Protesters attack Bush motorcade

George Bush

KREFELD, West Germany (AP) — Hundreds of masked youths screaming anti-U.S. slogans battled riot police and hurled rocks, bottles and paint-filled balloons at Vice President George Bush's motorcade Saturday during celebrations saluting German-American friendship.

"Bush go home!," the rioters screamed. They dented his black Mercedes limousine, damaged three squad cars, smashed windows of a bus carrying guests to a luncheon for Bush and splattered black paint on several cars.

Authorities reported about 100 people injured and more than 150 arrested in the two cities Bush visited. Two policemen were hospitalized. None of the motorcade travelers was injured.

Security was especially tight during the eight-hour visit because an unexploded bomb was discovered Friday outside an American firm in Dusseldorf, where Bush's jet landed and departed.

The biggest demonstration — involving more than 20,000 anti-nuclear protesters in Krefeld's marketplace — was "completely peaceful," Police Chief Ulrich Nordbeck told a news conference.

The violence erupted when about 1,000 protesters — many wearing black leather clothes, black masks and helmets, the garb of West Germany's anarchist movement — lobbed gasoline bombs at police, who routed the rioters with clubs.

About 200-300 youths wearing similar gear later surged toward Bush's motorcade, ringed by police. The protesters hurled pavement stones, bottles, balloons filled with black paint and even rose bushes yanked from gardens.

The police chief said the motorcade was attacked after taking a detour because the original route was jammed with protesters.

Bush shrugged off the demonstrations.

"They are entitled to do this," he said at his next stop to open a museum 30 miles northeast in Bottrop, where another 2,000 protesters gathered.

"They couldn't do that in Red Square in Moscow," he said. "It makes me feel good."

Police detained 21 Bottrop protesters after about 100 tried to advance on the museum housing works by German painter Josez Albers, who emigrated to the United States 50 years ago. No injuries were reported.

Bush then flew by helicopter to Dusseldorf and flew aboard Air Force Two to Norway, the fourth stop of his two-week, eight-nation European tour. He arrived in the west Norwegian town Bergen late Saturday.

In the main ceremony of the day, before a select audience of several hundred Germans and Americans in Krefeld, Bush and Chancellor Helmut Kohl stressed what they called the need for a strong NATO alliance.

City Council to consider 1984 budget

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

After years of picking and choosing from a horn of plenty in piecing together a budget, Midland City Council will be digging deep for any extra fruit to sweeten an austere plan for 1983-84.

The council begins its work session on next fiscal year's budget at 9 a.m. Monday in City Hall Council Chambers.

Preliminary budgets submitted by each department show no increase over last year's record $49 million. While capital expense items have been kept to a minimum, the budget also reflects no plans for raising city employee salaries. And the council also may have to grapple with raising the tax rate to cover a shortfall between revenues and expenditures.

Deputy City Manager Fred Poe said the proposed General Fund budget at $29.6 million runs below the current year's $29.8 million. However, it still is slightly more than the $27.9 million the city should wind up with by the end of this year.

THE PROPOSED BUDGET indicates a halt to past years' ballooning figures when Midland was in a boom. In 1980-81, the budget totaled $27.7 million; in 1981-82 it was $34.7 million; and for 1982-83 it was $49 million.

The city's budget consists of three divisions: general fund, airport, water and sewer. The latter two are self-sustaining with user fees being raised to cover expenditures. Money for the General Fund comes from sales tax rebates and ad valorem taxes. The three divisions' budgets should total $48 million this year, said Poe. This runs about the same as 1983's budget which was approved last September at $49 million.

"All departments have been cooperative about holding down their budgets," said Poe. "This will be a maintenance budget, to maintain services at their current levels. Now is not the time to increase services with our current economic situation."

If the economy turns upward, the council can add items into the budget, such as $800,000 for street repaving that was slashed out of this year's budget, he said. This amount was eliminated from the 1983 budget after more than a $1 million loss in sales tax rebates showed up in March. By June, the revenues were down by at least $3 million.

EVEN WITH THE "conservative" budgets submitted by the departments, Poe noted there is a difference between income and expenditures. With the preliminary figures calling for $29.6 million to be spent, the city is expecting to receive $28.5-$29 million in revenues.

"We'll be short on income," Poe said, pointing out the council has options for making up that difference — raising taxes, dipping into the unappropriated surplus or hiking user fees.

Astronauts won't be undergoing intense debriefing

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Space shuttle Challenger suffered damage to its brakes and protective tiles, officials said Saturday, but its flight was so uneventful that the astronauts will get the shortest debriefing in the history of U.S. manned spaceflight.

Flight commander Robert Crippen and his four crewmembers, including Sally Ride, America's first woman in space, face only 4½ days of questioning and review by experts, in contrast to almost three weeks for the crews of previous space missions.

"There are fewer engineering and test questions than before," said Terry White, an information specialist for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "It's becoming routine."

The abbreviated briefing schedule enabled the astronauts to enjoy a rare weekend off, resting and sleeping to help reset sleep cycles that were turned upside down for the mission.

Crippen, Ms. Ride and their crewmates, John Fabian, Frederick Hauck and Norman Thagard, landed the space shuttle Challenger on a dry lake bed runway at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., early Friday after twice being waved off from landing at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

Dense, low-hanging clouds blocked what was to have been the shuttle's first landing at the Florida spaceport where it is launched. It was the only major disappointment of a near-flawless six days in orbit.

At Edwards, Jim Harrington, a NASA official in charge of processing the shuttle on the ground, said Challenger suffered greater-than-expect damage to tiles that cover the hull. He said there were about 25 tiles with "pretty severe damage" and the number could increase with a closer inspection.

He also said one of four brake systems on the craft shattered during the rollout after landing. Pieces of the brakes fell off when technicians tried to tow the craft to a hangar. The broken brake system was removed for analysis. Normally, said Harrington, the brakes should last five landings. Flight seven was the second for Challenger.

Technicians were preparing the craft for a piggyback trip to Florida atop a modified Boeing 747. Officials hope to have it ready to leave by Thursday. It is scheduled to make the cross-country trip in one day, stopping in San Antoniobriefly to refuel.

NASA officials said the unexpected California landing may delay by eight days the launch of shuttle flight eight, now set for mid-August, but a rapid turnaround could restore some of the lost days. Harrington said he was uncertain if the tile and brake damage would add to the delay.

Lt. Gen. James Abrahamson, director of the space shuttle program, said the disappointment in having to land in California instead of Florida will not set back the shuttle program "significantly."

He noted the next attempt to land in Florida will most likely not come until flight 11, now set for January. Flight eight and flight nine are both scheduled to land at Edwards. Flight eight is a night launch and a night landing. Flight 10 has been delayed until later in 1984.

As scheduled, Flight 10 involved a Defense Department mission. Two weeks ago, Col. Jeff Baker, spokesman for the U.S. Air Force Space Division, said the Air Force had asked NASA to delete the satellite payload from that flight and reschedule it, but he declined to say why on grounds of national security.

Turning Kennedy into both a launch and landing site will cut the time needed to to prepare the spacecraft for its next mission. A quick turnaround is essential as the shuttle pace increases to about two launches a month late in this decade to meet the demand for commercial and military missions.

Crippen, Ms. Ride, Fabian, Hauck and Thagard returned from space with an impressive list of accomplishments.

They smoothly launched two commercial satellites, placing them to within 0.015 degrees of the planned orbit — the most accurate satellite delivery yet.

Special Olympian dies from fall

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A Special Olympics contestant trying to descend from his eighth-floor dormitory room on a rope fashioned from sheets and towels died Saturday when the rope snapped, officials said.

Glenn Stewart, 25, fell to a patio outside Cheney Hall and was pronounced dead before dawn at a campus hospital a short time later, Special Olympics spokesman Hank Rieger said.

A nursing supervisor heard the fall about 4:30 a.m., ran into the room and called authorities. Stewart's roommate slept through the incident, and no one knew why he had tried to leave his room, Rieger said.

About 1,500 contestants from around the state are at the University of California's Berkeley campus for the two-day competition for the mentally retarded, Rieger said. Stewart was a member of a slow-pitch softball team fielded by Camarillo State Hospital, where he was a patient.

Rieger said it was the first time in 14 years of Special Olympic competitions in California there had been a "serious incident."

Stripped of military power, Arafat's options are political

An Analysis

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat, evicted from Syria and forced to abandon his fighters in Lebanon, has been stripped of his military power and ability to strike at Israel.

After 14 years as head of the guerrilla organization, Arafat now finds events rapidly moving beyond his control. His only options are political.

Arafat, 53, always carries a pistol and frequently wears an olive drab uniform — symbols of "armed struggle" against Israel but also of the military power he used to keep himself independent of other Arab states and their supporters in the PLO.

But he no longer is able to use the military power of his Fatah guerrilla faction and its dominance of the PLO's financial resources to stop a rebellion by radical dissidents who mutineed May 7.

His ability to control 20,000 guerrillas also was an effective pressure on Saudi Arabia, and other Arab moderates with large Palestinian populations, to continue their financial support of the PLO.

From his former power bases in Lebanon and Jordan, Arafat once had the ability to strike at Israel. He had thus assured himself the option of provoking a war if he wanted.

But now his headquarters is in Tunis, Tunisia, far from the Israeli border. The last bastions of his loyalist guerrillas in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and north Lebanon's port of Tripoli are ringed by Syrian troops.

Arafat retains one strong card: official recognition by the Arab League as spokesman for the world's 4 million Palestinians. If he is unable to make war with this card he could still attempt to make peace.

Bunker Hunt and Fort Worth socialite Kat Fortson view one of the statues in the Hunt Collection on display at the Kimbell Art Museum in Fort Worth. The collection, is being shown publicly for the first time.

Hunt brothers display ancient treasures

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Two brothers from Dallas, who started out collecting matchbook covers, Indian head pennies and foreign coins, have put their latest acquisitions on display — a priceless collection of ancient art.

The exhibit, "Wealth of the Ancient World: The Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt Collections," opened Saturday at the Kimbell Art Museum.

The Hunts — sons of the late Texas oil tycoon H.L. Hunt and reputed among the wealthiest individuals in the modern world — have spent part of their fortunes on ancient art.

The Hunts' exhibit — only part of their art holdings — includes 15 painted vases, 38 small bronzes and 112 rare gold, silver and bronze coins.

They are, quite literally, priceless.

"I don't know how you value one-of-a-kind things," said Herbert Hunt, who acquired the bronzes over the past few years.

"Some people would say they don't appeal to them — and others they do appeal to. I really don't know how you put a monetary value on them," Hunt said Friday.

However, Hunt added that he has obtained a special reward from collecting things.

"I've always been a collector," he said. "I started with match covers and Indian head pennies and stamps, and that sort of thing. But this has been kind of a challenge and I really have enjoyed it. You learn a lot from collecting," Hunt said.

His brother, Bunker, went from a boyhood coin collection to a display that is believed to the only complete collection of ancient Greek decadrachms (10-drachma silver coins) in private hands.

"As a young kid, I had a coin collection — it wasn't ancient Greek or Roman — it was more foreign coins," Bunker Hunt said. "As I became familiar with the ancient coins, I decided to collect a few."

Hunt also said that he has two reasons for collecting ancient coins and vases: "I like them and I consider them also a good investment."

The collections were assembled with the help of Bruce P. McNall, owner of Numismatic Fine Arts, Beverly Hills, Calif., who also suggested the exhibit.

"Bruce McNall said a lot of people might like to see them, so I said, 'That's all right with me,'" Bunker Hunt said.

Car accident kills three near Katy

HOUSTON (AP) — Three people were killed and a fourth critically injured Friday night in a one-car accident near Katy.

The driver of the car, Houston firefighter Curtis Fly, 25, was killed when his 1979 Ford Ranger ran off the road, struck a post, returned to the road and rolled over twice, said a Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman.

Also killed were passengers Pam Slater, 17, of Katy, and Zena R. Thomas, 13, of Austin. Kimberly Mansell, 25, address unknown, was in critical condition with severe head injuries.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Legislation: 'Sunset, finely tuned, delicately balanced'

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Each legislative session seems to produce additions to the inventory of jargon and catch phrases in use around the Capitol, although grammarians and supporters of linguistic decency may wince.

For the 1983 Legislature, the two additions which appear to have entered the legislative vernacular are "finely tuned and delicately balanced," and "to sunset."

"Finely tuned and delicately balanced" became one of the more popular descriptions of legislation in the House, and basically indicates a piece of legislation which the sponsor thought should be left alone.

Sunset, back in primitive times (when junior high school teachers required students to diagram sentences), was a noun — before it was pressed into service as a verb, to describe the process by which legislators review state agencies.

Those two additions are pertinent to the special session called last week by Gov. Mark White.

One of the reasons for the session being called so quickly (less than three weeks) after the regular session concluded was to provide for continuation of the Texas Employment Commission.

The TEC was one of 32 agencies scheduled to terminate under "sunset" process, if lawmakers failed to renew it.

One lawmaker was overheard explaining that "we never intended to sunset TEC."

Perhaps part of the problem was that the bill to continue the TEC was so "finely tuned and delicately balanced" (or FTDB for brevity) that efforts by Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, to add provisions to create a section to deal with job discrimination complaints destroyed the measure's harmonics, or its equilibrium.

In any event, the measure failed to pass, resulting in considerable nervousness in the state government over what would happen to job placement and unemployment programs if the TEC was allowed to "sunset."

White issued frequent assurances and reassurances, that that wouldn't be permitted to happen.

TEC's experience with the sunset process isn't likely to add to the popularity of the sunset effort as far as other state agencies are concerned.

Frankly, the sunset process neve. had too much popularity with state agencies, although some agency heads agree the work has been helpful to a certain extent.

One of the biggest complaints during the current round of sunset review was that the Sunset Advisory Commission sometimes appeared to want to fit all agency operations into the same type of administrative structure more for purposes of uniformity than for any other reason.

"They want to look better on their flow chart," one agency official grumbled.

Others complained that although staff members of the SAC spent considerable time in review agency operations, the effort missed important matters and sometimes appeared superficial.

Generally, however, the process has received support from the agencies, and from the Legislature.

Texas' sunset effort has its genesis in concern by lawmakers over the growth of state government, and concern over keeping a tighter rein on spending.

That latter area was of particular concern during the 1983 session, since money was the principal concern from the opening gavel down to the "sine die" resolution.

In its report on the regular session efforts, the Sunset Commission notes than 32 agencies were under review, with four (including TEC) not recreated. (The three besides TEC were the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council, Texas Historical Resources Development Council and Texas Commission on Interstate Cooperation).

The commission calculates that changes made in the agencies which were reviewed will result in a net increase in revenues for the 1984-85 biennium of over $57.5 million.

A significant amount of that is due to changes in the investment authority for the State Depository Board, which administers placement of state funds in banks (and now savings and loan associations as well, if State Treasurer Ann Richards exercises her newly received authority).

Legislators created eight new agencies — including such entities as the Texas Diabetes Council and State Committee of Examiners for Speech-Language Pathology — most of which will be subject to being "sunsetted" at some future date.

New state agency, workers compensation among topics of special session of Legislature

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House finally approved and sent to the Senate Saturday a bill to create a new state agency to handle employment discrimination complaints.

House supporters said the measure was "severely crippled" but Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, said there would be an attempt to change the House version and get the issue into a 10-member conference committee.

Meanwhile, both House and Senate members were stalled over proposals to put farm workers under workers compensation insurance that many Texas employees have.

"Unless there is some agreement somewhere, we are not going to run anywhere with it," said Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, author of the House version of the farm workers bill.

The two issues remained the final controversies of the special session originally called last Wednesday by Gov. Mark White to consider brucellosis controls and continuation of the Texas Employment Commission.

The cattle disease control and TEC bills were approved Friday and sent to White for signature, then he opened the session to several other subjects.

The preliminary House vote on the bill to create a Texas Commission on Human Rights was 66-59.

Representatives at first refused to take a final vote to send it to the Senate Saturday but after a long lunch hour changed their minds and approved it 61-60.

Among the numerous House amendments made to the bill, supposedly a compromise drawn up by minority lawmakers and the Texas Association of Business, was one to limit the measure to two years, bringing it back before the 1985 Legislature.

Another amendment would give the new agency only $24,000 a year in state money for its operations.

Earlier, the House approved and sent to voters for consideration this November a proposed constitutional amendment that would let agricultural organizations make assessments on sale of their products to help promote them. The vote was 100-24.

The House also passed 102-28 and sent to the governor a bill appropriating $15 million for construction at Texas Southern University in Houston.

The House approved on voice vote and sent to the Senate a bill that would require all hotels, motels and boarding houses to maintain smoke detectors in all sleeping quarters.

Still another bill passed on voice vote and sent to the governor would appropriate $120,000 for the State Ethics Advisory Commission.

The House bill to create a Texas Commission on Human Rights would have six members appointed by the governor, including one member from industry, one from labor and four at-large members.

The bill provides that employers of more than 15 workers could not engage in employment-related discrimination on the basis of race, color, handicap, religion, sex, national origin or age. Complaints of any violations would filed with the commission, which could hold hearings and file civil action against the employer, if necessary.

Fund-raiser signals start of race

HOUSTON (AP) — The political punches in Houston's upcoming mayoral election already have begun to roll, although Mayor Kathy Whitmire has yet to announce she will seek to keep her post.

Indications at a fund-raiser Friday night, tagged "Encore Mayor Whitmire," were that the mayor will run, and that the contest will be heated and personal.

Businessman Bill Wright, a one-time backer of Ms. Whitmire, is mounting a well-financed effort to stop her bid for a second term.

At Friday night's fund-raiser for Ms. Whitmire, Jack Warren, one of the heads head of the vast Warren-King oil and gas interests and a former boss of Wright's, criticized the challenger.

"This campaign is a serious business," Warren told the crowd of nearly 600. "I know the opponent quite well because he answered to me for a few years. He's not a business person. Real tough business decisions have to be made daily in running the city.

"Kathy has been making those decisions quite well," Warren said. "If Kathy doesn't win this election, you're not going to be proud of what happens to this city."

Wright, chief executive officer of a small financial printing company, resigned as a vice president of Warren-King shortly before he announced he was running for mayor.

Wright said Warren's comments were a "personal disappointment" and a sign that the Whitmire camp will get personal in the campaign.

"The only comments I've heard from Whitmire and her supporters are personal in nature. She's failed to admit the reason I'm running is because the city is having serious difficulties," Wright said.

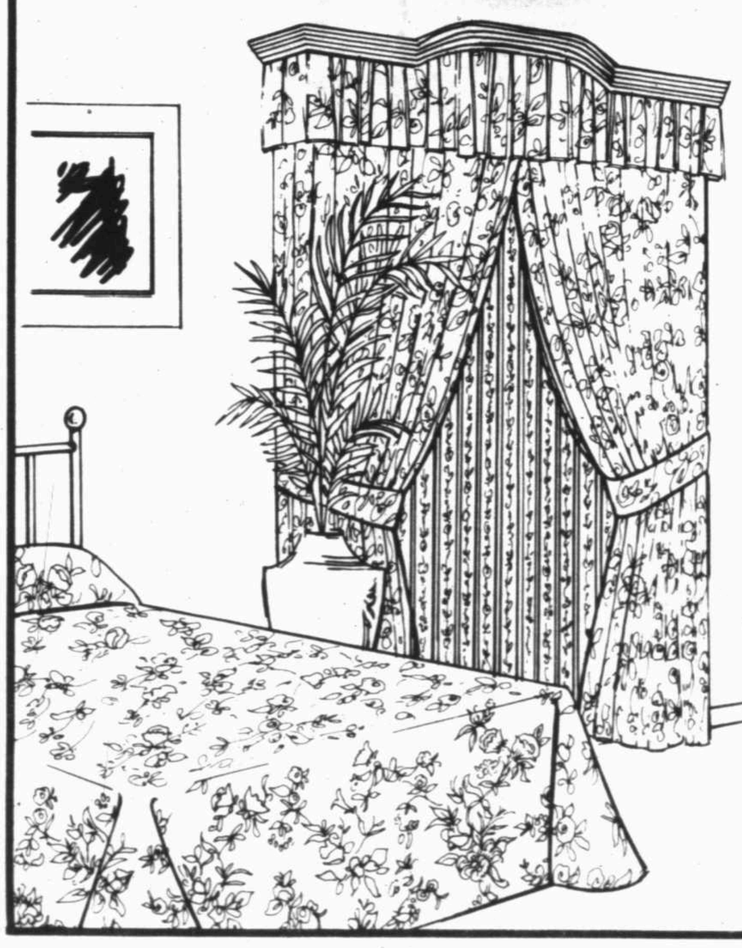

Mrs. Whitmire's speech indicated that key issues in the upcoming campaign will be the Houston Police Department, transportation and taxes.

She cited a 15 percent increase in the number of patrol officers, the implementation of a downtown beat patrol and a program of localized neighborhood police patrols as signs that the police department has improved under her supervision.

Ms. Whitmire also claimed "phenomenal improvements" have been made in the city's public transportation system, although voters earlier this month soundly defeated a proposal she backed for a $2.35 billion bond program to institute a commuter rail system.

She also reiterated her opposition to a tax increase, saying the city is in a recession.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The National Weather Service forecasts showers today for parts of Nevada, Oregon, Idaho, Kansas, ColoradoNebraska and New York. Showers are also predicted from Missouri to Florida.

Thunderstorms forecast for area

The possible thunderstorms forecast for the Midland area Saturday failed to materialize, though today is another day and another chance.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport again has forecast a 20 percent possibility of thunderstorms through tonight, as winds should be southerly at 5-15 miles per hour. The high should reach the mid-90s.

Partly cloudy conditions are expected Monday as the high again may reach the mid-90s, according to the NWS.

Saturday's high of 93 was 12 degrees off the record for the date set in 1953, while the low of 68 was nine degrees above the record set in 1958.

The rainfall total stands at 0.19 inch for June and 2.36 inches for the year.

Pontiff seemed to own Poland

Poles cheered, wept, prayed

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

KRAKOW, Poland (AP) — At one point during Pope John Paul II's triumphant return to his homeland, government spokesman Jerzy Urban snapped "After all, we didn't rent Poland to the pope."

Perhaps they didn't have to.

For eight days the pontiff seemed to own this troubled land. He was welcomed and loved by the people whose hearts he has never left.

Pope John Paul

Day after day, sometimes twice a day, John Paul played to an audience of millions jammed into sports grounds, stadiums, fields, a race track and a whole Silesian hillside where the amphitheater built for the biggest Communist Party celebrations was deemed hopelessly inadequate to handle the crowd.

The people cheered and wept and prayed.

They decorated their homes and balconies with pictures of the pope framed in Christmas lights.

Whenever the pope's helicopter took off, there was a sea of papal flags and defiant flurry of Solidarity banners, mass chanting of "Stay with us, stay with us," then boos and hisses and whistles for the police helicopters ordering the people to "disperse and go to your homes."

A joke making the rounds of the cafes in Warsaw on the first day of the papal visit told as much about the mood of the people as did the incautious laughter that always came after:

"Have you heard that Gen. (Wojciech) Jaruzelski has asked the pope for one little favor?

"He wants to join the Holy Father for a brief ride in the popemobile so that for once in his life he can go along the street and hear people cheering."

Almost every Pole you met on a bus or a train or in an ice cream parlor commented on how nervous Jaruzelski appeared during his televised formal meeting with the pope at the Belvedere Palace.

"His right cheek kept quivering as if he had a tick," said a grandmother returning by train to Warsaw after seeing the pope in Krakow. The others in the compartment nodded vehemently.

As always on a papal pilgrimage there were sights that had to be seen to be believed — like 40 nuns in row, leaning over the rail at the Wroclaw race track right at the finish line, and in the winner's circle 120 priests in lace surplices holding gold cups in their hands with the wafers for Holy Communion.

John Paul, the former Karol Wojtyla, could still bound up the stairs of those high outdoor altars and wear out the press corps with the hours he kept — "Poland is on Wojtyla time: an hour late as usual," the joke went — but it was an older, sadder, more serious pope who had come home this time.

This was not the time to grab a guitar and sing folk songs until way past midnight, as he did four years ago on the steps of the Jasna Gora monastery.

Nor was it the time for stern pastoral lectures on birth control, abortion, the dangers of alcohol and drugs. It was as if his compassion for his countrymen could not let him scold them.

The eyes were still piercing blue, the jaw firm as ever and the ruddy complexion growing a little more tanned each day as rain gave way to cloudless skies and finally, for his return to Rome on Thursday, brilliant sunshine.

But he seemed more bent over and at times he slouched wearily back in his throne, almost like one of the old bishops invariably caught napping by the Western television cameras during his homilies.

State television was sparing in its coverage of the papal itinerary and occasionally blanked out during his homilies.

Council will consider '84 budget

"We anticipate we'll have to dig into the unappropriated surplus to balance this year's budget," said Poe. "That will have a bearing on how much we can dip into next year. It's a good business practice to have a surplus to dip into for emergencies."

The unappropriated surplus at the beginning of the fiscal year on Oct. 1, 1982, was $9 million, according to Finance Director Troy Gifford. That fund shows $8.8 million now, but $1.2 million is expected to be withdrawn by the end of the year. That would leave the city with $7.6 million, Gifford said.

Expenditures for the General Fund are expected to total $27.9 million by the end of the fiscal year on Sept. 30, and revenues should amount to $26.7 million, thus the need to withdraw $1.2 million.

POE MENTIONED the city's tax base has increased in the past year, although no figures were available from the Tax Appraisal District Friday afternoon. From preliminary figures given him, Gifford estimated that keeping the same tax rate of 43 cents per $100 valuation may bring in about $1 million more. This should put the ad valorem tax revenue at $7 million for 1983-84, said Poe.

Balancing the General Fund is one matter, but the council may have to deal with working in the red for the Airport and Water and Sewer funds.

"It looks like we're half a million dollars short to take care of expected expenses in the Water and Sewer Fund," said Poe. Here the council has the choice of increasing water, sewer and garbage rates to cover the difference or to take it out of a separate surplus account. Adding to the expenditures here is the debt service for $23 million in revenue bonds sold last year for the new sewage disposal system.

The Airport Fund had been losing revenues, too, but that appears to be bottoming out, according to the deputy city manager. "Next year they should be back up to where they were at the beginning of this year. We're not going to project any increase for next year, though.

Throughout the three divisions, the only place to save money "is in salary increases and some capital items." Poe said a few additional persons are being budgeted, such as 18 firemen to staff the two new fire substations. These should be completed in 1984.

In the past two years, a 7 percent cost of living (COL) increase had been included. But Poe noted the cost of living this past year was down to 4 percent.

"Some councilmen are against a cost of living increase and think we should give only merit increases," Poe added.

DIFFERENCES IN philosophy on COL increases and how to fund the budget were expressed Friday by two on that council — Tom Sloan and Mayor G. Thane Akins.

With salaries comprising the largest part of the budget, "even small increases will have a tremendous impact" on the budget, said Akins. "The council still wants to obtain and maintain good people. Doing that depends a lot on salaries. It will be tough; we may have to go without cost of living increases."

Sloan, on the other hand, expects to see a salary increase, although no more than 3 to 4 percent.

But he does expect to see taxes raised to make up the differences. "I don't think it's going to be as drastic as everyone thinks it will be. What little overage we'll have we can handle with the unappropriated surplus. I don't think we'll have to raise taxes."

The mayor wants to see a certain level of services maintained. If this proposed budget can't do that, he sees a tax rate or a cut in services.

And the two disagreed over how long the budget work session will last. Sloan predicted one day; Akins three.

"In the past, our revenues outstripped us," said the mayor. "It's not that way this year. Because of the nature of this budget, we may have to spend more time."

Arafat's only options seem to be political

One option for Arafat may be returning to Jordan and perhaps signing an agreement with King Hussein to negotiate an end to the Arab-Israeli conflict on the basis of President Reagan's peace plan.

Arafat was forced by Syrian and Libyan-backed guerrillas to abandon that dialogue with Hussein last April because Reagan's plan does not call for an independent Palestinian state or specify a role for the PLO.

A stronger move by Arafat would be reconciling with President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt, the most populous Arab nation and the only one to recognize Israel. Such reconciliation would inevitably mean accepting peace with the Jewish state.

But either of those options would crack the Arab world with more devastating effect than the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peacemaking with Israel.

Syrian President Hafez Assad, who declared Arafat persona non grata Friday, may challenge Arafat's legitimacy and move to create an "alternative PLO" compsed of extremists financed by him and Libya leader Col. Moammar Khadafy.

It could also result in a new wave of terrorism by extremists vying to take Arafat's place.

To counter such a move by Syria and the radicals, Arafat may decide to underscore his legitimacy by forming a government in exile.

Arafat's ouster from Syria and his loss of control over the guerrillas in Lebanon will likely mean that Syria alone will determine the withdrawal of foreign forces from the country.

Arafat loyalists suggest Syria is prepared to negotiate a pullout of its 50,000 troops from Lebanon with the United States and Lebanese President Amin Gemayel's government. But they say Syria may insist that the guerrillas remain in the country, perhaps occupying a "security zone" on the Syrian border much the way Israeli-backed militia leader Maj. Saad Haddad would do in south Lebanon under the accord arranged with Israel.

Syria is described by Arafat supporters as fearful of a withdrawal that would concentrate Palestinian fighters in Syria, where they could usurp state authority as they once did in Lebanon and Jordan.

The Soviet Union, which attempted to mediate a solution to the crisis, appears to have suffered from the Arafat-Assad break. Instead of a diplomatic triumph that would prove the value of Moscow's influence, the opposite appeared true — that the Soviet Union was unable to control events despite a heavy military and political investment in Syria.

To rescue its credibility, the Soviet Union may now join with worried Arab moderates to mediate a reconciliation between Arafat and Assad before their feud becomes uncontrollable.

But to make up with Assad, Arafat would have to swallow pride and accept the public humiliation in which he was forced to leave Syria at gunpoint. The result would still mean a loss of independence.

Police investigate shooting

Police Roundup

A shooting and a stabbing were investigated by Midland law enforcement officers Saturday.

The shooting of Earl Booker Jr. was investigated by police at his residence, 406 S. Carver, at 12:33 p.m.

Details were skimpy at presstime, but a police log indicated Booker claimed to have been shot by another man. The victim was not admitted to Midland Memorial Hospital.

Summoned at 9 p.m. by neighbors who first assumed a wreck had occurred, officers discovered a stabbing victim inside a car stalled in the intersection of Texas and North H Street.

The man, whose name was not available, told investigators he had sustained the knife wound to the side at Las Palmas, 1140 S. County Rd.

He was taken by ambulance to MMH. No condition report was available late Saturday.

In other crime activity, burglars who had an apparent craving for cigarettes and wine may be satiated by now.

They stole 12 cartons of Marlboro cigarettes, eight bottles of wine and, just for looking, two folding opera glasses from the Colonial Food Store, 5408 Thomason Drive, sometime early Saturday morning, George Jones, store manager, told Midland police.

Police reported entry to the west-side store was gained through a broken southwest window.

In addition to the cigarettes, wine and glasses, burglars took two multi-purpose lights, two Zippo lighters, three Timex watches and 30 to 40 sheath knives.

Jones affixed value of the stolen merchandize at $890.13.

Rioters attack Bush's motorcade in Germany

A blackout pitched the windowless hall into darkness for about five minutes. The cause was under investigation, but authorities did not rule out the possibility of sabotage.

Outside, demonstrators shouted slogans such as "Chase the Yankees out and shatter NATO!" and "USA, SS, SA," coupling America with Hitler's notorious SA Nazi stormtroopers and SS special police.

Bush did not directly refer to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization plan to deploy 572 U.S.-built nuclear missiles this year in West Germany, Britain, Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands.

The plan has sparked widespread protests in West Germany, where the bulk of Pershing 2 and cruise missiles are to be deployed if there is no progress in U.S.-Soviet arms talks in Geneva, Switzerland.

Kohl indicated that West Germany is determined to carry out the NATO plan despite widespread popular opposition.

"We take no joy in armament. We take no joy in more missiles. We want to create peace with fewer weapons," Kohl said. But, he said, "we will do our part."

Bush used the occasion to attack Soviet policy.

He said he believed NATO must remain strong to preserve the democracy the German emigrants from Krefeld crossed the Atlantic to find in Germantown, Pa. The Philadelphia suburb was founded 300 years ago.

"Our histories are both utterly intertwined...Our values — peace, freedom, the dignity of the individual — are the same," Bush said.

"Yet we must remember that our peace and prosperity are ceaselessly threatened by hostile ideologies and states. The main such threat to our democracies continues to come, as you know, from the Soviet Union.

"The Soviet system by contrast possesses no workable means for reform, seeks to impose on all its people a single, rigid will, and has in recent years overrun and occupied Afghanistan, rained poisonous chemicals on the innocent peoples of both Afghanistan and southeast Asia and battered down attempts to assert the rudiments of human rights in East Germany, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Poland."

Krefeld Mayor Dieter Puetzhofen apologized to Bush for the violent protests, assuring him that "the troublemakers didn't come from Krefeld. The city of Krefeld regrets the incident."

Permian Brine Sales applies for permit to produce brine

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Permian Brine Sales, Inc., Odessa, has applied to the Texas Water Commission for a permit to authorize production of 10-pound brine from a brine well on a 10-acre tract in Reeves County.

The Coyanosa Brine Station is located three miles north of Coyanosa and six miles west-northwest of the intersection of SH 1450 and FM 1776.

Production facilities include a brine injection production well, two freshwater/monitor wells and related surface facilities.

Production is to be from the Salado Salt Formation at 1,644 to 2,495 feet, with injection pressure on the brine well not to exceed 765 psig.

No surface discharge is authorized.

No public hearing is planned on the application, unless one is requested by an affected party.

Bill passed for smoke detectors

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature on Saturday responded to a recent fire in Fort Worth that killed five people by passing a bill that would require hotel operators to maintain smoke detectors in all sleeping quarters.

Fort Worth Fire Marshal Donald Peacock told a Senate committee Saturday the Ramada Inn Central fire on June 14 in which five people died and 34 were injured "very easily" could have killed 50.

The detector would include an alarm that could be heard throughout the room to alert the occupants of a fire.

Billions of creatures exist

AUSTIN (AP) — At least 8 billion creatures may exist in the Earth's galaxy, a professor said Saturday at a University of Texas symposium.

"A conservative estimate suggests tht in our own galaxy, there should be at least 8 billion fellows or cockroaches or whatever they are," Dr. Victor Szebehely told an Update '83 audience. "Makes no difference what form they take, the estimate is that there are other beings."

But Szebehely, a National Academy of Engineering member and UT professor of aerospace engineering, said Congress has thwarted efforts to contact the creatures.

Hopkins County sheriff dies

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — Hopkins County Sheriff John E. "Junior" Tittle died early Saturday in the family quarters next to the jail here. He was 61.

During his career, Tittle served as sheriff of Franklin County and chief of police in Sulphur Springs, as well as president of the Sheriffs' Association of Texas.

Tittle is survived by his wife, Dorothy Owens Tittle; a son, Jerry Tittle; a sister, Sarah Mills; three grandchildren, and one great grandchild.

Funeral services were scheduled for 3 p.m. Sunday in the First Baptist Church of Sulphur Springs. Burial will follow in Mount Vernon's city cemetery.

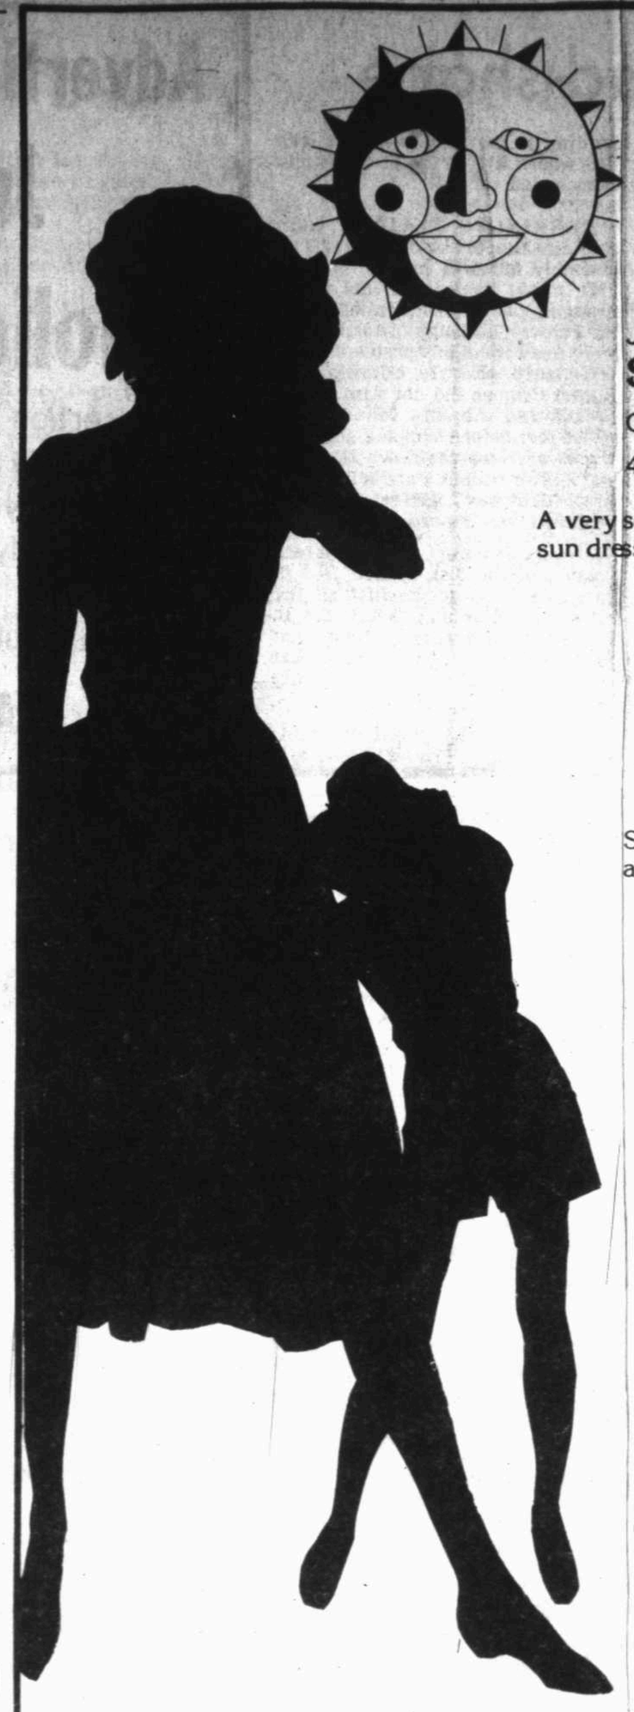

Ex-justice group officer jailed

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The former president of a student criminal justice association is learning about Texas' prison system firsthand.

Scott A. Stutesman, 24, reported to the Texas Department of Corrections Friday to begin serving a two-year prison term he received after pleading guilty to burglary charges.

The Huntsville man is a criminal justice student who headed the Texas Corrections Associations chapter at Sam Houston State University.

Stutesman was charged with stealing more than $200 from the home of an acquaintance.

Dr. Norman Thagard, mission specialist on Shuttle Challenger, performs a medical experiment during the six-day mission. Thagard was assigned the project of evaluating physiological reaction of astronauts in space travel.

Shuttle comes through flight in good shape

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The space shuttle Challenger, looking a bit like the used ship it is, came through its second flight in top shape except for a brake assembly that apparently broke during its landing.

"As to the overall staus of the vehicle, she's in good shape," James Harrington, a team leader for shuttle ground operations, said Saturday.

"It looks a little more used now," he said at a news conference. "It's not quite as shiny and bright as when it came in (after its maiden flight last April). That is to be expected."

THE FAILURE OF THE brake assembly on one of the shuttle's six wheels had no effect on the landing, he said, although it locked up while the ship was being towed off the runway later. Challenger was left stuck on the lake bed airstrip for five hours while the wheel was replaced.

Harrington said about 25 of the shuttle's thousands of heat-resistant tiles "have got big chips out of them" and will have to be replaced, probably after Challenger is back at Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

He said technicians from Kennedy who flew to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Dryden Flight Research Facility at this desert air base Friday expect to have the shuttle ready for a piggyback flight atop a Boeing 747 to Florida by dawn Thursday.

Challenger was to have ended its second flight — the seventh mission by the two-shuttle fleet — back at its Florida launch site for the first time. But bad weather there forced a landing at the Mojave Desert lake bed where five of the previous missions ended.

HARRINGTON SAID he can't explain the brake failure. "The assembly failed. It broke," he said. "We might have had some wheel dragging" as the ship rolled down the runway, although the astronauts were unaware of any problem.

He said shuttle commander Robert Crippen did not slam on the brakes and the ship rolled about 10,700 feet before stopping and "the tracks are straight down the runway." The rollout on Challenger's April flight was 7,300 feet. No brake problems were reported then.

A brake assembly, like a high-tech version of the disk brakes used in cars, locked up on the fifth shuttle mission, Columbia's last flight in November. Harrington said that problem, caused by an axle that flexed on landing, was apparently resolved.

"As to what happened this time, we don't know ... It's something that obviously has got to be fixed."

THE WHEEL AND BRAKE were being sent back to the manufacturer, B.F. Goodrich, for study. The brakes should last about five landings.

He said the tile damage, which in no way affected the flight, was probably caused during launch when debris was sloughed off the later-discarded external fuel tank.

The changed landing plans forced NASA to use an abbreviated backup recovery convoy to handle the landing for the first time.

Compound itches to get poison ivy

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Poison ivy, that curse of America's woodlands, appears to have met its match in a compound developed by Mississippi researchers that blocks the body's allergic reaction to the weed.

After several years of development and tests on animals, Dr. Sue Watson and her associates at the Research Institute of Pharmaceutical Sciences have entered into an agreement with a private drug company that has begun human trials of the compound.

"They are testing on humans in California and Pennsylvania and the reports we have gotten back show things are going very, very well," said Ms. Watson, an immunologist at the University of Mississippi-based institute.

The tormenting itchy rash that an allergic person develops when exposed to poison ivy is caused by an immune response in the skin, Ms. Watson said. "A person develops the allergy as a result of this immune response getting out of control."

She said that while poison ivy is not considered life threatening, "a person who has a bad case may wish they were dead because it produces a lot of discomfort."

She said laboratory tests have shown that the anti-ivy compound, to be taken orally before exposure, can interfere with the unwanted immune response without side effects.

It is not a miracle drug, she said. "It will help some people a lot and others only a little. It does seem to help people that are most sensitive."

Ms. Watson said treatments developed in the past have proven to be either ineffective or so toxic that they couldn't be administered in sufficient amounts to get the desired results.

Dr. Mahmoud Elsohly, a chemist, developed compounds to block the body's reaction to the plant, and Ms. Watson's group tested them on laboratory animals.

Ms. Watson said her group spent four or five years developing and testing various chemical combinations before finding one that worked.

The tests were not only time-consuming but, for some, itchy.

"I did expose myself a few times in the lab and it didn't take me long to get very good at handling the material without getting contaminated," Ms. Watson said. "The chemists also had problems.

Loss of legislative veto power may tighten control over executive branch

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, stripped of its legislative veto power by the Supreme Court, may move to assert tighter control over some executive branch functions by rewriting the laws, legislators say.

The court's ruling scrapped a device legislators had come to rely on as a convenient way to keep a tight rein on the president and regulation writers.

But the decision stopped far short of handing the executive branch any license to run roughshod over the wishes of Congress, and many say it eventually will lead to even more congressional control, particularly over agencies.

The 6-3 ruling does nothing to curb the legislative branch's basic power to write law.

What it can't do, the court said, is write laws that delegate authority to the president and agencies only on condition that one or both houses review specific decisions and rules and block any they don't like.

AN OBVIOUS RESPONSE WOULD BE for Congress to be more precise in what it intends to accomplish in a new law — holding to itself any authority it is not willing to part with unconditionally.

The sweep of Thursday's decision — directly affecting veto provisions written into at least 56 active laws — illustrates like few others the continual struggle for power between the executive and legislative branches.

In this instance, the third branch — the judicial — decreed that the legislative had grabbed an advantage over the executive that the Constitution never intended.

But rather than finally settle the ever-simmering question, the latest ruling signals the start of a protracted new struggle as Congress and the executive branch learn to play on the new field lined off by the court.

ONE OF THE STRONGEST CRITICS of the decision — Democratic Rep. Elliott H. Levitas of Georgia — did not quibble with the strictly legalistic reasoning the court used, but said it reflected ignorance of the way government really works on a day-to-day basis.

Sen. Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa, described the legislative veto as an unwritten, even unspoken, agreement that evolved between Congress and presidents over a 50-year span.

As Grassley sees it, the essense of the deal has presidents saying to Congress: "Give me some power and you'll have some curbs and I'll work with you."

With use of those curbs — legislative vetoes — taken away by the court, Grassley and many of his colleagues predict Congress will move swiftly to reclaim some of the power it has delegated to presidents and federal agencies.

"When Congress is through, executive branch powers will be curtailed and the nation will be left with a more cumbersome, less responsive national government," he said.

LEVITAS WAS MORE BLUNT: "Congress is going to tie the hands of agencies in ways you would not believe."

Grassley said Saturday that his Senate Judiciary subcommittee on administrative practice and procedure would hold a hearing July 18 to study the impact of the decision.

"The court's decision has catapulted Congress into years of cumbersome legislative activity to repossess its original powers," he said.

The majority opinion written by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger observed that the legislative veto "doubtless has been in many respects a convenient shortcut" and in some instances might appear to be "an appealing compromise" in the sharing of power.

Nonetheless, Burger wrote: "Convenience and efficiency are not the primary objectives — or the hallmarks — of democratic government and our inquiry is sharpened rather than blunted by the fact that congressional veto provisions are appearing with increasing frequency in statutes which delegate authority to executive and independent agencies."

That was a reference to the fact that the legislative veto, created in 1932, started to show up more and more in the past few years as majorities in Congress rebelled against what they often described as an imperial presidency and bureaucratic rule-writers running amok.

THE PROCEDURE HAS BEEN the underpinning for many a headline-making battle in recent months: whether to sell AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia, whether to cut off money for the MX missile, whether to squelch a rule requiring used car dealers to tell all about their cars.

The AWACS controversy fell under a clause in a Defense Department authorization law that gives Congress veto power over any weapons sale valued at more than $25 million.

In the MX issue, money was authorized for contined research only on condition the president come up with a basing plan suitable to Congress.

The use car disclosure rule was thrown out under a 1980 law in which Congress gave itself the right to overturn any Federal Trade Commission rule.

DESPITE THE SCOPE OF THE LANGUAGE in Thursday's ruling, it applies specifically only to a single immigration law in which Congress gave itself the right to countermand decisions by the attorney general in individual deportation cases.

Nonetheless, it had an immediate impact and legislation now working its way through Congress.

Rep. Dante B. Fascell, D-Fla., author of an amendment that would give Congress three opportunities to veto military aid to El Salvador, said no decision had been made on what to do next.

"Obviously, since the court has ruled it out, we have to do something," he said. The foreign aid authorization bill of which the amendment is part is expected to be scheduled for floor action next month.

Passengers complain of emergency procedures

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Passengers on a Republic Airlines DC-9 that aborted its takeoff after an engine caught fire say the first hint they got to evacuate the plane came when emergency doors opened.

"Nobody told us what to do," passenger Elizabeth Brady of Reno said after the Friday incident at McCarran International Airport. "The doors just opened and people started sliding out."

Several passengers were slightly injured as they slid down emergency chutes to safety after the Phoenix-bound plane aborted the takeoff on the main runway and pulled to a stop on a taxiway around 2:30 p.m., Federal Aviation Administration officials said.

The mishap was the latest in a series of troubles for the Minneapolis-based airline, which became the subject of an FAA safety probe this month after two planes were forced to make unscheduled landings because of mismanaged fuel supplies.

The flight, which originated in Reno, carried 84 passengers and a crew of five. None of the injured passengers required hospitalization.

"It was a minute and a half to two minutes after we stopped before they decided the engine was on fire and they'd better get everybody out," said passenger Mark Franco of Phoenix.

Franco and other passengers credited a flight attendant with finally taking charge of what turned out to be an orderly evacuation.

"She took charge by screaming 'Get out, get out' at the top of her lungs," he said. "Her screaming actually calmed things down. There was a temptation for everybody to start shoving."

Request denied in Oraflex suit

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Plaintiff's lawyers may take depositions from doctors in the United Kingdom in a $15.5 million federal lawsuit accusing Eli Lilly and Co. of negligence and fraud in the marketing and selling of the arthritis drug Oraflex.

Lawyers for the Indianapolis pharmaceutical firm had asked U.S. District Judge J. Robert Elliott to prevent attorneys C. Neal Pope and Edmund Kellogg from taking the depositions July 2 from the physicians, one of whom first linked patient deaths with Oraflex.

Elliott rejected the request Friday and set the trial date for the lawsuit for Nov. 7.

Oraflex was introduced in May 1982 but was withdrawn from the worldwide market three months later after reports of patient deaths triggered British medical officials to suspend Lilly's right to market the drug in the United Kingdom.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has said Lilly failed to report the patient deaths as required by law and has asked the Justice Department to investigate for possible criminal violations.

This suit, among about 70 Oraflex cases filed throughout the nation, was filed by survivors of an 81-year-old woman, Lola Tritte Jones, who died in July 1982 after taking Oraflex for nine days.

It alleges that Lilly acted wrongly by concealing reports of adverse side effects from doctors and the FDA and acted improperly in labeling and advertising.

His lawyers, Pope and Kellogg, last week questioned top Lilly officials associated with the firm's Oraflex project. They also scheduled depositions of experts in Great Britain, including Hugh McA. Taggert, a doctor from City Hospital in Belfast, Northern Ireland.

nation in brief

Error costs schools $4 million

CLEVELAND (AP) — A keypunch error in the county auditor's office has cost Cleveland schools $4 million in anticipated income and the city an expected $2 million.

The mistake inflated the value of a two-story house to $510 million instead of its true worth, $35,500. Until the error was revealed, school officials boasted about a balanced budget this year.

"It throws our whole budget out of whack," school board member Joseph Tegreene said. "We were proud we had produced the first balanced budget in five years without a state loan."

Cuyahoga County Auditor Tim McCormack speculated that the computer code number for residences, 5100, inadvertently was typed in with the house's value, creating the inflated figure of $510,035,500, which would have brought in more property taxes.

Missile launch called successful

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Two unarmed Minuteman 3 intercontinental ballistic missiles were launched Saturday and hit Kwajalein Atoll in the Marshall Islands, the Air Force said.

The missiles, built to carry nuclear warheads, were launched by a crew flying a Strategic Air Command plane near Vandenberg, Capt. Al Freidenrich said. Both launches were called successful.

The target area was the same as that of an MX missile flight from Vandenberg this month that drew demonstrations by anti-nuclear and environmental protesters.

Hundreds watch lunar eclipse

LOS ANGELES (AP) — About 400 people, including members of the Los Angeles Astronomical Society, visited Griffith Park Observatory on Saturday to watch a partial lunar eclipse.

The eclipse began at 12:14 a.m. and peaked at 1:22 a.m., when about 33 percent of the lunar surface was darkened by Earth's shadow, observatory lecturer Kathleen Hedges said.

She said it was the last time a lunar eclipse would be visible in most of the United States until April 24, 1986.

Sympathy threatens research

HOUSTON (AP) — Public sympathy for animals is threatening research into the relationship between diet and cancer, a professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology says.

Dr. Adrianne Rogers, speaking at a symposium on colon cancer, said Friday that scientists can control the environments of animals, making them good test subjects, "but now I sense a tremendous popular antagonism to animal experimentation."

"There is pressure being put on Congress to stop the use of animals in scientific research," she said, and among experiments threatened are those investigating the relationship of fat to bowel cancer.

Bitten woman collects $4,000

ATLANTA (AP) — A woman who was bitten by a rat while attending a wrestling match in the old Municipal Auditorium four years ago has collected a $4,000 court judgment.

Ella Zalewski of suburban Cobb County was awarded the sum by a jury in January, but she said she got the runaround when she tried to collect. She got a check Friday with $200 interest.

She received word that the city was ready to pay as she stood outside the sheriff's office, where she had planned to seek an order to seize city property until she got her money.

Insecticide found in gravy mix

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — State health workers Saturday found insecticide in two bottles of liquid gravy mix after checking the claim of a person who said he planted the poison.

The New Jersey Department of Health said it found the toxic chemical in two bottles of Gravy Master Seasoning and Browning Sauce sold at Pathmark supermarkets. It said the product would be recalled.

The poison, nicotine sulfate, was found in gravy mix in Pathmark stores in West New York and North Bergen. Both towns are near the Hudson River across from New York City.

Earlier in the day, the New York Post printed excerpts of a letter from a man who said he would poison the product in those two cities and in nearby Belleville and Jersey City.

"Why I hate the people who make Gravy Master is my business," the letter said.

Delegates want record straight about dioxin

CHICAGO (AP) — Donald Crosby says the American Medical Association is "on the right track" about dioxin. Samuel Epstein says the doctors are dead wrong — perhaps literally.

The disagreement between them and many other experts on environmental medicine got new attention last week when the AMA House of Delegates approved a resolution condemning news accounts of the dangers of dioxin, a useless byproduct of chemical manufacturing.

The 351-member delegation voted to set the record straight about dioxin, which prompted evacuation of Times Beach, Mo., and expressions of concern with its discovery at sites in New Jersey.

The doctors argued that lives have been "unnecessarily and ignorantly damaged by ... hysterical malreporting" about dioxin that amounts to "a witch hunt," and called for a campaign to "prevent irrational reaction and unjustified public fright."

PRESIDENT REAGAN CALLED THE AMA resolution "a positive step toward a more reasonable public discussion" of the issue.

Crosby, professor of environmental toxicology at University of California at Davis, says that based on evidence of what dioxin does to humans over time, "The AMA is on the right track. We do not see persisting human illnesses or certainly not death."

Of the $36.5 million evacuation of Times Beach, he says: "I suspect there's a good deal of politics involved in that."

Crosby said the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has been criticized for its handling of the environmental crisis at the Love Canal chemical waste site in Niagara Falls, N.Y. "The EPA has been trying to put on a good show now that their reputation has been sullied several ways in the past. They're going to be diligent in trying to protect people."

Epstein, professor of occupational and environmental medicine at the University of Illinois Medical Center here, is critical too, but of the AMA members.

HISTORICALLY, HE ARGUES, "They have shown a remarkable indifference to legislation to protect the public and workers. Their background is poorly distinguished and shows a lack of concern for preventive medicine."

Dioxin, he says, "is the most potent carcinogenic ... known to science," while the evidence that it causes cancer and can damage kidneys, nerves and the immune system in animals is "overwhelming."

The AMA's resolution, Epstein says, "reflects ... extreme ignorance, indifference or direct or indirect association with industry interests."

DIOXIN, A CONTAMINANT in the defoliant Agent Orange used during the Vietnam War, is a byproduct in the manufacture of herbicides and some other chemicals. Vietnam veterans who came in contact with Agent Orange are engaged in a bitter battle with the government over the effects of exposure, which they blame for skin and nerve disorders, birth defects and other problems.

"Whether dioxin is dangerous or not, the answer is unequivocally yes. It causes cancer (in animals)," says Dr. J. Donald Ostrow, a Northwestern University professor of medicine.

"It causes birth defects (in animals). It is a direct toxin," he said, and while such ill effects have been seen in animals, "there's a very good chance it's also true in humans."

The illnesses, he said, may not appear for decades. "It could be a time bomb ... We may not know for 20 years."

The debate reflects one point sponsors of the AMA resolution, a group of doctors from Missouri, tried to make: "The scientific evidence and facts are not yet conclusive" concerning dioxin, said Dr. George Bohigian of the Missouri delegation.

India awaits decision on vital reactor parts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, just days before the secretary of state visits India, is undecided over that country's urgent request for spare parts needed to assure the safe operation of two U.S.-built nuclear reactors.

The issue centers around whether President Reagan will waive the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act, which requires the United States to cut off U.S. nuclear exports to nations such as India that acquire nuclear weapons capability.

Among the factors affected by any decision are the credibility of U.S. nuclear non-proliferation policy, the health and safety of hundreds of Indians who operate and maintain the reactors, and continued electric power for Bombay, the world's 17th largest city.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz is sure to discuss the issue when he meets with Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi in New Delhi between June 29 and July 2.

A new twist was given the situation last week when the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the legislative veto power often used by Congress to block presidential action.

It had been assumed a Reagan decision to waive the non-proliferation act would spur a drive in Congress to overrule him and block the shipments. Now the situation is unclear.

The non-proliferation law was prompted by India's 1974 nuclear explosion, and some U.S. intelligence officials suspect India may be preparing a second test.

"I think that under those circumstances the United States would be crazy to send them anything," one State Department official said, speaking only on condition he not be identified by name.

This official and others made clear there is no indication India actually will decide to trigger such a blast.

The United States built the two reactors at the Tarapur Atomic Power Station north of Bombay in the early 1960s and they have operated, mainly with U.S.-supplied fuel, since that time.

The Carter administration waived the law to permit one additional shipment of U.S. fuel to India, which has refused to meet U.S. demands that it allow all its nuclear facilities to be scrutinized under non-proliferation guidelines.

Later, by arrangement, France took over as Tarapur's nuclear supplier.

Now, India contends reactor parts vital to health and safety urgently need to be replaced, a fact the State Department does not dispute.

"If parts important to safety are not replaced as called for it would not be prudent for the reactors to be operated," said Rush Taylor, a department press officer.

One knowlegeable official said both Tarapur reactors are actually out of operation now, at least temporarily; one because of a broken seal and possible radiation leaks and another for refueling.

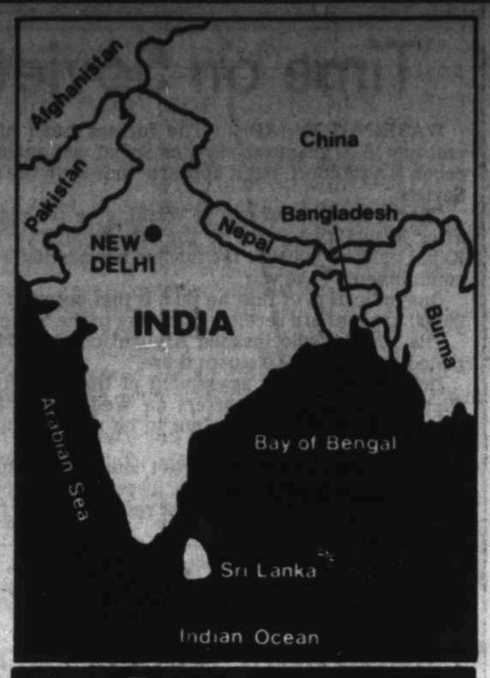

"There are reports of lots of cases of (radiation) overexposure," he said. "There are allegations of Indian peasants being herded in to do repairs, getting maximum exposure in a short period, and then being shipped home."

He noted Indian authorities have denied these reports but added: "It is just not run the way an American reactor would be run. It's a different kettle of fish entirely."

The needed reactor parts would cost less than $2 million. But price is not the issue.

"The Indians have been warned there are safety factors," said one official of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. "They continue to have the option of shutting the reactors down or adopting full-scope safeguards on all their nuclear facilities.

"By offering them an escape hatch we reduce their incentive for accepting full-scope safeguards," he said. "But right now, they are in fact between a rock and a hard place."

Indian political leader attempts to walk out of political oblivion

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW DELHI, India — His swollen and blistered feet wrapped in bandages but his pace still brisk in the scorching 110-degree midday heat, Chandra Shekhar limped into New Delhi Saturday in an attempt to literally walk his once-powerful Janata Party out of political oblivion.

By his own account, he covered 2,400 miles, but he faces possibly another generation to go before he succeeds.

Once the dazzling Young Turk of the old Congress Party, then the fervently leftist conscience of the briefly supreme Janata alliance and now the president of the fractious opposition party, Shekhar was completing a 2,400-mile march against poverty and misery from the southern tip of India to the seat of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's power.

It is primary politics, Indian-style, but it is also a microcosmic revival of an era when Mohandas K. Gandhi caught the world's imagination with a symbolic march from Ahmedabad to the sea to protest a British salt tax, and when his disciple, Vinoba Bhave, trekked 15,000 miles in 10 years for the cause of land reform.

"I am not Mahatma Gandhi nor do I aspire to become one," protested Shekhar when the inevitable analogy was drawn. "I have seen the sufferers through their eyes, and from this I draw my satisfaction," he added in an interview last week as he walked through Arungabad, about 25 miles south of the capital in Haryana state.

Despite his disclaimer, Shekhar's grueling "bharat yatra," or protest march, has helped revive the image of the failed Janata among Indians, who respect gestures of sacrifice by their leaders and seek an alternative to what many view as a grass-roots political vacuum overwhelmed by the Nehru-Gandhi dynasty in New Delhi.

"He is our hero. He is totally committed to the principles of Mahatma Gandhi. He will lead us out of the corruption and money power that rules India," said Sundra Ajad, a 28-year-old marcher from Karnal, north of New Delhi.

Karan Singh, a young science teacher from Arungabad, said, "He is the future. The old leaders will go, and he will be the future of India."

Shekhar, however, who at 55 appears to have mellowed beneath his fiery socialist rhetoric, is more cautious about his future and that of the divided opposition parties.

"Everybody who is a politician wants to be prime minister, but I don't want something I can't achieve. I know the Janata Party is not powerful enough. The powerful lobbies who control the money are not interested in me," said Shekhar, a member of parliament for 21 years.

Moreover, he said, the same Janata alliance that defeated Indira Gandhi in March 1977, but then was ousted by Gandhi two years later, would fail if it tried to reorganize along the same lines.

The furniture style known as "Early American" is also sometimes known as American Provincial furniture. It originated and was produced by early American craftsment between 1650 and 700. Altough rustic in character, it stemmed from various European peasant styles, was oftern gaily painted in vivid reds, blues, yellows and greens and contained a high degree of craftsmanship. Pennsylvania German furniture is the best known design of this era. it is commanly called "Pennsylvania dutch" which evolved as a mispronunciation of the word "deeutsch". The Windsor chairs and love seats, rocking chairs, butterfly tables, corner cupboards and tall shaker chests are all representative pieces of this period.

Northern Chad city captured by rebels

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — Government officials on Saturday confirmed that the northern city of Faya-Largeau had fallen to the rebel forces of Libyan-backed former President Goukouni Oueddei.

On Friday, officials of this war-torn central African nation had emphatically denied reports from Goukouni's representative in Paris that the town had fallen. But officials in the capital of N'Djamena on Saturday said the town was captured overnight after 24 hours of fighting between government troops and about 3,000 rebel soldiers.

Faya-Largeau is an oasis settlement about 450 miles northeast of the capital and is a key point on the road to N'Djamena.

Radio and telephone communications between Faya-Largeau and N'Djamena apparently were cut early Friday. Unidentified military sources told the French news agency Agence France Presse that government reinforcements were moving north to recapture the city.

There were no reports of direct Libyan involvement in the fighting. Libyan troops intervened in Chad in 1980 on Goukouni's behalf but withdrew in November 1981.

They were replaced by an Organization of African Unity peacekeeping force, but the following summer, rebel forces under current President Hissene Habre captured the capital and set up a new government.

Chad, an impoverished landlocked country in former French Equatorial Africa, has been wracked by a nearly continuous civil war for the past 18 years.

Goukouni has been waging his guerrilla war from bases in Libya, which borders northern Chad, and now is leading his opposition from Bardai, a town near the Libyan border. Habre, who once served as Goukouni's defense minister, had operated from bases in Sudan, which borders Chad on the southeast.

The United States and France have warned that direct Libyan participation would be a serious escalation of Libyan involvement in Chad.

'Time on Soviets' side' in Afghanistan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former head of the U.S. embassy in Afghanistan says the Soviet war against Afghan rebels is a standoff, but it appears "time is on the side of the Soviets."

Charles Dunbar, who is in Washington for reassignment after nearly two years as the top diplomatic officer in Kabul, said he believes the Soviets are making a long-term commitment to the war.

One indication of this, he said, is that between 10,000 and 20,000 Afghans are receiving training in the Soviet Union.

The Soviets, who invaded Afghanistan in 1979, are estimated to have 105,000 troops there.

Dunbar offered his assessment of the status of the conflict to a group of reporters on Wednesday. But at his request, his remarks were not to be reported until Saturday.

Because of the extensive Soviet commitment, he said, it is hard to believe that the rebels, dispersed into rival groups, can continue to offer significant resistance. But they do.

"The Afghan resistance is confounding the logic of brute force in the country," he said. "The Soviets are not winning ...it is a standoff."

Another speaker, Tom Gouttierre of the University of Nebraska, said as many as 200,000 Afghans may have been killed in the conflict.

However, Dunbar said the Soviets show no signs of getting out soon. He said it is difficult to assess the Soviet strategy, but his own feeling is that they are "making a determined and long-term commitment to the conflict."

He said the Western-oriented middle class continues to flee Kabul, the capital, leaving a vaccuum in government and elsewhere that is being filled by Afghans trained by the Soviets for the jobs and who are less likely to offer resistance.

Dunbar said the Soviets are strong in the Kabul area. Their strategy in confronting the guerrillas is to rely on the Afghan military for day-to-day operations, joining the fight only when the situation gets out of hand, he added.

Nixon says U.S., U.S.S.R. need to negotiate Middle East peace

KUWAIT (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon said in an interview published Saturday that Moscow and Washington should negotiate for a Middle East peace settlement.

In the interview with the independent Kuwaiti newspaper al-Anba, Nixon was also reported as saying he believed action must be taken to stop "the Russians trying to gain control of the oil tanker sea lanes in the (Persian) Gulf."

Al-Anba said the interview was held in Washington but did not say when.

Arafat's aides flee Damascus offices with confidential papers

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Aides to expelled PLO chief Yasser Arafat fled their Damascus offices Saturday with bundled-up confidential papers, saying they feared Syrian authorities would seize the documents.

In eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, Lebanese radio stations reported that Syrian forces ringed positions held by pro-Arafat guerrillas, who were reinforcing themselves with multiple rocket launchers and artillery.

Syrian President Hafez Assad expelled Arafat from Syria on Friday, claiming the Palestine Liberation Organization chairman slandered his government by accusing it of backing a seven-week-old guerrilla mutiny in Arafat's Fatah faction. The mutineers claim Arafat has bungled the PLO's struggle with Israel.

Arafat's main headquarters is now in Tunis, Tunisia, the base he set up after Israeli forces invaded Lebanon and routed the PLO from its power base in Beirut late last summer.

The guerrilla chief, cut off from his guerrilla army in Lebanon and Syria, flew from Tunis to Prague, Czechoslovakia, where he spoke at a Soviet-backed international peace assembly.

He accused the United States, Israel and western media of conspiring to wreck the Palestinian guerrilla movement. He praised the Soviet Union and did not criticize Syria, which depends on the Kremlin for most of its military aid.

PLO offices in the Syrian capital remained open, but guards were grim-faced and nearly all senior officials left taking confidential documents with them.

"The door is open," said one PLO official. "But most of the valuable and confidential documents have been transported out of Syria...Some went with (Arafat) when he left."

Two pro-Arafat guerrillas at another PLO office, however, said they expected Syrian forces to close down all the guerrilla organization's offices in Damascus.

"We expected it to happen yesterday. Maybe tonight and maybe they want to wait until the anger of the people dies down and then start harassing us again," said one guerrilla, who declined to be identified.

Assad met with Algerian Foreign Minister Tael al-Ibrahimi, the third Arab foreign minister to attempt mediation of Arafat-Assad feud in as many days. The Saudi and Kuwaiti ministers intervened earlier without success.

HOW GOOD ARE THOSE JEWELRY "BARGAINS" IN SUMMER PROMOTIONS?

With so many gift-giving occasions (Mother's Day, Father's Day, Anniversary, Wedding, Graduation, etc.), and with the inevitable emergence of promotions for "bargains" in jewelry, you may understandably be tempted to try your luck. However, "It's safe to look for bargains in some items, but when buying jewelry, a 'bargain' could turn out to be expensive and disappointing if you don't know the person you're buying from."

Mail order ads certainly look tempting:

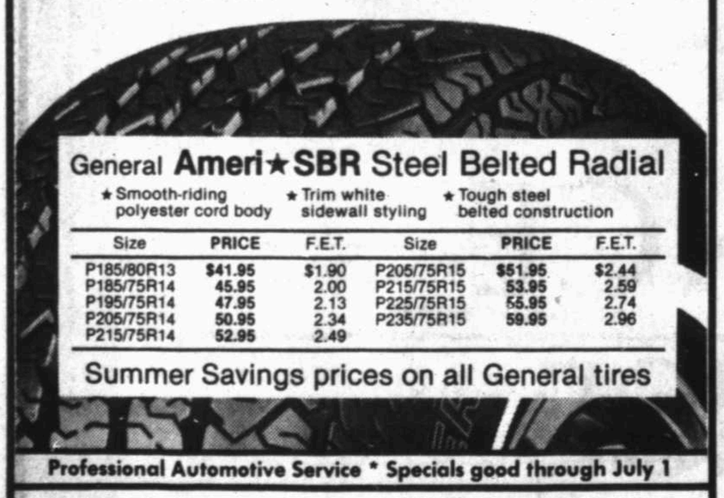

- Genuine emeralds, rubies, sapphires are offered at unbelievable prices
- 14 karat gold chains offered for $8
- Diamond stud earrings for $6
- .25 pt. 17-facet diamonds for $3
- Beware of that 'designer' watch for sale on the street," "it's probably a fake designed to only run for a week or so. And, when the watch breaks down," "who will fix it?"
- $5.00 stud earrings look good because they are packaged under a magnifying glass.

"Deal with a reputable, professional jeweler when buying at reasonable prices. A professional jeweler can offer advice on buying less costly but still impressive pieces, and show you selections to fit your price range.

Salvadoran planes bomb northern rebel positions

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Air force planes bombed rebel positions along a northern road to Suchitoto on Saturday and 2,000 government troops slogged ahead to break a guerrilla siege on that city, military sources said.

The guerrillas dynamited Las Guaras bridge, 12 miles north of the capital, and seized control of the road earlier this week. Suchitoto, 26 miles north of San Salvador, is considered strategic because of its proximity to two hydroelectric dams on Lake Suchitlan that provide half the country's power.

Air force planes made strafing runs in the early morning and dropped bombs on suspected rebel positions along the road, north of the bridge, said the sources, who asked anonymity for security reasons. They said they had no details.

Another road leading to Suchitoto has been heavily mined by the rebels and cannot be used. But the sources said the two dams can still be reached, with difficulty, by side roads off the north-south highway linking San Salvador with the Honduran border.

A 2,000-man infantry force that is trying to reopen the road continued fighting Saturday. The sources said there was fighting during the night between guerrillas and army patrols near the town of San Martin, just northeast of the capital, but they had no details.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said 30 civilians and soldiers were killed in fighting around the bridge, when the rebels attacked and overran a military post guarding the span on Thursday.

The rebels have been fighting for months to seize control of the road. Military sources in Suchitoto said reinforcements had been airlifted into the garrison there by air following the attack on Las Guaras.

Walesa refuses to comment about political retirement

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Harried Solidarity leader Lech Walesa refused comment Saturday on speculation he might leave the Polish political scene and his wife dismissed such reports as "nonsense."

Walesa, who met with Pope John Paul II on Thursday near Krakow, has so far avoided direct comment on the meeting. A Vatican newspaper editorial Friday about the audience indicated Walesa was no longer in a position to play a public role as leader of the outlawed union Solidarity.

But the Rev. Virgilio Levi, author of the editorial in L'Osservatore Romano, resigned as deputy editor of the paper on Saturday without shedding any new light on the controversy.

While the paper is published by the Vatican, it does not necessarily reflect official views of the Roman Catholic Church.

"Any kind of speculation on Lech's backing off is just pure nonsense," Danuta Walesa said in a telephone interview from the couple's home in Gdansk, where Solidarity was formed during shipyard strikes in August 1980.

Walesa himself had no comment Saturday, but in an interview Friday with the NBC television network, he made statements that seemed to support the view of the L'Osservatore Romano editorial.

Polish government protests speech

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Communist government lodged a stiff protest with the United States Saturday, accusing President Reagan of whipping up tension by calling for the restoration of Solidarity and demanding that he stop interfering in Poland's "internal affairs."

The protest note, accusing the Reagan administration of striving to "maintain tension in Poland at all costs," was handed to acting chief of the U.S. mission, Herbert Wilgis.

The State Department in Washington confirmed the protest had been received in Warsaw, but spokeswoman Anita Stockman said "We will not have any comment until we have seen the text."

Polish authorities openly acknowledge that one aim of inviting Pope John Paul II to Poland for his just-completed eight-day trip was to create conditions that would allow the lifting of U.S. economic sanctions — sanctions imposed in response to the martial law edict of Dec. 13, 1981.

Government officials have hinted that martial law, eased somewhat last December, may be lifted formally on July 22, Poland's national day.

In a speech to Polish-Americans in Chicago on Thursday, Reagan called for "genuine national reconciliation" and urged Poland to lift martial law entirely, free "political prisoners," and revive Solidarity.

Latin American journalists warn of growing U.S. intervention

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Journalists from 16 Latin American countries have sent a telegram to U.S. congressional leaders warning against U.S. intervention in Central America and urging support for the "Contadora" initiative.

The telegram, signed at a journalists' convention, was sent to House of Representatives Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass, and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., on Friday.A copy of the telegram was released here Saturday.

It expressed "our preoccupation with possible war between Nicaragua and Honduras" and fear that the region could become another Vietnam — with the United States involved in a long, bloody conflict.

The message referred to "increasing North American intervention despite warnings and opposition (and) important currents of opinion in your country."

Fasting Israeli doctors collapse

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Hundreds of Israeli doctors fasting for higher pay collapsed from weakness Saturday and were put on emergency room stretchers and given intravenous infusions, Israel's press and radio said.

Israel radio said 2,700 of the nation's 4,500 public service doctors had joined the 12-day-old hunger strike, and that about half of the protesters fainted and later were revived.

Newspapers said all but four or five of Israel's 28 hospitals had stopped admitting patients except for dire emergencies.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin and his health and finance ministers planned to submit to the Cabinet Sunday a proposal for arbitration to end the dispute.

Filipino gunmen kill farmers

CAGAYAN DE ORO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Gunmen swooped down on a southern Philippine village, herded residents into a public hall and shot 11 farmers to death before their wives and children, the military command said Saturday.

It described the killers as Communist New People's Army guerrillas but did not say why the farmers were shot Thursday in Prosperidad municipality, 90 miles east of this southern city.

Summer epidemics kill Indians

BANGALORE, India (AP) — About 438 people in the southern Indian state of Karnataka have died of gastroenteritis, monkey fever, cholera and Japanese encephalitis, a state health official said Saturday.

Gastroenteritis, an inflammation of the stomach and intestines, has claimed 232 lives, said T.M. Ramesh, joint director of the state's health directorate.

He said monkey disease has taken 127 lives, cholera 24 and Japanese encephalitis, an inflammation of the brain, has killed 55 people. All the diseases are epidemics prevalent during the summer time.

"I share their sorrows; enjoy their joys. I might have read that somewhere, but I know that's how I feel."
— Newnie W. Ellis

Ellis: Born to be funeral director

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

In 1883 the Texas Pacific Railroad moved westward, reaching a nameless point on the wide West Texas prairie.

A boxcar, shunted to a side track, became the first structure in what is now Midland. As other structures began to appear a trickle of people began terminating their trek westward and settling in Midland.

They were mostly cattlemen and ranchers. But one of the settlers was a pharmacist.

This is the story Newnie W. Ellis Jr., the grandson of Dr. Newnie H. Ellis, tells his new employees. He describes how his grandfather's family struggled on the harsh and unsettled land.

Because there weren't any medical doctors, pharmacists in those days prescribed medications. Dr. Ellis practiced from a building on today's Main Street. In 1890, he started keeping a supply of coffins in the rear of his store. Then he began rendering additional services for families whose members had died.

Dr. Ellis established and operated the Ellis Funeral Home until he and his wife died on the same day in 1912, following a meningitis epidemic.

At 21, the doctor's son Newnie W. Ellis Sr. — as the youngest mortician in Texas — took over the business.

During this time, the funeral home was the only one in the western section. Ellis Sr. was called to service areas as far away as Lovington N.M., Lubbock and Del Rio, until his death in 1943.

Today Newie W. Ellis Jr. runs the funeral home.

He said there's not the stigma attached to funeral directors today as in the past. While the soft-spoken Ellis admits there have been many changes from the days of the undertaker to today's funeral director, he said the profession is still a service — "an opportunity to help people, even though it's a trying time.

"It's a valuable service we render. Someone has to do it. Me, I was born into it," said the dignified 63-year-old Ellis, who insists on wearing dark suits during business hours.

When he was growing up, the third generation Ellis didn't have much interest in following his father's footsteps. But upon his discharge from World War II, he decided to relocate and run the family business.

"My mother and sister kept it (the business) going until I got out of the service in 1945," Ellis said.

Active in the Jaycees during the post-war era, Ellis said one of his duties as director of the organization was to escort the new Chamber of Commerce's secretary to a Jaycees' banquet.

"I was told or selected to take the part-time secretary to the Jaycees banquet and I've been with her ever since," he said, chuckling.

Ellis and his wife-to-be went to Dallas, where they were married. Ellis attended and graduated from the Dallas Institute of Mortuary Science in 1948. Then, the Ellises returned to Midland.

Moving the business from Main Street to Andrews Highway, Ellis had a hand in designing the building.

"Every room opens to the patio," he said. "I wanted it to look light and airy."

Ellis prides himself on personally visiting with the families he serves.

"I share their sorrows; enjoy their joys," he said, adding "I might have read that somewhere, but I know that's how I feel."

Because the business demands much of his time, Ellis said he hasn't had much time for clubs or organizations. But he does belong to the Rotary Club. What little free time the funeral director has he spends with his wife, Charlotte, reading or training his hunt dogs.

"When I go home, I get my jeans on. I have a hobby, my passion — training and working bird dogs."

Dry as a bone

Midland County farmer Marc Traweek looks over his seedling cotton crop, while rainless clouds breeze by and his dog, Link, swelters. Amid the drought, Traweek is one of the "lucky" farmers; he's got some underground water with which to irrigate.

Farmers, ranchers in dire straits

"Things don't grow right without rain."

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

While the drought is on, there's not much a fellow who works the land for a living can do but go to work, wait and pray.

"Most of them have already done what they can do," said Dick Hagelstein, whose job is to encourage farmers and ranchers to conserve their precious and irreplaceable resource — the land. Many are wishing they had water to conserve.

Farmers not on irrigation and who can't plant a crop because there's no water coming from above or below have placed their land under emergency tillage; they disk their land to form large clods, which won't be as susceptible to wind erosion as finely-plowed soil.

"About the only thing you can do now is pray for rain," said Hagelstein.

West Texas farmers and ranchers are alarmed that 1983 might be the beginning of a drought similar to the widespread drought of the 1950s. But there's vast difference: The current drought is isolated to far West Texas; the dry spell 30 years ago was more extensive.

"There was a couple of years it looked like it might be (another drought)," said Hagelstein, Midland County district conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service (SCS). "But it turned out better than anyone expected. We don't have sub-surface moisture (this year)."

THE SKY, THOUGH adorned with those lazy, rolling cumulus clouds, afforded no omen of rain. The nimbus — rain-bearing — clouds have become almost as rare as gold in sandstone.

"A good 3-inch rain would sure ease a lot of pain around here right now."

Hagelstein, en route to Marc Traweek's farm east of Midland, viewed the barren landscape.

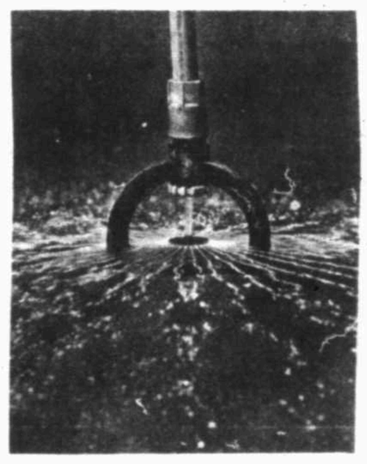

"You see, we've got a little wind kicking up, but you don't see any (sand) blowing."

Those dryland farmers who can't plant because of lack of underground moisture only can hope for some manna from the heavens or the government to pull them through. The time for planting cotton, which usually is in mid-May, is past. Cotton is a hot-season crop, and late planting likely would mean that the first freeze of autumn would kill the bolls and ruin the crop.

Many farmers are counting on crop deficiency payments to help them hold onto their land. But they have to plant, futile as that may be, in dryland just to satisfy government regulations to qualify for those payments. Those fortunate farmers who are in the payment-in-kind (PIK) program this year are not planting cotton. That way, goes the theory, they'll help reduce the cotton surplus and thus strengthen the cotton market. In turn, the government will pay them in government-owned bales for what they would have produced had they planted.

RANCHERS, TOO, are in dire straits.

Langtree Village may be a reality

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Langtree Village may be sprouting up east of the Pecos but not the river or the city. It may be east of Pecos Street in Midland.

Thursday afternoon, a group signed the papers and mailed an application to the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Dallas office to get a loan for constructing an 85 unit apartment building. It would be designed solely for elderly and/or handicapped persons.

If approved by HUD, this would be the second such project in Midland and would be located across the street from the first, Hillcrest Manor.

THIS PROJECT, however, differs from the first because of guidelines established by HUD under Section 202, the only new construction being funded by the federal government.

First, to get the application off the desk and into the mail, the idea has had to go through four agencies. One group purchased a tract of land when it originally intended only to obtain the option. Then the land has been channeled through a series of other groups until it wound up in the hands of a seven-member board for Langtree Village, Inc., the name of the housing complex.

According to Susan Howell, community development coordinator for the city of Midland, she and others had little more than a month to get the plans and application written and submitted by Thursday's deadline.

Midland is included in a section known as North Texas that stetches from El Paso to east of Dallas. HUD is allowing money to be loaned for constructing 171 units in this area. Midland's application would use half that allotment.

Because of the complicated HUD regulations which preferred land be already purchased for the site, Midland Housing Finance Corporation was brought onto the scene. It was the only agency that had $600,000 handy to spend for the four-acre tract that is bordered by Pecos Street and Scharbauer Drive.

MHFC CAME INTO its money by sponsoring a low-interest revenue bond program for developers of apartment complexes. When they went through MHFC for the loans, they also had to give a 1½ percent commitment fee to the agency. Those fees have been growing until MHFC had almost $1 million, according to MHFC President Don Hellinghausen. In turn, MHFC was planning to use this money for housing for low income persons.

If HUD rejects this application for Langtree Village, MHFC won't be stuck with a piece of land. Hellinghausen said the agency can use it for building its own housing project that possibly would be designed to include families.

According to the HUD regulations, the city then needed an agency to sponsor the project. Ms. Howell said under Section 202 churches often are involved, and she pointed to an Episcopal church in Big Spring which has undertaken the project.

The City Council, however, contacted Christmas in April to serve as the sponsor. CIA repairs homes of elderly and handicapped persons using donated money and volunteers.

"The sponsor is in the background," said Bobby Trimble, president of CIA. "We will be involved with it from the standpoint of raising money for extras, such as a color television or couch in the sitting area.

'Delectable Delores' loveable, understanding piano teacher

Just imagine eyes like moon rise, a voice like music, lips like wine.
—Lyrics from "Delores"

My Dolores and Tommy Dorsey's "Delores" from the Big Band swing era are musically inclined.

One is a myth; the other is as vivid as the imagination. She's no paper doll, such as the Mills Brothers sang about, but is as real as any man's sweetheart.

She happens, as one of life's marvelous turns would have it, to be my most understanding, forgiving and loveable piano teacher who sweetly admonishes me if I don't abide by her instructions.

"Live, love and laugh," I remarked, with a touch of levity, amid an evening lesson. "And do your theory," suggested Dolores. I had been remiss.

Her patience greatly exceeds my musical talents, I do believe.

"It's so simple," delectable Dolores assured me of basic theory. "Like Einstein's theory of relativity," I thought. Later, she noted that theory and reading music really can get complicated. It's all relative.

Learning music is educational.

First of all, you learn that you have five fingers on each hand. Interesting. They're numbered one through five. There are 88 keys on the pianoforte. The ones on the back row are black.

Then you learn that there are seven basic notes — a, b, c, d, e, f, g — on the keyboard and on the staffs, but the variations are unlimited. After that, you start studying mathematics and Italian. There are whole and fractional notes and an old Romance language which lends to music such terms as "piano" for soft, "forte" for loud and "mezzo" for medium and "legato" for smooth. Then there are the less melodious words, such as slur, beat, bass, treble, up and down.

The rewarding part of practicing on the piano is listening to your cacophony transform into music, as your untrained fingers stumble over the keys and eventually walk and sometimes stroll and dance with some degree of grace.

After I had faltered and eventually waltzed through "When the Saints Go Marching In" and "Down in the Valley," I was trying to learn "Mary Ann," which certainly wasn't as appealing as my Dolores or the other "Delores." Somewhere along the way, by the seashore or sifting sand, I hit a barrage of wrong notes, and, so help me, a flower in a bouquet of Dutch irises on Dolores' ebony grand piano collapsed. The fall was disconcerting but timely.

I enjoyed dillying with "Lavender's Blue," and "Rock About" was fun.

"Stepping Out," I remember, was a special treat. Dolores sat next to me on the black cushioned piano bench. "Aren't you a bit too close?" she asked. She meant to the keys.

The other day Dolores demonstrated the "March," which has a nice legato — the smooth slur.

"And the next one is going to go (she played it so smoothly) — hopefully."

I tried to copy her. I did not slur so smoothly.

My Dolores is so kind and just as sweet and lovely as the other "Delores."

At her coaxing, I practiced "Promenade."

"That's the wrong hand," she said. "It sounded differently; the rhythm was great."

Then I went on to "Bugles."

"You played some strange things in there," she informed me. "You played all the right notes. It sounded good, but it just wasn't written."

Ah, my Dolores, the source of my musical inspiration and encouragement, promises to take me to other keyboard adventures, such as "My Wild Irish Rose" and "On Wings of Song."

She's so much like Dorsey's "Delores": "...She is twice as lovely as the rose she throws."

Windblown sand — fertile top soil — and last year's cotton stalks give testimony to the drought conditions in West Texas.

Drought puts farmers, ranchers in dire straits

"It's going to be very devastating to the rangeland," Hagelstein said in considering the delicate nature of the grassland and tenacity of the water-sapping mesquite.

"The livestock people are going to have to go to town with some of their livestock or they are going to have to feed them (which is too costly). It's when you're forced to sell livestock that the market is always generally depressed."

"If we got a good rain right now, the grass would respond almost immediately."

Farmers and ranchers are in a bind.

Included in the lot is 31-year-old Traweek, who has the mixed blessings of artificial rainfall — irrigation.

It's costly. Besides that, even irrigated cropland needs heavenly rainfall; it does far better with the natural "stuff."

"Things just don't grow right without rain," Traweek observed. "You can grow a crop, but it's nothing to brag about."

DUE TO THE fickle — the inordinately cool — weather in May, Traweek had to plant twice. The cool weather sapped the vigor from the seeds and struggling seedlings in the first planting.

This go-around, he's planting his farm in forage sorghum and cotton "all the way across the land." He is alternating between 18 rows of sorghum and 54 rows of cotton to "cut down on soil erosion," he said, "hopefully to bring in the beneficial insects." The crop rotation will enrich the soil.

"We hope it'll be the host plants for the beneficial insects and they'll move to the cotton. By the same token, they (sorghum) could be the host plants for the worms."

Despite his efforts amid the drought, Traweek knows nothing is sure in agriculture.

"You're either bugged out, droughted out or hailed out all the time," he lamented, "but I guess that's just part of it."

"I guess," he conceded, "I'll be one of the lucky ones."

Cotton farmers who have nothing but hope "are talking about putting maize in," he noted.

"But maize doesn't grow without water; it's going to blow away."

Farmers have another perennial resource — hope.

"They're just going on hope like farmers always have done," allowed Hagelstein. "They're at the mercy of everything, and this drought is just is just one more thing that they're at the mercy of."

A REALIST, Hagelstein acknowledged the human factor — mismanagement.

"I'm sure there's mismanagement in some areas. There's no use in kidding about that."

And as the farmers' and ranchers' money supply dwindles, so does the bankers' patience. "I don't know how much longer the bankers are going to stick with you," said Traweek. "They're not going to cut you off unless there's absolutely no altenative....Banks make their money by lending it, and the only way they can make money is for people to pay their debts."

For now, the drought is the overriding concern.

"A lot of people are saying it's worse than the '50s," Traweek said. "These ranchers are sure starting to hurt. They haven't had any rain in two to three years. They're having to sell off their cattle."

Traweek allowed that hard times are not just on farmers and ranchers. He alluded to the economic slump in the petroleum industry — the mainstay of the Midland economy.

"There ain't nothing easy about it (farming and ranching). It's like everything else. Everything's down."

Traweek philosophized over the drought.

"You might as well get over this stuff of worrying about the rain. If it rains, it rains. There's nothing you can do about it. Just let the land rest a year."

Farmworkers' compensation compromise falls through

AUSTIN (AP) — A so-called compromise on extending workers' compensation benefits to laborers on larger farms and ranches apparently dissolved Saturday despite efforts by legislative leaders.

A similar bill died in the regular session when Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Hereford, launched a late-hour filibuster that carried almost up to the midnight deadline on May 30.

Sarpalius, however, joined Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, in an attempt to resurrect the proposal in the special legislative session that started Wednesday.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby hailed the measure as "landmark legislation," and Gov. Mark White participated in private negotiations on Saturday.

Nevertheless, Sarpalius told his colleagues, "As far as being through, at this point it is, and I think it's a shame."

The compromise would have allowed farmers to carry workers' compensation or general liability and medical insurance to pay for injuries on the job.

According to the Texas Safety Council, there were 62 on-the-job deaths of agricultural workers in 1981.

Housing for handicapped may soon be reality

"BUT CIA AND Langtree Village, Inc., the two boards, will be separate as far as what we are doing in the community. CIA is not getting federal funds. Langtree Village board was set up strictly for the apartment complex. CIA always will be working only with local money and volunteer help."

Trimble was appointed to the Langtree board. Also serving are Bertha Starks, Jim Morris, Nancy Jordan, former city councilman Carroll Thomas, Felipe Morales and John Savage. That board serves as the borrowing agent for the 40-year loan.

And the final group, Midland Housing Authority, would be managing the complex, as it is doing with Hillcrest Manor to the west of Langtree's site.

During the monthlong working period, an architect and lawyer were found to draw plans and fill out the application. Both are from Big Spring. The attorney is Guilford Jones; the architect, Don Bailey. Both worked on that city's housing project.

Because of the time limit, explained Ms. Howell, they needed people already familiar with HUD's requirements. "We needed someone who could get started immediately. He (Jones) knew all the people at HUD and had gotten two projects approved."

Pointing to a book of HUD regulations about 2 inches thick, she said they needed an architect who was familiar with these and could begin drawing plans.

"HE HAD SEVEN preliminary drawings ready in less than a month. He came up with a feasible plan that includes HUD's requirements of 10 percent of the units for handicapped persons and 20 percent designed as efficiencies. HUD wants a maximum of 415 square feet in efficiencies and he's got 414. And for one bedrooms the requirement is 540 and he's got 536.

There wasn't time for someone not familiar with the regulations to read the book, she said. And if one item is wrong on the application, that is enough for it to be rejected.

The plans show a five-story building with a one-story office, recreation room and waiting area.

Filling it will be no problem, she said. Hillcrest Manor, designed for 100 tenants, has a waiting list of 200.

"I'm excited about it," said Trimble. "I'm around elderly people 12 months a year. They have no place to go. This would be a place for 85 of them."

With HUD subsidies, an elderly person on a fixed income of $300 a month will pay about $100 for rent, said Ms. Howell.

She is optimistic about Midland's chances for being approved. "Everyone at HUD seems to think Midland is an under-served area and needs this kind of facility. Now that we have no land costs, it's in our favor."

Like the rest of the application, the name was conceived on a spur of the moment. "Well, I looked at Pecos Street and thought of Lillie Langtree and thought it fit," Ms. Howell added with a laugh.

DEATHS

Charles Hamill

BIG SPRING — Services for Charles W. Hamill, 67, of Big Spring will be at 10 a.m. Monday in the Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel. Burial will be in Trinity Memorial Park.

Hamill died Thursday in a Big Spring hospital.

He was born on Sept. 1, 1918, in Milam County. He was married to Vera Powelson on May 8, 1944, Sanford, Fla., and had lived in Big Spring for the past 30 years. He was a retired groundskeeper and attended Calvary Baptist Church. Hamill, a veteran of World War II, served in the U.S. Army Air Corps in China-India-Burma Theater for two years.

Survivors include his wife; two brothers, George Hamill of Waco and Jack Hamill of Fort Worth; and a nephew.

Aubrey Goodwin

BIG SPRING — Services for Aubrey S. Goodwin, 64, of Big Spring will be at 2 p.m. Monday in Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel.

Burial will be in Trinity Memorial Park.

Goodwin died Friday in a Big Spring hospital following a brief illness.

He was born Oct. 31, 1918, in Alexandria, La. He was married to Frances Murphree on Oct. 30, 1940, in Stanton, and had lived in Big Spring since 1940.

Goodwin was a truck driver and worked for the Tripp Construction Co. in Coahoma. He was a member of Airport Baptist Church and was a veteran of World War II.

Survivors include his wife; two sisters, Myrtis Sharp and Velma Dix, both of Alexandria, La.; and a brother, Jack Goodwin of Alexandria, La. Preceding him in death were a daughter, Margaret Joyce Goodwin, who died in 1947; a son, Gary Earl Goodwin, who died in 1971, three brothers and a sister.

D.M. Driver

D.M. Driver, 72, of Route 5, Box 860 died at his home Saturday.

Services will be Monday at 1:30 p.m. in Newnie W. Ellis Chapel with burial in Resthaven Memorial Park.

He was born March 23, 1911, in Eastland, where he was raised. He was married to Esther Mae Moore Sept. 22, 1928, at Lamesa. He was a farmer in Slaton, Lamesa and other communities. He moved to Midland in 1947. He was a building contractor and master carpenter.

Survivors include his wife; three sons, Charles Driver of Bossier City, La., Kenneth Driver of Dover, Ark., and Don Driver of Midland; a daughter, Dorothy Price of Bowie; his mother, Iva Stocton Driver of Eastland; a brother, C.A. Driver of Kansas City, Mo.; three sisters, Oleta Hudgins of Midland, and Lou Turner and Bonnie Murray, both of Eastland; 15 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland.

W.K. Sullivan

Services for Wayland K. Sullivan, 92, of 500 N. Colorado St. will be at 10 a.m. Monday at First Presbyterian Church with Dr. Robert Boynton Smith officiating.

Burial will be in Knollwood Cemetery in Mayfield Heights, Ohio, directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Thursday in a Midland hospital after a brief illness.

Pallbearers will be James Alsup, Clovis Chappell, Bill Collyns, Walter Hill, Randell Lundy, Ross Reed and Gay Wisener.

East Texas needs wilderness areas

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman of the House Committee on Environmental Affairs said Saturday that Congress should pass a bill establishing wildernesses in 10 selected areas in East Texas national forests.

Without such a bill, said Rep. Fred Agnich, R-Dallas, the areas will be cleared.

Agnich said the 10 areas comprise 65,000 acres, less than 0.5 percent of the timberland in East Texas.

"The economic effect of preserving them from timber production will be negligible, according to the Forest Service," Agnich said.

Funeral director says he was born into the business

Ellis has seven pointers and setters that he trains to hunt for quail.

He and his wife have two grown daughters who live in Houston.

While he travels to East Texas to visit his daughters, Ellis said he's "always glad to get back to this uncultured wasteland, as I heard someone to say. That must have been a Yankee," he added with a giggle.

Ellis said he's the "last in line" for the family business. His daughters, although they worked in the office during their high school years, have other career interests.

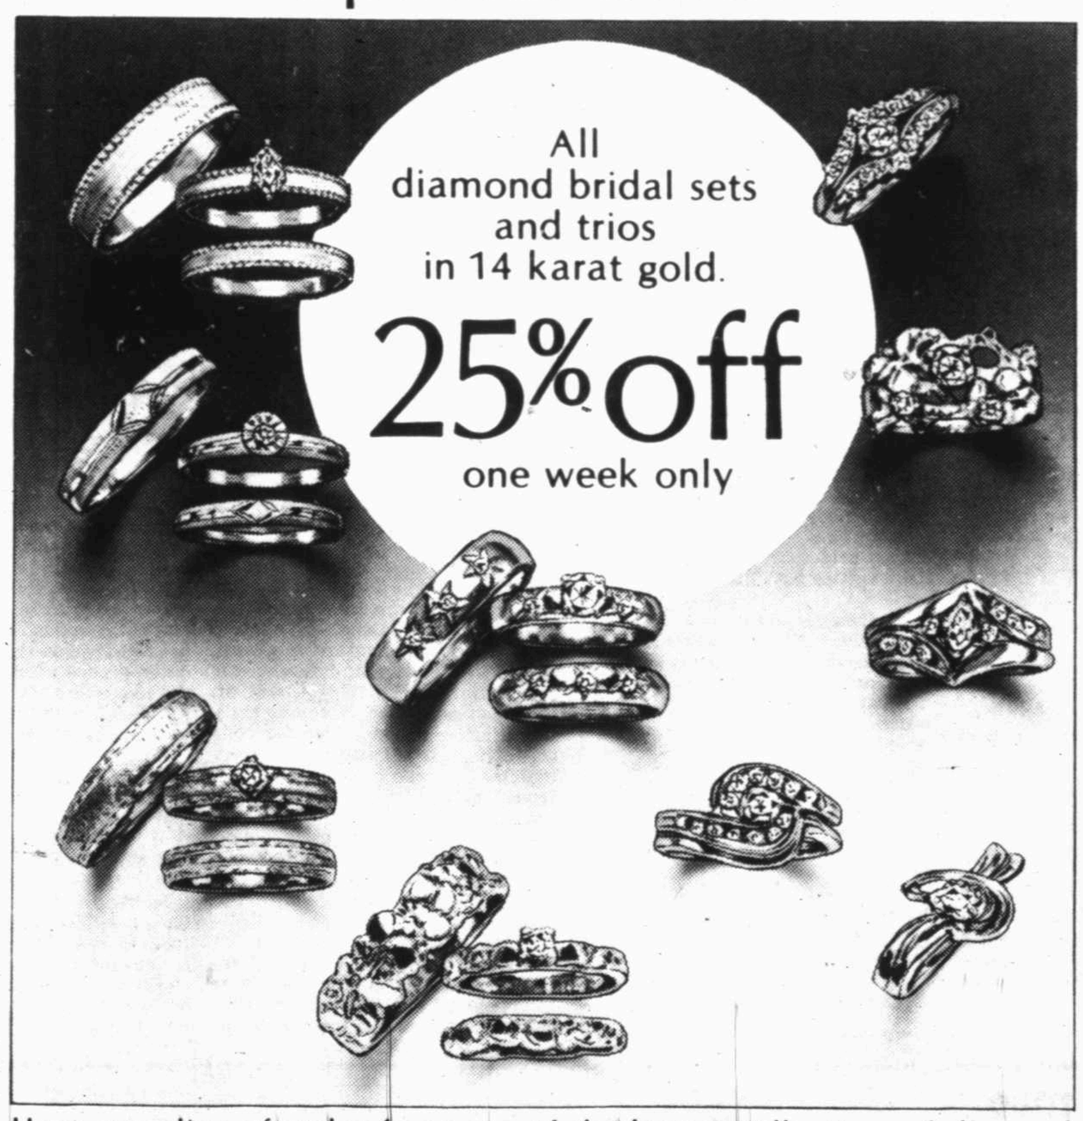

The Ellises have lived in the same house on North G Street since 1950.

"We've seen many changes," he said. "From an occasional person walking through the park across from our house to numbers of people and families today."

Although a pessimist in the past about Midland's future, Ellis said he's confident that Midland will continue to grow.

"The growth in Midland has succeeded my wildest dreams," he said. "When they would announce another new building going up, I predicted doom for Midland. Then I turned optimistic. I am confident in Midland."

THIS WEEK IN GOVERNMENT

Council will hold TESCO hearing

Texas Electric Service Co. representatives will be back in City Council next week, only five days after one public hearing on their proposed 16.1 percent systemwide rate hike.

This time the public hearing is set for 4 p.m. and will be before the City Council. And unlike the last time when they listened only to what others had to say, TESCO officials will be "showing" their side of the story in words and slides. The first time, on Thursday, the hearing was before the Public Utilities Commission.

The council then will consider suspending the proposed increase for 120 days, giving their representatives a chance to study the material and propose a different amount.

This hearing will be part of the regular council session that starts at 10 a.m. Of the 43-item agenda, almost one third are consent matters.

One items calls for installing stop signs at D and Harvard streets, Preston and Whittle Way, Preston and Wydewood, Shell and Tarleton, Belmont and Gist, and Belmont and Hicks.

Rest of the agenda is dominated by planning and zoning items.

Brian Martin as trustee is seeking specific use permits for sale of beer and wine and automotive fuel at a store on the northwest corner of Midland Drive and Sinclair.

Ciro Sanchez is looking for a zone change from 2-F (two family) to LR-1 (local retail) on the northeast and southeast corners of North Lamesa Road and East Nobles Avenue and the southeast corner of Lamesa and Parker.

At 2 p.m. a public hearing will be held on a zone change request by Fairy Myers from 3-C, commercial, to MH, mobile home district, on tracts along Clay and Benton streets, between Mulberry Lane and Orchard Lane.

A public hearing will be at 2:15 p.m. for a request from Lloyd Freeman for a specific use permit for a mobile home mini-park along Clay and Benton streets.

At 3 p.m., a public hearing will focus on a request by Harris and Walton for a zone change from AE, agriculture estate, to TH, townhouse district, LR-1, IF-3, single family district, and PD, planned district for housing, on an 80-acre tract along the east side of Midkiff Road, about half a mile north of Mockingbird Lane.

Midland County Commissioners

The rabies problem in Midland County and the posssible hiring of an expert for the July 7 Texas Water Commission (TWC) hearing in Odessa will be among items discussed in the 9 a.m. Monday meeting of the Midland County Commissioners' Court in the Midland County Courthouse.

Trappers Bill Powers and John Dorsett will discuss the rabies outbreak.

In the TWC hearing, Midland County commissioners and the Midland city councilmen will be arguing against renewed permits for Odessa to increase its dumping of treated waste water down Monahans Draw and through Midland County, where the effluent allegedly is contaminating the underground fresh water zones.

Odessa will be seeking to increase its effluent flow from 18.06 to 22.5 million gallons per day. Midland's forces will be asking the TWC to order Odessa to find alternative means, such as agricultural irrigation, to dispose of the water.

In other business, the commissioners are to:

—Consider a report on county roads by Albert Stewart, superintendent of the road and bridge department.

—Discuss roofing specifications for a metal roof for the county courthouse.

—Consider a file management system.

—Consider proposals by Richard Raney of Energy Management Systems of Texas on energy-cost savings for the courthouse.

—Consider signing a resolution which asks Gov. Mark White to declare Texas a drought-disaster area. Such a declaration would help farmers and ranchers get low interest loans to tide them through the dry spell.

—Discuss security system at Taylor Park Child Care Center.

—Discuss a mo[illegible]tail concept with Jack Mullins and Elton [illegible]aught, former Ector County sheriff.

—Conduct a 3 p.m. public hearing on proposed uses of federal revenue sharing funds.

MISD Board of Trustees

Bids on armored car service and campus improvement for Santa Rita Elementary School will be awarded during the regular meeting of the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the administration building, 702 N. N St.

Trustees also will continue a budget study and consider an annuity broker contract.

Other items on the agenda include approval of the revised MISD goals statements for accreditation, dedication of Whitman Street to the City of Midland and acceptance of gifts from Fannin Elementary School.

20 ways to help hold down your electric bill.

A checklist to help you save energy and money at home.

Energy Conservation Practices

The following low- or no-cost home conservation practices can help you save energy and money.

- ❑ Do not use air conditioning until absolutely necessary.
- ❑ Keep your thermostat set as high as possible. We recommend 80° in the summer. For added comfort, use ceiling or portable fans to circulate the air.
- ❑ Check your air conditioner filters each month to see if they need cleaning or changing. And make sure that the outside unit is free of grass, leaves and trash.
- ❑ When leaving home, turn off air conditioning. If away for two days or more, turn off water heater.
- ❑ If you use an automatic dishwasher, set water heater to 140°; otherwise, set temperature to 120° or lower.
- ❑ Use scrap insulation to plug air leaks from attic and around window air conditioners.
- ❑ Repair water leaks in pipes and faucets, and seal air duct leaks.
- ❑ Use drapes, blinds, shades, awnings or plants to block sunlight.
- ❑ Try to minimize traffic through outside doors.
- ❑ Economize in the kitchen. Plan meals so several dishes can be cooked in the oven at the same time.
- ❑ Save when you do laundry. Wash and dry only full loads of clothes.

Energy Conservation Measures

These home installations and modifications require an investment, but may return their cost to you in the form of savings on utility bills.

- ❑ Caulk and weatherstrip around doors and windows to reduce air leaks.
- ❑ Add insulation to ceilings, walls and floors.
- ❑ Insulate ducts, especially in the attic.
- ❑ Insulate hot water pipes in attic.
- ❑ Install insulation blankets on water heaters, especially in garage or basement.
- ❑ Investigate cost-effectiveness of storm doors and windows.
- ❑ Add solar-reflecting materials to glass doors and windows on east/west exposures.
- ❑ As a convenience, install a clock thermostat to automatically set air conditioner and heating unit to desired temperature. Even when you're away from home, the clock thermostat can control your air conditioner for more economical operation.
- ❑ If your central air unit is more than five years old, you may want to consider replacing it with one that's more energy-efficient. We recommend new units with a Seasonal Energy Efficiency Rating (SEER) of at least 9. For information on how energy-efficient equipment can save you money, ask your dealer or call Texas Electric.

education in brief

PBHS junior to study in Denmark

Barbara Lively

Barbie Lively, daughter of Mrs. Gary Richards of 2508 Bedford, and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Del Baucum of Odessa, was accepted as an for the American Scandinavian Student Exchange.

She will spend six weeks with a family in Denmark this summer.

Miss Lively, who will be a junior at Permian Basin High School, also will attend the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in Los Angeles this summer.

She is serving as Miss Texas Teen and was selected to appear in Young Community Leaders of America. She has been awarded the Community Service and Citizenship Award from Miss National Teenager.

Midlander graduates from UT

Mary Margaret Cloyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Cloyd of 3613 Sinclair, graduated summa cum laude in the Centennial Class of The University of Texas at Austin.

She was among 100 graduates to receive a bachelor of science degree in nursing.

Midlanders on OSU honor rolls

Two Midlanders were among 3,600 students earning recognition on academic honor rolls at Oklahoma State University for the 1983 spring semester.

James Grant Huggins and Stacey Claire Martin were named to the Dean's Honor Roll. Students named must carry a 3.25 grade point average with at least 12 credit hours. They must have no grade below a C and no incomplete courses.

Midlander makes dean's list

Barbara L. Lindley, of 5119 Sunnyside Drive, is among students named to the spring semester Dean's List at Pacific University in Forest Grove, Ore.

As a senior majoring in applied science and mathematics, she received a perfect 4.0 grade point average.

Midlander wins ETSU scholarship

Mark L. Taylor, a graduate of Midland High School, is the recipient of an East Texas State University Entering Freshman Scholarship for 1983-84. Recipients of these one-year, $500 scholarships will receive $200 for tuition and fees, $200 for housing and a $100 cash award.

Taylor is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mickey Taylor of 2809 Delano.

Missouri school graduates Midlander

Leslie Shepard, of 4700 Boulder, received a bachelor of arts degree from Stephens College in Columbia, Mo.

She completed her degree through the School of Liberal and Professional Studies, which encompasses the college's continuing education programs.

UTPB student listed in' Who's Who

Russell Joe Manning, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Manning of Midland, was selected to be listed in Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

Manning is a student at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Alumni group elects Midlander

Bernold M. "Bruno" Hanson, of Midland, was re-elected to the board of directors for The University of North Dakota Alumni Association and the UND Foundation at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks.

He also was re-elected as the UND Foundation's first vice president.

President of Hanson Corp., an independent oil exploration company headquartered in Midland, Hanson graduated from UND in 1951, with a bachelor's degree in engineering geology. He received the Sioux Award, the highest honor presented by the UND Alumni Association, in 1978. In 1980, he established a $10,000 endowment with the UND Foundation to provide scholarships for petroleum geology students.

Harvard graduates Midlander

P.F. Schweinfurth, of 902 Princeton, graduated cum laude with a bachelor of arts degree from Harvard University.

Midlanders on Baylor deans' lists

Four area students were listed on the Dean's Academic List and the Dean's Distinguished Academic Honor List at Baylor University for the spring semester.

Dennis L. Fletcher, of 3406 Cardinal Lane; Mark Miller, of 3302 W. Louisiana Ave.; and Praveen K. Reddy, of Big Spring, were named to the Dean's Distinguished Academic Honor List. Fletcher, a junior; Miller, a freshman; and Reddy, a sophomore, qualified by having a grade point average of 3.9 or higher while carrying 15 semester hours and ranking in the top 2 percent of their school or college.

Named to the Dean's List was Catherine A. Shelley, of 3220 W. Shandon. A senior, she qualified for the Dean's List by making a 3.6 grade point average or higher while carrying 15 hours a semester and ranking in the top third to seventh percentile of her school or college.

MHS graduates win scholarships

Mark Edgar and Margaret Stanley, both graduates of Midland High School, were awarded scholarships to attend Southwestern University beginning with the fall 1983 semester.

Edgar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arlen Edgar of 901 Cuthbert, received a $2,500 academic scholarship. Miss Stanley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Stanley of 2512 Seaboard, received a $1,000 academic scholarship.

Local girls attend cheerleader camp

Midland Christian School cheerleaders participated in the 1983 Big Country Cheerleader Camp at Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene June 13-17. Conducted by Southwest Camps of Cisco, the camp's staff included members of the National Cheerleaders Association.

Cheerleaders from MSC participating were seniors Amy McQuerry, Lisa Crocker and Laura Woolard, sophomore Lee Ann Holder and freshman Anissa Wyatt. Mitzi Williams is the sponsor.

Midlander will visit Greek schools

Cindy Dunkin, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Sauze of Midland, was selected to travel in Greece with the education department of Angelo State University.

The group of 30 students will be studying the Greek education system, making visits to schools in Athens, Patmos, Rhodes and Thessaloniki.

Local girl graduates from UT

Jodi Lynne McElligott, of 2806 N. Pecos, graduated from The University of Texas at Austin with a bachelor of arts degree in drama.

The College of Fine Arts awarded 139 bachelor's degrees at the end of the 1983 spring semester.

New Yorker named to UTPB post

ODESSA — Dr. Ernest D. O'Neil, 45, an educational administrator who has worked in educational improvement and reform in Bolivia the past five years, has been named professor and chairman of education at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, effective Aug. 1.

A native of Binghamton, N.Y., he is assisting the Ministry of Education and the Bolivian government in the improvement of rural education through teacher education and curriculum evaluation and reform in six consolidated rural schools throughout the country.

He holds a bachelor of science degree from St. Bonaventure University in Olean, N.Y.; a master of science degree in education from the State University of New York at Albany; and a doctorate in education from the University of Pittsburgh.

Museum of Southwest hosts new shows

Two new exhibits — "Progressions" and "Contemporary Lithography from Tamarind" — are on display at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

"Progressions," on display until Aug. 24 in the Stables Gallery, is an exhibit of recent work by the winners of last year's juror awards for the Southwestern Area Art Show. This annual exhibit affords the museum an opportunity to display works by regional artists. Each year the juror gives cash prizes for the best works in the show.

Bill Peterson, editor of Artspace Magazine, was last year's judge for the Southwestern Area Art Show. From the 56 pieces in the show, he selected six artists whose works were "created more in the spirit of pioneering and adventure, than traditional paintings that deal with western themes," to receive juror awards.

The recipients were Jimmy Green of Midland, Suzette Young-Fulesday of Odessa, Mark Lavatelli of Irving, Rick Williams of Austin, Future Akins and Ken Dixon, both of Lubbock.

On display until Aug. 14, the exhibit "Contemporary Lithographs From Tamarind" is a representation of the quality and diversity of recent work from the Tamarind Institute in Albuquerque, N.M.

The Tamarind Institute was conceived as a rescue operation for lithography which was suffering from the ill effects of midernization and lack of skilled artists and technicians. The goal of Tamarind, established in 1960 through the support of the Ford Foundation, is to serve as a center for training master printers, who are experiencing with new printing techniques in collaboration with artists.

The 10 prints on display represent the achievements of Tamarind and the significant contributions of contemporary lithography to the art world. Works by Philip Pearlstein, Fritz Scholder, Roy DeForest, Kenneth Price, Paul Brach, Jaune Quick-to-See Smith, Nathan Oliveira and Deborah Remington are different in their expression and subject matter.

Also on display at the museum is the Hogan Collection of works by the Taos Society of Artists, the 17th annual Southwestern Area Art Show and selections from the museum's permanent collection.

Hours are Monday-Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2-5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

After talking Anton Chekhov into letting her audition, Nina (Robin Stanton) moves him with her portrayal of a scene from his "Three Sisters," in "The Audition" segment of Neil Simon's "The Good Doctor," currently onstage at Theatre Midland.

'Good Doctor' closes Saturday

Midland Community Theatre's production of Neil Simon's "The Good Doctor" closes Saturday. The production will be staged today at 2:30 p.m., Thursday at 7:30 p.m. and at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday in Theatre I at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The play, an adaptation of short stories by the famed Russian writer, Anton Chekhov, introduces the audience to many people who inhabited Chekhov's story world — an army general and his wife, a young governess, an eager medical student, an actress, a priest, a banker and a woman of the evening. The audience gets a taste of what life might have been like in 19th century Russia.

Each actor plays a variety of roles calling for numerous costume changes. The cast includes Tim Ryan, Len Caryl, Loree FitzGerald, Risa Griest, Marguerite Keane, Mykel Mengert, Robin Stanton and John Taylor.

This production is partially funded by a grant from Wagner and Brown. For reservations call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

'Blue Lagoon' star heads to 'Dallas' this fall

From Wire Reports

The people who cook up "Dallas" keep stirring in new ingredients to keep the audience coming back. This fall, as an appetizer for the young female audience, "Dallas" executive producer Phil Capice will offer them Christopher Atkins, the tasty teen from the movie "The Blue Lagoon."

Three years ago, Atkins was spending the summer teaching kids to sail when the admiring mother of a student talked him into a mass movie audition. On the day he graduated from high school, he heard they wanted more tests. A week later he was flying to Fiji with Brooke Shields.

Atkins will appear in the third fall episode of "Dallas" as Peter Richards, a Southern Methodist University psychology major drawn into the Ewing web. And while we won't see as much of him physically as we did in "Lagoon" — or as we will in the November release of "Heaven," in which he plays a male stripper who makes love to older woman Lesley-Ann Warren — Atkins does have an all-shows contract for the first year.

Missing from the first few shows will be Ellie Ewing. Actress Barbara Bel Geddes is "recuperating beautifully" from emergency triple-bypass heart surgery, Capice said, but couldn't take the Texas heat this time of year. Scripts will be written around her until the filming shifts to Los Angeles locations.

Capice said he doesn't have a contingency plan in case Bel Geddes can't come back. The alternatives would be to re-cast another actress as Miss Ellie, eliminate the mother's role entirely, or leave her in limbo until something certain is known about Bel Geddes' condition.

Lois Childs, who played oil heiress Holly Harwood last season, won't be seen as much this year. And Howard Keel, who plays Clayton Farlow, will be seen a lot more. Beyond that, Capice claims no other major changes in the "Dallas" mix.

Capice and partners Leonard Katzman and Arthur Lewis have definitely decided against any reincarnation of the late Jock Ewing, J.R.'s daddy.

Last of Story Time series set for Tuesday

The last in the June series of Story Time programs at Midland Community Theatre will be held Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. in Theatre Midland's library, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Conducted by Allene Kleweno, a local storyteller, the programs, designed for children ages four through eight, run a half hour to 40 minutes long. Admission is $1 for children. There is no charge to adults who are accompanying children.

Mrs. Kleweno has had extensive experience in both school and public library work with children. She holds a masters degree in library science from the University of Denver and has attended workshops and seminars on storytelling and children's literature in California, Colorado, New Mexico and Texas. She has studied with Augusta Baker of New York City, considered to be one of this country's foremost authority's on storytelling.

'Where West Begins' opening in Snyder

SNYDER — An exhibit featuring the works of illustrators from the Diamond M Collection will open at the Diamond M Museum in Snyder with a free public reception today from 2-4 p.m.

The exhibit — "Where the West Begins" — contains paintings, drawings and sculpture by artists working as illustrators from the late 19th century until the present time.

Artists such as Frederic Remington, Charles Russell, W.R. Leigh and Frederick Yohn are representative of those who began working during the last years of the Old West. Their images of that West were based on personal experience.

Artists working in the 20th century carried on the traditions and carefully researched history, costume and Indian tribes to authentically recreate images of the West that have been romanticized until the present time.

Also on exhibit are books illustrated by Charles Russell, Remington and Harold Bugbee.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday-Friday and 1-4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. The museum is located at 909 25th St.

In addition, the Diamond M Museum is presenting a summer film series — "The American Short Story" — made available by the Humanities Resource Center of the University of Texas at Arlington Library.

Each story has been carefully translated to the screen to preserve the author's unique vision. All programs will be at 7 p.m. at the museum. An informal discussion will follow each.

Films and dates are: July 7, "Bernice Bobs Her Hair," F. Scott Fitzgerald; July 14, "Parker Anderson, Philosopher," Ambrose Bierce, and "I'm A Fool," Sherwood Anderson; July 21, "The Jolly Corner," Henry James; July 28, "Soldier's Home," Ernest Hemingway; Aug. 4, "Almos' A Man," Richard Wright, and "The Music School," John Updike; Aug. 11, "The Displaced Person," Flannery O'Connor; and Aug. 18, "The Blue Hotel," Stephen Crane.

This film series originally appeared on PBS and received major funding from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Art show scheduled for MC

A special art show is coming to Midland College's McCormick Gallery July 5-28.

The 1983 Texas Watercolor Society Show includes 80 works by present or former residents of Texas. The touring show was selected by Lawrence Calcagno from more than 500 slides submitted for consideration. Fifteen of the 80 works chosen were given awards.

One of the award winners is Midlander Warren Taylor, art instructor at Midland College. Taylor is a Fellow of the American Watercolor Society.

For this show, the McCormick Gallery, located in the Allison Fine Arts Building, will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. There is no charge.

San Antonio stages Fiesta show

SAN ANTONIO — Fiesta Noche del Rio, staged by a cast of 30 attired in authentic costumes, is being held every Tuesday, Friday and Saturday during June, July and August at the Arneson River Theater on the San Antonio River.

Show begins at 8:30 p.m. Tickets, priced at $5 for adults and $1 for children 6-12, are available at Joske's of Texas and at the theater on show nights beginning at 7 p.m. Proceeds go to benefit the Alamo Kiwanis children's charities.

The box office is located on Villita Street in downtown San Antonio. Children under 6 are admitted free.

'Whenever it Rains' at Globe

ODESSA — "Whenever it Rains" will be staged at the Globe Theatre July 1-2 and 8-10.

Written by Rick Smith with music and lyrics by Timothy M. Ryan, "Whenever it Rains" traces the birth and development of Odessa from the arrival of the Texas and Pacific Railway in 1881 through the discovery of oil and development of the oil fields in the '20s and '30s.

Admission is $6 for adults and $3 for students and senior citizens. For reservations or more information call the Globe Theatre at 1-332-1586.

The Call to perform at Rocky's

ODESSA — The rock group The Call will perform Friday at Rocky's in Odessa.

Lead singer and lyricist, Michael Been says of the group's music, "We're concerned with the breakdown of certain human values. There's a loss of love today, and we tried to reflect this in our music (second album cut "Modern Romans")."

For more information call Rocky's.

Summer Mummers opens Friday

The 35th annual Summer Mummers opens Friday at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave. The production runs Thursdays-Saturdays through Labor Day.

This year opening night is by invitation. All those who have been associated with Midland Community Theatre's Mummers in any manner are invited to call Theatre Midland, 682-4111, for more information or to make a reservation.

Executive has image problem

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Elektra Records' executive Tom Zutaut has a problem — wherever he goes, people think he should be in high school buying records rather than selling them.

Zutaut, West Coast director of artists and repertoire for Elektra, is 23 and has a mop of blond hair and a baby face.

"Anytime I use my American Express gold card for lunch the waiters always go to the phone to check if it's stolen — or if it's my father's card," he said. "It's hard to get people to take me seriously."

Zutaut, whose job is to scout new talent, also has troubles with artists' managers. "A lot of times managers who've only talked to me on the phone think I'm the guide or some assistant who's taking them to Mr. Zutaut's office," he said.

Actor still paying his dues for being brash, outspoken

From Wire Reports

LOS ANGELES — William Devane, the actor most people still identify as John F. Kennedy in TV's first docudrama, "The Missiles of October," joins the CBS night-time soap "Knots Landing" this fall as, (what else?) a Kennedy-like politician named State Sen. Gregory Sumner.

Forget that Devane won a second Emmy nomination for "Fear on Trial" as blacklisted radio personality John Henry Falk or played Sgt. Milt Warden in NBC's "From Here to Eternity" or has acted and directed a score of notable plays and films. Got a Kennedy part? Call Devane.

"I can't believe, after all these years, they still want me to play this same damned role," Devane says.

BUT HE will do it because he says he needs visibility to get the good parts, and because he's paying dues for being a bad boy, a demanding, outspoken actor, in an industry where nice guys finish first.

"I took a nasty stance and said damn it, I've done that and I don't want to repeat myself. So I stopped all the traffic coming my way," he said. That included the seven-hour NBC Kennedy project coming up which Devane says has no inherent drama, only romanticism and "a lot of kissy poo crap going on." And it includes this year's Bobby Kennedy-Jimmy Hoffa drama.

"It was four hours of people yelling at each other," he says. "They sent it (the script) to my house and I said, 'Christ, I can't read this. It's like the Manhattan phone book.'"

BUT Devane says he begged CBS to let him do its six-hour Bobby Kennedy movie coming up this year. "And it's like I'm non-existent, like this black guy walked in and wants to play Bobby Kennedy," he says. "I said, wait a minute, this is Bill, you know (in the unmistakable Bobby Kennedy accent). I'm the guy whoah talks like this an', ah, looks like this. And they said, 'You're not right for it.'"

What they really mean, Devane says, is that he's made people mad.

An intense actor, Devane will seize the motivation, and sometimes the director, by the throat to get the role right. For him, the thing is the character, not making friends. And that has hurt him.

"In television you work with a lot of babies," Devane says. "In movies everybody works off conflict. But in televison your job is to be nice."

WHEN he did the TV movie "The Other Victim," about the husband of a rape victim, Devane went to a famous psychiatrist for weeks to get the role right. "The psychology of this guy had to be that (after the rape) he thinks his wife is dirty, that she brought it on herself, which required me to get really heavy with her. And that made the director nuts," he says.

"So I used him to keep my anger for the role, and I ate his face off in front of everybody. It created a very bad situation and I paid for it for two years. But I was good."

Just before that, in NBC's version of "From Here to Eternity," he made other important enemies by being a self-described "pain in the ass." He saw Milt Warden one way, the network saw him as another Robert Conrad.

Actress Anne Archer and Midland-born Terry Jastrow celebrate the successful completion of their movie at the Midland premiere of "Waltz Across Texas."

Locally-made film will waltz across television screens

Midlanders who missed seeing themselves in the Midland filmed "Waltz Across Texas" will have another chance.

The 99-minute movie will be shown on Spotlight in July. The story of a Midland-born wildcatter, played by Terry Jastrow, and a feisty Eastern geologist, played by Anne Archer, will be televised throughout the United States on the cable channel.

"Waltz Across Texas" will begin July 17 at 7 p.m. It will also be shown July 20 at 5 p.m., July 23 at 3 p.m., July 26 at 9 p.m., July 29 at 7 p.m. and July 31 at 2:25 a.m.

Spotlight, which shows here on cable Channel 5, is owned by Times-Mirror Cable.

Morning Star-Fest set for Saturday

KERRVILLE — The Morning Star-Fest, Texas' first annual contemporary Christian music festival, will be Saturday at the Quiet Valley Ranch in Kerrville. Gates open at noon and the music begins at 2 p.m.

Artists performing include Kathy Troccoli, the Latinos, Michael James Murphuy, Twila Paris and Carmen and the Imperials. Other special events will be taking place during the festival.

Performances will take place at an outdoor amphitheatre. Those attending need to bring lawn chairs or blankets to sit on because the theater has no permanent seats.

Quiet Valley Ranch has an extensive campground area which is available from noon July 2 to 11 a.m. July 3. No pets allowed. There is no additional charge for use of the facilities at the campground.

Tickets are available at Rudd Christian Bookstore in Midland and Odessa and Sonshine Corner in Midland. Ticket price is $15 for adults, $7.50 for children ages 6-12 and children age 5 and younger are free. A group discount rate is available. Tickets will be $2 higher at the door. Only 6,000 tickets will be sold.

Midland artist first place at show

Midland artist and jewelry designer Sylvia Hampton was awarded first place in the Durango Colorado Artists Association's 1983 juried art show held June 17 in the new Durango Art Center.

The award was given to "Golden Geometrics," a 14 karat gold ring with a 35 carat topaz. Along with the blue ribbon goes a one-man show in 1984 at the Durango Art Center.

Ms. Hampton received a degree in art from Texas Tech University and has continued her studies at the University of Colorado at Boulder. She also has studied with various artists in San Francisco and London.

While teaching art at Midland High School in the early '70s, Ms. Hampton became interested in the "lost wax" technique of jewelry making. She has since studied the technique with Santa Fe artist Don Wright.

Her specialty is in utilizing recycled gold, such as company service pins, to create new, free-form objects. She has received numerous awards from regional shows and holds memberships in the Midland Arts Association, Texas Jewelers' Association and the Society of North American Goldsmiths.

'A Private View' chronicles dynasty

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Summer reading for movie followers...

"A Private View" is a gracefully written memoir by Irene Mayer Selznick, who spent the first half of her life as a member of two film dynasties, then became an achiever on her own.

Already a Hollywood princess as daughter of Louis B. Mayer, Irene married the ambitious David O. Selznick and stood by him in the glory years that culminated with "Gone with the Wind." Then the marriage soured, and Selznick confessed he was having an affair with actress Jennifer Jones.

Mrs. Selznick writes that "Jennifer hadn't caused our situation. If it hadn't been her, it would have been someone else; there was something deeply wrong with the marriage."

After the divorce, Mrs. Selznick moved to New York and became producer of "A Streetcar Named Desire." In a battle with the director, Elia Kazan, she blasted: "I've survived Louis B. Mayer and I've survived David O. Selznick. It's no use. You better lay off." Kazan did.

"Elsa Lanchester Herself" is a rare and frank autobiography by the sprightly actress, who recounts her strange but enduring marriage to Charles Laughton. They managed to remain together until his death in 1962 despite his string of homosexual relationships and her own heterosexual ones.

Cigar-puffing movie mogul fits Hollywood stereotype

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Samuel Z. Arkoff may be the last of the stereotypical movie moguls, complete with mile-long cigar.

Although he just turned 65 and has produced 500 films, including "Beach Blanket Bingo" and "Drag Strip Girl," he has no plans to retire. In fact, he and his son, Louis, 33, are making a new film, "Rafts," budgeted at $7.5 million.

"That's the most money I ever spent on a picture," marveled the film executive in his penthouse office at the west end of the Sunset Strip. "You take those beach party pictures. They cost between $350,000 and $750,000. But we had the Pacific Ocean, and it was free."

"Rafts" has the Deschutes River in Oregon, but it can be costly, especially when it has to be rerouted to wreck a large house. That's part of the wild happenings of the comedy that stars Tim Matheson ("Animal House") and a crew of young actors. The plot: a quartet of students from a moribund college compete against major schools in a raft race on a raging river.

Sam Arkoff and the late James Nicholson were founders of American International Pictures, which spawned filmmakers like Roger Corman, Jack Nicholson, Francis Coppola and Robert DeNiro and cheaply made films that exploited the youth market of the 1950s and 1960s.

"Who was it — James Wolfe who said 'You can't go home again'?" Arkoff mused. "Oh yeah, Thomas Wolfe. Anyway, I feel like I am coming home again, because 'Rafts' is being released by Orion Pictures."

Explanation: American International was swallowed three years ago by Filmways, much to Arkoff's distaste. When Filmways flirted with bankruptcy, it was taken over by Orion, which had been formed by defectors from United Artists.

"Even though the company is different, it still has vestiges of American International," said Arkoff. "The exchanges are manned by people I hired. Most of the sales managers worked for me."

Arkoff has not been idle since leaving American International. He went into business with his son, and they have produced such films as "The Winged Serpent" and "The Creeper."

"Louis has been around movies since the age of 8," said Sam. "That was when my partner, Jim Nicholson, put him on a couple of soap boxes and showed him how to thread a 35mm projector. Every Friday and Saturday night we had a bunch of kids in our living room, watching movies. That's how I kept my finger on what kids were thinking about during the 1960s."

What he found out was that kids were buying the Andy Hardy approach to parental relations — "You'll notice we never had any parents in the Beach Party pictures."

Bushy eyebrows led to dastardly deeds

COXVILLE, Ind. (AP) — He was known as a skunk, a swindler and a scoundrel. For more than 50 years, he defied law and order in the Old West, lying, stealing and cheating his way to fame.

During a movie career that spanned six decades, Tex Terry, now 81, nearly always played the part of a cowboy villain. He blames his long list of dastardly deeds on his bushy eyebrows.

"They're the reason I was always typecast as the bad guy," Terry said, pointing to the eyebrows. "I like it. I had a lot of fun."

Terry was signed to his first movie contract in 1922 while he was doing a vaudeville act at the Orpheum Theater in Los Angeles. His dark, rugged features would make him a familiar foe to many of Hollywood's "lawmen" and leading "good guys" for many years.

Portraying the antagonist, Terry starred with many well known actors, including Fred MacMurray in "Oregon Trail," Alan Ladd in "Badlanders" and John Wayne in "War Wagon," which was the 10th and final picture Terry did with Wayne.

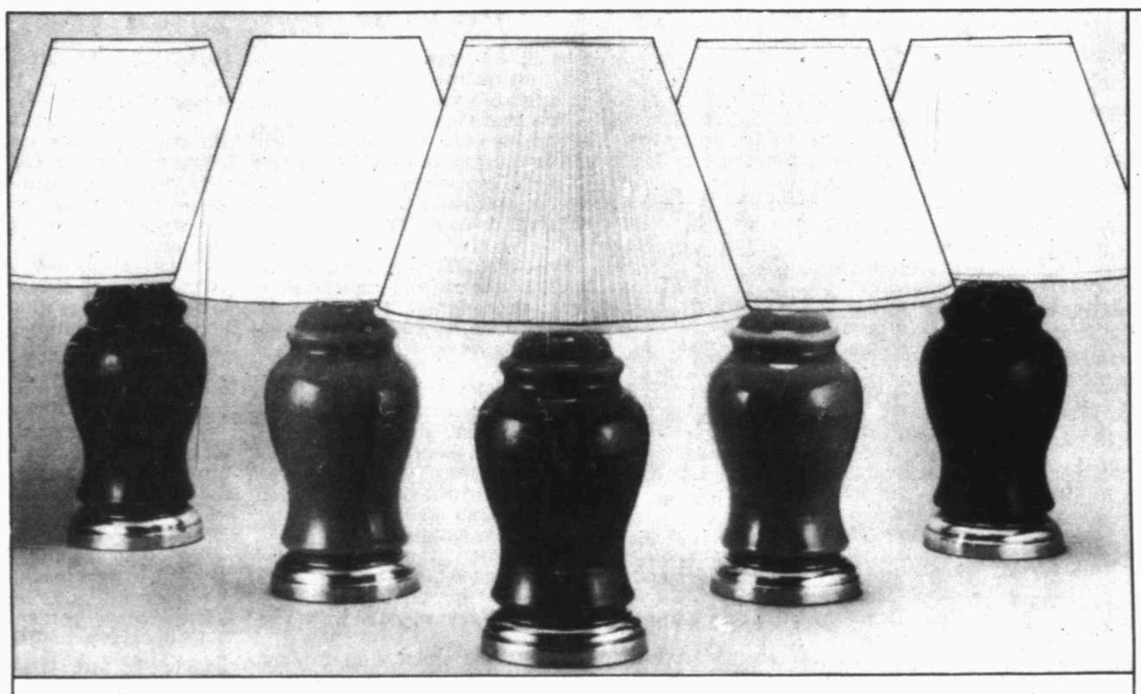

"I also did just about every picture Gene Autry ever made," Terry said in an interview at his western Indiana home next to "Tex's Longhorn Tavern."

In all, Terry said he acted in about 314 parts. He not only led a life of crime on the silver screen, but he also appeared in many westerns on television in the 1950s and '60s. Some of the shows included "Have Gun Will Travel," "Death Valley Days" and "Gunsmoke."

Terry's strong physique also made him a popular choice as a stuntman and, he said, he did stunts in more than 300 movies and TV shows.

"I've been hit, knocked off of cliffs, jumped off of buildings, stagecoaches, wagons, anything they wanted," said Terry.

High-tech future

The day is gone when a community such as Midland can sit on its industrial base and watch the rest of the world through rose-tinted glasses. The age of technology-based industries isn't coming; it's here and it's changing the world around us.

During the past 20 years or so, high technology industries have pumped vast amounts of money into several localized economies around the nation. One good example is California's Silicon Valley. With unemployment rates at the current high levels, communities subject to fluctuations in the economy — like this oil-based one — literally can't afford to ignore the high-tech opportunity.

There's a problem, though. High technology industries currently are sought by about every locale in the country and they can be, and are, rather choosy. That means a community hoping to attract high-tech industries must be willing to offer incentives.

Midland Chamber of Commerce general manager Grant Billingsley says the chamber is supportive of the effort to attract high-tech industries. But, he concedes, realisitically Midland would not be the first choice of industries in Texas.

High tech industries are attractive because of their image as "clean" companies — non-polluting, for the most part and consuming little in natural resources. But by their nature, technolgy-based firms demand locations that can offer excellent air transportation, an available relatively low-cost labor pool, excellent higher education institutions and agreeable climates. The Midland-Odessa region fills the bill in many of those areas but there are other cities in Texas that can offer more.

Texas Instruments in Midland is one good example of what the high-tech field can offer to a community. Midland's success in attracting others undoubtedly will depend on the initiative of local leaders to combine their efforts to offer prospective companies as much support as is possible through tax incentives, utility development and the like.

Efforts to diversify Midland's economic base in the past have enjoyed a degree of success. But more is needed to cushion the community from the ravages of economic downturns. We believe high technolgy holds an important key to Midland's future and wholeheartedly endorse the efforts of the Chamber and others in making that intriguing tomorrow a reality.

Another View:

Measures misguided

Jim X is 19, graduated from high school last year and pays a rather high auto insurance premium because young male drivers are considered poor risks.

Jane Y, also 19, pays less for auto insurance because young women have fewer accidents. Is this sexual discrimination or a sound business practice?

A man and a woman working for the same amount of time in similar jobs pay equal amounts into their pension funds. However, when they retire the woman gets a smaller monthly pension because women generally live longer. Is this sexual discrimination?

The insurance industry says no, that it is following proven actuarial tables and sound business practices by calculating the risks in certain groups of individuals.

Feminist groups call these methods discrimination and are pushing bills in Congress to change the proven ways by which the insurance industry figures its pricing and benefit structure.

Supporters of these so-called unisex insurance bills claim that they would end discrimination against women by the insurance industry.

"Insurance can be and should be based on factors that can be modified: smoking and drinking habits, weight, driving practices, lifestyle," says Judy Goldsmith, president of the National Organization for Women. However, Goldsmith and other unisex insurance supporters are probably misguided.

By equalizing auto insurance premiums, women would be subsidizing the lower rates that young men would pay because the young males have the worst driving records. According to the independent American Academy of Actuaries, the extra cost to women for this alone would be $700 million annually.

Additional payments of $360 million a year more for life insurance would also subsidize lower premiums for higher-risk males.

The advocates of unisex insurance reforms would require an increase in women's monthly pension and annuity benefits equal to men's benefits.

The impact of such reforms could cripple the insurance industry, costing it $14.5 billion. The industry's biggest objection is the retroactive provisions in the proposals. That is, higher benefits would have to be paid to those persons who have stopped paying premiums but are now collecting benefits.

"By doing this you have to provide insurance you didn't collect premiums to provide," said Stephen Kellison, executive director of the AAA.

Moreover, the impact on public retirement systems would be so great that the extra billions of dollars such reforms would cost would have to be borne by the taxpayers.

The end result of unisex reforms, we fear, is that everyone would be paying higher premiums.

Since the insurance industry is so competitive, we would rather leave insurance premiums and benefits to the give and take of the marketplace rather than subject them to so-called social legislation devised in Congress.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Pope's Poland trip tilted policy

WASHINGTON — Pope John Paul's visit to Poland is now history, and like all such events it is being studied exhaustively by U.S. intelligence agencies.

Jack Anderson

In fact, a top-secret interagency group has been meeting regularly since last December to assess what's happening in Poland and advise President Reagan on the proper U.S. response. The group consists of representatives of the Pentagon, State Department, Commerce Department, National Security Council, CIA, Treasury and Agriculture Department.

My sources tell me the interagency group was split on what policy the Reagan administration should follow on Poland. The debate was intense.

But eventually, the president was presented an options paper, which he signed. The options he approved, once implemented, could bring a relaxation of sanctions against Poland.

One source told my associate Lucette Lagnado that the basic quarrel among the interagency group was between the "detentists" and the "troglodytes." The first group favors better relations with the Polish military regime; the other urges a continued hard line.

Meanwhile, each side is examining the intelligence reports on the pope's visit and its aftermath, hoping to find evidence that will support its own recommendations. Indeed, the same event will doubtlessly be interpreted differently by each side to argue its case.

Now that Reagan has selected his options, don't be surprised if the losing side surreptitiously takes its case to friendly members of Congress and the media. Neither detentists nor troglodytes are likely to concede defeat gracefully.

The main difficulty, of course, lies in predicting what the repercussions from the papal visit will be in Poland itself. There are two likely scenarios, according to reliable sources.

Many Poles were hoping for a "miracle" occurring as a result of the pope's visit. That clearly hasn't happened, so there is bound to be a general letdown as the Poles' euphoria over the papal visit is swallowed up in the drab reality of life under the communist regime.

Realistically, though, the Poles have understood that outright revolution was simply not in the cards — the Soviet Union would move in and crush it.

Despite the underlying despair, according to this scenario, the pope's munist Party, while at the same time stifling the dangerous Solidarity movement and the yearning for independence it has aroused.

These sources see Jaruzelski as the big winner from the papal visit, which was a calculated risk for the military regime. He started out by winning a sort of truce in the months before Pope John Paul II arrived. With the exception of disturbances last May, there was a period of relative calm as Jaruzelski cleverly played on the people's fears that the pope would not be allowed to come.

But Jaruzelski needs more than just a temporary truce. He must convince Moscow, the outside world and especially the Polish people that he is in control and will remain so indefinitely. Only in this way can he finally turn his attention to the country's staggering financial and economic problems.

The general has no illusions about winning over the hearts and minds of his stubbornly anti-communist populace, much less the goodwill of Western leaders like Ronald Reagan. But he'll settle for acceptance in both cases.

Jaruzelski's pitch to the West will be that ideology should take a back seat to mutually profitable trade. An important part of this appeal will be the threat of default on Poland's enormous foreign loans, which would cost Western bankers more than Poland.

His pitch to the disenchanted Polish people will be that, like it or not, the communist regime is there to stay, and life will be a lot easier for all concerned if they accept this as a fact and drop their futile opposition.

Some administration sources predict that, in pursuit of this twin goal, Jaruzelski will make some dramatic gesture soon — perhaps declaring a general amnesty for political prisoners, or finally lifting martial law. Such a move would encourage the detentist camp in Washington to argue for an end to sanctions.

Administration sources expect Jaruzelski may also try to steal the very word "solidarity" from the independent union. They note that Polish officials have been using the word increasingly in their speeches.

Adolf Hitler tried a variation of this Orwellian trick in World War II, when the underground painted "V's" on walls all over Europe. The "V" stood for the English word victory, or the French victoire, of course, but the Nazis dug up a little-known German word, viktoria, and claimed that's what the "V's" stood for. It fooled no one, nor will Jaruzelski's pathetic appropriation of "solidarity." But like Hitler, the general doesn't care.

GEORGE F. WILL

Court action means more coming

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court's ruling in the New Jersey reapportionment case will have only a negligible effect — other than a substantial nuisance effect — on New Jersey and 16 or so other states. But the decision is dismally fascinating as an illustration of how judicial activism is apt to produce, over time, judicial extremism.

George F. Will

After the 1980 Census, New Jersey's legislature reapportioned the state's 14 (down from 15) congressional districts. The average population of the 14 is 526,059. The new districts differed from that figure by — on average — just 726 persons, or 0.1384 percent. The largest district had 527,472 persons, the smallest 523,798, a difference of 3,674 persons or 0.6984 percent. Close enough? No, say five members of the Supreme Court, that difference violates constitutional values.

A New Jersey group went to court, charging that this plan violates Article I, Section 2, of the U.S. Constitution, the relevant portion of which says only that members of the House of Representatives shall be apportioned among the states "according to their respective numbers." A lower court said the microscopic differences between districts under New Jersey's plan were intolerable. That court said the deviations from absolute numerical equality were not "unavoidable" and were unacceptable, especially in light of the fact that an alternative plan had a maximum population difference between districts of 0.2470 percent less than the plan New Jersey adopted.

Now the U.S. Supreme Court has squinted at its constitutional micrometer and agreed. New Jersey has not approached absolute numerical equality "as nearly as practicable," and therefore has not made a "good faith effort" to satisfy the constitutional standard. Here we have the majority of justices jerking a leash on a state legislature because it allows congressional districts to differ, on average, from perfect equality by 0.1384.

It was not until the 1960s that the Supreme Court plunged into this political thicket and discovered that the Constitution mandates "one man, one vote." That slogan meant that a vote in one district should have the same weight as a vote in another district.

But what would count as the "same weight" — how close would be close enough? In 1964 the Court said: "Mathematical exactness or precision is hardly a workable constitutional requirement." But the Court has an inclinatic.. toward ever-finer fine-tuning of society. And now it has found in a minute difference a difference of constitutional dimensions.

Justice Brennan wrote the opinion. He was joined by Marshall, Blackmun, Stevens and — what is a nice lady doing in a crowd like this? — O'Connor.

Justice White, joined in dissent by Burger, Powell and Rehnquist, notes that the Census Bureau estimated the inexactitude in the 1970 Census as 2.3 percent. That is more than three times the maximum variation between districts in the plan the Court calls unconstitutional, and more than 16 times the average variation of a district from the "ideal" of perfect equality.

Anyway, the 1980 Census error in New Jersey is unknowable, and certainly is not spread evenly over all districts. Hence, totally equal districts are an impossibility.

In the early 1960s the Court was concerned with places such as Georgia, which had not reapportioned for 30 years. In many states, 50 percent differences in populations were common between districts. In 1983 the Court is disrupting New Jersey over a maximum difference of 0.6984 percent.

Under the standard requiring an "as nearly as practicable" approach to absolute numerical equality, even Rhode Island, whose two districts have a difference of 0.002 percent (95 persons), can be attacked. As White says, any districting plan can now be attacked "by anyone with a complaint and a calculator."

Of the majority's numerical absolutism, White says: "Such sterile and mechanistic application may bring the principle of 'one man, one vote' into disrepute." But mechanistic jurisprudence is encouraged by reducing constitutional values to slogans like "one man, one vote." Surely it would be sufficient for the Court to forbid only apportionment inequalities so severe that they prevent a majority in a state from correcting them.

The Court's majority says that any other standard (than "as near as practicable" to absolute equality) would mean "a high degree of arbitrariness." But there is extreme arbitrariness in the majority's equality fetish.

Having rammed constitutional values into the slogan "one man, one vote," the Court now desperately embraces a ludicrous absolutism because anything else opens the Court to a river of appeals about alternative standards.

This judicial extremism is the Supreme Court's defense against the consequences of its own activism. The defense will be unavailing because now, after every Census, the Court must sit in judgment on innumerable deviations from perfect equality.

Papal visit provides spirtual, emotional support

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — Pope John Paul II provided an extraordinary spiritual and emotional upsurge for fellow countrymen and women in what can only be described as a superstar performance. To honor the Polish-born pontiff's eight-day tour of his homeland, millions turned out to cheer him.

When the pope several times denounced the "arrogant use of power" by the communist regime installed with Red Army power, its spokesmen sought glibly to say that the pope had deviated from a religious itinerary. Not at all. The pope promised the puppet regime nothing in advance and simultaneously taught the West a lesson: knuckling under to communist demands will always whet their appetites.

Pope John Paul helped cap his triumphal tour with a visit by Lech Walesa, a founder and leader of Poland's now outlawed Solidarity union. Walesa was accorded an audience with the pope on the last day of the pontiff's visit and brought his wife and children along. The regime compelled Walesa (jailed for a year) to drive south from Gdansk where Solidarity was created. His family and he were followed closely by police goons in black leather coats.

Cheers from millions of Polish throats rang out to encourage Walesa along the 350 miles of road he travelled to Krakow where the pope had served as Cardinal Carol Wojtyla until 1978. His meeting with Pope John Paul was secret but Solidarity banners fluttered openly from multi-thousands who defiantly risked arrest. Communist guns can control a nation but they can't keep a population of 36 million devout Roman Catholics in jail.

Vast throngs met the pope when he flew into Warsaw from the Vatican. He followed custom by kissing the ground upon alighting and the crowd chanted: "Long live the pope." They also sang an old Polish song, "May He Live a Thousand Years." From out of nowhere, or so it seemed, forbidden flags emblazoned "Solidarity" appeared. Police and hated paramilitary units called "Zomos" watching the crowds seemed stunned but did nothing, apparently under orders.

Hearst correspondent Vic Ostrowidzki, who has been covering the papal visit as he did the earlier trip in 1979, described the sequence of events as "emotional and moving." We must remember that the pope, who suffered in World War II with his countrymen, defied the Nazis and wound up in a concentration camp. His feelings and love for his countrymen and women and their tribulations run deeply. The communist atheistic regime is imposed by the U.S.S.R. on perhaps the most devout nation in the world and the pope is Christ's Vicar on Earth.

Stalin supposedly once asked with a sneer: "How many divisions does the pope have?" His successors can just look around at the millions the pope drew to outdoor masses — two million in Krakow alone — and update their military textbooks. Moreover, when the pope concluded his sermons, the crowds lifted their fingers in V-for-Victory signs. The cops normally don't like that, either. While Pope John Paul was present, the police didn't try any roughhouse stuff. Obviously, that can come later. The pope, from all the surly suggestions made by regime people, may never be allowed back.

Shortly after the pope called on the two million-strong crowd in Kracow to oppose "the arrogant use of power," the pontiff arranged a surprise meeting with Communist Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski. It was Jaruzelski's second session with the pope, the first having come earlier and more formally in the visit. There was no reason given for the hurry-up meeting, only a few hours before the tired Walesa family arrived for an appointment.

These episodes, as important as they can turn out to be, can not possibly detract from the amazing turnout generated by the pope's appearance, his courageous words and appeals to fellow Poles to remain steadfast in their belief in God and Polish nationalism. The pope's stamina has been under severe strain, especially in view of the second return to his homeland where martial law has only recently been lifted but can be easily reimposed by a puppet regime.

Yet as Vic Ostrowidzki reported — he speaks Polish, was born in Poland and has relatives still living there — the pope's good humor never departed as he smiled and waved to enthusiastic onlookers. Following the huge turnout in Krakow — which had been preceded by a mammoth religious celebration to the Black Madonna of Czestochowa, holiest shrine in Poland — crowds burgeoned virtually every step of the way.

In their envy and fury, communist activists demanded to know why Poles don't turn up for party meetings nor offer made-in Moscow slogans. When police informers told the unvarnished truth the other day that Poles "hate communists," they were fired off the payroll. That little caper added to the long jobless list in Poland but it's a true story worth repeating.

Poland has endured partitions; Hitler, Stalin, Khrushchev and now Yuri Andropov, the long-time KGB chief who came to power when Brezhnev died. It may well have been Andropov who gave the signal to murder the pope which fortunately failed. The Poles, led by the pope, know the character and capabilities of their oppressors far better than we in the West. They are immediately under the gun and under the yoke but are prepared to risk all for the precious ideals of being Polish and being free.

A young girl scout marching 50 miles to honor John Paul II summed it up best to Ostrowidzki. She said that the pontiff left Poland with a toothbrush five years ago to return as the pope.

"He has come back as our one hope for a better life," she mused. "The way things are I am afraid he will not be able ever to return."

No one knows what the future holds for any of us, but Poland and the pope certainly deserve better prospects.

Space Week celebrates more than moon mission

By GARY S. TRENT

Midland's planned observance of Spaceweek '83 is being organized by Gary S. Trent and others. A Midlander for two years, Trent was born in Tennessee and raised in California and Florida. He studied aerospace engineering and music at Shasta College in Redding, Calif., and School of the Ozarks in Branson, Mo. A veteran of the Navy, he was on the Gemini Recovery Team. He's now a journeyman electrician.

July 20, 1969, America, and indeed the world as well, picked up its anxiety level, sat before the flickering raster of millions of television sets and felt its pulse rate rapidly building to a crescendo. Amid chirps and garbled voices emitting from the speakers, everyone tuned an ear and carefully focused on the vision appearing before their eyes. Americans on the moon! We dreamed of this day and worked hard to make it happen. It took our minds off the troubles and trials of Vietnam, made us think of the ingenuity of modern technology and, yes, reinforced our desire to join them in their great leap for mankind.

As a heritage, we looked upon July 20, 1969, as a signal. That signal was to sound the beginning of the Space Age for everyone. Truly we have done the impossible, proof positive that we deserved to flex our newly-earned wings in the vacuum of space. Star Trek embellished the power of that dream, Skylab confirmed it.

In 1975, Professor Gerrard O'Neill, Department of Physics at Princeton University, astounded the Technological Society in his book, "The High Frontier." O'Neill seriously suggested that we could build full-fledged cities in space, not merely a tin can, nor even a space station...a CITY! Ten thousand people living and working over 175,000 miles in space, supplying electrical power, scarce metals and new medical facilities. That book and dream became the nucleus of the L-5 Society. L-5 is the scientific tag for that point in space, over 175,000 miles away.

I heard about this "society" over network news. Space freaks and space cadets...that was the last word. L-5 as an idea lacked credibility and it was doubtful that these ideas would be realizeable, at least not before the year 2000. I dismissed them and didn't read the book. L-5 by '95. Ha!

In 1977. L-5 had grown to over 4,000 members under the careful guidance of Carolyn Hensen, a scientist in L-5's hometown of Tucson, Ariz. I finally read the book, thinking all the while that I just wanted to know what it was all about, never dreaming that they really were going to do something, or that these people knew exactly what they were talking about.

I joined L-5 in early '78. Today, there are over 29,000 people who have joined. We realize that the salvation of the planet is at stake here — the economic salvation of our way of life, and rebuttal to the Club of Rome's Limits to Growth. There are no doomsayers in the L-5 Society. Instead, we see a bright, limitless future, filled with the most fantastic, marvelous energy sources, elimination of the ugly practice of strip mining and the beginning of the greatest exploitation that mankind has ever dreamed.

The L-5 Society has championed the cause of private enterprise all the way to the State Department, finally building a membership of people who believe that it is in our power to develop space in the same way that America's founding fathers looked upon this as the promised land, a place to grow in freedom, and plenty. Just as America offered the settlers a place to expand to their potential, space offers us the place to fill the needs of a growing population, limitless energy to fuel our industrial complex and material that is retrievable by robotics, automated space vehicles, boosted towards Earth, intercepted by manned "space-tugs," and taken to processing plants in the mysterious mix of alpha-numerics, L-5.

Spaceweek '83 is more than a national observance of the Apollo 11 mission, more than the celebration of 200 years of manned flight and definitely more than the Silver Anniversary of a government agency formed for the purpose of developing a new extension of man's existence. NASA, Apollo 11, balloons and airplanes — man's eternal outreach to reach his full potential. It is faith that mankind can and will survive, will overcome the obstacles of the present.

Spaceweek '83 is the embodiment of the marvelous achievements of the recent past, a celebration of the present shuttle era and a point from which to look out to the fantastic future and the race to defeat defeatism with its dual nature of encouraging "live for today for tomorrow we die in nuclear oblivion!" It is the professed goal of the L-5 Society to point out that future, to endear America's youth to the potential of American solutions to America's problems, to lift up the standard of excellence which made America the world leader in aircraft manufacture and will make America the world leader in SPACECRAFT MANUFACTURING!

This is just a minute part of what Spaceweek '83 means to me. And after hearing for years that America is imperialistic, decrepit and corrupt, I have to say it isn't a true statement and it's all right to be a proud American. Fly your wings in celebration July 16-24 here in the Tall City where the sky is not the limit!

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

■ Readers are invited to submit letters to be considered for publication. They may be on any subject, but should not be slanderous or defamatory. They must be signed by the writer and must include the writer's correct mailing address and a telephone number at which the writer may be contacted during the day, either home or office.

No letter will be published anonymously and names will appear. Addresses and phone numbers are for verification only and will not be published.

Writers should be as concise as possible and the right to condense letters is reserved. They will be published as soon as possible after being received.

They should be addressed to: Letters to the Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702 or brought to the newspaper's editorial department.

God-fearing city

To The Editor:

Your editorial on May 20, suggesting it might be well for us to all pray with the farmers and ranchers for rain was very good.

Perhaps some prayers of repentance might also be in order at this time. On May 12 there was dancing in our city streets in celebration of a play designed to make mockery of the laws of God. The Bible says, "Whoremongers and Adulterers God will judge." (Hebrews 13:4) In my humble opinion it is a fearful thing for a city to authorize the use of its streets to promote that which is immoral.

For those who would suggest that attendance of clergymen lends credability to such a performance, we must remember that at the crucifixion there were religious leaders who stood by to mock words that had been spoken by the One who died there. (Matthew 27:41)

Let us hope the God-fearing citizens of our community will pray for mercy as they also pray for rain.

Postponements

To The Editor:

Your May 31st issue covering the ring life of fighter Gerry Cooney was truly interesting. I was unaware of the postponement record of Cooney in the early part of his career until your article brought it to light.

Even so, your sports editor evidently failed to realize that there were two postponements in regard to the Holmes-Cooney matchup. The first, of course, was the postponement in March of 1982, for three months to June 11, 1982, (the date which your column gave as the actual day of the bout). Cooney again postponed the June 11, 1982 matchup for another three months. The bout between the two boxers was finally fought and won by Larry Holmes on Sept. 16, 1982.

Thank you for finally pointing out the fact that Gerry Cooney, though built up to be the "Great White hope," has never come close to that level of boxing simply because of a lack of formidable opponents in the past and a lack of opponents period in the present.

Skunk situation

To The Editor:

A geat big Texas-size 'thank you' to Deputy Constable Bennie Matlock for his aid and concern over our own recent problem with a rabid skunk.

Deputy Matlock not only answered our questions and advised us, but he made follow up phone calls. Perhaps this was only in the line of duty, but we detected much more in his attitude and mannerisms. He obviously takes pride in his job and shows a real concern for the problems he faces daily. We thank him for his politeness, his caring attitude, and all the help he gave us.

Thanks, too, to Ed Todd for last Sunday's informative article in the MR-T concerning the constable's office. We are a lucky people.

Old Glory

To The Editor:

I want to commend the Midland Reporter-Telegram for the beautiful picture on the front page of the newspaper June 14, 1983, in observance of Flag Day. No one who read the newspaper that day could have missed the special event. It was a most impressive picture of our grand old flag, and the picture (covering half of the front page) gave an impressive image of our local newspaper.

Now let's do the same for a special event that is approaching our great nation and our extraordinary community of Midland, Texas — the birthday of America, July 4th! Let's honor America on that special day by flying our flags at our homes and by participating in the community activities of the day. Be proud of your heritage and show it by flying Old Glory.

Our community is known throughout the United States as the richest (financially) city in America per capita. Why not let it be known, also, as the richest city in America per capita in American-Flag-Flying-Per-Home? If you don't own a flag, buy one! It will be one of the best investments you'll ever make. Just remember that our grand old flag is a symbol of the freedom that you enjoy each day of your life.

Please join us Midland Reporter-Telegram and Midland, Texas, in the campaign to fly our flags on July 4th and to participate in the excitement of our nation's birthday. Let's face it — if our local newspaper is interested in the community events and helps promote them, the citizens become interested because the interest and the support are contagious! Help us, Midland, to become one of the most patriotic communities in American in 1983. What better birthday present could we give to America on her 207th birthday?

Petro-persecution

To The Editor:

The oil business can claim to be the second most persecuted industry in the history of the world. The Supreme Court has just confirmed the legality of the most draconian legislation ever enacted against any business in this country. Under the guise of "Windfall Profits Tax" this excess excise confiscates private property with the intention of:

(1) the socialistic redistribution of wealth, and

(2) the buying of votes.

Both the Congress and the Supreme should be ashamed!

Oh yes; the most persecuted business group in the world's history? The gladiators.

Note of thanks

To The Editor:

We the members of the Tall City Lion's Club and staff of the Black Advisory Council wish to thank Lt. Wicker and the Traffic Division of our police department for so graciously assisting us in our annual Juneteenth Celebration Parade.

We want you to know that we sincerely appreciate your patronage in helping us have a controlled parade. It was the largest ever featured in the city of Midland and truly the greatest participation that we've ever had.

Thanks a million. May God bestow his blessings on each of you.

BILL MODISETT

Is Texas' brucellosis brouhaha really necessary?

Bill Modisett

Thomas Jefferson, the nation's third president and a political thinker remembered for the imperishable wisdom in his observations, once wrote, "I had rather be shut up in a very modest cottage, with my books, my family and a few old friends, dining on simple bacon, and letting the world roll on as it liked than to occupy the most splendid post which any human power can give."

Furthermore, the man who started the Democratic Party at a time when it stood for something other than what it is identified with today, is remembered for counseling "that government is best which governs the least, because its people discipline themselves."

An interesting thought, particularly when you consider that the Texas cattle industry has been placed in virtual cold storage because of a long-standing feud between a rancher and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, coupled with the failure of the 68th Legislature to pass a bill of questionable virtue enacting more stringent controls on brucellosis.

The rancher, R.J. Nunley, opposed Texas' brucellosis program on the basis that it was unconstitutional as applied to him and refused to allow government inspectors on his ranch to scrutinize his herd. From there, the conflict evolved to the point of pitting the State of Texas against the USDA. The department threatened to quarantine the state and Gov. Mark White called a special legislative session to bring state guidelines on the disease into harmony with federal requirements and to stave off damage to the state's cattle industry. Texas Farm Bureau has estimated a quarantine could cost the cattle industry $130 million a year. That put the Legislature in the position of needing to enact a brucellosis bill quickly.

There's just one question remaining. Was it all really necessary? Some in the cattle industry don't think so and their point is well taken.

Brucellosis — which causes cattle to miscarry and can be contracted by humans as undulant fever — is a threat. It's always been a threat. But the general consensus is that the disease will always be around to some degree; that it will not be eradicated regardless of the extent of the effort. Any program legislators enact probably will be of marginal value, at best, and likely will cost more than its effect will be worth.

Cattlemen's organizations have battled brucellosis for years. It's simply a matter of survival. They have waged war on the disease — and effectively controlled it — because that course of action was dictated by sound business judgment. Without a battle plan against the disease, herds would become infected and cattle would die. A cattleman doesn't make much profit on dead cattle.

Now the government may truly believe that Texas needs a stronger brucellosis program, but the it would be difficult to justify by past actions. Other states with higher brucellosis counts have not been quarantined. On the other hand, perhaps the government just wanted to flex its muscles to show rancher Nunley and the Lone Star State who's boss. If that's the case, trouble's brewing.

When government loses sight of its proper role, it can become a dangerous instrument. When government forgets that its purpose is helping man if he needs help, and staying out of his way on other occasions, it can step on those it's supposed to protect.

Did the Texas cattle industry encounter too much government in this "brucellosis crisis?" Was the federal government a little bit out on a limb in this instance?

I wonder what Thomas Jefferson would have said.

U.S. Postal Service supervisor's dream may come true

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Booker T. "Billy" Green, a 43-year-old U.S. Postal Service supervisor who was suspended and then fired from his job after he was indicted for the slaying of R.J. Morris Sr. in 1981, may get his job back.

The federal Merit Systems Protection Board, which last Nov. 30 heard Green's appeal, this month issued its ruling. It reversed the USPS's firing of Green on July 22, 1982 — just before he was acquitted by a jury of voluntary manslaughter.

"I think I'm still dreaming," Green said of the ruling, which was rendered by William Wayne Carnes, who presided over the hearing. "The Lord's got things working out the way He wanted them worked out...I had read my horoscope (earlier) and it said something about good news...I had a good feeling that the Man up there was looking after me."

However, when or if Green may be reinstated in his $27,000-a-year job is uncertain. The USPS has until July 25 to file its intent to contest the decision before a three-member Merit Systems Protection board in Washington, D.C. If no appeal is made, then Carnes' decision is final, said Paula Latshaw, Dallas regional director of the board.

"WE'RE LIKE A trial court," Ms. Latshaw said. "Everything is appealable. We just hear the case. We made the initial decision. It won't be final...until July 25" if no further appeals are made.

Midland Postmaster Bill Williams, who succeeded retired Postmaster David Holster after Green had been terminated, offered no comment on the dispute due to "extenuating circumstances."

The Green-USPS conflict began after Nov. 14, 1981, when Green, in what he claimed was self-defense, shot Morris, 50, with a rifle in the aftermath of a dice game and a scuffle in southeast Midland. Green claimed Morris was armed with a pistol. Subsequently, Green turned himself into the Midland police, was arrested, charged with murder and indicted on Nov. 18. Two days earlier, Green had been placed on administrative leave. On Nov. 24, he was placed on indefinite suspension by Holster.

In the case's first trial in 238th State District Court in March 1982, Green was convicted of manslaughter rather than murder. But after the jury was unable to agree on punishment, Judge Vann Culp declared a mistrial due to the hung jury. Two of the 11 jurors reportedly had voted to place Green on probation, and nine reportedly had voted to mete him the maximum 20-year punishment for the offense. The 12th juror had been dismissed earlier in the trial after she had broken her foot.

Booker T. Green

"YOU CAN'T have a conviction without punishment," defense attorney H. Thomas Hirsch had said. Punishment range for murder is five years to 99 years or life in prison.

On June 23, Green was indicted for voluntary manslaughter, which carries a 2-to-20-year punishment range. But on July 22, four days before Green's manslaughter trial was to begin, Holster terminated Green. The jury in the July 26-31 trial in 238th State District Court found Green "not guilty."

In his ruling, Carnes noted the Postal Service's reason for Green's indefinite suspension two days after the shooting was "reasonable cause" to believe he was guilty of a crime for which imprisonment can be imposed.

Green's notice of suspension proclaimed that his active duty with the Postal Service "would not be in the best interest of the public, good morale, or efficient service." The courts and the board have upheld similar suspensions, Carnes wrote in his decision.

"The shooting incident and the pending criminal actions received widespread notoriety from news coverage," Carnes wrote. "The agency (Postal Service) contended that the adverse publicity surrounding the shooting and appellant's status as a postal supervisor had caused its public image and the morale and efficiency of the work force to be diminished."

"THE INDEFINITE suspension was properly imposed," Carnes allowed. "...The seriousness of the crime involved, the evidence in support of notoriety, the agency's public image, and the morale and efficiency of the work force are sufficient to justify an indefinite suspension until the criminal charges are resolved...."

Carnes upheld the suspension until what turned out to be the acquittal stage in the second trial.

However, Carnes reasoned that the firing of Green was "improper."

"It appears that the outcome of the mistrial, the new manslaughter indictment, and the adverse news coverage caused the agency's 'reasonable cause' to elevate to such a point that the agency was so sure appellant would be found guilty, convicted, and imprisoned for that crime that it went forward with the removal without awaiting the outcome of the criminal proceedings," Carnes wrote.

"I find that the agency elected, prematurely, to proceed with the cause of action dependent on the criminal proceedings rather than appellant's conduct. The subsequent acquittal in court thus was fatal to the agency's action."

Carnes wrote that he is not convinced that "news and media publicity can give rise to a cause for instituting an adverse action against an employee."

AS TO GREEN'S charges that his suspension and removal were discriminatory against him due to his race (black), Carnes said Green's "discrimination arguments were basically general and vague." Green offered "no evidence of discriminatory motive or intent nor any evidence to support his allegation that he would have been treated differently if he were not black."

While that case appears to be drawing to a close, Green has initiated another. In early May, he filed in federal court a discrimination suit against the USPS and asked for reinstatement to his job, back pay and benefits and $50,000 in damages.

In that pending suit, Green holds that he was subjected to "public embarrassment and humiliation as a result of being wrongfully suspended because of his race and color."

Further, Green says the USPS rules and regulations which allow an employee to be suspended if he is charged with or indicted for a crime punishable by imprisonment "are general, non-specific and can be used capriciously for the purpose of eliminating Negro and other minority employees of the United States Postal Service from government service."

Local events planned for SPACEWEEK celebration

July 16-24 has been designated as SPACEWEEK'83 in a nationwide tri-celebration of the 25th annjversary of NASA's formation, the bicentenial of manned flight and the 14th anniversary of Apollo's landing on the moon. More than 100 cities are planning to sponsor special events in celebration of this national observance.

Though Midland has a full agenda of programs and events on the drawing board for SPACEWEEK, organizers have several serious hurtles to overcome.

"We desperately need support from Midland's citizens and businesses," said Gary Trent, L-5 member and driving force behind Midland's SPACEWEEK program, "and we still need to find a suitable place to base our nine days of programs and exhibitions. Some of the exhibits are delicate and need an air-conditioned environment but we'll consider any possibility."

Another difficulty being faced by the SPACEWEEK committee is lack of a security team to moniter the different events.

"There is the potential of having 10,000 people or more at a few of the events," Trent said. "We need an organization to volunteer its services to supervise the security."

Events planned for the nine-day celebration include a special concert by the pop group Ventures, a Star Party sponsored by West Texas Astronomers, a moon rock display by the Gem and Mineral society, model airplane displays by the High Sky Radio Control Club, a youth education program covering the history and technology of space flight, and exhibits by NASA, Rockwell International and Texas Instruments. An air show is also planned involving the Confederate Airforce, the Experimental Aircraft Association and a number of commercial airlines.

For more information or to volunteer, call Gary Trent at 682-2298.

Tanner scores 19 aces in Wimbledon win

Wilander, Kriek join rapidly growing list of upsets

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Roscoe Tanner, the big server who slipped down the tennis rankings, came thundering back Saturday to upset Mats Wilander of Sweden and make the last 16 in the Wimbledon championships.

The 31-year-old left-hander slammed 19 aces past his 18-year-old opponent, who was seeded fifth, and won 6-7, 7-5, 6-3, 6-4.

Tanner was one of the most exciting players in the world in 1979, when he was runner-up to Bjorn Borg at Wimbledon. Right now he is ranked 140th in the world and prior to Wimbledon he had won only four matches this year.

Another surprise winner was 23-year-old Robert Van't Hof of Dallas, Texas, who upset 11th-seeded Johan Kriek 6-3, 7-6, 6-1.

Kriek, South African born and a resident of Naples, Fla., said he had not been feeling well. He later pulled out of a men's doubles match.

THE BIG guns of the men's competition went booming on.

John McEnroe, the second seed, battered Brad Gilbert 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 and Ivan Lendl, seeded third, eliminated Jakob Hlasek, an exiled Czech who lives in Switzerland, 6-1, 6-2, 6-7, 6-4.

Jimmy Connors, defending champion and top seed, had already reached the last 16 Friday.

Tanner, the cannonball server, handed a grass court lesson to Wilander, who was trained on clay and made his reputation as a baseliner.

"I have been working very hard in the last six months to gear my game to get better and better on grass, because for me Wimbledon is what tennis is all about," Tanner said.

He added he played Wilander like he used to play Borg.

"I was able to anticipate Mats' shots because he is so like Borg in many ways. Especially on the backhand passing shots, they are identical," he said.

TANNER'S BOOMING services began to knock Wilander sideways in the third set. He uncorked two aces in the last game of that set.

The American stepped up his service as the match neared its climax and aced Wilander five times in his last four service games.

Other third-round winners were Bill Scanlon, the 14th seed. Pat Cash of Australia, Mike Leach and Sandy Mayer.

Scanlon defeated Tim Gullikson 6-4, 6-4, 6-3 and earned a meeting with McEnroe in the next round.

Of the original 16 men's seeds, only seven reached the last 16. Two, Jimmy Arias and Gene Mayer, withdrew before the tournament began because of injuries. Seven more have been gunned down in the fierce competition of the first week.

MARTINA NAVRATILOVA, runaway favorite to retain her women's crown, served and volleyed her way to a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia for a place in the last 16.

Since the defeat of Chris Evert Lloyd by Kathy Jordan Friday, critics have seen the women's tournament as a one-way race.

Navratilova quipped: "The way some people are talking, why not hand me the trophy now and do away with the tournament? But I'm not taking too much notice of any of this."

Nine of the 16 women's seeds have gone through as expected. Two were eliminated Saturday.

Jennifer Mundel, 21-year-old South African left-hander, put out No. 9 Sylvia Hanika of West Germany 2-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Eva Pfaff of West Germany edged Britain's Jo Durie, the No. 13, 7-6, 7-5.

That was a big disappointment for the center court crowd, who hoped to see the tall British player break through to the big time following her success in reaching the semifinals of the French Open.

But Britain still had a contender — 37-year-old Virginia Wade, the 1977 champion, who came back from a set down and 1-5 to master Andrea Leand 3-6, 7-6, 6-2.

HANA MANDLIKOVA of Czechoslovakia, seeded eighth, outplayed Louise Allen 6-1, 6-3.

Virginia Ruzici of Romania, seeded 12th, beat Sabina Simmonds of Italy 6-1, 3-6, 6-2.

Claudia Kohde of West Germany, seeded 16th, won 6-2, 6-3 against Barbara Jordan, elder of the sisters from King of Prussia, Pa.

Sunday was scheduled as a rest day. The All-England Club planned to stage all singles matches — eight in the men's singles and eight in the women's — Monday.

Cubs defeat Gators

BEAUMONT — The Midland Cubs have gotten off to a good start in the second half of the Texas League baseball season. Saturday night they posted a 6-2 victory over first half champion Beaumont to win the series, 4-2

Midland pitcher Stan Kyles went the distance, giving up six hits and two unearned runs. With the help of 16 ground ball outs and three double plays, he ran his record to 4-7 on the year.

With a 3-0 lead going into the top of the third, Carlos Lezcano connected for his third home run of the season to score two runs. Lezcano went 3-for-2 for the game.

Rick Baker, with two doubles, drove in three runs.

The Cubs picked up their final run of the game in the fourth inning to make it 6-0 before the Gators could get on the scoreboard. The two unearned Beaumont runs came in the bottom of the inning.

In other Texas League action Saturday night, Tulsa defeated Shreveport 3-2 in the first game of a doubleheader. The second game was under way when a one-hour rain-delay delayed its finish. San Antonio and El Paso were playing late and the Arkansas-Jackson doubleheader was rained out.

Today, the Cubs travel to San Antonio where the begin a six-game series. On July 2, the Cubs return to Midland to host El Paso in a six-game series.

Zoeller leading Memphis Classic

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller lipped out a chip for an eagle, then tapped in for a birdie on the final hole, finishing off a 5-under-par 67 that provided him with a one-stroke lead Saturday after the third round of the $400,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic.

Zoeller, a former Masters champion who is enjoying the best season of his career, completed 54 holes over the 7,249 yard Colonial Country Club course in 203, 13 strokes under par.

Chip Beck, who played in the last threesome with Zoeller, broke into a canter around the 18th green after he holed a 35-40-foot putt from off the green for eagle-3. Beck, who had led the first two rounds in his quest for the first title of his career, was one shot back at 204 after the eagle completed a round of 71.

"I had a gut feeling about it," Beck said. "It's luck to make it, but I had that feeling. Man, that's exciting, particularly since nothing seemed to have gone right for me most of the day."

He was tied with Larry Mize, also at 12 under par. Mize shot a 69 in the hot, humid weather.

MIKE SULLIVAN and Tom Purzter were next at 205, 11-under and only two shots back going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize. Sullivan shot a 67 and Purtzer had a 68 that included 31 on the back nine.

J.C. Snead, with a 68, and John Fought, with a 70, were at 206. Tim Simpson and Sammy Rachels followed at 207. Simpson shot 68 and Rachels 69.

That placed nine men within four strokes of the lead with 18 holes to go. Larry Nelson, who won the U.S. Open title last Monday, was not among them. Nelson, in the chase for the first 45 holes, played his back nine in 38 and was six back at 209.

DEFENDING CHAMPION Ray Floyd and Lee Trevino were far back at 213. Floyd had a third-round 74 and Trevino matched par 72.

Zoeller, the 1979 Masters champion, won the Heritage Classic earlier this season and lost in a playoff at the Colonial National Invitation at Fort Worth, Texas.

He started the day three strokes off the pace, but ripped the front side in 32 and took the lead at the turn.

His only bogey came from a bunker on the 14th. But Zoeller, one of the game's longest hitters, birdied both of the long holes coming home, scoring from 10 feet on the 16th, then putting his second shot near a bunker on the 18th.

His chip for an eagle hit the hole, and he tapped in for the birdie that provided him with the lead.

"One shot is good, but that's not enough. I'll have to shoot 68 or better to win tomorrow," he said.

Dodgers nip Astros, 2-1

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ron Roenicke bunted for a hit with the bases loaded and one out in the bottom of the 11th inning, scoring Pedro Guerrero on the suicide squeeze and giving the Los Angeles Dodgers a 2-1 victory over the Houston Astros Saturday night.

Guerrero singled with one out in the 11th off Houston reliever Bill Dawley, 5-2, who came on in the seventh, and went to third when Mike Marshall doubled. Steve Yeager was walked intentionally to load the bases and, on a 1-0 pitch, Roenicke bunted in front of the plate and Guerrero slid home with the winning run.

Tom Niedenfuer, 4-0, who pitched the 11th, was the winner. Starter Jerry Reuss pitched 10 innings, giving up 11 hits and striking out 11, the most by a Dodger pitcher this season.

Reuss blanked the Astros on four hits through six innings before yielding the tying run in the seventh. Phil Garner led off with a single and was forced by Jose Cruz. Ray Knight and Bill Doran followed with singles to bring Cruz home.

Steve Sax gave the Dodgers a 1-0 lead by slamming Bob Knepper's first pitch of the game for his fourth home run of the season and second in two nights. Knepper allowed only five more hits before leaving for a pinch hitter in the seventh.

Invaders clinch title, 17-16

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Fred Besana passed for 227 yards as the Oakland Invaders capitalized on turnovers by the Boston Breakers to win 17-16 Saturday and clinch the Pacific Division title in the United States Football League.

There were more than 5,000 no-shows from the paid crowd of 30,396, but those who came saw the Invaders gain the playoffs with a 9-8 record. The Breakers, 10-7, still have a slim chance to win a wild-card playoff spot.

Boston, which got 122 yards from halfback Richard Crump, crumbled from its own mistakes in the third period.

The Invaders recovered a fumble on their 48 and moved to the Breakers' 3-yard line with the help of three penalties. Ted Torosian bulled into the end zone from one yard out on the first play of the final period to give Oakland a 17-13 lead.

BOSTON LATER had a touchdown nullified by a holding penalty and settled for a 24-yard field goal by Tim Mazzetti that closed the gap to 17-16 with 6:01 left.

The Breakers had snapped a 10-10 halftime tie in the see-saw battle when Mazzetti kicked a 20-yard field goal with 5:04 left in the third period.

Besana opened the scoring when he capped a 59-yard drive by firing an eight yard pass to halfback Louis Jackson in the end zone for Oakland's first touchdown with 5:34 left in the first period.

Mazzetti's 35-yard field goal early in the second period cut the Invaders' lead to 7-3.

Oakland marched from their own 35 to Boston's 18 on the next series, but Kevin Shea's attempted field goal was blocked by cornerback Charles Harbison. Boston linebacker Ben Needham scooped up the ball and sprinted 75 yards for a touchdown and 10-7 Breakers lead.

Oakland lost the ball again on its own 21 two plays later when Jackson fumbled a pass, but Mazzetti missed a field goal from the 38. Besana then completed seven of 10 passes to take Oakland from its 21 to the Boston 5 and Shea booted a 22-yard field goal to tie the game.

Generals 21, Wranglers 14

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Tight end Sam Bowers caught eight passes for 139 yards and Thomas Lott, playing because Herschel Walker had blurred vision, ran for 110 yards and scored on a three-yard burst to lead the New Jersey Generals to a 21-14 United States Football League victory Saturday night over the Arizona Wranglers.

Walker, who missed three offensive series in the first half and didn't play in the third quarter after he was poked in the right eye, finished with 33 yards on nine carries to boost his league-leading total to 1,738 yards.

Walker returned early in the fourth quarter to score his 18th touchdown of the season on a one-yard leap as the Generals played their final home game before a Giants Stadium crowd of 30,612. The Generals averaged 33,822 for their nine home games.

New Jersey, winning two straight games for the first time this season, boosted its record to 6-11, while Arizona lost its ninth straight to fall to 4-13.

Lott, making his debut in the backfield, gave the Generals a 7-0 lead on his TD run late in the first quarter. He had 18 carries as he became the only New Jersey player other than Walker to rush for more than 100 yards in a game.

The Generals went ahead 14-0 on Dwight Sullivan's 20-yard run early in the second quarter. Bowers had key receptions in two scoring drives, hauling in a 41-yarder to set up Lott's TD and a 15-yarder preceeding Sullivan's.

Generals quarterback Jeff Knapple completed 12 of 24 passes for 184 yards with one interception, while cornerback Terry Daniels had two of the Generals' three interceptions against Arizona quarterback Dan Manucci. Calvin Murray and Darryl Clark each scored on one-yard runs for Arizona.

Wyland posts highest 10-meter score ever

By LARRY SIDDONS
AP Sports Writer

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Wendy Wyland rallied from a poor start to post the highest score ever by an American woman in 10-meter platform diving and successfully defend her championship at the National Sports Festival Saturday.

On the first full day of competition in the annual gathering of America's top young amateur athletes, the semifinals in boxing were marked by upsets, as three defending champions were beaten, while national Golden Gloves champ Jesse Benevides and world lightweight champ Pernell Whitaker won.

Wyland, an 18-year-old from Mission Viejo, Calif., qualified for the U.S. team in the Pan American Games by scoring heavily on four of her last five dives to roll up a 459.66 total, three points better than her old U.S. mark.

Her Mission Viejo teammate, Megan Neyer, was second at 410.46, and also earned a Pan Am berth. Diving is one of five sports using the festival to choose Pan Am squads.

Wyland, the world chamnpion on the 10-meter tower, won the event at last year's Sports Festival in Indianapolis and was tops in preliminaries Friday.

On Saturday at the Air Force Academy pool, she fell behind in the early mandatory-dive rounds as Kim Engel, of Miami, Fla., forged into the lead, largely on the strength of her second dive, when she received three perfect scores of 10 and several 9s.

Wyland had just one 10 all day, on her third dive, but exploded in the late going with her optional routine.

"I got behind after Kim came up with those big scoring dives," she said. "But I never felt like I was out of it because my strongest dives are my optionals."

Engel faded in the late rounds and finished seventh of the eight divers.

Ron O'Brien, the Mission Viejo coach generally regarded as the nation's top diving instructor, said the U.S. women's diving team this year could be the deepest since 1968.

"I think our international teams for 1984 are going to be the strongest they've been in a while," he said. He predicted that American women could win at least two medals in the springboard and platform at the Olympics next summer. Mickey King in 1972 and Jennifer Chandler in 1976 were the last U.S. women diving medalists.

Rangers defeat A's 8-3 for fifth straight victory

By The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Bill Stein drove in four runs with a pair of singles and Frank Tanana and John Butcher combined on a six-hitter Saturday night as the Texas Rangers defeated the Oakland A's 8-3 for their fifth straight victory.

Tanana, 3-1, gave up all three Oakland runs on five hits and struck out six in six innings. Butcher earned his fourth save with three innings of scoreless relief.

The Rangers, who have won five games in a row and 12 of 16 — they are 19-11 against the American League West — scored five runs on three hits in the second inning.

Oakland's Bill Krueger, 6-6, walked three batters to load the bases. Bucky Dent and Billy Sample each drove in runs with bloop singles and Stein lined a two-run single to chase Krueger. Buddy Bell's sacrifice fly off Steve Baker made it 5-0.

Davey Lopes gave the A's two runs in the third with his eighth home run of the year following Ricky Peters' infield hit.

Stein, who has driven in seven runs in the last two games, capped a three-run Ranger fourth with his second two-run single. Jim Sundberg walked to begin the uprising, Dent singled, Sample doubled to score Sundberg and Stein followed with his hit.

The A's made it 8-3 in the sixth when Lopes singled, took second on a fielding error by Texas right fielder Larry Parrish and scored on Jeff Burroughs' double.

Oakland's Rickey Henderson, who stole his 32nd base in the first inning, left the game in the fourth with bruised ribs. Henderson was injured while making a diving catch in center field to end Texas' five-run second inning.

American League

Brewers 7, Indians 2

MILWAUKEE — The Milwaukee Brewers, held to one hit by Cleveland's Juan Eichelberger through seven innings, erupted for seven runs in the eighth, keyed by Ned Yost's two-run pinch single, and defeated the Indians 7-2.

Roy Howell, who doubled in the fifth inning, was Milwaukee's only baserunner until Robin Yount doubled and scored on a single by Roy Howell to start the Brewers' eighth.

Charlie Moore walked with one out, chasing Eichelberger, 3-6. Pinch hitter Ben Oglivie, who did not start because of a bruised heel, greeted Neal Heaton with a single to tie the score 2-2 and Paul Molitor followed with an RBI single to give the Brewers the lead.

The victory went to Jim Slaton, 7-2, who pitched four innings of hitless relief. The Indians scored both their runs in the third off Bob McClure. After an infield hit by George Vukovich and a walk to Chris Bando, Mike Hargrove and Manny Trillo followed with RBI singles.

White Sox 8, Twins 3

CHICAGO — Carlton Fisk homered and added three singles to lead LaMarr Hoyt and the Chicago White Sox to a 8-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Hoyt, 9-7, scattered six hits and struck out nine as he picked up his seventh victory in his last eight decisions. Hoyt was lifted in the eighth inning and Juan Agosto finished up for his fourth save.

The Sox staked Hoyt to an early lead with three runs in the second inning and another in the third.

Fisk hammered his eighth homer of the season in the seventh inning.

Angels 9, Royals 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Bobby Grich belted two home runs and Brian Downing drove in three runs with a homer and single to power the California Angels to a 9-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Rod Carew, returning from a three-game absence due to a back injury, added three singles to raise his American League-leading average to .413.

The Angels pounded three Kansas City pitchers for 17 hits, enabling Mike Witt, 4-5, to win his first game as a starter since last Aug. 23. Witt gave up six hits in seven innings before yielding to John Curtis.

The Angels opened the game with a pair of runs in the first inning off Keith Creel, 0-3, on a single by Carew and Downing's fourth home run of the season. They made it 3-0 when Grich led off the second with a homer.

Tigers 9, Orioles 3

BALTIMORE — Chet Lemon drove in five runs with a pair of homers and relief pitcher Doug Bair earned a victory in his first appearance with Detroit to lead the red-hot Tigers to a 9-3 victory over the slumping Baltimore Orioles.

The Tigers, who won their third game in a row and 22nd in the last 30, scored three runs off loser Jim Palmer, 2-2, in the second inning on singles by Lance Parrish and Larry Herndon, a sacrifice fly by Glenn Wilson and Lemon's 10th home run of the season.

Yankees 4, Red Sox 1

BOSTON — Steve Kemp drove in three runs with a homer and a double and the New York Yankees weathered an eighth-inning Boston threat to beat the Red Sox 4-1.

Kemp doubled home a run in the first inning after singles by Roy Smalley and Graig Nettles and belted his ninth homer of the year into the Boston bullpen after a single by Dave Winfield in the third. Kemp also singled during New York's 12-hit attack.

Yankees starter Jay Howell, 1-3, took a five-hit shutout into the eighth, but left after giving up a one-out single to Dwight Evans. Jim Rice greeted reliever Rich Gossage with a single and one out later, Carl Yastrzemski singled home Evans.

Dennis Eckersley, 5-5, took the loss.

With the victory, the Yankees became the first American League team to beat an opponent 900 times. New York has now beaten Boston 900 times while losing 719 games to the Red Sox.

Evans drops defending super-heavy champion

In the boxing semifinals, Al Evans of Chicago stopped defending super-heavyweight champ Craig Payne of Livonia, Mich., at 44 seconds of the first round. A right hand dropped Payne for the three-count, and the referee then stopped the bout.

At 106 pounds, Paul Gonzalez of Los Angeles upset defending champ Bryan Jones on points, and in the 139-pound class Vincent Webb of St. Louis decisioned defending titleholder Jerry Page of Columbus, Ohio.

Benevides, defending champ at 119 pounds from Corpus Christi, Texas, scored a split decision over Lupe Gutierrez, from Turlock, Calif. And Whitaker, another defender at 132, won a unanimous decision over Robert Byrd, of Dallas.

At the Broadmoor Ice Arena, David Fedor of Tonawanda, N.Y., took the lead in men's figure skating after the short program. In women's figures, the lead was held by Kelly Webster, the hometown favorite from Colorado Springs.

And in women's softball, lefthander Michelle Thomas of Phoenix hurled a no-hitter to pace the South to a 2-0 over the North. Thomas gave up five walks, but only two advanced as far as second base. She struck out three.

Earlier Saturday, America's two top Olympic officials said the nation's athletes will be ready to win in the 1984 Olympic Games, but stiffer competition from more foreign countries will make it tough for the United States to regain the medal supremacy it once enjoyed.

And, said USOC president William E. Simon, the 1980 boycott of the Olympics in Moscow in a political protest will never be repeated by the United States.

Simon told a news conference at the National Sports Festival that it was "possible" for America to regain the overall medal-winning lead in the Winter and Summer Games, which it last had in 1960.

"But since 1960, the rest of the world has risen dramatically in its ability to compete with us in athletics," Simon added.

F. Don Miller, the executive director of the USOC, agreed, and predicted that the 1984 Winter Olympics in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia and Summer Games in Los Angeles would produce "a greater distribution of medals among countries than ever before."

Neither Simon nor Miller would predict how many gold, silver and bronze medals U.S. athletes are likely to win next year, although Miller said that "the health of amateur athletics in the United States has never been better."

"Since 1981, the U.S. has won 43 individual and team world championships in Olympics events," he said. "In the four years prior to 1980, we won fewer than 25. That's an indication of the strength and progress of our amateur athletes."

In 1980, the USOC and its athletes agreed to stay away from the Moscow Olympics to protest the Soviet Union's military intervention in Afghanistan. The boycott cost many American athletes their only chance at Olympic glory, and Simon said it would never happen again in the USA.

"The situation will not, in my judgment, arise again," he said. "The Olympic Games should not be used for politics."

Simon said the progress of fund-raising for Olympic programs is good.

Two Midland girls win ARCO national berths

Two Midland girls won their events in the ARCO-Jesse Owens regional track meet in Dallas Saturday to qualify for nationals in Los Angeles Aug. 13.

In the 10-11 age group 100-meter run, Janelia Lott posted a winning time of 14.08. Ethel Edwards won the 14-15 400-meters in 1:22.0.

Only the winners of each event qualify for nationals.

One representative from the Permian Basin region, Ronnie Mesa of Fort Stockton, posted a 54.03 to finish second in the 14-15 400-meter run.

Other top finishers were Tammica Traylor, 7.87 in the girls 10-11 50-meter run and Ruben Samson, 14.23 in the boys 10-11 100-meters. Both finished third.

Twin Cities Speedway

The mid-season championship in each division was determined Friday night at Twin Cities Speedway between Midland and Odessa.

Winning the Late Model division was Junior Robertson followed by Bob Bolin, Jr., and Dean Anthony. All three drivers are from Midland.

In the Semi Late Model division, three Odessans won top honors led by Leonard Robinson who was followed by Johnny David, Jr., and David Whisehunt.

Midlander's Perry Grove and Bolin finished one-two in the Street Stock division while Odessa's Christy Brwin placed third.

Tapp wins first PBA title by beating Webb, 229-208

SEATTLE (AP) — Charlie Tapp won his first career title after six years on the Professional Bowlers Association tour with a 229-208 victory over Wayne Webb Saturday in the Seattle Open.

Tapp, 31, of South St. Paul, Minn., pulled away from Webb with four strikes in the fifth through eight frames. Tapp earned $13,000 for first place. Webb earned $7,500 for second.

Amleto Monacelli, of Barquisimeto, Venezuela, was third, topping Henry Gonzalez of Colorado Springs, Colo., 246-219. Monacelli earned $5,500, while Gonzelez took home $4,500. Gil Sliker, of Washington, N.J., who lost, 210-188 to Gonzalez, took home $4,000.

With the victory, Tapp qualifies for the Firestone Tournament of Champions next year in Akron, Ohio.

Pilot Point votes against allowing coaches to resign

PILOT POINT, Texas (AP) — Football coach G.A. Moore was set to take a new job at Gainesville, but his fans in Pilot Point decided not to let him go.

Moore announced two weeks ago that he was leaving, but a wave of protests from high school football fans led the school board to vote not to accept the resignations of Moore and two assistant coaches, Mike Russell and Butch Ford, who had planned to go to Gainesville with him.

"Butch, Mike and myself discussed it at length," said Moore, who has a 20-year record of 181-37-7 and two Class 2A state championships. "All of our feelings were basically the same. We didn't want to take legal action to get out of Pilot Point, which is my home town.

"If I leave, I want it to be the best possible situation," said Moore. "I thought we were in that situation (with Gainesville)."

Moore's wife, Lois, said, "We were disappointed. But it was a compliment for him. I think that was the way they (the school board) meant it to be more than anything else."

Fans said they just didn't want to lose Moore and about 75 showed up at a Tuesday evening school board meeting.

"He's probably one of the best in the state," said Bearcat quarterback club member Dan Gist. "We didn't want him to go."

Gaines wins 200-meter free

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Rowdy Gaines, who lost his 200-meter freestyle world record last week, romped to victory in his specialty Saturday night, barely missing a National Sports Festival mark.

Gaines, 24, swam the distance in 1 minute, 53.85 seconds, only .57 seconds off the Festival record set by Geoff Gaberino last year in Indianapolis.

Since the swimming competition is being held at the Air Force Academy, which is 7,500 feet above sea level, his performance was sensational. Computations generally used at high-altitude meets indicate that Gaines, from Winter Haven, Fla., would have clocked a 1:52.65 below 5,000 feet.

Michael Gross of West Germany eclipsed Gaines' world mark last week.

San Francisco's Jack Clark loses his helmet while trying to make it back to second base as San Diego shortstop Garry Templeton forces him out on a throw from center fielder Alan Wiggins Saturday. The Padres went on to win, 3-2

Three tied at one-under-par for seniors lead

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Bill Johnston birdied three of the last four holes Saturday to finish 1-under-par and join Rod Funseth and Don January in a three-way tie for first place after three rounds of the $200,000 Peter Jackson Seniors Tournament.

Funseth and January, tied at 7-under before Saturday's play, shot even-par to stay two strokes ahead of Miller Barber.

Barber defied the gusting winds by shooting a 7-under-par 64 to tie the course record and grab second place entering Sunday's final round of the tournament for 50-or-older professionals at Early Grey Golf Course.

Roberto DeVicienzo bogied the 18th hole to finish 2-over for the day and 3-under after 54 holes. He was tied with Bill Collins, whose 70 Saturday was one among only four sub-par scores on the windswept course.

Jack Fleck, who led after the first round Thursday, finished 2-over Saturday to remain 2-under overall and alone in fourth behind Collins and DeVicienzo. Charlie Sifford's 73 left him 1-under in a tie with Billy Casper, who shot a 70 Saturday, and Gene Littler.

Commenting on the gusty conditions afterward, Johnston said, "It's probably as big a wind as we've ever played in (on the seniors tour)."

January said it had a profound affect on his play.

"I stand so erect playing golf that the wind blows me off balance very easily; I've never played well in wind like this. Someone with a lower center of gravity ... it helps because they can set themselves against that wind."

"I'm not that good of a wind player normally," said Barber, who followed his opening-round 74 with a 70 Friday. "I just had one of those days when just everything I did was right."

Braves club Reds, 8-2

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Bob Horner drilled a three-run homer and Dale Murphy, Jerry Royster and Chris Chambliss collected three hits apiece to help the Atlanta Braves crush the Cincinnati Reds 8-2 Saturday night.

Horner's 13th homer of the season keyed a four-run first inning that sent the Braves to their third straight victory over the Reds.

Pete Falcone, 6-1, went the distance for the second time in seven starts this season, scattering five hits. He struck out 10 and walked one.

The Braves, who had 14 hits, batted around in the first inning against starter Charlie Puleo, 2-4, who lasted just 1 1-3 innings.

Brett Butler and Rafael Ramirez singled to start the game and Murphy doubled in one run. Horner then slammed a 1-2 pitch over the left field wall.

Pirates 10, Cardinals 3

ST. LOUIS — Dale Berra and Jason Thompson each homered to highlight a 13-hit attack as the Pitsburgh Pirates won their seventh straight game by crushing the slumping St. Louis Cardinals 10-3.

The loss was the Cardinals' fifth in a row, their longest losing streak since 1981.

Lee Tunnell, 2-3, got the win with 4⅓ scoreless innings in relief of Don Robinson, who was making his first start of the season. St. Louis starter Kevin Hagen, 2-1, walked five and was touched for five runs in 3⅓ innings.

Pittsburgh scored in every inning except the second, sixth and ninth. The homers by Berra, his eighth, and Thompson, his ninth, gave the Pirates 15 home runs in their last nine games.

Saturday's crowd of 29,567 pushed the Cardinals' season attendance to 1,018,008 for 33 home games. It is the earliest St. Louis has ever reached the million mark.

National League

Phillies 4, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Kevin Gross, making his major-league debut, and Willie Hernandez combined on a six-hitter to lead the run-happy Philadelphia Phillies to a 4-2 victory over the New York Mets.

Gross, recalled from Portland of the Pacific Coast League on Friday, pitched 6⅓ innings, allowing two runs on five hits. He struck out five and walked three. Hernandez recorded his fourth save.

The Phillies stole six bases, four in the opening inning and another in the second, to tie the National League season best set by Los Angeles against Houston April 6.

Walt Terrell, 1-1, gave up all four Philadelphia runs on six hits before being relieved by Doug Sisk in the seventh inning.

Padres 3, Giants 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Tony Gwynn's two-out single in the eighth inning drove in an unearned run and lifted the San Diego Padres to a 3-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The Giants had not made an error in 29 innings before they made two in the eighth to help San Diego break the tie.

Cubs 2, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Consecutive doubles by Ryne Sandberg and Bill Buckner snapped a 12th-inning tie and the Chicago Cubs went on to beat the Montreal Expos 2-1, snapping a six-game losing streak.

Sandberg opened the 12th with a drive to left-center against Chris Welsh, 0-2. Buckner then lined a shot just past Expos first baseman Al Oliver.

Chicago, which left 13 men on base, had scoring chances in both the 10th and 11th innings but failed to get key hits.

Did you know that fine-finish sanding can be done by machine? A finishing sander is the tool for the job and it can be used on all wood, plastic and metal surfaces. Actually, there are three kinds of finishing sanders. And orbital sander works best on tougher sanding such as removing old paint, and for the next to last finishing. A straight line sander is ideal for the final finish otherwise done by hand. This sander typically has a 1/6 horsepower motor driving 14,000 strokes per minute. A combination orbital straight line sander can perform either the circular sanding or the back-and-forth movement of the straight-line sander.

A workman is only as good as his tools and the final result of any job displays the quality and knowledge of such a person. Now you can do the job using the same equipment that the professionals do. Rent what you need from BOB's RENTAL CENTERS INC., 2700 Rankin Hwy., 685-1271 & 2909 N. Big Spring, 684-8294. When you rent it from us you will not only receive helpful hints on its operation, but you will also be assured that the equipment has been maintained in proper operating condition. "BRIERCROFT SAVINGS MAY NOT BE IN A CLASS BY ITSELF. BUT IT SURE DON'T TAKE LONG TO CALL THE ROLL."

"Let's talk about West Texas for a minute. This sprawling place had to crawl before it could walk. And, years ago, back in those crawling days, Briercroft Savings was here to help coach it along. Briercroft Savings is one of West Texas' roots. If you've lived here long enough — mighty long — you remember it. And after all these years, they're still doing things right. Booming right along with the rest of the state. But never too big for their britches.

You see, Briercroft Savings didn't get to where they are by being confusing with a lot of high fallutin' talk, or by offering savings plans that were hard to understand. They did it by being up front about what's what and what's not. So, if you're confused by all that's going on around you, come on over and see some just plain folks. They're still dependable. Still doing business like they ought to. And I'm here to tell you that you can depend on 'em. Or my name's not Bum Phillips."

Perry ends tour with seventh team

Decision: Retire from baseball or find new team?

NEW YORK (AP) — When Gaylord Perry was designated for assignment Saturday by the Seattle Mariners, it marked the end of service for his seventh major league team.

The oldest player in major league baseball with his 45th birthday coming up this Sept. 15, Perry previously pitched for the San Francisco Giants, Cleveland Indians, Texas Rangers, San Diego Padres, New York Yankees and Atlanta Braves before hooking on with the Mariners last season.

Associated most closely with the "spitter", a pitch he really never has admitted throwing, Perry is the only pitcher to win the Cy Young Award in both leagues. He won the American League honor when he posted a 24-16 record with Cleveland in 1971 and won in the National League when he was 21-6 at age 40 with San Diego in 1978.

He virtually assured himself a place in the Hall of Fame by winning his 300th game last season, becoming only the 15th pitcher in major league history to do so, but only the first since Early Wynn in 1963. Perry added three victories to last season's 10-win total to bring his all-time victory count to 310.

IN TERMS of brother combinations, Gaylord and Jim Perry are without peer. With a career total of 522 at the start of this season, the Perrys led Phil and Joe Niekro by 103 wins.

Born in Williamston, N.C., on Sept. 1, 1938, Gaylord Perry spent the first 10 years of his career with the Giants, twice winning as many as 20 games in a season before he was traded to the Indians for "Sudden" Sam McDowell.

Perry had slumped from a 23-win season in 1970 to 16-12 in 1971 and some observers felt he was in his declining years with the Giants and that the trade for McDowell favored San Francisco. But it turned out that Perry's best years were ahead of him, and McDowell has long since retired.

Perry still had three 20-win seasons and many more miles in his rubbery right arm. He spent four years in Cleveland before the Indians traded him to the Rangers in the middle of the 1975 season.

After a 15-12 season in Texas in 1977, the Rangers shipped Perry to San Diego thinking he was just about at the end of his usefulness. But the resilient right-hander came back with a brilliant season for the Padres in 1978.

In 1980, the seemingly ageless Perry divided his time between the Rangers and Yankees and spent 1981 in Atlanta before moving onto Seattle last season and putting together a 10-12 mark.

Perry's lifetime record to date is 310-261.

LePorte retains WBC title with controversial decision

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Juan Leporte of Puerto Rico retained his World Boxing Council featherweight crown Saturday with a controversial split decision over previously undefeated Johnny de la Rosa of the Dominican Republic.

Immediately after the decision, de la Rosa's manager, Carl King, the son of promoter Don King, said, "I will protest this fight. I will take this to the Puerto Rico Boxing Commission and the WBC."

King said: "I declare Johnny de la Rosa the WBC featherweight champion."

Laporte's manager, Howard Alpert, said, "I thought the referees were lenient to the other fighter. He did not attack enough to win a championship."

The controversy centered on the judges' decision of the fight. John Coyle and Harry Gibbs, both of London, scored the fight 116-111 and 115-114, respectively, in favor of the champion. James Vin Kin, of Long Beach, Calif., saw it differently, scoring his card 116-113 in favor of the challenger.

Vin Kin refused to comment on his decision moments after it was announced. "When I finish a fight, that's it," he said.

There were no knockdowns in the 12-round title fight held at the Roberto Clemente Coliseum.

Laporte, 22, said he thought he took charge of the fight in the 10th round and "if I had used my left jabs like I did in the 12th earlier in the fight, I don't believe it would have gone the distance."

In the final round, Laporte, who was making his second title defense, drove de la Rosa into the corner and stunned him with a stinging left hook and repeated the punch later in the round just before the fight ended.

What's causing sudden Texas' sports dominance

An AP Sports Analyis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The Texas college sports scene has closed shop until September but there were some remarkable happenings this spring to ponder over the summer.

For example, FOUR Lone Star schools earned national baseball or softball titles.

The Texas Longhorns captured their fourth College Baseball World Series title in Omaha, Neb., beating Alabama in the final. Texas went undefeated through the tournament.

Earlier, Omaha was also the site for another national championship. The Texas A&M's women's softball team edged Cal-Fullerton to nail down the first place trophy.

In Grand Junction, Colo., McLennan Community College (Waco, Texas) rolled undefeated through the field to seize the National Junior College World Series baseball crown.

At Lubbock, host team Lubbock Christian sacked the NAIA World Series first place loot.

The state of Texas also dominated track and field.

THE SOUTHERN Methodist Mustangs, denied the national title in football although they went undefeated, took the NCAA outdoor track and field championships in Houston. SMU had won the national indoor title earlier.

Abilene Christian's Wildcats claimed their second straight NCAA Division II outdoor track and field title.

Angelo State University was second.

In golf, Texas Christian's Lady Frogs gave the school its first national title since the football team earned one in the late 1930s.

Texas Wesleyan was second in the NAIA Men's division golf tournament. Texas and Houston were second and third, respectively, in the NCAA golf tournament.

SMU was second in the NCAA in tennis and the Mustangs were second in swimming and Texas was third in the final NCAA men's team championships.

THERE'S NO logical explanation for this outbreak of hardware collecting by Texas schools.

For years, track, golf and baseball teams at the Far West schools had a high success ratio. One of the reasons always given was the excellent weather; another was high population growth.

Texas had a cool, wet spring. So much for the meteorology course.

There has been a population upswing.

Perhaps one of the answers for the sudden surge in Texas spring titles is that schools in the state are getting more competitive nationally in recruiting.

They are going after the top athletes across the nation, recruiting as hard in track and field, golf, and baseball as they do in football.

Radio, television, and newspaper coverage of spring sports in the state has picked up, adding an encouragement factor.

The success cycle is not just limited to the spring season.

The Southwest Conference enjoyed the greatest overall success in its 69-year history, winning five national titles and placing 17 teams in the top four. (Recall the near-misses — SMU and Houston No. 2 in football and basketball, respectively).

Texas colleges and universities can have a good summer knowing they sparkled on the national sports stage.

Sandhills applies for permit to operate waste facility

AUSTIN — Sandhills Industries, Inc. of Odessa has applied to Texas Department of Water Resources for a permit to operate a Class I, hazardous-commercial solid waste storage facility for wastes generated by petroleum and petrochemical industries in the Midland-Odessa area.

The facility will be used as a central collection and storage facility for wastes but will not be authorized to receive or store certain types of dagerous materials, TDWR reports.

Among the materials prohibited are polychlorinated biphenyls, radioactive or nuclear wastes and explosive materials. Wastes will be stored temporarily prior to shipping off-site to an authorized re-cycling or disposal facility.

The facility will consist of a truck bay for tank trailers, with a total bulk storage capacity of 4,000 gallons and a drum storage area with a total capacity of 150 55-gallon drums (8,250 gallons).

The facility is to be located on a five-acre tract south of Odessa, four miles south-southwest of the intersection of I-20 and U.S. 385 in Ector County. No discharge from the facility is authorized by the permit.

TDWR says the company will be required to "secure and maintain in force at all times" financial assurance to provide proper closure of the facility.

No hearing is planned on the application, unless one is requested by an affected person.

Officials oppose waste sites

COLORADO CITY — Mitchell County Commissioners have passed a resolution expressing opposition to including Mitchell County in a state list of possible low-level radioactive waste disposal sites.

The resolution is being forwarded to Texas Low-Level Radioactive Disposal Authority and state senators Dick Burnett of San Angelo and Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls.

Concerned citizens will meet at 7 p.m. Monday at the high school auditorium to organize opposition to the study.

Authority officials have indicated a site somewhere in the state would be recommended by Oct. 1.

Pecos gets ready for rodeo

PECOS — Pecos, the site of the world's first rodeo 100 years ago, is gearing up for its centennial Law West of the Pecos Rodeo.

Gunfights, hangings, saloon dancing and other boisterous frontier activities will be performed by Marfa's Centennial Gunslingers and Legendary Ladies at 7 p.m. Monday in Pecos City Park and from 5-10 p.m. Tuesday during Centennialfest activities at Maxey Park, adjacent to Interstate 20.

The rodeo will begin Thursday and continue through July 4. Starting time is 8 p.m. each day.

Pecos Golden Girl will be selected Wednesday at Pecos High School Auditorium. Competing girls will model 1890s fashions, modern western wear and a costume to match their talent presentations.

Additional activities will include an old-timers reunion, barbecue and dance Thursday, old fiddlers contest Saturday and Sunday, professional Western Art Show July 3-4 and a noon barbecue July 4.

Applications taken for curator

BIG SIRING — Applications are being accepted for a curator for Howard County Heritage Museum.

The curator must be a "shaker and mover," have a background in history and possess the ability to write grants, said Dene Sheppard, chairman of the selection committee.

Interestpersons may contact Mrs. Sheppard by Monday.

The mueum board is expected to present the new curator at its July 14 meeting.

Chamber veteran resigns

ANDREWS — Louie Cure, nine-year veteran of the Andrews County Chamber of Commerce manager' post, has submitted his resignation to the boad of directors.

It will be effective January 31, 1984 or earlier should the board hire a new director.

Cure said he felt the greatest accomplishment of his tenure was "the creation of a progressive, active chamber of commerce. Good leadership is what maks a community prosper."

If I remember correctly, the newspaper once said that if a motorist observes another motorist doing something illegal, the first motorist may call the police department with a license number, car description and report of what happened. Then the police would follow up with a warning to the second motorist, without saying who notified them.

It seems to me that this type action might help prevent some tragedies, but I wondered if it was really true — how it works.

I'd appreciate your answer. — S.W.

ANSWER: Major Sidney Corley of the Midland Police Department responds that all complaint calls directed to the department are checked. Persons making complaints of any type are asked to give their names, in addition to the information about the incident, but if callers prefer not to disclose their identity, a check is made by the department.

ATTENTION W. HUFF: Linda Bond of The Producers has received a definite response to your question about the movie, "Waltz Across Texas," as to when it might be shown again in Midland.

The 99-minute movie, according to Ms. Bond, will be shown on Spotlight in July. The story of a Midland-born wildcatter played by Terry Jastrow and a feisty Eastern geologist, played by Anne Archer, will be seen all over the United States on the cable television channel.

"Waltz Across Texas" will begin July 17 at 7 p.m. and be shown July 20 at 5 p.m., July 23 at 3 p.m., July 26 at 9 p.m., July 29 at 7 p.m. and July 31 at 2:25 a.m. Spotlight shows on cable Channel 5.

Why do the lights at the Lee High School tennis courts automatically turn off at 11 p.m.? I know many people whose only chance to play tennis comes after eleven. Could you check on the reason the lights are turned off so early? Thank you very much. — Rodney Mack

ANSWER: The tennis court lights are automatically timed by LHS and the City Parks and Recreation Department to go off at 11 p.m. each day. This is done, according to Dr. Joe Smith, LHS principal, because of economic reasons and because it is believed that the majority of players are finished playing by 11 p.m.

I am wondering if something can be done about the left turn going south off Midland Drive on to Illinois. It's very poorly marked — almost hit and miss, especially for anyone not familiar with Midland streets and traffic. I have heard several people remark about that, especially since it's so heavily traveled. — P.D.

ANSWER: Gary Saunders, acting traffic engineer for the City of Midland made a trip to the intersection you speak of to determine the seriousness of your complaint. He also obtained a second opinion about the situation. One hundred cars making the left turn were checked and there were no difficulties encountered by the drivers.

However, Saunders says the department is redesigning sections of Illinois Street and necessary improvements are being considered. He mentioned the possiblity of a geometric design problem a this intersection.

I recently purchased a jar of Bueno Mole Paste and now I need help in cooking with it. Any recipes? Thanks. — Betty Miller

ANSWER: According to Carmen Rodriguez Gray with the Midland County Extension Service — Home Economics, who has probably contacted you personally by this time, the paste is made of ground-up roasted chilis (nine to 10 different types) raisins, chocolate and fat.

Ms. Gray, who obtained the information from her mother, Carmen Rodriguez, who is associated with the Expanded Nutrition Program in El Paso, the paste can be purchased in jars or cans. Its main purpose is use in marinating or as a stew base.

For marnating chicken, a favorite use for the paste, dilue the paste with water and add small strips of chicken, green peppers, onions and whatever else is desired. Marinate the chicken one hour prior to cooking it in the marinade solution. For a more stew-like dish, use a more concentrated amount of the paste.

Ms. Gray's mother can supply additional uses for the pase.

POSITIVE THINKING

Imaging powerful in everyday life

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

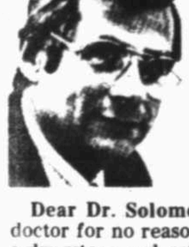

Imaging, the use of projected mental pictures, is an effective method of attaining goals, or for that matter, help in the ordinary problem of living. Dr. Charles L. Allen, the popular writer, tells a story about a woman who suffered from insomnia. The solution to the problem was interesting. She was a skilled flower arranger. And so, when sleep didn't come easily, lying in the dark she would visualize a table with a handsome flower vase on it and two dozen long stemmed red roses lying beside it. She would hold the scene in her mind until it became almost real: the rich grain of the wood in the tabletop, the flowing curves of the vase, the pale green rose stems, the ruby petals glowing with velvety color.

Then she would see herself slowly picking up the roses, one by one, and arranging them in the vase. First she would visualize the vase with one tall flower, then two, then three — each carefully placed for artistic effect. Each time she added a flower, she would move back a few paces and study the composition. And according to Charles Allen, she never was able to complete the arrangement with all twenty-four flowers, because she always fell asleep!

Suppose you would like to redecorate a room in your house, or buy new furniture for the patio. Suppose, as is so often the case, you don't think you can afford to do it right away. What is to prevent you from imaging that room or that patio just the way you would like to have it? Fill in all the details — the color of the curtains, the patterns of the carpet, the kind of mirror you want above the mantelpiece — see it all in your mind's eye. It is a lot of fun, it doesn't cost a thing, and the more vivid the image, the better chance that someday it will become a reality.

When James Whistler, the great American painter, was first married, he and his wife were so poor that the only furniture they had was a bed. But this did not discourage them. In every empty room of their modest house they sketched with chalk, on the floor, the outline of each piece of additional furniture that they intended to have someday. Inside the outline they added a detailed description of what it would look like. They imaged their dream house furnished just as they wanted it to be. And the time came when that vision became a happy reality. Why? Because they pushed beyond the fuzzy, indistinct yearnings that many people settle for and focused their wishes with great intensity of imaging. Those chalk marks and detailed descriptions on the floor gave a substance and a reality to the dream that otherwise it would never had had. And their unconscious minds went to work instantly, providing the energy and the drive and the confidence that the young couple needed to reach their goal.

Suppose you would like to travel. Do you want to visit England or Italy, or see the Grand Canyon, or go flying down to Rio? Don't just sit and vaguely wish. Go to a travel bureau. Get some brochures. Better still, get some maps and trace the route you would like to follow. Go to the library and take out some history books. Learn all you can about the place you want to visit, its history, the people who are living there. Then image yourself against that background. Chances are you will someday make that trip.

Nasal sprays may lead to high blood pressure

Dear Dr. Solomon: I don't like to bother my doctor for no reason, especially when I can go to a drugstore and get some medicine for whatever is bothering me. But what I would like to know is why a nose spray doesn't work for me when I know that a lot of my friends use the same brand. The spray clears my nose for a day or so, and then it doesn't work any more. What would you suggest? — Tom, Houston, Texas

Dear Tom: I suggest you "bother" your doctor. Simply because medication can be purchased without a prescription does not mean that it should be used indiscriminately.

You describe an all-too-common chain of events. You have a stuffy nose so you buy an over-the-counter nasal spray. The spray clears your nose so you continue using it. Eventually the stuffiness returns and nothing helps.

Although nasal sprays may provide some relief, their continued use will not only not be helpful, but may even contribute to the congested feeling that prompted you to use the spray in the first place. Moreover, these sprays may have a more widespread effect since the medication is absorbed through the mucous membranes and may lead to the development of high blood pressure.

The safety of a product cannot be determined by its availability. Let your physician decide what is causing your stuffy nose and prescribe accordingly.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am a homosexual, am not ashamed to admit it, and have no desire to change. But I am concerned about the immune deficiency syndrome I have been reading about. Is there anything in particular a person can do to avoid this complication? — John, New York City

Dear John: Dr. Robert K. Bolan, of San Francisco, a physician who treats a large number of homosexual patients, points out that the prevalence of the acquired immune deficiency syndrome is fairly low. He recommends to his patients that they limit the number of different sexual partners and avoid anonymous sex.

Other recommendations, which are designed to help improve the functioning of the immune system, are more general in nature. They include good hygiene, an adequate amount of sleep, good diet, and appropriate exercise.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I always see on television that when a ball player is injured, they put ice on it. Why not heat? Wouldn't it be more soothing? — Hal, Chicago

Dear Hal: Heat can cause injured tissue to swell and may increase the degree of pain. Heat will also increase any bleeding in the joint.

World War II soldier helps veterans cope with stress

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — A World War II soldier left for dead in the snows of France is using his talent and time — much of his time — to help combat veterans from three wars cope with whatever torments them.

Dr. Merrill Lipton was 19 and fresh from the sidewalks of New York when a 155mm artillery shell burst in the air in Alsace-Lorraine and blew holes in his body and head just after New Year's 1945.

Today, he is an associate professor of psychiatry at Texas A&M University's College of Medicine and a staff psychiatrist at the Olin E. Teague Veterans Center.

His special interest is post-combat stress or, in medical terms, post-traumatic stress disorder.

Harold Smedley, a counselor who helps veterans collect benefits, says Lipton is so dedicated and effective that he will recommend him for a national award from the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Even though most public attention has focused on the mental problems of Vietnam veterans, Lipton and Dr. William Schaffer, a 20-year Air Force veteran from Fairfield, Conn., have extended psychiatric group sessions to World War II and Korean War veterans.

One 1½-hour session each week is for the older veterans, one for the younger. The median age for the older veterans is 61½.

Until recently, Lipton said in a recent interview, wartime stress was called the "Vietnam syndrome." Older veterans were merely described as having combat fatigue. Lipton said that even his psychiatric training in the 1950s taught him that combat disorders were considered the result of cowardice "or a previously existing weakness or mental defect."

Lipton and Schaffer started their first discussion group in November 1981. The veterans, some of whom were POWs who had existed under "horrendous" conditions, were people whose lives had fallen apart.

Smedley recalls men in his office who are so depressed that "they stutter or cry. ... They are unable to think.

DINERO PLAZA

Prestigious, first class office space in a convenient, downtown location. We invite you to visit our building, each of the 20,000 square foot floors open onto a six story atrium so that your office can be designed with an open feeling never before offered in Midland. Nothing has been spared to insure the safety, comfort and security of tenants.

- Fully sprinklered on every floor for fire protection.
- Smoke-proof pressurized stair wells.
- Individual air-conditioning controls
- Standby emergency power generators
- Honeywell security systems limiting after hours and weekend entrants.
- Plentiful parking for tenants and visitors -- no more driving around looking for a parking space.
- Three high speed elevators to insure you never wait service.
- Generous tenants finish allowance
- Classic interior and exterior design.

All located on six acres of beautifully landscaped surroundings. For the finest space at competitive rates, call...

Suiting Midland

Text by Lisa Gerlock

Ferrari: Carroll Thomas, owner

John Philbeck, custom clothier and designer, uses impeccable taste and skill to clothe those who want to project a successful image.

His eyes widened when he first visited Midland six years ago. What he remembers about his initial drive through town is a student driver car that passed him on the road — a Cadillac.

That memory was indicative of John Philbeck's future in the "gold mine of a town," as Midland was once described to him and where he now operates his business.

He remembers driving his 1969 Buick station wagon, loaded with houseplants and cardboard boxes, to the Haystack apartments where he opened his first office for his custom clothier business.

His dream of a business was to produce customized quality suits from the fits and stitches to the tastes and lifestyles of his clients.

Business progressed. He now has a shinier car. He no longer files his $2,000 accounts in cardboard boxes.

His clientele include some of Midland's most influential business wizards who travel the world and meet on Manhattan's Wall Street, ranchers who wear a suit only once a year and hard-to-fit men who like to dress in fashion.

Philbeck maintains detailed records of his clients — a client is "anyone who is a customer twice," he says.

His records are filled with information about the clients who play polo, tennis, golf, and what kind of hours they actually spend in offices, on planes or on the ranch and the nature of their businesses and professions.

His biggest consideration for his designs are fabric. Philbeck said he has exclusive rights to fine tailoring houses in Torino, Italy, Baltimore, Md., and Rochester, N.Y.

Textiles of woven wool, cotton, silk and combinations of different blends range in prices from $20 a yard to as much as $325 a yard. Suit prices range from $200 to $2,000. Philbeck said clothing selections are unlimited because of the fabric and style combinations.

"It's an investment," said Philbeck. "Once you have a suit you can wear, you'll get a lot of mileage out of it. Many of my clients are not that affluent, but they have several suits in their closets they have worn only a few times because they are uncomfortable."

In six weeks, a first-time Philbeck client can have a finished product.

After clients have had one suit made, it may take only four weeks to receive the final product, as long as it is produced in the U.S. The process involves several steps.

The client first is consulted on proper patterns, fabrics, weights, colors and composition that coincide and complement his lifestyle, said Philbeck. The garment is then designed, with key emphasis placed on longevity of styling details. Measurements are taken and notes are made on physical characteristics. To assist tailors, photos are taken of the client, which places the client right there with the tailor, Philbeck said.

When the garment is partially completed, it is sent back to Philbeck so his client may be prefitted, at which time any corrections or changes are made. The garment is returned to the tailoring house and completed. Philbeck then coordinates accessories to the garment and completes the final fitting.

The tailoring house he chooses to send each garment is determined by the fabrics used, the style and the pattern.

Philbeck touts his accessibilty to alteration houses, in case a client should lose weight or tear a garment. The service enables those who invest big money in clothing to repair damages that may occur. One alteration house actually weaves fabric back together where it is torn.

"I had a client who went to Ruidoso. He must have had a lucky number because he caught his jacket on a hand rail and really ripped it up. He tore the pocket off and tore the fabric on the coat."

Philbeck, whose business was built on designing suits for men, recently ventured into women's custom clothing.

His most recent job was to design a wedding dress for a client. A blue silk jacquard dress was made to match the groom's suit, also designed by Philbeck. Most of the women's clothing he has designed has been shirts and blouses.

Philbeck plans to introduce more than 40 changes of latest European designs of women's clothing at a benefit fashion show in early fall.

He envisions a new office in the future, complete with showroom floor and bolts of fabrics for men's and women's clothing.

The son of a Southern Baptist minister, Philbeck came from Tulsa, Okla. He graduated from Northeastern Oklahoma State University with double majors in marketing and business administration. From there, he continued his education in practical application when he worked for a custom design apparel firm in 1973 in Tulsa.

In 1976 Philbeck moved to Midland to work for the same custom apparel firm where he developed the local market, opened a store in Lubbock and initiated business in eastern New Mexico. During his three years with the company, he broke all sales records, he said.

John Philbeck makes frequent visits to his client's offices to prepare for custom fitting a suit, with details designed especially for him. "I don't make two of any kind," said Philbeck.

"In unstable times, the trend is toward stable images. People prefer to project stability."

John Philbeck
Custom clothier

After leaving the company, Philbeck was required by law to forego two years of business to oblige a "compete clause," during which time he was involved in the oil business.

When the two years expired, he traveled to all parts of the country in search of tailoring houses for his business. Later, he traveled to Europe for textile firms, some of which are the distribution houses for such designers as Pucci, Zatti and Renel.

Within the first three months of 1983, Philbeck said he earned two international awards and one national award in fashion competition. He flew to Rome to receive an award from the International Academy of Custom Tailor and Designers and later went to Miami Beach to receive the National Custom Tailors and Designers Association award. He often models his own clothing at fashion shows.

Philbeck's work day begins by following his morning route map leading to stops he must make to clients. Some mornings it may take him until 11 a.m. to arrive at his office and 8 p.m. to finally reach his home.

Beverly, whom he met in Tulsa, became his wife and transferred from the Cities Service Co. in Tulsa to the Midland office, where she works in administration. In her spare time, she runs her own custom drapery business and indulges herself in other enterprising business ventures.

Timothy John, their 2-year-old son, may have inherited some of the talents his parents possess. "He has an eye for color and texture," said the proud Philbeck father.

When Philbeck isn't on the phone to one of his clients or fabric houses, jotting down figures from the measuring tape, he can be found on the golf course, where he enjoys spending most of his spare time.

Philbeck aims his business at people who want to succeed. Perhaps his market is the reason why recent hard times haven't shown much fluctuation in his business.

The "power" look, Philbeck said, is the person who looks confident, self-assured and successful.

"In unstable times, the trend is toward stable images. People prefer to project stability.

"My business here has been real steady. I haven't had everyone banging on my door...but then again, I'm not for everybody."

Soft tones give healthy glow

A sun-warmed face that glows with good health is the perfect complement for all summer fashions. The best way to create that healthy natural look this summer, according to editors of Seventeen magazine, is make-up in the soft toned shades of beige and pink.

These new make-up palettes emphasize subtle coloring that intensifies from eyes to cheeks to lips, Seventeen's beauty editors said. The look may be monochromatic, they note, but it's never boring.

Accenting your face in shades of beige will give your complexion a warm, slightly burnished look. By using beige make-up, you'll be flattering youself — these tones contour and color your face with a warm, sunny glow, the magazine's beauty editors claim. How should you start? Begin with a light beige, bisque or ivory foundation, they suggest. Blend the foundation well across you face for the sheerest wash of color.

Eyes should receive the most subtle color treatment possible for these new make-up looks, the special beauty feature says, so higlight your eyes with a smoky taupe beige shadow applied all the way to the brow. Add extra eye appeal by rimming your lashes with a warm cocoa brown for a sultry contrast, and finish with brown mascara. Brighten your cheeks by sweeping a bronze beige blush over the cheekbones, and for a final intense bit of color, whisk a golden caramel lipstick on your lips.

Heavenly hues of pink are the perfect way to accent a sun-tanned face, say the editors, and the brighter and truer the pink, the better. For a face that's pink begin by applying a foundation that's keyed to your skin tone — and if the tan on your face is a little uneven, match the foundation to the darkest area.

To play up your eyes with perfect pinks, apply a pearly pink powder from the browbone down to the crease of the eyelid. Then, for extra definition, shadow the eyelid with a deeper, rose pink and finish with a touch of black masacara. Rosy pink color applied across the cheekbones will spark a healthy glow, and bubblegum-pink lipstick adds a final bit of shine.

Try the new soft-toned make-up palettes in pink and beige and you'll sport a warm, radiant glow all summer long.

Color may change self-esteem

Associated Press Writer

ST. ANTHONY, Minn. (AP) — According to some professional consultants, color can change your life. The colors you wear can make you feel good about yourself and they can change the way other people respond to you, they say.

Katy Schulte and Kathie Kavolak have built a business based on those ideas as they help people choose the best colors for themselves and get the most cosmetic value for their clothing dollar.

"Most people have a real innate sense about what works best for them. Many people wear neutrals and generally they're doing that correctly. But they never really put color around their faces," Mrs. Kavolak said.

So she and Mrs. Schulte, color consultants and partners in Color-You-Nique, help their clients move into color areas they haven't tapped on their own.

"It's so foolish to put money into a mediocre color. If you have to buy it, you might as well make it a fantastic color," Mrs. Schulte said.

Mrs. Schulte and Mrs. Kavolak spend two hours with each client — about 20 percent of the clients are men — in their brightly sun-lit studio. They analyze the client's skin, hair and eye colors and choose the hues that best complement those colors.

They see 18 clients each week, in addition to presenting seminars and workshops in schools.

The two former elementary schoolteachers each spent a month being trained in the method of color analysis developed more than 40 years ago by Suzanne Caygil, a Californian who wrote the book, "Color — the Essence of You."

They use the seasonal concept in choosing colors to fit people, classifying a client's coloring as spring, summer, fall or winter, then breaking down types within those groups as they prepare an individual color "palette" specially for that client.

Have you heard...

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Honeymooning in Honolulu and Maui are Suzanne and George Dunn, who were united in marriage Saturday evening in St. Anne's Catholic Church. Upon their return, they will make their home in Tulsa, where the groom plans to finish his degree in the College of Petroleum Engineering at the University of Tulsa.

Parents of the bride are Patti and Ben Strickling. The groom is the son of Frances Metcalfe of Midland and Evans Dunn of Tulsa.

A reception at the Midland Country Club hosted by the bride's parents followed the candlelight mass. The club was decorated with a profusion of colorful summer flowers, and guests enjoyed a sumptious wedding buffet and dancing to the music of the Bernie Rose Band.

A number of parties preceded their trip to the altar. Wedding week festivities included a bachelorette party Thursday in the home of Sheryl (Mrs. Bobby) Neatherlin for a group of the bride's close friends; the bridesmaids' luncheon given Friday by Jackie (Mrs. Vance) Hendricks and her daughter, Mary Lynn (Mrs. Joel) Murray in the Hendricks home; the rehearsal dinner given by the groom's mother Friday evening in the Garden Room of the Racquet Club, and a brunch on Saturday given by Ruth and Lee Caldwell of Abilene at The Energy Club for members of the family, wedding party and out-of-town guests.

Spring parties honoring the couple were a champagne and linen shower given in the home of Cheryll (Mrs. Larry) Kulbeth, with Melinda Bean and Martha (Mrs. Edward) Bean as co-hostesses; a kitchen display shower and buffet luncheon in the home of Doris (Mrs. Flake) Tompkins, and a "Honey-Do" shower and cocktail buffet in the home of Tommie and Tank Tankersley.

A Mexican supper was given at the home of Joanie and Bobby Holt, with Betty and George Moberly, Monta Jo and Ted Johnson, Betty and John Hackney, Penny Branum, Marjorie Wiseman, JoAnn Jonsson and Ann and Don Ormand as cohosts. The buffet was served poolside with pinatas and flowers providing a colorful Mexican backdrop. Guests were greeted by a mariachi band, which continued to entertain throughout the evening.

A cocktail party hosted by Carolyn and Jay Berry around the Racquet Club pool featured a refreshing summertime buffet.

WHEN FORMER HOMETOWN GIRL Donna Ross entertained at a party last weekend in her Greenwich Village apartment, her guests included several young professionals from Midland, who are carving their niche in the Big Apple. They were Bo Baskin, Gary Bristol, Kell Cahoon, Jim Heck and his wife, the former Cathy Culp, and Liz Welch.

Donna, the daughter of Betty Lloyd and Don Ross, will be leaving New York next month to dance with the Dallas Ballet. The company will be performing with the Santa Fe Opera during the coming opera season.

RUIDOSO'S ANNUAL Summer Music Festival, which was held recently at the Inn of the Mountain Gods, attracted a number of Midlanders. Sammie and Dalton Cobb were among those going up for the event, as well as Spooks (Mrs. J.W.) Starr, who had as house guests Sherry and Herschel O'Kelley, Lissa and Cy Wagner and Beth and Charles Priddy.

The stellar musical lineup included violinist Danny Heifetz, Metropolitian Opera star Roberta Peters, pop singer Dionne Warwick and classical guitarist Pepe Romero, along with the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra. Fun events held in conjunction with the festival were a casino party, entertainment by a Dixieland Band and a Western art auction.

NEWLYWEDS Liz and Clark Lowery are at home in Midland after a two-week honeymoon in Colorado. The bride, daughter of Maureen and Gene Shrode, is teaching summer school and will return to San Jacinto Junior High School in the fall as an instructor of English and drama. The groom, son of Mary and Dick Lowery, is a sales rep for Superior Cabinets, Inc.

Their wedding, which occurred on May 29 (the groom's birthday) in the Golf Course Road Church of Christ, was preceded by a number of parties and showers. The rehearsal dinner, hosted by the groom's parents in Midland Country Club, was highlighted with dinner music by Eddie Pleasant; a solo by the bride's sister, Nancy Brough, that she had composed as a special gift for the bridal couple, and a humorous reading, entitled "A Tennessee Courtship," given by Dorothy (Mrs. Paul) Hall. The bridesmaids' luncheon, held at the country home of Norma (Mrs. Don) Pyle, featured the bride's chosen colors of pink and white.

Other festivities included a display shower given by the women of the Golf Course Road Church of Christ in the home of Helen (Mrs. Charles) Kimbro; a bridal shower in the Westside church of Christ hospitality room, and a Mexican buffet supper at the home of Glyna and Bob Kretzler.

Also, a bridal shower at the home of Jennifer (Mrs. G.B.) Cooper with Liz's colleagues from San Jacinto Junior High as guests; a recipe and kitchen shower given by Judy (Mrs. Jick) Hill, with members of Liz's softball team as guests, and a lingerie shower given by friends of the bride from her alma mater, Lubbock Christian College. A honeymoon coffee, with a money tree for the guest of honor, was given at the home of Dorothy Hall, wife of the minister who performed the wedding ceremony. She was assisted by the women of Fairmont Church of Christ.

PRAIRIE LEE CLUB

Prairie Lee Club met recently in the home of Matilda Reyese. A program was presented by Irene Clouse, executive director of the Center for Battered Women and their Children. Refreshments were served. The next meeting will be in the home of Nora Stanley on July 20.

PROGRESSIVE STUDY CLUB

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Cristiani recently hosted a poolside barbecue party for members of the Progressive Study Club and their husbands and guests. Assisting with arrangements were members of the hospitality committee, Mrs. Harold Welch, Mrs. W. C. Kimball, Mrs. John W. Thomas and Mrs. R. G. Estes.

Guests attending were Mr. H. C. Bailie, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. Tom A. Mallan, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. McCullough, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Newman, Mrs. Charles White and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howe.

MIDLAND COUNCIL ON GARDEN CLUBS

The Midland Council on Garden Clubs met recently in the home of the president, Mrs. Keith Somerville. Members of the Yucca Garden Club cohosted the coffee hour.

The president announced the themes of the year for garden clubs: national, "Gardening Forever"; regional, "Plant and Share a Garden"; state, "Wide Spectrum Garden" and district, "Gardening for Health and Happiness."

Mrs. John N. Jacobson Jr. of Hereford has been named director of District I.

The council will make plans to host the southern zone meeting in Midland on Nov. 15. It was announced Mrs. Somerville has been appointed as liason chairman between the district and state on the committee of "Lone Star Gardener," published quarterly.

The council voted to hold the 1984 meetings on the second Monday of the month in January, April, July and October. The meeting was closed with an account of the council garden tour in May in Amsterdam, Germany and Salzburg.

Next meeting will be Oct. 10 at 9:30 a.m. at 1713 Douglas.

PERMIAN BASIN GEOLOGICAL AND GEOPHYSICAL AUXILIARY

The Permian Basin Geological and Geophysical Auxiliary held a luncheon at Midland Country Club recently with Sue Snelson as guest speaker. She gave a slide presentation on Russia, Outer Mongolia and Afghanistan. The luncheon was attended by 99 members and their guests.

Prizes were won by Mrs. Earl Gaertner and Mrs. Bill Hendon. Co-chairmen for the luncheon were Mrs. Don Perryman and Mrs. Cyril Gallick. Hostesses included Mrs. Wylie Basham, Mrs. William Deso, Mrs. Phil Eager, Mrs. George Faigle, Mrs. Tom Nietert and Mrs. James Turbyfill. The next meeting will be September 8, 1983.

MIDLAND JAYCEE WOMEN

The following Jaycee women were presented awards at the 1982-83 Jaycee and Jaycee Women Awards Banquet: Barbara Haralson won "Rookette of the Year," Deborah G. Ellis was "Outstanding Chairperson for a Jaycee Assistance Project," "Outstanding Chairperson for a Yearlong Project" was Maureen Dotson-Wall, "Outstanding Chairperson for All Other Activities" was Lillie Robledo. The chapter's incoming president, Hilda Davis, was presented the "Travel Award," "Outstanding Officer" and "Outstanding Jaycee Woman of the Year."

At the recent general membership meeting, monthly service awards were presented to Patsy Gallagher ("Board Member of the Month") and Becky Kolb ("Jaycee Woman of the Month").

The club voted Deborah G. Ellis director of Ways and Means and Kathy Jolly was elected recording secretary for 1983-84.

Many book judging awards were won by Jaycee Women at state convention in Abilene last month. Special recognition goes to Maureen Dotson-Wall for her publicity book and Barbara Barnett for her project book on the 10th annual arts and crafts fair.

The two books were awarded sweepstakes for the state and will go to national convention in Harvard, Connecticut this month.

Outstanding individual development program manager for the third quarter and 1982-83 year in the state was Midland's Hilda Davis. In population division VII category, the outstanding local chapter president for 1982-83 was Patsy Gallagher; outstanding Jaycee Woman was Hilda Davis and the oustanding chapter in population division VII was awarded to the Midland Jaycee Women.

The Jaycee Women assisted the Midland Jaycees at the Allison West Texas Invitational Swim Meet held at Alamo Pool on June 17-19.

At the recent general membership meeting, monthly service awards were presented to Patsy Gallagher, board member of the month, and Becky Cobb, Jaycee Woman of the Month.

GREEN TREE COUNTRY CLUB

Green Tree Country Club ladies luncheon bridge group met recently. Hostesses were Barbara Fleetwood and Betty Rhotenberry. Bridge winners were: Marcie Lohmann, first prize, Barbara Fleetwood, second prize, and Peggy Barry, third prize. Carolyn Holland of Webster Grove, Mo. was a guest.

MIDLAND QUILTERS GUILD

The Midland Quilters Guild held its afternoon and evening chapter meetings recently at Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

At the Wednesday afternoon meeting, Patsy Parker presented a demonstration on "Embellished Baskets," a string quilting technique.

Betsy Haney and Rosemary Rose demonstrated the same technique at the Tuesday evening chapter meeting.

The Midland Quilters Guild is open to anyone interested in learning more about quilts and quilting. The guild meets on the second Tuesday evening and Wednesday afternoon of each month. For information call 682-1742.

DEAR ABBY

Her marriage bed only for sleeping

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Dear Abby: I am a 24-year-old male and I've been going with a 23-year-old girl for two years. We love each other and are thinking of marriage. She is sure, but I'm not. The problem? She has absolutely no interest whatsoever in sex.

Before you conclude that I am a sex maniac, let me assure you that I am not. It's not as though she's a virgin because we've had sex before, but she has come right out and said she would rather do ANYTHING else. It's not a moral issue with her – she doesn't think it's "wrong," she just doesn't care for it.

I don't want to get locked into an unsatisfactory marriage and find myself looking for outside sex. Whenever I bring up the importance of a good sexual relationship in marriage, she says, "Is that all you ever think about?"

Is once a week too much? – SECOND THOUGHTS

DEAR SECOND: It's too much for someone who would "rather do anything else." It's obvious that your appetite for sex and hers are vastly disparate – translation: "incompatibility," the stuff of which bad marriages are made. You're wise to have second thoughts, and third and fourth. Then take the fifth.

DEAR ABBY: I met a guy four months ago at the home of mutual friends. I took one look at him and I knew he was for me. He told me later it was the same for him. There is just one problem – he's living with a woman and has been for nearly two years. I know he loves me, but he's a very decent guy and doesn't want to walk out on her.

He says she needs him, and she would probably kill herself if he left her. Abby, I need him, too. He is the first guy I have ever loved like this, and I know he loves me just as much.

We have to sneak around to be together, and I hate it! He's on my mind night and day. Now I know what it's like to be lovesick. Please tell me what to do. – LOVESICK

DEAR LOVESICK: Face it, this "decent guy" is cheating on the woman he's been living with for two years. And you're helping him. Tell him you can no longer be a party to this sneaky business, and refuse to see him until you can meet openly and honestly. The rest is up to him.

DEAR ABBY: Recently a graveyard on the outskirts of town was moved. A young man who had helped with the job reported that he had actually seen that hair and fingernails had continued to grow long after death.

I could hardly believe it, but I recall hearing that it was true some time ago. Is it? – WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: That myth has been around long enough to grow a beard. Of course it's not true. For hair and fingernails to grow, there must be life.

Superfoods help protect heart

Besides being full of nutrients, mushrooms, dried beans, onions, oats and tomatoes offer a heart-saving bonus, they lower cholesterol levels, says a report on "superfoods" in the current Family Circle magazine.

According to the report, nutrition experts agree these foods are among those that do the most to safeguard health and offer the most all-around nutrition for the calories they contain.

"Mushrooms have a high fiber content," notes Dr. Hans Fisher, chairman of the department of nutrition at Rutgers University. "Japanese researchers have clearly identified a substance in the fiber that interferes with cholesterol utilization," he said.

Women face office politics

Women in the work-force still have special problems, but can and do get to the top. The women who get there fastest are those who understand the unspoken codes, the power structure and, most importantly, the politics of an organization, according to "Harper's Bazaar."

In outlining how to play office politics these suggestions were made:

— Find out who holds the real power in the corporate structure, who the top people seek out for counsel, and who has "the power behind the throne." Get along with those people.

— Keep in mind that your immediate superior is the one you have to impress. Do not alienate that person.

— If you want a transfer because of a personality conflict, tell your boss it's for your own career goals and the company's needs — not because you don't like your superior.

Top food writer turns 80

Hearst Feature Service

At 80, James Beard is the dean of America's food writers. Although he originally planned to be an actor, he's content with his record: a dozen or so cookbooks, more cooking classes than he can count, a syndicated column, honors and accolades.

He even feels he's achieved his original goal. "A classroom is a theater," he says, "and to be a good teacher, you have to be an actor."

Cooks and food writers have come and gone since he entered the field, but Beard speaks highly of June Platt ("June Platt Party Cookbook," "Plain and Fancy," "New England Cooking" and a book about food with Sophie Kerr).

Paula Peck ("The Art of Fine Baking" and "The Art of Fine Cooking") gets a nod, too. "She came to my first cooking class," he said. "She had never had a cooking lesson, but she had great gifts, and within a year she was teaching her own classes."

His current favorites include Lydie Marshall, who has a cooking school in New York and has written her own book, and Penelope Casas, who recently published the definitive book on Spanish cooking called "The Foods and Wines of Spain."

While the takeout trend continues to grow, more cooks are making meals from scratch, Beard says.

Chicken for one-dish meal

Hearst Feature Service

LEMON CHICKEN CASSEROLE

¼ cup flour
1 tablespoon chopped fresh dill or 1 teaspoon dried dill
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 chicken (2½ to 3 pounds)
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 clove garlic, minced
2 cups chicken broth
¼ cup freshly squeezed lemon juice
¼ teaspoon grated lemon peel
2 ribs celery, chopped (¾ cup)
1 medium zucchini, sliced
½ pound small, mushrooms

In a plastic bag, combine flour, dill, salt and pepper. Add chicken; shake until well-coated.

In large skillet melt butter; cook garlic until golden. Add chicken pieces; brown on both sides. Remove and set aside. Drain fat from skillet. In same skillet stir in any remaining flour mixture; gradually add broth Stir in lemon juice, lemon peel and celery. Bring to a boil.

Return chicken to skillet. Cover. Simmer 15 minutes until chicken is tender Add zucchini and mushrooms; cover. Cook 10 minutes longer.

Jogging suits high fashion

Hearst Feature Service

The jogging suit now is as much a part of the Great American Wardrobe as sweaters and skirts, tailored ensembles, dresses and blazers. That's because many a non-athletic type has discovered the comfort and coziness of these outfits once restricted to rugged, outdoorsy types.

The inevitable result is that jogging suits have advanced from strictly functional and drearily simple to fashion — sometimes, quite high fashion. True, some stores and catalogs continue to classify them as "Weekend Wear." Perhaps they haven't been to all the right places of late.

"It looks just like a jogging suit, except that the pants aren't cuffed," remarked a professional fashion watcher at famed designer Sonia Rykiel's preview of her haute chic spring collection, held in Paris. As if she'd heard the remark, a few minutes later, onto the runway came another knit design in which the pants were definitely cuffed and blouses were in true jogging style.

Even the fabric makers are getting into the jogging fashion act. In February, Gold Mills introduced materials that contain "thread of light" reflective yarns, ranging from sheer to fleecy to heavier weights.

TURNIP POTATOES

Garlic adds character to this interesting combination to go with a family dinner.

In separate covered saucepans with 2 cups water and ½ clove garlic in each, turn 1 pound (3 medium) potatoes (peeled and diced) and ¾ pound small white turnips (peeled and diced) — there should be 3 cups of each vegetable. Boil until tender — 15 to 20 minutes. Drain; combine vegetables; mash. Return to a saucepan; over low heat stir in 4 to 8 tablespoons butter. Add salt and pepper to taste. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Strokes cripple

Stroke is the third most common cause of death and by far the leading cause of long-term disability in the United States today. More than 300,000 Americans are hit by this disease each year and some 180,000 die from it, according to a "Reader's Digest" article.

Woman dresses brides 14 years

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Yolanda Rossi, who has been dressing brides for 14 years, was talking about her biggest wedding.

It happened when Rosa Fragosa, 18, and Jose Isabel Vasquez, 24, walked down the aisle last December. A total of 52 couples — friends and relatives — came first.

Their flaming red Scarlett O'Hara gowns and white tuxedos came from Rossi's Bridal City, a bustling downtown Los Angeles shop full of fairy-tale wedding gowns and frilly-shirted tuxedoes. The establishment's customers have ranged from Ronald Reagan, during his days as governor, to Mrs. Fernando Valenzuela.

Rossi, who has owned Bridal City for four years, is used to large weddings. "In our culture," she explains, "the more couples in your party, the better you look."

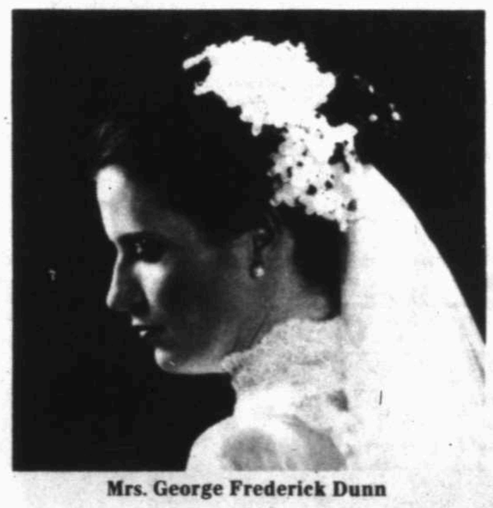

In a traditional Mexican wedding, there can be as many as 12 attendants, called "madrinas" and "padrinos," each with a role to perform in the ceremony. The "madrina de ramo" carries a bouquet of flowers for the Virgin Mary. The "madrina de laso" carries a jeweled or beaded rope that is placed around the couple as they say their vows, to symbolize their union.

The "madrina de arras" holds the 13 coins that the groom presents to the bride, as a wish of prosperity. The "Madrina de copas" carries the wine glasses for the toast, and a madrina or padrino carries a prayer book that outlines proper behavior, a rosary, a guest book for signatures and an embroidered pillow to commemorate the day for the bride and groom.

The bride also chooses another woman, usually not a relative, to be the "madrina de velacion" — sort of a guardian to provide advice and guidance throughout their married life.

The last in the procession will carry a doll whose dress is made of tiny "recuerdos" (remembrances), whimsical souvenirs for each guest to pin on. They may be in the shape of bridal couples or champagne glasses with a ribbon imprinted with the couple's name and wedding date.

"We do between five and 10 gowns a week, except during April and June, when we really get busy," Rossi said.

Mrs. George Frederick Dunn

STRICKLING-DUNN

St. Ann's Catholic Church was the setting for the Saturday wedding of Suzanne Patricia Strickling of Midland and George Frederick Dunn of Midland. The Reverend Clifford Blackburn officiated the 7 p.m. ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Alfred Strickling Jr. of Midland and Mr. Evans Hall Dunn of Tulsa, Okla. and Mrs. Frances Hill Metcalfe of Midland.

Matron of honor was Mary Lynn Hendricks Murray of Arlington. Bridesmaids were Margaret Ann Strickling of Midland, sister of the bride, Diane Elizabeth Strickling of Midland, sister of the bride, and Geraldine Elizabeth Dunn of Tulsa, Okla., sister of the groom. Bridesmatrons were Essie Kathryn Nydegger of Anchorage, Alaska, sister of the groom and Debra Hubley Ozanus of Dallas.

Best man was Albert Gallatin Metcalfe III of Denver, Colo.

Groomsmen were Benjamin Alfred Strickling III of Midland, brother of the bride, Joseph Dodd Strickling of Big Lake, brother of the bride, Stephen Michael Strickling of Midland, brother of the bride, Bryan Clayton Cotner of Hobbs, N. M. and Thomas Alan White of Midland.

Ushers were Stephen Jay Cummings of Midland, Thomas Edward Krawietz of Snyder and Larry Woodrow Kulbeth of Midland.

Following a trip to Hawaii, the couple will live in Tulsa, Okla.

Pritikin diet possibly not best for some

CHICAGO (AP) — People suffering angina of the leg — a potentially crippling ailment linked to high cholesterol — could relieve the condition with a more lenient eating regimen than the Pritikin low-fat diet, a new study suggests.

The study, published in today's editions of the Journal of the American Medical Association, clashes with reports suggesting the Pritikin diet outperforms other eating programs in reducing fat levels for the hundreds of thousands who have the disease.

But Dr. Nathan Pritikin said the one-year Canadian study, which compared two diets, inaccurately suggests one is similar to the diet he recommends.

Researchers say they tried to follow Pritikin's diet as closely as possible.

Grants help women

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Two foundations have awarded the Center for Women in Government $70,000 to extend its programs outside New York State.

The Rockefeller Family Fund and Joint Foundation Support each granted $35,000 to the Center, which was founded in 1978 to help remove barriers to the employment and promotion of women in the public sector.

Allergies caused by air conditioner

Hearst Feature Service

SAM ANTONIO — Beware the air from cooling air conditioners, say allergists.

"Dust and mold that collect in air conditioners are more of a problem in warm, dry climates because there's less humidity, and the water condenses and creates an excellent place for mold to grow," said Dr. Wallace Moore, a local allergist.

"People get sensitized to mold in the general environment, then they get even more uncomfortable when they are exposed to concentrated mold in the house," he said, adding that some of the side-effects of airborne particles may be a form of asthma, lung disease, nasal allergy and bronchitis.

But these problems can be avoided, experts agreed.

"Annual inspection and maintenance of filters can really help," said Howard Smith, service manager for Alamo Air Conditioning. "Mold and mildew problems occur when people don't take adequate care of their filters, which need to be changed monthy.

FABRIC SECRETS

BETTY MARTIN

Machine made buttonholes offer the advantages of strength and durability as compared to those that have been hand-stitched. They are also much quicker to make. If your sewing machine already has a buttonhole attachment, it will automatically make the buttonhole as you stitch. However, if your machine can make a zigzag stitch, a buttonhole attachment, is not needed. Set the dials for the width of the stitch that is desired and stitch along both sides of the buttonhole marking. Secure the ends of the buttonhole by setting the machine so that it tacks back and forth in the same place and seals the end shut. Lastly, cut open the hole after stitching.

You will find everything you need at LEGGETTS FABRICS to complete your next sewing project in a professional manner. Whether you need help in choosing a pattern, material or the right notions please don't ever hesitate to ask. Freshen air naturally

There are inexpensive ways to freshen the air in your home without resorting to artifical scents.

Recycled citrus peels are a natural air freshener. Put them into a warm oven or toss onto a wood fire; the citrus oils, released by the heat, will permeate the house with their tangy scent.

Another method is to place a pan of water with spices simmering on the stove. This can quickly give the house a pleasant, clean odor. Both methods are adapted from "Family Circle."

Stump, MS Society board member, a victim himself

By DIANE BOOTH
Lifestyle Writer

Multiple Sclerosis took Wayne Stump's body by surprise 11 years ago, but he doesn't let the disease get the best of him.

Stump, who will be 46 years old next month, is on the National Multiple Sclerosis Society Permian Basin Chapter board of directors and volunteers time reaching out to fellow MS persons.

The chapter includes 25 counties in the Permian Basin. More than 150 persons in the chapter area have contacted the organization which Stump said, "strives to serve the patient and take care of his needs as best we can."

A member of the 12-person board for two years, Stump is the only MS person on the panel, although three members' spouses suffer from the disease.

THE MIDLAND MAN HAS served as a chapter volunteer for about five years. The chapter has provided services for MS persons and their families here since 1965, but is now concentrating on keeping closer contact with those stricken by MS.

"MS patients are the only ones who can remotely understand what the patient goes through. It's important for them to have someone to talk to," Stump said.

"We find ways to make things a little bit easier for them."

For example, said the chapter's Executive Director Judy Dixon, the organization locates and distributes equipment such as wheelchairs and walkers, arranges for physical therapy at West Texas Rehabilitation Center and helps with obtaining financial assistance.

All the society's programs are supported entirely by voluntary contributions and fundraisers. About 60 percent of money raised here assists persons in the local chapter and the balance funds research, Dixon said.

"WE NEED TO MEET the patients' needs and try to fill those as best we can and make things as comfortable as possible for them by lending moral support," Stump said. "We try to remove some of the obstacles associated with the disease."

Multiple sclerosis is a "shot in the dark," Stump said.

It is a chronic, often disabling disease of the central nervous system, which consists primarily of the brain and spinal cord, according to the society.

Multiple schlerosis is a greek term which means "many scars." The protective myelin sheath surrounding the nerve fibers in the central nervous system breaks down and becomes inflamed. Multiple plaques or scars are formed which short-circuit nerve impulses leading from the brain to various parts of the body.

IT IS NOT FATAL, hereditary or contagious, said the society, and most frequently attacks men and women from 20 to 40 years of age.

The cause still baffles scientists. The most common theory about the disease's cause, Stump said, is it is a virus contracted by children by the age of six years. The virus is dormant in the body until an unknown factor triggers it 20 or 30 years later, he said.

The first symptom of the disease is dysfunction of the eyes, such as blurred or double vision, numbness of the extremities, tingling sensations or muscle cramps.

Its course is unpredicatable and varies from person to person.

Some people may have as few as two attacks and the disease will not recur. It is more common for attacks to be followed by periods of remission. Others have a chronic, progressive form of the disease and their symptoms steadily worsen.

THE FIRST SYMPTOM usually subsides, Stump said, and the disease becomes active again but it could be weeks or decades before another symptom appears.

MS goes into remission and victims will usually recover part of what the disease took away, but not 100 percent, Stump said.

The nature of the disease is progression, he said. MS persons start off using a cane to get around and later move to a walker, wheelchair and eventually are bedridden.

"MS is not crippling from the word go for many patients," he said.

There is no known cure for MS and the varied treatments work well for some people while they have no affect on others. Side effects brought on by medications, he said, are often worse than the disease itself.

"MS PATIENTS HAVE LIKE symptoms but no two cases are alike. That's the reason why it is so hard for doctors to prescribe medications."

Stump first experienced problems with his eyes at the age of 35. "It was like a bright light in my eyes." He consulted an opthalmologist who told him his eyes were fine.

He was told to see a physician if the problem persisted but it subsided after a few days.

Seven months later he experienced a numbness in his forearm and within days it spread up to his shoulder. He went to Odessa for tests and later to Dallas and after three weeks the diagnosis came back MS.

The disease was diagnosed after a process of elimination, he said. "They test you for everything and tell you what you don't have."

Although the news wasn't good, he said, "I was fortunate. Many times patients aren't diagnosed for years."

A MEAT CUTTER BY TRADE, Stump took a medical retirement from his job six weeks after the diagnosis was confirmed.

Since he worked with cutting machinery, he said it wasn't practical for him to continue with his job. "My arm can take off and go whenever it wants to."

He hasn't worked since, but is considering seeking a marketing position which would be limited to desk work.

"It was a pretty good jolt," Stump said. "But you don't give up hope. You can't throw up your hands and quit living. MS is a definite inconvenience but it is not something a person can't live with. It's not hard to find someone in worse shape."

Married to Wilda and the father of three daughters, he stressed the disease is "a family affair. It touches and involves each family member. You work it out the best way you can."

Stump communicates with other MS persons by telephone from his Midland home. "It's a help for patients to pick up the phone and just talk. This is very important to anyone with a chronic disease. They need to keep lines of communication open. They don't want to get to the point where they shut themselves off."

"PATIENTS NEED CONTACT. Most all M S people are positive people who are coping very well. They realize depression or worrying is not a help. They live day to day and do the best with what they've got and don't worry about the rest of it.

"That's my philosophy, 100 percent."

Longest Day of Golf to benefit Multiple Sclerosis

Golf foursomes will be swinging, putting and driving to earn money for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society Permian Basin Chapter from July 10-July 30.

The Longest Day of Golf fundraising campaign is designed to raise money to pay for health care, physical therapy, community education programs and research for those afflicted with MS, a disease of the central nervous system.

Each foursome will play as many holes as possible on one day. Each team member will find sponsors to pledge a certain amount of money for every hole completed.

For further information call the MS Society at 683-5444.

Wayne Stump, board member of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society Permian Basin Chapter, volunteers time to contact fellow MS persons. Afflicted with the disease for 11 years, he emphasizes the importance of reaching out to others with MS for moral support. "You can't throw up your hands and quit living," he said.

Laser disc players compute in Midland audio market

By DAVID LEE FORREST
Lifestyle Writer

If Midlanders follow the latest trend in home entertainment systems, many of their stereo systems will soon include a laser beam interpreting billions of microscopic bits of computer-encoded information.

This exotic equipment is the heart of the new digital compact disc players which Midland audio equipment dealers have just recently started marketing here.

"In my opinion, it has to be the greatest thing to come along in audio in the last 15 years," said Jim Shupe of Folger's Home Entertainment Center, which just yesterday demonstrated its first CD system.

The discs represent "as big a difference today from the typical stereo LP as stereo had from mono 25 years ago," said Paul Nachbar of Electronic Service Center, one of only 25 dealerships in the U.S. selling the Sony CD system.

THE ONLY SIMILARITIES in appearance between compact discs and the normal stereo record is that they are both round and have a hole in the center.

Compact discs are 4¾ inches in diameter, smaller than a standard 45 RPM single, but can contain up to one hour of music, all of which is recorded on only one side of the disc.

The disc is permanently sealed inside a plastic case and has a bright, mirror-like sheen. When the light hits it at certain angles the disc shows a rainbow of colors like a prism. It looks much like something NASA would have attached to a Pioneer spacecraft.

The disc players, while they vary among models and manufacturers, generally resemble conventional stereo cassette decks on the outside, with fast forward and reverse controls which allow the user to find specific parts of a recording. Inside, however, the CD players each contain a small, low-powered laser.

While the disc spins over the beam at speeds varying from 200 to 500 RPM, the laser, mounted on an arm, moves outward from the center of the disc. The laser "reads" a series of microscopic pits under the plastic case — roughly 15 billion pits on a single disc — like the needle of a record player reads the grooves on a conventional record.

CNS Photo

State-of-the-art Midlanders are already looking at laser disc players, the latest in consumer audio equipment. Some local retailers say they are selling the components, which range from $800 - $1,500, as quickly as they can bring them into their stores.

ALL OF THIS COMPLEX engineering produces "the cleanest sound anything can give you," according to Shupe.

The discs have nearly twice the dynamic range — the difference between the softest and the loudest sound in a recording — of most conventional records. Surface noise on the discs is "just about nonexistent" according to Greg Byrd of the Sound Machine, which will start selling CD systems next month.

Dust, fingerprints, scratches and vibrations do not harm a disc's sound quality. The laser beam, unlike a phonograph needle, does not "skip." Since the pits are protected inside their plastic coating they also do not wear down like record grooves.

A disc is "virtually indestructible," Byrd said.

"It'll last you a lifetime," said Nachbar.

Although the individual discs are expensive — prices average from $18-$19 each, the fact that they should outlast any ordinary record will "save you money in the long run," according to Shupe.

THEY ARE NOT WITHOUT problems, however. The supply of material on discs is "not up to par yet", Shupe said.

"They are scarce," Roger Fox of Audio-Pro said of the discs. Unless a greater variety of music is recorded on the discs, their popularity will be limited, he said.

Musical choices on discs are still limited. Out of the entire CBS record catalog, for example, only 16 titles are presently recorded on CDs. Also, most CD recordings are of classical rather than popular music.

None of the discs are now made in the U.S. There are only three plants making them in the world, two in Europe and one in Japan, Nachbar said, although two American plants are under construction.

Another problem is that the original master recordings for many albums were not made digitally. This means that even when put onto the new discs, these albums fail to deliver the sound quality possible with a CD system.

"It'll still be better than any vinyl recording would be, but it's not up to the potential of the machine," Nachbar said. He said that the record industry's transition to manufacturing CD is comparable in difficulty to the U.S. converting to the metric system of measurement.

NACHBAR ESTIMATED THAT by December there might be between 750 to 1,000 different recordings available on compact discs.

Another drawback to CD systems is the players' cost. Prices range from approximately $800 to $1,500.

Shupe said he expects the price of the machines to come down eventually, but that the discs' cost will remain approximately the same. He also said that in three years there will be an ample supply of different album titles available on compact discs.

A few audio dealers speculated that if the CD system is successful in the home stereo market it may be used in cars within a few years, perhaps eventually replacing the automobile tape deck. Sony has already suggested that it may manufacture a personal stereo, like the company's highly successful "Walkman," using the discs instead of cassettes.

Whatever its future, the CD system has arrived in Midland.

"We seem to do pretty well with them," said Fox. "They're not real hot movers because of their expense."

"EVERY ONE I CAN get my hands is selling," Nachbar said.

"You have 'state-of-the-art' customers," said Byrd. "We have a lot of customers here in Midland who want the truest sound possible. If the sound is as fantastic as everybody says, then they sell."

Body building doesn't rob women of femininity

Q: A woman body builder is (a) a masculine woman (b) a muscle freak (c) a female hulk (d) none of the above.

A: A woman body builder is (a) self-disciplined (b) self-motivated (c) totally feminine (d) all of the above.

By GAYLE CRNKOVIC
Copley News Service

JOLIET, Ill. — Anne Hope was meeting me for a luncheon interview and I was a little apprehensive. According to those who had referred her, Anne was the best woman body builder in this area.

"Who are you meeting?" I heard the hostess inquire as I peeked beyond my booth. There she is, I thought, just as I imagined: broad shoulders, short hair, little or no makeup. She'll walk up to the table and say, "Hi, I'm a body builder. Ya wanna arm wrestle?"

My exaggerated thoughts continued, but that woman never came. Moments later, a tall, slender, pretty young woman with long blonde hair, dressed in an orchid warm-up suit approached my table. The only word I had imagined correctly was, "Hi." This was Anne Hope.

I told her what I had expected and she laughed. "The whole idea is to become muscular, but not be lacking in femininity," she explained. "Most women start out feeling they don't want to get 'muscle-bound.' But women can't get muscle-bound because they lack the male hormone, testosterone. Women have some but not nearly as much as men."

ANNE HAS ALWAYS been athletic. Her mother was a runner, her older brother always a source of competition.

At 29, Anne looks athletic, the tennis player-gymnast-type athlete. "I'm not coordinated enough for gymnastics," she says.

Anne studied weightlifting in college because it has to do with muscle development and the physiology of muscle tissue which she studied in graduate school. "You can't separate body building from other athletics. It builds tendon and ligament strength to avoid injuries," she says.

Anne is women's athletic director at the College of St. Francis and has been chosen as the National Association of Inter-Collegiate Athletics' Coach of the Year.

Anne says her work is totally unrelated to her body-building activities.

She began supervised building over two years ago to improve her upper-body strength for racquetball. "Most women don't like to lift weights, but the crude saying, 'No pain, no gain,' is probably true; you do have to lift heavy weights in order to improve strength," she says.

"It's the most wonderful thing that ever happened to my body. It got rid of all cellulite and extra fat deposits. I recommend it for staying in shape."

WOMEN'S COMPETITION is relatively new. The popularity began in the 1970s. Most women competitors are in their late 20s, early 30s.

Anne began training for competition in 1981. She trained faithfully six days a week and felt guilty when she didn't. "It's a matter of self-discipline," she says.

In June 1982, after one year of rigid training, Anne entered the Novice Illinois competition and won first in her height class and first overall. She later took second in the tall class at the Ms. Illinois competition.

"I love competing. I hate to lose more than I like to win, but I haven't been a real loser," she says.

She considers herself a young body builder in terms of experience. "When you go into competition you realize how many things you must improve on," she says.

In competition, symmetry or definition of the different muscles is the crucial determination.

"I've never fought a battle to lose weight, but I know what dieting is," Anne says. All three food groups are important to your diet when training, but near competition, fat and carbohydrates must be cut down. For the last two to three weeks, Anne eats mostly protein, which is unhealthy for anyone for any length of time, she says. She supplements with vitamins and minerals. The body must then metabolize its own fat and energy.

THE LAST TWO WEEKS, Anne says, she is not an easy person to live with.

Aerobics become an important part of training. It keeps fat levels down and builds the heart and lungs. It also helps thin out the skin so muscle definition is greater, Anne explains. "It enlarges blood vessels and helps circulation. You want to see vascularity," she says.

The week before competition, Anne's fat intake is cut to zero. She becomes "lean and hungry," a do-or-die attitude. Her days are hyper, her nights sleepless. Her total concentration is on the contest.

The morning of competition Anne is awake too early. She eats only dried fruit and nuts — if she eats at all — and takes calcium tablets to avoid cramps as she keeps liquids out of her system as long as possible.

BEFORE GOING OUT on stage, competitors "pump-up," doing light weight repetitions to get blood into the muscles.

There is an organizational meeting held on what's going to happen and poses required.

Contestants then compete according to height class, doing mandatory poses and a one-minute individual routine.

Non-smokers begin getting tough with puffers

By KAY JARVIS-PROKOP
Copley News Service

The couple was standing in the outdoor patio of a triplex theater when a man turned and said, "Your cigarette is bothering me."

The woman jumped guiltily and said, "But we're out in the open air."

"That doesn't matter," he retorted. "It still bothers me."

To make an ugly little tale somewhat briefer, the woman's husband — himself a non-smoker — stepped in and tried to explain that nowhere is smoking in the open air prohibited.

"Then tell her to stand downwind," the other man ordered.

"YOU stand downwind, you officious little ... " said the woman's husband, taking a menacing step forward.

That stopped the action and everybody trooped rather sulkily into the theater, no one having won and all concerned having lost a little something in composure and that ephemereal goal of loving our fellow man no matter how obnoxious we think he is.

THIS LITTLE ANECDOTE exemplifies what the following story is all about: how today's social pressures affect smokers and whether those pressures do, indeed, give them any added incentive to quit.

First, let's take a look at some of the more obvious pressures that have come to bear on America's 53 million smokers since the Surgeon General's report about smoking was issued in 1964.

Obviously they have been taught the meaning of the word "humility." They are shoved into the backs of planes, the draftier sections of restaurants and told not to practice their addiction in stores or public buildings. They are approached on a rather frequent basis by complete strangers who feel they have every right to tell them how unpleasant their habit is, although those same strangers would probably not feel moved to suggest a more frequent trip to the dentist, an alternative deodorant or a new haberdasher.

There are activist groups working to legislate the smoker out of existence, and in some cities the citizen's arrest is becoming a popular pastime among those wishing to stub out the nicotine addict. Some companies are refusing to hire them. On the other end of this tug-of-war is the tobacco industry, which spends half a billion dollars a year on advertising and promotion and which takes in $18 billion in sales.

According to information provided by the American Cancer Society, there are 33 million ex-smokers in the United States. Of those, a whopping 95 percent quit on their own with no intervention from anti-smoking clinics, aversion therapy or other organized groups. Most quit by going cold turkey. The statistics also show that eight out of 10 current smokers have tried to quit, but a third went back to smoking after a week and only a quarter managed to go six months or more without smoking.

NOWHERE WILL YOU FIND information leading to the conclusion that smoking is un-hazardous to your health, and smokers have not been moved to form activist groups of their own, unless you count PUFF, an acronym for People United to Fight Fanatics, which was founded in 1977 in Lubbock, Texas.

Nobody hears much about PUFF, but the Group Against Smoking Pollution has recently affiliated with Californians for Non-Smokers Rights, according to spokesman Howard Mitchell.

Mitchell says the group sponsored an assertiveness training seminar in an effort to learn how to deal most effectively with the smoker.

"We attack the problem, not the person," Mitchell says. "Rather than saying, 'Your smoking is bothering me,' we say, 'Smoke from your cigarette is causing a problem.'"

If the smoker, who was presumably enjoying his vice, becomes surly, Mitchell says you then offer to buy him a drink or a dessert. (Although alcohol is also an addiction and also legal, it apparently does not cause the same discomfort to the non-smoker unless it gets spilled on him.)

ALL OF THIS comes under the heading of "social pressures" on smokers, and any nicotine addict who says he hasn't noticed them is evidently walking around with his head in a cloud of smoke.

And that may be true, since American Cancer Society statistics show that Americans who do smoke are smoking more heavily, thereby contributing to an annual increase in tobacco sales of a little over 1 percent.

The latest statistics from the cancer society show the lung cancer rate in women up 313 percent since 1950 and 800 percent since 1930. (In 1930, 2.2 of 100,000 women died of lung cancer; in 1979 it was 19.8 of 100,000.) Figures were provided by the National Center for Health Statistics and the Census Bureau.

There is concern that teenagers, particularly teenage girls, are smoking more and at a younger age. To combat that, Betsy Marshburn of the cancer society said a "Dragon Lady" anti-smoking campaign will be launched in the near future. "It will be aimed toward telling girls the bad effects of smoking on their hair, teeth and overall health and beauty," she said.

SO HOW DOES the tobacco industry combat the negativism wafting around smoking? Robert Bennett Jr., assistant treasurer of the $13 billion R.J. Reynolds Co., recently gave one during an interview. He said the conclusion that cancer is caused by smoking is based on statistics and that so far actual clinical identification of a substance in cigarettes which could cause cancer has not been made.

And if it is?

"Then we'll eliminate that substance," Bennett said.

Of course, every smoker has an anecdote to tell, although none was interested in having his name used.

A usually non-argumentative man said he lit up on a bus chartered by a club for a weekend outing and was asked by a woman to stop. "There is no smoking on buses," she told him.

"THERE'S NO BOOZE on buses, either, unless it's a charter, and we seem to have plenty of both," he responded. (He did put out the cigarette when the woman said she was allergic to smoke.)

A woman office worker said she smokes only when she's away from her desk. "I like to smoke, but I know I should stop and there is a lot of pressure from people around me."

A society columnist said he has found no particular rules or restrictions at soigne gatherings and dinner parties. "It seems pretty much good manners to put out ashtrays for guests. After all, the essence of good manners is to make your friends comfortable."

That isn't always the case. An executive told of visiting friends in another city and having his wife asked not to smoke. "We hadn't seen them in years and were only there for a couple of hours. I thought it was rude but my wife seemed to accept it gracefully."

AND FINALLY, A sophisticated middle-age woman recalls with some humor the man who approached her while she was trying to extract cigarettes from a balky machine:

"God doesn't want you to smoke, you know," he said.

"Oh," she said in mock horror, "Did God break the cigarette machine?"

"You never know," the man sagely replied.

Peculiarly, it is the cigar smoker who receives more protection in posh places, even though the aroma is definitely more noticeable.

Forbes magazine recently reported that 53 percent of the top executives of large companies smoke cigars — on the average of about five per day.

These men, who inhabit the upper echelons of the world and spend liberally wherever they go, are insulated from insults in such posh watering holes as Four Seasons, La Grenouille and La Cote Basque in New York.

ALTHOUGH IT MAY TAKE some divine intervention for many of America's 53 million smokers to give up their addiction, nervous habit, oral fixation or even pleasure, it appears that most will do it alone and without the nagging of either friend or stranger.

Cigs have changed since origin

Copley News Service

Since the smoking battle has been so hotly engaged, it might be interesting to know who started it all in the first place.

It was not our European or Asiatic or African friends who thought of it. Tobacco was unknown to Aristotle, Moses, Jesus and Caesar. Not until Columbus set sail with his three little ships and eventually docked in the New World was smoking documented. It was the American Indian who was blowing smoke rings.

Europeans thought this newly discovered weed was a dandy idea, once the Spanish brought it to everybody's attention. Back on our own shores a century or so later, the planned cultivation and growing of tobacco was introduced at Jamestown, Va. That was about 1619, and during the next three centuries a fat cylinder of leaves called a cigar smoldered its way into popularity.

The next great smoking breakthrough was made in the late 1800s by a new outfit called the American Tobacco Co. It was a thinner cylinder wrapped in paper, didn't smell as awful and could be inhaled. It was called a cigarette.

That innovation created one of the world's great private fortunes for the James B. Duke family, founders of Duke University. Some trust-busting by the Supreme Court in the early 1920s opened the competition and the European market found it liked the milder Virginia and burley tobaccos more than the heavier Turkish blends.

Through the next decades and two world wars, Americans smoked in restaurants, planes, railroad stations, buses and other people's living rooms. There were smoking sections in the loges of movie theaters where smokers happily inhaled along with their favorite actors on the silver screen.

There were outcries against smoking on moral rather than health grounds, and it was thought particularly coarse for women to smoke. In the Roaring '20s women took up cigarettes along with fringed skirts, bathtub gin and the Charleston as ways of being "daring." But it was not until the men went to fight during World War II and the women went to work in defense plants that smoking became acceptable for them. There are now 25 million female smokers.

It has not been chronicled in any of those references that anybody said, "Don't do that, you're polluting my environment."

But with the famous report of 1964, it all began to change. The tobacco companies began to fight back with what has come to be called "the tar wars." In 1967 only 2 percent of cigarette sales were in the low-tar category; by 1980, 45 percent of American smokers had turned to cigarettes containing 15 milligrams or less of tar.

Rented cars may save

Consumers looking for a way to cut their monthly automobile transportation costs may wonder whether leasing a new car would be cheaper than buying.

While leasing is generally more expensive for most consumers over the long run, the Automobile Information Council has said leasing can be cheaper for some individuals eligible for business transportation tax exemptions and can have other advantages for consumers as well.

Advantages include elimination of the down payment. For the same amount of money paid on a new car monthly loan installment, many consumers may find they can lease a more luxurious auto.

In both types of leases the consumer must pay for any maintanence and repairs and must stay within the mileage limits stated in the lease. If the car is turned in at the end of the lease in need of repairs or the mileage limit has been exceeded, the consumer must pay additional payments to cover these costs.

Consumers, especially those who cannot deduct car expenses from their income tax, are advised by the council to carefully weigh the costs and benefits before leasing.

Fireworks require care

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fireworks caused injury to about 8,500 people last year, a decline from the year before, but still high enough to prompt safety officials to issue their annual pre-July Fourth warnings.

Fireworks have been popular in the United States since the birth of the nation and are an integral part of the annual Independence Day festivities.

According to the American Pyrotechnics Association, which represents makers of fireworks, firecrackers account for most of the injuries, particularly the large devices that are banned, but still sold by some dealers.

Legal fireworks must carry the designation "Class C Common Fireworks" the association reports, and must meet minimum standards for sturdiness of construction and safety labeling. Class B fireworks also are available for professionals putting on shows.

The association warns buyers to avoid any firework that is leaking powder, appears old or shows signs of mishandling. Such fireworks can misfire.

A loose fuse can also prevent a firework from firing properly.

Fireworks that have been wet and then dried should not be used, since water changes the way the chemicals inside react.

The operating principle of fireworks is simple: controlled combustion, using black powders as a main ingredient. As explosives, they should be treated wih care, warns the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. The Consumer Product Safety Commission offers these safety suggestions:

—Before using any fireworks, read and follow the warning instructions on the label.

—Do not allow young children to play with fireworks, they are not toys.

—If older children are allowed to use fireworks, make sure an adult supervises.

—Light fireworks outdoors, away from houses and from any flammable materials such as gasoline.

—Have a bucket of water ready for any emergency and for dousing any fireworks that don't go off. Never try to relight them.

—Make sure people are out of range before lighting fireworks.

—Never light firerworks in a container, particularly one made of glass or metal.

Panel addresses consumer beefs

By JIMMY THORNTON
Copley News Service

Most people know what to do when an appliance breaks down. You either call the repair service of the store from which you bought it or look up a repair business in the Yellow Pages.

If they can't resolve the problem, then you may go directly to the manufacturer.

However, sometimes there are complex problems with an appliance, usually after warranty, where neither the manufacturer nor the consumer can reach an agreement. What then?

That's when you should seek the help of the Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel (MACAP), advises Dr. Elsie Fetterman, newly elected chairman of the panel and assistant director of the Cooperative Extension Service for home economics at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

MACAP is not a replacement for the consumer relations departments of appliance manufacturers, she said, but is there when all else fails. It is an independent industry-sponsored panel of professionals from the fields of law, education and engineering. They review individual consumer problems and recommend what they consider a fair settlement.

Fetterman said most of the complaints that reach the panel involve out-of-warranty service or delays for parts or service, excessive charges or allegations of defective appliances.

What products does MACAP cover? Compactors, dehumidifiers, dishwashers, disposals, gas incinerators, water heaters, home laundry equipment, microwave ovens, ranges, refrigerators and freezers and room air conditioners are within its scope. You can contact MACAP at 20 North Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill., 60606.

Complaints on airlines down

The Civil Aeronautics Board reports that consumer complaints about airlines declined 27 percent in the first quarter of this year.

Total complaints received by the agency reached 2,075 for the three months, down from 2,858 in the same period last year. Flight problems such as delays were the leading cause of complaints, followed by disputes over refunds and baggage.

The highest complaint rate was recorded by Guy America Airways at 96 complaints per 100,000 passengers during the three months, the CAB said.

Several airlines had no complaints filed against them with the CAB during the period. They included Air California, Air Florida, Alaska Airlines, Aloha Airlines, Capitol, Hawaiian, Midway, Ozark, Piedmont, PSA, Southwest, Flying Tiger, Transamerica, Wien Air Alaska and World Airways.

Lyricist delivers music message

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "What I'm trying to do is give kids a positive outlook on life through music," says Stephen Star, whose records deal with such subjects as prejudice, drug abuse and peer pressure.

"But I'm not lecturing at all. They're really fun albums," he adds of the two — one rock and one country — he has already produced in the Rainbows and Stars series, with a third album in the works.

The songs, aimed at youngsters from 4 to 14, are sung by professionals with band backup. The kids enjoy humming along with the music and absorb the message without realizing it, he explains, pointing out, for example, that the word "prejudice" is never even mentioned in a song which says, in part:

"I know I'm different by myself; I don't need to hear it from somebody else; I spend my time all alone; Why do those people need to throw stones?"

Among the themes of the 20 songs already recorded, for which Star has written the music and the lyrics, are friendship, feelings, discovery, patriotism, respect, happiness, studying and self-esteem. The music, he says, is "the kind children want to hear, and the lyrics are the kind they need to hear and their parents want them to hear."

"No one is really addressing kids," the bearded, 30-year-old resident of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., said in an interview. "They need to know about their own worth, to feel good about themselves. I want kids to know there's reality in life but that they can also follow their dreams.

"I've found music is a universal language," says Star, who has been playing drums and singing since he was 12. "When I was in the Air Force stationed in Spain, I was in a band with three Spaniards who spoke no English. I sang and they played and we got along great."

When young people have a feeling of their own worth, they won't be open to peer pressure, believes Star, who puts it this way in a song:

Sleeve heads

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

In teaching tailoring, one of the most difficult points to get across is the importance — or even the purpose — of sleeve heads.

First of all, the name is confusing — I think someone should work on changing that.

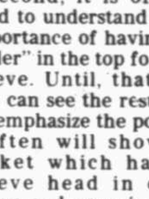

Second, it is often hard to understand the importance of having a "filler" in the top fo the sleeve. Until, that is, you can see the results. To emphasize the point, I often will show a jacket which has a sleeve head in one sleeve and none in the other. The difference makes the point very well.

For your sleeve heads, you will need ¼ yard lamb's wool (one ¼-yard piece will make several heads).

From the lamb's wool, on the true bias, cut two bias strips approximately 6 inches long by 3½ inches wide. For a man's jacket, the strips should be an inch or two longer and ½ inch wider.

AT WORK

Work for ex-convicts

DR. ADELE M. SCHEELE

Q.I am the editor of The Echo,the monthly newspaper for theTexas Department of Corrections,and need some advice for former convicts. As you might know, for-mer felons have great difficultiesobtaining jobs. What should theydo or say to impress their inter-viewers? I often hear recidivistssay, "If only I could have gotten ajob, I would not have returned toprison..."

A. Your question touches on a subject close to my heart. I'd first like to commend you for your concern and for the job that you are doing.

Second, I'd suggest that you coach former convicts to tell prospective employers how they reformed and what their intentions are now in a confidential yet strong manner. "I am a trained repairman and an ex-convict. I need you to trust me. I'm willing to sign a pledge that I will be an honest employee, as well as a competent one."

Or, you might think about what jobs use a certain amount of initiative and you might come up with an entrepreneurial idea of your own: a fast foods franchise, for instance. Obviously, the more contacts you have inside the business world, the more you can persuade leaders to try an experimental jobs program.

Q. For the past 17 years I have been employed in the purchasing department of a local community action program, but I feel deadended at this point. I'm 42 and have had an interest in public speaking ever since my high school days. I'm active in church activities, serve as toast mistress of programs and deliver speeches on many occasions. How do I find a career in public speaking that would compensate me?

A. You might start by combining the two areas that you know. Perhaps the purchasing agent's association would be a good lead. They might be looking for representatives themselves or might know of someone who is.

Don't worry about being 42, because that old saying is even more vital than ever — life does begin at 40. What that means is that you can start living for yourself and you don't have to live in the shadow of other's expectations.

Talk to the members of your church and see who knows a company that would pay to you to speak for them or represent them. Look into local political groups or companies headquartered in your city that have plants or branches across the country.

In every case, when you go to meet the representative of the company, remember that they are the person to whom you give your first speech. Make a sales presentation to make them want you to represent them. Good luck.

Got an on-the-job problem? Write to Adele Scheele, care of this newspaper.

AT WIT'S END

Husband runs everywhere

By ERMA BOMBECK

Vacations used to be a great escape. For a couple of weeks a year, you got away from the routine.

Not anymore.

Now you can follow your hobbies and avocations all over the world without missing a beat. There are wine-tasting tours, ski tours, jazz tours, bicycle tours and a tour of cooking schools for gourmet cooks.

There's a chocolate tour (guaranteed to make every single occupancy into a double on the return trip), a cathedral tour and even a pasta tour.

But the one I clipped from the paper and stuffed down the disposer is the marathon tour for runners.

If you're married to a runner, I don't have to tell you how the thought of running around the world would make him salivate right down his or her chin.

Do you have any idea what it's like to travel with a man who packs everything he needs for a three-week cruise in a gym bag?

Who never knows what time it is because a runner's watch takes three days to set?

Who, when someone says, "You look terrible. Have you been sick?" smiles and says, "Thank you."

My husband has run all over the world, knocking over little old ladies in every language. He has caused traffic jams in Copenhagen, raised eyebrows in Brazil and been stalked by hungry wart hogs in Africa. The man is certifiable.

There is no other sport in the world that is so addictive to travelers. With hockey players, you can lose their sticks and they're out of business. With golfers and tennis players, they need a partner. But with runners, they're all they need.

No one talks about runner's widows, but we exist. We're the ones sitting at a breakfast table alone because he has to run and shower before breakfast.

We're the ones with athletic supporters stuffed in our handbags in a plastic bag when they didn't dry the night before.

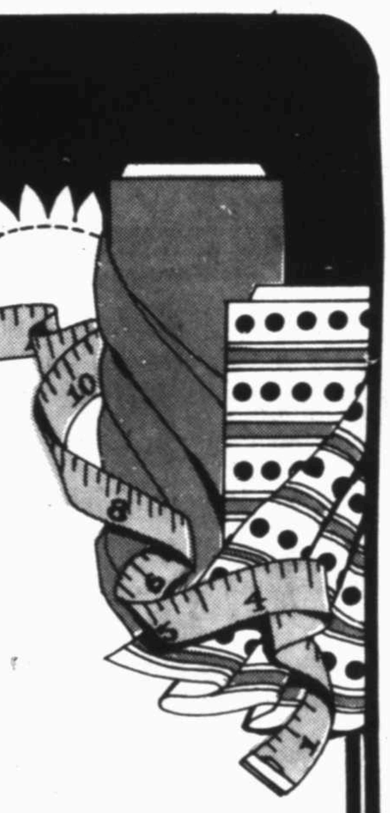

We're the ones who drag out of a warm bed at 7 in the morning to open the hotel room door because he has no place on his body to carry the hotel key.

When my husband returned with the paper he said, "What's missing? What did you cut out?"

"A recipe for tripe quiche," I said.

He bought it. He runs long and fast. I never said he was bright.

Buenos Aires: Parisian flavor south of the border

CNS Photo

This modern day gaucho sports the tall, black leather boots, wide leatherbelt and sheepskin-covered saddle that have been trademarks of the Argentine cowboys for hundreds of years.

The popular musical, Evita, brought the story of Argentina's controversial former First Lady to the world. Eva Peron's grave draws a stream of daily visitors from curious tourists to loyal Peronistas, members of one of two major political parties.

A living symbol of Argentina's rich cultural heritage, these folk singers wear colorful native Indian costumes as they perform their music on handmade instruments.

By LOU ANNE JOHNSON
Copley News Service

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — En route to this city, known as the "Paris of the Americas," I envisioned raven-haired couples dancing the sensuous tango ... vast ranches where the famous Argentine beef cattle graze ... handsome, rugged gauchos galloping across the plains on sheepskin-saddled horses.

One out of three ain't bad. Our tour of a huge estanchia (ranch) provided the opportunity to stand uncomfortably close — at some poits without the psychological, if not physical, protection of strong fences — to some very big bulls.

Our meal at the estanchia was a typical Argentine dinner including chorizo (blood sausage), sizzling steaks, empanadas (meat-filled pastries) and good local wine. As we dined we were serenaded by folk-singers strumming guitarlike instruments and wearing colorful native Indian dress.

I was disappointed that my romantic notions of gauchos (cowboys) were far from true. Gone are the brawling bruisers who delighted in their dangerous games of pato (Spanish for duck). Pato was invented over 300 years ago and was described in the literature of 1610 as "a savage confrontation of men on horseback, who utilizg a dead duck and play the game with brutal ferocity, with absolute disregard for human life."

GAUCHOS OF YORE would choose sides, stuff a dead duck into a leather pouch and fight to keep the other team from running off with the duck. This rough game was played entirely on horseback, with broken arms and legs and an occasional death resulting from the mayhem on horseback.

Today pato is played on football-size fields with a referee to ensure proper conduct. The duck has been replaced by a ball with handles for passing from player to player. Gauchos have undergone a similar transition, becoming civilized, hardworking ranch hands.

Sports are popular in Argentina, and visitors can enjoy the action of bocci (outdoor bowling), world-class polo, horse racing, soccer and international boxing.

Another extremely popular and exciting sport enjoyed by visitors is shopping, particularly for leather and woolen goods. Leather purses, coats, briefcases, shoes, gloves and other articles bear the hand-stitching which makes Argentine leather products among the world's finest.

BEFORE YOU'VE SPENT all your money (and it will buy a great deal in this unstable economy), buy some beautiful leather luggage to bring home your treasures.

If shopping isn't your bag, you will still enjoy your tour of one of the world's most beautiful, historic and clean cities. Over 400 years of history have combined with one of the highest literacy rates in Latin America to produce a city of cultural delights.

Three opera houses provide the ultimate in cultural entertainment for visitors. Symphonic concerts, operas, ballets and guest performances bring the best of the world's entertainers to Buenos Aires.

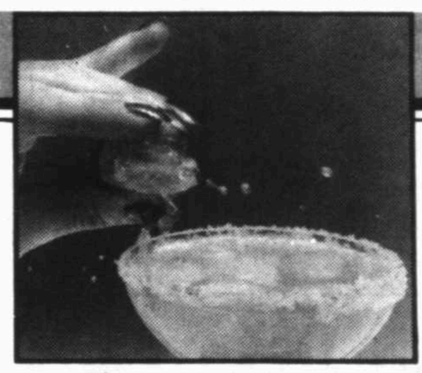

An unlikely tourist attraction, but one many people enjoy, is Recoleta Cemetery near the heart of the city. This tree-lined cemetery is completely walled in and contains beautiful statues and memorials. Based on the Italian custom of providing a family mausoleum, caskets are shelved underground. After 25 years, remains are transferred to beautiful urns to make room for new caskets. Eva Peron's family mausoleum is among the many which contain the remains of many of the country's aristocrats.

FROM THE HISTORICAL center of the city, the Plaza de Mayo, visitors can view the Pink House (Casa Rosada) where the presidential office is located. Fanning out from the Plaza de Mayo are avenues boasting sidewalk cafes, restaurants and shops. Two of the more-famous streets are Avenida 9 de Julio and Calle Corrientes.

Avenida 9 is the widest avenue in the world (over 460 feet) and sports an impressive obelisk, numerous artistic fountains, magnificent trees and colorful cafes. Calle Corrientes, the "Broadway" of Argentina, is the center of the city's theater district and abounds with theaters, cafes, girlie shows and tango parlors.

It takes two to tango, right? Not in Buenos Aires. The word "tango" usually brings to mind the dance with the distinctive music. Actually, the dance is only a part of the tango tradition. Tango parlors provide a variety of entertainment, only a part of which is the tango dance. The two-hour show we saw at Michelangelo's, a popular parlor, included songs and dances by top entertainers, folk music, comedy and the dramatic tango dance which drew the loudest cheers.

BEFORE YOUR EVENING entertainment you can enjoy a native dinner or international fare at any of Buenos Aires' fine restaurants. The more adventurous diner will enjoy a dinner in the Italian district at Spadavecchia's, where diners feast, picnic-table style, on unlimited supplies of cannelloni, fried fish, chicken, salad, crusty bread and wine. The atmosphere is carefree and loudly musical. Throughout the evening, diners hop up from their seats to join hands and dance around the room. As more and more wine is consumed, more and more dancers join the line. A unique way to burn off your dinner before leaving the restaurant!

Notre Dame de Paris, the great cathedral, has dazzled Parisians and visitors alike since the 12th century. It is one of the many great treasures in the famed city.

By EVELYN KIERAN
Copley News Service

In the mid-'60s when Arthur Frommer's paperback bible, "Europe On $5 A Day," erupted on the scene, a whole new world of travel opened for not-so-rich Americans eager to explore the vast continent. Frommer told them, with names and addresses and definite prices, exactly how they could manage the dream of a lifetime trip without spending a fortune.

The trick was to do as the Europeans do: eat in local, usually family-style restaurants, stay in old hotels and inns in rooms without a private bath and use such novelties as Eurailpasses or second-class train travel and measure your time in minutes in the always-expensive cities.

The formula was instantly successful and gave great confidence to thousands of Americans who wandered around Europe exchanging notes of special treasures — a little inn here, an exceptional — and cheap — restaurant there.

The "pensions" in Paris and along the Gran Via in Madrid flourished. The "bed-sitters" in Earl's Court and the "tourist houses" in Knightsbridge in London were rarely empty. And everyone was happy.

Frommer updated his book every year, but about the only thing he had to change was the prices — upward, of course. The sights to see never changed. The hotels stayed the same.

Or did they?

It had been quite some time since I checked out the old favorites in Paris. And this spring, the franc-dollar exchange rate definitely favored the American dollar. I wondered if, once again, it is possible to plan a long-enough visit to Paris — long enough to capture the mood of the fabled city, to linger over its great art treasures, to enjoy its sidewalk cafes and fabulous food — to pretend, if only for a little while, to be Parisian.

I came home pleased to report — it definitely is.

I wandered around the Left Bank in the area of St. Germain-des-Pres until I came to rue Jacob — a short street not far from the church, between rue Seine and rue Bonaparte in the 6th Arrondisement — post address Paris 75006.

It's a little jewel of a street, in easy walking distance of all that matters on the Left Bank. Shops, galleries, churches, restaurants are jammed into every nook and cranny. Students from the ancient L'Ecole des Beaux Artes add lots of local color and every here and there you come across a tiny pocket park which gives the neighborhood mammas a place to bring their beautiful baby carriages in the reasonably fresh air.

This particular street is a veritable treasury of small, excellent hotels. I found the Hotel Du Danube at No. 58, where I had spent most of one winter some years ago. It's even more charming than before. Fresh paint, gleaming windows, carefully tended topiary trees in the little entry garden — and a smiling concierge to answer my questions and show me a room or two. The 47 rooms have been upgraded, painted, papered and equipped with simple, comfortable furnishings. Reservations, well in advance, are definitely necessary.

The neighboring Hotel d'Angleterre at No. 44 was once the English Embassy — the one Ben Franklin refused to enter to sign the Declaration of Independence as he considered it British soil. It, too, was a pleasant surprise. Fresh paint and new furnishings in the huge rooms. An amiable concierge showed us a brand-new bar, a piano lounge and the flowered patio where you can have breakfast. Hemingway once lived here so it's a favorite with the literati. Reservations essential.

The Hotel des deux Continents at No. 25 still offers some interesting plumbing facilities, but it, too, is freshly painted, papered and a real bargain.

Vermont haven for bikers

Vermont's bikers shop for fresh strawberries in June and July and crisp, tart apples in autumn. There's a tour that follows a country road along the Connecticut River to the campus of Dartmouth College. Later, there's swimming and canoeing at Loch Lyne Lodge near Hanover, where the same family has been welcoming wayfarers for 35 years.

Vermont with its back roads and pleasant inns is a biker's joy. At the Three Stallion Inn in New Randolph they sit down to farm-fresh meals and soak in a wood-fired Finnish sauna. Others pedal off to Tupper Farm Lodge (circa 1820) in Vermont's White River Valley. Here meals are served by candlelight and riders escape the summer heat by dipping into a refreshing swimming hole. Dairy cattle and Morgan horses graze along the roadside and red barns and lofty silos rise above a pastureland grown over with clover.

And there's the tour that takes off from Chester to follow a stagecoach road to the pretty village of Grafton with its covered bridge, art galleries and antique shops.

VBT offers riders the opportunity to look in on Calvin Coolidge's birthplace at Plymouth, Norman Rockwell's home in Arlington, the craft shops of Manchester and the lovely villages of Woodstock and Newfane. And there's the bonus of theater in picturesque Weston.

Groups pedal from 20 to 75 miles a day. For '83, more than 200 tours are on the books. And for loners who don't want company, VBT custom designs trips, obtains reservations at inns along the way and provides the bicycle. Rates for VBT's tours start at $129 for a weekend and $329 for five days. Write to Vermont Bicycle Touring, Box 711-PX, Bristol, Vt. 05443.

Similar territory is covered by Vermont Country Cyclers. Its operators, Bob and Cindy Maynard, say their goal is not to become the biggest but the best biker outfit in the business. They promise country inns each night and meals ranging from lobster bakes to candlelight dinners. Tours are arranged for beginners, intermediates and advanced cyclers.

VCC provides 12-speed bicycles and other equipment rentals. Tours cost from $148 for a weekend to $389 for five days, including lodging, breakfasts, dinners, maps and directions. For a free brochure, contact Vermont Country Cyclers, P.O. Box 145-16, Waterbury Center, Vt. 05677.

Country Cycling Tours covers New England's states as well as New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland. In Pennsylvania, cyclists combine biking with canoeing on the Delaware River. In Massachusetts, they ferry over to Martha's Vineyard to explore Edgartown and the Victorian village of Oak Bluffs. CCT sends other bikers off to Nova Scotia, England, Ireland, France and Israel.

Tips for fun, safe trip

A big part of the success of any vacation travel is keeping the kids occupied so Mom or Dad can drive safely and sanely to the family's destination.

Marilyn Sloan, PhD, toy expert and director of product development at the Long Beach, California-based toy company, Toys to Grow On, offers several helpful hints for choosing toys for car travel.

Pack a variety of toys to counteract short attention spans.

Avoid books, because of motion sickness, loud musical or talking toys, to keep car noise to a minimum, and games and toys with many small pieces.

ROGERS FAMILY: DRIVING UP SALES

BILL J. ROGERS and BILL 'DOSS' ROGERS

The smell of new leather, a gleaming fender, that first time behind the wheel — it's enough to quicken the pulse of any red-blooded American. It has hearts racing in the Rogers family.

"When you get a new car on the lot, a new product that's come out, and it doesn't turn you on, that's the day you should get out of the business and do something else," claims Bill "Doss" Rogers, 30.

He should know. He and his father, Bill, 59, are the second and third generation of Rogers's to own and operate an automobile dealership. Bill said, only half kidding, that he would love to see his grandsons, ages four and one, eventually take an interest in the business of selling and servicing cars.

It all started with his father, W. P., who owned a dealership in Electra, Texas, in the late 1920s and early '30s. Bill remembers washing cars on the lot starting in his 14th summer. His father sold the Whippet, the Graham Page, which was a big, luxury car, and the Willis Knight, forerunner of the "Willie" or jeep.

BILL GREW UP TO become sales manager at a dealership in Tyler, Texas. In 1957 he was transferred to Midland to be general manager of the Lincoln Mercury dealership here.

In the early 1960s, he sold that business and bought Beaty Ford, located on Wall Street where the Federal Building is now. It's been Fords ever since.

"My father always stressed pride in the people you work with and in the product you sell," Bill said. "And loyalty. I believe in the old adage: 'You only dance with the one who brung you.'"

Young Doss also began by washing cars when he was a teenager. He grew up to become vice president and general sales manager of Rogers Ford, which the father-son team operates on West Highway 80.

THE ROGERS'S EMPLOY ALMOST 100 people and stock between 300 and 400 cars and trucks, depending on how many are on order or in transit at any one time.

From his father, Doss said he learned "Always be straight up with people. If you don't have the parts, or can't fix it, tell it the way it is. They (customers) may not like to hear it, but don't waiver from the truth."

Doss claims he was not encouraged to get into the family business — in fact, probably the opposite, said his father.

"I don't think he was pressured to get into the business, but I do think he was pressured to realize the pitfalls of it," Bill said.

What are the pitfalls?

"GOIN' BROKE," BILL ANSWERED quite simply.

"And, you spend long hours; you make many sacrifices. It's not as glamorous as it appears from the outside — it's not for the weak-kneed or the 40-hour a week specialist."

He cited the time in the mid-'60s when laborers at Ford Motor Company went on strike for about 90 days. There were no cars left on the Rogers lot — none.

"I have never experienced that before or since, in 30 years in the business. We were actually bumming rides ourselves. We cried a lot and punted and just hoped nobody would fumble."

At the time, Bill reduced overhead as much as possible without hurting his employees. They were forced to cut back their work hours, partly because they couldn't get parts or anything else they needed during the strike.

THAT EXPERIENCE PREPARED BILL for the current oil industry recession, which has affected his dealership, as it has all other Midland businesses, to some degree.

"The whole town is energy-related. We might as well hang an oil company sign out here," Bill said, adding he thinks the worst is over.

"We feel like by mid-to-late 1984 this economy will be going great out here. We expect a very good business situation for many years to come."

Meanwhile, father and son have concentrated on getting their house in order while waiting for the economy to revive. In recent months they've installed an in-house computer which handles accounting, each car's maintenance record and the parts inventory. They are trying to emphasize training to upgrade their personnel. They've added a new fleet sales building and remodeled offices which house the rental/leasing segments of the business.

TEXT: LESLIE HAINES

DOSS, WHO HANDLES THE LATTER, said Midland's economy is on the way back, if car and truck sales are any indication. "The fleet business is still slow, but the retail business — one person off the street who is buying the family car — has picked up."

Lower interest rates offered by Ford and other auto makers have been an incentive to buyers, but not as much as people might think, Doss said.

"Those lower rates do draw out the people who've been thinking of buying anyway, but nobody's going to buy a car unless they want it first. If you don't have the product, they're not going to buy."

The fact that Ford has brought on line some new products not offered 90 days ago hasn't hurt either, he added.

FROM WHERE BILL SITS, SELLING cars is a risky business. A dealer never really knows how he did on a trade-in until that car sells, maybe months later.

"It's a very emotional business," he said. "Everybody's trade-in is always 'brand new' and worth a lot more than the car the dealer is trading."

But, trading runs in the family. His father, W. P., used to take cows, hogs or horses in trade or in payment for cars during the '30s. Doss' first trade occurred when, as a kid, he swapped a go-cart for a horse.

"I think Dad got the raw end of that deal — he had to pay for the feed," he said with a laugh.

Today, the Rogers still occasionally take fine paintings, boats, trailers, even airline tickets in trade, Doss said.

BEFORE THE 1980-81 OIL boom, Bill took in a few royalty deals as well, but he said they weren't too hot.

"I've done well," he admitted, while sitting in a fairly plush office at the dealership, "but only in the car business, and it's taken me 36 years." Rogers finished in the top 100 Ford dealerships nationwide two out of the last three years, based on unit volume.

The tone of the car business has changed since Bill's days in Tyler. For one thing, he never expected truck sales to become as strong as they have in the last few years. (Many customers use their trucks as second cars, Doss adds, because trucks are more luxurious and ride better than they used to.)

Another adjustment came in the last decade when Bill and other domestic car dealers finally had to admit the imports from Europe and Japan were here to stay.

Tipperary revamps finance picture

Tipperary Corporation announced Friday a proposal which would reduce its debt by $25 million and increase shareholders' equity by the same amount.

The oil and gas concern's pro forma balance sheet as of March 31, 1983, reflecting this restucturing, produces long-term debt of $60 million and shareholders' equity of $77 million, or a debt/equity ratio of .8 to 1.

At the same time, working capital would be improved from a negative $7,000,000 to a positive $4,000,000.

The restructuring will be accomplished by Chairman of the Board Deane H. Stoltz converting his $15,000,000 convertible note into 2.5 million shares of common stock at $6.00 per share.

At the same time, Stoltz and an institutional investor each will, subject to the filing of an S-2 registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission, acquire one million shares of Tipperary's common stock at $5.00 per share.

Stoltz said the recapitalization — along with improved operations, increased oil and gas production, and an annualized interest cost reduction of $2,750,000 due to debt reduction — gives Tipperary the opportunity to generate internal growth and capitalize on opportunities existing in the oil and gas industry today.

Rogers Family

"I WAS AS GUILTY AS ANYONE of thinking imports were a fad," Bill admitted. "But, four or five years ago we started looking around for one which would complement our dealership and not compete head on with Ford."

His choice was Sweden's Volvo, which he added to the lineup in 1981.

Just for fun, Bill and Doss added the DeLorean sports car to the dealership as well. It was a good performer until last summer, when maker John Z. DeLorean was arrested for allegedly trafficking in cocaine to finance his car company.

"The DeLorean was a $20,000 car that was everything it was supposed to be," Bill said, "in terms of design, performance and sales. It was never meant to be a mass market thing. We're very sorry it turned out as it did."

Rogers Ford is still committed to standing behind the 30 DeLoreans it sold, he added.

Why a Prime Rate Account at Commerce Savings?

- Higher Earnings—your rate is determined by deducting 1% from the Prime Rate quoted by Chase Manhattan Bank of New York. Your actual rate then floats with the Prime Rate. Interest is credited to your account monthly. Federal Regulations prohibit guaranteeing rates or method of calculation. Therefore, by law, we must reserve the right to change the rate and rate formula.
- Maximum Liquidity—daily funds availability through unlimited withdrawals and limited check writing privileges.
- Total Security—fully insured to legal limits by the FSLIC.
- Minimum Investment—your initial deposit can be as small as $2,500. Subsequent deposits can be in any amount. Federal Regulations prevent us from paying more than 5¼% on average balances below $2,500.
- Maximum Convenience—Branches throughout Texas; a monthly itemized statement; bank by mail; and expert advice as close as your telephone.

Think about the alternatives. And think about where your liquid funds are invested now. Do they match our Prime Rate Account? Probably not. And, with the Prime Line, taking advantage of a Commerce Savings Prime Rate Account is easier than ever. Do it today!

Auctioneers keep money rolling in during recession

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

People think they can pick up some real bargains at auction these days. Oilfield and heavy construction equipment, real estate, luxurious furs, Oriental rugs and art work — all are going under the gavel during the recession.

Must be a great time to be an auctioneer, right?

Well, yes and no.

The number of auctions held in Texas has remained steady, or increased some, from this time last year, auctioneers say. Dollar volume is steady also, but it's taking more effort now to come away with the same amount of cash.

"REGARDLESS of whether you are selling drilling rigs or Oriental carpets, you have to sell more units to get the same amount of money," said Bob Moubry, an auctioneer who has sold both in the past.

He was in Midland recently from Phoenix to auction furs, rugs and customized Rolls Royces.

It was Moubry's first auctioneering trip to Texas. He said he did as well as expected on a swing through Houston, Corpus Christi and San Antonio, but business in Midland was slow.

Top dollar items are still moving well, Moubry said, because the people who can afford them haven't been as hard hit by the recession. "The good rugs, the Kermans and Bokharas, are still bringing top dollar, for example. It's the in-between items, and the middlemen, middle income people, that are suffering."

OILFIELD and construction equipment sales present bigger challenges, although there s a lot of business to be had, said auctioneer Allan Hughes recently.

"Prices are somewhat lower, but the volume is keeping up. We just have to work a bit harder, like everybody else."

Hughes works for Nelson International, Tyler, Texas, a firm which travels all over the Southwest to auction big ticket items for companies with a cash flow problem or inventory backlog. Nelson handles oilfield and heavy construction equipment and other costly items. It recently has auctioned industrial plants for gasohol and rock crushing as well.

Auctioneers say the number of sales being held has remained fairly steady, and so has the size of the crowd which turns out to pick up bargains.

THERE IS probably more equipment for sale at any one auction, however.

More items to work through in a single day, coupled with lower prices they bring, maes an auctioneer's wok tougher than it wain the past.

"You have to sell thre or four times as muh equipment to get the same amount of moey," said Jim Davis, prident of Jim Davis Aulioneers, Dallas. He wain Wichita, Kansas, las week auctioning craes, crawler loaders, bachoes and related eqipment.

"The percentage bas is the same, but prices are lower."

That holds true especially for oilfield equipment, the softest market of all, although demand for heavy construction equipment has also slacked off.

IT REPRESENTS a big change from the boom of 1980-81, when auctioneers could sell just about anything without batting an eyelash as operators scrambled to obtain scarce equipment — particularly oilfield items.

"Two years ago was the height," Davis said. "Everything was selling too high then. Used equipment up to 25 years old was bringing top dollar because it was in such demand. It didn't matter what condition it was in."

Now, it's hard to predict what an item will bring at auction. Construction equipment sells for half what it did a year ago at this time, Davis said.

Used oilfield equipment which sold during the boom for phenomenal prices is now bringing between 10 and 22 cents on the dollar, said another auctioneer. Brand new items can command around 25 to 30 cents.

THE SERVICE equipment market is a bit more firm than is drilling, but not by much.

"The best way to see what we appraise something at is to see what similar equipment brings at other recent auctions," said a spokeswoman at P-D Auctioneers International, Dallas.

She said construction equipment sales always pick up during the summer months, but oilfield service and support items seem to sell better lately because the buyer has more likelihood of using them than he does of using drilling equipment.

Even so, the auction market changes frequently. For a few weeks or for a few sales in a row, auctioneers will notice certain items are hot sellers which bring good prices. Then, all of a sudden and for no apparent reason, sales will get sluggish.

"Prices have dropped, but I don't think anybody can tell to what degree," said Hughes. "It's hard to put a percentage factor on it."

Time-saving services a good buy

Midland Time Savers is a professional service designed to meet the needs of busy Midlanders. Christi Booker established the service to sell time-saving services that can benefit those people who have an overloaded schedule.

Deliveries to Odessa, grocery shopping, taking someone to the airport or making party invitations are everyday tasks Midland Time Savers can do.

THESE CHORES, and many more, can be completed by this organization for a modest fee.

For weddings and large parties, Ms. Booker can help one make the event come off right: By mailing and addressing invitations, making reservations and catering arrangements, and providing airport-to-door-step transportation for guests.

DOING ERRANDS is one of the features Midland Time Savers touts. Ms. Booker can arrange to shop for you and buy either a special gift or an ordinary household item for someone too busy to deal with it. She can pick up drycleaning and make trips to Post Office Boxes to bring you your mail.

Around one's home, Ms. Booker is able to turn lights on and off, pick up the mail and any newspapers, water plants, and feed pets while residents are away on vacation or business travel.

SECRETARY GOING ON vacation? Midland Time Savers can provide 80 word-per-minute word processing, some experience in oil production, and 10-key calculating abilities. These are truly valuable assets to the businessman or businesswoman with no time to deal with their own clerical needs.

Men especially appreciate the shopping service, Ms. Booker said recently, because they shy away from having to buy, wrap, and deliver a really special gift.

NEVER FEAR! MIDLAND TIME SAVERS, at 682-3356 is here to solve problems due to lack of time. Conveniently located downtown on N. Big Spring.

Christi Booker, owner of Midland Time Savers.

The abused child will grow up someday.
Maybe.

Each year, over one million American children suffer from child abuse. Over 2,000 children die from it.

But what about those who survive?

Statistics show that an abused childhood can affect a person's entire life.

Many teenage drug addicts and teenage prostitutes report being abused children.

So do juvenile delinquents and adult criminals.

Yet we now know that child abuse can be prevented.

The National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse is a private, charitable organization that knows how to prevent child abuse.

But we need your help to do it.

We need money. We need volunteers.

Send us your check today, or write for our booklet.

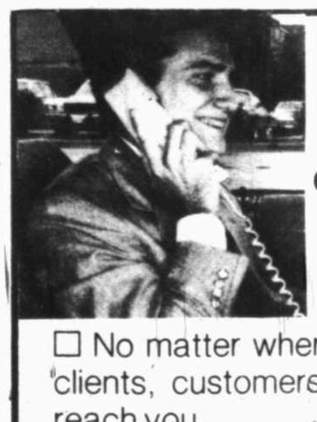

Because if we don't all start somewhere, we won't get anywhere.

Pumps working hard to lift less

DALLAS — Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association reports that an 11th consecutive year of production at the maximum effective recovery rate in nearly all of Texas' oil fields kept 1982 petroleum production in the state above the 900-million barrel figure.

Avery Rush, Jr., chairman of the Dallas-based Association, says that figures compiled by its staff show the total petroleum output of 901,910,343 barrels included 871,780,379 barrels of crude oil and 30,129,964 barrels of condensate from wells in 214 of Texas' 254 counties.

Midland County, which has had recorded production since 1945, last year produced 7.6 million barrels of crude oil and condensate at the rate of 20,862 barrels per day. Production in 1962 boosted Midland County's production total through the end of the year to 382.5 million barrels.

Crude oil and condensate production in Texas last year was 26.8 million barrels below the 1981 figure, drop of 2.9 percent. This compares with a 3.3 percent drop in 1981 production from the year previous, Rush said.

Rush, of Amarillo, noted that this percentage drop of less than three percent was the smallest in the last half-dozen years. He said he was encouraged by the continuing trend of a slowing in the rate of decline.

"The fact that 1982 production stayed above the 900-million barrel mark is attributable directly to the spectacular drilling boom in Texas during the last five years. We have drilled almost 99,000 wells since 1977, with nearly 50,000 of them drilled in 1981 and 1982," Rush said.

"An economic and regulatory climate that will encourage a continuation of this high level of drilling activity is vital to the best interests of our state and nation. As the free world's economy continues to improve, the demand for petroleum energy will increase. This need for more oil and gas is one that must be filled in significant measure by production from Texas wells," Rush added.

Also in a positive vein, 1982 production pushed the state's cumulative production total since 1866 to more than 47.5-billion barrels. However, for the 10th consecutive year, crude oil and condensate production in the nation's No. 1 energy-producing state was down after peaking at nearly 1.3-billion barrels in 1972.

Last year, 19 counties in the state produced more than 10-million barrels of crude oil and condensate, down from 21 in both 1980 and 1981. The following listing shows 1982 production figures for the state's five top producing counties, all with production in excess of 39-million barrels.

Pecos, third last year and fourth in 1980, became the state's top producing county while Yoakum, the 1980 leader, held second place for the second consecutive year. Last year's leading producer, Gaines, dropped to third. Ector, which held third place for six consecutive years from 1975 to 1980, remained in fourth place for the second consecutive year. Gregg retained the fifth place ranking it as held since 1980.

Montgomery, which was No. 16 last year, and Brazoria, which was No. 17, were the only two counties to leave the 10-million-plus listing.

Gregg, the first Texas county to produce more than two-billion barrels of crude oil and condensate in the history of recorded production, remains the all-time leader with a cumulative total through 1982 of 2,812,400,388 barrels. Ector, through the end of last year had produced 2,397,529 barrels, while Andrews had produced 2,054,626,749 barrels as of Jan. 1, 1983.

Travelers come to West Texas

Over 3 billion dollars were spent by travelers in West Texas in 1981, according to the most recent figures available from the U.S. Travel DataCenter and reported by West Texas Chamber of Commerce magazine, This Is West Texas. Total expenditure growth in West Texas was 18 percent compared to a statewide growth of 15 percent.

According to the This Is West Texas story it was found that nine West Texas counties were among the top twenty Texas counties in highest total travel expenditures. These include Tarrant (3rd), El Paso (6th), Potter (12th), Lubbock (13th), McLennan (14th), Midland (15th), Ector (18th), Taylor (19th), and Wichita (20th).

Total travel expenditures for Midland County were $102,423,000.

Entitled "Travel in West Texas: Its Impact on West Texas Economy," the This Is West Texas article attributes an excellent highway system and emphasis on travel by various West Texas cities for the travel expenditure increases.

West Texas travel meant over $645 million in travel generated payroll in West Texas while generating 65,602 jobs. West Texas cities benefited from travel tax receipts of over $31 million.

Where do Texas visitors come from? According to the Texas Department of Highways and Transportation over 55 percent of U.S. visitors to Texas come from ten states.

PEMEX to hold line

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The state petroleum monopoly PEMEX announced late last week that Mexico will continue mantaining its export prices for crude oil through to the end of July at $29 a barrel for the lighter-type Isthmus and $23 a barrel for the heavy-type called Maya.

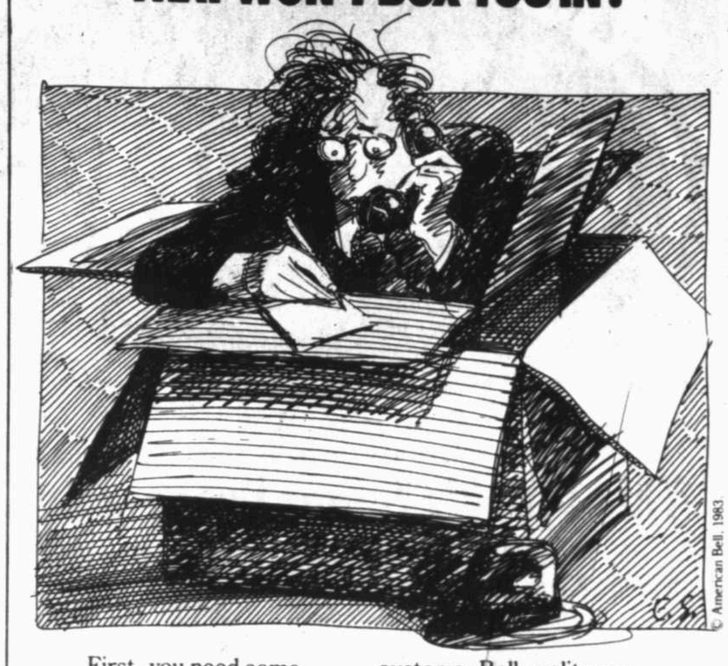

A PEMEX press bulletin said Mexico's clients abroad have been notified of the decision. Mexico dropped its prices from $32.50 a barrel for Isthmus and $28 a barrel for Maya last March 1 because of a world glut.

Mexico is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, the international cartel known as OPEC, but until last year used OPEC guidelines to price its oil.

Mexico produces an average of 2.5 million barrels a day and exports 1.5 million.

Making Midland A Better Hometown

RECAPTURE NOT PLEASANT

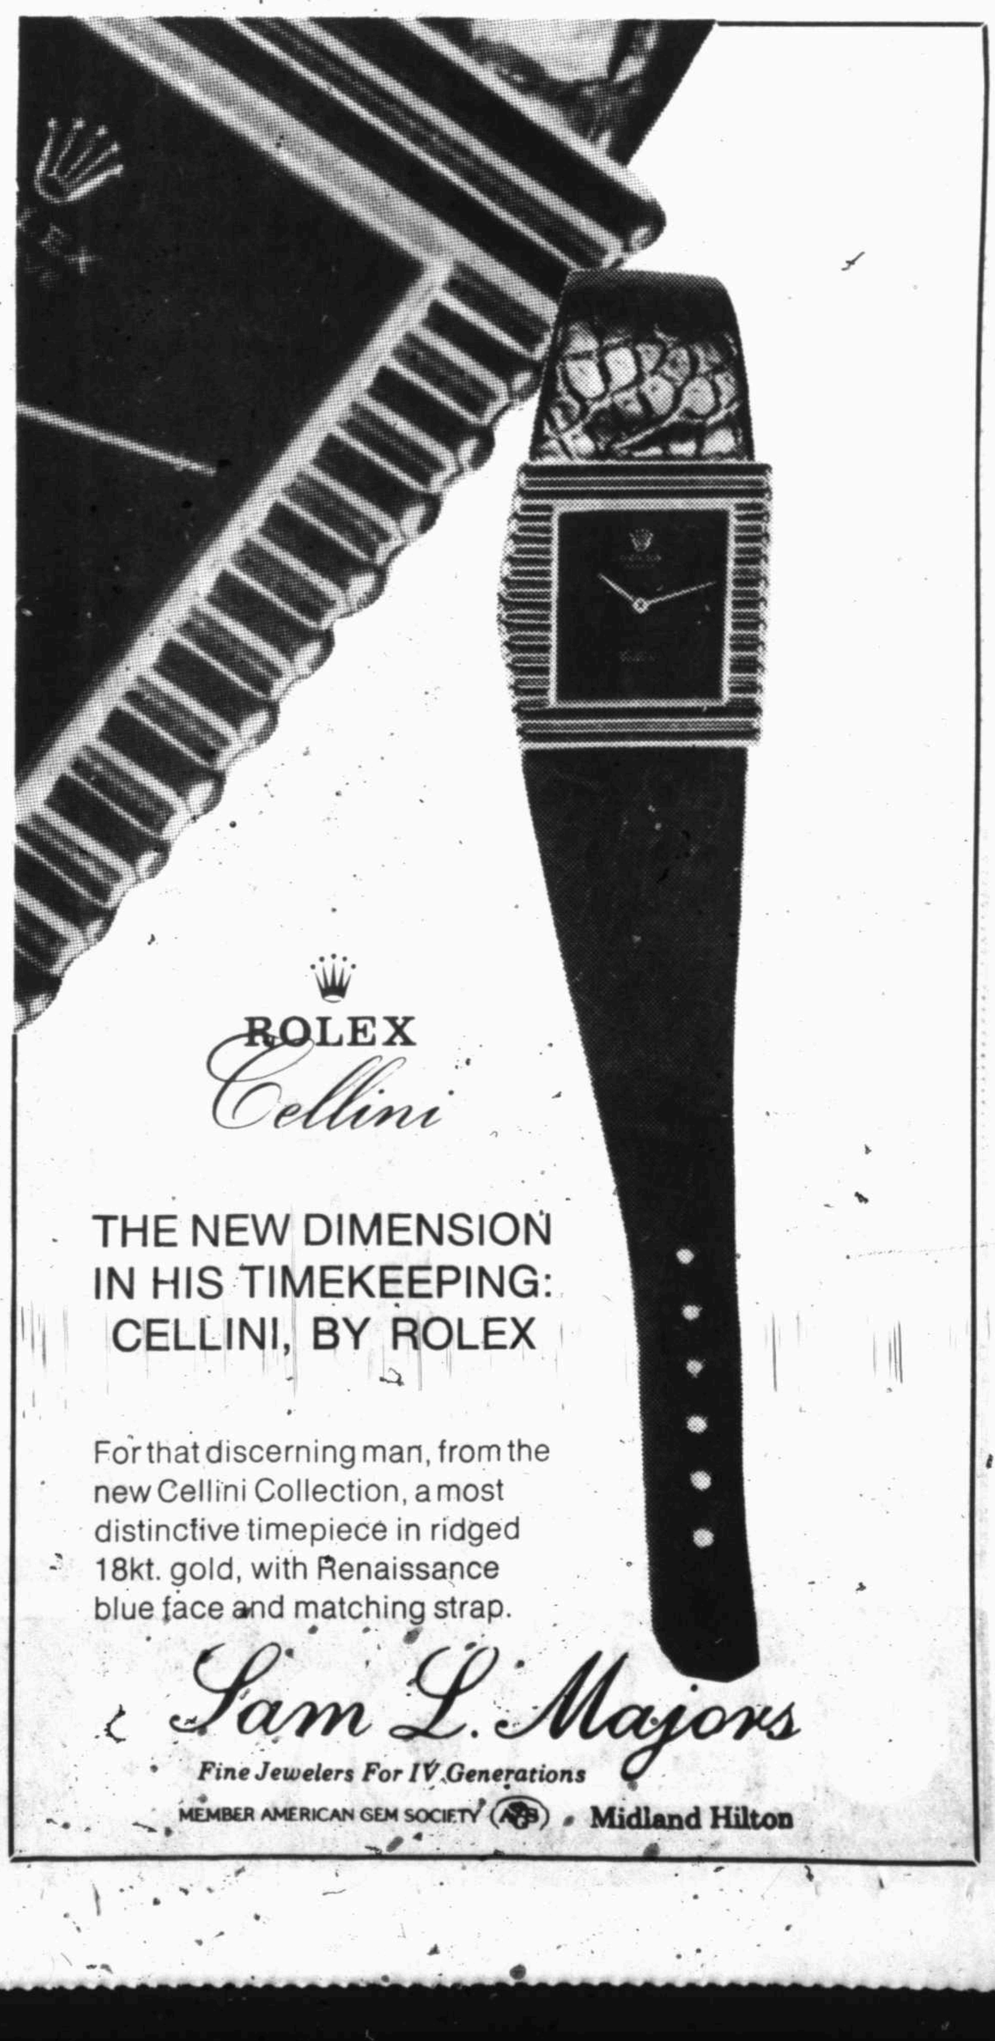

The latest tax package has increased the deductions for ownership of real estate. One of these goodies is known as accelerated depreciation in which you can take bigger deductions (up to 175% declining balance) in the early years. This is a choice you can make instead of the 15-year straight line depreciation. Sounds good, but you have to beware of "recapture" when you sell.

Recapture occurs when you take accelerated depreciation and sell the property before a specific time period specified in the tax code. Recapture means that the taxpayer must pay ordinary income taxes on the amount of depreciation recaptured. For residential property, recapture is based on the difference between accelerated depreciation and straight-line depreciation.

There are different treatments for residential, non residential and low-income housing. However, in all cases, there is no recapture if the taxpayer had elected to take 15-year straight line depreciation. Consult your Tax Attorney or C.P.A. for more information.

Beetle makes phoenix-like return in Mesa Arizona

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Zap! It is the '60s again — Peter, Paul and Mary, The Mamas and the Papas, free speech, Vietnam, peace marches, the English Beatles and Volkswagen Beetles.

Well, maybe not quite the '60s. Many of the Flower Children long ago fled Haight Ashbury for the suburbs, shaved their beards, shed their beads and stepped out of their sandals in favor of three-piece conformity. But the lovable little car that carried yesterday's second lieutenants as well as its rebels, and still holds a special place in America's heart, is back.

The beloved Bug that Volkswagen of America stopped importing in 1977 is being brought into the United States by a Mesa, Ariz., company that has received 1,200 orders in only a month.

Unlike the Bug of yesteryear, the new Volkswagen Beetles, imported by Sun Country Leasing Sales J.V., are not built in Wolfsburg, W. Germany, but in a Volkswagen plant in Mexico City, according to Barry Mitchell, president of the importing company.

Mitchell said that his company was offering a basic bug at $6,995, FOB Mesa; a slightly fancier Super Bug, at $7,295, FOB Mesa; and a Limited Edition Sports Package version at $8,795.

Has Volkswagen of America had anything to say about the Bugs?

"What it looks like at this point is they don't condone it," Mitchell said, "but they will not stop it."

Although the Beetle has not been imported into the United States since 1977, Mitchell said, Volkswagen has continued to sell the little sedan worldwide. Before the Bug was supplanted by the Rabbit in the United States, Volkswagen sold about 5 million bugs here, beginning in 1949, Mitchell said.

Stringent federal environmental and safety standards spelled the end of the Bug's dominance among imports. Adapting the rear-engine, air-cooled sedan to environmental controls and other requirements would have been too costly for it to compete with other imports, principally Japanese. To replace it, VW produced the Rabbit, a four-cylinder, front-wheel-drive sedan.

But "the love affair the American public has had with the little old Bug is second to none," Mitchell said. The 1,200 orders in a month came in with very little advertising.

"Our idea was not to irritate Volkswagen of America," Mitchell said, "but to give the Bug back to the public."

Although Volkswagen of America will not offer warranties for the cars, Volkswagen dealerships will work on them, Mitchell said. "In fact, for the ones we sell here in Arizona, we recommend the owners take them to VW and pay for the warranty work through another source," Mitchell said.

Sun Country's VWs carry a 50,000-mile, five-year warranty with zero deductible on the drive train through Washington-based Revolution Industries, Mitchell said.

Buying the car in Mexico City is only the beginning of a long, expensive process for his company, Mitchell said. The Bugs must be brought up to Environmental Protection Agency and Department of Transportation standards before they can be sold in the United States.

The cars are brought into the country at El Paso, Texas, where his company posts a bond for them, Mitchell said. From there, the vehicles are delivered to Mesa, where Mesa Automotive Engineering Specialists Inc. converts them to meet government standards, he said.

Then the Bugs are shipped to Torrance, Calif., to be run through EPA certification by Fairway Environmental Engineering, and, finally, back to Mesa for sale.

The process is rather expensive, Mitchell said, and an individual could spend from $5,000 to $7,000 to do the same thing that costs Sun County about $3,000 per vehicle.

Meanwhile, he has received some dealer inquiries from authorized Volkswagen dealers.

"The VW dealers that have ordered them will sell them as current-year titled automobiles — not as new automobiles," he said. "That way, there's no conflict with Volkswagen of America."

The imported models are equipped with the 1,600cc engine, Mitchell said. After modifications, he said, the cars get 27 miles per gallon in city driving and 34 mpg on the highway.

Reports tell Congress what everyone already knows

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Americans in greater numbers are finding new ways to cheat on their taxes, according to reports to Congress by the Treasury Department and the Internal Revenue Service.

The two agencies said tax-shelter fraud is increasing rapidly, taxpayers are already finding new ways to circumvent the compliance rules in the 1982 tax act, and voluntary tax-law compliance by individuals is decreasing.

In two days of hearings before the Senate Finance Committee and its Internal Revenue subcommittee, Treasury and IRS officials warned that tax-shelter abuse threatens to undermine public confidence in the tax system and encourage more people to evade their tax obligations.

"A large number of the abusive tax shelters being sold today are not really tax shelters in any traditional sense, but are frauds euphemistically referred to as tax shelters," acting IRS commissioner Philip E. Coates told the subcommittee Friday. "Such frauds are characterized by backdated documents, fictitious notes, false affidavits, inflated appraisals, rigged transactions, forged trading records and distorted accounting methods."

Coates and John B. Chapeton, assistant Treasury secretary for tax policy, asked for legislation requiring marketers of tax shelters to give IRS the names and addresses of participants, so that IRS could notify them in advance of its intention to challenge any deduction it considers fraudulent and track down oither participants when it finds one questionable deduction.

Tax shelters are investments, usually for upper-bracket taxpayers, that provide short-term losses or depreciation deductions to offset tax liability for other income. According to the Joint Committee on Taxation, Americans invested $9 billion in tax shelters in 1982 and will invest an estimated $11 billion in 1983.

The Reagan administration has argued that the tax cuts enacted by Congress, particularly those for the wealthy, would cut down on the use of tax shelters.

Most of these investments are legal and are packaged by legitimate brokers, Federal officials said. E. F. Hutton Co. claims to be the largest, with more than $2 billion invested for clients since 1970.

In a booklet prepared for potential tax-shelter clients, Hutton warns that "currently, the IRS is scrutinizing all tax shelters closely," and that investment in shelters creates a high risk of a tax-return audit. According to Coates and Robert G. Woodward, Treasury's tax legislative counsel, however, IRS crackdowns have not halted the proliferation of illegal shelters, which Coates said are becoming "more and more egregious."

The 1982 tax act gave IRS for the first time power to sue tax-shelter packagers if IRS believes the shelter being offered is "abusive," and the agency has begun going into court, Coates said. In the most recent case, the government asked for an injunction against a New York company that was offering $4 in tax writeoffs for every $1 invested in engraving plates for private stamps. Other shelters have been offering writeoffs as high as 8 to 1.

Coates said 16,300 tax shelter cases are pending in U.S. tax court, about a third of the court's total docket.

Woodward said the Treasury Department wants to clamp down on tax abuses not out of a "desire for additional revenue" but out of concern that they breed contempt for the tax laws. "People who have tax shelters tend to talk about them," he said, encouraging other taxpayers to feel that they too should be able to shield their income from taxation.

Unreported legal income leaped from $93.9 billion in 1973 to $249.7 billion in 1981, Coates said. Given the sustained inflation that occurred in those years, he said, the numbers are not as bad as they appear at first glance, but there also has been a small, steady decline in the percentage of income voluntarily reported.

In the hearings, the Treasury and other IRS officials made these other points about tax compliance:

The insurance industry has created a new kind of policy offering protection against the results of a tax-return audit. This kind of insurance, introduced by Victor O. Schinnerer & Co. of Washington last month, "permits a taxpayer to avoid liability for taxes owed by providing reimbursement where noncompliance is detected and has no discernible social benefit and can only result in increased contempt for the tax laws," Chapeton said.

Texas savings and loans riding comeback trail

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas savings and loan associations appear to be recovering from their financial difficulties. The Federal Home Loan Bank of Little Rock (soon to be relocated to Dallas) said Texas associations reported over $3.2 billion in net new assets for the first quarter.

Net savings flow for the quarter exceeded $3.8 billion.

In March, the latest month reported, Texas associations (based on 211 reporting) took in over $765 million in net new savings, excluding interest and dividends, with over $4.9 billion in deposits and $4.2 billion in withdrawals.

The State Board of Insurance says property and casualty insurers earned over $7.2 billion in premiums for 1982 on policies issued in Texas, with incurred losses of $5 billion.

In 1981, the comparable figures were $6.6 billion and $4.6 billion.

Worker's compensation insurance exceeded $1.5 billion in premiums (compared to $1.4 billion the previous year) with $1.2 billion in losses (compared to $1 billion).

Over $2 billion in private passenger automobile coverage was written, along with over $539 million in commercial auto coverage.

The Environmental Protection Agency has tentatively scheduled a public hearing for 7 p.m. July 14, in Austin, for public comment on the proposed delegation to Texas of a federal program of regulation of hazardous waste landfills.

EPA Region 6 Administrator Dick Whittington, Dallas, says the hearing may be cancelled if "significant public interest" isn't expressed to EPA by July 7.

The hearing is planned for the Stephen F. Austin State Office Building (1700 N. Congress).

Delegation of the landfill program would complete delegation to Texas of the federal hazardous waste program under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

Texas received first-phase authority in December, 1980, including provisions relating to generation, transport, treatment, storage and disposal of hazardous wastes.

In March, 1982, Texas received authority for permitting containers, tanks, surface impoundments and waste piles, and incinerators.

Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority (TLLRWDA) is moving into the second phase of its effort to locate a site for disposal of low-level wastes from radioactive materials used in industry and medicine.

TLLRWDA commissioned Dames & Moore Consultants, Houston, to make a three-phase study to locate sites. The first phase identified 15 areas, encompassing 35,000 square miles in 105 counties.

Manager Richard Jacobi notes the next phase is to select "five preferred sites" within the 15 areas (sites of 300-400 acres), with a final "prime site" to be picked by Oct. 1.

Jacobi says TLLRWDA doesn't have "any preconceived ideas or preferences" on a site, but that the authority has concluded that eight of the 15 regions would be "more preferred."

Considered least likely are sites in Loving County and the "Comanche Plateau" area around Comanche County, due to unfavorable geology, and the "Eastern Timbers" area (Brazos County eastward), due to groundwater conditions.

"We're trying to avoid areas with shallow groundwater," Jacobi says.

He also reports "a lot of public comment" on TLLRWDA's efforts, but says most has been non-hostile.

There even have been some calls from city officials interested in having the facility located in their area, he says, "because they need the employment and feel the facility wouldn't be dangerous."

Some hostile calls have been received, he says, but overall, the response has been "that if we're going to do something, that it be done right."

The Medical Advisory Panel of the Air Control Board plans to meet July 27 with a technical advisory committee to work out details for a study of 10 hazardous air pollutants in Galveston, Harris, Jefferson and Orange counties.

The study marks ACB's increased involvement in air pollution research matters, with the new emphasis due partly to the board's desire for independent studies to support Texas' position in disputes with Federal officials — such as have arisen over EPA contentions that various areas within Texas have failed to meet Federal requirements, and should be subject to sanctions.

Superior board resolves

HOUSTON (SWN) — "The Board of Directors of the Superior Oil Company has adopted a resolution conforming to the stockholder proposal voted upon at last month's Annual Meeting," Chairman F. C. Ackman announced today.

Ackman said "If an acquisition offer is made to the company for 45 percent or more of the common stock at market price or above, the board will name a special committee of outside directors to review the offer."

Naming of such a committee is provided for under the company's existing by-laws.
