14-7, over Texas. (AP Laserphoto)

Huskies stun Texas

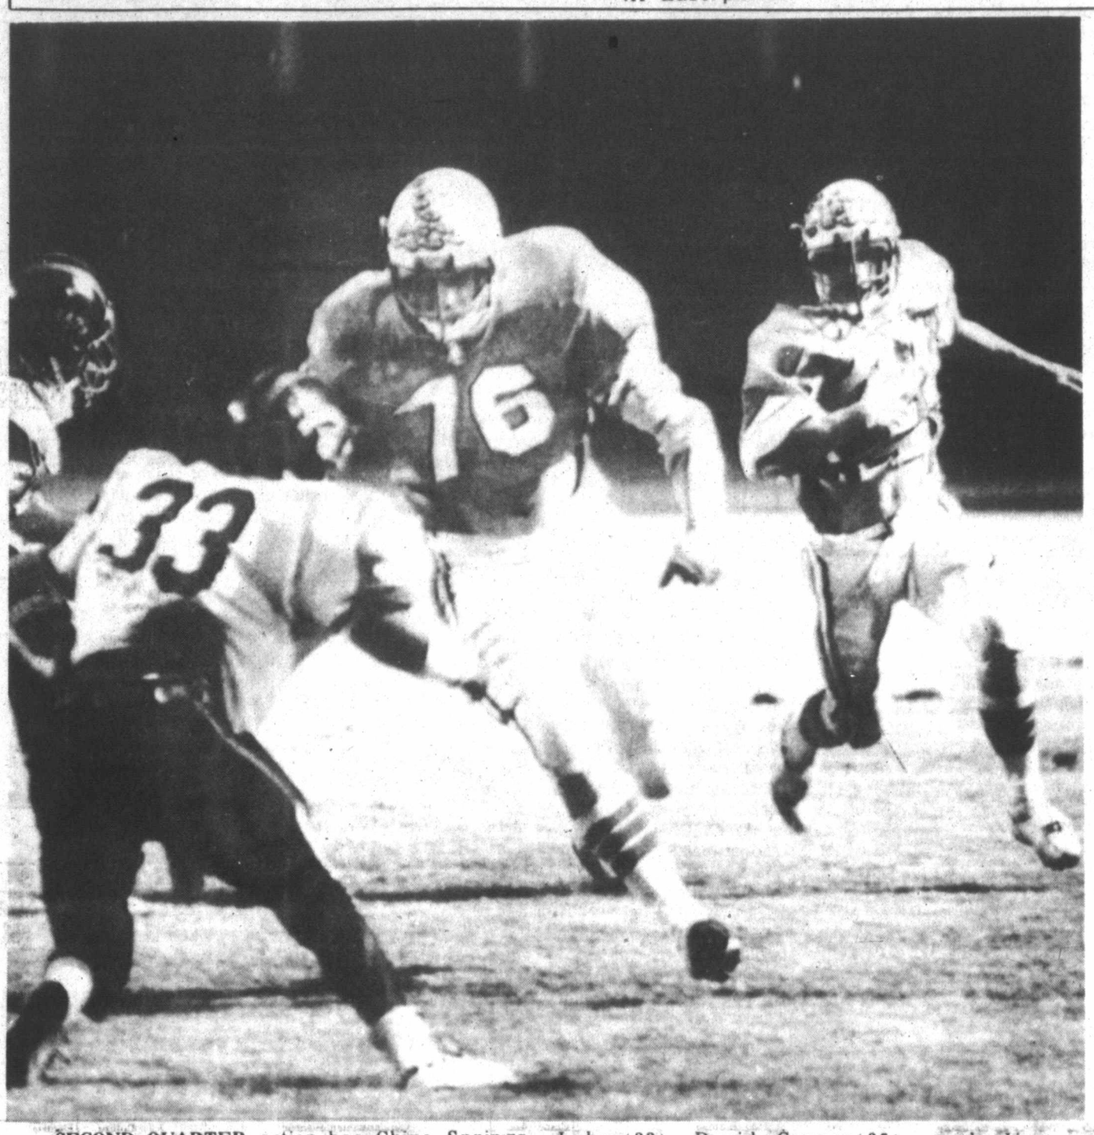

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Strong safety Greg Grimes' clutch goal line tackle and his vital fumble recovery aroused the underdog Washington Huskies to a 14-7 Sun Bowl victory Saturday over the heavily favored Texas Longhorns.

The 13th-ranked Huskies, playing their first bowl game outside the Rose Bowl, were pushed back to their own one-yard line on Texas' opening possession, but Grimes tackled Longhorn quarterback Donnie Little for a yard loss on fourth down as Washington held.

Husky noseguard Stafford Mays later recovered a Rick McIvor fumble at the Longhorn 42 and quarterback Tom Flick struck seven plays later with an 18-yard touchdown pass to Paul Skanski.

Less than four minutes later, Grimes recovered a Darryl Clark fumble at the Texas 23 and Willis Ray Mackey scored Washington's second touchdown of the second quarter on a four-yard run.

The 11th-ranked Longhorns, who were a touchdown favorite, scored just before the half when Kenneth Sims recovered a Flick fumble at the Washington 44. Little worked the Longhorns into scoring position and flipped a five-yard touchdown pass to Brad Beck.

SECOND QUARTER action has China Springs Kirk Lewis sprinting around end for a seven yard gain. Leading the way for Lewis is Roger Ludwig(76). Closing in for Hull-Daisetta are Arnell Lykes(33), David Cooper(35), and Jim Abraham(70). Hull-Daisetta won the contest, 28-18. (AP Laserphoto)

Van, H-D win state

Running back Danny Brockaway overcame a rain-drenched field to lead Van to the Class 2A schoolboy football championship Friday night while Hull-Daisetta used two touchdown passes by quarterback John Wiggins to whip defending champion China Spring for the top honor in Class A.

Van blanked offensively-stymied McGregor, 25-0, in a contest played at Mesquite, while Hull-Daisetta amazed a crowd in Bryan, by snapping China Spring's 26-game winning streak, 28-18.

Temple and Houston Memorial met Saturday at Waco's Baylor Stadium for the state championship in Class 4A.

In addition to Wiggins' scoring tosses, running back Arnell Lykes thundered 59 yards for another key Hull-Daisetta score.

China Spring had won 26 straight games, including a 42-3 verdict over Lexington for the 1978 title. The Cougars finished the 1979 campaign with a 14-1 record.

Wiggins tossed scoring passes of 48 yards to George Westbrook and 24 yards to Marcus Lavine. Wiggins also set up David Cooper's 1-yard scoring plunge with a 36-yard pass to Westbrook.

Lykes carried 10 times for 112 yards, including the 59 yard touchdown gallop.

Van's Brockaway mastered the soaked artificial turf for three touchdowns and 121 yards.

Anderson grabs rookie of the year honors

ST. LOUIS (AP) — What he accomplished in his National Football League baptism surprised not only the St. Louis Cardinals' Ottis Anderson, but his mother as well.

"He didn't feel like he would qualify so high," Emma Anderson said this week after welcoming the return of her son, The Associated Press' Offensive Rookie of the Year.

"I don't think his coaches and the athletic officials at Miami thought he'd do that well either," Mrs. Anderson mused at her West Palm Beach, Fla., home. "I didn't know. All I did was stay home and worry about his getting hurt."

As fate would have it, the 22-year-old Anderson was felled by a knee injury after galloping through 15½ spectacular pro games.

But before limping off a frozen playing field in Chicago, the 6-foot-2, 210-pound running back accomplished what he had set out to do and more. His achievements included:

—1,605 rushing yards, the most ever by an NFL newcomer, shattering the standard of 1,450 set a year ago by the Houston Oilers' Earl Campbell.

—Nine games with 100 or more yards, another league record for a rookie and one that matched a Cardinals career recod it took Jim Otis five years to set.

Otis, who retired before the start of the season, was among those who this month paid tribute to the powerful Anderson at a booster club dinner.

Only half in jest, Otis remarked, "I was just here to fill for O.J. Anderson until he got out of high school and college." Appropriately, all-pro guard Bob Young added, "I'd like to thank O.J. Anderson for making football fun again."

Indeed, it was consolation for an injury-racked roster of St. Louis players and the team's fans to watch Anderson, the Cards' top draft choice, cavort.

He debuted with a bang, shredding the vaunted defense of the Dallas Cowboys for 193 yards on 21 carries, one a 76-yard touchdown romp. Then came 109 yards against the New York Giants. And, following a three-game lull, he bounced back to compile totals of 164 yards, 140, 129, 112, 109 and 105 (twice).

Harry Gilmer the quarterbacks and receivers coach for the Cardinals, summed up Anderson's contributions succinctly.

"Without O.J., we were just an average football team," he said. "With Ottis in there, we were a threat at any time. The young man is a fine football player."

Despite talents that soon became abundantly clear, there lingered within Ottis Jerome Anderson the doubts that may have provided the impetus for his memorable year.

"You dream about these things, but I can't say I ever expected them to happen," he admitted. "A thousand yards was my target. My teammates deserve all the credit."

Anderson was tabbed by 81 of 84 writers and broadcasters participating in the rookie poll. The quarterback of the Giants, Phil Simms, received the other three votes.

Celtics rip Spurs

BOSTON (AP) — Take it from Coach Doug Moe of the San Antonio Spurs: "Right now the Boston Celtics are the best team in the league."

The Celtics gave Moe plenty of ammunition for the statement Friday night, rolling to a 133-114 victory over the Spurs and boosting their record to 27-7, best in the National Basketball Association.

Rookie sensation Larry Bird led the Celtics with 26 points, 14 rebounds, six assists, three steals and two blocked shots, but had to share honors with M.L. Carr, a veteran signed as a free agent.

Carr came off the bench in the second period and rallied Boston from a five-point deficit to a 54-47 lead by scoring 12 points and setting up a couple of key baskets.

Moe moaned about the loss of injured Larry Kenon and James Silas, saying that replacements just couldn't fill the void.

"Our offense was pitiful," he said. "We were bad. At least we hustled and played good defense, but it wasn't enough."

Asked about the Celtics, who missed the playoffs the last two years, and their new talent, Moe replied:

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Readers of the Oslo newspaper Dagbladet have voted 26-year-old long distance runner Grete Waitz the most popular person in Norwray during the last decade, Dagbladet reported Saturday.

Thousands of Norwegians participated in the poll for the most popular person during the 1970s.

Since 1971, when she was Grete Andersen, she has been Norway's top athlete. Among her achievements were two 3,000 meters world records and an Olympic 1,500 meters bronze medal.

She also won the 1978 and 1979 New York City marathons in women's world record times.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday signed catcher Joel Skinner, son of Pirate Coach Bob Skinner.

Young Skinner was a June, 1979 selection in the free agent draft. A graduate of Mission Bay High School in San Diego, he was signed by former Pirate General Manager Joe Brown.

Skinner will report to the team's rookie training camp next spring in Bradenton, Fla.

MADRID (AP) — Spain defeated Yugoslavia 25-3 in a match between the national squads of the two countries in Group B play of the European Rugby Tournament of Nations.

Spain leads the standings with four points, followed by Yugoslavia, West Germany and Holland with two each. Sweden has no points.

GELSENKIRCHEN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany blanked Turkey 2-0 in a qualifying match for the European Soccer Championship Saturday and earned a berth in the 1980 Rome finals.

Pampa routed by tall Bulldogs

ALTUS-Altus combined muscle and quickness to topple the Pampa Harvesters, 78-49, Friday night.

Altus, the pre-season choice to win Oklahoma's 5A title, evened its record at 2-2 while Pampa drops to 6-8 before entering the Borger Tournament this week. The Harvesters meet Vernon at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in first-round action.

Altus' frontline of 6-6 Mark Foster and 6-4 Kevin McGee controlled the boards on both ends while a swarming 2-1-2 zone produced several ball thefts.

Pampa trailed by only 12-8 at the end of the first quarter, but by halftime the spread was 33-17.

Ronnie Faggins was the only Harvester in double-figures with 18 points. Cedric Parker followed with 8, Steve Glover and Charles Nelson, 6 apiece; Joe Jeffers, 4; Kyle Bradford and Jim Agan, 3 apiece, and Jay Henson, 1.

Kelly Risinger led Altus is scoring with 15 points. McGee and Foster chipped in 12 and 11 respectively.

Pampa shot only 35.6 percent(15-42), but fared much better from the foul line, 17 of 21 for 80.2 percent.

The Bulldogs weren't that much more accurate from the floor(40 percent), but they put up 23 more shots than the Harvesters. Their foul shooting(8-16) left a lot to be desired.

But the tall, hefty Bulldogs made their presence felt literally on the boards where they outrebounded the Harvesters, 35-24, and defense where their quickness prevented Pampa from getting the ball inside to their big men, Faggins and Parker.

Parker and Faggins had 9 and 5 rebounds respectively for Pampa.

Irish overcome sluggish play for victory

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Forward Tracy Jackson tossed in 19 points Saturday as fourth-ranked Notre Dame withstood its own flat performance and torrid second-half shooting by Fairfield en route to a 69-59 college basketball victory.

The Irish, playing for the first time in nine days, improved its record to 7-0 heading into next Saturday's clash with No.3 Kentucky.

Notre Dame spurted to a 24-9 lead midway through the first half, but Fairfield closed to 34-24 at halftime and pulled with five at the 13-minute mark of the second half. But a three-point play by guard Rich Branning and forward Kelly Tripucka's steal and breakaway layup restored the Irish's 10-point lead at 48-38.

Indiana surprises BYU

SAN DIEGO (AP) — After going 95 years without a bowl victory, the ball finally bounced in the right direction for Indiana University.

And Brigham Young University's Brent Johnson could just kick himself for it.

Trailing 37-31 late in the fourth quarter, Indiana sophomore Tim Wilbur watched a short BYU punt bounce among his teammates.

"I shouted for everybody to get out of the way. But Craig Walls didn't hear me," explained Wilbur. "It hit off Craig's back and I was just going to fall on it. But it bounced into my hands while I was in full stride."

With only one BYU defender to beat, Wilbur raced 62 yards for the go-ahead touchdown in the Hoosiers' stunning 38-37 Holiday Bowl victory Friday over the unbeaten and ninth-ranked Cougars.

Indiana Coach Lee Corso, his heart thumping in his throat, couldn't believe his eyes.

"It bounced in his hands like God said 'Here, Wilbur, run with it,'" said Corso after his youth-laden club shocked the Western Athletic Conference champions.

However, it wasn't until Johnson missed a 27-yard field goal with seven seconds left that the Hoosiers' first-ever bowl victory became a reality.

"I have never been involved in a better football game in my life," said Corso. "I guarantee you there won't be a better bowl game in America this year."

His Hoosiers finished at 8-4, while BYU, winless in four bowl appearances, ended up 11-1. Indiana's only other bowl appearance came 12 years ago in the Rose Bowl.

Prior to the game, Corso had said: "If it goes into a shootout, we'll get killed. We might come out in a basketball stall."

But the Hoosiers, who finished fourth in the Big 10, found out early they had the firepower to stay with WAC champs.

"We just kept coming back," said Corso. Indiana came from behind three times. "We played the best we could play and got a lot of breaks. We were lucky."

Junior quarterback Tim Clifford ran for two 1-yard touchdowns and fired a 38-yard pass to tight end Bob Stephenson, leading Indiana to a 21-17 halftime lead.

"If we're a fourth-place team, they wouldn't want to play the top three," said Clifford, who completed 11 of 29 passes for 171 yards.

Marc Wilson, BYU's All-America quarterback, passed for two TDs and ran for another. He completed 28 of 43 passes for 380 yards. But two of his three interceptions were turned into Indiana touchdowns.

Lam Jones quitting school

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Johnny "Lam" Jones, the graceful sprinter and college football sensation, is leaving the University of Texas and passing up the 1980 Olympic trials, apparently to seek a pro football career.

Jones told Assistant Athletic Director Bill Ellington last month he had decided to quit school after the current semester, the Austin American-Statesman reported Friday.

"Everybody expected him to walk on water, to never lose a race," Ellington told the newspaper. "He just burned out. He's tired."

But the Lampasas native did just about everything except walk on water. He won the 100 and 220-yard dashes, took fourth in the long jump and anchored the Longhorns' winning 440-yard and mile relay teams at the Southwest Conference track meet in the spring of 1976.

The 1976 Olympic gold medalist has the 10 fastest 100-meter dashes and five of the top six 200-meter times in UT history.

Jones also holds 10 football records. He has averaged 11.3 yards every time he has touched the ball.

But despite his accomplishments, Jones remains a mystery.

"I've only had him one year in four years that he's been here, so it (his decision) doesn't surprise me that much," said Cleburne Price, UT track coach.

Jones dropped out of school last spring, but returned for his senior season with the Sun Bowl-bound Longhorns.

Price said he never felt he knew Jones: "I just couldn't put it together. I think Johnny just did not like the kind of individual pressure that the gold medal brought.

"I like Johnny, but I know him less than any athlete I've ever worked with. Johnny is one of the nicest, most sincere, most sensitive persons I've ever met or the biggest con artist, but I don't know which and I'm not sure I'll ever know," Price said.

"I don't think Johnny Jones knows Johnny Jones."

The coach called it a "sin" that Jones' fluid stride will never again be seen in a Longhorn track uniform.

"Our Olympic coach, Jimmy Carnes, thought he could be the best quarter-miler in the world. I still think Johnny could be the best sprinter in the world," the coach said.

"He's burned a lot of bridges, but maybe they aren't important bridges," Price said.

"Earl Campbell loves Texas, and it was good to him. Johnny Jones is great, and so is UT. It was a good marriage, but I don't think he held up his end."

Royal accepts new job

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Darrell Royal is resigning as athletic director at the University of Texas to accept a new position as special assistant to the school's president, the Austin American-Statesman said Saturday.

Royal, football coach at texas for 20 years and athletic director the past 17, will become special assistant for athletic programs, University of Texas President Peter Flawn confirmed.

The new position was created at Royal's recommendation, Flawn said. Royal will be involved in reviewing and planning for the full range of athletic and recreational programs and will help in the development of private support.

Assistant Athletic Director Bill Ellington will serve temporarily as athletic director until the athletic council makes a recommendation to replace Royal, Flawn said.

Concerning a successor to Royal, the UT president said he thinks it inadvisable to combine the position of coach of any sport and athletic director. This would apparently rule out the chances of head football coach Fred Akers or basketball coach Abe Lemons getting the dual job.

North Carolina upsets Indiana

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Freshman James Worthy scored 18 points and Mike O'Koren and Al Wood added 16 apiece Saturday as eighth-ranked North Carolina upset injury-plagued Indiana 61-57 in a nationally televised college basketball game.

The Hoosiers led early in the game.

HOUSTON ROCKETS guard Allen Leavell (30) appears to be a visitor from another world, but really the picture was taken at the split second he passed the ball in Friday night's game played in Philadelphia. Leavell is a rookie from Oklahoma City University. Philadelphia won, 117-106.

Rockets fizzle against 76ers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers blasted off Friday night, getting a 39-point boost from Julius Erving.

The Rockets from Houston? Well, they sort of fizzled out, despite a 37 point performance from Calvin Murphy.

"We created turnovers and we built up our momentum," said 76er coach Billy Cunningham after his team's 117-106 National Basketball Association victory over the Rockets.

"Our guards (Henry Bibby and Jim Spanarkel) did a great job," Cunningham added. "Our bench helped us out and Julius had a big game."

Houston coach Del Harris said Erving was just too hot to handle.

"I'm going to have to call out the National Guard on him in Texas to hold him down a bit," joked Harris. "He's been hurting us."

The lead changed hands 16 times before the 76ers went ahead for good at 91-90 in the fourth quarter as Bibby scored one of two free throws. Erving, Bibby and Steve Mix then widened the margin to 11 points by the end of the game.

The Rockets took their first lead of the night when Tom Henderson dropped in two free throws to put the team ahead 33-31. The half ended with the 76ers ahead 52-48, despite Houston's shooting 61.1 percent from the field.

Erving spearheaded the Philadelphia attack in the third period, scoring 14 points on six fields goals and two foul shots. But the 76ers trailed the Rockets 81-78 at the end of the period.

The Rockets retained their slim lead in the fourth quarter until Bibby made his foul goal at the 7:25 mark. Darryl Dawkins, who scored 10 points for Philadelphia, fouled out with 7:45 left in the game.

Murphy, whose 37 points surpassed his previous season high of 32, agreed with Cunningham that the 76ers made the most of turnovers.

"They capitalized on turnovers," he recalled. "I was more offensive minded tonight. I didn't want to have two bad shooting nights in a row. The guys were trying to hard to get the ball to me and I didn't want to let them down."

Moses Malone and Rick Barry each scored 18 points for the Rockets.

"They got their transition plays going, and Doctor J. (Erving) is one of the toughest men in the league to stop on the fast break," said Barry. "He's shooting the ball better than he ever has. He's been shooting the outside shot against us and beating us."

Earl goes against top defense

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler all-pro offensive tackle Leon Gray and his offensive line teammates have a simple assignment Sunday–keep Dan Pastorini's jersey clean, open holes for Earl Campbell and earn themselves another 20 pounds of beef.

The Oilers host the Denver Broncos in the Astrodome Sunday in a first round National Football League playoff game that will pit Campbell, the NFL rushing champion, against Denver's defense, ranked first in the NFL in defense against the rush.

"We won't shy away from them because they are so good against the run," Gray said. "We'll try to establish our running game like we always do. They've got a great secondary so we'll have to get them in some one on one situations.

"It's nothing new. The pressure is on us to do the job."

A local meat distributor has presented 20 pounds of beef to each Oiler lineman this season every time Campbell gained 100 or more yards in a game.

So far the tally has amounted to 220 pounds for each lineman since Campbell tied an NFL record with 11 100 yard games during the regular season.

"Yeah, our freezers are getting pretty full but we'll make room for more," Gray said.

Houston would meet American Football Conference Western Division champion San Diego Dec. 29 if it defeats Denver while the Broncos would play Pittsburgh, the Central Division champion, if they beat the Oilers.

Denver led the NFL in defense against the rush during the regular season, allowing only 105.8 yards per game on the ground and only two individual 100 yard performances.

They'll be tested Sunday by Campbell, who averaged 106 yards through 16 regular season games and had 11 100 yard games.

The Oilers are at their healthiest point of the season while Denver has several key players hobbled, including quarterback Craig Morton, who will play despite a pulled stomach muscle.

Kickoff is at 3 p.m. CST.

SPORTS SOUVENIRS

HOUSTON (AP) — The high-rollers in Houston are willing to pay and pay for sports souvenirs. At a charity affair this fall, one of Earl Campbell's game jerseys was auctioned off for $6,100.

The great running back of the Houston Oilers was so impressed that he offered to throw in his boots as a bonus. The winning bidder for the jersey insisted the boots be auctioned separately.

Penn State sneaks past Tulane

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Herb Menhardt kicked a 20-yard field goal, his third of the game, with 18 seconds left Saturday, giving Penn State a 9-6 college football victory over 15th-ranked Tulane in the rain-soaked Liberty Bowl.

Menhardt's game-winning kick tied the Liberty Bowl record set by Bucky Berrey of Alabama in 1976 and offset a pair of 26-yard yarders in the final period by Tulane's Ed Murray. His second three-pointer had tied the score with 2:40 remaining.

Menhardt started the battle of field goals by connecting from 33 and 27 yards in the second period. The junior placekicker, who hit on 14 of 20 during the regular season, ran his string to a school record 10 in a row before missing a 50-yard attempt into a brisk wind on the final play of the first half.

Menhardt's game-winner came after Penn State drove from its 20-yard line to the Tulane 3 in nine plays including a third-down 39-yard option pass from fourth-string tailback Joel Coles to Tom Donovan.

Tose's dream comes true

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sunday is the day Leonard Tose has dreamed about ever since he paid more than $16 million in 1969 for the Philadelphia Eagles.

After years of frustration in which he almost lost the club because of financial problems, the Eagles are in a playoff game before the home fans.

OO course, that's not the end of the Tose dream. The culmination is the Super Bowl.

"I have to say it's been worth it all," said Tose as he awaited his team's confrontation Sunday with the Chicago Bears in the first round of the National Football League playoffs.

Through the first seven years of Tose ownership, marked by wrangling with banks and partners, the Eagles won 31 and lost 62.

Tose suffered through the years, rebuffing offers to buy the team, but he was determined to be a winner in the NFL.

"They'll have to carry me out," he replied to dozens of reports that the Eagles would be sold.

Duke wins in overtime against Boston College

By MARV SCHNEIDER
AP sports writer

Worry comes with the job for college basketball coaches, and the coach of top-ranked Duke, Bill Foster, says he was plenty worried Friday night with his Blue Devils trailing unranked Boston College.

Duke went into overtime to pull out a 70-64 victory in a tournament in Providence, R.I, one of a rash of two-day holiday events that filled the schedule.

What had Foster concerned was that starting forwards Gene Banks and Kenny Dennard had three fouls early in the first half and had to be brought to the bench. Both eventually fouled out, and so did Bob Bender.

"I've never been in a game where we had so many players in foul trouble so early," said Foster.

It could have been worse. Mike Gminski still was around for the overtime and he did the job, scoring four field goals and two free throws in the extra five minutes.

Duke trailed for much of the second half, sometimes by as many as five points, before freshman Chip Engelland popped in a 15-foot jump shot with two seconds left to send the game into overtime.

"I'm just glad to get out of here with the victory," said Foster.

Gminski said he felt the same way, noting: "Everyone wants to see the No.1 team beaten."

Seven other members of the top 20 played last night, and all but 12th-ranked Virginia were winners. The Cavaliers were upset by San Jose State 83-79 in the opening round of the Cable Car Classic in Santa Clara, Calif.

Third-ranked Kentucky beat California 78-52 in the Kentucky Invitational and will play Purdue, No.9, tonight for the title after the Boilermakers trounced Southern Methodist 85-60. Sixth-ranked DePaul turned back Northwestern 81-75 in the Chicagoland Classic; Iowa, No.13, beat Missisippi State 81-62 in the Dayton Invitational; 14th-ranked UCLA walloped UC Santa Barbara 102-58.

Today.... a look at yesterday...

In the mid - 1920s, I. B. Hughey and his wife, Catherine, build a large house on the corner of West and Browning streets in Pampa.

For years, it was often the center of social activities and parties. Mrs. Hughey was reknowned for her flair as a hostess. The gourmet meals she concocted, people say, were hard to equal. Her grandson Don Hines said she loved to entertain.

The Hugheys started as owners of some land, southwest of Pampa, close to where Cabot Corporation is now located.

In 1925 or 1926, — Hines isn't quite sure — oil was discovered on the land. Shortly after the discovery, the 18 - room Hughey home was built.

During the depression years, the Hugheys also had to struggle. Part of the home was rented during this time, to help take the financial strain from family and also to help provide someone else with a place to live. The parties and entertainment was less frequent during that time.

Hughey and his wife had one daughter, Fern, who inherited her mother's culinary abilities and love of parties. In the late thirties, when the United States began to emerge from the depression, the house again rang with laughter — this time of a younger generation.

At the end of this time, Fern married Johnny Hines also of Pampa, in her parents' home.

Many of Pampa's "old - timers" would frequent the Hughey home, Hines said. Some of these people were civil war veterans who had relocated to the Panhandle after their southern homes were destroyed during the war.

This was true of Hughey's father — Hines' great - grandfather, who came from the Ruby Hall plantation in Georgia. He was a confederate officer and was the second person buried in Fairview Cemetary.

As the years passed and the Hugheys grew older, there were still parties in the old home. This time for their grandson Don, the only child of Fern and Johnny.

According to a friend of the family, Mrs. Hughey would love to stay up late at night baking for Don and his friends as they played poker or pool in the basement play room.

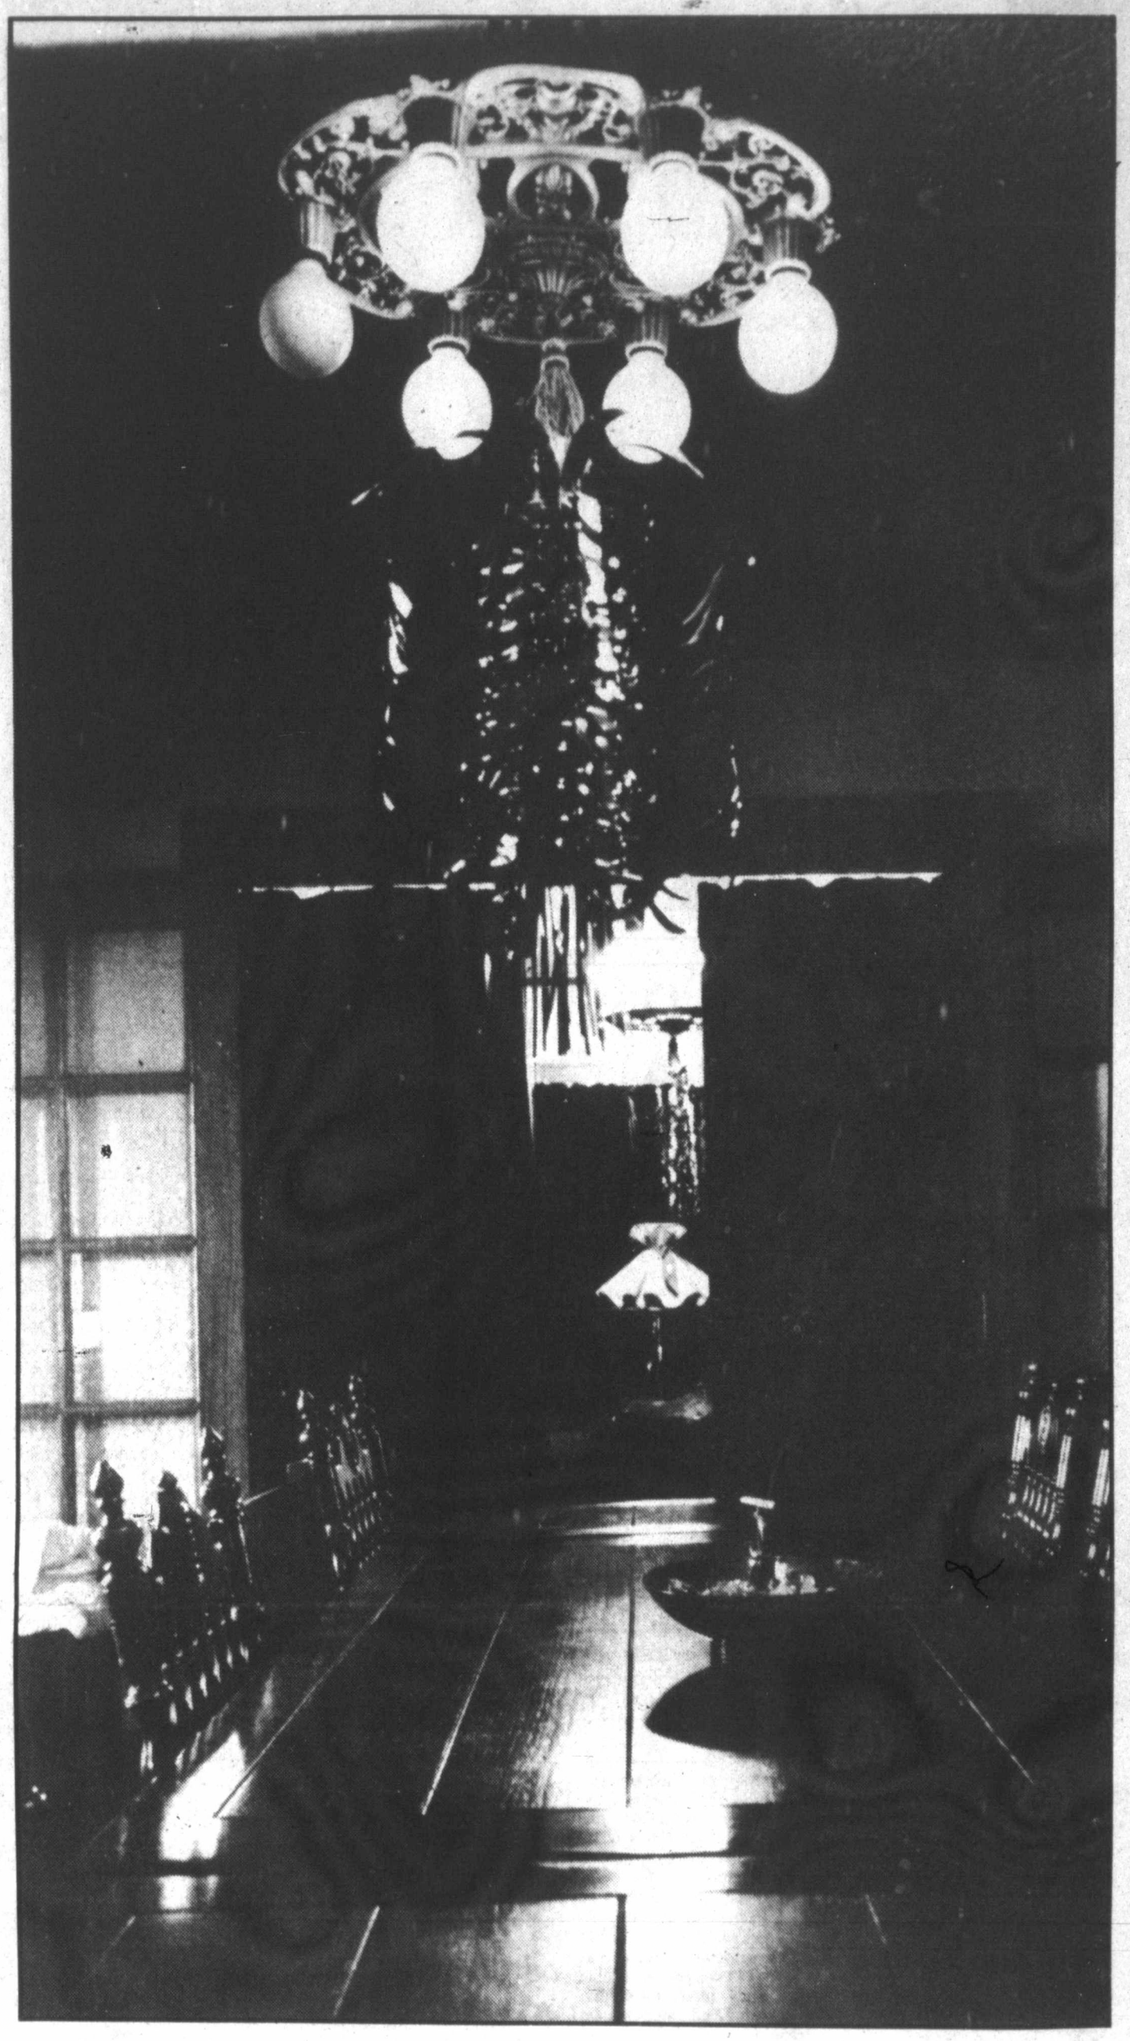

Finally, Hughey passed away in December of 1957 at age 82. His wife followed him ten years later when she was 78.

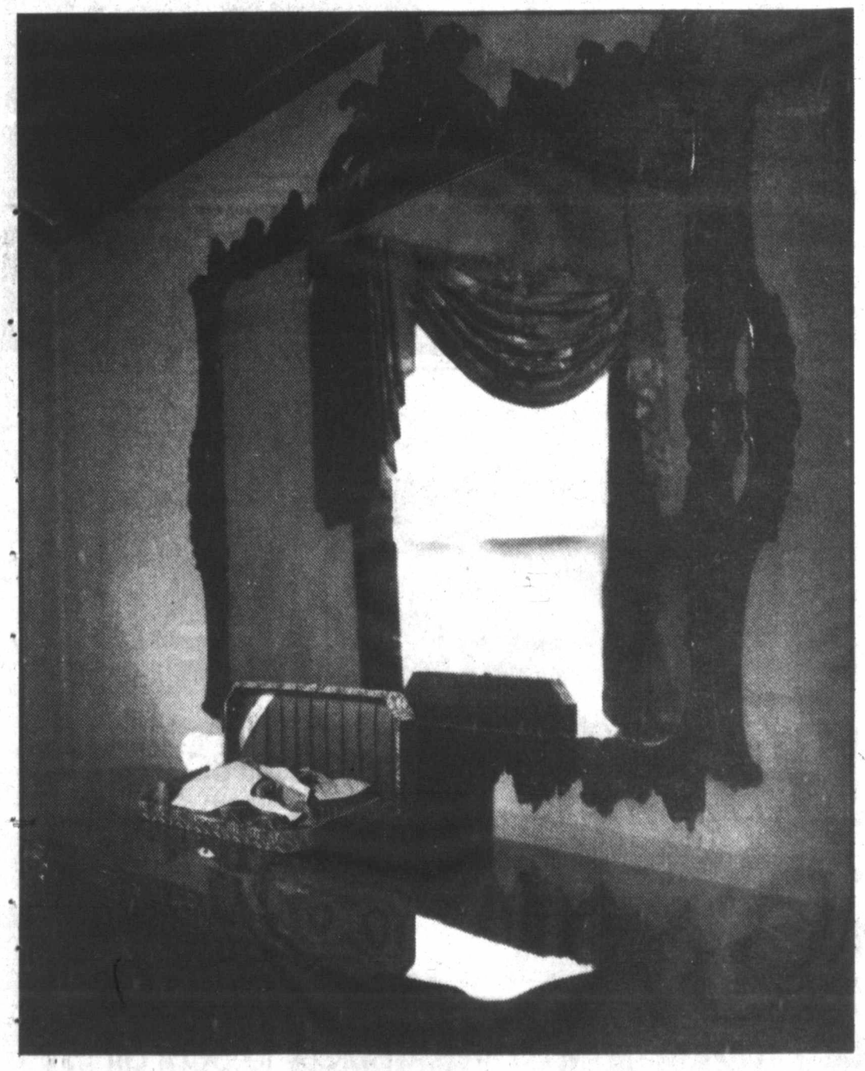

The old home is still there on the corner, most of its furnishings — in excellent condition — are intact. The burgandy plush carpet originally placed in the home still graces the living room, study and dining room.

The drapery picked out by Mrs. Hughey still hangs over the windows. Much of it is burgandy velvet with gold braid. The study has heavy brocade drapes of golds and greens.

The heavy furniture, some of it antique, is in most rooms. Especially imposing, is the long dining room table and buffet. Old mirrors are on all the walls. Chandeliers with antique light bulbs are in many of the first floor rooms.

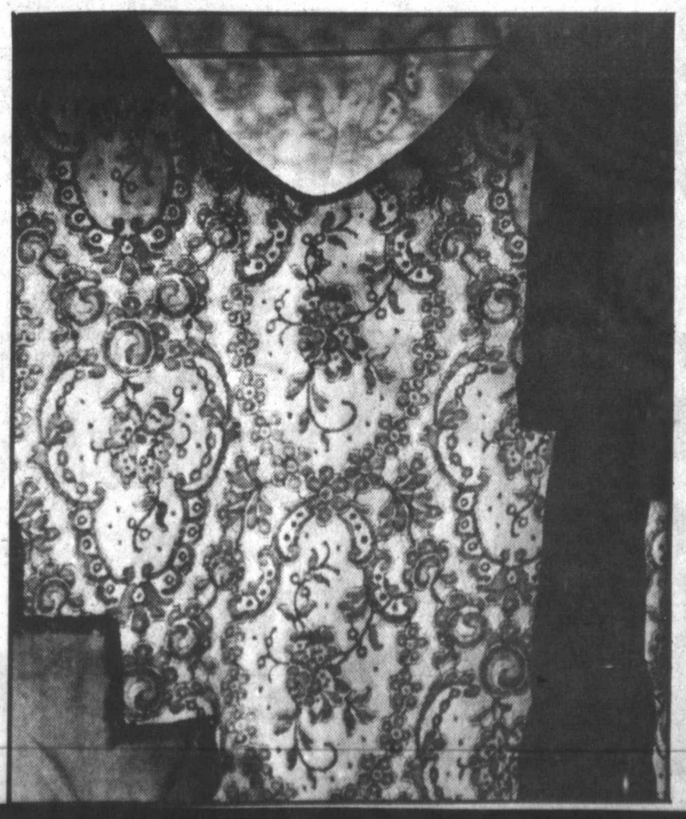

Upstairs, the closets are full of the clothes Mrs. Hughey loved. Furs of fox and mink, hats of all colors are still in their boxes hardly touched over the years. Party dresses of crepe de chine, satin and velvet hang as if she might chose them at any moment. Delicate slippers are in their places waiting to dance again.

Ideas for keeping kids amused, and happy, too

The winter season is filled with many days of harsh weather, keeping children indoors and constantly searching for something to do.

This can prove frustrating for parents. But, with a little ingenuity and resourcefulness, they can find ways to amuse even the most restless little one.

Colored paper, pencils and crayons will keep kids amused while serving as outlets for creative instincts.

To add a challenge, give each child an "assignment" (however, don't use that word) based on their level of ability.

For example, a three year old might be asked to draw five different animals and have someone guess what they are.

Children can amuse themselves in this manner; all the parent has to do is think of a few simple ideas, leaving time to continue with the daily routine.

When the enthusiasm of drawing wears thin, children can be kept busy with minor household tasks.

If the jobs are presented as fun and important, youngsters will enjoy being helpers. Even dusting and sweeping can be fun if everyone pitches in.

Such activities will keep children so occupied that they won't even notice when the sun comes out.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

Passing conversations always catch my attention. And at the end of November I heard one woman say to another, "Oh, it was an all-right Thanksgiving, I guess. But nobody sang."

In our childhood days, I think most of us sang with brothers, sisters, parents, grandparents, anybody and everybody who was handy. If somebody played the piano or strummed a guitar or puffed on a "breathe harp", fine. But unaccompanied warbling was just as much enjoyed.

There is something about singing together that draws people closer to each other. Don't you remember the grade school or youth choir where you met a dear chum or perhaps a special boy or girl friend with whom you fancied yourself in love? Can't you recall how dull a party was until the hostess struck up the first notes of "Harvest Moon"?

Have you ever wondered why speakers are usually preceded by a solo or group singing — or why a sermon always follows an anthem? It's because the music forms a bond among members of the audience that nothing else can do. They settle down, ready for what comes next. Literally, a crowd that sings together, swings together.

Otis and I have always sung with each other. I'm no concert pianist and he's no Caruso. But when his younger brother lived with us, before World War II, the three of us made merry melodies every night after supper. It didn't bother me when they made up their own words, and they ignored my blue notes as we sang. "Remember Pearl Harbor" and "The White Cliffs of Dover". It gave us a togetherness we could never have achieved otherwise. I sent Marvin, and later Otis, off to war, resolved to "praise the Lord and pass the ammunition", partly because our singing had made us believe in God and country more genuinely.

I believe if the older couples of our land got back to some home singing, they'd enjoy life more and be better friends to their mates. Young families seem too busy, since both husband and wife often work in industry, to sing their breakfast blessing and thus start their day in harmony of mind and heart. But perhaps we older pairs can offer a temporary inspiration when grandchildren or neighbor tots join us for a meal.

Holidays ought to be singing times, for our family get-togethers, for our church and civic gatherings, even for the two of us who share a mature marriage. Otis and I offer vocal accompaniment to the car radio as we ride about the country, and we assist the TV musicales at home. We often sing as we dance — and the orchestra leaders, although surprised, are usually pleased.

Nothing cheers the spirits and clears the air like a shared song.

DEAR LOUISE: My husband and I aren't well enough to get out much any more, but a lot of our friends and relatives come to see us real often. Before we sold our piano when we moved to an apartment, I used to play for our guests and we would all sing. But we haven't done that in five or six years. We don't play bridge and sometimes visiting gets kind of dull. Weather and news play out, once you have talked them to death. I'm afraid people will get bored and quit dropping in or that we'll get sick of just sitting and looking at each other. If we did that, there wouldn't be much reason for us to live. Can you help? B.K.

DEAR B.K.: I sincerely hope so. If you can start singing again, I believe you'll snap right back to a special enjoyment of life.

If you want music to follow, turn on the TV or the radio for the tune. But you don't need a piano or even a pitch pipe to burst into song. The two of you can spend part of each evening on the love songs of your youth and your favorite church hymns. Just start singing and keep it up. Ask callers to join you in a sing-along.

And don't be surprised if visitors come back to sing with you again.

It's snowball time in Montreal

In Montreal, when temperatures drop, activity soars, making this lively metropolis a fine destination for a mid-week or weekend break during the winter months.

Especially attractive are the city's several Snow Ball package tours which put the price of a two nights/three days visit as low as $43 per person, double occupancy, including special sightseeing and entertainment features.

If you are a winter sports buff you will find plenty of action right within the city limits on cross country trails, toboggan runs, skating rinks and snowshoeing areas in a number of city parks.

Or, you can spend your days on downhill slopes in the nearby Laurentians and Eastern Townships, returning to Montreal for the bright nightlife.

If you're inclined to indulge yourself with indoor activity, Montreal is the place for that as well. It offers the tops in hotel accommodations, restaurants and smart shops.

Entertainment options range from symphony concerts at the Place des Arts, the city's stunning performing arts center, to Canadiens hockey games at The Forum, to a whirl through Montreal's fast-paced discodom.

The city's easy-riding, immaculately clean Metro links an extensive network of underground walkways and shopping arcades and gives easy access to all of the hotels featured in Montreal's two and three-night winter package plans.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

Teens: I always enjoy introducing our poets who are Tween 12 and 20. So it's my pleasure to introduce Sharon Schwab, 15, from Goshen, Ind., Karin Carlsen, 17, who lives in Downey, Calif., and Darlene Gray, 20, who comes from the Alamo city, San Antonio, Texas. Welcome.

THOUGHTS
Way in the midst of all my thoughts
I have a little voice that whispers your name to every thought that enters and leaves my brain.
Although it's a pity for this little voice as it often gets so confused and it tries so hard to convince my brain that it's only wasting thoughts.
But this little voice doesn't realize it's no longer owned by my brain, but has been taken over for quite some time by the master of all, "My Heart."
Darlene Gray

MY FRIEND — THE WOODS
Run, roam the hills
They call you
They speak when you're alone.
The wind is her voice
The streams are her tears
The flowers, her heart
The woods are there.
Be content for they are your friends.
Sharon Schwab

RETURNING AWE
I've gone away, I've traveled far
To shorelines and mountains and Flatlands the likes of which I have Dreamt about. To escape a prison, a
Routine job. To enjoy my life as if I Never could. My life I spent earning
Those few weeks, those precious few weeks
Only to awaken to a dawn with a Returning awe. My house, my home, its Peaceful being. My pet, my friend, with a Warm cuddly greeting. My work, my job, it Keeps me going. A living, a life with a need, a wanting.

Foreign foster child

He's more than just a name

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

An area couple recently added a new member to the family — a husky six-year-old Guatemalan boy named Jose Artemio Garcia De Leon.

After deciding to participate in a foster parent program, the two from Fritch applied to a nationally - known agency for a child to help.

A representative of the organization explained to them of the amount of money per month they would be sending to the child and his family, and how it would be used to improve their lives.

The couple were told that progress reports would be sent each year along with special reports from the social worker.

They would be allowed to write the child often, the spokesperson said, and could even visit the child if they wanted.

A case history was sent to them from a social worker in Guatemala about a boy — soon to be seven — with gold hair and brown eyes. A Landino Indian, Jose is probably of Mayan ancestry.

A picture enclosed with the history shows him to have the wide, straight nose and high cheekbones characteristic of the Mayans.

The social worker said the youngster likes to play soccer and marbles, and added that he was interested in art and singing.

He was described as helpful, running errands and carrying water for his parents.

Born Jan. 30, 1973, he has lived all his life on his father's land near Sensirisay Los Llanos Sanarate El Progreso, a Guatemalan town smaller than its name.

The adobe and wood hut he now lives in was rebuilt in 1976 after the great earthquake in February of that year.

Eight members of the De Leon family live in their two-bedroom home — the mother and father, two brothers, a sister, one nephew and a grandfather.

The chief source of the family's $1,500 yearly income is agriculture: corn, beans, tomatoes, onions and chilis.

Jose's father, Mario, is president of the town's irrigation committee and is trying to improve the agricultural outlook by the use of crop rotation, fertilization, weed killers and a fallow land program.

Mrs. De Leon enjoys embroidery, the social worker writes. She plays with her children, "chats" with her husband and neighbors, and listens to the radio, their only luxury.

All of these facts about the De Leons are interesting, but the real clue to the character and the phrase that brought Jose to life for the Texas couple was one sentence. "He likes chasing animals."

The foster parents say they can picture the boy running after goats around his family's small farm, yelling at the top of his lungs.

Jose is no longer words on a piece of paper, but a mischievous child who is now a personal part of their lives.

Maximize spending power

By Elaine Houston
County Extension Agent

CUT CREDIT CARD COSTS, MAXIMIZE SPENDING POWER:

Cut credit card costs and maximize spending power by managing credit card use in three specific ways. Efficient credit card use depends on payment methods, date of purchases and number of cards used.

When possible, always pay the full amount due rather than the minimum — this will mean no finance charges added to the bill. Also, extend credit by waiting to pay a bill until just before the due date — but be sure to allow enough time for the post office to deliver the payment and for the company to process it. Generally, consumers have 20 to 30 days after the closing date to pay a bill.

Plan purchases according to the closing date on an account. Make purchases just after the closing date to extend the time between purchases and payment. Also, if it will be a "must" to pay a finance charge computed under the average-daily-balance method, try to plan purchases to lessen the number of days any purchase is on account.

Lumping purchases onto one card can save money on postage and make record-keeping easier. Also, if a card holder has a higher credit limit on one account — for example, $800 — it is more economical to charge all purchases on that account. Since most credit cards have a breakpoint of $500 at which interest becomes lower, any amount over the $500 would be charged a lower rate of interest than if a total $800 worth of purchases were spread among several cards.

KEEP HOLIDAY MEALS SAFE TO EAT:

Holiday foods can carry food poisoning bacteria — but simple precautions can prevent food poisoning and ruined holidays.

Bacteria need the right combination of time, temperature and moisture to grow. When foods remain between 40 and 120 degrees F. for three or four hours, bacteria grow and make food unsafe to eat. And the only way to kill the bacteria is to heat food to 170 degrees F. Freezing doesn't kill bacteria; it simply slows growth.

Thaw the holiday turkey in the refrigerator. Fresh or freshly-thawed turkey should be refrigerated and used within 24 hours. When preparing the turkey, cook it until done throughout — with an internal temperature of 180 degrees F. And if it is to be stuffed, wait until just before placing the bird in the oven to stuff the cavity.

Good sanitation during food preparation is important to prevent contamination. Make sure hands, utensils and cutting boards are clean when handling turkey and other holiday foods. Also, keep hands away from mouth, nose, hair or skin infections such as boils, open cuts and sores while working with food.

After the meal is over, don't leave the turkey at room temperature long. Staph germs multiply rapidly between 45 and 115 degrees F.

If turkey is part of the holiday buffet, use several serving trays instead of only one to keep the meat from remaining at room temperature too long. Bring out a fresh tray frequently to replace that partly used. The turkey stays at the right temperature — and bacteria don't have a chance to grow.

Eggnog, traditional during the holidays, makes an ideal breeding place for bacteria unless it is kept well chilled and the supply replaced often.

Foodborne illness can cause diarrhea, vomiting, stomach cramps, and other unpleasant symptoms which can last for several hours or days. Young children and elderly people are most susceptible.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

The importance of digitalis

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read in your column about the person who is having irregularities of the heart. You mentioned that digitalis is often used to control such irregularities. You also said that there were newer medicines that are used in many cases now and appeared to be more effective in some cases.

I'm allergic to certain foods and I get congestion of the bronchial tree and irregularity of the heart. I've had trouble with digitalis and my doctor just changed me from Digoxin to Digitoxin. I seem to be allergic to them. The doctor said I have heart failure and was anemic. I was wondering if the newer medicines you mentioned could be used instead of the one I now take.

DEAR READER — That's a good thought but digitalis and the digitalis-type medicines are used for more than one thing. They're sometimes used to help control certain forms of irregularity of the heart. They're also used to strengthen the force of the contraction of the heart muscle.

This latter use is to help people who have heart failure, meaning when the heart fails to beat strong enough and allows the body to begin to accumulate fluids. The fluid can accumulate in the lungs causing shortness of breath or if the right side of the heart is involved, the fluid can accumulate in the legs, liver and abdomen.

The new medicines I referred to were those that could be used to control irregularities of the heart in certain cases. None of these medicines are useful in helping to strengthen the contraction of the heart muscle and protect a person against heart failure. These are two different problems.

You can have irregularities of the heart that are caused by heart disease — including the same diseases that cause heart failure with accumulation of fluid. The medicines for heart irregularities can often be used in both patients who have heart disease and those who do not, but heart failure is usually treated with digitalis.

I'm certain your doctor will want to continue some form of digitalis if you really do have heart failure if it's at all possible to do so. Certainly you should not discontinue taking your Digitoxin or whatever digitalis-type medicine your doctor has given you without his complete concurrence and his supervision.

In general, it's a very poor idea for a patient with any form of important medical problem to quit taking his medicines without discussing it with his doctor. In the extreme form the patient with heart failure may develop congestive heart failure and have a medical emergency.

DEAR ABBY

Ugly duckling

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I need an objective view of a complicated problem. My husband and I recently had our second child—a healthy baby boy. We wanted a little girl because we already had a boy, so, of course, we were very disappointed.

Now I want to try for a girl, but my husband is opposed to the idea. He says two children are enough for the time being, but maybe later on, if we still want a third, he'd consider it.

Well, I'm 30 and have an infertility problem which gets worse as time goes on, so I think if we're going to try for a girl we'd better do it now.

Also figuring in our decision is the fact that my husband and I are both extremely tall and quite plain-looking—even homely—and if we were to have a daughter and she inherited our worst physical features it would break my heart. ERA and women's lib not withstanding, a woman makes it or breaks it on her looks, Abby.

Please help me make the right decision. My heart says to have one more child, but my head says forget it.

C. IN BUFFALO

DEAR C.: Listen to your head. If you'd be heartbroken with a tall, plain-looking (even homely) daughter, you'd be wise to settle for two sons.

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed BEEN THROUGH A LOT from a 15-year-old girl who thought she had VD has prompted this letter. She said she suffered in silence for weeks, then finally decided to tell her mother, even though her friends said she was "crazy" to tell her Mom. She wrote to say that telling her mother was the wisest decision she ever made.

My story is a little different. I'm an 18-year-old girl who was into drugs and sex. Last June I discovered I was pregnant. I was scared and confused, but I told my parents. Not only did I tell them about being pregnant, I told them about the drugs, lies, drinking, etc. They were hurt and upset, but their main concern was my welfare. I decided to have an abortion. It was MY decision.

My Mom and I went away for a little while afterwards to help me forget. While I was away I met and fell in love with a wonderful young man. I was honest with him, and he was understanding, loving and forgiving. I also prayed to God for strength and forgiveness. Now I can sleep nights.

Thank you Mom, Dad, my fiance, and God. And thank you, Abby, for listening.

ALSO LEARNED

DEAR LEARNED: And thank you for assuring young people that in time of trouble their parents are their best friends.

DEAR ABBY: We, the participants of the Long Beach Senior Day Center, feel as you do that flowers should be given to the living. We think this poem expresses our feelings well:

"I would rather have a little rose from the garden of a friend,
Than flowers strewn around my casket when my days on earth must end.
I would rather have a living smile from one I know is true,
Than tears shed 'round my casket when this world I bid adieu.
Bring me all the flowers today whether pink or white or red,
I would rather have one blossom now than a truckload when I am dead."

Business women raise funds

The Pampa chapter of the American Business Women's Association raised almost $300 for its scholarship fund. A drawing Wednesday determined prize winners from ticket sales.

Winners and their prizes were Theresa Bruce, afghan; Johnnie Preston, baby quilt; Jean McGill, shawl; Jeannie Henderson of Monahans, wall hanging; and Homer McNeil, musical snowman.

The chapter will present a scholarship in the spring to a Pampa High School student planning to further his or her education.

President Louise Hill extends her thanks to all who participated in the fund-raising drive.

Hair color inherited

According to the scientists at Helene Curtis, hair color is inherited, as are certain color characteristics. Redheads generally have the fewest number of hair strands, about 90,000 per head; black and brown hair can contain 105,000 to 110,000 strands, while blondes may have up to 140,000 hairs per head. Each blonde hair tends to be finer, however, while black hair has a larger diameter. So, a head full of black hair often looks thicker than a blonde mane.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

December 24, 1979

This coming year offers many new challenges that will prove extremely rewarding if you take advantage of them. Be receptive and flexible to all new concepts presented to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You could be nursing a resentment that is unfounded and try to do something about it today without having the facts. You'll only cause yourself more unhappiness. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Financial matters should be taken seriously today, especially if friends are involved. Live up to your obligation and don't blame anyone else for your troubles.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You might have to muster extra patience and tolerance for your associates today. Their way of doing things and yours could be in conflict.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You have a tendency to blindfold yourself today and pretend that jobs that need doing don't exist. An uncomfortable situation will result.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try not to say anything unflattering about anyone today. The people to whom you voice your opinions may not agree with you. A nasty situation could result.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It may not be anything you can put your finger on, but frustrating little innuendoes could fuel dissension between you and your mate today. Keep cool.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Unless you really know what you're talking about, you'd better let someone else give the directives. Your judgment isn't too keen today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Financial losses are likely today because you could obligate yourself to something not feasible. Sleep on things before making promises.

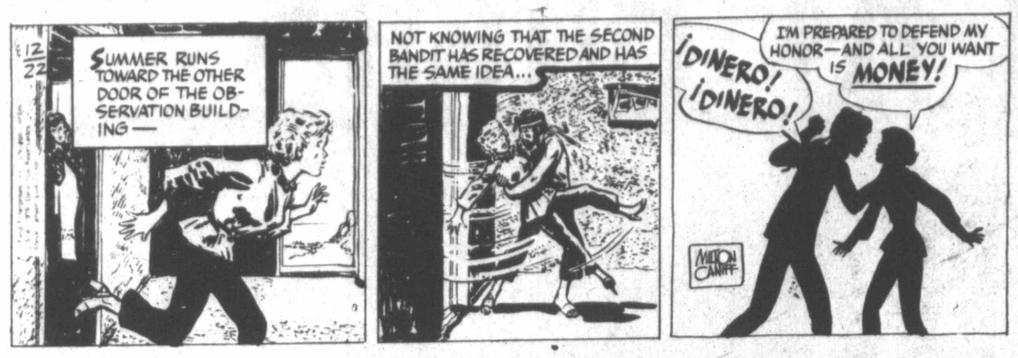

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) People are especially difficult to deal with today, but you're not totally blameless. You think you have all the facts. In reality, you may not.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are a reluctant worker today and you could make tasks you have to perform far more difficult than they really are.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't let a financial issue be the cause of a rift between you and a pal today. The value of friendship is far greater than anything material.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Everything might not come off at home as you hope it will today, so you'll have to take care not to let this be the cause of friction with the family.

Pope paints gloomy picture

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, in a clear statement on the U.S.-Iranian crisis, today condemned the holding of hostages as a violation of "the unquestionable international law."

The pontiff also criticized the world oil cartel, saying its latest round of price increases is "exhorbitant."

"This act (of holding hostages) is causing immense suffering to the persons concerned and their families," the pope said in his strongest comment yet on the events in Iran, where militants are holding 50 Americans hostage.

The pontiff, whose personal pleas for rélease of the hostages have been ignored by Iran's devout Moslem leaders, made the statement in a Christmas address to Roman Catholic cardinals at the Vatican.

Without naming any countries or organizations but obviously referring to reports of new oil price increases, John Paul said any "sudden changes in international commercial relations" are likely to bring "severe discomfort in the family and social life."

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries adjourned a price-fixing meeting in Caracas, Venezuela.

Rhodesians at peace?

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — After seven bloody years of guerrilla war, Rhodesia takes its first cautious step toward peace today with the implementation of the first phase of an historic cease-fire agreement.

The pact, signed Friday in London by Rhodesia's black leaders, calls for an end to the fighting that has claimed some 20,000 lives, followed by universal suffrage elections in late February. The final step comes when Britain grants independence to its last African colony, leaving the new nation of Zimbabwe to stand alone under black majority rule.

Phase-One, a ban on all cross-border military movements, was scheduled to take effect at midnight Friday Greenwich Mean Time — 7 p.m. EST. It would bar black guerrillas of the Patriotic Front alliance from crossing into Rhodesia from their bases in neighboring Mozambique and Zambia and prohibit the white-led Rhodesian army from raiding guerrilla bases across the frontier.

There was no immediate word from Salisbury, the Rhodesian capital, on whether the cross-border ban was working.

The next step in the agreement comes on December 28 when all hostilities are scheduled to end. The warring factions are to disengage and move to defined rendezvous points and then into assembly areas, at which time the two-month electoral campaign formally begins.

A Commonwealth force of 1,200 troops from Britain, Australia, Kenya and Fiji is to monitor the truce and the elections. Once a black government is established, British Governor Lord Soames is empowered to declare Rhodesia independent.

Many people remain doubtful the British-sponsored settlement will run smoothly.

In an editorial today, the London Daily Express wrote: "Lord Soames is dealing with people who have been at each other's throats for years. We cannot expect that they will start to regard each other as fellow citizens, and peaceful political rivals, just because a piece of paper has been signed thousands of miles away in London."

But British officials, although prepared for some continued fighting, are hoping the war-weariness of both sides will ensure that elections can be held.

The signing ceremony in London was marked by at least surface cordiality, with long-time foes exchanging handshakes. The pact was signed by Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, co-leaders of the Patriotic Front, former Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa and his deputy Silas Mundawarara of the now-resigned biracial Salisbury government and by British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington and his deputy Sir Ian Gilmour.

OVERSEAS

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — A bomb exploded in front of the Turkish Airlines office in downtown Amsterdam early today, heavily damaging the building's facade, police reported. There were no casualties.

A police spokesman said the blast shattered shop windows along one of the capital's main shopping streets. He said police do not know who planted the bomb.

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — King Khaled has removed Maj. Gen. Osman al Hemaid as head of Saudi Arabia's army and made him an assistant to Defense Minister Prince Sultan bin Abdul Azia, the state radio reported today.

No new chief of staff was appointed, the radio said. It gave no explanation for Hemaid's removal from an active to a ceremonial post.

It not immediately known if the move was connected with the attack on Mecca's Grand Mosque last month by a group of religious fanatics, in which troops were used to rout the armed invaders from Islam's holiest shrine.

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — More than 1,000 persons, most former soldiers of ousted dictator Idi Amin, were released from Luzira Prison here.

Internal Affairs Minister Paulo Muwanga told the soldiers Friday to go back to their villages and warned if they tried to join the remnants of Amin's army they would be "dealt with accordingly."

Luzira still holds some 3,000 prisoners, most believed to have been members of secret police orgnizations Amin used to terrorize the population. Amin, ousted last April, is believed living in Libya.

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Villagers in the rugged mountins of northeastern Luzon said today they heard an explosion at about the time three Singapore Air Force jet fighters disappeared, a U.S. Air Force spokesman reported.

Lt. Col. Alan Sabsevitz also said two U.S. Navy helicopters and a reconnaissance plane have joined the search for the missing aircraft.

The crews of the A-4 Skyhawks were training at Clark Air Force Base northwest of here. The planes disappeared Wednesday while flying to a bombing range north of the U.S. base.

TOKYO (AP) — China and France have signed an agreement to promote joint business ventures and encourage trade between the two countries, China's official Xinhua news agency said today in a report monitored here.

It said the agreement between the China International Trust and Investment Corp. and France's Institute of Industrial Development calls for the two countries to exchange information and set up joint ventures "in accordance with China's requirements."

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Renewed fighting between Bengalis and Khasi tribesmen in northeastern India's Meghalaya state Saturday left three persons dead and 22 injured, the United News of India reported.

Army troops were called out in Shillong, the state capital. A curfew was ordered and Ramesh Chandra, the state's chief secretary, said anyone breaking it would be shot on sight. A previous curfew had been lifted for only four hours when the new fighting broke out.

The violence began when Khasi tribesmen demanded the ouster of Bengalis living in the area, following a rumor that the city's water supply had been poisoned. Chandra told reporters the water was found to be safe. Police fired into the crowd after the rioters ignored appeals to disperse, UNI said.

LONDON (AP) — Changing taste and inflation have done what the World War II bombing blitz failed to do: killed the cabaret at London's Savoy Hotel.

The cabaret, opened in the Jazz Age of the 1920s, was graced by Noel Coward, George Gershwin, Maurice Chevalier and Lena Horne in its greatest days.

It will close at 1 a.m. Sunday, Jan. 27, when the James Stuart-Gordon Orchestra plays the national anthem for the last time. The musicians and the eight dancing girls have been given notice, a hotel spokeswoman said.

Sir Hugh Wontner, chairman of the company that owns the Savoy, said the best entertainers can demand fees elsewhere that restaurants cannot afford. What's more, he said, dinner jackets are no longer compulsory at the Savoy and the age of dressing up to go out is dead.

"Today the fashion is to dress in such a shabby way you won't be anything but a liberated tramp," said Wontner.

MADRID (AP) — Hundreds of working-class families in the town of Granollers, near Barcelona, struck it rich in Spain's annual Christmas lottery Saturday, winning a record total of $96 million.

First reports said all the winning numbers were sold in small shares at a parish church in the industrial town.

The total payoff in the drawing, said to be the world's richest, was a record $441 million, spread among 325,000 prizes.

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Cracks in part of a Soviet-built nuclear power plant again have postponed inauguration of the facility, a Helsinki newspaper said Saturday.

Investigators said 10 visible cracks in the pressure kettle had been noticed in Leningrad, where the reactor was built, but the Finnish state-owned power company had accepted it anyway, the newspaper reported. A spokesman for the Finnish company said the problem was not major, but a decision on what to do about it must wait until the new year.

NAMES IN THE NEWS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon will pay for some of his office space in New York City, an associate says.

Under federal law, former presidents are entitled to office space paid for by the government in addition to a $69,600-a-year pension.

Nixon expects to pay about $25,000 a year for about 2,000 square feet of office space in midtown Manhattan, said a family friend who asked not to be named. The government will pick up the tab for an additional 2,000 or 3,000 square feet.

Nixon probably will have a staff of four, mostly to answer mail. The rest of the space will be occupied by the Secret Service.

The associate labeled as "totally untrue" reports by government officials that the former president was looking at several locations that could cost taxpayers from $100,000 to $280,000 a year.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Gov.-elect William Winter, who underwent emergency eye surgery for a detached retina, may be hospitalized for a week, but aides say he's "chipper and feeling well."

"The doctor wants to examine him over the next couple of days before he makes a prognosis on the condition of his eye," Winter's press aide, David Crews, said Saturday.

"It's likely he could be here for a week," Crews said.

Winter spent 3½ hours in surgery Friday at Mid-South Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

Crews described the eye condition as "a severe detachment."

Jackson ophthmologist, Dr. Lynn Abernethy, said the condition occurs when the lining of the eye become separated from the eye itself.

He said retinas, which can become thin in middle age, can tear or separate if they stick to the gel that fills the eye.

Crews said Winter would certainly be out of the hospital in time for his Jan. 22 inauguration to succeed Gov. Cliff Finch.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Wendy Yoshimura, the woman arrested four years ago with newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, is being transferred from state prison to a half-way house.

Phil Guthrie, a spokesman for the state Department of Corrections, said Friday that the move would be made within the next two weeks to allow Ms. Yoshimura to participate in a work furlough program.

He said Ms. Yoshimura, 36, would live at a residential facility operated by the Volunteers of America in Oakland and work during the day at an outside job.

"Her plan is to work at the same place she worked at when she came in, a juice bar," he said. "That's subject to confirmation when she gets back to Oakland."

Ms. Yoshimura, taken into custody with Miss Hearst, now Patricia Hearst Shaw, in 1975 at an apartment they shared in San Francisco, has been at the California Institution for Women near Corona since July for unlawful possession of explosives and firearms. She is due to be paroled next Aug. 25.

NEW YORK (AP) — Tennis star Arthur Ashe says he will soon begin light exercise after a quadruple bypass heart operation and "I think you'll see me playing Wimbledon in June."

The 36-year-old former Wimbledon champion suffered a heart attack July 31 and was attempting a tennis comeback before the Dec. 13 operation became necessary.

At a news conference Friday with his physician, Dr. John E. Hutchinson, Ashe said he expected to be back in the gymnasium for light exercising by early January.

NEW YORK (AP) — A New York photographer has sued Peter Max for more than $1 million, contending the artist copied and capitalized on an exclusive photograph of rock music star Mick Jagger.

Lynne Goldsmith, who photographs entertainment and arts celebrities, filed the complaint Friday in U.S. District Court, alleging Max used a copyright photograph taken by her at a Jagger concert in 1972.

She claims the artist infringed on her exclusive rights to the photograph by incorporating it in paintings, prints, lithographs and other forms for commercial use.

There was no immediate comment from Max.

MANHASSET, N.Y. (AP) — Assault charges against David Clayton Thomas, lead singer of the Blood, Sweat and Tears band, have been dropped because the sole complainant died, the Nassau County district attorney's office says.

Thomas, 38, was arrested in September and charged with third-degree assault. Dana Tarulli, 21, of Sea Cliff had said Thomas hit her in the face Aug. 20 when she rejected his advances at a Roslyn club where he was appearing.

Ed Grilli, a spokesman for the district attorney, said charges against Thomas were dropped Thursday.

Miss Tarulli was killed Nov. 29 in a fall from a 14th-floor balcony of the Regency South condominium in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where she was visiting her fiance, Tommy Ford, 25, son of former Yankee pitcher Whitey Ford.

JACKIE KENNEDY ONASSIS and her son, John F. Kennedy Jr., leave the Broadway Theatre in midtown New York City Saturday after seeing the musical, Evita.

ON THE LIGHT SIDE

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — This year Ed Clinch's Christmas coconut arrived by ambulance, wearing a blonde wig and a nurse's cap.

And after 32 years, Clinch still can't identify the donor who slips him a coconut every Christmas season, always in a bizarre fashion. But he has two suspects.

"One's a relative," he said, "and the other's a long-time friend. I can't prove it, and, naturally, they deny it. I guess I'll just have to outlive one or the other to find out."

This year, an ambulance, with sirens wailing and red lights twirling, pulled up outside Clinch's home.

Two paramedics got out with a stretcher and their treatment case. Inside the case was a box. Inside the box was the coconut. The paramedics wouldn't talk.

That was typical, Clinch said.

The coconuts started coming after Clinch returned from World War II duty with the Air Force in the South Pacific.

"I came back with a lot of stories — some of them were true — about coconuts falling out of trees and hitting people on the head, and things like that," he said.

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Richard the Troll is having a little trouble with the law, but the Rhinoceros Party is still alive and kicking for Canada's next federal election.

At a news conference Friday, the troll said he and other Rhino candidates pledged to introduce a "genuine era of incompetence."

The troll, also known as Richard Schaller, a 35-year-old hashish pipemaker, said he wouldn't be a candidate Feb. 18 because he's "still running in the last election."

By that he means he's having a problem with the Canada Elections Act. Schaller is charged with failing to file a spending report on his campaign in the Capilano riding, or district, last May. He is scheduled to appear in court Jan. 4 for the setting of a trial date.

Bright Christmas promised

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — This year's Noel promises to be the brightest Christmas since 1973 — when the lights were dimmed because of the Arab oil embargo — based on sales of outdoor holiday lights, says an industry spokesman.

Outdoor Christmas lights have been making a steady comeback since Americans trimmed purchases in response to President Richard Nixon's call for energy conservation, says a market planner for General Electric.

Al Levine, manager of market planning for GE's Holiday Products Division, says consumers have decided that trimming the tree or the house does more for the spirit than trimming the electric bills.

"It was like saying 'Let's ban turkey on Thanksgiving,'" said Levine in a telephone interview from Cleveland.

"But the business has come back with steady growth. This is the year that it got back to pretty much the same levels as before the embargo," he said.

There is an exception: At least one Christmas tree is dark because of overseas troubles. This year President Carter has delayed lighting the national Christmas tree in Washington, except for a single star, as a symbol of America's hope for the safe return of the American hostages in Iran.

Levine said turning off Christmas tree lights several years ago not only dampened spirits, but also diminished holiday buying.

"It was a thoughtless order, penalizing one industry," he said. "The amount of energy used in holiday lighting is so miniscule compared to our total energy consumption.

"You can see that when retailers start talking about making one-third of their sales for the total year, it had a very negative effect on the whole economy," he said.

"It kind of gave people a dreary, unholiday-like feeling. It's a feeling we're talking about, an emotional thing. Those years when the lights were off, retailers complained," he said. GE officials declined to release exact figures of sales so far this year.

But in the holiday lights this season, energy conservation has not been forgotten, Levine said.

GE's newest lights are indoor-outdoor miniatures that use less electricity than the larger C-7 and C-9 type bulbs.

They are encased in an outer bulb to make them look like the standard Christmas light sets, which also have been redesigned to consume less electricity.

Currently, most of the lights are miniatures imported from Taiwan, Japan, Korea and Hong Kong.
