SERRANO, MEXICAN REBEL, IS EXECUTED
CATTLE SCARCE; CONDITIONS GREATLY IMPROVEDUPWARD TREND

INDUSTRY PROFITS

(By Associated Press)
KANSAS CITY, Oct. 4.—The steady upward trend of cattle prices at this and other southwestern markets for several months, which has carried the price of grain-fed and grass-fed cattle here to the highest mark since 1920, is a reflection of the scarcity of cattle and the generally improved conditions in the industry throughout the southwest.

Increased values in the packing centers will go far toward renewing confidence and reviving the waning cattle raising industry in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas, in the opinion of representative officials in those states.

New Record Records
Two and three year record high prices for grain and grass fed steers have been bettered here a number of times in the past few weeks and last week saw the paying of the highest prices for both grades since the deflation period began in 1920.

Grass fed steers here advanced to $13.50, corn fed steers went up to $15.50 and several loads of choice veals were cashed in at the year record level in recent years of $15.75 to $17. One carload of calves sold at $18 last week.

A top price of $16 a hundred was paid yesterday for corn fed cattle in Sioux City and with the present scarcity of cattle in the southwest, and the steady rise in prices here, present indications are that that prices may be equalled here soon.

Reasons Assigned
J. H. Mercer, Kansas livestock sanitary commissioner and secretary of the Kansas Livestock association, attributes the improvement to the reduced supply, increased demand for meat, because of better employment conditions and newspaper magazine advertising, and the embargo of fresh meats from South America.

"High prices have stabilized and inspired confidence in the industry," E. E. Spiller, secretary of the Texas and Oklahoma cattle raisers' association, pointed out, adding that "cattlemen are paying old debts, improving herds and otherwise putting their houses in order."

Less Industry Renewal
Harry B. Cordell, president of the Oklahoma board of agriculture, believes that the price increase doubtless will cause Oklahoma cattlemen and farmers to begin anew the business of raising livestock. "The cattle industry in Texas is flourishing and the future bright," A. G. Donovan, president of the Fort Worth Stock Yards company, one of the southwest's biggest markets, said.

Over production is feared in Texas and Oklahoma and cattlemen are being warned against it by the associations there. The situation is not menacing at present, however.

FLOOD CREST
IS BY KANSASNORTHERN OKLAHOMA
IN PATH WITH MUCH DAMAGE PROBABLE

(By Associated Press)
KANSAS CITY, Oct. 4.—The crest of a flood that left hundreds of farmers and city dwellers homeless in southeastern Kansas, today approached the northern Oklahoma border threatening to increase crop and livestock losses in that state.

Although clear weather yesterday brought relief after torrential week end rains, streams draining southeastern Kansas watersheds continued to pour water into the Verdigris river to create new flood records.

Verdigris Falling
The Verdigris was falling slowly at Independence, Kansas, today after it reached a record high mark to drive hundreds from their homes. Reports from Coffeyville, 20 miles south of Independence, stated the river was rising early today and that residents in the eastern part of the town were preparing to leave.

With large areas inundated in Kansas, western Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas, heavy losses have been reported to cotton, corn and winter wheat. Only three persons are known to have been killed, all in Texas. High winds that struck scattered points in four southwest states Saturday and Sunday, left upwards of two score persons injured and wrecked numerous buildings.

River, At Highest Point, Still Rises

COFFEYVILLE, Kan., Oct. 4 (AP).—With the Verdigris river at the highest ever known here and still rising, heroic efforts were being made today to save the levee protecting 500 homes on the east side of the city.

Virtually every levee in Montgomery county, except the one here, has gone out and grave holes were expressed that half a mile of this levee would prove unequal to the strain of the raging waters.

A mob formed after Thomas had been arrested but officers who took the prisoner to Eastman for safe keeping encountered no resistance.

(By Associated Press)
MEXICO CITY, Oct. 4.—Mexico's latest revolt assumed new significance today with admission by President Calles that troops not only mutinied in the capital but also at Torreon, in the state of Coahuila, with an attempted outbreak at Vera Cruz.

The revolutionary movement is declared by the president to be headed by General Francisco Serrano and General Arnulfo Gomez, presidential candidates and opponents of the re-election program of former President Obregon, whom they accuse of dominating the present government and desiring to perpetuate his rule of Mexico.

Revolt Claimed Crushed
President Calles claims that the Torreon revolt, allegedly ordered by General Serrano, was put down after a three hour battle. All the rebellious officers were captured and the soldiers, constituting a battalion, were disbanded and are being court martialed.

The attempted rising of two regiments at Vera Cruz was said to be under orders from General Gomez. President Calles' statement predicted that both Serrano and Gomez would be captured and "properly punished" within forty-eight hours.

(Telephone advices from Mexico City to the Tampico newspaper El Mundo late last night said there was a persistent but unconfirmed report in the capital that General Serrano, together with General Carlos A. Vidal, governor of Chiapas, has been captured and executed.)

Mutinies Troops Trained
The 800 soldiers of the Mexico City garrison who left the city late Sunday night were last reported by airplane scouts to be near Texcoco, thirty miles west of the capital, headed for Puebla.

More than 2,000 loyal troops were sent in pursuit and the president predicted that the rebels would be quickly suppressed. President Calles said that as long as Serrano and Gomez confined to their "presidential campaigns" to words, he gave them all possible guarantees to press their candidacies but now that they have taken to the field they are "traitors" whom the government is determined to "combat and annihilate."

"Since the beginning of the present administration," he said, "I have been fighting against these traitors."

HOUSTON, Oct. 4 (AP).—Hawthorne hearing for Morris C. Laine, road inspector, charged with murder in connection with the death of T. P. Conway, railroad engineer, has been postponed until Saturday. Laine is at liberty on $10,000 temporary bond.

Conway was shot four times here Sunday. Conway married Laine's divorced wife early this year.

NORRERNEY, Germany, Oct. 4.—A new German attempt to span the Atlantic ocean by air began today with the departure of the D-1250, a three-motored Junkers hydro-airplane, for the United States by way of the Azores.

The plane, in command of Frederick Loose, one of the crew of the Junkers plane Bremen during the unsuccessful trans-Atlantic attempt in August took off at 4:46 p. m. after a start of about 150 yards, and headed in a westerly direction with the Azores as its destination.

The greatest secrecy surrounded the final preparations for the hop and it was impossible to learn whether Lily Dillenz, a Viennese actress, was on board, as has been reported.

SALE OF 1,000,000 ACRES OF
UNIVERSITY LANDS SOUGHT
IN PLEA TO SUPREME COURT

(By The Associated Press)
AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 4.—Texas university regents would be forced to offer for sale more than 1,000,000 acres of land, half of the university's huge West Texas tract, in El Paso, Martin, Reagan, Schleicher and Upton counties, in mandamus application filed by the counties in supreme court today.

Plaintiffs claimed the court has jurisdiction on the allegations that regents in the legal sense, are state officers, and that in "failing and refusing" to sell the lands have virtually refuted the state constitution which is asserted to provide for sale.

When the court will act is not known. J. H. Boggs, San Angelo, in the last two legislative sessions sought to require sale of all the lands, more than 2,000,000 acres, but was defeated.

HESTER GIVEN
OFFICIAL VIEW
ON STATISTICSU. S. DEPARTMENT TELLS OF VARIANCE OVER
COTTON REPORT

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The department of agriculture has sent to H. G. Hester, secretary of the New Orleans cotton exchange a letter detailing the sources from which its statistics on the world's July 31 cotton carry-over were compiled.

Hester protested that the figures were more than half a million bales higher than his own estimate and that some of the authorities whose statistics were used had interests not favorable to southern cotton.

Used Old Material
The department of agriculture explained that the statistics were made up from material which, before they used them, already have been published several weeks. The sources of information were the same as had been used for several years in securing an estimate of the world stocks of cotton at the end of the cotton year. These sources and statistics in previous years, the department says, had been found dependable.

The department's carry over figures were included in some routine cotton statistics to which little attention was paid at the time. The president of the New York cotton exchange inquired their source. The department's letter in reply was made public at the New York exchange and caused a drop in the price of the commodity.

COOLIDGE CHARGES IT
DISCRIMINATION ON AMERICAN GOODS

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—President Coolidge regards the tariff dispute between the United States and France as confined strictly to the question of French discrimination against American goods.

Serious Concern
While the amount of American commerce involved is probably no more than $100,000,000, a total commerce of $4,000,000,000, the president was reported today at White House as feeling that the principle in question is one of serious concern to the Washington government, which finds it hard to reconcile French action on the tariff question with the long enduring friendship of the two countries and the fact that they were recently associated in arms.

It was emphasized in the White House explanation, apparently designed to bring the discussion of the tariff question with France down to its simplest terms, that the Washington government has made and is making no complaint against any rate of duty France may charge upon goods imported from the United States so long as there is no discrimination against the United States involved.

Makes No Complaints
It was added that the Washington government was making no complaint at this time over the fact that certain American agricultural products are excluded from French markets, although it was said, interesting information in that connection is in the hands of the agricultural department.

RAIN HALTS WORLD SERIES WORKOUT ON EVE OF OPENING BATTLE

WORKERS BUSY ON SEATS FOR RECORD CROWD

EXPERTS GIVE TEAMS ABOUT EVEN BREAK FOR BIG HONORS

By BRIAN BELL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 4.—Pirates and Yankees camped today on the outskirts of the battle field and waited for a coy sun to do its duty in drying out Forbes field for the first game of the world's series tomorrow.

Rain yesterday brought rest to the players, needed by the Pirates but not by the Yankees, anxious to put the finishing touches on their preparations. The rain came when the Yanks had only a few minutes' batting practice and kept the Pirates off the field altogether.

Carpenters Keep Busy
However, the downpour brought no rest to the carpenters building temporary seats which have already been sold. The craftsmen wrestled with slippery hammers and saws as they built benches to seat 4,000 more than the big playing field normally offers hospitality.

The sound of hammers beat time to a cry from the fans for tickets and more tickets. But there were no tickets except in the hands of speculators, who think they are worth much more than their price tag would indicate. The speculators hope the sentimental value of the paste boards will be realized before game time.

With a day to pass before the first act of the annual classic can be staged, Pittsburgh was practically in the hands of the experts. Old inhabitants "sold the strong hold of the bold Buccaneers" had never before been subjected to such intensified excitement.

Players Write Dope
Most of the "information" came straight from the feed box, many of the players using the hands that will later wield bats and tool curves to pound typewriters and give the fans "the low down." This information has been valuable and consistent thus far. Every Yankee writer has predicted victory for the American league while the count was evened by the Pirate scribbles who to a man pick the National league entry.

The fans who seem to know a good deal about the situation, are weighing the credits and debits of the contesting clubs with careful thought, arriving at the conclusion that this is the question mark at the end of the world series sentence.

"Can the pitching of the Pirates still the mighty bats of the Yanks?"

Many Other Questions
There are many questions that only Wednesday afternoon can answer and then only in part. The duct-of-managerial minds is certain to be interesting as the two "mighty-arms," Donie Bush and Miller Huggins cross wits. It was pointed out that before the master minding starts the chairman of the boards of strategy must have something to work on. If the runners do not get on the bases, a mind on the bench, no matter how alert, can not manufacture a run and if there is no breathing spell between base hits defensive strategy is apt to be more or less futile. Bush has an inch or so in height and several pounds weight advantage over Huggins.

Leading the flying wedge of the Yanks, Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, who hit 107 American league home runs between them, were the objects of sharp scrutiny by Pirate pitchers. The Corsairs' deep thinkers must be aware of the fact that the big fellows will not get good balls to hit.

Pirates Bank on Waners
The Pirates' batting aces, Paul Waner and his brother, Lloyd, make up in speed what they lack in weight and the home folk were confident that the Oklahoma "twins" would be able to hold their own with Ruth and Gehrig in spite of giving away a hundred pounds in fonnage.

The rival managers were expected to put their best pitching bats forward, Waite Hoyt for New York and Ray Kremer for Pittsburgh. Both are right handers and neither needs any introduction to world's series.

Wiley Moore, the best advertisement in baseball for the long distance telephone since he was bought from the Greenville club of the "Sally" league through that medium, is slated to share the main Yankee pitching assignments with Hoyt. Moore has an under slung ball call a "sinker" which seems to change its mind between mound and plate. Manager Bush points out that he also has Vic Aldridge, who has a reputation for never throwing a fast ball, while he has a "curve left."

No Right Field Heroes
The sluggers will get no assistance from the Pittsburgh management in manufacturing right field home runs. Over the fence is not "out" in Pittsburgh, but is for several thousand fans who will sit in temporary stands built outside the fence. A street had to be closed to work out this arrangement. Balls can be driven in the left field stands too, if the pitchers grow careless, and a few extra seats along the left field foul line may make the task of the left field hitters a bit easier.

No home runs will be hit to center field. There is no center field at Forbes field. There is a place

By BILLY EVANS
What players constitute the two strongest teams that could be picked from the stars of the National league?

As in my American league roundup, I put that question to a jury of 20 baseball experts, made up of players, managers and umpires of the National league.

Since my knowledge of the strength and weakness of the players in the National league is not nearly as keen as my judgment of the American league stars, I was much interested in the response I received on the all-star angle in the senior circuit.

In most cases I found a greater difference of opinion existing as to the outstanding players at some of the positions than I did in the American.

Last season, Bob O'Farrell of the St. Louis Cardinals was voted the most valuable player in the National league. By deduction that would make him the best catcher. Not so this year, for a bad arm has put the Cardinal manager out of the running for first choice. "Gaby" Hartnett of the Chicago Cubs was best liked, with Earl Smith of Pittsburgh second choice.

In getting a line on the pitchers, I learned that Ray Kremer of Pittsburgh was generally considered the best of the league. I have always had the greatest admiration for the Pirate star. He's a wonder. However, the experts in picking the two best pitchers, this season's form alone considered, relegated Kremer to the second team because an injured knee kept him out of action for about two months.

Charley Root of the Chicago Cubs was a hot favorite. There was much difference of opinion as to who should be his running mate. The veteran Alexander, who won 20 games, received a slight edge over Kremer and Haines.

I also found plenty of argument over the first base problem. Perhaps the selection of Bill Terry as first choice will occasion considerable surprise. Off hand, I had that reaction, for I have always liked Jim Bottomley of the Cardinals.

The consensus of the National league experts I consulted was to the effect that Terry is a much improved fielder this year and hitting well over 300. Joe Harris was rated second because of his timely batting.

Rogers Hornsby's margin over between left and right but it is called "middle field."

In spite of the all day drizzle Monday, breaking at times into a regular rain, the weather man sticks to his story that Wednesday and Thursday will be fair.

A survey of the amateur experts, barring the professional players, shows a able catching strength with Earl Smith giving the home club a debatable edge, and the Pirates claiming a pitching advantage, which the Yankees refuse to concede.

The infield strength is regarded as all even, the Yankees being stronger at the first two positions and the Pirates at the other two. The outfielders offer argumentative grounds which can be settled only on the ball field. The Pirates have no Ruths and the Yankees have few if any Waners.

PIRATES' PATH TO GLORY NOT BED OF ROSES

TEAM MET MANY UPS-DOWNS IN ITS FIGHT FOR BIG HONORS

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 4.—The Pittsburgh Pirates, National League pennant winners for the sixth time in 24 years, probably have had more ups and downs than any other club in the modern history of the game.

The last seven years particularly, during which the club has twice fought its way to the top, have been filled with the vicissitudes of the Buccaneers. Their careers have been as stormy as those of their namesakes.

Big Contender
Throughout this seven-year period Pittsburgh always has been a pennant contender but usually the high hopes of spring have faded or been blasted during the four-year winning streak of the Giants, 1921 to 1924, the New Yorkers appeared to have the "Indian Sign" on the Pirates. In 1921, the Pirates, leading most of the season, "blew" a seven-game lead in September starting with five straight defeats at the hands of the Giants.

When the Corsairs finally gained the top in 1925 and conquered Washington in the world's series, they looked like the best club in baseball. They had youth, speed and the season as the best in the league but it found rough going after a fast start. Injuries and illness beset the regular line-up. Earl Smith, aggressive catcher, was fined $500 and suspended for thirty days for punching Dave Baneroff. Ray Kremer, pitching ace, was on the shelf indefinitely. To cap the climax, Bush was at odds through the latter part of the season with Kiki Cuyler, hero of the 1925 world's series, and regarded as one of the best outfielders in the game.

Cuyler Displeased
Cuyler, recovering from an ankle injury, incurred Bush's displeasure by failing to slide to second on an important play. He was fined and kept on the bench. Even in the heat of the closing struggle for first place, as the Pirates jumped into has succeeded in spite of unusual handicaps and setbacks. He has the lead, only to face threats from the Giants and Cards, Bush refused to put Cuyler back in the game. Whatever criticism Bush may have received for the Cuyler episode, the stocky, fighting little put himself among the outstanding few managers who have won pennants in their first year at the helm. Bucky Harris did it with Washington in 1924, also capturing the world's series, while Rogers Hornsby was enjoying his first full year as manager when he led the Cardinals to victory.

It isn't difficult to pick out the main reasons for the Pirate triumph. Two of them are named Waners. These brothers, 24-year-old Paul and 22-year-old Lloyd, have played great ball all season in the outfield, setting the pace in batting and run-scoring. Old Joe Harris, at first base, was a mighty factor at bat. When Kremer was put out of the game with an injured knee, Lee Meadows, Vic Aldridge and Carmen Hill took up the pitching burden in brilliant style.

Waite Hoyt, still a mainstay, has figured prominently in all of the four previous title fights under Miller Huggins' leadership. Kremer and Aldridge were the stars of the 1925 Pirate triumph over the Senators. Each captured two games. Aldridge also started the final game, which the Pirates eventually won, but the victory came in an uphill battle after Vic had lasted less than two innings and yielded four runs through a streak of wildness.

Meadows pitched the first game of the 1925 series, losing to Walter Johnson. Carmen Hill, the bespectacled right hander, who rounds out the principal Pirate hurling quartet, has yet to get his world's series baptism.

Here are the world's series pitching records, the rival Pirate and Yankee twirlers.

Yankee Twirlers Have Big Edge On Bucs In Experience In World Series

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The veteran twirling staff of the New York Yankees has a big edge over the Pirate moundmen in world's series experience.

Where three of the Pirate pitching "Big Four," Meadows, Kremer and Aldridge, have been in only one championship fray, that of 1925, four of the Yankee stars have been seasoned in from three to five world series conflicts.

Bob Shawkey, the veteran of them all, has been in five series but he isn't likely to see much active duty this time. Herb Pennock, willowy southpaw who has four world's series victories and no defeats on his slate, has been in three championship battles. So has Dutch Ruether, another porsider. Dutch was with Cincinnati in 1919, Washington in 1925 and the Yankees last year by way of variety.

Yank Southpaw Is Hurt By Line Drive
PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 4 (AP)—Herb Pennock, star Yankee southpaw suffered a ruptured blood vessel in his left leg today when he was struck by a line drive during practice at Forbes field. The ball hit him just above the knee.

Pennock was serving them up when the accident occurred. The line drive was off the bat of a sub-outfielder, Cedric Durst. The ball struck the hurler about an inch and a half above the knee. The injury may not keep Pennock out of the series.

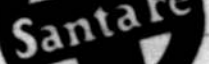

the Giants and Cards, Bush refused to put Cuyler back in the game. Whatever criticism Bush may have received for the Cuyler episode, the stocky, fighting little put himself among the outstanding few managers who have won pennants in their first year at the helm. Bucky Harris did it with Washington in 1924, also capturing the world's series, while Rogers Hornsby was enjoying his first full year as manager when he led the Cardinals to victory.

It isn't difficult to pick out the main reasons for the Pirate triumph. Two of them are named Waners. These brothers, 24-year-old Paul and 22-year-old Lloyd, have played great ball all season in the outfield, setting the pace in batting and run-scoring. Old Joe Harris, at first base, was a mighty factor at bat. When Kremer was put out of the game with an injured knee, Lee Meadows, Vic Aldridge and Carmen Hill took up the pitching burden in brilliant style.

Waite Hoyt, still a mainstay, has figured prominently in all of the four previous title fights under Miller Huggins' leadership. Kremer and Aldridge were the stars of the 1925 Pirate triumph over the Senators. Each captured two games. Aldridge also started the final game, which the Pirates eventually won, but the victory came in an uphill battle after Vic had lasted less than two innings and yielded four runs through a streak of wildness.

Meadows pitched the first game of the 1925 series, losing to Walter Johnson. Carmen Hill, the bespectacled right hander, who rounds out the principal Pirate hurling quartet, has yet to get his world's series baptism.

Here are the world's series pitching records, the rival Pirate and Yankee twirlers.

Greatest single game crowd, 62,600, at Yankee Stadium, New York, October 3, 1926, second of game of series between Yankees and Cardinals. Gate receipts for this game, $201,828, also set a record.

Smallest crowd for one game, 6,210, fifth game, Tigers-Cubs, Detroit, Oct. 14, 1908.

Bobby Jones To Improve Game, Is Recent Promise

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 4.—Just when should a golfer be at his best? Bobby Jones says between the ages of 30 and 35.

The most famous golfer in the world explains his belief by saying he does not think golf collects a physical toll as other sports do, although he admits the strain in golf is something terrible. One usually recovers quickly from such strains, he adds.

All of which leads one to wonder just how good the Atlanta will be a few years from now—if he now is not at the height of his game, but will reach that peak a few years from now.

Jess Barnes To Aid Toledo With Series

TOLEDO, Oct. 4 (AP)—Toledo's American Association champions had Jess Barnes to throw against Buffalo, International League champions, in the fourth game of the little world series at Swayne Field today. Barnes muffed the Blons' bats to lead Toledo to one of the two victories already scored against the Buffalo team.

With the championship series standing two to one in their favor, the home club must win three more games to take the series.

For Buffalo, the most likely mound selection was Stryker or Falk.

Funeral Service Of Poison Victim Not Yet Arranged

Arrangements for the funeral of Mrs. C. F. Proctor, who died last night as a result of poisoning, have not been made, as the undertaker, in charge of the funeral, is waiting the arrival of her husband, who is expected today.

Mrs. Proctor died at 4:50 o'clock last night in the Lubbock sanitarium, as a result of poisoning. A two-ounce vial containing a small amount of carbolic acid, was found near her when she was discovered in a dying condition, at about 3 o'clock in her home on Avenue K, between Eleventh and Nineteenth streets.

She was immediately rushed to the sanitarium, but medical aid was too late to combat the poison. According to friends, she had been in a despondent state for several weeks. She is survived by her husband, who is a mechanic, and two children, a boy 5 years of age, and a girl 2 years old.

MEXICAN REVOLT

gential political campaign my government has had knowledge of the sedition work done by Generals Serrano and Gomez in their electoral policies," Calles said.

Advised Of Actions

"I was advised after several military chiefs had received invitations from one or the other candidates to rebel against the constituted government."

"I knew many emissaries of these chiefs who made frequent trips in the various military zones of the country, attempting to subordinate the military chiefs of these zones."

"On the other hand freedom was maintained for General Gomez as well as General Serrano and their friends in their communications which they so frequently sent to the press and in the propaganda speeches made on political lips."

"It is known to the nation that sedition work was carried on in their statements which threatened frequently that they would go into armed conflict."

Know Of Conspiracy

"The executive also had know-

edge that the headquarters of the Mexico City garrison conspired constantly and I knew of the activities of General Ignacio Alameda."

"In spite of all this the executive guided by serene attitude, never molested the candidates General Gomez and Serrano, giving them all possible guarantees and treating them always as friends."

"In various conferences I had with them in private form, I indicated to them and urged them to remain on the road of duty and patriotism, advising them that whatever the result of the elections, the people would uphold it."

"I knew perfectly that Generals Gomez and Serrano never could in justice charge me with partiality in the electoral contest or say that I took the least part in it."

Succeeds In Corruption

"In spite of all this Generals Gomez and Serrano succeeded in corrupting, with the co-operation of General Hector Ignacio Alameda, chief of staff of General Eusebio Martinez, the chiefs of four companies of the garrison of Mexico City, who Sunday night started on orders of said General Alameda, a rebellious movement, leaving their barracks and taking the road to Texcoco, where they remained until 11 a. m. Monday according to information brought by airplanes sent out to find them. The rebellious troops did not dare to offer combat with the loyal forces of the garrison."

"Fortunately, this movement is considered a failure, above all because a great number of chief officers and subalterns and part of the rebellious soldiers have deserted the rebels and returned to their barracks."

"It can be said that the group of rebels from the four companies who rebelled does not exceed 800."

Rebels' Plans Fail

"In anticipation of all this, Generals Gomez and Serrano two days ago left the capital to put themselves at the head of the rebellion which according to their belief should have broken out simultaneously throughout the republic. Serrano went toward Morelos and Gomez toward Vera Cruz."

"In Texcoco, following instructions of General Gomez, at daybreak Monday the 16th battalion revolted but was immediately attacked by loyal forces and subdued after three hours of combat. The chief and officers were made prisoners and the soldiers dispersed. The rebel chiefs are being summarily tried by court martial.

Two Regiments Revolt

"In Vera Cruz I have knowledge that on Monday, following instructions from General Gomez, two regiments revolted and that General Gomez probably heads them."

"My government has taken energetic movements to combat and annihilate these traitors, and I can assure the nation that this movement will be suppressed in permanent manner."

"Up to this moment I have no news from other parts of the country of any untoward incidents."

House Of Deputies

Oust All Antis

EL PASO, Oct. 4 (AP).—A Hispanic newspaper here states that the house of deputies will be called into extraordinary session in Mexico City today for the purpose of ousting all members of the anti-re-election party which has supported the presidential candidates of Generals Serrano and Gomez.

The same report also stated that a train on the interoceanic railway bound for Mexico City, was attacked at Texcoco and the passengers and express car robbed.

errors continue to voice their claims to power at Jalapa.

All the armed forces in Vera Cruz City with the exception of a small body of soldiers and marines have left for Jalapa. The police are charged with the maintenance of order.

Rail Service Renewed

Suspension of railway service on the Mexican and inter-oceanic lines, ordered shortly after noon yesterday, was broken last night with the arrival of a train which had left Mexico City in the morning.

The passengers said there was no outward signs of trouble in the capital when they left. Suspension of rail service was said to have been ordered to expedite troops and military supplies in the campaign against the rebels.

19 Rebels Killed In Short Clash

NOGALES, Ariz., Oct. 4 (AP).—Nineteen rebels were killed and twenty wounded in two hours of fighting in Jalisco, semi-official dispatches received here today reported.

The battle resulted in the federal generals Leal and Garza beating back rebel forces under Victoriano Ramirez in the Canaleon mountains of the northwestern part of the state of Jalisco. No federal casualties were reported and the time of the skirmish was not given in the dispatches.

One Case Remains On Week's Court Docket for Trial

Only one case remains set for trial this week in the 99th district court here, which yesterday disposed of all other cases on the docket. The remaining case is styled Grove versus Sharp, and is set for Friday.

NEW ORLEANS TRADING
NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 4 (AP)—The cotton market opened easier, but withstanding better Liverpool cables than due and first trades showed losses of 9 to 14 points. Prices continued to decline owing to more favorable weather in the belt and the failure of predicted frosts to materialize, as well as continuation of liquidation.

December traded down to 21.25 and January to 21.27, or 22 to 23 points below yesterday's close. Near the end of the first thirty minutes the market became steadier and prices rallied 8 to 10 points from the lows on less favorable weather prospects.

Further liquidation and persistent hammering by large short interests in New York kept prices on the down grade all morning. The ease was added materially by a private estimate of 12,775,000 bales and further efforts to bolster up the government's carry over figures. At noon December was trading 21.09 and January 21.04, 46 to 47 points below yesterday's close.

NEW YORK TRADING
NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP)—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 7 to 17 points, active months quickly showing net losses of 59 to 24 points under continued liquidation, local and southern selling promoted by better weather prospects in the south.

The decline to 21.17 for December and 21.46 for March was checked by trade buying or covering, and there were rallies of 16 or 12 points from the lowest before the end of the first hour.

Moderate rallies from the early decline appeared to meet further southern selling and liquidation. A private report placing the indicated crop at 12,755,000 bales seemed to bring in a little more selling during the middle of the morning, and prices eased back to 21.06 for December or within a point of early low level. The volume of business tapered off at the decline, however, and the market at midday was quietest rallies of 4 or 5 points from the lowest.

Stocks And Money

WALL STREET TRADING
NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP)—Stock prices displayed a firm upturn at the opening of today's market. General Motors (old) opened a point higher at 287 1/2, a new top. DuPont showed an initial gain of 1 1/2 points and General Electric 1. With the railroad average again in new high ground and the industrial average within striking distance of the record top, operators for the rise bid up a wide variety of stocks in an effort to maintain bullish enthusiasm. Baltimore and Ohio, Chesapeake Corporation, New York Central and Union Pacific all moved into new high ground in the first few minutes of trading. General Motors issues continued to respond to President Sloan's prediction that 1927 earnings would better those of last year, the old stock crossing 250 and the new getting above 140. Strength of south Porto Rican sugar was due, in part, to the passage of the crop restriction bill by the Cuban congress. CHICAGO TRADING
CHICAGO, Oct. 4 (AP)—Both wheat and corn prices developed strength today, after downturns at the start. Unfavorable weather for threshing in Canada, together with assertions that much corn is yet susceptible to frost damage, acted as the main bullish factors.

CLEANING OF PENS
Frequent cleaning of pens, sheds, troughs and hog lots, as well as streets and feeding floors, is an important factor in disease prevention. It is imperative that the premises be disinfected following outbreaks of infectious diseases. In addition to thorough cleaning at regular intervals, a liberal amount of slaked lime should be applied.

TEXAS COTTON IS PAINTED ON SIDES OF CARS

STREET RAILWAY MEN WOULD BRIGHTEN UP THEIR VEHICLES

(By Associated Press)
CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 4.—Pictures of Texas cotton painted on the sides of street cars and interurbans in proposal for new decorative color schemes made by delegates to the American Electric Railway convention opening here tomorrow.

Texas street railway companies were pioneers in adopting attractive color schemes for their cars. Street car companies in Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio and other cities have applied the paint brush industriously to make their vehicles more cheerful and attractive.

Fall Fashion Show.
The vast exhibit of cars and buses here for the convention is in reality a fall fashion show with bright colors much in the ascendency.

The industry decided recently that it could not compete with the newly decorated and upholstered private automobiles by operating dark cars. Not only are the hundred or more electric cars and buses painted in bright reds, yellows and greens, but manufacturers are urging local management to use local colors and school colors, as well as to name the street cars after prominent citizens or historic places.

Trolley pennants, American flags and airplanes are reproduced on the sides of some cars. A movement also is being made to feature reproductions of local products such as: High sugar beets, Louisiana sugar cane and "Texas cotton" on the sides of street cars.

Many Changes Made.
Incidentally seats are being made more comfortable, the floors are being covered with linoleum or rubber, the interior of the cars made lighter and many bodies made of aluminum.

All of these revolutionary changes are due to a new spirit of salesmanship which has entered the industry, the leaders explain. They say that private motor car manufacturers for a time ran away with their business because the motor vehicle was made brighter and more attractive than the car. By taking a tip from the motor manufacturers, the electric railway men have attracted much of their trade back and during the last year, despite the millions of new automobiles, held their own against competition. The industry last year carried 16,000,000 passengers, which is regarded as a gain over the previous year because of the increased number of competing private automobiles.

Motor Buses Prominent.
While the bus is in the picture, it falls far short of dominating the interest of this convention. Traction companies generally have accepted it as a vehicle good in supplemental service and some 800 motor buses now are being operated by electric railways.

EXPERTS MEET SOON TO TALK GAS PROBLEMS

HOUSTON ENTERTAINS SOUTHWEST SECTION OF ASSOCIATION

(By Associated Press)

HOUSTON, Oct. 4.—A "ghostly" breath or a "wild spirit" were terms first applied to gas when it was discovered by John Baptist von Holm of Brussels more than 300 years ago.

The latter part of this month the leading gas men of the Southwest will gather here for a convention of the Southwest Natural Gas section of the American Gas association, and they will discuss the problems of a business that has grown from a "wild spirit" to become one of the country's greatest basic industries.

Big Producing Area.

"The Southwest is the greatest natural gas producing section in the United States, and Texas is one of the greatest natural gas producing and consuming states of the Southwest, according to the Texas Public Service Information Bureau. The public utility companies used most natural gas in generating electricity in Texas last year than was used in any other state for a similar purpose.

The convention of gas men will be held here October 31 and November 1. The gas experts will come to discuss many problems of the industry. They will report that gas pipelines are spreading a network of fuel carrying conduits throughout this state and that natural gas is now becoming available to the smallest hamlet and the remotest sections.

Found "Wild Spirit."

Van Helmont in the course of experiments about 1600 discovered that certain fuels yielded up what he described as a "wild spirit." He found that this "spirit" could be produced in various ways, such as by combustion, fermentation and the action of the acids on limestone. So phantom like and elusive was Van Helmont's discovery that he named it after "gets," the German word for spirit.

Thus at its very christening gas was enshrouded in a veil of mystery that for many generations was to obscure it and carry the suggestion of intangibility to the supern mind in an age of superstitions.

In fact it was almost 200 years after Van Helmont's discovery that principal steps were taken to harness this elusive spirit and make it serve a useful purpose.

A few years after Van Helmont's discovery, natural gas was discovered in various places in England. These discoveries attracted wide attention and speculation. In 1667, Thomas Shirley mentioned that his attention was directed about eight years previously to what was considered to be a spring "where the water did burn like oil," and "did did burn like water in a pot."

On investigation, he found this to "arise from a strong breath, as it were, a wind which ignited on the approach of a lighted candle," and "did burn bright and vigorous."

On May 18, 1804 Frederick Albert Winsor, a German, obtained in London the first patent for making gas.

Sir Walter Scott at that time wrote to a friend: "There is a madman proposing to light London with what do you think? Why, with smoke!" Napoleon, when he heard of the plan to light London's streets with gas, dismissed the idea as "una grande folie."

London Dismayed.

On December 31, 1813 Westminster Bridge was lighted with gas and the populace of London was dumfounded with the spectacle. People thought the flame came through the pipes and many objections were made when the system was installed in the house of commons. They thought the pipes would burn the building. Lamplighters at first refused through fear to light the new gas lamps.

Baltimore, Md., was the first American city to light its streets with gas in 1816 and in 1820 Paris was lighted with gas.

In Texas during the last few years natural gas production and consumption has grown rapidly. Some of the world's largest fields of gas are within the borders of this state, and so abundant is this supply that plans are now under way for piping it even as far as Denver, Col.

Use of Radio For Good Urged Today In Coolidge Talk

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Radio, having become a great influence in the world, needs to be raised into the realm of beneficent public service," so that it will promote friendship and understanding rather than ill will and dissension among nations, President Coolidge declared today in an address opening the international radio telegraph conference.

Urges Use For Good.

Like every invention which increases the power of man, he said, radio may be used for good or for evil and he commended to the conference the setting aside so far as possible of sectional needs so that a broad, cooperative policy for the good of all nations using this method of communication may be adopted.

"The world will not be benefited by this increase in the scope of its power," Mr. Coolidge told the delegates, "unless there is corresponding increase in moral development. Your main object will be to raise this great industry into the realm of beneficent public service."

Holding that radio has promise of being a means of enlightenment, the president declared the industry needs national and international control to the end that there may be "the most perfect order and the largest possible uniformity in its use and enjoyment. Although he considered radio's main weakness to be its inability to produce permanent records for future consideration, the president declared it holds great promise of spreading information to remote sections because the cost of its installation and maintenance was small in comparison with that of other methods of communication.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

When Alvin Benson is murdered, Marham, remembering that his friend Vance is keenly interested in criminology, drops in on the latter on his way to Benson's house. Together they go to the scene of the crime. Benson has been shot while reading in a chair.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER III

(Friday, June 14, 9:30 a. m.)
THE district attorney and Heath walked up to the body, and stood regarding it.

"You see," Heath explained, "he was shot directly from the front. A pretty powerful shot, too; for the bullet passed through the head and struck the woodwork over there by the window." He pointed to a place on the wainscot a short distance from the floor near the drape of the window nearest the hallway. "We found the expelled shell, and Captain Hagedorn got the bullet."

He turned to the fire-arms expert.

"How about it, Captain? Anything special?"

Hagedorn raised his head slowly, and gave Heath a myopic frown. Then after a few awkward movements he answered with unhurried precision:

"A 45 army bullet—Colt automatic."

"Any idea how close to Benson the gun was held?" asked Marham.

"Yes, sir, I have," Hagedorn replied, in his ponderous monotone. "Between five and six feet—probably."

Heath snorted.

"Probably," he repeated to Marham with good-natured contempt. "You can bank on it if the captain says so. You see, sir, nothing smaller than a 44 or 45 will stop a man, and these steel-capped army bullets go through a human skull like it was cheese. But in order to carry straight to the woodwork the gun had to be held pretty close; and as there aren't any powder marks on the face, it's a safe bet to take the captain's figures as to distance."

At this point we heard the front door open and close, and Dr. Doremus, the chief medical examiner, accompanied by his assistant, bustled in. He shook hands with Marham and Inspector O'Brien, and gave Heath a friendly salutation.

"Sorry I couldn't get here any sooner," he apologized.

He was a nervous man with a heavily seamed face and the manner of a real-estate salesman.

"What have we got here?" he asked, in the same breath, making a wry face at the body in the chair.

"You tell us, Doc," retorted Heath.

Dr. Doremus approached the murdered man with a cautious difference indicative of a long process of hardening. He first inspected the face closely—he was, I imagine, looking for powder marks. Then he glanced at the bullet hole in the forehead and at the ragged wound in the back of the head. Next he moved the dead man's arm, bent the fingers, and pushed the head a little to the side. Having satisfied himself as to the state of rigor mortis, he turned to Heath.

"Can we get him on the settee there?"

Heath looked at Marham inquiringly.

"All through, sir?"

Marham nodded, and Heath beckoned to the two men at the front windows and ordered the body placed on the davenport. It retained its sitting posture, due to the hardening of the muscles after death, until the doctor and his assistant straightened out the limbs. The body was then undressed, and Dr. Doremus examined it carefully for other wounds. He paid particular attention to the arms, and he opened both palms. At length he straightened up and wiped his hands on a large colored silk handkerchief.

"Shot through the left frontal," he announced. "Direct angle of fire. Bullet passed completely through the skull. Exit wound in the left occipital region—base of skull. You found the bullet, didn't you? He was awake when shot, and death was immediate—probably never knew what hit him. He's been dead about—well, I should judge, eight hours; maybe longer."

"How about twelve-thirty for the exact time?" asked Heath.

The doctor looked at his watch. "Fits O. K.—Anything else?"

No one answered, and after a slight pause the chief inspector spoke.

"We'd like a post-mortem report today, doctor."

"That'll be all right," Dr. Doremus answered, snapping shut his medical case and handing it to his assistant. "But get the body to the mortuary as soon as you can."

After a brief hand-shaking ceremony, he went out hurriedly.

Heath turned to the detective who had been standing by the table when we entered.

"Burke, you 'phone headquarters to call for the body—and tell 'em to get a move on. Then go back to the office and wait for me."

Burke saluted and disappeared.

Heath then addressed one of the two men who had been inspecting the grilles of the front windows.

"How about that ironwork, Snitkin?"

"No chance, Sergeant," was the answer. "Strong as a jail—both of 'em. Nobody never got in through these windows."

"Very good," Heath told him. "Now you two fellows chase along with Burke."

When they had gone the dapper man in the blue serge suit and derby, whose sphere of activity had seemed to be the fireplace, laid two cigarette butts on the table.

"I found these under the grilles, Sergeant," he explained enthusiastically. "Not much, but there's nothing else laying around."

"All right, Emery," Heath gave the butts a disgruntled look. "You needn't wait, either. I'll see you at the office later."

Hagedorn came ponderously forward.

"I guess I'll be getting along too," he rumbled. "But I'm going to keep this bullet a while. It's got some peculiar rifling marks on it. You don't want it specially, do you, Sergeant?"

Heath smiled tolerantly.

"What'll I do with it, Captain?"

You keep it. But don't you dare lose it."

"I won't lose it," Hagedorn assured him, with stolid seriousness; and, without so much as a glance at either the district attorney or the chief inspector, he waddled from the room with a slightly rolling movement which suggested that of some huge amphibious mammal.

Vance, who was standing beside me near the door, turned and followed Hagedorn into the hall. The two stood talking in low tones for several minutes. Vance appeared to be asking questions, and although I was not close enough to hear their conversation, I caught several words and phrases—"trajectory," "muzzle velocity," "angle of fire," "impetus," "impact," "deflection," and the like—and wondered what on earth had prompted this strange interrogation.

As Vance was thanking Hagedorn for his information Inspector O'Brien entered the hall.

"Learning fast," he asked, smiling patronizingly at Vance. Then, without waiting for a reply: "Come along, Captain. I'll drive you down town."

Markham heard him.

"Have you got room for Dinwiddle, too, Inspector?"

"Plenty, Mr. Markham."

The three of them went out. Vance and I were now left alone in the room with Heath and the district attorney, and as if by common impulse, we all settled ourselves in chairs. Vance taking one near the dining-room door directly facing the chair in which Benson had been murdered.

I had been keenly interested in Vance's manner and actions from the moment of his arrival at the house. When he had first entered the room he had adjusted his monocle carefully—an act which, despite his air of passivity, I recognized as an indication of interest. When his mind was alert and he wished to take an external impression quickly, he invariably brought out his monocle. He could see adequately enough without it, and his use of it, I had observed, was largely the result of an intellectual dictate. The added clarity of vision it gave him seemed subtly to affect his clarity of mind.

Vance's eyes were slightly bifacial. His right eye was 1.2 astigmatic, whereas his left eye was practically normal.

HARDY SEAMEN CITY DADS ASK NEW RIVAL FOR TO SEARCH FOR FOR PAVING IN PLANE SEEN IN CACHE OF LOOT RESIDENT AREA WING FLAPPER

BUCCANEER'S KIN TO COME BAY FOR BIG TREASURE TROVE

(By Associated Press)
SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 4.—Part of the loot of the city of Panama, which was captured by the gallant seamen of the United States navy, is being sought by two San Francisco men. It is believed that the treasure, which is said to be worth $1,000,000, is hidden in a cave in the Republic of Panama.

Louis A. Morgan, fourth or fifth grandson of the notorious British sea soldier, and Captain A. Pearson are building with their own hands a 42-foot ketch rigged yacht the "Saxon," in which to sail forth in quest of the treasure. Morgan is a resident of the Republic of Panama, and Pearson is a resident of the Republic of Panama.

During the war with Spain in 1871, Sir Henry Morgan, commissioned as a privateer, invaded the fair southern city of Panama. Rough usage of the citizenry failed to uncover much wealth, hidden when the attack was launched, so Sir Henry blithely ordered the city destroyed and a thorough job of it was done.

Bested by Spanish.
A Spanish rescue force met and defeated the marauders north of the city. Unable to carry off the booty with them when they fell back, the invaders lowered chests of silver and gold-ware and "pieces of eight" into a swamp in Chame bay. A trusted lieutenant and seven pirate privates were delegated to do the hiding.

Sir Henry believed more implicitly in the adage "dead men tell no tales" than in the reference of his loyal followers, so he had the seven privates shot, but spared the lieutenant to make a chart showing the location of the cache. The trusted lieutenant does not appear in the narrative after he delivered the chart to Sir Henry aboard ship on Darien bay.

Parchment is Manded Down.
The parchment, Morgan states was handed down from father to son until it came into his possession seven years ago from his father, Frank Pierce Morgan, attorney in Victoria, Texas.

He and Pearson have put all their available cash and months of work into the building of the ship. Part of the task was done under the personal supervision of Mrs. Jack London, whose experiences on the noted cruise of the Snark with her writer-husband have qualified her as an authority on deep sea travel in boats of the 40-foot class.

Says Long Shot.
"It's a long shot," Morgan concedes, "but how could money be spent to better advantage than in seeking hidden gold? Captain Pearson and I are spending our own money, nobody else's, and we figure it's worth the $10,000 it will cost us even if we never find any of the chests Sir Henry buried."
Pearson has a government license as a pilot and navigator. Morgan served in the navy 22 years ago and during the war was crew inspector for the United States Shipping Board.

35,000 Bale Cotton Estimate Made Here

An estimate of between 30,000 and 35,000 bales of cotton as the crop in Lubbock county for 1927 was made yesterday by County Agent D. F. Eaton, who has made visits over various parts of the county. He figures that it will take at least two more weeks of warm weather for the late crop to be brought out.

This estimate would place the yield at about 30 per cent lower than it was last year.

Postal Receipts Of Lubbock Show Gain

With postal receipts for the last quarter amounting to $119,653.62, the total for the year thus far is more than $2,000 higher than last year, according to figures from the office of Postmaster John L. Vaughan. The receipts for the year thus far amount to $81,234.52.

Thirteen more blocks of city paving are in prospect, with a hearing to owners of property abutting on the streets proposed to be paved, and to all interested and affected parties, ordered by the city commission for Thursday, October 27. This action was taken at the recessed session of the commission yesterday afternoon.

Streets Affected
The paving will affect the following streets:
Nineteenth street from the center line of intersection of Avenue M to the center line of Avenue N from the south.

Avenue N from the intersection with the north line of Twenty-third street to the center of intersection of Nineteenth street from the east.

Avenue J from intersection with north property line of Fifth to intersection with south property line of Fourth.

Ordinance Passed
An ordinance requiring the payment of a license fee of $36 per annum by every master plumber doing business in the city was passed, and a penalty for violation of not less than $10 fine and not more than $100 assessed.

An ordinance rescinding the action previously taken by the commission with reference to paving Nineteenth from Avenue M to Avenue Q, of Avenue H from the south line of the P. and S. F. right of way to the intersection with south property line of Fourth street, and of Avenue H from Fourth street to First street.

FLORIDA MAN TESTING ENGINELESS MACHINE FOR AIR TRAVEL

COCOA, Fla., Oct. 4.—Birds that soar in endless space and planes that have conquered the ocean may find an air rival in an ornithopter which George R. White is attempting to perfect.

On an isolated section of the Atlantic beach here, White has been secretly testing his wing-flapping flying machine, which resembles a giant white crane, and witnesses support his assertion that it has been flown in short hops.

While disclaiming perfection for the ornithopter yet, White believes such machines eventually will be used as the most economical and practical method of short aerial travel. The present experimental model, he says, could be marketed profitably at $300.

The outstanding feature of the machine is the design, the principles of which follow in a great extent the wings of a feathered flier. The motive power is supplied with hands or legs, demanding minimum exertion, he explains, and no motor is used. He believes successful flights now depend almost solely upon his ability to control the machine.

By applying power sufficient to flap the wings at the rate of 80 beats per minute, the inventor says, the machine will climb, and on a straightaway flight will attain a speed of 40 miles an hour.

With a wing spread of 25 feet and a fuselage eight feet long, the ornithopter weighs less than 100 pounds. The frame is constructed of superstrength steel alloy tubing covered with protoid celluloid three one-thousandths of an inch in thickness.

The flexible ends of the wings graduate toward the tips and are passed.

Improvements of Sixteenth were accepted, the maintenance bond approved, and the issuance of certificates ordered in evidence of assessments levied.

Deed to property including lots 1-24 inclusive in block 26 of the Overton addition, tendered by W. H. Bledsoe, was accepted for purposes of a city park.

Tech-A. & M. Posters Will Be Scattered

Officials of the Tech college and the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce are working hard in hand on plans for the Matador-A. and M. football game, to be staged here on October 28, and as a result the larger cities of the state are to be posted with lithographed posters, calling attention to the big tilt here.

The placards, reading "Football! The Big Game—Texas Tech versus A. and M. college, Friday, October 28. Get your tickets now by writing Texas Technological college, Lubbock," are expected to bring crowds from the centers of population, officials say.
