Reagan proposes regular arms meetings

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

UNITED NATIONS — President Reagan, declaring he is ready for "constructive negotiations" with the Soviet Union, today proposed regular meetings between senior experts from the two sides to reduce tensions and the threat of war.

"We recognize that there is no sane alternative to negotiations on arms control and other issues between our two nations," Reagan said in a prepared speech to the U.N. General Assembly.

He said these experts and other senior U.S. and Soviet officials could set as their goal a "road map" to guide relations between the two superpowers over the next 20 years.

"We need to extend the arms control process, to build a bigger umbrella under which it can operate," Reagan said.

The president, who once condemned the Soviets as an "evil empire," today said that "while there will still be clear differences, there is every reason why we should do all that is possible to shorten that distance."

A senior U.S. official who demanded anonymity said one measure Reagan had in mind is to use the recently improved "hotline" between Washington and Moscow to prevent war by miscalculation.

"America has repaired its strength," Reagan said. "We have reinvigorated our alliances and friendships. We are ready for constructive negotiations with the Soviet Union."

In a major step in that direction, Reagan will meet at the White House for three or four hours Friday with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

As for further meetings between officials of the two sides, Reagan said such regular sessions could be conducted between Cabinet-level officers and other top officials "on the whole agenda of issues before us, including the problem of needless obstacles to understanding."

He said such talks could consider exchanges of weapons-development and arms-purchase plans.

Reagan also said ways should be found by next spring to have Soviet and U.S. observers at each other's nuclear test sites.

The president called for negotiations to begin in Vienna by early 1985 on ways to prevent the militarization of space.

Teen found badly beaten

From Staff and Wire Reports

LAKE CITY, Colo. — More than three months after he disappeared near Pagosa Springs, a 15-year-old Andrews, Texas, youth has been found badly beaten and two men are being sought in the case, a Hinsdale County undersheriff said late Sunday.

Undersheriff Steve Greene said the youth found is believed to be Chris Harvey. He had disappeared July 11 in the San Juan National Forest after leaving his family's summer home in Hinsdale County for a short hike.

"Based on what the parents have told us, we think it's the same kid," he said Sunday night.

Greene declined to speculate on the circumstances of the youth's disappearance.

Harvey was found Thursday about four miles up Trail Gulch Road, near Gypsum in western Colorado, suffering from severe head injuries that he apparently had suffered during a beating, Greene said.

Harvey was taken to a hospital in Glenwood Springs, then transferred by helicopter to St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Junction.

Harvey was listed in critical condition Sunday night.

In a prepared release, the Eagle County Sheriff's office said that two men, in their 20s, were being sought in connection with the case. The sheriff's office said the two men were believed to be driving a late-model pickup truck.

After Harvey disappeared on July 11, officials from Hinsdale, Archuleta and Mineral counties mounted an intensive ground and air search for several days in south-central Colorado, but found no trace of youth.

Harvey's parents, Jim and Judy Harvey, and other family members made repeated trips to Colorado to conduct individual searches in the area.

COLLEYVILLE, Texas — Air traffic controllers spent about 10 minutes relaying instructions to a woman forced to pilot an airplane after her husband fainted at the controls, but she lost control and the plane crashed, killing the couple, authorities said.

Icey Matthews, 62, and her husband, Dr. David Matthews, 59, of Sherman died in the crash Saturday of the single-engine Cessna 210, officials said.

Lebanese leader optimistic about troop withdr

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Prime Minister Rashid Karami today said the United States, still recovering from the car-bomb attack at its embassy compound, has brought "good tidings" of a breakthrough on arranging an Israeli troop withdrawal from Lebanon.

The Syrian-backed premier indicated that his optimism stemmed from weekend talks with U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy, who reportedly met today with Syrian President Hafez Assad in Damascus. Also today, the group that claimed responsibility for last week's embassy bombing was reported to have threatened another blow against U.S. interests.

Israel, meanwhile, reported that two Israelis amd six guerrillas were killed in a series of six attacks on its troops in south Lebanon, and three U.S. warships cruised off the Lebanese coast.

Karami, in a statement published today in Lebanese newspapers, said the Israeli occupation of the southern third of Lebanon "will not last long."

"I am confident of what I am saying," he said. "It has been detected from the talks with Mr. Murphy that he was bringing the good tidings of an early breakthrough." Karami did not elaborate.

Murphy went to Beirut last week to supervise the investigation into the car bombing Thursday that killed two Americans and wounded 20, and then went on to Damascus.

The official Syrian Arab news agency announced today's meeting with Assad, but gave no details of their discussion.

The leftist Beirut newspaper As Safir quoted an anonymous caller who claimed to speak for Islamic Holy War as telling the paper by telephone Sunday night: "A big operation will be carried out against American interests soon to avenge the martyrs of Sohmor." Islamic Holy Was, a shadowy organization believed to be made up of radical Shiite Moslems loyal to Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, claimed responsibility earlier for the embassy bombing.

The Lebanese government has held Israel responsible for what it called a massacre in the southern Lebanese village of Sohmor last Thursday. Israeli-backed militiamen killed 13 Shiite Moslem villagers after the militia and Israeli soldiers rounded up village men to question them about a guerrilla ambush that killed four militiamen.

In New York, Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Sunday that Israel planned to ask the United States to participate in negotiations for an Israeli withdrawal from south Lebanon. Shamir planned to meet with President Reagan and U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz.

Shamir said Israel no longer would insist that withdrawal arrangements entail a simultaneous pullout of Syrian troops.

Shultz said earlier that the United States was prepared to launch a new diplomatic effort in the Middle East and would welcome a "constructive role" by the Soviet [illegible] the strongest Soviet [illegible] the Middle East.

Three U.S. warships carrying combat Marines cruised off the coast of Lebanon on Sunday, among them the USS Shreveport, one of three U.S. naval craft involved in mine-hunting on the Red Sea this month.

Hurricane headed toward Baja California

By ISAAC A. LEVI
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY — After meandering off Mexico's Pacific coast for a week, Hurricane Norbert was reported heading today toward the Baja California peninsula.

Metereologists described the storm as "big and ugly" and warned ships and planes to use caution while navigating in the area.

"If it keeps on its present course it may brush the tip of Baja California and then run parallel to the peninsula," National Weather Bureau meteorologist Martin Leon said Sunday night.

Norbert, which began as a tropical depression Sept. 14, became a full-fledged hurricane on Sept. 17, moving along an erratic course between Baja California peninsula and the Mexican mainland.

"It is definitely big and ugly and has a very high intensity," said Leon. He said that after keeping on a northeasterly course all morning Sunday, Norbert suddenly veered in the afternoon, moving steadily northwest at 6 mph.

Leon said Norbert, at 8 p.m. EDT Sunday, was about 263 miles southeast of San Jose de los Cabos in the state of Baja California Sur, packing sustained winds of 125 mph, with gusts of up to 144 mph.

In Manzatlan, Ignacio India, duty operator at the government's Maritime Radio Station, said repeated bulletins "warned shipping to exercise extreme caution" in the area along the coasts of Baja California and a stretch between Jalicsco state and Sinaloa state farther north.

Norbert started moving towards the mainland one day after tropical storm Odille pummeled the reports of Acauplco and Ixtapa-Zihuatanejo before it desintegrated at dawn Sunday.

Hotel operators in the area said few foreign tourists have since a series of tropical storms started hitting the area more than a month ago.

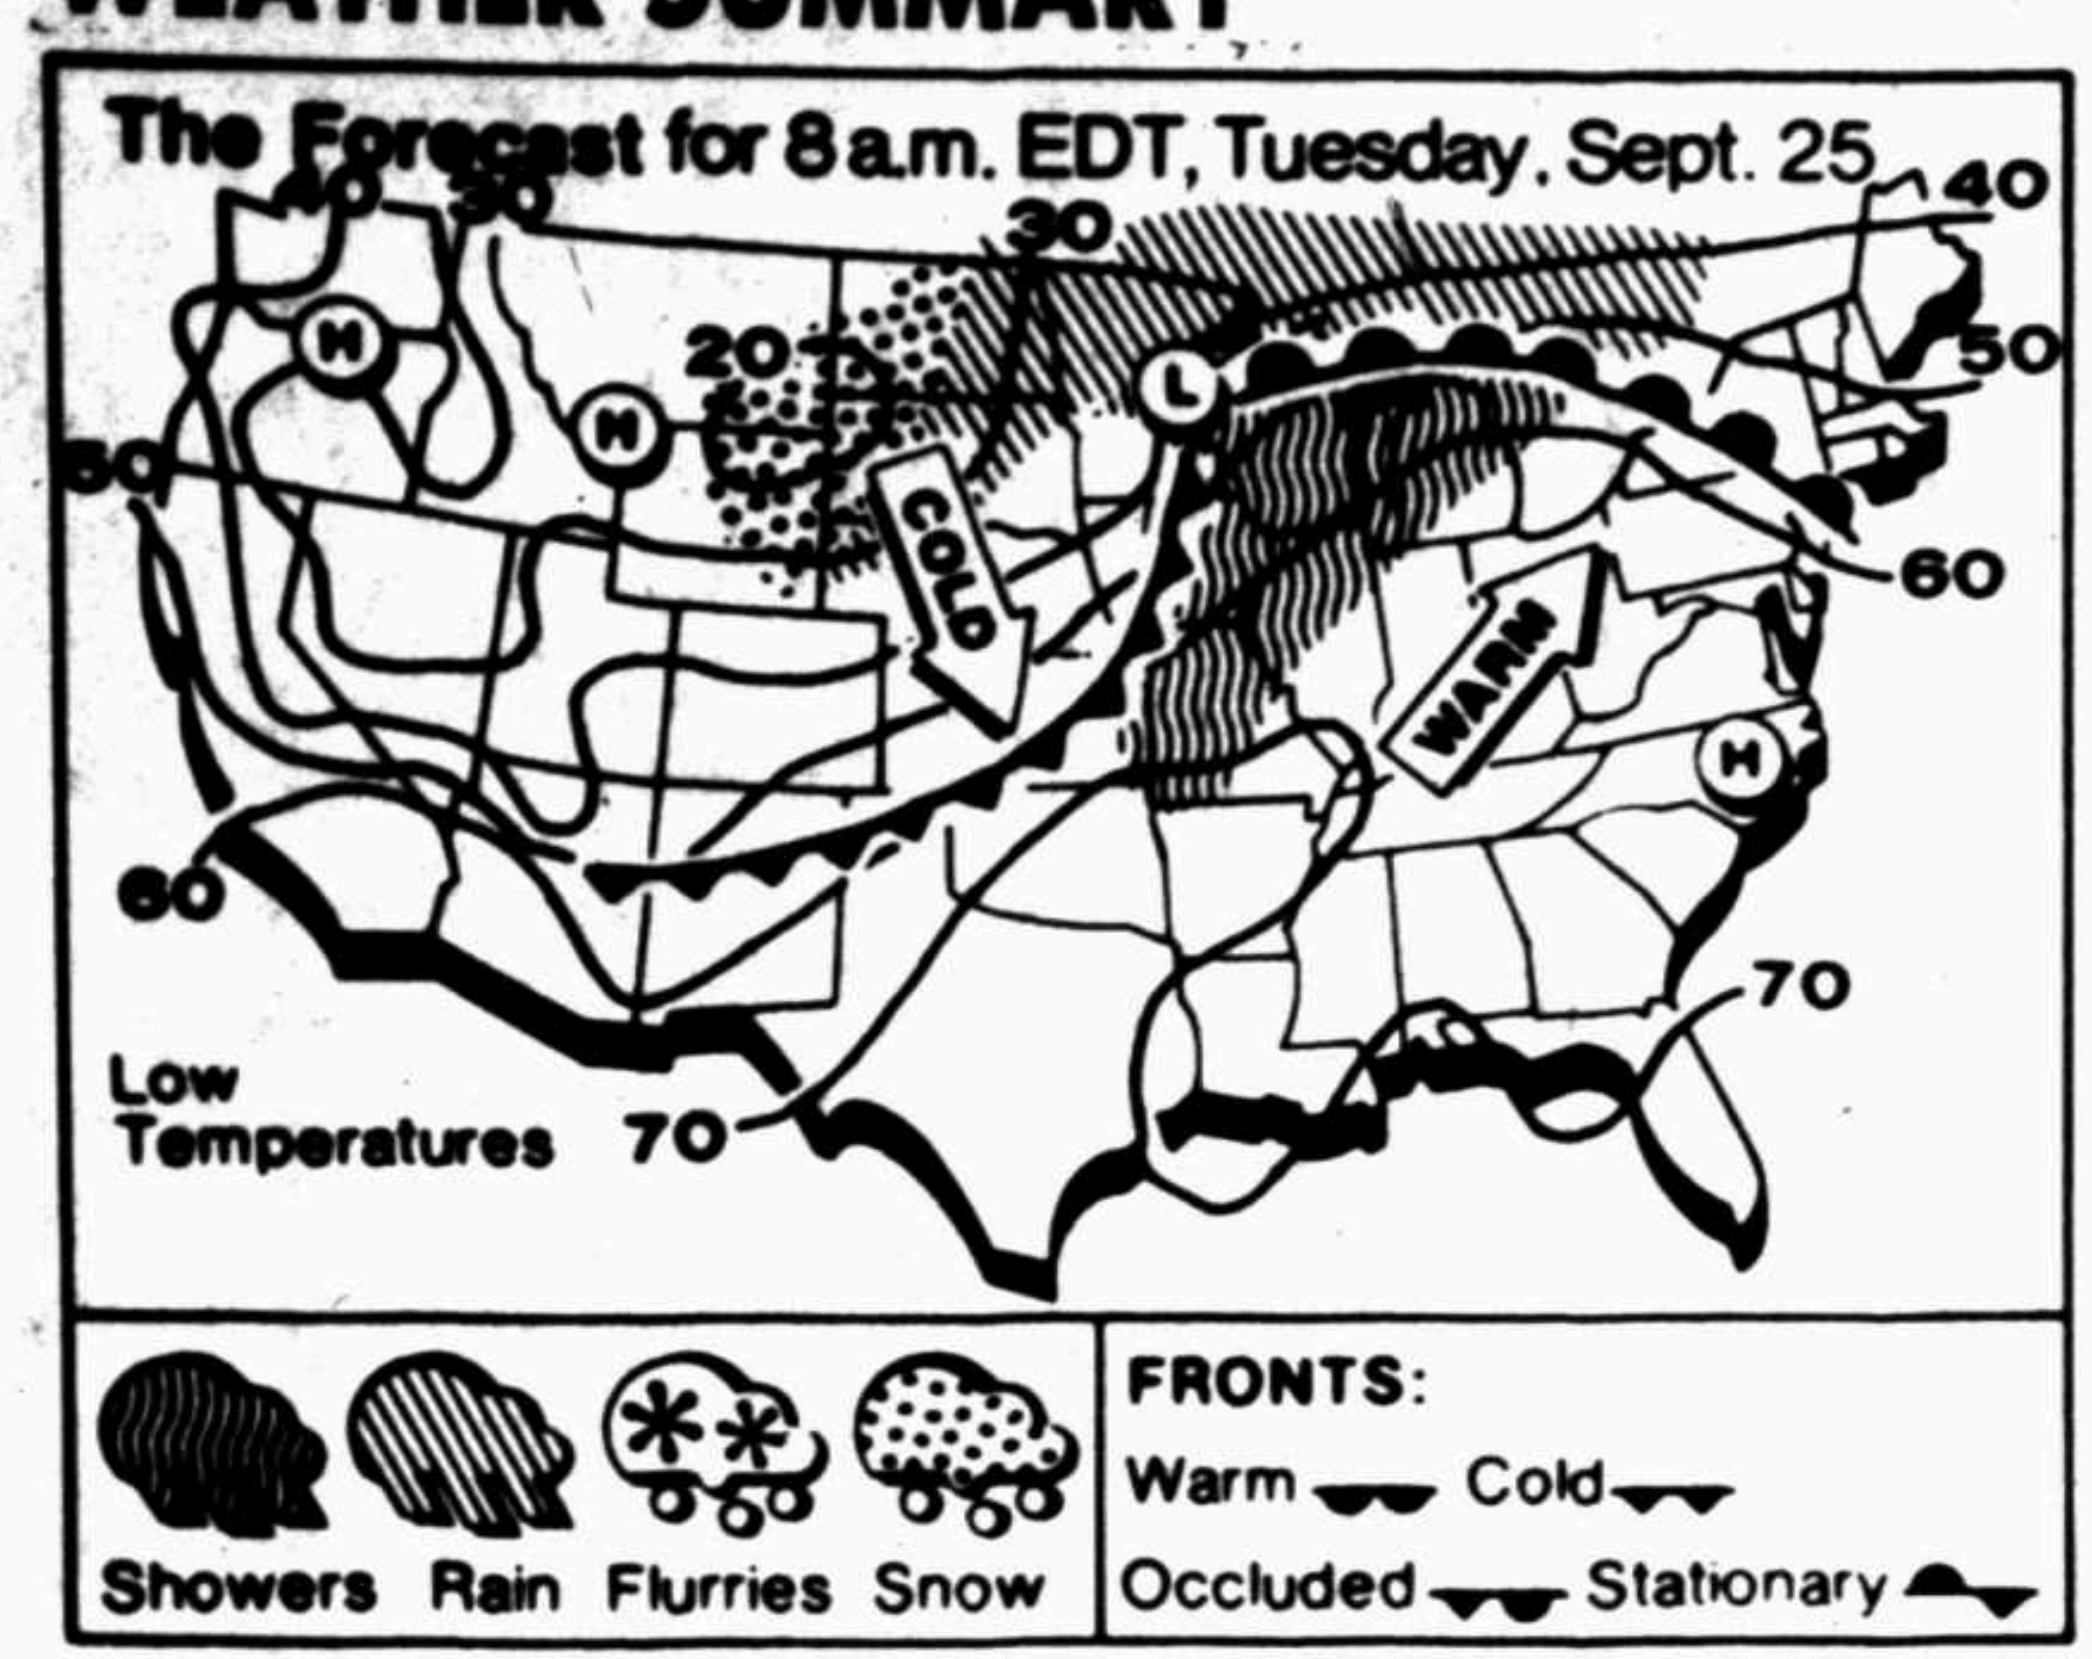
WEATHER SUMMARY



National Weather Service NOAA U.S. Dept of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers Tuesday for the Great Lakes and northern Plains, with snow predicted for portions of Montana, Wyoming and the Dakotas.

Partly cloudy skies expected in Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies tonight will become partly cloudy Tuesday, predicts the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for a low tonight in the upper 60s with southerly winds at 5 to 15 mph. Tuesday's high will be near 90 with winds increasing to less than 20 mph and gusty.

The 88-degree high reached Sunday was 11 degrees below the record set in 1933. The overnight low was a warm 66 compared to the record of 49 set in 1975.

STATE

Widely scattered showers were reported across a vast area of South Texas and in portions of Southeast Texas today.

The National Weather Service said the showers would remain in the areas during the day and today and other showers would likely develop tonight.

The showers were reported in an area extending from San Angelo to Sanderson to Del Rio. Other showers were reported in the Beaumont-Port Arthur area of Southeast Texas and offshore in the Gulf of Mexico south and southeast of Galveston.

A high pressure system kep skies mostly clear over the Panhandle and South Plains and partly cloudy to cloudy around the rest of the state. Winds were light, mostly 5-15 mph, form the south to southeast over most of Texas.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s and 80s over the eastern two-thirds of the state and slightly cooler over much of West Texas. Readings dipped into the 50s in the mountains of Southwest Texas. Extremes ranged from a chilly 54 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 81 at both Galveston and Corpus Christi.

NATION

An autumn storm dumped from four to 10 inches of snow on parts of Montana and North Dakota early today as gusting winds built drifts along fences and robbed autumn of its first two days.

Winter doesn't arrive until Dec. 21, but tell that to the people of the northern Plains and Rockies where storm warnings were posted, travelers advisories issued, and stockmen in Utah and northwest Colorado were advised to shelter their herds from cold rain mixed with snow, driven by gusty winds.

Four inches of snow fell at Paradise and Logan Canyon in Utah. Roads in Cache Valley were slushy, and many motorists were caught off guard by icy roads across northern Utah, the weather service said.

Meanwhile, thunderstorms lingered across the eastern portion of the Dakotas and Minnesota as well as over central Utah.

Casper, Wyo., set a record low temperature for Sunday, reaching 25 degrees before midnight. The old record was 28 set in 1965. The 25 degrees was also a record for today, lower than the 26 in 1965.

Reagan focuses on diplomacy

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

UNITED NATIONS — President Reagan, denouncing the "despicable act of barbarism" in the attack last week on the U.S. embassy in Beirut, hinted today that the United States was ready to begin a new round of diplomacy aimed at bringing peace to Lebanon.

"All of Lebanon's friends should work together to help end this nightmare," Reagan said in remarks prepared for delivery to the 39th session of the United Nations General Assembly.

Reagan, however, stopped short of saying directly that the United States was going to respond positively to pleas by Israel for assistance in pulling Israeli troops out of Lebanon.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz had said Sunday that although the administration had left Lebanon alone since the collapse of the U.S.-brokered 1983 troop withdrawal agreement, the time might be right for another round.

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy reportedly met today in Damascus with Syrian President Hafez Assad after meeting with Lebanon's prime minister, Rashid Karami, over the weekend. Syria torpedoed a 1983 accord for pulling all foreign troops out of Lebanon.

Reagan said today that the U.S.-brokered 1983 agreement, "if implemented, could have led to the full withdrawal of Israeli forces in the context of the withdrawal of all foreign forces."

"The tragedy of Lebanon has not ended," he said. "Only last week, a despicable act of barbarism by some who are unfit to associate with humankind reminded us once again that Lebanon continues to suffer.

"This agreement was blocked and the long agony of the Lebanese continued. Thousands to people are still kept from their homes by continued violence and are refugees in their own country."

Reagan also said "the time is bound to come" when Israel reaches peace with other Arab neighbors as it has with Egypt.

The Israeli-Egypt peace agreement shows " that the negotiating process brings results when the parties commit themselves to it," he said.

Reagan also alluded to attempts by Arab hardliners to boot Israel out of the United Nations. "If universality is ignored, if nations are expelled illegally, then the U.N. itself cannot be expected to succeed," Reagan said.

On Sunday, Shultz hinted that in addition to direct talks with Syria on Lebanon, the United States might also make an approach through the Soviet Union, which has close ties with Syria.

Shultz will meet in New York with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on Wednesday. Gromyko will go to Washington for a meeting with President Reagan on Friday.

Shultz said the United States would welcome "a constructive role" by the Soviet Union.

"We are always glad to have a constructive role played by anybody," Shultz said. "I think the Middle East is a subject that is very important to both countries."

A senior White House official said the visit of Assistant Secretary Murphy to the Middle East was planned even before the bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex in Beirut last week. "The potential for us to assist is there," he said.

Murphy was expected to visit other Middle East capitals after his stops in Beirut and Damascus.

Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who was prime minister in the previous Israeli government, has proposed the new American role. He has said he wants Washington to arrange with Syria for the withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon.

Israel is dropping its previous demand that Syrian troops withdraw at the same time, but it still wants an understanding with Syria that Palestinian guerrillas will be barred from moving into the south when Israeli forces leave.

Shamir told reporters here Sunday night that Israel "will not ask for a miitary presence of the United States, but only for a diplomatic activity and a diplomatic activity is not dangerous. ..."

Meanwhile, Reagan told reporters that he didn't think there was any negligence was involved in the terrorist bombing of the embassy annex in East Beirut, even though only about 75 percent of the security measures had been completed.

"We moved into that building because it represented more safety than the one we were in," he said.

While he said some security work still needed to be done, "Anyone that has ever had their kitchen done over knows that it never gets done as soon as you wish it would."

The U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Jeane Kirkpatrick, said on ABC-TV Sunday that she wouldn't rule out retaliation for the embassy bombing because "I think it is perfectly clear that we cannot continue to accept such attacks on Americans and American people."

She said it is generally known who carried out the attack but "we have to know which Lebanese and Syrians and Iranians and Libyans" before retaliation is possible.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said if reprisals are planned, the United States should "do it swiftly, surely and talk about it afterward." He said American officials should first beef up security and then "go after the terrorists."

David Aaron, a foreign policy adviser to Democratidc presidential hopeful Walter Mondale, said the bombing "underscores that we have had four years of policy failure in the Middle East under President Reagan."

Austerity plan implemented in Israel

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM — Israel's new coalition government has unveiled a package of taxes and austerity measures, including higher food prices that took effect today, in a move to solve some of the country's severe economic problems.

The steps include a one-time tax on cars, boats and aircraft, as well as on business inventories, Finance Minister Yitzhak Modai told a news conference Sunday.

Subsidies on consumer items were cut, forcing up the price of basic foods by as much as 50 percent. Some products and services have been subsidized by up to 150 percent of the price charged consumers, making bread (25 cents a loaf) and transportation (15 cents for a bus ride) among the cheapest in the world.

Israel Television said the price hikes would push up the price of frozen chicken to the equivalent of 97 cents a pound, and cooking oil to $1.63 a bottle.

It said the new property taxes would be 1.5 percent to 2 percent of the value of goods.

The government also eliminated fuel subsidies, raising prices an average 30 percent to real market costs. Gasoline jumped to $2.65 a gallon, and the television report said stations were swamped by drivers trying to fill their tanks before the increase took effect.

Israel Radio said the higher fuel prices were expected to lead to a rise in water and electricity rates.

The measures were disclosed two weeks before Prime Minister Shimon Peres was to make his first trip to the United States as leader of a new bipartisan government, reportedly to seek additional financial help from the Reagan administration.

Peres was scheduled to leave Oct. 6 for a six-day visit and to meet President Reagan on Oct. 9.

Modai said the measures would cause a short-term jump in inflation, now heading toward an annual rate of 400 percent.

The Maariv newspaper today quoted Finance Ministry officials as saying the annual rate of inflation will increase from 400 percent to 800 percent as a result of the cuts in subsidies.

Lebanese scene sees changes

JEBLAI, Lebanon — Along the coastal road, checkpoints that once were manned by Israeli soldiers are now guarded by militiamen of the South Lebanese Army, an Israeli-trained militia composed mainly of Druse and Christians.

Israeli army vehicles had made the road a busy one. Now they are hardly seen. The Israeli occupiers of southern Lebanon, who became targets of almost daily ambushes or bombings, are taking cover when they can.

The lower profile adopted by the Israelis seemed to account for reports that fewer Israeli soldiers were being killed and injured recently in guerrilla attacks, while more local militiamen were falling victim.

It has become increasingly difficult to cross into the south, both for the Lebanese who live or have relatives or business there and for foreign reporters trying to look at Israel's occupation of the land, which it invaded in June 1982 to dislodge Palestinian guerrillas and stop terrorist attacks on its northern borders.

A recent trip by four foreign correspondents was abruptly ended when an Israeli captain ordered them ejected from the occupied region. The reporters were escorted out by armed guard.

Between the reporters' entry — achieved after difficulty — into the occupation zone and their ouster, they traveled almost the entire perimeter of the territory, south from Sidon on the sea, along the border with Israel and up to the frontline between Israeli and Syrian troops in eastern Lebanon.

Most of the Israelis, 17,000 of them by the count of one foreign official, are inside camps surrounded by high earth mounds.

They sit inside sandbagged posts atop the mounds, watching with their machine guns trained on cars coming down the road. When a car approaches these posts at night, glaring lights are suddenly flashed on the driver and passengers, then quickly put out again.

The few Israelis found in the open make clear they would rather be home. One Israeli soldier who said he had studied at Sheboygan, Wis., was asked if Lebanon wasn't a lot different from Sheboygan.

"It's a lot different from Israel, too," he replied, with a bitter edge to his voice. Like other soldiers, he spoke on condition he not be named.

Another Israeli soldier said those of his colleagues still moving about were getting hit "every day."

REAGAN

"Spheres of influence are a thing of the past," Reagan said. "Differences between American and Soviet interests are not. The objectives of this political dialogue will be to help avoid miscalculation. ..."

In Reagan's 44 months in the White House, U.S.-Soviet relations have been strained to their worst point in more than two decades.

Negotiations to reduce nuclear and other weapons are in suspension; cultural and scientific agreements have lapsed, and just a year ago Gromyko chose not to attend the U.N. session when he was barred from flying here in a Soviet Aeroflot plane.

But Reagan told the United Nations he is committed to "redoubling" his efforts to attain a ban on chemical weapons, a cutback in U.S. and Soviet ground troops in Central Europe and a treaty reversing the growth of nuclear weapons stockpiles.

"We need to find ways to reduce — and eventually to eliminate — the threat and use of force in solving international disputes," he said.

The president also told delagates to the General Assembly:

"Today, let us dare to speak of a future that is bright and hopeful and can be ours, if only we seek it. I believe that the future is far nearer than most of us would dare to hope."

Reagan foreshadowed his speech with brief remarks Sunday night at a reception he gave for visiting foreign officials. He said, "My country will not shirk the hard work or ration its good will in our effort to deal with our differences peacefully. And we will ask other nations to make the same commitment."

While Reagan has taken a conciliatory stance occasionally in the past, a hard-line approach to the Soviet Union has colored U.S. foreign policy in his nearly four years in the White House.

Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale has sharply criticized that approach as unrealistic and "very, vary dangerous" and proposed a temporary suspension of nuclear weapons tests anda negotiated freeze to revive the stalemated arms control talks.

Shultz and other key Reagan advisers are careful not to claim the president's olive branch can produce instant agreements or even an immediate resumption of negotiations. "It's a gradual process," Shultz told reporters Sunday night.

But they said the speech could help improve the atmosphere and make it easier for the Soviets to return to the bargaining table next year — if Reagan is re-elected.

In fact, Shultz indicated there would not be major revisions in the U.S. negotiating position, despite the current stalemate. "The agenda is there," he said. He also acknowledged, however, "it needs to be worked on and clarified" in order to achieve an accord.

Security plan in effect Tuesday

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival pro- and anti-Syrian militias agreed to begin pulling out their fighters and heavy weapons from the northern port of Tripoli on Tuesday to make way for the deployment of Lebanese army troops.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami said in a statement Sunday night in Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city, that the Syrian-sponsored agreement would go into effect at 6 a.m. Tuesday.

Police said two people were wounded in renewed sniper fire Sunday night. There was no word what triggered the sniping attacks.

Karami said implementation of the agreement would involve the withdrawal of rival militiamen from Tripoli streets, clearing of militia barricades, the collection of heavy weapons and their storage in depots.

He said a committee representing warring factions, the Lebanese army, and the Syrian army would set a timetable for deployment of the Lebanese army in Tripoli, 50 miles north of Beirut, after the clean-up operations are over. The Syrian army controls northern and eastern Lebanon.

A&M regents' chairman says panel behind corp

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The chairman of the Texas A&M University System Board of Regents says the panel is "100 percent behind" A&M's Corps of Cadets despite the recent hazing death of a cadet.

A regents committee responsible for overseeeing the corps heard an interim report Sunday about investigations into the death. University spokesman Jeff Alford said the Corps of Cadets Enhancement Committee met in advance of a scheduled meeting today of the full board of regents.

But Alford said discussion of the Aug. 30 hazing death of 20-year-old Bruce Goodrich was not included on the prepared agenda of the board. The next regularly scheduled board meeting will be in November, he said.

Goodrich was rousted out of bed during the pre-dawn hours and forced to perform "motivational exercises," including pushups and situps, officials said. He collasped and later died at a Bryan hospital.

Three juniors who were with Goodrich the night he collapsed have met with Bill Kibler, the university official heading up the disciplinary action. Kibler has also met with a senior officer of the F-1 Unit to which the dead cadet belonged.

Although regents said the university should taken action to make sure incidents like the hazing death never occur again, several regents voiced support for the corps.

"The Corps of Cadets is the lifeblood of this university and will continue to be," said William A. McKenzie, vice chairman of the board of regents and a former member of the corps.

Regents Chairman H.R. Bright said the board is "100 percent behind" the corps.

"We want to re-emphasize that this board is strongly behind the corps — 100 percent behind it," said Bright, a 1943 Texas A&M graduate.

At the committee meeting, John Koldus, vice president for student services, said officials were examining several areas.

Koldus said possible courses of action include requiring physical examinations of all cadets; determining if new rules and regulations need to be made and ensuring old ones are understood; examining supervision by cadet leaders and military advisers; and administering disciplinary action, if needed.

Gang activity on rise in Texas prisons

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Gang activity — along with inmate violence — is on the rise in Texas prisons and those on the inside say many prisoners are now aligning themselves with the convict groups in order to get protection.

So far this year, at least 280 prisoners have been stabbed and 13 have been killed within the Texas Department of Corrections. Suspects have been identified by TDC officials in all but one of the 13 murders. Ten of the deaths were interracial, officials say.

Jeff Lynkins and Charles Singleton, who are confined to the Retrieve Unit of the TDC, both belong to the Aryan Brotherhood, a white supremacist group.

During a prison fight, Singleton was stabbed seven times by another inmate. Lykins came to his rescue and had his lung pierced.

They refused to file criminal charges against their attacker, vowing to take care of the situation themselves.

Their alleged attacker, Edward Lee Fortune, is a member of the Mandingo Warriors, a gang of black inmates, prison officials say.

"He's scared to death right now," Retrieve Unit Warden Loyd Hunt told the San Antonio Light. "We've got him in solitary in the infirmary, but he's still sure they're going to come back and get him. I'm sure he's right. If we don't protect him, they'll get him," Hunt said.

The most prominent gang in the Texas prison system is said to be the Texas Syndicate, made up of Hispanic inmates.

Some wardens talk freely about the Aryan Brotherhood and other prison gangs. They believe the public must realize such groups may be responsible for increased prison violence.

"There's no doubt violence in this system is running rampant," Hunt said. "It's been worse this last six months than in the last 25 years. I can't point to one reason for it either. There are several reasons and gang violence certainly has to be one of them."

Membership in prison gangs is believed to be growing rapidly, but only a small percentage of the 36,000 Texas inmates actually participate in gang activity, insiders say.

"People are joining now that wouldn't have joined two years ago," one black inmate said.

Vietnamese rarely report gangs' extortion attempts

HOUSTON (AP) — Vietnamese businessman Hoang Mai Nguyen decided to tell police last year when he was beaten by a gang for refusing to pay extortion money to protect his brother's downtown restaurant.

The fact Nguyen reported the attack was rare, police say, because many Vietnamese fear that reporting the incidents of harrassment may hurt their businesses.

"It's a crime they're reluctant to report," Houston homicide detective Jerry Ellis told the Houston Post. "They hope it will go away and are afraid if they report it, it will get worse."

A charge of aggravated assault was filed against Nguyen Tan Rang, 30, in the Sept. 1983 attack against Hoang Mai Nguyen.

"He told me to kneel down and beg for mercy," Hoang Mai Nguyen said. "I refused and said 'Go ahead and kill me' as he raised his gun toward my throat."

Hoang Mai Nguyen said he was able to dodge the gunshots, but he didn't move fast enough to avoid being beaten severely or to avoid getting cut with a kitchen knife.

Vietnamese business owners say what happened to Nguyen was nothing new. The businessmen report being terrorized by gangs threatening to beat up workers and customers.

Some business owners say the gangs have even demanded money to keep the violence from occurring.

Police don't expect more arrests in multiple murders

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston homicide detectives say they have no more suspects in the shooting deaths of four people at a southwest Houston house and don't expect to make any more arrests.

Charles Edward Goosby, 34, was arrested Thursday and later charged with capital murder in the slaying of Christille Lakey, 3.

Goosby's name was among 200 to 300 contained in an address book found at the scene of Tuesday's shootings, said Houston police Sgt. J.C. Mosier.

The only person to survive the attack, Jesse Lewis, 35, identified a driver's license photo of Goosby, Mosier said.

On Saturday, police said they found a white Cadillac believed to be linked to the shooting deaths, but authorities declined to say where or when the car was found.

Residents in the southwest Houston neighborhood where the shootings took place said they heard gunfire shortly before a man left the house and entered a white Cadillac, which sped away from the scene with a second man behind the wheel.

Mike Bullard, administrator for Houston's Ben Taub Hospital, said Friday that Lewis was in poor condition.

Lawyers to submit depositions in sanctuary trial

SAN BENITO (AP) — Attorneys for a leader in a sanctuary movement providing shelter to Central Americans contend their client was acting within his legal rights in driving three undocumented Salvadoran aliens from a halfway house.

Lawyers for Jack Elder, 40, said they would submit about 30 depositions taken in New York, San Francisco, Washington and Chicago in support of their motions to dismiss charges against Elder, who is charged with three counts of transporting illegal aliens.

Included in the statements attorneys planned to present today was a statement of a former U.S. ambassador.

U.S. District Judge Hayden Head Jr. earlier this month set Sept. 24 as the deadline for submitting evidence in support of the motions.

Among the 22 motions filed in the Elder case, six set forth grounds for dismissing the charges.

Defense attorneys claim Elder was acting within his legal rights in driving three undocumented Salvadorans from the church-sponsored Casa Oscar Romero halfway house in San Benito to the Harlingen bus station five miles away.

Elder has said the Salvadorans are political refugees fleeing a war zone and are protected by a variety of national and international laws, including the Geneva Conventions.

Federal officials have said the Salvadorans are economic refugees who were in this country illegally.

Depositions to be submitted include those from Robert White, ambassador to El Salvador during the Carter administration; Dr. Charles Clements physican-author of "Witness To War"; and Bill Ford, brother of slain Sister Ita Ford, one of four church women killed by Salvadoran military personel.

Elder said depositions were also taken from a number of Salvadorans.

Reports cast doubt on truth of Estes' recent allegations

DALLAS (AP) — Newly released government reports suggest a man identified by convicted West Texas swindler Billie Sol Estes as the slayer of a U.S. Agriculture Department official was in California at the time of the slaying, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

The newspaper said it obtained files concerning the investigation of the slaying from the FBI and the Defense Department under the Freedom of Information Act.

Estes testified before a Robertson County grand jury last March that he, Malcom E. "Mac" Wallace, the late President Lyndon B. Johnson and a Johnson political aide, Clifton Carter, plotted the slaying of Henry H. Marshall, a U.S. Agriculture Department employee, during a meeting in Washington in January, 1961. Johnson was vice president at the time.

Estes began serving a 15-year prison term in 1965 after he was convicted of federal mail fraud and conspiracy to defraud in connection with a multi-million dollar swindle involving loans on non-existent fertilizer tanks. He was paroled in 1971, but the parole was revoked in 1979 after he was convicted on two federal charges accusing him of mail fraud and conspiracy to conceal assets to avoid paying back taxes. He was paroled in 1983.

Johnson's friends and associates have claimed that Estes' grand jury testimony was a lie and noted that it coincided last March with the publication of a book about Estes written by his daughter.

Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale faces reporters alongside Kathy Wilson, who chairs the National Women's Political Caucus, Sunday in Washington. The NWPC broke a 13-year precedent as it endorsed Mondale's presidential candidacy.

Mondale woos potential Democratic defectors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter F. Mondale is seeking to limit defections of Democratic voters to President Reagan by forecasting a "scary, intolerant and dangerous future" under a second Reagan administration.

Facing polls showing substantial numbers of Democrats are ready to vote for Reagan, Mondale said Sunday the president has been doing a "cynical rewrite of history" by praising past Democratic heroes like John F. Kennedy, Harry S. Truman and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"Mr. Reagan wants Democrats to cross the line and become Republicans," Mondale said in his weekly paid radio address. "Today I am asking Americans, especially young Americans, to take a look at the Republican home they are being sold, and the platform it's built on."

Mondale was traveling today to Reagan territory in Texas, where 29 of the 270 electoral college votes needed to win the presidency will be contested Nov. 6, the third largest total in the nation.

A recent ABC News-Washington Post poll showed the president holds a 30 percentage point lead in Texas, the state where the Republican National Convention was held last month. Stops were planned for Mondale in Texarkana and Houston.

Reagan was in New York today to address the United Nations General Assembly, after attending a reception late Sunday. Also there was Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who is scheduled to meet Thursday with Mondale and Friday with Reagan.

Vice President George Bush was heading to Illinois today on the first leg of a four-day trip through the Midwest. Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro was campaigning in New York and Baltimore.

In Washington on Sunday, Mondale said that under a second Reagan administration, women would be paid less than men for the same work, the "illegal war in Nicaragua" would be heated up, politicians would write prayers for children and Moral Majority leader the Rev. Jerry Falwell would pick Supreme Court nominees.

"That's a scary, intolerant and dangerous future," he said in a direct appeal to Democrats broadcast on network radio. "If you cross over to Dallas Republicans, that's what you get. You don't just get the balloons, the pep rallies and the happy talk. You get Falwell, Nicaragua and Star Wars too."

Mondale recalled that at the Republican convention last month in Dallas, "You didn't hear much praise of (Richard M.) Nixon, (Herbert) Hoover, or even (Dwight D.) Eisenhower. Instead, they quoted FDR, Eleanor Roosevelt, Truman, (Sen. Henry) Scoop Jackson and even my friend Hubert Humphrey."

"What a cynical rewrite of history that is," he said. "Can you imagine Roosevelt giving tax breaks to millionaires and socking it to working people...Can you imagine Truman letting 300 Marines die in Lebanon, and then passing the buck? Can you imagine Jack Kennedy trying to cut Social Security? Can you imagine Lyndon Johnson trashing the civil rights laws and denying the existence of hunger?"

At a news conference, Mondale said the president has isolated himself in a "question-free zone" that allows his campaign managers to prevent any real dialogue between the candidates.

But Mondale predicted that Reagan's lead would fall as the election approached and the president was forced to respond to voters' questions about the path of his second four years in office.

Also on Sunday, Mondale won the endorsement of the National Women's Political Caucus, which had never before backed a presidential candidate in its 13-year history.

Kathy Wilson, a Republican who chairs the conference, said: "Under Ronald Reagan's leadership, we've been deserted and double crossed. Our Republicans who have been active in the party for years have been forced to choose between their commitment to women's rights and their commitment to party. That is simply no choice."

And she added: "When it comes to women, Walter Mondale stands tall. Ronald Reagan develops back problems."

About 77,000, or 40 percent, of the caucus' members are Republicans, Ms. Wilson said.

At the news conference, Mondale also said the bombing at the U.S. Embassy annex in Beirut on Thursday was "a very severe breach of essential security."

Forty-seven farmers got more than $1 million for idling fields under PIK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-seven farmers each received commodities and crop support payments worth more than $1 million in exchange for idling their fields last year, the Agriculture Department says.

They were among about 12,000 farmers who each got government-owned commodities and supports worth more than $100,000 for not growing crops under the Reagan administration's payment-in-kind program, the department said.

Under PIK, farmers were given free surplus commodities for taking land out of production. Slightly more than 73 million acres were idled in 1983 as a result, the department said as part of its first national accounting of the program.

Although exact figures have not been disclosed, the total value of PIK benefits to farmers may reach nearly $10 billion at recent market prices for the commodities — wheat, corn, cotton, sorghum and rice.

The Agriculture Department is preparing a detailed accounting of the PIK program, and preliminary figures show 47 of the program's 827,511 participants received commodities and crop support payments totaling more than $1 million. Those producers idled slightly more than 241,000 acres.

The information does not specify the amount of individual payments, but indicates the number of recipients nationwide by various ranges of payments.

A total of 186 producers received payments between $500,000 and $1 million. And 2,153 others reaped benefits ranging from $200,000 to $500,000. A total of 9,911 producers received from $100,000 to $200,000.

Payments from $55,000 to $100,000 were made to 25,256 farmers. Another 6,216 producers received payments between $50,000 and $55,000.

In all, about 5.3 percent, or 43,700, of the farmers who participated in the PIK program received payments exceeding $50,000.

The figures include PIK commodities as well as cash diversion and deficiency payments.

However, the bulk of the large payments can be traced to PIK commodities. By law, federal cash crop subsidies are limited to $50,000 a year per farmer. The 1983 payment-in-kind program was excluded from that limitation.

Still, the largest recipients under the PIK program were a distinct minority.

Nearly half of the producers in the program received payments of $4,000 or less. Payments up to $7,000 accounted for two-thirds of the producers, and payments of $25,000 or less covered almost 90 percent of the particpating farmers.

In fact, slightly more than one-fourth of PIK producers received payments of no more than $2,000 in 1983.

Despite that, the PIK program came under sharp criticism from some members of Congress for funneling millions of dollars to a handful of large farms.

That criticism largely prompted the Agriculture Department to subject the 1984 payment-in-kind program for wheat farmers to a $50,000 lid on benefits.

There is no PIK for crops other than wheat in 1984, and the USDA says no farmer in the program this year will receive a combination of surplus commodities and cash payments exceeding $50,000.

Congress wrapping up agenda

Agreement on Pentagon budget removes roadblock

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, beginning what leaders hope will be the last two weeks of this year's session, is trying to clear away measures that would allow the government to keep spending and borrowing until the 99th Congress convenes early next year.

A major roadblock in the way of a planned adjournment by Oct. 5 was removed last week when House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., agreed on the outlines of a Pentagon budget of $292.9 billion.

Included in the settlement of a summer-long standoff between the House and Senate was agreement to postpone further deployment of the MX nuclear missile, pending two additional votes on the controversial weapon by each chamber next April.

The deal on military spending clears the way for Congress to finish work on a budget blueprint for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. The lawmakers also must approve a stopgap measure, called a continuing resolution, to finance government operations which have not yet received their regular annual appropriation.

Only four of the 13 annual money bills have been signed into law, making it necessary to pass the stopgap bill, which the House will consider on Tuesday.

Action on the measure bogged down last week when legislators seeking to pass pet projects they have been unable to otherwise enact jumped on the emergency bill as an attractive vehicle for those items. Despite an implied veto threat from the administration, the House voted to block action to remove such extraneous items from the bill.

Meanwhile, the Treasury Department has said the government's $1.573 trillion line of credit will be reached by the end of the week, meaning that Congress must pass another increase in the national debt limit.

Without an increase in the government's borrowing authority, sales of government securities could be disrupted and a long-term lapse in raising the limit could create problems for the government in meeting its obligations.

Congress last raised the national debt ceiling on June 29, when it was raised by $53 billion.

Also pending is work on a compromise version of a comprehensive immigration control bill.

House and Senate negotiators face one last hurdle before sending the measure back to their respective chambers for final approval.

The conferees have already hammered out the two main elements of the legislation — stiff sanctions against employers who hire illegal aliens, and amnesty for those who arrived before Jan. 1, 1981, and have no criminal record.

They are scheduled to vote today on a proposal by Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., that forbids employers discriminating against U.S. citizens or legalized aliens because of their national origin or status as aliens.

O'Neill said Friday that he would demand "an absolute assurance" that President Reagan will sign the bill before he would bring it to the floor.

The House Ways and Means Committee, meanwhile, is scheduled to fashion legislation this week ensuring Social Security recipients a cost-of-living increase in January, even if the inflation rate does not hit the 3 percent trigger provided in current law.

The Senate already has passed such legislation, and O'Neill has promised the House will do likewise. Reagan wants a one-time waiver of the trigger, but there is some sentiment in the House to make it permanent.

Among other measures:

— The Senate planned to vote today on whether to end debate over a $7.2 billion highway construction bill. Some of the money, $2.1 billion, was supposed to be spent this year while the weather was still ideal for road building, but the bill has been tied up by disputes over hometown projects.

— Negotiators from the House and Senate will continue work Tuesday on legislation revising the federal law governing disposal of hazardous waste, extending federal regulations to thousands of small businesses that use chemicals.

— Sponsors of a bill expanding the "superfund" program to clean up abandoned hazardous waste dumps are pressing the Senate Finance Committee to approve a major expansion of the effort. Should the committee refuse to act, they say, they may attempt late this week to attach the superfund expansion to another bill on the Senate floor.

Democrats claim 'bum rap' on anti-crime bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats, stung by President Reagan's persistent criticism of their handling of his anti-crime proposals, say they plan to make an issue of Republican-led defeat of a bill to tighten the use of the insanity defense.

"No question about it," said Rep. William J. Hughes, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on crime, after Republicans voted heavily against the measure to deny the two-thirds margin required for passage last Tuesday.

"Oh, sure," added Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., the bill's sponsor and chairman of the criminal justice subcommittee.

In his re-election campaign, Reagan has complained about the failure of House Democrats to permit a vote on the administration's omnibus crime bill — which passed the Senate 91-1 last Feb. 2 — and several companion measures.

But while shunning the package approach, the House has approved numerous individual crime bills that the president doesn't mention when criticizing the Democrats. At least 15 measures were similar to portions of the Reagan package.

"We're getting a bum rap," Hughes said.

According to sponsors, the House-passed bill would have a wide impact on street crime, big-time drug traffickers, child pornographers and the newest type of crime waves — computer theft and sale of counterfeit products from designer jeans to heart pacemakers.

Reagan's "big ticket" items are different. They include restoring the death penalty for federal crimes, modification of the rule excluding illegally seized evidence from trials, revision of sentencing procedures including elimination of parole and a measure to deny bail to dangerous federal offenders awaiting trial.

Of that list, only the bail and sentencing measures might reach the House floor before adjournment in two weeks — and their chances of getting that far are uncertain.

For months, the Democrats have been listening to Reagan comments like this one, beamed to the nation in a July 7 radio address:

"Please, send a message to the House leadership. Tell them to stop kowtowing to the special interests and start listening to you, the American people. Americans want this anti-crime legislation, and they want it now."

Democrats have countered by releasing reports praising their own anti-crime bills. One such study, released Sept. 12, was entitled "The Republican Big Lie."

Just as Reagan won't give the Democrats credit, it is unlikely that Democrats criticizing the GOP-engineered defeat of the insanity bill would mention the reason Republicans killed it.

GOP lawmakers contended it did not go far enough, still allowing too many acquittals by reason of insanity. They also objected to the bill's consideration under a hurry-up procedure that prohibited amendments and permitted only 40 minutes of debate.

That same rule, which required a two-thirds vote for passage, enabled the minority Republicans to torpedo the legislation.

Hughes, the crime subcommittee chairman, complained in an interview, "If you look at the more than 40 provisions in the Reagan (omnibus) bill, more than half are housekeeping provisions making minor changes.

"And the impact of the death penalty and exclusionary rule (in companion bills) would be very small. They involve a small handful of cases in federal courts."

Five prisoners escape through air shaft, intake

LANSING, Kan. (AP) — Five prisoners, three serving life terms for murder, escaped from a dormitory-like cell house at the Kansas State Penitentiary early today, apparently by climbing down an air shaft and out a "very small air intake," authorities said.

The inmates were discovered missing moments after the 1 a.m. escape, and prison officials and area law enforcement agencies immediately began searching for them, said prison spokesman Troy Baker.

"They are fleeing felons, and under the circumstances, we consider them to be dangerous," Baker said. "These are running prisoners, and it would be naive for anyone to think otherwise."

The prisoners apparently escaped by climbing down a third-floor air shaft "and exiting a very small air intake on the side of the cell house, like a small window" between the second and third floors, Baker said. The inmates apparently jumped to the ground from there, he said.

Prison officials at first believed the men had escaped by climbing through the air shaft to the roof, but scuff marks and other evidence, including signs that "something had been cut near the window" were found later, Baker said.

After reaching the ground, the prisoners apparently "went through a low corner" of the fence surrounding the prison.

Officers on foot and with dogs were searching for the escapees in an area between Lansing and nearby Leavenworth, Baker said.

New book claims Hughes gave $100,000 to Nixon

CHICAGO (AP) — A new book alleges reclusive billionaire Howard Hughes secretly donated money to former President Richard Nixon, whose fear the donations would be disclosed led to the 1972 Watergate break-in.

Memos purportedly handwritten by the late Hughes show he also made secret contributions to former National Democratic Committee chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien, author Michael Drosnin alleges in the book "Citizen Hughes."

Drosnin claims in his book that Nixon knew of the payments of $15,000 a month to O'Brien, and feared O'Brien would reveal the $100,000 in payments Nixon received from Hughes while in the White House.

Drosnin says that led Nixon to order aide H.R. Haldeman to obtain proof of the payments to O'Brien, setting in motion a covert campaign that led to the 1972 attempted bugging of Democratic headquarters.

"This is nothing new and there is no credibility to it," O'Brien said from his New York home Sunday night. He told The New York Times he terminated a contract with Hughes Enterprises two years before the Watergate break-in.

John Taylor, spokesman for Nixon, declined Sunday night to comment on Drosnin's claims, saying he didn't "know anything about" Drosnin's allegations.

Spokesmen for the Hughes estate could not be located for comment by telephone Sunday. But Perry Lieber, who knew Hughes and who now is a consultant with the Summa Corp., the Nevada arm of the Hughes organization, said he "can't imagine" the recluse trying to buy influence in the White House.

Four children killed in West Virginia fire

MONTGOMERY, W.Va. (AP) — Fire raced through a home here, killing four children and sending their mother to the hospital with second-degree burns, authorities said.

Montgomery Fire Chief Larry Robinson said two boys and two girls ranging in age from 2 to 8 years old were killed in the fire, which was reported about 9:30 p.m.

The children were pronounced dead at the scene and their bodies were taken to the state Medical Examiner's Office in South Charleston, a spokesman for the office said.

A nursing supervisor at Montgomery General Hospital identified the victims as Samuel Vana Washington, 8; Andra Dewayne Washington, 5; Nichol Michelle Washington, 4; and Felicia Ann Washington, 2.

The childrens' mother, Linda Ann Washington, 26, was in stable condition at the hospital, where she was being treated for burns to the hands, face and back, a nursing supervisor said.

Man kills others, then self

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A man apparently shot two women and another man in an exclusive area that is home to many celebrities then turned the gun on himself, police said.

It appeared that Alex Egyed shot Virginia Egyed, 45, Betty Difiore, 52, and Jack Levy, 66, whose bodies were found at a home in the Rancho Circle area, said a Metropolitan Police officer who refused to be identified.

Police did not know the relationship of the three dead people to Egyed, and would release no further details, the officer said.

Police termed the incident a murder-suicide.

Suit causes drop in students

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A 16-year-old lawsuit seeking to desegregate the state's system of higher education probably helped cause a 6 percent enrollment decline this year at predominantly black Tennessee State University, school officials said.

Roy Nicks, chancellor of the state Board of Regents, announced at a board meeting Friday that Tennessee State's enrollment has tumbled from 8,132 last year to 7,700 this fall.

Tennessee State has been the focus of the desegregation lawsuit. Its student body is more than 60 percent black, and its entering freshman class is more than 90 percent black.

Boy injured by chemical

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A 16-year-old boy hospitalized with third-degree burns on his stomach, groin and upper legs apparently had put a piece of volatile potassium from a chemistry class in his pants' pockets that later ignited, authorities said.

David Stewart, listed in stable condition Sunday at Tampa General Hospital, likely will require a series of skin grafts over the next few weeks to replace scarred tissue, doctors said.

The potassium, which reacts with water to produce fire, burst into flames inside Stewart's pocket Friday as he sat in another class at Seminole High School, teachers said. It may have mixed with body sweat or water, a teacher said.

Yale workers may strike

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Unionized clerical and technical workers at Yale University say they will strike at 5 a.m. Wednesday unless they have a new contract with the university administration.

Real water plan

A new state water plan has been adopted by the Texas Water Development Board and, while reserving judgment on the fine tuning that will be done in the weeks and months to come, it appears to be a major improvement over the existing plan in one big area: Conservation.

Texas' existing water plan, now 15 years old, wasn't very realistic in that regard. It scarcely mentioned conservation, instead dealing at length with an elaborate plan to import vast volumes of the precious commodity from the Mississippi River.

The new plan, adopted Thursday by the water development board in Austin, put a high priority on conservation, urging the Legislature to spend $2.9 million every two years just for conservation programs and millions more for equipment and local training programs that will help farmers, other large water users and average citizens learn progressive ways to use water wisely and sparingly.

The current drought has made Texas' precarious water situation crystal clear to a lot of the state's officials and residents and it's well past time to get serious about not just dealing with the hear and now, but planning for the state's water future. Texas never has been blessed with more than enough water and it isn't likely that situation will change anytime soon. In fact, when rains break the current drought, the Texans who haven't already realized it probably will awaken to the water crisis the state is facing.

What does this new water plan mean to the state? Well, what it doesn't mean is that dealing with the water shortage is going to be any easier, perhaps only more orderly. The mentality that Texans need to adopt is that, just like in the oil shortage days, they don't have enough of the stuff to waste. It has to be preserved with care.

The old water plan didn't do that. The new one does. The new plan is a lot more realistic.

Knock at the door

Nearly 30 years ago, the development of psychotropic drugs that modify moods and behavior opened new vistas for the treatment of the mentally ill. With drug therapy, patients who might have needed long-term hospitalization could be treated on an outpatient basis. Meanwhile, the concept of self-help recovery groups and halfway houses for the mentally ill was beginning to emerge. Health agencies saw an attractive alternative to the warehousing of mental patients in large, grim "insane asylums."

So a conscious effort began to deinstitutionalize the mentally ill in America, to shift the focus of mental treatment from large institutions to local communities. Beginning with the creation by Congress of the Joint Commission on Mental Illness and Health in 1955, legislative acts at the federal and state level began reflecting the new emphasis on community treatment facilities.

What has happened in the intervening years shows how a praiseworthy undertaking can go wrong in the most tragic way. A study by the American Psychiatric Association (APA) says deinstitutionalization has been a "disastrous" failure, creating a new class of derelict — the homeless mentally ill.

"Hardly a section of the country, urban or rural," the report says, "has escaped the ubiquitous presence of ragged, ill and hallucinating human beings, wandering through our city streets, huddled in alleyways or sleeping over vents." One does not have to look far to see evidence of what the APA refers to as a "moral scandal."

Since 1955, the number of patients being treated in large public mental hospitals has been cut by three-fourths. But the development of new community mental health facilities has not proceeded at a corresponding rate. As a result mental patients are released into communities that are not prepared to receive them.

The APA study does not recommend how mental health programs should be reorganized and administered to keep patients from falling through the cracks, nor does it estimate how much it would cost to provide shelter, food, clothing and medical treatment for those now wandering the streets. It is significant, however, that the study does not find fault with the concept that patients would be better off being treated in community programs than in hospitals.

New forms of therapy and better understanding of the mentally ill mean that we do not have to lock up all mental patients in institutions. But that does not end our responsibility; it only moves the problem to our local doorstep.

The APA report on the homeless mentally ill should be taken as a knocking at the door that demands a response.

Save the seals

During July, 22,000 fur seals were slaughtered on the Pribilof islands off Alaska. The kill was made under contract with the U.S. Department of Commerce. But was it necessary?

The demand for seal skins has declined greatly during the last decade, and a recent opinion poll showed that 85 percent of the respondents want the annual seal slaughter ended.

The number of seals has been declining throughout the world for many years. They have been hunted with high-powered guns, killed on the calfing grounds and trapped by accident in fishing nets.

Despite seal population decline, the Department of Commerce continues to subsidize the killing on the Pribilofs, which are among the last major calfing areas in the world.

According to Friends of Animals, Inc., the annual subsidy comes to about $10 million. This provides about five weeks work for about 80 people.

It is not a dramatic cause, as causes go. But these beautiful and gentle animals have a right to survive. And the Senate can save them by ending an obsolete treaty of 1911 under which the government sanctions the slaughter.

FTC critic takes parting shot

WASHINGTON — Taking the poet's advice, departing Federal Trade Commissioner Michael Pertschuk has made it clear he won't "go gentle into that good night," but will "rage, rage against the dying of the light" he has held aloft to protect consumers for the past seven years.

Jack Anderson

His 300-page critique of the agency's performance has already been summarized in The New York Times, drawing an indignant rebuttal from the FTC's conservative chairman, James Miller III.

Miller derided Pertschuk's blistering report, writing:

"While Commissioner Pertschuk's rhetoric displays a certain energy, his report breaks no new ground. It is a rehash of his dissents and a stringing together of his various positions, bracketed in sarcasm."

What Miller hasn't seen yet is Pertschuk's brief appendix to his report. This rubs salt into what Pertschuk feels are the commission's self-inflicted wounds under Miller's leadership. My associate Tony Capaccio has obtained a copy.

The appendix is titled, "A Reader's Guide to Claims About the Wonder of Reagan's FTC." Pertschuk charges that the FTC's conservative leadership has habitually tried to make "a silk purse out of a sow's ear" and "has been having fun with numbers and history." He explains: "And by fun, I mean indecent liberties with the historical record and with facts of the present."

Pertschuk writes: "Every government agency puffs up its own record of achievement. We certainly did when we were in charge." But, he complains, "there is a point at which puffery passes beyond the bounds of fair characterization into cynical press agentry."

What particularly riles Pertschuk is the way he says Miller's crew takes credit for actions they actually delayed or opposed.

For instance, last May, Carol Crawford, director of the commission's Bureau of Consumer Protection, told the House committee on aging that the FTC's new rule designed to give protection from shady undertakers "has great impact on older Americans." She neglected to mention that Miller had opposed the rule, calling it "a deceit upon American consumers."

Crawford also boasted that the FTC had initiated rules to lower the price of eyeglasses. But Pertschuk notes in his appendix:

"Convenient forgettery precluded her from mentioning that she had just recommended that a key provision — that eye-care providers routinely turn over a copy of eye prescriptions to consumers — be eliminated."

In what Pertschuk calls "the most baldfaced denial of responsibility," Miller told Congress the FTC hadn't buried a rule to monitor hard-sell techniques by hearing-aid salesmen. "The commission has not buried the rule," he testified. "The votes for the rule simply did not exist."

Pertschuk writes: "The translation of this sophistry is: 'Neither I, Miller nor my two colleagues appointed by President Reagan would vote for the rule.'"

Regarding a commission press release last March claiming that the FTC acted on 98 "consumer protection matters" in 1983, Pertschuk writes:

He notes that 51 of the actions were votes "to delay or kill actions or to relax and weaken prior orders restraining manufacturers from unfair or deceptive practices."

CITIZENS WATCH: The recently passed Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act is intended to encourage U.S. businesses to invest in the region — and, at the same time, to protect their investments from the whims of recipient governments.

No country is to get Economic Recovery funds if it has repudiated a contract with a company in which a U.S. citizen or firm owns at least a half-interest.

The law came six years too late to help J. Royal Parker directly, but if the State Department takes a little belated interest in Parker's case, the new law might prove to be the indirect route to justice for Parker. Here's what happened:

In 1978, Parker's New Jersey-based firm entered into a joint venture with the Costa Rican port authority, JAPDEVA, to develop the country's ports as duty-free enterprise zones. Parker and the government agency each owned 50 percent of the venture.

But the ink was barely dry on the contract when a new Costa Rican president was elected — and promptly nullified Parker's contract.

Parker sought compensation in Costa Rican courts without success. Now he's hoping pressure from the State Department — using the threat contained in the new law — will cause a more amenable new Costa Rican regime to make good on the contract.

The new administration, which is trying to encourage U.S. investors, has given Parker sympathy but no action. Costa Rican government sources told him it would help if the State Department applied some pressure. But so far that hasn't happened.

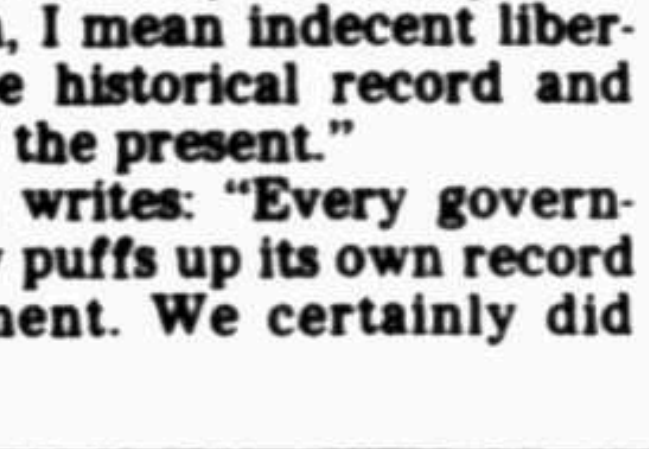
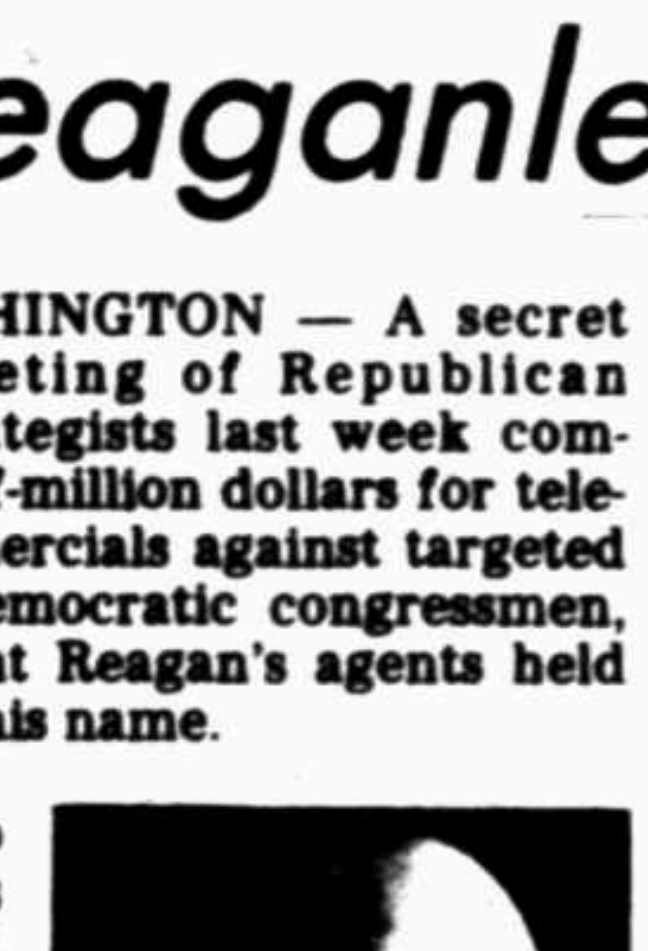
EVANS & NOVAK

Reaganless appeal set in Dixie

WASHINGTON — A secret meeting of Republican strategists last week committed a half-million dollars for television commercials against targeted Southern Democratic congressmen, but President Reagan's agents held back use of his name.



Rowland Evans



Robert Novak

Thanks to Reagan's projected landslide in the South, Republican campaign planners now see the possibility of winning previously unattainable House seats. The first $250,000 in TV spots will attack Walter F. Mondale, with special emphasis on his tax-increase plan. However, key Southern Republican politicians argue that to omit Reagan's name from these commercials is failing to play the party's trump card in Dixie.

The second $250,000 worth of TV spots, scheduled for after Oct. 15, might include a presidential appeal if Reagan's lead against Mondale still holds. But that is not certain. The president's men are still reluctant to risk his prestige in an appeal for House seats.

TOP CABINET TARGET

In the face of reluctance by any Cabinet member to voluntarily step aside in a second Reagan term, White House and campaign operatives are quietly pushing for at least one removal: John Block to go as secretary of agriculture.

Block, a millionaire Illinois farmer, is privately blamed as a negative for President Reagan in seeking the rural vote. Some of his decisions have been publicly criticized by Ed Rollins, the Reagan-Bush campaign manager.

However, Block has proved a resilient political infighter since coming to Washington in 1981 and is not likely to go quietly. He is considered a possible future candidate for statewide office in Illinois.

FLEEING FROM FRITZ

The possible drag by Walter F. Mondale's presidential campaign on statewide Democratic candidates in the South has reached the point where in Arkansas party leaders say it could endanger Sen. David Pryor's once secure seat.

An aggressive campaign waged for months by the Republican challenger, Rep. Ed Bethune, has cut in half Pryor's previous lead of more than 30 percentage points. That is still a fairly comfortable margin, unless President Reagan shows coattails in his projected Arkansas landslide.

Democratic Gov. Bill Clinton, not seriously challenged in his third-term bid, has privately expressed concern about the effects of the Mondale drag on Pryor. He and other leading Arkansas Democrats would be content if Mondale keeps away from their state for the rest of the campaign.

SABOTAGING HELMS

A deal Sen. Jesse Helms had worked out with the White House was sandbagged by State Department functionaries who refused to accept two minor amendments when the anti-genocide treaty, a long-pending international agreement against mass slaughter of populations, first came before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Helms's deal with presidential aides should have smoothed the way for quick committee approval of the two minor amendments. But nobody told the State Department, which immediately objected to Sen. Charles H. Percy, the committee chairman and no friend of Helms.

That explains Helms's embarrassing public confusion at the first committee session on the treaty. The last thing wanted by Helms, fighting a tough re-election campaign in North Carolina, was the appearance of opposition to President Reagan (who had personally called for Senate ratification of the long-pending treaty). When the committee finally voted on the treaty last Wednesday (without the amendments), Helms simply abstained.

MONDALE NEEDS 'EMOTION'

Jim Johnson, Walter Mondale's campaign chairman, confided to charismatic Rep. Tony Coelho of California last week that what the slow-moving Mondale needs to prop up his campaign is a dose of "Coelho emotion."

Coelho is known for the high emotional levels in his Latin (Portuguese-American) bloodstream, in marked contrast to the Scandanavian cool of Mondale — and Jim Johnson. Discussing the lagging Mondale campaign, Johnson — perhaps half seriously — told Coelho he wanted him on the Mondale campaign plane to "pump some excitement and emotion" into Fritz Mondale.

A footnote: Coelho, chairman of the House Democratic Campaign Committee, has his own problem with Mondale: Democratic congressional candidates, worried about the Mondale drag, don't want the presidential candidate in their districts. Coelho is the intermediary who tries to work that out without ruffling feathers.

CHARLEY REESE

Mondale's peace only on paper

Walter Mondale has thoughtfully provided the evidence for my contention that he is totally incompetent to lead this nation. Heck, I wouldn't even hire the poor man to negotiate a simple contract.

Charley Reese

Consider his present proposals. He has said that his most urgent priority will be signing an arms control agreement with the Soviet Union. Imagine, for example, a union leader who announced in advance of contract negotiations that his most urgent priority would be signing a new contract. What kind of message would that send to the management negotiator?

But Mondale does even more. He announces that before he ever meets with the Soviets, he will cancel (again) the B-1 bomber and the MX missile. He has said he will also impose on the United States a unilateral moratorium on testing and developing nuclear weapons as an inducement to get the Soviets to the bargaining table.

This reveals an incredible naivete. I know some eight-year-olds who are more sophisticated than Mondale. Poor Fritz need not worry that the Soviets won't come to the bargaining table. They'll be there on his inauguration day, like hungry hyenas on a dead zebra.

The obvious question is what has Mondale left himself to bargain with? The Soviets are not going to sign their names to a piece of paper without extracting some concessions from the United States. Since Mondale has already conceded — in advance of negotiations — a new bomber, a new land-based missile, and a moratorium on testing and development, what does he have left to concede?

If he concedes the Pershing IIs and cruise missiles in Europe, he will destroy the NATO alliance. It was our NATO allies who demanded those missiles and they have paid a heavy price in overcoming domestic protests to get them. If Mondale reverses his own position (the decision to deploy was made during the Carter-Mondale Administration), you can kiss our alliance goodbye.

Mondale is demonstrating either a stupifying ignorace of reality or a reckless disregard for the safety of the United States and its democratic allies.

Our nuclear deterrent remains in bad shape. The B-1, which will replace obsolete B-52s designed in the 1950s, is not yet operational and Mondale plans to kill it. Our land-based missiles have become increasingly vulnerable and Mondale refuses to upgrade them. The third leg of our deterrent — the submarines — also grow vulnerable. Polaris subs are being retired faster than they are being replaced by Tridents. Moreover, the "Wall Street Journal" recently reported that there are strong indications the Soviets are developing a satellite-born radar which can detect subs beneath the sea. No doubt that is why the Soviets are so determined to prevent us from developing an anti-satellite weapon.

You must realize that a treaty is a piece of paper and that all treaties between sovereign nations are essentially unenforceable. That is so because the only option one nation has against another nation which violates a treaty is to go to war. That's why treaties, the purpose of which is to prevent war, are the ultimte human folly, as history so decisively demonstrates.

The Soviet Union signed a non-aggression treaty with Nazi Germany. When it suited the Nazis, they invaded the Soviet Union. This, of course, was in violation of the treaty, but at that point, the Soviets had more urgent priorities than merely complaining about German perfidy.

Suppose the Soviets sign an arms control treaty and violate it. What are your options? You can send them a letter of protest. A letter, however, is no defense against a missile. The argument that if the Soviets violate an arms control treaty, then we would proceed to develop new weapons is stupid on its face. It will be too late. If, for example, the Soviets unveil an operational anti-ballistic missile system, the United States is up the creek. You can't develop and deploy an operational ABM system in 24 hours.

Mondale wants to do just what Neville Chamberlain, Great Britain's prime minister in the 1930s, did. Mondale wants to waive a piece of paper in the air and announce that he has achieved peace in our time. More than 50 million human beings paid with their lives for Chamberlain's faulty judgement. The price of trusting the reins of government to Mondale will be infinitely and horribly higher. In today's world, nice guys not only finish last. They can get you killed.

Poll: Few viewers think TV improved lives

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The television industry hands out self-congratulatory Emmy awards Sunday night and, amid great hoopla, officially starts its new season Monday.

But a public opinion poll, painting a more downbeat picture of TV, says only one of nine viewers can name a TV show that has improved his or her life.

In addition, when asked if viewers could only watch one type of programming, more respondents chose movies, news and sports than prime-time series, the staple of entertainment programming.

Those are some of the findings of a Media General-Associated Press poll conducted by a nationwide random phone sampling of 1,451 adults the first week in August.

In other survey results, respondents rated CBS' Dan Rather the most trusted news anchor by a wide margin over competitors Peter Jennings of ABC and Tom Brokaw of NBC, and CBS and ABC virtually tied as the first choice of viewers tuning in for immediate information about a major news event.

"M-A-S-H" was the most common choice for the all-time favorite situation comedy and "Hill Street Blues" the top pick for the all-time favorite dramatic series.

Asked if there were a particular TV series or program that had changed their lives for the better, 85 percent of the sample said no. Four percent said they didn't know. One percent cited TV evangelist Pat Robertson's "700 Club" and 1 percent said "60 Minutes." The remaining 9 percent cited a wide variety of other programs ranging from old comedy series and public television specials to docu-dramas and news documentaries.

College graduates watch less TV than viewers with less formal education, the survey said. Thirty-six percent of the college graduates sampled said they watched, on average, fewer than three hours of TV a day, while 9 percent said they watched eight or more hours a day.

On the other hand, 29 percent of the viewers who had not graduated from high school said they averaged eight or more hours of daily viewing, compared to 15 percent who said they watched fewer than three hours a day.

Respondents were also asked what type of programming they would watch if they could only watch one type, and 27 percent said movies and 23 percent said news. Nineteen percent said sports, 17 percent said prime-time entertainment, 6 percent said daytime shows and 3 percent said reruns. Five percent said they didn't know.

Movies were far and away the first choice of viewers from the ages of 18 to 54, but viewers 55 and older preferred news. Advertisers have already taken note of this, placing commercials for denture care and other health-related products that older viewers buy in the network news hours.

Rather, leader of the top-rated "CBS Evening News," was the most trusted anchor among 38 percent of the respondents. Peter Jennings of ABC's "World News Tonight" was picked by 25 percent and Tom Brokaw of the "NBC Nightly News" was favored by 17 percent. The rest were undecided.

Asked to choose which network they would turn to for news of a major event such as a war or a disaster, 30 percent of the respondents chose CBS, while 29 percent picked ABC, 18 percent took NBC and 7 percent chose the Cable News Network.

As to the respondents' all-time favorite comedy, 13 percent listed CBS' "M-A-S-H," the show about surgeons in the Korean War that went off the air in 1983 but is still frequently seen in syndicated reruns.

Seven percent listed ABC's "Three's Company," 4 percent said CBS' "All in the Family" or NBC's current hit "Cheers," while 3 percent said CBS' "The Jeffersons" and the old "I Love Lucy" show. The remaining responses were divided among dozens of other programs.

For all-time dramatic fare, 9 percent favored NBC's "Hill Street Blues," 7 percent said CBS's "Dallas," last season's top-rated series, and 6 percent said ABC's popular "Dynasty."

"M-A-S-H" and "Hill Street Blues" were most likely to be selected as the favorite show of so-called "yuppies" — young, well-educated, upper-income viewers.

Respondents in the poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,451 adults across the country Aug. 1-8. As with all sample surveys, the results of Media General-AP telephone polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,400 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample. That is, if one could have questioned all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary from the results of polls such as this one by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for a number of additional reasons.

Media General, Inc., a communications company which has headquarters in Richmond, Va., publishes the Richmond Times-Dispatch, the Richmond News Leader, the Tampa Tribune, the Winston-Salem Journal and the Winston-Salem Sentinel. The company's television stations are WXFL in Tampa, WCBD in Charleston, S.C. and WJKS in Jacksonville, Fla.

Here are some of the questions and answers from the poll:

1. What is your all-time favorite situation comedy series on TV?

"M-A-S-H" — 13 percent.
"Three's Company" — 7 percent.
"All in the Family" — 4 percent.
"Cheers" — 4 percent.
"The Jeffersons" — 3 percent.
"I Love Lucy" — 3 percent.
Other — 66 percent.

2. And what is your all-time favorite dramatic series on TV?

"Hill Street Blues" — 9 percent.
"Dallas" — 7 percent.
"Dynasty" — 6 percent.
Other — 78 percent.

3. Which anchorman, if any, do you most trust on the networks' evening news?

CBS' Dan Rather — 38 percent.
ABC's Peter Jennings — 25 percent.
NBC's Tom Brokaw — 17 percent.
None — 14 percent.
Don't Know — 6 percent.

4. And which network, if any, would you turn to, to find out about a major news event such as a war or a disaster?

CBS — 30 percent.
ABC — 29 percent.
NBC — 18 percent.
Cable News Network — 7 percent.
None — 5 percent.
Don't Know — 11 percent.

Leaving a news conference in Washington, D.C., Sunday are, from left, Jacques de Larosiere, managing director of the International Monetary Fund; A.W. Clausen, president of the World Bank; and Ghulam Ishaq Kahm, finance minister of Pakistan. The three are among those attending IMF's annual meeting, opening today.

IMF urges U.S. to cut its deficit

By SALLY JACOBSEN
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — The head of the International Monetary Fund urged the United States today to cut its budget deficits to relieve pressure on interest rates and ensure a lasting economic recovery.

Jacques de Larosiere, at the opening session of the 39th annual meetings of the IMF and the World Bank, said in a prepared text that high interest rates haven't hurt the rebound in the world economy so far.

But, he warned, "high interest rates undermine its long-term sustainability and compound the problems of heavily indebted developing countries."

He said the way to relieve pressure on interest rates was to reduce the budget red ink and not to pump up the supply of money. The U.S. deficit is expected to run about $175 billion in the fiscal year that ends next Sunday.

"This involves action both to bring down fiscal deficits and to curb the growth of public expenditures," he said.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, who was scheduled to address the group late in the day, predicted over the weekend that lower interest rates are ahead.

De Larosiere also urged monetary officials to guard against a renewed outbreak of high inflation. He noted inflation rates were sharply under their high levels of just a few years ago but said they were still ahead of the 1960s.

"The fight against inflation is not yet over," he said.

De Larosiere, whose 147-member organization shapes short-term rescue packages for debt-stricken developing countries, said those nations have fared better in the past year but he cautioned against complacency.

Striking a similar chord was World Bank president A.W. Clausen.

Clausen, in prepared remarks to the opening session of the meetings, said the worst of the debt crisis may be over but that many nations still are suffering severely under the burden of their enormous foreign loans.

"The dead hand of pervasive and persistent poverty still smothers the hopes of millions upon millions of our fellow human beings," he said.

"Their appalling condition," he went on, "is intolerable to all of us on this earth."

He made a special pitch for the nations of sub-Saharan Africa, stricken not only by the world recession but also by a severe drought.

"The continuing fall in per capita incomes in many of these nations demands firm and immediate action on the part of all involved to reverse the decline," he said. Officials of the World Bank on Sunday outlined a special program the agency has put together to try to help out the African nations.

Unlike the IMF, the World Bank provides medium- and long-term assistance for developing nations.

Over the weekend, key finance ministers, attending policy-making meetings of the organizations, threw their support behind a U.S. proposal for special talks next spring on the debt crisis and other global economic issues.

In offering the idea, Regan said, "Nations whose financial and economic futures are inextricably linked must be prepared to exchange views."

Clausen primed to finish term

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite rumors he's fed up and wants out, A.W. Clausen says he intends to finish his term as president of the World Bank.

"I never like to get up in the middle of a meal. I like to at least stay around for the dessert — and I like my desserts," he told reporters recently when questioned on his future plans.

Nevertheless, the rumors persist, mostly because of reported run-ins, both public and private, with officials of the World Bank's largest shareholder — the United States. The bank, owned by 147 governments, provides loans to developing countries to help raise their standards of living.

The disputes have ranged from the administration's refusal to increase its financial support for a key lending agency of the bank to its unhappiness with certain personnel changes at the agency's headquarters here.

Clausen, who was president of the giant Bank of America before joining the World Bank, acknowledges he's had disagreements with the administration but brushes it off as spats in the family that have been overblown.

"For 95 percent of what we're doing we're fully in accord, and the press is focusing on the small end of the spectrum on these issues," he says.

WORLD in brief

South Africans held following illegal funeral

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said today they were holding more than 665 people arrested at three banned weekend funeral and memorial services in black townships.

Authorities said police also used tear gas and rubber bullets against stone-throwing blacks in four segregated townships in the Vaal area, 40 miles south of Johannesburg on Sunday.

Police said 500 people were arrested in Sebohkeng on Sunday, 132 in nearby Bophelong on Saturday and 34 in Sharpeville, near Sebokeng, on Sunday. All remained in jail, and were due to start appearing in court today, police said.

Those arrested in Sebokeng were mourners at a banned funeral for Johannes Sithole, a black man killed in rioting, Lt. Derick van der Walt said from police headquarters in Pretoria. On Friday, Magistrate Ernest Marais Arndt banned the funeral from taking place on a weekend, saying it was likely to endanger public order.

Salvadoran drive starts

NUEVA CONCEPCION, El Salvador (AP) — Army commanders say about 3,500 government troops are engaged in a new drive to clear leftist rebels out of two northern provinces and persuade peasants who fled to return to their land.

The operation began Friday in Chalatenango and Cabanas provinces and is part of the so-called "National Plan," a pacification program financed by the United States. The program was applied in two eastern provinces last year with mixed results.

Lt. Col. Sigifredo Ochoa, commander of the 4th Infantry Brigade in Chalatenango, and Lt. Col. Mauricio Guzman Aguilar, commander of Military Detachment 2 in Cabanas to the east, announced the operations Sunday in separate speeches to peasants.

23,000 Afghans killed

MOSCOW (AP) — More than 23,000 Afghan rebels have been killed by Soviet and Afghan government troops since last spring, Afghan leader Babrak Karmal was quoted as saying by the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda.

Another 2,000 rebels have been captured, Karmal said in a speech quoted by Pravda in a report Sunday from Kabul, Afghanistan's capital.

Filipinos flee volcano

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Crowding into private cars, dumptrucks and carts pulled by water buffalo, an additional 5,000 evacuees poured into the city of Legaspi following a new eruption of Mayon Volcano, Red Cross officials and witnesses said today.

Officials said the total number fleeing from the ash clouds, flowing lava and nearly constant rumbling of the 8,100-foot-high mountain that began Sept. 9 had exceeded 30,000.

Some had begun to return when the strongest explosion since Mayon started erupting blasted smoke and ash nine miles into the air Sunday. The blowup came after a week of declining activity.

Red Sea mine confirmed

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — British mine-hunters have confirmed beyond doubt that the object they found submerged in the Gulf of Suez two weeks ago was a mine and have lifted its instrumentation section from the water for examination, a British Embassy source said today.

A French Embassy official, meanwhile, said French mine-hunters operating where the Gulf of Suez meets the main body of the Red Sea have detonated 10 mines dating to the 1973 Arab-Israeli war and not linked to recent explosions that damaged at least 19 ships since July 9.

American businesses urged to pursue Mexican market

By ARTHUR GOLDEN
Copley News Service

MEXICO CITY — Two years ago, U.S. officials were advising American businessmen interested in Mexico to look elsewhere for new markets. Now the officials are urging the businessmen to come on down.

"If Americans get cautious and chicken hout, our competitors are going to move in," said Rafael Fermoselle, director of the U.S. Trade Center here, which is sponsoring an increasing number of exhibits to drum hup imports of American goods.

h So great is the demand for American hproducts that Mexican companies hpaid a total of $2.5 million hto snap up demonstration models hof U.S. equipment at the trade hcenter.

An exhibitor, Ben Bellas, president hof Bellas Food Engineering, a food equipment processing company of Pomona, Calif., said he came away hfrom the trade center with 62 leads.

"We haven't had that kind of activity hin several years," he said. "Business is coming back."

The intensified demand for foreign industrial goods is a dramatic indicator of Mexico's economic turnaround.

In 1981, when Mexico was riding the crest of an oil boom, U.S. exports to Mexico totaled $17.8 billion. But a year later, when the boom collapsed and the peso was devalued, the value hof U.S. exports sank to $11.7 billion. The figure tumbled to $9.1 billion in 1983.

Meanwhile, U.S. imports of Mexican goods soared from $13.8 billion in 1981 to $16.8 billion in 1983. Over the same period, the United States' $4 billion trade surplus with Mexico evaporated to a large deficit.

The austerity program adopted by President Miguel de la Madrid, in response to Mexico's near $90 billion foreign debt, drastically curtailed Mexican hpurchases abroad.

Yet that policy enabled Mexico to build up a $14 billion trade surplus by the end of 1983. With that financial cushion, U.S. officials say, Mexico will significantly increase imports hthis year to help expand productive capacity.

In fact, imports of American goods hin the first six months of this year bounced back to $5.7 billion, 30 percent higher than in the same period hlast year. Fermoselle believes hthe total for the year will climb hto $10 billion, and could even go has high as $11 billion.

"There is a buck to be made in Mexico, but you have to go out and earn it the old-fashioned way," said the Cuban-born Fermoselle, 37, a former hbusiness consultant who entered hgovernment service four years ago and ran a U.S. trade center in the Dominican Republic.

Fermoselle is very much a salesman. He believes the United States should forget about restrictionist policies hthat choke off imports. Those hpolicies have never developed hjobs back home, he says. To create hjobs and reduce the nation's staggering h$130 billion trade deficit, hhe argues, the United States must hsearch for new markets abroad.

h And Mexico, he says, "is one heck hof a market."

Sure, Fermoselle says, it is possible for an American company to lose money in Mexico. Firms go belly up here, just as they do elsewhere, he says. "Nobody is asking the American businessman to be a fool."

Yet, he says, Mexico's economic rebound means there is plenty of hard currency available, cash that businessmen from places like West Germany, Brazil and Japan would very much like to obtain.

Punchless Cowboys survive Pack, 20-6

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

IRVING—Dallas is 3-1 after beating one-time tormentor Green Bay, 20-6, Sunday, but the Cowboys are playing more like 8-8.

Once again this was a game that hung in the balance until an interception, this one by linebacker Anthony Dickerson with 3:23 left, set in motion a coffin-nailing 58-yard touchdown drive.

The crowd of 64,222, however, didn't begin streaming for the Texas Stadium exits until Tony Dorsett went left and cutback for a seven-yard touchdown only 46 seconds from the end. Until then, the Cowboys were vulnerable, just as they were until a last minute interception sealed a 23-17 win over the Eagles a week ago here.

And, once again, the offense left something to be desired. Still, victory was achieved through the magnificent efforts of a Randy White-led defense which chased quarterback Lynn Dickey to the sidelines after a half with its pressure. But the crown-jewel in the Dallas defense was the frequently-maligned secondary, which accounted for four interceptions and a blocked extra point attempt.

"Our defense played great. Our offense couldn't move the football," Coach Tom Landry summed it up after the game. "It was one of our better efforts on defense. As long as we keep trying we'll get the job done.

"It was a tough game to win. We kept Dickey off balance early and the whole defense was good."

Cornerback Everson Walls glittered brilliantly with two interceptions, once outleaping Green Bay's talented receiver James Lofton in the end zone to intercept. Dennis Thurman also came up with an interception while Ron Fellows and Dexter Clinkscale broke up six passes betwen them, the same number Walls had all by himself.

THIS WON'T go down as one of Dorsett's more memorable games as far as total production, but it was memorable in that Tony went over 8,600 career yards to move into sixth place in the all-time NFL standings.

Despite a paltry 44 yards, the kind of day Tony would normally throw back, he had 22 of them, plus another 10 with a pass reception, in that final 58-yard push.

Moving into a sixth place was a milestone that was not lost on the former Heisman Trophy winner from Pitt. "When I go back and look over my career, they always said I was too small, even when they were recruiting me for college," Dorsett reflected. "John McKay (then at USC) wanted Ricky Bell because he was the tailback prototype while I was 'too small.' Bell isn't in pro football anymore and I'm No. 6. Yes, it means something."

BOTH TEAMS used the blitz effectively and it turned the game into a defensive tug of war most of the humid afternoon in the Irving sauna.

Landry confessed that, "We tried everything to get the offense moving and on that last drive we finally hit on some plays we didn't even have in the game plan and they worked."

Dorsett shows only 286 yards rushing for four games. That normally might be his single game goal. "Dorsett is running hard, but he is not getting the productive results," Landry said. "This will take time for the continuity to come on offense with a new quarterback. He (Gary Hogeboom) has got to learn to read defenses like you would a baseball pitcher's different pitches. It'll come We are trying and moving and that's a good sign."

So how frustrated is Dorsett?

"We're playing poorly, but we're winning. That's a good sign right there. We will be in dog fights all season. We're going through a transition. We're scoring 20 points a game. We need to score 28."

Dorsett feels it is important that the running game be established. "We blend the run and pass. I'm taking my licks, but I'm going with the flow. Right now is a test for all of us. We'll see what were made of."

He does feel every individual on the offensive unit needs to take stock and show a little more pride in what he does. "No, I don't like the way things are going out there. We're not looking like the Dallas Cowboys offensively."

Dorsett felt a lot of the problems Sunday from the running game came "When our guards pulled to lead the interference and Green Bay blitzed through the vacancies."

DALLAS scored 10 early points and it looked like this might be an easy one. Timmy Newsome went up the middle for a one-yard TD with 13:50 elapsed of the first period and Rafael Septien converted. The Cowboys drove with drill-team efficiency in going 80 yards in 11 plays.

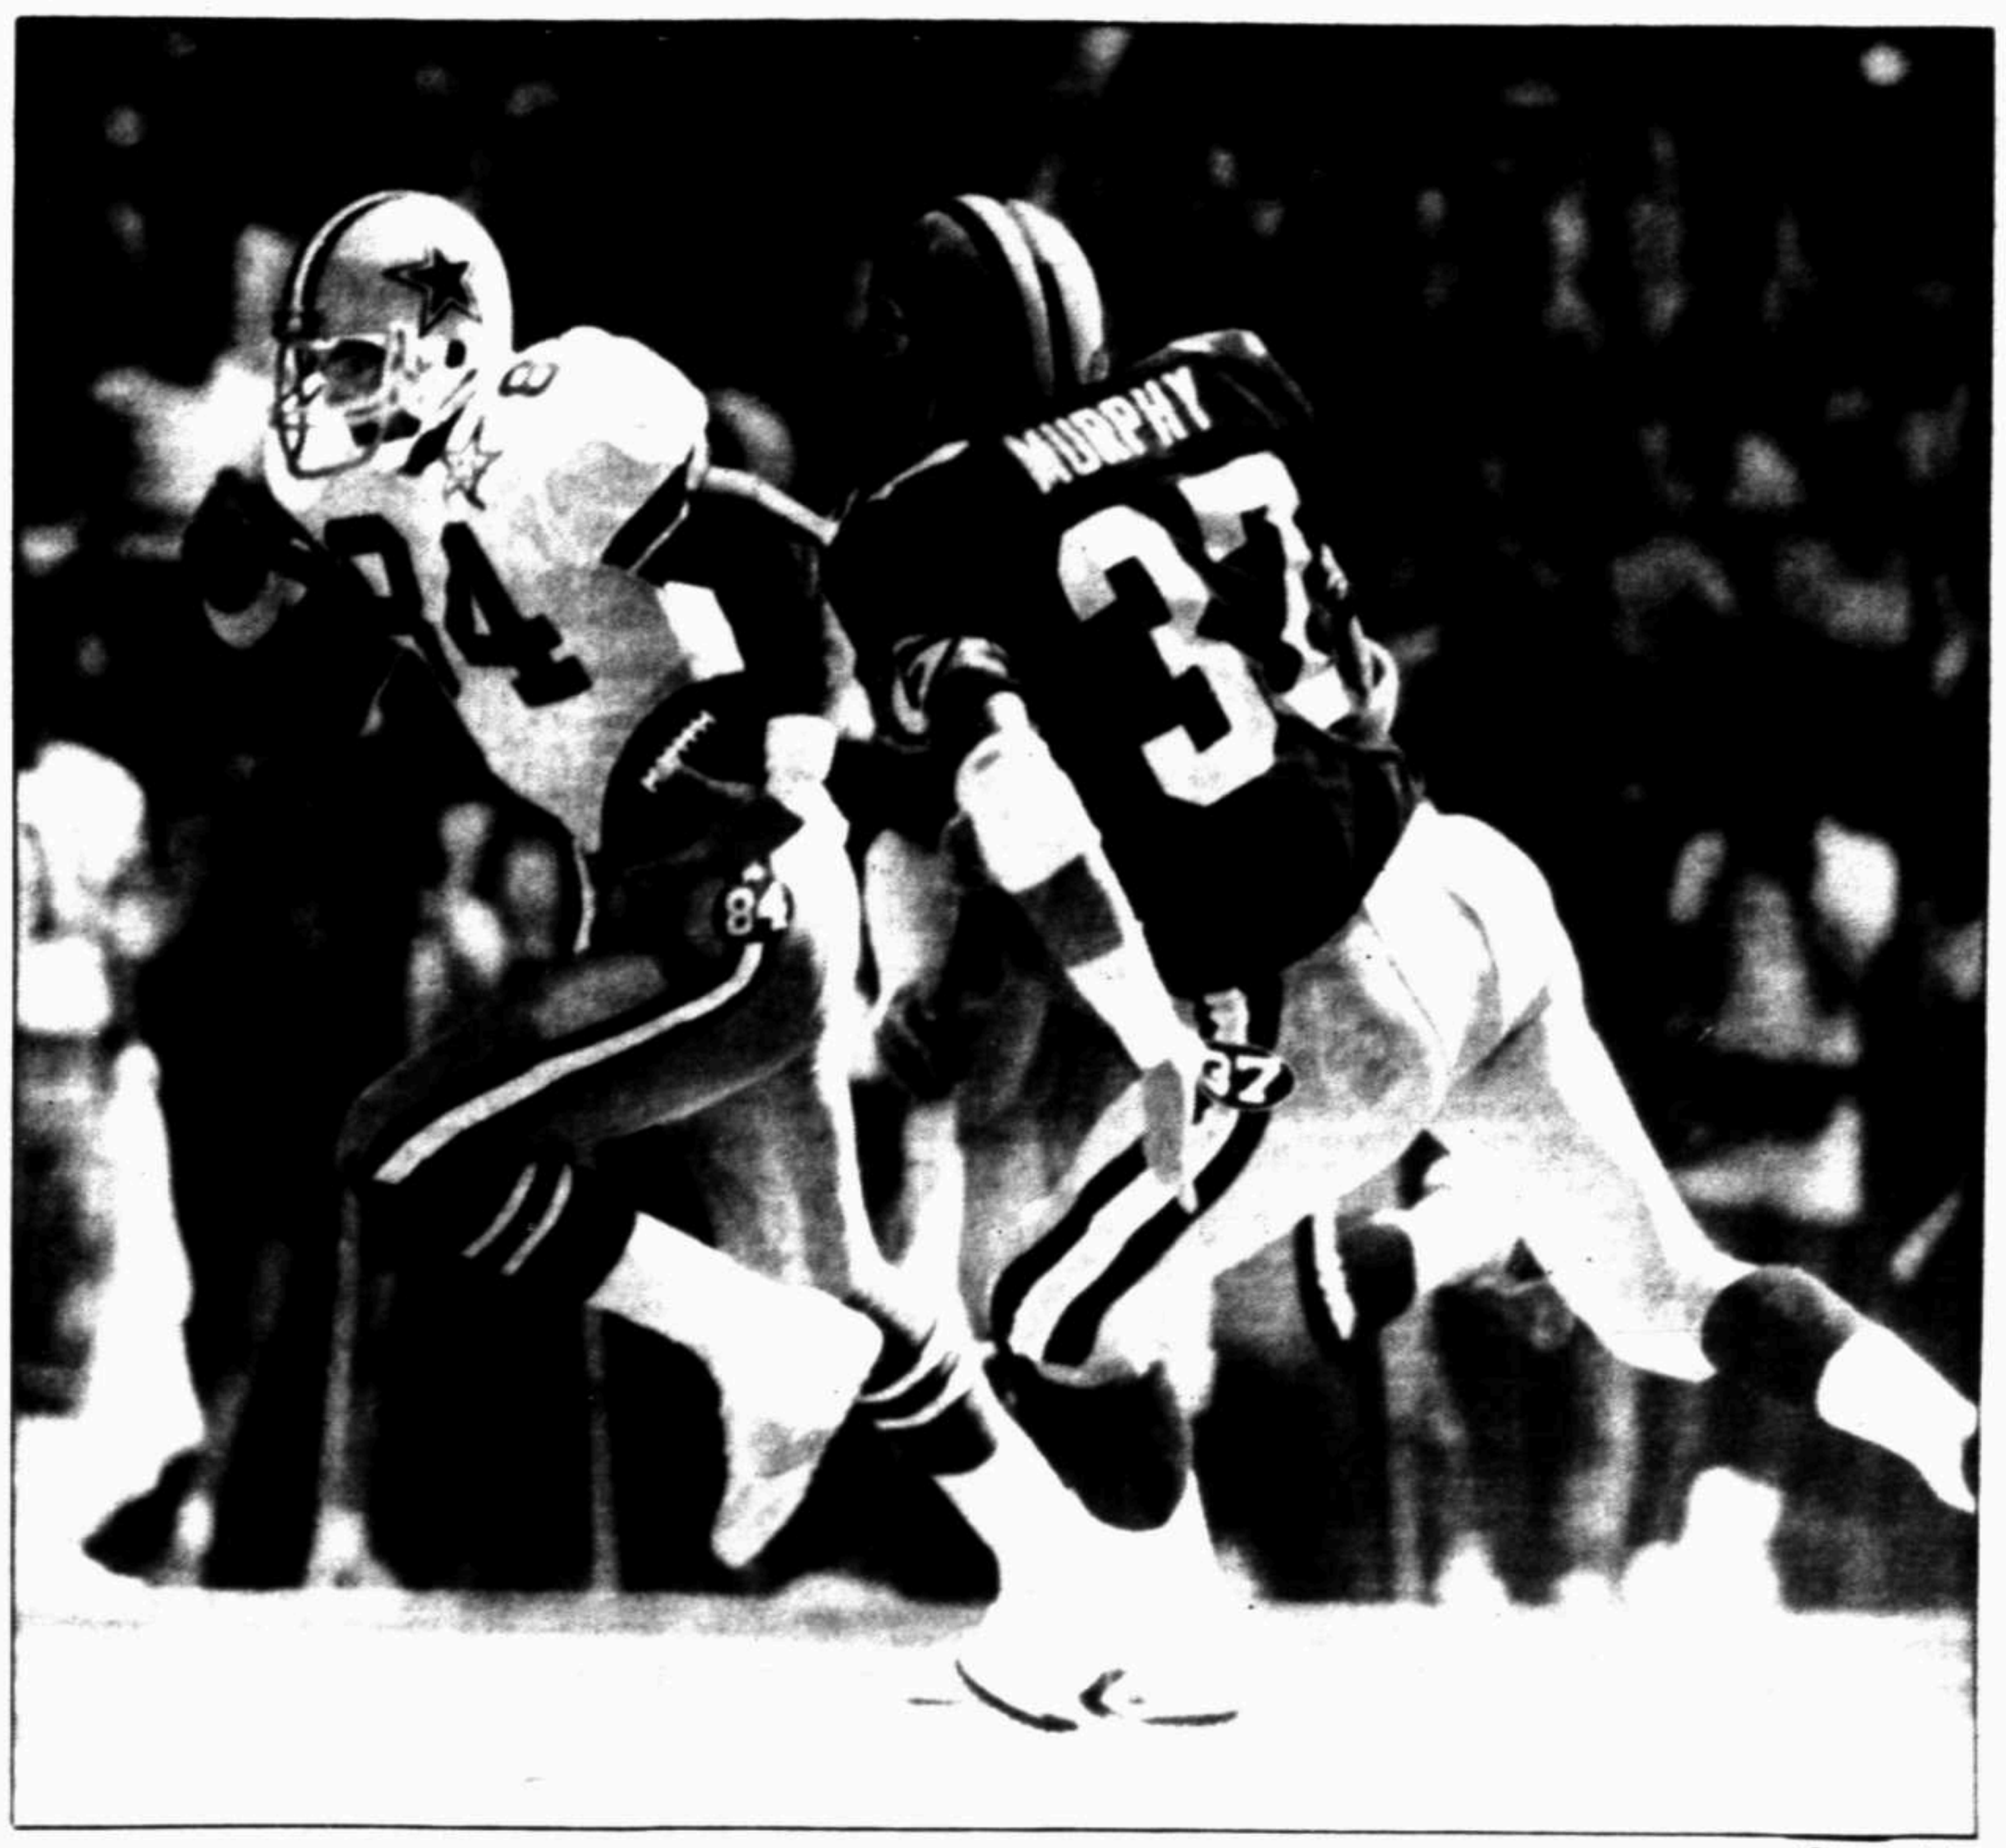
Thurman's interception of Dickey as the period ended gave Dallas possession on the Green Bay 40. The Cowboys stalled on the 14 and Septien made it 10-0 with a 32-yard field goal.

With 12 seconds left in the half Septien booted a 42-yarder after the Cowboys had come from their own 25 to the Packer 14.

The way the defense was playing (the Packers showed 31 yards rushing and Dickey had completed only 5-of-16 for 64 yards and had been sacked five times for minus 36 in the first half) that was more than enough. However, Dallas' offense made it a game.

A punt and 15-yard penalty put Dallas back on its 12 early in the third period. Hogeboom tried to dump off a screen pass, but Robert Brown read it, intercepted and ambled in like a marauding bear from the five with 11:30 left in the third period. Michael Downs then blocked Eddie Garcia's PAT kick and it remained 13-6.

But the Pack was in the game and so was Randy Wright, a rookie quarterback from Wisconsin.



AP Laserphoto

Dallas receiver Doug Cosbie (84) picks up yardage after pass completion as Green Bay's Mark Murphy runs to put a stop to the 36-yard play Sunday in Dallas.

IN THE fourth quarter, Wright got the Packers to the Dallas 24 only to be intercepted by Walls leaping against Lofton in the end zone. "I was giving away some inches there," said Walls.

Undaunted, Wright took the Packers from their 41 to the Dallas 20, where Garcia missed a 37-yard field goal attempt.

Wright was loading up for a final drive as Green Bay, with the help of a penalty, moved out from its 28 to the 44 before Dickerson intercepted to set up the final Dallas drive.

Harried throughout the afternoon, Hogeboom wound up with 17 of 35 for 230 yards and an interception. He was sacked four times for minus 30 yards.

"Hey, how can you be disappointed when you win the game. You can always improve," Gary said. On the TD interception, "I thought I got it over the top of them, but I didn't. Bad play. I should have just lobbed it three more feet."

Sub quarterbacks lead Rams, 49ers to victories

Associated Press

Quarterback Jeff Kemp, who had never started a game in the National Football League, was getting a bit anxious. So was quarterback Matt Cavanaugh, who was making his first start in two years.

The Los Angeles Rams, with Kemp at the controls, kept the ball on the ground their first two possessions Sunday.

"I was ready to throw, but I wasn't going to complain," Kemp said after he filled in for injured Vince Ferragamo and came up with a steady performance that included a touchdown pass in a 24-14 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals.

Cavanaugh, replacing the injured Joe Montana, threw three touchdown passes as the San Francisco 49ers beat the Philadelphia Eagles 21-9.

"I was nervous at the start of the game," Cavanaugh said. "I put pressure on myself because I'm following a guy like Joe Montana, who doesn't make mistakes."

Kemp, a fourth-year pro, helped guide the error-prone Rams over the 0-4 Bengals. Eric Dickerson, who scored the Rams' first touchdown and gained 89 yards before leaving the game with a wrist injury in the fourth quarter, lost three fumbles inside the Cincinnati 20 in the second half.

Kemp connected with Olympic gold medal sprinter Ron Brown on a 52-yard TD pass to give the visiting Rams a 14-7 lead in the third quarter.

"I thought I played a pretty good game," said Kemp, who completed 13 of 23 passes for 205 yards without an interception. "A few times, I was little impatient and threw the ball when I wasn't quite set up."

Raved Rams Coach John Robinson: "Jeff Kemp played an absolutely great game. He did what we asked him to. He really didn't make any mistakes that I know of.

"Jeff hasn't had that many opportunities, and I doubt if there was anybody in the world that thought he was going to come in and do what he did, at least outside of our group."

Ken Anderson threw a 10-yard scoring pass to Cris Collinsworth to pull the Bengals within 17-14 with 1:49 left in the game, but Mike Guman scooped up an ensuing onside kick and returned it 43 yards for a clinching touchdown.

Cavanaugh, in his seventh pro season, made up for the time he has spent as a reserve.

He hit Roger Craig on a 35-yard scoring pass in the first quarter, teamed with Freddie Solomon for a 2-yard TD with 12 seconds left in the second quarter and threw a 51-yard touchdown pass to Dwight Clark in the fourth period.

"I'm happy, elated and relaxed," said Cavanaugh, 17 of 34 for 252 yards and no interceptions during the victory in Philadelphia. "I feel real good and comfortable about the way I played."

NFL Roundup

The 49ers and Miami are the only 4-0 teams in the NFL. The Raiders are 3-0.

Falcons 42, Oilers 10

Steve Bartkowski got just what he needed Sunday — time — and used it to prolong Houston's NFL road misery.

Bartkowski passed for three touchdowns and Gerald Riggs scored two on short plunges as the Atlanta Falcons crushed the Oilers 42-10.

"I've got enough ability and talent that if I have enough time to operate, I'll find somebody open," said Bartkowski, who had only two incompletions in 13 attempts — one a dropped ball and the other a bomb off the finger tips of the intended receiver.

"I felt comfortable," Bartkowski said. "I had a tremendous amount of time, and that's the key. This was a good win for us, one we desperately needed."

Dolphins 44, Colts 7

Miami's Dan Marino, the NFL's top-rated quarterback, upped his season TD pass total to 12 with scoring strikes of 80 and 5 yards to Mark Duper.

Seahawks 38, Bears 9

Chicago's Walter Payton passed Franco Harris to become No. 2 on the all-time rushing list, but it was Seattle's Harris who played on the winning team. Payton went into the game trailing Harris by 34 yards and gained 116 on 24 carries. Harris was held to 23 yards on 13 carries. Payton now has gained 12,091 career yards and he trails only Jim Brown's 12,312.

Browns 20, Steelers 10

Paul McDonald passed for two touchdowns and 222 yards in the second half to help Cleveland win its first game of the season. The Browns trailed 7-0 at halftime after Steeler defensive back Sam Washington returned an interception for a touchdown.

Jets 28, Bills 26

Pat Ryan teamed with Wesley Walker on TD passes of 12, 44 and 35 yards as the Jets held off the Bills.

Giants 17, Bucs 14

Phil Simms threw two touchdown passes and linebacker Lawrence Taylor recorded four sacks in the Giants triumph over Tampa Bay.

Redskins 26, Patriots 10

John Riggins ran for 140 yards and his 100th career touchdown in Washington's victory. The Redskins ground out 235 yards rushing against the Patriots, who had allowed just 205 rushing yards in their first three games.

Mark Moseley added field goals of 19, 42, 22 and 27 yards for Washington.

Vikings 29, Lions 28

Jan Stenerud booted field goals from 35, 52, 37, 34 and 19 yards and Minnesota recovered three second-half fumbles as the Vikings stopped the Lions. Detroit quarterback Gary Danielson threw four touchdown passes, three to Leonard Thompson, in a losing effort.

Broncos 21, Chiefs 0

Sammy Winder rushed for [illegible] yards, a second-quarter touchdown to key the offense while cornerback Mike Harden returned an interception 45 yards for another score to highlight the Broncos' strong defense as Denver beat the Chiefs.

Saints 34, Cardinals 24

Reserve running back Wayne Wilson caught two touchdown passes, one from fullback Hokie Gajan, to help New Orleans beat St. Louis. Wilson's second TD catch came with just more six minutes left in the game to clinch the victory for the Saints.

Cub sweep guarantees piece of NL East crown

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — It's never over until it's over, but Chicago manager Jim Frey went as far to say "one more and I buy the beer," Sunday after the Cubs clinched a tie for the National League-East title.

Reversing a streak of five straight losses, the Cubs swept a doubleheader at St. Louis to gain at least a share of their first title since 1945.

Frey celebrated ... some.

His cheers, however, were limited to the way his Cubs played and had nothing to do with title talk.

"We haven't won it yet," Frey said, cutting any "magic number" questions off before any of the assembled media could get the word "one" as far as their vocal chords.

"People are celebrating too soon and I don't like it. When we win it, come back and see me. That's it."

Not exactly. Outside Busch Stadium, many of the estimated 10,000 Cub fans who ventured south from Chicago to see the Cubs "do IT" were dancing in the streets and blocking traffic in all directions except toward the playoffs.

"I wish they could have won it here where I could see it," said Thelma Ossinger, who was facing an overnight drive home so she can be back at her switchboard today (monday). "They'll do it in Pittsburgh, I'm sure ... but if they don't they'll do it back in Chicago at Wrigley, where they should clinch."

"Oh no, not there," said Cub shortstop Larry Bowa. "I think we'll have the title before then. I hope so. The celebration would be something. There might be no city left for the playoffs."

The Cubs need one more win — or one more loss from the New York Mets.

Chicago got two wins Sunday in a 8-1 and 4-2 sweep of the Cardinals. What they didn't get was any help from the Mets, who kept their flickering hopes alive by defeating Montreal 6-1 to run their winning streak to three games.

And it might not be easy for the Cubs in Pittsburgh, where the division cellar-dwelling Bucs are riding a six-game winning streak.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

January captures Senior PGA crown

Associated Press

GOLF

CONCORD, Mass. (AP) — Don January hit challenger Orville Moody with three quick birdies and pulled away for his 16th Senior PGA victory Sunday in the $175,000 Digital Middlesex Golf Classic.

January, who will be 55 in November, fired a 3-under par 69 for a 54-hole total of 209, 7-under regulation, at the Nashawtuc Country Club.

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Sam Torrance of Scotland defeated Irishman Des Smyth in a sudden-death playoff Sunday to win the Sanyo Open Golf Tournament.

Both men ended the four-round tournament at 281, 7-under par, while David Frost of South Africa was third with 283.

UTSUNOMIYA, Japan (AP) — Shinsaku Maeda of Japan picked up his third victory this season Sunday when he carded a 9-under-par 70 on the final round to claim the $204,000 Jun Classic Golf Tournament by one stroke over Tateo Ozaki. Isao Aoki was third, another stroke back.

INA, Japan (AP) — Taiwan's Huang Yueh-chin shot a 3-over-par 75 Sunday but still managed to win the $122,450 Japan Ladies Professional Golf Association's 72-hole championship by one stroke over Ayako Okamoto and defending champion Tatsuko Ohsako.

AUTO RACING

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Derek Daly was critically injured in a violent crash, and subsequent rain caused postponement until today of the Detroit News Grand Prix Indy car race Sunday.

Daly was flown by helicopter to the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor, where he was listed in criticial condition with several fractures and possible internal injuries. A hospital spokesman said his vital signs remained stable and that the 31-year-old native of Ireland was conscious and alert.

Johnny Rutherford, led through all 33 laps prior to the postponement.

TENNIS

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — American Aaron Krickstein won the first set from Sweden's Henrik Sundstrom 7-6 and was leading 3-1 in the second set when rain postponed their final match in the $100,000 Martini Tennis Open Sunday.

Krickstein and Sundstrom are to resume their match Monday.

BORDEAUX, France (AP) — Spain's Jose Higueras defeated Italian Francesco Cancellotti 7-6 (8-6), 6-1 Sunday to win the final of the $75,000 Passing Shot Tennis Tournament.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Martina Navratilova dominated Michelle Torres 6-1, 6-0 Sunday in the final of the $150,000 Lynda Carter-Maybelline Tennis Classic.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — John McEnroe complained about his serve but still scored a 6-4, 6-4 victory Sunday night against a stubborn Brad Gilbert in the $265,000 Transamerica Open Tennis Championship.

TRACK AND FIELD

NEW YORK (AP) — New Zealand's John Walker sprinted over the final quarter-mile and won the 5th Avenue Mile Saturday with a time of 3:53.62.

Romanian Maricica Puica, a world-class women's distance runner since 1972 but the recipient of world-wide acclaim only in recent years, believes she now is No. 1 in the world after finishing first among the women with a 4:24.35.

MONTREAL (AP) — Jorge Gonzales of Puerto Rico withstood a challenge from Dereje Nedi of Ethiopia to win the Montreal International Marathon Sunday in a time of 2 hours, 12 minutes, 48 seconds.

Nedi finished the 26-mile race in 2:13:27, while Yakov Tolstikov of the Soviet Union was third in 2:16:02.

"But we're not worrying about what the other teams are doing," continued Bowa. "The numbers have always been on our side and right now they're really stacked.

"What we were really concerned about this weekend was getting back on our game. Today we found it."

The Cubs had lost five straight coming into Sunday's doubleheader, the latest setback being a sloppily-played 8-0 defeat to the Cards Friday night.

"We want to get unglued today," said Bowa. "I don't think we were tight from the pressure of other teams. It was more from an eagerness to get it over with and get ready for the playoffs."

Sunday's sweep both buoyed the Cubs spirits and lifted their game back to the level they had played throughout the summer.

Nine of Chicago's 12 runs came on two-out hits. And the Cardinals had just 16 baserunners in 18 innings. Starting pitchers Steve Trout and Dennis Eckersley checked St. Louis on 15 hits and reliever Lee Smith, who has been off form of late, retired the only six Cardinals he faced.

Gary Matthews provided all the offense Chicago needed. He drove in three runs with a double and single in the first game and opened the second with a two-run homer after a rare throwing error by Cardinal shortstop Ozzie Smith.

Keith Moreland had four hits and two RBI in the first game while Ron Cey capped a six-run fourth with a two-run double. In the second game, Bowa and Ryne Sandberg answered a Card rally with run-scoring singles.

"Winning that first game gave us a big lift," said Frey. "I didn't think we had been playing our type of baseball recently. But as I watched batting practice this morning, I felt all that was going to change. You just get that feeling sometimes ... where everything looks and feels better.

"This was a very big day. All of us are anxious to win one more."

"We were like the team we've been again," said Bowa. "We had already heard the talk, but people have been counting us out any time we've lost two or three games this year."

In the first game, Trout got 23 of the 27 outs in his sixth complete game on ground balls. Eckersley and Smith got 10 more ground ball outs in the second game.

"Trout and Eckersley were outstanding," said Frey. "St. Louis had few chances to run the bases. And we got timely hit after timely hit."

In the nightcap, the Cubs stopped Jaoquin Andujar from becoming the major leagues' first 20-game winner this year. "We didn't want Andujar to be able to say he did it against us," said Bowa. "That is one of the big changes this year. We've turned every game into some type of a challenge. You don't win them all, but it makes it easier to keep going."

And if the Cubs rise to one more challenge, it'll really be over.

"There will be dancing in the streets," said Matthews.

In New York, Dwight Gooden scattered five hits over eight innings and Mookie Wilson scored a pair of runs. The 19-year-old right-hander, 17-9, won for the eighth time in his past nine starts, striking out nine to run his major league-leading total to 276. It was the first time in four starts he did not go the distance and the first time in six he failed to strike out at least 10 batters in a game.

In San Diego, Kurt Bevacqua's run-scoring single with in the 11th inning gave the Padres a 2-1 victory over Atlanta and reliever Greg Booker his first major-league victory. Craig McMurtry held San Diego without a hit until Carmelo Martinez doubled to right with two outs in the seventh inning.

Also in the NL, Johnny Ray drove in two runs with a single as Pittsburgh ran its winning streak to six games with a 4-2 victory over Philadelphia, and rookie Rob Deer homered and George Riley posted his first big-league victory as San Francisco downed Los Angeles 4-2.

In a night game, Terry Puhl and Bill Doran hit solo homers and Bob Knepper, 15-10, tossed a four-hitter as Houston beat Cincinnati 2-1. Nick Esasky homered for the Reds' only run.

Minnesota pulled into a first-place tie with Kansas City in the American League West with the Twins beating Cleveland 5-1 and the Royals losing 5-1 to Oakland. Third-place California, a 3-1 loser to Texas in 10 innings, is 1½ games back.

Randy Bush snapped an 0-for-17 slump with a two-run, tie-breaking homer and Rick Lysander pitched four scoreless innings in relief to carry the Twins past Cleveland. The victory was Minnesota's fourth in a row. Mike Smithson, Ed Hodge, Lysander and Ron Davis combined on a five-hitter, Davis picking up his 29th save.

Oakland's Rickey Henderson singled, doubled and slammed a two-run homer to power the A's attack. Chris Codiroli held the Royals to four hits until Bill Caudill relieved him in the seventh and finished up for his 34th save.

Henderson also stole his 60th base of the season and scored two runs.

In Anaheim, pinch-hitter Marv Foley's two-out single in the 10th scored pinch-runner Billy Sample from third to give the Rangers their victory. Larry Parrish led off the inning with a double off Jim Slaton. Sample ran for him and took third on George Wright's fly ball.

Detroit's Jack Morris teamed with two relievers on a two-hitter for his 19th victory and Sparky Anderson became the first manager in major-league history to win 100 games in both leagues as the Tigers beat the New York Yankees 4-1.

Marty Castillo drove in two runs with a single and a homer, Kirk Gibson homered and Lance Parrish singled home a run as Detroit — which clinched the AL East title Tuesday — raised its record to 100-55.

Anderson's Cincinnati Reds teams won more than 100 games in 1970, 1975, and 1976 in the National League. The Tigers need five more victories in the final seven games for their winningest season ever.

In other AL games, Doug Loman hit his first two major-league homers as Milwaukee beat Toronto 8-5, Britt Burns and Ron Reed combined on a three-hitter and Vance Law had three hits and drove in two runs in Chicago's 4-0 victory over Seattle, and Tony Armas and Jim Rice each cracked a two-run homer as Boston beat Baltimore 6-2. Rice had a sacrifice fly as well, giving him the AL runs-batted-in lead with 121. Armas tops the majors with 42 homers, and has 119 RBI.

Stewart prophecy holds

Vegas Golf

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — It was six weeks ago, in Flint, Mich., that Payne Stewart turned prophet.

He had just lost, by one shot, to Denis Watson in the Buick Open. It was the first triumph in four years on the American PGA Tour for Watson, a South African.

"By letting him win, I think I've created a monster," Stewart quipped at the time.

And now, less than two months later, Watson suddenly, dramatically is challenging the more famous (and no relation) Tom Watson for Player of the Year honors.

Denis Watson credited a coach and a sports psychologist with his brilliant burst that was temporarily capped by his one-shot triumph Sunday in the richest event on the American tour, the $1,122,500 Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational.

The latest triumph, secured by a last-hole birdie in howling, 40-mile per hour winds that swirled and twisted off the towers of a nearby resort hotel, enabled Denis Watson to join Tom Watson, who did not play here, as the only three-time winners on the tour this season. It also lifted Denis Watson into second place (behind Tom) on the year's money-winning list, and boosted him into second place (60-58 behind Tom) on the complicated points list that determines Player of the Year.

It also prompted Tom Watson to make a last-minute decision Sunday to compete in the LaJet Classic in Abilene, Texas next week.

Denis Watson, 28, said Dave Leadbetter, a teaching pro in Florida, and Bob Rotella, a sports psychologist at the University of Virgina, are the principal architects of his success.

Gooden near perfection

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

It's like a smudge at the bottom of a Rembrandt painting, a nick at the edge of a Rodin sculpture. It is the blemish that spoils perfection.

New York Mets rookie Dwight Gooden is 19 years old with a fastball that zooms up to home plate at 90-plus miles per hour and a curve that dips down and away, leaving batters flailing at it in frustration. He leads the major leagues with 276 strikeouts, a rookie record, including nine in a 6-1 victory over Montreal Sunday that pushed his record to 17-9.

Gooden is 8-1 in his last nine starts with a 1.07 earned run average over that span. His strikeouts per nine inning ratio is 11.39, comfortably ahead of Sam McDowell's record 10.71 set in 1965.

He isn't the perfect pitcher, but he's as close as the Mets have come to that elusive commodity in some time. Fans seem disappointed when he retires batters on routine grounders or fly balls. He has trained them to expect strikeouts and when batters hit the ball, it is almost as if he has somehow failed.

There is, however, one small problem in Gooden's storybook season. He has displayed great difficulty in holding runners on first base.

The first 46 runners attempting to steal on him this season were safe. He caught No. 47 when umpire Harry Wendelstedt reversed a safe call last week in Philadelphia. The Phillies added another steal before that game ended, making Gooden 1-for-48, a distressing chink in the right-hander's otherwise awesome arsenal.

Then, on Sunday, Gooden picked Andre Dawson off first base in the first inning and held him close enough in the sixth to allow catcher Mike Fitzgerald to throw him out on an attempted steal. It was a gratifying accomplishment for the pitcher and his bosses.

"He got thrown out on a changeup, too, about 82 miles per hour," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said. "Dwight's getting a little quicker to first base."

The Mets have been working on Gooden's move and that will be the No. 1 priority when he reports to the instructional league after the season. The risk, of course, is disturbing the rest of the package which has been, well, almost perfect.

"He wants to work on it and he wants to improve," Johnson continued. "We've given him a few things and he knows what he has to do. He'll make adjustments."

There will, however, be no interference with Gooden's basic tools and the way he uses them. You wouldn't mess with Rembrandt's brushes or Rodin's chisels.

Gooden knows where the work must be done.

"I've been trying to cut my big leg kick out of the stretch, freeze the runners a bit, but not change my delivery to the plate," he said. "You've got to be quick and change your motion to the plate."

It is the high kick, however, which provides much of the thrust for the Gooden fastball.

"He's got a big kick and a long delivery, which is part of the reason he throws as hard as he does," pitching coach Mel Stottlemyre said. "The number one thing is what they throw to the plate.

"He'll be capable of getting better at holding runners close. There are things we can do. He'll have a quicker delivery and a better move next year. He's a good enough athlete that he'll adjust. It's been a little problem, but it hasn't kept him from going 17-9.

"It's been the first year that it's been important for him. He's never had that many runners on base before."

You can not, remember, steal first base and Gooden has done quite well, thank you, in keeping runners from getting that far.

The problem here is a case of fine-tuning but one that requires great care. You don't want to ruin the rest of the art by trying to fix the smudge or the nick.

MC golf team holds first place

From Staff Reports

SNYDER — Despite a 302 and fourth place finish here Saturday at the Western Texas College golf course, Midland College managed to maintain a first place tie with New Mexico Military Institute, both with nine points in the Western Athletic Junior College golf race.

NMMI won the WTC event with a 285 to catch MC, the leader after the first round of play last week. Odessa College and WTC followed with 289 while NMJC had 309 and South Plains 310.

David Pritchett led MC with a 74 while Steven Venter, Leon Van Rensberg and Randy Winn all had 76. Chris Gomez had 78 and John Sundberg 80 for the Chaps.

Following MC and NMMI in the overall standings are OC, 8½, NMJC, 7; WTC, 5½ and SPC, 3.

The next conference tournament will be at Midland's Green Tree Country Club on Oct. 5.

Waco becomes distant mecca for Cowboys' fans

WACO, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboys fans go to great lengths, Waco for example, these days to cheer for their favorite National Football League team.

All of the Cowboys home games, pre-season and regular season contests, have failed to sell out this season in time for the NFL to allow them to be televised locally. A game has to be sold out 72 hours in advance of game time in order for the game to be locally televised.

That wasn't the case for Sunday's game against the Green Bay Packers at Texas Stadium. The game was a sellout by Saturday, two days late.

No one knows for sure what is keeping Cowboys fans away from the ticket booths. It could be the $18 per ticket charge, pre-season reports that the Cowboys were going to be a team in transition or the 2-1 record they had prior to Sunday's 20-6 victory over the Packers.

So Cowboys fans who don't have a so-called tall "Cowboy attenna," a private satellite dish or stadium tickets must travel to a town far enough away to pick up the game on television.

Several groups chose Waco as their Sunday afternoon retreat.

Even some fans with tickets chose not to use them and drove to Waco instead.

Diane Hooks, her husband and two other couples from Dallas checked into the Waco Holiday Sunday to watch the game there.

"We normally go to the game, but with the Cowboys playing like they're playing, we decided to come and watch on TV," she said, noting they have season tickets on the 50-yard-line.

"That way, we can see the re-plays and go to sleep when they slow down," she added.

Dale Hastings, a Dallas printing executive who also watched the game at the Holiday Inn here, said was the team's progress that has kept him from th stadium.

"We're certainly hoping the offense improves, or th will be the last itme we drive 100 miles to see Ga (Hogeboom, Dallas quarterback) and his boys," Hasting said.

"But we enjoy the drive. It's something to do on Sunday afternoon," he said. "When you're as big fa as we are, we're also their harshest critics. We like give them hell."

TCU football coach Jim Wacker, left, hugs lineman Tommy Shehan Saturday after the Horned Frogs defeated Kansas State, 42-10. TCU is 2-0 and off to its best start in 12 years.

Wacker's Wackos roll on

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Swept up in the excitement of a 42-10 victory over Kansas State, Texas Christian's inimitable coach, Jim Wacker, put the fledgling 1984 season in his own special perspective.

Said he: "Anthony Gulley, Kenneth Davis and Tony Jeffery — what a twosome!"

Indeed, his "twosome" has taken the Horned Frogs from the darkness and despair of 1983 to a pair of impressive triumphs and stamped them as a factor in the Southwest Conference title chase.

"I JUST can't cotton-pickin' believe those kids," gushed Wacker after quarterback Gulley had scored three touchdowns and Davis and Jeffery had rushed for a total of 351 yards.

"We told 'em we had to find out if we were for real and they did it. We've done it in two non-conference games, but now we have to go prove it against a great SMU team."

Wacker's Wackos, 2-0 and off to their best start in 12 years, have been splashing fresh ink all over their record books in 1984, beginning with last week's 62-18 thrashing of Utah State.

Davis, a junior, carved out 239 yards on 29 carries against Kansas State while redshirt-freshman Jeffery picked up 112 on 13 trips.

A week ago, Jeffery logged 182 yards while Davis recorded 145.

"I'm just thrilled for those kids," said Wacker, who vowed never to repeat last year's nightmarish 1-8-2 campaign, his first at TCU.

"I feel kinda bad for our receivers, but we were moving the ball so well on the ground I just didn't see any point in throwing it more."

Gulley tossed only seven passes, completing four for 53 yards, but it mattered little. The Frogs spotted Kansas State a quick touchdown, then blew them away with Gulley's superb ball handling and the running of Davis and Jeffery.

TCU scored a touchdown in each of the first three quarters and exploded for 21 points in the final period while the fiesty Frog defense dealt the Wildcats serious misery.

THE BIG Eight visitors, 20-3 winners a year ago, were permitted but 153 yards rushing and another 89 passing as their record fell to 1-2.

"It looked like we got in a horse race, and we didn't have as many horses as they did," said Kansas State coach Jim Dickey.

"They whipped us just about every way possible."

Looking ahead to next week's game with unbeaten, nationally-ranked SMU, Wacker said:

"Our kids have to be realistic about playing SMU. They have a great, great football team, and we haven't beaten them in 100,000 years or so. They will be a great test for us."

Turning philosophical for a moment, Wacker, aware that TCU has not had a winning season in recent history, added:

"The only way our guys can come to believe in themselves and what we're doing is to experience it for themselves. That's how winning traditions get started. You can't coach something like that."

Frog cornerback Sean Thomas already believes. "We are for real. I tell you, this feels great," Thomas said.

Raiders hope to join unbeatens

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Raiders will attempt to join two other National Football League teams with unbeaten records through four weeks of the 1984 season tonight when they take on the San Diego Chargers.

Kickoff time at the Los Angeles Coliseum for the nationally televised game is 8 p.m., CDT. A crowd of at least 65,000 is expected.

The game will be blacked out in Los Angeles because it wasn't sold out 72 hours before kickoff time. The defending Super Bowl champion Raiders are favored by 5½ points.

Entering the weekend, there were four NFL teams with perfect records — the Raiders, the Miami Dolphins, the San Francisco 49ers and the Chicago Bears.

Miami and San Francisco won Sunday, but the Bears were thumped by Seattle 38-9 for their first loss of the year.

If the past means anything, the Raiders will probably raise their record to 4-0 this season. That's because they have compiled a 20-2-1 record in Monday Night games since the prime-time series began in 1970.

"Monday nights have been very good to the Raiders, the Raiders have been very good to Monday nights," Los Angeles Coach Tom Flores said. "I have no idea why we play so well on Monday nights. I'd play all season on Monday nights, if they'd let us."

San Diego Coach Don Coryell, whose team brings a 2-1 record into the game, also appears to like the Raiders' chances, at least it sounds like he does.

"They might have the best team in the history of football," Coryell said. "Well, they're the best team I've ever played against, if you want to put it that way, and they've done nothing to indicate they're not the best this year.

The Raiders hold a 29-17-2 advantage in their series with the Chargers, and have won all four games played between the teams since the Raiders moved from Oakland to Los Angeles in 1982.

Economists: nine more months of recovery

WASHINGTON (AP) — The current economic recovery should continue for at least another nine months, but after that rising interest rates and giant federal budget deficits make a recession more and more likely, a national group of economists said today.

The National Association of Business Economists said a survey among its members found them much less optimistic about future economic growth than the Reagan administration.

Where the administration's latest forecast sees no recession on even the far horizon, a majority of the economists surveyed — 53 percent — believe the next downturn will begin either in the second half of 1985 or the first half of 1986.

Asked to cite a reason for the recession, over 70 percent picked large federal budget deficits and high interest rates.

An overwhelming 82 percent of those surveyed believed that current deficits were stimulating the economy too much, but the group split on the best approach for attacking the problem.

President Reagan's view that government spending should be cut without raising taxes was supported by 42 percent of the economists, while 41 percent favored some type of tax increase.

But the group overwhelmingly favored action even if it came in the midst of the next recession — a time traditional economics would warn against either budget cuts or tax increases for fear of worsening the downturn.

"Business economists are more concerned about the correct structural policies for the long-run than they are about trying to fine-tune the business cycle," said Ben Laden, vice president of the association.

Even though the economists were critical of the fiscal policy being pursued by the administration, they overwhelmingly endorsed Reagan over his Democratic opponent, Walter Mondale, who has released a deficit-reduction plan calling for a combination of budget cuts and tax increases.

Asked which candidate has the best plan for solving economic problems, 64 percent said Reagan, 9 percent picked Mondale and 27 percent said neither candidate. A similar question in 1980 found 60 percent supporting Reagan and 11 percent picking then-President Jimmy Carter.

The economists said the current marked slowdown in economic growth was a "temporary lull" and not a sign that the recession will begin this year.

But the view among the economists was for slower growth next year than the Reagan administration is predicting with somewhat higher inflation.

Disney Productions heads named

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Walt Disney Productions, besieged by takeover attempts, low attendance and threatened strikes at its theme parks, has named two Hollywood studio executives to run the company.

The Disney board of directors announced Sunday it has chosen Michael Eisner and Frank Wells to run the company, marking the first time Disney will be overseen by officers drawn from outside the organization founded in 1923.

Meeting behind closed doors Saturday, the 13-member Disney board unanimously picked Eisner to serve as chairman and chief executive officer, Disney spokesman Ben Chester said.

Eisner, long sought by the Disney organization, was Paramount Pictures Corp. president until just 11 days ago.

Wells, a vice president of Warner Bros. Inc., the motion picture subsidiary of Warner Communications Inc., will be Disney's president and chief operating officer, Chester said.

"I am honored to be asked to lead Disney, renowned as the foremost company in family entertainment, and to have the opportunity to work as a partner with Frank Wells," Eisner said.

"Frank and I have commenced studies ... to determine the best method for maximizing near and long-term values for Disney shareholders," Eisner said. "We believe Disney has a great asset base which can be more fully utilized for the benefit of Disney shareholders and as a base for building increased value in the future."

The choices came as the company faces several financial difficulties, including takeover attempts by outside investors seeking to sell off the assets; dwindling of its movie market; and lower attendance and threatened strikes at its theme parks, Disneyland and Disney World.

Eisner and Wells succeed former chief executive officer Ronald Miller, Walt Disney's son-in-law, and Raymond L. Watson, the Orange County developer who was Disney's chairman for the last 18 months.

Watson will continue as chairman of the board's executive committee.

Miller was ousted as chief executive two weeks ago after failing to keep the board's confidence in its protracted takeover fights with Minneapolis financier Irwin Jacobs.

Jacobs leads a group of stockholders that control 7.7 percent of the Disney shares and announced last week that it may seek a takeover of Disney.

He does not hold a seat on the board of directors, but told the Los Angeles Times he "endorsed them (Eisner and Wells) for the jobs and I had given that message to the board."

Their selection edged out another favorite for the top position, former 20th Century Fox Film Corp chief Dennis Stanfill, who reportedly had the backing of several board members.

No strike at Disney

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The management of Disneyland says it is "delighted" that unionized workers at the amusement park decided to vote on a proposed contract after turning down a pay offer last week.

Disneyland spokesman Bob Roth said management offered workers a "substantially modified" proposal from the three-year pay freeze proposal rejected Sept. 17.

The park was operating normally Sunday with a full work force.

The vote on the proposed contract covering 1,844 employees was to be conducted today at the Retail Clerks Union Hall in Buena Park.

Union spokesman Michael O'Rourke has said a two-thirds "no" vote would constitute strike authorization.

Japanese hold to fuel miser lead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japanese automakers are maintaining their newly acquired reputation for turning out the most miserly of the gas misers, but, for the first time, Detroit also has moved ahead of Germany in America's fuel economy rankings.

A two-seater Honda Civic captured the Environmental Protection Agency's top mileage rating for the second year in a row, followed by the Japanese-made Chevrolet Sprint and a diesel engine Nissan Sentra among the 1985 models coming out this fall.

But capturing fourth and fifth place ahead of a Volkswagon, for the first time since EPA began publishing the ratings in 1973, are American-made Fords and Chevrolets. Both those American models, however, are powered by diesel engines produced abroad.

The gasoline-fueled Honda Civic CRX-HF with a 1.5 liter engine recorded 49 miles per gallon in EPA's city driving test and 54 miles per gallon on its highway tests.

Last year, the two-seater Honda Civic with a 1.3 liter engine ranked first at 51 miles per gallon. But the two ratings cannot be compared directly because EPA is deflating the laboratory results for the first time this year to better reflect what a motorist can expect in real-world driving.

"Consumers wanted more credible mileage figures and display of both a city and highway number," said EPA spokeswoman Martha Casey.

So, in addition to deflating the laboratory results by 10 percent for city driving and 22 percent for highway use, the agency also is returning to publishing both figures instead of combining them, as it has done since 1979.

The labels, required on every new automobile, also have been redesigned to make them more readable. That new design, however, is optional this year and will not be required until the 1986 models come out. Dealers also are required to make free guides comparing models with one another available in their showrooms.

The three-cylinder Chevrolet Sprint, a "minicompact" that also is marketed as the Pontiac Firefly, ranked second behind the Honda coupe, yielding 47 mpg in the city and 53 mpg on the highway. Though marketed under American nameplates, the gasoline-powered car is a Suzuki SA310 produced in Japan.

The third-place Nissan Sentra diesel got 45 mpg in city driving and 50 mpg on the highway.

That was just slightly ahead of the most efficient Ameican-made car, the Ford Escort diesel and its sister, the Mercury Lynx, at 43 mpg city and 52 mpg highway. The engines for both cars are made in Japan by Mazda.

In fifth place was Chevrolet's Chevette diesel, also sold as the Pontiac T1000, at 39 mpg city and 47 mpg highway.

The Volkswagon diesel, being marketed for the first time this year as a "Golf" instead of the Rabbit, continued its fall from fourth place last year and first in 1983 to eighth in 1985, behind Toyoto's diesel Corolla and Honda's four-seat Civic models.

For those auto aficionados whom the price of gasoline or diesel fuel is no problem, six Rolls Royce, two Jaguar and two Mercedes Benz models can out-guzzle any other new cars on the road.

Any of the Rolls, at 8 and 9 mpg in the city, will mount up an annual fuel cost of $2,083 based on driving 15,000 miles per year and a gasoline price of $1.18 per gallon. To go the same distance in a two-seater Honda costs $368.

Meanwhile, General Motors Corp. extended its 1984-model production run for some models to make an extra 225,000 small cars and delay the introduction of 1985 versions of those models in order to boost its '84 mileage figures.

Both GM and Ford failed to meet the 1984 government standard of 27.0 mpg for their fleets and could face millions of dollars in fines in the future. They escaped fines this year by using credits earned in past years when their cars exceeded the standards.

But Ford has used up all of those credits against its 25.3 mpg fleet average on 1984. GM still has some credits to apply to the 27.5 mpg fleet standard for 1985 and beyond after getting only a 24.6 mpg average from its '84 models.

The two giant U.S. automakers are asking that the standards be relaxed now that Americans are showing renewed interest in bigger cars since gasoline prices have quit going up.

GM spokesman Stan Hall and Ford spokesman Richard Judy said their companies will seek Transportation Department approval of marketing plans that would let them make up the fuel mileage shortages in later years.

Otherwise, "somebody around here is going to be writing a very big check," said Hall. At $5 a car for each tenth of a mile per gallon shortfall, the fine for GM could reach $25 million in a 5-million car year, he said.

Ford and GM officials made a similar request before congressional committees this summer. However, it was met with vehement opposition from the Chrysler Corp., which will have no trouble meeting the 27.5 mpg standard after down-sizing all of its cars and equipping all but three specialized models for police, taxi and limousine use with four-cylinder engines.

Steelworkers gather to reorganize

CLEVELAND (AP) — Facing its worst membership decline since the Great Depression, the United Steelworkers gathered for a constitutional convention pledging support for Walter F. Mondale and blaming President Reagan for the ailing state of America's steel industry.

"The Reagan years have been desperate years," USW President Lynn Williams said Sunday as delegates of the 720,000-member union prepared to meet today. "We'll do everything we can to bring about the Democratic victory."

"There's been a depression created deliberatly by the Republican administration," Williams, the first Canadian to head the union, said. "The United States is on the edge of ceasing to be a major manufacturing power and is slipping ... The price our members have paid for that is staggering."

The union, with roughly half the members it had in the early 1970s, is meeting in Cleveland for the first time since the organization was founded here in 1942. Its endorsed candidate, Mondale, is scheduled to address an estimated 3,000 delegates Wednesday morning.

The union has criticized Reagan's plans to stem imports of cheap steel by negotiating voluntary quotas with foreign producers. Last week, Reagan refused to set mandatory quotas despite the U.S. International Trade Commission's recommendation that quotas and tariffs be placed on 70 percent of all steel imports.

Williams has called Reagan's plan an amalgam of "weak and uncertain promises" and said he is "terribly concerned" that they may evaporate after the election.

More than 2,000 resolutions have been submitted for consideration at the weeklong convention, said union spokesman Gary Hubbard. Some reflect the tensions created by hard times.

"Both the international union and its thousands of local unions are suffering grave financial difficulties because of the decline in membership," USW Local 2227 said in petitioning the delegates to refund $11 million from the union's strike fund. The Pittsburgh local's petition said the strike fund had beome too large.

Another proposal would establish rules of succession to the presidency that would automatically boost a vice president into a vacancy at the top. Proponents say that would save the expense of an election, but Williams said he opposes altering the rules.

The proposal stems from a bitter presidential election in March in which Canadian and U.S. members selected Williams.

Williams is serving the two remaining years of the term of Lloyd McBride, who died in November.

Houston L&P rate increase tied to nuke

AUSTIN (AP) — The Houston Lighting & Power rate hike hearing, which is sure to include a battle over South Texas Nuclear Project construction costs, opens today at the Public Utility Commission.

The company wants a $554 million increase which it says will include only $288 million in rate hikes. The PUC staff says the company, which serves more than a million customers, is entitled to a $393.4 million increase.

But Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle, who represents residential and small business customers, says HL&P rates should be cut by $110.3 million. Boyle wants the commission to bar HL&P from passing nuclear project construction expenses on to consumers.

HL&P wants to add about 7.36 percent to rates. Company spokesman Don Beeth said the $393.4 million hike recommended by the PUC staff would be inadequate to meet increased demand in the Houston area.

The hearing is expected to last about four weeks.

Dollar drops again against all currencies

LONDON (AP) — The dollar, its record-shattering march abruptly interrupted at the end of last week, dropped further against all major currencies in early trading today as the West German central bank sold off millions more dollars.

Gold prices rose.

In Frankfurt, an official of the Bundesbank, which led central bank intervention Friday, confirmed the West German bank had sold more dollars in the first hour of trading.

He refused to disclose the amount, but West German banking sources estimated Bundesbank sales at some $200 million.

On Friday afternoon, after the dollar had battered other currencies to record lows through the week, central banks intervened with multi-million dollar sales to prop up their currencies in a turn round in the last few hours of trading.

In London, the dollar fell back further against the British pound, which cost $1.2510 in early trading. That was more expensive that late Friday's $1.2490, and well above last Thursday's record closing low of $1.2182.

Early dollar rates against other key currencies compared with late rates Friday:

–3.0162 West German marks, down from 3.1025.

–2.4965 Swiss francs, down from 2.5312.

–9.2550 French francs, down from 9.5150.

–3.3950 Dutch guilders, down from 3.4900.

–1,860.00 Italian lire, down from 1,915.00.

–1.3150 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3202.

Japanese markets were closed for a national holiday. In Western Europe the dollar was quoted at 243.85 yen, well down from Friday's closing 247.45 yen in Tokyo.

Gold opened in London at $347.10 bid an ounce, up from $346.50 late Friday and edged up in later trading. London's five major bullion houses set the midmorning "fixing" at $347.25 an ounce.

In Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion market, gold opened at $348.80 bid, sharply up from $344.50 late Friday, but eased about a dollar an ounce in later deals.

Silver followed gold up. It was quoted at $7.57 bid an ounce compared with $7.405 late Friday.

Earlier, gold closed in Hong Kong at a bid price of $346.73 an ounce, up $5.39 from Saturday.

New oil boom predicted in British North Sea fields

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — British oil companies are predicting a new production boom in the North Sea that will keep the country self-sufficient in oil and natural gas into the 21st century by exploiting 80 new oil fields.

The 41-member United Kingdom Offshore Operators Association said in a report recently that tapping the undeveloped fields would head off a decline in North Sea production expected in 1986.

The report, the latest in a string of optimistic forecasts by leading oil industry figures, boosted hopes of prolonging the income from North Sea drilling that underpins Britain's economic recovery.

George Band, the association's director-general, said the study was "a signpost to a very bright future."

"The oil industry is firmly committed to the second phase of development with the aim of carrying those benefits as far forward into the 21st century as possible," he said.

Britain, self-sufficient in oil since 1981 and now a major oil exporter, currently is producing a record 2.6 million barrels of oil a day, with 4 billion cubic feet of gas daily.

The study pinpointed 96 undeveloped discoveries containing an estimated 4.1 billion barrels of oil and 27.4 trillion cubic feet of gas.

By exploiting these known reserves, some bypassed earlier as uneconomical, the report said Britain's oil output by the end of the century could still be as much as 1.4 billion barrels a day, with gas production of 5.3 billion cubic feet.

The survey came amid rising hopes that big new fields will be discovered in the deeper waters north and west of Scotland's oil-rich Shetland Islands.

Major companies led by Continental Oil Co., Shell-Esso and British Petroleum are developing new technology to move into the so-called "frontier zones."

They believe that up to 7 billion barrels of oil, about half as much as has already been discovered in the North Sea, is lying in the frontier areas, including the Eastern Atlantic.

The waters there are more than 2,000 feet deep, posing major technical problems. The deepest operating zone in the North Sea is 600 feet.

The government has made clear it will give preferential treatment in next year's allocation of new North Sea blocks with proven oil deposits to companies prepared to spearhead the new phase.

Stock market mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — Auto issues were the standout performers in a mixed session in the stock market today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.86 to 1,207.60 by noontime on Wall Street.

But declines held a 5-4 lead over advances among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

GM shares climbed 1⅝ to 77¾; Ford Motor 1⅛ to 46¼, and Chrysler ¾ to 30⅞.

The NYSE's composite index edged up .01 to 95.68. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .53 at 215.12.

Volume on the Big Board came to 31.89 million shares, against 58.58 million at the same point Friday.

Budget deficit...the nagging problem that won't go away

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Even as the economy prospers you can hear it everywhere — a persistent, nagging, haunting voice that says something's got to give if the budget deficit isn't lowered.

Prosperity, it says, cannot survive deficits. It is the voice of bankers, savers, borrowers, candidates, blue-collar workers, executives, Republicans, Democrats, and even the president whose budget it is.

But the deficit, all $174.3 billion of it for fiscal 1984, sits like a rock on the White House lawn, adding another layer to the national debt, which in four years has risen from just over $900 billion to nearly $1.6 trillion.

Two more organizations, both claiming nonpartisanship, added their voices to the commentary this week.

"The failure of our political leaders, executive and legislative, to confront the problem ... has brought us to the verge of an economic crisis of historic proportions," said the Committee on Developing American Capitalism.

The Conference Board concurred. Without significant reductions in the size of prospective federal deficits, said Ezra Solomon, the U.S. economy cannot expect to enjoy prolonged price stability and expansion simultaneously.

In effect, both groups said the budget deficit should go, just as they have said before, and just as hundreds of other organizations have also urged.

But the more interesting and perhaps far-reaching suggestions came from the committee on capitalism, which believes that moving the rock will require a restructured tax policy.

According to a committee paper, it is now clear "that neither political nor economic circumstances will allow a solution on the spending side alone," and that some new form of taxation on consumption must be tried.

"To imagine that an additional $200 billion per year of spending reductions can be made is wishful thinking — a dangerous exercise at this point," the paper stated.

But, said the authors — Albert Ullman, former chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, economist Albert Sommers, and R. Keith Martin, dean of the School of Business, Fairfield (Conn.) University — it is also unrealistic to think that the money can be wrung out of the present income tax system.

How, therefore, would they manage what to date has been unmanageable?

They would simplify and reduce income taxes. They would apply a spending limitation, based on a certain percentage of the nation's total production of goods and services. And they would add the consumption tax.

The precise nature of the latter tax wasn't specified, except to say that it should be a value added tax — a tax based on the value added to a product at each stage of its production — rather than an excise tax.

The authors maintain that obtaining revenue in that manner would be far more productive than the current income tax system, which they say encourages counterproductive economic behavior, to wit:

"The high rates encourage us to work less rather than more and to earn less taxable income rather than more; they encourage debt and discourage savings.

"Because of the exemptions and special treatments, it (the income tax system) encourages us to make economic decisions on the basis of tax consequences rather than economic expectations.

"By taxing savings, it encourages us to spend rather than save or invest," and thereby denies industry the funds to move "from outmoded mass production methods" toward technically and quality oriented systems.

The committee, founded in 1981 by John Winthrop Wright, president of Wright Investors' Service, says that all this would be in keeping with its aim of refining and restating the basic principles of American capitalism.

Masking for tinnitus just may be a 'cover-up'

Dear Dr. Solomon: What is meant by "masking" in the treatment of tinnitus? It sounds as if you are trying to cover up, but I don't see how this is possible. Would you please explain?— Cecil, Portland, Maine

Dear Cecil: In one sense masking for tinnitus (a ringing in the ear) is a cover-up, since the masker actually produces a noise. The rationale is that the patient is better able to ignore the noise produced by the masker, since it is an external sound, than the sound of tinnitus, which is internal. However, possibly more than one-third of all patients do not respond to this form of treatment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My closest friend takes estrogen because she says her doctor told her that it would help prevent a heart attack. We are both in our fifties. Do you recommend estrogen for women our age to guard against heart attacks? — Mrs. E.A., Santa Rosa, Calif.

Dear Mrs. A.: The advisability of estrogen replacement therapy must be determined on an individual basis, and I suggest you discuss your question with your own physician. In general, however, it appears that treatment with estrogen may in fact decrease the incidence of cardiovascular disease in postmenopausal women.

According to Dr. Morris Notelovitz, of the University of Florida College of Medicine in Gainesville, the beneficial effect is a result of a decrease in total cholesterol and in low-density lipoprotein cholesterol (the bad cholesterol) and an increase in high-density lipoprotein cholesterol (the good cholesterol).

Dear Dr. Solomon: You once answered a question about how ultrasound could be used for treatment as well as for diagnosis. I've heard it could be used to treat glaucoma, and I would like to know whether this would be possible in my case. — Wendell, Riverside, N.Y.

Dear Wendell: If you have glaucoma, I hope you are under the care of an ophthalmologist. Only he or she will be able to prescribe an appropriate form of treatment. This is particularly important since glaucoma, if untreated, is a progressive disease.

As for your specific question, ultrasound has been used successfully in some patients with glaudoma that was the result of disease or injury. Dr. D. Jackson Coleman, of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, has reported that the procedure did not reverse any of the damage that was already present, but it did halt progression of the disease. The treatment takes about 20 minutes and can be repeated as necessary with minimal or no side effects.

For Bertha, Washington, D.C.: Snoring during sleep is not under the person's control. The only device that can keep a person from snoring is one that keeps him awake. I suggest you have your husband see a physician; snoring does not reflect a flaw in one's character.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write him at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Bond's maturity date depends on issue date

Q. I have been holding some Series H savings bonds since the 1950s. How long will my bonds continue to pay interest?

A. That depends on each bond's issue date. Hs issued before February 1957 reach final maturity and stop paying interest 29 years, eight months after they were issued. Hs issued since February 1957 reach final maturity in 30 years.

Early Hs had original maturity periods of nine years, eight months; the others had 10-year original maturities. All Hs have two 10-year extended maturities.

• • •

Q. The balance on our low-interest mortgage is about one-third of our home's market value. Will this make it easier to sell the house, which we plan to do soon?

A. It could, given the right set of circumstances.

That mortgage would have to be "assumable" — meaning that whoever buys your home can take over the mortgage and make payments just as you have. Some mortgages are assumable. Some aren't.

The buyer will have to either come up with a lot of money or obtain a second mortgage. If the buyer has enough cash to pay you the two-thirds of the selling price and assume the mortgage, the deal will be done. If the buyer makes a smaller cash payment and assumes the mortgage, he or she might be able to get a second mortgage for the rest of the purchase price.

• • •

Q. Looking at published tables of prices, interest rates and yields on U.S Treasury bonds, I don't understand how the yields are figured out. To calculate a bond's yield, I divide the annual interest by the bond's market price. But my resulting number never agrees with the yield in the published tables. What am I doing wrong?

A. You're calculating the "current yield" — not the "yield to maturity," which normally is used.

Yield to maturity takes into account the difference between a bond's current price and the bond's face value, at which it will be paid off at maturity. That difference in price is prorated over the remaining life of the bond.

When a bond is trading at less than its face value, an increment is added to the current yield to come up with yield to maturity. When a bond is trading at more than its face value, an increment is deducted.

Two points to keep in mind are that annual interest on U.S. Treasury and most other bonds is a fixed percentage of face value and that bond prices are quoted as a percentage of face value.

A $1,000 face value bond with a 9 percent interest rate pays $90 annual interest. If that bond's market price is "100" — face value or $1,000 — its current yield is 9 percent. So is its yield to maturity.

But, if that bond is trading at less than its face value, its yield to maturity is higher than its current yield. At a price of 90, that bond's current yield would be 10 percent. And if the bond is due to mature in exactly 10 years, you might think that 1 percent should be added — making the yield to maturity 11 percent.

It doesn't come out precisely that number. Because of the compounding of interest for each year until maturity on the difference between the bond's market price and its face value, this bond's yield to maturity works out as 10.65 percent.,

You'll have to take my word for that number. Calculating yield to maturity gets mighty complicated. The best place to find the yields to maturity of different bonds with different prices, interest rates and maturities is in bond yield tables in "basis books" at brokerage firms and banks.

In search of green pastures

The cholla plant — tree cactus — is being brought under control on some ranches by fire — burning the rangeland once every several years to control unwanted vegetation and to enhance the range grass growth.

GAIL — "Our problem in West Texas is water," lamented Cecil Meadors, a brush control researcher with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research Center in Spur. "Without it, you can't take a bath or grow a good crop."

And without water, cattle get scarce.

That has become Borden County's burden.

The mother cow population here has dropped to 15 percent of its normal range of 15,000 to 20,000 head due to the lack of forage and surface water. The ranchers have few water wells; good, plentiful groundwater is a rarity.

The rangelands have been virtually cleared of cattle to prevent over-grazing and severe damage to the land. Reduction of the cattle count helps ensure that the rangeland isn't wasted and makes for a naturally hardy land if the drought doesn't altogether wipe out the grasses.

"That's the problem," Alan Day, the Borden County agricultural agent, said in a recent rangeland tour. "We're out of water...Every single rancher in Borden County has de-stocked."

The cattle have been hauled to greener pastures — in the Alpine-Fort Davis-Marfa area, to the Panhandle and to Eastern New Mexico — where rainfall has been plentiful, the grass is thicker, and cattle can forage in relative luxury. Rangeland, if it's available, can be leased for about $10 or $12 a cow-calf pair, but a ton of hay will cost the rancher about $125.

THE 75 "true" ranchers here have reduced their herds for two basic reasons.

— They want to prevent their cattle from over-grazing and damaging the rangeland. Once damaged from overgrazing and the drought, the delicate rangeland in this semi-arid country takes years to recover.

— They want to keep their cattle alive and fat. Besides, they can't afford the high cost of feed. Those who can't afford to lease good rangeland are forced to sell of their herds.

"This is the second year of this thing (drought)," said Day. "That's the problem."

Unlike cattle, the sheep numbers are stable, Day said. He said that there are about 8,000 ewes in the county.

Day figured that the ranchers will survive another drought, since most of them own their own ranches. Their fathers and their forefathers ranched in this land where antelopes and coyotes outnumber the people. Borden County has 907 square miles, which puts it on a par with Midland County, but it has only 859 people, including the 189 folks in Gail, the county's only town, which is about 70 miles northeast of Midland.

But the 160 farmers who planted about 31,000 acres of cotton here this year might not fare so well.

"They live and die by each crop year," said Day.

"EVERYBODY suffers in a drought," noted J.F. Cadenhead, Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) range specialist from Vernon. "With this supply and demand, everybody loses."

When cattle numbers are high and beef is plentiful, prices drop. The rancher is at the disadvantage. When herds are down, prices rise but relatively few ranchers have any cattle to sell. Most lose.

"The cattle numbers in Borden County have been drastically reduced," said Cadenhead. "It's not just one year. Everything has been building up — hard-growing season this year..., hard-growing season last year. The rains have been very spotted."

Dr. Barron Rector, TAEX range specialist from College Station, pitched in some academics. Of a five-inch rain, only about 5 percent — [illegible] of an inch — gets to the grass. The rest is either lost to evaporation, runoff or to mesquite brush, cacti and unsavory weeds.

"Because you get two inches of rain doesn't mean you're going to get two inches of grass growth," he said.

Rancher Bill Phinizy is enduring the drought.

"'82 and '83 in Borden County were below average but not dramatically so. It didn't shake everybody up. (But) '84 has been a hit-and-miss situation," he said. "Really bad."

COMPOUNDING the ranchers' plight are higher equipment and supply prices and relatively high interest rates and low cattle prices.

Back in the 1950s, when the interest rate was at 4 percent, a cow sold for $300 a head.

"In 1984," said Phinizy, "your cows are selling for $300 (a head)."

And 30 years ago gasoline was 18 cents a gallon. "Now, it's $1.09 or $1.15 a gallon, depending where you are...That's been a bugaboo." And the interest, though far above that 4 percent, has dropped to 13 percent.

In 1978 and 1979, "a real good cow if she was pregnant," brought the rancher $750. Today, a cow-and-calf pair will bring [illegible] the price of a [illegible] pickup truck has at least doubled since 1978.

"There's a dramatic fluctuation in prices [illegible] of living. There always has been and there [illegible]," Phinizy said. "[illegible] don't fluc[illegible] income does."

Woman harangues council in 'city of hell'

HOUSTON (AP) — Jewell Davis Lemons steps up to the podium in Houston's city council chamber and surveys her audience.

"My subject today is homosexuals, pornography and child molesters (who) have destroyed the city of Houston," she tells council members. "And who permitted them to do that? You all did."

The feisty Mrs. Lemons, who celebrates her 76th birthday in December, made her inaugural appearance before the council seven years ago. Since then, she's labeled Houston the "city of hell" and Mayor Kathy Whitmire the "madam of the city."

"Shakespeare says the evil men do lives after them," she told the council recently. "The good is oft interred in the bones. And I say this city is dead. It has to be resurrected to live."

Mrs. Lemons, who stands at just over 5 feet, beats her message on the podium with the gusto of an evangelical preacher delivering the Lord's message to sinners.

"God bless you if you're with me," she tells Councilman John Goodner.

Goodner merely shakes his head and the audience roars with laughter.

Mrs. Whitmire tells the fiery speaker her three-minute time limit has ended. Mrs. Lemons collects her notes and moves back to her seat.

"Do you think I'm cute?" she asks a photographer.

Jewell Davis Lemons, 76, beats her message on the podium of Houston City Council with the gusto of a preacher delivering the Lord's message to sinners. Mrs. Lemons, an attorney, has addressed the council regularly for the past seven years, labeling the city of Houston the "city of hell" and Mayor Whitmire the "madam of the city."

After such a performance, the photographer can only say yes.

The day is a typical one for Mrs. Lemons, who says it is her responsibility to make people understand about immorality and corruption in city government.

"I haven't seen any decency in this city hall, and it's getting worse and worse," she says.

Mrs. Lemons, who earned her law degree in 1941 in Fort Worth, worked as an enforcement attorney for the Office of Price Administration during World War II, then as an attorney in San Antonio.

Now, she travels to Houston council meetings in her lime green Volkswagen Beetle. She ran for mayor of Houston in 1979, promising to "run the criminals out of Harris County.

"My platform was double the police and double their salary," Mrs. Lemons says. "If that didn't help, I'd ask the governor to bring in 90,000 Texas Rangers and put the city under martial law."

She lost.

Not all of Mrs. Lemons' opinions hit home with the council members she scolds.

"She has a tendency to exaggerate and I think she enjoys the notoriety," Goodner says. "Often you'll see a twinkle in her eye when she's talking about 'Hell Town,' her latest name for Houston."

"Without her we would certainly lack an interesting dimension to Houston political debate," says Councilman George Greanias. "She keeps us on the edge of our seats."

But Councilman Ernest McGowen Sr. says he sees more noble intentions in Mrs. Lemons' tirades.

"I just wish that more people who are convinced in their views toward city government would come forward and express them," McGowen says.

Since she moved from San Antonio to Houston in 1976, Mrs. Lemons figures she's appeared before the council some 50 to 60 times.

President, four others resign from MCT board

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Ed Vogler, president of Midland Community Theatre's board of governors, three vice presidents and the chairman of the membership committee have resigned. The resignations were announced at Sunday's annual membership meeting at Theatre Midland.

During the meeting, Vogler was asked, "I would like to know what went on at the board meetings that caused these mass resignations. I don't think we've ever had that many resignations in one year. Can you give us an explanation?"

Vogler responded, "I do not think that it's appropriate at this time. I think it would detract from the purpose of this meeting."

Vogler, after 36 years of service at MCT, refused to comment following the meeting on his reasons for leaving. His resignation is effective at the end of this month.

Other board members who have resigned include Jerry Green, vice president in charge of business; Frank Petty, vice president in charge of production; Janice Thomas, vice president in charge of financial development; and Jim Waterman, chairman of the membership committee. Only Green could be reached for comment by press time.

"It was just taking up too much of my time," Green said. "I was on several committees, and I thought it was best for the theater to have someone who could devote more time."

Members whose terms expire at the end of this month are Sandy Landua, treasurer; Shari Koziol, secretary; and Mary Lou Cassidy, special projects. Mrs. Koziol and Miss Cassidy were appointed by the board to fill board vacancies.

New members elected Sunday to the board of governors were George Irish, Conrad Coffield and Mary Jane Young. Their terms expire in 1987.

Current at-large members of the board of governors are Corby Considine, Linda Hicks, Mrs. Koziol and Miss Cassidy, whose terms expire in 1985; and Tom Madonna, Patteann Daniel and John McGuigan Sr., whose terms expire in 1986.

The 1984 season has been one of change. MCT also has lost assistant director Ted Strickland and set designer Brett Batterson.

It was also announced that Don Bachmann, executive director, has hired Dave Lehman as designer-technician to replace Batterson. Ed Brasso and Jerry Yoder, both choreographers, have been hired on a part-time basis. Also hired on a part-time basis are dance instructors Brian Taylor and Peggy Crush-Jacobs.

The theater has changed the position of assistant director to business manager, and Bachmann said he hopes to have one hired this fall.

Also announced at the meeting was the upcoming 1985 season, both for Theatre Midland and next summer's Summer Mummers, held in the Yucca Theatre.

Coming to Theatre One's stage in 1985 will be "Peter Pan," "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," "Agnes of God," "Greater Tuna," "They're Playing Our Song" and "Harvey." In Theatre Two, productions of "The Dining Room (tentative)" and "School for Wives" are planned.

The production slated for this coming summer's Summer Mummers will be a centennial presentation featuring the history of Midland and written by former Midlander Randy Hicks, who was employed by the Midland Chamber of Commerce. Hicks now lives in Dallas. The working title is "Catawamped Among the Cacti" or "What's a Butteful Girl Like You Dune in a Place Like This?"

Arlen Edgar, president of the Yucca board and member of MCT's board of governors, reported that 299 attended the special non-alcoholic night presented this summer at Summer Mummers. "This was the second highest Thursday night we had during the run of the show." He indicated several such performances would be planned for the next Summer Mummers.

This season's Mummers brought in $168,000 with $51,000 going out in expenses, netting $117,000 for MCT, Edgar said.

MCT's membership is now at 5,244, an increase of about 14 percent over 1983, Vogler said in his report. "Some of these numbers represent double membership; therefore, we have not been able to arrive at an accurate count."

In the past year, MCT gave 152 performances in 14 productions to a total attendance of 52,836, Vogler said. "However, it is hoped that in the coming year or so we can expand the present number of productions to a level similar to that which we enjoyed when we moved into the present facility. For example, in the 1978-79 season, we presented 21 productions, giving 194 performances and enjoyed an attendance of 56,209."

Murderers of restaurant employees remain at large

KILGORE, Texas (AP) — David Maxwell's pressed shirts still hang in a closet, a year after he and four other people were abducted from a fast-food restaurant and killed along a remote country road.

For widow Lana Maxwell, her husband's belongings and a son, David Wayne Maxwell II, born six months after his father was killed, are constant reminders of the loss she suffered.

"I just wanted to stay home, be a good wife and have babies," said Mrs. Maxwell, 19.

"When I first got pregnant, I was really excited, but after David was killed, I wasn't. Having a baby is something you want to share," she said.

Two of Maxwell's fraternity brothers — Monty Landers and Joey Johnson — were also among those killed, left with gunshots to the back of the head.

Landers' father, Oscar Landers, still questions law enforcement officers about the investigation. There have been no arrests despite a $50,000 reward offered by Kentucky Fried Chicken.

"They have just tried to pacify me and get me out of the door as fast as they can," Landers said. "I don't know what I can do. I want to see an end to this."

Police say little information has turned up in the $2,000 robbery at a Kentucky Fried Chicken franchise on Sept. 23, 1983, and the slayings that followed.

Investigators believe the killers are in the Kilgore area, and say there are suspects.

Mary Tyler, 37, a mother of four, Opie Ann Hughes, 39, Johnson and Maxwell, both 20, all worked at the restaurant.

GOP delegates vow to include minorities, Democrats

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Through speeches, resolutions and prayers, Texas Republicans vowed to expand their party by including more minorities and disenfranchised Democrats before November.

Even before the state GOP convention began Friday, state party Chairman George Strake announced a 16-city advertising blitz to attract conservative Democrats who feel the "Democratic Party has gone so far left that it has left Texas."

"We would welcome into the Republican Party of Texas all Democrats and Independents who believe in peace through a strong national defense, support of the president on Central America, the right to bear arms, crime victims compensation, voluntary prayer in schools and Ronald Reagan for President," Strake said in a pre-convention news release.

The two-day convention, which drew less than the 5,000 delegates expected, opened with a prayer by Bishop Rene Gracida of Corpus Christi, a Hispanic leader in South Texas. Rev. E.V. Hill, a black minister, opened the second day of the meeting.

More than $1,200 worth of items stolen

From Staff Reports

More than $1,200 in items were reported missing Sunday from the W. Stewart Williams residence at 4105 Westminister Drive. According to reports, the family returned home and found the door between the garage and the house open.

Taken were a $325 revolver, $400 worth of jewelry and $200 in cash.

An $800 shotgun was reported taken in an automobile burglary Sunday night. Bill Russell said he had parked his pickup in front of 1405 S. Jefferson for 45 minutes Saturday night and when he returned, the shotgun was gone.

Juan Sanchez Chavez of 1617 E. Oak, told police he returned home Saturday and found his front door had been pried open. Taken were a stereo system worth $400 and cassette tapes worth $320.

Frank J. DeCampli of 4534 Sinclair, No. 1-101, reported his home had been burglarized and $535 worth of items were taken. Entry apparently was gained by prying open a sliding glass door. Taken were a pistol, buck knife and assorted pieces of jewelry.

An all-grain wheat mill worth $500 was reported missing by Fred DeBusk of 3616 Andrews Highway. The mill apparently was removed from an open garage Saturday while the family attended a junior high school football game.

Bill Worley of No. 23 Hialeah told police a pistol valued at between $200 and $300 was removed from the console of his car sometime between Saturday night and Sunday morning. The unlocked car was parked in his open garage, reports indicated.

An early Saturday morning house fire resulted in minor damage to a utility room at a residence occupied by Pat Ethredge, 2301 Wedgewood. According to fire department reports, the blaze began when a cardboard box between the dryer and wall caught on fire. Minor damage was reported to the wall and curtains.

Temporary Austin residents 'batty' about bridges

AUSTIN (AP) — Four people have been bitten by bats in Austin in the past three weeks, as city officials say thousands of migrating bats have formed colonies in the area.

Many of the flying mammals, Mexican free-tailed bats, have gathered under bridges across Town Lake near downtown and in the overhangs of some buildings, officials said.

"We have contemplated putting screens under the bridges to keep them out, but that would be expensive and we don't know the effect it would have," said Dr. Phil Zbylot, chief of community and preventative medicine for the Austin-Travis County Health Department.

"If we drove them off, it may cause a worse problem in residential neighborhoods," Zbylot said.

Zbylot estimated that 2 percent to 3 percent of the bats are rabid.

Dr. Juan Nieto, chief of the emergency room at Brackenridge Hospital, said three men and a woman have been told to take rabies shots for bat bites since the first of the month.

"We've had more than the normal number of people treated for bat bites," Nieto said.

"A lot of the bites seem minor, because there is little pain and not much of a wound. But any breaking of the skin by a rabid animal can be dangerous.

"One man was bitten when a bat flew into his hotel room, and another man got a cut forehead when he was hit by a bat as he walked down Sixth Street," Dr. Nieto said.

Al Lundstedt, director of events for the men's athletic department at the University of Texas, said Memorial Stadium "is a bat roost all year long. We have a small colony that stays there all the time, and then we'll get anther 10,000 to 20,000 this time of year when they migrate."

Zbylot said the bats will stay until the first freeze of the season, which usually occurs by Thanksgiving. After that, they head toward Mexico, he said.

'Message Relay Service' helps deaf communicate with others

From Staff Reports

With about 130,000 deaf persons and 1 million hearing-impaired persons living in Texas, there is a need for more services to help these people. Midland has a Message Relay Service for the deaf.

"Message Relay is designed to help a deaf individual make telephone calls to a person who does not have a TDD or a TTY (telecommunications device for the deaf). Deaf persons who need to make appointments or send messages by telephone to individuals or organizations which cannot be contacted by TDD can call the local council for the deaf and have messages relayed to them," according to a spokesman with the Highland Council for the Deaf.

"For example, a deaf individual who owns a TDD and needs to make an appointment with a doctor who does not have a TDD, may contact the local council to request help in calling the doctor's office to set up an appointment for the deaf person. The council then will call the person by TDD and relay the appointment to him," the spokesman said.

Deaf Midlanders have access to the message relay service if they own a TDD. The phone number in Midland and Odessa is 682-7119. The person who will answer is Gena Yarger. She can arrange for an interpreter and give information.

Beach house combines art, architecture

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — A Federal Express man who delivered a package to the home of Carol and Roy Doumani was so boggled by their big white house on the Marina Peninsula that he later drove his wife clear across town to see it.

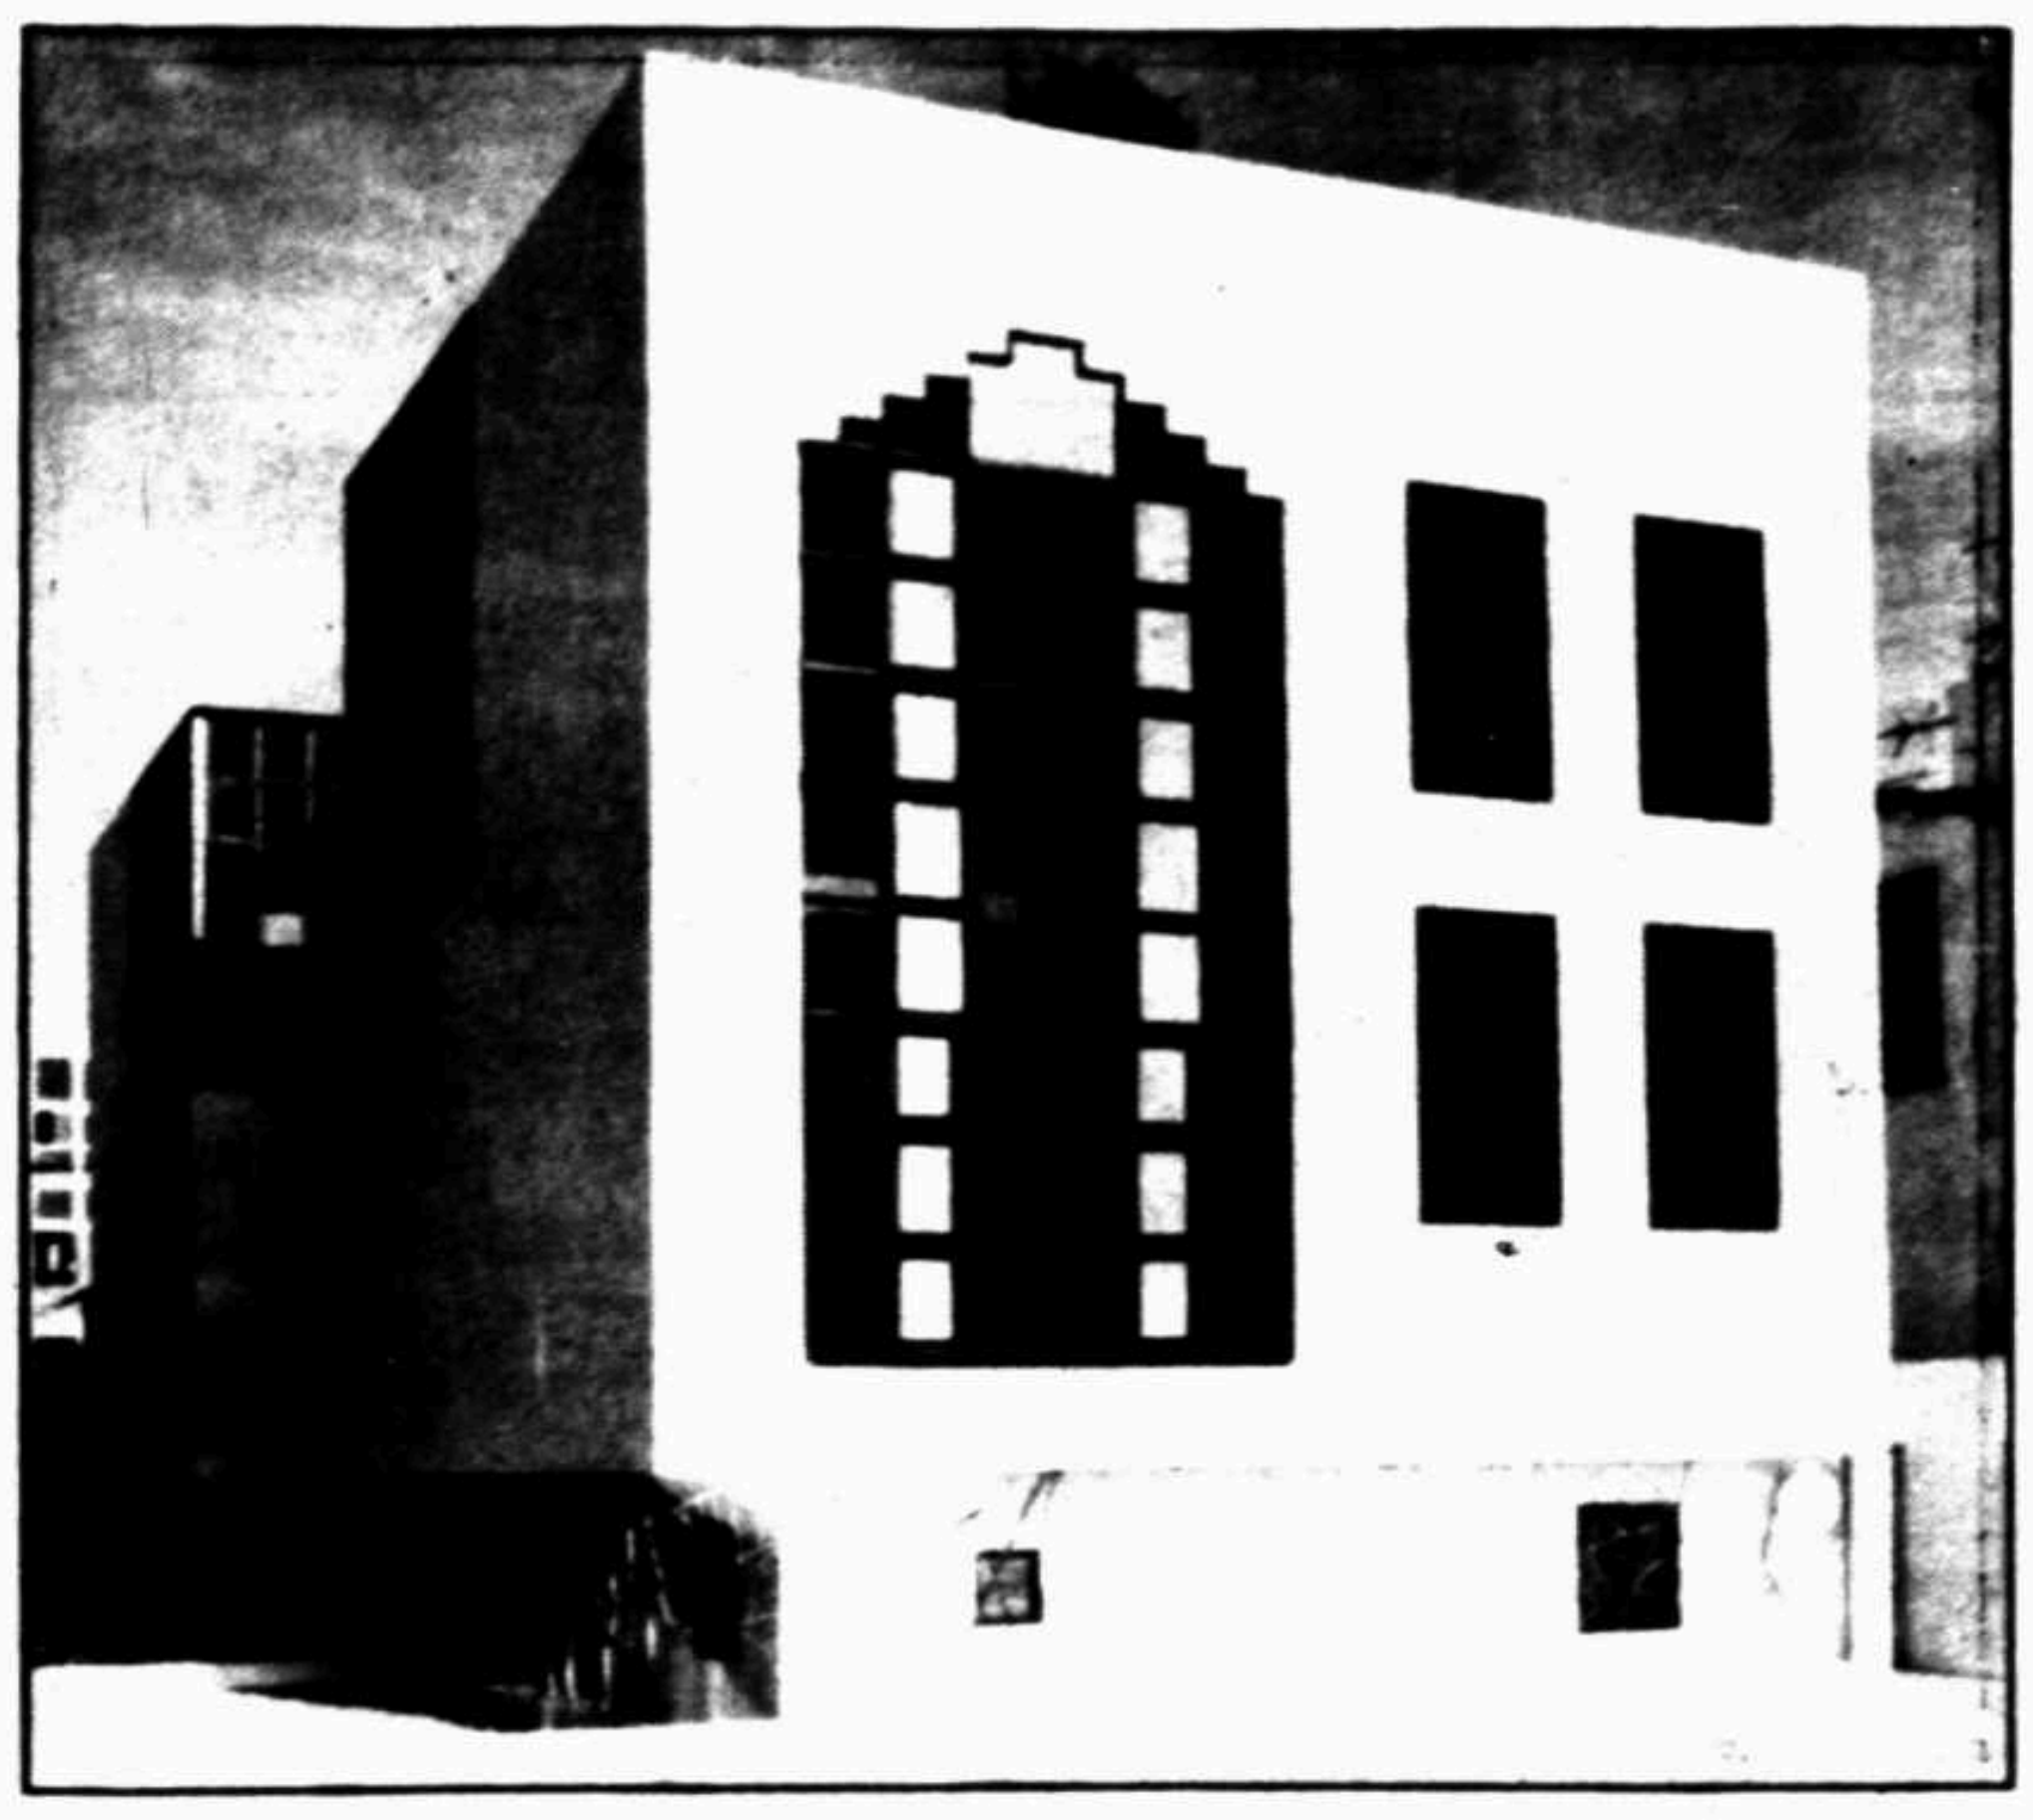
Two women visiting the house during an architecture tour were so overwhelmed by its oceanside beauty that they burst into tears.

Once the Doumanis put up banners for a party and eager house hunters trooped in to "see the units."

When the Doumanis open the vast window of their living room and sit on a ledge overlooking a wide stretch of sand that disappears into the sea, passers-by gaze up and ask them, "Is this an office building? A condominium complex? A shrine?"

Stories about the Doumani house are legion, but Roy insists that residing in a closely watched house is not the same as living in a fishbowl: "I have yet to be disturbed. People are so respectful of it, it's frightening."

The Doumanis' house continues to inspire questions and comments even though they have lived in it for a couple of years and their abode has become a familiar live-in artwork. Designed by sculptor Robert Graham and made uniquely livable by other artists' functional artwork, the Doumani house is a surprising merger of art and architecture. Like the Matisse chapel in Vence, France, it is a meditative environment blending light and airy space with seemingly disparate visual elements.



LAT Photos.

THE STARK, white, rectangular structure has dark, grid-framed windows, long mosaic pools flanking its entrance and sprightly metal grillwork running around it. The house attracts attention outside because its exterior is a distinctive blend of looming form and unexpected detail.

Inside, intoxicating space is enclosed by high ceilings but rarely interrupted by walls. Stair-step and grid motifs articulate borders, while windows frame a changing parade of seascapes and beach scenes. A magical pay of light forms ethereal facets in the two-story living-dining space. The first-floor interior is punctuated by Graham's bronze figures perched high on pedestals. Rooms on both levels are enriched by other artists' functional creations.

The mere existence of such a house is sufficient cause for continuing controversy. It shouldn't work; everyone knows that artists are not architects and that if you set them to laboring on different parts of the same project, it will be destroyed by colliding egos.

NOT AT the Doumanis. Their habitat is a compatible collection: architecture and figurative sculpture by Graham; inlaid-wooden kitchen and dining room cabinets, mosaic pools, engraved-glass balustrade and metal grills by Billy Al Bengston; warmly glowing stained-glass windows and fresco by David Novros; metal-collage door by Tony Berlant; trompe l'oeil mural by Terry Schoonhoven, and roof deck mosaic by Joanna Pusette-Dart.

In addition to such immovable features are furnishings by other artists. DeWain Valentine has provided a handsome glass coffee table, Tom Holland has designed a painted-metal armoire and bed in one of the two upstairs bedrooms, Gretchen Corners has made a cheerful bedspread and window shades, while the ever-present Bengston has contributed an inlaid-wood bed and end tables in the master bedroom.

You have to look hard to find anything that isn't unique or custom-made, and then it may turn out to be a typewriter, a coffee maker or a faucet. "We don't buy existing things," Carol said. "Our point is to create something special."

A continuing project that may never be finished, the house began in 1978 when the Doumanis met Graham at an unveiling of one of his sculptures. "I liked his work very much, so I asked him to do a piece for the house we were planning to build," Roy said. "He called a couple of days later and said he'd like to have dinner. When we met he said he'd like to carry the project a step further. I asked if he wanted to be part of the discussions with our architect. He said, 'No. I want to design the house.'"

INITIALLY, THE Doumanis were flummoxed by Graham's proposal. "We knew this was going to be our primary residence. Our hearts and souls were going to be in it. It had to work for us," said Carol. "Bob felt that too much art had become overwhelming and impersonal. He said, 'Let me design a living space for you.'

"In his mind, we were going back to the Renaissance (when art and architecture were unified). He said, 'I'll design to your specifications and your needs and call in other artists to help.' It was too exciting an idea to pass up. And it was perfect for Roy. He loves new kinds of things. He loves to take risks. He was willing to put in time to make the project work."

Interviewed in his Venice, Calif., studio, Graham said: "I'm very close to Billy (Al Bengston) and David (Novros). When I presented the house to the Doumanis, I planned it with both of them in mind. It was a simple concept, in a way."

Oriental rugs highly esteemed

Associated Press

The Greek historian Herodotus and the poet Homer admired them. Cleopatra had herself wrapped in one and delivered to Julius Caesar. Egyptian temples and Arabian mosques that are 25 centuries old have been furnished with them.

The objects in question are Oriental rugs. Today, as throughout most of recorded history, Oriental rugs are so highly esteemed that 80 percent of all area rug sales are Orientals and Oriental-style rugs, according to one manufacturer.

One reason for the popularity of Orientals is undoubtedly the mystery and romance that surround them. Consider these facts: In 1949, the oldest known Oriental rug was discovered in Siberia by Russian archeologists in the tomb of a Scythian chieftain. The rug, made 500 years before the birth of Christ, was perfectly preserved, as was the tomb, in a solid block of ice.

One of the most famous Persian rugs, the Ardebil Mosque carpet, was completed in 1540 by Maksoud of Kashan. It required 30 years of labor and more than 33 million knots to create the rug, which is on display in a London museum.

Another fabulous Persian carpet is the Garden Carpet of K Khosro I. The carpet, studded with jewels and semi-precious stones, was captured in A.D. 635 by the Arabs when they defeated the Persians in battle. After sections of the large rug were cut up and sent to allies, the Arabs cut the remanants in 6,000 pieces and paid their soldiers with them.

Although Oriental rugs have been made for well over 2,500 years, most rugs sold today are new. (The industry classifies rugs more than 100 years old as antiques; rugs over 40 years old are known as semi-antiques and rugs under 40 years old are considered new.)

However, whether new or old, Oriental rugs tend to be executed with traditional motifs. Oriental rugs experts generally agree on several major categories of rugs, named for the locality in which they originated. These categories include: Persian, Caucasian, Turkestan and Chinese rugs. Other important categories are Turkish, Indian, Romanian, Afghanistan and Pakistani, according to the Oriental Rug Retailers of America, a trade association of rug dealers.

DEAR ABBY

Teen-aged transvestite given dressing-down

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Recently I went away for a week. Before leaving, I hired a neighbor's 17-year-old son to look after my dog, plants and mail. I've known this boy and his family for about 10 years and felt that he could be trusted with my home and possessions.

When I returned home a day ahead of schedule, I got the surprise of my life when I walked in and found my house sitter all decked out in my best clothes — high heels, makeup, wig, the works! He explained that he liked to dress up in women's clothes, and he didn't think I'd mind.

I not only "minded," I was furious! He was even wearing my underwear, including a brand-new slip I had never worn.

I ordered him to get out of my clothing immediately, then I phoned his mother. When I told her about her son, she made a joke of it. I demanded that she pay to have my clothes cleaned, but she refused and said I was making too big a deal over a small thing.

Abby, this is no small thing to me. I feel that my privacy has been invaded, and I can't bear the thought of putting those clothes on until everything has been dry-cleaned or laundered.

As for my neighbor's 17-year-old "Tootsie," I think he needs counseling. Am I wrong? — ANGRY IN COOPERSTOWN, N.Y.

DEAR ANGRY: No. The boy or his family should comply with your demands. And if "Tootsie" has trouble accepting himself for what he is (a transvestite), he needs counseling.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that I prefer big women. I can't tell you why, but I've always found big women very appealing. I am 22, outgoing and athletic. I'm 5 feet 9 inches tall, with curly black hair and blue eyes, and women consider me attractive.

I've been secretly dating big, beautiful women for about three years now. I always take them to out-of-the-way places because I'm afraid if my friends saw me with them, they'd probably think I was "sick" or some kind of weirdo.

Are there others like me? Or do you think I'm sick? — V. IN WEST NYACK, N.Y.

DEAR V.: I wouldn't call you "sick"; immature would be a more appropriate description.

Mature people realize that tastes vary, and they are not in the least concerned about what their friends think. And yes, many men prefer voluptuous women and are proud to be seen with them.

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure this letter won't be printed, but so what? At least I will have let off some steam. It concerns the letter about the truck driver who wants to get married. The stupid, selfish idiot! There isn't a man worth his salt who would marry a woman and then go trucking.

My husband and I are a truck-driving team, and we did not become that until we were in our 50s. We've been married for many years, and this is a present to ourselves. We've always wanted to drive an 18-wheeler. Truck driving is no job for a man who can't take his wife along.

As for "Lady Trucker from Michigan," who suggests a man trucker should team up with a woman trucker to keep from getting too lonesome — she doesn't give a tinker's damn if she walks on the heart of a trucker's wife. Tramps like her are a dime a dozen. I hope she gets kicked in the head by some of her joy-boy drivers. Maybe that will knock some sense into her. Sign this ... TRUCKING TWOSOME, ALAMOGORDO, N.M.

Simmons leads seminar for staple patients

MARSHALL, Mich. (AP) — Saying "no matter how you lose weight, you still need exercise," aerobics wizard Richard Simmons led a vigorous workout at a reunion of gastric stapling operation patients.

The Third Annual Gastric Stapling Reunion drew about 300 gastric stapling patients plus their families to a high school on Sunday, said Dr. James Sapala, head of a physicians' group that performs the operations.

"There are some people who can lose weight, eat the cottage cheese and broiled fish and be all right," said Simmons. "But there are some who are grossly overweight, can't get motivated and have a gastric bypass."

Simmons led 500 or 600 people in exercises on the gym floor, said Sapala.

In gastric stapling operations, portions of overweight people's digestive tracts are stapled off to restrict their eating. Patients typically lose 80 to 225 pounds after the operations, which have about an 80 percent success rate, said Sapala.

NEW YORK (AP) — A $500,000 gift from Sir Muda Hassanal Bolkiah Muizzaddin Waddaulah, the sultan of oil-rich Brunei, will allow New York City to buy nearly 100,000 more meals for the homebound elderly, officials say.

The sultan, wanting to follow the Koran's dictate to "expend of the good things you have earned," presented the check Saturday to Mayor Edward I. Koch.

In return, Koch gave the sultan, 38, a brass key to the city.

"It's not gold," Koch said, "but it seems that Brunei doesn't need gold."

Predominantly Moslem Brunei, with $13 billion in currency reserves, also gave $1 million to the United Nations Children's Fund.

The Delaware-sized nation on the island of Borneo beside the South China Sea became the 159th member of the United Nations last week.

LONDON (AP) — Author Graham Greene says he still dislikes the United States and retains sympathy for the dream of communism despite its "very discouraging" record.

Greene, whose works include "Our Man in Havana," "Brighton Rock," "Travels With My Aunt," "The End of the Affair" and "The Quiet American," turns 80 on Oct. 2.

In an interview published Sunday in London's Observer newspaper, he said, "Well, I don't like the United States...and on the whole, with many exceptions, I don't like Americans. They strike me rather as the English abroad strike me — noisy and incredibly ignorant of the world."

Roman Catholicism is a theme of many of Greene's books, and he was quoted by the Observer as saying there was "a certain sympathy which the present pope doesn't seem to recognize between the believing communist and the believing Catholic."

"I retain this sympathy for the dream of communism anyway, though I agree that the record is very discouraging," he said. "We're all unbelievers within our own faiths."

OOSTERBEEK, Netherlands (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles, Dutch Queen Beatrix and her husband, Prince Claus, were joined by hundreds of veterans as they paid tribute to Allied paratroopers killed 40 years ago in the Battle of Arnhem.

As colonel-in-chief of Britain's paratroop regiment, Charles on Sunday laid a wreath for the 1,746 British Commonmwealth and Polish soldiers who perished trying to seize the Rhine River bridge a few miles away at Arnhem.

Many of the veterans of the World War II battle, including members of Polish, Canadian and Australian units, shook hands with Charles at the conclusion of the service.

The four-day battle in September 1944 failed when German forces rallied, halting reinforcements bound for the battle.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — Sir Edmund Hillary, the mountaineer who first conquered Mount Everest, is being considered as New Zealand's envoy to India and says it's "an attractive project."

Sir Edmund said Sunday he had been approached by his government about the New Delhi post and had discussed the appointment with Prime Minister David Lange.

"I told them I was obviously interested, but I would have to think about it," Sir Edmund said. "... I am particularly interested in the people of India and Nepal."

Sir Edmund and sherpa Tenzing Norgay in 1953 became the first men to reach the peak of Everest.

Sir Edmund said he did not know what the government's final decision on the posting would be.

Lange, elected in July, plans to reopen New Zealand's high commission or embassy in New Delhi by the end of the year. It was closed in 1982 by former Prime Minister Robert Muldoon for what he said was an economy measure.

Lessing uses another name to prove point

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — Doris Lessing, author of several highly acclaimed novels, has been trying to prove a point to the literary establishment by writing under a pseudonym books that one of her publishers rejected and many reviewers ignored.

Lessing

Mrs. Lessing told an Independent Television Network interviewer that her prank proved that "people who profess to be experts on my work and write theses about it don't recognize my work under a different name. I'm astounded."

She said it also showed that beginning writers should get more attention from publishers. But some of those taken in said it is reasonable to give more attention to established authors than beginners, and her ruse proves little.

The 64-year-old novelist has written 25 books under her own name. She is renowned for works such as "The Grass is Singing," "The Golden Notebook," and her five-novel series "The Children of Violence," which has sold nearly 1 million copies.

The British novelist told The New York Times she wrote two books — "The Diary of a Good Neighbor" and a sequel, "If the Old Could..." — under the pseudonym of Jane Somers because "I wanted to highlight that whole dreadful process in book publishing that 'nothing succeeds like success.' "

The Sunday Times of London called her prank "a piece of literary mischief" and quoted Mrs. Lessing as saying it was a way of "escaping from the cage of my literary reputation."

Most critics who bothered to review "The Diary of a Good Neighbour" when it appeared last year were lukewarm.

A few praised the book, but it sold only 2,000 hardback copies and no British paperback publisher bought the rights.

"If the Old Could...", published in April, got poor reviews in Britain but was praised by The New York Times as "an extremely courageous attempt." It sold even fewer copies than "Diary."

Mrs. Lessing first offered the "Diary" book for publication in 1981. She told Independent Television Network that it was rejected outright by her British publisher, Jonathan Cape, and by her paperback publisher Granada.

China shows concern for Great Wall

BADALING, China (AP) — The Great Wall, neglected and desecrated for more than three centuries, is benefitting from major repairs and a crackdown to stop tourists from spoiling China's biggest cultural relic.

Among the thousands of tourists who visit the stone barrier that traverses the mountains northwest of Peking are people who etch their names on the ancient facade, said Wei Fuju, a maintenance supervisor.

"For every character (letter) they write on the wall, they are fined one yuan (42 cents)," he said.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AKJ62 ♡AQ5 ◇76 ♣AQJ

What is your opening bid?

A.—If you opened two spades, you could get into trouble. You have only 21 HCP and a five-loser hand, and that is too weak for a demand bid. We would not fault you greatly if you opened two no trump, but we prefer a bid of one spade. If partner can't respond voluntarily, you probably are not missing a game.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q6 ♡Q93 ◇10982 ♣9765

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—While you can pass this auction if you have a trickless hand, that does not apply here. You must upgrade the queen of spades to a sure trick, and the queen of hearts might prove useful, too. Partner has announced at least a six-card spade suit, so you have more than adequate support. Bid four spades.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠J6 ♡J10 ◇AQ876 ♣A972

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner surely has six hearts and four spades, and his reverse shows a good hand. Therefore, you are in the slam zone. Partner knows this from your first two bids, so there is no need for dramatic action from you. Four hearts now is more than adequate. The next move must come from him.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AKQ8 ♡8 ◇A98 ♣AK853

The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Dble	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—There is a possibility that, with a terrible hand, partner would be forced to respond one spade on a three-card suit. But don't let that possibility deter you from making your natural bid. With your hand, you want to be in game, and the way to get there is to bid four spades. Don't make the mistake of raising to three spades — that is only invitational and partner is unlikely to know what he needs to accept.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AQ ♡K103 ◇AKJ76 ♣Q98

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—You have already suggested to partner that you would like to play the hand at three no trump, and he has declined the invitation, so why repeat the message? Partner's hand is either unsuited to no trump, or he is interested in more than game. In either case, he most certainly would want to hear about your support for his suit. Bid three hearts.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠A76 ♡AQJ987 ◇6 ♣853

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	5 ♡	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—From the auction, it would seem that you have the wrong ace. Partner has gone out of his way to cue-bid the enemy suit and then diamonds before supporting hearts at a level over game. It seems he lacks club control, and so do you. Pass.

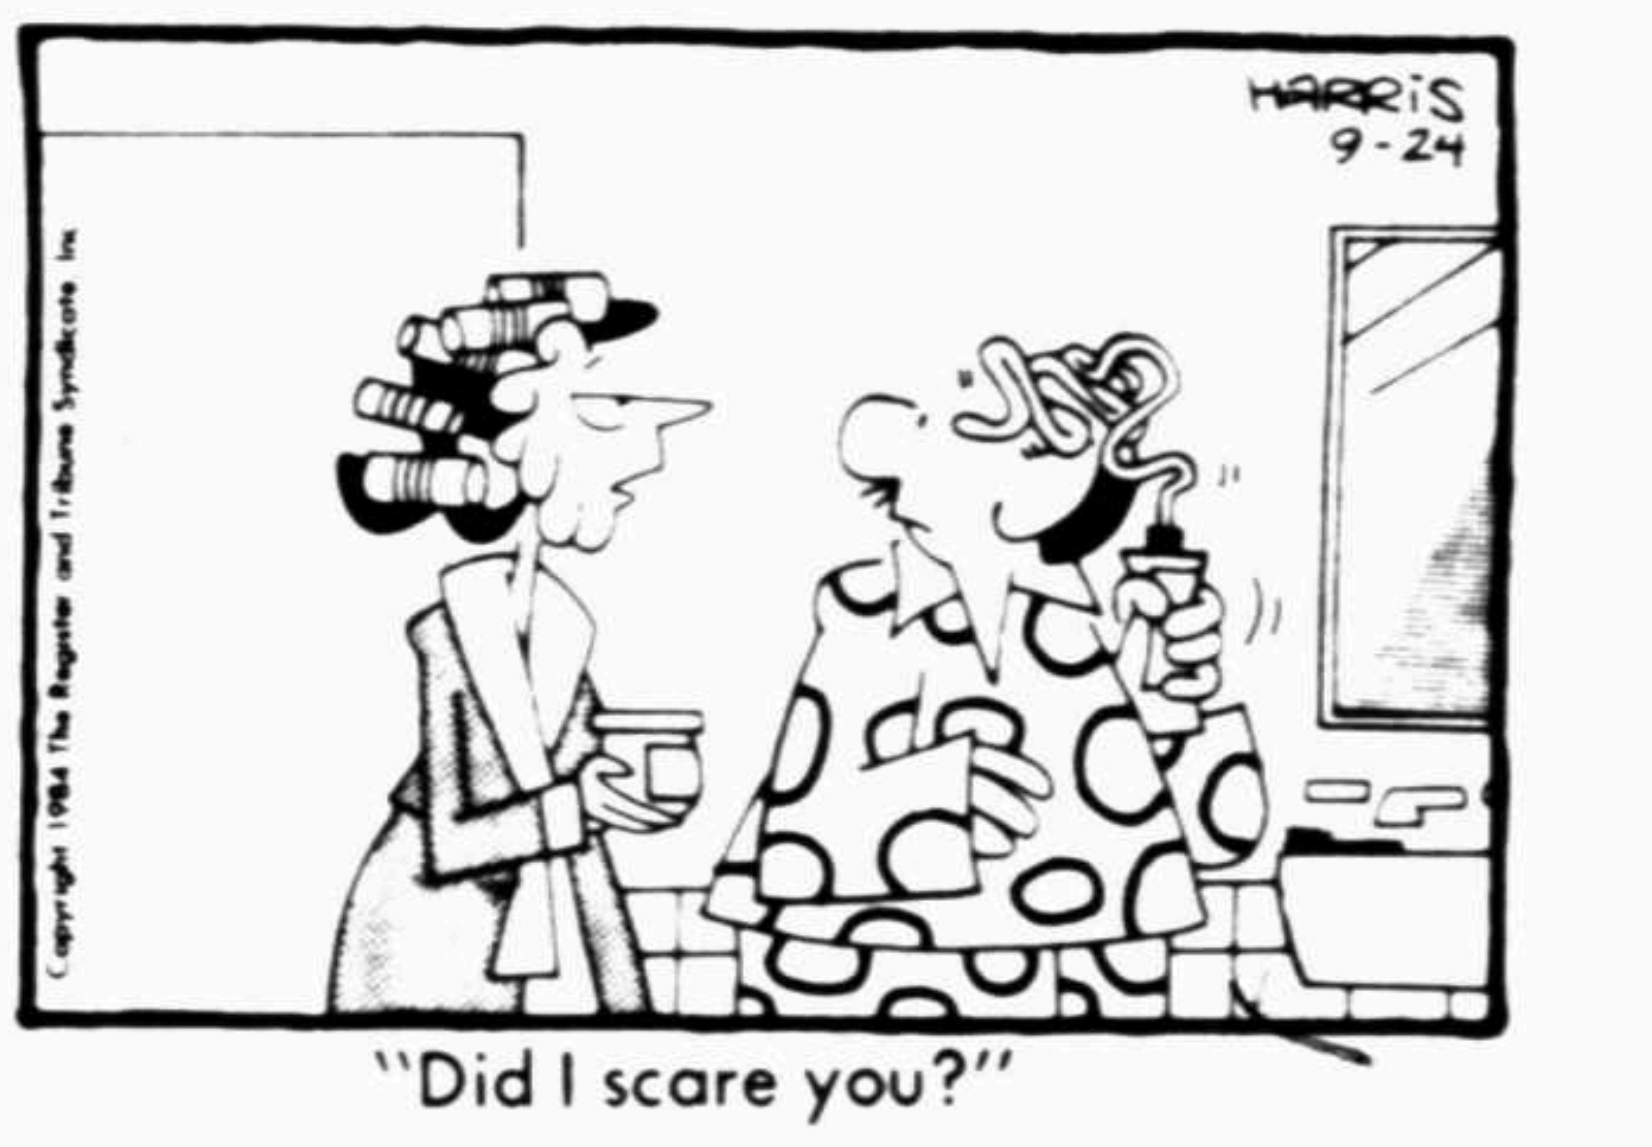
THE BETTER HALF



"Did I scare you?"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, September 25, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actor-producer Michael Douglas ("Romancing the Stone"), Barbara Walters, Christopher "Superman" Reeve, dancer Juliet Prowse, actors Mark Hamill and Robert Walden and actress Catherine Burns celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: Mississippi author William Faulkner. Forget about a recent disappointment and look to the future. Seizing an unusual opportunity will carry you to heights you never dreamed possible. Old friends help you open an important door. Money woes disappear. Romance makes you more aware of your surroundings. If you have the money, go ahead and redecorate. Your powers of persuasion put you in command at both home and work.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A practical attitude helps you get business back on the right track. Partnerships formed last year begin to show profits. A legal matter is settled in your favor. Mate offers support.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Freedom enhances all relationships. Loans prove easier to arrange than in the past. Family ties are strengthened when you speak your mind. A house sale brings top dollar. Romance turns around.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A relative's suggestions bring you extra income. A whole new career is possible! A relationship is drifting because you do not seem to have a long-range plan. Make a commitment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Count on higher-ups to help with a long-term financial project. An invitation to a special event excites everyone in your social circle. A career goal moves within reach.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): New rapport with a special friend leads to a happy romantic adventure. Begin again if a partnership fails. You are entering a period of dynamic growth and have many options.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A friend offers a moneymaking suggestion but expects to share in the profits. Travel puts you in touch with someone influential. A new partnership gives you extra clout. A friendship grows into love.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Extra effort is necessary to stay ahead of the competition. Research and professional reading are the key to your success. A platonic relationship turns romantic. You are on Cloud 9!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Adopt a new approach to boring people or jobs. New challenges and ventures require persistence. Avoid mixing business with pleasure. Steer clear of someone who likes to gossip.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Public praise and a financial reward make this a banner day. Original ideas count big with influential higher-ups. Pay bills on time to protect your credit rating. Review recent investments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Greater efficiency will lead to higher profits. A change of scenery or attitude could revitalize a marriage. Mate has a better understanding of work pressures than you realize.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Think about starting a new job or business with foreign partners. Children need more freedom to realize their potential. A happy romance gives you a wonderful feeling of security.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Look for new places to invest your savings. A misunderstanding could arise within the family circle. Straighten things out as quickly as possible. You capture the attention of an attractive newcomer.

New breed helped handicapped

DALLAS (AP) — For Sherry Zearfaus, Buck, a 3-year-old Border collie, is not only her best friend but also a bridge to the world that long has been denied to her — the world of self-sufficiency.

Although dogs have been trained to lead the blind for decades, Buck is among a new breed of dogs trained to do a variety of tasks — responding to 80 different commands — for their physically handicapped masters.

Buck is Mrs. Zearfaus' hands, when hers fail; her legs, when she wants to go shopping; her valet, when she wants something brought to her from across the room.

Mrs. Zearfaus, once a piano and organ teacher, has had multiple sclerosis, a degenerative disease of the central nervous system, for 20 years. Today, she is confined to a wheelchair, has weakness in her arms and hands, and is legally blind.

"Buck goes everywhere I go, to church, out to eat, shopping," said Mrs. Zearfaus, the first Texan to receive one of the dogs. "Buck has made me feel confident again."

In the past, she needed someone to push her wheelchair through the malls if she wanted to go shopping. If she dropped her glasses on the floor during the day when her husband and son were at work, there was no one there to pick them up.

Now with a mere command, Buck will retrieve anything dropped on the floor and bring it to her. He can hand a bank deposit to a teller and turn on light switches or punch elevator buttons.

By putting a backpack on Buck and holding onto an attached handle, the dog pulls Mrs. Zearfaus around the malls, making turns and stopping on command for her to browse. On pretty weekends, Buck pulls her around the bike and jogging track at White Rock Lake or five blocks from her Garland home to a church activity.

But most of all, the dog serves as a companion.

"I just love dogs," Mrs. Zearfaus said. "Buck is a real companion."

Fonda's 'best work' wins her Emmy award

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Jane Fonda's 12-year effort to bring a Kentucky mountain woman's story to the screen paid off with "my best work" and her first Emmy, a victory she says left her even more frazzled than her two Oscar wins.

"I am so happy that I'm numb. I never got that nervous at the Oscars," said Miss Fonda, named best actress in a special for "The Dollmaker" at the 36th annual Academy of Televisions Arts & Sciences awards Sunday night.

She said she decided to make "The Dollmaker," about an Appalachian woman who moves to Detroit during World War II and struggles to keep her family together, despite her agent's worries that people who saw her for free on TV might not want to pay to watch her films.

"My answer to him was, 'If what you do is good, people will see it,'" she said. "I think it's my best work."

NBC's "Hill Street Blues" was the year's most-honored show at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium ceremonies, picking up four Emmys including best drama series. In the past four years it has won 25 Emmys, a record for a drama series and one shy of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" for the most ever.

"I am really surprised and genuinely thrilled," said executive producer Steve Bochco, who was one of the creators of the fast-paced police show.

Miss Fonda was among four prominent first-time winners of Emmys for lead acting roles. The others were John Ritter of "Three's Company," and Jane Curtin for "Kate & Allie," and "Magnum, P.I." star Tom Selleck, who also was the host of the awards telecast.

The show, which began 37 minutes late because NFL football ran over on CBS, was more than 3½ hours long, only 40 seconds shy of the record length set in 1978.

"I don't want to do it again," said Selleck backstage, looking weary.

"Hill Street," which also won a directing Emmy, and "Cheers," with awards for best comedy series, supporting actress and writing, helped NBC to a network-leading 20 Emmys, including craft awards given out Sept. 16. CBS had 18, ABC 16, PBS 10 and five went to syndicated programs.

"Something About Amelia," aired on ABC, was named best drama or comedy special, and took the writing award in a limited series or special. Roxana Zal, a 14-year-old high school sophomore, was named best supporting actress in the category for her performance as the daughter victimized by incest.

"Mom and Dad didn't want me to do it," she said, adding that her parents decided the script was good and left the decision to her and her agent.

"Concealed Enemies," about the Alger Hiss-Whittaker Chambers controversy over alleged communists in the U.S. State Deptartment that propelled Richard Nixon into the limelight after World War II, was named outstanding limited series, with director Jeff Bleckner also honored.

Selleck, who stepped in as Emmy host when Carol Burnett took ill, won his first Emmy as best lead actor in a drama series for his role as the laid-back detective in CBS' "Magnum, P.I."

"I was quite shocked," Selleck said.

Ritter, after three nominations and eight years on ABC's "Three's Company," got his first award as best lead actor in a comedy series.

"I'm totally surprised," he said, adding he thought the academy members would pick a "more intellectual show."

Miss Curtin was selected as best lead actress in a comedy series for her role in CBS' "Kate & Allie." She and Susan Saint James, who was also nominated, play divorced mothers living together for mutual support.

Miss Daly won for the second year for her role as Mary Beth Lacey, who combines police work and her family in CBS' "Cagney & Lacey."

"I wish Sharon had won," she said of co-star Sharon Gless. But, she added, "It feels wonderful to both be nominated because we have two of the best parts for women on television right now."

Olivier won his fifth Emmy as best lead actor in a limited series or special for the syndicated "King Lear."

Rhea Perlman was selected best supporting actress in a comedy series for her role as the earthy cocktail waitress Carla in "Cheers."

Art Carney, who won an Oscar for "Harry and Tonto," was named best supporting actor in a limited series or special for James Cagney's first TV movie, CBS' "Terrible Joe Moran." Carney won five Emmys as Ed Norton on "The Honeymooners."

Pat Harrington Jr., the irrepressible Schneider on "One Day at a Time," won as best supporting actor in a comedy series as the CBS show closed out nine years on the air. "You're looking at a man who's wanted one of these things for 30 years — ever since I was a child actor," he said.

Cloris Leachman was named best individual performer in a variety or music program for her appearance on the "Screen Actors Guild 50th Anniversary Celebration" on CBS. The camera panned to the audience, where losing nominee Lily Tomlin, attired as her popular character Ernestine, made a face.

04 Card of Thanks

PERHAPS you sent a lovely card or sat quietly in your chair and prayed. Perhaps you sent a funeral spray. If so we saw it there. Perhaps you brought food to sustain our bodies. Perhaps you spoke the kindest words any friend could say. Perhaps you were not there at all, just thought of us that day. Whatever you did to console our hearts, we thank you so much whatever the part.

"Some people only live this way two weeks a year."

Welcome to vacation living all year long. Welcome to Saddle Club Apartments. Saddle Club isn't a resort-we just look like one. We offer you 2 sparkling swimming pools, 2 lighted tennis courts, 2 indoor racquetball courts, a universal gym, indoor and outdoor jacuzzis, and wet and dry saunas.

Once inside a Saddle Club apartment home you can cozy up to a warm fireplace, relax on your own patio or balcony and enjoy the feeling of luxury living.

There's privacy here, but if you want activities, we have planned resident get-togethers.

Rent beginning at $310. We're located only minutes from major businesses, recreation, fine restaurants and entertainment. We're probably only a few minutes away from where you work.

So if you feel like taking a vacation that never has to end, take a drive over to Saddle Club and let us show you how.
