Bunton reverses jury's decision in Jay Martin case

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland College officials were elated. But former MC economics Instructor Dr. Jay Dee Martin was disappointed on Friday when U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton ruled that Martin's use of profane and obscene language in the classroom was "not constitutionally protected."

In addition, the judge overturned the six-member civil jury's finding that Midland College officials, defendants in the discrimination-free-speech suit filed by Martin, "failed to treat the plaintiff (Martin) as other instructors similarly situated."

"That's obviously fantastic," Dr. Jess Parrish, MC president, said Friday of the federal judgment.

The jury in October had awarded Martin $28,000 in damages for loss of his job in 1984 after two students in his summer economics class had complained of his use of profane and obscene language in the classroom.

The judge nixed the money damages.

The jury had held that Martin's use of the language did not interfere or hinder Midland College "in providing the best education possible" for its students. In addition, the jury found that Martin's word usage did not "materially or substantially" disrupt the classroom on June 19, 1984, when Martin admitted using the profane-obscene words. The jurors also determined that Martin was accorded "due process" by the college before he was fired. The judge did not strike those findings.

Parrish said it was the "principle of the thing — the meaning to the college" — that concerned him.

"IT WOULD HAVE been devastating to us to have a different kind of ruling," Parrish said.

Martin was disappointed.

"That's bad news," he said Friday from his home in Midlothian, Va. Martin teaches economics at nearby Longwood College, a four-year state college in Farmville, Va. "I thought that the jury tried to establish what they thought was just. I'm surprised and certainly disappointed (in the ruling)...but we don't necessarily decide to give up."

Martin said he may appeal the judge's ruling.

"The jury...thought I had been treated differently from other faculty members at Midland College — that I had been singled out. I believe that I had, too," said Martin, who was represented in the lawsuit by his friend, Crosby County Attorney John Barnhill of Crosbyton. Midland attorneys Harrell Feldt and Barbara Goolsby represented the MC officials.

The 40-year-old Martin, who had taught at Midland College for eight years, had worked on the college handbook on faculty rights, including due process, and had been hailed by students, fellow faculty members and the administration as an excellent instructor.

"And I was trying to protect faculty rights," he said. "I think that's what got me in trouble with them (the MC administrators) in the first place."

Santana, Starship rocking 'n' rolling with Uncle Sam

SAUSALITO, Calif. (AP) — Uncle Sam probably never dreamed he'd be rocking 'n' rolling one day with Carlos Santana, the Starship and Huey Lewis and the News, let alone operating one of the nation's hottest recording studios.

And by the same token, rock musicians never thought they'd be recording at a studio operated by the government.

But when federal agents on Nov. 4 reopened The Plant Studios — now dubbed "Club Fed" — musicians and employees decided, "What the heck," recalled studio manager Claire Pister.

Agents seized the studio in September and padlocked its doors after its owner, Stanley F. Jacox, was arrested on drug manufacturing charges.

Ms. Pister said in an interview Thursday she at first thought it might be difficult to lure artists back to the studio. But her fears were unfounded.

"We really didn't have to do anything. As soon as everyone heard we were back open again, they started rolling in," said Ms. Pister, who runs the studio with a skeleton crew under contract with the government.

"Of course, they were concerned about federal agents being on the premises. But after finding that they were not allowed in the building, everything was fine," she said.

Among the first clients was guitarist Carlos Santana, whose new album, to be titled "Personal Contact," should be released by spring.

Santana's band didn't worry about working in the studio. In fact, they had fears of not being able to record at the Plant, said Bryan Bell, spokesman for Santana.

"We were really concerned about finding a studio with a reputation as good as the Plant," Bell said. Some of the rock stars at the studio include Dan Fogelberg.

Odessa companies on worst polluters list

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Water Commission Friday named two Odessa companies as among the state's worst water polluters in an attempt to use public pressure to force the violators to clean up their acts.

Water Commission officials said Katty Industries and Permian Chemicals both have chronic histories of non-compliance with pollution standards and have contaminated area groundwater.

Commission Executive Director Larry Soward released the list of the worst polluters along with a list of companies with "exemplary records" at a Capitol press conference. Soward said his staff had identified those polluters that have harmed the environment "or whose operations are such that a great potential for environmental harm exists."

Soward said the commission published the lists as an additional enforcement tool along with the expanded powers the Legislature granted earlier this year. The lawmakers gave the commission authority to levy administrative fines against polluters who were violating their permits.

"We do not feel that fines and penalties are always the most effective forms of enforcement," Soward said. "Frankly, we think public pressure on known polluters is often more effective than any means we have at our direct disposal."

Bob Colbert, chief of community relations for the commission's hazardous and solid waste division, said Katty Industries has a long history of non-compliance with pollution standards in its state permit. Colbert said a Katty leak contaminated groundwater with chromium.

Nuclear power may raise electric bills

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland households could face 13- to 28-percent increases on their monthly electric bills once the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant is completed, two recent studies indicate.

An October Public Utility Commission survey estimates Texas Electric Service Co. customers will pay 5.75 percent more for their power when the first of two units comes on-line in 1987. The study, titled "The Estimated Impact of Nuclear Power Plants on Texas Ratepayers," says Unit 2 will raise rates an additional 6.97 percent.

The figures reflect projected kilowatt-hour prices, rather than current kilowatt-hour numbers.

TESCO is a subsidiary of Texas Utilities Electric Co. Spokesman Dick Ramsey said the PUC survey figures "are not too much different from our own studies," adding that a more accurate number can be derived by using current kilowatt-hour prices, rather than projected ones.

Using those figures, the commission study estimates overall rates will increase about 17 percent when both units are on-line.

"I think it's fairer to use the current rates as a basis," Ramsey said. "The 17 percent figure comes closer to giving the right impression."

The higher rates would pay for the plant's construction. Texas Utilities Electric Co. owns 88 percent of the troubled project, which is now seven years behind schedule. Project owners originally estimated the project to cost about $779 million, but cost overruns and numerous delays have upped that figure to $4.5 billion.

Public Citizen, a consumer advocate group Ralph Nadar formed in 1971, released a similar study in July which says completion of Comanche Peak will increase rates by a total of 28 percent. The study estimates Unit 1 will cause a 14-percent hike in TUEC's rates during its first year of operation. Unit 2 will increase rates another 14 percent, the survey concludes.

Both surveys base their estimates on the assumption that the PUC will rule that all costs associated with the plant are prudent, thus allowing Texas Utilities to pass on the entire cost of the power plant to its ratepayers. Neither study anticipates actions the commission or the utility could take to soften the blow of the rate increases.

Ramsey characterized the Public Citizen percentages as unrealistic.

Mattox promotes 'most wanted' parents list

He says media responsible for program's success

Jim Mattox

From Staff Reports

Attorney General Jim Mattox came to Midland Friday to promote his program of publishing "most wanted" lists of parents who are delinquent in paying child support.

"Everywhere we've had the cooperation of the local media, we have had great success with this program," said Mattox at a Midland Regional Airport press conference.

According to Mattox, two people whose names were published in local newspapers Sept. 8 have contacted the Midland/Odessa Child Support Enforcement Office, and are now working out settlements. Statewide, there have been 16 arrests and 13 settlements as a result of the "most wanted" lists, which were first published in July, Mattox said.

"Members of the public are helping us by telling us they know the whereabouts of the missing persons. Local law-enforcement officers have made finding these deadbeats a priority. And a lot of delinquent parents, who are afraid of finding their names in the newspapers, are voluntarily coming into our offices to catch up on their payments," he said.

Child-support collections have risen by about 80 percent since he took over the program in September 1983, Mattox said.

"I'm probably more aggressive than any other attorney general in the area" in enforcing child support obligations, but his reasons are somewhat personal, Mattox revealed: 'I'm from a home where my parents were divorced."

His father paid child support, but the experience left Mattox with a special sympathy for the children of divorce.

"It's a longstanding interest of mine," he said.

Only about 28 percent of parents ordered by courts to pay child support pay the full amount, and about 50 percent pay nothing at all, Mattox said.

"For the sake of the children, we're going to have to start enforcing," he said.

With more staff, he could collect more payments, Mattox said.

"The Legislature ties our hands. Our staff for child-support collections should be doubled," he said. But there may not be enough applicants for even the number of positions currently funded.

"We're looking for an attorney right now," said Iris Hall of the Midland collection office.

Mattox has taken up this cause because "the welfare agencies just frequently do not have the clout that elected officials have." But allowing delinquent parents, most of whom are fathers, to evade the financial responsibility for taking care of their own children is uneconomical, because otherwise "the state's going to have to support them through welfare," he said.

The Midland office has a list of 4,100 delinquent cases, he added, and the new practice of publishing lists has added to the backlog.

"We're opening up many new cases across the state because of parents calling in to say their ex-spouses owe child support but they didn't know what to do about it until seeing publicity about the lists," he said.

"The success we've had with it so far means we definitely will continue until we've covered the entire state."

Reagan, O'Neill praise Irish-British agreement

Associated Press

Two of the nation's best-known men of Irish descent — President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill — joined Friday to praise an agreement giving the Irish government a formal voice in running the British province of Northern Ireland.

Some Irish-Americans who oppose British rule in the province denounced the agreement as nothing more than a political public relations maneuver.

The president said the agreement signed in Belfast on Friday was "a great breakthrough" and O'Neill hailed it as a "very courageous" step by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Irish Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald.

"We view this agreement as a clear demonstration of British and Irish determination to make progress concerning Northern Ireland and in their bilateral relations. Given the complex situation in Northern Ireland, all may not applaud this agreement," Reagan said in a written statement issued after he met with O'Neill at the White House.

"But let me state that the United States strongly supports this initiative, which pledges to both communities in Northern Ireland respect for their rights and traditions, within a society free from violence and intimidation."

Meanwhile, the 18 senators and 18 members of the House who signed a letter of support as "friends of Ireland" pledged that "in the weeks ahead, we stand ready to work...to provide all appropriate assistance by the United States, including financial and economic support to help implement the new agreement."

In New York, a former U.S. ambassador to Ireland, called the agreement "the most important and potentially most constructive development in Northern Ireland since the country was partitioned in 1921," said William Shannon, who served as ambassador from 1977-81.

Although Dublin was granted only an advisory role, Shannon said, 'one can assume the British government did not enter into the agreement unless they were willing to take the Irish government very seriously."

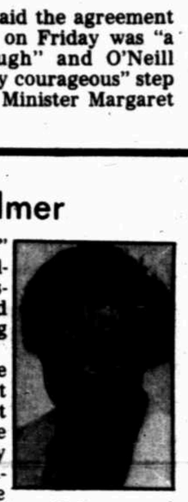
Supporters of the Republican cause in Northern Ireland denounced the agreement.

"I'm very disappointed," said Martin Galvin, spokesman for NORAID, which is sympathetic to the Irish Republican Army. "We had been led to believe the Dublin government would have been given a real voice."

In exchange for recognizing British sovereignty, Galvin said in New York, Northern Ireland only gained the right to consult with the British government.

DEATHS

Alester Palmer



Palmer

Alester "Kittie" Palmer, 76, of Midland died Thursday at a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 3 p.m. today at Antioch Baptist Church with the Rev. Johnny Mitchell officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery, directed by Thomas Funeral Home.

Mrs. Palmer was born Jan. 7, 1909, in Caldwell. She moved to Midland in 1942. In December 1970, she was married to James R. Palmer in Midland. She was a member of Antioch Baptist Church for 40 years before becoming a charter member of Mt. Carmel Baptist Church.

Survivors include her husband; a daughter, Lucy Pitmann of Texas City; a sister, Donnie Mae Tisdale of Midland; a brother, George Tisdale of Midland; a niece, Mrs. Charles Etta Jennings of Midland; and a great-nephew, Donnie Brackens of Midland.

She died at her home early Thursday.

Mrs. Ford was born June 6, 1926, in Idalou and was reared there. She moved to Midland in 1950 from Lubbock. She worked for Mobil and Western Inspection. She was working in real estate at the time of her death.

Survivors include a son, Robert Levens of Midland; a daughter, Sheree Levens of Midland; and two grandchildren.

MARTIN

MOMENTS AFTER the three-man, three-woman jury found in his favor on Oct. 15, Martin said he was "not crusading. I'm not trying to say, I stand for profanity in the classroom necessarily. I do occasionally use those words." He said he had used certain words, which MC officials had found offensive, to goad the somewhat languid class into serious study.

Parrish said Bunton's ruling was "really what I felt like legally had to happen."

"We felt like profanity was not protected under the (United States) Constitution, and...we really didn't have anybody in a similar position" as a basis for what Martin termed discrimination. No other instructor in effect had been placed on probation for used of offensive language in the classroom.

Parrish said the jury, which included one Midlander and five Odessans, "erred" based on the judge's instructions.

Bunton ruled that Martin "did not demonstrate that any other student had complained to school administrators about a faculty member's language and that the complaint was handled differently" by MC officials.

The administration in 1983 had cautioned Martin to curb his use of foul language in the classroom.

"...In blunt terms," Bunton wrote, "(Martin) failed to heed the warnings that his superiors had given him about his choice of words" and subsequently was fired.

"Reasonable individuals could not arrive at a verdict other than that the (MC) defendants had not treated the plaintiff (Martin) differently than other individuals similarly situated."

The jurors had held otherwise — that Martin had been treated differently. And Martin contended that the administration had "information" that other MC instructors had used profane or obscene words in the classroom and that the administration took no action. However, in Martin's case, two students wrote letters to the administration in complaining about Martin's classroom language. This was after Martin had been warned by the administration not to use profane-obscene language in the classroom.

FURTHER, BUNTON ruled that Martin's use of "certain profane words in the classroom...are not constitutionally protected."

"'It is well understood that the right of free speech is not absolute at all times and under all circumstances,'" Bunton said in quoting a U.S. Supreme Court justice. "'There are certain well-defined and narrowly limited classes of speech, the prevention of punishment of which have never been thought to raise a Constitutional problem. These include lewd and obscene, the profane and libelous, and the insulting fighting words — those which by their very utterance inflict injury or tend to incite an immediate breach of the peace.

"'...Such utterances are no essential part of any exposition of ideas and are of such slight social value as a step to truth that any benefit that may be derived from them is clearly outweighed by the social interest in order and morality.'"

Jack Huff, MC trustee and one of 12 MC officials named in the Martin suit, said he was "gratified" with the ruling.

"It demonstrates that the board can give the guidelines and standards for what happens in the classroom," Huff said.

Hoyle McCright, MC board president, said he felt that "justice was done by Judge Bunton's ruling."

dent, said the chromium leak from its plating operations occurred at the company's old plant on West County Road more than four years ago. Hudson said Katty has worked to clean up the spill, just not as quickly as the commission would like.

"We spent $125,000 of our own money in the last two years," he said. "We have been hauling out contaminated soil...10 trucks in the last 90 days."

Hudson said the company is providing bottled water to four area businesses whose groundwater supplies the leak has contaminated. "We are doing no pollution whatsoever in this location," he added.

Colbert said Permian Chemicals also has a long history of non-compliance. That company has contaminated groundwater with chlorides, he said.

The receptionist at Permian Chemicals said only company President Elvis Lee could answer questions from the press. Lee spent Friday afternoon at a funeral, she said, and would not return to his offiee until Tuesday.

Soward said the publication of the worst polluters is part of a commission attempt to protect the public health. "Anytime you have pollution problems, you have the potential for adverse public health," he said.

Diversitech General Co. in Odessa made the commission's "best in the state" list. Colebert said that plant has "an exemplary operating record ... with few or no violations." The commission awarded the city of Odessa's east plant an honorable mention.

Soward said the companies on his best list deserve some "long overdue recognition" and provide a role model whose actions the others might want to duplicate.

NUCLEAR

"We don't know where they got those figures from," he said. "It's just hard to comment on something when you've got no idea of how they came up with it."

For the past year, Texas Utilities has conducted a comprehensive internal investigation at the plant. The utility is looking into numerous areas, including electrical, mechanical and structural issues, as well as overall quality assurance.

The company-sponsored inspection began last fall after the U.S. Atomic Safety and Licensing Board cited a number of safety flaws at the plant, which is 45 miles southwest of Fort Worth. In August, the board turned down a request to use the utility's reinspection as the sole basis for deciding whether the troubled plant is safe.

The board's ruling is expected to add millions of dollars to the final cost of the plant, now estimated at nearly $5 billion. Each day the plant stands idle adds $1 million in financing, maintenance and insurance costs, Texas Utilities officials say.

Ramsey said Unit 1 is 99 percent complete, adding that the overall project is about 75 percent finished. The utility's inspection will conclude within several months, he said.

"We think that we should be able to demonstrate to any reasonable person that we have either found no problems, or if we have found any we've resolved them," Ramsey said.

In its report, Public Citizen asserts that nuclear power plants have become symptomatic of a "crisis in utility management," that have turned into money-eating machines retarding economic growth.

Ramsey said that despite the delays and cost overruns, Comanche Peak is still a viable investment. "There's no way we could come close to it in terms of dependable, low-cost fuel," he said.

Ector Commissioners OK drainage repair plans

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

Ector County Commissioners, meeting in special session Friday, approved plans to correct drainage problems at the newly renovated Exhibit Building G, but rejected a proposal to pay remaining funds due until the work is completed.

The balance due on the contract to convert the former horse barn to an exhibit building, according to County Judge Jan Fisher, is $30,258.30. Court members rejected a proposal by Precinct 1 Commissioner Bill Tolbert to make the final payment since Midland-based HBF Corp. had demonstrated "good faith" in attempting to resolve drainage problems. The renovated building flooded during recent rains and it was determined the problem existed because of a difference in grade levels and rain gutters that caused rain water to accumulate in front of newly-installed overhead doors. According to plans developed by County engineer Don Bonifay and Coliseum manager Don Thorn, concrete in the doorways will be removed and a new concrete threshold installed that will be about one and a half inches higher than the present one.

New rain gutters are to be installed that will channel runoff rainwater away from the doorways and pavement around the northside of the buidling will be reworked to deepen drainage channels.

The architectural firm of Covington & Taylor and HBF Corp. have agreed to correct the problems at no cost to Ector County.

Ms. Pister said Huey Lewis has called to congratulate the staff and say he expects to be recording in January. Buddy Miles and John Fogerty also have scheduled appointments.

"It's business as usual, here," she said. "In fact, we're booked solid through December."

While artists and Plant employees felt confident about reopening the studio, government officials were leery.

"We were a bit hesitant to open the studio at first," said John Gisla, assistant U.S. attorney. "The government runs governments, but has no experience running a recording studio."

The government gained permission from the courts on Wednesday to look for a buyer for the studio, Gisla said.

If a buyer is found, the government has to gain permission from the courts to sell it, and profits made will be held by the government until the legal case against Jacox is settled, Gisla said.

FDIC closes Teague bank

STATE

TEAGUE (AP) — Depositors of the failed First National Bank of Teague will probably start receiving payments Monday after federal officials decided to close the bank permanently.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s board of directors on Friday approved selling assets, paying off insured depositors and closing the bank as insolvent after receiving no purchase bids.

The FDIC board voted in Washington that a payoff of insured depositors was required, spokesman Bill Olcheski said.

The federal agency was named the bank's receiver after the bank was closed on Thursday by Michael Patriarca, deputy comptroller of the currency, officials said.

The institution is the 11th bank in Texas to fail this year and the 101st nationwide.

"It's pretty much of a surprise," Teague Mayor Clydell Webb said. "Any business is a loss to the community, but we're not able to gauge the impact this will have. It's all so sudden."

The bank was one of the oldest businesses in the Freestone County city, which has a population of 3,500.

The only other bank in town, Citizens National Bank of Teague, has $9,747,000 in assets, said Phillip Gilliam, Citizens National president.

Bank deposits totaled $26.3 million in 5,400 accounts at First National Bank of Teague, Olcheski said. The FDIC estimated all but about $465,000 in 40 accounts were within the federal insurance limit of $100,000 or are otherwise secured.

Olcheski said in a statement that owners of such uninsured deposits will share proportionately with the FDIC in proceeds realized from liquidation of the bank's assets.

The FDIC board also voted to make a prompt advance payment to uninsured depositors and other creditors, based on the estimated present value of assets to be liquidated, equal to 45 percent of the uninsured claims.

Olcheski said if actual collections of bank assets on a present value basis exceed this estimate, uninsured depositors would ultimately receive additional payments on their claims.

"The estimate for the advance is believed to be conservative and it is hoped that actual collections will be higher," said Olcheski in the statement. "If, however, the present value of actual collections should be less than 45 percent, the FDIC insurance fund will absorb the shortfall."

FDIC spokesman Frank Vance said the bank, about 90 miles southeast of Dallas, was granted a national charter on May 2, 1927.

The quality of the bank's loan portfolio had substantially deteriorated over the past year, he said.

Vance said the bank was "unable to remedy this problem and losses finally exhausted the bank's capital funds, resulting in its insolvency."

Ranger authorities puzzling over why man posed as Adair associate

RANGER (AP) — While a gas well blowout raged near this West Texas town, authorities puzzled over the appearance of a man who posed as an associate of Paul "Red" Adair and helped evacuate residents from the well site.

The man, claiming to work for the internationally known oilfield firefighter, arrived last week at the scene of the blowout, where crews were still working Friday to shut off escaping natural gas.

But Adair, of Houston, said the man who helped identify dangerous gas pockets and assisted local authorities was an impostor.

"They had a good con artist down there but he had no ties with us," Adair told the Abilene Reporter-News on Thursday. "Nobody working for me was down there."

Instead, Boots and Coots, another oil well firefighting team, was hired by Ray Richey, the well owner, to control the blowout that began Nov. 6.

Then authorities temporarily evacuated homes and closed nearby roads, fearing a fire.

Eastland County sheriff's officers said the impostor, dressed in red coveralls and sporting Red Adair patches, arrived about 24 hours after the blowout.

"I'm convinced he was legit," said Ranger Police Capt. John Mackey, adding the man began helping officers with evacuations.

Asking for identification didn't cross their minds, Mackey said.

The man stressed how dangerous the situation was, said Mackey, showing officials locations of gas pockets.

Adair said several people attempt to impersonate him or pass themselves off as his employees.

"They're just weird people," said Adair. "I don't know why they do it. Maybe they want the glory. We're the best in the business."

The man drove a brown Mercedes-Benz which bore a dealer's tag, he said.

But Adair said his employees drive red Lincoln Continentals bearing his company emblem. He said his company gives out souvenirs, including jackets with patches.

"Sometimes, people get out there wearing the jackets and try to say they're with us," he said.

Associated Press

Two of the nation's best-known men of Irish descent — President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill — joined Friday to praise an agreement giving the Irish government a formal voice in running the British province of Northern Ireland.

Some Irish-Americans who oppose British rule in the province denounced the agreement as nothing more than a political public relations maneuver.

The president said the agreement signed in Belfast on Friday was "a great breakthrough" and O'Neill hailed it as a "very courageous" step by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Irish Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald.

"We view this agreement as a clear demonstration of British and Irish determination to make progress concerning Northern Ireland and in their bilateral relations. Given the complex situation in Northern Ireland, all may not applaud this agreement," Reagan said in a written statement issued after he met with O'Neill at the White House.

"But let me state that the United States strongly supports this initiative, which pledges to both communities in Northern Ireland respect for their rights and traditions, within a society free from violence and intimidation."

Meanwhile, the 18 senators and 18 members of the House who signed a letter of support as "friends of Ireland" pledged that "in the weeks ahead, we stand ready to work...to provide all appropriate assistance by the United States, including financial and economic support to help implement the new agreement."

In New York, a former U.S. ambassador to Ireland, called the agreement "the most important and potentially most constructive development in Northern Ireland since the country was partitioned in 1921," said William Shannon, who served as ambassador from 1977-81.

Although Dublin was granted only an advisory role, Shannon said, 'one can assume the British government did not enter into the agreement unless they were willing to take the Irish government very seriously."

Supporters of the Republican cause in Northern Ireland denounced the agreement.

"I'm very disappointed," said Martin Galvin, spokesman for NORAID, which is sympathetic to the Irish Republican Army. "We had been led to believe the Dublin government would have been given a real voice."

In exchange for recognizing British sovereignty, Galvin said in New York, Northern Ireland only gained the right to consult with the British government.

DEATHS

Palmer

Alester "Kittie" Palmer, 76, of Midland died Thursday at a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 3 p.m. today at Antioch Baptist Church with the Rev. Johnny Mitchell officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery, directed by Thomas Funeral Home.

Mrs. Palmer was born Jan. 7, 1909, in Caldwell. She moved to Midland in 1942. In December 1970, she was married to James R. Palmer in Midland. She was a member of Antioch Baptist Church for 40 years before becoming a charter member of Mt. Carmel Baptist Church.

Survivors include her husband; a daughter, Lucy Pitmann of Texas City; a sister, Donnie Mae Tisdale of Midland; a brother, George Tisdale of Midland; a niece, Mrs. Charles Etta Jennings of Midland; and a great-nephew, Donnie Brackens of Midland.

Genny Ford

Graveside services for Genny Ford, 59, of Midland will be at 1:30 p.m. today at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Handling arrangements is Ellis Funeral Home.

She died at her home early Thursday.

Mrs. Ford was born June 6, 1926, in Idalou and was reared there. She moved to Midland in 1950 from Lubbock. She worked for Mobil and Western Inspection. She was working in real estate at the time of her death.

Survivors include a son, Robert Levens of Midland; a daughter, Sheree Levens of Midland; and two grandchildren.

MOMENTS AFTER the three-man, three-woman jury found in his favor on Oct. 15, Martin said he was "not crusading. I'm not trying to say, I stand for profanity in the classroom necessarily. I do occasionally use those words." He said he had used certain words, which MC officials had found offensive, to goad the somewhat languid class into serious study.

Parrish said Bunton's ruling was "really what I felt like legally had to happen."

"We felt like profanity was not protected under the (United States) Constitution, and...we really didn't have anybody in a similar position" as a basis for what Martin termed discrimination. No other instructor in effect had been placed on probation for used of offensive language in the classroom.

Parrish said the jury, which included one Midlander and five Odessans, "erred" based on the judge's instructions.

Bunton ruled that Martin "did not demonstrate that any other student had complained to school administrators about a faculty member's language and that the complaint was handled differently" by MC officials.

The administration in 1983 had cautioned Martin to curb his use of foul language in the classroom.

"...In blunt terms," Bunton wrote, "(Martin) failed to heed the warnings that his superiors had given him about his choice of words" and subsequently was fired.

"Reasonable individuals could not arrive at a verdict other than that the (MC) defendants had not treated the plaintiff (Martin) differently than other individuals similarly situated."

The jurors had held otherwise — that Martin had been treated differently. And Martin contended that the administration had "information" that other MC instructors had used profane or obscene words in the classroom and that the administration took no action. However, in Martin's case, two students wrote letters to the administration in complaining about Martin's classroom language. This was after Martin had been warned by the administration not to use profane-obscene language in the classroom.

FURTHER, BUNTON ruled that Martin's use of "certain profane words in the classroom...are not constitutionally protected."

"'It is well understood that the right of free speech is not absolute at all times and under all circumstances,'" Bunton said in quoting a U.S. Supreme Court justice. "'There are certain well-defined and narrowly limited classes of speech, the prevention of punishment of which have never been thought to raise a Constitutional problem. These include lewd and obscene, the profane and libelous, and the insulting fighting words — those which by their very utterance inflict injury or tend to incite an immediate breach of the peace.'

"'...Such utterances are no essential part of any exposition of ideas and are of such slight social value as a step to truth that any benefit that may be derived from them is clearly outweighed by the social interest in order and morality.'"

Jack Huff, MC trustee and one of 12 MC officials named in the Martin suit, said he was "gratified" with the ruling.

"It demonstrates that the board can give the guidelines and standards for what happens in the classroom," Huff said.

Hoyle McCright, MC board president, said he felt that "justice was done by Judge Bunton's ruling."

POLLUTE

dent, said the chromium leak from its plating operations occurred at the company's old plant on West County Road more than four years ago. Hudson said Katty has worked to clean up the spill, just not as quickly as the commission would like.

"We spent $125,000 of our own money in the last two years," he said. "We have been hauling out contaminated soil...10 trucks in the last 90 days."

Hudson said the company is providing bottled water to four area businesses whose groundwater supplies the leak has contaminated. "We are doing no pollution whatsoever in this location," he added.

Colbert said Permian Chemicals also has a long history of non-compliance. That company has contaminated groundwater with chlorides, he said.

The receptionist at Permian Chemicals said only company President Elvis Lee could answer questions from the press. Lee spent Friday afternoon at a funeral, she said, and would not return to his office until Tuesday.

Soward said the publication of the worst polluters is part of a commission attempt to protect the public health. "Anytime you have pollution problems, you have the potential for adverse public health," he said.

Diversitech General Co. in Odessa made the commission's "best in the state" list. Colebert said that plant has "an exemplary operating record ... with few or no violations." The commission awarded the city of Odessa's east plant an honorable mention.

Soward said the companies on his best list deserve some "long overdue recognition" and provide a role model whose actions the others might want to duplicate.

"We don't know where they got those figures from," he said. "It's just hard to comment on something when you've got no idea of how they came up with it."

For the past year, Texas Utilities has conducted a comprehensive internal investigation at the plant. The utility is looking into numerous areas, including electrical, mechanical and structural issues, as well as overall quality assurance.

The company-sponsored inspection began last fall after the U.S. Atomic Safety and Licensing Board cited a number of safety flaws at the plant, which is 45 miles southwest of Fort Worth. In August, the board turned down a request to use the utility's reinspection as the sole basis for deciding whether the troubled plant is safe.

The board's ruling is expected to add millions of dollars to the final cost of the plant, now estimated at nearly $5 billion. Each day the plant stands idle adds $1 million in financing, maintenance and insurance costs, Texas Utilities officials say.

Ramsey said Unit 1 is 99 percent complete, adding that the overall project is about 75 percent finished. The utility's inspection will conclude within several months, he said.

"We think that we should be able to demonstrate to any reasonable person that we have either found no problems, or if we have found any we've resolved them," Ramsey said.

In its report, Public Citizen asserts that nuclear power plants have become symptomatic of a "crisis in utility management," that have turned into money-eating machines retarding economic growth.

Ramsey said that despite the delays and cost overruns, Comanche Peak is still a viable investment. "There's no way we could come close to it in terms of dependable, low-cost fuel," he said.

Ector Commissioners OK drainage repair plans

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

Ector County Commissioners, meeting in special session Friday, approved plans to correct drainage problems at the newly renovated Exhibit Building G, but rejected a proposal to pay remaining funds due until the work is completed.

The balance due on the contract to convert the former horse barn to an exhibit building, according to County Judge Jan Fisher, is $30,258.30. Court members rejected a proposal by Precinct 1 Commissioner Bill Tolbert to make the final payment since Midland-based HBF Corp. had demonstrated "good faith" in attempting to resolve drainage problems. The renovated building flooded during recent rains and it was determined the problem existed because of a difference in grade levels and rain gutters that caused rain water to accumulate in front of newly-installed overhead doors. According to plans developed by County engineer Don Bonifay and Coliseum manager Don Thorn, concrete in the doorways will be removed and a new concrete threshold installed that will be about one and a half inches higher than the present one.

New rain gutters are to be installed that will channel runoff rainwater away from the doorways and pavement around the northside of the buidling will be reworked to deepen drainage channels.

The architectural firm of Covington & Taylor and HBF Corp. have agreed to correct the problems at no cost to Ector County.

Ms. Pister said Huey Lewis has called to congratulate the staff and say he expects to be recording in January. Buddy Miles and John Fogerty also have scheduled appointments.

"It's business as usual, here," she said. "In fact, we're booked solid through December."

While artists and Plant employees felt confident about reopening the studio, government officials were leery.

"We were a bit hesitant to open the studio at first," said John Gisla, assistant U.S. attorney. "The government runs governments, but has no experience running a recording studio."

The government gained permission from the courts on Wednesday to look for a buyer for the studio, Gisla said.

If a buyer is found, the government has to gain permission from the courts to sell it, and profits made will be held by the government until the legal case against Jacox is settled, Gisla said.

FDIC closes Teague bank

STATE

TEAGUE (AP) — Depositors of the failed First National Bank of Teague will probably start receiving payments Monday after federal officials decided to close the bank permanently.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s board of directors on Friday approved selling assets, paying off insured depositors and closing the bank as insolvent after receiving no purchase bids.

The FDIC board voted in Washington that a payoff of insured depositors was required, spokesman Bill Olcheski said.

The federal agency was named the bank's receiver after the bank was closed on Thursday by Michael Patriarca, deputy comptroller of the currency, officials said.

The institution is the 11th bank in Texas to fail this year and the 101st nationwide.

"It's pretty much of a surprise," Teague Mayor Clydell Webb said. "Any business is a loss to the community, but we're not able to gauge the impact this will have. It's all so sudden."

The bank was one of the oldest businesses in the Freestone County city, which has a population of 3,500.

The only other bank in town, Citizens National Bank of Teague, has $9,747,000 in assets, said Phillip Gilliam, Citizens National president.

Bank deposits totaled $26.3 million in 5,400 accounts at First National Bank of Teague, Olcheski said. The FDIC estimated all but about $465,000 in 40 accounts were within the federal insurance limit of $100,000 or are otherwise secured.

Olcheski said in a statement that owners of such uninsured deposits will share proportionately with the FDIC in proceeds realized from liquidation of the bank's assets.

The FDIC board also voted to make a prompt advance payment to uninsured depositors and other creditors, based on the estimated present value of assets to be liquidated, equal to 45 percent of the uninsured claims.

Olcheski said if actual collections of bank assets on a present value basis exceed this estimate, uninsured depositors would ultimately receive additional payments on their claims.

"The estimate for the advance is believed to be conservative and it is hoped that actual collections will be higher," said Olcheski in the statement. "If, however, the present value of actual collections should be less than 45 percent, the FDIC insurance fund will absorb the shortfall."

FDIC spokesman Frank Vance said the bank, about 90 miles southeast of Dallas, was granted a national charter on May 2, 1927.

The quality of the bank's loan portfolio had substantially deteriorated over the past year, he said.

Vance said the bank was "unable to remedy this problem and losses finally exhausted the bank's capital funds, resulting in its insolvency."

Ranger authorities puzzling over why man posed as Adair associate

RANGER (AP) — While a gas well blowout raged near this West Texas town, authorities puzzled over the appearance of a man who posed as an associate of Paul "Red" Adair and helped evacuate residents from the well site.

The man, claiming to work for the internationally known oilfield firefighter, arrived last week at the scene of the blowout, where crews were still working Friday to shut off escaping natural gas.

But Adair, of Houston, said the man who helped identify dangerous gas pockets and assisted local authorities was an impostor.

"They had a good con artist down there but he had no ties with us," Adair told the Abilene Reporter-News on Thursday. "Nobody working for me was down there."

Instead, Boots and Coots, another oil well firefighting team, was hired by Ray Richey, the well owner, to control the blowout that began Nov. 6.

Then authorities temporarily evacuated homes and closed nearby roads, fearing a fire.

Eastland County sheriff's officers said the impostor, dressed in red coveralls and sporting Red Adair patches, arrived about 24 hours after the blowout.

"I'm convinced he was legit," said Ranger Police Capt. John Mackey, adding the man began helping officers with evacuations.

Asking for identification didn't cross their minds, Mackey said.

The man stressed how dangerous the situation was, said Mackey, showing officials locations of gas pockets.

Adair said several people attempt to impersonate him or pass themselves off as his employees.

"They're just weird people," said Adair. "I don't know why they do it. Maybe they want the glory. We're the best in the business."

The man drove a brown Mercedes-Benz which bore a dealer's tag, he said.

But Adair said his employees drive red Lincoln Continentals bearing his company emblem. He said his company gives out souvenirs, including jackets with patches.

"Sometimes, people get out there wearing the jackets and try to say they're with us," he said.

Meese urges court to adhere to founding fathers' intent

Meese

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese, stepping up the Reagan administration's pitch for judicial restraint, urged the Supreme Court on Friday to stick closely to the intentions of the framers of Constitution.

In a speech to the District of Columbia chapter of the Federalist Society's lawyers division, Meese seemed to be trying to deflect attention from himself as a lightning rod in a new and hotly contested debate over how the Constitution ought to be interpreted.

"Caricatures and straw men, as one customarily finds even in the greatest of debates, have made appearances," Meese said. "There is a great temptation among those who view this debate from the outside to see in it a clash of personalities, a bitter exchange...We and our distinguished opponents carry on the old tradition of free, uninhibited and vigorous debate."

But in his speech, Meese reiterated his view, and that of the administration, that the proper role of Supreme Court justices is to interpret the Constitution, not to make new law under the guise of adapting the nearly 200-year-old document to changing times.

Meese set off the current debate over constitutional intepretation when, in an address to the American Bar Association last July, he argued that justices must hew closely to the intent of the Founding Fathers in interpreting the 10th Amendment. That amendment reserved for the states powers not specifically granted to the federal government.

NATION

Some took that to mean that Meese was advocating that the Bill of Rights should not be applied to the states.

Terry Eastland, Meese's chief spokesman, said the attorney general has never advocated that, and that Meese has said only the "doctrine of incorporation" of the states into the Bill of Rights has been expanded in recent times.

Although Meese has said the doctrine rests on "a shaky foundation," he has never advocated its repeal, Eastland said.

Meese's statements have triggered a controversy in the legal community, and indirect criticism by some on the high court bench and accusations from some in Congress that he is trying to reshape the Constitution.

At the heart of the debate is the question of whether, in trying to interpret the Constitution, Supreme Court justices should strive to base their decisions exclusively on the text of the document and the intentions of the Founding Fathers in drafting it.

In a speech last week, Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr. of Delaware, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Judiciary Committee, charged that Meese was pushing an "extreme and unacceptable" view of the Constitution in an effort to "rewrite in his own image our most basic law."

Besides criticizing certain decisions expanding the "doctrine of incorporation," or the doctrine which holds that the Bill of Rights must be applied to the states, Meese has charged that some high court decisions have gone too far in applying the First Amendment's command that there be a separation of church and state.

Biden charged that Meese's statements have amounted to unprincipled "radical judicial activism."

In a speech Oct. 26, Justice John Paul Stevens, without mentioning Meese by name, said he believed the attorney general was offering a "somewhat uncomplete" view on major constitutional issues. Two weeks earlier, Justice William Brennan, without referring specifically to Meese, attacked the view of the Constitution that Meese had advocated as "little more than arrogance cloaked in humility."

In his July 9 speech to the ABA, Meese said the administration would press for a "jurisprudence of original intention," meaning it wanted justices to follow the original meaning of constitutional provisions as the only reliable guide to constitutional interpretation.

In his speech Friday, Meese said, "Mistakes occur when the principles of specific constitutional provisions, such as those contained in the Bill of Rights, are taken by some as invitations to read into the Constitution values that contradict the clear lan-

Heart transplant patient released from hospital

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Thomas Gaidosh, a former steel worker who was kept alive four days with a Jarvik-7 heart before receiving a transplant, went home "feeling great" Friday, one day after another Jarvik-7 patient left a hospital with a donor heart.

In Hershey, meanwhile, doctors said a potent attack of bacteria and fungus killed Anthony Mandia, the first recipient of the temporary Penn State heart. Mandia died Thursday.

Gaidosh, his face beaming and eyes sparkling, walked into a news conference before leaving Presbyterian-University Hospital and called out a cheery "Hello, folks."

"I'd like to let everyone know that I'm feeling great and I'm glad to be going home," said Gaidosh, 47, of Sutersville, sporting jeans and a T-shirt that read "Presby — the beat goes on."

On Thursday, Michael Drummond, 26, left University Medical Center in Tucson, Ariz., 2½ months after becoming the youngest person to receive a Jarvik-7 as a temporary measure.

Mandia, 44, died Thursday after living 11 days on the Penn State pump and 17 days on a donor heart.

Gaidosh received his Jarvik-7 on Oct. 24 and a human heart Oct. 28. Hospital officials described his recovery as steady and uncomplicated.

Gaidosh said he waited 3½ weeks for a human donor before his condition became too critical to prolong surgery.

"The mechanical device was my only choice to keep fighting," he said. "More donors are needed...Someone gave me a second chance and I too will be a donor."

"I think he wants to have a big dinner at home, so that's what we'll have," said Gaidosh's 27-year-old daughter, Pamela, who answered questions on behalf of her mother, Dolores, and brother, Thomas. "And he can't wait to swim."

She said the family reluctantly gave doctors permission to implant the artificial heart.

"We really didn't want it in the beginning," she said.

But she said her father's confidence helped: "When my father was being taken to surgery, he just looked at us and said, 'I'll see you later.' That's the best thing he could have said."

Meanwhile, Richard Dallara left Pacific Presbyterian Medical Center in San Francisco on Thursday. Dallara, a 33-year-old auto mechanic from Garberville, Calif., was kept alive with a Thoratec external pump until his Oct. 29 transplant surgery.

And in Louisville, Ky., the longest-lived recipient of an artificial heart, 53-year-old William Schroeder, remained hospitalized Friday after recently suffering a third stroke since receiving his Jarvik-7 last November.

The chief transplant surgeon at the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center said every effort was made to safeguard Mandia against infection, the leading killer of transplant patients.

But Dr. John Pennock said transplant patients need to have their immune systems diminished so their new hearts won't be rejected. At the same time, bacteria and fungus must be controlled, he said.

"We're talking about a balancing act here," Pennock said.

Pennock said the toxins produced by infection infected Mandia's heart, kidney, and liver and caused his blood, or vascular, system to collapse.

Pennock said he knew Mandia was "in bad trouble" three to four days ago when "it didn't seem we were getting control of the infection problem."

Last week, Mandia was returned to surgery to drain his chest incision, where the infection started, and an abscess that had formed near the donor heart.

Both the antifungal agents and the immune suppressant drug Mandia received are toxic to the kidneys and in his last days Mandia needed daily dialysis to cleanse his blood.

Dr. William Pierce, developer of the Penn State heart, said the implant team still is studying the surfaces of the Penn State heart but plans no changes in procedure. The team has two new hearts ready for implant.

Pennock called Mandia an extremely strong person and described Mandia's parents and brother as "extraordinary."

"His will to life was as strong as you can get," Pennock said. "His family's participation over the last few weeks has been extremely extraordinary. Personally they gave me as much strength as I could give them."

Rajneesh followers to sell his cars

RAJNEESHPURAM, Ore. (AP) — Disciples of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh said Friday they would sell their 93 Rolls-Royces now that the Indian guru has left the country, but vowed to maintain their commune-city on a smaller, less affluent scale.

Rajneesh, 53, left the United States early Friday after changing his plea to guilty on two of 35 federal immigration-fraud charges and agreeing to leave the United States immediately.

Commune spokeswoman Ma Prem Isabel said the guru was expected to arrive in India by the end of the day.

Swami Dhyan John, president of the sect's Rajneesh Investment Corp., said Rajneesh's new home is in an "almost undeveloped" forested area of India's Himalayas. He said a small village was about 10 miles away.

John said he did not think the guru would face any legal problems in India, where some of his disciples still face currency-smuggling and tax investigations.

Rajneesh, who claims a worldwide following of 500,000, was accompanied by eight disciples who comprise his household staff, John said.

Commune spokesman Swami Anand Anshumali said the guru does not want any more disciples to go with him.

John predicted the commune will lose revenue because followers from around the world no longer will make pilgrimages to central Oregon see the guru.

He said disciples will sell assets, perhaps including some land, and will explore for minerals on the 64,000-acre commune. John said there are known gold and silver deposits on the ranch, and that coal, gas and oil also might be found.

The sect's fleet of 93 Rolls-Royces, which were used solely by the guru, will be sold one at a time, John said. "We are getting calls from around the world from people who want to buy the Rolls-Royces."

John said he expected Rajneeshpuram's population of 3,500 to shrink in coming weeks, but added that he thought most American disciples would remain.

The guru left Oregon on a private plane immediately after the court hearing, transferred to another plane in Pennsylvania, which took off for Larnaca, Cyprus, via Ireland.

Rajneesh's attorneys said he changed his plea only because he feared his life would be in danger if he remained in the United States.

Rajneesh could have been sentenced to 175 years in prison and fined $350,000.

He was arrested with six disciples Oct. 28 when they flew to Charlotte, N.C., in two chartered Learjets. Federal prosecutors said Rajneesh was trying to flee to Bermuda to escape prosecution.

Seven of the guru's followers or former followers also face immigration charges. They include Ma Anand Sheela, the guru's deposed personal secretary, who is in a West German jail on Oregon charges that she and two others tried to murder Rajneesh's physician.

Sheela and about a dozen other commune leaders left Rajneeshpuram abruptly the weekend of Sept. 14.

Argentine police arrest alleged ex-Nazi SS officer

Kutschmann

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Police said Friday they had arrested a man believed to be Walter Kutschmann, a 71-year-old former Nazi SS officer accused of killing at least 1,500 Polish Jews during World War II.

The West German arrest and extradition request said Kutschmann arrived in Argentina, which became a haven for former Nazis after the war, in 1947 with forged Spanish papers identifying him as Pedro Ricardo Olmo.

Miguel de Guisa, chief of investigations for the federal police, said officers acting on the West German request picked him up Thursday at his home in Florida suburb six miles north of the capital.

He said the man who lived there as Olmo offered no resistance. Police involved in the arrest quoted him as saying, "It is all a mistake."

Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal reported Kutschmann's presence in Argentina 10 years ago. He is considered the most notorious former Nazi still living here.

The suspect was taken at noon Friday from a cell at police headquarters to the federal court building in downtown Buenos Aires for a preliminary hearing before Judge Fernando Archimbal.

He wore thick glasses and was dressed in a short-sleeved shirt and casual slacks. He covered his face with his hands when photographers approached and refused to answer questions put by journalists.

Kutschmann, a second lieutenant in the Hitler's SS elite guard, is accused of leading an execution squad that killed 20 Jewish university professors and 18 members of their families on July 4, 1941, in the Polish city of Lemberg, which now is in the Soviet Union and called Lvov.

He also is blamed for the deaths of at least 1,500 Jews in Brzezany and Podajce, Poland, in 1942.

Kutschmann was born May 24, 1914, in Dresden, which now is in East Germany.

A West German Embassy official, Irwin Starnitzky, said his government issued an extradition request for Olmo two months ago, alleging that he is Kutschmann.

Police who revealed details of the extradition request said they received it Nov. 3.

Starnitzky was asked why the request was not made years ago, when Wiesenthal reported Kutschmann's alleged presence in Argentina, and replied: "I imagine it was delayed by the need to gather evidence showing that this person really was the one being sought."

He said the extradition request was based on charges pending in Berlin.

Weisenthal said in June 1975 that Kutschmann was living in the Argentine seaside resort town of Miramar, 280 miles south of Buenos Aires, under the name Pedro Olmos. He was arrested briefly then but was released, apparently because there was no formal request for extradition.

He was working in 1975 arrest as a sales manager for a local subsidiary of Osram, a West German appliance manufacturer. The company quickly fired him.

Since then, local journalists have tracked him down but he has refused to give interviews.

Weisenthal mentioned Kutschmann's presence in Miramar in 1983. He left there soon afterward and disappeared from view.

Argentine news reports said he lived in Florida with a wife, Geralda, and has at least one son in Argentina. The reports said he became an Argentine citizen in 1950.

Argentina has no extradition treaty with West Germany, so President Raul Alfonsin must approve sending him back. He is expected to do so if the courts determine the suspect really is Kutschmann and that there are legitimate grounds for trial.

Among the most prominent war criminals to seek shelter in Argentina were Adolf Eichmann, who was in charge of Hitler's program for exterminating Jews, and, and Josef Mengele, the Auschwitz "Angel of Death."

Negotiator waits for message from kidnappers

WORLD

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Terry Waite, the archbishop of Canterbury's troubleshooter, kept to his Beirut hideaway on Friday, waiting for a coded message to meet the kidnappers of four Americans he is seeking to free.

The 6-foot-7 emissary made no contact with the press. The day before, he appealed to reporters and television crews to leave him alone because his mission has reached a "critical and dangerous stage."

But he did speak by telephone to Lambeth Palace, Archbishop Robert Runcie's seat in London, saying he was waiting at his hideout in the Lebanese capital.

A Lambeth Palace statement said Waite was awaiting "answers to certain questions he has put which will guarantee to him the authenticity of the people to whom he is speaking."

Runcie's press secretary, Eve Keatley, said Waite "made it clear that to date he has had telephone conversations with the group holding the hostages, but has not yet had a face-to-face meeting. He is waiting for such a meeting."

She said his call was the "only external contact he has made" since he arrived in Beirut Wednesday to try to negotiate the Americans' release after months in captivity.

Waite dropped from sight after holding an impromptu news conference Thursday in west Beirut.

He said he would stay in Beirut for as long as needed to see his task through but would leave if he felt he was making no progress.

Waite, 46, a veteran negotiator in hostage crises, said he would "drop out of the picture" to conduct the delicate negotiations in secret. He stressed that following him would "jeopardize my own safety and the safety of other people."

Reporters agreed to leave him alone.

"One wrong move and people could lose their lives," Waite said.

He said the kidnappers are "taking a risk...in meeting me, just as much as I'm taking a risk meeting them."

Waite was tapped for the mercy mission after four of the six Americans missing in Lebanon sent a letter to Runcie last week appealing for his help in securing their release.

The letter was signed by Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest; David Jacobsen, director of the American University Hospital in Beirut; and Thomas Sutherland, dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut.

Have Israeli kibbutzim's bad investments 'bought the farm'?

By RUTH SINAI

KIBBUTZ KFAR SZOLD, Israel (AP) — Israel's kibbutzim, the socialist-based communal farms that long served as the nation's ideological beacons, have been jarred by a series of economic losses and financial scandals.

Recent disclosures have called into question kibbutz members' commitment to the pure work ethics and modest lifestyles that were once their hallmarks.

Kibbutzniks, as members are known, have been split into two camps: those who view the money-losing investments in stocks and money markets as a one-time mistake and those who fear the farms have permanently discarded socialist ideals for capitalist adventures.

"There's something beautiful and uplifting in the idea of joint living," said Dan Shavit, director of this kibbutz just south of the border with Lebanon. "But in practice, it has not stood up to the test of time. Many kibbutzniks feel that the inner content of their lives is crumbling."

The kibbutzniks' values of honesty, hard work and self-sacrifice have been confused by the rapid evolution of the communal farms from small operations run by pioneers to multimillion dollar industrial enterprises.

Shavit said the modern-day kibbutznik wants to emulate the lifestyle of successful city dwellers and is fed up with the socialist ideology espoused by the founding fathers.

The hankering for a higher living standard led the kibbutzim to dive into the market and brokerage houses, Shavit said.

"You don't make a lot of money from just plain hard work," he said.

Despite combined annual sales of $2 billion, about 80 of the country's 300 kibbutzim, including Kfar Szold, are on the verge of bankruptcy, Shavit said in an interview.

"Now we're having to tighten our collective belt — no more trips overseas, a reduction of each member's personal budget," he said.

Shavit attributes the crisis mainly to kibbutzniks living beyond their means.

The 220 farms that make up the United Kibbutz Movement pool their resources to market products abroad, buy raw materials and provide services such as insurance. The collective approach means that the communes facing bankruptcy will probably not go under because their loans are guaranteed by the kibbutz movement.

About 120,000 people are permanent residents of kibbutzim — 3 percent of the 4.2 million population — but their contribution to the country's economy is far bigger. They accounted for 8 percent of the country's $4 billion in industrial exports in 1984 and more than 50 percent of $520 million in agricultural exports.

But the image of kibbutzim as economically stable and fiscally pure was tarnished earlier this year when the UKM announced it was having trouble collecting some $90 million in loans to a broker who invested unwisely.

Kibbutz officials said their combined enterprises lost an additional $250 million when the value of government-backed bank shares plummeted last year.

The English-language newspaper Jerusalem Post also reported a bad investment in a failed paper mill in Venezuela.

Kibbutzim also were hurt by a general slowdown in the Israeli economy which resulted from a government austerity plan adopted in July to stem the 400 percent annual inflation rate. As a result, total industrial and agricultural sales are forecast to increase by only 2 percent this year, kibbutz officials say.

Still reeling from those blows, kibbutzniks were then confronted with the arrest of Nahum Paz, head of the main kibbutz insurance company. He was accused of fraud, breach of trust and irregular business practices, and has been released on bail pending further investigation, said police spokesman Kobi Bachar.

The accusations against Paz stem from his alleged efforts to steer kibbutz insurance policies to a company he owned before joining the commune.

In light of all the revelations, the UKM launched an inquiry which concluded that the collective farms had run their financial empire like a "grocery store," trustingly handing over large sums of money without adequate guarantees. It also made a policy decision to stop all investments in the stock market.

"We made a mistake. We shouldn't have played the markets," said UKM spokesman Shlomo Leshem. "But that doesn't signal the spiritual bankruptcy of the collective ideal.

NATION IN BRIEF

Reagan banning importation of Libyan petroleum products

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Friday banned the importation of refined petroleum products from Libya, saying the North African country is circumventing a previous ban on crude oil imports while continuing terrorist activities.

The previous order was issued in 1982.

In his new order, Reagan said "the Libyan government actively pursues terrorism as an instrument of state policy and...Libya has developed signficant capability to export petroleum products and thereby circumvent" the previous prohibition.

The order provides that no petroleum product refined in Libya may be imported into the United States, its territories or possessions, except for those loaded onto maritime vessels at any time earlier than two days after the order, which is effective immediately.

Kate season's 11th tropical storm

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — A low-pressure area north of Puerto Rico on Friday developed into Tropical Storm Kate, the 11th named storm in the 1985 Atlantic hurricane season.

The storm's formation was announced early Friday afternoon by forecasters at the National Hurricane Center.

They said reports from an Air Force weather reconnaissance aircraft indicated the low-pressure area had developed into tropical-storm strength, with winds of at least 39 mph.

Forecasters said no other details would be released on Kate until special advisories were issued later in the day.

Tropical storms become hurricanes if their winds top 74 mph.

Man pilfers python around arm

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — A pet shop suffered a shoplifting with a new twist when a tall, thin man wrapped a 6-foot-long python around his arm and walked out the door, police said.

The man who pilfered the python knows snakes, Animal House owner Howard Novitch said Thursday.

"You just don't put your hand in a tank with a 6-foot snake," Novitch said.

The brown-and-gold snake, which was on sale for $119, is about 3 inches in diameter, weighs about 10 pounds and probably does not present a danger to people, he said.

"He is mellow, mellow, mellow," Novitch said, "although he might eat cats and other small animals."

Novitch thinks the thief may return because his shop is the only one in the area that sells the live rats and mice that the python dines on.

'Sloopy' may be Ohio's rock song

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — If the state Senate goes along, the State of Ohio will observe "Hang On Sloopy" as its official rock song.

On Thursday, the Ohio House approved Rep. Michael Stinziano's resolution honoring the song which the Ohio State University band has played at athletic contests for 20 years.

Stinziano, an OSU alumnus, yielded to requests and sang the song to mixed reviews by colleagues who voted 77-13 to send the proposal for Senate consideration.

He said that although the tune is familiar to uncounted thousands of OSU fans, many believed as he once did that the title refers to Snoopy, the dog in the popular "Peanuts" comic strip.

Authorities confiscate $111,980

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Authorities confiscated $111,980 scattered around the site of a single-engine plane crash, saying the money was the profit from a drug deal, according to court documents.

William Hehr of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration said in a U.S. District Court affidavit filed Thursday that documents pertaining to drug trafficking and a scale often used by drug dealers were found in the pilot's flight bag after the Nov. 1 crash.

Scientists will be assessing how volcano eruptions affect weather

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As scientists probe the causes of the volcanic eruption that killed thousands of Colombians, they also must consider whether the violent blast will lead to weather changes throughout the rest of the world.

The relationship between volcanoes and the weather is not fully understood. But much more has been learned in recent years, especially since the 1982 eruption of El Chichon in Mexico led to a measurable reduction in sunlight reaching the Earth.

Violent volcanic blasts and eruptions that eject tons of rock debris and dust can throw a veil around the world, screening the sun and thus reducing the light and heat arriving at the surface.

The El Chichon eruption blocked an estimated 5 percent of the solar radiation from Earth in some regions, reducing the heat reaching land, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration estimated.

Perhaps the most storied volcano-weather connection occurred in 1815-16, following the massive eruption of Tambora in Indonesia.

That blast ejected massive quantities of dust into the atmosphere, with effects around the world ranging from brightly colored sunsets in Europe to severe cold in America.

In New England, 1816 was marked by snow in June, extreme cold in July and the failure of crops. It is variously referred to as the year without a summer, or "eighteen-hundred and froze to death."

It is too soon to tell whether the eruption of Nevado del Ruiz falls into the same category.

"Unfortunately, the entire country (Colombia) was cloudy during the time of the eruption, so we were unable to pick it up," explained Mike Matson of the U.S. National Environmental Satellite, Data and Information Service, which operates the weather satellites that monitor the Earth.

Satellite measurements were widely used in the El Chichon case to follow the spread of the dust cloud around the world.

"At this point we cannot speculate on weather effects, because we don't have satellite information yet," Matson explained in a telephone interview.

An official of the Smithsonian Scientific Event Alert Network, who spoke on condition she not be identified, agreed that "right now we don't know" if the weather will be affected.

The network collects information from scientists studying phenomena such as volcanoes, but the official said they have not received any details yet on the amount of ash and debris injected into the atmosphere in this case.

This is partly because of the weather, obscuring the sky and summit of the mountain, and partly because scientists are concentrating on the mudflows — known to geologists as lahars — which brought the great destruction to the ground.

Lahars, high-speed mud flows, occur when a mountain capped by snow or ice erupts and melts the cap, which collects mud and volcanic debris and churns downhill onto nearby areas.

Several Colombian villages were buried in the disaster and the death toll is expected to reach tens of thousands.

"Any place (volcano) where you have a glacial or snow field there is always that potential," said Clement Shearer of the U.S. Geological Survey.

Lahars also can occur on mountains that have large lakes, when a flow of lava or hot rocks slides into the lake, churning it over its banks into a mudslide, he explained.

A major lahar occurred on Mount Rainier in Washington state nearly 6,000 years ago, he said. More recent ones, although not all as destructive as Nevado del Ruiz, have involved Mount St. Helens in 1980, Cotopaxi in Ecuador in 1877, Mount Lassen, Calif., in 1915, and Villarica in Chile in 1963.

While scientists puzzle over the potential weather effects of Nevado del Ruiz, most do not anticipate the devastating onset of an El Nino event — despite some attempts to associate those anomalies with volcanoes in the past.

Romanian defector says he's 'delighted to be in the U.S.'

AUSTIN (AP) — Although he worries that his family might not be allowed to join him, Romanian refugee Paul Firica described himself Friday as delighted to be in the United States.

"I am very, very, very happy," said Firica, a sailor who jumped ship Tuesday night in Houston and was granted political asylum Thursday.

Speaking through an interpreter, Firica, 44, said he dreamed for years of escaping to the United States but didn't want to leave his wife and two daughters unable to care for themselves.

"Because of my family status, my small daughters and my wife, I didn't want to leave them so soon," he said.

Firica said his daughters now are 17 and 24. He said he hopes they and his wife can join him in Austin, and lawyer Ed Roush said they will work through authorities to accomplish that.

Asked his plans, Firica replied, "To work here in Austin, to be together with my family and to be happy."

Firica was welcomed to Austin by the Rev. Tom Wilson, pastor of the Central Assembly of God. Wilson has spent two weeks preaching in Romania for each of the past two years and said Friday that he found overwhelming evidence of religious persecution in the communist-run nation.

Wilson said the church's 1,500 members decided earlier to do whatever they could to help Romanian Christians.

"We were unaware that so soon, this event would take place," Wilson said.

"We're going to take care of him. We've offered him a job at the church. We will help him find an apartment. We'll help him adjust. We'll aid him in every way possible," Wilson said.

Looking tired and a little bewildered by all the attention, Firica recounted his escape for a news conference at the church.

A member of the Romanian Orthodox church, Firica said he often was prohibited from religious observances and frequently was forced to work for the Communist Party on Sundays, his only day off.

"I was persecuted for a long time," he said.

His ship, the Zalau, initially wasn't scheduled to stop in the United States. When it was sent to Houston to pick up a load of cattle hides, Firica said he decided to flee.

After walking off the ship Tuesday night, he found someone who spoke Romanian at a seaman's club and asked for help. That man drove him to the Harris County sheriff's office, where he was overheard speaking Romanian by Bego Memet.

Memet, who fled Romania in 1969, has been serving as Firica's translator.

"He walked in and he looked really scared," Memet said. "At first, he didn't want to talk to me very much. After you live in Romania...you don't trust just anyone."

Memet, who lives in Houston, contacted the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service for the sailor.

Firica, a mechanic, said he had heard about the Soviet seaman who twice was returned to his ship near New Orleans, La., and sailed with that vessel. But he said he decided to try to defect anyway.

"I had heard about him and I'm very sorry for him," Firica said. "Somehow, I was convinced because of my trust in God."

Firica's lawyer said Firica convinced INS officials that he was a legitimate political refugee.

Austin police officer indicted for shooting chop shoplifter

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin police officer has been indicted on charges of aggravated assault after the shooting of a man who allegedly shoplifted a package of pork chops.

The Travis County grand jury handed up the indictment against Officer Ruth Ann Bullock, 29, who was working off-duty for a grocery store Sept. 17.

According to police, Ms. Bullock chased Donald Wade Brown from the store. Brown, 25, was left paralyzed by the gunshot.

With the indictment Thursday, Ms. Bullock became the first female police officer indicted in Travis County. She is now in the second week of a 30-day suspension without pay from the police department.

Police investigators said they determined that Brown was shot by accident.

If convicted of the assault charge, Ms. Bullock faces from two years on probation to 10 years in prison, and a fine of up to $5,000, officials said.

The indictment alleges that Bullock "intentionally and knowingly and recklessly caused serious bodily injury by pointing a gun at" Brown, "and by pushing said gun into the back of" Brown.

Brown, contacted at home, had no comment.

The inclusion of "reckless" in the indictment means that prosecutors would not have to prove that Ms. Bullock intended to shoot Brown.

Steve McCleery, assistant district attorney, said being reckless is "a lower form of culpability."

"Aggravated assault is one of the few crimes you can commit by being reckless," McCleery said.

Police Chief Jim Everett ordered Ms. Bullock's suspension Oct. 29. The police investigation concluded that she should not have had her gun drawn during the arrest.

The officer chased Brown and another man from the store after a store employee said he saw Brown put a package of pork chops in his pants.

Board may ban Confederate flag

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — School board members at a high school which uses a Confederate flag as a symbol of team spirit say they will satisfy opponents who want to ban it.

Terry Anderson, president of the South Grand Prairie High School board, said Thursday night that "the board is prepared to take whatever time is necessary to equitably resolve this problem."

But the president of the Grand Prairie chapter of the NAACP said he will not stop until school officials quit using the Confederate flag as a symbol.

NAACP President Lee Alcorn said the effort will continue even if it means the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People must concentrate solely on that issue.

"It doesn't matter whether I represent 500 persons or one person," Alcorn told the school board in a meeting attended by residents, the Ku Klux Klan and others. "All this school board needs to know is that that flag offends one person and it should be removed."

About a dozen people spoke on the issue, with some, including NAACP members, saying the flag should be banned. Others said the student body should decide the flag's fate.

Board members took no action Thursday night. Anderson said in a prepared statement issued before the meeting that Alcorn's views are not widely held.

"As far as the district is concerned, the issue of South Grand Prairie High School's flag was settled last Friday night (Nov. 8) when the football team carried a new flag bearing the school's colors on the field ...," the statement said.

At that game, the students used a rebel flag with the colors red and gold rather than the traditional red and blue.

The board meeting was moved to City Council chambers to accomodate about 100 residents and members of the Ku Klux Klan, including Klan leader Bill Walton.

Fred Coleman Jr., 15, a black football player, was dismissed from the varsity team after he refused to run onto the field under the Confederate flag.

Coleman and the NAACP claim the flag is a symbol of racism. Supporters say it is an innocent symbol of the Old South and the school.

STATE in brief

Royalties up for sale of Sesquicentennial items

AUSTIN (AP) — With royalties from sales of Texas Sesquicentennial commemorative items having increased by $15,000 last month, officials say they expect sales to jump as the 150th anniversary celebration nears its Jan. 1 start.

"Things are really picking up," said Patrick Terry, spokesman for the Sesquicentennial Commission.

As of Sept. 30, the state's share of royalties from the sale of commemorative items totaled just $33,000. The royalties will help pay for some costs of the year-long celebration.

But sales are increasing, and the $15,000 from October sales raised the total to $48,000, Terry said.

With checks continuing to come in, he said the commission may have some $60,000 now.

Terry also said the agency this week sent out the last of 400 letters to companies across the state, asking them to contribute $3,500 to $10,000. Companies that contribute may use the official sesquicentennial logo in their advertising.

The sesquicentennial celebration will mark the 150th anniversary of Texas winning independence from Mexico.

Bids in on Murchison estate

DALLAS (AP) — Six bids were submitted on ailing businessman Clint Murchison Jr.'s 25-acre estate, but it will be next week before a buyer is chosen, a Murchison spokesman said Friday.

Philip I. Palmer Jr., an attorney, would not disclose details of the bids and said only that Murchison's attorneys and his debtors are studying them.

Friday was the deadline for bids on the 43-thousand square-foot mansion and $7.5 million worth of north Dallas property on the selling block to help ease a $397 million debt.

Murchison, principal owner of the Dallas Cowboys football team until last year, has an illness that has left him barely able to speak. Officials say he is involved in one of the largest personal bankruptcies in Texas history.

Death penalty sought

FORT WORTH (AP) — Tarrant County jurors who convicted a 24-year-old man in the slaying of a woman customer at a Whataburger restaurant during a holdup rejected arguments the shooting was accidental.

Prosecutors Greg Sipes and Sharen Wilson said they will ask jurors to sentence Ronald Keith Allridge to death. Testimony in the trial's punishment phase began at 2 p.m. Friday before State District Judge Charles Dickens.

Carla McMillen Otto, 19, was murdered as she ate a hamburger with friends at the southside restaurant.

In closing arguments, Ms. Wilson told jurors that Allridge "is nothing but a cool-headed, cold-blooded robber and murderer."

Defense attorneys during the four-day trial tried to show that Allridge "panicked" when he fired the 16-gauge shotgun into Ms. Otto's chest at close range.

Atheists offer briefing

AUSTIN (AP) — Atheist leader Madalyn Murray O'Hair has offered to brief President Reagan on atheism in preparation for next week's summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Reagan cannot succeed at the Geneva meeting unless he understands atheism, according to Ms. O'Hair.

The Soviets cannot be understood if "viewed from a perspective of illogical religious belief sets," said Ms. O'Hair, president of American Atheists.

Ms. O'Hair received a response from Pat Buchanan, assistant to the president.

"As for the meeting with the president to instruct him about the work of American Atheists, I shall broach it; but I would counsel you that he is a busy man — and his schedule is quite full, especially this fall — with the Geneva meeting impending," Buchanan said in a Sept. 26 letter.

Museums can get grants

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas museums that want to improve their history collections have until Jan. 8 to apply for grants from the Texas Historical Commission.

The commission said Friday the grants, which must be matched dollar for dollar by local funds, will not exceed $1,000 per institution.

Peres withdraws threat to fire Sharonin letter

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres withdrew his threat to fire Cabinet minister Ariel Sharon on Friday and ended a political crisis that had threatened to bring down Israel's coalition government.

The dispute was defused when Peres accepted a letter from Sharon that apologized for any insult to the prime minister.

The letter also clarified Sharon's positions on Peres' peace policies, but it was not the full retraction Peres had demanded in a speech hours earlier.

Sharon's letter was "not what we wanted," but the prime minister decided to end the crisis because the only alternative was an early election, said a Peres aide who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Pe-Pe in 'delicate health'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Pe-Pe, the male panda given to Mexico by China in 1975, is in "delicate health" and has been placed under constant medical watch for treatment of a gastrointestinal illness, the director of Chapultepec Zoo said Friday.

Maria Elene De Hoyos said the 11-year-old panda's illness is associated with stress and bacterial infection.

She said Pe-Pe is under constant medical care and on a restricted diet in an effort to clear up the infection. The panda suffered similiar ailments in 1977 and 1979.

The zoo director said pandas have a normal life expectancy of 13 to 20 years. Pe-Pe lives at the zoo with his mate, Yin-Yin, also as gift from China. They have produced five offspring, three of whom are still alive.

Gangsters steal lobster tails

AIX-EN-PROVENCE, France (AP) — Five armed gangsters held up a freezer plant in this southern French town and drove off with eight tons of frozen lobster tails.

The hold-up in the early hours of Thursday, which was not disclosed until Friday, netted the gang about $250,000 worth of lobster tails.

Mayoral candidate protests election results

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Jose Luis Coindreau, mayoral candidate of the opposition National Action Party, on Friday began a sit-in protest to demand official results from last weekend's balloting which officials say he lost.

Coindreau, 47, was defeated by Luis M. Farias of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, in Sunday's statewide elections, according to results Coindreau said he has not yet seen.

"We don't have one certified copy," Coindreau said as he and about 15 supporters sat in aluminum chairs in the plaza facing the governor's palace. "We will stay here until they deliver."

The State Electoral Commission has turned over some results, but most were neither legible nor were they certified, Coindreau said.

Meanwhile, another mayoral candidate for the opposition party, known as PAN, Alejandro Paez, ended a three-day hunger strike in the wealthy Monterrey suburb of San Pedro.

Paez said he ended his hunger strike late Thursday after he collected 15,900 signatures on a petition, which he said proves he has more supporters than the winning candidate, Alejandro Chapa, of the PRI.

The PRI was delared the official winner in all 51 mayoral elections held throughout this northeastern industrial and agricultural state Sunday. The party already had held all the mayoralties.

Paez lost to Chapa in official results with 9,031 votes to 10,870 votes.

He and three other supporters began a hunger strike late Monday night to protest the what they claim was PRI-orchestrated vote rigging.

Paez, Coindreau and Luis Prieto, PAN mayoral candidate in the San Nicolas suburb, are demanding the electoral commission void results from 90 polling places in which they accused the PRI of having fixed the results.

Coindreau, who said results collected by his poll watchers show he won the election, said Friday he is demanding the electoral commission turn over to him the official results that were tallied in the Monterrey race. He also wants the official copy certifiying the members of the local election board that counted the results.

Coindreau claimed the votes were counted by a small committee headed by a Farias aide, not the polling presidents assigned to do the job.

The daily Monterrey newspaper El Porvenir, which reported Tuesday the results were "manipulated" by the PRI, said the 300 people assigned to tally the results waited around all day while a Farias aide supposedly counted the votes.

Malnutrition stalks urban areas in Ethiopia

By DAVID CRARY

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Relief officials, who have been focusing attention on drought-stricken rural areas of Ethiopia, now are voicing concern about malnutrition in the nation's cities, including this capital.

The officials say sharp increases in commodity prices — as much as 250 percent for some grains since last year — have made it difficult for many city dwellers to buy either the quality or quantity of food needed for a proper diet.

"Nutritional standards are deteriorating drastically, especially for children," said Frank Carlin, director in Ethiopia for the New York-based Catholic Relief Services.

The official Addis Ababa price of tef, a wheat-like Ethiopian grain, has risen from 1 birr (50 cents) a kilogram (2.2 pounds) last year to 2.50 birr ($1.25) now as the drought reduced nationwide grain supplies. Many poor families in the cities are basing their diets on corn, which has almost doubled in price in the same period.

Municipal officials in Addis Ababa have appealed for assistance, while neighborhood chapters of the government-organized Urban Dwellers Association have begun distributing emergency rations to the destitute, and the national government reportedly has spent some $65 million in the past year to import grain for the cities.

But Carlin said the problem will get worse — "frighteningly so" — unless help comes from abroad to supplement the regular flow of famine aid.

Catholic Relief Services has been reaching nearly 200,000 people in urban and semi-urban areas through a nutrition program funded by the U.S. government. The agency asked Washington for additional funding so it could feed 800,000 people through the program in 1986 but the request was denied.

U.S. officials say the thrust of the American relief effort is to supply one-third of Ethiopia's emergency food needs through next year, but only in the main drought areas in the countryside. None of the American emergency grain has gone to Addis Ababa. The U.S. officials suggested that private agencies could provide funds for urban nutrition programs.

One group operating with private funds, the U.S.-based Christian Children's Fund, hopes by the end of the year to be providing food, clothing and medical care to 6,000 Ethiopian children, primarily in Addis Ababa and other cities.

Ethiopia's Relief and Rehabilitation Commission has acknowledged that malnutrition exists in the capital and other urban areas but says its primary duty is to assist the direct victims of the drought and famine.

"Perhaps we've been conditioned by the excessive emphasis of the donor community," Berhane Deressa, the deputy relief commissioner, told agency representatives recently. He suggested wryly that the government might have been accused of "criminal diversion" if it had shifted donated food from the countryside to Addis Ababa.

He said the government also had concentrated its relief efforts on rural areas, where more than 90 percent of Ethiopia's 42 million people live, to avoid increasing migration to the cities and aggravating employment and health problems there.

Compared to most of Ethiopia, where the annual per capita income is $120, Addis Ababa seems relatively prosperous. But shantytowns exist throughout the city of more than a million people, and many of the children seen on the streets begging for money wear ragged clothes and no shoes.

Since the drought began affecting the capital about a year ago, long lines of women have formed early in the morning outside bread shops waiting for them to open. More affluent Ethiopians and foreign residents line up to buy bread at the boulangerie at the Addis Ababa Hilton.

Steve Reynolds, a spokesman for the U.S.-based relief agency World Vision, said that in some of Addis Ababa's poorest neighborhoods more than half the children had thin limbs, bloated stomachs or other

Madrid gets mosque after 500 years

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Nearly 500 years after all Moslems were expelled from Spain, Madrid will be getting its first mosque, a gift from Saudi Arabia.

Moslems, along with Jews, were ordered out of Spain forever in 1492 by decree of King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella, patrons of Christopher Columbus' voyage that led to the discovery of America.

The construction of the mosque and a Moslem cultural complex, to begin early next year, coincides with a growing awareness in Spain of its Arab and Jewish past.

Spain maintains friendly relations with Arab nations today but not with Israel. Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez has said ties will be established with Israel next year.

But even to this day Arabs who live in Spain, particularly North

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Crane, Upton, Reagan, Glasscock, Andrews, Gaines, Howard, Martin, Borden and Dawson: Today — Sunny and a little warmer. Highs upper 60s. Wind south 5 to 15 miles per hour. Lows mid 30s. Sunday mostly sunny and warmer. Highs mid 70s.

Local lows to hit mid-30s

From Staff and Wire Reports

Wintery-like chills are to nip Midlanders tonight when the temperature is to drop to the mid-30s.

But along the way, the weather today was to be comfortably cradled in the high 60s, according to the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

For Sunday, the weatherman is calling for a fair day and temperatures peaking in the mid-70s.

The high temperature Friday was 60 degrees, and the overnight low was 33. The record high temperature for a Nov. 15 is 84 degrees set in 1963, and the record low for a Nov. 16 is 15 degrees in 1932.

STATE

A cold front that was surging southeastward through Texas Friday finally reached the coastal waters, bringing scattered heavy thunderstorms along with it.

The frontal boundary extended along a Houston-Victoria-Laredo line by late Friday, while light showers lingered over sections of south Central, north Central and Northeast Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Sunny skies prevailed over Northwest and far West Texas, while skies were clearing across the Edwards Plateau and west North Texas.

Afternoon temperatures were in the 40s and 50s behind the cold front. Meanwhile, readings in the 70s and 80s were common along the coast and deep south.

NATION

A mixture of heavy snow and freezing rain struck the Plains on Friday, slickening roads in Nebraska, while the Pacific Northwest got a lighter dose of precipitation.

Heavy snow fell over much of central Nebraska, with 9 inches in Ainsworth and Valentine, and 6 inches in Mullen. A band of freezing rain and drizzle extended from eastern Nebraska to northwest Iowa. Up to 5 inches of snow fell over Denver and up to a foot blanketed Fort Collins, Colo.

Another storm system plagued the Pacific Coast, with light freezing rain, sleet and snow over much of eastern Washington, the Cascade Mountains in Washington and Oregon, and the Columbia Gorge and northeast sections of Oregon.

Up to half an inch of ice was reported on the ground in the Moro and Heppner areas of northern Oregon. Rain fell along the Pacific Coast from Northern California to western Washington.

Bill Malone...off on another assignment.

Malone 'ordered' into officiating

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Bill Malone's excuse for taking the path that sometimes leads to being ostracized by pilot society sounds like something from a Flip Wilson show. "My commander made me do it."

Malone practices one of those much-maligned and oft-abused and always second-guessed professions without which sport would be a bland pasttime.

Malone spends his fall weekends fleeing to such exotic sounding locales as San Diego, Hawaii, Colorado Springs, Salt Lake City, Provo, El Paso, Albuquerque...well, they all can't be romantic. Malone officiates Western Athletic Conference football.

"My first real thought of getting into officiating was by direct order," the longtime Midlander began. "I was in the Navy and stationed in Haiti. We were having a Recreation Day and the Deck Force challenged the Engineers to a football game. The commander assigned me as one of two officials from the Engineers along with two from the Deck crew to call the game.

"We were issued whistles, SP bands and billie clubs."

That was in 1952 and when he returned to Baylor University, "I was a Triple Threat— too slow, too small and too smart— to continue to play the game, but I wanted to stay with it., so I started attending SFOA (Southwest Football Officials Association) meetings in Waco.

In the fall of 1954, his assignements were three seventh grade games. In 1969, he was informed of his first WAC assignement and has been handling league games ever since and he has Bobby Dobbs, the Blanchard-Davis era Army fullback, and Burns McKinney, longtime SWC official from Midland, to thank for it.

"Dobbs was coaching UTEP at the time. He wanted some Texas officials in the WAC and told John Adams, then head of the Texas officials, he wanted a West Texan. The supervisor of the SFOA asked Burns McKinney to submit three names."

Dr. John Cox of Lubbock, Malone and Frank Shepard, also of Midland, were on the list. Malone , with Cox, was picked and now is in his 17th season of WAC officiating.

Shepard wound up as a SWC official and is frequently visible on telecasts of league games.

Malone learned of his assignment in the spring of 1969. He remembers it well for a couple of reasons, most indelibly because it was the day his son, David, was born.

"I was playing golf at Ranchland Hills Country Club and had just completed the front nine when I got word of my selection," recalls Malone, now executive assisant to the president at Texas-American Bank. "I played the front nine in two under and, after the news, I played the back in nine over."

His first assignement at UTEP also looked like his last, "I had three pass interference calls in the end zone and two of them were against the offense. I thought I'd never be asked back again, but they were all there on the film. The strange thing about it, I haven't had an end zone interference call since then."

Malone's first college game was at Eastern New Mexico University in 1965 and it took years of accummulating points at the lower levels to qualify. He apprenticed in 1953 by handling the chain and watching the actions of the head linesman for five games. That was a requisite, plus a rules exam, before even being okayed to officiate a junior high game.

In those days, no points were awarded for junior high, freshman or JV games. One point was awarded for Class A, two for AA and AAA and three for AAAA. Officials are graded by points— Division 5, 0 to 39; Division 4, 40 points.

"Today officials get a half point for working Midland Youth games and junior high, sophomore and JV games. And today, new officials can work Wednesday, Thursday or Saturday and earn up to 1 1/2 to 2 points a week."

What's it like out there on the field when, after a controversial call, 60,000 fans are roaring for justice and coaches on the sidelines are questioning his lineage?

"It really doesn't bother me," says Bill, "I've made mistakes, but in my mind when I make the call I feel I'm right. I see something and the flag goes. It's automatic."

He remembers more some of the game's oddities. Like the time with Frank Shepard at Rankin. "Rankin had this big red headed boy who later went to Tech. On the kickoff the ball was returned to the 45. He grabbed the returner five yards in bounds by the shoulder pads and threw the kid toward the sidelines. The ball carrier hit Shepard, who was retreating, chest high. Frank went over a bench backward."

Then there was the University of New Mexico game, back when the goal posts were still on the end line. "New Mexico always threw a lot and they had a couple of fast receivers. On this play the UNM receiver and defensive back went into the end zone with the back judge chasing all the way. The two players went on either side of the goal post. The official hit the post full steam. It knocked him out and we had to work a four man crew until the second half, when he came back."

Since those days, the officiating crew has been expanded, first to six men and now to seven. "It has changed the mechanics. Now the head linesman has responsibility from within two yards of the ball to 12 to 15 yards downfield.

Rebels, Sandies settle it today

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — By now the road leading to Jones Stadium is well known by Midland and Odessa football fans.

The trek began yesterday for Odessa Permian fans, who were headed for the Panthers' Bi-district date with Amarillo Palo Duro. Many Midland fans are here already, taking advantage of the doubleheader weekend.

Midland's main train-of-cars surge began this morning as Lamesa's stop lights get a workout as Tall City drivers began heading for today's 2 p.m. Bi-district date with Amarillo High.

When Lee runs its first play from scrimmage today, it will mark the eighth time Permian and Lee have played football games in Jones Stadium in just the past two years alone.

Today is Lee's fifth appearance in Lubbock since 1983 and the Rebels own a 3-1 record at Jones Stadium, losing only to Permian by a 15-14 margin last year in the state quarterfinals.

Amarillo High's Sandies have one trip to Jones Stadium under their belt, but they would like to erase the 30-3 decision they lost to Lee in 1983. It's a memory the Sandies would like to forget.

Lee has scored 106 points in the Jones Stadium experience while allowing a meager 25. Fifteen of those points came in two games with Permian, a 20-0 victory in 1983 and the 15-14 loss last year.

"Our kids have a good feeling about Jones Stadium," noted Lee head coach Jack Tayrien, whose 20-4 record in his two years is the best two-year mark in Lee history. Spike Dykes had a two-year mark of 20-6 during the 1982-83 campaigns instead of a 21-5 mark as previously reported.

"Playing here is special to the kids. It's like a reward for the job they have done. Getting away from home and playing in a big stadium is something they look forward to. I just hope we can continue to have the luck here we've had in the past."

The Rebels planned to leave Midland at 8:45 a.m. today for Lubbock while the Lee band had a departure time scheduled at 10:30 a.m.

The Rebels, team boosters, pep squads, drill teams and band members took part in a sendoff bonfire at the school Friday night.

Permian eases past Palo Duro

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK— Odessa Permian's 34-15 bidistrict win over Amarillo Palo Duro here Friday night at Jones Stadium was a typical Mojo type score, but the frustrated Dons proved to be a better opponent than most expected for the District 4-5A champions.

Whether Palo Duro was worthy or not, it's the Panthers who advanced to the area contest against El Paso Austin, another team Permian demolished on its way to a state co-championship last year.

Since Permian hosted Austin last season, Coach John Wilkins' crew must travel to El Paso this year and that game will be Friday night at 7:30 p.m. MST in the Sun Bowl.

After one half in Jones Stadium against Palo Duro, the Panthers on the scoreboard by a 14-7 margin, but little else.

Permian's highly-touted defense has allowed a mere average of 174 yards per game this year, but Palo Duro had 217 yards against Permian in the first half while speedster Earl Pettis had 114 alone.

Only Midland High's Jake Madrid had been able to crash the 100-yard barrier against Permian this year, but Pettis did it in one half.

It would have been 7-7 at the half if Palo Duro hadn't gift-wrapped a Permian touchdown. Defensiveback Darren Allman recovered a Pettis fumble at the PD 15 to set up Greg Anderson's 15-yard TD reception from Quarterback Jason Harrington.

Permian made it 14-0 in the second quarter by marching 71 yards in five plays as Patrick Wilson had a 25-yard gain to set up Marcus Lott's 35-yard TD run.

Palo Duro put the scare into Permian by coming back with a 75 yard drive when Pettis busted one 52 yards to the Permian 23. And Richard Owens later cashed in from a yard out.

Permian still led, but most were trying to figure out how as PD owned the statistical yardage edge by 217 to 118.

"I don't know what happened in the first half. During halftime we talked about getting more physical. We weren't hitting. I think we were sleeping or something," said Permian offensive star Anderson. "Coach Wilkins told us we weren't playing up to our capability and I agree with him."

Evidently, Anderson took Wilkins at his word because it was Anderson's 63-yard punt return that seemed to wake up the Panthers in the third quarter. His dazzling return put Permian at the Don 17 and Harrington then covered the distance the easy way by hitting Bryan Lauterbach in the end zone for a 21-7 lead.

All you can say about the punt return, "is that there was some good

McCamey muscles by Marfa

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

ALPINE - It was a bruising ground game that rolled up a 32-14 win for McCamey in this Class 2A Bi-district game, but it was a fourth-quarter interception that broke Marfa's back Friday night.

The Badgers' sophomore cornerback Emmit Brown found the only way to stop the Shorthorns' Cosme Roman was to intercept him. So Brown picked off a Roman pass with six minutes left in the final period to stop a Shorthorn comeback.

The Badgers' ground game did the rest, ramming in a final touchdown to put the game out of reach. The Badgers got touchdowns from quarterback Nandy Zarate, halfback Adam Arana and two from fullback Oscar Rodriguez on the night. McCamey piled up 278 yards on the ground while holding Marfa to zero first downs rushing.

The Badgers, champions of District 8-2A, will now play Hamlin, the state's No. 2 team next Friday night in Andrews. But Leaf was just happy to get the first playoff game out of the way.

"It was all Cosme (Roman) again," moaned a relieved McCamey coach Buster Leaf. "We played a prevent defense the whole fourth quarter trying to stop him from making another big play. He made two for two touchdowns, same thing he's done against us since I can remember."

Roman, a four-year starter at Marfa with more than 4,000 career yards through the air, was nine of 19 on the night for 154 yards and two TDs passing. The senior was nine of 12 before Brown made his interception with McCamey leading 25-14.

"He is a great quarterback," his counterpart Zarate admitted. "I thought they should've thrown more becasue tehy kept finding the open back."

Zarate showed a little stuff of his own in guiding four McCamey touchdown drives and and gaining 62 rushing yards.

The Badgers began the game with a batch of uncharacteristic mistakes. Their first possession resulted in no first downs and a punt. The next, a short 23-yard drive to the Marfa 12, saw a Zarate touchdown called back on a penalty and was eventually squelched with a fumble.

Grid Menu replete with biggies

Air Force-Brigham Young, Auburn-Georgia, Arkansas-Texas A&M loom as the big games of the day, but Notre Dame and Penn State perhaps carries more impact for the drama involved.

A coach's future hangs in the balance, as well as a variety of bowl possibilities that exist for both teams. And, perhaps most compelling of all, Penn State's lofty status as the No. 1 team in the land is on the line.

If the Nittany Lions can finish unbeaten there is talk of a national championship showdown in either the Orange Bowl against the Big Eight champion or the Fiesta Bowl against Air Force.

Penn State's elevation to No. 1 status has been greeted with general skepticism. Disbelievers contend Penn State's only noteworthy win has been over Alabama and that Notre Dame deserves more credit for the games it has lost than the Lions for the games they have won.

Notre Dame has won its last four and Gerry Faust's Irish, by winning over Penn State, could propel themselvesinto the Orange Bowl scene.

And Faust's future. Some say the die has already been cast. One thing for sure, a win over Penn State won't really do all that much for Faust. A lot of people think Notre Dame faces tougher assignments in season-closers against LSU and Miami...

The SWC...

Texas A&M plus one over Arkansas- Must win for both teams, but Aggies are at home.

Rice plus 22 over Baylor- Owls don't win very many, but the keep opposition close enough to consistently beat the spread.

SMU minus 17 over Texas Tech- Mustangs have the talent and a week to circle the wagons for Billy Joe Tolliver, Tech's answer to Star Wars.

Texas minus 29 over TCU- Scanning the point spreads, the SWC must be the most out of balance conference in the land. It's either the pent house or the out house.

The Big Ones...

Notre Dame plus one over Penn State- Against Lions' schedule, Irish would probably be 9-0, too.

Michigan minus 10 over Minnesota- Gophers, after a promising start, are fading.

Iowa minus 10 over Purdue— Any team that can annihilate Illinois 59-0 isn't going to worry about 10 points against a Purdue.

BYU minus 3 1/2 over Air Force- Well, there goes your Penn State vs. Air Force Fiesta Bowl game for the national championship.

Southern Mississippi plus 13 1/2 over Alabama- SMU is tougher than it sounds and Tide has Auburn gleam in its eye.

Oklahoma minus 17 over Colorado- Excuse me, the imbalance in the Big Eight is as bad as it is in the SWC.

Oklahoma State minus 20 over Missouri- This may be selling Tigers short...after all they split with Kansas State and Iowa State.

Iowa State pick 'em against Kansas State- Can two teams lose the same game?

Auburn plus one over Georgia- Only because of Bulldogs' all-out effort against Florida last week.

Yale minus one over Princeton- Elis have a better record. Tigers have played a tougher schedule with Lehigh, Colgate and William & Mary as non-conference foes...so the coin comes up heads.

UCLA minus 29 over Oregon State- You can bet on it, I didn't ask Mark Lewis for any of his zinside" information.

The pros...

Cowboys pick 'em over Bears- Chicago is 9-1 against the spread and has been making a loser of me all year, except for the second Green Bay game. However, the law-of-avrages is with Dallas and how "up" can Mike get his team for a team that has lost three times?

Steelers minus three over Oilers- Houston's Moon shot craters again.

Miami minus seven over Colts- Dolphins are terrible against the spread, but this is Indianapolis.

Cardinals minus two over Eagles- St. Louis lost to Tampa Bay, a feat most felt was impossible, last week, but should be over its post-Cowboy letdown.

49ers minus 13 over Chiefs- It's now or never for the defending Super Bowl champions.

Patriots plus 3 1/2 over Seattle- When in doubt, take the points.

Raiders minus six over Cincinnati- Oakland is playing like a team from Los Angeles, still....

Iowa-Texas grid rematch possible for Cotton Bowl

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

A Texas-Iowa rematch in the 50th anniversary of the Cotton Bowl New Year's Day?

A lot of wild pegs would have to fall in place in November but the Texas Longhorns have the inside track as the Southwest Conference host team and Iowa of the Big Ten Conference is high on the Cotton Bowl's list of possible guest teams.

Texas can march right into the Cotton Bowl by beating Texas Christian, Baylor and Texas A&M in its final three games. The 'Horns have lost only to probation-stained Southern Methodist.

Texas hosts unraveling TCU, a 63-7 loser to Texas Tech, in Austin Saturday at 1 p.m. The 'Horns are 25-point favorites.

Iowa is still alive for the Rose Bowl but it's no secret the Cotton Bowl would love to have Coach Hayden Fry and his passing magician quarterback Chuck Long as a guest team. The Cotton Bowl has never had a Big Ten team in its Classic.

The Longhorns would like another crack at Iowa after the Hawkeyes humiliated them 55-17 in last December's Freedom Bowl in Coach Fred Akers' worst loss at Texas.

Carrying Texas Tech's hopes for an upset against SMU in Dallas today are ex-Midland Lee stars, from left, running back Isaac Garnett, defensive end Calvin Riggs, wide receiver Tyrone Thurman along with quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver, who last week set a Tech record with five touchdown passes in one game.

There are four other SWC teams still alive for the Cotton Bowl and two of them, Arkansas and Texas A&M, will clash Saturday night in College Station.

"Texas A&M has the 12th man and plays with great confidence at College Station," said Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield. "They will be even more confident than ever after defeating SMU there two weeks ago on ESPN."

Oddsmakers rated the 6:45 p.m. game dead even.

In other SWC clashes on Saturday, Baylor was a 22-point pick to bounce back from its 20-14 loss to Arkansas and whip the pesky Rice Owls in Waco in a 2 p.m. game; and Southern Methodist was a 17-point favorite over Texas Tech in a 12:04 p.m. regionally televised (Raycom) game at Texas Stadium.

Arkansas is 8-1 and 5-1 in the SWC while the Aggies are 6-2 and 4-1.

"We didn't exactly dominate Baylor," said Hatfield. "We have to fight for everything."

A&M was idle last week and will be rested for the Hogs.

"We needed the rest," said Aggie Coach Jackie Sherrill. "I'm not sure we could have played last week after our emotional victory over SMU."

Hatfield said the SWC race will be a fight to the finish.

"I think the conference race will go down to the wire," he said. "All four teams with one loss (Arkansas, Baylor, Texas A&M and Texas) look equal to me. Everyone is pretty healthy and all four have quarterbacks who are well. All four teams are capable of winning out.

"Last year I had a feeling two losses would get a share of the championship. This year I still feel one loss is all you can afford to win the title."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said it would take awhile for the sting of the Arkansas loss to go away. The Bears led 14-0 in the third period.

"We were bitterly disappointed by the Arkansas game," said Teaff. 'We've seen us bounce back after a loss to Georgia and I have every confidence we'll do it again.

Pecos 14, Lamesa 7

LAMESA— Pecos defeated Lamesa, 14-7, in the final game of the season for both teams here Friday night.

The win gives Pecos a 7-3 season's record and a 4-3 record in District 2-4A. Lamesa finishes 4-6 and 1-6.

The Tors jumped in front early when Keith Bryant raced 75 yards and Bobby Guyer converted for a 7-0 lead with 6:40 left in the first period.

Pecos retaliated with 7:52 left in the half on a one-yard run by Lance Windham and Joe Mendez' kick tied it.

A 36-yard pass from Garyn Beaele to Jamie Matta with 6:34 left in the game decided the outcome.

Rankin romps, 49-0

By ALLEN TURPIN

RANKIN — Rankin's Red Devils erupted for a series of long scoring plays to defeat Sanderson, 49-0, in the final District 6-A game of the season.

The win sent the Devils hurtling toward a bidistrict playoff game next week.

Jim Lee's 38-yard dash with 5:09 left in the first period started the touchdown parade and Stephen Cole, who was to kick five PATS made it 7-0.

By halftime it was 21-0 as George Abalos broke a 39-yard TD run and Randy Fulton smashed over from the one with 2:23 left before intermission.

In the third period, Abalos scored the second of his three touchdowns on a 45-yard punt return and then Fulton supplied a 44-yard run for a 35-0 lead after three periods.

Abalos got loose for 55 yards in the final period and Chris Beeman's concluded the scoring with an 11-yard run.

Abalos, carrying the ball only eight times, three for touchdowns, gained an impressive 136 yards.

blocking," said Anderson. "the special teams are important in the outcome of most games. And they couldn't have blocked it any better.

"We went on and put the game out of reach after that, but the score isn't any indication of how the game went. Palo Duro is a good football team. I think they could do well in our district."

The Dons moved the ball well all night, but they were harder on themselves than the Permian defense.

Reagan defeats Van Horn 40-12

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

FORT STOCKTON - The Reagan County Owls completed step one in their quest for the 1985 Class 2A state title Friday night, defeating the Van Horn Eagles 40-12 in a Bi-district game here at Panther Stadium.

From the opening kickoff to the final gun, the District 8-2A Owls were able to dominate the 7-2A Eagles on both sides of the ball, gaining 258 total yards while holding Van Horn to 114.

Despite that domination, the Owls had trouble putting points on the board in the first half, losing two drives deep in Eagle territory before breaking the scoreless tie in the second quarter on a nine-yard run by James West at the 5:39 mark.

A little more than a minute later, the Owls were heading for the end zone again, taking advantage of a Tim Nichols recovery of Eagle quarterback Jesus Ramirez' fumble on the Van Horn 29. One play, a 29-yard pass from quarterback Scott Lipsey to wingback Robert Saldibar, and the Owls owned a 12-0 lead. Both extra point attempts, a kick and a run, failed.

The score held up until the third quarter. After holding Van Horn on three downs following the kickoff, the Owls took a short punt at their own 44 and marched 56 yards for a score and an 18-0 lead on Junior Romero's four-yard run. Again, the PAT failed.

The kicking game never did click for the Owls. On their only punt attempt of the night, the ball was snapped well over Saldibar's head and, when he finally caught up with it, he had nowhere to run and Van Horn got field position on the 36.

It took the Eagles six plays to cover the distance to the end zone, using a 22-yard pass from Ramirez to Ernie Gonzales to set up Jesus Corralez' two-yard scoring run. Down by 12, the Eagles went for two and came up short, but cut the margin to 18-6 going into the final quarter.

Reagan County scored the first three times they had possession of the ball in the fourth frame, getting two touchdowns from Tim Tatum on runs of three and four yards and a 34-yard score from West. Tatum and West also added a two-point run apiece.

Bracketing the final two Reagan County TDs was the last six-pointer for Van Horn, an 82-yard kickoff return by Alfredo Mendez.

The victory gives the Owls an 8-3 record while the Eagles bow out of the playoffs at 4-6, also snapping a four-game winning streak.

Offensively, Reagan County came away with big production from three backs, fullback Tatum, 106 yards on 17 carries, tailback West, 16-for-104, and Lipsey, who rushed for 51 yards on 13 carries and completed 4-of-10 passes for 78 more yards.

"They've done a great job for us all year," said Reagan County coach Ronnie Reeger. "Of course, Tatum has been very consistant. He came into the ball game with 889 yards on 171 carries and West had 831 yards on 141 carries. They both do a super job."

The two backs, being within 60 yards of each other in the stats, have a friendly little battle going on who wins the season's rushing title for the Owls.

"I'll win it this year and he can have it next year," said Tatum, a senior.

"No, I'll get him before it's over," said West, a sophomore.

"It keeps us running good, trying to beat each other," said Tatum.

While they disagree on who will win the rushing crown, they do manage to agree on what got them the victory against Van Horn.

"I think the line blocked pretty good," said West. "And, our quarterback did all right considering he's new. He's only been in at the quarterback position since Bobby (Gunnels) got hurt."

Gunnels went down the week prior the the 8-2A season opener.

Tatum, who picked up a lot of his yardage on cutback plays, added "I was just trying to find the yardage, find the holes. Usually we've got good backside blocking and if I can't find a hole on the frontside I can go back."

The entire team was attributing success to the play of the defensive unit.

"I think the defense did a great job, dominated them," said Tatum. "We had one break down on a kick-off but, other than that, we had a great effort."

"The linebackers played real well," said Nichols. "The secondary did a job covering their receivers."

With the Bi-district victory, the Owls advance into the Area game where they will meet the winner of today's Shallow Water-Haskell game. The time and site of the Area game have yet to be arranged.

Nice guy Rangers out to change image

By JOHN SPELICH
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

ARLINGTON (AP — The Texas Rangers are out to prove that nice guys don't have to finish last.

The Rangers — who finished in the basement of the American League West Division in 1985 — have decided to give the fans a break next season.

Ticket and parking prices will not increase, Rangers marketing director Larry Schmittou said Wednesday.

But hot dogs and beer may cost slightly more during the 1986 season, Schmittou said.

The Rangers are gambling that a better team in 1986 and an expanded promotional package will improve the club's financial position, he said.

The club has suffered seven-figure losses in each of the past two seasons, Schmittou said. The Rangers executive would not reveal specific figures.

The team's losses in 1985, including interest on past indebtedness, totalled almost $4 million, according to club president Mike Stone.

"We're hoping to show a commitment to our fans," Schmittou said. "We also believe our team will be better next year and we will make up for the revenue that price increase would have accounted for by drawing more people."

The best seat in the house again will cost $8.50, and parking will remain $3 a space, Schmittou said.

Although the club has not set concession prices, some items could escalate by a small percentage because of the new wholesale tax on beer and increased wholesale costs on other items, Schmittou said.

The Rangers drew only 1.1 million fans in 1985. The average major-league team drew 1.8 million fans in 1985, according to figures released by the baseball commissioner's office.

A winning baseball team, which draws additional fans to the ballpark and generates greater revenue for the team, is the secret to maintaining ticket prices, Schmittou said.

"It's hard for us to keep our prices the same," he said. "If you knew you would draw two million (people), you could probably charge a dollar less a ticket. We're just fighting as hard as we can to keep the ticket price down."

Rangers management is taking out some attendance insurance by booking three additional post-game concerts, adding giveaway items and increasing discount seat programs.

Cy Young hints shift in direction

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The coronation this week of Dwight Gooden and Bret Saberhagen as the 1985 Cy Young Award winners punctuates what appears to be a distinct direction change for baseball, an emphasis on young, home-grown talent.

Gooden, who will be 21 on Saturday, is a product of the New York Mets farm system, drafted by his club in the first round of the 1982 free agent draft.

Saberhagen, 21 in April, came from the Kansas City Royals farm system, drafted by his club in the 19th round of the 1982 free agent draft.

So what, you might ask, was everybody doing on the 18 rounds in between those two picks?

Oh, just mining other raw talent like Toronto pitcher Jimmy Key in the third round, Seattle slugger Alvin Davis in the sixth round, Cincinnati 20-game winner Tom Browning in the ninth round, and St. Louis speedster Vince Coleman in the 10th.

The same amateur draft produced useful people like Terry Pendleton, Roger McDowell, Ken Howell, Kirk McCaskill, Sammy Khalifa, Mark Bailey, Zane Smith, Shawon Dunston, Mark Bailey, Tim Birtsas, Todd Worrell and others who have developed into recognizable major leaguers.

In retrospect then, if you eliminate Steve Garvey, who helped San Diego win the National League pennant last year, the 1982 division of teenage talent had more long-range impact on the clubs involved than the more widely publicized re-entry draft of familiar old names.

Three World Series have been played since then and in each case — Baltimore in 1983, Detroit in 1984 and Kansas City this year — the winners were constructed from home-grown talent, with little or no input from the re-entry marketplace. And that is a trend that promises to continue.

Teams have locked up their most valuable players in long-term deals and more and more the free-agent market, once a quick-fix for clubs with large checkbooks, is becoming a distinctly secondary source for talent.

There are about 50 players on this year's list but you can reduce the really useful ones to a precious handful. Kirk Gibson will get rich — richer, really, since he earned a tidy $685,000 last season — because he is young and had the great good sense to deliver at last on his huge potential by hitting 29 home runs, driving in 97 runs and stealing 30 bases. But after him, the pickings are slim.

Future Hall of Famers Rod Carew, Don Sutton and Phil Niekro are on the list. So is Rusty Staub, who has turned pinch hitting into an art form. So is Al Oliver, who helped Toronto win a half-pennant. So is Carlton Fisk, who hit 37 home runs for the White Sox last season.

Fisk, who turns 38 next month, is the baby of that group. Finding teams willing to invest big bucks, or any bucks for that matter, in players their age will be no small trick.

Perhaps this draft ought to carry the Statue of Liberty's message — "Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free."

Instead of turning this particular assemblage of tired, poor, huddled masses into capitalists, the clubs seem more interested in investing within, in developing their own talent and then reaping the returns when the kids mature into major leaguers. That's what happened with Gooden and Saberhagen.

Next week, the baseball writers will hand out the Most Valuable Player awards. The favorites are 24-year-old Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees and 27-year-old Willie McGee of the St. Louis Cardinals. Compared to the Cy Young winners, they are a couple of senior citizens.

McCAMEY

"I don't know if we came out uptight or overconfident or what," Leaf said. "But Marfa had a lot to do with that. They played much, much better than they did the first time we played them."

McCamey was finally able to open the scoring after the Shorthorns returned the favor and fumbled the ball away on the next play. Although the Badgers were unable to move the ball, the good field position set up a 30-yard field goal by Zarate.

The Shorthorns refused to bow to McCamey's better record, however, and quickly went to the air for a touchdown and the lead. Roman burned the Badgers for three big plays in one lightning-quick drive. First a 43-yard punt return on a reverse gave the Horns good position on the Badger 37. Then a 25-yard pass to Patrick Garnett, set up the next play, a 10-yarder to Garnett for the touchdown and a 7-3 lead.

Falling behind seemed to wake McCamey up as the Badgers then marched 68 and 60 yards on their next two possessions to regain the lead. Fullback Rodriguez threw off three tacklers in a 10-yard sprint to the end zone. On the second, Rodriguez plowed straight ahead for a two-yard score.

"Our blocking scheme was wrong to begin the game and we had to change some things," Zarate said. "I think we played much better in the second half." McCamey controlled the ball enough in the final half to limit Roman's effectiveness, though he did connect with Garnett for one more 60-yard scoring bomb before the game was over.

"We're happy," summed up Leaf. "Our kids just want to keep on playing."

MALONE

You've seen those movie clips in which the breakaway back, the one with the advertised world class speed, is sprinting the length of the field with puffing defenders futilely trying to catch up. If you take the time to look, you'll see some 40-year-old official keeping an eye on the play from in front of the runner by matching the back stride-for-stride. What's more he's doing it sideaways.

Malone explains it's not what it seems. "The official really isn't that fast. He's actually has a 15-yard jump because of his field position and once he sees the play moving out, he gets 25 yards down field. Of course, once in a while a Five hooks up and goes with 'em, but with a Seven, it isn't necessary. The Head linesman will let the field judge take the deep route."

Traveling from West Texas to the sites of WAC games is an interesting study in logistics. "Anything scheduled in the southern half, Albuquerque, San Diego, Hawaii, we leave Saturday morning. In the northern half, Colorado Springs, Fort Collins, Salt Lake City and Provo, we leave Friday. The rule is that you have to be within 150 miles of the game sites eight hours before kick off and this is the only way we can do it."

The Saturday departure for a game in Hawaii seems unrealistic, but even with the layover in Los Angeles, Malone can leave Midland Saturday morning and be in Honolulu 11:30 a.m. The southern trips are the glamorous ones.

Says Malone, who was raised in Plainview, "You usually go into San Diego at 9:30 the morning of the game, but if you want to take a day of vacation, you can play golf Friday and Saturday and take one of those harbor sightseeing trips.

"One year, one of the officials had a beach condo in Hawaii and we went out Thursday and came back Monday."

How lucrative is offciating, Malone says, "You are lucky to net $1,000, but that's not why I do it."

Well, it can't be the abuse.

"It's the satisfaction of being with the game, seeing the improvements over the years and the satisfaction of a job well done," Malone explained. "Officiating also forces you to stay in shape and it's a sure way of getting your annual physical. That's something a lot of people let slip by."

"I would encourage anybody who had the inclination to stay with the sport to take up officiating. This is the best way to

MHS, Lee cagers set sights on post-season play

Playoff experience to help Dogs

Midland High's Lady Bulldogs are coming off a successful year of basketball, one in which they finished in a tie for second place with Midland Lee at 11-3.

After winning a playoff game with the Rebels, the Bulldogs advanced into Bi-district playoffs where they were eliminated by Lubbock Monterey to conclude a 19-9 season.

This year, Midland High has several experienced players returning, but have to compensate for the loss of four of their top five scorers: Denise Lanz (16.3 points per game), Deidra Knapp (8.2), Tina Knight (7.5) and Charlotte Hines (4.5).

"Denise, and I hope people realize it, is one of the best passers, best court players we've had here," said MHS coach Jane Young of her departed three-year starter. "Plus, Deidra Knapp was also a good passer and a good shooter."

AMONG THE returning letter winners are four players feels will be the heart of the 1985-86 squad: Seniors Nadine Hill (5.3), Laura Martin (3.9) and Amy Hubbard (1.1) and junior Amy Cumings (4.3).

All four have also "just came off the volleyball court last week," said Young, the assistant volleyball coach this year under Sonja Pittman, who, in turn, will be Young's new assistant in basketball.

"I think volleyball really helped Amy Cumings a lot. She's more aggressive and her jumping is a lot better. I'm just now seeing what the team can do and I'm depending a lot on those four. Also, Sebrenia Finch, a junior move-in from Stanton who is 5-foot-9. She could possibly be a starter."

Height appears to be a Bulldog strong-point this season with junior Jennifer Fairchild (1.7) the tallest at 6-foot-1. Cumings matches Finch's 5-foo-9 and Martin and Amanda Hendrickson (2.3) come in at 5-foot-8.

Of the remaining players that round out the 12-player roster, Angie Shaw is the only other with varsity experience. The 5-foot-7 senior played as a sophomore but didn't play as a junior.

The rest of the squad has been promoted from junior varsity ranks, Ethel Edwards, 5-foot-2; Brenda Rodriguez, 5-foot-7; Melloney Burnett, 5-foot-7; and Barbara Goss, 5-foot-6.

Like most coaches, Young is making few changes in the overall Bulldog game plan.

"We'll go out and try to do what we always do," said Young, who likes a running game. "It's a heck of a lot more fun to go out and press a team than it is to be pressed. I like to play a little more control game than other teams in the district because I don't have all that good speed and great height.

"The kids have worked real hard the last week and a half and we had a real good scrimmage with Greenwood," said Young. "Both teams played very aggressive in that game."

Young looked back at last season's visit to the playoffs and sees it as an aid for this year.

"I think, from winning last year, it always helps to end the season on a winning note, making it into the playoffs," said Young. "We lost to a good team in Bi-district, a team that went to the state playoffs in Austin."

Young feels confident that this year's race for the playoff berths will be as tight as it was last year. While Odessa Permian won the title at 12-2, San Angelo finished in fourth place at 9-5, leaving only a three-game spread between the top four teams.

"It won't be a runaway for one team," said Young. "Lee will be good, San Angelo will be good, and Permian has got some people back. We'll have to work hard to make it to the playoffs, which we intend to do."

If confidence is contagious for the Bulldogs, it can turn into another tool to work with.

Midland High will get its first test on Friday when the Bulldogs travel to Brownfield for a doulbe-header, starting with the junior varsity at 6:15 and the varsity at 8 p.m.

The Bulldogs open their home season with on Saturday, hosting Lamesa's JV and varsity at 6:15.

Schottzie too rambunctious

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Schottzie, the ubiquitous Saint Bernard of Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott, has been playing the role of playful, affectionate pet a little too enthusiastically.

At a Thursday appearance in Columbus to be inducted into the Ohio Women's Hall of Fame, the usually high-spirited Schott was uncharacteristically subdued — the result, she said, of "too much loving" from Schottzie, which resulted in two broken ribs.

When Gov. Richard Celeste asked how it happened, she explained that Schottzie, in a moment of immoderate ardor, had backed her into a wall and, taken by surprise, she raised her arms and exposed her ribs to the weighty dog.

Schottzie was conspicuous by his absence from the Hall of Fame ceremony, at which Schott said she was accepting her plaque "for all those other women in the state who never get the recognition they deserve."

Denver's 12th Man armed

Snowball saves Broncos' win

An AP Sports Analysis
By DAVE GOLDBERG

Dan Reeves knows the two sides of Denver Broncos fans. Some of them, after all, wanted his head after the Broncos had the affront to lose a game to Seattle last season and fell to 11-2 after 10 straight wins.

But after Reeves' Broncos beat the San Francisco 49ers Monday night, he gave them full credit.

"When they come out in this kind of weather and cheer us on like they did, that's showing terrific support," he said. "They helped us win the game."

More precisely, one snowball-throwing fan helped them win the game.

THE MISSILE in question, one of numerous snowballs flung from the stands at Mile High Stadium during the game, landed in front of San Francisco's Matt Cavanaugh as he was about to spot the ball for Ray Wersching's 19-yard field-goal attempt. The best Cavanaugh could do was pick up the ball and heave it awkwardly (and unsuccessfully) into the end zone.

The 49ers ended up losing 17-16. The police ended up escorting five people from the stadium on what detective Ken Chavez said was a charge of "throwing missiles."

And the incident tarnished Denver's image. As Dan Gayer of Commerce City, Colo., said after the game:"It makes us look bad, especially when it's on national television."

Denver fans are probably the most blindly loyal in the National Football League — 73,173 of them showed up Monday in 20-degree weather and despite a 30-10 defeat in San Diego the previous week. They would have been there had the Broncos entered the game 3-6 instead of 6-3.

THE WAITING list for season tickets is as long as the waiting lists in Washington and New York, where the population base is millions larger. There have been divorce cases in which the battle for custody of the Broncos tickets is more bitter than the battle for custody of the kids.

And memories linger. Lou Saban, who hasn't coached the Broncos since 1971, is still known there scornfully as "Half-a-Loaf," because he played for a tie against the Dolphins that season and excused his actions by saying: "Half a loaf is better than none."

Last season, after the Broncos had the temerity to lose to the Seahawks, the mood in a town where the two daily papers treat a Broncos game with the attention of a declaration of war lay somewhere between betrayal and denial.

But Denver fans are also pacifists compared to those in cities some fans feel they've lost their fanhood if they go home without bloodying a neighbor or two.

Then came the snowball and instant outrage.

"I don't condone the snowball throwing," said Reeves. "There is no place for that kind of activity in pro football. I hope we don't ever see that again."

BYU-AFA seek major bowl invite

PROVO, Utah (AP) — A major bowl bid and a possible national championship are but two of the prizes at stake for unbeaten Air Force when the Falcons meet Brigham Young here Saturday.

The Falcons are being considered for the Sugar, Orange, Cotton and Fiesta bowls on New Year's Day, but apparently only if they finish the regular season unscathed. A loss along the way would relegate them to a lesser bowl.

Air Force also figures into the national title equation only if it stays unbeaten and improves on its No. 4 ranking with help from future opponents of Penn State, Nebraska and Ohio State — the three teams ranked above AFA.

Ironically, it is BYU, the defending national champion, which could stand in the way of unprecedented successive national champions for the Western Athletic Conference.

Air Force also puts its 13-game winning streak — longest in the nation — on the line.

Sixteenth-ranked BYU, also in the bowl picture, has been installed as a 2½-point favorite.

The game matches Air Force's multi-faceted wishbone against BYU's potent passing attack.

BYU's offense — the most prolific in the nation with a per-game average of 518 yards — starts with quarterback Robbie Bosco, who has accounted for 3,344 yards passing this season, far and away the best in the country, despite some nagging injuries.

Bosco left last week's 44-0 rout of Utah State late in the first half with a bruised left shoulder, but he is reported healthy this week.

The Cougars' best receiver, Glen Kozlowski, is lost for the season with a knee injury, but there is no shortage of replacements. Four BYU receivers rank among the top 20 in the country, paced by sophomore tight end Trevor Molini, with 60 catches for 824 yards and three touchdowns, and junior wide receiver Mark Bellini, with 45 for 729 yards and 11 TDs.

Luck plays big role in success of any team

Lee Girls

Predicting the results of the girls District 4-5A basketball season can be a hit and miss business, with the emphasis on the miss, according to Midland Lee coach Shirley Stephenson.

And who should know better than Stephenson. Last year Lee was considered a preseason also-ran, but when the Rebels ran off seven straight wins to open district play, more than a few heads were turned.

But not Stephenson's.

"It doesn't matter who the favorite is before the season," Stephenson said looking ahead to the 1985-86 season. "I have this optimistic idea that if things get clicking, you get a little luck, anything could happen."

IT NEARLY did happen last year for Lee. After the strong start, the Rebs hung on in district play and weren't eliminated until a post-season, one-game playoff with Midland High sent the Bulldogs to the playoffs. The Rebels finished the year 11-4 in district and 18-10 overall.

This season, Stephenson thinks it could happen again. And with nine letter-winners returning, she hopes the season doesn't end with district play.

Leading the returners is last season's leading scorer Becky White, a 5-8 senior. White led the team in both field goals and free throws on a squad that boasted a well-balanced offensive attack. But White is far from alone as eight others join her from last year's varsityroster.

"The way it looks is we'll have a kind of platoon system, and I don't think we'll lose anything when any of them are in there," Stephenson said. "We'll substitute five at a time and let them play as a team for a while. It may turn out we won't be able to do that, but we're going to try."

JOINING WHITE in the starting five are seniors Louise Brown (2.8 points per game), Fonda Fields (2.8), Tina Swinney (4.9) and Candace Mornay (3.8). All are seniors and have put a lot of time in together learning each others moves and habits.

The second five consists of senior Vicki Smith and juniors Roslyn Eaden (5.9), Lavette Wallace (4.5) and Melissa Hart, in her first season on the varsity.

Stephenson expects four others to make the roster and see playing time — junior Penny Pruitt and sophomores Leah Burnett, Hilee Kelm and Khristie Davis.

"I really expect scoring from a lot of different people, it's hard to say that two or three will carry the load," Stephenson said. "We're a good passing team and we don't shy away from anything. We should be a good physical, rebounding team but we're not tall."

What the Rebels don't have returning this season are the leaders that made the 1984-85 team a contender.

GONE ARE Diane White, Becky's sister, and Denise Hatch, the No. 2 and 3 scorers from last season's squad, as well as Valencia Wallace and Megan Pace, another pair of strong players from last season.

Stephenson is hoping the seniors learned a good lesson from last year's leaders and can carry on the tradition.

"We had three senior leaders last year and they set a good example. They were what I consider a rare group. If we can get that again, anything can happen."

The Rebels will begin looking for things to happen on Nov. 22 when they travel all the way to Del Rio to play San Antonio Southwest in a 6 p.m. game. The next day they will play the Del Rio squad, also at 6 p.m.

Following that are trips to Hobbs, N.M., and a tournament in Andrews. Lee will not play in the Tall City until Dec. 12 when the two-day Midland Invitational Tournament is scheduled for the Chaparral Center. District 4-5A play begins on Dec. 16 against the Bronchos of Odessa High.

NFL buckles to Houston's Cowboys' fans

HOUSTON (AP) — The National Football League on Friday bowed somewhat to pressure from Houston fans of the Dallas Cowboys and will allow Sunday's Chicago-Dallas game to be televised here.

The broadcast will be on a tape-delayed basis, however, because the hometown Houston Oiler game will be on television at the same time the Cowboys are hosting the Bears.

"This is a vary rare situation," NFL spokesman Mike Gigante said Friday after league officials made the decision. "We got a lot of grief from the people in Houston. They expressed their point of view — some of them nicely and some not so nicely."

Gagante, who said he handled about 50 irate calls from Cowboy fans in Houston, said he could not recall the last time the league allowed a tape-delayed broadcast.

"It is done rarely," he said.

According to the NFL's television guidelines, a home game that is not sold out 72 hours before kickoff can be blacked out locally.

But because the Houston Oilers-Pittsburgh Steelers game was a sell-out by noon Thursday, it will be shown Sunday on Houston's NBC affiliate, KPRC, station spokeswoman Laura Wesley said.

Houston's noon game bumped the Cowboys-Bears game, considered by many to be the top matchup in the NFL this weekend, because the rules also say that when a home team is playing at home, the local viewing area gets no more than two consecutive football telecasts.

Houston's CBS affiliate, KHOU, which planned to air the Cowboys-Bears game if the Oilers did not sell out, also asked the NFL to waive the rule.

Lindbergh death probe continues

WOODBURY, N.J. (AP) — The Camden County prosecutor's office continued its investigation Friday of Pelle Lindbergh's fatal automobile accident amid reports that the Philadelphia Flyers' goalie, while heavily intoxicated, was not as drunk as first reported.

The Flyers' team physician announced Monday that tests showed Lindbergh's blood-alcohol level at .24 percent after the accident that left him brain dead and that seriously injured two passengers in his turbo-charged Porsche. The legal limit for New Jersey drivers is .10 percent.

The Philadelphia Daily News reported the New Jersey State Police laboratory in Hammonton found a sample of Lindbergh's blood showed an alcohol content of .17 percent, less than previously announced but still above the limit.

"I cannot confirm or deny anything," Assistant Prosecutor James Lynch said Friday. State police and Somerdale police, who handled the original accident investigation, referred all calls to Lynch.

On Wednesday, Somerdale Police Detective Charles Pope said the results from state police were "basically in line with the hospital's test" although he would not reveal the figure.

CBS in good shape despite recent loss

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite a third-quarter loss, CBS is putting itself in a good position to improve profitability by consolidating its business and shedding operations that have had disappointing results, analysts say.

The company announced earlier this week that it took an after-tax loss of $114.1 million in the third quarter mainly because it discontinued operations in its toy, home computer software and theatrical film businesses. It hopes eventually to find buyers for at least some of the assets of those operations.

Operating losses at those divisions and writeoffs from their shutdown totaled $143.2 million.

CBS said in the future it will concentrate on its three main lines of business — broadcasting, recorded music and publishing.

CBS stock rose $2 a share to $120 in consolidated New York Stock Exchange trading, suggesting Wall Street was not worried by the loss.

Analysts who attended a briefing by CBS executives said the company had cleared the way for improved profits.

"I thought it was upbeat," said Dennis Leibowitz, an analyst for Donaldson Lufkin Jenrette Securities Corp.

Fred Anschel, an analyst for Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said, "They bit the bullet, which everyone expected."

Anschel said he was "sure the broadcast business will turn around."

The analysts said they were not surprised by a prediction from Thomas H. Wyman, CBS chairman and chief executive officer, that the company would report a profit slightly lower than in 1984.

Wyman told the analysts that neither he nor the board of directors planned any management shakeups.

CBS has been restructuring and trimming expenses since fighting off a $5.4 billion takeover attempt by broadcast magnate Ted Turner. In the battle against Turner, CBS spent about $1 billion buying back nearly a quarter of its shares from

Choreographer's new dance getting away with murder

NEW YORK (AP) — Choreographer Maurice Bejart, who is seemingly willing to try anything, opened a season by his Brussels-based Ballet of the 20th Century here Wednesday night with a two-hour, murder-mystery dance.

Bejart loves to put together collages: bits of classical dance, shards of humor and camp, changes of pace and direction, snippets of varied music, flashes of wit, prank and ballet in-jokes.

The two hours make a difference.

Chunks in this long collage tend to be larger and longer. A modern-looking but heart-felt romantic pas de deux goes on as long as in a regular ballet, and that's good. The lovely bits in many Bejart ballets are gone before they can be savored.

Some of the dance's exposition is dull but necessary.

Some of the humor also carries on too long; the scene of the victim's birth and early life lasted so long that one expected her to die of that instead of a gunshot.

"Le Concours" is the name of the ballet, which takes place at an international ballet competition. Contestants crowd in. So do a French judge, two Russian judges, two Japanese judges, and a brassy American judge, played by Colleen Neary, once of the New York City Ballet.

Ada, a contestant who is danced beautifully by Shonach Mirk, is shot and killed.

In comes Marc Hwang, a tall detective in Fu Manchu mustache and trench coat. His movements are dif-

'Little Steven' mixes politics with rock 'n' roll

By LARRY McSHANE

NEW YORK (AP) — His beliefs have led him to leave Bruce Springsteen's E Street Band and cost him a record contract. But "Little" Steven Van Zandt remains convinced: rock 'n' roll and politics do mix.

"I guess I'm an extremist in that way, and to my commercial detriment, I suppose, but you don't have a choice at a certain point in life," said Van Zandt, whose last album probed American foreign policy and whose latest work is the anti-apartheid single, "Sun City."

"You know, people say, 'Well why don't you just write a hit, and then get your message across.' Which is true, and I wish I could," Van Zandt said during a recent interview. "I've actually sat down and tried to do that, and I can't do that."

After playing in a variety of bar bands along the New Jersey shore, Van Zandt, who is known as Little Steven, served as producer and main songwriter for Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes on their first three albums. He eventually left the band to play with Springsteen and co-produce the hit, "Born in the USA," and "The River."

He left Springsteen prior to the 1984-85 tour to work on his own "Voice of America" LP, which questioned events around the world and the role of the United States.

The record, which did not sell well, prompted one critic to dub Van Zandt the "political cartoonist of rock 'n' roll." Afterward, he and his record company went separate ways and the guitarist remains without a label.

However, Van Zandt, whose braided hair reaches down to his chest, said he could not have done it any other way because of his political and social views.

"It's obvious to me and to quite a lot of other people that when it comes to foreign policy, generally speaking, the Reagan Administration is hopelessly uneducated," said Van Zandt. "Their policies are uniformly nonproductive, aside from the fact that a good deal of the time they are immoral and occasionally illegal."

He wore sunglasses and the trademark scarf that wraps his head during the interview.

Van Zandt said he doesn't record to get people to accept his point of view or that of the government. Rather, his music is aimed at making people think.

"A record can never explain everything or solve everything. All it can do is focus people on the issue, and then hopefully we can learn more about it," he said.

The New Jersey native made two trips to South Africa before beginning work on "Sun City," which brought together such recording stars as Bob Dylan, Jackson Browne, Miles Davis and Grandmaster Flash under the name "Artists United Against Apartheid."

"I went because I needed to understand a little bit more about it. I'd done as much research as I could," he said. "It's an incredibly complicated situation, and I just felt I had to go."

Van Zandt said he "can't wait around for lawyers and things" to work out a new record contract so

Restored buildings reflect small town's historic past

BARTLETT, Texas (AP) — Like many other small towns in Texas, Bartlett has historic buildings filled with memories of people long gone and colorful events now faded.

Four of these buildings and their crumbling walls probably would have faded into history had not a handful of enterprising people took steps to preserve them.

Bartlett, settled in the early 1880s as a small farming community, prospered when the railroad went through the settlement in the mid-1880s. The soil was rich for farming, and people came to grow cotton and grain and to build a life.

During the early 1900s, several buildings in the city were erected, and some of those still standing are on the National Register as "the most perfect examples of Victorian architecture" in Texas, said E.A. Limmer, a longtime Bartlett resident and local historian.

The old Lawrence Brothers Dry Goods Store building, built in 1905, is being restored to house the Blackland Gallery, while the old Leatherman Drug Store buildings, erected during the same period, have been restored into a restaurant and a bakery. Another building, the Bartlett National Bank Building, is being restored into a photography studio and gallery.

David Pace, one of the restorers and owner of the three buildings being renovated, said he was looking for a place to have an art gallery for showing the glasswork he creates with his partner.

Pace, who owns his own glass business in Houston, and his partner, Don Davidson, were driving through Bartlett when they noticed the buildings. Pace thought they looked like they had a lot of character and history behind them.

When Pace bought the old Lawrence Brothers building in April 1984, it had no roof and the floor was dirt overgrown with plants and weeds. When he purchased the Leatherman Drug Store building, it was also in bad condition, with a leaky roof and broken windows.

The Lawrence Brothers building was named after M.P. Lawrence, who came to Bartlett in 1888 and operated a livery stable and lumber yard, Limmer said.

Lawrence later went into the grocery business and by 1911, his three sons, Ed, Will and John, had taken over the store and expanded it to include dry goods, clothing and shoes.

Martha Schrock, a longtime resident of Bartlett, born there in 1895, said the Lawrence Brothers store was separated into two rooms connected by an archway in the wall. One side was fresh groceries, and the other was dry goods.

The store had a row of glass cases going down each wall, and the shelves on the walls were filled with merchandise.

"Back then, if you wanted something, you just asked the clerk behind the counter and he got it for you," she said. "It was real service back then."

In the middle of the grocery store there was a row of baskets filled with fresh produce and fruits: peaches, tomatoes, corn, potatoes and beans right off the farm. Large bundles of bananas were hung from the ceiling at the back of the store, like a massive chandelier.

Ms. Schrock would hardly recognize the grocery now that Pace and Davidson have converted it into an indoor garden for displaying artwork, complete with a fish pond, stream and fountains.

The dry goods store building will become a gallery and exhibit area for visiting artists.

From the street, however, former Lawrence Brothers shoppers should recognize the building. The original tall plate-glass hinged doors were restored, woodwork repainted, and the red brick has been preserved. An awning was installed to add shade and character to the building. Pace said the aged brick gave character to the building, so they left it alone.

The old Leatherman Drug Store was built by a man named Haber who operated a drugstore briefly after which Delma Kenneth Leatherman and C.S. McGinnis took over its operation.

Ms. Schrock said Leatherman had a handmade soda fountain specially made for the store, with stools that would swing out from under the glass showcase bar. Leatherman, she said, would have perfumes and makeup and some jewelry in the showcase.

"The boys would come in and sit down with their girls and get a soda and end up buying something for them," she said.

D.T. Boyd, the last owner who used the building as a drugstore, cut a small window in the latticework on the second floor that overlooked the store.

"Mr. Boyd's daughter was deaf, and she spent most of her time in the upper room behind the latticework," said Bob Griffith, a retired meat market supervisor from Houston who now operates The Park restaurant in the building. "When she wanted a Coke, she would let down a string from the opening and they would tie a bottle of Coke to the end of the string and she would pull it up."

Reagan mentions letter in address

METAIRIE, La. (AP) — Amy Stevenson missed President Reagan's address to the nation because she was bathing her three children. Until, that is, her brother called to say the president was talking about her.

"I stood straight up and said 'What?' " Mrs. Stevenson said Friday.

Reagan, in his speech Thursday night about a letter from a Louisiana mother, had not mentioned Mrs. Stevenson by name but her brother recognized the names of her children.

"How many women in Louisiana have twins named Lara and Jessica who are 3 and a son Jonathan who is 5?" said the 30-year-old housewife.

Her three-page letter included photos of her three children and a plea to Reagan to keep them in mind when he discusses nuclear arms reduction at the U.S.-Soviet summit in Geneva.

"Their future," she wrote Reagan, "depends on your actions."

She said she wrote the letter, her first to any elected official, after watching the president address the United Nations several weeks ago.

"I sat down and decided I wanted to say something" about nuclear arms, Mrs. Stevenson said. "I was pretty concened about it before I had the kids."

She declined to discuss her politics or her opinion of Reagan.

"I was just supportive and sent my prayers and hopes with him," she said. "I don't know if I am going to do it again. I have a very nice, quiet lifestyle. I'm going to take a long sabbatical from letter-writing."

The event will close with a Festival of Praise workshop service in the Villa Convention Center at 10:30 a.m. Sunday. Speaker will be the Rev. Donald Hafemann, Midland. His sermon will be on "the Best Seat in the House."

The public is invited to attend.

Candlelight vigil set to aid 'successful' summit outcome

"We are calling together the faith community of Midland-Odessa in common unity of prayer for the successful outcome of the upcoming summit meetings between President Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev in Geneva, Switzerland," says Katheryn Bowers, a spokesman for the local Religious Society of Friends (Quakers).

Sunday is Summit Sabbath and Tuesday is the first day of meetings. An Interfaith Candlelight Vigil will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Centennial Park, Lorraine Street between Texas and Wall avenues.

"This moment will be reflected in towns across the country by people of all faiths in peaceful gathering and prayer for divine guidance of the participants and the success of their meetings," Ms. Bowers says.

Spoken prayers will be offered by local clergy and lay persons of many faiths. "During the course of the vigil, any participant may do so in turn with others as each feels moved."

For more information call Ms. Bowers at 1-367-9253.

Twelve-member delegation to hold prayer vigil in Geneva for summit

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 12-member delegation of U.S. church leaders has been designated to hold a prayer vigil for peace in Geneva during the Reagan-Gorbachev summit conference there next week.

The Americans, named at a meeting here of the National Council of Churches, were to be joined by Soviet church representatives in an initial worship service this Sunday at Geneva's Cathedral of St. Pierre. A joint prayer vigil was to continue Nov. 20-21 during the talks between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikail Gorbachev.

"We believe that a dramatic sign of our unity in Christ across the walls of ideological and other differences may serve to give hope that our two peoples can live together in peace," says the Rev. Arie Brouwer, the council's general secretary.

LAMB in concert Thursday

LAMB will be in concert at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Word of Life.

According to a spokesman for LAMB, the duo team of Joel Chernoff and Rick "Levi" Coghill, who are LAMB, pioneered the sound that today has become known as Messianic Praise and Worship.

"It's not pretentious to call LAMB a group, for this duo makes a big sound. Their music is as contemporary as Israel's jet squadrons, yet the ancient mystique of the Psalms is equally present," the spokesman stated. "Steeped in tradition and bursting with the rhythm of a Hebraic dance, their Messianic music can be haunting, almost mystical."

For more information concerning details about the concert call 699-5610.

Kindred group to perform at Grace Lutheran Church

Kindred, a group of young adults, will perform at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Grace Lutheran Church, 3000 W. Golf Course Road.

Kindred is touring North America prior to spending five months ministering to people in Mexico.

"Through concert and sing-a-long music, media presentations, personal word and witness, puppetry and drama, Kindred provides a faith-encouraging program which challenges our perceptions of the world and emphasizes our oneness in Christ across cultural barriers," says a spokesman for the group.

Kindred is an international team formed and sponsored by Lutheran Youth Encounter, an evangelical Lutheran organization that offers relational ministry resources to the church.

The church's minister, the Rev. Jay E. Simonsen, invites the public to attend.

Baptists present 'praise and worship'

Chris and Diane Machen, concert and recording artists from Plano, will present a concert of "praise and worship" at 7 p.m. today at Fannin Terrace Baptist Church, 2800 Mogford St.

The two have shared the concert stage with such artists as the Cruse Family, Andrus, Blackwood & Co., Doug Oldham, the Hawaiians and Ken Medema. They have also joined forces in crusade meetings with evangelists such as John Bisagno, Ron Herrod, Manley Beasley and Jay Strack.

Machen, originally from Arizona, has a degree in music from Baylor University and a master of church music degree from New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary. He writes much of the music the duo performs. Ms. Machen, who is from New York, also has a music degree from Baylor. She has had 12 years of private study in piano and arranges the musical scores for the concert ministry.

A nursery will be provided. The public is invited to attend this free concert.

Sawyer joins staff of Christian church

Rev. Stanley Sawyer

The Rev. Stanley G. Sawyer has joined the ministerial staff of Memorial Christian Church, 1001 Andrews Highway. Sawyer is a 1985 graduate of Brite Divinity School, Texas Christian University, Fort Worth.

Sawyer has been named associate minister with primary responsibilities in the areas of music and Christian education. Sawyer was ordained in December of 1984, in the Christian Church, Ankeny, Iowa, which is served by his father the Rev. Gerald F. Sawyer.

Prior to attending Brite, Sawyer received his undergraduate degree from Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa. He graduated with Phi Beta Kappa honors in May, 1981.

In addition to ministerial duties and experiences, Sawyer has worked as a microcomputer programmer/data processor from non-profit organizations. He has also spent time performing and recording musical compositions which range in style from organ voluntaries to popular and jazz pieces.

Sawyer lived in Glasgow, Scotland, for two years while his father served a church there. During that time, he traveled extensively in Europe, including trips to Poland, Yugoslavia, Italy, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg and West Germany.

FBC offers seminar on ministry to inmates

A Community Seminar for all those interested in becoming involved in ministering to Midland County jail inmates and their families is being held at First Baptist Church from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

The afternoon session is sponsored by the Midland Ministerial Association in conjunction with Prison Fellowship, a national prison ministry begun by Chuck Colson of Washington some 10 years ago. The purpose of the meeting is to acquaint prospective volunteers with the various forms jail ministry takes.

"Retired teachers, business people and 'just plain folks' are needed and welcome," says John Setzer of Petroplex Covenant.

Speakers include Nancy Berry, director of Prison Fellowship for Texas; Sheriff Gary Painter; Lt. Richard Sexton, Midland County Jail; and Barbara Gideon, director of adult education for Midland College.

"This is an area where 'the fields are truly white unto harvest,'" Setzer says.

For more information call Setzer, 682-2190, or Nellavee Clark, First Baptist Church, 682-1646.

Jews endorse sanctuary

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reform Judaism's central body has become the first national Jewish organization to join with numerous Christian denominations in endorsing the movement to provide sanctuary to refugees from Central America.

At its biennial assembly, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations called on its 791 synagogues to provide "safe haven" to Central American and other refugees who request it "out of fear of persecution".

LDS to honor special 'Family of the Year'

The importance of strong families will be emphasized at the Midland Family of the Year Program being held at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Midland chapel of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 2101 Tarleton St.

The program was started five years ago "to encourage greater family unity in our community," says a spokesman for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

During Thursday's ceremony, 25 families will be honored. Out of the 25, one will chosen as Midland's Family of the Year for 1985. Mayor Thane Akins will present the award as he has done since its inception five years ago.

Previous recipients of the award have included the Melvin Dunn family, the Doc Dodson family, the Lynn Hunt family and the Pat Baskin family.

This program is held in conjunction with National Family Week. An open house and reception will follow the program.

The public is invited to attend.

Church to stage musical

Daniel A. Smith's "Adam's Apple" will be performed for the 10:55 a.m. worship service at St. Mark's United Methodist Church.

"Adam's Apple" is a children's musical based on Genesis 2 and 3, the Biblical story of Adam and Eve.

The Carol Choir and Wesley Choir will be directed by Ruth Ellen Riley. She will be assisted by Linda Harkness. Accompaniment is by Marsha Crawford. These choirs are composed of children in grades kindergarten through sixth.

Eve will be played by Shannon Timmermann and Kyle Watkins will play Adam. Other soloists are Amy Erdwurm and Natalie Gilley.

Prior to the musical, Inez Eaden of St. Paul's CME Church and Pearlie Johnson of Greater St. Luke's AME Church will give a dramatic reading of "The Creation" by James Weldon Johnson, which is based on the first chapter of Genesis.

All members and friends of St. Mark's UMC are invited to attend.

Asbury Fall Festival opens

Asbury United Methodist Church is holding its 6th annual Fall Festival Arts and Crafts Fair from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. today at the Midland County Exhibit Building, Highway 80 east.

Artists and crafstmen from Midland, the surrounding area and other states will have their work on display and for sale, including Western oil paintings by Debbie Blakley, Odessa; ceramics by Linda Smith, Midland; woodcraft by Curtis Key and Dickey Key, San Angelo; and silk and dried flower arrangements by Helen Draper and Bill Draper, Big Spring.

The church sponsors a bakery, a country store and an ice cream booth. In the kitchen, homemade chili, hot dogs, sandwiches, nachos and drinks will be for sale. Door prizes will be given.

Witnesses meet in Odessa

ODESSA — Jehovah's Witnesses from Midland will be meeting with members of nine other West Texas congregations at Ector Junior High School this month.

Frank Davis, spokesman for the local congregation, said that over 1,000 delegates are expected to attend this two-day session of Bible instruction and fellowship.

"Our program theme is 'Doing Our Part in Glorifying God,'" Davis said. "We all have a responsibility to glorify God and to keep on glorifying Him in our lives."

The principal address of the assembly will be delivered by H.E. Shalkoski, a representative of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society from world headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses, Brooklyn, N.Y. His subject will be "Global Peace: From What Source?"

Minster to youth to speak

Rev. Redger

The Rev. Chuck Redger, director of Teen Challenge, will speak at 10:45 a.m. Sunday at Foursquare Church, 415 Alta Ave.

Redger has over 20 years experience in working with troubled youth. He has worked with Teen Challenge in San Francisco, Calif., and New York City, N.Y., before coming to Midland 12 years ago to head up the local group.

His message Sunday is titled "Winning the Battle Against Drug Abuse in the Home." He will discuss the "tough love" approach.

The public is invited to attend.

FBC plans ski retreat

First Baptist Church is planning a Family Ski Retreat to Crested Butte, Colo., Dec. 26-30.

The church has 75 reservations at Oar Bucket Lodge. Those going are responsible for their own transportation, paying for their own equipment and for their lift tickets.

Cost of the rooms is $54 for four persons in a room and $44 for two persons in a room. Breakfast meals are $3.50 and dinner $7.

Those interested in going on this trip need to call First Baptist Church Activities Building, 682-7669. A Family Bible Study will be conducted nightly.

First Baptist Church is also planning an Adult Ski Retreat Feb. 2-8 to Colorado.

Fellowship hosts speaker

The Midland Chapter of the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International is hosting special speaker Juan Papaleo at 7:30 p.m. today at the Midland Hilton, Wall Avenue and Lorraine Street.

Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m.

Papaleo has been serving mission fields in Mexico, Venezuela, Puerto Rico and Santiago, Dominican Republic. He is married to the former Carol la Fonde of Marquette, Mich. They have a 7-year-old daughter, Regina.

Papaleo is a full gospel minister.

FGBMFI also has a prayer breakfast the second Saturday of each month. The breakfast is at 8 a.m. at the Hilton.

The public is invited to attend.

LDS to hold workshop

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will hold a geneaological workshop from 7 to 10 p.m. Wednesday in the Midland chapel, 2101 Tarleton St.

Forms will be available and instruction will be given on a one-on-one basis. The four areas of instruction will be beginning geneaology, problem solving for those who need help getting past a certain point, how to organize geneaology and foreign ancestor research.

There is no charge and the public is invited to attend. For more information call Andy Gilland, 697-7416.

Antioch stages musical

A pre-Thanksgiving benefit musical will be given at 7 p.m. Nov. 23 at Antioch Baptist Church, 1400 E. Golf Course Road.

Church choirs of the city are being asked for selections. Special guest is the St. James Baptist Church Choir, Odessa. The Rev. R.T. McNeil is pastor at St. James Baptist Church.

This program is being sponsored by Eastern Star, Delores Chapter #127. The public is invited to attend.

Sleata Smith is now associated with FLOWERLAND 413 Andrews Hwy. She invites her friends to visit her at her New position.

'Outsiders' influence Appalachian folk art

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the mountains of Appalachia, Indians might sell tourists moccasins made in Taiwan and television has its influence on children like everywhere else, but there is a concerted effort to preserve the traditional folkways. Ironically, much of that effort is the work of "outsiders."

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press

BRASSTOWN, N.C. — Elaine Stuart wraps the supple strand snugly around the frame of her half-finished basket, weaving it in and out with loving care as women in the mountains of Cherokee County have done for generations.

But this basket is made largely of palm fronds from Florida, and Ms. Stuart grew up in Cleveland, Ohio, not Appalachia.

"We are mindful of the traditional ways, but this is not intended to be a museum," said Chris Spicer, manager of the John C. Campbell Folk School, where Ms. Stuart and about 30 other students from around the country were learning basket weaving, pottery, wood carving, dancing, fiddling and other Appalachian arts.

North Carolina is particularly rich in folk arts and crafts, with or without the help of "outsiders," scholars say. Not only are the customs of southern Appalachian whites still flourishing, but so are those of a wide variety of other cultures.

Hmongs from the mountains of Laos follow their traditional lifestyle in the mountains of Burke County; Lumbee and Cherokee Indians practice their ancient religions; the men of Harkers Island build boats from plans in their heads; black musicians play the blues in Durham; and the descendants of Dutch settlers farm flowers and sing hymns in Dutch in the Beaufort County town of Terraceia.

THE CAMPBELL SCHOOL, on the border of Clay and Cherokee counties in the mountainous western tip of North Carolina, was founded 60 years ago by New Englander Olive Dame Campbell. It was originally based on the Danish folk schools, which sought to teach modern farming and other techniques to rural people, while encouraging their native folkways.

But Campbell has evolved into a school that teaches crafts inspired by those of the area — along with entirely "foreign" arts like English country dancing, classical music and batik — to people from outside the area, Spicer says.

Many local residents maintain a close relationship with the school, including wood-carvers whose parents also learned the craft with the help of the school.

But some locals scorn the operators of the school for trying to teach ersatz Appalachian crafts in an area where outside "help" is not needed.

"Some people who've lived here all their lives say, 'I've never had anything to do with the school,'" Spicer says.

The school was criticized in a book written by David E. Whisnant and published in 1983 by the University of North Carolina Press. In "All That Is Native and Fine: The Politics of Culture in an American Region," Whisnant says the school is imposing its own inaccurate interpretation on Appalachian culture.

"I think (Applachian folk arts) will change to accommodate the needs of the next generation. People need tradition to connect their past and their future, to show that they are members of a group."
— Barbara Reimensnyder, school folklife director

SPICER SAYS THE criticism was generally fair, but that the school has had to evolve with the times to serve its adult students, who pay more than $200 a week for tuition, room and board.

Ironically, he said, the founder, Mrs. Campbell, stipulated in the school's charter 60 years ago that the school would disband 60 years later.

"I think she foresaw the danger that you could get in a rut," Spicer says.

About 50 miles across Chunky Gal Mountain to the east, the Macon County school system is using a different approach to encourage traditional folkways — a program that brings folk artists to the schools to talk to pupils.

One of them is Kate Rogers, an 80-year-old woman who still treats her friends and neighbors in Franklin with traditional herbal medicines and sings ballads that can be traced back to 17th century England.

"A lot of these are Indian remedies," says Mrs. Rogers, walking through a garden that contains 100 varieties of plants, including pennyroyal for colds, boneset for broken bones, and peppermint for colic. She learned herbal medicine from her grandfather, one of the first white settlers in Macon County.

SHE ALSO HAS several routes through the wooded mountain in back of her house to collect other remedies, such as white pine tips for arthritis, which she maintains are much better than modern medicine.

"Oh, Lordy, yeah," she smiles. "They don't cost you as much. Never hardly a doctor come to our house unless we were real sick."

Aided by Barbara Reimensnyder, director of the Macon County school folklife program, Mrs. Rogers is writing a book on herbal medicine and taping some of the ballads and hymns she learned as a child.

"I want to think the program I'm involved in is more a real representation of mountain culture than the Campbell school," Ms. Reimensnyder said.

She said the program, funded with a $28,500 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, seeks to show children that their own heritage — Appalachian white, black or Indian — is a valuable alternative to modern urban life. It is one of three such programs in the country. The others are in Trumbull County, Ohio, and Jacksonville, Fla.

Ms. Reimensnyder is from Pennsylvania but has lived in Macon County for five years. "I think they've accepted me — as far as they accept anyone who hasn't lived here 200 years."

SHE ISN'T CONCERNED that the traditional ways may die out.

"I think they will change to accommodate the needs of the next generation. People need tradition to connect their past and their future, to show that they are members of a group.

Outside interests — and dollars — have helped maintain many traditional crafts, such as carving and quilting. But many mountain children grow up thinking mountain crafts are limited to the made-in-Taiwan moccasins and other souvenirs sold to tourists, Ms. Reimensnyder says.

Her program's music festivals and classroom demonstrations by wood-carvers and storytellers are designed to counter that.

"Kids growing up here have a real weird image of what they want to be, what it means to come from Appalachia, the image on TV," she says. "But in this program in the schools, you hear some kids say, 'Hey, my mother did that.' They didn't think it was that important because their ma did it. They didn't realize how hard it was."

Folklorists disagree on whether books, tapes and other media can really pass down folklore, which by its very definition is passed on by word of mouth and example.

But radio and the recording industry, while they erased many regional differences among folk musicians, probably helped folk music thrive by enlarging its audience, says George Holt, director of the folklife section of the North Carolina Arts Council.

IN OCTOBER, THE arts council sponsored a reunion of the WBT Briarhoppers, an early radio show from Charlotte that popularized what was to evolve into country music. That evolution coincided with the movement of thousands of rural people into the textile mill towns of the Piedmont.

"Folklore is enormously resilient, though the form and vehicles for it might change," says Dan Patterson, who teaches a graduate course in folklore at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "Under the current economic policies, we're seeing a number of people fall into poverty, which is one of the mothers of folklore."

The closing of textile plants across the region is disrupting lives, but it is also generating stories and songs, Patterson says.

"We'd expect Afro-American and Anglo-Americans to generate new religious groups in response to economic pressures," he said. "I don't want to reduce religion to economics, but it is one of the helps in times of great distress. We're going to see more reportorial songs, tales, sermons and rituals."

Unicorn Hunters track 'nullities'

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — From Chicago Mayor Harold Washington's "nullities and voidities" to the space between the state and zip code in an address, nothing is safe from the banishing eye of the Unicorn Hunters.

The Lake Superior State College group, which has banished phrases such as "have a nice day," is accepting nominations until Dec. 15 for its "1986 New Year's Dishonor List of Words Banished from the English Language for Mis-, Mal- and Over-Use and General Uselessness."

Denise M. Brummerl of Hammond, Ind., suggested banishing Washington's "own language, including 'nullities and voidities.'"

David Colwell of Washington, D.C., has nominated "or what," as in, "Banishing words! Is that a great idea, or what?"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, November 17, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: There is a painless way to resolve a difficult situation. Reach out in a positive way and let bygones be bygones. Financial progress depends on your exercising greater self-discipline. Invest only in sure things; long shots will not pay off. A loved one comes to you with an intriguing suggestion. Give it serious consideration. New alliances promise to be very profitable. Do not mistake infatuation for true love. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: director Martin Scorsese, Chicago White Sox all-star pitcher Tom Seaver, Olympic athlete Bob Mathias, folk singer Gordon Lightfoot, acting coach Lee Strasberg.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An old relationship is reactivated. Romance could result. Go ahead and reveal your true feelings. Being a free spirit is very important to you now. Catch up on your letter-writing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A heated domestic argument could mar an otherwise delightful day. Curb your temper. Conflicting obligations are part of the picture. Look for a positive solution to a recurring problem.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Acting on the spur of the moment could disrupt certain family plans. You will need all of your powers of persuasion to convince loved one. Play a waiting game in romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Losing your temper could put a damper on romance. Try to compromise. Revising the family budget will reduce anxiety over financial responsibilities. Save money for investment purposes or a major purchase.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be more selective when it comes to romance. You are inclined to let your emotions overrule your common sense. A busy week lies ahead. Take care of household chores today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Watch what you say today. Loved one could be in a highly sensitive mood. A small child reveals something you might not want to know. Do not disappoint someone who depends on you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Avoid going to extremes. Postpone a social encounter if not in a good mood. Romantic partner may be playing games. Lend a sympathetic ear to an exasperated friend or neighbor..

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Spending the day with loved one soothes your jangled nerves. Avoid talking shop at social gatherings. A family member's insightful observations spare you an embarrassing moment. Mail an important letter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A phone call could cause an abrupt but beneficial change of plans. Your enthusiasm convinces others. A dream could come true if you are willing to follow someone's advice. Listen closely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A romance could prove fleeting. Curb spending. Your intuition is right on target where a new business venture is concerned. Start to work right away. A recent alliance brings many benefits.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your plans are subject to change today. Think before you act. Impulsive commitments are not in your best interest. Postpone a romantic encounter. A book or TV program provides new insights.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Member of opposite sex shows new interest in you. Do not be offended by a loved one's criticism. He/she really does have your best interests at heart. Beware of deception in romance.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

If you need a good helper, try advertising in our classifieds. Who knows? You may spark the beginning of something big!

Journalist from 'The Killing Fields:' Journalism not about show business

Schanberg

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Autograph seekers hound actor Sam Waterston, star of "The Killing Fields," but they usually don't recognize Sydney Schanberg, the journalist whose experience in Cambodia provided the material for the hit movie.

"And that's the way it should be," Schanberg said Thursday. "Journalism is not about show business and celebrities."

Schanberg won a Pulitzer Prize for his reporting in Cambodia from 1972 to 1975 as a correspondent for The New York Times. The movie chronicles his relationship with Dith Pran, his Cambodian photographer and assistant.

"What I did in Cambodia was find out what was happening to the people. I found out how they were being used," Schanberg said during a speech at Northwestern University.

Schanberg, 51, who resigned from the Times in September after his column was discontinued, said the movie was an accurate but sanitized version of the atrocities that occurred in the Southeast Asian country.

Pran, who was captured by the communists in 1975, was reunited with Schanberg in 1979 and now works as a photographer for the Times.

TOKYO (AP) - When New York Mayor Edward I. Koch arrived in Japan Friday, more than a welcoming bow from Tokyo Governor Shunichi Suzuki awaited him.

Tokyo's city officials have declared Nov. 17-23 "New York Week," and packed it with festivities — from video shows by New York artists to gourmet galas — to toast 25 years of official "sisterhood" between two of the biggest cities in the world.

Koch's 10-day trip follows Suzuki's visit to New York last June for "Tokyo Week."

During his stay, the mayor is scheduled to take a Sunday stroll down Ginza, the shopping street often compared to Fifth Avenue, and an official 30-minute subway ride. He will make several speeches.

After earning Honorary Citizenship in Tokyo, Koch plans to leave Nov. 20 for the Hiroshima Peace Park, Himeji Castle, and the ancient capital of Kyoto before returning home Nov. 23.

Newman

TORRINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Actor Paul Newman will establish a foundation that will raise $6 million for construction and operation of a summer camp for terminally ill children, according to a business associate.

Torrington YMCA officials announced Wednesday that the camp will be constructed on 100 acres of YMCA property here, but they had declined to identify the philanthropist behind the project.

That person is Newman, Ursula Hotchner, an executive with Newman's food companies, said today.

She said Newman will contribute at least $1 million to get the project started. She said the camp will be called "Newman's Own Hole in the Wall." His food company, which contributes all profits to charities, is known as Newman's Own.

YMCA officials said the camp would serve between 100 to 175 children from New England. It will include resident cabins, an infirmary, a beach, a dining hall and a riding stable.

Newman lives about 50 miles south of Torrington in Westport.

NEW YORK (AP) — Composer Aaron Copland, who celebrated America's heritage in symphony and song, turned 85 with the grace that has marked his life and music and accepted a tribute of a special performance of his works by the New York Philharmonic.

The orchestra played his stirring "Fanfare for the Common Man" Thursday night plus some of the more neglected pieces the composer had said he'd like to hear.

The only non-Copland music was a rousing "Happy Birthday," with the Avery Fisher Hall audience singing along with the orchestra. "You sang beautifully," said Copland.

Although he has not produced a new work in some time, Copland remains one of the nation's best known classical composers. His musical Americana, from "Appalachian Spring" to "Lincoln Portrait" to "Rodeo," has taken him from east to west and on to Hollywood, where he composed the scores for such films as "Of Mice and Men" and "Our Town."

Leonard Bernstein, who conducted "Fanfare," said "Aaron Copland makes Americans feel American, whoever we are, whatever our roots are."

Cronkite

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Sailboats, electronic gadgets and a "soft spot for animals" are part of the off-camera life of the "model and master" of journalism, Walter Cronkite, his colleagues say.

Cronkite, 69, a veteran CBS newsman, was sketched in a caricature of good humor, both with words and on paper, Thursday night during a "roast" at the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, national convention.

Syndicated columnist Andy Rooney, who appears on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes," said Cronkite enjoys "salt spray in his face and the slap of the waves against the boat."

And gadgets, particularly for his boat, fascinate Cronkite, according to his colleagues.

Editorial cartoonist Bill Mauldin drew chuckles from the audience as he sketched Cronkite on an overhead projector.

The man who America watched on television for more than 30 years is "like a nice uncle," Mauldin said, and "easier to draw than most presidents."

Sharing a few jokes on himself, Cronkite said he has a "soft spot for animals" and has been known to "have carried an ant out of the house rather than step on him."

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Fairness in Media, a conservative group that accuses CBS News of having a liberal bias, is proposing changes in CBS bylaws that would make a takeover easier, an attorney for the group says.

"These amendments would make it much more difficult for the incumbent board of CBS to take any defensive action that would make a takeover more difficult," attorney Jim Cain said Friday.

The group, whose efforts to get conservatives to buy the network's stock began with a January fund-raising letter from Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has not decided whether to renew its own takeover attempt.

But, Cain said, the network's stockholders "are Dan Rather's boss and we'd like to see them be able to exercise their prerogatives as 'the boss.'"

Christian, Moselm from Lebanon best friends, roommates at TCU

FORT WORTH (AP) — Although civil war is creating a fatal tension between Moslems and Christians in Lebanon, it hasn't affected the relationship of two Lebanese students who share the same room in one of Texas Christian University's residence halls.

"It's not a religious war," said Hani Mansour, a native of the Christian village of Monsif, 35 miles north of Beirut.

"My friend and roommate Karim is Moslem, and I am Christian," Mansour said. So if the fighting back home is based on religion, then "how are we living together?" Mansour wondered.

Karim Naamani, a citizen of West Beirut, was 8 years old when war escalated. Both Naamani and Mansour have spent the majority of their lives surrounded by bloodshed.

"Life in Lebanon is horrible," said Naamani. "One cannot plan anything because you never know what will happen in an hour or even in a minute.

"It is extremely dangerous to leave your home after 7 in the evening for fear of shelling or car bombs," said Naamani.

According to Mansour, freedom and safety were hard to adapt to in the United States.

"I was 7 years old when the war started. All of my life has centered around war, fighting, surviving and killing," said Mansour. "Peace has been a great obstacle to overcome because it has been so long that I had forgotten what peace really felt like."

Naamani

Mansour

Because of the deteriorating situation in Lebanon, Mansour and Naamani came to the United States and, subsequently, to TCU.

"It was useless to stay and try to study in Lebanon with all the fighting and also the standard of education was going down," said Naamani.

"I like the freedom to go out at night without being shot at or scared," said Mansour. "I want to be able to sleep in my bed and not have to be awakened to bomb explosions, then spend the rest of the night in a shelter.

"The worst part of it all is having to collect yourself together to go to school the next morning," he said.

Mansour said that much of the credit for his quick adjustment to TCU goes to residents in Brachman Hall.

"I really thank everyone in Brachman for making me feel at home," Mansour said. "We are a huge family that reminds me of home and my friends."

Watching the evening news has proven to be a trying ordeal, according to both men.

"It scares me whenever I hear bad news from home," said Naamani. "I must try to isolate myself from my family and home in order to live a normal life here."

"Everytime I sit down and watch the news I worry," said Mansour. "How's my family?...Where was the bomb?...Who died?"

"Up until now, luck has played a big role because no one has been killed," said Mansour. "My parents call after every bombing."

Both Mansour and Naamani wonder how long their luck will last.

"What will I do if it does happen?" Mansour asked. "What can I do except cry and pray that the war stops and nobody else dies."

Naamani feels the same emotional strain and fear.

"It always feels bad to see them suffer that much," said Naamani. "I don't think anybody has ever suffered as much for so long as the Lebanese people have over the last 11 years."

According to Mansour, the Lebanese people have no control over the war that has plagued them for 11 years.

Guild members weave tall tales

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Eyes sparkling in the jack-o'-lantern's glow, his face contorts and his voice trembles with anguish like that the mother must have felt as she knelt over her daughter's corpse.

"Only 16 years old, never married, and she's dead," Finley Stewart wails. "It just isn't fair. She can't be dead!"

He glances at the fellow storytellers gathered around him and notes with satisfaction that their attention is wrapped around every word of "The Calico Coffin."

The story was Stewart's contribution to a night of ghostly tales, and it was all part of a Texas Storytellers Guild attempt to revive the almost-lost art of storytelling.

Tale-telling is already on the rise along the Eastern seaboard and some Southern states, where some storytellers are so particular about their art that they will only record — never write — their tales, says Dr. Ted Colson, a North Texas State University professor who founded TSG last month.

"People here just don't think that much about storytelling in this age of media saturation," Colson said. "But of all places, Texas, with its rich history, should be a place where storytelling thrives."

Nearly 25 people, some of them professional tale weavers, have signed on with the Texas Storytellers Guild, and Colson hopes to garner interest in the art form from residents across the state.

Most of the town's residents don't want new phone service

DEWATTO, Wash. (AP) — In a place that's a little like the edge of the world and a lot like the middle of nowhere, nobody ever worried about hang-ups, busy signals or "number, please."

Nobody ever had a telephone. It was one of the last places without service, so they couldn't have had one even if they had wanted to, which they didn't. And most still don't, even though they'll be able to soon.

"Every time we've had a phone, it always rings when you're outside, and you just about break your neck to get in and answer it, and then they hang up on you," said Wayne Jackson, who lives here on the Kitsap Pennisula about 80 miles west of Seattle with his wife, daughter, son-in-law and two grandchildren.

Others in his family want a phone, but you could say Jackson has expressed the sentiments of the majority in town, if there were a town, which there isn't.

Actually, what folks seem to want most in Dewatto is plenty of nothing, and that's just what they've got. No crowds, no noise, no pollution. No store, no post office, no electricity except the generator kind. And no phones.

Most of the people who stumble across this swatch of Washington wilderness are either lost or about to be. They wander around for a while, tumble into ditches with surprising-ly regularity and bang on the modest doors of the several dozen residents in search of a phone.

Of course, they've never found one. And even after Inland Telephone Co. of Roslyn finishes laying the cable — which could be next month or next year, depending on who you talk to — a phone could still be a pretty scarce commodity.

For the last 18 years at Yamaha Park mobile home court, Lester and Chris Phalen have done just fine without one, thank you very much.

"We got away from phones when we left Bremerton," said Phalen, a retiree. "We had a business there, and phones were a pain in the neck."

He thinks maybe they'll install a pay phone outside. They can direct wayward travelers there, and they won't get stuck with the bill, which could be considerable. Any place anybody would want to call is bound to be long distance from here.

"I guess we'll probably have to keep change," he said. But at least they won't have to keep driving the 13 miles to Tehuyeh, which has phones and is one of the places Dewatto residents drop off lost people so they can call for help.

Phalen's friend, Don Huson, a lifelong Tehuyeh resident, owns a Christmas tree farm. Every December, tree rustlers steal his pines, as many as 100 at a time, and he allows as how a phone might be useful for summoning the sheriff.

He and Phalen agree, however, that while the phone would be faster than the radio they use now, the law wouldn't necessarily arrive any sooner. It generally takes the sheriff three days, which is to be expected because the officers hardly ever know where they're going.

"We sit out there with the trees, night after night. We catch a lot of them (the thieves). But you can't get a sheriff out here to arrest them," Huson said. "With a phone, at least you could bend their ear."

As he talks, Doug Weiss and his crew are laying phone cable further down the road. Weiss, whose father owns Inland, expects the job to be complete in a month, provided the weather isn't too bad, which it always is this time of year.

"Some want phones, and some don't," he said.

Some still don't. Jackson's son-in-law, A.J. Foote, who was born and raised in Southern California but doesn't like crowds, said the first notice they got said phone service would begin in three months, and that was 11 months ago. The last notice said the fall of 1986.

So they're not holding their breath. But when it's available, they'll pay the initial $300 construction fee and $20-a-month charge to get service, because he and his wife need it for work, and what if the kids got sick?

The main street of Leh, in Northern India, is lined with pedestrians and vendors. The city has seen its water, resources, and traditions used and abused by tourists attracted to the region, a combination of desert and arctic climes named by National Geographic magazine as "the last Shangri-la."

Crowding Shangri-la

Travelers seek peace, find tourists

By RONE TEMPEST
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LEH, India — The tolerance of the people in this mountain town is nearly inexhaustible, but last summer it finally ran out. The water supply had been all but used up by the tourist hotels, guest houses and restaurants.

Until about 10 years ago, there were no such places here. But now they proliferate — the Yak-Tail, the Moonland, the New Gaytime and the Dreamland, to name a few — and because their guests had taken virtually all the water, the local residents were now forced to wait hours in line for a bucketful.

Further, many of the small shops in the 600-year-old bazaar had been taken over by pushy trinket salesmen from distant Kashmir. And the Kashmiris, most of them Moslems, had taken to dressing in the traditional Buddhist costume of this region — the silk top hat, or gonda, and burgundy wool robes tied with a sash.

Even worse, the shopkeepers began selling replicas of sacred Buddhist cloth paintings, or thankas.

"They were taking them from under chairs where they were sitting and selling them," according to the head Buddhist lama of Ladakh, the venerable Kushok Bakula.

It was all more than anyone here could take. Young lamas studying in the cliffside monasteries high above the town interrupted their meditations and filed down to the streets.

THEY REMOVED the Buddhist religious items from the shops and, for a time at least, the ancient town became what it had been: yak butter and tea shops, bitter barley beer called chhang, old women squatting at the edge of the street in their gondas and shoes with long curving toes, selling potatoes and milk from the dzomo, a creature that is half cow and half yak, and is found only here and in difficult crossword puzzles.

In 1977, the year before the Leh airport was opened to Indian Airlines tourist flights, National Geographic reporters made their way to this remote place at the northern tip of India, near the border with Tibet, and they called it "the last Shangri-la."

Many years before, more intrepid visitors had another name for Leh and the jagged, treeless peaks of the surrounding region, almost all of which is more than two miles above sea level, a rare combination of desert and arctic climes. They called it "Moonland."

To the present-day visitor, the name reflects both the outer-space terrain and the cosmic quality of the native Buddhist life. It is a place of bells and drums and long horns that are used to call the faithful to prayer.

Transfixed priests, oblivious to others, will walk past chanting the sacred mantra: Om mani padme hum (hail to the jewel in the lotus). The valleys are scarred with mani walls built of stones inscribed with the mantra and chhorten, Buddhist monuments shaped like chess pawns.

The Western visitor gasps for air and suffers splitting headaches because of the thin air at this altitude (about 11,500 feet), but Ladakhis scramble nimbly up the steep slopes.

MORE THAN 100 years ago a small group of Moravian Christian missionaries came here from Europe, and several stayed and opened schools, which are still here. But through the years the Moravians have managed to convert only a few dozen of the people.

Now even the missionaries complain about the tourists, more than 12,000 of whom came to this town of 15,000 people last year seeking the tranquility of the Buddhist gompa monasteries and their exquisite works of art.

"I've warned them that we can't have many more tourists up here," Gertrude Wright, a teacher at the Moravian school, told a visitor. "We have so few gompas anyway. Last year, we had so many tourists it was just like Rome. Many of them wanted to sit and quietly watch the lamas. They said all they could see were other tourists."

With the exception of the crisis over the Kashmiri merchants last summer, most Ladkhis are calm about the radical change in their life here. The only leader with serious objections to the invasion of the tourists is the Lama Lobzang.

"I am dead against opening Ladakh for tourists," he said.

Pick a car. Any car.

Now you can be picky about the kind of car company you keep. Because we've got a full hand of Civic, Accord and Prelude automobiles.

To Honda, the game has always meant innovation in engineering.

The payoff? Reliability, economy and performance. Maybe that's why Honda has the highest owner loyalty of any leading import car.*
