CHARLES CURTIS IS DEAD AT HIS HOME

About Our Friends

By STEPHEN A. LONG

That ground hog that came out and saw his shadow last Sunday has gotten us into a lot of weather by his timidity... more days of this kind of weather will be a great drain on the budget... Wonder if they will take a note up at the gas office since we do not have any promise ahead, not having been needed as a fighter in the Spanish War, our credit may not be as good as some....

Now just what are we going to do about "Our Friends" when some of them are on the street... We did discover Mrs. Vance Little and her little son, doing some shopping Saturday morning... Steve Nance was able to drive down the street in his white-tired car and E. B. Isaacs seemed to be giving a bill of some kind... distorting a lot of money and having anti-freeze tested... Dewey Moore telling them to get his overcoat and clean and press it... Abe Moore coming in without any overcoat on... K. H. Pittard rushing in a store and closing the door hurriedly behind him....

Ralph Barton, vocational teacher in the high school, comes strolling along with just a sweater and jacket on... jacket unbuttoned and jacket... it develops that he has been a sailor... kind of a Popeye the Sailor Man... that accounts for his being tough... Hadn't observed that he was cold... then he launches in a story of having worked on a tugboat and lower up in New Jersey during a winter season where it really was cold... Wonder if he could have been stringing us?... Suppose we will have to visit the grocery stores to find any body... the dry goods people say its too cold

NYA WORKERS SOUGHT HERE FOR PROJECT

Young men between the ages of 16 and 25 whose families have been on relief are wanted for work under the NYA program here, it was announced by Robert Milligan, engineer of the state highway department. Youth—both boys and girls—are urged by Milligan to leave their names at the Cisco Chamber of Commerce before February 24. At that time the enrollees will be sent to work on National Youth Administration projects. A project now planned is that of a highway park at the West end of the state where land has been purchased by the city for the Highway relocation. More land was secured than was needed for the highway, where it turns. Milligan said that no limit has been placed upon the number of youths wanted for the NYA work.

Chile's Railroad Strike Is Broken

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 8.—(UP)—A railway system returned to normal today as transportation resumed after a strike by 10,000 workers broke down in declaring a month's state of siege to put a supposed communist revolution movement. The director general of the country's railroads said all passenger freight trains throughout the country were running again on regular schedules. He said all strikers returned to work save for a few leaders who were replaced, continued to act against the government in other fields, countering movement by raids throughout the country in which communist leaders were seized.

County Meet To Be Here March 27

FOUR EVENTS ARE ADDED TO THE PROGRAM

The Eastland County Interscholastic meet will be held in Cisco March 27 and 28, it was announced Saturday following a meeting of the executive committee to lay plans for the annual event.

Cisco was selected as the county meet site some time ago but the date was not decided immediately. Superintendent R. N. Cluck of Cisco is director general of the meet. Four new events will be added to the county meet, it was announced after the meeting. They include:

- 1—A negro track meet with Professor Evans of Eastland as director general.
- 2—A high school band contest with G. W. Colburn of Eastland as director.
- 3—Story telling for the first grade with Mrs. Cassie Williams as director.
- 4—Sub-junior declamation and grammar school debate with the directors of the senior events having charge.

It was decided that eliminations in debate will be held in Eastland on March 21. Finals will be at the general county meet.

Ward school debate contests will be held two weeks after the county meet. They are not a part of the statewide county meet program but have been included in the Eastland county contests for the last two years.

The junior track and field events will be held on April 4, a week after the senior meet. All schools which wish to enter the typing contest may do so regardless of whether the course is affiliated. If a school without an affiliated typing course should win any place in the contest, no points would be given to the school and it would not be eligible for district competition.

Ag Students Prune 100 Fruit Trees

Agriculture students of the first year class in Cisco high school have just completed pruning 100 fruit trees, it was announced by T. G. Caudle, vocational agriculture teacher.

The tree pruning is a part of the supervised practical work of the course, Caudle said.

Silver Jubilee of Scout Movement In U. S. Celebrated With Good Turns

Saturday was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the beginning of scouting in the United States. Throughout the nation Boy Scouts and Scouters will celebrate the event with mass gatherings, special good turns, and many scout activities. February 8 has been designated as the beginning of national scout week, which will last through the Feb. 15. During the week the scouts of Cisco will celebrate the event with special good turns, and on Friday, if the weather permits, Troop 4 will take a hike and have a meal. If not there probably will be some kind of a celebration. An attempt will also be made to have a special church service for the scouts of the city before the week ends. Yesterday afternoon at 5:15 the president of the United States and the president of the national scout organization spoke to the thousands of scouts and scouters of the nation over the radio on a nationwide hookup. In some of the larger towns the scouts were assembled to hear the broadcast. Scoutmaster Ralph Barton said yesterday that the scouts of Troop 4 will be glad to do a special good turn for anyone if it is possible.

LATVIANS TO GIVE RUSSIAN CHURCH RITES

The Latvian Singers, interpreters of the Russian church in song, will appear at the high school auditorium this afternoon at 4 o'clock, sponsored by the City Federation of Women's club.

They will portray the ritual of the Eastern church in a tableau, "An Evening in a Monastery," which will include their version of the great vespers. The scene will be complete with a Russian altar, incense, priest in robes, candle light, and invisible choir. The singers will be in ecclesiastic costume.

The Latvian Singers will be presented by the City Federation in "Evenings in Old Russia," in which they will seek to interpret the folk songs, music, and church ritual of Russia.

The high school and Randolph college are cooperating with the club, according to Mrs. Lee Clark, president of the City Federation and head of the fine arts department at Randolph.

Texas Exes Banquet Is at Breckenridge

The annual banquet of the Oil Belt Texas Exes Association will be held at Breckenridge March 2, it was announced Saturday by Coach Dexter Shelley, who said a large number of Ciscoans likely would attend.

Jack Chevigny, head coach and athletic director at the University of Texas, will be the principal speaker of the evening. The rest of the program will be furnished by the Breckenridge group. Shelley, who is vice president for Cisco, said he would be able to furnish tickets for the banquet or information concerning it.

"Early Monday morning..." the Dionne quintuplets were surprised by the camera, which caught them getting their first taste of domestic duty. That's Annette standing up so proudly at left, while Yvonne tries out a miniature flatiron on the ironing board. Cecile explores the possibilities of a tiny laundry tub, while Emilie intently studies a washboard. Marie prefers just to sit on the floor and try the taste of a clothespin. It's all in fun, but what fun!

Storage Sought As Wende Hits New Pay

Adequate storage facilities were reported sought for the Wisdom and Parsons number one Gus Wende well six miles south of the city, following a flurry of excitement as a new pay was struck Friday afternoon.

Considerably more oil with an increase in gas pressure was encountered as drilling into the sandy lime went forward late Friday afternoon. Operations were stopped when it was believed that the well was about to head.

At noon Friday there was 2,400 feet of oil in the hole before drilling into the new pay was started. Officials appeared to believe that the well was better than they had thought at first when the new pay was reached.

There has been considerable leasing and indications are that more wells are to be sunk in the vicinity of the Wende and the Schor wells. The Schor has been supplying Humboldt with gas for years. Business men of the city Saturday were excited over the possibilities of a possible oil boom on a small scale as the Wende test neared completion.

Bums Outsmart Cops By Riding on Buses

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 8.—(UP)—The hoboes and bums against whom the Los Angeles police department is warring were credited today with having outsmarted the border brigade by transferring from freight trains to buses for the ride over the state line.

Jim Davis, Los Angeles police chief and commander of the city's foreign legion, immediately threw in reinforcements to break up the scheme. The bus fare from Yuma, Ariz., over the state line, is a dime and indigent transients headed for southern California have been using this means to ride past Los Angeles officers. When they didn't have a dime Arizona dents reportedly provided the fare.

FARM PLAN TO BE IMPORTANT IN CAMPAIGN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—(UP)—Political battle lines were shaping today around the administration farm program in a manner that suggested it may become a paramount issue in the presidential campaign.

The intensive study given the measure by Senator William E. Borah, together with his preliminary conclusion that it was unconstitutional, indicated the farm problem would figure importantly in his bid for the republican presidential nomination.

"It doesn't help the farmer one particle to resolve unconstitutional questions in his behalf. A casual survey of the bill show a very serious question about its constitutionality," Borah said.

NYA Projects In 40 Counties Okeh

AUSTIN, Feb. 8.—(UP)—National Youth Administration projects in 40 Texas counties to employ 1,617 youths at $46,000 cost were approved here today by State Director Lyndon Johnson. Included were Johnson county, community recreation center, NYA fund, $2,049; sponsors, $285, 110 employed.

AUSTIN, Feb. 8.—(UP)—Parole boards to look after the welfare of released convicts were named today by Governor James Allred for Stephens county. They are J. W. Morrow, Breckenridge, chairman; T. A. Downing, Caddo, Rev. Herbert Markley, J. E. Kirland, D. T. Bowles, W. H. Christian, and R. E. Hood, all of Breckenridge.

New Probe Of Harvey Bailey's Jail Break at Dallas Started by Paper

DALLAS, Feb. 8.—(UP)—Investigation of the three-year-old jail break staged by Harvey Bailey was reopened today after an informant relayed to federal agents a casual conversation overheard in a barber shop. Bailey, one of the kidnapers of Charles Urschel, millionaire oil man, escaped from the Dallas county jail. Authorities never have discovered who planned the break and provided the necessary money.

HEART ATTACK IS CAUSE OF DEATH; CAPITAL IN MOURNING FOR FORMER VICE PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—(UP)—Charles Curtis, one-time jockey and former vice president of the United States, who traced his lineage to the Indian nobility of the western prairies, died at his home here today. He was 76 years old. Death was due to a heart attack.

Curtis will be buried in Topeka, Kan., within a few miles of his log cabin birthplace on the north bank of the Kaw river. If not the last of the "log cabin statesmen", Curtis was among the few remaining of that distinguished company.

The nation knew Curtis best as the vice president of 1929-1933, a strict observer of the formality and dignity of high office and as the country's number one diner-out in his capacity as the social foil for the president.

But the capital recalled Curtis tonight as a master politician who knew which wires to pull and when, and whose relaxation was found most often in a hand of poker or in playing his horse sense against the field at the race track. Curtis was alone except for a servant when he died. He had been suffering from a cold but was up and about the house this morning under a physician's warning to remain indoors.

Funeral arrangements announced this afternoon provided for departure from Washington at 9 p. m. tomorrow and arrival in Topeka, Kan., at 10 o'clock Tuesday. The funeral will be at Topeka Tuesday afternoon and burial will be in the Topeka cemetery.

BLIZZARD IN TEXAS WORST THIS WINTER

The worst blizzard of winter charged across northern Texas last night. In the panhandle temperatures dropped below zero and in the north central portion of the state below the freezing.

During the morning sleet was general over the entire northern section but by mid-morning no sleet or snow was reported.

Cloudy skies threatened to bring sleet, rain, or snow, to all portions of the state. Fair was predicted for Sunday but it was expected to be much colder.

The blizzard had not reached Central Texas at mid-morning but it was expected to blow in last night. Brownsville reported 60. Corpus Christi 48. San Antonio, 46, and Del Rio, Austin, and Galveston, 44; Houston, Palestine, and Port Arthur 42, and El Paso 40.

Pierce Brooks Is To Oppose Allred

DALLAS, Feb. 8.—On a platform which proposes free license plates for passenger automobiles in Texas immediate payment of pensions to Texas men and women 60 years old and above, elimination of wasteful sessions of the Texas legislature and other measures seeking reforms in state government, Pierce Brooks, Dallas business man and real estate broker, Saturday night announced his candidacy for the office of governor of Texas. The announcement was made at a dinner tendered by friends and business associates.

Several states have inaugurated a nominal tax rate for auto licenses but Texas would be the first state to supply the plates free of cost to owners of all passenger cars, the Brooks announcement said. Unfair burdens of direct tax on Texas small car owners for license, gas, and other materials is cited as the reason for the proposed exemption from tax.

In his announcement Mr. Brooks played the present Allred regime at Austin, characterizing it as "that motion picture outfit down there, with its dizzy director." He charged the state administration with "carelessness, inefficiency, extravagance, waste and in certain quarters extreme unfairness."

The jar of gasoline cracked open when it was taken near the heat after being chilled from standing outside. The liquid spread across the floor and was ignited when it touched the kitchen stove.

Clean Up For Centennial Year

Dr. W. P. Lee, city health officer, Friday called upon the citizens of Cisco to "hold an early cleanup week and continue it through the year" in view of the approaching Centennial exposition and the thousands of people who will pass through Cisco during 1936.

The suggestion is that we can't begin too early to show Cisco off to the best advantage. Ciscoans have been wanting to attract people from other states for a long time. Now they have the opportunity. The people will pass through here. It will be up to us to attract their attention to the city so that they will stop and will come again at a later date.

With the thermometer registering below the freezing point much of the time, now seems a little peculiar time to call for the elimination of flies and mosquitoes. But there is very little time to be lost in that connection. Eliminate the breeding places of the two worst insect pests we have to deal with and we eliminate the pests themselves. Before spring comes is a good time to start.

Cisco has an opportunity to show itself off to advantage during Centennial year, but there remains much work to be done.

Georgia Roosevelt Delegation

Georgia is a democratic state. It is announced a sure enough democratic delegation will go to the Philadelphia convention instructed for President Roosevelt. This decision was made by the two senators from Georgia, Judge Archibald Lovett, chairman of the Georgia Roosevelt advisory committee and Marion Allen, who will be the Roosevelt campaign manager in the Goober state.

They have a queer law in Georgia—that is for a state calling itself democratic. A mass meeting has named Talmadge as rival of the President and Talmadge holds the power in his hands as to whether or not a state preferential primary will be held. If the state committee which Talmadge controls, so decides, the preference will be put up to the democratic voters of the state. Otherwise the state committee will select its own delegates without the assistance of the vast body of voters of the commonwealth. United States Senators George and Russell are the two outstanding leaders of the Georgia democracy. After a conference was held in Washington, George said, "We decided to send a Roosevelt delegation to the Philadelphia convention whether or not." It is a 50 to one shot that the Russell-George delegation will be seated if the governor of Georgia carries out his plan to force the state committee to name delegates.

Woodrow Wilson was a man who was wise as well as a man of vision—most of the time. He had a slogan he never deserted as governor of New Jersey: "Let the People Rule."

Uncle Sam to Sell His Cotton

Uncle Sam controls through his various departments of government more than 6,000,000 bales of hold-over cotton and now the order has gone down the line to call bids on 25,000 bales at market or better prices. Oscar Johnson, manager of the AAA cotton producers pool, announced opening of the pool for the sale of millions of bales of long staple cotton. Not more than 50,000 bales of the hold-over cotton will be sold and no one firm can buy more than 5000 bales. No sales will be made below the present price levels, prevailing at points where the cotton is located. There is a Roosevelt recommendation for removal from the statute books of three of the four remaining phases of AAA crop control. Introduction of a bill by "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina to set up a three-man board to take over around 600,000 bales of government controlled cotton and sell to the highest bidder from 20,000 to 25,000 bales weekly with profits going to the original grower. The Smith plan is on the way and its passage may mark the future policy of the government. And the king of France marched up the hill and then he marched down again.

Vice President Handed Personal Flag

No vice president's flag has ever been established by executive order but at various times flags have been used formally by vice presidents. Now the friendly concern of Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson of Virginia has led him to give Vice President John N. Garner a flag with the great seal of the United States. "I consider you should have a personal flag," he wrote Garner on his return from the Orient. A long road from a pioneer cabin to a vice-presidential flag.

ODD FOSSIL FACTORY PAYS WAY
BY SELLING FISH FOSSIL CASTS

BERLIN, Feb. 8.—(UP)—Dr. Bernhard Hauff is said to own the only ichthyosaur factory in the world and to be the only man who sells antediluvian fossils for his livelihood.

Living near the slate quarry at (south central Germany), Dr. Hauff has spent a lifetime preparing and casting petrified outlines found printed in the brutal stone. The origin of these imprints is said to go back a hundred million years, to the black Jura epoch time when man was non-existent. In those days it is believed that the Sarabian Alb, a mountain range in south Germany. Subsequent centuries saw the mud of this sea compressed into slate at one-twentieth of its original volume, enclosing the imprints of ichthyosaurs, primeval fish, and sea flowers.

Through years of work Dr. Hauff has made casts from many kinds of fossils. For 3,000 marks a person may buy ichthyosaurs nine meters long, accompanied in some replicas by their young. His best find at Holzmaden is said to be an ichthyosaur with the skin on a discovery made in 1892. This is understood to have presented the first real image of the primeval beasts.

They are believed to have had a body resembling that of the dolphin, with a tail fin of which the under support was an apparently curved backbone. Further, a boneless back-fin could be distinguished in the cast, which showed a shadow-line depicting clearly the fishlike form of the snouted monster.

Dr. Hauff does not spend his time hunting in the slate quarry. It is worked by a commercial firm, which sells the slate for building.

for a small compensation inform the scientist whenever they come across the dirty, reddish-brown line which usually denotes the confines of a fossil.

The entire piece of stone must be transported to the work shop. It is happens to contain an ichthyosaur, as least three months be put in before the cast of the monster is completed. One small slip of the chisel, and weeks of work, to say nothing of unique specimen, may be lost.

Rheims Chimes Ring
After Long Silence

RHEIMS, Feb. 8.—(UP)—The chimes of Rheims Cathedral, which have been silent for 20 years, are ringing again every 15 minutes of the day and night. The original chimes were destroyed by the Germans in September, 1914, but they have been duplicated and replaced by Rockefeller generosity.

There are 14 bells in all, giving every tone and half-tone of an octave. Each bell can be used to sound at least nine distinct notes, some an octave below and others an octave above, with the result that intricate and difficult melodies can be played on the chimes. Every quarter hour is sounded on the chimes and each hour a melody, the strains of which can be heard all over the city, is played.

The chief bell weighs 2,650 pounds and is an exact copy of the one it replaces in weight, tonality and decoration. It is ornamented with fleur de lys, the symbol of the royal House of France, many members of which were crowned in Rheims Cathedral. It bears an inscription which reads in part: "Like my Sister Chimes, I owe to John D. Rockefeller Junior the privilege of replacing the chimes destroyed by the Germans on September 19, 1914. My name is Jeanne-Françoise like my predecessor of 1745."

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Feb. 8.—Aliens are restricted in some by state laws, sharper in some respects than federal statutes.

The policy of limiting the civil rights of aliens has been growing and has found expression in recent amendments to the state laws. For about two years now, the appropriation bills have prohibited the state's employment of any state government post. This extends to faculty positions in the university and state colleges. Two members of the university staff at Austin, one a Ph.D. in the humanities, the other an internationally-known authority on Latin languages, found it necessary to surrender their posts until they could complete the process of acquiring citizenship in the United States. They were not permanently separated from the staff, but given leaves of absence.

An older law prohibits the ownership of land, under certain prescriptions, by aliens. A third type of legal barrier was found in the old-age pension law; and now is being made the basis of attack on validity of the law as discriminatory. This section does not refer to aliens, to Mexicans or negroes, but tries to give the old-age assistance commission discretionary power to allow state benefits sufficient to meet the living conditions to which the individual has been accustomed.

A proposal, seriously made, that a Centennial monument be erected to the slaves of 1861-65 who remained loyal, has been met in Austin by the proffer of the typical slave of such a classification, as an individual to receive the recognition.

He is "Uncle Nathan" Stokes, 106-year-old slave and bodyguard to the late Major George W. Littlefield of Austin. Stokes died this week, and the friends of Major Littlefield attested their kindness to the former slave in a truly southern recognition of his loyalty and fidelity to his one-time master.

It is suggested that over Uncle Nathan's grave—by the way, on the burial plot of his ex-master—Texas monument be erected to all the many slaves who stood by as faithful to and often protectors and defenders of the beleaguered and defeated southerners.

SWATHWEST TO HAVE OLYMPIC POSSIBILITIES

By RICHARD M. MOREHEAD
Press Staff Correspondent
HOUSTON, Feb. 8.—(U.P.)—The Southwest, where America's outdoor track season will be opened at the Texas Relays on March 28, will have its share of Olympic candidates. Coach Clyde Littlefield of the University of Texas said today.

Jack Torrance, Louisiana State's 400-yard sprinter, will win the 100-yard dash in that event. Littlefield predicted. Jess Petty, Rice Institute star, was conceded an excellent chance to represent this country in the 400-yard dash. Petty holds the conference record with a time of 1.15 seconds as well as a 7.5 inches as well as a national and state interscholastic splitter. A dozen exceptional sprinters will give the Southwest representation at Berlin in dash or relay. The University of Texas has seven youngsters capable of breaking 10 seconds over the 100-yard dash. Fastest of them is "Chick" Wallender whose time in the Texas Relays last year was 10.2 seconds. Reeves up for a shot trial on the Texas varsity. Orr, Rice ace, are almost as good. The two were teammates Schneider Institute two years ago. Littlefield is a member of the national track rules committee and is one of America's best athletes. He has been a member of the committee for a dozen years. He believed the stiffest competition would be from Jesse Owens, high jumper, and Eulace Peacock, 100-yard sprinter. Since Olympic relay must be made up of men who must compete in dash events, he believed the Southwest would be represented on the squad.

Hurdles
Louisiana State's Hardin leads the Southwest hurdling corps. For Wilson, University of Texas, who scored high in 1935 meets, will seek an Olympic berth. Bill Wallace, All-American, will back from Rice, is rated the Southwest conference low-flier but the Olympics do not offer competition in the 220-yard dash.

Allen, Oklahoma Baptist, probably is the finest hurdler ever to come from below. He might not be considered as a Southwest representative, but is expected to make the Olympic team. The 1935 form prevails again. Allen made 14.2 seconds in the 1935 Texas Relays, two-tenths under the world's record. Southwest universities and colleges may produce other Olympic candidates and the list of them are expected here for the Texas Relays. Applications have been prepared yet but advance entries show the event will draw from the entire mid-west. Moore, LSU coach, will referee the meet.

Search Is On For 100-Year-Old Plow

HOUSTON, Feb. 8.—(U.P.)—A state wide search for a 100-year-old plow, needed for impressive ground breaking ceremonies for the million-dollar San Jacinto battle shaft, was instituted today by the San Jacinto Centennial association.

John C. Townes, president of the association, issued the call today, appealing to all Texas to join in the search. The century-old plow would be the central feature of the ceremonies which will attract nationwide attention. Anyone in Texas owning or having information of such a plow should communicate with the San Jacinto Centennial Association in Houston immediately.

The gigantic battle shaft to be erected on the site of San Houston decisive thrust for Texas liberty will be one of the world's most imposing structures. Taller than the Washington Monument, and more beautiful architecturally, the Texas shaft will become renowned overnight.

Museum at Lubbock To Be Started Soon

LUBBOCK, Feb. 8.—(U.P.)—First unit of the West Texas Museum at Texas Technological college will be built south of the college book store. It was decided at a meeting of the Tech Board of Directors recently. Appropriation of $25,000 for building the museum was made by the Centennial Commission of Control last fall.

Present plans for the museum, made at a meeting of the building committee and approved by the Board of Directors, is to construct a basement as the first unit. The West Texas Museum Association, however, hope to obtain additional funds from local contributions before the contracts are let. If these contributions are obtained, a museum building may be constructed.

Final plans for the museum must be approved by the State Board of Control. Work on the unit will start as soon as the contract is let by this Board. President Bradford Knapp of the college stated.

HARRISBURG, Pa. Feb. 7.—(U.P.)—Approximately 5,000 Pennsylvania firms are in line for safety awards from the State Department of Labor and Industry.

Nearly half of the number, according to the department, will receive certificates of honor denoting that they have not had a lost-time accident during 1935. Others will receive certificates of merit indicating that they are making considerable progress in establishment of safety in their establishments.

Ralph M. Bashore, head of the Labor and Industry Department, reported that there were 3,343 fewer industrial accidents in the first 11 months of 1935 as compared to the similar period of 1934.

ART OF HIP SHOOTING, FAMED IN WESTERN NOVELS, STILL IS USED

By RICHARD M. MOREHEAD
United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN, Feb. 8.—(AP)—The art of hip-shooting famed in Western movies and novels, is not dead. Captain J. W. McCormick, head of the Texas Rangers, still shoots without sighting. For match purposes, McCormick might not rate high among the nation's expert pistol shooters; but for practical purposes, his method will do.

"There are a lot of fellows probably who can outshoot me standing still, but to my mind good shooting is like good baseball or good pool playing—you don't think about it," said McCormick. He pulled out a .44 caliber revolver and pointed toward a doorknob 25 feet away.

"See that? Well, if I sighted from here I might not hit it at all. But I believe I can just shoot from the side here and hit it three times out of five."

Poophoops Tricks
McCormick branded as "poppy-cock" many feats of the circus and vaudeville shooting artists, especially in earlier days. Many of them he found employed trickery to execute their hardest stunts.

Soon after the World War, McCormick and M. T. (Lone Wolf) Gonzales, now chief of the Texas public safety department's intelligence division, were assigned to the oil fields near Wichita Falls. They were youngsters in the Texas Rangers and knew something about about shooting. A Wild West Show was in town they went over to see it.

"There was a fellow there," McCormick said, "who pitched up chalk balls—six of 'em—and hit every one with his six-shooter. We knew there wasn't a man alive who could do that every time so after the show Lone Wolf and I went back to see the fellow."

"Just to see if he could, I offered to bet him I could outshoot him if he'd let me load his gun. He admitted he wasn't shootin' lead balls

THE STRANGE CASE OF JULIA CRAIG

by Ned Jones

Copyright NEA 1936

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JULIA CRAIG, secretary to GEORGE WOODFORD, lawyer, is ambitious to become a night club singer. Because of this she quarrels with PETER KEMP, young lawyer who is in love with her. Julia shares an apartment with ANNE SANDERS.

Woodford gives a week's party and sends Julia to come as a singer. Others in the party include LINDA (P. E. Sanders' wife), KEMP, widow, BEGO NASH and ROYAL NASH.

They go to Evergreen Island, where Woodford has a lodge. There Julia meets TOM PAYSON, a gambler who is a night club singer. Woodford and Julia and NASH go hunting and NASH is injured. The party leaves immediately to see him to a doctor.

Julia gets a job singing on TOM PAYSON's night club. She goes to the night club and sings. Woodford and Julia and NASH go hunting and NASH is injured. The party leaves immediately to see him to a doctor.

NASH's body is discovered. A policeman comes to the night club, tells Julia she must go to headquarters for questioning.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXII

As long as Julia Craig lived she would never spend another year such as the one which followed her entrance into that dark building with Dunphy at her side.

"This is Julia Craig," Dunphy said, as if she were some insignificant object he had just taken from his pocket and tossed onto the table.

The police captain nodded. "Sorry to trouble you, Miss Craig. But Mr. Buchen, our prosecuting attorney, has some questions to ask you."

The younger man smiled, but there was nothing in his smile which appealed to Julia as she obeyed his order to be seated at the table.

"You were aboard George Woodford's yacht when it cruised up to his hunting lodge on Evergreen Island, weren't you, Miss Craig?"

"Yes, but—"

"Please, . . ." He held up a meticulously manicured hand. "Just answer my questions, Miss Craig. It will be easier—and quicker. Now, he stopped a moment, giving her that false smile again, "now, you saw Royal NASH?"

"Of course."

"When was the last time you saw him?"

"The evening before he—"

"Was murdered?" asked Buchen quickly.

"I—I wasn't going to say that."

"Of course not. What were you going to say?"

"I saw him the evening before he disappeared from the yacht. They told me he'd stopped off at Condon to take the plane into town."

"Why?"

"There'd been a hunting accident. Mr. NASH was shot in the shoulder, and—"

Julia stopped, confused and helpless. She grew suddenly angry. "Why are you asking me all these questions? Why don't you ask Mr. Woodford? It was his yacht. NASH was his guest, and—"

"I've already talked with George Woodford," said the prosecuting attorney. "In fact, it was his voice that suggested we talk with you."

Julia's mouth opened in astonishment. "Why did he suggest that? Why don't you talk with the rest? With NASH, and Mrs. Joseph—"

"All in good time," interrupted the police captain.

"How long had you known NASH? Before you made this yachting trip?"

"Yes," Julia answered—and then could have slit her own tongue.

"Indeed?" said Buchen, his eyes widening. "How long before?"

Julia bit her lip. Unwittingly she had opened the way for Amy to be dragged into this.

"Come on, Miss Craig. Answer the question. How long before this crime had you known NASH?"

"About a year."

"Ever go out with him, Miss Craig?"

Julia shook her head. "No. . . ."

"That's curious. You knew him a year, yet you'd never been out with him. It was a business relationship, then?"

"No—it wasn't."

"No?" repeated Buchen. "Did he call on you, then, at your apartment?"

"Yes," Julia said quickly. "That's where I saw him."

THE captain and prosecutor exchanged significant glances, as if to say, "Now we're getting somewhere!" Julia could feel little beads of perspiration on her forehead. Her hand trembled violently as she raised it to brush them away. The room seemed to be swaying.

"I can't stand this," she told them suddenly, her voice breaking. "It's not fair! It's not fair! I tell you I—"

"There, there, Miss Craig. Just one more question, then that's all. Did anything happen at Evergreen Island that was at all curious? I mean, beyond the hunting accident?"

"There, there, Miss Craig. Just one more question, then that's all. Did anything happen at Evergreen Island that was at all curious? I mean, beyond the hunting accident?"

He talked with Woodford. Julia told herself. He knew about Payson. "Yes," she faltered. "A man tried to get into the radio room of the boat."

"Oh, yes. Who was he?"

"I—I don't know." She stood up uncertainly. "That's all, now?"

Buchen bowed slightly. "For the present, yes. But I must ask you to remain here as a material witness."

"You mean I—I have to stay in jail?" She looked from one to the other, horrified.

"It's not so bad," the police captain said. "I'll see that the matron, Mrs. Barton—"

"But isn't there any way you can fix it so I don't have to stay?"

Buchen nodded, told her that she might be released on bail. He named a figure which to Julia seemed fantastic.

"But I haven't that much money! I—I couldn't possibly raise it."

now probably are those who patrol the Western border between Texas and Mexico. McCormick declined to designate the Ranger he believed could shoot best. At least one is classified as an expert rifle shot also.

"Not long ago," he said, "some of the boys took out a machine gun. It wasn't long before they could roll a tin can down the road with it."

Many crack shots, McCormick said, aren't effective in close quarters. "It's just like throwin' a baseball; you don't sight before you throw."

Cisco Daily News want ads are a good investment.

Mr. Buchen shrugged. The police captain bent over a paper on his desk. Then the door opened, and a black-garbed elderly woman entered. Julia felt the room whirling faster than ever. She knew that her knees were failing her—and then, quite suddenly, she knew nothing at all. . . .

WHEN she opened her eyes she lay on a strange, narrow bed in a small room which contained, besides, a bureau and a chair—and one small framed lithograph on the wall. She lay there numb in body and mind, too dazed to review the swift chain of events which had put her in this place, and too weary to think of getting out.

She looked at the door, surprised that it held no bars. But it was obviously heavy, and the lock was competent. As she looked at it the knob turned, the door opened, and she saw the woman in black. Behind her was Tom Payson.

"Julia! . . ." He hurried to the side of the bed and lifted her to a sitting posture. "Julia, I just now heard what happened, and came down at once. Let's get out of here as quickly as you can manage."

She looked at him vaguely. "I can't, Tom. They're—they're holding me as a material witness, I think they called it."

"But I've put up bail. You're free to leave. All you need do is be available."

"Tom, you can't do that," Julia protested.

"But I have done it! Come on, Julia, I've my car outside."

She was wordless all the way to the apartment, and Payson did not ask questions. He seemed to know that Julia had answered enough questions for one night. But he insisted on going upstairs with her.

In the hall of Julia's floor they encountered Peter Kemp. His tie was awry and his eyes were wide with excitement. "Julia, I was just going down to see what had happened." He stopped, looked at Payson. "Is Miss Craig out of bail?"

Payson nodded. "It's a rotten trick. They had no right to take her down there like that, and she's no more a material witness than you are."

"That's Buchen. He's out to get somewhere politically in this town." Kemp turned to Julia again. "I'm going to defend you, Julia, if they try to point it at you."

"But look here," said Payson suddenly. "I was going to have my own lawyer handle it. She couldn't do better, you know. It's G. Williams Miller."

Peter Kemp looked at Julia. "It's nice of you, Tom."

Julia said, "But I've known Peter a long time, and I have confidence in him. Even more confidence than I'd have in your lawyer."

She stopped, leaned wearily against the wall with her head in her hands. "Peter . . . do you think it really will be bad for me?"

SAINT'S TOMB IS LOOTED BY BANDIT BAND

VIENNA, Feb. 7.—(AP)—The tomb of St. Josephat, a Roman Catholic saint, in Vienna's St. Barbara Church, has been pillaged.

The glass shrine on the altar, containing the relics of the saint, was broken by burglars, and a heavy golden chain with a cross, the pious donation of Archduke William was stolen.

Josephat was a Catholic Basilian among who became archbishop of Polock, Eastern Poland, in the early 11th Century.

In 1623 he was killed by rival Russian Pravoslavians priests in a fight between Catholic Ukrainians and Pravoslav Russians.

Shrine of Ukrainians
The tomb of Josephat, who was beatified 20 years after his death and subsequently canonized, soon became the center of pilgrimage for Roman Catholic Ukrainians.

During the war between Sweden and Russia in the late 17th Century which largely was fought in that region, the bones of the saint had frequently to change their resting place to thwart thieves and desecrators.

After the war they were restored to their original shrine in Polock, but did not remain there long. When Czar Peter the Great, in his efforts to suppress an uprising of the Ukrainians, threatened to burn the relics of their national saint, a Prince Radzivil secretly transferred them in 1705 to Biala, where he founded a Basilian monastery and a church in honor of the saint.

Placed in Silver Casket
There they rested for more than a century and a half in a beautiful silver coffin under the main altar.

The coffin disappeared during the Polish uprising against the czars in the early 60s of the last century.

In 1917 when the district was occupied by Austrian troops an old peasant appeared before the Austrian commander and told him that the saint's bones had been immured under the Biala church.

There they were found, but without the silver casket, and Emperor Charles had them transferred to St. Barbara's Church in Vienna.

A wealthy Canadian family of French extraction by which the saint was held in particular veneration provided the new silver and glass case, and Archduke William, who was a pretender to the throne of Ukraine, gave the golden chain and cross which were stolen so recently.

Motorist's End Run Fools Bandit Line

TOLEDO, Feb. 7.—(AP)—W. H. Palmer has a simple treatment for bandits who try to block highways with autos to hold people up.

Four tried it with Palmer. As one of the number hopped on his running board he swerved his car, brushing off the molester. He then veered his machine around the "blockade" car and sped on. He looked back to see the other three astonished, pick up their jolted companions from the ditch.

Brand Display Is Planned at Tech

LUBBOCK, Feb. 6.—(U.P.)—A display of 500 cattle brands for the Texas Centennial will be in charge of Gus L. Ford, head of the history department at Texas Technological College who has been granted a leave of absence during the spring semester in order to gather data and materials for the exhibit. Ford was named history supervisor of the cattle brand exhibit last July by the Centennial Commission. The display will consist of plaques with lettered brand designs in burnt color against a contrasting back and pea pods 10 inches long.

ground, several branded cow-hides maps and charts showing the development of the cattle industry in Texas from colonial days to the present, and portraits of cattle barons famous during the last 100 years. A protective rail for the exhibit hall will be made of branding irons.

The survey to be made by Ford in the next few months will include research in libraries of the State to obtain unpublished material dealing with cattle brands, their origin, ownership, and extent of use, and collections of cattle brands in various parts of the state particularly San Angelo, San Antonio, El Paso, Abilene, and Plainview. He plans to send 500 letters to persons throughout the state asking them to nominate brands for the display.

"Successful preparation of such a display necessarily will depend on the assistance of numerous individuals throughout the state who are familiar with the cattle industry and with cattle brands," Ford said. He added that many have written him already, offering assistance.

Ford will resume his teaching duties during the summer session.

ASKS ELECTION
AS CONSTABLE

G. C. Daniels Saturday announced that he will be a candidate for constable in precinct six, which office he now holds, subject to action in the July democratic primary. The Daily News is authorized to publish the following statement from him:

"I announce myself as a candidate for constable of precinct number six, subject to the democratic primary in July. I am now serving the unexpired term of J. B. Hicks, having been appointed by the commissioners court when he resigned. "I have lived in Eastland county over 50 years, 17 years in Cisco. My record is before you. I have had four years experience as a peace officer and I feel I am qualified for the place and if the voters see fit to elect me to the office, I assure my best efforts will be to serve the people. I earnestly ask for your vote and influence."

Truant Island Is Nailed Upon Map

SEATTLE, Feb. 8.—(U.P.)—Mysterious and temperamental Bogoslof Island, truant of the Bering Sea, literally has been "nailed down" by the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey.

After many years of uncertainty, during which time mariners have reported the island as being located at widely scattered points, a scientific survey, conducted recently, placed volcanic Bogoslof in an exact position 25 miles north of Unalak Island of the Aleutian archipelago.

Bleak Bogoslof, which has engaged in violent volcanic activity in times past, has been the bane of cartographers, seeming to change its position. Accurate location of the seldom-visited island now has been determined, and if a future survey is made, cartographers will know if Bogoslof is a "shifting" island.

The present position of Bogoslof places it about two miles south and a little west of the position in which it was formerly, unofficially, charted.

Violent volcanic disturbances have wrecked Bogoslof at least three times—in 1883, 1906 and 1910. There has been no intense activity since 1923.

TEXAS LOOKS TO EXHIBITION OF RESOURCES

Texas is looking forward to its natural resources display at the Dallas Central Exposition of the Texas Centennial, according to Charles J. Kleiner of Cisco member of the state natural resources board.

Kleiner was named a member of the board recently after being nominated by the Cisco Chamber of Commerce.

Kleiner pointed to a recent article in which John M. Spellman, director general of the exhibit, was quoted as saying that "it is intended to make the exhibit of natural resources as complete as possible and truly representative in all departments."

"The exhibit will, of course, have a high educational value and will also afford an unparalleled opportunity for impressing upon the world that Texas possesses a great treasure house of natural resources awaiting development and providing a foundation for a great era of industrial progress and growth which it is possible to build upon this solid foundation and which should follow in the wake of our great Centennial Exposition."

Varied Resources
"It is widely known in a general sort of way that the natural resources of Texas are more numerous and varied and potentially valuable than the natural resources of any other state. Some of these resources have been and are being developed to the great social and financial advantage of the people of Texas. Most of them are in their original condition awaiting management, capital and labor to make them worth what they are destined to be to society generally and the people of Texas, especially."

"Some of the natural resources of Texas are peculiar to Texas alone. Many of them are here in better shape for development than similar resources elsewhere. Some of the things that are to be developed from the natural resources of Texas can be supplied by no other part of the world so far as has been disclosed from explorations and investigations.

"The great economic changes that have come over the world in the past decade have indicated and unmistakably indicate now that the development of natural resources where they are to be found is to be the solution of many vexing problems in the field of economics. Transportation, for one thing, will probably never again exist in manner and form to make it economically advisable to carry raw materials far for fabrication and to make long hauls of finished products. This indicated the need for the establishment of industries in logical places where they will best serve the people who produce their materials and those who require their products. It points, for instance, to the fabrication of the cotton crop of Texas largely within the borders of Texas using the fuels and labor and power that are here available and saving long hauls for raw materials and finished goods.

Close to Top
"Farms, ranges and forests were the first and most obvious natural resources of Texas to attract and hold the homeseekers who began to arrive in Texas a hundred years ago. With the addition of petroleum and one or two other products of the mines these resources until now have constituted the materials with which Texas has made progress. Even with this limited use of the state's natural resources, it is probably true as has been estimated that Texas produces as much as $150,000,000 of surplus wealth each year that is largely available for investment in the development of Texas resources."

"The value of Texas farm crops—as crops—is in excess of $1,000,000,000 a year—far more than crops of any other state are worth. Texas stands close to the top of the list of states in relative production of petroleum and its products. Texas is today producing approximately 60 per cent of the production of sulphur in the world.

"Against this short list of developed natural resources of Texas and the amazing values that they produce may be set a schedule of undeveloped resources, many of which offer similar opportunities for serving society with needed materials and building industries to great profit of the people of Texas.

Varied Deposits
"Under the heading of metallic minerals, for instance, Texas has gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, platinum, uranium, iridium, titanium, (Fergusonite, carnotite and other radium ores), cinnabar (from which quicksilver is extracted), manganese, tungsten, wolframite, hubertite, limonite, hematite, and other iron ores, tin, molybdenum, etc.

"Under non-metallic minerals can be mentioned petroleum, petroleum gases, lignite, bituminous coal, asphalt (sulphur, salt, potash, borax, mica, gypsum, asbestos, nitre, celestine, phosphate, alum, ochre, silica, granite, limestone, marble and anhydrite and practically every known variety of clay that is found anywhere in the world, besides some clays that as yet have not been found outside of Texas."
