Tanker captain fired for drinking on job

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — The captain of the oil tanker Exxon Valdez is out of a job today because a federal investigation showed he was legally drunk after his ship ran aground, causing the nation's biggest oil spill.

Capt. Joseph Hazelwood was fired Thursday for violating company rules that ban alcohol on its ships, said Exxon Shipping Co. Inc. President Frank Iarossi.

"We are all extremely disappointed and outraged that an officer in such a critical position could have jeopardized his ship, his crew and the environment through such actions," Iarossi said.

The federal government, meanwhile, said it will not take over the spill cleanup, but will monitor the environmental damage. The tanker ran aground on a charted reef March 24, dumping 10.1 million gallons of oil into Prince William Sound.

Coast Guard Commandant Paul Yost, one of three senior officials who made a fact-finding trip to the spill site, said it was "almost unbelievable" that the ship strayed outside a 10-mile wide shipping lane to run aground.

"This was not a treacherous area, not treacherous in the area where they ran aground," Yost said in Washington on Thursday. "It's 10 miles wide. Your children could drive a tanker up through it."

Hazelwood was the skipper of the 987-foot tanker, but he was not on the bridge when the ship hit Bligh Reef a half-mile outside normal shipping lanes. The ship had just left the Port of Valdez, loaded with crude oil from the trans-Alaska pipeline.

On Thursday, crude oil covered about 600 square miles of the sound once considered one of Alaska's most beautiful marine habitats.

A blood test administered more than nine hours after the accident showed Hazelwood had a blood-alcohol level of 0.061, said William Woody, head of a National Transportation Safety Board team investigating the spill. The Coast Guard limit for operating a commercial vessel at sea is 0.04, Woody said.

Sniper suspect captured

Mexican police Thursday captured the 15-year-old boy they believe was responsible for firing on three American rafters as they floated down the Rio Grande last week.

Led by the suspect's cousin, police arrested the boy at his uncle's home in Melchor Muzquiz, about 125 southeast of where the March 22 shooting incident occurred across the river from Big Bend National Park, Jose Munoz Quintero, police chief in Ciudad Acuna, Mexico, said this morning.

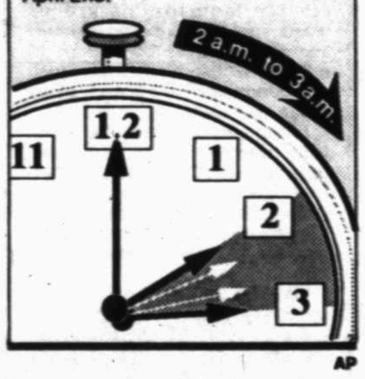

Quintero, speaking through an interpreter in a telephone interview, said the boy told police the rafters fired on him first as he waved to them from atop the canyon walls. The boy said he was tending goats at the time and only fired his .22-caliber rifle at them after the rafters began shooting, Quintero said.

The rafters — Reuben Saage II of Alpine, James Gentry of Houston and Russ Alexander of Riesel — were carrying .45-caliber and 9mm pistols and reportedly fired at least five rounds into the air, park officials have said.

Spring Ahead

It's daylight-saving time again. Remember to set your clock ahead one hour at 2:00 a.m. this Sunday, April 2nd.

Time to change Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Daylight-saving time returns to most of the nation at 2 a.m. Sunday, giving Americans an extra hour of light for summertime recreation.

The clocks, however, won't move an hour ahead in Hawaii, Arizona or some counties of Indiana, which exempted themselves from a 1966 federal law that established the current time-change arrangement.

Standard time will return at 2 a.m. on Oct. 29, the last Sunday in October.

Texas woman sues Donahue, her mother on incest segment

By BOB SABLATURA
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — A Texas woman who gave birth at age 12 after being sexually assaulted by her stepfather sued talk show host Phil Donahue Thursday for revealing details of the incident on nationwide television.

Nancy Booher Anonsen of Galveston claims she was humiliated, embarrassed, frightened, frustrated and anguished when her mother appeared on a segment of "Donahue" in January dealing with incest. She claims Donahue invaded her privacy and exploited her tragedy, either through "vindictiveness" or the "mania for higher ratings."

Also named as defendants in the lawsuit filed in state district court in Galveston County were Miriam "Mickey" Booher, Ms. Anonsen's mother; Jose Pretlo, "Donahue" producer; Multimedia Entertainment Inc., Donahue's production company; and KTRK-TV, which aired the segment locally.

Ms. Booher, contacted at her home in Bryant, Ark., accused her daughter of filing the lawsuit because "she smelled the money" and denied claims she went on the program without her daughter's knowledge.

"As a matter of fact, she was going to go with me and at the last minute, she backed out," Ms. Booher said.

Houston attorney David Berg, who filed the lawsuit on Anonsen's behalf, said that while Donahue and his producers have the right to broadcast anything they please, they must be prepared to deal with the consequences if they behave recklessly.

"They can put whatever they want on the air," Berg said. "But they cannot do it at the expense of Nancy Anonsen. The cost to her is too great."

Since the segment aired, the lawsuit said, Ms. Anonsen has suffered extreme mental anguish and depression as the result of the intrusion into her private affairs.

Steven Fadem, an attorney for the "Donahue" show, refused to comment before seeing a copy of the lawsuit.

According to Berg, Ms. Anonsen gave birth to a son in 1972 following a sexual assault by her stepfather, William W. Booher, an Arkansas state trooper. He has since resigned from the force.

Miriam Booher said that although Booher knew he was the baby's father, both he and Ms. Anonsen kept it a secret from her for almost five years.

There's more than spring in the air at this time of year. Dust, pollen and stinging insects pose threats to the allergy prone.

'Tis the season to stop sneezin' with appropriate allergy aids

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

The purple lollipop had been chomped halfway through, but whether the good-soldier reward softened the blow of three allergy shots was still up in the air.

Standing with a sorrowful look on his face in Dr. John Bray's allergy clinic Thursday, 4-year-old Anthony Easley had little to say about the three injections he received minutes earlier.

But with the flying, stinging insects of springtime taking wing, it's crucial for Anthony to get his injections, said Liles Easley, who brings his son in to the clinic from Seminole once a week.

"In his case, without the shot the next sting could be fatal," Easley said, noting the time when Anthony was 2-years-old and was stung nine times on the head by yellow jackets, resulting in a severe allergic reaction.

But while allergic reactions from insect stings can be prevented using at least two methods — shots or just swatting the critters away — it's a little harder when it comes to fighting the almost-invisible irritants, such as pollens and mold spores.

Arriving about two weeks late because of freezing weather, springtime allergies have just begun to bloom, allergist Dr. John Bray said Thursday.

Grasses, trees — especially mulberry — and dust have begun their yearly assault on eyes and noses, Bray said.

"Dust has all kinds of junk in it," Bray noted, adding that dust sometimes contains pollen, mold spores and dirt which irritates nasal membranes and worsens the effect of other irritants.

Bray said about 25 percent of all Americans are allergic enough to be bothered, while between 7 percent and 10 percent suffer severe allergies, causing them to be sick enough to miss school and work.

"Allergies overall are probably the most common disease process that man suffers from," Bray said. "They make you miserable but they usually don't kill you."

Allergy symptoms include nasal itchiness, nasal drip, sneezing, watery eyes, coughing, a tight-feeling chest and wheezing.

While antigen injections help about 65 percent of those suffering allergies, for some shots have no effect, Bray said. And in other cases, the patient need only buy over-the-counter antihistamines to relieve or prevent the symptoms, he said.

Some patients take shots strictly to prevent severe reaction from bee, wasp and other insect stings, which can cause swelling, fever and in some cases death, Bray said.

"The yellow jackets are out in force right now," he added.

Although springtime in West Texas, with dust storms and blooming mulberry trees, is hard on allergy patients, fall is worse because of the usual seasonal outbreak of viruses, Bray said.

Late summer and early fall also bring increased pollen counts and blooming weeds, while juniper trees bloom in fall and spring and grasses are a problem until October.

Bray offers the following tips to allergy sufferers:

- Simply avoid coming in contact with what causes the allergy. If mowing the grass is a problem, hire somebody else to do it or wear a mask.
- Keep nose clean daily using salt water. This helps preven a buildup of pollen and other irritants in nasal passages.
- Keep the living environment clean of dust, which also contains dust mites.
- Avoid cigarette smoke. Cigarette smoke irritates membranes and can aggravate the effect of things that cause allergic reactions.
- See an allergist if necessary.

Was intervention in oil issues 'improper?'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The House ethics committee expects to complete its investigation of Speaker Wright in mid-April. Following is the third in a series of articles examining specific allegations against Wright.

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — When House Speaker Jim Wright uses his clout, powerful people listen.

In 1979, for example, when Wright spoke as a Texas congressman — and House majority leader — to President Jimmy Carter, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat about the plight of a Fort Worth oil company in the Middle East, Wright got what he wanted.

But that same year, when he talked to Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus about another Texas oil firm, he did not prevail.

The question is whether his sessions with the high and mighty on behalf of the firms were improper and aimed at enriching him personally. Wright has strongly denied that they were.

That is one of several issues that the House ethics committee is probing. Specifically, the panel is expected to report by mid-April whether Wright violated House rules by personally pleading with Carter, Vance and Sadat in March 1979 to let Neptune Oil Co. of Fort Worth continue operating its oil fields in the Sinai peninsula.

The panel is also expected to report whether the speaker ignored the ethics code when he unsuccessfully attempted to reverse an Interior Department decision that stripped Texas Oil and Gas Corp., also of Fort Worth, of gas exploration leases on federal lands in Arkansas.

Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., the new minority whip, has charged that Wright had a financial stake in both companies and that his activities violated clause 3 of House rule 43, which bars members from improperly using political influence for financial gain.

The ethics panel, known as the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, could absolve Wright of these and other charges or recommend that the House consider a reprimand, censure or ouster.

WRIGHT PROBE

On other issues, the committee is focusing on Wright's arrangements to publish a 1984 book, his wife's activities in Fort Worth investment and development firms, and his efforts to persuade federal thrift regulators to go easy on Texas savings and loan institutions.

The panel began looking at the allegations last June at the bidding of Gingrich and Common Cause, a nonpartisan organization that monitors political ethics and calls itself a people's lobby.

Common Cause, however, was not a party to Gingrich's charges that Wright profited from the oil and gas deals, and Gingrich himself has partially backed off his charges involving Texas Oil and Gas Corp.

In the case of Neptune, Gingrich said that Wright asked Carter, Vance and Sadat for the favor after Neptune president, A.W. (Monty) Moncrief of Fort Worth, invited him to join a partnership investing in a gas well.

At the time, early 1979, Moncrief was concerned that Neptune would lose its multimillion-dollar investment in an oil field that the company had developed in the Sinai peninsula.

Under the terms of the 1978 peace accord between Israel and Egypt, which Carter helped negotiate, Israel was to return the Sinai to its Arab neighbor, and Egypt planned to turn the oil field over to another company. In the end, Neptune stayed.

Wright has insisted that he stood to gain nothing from his activities on behalf of Neptune and said he only approached Carter, Vance and Sadat in March 1979 because many of his Fort Worth constituents had money invested in the firm.

The speaker admitted that in February 1979 he invested $20,000 in a partnership with 28 other people, including three members of the Moncrief family, in a gas well owned by Texas Oil and Gas Corp. Wright said the deal was not the risk-free venture Gingrich claimed.

The well began producing that June. Gingrich, citing various press reports, said the investment earned Wright between $70,500 and $222,500 before the well went dry in 1984.

Gingrich's second complaint involves a letter Wright wrote on Sept. 28, 1979, to then Interior Secretary Andrus asking the department to reverse its decision that July which had stripped Texas Oil of leases on 33,000 acres of federal property in Arkansas.

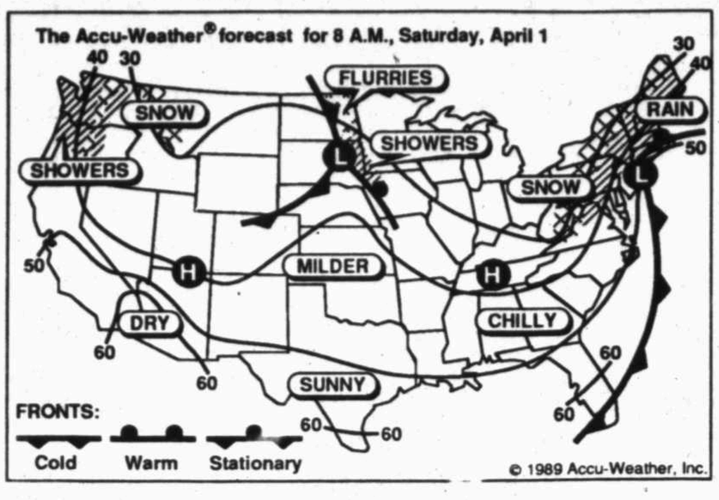

Interior had leased the land in June for $1 an acre but canceled the leases in July after questions were raised about the way they were awarded.

Gingrich at first alleged that Wright owned stock in the company and that the speaker stood to gain from an Interior decision to grant it the leases.

Wright acknowledged that he wrote the letter to Andrus but denied that he had ever bought stock in the company. He insisted that his only involvement with Texas Oil stemmed from the gas well investment with Moncrief. Texas Oil operated that well and was also an investor in the project.

NATION

Severe thunderstorms whipped the lower Mississippi and Tennessee valleys and spawned tornadoes in at least three states, while heavy snow brought a reprise of winter to northern New England.

A tornado ripped through a rural area in northeast North Carolina Thursday afternoon, injuring at least 12 people, leaving as many as a dozen more homeless and seriously damaging one school. Two people were in guarded condition in Halifax Memorial Hospital with severe abdominal and head injuries, an emergency room supervisor said.

A tornado and severe thunderstorms destroyed two mobile homes and downed power lines in eastern Arkansas Thursday evening, but no one was reported injured. Another twister hit northwestern Alabama but there were no reports of injuries or damage.

Thunderstorms during the evening shelled parts of Arkansas, Tennessee and Mississippi with golf ball-size hail, while strong storm winds downed or uprooted trees in Missouri and Kentucky and tore part of the roof off a school at Clarksdale, Miss.

Thunderstorms continued in northern Mississippi and central Tennessee early today, and showers extended into southern parts of Indiana and Ohio. Evansville, Ind., received a little more than an inch of rain in the six hours ended at 1 a.m. EST.

Showers and thunderstorms from the same frontal system also continued in the upper Ohio Valley, southern New England, and along the mid-Atlantic coast and the Carolina coast. Light rain and drizzle dampened the rest of the northern Atlantic Coast and lower Great Lakes.

Snow and sleet continued in Maine and northern New Hampshire, where up to 6 inches fell Thursday evening.

A few showers and thunderstorms continued in central Oklahoma, while further west, a Pacific front scattered rain from northern California and the Pacific Northwest to western Montana.

Today's forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms from the Atlantic Coast to the Mississippi River, with severe thunderstorms likely from Georgia and eastern Tennessee across the Carolinas and Virginia to New Jersey. Snow was predicted for much of Michigan and northern parts of New Hampshire and Maine. Rain also was forecast to be widespread over the Pacific Northwest.

Temperatures at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 11 degrees at Grand Forks, N.D., to 78 at St. Petersburg, Fla.

Government seeking truth on sex

By DEBORAH MESCE

WASHINGTON (AP) — If someone from the federal government asked how often you have sex, what you do and whether you do it with men or women, would you tell them?

Scientists and public health experts say it's worth trying to find out.

If they can find a way to elicit truthful answers to those kinds of intimate questions, they could draw a sexual profile of the country that would serve as a road map for fighting the AIDS epidemic and combatting other sexually transmitted diseases and unwanted pregnancies.

One critic, however, says: "Mom and Pop America just aren't going to answer these questions."

The questions are contained in a pilot survey of 2,300 people to test various ways of getting truthful information and provide some interim measures of sexual activity. Later, a full-scale survey would question 20,000 people.

The information would be gathered confidentially. Those asked to participate would be chosen randomly from selected communities that were not identified.

The proposed $2.1 million pilot survey and the larger survey, expected to cost $15 million, have broad support in the scientific and public health communities, where experts say they are stymied by a lack of accurate data.

"AIDS presents special problems and if you want to understand it you have to understand the basics of sexual behavior," said Charles F. Turner, the director of the AIDS research committee at the National Research Council, an arm of the National Academy of Sciences.

"We don't have any good data at the moment as to what's going on," he said. "These data we need to cope with and to understand what our future is."

Those opposing the survey, however, say health planners already have enough information on the AIDS epidemic and don't need to go snooping around the bedrooms of private citizens.

"I think we all know how AIDS is spread," said Paul Mero, a spokesman for Rep. William Dannemeyer, who is rallying opposition to the survey.

"If you follow certain behavior patterns, you're not going to be at as high a risk."

He also predicted that "Mom and Pop America just aren't going to answer these questions." Those who will, he said, are those who have "a proclivity to talk about these things," which he said will not produce an accurate picture.

The battleground for the survey — sponsored by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, part of the National Institutes of Health, is the Office of Management and Budget, which must review all government-sponsored surveys.

Dannemeyer has called Richard Darman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, which is reviewing the survey, asking him to spike it. Similar opposition has been registered by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

OMB recently decided to delay consideration of the proposal, a sign to survey supporters that the agency is "being overly responsive to political pressures," said William Bailey, AIDS policy officer of the American Psychological Association.

"This data is going to feed into the efforts at projecting rates of (AIDS) infection, which are the basis of billion-dollar decisions about the direction of our health care industry," he said. "To allow this information to be held up because it makes people politically uncomfortable seems to me unconscionable."

The survey attempts to gather information on virtually all aspects of sexual behavior, including how people choose their sexual partners and practices, such as anal sex, a high-risk activity for AIDS transmission, and oral sex, one of the most common ways in which other sexually transmitted diseases are spread.

The survey aims to estimate more accurately the number of gay men, one of the population groups at greatest risk of contracting acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and how many of them also have sex with women.

OMB requested additional information and justification for the survey.

New material submitted by the research agency bolsters its justifications for some of the more sensitive questions and suggests that others more peripheral to the AIDS issue could be deleted.

One of the revisions was in a question about the number of orgasms experienced during a sexual encounter. The survey proposal was revised to collect data on male orgasms only, eliminating the question for females, since ejaculation is principally how the AIDS virus is transmitted.

Questions about masturbation received additional justification as a means to better understand how many people are including it as part of a "safe sex repertoire." However, the survey sponsor said, "this is an area which if cut would not destroy the public health goals of the study."

Study says more urban-dwelling teen-aged boys using condoms

BOSTON (AP) — A survey released today indicates teen-aged boys have become more responsible during the AIDS scare, but researchers caution that those most sexually active appear least likely to use protection.

Condom use among urban teen-agers more than doubled, according to the 1,880 boys surveyed in what researchers said was the first national study of sexual behavior among teen-aged males in the 1980s.

"There's an apparent acceleration in condom use," said Freya Sonenstein of Brandeis University. "And that must be associated with the increased awareness about AIDS."

Overall, the new study showed 60 percent of 15- to 19-year-olds are sexually active. Fifty-eight percent of that group used a condom during the last time they had intercourse, up from 21 percent in 1979.

The data indicates that sexual activity among teen-aged males from the city increased 23 percent since 1979.

"If first intercourse occurred in the past two years, 1987-1988, the odds of using a condom increased 110 percent relative to the base period 1975-1982," according to the study prepared for release today at the Population Association of America's annual meeting in Baltimore.

Sonenstein and Joseph H. Pleck of Wheaton College had Temple University collect the data for comparison to a 1979 survey also conducted by Temple.

Pleck attributed the figures to an increased responsibility among young men, but both doctors said there is room for improvement because the most active men appear to be the least responsible.

"The more partners a guy has had in the last year, the less likely he is to have used a condom at last intercourse," Sonenstein said. "The ones that are very high risk of picking up the virus are the least likely to use what they ought to use."

Sonenstein said young men who were intraveneous drug users, had sex with IV drug users or prostitutes or have had more than five partners in the last year "all have extremely low rates of condom use compared to other boys."

The 1,880 never-married young men between the ages 15 and 19 were interviewed for one hour and asked to fill out a short questionnaire. Because the 1979 study examined 17- to 21-year-olds from metropolitan areas, only the responses from 17- to 19-year-old city youths are comparable.

Seventy-six percent of the 17- to 19-year-olds reported they had been sexually active in the new study, up from 65 percent in 1979.

SHIP

Coast Guard Lt. Ed Wieliczkiewicz said investigators did not know whether the captain consumed alcohol after the boat hit the reef and could have been sober at the time the vessel ran aground. The accident occurred shortly after midnight March 24, and the Coast Guard arrived between 2 a.m. and 2:30 a.m.

"We don't know," Wieliczkiewicz said, adding the Coast Guard also cannot say whether an observer was with Hazelwood at all times after the accident.

Iarossi said Hazelwood, 42, was fired in a notice sent to his Huntington, N.Y., home. Exxon and Coast Guard officials said they did not know his whereabouts. A telephone call to Hazelwood's residence early today was answered by a recording.

Hazelwood has been arrested twice for drunken driving and had his license suspended three times.

Third mate Gregory Cousins, who was piloting the ship without certification when it ran aground, showed no signs of alcohol, nor was there any indication of alcohol in tests administered to helmsman Robert Kagan, Woody said.

But a civilian Coast Guard employee, working in a radar room in Valdez, where tanker traffic is monitored, had a blood-alcohol level of 0.20 when he was tested more than 12 hours after the accident, Woody said.

The worker, Bruce Blandford, told investigators he had begun drinking only after he got off work and was not drunk at the time of the tanker accident. Woody said his superiors reported that Blandford's performance appeared normal.

As the toll from the slick's trail mounted, so did the wrath of Alaskans.

"The anger of our people would be difficult to describe," said Gov. Steve Cowper.

"Anyone who goes up and looks at the slick has to be humbled by it," said Coast Chief Petty Officer Todd Nelson.

President Bush on Thursday called the spill "a major tragedy" and after being briefed by three senior administration officials who had just returned from Alaska predicted that the cleanup effort "will not be easy."

The president backed away from considering a federal takeover of the cleanup operation, a possibility he had mentioned on Monday.

"It seems inevitable that there will be a very substantial impact, particularly on the habitats of sea otters and sea lions," said William Reilly, administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The government also will monitor salmon and herring fisheries, he said.

By Thursday, only a few oiled birds had been found on beaches.

SNIPER

None of the men were injured when someone wearing an orange baseball cap fired possibly 30 times at them from the Mexican cliffs.

Charlie Peterson, Big Bend district park ranger, said this morning that federal misdemeanor charges of possession of firearms could be filed on the men.

"That's still pending," Peterson said. "There's always two sides to every story. I'd like to have all the facts."

Carrying weapons in a national park is prohibited by law, Peterson said, adding that the men's weapons were confiscated. Conviction on the federal firearm possession charge carries a maximum penalty of a year in jail and a $500 fine.

Quintero said he is unsure what charges would be filed against the Mexican juvenile because of his age.

The rafters were traveling through San Vicente canyon on when a sniper fired on them at about 4:15 p.m. The men dove in the river and hid behind rocks and shrubs until dark, when they hitchhiked back to Rio Grande Village in the park, they said.

The hunt for the boy began Monday when a five-man posse searched in and around the towns of Solis and San Vicente, just south of the shooting site, Quintero said.

The suspect, who lived in that area in the town Piedritas, had fled by the time police arrived, and police returned empty handed to Ciudad Acuna at 11 p.m. Wednesday, Quintero said.

After questioning two possible witnesses to the shooting Thursday morning, police again set out at night, arresting the boy at his uncle's home, where the suspect's father also was.

Peterson commended the Mexican police on their efforts to pursue the suspect, adding that he was impressed with their response to the incident.

The latest shooting occurred about 100 miles downstream from a similar but more tragic incident in Novemeber, when a 40-year-old Eastland man died protecting his wife from bullets fired by snipers from cliffs on the Mexican side. The man, Michael Heffley, and his wife also were rafting down the Rio Grande.

Four youths, a U.S. resident alien and three Mexican nationals, were arresting and are awaiting trial in the earlier shooting.

DONAHUE

Ms. Booher divorced her husband last year and told Ms. Anonsen that she wanted to go public with the story, Berg said. But Ms. Anonsen refused to cooperate, saying it would be too painful.

According to the lawsuit, Ms. Booher appeared on the "Donahue" show without Ms. Anonsen's knowledge or consent and neither Donahue nor any member of his staff contacted Ms. Anonsen prior to the broadcast.

Ms. Anonsen's name was not used during the show, Berg said, but there was no attempt to disguise her mother's identity and viewers familiar with Ms. Anonsen and her mother were able to identify her.

Houston firm donates plastic to hatcheries

HOUSTON (AP) — A local manufacturer has given 18,900 square feet of thick plastic sheeting so that Alaskan fishermen can build a barrier to protect fish hatcheries from encroaching oil offshore Valdez.

Gundle Lining Systems Inc. worked overnight to make the 840-foot long roll of high density polyethylene that was flown to Alaska Thursday.

"If this works, we'll be sending out several miles of this," company spokeswoman Sara Barber said. "If they need it, we'll donate it."

Gundle manufactures the thick plastic and installs it as liners for landfills, hazardous waste sites, portable water storage and leaching operations in mining. It also lined some cooling ponds used by NASA in its space launches.

But Ms. Barber said this is the first time the plastic has been used as part of a floating protective barrier against an oil spill.

The gift came as a result of an inquiry from an Alaskan commercial fisherman, Ms. Barber said.

"We did the first lined landfill in Alaska," she said. "This fisherman contacted the engineering group on that job, got our number and called us."

Mishap still unexplained

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief of the Coast Guard says he's amazed that the Exxon Valdez could have veered so far off course in a shipping lane that is so wide "your children could drive" through it.

Nearly a week after the Exxon tanker ripped open and unleashed an environmental nightmare on Alaska's Prince William Sound, investigators do not yet have a clear reason for the accident that caused the country's worst oil spill.

President Bush on Thursday called the spill "a major tragedy" and after being briefed by three senior administration officials who had just returned from Alaska predicted that the cleanup effort "will not be easy."

Survey: More than 1,200 children died of child abuse in '88

NATION

CHICAGO (AP) — Drug use in major U.S. cities is fueling the rise in child abuse, which killed more than 1,200 youngsters in 1988, a survey shows.

"It's hard to think of treating the problem of child abuse before treating the problem of drug abuse," said Leslie Mitchel, co-author of a survey released Thursday by the Chicago-based National Committee on the Prevention of Child Abuse.

Child abuse deaths rose 5 percent in 1988 to 1,225, compared with 1,163 deaths the year before, the committee said in its annual report on child abuse. The report was based on a 50-state survey.

More than 2.2 million child abuse reports were filed nationwide last year, about 3 percent more than in 1987, the committee estimated, using data from 41 states and the District of Columbia.

Data from other states were unavailable, said the committee, which gathered statistics by telephone from the federal liaisons for child abuse and neglect in each state.

Of the 32 states that could provide information about problems linked to child abuse, 22 cited substance abuse "as the dominant characteristic among their caseloads," the report said.

"In the District of Columbia, for example, almost 90 percent of the caretakers reported for child abuse are active substance abusers," the committee said. "While nationwide, the percentage of cases involving substance abuse has historically remained at 30 percent to 40 percent, the current population includes a greater number of more violent and dependent drug addicts."

Ms. Mitchel, who wrote the 21-page report with Deborah Daro, said state representatives "wished they could go back to the days of heroin and marijuana," rather than having to cope with cocaine and its powerful derivative, crack.

Addictions to cocaine are more expensive to maintain, "so the parents' attention is focused on getting the drug, and the dependency itself consumes their time," Ms. Mitchel said.

Abusers tend to be "off in another world," and more likely to neglect their children, she said.

Katie Bond, a spokeswoman for the Denver-based American Association for Protecting Children, which gathers child abuse statistics for the federal government, said the new findings are probably on target.

"We always come up with approximately the same figures," she said.

But increasing reports of child abuse and fatalities have not resulted in more money to combat the problem, the committee's report said.

"In 1988, only 12 states received increases in their child welfare budgets, and the majority of these funds merely provided for cost of living increases," the report said.

The committee recommended:

- Increasing child welfare budgets to provide better investigation of child abuse reports and better resources to solve the problem.
- Adding hot lines and crisis intervention services.
- Expanding educational and support services to pregnant women and new parents.
- Spreading the burden of protecting children by increasing the involvment of medical, mental health and educational systems.

"Child abuse will remain a serious public health problem in this country until we as a nation turn our attention to prevention," said the committee's executive director, Anne H. Cohn.

'89 Pulitzers awarded to newspapers

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1989 Pulitzer Prizes went to newspapers that combated alcoholism among Alaskan natives, brought millions of dollars in mortgage money to poor neighborhoods and plugged tax loopholes.

Thursday's announcement of the awards also left an amateur photographer incredulous that he received one, saying he thought he had a "better chance of flying to the moon" than winning a Pulitzer.

The Philadelphia Inquirer and Chicago Tribune each won two prizes in journalism, while arts awards went to Wendy Wasserstein's "The Heidi Chronicles" for drama; Anne Tyler's "Breathing Lessons" for fiction; and Neil Sheehan's "A Bright Shining Lie: John Paul Vann and America in Vietnam" for general non-fiction.

"It's really fun to win a Pulitzer Prize," said Pat Dougherty, city editor of the Anchorage Daily News, winner of the Pulitzer for public service. "It will give us a chance to reiterate the point of the stories done in the first place: We've got a serious problem up here."

The problem, alcoholism among Alaskan natives, was covered exhaustively in a nine-day series. As a result, state legislators made bootlegging whiskey in native villages a felony and gave villages more power to regulate or ban liquor; special grants were arranged to fight suicide in rural areas.

Bill Dedman of the Atlanta Journal-Constitution won the prize for investigative reporting for his series on racial discrimination by lending institutions in Atlanta. Within weeks of its publication, the banks announced far-reaching changes in their operations in the city's black areas, along with a $72 million fund for mortgages in those neighborhoods.

Dedman, who left the newspaper in February for a job with The Washington Post, said he felt the decision to run his stories took guts on the part of the newspaper's editors.

"In the face of phone calls and letters and not so subtle pressures right up in their faces, they didn't blink a bit. There's something to be said for that," Dedman said.

The Philadelphia Inquirer was cited for feature writing — David Zucchino's series "Being Black in South Africa" — and in national writing, for a seven-part series by Donald L. Barlett and James B. Steele on loopholes inserted in the 1986 tax reform bill for special interests.

At The Orange County (Calif.) Register, confetti was showered over Edward Humes, who won the specialized reporting award for stories on Southern California's military establishment.

Ron Olshwanger, 51, a furniture wholesaler from Creve Coeur, Mo., won the spot news photography prize for a picture of a firefighter trying to save a 2-year-old girl. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch acquired rights to the photo.

"Who'd have ever thought I'd win a Pulitzer Prize? I'd figure I have a better chance of flying to the moon," said Olshwanger.

Champagne baths were administered to Manny Crisostomo of the Detroit Free Press, winner of the feature photography award, and to Jack Higgins of the Chicago Sun-Times, winner of the award for editorial cartooning.

But the drinks were non-alcoholic at The Courier-Journal of Louisville, Ky., which won the general news reporting prize for its coverage of a bus crash blamed on a drunken driver that killed 27 students.

Each award carries with it a $3,000 prize, except the public service award, which is recognized with a gold medal. The Courier-Journal's prize will be donated to a fund for the crash victims.

Two international reporting prizes were awarded — to Glenn Frankel of The Washington Post, for reports from the Middle East, and to Bill Keller of The New York Times, for his work in the Soviet Union.

The explanatory journalism award went to reporter David Hanners, photographer William Snyder and artist Karen Blessen of The Dallas Morning News, for their report on a 1986 air crash, its aftermath and implications.

Michael Skube of The News and Observer of Raleigh, N.C., won the award for criticism. The commentary prize went to Clarence Page of the Chicago Tribune; the other Tribune award, editorial writing, went to Lois Wille, who also won a Pulitzer in 1963 for public service with the Chicago Daily News.

Federal government spends most per resident in Virginia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government spent $5,953.71 per resident in Virginia in 1988, moving the commonwealth past Alaska to claim the top ranking in per capita receipt of federal dollars.

Alaska slipped to third, with federal spending totaling $5,193.29 per resident, according to a report released Thursday entitled "Federal Expenditures by State for Fiscal Year 1988."

Second in 1988 was New Mexico with federal spending of $5,751.54, moving it up from fourth a year earlier.

Maryland, third in 1987, fell to fourth with per capita spending of $5,113 last year, the study found.

Only those four states managed to receive federal spending of $5,000 or more per capita, largely a result of military bases or location near Washington.

Virginia topped the list with its major naval and Marine bases and numerous government operations in suburbs of Washington. The nation's capital itself — not ranked among the states — recorded per capita spending totaling $24,607.95 in fiscal 1988.

At the other end of the scale was Michigan, ranking last with per capita federal spending of $2,543.17. A year earlier Michigan had been in 49th spot, but for 1988 it slipped to last as Wisconsin moved up two places.

Nationally, the federal government spent an average of $3,545.13 per person last year, with spending above average in 18 states and the District of Columbia and below average in the remainder.

Overall the federal government spent $409 billion in individual benefits for Americans last year, including such programs as Social Security, Medicare and food stamps.

The spending analysis also included $189 billion in purchasing by the Defense Department and other agencies; $134 billion in federal workers' salaries and wages; $115 billion in grants to state and local governments and $37 billion in research grants, agriculture subsidies and other items.

Medicare payments averaged $208.58 for hospitals and $134.48 for other medical supplemental spending per resident.

Judge expected to rule on Reagan testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North's lawyers say Ronald Reagan should be summoned back from "the masses" so the former president can testify whether he told his aides to lie to Congress about secretly assisting the Contras.

Saying that Reagan is "clearly a material witness," North lawyer Barry Simon argued Thursday for a court order to compel Reagan's appearance. U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell was expected to rule today.

Reagan attorney Theodore Olson opposed the request, claiming the ability of the president "to exchange confidences" with top aides is at stake. Gesell retorted: "We're not talking about confidences. We're talking about (possible) instructions" to subordinates to lie to Congress.

"What is the problem of determining in this case whether former President Reagan directed or did not direct Lt. Col. North, (former national security advisers Robert) McFarlane and (John) Poindexter to lie to Congress?"

Olson said, however, that authorization to lie may not be a defense for lying and North has provided no factual basis to suggest that Reagan issued any such instruction.

Simon argued that no privileges would be violated by having Reagan testify.

"In this country a president is up from the masses and when his time is over he goes back to the masses," he said. "We are talking about a person who is retired from public office."

North is accused of preparing letters to Congress in 1985 falsely denying that he assisted the Contras and of lying to the House Intelligence Committee in 1986 by making similar denials.

McFarlane has testified he told Reagan about the congressional inquiries in 1985 and the president agreed that whatever answers were supplied would be controversial. McFarlane said that was the extent of the conversation, and he gave no indication that Reagan provided any guidance.

Summarizing the issue Thursday, Gesell asked: "Did the president know what Poindexter and McFarlane were sending up to the Hill? Did the president approve those letters and the non-disclosure that is implied?"

Justice Department lawyer Stephen Saltzburg said that having Reagan testify would create problems. Once courtroom questioning of Reagan began, he said, it would lead "to other areas" that could raise national security concerns.

"Some form of interrogatory (written questions and answers) would be the appropriate first step" if Gesell determines Reagan's testimony is needed, said Saltzburg.

Ambassador asks U.S. to remove Syrian troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lebanon's ambassador is seeking the moral support of the United States in calling for the removal of Syrian troops from his country, asking President Bush to help end the Middle East nation's "strangulation."

"I appeal to you, not for military or financial assistance, but rather for peace — by calling for an immediate halt to the fighting in Lebanon," Ambassador Abdallah Bouhabib said in a letter to Bush on Thursday. "The free world, and the Lebanese in particular, hold you in highest esteem as a champion of human rights and dignity."

Syrian troops have attacked Beirut's main fuel depot in battles with Christian army units. Bouhabib told Bush that administration officials "continue to ignore Syria's destructive role in Lebanon."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said there would be no immediate comment from the White House on the request.

The attack on the fuel depot caused fires and explosions that forced 50,000 residents to flee. Butane was reported leaking from nearby tanks and exploding in balls of fire in Christian east Beirut.

Lebanese police said Syrian gunners fired at least six Katyusha rockets into east Beirut, killing two people and wounding three. He said shrapnel and glass shards from the gas explosions wounded 14 people.

Thursday's casualties brought the toll to 125 killed and 405 wounded in the artillery duel that began March 8 between the 20,000 Christian troops commanded by Gen. Michel Aoun and an alliance of Syrian forces and Walid Jumblatt's Druse militia. Most of the casualties are civilians.

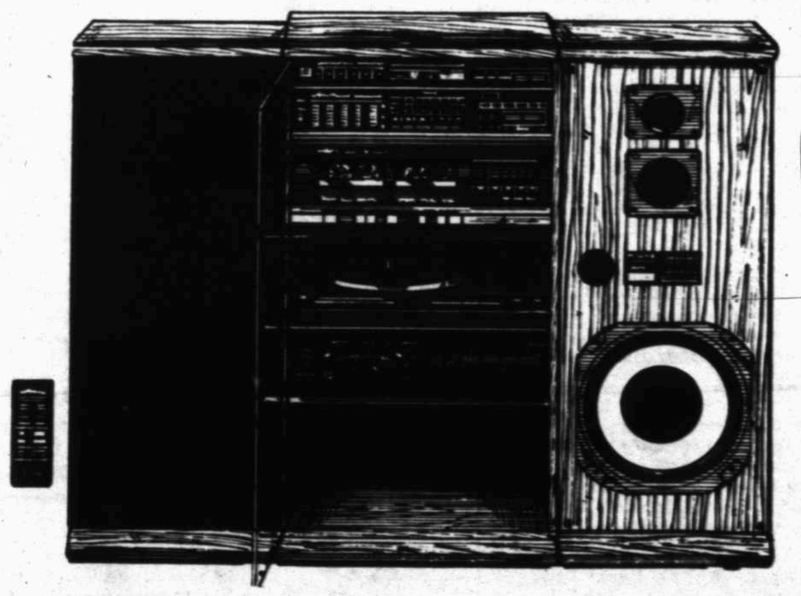

Bush, in a speech March 18 at a dinner in honor of John Sununu, the White House chief of staff who is of Lebanese descent, said he had "deep affection" for Lebanon.

"I have been there many times as a private citizen before I got involved in public life," Bush said. "And I expect every American looks at Lebanon today with agony in his heart and concern, hoping that he or she, in some way, can find a way to make a difference."

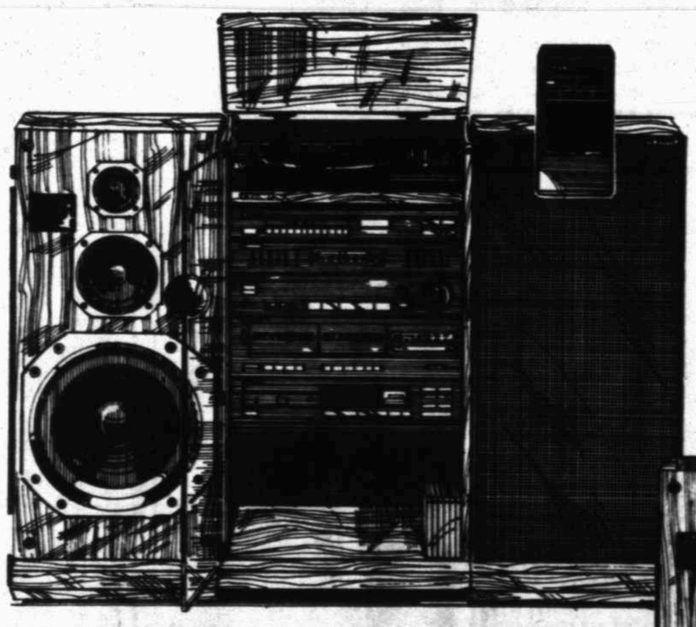

Bush concluded: "As president I want to make a difference."

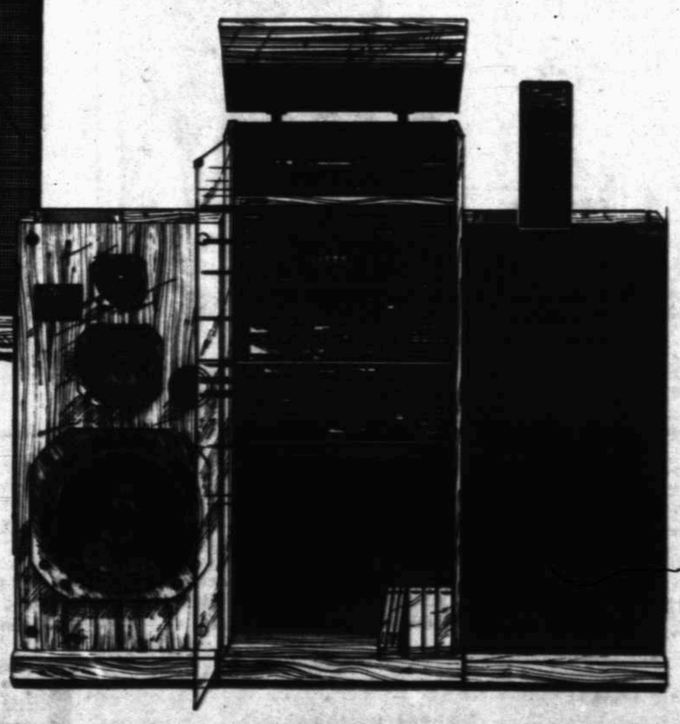

Since that speech, Bouhabib said, more than 100 Lebanese have been killed and 300 wounded.

Mayor paid $10,000 to serve on board

LOS ANGELES (HNS) — Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley was paid at least $10,000 a year to serve on the board of directors of Valley Federal Savings and Loan Association at a time when the institution was disputing a $2.7 million tax bill from City Hall, records show.

In fact, from 1978 to the present, Bradley received at least $71,800 in fees from the savings institution, according to proxy statements and Bradley's own financial disclosure reports.

Additional Los Angeles City Council members have voiced concern about Bradley's ties with another financial institution, Far East National Bank. They urged Bradley to publicly explain his relations with the bank "to remove any doubts" — as Councilman Mike Woo put it.

Bradley last week acknowledged he received $18,000 as a consultant to Far East at a time when the city had business dealings with the institution. Two councilmen have already asked for a city attorney's investigation and the council is scheduled to take up the matter Tuesday.

Information about Bradley's ties to Valley Federal are contained in his financial disclosure statements. It could not be determined exactly how much he has received, since the forms require public officials to indicate amounts only in general categories, such as more than $10,000.

Bush feels 'wonderful'

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Barbara Bush, saying she feels "wonderfully well" despite a thyroid condition that caused her to lose 18 pounds, is maintaining a schedule of activity that indicates she's not a bit slowed down.

Looking fit and perky on Thursday, she told a reception at the White House that she feels great. She is taking medication to control her ailment, known as Graves disease.

"So many of you were very, very kind to ask how I feel," she said to about 100 people who gathered for a Family Friends Project tea.

"I feel pretty tired," Mrs. Bush said. "I got up at 8 and played tennis with three friends. I worked at my desk for two hours. I went to a lunch with George Bush. I just met with Martha Graham upstairs. I'm meeting with you now. And George and I are having a large reception this evening.

"Thank you for asking how I feel. I feel wonderfully well."

The first lady brushed aside subsequent questions about her condition and showed exasperation at continued questions about her health.

U.S. death rate drops

ATLANTA (NYT) — Aided by an 18 percent decline in the death rate from heart disease, the nation's leading killer, the nation's overall death rate dropped from 950 per 100,000 people in 1979 to 873 per 100,000 in 1986, the Centers for Disease Control here reported Thursday.

The fewer deaths from heart disease and strokes reduced the nation's overall death rate by 8 percent from 1979 to 1986, but deaths from lung diseases linked to smoking continue to rise. Nearly 2.1 million Americans died in 1986 from all causes.

Although deaths from coronary heart disease and stroke dropped, the death rate from lung cancer rose 15 percent, and the death rate from other lung diseases rose 33 percent.

Lung diseases kill 71,000 Americans per year, compared to 593,000 killed by heart disease and 125,000 killed by stroke.

Cheney says even more bases might be closed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney says the budget crunch might prompt him to ask Congress to close additional military bases around the country, but he's not prepared to reduce the number of troops stationed in Europe.

Cheney

Speaking with wire service reporters Thursday, the new defense chief said a base-closing program launched last year by former President Reagan was quite an idea.

"We may well want to go farther and start again," he continued.

But as for withdrawing American troops from Europe, "I think what we should do with respect to our commitments in Europe is meet those commitments and those commitments haven't changed," Cheney said.

"They may conceivably change as a result of the ongoing negotiation, the conventional force reduction talks. But there's no reason now why anybody, least of all the secretary of defense, should be talking about withdrawing forces from Europe."

The former Wyoming congressman said he understood that closing military bases created problems for his former colleagues, but said "I just have to believe that there are opportunities for economies in reviewing a base structure that has been basically unchanged for 50 or 60 years."

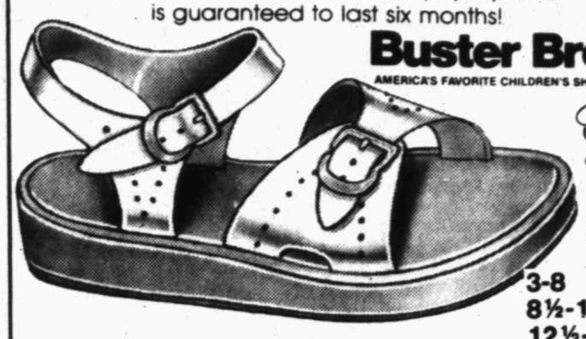

"I'm not ready to make an announcement today," he continued. "But I think if you're going to look at finding ways to maintain the nation's defenses with less money...then I have no choice as secretary but to look for ways to save money. And one of those ways is to close bases that aren't necessary, to consolidate operations and to try to create a leaner, more efficient infrastructure for our military forces."

Cheney also disclosed on Thursday that he had just approved plans submitted by 12 states to step up the use of their National Guard units in fighting drug trafficking. His approval means the 12 states will be eligible for extra federal funds totaling $11.8 million to finance such National Guard operations.

The defense chief, who is just completing his second week in office, said he wants to do everything possible to provide military support to authorities fighting the drug trade but doesn't want to see soldiers being used as policemen.

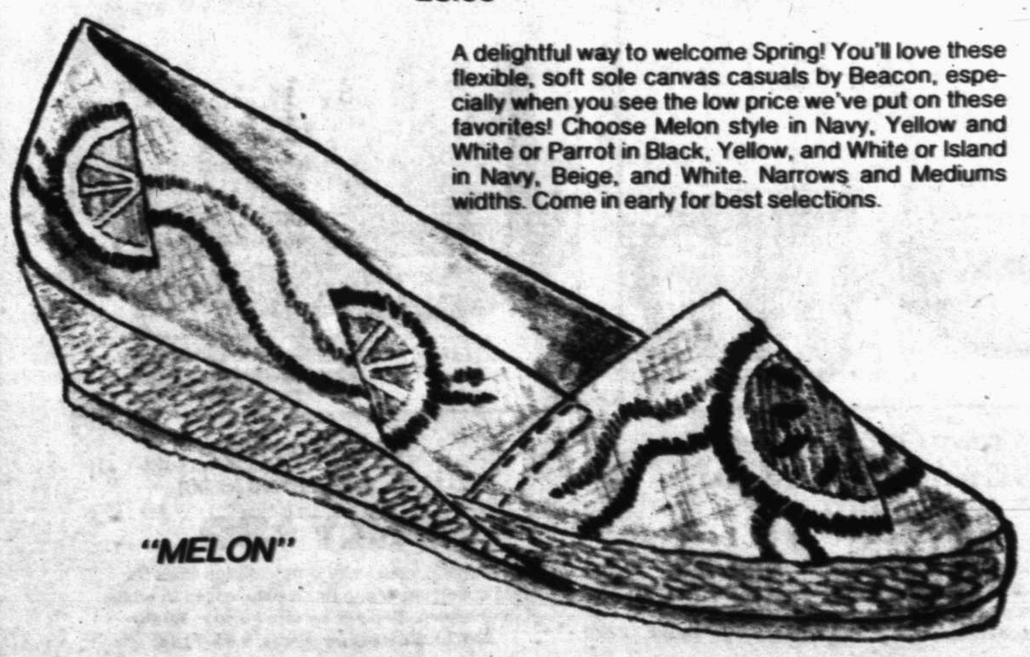

He also agreed he has no magic answer to dealing with Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, who has been indicted on drug charges in Florida. Noriega is a problem the Bush administration "inherited" from the administration of former President Ronald Reagan, which tried unsuccessfully to pressure him from office after he was indicted, Cheney said.

"It obviously is a continuing problem," he said.

Venture into closed community wins prize for Dallas paper

STATE

DALLAS (AP) — They ventured into a "closed community," and three journalists from The Dallas Morning News brought back the Pulitzer Prize for their report of a National Transportation Safety Board investigation into a 1986 plane crash.

The prize, awarded Thursday, was the second for the newspaper in four years. The Pulitzer Prizes, awarded annually by the Columbia University School of Journalism, are the newspaper industry's highest honor.

The award for explanatory journalism went to reporter David Hanners, photographer William Snyder and artist Karen Blessen for "Anatomy of An Air Crash: The Final Flight of 50 Sierra Kilo."

Hanners said one of the team's biggest obstacles was getting experts in the aviation community to talk openly.

"They can be a very closed community," Hanners said. "They kind of have the feeling people on the outside really don't understand them. It took some work convincing them that we were in it for the long haul. We wanted to understand who they were and what they did — and why they did it — so we could tell their story."

Howard Swindle, The Morning News assistant managing editor-projects, said, "What's special about this project is the fact that a reporter had a unique idea about a topic that historically has been inaccessible.

"People in the media had grown so accustomed to the fact that the NTSB was a sequestered organization that we apparently took it for granted that they would be that way from here on out," he said.

Burl Osborne, president and editor of The Morning News, described the project as a "wonderful step forward" in public service by a newspaper.

"It takes a very complex subject that we hear a lot about but don't understand very well at all — and explains it in terms that anyone can understand," Osborne said. As a result, he said, the public was able to "make judgments about the performance of the institutions that are supposed to guarantee air safety."

Cynthia Vespereny, a spokeswoman at Columbia School of Journalism, said officials who administer the prize believed Ms. Blessen was the first graphic artist to receive a Pulitzer.

Ms. Blessen said she hoped the award has an impact on news arts departments across the nation.

"I think it will open up the field for artists who do what they do best," she said. "And that is to present information in visual context that cannot always be done with words and photos."

The 12-page special section examined from start to finish the investigation by the NTSB of the April 4, 1986 crash of a twin-engine jet carrying executives of a New Jersey company back east following a multi-million dollar business deal in Dallas.

The plane crashed in stormy weather near Redwater, Texas, killing all seven aboard. The NTSB report, filed 22 months later, cited controller error and malfunctioning radar equipment.

About 80 staffers were gathered in the newsroom when the prize was announced. The staff burst into applause for several minutes as Hanners, Snyder and Ms. Blessen hugged one another. Also in attendance was Hanners' wife, Casey, who freelances for the newspaper.

"There's a ton of people to thank," Hanners told his colleagues. "I just want to thank everyone here. Even though our three names are on it, it was a team effort. It was a relatively simple story, eloquently told with words, pictures and graphics."

Snyder said simply, "Thanks." Egged on by his colleagues, he then said: "So where's the party?"

Snyder later told The Associated Press: "This is wonderful. It's what you shoot for when you get into this business."

The Morning News won its first Pulitzer Prize, for national reporting, in 1986. Reporters Craig Flournoy and George Rodrigue won the award for an investigation of federally subsidized housing.

Hanners said he never thought about winning the honor as he worked on the project.

"But once we published it, there hasn't been a day go by that I haven't thought about it."

Dallas Morning News staffers celebrate after learning of their Pulitzer Prize win for explanatory journalism Thursday afternoon. They won for a report on a 1985 plane crash. From left are: reporter David Hanners, artist Karen Blessen and photographer William Snyder.

Judge's order closes Gilley's indefinitely

PASADENA (AP) — A judge has ordered Gilley's nightclub, a local institution that helped shape Houston's image as a center of country-western culture, to close its doors indefinitely.

"That's it. It's over, they won, they booted us out today," Sherwood Cryer, the club's longtime owner, said Thursday.

Cryer lost a $17 million lawsuit to recording artist Mickey Gilley last summer and declared bankruptcy. Cryer told the Houston Chronicle Thursday night that as far as he is concerned, the club is closed for good.

The 70,000-square-foot club that opened in 1972 in the Houston suburb was the primary setting for the 1980 movie "Urban Cowboy" starring John Travolta and featuring the club's mechanical bulls and vast dance floor.

The shutdown came about 5 p.m. following a break-in and theft of electronic equipment Monday at Gilley's Recording Studio adjacent to the club.

Attorney's for the recording artist suggested that the robbery was "an inside job" and a court-appointed receiver obtained court permission Thursday to close the bar in order to protect assets, Kevin McEvily, one of Gilley's attorneys, said.

The entrance signs were still lighted Thursday night, but the club's marquee was dark and security guard, some armed with shotguns, stood outside the club, rodeo grounds and recording studio.

Mark May, 27, a Seabrook musician, was disappointed when he brought three relatives visiting from Ohio to see the famous club Thursday night.

"If I had known it was closing, I would have come here earlier," May said. "It's amazing. I thought they would keep it open forever."

McEvily said State District Judge David West said he was "tired of the nonsense" and agreed in an emergency hearing to order the club closed.

Three convenience stores and another Pasadena night spot owned by Cryer were ordered closed as well, McEvily said.

Worker critical after falling in pier hole

DALLAS (AP) — A construction worker was critically injured Thursday when he fell 60 feet into a pier hole drilled at an amphitheatre on the State Fairgrounds.

Edward Jamison, 40, suffered breaks in both legs, a closed-head injury and other internal injuries in the accident at the Starplex amphitheatre, said Sylvia Bodell at Baylor Medical Center.

Dallas fire department rescuers took about 90 minutes to extricate Jamison from the 3-foot-wide hole, officials said.

A fireman was lowered by crane to Jamison, and the pair was pulled back up.

Rescuer Mike Hamilton said the rescue was especially difficult because the hole was so narrow.

"It was real cramped down there. We couldn't use some of our equipment," he said.

Jamison lost consciousness while being pulled out and paramedics revived him, officials said.

Jamison was delivering cement for Pioneer Concrete, which is repairing a retaining wall that collapsed at Starplex last year.

He fell into the hole after stepping from his truck to get some papers signed, witnesses said.

Dean Myers of Pioneer said the incident is under investigation.

Moody's gives NCNB CDs highest rating

Short-term certificates of deposit at NCNB Texas National Bank on Monday received the highest rating from Moody's Investors Service Inc., which also raised its ratings of the bank's long-term certificates.

The rating agency said the terms of the agreement between federal regulators and NCNB Texas offered "significant protection" for account holders at the bank. NCNB Corp. of Charlotte, N.C., last July agreed to buy the former banks of First RepublicBank Corp. from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Moody's raised its grading of short-term deposits at NCNB Texas to Prime-1 from Prime-3. The bank's long-term certificates went to Single-A1, a jump of five grades from the bank's former BAA3 rating.

"The magnitude of the increase in our ratings was unusual but understandable in light of the vigor of NCNB Texas," chairman Francis B. "Buddy" Kemp said in a prepared statement.

With News Like This, Who Needs Advertising?

A lot of banks have been in the news recently. At NCNB Texas, unlike a lot of places, our news has been very positive. Downright good, in fact. The financial rating firm of Moody's called our short-term CDs some of the best in the land. They praised our long-term CDs, as well.

That's what one firm says. Is there other news? You bet. Did you know that NCNB Texas is a member of one of the 10 largest banking organizations in America that manages over $50 billion in assets? Or that one out of every four Texans banks with us?

Those are some very big numbers. But they all add up to say that NCNB is a strong and stable place to see your financial needs met. If you're looking for a loan, we've got $3 billion to loan to consumers right now. If you're looking to invest, just check out our chart. It's got some of the highest rates listed in Texas. To be sure, rates and terms are subject to change, so you might want to visit the nearest NCNB Texas location for details. And tell them you want to join the bank that's making good news in Texas. Solar energy still offers another way

While oil has probably been on the mind of more Midlanders in the past few years than solar energy, investors shouldn't cash in their solar chips just yet. In fact, specialists in the energy industry say that technological breakthroughs are possible that could make solar power more affordable and practical in the near future.

Unfortunately, some American companies that had explored the possibilities of solar power are pulling back. ARCO is selling its solar-cell subsidiary, the world's largest manufacturer of the cells. Other major U.S. energy firms, including Exxon Corp., Shell Oil Co. and Motorola Inc., also have pulled back their solar activities.

That leaves the Solarex Corp., a subsidiary of the Amoco Corp., as the major U.S. presence in high-technology solar-power development. Solarex is the No. 2 U.S. producer of solar cells.

Companies in Japan and West Germany have expressed interest in acquiring some of the solar operations that U.S. companies have spun off.

Some analysts of the utility industry have said that U.S. reluctance to maintain commitments to solar-power development is due to the lack of prospects for short-term profits.

Man has been harnessing the sun's energy for hundreds of years. Modern forms of solar-power generation are 20th-century products developed primarily by Americans. One of the first experimental solar-heated houses was built in 1939 in Massachusetts by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. American scientists developed the first flat-plate solar collectors in 1942 and the first effective silicon solar cells in 1954. In 1967, NASA equipped a satellite with solar power cells.

The cost of solar-power technology has dropped by 90 percent since the NASA experiments in the 1960s. Industry observers say continued technological progress is likely.

Solar power has not provided an overnight solution to the world's energy problems. It won't overshadow the importance of oil or other energy sources in this country's future. But the potential for solar energy is bright enough to warrant a patient, farsighted view. The United States has blazed much of the trail so far; now would be a poor time to turn back.

Land, Lujan poor mix

Somebody, please, protect George Bush from his friends — first John Tower and now Manuel Lujan Jr.

The president's motivation, at least in part, for wanting Tower as his secretary of defense was his sense of loyalty to an old Texas friend. That loyalty, however admirable, may have clouded his judgment. The same apparently holds true in regard to Interior Secretary Lujan, who in his few short weeks in office is already an embarrassment.

Last week, the man who oversees the nation's public land and minerals acknowledged that he doesn't know how his own department works. In a 35-minute meeting with reporters, Lujan resorted to asking them about federal mining rules before finally admitting, "I don't know what I'm talking about." It was the latest of several gaffes from the former New Mexico congressman.

The sale and leasing of federal lands is, of course, a major responsibility of Interior and a significant source of federal revenues. It also has been in the news lately.

Two weeks ago, the General Accounting Office reported that the Mining Law of 1872 has allowed mining companies to purchase thousands of acres of public land for as little as $2.50 an acre. The GAO said the land may be worth $48 million and that those who bought the land have resold some of it at huge profits. Lujan was unaware that those companies holding patents on the land own the land outright.

Actually, Lujan's performance in his new job comes as no surprise. Even though he was a longtime member of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, he was known mainly for his ability to protect the interests of his New Mexico constituents. He showed little or no interest in environmental matters or in helping formulate government policy regarding public lands.

During Senate hearings on his nomination, Lujan was tentative and not particularly well-informed. At one point, he offered an acrostic, spelling out the word "stewardship": "'S' is for stewardship," "'t' is for territories," "'e' is for education. ..."

And "g" is for go. Lujan was planning to retire to New Mexico before Bush offered him the job at Interior. He said yes reluctantly — as a favor to the president. He ought to reconsider.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, March 31, the 90th day of 1989. There are 275 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

One hundred years ago, on March 31, 1889, French engineer Alexandre Gustave Eiffel unfurled the French tricolor from the top of the Eiffel Tower in Paris, officially marking its completion. Eiffel's work, however, was denounced by artists, composers and authors who signed a petition condemning the Tower as a "horrid nightmare" that resembled "a huge, black factory smokestack."

On this date:

In 1831, Quebec and Montreal were incorporated as cities.

In 1870, Thomas Peterson Mundy cast a ballot in a municipal election in Perth Amboy, N.J., becoming the first black to vote following ratification of the Fifteenth Amendment.

In 1880, Wabash, Ind., became the first town to be completely illuminated with electrical lighting.

In 1917, the United States took possession of the Virgin Islands from Denmark.

In 1923, the first dance marathon in the United States, held in New York City, ended with Alma Cummings setting a world record of 27 hours on her feet.

In 1932, Ford Motor Co. publicly unveiled its "V-8" engine.

In 1933, during the Great Depression, Congress authorized the Civilian Conservation Corps.

In 1943, the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical "Oklahoma!" opened on Broadway.

In 1949, Newfoundland entered confederation as Canada's tenth province.

In 1953, the United Nations Security Council nominated Dag Hammarskjold of Sweden to become Secretary-General.

In 1968, President Lyndon B. Johnson stunned the country by announcing in a broadcast address that he would not run for another term of office.

In 1976, the New Jersey Supreme Court ruled that Karen Anne Quinlan, in a coma for almost a year, could be disconnected from her respirator. Quinlan, who remained in a coma, died in June 1985.

In 1980, former track and field star Jesse Owens, hero of the 1936 Berlin Olympics, died in Tucson, Ariz., at age 66.

In 1983, some 5,000 people died when a major earthquake struck southern Colombia.

In 1986, 167 people died when a Mexicana Airlines Boeing 727 crashed in a remote mountainous region of Mexico.

In 1987, the judge in the "Baby M" case awarded custody of the girl born under a surrogate-motherhood contract to her father, William Stern, instead of biological mother Mary Beth Whitehead.

Whistleblowers will soon be protected

WASHINGTON — A bill that would protect courageous whistleblowers in industries affecting public health and safety is percolating through Congress. But it will come too late for Donald Henley.

Jack Anderson

Chances are good that the Safety Whistleblower Act will pass Congress later this year, and, so far, President Bush has not registered any complaints.

Henley could have used the bill two years ago when he was fired from his job at a country ham plant in the South. He had made the mistake of trying to stop the company from processing 3,000 pounds of dangerously half-cured ham. He knew the hams would spoil and become a breeding ground for deadly bacteria.

The company president told Henley to keep his mouth shut, but Henley alerted a government meat inspector anyway. Like many diligent workers in private industry who watch out for the safety of the public, Henley was promptly fired.

Henley is now in a more suitable job for his skills. He is a government meat inspector.

During testimony before the Senate Labor Subcommittee, Henley said he should have known that speaking up would cost him his job. The company president had repeatedly reminded him who signed his paycheck. If something done at the plant went contrary to Agriculture Department rules, the president often said, "(expletive) on the USDA."

Workers in the meat business, or any other industry that affects public health and safety, would be covered by the Safety Whistleblower Protection Act sponsored by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa. The bill would make it illegal for a private employer to fire a worker for speaking up about a dangerous situation.

Currently, federal protection varies widely from industry to industry. Truckers are protected from reprisals if they report a safety problem, but airline mechanics are not. Workers in the meat business are protected if they report threats to their own safety on the job, but they stand naked — or at least in their skivvies — if they blow the whistle on threats to public health and safety.

Business interests have been surprisingly mum about the bill. Sources on Capitol Hill told our associate Stewart Harris that big business may be wary about challenging a bill that protects the public health and safety.

But there are grumblings. Some industry leaders have griped privately that the bill may be used by labor unions as a bargaining chip in contract negotiations. Others say that employees who are about to be fired for good reason will blow the whistle on anything to keep their jobs.

Under the bill the Labor Department will handle whistleblower personnel complaints and either side can appeal decisions to federal court.

A similar bill is expected to be proposed in the House by Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., the chairman of the Education and Labor Committee. If it passes, this will be a bonanza year for whistleblowers. Last month, Congress passed a bill to protect whistleblowers in the federal government.

FARM SPIES — Farmers in several states have joined with local law enforcement authorities to look for illegal marijuana crops. The Drug Enforcement Administration has compiled a secret, state-by-state analysis of the role played by farmers.

Pennsylvania has enlisted the aid of farmers and even 4-H clubs to report unusual activity. Idaho has educated its farmers on how to spot marijuana and is offering rewards to people who report pot growers. Texas and Indiana have similar public-awareness programs.

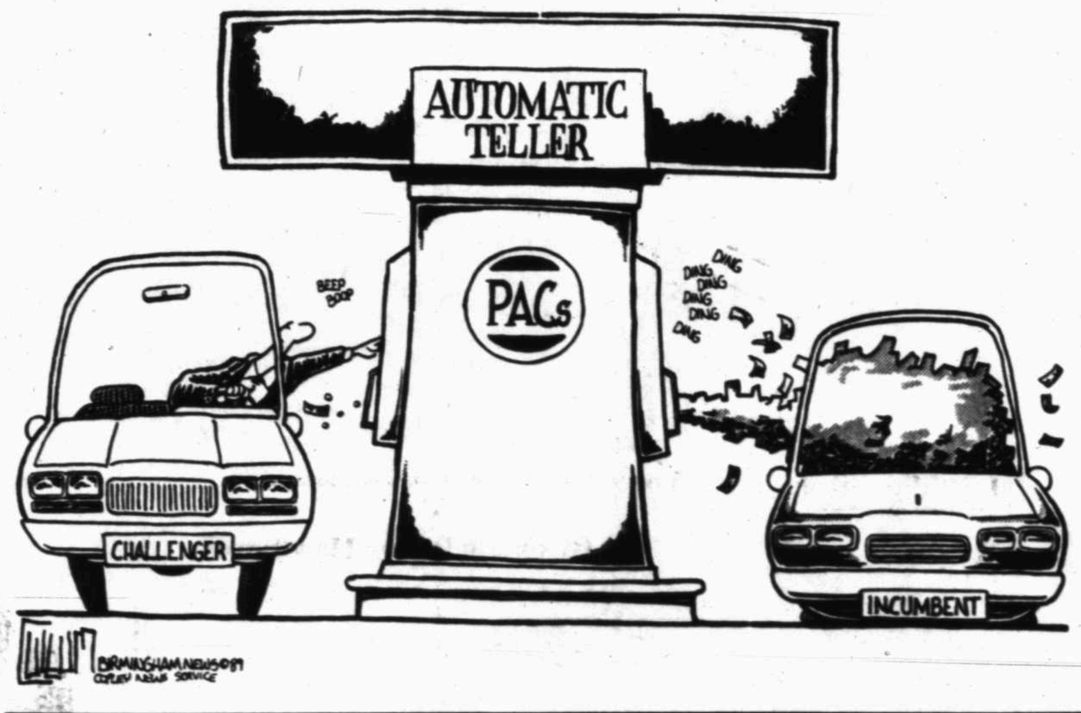

The DEA report identifies some things farmers should be suspicious of — people with no experience in farming or ranching who buy large plots of land with cash, and people who buy farm or ranch land but don't use it for that purpose.

In Colorado, farmers tipped the police to a large field containing 1,894 marijuana plants. Two area farmers noticed that the 160-acre corn farm was purchased for a substantial amount over its market value. The owner paid to have corn planted and then failed to maintain the crop in the normal fashion. Police checked and found marijuana growing between the stalks of corn.

EUROPE IS PRIORITY — Secretary of State James Baker is giving first priority to U.S. relations with Europe. The strategy is coming from Henry Kissinger, who thinks the Soviet peace initiative is calculated to put Western Europe at ease and give the Soviets a stronger hold on the continent. National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft and Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger have studied at Kissinger's knee, and Baker is listening to their advice. In contrast to the European strategy, the Bush administration has assigned a low priority to Latin America. That worries our sources who say Latin America's economic crisis needs to be the highest priority before President Bush wakes up to find big trouble on his doorstep.

Catfish gets new companion and playmate

There's a new addition at my house. I have acquired another Black Lab male puppy to go with Catfish, the Black Lab and the faithful companion I've had for five years.

Lewis Grizzard

There's a couple of reasons I did this. One, Catfish has to spend a lot of time alone in the backyard. This has to get terribly lonely and boring.

I figure with another dog, Catfish will be much happier and not give me that look, the one where his eyes say, "How can you do this to me, Cruel Master?" when I leave him.

If Catfish and the new puppy can't find anything else to amuse them at least they can occupy themselves by sniffing one another.

Dogs can spend hours doing that. People go to Rotary Club meetings, cocktail parties and singles bars to socialize. Dogs sniff.

I also got the puppy because if anything happened to Catfish I'd be devastated. I have lived with him longer than I lived with any of my ex-wives. So, if Catfish ever decides to take my stereo and move out, at least I'll still have the new puppy.

There are some problems with raising a puppy, of course, especially if he happens to be a Black Lab.

A man who raises these dogs once said to me, "For the first three years of a Lab's life, it can be one of the most destructive animals on earth."

How true. Black Labs have a thing about chewing, and they will chew anything. Before Catfish reached adulthood, he chewed three pairs of my shoes, four pairs of eyeglasses, three remote control devices for my television and several books.

Interestingly enough, Catfish has never chewed any of the books I have written. "The dog obviously has excellent taste in literature," said a former friend.

He also chewed up a beer bottle once. The bottle was empty so I didn't understand the attraction. He also attempted to eat an entire wasps' nest.

After that experience, which included three days at the vet getting shots for approximately 400 wasp stings on the tongue, Catfish cooled it on the chewing.

The new puppy will chew, too, of course, but I will endure it somehow. One idea is to hang items like my shoes and eyeglasses from the ceiling.

The other problem is what to name the puppy. Naming a dog is an awesome responsibility.

Catfish recently has made several public appearances. For instance, he was the guest of honor at the annual Catfish Festival in Scotsboro, Ala., and got to ride in a police car and be on television.

What if I had named him something trite and stupid like "Blackie"?

He'd likely never have had the chance to break into show business.

I spent at least an hour thinking of a name for the new puppy. He likes to eat potato chips, so I thought of naming him Golden Flake.

He's also got big feet, so I thought of Big Foot, and he has one black eye and one hazel eye, so I considered naming him after a famous ophthamologist, but I couldn't think of any.

I settled on Cornbread, but I'm not sure why. There was a famous basketball player named Cornbread Maxwell and cornbread is one of my favorite foods, so that would have to do for an explanation.

There will be occasional updates on Cornbread's progress as a member of the family. Wish us well.

CHARLEY REESE

Apologists for Nazism undercutting truth

There is an apologist for Nazism wandering about the country trying to raise money so he can hit the college lecture circuit and argue that the Holocaust, the systematic murder of European Jews, never happened.

Charley Reese

Given the low intellectual level at some campuses, he may actually get some invitations to speak.

This flat-earth apostle deserves no particular note but there are some issues raised by him that are worth thinking about.

One false premise, widely accepted by many Americans, is that there are ALWAYS two sides to every story. Not so. Sometimes, but not always.

It is a handy proposition often used by evil people. Thus the terrorist in his propaganda strives mightily to convince people that there is another side of the story that if you knew it would excuse his murders of children and other innocent civilians.

Not so. There are arguments, for example, on both sides of the question of whether Northern Ireland should remain politically connected to the United Kingdom or switch its allegiance to Ireland. None of those arguments, however, justify terrorism — the random murder of civilians.

In this sorry world of ours we have to always keep in mind the distinction between the guerrilla — an unconventional soldier at war with a government — and the terrorist, a civilian criminal at war with humanity. It is one thing to ambush an army patrol and quite another to plant land mines for farmers and children to step on.

The guerrilla may and often does commit an act of terrorism, but the terrorist never becomes a guerrilla.

To return to our original starting point, there is no other side to the Holocaust. It happened. It is one of the most documented and studied events in human history.

But there are other points to consider. These involve the question of whether Nazi apologists should be debated about the Holocaust. The answer is no, for two reasons.

A debate presupposes both sides accept the same standard of establishing the truth, though they may differ in the inferences drawn or may disagree about SOME accounts of events. But when a person refuses to accept factual data and simply substitutes arbitrary lies, then no debate or any kind of rational discussion is possible.

For example, you could not debate the proposition: the earth is round with someone who proclaims that all the evidence, all the statements concerning the roundness of the earth are lies and the product of a monstrous conspiracy involving millions of individuals and multiple generations. There just simply is no basis for any kind of rational communication.

A debate also presupposes the possibility of truth on either side, and when you are confronted with a person whose intent is obviously to malign and slander a group of people, then to agree to a debate grants such a person the opportunity to injure — which is his true purpose to begin with.

The other point is that it is commonly accepted by many today that free speech is an absolutely unlimited right. It is not. Our First Amendment never did nor was it ever intended to license libel, slander, incitement to riot, obscenity, or perjury.

Language has many uses other than communication, and one use is as a weapon to cause pain and injury. Civilized people should no more tolerate someone lashing an innocent person with language anymore than they should tolerate it being done with a bullwhip.

Most people are good and some are evil. But the evil few triumph if the good majority remains passive and silent.

It is never enough to be good. One must also act.

Arabs struggle to keep part of culture alive

By PHILIP WARBURG
Hearst News Service

ABU SRIHAN, Israel — Sheikh Oudeh Abu Srihan points angrily toward the two-room shanty where he lives with his wife and 10 children. "I have lived here for 40 years, and this is all I have to show for it."

At a water spigot a few yards away, children wait their turn to fill plastic canisters saddled to their donkeys. This is the only water source for 1,200 Bedouin Arabs living in Abu Srihan — a dense patchwork of rusting sheet-metal shacks in Israel's Negev desert.

Abu Srihan is one of roughly 150 encampments housing about half the Negev's once-nomadic Bedouin. Two years ago, a government-appointed commission recommended destruction of the camps as part of a program designed to resettle the Bedouin into eight semiurban communities.

Of an estimated 70,000 Bedouin in the Negev, more than 30,000 already have moved to these new townships. But Sheikh Oudeh and his "hamula," or extended family are determined to keep some semblance of their desert culture alive. They will not move.

With assistance from Arab and Jewish architects, lawyers, and urban planners, plans have been drawn up for a network of Bedouin farming and shepherding villages.

Such settlements, the 53-year-old sheikh maintains, would allow the Bedouin to adapt their traditional nomadic ways to Israel's modern economy. And Bedouins would regain control over at least a portion of their traditional lands.

Before Israel's 1948 War of Independence, few competed with the Negev's Bedouin tribes for the arid terrain. But the new nation's leaders saw the Negev, which covers 60 percent of Israel's territory, as a vital resource.

As the government laid out ambitious plans for immigrant communities, army training camps, industrial plants and nature reserves, thousands of Bedouin were moved from their traditional lands to a 400-square-mile "temporary" resettlement area east of the Negev's principal city, Beer Sheva.

To prevent the resettled Bedouin from staking out new territorial claims, the government introduced a set of restrictions that are still in effect. All forms of "permanent" agriculture, such as vineyards and fruit orchards, are forbidden. If Bedouins defy the ban, their newly planted trees and vines are uprooted.

Sheep grazing also is limited. Herds found outside designated pastures are often seized and sold by the "Green Patrol," the enforcement arm of Israel's Nature Reserves Authority.

Unable to support their families as shepherds and farmers, many Bedouins have joined other Israeli Arabs as factory workers and seasonal farmhands. According to a study released by Sheikh Oudeh's group, the Association for the Support and Defense of Bedouin Rights, the Negev Bedouin's income is roughly half that of the Israelis.

While they continue to work in low-paying jobs, however, Bedouins in the new townships do enjoy such modern amenities as electricity, indoor plumbing, paved streets, and ready access to schools and health clinics.

The largest of these new towns, Rahat, is laid out as a series of neighborhood clusters, designed to allow the hamullas to retain some of the feel of their former rural encampments. Some 17,000 Bedouin have built their homes on government-subsidized quarter-acre lots. However, the site for Rahat's long-promised industrial zone still remains empty after 17 years.

Salem Krinawi, an elementary schoolteacher, lives in one of two neighborhoods occupied by the Krinawi hamulla's 3,000 members. Standing on the roof of his spacious home, he sweeps a hand across a vista of two-story houses covering two nearby hillsides. "All that you see belongs to my family," he says, with obvious pride.

Alongside Salem's home is a small-scale reminder of his family's former way of life. A dozen sheep and a few cows are penned in one corner of the yard. Next door, behind his parents' modern home, is a large tent woven in the traditional fashion, from small strands of black goat hair.

Salem's parents prepare their meals, entertain visitors and often sleep in the backyard tent. "They don't like to be closeted within the small rooms of a house," he says.

Unemployment in Rahat is estimated to exceed 20 percent, not counting the underemployed day laborers and seasonal farmhands. Almost all wage earners travel to jobs in Beer Sheva and other industrial areas outside the township.

"Investing in Bedouin communities is not the priority here," a government official responsible for Bedouin affairs recently admitted.

For many Israelis, in fact, the Bedouin long have been viewed as "good" Arabs, distanced by their nomadic backgrounds from militant Palestinian nationalism. While many Bedouins, together with other Israeli Arabs, now support the Palestinian uprising in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, they still see their future in an Israeli context.

"A Palestinian state won't solve our problems," said Sheikh Oudeh. "We, as citizens of Israel, are demanding the right to our own lands."

However, there has been an upsurge of Bedouin support for the growing Islamic fundamentalist movement. To the dismay of many secular politicians, the Islamic Movement won the largest block of seats in Rahat's council election last month.

TV manager backs Bakkers' right to airtime

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

They're back, and Midland apparently likes them.

Initial hesitation over Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker's born-again religious show by the general manager of a local TV station has given way to public acceptance, he says.

"We had some natural concerns because it is our intention to provide the public with quality programming (which is) a service to the community," explained Joe Sugg, general manager of Midland's KPEJ-TV.

"Considering the results of the study and Jim's personal rights as a broadcaster, we deemed it appropriate."

The one-hour "Jim and Tammy" show, taped live at the couple's home in Fort Mill, S.C., is shown on 28 stations daily throughout the nation. The show debuted on Jan. 2, and KPEJ-TV began airing it Feb. 6, Sugg said.

Because there are no commercials during the telecast, Jim and Tammy Bakker pay TV stations to air the program, Sugg explained.

Bakker surrendered his Praise the Lord (PTL) ministry and Heritage USA theme park and was defrocked from the Assembly of God church in 1987 after allegations of his financial and sexual misconduct surfaced.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell took control of PTL in March 1987 at Bakker's request after the former minister admitted he had a sexual tryst with church secretary Jessica Hahn in 1980.

The scandal-plagued PTL ministry filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code in June 1987, blaming the "chaotic mismanagement" of founder Bakker for $72 million in debts.

Currently, Canadian Rabbi Stephen Mernick is negotiating with a federal bankruptcy court in South

Jim and Tammy Bakker

Carolina to purchase Heritage USA.

Negotiations with the court are still underway, said Ron Lambright, an associate pastor with the Bakker's new ministry, which is know by two names: the Jim and Tammy Ministry or the New Covenant Partners Ministry.

Lambright said Mernick is "secretive" about his plans for Heritage USA, though Bakker "doesn't have any reason to not like him."

The new TV show, which airs locally at 11 a.m., opens with a theme song which includes the words, "I don't care what's going wrong ... we're gonna make it."

Seated on a large couch in their den during Wednesday's show were Jim, Tammy Faye and their Yorkshire terrier, Tuppins. Surrounding the trio were friends, family and staff members.

Much of the show was spent decrying the Bakkers' "enemies" and the media, entities on whom the Bakkers place the blame for their "nightmare" or fall from grace.

Tammy, in a humorous aside to the media, claimed Wednesday, "Maybelline wasn't only made for the sinner."

Tammy — often ridiculed for her heavy makeup, shopping habits and easy-flowing tears — was crying eight minutes into the show.

"Our destruction was planned," Bakker said during the show. "People can bribe people. They can pay them to lie ... but always remember ... eventually people will tell the truth.

"I will not sue another brother. I will let God be the judge," Bakker said.

About halfway into the show, the call for money arose. Bakker offered copies of his new "Crisis Bible," to $100 donors, as he explained to viewers he gets "too busy" preaching and "forgets to raise funds."

Reviews of the Jim and Tammy show have been mixed, Sugg and Lambright concurred, though generally are favorable.

The two men agreed the most negative comments question Bakker's right to broadcast religious or spiritual material considering the misconduct which has been attributed to him.

A spokeswoman for the General Counsel of the Assembly of God Church in Springfield, Mo., declined to comment on the new TV show this morning.

"We have no comment on any of Jim and Tammy's activities. Jim was dismissed in 1987 and is no longer a member of the Assembly of God Church," said Juleen Turnage. "I haven't seen any show they've been on."

Ms. Turnage's stance mirrored that of local Assembly of God congregations whose clergy also declined comment on the new show.

Bakkers' return to the airwaves gets fuzzy reception from locals

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The return of television evangelists Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker to local television got a mixed reaction from Midlanders interviewed Thursday at Midland Park Mall.

KPEJ-TV began airing the "Jim and Tammy" show Feb. 6, a little more than a month after the couple revived their television ministry on 28 stations nationwide.

Among six Midlanders who said they have watched the defrocked Assemblies of God minister and former PTL Network leader's reborn broadcast, the majority claimed to have no opinion about it ... one way or the other.

Yvonne Dearman watched the "Jim and Tammy Show" on the PTL Network prior to the scandal that ravaged their television ministry and catapulted it into the federal bankruptcy courts. She plans to be a regular viewer of the new show.

"I think it's kind of interesting that the Bible says we're supposed to forgive people of their sins. But because the Bakkers are public figures, we're less apt to forgive them.

"People make mistakes and the Bakkers ought to be given another chance," Ms. Dearman said.

Assemblies of God officials defrocked Bakker, 48, in May 1987, after he admitted to having a sexual encounter with church secretary, Jessica Hahn, in 1980; and for his "alleged misconduct involving bisexual activity."

The Bakkers, who failed in their attempt to regain PTL in federal bankruptcy court in South Carolina last year, launched their new congregation under two working titles, "The Jim and Tammy Ministry" and "The New Covenant Partners Ministry."

The show airs at 11 a.m. Monday through Friday on KPEJ-TV, but Midlander Greg Hair doesn't expect to be among the regular viewers.

"I don't have much of an opinion. I don't like the people and I don't like what they do. I really could care less," he said.

Said Kathi Rouse: "I don't think they should be on TV, period."

The PTL Ministry, founded by the Bakkers, was reported to have owed $72 million to creditors and filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

Bakker's faithful had predicted that the husband-and-wife-team would return to television four months after the scandal brought them international attention.

However, it took nearly two years for their revamped broadcast to hit the airwaves.

Midlanders E.W. Matthews Jr., Kim Herring and David Maker said they didn't miss the Bakkers' absence from local television.

Dale Waterhouse agreed: "I suppose they have as much right as anyone else to express their first First Amendment rights, but they've lost their credibility with the public as far as I'm concerned.

"It started out that they were proclaiming Jesus Christ and then they turned it into an entertainment thing.

"They got away from 'The Word' and started peddling entertainment and water slides," Waterhouse said.

Auto thefts fuel local crime rate rise of 13 percent

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A sharp rise in the number of vehicle thefts during February fueled an almost 13 percent increase in serious crimes reported to Midland police during the month, according to just-released statistics.

In the auto theft category, 32 vehicles were reported stolen in February, bringing the total number of stolen vehicles for this year to 65, an increase of nearly 33 percent compared to the same period in 1988. During the first two months last year, 49 vehicles were reported stolen in Midland.

While some of the vehicle thefts have simple explanations — like joyriding teen-agers — many are prompted by the lure of a south-of-the-border market, according to a police spokesman.

"We have been suspecting for some time that, this close to the border, that is where many of them are going," Cpl. Jim White said of the thefts. "We think they are going into Mexico to be sold."

According to a report by the National Auto Theft Bureau, most of the vehicles stolen in Midland that are taken into Mexico "are making it to Central America to be sold there," White said.

The vehicles are not stripped for parts, but sold intact, according to the report.

Vehicles stolen here and taken to Mexico are likely the work of professional thieves who are paid per unit, White said.

"We have also had some opportunity crime," the spokesman noted. "Someone pulls up to a store or business, and runs inside just for a quick minute. When they come out, their car is gone. But those are usually short-term thefts; we usually find the car abandoned later that day."

Some reported auto thefts also are the result of "boyfriend-girlfriend squabbles" and those charges are later dropped, White said.

Others are reported taken from area automobile dealerships. In February, six dealers reported at least one vehicle stolen.

Most vehicles stolen without keys are taken after the thief defeats the locking mechanism on the steering columns, according to investigators. "Hot-wiring," once a favored method for "boosting" cars, is now virtually unheard of among auto thieves, according to police.

Public's dislike of lawyers features in appeals court ruling

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The public's "disfavor" of lawyers was an issue in the disbarment hearing of Midland lawyer Robert L. Evans Jr. last year, an appellate court justice has ruled.

Texas Court of Appeals Justice Jerry Woodard of El Paso made that observation in denying the State Bar of Texas' request for a rehearing before the appellate court.

Last February, the appellate court overruled a Midland trial court's verdict that Evans, 55, was guilty of 17 counts of "professional misconduct" under State Bar rules. In reversing the trial court, the appellate court ordered a new trial; the bar association, which licenses the state's attorneys asked for a rehearing on that ruling.

Woodard and two colleagues determined that the admission of two prejudicial statements against Evans influenced the jury in making an "improper" judgment.

In his opinion, Woodard quoted from poet Carl Sandburg's "The Lawyers Know Too Much":

Why is there always a secret singing
When a lawyer cashes in?
Why does a hearse horse snicker
Hauling a lawyer away?

"Lawyers, as a group, have endured public disfavor throughout the ages," Woodard wrote. "They have been the paladins of unpopular causes and the vanguards of life and liberty.

"The misunderstanding of the lawyer's purpose and means by the masses, the aggressive nature of the advocate, and the fact that members of the bar often profit from mankind's miseries, produce distrust, begrudgerey and disaffection. And they have had their share of sinners. This prevailing undercurrent of prejudice always stands ready to subvert the fairness of a trial."

And because of that reasoning, Woodard said, the State Bar should "refrain from overreach."

The motion for rehearing was heard by Woodard, Chief Justice Max Osborn and Justice Ward Koehler.

The appellate court said that the twofold prejudicial evidence in the jury trial against Evans came both during the jury-selection process and the trial.

In the first instance, the State Bar's counsel told the jury panel that a State Bar Grievance Committee for the Midland area had found "acts of professional misconduct" against Evans. The committee's findings had launched the trial for disbarment. Complaints by Fred Newman, a Midland geophysicist and a former client of Evans, kicked off the Grievance Committee's investigation into Evans' law practice.

In the other instance, a witness, Jane Brownson, who had served as secretary to Newman and later to Evans, testified that Evans had overcharged for his legal work.

The appellate court ruled that the "introduction into evidence of systematic over-billing of clients" by AUSTIN — Nadine Craddick has been appointed to the Governor's Commission for Women, Gov. Bill Clements announced.

Craddick, wife of state Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, is one of 28 women Clements named Wednesday to serve on the committee, which will examine women's issues and identify qualified candidates for consideration by the governor for appointive positions in state government.

Clements named Sally McKenzie of Dallas as chairman of the commission.

Bill aims to snuff out most indoor smoking

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The dwindling number of Texas smokers will have to be more careful about where they light up if a bill that passed the Texas Senate Thursday becomes law.

"The Texas Smoke Free Indoor Air Act," Senate Bill 120 by Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, passed on a voice vote, although seven senators, including Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, later registered their opposition.

The bill would restrict smoking in most public places to designated areas and would require employers to adopt written policies on smoking that would accommodate the rights of both smokers and non-smokers.

State law already bans smoking in elevators, school buses and other public transportation, libraries, restrooms, service and cashier lines and other designated areas. The bill would require designated smoking areas in restaurants that serve more than 25 people, except bars.

Entire buildings could be designated smoke-free, as is the Texas Department of Health and at least one building in Dallas, Brooks said.

Smoking in a prohibited area would be a Class C misdemeanor, punishable by a $200 fine, or as much as $500 for repeat offenders.

While 38 Texas cities and three counties have adopted ordinances regulating smoking, Brooks said he hoped the bill would be a "floor with respect to smokers rights as well as non-smokers rights."

The state law also would help publicize the dangers of smoking, he said. "I think it encourages people to think about the health consequences," he said.

Previous measures got through the Senate in 1985 and 1987, only to die in the House State Affairs Committee, but Brooks said "our chances are pretty good this time."

This time, while the tobacco industry is resisting the bill, he said, House Speaker Gib Lewis is "generally sympathetic to the idea" as long as the bill respects the rights of smokers and non-smokers "and that's what we've tried to do."

Brooks, chairman of the Health and Human Services Committee, said smoking is on the decline in Texas, with surveys showing that only 26 percent of adult Texans smoke.

The bill now goes to the House.

Senate considers bill increasing penalties for fleeing arrest

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

The Texas Senate Thursday passed Senate Bill 916 by Sen. Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio, that would increase the severity of crimes involving flight to avoid arrest.

If Tejeda's bill passes the House, it will make it a Class B misdemeanor to flee a police officer; upgrade it to a Class A misdemeanor if the flight put someone else in danger; and make it a third-degree felony if the chase caused serious bodily injury or death of the peace officer.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, opposed the bill, arguing it had the potential to make a teen-aged traffic offender into a felon if he panicked and fled and the pursuing police officer was injured, even if the officer was negligent.

"What could start out as a $20 traffic ticket could result in a felony charge," Parker said.

Tejeda filed the bill after Bexar County authorities were unable to charge a misdemeanor theft suspect in the death of a policeman who drowned while chasing the suspect across a creek in San Antonio.

Parker and Sen. Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas, were the only dissenters in the 28-2 vote to approve the bill.

'Black holes' in health care cited

AUSTIN (AP) — "Black holes" in rural health care — places devoid of even basic services — must be closed and state lawmakers must act to keep the problem from growing, a legislative task force report says.

"Thousands of rural Texans are denied even basic health care, let alone health care approaching the standards found in urban areas," said the report. "Most affected are pregnant women, the fixed-income elderly and the indigent."

Several House and Senate members gathered Thursday to announce support for a House measure that would include several of the task force suggestions, which they said are badly needed.

"Those who are too sick, too old, too poor ... that's the ones that we are trying to help," said state Rep. Mike McKinney, D-Centerville, who said he is the only physician in a large area.

McKinney said 53 Texas counties have no hospital and 14 counties, with a total of 23,000 residents, have no physician. He said emergency room and obstetrics care are becoming scarce in many areas.

Texas has lost 66 hospitals since 1984, according to the task force report.

"If you show up in Leon County with an emergency, I'm your neurosurgeon. I'm your chest surgeon ... until I can get some help," McKinney said. "The impact of that is it's hard to keep good doctors in the county because they're overworked."

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said the task force report was "a bit of a scary outcome," because services keep declining in rural areas. He urged lawmakers to pass the recommendations this session.

"Even during the course of our study we saw hospitals close," Brooks said. He said such legislation would be "one of the most significant things we will do for health care in this year or many years to come."

McKinney said an 80-page bill sponsored by several House members is scheduled for hearing Monday before the Committee on Public Health.

Some of the proposals are:

- Pay rural hospitals the same Medicaid supplements as city hospitals.
- Provide student loans for rural health care students.
- Develop a statewide trauma center system.
- Limit liability of medical malpractice for doctors in remote areas.

McKinney said insurance premiums are "escalating beyond belief," making it "almost impossible" to recruit country doctors, who often have to deliver treatments outside their specialties and thus often are exposed to malpractice suits.

Midland's statistics for auto thefts are disappointing for law enforcement officials, but are in line with statewide figures, White said.

"I don't believe we are higher than the state average," he said. "This month it looks bad, but it all evens out."

The city reported fewer burglaries in February than in January, according to the statistics. But the number has increased so far in 1989, compared to the first two months of 1988.

In February, 129 homes and businesses were burglarized, boosting the total for the year to 313, an increase of 14.2 percent over the 274 reported during the first two months of 1988.

The explanation for the jump in burglaries has a familiar ring.

"We now believe that 90 to 95 percent of the burglaries are drug-related," White said. "Until we can stem the tide of narcotics use, the burglaries are going to be there.

"We've been putting a ton of burglars in jail. But they keep getting out" because of chronic overcrowding in the Texas Department of Corrections, White said.

"We can't do anything until the penal system does something to keep them away from us."

Detectives cleared 41 percent of the burglary cases filed from department files during February — a figure White termed "very good."

Increases were also recorded in the theft category, with 220 reported in February. So far in 1989, 506 thefts have been recorded, an 8.8 percent increase over the 465 reported during the first two months of 1988.

The report includes homicides, sexual assaults, robberies, aggravated assaults, burglaries, thefts, and auto thefts.

JP says he didn't see pathologist's report

LUBBOCK (AP) — A Lubbock County justice of the peace who recently ruled homicide in the death of an airline pilot says he never was advised of a pathologist's findings the man suffered stress-caused bleeding of the stomach.

Dean Clinton Moss, 38, was piloting an Evergreen International Airlines flight from Hill Air Force Base in Ogden, Utah, to Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio last month when he collapsed after going to the back of the plane to check on a pressure problem.

Justice of the Peace L.J. Bialock last week ruled the Vancouver, Wash., pilot's death on Feb. 9 was a homicide, saying he did so after eliminating accidents and natural causes.

But, pathologist Ralph Erdmann, who performed the autopsy, said Wednesday that Moss had been bleeding internally and probably died of stress.

Erdmann is under contract to do autopsies for Lubbock County.

Bialock told the Houston Chronicle Wednesday that he was surprised at Erdmann's comments, saying he was not told the pathologist's opinion before his ruling.

Co-pilot John Bartash of Houston told National Transportation Safety Board investigators that the pair detected a pressurization problem.

Moss went to investigate while Bartash flew the plane. Moss did not return after 20 minutes, so Bartash put the plane on automatic pilot and went to find him.

Bartash found Moss unconscious inside the cargo hold, his oxygen mask in place but very little oxygen used.

Bartash made an emergency landing in Lubbock, where Moss was pronounced dead on arrival at a local hospital.

The death triggered investigations by the National Transportation Safety Board, Federal Aviation Administration and the airline company, which frequently works under contract with the military.

Investigators considered the death accidental.

"I make my ruling separate of the autopsy report with all information available," Bialock said. "I use every bit of evidence available to me. My ruling is based on the autopsy report, the findings of the police department or any other evidence made available to me."

Bialock would not specify what information he considered in the case.

Moss' death was a "very unfortunate situation" that stemmed from intense stress, Erdmann said. He said Moss had suffered "acute hemorrhagic gastritis," or sudden bleeding into the stomach.

Erdmann said that when he discovered Moss' stomach full of blood, he initially thought the pilot had ingested something — such as household bleach — that had eaten up his stomach lining.

"I thought that because he was in excellent shape. He was an athlete. Why would he bleed to death?" he said.

Erdmann, certified in general and forensic pathology, said he sent samples of the blood to the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology in Washington, D.C., which found no trace of poisons.

He said that after further examination, he determined the death resulted from "Cushing gastritis," a stress-related condition. He said he had worked with NTSB investigators and they agreed with him.

"It's a type of stress. It is very rare, very massive stress," Erdmann said.

Evergreen International officials said they were shocked by the homicide ruling.

"Whatever came out of Lubbock, Texas, is speculation. It is our conclusion that he died from health problems," Donna Nelson, senior vice president of Evergreen, said.

BAKKERS

Sugg — while keeping his station's stance firmly neutral — maintains Bakker "has not been convicted of any crime.

"It's up to the public to support or believe him. An individual is innocent until proven guilty," the general manager said.

Supporters are "thrilled they're back on," Lambright said.

Today's show was the last one to be broadcast from the Bakker's South Carolina home, Lambright said.

Bakker will move the new ministry and TV show to Florida next week and plans on opening there one of as many as 10 new conference centers — planned before "the scandal," the associate pastor continued.

Money will be tight, Lambright admitted, but added volunteers will offer much help free.

"Their first desire is to go back to Heritage (USA, near Fort Mill) and he believes God will restore him to Heritage. But if that is delayed, he (Bakker) will do whatever he can," Lambright explained.

"Jim has a tremendous amount of faith."

Lawless brings business, academic skills to Tech

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech University's selection Thursday of Robert W. Lawless as its new president brings a blend of management and academic experience to the school, said faculty and regents.

The school's nine-member board of regents voted unanimously to accept Lawless, 52, executive vice president and chief operations officer of Southwest Airlines, to succeed former President Lauro Cavazos, who stepped down from the 24,000-student school in August to become Secretary of Education.

"In Robert Lawless we have found an outstanding individual with the talent and vision to lead our institutions into a period of great progress," said regents chairman J. Fred Bucy. "We feel very fortunate to be able to name as our new president one of the most dynamic corporate executives in the nation, who is also one of the most distinguished academicians."

Lawless, who did not immediately return a phone call to The Associated Press Thursday, will visit the Lubbock campus Monday for a news conference and welcoming reception, said Bucy.

In accepting the job, which includes the presidency of the university's Health Sciences Center, Lawless returns to academia after almost seven years in private industry.

Before joining Southwest, he held various administrative and academic positions at the University of Houston, including senior vice chancellor, associate chancellor for planning and resource allocation, dean of the College of Business Administration and chairman of the department of quantitative management science.

"He more than just a business executive," said Texas Tech faculty senate president Michael Stoune, a music professor. "He's had all the academic experience that anyone could hope for."

Before joining Southwest, Robert W. Lawless held various administrative and academic positions at the University of Houston, including senior vice chancellor, associate chancellor for planning and resource allocation, dean of the College of Business Administration and chairman of the department of quantitative management science.

Stoune said reaction among faculty to Lawless' appointment has been generally favorable, but added, "We'll wait and see and begin to question later."

Lawless, like others considered for the school's top post, addressed the faculty senate earlier this month.

Lawless' teaching experience at Houston and Texas A&M, where he earned a doctorate in operations research, gives faculty confidence that the new president will understand the faculty's point of view, said Stoune.

"He understands the university from both sides," he said.

In his address to the faculty, Lawless cited Texas Tech's potential for strength, but said the institution could progress only with the cooperation of faculty and administration.

"Tech is a good university, but it is not a great university," Lawless said.

After receiving an associate science degree from Lee College in 1961, he went on to earn a bachelor's degree in mathematics from the University of Houston three years later.

For leaving Southwest, Lawless likely will take a cut in pay. Former Tech president Lauro Cavazos, who stepped down in August to become U.S. Secretary of Education, was paid $145,000 a year. Cavazos' compensation also included use of a house and a housing allowance.

He is scheduled to assume his duties on July 1, taking over for Interim President Elizabeth Haley, who has served in that role since September.

Regents began searching for Cavazos' replacement shortly after his departure and narrowed a field of more than 100 candidates to 14 in January.

However, most of the finalists, including Lawless, dropped out of contention in February when their names were made public.

Lawless, who resubmitted his name earlier this month at the urging of regents and other Tech officials, said he initially withdrew because he had not informed his boss, Southwest president and chief executive officer Herb Kelleher, of his interest in the job.

Lawless got the regents' nod over two other finalists, Steven Altman, president of Texas A&I University in Kingsville, and Donald Zacharias, president of Mississippi State University in Starksville, Miss.

RULING

Evans, "compounded by the proclamation that The State Bar of Texas had already verified the culpable conduct" of Evans, "would so jeopardize" Evans' credibility that "it was reasonably calculated to cause and probably did cause rendition of an improper judgment in the case."

Evans' attorney, Bill Alexander of Odessa, had objected in both instances.

The appellate court ruled that admission of the Grievance Committee's findings essentially denied Evans a fair trial. And Mrs. Brownson's comments about Evans' alleged overcharges tended to question Evans' character and integrity, which were not at issue.

But the State Bar, which was represented by John Gladney, argued in the first trial that the question of Evans' integrity had been opened when Alexander asked Mrs. Brownson if Newman had "ever commented" on Evans' integrity.

"Yes, when I worked for Mr. Newman, he said many times that Mr. Evans had too much integrity to be a lawyer," Mrs. Brownson testified before the jury.

While the bar is considering if it again will bring Evans to trial for disbarment, Evans said today that he is seeking reinstatement of his license to practice law.

Evans said he was "elated" by the appellate court's ruling not to grant a rehearing. "I think that their original opinion was correct," he said.

"Whatever is going to happen is going to happen," said Evans, who was admitted to Texas Bar in 1967, after graduating from The University of Texas Law School.

"I was born young, and I am going to die young," Evans philosophized. "What happens in between is insignificant."

$60 million targeted for Clovis base

CLOVIS, N.M. (AP) — The Air Force expects to spend about $60 million on construction projects to facilitate the scheduled expansion of Cannon Air Force Base, a military official told Clovis area residents.

Air Force representatives held a public meeting here Wednesday night to discuss the possible effects of the expansion, which will include the transfer to Cannon of more than than 1,100 military personnel and two F-111 fighter squadrons from the Mountain Home Air Force Base in Idaho.

Lt. Col. Garry Earls, a civil engineer at Cannon, said tentative plans call for the two squadrons to be transferred to Clovis in April and July of 1991.

Earls said the construction work cannot begin before February 1990 and there is a target date of September 1993 for completion of the work.

Earls said the $60 million would go for projects such as airfield runways, maintenance and support facilities.

STATE in brief

Senate holds up parole bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate Thursday refused to accept House changes to a bill that would allow about 1,100 inmates sentenced to state prison but being held in county jails to be eligible for pre-parole transfer to a community facility.

The Senate called for a conference committee to resolve differences.

Such transfers would be to an abandoned military base set to be converted at Mineral Wells under restrictions in the House amendment, said Rep. Richard Williamson, D-Weatherford, amendment sponsor.

The amendment also says any contracts expire one year after the bill passes, he said. That change anticipates an overhaul of the criminal justice system.

Under the pre-parole transfer program, inmates from the Texas Department of Corrections who qualify may be moved to facilities similar to halfway houses six months before their parole date. The bill would allow pre-parole transfers directly from county jails and other correctional facilities.

Senate OKs recycling bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate unanimously passed legislation requiring plastics manufacturers to imprint containers with codes that would help in recycling.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Kenneth Armbrister, D-Victoria, was passed Thursday. A companion measure in the House by Rep. Steve Holzheauser, R-Victoria, is still being considered.

"The Senate took a big step in the direction of plastics recycling," said Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro in a news release Thursday. Mauro suggested the legislation to decrease refuse in landfills and to encourage recycling.

"There is a tremendous potential market for recycling plastics, and this bill will open wider opportunities for those who collect and sort plastic," Mauro said.

Education bill endorsed

AUSTIN (AP) — A coalition including the League of United Latin American Citizens and San Antonio-based groups endorsed a bill designed to pump $1.7 billion more into public education and make the system more equitable.

"We want the state of Texas to equalize school funding so that we can equalize our own standing within society," said Juan Garcia, vice president of a LULAC council in San Antonio. "We don't want a handout, we want what is due."

Among coalition members are LULAC councils statewide, the San Antonio-based National Association of Government Employees and a San Antonio church, he said. The group is endorsing a bill by Rep. Ciro Rodriguez, D-San Antonio.

Doctors seeking 'safe' sperm turn to banks in 'wholesome' Midwest

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Long considered a bastion of stability and morality, the Midwest is gaining a reputation for something else: safe sperm.

In Kansas City, Nebraska and Iowa, sperm bank directors report increased calls from doctors on both coasts who are looking for semen from the heartland.

The reason is the perception that the Midwest is a clean, wholesome and healthy place.

In the last two years, frozen semen, used for artificial insemination, has been shipped out of the Midwest like never before.

"We've had requests from as far away as New York," said Elwyn Grimes, director of the Midwest Fertility Foundation and Laboratory Inc. in Kansas City. "There could be a perception that there are more high-risk individuals in some of the larger metropolitan areas.

"And if you look at the statistics, there might be a reasor to have that perception. The fact is, we deal with a low-risk population."

Dr. John Dickey, an obstetrician-gynecologist in Lubbock, Texas, said he uses semen from a Nebraska sperm bank "because of the quality and reputation of their samples. I have had patients express concern about transmissible diseases. But by using that facility, I can reassure them that that's not a problem."

Samples that are properly tested, screened and quarantined are no safer from the Midwest than from inner-city New York, doctors said.

But people still believe otherwise.

"Up to this point, we've been able to accommodate all the requests from the outside," said Warren G. Sanger, director of the Genetic Semen Bank at the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha. "But we may get to the time when we cannot"

The bank sends about 60 percent of its samples out of the state and 30 percent out of the Midwest. More than 500 have been sent to the coasts in the last two years, Sanger said.

Sperm banks pay donors for samples, but some reject up to seven of eight samples given. Doctors probe into health, family background, medical history, even lifestyle.

Potential donors are screened for acquired immune deficiency syndrome and other sexually transmittable diseases through blood tests taken over the course of several months.

At a sperm bank in Iowa City, Iowa, a spokesman agreed that inquiries for Midwestern sperm are increasing.

"I think the reason is they perceive the Midwest as a less concentrated area for the disease AIDS," said Dean Borg, director of hospital information for the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics.

"And therefore, the supply of donor semen samples here stands a better chance of being AIDS-free."

Nicaraguan 'freedom fighter' locked up in INS jail

EL PASO (AP) — Felix Palacio Rivera, an eight-year veteran of the Nicaraguan resistance, expected to find freedom when he left his homeland and headed to the United States.

Instead, he has spent the last three months behind barbed wire — and will remain there up to two more weeks, even though he has been granted asylum.

"When they got me, I told them that I came here expecting to find support from the president and the Army since we were undoubtedly a friend of the U.S.," Palacio said Wednesday at the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's detention center in El Paso. "That's what I expected, and to find freedom."

Instead, Palacio was arrested Dec. 20, about a month after his arrival in El Paso.

"I risked everything to come here," the 30-year-old said. "When I entered El Paso I was not afraid to be caught by the immigration, because I had fought as a soldier. It's been very difficult."

The Nicaraguan was notified this week the U.S. State Department has decided he has a legitimate claim for political asylum after fighting the Sandinista regime, but he didn't walk free immediately. He said it could be another two weeks before the INS schedules a hearing that he expects will lead to his release.

"I have a lot of faith, and with God's help, I think it will be approved," he said.

Palacio was a little more fortunate than many Contra soldiers because he had good documentation showing he fought the Sandinistas, said Palacio's attorney, Thomas Spaniolo of the Las Americas Refugee Asylum Project in El Paso.

Palacio brought with him on his journey north a letter signed by Indalecio Rodriguez Alaniz, an official of the Nicaraguan resistance, attesting to Palacio's service in the civil war.

"He has good proof that he was with the Contras," Spaniolo said. "Most of them don't. That's very rare, to have that kind of documentation."

Palacio said he was pleased to hear of the asylum decision, and not bitter for his incarceration.

"I found some very good people, who treated me well and with respect," he said. "I don't have a complaint with the immigration people. The only thing I feel bad about is the time it's taken. I don't deserve it, to be penalized for months. I'm not a bad person."

Production of oats plummets while commercial interest soars

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Gregg Biggins never gave up on oats.

Even when prices were low and other farmers thought about switching, Biggins stuck with oats. "Oats is a great crop."

"It doesn't need the chemicals or the work that a row crop does. It's nice to be able to have a straw crop to rotate. All this about oats being good for cholesterol is going to do a lot of good for the oats industry."

"All this" is the fact that oat bran, the husk of the kernel, can help reduce cholesterol and prevent heart attacks. So far, though, it's been cereal makers and consumers who have reaped the benefits; farmers are suffering.

The nation raised more oats under Abraham Lincoln than under Ronald Reagan, said Keith Carlson of the American Oat Association. "It's kind of ironic that production has been declining while the demand...is increasing."

U.S. oat production plummeted by 42 percent last year to 219 million bushels, the smallest crop on record. In South Dakota, the leading oat state in 1987, production dropped 62 percent last year to 20 million bushels.

The summer's drought was one factor, but farmers say government programs that favored other crops also were to blame.

"It's a real shame. There just has not been any money in oats. You have to get paid for something to want to grow it," said Biggins, of Gregory.

"The prices got so bad, I just felt like I had been betrayed," said Milt Lakness, of Hayti. "I'm a fan of the oat. I was tickled to think I was raising something that was going into Americans' breakfasts."

Some farmers are skeptical about the oat revival, said Dale Reeves, an oat researcher at South Dakota State University. "There's a lot of hesitation to get back into oats. You'd think they'd be clamoring to get back in now."

Lakness said he's heard about the oat-bran craze, and is eating more oatmeal himself these days to lower his cholesterol level. But he's not ready to stake his financial future on the hope of a resurgence.

"I'll plant oats this year, but I'm not going to plant very much," he said. "They talk about all this interest in oats, but if you could make more money on other crops, would you plant oats? The arithmetic is just not there."

Lawmakers haven't tried to encourage production because, until recently, no one really cared about oats, Carlson said. "Since the public wasn't eating them, it didn't make that much difference."

That may be changing. A provision of last year's drought bill gave farmers more freedom to plant oats. "We were trying to level out the playing field for oats," said Anne Simmons, an aide to U.S. Rep. Tim Johnson, D-S.D.

Another measure introduced by Johnson and Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., would give farmers more flexibility and would raise the government-guaranteed price, eliminating what Daschle called "distortions in agriculture programs that discourage oats production."

Deon Stuthman, an oat researcher at the University of Minnesota and chairman of the National Oat Improvement Council, thinks Congress may go even further. "People in a lot of different areas are embarrassed that the United States will be importing 70 million bushels of oats this year," he said.

Imports are another reason farmers shouldn't count on a boom, Lakness said. "We farmers in this part of the state raise the finest oats of anyplace in the nation. Then the oat people decide they can get a better deal somewhere else."

Oat bran craze shows no signs of tapering off

CHICAGO (AP) — Nothing helps scenery like ham and eggs, Mark Twain once remarked, but health-conscious Americans are choosing a bowl of oat bran instead to brighten their breakfast horizons.

Consumer craving for the husk of the oat kernel has opened up a whole new landscape for cereal makers and bakers, while critics charge that greedy food companies are unscrupulously capitalizing on the consumer craze.

Almost 1½ years have passed since the oat-bran boom began, ignited by scientific studies indicating that just over an ounce of oat bran eaten daily as part of a low-fat diet could help prevent heart attacks.

"We have not really seen any slackening in demand," said Ron Bottrell, a spokesman for Chicago-based Quaker Oats Co., the nation's largest oat miller and producer of oat bran cereal. "It's a moving target. You keep adding capacity, but demand keeps increasing too."

Quaker is producing a million pounds of oat bran a month, compared with a million pounds a year only two years ago, and plans to introduce a new oat bran cereal this spring, a cold variety to complement its hot variety.

Its Cedar Rapids, Iowa, plant is making oat bran cereal 24 hours a day, and Quaker is considering adding production lines at its other plants.

Meanwhile, competitors are jumping on the bran wagon this spring, including Nabisco Foods Co. of Parsippany, N.J., and St. Louis-based Ralston Purina Co.

"We don't see it tapering off," said Nabisco spokeswoman Caroline Fee. "The rise in popularity is just phenomenal. It does not seem to be a fad."

Heart disease and high cholesterol aren't going to disappear overnight, and to the extent oat bran can help, neither will it, companies reason.

"To benefit from oat bran, you don't have it one morning and that's it. It has to be part of a diet," Ms. Fee said.

The magic of oat bran is that it is one of the best known sources of soluble fiber, which reduces cholesterol in the blood and along with it risk of heart disease. Beans like pinto, kidney and navy; psyllium, a seed grain; rice bran; and fruits with pectin, like apples and grapefruit, are good sources.

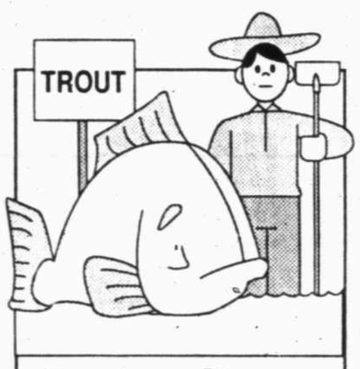

"We estimate about half a cup of cooked beans can lower cholesterol by about the same amount as a bowl of oat bran," said Bonnie Liebman, nutrition director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest. "The bean people don't have the bucks...The industry is not as adept at advertising. You don't hear about it, but that doesn't mean it won't work."

One of the most important studies of oat bran found that people with normal blood cholesterol levels who went on a low-fat diet reduced their cholesterol levels by about 5 percent. But if their diets included 2 ounces of oat bran or oat meal, the cholesterol levels dropped 8 percent to 9 percent.

Dietitian Linda Van Horn, who led the study at Northwestern University Medical School, said the difference is significant. Every 1 percent decline in blood cholesterol is believed to result in a 1 percent to 2 percent reduction in heart attack risk.

Oat bran benefits can be more dramatic for people with high blood cholesterol, who may see a 13 percent to 19 percent reduction when on a low-fat diet that includes an oat bran muffin or a bowl of oat bran daily, according to a study in last April's Journal of the American Medical Association.

AGRICULTURE

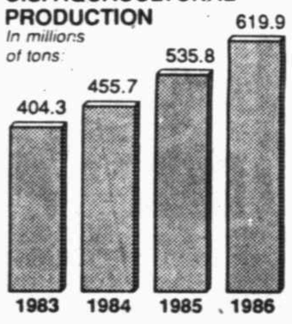

Aquaculture: "fish farming"

In 1986, U.S. companies produced about 620 million tons of fish grown in controlled environments. The new business of aquaculture has grown up in response to dwindling supplies of fish in the wild. Production has grown steadily between 1983 and 1986.

Aquaculture production down in '88

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 10-year boom in U.S. aquaculture production slowed last year as catfish farmers eased back on expanding their operations, according to the Agriculture Department.

Overall, U.S. production of edible and non-edible aquaculture products increased only 40 million pounds last year, compared with a 1987 growth of more than 100 million pounds, the department's Economic Research Service said Wednesday in a preliminary report.

Despite the throttling back in catfish production, total 1988 output grew 5.2 percent to a record 295 million pounds, the report said. Catfish growth was more than 32 percent in 1987 and 11 percent in 1986.

Catfish production was accompanied by a 23.6 percent increase in prices paid to farmers by processors in 1988. Those price averages ranged from $1.61 per pound in California to 71 cents in Louisiana.

"However, higher feed and energy costs led to a 20 percent to 25 percent increase in production costs, which meant that net returns (to farmers) were only 5 percent to 10 percent higher," the report said.

Trout producers surveyed by the agency sold 58.9 million pounds with a value of $63.6 million between Sept. 1, 1987, and Aug. 31, 1988, the report said. Producers also sold more than 361 million trout eggs worth $2.8 million.

Production of pen-raised salmon was estimated at six million pounds in 1988, a 70 percent increase from 1987. The report said domestic salmon production "will probably continue to see large gains" in the next few years.

USDA says yams not sweet potatoes

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Popeye had been a sweet potato, he wouldn't have dared say, "I yam what I yam and that's all I yam" around certain people in the Agriculture Department.

"Sweet potatoes and yams come from different biological and geographical origins," says USDA economist Amy Allred. "However, the darker varieties of sweet potatoes are often erroneously called yams."

In fact, the United States produces virtually no yams of its own. Sweet potatoes, yes, around 12 million hundredweight a year, or roughly 545,000 metric tons.

But that's far down the world's production list, with global output in 1987 at nearly 133 million tons. China is the biggest producer at 113 million tons.

Yam production is much smaller at about 24 million tons, with most grown in Africa. Nigeria, with a 1987 production of 16 million tons, is the leading producer.

Allred says in a report by the department's Economic Research Service that sweet potatoes have been cultivated since prehistoric times in two widely separated parts of the world, tropical America and the South Pacific islands.

Early artifacts show yams were used for food in West Africa prior to 50,000 B.C, and have been grown in Southeast Asia since 3,000 B.C.

But somewhere along the line, the yam-sweet potato question was settled partly, at least, in North Carolina, the leading U.S. producer. It is now the North Carolina Sweetpotato Commission, with no mention of yams in the official title.

Grocers fear consumers losing confidence in food

By PAMELA YIP
Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — California grocers and state officials, scrambling under the shadow of a food safety crisis, fear people are losing confidence in the food supply.

Jack Parnell, head of the state's Food and Agriculture problem says that though the problem is a matter perception rath is a matter perception rather than "reality," it remains a problem for the food industry.

Supermarkets must restore consumer confidence quickly, said Don Beaver, president of the California Grocers Association.

"We have seen some decrease in produce sales in the stores," he said. "We are really concerned with that."

Beaver and Parnell unveiled a five-point program to be developed among retailers, growers and the state Food and Agriculture Department.

The five-point plan calls for:

- A Quality Assurance Program to inform consumers that California-grown produce must meet state public health standards.
- Having growers fund an expansion of the state's pesticide residue sampling program.
- Pushing for reporting of pesticides which aren't now restricted.
- Toughening the penalty for growers who violate pesticide usage laws.
- Expanding consumer education efforts, including stuffing brochures about pesticide use laws in grocery bags.

Consumer groups and environmentalists attacked the five-point plan as inadequate.

"All this is a PR effort instead of reducing pesticides in food," said David Bunn of the California Public Interest Research Group.

Grocers and the rest of the food industry have been hurt by recent food controversies, including reports that:

Alar, a chemical used to enhance the appearance and firmness of apples, could cause cancer in children. Beaver said the news caused sales of apples and apple products in grocery stores to plummet as much as 20 percent statewide.

Another report said Aldicarb, an insecticide used on potatoes and bananas, poses an unreasonable risk of illness to infants and children.

Most debt relief applications processed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says more than 80 percent of the thousands of applications from farmers seeking special debt relief from the Farmers Home Administration have been processed.

"Every completed application will be processed in time for farmers to put their spring crop in the ground," Neal Sox Johnson, the FmHA's acting administrator, said Tuesday.

Johnson added that even those whose applications are incomplete will be able to farm this year because of expanded appeal rights.

The Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 required FmHA to tell borrowers who were more than 180 days delinquent about the various liberalized debt servicing options available under the law.

By law, borrowers had 45 days to respond and furnish certain financial and production information. The agency than had 60 days in which to obtain additional information and process the applications. In most cases, that period ended March 10.

No laughing matter

A spectator at Beijing's art gallery seems to be mocked by a piece in the largest exhibition of avant-garde art in China's recent history. The exhibit was briefly shut down last month when a sculptor defied a ban on performance art and shot at her own work with an air gun.

Artist builds furniture, works land

By JEFF BARNARD

BLY, Ore. (AP) — Ask Ned Livingston what he does and even he has a hard time deciding what it is, exactly.

There's what he calls "this stuff": the chairs and other furniture he whittles in fluid designs, which sell for big money in fashionable art galleries in New York and Los Angeles.

Then there's what he calls "the land": the old Gerber Ranch, which he and his wife inherited with its pastures to irrigate, and timber to manage.

And there are the fish in the pond in front of the house, which need a handful of chopped liver now and then; the red-legged partridges, which he released into Miller Creek Canyon; and the Klamath County Planning Commission, on which he serves as a member.

"You are talking to a guy who is not particularly sure what woman he is married to, the furniture or the land," Livingston said one winter's day at his home, which he built in a meadow surrounded by ponderosa pine and juniper at the foot of Horsefly Mountain. "And I'm not particularly worried about it."

Livingston and his wife, Marilyn, were both born and raised in this high desert country east of the Cascade Range: Ned in Klamath Falls and Marilyn on the old Gerber Ranch, which is a good 1½-hour drive from the city.

"We came back here (in the 1950s) after college for a year or two," he said. "Then we went to the big city looking for a big architecture job.

"If I had proceeded professionally, I would have stayed in San Francisco. But we kept coming back and coming back. Finally, I said, 'Let's quit looking for ourselves and do what we really want to do.'"

So they moved back to the ranch. Livingston started gluing up pieces of oak and walnut and using a horseshoe rasp to shape free-flowing chairs, cradles, music stands, benches, coat racks, library ladders and bar stools. The ones he didn't sell stayed home. It has taken some years to get six chairs around the dining table.

"In the '60s I was really hot," Livingston recalled. "I was going to burn up the art world with these things. I had a piece in the Renwick Gallery at the Smithsonian. The point is I had stuff around the country. Maybe I would sell a piece here, a piece there.

"It hasn't built into the kind of thing where I didn't need to worry about a monthly income. Then comes the estate breaking up. I had been involved in the operation of this ranch. So the last four or five years I've let this stuff slide. I've worked on irrigating the south 40 or thinning timber.

"The land is definitely a conflict with this other stuff," he said. "Most people aren't so fortunate to have that problem. It would be stupid of me to neglect it."

Livingston proudly recites the history of his land, which was assembled by cattlemen — first Horsefly Wilson and later the Gerber brothers — in the late 1800s out of small homesteads too poor to support a family. Marilyn Livingston drives about 15 miles on a cinder road to get to the little logging community of Bly, where she teaches school. They lease the pastureland for grazing and Ned is working on expanding the irrigation network to produce more summer grass.

He recently cruised several hundred acres of timber. Where the logging outfit wanted to cut all the mature timber, Livingston left enough of the big trees to generate new ones and maintain the diversity of the forest.

With 20 inches of snow on the ground, he's been able to get back to what he calls the wood whittling.

"My furniture tries to conform to the shape of the human body. It ends up kind of sculptural."

'Fletch Lives' at top of box office

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Fletch Lives," starring Chevy Chase as an investigative reporter prying into the private life of a TV evangelist, was Hollywood's top money maker over the Easter weekend with $5.6 million in ticket sales.

Movies aimed at youngsters on spring break dominated the Top 10 list, notably the re-released Disney film "The Rescuers" in second place with revenues of $3.1 million.

The only serious films in the weekend lineup were the Oscar-nominated movie "Rain Man," in third place with $3 million, followed closely by "Lean on Me," based on New Jersey's baseball bat-wielding educator Joe Clark, with $2.9 million.

"Miami Vice" TV star Don Johnson's latest big screen venture "Dead Bang" made its debut in fifth place with a $2.8 million gross, while "Leviathan," with Richard Crenna in an underwater variation of "Alien," was sixth with $2.7 million.

Here are the top movies for the weekend as tallied by Exhibitor Relations Co., with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater screens, average per screen, total gross and number of weeks in release.

1. "Fletch Lives," Universal, $5.6 million, 1,512 screens, $3,735 per screen, $17.1 million, two weeks.
2. "The Rescuers," Disney, $3.1 million, 1,482 screens, $2,120 per screen, $8.7 million, two weeks.
3. "Rain Man," MGM-UA, $3.0 million, 1,542 screens, $1,948 per screen, $134.7 million, 15 weeks.
4. "Lean on Me," Warner Bros., $2.9 million, 1,084 screens, $2,635 per screen, $20.2 million, four weeks.
5. "Dead Bang," Warner Bros., $2.8 million, 1,512 screens, $3,735 per screen, $2.8 million, one week.

Duke community benefits from Broadway-bound plays

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The quiet, ivy-covered campus at Duke University seems a long way from Times Square, but it has become a hot spot for producers testing shows on their way to Broadway.

"What you have is a New Haven-Boston-Philadelphia-Washington tryout in Durham," says Emanuel Azenberg, the New York producer who first started the migration south in 1986.

The 55-year-old Azenberg is a pragmatic, plain-spoken veteran of the Broadway theater. He has presented every Neil Simon play on Broadway since 1972. He's also a co-producer of "Jerome Robbins' Broadway," this season's newest hit and the biggest box-office bonanza since "The Phantom of the Opera."

Azenberg discovered Duke through his family. His daughter went to school there. During a visit, Azenberg saw a theater in the student union building and fell in love with it.

"This is what all of New York should have — beautiful 640-seat theaters to do plays," he says. Through the efforts of then-drama head John Clum and a handshake agreement with Joel Fleishman, a senior vice president at the university, the producer brought Eugene O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey into Night" starring Jack Lemmon to North Carolina.

When Azenberg takes a show to Duke, everybody — from actors to stagehands — works for minimum salary, and authors forego royalties. Students get to work behind the scenes with professionals on everything from props to sets to publicity.

SINCE "LONG Day's Journey," Azenberg has done Neil Simon's "Broadway Bound" and Jason Robards in "A Month of Sundays" at Duke. Now other producers have noticed the campus, too.

"They have picked up on the idea that it makes sense — artistically, financially, theatrically," Azenberg says. "You're bringing something to a new area and the audiences respond."

Lucille Lortel took "A Walk in the Woods," Lee Blessing's two-character play about American and Soviet arms control negotiators, to Duke. In February, dance superstar Mikhail Baryshnikov played three sold-out weeks in an adaptation of Franz Kakfa's "Metamorphosis" before coming to New York.

"Producers can do their thing in a very relaxed, non-pressure situation," says Ron Kumin, administrative director of the Duke drama program.

And they get intelligent, aware and responsive audiences, according to Kumin. Durham is one point in the Research Triangle, an area that also includes Raleigh and Chapel Hill and its large number of schools and universities. The triangle has the highest per capita population of Ph.D. engineers and scientists in the country.

Duke is a wealthy, conservative school, built on the tobacco fortune of James Buchanan Duke. The school, according to one college guide, likes to think of itself as "the Harvard of the South," and its academic credentials are impressive with first-rate engineering, business and medical schools.

Now the drama program — it isn't a department yet — has decided to try for a higher visibility. The program is headed by David Ball, formerly of Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

BALL, WHO arrived in 1985, currently supervises 35 students and a faculty of 12 instructors, including Azenberg who teaches a theater appreciation course. His reading list includes Tom Stoppard's "The Real Thing," Simon's "Brighton Beach Memoirs" and Athol Fugard's "Master Harold...and the boys," all of them, not coincidentally, produced on Broadway by Azenberg.

Because of the Broadway tryout situation, students and professionals learn from each other, Ball says.

"We had a session with four actresses who were in the cast and understudied roles in 'A Month of Sundays,'" he recalls. "They talked to our senior students which that year included seven women and one guy. What was supposed to be a 45-minute discussion about the roles of women in theater, went on for five hours."

Ball also decided to take the tryout program one step further. Besides serving as a testing ground for new Broadway shows, Duke would be used as an incubator for new plays by unknown authors and starring unknown actors.

The first new play produced under this program was "Moonlight and Valentino" by Ellen Simon, daughter of Neil Simon. It had its world premiere in February in a tiny performance space in the basement of the student union building.

"The fact that it's Neil Simon's daughter has something to do with it and nothing to do with it," Azenberg says.

"It is a good play. Now we've taken the money generated out of certain endowments that we've helped arrange and are using it for new playwrights."

MONEY FOR those endowment funds is being raised through benefit performances for Duke alumni of "Jerome Robbins' Broadway" in New York, "Les Miserables" in Chicago and "The Phantom of the Opera" in Los Angeles.

More than 40 students worked on "Metamorphosis" and "Moonlight and Valentino" during their performances at Duke. "Moonlight," according to Azenberg, will have another life somewhere in regional theater before he decides whether to bring it to New York.

The play already has made its mark on the Duke students who were involved in its production, and students were more involved in it than "Metamorphosis," which arrived with a complete New York production team.

"The stage manager of 'Moonlight and Valentino' is in the last semester of her senior year," Ball says. "She has now, to her credit, two or three Broadway shows on which she has been assistant stage manager and has her Equity card. That's the kind of experience you can't buy."

Ball has even more plans for Duke Drama, including the start-up late this spring of a professional theater company in Durham. With Kumin and other investors, he has privately funded Duke Street Films.

Little's career hardly blazing after 'Saddles'

Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — Cleavon Little thought he was going to be a big star after he caught America's attention by playing the black sheriff in Mel Brooks' 1974 wacky Western spoof, "Blazing Saddles."

It didn't work out that way.

But the Oklahoma-born Little has tried to keep busy ever since. He hopes his newest film may help him catch some of that elusive film stardom.

He co-stars with Chevy Chase in "Fletch Lives" as Calculus, Fletch's (Chase's) inherited manservant (who has a secret). In between roles in films like "Vanishing Point" and "Greased Lightning," Little has been active in theater. He starred as Midge in "I'm Not Rappaport," and expects to reprise the role in the film version for PBS next year.

But something is missing. Little feels the full use of his talents have never really been captured in feature films.

"Even the biggest stars are never satisfied, and I don't know if one should be," he said. "I don't know if there's satisfaction involved in it.

"Because I have an option of the theater, I stopped about five years ago thinking that I would get a lot of film offers after 'Blazing Saddles' 'cause that didn't happen," he said in his Los Angeles hotel suite.

Frustration led to worry for the former San Diego drama teacher. Worry led to an ulcer. The ulcer finally led to a decision.

"It just reached a point where I couldn't take it any more. I just sold my house and left. I went and stayed in an apartment ... and started working in off-Broadway again. I kind of started over again."

Ironically, Little is hearing rumors these days about a possible sequel to "Blazing Saddles."

"I'd love to do it," he says, "for a whole lot more money this time." Playing the black sheriff in Brooks' spoof of the Old West only paid him $25,000 for 10 weeks work

'Anti-art' takes over mainstream center

By MARILYN AUGUST

PARIS (AP) — A clanking pin ball machine, six bicycles and a projector showing white light are among 100 pieces of "anti-art" objects on display at the Georges Pompidou Center in a retrospective of Situationist art. It is said to be the first such exhibit of its kind.

"On the Passage of a Few People Through a Rather Brief Moment in Time, the Situationists 1957-1972," features comic strips, cartoons, pamphlets, posters, paintings, sculpture and books documenting the growth of the International Situationist.

The International Situationist was an underground, avant-garde movement of the 1960s and '70s which attempted to tear down the barriers between art and everyday life.

Situationists worked to combat what they saw as the oppression of the individual by advertising and other elements of a capitalist society.

"Their basic idea was that the mediated image controls us," said Elisabeth Sussman, chief curator at the Institute of Contemporary Art in Boston which co-produced the show with the Pompidou Center.

"Advertising is so dominant people only know what they're told to desire, there's no room for their own desires to surface."

The show will run in Paris through April 9, go to London's Institute of Contemporary Art from June 21 to Aug. 13 and move to the Institute of Contemporary Art of Boston from Oct. 21 to Jan.7, 1990.

Among works on display are a giant collage-mural by Britain's Jamie Reid, who designed posters and record covers for the now-defunct Sex Pistols punk rock group, and paintings by Italy's Giuseppe Pinot-Gallizio wrapped around an industrial spool.

Most notable in his absence is Guy Debord, the French filmmaker who was the movement's leading theoretician and author of the Situationist bible, "The Society of the Spectacle." The reclusive Debord has not allowed screenings of his films since 1962, but they were evoked in the show by a whirring projector showing only a beam of light.

The exhibition would probably horrify die-hard Situationists who were opposed to both showing or selling art.

Born in Europe as an offshoot of surrealism, the movement — gathering no more than 100 members at any given time — expelled followers who became too commercial.

"Painting is finished. It might as well be killed off," proclaimed one poster.

This early philosophy rose to a climax during the 1968 student revolts in Paris, made its way to the University of California at Berkeley, and contributed, ultimately, to the rise of punk culture in Britain in the '70s.

"For the International Situationist, there is no separation between art and nonart," said Peter Wollen, the show's curator. "Art became a total environment, not a canvas on the wall."

Publisher reaps success from farm-out effort

By VERN ANDERSON

LAYTON, Utah (AP) — When Gibbs Smith moved his publishing business to his father-in-law's old barn, cows lowed in the background as he talked on the telephone.

There were squawking chickens, too. But novice publishers can't be too sure where their next meal will find them.

"It was probably pure idiocy. It was the '60s and we felt we were in there with all the other guys trying to do things a different way," says Catherine Smith, Gibbs' wife, recalling the couple's 1969 plunge into publishing from a sculptor's studio in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Three lean years later, the only two employees of Peregrine Smith Books left their office-home-warehouse and moved East, not to the urban strongholds of publishing in Manhattan, but to the pastoral solitude of their northern Utah roots. Her father, a banker, gave them a house rent-free. They lived on $200 a month. The only recreation they could afford was hiking and camping.

Born in California, Gibbs had been largely raised in Utah. He had earned a master's degree in history at the University of Utah and, as a graduate student in Santa Barbara, turned his thesis into "Joe Hill," a book on the American labor hero and songwriter, which Grosset & Dunlap published.

Enthralled by each detail of the publishing process, and with $15,000 he had received for screen rights, Smith started his own company. He released four books on California history and culture the first year, but four years passed before they hired anyone else.

"I loved writing and I loved the publishing process," Smith said. "And I loved the idea that you could actually produce something as an author or publisher that could affect large numbers of people and live on for decades or centuries."

From the beginning, Smith had envisioned reaching a national audience with the company's expanding range of elegantly illustrated books, many combining his activist's adoration for the Great Basin in the American West with his passion for history, art, photography and Western culture.

"We've tried to publish a lot of books that help sensitize people to the beauties of these canyonlands," said Smith, 48, chairman of the Utah chapter of the Sierra Club. "They are books about Utah, but I don't think of southern Utah as local. It is public domain nationally."

In its 20th year, Peregrine Smith has 17 employees, and the remodeled but still-rustic barn on Peacefield Farm produces about 30 new titles a year, including illustrated nature books, natural history, poetry, fiction, drama, short stories, anthologies and criticism.

"When I first went to New York many years ago as a publisher, people were saying 'Peregrine who?' Now people at least know who we are and appreciate what we do," said Smith.

Smith, whose volumes sell best on the East and West coasts, concedes that running a modest publishing house outside New York is not easy.

Cowboy Junkies not average pop group

TORONTO (AP) — The words like ethereal, despairing, melancholy and dolorous that mark reviews of the Cowboy Junkies tip off right away that this is no your average pop group.

So, learning that vocalist Margo Timmins' apartment on one of Toronto's trendiest streets is unmarked and hidden away behind some offices should not come as a surprise.

"That's the way I like it," she says with a bit of a grimace when told the address for the scheduled interview was hard to find.

The publicity machine of the pop music industry is gearing up to promote one of its unlikeliest recent hits, the Cowboy Junkies' "The Trinity Session" recorded in one day in November 1987 at the Church of the Holy Trinity in Toronto.

The album, whose production cost was $250, includes eerily stretched out, sparse versions of Hank Williams' "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry," Lou Reed's "Sweet Jane" and Patsy Cline's "Walking After Midnight."

Some haunting originals are included as well, such as "Misguided Angel" and "200 More Miles."

"In the last two months I've done more interviews than most people do in a lifetime," the 28-year-old Timmins said, taking a break from packing for a long tour that includes a New York stop to perform on "Saturday Night Live."

"It's just a matter of getting used to it," she said, with a laugh. "It's like everything ... everything's happened so quickly."

Her 29-year-old brother, Michael, and his childhood friend Alan Anton came back to Toronto after stints performing to little acclaim for a few years in New York and England. They started rehearsing in the garage of Timmins' younger brother, Pete, then brought him into the band to play drums. Margo joined to do vocals.

But not only didn't she see herself as a singer, she also was concerned that a band with too many family relationships could cause strains. "It's worked out really well. Mike and I really work well together," she said.

Settled in for a conversation with EmmyLou Harris' new record playing in the background, she said, "It's an honor for me to sing his songs."

The band has been together since 1985 but publicity swelled last year after RCA released "The Trinity Session" in the United States and enthusiastic reviews started appearing.

The music generally is pegged as country-blues with a touch of the Velvet Underground.

The Los Angeles Times' critics poll found it the best pop album of 1988, beating out U2, Tracy Chapman and Prince. Times' critic Robert Hilburn called them "mesmerizing."

Michael Timmins phones to check if the interview is running smoothly or if an explanation of how the Cowboy Junkies picked their name is needed, but Margo tells him it's already been discussed.

She said the name was chosen because an independent band, especially in Canada with its smaller market, needs anything it can get to attract attention. "I think it did us well at that level," she said.

'Pelle' plagued by good luck, director claims

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Bille August claims he is not superstitious. But the Danish director admits that while filming the award-winning "Pelle the Conquerer" he was persecuted by good luck.

During six months of shooting, storms appeared on cue and freakish weather added just the right touch of ice to the Baltic Sea for a critical scene.

"Pelle" just won the Oscar for best foreign film, and Swedish star Max von Sydow was nominated for best actor in the 61st annual Academy Awards, although Dustin Hoffman won the award for his performance in "Rainman."

Though "Pelle" captured the Golden Palm at Cannes for best film and won an American Golden Globe, August is ambivalent about such honors.

"I respect the value of awards, but it feels odd to be competing with other filmmakers. I'd rather just be a colleague,' he said.

Before the Oscar nominations, August generated Hollywood's interest with last year's "Twist and Shout," a film about Danish teen-agers in the 1960s. Offers for new pictures came in, but he said he didn't care for the manuscripts or the conditions.

Then he read "The House of the Spirits," by Isabel Allende, a San Francisco-based author. The book traces 70 years of history in her native Chile.

Other studios were chasing Allende to sell the movie rights but she held them off, unconvinced that her story of hatred, fears and loves could be transformed into a movie.

August said he practically forced her to watch "Pelle," which he had just put in the can.

"She was reserved after the screening and would make no decision, so I took my film and went home, disappointed," he said in an interview. The next day Allende called him and said he was the only director she wanted to film her book. The Warner Bros. project will be filmed in Argentina in English.

"It is very exciting for me," August said. "American studios have the capacity for larger projects and nearly an endless pool of good screen actors, whereas in Scandinavia the number of good screen actors is limited.

"In the United States there are good technicians, economic resources and distribution is unbelievably effective."

August never looks beyond his current project. "I am monogamous to the project I'm working on and don't flirt with future ideas," he said. "Now I am being true to 'The House of the Spirits.'"

Good fortune seemed to pursue the shooting of "Pelle the Conquerer," Martin Andersen Nexoe's 1906 novel about Swedish immigrants in Denmark, shot on the Baltic island of Bornholm.

When a 60-year-old fisherman heard that the opening scene — ships sailing through dense fog — was scheduled for Oct. 8, his birthday, he reassured the director that as far back as he could recall there had always been a storm on that date. As if on order, the storm that hit Bornholm that day was preceeded by thick fog.

Three days before the crew was to film Pelle escaping from his tormentors by hopping across a cluster of ice floes, the Baltic was totally free of ice. Temperatures suddenly plunged and froze the sea into solid ice. Then an on-shore wind the evening before shooting activated a warm current that created the perfect floes on which the boy made his escape.

August says the harder you work, the luckier you get. "It is the director's job to anticipate problems with the crew, weather, to figure out how actors will react on that day," he said. "Only when every detail is in place can you begin to experiment."

The title role was played by Pelle Hvenegaard, who was chosen from among 3,000 boys. Although he is Danish, his lines at the start of the movie are in a southern Swedish dialect which he learned from a tutor.

Non-Scandinavian audiences will miss the transition from Swedish to Danish, but August believes it doesn't matter. "Pelle has universal, international qualities, emotions that can be understood by all," he said.

"But I think it's a mistake to make 'international films," to polish them down until they are neutered. A film needs identity. The best I've seen have this element," he said.

Working with von Sydow, a veteran of 40 foreign films who played in some of Ingmar Bergman's best pictures, was one of the greatest experiences of his directing career, August said.

Proposition 48 gamble pay s off in classroom

EDITOR'S NOTE — All-American looked more likely than All-Academic for Damon Patterson, but the Oklahoma sophomore made the grade in the classroom first. His success story is recounted.

By OWEN CANFIELD
AP Sports Writer

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — When Damon Patterson came to Oklahoma two years ago, he brought skills that made Sooner coaches believe he would one day be a star in the Big Eight Conference.

Stardom in class has come much quicker, though, and that's a longer shot than any he will make on the court.

Patterson, a Proposition 48 casualty coming out of high school, was chosen to the Big Eight's All-Academic basketball team this season.

"I really didn't expect it," said Patterson, a sophomore from Kalamazoo, Mich. "But I knew my grades were gonna be pretty good. I worked hard."

That's a change from the Patterson who used to work hardest on the court.

He admits he didn't spend the necessary time studying his first two years of high school, and while he improved enough in the classroom to have a 3.0 grade-point average as a senior, he still couldn't make the grade on his American College Test. Twice he failed to get the required 15 that would make him eligible to play basketball as a freshman.

"I didn't prepare my background enough for it," Patterson said. "I tried to prepare and learn different things, but the highest I got was a 12."

That senior year, when he was averaging 20 points and 18 rebounds while also making solid grades, made an impression on Patterson. It showed that if he worked as hard on his books as he did on his jumper, he could make it in college.

As a Prop 48 player, Patterson could not practice, travel or play with the Sooners, who went to the NCAA championship game last year. It wasn't easy.

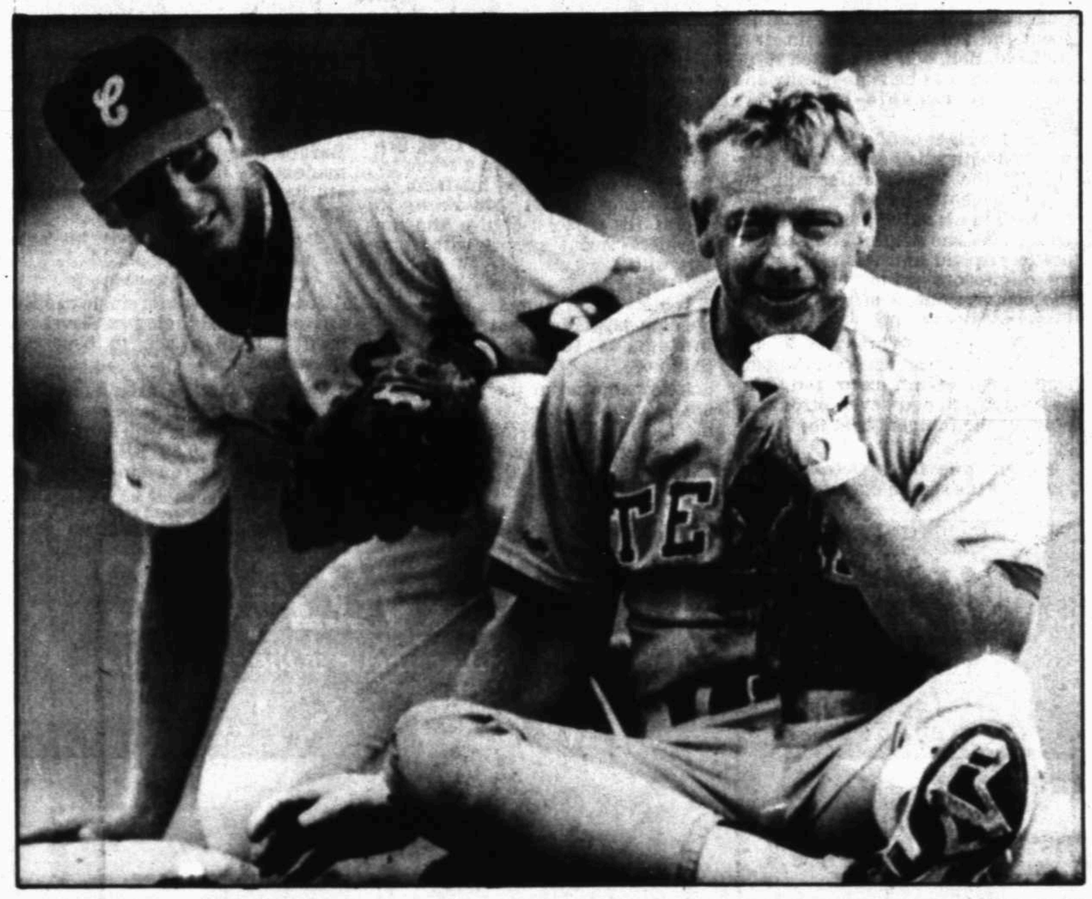

"The first semester things didn't go too well," he said. "I picked things up in the second semester and had a 2.4 (grade point)."

Thomas Hill, Oklahoma's assistant athletic director for academics, said Patterson primarily has taken classes that fulfill the university's general education requirements, as do most freshmen and sophomores.

In the second semester of his freshman year, Patterson said, he took sociology, American history, two communications classes and geography.

As he looked toward this season, the 6-foot-7 swingman knew he had a chance to play. So he attended summer school to pick up extra-credit hours, then kept at it in the first semester of this year, taking a communications class, a social studies class and an elective worth one credit, "Theory of Coaching," among other courses.

Final Four's rewards

By WILLIAM C. RHODEN
N.Y. Times News Service

Shortly after his team's victory in the Midwest Regional on Sunday, Lou Henson, the head basketball coach at Illinois, was asked what it meant to guide the Illini to their first Final Four in 37 years.

"Well, it's always nice to get to the Final Four," said Henson, who became the head coach in 1975. When the questioner asked why, Henson shrugged and said, "It'll give the alumni something to talk about."

In fact, for 50 years proud alumni have bragged about their teams' success in the NCAA tournament. But now the rewards for doing well have become a bit more lavish than Henson's comments might suggest. Prestige has been supplemented by staggering sums of prize money.

WHEN OREGON defeated Ohio State in the first national championship game, in 1939, before 5,500 fans in Evanston, Ill., the event's organizers lost $2,531. In 1942, Stanford captured the national championship and Coach Everett Dean took home the school's reward, a check for $93.95.

This weekend in Seattle, Duke, Illinois, Michigan and Seton Hall will each receive $1,251,000 for reaching the Final Four. Last year's four — Kansas, Duke, Arizona and Oklahoma — each received $1,153,700. The NCAA, which serves as the administrative and enforcement arm for its 293 member institutions, will take home $23,577,259 out of the total receipts of $66.3 million.

WITH ITS escalating profits, the NCAA tournament has reached a point where there are really no losers. While surviving the field is lucrative, simply being invited is profitable.

According to estimates by the NCAA, each of the 64 teams invited to the tournament will receive $250,200. If a team wins its first-round game, the reward rises to $500,400. A second-round winner gets $750,600, and the eight regional finalists will get $1,000,800.

For most university presidents, however, the benefits of doing well in the highly visible tournament are rooted more in public-relations value than in profit.

"This has been a new and delightful experience for us," said Dr. Stanley Ikenberry, the University of Illinois president since 1979. "To be honest, none of are quite sure what the effects will be. This is so new, we're just sitting back in shock, in awe."

DUKE, DESPITE having reached the Final Four three times in four years, likes to downplay its basketball success. Still, Dr. H. Keith Brodie, the university president, conceded that success on the court had made it easier for Duke to maintain its lofty academic image.

"It's hard to build a reputation, so you strive hard to keep it," Brodie said. "We recruit excellent professors and students, and it's funny, but that is made easier by a Final Four appearance."

Good feelings about the program may also be converted into more generous alumni donations and increased enrollment.

AFTER KANSAS reached the Final Four in 1986, Dr. Gene A. Budig, the university chancellor, said the basketball team's success would be a boon to the university's ambitious fund-raising campaign.

But as basketball teams have become effective advertising devices, student groups at certain schools have noted that teams in some cases represent a contradiction.

At Michigan, for example, black students point to the fact that at a time when the starting basketball team is all black and plays to sold-out arenas, there has been a surge of racism on the Ann Arbor campus. The situation became so acute that last May the university instituted an anti-discrimination code.

At Duke, where the school's basketball success in recent years has coincided with the recruitment of black athletes, members of the faculty and student body have protested the low number of blacks on the faculty.

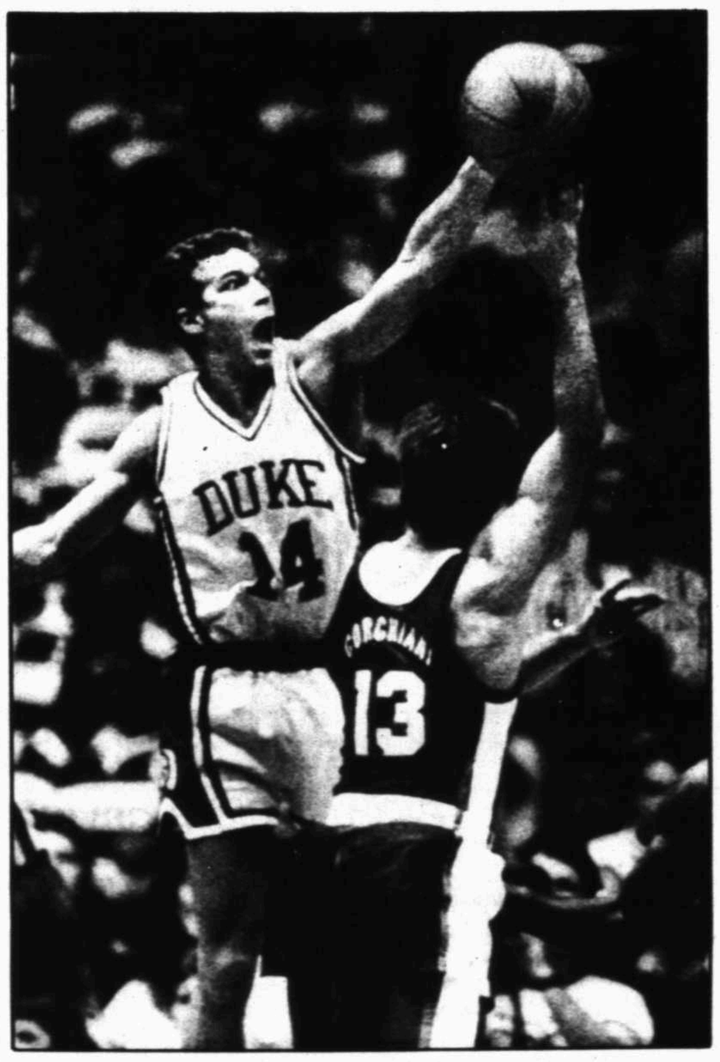

SHORTLY after last year's Final Four in Kansas City, Mo., 500 Duke students — blacks and whites — rallied in support of faculty members who resigned after a proposal to increase the number of blacks on the faculty was rejected. After two weeks of protest, the proposal was adopted.

On other fronts as well, the escalating rewards of reaching the Final Four have been accompanied by pitfalls. As Budig discovered last fall, a university that exploits the success of its most visible program must also suffer the consequences of wrongdoing.

Five months after winning the national championship, Kansas was placed on probation for three years because of rules violations in the basketball program. As a result of the sanctions, Kansas became the first national champion prohibited from defending its championship.

But just as wrongdoing can tarnish stellar acheivement, the success of Illinois this season demonstrates how achievements wrought by hard work can clear up a checkered reputation.

The university's basketball and football programs were placed on probation for two years in 1967. The basketball team was given another two-year probation in 1974. The football team was placed on one-year probation in February 1988, and the university was given notice that if there were one more violation in the next five years an offending program could receive the so-called death penalty and be barred from competition for a year.

Debate rages over 19-9

Should line be moved back?

SEATTLE (AP) — A committee of college coaches wants to push back the 3-point line nine inches, but the father of the rule thinks the line is just fine.

Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps, the chairman of the National Association of Basketball Coaches' rules committee, said Thursday the group will propose the change this weekend at the coaches' convention.

"Nothing has been passed or will be passed until the NCAA Rules Committee meets Sunday," said Phelps, who is also a member of that committee. "The board wished to move the line to the international distance. We'll bring it up Saturday at the rules discussion before the entire convention and that includes all divisions."

The current 3-point distance in the NCAA is 19 feet, 9 inches. The NBA line isn't symmetrical and goes from 22-0 at the sides to 23-9 at the top of the arc.

BUD EDWARD S. Steitz, national rules editor of the NCAA Rules Committee and the person credited with putting the 3-point line into college play, said there's no need to make a change.

"There's been some talk about moving it back nine inches to the Olympic distance," Steitz said. "But how could you justify that when the shooting percentages are down?"

"Coaches are just starting to find out how to use the 3-point shot as an integral part of the game and how to defense it," he said. "Our aim on the rules committee is to maintain a balance between offense and defense. When we see the shooting percentages going up then we'll take a look at extending the distance."

DURING the regular season, college teams made 37.6 of their attempts from behind the 3-point line, down from 38.35 percent in the 1987-88 season and 38.5 percent in 1986-87, the first season it was used in all games.

Phelps said the committee didn't want to make drastic rules changes every year just for the sake of change. He did say public reaction did have some bearing on the proposal.

"ESPN conducted a phone survey on the distance during the first round of the NCAA tournament and more than 12,000 people responded," Phelps said. "The results were that 3,861 said they didn't want the line to move; 6,307 said they wanted the international distance and 2,001 wanted the NBA distance.

"That means over 8,000 people said they wanted the line moved and it was really important to see how the fans felt."

The NCAA Rules Committee, chaired by Alabama-Birmingham coach Gene Bartow, will meet Sunday and any rules changes would be announced Tuesday, the day after the championship game.

THE NABC legislative committee also met Wednesday night and chairman C.M. Newton, who recently retired as basketball coach at Vanderbilt and will begin his duties as athletic director at Kentucky next week, said "there wasn't anything earth-shattering."

"The board will have several issues it wants brought before the general session. ... The issues we will address are staff size, Proposition 42 — an open and candid discussion in that area — freshmen ineligibility, and the concerns of the board and organization on the rash of coaching changes," he said.

Newton and Phelps both said they felt coaches should be more aware of contracts and how they affect both sides. There have been more than 30 coaching changes since the season ended.

"We know the risks are there and we accept them," Phelps said of the job changes. "We feel there has to be a better way to handle the way a guy is relieved or fired. We have some weaknesses with contracts and when you see people with credibility being fired for one losing season, and the Picking ultimate survivor, now that the NCAA's all of Asia-sized basketball tournament has been whittled down to a Final Four, doesn't seem any easier than it was when there were 64 teams.

In fact, when it was a 64-team field, it was relatively simple. Who else but Georgetown?

But last Sunday, the Hoyas got out-Duke by the Devils from Durham and, for the skeptics, that's no bull.

Even with four teams left, it's not a simple black and white choice, but one of various shades of gray, so many possibilities.

A sportswriter would be remiss in his obligation if he did not explore each for his readers, while leaving the door open for a hasty back door exit, an easy out, should form taking another beating.

IT'S an exercise known as beating around the bush and this year's Final Four provides a lot of bushes. There simply is no clear cut favorite.

This is no tournament of champions.

Duke finished somewhere behind North Carolina State in the ACC race and Seton Hall was the least likely Big East team to make.

After the Pirates used UNLV as the classroom lab experiment on woodsheds to reach the Final Four, the odds were good that Georgetown and Syracuse, the two "better" Big East teams left, were almost cinches to make it.

But to the business at hand. Illinois has to be the favorite to win over Michigan Saturday. They've already beaten the Spartans twice this year, so why not again?

Well, for one thing, beating the same team three times in a row, no matter how decisively the result of the first two games, is no easy trick at this level.

Then, too, this isn't Bill Freider calling the shots from the sidelines. This is Steve Fisher. How much of a difference will that make?

DUKE established itself as the other semifinal favorite, as it should be, after beating the team that should have won it all in the eyes of many.

The Blue Devils are playing a team whose basketball tradition is marked by a 35-year blank spot. That's how long it has been since the Pirates last achieved acclaim behind the Oranges of New Jersey.

Yet, this is a Seton Hall team that won the Alaskan Shootout, the early season tournament for college basketball's elite.

And Seton Hall not only advanced to the Final Four by beating Indiana and UNLV, but handed those teams the worst NCAA tournament defeats ever suffered by the traditional powers.

Sometimes even the safety of the bushes, isn't enough, however, especially when the soothsayer finds himself trapped in the dentist chair and, with drilled menacingly poised at ready, DDS orders not "open wide", but demands "who's going to win Saturday and Monday?"

"Uh, er, you've got to go with Duke and Illinois Saturday and Monday how can you go against the team that beat Georgetown," is the forced admission.

And heading for the safety of the outer office, "But, golly, it's tough to bet against Seton Hall... and that wonderful tradition."

Knick rally saps Mavs

NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing scored 26 points, including two key free throws with 2:11 left, as the New York Knicks handed the Dallas Mavericks their 12th consecutive defeat, 99-98 Thursday night.

The Knicks tied the score four times in the fourth quarter before taking their first lead, 94-93, on a 3-point goal by Mark Jackson with 3:28 left.

After a free throw by Adrian Dantley made it 94-94, Ewing's two free throws put the Knicks ahead to stay. Sam Perkins, who led Dallas with 21 points, then missed two free throws with 1:49 remaining.

A basket by Charles Oakley and another free throw by Ewing gave New York a 99-94 advantage, but a 3-pointer by Perkins narrowed the margin to two with 1:04 left.

Perkins converted one of two free throws with 32 seconds left to make it 99-98. Jackson missed two free throws with five seconds left, but the clock ran out after Dallas failed to get the rebound.

Warriors 113, Hornets 104

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Chris Mullin led a 15-2 run in the last 3:43 of the third quarter as Golden State snapped a season-high four-game losing streak. Mullin hit a jumper and two free throws to kick off the run and added a 3-pointer with one second left in the period to finish it.

Mullin led all scorers with 36 points and Mitch Richmond had 28 points and 12 rebounds. Terry Teagle added 24 points for the Warriors, and Winston Garland had 14 points and 12 rebounds.

Charlotte, led by Kurt Rambis' career-high 23 points, has lost five in a row and eight straight at home, the longest skid of the season.

Kings 135, Suns 123

Brad Lohaus scored 23 of his season-high 29 points in the second half and grabbed a career-high 10 rebounds as Sacramento snapped a string of six losses to the Suns.

Wayman Tisdale had 27 points and Danny Ainge 25 for the Kings. Harold Pressley added 16 points — including four 3-point baskets.

Warriors 113, Hornets 104

Golden State snapped a four-game slide, tying its longest of the season, as Chris Mullin had 36 points and rookie Mitch Richmond added 28 and 12 rebounds. Terry Teagle also contributed 24 points.

Rockets 109, Nets 101

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Akeem Olajuwon scored 29 points and grabbed 10 rebounds as the Rockets ended a nine-game road losing streak.

The Rockets, who have won three in a row, used a 13-3 run late in the third quarter to turn a 65-64 deficit into a 77-68 lead they would never surrender.

Nuggets 123, SuperSonics 116

DENVER — Michael Adams and Walter Davis, stymied during the first three quarters, had 14 of Denver's first 18 points in the fourth quarter and sparked a 10-0 run as the Nuggets ran away from Seattle. It was the Nuggets' 14th straight home win; they are 30-5 here. The SuperSonics suffered their ninth straight road loss.

Brewers' Molitor injured

Associated Press

Paul Molitor and Milwaukee Brewers hoped to hurt the rest of the American League East this season. Instead, they keep getting hurt.

Molitor dislocated his finger Thursday and will be out three weeks, further crippling a team that has been wracked with injuries. He got hurt during some horseplay with teammate Dave Engle and was placed on the 15-day disabled list.

Earlier in the off-season, pitchers Ted Higuera and Juan Nieves and shortstop Dale Sveum went on the disabled list.

"At the start of the year, things can happen to minimize an absence. This is no fun, but it's the facts," Manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "We don't think it's a blow, but it's a shortage."

The Montreal Expos got good news when pitcher Pascual Perez received clearance from commissioner Peter Ueberroth's office to rejoin the team.

A statement issued by the commissioner's office said Perez, who has spent the last two months in drug rehabilitation, will be allowed to return "as soon as he is physically and medically capable of playing baseball."

Perez, a right-handed pitcher who was 12-8 with a 2.44 earned run average for the Expos last season, entered the center following a cocaine problem in his native Dominican Republic over the winter. The decision not to suspend him was reached after discussions primarily involving the commissioner's officer and the Players Association.

Rangers 6, White Sox 2

Ruben Sierra hit his seventh home run, tying a team record, and Charlie Hough pitched seven strong innings as the Rangers beat the White Sox.

Hough, who faces Detroit's Jack Morris in the season opener in Texas on Tuesday, gave up five hits, including a two-run homer by Carlton Fisk. The Rangers have won 14 of their last 17 games.

Sierra tied the Rangers' record of seven spring home runs set by Pete Incaviglia in 1986. Cecil Espy also homered off Jerry Reuss, who will pitch Chicago's opener Tuesday in California.

Reds 2, Royals 0

Danny Jackson and three other Cincinnati pitchers combined to shut out the Royals on seven singles.

Jackson, a former Royal, struck out three and allowed five hits in six innings. Rob Dibble, Jeff Gray and Kent Tekulve held the Royals to two more singles the rest of the way, with Tekulve getting his second save of the spring.

Paul O'Neill hit a two-run homer in the fifth off Charlie Leibrandt, a former Red.

Mariners 4, Cubs 0

Scott Bankhead, Jerry Reed and Mike Schooler combined on a three-hitter and 19-year-old Ken Griffey Jr. continued his torrid spring hitting as Seattle defeated the Cubs.

Bankhead, who entered the game with a 7.11 earned run average in spring training, gave up two hits in seven innings.

The Mariners scored two runs off Rick Sutcliffe in the sixth. Greg Briley tripled and scored on a triple by Griffey, who extended his team-record spring training streak to 15 games. His triple also gave him the Mariners' spring record with total hits with 32.

Yankees 4, Orioles 2

Tommy John tuned up for his opening-day assignment with seven innings as the Yankees beat Baltimore.

John, who began the spring as a non-roster player, gave up a run in the fourth on Randy Milligan's RBI single and another on a sixth-inning solo home run by Cal Ripken.

Jose Bautista took the loss, giving up three runs on three hits in seven innings.

Tigers 7, Red Sox 1

Fred Lynn, Chet Lemon and Kenny Williams homered to lead Detroit over Boston.

Doyle Alexander allowed four hits and one run over five innings. Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd gave up six runs on seven hits in 3 1-3 innings.

Braves 3, Expos 2

Jeff Blauser hit a two-out, RBI single to cap a three-run 12th inning to give Atlanta a victory over Montreal.

The Expos had taken a 2-0 lead in the top of the inning on Rex Hudler's two-run single off Joe Boever. But the Braves took advantage of two errors in the 12th for the victory.

Twins 7, Astros 6

Kent Hrbek doubled home a run and scored on Gary Gaetti's broken-bat single as Minnesota scored three times in the ninth inning for the second straight day.

With the game tied 4-4, 4, Al Newman and John Moses singled off Dave Smith. After Dan Gladden hit a sacrifice fly, Hrbek doubled and Gaetti singled.

Houston rallied for two runs in the bottom of the ninth. Singles by Louis Meadows, Craig Reynolds and Terry Puhl resulted in one run and Rafael Ramirez's RBI grounder made it 7-6. Juan Berenguer got Kevin Bass on a groundout to end the game.

Bass and Glenn Davis hit solo homers off Frank Viola.

Indians 12, Brewers 6

Joe Carter's two-run single capped a five-run third inning as Cleveland used a 13-hit attack to beat the Brewers.

Cleveland added three more runs in the fourth off Milwaukee starter Bryan Clutterbuck, who entered the game with a 0.60 ERA. Oddibe McDowell's two-run single capped the inning.

Lemieux scores four goals

Penguins lose anyway, 9-5

NHL

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Scott Young and Ray Ferraro each scored twice as the Hartford Whalers beat the Pittsburgh Penguins 9-5 Thursday night despite a four-goal game by Mario Lemieux.

Lemieux's third goal was shorthanded, his 13th of the season, breaking Wayne Gretzky's NHL record. Lemieux scored his fourth goal in the final minute to raise his league-leading total to 83.

The Penguins remained in second place in the Patrick Division, one point ahead of the New York Rangers. Each team has two games to go in the regular season, including a showdown game Saturday night in Pittsburgh.

Canadiens 4, Sabres 2

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Guy Carbonneau scored two goals as Montreal defeated Buffalo.

The Canadiens, regular season Adams Division winners, improved to 18-4-2 in their last 24 games and moved ahead of Calgary by one point in their battle for the top spot in the NHL.

The loss left the Sabres only two points ahead of the Whalers in the battle for third place in the Adams Division. Both Hartford and Buffalo have two games remaining.

Flyers 5, Capitals 4

PHILADELPHIA — Tim Kerr scored two goals and the Philadelphia Flyers took advantage of three power-play opportunities to defeat Washington, allowing the Flyers to close within three points of the third place New York Rangers in the Patrick Division. Both teams have two games left in the regular season.

Kerr put the Flyers ahead for good when he broke a 1-1 tie in the first period with his second goal of the night and 47th goal of the season.

Blues 4, Nordiques 3, OT

ST. LOUIS — Greg Paslawski scored on a rebound shot with 3:21 remaining in overtime.

The Blues had snapped a 2-2 tie when Dave Lowry scored with 8:01 remaining. But Quebec's Peter Stastny sent the game into overtime when he scored with 1:09 remaining.

St. Louis, 5-0-1 in its last six home games, clinched second place in the Norris Division earlier in the week.

Title rematch set in Women's semis

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Auburn coach Joe Ciampi didn't plan on losing a game just before the NCAA women's basketball tournament. It only looks that way.

A 66-51 loss to Tennessee in the championship game of the Southeastern Conference tournament ended Auburn's hopes of an unbeaten season, but Ciampi says it went a long way toward getting the Lady Tigers to where they are now — in the Final Four.

Second-ranked Auburn will meet No. 3 Louisiana Tech in a semifinal game at the Tacoma Dome tonight. It's a rematch of last year's championship game in the Dome, which Louisiana Tech won 56-54.

"There is no revenge factor," insisted Ciampi, who has Auburn back in the Final Four despite losing three starters from last year's team.

"If we changed the word revenge to motivation, yes, it's there. I've had it and these young people have had it. We've gone back to try to correct some of the mistakes we made last year and some we've made this year."

Auburn, 31-1, and Louisiana Tech, 32-3, will play in the first game of the doubleheader. Top-ranked Tennessee, making its fourth straight Final Four appearance, meets No. 5 Maryland, 29-2, in the other semifinal.

The winners will play Sunday for the national championship.

The Tennessee-Maryland game will feature Olympians on opposite sides. Bridgette Gordon leads Tennessee with a 20.1 scoring average and Vicky Bullett is Maryland's top scorer, averaging 21.5 points a game.

The key, however, could be how Tennessee's freshman point guard, Dena Hand, faces up to Maryland's pressure defense. Maryland has forced 82 turnovers in its three NCAA games, including 39 in an 89-54 victory over Stephen F. Austin in the West Regional semifinals.

Maryland will have to keep Tennessee from dominating the play inside with its front line of 6-4 Sheila Frost, 6-3 Carla McGhee and the 6-foot Gordon. The Lady Volunteers are outrebounding their opponents by 10 a game.

way it's handled, we have to ask what can we do to ease this pressure."

Newton said he expected to hear about unionizing the profession, but said he didn't expect anything to come of it when the convention meets on Saturday.

Meantime, Steitz said his annual survey of coaches, referees and administrators pointed out the need for better enforcement of some rules — particularly the intentional foul to stop the clock, the moving screen, rough post play and the "principle of verticality."

"Verticality" is a word coined by Steitz to illustrate the rule that a player controls the cylinder he occupies from the floor to the ceiling.

"It's the most glaring weaknesses in our officiating. Too often what should be a charge or, at best, a no-call is being called as a foul on the defender, particularly when a player is in the air," Steitz said.

Permian surprise leader in 4-5A

From Staff Reports

Abilene Cooper is still ranked No. 3 in the U.S.A high school baseball poll, which shows a certain amount of consistency.

That's exactly where the Cougars are ranked in the District 4-5A baseball standings going into Saturday's action.

So while everybody was occupied with what to do about Cooper, Odessa Permian took over first place in District 4-5A Wednesday. And the way they did it was right out of Mojo's football playbook.

Cooper took a 6-1 lead into the fifth inning against Permian, but the Panthers rallied for five runs, forced extra innings and handed the Cougars, two-time state champions, their second loss of the season.

It all heightens the importance of Saturday's action.

Midland High, a pursuing 4-1 in district and flashy 13-2 for the season is looking to its old buddies across town, Midland Lee, for help in catching 4-0, 9-1 Permian.

Coach Ernie Johnson likes the idea of lending a helping hand to MHS coach Tim Whelan, but his motives may be just a bit selfish.

If Lee can beat Permian at Odessa Saturday, it would propel the Rebels, 2-2 and 7-6, into the thick of the pennant race.

Midland figures to have things its own way against Odessa at Angel Stadium in Saturday's other 2 p.m. game. But then so did Cooper. Yet, OHS is 0-5 in district.

Abilene High hosts San Angelo in the other game, while Cooper, a spurprising 3-2 in district, takes the day off to ponder the entire revolting turn of events.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Sweethearts and friends may disagree over the Easter holiday. Tread lightly and avoid taking sides. Emphasize pleasant get-togethers with siblings. Your hopes will be fulfilled where your career is concerned if you continue to work hard. You know your own worth; make sure authority figure does, too! Your dreams of home improvement could become reality. Good taste is the key to expanding your social horizons.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Debbie Reynolds, pianist Eddy Duchin, baseball's Rusty Staub, actor Toshiro Mifune, football coach Bo Schembechler.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may be seeking information in the wrong place. Refuse to return to a restricting situation. A love relationship is glorious. Do not let a jealous individual tread on your dreams.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your emotional responses could make someone think you are unreliable. Let him know you are doing the best you can. Curb a tendency to act on impulse. Move forward with quiet confidence.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Even if you feel like vanishing from the current scene, stay with it. Strong effort will let you overcome obstacles and win big. Someone in love with you wants to be more helpful.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You know exactly when to get out of exciting but exasperating "political" situations. Use your awareness of others' needs to develop overdue improvements. Loved ones will cooperate if approached directly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stay in touch with your favorite people and all will go well. Try to keep things in perspective if your plans go awry. A good sense of humor stands you in good stead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are ready to go after what you want. Use the element of surprise. A change of scene revitalizes you. When progress is stymied, be quietly persistent. Roadblocks fall as you advance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your plans are excellent; stay with them. Do not be lured off-course by other tempting offers. Unexpected companions are a source of delight. Avoid controversy at social gatherings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An understanding with someone who means a lot to you firms your resolve. Your curious, inquiring mind could lead to a major discovery. Reach out to potential allies. Teamwork proves richly rewarding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may feel less appreciated than in the past. Avoid lashing out at family members. A deep change within will bring peace of mind. Others are attracted to you.

Certainly the most prolific writer in the U.S., and one of the best, is two-time world champion Mike Lawrence. His latest, How to Play Card Combinations (Devyn Press, 227 pp., paperback, $9.95. Available post free from The Bridge World, 39 W. 94th St., New York, NY 10025), is typical of his style—easy to read, yet covering a complex subject thoroughly. Cover the East-West hands, then consider this problem.

"For the moment, I don't want West on lead to find a spade switch. To stop that, I cover the club and duck when East covers. I don't want West to have an entry with the nine of clubs.

"My normal play would be to draw trump and play on diamonds hoping the queen is onside. I can add to this by arranging a position which can make even when the queen is offside.

"I win the club continuation, and play the heart ace and king. These split with East having J 7. Since I need to remove East's club exit, I play to the ace of diamonds and ruff the last club. East plays the king on this and West follows with the nine.

"Should I go to dummy with a heart and finesse in diamonds?

"No. This is an unusual position. If I do finesse in diamonds and they split, I will end up losing two spade tricks.

"I prefer to play the king of diamonds. If West or East drops the queen, I'm home. If no one drops it, I'll lead another diamond. Now, if West wins, the finesse was always offside and it didn't matter what I did. If East has the queen, I could have finessed, but the trick comes back because East is endplayed and I lose only one spade. My play in effect breaks even if East has the queen and gains if West has Q x ...

"Heads, I win. Tails, they lose."

You can only win by making an investment in this book!

Disney sues over awards' Snow White portrayal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Walt Disney Co. is singing a new tune over a portrayal of Snow White during the Academy Awards: Hi-ho, hi-ho, it's off to court we go.

Disney is suing the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, contending the song-and-dance routine by a Snow White look-alike looked, well, dopey.

Corporate spokesman Erwin Okun said the performance was unflattering to the beloved character and the academy lacked permission to use the fairy tale character.

The trademark infringement lawsuit was filed in federal court Thursday.

Okun said anyone watching would reasonably conclude that Disney had sanctioned the routine, adding, "We thought it was extremely unrepresentative of our creative work and of the quality of our creative work."

The broadcast, seen in an estimated 27 million American homes, began Wednesday night with actress Eileen Bowman, dressed as Snow White, following a chorus line of dancing stars into the Shrine Auditorium.

Bowman's Snow White, in a squeaky Betty Boop voice, then launched into a rendition of "We Only Have Stars for You," to the tune of the 1959 hit "I Only Have Eyes for You."

Disney, which has a reputation for zealously protecting its trademark characters, files dozens of suits each year against individuals and companies that copy its characters, especially on consumer products.

"We sue all the time," Okun said.

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" was released by Disney in 1937 and was the studio's first feature-length animated cartoon. Critics praised the film, calling it a turning point in Disney's career and a milestone in movie history.

No monetary damages were specified in the suit. Disney is seeking a court order prohibiting the academy's future use of Disney characters without authorization, Okun said.

"It was a total misappropriation of our copyright characters, and those copyright characters are the heart and soul of our business," said Okun. "The American public saw Snow White portrayed as she never is portrayed in our parks."

The suit alleges copyright infringement, unfair competition and violation of California's anti-dilution law, which protects the value of trademarks.

Disney filed suit only after the academy refused its request for a public apology, said Frank Wells, Disney president and chief operating officer.

Allan Carr, who produced the Oscar show, declined to comment through spokeswoman Linda Dozoretz.

Bruce Davis, the academy's executive administrator, also declined to comment, saying only: "This is kind of a down day at the academy. We're not very organized the day after the Academy Awards."

Davis said he was unaware of details about Disney's request for a public apology.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press erroneously reported Wednesday that singer Buck Owens, who recorded the song "Act Naturally" in 1965, was its author. The song was written in 1963, with lyrics by Voni Morrison and music by Johnny Russell.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bruce Willis, the wisecracking TV detective on ABC's "Moonlighting," has solved the case of the missing blues harps. Thirty-six harmonicas owned by the actor were in Hawaii with Smokey Robinson.

Willis, who had been recording a follow-up Motown album to his successful "The Return of Bruno" LP at the SIR Studios in Hollywood, decided late Monday to lock up his harmonicas in a studio locker.

"He asked a technician if they would be safe in a locker there and they said they would put them in Smokey Robinson's gear which had been there for three months," Willis' publicist Paul Bloch said Thursday.

But on Tuesday, Robinson packed up his gear, including the 36 harmonicas, for the start of a world tour and flew to Honolulu. Also stashed in the locker were original lyrics for new Willis songs.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gene Kelly is hospitalized with pneumonia and was forced to cancel a performance, but the 76-year-old actor-dancer is improving and may go home soon, his publicist said.

Kelly entered the hospital Wednesday and doctors said he may be released Monday, publicist Beebe Kline said. He declined to disclose the hospital's name.

Kelly

"He doesn't want to be bothered. He just wants to get out of there," Kline said Thursday.

The illness forced Kelly to cancel a performance March 24 of his one-man show, said Beverly Hamlin, a spokeswoman for the La Mirada Civic Center. The theater will give refunds to 1,300 ticketholders, she said.

Kelly, one of Hollywood's most fabled song and dance men, has appeared in such films as "For Me and My Gal," "Hello Dolly," "Anchors Aweigh," "Inherit the Wind" and "American in Paris."

LONDON (AP) — Prince Philip, president of the World Wide Fund for Nature, warned that all life on Earth is threatened unless urgent action is taken to save animals, plants and insects from destruction.

"Mankind is at the top of a fragile natural structure, and if we continue to erode the infrastructure, it will be like sawing off a branch of a tree while sitting on it," the husband of Queen Elizabeth II told a London meeting Thursday.

"If we do nothing it will mean disaster in the long term. What we do not want to do is reduce this planet to something like Mars," he said. The prince arrived at the meeting in a pollution-free electric-powered car.

Philip spoke to launch an appeal for $60 million by the the Swiss-based fund to protect biological diversity from threats such as the destruction of tropical rain forests.

Defense rests in fraud trial

By STEVE FIFFER
N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — After just three days of testimony, the defense in the trial of Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom rested Thursday without calling either agent to testify.

Walters and Bloom are standing trial on charges of mail fraud and racketeering in connection with their representation of several prominent athletes.

Defense attorneys declined to comment on why their clients, who are under no obligation to testify, did not take the witness stand.

Earlier Thursday, the defense's final witness, Michael Feldberg, a trial attorney with the New York law firm of Shea & Gould, testified that in 1986 he told Walters and Bloom that he did not believe they had broken any laws when they signed student-athletes to contracts and loaned the athletes money before their college eligibility expired.

But under cross-examination by Anton Valukas, the prosecutor, Feldberg acknowledged that in 1988 he had told the grand jury investigating Walters and Bloom that when he gave the advice he was unaware that the agents had used postdated contracts to sign the athletes.

Feldberg also acknowledged that he was not aware that the agents may have advised athletes to lie to their universities about their dealings with the agents or that the agents themselves may have lied to universities inquiring about their representation of athletes.

In pursuing this line with Feldberg, the government seemed to be suggesting that the attorney may not have been informed of all pertinent facts when he told Walters and Bloom their actions were not illegal.

While attorneys for the defense noted that it was after these suits were filed and received publicity that the government began its investigation, Valukas, in a conference with the judge outside the presence of the jury, asserted that the lawsuits did not precipitate the government's investigation.

Rather, the prosecutor said, the March 1987 beating of Kathy Clements, a Chicago sports agent, started the inquiry.

Valukas said he was prepared to link that beating to Walters and Bloom, but the judge refused to permit him to do so with Feldberg, who had no knowledge of the events.

Clements was an associate of the agent Steve Zucker, whose agency had signed athletes previously represented by Walters and Bloom.

NEW YORK (AP) — Pam Postema was once again turned down for an umpiring spot in the National League Thursday, as Bill Hohn and Jerry Layne were picked to fill the two vacancies.

Postema, who has worked spring training games in each of the last two years while attempting to become the first woman umpire in the major leagues, will return to the Triple-A Alliance this year. She was a crew chief last year.

Hohn, 33, umpired in the International League for the past two seasons after six years in the Pacific Coast League. He began his umpiring career in the Gulf Coast Rookie League in 1977, moved to the Florida State League in 1978 and to the Southern League in 1979 and 1980.

Layne, 30, had umpired in the P.C.L. for four seasons. He began his umpiring career in 1978 in the Appalachian Rookie League, umpired in the Florida State League from 1979-81 and in the Southern League from 1982-84.

Hohn and Layne will begin the season in the Triple-A Alliance and will be brought up to the NL in late May when vacations begin. Greg Bonin and Mark Hirschbeck also will begin the season in the minors.

Hohn and Layne replace Lee Weyer, who died last season, and Dave Pallone, who resigned.

"Sitting out and everything did pretty much get his attention," Sooners coach Billy Tubbs said. "The thing I like about it is he started getting a little pride in his academics.

"I think it's too early to call him an honor student. Even I made the dean's list twice," Tubbs said. "But I'm proud of what he's done and I hope he takes pride in it."

"It did make me awful proud," said Patterson, who originally planned to major in communications but now hopes to become a social worker. "The people back home are proud of me. Kids look up to you."

Hill said Patterson's achievements are a boon to collegiate athletics.

"I think it really highlights what a kid can do given a supportive environment, the right set of circumstances," Hill said.

"We're only talking about after a year or so, but still it's an achievement for someone who technically was predicted wouldn't do well or even make it in college.

"What they're saying (with Proposition 48) is that these kids can't handle both. That's basically what that legislation is saying."

Patterson has averaged fewer than 5 points per game this season while playing only 12 minutes per game. However, Tubbs says Patterson's ability to play guard and forward gives him the chance to become an outstanding player in the next two years.

While Patterson made the biggest mark in the classroom, other Prop 48 alumni have succeeded as well.

Michigan point guard Rumean Robinson, a junior from the same high school in Cambridge, Mass., that produced Patrick Ewing, came back from his forced exile to compile impressive statistics on and off the court. Along with his 2.9 grade point average, he improved from 9.7 points and 4.7 assists a game as a sophomore to 14.8 points, 5.9 assists and 57 percent shooting this season.

Robinson's teammate, forward Terry Mills of Romulus, Mich., averaged 12 points, 57 percent shooting and six rebounds a game their first year after Prop 48 and, remarkably consistent, 11.9 points, 57.1 percent shooting and 5.8 rebounds this season.

Robinson, who was diagnosed as having a learning disability after getting to Michigan, said he might not have been able to make it alone, like Patterson. "I feel if you have two kids coming to the university at the same time, you can do the work and play basketball and still stay in shape," Robinson said. "I think the problem is when you have one kid going to a university and he's there by himself. That's when he can have that letdown and he's not really motivated. Terry and I were very motivated and I think that's what really helped us out."

Patterson is motivated now to continue his strong work in the classroom.

"I have no doubts at all," he said. "Next year I'll be getting more into my courses. ... I'm gonna get my grades regardless."

TBBU backs fresh water fish program

By BUD BAKER

Texas Black Bass Unlimited held a Future Fishing of Texas seminar recently at the Midland Civer Center with Jerry Dean, Floyd Yarbrough, David Campbell and Joe T. Rogers the guest speakers.

Dean is editor of the Honey Hole TV magazine and Yarbrough is the producer.

Cmapbell is manager of a Texas Parks and Wildlife fish hatchery and program coordinator of the Operation share a Lone Star Lunker program. Rogers is executive director of of TBBU.

The seminar's purpose was establishment of a West Texas TBBU chapter.

Rogers reviewed the history of the TBBU, established in 1985 by a small group of men, mostly professional fishermen in east Texas.

THE GROUP felt fresh water fishermen needed stronger representation in Austin, similar to that of the Gulf Coast fishing Association for salt water anglers.

TBBU was formed and objectives agreed upon. 1. Conservation and protection of Texas fresh water fisheries. 2. Protection of, and the rights of legal license fishermen of Texas. 3. Protection and propagation of all native species of fresh water fish in Texas. 4. Help improve the water quality of Texas lakes, rivers and streams.

TBBU has been involved in many conservation projects, such as equipment TPWD, stocking fish and hosting youth fishing projects. In July 1987, TBBU completed a study of TPWD departments over the last 10 years.

THE STUDY confirmed what many of the members had suspected all along, that the inland fisheries division had received the least percentage of increase in budgets of all departments.

While all other departments funding doubled, the IF only increased 67.5% and was operating with 10 less personnel in 1986 than in 1976.

The study showed fresh water fishermen purchased $12 million in fishing licenses in 1986, that it, as well as other fishing ogranizations, played a part in effecting the 1990 proposed budget, in which IF and hatchery departments will receive the largest percent of increase in budget of all TPW departments.

TBBU's legislative consultant in Austin is Barry Miller.

CAMPBELL showed a film on multiple spawns of a fish in the program. A bass weighing 16 pounds two ounces caught in 1988 now weights,s 18-13, more than a pound larger than the state record.

Fishermen interested in TBBU should write Texas Black Bass Unlimited , P.O. 26650, Dallas, 75226.

Inkster leads Shore

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Juli Inkster, off to a slow start on the LPGA Tour this year, showed signs of breaking out of her slump with a 66 Thursday to take the opening-day lead in the $500,000 Dinah Shore tournament.

Her 6-under-par round at Mission Hills Country Club was good for a two-shot lead over Dale Eggeling.

Beth Daniel, Lori Garbacz, Jody Rosenthal and Liselotte Neumann of Sweden were another stroke behind at 69.

Pat Bradley, the 1986 Dinah Shore champion, was another shot back in a group at 70 with Anne-Marie Palli of France and Bonnie Lauer.

Defending champion Amy Alcott was in a group at 71, and Nancy Lopez matched par-72.

Scores were low since the round was played under virtually ideal conditions, although mid-day temperatures did reach the 90s.

Inkster, 28, is coming off the best of her five years on the Tour. She won three times in 1988 and finished 10th on the LPGA money list with $235,000.

But this year, Inkster has finished no higher than a tie for 19th in the five tournaments she's played. She missed the cut in Tucson two weeks ago, then finished tied for 37th last weekend at Phoenix.

"I had been struggling with my putter," Inkster said. "I just changed putters for the first time (since she joined the tour), which took a lot of nerve.

"I putted extremely well today."

Inkster, who won the Dinah Shore in 1984, got off to a great start. She birdied the her first three holes, then had four more birdies over the next nine holes.

"I started off really well," she said. "I made a 25-foot birdie putt on the first hole and that seemed to get me going.

"I had no birdies after 12, but I made seven before that, so that's OK."

Jaworski catches Chiefs' attention

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Veteran quarterback Ron Jaworski, who saw only limited action with the Miami Dolphins the past two seasons, has caught the attention of the Kansas City Chiefs.

Jaworski, 38, started 10 years for the Philadelphia Eagles, taking them to the Super Bowl in 1980 when Carl Peterson, now president and general manager of the Chiefs, was director of player personnel for the Eagles.

Donald paces Woodlands

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — Mike Donald, seeking his first victory in nine PGA seasons, shot a 5-under-par 67 Thursday to take a one-shot lead after the first round of the $800,000 Independent Insurance Agent Open.

Donald birdied three of the first four holes he played, sinking putts of 25, 12 and 15 feet on the 10th, 12th and 13th holes of the soggy, windswept par-72, 7,045-yard TPC Course.

Brad Faxon recovered from a bogey on his first hole to shoot a 68, matching Mike Hulbert, who shot his 68 in the afternoon after the winds increased.

A group of seven golfers headed by Spain's Seve Ballesteros and defending champion Curtis Strange were tied at 69. The group also included Buddy Gardner, Roger Maltbie, John Inman, Don Shirey and Brad Bryant.

"The key was to drive in the fairways and as wet as it is, that helps," Donald said. "I shot a 67 in the first round here last year and ended up seventh.

"When you get off to a good start, it takes the cut out of your mind. I'll have a lot more patience now."

Donald has missed the cut in five of his nine previous tournaments this year.

He also had good opening rounds in the Hawaiian Open and the Players Championships, but faded before finishing in a tie for 19th in Hawaii and a tie for 21st at the Players.

WTI posted price climbs to $20

From Staff and Wire Reports

Problems associated with the oil spill in Prince Edward Sound caused oil prices in the Permian Basin to climb sharply Thursday when Fina Oil & Chemical announced it would raise the the posted price of West Texas Intermediate went to $20 per barrel.

Posted prices could go even higher as futures prices continue to climb based on tightening supplies. At midmorning the futures price of WTI had jumped to $21.38 for a 57 cent increase over Thursday closing NYMEX price of $20.80

The posted price news followed a 61 cent increase on the New York Mercantile Exchange Thursday, and a statement from two of the three biggest oil producers in Alaska that they would be unable to fulfill their contracts with customers because of problems caused by a tanker spill a week ago off the port of Valdez.

Fina was the only crude oil purchaser to have raised the posted price early today, but other purchasers indicated they were considering increasing prices today. A slow down of oil coming out of Alaska could tighten supplies to refiners.

The announcements by the British Petroleum Co. and the Exxon Corp. were the first indication that the oil spill was interrupting supplies from Alaska's Prudhoe Bay oilfield.

Since the spill, Alaska's oil production has been cut in half. The state normally accounts for 25 percent of American oil output.

Although the nation's crude oil stocks are considered adequate at this time, some companies with large refining and marketing operations are expected to follow Fina in raising the price they pay for supplies.

In an interview Thursday with Ken Perry, vice chairman of Fina, he noted that the company refines 200,000 barrels per day, but produces only about 60,000 barrels. He also noted that the company trades about 500,000 barrels daily.

It was not clear whether the Atlantic Richfield Co., the third-largest Alaskan producer, would also invoke force majeure, under which a company notifies customers that it cannot fulfill a contract because of circumstances beyond its control.

Both Exxon and B.P. said they would try to apportion their delivery cuts equitably.

The news accelerated the rise in prices of crude oil and oil products. In trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the leading market in energy products, the nearest crude oil delivery contract, May, ended 61 cents a barrel higher, at $20.81.

Even heating oil prices, which normally taper off in the spring, advanced.

OPEC predicts higher prices

New York Times News Service

VIENNA — Oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries congratulated themselves Thursday on the discipline they said they had observed since November.

Eight OPEC ministers, meeting here to assess the world oil market, said the limits they had placed on their oil production had paid off, with oil prices climbing more than $5 a barrel. They pledged to continue their course through the second quarter, when they hope strong summer demand will bolster prices further.

Fina increases stake in Permian Basin

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

In the last two years Fina Oil & Chemical Co. has spent $800 million on upstream acquisitions. It is a strategy that has brought beneficial results to the Permian Basin.

In the past year Fina, through acquisitions, has doubled its production in the Permian Basin, doubled its number of employees in Midland and established a $25 million capital budget that will be used to drill twice as many wells in the Permian Basin.

Nearly all of the increase came from one purchase — the Gulf and Southwest divisions of Tenneco. Last year Fina was a successful bidder in one of the biggest petroleum auctions in recent history, paying $600 million for the divisions. The purchase brought Fina reserves to 180 million barrels and increased its production from 30,000 to 60,000 barrels per day.

The acquisition brought the company's stake in the Permian Basin from 9,000 barrels of daily production to 16,000 barrels. Since then Fina has closed the Tenneco office in San Antonio, which had formerly overseen Permian Basin operations, and moved 25 personnel into Midland. "We will probably move another 12 or so into the Midland office this year," said Haddock, bringing the total to over 160.

Haddock said Fina had been working overtime to assimilate all the Tenneco properties and expected to drill 50-60 wells in the Permian Basin this year. Most of it, he noted, will be in the North Robertson field of Gaines County, where the company has a $70 million waterflood project underway.

Haddock, along with Ken W. Perry, vice chairman of the board of American Petrofina, and an entourage of vice presidents were in Midland for a Wildcatters Reception at the Midland Petroleum Club.

Perry said the aggressive acquisition and expansion program was part of a plan to improve the economy of scale of Fina.

"We budgeted $1 billion for this in 1988. We spent $100 million to upgrade our chemical operation and $150 million on the Port Arthur refinery."

Perry added that the company was also looking to improve its downstream image and position with remodeling of present service stations and the acquisition of additional stations. "We are looking to acquire service stations in this area," said Perry, who was raised in Odessa and is a brother of Charles Perry, former president of Permian Basin Petroleum Association. He noted that 1,200 Fina stations had already been remodeled and another 1,000 were set to be remodeled this year.

"We haven't been too happy with our downstream image," said Perry, "and we are out to change it."

Oil prices cross $21 barrier

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices passed the $21 barrier today with the contract for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate surging 57 cents to stand at $21.38 at midmorning on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Fina Oil & Chemical also raised their posted price for WTI to $20 a barrel and most other local crude buyers were expected to follow suit today. The posted price for WTI was at $20.50 on Feb. 6, 1986, and fell to $20 the next day; it didn't reach that level again until July 14, 1987.

On the NYMEX Thursday, WTI jumped 61 cents to close at $20.81 in an active session.

The impetus for the rally came from news Exxon was temporarily reducing deliveries of Alaskan North Slope crude to its customers receiving that type of oil, a result of the giant oil spill off the Alaskan coast.

Dollar mostly higher overseas

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against European currencies today in quiet month-end trading. Gold prices fell.

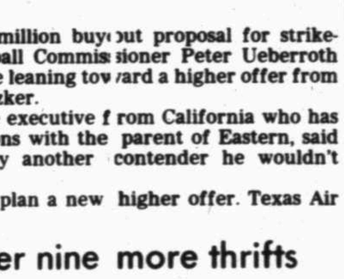

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell 0.25 yen to a closing 132.55 yen. Later, in London, it also was quoted at 132.55 yen.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.6885 from $1.6875 late Thursday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $382.60 a troy ounce, down from $383.25 bid late Wednesday. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $382.30.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.78 a troy ounce, down from late Thursday's $5.79.

Indecisive stocks post .18 loss

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned in an indecisive showing Thursday, pausing after its rally of the past three sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 38.48 points in the week's first three trading days, slipped back .18 to 2,281.34.

But advancing issues slightly outnumbered declines in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 726 up, 716 down and 498 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 159.95 million shares, up from 144.24 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 188.41 million shares.

The Commerce Department reported Thursday morning that new factory orders declined 2.3 percent in February.

That provided fresh support for the view that the pace of the economy began to slow last month.

But analysts have been reluctant to conclude from a single month's data that the Federal Reserve has succeeded in its efforts to subdue inflationary pressures by tightening credit.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $3.49 billion, or 0.12 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up .13 to 164.38.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Pritzker leading Eastern sweepstakes

Associated Press

Texas Air Corp. rejected a $464 million buyout proposal for strike-bound Eastern Airlines from Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth and sources said the company may be leaning toward a higher offer from billionaire hotel executive Jay Pritzker.

J. Thomas Talbot, a former airline executive from California who has represented Ueberroth in negotiations with the parent of Eastern, said his group was outbid Thursday by another contender he wouldn't identify.

Talbot also said Ueberroth didn't plan a new higher offer. Texas Air officials declined to comment.

Regulators take over nine more thrifts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators took over nine more savings and loan associations in six states, bringing the total under government control to 175 in 28 states.

The institutions seized Thursday — in Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, Ohio, Virginia and Wisconsin — had assets totaling $3.5 billion at the end of 1988. The largest of the nine, Broadview Savings Bank of Cleveland, had $1.8 billion in assets.

Sears to cut 800 management positions

CHICAGO (AP) — Sears, Roebuck and Co. announced the latest move in a campaign to slim down and tighten up — a reorganization of its central merchandising operation that will eliminate about 800 management jobs.

The changes Thursday in the Sears Merchandise Group, which will close 24 regional administrative offices, are the latest in a series as the nation's largest retailer tries to hold its own in a fast-moving, highly competitive market.

Businessland to distribute Next computers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Steve Jobs has jumped back into the commercial computer market by announcing that his fast, high-powered Next workstation will be sold at retail stores nationwide.

Businessland Inc. will exclusively distribute the Next Computer System at its 112 outlets. It is the nation's biggest retailer for desktop computers for businesses. Industry members characterized the deal Thursday as a major coup for Jobs' 3-year-old company, founded after he was ousted as president of Apple Computer Inc. in 1985.

NCNB Corp. raises over $300 million

DALLAS (AP) — NCNB Corp. says it has raised $300 million in new capital to fund additional investment in NCNB Texas through the private placement of a 10-year subordinated note.

The note carries a fixed interest rate of 10¼ percent and is callable in seven years, according to Frank Gentry, NCNB senior vice president and director of corporate strategy and planning.

The rate compares with the 11.5 percent prime lending rate banks commonluy offer their best customers and the 9.12 percent rate for six-month Treasury bills at last Monday's auction.

"That's a helluva rate," Frank W. Anderson, a banking industry analyst with Stephens Inc. in Little Rock, Ark., told The Dallas Morning News Thursday.

The note was placed by Merrill Lynch Capital Markets and company officials said there was no indication whether any had been placed with overseas investors.

"The plan of this is to accelerate our ownership poisition in NCNB Texas," Gentry said.

NCNB has held a 20 percent stake in NCNB Texas since Nov. 22, with the remainder owned by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

The institution was acquired by federal regulators after they declared the 40 Texas banks of First RepublicBank Corp. insolvent last July 29.

NCNB financed the initial portion of the transaction with the proceeds of a $250 million private placement completed last Sept. 29.

Gentry said NCMB anticipates spending more than $200 million to increase its stake to about 40 percent by yearend. The remainder of the proceeds of the most recent placement, he said, will will be used for general corporate purposes, possibly including refinancing $85 million, 14.5 percent debt.

Factory orders drop

Down 2.3 percent in February

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories dropped 2.3 percent in February, the biggest decline in seven months, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said orders for durable and non-durable manufactured goods dropped to a seasonally adjusted $230.7 billion in February after declining 1.2 percent in January.

It was the first back-to-back decline since orders dropped for four straight months from February through May 1986.

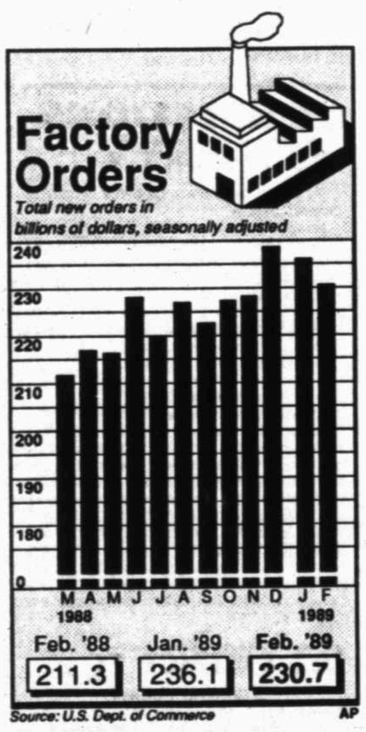

Last month's decline, the biggest since a 3.6 percent drop last July, was consistent with a variety of other government reports on the economy's performance in February that have pointed downward. They suggest that economic growth may be slowing as the record peacetime expansion stretches into its seventh year.

The Federal Reserve Board for a year has been pushing up interest rates in an effort to slow the economy and dampen inflationary pressures.

February's drop in factory orders was paced by a 7.2 percent decline in the volatile transportation category to $33.5 billion, reflecting falling demand for both aircraft and automobiles. Transportation orders had dropped 8.6 percent in January.

Excluding transportation, orders were down 1.4 percent last month.

The decline occurred even though defense orders, which are subject to wide swings depending on when government contracts are signed, surged 22.4 percent in February to $8.3 billion after plunging 34.5 percent in January.

Texas consortium open to Canada

AUSTIN (AP) — The Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. says it will allow Canadian companies to join the high-tech research consortium, a major policy change that is a response to the U.S.-Canadian trade pact.

MCC was formed more than five years ago to boost long-term technology research. It has until now been billed as the first large-scale American effort to counter foreign, notably Japanese, advances in computer-related research.

The consortium, which employs 440 people at its Austin headquarters, boasts some of the nation's largest electronics companies among its dues-paying members and is sponsored and partially funded by the federal government through the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, an arm of the Defense Department.

Spokesman Sandy Dochen said Wednesday that MCC's board of directors had decided to open its programs to Canadian companies in light of the free trade agreement signed Jan. 1 between the United States and Canada.

"This trade agreement really links the two countries together," Dochen said. "There are so many Canadian firms who do so much business in the U.S."

Dochen downplayed MCC's decision and said the involvement of Canadian companies does not represent a fundamental shift in the organization's charter.

"I don't know if it's a shift," he said. "It's just a slight evolution or a slight expansion."

The move will broaden MCC's financial base beyond its 19 shareholding companies and 15 associates and, analysts say, could pave the way for opening the organization to even more foreign firms.

"They've established a precedent," said Peter Burris, editor of International Data Corp.'s Computer Industry Report. "This is a reasonable and credible first step toward evaluating more possibilities."

Burris said the move will serve as a case study in how MCC relates to international partners. However, he said he doubted the decision will dramatically change MCC, since the number of major technology companies in Canada is relatively small.

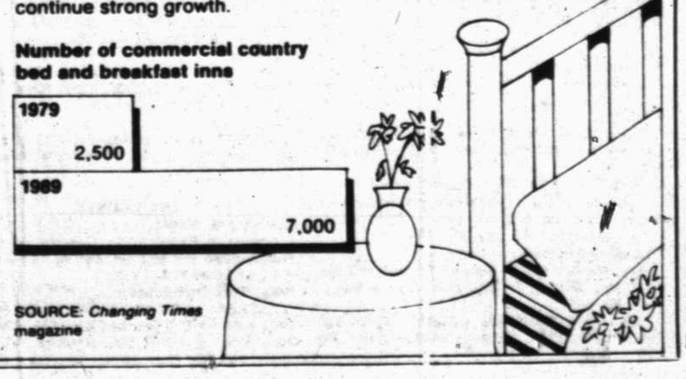

"Perhaps they can score some political points by saying, 'We're all for having international participation so long as the companies that are participating adhere to the same free trade principles that we adhere to," he said.

FINA

The company has not been happy with its economy of scale either. While the company refined about 200,000 barrels per day, it was only producing about 30,000 barrels per day. "We were refining a lot of other people's oil, when we had the staff and facilities to manage a much bigger upstream operation," explained Haddock. "We needed to get much bigger very fast."

He said that explains the $600 million Tenneco acquisition and the purchase of Williams Corp. in 1987 and the aggressive $85 million exploration and production budget the company has for this year.

"There are still good acquisition buys out there," says Haddock.

While Fina has been the first to move on the posted price of oil in the past two weeks, Perry and Haddock do not see the present $20 posted price as lasting long. "I think it's only temporary," said Perry. "I think we will see oil prices back down in the $18 dollar range next quarter."

PRICES

The spot April heating oil delivery soared 1.56 cents a gallon, to 56.18 cents.

The demand for unleaded gasoline contracts was the most feverish, exchange traders said.

All gasoline deliveries from May through next September, the peak driving season, advanced their maximum daily limit of 2 cents a gallon.

Because the spot delivery is free of price restrictions, unleaded gasoline for delivery next month soared 3.01 cents, to a new contract high of 63.19 cents.

"One reason Exxon invoked force majeure on contracts to six of its customers is that all the producers are having trouble getting ships in and out of the Valdez terminal," said Bradford H. Hughes, a trader at Cargill Investor Services.

"As it is, that terminal only has storage capacity equivalent to six days of production at Prudhoe Bay, the other end of the Alaska pipeline."

Unless the Alaskan oil producers can end the bottleneck at Valdez, where cleanup operations have been hampered by a slow start and bad weather, the limited storage capacity there could lead to a costly reduction in operations at Prudhoe Bay.

While Exxon is the nation's largest oil company, its stake in Alaska's Prudhoe Bay operation is about 20 percent of the two million barrels produced there each day.

British Petroleum accounts for roughly half the output, with Atlantic Richfield's share equaling that of Exxon. The rest is produced by smaller companies.

In Exxon's case, less than 20 percent of its Alaskan production is sold to outside customers. Exxon is trying to meet the needs of its West Coast customers by bringing supplies from Ecuador, Hughes noted.

"Although the oil companies in Alaska use the bulk of their output in their own refining and marketing operations, they don't like to cut off their outside customers," he said. "No one likes to invoke force majeure."

But largely man-made factors continued to drive up the price of unleaded gasoline, particularly on the West Coast, where wholesalers paid as much as a dollar a gallon for the fuel in the cash market.

The main reason for the surge in the price of unleaded gasoline is the fear of shortages of fuel that meet the new lower vapor-emission levels mandated by the antipollution rules recently imposed by many states, notably California.

While oil industry analysts do not view the new regulations as insuperable, there is some question as to whether the industry can meet these rules in time to meet this summer's motoring needs.

The new rules require changes in refinery equipment and also set stricter stringent anti-pollution standards for fuel pipelines. Also, not all neighborhood gasoline stations have yet installed the new hoses aimed at reducing the emission of pollutants during pumping.

Sematech officials say group effort successful

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials of the Sematech semiconductor consortium say the manufacturing of their first silicon wafers is a "major milestone" in transferring technology between American companies.

"The basic message is that the cooperative effort of American industry is actually working," said Robert N. Noyce, president and chief executive of the research consortium of 14 U.S. high-technology companies.

"That is something that you can expect in Japan, but many Japanese have not expected that that would work here in America," Noyce said Thursday.

Utilizing technology transferred from AT&T, a Sematech member, the new company produced its first lot of 64-kilobit static random access memory (SRAM) wafers, each of which contains about 180 integrated circuits, or chips. The chips include circuit elements that are one-one hundredth the width of a human hair.

Sematech is a consortium of U.S. semiconductor firms, created to try to restore America's leadership in manufacturing semiconductors, which form the basis of transistors in computer chips.

Half the consortium's $200 million annual funding is provided by its member companies and half by the federal government.

The processing of the first lot of 5-inch silicon wafers from beginning to end through Sematech's "clean room" facility was completed on Tuesday, three days early, Noyce said, and less than a year after Sematech moved into its Austin headquarters.

The wafers are not for sale. They are being used to hone the manufacturing processes and equipment developed and used by U.S. suppliers.

"This is really a major milestone for Sematech. Normally, the process of bringing up a fab (fabrication line) like this would take many times as long as it's taken Sematech to do it," Noyce said.

Noyce and Alex Mackiewicz, Sematech's engineering manager, said the simple fact the technology could be transferred to Sematech and the wafers produced in such a short time was a significant achievement.

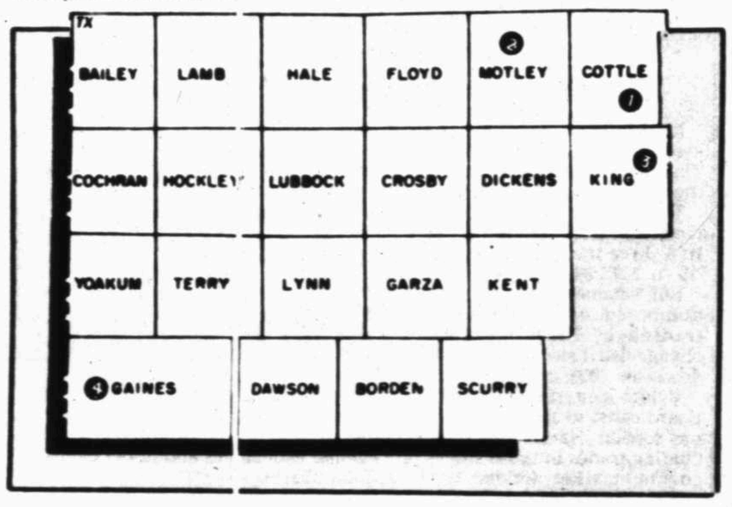

"Even going into a technology transfer within a company itself — going from one fabrication line to another — is a very difficult feat. And now transferring that technology and having it work on the first try — and a whole new set of equipment, a new process — is indeed a tremendous accomplishment," Mackiewicz said.

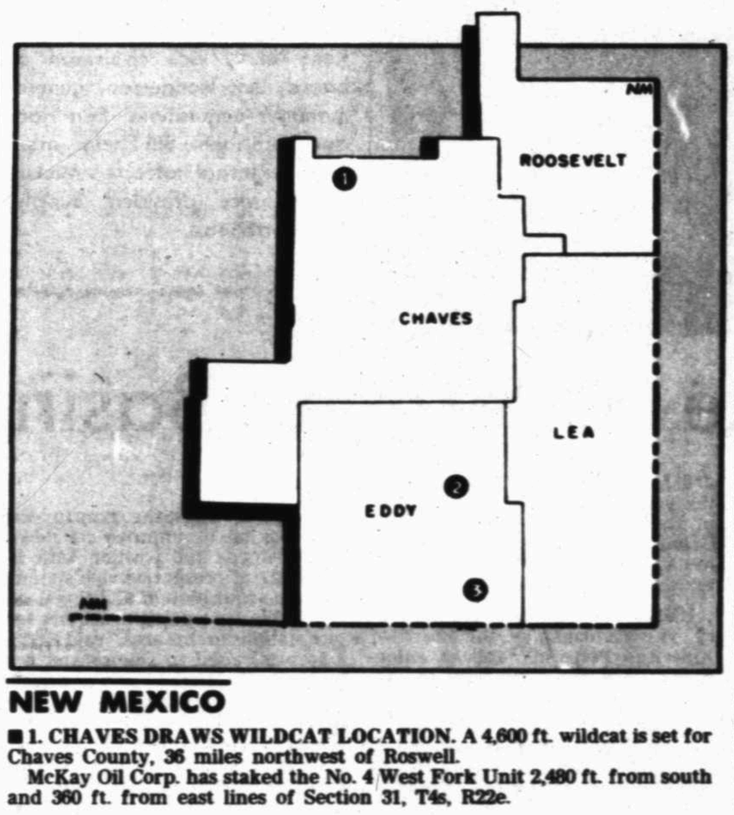

"So (this transfer) is (from) 1,700 miles away, when in many cases two fabs located less than 20 feet away have difficulty in transferring technology," he said.

The actual process involved about 140 separate operations and takes about 15 to 20 days to complete, working 24 hours a day, he said.

The officials declined to say what the production yield totaled.

Relatives evacuated as Guatemalan prison revolt ends

SANTA CATARINA, Guatemala (AP) — Rebel inmates at the country's largest prison ended an uprising that left seven people dead, allowing evacuation of hundreds of prisoners' relatives who were inside since Easter Sunday.

About 600 people were visiting their jailed relatives when up to 100 prisoners took over the Pavon Model Correctional Farm on Sunday. Many stayed inside with the inmates, leading some authorities to say they were not hostages but were staying to protect their loved ones from any security force reprisals.

"That's a lie. Why on earth would we want to stay in there under those conditions?" said Georgina Lopez, escorted out of the prison on Thursday with her two young children. "We were locked up by the mutineers. That was hard."

Rebellious prisoners surrendered scores of rifles and released the relatives after Guatemala's Interior Minister, its human rights ombudsman and three representatives of the rebels signed an accord ending the siege of the country's largest prison.

The government promised the rebels would not be harmed and replaced the prison's authorities. The entire guard corps will be replaced in coming days under the pact.

The rebels had demanded guaranteed pardons for crimes committed during the revolt, but the government did not provide that assurance.

The prison 14 miles northeast of Guatemala City was seized after guards foiled a large escape attempt. At least seven people died in that fighting.

Authorities cut off food, water and electricity to the family members and 1,350 inmates.

The relatives were evacuated Thursday by firemen and Red Cross workers. Some, especially children, showed signs of dehydration.

"My nerves are killing me," Marta Abal Reyes said, tears in her eyes, as she sat in the back of a Red Cross ambulance that carried her and seven other women and children to the organization's Guatemala City headquarters for medical checkups.

She said she went 30 hours without a sip of water and for two days ate only pumpkin leaves.

"I was afraid," said Mrs. Reyes, who was trapped inside while paying an Easter visit to her husband, Feliciano, a prisoner. "I would get desperate, then recover my spirits, but you never knew what was going to happen."

In the agreement, the government also pledged to reform prisons nationwide, without saying precisely what would be improved.

Gonzolo Menendez de la Riva, the special attorney general for human rights, was the main architect of the accord. The frail 84-year-old made several trips daily to the prison to work out details.

The government also committed itself to:

- Relaying to "the pertinent authorities" the rebels' request for pardons for crimes committed during the uprising.
- Promoting "strict application" of a law providing for reduction of prison sentences through prisoners' work.
- Presenting to Congress a proposal from the mutinous prisoners for a nationwide reduction of all prison sentences by five years.

Any pardon or amnesty for crimes committed during the rebellion would have to be enacted by Congress.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Christians strike to protest shelling

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christians today mounted a general strike to protest heavy Syrian shelling of their battered enclave around Beirut during the worst clashes in four years in Lebanon's civil war.

Police said civil defense teams evacuated 100,000 more people overnight from heavily populated residential areas in the Dora district. Authorities feared further explosions at a blazing fuel depot.

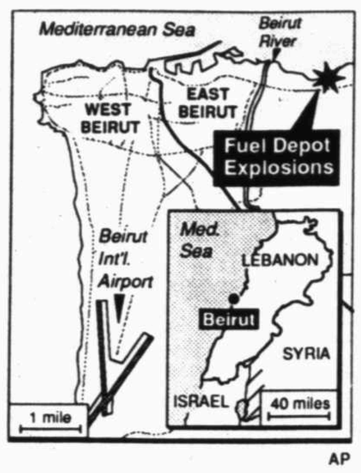

About 50,000 people earlier fled the area Thursday after a Syrian rocket attack caused giant explosions of butane gas that shattered windows for three miles around. Fourteen people were wounded.

A police spokesman, who cannot be identified under standing rules, said the Christian zone, a 310-square-mile crescent-shaped strip with around 1 million residents, looked like "a plague-stricken area."

"Nothing moved in the streets except for fire engines," he said. The engines showered water on the burning gas tanks to prevent further explosions, he said.

The one-day strike, called by the Lebanese Front alliance of Christian political parties, also paralyzed life in Israel's self-proclaimed security zone in south Lebanon.

Thousands of Christians have sought refuge in the zone, while Moslems fled to Sidon and areas controlled by the U.N. peacekeeping force.

Albanian revolt feared

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — A member of the federal presidency accused ethnic Albanian separatists of planning armed rebellion in Kosovo province, and an official today raised the toll of dead in this week's protests to 24.

Stane Dolanc, vice president in the nine-man collective presidency, said Thursday that weapons, explosives and "other war material" had been seized in the southern province. He said he took the seizures as evidence an organized revolt was being planned.

Speaking in the parliament of Slovenia, Yugoslavia's most liberal republic, Dolanc did not specify when or where in Kosovo the seizures were made.

There was no word if arrests were made.

Hunger strike continues

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A hunger strike by 11 jailed terrorists has prompted a national debate over whether authorities should give in to prisoners' demands when their deaths could lead to more violence.

Leftist politicians have called on the government to negotiate to end the hunger strike by members of the Red Army Faction, or RAF. The strike is in its 59th day today.

The hunger strike is one of the longest staged by a jailed political faction since 1981, when 10 members of the Irish Republican Army starved themselves to death at Northern Ireland's Maze Prison in their quest for political prisoner status.

Two of the RAF hunger strikers have subsisted only on water and vitamin tablets since Feb. 1, when they began a victory-or-death campaign for the right for all 28 RAF prisoners in West Germany to be housed together. Four more group members joined the strike in mid-February, and another five joined this week.

The defense attorney for Karl-Heinz Dellwo, one of the prisoners who has refused food the longest, said his client was prepared to starve to death for a special RAF cell block and other concessions on visits.

Dellwo, 36, is serving a life sentence for murder and kidnapping for his part in a 1975 attack on the West German Embassy in Stockholm.

Other hunger strikers have indicated they are open to compromise, attorney Johannes Pausch said.

Rabid donkey attacks

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — A rabid donkey attacked its owner, biting him so savagely that doctors had to amputate one of the man's legs, officials said.

Jose Ramon Martinez, a 60-year-old wood gatherer from the southeastern state of Anzoategui, was recuperating in a Caracas hospital from the attack March 14 near his hometown of Zaraza, Dr. Miguel Guaitaro of the Ministry of Health said Thursday.

Martinez was crossing a river with the donkey when the animal turned on him, biting him on the waist, lower back and legs, said Guaitaro.

Residents of the area found Martinez near death. The official said doctors had to amputate his left leg.

The donkey died four days later, and his head was brought to the Ministry of Health for examination, said Guaitaro.

The donkey, who had escaped from Martinez for about three months before his recapture, was diagnosed as having a form of rabies transmitted by bat bites, the official said.

Military truck crashes

CHITTAGONG, Bangladesh (AP) — An army truck carrying soldiers plunged about 500 feet off a mountain road in southeast Bangladesh, killing at least 11 troops and injuring 15, officials said.

The truck was moving troops from Bandarban district to an army post at Ruma in the Chittagong Hill Tracts when the accident occurred Wednesday 28 miles from Chittagong, a civilian official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Military sources confirmed the accident Thursday and said "some casualties" resulted, but they gave no figures.

First conviction noted

TOKYO (AP) — A court today convicted the first person in a stock-trading scandal that has forced the resignation of three Cabinet ministers and led to calls for the resignation of Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita.

Hiroshi Matsubara, a former executive of the Recruit Co., was convicted after pleading guilty to attempting to bribe a lawmaker investigating the scandal. The Tokyo District Court ruled Matsubara's actions "were an extremely evil attempt to use money to block the government's right to investigate."

He was sentenced to 18 months in prison. The sentence, however, was suspended for four years, and Matsubara will not go to jail if he does not violate the law during that period. The court said Matsubara had already suffered for his deeds by having to resign from his job.

The conviction and sentence came the same day that Takeshita, whose popularity rating has plunged to the lowest level of any post-World War II Japanese administration, reportedly acknowledged new links to Recruit.

Israel eases restrictions after 'Land Day'

JERUSALEM (AP) — The military today allowed Palestinian workers back into Israel from the West Bank and lifted a curfew in the Gaza Strip after clashes left three people dead and at least 30 wounded.

In Petah Tikva, a Tel Aviv suburb, a bomb exploded today near a synagogue and damaged a parked car, Israel radio said. No injuries were reported.

The radio said a resident notified police about a suspicious object, but a bomb squad arrived after the explosion. Twenty Arabs were detained for questioning. A police spokesman was not immediately available for comment.

Israel closed the occupied territories Thursday, when Palestinians conducted a general strike to commemorate six Israeli Arabs killed March 30, 1976 — a day now known as "Land Day." The victims were protesting confiscation of private Arab land for military use.

At least 415 Palestinians have been killed since an uprising began nearly 16 months ago in the West Bank and Gaza, which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 war. Eighteen Israelis have also been killed.

Many West Bank Palestinians were allowed to return to their jobs in Israel today after the one-day quarantine, and a one-day curfew was removed on the seaside Gaza Strip, the military said. However, nearly 180,000 Gazans remained under curfew in six refugee camps and neighborhoods.

Shmuel Goren, the Defense Ministry official in charge of the territories, said the 100,000 Palestinians who work in Israel still depend on it for their livelihoods and have found no alternative despite the long rebellion.

Roads to the West Bank were closed Thursday and the entire Gaza Strip was placed under curfew in an attempt to reduce violence. Goren justified the measures on grounds they were preferable to casualties.

Police and the state-run radio and television described the anniversary as "relatively quiet" and officials said they were pleased by the "restraint" of Israeli Arabs.

Twenty Arab Israelis were arrested for carrying "propaganda" in favor of the Palestine Liberation Organization, but no violence was reported in Israel.

About one-fifth of Israel's 4.2 million people are Arabs. They identify with the Palestinians in the occupied lands but generally have not become involved in protests. Although they frequently complain of discrimination, they are Israeli citizens and have the right to vote.

On Thursday, they expressed solidarity with the territories with a strike and protest marches.

About 10,000 Arabs marched through Deir al Hanna in northern Israel, waving olive branches and making V-for-Victory signs with their fingers. They chanted, "Long live the United PLO! Yes to a Palestinian state!" Police refrained from entering the towns and villages where protests were being held.

In the West Bank, a 20-year-old Palestinian was shot to death in Shweike village Thursday.

ecclesiastic (noun) — An "ecclesiastic" is a person in holy orders or consecrated to the service of the church, such as a clergyman or priest. The root word is "ecclesia," an ancient Greek word meaning a political assembly of citizens and today broadened in meaning to include church. The adjective which derived from "ecclesiastic" is "ecclesiastical," and it means relating a to a church, especially as it exists as a formal and established institution. Thus, a hymn might be referred to as ecclesiastical music.

Pamper self when working on computer

Associated Press

Sitting for hours at a computer is one of the many chores of modern life to which our bodies must adapt.

An article in the April issue of RUN magazine (IDG Communications, $2.95) has a good, plain-English overview of some of the things you can do to keep your hobby from adversely affecting your health.

Another series of articles in the March issue of PC Computing (Ziff-Davis, $2.95) tackles the same issues.

Both articles offer common-sense advice on how to remove your body from risk without giving up your computing habit.

Your eyes, for example, should be protected from glare and a flickering, dirty, low-contrast monitor. Glare can be handled by adjusting the room lighting or purchasing special screen covers. You can clean the monitor screen and adjust the contrast.

You also should remember to blink, since staring for long periods at the hypnotic screen can dry your eyeballs and lead to irritation.

You need a chair that puts your thighs parallel to the floor and offers support that conforms to the shape of your back.

If you're typing for long stretches, try to avoid RSI (Repetitive Stress Injury) that comes from repeated motion. Those who type while resting their wrists on the edge of either keyboard or desk may be letting themselves in for painful and sometimes disabling nerve injuries often called carpal tunnel syndrome.

Other common-sense advice is to put your monitor on a stand that allows you to tilt it for the best vision angle, use a copy holder to bring documents to eye level and wear comfortable clothing.

If you have a physical handicap, computers can help you cope. In that line, it's nice to see that C-CAD of Arlington, Tex., has been nominated for the first Computerworld Awards for Innovative Use of Information Technology.

C-CAD, the Center for Computer Assistance to the Disabled, works to get information about computerized help for the disabled to those who need it. Contact them at 2501 Avenue J, Suite 100, Arlington, TX 76006-6191. Telephone 817-640-6613.

FAMILY MATTERS

Emotional support from friends helpful in crisis

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR FAMILY: A good friend of ours is facing a financial disaster. My husband told me that this was coming a long time ago, but I never really said anything to anyone. He said that our friend has been pretending that nothing was wrong. He continued to spend money and buy things like everything was all right.

What should I say to his wife? I know that this is going to be hard on her. She has been very active in the community. She has never mentioned to me that anything was wrong. Should I say anything to her or just leave it alone? I want to help her but I don't want to hurt her feelings. — UNCERTAIN

DEAR UNCERTAIN: A financial disaster can be devastating, and people experiencing one need friends who offer them some emotional support. Try to avoid well-intentioned platitudes — "Things will work out," "Things always happen for the best," "Money's not important," "God never gives us more than we can handle," and so on. These sayings may be true, but they just aren't helpful.

Each family defines its own financial disaster. If the family's worth is based on its financial success, then financial failure can be shattering. Some people have a hard time believing their self-worth is based on who they are, not what they own.

I encourage you to invite your friend over for coffee and tell her you are there for her. Share your feelings with her. If she wants to talk about her situation, you have opened the door for her to do so.

DEAR FAMILY: We are planning on driving to Colorado during spring break. Our 3-year-old is just awful on long drives. He always throws these horrible fits. I am just dreading this trip. My husband and I always wind up fighting because he expects me to keep our son quiet so that he can drive. I keep climbing over the seat to try and shut our son up and he just screams even more.

I have tried everything. I know that I shouldn't do it, but I usually wind up letting him sit in my lap. He is quiet then but he climbs all over me and I'm a wreck. I hope that you can answer this before we go on this drive. I need some help! — HELPLESS

DEAR HELPLESS: Although this won't be published in time to help you with this trip, it might offer you some suggestions for future trips.

First, decide what your son is getting from his behavior. Is it attention, entertainment ... ? Next, create a plan to address his needs. You and your husband agree on specific actions to be used for specific behaviors, and include rewards for desired behavior.

Before a trip, have a family meeting — with every family member attending — and share your plans with your son. Carefully explain the rules and the consequences of his actions to him. For example, you may want to stop the car when he starts throwing a fit and deal with him immediately. Discipline is most effective when the consequence immediately follows the action.

Bring some toys on the trip with you. Make sure they are "car safe" if thrown. Have a collection of books and songs to read and sing.

Given your son's schedule, be prepared to periodically sit in the back seat with him. I agree that he should not sit in your lap. Help him identify when he feels hungry, tired, bored, etc., and respond to his needs.

Most important, recognize that a very long trip in a car is torture for a 3-year-old. Praise him as much as you can.

Supernova visible after 134 years

Copley News Service

On Aug. 20, 1855, Russian astronomer Ernst Hartwig saw a star exploding in the night sky right smack in the middle of the Andromeda galaxy.

It was the supernova S. Andromedae, which was nearly bright enough to be seen by the naked eye for several days and then faded away entirely six months later.

Now, the very same fiery remains have been spied by researchers from the University of Colorado at Boulder, using the 150-inch telescope at Arizona's Kitt Peak National Observatory.

The star explosion showed up as a dark spot around the galaxy's nucleus, through the utilization of photographs in which iron atoms absorb light.

University astronomer Robert A. Fesen says S. Andromedae is an expanding ball of gaseous iron about one light-year in diameter, which indicates it probably once was a very dense white dwarf star.

DEAR ABBY

Lunchtime trysts satisfy couple's appetite for love

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I work for the same large corporation, so we go to lunch together. He's 33 and I'm 29. (I tell you this so you will know that we're not a couple of young kids.) We are both divorced and have been seeing each other for about a year.

Since neither one of us eats lunch, we usually go for a drive in his truck and park somewhere in the shade, just to talk and hold each other. We are very much in love, Abby, and we don't get to spend much time together alone because we live quite a long distance from each other and both have young children.

More than once lately we have gotten a little carried away and we made love in his truck. His windows are tinted so you can't see inside — besides, we are very discreet.

Parking as we do is nothing new, but I would like to know what could happen to us if we should ever get caught by a police officer. — LUNCH HOUR LOVER

DEAR LOVER: It all depends on where you were caught. (In Paris, they'd probably give you a medal.) I checked with the Los Angeles Police Department and was told that a police officer would approach the truck if its presence were "suspicious" — but once the officer ascertained that the occupants were both adults, and the intent was clearly romance and not rape, they would be given a stern warning that that kind of activity in a public location is dangerous, and to never place themselves in such a vulnerable position again.

A word to the wise should be sufficient. And I hope it is.

DEAR ABBY: This is for all those people who don't want to go to their class reunions because they weren't popular — or didn't belong to the "in" crowd in high school and they thought no one would want to talk to them anyway.

I didn't think anyone would talk to me either, but my husband and I decided to go to my 20th high school reunion. Abby, it was the best move we ever made. People were actually glad to see us! (We both graduated from the school, but in different years.)

I hugged more people in two days than I had hugged in 20 years! I have never felt such a sense of love and belonging as I did at that reunion. There were no pretenses of where we came from, since most of us came from working-class families; we came home to be together. I even made peace with an old enemy!

For those who organized that reunion in Pittsburgh, thank you from the bottom of my heart. For those who didn't make the effort to attend — you missed a wonderful weekend. — YOU CAN GO HOME AGAIN

DEAR YOU CAN: Because you took the trouble to write, perhaps those who were lukewarm about going "home" for a class reunion will reconsider. Thanks for writing. Thanks, too, for mentioning those generous people who organize class reunions. They require a ton of work, and not many are willing to tackle the job.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Needy," whose husband never gives her a compliment, does not apply to married women only.

I live with my sister and have been complimenting her for years, hoping to get one compliment from her in return. Never has she given me the satisfaction of even the smallest compliment. Nothing I do is good enough, and regardless of how good I look she just can't bring herself to say so.

As for "Needy," there's nothing she can do to wring a compliment out of her husband. All she can do is put up with him, feed him and hope he dies before she does. Then maybe (if she's still young enough) she can find a man who will give her a compliment. I hope so. — NO COMPLIMENTS IN NEW JERSEY

Albuquerque band makes loud music, strong beer

By ELISABETH DUNHAM

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — An Albuquerque band is trying to draw rock'n' roll fans who like their music the same way they like their beer — strong.

Class Axe is the name of the band. It is also the name of the extra-stout beer made by the band's leader, Steve Maas.

"I just put two and two together," says Maas. "Well, rock'n' roll and beer go together."

Maas, who spends several nights a week emulating the voices and styles of Jim Morrision, Peter Frampton, George Thoroughgood and others, doesn't mince words when it comes to describing his brew.

"It's the best beer in the United States," he says.

Fed up with wimpy domestics, Maas began brewing his own beer several years ago. He says it is comparable, maybe even a little better, than many German and British imports.

He now spends about four hours a month brewing four cases of Class Axe beer. With eight to 15 gigs a month, Class Axe the band is clearly the priority.

With regular appearances at night spots around Albuquerque, the band is also the money-maker of the two. The beer, at this point, is merely a promotional item and a hobby.

Maas, 32, says he hopes that won't always be the case. Someday, Maas says, he hopes the band will be to his beer what Spuds MacKenzie is to Budweiser.

"Right now the band is more important. But the beer could be more important if I could make enough of it," he says.

"I'm looking into getting a brewer's license. Eventually, I plan to have a brewery," he says.

Fellow band members — bass player Mike Baca, drummer Jeff Sorroche, keyboard player Benito Encinias and sound engineer Scott Trujillo — say they are firmly behind Maas' business plans.

But for now, fans of Class Axe the beer will have to be satisfied with the less-than-inebriating quantities Maas doles out at gigs.

"At the break, I'll go out and give it to them and make sure they put it in their car and don't bring it in the club," Maas says. "I do let all the club owners know what I'm doing."

Nostalgia transforms junk into treasures

By JAMES BARRON
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Perry Rosen paid $200 for his first jukebox, a Seeburg Model C. It was a chrome and glass machine from the 1950s with a Select-O-Matic carriage gliding over a rack of records.

"The man I got it from was throwing out all his C's," Rosen recalled. "He said, 'I don't know what I want this junk for.'"

That was seven years ago. These days, no one calls jukeboxes junk. They have become collectors' items, Rosen has become a collector and prices have soared.

Rosen, a telephone technician who lives in Brooklyn, said a restored Seeburg is now worth $4,000; his second purchase, a colorful Wurlitzer 850, is worth nearly three times the $6,500 it cost him in 1986. He also owns a Wurlitzer 1015, the popular model that featured iridescent plastic panels and liquid-filled bubbling tubes.

It has been 100 years since jukeboxes — which were once called nickelodeons — began playing the hits, first with listening tubes, a low-technology predecessor of headphones. Since then, the wax cylinders of those machines have given way to 78 rpm records, then 45s and now compact disks, and Art Deco designs have been replaced by cases that look more subdued and functional.

But even the clocklike inner workings are enough to make collectors like Rosen nostalgic.

THEY REMEMBER what it took to make the music go round and round: the clink of the coin, the Select-O-Matic pulling the record off the rack, the big tone arm moving toward the playing surface (on some models, the record remained vertical while it spun around), and the sound pouring out through an audio amplifier with warm twinkly vacuum tubes inside, instead of cold solid-state circuits.

John Lennon had a Wurlitzer 1015, perhaps the most prized jukebox ever made. Dick Clark, whose "American Bandstand" program brought dance music to millions of bobby-soxers beginning in the 1950s, installed one in his Trump Tower apartment.

This weekend, to mark the 100th anniversary of coin-operated phonographs, the Fifth Annual Manhattan Antiques and Collectibles Triple Pier Expo will have a special exhibit of old jukeboxes at Pier 88 in the Passenger Ship Terminal, at 48th Street and 12th Avenue.

The glittery music machines that will be on display, though, are going the way of the malt shops and diners that once housed them. The number of coin-operated players has already shrunk from more than 500,000 in 1976 to 225,000 now, according to the Amusement & Music Operators Association, a Chicago-based trade group.

Wendy Johnston, a Brooklyn collector and co-owner of Jukebox Classics in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, says the number has been declining since shortly after World War II.

Wurlitzer lost its marketing edge in 1949 when Seeburg began producing slick chrome-plated machines that could play up to 100 selections, more than four times the average Wurlitzer's capacity. And diners have been supplanted by fast-food franchises, which play Muzak or rock radio if they have music at all.

JUKEBOXES BEGAN with Thomas Edison, the inventor of the phonograph, but he had something quite different in mind. What became the jukebox was originally a dictating machine.

"Edison worked more than 100 hours a week," said Joel Friedman, a vice president of Rowe International, a jukebox manufacturer in Whippany, N.J. "One of the problems he had was he would come up with ideas at 1 a.m. when the secretary wasn't around."

What Edison invented was a coinless device that would record memoranda on tinfoil if the busy executive screamed into a horn. Apparently the busy executive of the 1880s was not so inclined, and the invention languished until 1889, when Louis Glass put a coin slot on one of Edison's machines in San Francisco. Glass charged people five cents to listen to music, not screaming executives.

Before long, Friedman said, there were 5,000 jukeboxes, called nickelodeons, in Brooklyn ("we know this from the tax records"). The price dropped, giving rise to the penny arcade, where entrepreneurs lined up row after row of the machines.

In the 1920s, manufacturers started building the classics, and in 1927, the Automatic Music Instrument Co. invented an electrical amplifier in 1927 and sold 50,000 machines a year.

Until the current boom began, such machines turned up in the unlikeliest places.

MRS. JOHNSTON, a former vice president of Manufacturers Hanover Bank, became a collector about 10 years ago, when her husband, John, discovered two bubbling Wurlitzer 1015s — two of the 56,000 made in 1946 and 1947 — and a Colonial-style Wurlitzer 1080 in New Hampshire.

"He paid $300 for the two 1015s and made one working machine out of the pair," she said. "We didn't know anybody collecting them or anything about reproduction parts. John went to Canal Street and bought tubes and went to Radio Shack and adapted the needle to the tone arm. We were going out of our minds."

But then someone offered him $2,700 for the Wurlitzer 1015.

Johnston sold it for $1,800 and an IBM time clock. He quit his job as a construction engineering supervisor and began trading jukeboxes, clocks, slot machines and pinball machines, all of which rely on a similar mechanical design. Eventually the Johnstons opened Jukebox Classics.

Only Wendy Johnston was at the store one recent Saturday. John Johnston was on his way back from Alabama with a newly acquired load of jukeboxes.

As customers and collectors bustled around the shop, Mrs. Johnston talked about the history of the dozen or so old Wurlitzers on the showroom floor. Paul Fuller, Wurlitzer's chief designer, had a heart attack in 1948, and that ended what Mrs. Johnston describes as the golden age of jukeboxes.

"He was the first person to use Polaroid film for that mother-of-pearl look," Mrs. Johnston said. "We don't have people who think like he did anymore."

In the store's basement is a Wurlitzer Victory Model 42, made during the war with very little metal. Once the least desirable model because unlike its Bakelite and chrome cousins it was exceptionally plain, it is now scarce and, she said, generally sells for $6,500 to $8,500.

AFTER WORLD War II, jukeboxes imitated the flashy chrome look favored by Detroit car stylists who abandoned dark wood and rounded corners for sharp angles and reflective surfaces. But the car had other effects on the evolution of the jukebox: automobiles popularized drive-ins at the expense of sit-down diners with jukeboxes, and car radios meant that Americans no longer needed jukeboxes to hear the latest tunes.

Business seems to be coming back. Rowe's sales have been up as much as 30 percent a year in the 1980s. "The nostalgia craze has obviously helped us," Friedman said. "And people are starting to recognize again that the jukebox is an inexpensive, fun form of entertainment."
