Wreckage of United jet searched

Scattered debris

The wreckage of a United Airlines DC-10 rests near a Sioux City, Iowa, airport runway.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — National Guardsmen scoured a cornfield today for survivors or victims of a United DC-10 jet that crashed during an emergency landing, killing at least 74 people.

At least 176 of the 293 people aboard survived. Many survivors walked away from the wreckage after the plane hit the Sioux Gateway Airport runway Wednesday and cartwheeled in a ball of fire into the cornfield.

Forty-three people were missing, City Manager Hank Sinda said today. The plane was filled nearly to capacity.

A flight attendant who survived the crash by crawling out of an opening in the burning wreckage was quoted by her parents as saying a higher being "opened up that hole" to allow her to escape.

CNN reported that emergency officials believed most of the 43 missing were in the fuselage and were fairly confident that anyone still in the wreckage was dead.

The Guardsmen were combing an area larger than three football fields where wreckage was strewn, "laying out a grid and conducting a thorough and systematic search," said Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad, who held a news conference at the airport after touring the crash site.

"They are photographing every inch of the area," said the governor, wearing a pink ribbon of mourning as an armband.

The15-year-old jumbo jet experienced "complete hydraulic failure" before the crash, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Farrar said.

Economic expansion goal of initiative

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

One of the most ambitious economic development campaigns ever waged in Midland was unleashed today.

Dubbed "Forward Midland," the $2.3 million program will attempt to create nearly 5,000 jobs over the next four years using an extensive arsenal of weaponry, ranging from tax incentive packages to creation of a regional database that will be linked to other networks from Austin to Washington, D.C.

Scharbauer

At a news conference held today at the Midland Chamber of Commerce, Forward Midland Chairman Clarence Scharbauer III said he was ecstatic about the possibilities.

"We're not planning on any miracles overnight. We have no grand illusions, but I think over the next four years we are going to be successful. This is something for all Midlanders."

Forward Midland's goals are demanding.

In addition to the new jobs, by 1993 program proponents say they want:

■ To increase the city's annual aggregate payroll by $80 million;

■ Find use for 1 million square feet of empty office/industrial space;

■ Induce $40 million in plant and equipment investment.

FORWARD MIDLAND

■ "DIVERSIFICATION: Beyond the hype," a five-part comprehensive look at Midland diversification efforts, will begin Sunday.

"This isn't business and industry at all cost," said Scharbauer in an earlier interview. "You have to understand right now that we plan to bring in what's compatible to our way of life."

If Forward Midland is to attain success, the program will have to address a variety of concerns from providing working capital for new start ups to targeting value-added industries that can compete effectively with other larger markets.

However, much of that will depend largely on who Forward Midland's 15-member steering committee selects to navigate the program over the next few years.

Already six candidates have been interviewed for the position of executive director — candidates that Forward Midland officials claim have "superstar" status credentials in the area of economic development.

"We're not at a point right now to say who that person is because we don't know, but a lot of what we'll accomplish will hinge on this man or woman," said Scharbaurer.

Recent departures of former chamber head John Fowler and economic development manager James Crider make it imperative that whoever is hired be around to see the program through.

In its four-year mission statement, Forward Midland plans:

■ To set aside funds for enterprise development and assistance in areas related to the proposed foreign trade and enterprise zones, the Permian Basin Bid Center, the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's Center for Energy and Economic Diversification among other activities.

Session ends without workers comp decision

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The clock ran out on workers compensation reform Wednesday night as Texas House and Senate negotiators were unable to close the gap on key issues of jury trials and benefits.

Faced with no movement and a midnight deadline, the Senate finally adjourned at 9:15 p.m. after it approved a resolution by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, to create a special interim committee to investigate ratemaking and oversight of workers compensation insurance, while the House of Representatives quit at 9:50 p.m.

Gov. Bill Clements blamed trial lawyers for causing the deadlock between the House, whose version generally favored business and insurance companies, and the Senate, which generally favored workers and plaintiff's attorneys.

The governor's declaration, with 12 hours left in the session that the issue was dead until November surprised House and Senate conferees who continued to exchange proposals through the evening, but they made no headway on the critical areas of jury trials in dispute resolution and methods for figuring benefits for permanently disabled workers.

"The problem is just what it's always been — judicial review, which means the same old thing, trial de novo," Clements said, referring to trial by jury in workers compensation appeals, which Senate negotiators insisted they had eliminated.

While House Speaker Gib Lewis and Rep. Richard Smith, R-Bryan, the lead House negotiator, said many special interest groups were interested in scuttling the bill that was designed to control business costs, Clements was more specific.

"The trial lawyers are to blame, because we're going to have to come back in November and if we don't do it then we're going to come back in March and we're going to keep coming back until we get the problem solved," Clements said.

Sen. Cyndi Krier of San Antonio, the only Republican on the Senate team, had appealed to the conferees to agree on a bill that they could take to their respective houses for a vote before the session adjourned. "I think both are good bills," she said.

Jason Davis, 7, buried his pet butterfly in his backyard last Sunday, but not before waiting two weeks to make sure it was dead.

Boy finally buries butterfly

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Even though the creature was dead a good two weeks before, Jason Davis dug his pet butterfly's backyard grave with apprehension last Sunday.

"What if I buried him alive?" the 7-year-old had pondered.

His concern was with good cause.

According to Jason's calculations, if that crazy butterfly wasn't in its fish bowl eating honey-water or "roosting" on his finger, it was dying or dead.

The butterfly that couldn't fly but wouldn't die was like the tale about cats and nine lives.

Hispanic chamber plans special event

From Staff Reports

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce is preparing its second annual Mex-Tex Menudo Cook-Off, set for Saturday and Sunday at the County Exhibit Building.

Elvia Hernandez, executive director of the chamber, says people from such towns as Iraan, Terrell, San Antonio, Austin, Fort Stockton and Lamesa are expected to visit or have booths at the festival.

"It's part of our tourism effort," she noted, adding that the proceeds from the festival go toward the chamber's scholarship fund and other projects.

Larry Carrasco, chairman of the cookoff committee, emphasized that the two-day event is intended to provide entertainment for the whole family.

A parade kicks off the festival at 11:00 a.m. Saturday; the route goes from in front of Jumburrito on Lamesa Highway south to Casa de Amigos, then along Carver Street, to Highway 80 East and the Exhibit Building. Parade marshal is singer Patsy Torres of San Antonio. Members of the Midland Angels baseball team will be honorary marshals. Ms. Hernandez says there are currently 62 units in the parade.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony will be held at noon, officially opening the event to the public. Admission is $1 at the gate. There will be 69 food and game booths and a full day of entertainment, ranging from Mariachi America con Malena Cano, Ballet Folklorico de Midland, square dancers, Polynesian dancers and a tae-kwon-do demonstration. The menudo competition is from noon to 3 p.m., with free samples available.

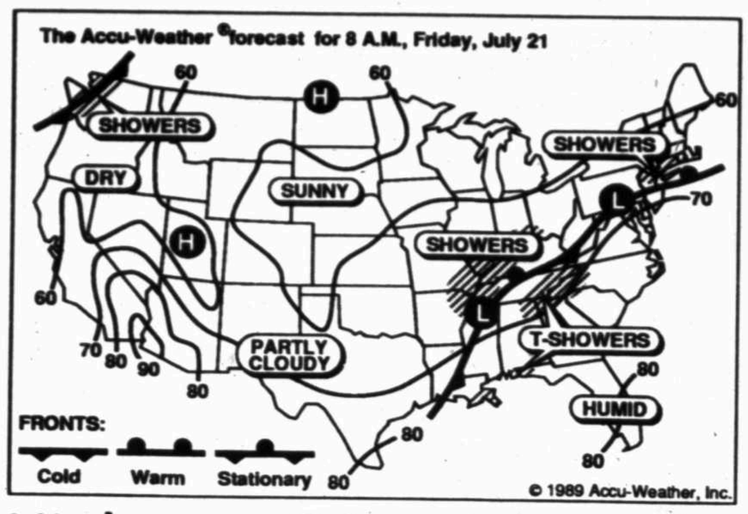
WEATHER SUMMARY



High near 90 anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

A less than 20 percent chance of evening thunderstorms is in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. Otherwise, skies will be fair. The low will be in the middle 60s and winds will be from the east at 5-10 mph.

Friday is expected to be mostly sunny with a less than 20 percent chance of late afternoon thunderstorms. The high will be near 90 and winds will continue from the east at 10-15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 96 was nine degrees cooler than the record high of 105 set for that date in 1981. The overnight low of 70 was eight degrees warmer than the record low of 62 set for this date in 1988.

STATE

A weak cold front is expected to trigger isolated to widely scattered thunderstorms over portions of West Texas and along mid to upper sections of the Gulf of Mexico coast through Friday.

The rest of the state will have clear to partly cloudy skies and cooler temperatures through Friday.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s and 70s except along the coast in South Texas where readings will be in the 80s.

Highs Friday will be mostly in the 80s and 90s.

Showers and thunderstorms were reported early today along the coast, extending inland to near Palacios and Victoria. They were along a cold front that extended from the Louisiana coast westward along a line from near Victoria to near Laredo.

Other showers and thunderstorms dampened southwestern portions of the Panhandle during the pre-dawn hours.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 60s and 70s except along the coast and in South Texas where readings hovered in the lower 80s. Extremes ranged from 61 at Dalhart to 84 at Laredo.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 64 at Amarillo, 66 at Wichita Falls, 72 at Fort Worth, 70 at Waco, 76 at Austin, 77 at San Antonio, 75 at Houston, 77 at Corpus Christi, 75 at Brownsville, 65 at San Angelo, 71 at Lubbock, 73 at Midland and 73 at El Paso.

NATION

Heavy rains fell across central Pennsylvania and parts of the South early today.

Parts of east-central and south-central Pennsylvania were under a flood watch early today as showers and thunderstorms brought locally heavy rain. More than 2 inches drenched the Bedford area during a two-hour period late Wednesday.

More than 2 inches of rain also fell in northwest Stueben County in south-central New York. A flood watch was in effect for parts of south-central New York today.

CRASH

Parts of the plane were found 50 miles away.

Flight attendant Virginia Jane Murray, 35, phoned her parents in Chester, S.C., to say she was all right.

"She said she was tumbling," said her father, Don Murray. "The walls were coming in. She said a hole opened up and the sunlight came in and she climbed out the hole. She said she knew the Lord opened up that hole."

Murray said he did not know the extent of his daughter's injuries except that she was not burned.

"I thought I was going to die," said 8-year-old Ben Radtke of Prairie View, Ill., who was carried out of the fractured fuselage by a passenger. The boy, shaking but unhurt, clutched a United Airlines button and a pair of plastic pilot's wings as he spoke.

A flight recorder was recovered, authorities said.

Flight 232, from Denver to Philadelphia via Chicago, carried 11 crew members and 282 passengers, including three infants, said United spokesman Lawrence Nagin. The plane has a capacity of 287 passengers.

Most of the survivors were sitting in the middle of the plane, in rows 9 to 19, said Dr. David Greco, director of the emergency department and helicopter services for the Marian Health Center, where many of the injured were taken.

"There was nothing left of the rear half of the aircraft. First class was devastated," Greco said. Except for the midsection, "the rest of the aircraft was in tiny little debris."

The Seattle-based cockpit crew survived and were being treated for injuries at a hospital, Nagin said.

He identified them as Capt. A.C. Haynes, a 33-year United veteran; First Officer W.R. Records; and Second Officer D.J. Dvorak.

Hydraulic systems provide power steering that allows pilots to manipulate the wing and tail controls of the jumbo jet. Without it, aviation officials say the plane would be uncontrollable.

The tail engine failed, and this may have caused a hydraulic failure, said Bob Raynesford, another FAA spokesman. The plane's three independent hydraulic systems are routed to the tail section.

The crash left a swath of charred runway and strewed bits of people's lives over the wide expanse: two sets of golf clubs, a wallet photo of a brunette in her prom dress, a Reebok tennis shoe, a purple hairdryer, one black high-heeled shoe and a collection of Marilyn Monroe photographs.

Four people near Alta, 55 miles east of Sioux City, discovered a piece of the plane, 6 to 7 feet high and 6 feet long, in a corn field.

Four miles away, Allen and Phil Jahde found three pieces of the plane scattered in their cornfield. Phil Jahde said one piece was a 6-foot-long metal band, engraved ENG 2.

"It's remarkable to us that he made it that far back with the pieces he's losing," he said.

The plane apparently experienced problems earlier Wednesday. Ruth Dinsmore, of Mount Laurel, N.J., said she took the same DC-10 from Philadelphia to Denver in the morning.

She said the plane began to leave the terminal at Philadelphia International Airport shortly after 10 a.m., when "everything sort of shut off." The plane taxied back to the terminal, where it sat about 15 minutes for repairs.

United spokeswoman Kim Thomas in Chicago said she could not confirm that the DC-10 had difficulty earlier in the day.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Steve Davidson, chairman of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, talks with reporters about Forward Midland, a $2.3 million economic development program that was unveiled today. The private effort has raised $1.5 million to date. Looking on is Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas, a member of Forward Midland's 15-member steering committee.

FORWARD

■ Developing a package industrial incentives and special inducements which would be allotted based on job creation and capital investment.

■ A prospect hosting program comprised of volunteer teams who will work with potential clients in familiarizing them with the city.

■ Establishment of "Network Midland," which would use local professional and business people as "stepping stones" to reach other potential prospects outside the Permian Basin.

■ Creation of three to five marketing teams made up of professionals familiar with local labor costs and other trends in the Permian Basin. Each team which would represent the city on solicitation trips as well as at trade shows.

But the largest chunk of Forward Midland's budget will go toward telling the city's story.

A multi-media campaign, which will include the hiring of a national public relations team and an advertising agency, is considered a cornerstone in getting the word out that Midland is a good place to do business.

According to Scharbauer, Midland has raised $1.5 million of its $2.3 million goal. "But we're not done. We've talked to a lot of folks, but we haven't talked with everyone ... we need the community behind this."

Steve Davidson, chairman of the Midland Chamber, agreed. "In order to compete effectively for businesses that can make a long-term impact on Midland, we must raise substantial capital and implement a serious marketing and recruitment program."

Forward Midland officials say they'll continue their one-one-one fundraising effort until the goal is reached.

"What this is going to do is allow us to stay solidly (with other cities) on the playing field," said Davidson. "Economic development is a top priority."

COMP

If the Legislature waits until November, she said, it will miss a deadline to produce lower compensation insurance rates for next year. "We're sentencing the people of Texas to try to survive under the workers compensation system another year," she said.

The final Senate proposal contained the major recommendations of the special committee that studied the workers compensation system, but maintained an important role for juries in the appeals process, said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, chairman of the conference committee.

But the House negotiators stood firm for their own version, which would put more authority in administrative decisions and would restrict jury discretion. House conferees also resisted attempts to fashion a bill based on the 80 percent of the bill that was agreed. "To adopt the bill in piecemeal fashion in my judgment isn't good policy," Smith said. "This bill should be voted up or down in its entirety."

Parker, who led Senate efforts for safety regulations, said the House would not compromise. "Rather than accept half a pie, (Smith) rejected it all," he said.

But Smith said the House conceded more from its original bill than the Senate. He said it was time to go home. "I really believe that people are tired. People need to step back and look at it and try again," he said.

"We have run out of time," agreed Rick Perry, D-Haskell, a House conferee. "I would say it's probably best now to go home."

But Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, co-chairman of the Senate conferees, said the negotiators are close enough that the governor ought to call the Legislature back today (Thursday) and keep it in session until they work out the bill.

Montford gave Clements a petition signed by 28 of the 31 senators asking for an immediate follow-up session. "I think it will be a disaster to wait until November," Montford said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he hoped Clements would call the Legislature back in within a week to finish its work. "If the special session is delayed six months, that is not consistent with the notion that there is a crisis in workers compensation in Texas," he said.

Parker argued that the Legislature would have a better chance to resolve the issue now than it will have in the fall.

Quoting Mark Twain, Parker said, "If you have to swallow a frog, you ought not to have to look at it a long time."

Dalilia, weakened to tropical storm, passing Hawaiian islands

HONOLULU (AP) — A weakening Tropical Storm Dalilia headed past Hawaii, bringing heavy rain and high winds but no reports of major damage.

Hurricane Dalilia weakened to a tropical storm early Wednesday, but the National Weather Service continued to warn people — especially residents of the island of Hawaii — to brace for heavy rains and high winds.

At 8 p.m. Wednesday (2 a.m. EDT today), the storm was about 60 miles south of South Point on Hawaii Island, moving northwest at 17 mph and was expected to weaken, according to the weather service.

Its maximum sustained wind speed was 63 mph; a storm is classified a hurricane when that speed reaches 74 mph. Wind gusted to 80 mph.

A tropical storm watch for Hawaii Island, the southernmost in the chain, was upgraded Wednesday to a tropical storm warning, meaning residents could expect winds up to 73 mph, heavy rains, flooding and higher than normal surf. A flash flood warning also was in effect.

A flash flood watch — less urgent than a warning — was issued Wednesday night for Oahu, Maui, Kauai, Molokai and Lanai as the weather service reported heavy rain throughout the state.

"Because it seems to staying on a course that will bring it parallel to the islands, we think the main problem might be from the rain; hopefully the winds won't be too extreme, but we might get some flooding" said Hans Rosendal, a weather service forecaster.

BUTTERFLY

At least twice the butterfly seemingly came back to life after brushes with what the Davis family of four believed was certain death.

Initially, the family had attempted to humanely euthanize the pet in mid-May after an injury left it minus a right leg and part of a left wing.

Dead was how the family thought they'd found the butterfly after pulling it out of a baby food jar that had been sealed with a cotton ball soaked in camphor oil inside.

Seconds later, before two very tearful Davis children, the remaining wings fluttered and the family rejoiced.

"We decided if it was that spunky, it deserved to live," mother Fern Davis had said.

Then in mid-June, Jason noticed the butterfly, a Morning Cloak, again was motionless.

"He was just so pathetic," the mother recalled. "The other right leg and a part of its right wing had broken off.

"I thought, 'Well, this is it.' "

But as she stood in the kitchen one day prepping for yet another butterfly funeral, Jason marched in.

"Look mom, it's alive again!"

The butterfly went through what Mrs. Davis termed "stasis" or comatose periods she believes were caused by the temperature differences between the pet's natural habitat and their home.

"He or she ... I never could figure out how to tell ... would revive and we'd notice because the food was gone," the mother said.

This revival took place every couple of weeks. Sleep followed by activity.

During one of the butterfly's lifeless periods, Jason tramped into the kitchen sporting a dragonfly on his index finger.

"Oh no!" the mother exclaimed. "Take that back outside and set it free, Jason!"

He tried and eventually succeeded. "I'd let it go and I thought I'd stepped on it, but it had just landed on my foot."

The week before the Independence Day holidays, the butterfly took a turn for the worse.

"He was dying," Jason recounted.

The family played it safe and opted to let the butterfly remain in its fish bowl home waiting to see if it was really dead.

It was the fish bowl from which the butterfly would flutter out at night to sleep bat-like upside down on Jason's Lego house, and the one into which the butterfly crashed several times resulting in the wing and leg damage.

"We had so many other close calls. I thought, 'Well, maybe it's not dead again', " Mrs. Davis said.

Jason, allergic to cats and dogs, had discovered his unique but unnamed pet when it was just a caterpillar inching serenely across the porch at his home.

On April 24 he had moved his furry friend into the fish bowl and to his classroom so all could chart the coming transition from cocoon to winged-creature.

When the passage was complete, Jason took the butterfly home for a last good-bye and an informal liberation ceremony.

"But it came back into my hands!" the child had recalled in amazement.

After school, when Jason was finished with bath and homework, he and his pet would spend evenings together much like any other two friends.

Jason would sit on the sofa while the butterfly sat propped on his finger. The child noted it usually nodded off first.

Last Sunday, Jason put his friend to bed for good.

"I buried him over in the corner of the backyard where there's no grass where I play."

Jason, who with toddler sister Julie had been shaken up badly after the euthanasia attempt, had "come to terms with its death" by this time.

He is also able to face the fact he will leave his butterfly's grave when his family moves to Philadelphia later this month.

"It was hard not to cry," the boy recalled of the burial.

He couldn't help but feel said, Jason said. "I got a flower from the trumpet vine and put it on his grave.

"Those were the flowers where the bees get honey. Just like my butterfly ate."

The day ends with the Senorita Hispana del Permian Basin beauty pageant, with 14 young women competing in swimsuit and talent divisions. Tickets are $5 in advance, $10 at the door. Patsy Torres will perform at a dance after the competition. Tickets for the pageant are available at the chamber office, Tampico's, Ricardo's, Freddy's Instant Shopping and Al's Grocery.

The gates open again at noon Sunday with a fajita and chili competition from noon to 3 p.m. Entertainment will include ballet, hula and belly dancers and a charreada (a Mexican-style rodeo) from 3 to 5 p.m.

The final stages of the beauty pageant begin at 7 p.m., with the contestants competing in evening gown and entertainment divisions. The winner will be announced at 8:30 p.m., and a dance is set for 9 to 10 p.m.

Bush to seek manned space station on moon, trip to Mars

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush proposed today that America establish a base on the moon in the 21st century to be followed by a manned mission to Mars. Marking the 20th anniversary of man's first lunar landing, he declared the nation "should never stop seeking distant frontiers."

Bush offered no firm timetable or price tag for the costly program he promised would lead "back to the moon, back to the future, and this time back to stay.

"Then a journey into tomorrow," he proposed, "A journey to another planet, a manned mission to Mars," at least 35 million miles away.

In a ceremony from the steps of the National Air and Space Museum, the president reasserted the goal of establishing Space Station Freedom in the 1990s, the necessary first step to the moon and Mars.

The technological hurdles of getting to Mars could be matched by political ones, however. At a time of huge budget deficits, Congress already is balking at the start-up costs for the $30-billion space station. The station is the essential first step to the moon and Mars.

Bush drew Democratic support for his vision, but the decision to provide no budget or deadline prompted criticism.

Rep. Dennis Eckart, D-Ohio said Bush was "calling for one great leap for mankind" but not even providing the money for "one small step," using a take-off of Neil Armstrong's first words from the lunar surface.

Bush was flanked on the outdoor museum stage by Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin, the two men who planted their footsteps on the moon on July 20, 1969, and Michael Collins, the third member of the Apollo 11 crew.

"We have rested on our Apollo laurels long enough. It's time to get moving again," said Collins in words echoed by the others.

Bush chose to looked beyond the budget squabbling over the space station budget. He said that part of his proposals amounted to "only a first step."

Bush offered few details beyond his broad goals, and said he was leaving it to Vice President Dan Quayle, the National Space Council and NASA to come up with "realistic timetables." The space station in orbit has been scheduled for after 1995, assuming its budget is protected.

"America should never stop seeking distant frontiers," Bush said. "We dream of distant shores we've not yet seen...A dream to be realized by future generations must begin with this generation," he said.

■ Related stories — 11A, 4D

Bush will need to forge an alliance with Democratic leaders to win the funding for serious space exploration, and initial reaction came from Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., the House Majority Leader.

"The party of John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson applauds the decision of President Bush to recommit America to space exploration," he said.

"But the real test of presidential leadership is not whether he can marshall the words but the resources to restore America's preeminence in space. In sum, Mr. President, there's no such thing as a free launch."

President Kennedy's 1961 speech set a firm deadline of putting man on the moon "by the end of the decade," and provided NASA with a concrete goal. Gephardt said that under Democratic presidents of the 60s, during the heyday of the space program, the NASA budget approached 4 percent of the U.S. budget. The Republican presidents of the 80s have proposed less than 1 percent, he said.

"George Bush will never qualify as Captain Kirk," predicted Eckart. "He will never be bold enough to go where no man has gone before."

The ceremony a few blocks from the White House blended the president's glimpse into the future with reminiscenes of Apollo program.

"The Apollo program shared a certain nobility of purpose," said Armstrong.

Security officers escort Adnan Khashoggi, center, after the Saudi financier arrived at New York's Kennedy International Airport on Wednesday.

Saudi financier pleads innocent to helping Marcoses

NEW YORK (AP) — Saudi financier Adnan Khashoggi landed in a U.S. jail after being extradited from Switzerland and pleading innocent to charges of helping Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos plunder $100 million from the Philippines.

U.S. District Judge Charles Keenan said at Wednesday's hearing that he "wouldn't dream of setting bail" until Khashoggi's worth is verified.

Once among the world's richest men, Khashoggi was said to be the middleman in the Iran-Contra deal.

The former fugitive, handcuffed and wearing a green leisure suit, did not talk with reporters before leaving Kennedy International Airport with FBI agents. But in a statement released by his lawyer, Khashoggi said he intends to contest the charges and is confident that "my innocence will be clearly established."

Khashoggi's attorney, Robert Morvillo, had asked that bail be set no higher than the $5 million bond granted Mrs. Marcos.

Khashoggi's assets have dwindled recently as various holdings have been sold. "I read in the newspapers, like everyone else, that he's a very rich man, but I don't know that," the judge said.

"I think your honor can assume that he's an enormously wealthy man," Morvillo said.

Instead of jail, Morvillo suggested that Khashoggi be put under house arrest at his luxury apartment on Fifth Avenue. He said Khashoggi could pay for private security guards deputized by the court to watch him.

Keenan laughed at the idea but said he would keep in mind Morvillo's arguments in favor of bail.

U.S. Assistant Attorney Charles LaBella opposed bail and house arrest, saying he had learned that creditors were about to foreclose on the apartment.

In October, a federal grand jury in New York indicted Khashoggi, the Marcoses, five other people and the California Overseas Bank in Los Angeles.

The Marcoses were charged with stealing millions from the Philippines to buy real estate and art in New York. Khashoggi allegedly posed as the owner of some of the assets as a cover.

Khashoggi, 53, had been jailed in Switzerland since his April 18 arrest at a luxury hotel in Bern. But Swiss officials denied extradition for racketeering and conspiracy charges because they're not recognized under Swiss law. He was arraigned Wednesday on mail fraud and obstruction of justice.

He faces up to five years in jail and a $250,000 fine.

Khashoggi, who once traveled the globe in his private yacht and plane, spent the last three months in a 30-square-foot prison cell fighting extradition.

Governments banning use of plastic foam

NEW YORK (AP) — From the tiniest city council chambers to the meeting rooms of Congress, elected officials around the nation have discovered a threat to the environment in front of their very noses: coffee cups.

Not just any coffee cups, but those made of plastic foam, the stuff that keeps hot things hot and cold things cold and protects those billions of McDonald's hamburgers.

Increasingly, local governments are banning the use of such products on grounds that they contribute to the nation's overflowing garbage crisis and contain chemicals that harm the Earth's ozone layer.

Such bans are easy and politically popular. Some experts say they also may be misguided and pointless.

The concern for the ozone layer is now largely moot. In a quiet revolution that has taken place during the past 15 months, the plastics industry has phased out most of the ozone-depleting chlorofluorocarbons that were used to manufacture plastic foam.

The other concern — landfill — comes closer to the target. But environmentalists and plastics industry officials argue it's pointless to ban plastic foam products when they are usually replaced by cardboard or plastic-coated paper.

"Neither are being recycled and both are going to take up the same amount of space in landfill," said Jeanne Wirka, a spokeswoman for the Washington-based Environmental Action Foundation. "The problem is really a trend toward disposability."

More than a dozen cities and counties have enacted bans on the use of disposable foam products made of polystyrene, a tough, flexible plastic. In Congress, a bipartisan group of House members has asked for the removal of polystyrene cups from the congressional restaurant system.

Private companies are getting into the act, too. Pacific Telephone recently banned use of plastic foam in its company cafeterias, and the Yosemite Park and Curry Co., the private concessionaire at Yosemite National Park, decided last year to phase out plastic foam containers.

The severity of the bans varies widely. Tempe, Ariz., banned the use of foam cups and plates in city offices only, while Suffolk County, N.Y., ordered stores throughout the county to stop selling food in polystyrene or polyvinyl containers. That ban has been held up by a court challenge.

In one of the most comprehensive ordinances, the city councils of Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., voted earlier this year to ban non-degradable, non-returnable, non-recyclable packaging.

In the latest action, the Irvine, Calif., city council voted Tuesday to ban use of all plastic foam made with chlorofluorocarbons — CFCs — as part of a larger ordinance to halt all use of the ozone-depleting chemical.

Clean air plan sets cleanup deadlines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nineteen cities likely would be given 10 years to fix their ozone pollution problems, while severely polluted Los Angeles, Houston and New York would have two decades, according to a draft of President Bush's clean air bill.

The multibillion-dollar cleanup plan would set four new categories for cities with ozone problems — severe, serious, moderate or marginal — and require the most polluted communities to use the most stringent remedies.

The Associated Press obtained a draft of the proposal, and then applied the latest available Environmental Protection Agency air monitoring data to determine which cities would fall into the two most serious ozone pollution categories.

There could be some changes when new air quality information becomes available, probably next month, but EPA officials said the number of switches should be small.

Ozone is a highly reactive gas that irritates and inflames sensitive lung tissues. This causes a host of adverse health effects, including chest pains, shortness of breath, coughing, nausea, throat irritation and increased susceptibility to respiratory infections.

The current EPA data would place these areas in the "serious" category for a 10-year cleanup: Chicago-Gary, Ind.; Cincinnati-Hamilton, Ohio; Hartford-New Britain-Middletown, Conn.; Milwaukee-Racine, Wis.; Philadelphia-Wilmington, Del.-Trenton, N.J.; Providence-Pawtucket, R.I.-Fall River, Mass.; Atlanta; Baltimore; Baton Rouge, La.; Beaumont-Port Arthur, Texas; El Paso, Texas; Huntington, W.Va.-Ashland, Ky.; Louisville, Ky.; Portland, Maine; San Diego; Sheboygan, Wis.; Springfield, Mass.; St. Louis; and the District of Columbia.

EPA officials verified both the list of 19 areas that would be given 10 years to correct ozone problems and the three cities in the severe, 20-year cleanup category.

William Becker, executive director of the State and Territorial Air Pollution Program Administrators, the organization of state and local air pollution officials, also said he did not expect many changes in the cities' classifications.

Bush is expected to submit the bill to Congress as early as Friday. The top 80 metropolitan areas in the country, and about 15 rural areas, are out of compliance with U.S. clean air standards under current law.

The Bush proposal is only one way of attacking the ozone problem, and environmentalists and their supporters in Congress are expected to push for their own proposals.

The EPA estimates that nationwide ozone cleanup efforts would cost $5 billion to $10 billion a year through the year 2000 and $8 billion to $12 billion a year afterward.

Infant, pilot killed in plane crash

FERNDALE, Md. (AP) — A twin-engine plane caught fire shortly after takeoff Wednesday and slammed into a house near an airport as the pilot attempted an emergency landing, killing the man and a 6-month-old baby inside the home.

The baby's parents and their other four children escaped from the house with minor injuries, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The Beechcraft 18 cargo plane appeared to be trying to turn back to Baltimore-Washington International Airport when it plowed into the house, said Al Dickinson of the National Transportation Safety Board.

The home in this Baltimore suburb was reduced to blackened rubble, and flames destroyed all evidence aboard the plane, Dickinson said.

However, he said the plane's 2,100-pound load was at least 500 pounds under the federal limit, and weather did not appear to be a factor.

The plane crashed into the home of Ralph H. Beam III, 33, and his wife, Janice, 31, about a mile from the airport around 7:20 a.m., Anne Arundel County fire officials said.

The body of the baby, Paul Beam, was found in the rubble about three hours later.

As the house burned, "people were standing around because they couldn't get in to help," said a neighbor, who identified herself only as Ellen. "I saw the mother and father come out of the side of the house by the kitchen, and she laid...screaming, 'My babies! My babies!'"

Another neighbor, Barry Majerowicz, 28, said neighbors had to restrain Beam from returning to the blazing house in what would have been a dangerous and probably vain effort rescue the baby.

Centre Airlines operations director Henry Garbrick, whose Reedsville, Pa., company owned the aircraft, identified the pilot as Benjamin S. Vitalini, 50, of Le Roy, N.Y.

Fireman comb through aftermath of a plane crash Wednesday morning in Ferndale, Md. A twin-engine plane crashed into a house near the airport, killing the pilot and an infant inside the home.

The airplane left the airport at 7:15 a.m. on a routine run carrying packages for United Parcel Service to Winchester, Pa., said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Duncan Pardue in New York.

Two minutes later, Vitalini radioed that the plane was on fire and that he was returning to the airport, but he crashed moments later, Pardue said. The pilot was alone.

Thick, white smoke still poured from the ruins of the house more than two hours after the crash. Neighbors wept as they watched firefighters cut through the debris and pull chunks of the plane from the rubble. Charred toys and clothing littered the yard.

The Beams and their other three children were treated at North Arundel Hospital and released, said a supervisor who gave her name only as Mrs. Pasquale.

Witness Phil Farney said he saw flames shooting from the cockpit moments before the crash, but authorities said they couldn't confirm that.

No flight recorder was recovered, and the 34-year-old aircraft was not required to carry one, investigators said.

Murder charges filed in actress' death

New York Times News Service

The Los Angeles District Attorney's office has filed a murder charge against a 19-year-old Tucson, Ariz., man described as "an obsessive fan" of an actress shot to death at her apartment.

Bardo

Rebecca Schaeffer, 21, was shot once in the chest Tuesday morning by an attacker who apparently had been lurking around her Los Angeles apartment building and reportedly flashed her photograph to passersby before ringing her doorbell.

On Wednesday, Tucson police arrested Robert John Bardo on a traffic violation because he was running among cars on a downtown freeway ramp.

The officers called Los Angeles police because of statements Bardo made, said Tucson police Sgt. Paul Hallums. He declined to elaborate.

Bardo, an unemployed former janitor, was "an obsessive fan of Miss Schaeffer," said Deputy District Attorney Robert E. Savitt, who filed the complaint.

The actress starred in films and the television series, "My Sister Sam."

An arrest warrant was also filed, but it was unclear when Bardo would be extradited to Los Angeles.

Los Angeles police Detective Dan Andrews said information implicating Bardo also came from a woman he identified only as a friend of Bardo's in Tennessee.

Andrews said the woman contacted LAPD Wednesday afternoon and told officers Bardo had called her Tuesday morning shortly before the shooting and said he was within a block and a half of Schaeffer's home.

Bardo didn't indicate that he meant to kill Schaeffer, Andrews said. "The threats of harm were sort of veiled," Andrews said.

The friend also told police that Bardo had in several conversations over the past year "allegedly expressed a fixation of her (Schaeffer) and...had made statements that he might harm her," Andrews said.

Police had received no reports that Schaeffer was being harassed.

Schaeffer's neighbors identified a photograph of Bardo as the man seen loitering around the building since about 6:30 a.m. Tuesday.

The gun has not been recovered, Andrews said.

Hallums said Tucson police obtained a search warrant but were waiting for Los Angeles officials to arrive before serving it on Bardo's residence. Detectives were expected to arrive in Tucson late Wednesday, Andrews said.

Bardo, whose last worked as a janitor at a Jack-In-The-Box restaurant, had a previous arrest record, but Hallums declined to say what those alleged violations had been since Bardo was never convicted of a crime.

Schaeffer appeared on "My Sister Sam" on CBS with Pam Dawber from 1986 to 1988, playing Patti Russell, the younger sister of Miss Dawber's character, Sam.

A native of Eugene, Ore., Schaeffer worked as a model in Japan in 1984, doing commercials and magazine covers. Upon her return to the United States, she took a regular role in the ABC soap opera "One Life to Live."

She also appeared in the Woody Allen film "Radio Days" and was most recently seen in "Scenes From the Class Struggle in Beverly Hills." She had just completed a co-starring role in "One Point of View," directed by Dyan Cannon.

Officials said Schaeffer's funeral was scheduled for Sunday in the Portland area.

Murder, shooting highlight dangers of stars' lives

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The murder of actress Rebecca Schaeffer and the fiery assault on Lorimar Studios this week dramatize the increased perils of living in the glare of Hollywood's bright lights.

Entertainers have long employed security, if only to fend off the paparazzi. But a string of recent incidents, including threats and attacks involving actors such as Michael J. Fox and Michael Landon, have prompted some stars to take greater safety measures.

Gavin de Becker, Hollywood's leading security consultant, said the killing of Miss Schaeffer bore similarities to the knife attack seven years ago of his client, "Raging Bull" actress Theresa Saldana.

"This was not Victoria Principal or Madonna," de Becker said Wednesday. "This was somebody with a far smaller audience. There is a dynamic that says, 'Whitney Houston is for everyone, but you're for me."

"There are more kooks in the world," said Ron Wells, business manager of the American Federation of Guards here, a union overseeing the 300 guards who protect studio gates.

Robert John Bardo, 19, of Tucson, Ariz., was an obsessive fan of Miss Schaeffer, police said Wednesday as Bardo was charged with murder in the shooting death of the 21-year-old co-star of the 1986-88 CBS sitcom, "My Sister Sam."

Investigators looking into another violent attack on Tuesday believe Edward Phillips Jr., 43, of Corydon, Ind., was angered by a business dispute with "Dallas" star Ken Kercheval over a popcorn company.

Phillips crashed a truck through the gate at Lorimar where "Dallas" is filmed, fired a burst of shotgun blasts, set his vehicle afire and then killed himself.

De Becker said he is in constant demand because of an exponential growth in the volume of fan nuisance letters in recent years. He has expanded into providing security for celebrity weddings and handled last year's nuptials between Fox and actress Tracy Pollan.

In an unusual departure, Eddie Murphy has set up a separate security post at the offices of his new production company, even though it sits on the Paramount Studios lot, itself protected by a squadron of guards.

When Murphy appears publicly, he is surrounded by a squadron of guards and friends.

Record producer Phil Spector is legendary for not making a move without a security guard present, even though few people would recognize him. Prince rarely appears without bodyguard accompaniment.

Elizabeth Taylor and other stars have installed elaborate security systems around their homes, often including cameras and fence enclosures. Local tabloid reporters single out Olivia Newton John, Sylvester Stallone and Johnny Carson for having the most sophisticated protection.

But despite the security, few celebrities may be completely beyond the public's reach.

"The access is there if somebody wants to get to a celebrity," said Barry Levine, West Coast bureau chief for the tabloid Star, itself an expert at gate-crashing. "The stars can have security guards and security systems more sensitive than a bank's, but people can still buy a star map for $2 and haunt these people.

"There really seems to be a rash of these things. We seem to do more stories about obsessed fans than anything else."

This week, 26-year-old Tina Marie-Ledbetter pleaded innocent in Los Angeles Superior Court to sending thousands of threatening letters and rabbit droppings to Fox, star of the former hit series, "Family Ties." She was ordered to remain without bail at the Sybil Brand Institute for Women.

Two guards were shot and killed at Universal Studios last December by a man who demanded to see Landon, star of "Highway to Heaven." Nathan Trupp, 44, of New Mexico, has pleaded innocent to the charges.

A deranged fan of Miss Saldana may be released early next year after serving half of a 12-year sentence for a knife attack against the actress. Arthur Jackson, a 53-year-old Scottish drifter, attacked the actress in 1982, stabbing her 10 times with a kitchen knife.

"I'm trying not to allow it to bring back bad memories for me," Miss Saldana said Wednesday of Miss Schaeffer's murder. "I really had a hard time with it this morning."

In true Hollywood fashion, celebrity stalking has been in the news so much in recent years that the practice has sparked two movies: 1981's "The Fan," starring Lauren Bacall and 1982's "The Seduction," featuring Morgan Fairchild.

Financial woes lead to suicide at TV studio

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — A man who drove a truck through a studio gate, set it afire and then committed suicide had claimed he was the victim of a "rotten, stinking deal" involving "Dallas" star Ken Kercheval.

Edward Phillips Jr., 43, of Corydon, Ind., was voted out of his management position at Old Capital Popcorn in April 1988 by his then wife, Linda, and Kercheval, who had bought the company from the couple.

Phillips fired 12-gauge shotgun blasts at the outside walls of a sound stage where "Dallas" is filmed before shooting himself in the chest on Tuesday.

An article detailing the Corydon-based popcorn maker's financial woes, published in April by The Courier-Journal of Louisville, Ky., was among items Phillips handed to a studio guard at the beginning of his rampage, police said Wednesday.

Phillips, a former farm-implement dealer, purchased Old Capital Popcorn with his ex-wife in 1983.

Kercheval liked the popcorn so much he invested $998,800 in the company in 1985, acquiring a one-third interest. In April 1988, he bought out the remainder of the company.

In a statement issued through his publicist, Kercheval said he was "shocked and astonished" by the suicide.

The 54-year-old actor said that after he bought the company, Phillips "on several occasions exhibited irrational behavior that frightened my family and associates."

Kercheval plays oil tycoon Cliff Barnes on the CBS series, which is produced by Lorimar-Telepictures Corp.

Late Tuesday afternoon, Phillips drove an 18-foot truck to a gate at the Lorimar lot 10 miles east of downtown Los Angeles. With the newspaper article and truck rental papers, he handed a security guard two canisters of methyl bromide gas, telling him, "You have five minutes to live," police said.

Methyl bromide is a caustic gas used to make popcorn, police Lt. Bill Burck said.

Phillips then drove through the gate, set the truck afire near a sound stage and fired five blasts from a shotgun into nearby stage walls as he yelled for people to stay away.

Within minutes, police surrounded the gunman and Phillips shot himself as they closed in. A bomb squad was called to the scene after firefighters spotted what later proved to be a dummy hand grenade inside the charred remains of the truck.

Phillips was quoted in The Courier-Journal article as saying he was devastated last year when he lost control of the popcorn firm and his wife sued for divorce. Afterward, he said he admitted himself briefly to an Ohio hospital for treatment of depression.

Although the partnership seemed promising after Kercheval took his first stake in 1985, Phillips and Kercheval clashed often over corporate strategies and marketing decisions.

Three years later, Linda Phillips and Kercheval voted against renewing Phillips' management contract.

A variety of disputes prompted numerous lawsuits in the case, which left Phillips deeply embittered, the newspaper quoted Phillips as saying, "It was a rotten, stinking deal."

Linda Phillips declined to comment on the matter.

NATION IN BRIEF

Energy Department may face criminal charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department faces more criminal probes of its nuclear weapons plants — and mounting public pressure to close them — unless it controls their environmental and safety problems, federal auditors say.

In a report highly critical of department management, the auditors said urgent action is needed to ensure that environmental laws are obeyed and the public is reassured that the government can reliably and safely run the weapons plants.

The report dated July 14 was made public Wednesday by a House panel as a senior Energy Department official disclosed that a special group of experts from outside the department had been dispatched to a weapons plant in Colorado.

Leo Duffy, a special assistant to Energy Secretary James D. Watkins, said in testimony prepared for a House Energy and Commerce subcommittee that the experts will attempt to verify the origin of a man-made radioactive element discovered at the Rocky Flats plant near Denver. The plant processes plutonium for weapons manufacturing.

Scientists of the Environmental Protection Agency have said it is possible the radioactive materials strontium and cesium were produced by an accidental nuclear reaction, even though Rocky Flats operations do not include the splitting of atoms.

Duffy said that while earlier Energy Department reviews of the radioactive material gave no evidence that a chain reaction had occurred, Watkins wants an independent study to "help alleviate public concern regarding safety at this facility."

PLO compromise sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House and key senators are working on a compromise that would restrict U.S. contacts with officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization directly linked to terrorist attacks on Americans.

But they were unable Wednesday to persuade hard-line critics of the U.S. dialogue with Yasser Arafat's organization to give up their attempt to impose even tighter restrictions.

"At this point, it's a wide-open ball game," a congressional source said.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a key sponsor of curbs, was insisting that President Bush be required to certify that the United States was not dealing with masterminds and perpetrators of terrorist acts. Several other senators lined up with him.

Bush appealed to the lawmakers not to tie his hands. Even the toughest critics of the U.S. talks with the PLO said they would try not to infringe on the president's right to conduct U.S. foreign policy.

The compromise promoted by the White House and accepted by several senators would require Bush to advise Congress he had concluded that the PLO officials talking to U.S. Ambassador Robert Pelletreau Jr. in Tunisia had not arranged or carried out acts of terrorism against Americans.

Pelletreau is the designated U.S. contact with the PLO.

Lucas faces more grilling

WASHINGTON (AP) — William Lucas could face more grilling on his nomination to be the nation's civil rights chief as the Senate Judiciary Committee seeks to resolve questions about his fitness for the job.

"There are a lot of charges against him. We need to get to the bottom of them," Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., said Wednesday after Lucas was questioned for more than three hours about his views, his qualifications and his character.

Lucas defended both his commitment to the drive against discrimination and his actions when customs inspectors found $8,800 worth of undeclared goods in his luggage.

Afterward, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who chaired the proceeding, said members reserved the right to recall him for more questioning.

Heflin told reporters Lucas should be questioned again about a number of issues, including the fact that the black Republican from Michigan made misstatements on a sworn application to be admitted to the New York bar in 1981.

Lucas did not disclose on the form that he had once failed the District of Columbia bar examination when asked if he had taken the test in other states.

Lucas testified that when he filled out the 1981 form he interpreted the question to pertain only to any previous applications to the New York bar. "There was no intent to mislead," he said.

Court rules G.I. Joe a doll, but boys know better

Associated Press

Boys across America may shake their heads in dismay, but the courts have spoken: G.I. Joe is a doll, not a toy soldier.

Hasbro Industries Inc. had sought to get Joe out of duty — import tariffs, that is — by battling the less-than-macho designation of doll. But a panel of three federal judges wasn't persuaded.

Not to worry, said company officials in Pawtucket, R.I.

"G.I. Joe is still one of the guys," said Donald Robbins, Hasbro vice president and general counsel. "Boys know who he is."

"Even though G.I. Joe has lost this battle, hopefully he will not lose his courage for combat," wrote Judge Paul R. Michel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, upholding the U.S. Customs Service in a July 12 ruling.

At issue in the case was not just G.I. Joe's macho image, but a sizable chunk of his booty from the toy wars. Since Hasbro began importing G.I. Joe from Hong Kong in 1982, the Customs Service has imposed a 12 percent tariff, amounting to millions of dollars.

Last year, Hasbro argued before the U.S. Court of International Trade in New York that G.I. Joe is just an updated version of the traditional toy soldier and should not be subject to the duties placed on imported dolls.

Although he wears military duds, brandishes a submachine gun and lugs an assault pack, both the trade court and the appeals court ruled that Joe fit the standard definition of "a representation of a human being used as a child's plaything" — in other words, a doll.

Ten-year-old Michael Ritchie of Allenwood, Texas, who has about 40 G.I. Joe figures, was skeptical.

"It's not really a doll," he said. "It'd be weird for me if I saw a girl playing with G.I. Joe, 'cause I never have. Girls usually play with a doll or something."

"The decision had an attempt at humor. But they really strictly applied the dictionary definition," M. Barry Levy, who argued the case for Hasbro, said from his New York office.

When introduced 25 years ago, G.I. Joe was a pioneer in the marketing of flexible plastic figurines to boys. Hasbro was always careful to refer to him either as a "mannequin" or "action figure," never a doll.

After a lull in sales in the late 1970s, Joe's popularity surged in the 1980s as baby-boomers began buying their children the same toys they had as kids. Since 1964, total sales of the G.I. Joe line have exceeded $1.2 billion, Hasbro said.

But like other old soldiers, Joe seems to be gradually fading away. From his original 11½-inch size in 1964, he shrank to 8½ inches in 1976 and then to 3¾ inches in 1982.

The older version of G.I. Joe holds up the smaller action figures now manufactured by Hasbro Industries Inc. The U.S. Court of Appeals has ruled that G.I. Joe is a doll and not a toy soldier.

Hydraulic failure linked to plane's crash

By SONJA GARZA
Hearst News Service

The pilot of the DC-10 that crash-landed at Sioux City's airport reported an engine failure and then "a complete hydraulic failure" just before the crash, federal officials said.

John Leyden, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Washington, said hydraulic failure would mean a loss of nearly every control on the wide-bodied, three-engine airliner.

The pilot first reported an "uncontained engine failure" in the engine at the rear of the plane just before the crash Wednesday afternoon, Leyden said. That meant an explosion occurred, possibly sending parts of the engine into the fuselage, which could have severed the plane's hydraulic lines, he said.

The United Air Lines pilot was in contact with the control tower at Sioux City, Iowa, for some time before the crash-landing, but the FAA has not yet put together a chronology of the crash, Leyden said.

"The pilot did have a lot of problems controlling the aircraft and did say he had complete (hydraulic) failure, but it may turn out to be an exaggeration," Leyden said.

The National Transportation and Safety Board is conducting an investigation to determine the cause of the crash.

Complete hydraulic failure basically means "you have an unflyable plane," said Bill Melvin of Dallas, head of the Air Line Pilots Association Air Worthiness and Performance Committee.

The DC-10's flight controls all use hydraulic power, said Dick Deeds of San Francisco, accident investigator for the pilots' association. He said a DC-10 usually has hydraulic brakes and air brakes as backup.

"It's pretty far out to have all three systems fail," Deeds said. "Obviously this guy had other types of problems."

A catastrophic failure would have to occur for complete hydraulic loss, such as a tail-mounted engine blowing up and severing all lines, Melvin said. Sometimes all hydraulic lines — including backup lines — are located in the same place, he added.

Paul Eschenfelder, the pilots' association's regional safety coordinator, said all airliners are required to have hydraulic backup systems and that it would only be "speculation" for him to suggest what happened during the DC-10 flight Wednesday.

Eschenfelder added that a severed hydraulic line or leak in a line could cause a breakdown in one system.

"To have a busted line or to lose hydraulic fluid is obviously not unthinkable," Eschenfelder said. "That's why there's backup."

A plane's hydraulic system keeps it stabilized, opens and extends the flaps and slats to increase wing lift and governs controls on the airplane's wings and tail. Hydraulic flight controls include the ailerons, flaps, slats and spoilers located on the wings, and the rudders and elevators on the tail.

One family reunited after passenger saves daughter

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — When the pilot of a United Airlines DC-10 told passengers to expect a "very rough" landing at Sioux City's airport, Lori Michaelson held her daughter, Sabrina, tight.

"I was just mostly worried about being able to hang on to the 1-year-old," she said.

But Wednesday's crash separated mother from daughter.

Mrs. Michaelson, a Denver resident, said about an hour from Flight 232's scheduled arrival in Chicago, the pilot said over the intercom that the tail of the airplane had been damaged and that an emergency landing was necessary.

"He said we'd have to land and that it would be a rough impact. He advised us to go into a crash position," she said.

Sabrina was on her lap, and she held her tightly. Nearby was her husband, Mark, and their two sons, Doug, 6, and Andy, 4.

"We're expecting a rough landing. In fact, a very rough landing," the pilot said, according to Michaelson.

Twenty minutes later, the plane crashed.

Mrs. Michaelson said the airplane flipped when it hit, and the child slid to the floor.

Lori Michaelson and son, Andy

As they climbed outside, Michaelson asked her, "Where's the baby?"

Desperate, he went back into the wreckage but encountered thick smoke and was forced to leave.

Then they saw the child, apparently unharmed, in a woman's arms.

Asked how she had come to have the child, the woman said some man had handed her over.

Passengers tell of escaping broken fuselage

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — In the moments after the crash of United Airlines Flight 232, passengers were upside down, belted in their seats. Some freed others. Some could rescue only themselves.

Belliveau

Passengers spoke of the pilot's warnings before Wednesday's deadly crash, but they mostly remembered the impact and escaping the fractured fuselage.

More than half of the 293 people on board the flight survived the crash, some walking away with only bruises. The three-member cockpit crew survived, too.

The pilot warned passengers about 20 minutes before the crash that "it would likely be a rough landing," several survivors recalled.

Among the passengers was another pilot, who put a pillow over his head as the plane crashed and cartwheeled three times just off an unused runway at Sioux Gateway Airport.

"We rolled upside down, and inside out and every which way. The plane broke into three pieces, and bodies (were) all over the place, hanging upside down," said Charlie Martz, of Castle Rock, Colo.

"I unfastened my belt and dropped a little ways. ... Finally I saw what I thought was an open window, but there were flames. I said, 'To hell with it, I'm going for it' and I went through the flames. I can't believe it, there were people with feet missing and arms missing. ..."

In Chicago, 33 tired and somber survivors completed their journey early this morning on a chartered United Airlines flight.

Several wore neck braces, one had a bandaged eye and at least two people still wore dirt- or blood-stained clothing. Police escorted them through O'Hare Airport, keeping reporters away.

Debbie Belliveau, 40, of Michigan City, Ind., spoke to reporters, though, saying the fire that erupted after the crash "scared us all. Because the fire was really obvious. I mean there was smoke everywhere."

Mrs. Belliveau said the professionalism of the flight attendants and the pilot's calm voice convinced her that the plane would be brought in safely.

"We thought we were going to make it and when he said 'brace, brace, brace' for the second time we really thought we were going to make it."

In Sioux City, Danny Surge of Chicago said, when it was apparent the plane was in trouble, passenger Ron Rhode of Marysville, Ohio, went over to sit with 8-year-old Ben Radtke of Prairie View, Ill., who was traveling alone.

The plane "hit and bounced, then flipped and spun around so we ended up upside down. I let go and asked Dan for the kid" and shoved him out, Rhode said.

Ben was shaking but thankful to be alive.

"I thought I was going to die," he said, clutching a United Airlines button and a pair of plastic pilot's wings.

As the plane filled with smoke shortly after the crash, Cliff Marshall of Columbus, Ohio, saw a way out.

Passengers' kin gather at airports

Associated Press

In airports in Chicago and Denver, people grieved over the United DC-10 crash. In a Philadelphia airport, some who grieved before came to console.

Flight 232, headed to Philadelphia from Denver via Chicago crashed with 293 aboard Wednesday while attempting an emergency landing in Sioux City, Iowa. More than half survived.

Moments after hearing about the crash, four people who lost relatives in one of the world's worst airline disasters rushed to Philadelphia International Airport to offer consolation.

Stan Maslowski and his wife, Norma, both of Haddonfield, N.J., lost their 30-year-old daughter, Diane, when a terrorist's bomb blew up Pan Am Flight 103 on Dec. 21, killing 259 aboard and 11 people in Lockerbie, Scotland, where the wreckage fell. Two others joined the couple at the Philadelphia airport.

"The purpose of our visit is to comfort the families, to support those people who wonder if their family members are alive," Maslowski said.

Wednesday, though, their message reached no relatives of those aboard the United flight. Maslowski said United officials told him no one waiting for passengers had reported to the airport.

"It makes it all dredged up again," said Norma Maslowski of their mission. "It's horrible."

Maslowski said the relatives of the Pan Am victims have formed a network of more than 400 people who are prepared to rush to airports to console anyone waiting for a plane that had crashed.

In Denver, United employees escorted 25 to 30 visibly shaken relatives past ranks of reporters and television cameras. The media were not allowed into the VIP area.

United officials at Chicago's O'Hare Airport opened a lounge for families of those aboard the flight.

One woman entered crying, her fingertips at her mouth. Two men leaving refused to speak with a reporter, one swearing as he brushed by.

Outside the room, 20 police officers and O'Hare security guards stood by the entrance.

Some at the Denver and Chicago airports had news to celebrate.

Rabbi Avrohom Brownstein and his wife burst out of the VIP room in Denver where relatives of passengers on the plane had gathered. They had just heard their 9-year-old son, Yisroel, had survived with a fractured arm and minor burns.

Race for life

McDonnell's DC-10 has history of problems

By DENNIS McCARTHY
Hearst News Service

The McDonnell Douglas Corp.'s DC-10 has been involved in a series of mishaps — including the nation's worst air disaster — since it first roared into the sky nearly 20 years ago.

The corporation suspended production of the wide-body, tri-engine jet in 1983, after orders for the plane collapsed following the 1979 recession and a disastrous crash that same year.

On May 25, 1979, the nation's worst air calamity occurred when American Airlines Flight 191 slammed into a field and exploded on takeoff from Chicago's O'Hare Airport. All 258 passengers and 13 crew members on board were killed, as well as two people on the ground.

The National Transportation Safety Board blamed the airline for the crash, citing "maintenance-induced damage" — a 10-inch crack in the engine mount — that caused the plane's left engine to rip loose.

The board also criticized McDonnell Douglas' design as vulnerable to maintenance damage. Adverse passenger reaction to the crash apparently discouraged airlines from placing orders.

The United Airlines crash in Sioux City, Iowa, Wednesday was the first major domestic accident involving a DC-10 since that disaster, but that's not the first mishap involving United and the aging jumbo jet.

In July 1988, a United DC-10 en route to Seattle lost cabin pressure and was forced to return to Denver's Stapleton International Airport. No injuries were reported.

And in September of that same year, another United DC-10 collapsed while landing at the Denver airport. Only one person was injured after the jet skidded between two rain-slickened runways.

In May 1988, the pilot of an American Airlines DC-10 had to abort his takeoff at the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport after a warning light indicated a problem with the wing slats.

The plane's landing gear collapsed when the jet careened off the runway and onto a rain-softened grassy area, skidding 1,000 feet on its nose. Of the 251 people aboard, only the captain, co-pilot, flight engineer and three passengers suffered minor injuries.

One of the worst international accidents involving a DC-10 occurred in 1974, when a Turkish Airlines plane crashed outside Paris after its rear-cargo door fell off in-flight and the change in air pressure caused the floor to buckle and sever hydraulic tubes.

Engineers blamed the design of the plane's hydraulic lines for that mishap.

Federal Aviation Administration officials said the pilot in Wednesday's crash reported a complete failure of its hydraulic control systems.

Early in 1987, McDonnell Douglas replaced the 18-year-old plane, which is owned by 48 operators worldwide, with a derivative of the DC-10 design — the MD-11. It can carry 300 to 400 people. The DC-10 has a passenger capacity of 250 to 380.

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Here are general specifications of the DC-10, Series 10, a workhorse of U.S. and foreign commercial airlines, which was the first wide-bodied jetliner produced by the McDonnell Douglas Corp. The three-engine aircraft is no longer in production.

First produced, 1970.
Passenger capacity, 250-380.
Worldwide commercial fleet, 369.
Military fleet, 60 converted to KC-10 refueling tankers for U.S. Air Force.
Miles on fleet, 7 million.
DC-10 operators worldwide, 48.
Engines, three, General Electric.
Wingspan, 155 feet, 4 in.
Fuselage length, 170 feet.
Cruising speed, 575 mph.
Maximum range, 6,350 miles.

United Airlines soon to buy replacements for DC-10s

New York Times News Service

United Airlines is soon expected to announce a multibillion-dollar jet order that will include replacements for the kind of wide-body jet that crashed yesterday in Iowa.

The 15-year-old McDonnell Douglas DC-10 series 10 model is one of 48 that are part of United's 412-jet fleet. The planes, with a 3,400-mile range and seating for 254 to 287 people, were acquired by United between 1971 and 1982.

The series 10 model is a workhorse on United's longer and busier U.S. routes, such as San Francisco to Chicago.

The DC-10-10 that crashed yesterday was acquired by United in April 1974, outfitted with General Electric Co. CF6-6D turbofan engines. It was the 118th of 446 DC-10s built by McDonnell Douglas at its commercial jet plant in Long Beach before production ceased in 1983.

Besides the DC-10-10s, United also operates eight DC-10-30s, a newer jet with a 6,500-mile range and capable of seating 285 passengers. Most of United's series 30s operate in the Pacific.

With a total of 56 DC-10s, United is one of the world's largest operators of the three-engine jet. The other 48 airlines that operate the DC-10 include American, Continental and Japan Airlines.

By fall, United is expected to announce a replacement for its older DC-10s, most likely the McDonnell Douglas MD-11.

The $110-million MD-11 has a two-pilot instead of a three-pilot cockpit and burns less fuel than a DC-10. It also seats 50 more passengers and can fly 1,500 miles farther.

Besides the MD-11, United also could order the Airbus A-340 or Boeing 767X as a DC-10 replacement. But the Chicago-based airline is expected to chose the MD-11, because it is likely to be built first.

Despite production delays, McDonnell Douglas is expected to build its first MD-11 by 1991.

While United's upcoming order will prepare it for the 1990s, the airline faces a shortage of wide-body jets in the meantime, according to industry analysts.

Besides its 56 DC-10s, United has 30 Boeing 747s operating in the Pacific. But one of the 747s is parked in Hawaii, where it is under repair after the jet broke open while in flight from Honolulu in February, killing nine people.

The airline needs more wide-body jets for its ambitious transpacific expansion plans and the upcoming wide-body order also is expected to include 747s.

Major U.S. plane crashes enumerated

Associated Press

Here is a list of major U.S. plane crashes in the past decade:

Aug. 31, 1988, Delta Airlines Boeing 727 crashes and burns on takeoff at Dallas Fort-Worth Airport. Thirteen people died and 95 survived.

Dec. 7, 1987, Pacific Southwest BAe 146 jet crashed near Paso Robles, 175 miles northwest of Los Angeles, 43 killed. Gunfire was heard on the "black box" cockpit recorder and authorities believe a vengeful ex-employee caused the crash.

Nov. 15, 1987, Continental Airlines DC-9, crashed on takeoff at Stapleton International Airport, Denver, 28 killed.

Aug. 16, 1987, Northwest Airlines MD-80, crashed on takeoff at Detroit Metropolitan Airport, 156 killed.

Aug. 31, 1986, Aeromexico DC-9, collided with small plane over Los Angeles suburb of Cerritos, 82 killed.

June 18, 1986, De Havilland Twin Otter plane and Bell 206 helicopter, both carrying sightseers, collide over Grand Canyon, 25 killed.

Sept. 6, 1985, Midwest Express Airlines DC-9 crashed after takeoff from Milwaukee's Mitchell Field, 31 killed.

Aug. 2, 1985, Delta Air Lines Lockheed L-1011 crashed at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, 137 killed.

Jan. 21, 1985, chartered Galaxy prop-jet on gambling junket crashed after takeoff in Reno, Nev., 68 killed.

July 9, 1982, Pan AM Boeing 727 crashed after takeoff in Kenner, La., 153 killed.

Jan. 13, 1982, Air Florida Boeing 737 crashed after takeoff in Washington, D.C., 78 killed.

Twenty years later let's reach for stars

Twenty years ago, in the pitch-black darkness of the unknown, rendered darker still by the fact that it was occurring at 10:56 p.m. EDT, Neil Armstrong eased down the final inches of a ladder.

Half a billion people on Earth sat motionless before their televisions, watching Armstrong's movements and listening to the steely radio transmission of his seemingly labored breathing.

As his cumbersome foot touched the surface, Armstrong uttered those lasting words: "That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind." After years of tireless effort, man had reached the lunar surface, and the very heavens lay before him.

Of course since that time, man's "conquest" of space has continued onward, shifting to meet the demands of the times, circumstances, and political realities. Other nations have developed their space programs. The Americans, having succeeded in numerous blastoffs, moved on to the shuttle program and became accustomed to success in an undertaking in which such an attitude can be fatal. The explosion of the Challenger and the deaths of her seven astronauts ended America's attitude that space exploration was either simple or safe.

The space program suffered due to the explosion, and is still suffering. But it must be repeated countless times, space exploration is a dangerous business. That doesn't mean that the rewards are not worth the expense in terms of either money or the lives of those who take the risks.

In the two decades since Armstrong stepped onto the lunar surface, America has faced — and met — other challenges. But no memory is quite as riveting as that of sitting in front of the television and watching a countryman more than 221,000 miles away make the first human footprint on the Moon. What a thrill!

There are many more to come if the nation can only cast off the thoughts of failure still emanating from the terrible Challenger disaster and again turn its eyes to the stars.

Another View:

Undoing the damage

It has to be considered progress when leaders of the world's seven largest industrial democracies acknowledge that the global environment is increasingly under stress. Wrapping up their Paris summit Sunday, President Bush and his counterparts in Canada, France, Britain, Japan, Italy and West Germany, warned of "an urgent need to safeguard the environment for future generations."

In their 22-page final communique, they devoted eight pages to environmental issues, more than any other topic. They called for "decisive action" to protect Earth's ecological balance.

Unfortunately, they weren't willing to spell out what they meant by "decisive action." They preferred speaking in generalities.

The summiteers called for more scientific research on environmental issues and improved technology to reduce pollution. They called for development of substitutes for chlorofluorocarbons and joint efforts to reduce carbon-dioxide emissions. They urged promotion of energy efficiency and tougher safety standards for nuclear-power plants.

Those are all worthy aims. But where were the concrete commitments? Where was the commitment, for example, to help developing nations wean themselves from cheap fossil fuels, the chief contributors to the greenhouse effect? Where was the commitment to protect both threatened rain forests and the fragile economic health of developing nations that rely on those forests?

Only Japan, saddled with a reputation as the environmental black sheep among industrial nations, was willing to commit itself to specific environment-related aid to developing countries. Japanese Prime Minister Sousuke Uno announced on the eve of the summit that his country would make available $2.25 billion to help developing countries address pressing environmental problems.

Now, if Japan can do something about the fact that it is the world's largest importer of wood from the rain forests, that financial commitment will mean even more.

West Germany called for a major new conference on the greenhouse effect and the creation of a powerful new international organization to regulate pollution. The other nations weren't ready to go that far. Someday, in the not-too-distant future, they may have to.

For now, we can find a measure of consolation in two developments: World leaders at last have acknowledged that we are doing harm to the fabric of the earth; they say they are willing to cooperate on efforts to undo the harm.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, July 20, the 201st day of 1989. There are 164 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Twenty years ago, on July 20, 1969, Apollo 11 astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin became the first men to walk on the moon, after their lunar module separated from the command module and landed on the lunar surface. In a scene watched on television by an estimated half-billion people, Armstrong stepped onto the moon at 10:56 p.m. EDT and proclaimed, "That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind."

On this date:

In 1810, Colombia declared its independence from Spain.

In 1861, the Congress of the Confederate States began holding sessions in Richmond, Va.

In 1871, British Columbia became a Canadian province.

In 1881, Sioux Indian leader Sitting Bull, a fugitive since the Battle of the Little Big Horn, surrendered to federal troops.

In 1917, the draft lottery in World War I went into operation.

In 1942, the first detachment of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps — later known as WACs — began basic training at Fort Des Moines, Iowa.

In 1944, an attempt by a group of German officials to assassinate Adolf Hitler failed.

In 1944, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated for an unprecedented fourth term of office at the Democratic convention in Chicago.

In 1951, Jordan's King Abdullah Ibn Hussein was assassinated in Jerusalem.

In 1960, a pair of Polaris missiles were fired from the submerged USS George Washington off Cape Canaveral, Fla., at a target more than 1,100 miles away.

In 1976, America's Viking 1 robot spacecraft made the first successful landing on Mars.

In 1977, a flash flood hit Johnstown, Pa., killing 80 people and causing $350 million worth of damage.

In 1982, bombs planted by the Irish Republican Army exploded in two London parks, killing eight British soldiers, along with seven horses belonging to the Queen's Household Cavalry.

In 1983, the U.S. House of Representatives censured two of its members, Illinois Republican Daniel Crane and Massachusetts Democrat Gerry Studds, both of whom had admitted having sexual relations with teen-age congressional pages.

Ten years ago: On the 10th anniversary of man's first lunar landing, the crew members of Apollo 11 were reunited in Washington, D.C., for an appearance outside the Air and Space Museum and a brief ceremony in the White House Rose Garden.

Former lawmakers don't vacate D.C.

WASHINGTON — Former Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., lost his re-election bid last year, but he didn't slink back to Montana and reopen his veterinary business. The silver-haired senator rented a downtown Washington, D.C., suite and fired up a consulting firm.

Jack Anderson

Now "Doc" Melcher is making more money in defeat than he did in victory. He is working the same issues in the House that he championed on the Senate floor — elderly care and animal rights — but now Melcher's paycheck comes from special interest groups instead of the taxpayers.

Melcher is one of at least five members of Congress who left office last fall but stuck around Washington to cash in on their connections. With the current ethics mood on Capitol Hill, this may be the last year that the revolving door from lawmaker to lobbyist spins so fast.

As it now stands, former senators are barred from lobbying the Senate for a year after they leave office, but they can be turned loose on the House immediately. There are no restrictions on representatives.

Late last year, President Reagan vetoed an ethics bill that would have stopped all former members of Congress from lobbying their colleagues in the first year after they leave office. Similar bills are ripe for passage in this session of Congress, and they already have the blessings of President Bush.

But until any of those bills become law, congressional alumni will be lured by the game of schmoozing for dollars.

Fresh out of office, even a loser has the perfect resume for a career as a Capitol Hill lobbyist. And the fresher he or she is, the higher the salary. The big money in the lobbying game is made while everyone still remembers your name.

Our associates Jim Lynch and Scott Sleek checked the traffic at the revolving door and found plenty of familiar faces.

Old Stone Federal Savings Bank of Rhode Island is paying former Rep. Fernand St Germain up to $500 an hour to lean on his former colleagues from the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee.

Rep. Gene Taylor, R-Mo., retired last year, but he didn't head back to Missouri to run his old car lot. He created Gene Taylor Associates. In Washington, "associates" on the shingle means "Lobbyists 'R' Us."

One of Taylor's first clients was the National Association of Postmasters of the United States. They were no doubt impressed with his stint on the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

Former Rep. Hal Daub, D-Neb., didn't start his own business. Instead he joined Touche Ross and Co. Among the accounting firm's many issues is Medicare — Daub's bailiwick on the House Ways and Means subcommittee on health.

Former representative Don Bonker of Washington recovered from losing his bid for the Senate last year by joining the Arnold and Porter Consulting Group where he became the latest heavyweight in the law-/lobbying firm.

The lawmakers-turned-lobbyists like to call themselves "consultants." They say they simply advise people on how to approach Washington.

What happens if Congress rips that lucrative career out from under their feet? Some opponents of the idea in Congress say fewer people will run for office. Daub thinks Congress would be better off letting the alumni lobby, but forcing them to reveal more about their businesses.

The disclosure requirements for lobbyists currently are so vague that it is impossible to determine how much they make. But if Melcher's first-year ledger is any indicator, the money looks good to political junkies who don't want to go home. Melcher expects to make about $14,800 a month from six clients. You don't make that kind of money giving rabies shots back in Montana.

JUNKING JEEPS — Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., is about to demand some answers from the Pentagon about reports he hears that the military crushes hundreds of operable jeeps every year. The jeeps used to be sold at public auctions, but the government is getting nervous about potential lawsuits from selling faulty goods. Sources tell us the Pentagon also uses older Army trucks as targets for tanks in war games.

MINI-EDITORIAL — President Bush's much-needed pay raise proposal for senior government officials includes a proviso that may sound foreign to bureaucrats — a performance review every three years for employees to prove they really deserve a raise. Now, that's a novel concept. The protectors of the status quo were quick to come up with plenty of reasons why it's a bad idea. But only people with cobwebs between their ears will object to the idea of making public servants earn their raises.

Philosopher wasn't out of step with century

WASHINGTON — Sidney Hook, the political philosopher whose exemplary life ended last week in its 87th year, was a combative man who died knowing that his side had won. It is wonderful to lead a life such that your autobiography is a survey of the intellectual vitality of your time.

George F. Will

Such is Hook's "Out of Step: An Unquiet Life in the Twentieth Century." Hook liked to say that passions make for keen observations but defective conclusions. His is the story of a reasonable man's passions and a passionate man's reasonableness.

Born in Brooklyn and educated at City College when New York was intellectually vibrant, he was young when the Russian Revolution was, and like many intellectuals of his generation he read in that Revolution an ethical imperative. However, he was too good a philosopher not to soon reject Marxism, and too honest a man not to be energized against the mendacity required of those who support a false philosophy for political purposes. From the mid-1930s on, his life had the golden thread of anti-totalitarianism.

In the 1930s he was a leader, with John Dewey, in exposing Stalin's show trials that preceded the assassination of Leon Trotsky. One of Hook's students, who occasionally visited Trotsky in Mexico, was one day in New York given a ticket to Paris by another leftist who claimed to be unable to use the ticket. In Paris, there was a "chance" meeting with a dashing "Belgian" who charmed her. Actually, he was a Spaniard, Romon Mercador, who used Hook's student to insinuate himself into Trotsky's household, then murdered him.

In the 1940s, with Raymond Aron and others, Hook combated the communist and fellow-travelers' hegemony in cultural institutions. In the 1950s, he was fiercely anti-communist and anti-McCarthyite. He paid a price in personal relations for being prematurely correct about so many things. It would have been nice, but uncharacteristic, for his critics to denounce Stalin before Khrushchev did.

Once in the 1960s — like the 1930s, a low, dishonest decade — Hook was in an audience for a lecture by Herbert Marcuse, a bad philosopher and darling of the New Left. It was Marcuse's usual harangue against the "repressive tolerance" of American culture and the "embourgeoisement" of American workers.

Hook asked: Did not the Voting Rights Act and other improvements in the civic standing of blacks indicate America's capacity for improvement? Marcuse answered that such improvements were useless because blacks were choosing the tawdry middle-class values of American civilization. Hook asked: "Which would you prefer, a situation in which the blacks had no freedom to vote or one which they had the freedom to vote but chose wrongly?" Marcuse replied: "Since I have gone so far out on the limb, I may as well go all the way. I would prefer that they did not have the freedom to vote if they are going to make the wrong use of their freedom."

Using logic to saw off such limbs was Hook's life work. In the 1970s, he was a critic of the detente that preceded the surge of Soviet expansionism. In the 1980s, he was a critic of reverse discrimination, saying his opposition "goes back to the days and words of Hubert Humphrey." Hook, like Humphrey, was a liberal whom liberalism left by turning left.

Engagement in political controversies has often been fatal to the quality of intellectuals' work and to intellectual integrity. Hook showed that it need not be so. Most of the participants in his controversies are gone and it is hard to recollect the intensity of the arguments. If many of the controversies seem far removed from the way we live, thank Hook and others like him. Their efforts at intellectual hygiene helped make many mendacities into mere museum pieces of intellectual history, rather than the orthodoxies of regimes.

Marx's grave in London's Highgate Cemetery bears Marx's words: "The philosophers have only interpreted the world, in various ways; the point, however, is to change it." Marx, having misinterpreted reality, changed the world for the worse. Hook helped better it by understanding that the great argument is not between capitalism and socialism (an avalanche of evidence settled that) or between religion and secularism (Hook was a secularist), but between friends and foes of freedom.

"The older I become," he wrote at 85, "the more impressed I am with the role of luck or chance in life." The biggest intrusion of chance is the earliest. It decides when and where one is born. America and Hook were mutually lucky 86 years ago in Brooklyn. At the end, the author of "Out of Step" found himself in step with his century — or it with him. That satisfaction, not accorded many, was hard-earned by Sidney Hook.

ART BUCHWALD

Who cares where the legal fees come from?

The Supreme Court ruled that drug dealers, racketeers and others of that moral persuasion cannot use their ill-gotten gains to pay their lawyers when they get caught. The Court declared that money made from drug trafficking does not belong to the alleged criminal.

Art Buchwald

This means that many of our wealthy criminal lawyers are going to get cheated out of large fees, and clients may no longer be defended in the manner to which they have become accustomed.

"Is it right or wrong?" I asked Rich, the lawyer, told me that the court's decision was wrong — dead wrong. "Every person in this country deserves the best defense money can buy, no matter where his legal fee comes from."

"What if it isn't his money — suppose it's cash made in the underworld? Why should the person be allowed to defend himself with the funds he earned committing a drug crime?"

"Who can be sure that it's drug money? Maybe it comes from an uncle who worked in HUD. The government is trying to destroy the defense of people they don't like, and also drive lawyers away from their waterfront homes in Miami Beach."

"Are you upset because the Supreme Court is taking liberties with the Constitution, or are you more bothered because there is nothing left in the Brink's truck for you?"

"That is the most insulting question anyone has ever asked. I want you to know that I would defend Noriega even if he couldn't pay me."

"You're kidding," I said.

"Okay, I'm kidding. What I don't like about all of this is that in the past, the big wheels in crime and dope always came to us first. Now they're going to some dumb ambulance lawyer instead. If the client approaches us, the government will assume that our client still has some ill-gotten gains hidden away."

"Don't despair. The top crime figures are still going to have to hire you even if it means borrowing on their mother's Medicare insurance policies."

Rich was optimistic; "I hope you're right. I hate to think of someone going to jail just because he couldn't afford me."

"Is it easier to defend a man who can pay you than one who can't?" I asked.

"Yes, but I don't know why," he replied. "When I'm getting paid I feel good all over. If there's no fee, I feel as if I've got Lyme disease."

"Will you still do a bang-up job if a person is indigent?"

"I don't know. I've never taken on anybody like that. Here's what I believe. When it comes to being defended, people should not have to explain the source of their money. Suppose that half of a defendant's income is derived from dope, and the other half from winning at bingo. I never question which part of his estate he's paying me from. I've had guys who paid me with suitcases of cash —and I've always assumed that it was from the sale of their Pete Rose baseball cards."

"If you can't get paid now by the bad people who are in trouble, how will you make your living?"

"I'm going to Texas and defend indicted savings and loan officers. Nobody would dare ask them where they got their money from."

Delta says pilot error caused Flight 1141 crash

DALLAS (AP) — Survivors of Delta Flight 1141 say they want the airline monetarily punished now that it has accepted responsibility for the 1988 crash at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport that killed 14 people.

"I'm not looking for compensatory damages alone," said Pendleton Waugh, a Dallas attorney who was on the ill-fated flight. "I'm looking for the other type of damages as well. Let's call them exemplary damages."

Delta Air Lines said Wednesday that flight crew error led to the crash Aug. 31, 1988, and that the flight crew members "are no longer flying with Delta."

Delta spokesman Bill Berry declined to comment on the release of the three-man crew, other than to say it was connected to the finding that they were at fault.

"The flight crew failed to set the aircraft's flaps and slats in the proper takeoff configuration as required by established Delta practices and procedures," the airline said in a statement.

"Accordingly, Delta has accepted responsibility for the accident on that basis," the airline said.

Spokesman Jim Lundy said Delta conducted its own investigation and expects the National Transportation Safety Board to release its conclusions in late summer or early fall.

Carrying 108 people, the plane rolled from side to side and got no more than 30 feet off the runway before crashing in a grassy field near the runway.

Federal investigators found a flap indicator handle in the wrong position, raising questions about wing-flap settings.

Some of the plane's wing flaps were found in the correct position, but others were not. The NTSB investigation also focused on a warning system that should have alerted the pilot if flaps were set improperly.

Flight 1141 passenger Michelle Christensen of Dallas said she has hired an attorney but has not filed suit.

She said she suffered a back injury in the crash and must visit a chiropractor three times a week. She also said she sees a therapist to deal with the aftermath of the tragedy.

"I will pursue some kind of legal action. Obviously with my medical problems I'm going to have to be taken care of," Ms. Christensen said.

Ms. Christensen, a real estate marketing director, said the crash is constantly on her mind especially Wednesday when a DC-10 crashed in Iowa, killing more than 100 people. "It caused me to relive what I went through," she said.

"What has been most difficult is I have to fly for my job," she said. "The takeoff is what's so traumatic. Because as I'm lifting up, I know what it's like when things go wrong. I hear every little sound there is."

Alicia Hayes, Waugh's law partner and a passenger on the flight, said she also is seeking punitive damages.

"We both know that the only way to change your mode of operation is to be hit monetarily, so to speak," she said.

Hers is one of about 12 suits combined in 298th State District Court in Dallas. Waugh filed suit in Greenville, where flight captain Larry Davis lives.

Windle Turley, a Dallas lawyer representing at least eight passengers, said Delta's announcement will allow litigants not pursuing punitive damages to proceed to a damage trial.

Turley said Delta probably considered the length of the trial on the cause of the crash of Delta Flight 191, which has continued for more than a year. A decision on the August 1985 crash that killed 138 people is expected in upcoming weeks.

"It's been very devastating and demoralizing and I'm sure that's had an effect on it," he said.

Dallas attorney John Howie, who has filed suits for six passengers and represents 10 others, said the next step for his clients depends on whether Delta admits to "gross negligence."

After taking depositions from the three crew members the past three months, Howie said, he is surprised Delta acknowledged crew error.

"They (the crew members) have been vigorously denying it," he said. "We've asked them point blank if it was pilot error and they say 'No.'"

Davis, the pilot, and Steven Judd, the flight engineer, had no comment Wednesday on Delta's announcement, said women answering telephones at their Dallas-area homes. Co-pilot Carey Wilson Kirkland Jr. was not listed in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Capt. Jim Gray, spokesman for the Air Line Pilots Association, said the crew members were fired Tuesday after being called to the Delta chief pilot's office in Dallas.

ALPA officials believe the flight crew set the jet's flaps correctly, Gray said, and added that Delta's announcement was a public relations effort.

Lundy said the Delta investigation doublechecked all factors that could have contributed to the crash and eliminated all except the improperly set flaps and slats.

He said he is unsure of the legal implications of Delta's announcement.

Several insurance claims have been filed as a result of the flight, which was bound for Salt Lake City and originated in Jackson, Miss.

In NTSB hearings in November, crew members admitted certain technical violations of Delta regulations occurred before takeoff, but said they made all necessary preflight preparations.

Among those violations, crew members said, were not indicating completion of checklists and allowing a flight attendant into the cockpit area after the plane left the gate.

Delta instituted a new set of checklists and procedures after the crash, including having the crew check the position of the flaps twice.

BEAUMONT — It could be said that Beaumont Mayor Maury Meyers is the kind of man who would give away the shirt off his back. Except it was his pants he recently turned over to a stranger at a suburban Washington, D.C., airport.

The stranger, who had on casual clothes at the start of his vacation, had a discount airline ticket that specified in fine print that he must be in business dress to board the plane. He was barred from boarding, and Meyers offered him a spare pair of dress slacks from his carry on suitcase.

Sam Bland, a senior account executive for a computer accessory firm, and his wife Renee were enroute to a lacrosse tournament in Vail, Colo., on June 28 and hadn't packed any dress clothes.

The Blands were flying on a "buddy pass," a discount ticket given to them by a friend who worked at Continental Airlines. Those on the pass system are boarded last and must be in business attire, Bland said.

When he discovered the problem, he hastily bought a tie at a gift shop at Dulles Airport, but the ticket agent then insisted he must have on slacks to board the plane to Houston.

As Bland pleaded with the ticket agent, Meyers walked up and said, "I don't mean to butt in, but I am hearing you say you can't get on the plane without wearing slacks."

When Bland nodded, the mayor offered him a pair of gray dress trousers from his carry-on suitcase. Bland frantically changed into the pants, which were several sizes too large and required him to keep them bunched up around the waist to keep them from falling down.

Bland, his wife and benefactor boarded the plane at the last minute amid applause from the other passengers. "I've heard of someone giving you the shirt off their backs, but never their pants," one passenger said.

Bland said Tuesday he mailed back the pants with a gift, and his thanks.

Space center marks moon anniversary

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Clutching the hand of a child or pushing a stroller, hauling cameras and the latest in camcorders, visitors have been swarming into NASA's Johnson Space Center to observe the 20th anniversary of the first Apollo moon landing.

A typical summer day draws about 3,000 visitors to the space center to gaze at the mammoth Saturn V moon rocket that graces the lawn near the entrance, the Apollo 17 command module and the other early symbols of the space program.

But the numbers swelled to more than 5,800 Saturday, the first day of a nine-day national celebration that marks the successful Apollo 11 mission that send Neil Armstrong, Buzz Aldrin and Mike Collins to the moon.

The number of visitors, many of them Houston-area residents who have put off their first visit to the space center, topped 5,000 Sunday as well and is expected to go higher this weekend.

Television retrospectives on the Apollo 11 flight prompted students Shane Beilue and Leigh Ann Browder to make their first visit to the Johnson exhibits Tuesday.

"I think it's kind of awesome. It's hard to imagine they went that far and came back," said Beilue, standing beside the life-size lunar lander displayed in the Building 2 visitors center.

Just 4 years old in the summer of 1969, he vaguely recalls crowding around the family television to watch as Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin took man's first human steps on the moon. Browder, then only 1, remembers nothing about the historic event.

The 20th anniversary of Armstrong and Aldrin's landing and the moon walk that followed is today. But the extended activities this week mark the effort that went into the entire mission, from launch to splashdown.

The attention focused on the mission has given the space agency an unusual opportunity to reacquaint much of the middle-age and older members of the population with the accomplishments of Apollo and to excite for the first time many of those under 20 with the glories of space travel.

The center's agenda includes talks by scientists, NASA controllers and Apollo-era astronauts.

Highway agency approves new license plates

AUSTIN (AP) — New Texas license plates that include the state flag and its motto, "The Friendship State," have been approved by the state highway commission.

"Our state name comes from the Indian word 'tejas,' which means 'friendship,'" said Raymond Stotzer, engineer-director of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

"Including it on our license plates spreads the word about our people's legendary hospitality and warmth," Stotzer said.

The white plates, with shaded blue borders at the top and bottom, will display the state flag, name and motto. Combinations of letters and numbers will be in blue, rather than black, and will be separated by a red silhouette of the state.

Estimates are most counties will start to issue the new plates by April 1, 1990, after the old-plate supply is used up. The new design will be only for passenger cars.

Old plates will be replaced under current guidelines, which call for new ones every eight years unless they are lost, stolen or damaged.

In other action Wednesday, the highway commission approved $15.4 million in funding for the 1990 Highway Safety Plan. That includes $11.2 million in federal money.

Scientists replacing damaged human bones with sea coral

New York Times News Service

South Pacific sea coral is becoming increasingly popular as a substitute for damaged human bones.

After seven years of testing in nearly 200 patients, a California company that buys and processes rock coral for medical use is expected to receive permission from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration this year to use calcium phosphate from coral to rebuild bones in the leg and arm.

Many of the 200,000 people a year who undergo surgery to replace parts of bones now provide the replacement material themselves, usually from the hip bone. But about half of them — especially victims of automobile accidents or other trauma — don't have enough spare bone in their own bodies to rebuild what is damaged.

In recent years, doctors have used bone from cadavers, but donated bone sometimes shrinks or pulls away from native bone; undergoes rejection, necessitating another round of surgery; or carries infections.

Scientists long have sought bone-like materials, concentrating much of their effort on ceramics such as tricalcium phosphate, which bridges small gaps left by the removal of cysts and tumors, and hydroxyapatite, which is used for repairing bones in the face and jaw.

Finding a material strong and durable enough to bind bones in the arm and leg, which require greater strength, has been difficult.

Dr. Robert W. Bucholz, professor of orthopedics at the University of Texas Health Sciences Center in Dallas, said a synthetic form of hydroxyapatite works well in small sections, but to duplicate the porous structure and mineral makeup of bone for larger rebuilding jobs, doctors are using coral-derived hydroxyapatite.

Bucholz said the coral works better than most ceramics because it acts as a scaffold for growing flesh and bone around the injured area.

"It's a fluke of nature that the coral's skeleton and porous structure mimics bone so well," he said. "No other ceramic material provides us that."

Bucholz has used coral to rebuild bones in 60 patients. None have had complications, with several having gone six years or more after surgery without any problems.

"There has been no adverse reaction whatsoever," he said.

Experiments show that coral-derived hydroxyapatite works best in repairing fractures at the end of bones. When used in combination with human bone grafts and metal plates and screws, it also can be used to repair the middle portion of long bones, but Bucholz says doctors are uncertain about its long-term wear for larger sections.

The coral is cut into various sizes and cooked in a pressure cooker for 50 to 60 hours, a process that removes its carbonate ions and replaces them with calcium. The final product closely matches the chemical composition of bone so it is accepted readily by the body.

The pores and interconnecting openings enhance the flow of blood around the repaired bone and easily can be mistaken for natural bone.

"It's a fluke of nature that the coral's skeleton and porous structure mimics bone so well."
— Dr. Robert W. Bucholz, UT Dallas professor

George W. Smythe, president of Interpore Internationale, the Irvine, Calif., firm that processes and sells the coral, said the average cost of material used in the clinical experiments is about $600 for 20 cubic centimeters of coral.

Drug may prevent healing blood vessels from clogging

New York Times News Service

Researchers have discovered a substance that may prevent injured blood vessels from becoming blocked as they heal.

Blood vessels that are traumatized by disease, injury, surgery or other medical procedures sometimes grow excess cells as they repair themselves.

The extra growth causes the vessels to become narrower and sometimes blocked.

Such narrowing can lead to higher blood pressure and other medical problems, like heart disease and stroke.

Pharmaceutical researchers with F. Hoffman-La Roche Ltd. in Basel, Switzerland, found that the drug cilazapril helps stop the narrowing of the blood vessels.

Their findings are reported in the current issue of the journal Science.

In particular, the drug may be useful in preventing the lesions that occur after coronary angioplasty and vascular surgery, said Dr. Jerry S. Powell, who led the research.

More than 200,000 angioplasty operations were performed last year in the United States.

In the operation, a long tube with a tiny balloon at its tip is inserted into a blood vessel. The balloon is inflated at the site of the clog, pushing the fatty deposits against the vessel walls and opening a wider channel.

In some cases, however, the procedure damages the vessel walls, and new clogs develop. The scientists testing the new drug believe it will help prevent re-clogging in these instances.

The drug has not yet been tested on humans.

The experiments involved laboratory rats whose blood vessels were damaged by the balloon procedure.

Older women having more, healthier babies

WASHINGTON (AP) — College-educated women who postponed having children until their 30s are getting earlier pre-natal care and having fewer underweight babies than other mothers, according to a government report.

Four times more women aged 30 to 34 had first babies in 1986 than did women in the same age group in 1970, the National Center for Health Statistics reported Wednesday.

Between 1970 and 1986, the number of first births to women 30 to 34 increased from 42,404 to 181,504, the center reported. For women 35 to 39, the total first births rose from 11,704 to 44,427.

The increase in older first-time mothers reflects women who have postponed families while completing educations and launching careers, sociologists have reported.

Among women 30 to 34, the proportion of first-time mothers who have college degrees increased from 40 percent in 1975 to 48 percent in 1986, according to the report compiled by Stephanie J. Ventura.

Although some increase can be attributed to the overall rise in education among women, the rate also reflects that some women are postponing having children, the report said.

"It is apparent that well-educated women...have postponed childbearing, and that they are making up for at least some of the delay at a growing pace," Ventura said.

Better-educated mothers are seeking earlier medical attention for themselves and their babies, resulting in fewer underweight births, according to the study, "Trends and Variations in First Births to Older Women, 1970-86."

Birth weight is widely used as a measure of infant health, with babies weighing less than 5 pounds 8 ounces considered at risk.

For women 30 to 34, the report found, 7.5 percent of all first births suffered from low birth weight. But among women with college educations the share was 5.8 percent.

"Greater educational attainment...is associated with more timely receipt of pre-natal care and a better outcome in terms of birth weight," Ventura said.

As of 1986, for example, about 91 percent of first-time mothers 30 to 34 began pre-natal care during the first trimester of their pregnancy, the report showed.

By comparison, 77.4 percent of all first-time mothers started care that early, and among women 15-19 pre-natal care was begun in the first three months by only 55.8 percent of first-time mothers.

The report did not go into other health factors concerning the age at which women first gave birth.

The study comes just two weeks after a Census Bureau report showed that one-third of all the children born in 1988 had mothers 30 and over.

While women in their 30s were having more children, the birth rate for younger women has been declining while those women pursue educations and careers.

MISD, ECISD dropout rates near 4 percent

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Danny McCord, 16, spent four years in seventh grade before deciding to drop out. But he entered MISD's alternative school and now has plans to obtain his GED. Hundreds of others, however, have left school and never returned.

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Four years is a long time to spend trying to get out of seventh grade.

While former classmates had entered their sophomore year of high school last fall, Danny McCord, 16, was back to a familiar academic drawing board. He still had junior high to complete.

"I was going to finish school but it would have been until I was 22 before I graduated," Danny said. "I wouldn't have finished."

Last November he entered Midland Independent School District's alternative school for students identified as potential dropouts.

Danny said he now has goals of obtaining his general equivalency diploma and taking computer programming classes in college.

"But for hundreds of other MISD students, a dream like Danny's has died or never existed. They have dropped out.

During the 1987-88 school year, 277 MISD junior high and high school students, or 3.8 percent, left school and never returned, figures released Wednesday show.

"It's low," Larry Lusby, executive director of computer services, said of the rate. "But we're worried about it. In four years that's about 1,000 kids who have basically given up."

Anglos made up 59 percent of the dropouts, with 28 percent Hispanics and 13 percent blacks. Lee and Midland high schools had a combined 132 dropouts, while MISD's three junior high schools had 145.

Tenth grade had the highest number of dropouts, with 61, while 12th grade had the least, with 13. Seventh grade had 55; eighth, 59; ninth, 31; and 11th, 58. Individual campus statistics were unavailable.

In Ector County Independent School District, 395 secondary students, or 3.9 percent, disappeared from school records before the start of the 1988-89 school year.

Texas Education Agency figures released in May show that more than 91,000, or 6.7 percent, of 1987-88 seventh- through 12-graders statewide dropped out.

Dropout statistics for the 1988-89 school year will not be available until next summer. Early estimates in MISD, though, say even more dropped out during the past school year than in 1987-88, Lusby said.

Social and academic problems have played major roles in the dropout problem, but economics was a standout factor during 1988-89, Lusby said.

"With a lot of our kids, their parents have had reduced income levels," he said. "The kids have to quit school and go to work to help support their families."

Wayne Milligan, ECISD associate director of planning and evaluation, estimated that the dropout rate will remain at about 4 percent for 1988-89.

Lusby said the TEA this year changed the formula used to calculate school districts' dropout rates, making it difficult to compare 1987-88 with previous years.

Before that year, the TEA simply subtracted the number of students supposed to be in a school district, using estimates from the previous year, from the number of students actually enrolled.

The calculations did not factor in enrollment growth and transfers in or out of the district. The new formula does.

According to the old formula, MISD had a 9.9 percent dropout rate in 1986-87 and 4 percent in 1985-86, while ECISD had 3.3 percent in 1986-87 and 7.1 percent in 1985-86.

Lusby said that in addition to the new method of calculating the dropout rate, MISD counselors, attendance clerks and assistant principals in 1989-90 will more closely investigate a student who withdraws from school.

"Before we allow a kid to drop out, we're going to try to explore every educational avenue we have available for that kid to still participate in some education program," he said.

One of those avenues for MISD and ECISD may be expanded alternative schools, which now allow students to work at their own pace to earn a GED or catch up to their classmates in the regular programs.

During 1988-89, MISD's alternative school for at-risk students saw 126 potential dropouts between the ages of 16 and 21. A district proposal for next school year would expand the school to accommodate more than 200 students.

The program also would allow the students to gain credit for their schoolwork, include vocational classes and provide day care and transportation.

John Rodriguez, a teacher aide, said the school will be relocated from Dellwood Mall to Northgate Shopping Center in east Midland, where a majority of the at-risk students reside.

The new facility will be about three times bigger and more centralized than the Dellwood Mall classes, Rodriguez said.

ECISD Deputy Superintendent Don Mercer said his district's alternative school, which offers catch-up classes three nights a week, could be turned into a program similar to MISD's half-day school.

"We're going to propose to the board that we develop some type of open-enrollment school based on a student's abilities in reading, language arts and math," Mercer said.

He said the proposal may go before the school board for review at a Tuesday meeting, with the school scheduled for an October opening.

Like MISD's program, the ECISD school would be partially funded through Job Training Partnership Act grants. Mercer said the school would be housed an Odessa JTPA facility.

PBRPC recommends continuing drug task force funding

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A 17-county undercover drug task force, in receiving a favorable nod from the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, virtually was assured another year of funding Wednesday.

The $800,000 funding application now must be presented to the Criminal Justice Division of the Governor's Office for consideration.

Although the PBRPC does not give out monetary awards, spokesman Jerry Tschauner said state agencies use its recommendations to study funding requests, such as the one submitted by the Permian Basin Regional Narcotics Task Force.

Currently headed by interim director Tom Finley, the Midland-based task force is the largest regional unit of its kind in the country.

The unit covers an area from Loving, Reeves and Pecos counties, east through the Midland-Odessa area to Howard County, and north to Dawson and Gaines counties.

The effort began in July 1987 when 30 officers representing four different law enforcement agencies met in Midland. Prior to that meeting, Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre, a member of the governor's criminal justice task force, attended hearings in El Paso, Corpus Christi and Arlington.

From the hearings, the district attorney found that multi-county task forces would have the best chance at sharing the $9.5 million in federal subsidies allocated to Texas for anti-drug efforts.

The initial funding proposal requested $900,000 for the eight investigators needed to begin operations. The final award fell $380,000 short of that sum.

In other business Wednesday, the commission gave favorable comment to the Regional Development Review Committee's recommendation to allow construction of Faudree Road between the Old Bankhead Highway and U.S. Highway 80 in Midland County.

The road construction will be funded by the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Senator will seek funds to build SSC

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of a Senate appropriations subcommittee says he will seek $225 million to begin construction of the super collider next year because the "much needed project" will restore U.S. leadership in particle physics.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston said he wants to "send a signal to those at home and abroad that the United States intends to assert a leadership position in high-energy physics" and would support spending $225 million for the collider so that construction at a site south of Dallas could begin in fiscal 1990.

Because of budget constraints, Johnston said he was unable to support President Bush's request that the superconducting super collider receive $250 million in funding for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

But the $225 million Johnston will ask the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on energy and water development to approve is $25 million more than what the House has approved to begin building the SSC.

"Just as we make room in the budget for critical national defense needs, we also must provide for basic research to secure American leadership in science and technology," Johnston told Sen. Lloyd Bentsen in a letter Tuesday.

"Such leadership is essential for our economic growth, our industrial competitiveness, and our national security. The SSC is a key element in a comprehensive program for scientific excellence," wrote Johnston, a Louisiana Democrat.

Bentsen said he was pleased with Johnston's letter and intentions to ask the subcommittee to approve the $225 million at a meeting scheduled for this afternoon.

"I will be watching the subcommittee's actions closely and hopefully we will be successful in gaining their approval of the $225 million, which would allow construction to begin in the coming year," Bentsen, a Texas Democrat, said Wednesday.

Midland police and paramedics work near the scene of a two-vehicle accident late Wednesday on Interstate 20 near Cottonflat Road. The accident occurred about 9:15 p.m. when a vehicle driven by Gabriel Madrid, 70, 1511 S. Colorado St. was traveling the wrong way in the westbound lanes of the interstate, according to police. The vehicle struck a car driven by Kenneth Bruce Birkemeier, 19, of Lake Oswego, Ore., who was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released. A passenger, David McCart of Ericasio, Ore. was listed in satisfactory condition at MMH with shoulder and jaw injuries.

Malnourished boy dies because his immune system fails

EL PASO (AP) — An 8-year-old boy, who had been starved to the point of weighing as much as a typical 11-month-old, died Wednesday because he was so exhausted, his immune system failed, his doctor said.

Carlos Hoyos Rascon died of septicemia — blood poisoning caused by massive infection — Wednesday morning after spending two days in intensive care at Providence Memorial Hospital, Dr. Roberto Canales said.

When relatives discovered Carlos near death June 27 at a house across the Rio Grande in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, the boy weighed about 18 pounds. He was transferred July 7 from Red Cross Hospital in Juarez to Providence Hospital.

Carlos had been gaining a little weight and seemed to be recovering until the weekend, when he developed a fever that heralded the onset of septicemia. He was placed in intensive care and was put on life-support and dialysis machines, but to no avail.

"Carlito was so exhausted, all his strength was going toward breathing and staying alive and moving his head a little," Canales said. "All his reserves of energy had been exhausted. His immune system was not working. It was caused by his malnutrition."

The boy's bloodstream was infected with staphylococcus and with Candida, the fungus that causes

Carlos apparently was left in the care of a neighboring couple after his father left two years ago to work on farms in the United States, said Joel Bustamante, director of Juarez's child-welfare agency. The neighbors have been charged with child neglect and failure to render aid, and Bustamante said the charges likely will be upgraded to murder.

Bustamante said authorities are looking for the father, Carlos Hoyos Vera, to find out who is more to blame for the little boy's condition — his father or his guardians. Carlos' caretakers told police that the boy's father only sent them $80 over two years to pay for the boy's food and care. They told police they fed him as best they could.

When relatives took Carlos to Red Cross Hospital in Juarez on June 27, the boy weighed about 18 pounds and was too weak to eat, drink or cry. He had bedsores on his back.

Crack case expected to go to jury today

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The one-day trial of Odessan Earnest Derrick, 22, is expected to go to a Midland jury today. The case marks the first time a criminal offense involving crack, the deadly cocaine derivative gaining popularity in Midland, has gone to a jury for deliberation and punishment.

Derrick, an employee of the Odessa Parks Department, is accused of possessing 12 "rocks" of crack cocaine. He is being tried before Judge Pat Baskin in 142nd State District Court.

According to testimony Wednesday, Derrick was a passenger in a four-door Toyota that was spotted racing during the early morning hours of April 16 by two Midland police officers.

One of the officers, Kevin Wolf, told prosecutor Randy Fluke he pulled the car over on Big Spring Street, just north of Scharbauer Drive. He ordered the driver and passenger in the front seat, and Derrick in the back seat, to show their hands, he told the jury.

"I ordered him (Derrick) several times to place his hands on the back headrest," Wolf said.

"Did he comply?" Fluke asked.

"No, he did not," Wolf replied.

Gift of life amazing, often taken for granted

Despite all of the man-clouded views on life and death, when life begins, what life and death are and are not, and who controls whose mind and whose life, there is this certainty: Life is a gift. It is a wonder. It is amazing.

Todd

Yet, because it is so commonplace, life is taken for granted. Far too often, people who have the wherewithal to cause the issue of another life from their astounding bodies bring forth life as if there was nothing to it.

No big deal. It just happens. Hardly.

The Almighty God, the Creator, put forces into action — the energies that regulate the universe and the laws that govern the complexities of life on Earth.

The old axiom has been reaffirmed time and time again: For every action, there is a reaction. Break a law, and there is a penalty to be exacted now or later. Live within the universal laws, and there will be rewards. Not just sages but experience has taught that.

Whether life is first introduced to Earth by way of a hard-shelled egg or from the womb, life is a wonder no matter what. Bird, turtle, snake, ant, bee, dog, cat, horse, calf, coyote, bear, man, woman, boy, girl.

After life has been given, it then becomes the responsibility of the caretakers of that life to care for life.

Life cares for life.

Life cares for that which sustains life.

Or should.

An American astronaut who viewed the planet Earth from afar was remarkably impressed with what should be obvious but apparently isn't: Life — all of mankind and all of earthly life — and the ecosystem are dependent on one vibrant, radiate, amazingly complex and intertwined planet. Yet, the peoples of the Earth have, in large measure, ignored their responsibilities as caretakers. Fortunately, not all have.

And, thankfully, not all people who bring forth life have shunned their roles as loving, caring and responsible caretakers.

Even amid the strife, the tensions, the droughts, the rumbling of warmongers, and the woes of wilderness, waters and air, there is hope for a good life on Earth if only those who are enlightened in the ways of honoring life don't give up.

DEATHS

Robert Awalt

Services for Robert Harvey "Harve" Awalt, 85, of Midland are set for 9:30 a.m. Friday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Cecil Robinson, presiding elder of Petroplex Covenant Church, officiating and Don Kinder assisting. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Tuesday at a local nursing home.

Born June 22, 1904 at Vernon, he was raised in the Eastland area where he attended school.

He married Ellie Clare Skinner Jan. 3, 1925 in Carlsbad, N.M. The couple lived in Carlsbad and Lea County, N.M., until 1971 when they moved to Midland.

He was a barber for 45 years before his retirement. He was affiliated with the Baptist church and was a former Odd Fellow.

Survivors include his wife, Ellie of Midland; two sons, Arch Awalt of Anchorage, Alaska, and Jerry Awalt of Andrews; three daughters, Barbara White, Norma Robinson and Mona Hale, all of Midland; two brothers, Elton Awalt of Big Spring and George T. Awalt of Glassboro, N.J.; one sister, Gladys Burholder of Pecos; 11 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren.

Memorials are requested to a favorite charity.

Walter Wise

Services for Walter O. Wise are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Wednesday in Austin.

CRACK

"His hands were down near the seat ...and noticed what appeared to be a clear plastic bottle...his hands were on the bottle."

When the defendant refused to show his hands, the officer said he thought Derrick was trying to hide "a weapon or narcotics."

Wolf found the bottle on the rear floorboard of the vehicle, and arrested Derrick, he testified. The other persons in the car were released, he said.

Wolf agreed with Abner Burnett of Odessa, Derrick's attorney, that he never mentioned in the report of the arrest that the defendant was at any time touching the bottle containing the crack.

The only non-police officer to take the stand, Department of Public Safety laboratory supervisor Burgess Cook, told jurors he tested the rocks in the bottle and they contained cocaine.

The stocky Derrick, a Crane native and 1985 graduate of Permian High School, took the stand late Wednesday in his defense. In a soft voice, he told jurors he did not know where the narcotics came from.

He told Burnett he drove with a friend to Midland to visit a club, the Cozy Spot. He said another man joined them during the evening, but left before the arrest.

"I was putting a beer bottle under the seat," he said when asked about Wolf's descriptions of his actions.

Derrick said the officer reached in the car, stepped back, then announced he was under arrest. Wolf did not tell him at the scene why he was under arrest, the defendant testified.

He was the only defense witness to testify.

SSC

Sen. Phil Gramm, a Texas Republican, said he has personally met with all six Republican members of the subcommittee, and five of them "have committed to me to support the SSC at some level. That needless to say is a tremendous turnaround."

Gramm said he is confident of the support of Republican Sens. Mark Hatfield of Oregon, the ranking GOP member of the full committee, Jake Garn of Utah, Thad Cochran of Mississippi, Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania, and Pete Domenici of New Mexico.

But Gramm said he had "not been able to move" Sen. James McClure of Idaho.

McClure's spokesman H.D. Palmer said the senator is concerned funding for the SSC not be at the expense of other research programs.

"The initiation of the SSC cannot emasculate all of the other research programs. Show we mere the money is," Palmer said.

"I think it looks good," Gramm said. "You can never count the money until you have it, but I'm very encouraged.

"I think the decision Sen. Bentsen and I made a couple of months ago to divide up the members (of the committee) and visit them one on one is beginning to pay off," Gramm said.

Val Kiecke, vice president of a Brenham bank, visits the five-acre community of Winkelmann, which on the auction block today. Some of the town's buildings date to the antebellum era. Washington County State Bank assumed ownership of the town when the developer failed to make payments

Bids sought for community that failed when economy went bust

WINKELMANN (AP) — This five-acre community — complete with 19 restored buildings — remains on the selling block after a bid for $150,000 during an auction was rejected as too low.

The Washington County State Bank, which had tried to sell the town, turned to the California auction house Ross-Dave Company Inc. in an effort to attract investors from around the country.

The firm received an estimated 600 inquiries, including several from amusement parks and a few from movie studios considering it for a movie lot, acutioneer Ross Dave said.

But only Max Murland of Houston put in a bid for $150,000 during a Wednesday auction, said Val Kiecke of the Washington County State Bank in Brenham. He said no other auction is planned, but bids will be accepted on an individual basis.

Winkelmann, four miles east of Brenham, was once a tourist stopover developed by the town's owner Ray Winkelman. But the town fell victim to the recent downturn in the Texas economy and the restored buildings now are empty.

The Washington County State Bank became the owner three years ago when Winkelmann could no longer make the payments on loans to redevelop the town.

Winkelmann is not incorporated, but it has its own sewer and water system.

When it was auctioned, its namesake was in New Orleans where he moved earlier this year.

Several of the restored buildings date to the antebellum era of Texas and were once schoolhouses, liquor stores, a law office, train depots, plantation houses, private homes and a general store.

Ray Winkelmann, a 42-year-old antique dealer and occasional consultant for restoration projects, said when oil prices collapsed, his town went under.

"I was like a lot of people," said Winkelmann, who grew up in Brenham. "I didn't know how much of the Texas economy revolved around oil."

Winkelmann said his personal loss in the project totals $700,000.

When he lived in Texas, Winkelmann collected antiques and the buildings they were in. In 1983, he moved some of those buildings to a site outside Brenham.

He leased several of the structures to local businesses but ran the Jezebel Saloon, gourmet restaurant and the general store himself. At the height of its popularity, the project had 93 full-time workers and was a regular stop on many tours.

It was tough sailing for ship

By RICHARD STEWART

BEAUMONT (AP) — Mary Anna Crary's father told her to be very ladylike when she broke the champagne bottle across the big ship City of Beaumont's bow just as it was launched.

The bottle hung from the deck on long red, white and blue ribbons. The 9-year-old girl was to just hold the bottle out from the bow then let go and allow the bottle to smash against the ship.

But when launching time came, a big whistle screeched and the little girl grabbed the bottle by the neck like a club. She swung with all her might. The bottle exploded against the bow and champagne splattered all over the bow, her new white frilly dress and many of the other spectators.

The City of Beaumont rumbled backward down the ways, creating a cloud of smoke from the friction, and slid into the waters of the port of Beaumont. It promptly floated across the port and got stuck in the mud on the other side of the river.

That was on March 28, 1918.

And for most of the time since then the wooden five-masted barkentine has been stuck in the mud.

For more than 50 years it has been grounded on the bank of the Hudson River at the village of Hastings-on-Hudson, just north of Yonkers, N.Y.

"We got the best part of the ship," said Mary Anna Crary Anderson, now 80. "It was built and launched here. The rest of its history isn't so good."

Young Mary Anna Crary was proud of the ship she sponsored in 1918. Her father, N.N. Crary, was the superintendent of the International Shipbuilding yard in Beaumont where the City of Beaumont and its slightly smaller sister ship, City of Dallas, were launched.

Both ships were towed to a larger International Shipbuilding yard in Orange for completion. In all, the company built 14 big wooden sailing ships during and right after World War I.

Although the heyday of sailing ships was long past, the war created a big demand for ships and engines and steel were in short supply.

East Texas produced immense amounts of lumber and East Texas ports were alive with shipyards building wooden ships in that era.

The City of Beaumont was to have been a part of the allied effort to win the war to end all wars. But the war ended before the vessel reached Europe.

Except for a ride on the ship as it was towed from Beaumont to Orange, Mrs. Anderson never saw the City of Beaumont again.

She heard about it, though.

A copy of her photograph was in the saloon of the ship. The first captain, W.B. Butler, wrote her in 1919 that so many people asked if she was his daughter that he put a note on the photograph explaining who it was.

The City of Beaumont almost didn't make it across the Atlantic on her first cargo voyage. First the ship was rammed by a steamer while at anchor in New York harbor, then a fire broke out in the engine room during a gale at sea.

The ship had an auxiliary gasoline engine, and wood sheathing around the gasoline tank caught fire. The weather was too rough to launch the lifeboats.

"There was but one alternative, therefore," Butler wrote, "which was to fight the fire for dear life."

That first cargo went to Cette, which Butler called "a dirty, little town in the south of France." Then, the ship called on ports in Italy and several Balkan ports. While there, an agent smuggled the equivalent of $500,000 out of Romania illegally, Butler said.

The ship went back past Constantinople and to Italy before finally getting back to New York.

By then Butler had enough of the City of Beaumont.

Mrs. Anderson kept the letter from the captain for almost 60 years before giving it and the originals of all her photos of the City of Beaumont to the Peabody Museum in Salem, Mass.

While she hasn't seen the ship in more than 61 years, Mrs. Anderson said she has thought of it often.

"That ship has remained a part of my psyche," she said. "I married a sea captain."

In 1936 she married Frank Anderson, a merchant marine officer who had just passed his exam to become a captain.

As the world rushed toward another war, the demands of the sea kept him away longer and longer. She worked as a Beaumont city librarian while he was gone.

"While he was at sea I would sit in the library and put my head on the typewriter, close my eyes and picture in my mind the sun shimmering on the water just like it did when I rode on the City of Beaumont from Beaumont to Orange," she said.

Anderson died in 1973. The couple had no children.

The City of Beaumont became a floating club in New York in 1927 and later her three middle masts were removed and a stage put on her deck. She was towed up river to become a floating theater in the Hudson. In 1936 she was grounded at Hastings-on-Hudson as a breakwater at an oil loading facility.

Now the village wants to remove the rotting hulk to make way for a city park.

Microfilm containing patents stolen from schools across U.S.

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Hundreds of microfilm reels of patents have been stolen from a dozen university libraries, puzzling officials who say they have no idea why anyone would steal the reels.

Thefts have been reported at colleges and universities in Texas, Idaho, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Mexico, Utah, Georgia, Ohio and Virginia.

The FBI is investigating the thefts, but would not discuss details or say how many reels of microfilm are missing. A Virginia newspaper reported that at least 886 microfilm reels of U.S. patents issued between 1968 and 1988 have been reported missing since mid-June.

The microfilmed patents are helpful to lawyers, inventors, students and any others who want to know how patented devices work or if and when a certain patent was issued.

The thefts are puzzling in that there is no apparent market for the patents, which are available to the public, free of charge, for viewing at any of the depositories. Officials have no other motives for the thefts.

"I wish I knew (the reason), because then we might be closer to finding out what's causing this terrible thing to happen," an official in the Department of Commerce's Patent and Trademark Office said. "It's published, there for use by anyone. It has no monetary value in that regard."

The official, who asked to remain unnamed, said the reels can be viewed only with a special projector. "It's not like stealing typing paper you can use at home."

Houston patent attorney John Lynch, who regularly views patent reels at Rice University while researching a case, said the thefts could be an entrepreneuring venture by someone who wants to make the patents available to companies below the current purchase price or without the inconvenience of going to a depository.

The microfilm collections are housed in 65 government-designated Patent Depository Libraries.

Library workers at Rice reported the loss of 227 reels to campus police June 28, said Barbara Kile, director of Fondren Library's division of government publications and special resources.

At Texas A&M, 189 reels were discovered missing a few weeks ago, library director Irene Hoadley said. University of Texas director of general libraries, Harold Billings, would not discuss specifics of the theft at his institution.

Kile, who estimated 10 to 15 people view patents daily at Rice, said the thefts were probably well thought out.

"A great deal of the information that is disclosed in a patent never appears any place else," she said. "It's hard to say what somebody could do with it. The fact that a number of libraries were hit in what seemed to be a planned pattern indicates it's not just a passing interest."

Microfilm cannot be checked out at any of the university libraries, making it difficult to keep track of film viewers, administrators said. At Rice, people must go through a training session before viewing a reel for the first time.

Before the theft, A&M's reels were kept, like books, on an open shelf.

The thefts will be costly for the colleges. A single roll of patent microfilm costs $95, Hoadley said.

YMCA sponsoring canoe trip

From Staff Reports

A canoe trip down the Brazos River July 28-30 will climax a canoeing class currently being offered by the Midland YMCA.

The course and/or trip is open to adults as well as youths. Youths ages 13 and under must be accompanied on the float trip by a parent or guardian.

Classroom instruction, for youths 18 and under, in canoeing techniques, water safety skills and first aid is being offered in Central YMCA from 9 a.m. to noon each weekday through July 25.

Canoes, paddles, life preservers, tents, cookstoves, food and transportation for the Brazos trip will be provided by the YMCA.

The stretch of the Brazos to be canoed, near Possum Kingdom Lake, is considered the most scenic portion of that river.

Cost is $80 for YMCA members and $100 for non-members. Parent-child cost is $150, with an additional $25 for each additional child.

Late registration for the classroom portion of the course can be accomplished at the Central YMCA at 9 a.m. daily.

For additional information, contact Patrick Dearen at 682-2551 in the morning or 699-6103 in the afternoon or evening, or leave a message at 699-0142.

Odessan held on murder charge

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 40-year-old Odessa man is being held in city jail on a first-degree murder charge in the death of his 35-year-old wife Wednesday. Police Cpl. John McAhon said David Floyd Frankson was awaiting a bail hearing in municipal court as the police investigation continued.

No motive has been determined in the killing of Sally Lisa Frankson, who was found in the southwest bedroom of the couple's home at 2900 Nabors Lane by police responding to a report of a deceased person, McAhon said.

Justice of the Peace E.H. Hendrick pronounced Mrs. Frankson dead at 5:55 p.m. and ordered an autopsy to determine the cause of death.

Her husband, who was present when police and emergency personnel arrived at the northeast Odessa home at 3:39 p.m., accompanied police to the station and was later arrested on a warrant issued by Hendrick.

Boy finds skull in dried lake bed

WILLS POINT (AP) — Forensic scientists in Dallas are examining a human skull uncovered by a 5-year-old boy in a dried lake bed.

The skull was found in on a private lake in Van Zandt County about 30 miles southeast of Dallas. It was wrapped in a women's swim suit and stuffed into a crude iron container, said Chief Deputy Wayne Miller of the Van Zandt County Sheriff's Department.

Miller said the skull was believed to be that of a woman, possibly in her early 20s. "It appears to have been in the water about one or two years," he said.

The skull, discovered Tuesday, was sent to the Southwest Institute of Forensic Sciences in Dallas for evaluation and dental matching.

"The skull still had quite a bit of long red hair attached to it," Miller said.

Investigators were searching through missing person records, Sheriff Pat Jordan said.

Most of the lake was drained last month but it retained some water where the boy and his parents were fishing Tuesday night, Miller said.

"He found a heavy cast iron pot-type container near the edge where the water had receded," he said. "He took the contents out and found the skull."

Sheriff's deputies searched the area for bones, but found none, Miller said.

FRIDAY, JULY 21, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A change in your work routine could help you reap a bonanza. A new career or an exciting business investment could be part of your immediate future. Travel is in the spotlight in August and again in late December. Capitalize on an unusual financial or job opportunity. Your fine sense of logic complements a relationship.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: novelist Ernest Hemingway, comedian Robin Williams, actor Don Knotts, violinist Isaac Stern, golfer Gene Littler.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Concentrate on universal rather than personal interests. Good nutrition is the key to maintaining good health. Romantic events create a special sense of anticipation. Accept your responsibilities with grace. Youngsters follow your example.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may decide to confess something others will find shocking. Telling the truth will be in your best interest! Be conscientious when it comes to your children and romantic partner. Listen attentively.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your competitive side shows itself today. Financial manipulations may not be worth the risk. You may be attracted to a stranger from a distant place. A tasty dinner and good night's sleep will do wonders.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An investment of time and money pays off royally. Compromise to get what you want. Romance blossoms anew if you allow mate to take the lead. Children will require more guidance in hot weather.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Watch what you say today; sensitive individuals could take offense. All signs favor negotiating contracts, launching new projects and partnerships. Get organized at home and you will function better at work.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A bright idea or unexpected phone call perks you up. You may be able to reach an important agreement. An unusual vocation could lead to a second career. Enlist mate's cooperation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If it comes to a choice between business and pleasure, opt for pleasure. Do not hesitate to decline an invitation that does not sound fun. Keep spending within your budget. Romance smiles on you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Smooth out your abrupt and impatient style. You can put up with someone's jokes but only to a certain point. Timely investments increase your financial security. A telephone call brightens your day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Consider the risks involved in a going-nowhere relationship or an iffy financial deal. Rely on inside information given to you in confidence. Protect your professional reputation, even if a close relationship is involved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Handle your domestic obligations cheerfully. Utilize your past experiences to move in a new direction. A brother or sister shares a confidence. Listen to mate's advice but follow your own instincts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Ties that snap now are better left broken. Joint decisions will require thorough background investigation. Sudden attractions occur when least expected. An unusual event gives you new inspiration. Pursue your goals zealously.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make a major decision regarding your home, job or a large purchase. Unfinished business could clash with a desire to socialize. A younger person could turn out to be a wily negotiator.

We have often seen players rolling their eyes skyward as if seeking help from the almighty. We have yet to find one recorded case of divine intervention. Therefore, we suggest bridge players rely on their own ability.

North's jump to six no trump was perhaps a little conservative in view of the five-card suit. However, with no high honor in his long suit, North discounted that asset and settled for the value raise.

West did well not to lead from his club holding, which would have given declarer the contract there and then. After a heart lead, declarer could count only 11 tricks, and the 12th could come only from spades, or an unlikely lie of the club suit.

The question: Whether to play for a 3-3 drop or to take a third-round spade finesse. Mathematically, the odds slighly favor playing for a drop once both defenders have followed to two rounds of the suit.

Although it might not be obvious, as the cards lie declarer has a sure-trick play for the contract. All South has to do is count the hand. The way to get a complete picture of the distribution is to concede a club trick early.

Suppose declarer wins the first trick in dummy and immediately leads a club to the jack. Let's say West takes the queen and continues with a heart. Declarer cashes out the hearts, learning West started off with four of them. Next come three rounds of diamonds, and when West shows out, six of his cards are known. Declarer continues with the ace of clubs, and East's discard is very revealing—another five of West's cards can be counted, which leaves West with only two spades. So declarer cashes the ace and queen and, when the jack does not drop, confidently continues by taking the "marked" finesse of the ten for the fulfilling trick.

Downey's show canceled

SECAUCUS, N.J. (AP) — Morton Downey Jr., whose combative, ultraconservative style lifted his talk show from a New Jersey studio to nationwide syndication, announced he has harangued his last guest.

MCA Television, WWOR-TV and Quantum Media Inc., joint owners of the show, said in a statement the final episode was taped on June 30.

The companies' statement, released Wednesday, said the show would run no more original segments after Sept. 15, the end of Downey's contract with the stations carrying his show.

The show premiered in the New York area on Oct. 19, 1987, and quickly drew attention for Downey's abrasive style. The show was soon syndicated and by early 1988 was being shown in most major U.S. television markets.

But ratings began to slip last spring as Downey was involved in a series of highly publicized incidents. Those included charges that he was involved in a scheme to sell shares of a non-existent gold mine and an incident in a San Francisco airport bathroom, in which he claimed he was attacked by skinheads and a Nazi swastika was painted on his face. Airport police called the attack a publicity stunt.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Actor Sylvester Stallone says he really isn't a macho, monosyllabic guy, although he admits he's played that role in so many films that he'd almost forgotten how to talk.

"It's not really me. It was a book that I interpreted," Stallone said of his Rambo films. "I inherited the mantle. I'm not monosyllabic. I'm not that quiet. I'm not a loner by nature."

A clean-shaven, neatly dressed and bespectacled Stallone met with reporters Tuesday in Cincinnati where he is filming scenes for a Warner Bros. picture co-starring Kurt Russell. Stallone plays an undercover policeman who is refined and articulate — a man more inclined to wearing suits and dabbling in the stock market.

His next film, "Lockup," opens in early August, and Stallone said he is more optimistic about it than he has been about any film since the first "Rocky" in 1976.

"It's an ensemble," he said. "It isn't just me out there with a rifle, swinging from a tree for 2½ hours. At least I get to act, get to talk, which I'd almost forgotten how to do in the past few films. It's like the re-education of Sylvester Stallone."

Forbes

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — Multimillionaire publisher Malcolm S. Forbes and nine members of the biking club Capitalist Tools rolled into this historic Mississippi River town on a seven-day journey down the Great River Road.

"We began where the Mississippi began, and we're going to where it ends," Forbes said of the 2,100-mile trek.

The motorcyclists spent Tuesday night at a bed-and-breakfast inn and left Wednesday for New Orleans, their final destination.

The 69-year-old publisher said he found the route more enjoyable than his normal commute.

"We've gone through 10 states and experienced less traffic than one hour of driving from New Jersey to New York," he said. "You feel like you're really getting to the heart of America."

The trip did have its wrong turns, though.

"We followed Highway 72 on a 1988 Rand-McNally map of Tennessee and the road got rougher and rougher ... the bridge was out," he said. The crew asked a farmer if it was possible to cross the river and he replied, "If you can leap these bikes 40 feet you can cross," Forbes said.

Baez

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — Folk singer Joan Baez sang a new song protesting the recent violence in China. The performance was at a charity concert attended by Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

The 48-year-old U.S. singer said she had thought about singing "Lady Di," which she wrote eight years ago, but decided, "It just wouldn't have been protocol."

Instead, she sang the China protest song at the Prince's Trust Rock Gala at Birmingham's National Exhibition Center. Wednesday night's concert drew about 10,000 people and raised $800,000 for the trust, which helps young people.

Baez, who met the royal couple before the show, said she was flattered to be invited. "I am pleased that I can still enjoy performing," she said. "I'll try to go on for another 10 years, but then I'll have to put my teeth in a jar."

Duke of York

HULL, Quebec (AP) — The Duke and Duchess of York thanked a crowd for a warm welcome after getting a rough reception a few days earlier on their Canadian tour.

"Sarah and I are particularly touched by the warm welcome of Quebecers," Prince Andrew told a gathering at a civic welcome Wednesday outside City Hall. "Thank you for the most wonderful welcome."

The thanks seemed intended, in part, to quiet some controversy fanned by the British press, which reported that Sarah was shaken when the couple was booed Sunday at the closing ceremonies of a summer festival in Quebec City.

For his part, Mayor Michel Legere offered a down-to-earth greeting, urging the royal couple to "have a Hull of a good time."

Later the duchess, the former Sarah Ferguson, visited a rehabilitation center in adjacent Ottawa and spoke to victims of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis — a degenerative neuro-muscular affliction also known as Lou Gehrig's disease.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former "Hollywood Squares" host Peter Marshall has sued actor Burt Reynolds and game show host Bert Convy, contending they broke a contract to hire him as host of a new quiz show.

Marshall claimed in Wednesday's Superior Court lawsuit that he was host of the successful pilot of "3rd Degree" and was promised he would continue in that role for the 1989-90 season, said his lawyer, Dorothy Wolpert.

Although announcements were made that the former "Hollywood Squares" host would preside over "3rd Degree," he was told on June 30 that he would not get the job after all, the suit alleged.

Soon thereafter, it was announced that Convy was not being renewed as host of "Win, Lose or Draw" and would replace Marshall on "3rd Degree," the suit said.

The suit seeks $1 million in compensatory damages and asks for punitive damages in an amount to be set by the court.

"3rd Degree" is produced by Burt & Bert Productions and Kline & Friends, Inc.

STATE IN BRIEF

4-year-old girl bitten by neighbor's pit bull

BEAUMONT (AP) — A 4-year-old girl, bitten by a pit bulldog on her leg and face, was hospitalized in good condition at a local hospital Wednesday, officials said.

Shanchasitity White underwent surgery at St. Elizabeth Hospital. She suffered a laceration to her right thigh and minor bites on her face and forehead, a hospital spokeswoman said.

"The child was playing outside," said Gene Droddy, an animal control officer. "The dog broke loose from his chain and attacked the child.

"When the child's mother heard her screaming, she ran outside and saw the dog attacking her child. The boy who owns the dog was able to grab the chain and separate it from the child."

The dog's 13-year-old owner said he was inside when he heard the little girl scream.

Droddy said he did not have a problem capturing the dog. He said the owner picked the dog up and placed it in the cage of the animal control truck.

"I heard all the noise and when I ran outside, the dog was on the girl's leg," the boy said. "We've had the dog about 11 months and it had never attacked before."

The dog will be kept in quarantine for the next 10 days, at which time a veterinarian will check the dog for rabies, Droddy said. If the owners do not want the dog returned, it will be destroyed, he said.

Killer's execution date set

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A judge has set Aug. 23 as the execution date for a man convicted of killing a Corpus Christi man in a robbery that netted $13.

A jury in February 1985 convicted Troy Albert Kunkle, 23, of San Antonio, in connection with the Aug. 12, 1984, robbery and shooting death of Steven Wayne Horton, 29, of Corpus Christi.

The Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin upheld Kunkle's death sentence in June 1986. Earlier this month, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear Kunkle's case.

Judge Eric Brown of the 28th District Court in Corpus Christi on Tuesday set Kunkle's execution date.

Also indicted in connection with Horton's death were San Antonio residents Aaron Allen Adkins, who pleaded guilty to murder in exchange for a 30-year sentence; Lora Lee "Angel" Zaiontz, who is serving a life sentence for the murder; and Russell Stanley, who pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of murder in exchange for a 30-year prison sentence.

Testimony at Kunkle's trial indicated that after shooting Horton in the back of the head, Kunkle said the murder was beautiful and recited death-related lyrics from the song, "No Remorse," by the heavy metal rock group Metallica.

In the robbery, $13 were taken from Horton's wallet.

Brownsville gets airline

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Commercial air passenger service is set to return to Brownsville again next week, after nearly two years with no airline operating from the state's southernmost city.

Conquest Airlines plans to inaugurate a Brownsville-San Antonio route on Monday, according to the Beaumont-based company.

Rafael Rivas, executive vice president for Conquest, said 19-passenger turboprop planes will make five daily flights between the two cities Monday through Friday and two flights each Saturday and Sunday. The regular one-way fare will be $89, he said.

"I think this is going to be great for Brownsville and for the tourism industry of South Padre Island," Rivas said.

Brownsville has been without an airline since August 1987, when TranStar Airlines ceased operations.

City officials will hold an open house Monday morning at the Brownsville-South Padre Island International Airport in Brownsville to celebrate the return of airline service.

TDHS commissioner named

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements' budget and planning chief has been chosen as the new commissioner of the Texas Department of Human Services.

In a unanimous decision Wednesday, the department's six-member board chose Ron Lindsey, 44, to succeed Marlin W. Johnson.

Johnston retired in December 1988 after serving as commissioner since 1981.

Lindsey will take over the $84,000 post Aug. 14. The commissioner administers the state's $4 billion-a-year welfare agency.

Major programs of the department include Aid to Families with Dependent Children, nursing home care for the needy elderly, Medicaid and protection of children from abuse and neglect.

The board chose Lindsey from candidates chosen by an executive search firm.

Proposed debate criticized

AUSTIN (AP) — A Democratic candidate for attorney general is accusing another of grandstanding with a proposal to debate in Spanish during their campaigns.

Houston lawyer John Odam on Wednesday called U.S. Rep. John Bryant's Spanish debate proposal "an insult to the intelligence of all Texas voters, particularly Hispanics."

Bryant, who plans to leave Congress and has announced his bid for attorney general, made the proposal last week.

Odam said that while he would agree to debate on Spanish television and radio, Bryant didn't go far enough.

"I am accepting your proposal to debate in Spanish in spite of the fact that I recognize it for what it is — a cheap political gimmick," Odam said in letter to Bryant.

Bennett rallies clergy to help fight drug abuse

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Federal drug czar William Bennett, on a coast-to-coast mission to drum up support for the nation's war on drugs, is calling on the clergy to provide new leadership and role models for youths prone to drug abuse.

"If there is one issue (important) for churches and synagogues, it is the issue of drugs," Bennett told more than 1,000 ministers Tuesday at a Houston civic center.

"If this is not a sin, nothing is," Bennett said. "If this is not idolatry, nothing is."

Besides speaking to clergy members, Bennett also spoke with community leaders at a drug-ravaged neighborhood and made other appearances in the Houston area.

Bennett, director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, also met with the parents of Mark Kilroy, a University of Texas pre-medical student whose grisly murder this spring by a drug smuggling cult in Matamoros, Mexico, captured national attention.

During his speech before clergy members, Bennett, in charge of coordinating the Bush administration's anti-drug policy, likened drug addiction to slavery and said it was an issue that both church and state could join in fighting.

"There is no issue that has so dominated our conscience than the issue of slavery," he said. "A person who is addicted to cocaine has lost his autonomy to act. We have not come this far to be patient of people who do this to themselves."

While the drug problem in black communities is at a crisis stage, Bennett said, decent, law-abiding people in those same communities stay away from drugs and their children stay away from drugs. He said those people must be commended and encouraged.

Fabulous Thunderbirds looking forward to continued success

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press

Two years ago, after the Fabulous Thunderbirds' album "Hot Number," the band went on a long tour. "In fact, we're still doing it," remarks vocalist-harmonica player Kim Wilson.

"They tell us, 'You're going to be out two weeks.' Christmas came and I realized I hadn't seen home since summer."

The Fabulous Thunderbirds is primarily a live blues-rock band. So they play a lot, guitarist Jimmie Vaughan says. One day, they played Red Rocks near Denver at 3 p.m., had a 4 p.m. flight to Fort Worth, changed clothes en route and arrived at the stage five minutes before time to go on.

Now they have a new album, "Powerful Stuff," to promote on the road, through November. The title single was on the "Cocktail" sound track. Wilson says that music by the Fabulous Thunderbirds has been in 15 movies. "Tuff Enough," the title song of the group's first CBS Associated Records album, in 1986, was in both "Tough Guys" and "Gung Ho."

The band was formed in 1970 after Vaughan, brother of Stevie Ray Vaughan, moved from Dallas to Austin, Texas, and met Wilson. In 1974, the Fabulous Thunderbirds became the house band at Antone's, Austin's top blues club. Drummer Fran Christina joined in 1979 and bassist Preston Hubbard joined in 1984. Both had played in the Rhode Island-based Roomful of Blues.

Wilson's favorite cut on "Powerful Stuff" is "Mistake No. 1" by David Porter, who had written many Sam and Dave hits with Isaac Hayes.

"Great Balls of Fire" was being shot in Memphis when the Fabulous Thunderbirds were recording "Powerful Stuff" there. Vaughan auditioned for a part. He plays Sun Records guitarist Roland James.

Vaughan says: "I didn't know him before. I hung around with him quite a bit. He was the guitar player on 'Raunchy' by Bill Justis; he's on all the early stuff. The movie was doing Jerry Lee Lewis in 1957 and '58.

"None of the people playing musicians actually played the music. But we were all musicians so that it would really look right. We learned the songs note for note. We even rehearsed at the Sun studios.

"The sound was taken from Roland James' sound. He hasn't lost it. I don't know why they didn't use him playing — one of those movie things. I really learned a lot from learning his solos."

Vaughan had never acted before. "It was fun. I've been a Jerry Lee Lewis fan since I was a little kid. I don't consider myself an actor. It was the story; I love it so much. I grew up with Jerry Lee Lewis. That's why I wanted to do it. I heard about this movie eight years ago. I decided back then I would love to be in it. I said, 'You've got to have me.' I didn't think I had a chance.

"But I play a musician. I've been practicing for that for a long time."

Starting this month, the Fabulous Thunderbirds plays 17 concerts with the Doobie Brothers. The band plays on the Who's two Texas dates, Sept. 2 and 3, at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas and Houston Astrodome.

When they had time off in January, Vaughan went fishing. "And I play around with hot rods, tinker and drive. I don't race. Mine is a cruiser. It is like rolling sculpture." He drives a 1951 custom Chevrolet and has his eye on a couple of other cars that he can't afford. His wife drives a newer car.

When he isn't on the road, Vaughan walks around his house, occasionally picking up one of his five or six guitars and trying new tunes.

Wilson had a nodule removed from a vocal cord in January. He says: "For the last two years I was hoarse all the time. Whether I sang or not, I couldn't speak in the morning. I stopped smoking. I worked with a speech therapist. I didn't want to have surgery. I'm good at adapting; I haven't missed a gig in 20 years.

"They said, 'You'll be talking in a week, singing in 10 days, reaching for it in two weeks.' I did a gig three weeks after I had the operation. My range has gone up two whole keys. I feel like the bionic man now."

As time goes on, the Fabulous Thunderbirds' approach is constant, Wilson says. "We're a blues band that plays rock 'n' roll."

Company has crafted guitars since 1833

By BRUCE RULE

NAZARETH, Pa. (AP) — When Tracy Chapman played her Grammy-winning song, "Fast Cars," on this year's awards show, she did more than just herald the return to folk-pop: She championed the acoustic guitar.

After a decade or so of synthetic sounds, the acoustic guitar is making a comeback. The Traveling Wilburys play acoustics while singing songs off their platinum LP. And Tom Petty's new record is full of songs written on six-string and 12-string acoustics.

Chapman played a Martin guitar — built by C.F. Martin & Co. in Nazareth, Pa. It is a handmade instrument constructed with care.

"I wrote and thanked her that night," said company chairman Christian F. Martin IV, whose great-great-grandfather founded the company in 1833.

At the company's plant, 90 craftsmen carefully perform by hand the nearly 300 steps necessary to turn Indian rosewood, Amazon Mahogany and Hawaiian koa into an instrument. Another 100 make the strings for the instrument.

The work is time-consuming. The wood is aged up to six months in the climate-controlled work area. Almost all of the work is done by hand, with the pearl inlay taking up to two weeks per guitar.

From start to finish, it takes three months to build a Martin guitar.

Most are Dreadnoughts, a widely copied acoustic instrument named after a class of World War I British battleships.

"Ask someone to draw an acoustic guitar and he'll draw a Dreadnought," Martin said.

The Dreadnought — which means "fear nothing" — was designed in 1931 by the company for country-western singers who needed a big, loud guitar. It is pear-shaped, with an extra wide and deep body to produce a stronger bass and clearer treble.

The original design is still the most popular, and Martin said 75 percent of the 8,500 instruments made this year at the plant will be Dreadnoughts.

This year, the company introduced its first acoustic bass. Priced between $2,050 and $2,350, the original allotment of 50 intruments were almost immediately sold out.

"We heard Tracy Chapman bought one the first day it was in the stores," Martin said.

The company now plans on building 350 this year, but even that won't fill all the orders. "We can't just crank up production," Martin said.

But most changes do not catch on. Martin Guitar introduced an acoustic guitar with a polished black finish. It didn't sell because musicians wanted the natural wood color.

"I thought it would fit with some bands who have outlaw images," Martin said.

"The guitar is thousands of years old. People wouldn't want us to change it much. They want to buy the guitar their father bought."

After a peak year in 1971 — when Martin produced 22,627 instruments, the market slowly declined. Electronic instruments became big in the late 1970s, and the nation suffered a recession, severely damaging business for the country's acoustic guitarmakers.

Martin's annual sales fell from $18 million to $12 million, and the company was forced to close factories in Connecticut and New York, as well as sell subsidiaries in Sweden and a drum company called Fibes in nearby Easton, Pa. About 330 of 550 employees were laid off.

The business started to turn around in 1985, when some musicians became tired of the electronic instrument sound. Also, the economy had rebounded enough that people could afford a Martin — which runs between $1,000 and $5,000.

Then came Susanne Vega's folk hit, "Luka" in 1987. She received three Grammy nominations for her song about child abuse. Then came Chapman's "Fast Cars," a bracing look at inner-city poverty that won three Grammys.

Oddly enough, the company's founder, Christian Frederick Martin, came to the United States in 1833 because guitars were regarded as a fad in Germany.

The Martins had been members of the Cabinet Makers Guild, and when Christian Martin attempted to set up a guitar-making business, the Violin Makers Guild attempted to stop him.

"They said it was just a fad, but they didn't want him to make the instruments" Martin said.

Although he successfully went to court and won the right to produce guitars, he decided to leave Germany and come to the United States.

He began building guitars in New York City, and was an immediate success.

"That's because the guitar is American," Martin said. "When people were moving out West, what would they play around the campfire? The guitar. A piano was too big for them to bring along."

Tired of the big city, he moved to Nazareth in northeastern Pennsylvania, where the company has survived through good and bad times.

Even in bad times, there will always be a market for a well-made guitar, said Martin. "Some artists won't use anything else."

Also, many artists who perform on electric guitars actually compose on acoustics. The Who's Pete Townshend, who uses one on the band's current reunion tour, mainly writes on acoustic guitars.

Still, Martin knows that today's acoustic success can be fleeting.

"It's a cyclical business. We don't have the clout to change the direction of music," he said.

But with some trends, such as the electronic instruments in the 1980s, the later models make the earlier ones obsolete. Guitars, however, can last forever.

"Acoustic instruments get better with time," Martin said. "The day you buy a guitar is the worst it will sound."

Midland High tennis star Luke Morrow will be a Midland College Chaparral come fall.

Morrow joins Chaparrals

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Luke Morrow, who teamed up with Harper Essex to bring Midland High School a state 5A doubles championship last spring, will become the first Tall City product to play for Midland College's nationally famed team since Richie Houdek in 1984-85.

MC Coach Joe Williams announced the signing of Morrow at a press conference Wednesday at the Midland Racquet Club. It was another step in rebuilding the 1989 national junior college champions.

Harper? Williams can't touch him until next year, since he still has a year of eligibility at Midland High, but he did indicate that the signing of Morrow might signify a turnaround in Midland high school tennis.

"WITH Morrow and Essex accomplishing what they did this last season and the development of Elizabeth Ameel, Steve Hoover (Midland High coach) has the program moving in the right direction." He just needs encouragement from below, Williams indicated.

"There has never been a lack of talent in Midland," Williams said. "It has been a case of working with it and developing the young players at the elementary school level."

Williams pointed out that the junior highs have good tennis facilities, but there is a severe drop off at the freshmen level.

But that's a topic for another day. Williams said Morrow's immediate value to the MC program will be as a doubles player. "realistically, Luke needs work on his singles game. His strong points are his athletic ability and his attitude."

"Also I love lefthanded servers," Williams said. "I had three this year and when we got to nationals, they were tough to handle. I think being lefthanded will make Morrow more effective in both doubles and singles."

LAST YEAR, Abilene's Scott Randolph was the deciding factor in the national tournament, "but West Texas players sometimes are hard to find."

Morrow will be joined by San Angelo's Jerald White on next season's team, but both better brush up on their languages.

"We will have two players from Denmark. Mohamed Ridaoui (Morocco) will be back as well as Jose "Pepi" Garcia from Mexico," said Williams. "And we will have one player for certain from France and possibly two."

Morrow, a mechanical engineering major, took MC over some offers from four-year colleges.

Success in the MC program is certain to attract attention from Division I schools. From last year's team, for example, Randolph signed with the University of Nebraska; Tommy Heiting is headed for the University of Iowa; Amine Boustani will be at the University of South Florida; David Fontaine is still pondering Wake Forest, Cal-Riverside and Southwest Texas State; while Robert Antou is going to the University of Arkansas on a partial scholarship.

Midland Angel infielder Cris Cron handles a line drive as Midland opens a 10-game homestand against Jackson Mets Wednesday night.

Angels hang on for win

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Every sport generally has winners. But sometimes there are WINNERS.

CAPITAL LETTERS, boldface or italic, it doesn't matter. There are simply some wins that mean a little extra. Such was the Midland Angels' 5-4 thriller over the Jackson Mets in the opener of a five-game series before 1,410 fans Wednesday at Angels Stadium.

The Angels were on the ropes during a ninth-inning Jackson rally, but newly-anointed stopper Luis Merejo came in with the bases loaded and one out to start an inning-ending double play. The hosts then filled the sacks themselves in the bottom of the frame before pinch-hitter Steve DeAngelis got himself plunked with a pitch to force home the winning run.

WHILE A win is a win whichever way it's cut, several Angels agreed that Wednesday's win was a special one.

"When Merejo got that double play, I thought we'd better win this game," Manager Max Oliveras said. "It was an ugly way to win the game, but we made it.

"This is the kind of game that can pump you up," first baseman Chris Cron said. "Something good is going to happen to this team."

The way Midland starter Mike Butcher was pitching early — and the way the Haloes hit in the middle innings — it didn't look like any cliffhanger finish would be needed.

Butcher blanked the Mets for the first five innings before faltering in the sixth. Still, the Angels' hard-luck starter left with a 4-1 lead, thanks to a single run in the fourth and three in the fifth.

Midland got its fourth-inning tally on a walk to Cron and singles by Mark Howie and Reed Peters, before seemingly putting the game away in the fifth.

GARY DiSarcina led off with a double off the left-field wall, then a walk to Chris Graves and an infield error loaded the bases for Bob Rose's sacrifice fly and a two-run double by Cron — his league-leading 68th and 69th RBI of the season.

Butcher faced only three batters above the minimum going into the sixth, but Craig Repoz led off with a single, stole second, reached third on a wild pitch and scored on an infield out by Tim Bogar. With two out, consecutive singles by Zoilo Sanchez, Howard Freiling and Johnny Monell plated another run — chasing Butcher in the process.

Moore never got over 'that' homer

By TOM TIMMERMANN
Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — Three years ago, a home run pitch delivered by major leaguer Donnie Moore sent him into a tailspin that came to a violent end this week in a murder-suicide attempt that left him dead and his wife critically wounded.

Police and acquaintances of Moore, a California Angels pitching ace whose career had bottomed out, said he shot his estranged wife during a quarrel Tuesday and then turned the gun on himself.

Moore's wife, Tonya, was listed in critical condition in an Anaheim hospital, suffering from multiple gunshot wounds.

Moore's body was found on the kitchen floor of his home in Anaheim, with a bullet wound to the head and a large-caliber handgun lying nearby, police Lt. Marc Hedgpeth said.

ACCORDING to Moore's agent, Dave Pinter, the couple, both 35, had been having marital problems and separated about a month ago.

Pinter said the two got into an argument after Moore's wife went to her estranged husband's house sometime Tuesday afternoon. After the shooting, she was driven to the hospital by the couple's daughter, Demetria, 17, who lived with her father.

Although there was no official explanation for what triggered the shootings, Pinter recalled that Moore never seemed to recover from serving up a ninth-inning home run pitch in a 1986 playoff game that knocked the Angels out of their first chance at a World Series berth.

"Ever since that home run, Donnie Moore was not himself," he said. "He was a completely different person. It was like day and night. He wished to God he could have gone to the series. He blamed himself."

PINTER traced the beginning of his client's professional troubles to Game 5 of the American League playoffs against the Boston Red Sox, when Moore came to the mound in relief with a chance to save the game and send the Angels to the World Series.

With two outs in the ninth and the Angels leading 5-4, he got to within one strike of winning the game.

But on a 1-and-2 pitch, Dave Henderson homered to put Boston ahead, 6-5. The Red Sox went on to win the game in extra innings and then won the next two games in Boston to advance to the World Series.

"He wasn't treated fairly," former Angels teammate Brian Downing, speaking of Moore, said in Toronto.

"He wasn't given credit for all the good that he did," Downing said. "There were 24 of us on the field that day. How could he be hung for one pitch? It's a tough drop from the top of the world to the bottom. Unfortunately, he never got to the top of the bubbles."

After that season, Moore suffered a series of injuries that eventually ended his career.

Moore played 13 years in the majors, pitching for the Chicago Cubs, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Atlanta before joining the Angels.

Murder, suicide—how could it happen to Donnie Moore?

Battles

Whenever I'd arrive in Scottsdale, Ariz., for the final weeks of spring training with the Midland Cubs, the first thing Donnie Moore wanted, even before he was advanced to the Texas League, was a report on the high school baseball races back in West Texas.

What was Lubbock Monterey's record? Would Midland Lee be a threat? Who was hot and who was not?

Somehow that memory makes what happened this week in Anaheim so unacceptable.

The Donnie Moore who pitched Lubbock Monterey to a state Class 4A baseball title and Ranger Junior College to a national junior college baseball championship seemed too well adjusted to do something like that.

Donnie Moore's roots were the kind that produced hominy grits, not murder and suicide.

THEY say the home run he surrendered to Dave Henderson just one out, one pitch away from putting the California Angels in World Series in 1986, gnawed at him and caused him to brood unnaturally and led to the erosion of a successful career as a relief pitcher.

That's also hard to accept. The Angels were leading the Boston Red Sox three games to one when Moore gave up that home run. It took a lot more people than Donnie to lose that series. It was far from a one-man effort.

On a 1-to-10 grading system of personal sports disasters. This was a 1 compared to what happened to Ralph Branca.

If ever a guy were tempted to slit his own throat before a cheering multitude, Old No. 13 was a candidate.

BRANCA came out of the Brooklyn Dodgers bullpen into the 1951 National League playoff game and gave up Bobby Thomson's shot-heard-round-the-world. And this wasn't blase Anaheim. This was in the Polo Grounds against the Dodgers' most despised rival, the Giants.

Mistakes, errors and failures are part of the game. Ask Roy Riegels, ask the Georgetown guard who blew the NCAA finals or the guy who was supposed to be guarding North Carolina State's Lorenzo Charles for Houston in another NCAA final.

Wasn't it Detroit's Isiah Thomas who made the "dumb" pass and that gave the Boston Celtics life and eventually the ticket to the NBA finals a few years back?

IF MOORE were that depressed, someone should have been alert enough to make sure he received counseling.

If there is any explanation, maybe it was that Donnie just never experienced failure when the chips were down. Sure, he had his successes and disappointments, but when the money was on the line, you could count on Moore to come through.

In 1972, he was 18-4 with Monterey and voted the state's outstanding player in leading the Plainsmen to a state championship.

At Ranger, he was even more remarkable. He was 18-1 for the year and won four of Ranger's five tournament victories. All he did in the other game was get the save. He pitched 30 innings in six calendar days. Of course he was All-American, All-tournament and MVP.

AND, OF course, he was the Chicago Cubs No. 1 draft pick in the supplementary draft in 1973 and in his first and only full season with Midland, was a big factor in the franchise's only Texas League pennant.

He set a Midland record for wins with a 14-8 won-lost mark. From mid-June on, Moore was 11-4. His 2.97 Earned Run Average was third best in the Texas League. Yes, that's a 2.97 while pitching in high-fly, bye-bye Midland, Texas. Donnie was the winning pitcher in El Paso that next to the last day of the season when they clinched the TL West, coming from 16 games back at mid-season.

Pitching teammates on that team included Mike Krukow, Bruce Sutter, Dennis Lamp, one 20-game winner and one Cy Young winner.

The year he gave up that home run to Dave Henderson he led California in saves. If it hadn't been for Moore's contribution, the Angels would never have been in the AL Playoff Series.

How did it happen? What led to the tragedy? Who knows. Maybe Donnie just lost touch with what really counted....how Monterey was doing and what kind of a threat Midland Lee posed.

JIM MURRAY

Jim Abbott shows he really is rare

Murray

Too often, the major league ballplayer is portrayed as a churlish, graceless individual who comes into public view brushing the little kid autograph seeker aside, refusing to pose for pictures, announcing irritatedly that all he owes his public is a .293 average or an appearance at a baseball card show for which he gets $10,000.

There are, to be sure, a few who fit this unflattering image. They take the $2 million and run. The fans' love is unrequited. The record books sometime identify these worthies as most valuable players. The public concept of what these letters stand for is quite different.

So, it gives me great pleasure today to check in with a different kind of a story, the account of a major league player who belongs to the world at large, is a citizen in good standing with the rest of the community, a man who cares.

So far as I know, Jim Abbott is the only man in a big league uniform ever to win the Sullivan Award as the nation's outstanding amateur athlete. He's the only one in a big league uniform who only has one hand. Jim Abbott is the only reason I know of to be glad there's a designated hitter rule in the American League.

WE ALL know what kind of pitcher Jim Abbott is — eight wins, six losses, 62 strikeouts in 101 2/3 innings, an ERA of 3.45. But I have a clipping from an Indianapolis newspaper that shows what kind of a person he is.

The circumstances require a bit of explanation. On the morning of April 17, little 5-year-old Erin Bower went with her mother to the local K-mart store in the Castleton Farms section of Indianapolis. There was this tube of toothpaste on the counter. Erin picked it up. It exploded. Some cretin with a grudge against the store — or the world — had placed a bomb in it.

It didn't kill Erin. It just blew off her left hand. You don't even want to think about it.

IN ALL the outpouring of sympathy for little Erin, one letter came marked with the logo of the California Angels. It read:

"Dear Erin:

"Perhaps somewhere later in your lifetime you will properly understand this letter and the feelings that go behind it. Regardless, I wanted to send something along now after being made aware of your terrible accident.

"As your parents have probably told you, I was born without a right hand. That automatically made me different from the other kids I was around. But you know what? It made me different only in their eyes. You see, I figured that's what the good Lord wanted me to work with. So it was my responsibility to become as good as I could at whatever I chose to do, regardless of my handicap.

"I just won my first major league game. When the final out was made, a lot of things went through my mind. I thought of my parents and all the help they provided; my brother and his support; and all of my friends along the way. The only thing, Erin, that I didn't pay attention to was my handicap. You see, it had nothing to do with anything.

"You're a young lady now with a tremendous life ahead of you. Whether you want to be an athlete, a doctor, lawyer or anything else, it will be up to you, and only you, how far you go. Certainly there will be some tough times ahead, but with dedication and love of life, you'll be successful in any field you choose.

I'll look forward to reading about you in the future.

"Again, my best, Jim Abbott, California Angels."

NOW THAT, you have to say, is the way to get an autograph. And the news from Indianapolis, as reported in the Star, is good: Erin, who turned 6 today, has been fitted with an electrically-powered hand at the Medical Prosthetics Center in Houston. It'll do everything a real hand will do — except throw the curve. If Erin wants to do that, she'll have to learn to do it with her other hand. As Jim Abbott has shown, that's no problem.

Flames to tour Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — The Calgary Flames will begin a two-team, eight-game NHL tour of the Soviet Union on Sept. 14 with a game in Leningrad.

The Stanley Cup champion Flames will play Leningrad Khimik and Kiev Sokol before finishing in Moscow against the Soviet Wings and Central Red Army, the Soviet Elite League champions, NHL and Soviet officials said at a news conference Tuesday.

The Washington Capitals will start their series in Moscow on Sept. 15 against Spartak and Moscow Dynamo, then play Riga Dynamo and finish with a match in Leningrad against a SKA, Red Army team.

Before arriving in the Soviet Union, the Flames are scheduled to play in Prague and the Capitals are scheduled to play in Stockholm. Both warmup series are scheduled for Sept. 5-6.

The series marks the first visit to the Soviet Union by NHL teams since the eight-game series between the Soviets and Team Canada in 1972. Four Soviet teams are scheduled to tour the NHL during the upcoming season.

Mid City beats Lamesa

Midlanders advance to LL bi-district play

From Staff Reports

ODESSA— The Mid-City All-Stars advanced to the bi-district round of the Texas Little League tournament by defeating the Lamesa All-Stars with a come-from-behind rally at Floyd Gwinn Park Wednesday.

The Midlanders won on the four-hit pitching of Jeff Bishop and the power-hitting of Clay Johnston, who accounted for four of the five Mid-City runs.

This marked the first time in the 25-year existence of the Mid-City League than an all-star team has won the District III championship.

Mid-City will advance to a 2-out-of-3 series against the winner of San Angelo District VI, which ends next Tuesday or Wednesday. The bi-district games will be July 28-29-30 with the game on the 29th at the Mid City complex, 5:30 p.m.

Mid-City scored a run in the first with two out when Johnston bounced a line drive off the third baseman's glove and Bishop, who had reached third on a fielder's choice and two stolen bases, came home.

Lamesa countered in the home first on Ernie Morales' two-run homer. Jacob Vera was on base with a walk. Lamesa struck again for a 3-1 lead in the second when Derek Cross led off with a single and scored on a fielder's choice grounder by Jeff Burrows.

Lamesa's Alvan Cantu struck out five of six batters to silence Mid-City bats in the second and third. Cantu wound up with 11 strikeouts in 22 batters faced. However, with one out in the fourth, Johnston hit a shot to right center, and then stole second and third on successive pitches. As Carlos "Beaner" Montez struck out for the second out, Johnston stole home when the third strike eluded the catcher.

Joe Bishop struck out Joe Manuel Lopez to open the home fourth, but Lamesa threatened when Derek Cobb and Louis Chavira walked, advanced on a passed ball. Bishop responded by striking out the next two batters.

Behind 3-2 going into the crucial sixth, Mid-City stirred to life when Rob Lawson led off with a single up the middle and stole second as Cantu fanned Bishop. Chad Bailey lined a double to right center to tie the game at three and up came Johnston.

Johnston promptly doubled down the right field line, scoring Bailey, then stole second and third. On a surprise play, Clay then pilfered home as the catcher returned the ball to the pitcher after a pitch.

In the home sixth, there was no lessening of the tension. With one out, Bishop issued two walks and both moved into scoring position on a passed ball. Bishop was equal to the test, striking out the next batter and getting Jeff Burrows on a grounder to Lawson at second for the game-ending out.

Bishop was 3-0 with four, one and four hitters. Rob Lawson was 2-0 with a three and one hitter. Philip Atnipp had one save.

Clay Johnston led all batters, going 11-for-16 for a .688 average. Mid City posted a 5-0 record in the tourney and is 25-2 for the second. Mid City outscored the opposition 56-6 in five tourney games.

NFL owners compromise

By GERALD ESKENAZI
N.Y. Times News Service

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. — Jim Finks's role as the favorite to succeed Pete Rozelle as commissioner was apparently revived Wednesday at the meeting here of National Football League owners.

The name of the 61-year-old Finks, the New Orleans Saints' president, was the only one submitted to the owners by the league's search committee on July 6.

But because of 11 abstentions by a dissenting bloc, Finks failed to gain the 19 votes he needed from the owners of the NFL's 28 teams.

THAT BLOC was dissolved Wednesday in exchange for a voice in the selection process, which had been in the hands of group of the league's older owners.

The dissenters, most of them relatively new owners, contended that they had been bypassed in the search for a new commissioner. They insisted on having a voice in naming Rozelle's successor, especially because the office was going to be restructured, with long-term consequences.

Two of the older owners, Wellington Mara of the Giants and Art Modell of the Cleveland Browns, along with Rozelle, helped create the accommodation that brought the factions together.

In exchange for Mara's promise to dissolve the original search committee and create a new one, Jerry Jones, owner of the Dallas Cowboys, announced that the dissenters were "dissolving the bloc."

Former corner men put the knock on Mike Tyson

by PHIL BERGER
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — For 35 fights, they were Mike Tyson's corner men. But in February, when Tyson fought Frank Bruno, the heavyweight champion worked without Kevin Rooney, his trainer, and Steve Lott and Matt Baranski, his seconds, for the first time in his professional career.

For the old bunch it was the end of a long relationship.

Rooney had been in the Catskill, N.Y., gym the day Tyson was let out of a juvenile detention facility so that Cus D'Amato could assess him as a boxer.

Baranski also went back to that formative period, and it was in Lott's apartment that Tyson would sleep when, as a young pro, he stayed in New York City between fights.

So what was it like for them when Tyson replaced them?

"The one thing that bothers me more than anything is not hearing from Mike," said Lott, who bought a $300 ticket to see the Bruno fight.

"We were like brothers. I was cooking and cleaning for him. Then, nothing. No communication. It's so sad when your best friend is against you for no reason. Even if Mike told me, 'I have to do this,' I'd say, Fine. Great. Business is business. But he never even talked to me about it."

Rooney is less conciliatory.

"I'm disgusted with the way he acts," he said of Tyson. "That he turns his back on me. That he's allowed Don King to call the shots. King didn't want me in there. The more money Mike paid me, the less King could grab."

"This whole thing, it's bad karma, and sooner or later it's going to come back to Tyson," said Rooney. "Maybe not this time. But sometime, somehow. You can't do that. You don't treat people like that."

Baranski could not be reached for comment. But in February, Baranski said Tyson had not personally told him he was no longer needed, he simply had not received his marching orders for the Bruno fight.

"It didn't surprise me," said Baranski at the time. "Mike was always a kind of a selfish kid."

Boxing

Tyson-Holyfield

Most fight experts are puzzled about why King is not moving with haste to get a Tyson-Evander Holyfield bout made. It is a match that is expected to be worth $20 million to Tyson, and presumably, a reasonable amount for King, the heavyweight champion's adviser and promoter.

Even Dan Duva, Holyfield's promoter, can't figure it. He has even asked if there is some obvious angle that he's missing about King's go-slow tactics.

Duva has assumed the worst about King in the baffling Tyson-Holyfield scenario, that King is carrying his enmity toward the Duvas to the extreme by stalling on the match with the hope that he can freeze Duva and his father, Lou, out of the picture.

But, Duva said, "If that's how King is figuring things, he's figuring wrong."

Duva said his arrangement with Holyfield calls for the Duvas to participate in a Tyson-Holyfield fight as long as the bout is staged before 1991.

And with Holyfield, the World Boxing Council's and the World Boxing Association's No. 1-ranked heavyweight, it would take major league evasive tactics by King to avoid having Tyson meet his mandatory obligation against Holyfield before 1991.

Duran, Hearns eye Sugar

An announcement is imminent on whether it will be Roberto Duran or Thomas Hearns for Ray Leonard's next opponent.

Duran would take a lot less money and Hearns wants parity with Leonard.

Braves making impact on NL

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

No one expects the Atlanta Braves to make much of an impact in the National League West this year. The National League East, however, is another story.

The last-place Braves, no longer a factor in their own divisional race, have been giving the top teams in the NL East as much as they can handle these days.

That included Wednesday night's 3-2, 12-inning victory over Montreal, giving the Braves two victories in their three-game series with the NL East leaders. Earlier, the Braves won two of four games from the New York Mets, another NL East contender.

"We understand that we can't take any team for granted," said Expos pitcher Bryn Smith, the loser in Wednesday night's game in Montreal. "We knew we had a big job on our hands going up against (John) Smoltz. But maybe it's a blessing in disguise, telling us that it's time to bear down."

Coupled with Chicago's 4-0 win over Los Angeles, the Expos saw their first-place lead shaved to 2½ games over the Cubs. The third-place Mets, 8-2 winners over Houston, moved within three games of the Expos.

Tommy Gregg had the Braves' game-winning hit, an RBI single in the 12th. Gregg singled up the middle to drive in Oddibe McDowell, who also figured in a first-inning run.

Expos reliever Joey Hesketh, 5-3, came in to get the first two Atlanta batters in the 12th and then gave up a walk to McDowell, who promptly stole second to set the stage for Gregg.

Mark Eichhorn, 3-2, picked up the win, with Joe Boever collecting his 17th save.

Dale Murphy, suffering through one of his worst seasons, had a solo homer for the Braves, his seventh.

"We usually have some trouble in Montreal," Braves manager Russ Nixon said. "This should pick the ballclub up going into New York. It's a great start to a road trip."

Cubs 4, Dodgers 0

Mike Bielecki pitched a three-hitter and Damon Berryhill capped a three-run first inning with a suicide squeeze bunt as Chicago beat Los Angeles.

Bielecki, 9-5, struck out six and walked one on the way to his second career shutout and second of the season. The right-hander ran his career record against Los Angeles to 3-0 with his third complete game of the year, retiring 20 of the last 22 batters.

The Cubs batted around in the first inning against Mike Morgan, 6-10, scoring three runs on an RBI single by Ryne Sandberg, a scoring groundout by Mark Grace and Berryhill's bunt to the right of the mound.

"I had such a bad outing the last time that I wanted to go out tonight and have a good game and just try to throw strikes," Bielecki said. "I got the first guy out every time, and once you do that, you can always stop a rally. We played an outstanding game tonight, but I just played a small part of it." Mets 8, Astros 2

David Cone pitched a four-hitter for his fourth straight victory and Darryl Strawberry hit his 20th home run to lead New York.

Cone, 7-5, struck out eight without a walk in pitching his fourth complete game in 19 starts.

Glenn Davis hit two solo home runs, making him the first player in Houston history to get at least 20 homers in five consecutive seasons.

Jim Clancy, 5-7, has lost three consecutive decisions. He began the game with a 7.17 earned-run average in his last five starts, and gave up five runs in 4 2-3 innings.

"This team has always bounced back from adversity. We're not all the way back this year, but I liked the way we came back from the doubleheader," said manager Davey Johnson, whose team lost a doubleheader to the Astros at the start of the series before winning the next two games.

Giants 7, Cardinals 5

Greg Litton hit a pinch-hit, three-run homer and Candy Maldonado drove in three runs as San Francisco extended its winning streak to five games.

The victory gave the Giants, who went 6-1 on the homestand, the best record in the majors at 57-37. They are 20 games over .500 for the first time since Sept. 9, 1978.

Jeff Brantley, 6-0, got the victory after relieving starter Trevor Wilson in the fifth inning. All of Brantley's wins have come in relief since June 29. He is the first San Francisco pitcher to win his first six decisions since Juan Marichal started 10-0 in 1966.

The Giants, whose 34-15 home record is the best in the NL, chased Scott Terry, 7-8, in the fifth inning when they scored five runs.

Phillies 9, Reds 4

Ricky Jordan had a career-high five hits and led a four-homer barrage off Tom Browning as Philadelphia completed a series sweep of Cincinnati.

Jordan and Randy Ready hit two-run homers off Browning, 7-9, and Dickie Thon and Von Hayes had solo homers for the Phillies, who completed their first sweep at Riverfront Stadium since 1987.

The Reds have lost eight of their last nine games and 25 of their last 35 to fall to fourth place in the West.

Dennis Cook, 4-3, snapped a personal three-game losing streak by scattering five hits in his second complete game in eight starts.

Padres 9, Pirates 1

Ed Whitson became the NL's second 13-game winner and third in the major leagues as he pitched a three-hitter for San Diego.

Whitson, 13-6, is 4-0 this season against Pittsburgh. He did not win his 13th game last season until Sept. 24, the Padres' 154th game.

Whitson was given all the runs he needed when the Padres built a 6-0 lead off Pirates starter Doug Drabek, 7-7, through the first six innings.

Joe Carter's bat smoking, again

Associated Press

Joe Carter, the one-time Midland Cubs star, is the new hottest hitter in baseball. He wants to overtake the old one.

"Maybe I can catch Kevin Mitchell now," Carter said Wednesday night after the fourth three-homer game of his career helped the Cleveland Indians over the Minnesota Twins 10-1.

"I'll need about five more nights like that," joked Carter, who with 19 homers is still 13 shy of Mitchell's major league-leading total.

Carter tied Lou Gehrig's American League record for three-homer games and drove in six runs. He homered twice on Tuesday and has five home runs in his last six at-bats.

"I thought he was going to be player of the week in one night," the Twins' Al Newman said.

Carter hit two-run homers in the first and third innings off Allan Anderson, 9-9. After walking in the fifth, he hit an eighth-inning solo homer off German Gonzalez, and added a sacrifice fly in the ninth.

He tied a major-league record in becoming the 15th player to hit five home runs in two games. He set a Cleveland record, topping the four by Rocky Colavito and Willie Kirkland.

Carter credited teammate Pete O'Brien, who has urged Carter to be patient and to keep his back foot firmly planted in the batter's box.

"I got away from that the first game of the series and was jumping at the ball," he said of his 0-for-4 night. "I took some extra batting practice Tuesday and got back to employing the theories."

John Farrell, 5-9, pitched a two-hitter for his first victory since June 26. He struck out five and walked two in his third complete game, allowing to hits to Jim Dwyer.

White Sox 11, Yankees 5

Ivan Calderon's double snapped a 5-5 tie in the seventh and Carlton Fisk hit his 329th home run, a three-run drive in the eighth. Chicago won its sixth straight overall and its eighth straight in Comiskey Park.

The second game of the scheduled doubleheader was called after four innings with no score. It will be made up only if it affects the pennant race.

Chicago, on its longest winning streak since the final week of the 1987 season, got 14 hits off Clay Parker, Lee Guetterman and Dale Mohorcic.

Guetterman, 2-3, walked Harold Baines to open the seventh with the score tied at 5. Calderon doubled to right-center field on the next pitch and scored on Darryl Boston's single.

Brewers 7, Royals 1

Chris Bosio, 10-6, pitched a five-hitter and struck out eight. Milwaukee got 17 hits in snapping a six-game losing streak, its longest since April 1988.

Robin Yount stretched his hitting streak to 10 games and set a Brewers record with his 17th consecutive stolen base, one of five steals by Milwaukee. Jim Gantner and Greg Brock had three hits each and Gantner stole home on the front end of a delayed double steal.

Charlie Leibrandt, 5-9, gave up nine hits and four runs in 4 2-3 innings. He has won only twice in 12 starts since May 12.

Red Sox 4, Rangers 0

Mike Boddicker won his fourth straight start, combining with Rob Murphy on a five-hitter in the 93-degree heat at Arlington Stadium.

Boddicker, 8-7, allowed three hits, struck out two and walked two in 6 1-3 innings before Murphy finished for his fifth save, striking out five.

Charlie Hough, 5-11, allowed singles to five of the first seven batters he faced.

Mariners 7, Orioles 0

Greg Briley hit two solo home runs and Scott Bradley had a three-run homer in Memorial Stadium as Seattle snapped Baltimore's five-game winning streak.

Brian Holman, 4-2 since being acquired from Montreal in the Mark Langston deal, gave up seven hits in seven innings and struck out six. Brian Holton, 4-6, allowed five runs and six hits in two innings.

Ruidoso in 3rd purse hike

From Staff Reports

RUIDOSO DOWNS, NEW MEXICO — Ruidoso Downs General Manager H. Rick Henson announced the third purse hike for the overnight races.

This increase will raise the bottom purse to $2,500, and give the overnight purses an average of $3,300 per race and will go in effect on July 27.

FRIDAY'S 11th race will feature ten three-year-old QuarterHorses in a $5,000 allowance at 440 yards. Mitey Easy Dash, who was third in the Rainbow Derby Consolation to Merganser, will break from the ninth post position with jockey Alex Baldillez. BJ Flyer, who was sixth in the Rainbow Derby Consolation, was also entered, with jockey Jacky Martin, for Friday's race.

Playboy Special, third behind Elaina Rae in a July 9 allowance, will break next to Mitey Easy Dash. Trained by Mike Cascio, the gelding did not have a rider named at entry time.

Shining Spirit, trained by Randy Sanders, has been away from the races since a fourth-place finish in the Rainbow Derby Trials behind Wicked Wind.

Another colt with a chance Friday is Ima Dash Too, trained by Mike Lyles. By Dash For Cash, Ima Dash Too, was an allowance winner on June 16 and has been away from the races since that win.

Brewer vets recommend team 'attitude' meeting

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — With the Milwaukee Brewers sinking fast in the American League East, a pair of veterans said the team should hold a special meeting because they thought some teammates might have the wrong priorities.

"I don't like the attitude of the team," second baseman Jim Gantner said. "I saw it coming out of spring training. I don't know what it is, but something's missing. There's no chemistry."

The Brewers lost their sixth straight game since the All-Star break Tuesday, dropping them nine games below .500 and 11 games behind Baltimore in the AL East.

Third baseman Paul Molitor, who played with Gantner and Robin Yount on the 1982 Milwaukee team that went to the World Series, said he planned to call for a meeting today.

Non-favorites Jacklin, Floyd reflect on past at Troon

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

TROON, Scotland — England's 45-year-old Tony Jacklin and America's 46-year-old Raymond Floyd, the captains of the European and United States Ryder Cup teams, played a friendly match Wednesday over the hard-baked Royal Troon course in their final practice session before Friday's start of the 118th Open championship.

Neither of these former United States Open champions (Floyd in 1986 and Jacklin in 1970) are expected to win this Open, so Floyd can at least leave Troon knowing he beat Jacklin for 20 pounds Wednesday.

Floyd's victory, however, is no omen of things to come when the Ryder Cup matches are held at the Belfry in England, Sept. 22-24. Neither captain will play in the matches.

But the Ryder Cup matches will be on golfers' and spectators' minds as the world's best — and some of its not-so-great — golfers battle through the British Open.

Should a European win for the fifth time in the last six British Opens or an American win for the first time since 1983, his respective side in the Ryder Cup may get a boost of confidence.

"It would just be a confidence factor for the Europeans or Americans," Jacklin said. "But we certainly won't be overconfident going into those Ryder Cup matches that are totally different from a regular championship such as this."

But if bookmaker selections mean anything, there is a forecast that a non-American will win this Open, as has been the case in the last five Opens, which were won by Seve Ballesteros of Spain in 1984, Sandy Lyle, the Scot, in 1985, Greg Norman of Australia in 1986, Nick Faldo of England in 1987 and Ballesteros again in 1988. Non-American golfers have won four of the last eight majors and Curtis Strange has won two, both United States Opens.

Floyd said one reason Americans had lost domination of the Ryder Cup was that they were more concerned with winning money than with winning tournaments.

"Curtis Strange is the only one who has taken the bull by the horns," Floyd said. "I think the game has changed in America.

"I think guys leave college, come on the pro tour, and in three months they look in their bank and they have three-quarters of a million dollars in there. They never in their life thought they'd have that much money. I think it changes their attitude about playing pro golf.

"On the other hand, you have players around the world, no matter how good they were, who were still not recognized as great players until they could come to America and compete and win. They still have a strong desire to come win in America and do not come to America for money.

"That's what's changed the structure of the game and made it equal because the American player doesn't have that strong desire to win and win majors anymore. He has the strong desire to win all this money."

Jacklin said: "I think all your great players throughout time have only cared about winning, winning majors and being the best of the best. Despite all the money around your great players will come through."

The European captain thought that maybe the school of hard knocks had produced stronger Ryder Cup players for his side than Floyd's college boys.

"In Europe we're still at a stage that the majority of the young people coming into the game of golf have had a tough upbringing and did not have it very easy coming along," Jacklin said.

"We don't have college scholarships. They may not start as an assistant pro making clubs like I had to do. But nothing was easy. They had to work hard."

But after losing the Ryder Cup the last two times, Floyd said he felt the players who will be on the 12-man American team were different from the ones who constantly beat the British team years ago. There is the touch of crusade this time.

"In those days it was an honor to be picked to the Ryder Cup team because it was our all-star team," Floyd said. "The competition was one-sided. But now the players say they want to be on the team to get the cup back."

It won't be easy.

MORROW—

WITH A couple of more tournaments this summer before the fall program begins at MC, Morrow will be trying out a new, lighter racquet.

"The racquet he has been using is real stiff," explains Williams. "Physically, Luke is in better shape than anyone I've got. He has strength and power and what we are looking for is control and consistency, so he will go to a lighter racquet."

Joe adds, "I like for my players to hit the ball as hard as they can, as long as they can control the ball."

Morrow will be walking into a challenging fall schedule with the 1984-85 team, which won three individual national champions, coming back for a dual meet Oct. 28 at the Midlander. "Three players on that team are teaching pros," notes Williams.

The Chaps will make two trips to Nebraska in the fall to face NCAA Division I opposition and "We will face the Southwest Conference teams this fall in the tournament at Abilene's Fairway Oaks."

IN THE spring, Williams is dedicated to bringing the best in college tennis to Midland, for both the exposure it will give MC and the challenge it will offer his players, as well as the opportunity to impress some coaches.

"We have commitments from three Division I schools—the University of New Mexico, UT-San Antonio and Southwest Texas State. We want as many Division I teams as possible.

"We haven't had a big time college tournament since the fall tournament was abandoned. Some of the top college tennis players in the country came here for that one. It will be April 13-15 and it will be an Open format."

Williams may be right about the loss of the big time tournament, but the MC program, well, that's so close to big time that it's scary.

ANGELS—

HALO HOOPS — DeAngelis went hitless in 29 at-bats during the Angels' recent Eastern trip, but Oliveras still picked him to hit for Howie over red-hot Danny Grunhard.

Off the field, the Barry Sykes controversy seems to be over after Midland general manager Bill Davidson spoke with TL president Carl Sawatski during the All-Star break.

Davidson promised no repeat of the July 4 incident in which Sykes, the Angels' public address announcer, was ejected for violating a National Association rule prohibiting umpire baiting via the PA system.

"It was the league's decision and interpretation that we were doing things out of character for baseball," Davidson said. "We have no intention of doing something that would cause our announcer to be thrown out.

"Frankly, it was an embarassment."

Though he seemed subdued Wednesday, Sykes promised some new twists in his style that would not run afoul of the league.

"I understand their decision, and I'll abide," Sykes said. "I just have to come up with some new routines.

"I don't want to take away from the game, but I do want to make things worthwhile for the fans," Sykes added.

Brister predicts 10 Steeler wins

Associated Press

Pittsburgh quarterback Bubby Brister is nothing if not optimistic.

Brister reported to training camp Wednesday and boldly predicted the Steelers — coming off their worst season in 20 years — could win 10 or 11 games.

NFL

"We can get a lot of things done this season. We're not a bad football team," he said. "We're not a 5-11 football team, we're a lot better team than that. I thought it would be in my best interests to be here, and I'm here and ready to go."

Brister, in the option year of his contract, considered not reporting on time, but said, "I'm not in a financial position to stay away. ... I thought it would be bad for the fans, my teammates and me.

BRISTER, one of the NFL's lowest-paid quarterbacks last year when he earned about $180,000, no longer wants a big-money three-year contract. Instead, he reportedly would accept a one-year deal worth more than the estimated $375,000 that backup Todd Blackledge will be paid.

Veteran offensive lineman Craig Wolfley and linebacker Tyronne Stowe signed contracts, but free agents Louis Lipps, Terry Long and Troy Johnson were missing as the Steelers opened their 21st training camp under Coach Chuck Noll.

Also absent were seven draft picks, including all of their early-rounders except fourth-round linebacker Jerrol Williams, who signed Tuesday.

Starting Over

Buffalo, which came within a game of making the Super Bowl, began training camp Wednesday with a number of question marks. But Coach Marv Levy wasn't concerned.

"I think teams are constantly in a state of flux," Levy said, singling out the offensive line, wide receiver and defensive back as positions that are the most up in the air. "I don't think you ever say, 'There's our team and that's who we're going to play for the next six years.'"

Staying Healthy

Cleveland Coach Bud Carson is searching for ways to protect his key players while dealing with what he considers to be a manpower shortage.

"It's something that we're not quite sure how to do. For three games we'll be playing with 80 players instead of 110 or 120, so that means there will be more banging on some of our top players than we want," Carson said Wednesday as the Browns went through skill tests. They begin two-a-day practice sessions Thursday.

A new league rule allows teams to begin training camp with 80 players, a lot less than Carson, and many other coaches, would like to have available.

"We're not going to be able to run a camp with as much contact as I would like. I think that with that number of players, there won't be as much work on the field," Carson said. "We'll have some walk-through practices, a lot of classroom work and shorter practices. At least the players should be mentally fresh."

Secondaries

David Holmes, Miami's fourth-round pick, reported to training camp and joined the battle for jobs in the Dolphins' secondary.

The rookie from Syracuse missed two days of practice before ending a brief contract holdout. But five of the Dolphins' 12 draft choices remain unsigned, including first-round picks Sammie Smith and Louis Oliver, a free safety.

Second-year strong safety Jarvis Williams will start. Holmes, rookie J.B. Brown and second-year man Rodney Thomas are among eight cornerbacks in camp.

Holmes was a two-year starter for the Orangemen. He had six career interceptions and as a senior broke up 11 passes.

"He's tough," Coach Don Shula said. "He has played both corner and safety, and we think he has the ability to play corner. We're going to give him his first shot there."

Showing Off

Michael Timpson, one of New England's two fourth-round picks, wasn't a star as a wide receiver at Penn State. But he's going to get plenty of chances to show what he can do with the Patriots.

With veteran Irving Fryar and No. 1 pick Hart Lee Dykes not in camp, Timpson will have a shot at displaying his skills.

"Obviously, he's not as advanced in the sophisticated passing style of the NFL," Patriots' player personnel director Dick Steinberg said Wednesday. "He's going to have to learn a lot more than someone who comes from another school where they throw more. But he's a bright enough kid who can learn those things."

One area where there's no question about Timpson is his speed. He reached the semifinals in the 200-meters at the U.S. Olympic Trials last year and has a personal best of 20.23 seconds.

No Thanks

Kansas City's top draft pick, Nebraska linebacker Derrick Thomas, and leading receiver Stephone Paige have turned down contract offers.

Thomas, the fourth pick overall in the draft, is not close to signing, his agent said.

"We're a distance apart yet," said agent Mark Ukra of Beverly Hills, Calif.

Paige, the only offensive player to start all 16 games for the Chiefs last season, is one of 11 veterans still unsigned. He received his contract offer June 1 and it was rejected by his agent, Edward Sewell, on June 28. Sewell said he hasn't heard from Peterson since then, virtually assuring that Paige will not show up for the opening of training camp Thursday.

LeMOND LOSES JERSEY— Greg LeMond lost the leader's yellow jersey in the Tour de France Wednesday when France's Laurent Fignon to finish third in the 17th stage, a 100-mile leg from Briancon to l'Alpe d'Huez. LeMond was fifth, 1:19 behind Fignon. The difference allowed Fignon to take over the overall lead by 26 seconds.

LONGO WINS AGAIN— Jeannie Longo of France scored another convincing stage victory Wednesday in the women's Tour de France. For the second straight day, Longo won easily, capturing the 50-mile seventh stage from Briancon to St. Jean-de Maurienne in the Alps. Maria Canins of Italy, like Longo a two-time champion, was second, 1:33 behind. She trails Longo in the overall standings by 7:04.

Yanks' Steinbrenner is getting restless

CHICAGO (AP) — After watching the New York Yankees lose the first game of Wednesday's doubleheader to the Chicago White Sox 11-5, George Steinbrenner was making threats again.

"We're still in the race," the Yankees owner said, "but if we can only play .500 ball the rest of the way, they'll be some guys looking for work next year."

Steinbrenner, for at least the fourth time in two months, gave Manager Dallas Green a vote of confidence — for now. Steinbrenner said any decisions would be made after the season.

"We'll sit down and look how the team does and any judgements will be made by the front office," Steinbrenner said, adding that Green and his coaches, have contracts "and will not be interferred with. I'm a very patient fellow, and why make changes just to make changes."

"If you're asking me, 'Are there going to be any managerial changes?' the answer is no," Steinbrenner said. "Dallas is doing as well as he can do. Dallas is doing a good job and is suffering like I am. But, there are guys out there who look like they don't seem to be coming together. They don't understand that they have to get going soon, or else it will be too late."

The Yankees owner, talking about New York's 1977 and 1978 World Series champions, said, "that team would have grabbed the opportunity to pick up ground, because Baltimore finally lost today."

Steinbrenner said the Yankees pitching "stinks right now." In particular, he found fault with relievers Lee Guetterman and Dale Mohorcic. "He and Mohorcic have really hurt us," Steinbrenner said.

Steinbrenner said his team doesn't "understand that they have to get going soon, or else it will be too late." He compared them to his other pastime, thoroughbred racing.

"I had a horse like that in a race that was at the top of the stretch," he said, "and he died right at the Meadowlands."

He also complained about Wednesday's umpiring crew — Larry Young, Jim Joyce, Ken Kaiser, Jim McKean.

"(It's) the same group that Frank Robinson has been complaining about," Steinbrenner said referring to the Baltimore manager. "We got a bad call at third base in the fifth to take us out of a big inning, but this is the same group of umpires that Frank Robinson criticized so brutally.

"But I'm not going to criticize these guys as far as being what he called a racial thing. There's no doubt in my mind, that these umpires would never do anything like that to Frank. But, when he says they were bad, they were not good tonight."

NFL okays new league

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. (AP) — NFL owners gave the go-ahead Wednesday to their new international spring league, which will probably begin play in the spring of 1991.

The vote was 27 with one abstention, the Chicago Bears, who said they wanted more time.

The league, to be known as the World American Football League, will have 12 teams, four based in Europe and eight in North and Central America.

The league will be run by Tex Schramm, the former president of the Dallas Cowboys and overseen by a committee of seven NFL owners or team presidents. It was authorized to being no later than 1991.

"We're looking no further than that," said Dan Rooney, chairman of the steering commimttee overseeing the new league. "That doesn't rule out 1990, but we have a lot of work to do."

Schramm, who has been touring prospective sites, said one problem was television contracts in Europe, where there is no one network. He said that even if the league is sold to Eurovision, a continent wide outfit, it would have to convince stations to take the game.

The other problem is length of game.

"They want two-hour blocs," Schramm said. "They don't have three-hour sporting events the way we do."

On the other hand, there seems to be little question that some combination or regular and cable television networks in the United States will carry games. ABC and NBC, which are losing baseball to CBS next year, are the likely candidates, although Schramm said all three major networks have expressed an interest.

The European cities are expected to be London, Frankfurt, Milan and Barcelona.

Montreal and Mexico City will most likely represent Canada and Mexico, respectively, with New York a sure U.S. franchise. The others will come from a group that includes Nashville, San Antonio, Jacksonville, Orlando, Charlotte, Birmingham and one of two cities in California — San Jose or Sacramento.

SWC may switch cables

DALLAS (AP) - A cable television company is involved in discussions with the Southwest Conference about syndicating conference football and basketball games, SWC Commissioner Fred Jacoby says.

Jacoby said Tuesday the SWC is considering using SportsChannel America, a small cable company from Woodbury, N.Y. The conference has used Raycom Sports to syndicate conference sporting events since 1984 under a contract that runs through the 1989-90 season.

The commissioner said talks with SportsChannel are in the preliminary stage and if an offer is made, Raycom has the right of refusal.

Jacoby declined to say how much, but says the SportsChannel deal would increase the conference's television revenue.

SportsChannel now televises games of the National Hockey League, Notre Dame, the World Basketball League and women's professional bowling. The company has a contract with NBC for next year.

Odessa to host Kung Fu event

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The Alex Tseng Wing Chun Kung Fu tournament, usually held in January, will be Nov. 9-10 this year to accomodate competitors who have scheduling conflicts with the January date.

The 10th running of the Kung Fu tournament will draw students from Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Oklahoma, Louisiana, competing in both full contact and kata competitions.

Odessa's Chuck Swedberg won the overall title last year, but it isn't known if he will be back to defend his crown.

Swedberg recently had cancer surgery in Odessa, but inside stitches should be dissolved withing five weeks. He is currently doing light exercises and will begin his power training when he receives doctor's clearance.

This year's tournament promises to be the biggest ever, due in part, to the national publicity received by Swedberg for his undefated professional record.

Swedberg, a 6-8 fighter, has earned black sashes in both Wing Chun and Iron Palm Kung Fu, and a black belt in the Japanese power technique, Neko-Do. He is trained and managed by Tseng and Master Shihan Moore of Ventura, Calif., who is a ninth degree black belt.

Tseng, a native of Hong Kong, has been teaching Kung Fu for more than 20 years and now lives in Odessa.

Barfield is more than a ballplayer

By IRA BERKOW
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Melody Simmons is a reporter for The Baltimore Evening Sun who one day recently walked into the Orioles' locker room.

She was on her day off and was working on a freelance project, a book about the experiences of major league ballplayers when they were in the Little League.

Harmless enough.

As she entered, she heard a few players begin chanting a word with vulgar connotations. Then a few more players picked it up. It was, she'd later tell a friend, intimidating.

WHEN THE Orioles' front office heard about it, they said it was a "prank that got out of hand." The word, they said, was just a current version of "broad."

"I looked up the word in the Dictionary of Slang," Simmons said later. "It doesn't mean 'broad.' "

Meanwhile, Frank Robinson, the manager of the Orioles, said he was upset over the incident and suggested that female reporters and his players discuss the problems to "clear the air."

It has been a two-decades-long battle for female reporters to have access to locker rooms to seek the stories their male counterparts get.

THERE HAVE been court proceedings and closed-door meetings and there has been substantial progress, with women showing proper discretion and most players wearing towels or robes when women are around.

Some loutish behavior by ballplayers continued, though, as when, a few years ago, Dave Kingman of the Oakland A's sent to a female reporter in the press box a neatly wrapped package, tied in pink ribbon, with a live rat inside.

Over all, however, women have gained their rightful acceptance in being allowed to enter a legitimate workplace.

About 15 years ago, I saw my first female sportswriter in a locker room. It was Jane Gross, then with Newsday (and later a reporter for The New York Times), and the daughter of Milton Gross, the late, distinguished sports columnist for The New York Post.

"I'm not a cause person," Gross told me, "I don't carry signs. I don't like to go places where I'm not welcome. But I began to realize what a fellow sportswriter on Newsday had told me — that you really can't get the flavor of the players without seeing them in the locker room and the camaraderie they share. It's a beautiful thing. Most women rarely experience it."

BUT, SHE added, the locker room "is no place to be a voyeur. It's sweaty and I'm on deadline."

One New York radio sportscaster, seeing Gross in the locker room for the first time, compared it to the fall of the Roman Empire. "The first symptoms of moral decay were carnal promiscuity and sexual lassitude," he said.

The first symptoms of a radio sportscaster's decline might just be flagrant hyperbole. But that's another matter.

Two years ago, Suzyn Waldman, of WFAN, was in the Toronto Blue Jays' locker room after an important game in the division race.

Several reporters were interviewing George Bell, the Toronto left fielder. When Waldman moved into the group, Bell began to scream obscenities in Spanish and English about a woman in the locker room, and said he'd cut off the interview.

"It seemed like the entire clubhouse went silent," recalled Waldman. "I knew I had to leave, and didn't want to make any more of a scene. And I didn't want anyone to see me break down. I started to go for the door — the room was still dead quiet — when I heard someone call me. It was Jesse Barfield."

"Hey, Suzyn," called the Toronto right fielder. "I went 3 for 4 today. Don't you want to talk to me?"

WALDMAN, who didn't know Barfield personally, but later learned that he had turned to someone and asked her name, now smiled and took her tape recorder to his locker.

"He gave me a terrific interview, even quoting some poetry," she said. "I don't remember it exactly, and I'm sorry I didn't save the interview."

Barfield, now with the Yankees, remembered the poem, and laughed.

"It went," said Barfield, " 'When the leaves turn brown, we'll be wearing the crown.' " (Barfield admits that the verse wasn't original, that it was borrowed from Willie Upshaw, who used it a few years earlier when the two were vying for the team home-run leadership.)

Barfield's act in the locker room was more than mere chivalry. It was an act of courage — the kind of courage that goes beyond hitting a home run, say, in the bottom of the ninth.

This is the courage that comes with standing up for another human being.

"She was just trying to do her job just like I'm trying to do mine," said Barfield.

"And I only did what I'd want done to me. As long as they respect us, they should be respected as well."

Daniels glad to escape

CINCINNATI (AP) — Kal Daniels took his time to answer the question: will he miss anything about Cincinnati?

For five seconds he thought about his unhappy career with the Reds — four major-league seasons of praise for his potential and condemnation for failure to reach it.

Finally, Daniels had his answer.

"No," he said, then resumed sorting through his dressing cubicle.

For Daniels, his trade Tuesday to the Los Angeles Dodgers means a chance to leave a city where he felt unappreciated and misunderstood.

The 25-year-old outfielder has been described by former General Manager Bill Bergesch as one of the team's untouchable "crown jewels" and by Manager Pete Rose as a potential batting champion. He's also been frequently jeered by fans at Riverfront Stadium for his defensive lapses and erratic hitting.

"I didn't feel like I got what I deserved, but I'm happy for the people that supported me," Daniels said Tuesday, as he packed up his belongings in the clubhouse.

Daniels' relationship with the city has been bittersweet in its best moments.

"It wasn't hidden that he didn't have a real good taking to the city of Cincinnati," teammate and friend Eric Davis said. "He didn't like the way things were going on. He didn't like the way he was treated."

The Reds' offense was based on Davis and Daniels, described by Rose as "two kegs of dynamite." When they fizzled, the two outfielders often heard boos. Davis tried to ignore them. Daniels couldn't.

"The only thing Kal has to learn is not to worry about what people say," Davis said. "That's something he takes to the heart and it bothers him a lot."

The only thing that seemed to bother Daniels more than bad publicity was the level of publicity.

"I don't feel like I got the publicity I deserved," Daniels said. "But what can you expect when you're playing with Eric Davis and Dave Parker one year and Eric Davis the next?"

Going to Los Angeles may just intensify that situation, Rose points out.

"I can't imagine why he wasn't happy," Rose said. "If he feels he didn't get enough publicity here, he's going where there's some stars. So that could create more of a problem there.

"Believe me, publicity isn't what it's made out to be."

Daniels began hearing boos for his adventurous fielding and for complaining about having to platoon with Tracy Jones in left field early in his career.

"When I came out and said something about platooning, people were, 'Oh, he's got a bad attitude.' I was taken the wrong way," Daniels said. "But people form their own opinions."

Daniels also was a favorite target in the media because of his aloof nature. Even Rose agreed that Daniels could make it hard for outsiders to get close to his thoughts.

"Sometimes it appeared to me that Kal didn't want to be understood," Rose said.

Davis could empathize with Daniels' feelings of being misunderstood in Cincinnati, where fans expected a lot out of the two outfielders.

"I don't think I'll ever be understood here," Davis said. "I think people put you so high on a pedestal here that if you don't reach those goals that they accumulate for you, you'll never be the player that they think you should be."

The move to Los Angeles could benefit Daniels by lessening the expections on him, Davis said.

Lee Trevino early British Open leader

TROON, Scotland (AP) — Two-time champion Lee Trevino, waving away jetliners and putting like in days past, took the early first-round lead in the 118th British Open today.

Trevino, who will be 50 in December, was in the clubhouse at 4-under par 68 after a six-birdie round, including one with a 20-foot putt on the final hole of the Royal Troon Golf Club course.

Trevino had a sensational back nine, finishing in 3-under 33 and one-putting the final five greens.

A shot behind was Philip Walton of Ireland, with a 69 after bogeying the 18th. Walton never has won in 5½ years on the PGA European Tour.

American Fred Couples was on the course at 3-under after a birdie-4 at the 11th, the storied Railway hole. Also 3-under with holes to play were Eduardo Romero of Argentina; Tom Kite of the United States, who had an eagle-3 on the fourth; another American, David Pate, and British amateur Andrew Hare.

U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange finished with a 70. He could have been closer but became annoyed with photographers and missed a 14-foot putt for par at the 14th hole.

After three days of practice under cloudless skies and with the temperature in the upper 70s, early starters found different conditions as the tournament got under way.

The parched course, baked rock hard by a hot and virtually rainless summer, was softened by an overnight rain. Skies were overcast as the round began, although the sun was out by the time the first golfers finished, and a wind blew across the course.

But if the weather and course were changed, they did not seem to be affecting the scoring. Plenty of birdies were being recorded and scores were good.

BIKE BEAT

Cycling exercise can be fun, I think

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

That harang criticizing Midland's bicycle trail along Neely, one of the heavily traveled home-from-work-school-shopping center routes, ...never mind.

You may roll more six, sevens and eights, but the snakeeyes and box cars are always there.

Peddling down a sparsely-traveled side street one presumed a guarantee of safety.

Think again. The pickup truck careened around the corner on two wheels, went the short block and careened on the brink of disaster again around the next block.

Another truck, this one under control, was in hot pursuit.

It was like one of the chases out of one of those drug-glamorizing TV shows.

When the pick up truck first screeched around the block, there was no escape except to get up on the curb. But even that wouldn't have saved me.

If the driver lost control, there was no haven. As it was, the skid marks came within six feet of the curb.

No, my life didn't flash before me, only the realization that my fate was in the hands of a higher power or maybe a South American drug dealer.

The bad news, it seems, was I could have been killed. The good news was that I was riding a bike and not driving a car.

So maybe Neely isn't all that bad after all. The traffic is aware that it's a bike route, hopefully, and the cyclist knows enough to be on the alert for the unexpected.

A HELMET wouldn't have made any difference in the above incident, but earlier this week while heading down just oiled and pebbled Maxwell for the Garfield crossing to Midland College, just as I turned on Garfield loose pebbles took my bike out from under me.

It was as though Hulk Hogan had lifted me up and bodily thrown me out of the ring. I was bruised from shoulder to knee, but landed on my head so hard I could feel whatever is inside bounce off the skull wall. This all before an audience waiting for the light on Garfield to turn green while I dazedly blushed red.

It was a routine turn. No risk involved. You never know. Things happen.

Ironically, just two days before, I had considered investing in a helmet and decided I really didn't need it.

In fact, next time I go to Acapulco to dive on a John Cameron Swazie commercial, I'll be wearing one, Charlie....

THE ONLY time I ever participated in a public demonstration/rebellion was in Amsterdam, a least likely candidate for voicing protest by a visitor who was turned off by the "watch-your-wallet" warnings and the city's status as an open city.

It wasn't at all what I expected from a country that had always been thought of in terms of orderliness, neatness, and unmatched tulips.

The Mrs. and I had just left the hotel and spotted an unruly mob down the street.

Curiosity proved irresistible. What unworthy cause, one wondered, were the rabble-rousers assembling for? Curiosity was a magnet.

Before I quite realized it, I was hanging one arm from a street light pole, waving a fist in support.

What at first appeared to be unruly rabble rousers was an orderly whelming mob on bikes. They wanted downtown Amsterdam closed to auto traffic.

What cyclist wouldn't be carried away by such a noble cause?

Everyone wants in Joe Pool, but...

By MARK McDONALD
Dallas Times Herald

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — First, Joe Pool Lake was an idea that wouldn't hold water. Then, suddenly, it held too much.

And what was proposed by a U.S. congressman in the 1960s, not started until 1981, not completed until 1986 and still not open today, gives the 7,470-acre impoundment in souther Dallas County a history more checkered than any lake you never saw.

What has kept so many so curious for so long?

JOE POOL Lake has surprisingly clear water — 50 feet deep at the dam, modern public facilities and excellent fishing, especially for bass.

What's more, the lake named for the late representative from Cedar Hill, is unique in Texas, maybe in the nation. Four million people live within 30 miles of its shores, and most of those potential customers wonder if it will be run like a Girl Scout retreat or a Hells Angels reunion.

Before they find out, they must wait, again, until at least mid-August.

AS SHADY camp sites and jumping largemouth bass beckon just south of Interstate 20, Corps of Engineers officials announced last week that facilities will not be turned over for the Trinity River Authority to operate until early August. After that, the authority needs "about 10 days to two weeks to get ready," said John Jadrosich, TRA public information director.

Bob McGlothlin, recently hired out of private business in Albuquerque, N.M., to run Joe Pool's facilities, remains undaunted.

"It is truly a special challenge," McGlothin said. "That's the main reason I took the job."

The root of the challenge is both simple and complex: control pent-up enthusiasm for the lake and juggle jurisdictions of the TRA, the corps, Texas Parks and Wildlife, Tarrant County, Ellis County, Dallas County and a half-dozen municipalities.

SINCE the floodgates at the dam were first closed in December 1986, lake officials have been unlucky. They planned a May 1988 opening, but were forced to delay it several times when drought drew the water level as low as 507 feet above sea level, far below the normal conservation pool of 522.

Then, record rains in May and June flooded the lake. In one stretch, the level rose a foot an hour and 11 feet in a single day, corps ranger Larry Bogue said. At 529 feet, Joe Pool suddenly had too much of a good thing.

Result: Fishing buoys were torn from their anchors, new boat docks were sent adrift, the state lost a portable water pump and lightning knocked two chunks of concrete the size of cafeteria trays off the top of the tower at the dam.

SO, ONLY announcing an opening date will quiet the masses, something neither the corps nor the TRA will supply.

"We want to give the public all the recreation they can enjoy safely, in a family-type setting," McGlothin said. "We want people to come without worrying about the rough element."

Nervous state, federal and local officials know that a pleasant, peaceful opener will bring an image boost — and business.

"It could be a marvelous asset for residents and tourists alike," said Clancy Nolen, director of economic development for Grand Prairie. Local home values could climb, he said, and already developers have looked at the Estes Park area as a potential site for commercial marinas, upscale restaurants, a golf course and even a high-rise hotel with 250-500 rooms.

Before then, though, officials are braced for crowds that could jam the new parks with thousands of people, each one eager to sample the facilities for the first time. Those early visitors may be surprised to learn how much their recreation will cost.

TO COVER construction costs, the TRA must pay the corps $600,000 a year for the next 50 years, so Joe Pool's gatekeepers will charge $2 per vehicle, plus $2 per person, plus $2 per boat, plus $8 to camp. Thus, a family of four will pay $20 to visit the lake, launch their boat and stay overnight.

The same activity in a state park such as Eisenhower on Lake Texoma, would cost $8 — $2 per vehicle and $6 for a camp site with table, grill and water.

Even so, McGlothin defends the fee structure, saying it is not an attempt to restrict lower income groups, drugs or violence.

AP Laserphoto

Officials predict 50,000 will try to visit Joe Pool Lake, near Grand Prarie, when it opens late this summer.

"I don't think we are pricing ourselves out of the recreation market; at least I hope we're not," McGlothin said. "For the facilities we offer, our prices are in line."

The line that worries most officials, however, is the one that forms at the rear, where campers and anglers may gather at the gate the night before the parks open and sleep in their trucks.

Some officials predict up to 50,000 will try to visit the lake on opening day.

By dawn of The Day, officials fear that lines will be long, patience short and McGlothin said, "We anticipate it being a real zoo."

Only five ramps with a total of 11 lanes will be open the first day, McGlothin said.

THE LACK of boat fuel and other marina services could lead to other problems, state game warden Buddy Turner said.

To help control traffic and tempers, law enforcement will be stepped up, both on land and water.

"There will be so many different departments involved, badges could be bumping into badges," said one law enforcement officer who asked not to be named.

The lake and much of its shoreline lies within Grand Prairie's city limits but both corps rangers and TP&W wardens monitor boating safety regulations. On land, it could be even more confusing, with rangers, wardens, and local fire and police departments in neighboring municipalities standing at the ready.

TRA officials realize what is at stake.

"We know we are not like any other park," McGlothin said. "We are not supported by state or federal tax base. We must rely on our gate receipts. And for us to be successful, we need to have people enjoy themselves here. Then, they will be more likely to come back again."

Free enterprise goes camping?

"In a way," said McGlothin. "We are competing for visitation with other parks."

TRA officials hope the fishing is so good and so handy that many workers living in nearby communities will get in the habit of stopping to fish Joe Pool on their way home from work — sort of a neighborhood bar for fishermen.

The lake has been stocked with fast-growing Florida largemouths since 1981. Those fish could now be as heavy as 10 pounds, TP&W district biologist Clell Guest said.

"Every lake is good for bass when it opens," Guest said, explaining the three-bass, 18-inch-minimum limit. "The key is how long you can prolong the honeymoon."

Sportsmen will also enjoy fishing for channel catfish, crappie and copernose bluegill, a native of Florida that has grown to weights of one to two pounds.

TRA officials ask visitors to keep their sense of humor. McGlothin has not lost his.

A reporter asked him about avoiding the crowds by dropping his fishing boat onto the lake by helicopter.

"That's fine," McGlothin said, "just so long as you stop at the gate and pay your $2."

Fishing on Gulf Coast way to go

PORT ARANSAS — Party boat. Just the sound of it conjures up some interesting images, doesn't it?

Screaming, about-to-be-debauched maidens chased by leering, wine-swilling corporate types wearing Bozo wigs. OK, so that's my image.

But no matter what party boat might mean to you personally, along the Gulf Coast and especially in Texas it means a big seagoing vessel meant to put a maximum number of fishermen over a good fishing hole for a nominal price.

It works, too, most of the time, and due to the type of fishing and the number of baits in the water there is a variety of catch that one often doesn't see in more traditional kinds of charters.

Mary Ann Smith of Deep Sea Headquarters in Port Aransas said party boat charters are excellent ways for the spur of the moment kind of trips families or groups often plan during a vacation on the coast. "We have two trips," Smith said. "Eight hours for $45 or five hours in the summer for $30."

FOR THAT amount, you get rod, reel, bait and tackle provided by the boat, along with some help in getting set up and in landing fish. All you have to bring is food if you want (you can buy stuff on board) and whatever clothes and such you might want.

For reduced rates, you can bring along an observer or someone to share your rod and reel, Smith said, which helps with families in which not everyone going would actually want to fish the whole time.

There are still party boat trips run specifically for red snapper, Smith said, but those are less successful and harder in the summer because the fish move so far offshore. You can even book 12- and 40-hour trips with some captains.

Summer time usually means kingfish in Texas, but it is also the time of greatest variety for party boat regulars. "We get kingfish, line, dolphin, jack crevalle, several species of sharks, three different kinds of tuna, wahoo, bonita and tarpon," Smith said. "We've already had a tarpon caught by one of our party boat fishermen."

And that's not all. "We do have days where somebody hooks and lands a sailfish, but that's rare and you shouldn't come down expecting it to happen," Smith said.

MOST LARGE marinas on the Texas Gulf Coast run their own party boats. They'll set up special trips just for a church group or other large party, but you need to contact them well in advance to get a day when they can handle a full load.

Other times, all you have to do is show up at the dock at the correct time and they can get you on the boat.

Pena slam beats Wichita

Associated Press

Geronimo Pena had a grand slam home run and a three-run homer to lead the Arkansas Travelers to an 8-5 Texas League baseball victory over the Wichita Wranglers.

In other Texas League action Wednesday night, San Antonio edged Tulsa, 2-1, in 10 innings, Midland slipped past Jackson, 5-4, and El Paso whipped Shreveport, 15-10.

In addition to the grand slam, Pena slugged a three-run homer in the eight inning.

Wichita held a 5-0 lead in the game until the bottom of the fifth when Pena hit his grand slam.

The Travelers tied the game in the bottom of the seventh when Bernard Gilkey singled, stole second and scored on Rod Brewer's double.

The winning pitcher was Jeff Oyster, 5-2. Mike Perez got his 22nd save of the season. The losing pitcher was Rich Rodriguez, 4-3.

Carlos Hernandez' 10th inning homer gave the San Antonio Missions a 2-1 victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

Kevin Campbell, 1-1, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Wayne Rosenthal.

Is Mesa Limited moving to Dallas?

T. Boone buys Dallas home; may quit Amarillo

UNIVERSITY PARK, Texas (AP) - Amarillo oilman T. Boone Pickens may soon be known as University Park oilman Boone Pickens because he and his wife have contracted to buy a $2.9 million home in this Dallas suburb, real estate agents say.

Agents told The Dallas Morning News Wednesday that Pickens is quietly moving from West Texas to the Dallas area.

In early June it was announced that Pickens' Mesa Limited Partnership is relocating more than two dozen of its headquarters staff members to office in the Dallas area. It was never mentioned that Pickens would also move.

Mesa is one of Amarillo's largest employers with about 400 people in its administrative office, contributing about $90 million annually to the Panhandle city's economy.

Pickens declined to answer phone calls from the Dallas newspaper about his personal move, but his staffers assumed that the move was widely known.

The Amarillo oilman said recently that he still hasn't decided whether to become a Republican candidate for governor. But with George W. Bush, the president's son, apparently out of the 1990 gubernatorial race, Pickens could be the lone candidate from the Republican bastion of Dallas.

Pickens has lived in Amarillo for 45 years and has been an outspoken leader of the city's business community.

In 1987, he wrote in his autobiography that "moving to Amarillo was probably the best thing that ever happened to me."

There were rumors last year that Pickens and his wife, Bea, were considering a move to Fort Worth. Amarillo community leaders campaigned against the move.

A group of 20 business leaders spent $10,000 for 55 billboards saying: "Boone & Bea, You Love Amarillo, and We Love You!"

The newspaper reported that if the purchase is completed, the Pickenses soon will be living in a four-bedroom, English Tudor-style home near Preston Road. The home has about 16,000 square feet, including a second-floor ballroom and two-story trophy room. Both Pickens and his wife are avid hunters.

Mrs. Pickens, the first woman to serve on the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission, is the only woman to have killed all the African "Big Five" dangerous game in a 21-day safari. The "Big Five" are lion, leopard, Cape buffalo, elephant and rhinoceros.

Erle Rawlins Realtors, whcih listed the University Park home for sale, declined comment Wednesday on the pending transaction.

D. Joseph Corr, chairman of Continental Airlines, announced Wednesday that the company had placed an order for $2.8 billion in new Boeing jets.

Texas Air Corp. orders 100 jets

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp. said Wednesday it is ordering up to 100 new Boeing jets in a $2.8 billion deal that is the largest ever for parent of Continental Airlines and strikebound Eastern Airlines.

Sixty of the jets are earmarked for Continental and 40 for Eastern, now in the midst of bankruptcy reorganization and a lingering strike. All the purchases by Eastern first must be approved by a federal bankruptcy court.

Houston-based Texas Air also announced a complicated mix of transactions in which Continental soon would purchase 11 widebody Airbus A300 jets and spare parts from Eastern for $303.5 million. Continental also would lease two McDonnell Douglas DC-10s from Eastern and lease 34 jets back to its sister carrier.

"I think this is an important step in Continental's return to profitability and confidence in the future of the airline," D. Joseph Corr, Continental's chairman and chief executive officer, told a news conference.

"What we're really doing is not only restructuring our fleet, but we're also at the same time providing for our fleet way out into the future," Corr said. "Overall, we're looking at more seats to more destinations than prior to these changes."

Under the deal, Houston-based Continental agreed to buy as many as 60 of Boeing Co.'s narrow-body 737-300s, with deliveries of 30 aircraft planned for 1992 to 1994 and with an option to purchase another 30 of the jets in 1995 and 1996.

Greenspan: Fed trying to hold back recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said today the central bank has been pushing down interest rates in an effort to keep the country out of a recession and acknowledged the Fed's best efforts might not be enough.

After a year of raising interest rates to dampen inflationary pressures, Greenspan said, the Fed switched course in June and began lowering rates because of widespread signs of a weakening economy.

Greenspan, making his midyear report to Congress, indicated that the Fed stood ready to lower rates further, but he said its best efforts might not be enough to stave off an economic downturn.

"Some day, some event will end the extraordinary string of economic advances that has prevailed since late 1982," Greenspan said in testimony before the House banking subcommittee.

The Fed chairman said it was entirely possible that some Federal Reserve policy mistake could trigger a new recession despite the agency's best efforts to keep the current record peacetime recovery going.

"The Federal Reserve is committed to doing its utmost to ensure prosperity and rising standards of living over the long run," Greenspan said. "We do, however, face a difficult balancing act."

Greenspan said the Fed must weigh the dangers of a recession against the risk that too loose a monetary policy could spark a new inflationary spiral in the country.

Greenspan said the Fed's policies would be oriented toward avoiding "an unnecessary and destructive recession."

The Fed chairman's comments indicated that the central bank was likely to continue its policy of gradually lowering interest rates over the coming months. Greenspan said the Fed first began easing credit conditions in early June and eased again in early July.

Greenspan's remarks were the first official indication that the central bank had indeed reversed its year-long tightening efforts, although there was a widespread belief in financial markets that this was occurring.

Greenspan released a revised economic forecast which showed that the central bank still hopes to achieve a so-called soft landing in which growth will slow enough to cool inflationary pressures but not decline so much that the country is thrown into a recession.

The Fed forecast that the over all economy would grow at an annual rate of between 2 percent and 2.5 percent. This was lower than the administration's revised forecast on Tuesday that the economy would grow at a 2.7 percent rate this year.

The Fed also saw more dangers from higher inflation, forecasting that consumer prices would rise by between 5 percent and 5.5 percent this year, up from last year's 4.4 percent increase.

The administration is less concerned about an uptick in inflation, forecasting that consumer prices would rise 4.9 percent this year.

In setting preliminary monetary growth targets, Greenspan said the Fed had decided to leave the growth rates unchanged for this year and next year as well.

For M-2, the measure of the money supply which includes currency in circulation and interest-bearing checking accounts, the Fed said it would aim for an increase of between 3 percent and 7 percent both this year and in 1990.

Fired Exxon worker charges slander

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A former Exxon computer operator who destroyed records on the Exxon Valdez oil spill has filed a lawsuit alleging the company wrongfully fired and slandered him, his attorney says.

Kenneth A. Davis also refuses to give Alaska officials a sworn statement explaining how the computerized records were erased unless a judge is present, attorney David Berg said in a telephone interview from Houston.

The lawsuit filed Wednesday in the Harris County District Court at Houston says the destroyed records represented the only complete file Exxon had on the March 24 spill, and that there is no way to verify if the oil company has other copies.

Exxon attorneys, however, in a memorandum filed Wednesday in Anchorage Superior Court, say the erased files were "obsolete backup 'snapshots' of an electronic data bank which is fully preserved in hard disk archives."

Right time for prime rate, hard call

By KATHY M. KRISTOF
New York Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — A funny thing happened to the prime rate last week.

Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's second-largest and generally a bellwether for interest rate changes all over the U.S., cut its prime lending rate to 10.5 percent from 11 percent.

Tiny North Hollywood, Calif.-based American Pacific State Bank, which makes a point of trying to be the first local institution to cut its prime, also lowered the rate it charges its best customers, as did another small bank in Missouri.

But none of the other money center banks - not Citibank, not Manufacturers Hanover, not Chemical Bank - would budge. Neither did California banks like First Interstate, Bank of America or Security Pacific.

By Friday afternoon, more than four days after Chase cut its prime, the other big banks held fast at 11 percent, although bank economists across the nation were nervously checking their Telerate terminals each hour in an attempt to determine whether or not to follow suit.

The prime rate, the interest that most banks charge their best customers, is probably the most widely watched interest rate in the nation. It serves as an index for a wide variety of business and consumer loans, such as home equity and auto loans. And it's an indicator, although a lagging one, of where the economy is headed.

Typically, banks change the prime when their economists advise management that it's time for a rate hike or drop. Economists are compulsive about checking interest rates and economic indicators frequently, readying to act on rates at any moment.

"It's an addiction," said Robert Defina, first vice president and economist at Security Pacific National Bank. "We don't smoke cigarettes, we go look at the Telerate machine."

Once the economists make recommendations, the company's chief executive reviews and approves the change. Then a host of bank loan officers hit the telephones to advise their customers of the new rate.

Normally, once a money center bank like Chase makes a move, other banks follow suit within a few hours. But not last week. In fact, it's been six years since there was so much division over a rate cut.

The reason for the inaction, most experts say, is plain confusion over where the economy is headed. The economic indicators that cue banks on what to do with prime have been sending conflicting signals, paralyzing bankers.

And then there are the psychological factors.

To understand how psychology could stymie so many of nation's bankers, it is necessary to understand that banking is not an industry packed with innovation. Banks do basically two things: they take in money as deposits and they lend out money in loans.

Loans and deposits are commodities, said Frank DeSantis, an analyst with PaineWebber & Co. in New York. There is virtually no differentiation between one bank's loans and another bank's loans, so all banks must compete on the basis of price.

So banks openly watch one another, and when one lowers its rates, the rest tend to follow, DeSantis said.

Southwest Bank in St. Louis, Mo., has been the bank to watch for more than a decade, when the company's now chairman emeritus decided to be the prime rate harbinger for the nation.

On Friday, July 7, Southwest lowered its prime rate to 10.5 percent from 11 percent, in response to generally lowering interest rates nationwide and a belief that the economy was weakening and would push rates lower still, said I.A. Long, Southwest's chairman emeritus.

Usually, by 6:00 a.m. Eastern time the following Monday, a major New York bank, like Chase, would have

Posted price lowered to $19.25

From Staff and Wire Reports

Crude prices fell below $20 Wednesday, dragged down by weakened gasoline prices.

In response, local crude purchasers lowered their posted price for West Texas Intermediate to $19.25 from $19.75. Among those lowering their posting were Permian, Texaco, Sun Refining & Marketing and Marathon.

Prices continued lower at midmorning, with the August contract for WTI falling 17 cents to $19.68. The contract dropped 53 cents to close at $19.81 Wednesday.

Crude prices were dragged down by gasoline futures prices, which tumbled after a report showed a steep rise in gasoline inventories.

Wholesale unleaded gasoline for August delivery fell 1.37 cents to 54.69 cents a gallon on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Other contract months generally declined, with September falling 1.13 cents to 53.37 cents a gallon.

Among other refined products traded on the exchange, wholesale heating oil for August delivery fell .13 cent to 50.37 cents a gallon.

Analysts said a sharper-than-expected rise in gasoline inventories dragged prices lower.

The American Petroleum Institute weekly report, released after the close of trading Tuesday, showed total motor gasoline stocks rose 5.2 million barrels to 222.855 million barrels in the week ended July 14. Heating stocks also rose by 5.4 million barrels to 110.2 million during the week.

Energy analysts said a rise in gasoline inventories was anticipated but such a steep increase was not expected.

Crude oil stocks were 1.4 million barrels lower at 331.3 million for the week, API reported.

Dollar moves higher overseas

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against the yen and major European currencies this morning.

Spot gold was steady at lower levels in quiet trading.

Traders said the dollar appeared to be on an upward course.

"We tried to take it lower yesterday, but that got nowhere. So today we'll try to take it in the other direction and see what happens," said a trader at a large West German bank in Frankfurt.

Gold opened in London at $367.80 per troy ounce, down from $371.75 late Wednesday. At mid morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $368.80.

Silver bullion traded in London at $5.19 a troy ounce, down from $5.23.

Stock market surges 39.6 points

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices responded to upbeat news on inflation Wednesday with a strong rally that carried the market to new highs since the crash of 1987.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 39.65 to 2,584.41, stretching its gain since the start of the month to 144.35 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,058 up, 458 down and 495 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board reached 215.74 million shares, up from 152.35 million Tuesday and the heaviest total since 244.51 million were traded on June 16.

The Labor Department reported Wednesday morning that the consumer price index rose 0.2 percent in June, down from 0.6 percent the month before. The consensus estimate on Wall Street had called for a 0.3 percent June increase.

Though the latest figure came as no dramatic surprise, analysts said, it bolstered hopes that the Federal Reserve might soon relax its credit policy further.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

NWA pilots threaten strike

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Negotiators for Northwest Airlines pilots said a strike is possible by Labor Day.

But Los Angeles investor Alfred Checchi said Wednesday the strike threat won't stop him from completing a takeover of the nation's fourth-largest carrier, which is owned by NWA Inc.

Negotiators for the Air Line Pilots Association told leaders of Northwest pilots that a breakdown in contract talks "may be near." But they also said agreement on a new contract could be reached "within a matter of hours" if NWA management would bargain in a "reasonable and responsive manner."

Chrysler getting reputation as truckmaker

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. increasingly is getting a reputation as a truckmaking company, a label Chairman Lee Iacocca acknowledges but one he says is unwarranted.

Yet analysts wonder if that may not be the smartest road for the nation's third-largest automaker to take.

"I think it's an intelligent decision on Chrysler's part because trucks make more money that cars," Ronald Glantz, an auto analyst with Montgomery Securities Inc. in San Francisco, said Wednesday.

Brady denies U.S. retreat as economic leader

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady rejected a suggestion that the Paris economic summit last week signified a retreat by the United States from its position since the end of World War II as the leader in world economic affairs.

"I don't think we have the passing of the baton yet, but it is a serious worry," Brady told the Joint Economic Committee of Congress on Wednesday.

Sunbelt growth to continue

Five Sunbelt states will grow to comprise over one-third of the United States population by the year 2010. Job growth will continue to be strong in these states with an expected increase of 16.4 million new positions, 6.6 million in California alone.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Howard reentry nets 49-barrel find

From Staff Reports

A Howard County recompletion has resulted in an undesignated discovery for PHILLIPS PETROLEUM CO.

Phillips reentered the No. 3 Gillihan, former producer in the Big Spring (Fusselman) field, testing it to flow 49 barrels of 45 gravity crude, 450 Mcfd and five barrels of water on an 18/64 inch choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 900 psi from perforations 9,328 to 9,345 ft. The interval was acidized with 4,500 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL. Gas-oil ratio is 9,186:1.

Originally drilled to 9,700 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 9,490 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,573 ft., include the Chinle at 108 ft., Rustler at 1134, Yates at 1636, San Andres at 3193, Clearfork at 4625, Upper Spraberry at 5660, Lower Spraberry at 6231, Wolfcamp at 6744, Dean Sand at 6843, Canyon at 8600, and Strawn at 8747 ft. Pay was topped at 9328 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from west and 1,980 ft. from north lines of Section 18, Block 31, T-1-N, T&P survey, five miles northeast of Big Spring.

★Howard discovery

A reentry in Howard County has resulted in a 49-barrel discovery for Phillips Petroleum Co.

Drilling continues in Crockett field

New production has been added to the University 31 (Strawn Detrital) field of Crockett County.

J. CLEO THOMPSON, Dallas, tested the No. 3 University 31-8W for a calculated absolute open flow of 10 Mmcfd from perforations 8,334 to 8,569.5 ft. Condensate gravity was 54.3 degrees API and gas-liquid ratio is 325,419:1. The producing interval was acidized with 20,000 gallons of acid.

Permitted as a 9,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,696 ft. and plugged back to 8,585 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 8,704 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and 2,309 ft. from west lines of Section 8, Block 31, ULS survey, 15 miles west-southwest of Ozona.

Winkler field well flows 35 barrels oil

Another producer has been added to the Keystone (Colby) field of Winkler County.

DAVID H. ARRINGTON OIL & GAS INC., Midland, finaled the No. 1 Underwood to flow 35 barrels of 34 gravity crude, 105 Mcfd and 22 barrels of water from perforations 3,377 to 3,412 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,700 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFeHCL and fractured with 24,250 gallons of gel, 18,000 lbs. 20/40 sand and 36,000 lbs. 12/20 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 3,000:1.

Drilled to 3,470 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 3,434 ft.

The well topped the Tansill at 2,567 ft., Yates at 2,660, and Queen at 3,157 ft. on ground elevation of 2,849 ft. Pay was topped at 3,371 ft.

Location is 913 ft. from south and 1,706 ft. from west lines of Section 26, Block B-3, PSL survey, within Kermit townsite.

Midland operator finals Ward County producer

AVRA OIL CO., Midland, has completed a new producer in the Scott (Delaware) field of Ward County.

On potential test, the No. 1 Gilbert flowed 22 barrels of 40 gravity crude and 425 barrels of water on a two inch choke from perforations 4,838 to 4,917 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons of 7.5 percent HCL acid and fractured with 30,000 gallons of gel and 92,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Total depth was 4,956 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,942 ft.

The well topped the Lamar LIme at 4,792 ft., Ramsey Sand at 4,834, and Olds Sand at 4,879 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 2,552.8 ft. Pay was topped at 4,834 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from southeast and 467 ft. from southwest lines of Section 35, Block 33, H&TC survey, 2.5 miles southeast of Barstow.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Invest extra money or or pay more mortgage?

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I purchased my home 10 years ago, obtaining a 30-year, 10 percent mortgage. My monthly payments are $570. I am financially able to save an extra $130 a month. Do you advise that I put that money into the mortgage or invest it in certificates of deposit?

Doyle

A. That depends on the interest you can get on CDs. If you can get more than 10 percent, put the money into CDs. If you can't get 10 percent, use it to reduce your mortgage.

Any time you have a mortgage or any other debt and you have spare cash, it's wise to invest the money in CDs or elsewhere — only if it will produce a return higher than the interest you are paying on your debt.

This is basic. Just the same, many people — usually with axes to grind — preach that it is smart to take on the biggest mortgage possible. Think it through. That just doesn't make sense.

As I pound out this column, it's possible to get interest of 10 percent or slightly higher on CDs at some banks and savings and loan associations. But most banks and S&Ls pay lower rates on CDs. Unless your local bank or S&L pays unusually high interest or you deal with a brokerage firm that handles high-rate CDs, you would have to do a lot of shopping around to get 10 percent or better.

Assuming your mortgage does not have a clause calling for a prepayment penalty, my advice is to apply that extra $130 per month toward retiring your mortgage. One note of caution. Make sure the extra money you pay is used to reduce the mortgage principal.

Q. I have been trying, with no luck, to make advance payments on my 13 percent home mortgage so that the size of my future monthly payments will be reduced. The mortgage company will apply advance payments only toward the mortgage's unpaid balance — backing in from the end of the loan.

I derive little or no benefit from early payments this way and the mortgage company has the use of my money. Is there any federal regulatory agency that will require the mortgage company to give me the benefit I want — reduced monthly payments?

A. Nope. The only way you'll be able to cut your monthly payments is by refinancing your mortgage at a lower interest rate and/or with a smaller principal amount.

I never heard of any arrangement through which advance mortgage payments are used to lower future monthly payments. Those prepayments are used to reduce the mortgage's unpaid balance. That shortens the length of the mortgage.

It does benefit you. Every dollar applied toward reducing your mortgage balance results in lower total interest costs. Although the size of your monthly payment remains unchanged, the number of payments you make is cut. By making advance payments, you pay off your mortgage ahead of time and save a bundle of interest.

Q. We pay $405 a month on our 7.5 percent first mortgage, which has an $11,000 balance, and between $550 and $590 a month on our variable rate second mortgage, which has a $35,000 balance.

Life was easy when my wife was working. Now that she cannot work, my take-home pay is not enough to pay the mortgages and our other bills.

Should we combine the two mortgages? We don't want to, but we can't think of any other way to get out of the financial mess we are in.

A. Refinancing your debts by combining the first and second mortgages into one loan seems to be the sensible thing to do. Based on your letter, you need a $46,000 mortgage. Because interest rates have come down a bit lately, you might pay only about 10 percent on a new mortgage.

No matter how that new mortgage is structured and no matter its length in years, your monthly payments will be a great deal lower than what you now are paying on your first and second mortgages.

Go for it. Refinance and get that heavy monthly mortgage monkey off your back.

Kimbark Oil, Hallador Exploration to merge

DENVER (SWN) — Kimbark Oil & Gas Co. and Hallador Exploration Co. have signed, following approval of the boards of directors of both companies, an agreement to merge the operations of the companies.

Kimbark will issue 13.05 shares of its common stock (or a total of approximately 25.5 million shares) for each outstanding share of Hallador common stock. The merger is subject to approval by the common stockholders of Hallador and the preferred stockholders of Kimbark.

The investment banking firm of Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc. has evaluated the proposed transaction and concluded that the merger agreement is fair to Kimbark's stockholders.

Others may not follow Witter lead on program trading ban

New York Times News Service

"I just sent a letter to Dean Witter congratulating them for finally ending all program trading," said Ralph Bloch. "Better late than never."

Bloch, chief market strategist for Raymond James Associates Inc. of St. Petersburg, Fla., has long railed against program trading, a variety of computer-aided strategies for buying and selling stocks.

The Raymond James technical analyst has contended that were it not for program trading, the stock market would not have fallen even a couple of hundred points on Oct. 19, 1987, when the Dow Jones industrial average crashed more than 500 points.

Although program trading doesn't change a market's direction, it does exacerbate the trend already in force, he noted.

However, Bloch doesn't expect other brokerage firms to follow Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., which halted program trading for its own account shortly after the market crash but continued it for customers.

Recently, more Wall Street securities firms, anxious to profit from the these computer-aided strategies, have resumed program trading for their own accounts. This drew criticism from Dean Witter, which argues that program trading threatens the integrity of the markets in the minds of customers.

"The firms are making too much money to stop program trading," observed Bloch.

On some days, program trading accounts for as much as 25 percent of New York Stock Exchange volume, which Bloch calls "outrageous."

The analyst added: "I think the only way to get rid of program trading is by legislation, and I'd say the only way that would happen is if – God forbid – the market were to suffer another 1987-like crash. But that seems unlikely to happen."

So what does Bloch expect of the stock market in the near term?

Bloch, who warned of a break in stock prices before the 1987 crash, said he's not impressed with the market's recent nine-day advance. The strategist attributed a substantial part of the rally to asset allocation activity.

"I don't think the advance is the start of a major run to new highs," he said. "But the market could achieve a token penetration of the 2,600 level of the Dow to about 2,620 or so.

"I don't see it going higher because there is a lot of overhead supply of stock. Then I'd look for the market to experience a price correction of about 8 to 10 percent."

Bloch noted that although the stock market celebrated the fall in interest rates by advancing to new post-crash highs, it is starting to worry about the trend in corporate earnings, which will be affected by a weaker economy.

The analyst said he is cautious about accepting the opinion of most economists that the Federal Reserve Board will succeed in averting a recession by engineering a soft landing for the economy.

"Except once I think, in 1966, there has never been a soft landing since the end of World War II," said Bloch. "It's a rare occurrence."

Significantly, an increasing number of economists are entertaining doubts the Fed can avert a slump in its zeal to knock down inflation. Indeed, a few forecasters, such as A. Gary Shilling, are suggesting the economy may already be in a recession.

They cite, among other things, the government's recent report that the index of leading indicators for May fell 1.2 percent, the sharpest drop since November 1987, the month following the stock market crash.

Sinatra to sing of sauces

New York Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Frank Sinatra is teaming up with a spaghetti sauce and pasta company to market a new line of Italian-style foods starting next spring.

Called Artanis (Sinatra spelled backwards), the partnership with Armanino Foods of Distinction Inc. of South San Francisco initially will introduce three tomato-based sauces in Northern California grocery stores, including a marinara sauce cooked up by "Old Blue Eyes" himself.

Plans call for eventual national distribution of several more sauces.

"Over the years I've received some nice compliments about my cooking," said Sinatra in a prepared statement. "A few years ago, we made some pasta sauce for our friends during the holiday season and it's become a tradition."

Sinatra was not available to elaborate.

Financial details of the partnership are expected to be released in a prospectus next month. Sheffield Enterprises, the Los Angeles-based privately held Sinatra family corporation that holds trademark rights to Frank Sinatra's name, signed the deal with Armanino.

Chairman William Armanino, who will head the limited partnership, said he and the Sinatra family decided to team up after 20 years of friendship.

"I've had Frank's sauce on different types of spaghetti and I really liked it," he said.

"When we got serious about this, we decided a partnership with Sinatra would be a good fit, given our experience in the sauce and pasta business and Sinatra's name recognition."

Unlike the frozen tomato and pesto sauces Armanino makes at its South San Francisco plant that are sold mostly to restaurants, the new Artanis sauces will be produced at a plant in Stockton and sold in jars.

Armanino is no stranger to using celebrities to market sauces and pasta products.

Earlier this year, he engaged former Mouseketeer Annette Funicello as spokesperson for his frozen ravioli and pasta sauce business, which is expected to produce sales of $3 million this year.

"Sinatra has been eager to become involved in the upscale, burgeoning Italian food market," said Sheffield President Nathan Golden.

Sinatra's for-profit sauce line is the latest celebrity entry in the $1.4 billion U.S. market for Italian food products.

Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca and his daughters started marketing a line of wine, vinegar and olive oil products three years ago.

Actor Paul Newman also markets a pasta sauce line that produces $9 million a year in profit.

But unlike Sinatra and Iacocca's Italian food ventures, Newman sends all proceeds from his pasta sauce, salad dressing, popcorn and other lines to charities.

"We don't plan to market these through upscale gourmet chains as Iacocca has," said William Armanino, "We want to appeal to the masses."

However, Armanino said he couldn't say what will distinguish the Sinatra sauce formula from Paul Newman's.

"We're not ready to release details yet," he said. "And many of the new sauces are still in the research-and-development phase."

Armanino said that Sinatra's name probably will be used on the label for the sauces and probably will appear in commercials for the new line of sauces "as his schedule permits."

SPILL

The only use of the backup tapes is to reconstruct the computer's data in the event of a system failure, the 16-page memorandum says, describing the erasures as routine "recycling" of the computer tapes.

Exxon is under court orders to perserve all company documents on the nation's largest oil spill, which left nearly 11 million gallons of crude in Alaska's Prince William Sound. But company attorneys say the court orders specifically exempt duplicate computer files like those erased at the Exxon Co. USA headquarters in Houston.

Alaska Attorney General Douglas Baily said recently that the destroyed records covered a two-week period about six to eight weeks after the spill. But the lawsuit says the records covered a period from the day of the spill until sometime in April, from early May to early June, and possibly other dates.

Davis says in the lawsuit that he erased the first tapes April 24 on the orders of supervisor Randall Parrott, even after Davis indicated to Parrott that the tapes contained records from the day of the spill.

"Mr. Parrott replied that he had been in meetings all day, had his orders, and that was the way things were going to be," the lawsuit says.

Three other employees also erased the tapes, according to the lawsuit.

Davis was fired June 9 for insubordination, but says in the lawsuit that he had received dozens of memos praising his work and performed all the duties required of him.

Exxon's memorandum describes Davis as a disgruntled worker who, after his firing, took unfounded allegations to a reporter.

The lawsuit alleges the firing was intended to make Davis "a scapegoat for (Exxon's) gross negligence and-or intentional disregard of the orders of the Alaskan courts," and was "motivated by an intent to conceal its own culpability."

Moreover, Exxon officials discredited Davis by misrepresenting his work history and "making disparaging remarks about his personal characteristics," the lawsuit says.

PRIME

followed suit, said Ken Ackbarali, an economist with First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles. But this time, Chase didn't lower its prime until noon.

Bankers saw that as a sign of indecision and decided to see what else happened during the day. Bankers find it embarrassing to be alone in a widely-publicized move like a prime rate change, Ackbarali said.

"We were fearful (about changing prime) for exactly what has happened," Ackbarali said. "They (Chase) are alone out there. If we had done this out here on the West Coast, we would be very uncomfortable."

The ultimate fear is that a bank might have to hike rates shortly after lowering them, a serious loss of face, bank economists said.

"You want to avoid flip-flopping quickly," said DeFina. "It is costly in some sense to flip-flop. And prime rate changes are very visible. You want to avoid the appearance of being arbitrary."

Bankers acknowledge that there also is a natural reluctance to lower rates too quickly, because every prime rate slices into a bank's earnings.

"When prime goes down - boom! - you get it right in the nose," said John Keating, chief executive of Lincoln National Bank in Encino. "A half-point drop in prime reduces our earnings by $50,000."

Big banks, which loan hundreds of millions of dollars at a crack, could find the prime rate question even more pressing. A $200 million loan, for example, would pay interest of $22 million annually at a rate of 11 percent, but only $21 million at 10.5 percent. The $1 million differential works out to $2,740 a day.

"Banks are much prompter to go up than to go down," Long noted.

Consequently, they need to have clear economic evidence that rates are going to go down and stay down before they cut prime, DeFina added.

So what factors present this evidence?

First, rates on certificates of deposit must fall to roughly 2 percent below the going prime rate before more cuts are considered, said Jack Kyser, chief economist of the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce.

Then banks must feel sure that the Federal Reserve, which sets monetary policy for the nation, is not likely to tighten credit in the near future. When the Fed tightens credit, it generally causes rates to rise. While the Fed rarely tips its hand, it makes its decisions based on a spectrum of monthly statistics that reveal how fast the economy is growing or slowing.

Economic data recently released show that while employment and spending are still strong, they are not as strong as they were in previous months.

RATES

The central bank is charged with the primary task of guarding against inflation by contriling how fast the money supply increases. The goal is to supply enough money to support healthy growth while making sure that inflation is not re-ignited by pumping too much money into the system.

The Fed's actions influence the cost of money — interest rates.

With the decision in early June to ease credit conditions, a variety of business and consumer interest rates have been falling and economists are predicting that the current Fed easing course will mean further declines in banks' prime lending rate and in mortgage rates over the next several months.

Some economists have complained that the Fed waited too long to begin lowering interest rates and has thus increased the chances that the recovery from the 1981-82 recession is in danger of ending.

Richard Rahn, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, urged the central bank Thursday to aggressively lower interest rates "to combat recessionary pressures that threaten the economy."

However, other analysts applaud the steps the central bank has taken, saying Greenspan has wisely made small mid-course corrections rather than reacting too far in any direction.

Recent inflation figures look favorable. On Wednesday, the government reported consumer prices edged up just 0.2 percent in June, the smallest advance in 16 months. That followed news last week that prices at the wholesale level actually fell last month.

Before the June slowdown, consumer prices were shooting up at the fastest pace since 1982. But economists believe the worst is now over for energy price increases.

University Park Mayor John Roach said his city, which already is home to some of the Dallas area's wealthiest oilmen and bankers, will welcome another high-profile citizen like Pickens.

"If he is going to be a resident, we will be delighted to have Boone Pickens move into University Park," Roach said. "He's an international figure. And it's a plus for any city to have Boone Pickens living there."

DEAR ABBY

Pharmacist's remark is bitter pill to swallow

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I recently went into a rather large drugstore and told the pharmacist on duty — a woman — that I was having terrible heartburn. I asked her if she could give me something to relieve my discomfort. She looked down at my stomach and said, "You're pregnant, right?"

There were several customers standing around, and they started to look at me. I felt like the bottom of my shoe! (By the way, I am not pregnant.) I have always had a weight problem, but I am well-proportioned, and can't imagine what made that pharmacist jump to that conclusion. I am aware that some medications should not be taken by pregnant women, but if the pharmacist wants to know if a woman is pregnant, she should take the woman aside and ask her in a quiet, confidential way.

I was so humiliated by that pharmacist, I hurriedly bought what she recommended for my heartburn, turned to her and said, "I will never set foot in this store again!" Then I walked out.

The next morning I wrote a letter to the management of that drugstore, reported the humiliating incident and demanded that they take action against that pharmacist. I also asked them to respond to my letter, letting me know what action had been taken. (I am still waiting to hear from them.)

Abby, do you think I was justified in writing such a letter? If you want to print this letter, go ahead and print it. Maybe someone will learn from it. — NOT PREGNANT IN CHARLOTTE, N.C.

DEAR NOT PREGNANT: The pharmacist acted in an unprofessional manner, but I think you overreacted.

Apparently you now have second thoughts about having written that letter, but what's been done is done, so don't invest any more energy worrying about it. You've written to me, and I also hope someone will learn from it.

DEAR ABBY: I was very distressed when I read that a small child was lost in the woods near his parents' cabin in the area of Payson, Ariz. His body was found a few days later, not far from his home. He had died of cold and exposure — a recent snow had covered him up.

We used to own a cottage in Wisconsin, and even though the area was not very remote, I instructed my small children to always take along, and wear around their necks, a whistle on a leather thong. They were told to use it only if they should get lost. Thank God, they never had to use it!

I felt so sorry for the parents of this little boy that I had to write to you and let you know of this possible lifesaving hint in case you might be interested in publishing it. Your column is so widely read and you are such a caring person. — BIBICHE JORGENSEN, SCOTTSDALE

DEAR BIBICHE: I have published that "whistle around the neck" idea several times, but with the camping season upon us, if just one person is saved because of this item, it will be well worth the space in my column. Thanks for writing.

CONFIDENTIAL TO J.G.G. IN SIOUX CITY, IOWA: I like the way Malcolm S. Forbes put it: "Anybody who thinks money is everything has never been sick. Or is."

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Pattern designs reflect modern folk heroes

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

Just when you thought it was safe to go back into the fabric stores again, two pattern companies have introduced patterns for what every well-dressed child will need for Halloween:

■ Simplicity's new line of "Star Trek: The Next Generation" patterns are scheduled to be released in the December catalog (which goes on sale Oct. 1. Don't ask me). According to company information, the "hottest character costume patterns" will be available "in time for Halloween dressing and future Trekkie conventions."

The information goes on to say the costume patterns are "exact replicas of the new Starfleet uniforms and will be available in teen and adult sizes. The body-fitting jumpsuits are made from stretch knits in the same colors as the television wardrobes. Simplicity will also include information on how to order special Star Trek insignias featured on the uniforms." The patterns are #9394 and #9397.

I don't know — correct me if I'm wrong — but don't smaller children enjoy dressing up for Halloween at least as much, if not more, that teens and adults? Why don't these patterns come in smaller sizes? Oh, well, my mother used to "cut down" patterns, so I'm sure that, come Halloween, thousands of tiny New Generation Trekkies will be properly attired.

■ You knew this was coming, didn't you — Batmania has hit the home-sewing world. Butterick Company Inc. has a new line of Bat-patterns (#985, #986 and #4201) to tempt the hearts of Bat-fans everywhere.

Patterns #985 and #986 are described by the company as "sweatshirt patterns with the officially licensed Bat-logo transfer to create innumerable Bat-fashions. Imagine, Bat-bandanas, Bat-caps, Bat-belts or an entire Bat-wardrobe." Yes, imagine. The mind boggles.

One pattern is adult-sized and the other is child-sized, the company's information goes on, and "each pattern package contains a transfer sheet with one large, one medium and three small Bat-logos and a sweatshirt pattern. With a little imagination, many individual Bat-styles can be produced." I'm thrilled. The patterns went on sale this month.

Pattern #4201 is for a Batman costume which is "available in adults sizes extra-small to large and boys sizes small to large."

If we now have Batman and Next Generation costumes floating around, can patterns for "Ghostbusters" jumpsuits and proton-packs be far behind? (At least with Indiana Jones, you don't have to actually sew — just shell out a small fortune for a real leather jacket and hat.) What about Captain Kirk and Mr. Spock? How in the world would a parent ever get those pointed ears to say on a small trick-or-treater?

I sure am glad I don't sew.

Food-store chains to test-fly 'frequent buyer' programs

New York Times News Service

From the school of thought that brought you frequent flier airline mileage now comes some food for thought: frequent buyer grocery shopping.

This fall, several food-store chains nationwide — including two in Southern California and one in Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D.C. — will offer an electronic rebate program.

It will reward shoppers who regularly purchase specific items with cash rebates or vouchers — similar to airline programs that award discounted or free fares.

"You've heard of the frequent flier program? This is the frequent buyer program," said Barry Scher, vice president for public affairs for Giant Food Inc., a D.C.-based supermarket chain with 147 stores.

Giant Food will test the program, called Reward America, at three stores starting about Oct. 1. So will Ralph's and Lucky South, two California retail chains.

After registering with a specific — similar to a bank statement — store, shoppers will be issued a personal computerized card that will be electronically scanned at the checkout counter.

They also will receive a monthly list of about 100 products in the program, as well as a monthly statement that records previous purchases.

Those purchases will be tallied quarterly. If a shopper buys a certain amount of a product over a three-month period, he or she will get a rebate.

House-sitting offers benefits

Associated Press

House-sitting has something for just about everyone.

For people who like to travel, a house sitter cares for their home, plants and pets while they're away. And for those who don't enjoy traveling, the Mature Outlook newsletter reports, house-sitting is a great way to get paid for staying home. Managing a house-sitting business can also be rewarding and profitable.

Jane Poston, 66, sells a handbook on how to run a house-sitting business and ran one herself in Tucson, Ariz., for 10 years before she sold it last year.

Poston says retirees are the perfect candidates for house-sitting jobs. She says she found them to be reliable and trustworthy. They are people like the Blantons. Verda, 75, and her husband, Maurice, 85, work for Housesitter Security Service. They have been house-sitting since they moved to Tucson in 1982.

The Blantons have never had major problems while house-sitting. But the job does have its challenges, especially when pet care is involved.

The Blantons have gotten some house-sitting jobs on their own but they prefer the convenience of using a service, which does the legwork and a lot of the paperwork for them.

There's a wide range of services available to people looking for a house-sitter.

Paul Sauer knows convenience is the backbone of the house-sitting business. He started a business, Homewatch, in Denver 16 years ago. In response to client requests, the business has expanded and now offers companion care, personal care and handyman services in addition to basic house-sitting services.

People thinking of hiring a house-sitting service should keep in mind that the level of protection and the number of pets and plants that need to be cared for determine the price. Homewatch offers four levels of house-sitting services to its clients:

— House checking: Someone goes to the house a couple of times a day to care for pets and plants, bring in mail and open or close drapes to make the house look lived in. Prices start at $10 per day.

— Overnight house-sitting: Someone stays in the home at night, cares for pets and plants and brings in mail. Prices start at $20 a night.

— 24-hour house-sitting: Someone stays in the home round the clock. Prices start at $27 per day.

— Personal care: Someone stays in the home to care for a convalescing patient. The care giver can do light housekeeping and meal preparation. Prices start at $65 per day.

Sauer's way of doing business has been very successful.

"It's a ideal job for a couple looking for a low-stress, low-overhead business," says Sauer, noting that it can be run from a spare room.

Professional organizers offer help

By KAREN BACK
Copley News Service

A popular cartoon some years ago portrayed a couple of guys with their feet up on a desk with a caption that read, "We've got to get organized."

Even for those with feet planted firmly on the ground, getting organized is no easy feat. Professional organizer Susan Rich offers some ideas to help.

The first, for people who usually have too many things on their plate, is "to reduce what you are truly going to do and put that in the forefront" — either put it close to you in a rack or in your drawer, write it on a calendar or on a list.

Whenever you store anything, remember that you can store much more vertically than you can horizontally.

"If you stand things up in a drawer, they always fit better," says Rich. "As soon as you make a pile in your drawer or on your filing tray, that's when you lose things and forfeit space."

Have only one calendar.

"If you have a desk calendar, a calendar in your purse, another one in your briefcase, a Things to Do Today list and a bulletin board, you're in trouble," she says. "You need to confine it to one place."

To get organized in your home/office, Rich recommends "the Jaguar of systems," Timetex, a pricey, comprehensive daybook that comes with a seminar that helps you organize your daily, weekly and monthly goals. It's a vinyl or leather three-ring binder that comes in two sizes — senior, which holds 8½x11 sheets, and junior, which is half that size. Specialty binders made in attache styles with handles that you can carry like a briefcase also are available.

If you prefer your organizing done on 3x5 cards, there's a system called Scan Plan — a clear plastic pouch that holds 3x5 cards, which are in turn held in a three-ring binder.

For organizing files, Rich recommends "the best, underutilized, underestimated product there is — an empty jug wine box — which you can get free at your grocery store." She adds, "And the box boys will love you."

For those who worry about leaky roofs or want a more sophisticated look, I suggest using steel filing cabinets. But don't use vertical files.

According to Chuck Hollins, CEO of Advanced Business Interiors, "They're inefficient because they take up too much floor space for the limited amount of storage they provide.

"The more current way of doing it is to get a lateral file — one that's wider than it is deep." He adds, "If you can, buy one that can slip underneath the work counter."

In order to prune your files, Hollins suggests applying the 80/20 rule, "which is basically saying that probably 20 percent of the papers you have stored are the ones you really would need to access 80 percent of the time, so take the other 80 percent you don't need to reference more than once a month and put it out in the garage so you don't clutter up your office with it."

In order to better organize your home office, Hollins suggests utilizing vertical space.

"I would suggest applying the same concept to a home office that has been applied to a business office," he says. "Most companies have gone with modular furniture — panel systems with shelving and components."

In order to save space at business and home offices, some people are buying a fastener with internal rollers called Copy Hinge, which is a plastic, non-magnetic paper display that mounts on the side of your computer with foam tape. Papers, which are held at eye level, can be inserted and released with one hand. Copy Hinge comes in a 6-inch model for holding letter- or legal-size sheets or a 12-inch model for data processing forms.

Filmgoers say 'charge it' at theaters

New York Times News Service

Moviegoers who never seem to have enough cash on hand may want to take advantage of a credit-card program being advertised in the July newsletter for American Express card members and in Cineplex Odeon theaters.

On May 1, Cineplex Odeon, the second-largest theater chain in North America, began accepting the American Express card for admission at its 340 locations in the United States and 154 in Canada.

When buying tickets at the box office with a credit card, customers may also charge vouchers (for $1 or $5 each) for use at the concession stands.

American Multi-Cinema Inc. has been accepting American Express, Visa, Mastercard and Discover cards at five places since February: Kansas City, Mo.; Orlando, Fla.; Century City, Calif.; Arlington, Va., and Washington.

In addition to accepting credit cards for tickets and concession vouchers, American Multi-Cinema allows credit-card users to buy tickets up to four days before a screening, either by phone or in person.

Terry Rennack, an American Multi-Cinema official, said credit-card purchases for blockbuster films account for up to 30 percent of ticket sales.

Paper: Jaruzelski would lose popular vote

WORLD

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — An opposition newspaper said today that Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski would have lost the presidency in a popular election, but opposition lawmakers said Jaruzelski's leadership is necessary to continue reforms.

Jaruzelski

Elected to the newly powerful presidency by the slimmest margin possible, Jaruzelski now faces the challenge of trying to salvage a crippled economy.

His task was exacerbated by strikes in the southern province of Katowice. The strikes eased today with the signing of a new pay agreement, but many workers reportedly rejected it and stayed off the job.

Jaruzelski's Communist coalition controls 300 seats in the 560-seat parliament, but because some in the coalition voted against him, a boycott by some opposition legislators may have been the key to Jaruzelski's win.

Jaruzelski, the Communist Party chief, needed 270 votes to win. The final tally was 270-to-233, with 34 abstentions.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and a spokesman for President Bush sent congratulatory messages today to Jaruzelski.

"Wojciech Jaruzelski is deeply respected in the Soviet Union as the initiator of the policy of national accord and socialist renovation," said Gorbachev's message, transmitted by the Soviet news agency Tass.

In Washington, Bush spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said in congratulating Jaruzelski, "Our only concern is to see the political and economic reform process go forward."

A commentary in the opposition newspaper Gazeta Wyborcza attributed Jaruzelski's win to what it called a symbolic single vote cast by Lech Walesa last week, when he said the president should come from the Communist coalition.

It said in a popular vote, Walesa, the leader of the Solidarity trade union movement, would have been the winner.

"What then is the result of this election for ordinary people in Poland, those who stand in lines and with horror think about the landslide of rising prices? Nothing," read the commentary.

"But these people will submit their bill to the deputies and senators, to the generals and ministers, and to the president, if the process of rescuing the country from ruin is not started."

The general, who has has led the country eight years and promises to oversee a transition to democracy, was the only candidate Wednesday.

Some Solidarity lawmakers displayed their paper ballots to TV cameras as they voted to show they were against Jaruzelski. Many of them had been imprisoned during Jaruzelski's 1981 martial law crackdown on the union.

Opposition lawmakers who did not vote said they could not openly endorse Jaruzelski, but they said defeating him could undermine reforms.

"It is a great relief," said opposition Sen. Karol Modzelewski of Wroclaw. "We would have been in real trouble if he did not make it."

As president, Jaruzelski now constitutionally controls the military and foreign relations and must nominate a prime minister to assemble a new government with parliamentary approval. It is a six-year term.

The government will have to contend with a deteriorating economy. Inflation is heading for 160 percent and food shortages are worsening.

EEC takes first step toward sending food aid to Poland

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The European Economic Community has taken the first step to supply emergency food to Poland, which was singled out for a helping hand at the economic summit of leading industrial nations.

Officials of the 12-nation trading bloc put forward a proposal Wednesday for shipping surplus agricultural products to Poland, which is suffering from serious food shortages.

The European Commission, the EEC's executive body, said the food will be provided to Poland in a way that will ensure that the government begins to take measures to reform the country's devastated economy.

The plan must be approved by agriculture ministers of the 12 nations that belong to the trading bloc. They are scheduled to meet Monday and Tuesday.

President Bush and the leaders of Canada, Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Japan agreed at their summit in Paris last week to ship food to Poland as soon as possible. They also called for a conference to coordinate support for reform measures in both Poland and Hungary.

The European Economic Community, also known as the Common Market, was assigned to take charge of the tasks.

In a statement, the European Commission announced it adopted a framework for urgently supplying food to Poland. The food will come out of the stocks the community has built up by its farmers.

Officials said the commission was considering a plan that would allow the Poles to sell the community's food on the free market and use the money for economic improvements, such as improving the food distribution system.

Ortega promises better times in speech at revolution rally

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega gave a full-fledged campaign speech on the 10th anniversary of the Sandinista revolution, knowing his government's performance in the next seven months is more important than all the triumphs and failures of the past decade.

Ortega, whose country has become the Western Hemisphere's poorest, promised better times ahead and said Nicaraguans are better off today than before July 19, 1979, when Sandinista guerrillas marched victoriously into Managua.

He called on President Bush to dismantle the U.S.-backed Contra rebels, most of whom are in neighboring Honduras, and even praised some opposition leaders who joined the Sandinistas at the start of the revolution then left it, feeling betrayed.

About 200,000 people gathered at a huge plaza along the shores of Lake Managua Wednesday for a rally, the highlight of otherwise lackluster 10th anniversary celebrations.

Observers who have been at other anniversary celebrations said most of those attending the 90-minute rally were either party loyalists or public employees afraid of losing their jobs if they didn't show up.

Ortega, who estimated the crowd at more than 300,000, said the large number showed the Sandinistas have at least that many votes assured for general elections set for Feb. 25.

The Sandinista show of strength at the rally might scare the opposition into abstaining from the ballot, Ortega said.

"But let's all be very clear about this ... they can take or leave the elections, but there will be elections on Feb. 25, 1990," he said. "And they will be clean and honest elections, like the ones in 1984."

In a 50-minute speech, Ortega said his government is controlling inflation, which "is not smashing us as is happening in other countries."

Inflation in Nicaragua surpassed 20,000 percent in 1988, but stiff austerity measures brought it down to a monthly rate of 12 percent in June.

Young men make a human pyramid with the topmost man hoisting the red-and-black flag of the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front in Managua, Nicaragua. They were at a mass rally marking the 10th anniversary of the Sandinista revolution Wednesday.

However, the cost has been high. The government has fired 35,000 public employees and tightened credit restrictions and public spending.

Foreign aid has decreased. A 10-country European tour in April and May from which Ortega hoped to get $250 million for the country to survive the year, produced just $50 million.

Nevertheless, at the end of his speech, Ortega proclaimed: "Today the people are better off than before 1979.

"Better days will come," he added.

Ortega did not elaborate and left the promises fluttering in the cool morning breeze from the lake.

He accused the United States of continuing its "imperialist aggression" against Nicaragua by maintaining a commercial blockade and blocking credit.

"The United States still hasn't decided to be respectful of the rights of the nations of the Third World ... and of Nicaragua.

"If the president of the United States is for peace ... he should stop immediately his policy of war against the people of Nicaragua and allow the Contras to be dismantled from Honduran territory."

Most of the U.S.-backed rebels are known to have moved to jungle camps in neighboring Honduras after their leaders and the Sandinistas signed a temporary truce in March 1988. Contra bands still roam northern and central Nicaragua.

"Good Neighbor Club" Send A Gift Of Love

This year when you go out of town for 3 or more days, send a "Gift of Love". Instead of stopping the delivery of the Reporter-Telegram - just call our circulation department and tell us you want to become a member of our "Good Neighbor Club". While you're away your paper will be delivered to a local nursing home. When you return, your regular delivery will be resumed.

It's just a simple gesture at a cost of pennies a day, but the residents will thank you for sharing your Reporter-Telegram subscription, and the Midland Reporter-Telegram will thank you for being a "Good Neighbor".

It's so easy to be a member of our "Good Neighbor Club". All you have to do is call our circulation department and say "I want to be a member of the "Good Neighbor Club". Tell us how long you will be out of town, and when to resume delivery to your house. We will do the rest.

Burmese police attack, beat anti-government protesters

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Police with sticks attacked and beat thousands of Burmese who defied martial law and rallied against the authoritarian government, witnesses said.

Burma's government-run radio reported 44 arrests during the demonstrations staged in Rangoon on Wednesday to coincide with Martyrs Day, a holiday marking Burmese independence.

Martial law has been effect since Sept. 18, when the military government of Gen. Saw Maung came to power after crushing pro-democracy protests. Martial law restrictions prohibit gatherings of more than five people.

Opposition groups had said they would hold mass rallies on Martyrs Day and the government subsequently tightened restrictions, empowering military commanders to try martial law violaters and impose the death penalty.

Martyrs Day commemorates the 1947 assassination of Aung San and other leaders who helped lead Burma to independence. Aung San's daughter, Aung San Suu Kyi, had vowed to lead a protest march Wednesday but canceled the plan to avoid bloodshed as troops flooded the streets.

The soldiers "blocked off all the roads and prepared literally a killing field for the people," said Ms. Suu Kyi, general secretary of the National League for Democracy.

Ms. Suu Kyi, who spoke in a telephone interview Wednesday from Rangoon, said soldiers beat with sticks some of a group of about 3,000 students who had gathered in the Rangoon's Swegondine district.

A Western diplomat, also telephoned from Bangkok, said he saw soldiers pursue a group of students down a side street, dragged some of them out and hit them with batons before putting 15 to 20 of them into a truck.

A heavily guarded ceremony sponsored by the government was held at the Martyrs Mausoleum without incident, though it was boycotted by most opposition parties.

The broadcast on government-run radio said that despite government warnings and toughened martial law restrictions, more than 1,400 people gathered Wednesday in seven areas of the city.

A text of the Wednesday night broadcast was seen today in Bangkok.

"Some people intent on disturbing the Martyrs Day ceremony held by the state violated the orders and the directives and attempted to attend the ceremony to cause disturbances," it said.

It said protesters "marched in procession bearing banners and anti-government posters, chanted slogans and distributed anti-government pamphlets," it said.

It said "security forces had to make them disperse while also detaining some of them. A total of 44 disturbance makers were arrested and detained for further legal action."

Thousands of people were believed killed over a period of several months during demonstrations last year for greater freedoms. Saw Maung seized control of the government in a coup in which hundreds more were killed in September.

In a related development, the government expelled a journalist the day before the Martyrs Day rallies.

Briton David Storey, Reuters' chief correspondent in Bangkok, said he had been in Rangoon only a day before immigration officers and armed soldiers went to his hotel Tuesday and drove him to Mingaladon airport.

He said he was put on the first flight back to Bangkok on Wednesday.

Storey had gone to Burma on a journalist visa. But he said immigration officers told him foreign journalists were not allowed into Burma at this time and that only guided group tours were permitted.

Moon walker

Apollo 11 astronaut Neil Armstrong first set foot on the moon 20 years ago, July 20, 1969, but appears to need a helping hand crossing this London street Wednesday. Employees of Madame Tussaud's London wax museum are actually carrying a wax likeness of Armstrong for a display at the London Planetarium marking man's historic first landing on the moon.

Soviets get to view moon landing 20 years later

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet televison viewers finally got a chance to see man walk on the moon today, on the 20th anniversary of the historic event.

When U.S. astronauts Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin took that famous "leap for mankind" onto the surface of the moon, millions of people saw it on live television. But Soviet TV showed a musical variety program.

Soviet television broadcast the July 20, 1969, moonwalk this morning. The timing on a weekday morning hardly guaranteed a wide audience, but the government television system showed a lengthy feature documentary on the event, including interviews with U.S. scientists.

Film clips included the blastoff and Armstrong walking on the moon gathering samples. The U.S. flag was clearly visible.

The announcer translated Armstrong's famous words into Russian: "One small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind."

In the past, Soviet TV carried extensive coverage of the linkup of the U.S. Apollo and Soviet Soyez capsules in 1975, but largely ignored the American program to land a man on the moon.

The broadcast today followed a July 10 article in Ogonyok magazine that said it was wrong to hide the moon landing from the Soviet people. The article gave a detailed description of the lunar landing.

Under President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, or greater openness, Soviet media have reported on many topics they once did not cover.

Coal miners' strikes spread to four more Siberian fields

NOVOKUZNETSK, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Strikes by tens of thousands of miners in this Siberian coal region spread to four more of the Soviet Union's coal fields, Tass reported today.

The official news agency said coal miners in Vorkuta in the far north, the Don River city of Rostov in southwestern Russia and the Ukrainian industrial center of Dnepropetrovsk walked out Wednesday.

Miners in the Karaganda region in Soviet Central Asia today refused to work, Tass said. By evening, 14 mines in the region, home of the country's third-largest coal fields, were reported at a standstill.

Tass said their demands were similar to those of striking miners in the Donetsk and Kuznetsk coal basins, who are seeking greater local control over their industries and better wages and living conditions.

Kuznetsk, in western Siberia, and Donetsk, in the Ukraine, are the country's two leading coal basins and the strikes amount to the country's worst labor unrest since the 1920s. Novokuznetsk is a major city in the Kuznetsk region, where the strikes began 10 days ago.

The government has acknowledged that living and working conditions for miners in the regions are abysmal and has made general pledges of improvements.

Tass reported Wednesday that some miners in Siberia had returned to work after the government made pay concessions.

The government also has promised to send extra meat, butter, sugar, tea, leather shoes, furniture and cars to relieve shortages in the region, the Communist Youth League newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda said today.

But the newspaper and Tass reported more disturbances in the Ukraine. Komsomolskaya Pravda quoted a communist official in the Donetsk city of Makeyevka as saying, "The scale of the strike is growing. Practically all the coal enterprises of the city have stopped work."

Miners in Vorkuta, Rostov and Dnepropetrovsk all walked off the job Wednesday, Tass said.

In Vorkuta, strikers sent a letter to the Kremlin asking for an "urgent resolution of the sharp economic and social problems of the coal sector, and also specific problems of workers of the far north," Tass said.

In Rostov, miners' economic demands included extra pay for evening and night shifts, longer vacations and an increase in the price of coal to world market prices, the news agency reported.

In Dnepropetrovsk, which is 150 miles from Donetsk, workers' demands mirrored those of Donetsk and Kuznetsk miners.

In Karaganda, strikers said they walked out to protest incomplete news accounts of miners' demands in the Kuznetsk strikes, according to Tass.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Wednesday the strikes could imperil his reforms and that there were reports of railway workers being urged to strike.

He said that if labor trouble spreads, "We may have to take such extreme measures that it will hurt what we've been doing" to overhaul the economy through greater attention to free-market mechanisms.

He did not elaborate.

Strikes are rare in the Soviet Union and were ended by force before Gorbachev gained power in March 1985.

Tass today said that the Kuznetsk strike had reached "a turning point," with nine out of 11 mining centers back at work.

It was not known how many more employees were back on the job today. On Wednesday, Tass said that 24,000 strikers in Kuznetsk were back at work and 150,000 remained on strike.

State television said Wednesday that the strike in the Donetsk basin had spread to 70 of its 120 mines, more than triple the previous number, and that mine construction workers had joined.

In a report from the Donetsk city of Yenakiyevo, television said steel and coke-chemical plants were "on the verge of a stoppage" for lack of coal.

Earlier reports in the official press had said operations at steel and power plants were affected by short supplies of coal and coke.

Gorbachev told the national legislature Wednesday that the strikes had deprived the nation of more than 1 million tons of coal.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Tourists evacuated from area near Black Sea due to unrest

MOSCOW (AP) — Authorities evacuated 1,500 tourists and banned new visitors from the Black Sea region of Abkhazia, where troops have been unable to halt a bloody feud between rival ethnic groups, Soviet media said today.

Armed bands of Georgians and Abkhazians continued to roam the roads in the resort area 870 miles south of Moscow, Tass said.

Authorities declared a state of emergency and imposed a curfew in the region Tuesday and by today had confiscated more than 2,500 firearms, Radio Moscow said.

But the report said "attacks on citizens, policemen, and army servicemen" continued Wednesday night in the Abkhazian capital of Sukhumi.

Soviet news reports said Interior Ministry troops and police were confiscating weapons from rioters, but Komsomolskaya Pravda, the Communist Youth League newspaper, reported today that Sukhumi police had to return some firearms to fear-stricken residents.

China complains about sanctions

BEIJING (AP) — The Foreign Ministry called in the U.S. ambassador today and accused Congress of deliberately trying to undermine relations with China by approving new trade sanctions.

The official Xinhua News Agency said Liu Huaqiu, an assistant to Foreign Minister Qian Qichen, expressed China's indignation and delivered a strong protest to Ambassador James Lilley.

The Foreign Affairs Committee of the National People's Congress, China's legislature, issued a separate protest charging that Congress "willfully distorted the facts about China's efforts to put an end to turmoil and quell the counterrevolutionary rebellion in Beijing."

The protests were the latest in a series of recriminations reflecting U.S. outrage over the Chinese army's crackdown on pro-democracy protesters and Chinese outrage over any foreign comment on its domestic politics. Relations have deteriorated to their lowest level since the two countries established diplomatic ties in 1979.

Rushdie claims letters of support

LONDON (AP) — Supporters of Salman Rushdie said Wednesday that the author, who is under an Iranian death threat for writing a novel many Moslems consider blasphemous, believes reconciliation with his opponents is possible.

The Indian-born British novelist, author of "The Satanic Verses," said many Moslems had written him letters of support since he was forced into hiding in February, said the International Committee for the Defense of Salman Rushdie and His Publishers.

Before he died last month, Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini called on Moslems to kill Rushdie, whose novel was first published in English last year. Two Iranian clerics supported the edict by offering a $5.2 million bounty.
