25,000 homeless in Turkey quake

ERZURUM, Turkey (AP) — A powerful earthquake that rolled through mountainous eastern Turkey killed at least 813 people and left at least 25,000 homeless in freezing winter weather, officials said today.

Heavy rain that disrupted efforts to rescue victims turned to snow in mountain villages devastated by the Sunday quake.

"The need for immediate shelter is a life-or-death matter," a Red Cross statement said. "The affected area is on a high plateau and at this time of year some one who cannot find shelter after nightfall may freeze to death before morning."

The Turkish Red Crescent Society estimated it needs 5,000 tents, 30,000 heavy blankets and 5,000 heavy sleeping bags.

The quake destroyed at least 50 villages and left people dead under collapsed buildings in the townships of Horasan, Narman, Pasinler and Sarikamis in the eastern provinces of Erzurum and Kars.

Housing Ministry officials said the worst-hit was Horasan and its surrounding villages with a death toll of 515. They said 221 people in Narman also were killed. At least 77 people were killed elsewhere.

People rushed out of their homes and many spent the night in the streets in the provincial capital of Erzurum as aftershocks rocked the city, the Anatolia news agency said. Schools closed.

Turkish President Kenan Evren and Premier Bulent Ulusu flew to the area. Leaders of political parties cut short their election campaigns elsewhere and traveled to Erzurum to visit the maimed and console relatives of the dead.

Officials in the capital city of Ankara said one planeload of Red Cross relief supplies had arrived from Switzerland and a second plane, with a 23-member medical team, was expected later today.

Saudi Arabia donated $10 million for earthquake relief and Japan gave $21,000, officials said. They said the United States asked for a list of needed supplies to contribute to relief work.

U.S. Embassy officials said none of the U.S. military bases in Turkey was affected by the quake and that American soldiers were standing by to assist in rescue operations if the Turkish government requested it.

Erzurum, headquarters for Turkey's Third Army guarding a 360-mile border with the Soviet Union, lies at an altitude of 6,500 feet.

Winston Field runway repair past first step

Scurry County commissioners Monday agreed to take the first step toward a major renovation of Winston Field runways — a project to be substantially subsidized by federal funds.

The court voted unanimously to authorize a pre-application request for Federal Aviation Agency funds for the project.

The fund dollars available through FAA for 1984 are still to be announced. The pre-application request was necessary, however, in order to be considered once exact figures are known.

Such FAA dollars are granted on a 90-10 split with the federal agency assuming 90 percent of the expense. The entire project to be applied for locally is estimated at some $1.7 million.

If it is granted completely — and county officials here note they doubt this will occur — the FAA share would equal some $1.5 million and the Scurry County share another $170,000.

The basic project entails resurfacing of Winston Field's two main runways plus adjacent taxi runways. In addition, lighting for each would be upgraded or repaired.

An additional 800 ft.

would be added to the north-south runway, making it some 5,600 ft. in length to facilitate the landing of jet aircraft locally.

In other county action Monday, the court voted unanimously to close a county road in Ira following a petition request from residents there.

Commissioner Bernhard Bartels, Pct. 3, pointed out that the road runs in front of the Ira Baptist Church and is currently used as a church parking area.

Monday morning, the court was scheduled also to open bids for a new printing machine for the first floor of the Scurry County Courthouse.

In addition, it was to discuss renewing a contract between the county and the Department of Human Resources for the distribution of excess butter and cheese to qualifying county residents.

How long, how safe?...

Congress debates deployment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, confronted by dramatic military events half a world apart, focused its attention today on two questions: How long should U.S. troops remain in Grenada and how safe are the Marines in Lebanon?

In the House, the agenda was headed by a scheduled vote on invoking the War Powers Act of 1973, which could require President Reagan to bring home the Grenada invasion force within 60 days.

On the Senate side, where the War Powers Act was invoked in a vote last week, the Armed Services Committee was hearing from Gen. Paul X. Kelley, the Marine commandant whose troops have been in Beirut for 13 months as part of an international peacekeeping force.

Today's scheduled House debate on Grenada centered on a resolution that would hold Reagan to the letter of the War Powers Act. The act says he cannot keep troops in hostilities, or facing the threat of hostilities, for more than 60 days unless Congress approves. It allows him an extra 30 days if he certifies the time is needed to get the troops out safely.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee approved the resolution 34-2 last Thursday as all of the panel's Republicans joined most of its Democrats. Sources said the Democrat-dominated House was likely to endorse the action.

The Republican-controlled Senate approved an identical measure Friday by a 64-20 vote.

Much of today's Senate questioning of Kelley was expected to focus on how a suicide attacker could penetrate the Marine compound at the Beirut airport with an explosives-laden truck and devastate a headquarters and barracks building filled with sleeping servicemen.

More than 225 men died in the Oct. 23 blast. Two days later, U.S. Marines and soldiers invaded Marxist-run Grenada in a 6,000-man operation in which more than a dozen Americans were killed.

Kelley is just back from an inspection trip to Beirut, where he said he thought adequate provisions had been taken.

TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT — Snyder residents may meet a group like this on their front porch tonight as Halloween trick or treaters spread throughout the city. The traditional Halloween observance is tonight following several season-related events conducted here this past weekend. This group of goblins are actually youngsters attending Mother's Day Out last Friday at the First United Methodist Church. (SDN Staff Photo)

Service offering windbreak trees

Farmers and ranchers in Scurry County may now purchase low cost conifer seedlings for use in planting windbreaks around their fields and farmsteads.

According to Robert Fewin, Texas Forestry Service silviculturist at Lubbock, there are five species of conifers available for the 1983-84 planting season which ends in late March.

He urges county residents to apply for the trees now. The six to 12 inch seedlings will be distributed at pick-up points in eight different cities during February and early March.

The seedlings are grown in individual cells, 30 cells to the Styrofoam container. A minimum order is 30 seedlings or one container, priced at $30 per container.

West Texans interested in planting trees to homestead, field, feedlot or wildlife windbreaks should write for seedling applications at West Texas Nursery, Texas Forest Service, Rt. 3, Box 216 Lubbock, Tx. 79401, or call 746-5801.

Seedlings produced by the Texas Forest Service nurseries may not be used for landscaping or ornamental purposes. Seedlings are sold to applicants on a first-come basis.

Since these containers are not designed for shipping, they must be hand delivered at the various pick-up points. For Scurry County, the pick-up is scheduled March 1 in Big Spring at the USDA Experiment Station. The seedlings will be delivered between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

BIG UNITED WAY GIFT—Chevron USA gave a big boost to the Scurry County United Way Friday with an additional $800 donation, bringing the company's United Way contribution to $2,800. At the last report meeting, the 1983 goal was at 80 percent of the $77,300 goal. Presenting the check on behalf of Chevron was Jerry Cales who also serves as chairman of the oil and gas division of the United Way. Accepting the check was Rex Robinson (right), United Way President; and Roy McQueen, 1983 UW drive chairman. (SDN Staff Photo)

Country club will abandon SACROC gas use

Snyder Country Club, a major user of free natural gas from SACROC residual gas lines, has taken steps to obtain an alternate source of energy.

The Snyder Country Club will change from SACROC gas use by March of 1984, according to E.D. Walton, board president.

The country club was one of more than 120 "customers" who were notified by SACROC that the use of free natural gas would be stopped on Oct. 1.

Two affected residents, Richard Stoker and Lester Moore, filed suit in 132nd District Court to stop the planned cutoff. District Judge Wayland Holt, on Oct. 11, issued a temporary injunction to halt Chevron's plan to cutoff the gas supply.

Use of the gas from residual lines has been a practice since before the SACROC unit was organized. Gene Thomas, SACROC superintendent, sent notices to the affected users last summer and cited unsafe contaminants in the gas as the reason for the cutoff.

During the hearing on the temporary injunction, Thomas said the problem may be eliminated within 24 months when current production figures indicate there will be no surplus gas available in the field for resale or home use.

Walton said the country club will tie into a Lone Star Gas Co. line which runs near the club property.

In Brief

Execution stay is upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to let Texas authorities kill condemned murderer James David Autry any time soon. Autry came within minutes of being executed earlier this month.

The court, without comment, left intact a stay of execution ordered by Justice Byron R. White just before Autry was to die by lethal injection Oct. 5.

Minor mishap ends chase

A police vehicle was involved in a minor accident here Sunday night after pursuing a suspect later charged with three misdemeanor offenses.

The incident occurred around 8:50 p.m. Sunday. According to reports, officers began attempting to stop Luis Estrada Hernandez, 39, of Rt. 2, Snyder near the intersection of Ave. E and 25th St. The pursuit headed west before Hernandez's 1977 Ford was stopped in the 2400 Block of 25th St.

After he was stopped, investigators report that Hernandez put his vehicle in reverse and struck a police squad car driven by a city officer.

Damage to both vehicles was minor. Hernandez was free Monday morning after signing three $500 personal recognizance bonds on separate charges of misdemeanor DWI, evading arrest and unlawfully carrying a weapon.

Winner of Tuesday's match will advance to bi-district play, taking on Pampa, the 1-4A champion, later in the week.

Of cancer at age 85 'Miss Lillian' is dead

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Lillian Carter, the spry and forthright mother of former President Jimmy Carter whose full life spanned politics, the Peace Corps and the limelight of her son's White House years, is dead at the age of 85.

Mrs. Carter, affectionately known as "Miss Lillian," died of cancer at 5:05 p.m. Sunday at Americus-Sumter County Hospital.

The former president and his wife, Rosalynn, were at Mrs. Carter's bedside when she died, along with her other son, Billy, and her daughter, Gloria Carter Spann, said hospital administrator James Griffith.

Dr. Paul Brown said Mrs. Carter, who underwent a radical mastectomy in 1981, died of cancer after a period of declining health.

A graveside service was scheduled for 3 p.m. Tuesday at Lebanon Cemetery in Plains.

During her son's tenure in the White House, Mrs. Carter traveled the world, but was fond of returning home to Plains "to get barefoot."

She once advised a congressional committee interested in the problems of hunger and population planning, "Don't retire until you have to. And if you do retire, find a hobby and just keep on living. Don't get in a rocking chair and rot out."

As a 67-year-old widow, she joined the Peace Corps in 1966 and went to India for two years as its oldest volunteer.

The wrinkles of age, her silver hair and thick Southern accent lent charm to her outspokenness. But the president's foes were her foes, and she made no bones about that.

Campaigning in New Hampshire in 1979, she drew an embarrassed silence and a few catcalls when she told an audience she hoped no harm would befall U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, then challenging Carter for the nomination.

A campaign spokesman explained that the president's mother meant the remark only as "an honest expression of concern."

On a campaign stop the same year, she said that if she had $1 million, she would hire someone to kill Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini.

Born Aug. 15, 1898, in Richland, Ga., about 20 miles from Plains, Mrs. Carter attended public schools and studied nursing at the now-defunct Wise Clinic in Plains. She earned her nursing degree at Grady Memorial Hospital in Atlanta. She married James Earl Carter Sr., a peanut farmer and businessman, in 1923.

Mrs. Carter was offered her husband's seat in the Georgia Legislature when he died during his first term in 1953, but she declined.

"I was too shocked by his death," she said later. "But I think if later they offered the Legislature seat to me again, I would have taken it."

Carter recalled that his mother "taught us by her daily example to help the weak and handicapped even when it wasn't the comfortable or socially acceptable thing to do."

She had 15 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Carter's death comes just over a month after that of her second youngest child, evangelist Ruth Carter Stapleton, 54, who died Sept. 26 of cancer of the pancreas. The same disease killed her father 30 years earlier.

Dylan gives up preaching

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Dylan, who startled fans three years ago when he became an aggressive born-again Christian, says he's stopped proselytizing because even Jesus "only preached for three years."

"I don't particularly regret telling people how to get their souls saved," the 42-year-old musician, who was reared as a Jew, said in an interview published in Sunday's Los Angeles Times.

"But maybe the time for me to say that has just come and gone. Now it's time for me to do something else ... Jesus himself only preached for three years."

Dylan reportedly has spent much time recently at Chabad Lubavitch, a Hasidic Jewish center in Brooklyn, N.Y., and was seen wearing a yarmulke and prayer shawl at his son Jesse's bar mitzvah in Jerusalem, he did not say if he had returned to Judaism.

Salty prepared foods

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — We have been trying to cut down on our salt intake. I learned from my neighbor that I could wash some of the salt out of my foods. We use a lot of cottage cheese and it does have a salty taste. So I have been washing the curds to get rid of the creamy sauce on it. What a difference it makes — the salty taste is gone completely.

I also wash canned meats I use in salads, like tuna, before using it for tuna salad. That helps change the salty taste, too.

My concern is that we may be losing important vitamins that our bodies need. Is there any danger of this? Do you recommend this procedure?

DEAR READER — You are right in that you can get rid of a large amount of sodium in canned foods, including canned vegetables, by washing them. You can eliminate about half of the sodium in cottage cheese by washing it and about three-fourths of the sodium in water-packed tuna, according to recent studies done at Duke University.

You also will wash out about half of the calcium in cottage cheese because it is in the brine and the creamy portion of the cheese. It is also in the water pack of the tuna.

If cottage cheese is an important source of your total dietary calcium, that could be a problem. You also may lose a small amount of iron but you can easily compensate for that by cooking in iron cookware.

You will lose some vitamins, particularly the water soluble vitamins. Fortunately there are sufficient vitamins in most foods that eating a balanced diet will provide all your Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances (RDA).

But food preparation does have a big impact on the vitamin content of your food. That includes storage of food. I have discussed this in more detail in The Health Letter 20-8. How Food Processing Affects Nutritive Values, which I am sending you. Others can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Unless a food is very salty, I don't think it is necessary to wash it to remove sodium. After all, the vast majority of people without high blood pressure or medical problems can tolerate a reasonable amount of sodium. If they drink enough water their kidneys will adjust the amount of sodium in the body to the proper level. The salt scare has been overdone.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 78-year-old man in excellent health. For some reason I have been afflicted with jock itch. I have tried different ointments such as Preparation H, Bacitracin, Neomycin, Lanacane and Dermolate without satisfactory results. All of these remedies relieve irritation, but only for a short time.

Is there any permanent cure? What would you recommend? Would it be curable by a local physician?

DEAR READER — Your letter amazed me. How did you get some Neomycin if you didn't see a doctor?

If you have jock itch it is caused by a fungus. It will not be cured by Preparation H or the other medicines you mentioned.

It is important to know what you are treating. By all means see a doctor, if necessary see a dermatologist and let him prescribe medications that are for fungus infections, if you really have jock itch. Self-treatment of self-diagnosed rashes often leads to additional problems rather than cures.

Paul Harvey

During a recent visit you and I concluded that if anything can gray this President's beautiful brown hair, this next year should do it!

I'm guessing he added more than a few when he was awakened during the night of October 22 to be told that a fanatic had hurled a car bomb into our Marine command center in Lebanon.

He suffered all the rations you suffered: anger, sadness, frustration — plus one more.

He has to live with the terrible responsibility of having sent those boys there.

America for the last 50 years has been misled by a perversion of the missionary complex. Instead of preaching peace on earth we are trying to enforce it.

You can't force anybody because then it isn't "love" any more.

In the name of "peacekeeping" or "police actions" we succeeded only in replacing dictators with other dictators.

Imagining everyone in the world in our own likeness, we forget that we are trying to "preserve freedom" for people who have never known freedom.

Indeed, if our mission is "peacekeeping" — today there is war in Iraq, Grenada in the Caribbean is threatened by invaders, civil guard is under attack in Spain, war is on in El Salvador and festering in Uruguay and Guatemala.

If our American mission is "peacekeeping" — if we intend to separate warring factions wherever — we're going to need a lot more Marines than we have.

Some consider the Middle East a singular situation. They insist that if we move out, the Soviets will move in and all that oil will be theirs.

History records that Middle East factions have been warring for 6,000 years, virtually without ceasing.

If trying to put that Humpty Dumpty together

Bomb probe continuing

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Military police investigating the placement of a bomb at Brooke Army Medical Center, where two Marines injured in Lebanon are being treated, have released a woman who had been held for questioning, officials said.

The unidentified woman, a female soldier absent without leave, was released late Friday but held in the custody of her unit, a Fort Sam Houston spokesman said Saturday.

After the bomb was found and defused Friday, experts searched the home of the Army colonel who discovered the device in his desk, but found nothing. Officials have said they don't believe the incident was related to the treatment of the Marines in an adjacent building.

The ancient Greeks believed that rubbing half a lemon under the arm would relieve the pain of a hangover.

is going to keep any outsider broke and busy for the next six centuries — better the Soviets than us.

Besides, whatever cease-fire we may be able to buy will be signed by leaders whose signatures are worthless.

We keep seeking a "rational peace" with "irrational" people.

How can we anticipate or properly respond to those sick-sick sects or Iranians who believe that to die in battle is to go straight to heaven?

They prize war as much as we prize peace!

After generations in which we have imagined the peace of the world to be ours to keep, this will sound selfish. But sometime soon in this triage situation our tiny 6 percent of the world's people must decide — if we throw all the rest of our sons and grandsons into the fire... who benefits?

Three upsets Sunday tag NFL league leaders

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Pride was the motivator and the San Francisco 49ers were the victims.

Playing a virtually mistake-free game, the struggling New York Jets knocked off the high-powered 49ers 27-13 in one of three major National Football League upsets that caught division leaders Sunday. In the others, the St. Louis Cardinals outscored the Minnesota Vikings 41-31 and the Seattle Seahawks whipped the Los Angeles Raiders 34-21.

"Our motivation was embarrassment and the fact that we are much better than a 3 and 5 football team," said New York defensive lineman Marty Lyons. "We put pressure on the quarterback and our defensive backs did a great job covering their receivers."

Lyons' thoughts of "embarrassment" was a reference to last week's 27-21 loss to Atlanta after the Jets had built a 21-0 lead in the third quarter.

Meanwhile, comeback efforts by Pittsburgh and Cleveland continued the frustrations of the league's two winless teams, as the Steelers beat Tampa Bay 17-12 and the Browns tripped Houston 25-19 in overtime.

In other NFL action, Dallas hammered the New York Giants 38-20; Atlanta tripped New England 24-13; Baltimore edged Philadelphia 22-21; Detroit walloped Chicago 38-17; Buffalo outlasted New Orleans 27-21; Miami tripped the Los Angeles Rams 30-14; Cincinnati crushed Green Bay 34-14 and Denver edged Kansas City 27-24.

In the Monday night game, Washington visits San Diego.

Richard Todd hit 20 of 28 passes for 201 yards to lead the offense and the Jets' defense shut down the San Francisco running game to key their triumph over the National Conference West Division leaders.

Cornerback Jerry Holmes ran back an interception 43 yards for a touchdown in the final minute to seal the victory for the Jets, now 4-5 after snapping a three-game losing streak.

Cardinals 41, Vikings 31
Neil Lomax fired two touchdown passes to Roy Green and one to Pat Tilley, and Otis Anderson ran for 136 yards and a touchdown, leading St. Louis' upset of Minnesota, the NFC's Central Division leaders.

The Cardinals, 3-5-1, the NFL's most error-prone team, stayed away from fumbles and interceptions until the final period. St. Louis' Neil O'Donoghue, who missed three field-goal tries in a 20-20 tie with the New York Giants the previous game, made good on attempts of 52 and 47 yards.

"The key to our success was our balance," said Cardinals Coach Jir Hanifan. "We wanted to knock them off the ball, and I think we accomplished it."

Seahawks 34, Raiders 21
Linebacker Shelton Robinson ignited slow-starting Seattle with a 12-yard fumble return for a touchdown and the underdog Seahawks went on to beat Los Angeles for their second victory over the American Conference West leaders in three weeks.

Robinson made his big play with 9:18 remaining in the second quarter and the Seahawks trailing 7-0. Linebacker Keith Butler shook the ball loose from running back Marcus Allen of the Raiders, Robinson scooped it up and lumbered into the end zone.

"The play was a blitz," said Robinson. "The ball squirted out. Marcus went running for it and it squirted from him. I don't remember what happened after that. I picked it up and there was the goal line. It wasn't that far. All big plays seem to affect a team."

Steelers 17, Buccaneers 12
Frank Pollard ran 2 yards for a touchdown with 31 seconds left as the Steelers overcame seven turnovers and an NFL record 42 carries by Tampa Bay's James Wilder to beat the 0-9 Buccaneers.

"All week long, we said we didn't want to be the first team to lose to them, that we couldn't make mistakes," said Pittsburgh quarterback Cliff Stoudt. "Then, we went out and made them."

Wilder gained 126 yards with his performance, wiping out the previous record of 41 attempts set by the Steelers' Franco Harris in a 1976 game against Cincinnati.

Browns 25, Oilers 19
Boyce Green sprinted 20 yards for a touchdown on the first play following an interception in overtime as the Browns sent the Oilers to their 16th straight defeat. The loss was the second straight in overtime for Houston, 0-9 this season.

On his game-winning run up the middle, Green eluded several Houston tacklers and kicked his way into the end zone.

"I just ran into the hole and was kind of stalemated," Green said. "I just hit it inside and when I saw the goal line, I just kept going."

The contest was the 14th overtime game of the 1983 season, the most overtime games played in one season since 1974, the year the NFL adopted the single 15-minute period for regular-season games.

Cowboys 38, Giants 20
Danny White threw for 304 yards, and a career-high five touchdown passes, including two to wide receiver Tony Hill, and the Dallas defense forced six turnovers as the Cowboys improved upon the NFL's best record at 8-1 with their victory over the Giants.

Drew Pearson, who caught one of those scoring strikes, said he felt his quarterback had a "so-so day, for Danny White." "Danny hit the plays he had to hit, but overall I think he'd tell you he didn't have one of his best days," said Pearson.

Falcons 24, Patriots 13
Rookie linebacker John Rade returned a fumble 16 yards for a touchdown as Atlanta's defense forced four critical fumbles in the Falcons' victory over New England.

Eagles 21, Colts 22

Longhorns undisputed as conference leaders

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The Texas Longhorns finally have scaled the summit expected of them — first place in the Southwest Conference football chase.

Texas Coach Fred Akers said it has been a pinnacle achieved the old-fashioned way, through hard work on the road and against opponents playing over their head.

"We had three rugged road games and just didn't have the intensity against Texas Tech we should have," said Akers after the No. 2-ranked 'Horns finally subdued the scrappy Red Raiders 20-3 Saturday. "It's been a gut-wringer for us this last month."

In other games Saturday, both SMU and Arkansas stayed alive in the SWC race.

SMU fashioned a brilliant goalline stand to beat back the vastly improved Texas Aggies 10-7 while Arkansas blasted Rice 35-0.

SMU, Arkansas and Texas Tech only have one loss in league play and still have a chance at the Cotton Bowl although unbeaten Texas has beaten all three.

In other games Saturday, Houston broke a four-game losing streak by outlasting Texas Christian 28-21 and Baylor did the SWC proud by defeating Tulane 24-18.

The SWC finished its season against outside competition two games over .500.

'HORNS HEAD FOR THE DOME

AUSTIN — Besides the come-from-behind victory over Texas Tech, Texas Coach Fred Akers got some more good news Saturday: Injured tailback Terry Orr and fullback Edwin Simmons could possibly be ready to play the Houston Cougars on Saturday.

"We hope Edwin could be back and it's a possibility," said Akers of his freshman running back sensation, who has missed two weeks with a dislocated knee cap.

"We've got a good chance Orr will be back," Akers said.

Orr had been sidelined with a knee injury.

Asked if he enjoyed playing in the Astrodome, Akers said, "I like excitement, noise and action. I like noisy places."

He added "the surface isn't all that good but the Astrodome is fine and the noise doesn't bother us. We won't use that as an excuse."

BEARS DO SWC PROUD

WACO — Baylor's disputed 24-18 victory over Tulane was the Bears' first sweep of non-conference foes since 1976 and gave the SWC a two-game bulge over .500 for the year against outside competition.

It didn't make Tulane Coach Wally English very happy.

Tulane threw a touchdown pass that wasn't late in the game. Officials ruled the Green Wave was in motion, calling it back.

Protests from the Tulane bench resulted in back-to-back unsportsmanlike conduct flags.

Tulane eventually faced a fourth and 42 and punted.

Cowboy White pleased with 5 TD performance

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — By his own standards, Danny White measured up as a quarterback.

"The measure of a quarterback is: Did he orchestrate the defense to the point where he could put points on the board?" said White.

The Dallas Cowboys quarterback orchestrated the New York Giants' defense so well Sunday that he tied a club record with a career-high five touchdown passes as the Cowboys improved upon the National Football League's best record with a 38-20 victory.

But White said his play "wasn't indicative of a record performance" because he felt he "made a few bad decisions."

"I made the plays we needed to win, but I like to play as close to perfect as I can," said White, an eight-year veteran who hit 15 of 33 passes for 304 yards, with two interceptions.

White's five touchdown throws — two to wide receiver Tony Hill and one each to Tony Dorsett, Doug Cosbie and Drew Pearson — put him alongside Eddie LeBaron, Don Meredith and Craig Morton in the Cowboys' record book. All of his touchdown passes capped long drives.

"There was a time when teams feared playing against the Giants' defense. It just seems to me a lot of teams have lost respect for us," said New York's inside linebacker Harry Carson, who returned to action Sunday after missing five games with a knee injury. "They're using us as a stepping stone."

The Cowboys' defense forced New York quarterback Jeff Rutledge into six turnovers — three fumbles in the first half and three interceptions in the fourth quarter.

The Cowboys broke the game open after White's 7-yard pass to Pearson on the first play of the fourth quarter put the finishing touch on a 76-yard, 10-play drive.

Curtain lifted on newsroom

CHICAGO (AP) — It was first with the news that John Dillinger was dead. One of its scoops inspired "The Front Page." Its graduates are among the best-known authors and journalists in America.

But the City News Bureau of Chicago seldom gets credit for journalistic accomplishments or recognition for its alumni.

At City News, anonymity is the byword — and the byline.

For most of its 102-year history, the reporters and editors who serve as the first eyes and ears of Chicago journalism have been veiled from public view.

But now A.A. Dornfeld has lifted the curtain on the City News Bureau, and the gruff former night editor may end City News' obscurity.

Dornfeld's "Behind the Front Page: The Story of the City News Bureau of Chicago" has appeared from Academy Chicago Publishers.

In it, he exposes to the light of day some fabulous journalistic creatures — felonious reporters, voyeuristic copyboys and a germ-fearing editor who had his desk purged with flaming benzene each morning.

The book is introduced by Chicago Sun-Times columnist Mike Royko, whose City News credentials are shared by the likes of Pulitzer Prize winner Seymour Hersh and a few who "went wrong" and left journalism: novelist Kurt Vonnegut Jr., actor Melvyn Douglas, artist Claes Oldenburg and others.

Royko describes one of the most fabulous creatures of all — Dornfeld himself — and "Dornie" feigns displeasure.

Dornfeld doesn't mind mention of his disheveled hair, his manure-caked boots, his baleful eye and his "penitentiary escape siren" voice. He's proud of the fear he instilled in his night-shift underlings.

But Royko goes on to call his former boss and mentor "a sweet and wonderful man" — something guaranteed to provoke him.

"Nobody's perfect, ladie," Dornfeld demurs in a telephone interview. He calls his new book "a magnificent hunk of drivel."

It's more than that. It's the first comprehensive history of a unique journalistic institution and a chronicle of newspaper Chicago from 1881 to the Tylenol cyanide murders of 1982.

The lessons learned in the sink-or-swim world of City News have helped its alumni from the "Front Page" days of Charles MacArthur and Hildy Johnson, through the My Lai coverage of Hersh.

Dornfeld tells how the often-untrained and always overworked, underpaid and anonymous City News "cubs" dealt with a century's worth of crime, disturbance and disaster.

It's the tale of a news service doubling as a training school — with no discernible entrance requirements, no tuition and no degrees granted. City News scooped the Chicago newspapers on the Iroquois Theater fire of 1903, which killed 602 people, and the 1915 sinking of the excursion boat Eastland, which killed 812.

It scored another scoop on the escape of murderer Tommy O'Connor from Death Row — inspiring "The Front Page" by MacArthur and Ben Hecht.

Dornfeld tells of Larry Mulay, the bacteriophage editor who later served as general manager for many years. One of his colleagues called Mulay "the pinnacle of hygiene on the tower of filth."

He also tells of some of that filth, including the behavior of long-gone copyboys who trained binoculars on a nearby hotel frequented by conventioners and telephoned the appropriate rooms with equally appropriate suggestions.

Also indelicate were the tactics of reporters who impersonated police officers, used stethoscopes to eavesdrop on interrogations and went through the wastebaskets of vacated jury rooms.

Most of the stories, though, feature, as hero or goat, the City News reporter with barely enough money for bus fare and an obligation to share hard-won information with his or her competitors — Chicago's other reporters.

At City News, the immediate reward is a story printed in a newspaper under someone else's byline. The ultimate reward is to snag a more lucrative job so one could afford to reminisce about City News.

"Look, chum," Dornfeld once told a subordinate with scheduling complaints, "we work you these terrible hours so you can't chase the blondes and redheads you can't afford on the totally inadequate salary we pay you."

A recurring theme in Dornfeld's book is the revulsion of reporters at the City News rule that the families of violence victims must be interviewed.

"The ordinary delicacies had to be overcome ...," he explained. "We editors had to browbeat nice kids into doing distasteful things."

"That was how we made reporters out of them."

They still make them. Under new General Manager Bernie Judge, another alumnus, the bureau employs about 55 people.

The reporters still lurk in the police stations and courts, telephoning details to "rewrite." Rewrite still turns out something resembling prose. Editors still reject it.

But eventually, it goes out to the service's 50 subscribers — newspapers, wire services, radio and television stations.

City editor Paul Zimbrakos estimates the average daily output a 23,000 words, not counting copy on the adjunct public relations wire.

The hand-delivery boys of the 1880s are gone, and the system of pneumatic tubes that whisked copy under the downtown Chicago streets for 68 years now sits idle, but the news still goes out — via computer.

"I hope that machine can spell real well," Dornfeld says. "New people at City News always have trouble spelling words with more than four letters."

'Dallas' cast at wedding

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Most of the cast of "Dallas" was on hand as Heidi Kristina Hagman, daughter of actor Larry Hagman, married New Mexican artist Brian Blount at her parents' home in secluded Malibu Colony.

As Miss Hagman, 25, and Blount, 33, exchanged vows on Saturday, the bride's grandmother, actress Mary Martin, sang "The Wedding Song" by folk singer Paul Stookey. In addition to actress Linda Gray and most of the rest of the cast of the prime-time TV soap opera in which Hagman portrays the scheming oilman J.R. Ewing, well-wishers included Peter Fonda; CBS-TV President Bud Grant; Merv Adelson, chairman of Lorimar Productions Inc., which produces "Dallas"; and Mary Crosby, a former "Dallas" siren.

Rev. Jesse Jackson to announce candidacy

ATLANTA (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, demanding a "new covenant" linking blacks to the Democratic Party, organized labor and big business, says he will seek to become the first black presidential candidate nominated by a major party.

The civil rights leader said he is running for the 1984 Democratic nomination because blacks have an investment in the Democratic Party, "and we want a return on our investment."

Sunday, in a speech at Morehouse College in Atlanta and in a taped television interview, Jackson said he would formally announce his candidacy on Thursday. "We have a dual mission," he said. "One part is to remove the repressive Reagan regime. The other is to achieve parity."

"Our position has been that we have been an unofficial candidate in the Democratic primaries," Jackson said. As of Thursday, he said, "I expect to become an official candidate."

Many of the country's black political leaders have said they will not support Jackson, fearing such a campaign would be divisive. But in an interview on the CBS television program "60 Minutes," broadcast Sunday night, Jackson said, "No candidate can expect to have unanimous support from any given community."

Asked if he would choose a female running mate if possible, Jackson replied: "There's no doubt about it."

Louisiana Sen. Huey P. Long was shot in Baton Rouge in 1935 and died two days later.

Hardy barley is one of man's oldest foods

By TOM HOGE
AP Wire & Food Writer
Barley is a food we don't hear much about today, although man has been enjoying it for many centuries and it still plays an important role in the kitchen.

This hardy cousin of wheat, which seldom grows more than 3 feet high, exists in more than 200 varieties and was one of the first grains ever cultivated. The Lake Dwellers of Switzerland discovered barley about 3,000 years ago.

Barley grows in a wider range of climates than most cereals. It has a short growing season and can be cultivated at high altitudes. It has been found as far north as the Arctic Sea, but is generally a key crop in temperate zones and sometimes close to the tropics.

The Bible mentions barley as one of the foods destroyed by the plagues of Egypt. The ancient Greeks and Romans used the cereal grass and it was later grown widely in England.

In America, barley was sown in Martha's Vineyard early in the 17th century.

Barley is high in nutritive values. Until 400 years ago, it was the main source of bread. Eventually, however, most countries substituted wheat, which is more palatable and better suited for baking since it makes a lighter bread.

Barley has a nutty flavor and makes a good side dish with meats. It is excellent in hearty soups and makes a tasty casserole with mushrooms.

Barley doesn't seem to go with any particular cuisine. It has been popular for many years in such diverse places as Scandinavia, Scotland and Turkey.

Barley is used extensively in the brewing of beer and distillation of Scotch whisky. Barley water, a mixture of the grain, water, lemon and sugar, was a popular beverage in English households in Victorian days.

Here is a recipe for Barley Casserole, which makes an economical lunch or supper.

6 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup pearl barley
1 large onion, minced
1 cup sliced raw mushrooms

3 cups chicken consommé, boiling hot

Salt and pepper to taste
Heat 2 tablespoons butter and saute barley in it briefly. Transfer barley to heavy casserole. Heat 2 more tablespoons butter and saute onion in it. Add to barley. Saute mushrooms in remaining butter and add to other ingredients. Stir in hot consommé and salt and pepper to taste. Cook, covered, in 325 degree oven until barley is tender and has absorbed the consommé — about 30 to 45 minutes. Stir occasionally. Makes about 6 servings.

Good spy tale about mole

ALBATROSS. By Evelyn Anthony. Putnam. 239 Pages. $14.95.

We dislike more international spy novels than we like, but we liked "Albatross." The characters have more to think about and do at home in London than fool around with worldwide airplane timetables.

They get right down to a John Le Carre-type basic. A mole, code named Albatross by his Russian bosses, is high in the British Intelligence service.

There are only three suspects, James White, the chief, and his two top assistants, John Kidson and Humphrey Grant. Davina Graham used to be a hotshot top assistant but she quit and went into advertising.

The mole got her Soviet defector husband killed. So Grant recruits her — her motive, revenge — to dig for Albatross from the outside. Grant's motive might be covering himself, she reasons. So she starts the hunt, then tells him she's giving up and goes on alone.

Kidson is married to Miss Graham's sister, so they have more than the usual access to spying on each other.

But did either Grant or Kidson know as much as the chief, surely the most effective spot for this long-time effective mole?

Miss Graham's best shot at discovery is a Russian agent named Peter Harrington who was caught and is in a British prison. He wants to tell her enough to do a trade, getting himself out of prison, but not so much the Russians will retaliate.

An amusing contrast can be made between the scenes with the British spy bosses and the Russian spy bosses. The Russian hard liners and soft liners are at war. The British are harmonious about policy. The Russians don't turn a hair when somebody is killed. The British are distressed. The reader thinks he or she knows who Albatross is on page 139 and then spends 100 pages wondering if the answer is right. The mole may be brought blinking up to the light. But hold the cheers. If he is, the Russians have another one already in Britain's backyard, ready to burrow.

magnificently."

Jim: "We won the match by a big margin so that our gain, when the other South went down, was just icing on the cake. How did he bid and play the hand?"

Oswald: "His four-spade bid invited the slam. Since we were bidding simply, I Blackwooded to six after suggesting seven by a five no-trump call. He won the spade lead, led a low trump and ducked in dummy after West had played the eight. East won with the 10 and forced dummy with a spade. Jeff cashed my ace of trumps and started on diamonds. Since the suit broke 4-2, he got to set up the fifth diamond for a discard of his last spade."

Jim: "Against us, South ruffed a spade immediately, cashed North's ace of trumps, came to his hand with the diamond king, ruffed the last spade, cashed the top clubs and tried to ruff a club. Clubs broke 5-2 and West overruffed to leave East's queen of hearts to set the contract."

Halloween Safety Ensures Night of Treats, Not Tricks

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: It's Halloween again and time to remind you that ...

Somebody's child will be seriously injured or killed in a Halloween-related traffic accident.

Somebody's child will be badly maimed or fatally burned due to a flammable costume.

Somebody's child will become violently ill or die after eating poisoned candy or an apple containing a razor blade.

Somebody's child will be coaxed into an automobile or lured into a secluded area and sexually assaulted.

To make sure that child isn't yours, here are some tips to ensure the safety of your children:

— Use flameproof costumes only. If costumes are made at home, treat the fabric with a flame-resistant solution.

— Because masks, floppy hats, wigs and veils often interfere with a child's vision, use makeup instead.

— Accessories such as swords, broomsticks, hatchets, wands, etc., should be made of cardboard rather than plastic, metal or wood. Sharp items are dangerous.

— Provide youngsters with flashlights to prevent falls on sidewalks or porch steps. (Positively no lighted candles should be carried!)

— Decorate your child's costume and trick-or-treat bag with reflective tape to make them highly visible to motorists.

— Remind children that they should never enter the home of a stranger or accept rides.

— Adults can help by keeping their yards well-lighted.

— Parents should check all "treats" before allowing children to eat them.

— Very young children should never be out after dark unless accompanied by an adult.

So, make it a safe Halloween, and come Thanksgiving, you'll have more to be thankful for.

DEAR ABBY: A junior high school girl sought your advice after having told her gym teacher that she "loved" her and asked her to be her "special friend." The teacher told her she felt "uncomfortable" being loved so much by a student, and she urged the girl to get over it.

You were right to advise the girl not to pursue a special friendship with this teacher.

Abby, as a representative for the National Education Association, I have seen my share of unsavory student/teacher liaisons gone public, and I can only commend this teacher for seeing the danger in the situation.

Every day in every school, some student is falling in love with some teacher. Some of these gestures are reciprocated and, if made public, the teacher stands to lose a career or worse. School boards and the courts do not look kindly on teachers who violate the sacred trust of a student/teacher relationship.

Teaching is a more difficult job than most of the public realizes, and this letter illustrates just one of the occupational hazards. The gym teacher was correct and proper, even expressing her feeling of being "uncomfortable" with being "loved." I applaud this teacher's sound judgment.

S.L., WICHITA, KAN.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell people to quit digging the morticians. After all, they are the last people in the world to let you down. O-Lay!

Family living in tent home

AUSTIN (AP) — Bob and Susan Turnbull and their seven children live beside Bull Creek, next to a small waterfall, among wildflowers and large shade trees.

But the Turnbulls are not living there by choice. They say they have been sleeping in tents for over two years, unable to find housing they can afford in Austin.

"You get tired of it after a while," says Mrs. Turnbull, 32.

Turnbull, 43, said he was laid off his job as a garbage truck driver two years ago in West Plains, Mo. Like hundreds of other families, the Turnbulls came to Texas, where they had heard jobs were plentiful.

Mrs. Turnbull has a job painting porcelain for $4.10 an hour. Turnbull has worked at a succession of semiskilled jobs. In August, he was laid off his last steady job as a construction worker.

Despite paying $49 to a locator service, Turnbull says he has been unable to find housing the family can afford, and low-income housing agencies say they have waiting lists of more than two years.

"People don't want to rent to us because we have seven kids," Mrs. Turnbull said. "Now, Robert's laid off, so we can't afford it even if they would."

In Missouri, the family stayed in federally subsidized public housing. But they found that in Austin public housing was harder to come by.

Government guidelines for public housing, designed to prevent overcrowding, require a family as large as the Turnbulls to live in a five-bedroom home.

"In 10 years, I've known of only two five-bedroom units to become available," said William Banks, Austin director of housing.

After a year of waiting, the family is fifth on the list for a five-bedroom unit. But Lavern Gaines, a clerk with the Austin Housing Authority, estimates the Turnbulls face a wait of two to three more years.

The Turnbulls would face a similar wait for a four-bedroom unit if the guidelines were waived in their case, said Banks.

Three more added to list

By The Associated Press

The waiting has come to an end for two more Texas families, who have learned that their sons were among the more than 200 U.S. servicemen killed in last week's terrorist attack in Lebanon.

Master Sgt. Matilde Hernandez Jr., 37, of Austin, was placed on the official casualty list Saturday, and the name of Lance Cpl. David Brown of Conroe was added Sunday.

A native of Arlington, Marine Pfc. Stephen Bland, 23, of Midway Park, N.C., was also put on the casualty list Sunday.

Hernandez' sister, Defina Arriola, said her brother had written of his desire to leave Lebanon in seven letters his relatives received Oct. 24, the day after the bomb attack. He was due to come home Nov. 17.

Hernandez, who lived near Camp Lejeune, N.C., with his wife Mary and their four children, 9 to 15, joined the Marines during the Vietnam War and served a short time in Vietnam until he was injured, Mrs. Arriola said.

The Marines sent Hernandez to Beirut in May. Initially he was a guard at the airport, but later was moved to an indoor job.

The first deaths of Marines in Beirut prompted an increase in his letters home, Mrs. Arriola said. "He wrote to us about it. I don't think he wrote to my parents about it, but he did to us. He saw some of the guys that were killed, how they looked. He was very anxious to leave."

Brown's mother, Patsy, said she broke down and cried when Marine officials informed her Saturday that her son had died in the Oct. 23 bombing.

"We're a close-knit family," she said. "We meant so much to each other. There were these thoughts going through my head — like it was happening to someone else, that it was on TV, that I was dreaming and I would wake up in a minute."

Despite the pain, Mrs. Brown said she was relieved the waiting had ended.

"I had an inner peace I can't explain. It was a relief when the Marines came ... because we had waited and waited and waited," she said.

Marine officers said it could be up to two weeks before their son's body is returned home.

"We want a military funeral for David," Mrs. Brown said. "We want everything the military has to offer. We want honor guards. I think this is appropriate because he was a good Marine."

She said she hoped her son did not suffer when a truck packed with explosives crashed through barricades into the Marine headquarters in Beirut.

"I like to think that David didn't know what hit him. I like to think he was sleeping and that he has gone and is now sleeping with the Lord," she said.

Mrs. Brown said she still is behind President Reagan "100 percent."

"I'm not bitter," she said. "But I still don't quite understand why our boys had to die."

The telephone number for Bland's family in Arlington was unlisted and they could not be reached for comment.

Marine's kin waiting again

SEAFORD, Del. (AP) — A pair of clean Marine camouflage pants hangs on a line in the back yard. Inside, wood crackles in the fireplace, an old movie is playing on TV, and a mother waits.

The phone rings often, always shrilly. Jackie Persinger always answers. But not one call has brought news of her son's safety.

She is just one mother of one Marine who left Camp Lejeune, N.C., last week to join the invasion of Grenada. But she has waited before — for 444 days, when her son and 51 other Americans were held hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Iran three years ago.

The name of Sgt. Gregory A. Persinger, 25, hasn't appeared on any list of missing or wounded in Grenada, and he may already be among those Marines pulled out of the Caribbean and sent to Beirut.

She worries, "but so do all the other mothers," she said Sunday at the family's home. "Of course it's tough. But it's tough for everyone. Greg is not any kind of special hero. He's just a Marine, one of many doing their job."

Politely, even, she tells callers she hasn't heard from her son. No phone call. No letter. But she says little else, keeping her own counsel during a week that has shocked the world as the Iranian hostage crisis once did.

"I'm proud of him, but I'm not the only mother of one of those boys," she explained.

Her husband, Lawrence, notices the strain. "She's here all day with the phone ringing. By the time I get home, she's a bundle of nerves," he said.

"With all that's going on in Beirut and Grenada," Greg's father said, being the parent of a Marine "isn't easy, I'll tell you."

Only 30 miles away, in Dover, other parents gathered Sunday for one of the first memorial services for soldiers killed in Beirut and Grenada.

Not all of the calls to the Persinger home have been kind. One anonymous caller "said he wished Greg was dead because of all the attention Greg's gotten," Mrs. Persinger said.

Greg Persinger became a local celebrity, as did all the hostages in Iran, when he returned to this southern Delaware community of 5,000, the Persingers' home for 20 years.

Persinger signed up for another four years with the Marines and was assigned to the U.S. Embassy in Indonesia before his transfer to Camp Lejeune. His mother doesn't regret Persinger's decision to risk his life again in assignments often far from home.

FDA probing malfunction

DALLAS (AP) — Federal investigators are examining dialysis equipment at the Dallas Kidney Disease Center where three dialysis patients died of heart failure within minutes of each other last week.

"What we are concerned about is if there is any problem with the device and that the public be protected," said Dr. H. Frank Newman, regional medical officer for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Newman said a recall of dialysis equipment was unlikely, because kidney patients' lives depend on the machines.

Center officials said an electrical malfunction caused a backup heating system to begin operating at the same time as the main one, overheating the saline solution flowing into the patients' blood.

"It apparently is a simple wiring defect that resulted in the equipment failing," said Newman. "The principal concern we have is that other machines built by the manufacturer are inspected to make sure there aren't similar defects."

Center officials said the problem was corrected and the center reopened on Saturday, the day after the deaths.

Newman and two other FDA inspectors said Saturday they would require the system's manufacturer, Milton Roy-Extracorporeal Inc., to inspect its machines in other parts of the country.

National Medical Care, Inc. of Waltham, Mass., which owns the center, issued a statement Sunday expressing regret over the three deaths.

"Electrical malfunction caused by faulty wiring ... as received from the manufacturer caused the temperature of dialysis fluid to become overheated," the statement said.

Extracorporeal's dialysis units have been recalled twice before — for faulty tubing and bypass valves, said the Health Research Group, a Washington-based branch of Ralph Nader's consumer organization.

An initial report by Extracorporeal, a Johnson & Johnson subsidiary, said electrical wiring of equipment that regulates the solution cleansing patients' blood was installed improperly when the unit was manufactured seven years ago, said Dr. Tom Parker, director of the center.

But a spokesman at the company's headquarters in King of Prussia, Pa., said the center's addition of a gas heater to electric heaters normally used with the system may have caused the deaths.

Gas dryers maintain one's appearance for less.

Saving money is important. For everyone. That's why natural gas dryers are the preference for those who know.

They cost less to operate than non-gas models. In fact, high-efficiency gas dryers dry about three loads of wash for the cost of drying one in a non-gas dryer.

And gas dries clothes faster. And it makes them feel soft and fluffy.

So get more for your money and get a gas dryer for your home. Today. After all, in these times, looking one's best for less is something everyone can appreciate.

Horror lives for ex-POWs

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — Time doesn't heal all wounds. Nearly 40 years after World War II ended, former prisoners of war are still struggling to escape nightmares from the past.

"The prison camp isn't over. You can control it when you're awake, but it comes right back at night," W.W. Nevill, 61, former Japanese POW, said while sitting in a fellow veteran's kitchen.

Across the table from Nevill, Ed Carter, 62, and Bill Thompson, 59, both former German POWs, sat nodding their heads in agreement. Nevill's horror began April 9, 1942, when U.S. forces in the Philippines surrendered to Japan and the Bataan Death March began. The horror continues in his subconscious, drowning his nights in cold sweat.

Thompson was captured Nov. 17, 1943, after his tank company was cut off and left without supplies. It was 266 days before his liberation by the Soviet Army, Carter said.

"It seemed like 10 years," he said.

When Carter's B-17 bomber was shot down over Germany Oct. 8, 1943, he and five other crew members survived by parachuting, but were picked up and imprisoned by German soldiers. The details of prison life are still vivid, Carter said.

"I don't guess there isn't any way to ever forget the smell," he said. He took a brief, glassy-eyed reflection, and abruptly snapped back with a shake of his head.

The three are members of the Northeast Texas chapter of the Organization of Ex-POWs. During the meetings, former POWs discuss legislation affecting them, but never talk about their experiences as a group.

"We've just all got a lot in common. We understand each other and don't have to talk about it," Nevill said.

The meetings give former POWs a chance to get together with people who understand what they have been through, Thompson said.

"You can socialize over a dinner and not talk about it," he said.

One common theme to the meetings is how POWs are treated by the government, Carter said. POWs are not understood by the government or the general public, Nevill said.

"If the general public could understand just one-quarter of what these people went through, and I say went through with flying colors, for their country, that would open their eyes. Then they would take a long, hard look at what they're doing for ex-POWs," he said.

"There's not a prisoner of war that wants sympathy. They want understanding," Nevill said.

Both Nevill and Thompson recounted times they were beaten and locked in dungeons. Carter said he was not aware of random beatings at his camp, but said conditions were poor.

Nevill weighed 196 pounds when captured, he said, but dropped to 97 pounds by the time he was released from his Japanese prison camp. Thompson said he too was malnourished when released.

A combination of hate and patriotism kept the men going.

"Hate's what got me through," Thompson said, clenching his fist. "We were treated like a pen full of hogs. Those Germans, some of them, didn't have a heart. If you died, you were just one less they had to guard."

Prisoners with Nevill at the POW camp in Japan were forced to work in coal mines 12 hours a day.

"They would just pick people out at random and literally beat them to death. They would do that just for their amusement," he said before he began to shake uncontrollably. He stopped talking and wiped his eyes. The other two men looked away as he sobbed.

"The cruelty of the Japs was incomprehensible to most people, because it was so inhumane. I don't know how anyone made it," Nevill said.

Crippen always wanted to be 'space cowboy'

HOUSTON (AP) — While his daddy worked in the oil fields and his mother ran a beer joint, Robert Crippen dreamed of being the fabled lone test pilot rocketing across the heavens in an experimental airplane.

"I thought he must be super-hot," says Crippen. Some call the 46-year-old shuttle pilot a walking computer. Another nickname fits better — space cowboy.

Crippen was born in Beaumont on September 11, 1937, but he grew up in Porter, in a white stucco house facing a two-lane blacktop and some railroad tracks.

North of the house, across a few yards of hard-packed gravel and sand, is a squat building with two wooden screen doors and three rectangular windows.

A small wooden sign tacked to a post out front says in stenciled 5-inch letters: "Crippen's."

A battered, arrow-shaped neon sign outlining the word "beer" dangles from a pole and points toward the building. A fading red bumper sticker on one of the small windows reads, "Space Shuttle Lift-Off... I Saw It."

When Crippen's father, Herbert, an oilfield worker, settled in Porter, Crippen's mother opened a beer joint next door to the house. It became the hangout and shoot-the-breeze parlor for Porter's roughnecks, hog farmers and their kin.

Ruth Crippen kept the place going until she died almost exactly a year after her son's first shuttle flight, which she witnessed in Florida.

As Bobby — the locals and relatives all call him — Bobby, while NASA officials call him "Crip" — became famous, his mom's beer joint became a miniature museum.

But he said he wanted something unusual, a pen- chant he shares with his brother, artist Ashley Bellamy, who lives in an old church in East Dallas. He modeled the home after architect C.S. Dilbeck's unusual home designs in 1930s and 1940s in Highland Park.

"I wanted to do something with a lot of texture," he said. "You can take things that are discarded and by assembling them, make it interesting texturally. It just went crazy from there."

Bellamy and his crew began salvaging bricks, pieces of sidewalks, boulders and whatever else they could find to rebuild the home's front wall.

Driving along Central Expressway one day, he noticed some of the road was being ripped out and repaired. He asked for two Chuck Yeager and Scott Crossfield, two of America's toughest test pilots.

"You know that there weren't many details out about people like Scott and Chuck back then to really get to know them in-depth in their personalities," said Crippen.

"For me, it was mainly, hey, there's this guy flying in all these fancy airplanes, and I'd really like to do that," he told The Dallas Morning News.

After Crippen completes his usual 12-hour day at NASA, he gets in his red pick-up truck and drives from Rocket Park toward Interstate 45 and his home in Porter.

"I guess my parents were obviously a big impact on me," Crippen said.

"After a while, my father couldn't work anymore because of his health. He was raising hogs with my brother-in-law."

"Pop only got through, I think, the third grade but from an educational standpoint, there was never any doubt in my mind that I was going to college because somehow he had instilled in me that that was a significant thing to do," he said.

"You know, it's funny," he said, chuckling. "Neither he (his father) nor my mom could ever understand or really figure out why I wanted to go into space. If that's what I really wanted to do, well that's OK, but they could never really comprehend anybody wanting to go up there."

Landscaper has own ideas

DALLAS (AP) — Robert Bellamy holds fragments of his memories within the walls of his eastside home: a bit of recycled ceramics here, some scavenged bricks there and even a few bicuspsids.

The 30-year-old landscaper has constructed his back-of-the-lot cottage from scratch, using the flotsam and jetsam of his urban surroundings.

"See this piece," he says, pointing to a smooth cement chunk. "I got this from Central Expressway."

Other memories, many rescued or liberated from the neighborhood where Bellamy grew up, the suburb of Highland Park, can be found throughout the massive curved wall that makes up the front of his house.

"This is orange Fiesta Ware," he said, eyeing tangerine pottery chips mortared into a swirling pattern. Pointing lower, he said, "There's a crystal doorknob."

And be sure not to miss the partial dental plate in another section of the wall, he said.

Bellamy told The Dallas Morning News that his dwelling elevates scavenging to a high art. The house is a hodgepodge of stone, bricks, ceramics and glass.

Almost all the materials were found in salvage yards, demolished houses, vacant lots, garage sales or rescued from old homes in Highland Park, he said.

"Scavenging was a necessity because of the cost," said Bellamy, the owner of Exterior Designs Landscape Co. "I do like recycling for recycling's sake. But junk for junk's sake really appeals to me."

Bellamy bought the property about a year ago, after the main house had been torn down, leaving only a garage apartment at the rear of the lot, which he decided to renovate.

But he said he wanted something unusual, a pen- chant he shares with his brother, artist Ashley Bellamy, who lives in an old church in East Dallas. He modeled the home after architect C.S. Dilbeck's unusual home designs in 1930s and 1940s in Highland Park.

One year after Roloff's death ministry, legal fight continue

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — His followers say they are keeping the faith, continuing the ministry and preparing to go back to court to keep the state out of the homes for delinquent youth Lester Roloff built and went to jail for.

Roloff died in the crash of a private plane on Nov. 2, 1982, Election Day.

The homes, situated on "The Farm," 557 acres of South Texas black dirt just outside Corpus Christi, are still in operation. The ministry is described as "more businesslike" without Roloff.

But Roloff's successors vow to continue with unwavering commitment the 10-year-old legal battle with the state that the fiery evangelist considered a fight for religious freedom.

"Our stand is on the First Amendment and the Bible principles of separation of church and state," said Rev. Wiley B. Cameron, 55, who took over as head of Roloff Evangelical Enterprises Inc. and the People's Baptist Church when Roloff died. "... Our standards and our methods of operation haven't changed. The Lord supplied us with a staff and we're carrying on the work."

In 1973, a Corpus Christi prosecutor said 16 girls from Roloff's Rebekah Home claimed staff members had beaten them. Roloff admitted corporal punishment was used in the homes, but said not of the youngsters was seriously hurt.

John Hill, then attorney general, began to investigate the homes, and the state welfare department demanded that the homes conform to licensing requirements or be closed.

Roloff spent five days in the Nueces County jail in February, 1974, when he was found in contempt of court for failing to meet an order to bring the homes into compliance with state standards.

In 1978, Roloff campaigned for Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements against Hill, the Democratic nominee.

Clements became governor, but Mark White, the new attorney general, persisted in the state's case. He won in state district court in June 1979. Roloff closed the homes rather than submit to state licensing.

Roloff pursued his legal battle all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, but lost.

Ownership of the homes was then transferred from Roloff Enterprises to People's Baptist Church. State District Judge Charles Mathews of Austin heard the case again in April 1981 and ruled that Roloff's three juvenile homes were exempt from state licensing requirements because the church, not the non-profit corporation, owned the homes.

White appealed the case, and Roloff was incensed.

The evangelist sided publicly with Clements against White in the 1982 governor's race. Before Roloff began his fatal plane trip on election day last year, he voted for Clements and made sure his four companions for the trip also voted.

A year later, White is in the governor's mansion, and Jim Mattox is attorney general. Roloff's body is buried in a cemetery across the road from The Farm.

The state's appeal was transferred last May from the Third Court of Civil Appeals in Austin to the Tenth Court of Civil Appeals in Waco. Briefs for both sides have been filed, but no hearing has been set.

Meanwhile, The Farm continues, battling the drugs, alcohol and promiscuous sex Roloff saw as the demons in the souls of the delinquent youths sent to him by their parents for a religious education.

The Farm is the site of five facilities that house up to 500 residents and staff. It is like a small town, with its own gasoline supply, country store, goat milk dairy and, of course, church — the People's Baptist.

Those who have inherited Roloff's ministry take pains to note that nothing has changed at The Farm in the year since Roloff's death.

The sign in front of People's Baptist still names Roloff as pastor. Cameron said the sign hasn't been changed because "we just haven't thought much about it."

"Things the outside world would notice don't bother us very much," Cameron said.

Cameron, who has been at The Farm for 10 years, first as school administrator, then as assistant pastor, worries that

"Things the outside world would notice don't bother us very much," Cameron said.

Cameron, who has been at The Farm for 10 years, first as school administrator, then as assistant pastor, worries that there is a public perception that without Roloff The Farm will fail.

Corpus Christi real estate mogul Alfred Edge, 67, is bringing Roloff's empire back from a multimillion-dollar debt, Cameron says, though Cameron admits that fundraising is not as easy without the ministry's forceful leader.

Roloff's taped sermons are still broadcast on about 190 radio stations. Edge said some of the "more inflammatory things" have been edited out.

Nueces County Attorney Mike Westergren, a friend and sometime legal adversary of Roloff, says the ministry has changed.

"I think it's managed in a much more moderate, businesslike fashion now," he said. "It's a lot more low-key, less fire and brimstone. The content may be the same, but the style is completely different."

Nevertheless, Cameron

Sitting in the same room in a Geneva luxury hotel this week will be men who in some cases blame one another for attempts on their lives or for assassinations of relatives and followers.

In some cases, men allied with one another today were once arch-enemies. The history of their bloody "entanglements, shifting alliances and hardline power brokering underscores the difficulty they face trying to end years of factional strife.

For example, former President Suleiman Franjeh was once allied with fellow Maronite Catholic Pierre Gemayel on the Christian right. But Franjeh broke with his fellow Christians in May 1978 over their increasing ties with Israel and hostility toward Syria.

One month later gunmen from the Christian Phalange party, founded and headed by Pierre Gemayel, killed Franjeh's son Tony, his wife and infant daughter.

Gemayel, father of President Amin Gemayel, came to the conference as co-chairman, along with former President Camille Chamoun, of the Lebanese Front, an umbrella organization which includes the Phalangists.

But relations between Chamoun, remembered as the president who requested U.S. intervention to restore order in 1958, and the Gemayel family have not always been harmonious.

Militiamen of Chamoun's National Liberal Party performed well alongside the Phalangists during the 1975-76 civil war. But when the war tapered off, the Phalangists clashed with Chamoun's militiamen in a series of bloody battles in the summer of 1978, reducing the Liberal Party's power.

President Gemayel's opponents at the conference have had their share of feuding too.

Although Jumblatt lives in Damascus and received Syrian backing during the September civil war, many Lebanese blame Syria for the 1977 murder of his father Kamal Jumblatt in an ambush.

Jumblatt shares leadership of the Front for National Salvation, a group formed to oppose the Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal pact, with Franjeh and former Prime Minister Rashid Karami.

Karami, whose stronghold is the northern port, of Tripoli, joined other Parliament deputies in demanding Franjeh's resignation as president after the breakup of the Lebanese army in 1976.

Franjeh remained in office, thanks in part to support from Chamoun.

Mental hospital was shelled during invasion

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. forces that invaded Grenada accidentally shelled a mental hospital, a White House spokesman said today. A Canadian magazine reported that 47 patients were killed but the Pentagon said the casualty toll was "substantially less."

Spokesman Larry Speakes said, "We were not aware there was a civilian hospital there."

He said President Reagan was informed about the shelling on Tuesday, the first day of the invasion.

Speakes said a Defense Department report on the incident had arrived at the White House a few hours earlier.

He said the hospital had been designated as a military area occupied by Grenadian forces. The Defense Department said the facility was part of the Fort Fredericks military complex and that the attack was staged because artillery was being fired from the area into the residence of Governor Gen. Paul Scoon, who the United States hopes will form an interim government.

The Canadian news magazine Maclean's said the attack, besides killing 47, left some of the patients free to wander about the island. The New York Post said 13 bodies had been taken from the rubble.

Maclean's reported that Alice Celestia, a nurse at the Cuban-built facility, gave reporters a tour of the shattered Richmond Hill Mental Hospital.

Both the Maclean's and the Post reports said the nurse absolved the United States of all blame, saying there was no way the Americans could have known they were shelling a hospital.

Hospital officials said they expected to find more bodies buried beneath tons of debris at the 183-patient hospital, the newspaper said.

At the Pentagon, Maj. J.R. Shields said in a statement, "Preliminary indications are that casualties there are substantially lower than being reported in various news accounts."

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 were mostly lower at midday dealings today.

The average prices for strict low middling 1-1/8 inch spot cotton advanced 1 1/2 points to 73.72 cents a pound Friday for the eight markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

Midday prices were 50 cents a bale higher to $3.00 lower than the previous close. Dec 79.65, Mar 80.82, May 81.40, Jul 81.68, Oct 76.00, Dec 74.68, and Mar 76.05.

Family makes own chocolate

DEXTER, Iowa (AP) — Drew's Candy melts in your hand as well as your mouth.

Norbert Tigges, 55, a truck driver by trade, his wife, Phyllis, and their eight children make chocolates in their basement. Left on a shelf or in a warm place, the candy melts into a mess.

But that's the way the Tiggeses want it because, unlike many big candy makers, they don't use paraffin in their chocolate.

The family claims their candy flunks the filling station test. Daughter Mary Kim Tigges, 19, claims that some candies can remain on the shelf of a store, or filling station, "for three years and never change ... Well, our candy won't do that ... it melts."

Drew's Candy Shop was founded 57 years ago by Helen Drew. When she died, the Tiggeses bought the business in 1977.

Boxes — the one-pound variety pack costs $4.75, $5.50 with dividers — are stuffed by hand. Old-fashioned machines do the stirring and each candy, one by one, is dipped and shaped by workers using a tool that looks like a child's bubble blower.

Advertising is by word of mouth and the shop, started in the basement, stayed there because it's cool.

"Old ladies who have trouble walking, everybody, they all got to come downstairs to get in. They like that. It's the atmosphere they expect," Tigges said.

Radical Party victory ends the Peronist era

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Raul Alfonsin of the centrist Radical Civic Union won the presidential race in elections to replace Argentina's 7-year-old military regime, returns today showed. The victory ended the Peronist Party's four-decade domination of national politics.

With more than 80 percent of ballots counted, Alfonsin, a 56-year-old lawyer and former congressman, had 52.6 percent of the popular vote compared to Peronist candidate Italo Luder's 39 percent.

Alfonsin captured 6,155,234 votes of a total of 11,701,347 in returns from 52,184 of the 67,561 polling stations. Luder, a former senator, received 4,565,991 on behalf of the labor-based Peronists.

Candidates of 10 other parties trailed far behind. Oscar Alende was third in the balloting with just 278,042 votes, or 2.4 percent.

The final count, with more than 14 million ballots cast, was not expected until later today.

A jubilant, banner-waving crowd of thousands of supporters cheered Alfonsin as he arrived.

Rock stars revive band

DALLAS (AP) — Rock stars Steve Miller and Boz Scaggs revived their old high school band, The Marksmen, during the weekend to help celebrate the 50th anniversary of their alma mater, St. Mark's School of Texas.

"This is the first time the entire band has played together in 23 years," said Miller, who formed the band with his brother, Buddy, in 1955. "There was hardly any rock 'n' roll back when we started in Dallas. Man, it was like being the first hamburger."

Miller, 40, said his years at St. Mark's also were an experience for school administrators.

"Well, let's see," he said. "They kicked me out my junior year, in 1960. Being in a rock band and all, I guess they thought we were a little unruly. There was only 32 in the class and they kicked out eight of us."

Large crowd hears concert

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — More than 7,500 people crowded into a heated tent to hear Italian tenor Luciano Pavarotti give his first performance for a casino crowd.

"It's new work for me," Pavarotti said before the concert Saturday night. "I've always had a pioneer mind, ever since I was born. Music had always been good to me, and I like doing new things for the world of opera ... This is a new frontier."

Two thefts noted this past weekend

During the weekend, local police were called to investigate two misdemeanor thefts and a criminal mischief incident.

Employees of the Pizza Inn on the East Highway reported the first theft at 1:53 p.m. Saturday. They told investigators that two men had left the restaurant without paying for their meal.

The weekend's second theft report was filed at 10 a.m. Sunday by James Herrington of 2406 Ave. D. Herrington told officers that two batteries, valued at $115, had been taken from two cars parked at his residence sometime between 2 p.m. Wednesday and 4 p.m. Saturday.

Gloria Shaw, of the Scurry County Senior Citizens Center filed the weekend's only criminal mischief report at 11:48 a.m. Saturday. Shaw told investigators that she had discovered a window of the center building broken out when she arrived Saturday morning. No value was estimated for the damage to the window and investigators reported no signs of entry being gained to the building.

City and State law enforcement officers also jailed a total of 12 suspects on various misdemeanor charges Saturday evening.

Highway patrolmen logged two arrests, one for DWI and one for public intoxication, Saturday night while city police jailed three DWI suspects and nine others on the PI charge. City police also arrested two local men on charges of possession of prohibited drug paraphernalia late Saturday night.

The 1500 Block of 24th St. was the scene of the weekend's second minor mishap at 1:15 a.m. Sunday. Police report discovering a 1960 Ford abandoned on the 24th St. bridge over Deep Creek where it had apparently collided with the guard rail. A Fort Worth man was identified as the vehicle owner.

A 1982 Buick driven by Nikki Michele Stewart of Dunn and a 1977 Pontiac driven by Lona Joy Turner of Rt. 1, Snyder were involved in the weekend's third mishap. It occurred in the 2500 Block of College Ave. at 10:19 p.m. Sunday.

No injuries were reported in any of the three mishaps and damage in each case was listed as minor.
