28 patients evacuated in bomb threat

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

An early morning bomb threat forced the evacuation of 28 patients from Permian General Hospital in Andrews only days after 60 members of the nursing staff staged a "white-flu" walkout to protest what they consider insufficient wages and benefits.

Rick Brown, director of the hospital's human resources department, said he believed the incidents were not related.

The bomb threat was taken by the hospital switchboard operator at 6:20 a.m. today and patients were moved to a nearby nursing home. They were allowed to return to the hospital at 8:23 a.m. after police conducted a thorough search of the building, Brown said.

No bomb was found, he said.

Refusing comment, Police Sgt. Brad Miller said the incident is still under investigation.

The Andrews County-run hospital has been embroiled in controversy since the nursing staff called in sick Monday and Tuesday, forcing the hospital to hire contract nurses and borrow others from nearby hospitals to cover the walkout.

Brown said the hospital staff "conducted themselves beautifully" during this morning's evacuation.

"I'm very proud of the way our staff reacted in this situation," he said.

All the nurses returned to work Wednesday after county commissioners and the hospital board promised to review their wages and benefits.

Former nursing director Maria Routzahn, who was relieved of her management duties Wednesday, returned to work this morning.

Volunteerism, small business and Forward Midland were recognized Wednesday at the annual meeting of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

In passing leadership to Joanne Langston at a luncheon at Midland Center, outgoing chairman Steve Davidson, called his year in office one of challenge and opportunity, and had high praise for the chamber's decision to move ahead with the Forward Midland project.

Forward Midland is an aggressive $2.3 million economic development project designed to draw new business into the community while creating and expanding business within the community. The project is being guided by a 17 member steering committee, headed by Clarence Scharbauer III.

Most Texans vote to repeal catastrophic insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attempts to repeal catastrophic insurance coverage are now before the Senate, where Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen is seeking to preserve the embattled program.

Only two Texas congressmen voted Wednesday to keep the insurance coverage for the elderly as the House decided overwhelmingly to repeal the law and then defeated an attempt to preserve a small part of the program.

Democratic Reps. J.J. "Jake" Pickle of Austin and Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio were among the minority attempting to keep the Medicare expansion in the face of a tide of public protest against the law enacted last year.

"This is not a proud day for this House," Pickle told his colleagues. "It has taken 25 years to pass a law to provide protection for older Americans against the catastrophic cost of either a lengthy acute illness or long-term care."

But Pickle was unable to sway his Texas colleagues or the rest of the House, which voted 360-66 to repeal the embattled program.

After the repeal vote, the House immediately considered a plan that would restore a small part of the program. However, that failed by a vote of 269-156.

Texans casting votes to preserve the program were Democrats Mike Andrews of Houston, John Bryant and Martin Frost of Dallas, Gonzalez, Solomon Ortiz of Corpus Christi, Pickle, and Charlie Wilson of Lufkin. Rep. Jack Brooks did not vote, and the rest of the delegation voted against the amendment.

Rep. Albert Bustamante, a San Antonio Democrat, said the financing mechanism was "just too burdensome for seniors."

"Something had to be done. Complete repeal of the act was the only alternative," Bustamante said after the vote. "We'll have to start over and come up with a better way to address the issue of catastrophic illness health care for the elderly."

About 6 percent of the 33 million people eligible for Medicare would have to pay a surtax of up to $800 this year to pay for the program.

More than half of those covered — as many as 60 percent of the 33 million — would not be subject to the controversial surtax at all, but would have $4 a month deducted from their Social Security checks.

Pickle said the House last year, when it voted 328-72 in favor of the program, realized the bill wasn't perfect — "but it was an important beginning — the first step to providing comprehensive protection for the elderly."

While Pickle said it was appropriate Congress consider changing the way the law is financed, including making participation in the program voluntary, "we will throw away the opportunity to preserve these benefits and to correct the financing if we vote to repeal the law today. We will take a giant step backwards and strip older Americans of protection which many are using today."

A Bentsen spokesman said the Texas senator also thinks it would be a mistake to repeal the program; "It would leave a lot of older Americans stranded out there if this program is repealed."

But Bentsen also recognizes the program won't avoid repeal without bipartisan support, said his spokesman.

The Dalai Lama

Peace prize awarded to Dalai Lama

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The Dalai Lama, the exiled spiritual and political leader of Tibet, won the 1989 Nobel Peace Prize today for his nonviolent struggle to free his Himalayan nation from Chinese rule.

The Norwegian Nobel Committee praised the Dalai Lama's message of universal reverence and respect for all living things. China condemned the selection.

Though he preached peace, his followers repeatedly joined bloody clashes with Chinese authorities in Lhasa, the Tibetan capital, in the last two years.

The chairman of the Norweigan Nobel Committee, Egil Aarvik, said the selection of the Buddhist monk could also be seen as a signal of encouragement for the pro-democracy movement in China itself, which was crushed in June.

"The committee wouldn't have anything against them interpreting it like that," Aarvik said after reading the citation to reporters.

Cavazos say he's 'impatient educator'

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

ODESSA — U.S. Secretary of Education Lauro Cavazos said today that Americans must be impatient to move toward improving education.

"Americans must heed the tolling of the school bell. We have waited too long," the former president of Texas Tech University told more than 800 Odessans gathered for the dedication of three new elementary schools.

Calling himself "an impatient educator," Cavazos said, "I want things to be the very, very best."

The ceremony at Bonham Junior High School's Auditorium dedicated Lauro Cavazos, Barbara Jordan and Lyndon Johnson elementary schools. The three schools were made possible by a May 1988 bond election.

Former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan was not on hand for the dedication, but was represented at the ceremony. Jordan who represented Houston in the U.S. House, is now a lecturer in the University of Texas' LBJ School of Public Affairs and holds the school's Centennial Chair in National Policy.

Jordan and Cavazos had each scheduled late morning press conferences at the new schools bearing their names. Johnson Elementary was to be dedicated by Midland U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton, a friend of the late president.

"Education is not static." Cavazos challenged the crowd of educators and community members to "be bold , be thoughtful, be innovative."

Cavazos applauded the district and the community's commitment toward education exhibited by the building of the three schools. "It tells me you are also impatient educators. You want to change."

Ector County Independent School District Superintendent Gene Buinger said, "It is an honor to accept Cavazos, Jordan and Johnson elementary schools for the teachers, administrators and support personnel of Ector County Independent School District."

He added that the new facilities represent the latest in design and construction technique and they also filled the district's need for space to meet the state-mandated 22-to-1 ratio of students to teachers.

Cavazos, Texas Tech's tenth president and the first graduate to hold the top post of his alma mater, made several disconcerting observations about the state of education today, including:

- 27 million Americans are illiterate;
- Between 600,000 and 700,000 youngsters drop out of school each year; and
- Though SAT and ACT scores have improved in recent years, they are still below their levels of 20 years ago.

U.S. accused of exploiting illegal aliens

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari accused American employers Wednesday (Oct. 4) of exploiting illegal Mexican workers who, he said, will continue to be drawn to American jobs despite U.S. efforts to stop them.

"The abuse and exploitation of Mexican workers is intolerable in all cases," Salinas said in an address to a joint meeting of Congress, where he was received with prolonged and spirited applause.

Salinas called for new bilateral agreements "that could include the participation of workers' organizations and state governments on both sides of the border in order to meet the labor demand of the United States, protect human and labor rights, and do away with the network of corruption and illegality surrounding the migration of my fellow countrymen."

TV evangelist Jim Bakker convicted on fraud charges

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — TV evangelist Jim Bakker was convicted today of fleecing his followers of $3.7 million.

The federal jury deliberated a day and a half before convicting him on all 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy for overselling time shares, or "partnerships," at his ministry's resort hotels to loyal followers of his PTL ministry.

The 49-year-old preacher could receive up to 120 years in prison and $5 million in fines at sentencing.

Prosecutors said Bakker diverted the money to live in high style, buying Rolls-Royces, homes, diamonds, an air-conditioned doghouse and furnishings ranging from gold-plated swan bathroom fixtures to motorized bedroom drapes.

Bakker showed little emotion as the verdict was read, nor did his wife, Tammy. She was not charged in the case.

As they awaited the verdict in the courtroom this morning, several Bakker supporters held Bibles opened to Psalm 17, which reads:

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

Mostly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of showers and some thunderstorms are expected tonight, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be near 60 and winds will be from the south at 5-15 mph becoming northeasterly by late evening.

Friday is expected to continue mostly cloudy in the morning, becoming partly cloudy by the afternoon with the high in the middle 80s and winds from the northeast at 5-15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 85 was 11 degrees cooler than the record high of 96 set on Oct. 4, 1937. The overnight low of 59 was 23 degrees warmer than the record low of 36 degrees set for this date in 1932.

STATE

Dense fog formed along the Texas coast early today, reducing visibility to one-sixteenth of a mile at Houston.

The dense fog was reported over most of the coast and resulted from moisture flowing into the state from the Gulf of Mexico.

Forecasts called for mostly cloudy skies through Thursday with a chance of showers and thunderstorms across northern and western sections of the state.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s across North Texas and West Texas and in the 70s over the rest of the state.

Highs Thursday will be in the 80s over most of the state and in the 90s in extreme South Texas. Temperatures will be slightly cooler in areas where rainfall is recorded.

NATION

Tropical Storm Raymond produced showers and thunderstorms in New Mexico, while cool autumn weather persisted in the Northeast early today.

Flash flood watches were posted today for southeastern Arizona and most of western and central New Mexico.

Early morning temperatures dipped into the 40s across the Northeast, a day after cities throughout the Midwest posted record low temperatures.

The temperature dropped to 32 degrees Wednesday in Detroit, breaking an 88-year-old record for the date by a degree. Other record lows included 23 degrees in Eau Claire, Wis., 19 in St. Cloud, Minn., 25 in Dubuque, Iowa, and 24 in Rockford, Ill.

Salinas says Mexico will root out traffickers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari told a joint meeting of Congress on Wednesday his nation intends "to eradicate drug trafficking at its very roots."

But Salinas, who is on a state visit to the United States, warned that "at the world level, we are losing." He said that was unacceptable, and called for greater cooperation between governments to turn the tide.

While vowing an all-out effort to curb drug trafficking, Salinas firmly ruled out joint U.S.-Mexican military operations to fight the traffickers.

"The responsibility for the fight in our country is exclusively ours," he said. "There will be no joint military operations on our soil.

"Mexico intends to eradicate drug trafficking at its very roots in the sphere that falls under its responsibility," Salinas said, speaking in Spanish while his audience of senators and House members read from English translations.

Drug smuggling and the alleged corruption of many Mexican law enforcement authorities have led to complaints in Congress that have at times been so strident they have been dubbed "Mexico bashing."

Salinas appeared to be appealing for an end to this, saying, "The time has come to build a new relationship free of myths and distrust, abuses and recriminations."

He said that the worldwide fight against drug trafficking also is shared by Mexico but that mutual accusations about who is to blame for the multibillion scourge waste time and effort.

"In Mexico, we now affirm that drug-trafficking is a threat to national sovereignty ... because, as in other nations, it corrupts whatever it touches," Salinas said.

Later, in a speech at the National Press Club, Salinas said Mexico will provide "no haven and no sanctuary" for narcotics traffickers.

"We will hit them where it hurts, in the pocket and in their personal liberty," he said.

The Mexican president also used his speech to Congress to renew his appeal for greater Mexican access to U.S. markets, saying that while Mexico has eliminated most non-tarrif barriers to U.S. products, "we continue confronting them in the United States."

Salinas described this as an "inequitable paradox" and said Mexico must have "greater and more secure access to the world's greatest market, the United States" to obtain the economic growth that is needed to improve the lot of its people.

U.S. officials disagree with Salinas' portrayal of the United States as a protectionist nation. They say two-thirds of Mexico's exports come to the United States and that Mexico had a $2.7 billion surplus in its U.S. trade last year on total two-way trade of about $44 billion.

SALINAS

A U.S. State Department official said no such proposal currently is under consideration, but that both countries have created working groups to consider changes in the immigration policies of both countries.

"Let's get rid of myths," Salinas said. "Mexican workers do not push anyone out of a job. They work efficiently and with dignity for wages, in many cases below the market wage, doing jobs that are not done by American citizens ...

"However, we fail to understand why the 'American dream' must be harsh for the Mexican immigrants who have decided to share it ... They seek to better themselves through education and abide by the laws, thus giving prestige to their country of origin. The law should also protect them and prevent discrimination."

Other than the reference to substandard wages, Salinas did not detail any other forms of exploitation as he ended the Washington phase of a five-day U.S. trip that began Sunday and included a state visit Tuesday with President George Bush.

Salinas, in his speech, reiterated Mexico's rejection of the long-standing U.S. proposal to permit American military or police to chase drug traffickers across the border into Mexico.

"Mexico views the fight to end drug trafficking as a matter of national security, a concern for the health of Mexican youth and an act of solidarity with the community of nations," Salinas said.

"We will cooperate, but the responsibility for the fight in our country is exclusively ours. Therefore, there will be no joint military operations on our soil."

Added Salinas, "Mexico intends to eradicate drug trafficking at its very roots in the sphere that falls under its responsibility."

U.S.-Mexican relations reached a low point following the 1985 murder of American narcotics agent Enrique "Kiki" Camarena in Mexico by drug traffickers. The U.S. Justice Department accused the Mexican government of then-President Miguel de la Madrid of dragging its feet on an investigation of Camarena's killers, and in tolerating rampant corruption among the military, police and judiciary that permitted drug producers and traffickers to flourish.

Salinas, since his inauguration last Dec. 1, has ordered the arrest of corrupt officials and traffickers, and seizures of drugs have reached unprecedented amounts.

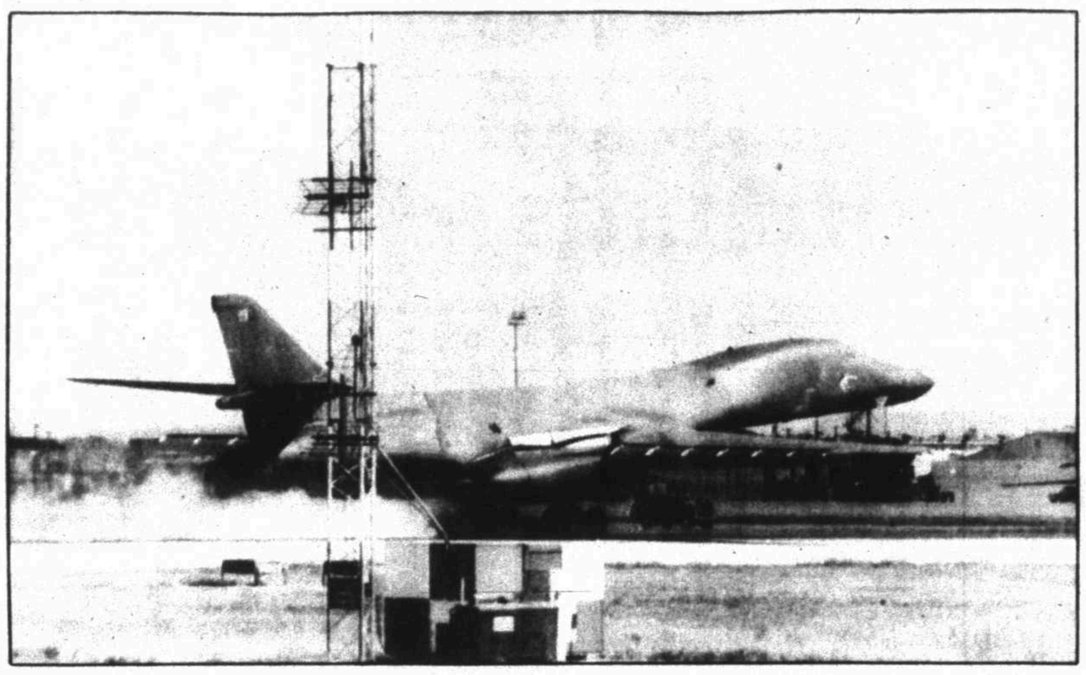

In his speech to Congress and later in an address to the National Press Club, Salinas said the international community is losing the war on drugs. He called for more cooperation among nations in tough action against traffickers, including steps to end the international laundering of drug profits.

Salinas, urging fairer treatment of illegal Mexican workers in the United States, said the migration is a "harsh reality" caused by Mexico's depressed economy and shortage of jobs.

He said that the growth of Mexico's economy, which will require help from the United States in the form of investment and a wider market for Mexican exports, would help reduce the need for Mexicans to seek jobs elsewhere.

Referring to the 1986 law designed to stem the flow of illegal aliens, Salinas said the law's provision granting legal residence to 3 million aliens who had resided permanently in the United States since 1982 or worked in agriculture "has not altered the basic dynamics of the problem."

Salinas, a Harvard-educated economist, said that for the near future, "increased demand for labor in the United States may be expected in employment sectors and regions that have traditionally hired and will continue hiring Mexican workers."

B1-B bomber makes emergency landing

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — A B-1B bomber crew, unable to get the aircraft's nose gear unstuck, guided the plane halfway across the continent to a white-knuckle landing in the desert, where it billowed dust as it ground to a halt.

The $280 million bomber, which wasn't carrying its nuclear weapons, sutained some damage but did not catch fire Wednesday as it scraped its nose for more than 30 seconds along the 12-mile-long dry lake bed in the Mojave Desert.

The four-man crew escaped injury, said Tech. Sgt. Donn Clarius, an Edwards spokesman.

"The SAC crew exhibited tremendous skill and first-class airmanship in bringing to a successful conclusion what was, at best, a difficult situation," said a statement from Strategic Air Command headquarters at Offutt Air Force Base, Neb.

The flight began nearly 12 hours earlier as a training mission over Texas but quickly turned tense when the nose landing gear jammed.

After attempting to jar the nose wheel lose with a touch-and-go landing on the main gear at Dyess Air Force Base near Abilene, the crew refueled in the air and flew to 1,200 miles to California.

The Air Force opted to land at Edwards, 60 miles north of Los Angeles, because of the forgiving nature of the clay surface and the wide open spaces on the desert base, which is used for space shuttle landings and is often a haven for troubled aircraft.

NOBEL

"If I was a Chinese student, I would be fully in support of the decision," he said, referring to the students who led the pro-democracy movement that was violently suppressed in Beijing in June 3-4.

The Chinese Embassy in Oslo denounced the Nobel committee decision as interfering in China's internal affairs and called the Dalai Lama a political figure intent on "splitting the fatherland."

Embassy official Wang Guisheng was quoted by the national NTB news agency as saying, "This has hurt the Chinese people's feelings," and he reiterated the claim that Tibet was always an integral part of China.

Tibet was independent from 1911 until the new Communist authorities in China regained control in 1950.

The Dalai Lama, born Tenzin Gyatso in 1935, had been nominated for the coveted Nobel Peace Prize for at least the last three years, NTB reported.

CHAMBER

Said Davidson: "Midland is at the crossroads of its future, and Forward Midland can make a difference." He called on the business community to stand squarely behind the project, saying their involvement was critical to its success.

Davidson also announced the Volunteer of the Year award which went to Douglas B. Henson, president of SBC Corp. Henson served as chamber treasurer last year and will serve in the same post next year. He has been active in all phases of the Chamber of Commerce.

Calling him a friend, confidant, recognized community leader, and Midland cheerleader, Davidson said Henson, 42, more than met all the criteria for Volunteer of the Year.

A graduate of Midland High and Texas Tech university with a degree in industrial management, Henson has served on a number of community organizations including: Forward Midland, SSC Steering Committee, the Midland Housing Authority and Midland Housing Finance Corp.

When the chamber staff lost its president and director of economic development earlier in the year, both Davidson and Henson stepped in to help fill the gap.

"Midland has no way to go but up," said Henson in accepting the award.

The Small Business of the Year award was presented to Marcey Pittman, owner of Alpha & Omega, a business service firm.

Starting as a typist in her home in 1985 Pittman now operates two locations in Midland offering full secretarial services, answering services and professional executive offices. Future plans include bookkeeping services and desktop publishing.

In presenting the award to Pittman, Chamber Director Doug Smith, said she had utilized extraordinary business skills to build the business, which now includes 10 employees serving 37 business clients in 15,000 square feet of leased office space.

"Two executive suite projects she launched in 1988 are now 94 percent occupied, an accomplishment in a soft economy," said Smith, who added that Pittman had been able to increase business 20 fold by "marketing the product, adherence to accurately forecasted business plans, debt control and prudent management of cash flow."

Smith also noted that Pittman had successfully utilized the Job Training Partnership Act to hire and train 10 employees. Savings from the program allowed her to acquire the latest in word processing equipment.

"As a single mother of three children, Marcey Pittman exemplifies the Midland work ethics of determination, honesty and risk-taking," said Smith.

In assuming the position of chairman, Joanne Langston said the Midland Chamber of Commerce was only a vehicle for making things happen. "You the members are the drivers," she noted. She described the Midland Chamber as a vehicle with all the parts in place, ready to form government partnerships, build coalitions, educate and recruit tourism, and new business to make things happen.

Langston announced the lineup of new chamber officers and directors which include:

Joanne Langston, chairman; Gregg Owens, chairman- elect; Steve Davidson, past chairman; Doug Henson, treasurer; Nadine Craddick, vice president, community development; Sam Flores, vice president, economic development; Jeff Higgins, vice president, membership; Mike Strotheide, interim manager; and Ed Runyan, Bill Griffin, Clarence Scharbauer III, and Jack Sherman, members at large.

Directors for 1990 include: Malcomb Outlaw, Matt Murphy, Grant Billingsley, David Diaz, Jerry Stone, Bill Griffin, Jane Wolf and Van Folger.

"Thou hast tried me, and shalt find nothing."

Prosecutors contend Bakker raised $158 million by selling "lifetime partnerships" at his Heritage USA retreat near Fort Mill, S.C., but used the money for projects other than the lodging he promised. Partners typically paid $1,000 for the promise of three nights' lodging annually at the theme park. Bakker resigned from the ministry in 1987 in a sex and money scandal.

"You can't lie to people to send you money — it's that simple," prosecutor Deborah Smith told the jury.

"You can't tell half-truths. If you do it, if you use the postal service and the public airwaves you will find yourself in federal court answering charges of mail and wire fraud. That's why we're here today, because that's just what Mr. Bakker did."

Bakker's attorneys said he was a victim of circumstances and a minister worried about the survival of his church.

"I think 95 percent of the evidence in this case by the government is circumstantial," defense attorney George Davis said.

"The government must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant had specific intent to commit fraud," Davis said. "He was conducting a ministry. He was doing what he thought was vital to the survival of his ministry."

SCHOOLS

Ector County Judge Jan Fisher, in accepting the new facilities for the community, noted that some people think oil and gas is this area's most valuable resource.

Through the construction of the new schools, Fisher said, "our citizens have demonstrated their commitment to the belief that our children are our most valuable resource."

Attempts by the Reporter-Telegram to reach Ms. Routzahn by telephone at the hospital were unsuccessful.

Permian General's nurses were demanding more money, better hours, more colleagues, cost-of-living raises and other concessions.

The nursing staff met Tuesday with county commissioners and then with hospital board chairman Steve Smith to review their demands.

Another meeting was scheduled for Wednesday, but it was called off when the nurses returned to work, Brown said.

Brown said he is in the process of developing an employee benefit and compensation package that includes higher wages.

Bentsen has taken no action on the catastrophic issue for over a week, when Senate Republicans refused to support a plan that had been worked out in the Finance Committee by members of both parties to reduce the surtax and benefits, while keeping the basic framework.

Bentsen considers it up to the Republicans to indicate acceptance of the proposal or to offer an alternative, his aide said. "As far as he's concerned, it's up to them to wrestle with."

Fort Sill soldier sent to hospital in Texas

FORT SILL, Okla. (AP) — Military officials say a soldier critically injured last week in an artillery accident has been transferred to Brooke Army Medical Hospital at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio.

Staff Sgt. Scottie Harris, 28, of Rockhart, Ga., was sent to the Fort Sam Houston hospital about 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, officials said.

Harris remains in critical condition.

A Fort Sill hospital spokesman said "necessary medical and surgical care was not available here, but that fact does not reflect a worsening of his condition."

Earlier this week, Pvt. 1 Troy E. Emmons, 19 of Hubbard, Neb., was also moved to the hospital in San Antonio, Texas.

Three soldiers were killed and 24 were wounded when a howitzer shell strayed beyond its target and exploded amid a group of 80 trainees last Wednesday.

Highway awards presented

STONEWALL (AP) — Tommie Jones, state highway maintenance supervisor for Cass County, in his 20th year with the highway department, has received the 20th annual Lady Bird Johnson Highway Beautification Award.

The former first lady presented Jones with a plaque and $1,000 check Wednesday.

The runner-up for the award, which is presented annually to the supervisor judged to have the best beautification program in the state, was James Hair of Brownwood, who received $500.

Four other finalists were honored — Emiliano Gonzales, roadway maintenance supervisor for Runnels County; Jerry Lancaster, foreman of the Montague County maintenance section; Russell Luther, foreman of the Amarillo expressway maintenance section; and Glenwood Vierus, roadway maintenance supervisor for Washington County.

A special citation was given to Troy King of Pecos County for roadside planting, and employees of the Amarillo highway district received Mrs. Johnson's Scenic Preservation Award.

James Norman, supervisor of the North Tyler maintenance section, was honored for encouraging fall color.

AIDS group plans protest

AUSTIN (AP) — An AIDS activist group, accusing the Texas Medical Association of putting political interests ahead of public health, said it plans a demonstration at TMA headquarters Friday.

The protest is one of 20 planned at various locations around the country, said the Austin AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power, or "ACT UP."

ACT UP said Wednesday the medical association, in the 1989 regular session, helped weaken AIDS legislation.

"Your failure to join with those advocating effective legislation and adequate funding of programs for the prevention and treatment of HIV disease greatly weakened the voices of sanity in public health policy," the coalition said in a letter to TMA.

ACT UP demanded that the association re-direct money it now spends on political contributions to support health care for people with AIDS and the virus that leads to it.

"The legislation the Texas Medical Association helped to bring about earlier this year, and its indifference to the fatally shortsighted cut in HIV-related appropriations, will surely contribute to the rising toll of preventable suffering and death," ACT UP wrote.

Boat explosion investigation begins

SABINE PASS (AP) — A National Transportation Safety Board team today began its investigation of a boat accident this week that left three people dead, three hurt and eight others missing when the fishing vessel struck a submerged gas pipeline and exploded in the Gulf of Mexico.

The team today was huddling with Coast Guard officials at the Marine Safety Office in nearby Port Arthur and likely would head out later to the burned wreckage of the "North Umberland," Coast Guard spokesman Mark Simpson said.

Members of the U.S. Coast Guard's Atlantic Area Strike Team boarded the vessel Wednesday evening to determine if hazardous anhydrous ammonia was in the air. The anhydrous ammonia was used on the fishing vessel as a refrigeratant.

"Nothing was discovered," Petty Officer Ed Burchard said.

Officials said everything that could burn was burned and reduced to ashes in the intense blaze and suggested that the missing crewmen either were incinerated or blown off the boat.

"The situation is unchanged," Simpson said today. "We're still enforcing a safety zone of about a half-mile around the ship. Nobody is allowed inside. We're worried about losing evidence before the NTSB people get there."

Coast Guard officials suspended their search in the area for the missing people Wednesday afternoon.

Some charts of the area list all submerged pipelines while others are not as detailed, officials said. The boat, however, was not in a restricted area, Lt. Scott LaRochelle said.

Officials believe nets being trawled by the boat snagged the submerged pipeline and ruptured it, triggering the explosion.

The break in the line is only about 15 feet from where the burned hulk of the vessel is aground.

A spokeswoman with Natural Gas Pipeline of America Inc. said company representatives plan to meet with investigating agencies to determine the exact cause of the explosion.

"We've got our team of investigators working with the Coast Guard, the National Transportation Safety Board and local officials. We're very concerned about this," said Patricia Wees, director of corporate communications at the company's headquarters in Lombard, Ill.

Three people were killed and three others injured following the Tuesday evening accident. The body of the vessel's cook, Charles Ware, 54, of Lake Charles, La., was discovered before noon Wednesday, LaRochelle said. Names of the two discovered dead Tuesday have not been identified, but were listed as missing.

Those missing include Robert Hill, Jr., 49, mate; Francis Arthur, 48, chief; Charles Jackson, 53, second mate, John Jackson, 24, crew, all of Cameron, La.; and Otis Benjamin, 37, crew, of Port Arthur.

Also missing were crew members, John Bartie, 28; Bennie Crawford, 27; James Willis, 60; Timmy Thomas, 20, and Tony McDougle, 40, all from Lake Charles, La., LaRochelle said.

Injured were Francis M. Gough, 53, the boat's pilot, and Darreyl Wayne Gough, 31, the boat's captain, both of Sulphur, La., and crew member Arthur Jackson, 28, of Cameron.

Officials at Baptist Hospital in Beaumont, said Francis Gough was in critical condition with burns covering 68 percent of his body; Darreyl Gough was in good condition, suffering from shock, and Jackson was in good condition with second degree burns to his face and arms.

A small fire continued to burn 18 hours after the 160-foot boat apparently hit the 16-inch natural gas pipeline, triggering a spectacular blaze that sent flames hundreds of feet into the air, LaRochelle said.

The main blaze burned itself out Wednesday morning, after the pipeline was turned off.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department personnel Wednesday were inspecting beaches because prevailing currents would send survivors or victims toward the shore.

The Cameron-based "pogy boat" caught pogy or menhaden, inedible fish used for poultry feed and fertilizer, said Barney White, spokesman for Houston-based Zapada Heynie Corp., which owns the boat.

Rescuers say their actions not heroic

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Employees of a local helicopter shuttle service said their actions after a fishing vessel exploded, which included pulling a severely burned man from the Gulf of Mexico, should not be considered heroic.

"It was chaos. We were the first on the scene, and there was no time to waste or think about our own safety," said Dennis Brooks, Evergreen Helicopters Inc. maintenance fields supervisor.

Shuttle workers were scattered throughout their compound in Sabine Pass, a coastal section of Port Arthur, Tuesday evening when employees saw flames 300 feet high after the 160-foot "North Umberland" struck a natural gas pipeline and exploded. Three people were killed, three injured and eight remain missing.

The crew scrambled for their gear, boarded a helicopter and flew toward the flames, "thinking it was a ruptured pipeline, but not a boat," said Vince Chaney.

A man seen barely afloat in the water, who later told Brooks he was the ship's pilot, was clearly within minutes of losing his fight for his life when the Evergreen craft approached, prompting Brooks and the others to act.

"I told Allen (Willet, the helicopter pilot) to get me down there, we couldn't lose no time," Brooks said.

"We saw that there were three survivors in the water, and I looked at the one I thought was in the most trouble, he didn't have a life jacket," Brooks said of the ship's pilot.

Brooks, despite having employee Greg Perkins of San Antonio tugging on his arm to return to the helicopter's cabin, climbed onto the "skid" of the craft to grab an inflatable raft.

"Allen said to grab a jacket, so I just threw it around my neck — didn't inflate it. If those things are inflated they slow you down when you swim," Brooks said.

Brooks jumped from the skid "because the Coast Guard wasn't there yet and that guy was in trouble."

"If that guy would have gone down, I couldn't have lived with that on my conscience for the rest of my life. I had to go for it," he said.

Brooks was quick to spread attention to the efforts of others involved in the rescue, including the Coast Guard and workers with PHI Helicopter Service of Sabine Pass.

"None of this (rescue) would have been pulled off if it hadn't been for the Coast Guard," Brooks said. "The Coast Guard are unsung heroes — unsung and unfunded."

"There's no way I can take all the credit. I'm glad I accomplished what I did, but without all the help from the Coast Guard and PHI (Helicopter Service) that guy would have died."

Evergreen mechanics Chaney and Jason Brock located the raft, which was then tossed 20 feet down to the churning water and began drifting away from the helicopter.

The wind from the helicopter blades pushed the large inflatable raft away from the craft, and away from the struggling and injured man, who remained about 30 to 40 yards from Brooks.

Teen's mother testifies in sexual assault trial

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Chad Cadenhead had been taking an anti-depressant drug that produces impotence as a side effect at the time four of his friends claim they saw him having sex with a former Clark High School teacher, the boy's mother has testified.

The testimony came with the jury out of the courtroom in the trial of former teacher Lou Ann Hogan, 26, who is accused of sexual assault on a child based on allegations that she had sex with Cadenhead, who was then 16, on Dec. 5 and Dec. 11, 1987, only weeks before the youth took his own life with a shotgun blast.

With the jury outside the crowded courtroom, Kay Cadenhead testified that her son had been committed to Afton Oaks Hospital, a psychiatric hospital for a month and was released the afternoon of Dec. 4, 1987.

Mrs. Cadenhead testified that her son had been taking the medication Tofranil, an anti-depressant. The Physician's Desk Reference lists impotence as a side effect of Tofranil.

District Judge Pat Priest allowed Mrs. Cadenhead to tell the jury about her son's hospitalization, but jurors were not immediately told about the drug.

Mrs. Cadenhead was the first witness called by the defense although she had earlier testified for prosecutors.

Michael Hogan, the defendant's husband, provided his wife with alibi testimony, saying on the nights when four of Cadenhead's friends claimed they watched Mrs. Hogan and Cadenhead having sex, his wife was with him at home.

Hogan also told jurors that he trusts his wife of four years and said his marriage is "the best in the world."

Hogan testified that he knew his wife was at home on both nights because on one occasion he had to wake up early the next morning to go to Austin for National Guard duty. On the other occasion, he said, he and a friend were studying for college tests and he knew his wife was at home that night.

"I am sure we were home together" on both occasions, Hogan testified.

Kevin Sterneckert, Hogan's college classmate, also testified that Mrs. Hogan was at home on the night they studied for computer and calculus finals into the early morning hours.

Hogan said he knew his wife had counseled Cadenhead at times, but said he trusted his wife.

DPS says cocaine seizure second largest in U.S.

HARLINGEN (AP) — Narcotics agents today were searching for the owner of a house "literally stuffed" with nine tons of cocaine in what is being called the second largest seizure of the drug in U.S. history.

Shocked Texas Department of Public Safety investigators came across the cocaine at a rural house five miles north of the Mexican border, where they had expected to find less than a ton, said Lt. Waylon Bullard, chief narcotics agent with the DPS' Harlingen office.

"This according to our headquarters in Austin is the largest cocaine seizure in Texas, and probably the second largest in the U.S.," Bullard said.

Three men were arrested Wednesday afternoon at the house just west of Harlingen, and were to be arraigned today, officials said.

"These are basically just the people that are hired to repackage and transport," Bullard said.

The house's owner and two others were being sought this morning, Bullard said. The owner purchased the house nearly surrounded by citrus groves on Farm Road 800 about three weeks ago for $55,000, he said, but probably was renting it previously.

He would not disclose the owner's name.

Wednesday's arrests and seizure follow closely on the heels of the world's largest seizure — 20 tons of cocaine — in suburban Los Angeles last week.

Bullard said the two operations don't appear to be connected.

DPS spokesman Mike Cox said the three-bedroom frame home near Harlingen "was just literally stuffed" with duffel bags full of cocaine. The illegal drug was wrapped in plastic and newspapers from Bogota, Colombia, he said.

The 17,950 pounds will be transported to Austin today by DPS officers, said DPS Lt. Tony Garcia.

Bullard said the nine tons seized Wednesday probably will not affect the U.S. supply of cocaine much, but he added, "we sure hurt somebody's pocketbook."

He said agents found two copies of a list of seven intended recipients of the cocaine, and that the house is believed to be a staging area for repackaging of cocaine after its arrival in the United States. Some of the cocaine-stuffed duffel bags at the house were still wet, he said, indicating it probably had crossed the Rio Grande shortly before the agents found it.

"There's so many crossing points around here, you wouldn't believe it," Garcia said.

DPS officials are estimating the cocaine's value at $1 billion.

The three arrested were identified as Hermenegildo Rivas Sosa, 51, of Matamoros, Mexico; Alfonso Tristan Gonzalez, 36, of San Antonio; and Guadencio Garcia, 38, of McAllen. All three hold resident alien status in the United States, Cox said.

"It looks like a real intelligence bonanza from other evidence found at the scene," Cox said.

Wednesday afternoon's raid was the result of tip from an informant, but Bullard said officers had expected only to find about 1,500 pounds of cocaine.

Troopers were driving by to get a physical description of the house for a search warrant when they saw three men run inside, Garcia said. The troopers then secured the house while awaiting the search warrant, he added.

Behind the house, investigators found an underground steel vault, covered by a chicken coop. Investigators said it was empty.

Cocaine in one-kilo packages was being packed into 30-inch-tall cardboard containers, Garcia said.

Garcia said the suspects apparently were preparing the drug for a shipment when the raid was conducted.

The packages were marked with names such as "BABY" and "FORD," which Bullard said probably signify the intended recipients of the drug.

Rebels refused to hand over Noriega to U.S., Cheney says

NATION

■ Related story — 4D

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said today that rebels refused in a "face-to-face contact" with a U.S. military officer to turn over Panama's leader, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, during Tueday's failed coup.

Defending the Bush administration against charges that it acted timidly in not coming to the aid of the rebels, Cheney said in an interview with CBS that the coup leaders had no intention of forcing Noriega from the country. "This was not a situation where we had a pro-democracy movement trying to topple a dictator and restore democracy to Panama," he said.

President Bush has come under sharp criticism from some Republicans as well as Democrats in Congress for not intervening on the side of the coup leaders. The critics claim he missed a precious opportunity to oust Noriega, who faces drug charges in this country.

"They wanted certainty," Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., said of the administration. "You do not get an engraved invitation to a coup. They just lacked boldness."

But Cheney, a former House member, brushed aside congressional criticism as "Monday morning advice."

"The same people who'd be criticizing us if we had intervened are now criticizing us for not intervening," he said.

Cheney said that at one point during the uprising "shortly before the coup collapsed, contact between one of our military officers and two junior officers that were involved in the coup" occurred at Fort Clayton, a U.S. facility in Panama.

Asked about the meeting, Cheney said, "It was a face-to-face contact. ... And that was where they made it clear to us that they would not turn Noriega over to us." He did not name the individuals involved.

Cheney's comments were part of a campaign by the administration to defend Bush's actions on Tuesday. The defense secretary was on two morning talk shows after granting an interview to CBS for broadcast on Wednesday night and talking with reporters on Capitol Hill on Wednesday.

"This is an issue where it's open to disagreement but I think on the whole we found the support to be very strong and very broad, actually," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said today. "To have a handful of congressmen suggest it was the wrong course is a pretty minor response."

At the same time, the administration was moving to underscore its continued opposition to Noriega.

Vice President Dan Quayle met today with Guillermo Ford, an opposition vice presidential candidate in last May's Panamanian election.

Ford did not answer directly when asked if the United States should have intervened in behalf of the insurgents. Instead he called on the Panamanian military to try again.

"We were surprised by the coup attempt, but we feel that the defense forces should put their act together and get rid of Mr. Noriega," Ford said.

Speaking on "CBS This Morning," Cheney also said the United States has given sanctuary to the family of one of the coup leaders.

A communique issued in Panama by Noriega's government said five coup leaders had taken refuge at a U.S. Army base near Panama City, but the administration has not confirmed that account.

Alluding to a charge made against Bush during the 1988 presidential campaign, Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., added: "There's a resurgence of the wimp factor."

A large cross-section of lawmakers, both Democrats and Republicans, voiced bitter disappointment at the U.S. failure to send in military force to support Tuesday's short-lived uprising against Noriega by 200 to 300 dissident Panamanian Defense Forces troops.

Not all lawmakers were critical, however.

"I'm convinced we did the right thing," said Rep. Earl Hutto, D-Fla., a member of the House Armed Services Committee. "It would have been foolish for us to take military action with loss of lives" in the face of "an obvious lack of intelligence."

In public statements and briefings on Capitol Hill, Bush's men portrayed their caution as the only responsible approach to a situation fraught with confusion and conflicting information.

"The president made the right decision," said Cheney.

Cheney said the initial report that the coup was to be led by Maj. Moises Giroldi Vega, a close Noriega confidant, raised doubts. "This might well have been a setup," he said.

Senate expected to OK ban on flag burning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate appears headed for approval of a ban on flag burning, but Republicans and Democrats are still waging a political dogfight over whether to change the law or amend the Constitution.

"I have come to the conclusion, regretfully, that a statute rather than a constitutional amendment will simply not do the trick," Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Wednesday as the Senate debated the bill.

Sponsors put the brakes on the bill Wednesday night after Republicans offered a pair of amendments that Democrats claimed would make the bill highly vulnerable to a court challenge.

But the Senate planned to resume action today.

The bill calls for up to a $1,000 fine and a year in jail for anyone burns an American flag or defaces it in any of several other ways.

It represents a congressional response to the uproar over a Supreme Court decision in June that overturned the 1984 conviction of Texas flag-burner Gregory Lee Johnson on grounds that his right to freedom of speech had been infringed.

Federal law already bans flag burning, but senators say the law contains constitutional pitfalls similar to the ones in the Texas statute.

The Senate appears firmly in favor of enacting a new and more workable ban. The fight on the floor is over the constitutional amendment proposed by President Bush in the aftermath of the court ruling.

Senate consideration of such an amendment is scheduled for mid-October.

Conservative Republicans urge the amendment on grounds that it would settle the issue once and for all — it could not be challenged in court.

Many Democrats retort that amending the Constitution should be only a last resort and that one act of burning is no cause to limit the freedom of speech.

"Of all things, today in the United States of America we need to encourage our people to be less afraid, speaking what they believe, letting their hearts and minds give rise to what they truly think ought to be done," said Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb.

Proponents of a constitutional amendment, however, scoff at the notion that any statute can be drawn that would survive a court challenge on freedom of speech grounds.

"The statutory approach in my opinion is a futile and ineffective gesture which will not pass the constitutional test at all," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah.

Some senators say they detect a distinct cooling of the issue in the months since the Supreme Court ruling.

"There's no grass roots firestorm for jailing flag burners nor for amending the Constitution," said Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio.

But Metzenbaum said enough passion remains that lawmakers are wary of opposing a ban.

"I think that some of us are afraid to stand up for our principles ... afraid the people won't understand that," he said. "I think we're afraid that our opponents in the next election will be even less understanding."

He and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said they would oppose both the bill and the constitutional amendment, saying either would take away rights.

"Patriotism is not the issue," Kennedy said. "Free speech is."

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., was among lawmakers who planned to vote for both the bill and the amendment.

Samuel Bowring, geologist at Washington University in St. Louis, points to what he believes is one of the earth's oldest rocks.

Scientist reports find of Earth's oldest rocks

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A summer of ordinary geologic investigation in a remote area of Canada has reaped an unexpected scientific bonanza: nearly 4 billion-year-old rocks, the oldest known on Earth.

"It was pure scientific luck," said Samuel Bowring, a geologist at Washington University who has been conducting research in Canada's Northwest Territories since 1979. "I actually had predicted these rocks were going to be very young. Maybe 2 billion years old."

"If I had known, of course, that I was looking at the world's oldest rocks, I would have done this sooner."

He said studying the chemistry of the old rocks will give researchers insight into the early history of Earth and its fellow planets.

The rocks are only about 600 million years younger than the Earth itself, which scientists believe was formed about 4.6 billion years ago.

For a little more perspective: scientists say the first dinosaurs began to roam the Earth about 200 million years ago, and the first human ancestors who used tools didn't show up until about 2 million years ago.

Few rocks of this age are left, since the Earth's surface has been churned and recycled by meteorites, volcanoes, erosion and the slow but constant movement of the continents. The oldest rocks left in Missouri, for example, are roughly 1.48 billion years old, Bowring said. The Canadian rocks already were about 2.5 billion years old when the Ozark Mountains were being formed.

The oldest known rocks before Bowring's discovery were about 3.8 billion years old, found in the Isukasia region of Greenland in the 1970s, he said.

"With this new discovery, we are a giant step further in our search for knowledge of what happened in the Earth's first 800 million years," Bowring said. "The question now is whether rocks from 4.6 to 3.8 billion years were mostly destroyed by meteorite impact or whether they never formed in great volume in the first place."

Bowring, assistant professor of earth and planetary sciences at Washington University, collected the granitic rocks in 1986 from a remote, unpopulated area north of Yellowknife and Great Slave Lake, where he has been conducting a mapping project initiated by the Geological Survey of Canada.

"We didn't go looking for the oldest rocks," he said. "We were just rewarded for doing basic, fundamental science."

He extracted from the rocks tiny crystals of the mineral zircon, and used an instrument called a mass spectrometer to measure how much of various isotopes of uranium and lead they contained. Knowing how fast uranium decays and determining how much uranium had decayed, leaving lead, allowed him to calculate that the rocks were older than 3.84 billion years.

Coast Guard finds six tons of cocaine

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — An unusual mix of cargo and a captain's uncertainty about his destination led to the discovery of nearly six tons of cocaine aboard an offshore supply vessel in the Gulf of Mexico, the Coast Guard said.

"It's by far the biggest single seizure on the high seas," Rear Adm. William F. Merlin, commander of the Coast Guard's 8th District, said Wednesday.

The cocaine's street value was estimated at $523 million by a Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman in New Orleans.

The Zedom Sea, a 185-foot vessel flying the Panamanian flag, was to arrive with a Coast Guard escort later today in New Orleans, Merlin said.

The 11,500 pounds of cocaine found aboard the vessel will be given to U.S. Customs agents and nine people who were arrested will be turned over today to the DEA for a more thorough search, he said.

The vessel was seized Monday when the crew of the cutter Cushing boarded it in the Gulf of Mexico, off the Yucatan Peninsula, Merlin said.

He said a boarding crew became suspicious because the vessel was listed as hauling cement and gelatin, described as an unusual mix of cargo. In addition, the ship's registry gave its destination as Vera Cruz but the captain said it was going to Tampico, Merlin said.

"Where the ship was really bound for is a matter of speculation, but we believe that it was bound for the United States. We're the biggest consumer of cocaine, unfortunately," Merlin said.

Democratic option bears hard lesson

While literally thousands of East Germans crowded the West German Embassy in Prague, Czechoslovakia in hopes of making their way to freedom, in Moscow lawmakers earlier this week were grappling with a proposal by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to ban strikes for 15 months.

The communist governments of the world are in disarray, while their masses — taunted by the bittersweet dream of freedom and a world void of repression — strain against the drooping chains of totalitarianism.

Events in Czechoslovakia, Russia and the Baltic states in recent days have illustrated that the revolution now taking place there will not proceed along orderly lines, as Gorbachev and other leaders presumably had hoped, but will explode with the pent-up fury of decades of repressive rule.

At an earlier point, there was room to ponder whether Gorbachev and the other new officials in Russia, Czechoslovakia and the other nations could hold the revolution together. Now that question seems irrelevant; the structure that formed the "dam" which held the masses at bay has deteriorated too much and now Gorbachev and the others are caught up in the rush to destroy the old order which must be effected before construction of the new can begin.

Gorbachev, in calling for a ban on strikes in the Soviet Union, said the measure is necessary "to protect democratization from anarchy and irresponsible management." Yet in the spirit of freedom necessary for such an elemental change as that now taking place in the Soviet Union the possibility of anarchy and irresponsible management is always lurking beneath the surface.

The difficult lessons of democratic government are not always palatable, particularly not to a communist. For every plus, there is a minus and wherever there is a good point, a bad one also exists — waiting for selection by the masses. The totalitarian's first reaction is to reach for a gun to control the masses. In a democratic form of government, one must recognize that the masses are in charge and order will come.

Although the democratic reforms envisioned by Gorbachev are not like those in this country, advice from an authority figure should be meaningful to him.

One such authority was Benjamin Franklin, who said it this way: "There is no form of Government but what may be a blessing to the people if well administered ... this (government) is likely to be well administered for a course of years, and can only end in Despotism as other forms have done before it, when the people shall become so corrupted as to need despotic Government, being incapable of the other."

Former CIA operative turns whistleblower

WASHINGTON — Congressional efforts to install an independent watchdog inside the Central Intelligence Agency won't help BruceHemmings.

Jack Anderson

The 17-year agency veteran claims he was driven out of government service last year after refusing to help cover up CIA knowledge of Iranian arms sales. Hemmings has since cooperated with a Senate probe, which this summer confirmed that the CIA and FBI knew more than they admit about the secret White House operation to supply missiles to Iran.

Hemmings has shed his spy cloak and is now a self-styled whistleblower, vowing to bring rogue spooks to justice.

"In the area of intelligence, there is no mechanism available to an employee or ex-employee to address ... allegations of impropriety," Hemmings told our associate Stewart Harris.

Hemmings has added his voice to those advocating a bill proposed by Sen. Arlen Spector, R-Pa. Spector's bill would establish a presidentially appointed inspector general armed with statutory independence to expose fraud, waste and abuse at the CIA. Independent inspectors general, similar to the one proposed by Spector, are already keeping 59 other major government agencies honest.

The CIA has had a relatively toothless inspector general since 1952. He is appointed by the CIA director and operates under his direction, an arrangement not conducive to independence. Hemmings presented his concerns about the covert operation to CIA inspector general William Donnelly before going to Capitol Hill.

Hemmings has heard little since being interviewed near his Vermont home by one of Donnelly's agents. The CIA insists the investigation is still open. But Donnelly implied that the case was closed in a June 9 letter to Hemmings that said the inspector general had given the complaints a "full and thorough review."

Those words may return to haunt Donnelly and the CIA. The Senate's Governmental Affairs Committee took Hemmings' information so seriously that they commissioned a probe by the Office of Special Investigations at the General Accounting Office. The inquiry — later inherited by the Senate Intelligence Committee — confirmed that FBI and CIA officials traded information about an American arms shipment to Iran in late September 1985. That's at least one month before the CIA officially claims to have become involved.

The probe also produced evidence of a cover-up. Hemmings was assigned to the Iran desk in late 1985. He was working with the FBI, which had developed an intelligence network deep within Iran. The FBI handed the item about the arms shipment to Hemmings at the CIA for analysis.

Hemmings was instructed to inform the FBI not to disseminate the information further because it involved a sensitive "White House operation."

The FBI complied — overlooking the fact that the shipment violated arms export law and stated public policy.

In 1987, Hemmings says he was again asked to cover up the incident.

Then FBI director William Webster was seeking Senate confirmation to be director of the CIA. During a closed-door session, senators grilled Webster on the FBI's knowledge of the arms sale.

Hemmings was ordered by the CIA to prepare a memo about the incident. When his memo noted that he was advised to tell the FBI not to spread the word because it was a "White House operation," his superiors exploded. A censored version was sent to Congress, Hemmings says.

Webster's confirmation hearings started one month before the Iran contra hearings opened in May. The last thing the CIA wanted was to disclose its earlier-than-admitted knowledge about the arms shipments.

Hemmings, caught in a cross-fire, had seen too much and was hounded by the CIA until eventually being warehoused in a job without responsibilities. He finally resigned in 1987.

MINI-EDITORIAL — What has our national morality come to when arguments rage among politicians over whether it is more heinous to be a homosexual or a pedophile

Sexual perversions have become a partisan issue, or so it appears. On the Republican side, there is Rep. Buz Lukens of Ohio, who was recently convicted of having sex with an underage female. On the Democratic side, Rep. Barney Frank, of Massachusetts is being investigated by the House Ethics Committee because of a relationship with a gay male prostitute. Various news programs and talk show have been featuring debates between Republicans and Democrats over which man "sinned" the most. In an age of runaway national debt, abject poverty, and an environmental crisis, we suggest that politicians who play preachers are the real sinners.

Truth fights AIDS

A federal researcher is on your doorstep asking embarrassing questions. Do you engage in anal sex? Are you bisexual? An adulterer? Do you use illegal drugs? Snort them? Inject them? About 40 questions in all. At the end of the interview, there's a final request — for your blood.

Do you answer the questions? Reveal the most intimate details of your life? Give a blood sample for government testing? If you care about your health and that of the nation, the answer is yes.

That tough decision is being faced this week by 3,400 Dallas households. We hope the residents have the courage to be candid. Either way, their actions are sure to have a dramatic effect on AIDS policy in America.

Dallas is the test site for the "National Household Seroprevalence Survey," designed to determine the extent of exposure to the AIDS virus. If the survey succeeds in Dallas, it will go nationwide, into the homes of 50,000 Americans.

Gathering the data is essential for planning the future of prevention campaigns, epidemiological research and health-care delivery. Without it, AIDS policy could easily detour into counterproductive areas, wasting tax dollars and the commodity we most lack — time.

Currently, AIDS policy — at both local and national levels, is based on data that is sketchy at best. Some experts say 1.5 million Americans carry the AIDS virus. Others insist the number is double that; still others cut the figure in half. The unhealthy truth is that no one really knows. Small wonder that health officials for years have called for a detailed, nationwide study of American sex and drug habits, the activities most likely to transmit the deadly virus.

For the survey to live up to its historic potential, it must produce reliable data. If significant numbers of survey subjects fail to be candid or fail to participate, the data collected will be of little use. Tens of millions of dollars invested in the study — money that could have gone to other anti-AIDS efforts — will be wasted. That must not be allowed to happen.

To promote candor, the government has wisely agreed to strict confidentiality for survey participants. No names or identification will be recorded. Federal officials must stick to that promise. Data cannot be allowed to leak and stigmatize individuals, jeopardizing jobs and health insurance. For its part, the public must be prepared to accept the anonymity and speak candidly about intimacy and drugs.

From that partnership, wiser and better focused policy will evolve as the battle against AIDS is fought with facts, not guesses. Lives saved will far outweigh the embarrassment caused by speaking truthfully.

Americans can learn from catcher's simplicity

TORONTO — Concision and simplicity can be elements of eloquence, as Jamie Quirk showed when he said, "I'm a professional catcher." Those words in context revealed one reason why it is right for grown-ups to play, and care about, baseball games.

George F. Will

With one out in the eighth inning of their 160th game, the Baltimore Orioles were leading the Toronto Blue Jays 1-0 and were five outs from tying them for first place in the American League East. But a Blue Jay runner was on third. The Orioles' pitcher was a rookie who has, as baseball people say, a knee-buckling curve. Quirk called for a curve low and away. It was too much of both. It went in the dirt, bounced to the screen, the runner scored. The Blue Jays won in the eleventh.

The official scorer called it a wild pitch. Quirk called it a passed ball: "A major-league catcher has to block that ball ... I should have blocked it. ... I'm a professional catcher." Maybe he should have, maybe not. Two things are certain. One is that America would be immeasurably improved if more Americans — teachers, workers, journalists, everyone — had Quirk's exacting standards of craftsmanship and accountability. The other is that Quirk, who will be 35 this month, did a manly thing in trying to block blame from reaching a 22-year-old pitcher.

In the hours before D-Day, Gen. Eisenhower drafted a statement to be issued if the invasion failed. First he wrote: "Our landings in the Cherbourg-Havre area have failed to gain a satisfactory foothold and the troops have been withdrawn." But then he struck the last six words and wrote instead: "...and I have withdrawn the troops." By replacing the passive tense with the first-person pronoun, Eisenhower stepped up to the pitch: He took responsibility. Quirk was like Ike.

Quirk is, in baseball's evocative language, a journeyman. His travels took him to the Royals, Cardinals, White Sox, Indians, Royals again, Athletics and Yankees before he arrived in Baltimore in mid-season, in time to vivify the axiom that sport reveals as well as builds character. He may not be back in Baltimore next year, but he is a nice emblem of this year.

After beginning the 1988 season with a record 21 consecutive losses and going on to lose 107, the 1989 Orioles relied heavily on hungry rookies and some veterans who had been given up on by other teams. (Quirk had been released nine times.) The 1989 Orioles, who were in the hunt until the last weekend of the season, are called "overachievers." Meaning what? They achieved more than they were "supposed" to? Who are these supposers who lay down the law about other people's limits?

Baseball teams often reflect their cities. The Cubs have the edgy insecurity of The Second City. The Mets and Yankees are pure New York: Chaos leavened by recriminations. Baltimore is just a nice town built around basics — a harbor, some manufacturing. The Orioles rebuilt around baseball's basics, speed and defense.

Frank Robinson — Hall of Famer, 1989 Manager of the Year (surely) and all-star aphorist — says: "Speed comes to the ballpark every day. The three-run home run does not." Speed serves defense, which improves pitching: Pitchers become aggressive, putting the ball in the strike zone, counting on fleet fielders to catch it.

Defense is baseball's underappreciated (by fans, not baseball people) dimension. Players spend more time with leather on their hands than with wood in their hands. The 1989 Orioles were the second team in history to have fewer than 90 errors. Their fielding percentage (.98602) was the best ever.

"When you've been around seven or eight years," said Cal Ripken, the shortstop, during this his eighth season, "you might think twice about making a diving catch on gravel and sliding into the wall. But at this stage of our young players' development, they don't think about it."

Ripken is not exactly Methuselah. He will be 29 on opening day, 1990. This is awfully far away. Today, baseball, the sport that combines, better than any other, team play and personal accountability, is coming to its autumn crescendo, beyond which stretches ...

Jonathan Yardley says there are only two seasons, baseball season and The Void. When, toward the end of this season, George Bush was asked who he thought would win the American League East, he said, "I've given up on the Rangers." Good thinking. The Rangers are in the AL West.

Mr. President, read Baltimore's lips: The 1990 AL East champions open at home, 40 miles from your front porch, April 2, the end of The Void.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Oct. 5, the 278th day of 1989. There are 87 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 5, 1892, the Dalton Gang, notorious for its train robberies, was practically wiped out while attempting to rob a pair of banks in Coffeyville, Kansas.

On this date:

In 1813, the Battle of the Thames was fought in Upper Canada during the War of 1812. The British troops were soundly defeated, and their Indian ally, Tecumseh, was killed.

In 1830, the 21st president of the United States, Chester Arthur, was born in Fairfield, Vt.

In 1921, the World Series was broadcast on radio for the first time, with sports writer Grantland Rice describing the action between the New York Yankees and the New York Giants.

In 1931, Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon completed the first nonstop flight across the Pacific Ocean, arriving in Washington state some 41 hours after leaving Japan.

In 1937, saying "the epidemic of world lawlessness is spreading," President Franklin D. Roosevelt called for a "quarantine" of aggressor nations.

In 1947, in the first televised White House address, President Truman asked Americans to refrain from eating meat on Tuesdays and poultry on Thursdays in order to help stockpile grain for starving people in Europe.

In 1953, Earl Warren was sworn in as the 14th chief justice of the United States.

In 1962, the Beatles' first hit, "Love Me Do," was released in the United Kingdom.

Sex change necessary to promote new book

Every two years I put out a new book and then make a tour of the talk shows plugging it. I can't do it any more because this year it's impossible for someone who is not really weird to get on TV.

Art Buchwald

I discovered this when I walked into Lisa Johnson's office at Putnam's and she said, "I've never heard anything so ridiculous in my life. The people at Phil Donahue's say they are very sorry but they can't put you on the show unless you have a sex-change operation."

I laughed, "That's a good one."

She wasn't laughing. She looked at me and said, "We'll pay for it."

"Now, Lisa, you know that I'm not going to have a sex-change operation just to sell a few books."

"That's your decision, but you'll never make the best-seller lists as a man."

"What about Oprah Winfrey?" I asked.

"We talked to her producer. This month they're only doing people who were physically abused by their pets when they were children."

"I had a dog who once bit me on the ankle. Any bulletins from Geraldo Rivera?"

"On his upcoming show he's featuring inmates who learned to cook key lime pie on Death Row."

"What about next Monday?" I wanted to know.

"He has a week-long series on pimps with their grandmothers."

"Count me out. I'm sorry Morton Downey Jr. is no longer on the air. I would have thrown a chair at him."

Lisa said, "It's an entirely different ball game this year. Everyone is in the ratings' game and you have to be really far out to get on a show. Maury Povich, who used to be a great interviewer, will not have you on his program unless you've had kinky correspondence with a fax machine."

"What about the local shows?"

"They're no better. You're not going to get a plug on TV unless you are on the FBI's 10 most wanted list.

"It doesn't seem fair. Perhaps I could confess to a yearning to jog nude with the bears in Yellowstone National Park."

Lisa sounded harassed. "Our job is not to bemoan the state of affairs of talk TV, but to do something about it. We have to fulfill their production needs."

"I can't become a werewolf," I said.

"Maybe not," Lisa agreed, "but I had a tip that Joan Rivers is doing vampires who use steroids."

"You mean bloodsuckers in sports?"

"That's what I heard."

By this time Lisa was in tears. "How can I possibly get you on TV if your father wasn't even an Estonian war criminal?" she asked.

I tried to reassure her. "The sex change sounds the easiest, but I won't have it unless they promise to give me the full hour on Donahue."

"He'll only take you with Barbara Walters."

"Is she going to have a sex-change operation, too?"

"She has to if she's got a book coming out."

NATION IN BRIEF

Administration plans more aid to Poland

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration, citing "dramatic changes in Poland," says it's ready to cut a deal with Congress over the size of a U.S. aid package for the new Solidarity-led government.

"The numbers are all negotiable," presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Wednesday after announcing a White House plan to give Poland an additional $200 million to help restructure its ailing economy.

The White House package — in addition to $219 million in aid previously announced by President Bush — came a day after Democratic congressional leaders proposed a three-year $3.7 billion package of loans, grants and other incentives.

"We may have a debate over the amounts, but essentially, we all want to achieve the same purpose. We're willing to negotiate with Congress on the amounts and the nature of the package," Fitzwater said.

"The dramatic changes in Poland over the past two months have lent new urgency to our efforts."

The White House also announced that Bush had invited both Poland's new prime minister, Solidarity member Tadesz Mazowiecki, and communist President Wojciech Jaruzelski to come to Washington at dates yet to be determined.

Bridge hoisted into place

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The only bridge linking two barrier islands with the mainland was hoisted back into place and a nighttime curfew was lifted in Charleston as the recovery from Hurricane Hugo continued.

The Red Cross, meanwhile, announced that only seven storm evacuation shelters housing 454 people remain in operation around the state. Since the storm approached, 453 shelters had housed 87,230 people.

Cleaning up the tons of debris left when Hugo slammed into Charleston two weeks ago today is far from complete, though, officials said.

Charleston alone is carting away 1,000 truckloads a day, and Mayor Joseph P. Riley Jr. said he would ask for the Army to be called in to assist.

"The collective task for all the municipalities in our state is extraordinary," Riley said.

Preliminary figures from the state Budget and Control Board indicate the statewide cleanup bill could top $200 million.

About two thirds of South Carolina Electric & Gas Co.'s 150,000 customers in the Charleston area have power, and almost all customers in other areas of the state are on line, officials said.

Shuttle launch date set

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Atlantis will be launched Oct. 12 with a nuclear-powered planetary spacecraft, NASA said after replacing a bad computer in a rocket.

The rocket is to boost Galileo toward Jupiter after the probe is released in orbit by Atlantis' astronauts.

After checking out the new computer, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Wednesday there was no need to delay the launch. Oct. 12 has been the unofficial date for months.

The countdown is scheduled to start at 8 a.m. Monday, a day before a federal judge is to hear arguments on a lawsuit by anti-nuclear activists trying to block the launch.

Bush to undergo surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will undergo minor surgery on Friday at Walter Reed Army Hospital to remove a cyst from his right finger, the White House announced today.

Presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the president, who is left-handed, would be given a local anesthetic for the procedure, expected to take about an hour.

Fitzwater said the president's doctors were confident that the growth was benign, but that a routine biopsy would be performed.

'Stalker' sneers as jury recommends gas chamber

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Night Stalker" Richard Ramirez sneered at a jury's verdict that he die in the gas chamber for his 13 satanic murders, muttering: "Big deal. Death always went with the territory. See you in Disneyland."

Ramirez

The black-clad killer, unrepentant to the end, made his comment in an underground garage as he was taken back to jail moments after a jury recommended the death penalty for his gruesome crimes.

His Disneyland comment apparently referred to the plea for mercy that had marked his attorney's closing argument.

'Mr. Ramirez will die in prison," defense attorney Ray Clark had argued, insisting that a life sentence was sufficient punishment.

"Life imprisonment without possibility of parole means he will never see Disneyland again," said the lawyer. "He will never be free again."

But the jury voted 19 times for death on each of the special circumstances attached to his 13 murder convictions. Ramirez also was convicted of 30 felonies including burglary and sex crimes. Those felonies and the crime of multiple murders constituted special circumstances warranting the death penalty.

"There's no punishment that could fit this crime," Judi Arnold, whose parents Maxon and Lela Kneiding were butchered, said tearfully after Wednesday's verdict.

"I have to live the rest of my life seeing my parents and what Mr. Ramirez did to them."

Some jurors said their dreams were haunted by the grisly details of the murders.

"I have nightmares all the time about the crimes," said juror Cynthia Haden. "I'll get over it. But I'll never be the same. I'll never look at people the same way."

She and others said they were horrified when they learned that victims' throats had been slashed and one woman's eyes had been gouged out.

The 29-year-old Ramirez, a drifter from El Paso, Texas, was impassive Wednesday as Superior Court Judge Michael Tynan read the word, "death" 19 times in announcing the jury recommendations.

The slender, shaggy-haired Ramirez, wearing a black shirt and black slacks but minus his usual dark glasses, rocked back and forth in his chair and craned his neck to peer at spectators.

Tynan will formally sentence Ramirez on Nov. 7. He has the option of reducing the sentence to life without parole.

"He got what he deserved," said Deputy District Attorney P. Philip Halpin who spent four years prosecuting Ramirez. He had described the defendant as "a miserable human being" who killed for self-gratification.

Defense attorney Daniel Hernandez said he was saddened at the verdict.

"I think all human beings are deserving of our sympathy and should not have their lives taken in the streets, in the courts or in the gas chamber," he said.

AIDS risk from transfusions tiny, study says

BOSTON (AP) — The risk of AIDS infection from transfusions is minuscule, but blood banks should work harder to recruit and retain women donors because they're less likely to have the AIDS virus, a Red Cross report concludes today.

The research shows that blood from repeat female donors is nine times safer than from first-time male donors.

Currently, 42 percent of donors are women. The report said this proportion should be increased, in part by encouraging members of women's organizations to give blood and by telephone recruiting campaigns aimed at women.

"Every effort should be made to recruit and retain female donors," wrote Dr. Paul D. Cumming and colleagues from the American Red Cross in Washington.

However, an editorial published with the study in the New England Journal of Medicine questioned this tactic.

Dr. Jay E. Menitove of the Blood Bank of Southeastern Wisconsin said trying to establish an exclusively female donor base is impractical. "Moreover," he wrote, "in a society that advocates color- and sex-blind principles, this approach is arguably unacceptable."

While suggesting ways to make the nation's blood supply even safer, the report found reassuring evidence that the chance of getting an AIDS infection from a typical transfusion is remote. The odds were just 1 in 28,000 two years ago, and the risk is dropping by more than 30 percent a year, largely because fewer AIDS carriers are donating.

"The blood supply is probably safer now than it has ever been," the Red Cross team wrote.

However, another report in the journal cautions that some people at high risk of the disease still give blood despite appeals to refrain, and blood banks should try harder to dissuade them from donating.

A third study showed that more than 95 percent of people who receive AIDS-tainted transfusions become infected, and half of them develop AIDS within seven years.

Based on data from 17 million donations, the Red Cross researchers estimated that 131 units of AIDS-contaminated blood were transfused throughout the United States despite screening efforts in 1987. This probably fell to 87 in 1988.

Many of those who get tainted blood die of other causes before their infections becomes apparent. Only 14 clear cases of transfusion-associated AIDS have been reported to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control since widespread blood screening began in 1985.

Both sides rest in McMartin molestation trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After $15 million spent, 124 witnesses and more than 1,000 pieces of evidence, both sides have rested in the 2½-year-old McMartin Pre-School molestation trial, the longest criminal proceeding in U.S. history.

Superior Court Judge William Pounders, who often expressed fear the 6-year-old case would end in a mistrial, scheduled closing arguments to begin Oct. 12. He said the jury should get the case by Nov. 1.

"Congratulations, judge," defense attorney Danny Davis said as he left the courtroom.

"I'm going to wait to accept that until I get a verdict," the judge replied, adding that he expects the rest of the case to take up to three months.

"I've got three months to keep 12 jurors together and that makes me nervous."

Pounders' skepticism is the result of the long and troubled case that began in the fall of 1983 as the largest child molestation prosecution ever.

Seven teachers at the once prestigious and now-defunct preschool in Manhattan Beach were arrested and charged with 207 separate counts. Prosecutors alleged hundreds of children had been molested during a five-year period.

Former pupils testified that teachers molested them at the school while playing games known as "Naked Movie Star," "Tickle" and "The Alligator Game."

One 10-year-old boy testified that children had been taken from the school and molested. Animals were mutilated during trips to a farm and at a church, the boy said.

Judge to consider compensation in jail suit

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — The state might be inspired to take inmates awaiting transfer to prison if it had to finance their upkeep in local jails, says an attorney for counties suing Texas over jail crowding.

State District Judge Joseph Hart, who is overseeing the lawsuit, said Wednesday he would consider whether it is proper for him to order counties to be reimbursed for the cost of keeping state-bound prisoners. He said he would provide time for the state to present evidence against such action.

Twelve counties have sued the state in an effort to force the removal of an estimated 6,000 felons from their jails. The state has set up a quota system for taking the inmates because it is under a federal court order against prison crowding.

"It's not any surprise to anybody that the counties are incurring an enormous amount of expense in taking care of the state's prisoners, and the judge is simply asking, 'Would it be proper for me to look at that as some way to encourage the state to carry out its duty?'" said Ann Clarke Snell, representing the counties.

Hart already has ruled that the state has a responsibility to take the felons. In the hearing that began Monday, he is considering whether it is possible for the state to do so.

"The state's witnesses said that the state complied with the Ruiz case when the judge started saying, 'I'm going to fine you $800,000 a day,'" said Ms. Snell, referring to the federal lawsuit against Texas over prison conditions. "Within a very short time, they got in compliance."

Ms. Snell said she did not have an estimate of how much the state might be required to pay. The 6,000 felons at issue in the state lawsuit represent about half of those estimated to be in jails.

Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman said the state is "shirking its duty" in passing the problem on to the counties.

"The state needs to face up to the prison overcrowding and incarcerate the felons where they belong ... that is Huntsville ... and ensure they are incarcerated for the period of time the jury assesses," he said.

About 60 of the 158 Midland County inmates are awaiting transfer to TDC, jail supervisor Lt. Jerry Baggs said this morning.

Assistant Attorney General Bob Ozer said additional hearings would be required on the funding issue.

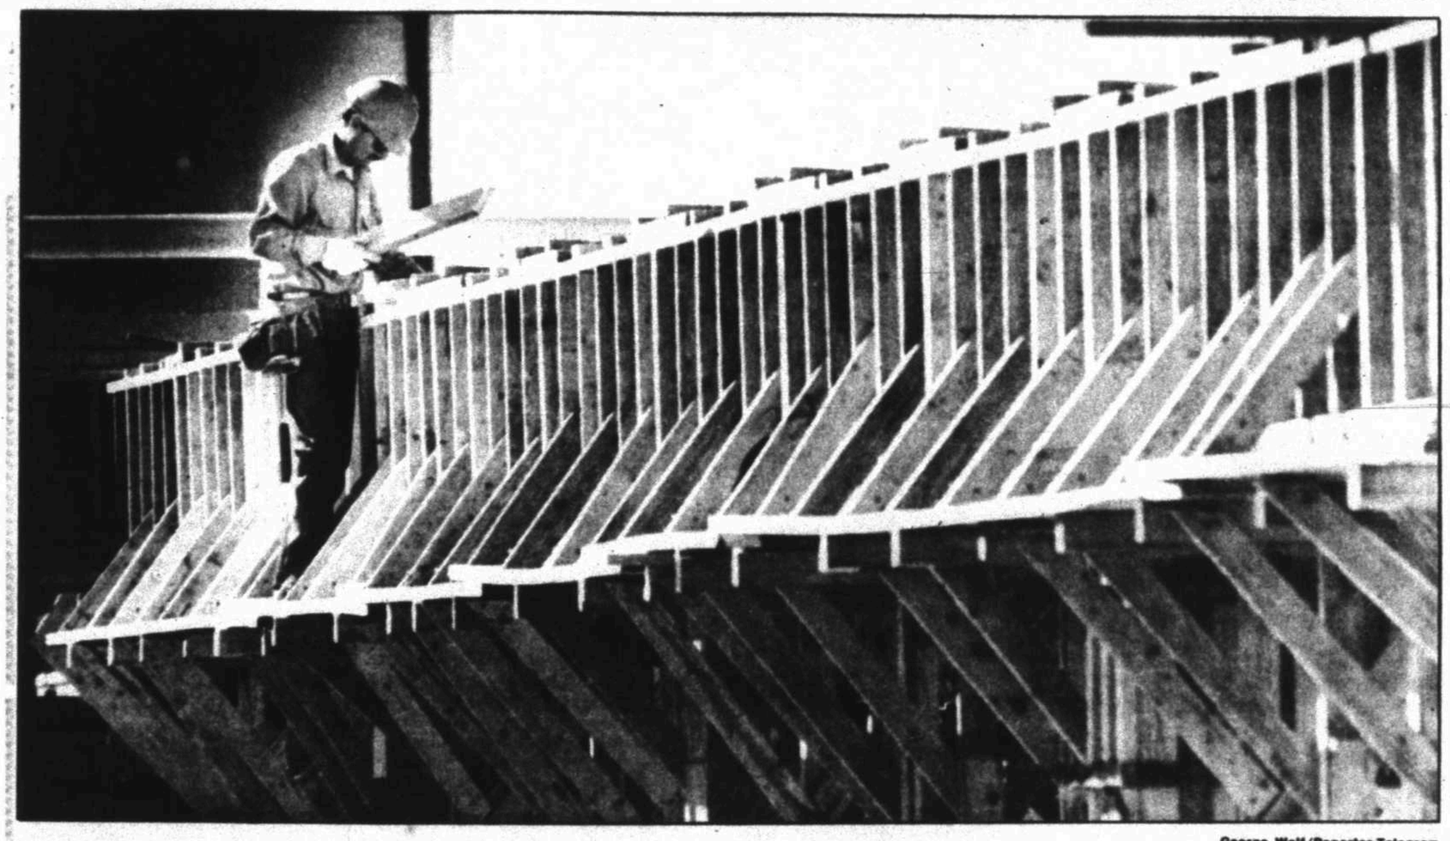

"I don't know whether the state can pay it or not" if the judge rules for the counties, he said during a break in Wednesday's proceeding. "I don't know if there's enough money."

Legislation that would have provided for state compensation to counties holding felons failed this year, Ozer added.

"I don't understand the basis that the counties could be arguing that they should be compensated under state law, when the Legislature considered legislation that would have compensated the counties under state law, and said 'No, we're not going to pass that,'" he said.

Instead, lawmakers passed a criminal justice reform package that should be given time to work, Ozer said. The package includes alternative programs to incarceration in state prison and new prison construction.

The suit initially was filed by Nueces County. It was later joined by Collin, Dallas, El Paso, Hidalgo, Hunt, Galveston, Lubbock, Tarrant, Travis, Victoria and Bexar.

Search continues for man who left nursing home

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The search for 75-year-old Edgar Bohling early today remained concentrated in north Midland, the area of the most reliable sightings of the nursing home patient who disappeared nearly a week ago, a police spokesman said.

Bohling

"We are still checking the sightings, trying to find a pattern to his movement," Cpl. Jim White said. "Patrol officers are checking the northwest area of the city, Bluebird Lane, Mockingbird Lane, where there were several sightings shortly after he was reported missing."

So far, investigators say they have no confirmed sightings of the man, who is a victim of Alzheimer's disease.

Bohling walked away from the Terrace West Nursing Home, 2800 N. Midland Drive, last Saturday morning, two days after he arrived at the facility. Police believe he headed in a generally north direction, and reportedly was seen on the Button Estes Ranch north of Midland several hours after he disappeared.

Aircraft from the Civil Air Patrol, Midland County Sheriff's Department, and Department of Public Safety have all aided in the search.

Two police detectives have been assigned full-time to the case "until there is an outcome," White said.

After Bohling's plight was publicized Tuesday, police received a flood of tips, which has its drawbacks, White said.

"We are still checking the sightings, trying to find a pattern to his movement."

— Cpl. Jim White

"When we put the information out, we expected we would get calls from all over, and we have," he noted. Callers from as far away as Wink and Crane have told police they have seen Bohling.

"We are checking out as many as we can, the ones (tips) that are within reason," the spokesman said.

While police have been satisfied with the number of tips received, many people are waiting to report sightings, according to investigators.

"If people wait several hours to call us, and tell us where they saw him earlier, it doesn't do any good," White said. "They need to call us immediately."

Bohling lived in Midland when he was a superintendent for Northern Natural Gas Co., now Enron, in the 1950s and 1960s. He retired in the mid-1970s, and moved to Hooker, Okla.

Bohling was widowed in 1983. He moved to Midland earlier this year to be close to his daughter, Ann Bush and her husband, Bill.

When he left the area of the nursing home, he was wearing a blue and white striped shirt, tan pants and brown Hush Puppy loafers. He wears glasses and a hearing aid, according to police.

Ex-ECISD official named to funding task force

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's appointments to a school finance task force include a former Ector County Independent School District administrator, a senator and a law school dean.

The Wednesday appointments followed the recent decision by the Texas Supreme Court that the current public school funding system is unconstitutional.

Bill Walker, an expert in school finance and former ECISD deputy superintendent, will be part of the team. Walker left the district June 30 after accepting a job with the Texas Center for Educational Research.

Gov. Bill Clements and House Speaker Gib Lewis also will name members to the task force, which the governor said would conduct public hearings before a special spring session on school finance.

Named by Hobby were Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, and Mark Yudof, law school dean of the University of Texas at Austin and former member of the Select Committee on Education.

Hobby also appointed Austin lawyer Camilla Bordie, former consultant to the Select Committee on Education.

The select committee completed a study of education for the 1989 Legislature.

"I am very proud that people with this experience and expertise are willing to help us address the inequities in our state system of school finance," Hobby said.

Producer says chemical right-to-know law driving agribusiness from Texas

By HOLDEN LEWIS

LUBBOCK (AP) — An agricultural chemical right-to-know law and high workers' compensation premiums are driving agribusiness out of Texas, says one of the state's largest producers of onions and melons.

Othal Brand Sr., the mayor of McAllen and head of Griffin and Brand Co., which harvests and packs vegetables in the Rio Grande Valley, West Texas and other areas, told 300 people at an agricultural chemicals conference that he's already joined the exodus from Texas.

"We were planting 12,000 acres (of onions last year), and this year we'll be planting 8,000 acres and next year we'll reduce it even more," Brand told reporters after his brief speech at the West Texas Agricultural Chemicals Institute's annual conference.

Brand said his company is joining a trend in which other farmers, packers and harvesters are slowly moving operations to places where labor and insurance costs are cheaper.

Brand said he has moved some operations to Mexico and New Mexico and is thinking about moving some business to Arizona because their governments don't have laws similar to Texas' agricultural-chemical statute.

Under the so-called right-to-know law, Texas farm workers and laborers in packing houses must be informed in their native language what chemicals they are being exposed to and the potential effects. Harvest contractors and packing house owners like Griffin and Brand must keep records of their efforts under the law for 30 years.

Brand complained that farm foremen are responsible for informing their laborers, but that the companies that hire the foremen are responsible legally, meaning the companies can be sued for the negligence of contract workers.

He also said high workers' compensation premiums and excessive jury awards are driving agribusiness out of the state. He blamed the financial problems on state Agriculture Secretary Jim Hightower for his "basic philosophy, lack of knowledge and experience in the business of farming ... and his basic negative appreciation for the things that have built America."

He also blamed the Legislature, especially the state Senate, for not reforming the state's workers' compensation system, which he said is weighted toward benefiting plaintiffs' attorneys.

"You can't reform workers' compensation when the people responsible for reform benefit from the way it is now," he said. "People won't lower their income willingly."

School destroyed by Hugo will rent Wayland building

PLAINVIEW (AP) — About 125 students, faculty and staff from a Caribbean medical school are moving to Wayland Baptist University's campus while their institution, destroyed by Hurrican Hugo, is being rebuilt.

The American University of the Caribbean's medical school will lease vacant dormitories and classroom space at Wayland Baptist for a year, officials said Wednesday.

Last month, Hugo destroyed the university's campus on the island of Montserrat in the British West Indies. The medical school's administrators, through an island doctor familiar with Wayland, asked if they could move to the Plainview campus temporarily.

"From our Christian perspective, I believe that is an opportunity of service to our fellow man which we should not ignore," Wayland President Dr. Lanny Hall said.

First- and second-year students, faculty and administrators of the medical school are scheduled to arrive in Plainview beginning Oct. 13. About 90 percent of the students and staff are U.S. citizens.

Instead of ocean waves, the newcomers will find waves of grain. And the Rolling Stones have never recorded a record in Plainview, as they have in Montserrat. But the temporarily relocated medical school will add to the city's economy, which already has been boosted with the recent addition of a huge Wal-Mart warehouse.

"This will be like having a new industry in Plainview for a short term," said an excited Jim Ferrell, executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce.

At Hall's invitation, medical school officials visited Plainview last week and decided the vacant dormitories and unused facilities in the Moody Science Building would be suitable for leasing.

Wayland Baptist, the Plainview-Hale County Industrial Foundation and the Chamber of Commerce will help students and staff relocate.

People should weep and repent for polluted Earth

Of all the world's pollutions, noise is one of the more pervasive in today's civilization. It may not be the most insidious, but it ranks high up there.

Todd

It is sad, indeed, when the air is fouled in this age of machination, internal-combustion engines, smokestacks and open-pit fires.

It is pity when the water, denied its self-cleansing natural order, is treated like a disposable resource and not, for the most part, held in honor and esteem. Underground water, streams, rivers, the lakes, and the oceans are "victims" of careless and reckless behavior on the part of many people.

Environmentalists are prone to pronounce judgment on "big corporations" and cities that discharge, spew and dump manufacturing by-products, including chemical wastes, and sewage into the waters. Ocean-going vessels, like floating cities, flush their refuse and oil into the waters. Many farmers and homeowners pollute the soil and underground water by misusing fertilizers, pesticides and herbicides.

So-called rational people in a phenomenon called civilization have denuded their forests and turned fertile land into deserts. America, blessed with abundant resources, has been victimized by declining soil fertility through soil erosion and failure to rotate crops. Europe has been virtually deforested. Those civilized and learned folks in ancient Greece denuded their land.

The argument that pollution is sort of a natural occurrence, as in volcanic dust, fails. That is a natural order and comes "with the territory." Man-made pollution is hardly "natural" and certainly, with forethought and care, is preventable.

The Earth is in grief, and the planet's people should weep and repent. The solution is so simple: shifting to attitudes of good stewardship and acting out the role of caretakers. Implementation is not so simple. There are other concerns: Production for maximum profits.

Money, money, money.

But when the lust for money turns into greed without conscience, you, your neighbors and the planet as an optimum land base for human life and all the fauna and flora therein are endangered.

There is little doubt that most, surely all, Americans and folks throughout the world desire clean air, pure water, and fertile soil. Surely, all people would desire lands of continuing abundance and not just short-term gratification without a thought of tomorrow, of others, and of the mankind's obligation to be caretakers.

The Earth is common to all. It is unfair and unreasonable to rationalize that, "Well, we all are going to die. This journey on Earth is soon over."

It seems so natural that mankind should be held accountable for spoiling the Earth.

Does a fellow justify desecration of the Earth in the name of "convenience"?

The civilized world has latched onto "disposable" goods. That disposable attitude promulgates careless and reckless behavior. Witness the almost interminable list of disposable good: plastic writing pens, baby diapers, those dastardly Styrofoam (polystyrene plastic) coffee cups that ought to be outlawed, nonreturnable bottles, and the billions of plastic containers that bespeak of cheapness, classlessness, and the lust for profit.

What is the matter is glass? What is the inconvenience, for instance, of grocery shoppers take their own reusable bags to the store? Those throwaway sacks are accelerating the deforestation of this land. And, behold, why not recycle this newsprint?

The time will come when Earthlings will be "forced" just to survive to take care of Earth, themselves and all that is in it. Why wait until the "have-to" years, which already are here and have been for quite awhile?

Why wait? Good-intentioned procrastinators need to turn their verbiage into action.

The job of cleaning up the environment is the duty of all of mankind — not just the "big corporations," which are nothing more than names and men and women not unlike thee and me.

Meanwhile, this world needs some peace and serenity: less noise, more thinking, more pondering, less wasteland of noise emanating from television sets, radios, mobile sound systems, high decibel car and truck engines not sufficiently muffled, and less idle chatter.

More doing and less talk, folks.

Ed Todd is a staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

Exluding illegal aliens from census would be costly, state officials say

AUSTIN (AP) — A proposal to exclude illegal aliens from the 1990 census would cost Texas millions of federal dollars and cause the state to gain fewer congressional seats during reapportionment, state officials say.

The provision "would be disastrous for Texas and its taxpayers," said Attorney General Jim Mattox, who appeared at a news conference with state lawmakers and the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

Other state officials joined in criticizing an amendment to forbid the use of federal money for census data, in connection with reapportionment, if it includes the count of aliens in the United States in violation of immigration laws.

The amendment was attached to the Senate version of a federal appropriations bill that is in a conference committee.

Such an amendment could mean the difference between Texas gaining three or four seats in Congress when reapportionment of districts is done after the 1990 census, Mattox said.

There also is no method to ensure that those excluded from the census for purposes of reapportionment would be included for the allocation of federal money, according to MALDEF.

If the provision is approved and is not vetoed by President Bush, the attorney general said Texas likely would join MALDEF in a federal lawsuit challenging it on constitutional grounds.

Court battles resulting from approval of such a provision would mean "a total disruption of the census process that is relied upon by every state in this union," said Judith Sanders-Castro, MALDEF staff attorney. Even reapportionment could be postponed, she said.

Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, said the amendment "smacks of racism and xenophobia."

Convention to mark NAACP's 100th anniversary

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 100 Texas branches of the NAACP will mark the group's birthday by doing what its six founders did in 1909 — vowing to rid America of racial discrimination and prejudice.

"Eighty Years: The Fight Continues," is the theme for the Texas National Association for the Advancement of Colored People statewide convention, which began today.

"The struggle that was before the original founders in 1909 has not actually changed," said Gary Bledsoe, president of the Austin branch of the NAACP.

"We're still fighting for the same equal rights, equal opportunity and desegregation that other citizens have been awarded," Bledsoe said. "For whatever reasons, America has been very reluctant to bestow the same privileges and rights upon black Americans as it has bestowed upon other Americans."

After 80 years, "strategy may be a little different, but (we) haven't won the war," he said.

The state convention will examine whether discrimination can be challenged better through boycotts and other forms of economic pressure rather than through traditional class-action court cases.

Bledsoe said boycotts may be planned against State Farm and Prudential insurance companies. He said the Austin chapter of NAACP filed a complaint with the State Board of Insurance alleging that State Farm discriminated against Nigerian policyholders. Also, two lawsuits have been filed against Prudential alleging that black employees were discriminated against, he said.

Doctor gets ticket on way to hospital

BAYTOWN (AP) — A doctor who was ticketed while speeding to a hospital to treat twin babies was found guilty of breaking two traffic laws.

Dr. Linda McClintock was found guilty Wednesday despite her contention that a dire medical emergency constituted extenuating circumstances for her breaking a traffic law.

"I'm disappointed and surprised," the doctor said.

She was stopped April 22 by a police officer as she raced to a Baytown hospital after getting an urgent call to treat premature twin babies.

Prior to the trial, Ms. McClintock had claimed the arresting officer had harassed and unnerved her as she was trying to save the babies' lives.

Ms. McClintock testified in Precinct 3 Justice of the Peace R.L. "Bob" Smith's court that she ran a red light, but she denied she changed lanes improperly.

But jurors found her guilty on both counts and fined her $150.

Texas leads nation with number of beds in private prison facilities

Hearst News Service

CLEVELAND, Texas — With the official opening last week of a new pre-release prison here, Texas now leads the nation in the number of prison beds operated by private industry, according to state officials.

Corrections Corp. of America officials said their new $12 million, 500-bed center — the last of four privately run prisons built in the state — is already full.

"This is a bold experiment for the private sector and government to join together in preparing for the successful re-entry of inmates into society," said David Young, Gov. Bill Clements' criminal justice planner.

"This new Cleveland unit will somewhat ease overcrowded conditions in our prisons, but it won't eliminate the problem," said Tommy Ruffino, warden of the new Cleveland center. "It will take a whole lot more beds to make a real difference."

Ruffino said the Cleveland facility began accepting inmates on Sept. 11 and is now at full capacity.

Only minimum-security inmates who are within two years of their release date are accepted. The average stay is expected to be only six months, Ruffino said.

Hidden in woods, the 40-acre site is unobtrusive. Its concrete walls and bright blue entry would look like any other office building except for the high barbed-wire fence and 53 security cameras.

During tours of the facility last week, CCA staff members pointed out educational and vocational training rooms to help inmates re-integrate with society when they are released.

Currently 62 percent of the inmates are participating in vocational classes in computerized warehousing, food services, computer repair, and refrigeration and air-conditioning repair.

CCA reports another 37 percent are enrolled in academic classes in reading, math, writing, and English as a second language.

When inmates arrive, they are screened for drug or alcohol abuse. More than 50 percent of them take part in individual and group counseling to overcome substance abuse troubles.

Each cell is home to two inmates, providing separate bunks with storage underneath, sink and toilet area, chair and desk. A pod of several cells also includes a large day room equipped with television and an assortment of games. The facility also has a large gym, weight room, library and outside recreation area.

Liberty County Judge Dempsie Henley and Cleveland Mayor Stan Jones view this facility as an economic boon to their depressed oil-and-agriculture-based economy.

"Liberty County's unemployment rate is showing the effects. It's gone from 13.7 percent to 10 percent," Henley said.

NTSB says truck brakes not adjusted

AUSTIN (AP) — The soft-drink truck involved in a school bus accident that killed 21 students near Mission had brake problems so severe it would have been ordered off the road in any state except Texas, a federal safety official has told the Austin American-Statesman.

Lee V. Dickinson, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board, said three of six brakes on the Dr Pepper delivery truck involved in the crash were not properly adjusted.

"If it had been pulled over on the road (for a traffic violation) or at a truck weigh station and inspected, it would have been taken off the road," in any state but Texas, Dickinson told the American-Statesman in a copyright story.

On Sept. 21, the soft-drink truck collided with a Mission school bus carrying 81 students, and sent the bus into a water-filled pit. Twenty-one students died and the other 60 were injured in the incident.

The day after the accident, Dickinson said visual inspection of the brakes failed to support the driver's claim that the brakes had failed prior to the accident.

Dickinson said federal truck safety regulations were not in effect in Texas at the time of the collision. He said Texas is the only state which did not enforce the regulations.

According to the American-Statesman, politics kept strict truck standards from being enforced in Texas.

Under pressure from a group of legislators and lobbyists, Texas Department of Public Safety officials delayed enforcement of strict truck safety laws, the newspaper reported.

The political group met with then-DPS director Col. Leo Gossett in January 1988 and asked that the rules not be enforced. Gossett delayed enforcement until September 1989 so the Legislature could consider changing the law, according to the newspaper.

By doing so, Texas gave up $2.5 million a year in federal funds that would have paid for the 54 new DPS officers hired to enforce the truck regulations, the newspaper reported.

During its regular session last May, the Legislature reconsidered the laws and approved a weaker version of the federal truck safety regulations adopted by 49 other states. DPS troopers began enforcing those standards Oct. 1.

In a press briefing the day after the accident, Dickinson said a preliminary, visual inspection of the truck's brake system did not reveal a failure of the system. More detailed studies later revealed the severity of the brakes' condition, he said.

"I can say it (brake system) did not satisfy the office of motor carrier safety standards for out-of-service criteria," Dickinson said. "If there had been a federal inspection before this trip it would have been pulled out of service for this violation."

Witnesses at the scene of the accident said the truck ran a stop sign before smashing into the bus. Reuben Perez, the truck driver, told witnesses his brakes had failed.

Police investigate attempted robbery

From Staff Reports

Midland police are investigating the attempted robbery of a man early this morning outside a convenience store.

The victim, 21, told police he was talking on a pay telephone outside the 7-Eleven store near the intersection of C Street and Indiana Avenue, when he was grabbed about 1:45 a.m., according to police reports.

A knife was put against his back and he was threatened, police reported. When he struggled, he was knocked to the ground and stabbed, reports said.

The two men reportedly ran from the store area and the clerk called police.

The victim was not seriously injured, according to police.

The suspects were described only as two black men.

Judge named to state post

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements on Wednesday appointed Bradley Steven Underwood, a Lubbock County court-at-law judge, to be judge of the new 364th State District Court in Lubbock.

The judicial post, created by the Legislature this year, will appear on election ballots in 1990.

Underwood, 35, has been a county court-at-law judge since November 1986. He is a former assistant criminal district attorney in Lubbock County.

How to win an argument with a meat eater.

The Hunger Argument

Human beings in America: 243 million
Number of people who could be fed with grain and soybeans now eaten by U.S. livestock: 1.3 billion
Percentage of corn grown in the U.S. eaten by people: 20
Percentage of corn grown in the U.S. eaten by livestock: 80
Percentage of oats grown in the U.S. eaten by livestock: 95
Percentage of protein wasted by cycling grain through livestock: 99
How frequently a child starves to death: every 2 seconds
Pounds of potatoes that can be grown on an acre: 20,000
Pounds of beef produced on an acre: 165
Percentage of U.S. farmland devoted to beef production: 56
Pounds of grain and soybeans needed to produce a pound of feedlot beef: 16
Pounds of protein fed to produce one pound of chicken protein: 5
Pounds of protein fed to produce one pound of hog protein: 7.5
Number of people worldwide who will die of starvation this year: 60 million
Number of people who could be adequately fed with the grain saved if Americans reduced their intake of meat by 10% : 60 million

The Environmental Argument

Percentage of U.S. topsoil lost to date: 75
Amount of U.S. cropland lost each year to soil erosion: 4 million acres
State comprising approximately 4 million acres: Connecticut
Percentage of U.S. topsoil loss directly related to livestock raising: 85
Number of acres of U.S. forest cleared for cropland to produce meat-centered diet: 260 million
How often an acre of U.S. forest disappears: every 8 seconds
Amount of meat U.S. imports annually from Costa, Rica, El Salvador, Guatamala, Honduras and Panama: 200,000,000 pounds
Average per capita meat consumption in Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatamala, Honduras and Panama: less than eaten by average U.S. housecat
Current rate of species extinction due to destruction of tropical rainforests for meat grazing and other uses: 1,000 per year.

The Natural Resources Argument

User of more than half of all water used for all purposes in the U.S.: livestock production
Amount of water used in production of the average cow: sufficient to float a destroyer
Gallons to produce a pound of wheat: 25
Gallons to produce a pound of meat: 2,500
Cost of common hamburger if water used by meat industry was not subsidized by the U.S. taxpayer: $35 a pound
Current cost of a pound of protein from wheat: $1.50
Current cost of pound of protein from beefsteak if U.S. taxpayers ceased subsidizing meat industry's use of water: $89
Years the world's known oil reserves would last if every human ate a meat-centered diet: 13
Years they would last if human beings eschewed meat: 260
Barrels of oil imported into U.S. daily: 6.8 million
Percentage of fossil fuel energy returned as food energy by most efficient factory farming of meat: 34.5 percent
Percentage returned from least efficient plant food: 328 percent
Pounds of soybeans produced for amount of fossil fuel needed to produce a pound of feedlot beef: 40
Percentage of raw materials consumed by U.S. to produce present meat-centered diet: 33

The Cholesterol Argument

Number of U.S. medical schools: 125
Number requiring a course in nutrition: 30
Nutrition training received by average U.S. physician during four years in medical school: 2.5 hours
Most common cause of death in U.S.: heart attack
How frequently a heart attack kills in U.S.: every 45 seconds
Average U.S. man's risk of death from heart attack: 50 percent
Risk for average U.S. man who avoids the meat-centered diet: 15 percent
Risk for average U.S. man who consumes no meat, dairy products or eggs at all: 4 percent
Amount you reduce risk of heart attack if you reduce consumption of meat, dairy products and eggs by 10 percent: 9 percent
Amount you reduce risk if you reduce consumption
by 50 percent: 45 percent
Amount you reduce risk if you eliminate these foodstuffs from your diet entirely: 90 percent
Meat, dairy and egg industries claim you should not be concerned about your blood cholestereol if it is: "normal"
Your risk of dying of a disease caused by clogged arteries if your blood cholesterol is "normal": over 50 percent
Hollywood celebrity paid by Meat Board to endorse beef as "Real food for real people": James Garner
Medical event experienced by James Garner in April, 1988: quintuple coronary artery bypass

The Cancer Argument

Increased risk of breast cancer for women who eat meat four times a week vs. less than once a week: 4 times
For women who eat eggs daily vs. less than once: 3 times
For women who eat butter and cheese 3 or more times a week vs. less than once: 3 times
Increased risk of fatal ovarian cancer for women who eat eggs 3 or more times a week vs. less than once a week: 3 times
Increased risk of fatal prostate cancer for men who consume meat, cheese, eggs and milk daily vs. sparingly or not at all: 3.6 times

The Pesticide Argument

Percentage of pesticide residues in the U.S. diet supplied by grains: 1
Percentage of pesticide residues in the U.S. diet supplied by fruits: 4
Percentage of pesticide residues in the U.S. diet supplied by vegetables: 6
Percentage of pesticide residues in the U.S. diet supplied by dairy products: 23
Percentage of pesticide residues in the U.S. diet supplied by meat: 55
Pesticide contamination of breast milk from meat-eating mothers vs. non-meat eating: 35 times higher
What USDA tells us: meat is inspected
Percentage of slaughtered animals inspected for residues of toxic chemicals including dioxin and DDT: less than 0.00004
Dye used for years by USDA to stamp meats "Choice," "Prime" or "U.S. No. 1 USDA": Violet Dye No. 1
Current status of Violet Dye No. 1: Banned as a carcinogen

The Ethical Argument

Occupation with highest turnover rate in U.S.: slaughterhouse worker
Occupation with highest rate of on-the-job inury in U.S.: slaughterhouse worker
Cost to render animal unconscious with "captive bolt pistol" before slaughter: 1¢
Reason given by meat industry for not using "captive bolt pistol": too expensive

The Antibiotic Argument

Percentage of U.S. antibiotics fed to livestock: 55
Percentage of staphylococci infections resistant to penicillin in 1960: 13
Percentage resistant in 1988: 91
Response of European Economic Community to routine feeding of antibiotics to livestock: ban
Response of U.S. meat and pharmaceutical industries to routine feeding of antibiotics to livestock: full and complete support

The Survival Argument

Athlete to win Ironman Triathlon more than twice: Dave Scott (6 time winner)
Food choices of Dave Scott: Vegetarian
Largest meat eater that ever lived: Tyrannosaurus Rex
Last sighting of Tyrannosaurus Rex
100,000,000 B.C.

World cancer death rates

Although many people die each year from cancer, various cancers, such as skin and breast cancer, are curable if detected early. Some cancers can be avoided by taking suitable precautions, such as not smoking to avoid lung cancer and avoiding over-exposure to sunlight to avoid skin cancer.

Breakthrough seen in crack treatment

By VICKI HADDOCK
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — In the thick gloom of a crack epidemic, many treatment specialists are optimistic oddities: They think things are getting better.

The reason? Breakthroughs in treatment of addiction to crack, the smokable cocaine — a drug so addictive that lab rats will choose to eat it until they die.

Until now there have been few paths out of addiction. The ropes thrown to what President Bush calls "the quicksand of our society" led to a cell or a coffin. Treatment was deplored for its abysmal failure rate, and that became justification for an emphasis on law enforcement antidotes.

Now, with the president and Congress debating over where to invest in a nationwide "war on drugs," it's worth re-evaluating whether treatment works.

"People should be hopeful," said Dr. Alex Stalcup, director of the drug detoxification program at the Haight-Ashbury Free Medical Clinic. "What we've learned is absolutely revolutionizing our ability to treat addiction."

When the clinic saw its first crack clients a few years ago, only one out of every 12 addicts who went through a workup ever returned. Today more than half of its crack clients stay in treatment up to three months.

"We've discovered more in the last few years about cocaine addiction than in the whole previous decade," said Richard Rawson, a research psychologist at UCLA. Among the findings:

- Medications that help restore normal brain chemistry, taking the edge off post-cocaine crashes and cravings.
- Elimination of environmental "triggers" to crack use.
- Long-term therapy after the surprise discovery that cocaine addicts face their toughest temptation up to months after a relatively painless withdrawal.

Still, treatment strategies are "not a magic bullet," acknowledged Marvin Snyder, director of medicine development at the National Institute on Drug Abuse. At least as many people abandon therapy as stick with it.

Specialists with a vested interest in funding hesitate to give success rates, and in fact good statistics don't exist. Nobody even agrees on a definition of treatment "success."

As a result, researcher Reese Jones considers it premature to call the breakthroughs revolutionary. "It's taking time for us to develop really solid research on what is effective, and we're still in that process," he said.

But he acknowledged that treatment has advanced from only six years ago, when government grant applications were rejected because cocaine use was regarded as a "habit" instead of an addiction.

When crack first became a phenomenon of the 1980s, treatment strategies were tried almost at random with therapy designed to carry patients through their first few days without the drug. That approach made sense for heroin, a drug that sends addicts who go cold turkey into nausea, sweats and convulsions for a few days. It did not make sense for cocaine, a drug that unleashes its addictive allure weeks or months after withdrawal.

Researchers believe cocaine acts on brain receptors carrying biochemicals that allow people to feel pleasure. The drug produces euphoria; in its absence the brain swings so far in the other direction that many people become suicidal.

"You just can't live in a chemical storm all the time," said Stalcup. "The receptors have been so awash in chemicals that they stop responding at a normal level. It's like walking out of a loud rock concert and not being able to hear."

Medications counter the crash. Yale researchers reported this year that desipramine bettered an addict's chances of staying off cocaine: 59 percent of desipramine patients were off cocaine for at least three to four weeks during a six-week trial, compared with 17 percent for a placebo.

Now desipramine is often used with bromocriptine, a drug one San Francisco addict said cuts cravings so much "it's like walking through a fire and not getting burned."

Many therapists add high doses of amino acids, the biological building blocks of neurotransmitters.

But medications, while critical, must be accompanied by therapy.

The goal: get rid of triggers, or cues to use. Many programs, like Mandela House for pregnant addicts in Oakland, enforce isolation from the outside world so healing can take place. Other therapists urge that addicts move to another neighborhood — even if the new environment is crack-infested, it doesn't trigger the urge to use.

Another effective treatment component is a rehearsal where recovering addicts practice phoning up their user friends and dealers to say they've quit.

Asthma puts stress on families

Associated Press

The damaging effects of childhood asthma reach beyond the child.

Families of these kids also face problems, according to a survey of parents of asthmatic children by the National Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine in Denver.

Survey results reported in Better Homes and Gardens magazine show one-third of married respondents reported their child's condition put a strain on the parents' relationship. The same percentage reported strains between a parent and a non-asthmatic child. The more severe the asthma, the more strained the relationships.

Asthma affects nearly 3 million American children, and causes more school absences than any other chronic condition.

Cow's blood may become substitute for human transfusions

BOSTON (AP) — Sometime in the next decade, nurses preparing patients for routine surgery may draw out a few pints of blood and replace it with something the laws of nature would seem to forbid: cow's blood.

Cow's blood — actually just the oxygen-carrying part of it — is one of several substances under development by biotechnology firms seeking a safe, clean and maybe even superior substitute for what flows through human veins.

Doctors at Massachusetts General Hospital hope to begin experiments this fall on healthy human volunteers to see if bovine blood transfusions are safe. Extensive human testing will be necessary to overcome skepticism about mixing blood between the species.

"Everybody says you can't give cow's blood to a human, just like you can't give some people's blood to other people," said Carl Rausch, head of Biopure, a Boston-based company working on this approach. "But we are talking about just the oxygen transport medium, which is hemoglobin."

Ordinarily, blood, organs and hormones cannot be swapped between cats and mice or people and elephants because they are rejected as foreign substances. But there are exceptions. For instance, diabetics take cow insulin, and pig valves are used as replacements in human hearts.

Biopure has more than people in mind for its product. Tufts University's veterinary school plans to test the same cow blood intended for humans to treat sick dogs. Besides opening up a big market among veterinarians — it envisions a $60 million a year business in transfusions for dogs and cats alone — Biopure hopes that by showing Bossie's blood works fine for Tabby and Rover, people will begin to accept the idea that it's good for Aunt Gertrude, as well.

"People are nervous about this because it's bovine-derived," said Rausch. "If you can get a substitute to work in a wide range of species, then the nay-sayers will have to say, 'It might work.' "

It should work, he and others believe, because many creatures, people included, produce similar hemoglobin. In three years of tests, animals showed no adverse reaction to cow hemoglobin, even when it replaced 95 percent of their own blood.

Blood fulfills many vital jobs, transporting nourishment, hormones and disease-fighting armaments. The substitutes envisioned by Biopure and others would take the place of just one of these components — the red cells.

Red cells are packed with hemoglobin, a molecule that picks up oxygen in the lungs and delivers it throughout the body. Putting back hemoglobin, usually in the form of red cell transfusions, is often essential for offsetting the blood loss of accident victims and surgical patients.

"There have been attempts to make red cell substitutes for a quarter of a century," said Dr. Harvey G. Klein, chief of transfusion medicine at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

Northfield Labs in Northfield, Ill., and Baxter Travenol in Fairfield, N.J., among others, are developing red cell substitutes from expired human blood. Green Cross in Japan has made a fluorocarbon-based synthetic molecule that can carry oxygen, while Somatagen in Broomfield, Colo., is attempting to make human hemoglobin through gene splicing.

"The great enthusiasm recently is because of the perceived increased risk of infection being transmitted by transfusions, primarily AIDS," Klein said. "Red cell substitutes could be purified to such an extent that viral contamination wouldn't be an issue. Red cells can't be right now."

Despite screening, a tiny risk remains of getting AIDS from a transfusion. Other viruses can also be passed along — including hepatitis and herpes — as well as a variety of foreign proteins.

"Every time you take blood, it's like putting a quarter in the slot machine," said Dr. Charles Huggins, head of Massachusetts General's blood bank. "If you are unlucky and come up with three lemons, you can get hepatitis or something else."

Rausch said bovine hemoglobin is purified to be 99.999999999 percent free of viruses. Even if a microbe slips through, it will be a cow germ, unlikely to cause a human disease.

Among other advantages, the substitutes could be given to anyone without matching the blood type. And unlike real blood, which must be thrown away after about three weeks, the fake varieties would last six months and perhaps longer.

Huggins, who will be participating in the human testing of cow blood, said, "I am making every effort to put myself out of business."

However, Dr. Leon Hoyer, vice president of research and development at the American Red Cross, doubts this will happen. Blood is becoming safer as tests are developed for more viruses, he said.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You feel a special sense of destiny and should plan for the future. Although your freedom will be restricted at times, these limitations are necessary if you want to lay the foundation for a better tomorrow. Your income could rise in November as others realize how capable you really are. Romance is enhanced by a change in lifestyle. Someone who has found fault in the past will soon offer genuine praise. Consult your romantic partner about summer vacation plans.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: pitcher Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, inventor George Westinghouse, journalist Shana Alexander, actress Stephanie Zimbalist.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get-rich-quick schemes are not for you. Know it and steer clear of a friend with a dubious proposal. The good will of an influential person is worth having. Avoid being petty.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Tidy up your paperwork. Vacation plans merit attention. Adjust your schedule to accommodate loved ones. Someone in authority has a change of heart. Set aside more time for relaxation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Something related to your work or well-being causes you concern today. You cannot wish away a problem. Consult experts. The desires of your dear ones could surpass your ability to satisfy them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Deal with stress by following a doctor-recommended diet-and-exercise regimen. Challenges, especially financial ones, must be dealt with head-on. Postpone travel; home life benefits from your presence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accept any new responsibilities with enthusiasm. Better things lie ahead. A personal message must be studied carefully; read between the lines. A legal matter will be settled out of court.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Looking for a better job could be high on your list of priorities. Update your resume and make discreet inquiries. A former colleague can provide job leads. Talk over your plans with mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take more initiative. Consult a lawyer before signing papers. Authority figure is impressed by bold new ideas. Record your thoughts on paper in order to receive your fair share of credit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Replace bad habits with good ones. Consult a doctor before starting a diet. Take a second look at a promise made in haste or under duress. Being a good listener will improve family communication.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be more patient with someone who irritates you. Improving communication with family should be a top priority. Higher-ups are eager for time-saving ideas. Go ahead and make a suggestion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Before buying, renting or selling property, consult a professional. You may not realize the true value of a possession until too late. A weekend outing requires advance planning. Pursue romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Review your plans. Someone who has annoyed you in the past may now try to make amends. Accept this person's overtures graciously. An element of good luck is present in business transactions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Expenses continue to mount; try to put more money into savings. Work harder to teach your children good manners and a sense of responsibility. Follow your romantic impulses this evening.

Legend has it that P. Hal Sims never misguessed a missing queen. When pranksters set up a hand where the queen of trumps was missing and gave each defender the lady, Sims is reputed to have stared at the cards for a while before announcing: "I think both you birds have the queen of trumps!" Those of us not so adept at guesswork must find other ways to locate her majesty.

North's cue-bid simply created a game force without saying anything about diamond control. Thereafter, it was easy to steer clear of no trump without a diamond stopper in favor of the minor-suit game.

West cashed two high diamonds and continued with a third round of the suit. Obviously, the fate of the contract hinged on avoiding the loss of a heart trick. We doubt even Sims would have relied on instinct. He would have unearthed milady's location in a more reliable fashion.

After ruffing the third diamond, declarer should draw trumps in two rounds. Next, the ace and king of spades are cashed, followed by a spade ruff. Declarer returns to hand with a trump to ruff the last spade.

By now, declarer has learned West started with four spades, six diamonds and two clubs. A simple matter of arithmetic confirms that West cannot have more than one heart. Thus, declarer can claim his contract. If a heart to the king does not fetch the queen, declarer can take a marked finesse against East for that card.

GOP chairman won't co-host blues show, wants to keep focus on music

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — National GOP Chairman Lee Atwater is still invited to the Memphis Blues Foundation's annual awards program, but he won't be a co-host because the group doesn't want the show to be politicized.

"We just want to remain apolitical and keep our focus on music," David Simmons, a vice president of the foundation, said Wednesday.

Atwater

Atwater, who plays guitar, and bluesman B.B. King had been scheduled to be hosts of the Nov. 5 show at Memphis' Cook Convention Center, but King will be touring overseas with the rock group U2, Simmons said.

Filling in for them will be Willie Dixon, a producer, arranger and writer who set up one of the first tours of American blues musicians to Europe in the 1960s. Awards will be given in 22 categories for contemporary and traditional blues.

Bruce Iglauer, head of Alligator Records, said Atwater has spoken about the need for preserving American blues but having him as a host for the awards program would be improper.

"He's done some good things for the music, but he's a politician," Iglauer said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Matt Dillon says he spent time with drug addicts and bought a hypodermic needle on the street to prepare for his role as a junkie in the movie "Drugstore Cowboy."

"All that research was definitely helpful," Dillon said.

Dillon, 25, said he went with a friend, a recovering drug addict, to a lower Manhattan park to buy "works," an illicit drug kit that included the needle.

In the movie, which opens Friday, Dillon plays a junkie who robs pharmacies to feed his drug habit.

Observing addicts to learn their mannerisms, outlook and motivation was natural for an actor who considers himself a student of society.

"I don't live in exile. I'm not an absolute recluse," he said. "I live my life. I like to go out. You have to keep in touch with life around you. You have to observe things."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The producer of Pat Sajak's late-night television show has resigned as it slips in the ratings battle with the hip, syndicated "Arsenio Hall Show."

Paul Gilbert, who came to "Sajak" from the host's other television show, "Wheel of Fortune," will stay on until a replacement is named, CBS spokeswoman Terry Soreco said Wednesday.

CBS' vice president in charge of late-night programming will select a new producer. Soreco said changes in the show could be expected to follow.

LONDON (AP) — Graham Chapman, a founding member of Monty Python's Flying Circus comedy troupe, died of cancer in Maidstone, England, on Wednesday. He was 48.

Monty Python's Flying Circus went on the air in 1968, bringing together the talents of Chapman, John Cleese, Eric Idle, Michael Palin, Terry Jones and Terry Gilliam.

Chapman played the lead in the troupe's first film, King Arthur in "Monty Python and the Holy Grail. The group's last film, "Monty Python's Meaning of Life," was released in 1983.

The group celebrated its 20th anniversary three weeks ago by filming a television special to be released later this year.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Francis Ford Coppola will revive "The Godfather" for a third act next month as he begins filming in Italy with returning stars Al Pacino and Diane Keaton and newcomers including Eli Wallach.

"We hope to do something in the tradition of the others," Coppola told Daily Variety in Wednesday's editions. "If all three were put together, we would like to feel they're all part of one 'Godfather' project."

Coppola

Paramount's "The Godfather — The Continuing Story" starts filming in Rome on Nov. 15 from a script written by Coppola and Mario Puzo, who first chronicled the Corleone saga in the best-selling novel "The Godfather."

Pacino, nominated twice for Academy Awards in the previous two films, will return as the powerful underworld don Michael Corleone and Keaton will play his ex-wife. Talia Shire, Coppola's sister, will reprise her role as sister Connie Corleone.

New faces include Wallach as a friend of the late Don Corleone and Andy Garcia, who will portray an illegitimate Corleone son.

The original "Godfather" was released in 1972; the sequel two years later garnered 16 Oscar nominations. Each won the coveted best picture Oscar. The two movies have grossed more than $700 million.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Melanie Griffith was reported doing well after giving birth to a baby girl with husband Don Johnson present, a publicist said.

The girl, named Dakota, was born Wednesday in Austin, Texas, where Johnson is filming the Dennis Hopper-directed movie "Hot Spot," publicist Elliott Mintz said.

"Mother and baby are fine," she said.

Johnson, 39, star of the long-running TV series "Miami Vice," married Miss Griffith, 31, for the second time last June. They each have a young son from other relationships.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A judge has reset the count for heavyweight champion Mike Tyson, giving him two extra days to fulfill a community-service sentence for a speeding conviction.

Judge Stephen Safranko agreed Wednesday to let Tyson appear at three youth clinics on Monday, two days after the deadline he had set in sentencing the fighter. Tyson was ordered to appear at the clinics and pay a $300 fine after pleading guilty to two speeding incidents.

Under the revised agreement between Safranko and defense attorney John Hicks, Tyson will be featured at a boxing clinic at a youth center Monday morning, and then give two drug-related talks at a community center.

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Hu Blonk, a long-time crusader for open government, urged editors to use their newspapers as a crowbar in a "way to prevent encroachment on the people's right to know."

Blonk was honored Wednesday as the first recipient of the Meritorious Service Award of the Associated Press Managing Editors.

He had served on the APME's Freedom of Information Committee for 25 years, played a major role in the passage of the Freedom of Information Act and fought attempts by trial lawyers to restrict courtroom coverage.

Creditors want Manges given Chapter 11 protection

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Four South Texas men have asked a federal bankruptcy court to place oilman-banker Clinton Manges and his Man-Gas Transmission Co. under Chapter 11 protection in an action that halted plans by a Seattle bank to sell Manges' 64,000-acre oil lease to pay off a $55-million-plus judgment.

The U.S. Marshal's office said Tuesday's scheduled sale of Manges' mineral interests in Duval and Webb counties was canceled after the men took the action.

The sale had been scheduled to pay off a judgment to Seattle-First National Bank for business loans to Manges dating back to 1979.

Such action would prevent foreclosure by the Seattle bank.

The creditors, M.W. Huan, Duard A. Howard, Morris D. Jaffe and David W. Myers, claim that Manges has not paid more than $475,000 in overdue loans and bills and that Man-Gas owes the group nearly $220,000.

Manges, once described as one of the richest men in the country, has dabbled in everything from politics to professional football.

Former San Antonio bankruptcy judge Bert Thompson, who is representing the four creditors, said Wednesday that his clients filed the request to prevent First National from taking all of Manges' assets and leaving nothing for other creditors.

"If the bank takes over all the assets, that wipes out the other creditors," Thompson said. Under Chapter 11 reorganization "everybody gets an equal shot" at recovering part of the debt owed them by Manges, he said.

Patrick Deely, a San Antonio lawyer who represents the Seattle bank, pointed out that the creditors are all friends of Manges and said the involuntary bankruptcy filing may be an attempt by Manges and his attorneys to avoid paying off debts to the bank.

David Towler, a San Antonio attorney who represents Manges, said Wednesday that he could not comment on the case until he has seen the pleadings.

Attempts to contact Manges at his home in Freer and office in San Antonio were unsuccessful Wednesday, the Corpus Christi Caller reported.

Because of the four creditors' action, Deely said, the bankruptcy court has temporarily put on hold the foreclosure action.

First National has not decided how they will proceed, Deely said.

Court documents show that Huan, a San Antonio real estate developer, claims Manges owes him $453,000 for loans dating back to 1984 and for telephone bills, apartment rent, gasoline and other expenses by Manges' account since 1985. Huan also claims that Man-Gas owes him more than $149,000 for loans made since 1984.

Howard, of San Antonio, said Manges owes him $8,000 for loans made in August and that Man-Gas owes another $20,000 for loans made the same day.

Jaffe, another San Antonio real estate developer, requested $10,000 for loans made to Manges. Jaffe listed no claims against Man-Gas in the documents.

The final creditor, Corpus Christi oilman David Myers, claims that Man-Gas owes him $50,000 for the use of an oil rig between April 1989 and August 1989.

LIKE MOST PEOPLE HER AGE, SHE BELONGS IN A HOME. HER OWN.

For 30 years, it's been her home. But now, she could end up in a nursing home. Simply because she could use a hand shopping for groceries.

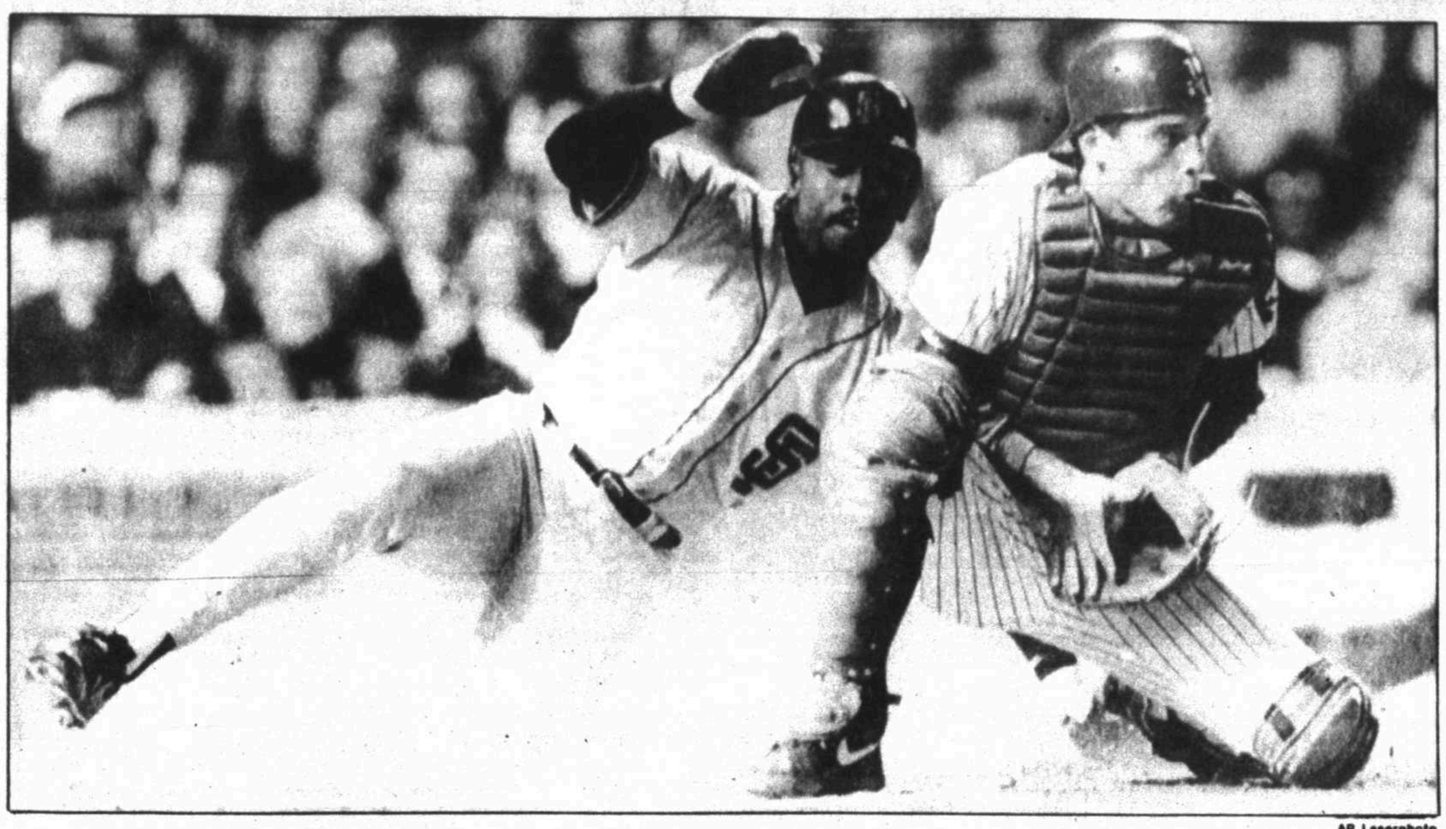

Who do you turn to when you're all alone? Who can you depend on, so you can remain independent?

She got help through a volunteer shopping program. They got help from the United Way. all because the United Way got help from you.

SF crushes Cubs 11-3 in Game 1

NLCS

CHICAGO (AP) — Pitching usually dominates the postseason. But at Wrigley Field? Come on!

The two highest-scoring teams in the National League took batting practice against aces Greg Maddux and Scott Garrelts at the hitters' paradise Wednesday night and the result was predictable: San Francisco 11, Chicago 3 in the opening game of the playoffs.

"I was a little nervous," admitted Maddux, a 19-game winner who was tagged for eight runs on eight hits in four innings. "I've been hit before, although this is a bad time to be hit."

The teams hit five home runs, tying a playoff record. It also happened in the 1984 opener, when the Cubs routed San Diego 13-0 at Wrigley Field.

Neither Maddux nor Garrelts was sharp from the start. Maddux had not pitched since clinching the East championship eight days ago and Garrelts had not worked for seven days.

"I just couldn't get my fastball where I wanted it," Maddux said. "I thought I had good stuff; I just didn't have good location."

Cubs manager Don Zimmer hasn't seen Maddux struggle like this often. Maddux and Oakland's Dave Stewart are the only pitchers in the majors to win at least 18 games in each of the last two seasons.

"I guess you have to write this off as a bad day," Zimmer said. "He's been outstanding all year. Today, he didn't get them out."

Maddux left after four innings, making the zig-zagged walk to the clubhouse. Zimmer followed his 23-year-old pitcher.

"I didn't want him to think the world had caved in. I told him to keep his head up," Zimmer said. "He has been too good a pitcher here for two years to let it bother him."

Garrelts wasn't brilliant, either. But with Will Clark and Kevin Mitchell hitting home runs, he didn't need to be.

Oakland leads 2-0 in AL series

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Rickey Henderson's dance is mesmerizing — a shuffle here, a sprint there, a slide everywhere — but beware the muscle-flexing, ball-crushing Bash Brothers.

Mark McGwire, Dave Parker, Dave Henderson — the Oakland Athletics' big boys — are bashing their forearms aplenty. Only Jose Canseco is missing, and his problem, a dizzying migraine headache, could vanish as suddenly as it appeared.

"Now we've got the whole ballclub going," said McGwire, who doubled in one run and had three hits Wednesday as Oakland beat Toronto 6-3 to take a 2-0 lead in the American League playoffs. "We're doing a lot of things right now — hitting with power, running, pitching."

McGwire, 4-for-8 in Oakland's two victories, appears back on the beam after hitting .231 this season and finishing last year with a dreadful 1-for-17 in the World Series.

He can't figure out why he's suddenly hitting and doesn't really want to try, lest he fall victim to "paralysis by analysis."

"I don't like analyzing it," said McGwire, who had a decent year despite his poor average, hitting 33 homers and driving in 95 runs. He ended the season strong with seven homers and 12 RBI's over a 14-game stretch during the final two weeks.

"The only time I don't hit the ball is when I analyze it," he said. "But after the rocky season I've had, I feel good about what I'm doing now. I'd like to keep it going all the way through the (World) Series, knock on wood."

Just to be safe, he turned and knocked on his chair.

McGwire's double to left put the A's ahead 2-1 in the fourth after a "Rickey rally" had tied the game at the start of the inning. Henderson walked, stole second and third, and scored on Carney Lansford's single.

Home sweet dome for Jays

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The SkyDome, opened or closed, has never looked so good to the Toronto Blue Jays.

The Oakland Athletics and Rickey Henderson ran the Blue Jays off the field and take a 2-0 lead in the best-of-7 American League playoffs to Toronto.

The Blue Jays moved into the SkyDome on June 5 and lost to Milwaukee.

They didn't like it much at first. George Bell said the ball didn't carry. Lloyd Moseby said it was hard to judge a fly ball. The pitchers didn't like the mound.

All that has changed.

The Blue Jays finished the season 34-20 in the SkyDome, including victories in 20 of their last 26 games at home.

Now Toronto must win two of three starting Friday night.

"The home crowd should help a lot," reliever Tom Henke said. "If we get some key hits in the right situations, we'll be right back in it."

In the first two games, the Blue Jays lost because they didn't get the key hits. They really didn't get many hits of any kind.

On Wednesday, trailing 6-2 in the eighth, the Blue Jays had a run in and the bases loaded with none out when George Bell hit into a double play to kill the rally.

"You have to take a step back and slap yourself and say, 'Hey fellows, let's start playing,' " Moseby said. "Realistically, we have to win Friday and take it from there."

Several Blue Jays are in slumps. Fred McGriff, who led Toronto with 36 homers, hasn't hit one since Sept. 4. His last extra-base hit was on Sept 13.

Lee Mazzilli, the designated hitter in the first two games, has one hit in his last 22 at-bats.

"When guys are going bad, it doesn't matter where you put them unless it's on the bench," Manager Cito Gaston said.

In the two losses at Oakland, the Blue Jays had 10 hits, one for extra bases.

Secretariat, the 1973 Triple Crown winner, was put to sleep Wednesday morning at Clairborne Farm near Lexington, Ky.

Secretariat dead at 19

PARIS, Ky. (AP) — The brass nameplate will remain on the stall door at Claiborne Farm, reminding visitors that one of the greats in the history of horse racing once lived there.

Secretariat, the chestnut champion known as "Big Red," was buried at sundown Wednesday in a 6-by-6-foot dressed oak casket lined with orange cloth, the color used by Claiborne's racing stables. He was buried near his sire, Bold Ruler, in a small graveyard behind the office at the farm.

Secretariat, suffering from a hoof ailment, was humanely destroyed Wednesday morning. He was 19.

"Of course, I'm terribly sorry to lose an old friend," his owner, Helen Chenery, said. "As long as he was alive, his memories had more immediacy."

Big Spring's mentor set for 4-4A opener

Area Football

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

David Thompson believes that the high school football season is divided into three parts.

"You have pre-district play, where you try to get ready for the district season; then you have district games; and then, hopefully, you have the post-district part of the season if you do well enough in district."

Thompson's Big Spring Steers went 1-2 in the first part of that triumvirate. Part Two begins Friday at home in the District 4-4A opener against Monahans.

Also in District 4-4A, Andrews hosts Pecos. In other area action, Greenwood hosts McCamey, Lamesa hosts Lubbock Cooper, Rankin travels to Fort Davis, Iraan goes to Wall, and Stanton travels to Forsan. Garden City has the night off.

Big Spring dropped consecutive decisions to Lubbock Estacado and Plainview after a season-opening win at Hobbs, N.M. But Thompson said the Steers' open date was an opportunity to get things together going into Friday's game.

"We went back and worked on fundamentals, attitude and getting ready for Monahans," Thompson said. "I'm sure they did the same thing."

Friday's game at Big Spring features two teams that have plenty of point-producing potential. Monahans, 2-1, has scored 77 points in three games, while Big Spring is almost universally considered to be able to score more than the 15 points a game the Steers have been averaging.

Big Spring quarterback Rance Thompson has done nothing to discourage those thinking of him as all-district timber. The 170-pound senior has completed almost 50 percent (29-of-60) of his pass attempts, mostly to either tight end Joe Downey or wingback Neal Mayfield. Downey leads the Steers with 13 catches for 129 yards, while Mayfield is the team's big-play threat with nine catches for 167 yards and two touchdowns. The 212-pound junior has also ran for 106 yards and three touchdowns on only eight carries.

Despite the big-play capability, Thompson said the Steers will start out playing just plain ol' power football.

"We're going to line up, back their tails up, and run right at them," the Steer mentor said. Tailback Otis Riffe has rushed for 208 yards on only 52 carries in three games to lead the Steers.

Monahans likes to go to tailback Wayne Carter when the Loboes have the ball. Carter has rushed for 170 yards on only 29 carries. Quarterback Steve Ward is 14-29 passing with 203 yards, three touchdowns and three interceptions.

"They run the ball extremely well," Thompson said. "We'll be playing a team rich in tradition and well-coached. It ought to be a heckuva ballgame."

Thompson hopes the Steers' home crowd is his trump card, one year after the Steers started district play off on the wrong foot with a loss at Momahans.

"The fans here have been supportive," Thompson added. "We know that Monahans will bring a bunch of people, but you still have an advantage when there are more of your people (fans).

RANKIN maintained its seventh-place standing in The Associated Press Class A weekly poll, but Red Devil coach Troy Kennedy still believes the voters are basing their opinion on last year's state quarterfinal finish.

"We're not where we need to be," Kennedy said on the eve of Friday's game against winless Fort Davis. The Rankin mentor has other things to worry about anyway, like injuries — often the difference in a Class A team's season.

The Devils have lost four starters to injuries at one time or another during the first four weeks of the season.

■ Freshman defensive tackle Juan Gonzales went down with arthroscopic knee surgery after the second game. With both ligament and cartilage damage, Gonzales is not expected back this season.

'Dogs won't concede win to Mojo

San Francisco 49er fans remember with pleasure, as Dallas Cowboys fans do with disdain, "the drive."

Price

You know, the one where Joe Montana took his 49er offense virtually the length of the field in the 1981-82 NFC title game, hitting Dwight Clark for a touchdown and 28-27 win over "America's Team."

Well, Midland High's offense may have had visions of building just such a march to victory in Midland Lee's wild and woolly 32-27 win over MHS last Friday. After trailing by a seemingly insurmountable 32-7 margin at half time, the 'Dogs began chipping away at the mountain of points and, with almost six minutes left in the game, were poised to snatch victory away from the jaws of defeat. A touchdown, even sans extra point, would give MHS its second consecutive win over what many perceive as "Midland's Team."

Jason Stone, one of the two senior MHS quarterbacks who alternate at the position with each possession, had put the Bulldogs in position to take the lead after tossing a 73-yard TD pass to Brandon Oden. Patrick Mowles, the "other" MHS QB, expertly moved his team downfield and worked the clock like a Swiss watchmaker after the 'Dogs took the ball at their own 47-yard line.

By the time the scoreboard showed :58 remaining, MHS was standing on the Lee 16-yard line with second down and 10. But the 'Dogs weren't concerned about the 10 yards; they wanted 16. When Mowles threw an interception to Lee's Steve Ruckman, who fell on the ball at the 4-yard line, it became clear the game was over.

MHS fans, who occupied the home side of Memorial Stadium, all of a sudden had their collective egos deflated. The Rebels had snuck past MHS to go 3-1 on the season while the Bulldogs fell to 1-3. More importantly, Lee became 1-0 in District 4-5A while MHS was sent to 0-1 with second-ranked Odessa Permian next on the schedule.

DALLAS' LOSS IN THAT FATEFUL GAME began a slow slide into the bowels of the NFL standings. Many Cowboy fans look back on "the drive" as the beginning of the end for the 'Pokes. The end, as in hello Jerry Jones and goodbye Tom Landry.

The big question now nagging MHS followers is whether the Bulldogs will be able to recover from the emotional loss to the ole' cross-town nemesis. Will the loss be as devastating to MHS in 1989 as the 49er win was to Dallas in 1982?

MHS head coach Davis Corley was physically spend following the Lee win and his voice was barely audible after what to have been hours of shouting at the top of his lungs. The Bulldog locker room was understandably a mixture of silence, disbelief and all-out outrage over coming up one play short.

Mighty Mojo waits on the horizon and, maybe even worse, the 'Dogs must play the Panthers on the plastic grass of Ratliff Stadium in Odessa this Friday. History shows the Panthers have rarely been kind to MHS. Permian holds a 27-3 edge in the series and the 'Dogs haven't won since 1973. After whipping Lee 35-20 last season, MHS came down with a case of the Black Plague and lost to Mojo 42-0. But that last year.

The Bulldogs showed plenty of grit with their comeback against the Rebels. To avert an upset this Friday, the Panthers will have to guard against overconfidence. Don't forget, Permian is fresh off an emotion-charged win over their intra-city rival, Odessa High. Mojo may build a sizable lead and eventually win, but it better be watching over its shoulder in the process. Because after last week, I get this feeling the Midland Bulldogs won't lay down for anybody, not even the second-ranked team in the state.

Hex stubborn as a goat

By MALCOLM MORAN
New York Times News Service

CHICAGO — As Sam Sianis sat in his place of work, a white cloth apron tied around his waist as he spoke near the counter where cheeseburgers were being served, his easy smile suggested that he is too kind a man to inform a giddy city that its baseball team is doomed.

He did not have to say the Cubs had lost the National League Championship Series against San Francisco before it had even begun.

The history of his tavern, and the latest response of Cub management, provided all the facts that were necessary.

In his tavern, Sianis recited in his Greek accent the history of a baseball team, a tavern, and a goat.

He recalled how one day at his Uncle Billy's original place, near Chicago Stadium on Madison Street, a goat appeared on the doorstep and was taken in.

His uncle bought two tickets for a 1945 World Series game between the Cubs and the Detroit Tigers, the most famous of which is now faded, framed and displayed behind the bar, not far from the licenses and near the tray of candy and Wrigley's chewing gum.

Box seat. $7.20. Game 4. Box 65. Tier 12. Seat 5.

One ticket was for him. Seat 5 was for his goat, Sonovia.

"When he took the goat to Cubs Park," Sianis recited, "they refused to let him in.

"He said, 'I've got two tickets.'

"They said: 'Yes. You. Not the goat.'

"He said, 'Why not the goat?'

"They said, 'The goat smells.'

"He said, 'That's insulting to my goat.'

Baseball history recorded the fact that the Cubs lost. Cub history goes further than that.

"He sent a wire to Mr. Wrigley," Sam Sianis remembered. "Who smells now?"

And the Hex was born. It lasted beyond his uncle's passing in the 1970s, until Dallas Green called and invited Sianis and the latest Billy to opening day in 1984. The man and the goat stood on the grass of Wrigley Field. The Hex was lifted. The Cubs won a division championship.

Sianis promised that the lifting of the Hex would be worth not one, but two victories in the championship series against San Diego. He remembered talking to Andy Pafko, the old Cub, who was worried. "I said, 'It's wrapped up,'" Sianis remembered. "Andy Pafko said: 'If the Cubs don't win the series, don't blame the goat. They should blame themselves.'"

One victory from their first pennant since the Hex was imposed, the Cubs went to San Diego. "They didn't invite me," Sianis said. Cub fans know the rest.

He was standing now near the counter that became famous 14 years ago. The counter divides the bar area, where there are red and white checked tabletops, with a dining area marked by tables of genuine imitation wood.

Sianis pointed to a table with four chairs, next to the jukebox and beside the staircase that leads upward toward the street, where members of the Second City improvisational group used to come and sit and watch.

They would watch Sianis and his staff inform customers that they could have chips rather than fries with their meals. They listened to his high-pitched accent as the burgers were ordered and produced.

They paid attention to the information that turned out to be his signature, that the house cola was Pepsi and not Coke.

"Did you know they were going to put you on TV?" Sianis was asked this afternoon.

"I didn't," he said. "But they did."

Soon he made the strange discovery that as he walked down Michigan Avenue, strangers were smiling and shouting at him.

"Cheezborgercheezborger."

"Chips no fries."

"No Coke Pepsi."

Sianis had no idea what was happening. "Finally," he remembered, "one guy said to me: 'You know why they say that? They saw you on TV.'"

NL managers' friendship lasting

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Baseball Writer

For a couple of winners, Roger Craig and Don Zimmer know a lot about losing.

Tonight in Chicago, Craig, manager of the San Francisco Giants, and Zimmer, manager of the Chicago Cubs, will shake hands, then do the best they can to beat each other in the second game of the National League playoffs. The Giants won the first game of the series Wednesday, 11-3.

"Don and I have been friends for a long time," Craig said. "And no matter who wins, we'll still be friends.

"If we're not in the World Series, I'll be rooting for the Chicago Cubs."

The mutual admiration between Craig and Zimmer dates back to the mid-1950s when they were teammates on the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Their careers started out promising; they were members of the Dodgers' World Series champions in 1955.

Craig, a rookie, started Game 5 of the Series and beat the New York Yankees 5-3. He pitched six innings and allowed four hits before Clem Labine finished.

"That was the only champion Brooklyn ever had and I was there at the start of my career," Craig said.

Zimmer, an infielder, played in four games of the 1955 Series and was 2-for-9.

"Don could hit," Craig said. "But he had a couple of serious head injuries that hurt his career."

In 1956, Zimmer was hit in the head by a pitch from Cincinnati's Hal Jeffcoat.

"I don't think about what might have been," Zimmer said. "I consider myself lucky that I have always been around baseball. I've been in this game for more than 40 years. That's not bad."

Well, some of it wasn't exactly pretty.

In 1962, Zimmer and Craig again were teammates, with the expansion New York Mets.

The Mets lost 120 games — a major-league record. Craig lost 24 games and Zimmer was the Mets' opening-day third baseman. He lasted 14 games, hitting .077.

"I learned a lot in those years," said Craig, who improved to 5-22 in 1963. "You have to look for the positives, try to build on that.

"Sure the Mets were terrible in 1962, but within seven years they won the World Series."

Tom Kite watches his tee shot Wednesday in the Texas Open Pro-Am at San Antonio's Oak Hills Country Club. Kite is part of the 156-member field beginning competition for the Texas Open's $108,000 top prize.

Texas' courses kind to Pavin

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Texans Tom Kite and Ben Crenshaw renew their friendly rivalry on familiar turf, but it is Californian Corey Pavin, and not the native sons, who seems more at home in the Texas Open.

"I don't know what it is about the Texas courses but I've won at Houston, Fort Worth and San Antonio," said Pavin, the defending champion in this city renowned for Margaritas, mariachis and Mexican cuisine.

The slender sharpshooter said the food, drink and music are fine but even more alluring is the warm, dry weather, the oak trees and the natural old courses such as Oak Hills that "flow with the land, that look like they belong where they are."

Pavin grew up in Southern California and said there are many similarities between golf courses here and there.

It was here at Oak Hills a year ago that Pavin surfaced from a season of mediocrity, fired a blistering 21-under-par 259 and captured the title by eight strokes. He was only the fifth player in PGA Tour history to break 260 over a standard 72-hole stretch.

And he sounded more than a little optimistic about consecutive Texas Open trophies as a field of 156 set out today in quest of the $108,000 top prize.

"The idea of coming back to a golf course you've played well on is always exciting to me," Pavin said. "When you play a course where you've won, it's fun. And it's a good golf course for me ... one that requires a lot of smart play.

"And once you've won it, you know you can always do it again."

Crenshaw, meanwhile, was returning to the town where he launched his PGA career in 1973. He won the Texas Open that year and returned to Oak Hills in 1986 to capture the $1 million Vantage Championships.

That was before million dollar tournaments were commonplace.

"I'm feeling good and playing pretty good," Crenshaw said, although he has been off the Tour working on his grip since losing a playoff in the World Series of Golf in August.

"I feel like I've got a decent pattern going again," he said.

But while Crenshaw was touring the 6,576-yard Oak Hills course in par 70 on Wednesday, his old University of Texas crony was carving it up quite nicely. Kite twice strung together three birdies in a row, and only a bogey at the 18th kept him from winning the pro-am prelude outright.

His 5-under-par 65 left him tied with four others for first place and proclaiming that it is indeed time for him to win a Texas tournament, something he rather mysteriously has never done.

"Yes, it's time," he smiled. "It durn sure is. And this would be a good place to do it."

Kite said he has done to Florida what Pavin has done to Texas, winning five of his 12 titles in the Sunshine State. "You take what you can get when the opportunity arises. Unfortunately, you can't pick and choose."

If Kite needed an added incentive, he's got it. A victory here would propel him past Payne Stewart in the money-winning sweepstakes. With $764,616 in official earnings, Kite trails Stewart by roughly $60,000 with only the Disney remaining before the $2.5 million Nabisco Championships at Hilton Head, S.C.

"I've played well here before and I'm playing really well now," he said.

Hogs try to defend TCU's 'triple shoot'

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — If Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield knows how to defense Texas Christian's new Triple Shoot offense, he isn't telling.

"We've got ideas, but we don't know," Hatfield said in a telephone hookup from Fayetteville Wednesday. "We haven't seen it yet."

Hatfield's Razorbacks will see it Saturday in Fort Worth in the Southwest Conference opener for Arkansas and the third SWC outing for the Horned Frogs.

Jim Wacker, the TCU boss, is offering no help on defending against the Triple Shoot. Asked to explain his offense, Wacker said, "We're still trying to figure out what it is exactly." Wacker talked to Arkansas writers from his TCU office.

"Basically what it means, instead of going four wide receivers we have three wide receivers and a tight end," Wacker said. "The other distinction is that we're trying to run a little triple option off of it."

Wacker said his team is not doing a good job running the option, but he says part of the reason is that he has lost some key players to injury.

"Our running back right now, Tommy Palmer, who is injured, is a freshman. We've got our top two running backs out, our top tight end — those are our three best players on offense," Wacker said. "Of course, we've also lost our best player on defense, Fred Washington."

The Frogs are coming off two wins, 19-17 over Southern Mississippi, and a 28-10 victory over Southern Methodist last week.

Asked if the injuries — which have sidelined running backs Tony Darthard and Cedric Jackson — would have a great impact on his team in the Arkansas game, Wacker turned the tables on the caller.

"If Arkansas lost (Quarterback Quinn) Grovey and their top two running backs, and then their top three players on defense, would it have much of an impact?" The obvious answer was yes. "That's exactly what's happened to the Horned Frogs," Wacker said. "Plus, we had only 73 players going into the season and we've got nine out right now with permanent injuries.

"We're as thin as ice in a springtime melt."

Hatfield said TCU's Triple Shoot is reminiscent of the offense Hawaii ran against Arkansas two years ago, noting that a coach who was at Hawaii at the time is now at TCU.

"And they did a good job against us," Hatfield said of Hawaii, a 38-20 loser to Arkansas in 1987. "They played with their No. 4 quarterback at that time and did a good job."

Cowboys nab Sheppard

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Derrick Shepard, who returned a punt 56 yards for a touchdown to help the New Orleans Saints beat the Dallas Cowboys 28-0 in their season opener, was claimed off the waiver wire by the Cowboys on Wednesday.

Shepard, who went to high school in Odessa, Texas, and played collegiate ball at Oklahoma, will be used on the special teams by the Cowboys and a backup at wide receiver, the team said.

Shepard was originally signed as a free agent by Washington Redskins in 1987. He played two games for Washington in 1987 and five in 1988. New Orleans signed him as Plan B free agent in the spring.

Shepard had seven punt returns for 91 yards and a 13 yard average. He also had eight kickoff returns for 135 yards, a 16.9 average.

He caught two passes for 36 yards.

The Cowboys cut veteran wide receiver Ray Alexander, the leading receiver on the team in 1988, on Tuesday. Coach Jimmy Johnson said he wanted more help on the special teams.

Stocks reach record high

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices reached record highs for the second straight session Wednesday, riding the latest wave of the powerful advance that began almost a year ago.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 16.53 to 2,771.09, stretching its gain since the start of the week to 78.27 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 831 up, 656 down and 506 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 194.59 million shares, up from 182.55 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 231.99 million shares.

Analysts noted some "catch-up" buying by investors who were caught off guard by the market's rerurgent rally this week.

The new advance in stock prices was attributed in large measure to persistent strength in the dollar and declining interest rates.

Talk began stirring in the financial world early this week that the Federal Reserve might soon find room to relax its credit policy further, prompted by slow-to-moderate economic growth and favorable inflation news.

Interest rates levelled off in the credit markets Wednesday. But after hesitating for the first two hours of the session, stocks began forging ahead again.

Since last Nov. 16, when the Dow Jones industrials settled back to 2,038.58, the average has soared 732.51 points, or 35.93 percent.

USX, the day's most active issue, made a big contribution to the Dow's gain with a 2⅛ rise to 38¾. Financier Carl Icahn, who owns about 11 percent of the company, was widely rumored to be increasing his stake in a move to enhance the return on his investment.

International Business Machines gained 2¼ to 108¼, rebounding from a recent slide that greeted disappointing earnings news from the company.

Elsewhere among the blue chips, Eastman Kodak rose 1 to 48¾; General Electric ⅜ to 58⅛; Procter & Gamble 1⅛ to 125¾, and United Technologies ¼ to 56¾.

But McDonald's, faced with heightened price competition in the fast-food business, dropped ⅛ to 30.

Microsoft climbed 6⅛ to 75⅛ in the over-the-counter market. The company said it expects to report a 34 percent revenue increase for its fiscal first quarter, ended Sept. 30.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $19.11 billion, or 0.55 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained 1.14 to 197.98.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 2.60 to 407.04, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 2.23 at 356.94.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market added 2.04 to 479.32. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 394.36, up 1.34.

Trump bids $7 billion for American Airlines

By JOHN A. BOLT

DALLAS (AP) — New York financier Donald Trump today made an unsolicited $7 billion bid to acquire AMR Corp., the parent company of American Airlines, AMR announced.

American spokesman Al Becker said it had received a "unilateral unsolicited letter" from Trump, who bought Eastern Airlines' Northeast shuttle service in March, for $120 a share.

AMR stock closed Wednesday at $82.75 a share.

With 58.9 million outstanding common shares of AMR stock, the offer would be worth more than $7 billion.

The Eastern shuttle deal cost Trump about $365 million.

Becker said Trump's letter said his offer was "subject to the execution of a mutually satisfactory definitive acquisition agreement," and that Trump believes that "the financing necessary for the proposed transaction will be obtained within a reasonable period of time."

AMR's board of directors will consider Trump's offer "in due course," Becker said from AMR headquarters in Fort Worth.

U.S. traders praise Mexico's reforms

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The climate for foreign investment in Mexico has improved dramatically as a result of reforms initiated by President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, according to economists, bankers and politicians gathered here Tuesday.

In the second day of a conference sponsored by the Border Trade Alliance, a private U.S.-Mexican group that promotes trade between the two nations, the experts also agreed that Salinas faces enormous political hurdles in attempting to trim Mexico's staggering foreign debt and bring prosperity to Mexico.

The Mexican economy – saddled with a foreign debt of $107 billion, the second-largest in the non-industrialized world – has been suffering an economic crisis for the past seven years. Real wages have declined about 40 percent in that time and the gross domestic product has fallen 16 percent.

But there are also encouraging signs, said Sally Shelton-Colby, an international banking consultant and professor at Georgetown University here. While the Mexican inflation rate of 16 percent is still high, it was 160 percent a year ago.

Shelton-Colby, a native of San Antonio, Texas, and former ambassador to Grenada and other Caribbean countries in the Carter administration, said there are indications that banks will be making major new investments in Mexico during the next two years.

She noted that a Japanese bank "is doing something that a year ago would have been inconceivable – negotiating a joint venture with a Mexican corporation and with Pemex (the state-owned oil industry) for a new investment in the petrochemical sector."

Mexico is moving rapidly toward privatizing its state-owned industries, according to Shelton-Colby and Delal Baer, director of the Mexico Project at the Center for Strategic and International Studies here.

In the administration of former president Miguel de la Madrid (1982-1988), Mexico had 800 state-owned enterprises, while today there are about 400. "Most of those remaining are very large," Shelton-Colby said, "but most of them will be on the chopping block."

During his election campaign last year, Salinas promised to speed up the market-oriented polices started by de la Madrid and Salinas linked reform to reduction of the foreign debt.

He also suggested that Mexico may have to scrap free-market measures like trade liberalization if the economy fails to revive soon.

Conference participants here agreed Tuesday that the health of the Mexican economy is tied to debt reduction. Panelists said the debt-relief package negotiated last July by the Mexican government, banks and the U.S. government is the first real test of the "Brady Plan."

That plan, announced in March by Treasury Secretary Jim Brady, is a blueprint for handling the debt plaguing Third World countries. It seeks to trim these countries' foreign debt by 20 percent by rescheduling debt payments and adjusting interest rates.

James Fall, acting director of the Office of Developing Nations Finance in the Treasury Department, said "time will tell" whether the Brady Plan will work.

Shelton-Colby, however, said it is only a slight exaggeration to say that New York bankers are "hostile to the idea of fresh money" for Mexico.

Dallas newspaper war now includes TV license

DALLAS (AP) — Saying the Dallas Morning News is trying to unfairly dominate the city's newspaper market, the rival Dallas Times Herald has asked federal regulators to revoke the license of a television station owned by the Morning News' parent company.

In a petition to the Federal Communications Commission, the Times Herald said a joint venture between Universal Press Syndicate and the A.H. Belo Corp.'s WFAA-TV station in Dallas is "a sham."

"Belo has used its newspaper-television combination to engage in conduct that severely undermines competition between The Dallas Morning News and the Dallas Times Herald," said the petition filed Wednesday in Washington.

Belo General Counsel Michael McCarthy declined to comment on the petition, citing the Time Herald's pending lawsuit that raises some of the same issues.

Lorenzo: Eastern recovering

Lorenzo

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Air Chairman Frank Lorenzo said Eastern Airlines is continuing to recover and will provide aggressive, competitive service along the East Coast and South America.

"We're bringing Eastern back sounder, stronger and better than it's been in years," Lorenzo said Wednesday at the annual Airport Operators Council International Conference.

Next year "will be a great year for Eastern. Its reorganization will be behind us."

Eastern's machinists, pilots and flight attendants unions went on strike in March, forcing the Miami-based carrier to file for federal bankruptcy protection. Eastern and Houston-based Continental Airlines are subsidiaries of Texas Air, which also is based in Houston.

"The rebuilding of Eastern is on target," Lorenzo said.

Lorenzo said 100 flights added over the weekend brings Eastern to about 70 percent, or about 700 flights daily, offered before the

Both Boeing, machinists declare determination

SEATTLE (AP) — Picketing Machinists expressed determination to hold out for a richer offer from the Boeing Co. while the aerospace giant worked to keep assembly lines open and said there were no plans to resume contract talks.

"We are setting about the business at hand ... to start working on those aircraft that are far enough down the line that our supervisory people can complete them so those airplanes can be delivered," company spokesman Paul Binder said late Wednesday.

The Machinists union, Boeing's largest representing 57,800 workers around the country, struck early Wednesday after members overwhelmingly rejected a three-year offer that included their first wage increase in six years.

The strike hits Boeing in its fifth consecutive year of record jetliner orders. So far this year, Boeing has had orders for 736 commercial jets worth $38.5 billion, boosting its order backlog to $80 billion.

The orders have pressured the company to maintain delivery schedules, and the heavy overtime required of workers has become a major issue in the strike.

"When my kids found out about the strike, they said, 'Oh boy, we get to see Daddy," said Bob Junka, who was on a picket line at a plant in Renton, south of Seattle.

Federal mediator Douglas Hammond said he was trying to get both sides to resume talks soon because of the large number of workers and the potential for economic havoc with a long strike. Boeing is the state's largest private employer and the nation's leading exporter.

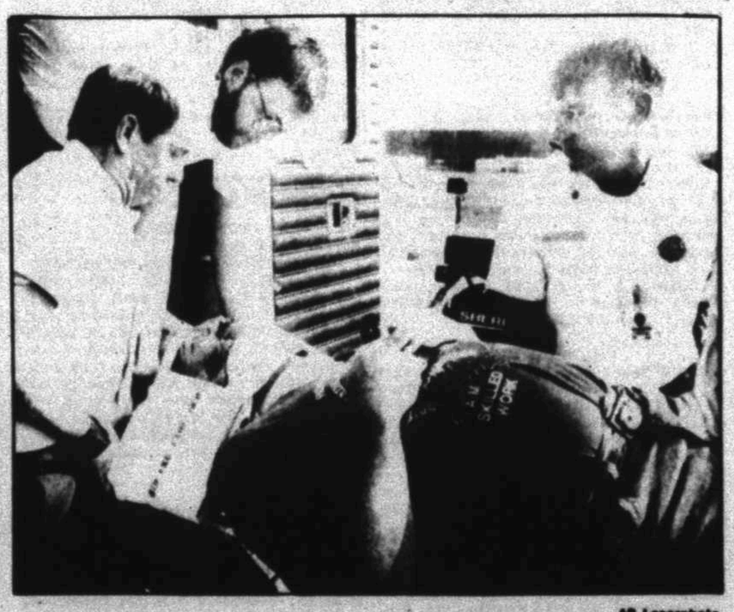

Tom Baker, president of Machinists District Lodge 751, which covers 43,300 Boeing workers in the Puget Sound area, said a phone call was all that was needed to get the union back to the bargaining table.

But Boeing's Binder said deciding when talks might resume "is part of the process of evaluating where we are. There aren't any meetings scheduled."

Members of other Boeing unions reported to work as usual Wednesday, but some unionized workers for a subcontractor stayed away from a plant in the Seattle area after unexpectedly finding pickets at the gate.

In Wichita, Kan., where 12,000 Machinists are on strike, Boeing secured a judge's order to limit the number of pickets at plant gates and prohibit pickets from speaking in an

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices fell below the $20 barrier for the first time this week, following gasoline futures, which tumbled on a report from the American Petroleum Institute on inventories.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, November contracts for West Texas Intermediate were down 23 cents to $19.92 at midmorning. The contract gained 2 cents Wednesday to close at $20.15.

Gasoline futures ht the skids after the API reported gasoline inventories had risen by 4.5 million barrels last week.

The API report released late Tuesday showed total gasoline stocks at 223.7 million barrels for the week ending last Friday. Analysts said the bearish report drove prices downward.

The November contract for unleaded gasoline on the New York Mercantile Exchange lost 1.23 cents a gallon to 55.41 cents. Subsequent months also lost ground, with the December contract falling 0.91 cents a gallon to 54.17 cents.

The increase in gasoline inventories was slightly above expectations, said Andrew Lebow, energy futures analyst for E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc.

Home heating oil futures traded on the mercantile exchange also fell. The November contract for heating oil was down 0.69 cents a gallon to close at 58.99 cents. Subsequent months also fell, though by less.

Analysts said little influenced the price of crude as the weekly API report showed an expected increase in stocks of 1.7 million barrels to 333.3 million barrels.

Dollar up in thin, choppy trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose in thin and choppy European trading late this morning as the market waited for the outcome of a West German central bank meeting which dealers forecast will raise interest rates.

Gold prices were up slightly.

Currency dealers said there was widespread uncertainty over the size of the interest rate hike expected to be approved later today by the Deutsche Bundesbank's central bank council as well as the reaction by other Western European countries.

"The market is just waiting for the events in West Germany," said one trader in Rome.

Traders said many market participants feel an increase of 0.5 percentage point in the West German discount rate is already fully discounted and may actually push the dollar higher because many expect an increase of a full point.

In case the dollar rises, however, the central banks will almost certainly intervene, traders predicted.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.45 yen to a closing 141.05 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at a higher rate of 141.60 yen.

In London, the dollar rose against the British pound. It cost $1.6040 to buy one pound, cheaper than $1.6055 late Wednesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $366.60 a troy ounce, up from late Wednesday's $366.25. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a higher recommended price of $366.90.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.26 a troy ounce, up from Wednesday's $5.24.

Electronics giant eyeing Dallas-Fort Worth

DALLAS (AP) — Japan's largest electronics company is considering a plan that could lead to the construction of more than $700 million worth of factories in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, according to a published report.

In a copyright story, the Dallas Morning News reported today Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. is studying a proposal from Panasonic, its American subsidiary, to locate all its U.S. manufacturing facilities in one place. At present, the Dallas area is the only location company officials have said they are considering.

If Matsushita decides to make the huge investment in U.S. manufacturing, the factories would likely make personal computers, facsimile machines, cordless telephones and other electronic products, Kitadeya said.

Greyhound offering lower fares

DALLAS (AP) - Greyhound Lines plans to make it cheaper for people to leave the driving to them.

A company official Wednesday announced plans to reduce some fares by as much as 35 percent and lower prices on Money Saver fares good for travel to any of the bus line's 10,000 destinations.

Ralph Borland, Greyhound's vice president of marketing, said the latest round of fare reductions go into effect Friday and follow discounts the company announced two months ago.

Judge dismisses 'comparable worth' suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — California did not deliberately underpay thousands of secretaries, nurses, clerks and other women workers, a federal judge ruled in dismissing the country's largest "comparable worth" lawsuit.

Wednesday's ruling dealt what could be a fatal blow to the lawsuit filed on behalf of 60,000 or more past and present women employees by the California State Employees' Association, which claimed the state deliberately discriminated against women in setting salaries.

Houston had 35 percent of July home sales

AUSTIN (AP) — More than one-third of the home sales recorded by Multiple Listing Service in July took place in Houston, according to the Texas Association of Realtors.

Houston had 2,881 home sales in July, or 35.6 percent of the 8,098 homes sold by MLS during the month, said Virginia Cook of Dallas, association president.

Survey finds business executives pessimistic

NEW YORK (AP) — Business executives' expectations for higher sales and profits in the coming months have dropped to the lowest levels in five years, according to a new national survey.

"After two years of consistently strong expectations, business executives are getting skittish," Joseph W. Duncan, corporate economist and chief statistician for Dun & Bradstreet Corp., said Wednesday in a statement announcing the results.

A welcome sign was that expectations for higher prices and inventories also dropped.

Skinner defends Northwest Airlines decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner said he was not ushering in re-regulation of the airline industry with a consent order restricting a Dutch airline's participation in the buyout of NWA Inc., parent of Northwest Airlines.

Skinner said Wednesday his decision to restrict the buyout of NWA by Wings Holdings Inc. — in which KLM Royal Dutch Airlines has a major investment — was based on existing law.

He defended the influx of foreign capital and the use of buyouts to "recapitalize" an airline when the value of assets, such as planes, exceeds the value of company shares.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Winkler reentry nets Wolfcamp find

From Staff Reports

The reentry of an abandoned well has yielded a Wolfcamp discovery in Winkler County, south of the Keystone South field.

TXO PRODUCTION CORP. reentered the No. 1 Wheeler "E", testing it to pump 83 barrels of 38 gravity crude, 10 Mcfd and 79 barrels of water. The well produced from perforations 7,868 to 7,948 ft., which had been acidized with 5,500 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid. Gas-oil ratio is 120:1.

Permitted as an 8,300 ft. wildcat reentry, the well was cleaned out to 8,405 ft. and plugged back to 8,022 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,100 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,022 ft., include the San Andres at 4,270 ft., Glorieta at 5,328, Clearfork at 5,754, Tubb at 6,248, Mississippian at 8,150, and Devonian at 9,234 ft. Pay was topped at 7,868 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and 2,310 ft. from west lines of Section 15, Block 40, PSL survey, 12 miles east of Kermit.

The well was originally drilled by Superior Oil Co. as the No. 1 C.O. Wheeler "A". Original total depth was 10,086 ft.

TXO Production Corp. has gained a Wolfcamp discovery in Winkler County with the reentry of an abandoned well.

Devonian producer flows 955 barrels

STEVENS OPERATING CORP. has completed a prolific Devonian producer in the King Camp North field of Chaves County, N.M., extending the pay south and slightly east with reentry of an abandoned well.

On potential test, the No. 1 Deemar Federal flowed 955 barrels of crude and no water on a 12/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 395 psi. The well flowed from perforations 9,631 to 9,730 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of 15 percent acid and 1,500 gallons of 20 percent acid. Gas-oil ratio was 49:1.

Originally drilled to 9,894 ft., the well was cleaned out to 9,748 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

On ground elevation of 3,712 ft., formation tops include the Queen at 1,628 ft., San Andres at 2,186, Tubb at 5,019, Abo at 5,820, Wolfcamp at 6,412, Upper Chester at 9,060, Mississippian at 9,264, Woodford at 9,654, and Devonian at 9,715 ft. Pay was topped at 9,718 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and west lines of Section 9, T14s, R29e.

The well was originally drilled by Philtex Oil Co. as the No. 1 Honolulu.

Crockett County field gains two gas wells

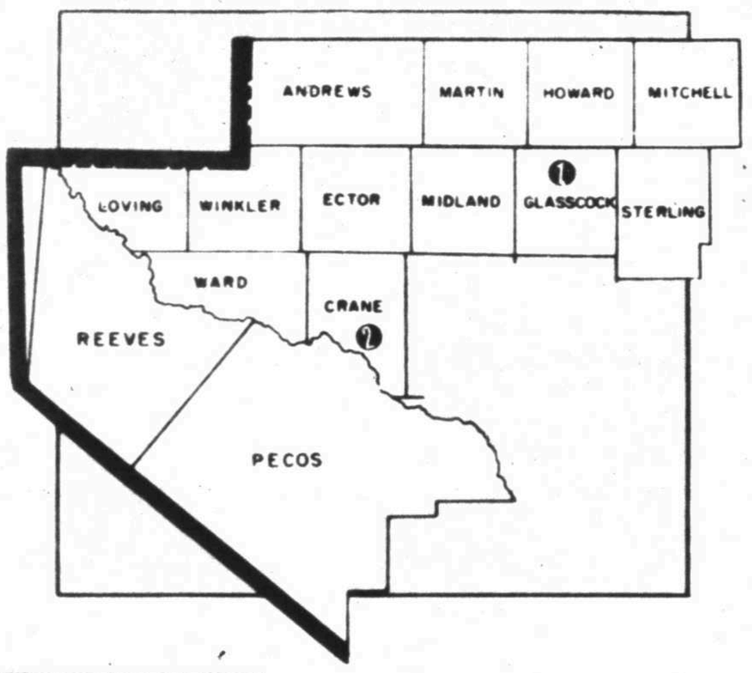

AMAX OIL & GAS INC., Houston, has completed two new gas wells in the Ozona (Canyon) field of Crockett County.

Both wells are located on Section 18, Block MN, S.C. Colville survey, one mile south of Ozona.

The No. 3 Chandler was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 5.2 Mmcfd from perforations 6,232 to 6,373 ft. Condensate gravity was 69.2 degrees API and gas-liquid ratio was 29,356:1.

Amax finaled the No. 4 Chandler for a calculated absolute open flow of 3.5 Mmcfd from perforations 6,331 to 6,416 ft. Condensate gravity was 45.5 degrees API and gas-liquid ratio was 4,569:1.

Further, Becker stated that there has been no change in AMR's policy "that AMR and its shareholders will be best served by AMR remaining an independent company and continuing the strong partnership among American Airlines, its employees, the communities it serves, and the public — a partnership that has given AMR the great success it enjoys today."

AMR also stated that it continues to believe that excess levels of debt in the airline industry are not in the public interest.

In August, AMR stock jumped 12 percent as reports circulated that the company had retained two investment firms to help defend against any takeover.

News reports said AMR had retained Salomon Brothers Inc. and Goldman Sachs and & Co. to advise the Fort Worth-based company, but AMR would neither confirm nor deny the report.

AMR, estimated by some analysts to be worth $114 per share in a takeover, had adopted a shareholders right plan designed to make a buyout more expensive.

Within the past year, American has replaced United as the nation's No. 1 carrier and has embarked on a multibillion-dollar expansion program that includes scores of new jets plus a new maintenance facility and plans for a $1 billion terminal at its base at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The order was granted after pickets stopped each vehicle headed toward the plant and attempted to convince the occupants to honor strike lines. Traffic delays of three hours or more were reported.

Two motorists were detained for questioning by Sedgwick County sheriff's deputies after allegedly bumping people with their cars. No one was seriously injured.

In the Washington, Baker went from plant to plant in the Puget Sound area and talked with pickets.

"Everybody's spirits are high," the union leader said. "I just tell them to keep dug in."

"That's what we like to see, (he's) right out here with us," striker Blake LaLonde said of Baker.

Lalonde, 23, and his fellow pickets cheered with each honk of support from passing motorists.

Boeing offered a salary hike totaling 10 percent over three years, plus bonus pay, but Machinists said they want more money and were upset at having to work mandatory overtime. The proposal would have cut mandatory overtime to 160 hours a quarter from 200 hours.

"Most people we talked to were basically insulted by the contract," said picket Bryce Bushby, who spoke outside Boeing's south Seattle headquarters. Boeing machinists haven't gotten a raise in six years, but received yearly bonuses.

Pickets marched in 45-degree weather outside the plant, waving signs as motorists and truck drivers honked horns.

In addition to those in the Seattle and Wichita areas, 1,700 Machinists in Portland, Ore., and smaller numbers in a half-dozen other locations are on strike.

Worldwide, Boeing employs 164,000 people, including 106,000 in western Washington.

Binder said he didn't know how many airplanes were far enough along that they could be completed by supervisory personnel.

Before Boeing can deliver any airplanes completed during the strike, the Federal Aviation Administration will require the company to demonstrate its compliance with an FAA-approved quality control program, KIRO-TV reported.

The FAA said it would increase on-site production surveillance at Boeing plants during the strike.

EASTERN

strike. "And I don't mind telling you, that by December, we'll be over 80 percent of the pre-strike airline."

But of the estimated 3,000 pre-strike pilots, Lorenzo said "there's probably going to be 2,000 pilots who may never see Eastern Airlines again because they were misguided and brainwashed by a national organization that has refused to face up to where we are today, and indeed, has tried to take over control of Eastern Airlines in an illegal way."

Lorenzo also spoke about the entire domestic airline industry, and the need for carriers to be free to finance their needs. There is an important link, he said, between the globalization of U.S. airlines and the current concern by some over leveraged buyouts and foreign investment in U.S. carriers.

Lorenzo said in August he may consider selling a minority or controlling interest in Continental, but he would not discuss the matter with reporters after Wednesday's speech. Scandinavian Airline Systems already has a 9.9 percent stake in Continental.

Although he believes that domestic carriers should remain U.S.-owned, he favored easing the federal restriction that says a foreign company can only own a maximum 10 percent of a carrier.

Lorenzo said he approved of U.S. Department of Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner's "case by case" approach to foreign ownership and leveraged buyouts.

He also cautioned against new limits on foreign ownership, saying that too much may be perceived as protectionism. That could spark a "trade war" as domestic carriers try to enter new foreign markets, Lorenzo said.

"I hope we can ease our fears of foreign capital as well as leveraged buyouts," he said. "In the case of foreign capital, critics fail to consider that the investment of foreign equity is reducing the use of debt financing in leveraged buyouts."

Domestic carriers have to compete internationally, Lorenzo said, adding that the "American industry just won't be able to do that if we deregulate in all areas but one — the source of capital.

"American entrepreneurs should not be denied foreign capital."

There has been concern over buyouts such as the one involving Northwest Airlines because some believe carriers won't be left with enough capital, but Lorenzo said a number of airlines actually "have been and are vastly overcapitalized."

Chevron to update refinery

New York Times News Service

RICHMOND, Calif. — Pacific Gas and Electric Co. could be a big loser if Chevron Corp., the San Francisco-based oil giant, goes ahead with a widely anticipated $1 billion modernization of its Richmond refinery.

The modernization is expected to include construction of a private power plant that would generate all the electricity the refinery requires, Chevron said Wednesday.

The refinery is currently PG&E's biggest customer, providing the San Francisco-based utility with $50 million in revenues annually out of a total of roughly $8 billion.

PG&E currently has a special low-rate agreement with Chevron, under which Chevron agreed not to operate its own power plant for up to five years.

Although Chevron hasn't said definitely that it will go ahead with the modernization, it is clearly headed that way.

Chevron will spend about $20 million to prepare and submit permit applications, complete cost estimates and perform preliminary design work.

Modernization of the 87-year-old, 2,900-acre refinery is expected to create more than 2,000 construction jobs, and cut pollution.

East German refugees wave their travel documents as the head toward the trains that will carry them from Prague, Czechoslovakia, to Hof, West Germany.

Trainloads of refugees arrive in West Germany

HOF, West Germany (AP) — Trainloads of elated East Germans rolled into this border town today, and thousands of their desperate countrymen battled police in Dresden while trying to board the freedom trains to the West.

Meanwhile, the West German Embassy in Prague was again reported to be filling with East German refugees who were trying to follow the thousands of others who packed the Czechoslovak capital before being allowed to emigrate to West Germany.

In Bonn, Foreign Ministry spokesman Juergen Chrobog announced that the approximately 600 East Germans who had sought asylum in the West German Embassy in Warsaw also would be allowed to emigrate today to the West.

In Hof, 7,600 refugees who took part in the latest exodus from Prague arrived in eight trains after the journey through East Germany. Thousands of their countrymen were reported to have lined tracks hoping to jump aboard.

"Out of hell, finally!" shouted one young man from a train window as one of the trains pulled into this northern Bavarian town shortly after dawn today. Some of the refugees had spent 14 hours on board the trains.

East Germany agreed to allow the exodus from the crowded embassy in Prague, then on Tuesday closed its border with Czechoslovakia — the only nation where East Germans can freely travel — to stop other refugees from seeking asylum there.

East Germany moved to end the exodus of its young and skilled citizens before the hard-line Communist country celebrates its 40th anniversary this weekend.

In a face-saving move, the trains traveled from Prague back into East Germany before heading into West Germany so the government in East Berlin could officially expel the refugees.

Many East Germans tried desperately to reach Prague and join the exodus.

"The police were everywhere," Guido Albrecht, 26, from Potsdam. "We just decided on Tuesday morning that we would go to Czechoslovakia and the embassy in Prague. We left the car in Prague, and we made it just before they clamped down on travel to Cezchoslovakia."

West German Embassy officials initially estimated the number of refugees in the embassy at 10,000-11,000 and said they would be traveling on 15 trains to Hof. Only eight trains arrived with about 7,600.

It was unclear if the exodus was still incomplete or if some had stayed behind to take advantage of an East German offer that they would be allowed to emigrate after six months.

However, witnesses in Prague reported more refugees entering the embassy grounds.

In the East German city of Dresden, people fought running battles with police, overturned cars and smashed windows of the main railroad station Wednesday night, witnesses said.

"We want out! we want out!" the would-be refugees screamed as police swinging truncheons charged to drive them back from the main railroad station.

Witnesses said police also used a water cannon to try to disperse the crowd as the refugee trains passed through. They said the police broke up the demonstration after midnight.

Aquino to visit U.S., Canada despite threats

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino today vowed to go ahead with a trip to the United States and Canada despite a purported assassination plot and allegations followers of Ferdinand Marcos plan to foment unrest.

Mrs. Aquino issued the statement after officials said they had uncovered an alleged plot to kill the president by agents apparently linked to Marcos.

The military chief of staff today said that other assassination targets included Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos, government and military figures and foreigners.

"All we can say for now is that intelligence reports indicate plans by rightist and leftist elements to take advantage of the divisiveness that would result if the remains of Mr. Marcos were allowed to be brought home at this time," Mrs. Aquino said.

"I am going to Canada and the U.S. as planned," she added. Mrs. Aquino is to make the trip next month.

On Wednesday, the Cabinet endorsed Mrs. Aquino's decision to ban the body of the former president after Ramos briefed members on the alleged plot and other threats to the country.

Marcos supporters have offered to be jailed during burial of Marcos if Mrs. Aquino allows the body to return from Hawaii, where he died Sept. 28.

Marcos' son Ferdinand "Bongbong" said today that the family will keep pressing for 10 years if necessary to return Marcos' body to his homeland. Marcos ruled for 20 years before his ouster in a 1986 civilian-military uprising that propelled Mrs. Aquino to power.

Sen. Neptali Gonzales, chairman of the pro-Aquino Struggle of the Democratic Filipino Party, said the alleged plot against the Aquino government was uncovered during 10 months of surveillance by government agents. Gonzales attended a briefing Saturday by Ramos on the security threat.

"Assassination was only a portion of that briefing because it is one of the components to destabilize the country," Gonzales said in a radio interview. "I think that is the easiest way to destabilize the government."

Military Chief of Staff Gen. Renato de Villa today said intelligence agents had been monitoring the alleged plot for about a year but did not specify whether the conspirators were Marcos followers.

De Villa said that other targets included Ramos, civilian and military officials and foreigners but did not elaborate.

Gonzales said Ramos gave details of the threat during a two-hour briefing he attended Saturday at the presidential palace. He would not elaborate.

In Hawaii, Bongbong Marcos said the family would continue pressing the government to bring his father's body home to his native Ilocos Norte province.

"The old man had only one wish and that is be buried in Ilocos Norte," the younger Marcos told radio station DZRH. "And that we will do. If we have to wait for 10 years, we will do that."

WORLD IN BRIEF

American tanker exploded in midair

PERTH-ANDOVER, New Brunswick (AP) — A U.S. Air Force tanker jet exploded in the air Wednesday over Canada, killing at least three of four crew members, authorities said.

A panel of military and civilian officials was being assembled in an attempt to determine what caused the four-engine jet to blow up and crash, setting fire to woods near this border town, Air Force officials said.

The KC-135A tanker was returning from a refueling mission to Loring Air Force Base in Limestone, Maine, less than 20 miles from the crash site.

"Three bodies have been recovered, but not the fourth," said Capt. Kellie Rebscher, a spokeswoman at Loring.

Rebscher confirmed that the plane exploded in the air and that it was not equipped with a "black box" that could have recorded crew members' final words. She said the crew was in radio contact with the Loring control tower "a few minutes before the explosion and they never indicated anything was wrong."

Efforts to locate the missing man continued many hours after the predawn explosion, which witnesses said looked like fireworks and felt like an earthquake. People living nearby said they heard saw a flash of light, then smelled burning rubber and diesel fumes.

ANC's Sisulu to be freed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government has decided to free jailed African National Congress leader Walter Sisulu but is irked by Western pressure to negotiate with the guerrilla movement, pro-government media reported today.

Several newspapers assailed U.S. State Department official Herman Cohen's comment this week that he expects the white-minority government to legalize outlawed groups and commence talks with them within nine months.

The state broadcasting company criticized plans by a French organization to invite South African officials and ANC leaders to a conference in Paris.

Sisulu, the ANC's general secretary, was sentenced in 1964 along with Nelson Mandela and other ANC leaders to life prison terms for plotting anti-government sabotage.

Salmonella blamed

PARIS (AP) — Health officials are blaming contaminated food for an outbreak of salmonella poisoning that killed seven residents of a geriatric hospital and sickened 160 others.

The preliminary findings released Wednesday by France's public hospital authority indicated food preparation at the Charles Richet hospital in suburban Cergy Pontoise was not the cause of the outbreak.

Salmonella poisoning struck nearly one quarter of the hospital's 670 patients shortly after a Sept. 28 dinner of a soup including ground beef, followed by an omelette, with rice pudding for dessert.

Since Friday, two women and five men aged 85 to 93 have died from food poisoning. The remaining 160 infected patients are not in life-threatening danger, the health authority said in a statement.

Rare Churchill jug sold

CHESTER, England (AP) — A rare pottery character jug modeled after Winston Churchill, which the World War II leader disliked so much that production was stopped, sold for $26,400 at auction, Sotheby's says.

London dealer Tom Power bought the 7½-inch tall jug of Churchill's head against competing bids from the United States and Canada telephoned to the sale room this northwestern town.

Christopher Proudlove, the auction house spokesman, said only three of the jugs are known to exist.

"Royal Doulton made a few in 1940 before production was stopped when Churchill said he didn't like the way his features were portrayed. The jugs were meant as a tribute to his leadership during the Battle of Britain but none was sold," he said.

The sellers were an unidentified English couple who did not say how they obtained the jug.

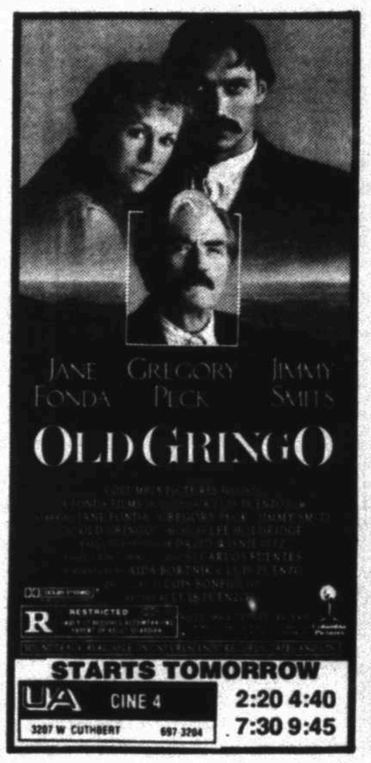

Soviets withhold arms

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Soviet Union will keep withholding arms shipments to Nicaragua to encourage the United States to take similar steps in Central America, officials announced Wednesday.

The announcement was made in a Nicaraguan government statement at the end of a 24-hour visit by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

'European-style' chocolate bar found disappointing

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

OK, I admit it — I am a chocoholic. I like to start each day with peanut M&Ms and diet Dr Pepper — breakfast of champions, you know. The best cookies have chocolate chips, the best cakes have chocolate (preferably fudge) frosting, and the best ice cream has chocolate chips or chunks or ribbons through it.

And of all the chocolates in the world, my own personal favorite is Hershey's. Never mind the wonderful reputations of Swiss chocolate or Dutch chocolate or even Godiva chocolates — I'd rather have a Hershey bar (plain or with almonds, I don't care) or a package of Hersheyettes.

So it should come as no surprise that when I heard Hershey's had introduced a new milk chocolate bar called Symphony, I had to find one to check it out for taste, price and advertising accuracy. (No, the young taste-testers didn't have anything to do with this taste-test. Some things are best handled by the grown-ups.)

Four or five of my co-workers and I sampled the bar one Monday morning. (Chocolate on Monday can sweeten the entire week, you know. So can chocolate on Tuesday, Wednesday, etc.) The Symphony bar we tried was plain milk chocolate, although I have heard it also comes with nuts or with toffee bits.

A 1.4-ounce bar cost about 35 cents, the same as most of the other single-serving candy bars at the candy counter.

According to information from a company representative, the Symphony bar is the first milk chocolate bar Hershey's has introduced in almost 100 years. It is supposed to be more of a "European style" chocolate than the regular Hershey bar, and have more of a milky flavor and texture.

Label information says the bar is made from sugar, cocoa butter, milk, chocolate, soya lecithin and vanillin. I thought it was interesting that chocolate was listed fourth on the ingredients list, just ahead of the emulsifier and the artificial flavoring. This is supposed to be a chocolate bar, after all.

In the taste test — well, do the words "New Coke" tell you anything? A few years ago, Coca-Cola tried to improve their product, which didn't need improving in the first place, and their customers protested.

We decided that Hershey's has performed the Coca-Cola corporate shuffle in trying to improve a perfectly wonderful product. In our test, five out of six votes were cast against the Symphony bar. We thought it was too milky and not chocolatey enough, and that it left almost an artificial-sweetener aftertaste. Perhaps it tasted too European for our West Texas tastes, who knows. But only one taster liked the flavor, and he isn't eating chocolate anymore. After a bite of the Symphony bar, I can understand why.

To the Hershey company, all I can say is this — if it ain't broke, don't fix it.

Some toys dangerous playthings for toddlers

By BARRY MEIER
New York Times News Service

A toy producer is poised to start warning that one of its products might pose a choking hazard to young children, signaling a major change in the way toys are labeled.

The new label is expected to be among the most explicit used in an industry often reluctant to disturb images of playtime pleasures with messages of gloom. It is likely to rekindle the long-simmering debate over toy warnings.

The action follows talks between the New York State attorney general's office and the toy producer, following a report that a young child was injured after inhaling a small toy part. The child was younger than the age recommended on the toy's label.

"This manufacturer is acting in a way we'd like to see all toy producers act," said Phyllis Spaeth, an assistant attorney general.

Ms. Spaeth declined to identify the toy maker or to provide other details.

The development is the latest in an emotionally charged battle that pits safety advocates, who contend that toy labels should be as explicit as those on any other product, against manufacturers, who say their messages are getting through without resorting to unsettling language.

In the middle is the most vulnerable class of consumers, children, typically under age 3, who are most likely to swallow small objects.

BETWEEN OCTOBER 1987 and September 1988, almost half of the 37 toy-related children's deaths reported to the federal Consumer Product Safety Commission involved the ingestion of objects like balloons, balls, marbles and toy parts.

Though toy makers often use the phrase "For 3 Years and Up" to indicate a possible choking hazard, research by the Johns Hopkins Injury Prevention Center in Baltimore suggests that many consumers view such a message as merely a suggestion that the toy is appropriate for older children, not as a warning that it poses a hazard.

"What parent or grandparent doesn't think that their 2-year-old functions at the level of a 4-year-old," said Stephen Teret, the center's director.

Indeed, a trip down the aisles of a toy store can be confusing if you do not understand the government's policy on toy labeling and how the industry addresses it.

The choking hazard posed by small parts is a case in point. These are defined as any toy or toy part that will fit into a cylinder about the same size as a toddler's windpipe. Because toddlers are apt to stick anything in their mouths, the federal government in the early 1970s banned the use of small parts in toys intended for children under 3 years old. But the government did not require manufacturers to state that a toy intended for a child age 3 or older contained small parts or posed a choking hazard to a younger child.

The toy industry has adopted a voluntary labeling standard, and typical labels include admonitions like "For Ages 3 and Over," "Not Intended for Children Under 36 Months or Younger" and "Contains Small Parts."

ONE COMPANY that uses "For Ages Over 3" is M.&S. Shillman Inc., a toy importer and manufacturer in Brooklyn, N.Y. Jay Shillman, a vice president of the family-run company, said the label was sufficient because people understand that the company's products, like accessories for dolls like Barbie, are meant for older children who do not put toys in their mouths.

Shillman said the company had never received a report about a child's choking on one of its toys.

Other makers like Kenner Products, a division of Tonka Corp., use negative language. One of its labels reads: "CAUTION: Not Recommended for Children Who Still Put Objects in Their Mouths. Contains Small Parts."

The language was adopted in the mid-1980s, when federal regulators were raising concerns about labeling, said Karl Wojahn, the vice president of product integrity at Kenner. The language was chosen after a marketplace survey, he said, adding that Kenner has never received a report about choking.

But some children's advocates say that even labels like Kenner's are not enough.

Dr. Joseph Greensher, the medical director of the Winthrop-University Hospital in Mineola, N.Y., said warnings that a toy is not suitable for children who chew playthings may be interpreted to mean only that a toy tastes bad.

"To toy makers, choke is a dirty word because it may turn you off from buying a toy," said Greensher, a member of the American Academy of Pediatrics, a group that supports more explicit toy-safety warnings.

TOY MAKERS reject such contentions, and thus far federal regulators have sided with them. Despite a 1985 product-safety commission report that raised broad questions about the adequacy of toy safety labels, officials said they were not likely to demand any broad industry action.

"It is difficult to link injuries associated with toys to a lack of labeling," said Christine Nelson, a compliance officer at the commission.

Nonetheless, some politicians are interested in the issue.

In February, bills were reintroduced in Congress that would require more explicit toy labeling.

And a safety commission study is expected to show that a number of toddlers under age 3 have choked on toys intended for older children, said Deborah Tinsworth, a commission statistician.

Consumer advocates say guideline not strict enough

New York Times News Service

In setting the standard for small parts in toys, federal regulators use plastic tube 1.25 inches in diameter, about the size of a toddler's windpipe. If a toy or toy part fits into the tube, it can't be intended for use by children under the age of 3.

But pointing to a 1983 government study, which showed that dozens of children choke on larger objects, consumer advocates and others are urging the federal Consumer Product Safety Commisssion to widen its small-parts definition to include objects up to 1.68 inches in diameter. That size is already used for pacificers and rattles.

Toy-industry officials say the current standard for small toy parts is safe. The safety commission is studying the issue.

Tubes to test small parts are available for $1 from Toys to Grow On, P.O. Box 17, Long Beach, Calif. 90801; 213-603-8890.

Consumer group asks for recall of 'dangerous' cribs

By LISA M. HAMM

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group founded to promote baby crib safety said it ask the Consumer Product Safety Commission to recall millions of cribs because protruding corner posts can snag a child's clothing and cause strangulation.

The Danny Foundation, named for a California boy who became brain-damaged after his shirt got caught on a crib post, is seeking a ban on protruding corner posts or knobs on cribs.

"It is time for the government and crib manufacturers to acknowledge these dangerous cribs and prevent further deaths and injuries," said Jack Walsh, executive director of the foundation.

Nearly 50 children have died and two have been left permanently brain damaged since 1973 as a result of getting caught on crib posts, the foundation's petition said.

The current voluntary safety standard for cribs adopted in 1984, which allows corner posts to protrude five-eighths of an inch, doesn't protect against strangulation because that is still long enough to catch an infant's clothing, necklace or pacifier cord, the foundation said in a statement. It said a recent study of children climbing out of cribs found that two became caught on cornerposts that complied with the standard.

"Believe it or not, when this standard was adopted, consumers in the group opted for the five-eighths-inch standard because it allowed for a less expensive crib — almost $16 at the retail level on a price of $110 for a crib," Aaron Locker, general counsel of the Juvenile Products Manufacturers Association, said on ABC's "Good Morning America."

But Walsh said, "It is clear that the voluntary standard is inadequate. Cribs that comply with the curent standard are as hazardous as the millions of cribs manufactured before the standard."

The foundation, in addition to urging a recall of "unsafe cribs" and a ban on protruding cornerposts, asked the safety commission to mount an information campaign to warn consumers of the dangers of the cribs.

"There are up to 25 million hand-me-down cribs in this country alone" which continue to present a danger, Walsh said.

The Danny Foundation, a non-profit organization dedicated to promoting crib safety, was founded by the family of Danny Lineweaver, a child who became severely brain damaged in July 1984, just short of his second birthday, when his shirt got caught on a post as he was climbing out of his crib. The child remains comatose.

Baby's life may depend on choice of crib

By JUDI HUNT
Hearst News Service

No one saw a hazard in the circular design cut into the headboard of the crib that caused the death of 16-month-old Jessica Knopp. But it turned out to be a perfect noose for the baby to strangle herself on.

Cribs in this country continue to cause more deaths than any other nursery product or equipment, according to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, which cites an average of about 54 deaths per year between 1983 and 1987 due to cribs.

In the Knopp case, 16-month-old Jessica died in January 1988 while in a baby sitter's crib that had been passed down for several generations without any mishaps.

It was a handmade crib, about 75 years old, and had been used by many children, including the baby sitter's own youngsters, says Cindy Knopp, Jessica's mother.

The circular design cut into the headboard "turned out to be a perfect noose for my baby to strangle herself on," says Knopp, who lives with her husband Steve and two children in Paul, Idaho.

Since then, Cindy Knopp and her husband have become advocates for safer cribs, hoping to save lives by telling their story.

"It isn't enough to have industry standards," Cindy Knopp says. "Parents need to take responsibility for checking out cribs themselves. If they have even the slightest doubt about a crib's safety, they shouldn't take a chance, even if it's a good buy."

"It isn't enough to have industry standards. Parents need to take responsibility for checking out cribs themselves. If they have even the slightest doubt about a crib's safety, they shouldn't take a chance, even if it's a good buy."

— Cindy Knopp

GOVERNMENT AND nursery product manufacturers have been making cooperative efforts to improve the safety of cribs and other nursery equipment, says Joan Bergy, regional representative and resident investigator for the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission in the Seattle area.

New cribs are required to meet the agency's safety standards, such as having slats no farther apart than 2⅜ inches, Bergy says. But the real problem comes from older products that are passed from generation to generation or purchased at garage sales, secondhand outlets or through ads, Bergy says.

"It's especially hard for young parents to say no to a crib that was used safely year after year by members of the family, even though the slats are too widely spaced or there are protruding knobs or corner posts," she says. "Or maybe they have little or no choice because they're trying to save money and new cribs cost so much."

She recommends that parents turn down questionable cribs anyway, especially if knobs can't be sawed off or crib hardware is missing.

"Government regulations don't address heights of corner posts, but the nursery products industry standards say corner posts or finials shouldn't be taller than five-eighths of an inch," Bergy says.

THE DANNY Foundation, a non-profit organization devoted to promoting crib safety headquartered in Alamo, Calif., recently filed a petition with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission asking that the agency establish a regulation prohibiting crib corner post protrusions. It also seeks a recall of unsafe cribs already in use.

The foundation was started by Danny Lineweaver's family after the California child, then almost 2 years old, was discovered hanging from the crib's corner post. Five years later, Danny remains in a semicomatose condition with permanent brain damage. Physically healthy, he could live 45 years.

In November, a 10-month-old girl strangled on a crib corner post that complied with the voluntary safety standard, which led to the foundation's current request.

"We've concluded that cribs complying with the current standard are as hazardous as the millions of cribs manufactured before the standard," says foundation spokesman Jack Walsh. "It's clear that the voluntary standard is inadequate."

Dr. Kenneth Feldman, a pediatrician, did a study in 1980 on strangulation deaths of young children. He found some injuries occurred while the youngsters were in the cribs, but not because of the crib design.

"Pacifier cords or clothing got caught on something placed in the crib, like cradle gyms," he says. "Or the children strangled on toy cords or on window cords dangling in or too close to the crib."

ESTIMATED CRIB injuries in 1988 totaled 12,800. Baby walkers and strollers lead in causes of infant injuries, while strollers and carriages are second, and cribs third.

For crib safety brochures and posters, call The Danny Foundation, 1-800-83-DANNY.

To report an unsafe consumer product or a product-related injury, consumers should contact the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission's hot line, 1-800-638-2772.

DEAR ABBY

Mosquito bite sufferer itching to know about AIDS virus transmission

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just finished reading your article stating that the AIDS virus cannot be transmitted by mosquitoes. Needless to say, I was relieved, as I live in Minnesota, where the mosquito is sometimes jokingly referred to as our state bird. However, you did not cite the source of your information. I would also like to know how your experts arrived at their conclusions. — RELIEVED IN MINNESOTA

DEAR RELIEVED: My source is Dr. Merv Silverman, president and spokesperson for the American Foundation for AIDS Research. His conclusion was based on current data compiled by the World Health Organization and the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Studies of more than 100,000 infected individuals clearly show that insects are NOT a problem.

In Africa, those infected with the AIDS virus are in two age groups: (1) from birth to 5 years old, and (2) from 15 to 65 years old. Obviously, mosquitoes do not abstain from biting people who are between 5 and 15 years old.

The first group is infected before birth, and the second through sexual activities, intravenous drug use or blood transfusions.

"In short," says Dr. Silverman, "not one of the over 250,000 cases of AIDS worldwide has been attributed to the bite of insects. If they were a factor in the spread of this disease, tens of millions worldwide and many millions in the United States alone would have AIDS today."

DEAR ABBY: I recently went to a local medical clinic for a routine physical checkup. I was given an examining physician I had never seen before.

I have carried a scar on the inside of my left wrist for 30 years and no doctor has ever questioned me about it. Then all of a sudden this doctor asked, "What's this?"

When I told him I had had a ganglion tumor removed many years ago, he said, "Oh, I thought perhaps you might have tried to take your life some years ago."

I was very indignant and said, "I beg your pardon, Doctor, but I am 56 years old, have been examined by many doctors, and never has any doctor suggested such a thing!"

He replied, "Well, we doctors have to be suspicious of every clue we come across."

I then said, "Excuse me, Doctor. This is not a 'clue' to anything, and I resent the insinuation."

He then proceeded to examine my other arm and noticed a faint mark on my wrist from my watchband. "Look," he said, "Here's another one — are you sure you never attempted suicide?"

Abby, a doctor should be able to tell the difference between a mark caused by a tight watchband and a botched suicide attempt. In any case, I considered his attitude to be unprofessional and cavalier, and I am going to report him to the head of the clinic.

I told a friend about this, and she said perhaps the doctor was trying to be humorous. What are your thoughts? — NO NAME OR CITY, PLEASE

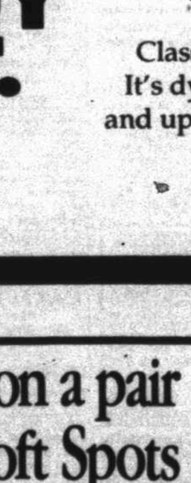

DEAR NO NAME: Humor is inappropriate during a physical examination. But before you report this doctor, be aware that competent physicians routinely record all scars, their locations and causes, so don't fault yours for questioning you. P.S. I think your doctor could use a tact transfusion.

AT WIT'S END

Definition of success is freedom to be yourself

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

I got a request in the mail the other day that asked me to define success. I didn't even have to think about it.

"Success has got to be going on the 'Tonight Show' in a pair of jeans that you've worn before and leaving early." It sounds simple, but it isn't just an act of defiance flying in the face of conformity. It's a plateau that you've reached which says, "I don't care what anyone thinks. I'm going to be me!"

There's a middle-class propriety in me that is inbred, passed from generation to generation. You don't show up at the breakfast table until you've combed your hair. You don't cross your legs at the head table when there is no tablecloth to hide your knees. You never wear the same blouse to work twice in one week.

I've appeared on scores of television talk shows, and I will never forget being on the Mike Douglas show back in the '60s. I was watching Mike singing a duet with Connie Stevens, and her feet were entwined around a stool. I couldn't believe what I saw. The soles of her shoes were worn! I didn't know anyone wore old on TV. From the underwear out, everything on my body had been purchased the week before.

In the ensuing years I have seen rock stars slouched in chairs picking their nails like they're killing time. I have viewed authors in stonewashed jeans that cry for a day of cleaning out the garage. I've watched guests waving and taking their leave on the Carson show because they have someplace else to go. (What's jumping at 5 in the afternoon when the show is taped?)

There are probably only a handful of people who have attained this status. Cher has to be a success. Who else walks around with her tattoos exposed? Cybill Shepherd is one. Who else has the courage to wear Reeboks with a formal dress to an awards gala?

I've heard stars and starlets talk about success. They describe it as "having the freedom of creative independence." The more materialistic ones equate it with limos, a perpetual page at the Polo Lounge, an agent who answers their phone calls and a center table at Spago's.

Parents urged to monitor products for children

By BOBBI IGNELZI
Copley News Service

With more manufacturers issuing product recalls today, the savvy consumer who shops by the creed "buyer beware" should also be living by the motto "owner observe." This is especially true for parents of young children who must monitor their child's safety with the introduction of every product.

It is the responsibility of the consumer to watch for these recalls, which usually are posted in consumer magazines, trade publications and department and hardware stores.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission recommends sending in warranties and product registrations when applicable so manufacturers can notify individual owners of a product defect or recall.

The following is a list of some recent nationwide children's products recalls:

■ Mullins Square Inc. of Austin is voluntarily recalling certain items of its baby apparel. Baby bibs, pants and panties with animal faces or Santa Claus on them have plastic eyes that could present a choking or ingestion hazard to babies or infants.

Some 11,000 sets of baby pants and panties were distributed throughout the country since 1988. About 15,000 sets of sleeved and non-sleeved bibs were sold.

Consumers having the recalled infant clothing should return the product to the retailer with the sales receipt for a refund of the purchase price. If no receipt is available, the retailer will return the product to Mullins Square, who will replace the hazardous eyes and return the unit to the consumer at no cost.

For more information, contact the firm directly by calling Debbie Gideon at (512) 837-7099.

■ More than 3,600 Mother's Helper pacifier holders sold between October 1987 and August 1988 are being voluntarily recalled by Steven Barrie and Co. of Warminster, Pa., because of a potential choking hazard to young children.

The multicolored holders are various shaped, 2-inch plastic discs with a swivel metal clip attached for fastening the holder to the infant's shirt, sleepwear, blanket, etc. The metal clip may come loose from the disc and could pose a choking problem.

Consumers should return the pacifier holders to the store for a full refund of the purchase price. The product also can be sent directly to Steven Barrie & Co., 1055A Louis Drive, Warminster, Pa. 18970, for a refund of the purchase price and postage.

■ The Snoopy Wind-Up Train is being recalled by its manufacturer, Lionel Leisure Inc. of Philadelphia, because the toy breaks apart on impact, creating small parts that could choke young children.

The recalled toy, model No. 711, is a 12-inch-long red and white plastic wind-up train with decorative Snoopy figures.

The commission recommends taking the toy away from young children and returning it to the store where purchased for a refund or exchange. Consumers who have any questions about the recall should call Lionel Leisure directly at (215) 671-3800.

■ Sears, Roebuck and Co. is voluntarily recalling "Smurf" and "Snoopy" ceiling fans because a defective mounting bracket could cause the fans to fall.

Sold through a Sears catalog supplement from November 1984 through January 1985, the 48-inch white ceiling fans feature either "Smurf" or "Snoopy" cartoon characters imprinted on the fan. The fans sold for $129.99 each.

The commission suggests consumers stop using the fan and return it to the nearest Sears store for a full refund of the price and shipping charge.

Dozens arrested in Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Loyalist troops killed 10 rebel soldiers and arrested dozens during the attempt to topple Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, who was held prisoner for several hours in the uprising, the military said.

An overnight curfew kept the streets of Panama City quiet for the second day in a row today.

A "war communique" said all but one of those killed were officers and that 25 people were wounded. The casualty list released Wednesday night was the first issued by the government since Tuesday's attempted coup.

The communique said security forces arrested three members of the High Command and about 35 other officers and soldiers. The arrests of men supposedly among Noriega's most trusted aides suggested the revolt may have had wider support than originally thought.

There were indications the coup attempt also came closer to toppling the Defense Forces chief and Panama's de facto leader than first believed.

A Defense Forces officer said the plotters succeeded in capturing Noriega and holding him for four or five hours at Defense Forces headquarters. A lawyer for Noriega initially had denied that the general was taken captive.

"The surrender came when loyal officers took command of the combat units and gave the rebels a last chance to release the commander and members of his staff or face the consequences," said Lt. Col. Arnulfo Castrejon, director of the Defense Forces Security and Defense Committee.

One Defense Forces source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the rebels had wanted to take Noriega alive, which gave him time to take shelter in a bunker inside the compound and call for help by radio.

Castrejon said Noriega was held for four or five hours. It was unclear if Noriega gained freedom before or after troops loyal to him counterattacked the headquarters and forced the rebel surrender.

Noriega "had tried to calm his captors during the time he was held, trying to avoid a bloodshed," Castrejon said.

In Washington, President Bush came under mounting criticism about the passive role played by U.S. troops, who stood fully armed a few hundred yards away and watched the rebellion fail.

The United States has been trying to topple Noriega since he was indicted on U.S. drug trafficking charges in February 1988, but the Bush administration said it had no role in the coup attempt.

"I'm afraid it's a matter of cold feet. It was a conscious decision not to assist," said Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo. "I'm furious about it."

"It raises questions whether people down there can ever have confidence in the United States," said Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., the senior minority member of the House Foreign Relations Committee.

Members of the civilian opposition in Panama noted that the group that staged the coup attempt did not back democratic reform.

"Their communique indicated they wanted Noriega out and supported the provisional government that Noriega set up," said Ricardo Arias Calderon, an opposition vice presidential candidate in May 7 elections that Noriega annulled after international observers said his candidates had lost by a landslide.

CAR TALK!

CHECK FOR GERBILS UNDER THE HOOD

Dear Tom and Ray:

I have a 1977 Toyota wagon that has turned out to be a great car in all respects except one. Once a week or so, it behaves just as though it were running out of gas. It bucks and falters, then runs smoothly, then bucks and falters — but never quite dies. It has plenty of gas. However, if I pull over and take the gas cap off — even for just a moment — the car runs like a champ! Do you have an explanation for this? — Brooke

TOM: These '77 Toyota wagons are actually powered by four gerbils running on a big exercise wheel under the hood. Every once in a while, they run out of air, and when you take off the cap ...

RAY: Well, believe it or not, my brother is close. It's not the gerbils that need air, it's the gas tank. Fuel systems must ventilate. In the old days, when my brother was middle-aged, a pinhole in the gas cap allowed vaporized fuel to escape and fresh air .o enter. This was mechanically sound, but environmentally screwy. Your Toyota has a much more sophisticated ventilation system. Your vaporized fuel is absorbed in a charcoal canister. When the car is started, the vaporized fuel is sucked back into the engine along with fresh air.

TOM: If the ventilation system is clogged and no air is getting in, the pressure in the tank decreases ... did you pay attention in physics class? If the tank cannot equalize pressure by sucking air through the ventilation system, it starts looking for other places to draw from. In your case, what it's doing is sucking back the fuel that is heading for the engine. When the pressure gets low enough, you get the bucking and faltering. As soon as you take off the gas cap — and hear that whoosh — the pressure in the tank goes back to normal and the car is fine again, at least for a while.

RAY: Have your mechanic check the gas tank ventilation system and repair whatever component is malfunctioning. But just to be sure, check under the hood for any Habitrail boxes or little brown pellets.

Dear Tom and Ray:

I have a problem with the speedometer on my 1956 Buick Roadmaster. When cruising, the needle on the speedometer continues to swing wildly back and forth. What causes this problem and what is the cure for it? — Don

RAY: The speedometer gauge is attached to the transmission via a cable which — in most cars — spins inside a plastic sheathing. Your car was built before plastic was widely used, so your sheathing is probably made of stone or something like BX cable. In any case, when it gets old, the cable begins to fray. And when it gets very frayed, the spinning cable gets hung up on the inside of the sheathing. This causes the speedometer to read less than the actual speed. Eventually, the energy from the driven end of the cable forces it to become unstuck, sending the needle flying up into the Indy range. You need a new speedometer cable, which should be easy to get. I'm sure every neighborhood convenience store carries speedometer cables for these '56 Roadmasters.

TOM: I suggest you leave it alone. This old cow probably can't go more than 30 miles per hour any more. At least this way, you can watch the speedometer surge to 60 and pretend it's 1957 again.
