Gemayel, leaders review negotiations

■ U.S. pullback draws Arab, Israeli fire — Page 4A

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Amin Gemayel met with opposition leaders in northern Lebanon Saturday to discuss the outcome of his negotiations with Syria. Heavy fighting persisted at the frontier between east and west Beirut.

French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson headed for Beirut, meanwhile, to meet with Lebanese leaders and discuss the withdrawal of French troops, the only contingent of the multinational force which remains in Lebanon.

A French Foreign Ministry spokesman, who in accordance with government policy cannot be identified, disclosed the topic of Cheysson's scheduled talks with Gemayel and other Lebanese officials.

France has yet to announce any date for withdrawing its force, which has stuck to its posts in Beirut while the U.S., Italian and British contingents withdrew.

Police said exchanges of gunfire and artillery killed 11 people and wounded 43 Friday night and Saturday along the "green line" between Christian east and mostly Moslem west Beirut.

Police said the fighting was the heaviest in the area since anti-government Moslem militias captured west Beirut from the disintegrating Lebanese army Feb. 6. Mortar blasts shook east Beirut during the morning and scattered gunfire from along the green line could be heard throughout the day.

Gemayel, a Christian, went to northern Lebanon to inform opposition leaders Suleiman Franjieh and Rashid Karami of the outcome of his meetings Wednesday and Thursday with Syrian President Hafez Assad in Damascus, the Syrian capital.

Details of the discussion Saturday were not disclosed. Afterwards, as Gemayel returned to Beirut, Franjieh issued a statement in which he referred to the Gemayel-Assad meetings a "historic development," but did not elaborate.

Foreign Minister Elie Salem, meanwhile, wound up an overnight visit to Saudi Arabia, where he discussed the Gemayel-Assad talks with his Saudi counterpart, Prince Saud al-Faisal.

Conflicting accounts persisted on the outcome of the meetings between Gemayel and Assad.

A senior government official, who briefed reporters on condition he not be identified, insisted no decision had been made in Damascus on abrogating the May 17 Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement.

But opposition leaders who met with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam maintained that agreement had been reached for Lebanon to cancel the accord, which Syria and its Lebanese Druse and Shiite Moslem allies want scrapped.

After meeting with Khaddam, Druse leader Walid Jumblatt said: "Gemayel has promised them (the Syrians) to cancel the agreement. Let us see if he will do it."

Jumblatt said, however, the Syrians have not set a deadline for Gemayel to cancel the U.S.-brokered pact with Israel. This fit in with what some government sources have said — that Assad agreed to give Gemayel time to work out with Israel and the United States an alternative plan for providing security along Israel's northern border with Lebanon.

Jumblatt is a partner with Franjieh, a Christian former president of Lebanon, and Karami, a Sunni Moslem ex-prime minister, in the opposition National Salvation Front.

The Lebanese official who briefed reporters said the Damascus summit talks also would lead to a Syrian-guaranteed cease-fire and possible resumption of Lebanese reconciliation talks in Switzerland. On Saturday, Swiss foreign affairs department spokesman Michel Pache said Lebanese officials had informed the Swiss that the talks may reopen soon.

Iran reports six-mile advance into Iraq

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran claimed Saturday its forces advanced six miles into Iraq toward the port city of Basra after successive attacks over the last three days and nights.

Iraq said its air force jets and helicopter gunships made day-long bombing raids on Iranian positions and troop concentrations east of Basra, "scoring direct and painful hits."

Iraq's war communique, broadcast by Baghdad radio and monitored in Nicosia, mentioned the Basra area but only reported hit-and-run attacks and ambushes against Iranian patrols during the same period. It did not comment on Iran's claim of a six-mile advance.

Basra, about 12 miles across the border from Iran, is Iraq's second-largest city and its port is near the mouth of the Shatt-al-Arab, the disputed estuary that leads to the Persian Gulf. The war began 3½ years ago when Iraq invaded Iran over the waterway dispute.

Recent reports of Iranian offensives have aroused fears that Iran might carry out its threats to prevent oil tankers from moving in and out of the gulf through the Strait of Hormuz.

Western reporters are rarely allowed into the battle areas and it is often impossible to confirm independently the conflicting claims of success.

Iran's leader, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, was quoted by the official Iranian news agency as saying the gulf region "will not experience any peace as long as (Iraqi President Saddam Hussein) lived."

The Islamic Republic News Agency also quoted Khomeini as saying the United States was trying "to get other Persian Gulf states involved, in the same way as it managed to plunge Iraq into trouble." There was no elaboration on the charge.

Referring to Arab states on the west coast of the gulf, Khomeini was quoted as saying "these governments ought to understand what was advisable for them and what their obligations were toward Iran and Islam."

On Saturday, the flagship of the U.S. Middle East force docked in Sharjah, a United Arab Emirates port just inside the Persian Gulf and 75 miles from the Strait of Hormuz.

A spokesman for the U.S. information office in Dubai said the USS LaSalle was on a three-day "goodwill visit" to the United Arab Emirates.

The U.S. Middle East task force consists of the 13,908-ton LaSalle and four destroyers.

At the United Nations on Friday, Iran's foreign minister claimed that the United States had been expanding its naval presence in the gulf region.

Reporting the six-mile advance toward Basra, Iran's Tehran radio said early Saturday afternoon that an Iraqi mechanized brigade and an armored brigade were "largely destroyed and infantry brigade wiped out."

The broadcast, monitored in London, said: "To thwart the Iranian advance the enemy fired 20 chemical shells but this had no effect on the operation."

Iran's official news agency said about 1,000 Iranian soldiers have been injured by Iraqi chemical weapons since Iran launched its operation east of Basra on Thursday.

Tehran radio reported that the Iranian defense minister, Mohammad Salimi, briefed President Ali Khamenei on Saturday about the battlefront situation, but the broadcast did not elaborate.

Iraq's military on Friday claimed the Iranian offensive was crushed in a fierce battle.

Pedaling prof

Biking professor David Eggleston prefers pedaling from his Midland home 20 miles to work at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin. Unless weather conditions ground his 10-speed, Eggleston — 49 years old next month — can be seen riding along Highway 80 several times each week.

He practices what he pedals

ODESSA — Early morning travelers commuting from Midland to Odessa probably are accustomed to seeing the ambitious cyclist who — with little regard for the weather — choses his bicycle over a gas-powered conveyance.

David Eggleston, closing in on his 49th year, has been biking the 20 miles to and from work at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin since 1977. Depending on the wind chill and temperature, Eggleston would take a 10-speed over his auto any time of the year.

Professor and chairman of control engineering at UTPB, Eggleston practices what he preaches.

"A bicycle is the most efficient form of transportation for a human," says Eggleston.

"I drive when I want to drive, but driving's terribly boring."

A veteran of in-town and highway bike riding, the Berkeley graduate uses this time to reflect on things he might not have time to otherwise. "I find it relaxing," he says.

While there are times when concentration is essential to survival, Eggleston says that the biker veteran learns when to daydream and when to be intent on the task at hand. Traffic may be light for long stretches of road, giving the rider time to think.

"I've spent so much time training myself to ride in traffic, I don't feel danger," he says, explaining his efforts to blend into the traffic flow and cause minimum disturbance of other wayfarers.

"Ninety-nine percent of the drivers pay attention to what they're doing," says Eggleston. "The faster you ride, the easier it gets."

Since starting at UTPB in the fall of 1977, he has ridden the route from his Midland home along Highway 80 an average of twice each week — sometimes more and sometimes less.

When the winds get strong and the temperature dips below freezing, Eggleston may abandon his cycle for the warmth of a car.

"When it starts messing up your body, I don't do it anymore," he says, "I'm not after any permanent damage."

Biking is not a seasonal activity for the fanatic, says Eggleston. "The hard-core enthusiasts don't — they keep on riding."

To avoid catching mild frostbite in his toes again, the professor wears special covers over his cleated cycling shoes. He rounds out his outfit with a warm-up suit, thermal underwear and a ski cap.

When the weather permits, he dresses down. "In California, I rode in business clothes," he says.

Panel can't predict assassins

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of experts assembled to help the Secret Service identify people who may try to kill the president has concluded there are "no scientifically valid models to predict who will be assassins."

But the committee, headed by Dr. W. Walter Menninger of the Menninger Foundation, said the Secret Service could improve its analysis of the information it already collects on potential assassins. It recommended that a training program be developed to give agents a better understanding of mental health terminology and concepts.

The report, released Saturday by the National Academy of Sciences Institute of Medicine, said the Secret Service last year investigated about 4,000 individuals who in one way or another came to the agency's attention as possible threats to the president, his family or one of the various dignataries entitled to Secret Service protection.

Of those investigated, about 120 were classified as dangerous and singled out for regular follow-up studies by Secret Service agents.

The committee said 95 percent of those on the list of dangerous persons, numbering about 350 at any given time, have histories of mental disorders or psychiatric treatment. Therefore, it said, agents in the protective intelligence division could benefit from greater training in how to deal with the mentally ill, how best to elicit accurate information from them and how to protect themselves against potentially violent subjects.

But the experts warned that mental health consultants retained by the agency should not try to impose their judgments of dangerousness on Secret Service agents who are ultimately responsible for protecting the president.

"Secret Service agents themselves are the most experienced persons in judging the dangerousness of potential assassins," the committee report said. "They can look to mental health and behavioral scientists only to supplement, not to supplant, their own judgments, skills and resulting decisions."

The report noted there have been 11 presidential assassination attempts involving 12 assailants in the country's history.

Long-forgotten cemetery given new life

TOMBSTONE, Ariz. (AP) — Thanks to research by a Yaqui Indian and efforts by local groups, a long-forgotten and vandalized Jewish cemetery at the historic Boothill Graveyard has been reconsecrated.

The graveyard fell into disuse nearly a century ago, and its 2,500-square foot section reserved for Jewish settlers — set off by a crumbling 3-foot adobe brick wall — became the victim of neglect, vandals and the desert.

Grave markers disappeared over the years, but the cemetery was rediscovered by accident in 1982. Last week, more than 200 Jews and other visitors attended ceremonies to rededicate the plot and rabbis from Sierra Vista and Tucson recited prayers.

C. Lawrence Huerta, a Yaqui Indian and former Maricopa County Superior Court judge, and Israel Rubin, an old friend from Potomac, Md., learned of the existence of the Jewish cemetery in July 1982. Rubin was visiting Huerta when they toured Tombstone with local historian and writer Alford E. Turner, who mentioned the abandoned cemetery.

During its heyday as a wild silver-mining community in the 1880s, Tombstone had a number of Jewish settlers. Lawman Wyatt Earp's third wife, Josephine, was Jewish.

Turner had learned of the cemetery years earlier and took the men to see it. Rubin "stood there by the entrance and said the Kaddish" — a Hebrew prayer recited for the dead, Huerta said.

"It moved me to hear the prayer coming from brother Rubin and see the Jewish grounds, and the experience stayed with me," said Huerta.

He received permission from the City Council to restore and research the cemetery, and helped clean it up along.

The last burials in the graveyard were about 100 years ago, but local citizens have been able to identify about 250 graves in the main cemetery. The Jewish area is in an isolated section below it.

A nonprofit corporation, the Tombstone Historical Jewish Graveyard Inc., was set up to provide for perpetual care of the site and paid for a wrought-iron fence outside the adobe wall.

Last Tuesday, dedication ceremonies were held for a cemetery monument. A Star of David adorns the east and west sides of the copper-colored cube, with a Hohokam Indian sun symbol on the south face. On top is a menorah — holiday candelabra — its flame spelling the Hebrew word "shalom," or peace. Local artisans Tim and Madeline Linahan made the symbols.

A retired Tombstone mason, Ygnacio R. Montijo, created a foundation with hand-picked native stones. Inside the cube is an old military safe intended to serve as a time capsule, which contains Jewish and Indian religious artifacts, including a deerskin yarmulke — Jewish skullcap — made by Huerta's mother, and a ceremonial Indian bowl.

Huerta said the contents of the Indian bowl represented the harmony between Jewish pioneers and American Indians.

El Salvador President Alvaro Alfredo Magana, left, talks with San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros during a Friday night conference on Central America in San Antonio.

Magana: No evidence links officials with death squads

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Salvadoran President Alvaro Alfredo Magana said Saturday there was no evidence that high-ranking officials in his government and a leading presidential candidate are involved with right-wing death squads, as claimed by a former officer.

The New York Times on Saturday quoted a former high-ranking Salvadoran military official as saying that ex-military officer and presidential candidate Roberto d'Aubuisson organized and continues to direct the death squads, blamed for more than 40,000 civilian deaths since 1978.

The unnamed source also said a number of high-ranking Salvadoran officials were involved with the squads.

"As far as I know, there is no evidence to that," Magana said of the report. "If I should know, my job as president would be to do something about it. There have been a lot of rumors, but no evidence."

In San Salvador, Col. Adolfo O. Blandon, the chief of staff of El Salvador's armed forces, also said there was no evidence to support such an allegation.

Magana was in San Antonio to address a Friday night conference on Central America. He will leave office after balloting March 25 in El Salvador's first presidential election in seven years.

On Saturday, Magana said the elections should help his country chart a course away from human rights violations, the death squads and bloody civil war.

He said the right-wing death squads have "taken the law into their own hands" and his government is "totally against them."

The former Salvadoran officer quoted by the Times has also met with two congressional critics of adminstration policy in Central America — Sen. Paul Tsongas and Rep. James Shannon, both D-Mass.

Shannon said in a telephone interview Saturday that he was confident about the authenticity of the man's background and in his credibility, describing him as a conservative anticommunist.

He said the United States should "stop kidding itself about human rights progress," cut off military aid to El Salvador and "try to push for negotiations" with leftist guerrillas.

The Times also quoted its source as saying that Salvadoran Defense Minister Eugenio Vides Casanova is personally directing a coverup of the 1980 slayings of four American churchwomen. Casanova's cousin, a colonel, ordered the slayings, the source said.

Casanova, who sat beside Magana during the breakfast meeting, firmly denied the report.

"It surprises me that in my country, where the events occurred, the accusation never has been made," Casanova said, speaking in Spanish.

Consultant against fence

DALLAS (AP) — The city's controversial plan to fence off the Dallas Convention Center during the Republican National Convention this summer will "cause more problems that it resolves," a consultant says.

Richard Tankerson, the president of a black businessman's league and a paid city consultant on convention protests, said he thinks the city is overreacting to the possibility of violence at the Aug. 20-23 convention.

City officials plan to erect a 6-foot chain-link fence around the convention center to separate protestors from delegates and reporters.

Tankerson said he thought the idea, which was recommended by the city's streets and sanitation department, was "exceptionally dumb. That in itself is a form of intimidation."

City officials retained Tankerson to work with local groups that might plan protests at the convention and to find out what their complaints are and how they plan to demonstrate.

Council member Max Goldblatt last week also expressed reservations about the fence.

"It almost says you've got a war zone," Goldblatt said. "A fence 6 feet high — there's no difference between that and a prison or a concentration camp."

Civil Liberties Union often misunderstood

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — John Duncan, head of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, would probably be the first to admit that his departures from the legislative arena may not cause a flood of tears from some lawmakers.

During his 11 years with the TCLU, Duncan has been involved in a number of legislative brouhahas, including a major set-to in 1981 with then-Gov. Bill Clements over some of the "War on Drugs" legislation. And Duncan also would acknowledge that TCLU often is seen as a group of wild-eyed liberals intent on protecting criminals or interfering with the operation of local governments or schools.

But, he argues, that's really not what TCLU is about.

"In the classical sense of the word," Duncan contends, "we're one of the more conservative organizations in the country. Essentially what we try to do is to limit the power of the government over the individual.

"If you look at our actions, either in the legislature or the courts, the majority of the time they're to limit the power of government...and to give meaning to the Bill of Rights of the U.S. Constitution, which essentially is a long list of 'thou shalt nots' for the government."

Duncan, who recently announced he's leaving as head of TCLU, says that his decision to quit was basically because "11 years in this position is long enough. This is probably the most rewarding job anyone could have, and at the same time, it's also the most trying and depressing."

In looking back, Duncan says, TCLU has been successful in its legislative battle most of the time, at least until the 1981 session "when we lost the electronic surveillance battle." Up to that time, "it was really rare for us to lose something of real substance," Duncan said.

That year, Duncan comments, was different because "we always fought what I would call irrationality with logic," but in 1981 "we ran into well-funded irrationality."

While the loss on wiretapping may have been the "most significant" loss in Duncan's tenure, the legislation which he feels was worst "as far as concept" was the triplicate prescription legislation which provides information on prescription drug sales to the Department of Public Safety. Duncan labels that bill "the ultimate piece of 1984 legislation in the Orwellian sense" because it promotes "the ideas that the state has the right to place a person's name on a computer as a potential drug abuser because they happen to be unfortunate enough to be ill enough to have certain substances prescribed to them by a doctor.

"We never got across to the public that we were willing to concead the state's right to require an accounting for those substance," Duncan says. "We would have dropped all opposition...if they merely would have redesigned the triplicate form so that the patient's name did not go to the DPS computer.

"It would have accomplished the same purpose of identifying doctors and pharmacists whose prescription patterns justified further investigation without putting thousands of Texans' names on a police computer, implying that they might be abusing drugs."

Duncan admits that TCLU may appear at times to be on the side of groups which are viewed with suspicion, distaste or dislike by many citizens.

"There's always been a tendency to assume that if we're representing some group that is generally conceaded to be reprehensible, that in some sense we're endorsing that group's goals, and that certainly is not the case.

"The government," Duncan argues, "must abide by the rules. It must respect the right of privacy of the individual. If it is trying someone on criminal charges, it must do it fairly.

"One of the most difficult points to get across to the public...on any criminal justice system is its potential for use as an instrument of political oppression. We've observed the Soviet Union doing that; we've held them in contempt for doing that, and rightly so. But any government is capable of that kind of abuse, if its citizens don't stand up against it...."

As he prepares to leave, Duncan cites what he sees as "the two great threats" to civil liberties in Texas — "the tendency of politicians to demagogue about the crime issue" without offering solutions (which he says changed somewhat in 1983) and the failure of the public schools to educate students on "basic constitutional priciples."

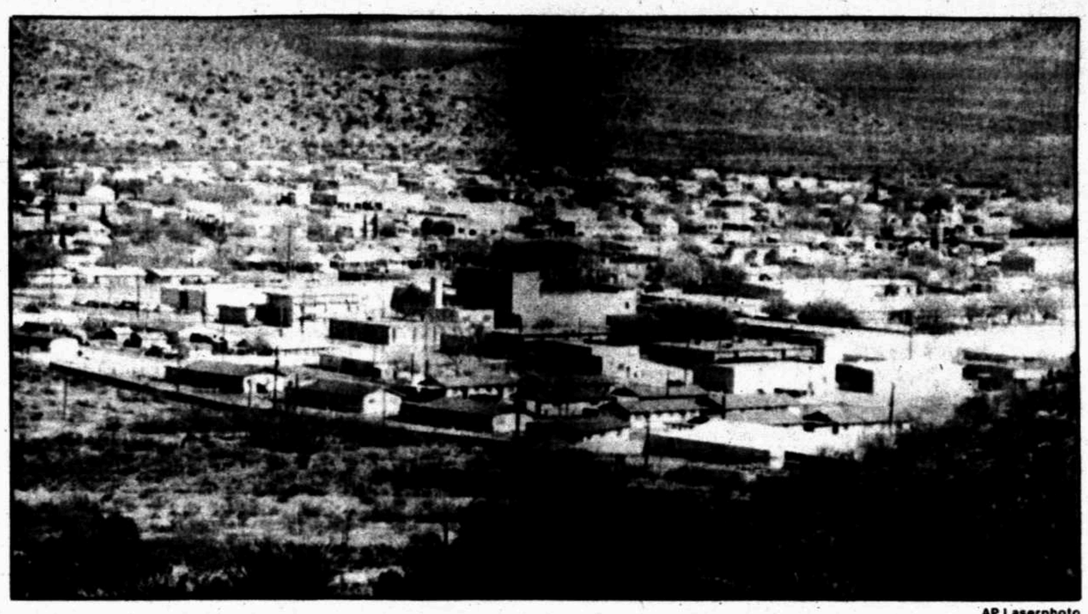

Society must teach its children, he argues, "that they have a stake in society and that society does care."

Mayor may testify

AUSTIN (AP) — The city ethics review commission will decide Wednesday whether to invite Mayor Ron Mullen to testify about his votes on projects involving two developers who bought insurance from his firm.

The commission informally decided last week to drop an ethics complaint against Mullen because of a statute of limitations on the city's ethics law.

West Texas town escapes oil, gas slowdown

AP Laserphoto

Iraan, Texas' healthy economy is drawing people into the city. In the 1970s the city had about 1,000 people. Today estimates of Iraan's population range from 1,600 to 2,300. Although no one is complaining about business, the rapid growth has meant a shortage of living space and put a crunch on city services.

IRAAN (AP) — The prefabricated house that rolled into town was more than welcome here.

The small town of Iraan isn't facing the oil and gas industry slowdown that has plagued most of West Texas. Marathon Oil, the primary producer in the area, hasn't slowed from pumping 125,000 barrels a day in the oil-rich Yates Field.

The healthy economy is drawing people into the town. In the early 1970s, the town had about 1,000 people. Today, estimates of Iraan's population range from 1,600 to 2,300.

Although no one is complaining about business, the rapid growth has meant a shortage of living space and a crunch on city services.

"I think our problem is that we declined for so long that when we got into a growth situation, nobody knew how to handle it," Iraan Mayor Rick Rylander said.

"It's really a nightmare," said Harold Horton, operation superintendent at Marathon Oil.

Rylander and the City Council are negotiating for land around the city, although the process is slow because there are many property owners who don't live in the area.

Additional land would help ease growing pains for the town, which is situated on about 250 acres. Throughout the town, lots that used to have only one house now are clustered with trailers. The handful of recreational vehicle spaces in the county park are filled with long-term residents.

Horton said only supervisors are guaranteed company housing from Marathon. For other employees, "it may take you three, four, five years to get one."

About 25 of Marathon's 190 employees live in Sheffield, 18 miles southeast of Iraan, he said, adding that people have gone looking for housing as far away as McCamey, about 27 miles northeast, or Rankin, 23 miles north of Iraan.

Trailers overhang a dry river bed in one area, with mobile homes sitting only feet apart in many parts of town. Even the school district has allowed an employee to put a trailer on school property, behind teacher housing provided by the district.

"If the fire inspector came down, he'd condemn the whole area," Rylander said about the town.

Although the city has zoning ordinances, Rylander said they haven't been enforced. "You don't want to kick people out of town," he said.

Iraan's growth always has been tied to the oil industry. Pecos County Commissioner Ollie Garland, 69, came to the area as a youngster in 1929, three years after a well came in on a ranch owned by Ira G. Yates. The town was named for Yates and his wife Ann.

Garland said his family lived in an oilfield camp tent for the first 1½ years. Between 3,000 and 4,000 people lived in Iraan or one of 13 or 14 camps scattered in the rolling hills around the city, he said.

A generation later, the town still hadn't seen many improvements, although the population had dropped to about 1,600, former Mayor Jon Kniveton, who was born in 1936, recalled.

In the early 1950s, Iraan was incorporated as a city. Installation of a city-owned sewage system followed. In the next decade, two pieces of land were annexed into the city limits.

The Park Place Addition provided almost 60 homes for Marathon Oil employees. The Yates family donated the Brooks Addition, with room for another 50 houses.

By the 1960s, though, the population started to shrink. "The decline was when a lot of major oil companies moved their offices away," Kniveton said.

Rylander said his 1968 high school graduation was "the last really large class they had for a while." Between 1967 and 1973, the population dipped below 1,000.

Then, in the mid-1970s, Marathon took over the production of all oil in Yates Field, unitizing pumping in the area.

"It started real slow," said Rylander, who runs an oil field supply store with his father. By the early 1980s, the town had started to boom again.

Although drilling has slowed elsewhere, the Yates Field, at 1,500 to 1,800 feet in depth, still is profitable.

Horton said that as drilling operations shut down elsewhere, more people have come to Iraan looking for work. "Three years ago, during the boom, to hire somebody, you almost had to ask them. Now it's almost the other way around," he said.

The schools also are faced with space problems. In the last year, enrollment has increased from about 540 students to 600 in Iraan and Sheffield.

The school district plans to build additional classrooms to keep up with the enrollment increase, said Iraan-Sheffield Superintendent Roy Dodds.

Dodds said last week that he expects another 100 students within the next 10 years. That estimate would be larger "if there were space available" for housing, he said.

The city also has applied for a $10,250 grant from the state to study improvements for the wastewater system.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The National Weather Service forecast for today includes showers in Illinois and the South; snow for Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota and South Dakota; and flurries for Colorado and New Mexico.

Some snow accumulation possible for Midland area

From Staff and Wire Reports

Snow may be gracing Midland's landscape tonight and Monday just as buds are readying to announce spring's arrival on March 20.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport has forecast a 40 percent chance of snow blanketing Midland. He predicted accumulations of 1 to 2 inches of snow.

For today, the weatherman is calling for cloudy skies and a high temperature reading in the low 60s and northeasterly winds at 15 to 25 mph and gusty. Tonight, the temperature is to drop into the low 30s. Monday's high is to be in low 40s.

The high temperature Saturday was 79 degrees, which was 10 degrees short of tying the record high of 89 degrees for the date in 1974.

The overnight low of 43 degrees was nowhere near the record low of 20 degrees for a March 4 in 1965.

STATE

Golfball-sized hail was reported Saturday afternoon southeast of Texarkana as heavy thunderstorms rolled across Northeast Texas.

Colder temperatures statewide were expected Sunday, with snow expected to return to the Panhandle starting Saturday night, accumulating up to 2 inches by Monday morning, the National Weather Service said.

Saturday's thunderstorms were spawned by moist Gulf of Mexico air colliding with a stationary front along the Red River, the weather service said. Hail was also reported in the Sulfur Springs area.

Across most of the rest of the state Saturday, skies were cloudy to partly cloudy. Only the western Panhandle, South Plains and Trans Pecos reported much sunshine.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from the 60s in the Panhandle to near 80 in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Winds were southeasterly at 10 to 20 mph over the eastern two thirds of the state. In the Trans Pecos, winds were westernly at 5 to 15 mph, and north winds of 20 mph were reported in the northern Panhandle.

The weather service said scattered showers mixed with snow in the Panhandle Saturday night would turn to all snow Sunday through early Monday with accumulations of 1 to 2 inches in some areas. Scattered thunderstorms were predicted for North Texas, while partly cloudy skies were expected to prevail in South Texas on Sunday.

Highs were expected to range from the 40s in the Panhandle to 60s in North Texas, ranging up to the 80s in far South Texas. Temperatures in the low teens were in the Sunday night forecast for the Panhandle, with 30s predicted for North Texas and 60s in the far south.

U.S. withdrawal draws criticism

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
and ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writers

President Reagan's decision to withdraw the U.S. Marines from Lebanon is drawing criticism from both Israel and moderate Arab nations who say the pullout has stained America's prestige and endangers long-range Middle East peace efforts.

Israeli leaders referred to a "lack of credibility" on Washington's part while newspapers published editorials calling the U.S. pullout a "second Vietnam" and a "crushing defeat" for Reagan's policies.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak said the Marine withdrawal, following Italy's and Britain's pullout of troops from the Multinational Peacekeeping Force in Beirut, was a "disaster." Cairo newspapers called Reagan's decision a politial move aimed at U.S. voters in an election year.

Israeli and Egyptian leaders saw the U.S. pullout as a collapse of support for Lebanese President Amin Gemayel's beleaguered government, with pro-Soviet Syria the big gainer in the Middle East power struggle.

They saw these implications:

— Gemayel, without firm U.S. support, had to bow to Syrian pressure and, after meeting in Syrja with President Hafez Assad, abrogated the U.S.-sponsored Lebanese-Israeli troop withdrawal agreement reached last May. This gives Syria a strong hand in planned "reconciliation" talks between Gemayel, a Maronite Christian, and his Syrian-backed Druse and Shiite Moslem opponents.

A senior Lebanese official said no decision had been reached in Damascus on abrogating the pact, although leaders of the Syrian-backed opposition say such an agreement was reached.

— Talks between Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat and Jordan's King Hussein are jeopardized. A key issue is whether the PLO will agree to have Jordan serve as its representative in proposed peace talks with Israel over the future of the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip. Under Reagan's September 1982 peace plan, the West Bank would get a type of autonomy in association with Jordan. Syria is against Arafat, his negotiations with Hussein and the Reagan proposal.

— As U.S. influence wanes, Egypt will come under increasing pressure from other Arab states to stand with them and ignore its 1979 peace accords with Israel.

— Syria, which had rejected last May's Lebanese-Israeli troop withdrawal pact that called for the simultaneous pullout of Syrian and Israeli forces from Lebanon, is being recognized even by moderate Arab states as a major Mideast power broker.

During recent Saudi-led negotiations in Syria on a cease-fire between the Lebanese army and Druse and Shiite militias, Saudi Crown Prince Abdullah praised Syria's role and spoke of "an identity of objectives" between Syria and Saudi Arabia.

Israeli criticism of Reagan is centered on what is seen as a backdown from America's commitments, with a key element Gemayel's purported abrogation of the troop-withdrawal agreement.

Officials of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's government have said that abandonment of the pact would undermine future attempts to obtain Arab-Israeli peace treaties.

Eliyahu Ben-Elissar, a legislative member of Shamir's Likud coalition and a former ambassador to Cairo who helped negotiate the peace treaty with Egypt, said abrogation of the U.S.-mediated Israeli-Lebanese agreement meant "the U.S. signature has no value."

"This has far-reaching implications for the United States' relations with other countries and for many other agreements which it has signed," he added.

One of these agreements, he said, is the peace treaty with Egypt, which has had correct but cool relations with Israel for the past five years.

Israel's deputy prime minister, David Levy, told Israeli Army Radio that the government "had hoped and believed that the United States would stand strong and adamant" in supporting Gemayel' s embattled regime.

Public criticism by Egyptian officials has been muted, but President Hosni Mubarak made his stand clear when he visited Washington last month. In a newspaper interview, he called withdrawal of the American Marines a "disaster" and said the United States could "lose the confidence of all your friends in the region."

He had hoped the Marines and other troops in the multinational force would remain in Beirut until they could be replaced by U.N. peace units. France is the only nation that has left its troops in Beirut, and French officials said Thursday they could not "alone bear the responsibility of the international community." But they did not announce plans for a pullout.

While Israeli and Egyptian leaders were temperate in their criticism, many newspapers were not.

Following are some of the reactions from the Israeli press:

Under a headline "Only in America," the independent Haaretz listed 22 examples of what it called Reagan's mistakes in Lebanon, ranging from taking a vacation during the crisis to counting on Lebanon's factionalized army. Each example ended with the phrase, "Don't be surprised. That's the way it is in America."

A conservative newspaper, Yedioth Ahronoth, called the U.S. action a "second Vietnam ... a crushing defeat." It said that Reagan, seeking an offsetting success, might try to force Israel to make dangerous concessions to the Arabs.

The leftist Al Hamishmar, which supports an immediate Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon, said U.S. leaders were "running for their lives militarily and politically."

Mubarak had urged Arafat last year to reach an early agreement with Hussein on laying the groundwork for possible peace talks with Israel, saying that once the U.S. presidential election campaign began Washington's active interest in the Middle East conflict would dissipate.

That theme generally was repeated by Cairo's state-controlled newspapers, but they also said Reagan's moves undermined the confidence of Egypt, Jordan and other Arab moderates in U.S. pledges and commitments.

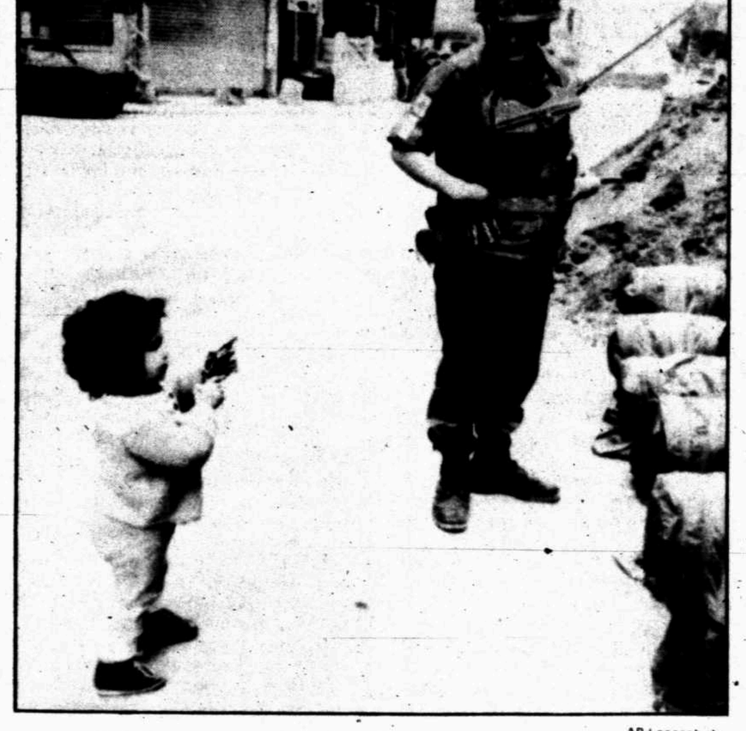

Several called the decision to remove the Marines a political action designed primarily to prevent Lebanon from developing into a major campaign issue.

Egypt's most prestigious newspaper, Al Ahram, said the most important lesson for the Arabs "is that even under these dangerous security conditions, the U.S. administration has preferred its own interests to those of the region."

Syria's state-controlled press called the U.S. withdrawal a defeat for America, and Egyptian newspapers suggested Syria now will try again to wreck the Arafat-Hussein talks.

A previous round between the PLO chief and Jordanian monarch collapsed last April under pressure from Syrian-backed hardliners in the PLO. The Syrians subsequently called for Arafat's removal as PLO chairman and supported PLO rebels who attacked Arafat loyalists in northern Lebanon late last year and forced them to leave the country.

Parents won't give up search for son

By MARGARET STAFFORD
Associated Press Writer

WEST DES MOINES, Iowa — Eighteen months after 12-year-old Johnny Gosch disappeared while on his early morning newspaper delivery route, his parents refuse to give up their search for him.

The Gosches say they are convinced that Johnny is still alive, citing recent "sightings" of the boy, mostly in the South.

"Every time we feel like quitting we remind ourselves that Johnny is the victim. He was the one who was ripped from his home, his family, his school, everything," Maureen Gosch said during an interview last week. "If we get into the 'Why me?' syndrome it would kill us."

Mrs. Gosch believes that while Johnny is still missing, efforts to find him have already been beneficial, at least for other children. Last week, the Iowa Senate passed legislation, called by some the "Johnny Gosch Bill," which would allow police to get involved more quickly in cases of missing people.

There also has been some federal action since the Gosches and parents of other missing children began fighting for more help in recent years. The FBI has gotten more involved in searches for missing children, and the Senate subcommittee on juvenile justice conducted hearings recently on proposed legislation that would set up a national telephone hotline to provide information on missing children.

One such toll-free number now exists, set up by an organization called Child Find and supported entirely by private grants and contributions.

Mrs. Gosch said one of the recent sightings was in Florida. She refused to give more details, saying she was afraid the boy's abductors would harm him. The FBI refused to comment on her report.

The people who have reported that they believed they saw Johnny say they have seen with him a man fitting the description of someone seen talking to Johnny the morning he disappeared, Mrs. Gosch said.

Last month, Mrs. Gosch said, a boy who sounded like Johnny called three times in one night, for 45 seconds each time, sounding drugged or hurt. Authorities said the calls were too short to trace.

The caller had trouble speaking but Mrs. Gosch said she recognized his voice and he eventually recognized hers. She is sure whoever has abducted Johnny arranged the calls to torment Johnny or his parents.

Late last month, she said a woman in the Southwest reported that a boy had run up to her and said "'Please lady, help me. My name is John David Gosch.'" She said that then one of two men with the boy "grabbed him, twisted his arm behind his back and dragged him away."

The unidentified woman contacted authorities in October after seeing the boy's picture on television, said Mrs. Gosch. The picture was one of several shown following "Adam," a drama about the Florida kidnap-murder of 6-year-old Adam Walsh.

A group of 30 volunteers who meet every week help the Gosches continue their search. The volunteers discuss fund-raisers, legislation and any other idea that could make a difference.

Mrs. Gosch feels her efforts to find her son also have increased public awareness about the problem of missing children and the lack of laws to help parents in such cases.

"When we first started giving lectures throughout the state, we would have 10 or 15 people," she said. "Now, we have as many as 400. People are concerned and they should be."

The disappearance of two boys near Omaha, Neb., last fall also showed increased awareness, Mrs. Gosch said. Although both boys were eventually found dead, Mrs. Gosch said the immediate reaction by several law enforcement agencies was drastically different from the reaction the Gosches got when they first reported their son missing in September 1982.

Until that happened, Mrs. Gosch said she was unaware that police were not required to search for a child unless he had been missing for 72 hours, or that the FBI rarely pursued missing child cases.

"The nice thing about our volunteers is that they bring expertise in these areas to us, to help with the effort," Mrs. Gosch said. "They know we are just average people and if this happened to us it could happen to them. They saw the system turn its back on a small boy and they want to change things for their children."

UTPB professor prefers pedaling to work

While Eggleston advocates energy conservation, his use of the bicycle goes beyond his ecological leanings.

"I ride to maintain basic physical conditioning and feel good," he says. "If I lay off more than a day, I backslide and it hurts." He also takes weekend rides to keep up his program, striving to average 10 miles per day.

"If you don't exercise, your body falls apart when you get older," he says. "I'm just not one of these people ready to give up on life so early."

By combining this efficient mode of transportation with the exercise benefits, he says, "It gives you a built-in incentive to do the work you ought to do."

Businesses in Chicago, Washington D.C. and New York City make special provisions for their bike-riding employees, including locker rooms and parking areas.

Midland has not made such provisions, noted the professor, and fails to enforce traffic laws for bikers. "Midland has no enforcement of bicycle traffic laws and bicycle licensing programs."

He called for programs teaching children "the rules of the road while they're riding their bikes."

Enforcement of traffic laws for cars would also ease life for bikers, says Eggleston. "(Not enforcing traffic laws) is just self propagating — they just keep on doing it forever."

Bike clubs are rare in Midland. A group naming themselves after their time pieces, "The Casio Club," is made up of what Eggleston terms cyclists "that like to ride fast."

The professor and R. Lynn Patty of Peyton's Bikes are forming a group for medium-speed riders, but he suggested that a social bike club could succeed here. He recalled a San Diego club, "The Knickerbikers," that grew to the point it chartered a jet for a bike hike in Washington state.

Though he still encounters an occasional "sorehead," Eggleston looks on his skirmishes in highway and city traffic as efforts at changing attitudes of the public about the practical uses of bikes.

"I'm doing everything I can," he says. "By my riding, the car drivers are to a gradual extent getting trained to deal with bicycles on the highway."

Marriage disolved despite sex change

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A judge has dissolved the marriage of two Fort Worth women, one of whom claimed that she became a man through a sex-change operation before the wedding.

District Judge Sidney Farrar issued the order dissolving the marriage Friday after the couple and the Tarrant County district attorney's office reached agreement in a lawsuit filed by County Clerk Madrin Huffman.

Huffman, whose office issues marriage licenses, filed the suit after learning that the 28-year-old groom — who was born a female — had not secured a change in her birth certificate.

The change would require a court order based on a doctor's certification that the sex-change operation was complete.

The two were married soon after they received their license Aug. 6, 1983, in a ceremony at a Fort Worth hospital chapel.

The groom had her name legally changed to a man's name July 22 by a state district judge, according to records in the district clerk's office.

The groom said in the request for the name change that she underwent reconstructive surgery to change her sex from female to male and has lived as a male for four years.

But Huffman said that the doctor who performed blood tests necesary for the marriage told him that physical examinations showed that the groom, like the bride, was female.

Huffman said that his concern was not with the couple's lifestyle but that the license was issued based on incorrect information.

The couple, whose telephone number was unlisted, could not be reached for comment Saturday.

Because the suit was not litigated, certain questions remain, including the legality of the Texas Family Code's prohibition against marriages between people fo the same sex and the question of whether the marriage was legal, Farrar said.

"Our position continues to be that a person who has had the surgery still does not qualify under the law as a male," said Assistant District Attorney Dalton Gandy.

Copter readied for radioactive pellet search

EL PASO (AP) — Federal officials began Saturday a month-long aerial search for radioactive pellets that may have been brought into El Paso with contaminated Mexican steel.

A U.S. Department of Energy helicopter equipped with a sophisticated radiation tracking system will scan this western Texas city and nearby communities in New Mexico for the pinhead-sized pellets, said DOE representative Gylan Allen.

The pellets of cobalt-60, stolen from a hospital in nearby Juarez, Mexico, contaminated some scrap metal which was melted down and has turned up in the United States in reinforcing rods and table pedestals.

Health officials have made ground surveys of El Paso but the equipment on the helicopter is more sensitive to radiation, said David Lacker, chief of the Bureau of Radiation Control of the Texas Department of Health.

The pellets, which officials are not sure are even in El Paso, came from a cancer-treatment machine stored at the Juarez hospital.

A hospital electrician broke into the machine in November, took a 44-pound, steel-and-lead cylinder that contained a capsule of the pellets and sold it to a Juarez junkyard for about $10, according to authorities.

Tampering allowed the radioactive pellets to spread to scrap metal, which was sold to at least two Mexican foundries and melted down for use in various steel products, officials said.

The helicopter will fly at 300 feet, allowing the scanning equipment to prepare a map highlighting areas with radiation readings above the natural background level, Allen said.

"The computer system we use can tell exactly where we are flying so we can pinpoint an area if we need to get to it," Allen said.

He said if a pellet is found, the scanners can identify its location within 100 feet and then ground crews can "go and clean up the area and remove the pellet."

One pellet gives off about 20 rems of radiation an hour at a distance of about five centimeters, said Bob Free, administrator for incident investigation and emergency planning of the radiation control bureau.

That is more than 1,000 times the radiation that would be emitted by an average chest X-ray over an hour, said Dr. John Bradley, director of the regional state health department in El Paso.

CBS subpoena expected in Geter retrial

DALLAS (AP) — A judge is expected to sign a subpoena Monday ordering the president of CBS News to testify in the robbery retrial of Lenell Geter, whose life sentence was overturned after news reports raised questions about his case.

Edward M. Joyce will be asked to bring with him all videotapes of a "60 Minutes" segment dealing with the case, prosecutors say.

Geter's 1982 conviction and life sentence for the robbery of a suburban Dallas convenience store were thrown out last December at the request of prosecution and defense lawyers.

Geter, 26, an electrical engineer from nearby Greenville, Texas, claims he was the victim of racism and shoddy police work.

His co-workers at E-Systems, a defense contractor, say he was at work when the Aug. 23, 1982, holdup occurred in Balch Springs, although several eyewitnesses identified him as the robber.

State District Judge John Ovard, who already has ordered "60 Minutes" reporter Morley Safer to testify in the retrial beginning April 9, is expected to sign the subpoena, court officials said.

"The film and videotapes are relevant and material as sources of prior consistent and inconsistent statements of ... witnesses," the motion states.

But Gene Mater, senior vice president of CBS News, said Friday that the network will continue to fight subpoenas of its employees.

"If the judge in this court in New York rules against us, that doesn't mean we are not going to appeal it," Mater said. "We look upon this as a rather fundamental issue in journalism — the turning over of outtakes and material not used."

A hearing is scheduled Thursday in a New York court to determine whether CBS must release the tapes.

Assistant District Attorney Karen Beverly said she filed the motion to subpoena Joyce on Thursday after the news executive filed an affadavit stating that Safer did not have control of the tapes.

"He said a CBS archivist has control of the tapes, so we decided to subpoena him (Joyce) because we felt he could get the tapes from the archivist," Ms. Beverly said. "We didn't know whether the archivist had the authority to take the tapes out of state."

Luci Johnson weds

STONEWALL, Texas (AP) — Luci Baines Johnson, younger daughter of former President Lyndon B. Johnson, married Ian Johnstone Turpin, a Grand Cayman Island banker, during a small, private ceremony Saturday at her mother's ranch.

About 50 friends and family members crowded into the west room of the LBJ ranch house for the 1 p.m. ceremony, said Liz Carpenter, Lady Bird Johnson's former press secretary and a close family friend.

The Rev. William J. Kaifer, a long time friend who has officiated at the christening of her children — Patrick Lyndon Nugent, 16; Nicole Marie Nugent, 14; Rebekah Johnson Nugent, 9, and Claudia Taylor Nugent, 7 — performed the ceremony before a fireplace in the west room.

Turkey sold for record $52,000

HOUSTON (AP) — A 24-pound grand champion tom turkey has sold for a record $52,000 at this year's Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo.

The turkey was bought Friday by four Houston businessmen from Kenneth Moy 19, of Floresville. Moy, who has been raising livestock since he was 9, said he plans to invest the money.

The previous record was $40,000, paid last year.

Quints' father kills self

BERNARDS TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — William Kienast, the father of famous quintuplets who almost lost their home last summer when the family could not make mortgage payments, committed suicide Saturday, police said.

Police Capt. Charles J. Fortenbacker said in a statement that a jogger found Kienast, 52, in his car at about 7:15 a.m. in an isolated area of this Somerset County community.

"The death appears to be a suicide. No foul play was suspected," the statement said.

No other details were immediately released, and the body was taken to Somerset Medical Center in Somerville for an autopsy, a hospital spokesman said.

The quintuplets — Gordon, Ted, Amy, Sara and Abigail — were born in 1970.

Large voter turnout predicted for Maine's caucuses

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Party leaders predict about 15,000 Maine Democrats will take part in Sunday's caucuses, the first step in choosing the state's 27 delegates to the national nominating convention in San Francisco next July.

Gary Hart's upset of Walter F. Mondale in the nation's first primary next door in New Hampshire has touched off speculation of an even larger turnout. But the complex procedure of running the caucuses will remain the same.

Hart and Mondale are the only candidates making a serious effort here.

The caucuses will be conducted in about 415 of Maine's 500 communities — in living rooms, fire stations, schools and other locations — between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. The results will be tallied by party officials at caucus.

Big Dan's rape trial 'more popular than soap operas'

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — In gas stations, barber shops, barrooms and markets throughout this working-class seaport, radios and televisions are tuned to a drama unfolding in a courtroom 11 miles away.

"It's more popular than the soap operas," said one 65-year-old woman, interviewed in a corner market, who refused to give her name. "When I get home from work, I don't even get off my coat. That's the first thing I do — I turn on Big Dan's."

The trials of six men charged with gang-raping a woman at Big Dan's tavern, broadcast live from nearby Fall River, have engrossed a city that felt the scorn of the nation when the case hit the front pages last year.

Gone is the tavern where a 22-year-old woman says she was raped repeatedly on a pool table while bar patrons cheered. In its place is a discount bakery and a mixed legacy of horror and curiosity that has intensified since the two trials began more than a week ago.

The trials — morning sessions for four defendants and afternoon sessions for the remaining two — are being broadcast live to 44,000 cable TV subscribers in southeastern Massachusetts by two cable systems owned by Colony Communications Inc. of Providence, R.I. Last week, Cable News Network began interspersing its 24-hour national news report with live trial coverage.

In the New Bedford area, portions of the testimony can be heard daily on radio station WBSM, which has invited callers to comment on the proceedings during breaks in courtroom action.

The response, said daytime talk show host Robb Michaels, has been overwhelming.

"People want to talk about that and nothing else. We have six (telephone) lines and as soon as you hang up one, it lights up again with another caller," he said in a interview last week at the station's downtown studios.

The tide of publicity that followed the incident sided heavily with the woman who told police she was raped and tormented for hours as patrons shouted, "Go for it!" Women's groups marched in New Bedford to protest sexual violence and a rape crisis center was born of their anger and concern.

So far, only the prosecution has presented its version of what happened in the dimly lit barroom on March 6, 1983. Interest peaked last week when the woman told her tale of humiliation in a flat, unemotional voice.

In her final day of testimony Wednesday, a line of spectators trying to get into the courtroom extended down the stairs and stretched out along the corridor of the century-old Bristol County Superior Courthouse.

Since her story has come under examination by defense lawyers, some New Bedford residents say their sympathies have changed.

nation in brief

Repayment speeds up

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. is speeding up repayment of a $150 million loan which Michigan made in 1980 to help the then-ailing automaker, the state's third largest private employer.

James Tolley, a Chrysler vice president, presented Gov. James Blanchard with a $20 million check Friday, adding to $5 million paid in early January.

Chrysler will pay the remaining $125 million debt to the state in installments of $25 million each January through 1989. Under the original terms, Chrysler was not required to pay off the loan until 1995. The interest rate on the unpaid principal was reduced to 11 percent from 15.5 percent.

Job may be returned

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Acknowledging that polygamy is a common practice in predominantly Mormon Utah, a federal judge has taken under advisement arguments to reinstate an avowed polygamist as a police officer.

U.S. District Judge Sherman Christensen commented Friday after hearing closing arguments in the 16-month-old lawsuit.

Royston Potter, 30, who has three wives, contends that he has a constitutional right to practice polygamy. The Murray Police Department dismissed him in 1982 when the city discovered he was violating the state's anti-polygamy laws. Potter's lawyer, Dennis Haslam, argued that the anti-polygamy laws violate Potter's constitutional rights to privacy and free practice of religion.

Bacteria in water

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP) — Health officials, trying to locate the source of contaminated water, advised residents of the St. Louis County community of Florissant to boil their water for at least two days.

The boil order was issued Friday for Florissant's 50,000 residents after a routine check showed abnormally high coliform bacteria levels, health officials said. A coliform count is often used as an indicator of fecal contamination of water supplies. Contaminated water can cause vomiting and diarrhea, but it is not life-threatening, health officials said.

Corneas to be removed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The coroner's office will routinely remove corneas from the eyes of corpses to ease a shortage for eye transplant patients, Dr. Boyd Stephens said.

Stephens said Friday his office would make an exception only when it knows of an objection from a family or donor. The new policy is allowed under a law designed to ease a shortage of corneal tissue for transplants.

The cornea is the clear outer membrane that overlies the iris and pupil. Stephens said removal of the cornea must be accomplished within six hours of death and does not disfigure the body.

Citizens seek veto

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. George Deukmejian's office has been flooded with more than 15,000 letters in the past two weeks, urging him to veto the gay employment rights bill sent to him by the Legislature, a spokesman said.

In addition, as many as 3,000 daily phone calls have been clogging the governor's switchboard, said his spokesman Bob Taylor. The overwhelming majority of calls and letters pressed for a veto, he added.

The bill, which went to the governor Friday, prevents job discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation and would allow homosexuals to file job discrimination suits with state officials instead of in the more cumbersome and expensive civil court system. The governor has 12 days to veto the bill, which automatically becomes law if no veto is issued in that period.

Feldstein pays taxes

GUILFORD, Vt. (AP) — Martin Feldstein, the chairman of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers, has squared his debt with the town tax collector.

Feldstein, who owns property in this southern Vermont town, recently paid a $29 overdue tax bill.

He had failed to meet a Nov. 10 tax deadline and was listed in the town report as one of several dozen delinquent taxpayers. He originally owed $2,545 in taxes and paid all but $29 of that amount in January.

A front-page article in the Brattleboro Reformer quoted Town Clerk Marie Carpenter as saying, "I suspect they have their money invested, then they wait and give us their interest."

'Word' hurts campaign

Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — The Rev. Jesse Jackson's "Hymie" comment has "literally destroyed" his Democratic presidential campaign, says California's most powerful black politician.

Assembly Speaker Willie Brown said Jackson can no longer "talk about the rainbow coalition in those great glowing terms."

Aside from the direct damage caused by Jackson eventual admission that he privately referred to Jews as "Hymies," Brown (D-San Francisco) said Jackson has been hurt by his mishandling of the incident.

By delaying his admission, Jackson's apology has not been entirely believed nor put to rest the suspicion that he has a "deep-seated, anti-Semitic streak," Brown said.

Boy shoots self in head

FAIRPORT, N.Y. (AP) — A 17-year-old boy shot himself in the head after watching "really macabre" videotape movies during a beer party, then lay in a pool of blood as five friends fled in terror, police said Saturday.

Chris Mahan was listed in critical condition Saturday at Genesee Hospital in Rochester.

Police Chief J.D. Picciotti said Mahan shot himself in the right temple Friday night with a .38-caliber handgun and the bullet exited above his left ear.

"I don't think suicide at all played a part in it," Picciotti said. "He almost became an actor in the movie, almost by extension."

The youth's friends, ranging in age from 14 to 17, were "in shock" after the shooting, he said.

"The other five panicked, ran out of the house and left their friend on the den floor to bleed to death," Picciotti said.

"After a period of soul-searching," he said, three of them went to the police station in this Rochester suburb and reported the shooting.

The shooting apparently happened between 8 and 8:10 p.m., and was reported about 8:30 p.m., he said. Picciotti said the boy's friends hid about two dozen empty bottles before they fled Mahan's home.

The teen-agers had been drinking beer and watching videotape movies when Mahan went upstairs, got his father's registered handgun, loaded it and shot himself.

Picciotti said the movies included "Road Warrior" and "Mad Max." He said both are filled with stabbings and random violence.

"It's tragic," Picciotti said. "I think the catalyst of these things was these bizarre, really macabre movies."

Mahan had also talked with his friends about violent music videos and about "The Deer Hunter," a movie in which U.S. soldiers in Vietnam are forced to play Russian roulette, the police chief said.

The boy's parents, Francis and Patricia Mahan, and his sister had gone on an evening ski trip, Picciotti said. He said they had not known their son planned to have a party at the home.

Picciotti said Mahan, a lawyer, had hidden his .38-caliber pistol and ammunition in different places in the bedroom. The youth had toyed with a shotgun before pointing the pistol at his head and firing, the police chief said.

Picciotti said no action would be taken against the other teen-agers because they did not handle either weapon or violate any laws.

"The real tragedy is what they're going to have to live with, knowing they left their friend ...," he said. "Any arrest would seem frivolous compared to that."

Handgun ban draws opposition

CLEVELAND HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — A proposal to make this city the second community in the nation to ban handguns has prompted sharp opposition from gun owners and drawn overflow crowds to normally quiet committee hearings

A longtime City Council member is leading the campaign for the handgun ban. The mayor opposes it. The city manager says he is neutral — even though the death of his young son is often cited as a reason for the ban.

The proposed ordinance is scheduled for a vote by the seven-member council on Monday evening.

The proposal was made last November by Councilman Richard G. Weigand, who argued that "possession of handguns by otherwise law-abiding members of the public poses a serious danger to public safety in cases of the theft of the handgun or its accidental discharge."

Cleveland Heights, a city of 57,000 adjoining Cleveland on the east, now requires handgun owners to be licensed with police.

The proposed law would allow only police officers, members of the U.S. military, security guards and collectors of antique firearms to own handguns. Guns with barrel lengths of more than a foot and which require two hands to fire would not be banned.

Weigand, a member of the council for 10 years, said his proposal is modeled after the gun-ban ordinance passed in 1981 by Morton Grove, Ill., a Chicago suburb. The following year, Kennesaw, Ga., enacted an ordinance requiring heads of households to own and maintain a firearm and ammunition, but that ordinance carries no penalty.

An estimated 15,000 people in Cleveland Heights — about 25 percent of the residents — own handguns. Their opposition, including frequent recitations of the Second Amendment "right to bear arms," amounted to about 80 percent of the testimony in recent council hearings.

Wiegand said many other people in a "silent majority" have told him and other council members they won't testify in public but do support the handgun ban.

Candidates trade barbs in South

Copley News Service

ATLANTA — Former Vice President Walter Mondale lashed out again at Sen. Gary Hart's belated Democratic presidential campaign efforts in the south as the two traded barbs here Friday night.

With both men now identifying the campaign as essentially a two-man race, they stepped up their personal criticism of each other — Hart charging Mondale is the hand-picked candidate of the special interests and Washington establishment, Mondale questioning whether Hart's "new ideas" are really new or workable.

The two also used some very pointed humor to jab at each other as they joined Ohio Sen. John Glenn at the Georgia Democratic Party's annual dinner.

Hart, who has campaigned little in the south and has only fledgling organizations in Georgia, Alabama and Florida which will select 289 delegates on the March 13 "Super Tuesday" elections, said the south and west were the keys to the country's future.

The nation must move forward with new ideas, he said.

"I am here tonight because I believe the leadership of this party rests in the south and rests in the west," Hart said.

Mondale, still stinging from Hart's upset win in New Hampshire, has attacked the Colorado senator's new interest in the south, where both Mondale and Glenn have had strong organizations for more than a year.

"I've been all over this state, not just at the Atlanta airport," Mondale said, referring to Hart's whirlwind tour of southern city airports on Thursday.

Mondale drew the evening's sharpest laughter when he suggested Hart's schedule had been prepared by a doctor and said,"It's called surgical strategy and Georgia, Florida and Alabama are scheduled for a triple Hart bypass."

Glenn 'treated under fire'

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — John Glenn said Saturday that he is the candidate the nation could "trust the most" to sit in the White House and that he has been "tested under fire" as a Marine and astronaut.

Glenn, calling on southerners to turn out for their upcoming Democratic presidential primaries and caucuses, cited his career in the military and U.S. space program — where he was the first American to orbit the Earth.

Asked if Walter Mondale's term as vice president gave him presidential qualifications, Glenn said, "Well, what about it?"

The Ohio senator described Mondale as a "life-long professional politician" whose background could not match his own.

Glenn made a brief campaign stop here on a southern swing that included a later appearance in Arkansas. He said what happens in the South may decide who wins the Dmocratic presidential nomination.

"The South has a unique opportunity to send a message to the rest of the country on the type of person they want to lead the nation," he said.

Glenn conceded he was disappointed at the results in the Iowa caucuses and New Hampshire primary, where he finished behind Sen. Gary Hart and Mondale, but said he was committed to remain in the contest until the end.

He said Mondale had been weakened by his New Hampshire loss and was losing support in the South.

"The Mondale Juggernaut is no longer a Juggernaut," he said. "His support in the South is thin and volatile and is switching all the time."

He told a small crowd he was more "in tune" with what the South and predicted that would be demonstrated in the Georgia primary, which is one of nine states voting on "Super Tuesday" March 13, and in the Mississippi caucuses March 17.

Hart: Campaign rolling

WASHINGTON (AP) — "For over a year now, I have been pushing a rock uphill and now it has started rolling down the other side," Gary Hart said the other day. "Things are starting to go my way."

Considering that six weeks ago he was written off as one of the back-of-the-pack contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination, the Colorado senator's description of his campaign appears accurate.

But six days after his upset victory in New Hampshire, Hart and his campaign strategists are preparing for a race likely to run to the end of the primary election season June 5, and perhaps to the Democratic National Convention.

"We think we are in it for the duration," said Oliver Henkel, Hart's campaign director. "We don't think it is going to be concluded prematurely."

The first test following New Hampshire is in Maine, where Democrats caucus Sunday to choose delegates to the nominating convention in San Francisco.

The Mondale campaign, Henkel said, "has virtually thrown their entire organization into Maine. They are trying to stem the tide. They are trying to make this the battleground."

Hart is not conceding Maine to Mondale, Henkel said, and a rally was scheduled hastily for Portland on Saturday. But no staff members from the Washington campaign office have gone to Maine.

Instead, Hart is focusing on Vermont and Massachusetts in New England, on Washington in the Northwest, Wyoming in the West and Georgia in the South.

In all those states, Mondale has been organizing and spending money for months. But the same was true in New Hampshire, and Patrick Caddell, former President Carter's pollster in 1976, says organization becomes secondary after Hart's victory in New Hampshire.

Caddell, now an informal adviser to Hart, likened the senator's appeal to "a giant black hole" which opened up when Mondale lost in New Hampshire.

"Inside is energy and power and electricity and combustion and Hart has hit on it," he said.

THE 24 HOUR DIET PLAN PACK

Losing weight has never been easier, faster, more healthful, or more certain

The GNC Research Staff had a difficult assignment: to develop a weight loss program that puts its demands on science rather than human will power. They screened all the most effective plans and aids now known, and combined the best of the best. Although nobody expected a miracle, a lot of people are describing this three part program as just that.

1. Glucomannan helps you shed an average one half to one pound a day. Two Glucomannan capsules taken ½ hour before meals with an 8 oz. glass of water form a natural high fiber gel that reduces amounts of food you need to feel full, and also provides the bulk your system needs for passing more calories undigested out of the body.

2. Amino FB burns away fat while you sleep. These amino acid tablets taken before bedtime have been known to stimulate the production of growth hormones which direct your system to burn fat for energy instead of protein or carbohydrates—a reversal of the usual process. This action is continuously effective, even during sleep.

3. Preventron assures healthful nutritional balance. This high potency vitamin and mineral supplement delivers the all important nutritional requirements your body needs to look your best, feel your best and work your best.

Absolute Guarantee. We unconditionally guarantee that the 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack will help you lose 5 pounds in ten days or your full purchase price will be refunded.

The 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack contains 42 easy to use packets that make weight control a science, not a challenge for your will power.

Soviets go to polls to endorse ruling party

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviets — about 175 million of them — vote today in uncontested parliamentary elections that amount to a ritualistic endorsement of the Communist Party and a test of its ability to mobilize the masses.

"Party And People — United" was the headline in Saturday editions of Pravda, the Communist Party daily, above its report on the election speech Friday night by party general secretary Konstantin U. Chernenko.

The Soviet capital was adorned with red banners and flags along major thoroughfares, over bridges, and across buildings in celebration of Sunday's balloting.

Billboards urged, "Everyone to the elections, March 4, 1984!" and "Long live Soviet democracy!"

Sunday's election will be for 1,500 members of the Supreme Soviet — 750 deputies for each house in the nominal Parliament — for a five-year term.

The Supreme Soviet meets twice a year, usually for a day or two in the spring and in the fall to ratify actions taken by the 39-member Presidium, which acts in its name between sessions.

There is no Soviet law prohibiting more than one candidate for each seat, but because the nominating process is tightly controlled, no such opposition emerges on the ballot.

Thus, citizens have one choice: To vote yes or no. Yes votes are just dropped into ballot boxes. If citizens want to vote "no," they mark their ballot in a booth.

"Write-in" ballots are declared invalid.

No law requires the estimated 175 million eligible voters to go to the polls. But for the past 40 years, the turnout has exceeded 90 percent — even topping 99 percent in recent years. Everyone — from Siberian reindeer herdsmen to Black Sea oil rig workers — participates.

Konstantin U. Chernenko

Citizens 18 and over are eligible to vote. The party makes every effort to get them to do so, making home deliveries of ballots to those unable to go to a polling place. Moscow authorities pay close attention to the ability of local party and public organizations to mobilize the constituency.

In the last parliamentary elections, in 1979, Soviet officials said there were 185,422 votes cast against candidates for one house — the Soviet of the Union — in which a deputy represents a district of about 350,000 people. There were 175,600 votes against candidates for the other house — the Soviet of Nationalities, representing ethnic groups.

Of the 174,920,221 ballots, 72 were declared invalid.

Guidelines for candidates are set down by the Communist Party Central Committee. The candidates must be at least 21, and are picked by trade unions, youth leagues, work collectives and local party organizations.

Soviet Olympics attache full KGB colonel

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Oleg Yermishkin, the Soviet Olympics attache whose visa was denied by the State Department on grounds that he is a threat to the "internal security" of the United States, is a full colonel in the KGB whose proposed six-month assignment to Los Angeles had little to do with the 1984 Olympics.

Yermishkin's relatively high rank in the Soviet intelligence agency was disclosed by a top State Department official. The official said Moscow was notified Yermishkin would be unacceptable in December, but the Soviet government went ahead and applied for a visa for him on Feb. 10, 1984.

The visa was formally denied on Feb. 28.

This was construed by officials here as a deliberate attempt by the Kremlin to provoke a confrontation that would prove embarrassing to the Reagan administration. The concern was primarily that Yermishkin would attempt to infiltrate computer and high technology industries in the Los Angeles area.

"The United States governemnet is not attempting to prevent the Soviet Union from attending the Olympic games," State Department spokesman John Hughes said. "They (the Soviets) certainly knew he wasn't going to be accepted. If they wanted to slip one by us, don't you think we have the right to say no?"

There appears to have been some dispute between the State Depaertment and the FBI when the Soviets first proposed Yermishkin. He was said to have served for two years in the Soviet Embassy here and been the number two official in charge of spying operations.

An FBI source said that if permitted to live in Los Angeles for six months with full diplomatic immunity, he undoubtedly would "snoop around the environments of L.A. We just didn't think he's the kind of person we want to be living next door to," the official said.

The State Department however seemed initially more reticent to bar Yermishkin, particularly since it is estimated that 60 percent of the diplomats assigned to the Soviet Embassy here are intelligence agents. Asked about his rank as a colonel in the KGB, one official said that may not mean a lot.

"Look, in some circumstances he could be a fairly important espionage agent," the official said. "In other circumstances, he could be an old waiter at a good Moscow restuarant. It's a fairly high rank but not a rank which would indicate any particular mission."

The official explained that "you can find plenty of KGB colonels working in all kinds of organizations working with the West." He cited groups such as the Soviet Peace Committee, the Soviet Olympic Committee, the Soviet House of Friendship With Foreign Peoples and the Moscow Union of Writers.

In fact, the official said, the latter cultural organization is headed by a major general of the KGB. "Wherever there is communication with foreigners, the KGB is there," he addded. "They can be watching members of their own delegation to make sure they don't defect. They can also be an important spy. You have to know something about his mission before you can make a judgment."

Hughes explained that Yermishkin was granted a B-1 visa in November to visit here because it was short term.

He was part of a Soviet delegation that visited Los Angeles to sign agreements providing for Russian participation in the 1984 games.

"That was a different kind of visa," the spokesman said. "It did not afford him full diplomatic immunity."

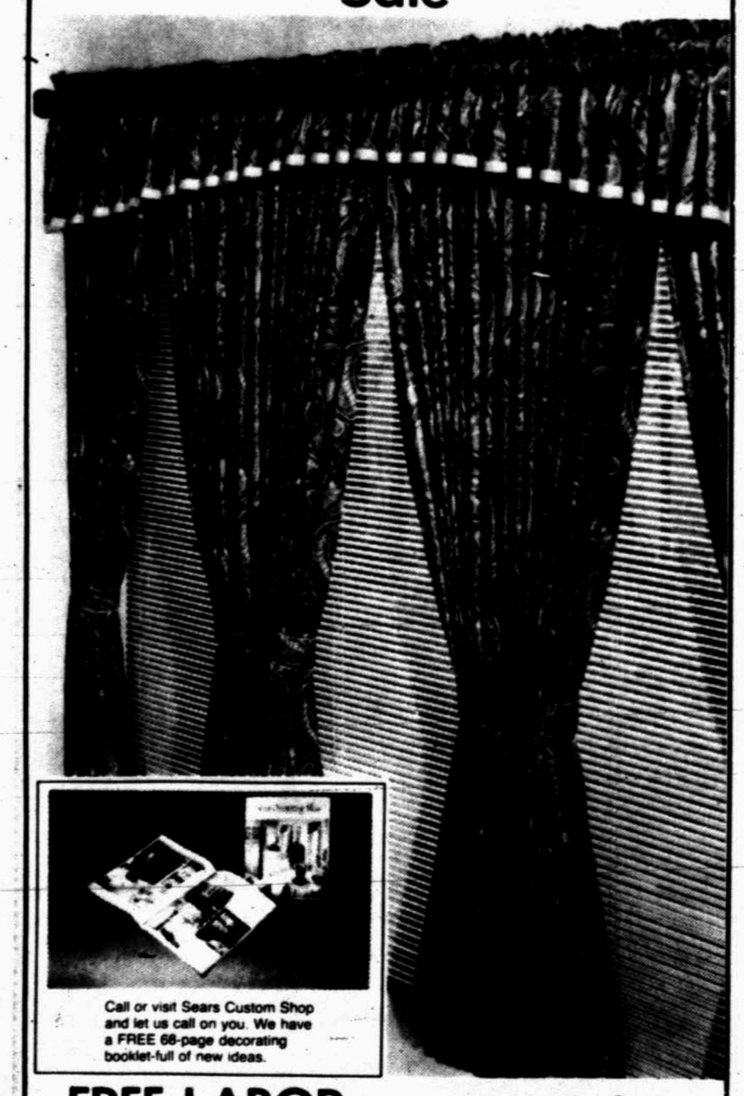

Reminded that Secretary of State George Shultz told Congress last week he was personally opposed to all visa restrictions and that "we can accept all comers," Hughes said what Shultz meant was "people of dissenting views." Yermishkin falls into a different category, he explained.

"I want to make clear this is solely a matter of the individual involved." He explained that the person designated to be Soviet Olympic attache "must be acceptable for that purpose. The bottom line here is that we are not blocking legitimate activity of the Soviet Olympic delegation. What we ae seeking to block is illegitimate Olympic activity.

"We think anybody who will be an Olympic attache ought to be an Olympic attache," Hughes said. mainly the theft of computer secrets and nuclear technology, influenced the decision to bar Yermishkin on national security grounds.

LUDHIANA, India (AP) — Convinced the government is not protecting them, some frightened Hindus in Punjab state are training and arming themselves against a new wave of Sikh terrorism.

"We should defend ourselves. When the extremists come into the markets with sub-machine guns we should fight them. We have to be ready," Jagdish Tangri, leader of a nationalist Hindu organization, told a crowd of youthful supporters in this industrial city 180 miles northeast of New Delhi.

A raucous two-hour rally in a small square in Ludhiana's shopping district was held to welcome Tangri back from jail. He spent two weeks in confinement following his arrest during a Hindu march Feb. 14 to protest alleged persecution of Hindus in Punjab, whose population is 52 percent Sikh.

The marchers clashed with Sikhs, and three Hindus were killed when police opened fire to break up the mob. It was the start of an outbreak of violence that has claimed more than 70 lives in the state.

The Sikhs, members of a sect that is an offshoot of Hindu, are a minority in the rest of this predominantly Hindu country.

Sikh outlaws have killed more than 300 people, mostly Hindus, over the past three years during their campaign to force the central government of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to grant Sikhs in Punjab more religious and political powers.

"Hindus are very afraid because the extremists are killing every day," Tangri said in an interview in the tiny Mahavir Temple where his Hindu Shiv Sena (God Shiva's Army) is based.

"We want to protect their life and property," he said. "We are telling them they should be ready to face these extremists."

Tangri said licensed rifles, swords and even trishuls — the Hindu religious symbol that resembles a pitchfork — are being distributed. Young Hindus are trained in shooting and the martial arts.

"This is strictly for self-defense," Tangri, 50, said. "We do not favor violence but we are ready to respond to it."

The defense measures are not limited to Ludhiana, a mostly Hindu city of 1.8 million that is known for its woolen garments, hosiery and bicycle parts.

Elsewhere in the state, villages have set up self-defense councils. Authorities in two districts recently lifted a ban on carrying firearms to appease Hindus who insisted on the right to protect themselves.

"Where this madness can take people is anybody's guess," said Dr. Baldev Prakash, state president of the right-wing Hindu Bharatiya Janata Party, in an interview in the Sikh holy city of Amritsar. "Everybody should be on guard these days."

"Everybody, even people in the small towns, are aware of what is happening," said Chandra Mohan, editor of a Hindi-language newspaper in Jullundur, a city about 36 miles northwest of Ludhiana. "This affects our daily life. It's dangerous to go out."

Last June, a letter-bomb exploded in Mohan's three-room office, killing two employees of the newspaper his family has run since 1919.

He now employs an armed bodyguard, and police are posted outside his home because of continuing threats which he said stem from his paper's criticism of the Sikhs' main political party, Akali Dal.

"The situation has reached the point where everyone is worried — Hindus and Sikhs," Mohan said. "Our economy has been shattered. People are moving out. Half of them will leave if things continue like this for another two or three months."

The violence has threatened the state of peaceful coexistence that has persisted for years among moderate Sikhs and Hindus. Eleven Sikhs were lynched in a Hindu backlash in neighboring Haryana state in mid-February.

"A wedge has been driven between us," said Dilbir Singh, a leading Sikh industrialist in Amritsar."

Mohan said, "I still have many Sikh friends but our political differences are growing."

The Akali Dal has begun arguing that its demands are for all Punjabis, Hindus as well as Sikhs. Many Hindus in fact have no quarrel with the territorial demands, including greater share of interstate river waters and merger of disputed Chandigarh city with Punjab.

But the Akalis drew cries of outrage when several of their leaders burned copies of the constitution Monday to demand that Sikhs be classified as members of a separate religion, not Hinduism. The Sikh faith is an offshoot of Hinduism, combining Hindu precepts with Islam.

Paris restaurateur sees stars over lower rating

PARIS (AP) — The new Michelin Guide will strip Lasserre, one of the world's most famous restaurants, of the coveted three-star rating it has held for 22 years, owner Rene Lasserre says.

He is mystified by the decision.

Lasserre, in an interview with The Associated Press, confirmed rumors that the restaurant will hold only two stars in the latest guide, to be published Monday.

He said Friday that the publication's authors had warned him of their plans, which can be expected to send shock waves through the gastronomic world.

But he said guide officials refused to tell him, even in confidence, why his elegant restaurant between the Champs Elysees and the river Seine now merits two stars ("excellent cooking, worth a detour") and no longer three ("exceptional cuisine, worth a special journey.")

Guide officials refused to confirm the decision in advance of publication. Only three other restaurants in Paris can boast of three stars, and of them, only the Tour d'Argent has held the honor longer than Lasserre. Elsewhere in France, 18 restaurants hold the rating, as do five abroad.

In 1966, Alain Zick committed suicide after the guide stripped his two-star Paris restaurant of both stars.

Lasserre's reaction — for himself as well as his staff of 90 — was to "stiffen the backbone," and to "behave as the professionals we are."

"I'm not afraid of the Michelin effect. We have our clientele, monsieur!" he proclaimed.

"Why have I lost my third star?" he asked as, overhead, the roof he designed slid open briefly to let diners enjoy a breath of crisp winter air.

Canada ready to suffer through post-Trudeau letdown period

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada will soon be moving into the post-Trudeau era, when life in this country — and especially in politics — may look a little dull by comparison.

Pierre Elliott Trudeau said Wednesday he will resign as prime minister as soon as his Liberal Party picks a new leader, a process likely to take about four months.

The announcement brought a cascade of recollections and retrospectives on Trudeau's life in politics.

His career began with a national infatuation called "Trudeaumania," continued with such antics as sliding down a banister at Buckingham Palace and making rude gestures with his finger at protesters, and ended in intense unpopularity and almost universal agreement that it was time for him to quit.

But while no Canadians begged Trudeau to change his mind and stay, there was a note in many of the commentaries that the man will be missed.

"When again shall we hear a leader curse us — fluently — in both official languages, and invite unhappy voters to perch and rotate on an upraised middle finger?" the Toronto Globe and Mail asked in an editorial.

"Only an extraordinary politician would let himself behave like this; only an extraordinarily gifted — and extraordinarily lucky — one could actually get away with it."

Even Quebec Premier Rene Levesque, loser for now in a long-running battle with Trudeau over whether their province would secede from Canada, said he was sad.

"To be very frank — yes, I'm sorry to see him go," Levesque told reporters. "He sure made things in many ways more interesting. Not necessarily more appealing all the time, but more interesting than a lot of other guys I could think of."

Some of the guys who come to mind are Brian Mulroney, leader of the opposition Progressive Conservatives, now riding high in the polls, and John Turner, former finance minister and the early favorite to succeed Trudeau.

If Turner does win at the party convention, he will become prime minister immediately, then face Mulroney in national elections that must be called by next February.

It is often noted that Turner and Mulroney are cut from similar cloth — satirical columnist Allan Fotheringham sometimes refers to them as John Mulroney and Brian Turner.

They both have smooth good looks, a back-slapping warmth of the kind the prickly Trudeau could never even attempt and political positions somewhere near the center, to the extent that those positions can be determined.

Neither of them, nor any of the other likely candidates for the job, could say as Trudeau once did, "The only constant factor to be found in my thinking over the years has been opposition to accepted opinions."

Officer disputes death-squad charges

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The chief of staff of El Salvador's armed forces on Saturday challenged those alleging that top Salvadoran officials are involved with right-wing death squads to prove their charges.

Col. Adolfo O. Blandon was reponding to a story published Saturday in the New York Times in which a former high-ranking Salvadoran security official said that key Salvadoran officers, including Treasury Police commander Col. Nicolas Carranza and former Defense Minister Gen. Jose Guillermo Garcia, had helped set up death squads four years ago.

"I believe this is part of a campaign to discredit the armed forces," said Blandon. "For several weeks people like Col. Carranza have been mentioned as involved in the death squads, but so far no one has offered any proof.

"It seems to me this campaign has the objective of decapitating the army's command. It only favors the terrorist organizations."

The Times report said the officer making the accusations asked to remain anonymous because of fear of reprisal.

He was quoted by the Times as saying that Roberto d'Aubuisson, campaigning for president in the March 25 election under the banner of the ultra-rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance, was running the death squads.

"I wish to repeat our commitment to investigate the death squads and prosecute those responsible, no matter who they are," Blandon said. "But without proof, it is difficult to act on the basis of mere speculation.

world in brief

India, Pakistan to discuss proposals for detente

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India and Pakistan, rival neighbors for more than three decades, will discuss proposals for detente in May, the government announced Saturday.

The decision was announced after the foreign secretaries of the two south Asian countries, which have fought three wars in 35 years, concluded talks on promoting better relations.

Indian Foreign Secretary Maharajkrishna Rasgotra and his Pakistani counterpart Niaz Naik are to meet in Islamabad May 12 to discuss Pakistan's draft of a non-aggression pact and on the text of India's proposed treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation, the spokesman said.

Both of the proposals seek to introduce detente between the two neighbors, which are at odds over territorial disputes in Kashmir.

Northern Italian cities best

ROME (AP) — Small northern cities are the nicest places to live in Italy, poor southern cities the worst and Rome ranks around the middle, according to a survey by an Italian state research organization released Saturday.

The report by the Center for the Study of Social Investment put Trieste, a northern city of 250,000 near the border with Yugoslavia, at the top of the "general welfare scale" rating Italy's 95 metropolitan areas for comfortable living.

The scale is based on 29 indicators including average income of residents; inflation, crime and unemployment rates; cultural and sports facilities; and pollution. The most desirable cities listed were in the north or center of Italy.

Ranking immediately behind Trieste as the most desirable cities are Bologna, Ravenna, Florence, Reggio Emilia and Parma. Rome, near the center of the country, ranks 35th, Milan 18th, Venice 41st, Turin 51st and Naples 81st.

Chinese tree predicts rain

PEKING (AP) — China has a tree that can tell when it's going to rain, the official Xinhua news agency said Saturday in a report on rare trees.

The agency said the 150-year-old tree is in Xincheng county in Guangxi Zhuang autonomous region, southern China. Its leaves turn from dark green to red three days before a rainstorm, the report said.

In Shaanxi Province of central China, "white milk trees" have leaves and branches that secrete a white oil that can be used for cooking, the report said.

In northeast China, another kind of tree produces a frostlike powder on its bark in summer that can be used as salt, the agency said.

New military government slow to solve Nigeria's problems

AP Laserphoto

Two Nigerian women shop for fruit and vegetables at a market in Bewin City, Nigeria, last month. Nigerian soldiers have been advising merchants to lower the prices on their products, a part of the Nigerian military government's attempted crackdown on corruption throughout the nation.

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — When civilian leadership crumpled and the government fell to senior military officers two months ago, rejoicing among Nigerians was exceeded only by their expectations.

But the euphoria that marked the passing of Nigeria's second failed democracy since independence from Britain in 1960 has dramatically waned and a realization has set in that the new military leaders will not quickly resolve the staggering problems of Africa's largest and potentially richest country.

The deposed civilian government of President Shehu Shagari, though re-elected to a second four-year term just last summer, was widely discredited as appallingly corrupt and incapable of reversing the country's sustained economic decline.

Now, the government of Maj. Gen. Muhammadu Buhari — an austere career officer who came to power in an almost bloodless coup Dec. 31 — faces daunting challenges: It must revive a battered, oil-based economy, exorcise the corruption that has permeated almost all walks of life, and placate restless and more radical junior officers who, according to many Nigerian and foreign analysts, may be considering a second-line coup.

Buhari, who turned 41 two weeks before seizing power, has tried from the outset to temper popular expectations.

"Let no one be deceived," he said in his first statement after the coup, "that workers who have not received their salaries in the past eight or so months will receive such salaries...today or tomorrow, or that hospitals which have been without drugs for months will be provided with enough immediately."

Finance Minister O. O. Soleye, one of 11 civilians in Buhari's Cabinet, has characterized Nigeria as "a debtor nation living beyond (its) means...The nation will have to pass through a period of belt-tightening before we can see better days."

While his popularity remains reasonably high, Buhari is something of a hostage to the sudden and erratic swings common to Nigerian popular opinion.

"He's walking a tightrope" is an appraisal frequently invoked these days by local and Western analysts.

The military rulers, said Tony Momoh, a lawyer, writer and former editor of the Lagos Daily Times, "are aware of the impatience of Nigerians."

Buhari faces his greatest threat from the ranks of the junior officers, the analysts say.

A Western diplomat, who asked to remain anonymous, said: "The threat will build the longer it takes him to come up with some wins. The junior guys are looking for the same things the country is — prices to go down and stay down, the corrupt civilian politicians to be punished, and a swift turnaround in the economy."

Buhari and other senior officers have conferred frequently with the junior officers "trying to explain to them that (resolving Nigeria's problems) is going to be a little tougher than expected," the diplomat added.

Leader didn't aspire to office

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Maj. Gen. Muhammadu Buhari, the 41-year-old leader of Nigeria's military regime, was a division commander in Jos in north-central Nigeria when his military colleagues ousted the nation's civilian government last New Year's Eve.

It was as division commander that he had directed a month-long border operation last spring against Chad.

At 33, under an earlier military regime, he was a state governor. In 1976, he was appointed federal commissioner for petroleum resources and served until 1978. He was also chairman of the Nigerian National Petroleum Corp. from 1976 to 1979. Then he spent a year at the U.S. War College in Carlisle, Pa.

Although he no doubt knew about preparations for the coup, diplomatic sources here say it is unlikely Buhari ever aspired to national leadership.

He did not take office until after his colleagues had succeeded in their coup, which they said was intended to end corruption within the civilian government and to revive the economy.

Buhari's personal integrity is generally considered unassailable.

Nigeria twice California's size

By The Associated Press

Here are some facts and figures on Nigeria:

COUNTRY: On the tropical west coast of Africa, Nigeria has an area of 356,669 square miles, twice the area of California. It gets its name from the Niger River, which flows down from its northwest and empties into the Atlantic Ocean. It borders Benin, Niger, Chad and Cameroon.

PEOPLE: Three tribes, the Ibo, Hausa and Yoruba, head a list of about 250 ethnic groups speaking as many languages. No census has been taken since 1963, when 55.6 million people were counted. Estimates now put the population at close to 100 million.

Diet Pill Sweeping U.S.

New Grapefruit 'Super Pill' Gives Fast Weight Loss

No Dieting - Eat All You Want Pill Does All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special) An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Has ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

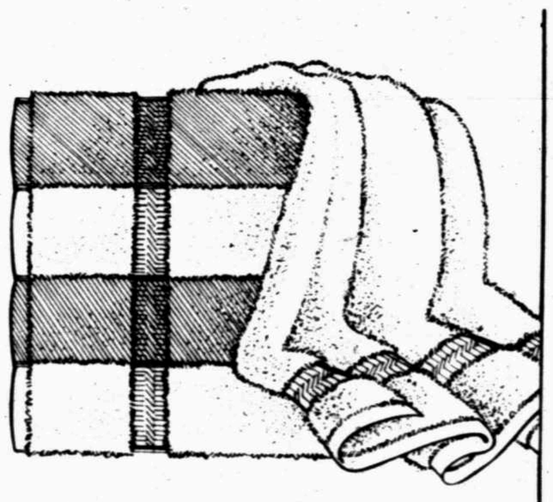

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these highly successful "super" grapefruit pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail order only) by sending $12 for a 14-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check, or money order to: Citrus Industries, 9903 Santa Monica Bl., Dept. Midland Lee jocks shatter dumb image

Sports Special

Editor's Note: This is the first of a four-part series on local athletes who excel in the classroom as well as on the playing field. This installment focuses on the Midland Lee student athlete.

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The role of athletic and extra-curricular high school activities has come under severe attack by H. Ross Perot's Special Committee on Education and he is proposing some sweeping changes that could cut back participation in those activities.

In Midland, at least, Perot would have a hard time making his point since student athletes at both Midland Lee and Midland High are a cut above the average. Athletic involvement locally doesn't seem to be a hindrance to class room activities in most cases.

At Lee, for instance, the top 30 seniors in grade point average are all involved in some form of extra-curricular activity. Among the bottom 50 students, only three are participating in any extra-curricular activity.

Lee's senior athletes also perform well in the classroom when compared to other students. The overall average of all senior athletes is a 2.4 grade point, which is a C-plus average. The middle score of Lee's 525 seniors is 2.38.

According to Bobby Dunn, Lee's senior principal, around 200 students have a grade point below 2.0. Only 17 of those students are athletes.

"That says a lot to me. I think it's easy to see that our top students are involved in a lot of things," said Dunn. "It looks to me like Perot is trying to hurt the students who are accomplishing a lot in school and who are trying to round out their education with other activities."

Many of Lee's senior athletes are ranked among the top 50 of the student body when it comes to grades. Robert Lowe, Rob Walker and Felicia Farias are three of them.

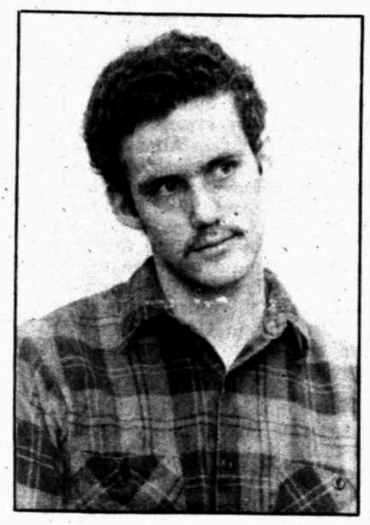

Lowe played basketball for the Rebels, but also ranks fourth in his class with a 4.4 grade point average. He also serves as senior class president and takes a course load that includes honors latin, honors physics, honors English and honors calculus.

"I play basketball because I enjoy it," says Lowe. "My school work comes first because I'm trying to get into MIT for aerospace engineering. If I don't get that, I've already been accepted at Texas.

"But I really think that there is time for both school and basketball. It can be difficult when you have an away game and exams the next day, but you can study on the bus and that relaxes me before the game."

Walker is a two-sport participant, playing both football and baseball. He ranks 10th in the class with a 4.14 grade point. His class load includes honors English, honors trigonometry, honors elementary analysis and physics. He has also been accepted to the University of Texas and is interested in engineering.

"I think my grades are better because of athletics because I never put anything off like I do when I'm not involved in something," said Walker. "I'm working out until 7 every night in baseball right now. I get home, eat and it takes one-and-a-half to two hours to do homework, but I'm usually through by 10.

"I missed only one day of school out of the whole football season. When we got in the playoffs, I found that football consumed my thoughts. It was always there, but that's the price you have to pay if you want to excel in anything. I learned a lot this season in football about myself and others and it's something I will never forget, going all the way to the state finals. I met a lot of people along the way."

Farias participates in three sports — volleyball, basketball and track. She ranks 35th in her class with a 3.78 grade point. She carries a class load of honors trigonometry, honors elementary analysis, computer math and English. She went to summer school last year for junior English so she could participate in three sports during the school year.

Chaps eliminate NMJC

By TED BATTLES

Anyone who hadn't given up on the Midland College Chaparrals Saturday night had to have the outlook of a Norman Vincent Peale. It took optimism like General George Armstrong Custer's, when he impatiently ordered, "Send us more Indians," that day on the Little Big Horn.

The Chaps trailed New Mexico Junior College by 14 points with eight minutes to play. That was the good news. The worst part of the Chaps predicament was that the team was dead in the water, no life, no movement, and really, no hope.

MIDLAND COLLEGE tied it at 74 on a couple of free throws by Jackie Phinnessee with nine seconds to play and then won 92-87 in overtime at the Langford Chaparral Center Saturday night.

"I'd given up, too," said MC Coach Jerry Stone after the game, "but, you know, the way we won that game tonight could be the best thing in the world for us."

"You saw them in there after the game," Stone went on, referring to the happy locker room. "They are ready to go to Amarillo Monday and give it our best shot. They still think they can beat Amarillo. I do, too. I don't think we've given our best against them."

The Badgers defeated Midland 54-52 at Midland after the Chaps had led until the final two seconds and then AC came from way back in the final five minutes to win another close one.

There was nothing close about Amarillo's victory over New Mexico Military Institute Saturday night in one of three other playoff games. The Badgers led by only three at half, but won 100-67. In the other game that will determine a a WJCC team in this week's Region V tournament, South Plains College faces Western Texas at Snyder Monday night. Western won over Frank Phillips, 61-51, and SPC beat Clarendon, 100-83.

Midland's Chuckie Graves (20) puts defensive pressure on NMJC's Avery Johnson in tournament action at Langford Chaparral Center Saturday night. Chaps had to come from behind to win in over time, 92-87.

NMJC, a team Midland had beaten twice during the regular season, led 68-54 with eight minutes left and nothing could shake them out of the zone they had been in since the first half.

Then the sleep-walking Chaps came to life on three straight steals that resulted in baskets, first by Brian Essary and then a Phinnessee steal and feed to Jerald Wrightsil and finally a steal and solo lay up by Zeak Williams to cut the margin to 62-68.

Vernon Coleman, whose outside shooting kept MC alive at times, hit two 18 footers and it was now 66-68. But the Thunderbirds were hard to catch. A free throw by 6-1 Frank Bagley, who gave MC all sorts of trouble inside, made it 69-66 with 4:18 left. Essary hit from the corner and after Bagley struck again from under the rim, Phinnessee converted a tip.

Bulldog swimmers claim Region I title

From Staff Reports

MONAHANS — Midland High's youthful band of male swimmers captured a stunning team victory in the Region I Swim Meet here Saturday, but not without some last event heroics.

The Bulldog tankers found themselves in the position of having to win the 400 meter freestyle relay, the last event of the day, to capture the coveted title. They also had to do it against El Paso Eastwood, a team that was seeded No. 1 in the event.

With a sophomore (Ricky Perkins), two juniors (Andrew Jordan and David Hartman) and one senior (Mike Seay), the Bulldogs turned in a new school record of 3:20.01 to beat the favored Eastwood team by nearly two seconds.

MHS finished with 54 points, one point better than Eastwood. El Paso Coronado finished third with 43 points. Amarillo High won the girls competition with 81 while Coronado had 40 and San Angelo 30.

ON THE way to the title, Midland High's first Region I crown since 1975, the Bulldogs nailed down five berths for the state meet to be held in two weeks in Austin.

Jordan won both the 100 (48.37) and 50 (22.08) freestyle events to gain two berths while Seay, the only senior on the team, won two berths in the 200 freestyle (1:49.18) and 100 butterfly (54.31). Jordan won both of his events while Seay won the butterfly event and was second in the freestyle event.

Of course, MHS will also be sending its winning relay team to the state meet.

The Bulldogs' Doc White, a diver, didn't win a state berth, but he sure helped MHS win the title with a show of pure ruggedness. White was in sixth place in the diving event when he hit the board and dislocated a finger. He didn't make his last dive and other schools present thought he should be disqualified. A call to the University Interscholastic League confirmed that White could take the last dive if he wanted.

"I asked Doc if he wanted to attempt that last dive, and you talk about being tough, he said he wanted the chance. He moved from sixth to third with the best reverse 1½ twist I've ever seen," said MHS coach Jesse Marsh.

MARSH SAID that this was the fifth Region I title MHS has won since he has been head swimming coach, but was the first since 1975. And the future looks bright since Seay was the only senior on this Region I title team.

"Mike was our only senior, but he was just tremendous," said Marsh. "I'm really pleased with the way the kids competed. You take what White did in the diving and what the relay did in that last event and you have some efforts worth noting. And of course, Jordan is just a great athlete."

Tayrien a tough guy to block

(First of two parts)

It was only kiddingly suggested that, "You look too young to have played with Hayden Fry," an innocent enough remark that opened a whole scrapbook of memories.

"I didn't play with Hayden, but I was captain of his first team at Odessa High."

Jack Tayrien, Midland Lee's new coach, doesn't even look that old. "That's the team that lost to Midland 27-0," the reporter gloated, "let's see that was 1959."

"Yes, we lost to Midland 27-0, but it was in 1955. That was the Midland team that had Larry Cooper, Jim Owen, Johnny Branson, Don Boyce. They were getting revenge, I guess, for the 27-0 when Odessa beat Midland two years before at Barrett Stadium." Why'd you have to bring that up, Jack, Midland's still trying to forget that one.

What Tayrien, the Broncos' best lineman, failed to mention was that in the 1955 loss, he was carted off on a litter in the first period. Still, all-state tackle Branson was impressed enough to cuss Jack after the game as "the toughest linebacker to block that I faced all year." And the week before Branson had faced talent-rich Abilene High, on a three-straight state championship roll.

COOPER, A quarterback at Midland, went on to become an all-SWC end at Texas. Boyce was a star fullback at Texas Western College—or was it a university even then? No matter, the name and football program have been disguised beyond recognition since then.

Branson went on to become a standout tackle for the University of Houston.

Tayrien agreed that in those days of one-high school cities there was a great deal more "animosity. A loss to Odessa or Midland spoiled the entire season, no matter how successful otherwise. Maybe it's better this way. The competition is still as keen as ever."

BUT HOW did a nice guy like Tayrien wind up at Oklahoma State?

"Well, I'm originally from Bartlesville, Okla. Even after I moved away, I kept up with the Phillips 66ers—Bob Kurland, Clyde Lovellette. In fact, I saw them play a game in West Texas, after we moved here," explained Tayrien, who is part Osage and French. "Look in a Bartlesville phone book even today and you'll find an inch worth of Tayriens listed."

The writer was amazed. "I used to cover the 66ers," back in the days when the AAU National Industrial Basketball League, not the pros, was where the best college players wound up.

TAYRIEN, getting used to interruptions by now, pursued, "Jim Spivital recruited me for A&M—er State. Cliff Speegle was the head coach and Neill Armstrong (who later coached the Chicago Bears) was up there then, too."

Another interruption, "I saw Armstrong play in college back when Bob Fenimore was a freshman."

Tayrien kept coming back—I was beginning to see why Branson figured he was so tough to block—"While I was there we played Florida State in the Blue Grass Bowl. We had lost three games that year, one to Air Force (which went to the Cotton Bowl), another to Tulsa and 7-0 to Oklahoma. OU had Prentis Gautt then."

All-America tackle Jim Wood was on that Aggie team and another Odessan, Don Hitt. Among the athletes at Stillwater at the time were soon-to-be White Sox pitcher Joel Horlen; Moe Iba, now Nebraska basketball coach; and Eddie Sutton, the current Arkansas cage coach.

"I used to go over to the Ibas (Moe's dad Hank was the A&M basketball coach) for a home-cooked meal once a week and watch television. That's where I got hooked on wrestling. Someone said the team was wrestling at Gallagher Hall and we had to go. I said, 'I've seen that stuff on TV. I think I'll pass.' They made me go and I became a fan. A&M had won something like 23 titles in 26 years."

TAYRIEN made the mistake of mentioning he was from the "old school" when it came to athletic philosophy.

"How old? What do you think of two-platoon football?" I interrupted again, figuring the only way I'm going to stop this guy is to clip him from behind.

"Well, I played two years in college under both systems. I was a guard-linebacker my first two years and then college football went to two platoons and I was a linebacker."

"The two-platoon system enables players who excel in one area of the game to contribute. For example, the kicking game under one-platoon wouldn't be what it is today. Back when I played, you seldom saw a field goal.

"Last year at Midland Lee, we had five or six players who were kickoff team specialists. That's all they did. It improves the special teams play. If you are playing both ways, it's hard to get geared up for a kickoff. These kids were over on the sidelines...they couldn't wait to get into the game and make a hit and get their name in the paper."

Tayrien added, "I would like to see the time between plays reduced from 25 seconds to say 18 seconds. That would put a premium on sideline organization. You'd have to be thinking two or three plays ahead to have the right people in the game." The way he said it made it sound like the burden for keeping up would be across the field. It was almost as though Jack were looking for a set of shoulder pads that fit.

Midland Lee wins Pre-District baseball tournament

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

ODESSA— Perhaps Odessa Permian baseball coach Larry Currie best summed up the craziness surrounding District 4-5A's Pre-District baseball tournament.

"Baseball's a predictable game," Currie said sarcastically.

The third running of the tournament had to be seen to believed. When the dust had cleared as the sun was setting here Saturday night, Midland Lee's opportunistic Rebels had surprised the field and claimed the championship crown.

How the Rebs did it was the story. The Rebs simply exploded offensively. After Bryan Willis got the ball rolling Friday with a 16-strikeout, 5-1 win over Abilene Cooper, the Rebs changed things up a little for Saturday.

Lee smashed Permian 15-2 in the semifinal tilt, then began the title game 40 minutes later right where they left off.

After three and a half innings, the Rebs led finals opponent Odessa High 17-0. By game's end, Lee had to turn to Willis to nail the elusive thing down. It wound up 21-13, and afterwards the big question was, was this the same game Abner Doubleday has erroneously been credited with all these years?

"I geuss we did kind of make a farce out of it," responded Lee coach Ernie Johnson. "They played bad early and we played bad late."

But, OHS played worse more often. The championship featured 10 errors, seven by Lee and five in an inning.

OHS' starting pitcher, Kip Woodfin, retired only four batters, surrendered 11 runs and walked four. These are just samples.

4-5A Baseball

HOWEVER, LEE had its bright spots, not the least of which was the fact that the resilient Rebs stayed tough and won. After staking the seemingly untouchable 17-0 bulge, OHS began to play. The Bronchos started with three runs in the bottom of the fourth. All runs came with two outs, a bad sign that continued until Lee shut the door with after OHS closed to 17-13 after six.

Woodfin couldn't find the plate, but he became a terror when the tables were turned. He homered to score two in the fourth, knocked in another run in Odessa's two-run fifth, and was involved in the day's screwiest turn of events.

That came in the Broncho sixth. Lee starter Mike Small pitched an outstanding game for the most part but tuckered out after five, probably due to long Lee at-bats. George Matta came on then, and ran into trouble. Of course, by this time, Lee had lost its' edge after things began so well. And, momentum tore off the maroon and silver to become a Broncho maniac.

Leroy Rodriguez homered for OHS with one down, and that cleared the bags and made the score 17-10. Lee perhaps felt things slipping away, or maybe the onslaught of baseball in the two-day fest began to catch up with the Rebels. In any event, Lee's defense got pretty shaky. Woodfin came to the plate and hit a low looping liner to left, catchable but sinking fast. Lee leftfielder Steve Woodlee couldn't snag it, and when he got the ball in to shortstop Kieth McDonald, he threw it away.

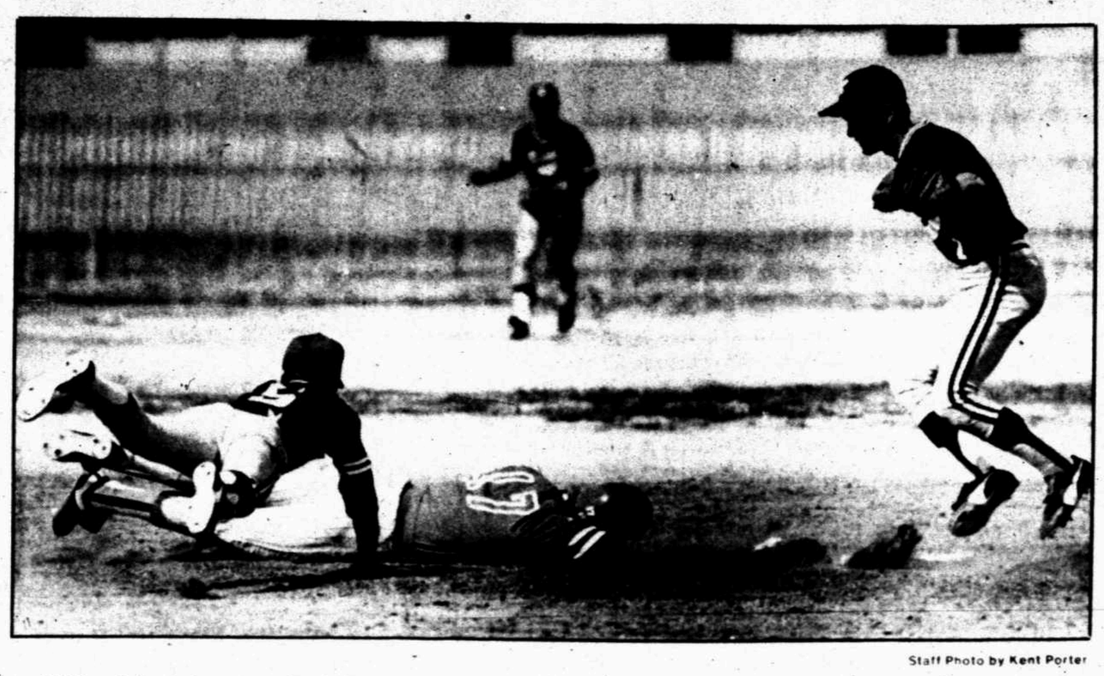

Third baseman Dennis Matta, already responsible for an error three batters previous, made another to keep OHS going. Then, catcher Jimmy Phillips dropped a third strike allowing another Broncho baserunner.

It was early-season, high school ball, but the bottom line is winning, and Johnson's Rebs were up to the task. Woodlee's leadoff homer in the seventh re-established Lee superiority, and Johnson was spared a scarier finish.

AS FOR Permian's Currie and his comment, things went weird for Mojo, too. After the embarassing rout at the hands of Lee, Currie perhaps felt a little worried about his defense.

So what happened? Typical of the tourney, Panther pitcher Craig Steen went the distance against San Angelo, hurling a 2-0 shutout. Steen also homered in the effort and played a role in the other Permian score.

As Yogi Berra, or maybe it was Casey Stengel remarked, "It aint over 'til it's' over." Saturday, one could never be quite sure, and Johnson's young Rebs didn't stick around to find out. The championship was the loot, and the Rebs made the fastest getaway possible. The only thing is, now the cat's out of the bag. District 4-5A won't be asleep when the Rebs come calling a week from Tuesday.

Dunbar avoids Midland nightmare, beats Southwest

Fort Worth Dunbar's Rodrick Ford (10) looks like he's trying to blow the ball in the basket during Region I basketball finals at Chaparral Center Saturday.

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Region I Basketball

Fort Worth's state ranked, unbeaten and mostly unchallenged Dunbar Wildcats were only seconds away from reliving a Midland nightmare Saturday afternoon at Chaparral Center.

Instead, the Wildcats protected their No. 8 national high school ranking with a thin 57-55 Region I basketball victory over District 6-5A opponent Fort Worth Southwest. A nightmare averted. A second trip to Austin's Final Four tournament in four years.

Only a year ago, Dunbar suffered one of West Texas' toughest losses when they lost to Fort Worth Paschal on a shot at the Chaparral Center buzzer, losing a trip to the Final Four. The memory was washed away Saturday.

DUNBAR SENIOR Linzie Bogan was a member of the Dunbar team that suffered the tough loss a year ago, but he was all smiles as this trip to Midland came to an end.

"It was close — too close — but it's still a 'W' in the win column," said Bogan, who had 10 points in the title game. "We never thought about last year. That was a bad memory and we put it out of our minds. Last year hurt a lot, but we're going to Austin this year and I'm going to be able to go out in style."

But there are those among the 2,500 fans on hand for the Region I final who will say that Dunbar was saved by the clock in this one. Southwest was in the midst of making an upset run when time, Bogan and Rodrick Ford closed the door.

At one point, Dunbar owned a comfortable 14-point first half lead before Southwest's Norman Anderson gave the Wildcats a taste of 1983 deja vu. Anderson scored 16 of his game high 23 points in the fourth quarter, hitting eight of eight shots from the field and four of four from the charity line. He had Dunbar gasping as they looked at the clock to see if it would ever run out.

"We made a run at it, but fell short," said Anderson. "It always seems to be that way when we play them."

SOUTHWEST HAS played 38-0 Dunbar three times this year, losing by two points twice and by six in the other game.

With 3:48 left in the game, a three-point play by Anderson cut the Dunbar margin to one point at 49-48. Dunbar jumped back to a five-point margin and then hung on as the Rebels kept fighting back. It was Ford, who led Dunbar with 12 points, that put the icing on the cake with a bomb with 10 seconds left for a 57-53 lead and even David Porter's must shot at three seconds couldn't cut the final margin.

Southwest, 27-11 on the season, shot a better percentage from the field than Dunbar by hitting 21 of 47 shots. Dunbar hit on 25 of 60, but the Wildcats won the game with a 33-25 edge in rebounds and a 10-12 margin in turnovers. It was the 11-23 disparity in fouls that left Dunbar coach Robert Hughes scratching his head.

"I don't know how that team (Southwest) lost 10 games this year. They must have the world's greatest defense with only 11 fouls against them in a game that was as physical as this one was. I guess I'll have to ask John Wooden about that," said Hughes.

But despite the Southwest advantage in fouls, Rebel coach James Wood thought that part of the game was the downfall of his team.

"We broke down at the free throw line and that was the difference," said Wood, whose team hit on 13 of 19 chances. "Still, it was a great game and a great thing for Fort Worth basketball. We'll be in Austin to support Dunbar."

Southwest got 11 points from Derrick Lewis and 10 from Ron Perkins.

But the bottom line is that Dunbar is back for a shot at a state title, and that's a matter that surprisingly didn't have Hughes doing cartwheels.

"Well, that's what we came here to do. Austin is the name of the game, but we're not going to go crazy over it because we've been there four times before," said Hughes.

Maybe he heard that there is another Anderson on the loose in the streets of Austin.

Finding time not always easy

"I don't really have a break from athletics," said Farias. "We start volleyball in August and I participate in basketball and track through the winter and spring. Athletics gives me something to look forward to every day.

"My day consists of school, practice and homework. I study on the bus if we are travelling. I allow some time at the end of the day to talk on the phone and I consider that my luxury. I tried working on weekends at Safeway last year, but it's too hard to work, play sports and keep up your grades all at the same time. Still, there's time to do it all if you keep your priorities straight."

All three said that it was important to have family support away from school.

"It's real important to have your family behind you," said Walker. "My dad was booster club president this last year and it wasn't easy to forget what was going on. There was always something going on that was football related during and after the season."

Lowe agreed, "My family has always been behind me. We all play sports of one kind or another, so the interest was there."

Farias also said she had support at home, but "my parents always make sure the school work comes first. After that, they don't mind my being involved in sports."

OBVIOUSLY, ALL three feel sports is an important part of the school experience, but what is the lure of athletics.

"Basketball helped me learn to get along with people and to work with a group that has a common goal," said Lowe. "I think that is important. It might be even harder to concentrate on academics if you didn't have something else besides school work."

Walker added, "You learn to use your time properly, but the main thing is that you are involved in doing something you enjoy."

Farias, who plans to attend University of Texas at Arlington if an athletic scholarship is not in the future, said, "School just wouldn't be as enjoyable if we didn't have sports. Things could get a little boring. Athletics can be another learning experience, an important one."

Lowe and Farias both said that they missed taking a subject or two they wanted to take because of athletics.

"I wanted to take computer math, but I couldn't work it into my schedule," said Lowe. "I don't think it really hurt me that much. It was just something I wanted to take."

Walker said he took everything he wanted, but Farias said, "I didn't get to take typing and I could have used that. I guess I should have taken another summer session."

Perot's plans of putting Texas education back in the classroom by limiting extra-curricular activities is a subject these three don't have to worry about since they graduate this year.

"We're seniors and I don't have to worry about having to choose between football and baseball," said Walker. "But some of the things I hear aren't going to go over too well with those who have to face them."

Lowe said, "I don't know if I could play basketball under the proposed reduction of electives. I haven't looked into it. I'm sure it will hurt some students who want to participate in sports."

"I'll be gone when all that takes place and I'm glad," said Farias.

Monday: Midland High.

Phinnessee leads MC in OT

The Chaps didn't pull even until Coleman drilled home a 25-footer with 1:32 left. Six-eight Mike Richmond, who scored 28 points and caused MC defensive problems as the eye of the zone, scored for NMJC with 1:08 left.

When Phinnessee went to the line with nine seconds left, it was the first time the Chaps had been in a one-and-one foul shooting situation all night. "I was just standing up there praying," said Phinnessee later. His prayers apparently were answered. After swishing the first shot, his second bounced high off the back of the rim and came straight down, through the mesh.

IN OVERTIME Midland scored from the tip as Wrightsil zeroed in from the corner. It was the first time MC had led since 17-15 midway through the first half. And when Coleman made a three point lead on a free throw with 4:05 left of the overtime, it was the first time NMJC had been out of the zone since running off a 17-4 edge for a 34-23 lead in the first half.

Phinnessee, scoring eight points in overtime, led the Chaps with 20 while Essary added 12, the sharpshooting Coleman 14 and Wrightsil 10.

"Why did we play like that tonight early? Who knows. I think maybe the Regional final this afternoon had something to do with it," Stone said. "After watching a game like that, the adrenalin gets going and when it's over you suddenly realize, 'Oh joy, we've got a game tonight.' That's about the way we played."

Tisdale sets pace for Oklahoma win over UNLV

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — All-America Wayman Tisdale scored 21 points and grabbed nine rebounds Saturday, and sixth-ranked Oklahoma overcame its own error-laden play to turn back No. 7 Nevada-Las Vegas, 78-70.

The Sooners compensated for their 23 turnovers with a 43-27 rebounding edge and won for the 11th straight time, improving their season record to 27-3. They also completed a perfect regular season on their home court, winning 15 games.

The loss was the second straight for the Runnin' Rebels, who dropped a 77-74 decision to Cal-Irvine on Thursday. Nevada-Las Vegas, the Pacific Coast Athletic Association champions, fell to 25-4.

Oklahoma was leading 57-47 with 13 minutes to play when UNLV switched from a man-to-man to a zone defense, assigning two and three players to cover Tisdale. The Rebels then caught fire on offense, outscoring the Sooners 14-4 in a six-minute span to take a 64-61 lead at 6:17.

College Basketball

Duke scares 'Heels

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Michael Jordan scored five of his 27 points in the second overtime to spark top-ranked North Carolina to a 96-83 victory over No. 15 Duke Saturday in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game.

Jordan's three-point play with 4:23 left in the second overtime gave the Tar Heels an 82-79 lead. Sam Perkins then scored six straight points, keying a 15-4 run, as North Carolina became the sixth team in ACC history to go unbeaten in regular-season conference play and the first since North Carolina State in 1974.

Hoyas trip Syracuse

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Georgetown's Patrick Ewing scored 16 points to lead a balanced scoring attack as the fourth-ranked Hoyas tripped No. 16 Syracuse 88-71 Saturday to capture the Big East regular season championship.

The victory gave the 26-3 Hoyas, 14-2 in conference play, their second Big East title in five years.

No. 9 Tulsa upset

NORMAL, Ill. (AP) — Hank Cornley pumped in 25 points Saturday to boost Illinois State to a 91-81 victory over No. 9 Tulsa and a share of the Missouri Valley Conference title.

Rickie Johnson and Michael McKenny each chipped in 16 points as Illinois State guaranteed itself a home court advantage throughout the MVC tournament, which starts next week.

Both teams finished with 13-3 conference marks, but ISU gets home court because it beat Tulsa twice this season. The Redbirds wound up 21-6 overall and the Golden Hurricane slipped to 24-3.

Bowie knifes LSU

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Sam Bowie, playing what could be his last college basketball game in Rupp Arena, scored 20 points Saturday, powering third-ranked Kentucky to an easy 90-68 Southeastern Conference triumph over Louisiana State.

Bowie's fellow "Twin Tower," senior center Melvin Turpin, added 19 points for the Wildcats.

Kentucky improved to 14-4 in the league and 23-4 overall. LSU dropped to 11-7 and 18-9.

Temple dominates

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Junior center Granger Hall scored 21 points, 17 in the second half, in leading 18th-ranked Temple to a 69-58 victory over St. Joseph's in an Atlantic 10 Conference basketball game Saturday night.

The victory enabled the Owls, 24-3, to finish the Atlantic 10 regular season with an 18-0 record. Temple also will share the Big Five title with La Salle, both with 3-1 records.

NC State loses again

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Delaney Rudd scored 19 points in the second half, including six free throws in the final 1:30, to lead 17th-ranked Wake Forest to an 84-75 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over North Carolina State.

The Demon Deacons finished the regular season with a 20-7 overall record and are 7-7 in the ACC. North Carolina State fell shy of winning 20 games in the regular season, ending with a 19-12 record overall and a 4-10 record in the ACC.

Louisville pulls upset

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Milt Wagner pumped in 22 points as Louisville held off a closing rush by No. 14 Memphis State to take a 68-58 college basketball victory Saturday and a share of the Metro Conference regular-season title.

The victory raised Louisville's record to 21-9 overall and 11-3 in the conference. Memphis State fell to 21-6 and 11-3. The Cardinals will be the top seed in this week's Metro Conference tournament at Memphis by virtue of their two victories over the Tigers.

BYU rolls, 80-73

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Scott Sinek converted five free throws in the last 40 seconds to enable Brigham Young to turn back a furious New Mexico rally en route to an 80-73 victory in a regionally televised Western Athletic Conference basketball game Saturday.

BYU clinched second place and thus receives the second seed and a bye in the league tournament.

Purdue rips Buckeyes

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Jim Rowinski had 15 of his 23 points in the first half as No. 11 Purdue defeated Ohio State 85-63 Saturday to give the Boilermakers first place in the race for the Big Ten basketball championship.

The victory in their final home game gave Purdue a half-game edge over Illinois in their battle for the conference crown.

Miners clinch WAC title with 55-54 win over Utes

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Eighth-ranked Texas-El Paso edged Utah 55-54 on free throws by Juden Smith Saturday night to clinch the Western Athletic Conference regular season basketball crown.

Smith converted two free throws with one minute remaining to put the Miners ahead 55-54. Utah worked the ball down to 19 seconds, called time out, and then Kelvin Upshaw missed a shot with six seconds emaining and Chris Winans missed a rebound shot at the buzzer.

Fred Reynolds led UTEP with 15 points, while Luster Goodwin finished with nine and Dave Feitl and Kent Lockhart eight each for the Miners, who wound up at 13-3 in the WAC and 25-3 for the season.

Utah, finishing at 4-12 in the conference and 10-18 for the year, was led by Upshaw's 18 points.

Winans added 13 and Manny Hendrix finished with 10.

UTEP led 29-22 at the half and increased its advantage to 46-36 with 9:45 remaining. The Utes outscored the Miners 16-5 in the next six minutes and took the lead 52-51 with 3:58 on the clock.

Moments later, Upshaw put the Utes up 54-51, but the Utes couldn't score again. Hendrix missed an easy layup with just over one minute remaining, and a field goal by Reynolds and Smith's two free throws rounded out the scoring.

Texas Basketball

ISU rips West Texas

AMARILLO (AP) — John Sherman Williams scored 47 points and Matt Brundige had 33 to lead Indiana State to a 113-98 Missouri Valley Conference basketball win over West Texas State Saturday night.

Williams' point total, a career-high, was just two short of the Indiana State record of 49 set by Lary Bird in 1979. Brundige's total also was a career-high.

James Jackson led the Buffaloes with 28 points.

The loss by West Texas State also doused the Buffaloes hopes of a berth in the conference post season tournament. West Texas finished the season in ninth place with a 89-19 record overall and a 3-13 mark in the MVC.

Indiana State raised its record to 14-13 on the year and 6-10 in the SWC. Indiana State will travel to play Tulsa in the first round of the tournament Tuesday night.

Bulldogs nip Pan Am

EDINBURG (AP) — Karl Malone sank five free throws in the final minute and scored 25 points to spark Louisiana Tech to a 69-63 win over Pan American in college basketball Saturday night.

Malone scored six points as Tech jumped ahead 10-2 in the opening minutes and never trailed.

The 6-9 sophomore helped lift the Bulldogs to a 22-6 record. Pan American fell to 13-12 with its fourth straight loss.

Duane Thornton topped Pan American with 18 points, but he was one of three Broncs who fouled out trying to stop Malone.

Rennie Bailey added 15 points and Wayne Smith 14 for Louisiana Tech.

Privateers roll, 68-49

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Terrance Breaux's 19 points, combined with a University of New Orleans scoring spree in the second half, led the Privateers to a 68-49 victory over Texas-San Antonio.

The victory improved UNO to 13-14 on the year, while the Roadrunners fell to 20-8.

The Privateers took the lead 14-12 on a layup by freshman Terrence Bellock with 9:29 to play in the first half, and never trailed after that. They led 27-23 at halftime.

The game remained close until the Privateers — ahead 45-40 with 9:08 remaining — outscored Texas-San Antonio 21-4 to take their largest lead of the night, 66-44 with 2:43 left in the game.

UNO's strong defense forced the Roadrunners to shoot poorly from the field — 31 percent for the entire game — while the Privateers shot 52 percent from the field.

Also in double figures for New Orleans were Tim Peyton with 14 points and Bellock with 13.

Ike Thornton paced Texas-San Antonio with 15 points, and Alden Wren added 10.

McEnroe, 25, needed a second-set tie-breaker to beat the eighth-seeded Curren of South Africa 6-2, 7-6 (7-4), while Smid, 27, defeated the 29-year-old Gerulaitis 3-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Curren's strong serves were not enough to overcome the superior drives and passing shots of McEnroe, who won the first set in just 35 minutes.

Lamar got six first place finishes and four seconds and gathered 124 points to dethrone Texas A&M, which was second with 104 points. Texas Tech finished a strong third with 80 points. Texas had 66 and Baylor 49.

Dale Jenkins of Abilen Christian raised the meet's college pole vault record to 18-0 and barely missed at 18-5.

He was named the meets outstanding athlete by a half vote over sprinter Craig Scholars of Fort Worth Southwest, who won the high school 100-meter and 200 and anchored his team to victory in the 400-meter relay.

Lamar's Hadnot contributed 18 points by throwing the discus 173-2 and finishing second to teammate Eugene Seale in the shot.

Harris won the 400 meters in a impressive 46.43. He handled the opening leg on Lamar's 400-meter relay team that finished second to Texas Tech and he anchored Lamar to third in the 1600 meter relay behind Baylor and TCU.

Baylor won the 1,600-meter relay in 3:10.99 with a makeshift lineup of Derwin Graham, Steve Horton, Ernest Wilson, Zeke Jefferson. Regulars Willie Caldwell and Johnny Thomas were left at home.

TCU was running at 'B' team since the first unit was in Flagstaff Ariz, where it set a world indoor record of 3.04.82 in the mile relay.

Two university division records were broken.

Ethan Glass of Texas A&M high jumped 7-2 and Walter Morrison of Texas Tech lowered the 400-meter hurdles mark to 50.91.

Freshman Steven Hall of Rice upset Bruce Davis of Baylor in the 100-meters, his closing kick catching the Bear at the tape in an upwind 10.64.

Abilene Christan easily repeated in the College division with 160 points to 111 for Angelo State and 86 for Stephen F. Austin.

Panthers sneak by Maulers, 27-24

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Pittsburgh Maulers probably didn't know it, but they played right into Novo Bojovic's hands Saturday night.

Bojovic's 19-yard field goal with 32 seconds remaining lifted the mistake-prone Panthers to a 27-24 United States Football League victory. It was almost an instant replay of the Panthers' triumph over Chicago last Monday night when Bojovic kicked the winning field goal with no time remaining.

"I prefer games like this," said Bojovic, a fiercly proud 5-foot-10, 170-pounder who was born and raised in nearby Hamtramck, a Polish enclave in Detroit. "This is the kind of game that makes you famous. These are the field goals I like to hit because they tell people what kind of person you are, how strong you are."

Terry Miller, who lost two fumbles during the game, scored on a 20-yard run earlier in the fourth quarter.

"They were sticking us on the goal line," Miller said. "It felt like they were hitting the ball. They get paid to hit, but we're happy we came out on top."

The defending champion Panthers, who yielded touchdowns on a pass interception and a blocked punt, remained undefeated at 2-0 to the relief of 44,485 partisan fans in the Silverdome while the expansion Maulers slipped to 0-2.

"We made some mistakes that an expansion team will make, and they hurt us," Pittsburgh Coach Joe Pendry said. "We'll learn a lot from this game and we will be better next week and all season long we will get better."

The Maulers led 21-17 going into the fourth quarter but Miller burst up the middle and broke several tackles to score at 5:39 and put the Panthers ahead for the first time in the game.

Longview easily captures 5A state championship

AUSTIN (AP) — Longview, paced Angela Lawson's 24 points, routed Houston Yates 72-52 Saturday night to take the Class 5A girls state basketball title and avenge a loss to Yates here last year.

For the champion Lobos, 39-0 this year, it was the 97th win in 99 games. The last Longview loss was a 78-77 squeaker to Yates in the state semifinals a year ago. The defending state champion lady Lions, who finished this year at 26-1, were blown out in the second quarter by a Longview team that never gave up on its persistent full-court press and fast-paced offense.

The Lobos led 22-20 with 5:07 remaining before the half. But Lawson, a 5-8 senior who is headed for Louisiana Tech, ignited a 17-4 spurt before halftime that buried Yates.

Lawson had 11 of the Lobos' 17 points during the run that clinched the state title for the East Texas team. Cassie Brooks chipped in 22 points for Longview.

Donna Roper was Yates' top scorer with 18. Marilyn Winters added 12 for the losers.

Sheila Valin, who sparkled for Yates in its semi-final win over San Antonio Highlands, was shut out by Longview's scrambling press. Valin missed all nine shots she took from the floor.

Girls State

Richfield still perfect

Maggie Davis put in 23 points as Waco Richfield capped a perfect season by whipping Levelland 56-43 in the Girls 4A finals.

The Richfield victory over the defending champion Lobos gave the Ramblers, coached by former University of Houston player Poo Welch, a 33-0 season mark. Levelland finished the seaon at 30-4.

The Ramblers broke open a close game midway through the third quarter. They took the lead for good with 3:38 to play in the period. Tracy McKinney hit a short shot to make the score 31-30.

Richfield led by only a point at halftime.

Late in the fourth quarter the Lobos got sloppy on offense and Richfield ran away with the championship game.

Davis, a 6-0 junior, hit on 10 of 17 field goals and 3 of 5 free throws for her game high of 23. Junior Martha Estelle added 14 points for the winners.

Levelland was topped by Darla Isaacks, a 6-0 senior who scored 16. Kamie Schonerstedt added 10, and ran the Levelland offense effectively most of the game.

Lopes survive scare

Abernathy, paced by Phoebe Dunn's 29 points, survived a fourth-quarter scare and beat Groesbeck 67-57 for the Class 3A title.

The victorious Lady Lopes seemed headed for an easy win when they built a 46-35 lead after the third quarter. But the Groesbeck Goats, sparked by Sherrie Cooks, knotted the game at 51 with 4:26 to play.

Abernathy then ran off six points, including four by sophomore Dunn, to seal the title. Groesbeck had one more chance to tie, but with 1:24 to play the swarming Lady Lopes forced Groesbeck's Linnet Jones into a bad shot that missed everything.

Vicky McKenzie quashed any hopes of another Goat comeback by hitting six free throws for Abernathy in the closing minute. McKenzie finished with 21 points, including 13 of 16 free throws. She also added 14 rebounds.

Dunn collected her 29 points by hitting 12 of 15 field goals and five of seven from the line.

Cooks used her sensational speed to pick up 18 points before fouling out with 1:08 to play. Bobbie Whitfield scored 14 and Jones added 13 for the Goats.

Abernathy finished the season at 32-3. Groesbeck posted a 35-2 mark.

Bulldogs sneak by

Senior Lesa Thigpen banked in a short shot with 42 seconds to play to give Pollok Central a 37-36 win over Hale Center in the Class 2A title game.

Thigpen's last-minute shot capped a comeback that saw the Bulldogs overcome the Owlettes, who led much of the way.

After Thigpen's basket, Hale Center worked the ball inside the Rhonda Nivens, who missed a short shot and then fouled Central's Angie Jacobs.

But Jacobs missed the first half of a 1-1 free throw situation, giving the Owlettes another chance. With 7 seconds to play, Hale Center took the ball on the sidelines but Kristi Lockett missed a shot with 2 seconds to play that would have given Hale Center the state championship.

Central's top scorer was junior Julie Flowers with 10 points. Hale Center relieved heavily on junior Donna Cummings, who hit 24 points.

Central, which is near Lufkin, finishes its season at 29-5. Hale Center, a Panhandle school, finished at 23-10.

Nazareth wins again

Ramona Heiman's 28 points powered Nazareth to a 64-32 win over Petty West Lamar, giving the Swiftettes their seventh girls Class A state basketball title in the past eight years.

For Swiftette Coach Joe Lombard, clad in his traditional tuxedo, it was the first half of what he hopes will be a historic double in University Interscholastic League basketball. Lombard also coaches the Swifts, Nazareth's boys team, who are still alive in tournament play.

After a Friday semifinal win here with his girls, Lombard flew to Levelland for a Friday night boys' win over Booker. The boys played a regional semifinal game Saturday morning and Lombard planned to fly back to Levelland if the Swifts made the regional final.

His Swiftettes made quick work of Petty West Lamar, running to a 19-2 lead after the first quarter. Nazareth, which is 60 miles southwest of Amarillo, finished the season at 35-0.

Heiman, a 5-foot-9 sophomore, hit 13 of 16 field goal attempts and was two of two from the free throw line. West Lamar, 26-4, was led by freshman Danni Battle with 19 points.

Nazareth lost the state title last year by losing to district rival Sudan in regional play. The Swiftettes had collected six straight state titles before that loss.

This year's Nazareth record includes lopsided wins over larger schools that made it to tournament play. The Swiftettes twice ran away from Abernathy, which won the Class 3A title and also took two easy wins over Hale Center, which played in the 2A final. Nazareth also beat Levelland, a Class 4A finalist.

Navratilova, Lloyd to meet in Virginia Slims finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd, as expected, advanced Saturday into the final of the $500,000 Virginia Slims Championships tennis tournament at Madison Square Garden.

Navratilova defeated her doubles partner Pam Shriver, 7-6, 6-4, while Lloyd easily disposed of Barbara Potter 6-4, 6-1.

The winner of today's best-of-five set final will pocket $125,000, the largest purse ever in women's tennis. The loser will collect $60,000.

Shriver and Potter will meet Sunday for third place, which is worth $30,000. The fourth-place finisher will receive $24,000.

In the best match of this week-long, 16-player tournament, Navratilova overcame a slow start to topple Shriver. The world's No. 1 woman player lost her first two serves while falling behind 3-0.

But then, with cat-quick moves and sharp, decisive volleys, Navratilova broke Shriver's service in the fourth and eighth games to pull even. The two then battled evenly, sometimes with both players at the net, to hold serve and force the first set into a tiebreaker.

Navratilova then ripped off the first five points before capturing the tiebreaker 7-2 to win the first set.

After that, it appeared easier, although Shriver's game remained sharp. The only break came in the fifth game after Shriver built a 40-15 lead.

But Navratilova won five of the next six points, beginning with a forehand passing shot down the line. On Shriver's next serve, the eventual winner whipped a backhand cross court.

A forehand volley gave her the advantage before Shriver pulled back to deuce with a volley of her own.

Again Navratilova jumped on Shriver's serve, this time with a forehand winner, and closed out the game with a backhand passing shot down the line.

It was all she needed as she held her next two service games at love, then battled through three deuces, staving off one break point, in the 10th game to close out the match.

WHILE NAVRATILOVA had to work for her trip to the first women's best-of-five sets match since 1902, Lloyd cruised past her left handed opponent.

Potter, who has the biggest serve in women's tennis, fired nine aces, but more than tempered it with seven double-faults and numerous unforced errors.

Ranked No. 2 in the world behind Navratilova and seeded second here, Lloyd broke Potter in the third game of the first set, then held her own service in a long game that went 14 points. Potter, always trying to force the action, repeatedly attacked, and Lloyd retaliated with passing shots off both sides.

When Potter sent a forehand service return long, Lloyd had held serve and had taken a 3-1 lead.

In the 10th game, Potter reached break point once, but Lloyd held on to close out the opening set.

Apparently Lloyd felt the first set was too close. She never let up on Potter until she had built a 4-0 lead, breaking the left-hander in the first and third games.

After that, the only question was how much longer she would stay out on the court.

Texas wins SWC swimming championship

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas, saving its best performances for last, won six of seven events Saturday night to wrap up its fifth straight Southwest Conference Swimming and Diving Championship.

After trailing in SMU in the meet's first two days, Texas moved into first place after the first event Saturday on the strength of Dave Swenson's victory in the 1,650 free style.

The Longhorns never looked back after Swenson's conference record setting swim. Rick Carey took first in the 200 backstroke, followed by teammates in second and sixth places. Mike Ellison led Texas' 1-2-4-5 finish in the 100 free style. Divers Matt Scoggin and David Lindsey placed first and second off the three meter board. In the 200 butterfly, Chris Rives tied SMU's Ricardo Prado for first in a conference record with Longhorns following in third, fourt and sixth.

And in the meet's final event, the 400 free style relay, Ellison anchored Texas to a .80 second victory over SMU.

"It was a lot more fun tonight than it's been the last two nights," said Texas coach Eddie Reese, who has led Texas to all five of its recent conference titles. "They swam better tonight than I ever imagined. They fought harder than any group I have ever had."

Chris Weissman was SMU's only outright winner with a victory in the 200 breastroke.

Texas finished with 696.5 points, followed by SMU with 625. Arkansas was a distant third with 249.5. Texas A&M edged Houston for fourth place, 175-158. Texas Tech was sixth with 97, TCU seventh with 86, and Rice last with 49.

Chamberlain wins Toledo

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Bob Chamberlain averaged 240 over four games Saturday to win the $200,000 Toledo Trust Professional Bowlers Association National Championship.

Chamberlain, 35, making his first appearance in the finals, beat Dan Eberl 219-191 in the title game. Eberl also had never been in the finals of a PBA tournament.

Chamberlain picked up $38,000 for first place, more than the $29,000 he had won on the tour over the last four years.

"This is the most important day of my life," said Chamberlain, who entered a treatment center for alcoholism last year.

"Until then, my life wasn't going anywhere.

Bean birdies way into Honda lead

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — Andy Bean capped a string of four consecutive birdies with a putt of about 60 feet on the final hole and took a two-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $500,000 Honda Classic.

Bean, who dropped three shots off the pace with a double bogey-7 on the 10th hole, had a 4-under-par 68 in the bright sunshine. He finished 54 holes over the new Tournament Players Club at Eagle Trace in 208, eight strokes under par.

Mark McCumber, a stocky man who earned two victories last season, climbed over 13 players with a 66 and was second alone at 210.

J.C. Snead, who led after each of the first two rounds, again had problems with an erratic driver and could do no better than match par 72. He was tied at 211 with Tommy Nakajima, the winner of seven tournaments in Japan last season and now a regular on the American PGA Tour. Nakajima had a 70.

Bruce Lietzke and Jim Colbert were next at 212. Lietzke had a third-round 70, Colbert 71.

Four more players — Wayne Levi, George Archer, Scott Watkins and Joey Sindelar — were at 213. Levi had a 68, Archer 69, Watkins and Sindelar 70s.

JACK NICKLAUS had a 70 that left him well back at 217. South African Gary Player improved to a 68-216. Masters champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain was 67-215. U.S. Open title-holder Larry Nelson had a 70 that left him at 214.

Bean, a big, red-haired guy called "Li'l Abner" by his fellow pros, started the day one shot off the pace and remained there after playing the front side two under par.

On the 10th, a 526-yard par-5, he took a devastating double-bogey 7 and — at least for the moment — appeared to fall out of contention. He drove into a fairway bunker, caught the lip coming out and took five to reach the putting surface.

"One thing I've learned over the years, watching the good players, is that you don't let one hole cost you the tournament," Bean said.

He kept his composure, reeled off a string of two-putt pars and then stormed to the front with his birdie-birdie-birdie-birdie finish.

Bean, who had won at least once in six consecutive seasons before the string was snapped last year, started the move with a wedge to three feet on the 15th hole, which put him back in the hunt.

He scored from 12 feet on the 16th and suddenly had a share of the lead.

On the 17th, he lofted a 6-iron shot to within three feet of the flag and tapped that one in. Now he was the leader.

And he stretched the margin with that long, long putt on the final hole.

"All I was trying to do was get it down in two," he said. "I was just trying to lag it up there so I could 2-putt. Sometimes you mess up and one-putt."

Dupree signs with USFL

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Running back Marcus Dupree, 19, signed a five-year, $6 million contract Saturday to play with the New Orleans Breakers of the United States Football League, spurning his final two years of collegiate eligibility.

"He's the highest paid player in professional football," said team owner Joe Canizaro, who intervened personally to conclude the deal when negotiations were breaking down.

"He'll be on the sidelines Sunday (at Oakland)," said Coach Dick Coury.

"He will be in uniform and carry the ball several times in our home opener, or our backfield coach won't be around." He and backfield coach Bill Reddell laughed.

The Breakers open at home on March 11 against Memphis.

Dupree played at Oklahoma before dropping out during last football season and enrolling at Southern Mississippi. The NCAA said Dupree would have to sit out the 1984 season to become eligible to play college football again in 1985.

While Canizaro's claim that Dupree is the highest paid player in professional football may be open to question, he is certainly one of the most highly paid.

"I call him my $6 million man," said Canizaro, whose intervention ended weeks of speculation and dickering following Dupree's withdrawal from Southern Mississippi in January.

Five countries advance teams in Davis Cup

By The Associated Press

Mexico, Chile, Brazil, Japan and Thailand advanced in the Davis Cup tennis competition Saturday, while South Korea remained alive in its match against China.

At Mexico City, Fernando Perez Pascal and Jorge Lozano gave the host country an insurmountable 3-0 lead over Canada in the best-of-five first-round series, defeating Glenn Michibata and Bill Cowan 9-7, 6-2, 6-4.

Earlier in the day, Mexico's Francisco Maciel defeated Derek Segal 6-4, 6-3, 9-11, 6-3.The match had been suspended by darkness Friday with Maciel leading 6-4, 6-3, 2-2.

Mexico will meet Chile in the second round in May. Chile took a 3-0 lead over Colombia when Alvaro Fillol and Belus Prajoux won the doubles over Alvaro Jordan and Ruben Perzzech 6-3, 6-3, 6-2 at Santiago, Chile.

At Rio de Janeiro, Brazil eliminated Peru by taking a 3-0 lead when Carlos Kirmayr and Cassio Motta beat Pablo Arraya and Fernando Maynetto 7-9, 6-4, 7-5, 12-10 in a five-hour doubles match.

At Fukuoka, Japan, the Japanese squad advanced to the Eastern Zone semifinals when its doubles team of Toru Yonezawa and Hitoshi Shirato overwhelmed Virgilio "Beeyong" Sison and Rodolfo Gabriel of the Philippines 8-6, 7-5, 6-4 for a 3-0 advantage.

In the semifinals, Japan will meet the winner of the match between China and South Korea.

In Kunming, China, South Korea trimmed China's lead to 2-1 when Kim Bong-soo and Yoo Jin-sun won a 2½-hour doubles match from Liu Shuhua and Ma Keqin 1-6, 8-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Sunday's two singles matches will determine the winner of the series, the first time South Korean athletes have competed in China.

In Hong Kong, Thailand took a 3-0 lead over Hong Kong when the doubles team of Sombat Uamongkol and Panomkorn Pladuchanil beat Randall King and Kelvin Ng 6-3, 3-6, 9-11, 6-3, 6-2.

Denver boots quick field goal in OT for win

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Denver place-kicker Brian Speelman booted a 17-yard field goal after 31 seconds of overtime to give the Gold a 17-14 United States Football League victory over the Oklahoma Outlaws Saturday.

The winning points came after Outlaws punter Bob Boris fell on a low fourth-down snap at his own 3. Speelman kicked the winning field goal on the next play.

The Gold scored two touchdowns 2:25 apart in the third quarter, the second with 2:22 left in the period after Boris fell on a mishandled snap on his own 13.

Gold running back Harry Sydney, who finished with 57 yards on 14 carries, took that one in on one play.

Denver's other score was set up by a 53-yard pass play from quarterback Craig Penrose to tight end Victor Hicks to the Oklahoma 28. Running back Bo Matthews scored on a one-yard plunge four plays later. Speelman added both extra points to give the Gold a 14-7 lead headed into the fourth quarter.

Penrose hit 14 of 23 passes for 164 yards.

Austin College hires new coach

SHERMAN (AP) — Melvin L. Tjeerdsma, the current offensive coordinator and head track coach at Northwestern College in Orange City, Iowa, has been named head football coach at Austin College.

Tjeerdsma, 37, will assume the Austin College job on March 19.

He will succeed Stan McGarey who resigned in January to become offensive coordinator at Sam Houston State.

Tjeerdsma helped lead Northwestern to four NAIA Division II playoff berths. His teams led the nation in total offense in 1982 and 1983, averaging 496 yards per game in 1982 and 505 yards per game in 1983.

He is a native of Springfield, S.D., and was one of 43 applicants and four finalists for the job.

Without Abbott, Costello would never have gotten to first base.

Teamwork was the name of the comedy game for Abbott and Costello and it kept generations of television viewers laughing. After all, what is a funny guy without a straight man?

They were successful individuals who found that special chemistry in each other that brought them to even greater achievements. Their ultimate success was in combining their talents. Working together.

Teamwork can work for cities, too. Cities like ours. Think about it, MIDLAND/ODESSA.

Lopez holds commanding lead in Uniden Invitational

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Nancy Lopez, coming back after leaving the LPGA tour to have a child, shot a 5-under-par 66 Saturday to take a commanding lead in the $300,000 Uniden Invitational.

Lopez, playing in just her fourth tournament since she left the tour last July to have her first child, began the third round at 2-over-par, six strokes behind leader Judy Clark.

But, as Clark struggled to a 75, Lopez mastered the 6,134-yard, par-71 Mesa Verde Country Club layout with a course-record-tying round that included six birdies and an eagle — a 50-yard shot that hit the pin on the fly and dropped into the cup on the par-5 No.4 hole.

Lopez, who shot 70-74 the first two rounds, stands at 3-under-par 210 heading into Sunday's final round of the tournament, the LPGA's third richest.

She is three strokes ahead of Clark, a non-winner in her six previous years on the tour, and six strokes in front of the next closest challengers, Pat Bradley and Penny Pulz.

Lopez, 27, the LPGA's Player of the Year in both 1978 and 1979, is the wife of Houston Astros' first baseman Ray Knight. Their daughter, Ashley Marie, was born last November.

Lopez, who has finished no higher than 12th since rejoining the tour, began her dramatic charge into the lead with birdies on the first and third holes and the eagle 3 on the fourth.

"I hit a sand wedge, and if it hadn't gone into the cup, it would have been 15 feet past the hole," she said. "I couldn't believe it went in, and neither could the gallery. There was just silence for a moment, with everybody wondering what happened to the ball."

In the rest of her spectactular but inconsistent round, Lopez had birdies on the 12th, 15th, 17th and 18th holes and bogeys on No.7, 13 and 14.

"It was a really different day," she said. "I got mad at myself after those two bogeys on the backside. It was odd, I was making some good putts and missing some short ones."

Lopez played in just 12 tournament last year. Still, she won twice and collected a total of $91,477 to rank 15th on the 1983 earnings list.

Lopez returned to the tour for the first event of this year, in Florida in late January.

"A lot of people couldn't believe I was back so soon," she said.

She steadily improved during the three tournaments in Florida, finishing 20th, then 14th, then 12th.

Asked if she felt confident she could win the tournament, which would be the 28th title in her illustrious career, Lopez smiled and replied: "It may depend on how much Ashley sleeps tonight."

USFL's largest crowd expected for Generals, Bulls at Gator Bowl

USFL

By The Associated Press

One of the largest crowds in United States Football League history is expected to be on hand today for Herschel Walker's "homecoming" at the Gator Bowl with the New Jersey Generals. But it's also a homecoming for Fernando Jackson, who's had a few encounters with Walker before.

Walker, who played just up the road at Georgia for three years and played three games against Florida in Jacksonville, is expected to draw many of the more than 60,000 fans expected to be on hand for Sunday's game between the Generals and the Jacksonville Bulls. The contest was shifted from Friday night so that ABC could televise it.

One of Walker's adversaries will be Jackson, who as a Florida linebacker in 1981 was credited with 17 solo or assisted tackles on Walker alone.

"The one thing you have to do when you hit Herschel is wrap your arms around him," says Jackson. "If you don't do that, he'll bounce right off you and keep going.

"Four or five guys is the way to stop him."

In other games USFL games today, Chicago will be at Memphis; Philadelphia at Washington; Birmingham at Los Angeles, and New Orleans, which will have the newly signed Marcus Dupree will be on the sidelines, at Oakland.

WALKER, LIMITED to 40 yards by an injured back and a stout Birmingham defense in New Jersey's 17-6 win over the Stallions last week, will need to contribute more against the surprising Bulls, an expansion team who routed Washington 53-14 in their opener. Brian Sipe, whom New Jersey signed from the Cleveland Browns to direct their attack, will miss the next three games with a knee injury and will be replaced at quarterback by the inexperienced Gene Bradley.

Jacksonville will count on much-traveled Matt Robinson, who threw for 299 yards and four touchdowns against the Federals.

The Los Angeles-Birmingham game, which will be televised by ABC in the Mountain and Pacific time zones, features two teams coming off disappointing opening game losses. The Express lost to Denver, 27-10 and the Generals dropped that 17-6 decision to the Generals.

Express coach John Hadl says there will be a number of new wrinkles in an attack that committed five turovers and accumulated only 210 yards in its opener.

"We'll have a lot of variations we didn't have last week," Hadl said. "But we're going to stick with the single-back setup. We believe in what we're doing."

Rice beats Baylor, 56-41

SWC Basketball

HOUSTON (AP) — Tyrone Washington scored seven of his team-leading 11 points in the final seven minutes to spark the Rice Owls to a 56-41 victory over the Baylor Bears.

Rice led by as much as 11 points midway through the second half, but a Baylor rally of nine unanswered points cut the Owl lead to 38-36 with 7:15 to play. The Owls, behind Washington, outscored the Bears 18-5 to secure the win.

Rice used a balanced scoring attack to improve its conference record to 6-10 and overall record to 11-16.

Tracy Steele had nine points while Mike Cunningham, Tony Barnett and Greg Hines each scored eight points for Rice. Washington led the Owls in rebounds from his guard position with 8.

David Glover was the top scorer and rebounder for Baylor with 13 points and 11 rebounds.

Baylor finished the regular season at 1-15 in conference and 5-22 overall.

Rice will host its first SWC tournament game Tuesday night when the Owls face the winner of the Texas-Texas Christian University contest.

Baylor will play the loser of Saturday's Southern Methodist-Texas Tech game.

SMU defeats Tech

LUBBOCK (AP) — Larry Davis powered in 27 points and Jon Koncak added 17 as Southern Methodist clinched third place and a tournament bye with a 86-78 win over Texas Tech in a basketball game marred by angry exchanges between coaches and players.

Tech Coach Gerald Meyers was ejected from the game after he charged on to the floor to argue with a referee and drew three technical fouls for his effort.

The third place finish for SMU gives the Mustangs a bye in the first round of the post season tournament. Tech, which finished in fourth place, will host last-place Baylor in a first-round game Tuesday night.

SMU finished the season 24-6 and 12-4 in the SWC. Tech finished 16-11 and 10-6 in the SWC.

The Mustangs, relying on the inside power of Davis, Koncak and Carl Wright, broke the contest open midway through the first half. With the score tied at 12, SMU ran off a 20-4 spurt to jump ahead 32-16. Koncak scored 11 of those 20 points and Wright scored six.

SMU led at the half 34-20.

Meyers, still fuming after a first-half incident in which SMU Head Coach Dave Bliss accused a Raider of maliciously fouling Wright under the basket, charged onto the floor five minutes into the second half to question a non-call by referee Jim Harves.

Meyers was given a technical foul, escorted off the floor and then given two more technicals and ejected from the gym. Before he left, he charged Bliss and had an angry confrontation with the opposing coach.

SMU scored 3 points off the six free throws assessed for the technicals to extend its lead to 45-28 with 14 minutes remaining.

TCU downs Texas

FORT WORTH (AP) — Carven Holcombe matched his career high with 31 points that helped Texas Christian to a 78-70 victory over Texas.

The win was the 200th major college victory for TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth and it left the Horned Frogs in seventh place in the final conference standings.

TCU raised its record to 11-16 overall and 4-12 in the SWC. Eighth-placed Texas finished 7-20 overall and 3-13 in the SWC.

Holcombe hit 11 of 19 from the field and 9 of 14 from the free throw line. TCU led most of the way, building a seven-point lead midway through the first half with good perimeter shooting from Nutt and solid inside play from Holcombe.

Texas managed to pull to within two, 35-33, before the half.

The Horned Frogs pulled away after a 14-4 stretch in the second half gave them a 70-60 lead with 2:45 to play. Texas never recovered.

Beth Slaton and Connie Merket are waiting to help you out with your temporary employment needs. For more information give Connie or Beth a call today at 687-1545.

Temp Time, locally owned and operated to serve you better

After this recent cool spell, everyone is looking forward to summer vacations. Plans are being made concerning where and when to go.

Whether the employee is planning on going to Big Spring or the Bahamas there will be a need for temporary help so that things will continue to run smoothly around the office.

Temp Time is available to help out with qualified temporary help. Besides their regular temporaries, there will also be college students and teachers who will be joining the temporary work force for the summer. Many of these teachers and students have worked for Temp Time in the past and have enjoyed the work enough to return for another summer.

Temp Time is locally owned and operated by Beth Slaton. Connie Merket has joined the office staff recently so don't be suprised if she answers the phone next time you call.

For temporaries, working for a locally owned and operated company means something else- a payroll that is done locally. Since it is done locally, there is not the long wait of the payroll being mailed to the main office, checks being made out and then the mail trip back. Plus there is always the chance of the checks getting lost in the mail. With local payroll this is of no concern.

When asked, several employees stated that one of the reasons they enjoyed working for Temp Time was that they got more personal attention. They were treated as a person instead of a number.

If you are interested in becoming a temporary for a very service oriented company, Temp Time would like to invite you to come in and register at 2500 N. Big Spring.

The flu season is still going strong in West Texas, employees are taking sick days and the work is piling up. Why not let Temp Time help you out with qualifed temporary who can meet your needs?

If you want to become a temporary or need temporary help call Beth or Connie at 687-1545.

Rainbow Enterprises-- heating and cooling experts for Midland

No matter what the season, Rainbow Enterprises can help you efficiently heat or cool your home.

In West Texas the weather is so unpredictable that it is hard to tell whether it is time to gear up for the hot weather ahead or to keep warm right now.

If you decide to keep warm right now Rainbow Enterprises carries Superior Fireplaces, Earth Stoves and inserts and Firey Furnaces.

Superior Fireplaces have 33", 38" and 43" openings to choose from. Superior has been in business for 52 years.

The Energy Home at the World's Fair in Nashville featured the Earth Stove and inserts. The Earth Stove makes a masonary fireplace more effecient because it is completely enclosed. It can burn for 12- 14 hours without adding wood. A 2400 square foot house can be heated nicely with an Earth Stove.

Complete installation is available and Rainbow will even stone the front of the fireplace with camp stone. Camp stone is a man made stone. They also carry lava stone which is also a man made stone. The benefit of this stone is that it is much lighter.

If you are planning ahead to the warmer weather, Rainbow Enterprises distributes Aireze Fiberglass Evap Coolers and Tradewinds Poly Resin Evap Coolers.

Aireze manufactures 3 different units. The units are downdraft, sidedraft and window models. A five year warranty comes with each unit. To clean and prepare these units for summer all you have to do is sweep them out and you are ready to go.

The Tradewind is a very strong unit that also offers a five year warranty.

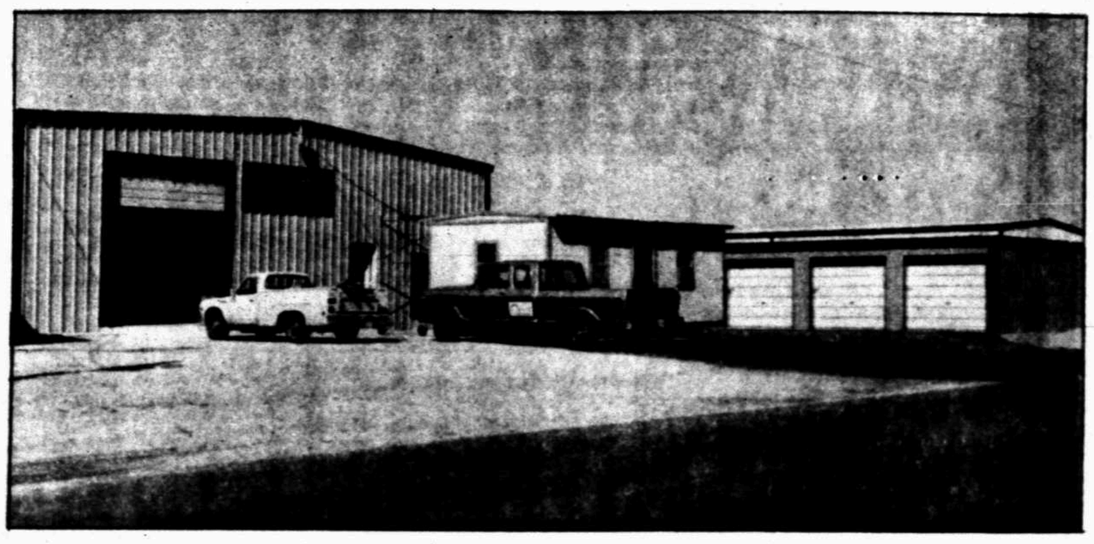

Both units eliminate the need for scraping and painting because of the fiberglass and poly resin bodies.

Recently Rainbow began carrying Associated windows and doors. These storm windows and doors are Thermo Shield so they keep the warm or cool in to help your fireplace or evap coolers run more effeciently.

Rainbow has 73 storage units. The sizes available range are 10x15, 10x20 and two 20x20 units. The prices on the units are $40.00 a month for the 10x15 and $45.00 a month for the 10x20. The first month's rent and a $20.00 deposit are required and then you get the second month free of charge.

Rainbow Enterprises is a little difficult to find but is well worth the trip. To get to Rainbow you need to turn South off of the South I-20 excess road between Midkiff and Loop 250 onto CO. Rd. 1225 South. They are located on the West side of the road.

If you prefer to gie them a call the number is 697-0127.

Rainbow Enterprises, Co. Rd. 1225 South, carries a variety of heating and cooling systems. They also have 73 storage units available for rent. For more information call them today.

Focus on family

Today's family faces enormous challenges and, all too frequently, succumbs to the pressures of American society. Often a family can be saved, but that requires action. Families need a little help.

With that in mind, Midland County Families-in-Action, Inc. is sponsoring a film series to be aired on local television station KMID over the next two weeks. It's Dr. James Dobson's "Focus on the Family" series which will provide an intensive look at the attack on the family structure now taking place and provide helpful guidance and meaningful follow-up sessions.

The series includes something for everyone by looking at problems every family may encounter from time to time and providing valuable information about how to deal with difficult family situations.

Dr. Dobson, founder and president of Focus on the Family, is a well known teacher and psychologist, having spent 14 years as an associate clinical professor of pediatrics at the University of Southern California School of Medicine and 17 years on the attending staff of Children's Hospital of Los Angeles.

If you're wondering why you should spend a portion of a number of your evenings over the next two weeks taking a crash course in keeping your family together, consider a few facts Dr. Dobson provides: The United States holds a dubious record of having the highest divorce rate in the world. What does that mean? That half of the children born this year will spend some of their growing-up years in a single parent family. In Midland, that translates to about 1,000 youngsters.

Furthermore, Dr. Dobson notes that one in every three children born today will have been conceived by parents who were not married.

And in the next 12 months there will be more than 1½ million abortions in this country.

These are family matters that affect our society. They're also matters that the "Focus on the Family" series deals with in meaningful fashion.

Isn't your family worth a few evenings devoted to watching something other than routine television fare?

Unmasking Canada

Although the United States has been its partner in two World Wars, for most Americans Canada has represented a vague, vast and unclassifiable wilderness which had splendid trout streams and got very cold during the winter.

Circumstances joined with Pierre Trudeau to change all that. During the 15 years that Mr. Trudeau has been a force in the Canadian government, most of that period as premier, the United States became acutely aware of its enormous neighbor and some of its problems.

Mr. Trudeau has frequently raised the hackles of American politicians with what seemed to be ill-tempered and ill-timed criticisms of U.S. policies. But underlying much of the resentment felt here was a quiet confidence that in any serious showdown, the premier could be counted on as a friend.

Now Mr. Trudeau has decided to step down, remaining in office only until a successor is chosen. His decision comes as a surprise for, at the age of 64, he appears a vigorous and seemingly youthful man ready for any political brawl that could erupt.

In many ways, not all of them complimentary, he will be missed by this country. And in his own nation he will be remembered for many accomplishments, one of the more important of which was his keeping the country together in spite of the separatist movement originating in Quebec.

Mr. Trudeau has been a constructive and dedicated official and — to the delight of many of his admirers — a colorful one.

Another View:

General discretion

Ever since he took over the U.S. Southern Command nearly a year ago, Gen. Paul Gorman has raised hackles among Central Americans who suspect him of being involved in a Guatemalan military coup and among U.S. diplomats who have accused him of exceeding his military function by throwing his weight around politically. As the Panama-based commander of all U.S. military forces south of the Rio Grande, Gorman plays a crucial role in coordinating American military support of governments in El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras, and rebel forces fighting the Sandinista regime of Nicaragua.

Until Feb. 23, Gorman had sought to avoid the public limelight, but in a hearing before the Senate Armed Forces Committee, the general uttered some undiplomatic words about Mexico. That country, he told senators, has "the most corrupt government and society in all of Central America." He went on to say that "unless there is a dramatic change, 10 years from now Mexico will be the No. 1 security problem of the United States." Not surprisingly, the reaction from Mexico was swift and angry — and justifiably so.

Gorman's fears may be legitimate, and it is certainly arguable that the degree of corruption in Mexico is massive. What is not arguable is that military officials, particularly in positions as sensitive as Gorman's, are expected to exercise discretion in public, even under questioning from Congress. To criticize a sovereign friendly government — especially in such blunt terms — goes beyond the bounds of propriety and only complicates the task of U.S. diplomacy in Latin America.

Long before his ill-chosen remarks before the Senate committee, Gorman had been accused by American diplomats of acting like Washington's proconsul in Central America, overriding and ignoring resident ambassadors. That may reflect sharp policy differences within the administration and certainly lends credence to the belief among many that President Reagan is interested only in a military solution in the region. That's still no excuse for Gorman's bad public form. He should be told so by those responsible for his actions.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Fed playing 'chicken' with policy

WASHINGTON — Widespread reports that the White House and the Federal Reserve Board are at loggerheads over monetary policy in this election year have been piously denied by administration officials — most recently and authoritatively by President Reagan at his last press conference.

Jack Anderson

But I've seen a political document, intended for top Republican eyes only, that belies this public show of unconcern.

The two-page internal memorandum circulating in the White House shows that the president's campaign strategists are deeply concerned that the Fed could bring on an election-eve recession that could blow the Republicans out of the water in November.

At issue is the arcane but crucial role of the nation's money supply in the economic scenario. The producer-director who dictates how the money supply will play its part — free and easy, or tight and controlled — is Fed chairman Paul Volcker.

The memo warns: "The danger is, quite frankly, that if the Fed were to keep money growth at the bottom of its target range for the rest of the year" (that is, continue to keep the money supply growing slowly) "we could conceivably find ourselves near another recession."

That, of course, could be disastrous for President Reagan and other Republican candidates. If the voters get the uneasy feeling that another recession is coming — and the Democrats can be counted on to encourage this fear — the GOP could lose both the White House and the Senate.

So the president's re-election strategists are understandably worried about Volcker. He's not on either party's ticket, but he could have more control over the election outcome than any candidate.

And right now, the memo warns, Volcker seems to be playing a game with Congress that is politically dangerous — to the Republicans. Volcker is determined to keep a tight rein on the money supply's growth. He figures — probably correctly — that if he loosens up, interest rates would decline, the economic recovery would continue unabated, and Congress would lose whatever political courage it might have to cut the deficit.

So "the Fed is playing a game of 'chicken' with Congress," explains the memo, obtained by my associate Michael Binstein. "The Fed wants deficits reduced very badly. By keeping money growth slow and interest rates high, it hopes to force Congress to act on deficit reduction before it (the Fed) is forced by economic necessity to loosen up on money growth to head off another recession."

The memo then adds ominously: "This is obviously a very dangerous game, since it carries not only the risk that the Fed will wait too long to loosen up, but also the danger that Congress will panic and do something foolish to reduce deficits ... We should not allow Volcker to hold the economy hostage to his political (sic) agenda, even if it is one we basically agree with ..."

What particularly worries the authors of the GOP memo is a well-established fact of economic life: There's always a lag between money growth and economic growth. Thus, the memo warns, "the Fed may wait too long, before acting, to help us politically." That is, low interest rates and a renewed surge in the economy won't do the Republicans any good if they come after Nov. 6.

The one cheering note in the otherwise foreboding memo is a by-no-means-certain assumption that the Fed will "chicken" first if the economy shows further signs of serious flagging this summer. And that might produce "falling interest rates as we move into the election."

But timing is everything in politics, and the White House is afraid Volcker may already have waited too long to recognize the economic danger signals. These Cassandras have been made particularly queasy by the stock market's nerve-racking decline since the first of the year. Though Wall Street can be capricious, it is generally one of the most accurate indicators of future economic growth, up or down.

The White House nail-biters have recent history on their side when they worry about the Fed's slow money growth leading to higher interest rates. In both 1976 and 1980, interest rates rose sharply — and the party in power lost the White House.

Most economists agree on at least one point: Fed credit policies over the next few months will make their heaviest impact just before the election. For this reason, both Republicans and Democrats rather nervously view Volcker as the wild card in the campaign.

Which side will have the economy as a campaign issue thus depends on someone who is independent of both political parties — and that's enough to give professional pols the willies. They remember the impact an outsider had on the 1980 election, and wonder if, politically speaking, Volcker may turn out to be the Ayatollah Khomeini of the 1984 campaign.

Truth to tell, Volcker is not exactly the darling of Capitol Hill. The 6-foot-7-inch banker is disdainful of Congress's efforts to solve complex economic problems while saving its own political hide, and he has made no secret of his contempt. Volcker's patronizing lectures on the danger of deficits have raised many a congressional hackle.

This mutual hostility was evidenced in an unreleased report by the bipartisan Joint Economic Committee, chaired by Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa. The congressional report disparages Volcker's insistence that the zigzag growth of money in recent years — fast, then slow, then fast again — is not the Fed's fault, but is caused by factors beyond its control.

GEORGE F. WILL

Ruling worth a (cautious) cheer

WASHINGTON — The civil-rights landscape is increasingly littered with bent and broken orthodoxies. Consider two Supreme Court rulings, one last year and one last week, concerning the applicability of civil-rights standards to private universities.

George F. Will

Last year in the Bob Jones University case, liberals won a victory but did not notice, or did not care, that they won with an illiberal ruling. Now the Reagan administration has won one of its rare victories in a civil-rights case, establishing a recognizably conservative social policy. But the victory was delivered by a judicial act that should make conservatives uneasy.

Bob Jones University forbids interracial dating and marriage. The issue before the Court was not whether schools practicing such racial discrimination should be denied tax-exempt status: Congress can stipulate denial. The issue was whether the IRS could decide on its own hook who does and does not get tax-exempt status.

The Court ruled that the IRS could make this decision, on which the existence of many institutions and advocacy organizations depends. Furthermore, the IRS could make the decision on its own assessment of whether any particular group's activities are or are not "contrary to public policy." This ruling, licensing a bureaucracy to narrow the range of the pluralism, evoked thunderous applause from liberals.

Now comes the case of Grove City College in Pennsylvania.

Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 prohibits sex discrimination in "any education program receiving Federal financial assistance." It stipulates that failure to comply shall mean termination of assistance "to the particular program, or part thereof" in which noncompliance is found. Grove City accepts no direct federal assistance. It does not even participate in the program whereby federal grants for students are given to the institution, which then selects recipients. It does, however, enroll students who receive grants directly from the federal government.

The Carter administration ruled that enrolling such students made Grove City a "recipient" of federal financial assistance, that the college therefore must file an "assurance of compliance" report concerning Title IX's nondiscrimination provisions, and the assurance must concern — this is the crucial point — the entire institution, from faculty hiring to athletics. (Title IX has been especially important as the lever for increasing spending on women's athletics.) This, Grove City refused to do, not because it discriminates (no one says it does) but because it objects to comprehensive federal involvement in its institutional life.

The Reagan administration sided with Grove City's contention that the notion of a federal-aid "recipient" had been too broadly defined. A divided Supreme Court has agreed, partially.

It disagreed to this extent: It said that even direct grants to students are so important to a college that Title IX applies to Grove City — but only up to a point. Enrollment of federally assisted students does not trigger Title IX scrutiny to the entire institution, but only to the particular program — in this case, the student assistance program. The ruling turns Title IX, as an instrument of litigation, from a machete into a pen knife. This is what has detonated women's groups.

The Court's majority and minority came to diametrically opposed conclusions about Congress' intent in 1972 regarding Title IX's scope. But last fall, the House of Representatives, with an eye on this case, voted 414-8 for a resolution supporting the broad interpretation opposed by Grove City and the Reagan administration.

The administration's position is wise social policy. But in sustaining it, the Court selectively read the ambiguous record of Congress' intent. Certainly Congress' intent in 1972, not 1983, is most important, and the Court should not be pestered with resolutions aimed at a case it is deliberating. Anyway, if Congress wants the law to have a particular sweep, why waste time passing resolutions? Why not change the law to make Congress' intent clear? The women's movement these days gets what it wants from Congress, if what it wants does not cost much money, so Congress probably will amend the law to nullify the Court's ruling.

Even if you are generally reluctant — and the Court is not — to infer Congress' intent from passivity in the face of executive branch action, this is striking: Title IX, and Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act after which Title IX is patterned, now represent 20 years of the broad interpretation that the Court has overturned. Conservatives can cheer the establishment of sensible social policy by the Court. But they must then abstain from loose talk against "judicial activism."

ART BUCHWALD

Barbie's older, but still a doll!

I was terribly shocked to read the other day that Barbie Doll was celebrating her 25th anniversary. You can't call it a birthday because when Barbie was first born she was a full grown lady with a beautiful body and all the curves in the right places. This body required a tremendous amount of clothes to do her justice.

Art Buchwald

I mentioned the anniversary to my daughter who is now 29. "I wonder where Barbie is right now?" I said.

"She's up in the attic," Connie said. "I put her there years ago."

"Well, bring her down and we'll have a birthday party for her."

"How many candles should we put on the cake?" my wife asked.

"Let's assume she was 21 years old when we got her, so she must be 46 by now. Why don't we just put one candle on the cake because she could be sensitive about her age."

That evening we all sat around the table and Connie brought Barbie down.

The years had been very good to her.

"Barbie, you look wonderful. Your skin is just as smooth now as it was 25 years ago," I said.

Barbie blushed. "I use Oil of Olay every day. No one can guess my age."

"So tell us," my wife said. "What's been going on with you since we saw you last? How's Ken?"

"Didn't you hear? Ken and I split 15 years ago."

"I'm sorry to hear that," I said. "What happened?"

"Irreconcilable differences. He said I spent too much money on clothes. I seemed to want a different outfit every week. Every time the charge account bills came in he lost his temper. I guess I was a spoiled brat, but in those days before my consciousness was raised I thought clothes were everything."

"What happened to Ken?"

"He found a doll that was into jeans and tank tops, and married her. They seem very happy, and after the bitterness of the divorce, we're now friends again."

"What did you do?"

"I married a G.I. Joe."

"You're married to a soldier?"

"He was a soldier. He got out of the Army and he's now a defense spare parts contractor. I couldn't afford many outfits when he was in the service. But now that I can buy anything I want to, I just don't seem to be as interested in clothes as I used to be. I might buy something on sale, but I don't have six closets full of the stuff any more."

"Neither do I," Connie said rather bitterly.

"How are the children?" my wife asked.

"They're all out of the nest. George is in computers, Harriet goes to Princeton, and Debbie drives a school bus."

"But what do you do with yourself?" my wife asked.

"I went to law school six years ago. I'm in practice with Covington and Burling. I never dreamed 25 years ago that I would want a career at this stage in life. But what choice does a woman have? You can't stay home all day long doing what you want to or people think you're worthless."

"Do you ever keep in touch with Midge?"

"Poor Midge. I do see her once in a while. She's a buyer in a department store, and she's been living with a guy for ten years, but he says if they get married it will spoil the relationship. I've told her to dump him, but she says it isn't that easy for a 46-year-old woman to find a guy these days."

"Whatever happened to your dream house which cost us $45?" I asked her.

"When Ken and I broke up we sold it for $78.50 It was a big mistake because now it's worth $150."

"How could you know?" my wife said.

"Is there anything you want now that you don't have?"

"I hear Mattel is putting out a jacuzzi this Christmas. But with the hours I have to put in at the law firm, I don't know when I'd get time to use it."

Recent trip to London reveals several optimistic signs

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Editor's Report

Hearst

LONDON — We have not had our usual luck on this visit to my favorite foreign city. We looked forward to a little private chat with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, which we had enjoyed about this time last year. Having met with her on most of our visits to London dating back before she became Britain's first woman prime minister, we had hoped she would greet us again in her cosy, brightly decorated little study where she receives friends on the second floor of No. 10 Downing St., traditional home of British prime ministers.

Alas, we re-learned the hard way what we shouldn't have forgotten — you cannot take a woman for granted.

However, we were consoled by the thought that the uncertain twists of fate created circumstances which made it difficult for Mrs. Thatcher to receive us this week.

FIRST OF ALL, the truck strike in France brought us unexpectedly to London a week ahead of our schedule. More importantly, this turned out to be a particularly busy week for the lovely Iron Lady. She won a showdown with the unions, which threatened a general strike, over her offer of $1,500 to workers in the government communication headquarters to renounce union membership while they work in Britain's most sensitive security center. Her seemingly harsh decision to impose a ban on union membership was brought about by the fact one former worker of the closed shop unionized staff had gotten a 36-year prison sentence for selling secret information to the Soviets. She won a resounding victory when 90 percent of the union workers accepted her offer.

Apart from that and other pressing problems, she had a meeting set this week with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and was preparing for a meeting next Monday with French President Francois Mitterrand. So we soothed out disappointment with the assumption that business had to take precedence over pleasure.

NEVERTHELESS, we did meet with some long-time friends, including Lord Home, former conservative prime minister and highly esteemed elder statesman; Lord Carrington, former foreign secretary who will become NATO's secretary-general this summer, and Lord Lever, a senior cabinet member and financial adviser in the Labor governments of Prime Ministers James Callaghan and Harold Wilson. We also met with some new-found friends, including American Ambassador Charles H. Price, an impressive Kansas City banker, and General Sir John Hackett, World War II hero and former commander of NATO's northern group armies. Air Marshal (Ret.) Peter Wickersham and his family dined with us one evening. He is an old Paris friend of Joe Kingsbury Smith and was formerly commander of Britain's nuclear air force.

Out of our talks came the clear impression that signs of optimism for 1984 are sprouting like the buds of springtime.

WE FOUND much less concern here about the U.S. deficit than exists at home, especially in the media and among the Democrats who are trying to make it a major election issue. Harold Lever, widely recognized as one of Europe's most brilliant financial analysts, told us that America's economy is basically so sound that the deficit in relation to the gross national product is not a cause for grave concern. He believes steps should be taken to gradually reduce the deficit, but not by the imposition of taxes that would stifle business expansion. He favors a sales tax to curb consumer buying as a means of generating increased revenue for the government and averting an inflationary upswing. He is confident the American economic recovery will continue if President Reagan is re-elected whereas he fears a Democratic victory could lead to a resumption of big spending for which Democratic administrations have been noted since the days of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

OTHER OPTIMISTIC signs in London this week were:

— A London Times report that business expansion is spreading from the U.S. to Europe, with Britain and West Germany leading the recovery.

— The Confederation of British Industry reported greater short-term optimism among manufacturers than at any time since before the slump.

— News of Moscow's decision to resume in Vienna on March 16 talks between NATO and Warsaw Pact allies on confidence-building measures and troop reductions in Central Europe, thus proving false dire predictions that deployment of American medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe would bring East-West arms talks to an indefinite standstill.

— Encouraging reports brought back from Moscow by European allied leaders who attended Andropov's funeral. They were impressed by the apparent conciliatory attitude of the new Soviet leader, Konstantin Chernenko, toward the U.S., despite President Reagan's strong condemnation of the Soviet regime and the American defense build-up program.

— Belief of such astute observers as Lord Home and Lord Carrington that the Soviets will resume the medium-range and strategic nuclear missile negotiations with the U.S., though perhaps not until after the American presidential elections.

— The fact that all the Socialist-led governments of Western Europe — in France, Italy, Spain, Greece and Portugal — support the NATO alliance.

— Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's victory in the Oxford Union debate this week with E.P. Thompson, rabidly anti-American leader of the European nuclear disarmament movement. The issue was whether there is "no moral difference between the foreign policies of the U.S. and the U.S.S.R." Mr. Weinberger told us afterward that he was strongly advised against participating in the debate, adding "half way through it I wished I had taken the advice." However, declaring that what is at stake is "freedom — personal, human freedom," and that what the U.S. does is "based on the consent of the governed," he won the support of the British undergraduates by 271 to 240.

— The conviction of Lord Home, Gen. Hackett and others that the Soviet government will not deliberately precipitate nuclear war with the U.S. because its leaders know Russia would also be destroyed.

All told, there was an air of optimism in London this week that I don't always feel at home after watching the evening TV news programs.

SPEAKING OUT

Teacher recalls what 'went right' in class

Ronald A. Britton, president of Britton Management Corp., has lived in Midland since 1957. Currently he is serving his second term on the Midland Independent School District board and is vice-president.

BY RONALD A. BRITTON

Twenty years ago, a lady by the name of Joanne Sullivan assumed the title of teacher and began learning what the art was all about. The following is an excerpt from a talk she gave last year that I would like to share with you.

"What 'went right' to bring me to and keep me in the classroom all these years? Let me begin by saying that I have an immense respect for good teachers. I have within me a very clear sense of the uninterrupted passage of all the myriad parts of human knowledge from generation to generation, from century to century, from age to age through an unbroken line of teachers.

"Among the greatest of scholars in my particular field in modern times was a German prodigious erudition named Wilamowitz-Moellendorff. One amazing day in graduate school I realized that I was heir to his brilliant classical mind not merely through the printed word, but through my own professor, an elderly walking encyclopedia who had himself sat at the feet of that giant intellect and was now passing on to me what he had learned from his teacher. That sort of sequence has gone on in every field from time immemorial, and I am moved to think that I am even an infinitesimal part of such a tradition of learning and relearning, teaching and reteaching.

"SOMEBODY taught Petrarch Latin; somebody taught Thomas More Latin; somebody taught John Milton Latin. But even if there were no Petrarchs, no Mores, no Miltons, all that teaching would not have been in vain. Teachers strive to pass on knowledge. If they succeed, there is no diminution in the totality of human intellectual achievement, and if their students should happen to extend that knowledge even further and in some way even magnify human endeavor, why then the process is all the more worthwhile.

"The second reason I feel privileged to be a teacher is because I stand in immense awe of the human mind and the power of the human intellect. As a teacher my daily effort is to develop and refine in subtle ways the various capacities of that incredible phenomenon, human intelligence. As a Latinist I do not really teach a language, you see, an active means of communicating with persons speaking other tongues. I simply use the medium of a language, beautiful and expressive though it may have been in its own right, to develop my students' powers of memory, differentiation, precision, reasoning, problem-solving. In short, I train minds how to think, and I consider that responsibility one of the greatest honors a person can receive. I am grateful to this school for having the confidence to trust me with such important work.

"NOW I have talked quite a bit about the human intellect and the tradition of knowledge through the ages, but the satisfaction and pride I have in being associated with such things are still not the most personally meaningful reasons for my remaining a teacher. Such things, I say, give satisfaction, they give pride, but they do not of themselves give the joy of teaching. The reason is found in a tiny dialogue I have often found useful to contemplate. It goes as follows: 'And what is more important than the life of the intellect?' asked the mind. "'Caring,' replied the heart. There is the key to what holds me in this teaching game year after year — the fact that teaching both allows and requires me to care about my students.

"In order to teach successfully I've got to know my students, care about their ups and downs, be interested in their idiosyncracies, and be aware of them as individuals inasmuch as they will let me. To some degree each student becomes a part of my life and enlivens and enriches it much more than I can enrich his or hers. I have furnished my mind with all sorts of lore by learning, but through teaching I have come to know something more valuable still, what it means to know another person by sharing in his tragedies and triumphs up close or even from a distance.

"MY TEACHING time, then has two great values for me. I am constantly traveling in the byways of thought and knowledge, and more important, I share that splendid journey with young people for whom I feel a real affection. I wouldn't exchange it for any profession in the world."

Teaching is truly a rewarding and challenging field. We should all be glad for what "went right" to keep the many outstanding educators in our MISD school system.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Pulling together

To the Editor:

For the last few weeks I've been seeing and hearing bits and pieces of news locally indicating our two great sister cities, Midland and Odessa, were pulling closer together and helping each other to pull through our recent economic crisis, etc.

I was so excited to see in this past weekend's Midland paper, Feb. 26, the honorable Mayor Bob Bryant of Odessa and the honorable Thane Akins of Midland in a firm and friendly handshake, willing and wanting to bring their cities together.

I think as citizens of both towns we should support them in every way possible. I suppose since I have lived in both cities for a total of 28 years and developed businesses in both, still have businesses in Odessa and wouldn't live in any other metroplex area, I can objectively and fairly speak. I know you hear a lot about blue collar and white collar, and there is a lot of truth in that, but, so what?

When you get right down to it there is probably some of both in each of us in each city. However, I feel the thing in making this the great area it has the potential of being, is that if both cities are pulling together in harmony and good feelings toward each other it will be recognized by people from all over; they will see the results and want to be a part of the two towns. We won't have to advertise in national papers and magazines and run the risk of pulling in undesirables, but will automatically be drawing in the people that are interested in coming in and sharing and helping make this great area even better.

I can't think of a more fitting way to consummate a mutual commitment between the two cities than for representatives of each city, and any or all citizens, to meet at the Midland/Ector county line on the new Highway 191 between Midland and Odessa and celebrate not only the linking of the two cities together by the new highway, but also by both towns' citizens' commitment and handshakes to make this metroplex and petroplex the great area it could and should be.

I know our two mayors have the integrity, foresight and courage to make this happen, with our support. My hat is certainly off to each mayor; to them I say, "Keep up the good work and stay the course."

Refreshing plaza

To the Editor:

It was refreshing to read on page one of "Centennial Plaza." The Midland Jaycees have a commendable vision of extraordinary service to our city.

Mr. Walter Pate AIA is remarkably sensitive to these visions, including designs of fantasy and reality into perspective, eliminating inaccessability for all of Midland's ambulatory residents.

Not only the Midland Jaycees and Walter Pate's creativity are concerned. They have, by design, opened the way for a continuum of local talent to present itself before the public in the amphitheatre.

A lunch in the park, looking at diversions of landscape, a waterfall, visiting with a friend, could promote the necessary resilience to bounce back and share the next computerized responsibility.

And last — yet most important — to the anonymous donor; thank you for helping the dream of an architect egress toward becoming the reality of craftsmanship.

Tax penalties

To the Editor:

Something has occurred for the second year in a row that has me puzzled. I wonder how many other Midlanders received a delinquent tax notice from the Midland County Appraisal District this week, and were very upset with the fact that penalty and interest charges were made even though this was the first such notice they had received for taxes being due.

What is even more puzzling is that in our small office of 12 employees, three of us received a delinquent tax statement which also happened to be the first statement we had received. Last February our firm received a delinquent tax notice, again the first notice received for the amount due. We called the appraisal district and were told that even if we do not receive a notice, it is our responsibility to pay our taxes, and yes, you must pay the penalty and interest.

It almost seems as if the appraisal district is short some funds somewhere and must make it up in penalties and interest to the taxpayers of Midland County, conveniently losing some of the first tax notices, and conveniently waiting until February when penalties and interest can be added for non-payment before again notifying property owners.

With so many different kinds of taxes being levied for so many different things and at so many different rates, how are we to know the amount of taxes due if we are not sent a tax statement? Are we to line up around Dellwood Mall every November to render our taxes?

This could conveniently be blamed on the postal service, but that excuse gets old. After talking with Ron Stegall this morning at the appraisal office, I found out that 12,000 delinquent tax notices were mailed this week to Midland County residents. Did you get your first notice of taxes due in the form of a delinquent statement this week?

Old enough

To the Editor:

We all seem to take note of how "old" President Reagan is. Maybe we should take a real close look at just how "old" that man really is.

He's old enough:

— To know that playing politics will not cure the ills of this country.

— Not to be intimidated by dictators, special interest groups or congressmen.

— To be unafraid of being honest with the American public.

— To look the Soviets in the eye and not blink as he hustles them out of a slick deal they had going in Grenada.

— To realize the futility of war but is not afraid of using enough force when necessary to get a job done.

— To have compassion when compassion is due without catering to whining liberals.

— To exhibit restraint and retaliate with words when it would have been easy and acceptable to retaliate with bombs.

— To take a kick in the pants of foreign affairs and gracefully turn around and say, "Thanks I needed that," then convince us that we now have a new and better position to work from.

I have never seen a man in politics like Mr. Reagan who, in such a short time, has restored the faith in most people of this government's ability to continue to govern these United States of America. Perhaps Papa Reagan does have the right answers for more of our country's ills.

Personally, I don't think he's old, after all I'm 41 — almost his age, and I'm not old. Age is a state-of-mind, any fool can get old, the smart ones never get old.

1984 year of political 'happenings' — just ask Mondale

Bill Modisett

This is the year for political "happenings." If you don't believe me, just ask Walter Mondale.

If you read a variety of newspapers from different areas, you'll soon realize columnists are fond of tackling political issues — and candidates — on their opinion pages. Everyone has an opinion. Right or wrong.

They'll speculate that this candidate or that one has the "edge" in this election because...

Well, I'm not immune to speculation so here are my personal thoughts concerning the presidential race. Ronald Reagan will be re-elected by a comfortable margin.

Reagan has no competition and appears in astoundingly good health for his 73 years. His "laid back" leadership style has rallied the American people behind his cause and that's significant because none of the Democratic hopefuls is offering a viable alternative.

But somebody has to be nominated and I think that person probably will be Walter Mondale. The Democratic ranks are in search of a cause or a personality or a combination of the two now, but even months down the political road I don't believe they'll be able to offer a political option that will make the American public willing to chuck Reagan. He's simply the individual who, at this time in this nation's history, is offering what the nation needs — a conservative shift.

There is one certainty, of course. Regardless of who is elected as the next president, John Byner will ridicule him.

D-FW Airport is a marvelous place; it really makes one appreciate Midland Regional.

What's really great about D-FW is the way the various terminals are so well marked. Signs are everywhere, literally.

Not only do the signs tell a lost air traveler that he's lost, they tell him again, and again, and again...

Recently, I attended a conference for editorial writers at Denton and — lo and behold — guess what those writers tell me their readers complain most about in their communities: Potholes.

Those little missing chunks of crumbling infrastructure probably have been responsible for getting more mayors and council members elected (and un-elected) than any other issue.

And, I mean, why not? They multiply faster than rabbits and are harder to get rid of than this year's strain of the flu.

One of the editorial writers from the Mid-cities area was telling about their version of potholes. He says he's seen potholes in his community so deep they've considered starting mule excursions to the bottom of them to increase tourist traffic.

When I flew back into Midland I expected to find our problem less serious than his.

On the way to my house I was jolted back to my senses.

Seriously, though, the Democratic Party needs an issue to make their candidates electable and all the information I'm seeing indicates potholes are close to taking over the entire country. The streets, at least.

Why not — you guessed it — have one of the really dynamic Democratic hopefuls like Mondale or maybe even Gary Hart jump on the pothole bandwagon and offer a real alternative: A pothole deficit.

Think of all the WPA-type jobs that could be created to help the jobless and of all the good will it would create nationwide to fill in all those potholes!

Boy, if only that issue had (no pun intended) surfaced sooner Alan Cranston might have had a chance.

ENTERTAINMENT

By BEULAH CASEY

"The Right Stuff," based on the 1979 best-selling book by Tom Wolfe, and written and directed by Phillip Kaufman, is about that quintessential element that sets some men apart.

Exactly what is this quality?

It's elusive and not easily defined, but in "The Right Stuff," phrases like "they pushed the outside of the envelope" and "punched a hole in the sky" suggest it has in it something of the limitlessness of the sky — the indomitability of the human spirit.

Coined by Wolfe to describe the fierce-flying few who made aviation history as test pilots (and some later as the seven Mercury astronauts), the "right stuff" is one phrase this movie seeks to glorify and does.

They all had it — the granddaddy of them all, Chuck Yeager, the first pilot to break the sound barrier; Alan Shepard, the first American to take that wild rocket-propelled ride into outer space; John Glenn, the now senator from Ohio (and at this writing, presidential candidate) and first American to orbit the earth, and all the rest.

BUT WHAT OF those daring young men in their flying machines who stopped short of being "righteous"?

They are now buried six feet under the parched California desert near Edwards Air Force Base — just down the road from where their pictures once hung on the wall of the local jet-jock haunt, Poncho's Happy Bottom Riding Club.

"The Right Stuff" is the bigger-than-life portrait of this unique breed of man, from the vainglorious Gordon Cooper (Dennis Quaid) to the gum-chewing understatement of Chuck Yeager (Sam Shepard). Astronauts and test pilots, their stories are set in tandem, based loosely on fact and overblown with the recollection of memory and Hollywood's hand.

But oh, what fun there is in the telling!

"The Right Stuff" is thrilling, funny, uplifting and grand with patriotism. It takes you back to when people weren't media-wise and still sought their privacy, to when wives, dressed in "Jackie" pill boxes and white gloves, were the epitome of self-sacrifice, and children didn't speak until spoken to.

YET, IN ALL the enthusiasm there is tendency to show a few faces out of history unfavorably, like then Vice President Lyndon Johnson.

A cowboy hat atop his head, the future chief executive hounds Annie Glenn for an audience before Glenn's momentous space flight. And when she refuses, Johnson sulks and pounds the inside of his limo. Also tarnished is the reputation of astronaut Gus Grissom (victim of a 1967 launching pad fire), who successfully splashed down in the second manned flight. He is portrayed here as perhaps having blown the hatch of the spacecraft, thereby causing it to fill with water and sink, with valuable research material aboard.

It's an over-zealous application of fancified history but we're brought back to earth with portraits like Shepard's Yeager. Played in typical Shepard style — close to the vest, tight-lipped and brooding — Yeager all but dominates "The Right Stuff," content to stay out of the limelight and break aviation records without fanfare.

Meanwhile, Quaid, boasting and jocular as Cooper, enlivens the Mercury team and is a stark contrast to Yeager's way of coping with "the demon in the sky." A pilot in real life, Quaid took up flying to become more convincing as Cooper and gives his best performance yet ("Breaking Away," "Long Riders," and "Tough Enough").

BUT THERE really isn't a weak link in the casting, some of which is done to physical type — from Fred Ward as Gus Grissom, defined by a lone, lude phrase; Scott Paulin as Deke Slayton, who could string together all the right phrases; Charles Frank as Scott Carpenter, the philosopher; the phenomenal performance of Ed Harris as John Glenn, the "100 percent" man; and Lance Henriksen as Walter Shirra, the low-profile astronaut, to the wonderfully wacky performance of Scott Glenn as Alan Shepard, the "Jose Jimenez" wise-guy.

Even Brigadier General Charles "Chuck" Yeager, now retired from active duty, puts in an appearance as a slow-talkin', slow-walkin' bartender at Poncho's.

With other talents that include Kim Stanley as Poncho's proprietor, and Barbara Hershey as Glennis Yeager, the superlatives just keep coming, so that from the first minute to the last, some three hours later, "The Right Stuff" is absorbing and entertaining.

Oscar-winning photographer Caleb Deshanel once again proves himself to be in a class alone and possessing of whatever "right stuff" his profession boasts. John Barry adds a musical score that is nothing short of inspiring.

Rated PG, "The Right Stuff" is an epic movie of awesome proportions that is sure to appeal to those who remember the early flights of the Mercury astronauts and trials of the experimental jets. But will it appeal to kids brought up on the space shuttle and countdowns?

Early returns say no.

Nevertheless, this slice of history, however tampered with, is worth your money — for the special flying effects (at times overdone for the non-pilot viewer), for the saga of the pioneers of space, and for a greater understanding of that elusive quality called "the right stuff."

Animator helps others find 'Dragon's Lair'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Animator Don Bluth says he's not very good at blasting evil space ships or guiding star cruisers to the rescue in the video cosmos.

In fact, he says, "whenever I want to feel demoralized, I go play video games."

Nevertheless, Bluth, a former animator for Walt Disney and the independent maker of "The Secret of NIMH," is revolutionizing the video game business. His first video game, "Dragon's Lair," rewrote the rules.

His newest game is "Space Ace," a sophisticated, animated video game in which players guide the hero through a full range of maneuvers.

"Dragon's Lair" has grossed more than $32 million and a home version of the game is underway.

Doors dictate change in ballet's program

A Review

By GEORGIA TEMPLE

The need for a performing arts center in Midland became apparent last week when difficulties arose for two professional performing troupes that staged productions here.

Texas Opera Theatre's production was not what it could have been in a house with proper acoustics, but the organization was able to stage the planned production of "Madame Butterfly."

Such was not the case when Ballet El Paso (sponsored locally by Permian Civic Ballet Association) arrived Thursday for Friday's performance. The sets for "La Fille Mal Gardee" would not fit through the doors of Lee High School. "Red, White and Blue," commissioned for the July 4th celebration at El Paso's amphitheatre in 1980, was substituted and new programs printed by 8 p.m. Friday.

Perhaps it is sufficient to say of "Red, White and Blue" that it's a shame the sets were too large for the doors. For Sousa lovers the music (canned) is a treat. The three-color costumes are the bright spot in an otherwise drab dance. It borders on the ludicrous — all that saluting.

The other dance performed by Ballet El Paso was the two-act "Carmina Burana." Choreographed by James Clouser, this ballet is danced to composer Carl Orff's bawdy "Carmina Burana."

Orff's composition is orchestrated from an anonymous manuscript discovered in the monastery of Benediktbeuren, near the Kochelsee in Upper Bavaria in 1803. This manuscript consists of pieces by 12th and 13th century wandering students — lyricists writing in Latin, Middle-High German and Old French — who were evidently brimming over with youthful anger, extremely earthly desires, determination to accept the challenges of life and delight in parody.

Orff's "Carmina Burana," is subtitled "Cantiones profanae." Profane is used in the sense that was common during the Middle Ages, when there were only two kinds of music, sacred and profane. It is not a major work, but a popular one due to its melodramatic style.

The ballet is not likely to achieve the popularity of the score to which it is danced. To choreograph what is essentially a rather lightweight and at times nonsensical musical score can only be at best a diversion, and at worst a wretched excess.

The company did a competent and workmanlike job of dancing this diversion. It was an enjoyable evening.

Texas Opera Theatre skillfully enacts tale of betrayal

By GEORGIA TEMPLE

A Review

Sharpless warns Pinkerton "not to break such fragile wings." Pinkerton's enormous, shackling ego deafens him to all but the sound of his own voice. With his view of life tunneled to a self kaleidoscope, he sets into action the tragic tale of "Madame Butterfly."

Written by Giacomo Puccini in 1904, this opera is based on a David Belasco play taken from the short story "Madame Butterfly" written in 1898 by John Luther Long. The opera details what consequences can arise from an uneducated, cavalier attitude toward another culture.

Texas Opera Theatre, brought to Midland Tuesday by Midland Opera Theatre, skillfully enacts Puccini's tale of betrayal.

In the opening scene, U.S. Navy Lt. B.F. Pinkerton yearns for Cio Cio San, a geisha known as Madame Butterfly. His attitude about her becomes clear when he talks of the game he's playing — a carefree sailor roaming the world in search of pleasure.

Brushing aside American counsel Sharpless' advice that she may have a longer term in view, Pinkerton explains that one day he will wed a "real" American wife. For now, he will undergo a marriage ceremony with her — a 999-year contract, subject to monthly renewal. His references to 15-year-old Cio Cio San as "that precious child" and "that magical child with eyes of enchantment, now you are mine completely," further seal her fate.

After he is gone, she remains true to him. Act II opens with her still watching for his ship to set port in the harbor three years later. Sharpless comes to tell her of Pinkerton's marriage but can't when he senses her devotion and sees their child.

In TOT's production, by the time Pinkerton returns in Act III, the audience finds him and his actions despicable, and his "real" American wife, Kate, is suspect, too. After his laughing comment in Act I about the Japanese paper house he has rented, it seems most fitting that when Pinkerton (James Schwisow) and Kate (Jane Olian) are on stage in Act III, they look more like paper cartoons than people.

When soprano Stephanie Conte as Madame Butterfly walks across the bridge in Act I, this reviewer's initial reaction was a negative one. Her profile is too angular to be Japanese, and her face is not that of a 15 year old. The thought was that, "She'll never pull this off." But she did. By Act III, she has the audience totally entranced.

Perhaps the most moving scene occurs when she sees Pinkerton's ship dock (Act II) and stands by the door all night long waiting patiently for his return. Waiting with her are their child (played by a daughter of one of the TOT musicians) and her loyal servant Suzuki (Rose Benedetto).

Her mannerisms and movements are graceful yet firm. Her command can be felt when she stops Kate's approach by simply putting her arm up and out. Words aren't necessary.

The Texas Opera Theatre Orchestra played a beautiful, but not always complementary, performance. Even though this opera is sung in English, most of it could not be understood. Although the singers' voices were professional quality, they did not project as seasoned performers' would. And, at times, they could not be heard at all.

When asked about the balance difficulty between the orchestra and singers, George Glander, the company manager, said: "It's hard to play that (the music for Act I) and hit all the notes and play it softly. Even the Houston Grand Opera has that problem with it. It's something we have to adjust to every night, in every house, because every theater is different."

This reviewer suggests to TOT, a professional touring company, that the problem is the opera company's, not the audience's. Since it is a known factor, adjustments can be made before the curtain goes up on Act I by building in time for a run-through before curtain time and knowing in advance the important particulars about each house. TOT has played Midland High School before and should know there is no carpet in the pit. Yet Glander mentioned the lack of carpeting as part of the problem.

It is to the cast's credit that the players were able to tell the story so effectively through their actions. (The thundering applause for Madame Butterfly dramatically drops when Kate takes her curtain call next.)

The sets with their delicate, fragile look add to the overall effect of the production. The moonlight on the bridge gives Madame Butterfly and Pinkerton's closing scene in Act I an ethereal appearance.

Personal perspective

Dr. David Burkett brushes up against emergencies often. This time, it was too close.

Trauma 'hits home' when doctor's son stricken

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

David Burkett

When Dr. David Burkett received a call at 3:30 a.m. Feb. 11 from a neurologist treating his son, dealing with emergencies wasn't a new experience for him.

But this time, he, the emergency medicine specialist, was on the other side.

On duty in Midland Memorial Hospital's emergency room, Burkett's routine had pumped along as usual on a late Friday-early Saturday shift. He was checking a patient's chart when the phone call came, shattering any chance of what crazy continuity the career he chose might have held that early morning.

The San Antonio pediatric neurologist told Burkett his 15-year-old son David was in the intensive care unit at Memorial Hospital. He had been diagnosed as having Reye's syndrome, a rare and often fatal disease. Normally, it strikes victims between the ages of 2 and 16 and most commonly between the ages of 2 and 6.

As the neurologist went over the procedures that led to his opinion, outlining his confidence in the dismal diagnosis, Burkett's mind went back to his days as a physician at the Wilford Hall USAF Medical Center in San Antonio. Four of his adult patients had been clinically diagnosed with Reye's syndrome.

They all died.

"ALL HE NEEDED to do was say Reye's," Burkett said. "I broke up out there. I just started to cry. I came apart."

He was forced to treat three more emergency patients before another doctor came in to relieve him. By 5 a.m., he was on the road to San Antonio.

He arrived at 10 a.m. Saturday.

The recovery of his son has been called "miraculous." The nigh school sophomore had contracted the flu about five days before he was admitted to the emergency room at Methodist Hospital in San Antonio. A lot happened between the first day he missed school and his arrival at the hospital.

Reye's syndrome usually hits after a case of the flu, chicken pox or other viral illnesses or infections. The brain swells abnormally with fluid, blood sugar levels lower and the liver often quits functioning.

The relationship between the common viral infections and the pathologic changes in the brain and liver are not known, but studies show it may be linked to the dispensing of aspirin.

According to Burkett, David, who came down with the flu Feb. 6, was suffering mostly from gastrointestinal problems, such as nausea, diarrhea and dehydration.

Four days later, however, he began "having subtle neurological signs, such as problems or difficulty with coordination, he couldn't hear out of one ear, his speech was slurred and his vision was blurred," Burkett said.

David also had a high respiratory rate. He was breathing rapidly because more pressure was being placed on the brain as it swelled.

Alarmed, David's mother, Bonnie Burkett, took him to a minor emergency clinic where he was misdiagnosed as having a severe case of the flu and antibiotics were prescribed.

"I WAS UPSET," Burkett said, "not so much that they misdiagnosed him at the minor emergency clinic but that didn't realize the severity of the kid's illness. The key to Reye's syndrome is to recognize it as quickly as possible. The longer you let the brain swell, the more likely you are to die."

Barclay sees Basin from its good sides

By LAWRENCE BUDD

Winston Barclay has wielded a gavel in the interest of Midland and Odessa. As former president of both chambers of commerce, Barclay has been a part of efforts to strengthen the cities' economies.

Civic pride radiates from natives of Midland and Odessa.

The Midlander will talk about Midland being "the brains of the Permian Basin," while the Odessan stresses that the labor that turned the profits came from Odessa.

Few can talk about the virtues of both.

Winston Barclay can. He has lived in and worked for the betterment of both communities since coming to the area in 1950.

Not only has he lived and worked in both towns, Barclay has played major roles in helping the two climb out of recessionary times similar to today's.

As Odessa Chamber of Commerce president in 1964, he spearheaded efforts that led to the Odessa Industrial Development Corporation. Businesses along Interstate 20 in this industrial park were drawn to the area by the efforts of the industrial foundation formed by the chamber.

In 1971, Barclay — now living in Midland after a transfer with Texas Electric Service Co. — helped create the Midland Industrial Foundation which sprouted an industrial park and businesses during this down period in the oil industry.

"The towns complement each other from an industrial standpoint," said Barclay, "They both have their assets and drawbacks."

When a business moved to Midland, it meant more commerce for the entire area. Employees lived in both cities and spent their wages in either town's stores. The same was true for new businesses in Odessa.

Companies were drawn to the area by the cities' organized efforts. With the entire country to chose from, expansion plans included Midland/Odessa because of the combined pluses of the two towns; any hostilities detracted from the area's attraction.

"When you get a chance to compete, you better get together and compete," said Barclay.

The current economic situation, complicated by commercial and residential overbuilding, has left the Petroplex with a tough task. "We're going to have to play catch up here," he said.

The area does have nearly one quarter of the nation's oil and natural gas reserves on which to draw. As long as natural gas and gasoline are major energy sources, Midland and Odessa can figure on some level of prosperity.

In 1957, still riding the post-World War II boom, 515 oil rigs were pumping crude in the Permian Basin. The number of rigs decreased to 224 in 1964 and still further to 124 in 1971, before a gradual upsurge to 363 in 1983.

As oil goes, so do Petroplex fortunes.

Diversification efforts are under way. Talk has the complexion of the Permian Basin's industry changing.

Barclay, while supporting diversification, suggested the cities first look at oil-related spin-off businesses.

"Why let it go somewhere else?" he asked. "The competition for diversification today is just as competitive."

One key to attracting businesses is offering them the set of conditions they are seeking, whether it be a large labor force, a specific natural resource or natural surroundings for workers to enjoy in their free time.

"You must figure out what you have to sell with the talents you have," said Barclay.

Along with the natural resource, the area has drawn the expertise to pull the crude from the earth. After years of oil business, the area is well prepared for oil-related activities.

Barclay noted that past efforts to woo businesses included measurement of the area's ability to attract other types of industry. "These communities were not all that able to compete," he said.

Businesses like Levi Strauss failed because of a lack of a labor force to man their assembly lines, said Barclay. Texas does not subsidize businesses bringing their operations to the state, as is done in other parts of the country.

When businesses visited West Texas, they usually looked at Midland and Odessa. While this fueled competition between the two cities, any industrial addition to the Petroplex meant commerce for everyone.

"It's an asset for both towns," he said.

"There are things we both want," said Barclay. "There are certain issues you are not going to agree on."

Noting the court system is in place to settle such disagreements, Barclay said, "That shouldn't keep us from agreeing on other things.

"Some of the other things that would be naturally beneficial have some barriers," he said, suggesting putting aside these differences for the mutual benefit of the cities.

Barclay called for cooperation as a way to bring around the economy. "Major industry is not doing a lot of expansion," he said. "It (cooperation) is probably more important now than it's ever been."

Judge's love for drunks drawn from experience

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Ahders

When William Bray "Bill" Ahders goes to heaven, he'd like to pass though Ireland again and even take Eire along with him if he could. He'd also take his golf clubs and a bunch of drunks with him.

He loves them all — golf, drunks and anything Irish.

"Next time, when I come back, I'll be Irish. Irish have more fun," Ahders said with the smile of a mischievous leprechaun in a roomful of nickels — his favorite coin.

Ahders, a retired Federal Bureau of Investigation special agent and formerly Midland's Municipal Court judge, is Midland County judge. His penchant is for helping people, especially drunks, whether or not they are alcoholics.

"He's a deeply concerned, compassionate, realistic Christian who wants to help," said the Rev. Joseph H. "Buddy" Schley Jr., president of the Midland Council on Alcoholism and rector of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church.

Ahders serves on the council. And in his role as county judge and former role of city judge, he has tried to understand and help untold people who are beset by alcohol-related problems.

"For his job at this point in Midland's life," said Schley, "he's probably the ideal judge. It's a nice coincidence. In fact, I'd even call it one of God's coincidences."

Ahders, 68, became involved in alcoholism during his tenure (1968-78) as city judge, a position he accepted following his 26-year career as an FBI agent.

It was a sober drunk, Jim J., who got the judge's interest going in alcoholics.

"'You certainly have a lot of drunks (in court) every Monday morning,'" the judge said Jim J. had observed.

"'Yes,'" Ahders said he replied, "'It's rather disgusting. They keep coming back again and again. It's just an endless cycle.'"

Ahders said Jim J. admitted he was an alcholic.

"'Let me tell you,'" Jim J. had confided, "'I'm just the same as those people (drunks in city jail).'"

"He was a respectable businessman," the judge said.

With the counsel of Jim J. and the consent of the Midland City Council, Ahders worked out a system "to help people suffering from the illness of alcoholism."

"'We're not depriving them of anything,'" Ahders said he had told the City Council. "'We're giving them a break.'"

"The city wouldn't be out anything," Ahders said. The people (drunks) don't pay their fines anyway; they lay them out. And the city has to pay for their bread and beans."

Instead of fining those drunks who admitted they had a drinking problem, he'd "sentence" them to Alcoholics Anonymous meetings three nights a week for three months.

If they made the meetings, preferably in a sober condition, the judge would "forgive the fine."

GARY OTT

What's the musical message behind those awards?

This is that exciting time of the year when music awards dominate the television airwaves.

Unfortunately, I don't care for (or understand) Michael Jackson, Boy George or The Police, and as a result, usually find myself left out in the cold when the ceremonies take place. This sense of isolation, I am told, is not unlike being a liberal Democrat in Midland, but that's a different story altogether.

We're talking music here. Or, more specifically, how the music industry decided to move in new directions without bothering to inform me. Consquently, I'm lost.

When the awards are handed out, not only do I disagree with the winners but generally have never even heard of the nominees. I feel like I'm watching the Foreign Films category of the Academy Awards. The new groups could be singing in Latin as far as I know. Or care.

One reason my interest in music has waned of late is because the new performers don't dress properly. Musicians should never (and I emphasize never) have glitter on their clothes. If Wayne Newton and Porter Waggoner want to resemble a flashing marquee that's one thing, but others should keep to basics. Jeans, tennis shoes and T-shirts do nicely.

Another thing: Dancing on stage should be kept to a minimum and I don't care if Michael Jackson does have the happiest feet this side of Fred Astaire. In the good 'ol days, dancing was limited to Mick Jagger, who would on occasion jump up and down for no apparent reason. This peculiar behavior was accepted because, well, because he was Mick Jagger, I suppose. Otherwise, it was not done.

Indeed, it is my fascination with the good 'ol days that keeps me from accepting today's music. If it wasn't done at Woodstock, then it shouldn't be done today. It's that simple.

During that era, the '60s and early '70s, music had a message. It could be Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young decrying the Kent State shootings or Bob Dylan warning of our changing times. But, in any case, the lyrics had meaning. Maybe you disagreed with the message, but at least a statement was being made.

And the best part was the musicians managed to make their point without dying their hair purple or wearing safety pins in their ears.

True, they dressed and behaved in a manner many found offensive, but somehow it didn't seem to have the overall violent tone that today's movement possesses. They sang about a better world, but at the same time, maintained a sense of humor.

Today's generation has lost that ability to laugh, especially at itself.

I've been told my assessment of the situation is way off base, that music today does have a message. It's just been updated and fine-tuned for today's realities. Indeed, many contend that what we are witnessing in the music industry today is merely the end result of what began in the '60s, that today's performers are using shock treatment to make their point just as their predecessors did 15 or 20 years ago. And, as some have suggested, it is possible I'm being hypocritical for praising one phase while denouncing the other.

Perhaps. But as my grandfather was fond of saying, "The good Lord does not look favorably upon this kind of noise. The end is surely near."

I tend to agree.

Gary Ott is city editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Emergencies nothing new...until son stricken

From that point on, David has no recollection of events.

He doesn't remember going with his mother to a drugstore to get the prescription filled. He doesn't remember stumbling back to the car because he was dizzy. He doesn't remember that, although the window was down and the car unlocked, he couldn't figure out how to open the car door.

"In about another two hours, he had passed out upstairs in his bedroom," his father said. "He only could be aroused if you shook him."

And then came the alarming symptoms of listlessness, delirium and confusion associated with Reye's syndrome, encephalitis and meningitis.

He was found laying on the floor in his vomit, a sign of cranial disorders, Burkett said.

IN A DELIRIOUS state, he began fighting off his mother and some friends at the house. They finally were able to pull him into a car and take him to Memorial Hospital's emergency room.

Within 20 minutes, he was unconscious.

A CT scan revealed a swollen brain. His blood ammonia level was high; he was showing elevated enzyme levels and signs of liver disfunction.

Correct diagnosis was essential. If he were diagnosed as having meningitis, he would need a lumbar puncture. This involves inserting a hollow needle between the third and fourth vertebrae to obtain spinal fluid for examination, to relieve intracranial pressure or remove blood and pus.

If a lumbar puncture is performed on a Reye's syndrome patient, it will kill him.

"If you stick a needle into any part of the central nervous system, it's like opening a port for pressure to go out. The cerebral cortex would herniate (or push) down on the brain stem, which is what regulates the respiratory center," Burkett explained.

The correct diagnosis was made in two hours and a Richardson nail was drilled shallowly into the boy's head to monitor cranial pressure. Because there is no cure for Reye's syndrome, only the symptoms can be treated. Lasix, Mannitol and Decadron, a steroid which reduces brain swelling, were administered intravenously.

THE CHANCE OF death is based on how long the pressure stays up and how high it is, said Burkett.

Comas are measured on a scale of 1 to 5. "The closer to 5, the closer you are to dying," Burkett said. "David hit 4."

When Burkett arrived at his son's side, he said the boy was on life-support machines. "But if you can be kept alive from anywhere between 72 hours and five days, you have a chance of recovering. That's not to say it will be a perfect recovery. There may be some stuff that's wiped out.

"He turned the corner in about 40 hours," Burkett said. "He came out of the coma then. I could tell he started to respond to pain because I could twist the skin on his arm and he'd withdraw."

About 10:30 a.m. Monday, Feb. 13, Burkett shouted at his son. "He wrinkled his face." About 6:30 p.m., David pulled the respiratory tube out.

"ONCE HE GOT that out, he tried to talk to me.

"When he finally got to the point where he could talk on Tuesday, he had no recollection of what had happened. The last thing he remembered was going to the minor emergency clinic."

According to Burkett, Reye's syndrome was first described in 1973. At that time, the mortality rate was 90-100 percent.

Ten years later, the rate had dropped to 20 percent.

David was hospitalized for 10 days.

"Today, he's back playing soccer and doing excellent in school," his dad said, smiling. Psychological tests will be performed to see if his brush with death has affected his mental capabilities.

"It leads you so close to dying," said Burkett, who has been so close to the situation while on the job before. "And then to see him recover so quickly..."

Victim of skiing accident ready to wheel his way to recovery

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

On Dec. 16, Michael Ellis was skiing with friends in Taos, N.M.

He doesn't remember hitting the bump, becoming airborne and sailing over the cliff.

He doesn't remember hitting his head on a rock in the river at the bottom.

But Saturday morning, the 24-year-old left Midland Memorial Hospital in a wheelchair, his speech slow and somewhat slurred, his legs unsteady as he was helped into a car.

And he vowed he would ski again.

His wife, 20-year-old Debbie, and her mother were taking him to Warm Springs Rehabilitation Hospital in Gonzales. After a brief rest at the family home in Brownwood, he will check in Monday.

"He's got a little ways to go," said his physician, Dr. Robert Vogel, "but he's made a lot of progress."

His last day in the hospital, the room full of brightly-colored balloons and the constant stream of nurses in and out wishing him good luck and telling him to visit before he was wheeled down the hall, must have contrasted with the quiet coma he was in for six weeks during his 34-day stay in a Santa Fe, N.M., hospital.

As the elevator door closed, shutting out the last of the "bye Mike, good lucks," his wife leaned against the wall. "I'm happy," she said, "I'm going to miss all of these people, though."

During his stay at MMH, Michael became a favorite on the floor. Born in Germany, he moved to the United States when he enrolled at Texas Tech six years ago. While an undergraduate in business management, he met Debbie, daughter of June and J.O. Grigsby. She was a Lee High School graduate studying music education.

The two married, Michael received his degree and began working on his master's in German.

He plans to finish the two years he lacks because he wants to teach German at the college level.

Although Michael only regained his speech two weeks ago, he still can speak German.

While those around him say he has been as much of an inspiration to them as they have been to him, he looks to the support of those who have loved and nursed him as responsible for his recovery.

After the accident, Debbie said they packed up and moved back to Midland. Although her parents plan to move permanently to Brownwood, the Midland house hadn't sold.

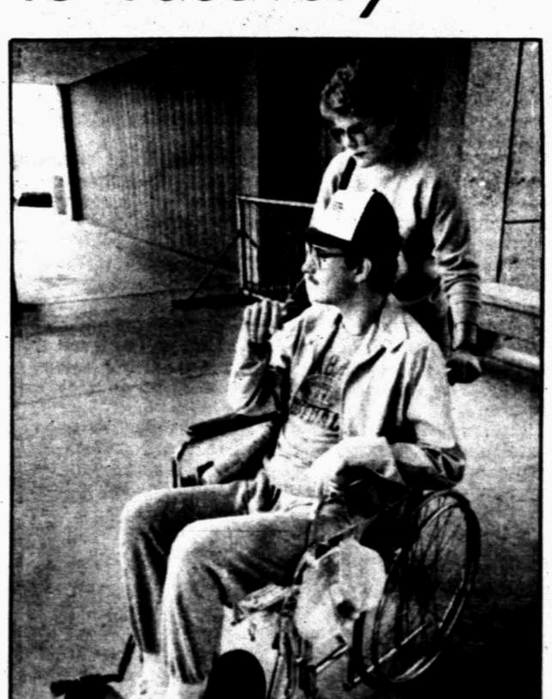

"I guess that was meant to be," Debbie said, "because we sure needed a place to stay."

The two had no hospital insurance and Debbie was working as an assistant director at a nursery school in Lubbock, supporting Michael's way through graduate school. Finding a physician was difficult.

His parents, who are in the military, had planned to retire in the United States in August. Michael's accident moved up their itinerary and they plan to move to Lawton, Okla., this week.

The support of members of Debbie's church, her family and the medical staff have helped, according to Michael. Because the bill will probably reach around $50,000, a trust fund has been established in his name at Texas American Bank.

But with the head trauma and the probability of epilepsy, Michael will have to take medication to control seizures for the rest of his life.

For Michael Ellis and his wife, Debbie, this run may be the toughest. Michael is recovering from a head injury suffered during a skiing accident.

While he is in Gonzales, Debbie will stay with her parents in Brownwood, making the 200-mile trip at least once a week. It will be different from her daily stays at his side, but the staff at Warm Springs feels progress is quicker without family members around.

"She's spent every day with me," Michael said, grasping his wife's hand. "She's fed breakfast to me and done everything.

"She's been my everything, my life, my nurse."

And she really plans to be.

After going through the experience, she's decided she'll study nursing as soon as Michael finishes his schooling. "I think we'll be back to school — maybe I'm being optimistic — but I think we'll be there by fall," Debbie said.

She has other plans when her husband recovers fully.

Not a skier herself, she wants to become one.

"I'm going to go with him," she said, grinning at Michael. "I'm going to make sure he stays on the baby slopes."

A little later, she smiled.

"Hey, no more skiing in Taos, OK?" she said to Michael. "We'll ski somewhere else — like Lubbock."

County judge has love for drunks

Sometime after Ahders had launched the drunks-to-AA court program, another alcoholic who had trouble staying sober reproved the judge for his short-term program.

"'I've been an alcoholic for X-number of years,'" the old drunk told the judge, "'and you expect me to be cured in three months?'"

The drunk had a suggestion:

"'I recommend to you that you tell me to go to meetings three nights a week for the rest of my life,'" Ahders recalled.

"He did," the judge said.

Schley said Ahders has "headed a lot of people in the right direction.

"He has given them the opportunity to recover from the disease of alcoholism if they choose to do so."

As county judge he can, and does, commit alcoholics to the Big Spring State Hospital to "dry out" and for treatment of alcoholism. And if he places drunks on probation, he can see to it that they attend AA meetings for awhile. It's up to them if they want to grab hold of the AA 12-step program.

"I love drunks," said Ahders. "It's easy to get disgusted with them. An alcoholic is like a child. If he can put anything over on you, he will. He thinks he's pretty clever."

The judge recalled a retired military man, "Chief." He had been arrested and jailed for intoxication 250 times when Ahders finally sent him to Big Spring for treatment of alcoholism.

Chief wasn't too keen on the idea but apparently preferred that to going to jail again or being dispatched to AA meetings.

The next day, Chief called the judge from the hospital.

"'Judge,'" he said, "'Thank you for sending me here. I think it's the best thing that could happen to me. Now, get me out of this G– D– place!'"

The judged thanked him and hung up the telephone.

On the following day, Chief again called his friend, the judge. "'I lied,'" Chief said. "'I should have been here a long time ago.'" Then, he said he "had to get out" of Big Spring so he could pick up his pension check at the post office in Midland. The judge thought otherwise. Chief stayed, and the judge made arrangements to forward his mail to the hospital.

After a couple or so months of treatment, Chief was released and was put on the bus for the 40-mile trip to Midland.

"He was drunk before he got to Midland," sighed Ahders. "How he got the liquor, nobody knows."

Eventually, Chief went to AA meetings and at one time had chalked up four years of sobriety. "I haven't seen him in jail since," he said.

Ahders said a lot of people he "sentenced" to Big Spring or to AA meetings "did well. Some fell by they wayside; they went back to jail. A lot aren't true alcoholics."

While he's on and off the court bench, Ahders carries with him a token bearing the "Serenity Prayer." An old man in AA had given the coin-like token to the judge at an AA meeting. Ahders may attend "open" AA meetings and often celebrates sobriety birthdays with his friends in AA.

"'Say a little prayer and ask God to help you make the right decision" in court when he's dealing with drunks, the old man had told the judge. "'With God's help, you'll make the right decision.'"

Ahders' affinity for drunks is endearing to many people.

"He sees the tragedy of all this (alcoholism) and how it affects the family and how it manifests itself in self-denial," said Dan Wakefield, substance abuse evaluator for Midland County's probation office. "He does everything in his power to help the alcoholic."

County Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis described Ahders as "sensitive...He's objective in most all situations. He's understanding. He's compassionate, and he certainly serves the needs of the people."

Pat Hooks, executive director of the Midland Council on Alcoholism, said he has found Ahders "to be always available and helpful. He does take an active interest in the alcohlic. He's a very helpful man, very bright."

Cope Routh, a former newspaper writer who is District III director of the Texas Commission on Alcoholism, said his friend Ahders as city judge "kind of set the pace" for court-ordered treatment of alcoholics.

"Bill is a very caring person, has always been, even as an FBI agent," Routh said.

Routh noted Ahders' devotion to his family. Ahder's son, Ruff, 42, an Odessa lawyer, is the "apple in Bill's eye," and the son's "wonderful mother," Helen, has "considerable stature as a book reviewer."

Ruff's parents met on a blind date at the University of Montana, where Ahders went to law school. They were married on St. Patrick's Day in 1940.

"He has always cared about people. That's his biggest asset," Mrs. Ahders said.

"He's awfully sorry he's not Irish," said the wife, who is Irish. "He's always decked out in green; you can count on that." And he's most always on the golf course on weekends unless he's vacationing in Ireland.

Ruff said his father has a "heart of gold."

"He acts tough, but he's soft as he can be, except, of course, with his son. He gets so involved with the alcoholic," Ruff said, "he worries himself sick. I've seen him buy people hot meals, put them (up) to sleep."

Said the judge: "I just like to help people...I'm really sold on the AA program...AA has done so many fine things for the people of the community.

"I love drunks. I want to do anything I can to help them. I don't want to do anything to hurt them or AA."

TDC remodeling death chamber

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Texas Department of Corrections, preparing for the scheduled executions of four condemned inmates later this month, is remodeling the death chamber.

The work crew of inmates is expected to put the finishing touches on the $7,000 project early this week, said prison spokesman Charles Brown. The changes in the 22-foot-by-26-foot room at the TDC's Walls Unit include a paint job, better lighting, a larger viewing area and air conditioning.

The first of four inmates scheduled to be executed by a poison injection within an 18-day period this month is James David "Cowboy" Autry, 29, sentenced to die before sunrise March 14 for the 1980 shooting death of a Port Arthur convenience store clerk.

Workers last week enclosed the witness area with a floor-to-ceiling, steel-barred barrier, replacing the single black metal railing. They also painted the dark red brick walls a bright blue-green, laid white linoleum tiles on the concrete floor, added more lights and installed air conditioning and heating vents, Brown said.

A larger one-way mirror was added to allow the executioner to watch the reaction of the condemned man as he receives the injection, he said.

There were complaints that the executioner could not see well through the old small one-way mirror during the December 1982 execution of Charlie Brooks Jr., the only U.S. convict to be put to death by injection. Brooks was executed for the murder of a Fort Worth used car mechanic.

The Texas Board of Corrections approved the changes in January.

But board member Lindsey Waters, of Dallas, said Friday no action has been taken on plans to move the death chamber away from Huntsville. Prison officials considered the move after a crowd of about 300 demonstrators jeered the announcement that an 11th-hour stay had blocked Autry's scheduled Oct. 5 execution.

Five days after Autry's scheduled March 14 execution, Joseph Paul Jernigan is to be put to death. Jernigan, 29, was convicted in the July 1981 murder of a 75-year-old Dawson, Texas, man.

Ronald Chambers, 29, is scheduled to be executed March 30 for the 1975 beating death of a Dallas engineering student.

The following day, March 31, Ronald Clark O'Bryan is scheduled to die for the Halloween 1974 poisoning of his 8-year-old son, Timothy, with cyanide-laced candy.

There are currently 180 men under the death sentence in Texas.

Woman gets divine break

HOUSTON (AP) — A 19-year-old woman who wrote 33 bad checks has been sentenced to three years' probation and ordered to attend church once a week, a judge said.

Theresa Templemire wrote the checks at convenience stores in fall 1983 while she was not living with her parents, said defense attorney Dianne Grimes. The teen-ager has since moved back home and her father has had trouble getting her to go to church, Ms. Grimes said.

Church attendance was made a condition of probation at the request of Ms. Templemire's father, said State District Judge Michael McSpadden.

"I don't know whether this is legal or not. But I don't think it would hurt anyone to attend church while on probation," the judge said Friday.

Ms. Templemire also was ordered to pay a $300 fine and $1,000 in restitution, McSpadden said. If she successfully completes probation, she will have no record, he said.

Ms. Grimes said she did not object to the church attendance requirement because her client did not mind.

McSpadden said he would consider revoking probation if Ms. Templemire does not attend church weekly.

Can anyone identify the persons in this photograph, as well as the location and date it was taken? The Midland County Historical Society wants to find out so the picture and information can be included in the forthcoming "Pioneer History of Midland County, 1880-1926". Give Nancy McKinley a call at 682-2931 if you can help.

Old photos needed for history

Midland County Historical Society is seeking photographs of Midland taken between 1880-1926 for inclusion in the forthcoming "Pioneer History of Midland County".

"We're making an appeal for all early-day pictures, and we'd like to have them identified and dated, if possible," said Society president Nancy McKinley. "They will be highly protected, guarded and returned to the owner."

Mrs. McKinley said the photographs are needed as soon as possible.

They can be mailed to the Society at P.O. Box 11405, Midland 79702, or other arrangements can be made by contacting a Society member or Mrs. McKinley, 682-2931.

Caboose nearing end of line?

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

For a century and a half it has chugged along behind: The little red caboose that has rolled across America and into the hearts of generations.

To the dismay of old-time trainmen, those days may be drawing to a close.

In a world of automation, the caboose has been done away with on some railroads throughout the nation. Although the Missouri Pacific Railroad, which serves Midland, still makes use of the caboose, the next few years could witness its demise not only in Midland but everywhere.

Railroad industry leaders believe they have a strong case for dropping the little red car off at its final stop — $400 million in savings resulting from fewer trainmen receiving wages and one less car to upkeep. In 1982, a contract between the rail industry and the United Transportation Union paved the way for soon eliminating 25 percent of cabooses on freight trains.

But some people with Missouri Pacific believe cabooses presently are needed "due to the length of trains and the number of people on the crews," said Dave Lancaster, trainmaster at the Odessa station. "We have some equipment — hot box detectors and dragging equipment detectors — located on our railroad on several locations. But it has not got to the point yet where it is automated enough to do away with people on the rear end of the train."

Florida East Coast Railroad has operated several years without cabooses, relying totally on automatic monitoring systems to detect overheating wheel parts or other difficulties.

To arbitrarily do away with the caboose at the present time, said Lancaster, would create hazards.

For the caboose is more than just a cosmetic part of a freight train — it serves as office for the conductor, who is in charge of the train, and from its location he and the rear breakman survey the cars ahead.

"Probably the most important thing the conductor and the rear brakeman do is look the train over from the rear end of the train for any problems they might be having," explained Lancaster. "Our trains are of such a length that at night or on some dusty days you can't see the rear of the train from the locomotive."

While noting that some contract negotiations between the industry and the union would do away with cabooses, Lancaster said that such an occurrence "would mean fewer jobs, and of the people I have come in contact with, very, very few of them were in favor of the idea."

Lancaster added that he would hate to see the caboose fade from the scene. "The little red caboose at the end of the train is something everybody looks forward to."

Cabooses originated in the 1830s when the conductor perched on barrels on the last car of the train. In order to give him shelter, freight cars were rebuilt to accommodate the conductor. The caboose finally was created.

An Association of American Railroads spokesman has noted that purchasing and maintaining a fleet of 12,000 cabooses for the nation would be justified by the occasions when train derailments or other difficulties or dangers would be prevented.

Midland Star Scout earns 'Ad Altare Dei'

Armando Subia Jr., a 14-year-old Star Scout in the Boy Scouts of America, has earned the "Ad Altare Dei" (Toward the Altar of God) award presented by the Diocesan Catholic Committee of San Angelo.

The youth qualified for the award by developing a wholesome attitude, improving his school work, working for his father at a Midland pipe yard, furthering his dedication to church and to the Christian principles and bettering his relations within the family and community, according to Joe Gallagher, assistant Scoutmaster of BSA Troop 126.

Subia is a member of that troop, sponsored by Trinity Presbyterian Church. He is an eighth-grader at Alamo Junior High School and is son of Armando and Felicita Subia of 4018 Monte Drive.

MMH gets commendation for cost-monitoring efforts

From Staff Reports

Midland Memorial Hospital has been commended by the American Hospital Association for its efforts to monitor costs and produetivity. The facility was awarded the 1983-84 HAS Certificate of Recognition for participating in HAS/MONITREND, a management information promgram offered by AHA's Hospital Administrative Service Division (HAS). HAS/MONITREND is a comparative operational monitoring system that relates costs and productivity to services provided.

"Using HAS/MONITREND to assess our operational performance has helped us keep our costs within the new federal guidelines for Medicare reimbursement," said MMH Vice President of Finance Ron Peterson. "Our participation in this program puts us in a better position to deal effectively with these and other changes occurring in third-party reimbursement procedures."

MMH has been participating in HAS programs for several years. Through voluntary participation in the MONITREND program, the institution demonstrates a continuing commitment to provide high quality health care services while controlling costs and improving staff efficiency. MONITREND data is used regularly for budgeting, staffing and service decisions.

Concert to feature four NYAC winners

From Staff Reports

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale's sixth subscription concert of the season will feature the performing winners of the 1984 National Young Artists Competition.

Concerts are Friday at Odessa's Permian High School Auditorium and Saturday at Lee High School Auditorium. Both performances are at 8 p.m. The Midland performance is sponsored by Petroplex Savings of Midland.

Held this year in January, NYAC hosted a field of 61 contestants from throughout the United States.

The competition includes college and secondary school divisions. Both have piano, strings and wind instrument categories. The college division also includes a voice category. Each year, the four selected as performing winners return to play with the symphony.

Two past winners of the competition who are now making a mark on the concert world are pianist Jeffrey Campbell and bass-baritone Terry Cooke. Campbell, a competition winner in 1976, has toured extensively in the Far East and has been engaged to perform as soloist with the Dallas and Houston symphonies during the 1984-85 season. Cooke is one of the youngest members of the Metropolitan Opera, New York City.

This year's performing winners are Gloria Justen, violin; Helen Sim, piano (both in the secondary division); Judy Stone, cello; and Richard Dowling, piano (both in the college division).

The program will feature Miss Justen in a performance of the allegro moderato movement from Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D, Opus 35. A Houston resident who studies with Fredell Lack of the University of Houston, Miss Justen is the winner of the 1982 Josie Tomforde Young Artists Competition of the Houston Symphony, the 1983 Richardson Symphony Young Artists Competition, the 1983 Corpus Christi Young Artists Competition and was chosen to solo with the Houston Youth Symphony in 1983.

Miss Sim will perform the moderato movement from Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 2 in c minor, Opus 18. A resident of Scarsdale, N.Y., Miss Sim studies with Jane Carlson of the Julliard School, pre-college division. She is the winner of the Westchester Symphony Orchestra Concerto Competition, the Enrico Fermi Fine Arts Award, the Julliard Prokofiev Competition and has performed with the American Symphony Orchestra, Lincoln Center.

Gloria Justen

Richard Dowling

Judy Stone

Miss Stone will perform Variations on a Rococo Theme for Cello, Opus 33 by Tchaikovsky. A Chicago resident, Miss Stone studies with Karl Fruh of Roosevelt University. She is a recipient of the Howard V. Phalin Fellowship for Graduate Studies and a member of the Franklin Honor Society.

Dowling will perform Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1 in E flat. Dowling lives in Houston where he studies with Ruth Tomfohrde and Abbey Simon of the University of Houston. He is the winner in the University of Houston School of Music Concerto Competition, a finalist in the Sorantin-San Angelo Symphony Concerto Competition and an alternate in the MTNA Collegiate Competition.

In addition to the NYAC winners, the performance will feature trumpet soloists Thomas Fairlie and Dale Sterling in Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Trumpets in C. Fairlie and Sterling are members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and the Lone Star Brass Quintet.

Fairlie, principal trumpet for both groups, has played with the Louisville Orchestra, Toledo Symphony and was principal trumpet with the Guadalarajara Symphony before he joined the Midland organization in 1982. He holds a bachelor's degree in music education from the University of Toledo and a master of music degree from the University of Louisville School of Music.

Sterling holds a bachelor's degree in music education from Delta State University, Cleveland, Miss., and has been with the Midland-Odessa Symphony since 1978.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Penicillin can't cure flu, might control infections

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife wasn't feeling well so she went to her doctor and he told her that she had the flu and he gave her penicillin. I'm no doctor but I'm sure I heard a long time ago that there is no cure for the flu. So can you explain what the idea was in giving her penicillin to cure something that can't be cured? — Mr. L.T., Duluth, Minn.

Dear Mr. T.: You are correct in your understanding that at present there is no cure for influenza although, as you probably know, it can be prevented through vaccination. However, penicillin and other antibiotics may be of help in controlling certain infections that may accompany the flu. I assume that is the reason your wife's physician prescribed the penicillin.

The best treatment for patients with influenza is tender, loving care. Patients should be given lots of water and fruit juice and should be kept warm and comfortable in bed until their temperature is normal. Aspirin or an aspirin substitute may be used to ease the discomfort. However, children should be given the aspirin substitute unless a physician specifically directs that they take aspirin.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have diabetes for which I take insulin, and my doctor tells me that I have it under control. If I continue in this way, does that mean that I won't have to worry abut my eyes going bad? I asked my doctor that question, but he wouldn't say yes or no, and I would like an answer from you. — Mr. T.Y., Pittsburgh.

Dear Mr. Y.: You raise an issue that is a source of a great deal of controversy at present, and that is whether tight control of blood glucose levels will slow or prevent the development of retinopathy (non-inflammatory disease of the retina). Unfortunately, a definitive answer may not be available for as long as 10 yers, when a study that is now under way may be completed.

Until the issue is resolved, patients with diabetes should work closely with their physicians to achieve as tight control of their blood sugar as possible.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know that some children are able to outgrow their asthma. Is there any way someone can predict who will and who will not have asthma when they get older? — Sam, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Dear Sam: It is difficult to predict the course of asthma in a particular child. In general, one-third of all children will outgrow the condition, while another one-third will have asthma throughout their adult years. The remaining third will outgrow the disease but will develop it again at some time during their adult life.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard a lot about AIDS, but I'm still not clear about what it is and what its symptoms are. Can you help? — Mr. T.K., Tampa, Fla.

Dear Mr. K.: The acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) involves a defect in a person's natural immunity against disease. As a result, AIDS patiets are susceptible to a variety of rare illnesses that are generally not found in individuals with normal immune systems.

The early symptoms of AIDS may include fever, night sweats, swollen glands, weight loss, diarrhea, persistent cough, fatigue, and loss of appetite.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Our family doctor says that my husband's asthma was caused by his work. Is there anything he can do about it except quit his job, which is not very possible for us to do? — Mrs. K.M., Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. M.: It is important that a patient with asthma avoid being exposed to the agent causing the disease. Possibly your husband can get a different job within the same company or, in some manner, reduce his exposure to the agent even if he continues on the same job.

I should warn, however, that sometimes the condition may not be reversible and may continue even after the patient is no longr exposed to the agent.

For Beatrice, Ames, Iowa: It is not uncommon for a patient with a neurologic disorder to first be referred to a psychiatrist. some of the behavioral characteristics of patients with some form of neurological dysfunction are similar to those that accompany mental illness.

Dr. Robert J. Schwartzman, of Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, says that personality disorders, depression, and euphoria may reflect either a neurologic or psychologic problem in the patient.

For Lance, Charlottesville, Va.: The reason you are reading more about the side effects of chemotherapy these days is that cancer patients are living longer. This does not of course minimize the importance of treating these side effects at the same time that the cancer itself is being treated.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

POSITIVE THINKING

Organized individuals make the grade creatively in life

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

I have noted in my contacts with all sorts of people that the ones who make the grade creatively, who come up with the greatest accomplishments, are organized individuals. The reference is to inner organization, in which mind, spirit, and purpose operate in harmonious unity. It's the shattered people who fail, since, being unable to focus themselves, everything seems to elude them.

To get "pulled together," so that an individual functions with personality operating harmoniously in a unified manner, is to ensure successful outcomes. Get a person pulled together and watch with astonishment the change.

Take the dispirited salesman I met on an airplane. His enthusiasm had entirely run out and no wonder, for he was in a state of inner conflict, feeling that he was, as he put it, "getting absolutely nowhere fast."

"In what type of salesmanship are you engaged?" I asked.

"Oh," he replied, "my employers send me out to make inspirational speeches at sales meetings."

I chuckled. "Boy, some inspiration, judging from the way you've been talking. Your employers certainly must be stupid, sending you out on that assignment."

He really bridled at that. "They're not stupid. They're the smartest men in the business."

"Well, in that case they must see something in you that you do not see, namely that you have the ability to inspire, to be a motivator, a real leader."

"Now," I continued, "about your estimate of salesmanship. You are way off the beam on that. Without salesmanship our economy could not have been developed nor could it remain strong. I suggest that every day you stand in front of a mirror and pull yourself up to your full height. Then say aloud: 'I am proud to be a salesman. I'm a trustee of the free enterprise system. I'm vital to the whole process of communication and distribution.' "

After this little speech the discouraged man sat silent for long minutes. Then he asked, "How about saying a prayer for me?"

"Glad to," I said. "I will remember you in my prayers tonight."

"Oh, no, not tonight; right here and now."

So I prayed aloud in a low voice something like this: "Lord, this man is supposed to inspire people, so inspire him. He is low and depressed in spirit. Give him an infusion of enthusiasm. And pull him together, organize and focus his personality. Amen."

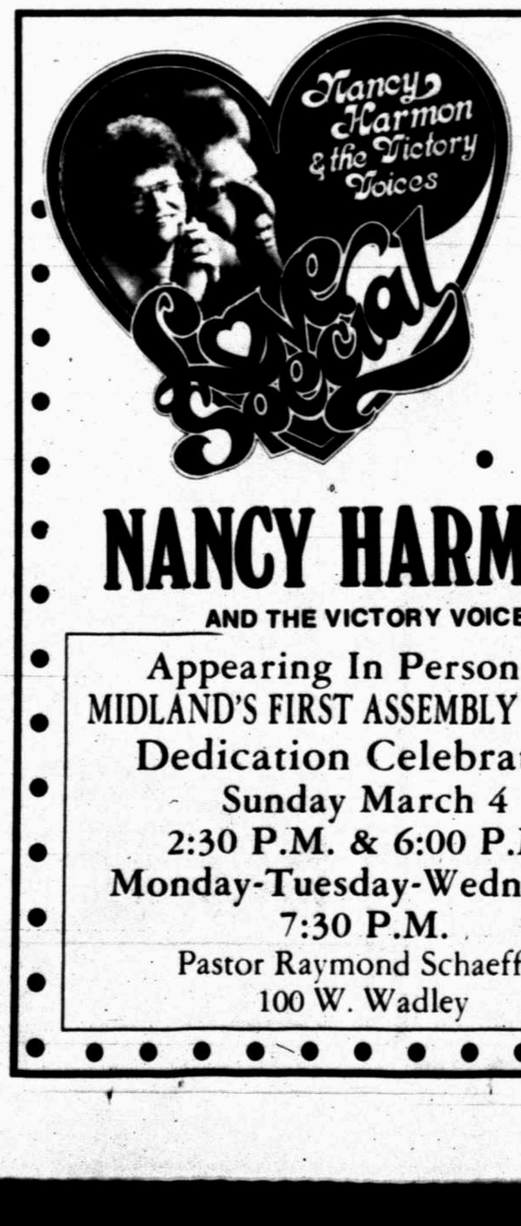

"Thanks," he said quietly.

It seemed to register; for some time later I ran into him at a meeting. With a confident smile he said, "You know something? God and you pulled me together, on that airplane."

Well, I was indeed honored to be coupled with the Divine. But anyway, the man got focused. He did not need to fail and he didn't.

Getting what you want from life needs directed motivation. If you want to get somewhere you have to know where you want to go and how to get there. Also, it is vital to know what you want to do and what you can do best. This is part of being focused and organized. And to all this must be added deep desire, a driving force, and the willingness to work.

MISD measures up to many new reports

EDITOR'S NOTE: For some time a deluge of reports have pointed to the deteriorating condition of public education in the state and the nation. In conjunction with Texas Public Schools Week, the following is a report on how the Midland Independent School District compares to state and national schools in general.

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Public education, for good or bad, has been consistently in the limelight for the past year. By the end of 1983, no less than 30 reports on education had been or were about to be published. The Governor's Select Committee on Public Education, headed by H. Ross Perot, is expected to make its final recommendations in mid-March.

Leading national focus on education was "A Nation at Risk," authored by the National Commission of Excellence in Education and released in the spring of 1983. Midland school authorities quickly pointed out that most of the recommendations were already being observed locally.

Suggested requirements in English, social studies, computer science and foreign language were met or exceeded. On the negative side, the report said three years of mathematics and science should be mandatory — MISD requires only two years of each subject. However, a third year of math will be required next fall.

One widely-recommended panacea in this and subsequent reports was higher teachers' salaries. Midland's average teacher salary is higher than state and national averages and is 32 to 50 percent above the state base. In addition, Midland has a merit pay system for educators. The average teacher salary in Midland in 1982 was $20,437, according to statistics compiled by the Texas Research League. The state average was $15,715 and the national was $17,360.

The NCEE report recommended more effective use of class time through better time management and attendance policies designed to reduce absenteeism. Midland schools recently implemented the Midland Lesson Plan Format for more efficient use of school time, Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi explained.

And because of strict attendance policies, absences are down from last year, school trustees were told earlier this year. High school students with perfect attendance records are given free passes to school events. In elementary schools there is no uniform procedure, but such students receive recognition and rewards. Truancy and tardiness is discouraged because grades are lowered for unexcused absences.

Although authorities hesitate to use Scholastic Aptitude Tests for comparisons, because there is no standard to regulate who takes the test, local students' scores are well above state and national averages.

In 1982 education statistics released by U.S. Secretary of Education Terrell Bell, the average SAT score in the nation was 893 and in Texas 868. But Midland students averaged 929. On the American College Test Midland students scored an average of 16.9 — above the state average of 15.8 but below the national average of 18.4.

And, in contrast to the national trend, scores on California Achievement Tests were equal to or better than last year's marks.

Other statistics show per-student cost in Midland in 1982 was $2,701 — well above the state average of $2,012 and national average of $2,473.

The pupil/teacher ratio locally is 17 to one, while in Texas it is 18.4 to one and in the nation 19 to one. A pupil/teacher ratio is not the same thing as an average class size.

Administrators and trustees have applauded state and national efforts to upgrade the quality of public education. Such measures are effective, they say, because they are already working on the local level.

MC awarded program grants

Midland College has been awarded grants for two programs at opposite ends of the educational spectrum. The Permian Basin Private Industry Council has approved applications from Midland College for Job Training Partnership Act programs in adult basic education and robotics technology.

The college's adult education progam will receive $30,000 to implement new instructional methods and purchase computers for use in classroom teaching situations. A study on the feasability of starting courses to train robotics technicians will be partially funded by a $6,461 grant.

For several years Midland College has been operating free instructional programs for area residents who do not have a high school education or who do not speak or function in the English language.

"With the assistance of this grant, we will be able to utilize the latest methods of instruction, including a great amount of self-paced instructional material that is available through computer programs," Dr. Richard Holmes, dean of occupational/technical studies, pointed out.

For the robotics program, the grant will help fund a study which began last September with an exploratory meeting about robotics in the Permian Basin and the need for technicians to maintain and repair such equipment. That was followed by a short, non-credit course in robotics that included hands-on training with a small robot.

The study funded through the JTPA grant will determine whether there is sufficient demand at this time to institute a program of study at Midland concentrating on robotics.

Early criminal cases much like today's

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

The times may change but the charges don't.

Murder, robbery, rape, theft, burglary and other crimes concerned pioneer Midland County law enforcement officials as much as they do their modern counterparts.

The first indictment on record at the county courthouse is that of "Ely the banjo player" — a 6-foot-7 black man indicted Dec. 29, 1886, for assault with intent to kill.

The charges were dismissed later on the district attorney's recommendation because of "evidence insufficient to warrant a conviction."

W.P. Moberly didn't fare as well. He paid a $100 fine after a jury convicted him of "keeping a disorderly house as a common resort for prostitutes and vagabonds."

During testimony in the case, one witness told jurors Moberly "kept a beer saloon in the first story of said house," and "a whorehouse with two women was kept in the second story."

In January 1887, two men — Tom Smith and Red Hurst — were indicted for the "theft of one cattle." Prosecutors apparently didn't know the animal's gender and didn't want to jeopardize their case by specifying whether it was a cow, bull or steer.

No record of the outcome of that case could be found in the county's microfilm files.

The state prevailed, however, when Tom Rice was sentenced to five years in prison on a Sept. 13, 1887, robbery conviction — the first apparent robbery trial in county history.

In another 1887 robbery case, two grand jury witnesses were named Ah Chu and Ah Chung.

L.R. Sneed, alias Frank Sneed, can come out of hiding now. His 1888 indictment for horse theft was dismissed five years later "because there is no probability of the defendant ever being arrested."

W.D. Allison had the dubious honor of being the first Midland County sheriff to carry out a death sentence.

Following a "murder in the first degree" conviction, Lorenzo Porrez was ordered "hung by the neck until dead."

The sentence was carried out at the county jail on Friday, Nov. 27, 1891. In court documents, Allison wrote: "After said execution, I lowered the body of said Lorenzo Porrez to be decently buried."

In September 1894, a woman by the name of Nellie Brooks was indicted for being "a vagrant, to wit: The said Nellie Brooks was then and there a common prostitute."

The disposition of that first apparent Midland County prostitution case could not be located.

Then as now, pre-trial publicity and people of influence and prominence gave prosecutors a headache.

A change of venue was granted in a turn-of-the century murder case after the district attorney told the court:

"The facts surrounding this cause have been thoroughly discussed on the streets and elsewhere in the town of Midland and nearly all the jurors have heard this cause discussed and have formed opinions."

In addition, the district attorney argued that "the defendant has many influential and prominent citizens who have interested themselves in his behalf and are working to secure his acquittal."

Maybe the times don't change after all — just the dates, names and faces.

Three Odessans among those indicted by jury

From Staff Reports

Three Odessans, including a U.S. Postal Service superintendent, have been indicted by a federal grand jury in Midland.

The indictments had been sealed.

Indicted were:

—Alfredo Hernandez Jr., 37, superintendent of USPS fleet operations, was indicted for making false claims on his work time card in Odessa.

"There's a lot more to that," said Q. Jarone Batson of El Paso, director of the USPS Employee and Labor Relations. Batson said Hernandez resigned his $28,084-a-year job on Jan. 18 after he was confronted with the accusations. He said Hernandez was logging work hours on Saturdays when he allegedly was not working that day. If convicted, he could be sentenced up to five years in prison and fined $10,000.

Batson said Hernandez had worked for the USPS since March 6, 1967. He said the fleet of trucks Hernandez was responsible for served such areas as Odessa, Midland, Big Spring, Notrees, Monahans and Pecos.

—Douglas Allen Smith, 23, was indicted on two counts of making false statements when he on Aug. 16 and Aug. 30 purchased firearms from Sportsman's Den in Odessa. Smith was charged with not indicating he had been convicted of a felony offense. If convicted, he could be sentenced up to five years in prison and fined $5,000 for each offense.

—Eduardo M. Melendez Jr., 41, was indicted for making a false statement to purchase a firearm from Jack's Pawn Shop in Odessa. As did Smith, Melendez indicated he had not been convicted of a felony offense. If convicted, he could be sentenced up to five years in prison and fined $10,000.

U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith set the bail for Smith and Melendez at $25,000 each and set Hernandez' bail at a $10,000 personal recognizance bond.

Local races pick up candidates

From Staff Reports

Local races for school boards, city council and hospital board have picked up a few candidates — and one race lost a contender — as Wednesday's filing deadline nears.

Incumbent Mayor G. Thane Akins will be running a contested race as businessman Frank Lassater has issued a challenge.

Steve Davidson, incumbent in Place 4 on the Midland City Council, is the lone candidate. Cloyd Shanks who filed earlier dropped out of the race, saying his street paving business might put him into a conflict of interest.

Place 5, being vacated by Tom Sloan, has drawn three candidates: former aviation director Col. Wilson Banks, businessman Bart Hotchkiss and Raul Salazar.

Midland Memorial Hospital Board election has drawn little interest as the two incumbents — Tevis Herd and Pat Estes — are the only candidates to file.

Midland Independent School District trustee race has drawn more interest. Vying for Place 3 are Fred Newman and James Ramsoure. Place 4 has drawn filings from Bobby Williams Sr., and Don McCarty.

For Midland Junior College District board, only the three imcumbents have filed for re-election. Ralph Way is seeking another term in Place 8; Jack Huff in Place 7 and Kenneth Peeler in Place 9.

For Greenwood ISD two candidates have filed for Place 5: incumbent Charles Gardner and Archie Blackwell, who works for the Department of Public Safety in vehicle theft. James Brooks is seeking re-election to Place 3 and Ted Benton wants another term in Place 4.

Crime Commission meets Tuesday

Among the speakers scheduled for Tuesday night's public meeting of the Midland Crime Commission are County Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis, County Court-At-Law Judge Willie DuBose and County Attorney Scott Henderson.

"The Crime Commission would like to increase public awareness of current problems at the courthouse," said Commission Publicity Historian Christina Miller.

A report on the Neighborhood Watch program — including plans for a pamphlet for people interested in setting up a watch program on their block — also will be presented at Tuesday night's meeting, which is set for 7:30 p.m. in the justice of the peace courtroom at the county courthouse.

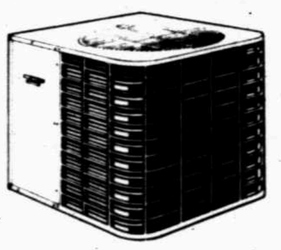

On a related note, a new commission board was appointed Jan. 31: Shirley Johnson, chairwoman; Maxine Hannifin, vice-chairwoman; Esta Geron, secretary; George Singleton, treasurer; and Christina Miller, publicity historian.

A 44-foot Coast Guard rescue boat takes a large wave in training mission off Cape Disappointment, Wash., near the base of the Coast Guard's National Motor Lifeboat School, where rescue crews are trained in some of the world's most treacherous tides.

Coast Guard training

The motto on the front of the classroom building of the school says it all.

Chief Jerold Steed the quintessential "old salt," runs mos of the school's training program Steed has been aboard a 44-footer that turned completely over, then righted itself as it is designed to do.

CAPE DISAPPOINTMENT, Wash. — Coast Guard Boatswain's Mate Paul Bellona stood just to the right of the helm of the 44-foot heavy-weather rescue boat that picked its way through eight- to 10-foot surf at the mouth of the Columbia River in an area, seamen and maritime historians call the Graveyard of the Pacific.

A student coxswain held onto the steering wheel with one hand and nervously gripped the throttles controlling the twin V-6 diesels with the other.

Instructor Bellona, the coxswain, four other students and a lone visitor scanned the surrounding surf, trying to read the waves. It is a skill all five students would have to master if they are to survive the rigors of one of the seafaring's oldest, most dangerous and exciting jobs.

It was that desire that had brought them here to the Coast Guard's National Motor Lifeboat School, a facility unique anywhere in the world for training the men — and, within the last year or two, women — who make up the latest generation of rescue boat crews.

TODAY'S BOATS are somewhat more sophisticated than they were in 1807 when the Humane Society of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts established the first U.S. lifeboat station near Boston. Motors have replaced oars and sails, but the premise is the same today as it was then and in 1848, when the first national liteboat legislation was passed by Congress and inaugurated what eventually became the Coast Guard.

As long as men have gone down to the sea in ships, other men have had to go rescue them. And when lifeboats must go out, shipwrecks and other rescue operations are much as they always have been, a test of wills between a handful of men and the sea.

Things like radar, sophisticated radio-tracking gear and helicopters have changed the life-saving service little. At the crucial moment when the lifeboat pulls alongside the foundering vesel, the players are the liteboat crews, hauling lines and wielding axes and boat hooks, exactly as they always have been, and the terrified, waiting to be saved.

Although safe commercial shipping and rising gasoline prices have cut the Coast Guard rescue caseload significantly since 1978 — total cases down from nearly 78,000 to 68,500 — the crews training here still perform a significant life-saving function. In 1982, for instance, Coast Guard rescue operations saved 5,675 lives and property valued at nearly $1.9 billion.

NUMBERS MEAN little in the surf here, though. Rescue sailors are taught to pay attention first to the sea and its dangers.

Bellona saw the wave first. Quickly, his eyes ran from its base to its crest, measuring it and comparing its height to the rescue boat's. He figured it at 11 feet, simultaneously hollering loud enough to be heard above the surf. "Big one coming!"

The student at the wheel turned hard to port and put the 44-footer's bow directly into the big one. In an instant, the wave crashed over the cockpit, a superstructure equipped for just occasions with a set of roll bars stouter than anything ever installed on an off-road truck.

Seawater drenched all hands, but there was no time to dry off. In the next instant, the 44-footer, having motored directly through the wave, fell into the trough beyond it, like a shoe being dropped to a closet floor.

The seven people aboard — everyone decked out in foul-weather suits with crash helmets and tethered to the superstructure with safety belts — tumbled forward together, colliding like bowling pins. Somehow, the coxswain held on to the wheel and Bellona stood his ground, still just to the right of the helm, holding on tightly to the roll bar.

The 44-footer — Coast Guard boats this small are not accorded the individuality of names — emerged into the Pacific swell and the coxswain steered out of the surf. Beside him, Bellona started to chuckle. He turned to the visitor aboard and observed: It really is too bad that you came along on such a calm day. Laughter momentarily drowned out the sound of the sea.

THE COAST Guard chose Cape Disappointment in 1968 when it opened the National Motor Lifeboat School in an attempt to further hone the skills of the 150 or so certified heavy-surf coxswains within its ranks and increase the competence of other rescue-boat operators stationed on both coasts and in the Great Lakes.

There are 105 of the 44-foot self-righting lifeboats deployed. Cape Disappointment, 18 miles north of Astoria, Ore., and about 100 miles northwest of Portland, is the spot at which the powerful Columbia River dumps its waters against what Chief Boatswain's Mate Jerold Steed, the quintessential old salt who runs most of the school's training program, calls "that great immovable object, the Pacific Ocean." The perpetual collision generates some of the world's most dangerous ebb tides.

Trees need lots of water

It is of utmost importance to provide adequate water to newly planted trees. Bareroot, container grown or balled and burlapped plantings must have their root zones thoroughly moistened at frequent intervals after transplanting.

Kiker

Irrigation frequency and the total volume of water applied depends on the size of the root ball, soil type, weather and foliage production. Clay soils retain moisture and would require less frequent irrigation than sandy soils, where the water leaches away freely. Temperatures above 75 degrees with high winds dictate more frequent water applications. The water must be applied to the root mass and beyond. Irrigating only the trunk area of the tree is a poor practice. Root hairs (feeder roots or absorptive roots) also are growing at the edges of the root mass of newly transplanted trees and beyond the dripline on older, established trees. Sufficient water must the applied to wet the soil to a depth of two feet or more. As leaves and limbs grow, the tree requires more water.

Trees in West Texas require water in addition to that received from lawn irrigation. Deep, thorough watering result in healthy trees. In fact, moisture to the root zone to sufficient depth and lateral distance from the trunk is extremely important.

The same method will work for pecans, fruits, shrubs, oaks, ground cover and hedges.

Don't forget the irrigation and fertilization program to be presented by the Midland County Horticulture Committee at 4:30 p.m. Monday at Joe Chastain's orchard, on County Road 1162 North, just north of Loop 250. Joe Henggeler, Area Extension Irrigation Specialist from Fort Stockton, will present the program on irrigation. Dr. Austin Stockton, Extension Horticulturist, also of Fort Stockton, will discuss fertilization.

Farming trends for 2020 forecast

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — By the turn of the century, American farmers will have to boost production by at least one-third to meet demands. By the year 2020, production may have to double from current levels, Congress has been told.

As a result, farmers will become increasingly dependent on cash crops and on exports for their livelihoods.

The forecast was included in a report prepared by the Joint Council on Food and Agriculture Sciences. It was ordered by Congress in the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981 to help determine long-term demands for food, fiber and forestry products.

In a letter sent to congressional leaders last week with the report, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said the council's findings show that the United States can plan for the future in a coordinated and forward-looking manner.

The report outlines some of the work that will be needed in research, extension and higher education if growing needs are to be met over the next 20 to 30 years.

Assistant Secretary Orville G. Bentley, who oversees USDA science and education programs, said the rising demand for commodities "will require an increasing emphasis on farm profits, food safety and an improvement in the ability to protect America's soil and water resources."

Further, according to the report, greater efforts will be needed in research and in projects to put to practical use much of the technology that already is available. That will require larger investments by the private and public sectors.

Some areas of concern as described in the report:

—Salary levels and promotion opportunities in the federal-state agricultural research system make it "very difficult to retain highly qualified people in the high-tech fields."

—University graduate and undergraduate education programs are not attracting sufficient numbers of students in the critical scientific fields.

—Agricultural scientists are getting older, on the average, and the formal education of many is now 20 to 30 years old.

The 40-member council includes nationally prominent scientists and administrators, representing governmental, academic and commercial interests. It was founded in 1977 "to encourage and coordinate research, extension and higher education activities in the food and agricultural sciences."

Although the Reagan administration has cited research as one of its top priorities, the recommended budget for the next fiscal year that will begin on Oct. 1 calls for only a relatively small increase in USDA research spending.

The budget proposal sent to Congress by Reagan on Feb. 1, for example, called for $752 million for department research programs overall, an increase of less than 4 percent from estimated outlays of $725 million in 1983-84.

One program that was publicized widely by the administration when the proposed budget was released involves spending $28.5 million for competitive grants to help stimulate high-risk, basic research in biotechnology. However, part of the money will result from cutbacks in related programs.

The council's report, meanwhile, cites some possibilities which are a bit mind-boggling. Instead of today's basic problem of surpluses, tomorrows's problem may be scarcity — if productivity does not keep pace with demand.

"At real prices approximating those of 1979-81, effective global demand (consumption) for agricultural and forest products is projected to expand substantially by 2000, primarily as a result of population and economic growth," the report said.

That would include about a 60 percent increase in world demand for "income-sensitive commodities" such as meat, oilseeds and processed forest products; close to 50 percent for cereal grains; and 35 to 40 percent for milk and cotton. By 2020, demand could more than double for the income-sensitive commodities and increase as much as 90 percent for cereal grains.

"Output of U.S. agricultural and forest products increased nearly 40 percent in the past two decades," the report said. "By 2000, production of cereal grains, oilseeds and forest products will need to increase another 30 to 40 percent and that of other major products perhaps 20 percent.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD WANT AD

1. IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, it's better to start your advertisement with the location.
2. BE CLEAR. Readers react more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. One of the most important considerations of any advertisement is to include the price.
3. MAKE IT EASY for the reader prospect to reach you. ALWAYS INSERT your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time to have prospects contact you.
4. THE GREATEST READER RESPONSE can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions. Play safe. The thrifty 15 day plan is best and costs less per insertion. There are also special monthly rates for those who want to keep their name and offers before the public each and every day. Cancel when you get results, the charge will be the rate earned at the time of cancellation.
5. PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good classified ad.
6. CLASSIFIED READERS ARE already interested in buying used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are in the market to buy. Give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.
7. WANT ADS THAT FAIL do so not through any lack of readership, but because they are often quickly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.
8. TO PLACE YOUR ADVERTISEMENT in The Midland Reporter Telegram, where you reach the active Classified market.

"WE WANTED A QUALITY LIFESTYLE, NOT GIMMICKS AND GIVEAWAYS..."

"...That's why, when John and I were transferred to Midland, we chose to live at Oakridge Apartments. Sure, we passed up a few gimmicks and giveaways offered by the other communities. But what we got instead is an apartment community superior to anything else we saw. New on the market this year, Oakridge Apartments are bright and beautiful with sparkling new amenities and lots of extras. But more than that, Oakridge is a real quality neighborhood. The people out here are just great, and the management team is the best we've ever had."

1-, 2- and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.

A mind-boggling meal

An instructor demonstrates the art of massage, following an informal gourmet meal at a recent Food for Thought workshop.

Food for Thought is a unique method of providing "a moment of elegant relaxation and casual conversation with other course participants and the speaker before the course begins."

A gourmet meal, prepared by coordinators of Food for Thought, is served to guests at each program.

The idea to serve a meal topped with mind-challenging ideas was dropped on Judy Golasinski's desk. She swallowed it whole.

She could handle the organizing and business end of the idea. But cooking was not her cup of tea. She found the perfect partner in Lori Lanier, who enjoys spending her life in the kitchen.

Last fall Food for Thought was dished up to Midlanders in the form of mind-entertaining programs with mouth-watering meals. It was a success and the two have cooked up a new list of programs for the spring.

"A friend came by my office and dropped a brochure on my desk and said I needed to do the same thing," said Judy. The brochure explained a Boston program called "About the Main Course."

As a businesswoman who promotes short courses for geologists around the country, Judy began to bubble with ideas. But the idea had to simmer on the back burner until she bumped into Lori Lanier at a woman's luncheon. Lori had provided the meal for the small group.

A native of Midland, "I had just come back from Austin" and found few things to occupy her time outside of being a Realtor with Joanne Langston's firm.

Lori agreed to the business arrangement. "She and I are diametrically opposed as far as our talents," said Lori of Judy. "It works out great. She has all the business sense." And Lori reads cookbooks like some people read spy novels. "I took home ec in high school when everyone else was in fine arts."

They created the courses, such as basic bartending and chinese cooking and the tarot. Brochures were mailed out to 8,000 homes and the response was surprising, both in numbers and kinds of people.

Not all of it was positive. "We got a response from one woman who said she objected to the anti-Christian slant of the courses," said Judy.

But they discovered "an underground of fascinating people in Midland."

One of the first registrations came from an 83-year-old woman who signed up for 12 courses. "Everyone just loves her," said Judy. She's already signed up for more classes this semester.

Getting ideas for the classes is easy, the two women said. "We wrote down all the fun things we wanted to do. Actually, we came up with too many ideas," said Judy, adding that some of these new courses were suggested by last fall's students.

Although there are some cooking classes, Lori stressed that it's not a cooking school. There's a Dinner and Spice class on how to cook a curry dinner, chinese cooking part II and Merveilleux Repax Francais, or a "marvelous French meal."

One will explore the wines of California, another astrology. Then there's pyramid energy, handwriting analysis, melodies and rainbows. And for people who prefer something more personal, one class will explore relationships and another will single out men.

In their brochure, the women emphasize they are not a catering service but a unique method of providing "a moment of elegant relaxation and casual conversation with other course participants and the speaker before the course begins."

The courses are held in private homes and Lori tailors the gourmet meal to suit special dietary needs. She noted that one teacher is a vegetarian and the meal won't include meat. "But it will be a full gourmet meal," she said.

Class size is kept small — about 12 to 15 persons — to retain the close, relaxed atmosphere. Cost is $30 per person, or $25 each if a couple registers.

Besides these courses, the business duo is offering their special services to anyone who can't figure out what to do for a dinner party. "They can call us and we'll put together a dinner party. We'll find a speaker and prepare the meal," said Judy.

The two hope Food for Thought will give rise to a longterm goal. "We would like to buy a house for Food for Thought," mused Judy. "Lori would have a kitchen. We would have art work on the walls for sale and antiques on consignment...more of a homey atmosphere. It would be a place for organizations to meet."

Successful or not, the course has Lori steamed up about something else. "I feel we're making a contribution to Midland. It's something different."

1984 Midland Symphony Debutantes presented

A full year of giving service will "pay off" for 29 high school girls who will be presented as Midland Symphony debutantes Saturday evening.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Members and guests of the Midland Country Club's Ladies' Association heard an entertaining discourse on the institutions of marriage and motherhood at a recent luncheon.

Midland actress Coila (Mrs. James) Morrow combined her own insights on those topics with excerpts from the writings of Erma Bombeck and Judith Viorst to present a program that was both humorous and touching.

Coila entertained her audience with readings from Mrs. Bombeck's current bestseller, "Motherhood, The Second Oldest Profession," and two of Mrs. Viorst's early works, "It's Hard To Be Hip Over 30 and Other Tragedies of Married Life" and "How Did I Get To Be 40 and Other Atrocities?"

Well-known to local community theatre audiences, Coila has had such plum parts as the title role in "Mame," and the lead in "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas." She also is a talented writer, using her expertise to write and produce plays for the Junior League and Volunteers in Public Schools.

Susie (Mrs. Gary) Burnett and Wyoma (Mrs. Whit) Whitlow were hostesses for the social hour, which preceded the delicious quiche luncheon. The table centerpieces of colorful floral bouquets served as a reminder that spring is just around the corner.

Among those enjoying the event were Coila's mother Sue (Mrs. Sam) Conner, Marianne (Mrs. Will) Green, Gladys (Mrs. T. June) Melton, Shirley (Mrs. Wilbur) Rocchio, June (Mrs. Frank) Cowden, Jane (Mrs. R. Ken) Williams, Linda (Mrs. Rodney) Satterwhite, Marilyn (Mrs. Robert A.) Spears, Leona (Mrs. Walter B.) Smith and Winnie (Mrs. T.B.) O'Brien.

MARY ELIZABETH AND FRANK ITTNER celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary, which occured on Valentine's Day, with a trip to Cancun. Blessed with pleasant weather during their entire stay, they particularly enjoyed the availability of delectable sea food and the profusion of the colorful hibiscus, their favorite flower. They considered visits to the famous ruins at Chichen Itza and Tulum a highlight of their trip.

Before returning to Midland, the couple enjoyed a weekend visit in Dallas with their daughter Yvonne and her husband Charles Hays. On Saturday evening they were thrilled to see former Midlander Donna Ross perform with the Dallas Ballet and to visit with her backstage afterwards. Donna is the daughter of Betty Lloyd and Don Ross. On Sunday the Ittners were treated to an elegant buffet at the newly opened Lincoln Hotel and visited the new Dallas Museum of Art.

BACK FROM A delightful trip to St. Croix in the Virgin Islands are Maxine and Bob Hannifin.

Following a leisurely week there the couple toured Epcot Center in Orlando, Florida, and visited with former Midlanders Mary Nan and Howell Spear at their estate "Briar Patch," in Perkinston, Mississippi, en route home.

TEN MIDLANDERS recently enjoyed a week of skiing at Mount Crested Butte, Colorado. Members of the Flatlanders Ski Club, they participated in a trip sponsored by the Texas Ski Council.

Going from here were Elaine and Bob Haskell, Glenna and Steve Haskell, June Scobey and Jill and Jack Ereira and their children Darrel, Simeon and Maria. They were joined by two Iraan couples, Martha and Rick Yocom and Karen Marvis Schneider.

The group had a good week, winning third place in the Texas Cup Race and in their off-ski hours enjoying the parties sponsored by the ski council and the shopping in the nearby village of Crested Butte.

While they were there the Olympic B and C ski teams were competing for the Crested Butte Cup.

RECENT HOUSEGUESTS of Fuffy and Bill Green were Bill's sister Charlotte (Mrs. A.R.) Gossett of Atlanta, Georgia, and his cousin June (Mrs. Jack) Simpson of Cleburen and their husbands. Illness prevented another cousin, Shirley Gardner and her husband Morris, of Fort Worth from attending. Whether visiting in one another's homes or traveling, the four couples enjoy lots of good times together and are looking forward to a trip to Colorado this summer.

Among other entertainment, the men enjoyed golfing at Midland Country Club while the wives attended the club's Ladies' Association luncheon.

AND LAST BUT not least, it's good to see former Midlander Maryl Curry back in town again. Now residing in the Tampa, Florida, area, she is here for a three-week visit.

Duck's feet never reach freezing

Hearst Feature Service

A duck's feet nearly freeze in icy water. But they don't — and its upper-body temperature stays constant — because all birds are protected by a network of arteries and veins in their legs called the rete mirabile, or "miraculous net."

In all warm-blooded animals, arteries carry warm, oxygen-rich blood to the extremities. Veins return the cooler, "used" blood to the heart and lungs. In a bird, however, reports an article in the February issue of Science Digest, the flow of warm blood to the feet is carefully regulated. If it were not, the bird would quickly lose heat through these featherless appendages. That is where the rete comes in. Blood entering the legs transits this tight bundle of vessels. The arteries lie next to veins filled with cooler, in-bound blood. Heat is exchanged, "preheating" the blood in the veins. As a result, a bird loses very little body heat, expending just enough to keep the feet from freezing.

Family organization sponsors film series

From Staff Reports

Families-in-action will sponsor a film series "Focus on the Family" Monday, Wednesday and Friday and March 12, 14 and 16 at 7 p.m. on KMID-TV.

Families-in-action, a Midland County organization whose goals are to reach and help family situations, to provide follow-up assistance with opportunity for motivation and growth, to reach the community and provide an opportunity for response.

The series, featuring Dr. James C. Dobson, one of the nation's leading psychologists and a family counseling authority, has been viewed by more than 4 million people since its release two years ago, and more than 15,000 churches have presented the seven-part series, which includes the films "Shaping the Will Without Breaking the Spirit," "Christian Fathering," "Preparing for Adolescence: The Origins of Self-Doubt," "Preparing for Adolescence: Peer Pressure, Sexuality," "What Wives Wish Their Husbands Knew About Women: The Lonely Housewife" and "What Wives Wish Their Husbands Knew About Women: Money, Sex and Children."

"This series offers churches and schools one of the nation's most popular authorities on family life in a format that combines information, entertainment and inspiration," said Francis W. Heatherly, senior vice president of Word, Inc.'s books and educational products division.

Best-selling author of seven books, including his latest "Straight Talk to Men and Their Wives," Dobson is associate clinical professor of Pediatrics at the University of Southern California School of Medicine and a member of the attending staff of Children's Hospital of Los Angeles in the division of medical genetics. His radio program, also entitled "Focus on the Family," is syndicated by 200 stations in the United States.

Viewers are invited to call 56-FOCUS for further assistance. Trained volunteers will be available to help families and will be answering phones from 10 a.m.-10 p.m. for a two-month period after the conclusion of the series.

If additional help is needed, a minister from the denomination of the caller's choice will be referred. Should long-term help be indicated, the minister can refer callers to an assistance agency if desired. If the caller specifically requests non-church counsel he may instead be given names of helping agencies available.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

Study separates girls from boys

Hearst Feature Service

How do girls think and learn? Are they smarter than boys? What are the cultural and economic differences among girls? Do girls need separate programs, separate leaders, separate perceptions of opportunity?

The academic jury is still out on many of these questions, but the Girls Club of America, Inc., has come up with some fresh insights through a roving national seminar.

"There is no evidence that girls are smarter than boys," said Dr. Lizbeth J. Martin, a post-doctoral scholar doing research at Stanford University School of Medicine department of psychiatry and behavioral science.

"There are three to four times as many boys diagnosed with learning disabilities as girls. Males seem to be at risk for a variety of developmental problems, including biological vulnerability. With normal children, there is very little functional difference. Boys and girls actually perform the same, but they have different approaches."

HER RESEARCH with normal six-year-olds and 10-year-olds revealed that they got the same answers in the test she used, but by different strategies. "The brain has left and right hemispheres. Females tend one-half of the time to use one-half the brain and one-half the time to use the other half. Males stick to one side of the brain. But they both get the correct answer."

The girls do have the edge in grades. An all-American report card, a nation-wide sample of high school seniors just before graduation, was supplied by the National Center for Educational Statistics, an agency of the U.S. Department of Education. Center official Vance Grant listed these figures:

Mostly As: 9.2 percent boys and 14.7 percent girls;
As and Bs: 16.6 boys and 24.9 girls;
Bs: 20.1 boys and 12.7 girls;
Bs and Cs: 28.2 boys and 23.6 girls;
Cs: 16.5 boys and 10.2 girls;
Cs and Ds: 7.1 boys and 3.7 girls;
D and below: 1.4 boys and 0.6 girls;
Not reporting: 0.8 boys and 0.6 girls.

"Girls spent more time on homework; 21.4 percent noting five to 10 hours a week as compared to 14.7 percent for the boys. This study, in 1980, was a little too early to reflect the influence of the computer," Grant said.

"Get those girls on the computers, and early," is the advice of Stanford's Prof. Patrick Suppes, who holds the Lucy Stearn philosophy chair and who founded Computer Curriculum Corp. in 1967.

Emperor not careful enough

By The Associated Press

Historian Suetonius says Roman Emperor Domitian took great pains to avoid being ambushed, writing that he even "lined the walls of the colonnades in which he used to walk with phengite (a white, translucent stone), to be able to see in its brilliant surface the reflection of all that went on behind his back."

But to no avail, for he was murdered Sept. 18, 96 A.D., by household staff members.

Because they are usually made from a piece of rouleau, fabric loops are often called rouleau loops. They are very decorative, fasten over ball buttons and can be used singly at the top of slit openings. They can also be spaced down an overlapping opening or close together down a cuff, sleeve or front or back bodice opening for a rather old-fashioned look. Loops do not provide a firm opening unless they are set in a continuous row. When a single loop is used it will fasten more firmly over the button if the ends of the rouleau are placed on top of each other. Make trial loops to fit the buttons until the exact length required is established.

We have a magnificent array of patterns and fabrics plus all the notions you'll need to complete your next sewing project in a very professional manner. Romance hits pages of Harvard Business Review

Hearst Feature Service

Sex shows up in the strangest places, but no one ever expected to find it in the solemn, bottom-line-minded pages of the Harvard Business Review.

The Review has never been known to appeal to readers possessed of prurient interests. Typical issues take full frontal looks at such subjects as "antitrust risk analysis," "end-game strategies for declining industries" and "three essentials of product quality." But in a publishing move rare in its 61-year history, the usually staid, board-room-proper Review is hitting the newsstands this week with a story that's hot, sexy and controversial.

Eliza Collins, the Review's senior editor, spent a year writing "Managers and Lovers," an intimate portrayal of four unnamed top-level executive couples who meet in the corridors of corporate power, fall in love and attempt to sustain their relationships in the face of bitter office infighting.

According to her own boss, Collins essayed the problems created by corporate office coupling without condemning the practice, which business community observers say is inevitable, "natural" and increasingly commonplace as more and more women begin to join men at the highest management levels.

Basing her story on the experiences of friends and acquaintances, Collins took pains to protect the confidentiality of her sources, according to managing editor David Ewing.

"There are so many more women in business now than ever before," the 60-year-old Ewing said. At that executive breeding ground, the Harvard Business School, where the review is published, "we have 150 women enrolled this year. They're still in a minority in a class of 750, but that's 150 more women than we had 10 years ago." It's the same way in the business world, where women are arriving in unprecedented numbers. And it's causing unprecedented, but predictable, managerial problems. Any situation in which you have men and women working as peers, you're going to find romance springing up," he said.

But Ewing stressed that "these people Eliza has written about really fall in love with each other. They're not the types who just want to get in the sack for a night. They fall in love."

Ewing said that most executive romances begin between colleagues who become fast friends. "And that friendship often blossoms into something else." The problem, Ewing said, is that romance, lovely as it is, is inefficient. And inefficiency is bad business.

But on the bright side, Collins' research revealed that most such boardroom love affairs survive.

DEAR ABBY

Good example, not sample, best for children

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Concerning your response to "Conscientious Mother," I would agree that consistency in religious training is essential, but far more important than going to the same church every Sunday is for parents to live daily lives that embody the best and most noble tenets of all religions.

If you take your children to the same church every Sunday and then set negative examples, you might as well take them to the pool hall for all the good it will do them. True religion is taught first in the home, and then the church. — JIM ENGLISH

DEAR MR. ENGLISH: Thanks for saying in plain English what all churchgoing people need to know. To recap the letter to which you refer: The divorced mother of two daughters, 8 and 11, had custody of the girls, but their father had them every other weekend. Father had remarried and joined his wife's church (Baptist). The children had been baptized Catholic and had attended Mass every Sunday. Father wanted to take the girls to the Baptist church every other Sunday. Mother thought consistency in their religious upbringing was important — that going back and forth between the Catholic and Baptist services would only confuse them, so Father should take the girls to Catholic services when he had them for the weekend.

I agreed with Mother.

Well, an avalanche of letters hit my desk — overwhelmingly critical of my view. Some said, "Of course you'd agree with the mother because you're Catholic." (I'm not. I'm Jewish.)

Most insisted that unless we are exposed to many different religious views, including Lutheran, Methodist, Jewish, Christian Science, Mormon and even atheism, we can't be expected to make an intelligent choice.

I agree. A variety of religious beliefs should indeed be studied, but I maintain that children under 10 should be brought up to believe in one church. To alternate weekly between the Catholic and Baptist churches AT SUCH A TENDER AGE would only confuse them.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. There is a guy at work who is around 35, married and obsessed with me. I am in my mid-20s and single.

He leaves flowers on my desk, calls me on the phone and drops notes on my desk.

I told him I care for him only as a friend, but that did not discourage him. He continued pestering me, so I finally told him to please leave me alone. I hate to resort to informing his supervisors because I don't want to see him lose his job.

A lot of women must have this problem. How should I handle it? — HARASSED IN MILFORD, N.J.

DEAR HARASSED: Tell him that you never date married men, and that if he continues to harass you, you will report him to his supervisor. And if that doesn't cool him down, report him.

Comet awaited

BOSTON (AP) — Astronomers at Prospect Hill Observatory predict Halley's Comet will be brighter than expected when it returns within view of the earth in 1986.

Book stresses better photography

By HOLT CONFER
Copley News Service

If Hank Kellner were a paper hanger, he'd work with just one arm. I've known Hank for quite a few years (during that time we've even collaborated on an article or two), teaching at Baldwin Senior High School (in Baldwin, N.Y.). He's also an adjunct associated professor at Nassau Community Community College, in Garden City, N.Y.

Now you might suppose that two teaching jobs would be enough activity for most anyone, but Hank Kellner likes to be really busy. For years he's been a practicing photojournalist, doing stories and pictures for over 50 national publications. But even that wasn't enough to do, so he wrote a book called "125 Photos for English Composition classes" and another one called "A Guide for Freelance Photographers."

You'd think that by this time, the guy would take a vacation, but no, he's at it again. I just got a copy of his new book — written for use in high school photography courses — "How to be a Better Photographer."

This new book, profusely illustrated with Hank's own pictures, takes fledgling photographers through a whole series of practical camera work. Beginning with principles of composition, moving on to practical applications, the text then explains the basics of photographing places, things, animals, the outdoors and buildings. Then if you're fairly competent at this point, Hank goes on to explain how to market your work, as well as what kind of future you can expect to find in the photographic field.

Finally, Hank includes 10 camera projects that students can work on to practice what they've been learning. Incidentally, at the end of each chapter, Hank provides questions for review and discussion. If you're teaching yourself, you might want to pause here and see just how much you've learned from the preceding pages. And if you're using this book as a text, Hank has given you some interesting guidance on what was important in the preceding chapter.

For example, here are the "test" questions from the chapter on photographing people:

— What is the most important point to remember if you want to create successful photos of people?

— Why is it extremely important to choose the setting for an environmental portrait carefully?

— What should be your first step after you decide to create an environmental photograph?

— What is the main difference between a studio portrait and an environmental portrait?

— Why is sunlight filtered through a window curtain considered to be one of the most beautiful light sources?

I suppose by now you've noticed I didn't answer any of these questions — you might want to think about the answers for awhile, you might want to look them up in one of your own reference books, or maybe — just maybe — you'd like to buy Hank Kellner's book ... for yourself or for classroom use.

"How to be a Better Photographer" is available from the publisher, J. Weston Walch, P.O. Box 685, Portland, ME 04104. The cost is $10.25 postpaid.

Hermit crabs race in bar

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The avant-garde of the racing world gather in a Stone Avenue bar here every Saturday.

Post time is 9 p.m.

About 8:30, participants and spectators start gravitating toward the track, an 8-foot-wide green disk cut from plywood and laid across two tables in a corner of the lower level of the bar. It has a yellow circle painted in the center and a 3-inch-wide yellow stripe around the edge.

By 9 o'clock, a crowd of 50 has assembled.

A man in a black shirt and red ball cap unties a rope from the wall and lowers a cylindrical steel cage from a beam onto the center of the track.

He steps up to the microphone.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he asks, "are you ready to race some crabs?"

YEAAHH!

Yes, sports fans, crab racing.

Tucson is one of 29 cities where a chain of college bars has introduced the sport.

Hermit crabs, so called because they live in abandoned shells, race from the center to the edge of the circular track.

Contestants rent the crabs from the house for a dollar.

Winners get T-shirts and champagne. The grand champion gets an umbrella-size pink foam rubber crab with huge yellow eyes.

Twenty crabs are distributed. Each player must name his crab to register for the race. Richard Petty, Melvin and Howard, Lucky Luciano and Betty Boop were among the recent contestants.

No yelling, pointing or leaning is allowed during a race.

The attendant says he will prompt the crabs with squirts from a water bottle. He will also squirt any fans who don't follow the rules, he says.

Less than half a minute after the starting whistle blows, the first heat is over. A crab named Steve has bolted the 40 inches to victory in only 27 seconds.

Christian Women hold luncheon

Midland Christian Women's Club will have an "Up and Away Luncheon" noon Wednesday at Midland Country Club.

Kathy Atkin, woman's investment counselor with Texas American Bank, will present a program for women interested in knowing more about financial investing.

Dianne and Lonnie Jordan of Odessa will present music. Dianne has sung with choirs and ensembles for several years. Lonnie, owner of the Kettle Restaurants in Midland and Odessa, traveled extensively singing with his father, a Christian speaker, and has been named Gospel Singer of the Year.

The keynote speaker will be Sandi Misa of Round Rock, who was recently featured in Progress magazine. She was reared by deaf parents and is a professional interpreter for the deaf and signs her speaking engagements. She is a wife with two daughters.

The luncheon's cost is $10.50 and reservations must be made by Monday by calling either 684-5093 or 683-9861. Reservations not kept must be paid for anyway. A nursery at Memorial Christian Church will be provided for pre-school children and mothers are asked to bring a sack lunch for their child.

The group has no formal membership and is nondenominational with all interested women invited.

Technology aids farmers

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — New technology advances in agriculture will help American farmers keep their leadership position in the world market.

According to Norman M. Goldfarb, president of Calgene Inc., a plant biotechnology firm, the increasingly competitive agriculture market will force American farmers to adapt to a new high-tech farming environment.

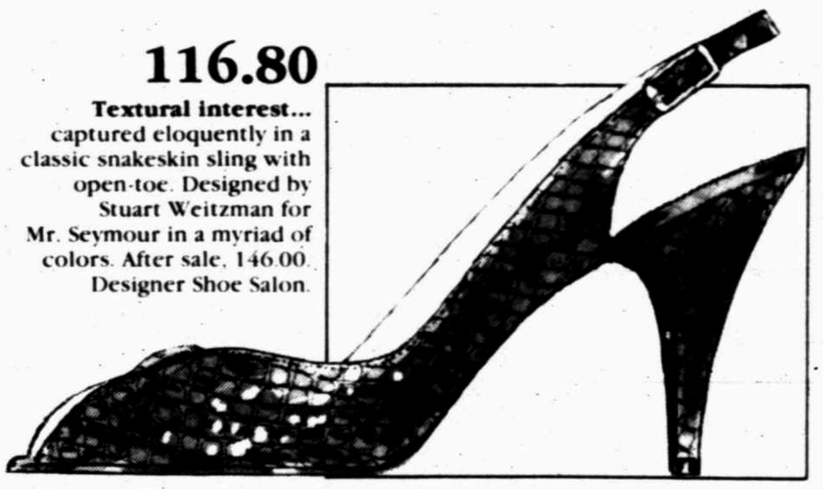

"In this decade, the nation's farmers will be using a variety of bioengineered agricultural products to make more accurate planting decisions, improve cost-controls and crop yield," he said.

GIVE ME A SMILE
LEAVE THEM ON YOUR PANTS

A pocket is a pouch used to carry small objects. There are many places where they are needed, but under your gums is not one of them. The small objects which get carried in the pockets of your teeth (should you be unfortunate enough to develop them) are bits of decayed food, probably samplings from Monday night's spaghetti, Tuesday morning's scrambled eggs, and Wednesday afternoon's tuna melt.

When these items are not brushed or flossed out from under your gums, they make permanent residence by embedding themselves under the gum line, turning to bacteria and pus filled pockets. At this point, your teeth have been "sold" to periodontal disease. If the problem goes untreated, the neighborhood will soon become "condemned" and your teeth will move...eventually out.

Before your teeth become pockets for foods that the rest of your body would be glad to receive, call a periodontist and learn how to keep your mouth and gums healthy. Take care of your teeth and leave your pockets on your pants.

A "touch pf pyorrhea" is something like a "touch of pregnancy", But one is all over in 9 months.

Judge criticizes company

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Calling the Dalkon Shield "an instrument of death, mutilation and disease," a federal judge accused three top officials of A.H. Robins Co. of putting profits above the health of women who used the intrauterine birth control device.

U.S. District Judge Miles Lord lectured the officers of the pharmaceutical company Wednesday, after approving settlement of seven lawsuits over the contraceptive for a reported $4.6 million.

"Your company, without warning to women, invaded their bodies by the millions and caused them injuries by the thousands," Lord said in a prepared speech.

"Your company in the face of overwhelming evidence denies its guilt and continues its monstrous mischief. You have taken the bottom line as your guiding beacon and the low road as your route. This is corporate irresponsibility at its meanest."

Less than an hour after the hearing, Robins issued a statement denying the judge's allegations. The company, based in Richmond, Va., accused Lord of bias and "a gross abuse of judicial discretion and power."

As the judge spoke, the officials — E. Claiborne Robins Jr., president; William Forrest, chief counsel; and Dr. Carl Lundsford, director of research and development — sat silently beside their attorneys, who objected strenuously to Lord's comments.

Earlier in the proceedings, the judge had required the three to read a speech on corporate irresponsibility he had given before a church group in 1981. But he saved his real fire for the courtroom, saying: "I hope it burns its mark into your soul."

Lord accused Lundsford of violating "every ethical precept" of the Hippocratic oath, the medical profession's promise to save lives, and told Forrest, "You have not brought honor to your profession."

The judge then criticized the company for failing to notify women who may still be wearing the shield that it should be removed. The shield was inserted in more than 2 million women in the early 1970s but was taken off the market in 1974 because of evidence that it caused infections and other problems.

"Under your direction your company has in fact continued to allow women, tens of thousands of them, to wear this device — a deadly depth charge in their wombs, ready to explode at any time," Lord said. "The only conceivable reasons you have not recalled this product are that it would hurt your balance sheet ... "

Lord said more than 9,000 women have made claims that they "gave up part of their womanhood" as a result of the shield. There are more than 3,000 cases still pending in the nation's courts.

"And when the time came for these women to make their claims against your company, you attacked their characters," he said. "You inquired into their sexual practices and into the identity of their sex partners. You exposed these women — and ruined families and reputations and careers — in order to intimidate those who would raise their voices against you."

Lord said he had asked the officials to be in court when the settlements were signed because of the company's history "of reneging on agreements."

Several women who had sued the company were present at the two-hour hearing, and some of them wept as Lord spoke.

Hospital admissions, length of stays decline

CHICAGO (AP) — Hospital admissions are declining and stays are shortening because more people are unemployed, more patients have to pay a higher percentage of their medical bills themselves and there are more alternatives to hospital care, an economist says.

"There are a number of reasons — we're not sure which one is dominating," David Dolkart, manager of health economics studies for the American Hospital Association, said Wednesday.

Admissions dropped about 88,000 in the first 11 months of 1983 compared with the same period in 1982, from 34,953,000 to 34,865,000, he said. Although admissions increased among people over 65, they dropped 2.6 percent for people under 65, he said.

Meanwhile, the average length of stay dropped 2.8 percent during the same period, from 7.2 days to 7.0, Dolkhart said.

"It's a long-term decline going back a number of years," Dolkhart said.

He listed these contributing factors:

—A slowly dropping unemployment rate. Workers just back on the job may be covered by less-liberal benefit plans and may opt for fewer elective procedures.

—More deductible and co-payment benefit plans.

—Medicaid program restrictions.

Marriage brings another country's problems home

WASHINGTON (AP) — The atmosphere in the house is anxious. Her husband gets only a glimpse of sleep each night. And every hour, they check the latest reports from their battered land.

For Julie Cole Bouhabib, wife of Abdullah R. Bouhabib, the Lebanese ambassador to the United States, "Life's become much more intense."

"Now we're waiting."

Mrs. Bouhabib said she is concentrating on supporting her husband while the Gemayel government fights for survival and the U.S. Marines and other units of the multinational peacekeeping force begin withdrawal.

"He's involved in a lot of hard work," she said Thursday. "Yet we're continuing to go on with our lives and hope things work out."

Mrs. Bouhabib, 33, is one of three Americans married to foreign ambassadors now serving in Washington. The other two are Pamela White Jacovides, wife of the ambassador from Cyprus, and Jessie Hawkins Amany, wife of the ambassador from the Ivory Coast.

AP Laserphotos

Julie Bouhabib, left, wife of the Lebanese ambassador to the United States, and Pamela Jacovides, wife of the Cypriot ambassador, find themselves in the position of being raised in one country and living with the problems of another.

UNLIKE MOST diplomatic spouses in Washington, these women find themselves in the position of living in their own country while engulfed in the problems and culture of another.

"My loyalties are not divided between the countries," said Mrs. Amany, who was born in Washington, D.C. "I feel comfortable with each."

Yet at times, these women walk a diplomatic tightrope and must refrain from saying anything that might be construed as a political statement.

"There are some things we just can't say," Mrs. Bouhabib said.

She added, however, that she is "waiting to see what happens, if negotiations will work. I think this is a time when something will happen."

Of President Reagan's decision to withdraw U.S. Marines to battleships off Beirut, Mrs. Bouhabib said: "I think Reagan is giving Lebanon a great deal of support."

Since her husband, a close family friend of Lebanese president Amin Gemayel, was appointed to his post a year ago, the Bouhabibs have spent much of their time trying to explain policies of the Gemeyal government to influential Americans.

Because Washington is a city where social life is often an extension of the business day, the Bouhabibs have entertained two or three times a week, inviting small groups to dine on such Lebanese specialities as babbaghounish, an eggplant dish, and meatballs called kibbie.

THEIR SPACIOUS quarters just off Rock Creek Parkway are decorated with enormous oriental rugs. A Portguese maid offers coffee and tea from silver pots.

"I never anticipated living like this," said Mrs. Bouhabib, who grew up in Aiken, S.C., the daughter of a draftsman for E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. Her mother was a librarian.

Mrs. Bouhabib met her husband on a blind date when she was a biology student at Vanderbilt University, where he taught economics. They were married in 1974.

Two years later, he went to work for the World Bank. He worked there for seven years before being appointed ambassador.

Mrs. Bouhabib said she worries about her husband's security when he travels to Lebanon but when he is in America, "I feel confident."

Pamela Jacovides married Andrew J. Jacovides five years ago when she was working in New York City's office of consular affairs and he was representing his Mediterranean island of Cyprus at the United Nations. He was appointed ambassador and they moved to Washington two months later.

"THIS LIFE may look glamorous on the outside, but inside we work as hard as any housewife," Mrs. Jacovides said as she sat in the sunny living room of the ambassador's five-bedroom quarters just off Embassy Row.

Mrs. Jacovides said she spends much of her time supervising the household staff and promoting Cyprus in the United States by making speeches and attending a myriad of social and professional functions.

When her husband was promoted to his new post, she enrolled in a public speaking course so she wouldn't be nervous when asked to make speeches.

Much of her time is spent organizing the household and attending functions important to Cyprus.

"It's hard to make real friends," she said. "You don't have the time with the demands of speaking and social gatherings."

Mrs. Jacovides, 41, grew up Red Bank, N.J., the daughter of a New York real estate man. She met her husband several years after graduating from Mount Vernon College in Washington and getting a job as a secretary at the United Nations.

"Working at the United Nations was better than four years in college and a master's degree," she said. "I got so much experience."

Mrs. Bouhabib said she has never lived in Lebanon, although she and the couple's three children visit her husband's family there every summer.

"EVERY TIME we went, it got smaller and smaller and we could travel less and less," she said. "We always intended to go back to Lebanon. And we will go back. But I'd worry about going back now, primarily for the children."

Hong Kong's future cloudy

By The Associated Press

If you have noticed that Hong Kong seems to be in the news more often these days, you are correct.

The lease by which Great Britain continues to oversee Hong Kong is due to expire in 1997. As a result, the future of the area is unclear at present. It is possible Hong Kong will become a division of the People's Republic of China, under terms which remain to be worked out.

Meanwhile, its 5.2 million residents wait and wonder about the future of what is said to be one of the world's busiest and fastest-paced cities.

Most local residents are carrying on as usual, though some professionals are leaving the colony to establish themselves in the United States and other countries, according to Dr. Philip Chi Kuon Kwok, chairman of Wing On Holdings Ltd., which owns one of the colony's largest department store chains.

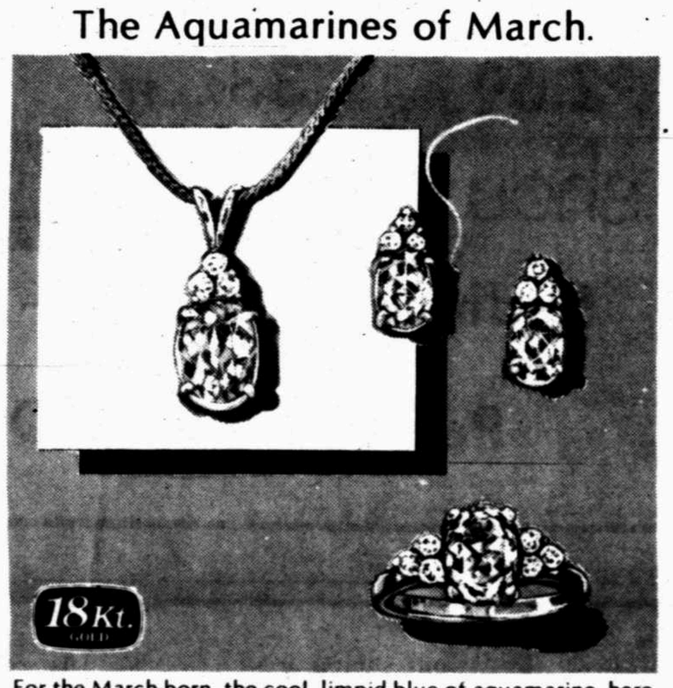

Recently in New York to promote Hong Kong's foreign trade with the United States as part of an economic mission, Kwok offered an interesting picture of what life is like for ordinary residents especially regarding home and home furnishings buying decisions.

The department stores his family runs, which were founded by his grandfather in 1907, sell home furnishings in one main store and six branches.

Becoming an adult — even getting married — does not necessarily mean an individual will move out of the parental home. Young people must often wait until they can find a place to live, he said, and housing is expensive and scarce.

Housing is a major preoccupation of the government; about 35,000 housing units are constructed each year under government sponsorship, mainly in high-rise buildings. According to Kwok, perhaps as much as half of the population is housed in such buildings.

THE ROOM DOWN UNDER

Text by David Lee Forrest

"Ray" found that by going under ground, he could have storage space, tornado and fallout protection for $9,455 and not lose any space in his yard.

"Ray" and his 3-year-old son play on a computer he keeps in his fallout shelter.

Ronnie Carroll descends into a fallout shelter he built in a Midland backyard.

Even in Midland, far from such tortured battlegrounds as Beirut, Afghanistan and Central America, some people are quietly digging into fallout shelters — just in case. Meanwhile, the cubbyholes are being put to use.

The backyard fallout shelter is sometimes thought of as a fad item of the 1950s and early 1960s, not much different from the hula hoop and the Davy Crockett coonskin cap.

However, the fallout shelter may prove more like those other '50's staples, rock 'n roll and the Cold War, which, at least for the near future, appear to be here to stay.

"There's a lot of interest in it right now," said Ronnie Carroll, owner of Earth-Shelter Construction Company, a Midland firm which builds private fallout shelters.

"I do about half a dozen a year," he said.

He has built about 25 private fallout shelters — poured concrete, steel-reinforced, underground boxes usually in a person's backyard — in West Texas since he built his first one in 1976.

"I was a mason by trade," Carroll said. "I was building fireplaces and people asked me if I could build a storm shelter."

He decided he could and did.

"I was building storm shelters when a doctor in Coleman called and wanted to know if I could build a fallout shelter."

Carroll was interested and began researching radiation shelters.

"The more I read, the more I found out that there were conflicting opinions. No one knows," he said about the shelters.

See SHELTER BUILDER, Page 2F

This intake ventilator for a local fallout shelter is constructed of oil field casing, a reworked brake drum and an AC Delco car air filter.

"The more I read, the more I found out that there were conflicting opinions. No one knows," Carroll said of his research on radiation shelters.

The family fallout shelter lies a foot and a half beneath the backyard scattered with children's toys.

Near the back fence, two small, white ventilators protrude from the well-maintained grass like metal mushrooms. Between them, a horizontal steel door — rising only a few inconspicuous inches above the lawn — covers the steep staircase leading down into the fallout shelter.

Its owner, Ray — a fictious name — said he didn't want his real name used because he feared someone might burglarize the shelter. His family lives in a quiet neighborhood on the west side of Midland.

Most of his neighbors don't know about the shelter, despite the obvious flurry of activity when it was being constructed.

"Most of the people who saw it assumed it'd be a swimming pool," he said.

Ray, 36, is in the oil and gas production business, although his own job involves operating computers. He's married and has a 3-year-old son and a 5-year-old daughter.

He believes his shelter is a practical, multi-purpose investment.

"I'm not stressing the fact that this is a fallout shelter," Ray said. "That alone would not have sold it to me.

"The whole thing that started all this is that my wife is terrified of tornadoes," Ray said, and they discussed getting a storm shelter.

At the same time he wanted more room.

"You know, typical husband, I had too many hobbies," he said, so he needed more storage and work space. His hobbies include hunting, camping, computers and aviation.

He was also considered building an extension onto his house.

"I discovered it'd cost about $10,000 to add on a 12 by 12 room."

He found that by going underground, he could have storage space, tornado and fallout protection for $9,455 and not lose any space in his yard.

"You get a shelter, junk room and party room," he said.

He hired Ronnie Carroll of Earth-Shelter Construction Company to build a shelter for him in 1979. It is 16 feet by 12 feet, has a 9-inch thick steel-reinforced concrete ceiling and has 18 inches of dirt on top of it.

See FAMILY SHELTER, Page 2F

Family uses shelter space for storage, hobbies

Ray regrets his shelter doesn't have three feet of earth above it because that would be better for his lawn.

The grass on top on the shelter "is not as green in the summer as the rest," he said, unless he gives it extra care.

Inside, the shelter looks more like a crowded corner of someone's garage than it does a nuclear war bunker.

On top of a desk by the radiation blind wall, Ray has a Radio Shack Color Computer, two television sets (one hooked to the computer, the other to the TV cable) and a telephone and intercom system connected to his house. The wiring runs through conduits inside the poured concrete walls.

A small bed stands by the opposite wall and a hodgepodge of camping equipment, food, filing cabinets, boxes and other odds and ends are piled up against the other walls.

"As you can see, it's a typical husband's junk room," Ray said. "Every man with a hobby needs a junk room. I'm a packrat, but with a place like this I can afford to be."

Having a fallout shelter also prevents some marital discord, according to Ray.

He picked up a pair of dirty wading boots and said, "To put something like that in a woman's closet is a felony," but down in the shelter it's out of his wife's way but handy for him.

"I know where everything is. She never bothers my stuff. It's neat," Ray said with a grin.

"As a junk room alone, it's already paid for itself.

"Also, I can sit down watching football games and yell all I want," he said. "I'm down here and no one bothers me.

"I'm going to have teenagers in 10 years or so," Ray said, and he hopes to keep the family home peaceful by exiling his children's parties to the shelter.

The shelter has been used by the family a number of times during severe weather.

With bedrolls, food and other camping supplies already stored in the shelter, it stays conveniently prepared for occupancy.

"Plus, if a tornado ever knocks the house down, we can stay here for a couple of weeks," Ray said.

He plans on making it more cozy by building shelves, texturizing the gray concrete walls and carpeting the floor. It already requires almost no heating or cooling because the earth serves as a heat sink.

He is so taken with the underground life that he wants to one day build an earth-sheltered home powered by wind and solar energy.

"This is the last house I'm building above ground," he said.

Ray is not sure how long his family could stay down in the shelter following a nuclear attack.

"If the outside were a blazing holocaust, it might seem pretty nice down here," he observed.

He is not a stereotypical survivalist, he said.

"I do wear 'camies' (camouflage) — when I hunt ducks," he joked.

Most of the so-called survivalists are probably more talk than action, he said, "like guys who wear Harley-Davidson T-shirts but don't own motorcycles."

"I'm not really a fatalist," he said.

"It might not be worth surviving anyway. If I survive a nuclear war and decide it isn't worth living, I could go jump off a bridge.

"But if I were dying and I didn't want to, that'd be a horse of a different color."

Midland updates defense strategy

By DAVID LEE FORREST
Lifestyle Writer

If a nuclear attack was anticipated, Midlanders would be asked to leave the city to stay in Scurry, Reagan and Glasscock counties, according to Bob Edgerton, the emergency management coordinator.

This is part of the United States' main current nuclear civil defense strategy — "crisis relocation planning" — which would have people leave cities and other high risk areas for rural areas and small towns.

At the moment, Midland's relocation plan is still being developed, according to Edgerton.

"We have a rough draft on that," he said. "It needs some more work."

"Of course," he noted, "there's a certain number who would have to stay behind" to keep the key services of the city running during the emergency period and they would need fallout protection here in Midland.

The last major survey of fallout shelter space in the city was made in the early 1970s.

"They did a pretty complete survey then," Edgerton said. "We're in the process of getting a new list. We're a little bit behind."

Currently, he is trying to enroll a local person in a fallout analysis school conducted by the Federal Emergency Management Agency to be trained in making shelter surveys.

While some of the buildings listed in the old survey as being suitable for fallout shelters — such as the old Scharbauer Hotel — no longer exist and the population has increased, booming construction has easily made up the difference, he said.

"There have been a lot of buildings added since then. We feel like we've pretty well kept pace. There is adequate, I feel, fallout protection."

No public fallout shelters in Midland are stocked with supplies, he said, because maintaining a perpetual supply of materials is no longer considered practical.

"They stocked all these things and they went bad and the building owners didn't like them being there," Edgerton said. "There'd probably be a hurry-up attempt to stock" in case of an emergency.

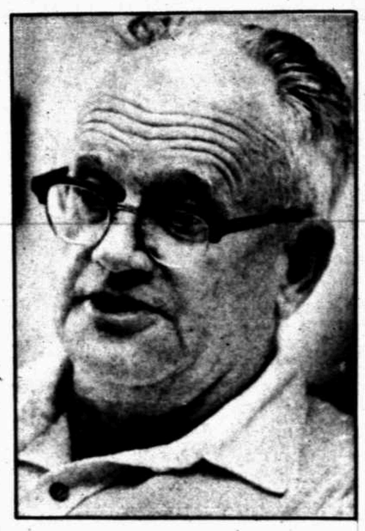

Edgerton said he sees no problem with individuals building their own private shelters.

"It just means they wouldn't be showing up at public shelters," he said. "If they've got a place for themselves, I feel they're a good idea."

While some of the buildings listed the last major fallout safety survey as being suitable — such as the old Scharbauer Hotel — no longer exist and the population has increased, booming construction has easily made up the difference.

"There have been a lot of buildings added since then. We feel like we've pretty well kept pace. There is adequate...fallout protection."

Bob Edgerton
Emergency Management Coordinator

Bob Edgerton

Edgerton said he doesn't receive many inquiries from the public on nuclear civil defense.

The last time there was much interest, he said, was "a couple of years ago, when the Afghanistan situation blew up."

"People run hot and cold," he observed. "It's hard to get people stirred up unless they're staring it right down the throat, then they want to know why something hasn't been done.

Is Midland a target?

By DAVID LEE FORREST
Lifestyle Writer

Does the Soviet Union have a nuclear warhead targeted for Midland?

While possibly no one outside of the Kremlin is really certain, the government believes that if Midland is a target, it is only a rather low-priority one.

"I don't think that at this time your area is considered a prime target area," said Bill McAda of the Federal Emergency Management Agency's regional office in Denton.

A study made in 1975 by the U.S. Department of Defense grouped cities in the United States in three target categories, he said.

Category I targets — considered the most likely to be hit — are nuclear "counterforce" areas, including missile silos and major air force bases, such as Abilene's Dyess Air Force Base.

Category II targets are "other places of high military value," which includes 15 places in Texas, such as El Paso and San Angelo.

Category III targets are any metropolitian area with a population of 50,000 or more. This is the only category Midland falls under, which McAda said makes it "not a real high risk area."

Even though Midland was not considered much of a target by the DOD, if an all-out nuclear war should erupt, it is possible that Midland could be in "a hellacious fallout situation," in McAda's words.

He stressed that there was no way to be sure how serious that might be because the amount of fallout would depend on a number of factors. Those variables include the prevailing winds, what targets are hit, how many bombs are used, how large they are and whether the bombs explode in the air or on the ground.

Even a local builder of private fallout shelters, Ronnie Carroll, admits that he isn't sure if Midland would be a target for nuclear attack, although he sees it as a very real possibility.

He pointed out that the Midland-Odessa area is important to the United States oil industry.

"It'd make you think it merits one little rocket. They have plenty of missiles," he said. "I hope not. I really don't know.

"Even if it wasn't targeted, if they hit El Paso, the prevailing winds would carry fallout to us."

Midland's emergency management coordinator, Bob Edgerton also believes that Midland is an unlikely target.

"You don't knock out the oil business by knocking out the offices," he said, "you knock out the refineries. That's just my personal opinion."

Builder considers fallout shelter a safe investment

Some of the information in government publications can be more than two decades old, he noted.

"They just keep handing us the same old stuff," he said.

Essentially, he said, he found the major differences between a fallout shelter and a concrete storm shelter are that a fallout shelter needs extra wall and ceiling thickness, a "radiation blind wall" between the door and living space to block gamma rays and it needs an air ventilation system to filter out radioactive particles.

In practical terms, said Carroll, "The difference between a fallout shelter and a storm shelter is about $1,800."

He builds each one to the customer's specifications, but his basic shelter design is 12 by 12 by 7 feet, with a nine- to 12-inch thick ceiling and six- to eight-inch thick walls.

Carroll said 10 inches of concrete cuts the amount of radiation a person would receive to "one-fortieth of what you'd get in the open air" from fallout. The earth on top on the buried structure provides further protection and keeps the temperature stable.

He has to custom-build or improvise many parts of his shelters.

For example, among the parts used in his ventilation systems are oil field casing, reworked brake drums and AC Delco autombile air filters.

"The stuff you buy pre-made is too flimsy," he said.

He has built one shelter aboveground for a paraplegic. Because he used an electric wheelchair he could not have rolled down into an underground room.

He has built some shelters for mobile home dwellers.

"It's sort of a dichotomy," Carroll admitted, but it can make sense to a mobile home owner during tornado weather.

"He can run out of his aluminum box into his concrete box."

He said a shelter's cost averages $30 to $50 per square foot. He called it a "sliding cost," since the larger the shelter, the less it costs per square foot to build.

"It's available at about the same cost per foot as your house," he said.

"The minimum for the average family is 12 by 12 (feet)," Carroll said. "The maximum is however large you want it."

The largest one he's built is a 1,200-square-foot shelter for a couple in the Saddle Club area. It also has a 12-foot-high ceiling because "the lady didn't want to feel claustrophobic." Carroll said it cost about $60,000.

They can be "as elaborate as you want," he said.

One of his sales pitches is that an underground fallout shelter adds to a home's resale value because it doesn't depreciate and requires no external maintenance.

The typical fallout shelter customer is "a person with a technical background — geologists, engineers, usually professional-type people," Carroll said.

"I've never built one for what you'd think of as a typical hardcore survivalist. Most of these people are family-oriented people. They're not fanatics.

"Storm shelter people are more emotional about it, fallout shelter customers are more logical."

He pointed out a fallout shelter is not an impulse purchase.

"It's something that takes a lot of deliberate thought."

The airing of the film "The Day After" didn't suddenly send Midlanders burrowing into their backyards for cover, according to Carroll.

"Interest has picked up but business hasn't," he said. One couple who saw the movie told him, "I never realized that this could really happen."

"The idea of waging war on a civilian population is not right," Carroll said. "We have two power blocs that hold each others' children hostage."

Carroll said he feels the government's civil defense measures are "pitiful."

"I don't want to come off sounding like a radical drum-beater, but it's a matter of fact," he claimed.

"Our whole thing is based on deterrence. We're not set up for the contingency that it might happen.

"They ought to give a tax credit to people who build these (fallout shelters). Actually, we're taking private responsibility for what ought to be a public responsibility.

"I think of these (fallout shelters) as insurance you don't have to die to collect. Of course, I don't even like the idea of insurance, but I carry it."

It annoys Carroll when he builds a fallout shelter and the new owners don't plan on using it at all unless World War III breaks out.

"If that's the only thing they're going to use it for, that bothers me. When I can talk them into using it for other reasons, I feel real good. I like it much better if they use it for living space or storage.

"It's a usable, livable space."

Carroll, however, admits that he does not have his own fallout shelter.

"I can't afford it," he said. "It's solid rock where I live.

"Besides, I have standing invitations to a lot of people's shelters I've built."

Carroll also builds storm shelters, basements, swimming pools, and septic systems. He said he really wants an opportunity to build a whole underground or earth-sheltered home.

"It's something unique," he said. "I like to build. It's my gig; it's my deal."

Nuclear-survival industry becoming a booming business, say execs

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Survival is an industry, too.

Cresson H. Kearny's book, "Nuclear War Survival Skills," appeared on a reading list televised at the end of "The Day After."

More than 6,000 orders were taken within the two weeks following, said Charles J. Wenk, general manager of Caroline House, the book's Aurora Ill., distributor. Kearny, in his introduction, says the book contains "field-tested instructions that, if followed by a large fraction of Americans... could save millions of lives.' It regularly sells, 10,000 copies a year.

Said Wenk, "It's not anti-nuke, it's not pro-nuke. It's (for) when the son-of-a-gun comes off. Everybody says, 'Aw, hell, we're all gonna die.' But what happens if you don't.?"

New World Survival Co. of Dalton, Ga., is selling pre-fab fallout shelters starting at $10,000. New World will ship and install.

The firm sells a complete line of survival gear, including weapons.

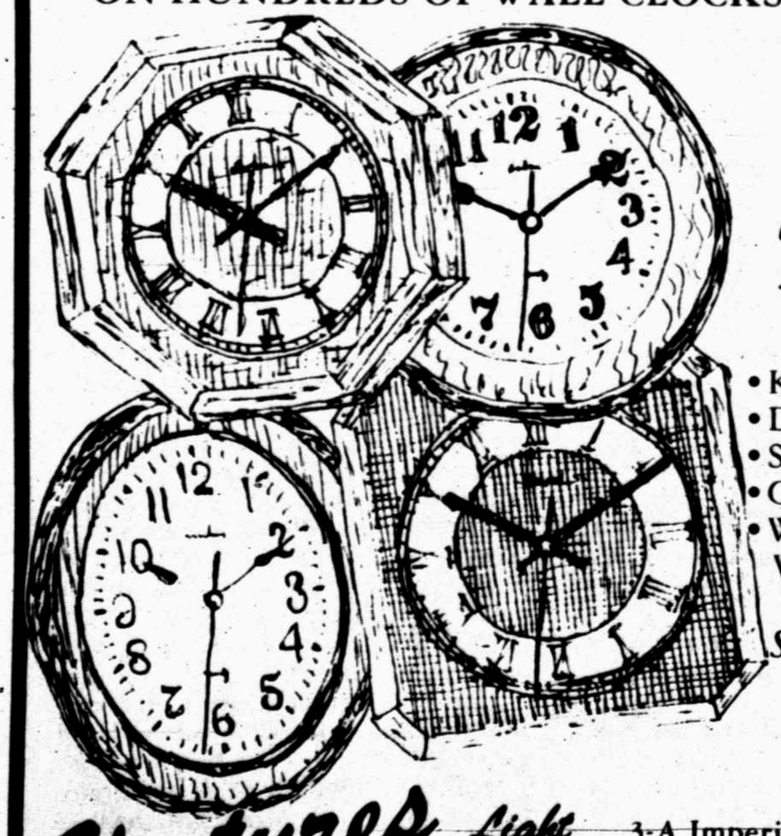

"More of your better-to-do people have really given this some serious thought," he said. "It used to be the hard-core survivalists. Now what we're running into is professional people.

"If you try to save baby seals that's okay, but if you try to save human beings you're weird," he said.

Brownell, who has made no personal survival plans, likes this approach: "I don't believe in individual survival. I agree no man is an island."

He acknowledges the whole subject is "almost downright macabre. You're ridiculed and everything else, but even Noah was ridiculed."

THE IMPORTANCE OF PERSONAL DEVELOPMENT AND IMAGE PROJECTION IN TODAY'S BUSINESS WORLD

A personal development course can pave the way for smoother human relations by teaching the techniques and proper attitudes for getting along with others. A personal development course can provide self-awareness of one's strenghts, weeknesess, desires, and the knowledge to acquire the traits of personality and appearance tha lead to success in the business world.

The proof of the value of personal development training is evident in the biographies of prominently successful people who have made the most of themselves and who have lived up to their potential. Many have had the kind of assistance that you will receive in your personal development course-assistance that has helped them to look at themselves objectively. Once aware of how their appearnce and personality affected others, they have made a genuine effort to improve their "image projection." This simply means that they have designed their appearance and personality for successs. You can do the same.

The clothes you wear have an affect on others. You will learn how to select the styles, colors, fabrics and accessories that are appopiate and becoming for you and for the business environment in which you will work. Awareness of lines, color, fabrics and accessories will make it possible for you to discriminate and to select the apparel that is right for the image you wish to project.

Personality has been described as the total effect one person has on another. If this is true, your success demands that you learn and practice good manners, good speech and good interpersonal relations. Your personal development course contains lessons on voice improvement, how to use the business telephone to greatest effect and the twelve steps to a winning personality.Summed up, your personal development course is more than a dress for success course, more than a good grooming course, more than a personality pays course In essence it is a "how-to" course to increase your self-awareness and to enhance your chances for success in the job market by teaching you how to project an image that potential employers will like so that thier response to your application for employment will be: "You're hired"

He is a member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of AIME, faculty sponsor for American Petroleum Institute student chapter at Midland College and is a deacon for the Golf Course Road Church of Christ, where he is active in the teaching and evangelistic program.

Hostesses for the meeting are Mrs. Ike Hynds and Mrs. John Bowers. The public is invited.

Health panel warns against combining pain-killing drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Common analgesic drugs that combine a number of pain killers should not be so readily available to the public because they can cause severe kidney damage when abused, said a National Institutes of Health panel.

These combination drugs, available in every drug store, can lead to kidney damage and failure if taken in large doses for long periods, the experts said recently.

The panel, brought together to consider the long-discussed connection between common pain relievers and kidney disease, also said there is little evidence that combination products are more effective than those with a single ingredient.

The most common analgesics are aspirin and related drugs, and acetaminophen, known to most people under the brand names Datril, Tylenol, Panadol and Anacin-3.

Phenacetin, a distant relative of acetaminophen, is another analgesic that may appear in some non-prescription products. But most uses of phenacetin were voluntarily ended by manufacturers years ago when it was implicated with kidney disease.

Dr. Roscoe R. Robinson of Vanderbilt University Medical Center, conference chairman, said there was little evidence occasional use of these combination products or single-ingredient pain killers caused harm.

However, availability of combination products with two or more analgesics should be restricted because of actual and potential abuse by the public, he said.

"Considerable evidence indicates that combinations of antipyretic (anti-fever) analgesics, taken in large doses over a long period of time, can cause kidney disease and chronic renal failure," the group said in a draft statement.

"In contrast, there is little evidence that preparations containing a single analgesic agent are similarly harmful," it continued.

Robinson said no one knows why ingredients which appear safe by themselves would cause kidney problems when combined with one another. But there are suggestions that the combinations have a direct toxic effect on tissue and may accumulate in the kidneys under sustained use, he said.

Bristol Myers Co., Inc., makers of Excedrin, one of the most widely used analgesics that combine aspirin and acetaminophen, said "the findings of the panel should be treated with great caution" even though the group found no evidence that these drugs caused harm when taken as directed.

The panel said it is hard to say what dose over what time would be harmful. However, one of the panelists, Dr. Franklin H. Epstein of Harvard Medical School, said an estimate based upon kidney patient interviews would be 10 tablets a day for a period of three years.

Severe kidney disease and failure stemming from pain killers strikes about 250 persons a year in the United States and cost about $40 million to treat. This number appears small, but it does not include the hidden prevalence of the disease in milder forms, which experts feel is much higher.

The panelists refused to name any products that contained a combination of pain relievers. But they said consumers should read analgesic labels and look for combinations of aspirin, formally called acetylsalicylic acid, and acetaminophen.

Combinations of aspirin-like ingredients also should be avoided for long-term use, they said. These include salicylamide and sodium, calcium, magnesium and choline salicylates.

Experimental cancer drug offers hope to patients

Hearst Feature Service

An experimental drug offers new hope for cancer patients by shrinking tumors without the devastating side effects caused by most types of chemotherapy, according to researchers.

The drug, Mitoxantrone, was proven effective in fighting breast cancer, leukemia and some lymph cancers in tests on 3,000 patients worldwide. In more than half the patients, it significantly reduced some of the worst toxic effects associated with chemotherapy, including severe nausea, hair loss and damage to the heart and healthy tissue.

Researchers in Chicago and Los Angeles said the drug has been approved for sale in Canada and predicted it would be available in the United States within a year.

"It will replace some of the currently available drugs for the treatment of cancer," said Dr. Jacob Bitran, a professor of medicine at the University of Chicago, who conducted clinical tests on the drug.

Mitoxantrone is currently available only on an experimental basis in some U.S. hospitals and clinics, including the University of Southern California's Kenneth Norris Jr. Cancer Hospital in Los Angeles.

The drug works by attacking the DNA, or genetic material, in some cancer tumors, according to Bitran. It could pave the way for a new generation of anti-cancer drugs that prevent cancer cells from reproducing, he said. The drug reduces the size of tumors, but does not eliminate them, and could be used in conjunction with other treatments.

Scientists said the drug will allow cancer patients to have a better quality of life by "significantly altering the tenor of cancer therapy."

"In terms of other types of chemotherapy, it's less debilitating, less toxic than those available now," Bitran said.

Dr. Darcy Spicer, a researcher at Norris Hospital, said Mitoxantrone — which will be sold under the trade name Novantrone — reduced breast tumor size in up to 40 percent of those tested.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Primroses popular throughout country

By ELVIN McDONALD

A few weeks ago I visited garden centers from San Jose to San Diego. This week I've been out in the New York flower market. Despite the different climates, it's amazing how much is the same, particularly when the subject is seasonal flowering pot plants such as primrose.

In California I saw lots of the fairy primrose, Primula malacoides, which is often used as a bedding and container garden flower in mild-winter gardens, and everywhere in cool plant rooms and greenhouses for its airy tiers of flowers. To grow this one, be prepared to sow the seeds in spring or early summer, for bloom beginning six to eight months later.

The same holds for Primula obconica, which has rounded leaves and big spheres of rounded flowers that come in exquisite colors. Be careful handling this primrose, however, as it can cause a skin rash. It too is frost-sensitive and is grown only as an annual.

The most popular and widely cultivated primrose is the polyanthus, which sends out strap-shaped leaves, and flowering stems from a basal rosette. The blooms are most typically lemon-yellow or apricot, but there are also blues, pinks and reds, often with a contrasting eye, that will make you weak-kneed.

The polyanthus is very cold-hardy, surviving winters in outdoor gardens far to the north. When we put it in pots we are quite naturally inclined to bring this primrose indoors. For longest life, display in the coolest temperatures possible, in bright light with some direct sun.

All these primroses bloom longest and most beautifully if the soil is never allowed to dry enough to wilt the leaves. Also promptly snip off spent flowers and any discolored foliage.

Q. What's the proper name and care for the bright-colored potted daisies sold at this time of year? Mine wilt and die within a matter of hours or days after bringing them home from the florist.

A. Cineraria (sin-er-air-ree-uh), which belongs to the genus Senecio, needs lots of water and cool to moderate temperatures, about 50-55F. at night, up to 60-65 in the daytime. Hot, direct sun and dry soil will quickly wither this plant beyond recovery. It does need bright light, including some direct sun, however, or the flower crop will be drastically reduced.

I don't mean to make the cineraria sound impossibly difficult. Its daisies come in brilliant colors and at the end of winter, exactly when we need them. This is the kind of seasonal flowering pot plant I think of more as a bouquet, meant to be enjoyed briefly where it can be most appreciated, then discarded.

Q. I've just received a dendrobium orchid in full bloom. Will it last longer in a terrarium?

A. No, the dendrobium, like most orchids, needs lots of fresh air, admittedly moist but not from being in the close atmosphere of a terrarium. When any orchid is actually in bloom, it's nice to bring it up close, say in your dining, living or bedroom, in bright light but where the sun's hottest rays won't strike and prematurely age the petals.

After blooming, your dendrobium will need lots of sun, through the spring and summer months. In autumn let it go quite dry, along with cooler temperatures. After a season of rest, increase the amount of water, fertilize lightly, and get ready for another round of flowers.

Vital details for success with orchids are in my notebook sheets. For your set send 50 cents coin and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope with "Orchids" written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305; in Canada, 4141 Glenayr Ave., Niagara Falls, Ont. L2E 6K1.

Quick Take: Heat-tolerant fuchsias are the specialty of Hidden Springs Nursery, Route 14, Box 159, Cookeville, Tenn: 38501 (send 40 cents for list). Grower Hector Black advises, "Never water a fuchsia that is wilted but has damp soil. This is usually related to excessive heat. Mist the foliage but wait until the soil surface feels dry before watering."

Q.T.: Unlike the usual ornamental peppers, which are fiery hot if eaten, 'Little Dickens' has sweet fruit, which is bright orange, cone-shaped and borne on dwarf bushes. It's offered by Harris Seeds, Moreton Farm, 3670 Buffalo Rd., Rochester, N.Y. 14624 (free catalog).

Q.T.: Turn wire clothes hangers into stakes: Bend out straight; cut to desired length with pliers. Open loop at top, bend at right angles to stick: use as holder for top-heavy flowers such as orchids or hyacinth.

Fresh flowers signal Spring

Hearst Feature Service

Now that winter is beginning to loosen its grip, you can enjoy fresh flowers from your now-dormant shrubs and trees by cutting selected branches and bringing them indoors.

The technique is far easier than forcing other spring plants such as tulips and hyacinths into indoor blossoming. Any healthy forsythia, pussy willow, crabapple, regular or dwarf apple will work nicely and reward you with blossom-laden branches just a few weeks after they're inside.

Cutting stems from these bushes and trees any earlier than mid-February can injure the plant because winter is still too intense, according to Doug Chapman, chief horticulturist at Michigan's Dow Gardens. But by the third week of February, the sun is higher in the sky, the days longer and the chance of winter injury far less because of moderating temperatures.

Cut a branch as long as may be needed and keep the pail in a cool place, such as a basement, until the flower buds swell and begin to show color. Chapman recommends covering the branches with a sheet of plastic during the first few days to prevent them from drying out.

Ocho Rios: Vacation paradise for whole family

By JACK BIESTERFELD
Copley News Service

Beautiful women pose by it. Children splash in the waters at the base of it. Tourists climb it. And photographers go crazy taking pictures of it. It is the most popular attraction on Jamaica's north coast.

It is Dunn's River Falls.

The falls undoubtedly are the highlight of a visit to Ocho Rios, but certainly they are not the only attraction in the resort village. There is the beautiful curving sand beach lined with palm trees and hotels. There are beautiful gardens overlooking the bay. There are plantations to tour and caves to explore. And there are native handicrafts to bargain for in the crafts market.

The crisp cool waters of Dunn's River Falls start their journey in the mountains surrounding the bay. They rush through the jungles and plantations around Ocho Rios until they cascade onto the beach and into the Caribbean just west of town.

There are paths leading along the river, and observation decks overlooking the falls. But the best way to experience the falls is to climb them.

THE TREK BEGINS at the base of the falls near a pool where the cool mountain river empties into the warm Caribbean. Guides are on hand for first-time climbers, or the adventuresome can head out on their own.

The foaming white waters splash and spray over the rocks and into deep pools. The steady hand of the guide is reassuring as the climber makes his way up the slippery rocks and through the swirling waters.

At one point, a natural chute provides a thrilling slide down into a foamy pool, and at another, bathers can roll off the brink of a cascade into its pool below. The swirling waters make a perfect whirlpool bath, and the waters rain down making a natural shower. Duck into a tiny cave behind the falls, or just lay back in a cascade and let the pounding waters tingle and massage tired muscles.

The wedding cake-tiered falls rise some 600 feet from the ocean, and run back into the hills for several blocks. So plan to spend some time climbing the falls and splashing in the pools. Although the guides can make it up the falls without getting more than their feet wet, plan to get soaked — it's half the fun.

There are changing rooms at the base and top, and refreshments are available for those who have worked up a hunger or thirst.

THE PATHS TO and from the falls are lined with Jamaicans hawking their handicrafts. This is paradise for those seeking the mahogany wood carvings for which the island is famous. Most of these hand-carved and hand-rubbed pieces show Jamaican faces, much like mini-totem poles. Others depict birds or ancient gods. There are huge face masks and small candleholders, bookends and conversation pieces.

Straw pieces are popular, too. The Jamaican women buy baskets and purses, then spend hours weaving and sewing flowers in a kaleidoscope of colors onto them. Beads and beach fashions also are favored souvenirs.

But don't pay full price for anything. The natives expect shoppers to bargain. The ultimate price depends on how good you are at the age-old practice of bargaining. It is not unusual to purchase a $10 wood carving for $6 to $8.

Another great spot for shopping is the crafts market downtown. Here, dozens of stalls are filled to overflowing with native handicrafts. For those who would rather shop in a store or boutique without the hassle of bargaining there is a modern shopping center just across the parking lot.

The shops and market are only a few steps from Turtle Beach, a truly beautiful sight. The crescent-shaped arm of soft, white sand often is sprinkled with bodies turning a golden brown in the tropical sun. The melodious strains of a steel band drift through the warm air, and vacationers sip fruity tropical drinks under the shade of palm trees.

OF COURSE, all manner of water sports is popular here, from scuba diving and snorkeling to sailing, jet skiing, swimming and deep-sea fishing.

Plantations figure prominently in the history and economy of Jamaica. One of these, Prospect Estates Plantation, gives tours. A tractor-drawn jitney takes visitors on a leisurely drive through the fields and forests of the plantation, where bananas, coconuts, sugarcane and other tropical fruits and crops are grown.

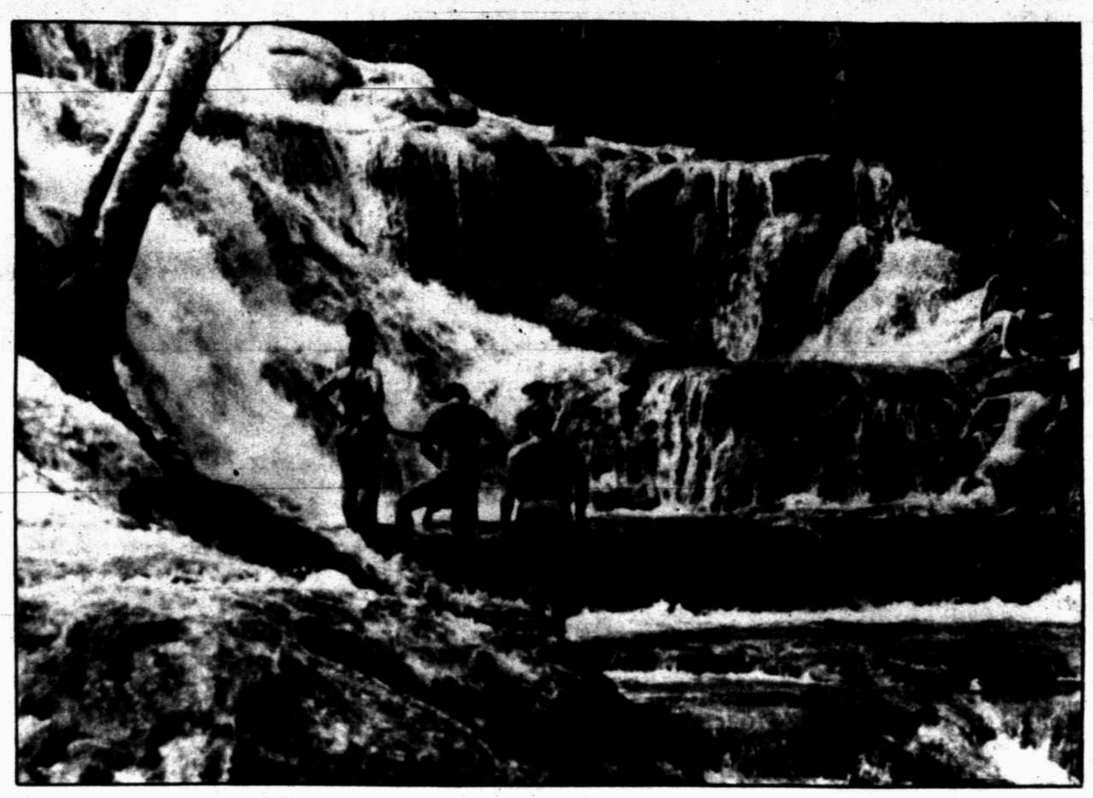

Workers scurry up trees to retrieve coconuts, and will chop them open with giant machetes to offer a drink of coconut milk. Stops along the way also are made at overlooks of the scenic White River valley, the Caribbean and a chapel in the forest. A second plantation, Brimmer Hall, also offers tours.

Another natural feature worth a visit is Fern Gully, an old watercourse deep in a stone canyon. Hundreds of varieties of ferns hang from the canyon walls and alongside the road.

Man and nature have come together to form another tropical paradise, Shaw Park Gardens. Brilliant red-and-purple bougainvillea and deep-green philodendrons combine with dozens of other varieties of tropical plants to form a pleasant retreat from the harried world. There also is a dramatic waterfall, as thousands of gallons of water spill over and down a huge rock cliff and plunge into a tropical pool.

JAMAICA IS BEAUTIFUL even underground. One of the most unusual attractions is Green Grotto and Runaway Caves west of Ocho Rios. Unlike most caves in the world, these are lit in many places by sunlight. Holes in the ceiling of many of the rooms send shafts of light into the murky depths. Giant fig tree roots snake down into the cave, dangling from the ceiling and imbedding themselves in the floor, giving the cave a surrealistic aura.

The path ducks in and out of the caverns at several points. A spiraling set of steps leads down 120 feet into Green Grotto, where visitors can take a boat ride on a subterranean lake. The trip to the caves is made even more interesting by the telling of legends of pirates who once hid out in the caverns.

San Francisco: Fabulous city never called 'Frisco'

By T.R. REINMAN
Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — "Hey, cocktails," yell the vendors on Fisherman's Wharf, peddling their "Walkaway Cocktails" of shrimp and crab.

"Aye, matey," growls the pirate parading North Point with a parrot on each shoulder and a patch over his eye.

"Please move in off the street, but not too close, so we can dance to the beat," sing the sidewalk steppers as the crowd gathers around their portable stereo and concrete dance floor.

Up and down the wharf area along North Point, from the Eagle Cafe perched at the end of the wooden walkway, from the huge parking garage to Pier 39 to Ghiradelli Square, San Francisco showed off one glorious weekend to this Easterner, other foreigners and people lucky enough to call San Francisco home. This is what a less than one-mile stretch of it was like:

THE EAGLE CAFE originally sat on virtually the same site that it occupies today. But when things picked up in the tourist business along the wharf, the cafe was picked straight up and set atop the west end of the second story of the rambling wooden Pier 39.

The original bar is intact, as is all the other flotsam and jetsam tacked to the tastefully grimy walls. Half the seats in the bright eatery offer a view of the Golden Gate, Alcatraz and Angel Island beyond. Better still, every diner in the place can command a terrific view of some of the best bacon and eggs off the grill this side of the the Little Gem Diner in Syracuse, N.Y. And best of all, there is not a fern or tablecloth in sight.

Finished? Walk it off, heading north along North Point toward Ghiradelli, on a collision course with Walkaway Cocktails, Houlihan's second-story bar, the Blue Chip Cookies shop, the under-reconstruction terminus of the Hyde Street cable car line and, a drum roll, please, the Buena Vista Cafe.

OF COURSE, after the cook in the Eagle Cafe has done his duty, about all you can handle for the first leg of the round trip is strolling and gawking, the typical gait along the Golden Gate.

Sightseers might be timorous about appearing too touristy along sophisticated Fifth Avenue in Manhattan, or the haute Champs Elysee in haughty Paris, but one of the great things about San Francisco is that nobody's too anything for anything there.

CNS Photo

Visitors to San Francisco find a treat at the Fisherman's Wharf.

An aside: Ten years ago a first-time visitor was sitting on a cable car climbing Nob Hill, jokingly referring to the city as "Frisco" to his companion. The second time he so blasphemed, a dowager tapped the visitor on the arm and shrilly said, "Young man. This is San Francisco. Not 'Frisco!' Please remember that."

All right. So some people are too flip for some others there.

AND MAYBE SOME of the bartenders are too flip for some of the touring patrons of the Buena Vista. But it is the American birthplace of Irish coffee, and with so many people passing through asking for things like tequila or rum in their coffee and whipped cream, perhaps it's only natural for bartenders, too, to become exasperated with blasphemers.

Stories have been written about the Buena Vista, and frequent visitors often make it a point to stop at the good-times mecca just to make their stay in San Francisco official.

If you haven't been inside the bar, as a dowager once said, please remember that.

Just beyond is Ghiradelli, with its cocoa bean dryers and chocolate-stirring machines and 3-pound milk shakes. And everywhere are the shops. Stuffed nylon dolls as lifelike as your dear old granny. Hats, dresses, cards, brass, flasks and masks they just don't sell elsewhere. Christmas should happen twice a year just to take advantage of this strip of stores.

YES, THE IOWANS and Georgians fall all over themselves there sometimes, but a tourist's trip to San Francisco without a visit to the north end of North Point is as unofficial as a tour stop in St. Louis without seeing the Arch and steamboats.

An hour, two, three hours later, you'll find yourself back in the garage across from the Eagle, looking for your car keys. But before you force yourself into your car, stop and look once more at the vitality this one place can offer.

Overhead the sight-seeing helicopters will be coming and going. Just across the street to your right is Pier 39, with people roaming in and out of the maze of boutiques. In the park in front of you, maybe the guy flying the huge thing with 30 colored kites strung together will be offering it to the wind and taking it back.

Behind him a tanker likely will be getting nudged to its berth by a couple of tugs while a great white ocean liner sets sail for Mexico or Canada. To your left people will be filling the sidewalk with their bundles of fresh fish or fashions as the traffic fills the street, no horns honking, nobody much minding the snarl.

Jerome, Ariz., may be 'Ghost Town, U.S.A.'

By JERRY HULSE
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

JEROME, Ariz. — A chill wind whipped through this old ghost town as I stopped in front of the Miner's Roost, the hotel where I'd booked a room for the night.

I stood at the door, alone. The town seemed deserted. Well, wasn't Jerome supposed to be haunted?

I knocked. No answer. I knocked again. Still no reply. A sign said keys would be found next door at the Candy Kitchen, which turned out to be a misnomer, since the Candy Kitchen serves meals rather than sweets.

Inside I felt a draft of warm air. When I asked for my key, the girl behind the counter introduced me to David Mueller, an ex-undertaker who gave up life in Los Angeles to live in spooky old Jerome.

"Welcome to Ghost Town, U.S.A.," Mueller said.

For the last several years Mueller has operated the Candy Kitchen, which serves breakfast and lunch, and the Miner's Roost, a hotel-restaurant with eight rooms all dolled up in a setting that's a flashback to another century, the rates pegged at $26 per person double or $30 single.

The Miner's Roost is special. All I could fault it for was its lack of private baths. Only one room has its own. The others share.

FLUTED LIGHTS glow from ceiling fans and an old-fashioned wind-up Victrola stands in one corner. Potted plants and Victorian lamps are scattered throughout guest rooms, and a grandfather clock ticks away the hours outside a parlor furnished with a leather sofa, a couple of stools and a reception desk with a bowl of apples and nuts. A nice touch.

I strolled down the street to Jerome's only other hotel, the Connor. Founded in 1898, it's weary. Except for one room the owner did over, the wallpaper is stained, the carpets are threadbare, the floors creak. Still, there's the sort of spooky atmosphere one associates with an old mining town.

Guests sign for rooms in the bar downstairs. It's called the Spirit Room, one of those rough-and-tumble saloons you see in the TV Westerns.

A few doors away, Martin Tomlinson stood behind the bar at Paul 'N' Jerry's Saloon, which has been operating nonstop since 1885. Except for a couple playing billiards in back, it was deserted.

During Jerome's heyday the town roared 24 hours a day. Forty-eight hotels did business along with 100 bars and bordellos. One hotel alone, the Montana, slept 1,000 guests.

As one of the world's richest mining towns, Jerome raised a ruckus and produced a string of millionaires.

JAMES S. DOUGLAS hit it richest, extracting $125 million in ore from soil surrounding Mingus Mountain. Fame followed fortune, and later Douglas' son, Lewis, became the ambassador to the Court of St. James's. There were other ties to Britain. The town was named for New York City philanthropist Eugene Murray Jerome, a cousin of Jennie Jerome, Winston Churchill's mother.

By 1899, the year Jerome was incorporated, it was Arizona's fifth largest town.

With a population of 15,000, Jerome raced forward at high pitch. More than 88 miles of tunnels honeycombed the soil beneath the town. Miners worked around the clock, and whenever they weren't underground they were raising Cain in the bars and bordellos along Main Street.

The wealth amounted to $1 billion in copper, $800 million in silver and $600 million in gold.

Jerome continued to produce wealth until, alas, the bottom dropped out of copper in 1932. The price fell to a nickel a pound. The bonanza was over. As the mines shut down, the population scattered. By 1960 fewer than 200 souls remained in Jerome. Nearly the entire town was boarded up. Jerome, the one-time city of thousands, was a ghost town.

ONLY PAUL 'N' JERRY'S Saloon failed to shut down. And what wasn't nailed down was spirited away by souvenir hunters and vandals.

Slowly, though, the population grew again as pensioners along with entrepreneurs discovered Jerome. The pensioners bought fixer-uppers while entrepreneurs renovated old stores, homes and hotels, creating a lineup of antique and craft shops, coffeehouses, boutiques and souvenir showplaces.

But with all its new-found success, Jerome remains low-key. Particularly in winter. So if you're turned on by ghost towns, Jerome could be disappointing. For some, it's simply too peaceful. For others, though, this is the attraction, this peacefulness, along with skies so clear that on nearly any given day one can see to Sedona and beyond to the outskirts of Flagstaff.

By late afternoon on a winter weekend the streets of Jerome are deserted. It's another story during summer when tourists flock to the old ghost town to buy up mirrors, ceramics, crystal and Navajo rugs at Robb Barton's Stained Arts Salon (next door to the Spirit Room) and antique jewelry from Erno Betalan who does business near the Miner's Roost.

Few in Jerome were born here. Ron Ballatore, a former appliance repairman from Southern California, serves as Jerome's police chief. The "force" consists of two other cops. They're seldom called upon to do more than write parking tickets or shepherd home a drunk. Ballatore serves as Santa Claus at Christmas, touring the town, not in a sleigh, but on an antique fire engine.

Bob Louden, an ex-flight engineer with North American Aviation, dispenses homemade vegetable soup, enchiladas and a variety of sandwiches, along with rich ice creams and home-baked pies inside a cubby-hole on Main Street called Marcy's. Next door, women's designer fashions by Ava Gutierrez are sold at the slick boutique, Alfredo's Wife.

Dellwood to be remodeled, expanded

Dellwood Mall is slated for a major new look and expansion

New mall owners will expend $500,000, add on 40,000 feet

Ailing Dellwood Mall is in for a "new birth," according to the mall's new owners, Ron Knott, Jeff Snoyer and Frans Vercamer of Dallas.

The group plans to expend over $500,000 in the next 12 months on the 20 year old mall which has seen its ups and downs in recent years, plus the construction of an additional 40,000 square feet to the mall.

"We plan a lot of cosmetic work," said Frans Vercamer, senior partner, "that will include painting, planting, landscaping and renovation.

Ron Hall also noted that renovation plans call for converting the mall from an older design with exterior entrances to an all-interior design, which channels the customers inside the mall.

"You can have several hundred people in the mall," said Hall, "and it looks empty because everyone uses the exterior entrances. "The merchants feel that we should reroute the customer traffic to the inside, not only for business sake but for more effecient heating and cooling."

Along with the modern exterior, the new owners plan uniform contemporary signs, improved exterior lighting in the parking area and landscaping inside and outside.

"We are here for the long run," said Vercamer, a Belgian citizen who has extensive real estate investments in Dallas. "This is a medium to long range investment. We are not here to drain the mall and run."

He said that negotiations were now in progress with a national retail chain--new to Midland--to occupy almost half the free-standing space in the retail complex.

Vercamer said that his firm Cottonwood Investment Co., which has developed over 4,000 lots in the Plano-Dallas area, had made extensive studies before purchasing Dellwood in February and had determined that it was a genuine "sleeper" that could be turned around with renovation and good management.

Fras Vercamer

"Compared to other malls nobody can beat us on offering a lease. We are far lower and we have one of the best locations in town with over 16,000 cars per day driving past the location," Vercamer said.

Groundbreaking for the 40,000 square foot addition which will be constructed on the northwest cornor of the property on West Illinois is expected to take place in approximately 90 days.

Renovation and construction plans are not expected to interfer with present business activities, according to the new owners.

The seller of the mall was Joshua Muss & Associates, with Jack Winburn of Home Savings and Loan, Midland, acting as broker.

Liquor battle wages on

Proposed lounge draws Village fire

A battle over liquor may be shaping up in Midland's Village Shopping Center.

David Cruickshank, a Midland resident, would like to put a lounge in the two-story glass building which used to house Grammer-Murphey men's store. However, many of the property owners and tenants in the complex do not want a drinking establishment.

"We don't mind a restaurant," said Felix Welmaker who owns two stores in the center and opposes the lounge. "A restaurant would be compatible to a family shopping center, but not a place where people would come and sit and drink from 2 p.m. until whenever."

Cruickshank, who is assistant service manager of the Plaza Club located in the ClayDesta National Bank building, said he wanted to open a nightclub which would offer a "cultural experience that is needed in this town" by featuring jazz and blues musicians and some country and western bands.

In addition, he also planned to serve lunch and dinner on a limited fare. The establishment would be open Tuesday through Saturday, he said.

Cruickshank's request for a "specific use permit" for the facility in the Village was denied at a Planning and Zoning Commission hearing Feb. 20. As a result, Cruickshank said he plans to appeal the commission's decision to the City Council.

According to Sam Listi, assistant director for the planning department, the area is zoned for a restaurant but serving alcholic beverages requires approval from the commission and the City Council.

According to Listi, his department recommended to the commission that the permit be granted.

"We evaluated the conditions in the area and felt the shopping center and the building locations were appropriate for this kind of retail development," he said.

Listi said the 11-member commission based their decision on several factors.

"There was substantial amount of opposition expressed by a majority of the store owners," he said.

In addition, he said, a petition had also been presented at the hearing.

According to Welmaker, the petition had more than 100 signatures of Village property owners, store managers and employees who were opposed to the proposed lounge.

"Originally, when Herman Myers bought the property from the City of Midland, his purpose was to develop a retail shopping center. With about 10 acres, except for a few offices, it is basically a retail shopping center," Gutman said.

Based on his experience in the food and beverage industry, Cruickshank believes opening the establishment for lunch would attract many people, especially women, into the shopping center who would "mingle around the area."

Gutman disagrees. "These retailers feed off of each other's traffic. As a draw to other retail merchants, that type of business wouldn't be the type of traffic that a department store would draw all day long."

Joe Crook, manager of Walgreens, said he was opposed to the idea of a nightclub coming into the center.

"I think we should have some other source of business like a nice department store. I don't feel it would be beneficial to the center in any way," Crook said.

Welmaker said he, along with many other property owners in the complex, believed Cruickshank would be a good owner and that he would run a good business.

"He said he was willing to hire a security guard and a special cleaning crew. But by doing that, he's admitting to the problems we've been professing would occur if a lounge moved into the area," Welmaker said.

Cruickshank is angry about the commission's decision.

"I feel I'm being discriminated against," he said. "I haven't been given a proper chance to prove what I can do. Upon consultation with other store owners and Midland citizens, I might have a better chance."

And while Cruickshank is determined to appeal the decision, Welmaker and the other property owners are just as determined.

"I told Cruickshank that we would be there to oppose him again if he did appeal," said Welmaker.

ASK THE FDIC

How do you lose $1,700 that easy?

By THOMAS R. PROCOPIO

After much effort we were able to get a defendant arrested in Buffalo, N.Y. and recover several thousand dollars from him in restitution for check writing schemes here in Midland. One of the victims was First National Bank (of Midland) and a check was issued on Nov. 2, 1983, by this office (Vern E. Martin, district attorney) in the amount of $1,700 as full recovery of the loss.

Said check was passed on to the FDIC as big-brother liquidator of FNB. After three months said check never cleared the DA's bank and after many phone calls someone at the FDIC finally admitted they had lost the $1,700 and I put a stop payment on it.

My question is who is responsible for recovered money at the FDIC and how do you lose $1,700 that easy. I know $1,700 probably isn't much money to the FDIC but I would imagine anyone of the local stockholders of FNB would be happy to recover $1,700.

Under normal circumstances that doesn't happen. If we know a check is lost or has had a stop payment placed and then we would ask that a new check be issued immediately.

However, if our people don't have the account number or some other form of communication to go with the check, it is put into what is called a "suspense of owner account" until we can determine where it belongs.

I'm sure you can imagine that with millions and millions of dollars per day going through our accounts, a $1,700 check that has no identifying notation attached could get bogged down.

Virginia Loftus is the department head of loan administration, which would handle such matters, however, in the future if you or anyone has a this type of a problem you shouldn't wait three months before writing to me.

In the July 1983 issue of Texas Monthly, there was a story titled "The Gambler" in which Don Earney, who was the president of Abilene National Bank before it merged with Mercantile Texas Corp., said he feels most bitterly about the takeover by Mercantile and that he was "done in by forces beyond his control."

The article goes on to say that for Don Earney, "The takeover was forced on Abilene National by federal bank examiners who felt that Earney had made too many boom-time energy loans which the bust had rendered uncollectable, a judgment at which Earney takes great umbrage."

Would you care to comment.?

While I did not read the article, I have been given a brief synopsis of what it contained. And I believe its naive for anybody to think there are sinsiter forces out there trying to take over or force out a competent individual from his position in any bank or any business.

If the individual managing the bank was capable, the bank would not have been in the dire straits that apparently it was in.

As I have said before, government agencies do not enjoy spending their money on bank closings. Sizable losses to the FDIC's insurance fund are not relished by FDIC Chairman Isaac.

As far as a forced merger between banks, it's not forced unless it is to protect the institution's depositors — the ultimate reason for such transactions. And of course, by protecting depositors, we're protecting the insurance fund. I'm sure Congress would not tolerate the FDIC going around bullying banks into mergers if there was no threat to the fund or to the depositors. Those type of agencies exist in other countries, but not in this one.

ACB reports permit fee collections off during 1983

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Air Control Board officials say economic conditions which limited construction of new facilities also reduced collection of permit fees collected by the agency in 1983 first full year of operation for the fees.

Eli Bell reports the ACB collected $342,774.89 for 138 permit applications. Of that, $12,012 was returned, due to facilities being exempted and thus requiring no fee.

ACB rules provide for a fee of 0.1 percent of the capital cost of a project which is subject to ACB regulation with a maximum of $7,500 and minimum of $300.

Fees are not required for operating permits, permit amendments, revisions, exemptions, site approvals for portable facilities, or changes of ownership or location for permitted facilities.

Bell said the amount was "significantly less" than had been projected, but said in 1984, collections to date have been running four and one-half times the amount for the comparable 1983 period.

ACB Executive Director Bill Stewart says the program has been working "very smoothly", without disputes over amounts or whether fees should be paid.

State Board of Insurance reports that the Texas Crime Prevention Institute at San Marcos has notified homeowners and inspectors that it is no longer able to process applications for the five percent reduction in homeowners premiums for installation of home security devices—nor to certify and supervise inspectors to make the necessary inspections.

Since the so-called "dead-bolt credit" went into effect in October, 1982, SBI has isued 3,457 premium reduction certificates, and the institute certified 779 inspectors.

SBI reports those inspectors have operated primarily in San Antonio, Fort Worth, El Paso, Austin and Houston, and a number of smaller towns.

The board will be required to designate another organization to take over the certification process—and efforts are reported underway to find an organization to take over the work.

Comptroller Bob Bullock's office is continuing to monitor oil prices, having projected "some decline" in the average price of oil produced in Texas during 1984.

In January, that price was reported at "about $29 a barrel," Bullock reports, approximately the "so-called world market price set by OPEC."

The comptroller's office anticipates "some decline" in the average price in 1984, "due to weak demand this spring," but does not project a price drop "of the magnitude that occurred last year."

The comptroller also projects that interest rates for 1984 should average about the same level as 1983.

The Railroad Commission, reporting on 1983 completions, shows Texas operators reported 1,226 gas and 715 oil discoveries for the year, compared to 1,421 gas and 702 oil discoveries in 1982.

• • •

Third Court of Appeals, Austin, has heard oral arguments in the appeal of Mabe Industries, Longview, and other parties in a dispute with SBI regarding the agency's rule against use of blanket accident policies as an alternative to worker's compensation coverage.

The plaintiffs lost their request to an Austin district court for an injunction in the dispute.

In another worker's compensation matter, SBI approved, 2-1, changing the rule for calculating worker's compensation premiums from the $300 per week payroll limitation to unlimited payroll, as requested by the National Council on Compensation Insurance.

During a three-year transition period, no employer will be required to pay more than five percent additional premium than under the $300 rule.

Companies will report on a total premium basis, and note what they would have collected without the five percent limit, with those figures to be considered for rate-making purposes.

Effective date of the change is May 1.

In approving te NCCI proposal, the board rejected an alternative plan proposed by the Associated General Contractors of Texas, which would have phased the changes in over four years.

Some employers have expressed concern over the "offsets" for individual classifications, with reports that oil-related industries may be adversely affected.

Gandy's celebrates 50th anniversary

Back in March 1934 when milk was eight cents a quart and unemployment was very high in San Angelo; Loy Gandy left a job paying $250 per month to go into business for himself. He would not receive a salary for the next 14 months.

Now 50 years later, Gandy's Dairies Inc. is celebrating its golden anniversary as one of Texas' largest dairies with branch offices distributing about 323 different dairy and ice cream products to 64 West Texas counties.

From a beginning with 10 employees, the dairy now employs about 265 people and processes about 240 thousand gallons of milk weekly. However, this was not the case at the beginning according to Gandy who still reports to his office at the dairy every day.

It was on Monday, March 12, 1934, that Gandy and his partners E.E. Bradford and Gilbert Sanders, opened Gandy's Creamery at 221 N. Main.

"We sold $200 worth of products the first day we opened and dropped to $110 the next day," Gandy said. "The only thing that kept us from going broke during those first two years was the people working with me and it's customers," he recalled. "Because of these efforts, we made $6,000 profit the first year and $17,000 the second year. Yes, we were going to town."

In spite of the fierce competition, Gandy's continued to grow until World War II started at which time new problems arose.

Because of the shortage of labor and the commitment to all the military installations' requirements for milk, Gandy's experienced an extreme shortage of raw milk supplies from local dairy farmers. To maintain consistent supply of raw milk, Gandy would buy fields of hay, harvest and haul it to his dairy farm suppliers. He continued to supply cattle feed to his dairy farmers until about one year after the war ended.

Beginning with 1938, Gandy's Dairies began expanding by buying an ice cream plant in Brady and in 1940 bought a distributing plant in Coleman.

Gandy's growth continued, with the addition of six branch offices, including Midland-Odessa, between 1952 and 1964.

On Jan. 1, 1977 Gandy's Dairies became a division of Dean Food Co., a publicly owned food processing company headquartered in Franklin Park, Ill. Two years later Dean Foods named A.F. "Squirrel" Williams, a long-time Gandy's employee, vice president and general manager.

Loy Gandy (left), founder of Gandy's Dairies Inc. of San Angelo is congratulated by A.F. "Squirrel" Williams, manager of Gandy's, on the company's 50th anniversary.

Baldwin-United walking high finance tightwire

NEW YORK (AP) — Victor H. Palmieri describes his situation this way:

He is walking a tightwire strung between the 107-story towers of the World Trade Center. At one end of the wire waits an 800-pound gorilla, at the other waits a growling tiger.

Palmieri isn't complaining; in fact, he asked to take this walk. And he and thousands of others can hardly wait to find out how he plans to get off the tightwire without being eaten alive or plunging to the sidewalk.

Palmieri, 54, is the president and chief executive of Baldwin-United Corp., the Cincinnati-based financial services company operating under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

Baldwin-United sought court protection from its creditors last September after a string of acquisitions resulted in a $1 billion debt load that was ready to crush the company. The acquisitions also created a byzantine organization, making Baldwin-United's revival a staggering challenge.

Baldwin-United and one of its subsidiary holding companies are in Chapter 11; six of its insurance companies are in "rehabilitation" under the auspices of the Arkansas and Indiana insurance commissioners.

Some of the assets involved in the holding companies' reorganization are controlled by the insurance regulators. Yet the regulators' ability to fulfill the insurance policyholders' claims depends to a large degree on whether the holding companies can be reorganized.

That is only a broad outline of the problems involved. Overall, it is, in Palmieri's words, without precedent and the "most complex" reorganization he has ever seen — which is why he got involved.

Palmieri is a "crisis manager," a specialist at rescuing companies about to go under. In the 1970s, for instance, he was instrumental in the restructuring of bankrupt Penn Central Transportation Co.

In the Baldwin-United case, 50 banks, 13,000 bondholders, 21,000 stockholders and state officials nationwide are hovering over him, pressuring for the quickest solution that might give them some return on their investment.

Palmieri says his foremost challenge is to keep peace among those factions and to buy time until he works out the best solution.

Baldwin-United, he says, "is the best of all the crisis management opportunities that I can visualize."

It was so tantalizing that Palmieri helped create his opportunity, as he explained during a recent interview in his Manhattan office.

A Chicago native who moved to California when he was 10, Palmieri is tall and lean with a dark complexion, deep voice and thinning, straight black hair.

Staring at a cup of coffee, he recalled being told about Baldwin-United's problems by some of its major creditor banks in early 1983.

MGF announces results of final exchange offer

MIDLAND — MGF International Finance N. V. (MGF International") announced today the final results of its exchange offer, which closed on January 30, 1984, in which it will exchange Class A and Class B Non-Interest Bearing Convertible Senior subordinated guaranteed Debentures due 1980 (the New Debentures") for those 8 1/4 percent Convertible Subordinated Guarateed Debentures due 1995 ("the Old Debentures") which have been properly tendered.

Of the $34,815,000 principal amount of Old Debentures, MGF International has received and accepted tenders amounting to $24,538,000 (70.5 percent) of that amount, $23,007,— was tendered on or before December 29, 1983 and $1,531,000 was tendered subsequent to such date. Each $1,000 principal amount of Old Debentures will be exchanged for $500 principal amount of Class A New Debentures and $500 principal amount of Class B New debentures.

The Class A New Debentures will be issued in two series designated as "Class A" and "Class A-Series 11". Cass A New Debentures will be issued to holders of old Debentures who tendered on or before December 29, 1983, and were accepted effective as of such date, and will be convertible into MFG Oil Corporation ("MGF") common stock at $.46 per share. Class A-Series 11 New Debentures will be issued to holders of Old Debentures who tendered subsequent to December 29, 1983, but on or prior to January 30, 1984 and were accepted effective as of such date, and will be convertible into MGF common stock at $.62 per share. All Class B New Debentures will be convertible into common stock of MGF at $15.88 per share, which is the same conversion price as the Old Debentures.

New Debentures are being distributed at this time to those holders who tendered on or before December 29, 1983. Holders tendering thereafter will be distributed their New Debentures as soon as practicable.

As of this date, MGF's secured lenders (Banks) have declined to fund the amount required to allow the payment of interest which was due on December 1, 1983 on the non-tendered old Debentures, due to the existence of an event of default under the loan agreement with the Banks. MGF's agent bank is Texas Commerce Bank National Association.

The event of default exists due to MGF and its directors being named as defendants in a lawsuit filed in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware by a holder of 14-1/2 percent Senior Subordiated Debentures Due 2001 (14-1/2 percent Debentures). The Plaintiff in the lawsuit is Warwick Drakeford, on behalf of himself and all other parties similarly situated.

The Plantiff contends, among other things, that MGF is in default of the 14-1/2 percent Debentures and demands pyment of the full principal and itnerest. The Plaintiff also alleges that the 6 percent senior subordiated debentures due 1988 (6 percent debentures) should not be senior in ranking to the 14-1/2 percent debentures that the new debentures should not rank equally with the 14 1/2 percent debentures and in addition, the Plaintiff seeks the appointment of a receiver for MGF under Delaware law.

MGF does no believe that any of the allegations have merit and will contest and file a timely answer to the suit.

In the meantime, MGF continues discussions with its Banks concerning the funding of the amount due to be paid on the non-tendered old debentures.

Consumer group will sue OSHA

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Ralph Nader group, claiming "countless lives depend on your immediate action," has asked the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to tighten regulations governing worker exposure to benzene.

In a letter Thursday to OSHA Administrator Thorne G. Auchter, Sidney Wolfe, director of Nader's Public Citizen Health Research Group, said recent private studies have shown that benzene presents a greater health hazard to workers than has been believed.

Last summer, Auchter denied a petition by the same group and several labor unions demanding agency issuance of an emergency temporary health standard lowering exposure to benzene, which has been shown to cause leukemia in humans.

Christopher Graybill, a spokesman for Auchter, said Wolfe's letter had been received by the agency and was being studied. He said a proposed health standard on benzene is in the final draft development stages by the OSHA staff and will soon be sent to Auchter. Graybill declined further comment.

Auchter said last June 6 that OSHA would give "a high priority" to benzene protection. He said his agency planned to issue a revised — and presumably stricter — benzene standard within a year " ... even if we eventually deny the petition."

Critics have charged that at the levels of benzene currently allowed, up to 60,000 workers are exposed to hazardous fumes in the manufacturing process.

Benzene is a highly volatile chemical used extensively in the manufacture of a long list of products that include detergents, plastics, solvents, resins, disinfectants and pesticides.

The existing government health standard permits benzene exposure of no more than 10 parts per million parts of air averaged over an eight-hour period. In their petition last summer for revision of that standard, the consumer and union groups demanded that the permissible exposure limit be immediately lowered to 1 part per million.

In his letter to Auchter Thursday, Wolfe said the standard should be even stricter, saying "you should seriously consider" a permissible exposure limit of even less than 1 part per million.

Business seminar scheduled

A seminar on how to apply for federal funds through the Small Business Innovation Research program (SBIR) for area small businesses and investors will be Monday, March 12 from 1-4 p.m. in the Campbell Room of the Region 18 Education Service Center, 2811 La Force at the Midland Regional Air Terminal.

The seminar is sponsored by the Small Business Council of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Odessa Chamber of Commerce.

The SBIR program gives small businesses, those with 500 or less employees, a chance to apply for up to $50,000 from federal agencies for a six-month, in-house study to test and develop new technologies.

The Small Business Innovation Act of 1982 required all federal agencies with research and development budgets of $100 million or more to reserve a percentage for the SBIR.

In the seminar, speakers from the Governor's Office of Economic Development will teach a crash course in writing, budgeting and filing project proposals.

"This is the first step to make sure more small businesses in Texas take advantage of these federal dollars," said Meg Wilson with the Economic Development Office. "The SBIR is an unprecedented opportunity to obtain seed capital to start up an idea from scratch."

Last year, 8,775 firms submitted proposals for phase I funds and 735 were accepted, a 12:1 ratio. Most of the businesses were from California and Massachusetts. For 1984, 11 federal agencies are expected to distribute close to $136 million to small businesses nationwide.

Program participants who can develop technically-feasible projects with commercial potential are eligible for phase II awards of up to $500,000 under the SBIR program to lay the groundwork for developing a prototype. As an incentive, inventors are allowed to retain all patent rights in most cases.

The seminar fee is $25 to cover materials cost. Registration checks should be mailed to Small Business Council, Midland Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 1890, Midland, TX 79707.

Ted Snailum (left), Valero Transmission Co. vice president for gas operations, receives congratulations from Bill Greehey, chairman and chief executive officer of Valero Energy Corp. of San Antonio. Valero Transmission Co. was recognized as having one of the lowest lost-time accident rates in the natural gas industry and the lowest rate of any Valero company during 1983. Valero Transmission's accident rate of .16 per 200,000 man hours of work was substantially below the industry rate of 2.66. The average for all Valero companies was .59. Valero Transmission operates more than 5,000 miles of gas pipeline in Texas, including pipeline operations in the Midland area.

Henry Petroleum plans to drill 30 wells

MIDLAND—Henry Petroleum Corp. of Midland has announced that it has signed an agreement with a major investor to drill 30 wells during 1984 through the firm's Apollo Program.

With the Apollo Program, plus a fully-subscribed drilling fund, Henry Petroleum plans to drill a projected 45 wells in 1984 and an anticipated 60 wells in 1985, according to Jim Henry, president and chief executive officer of the Midland independent petroleum firm.

Most of the wells are in the Spraberry-Dean fields and all are considered development wells in proven formations.

"At this time, we have 14 locations for the Apollo Program and are utilizing one drilling rig on a continuous basis," Henry said. "If sufficient additional locations can be obtained, we plan to use a second rig full-time during the latter part of this year."

More than 80 percent of the firms wells in the Spraberry Field have been classed as successful producers and only 6 percent have been dry holes.

As the result of a 1983 contract to sell about 50 percent of its production, Henry Petroleum is debt-free.

"Our firm feels very fortunate to have signed an agreement with a major investor and to have its drilling fund fully subscribed. This puts us in a strong position regarding proposals for leases and drilling locations, especially in the Spraberry. To be honest, we are very optimistic about the oil business in the Permian Basin. We can hardly wait to put another drilling rig into service full-time...and then another after that," Henry emphasized.

Importing, exporting seminar set

MIDLAND — Permian Basin businesses interested in expanding their markets through importing/exporting should plan to attend an all-day seminar "Entering International Markets" at Texas Instruments at I-20 on Wednesday March 14.

Speakers for the program include Carmon Stiles and Tom Shugart of the international trade administration of the Department of Commerce in Dallas; Charles Martinez, president of Dallas Forwarding Company; and Bill Beauchamp, management assistance officer of the small business administration — Lubbock.

The program is sponsored by the existing industries committees of the Midland and Odessa Chambers of Commerce and is co-sponsored by Midland College and Odessa College.

Leading indicators move upward

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main gauge of future economic performance rose a strong 1.1 percent in January, the best showing in three months and a further sign that the nation's economic recovery is continuing.

The forecasting gauge, the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, is a compilation of a dozen forward-pointing statistics on the health of the economy.

The 1.1 percent rise was the best since a 1.4 percent increase in October and was the 16th increase out of the past 17 months.

However, after the increase dipped in November and posted only a slight jump in December, many economists said it was a sign that the recovery would slow dramatically in 1984.

But the strong increase in January followed a string of bright economic reports released in recent weeks which showed that the nation's recovery from the 1981-82 recession is continuing unabated.

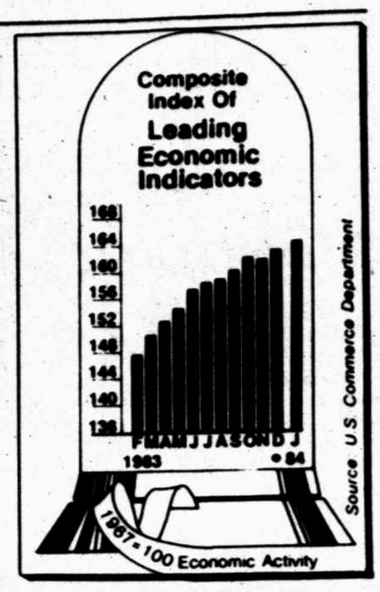

Only the nation's foreign trade deficit looms as a dark cloud on the horizon. The Commerce Department reported today that the deficit hit a record $9.5 billion in January.

The forecasting index showed gains in six of the 10 indicators which were available for January. There were rises in the average workweek, a decline in the number of new weekly unemployment claims filed, an increase in manufacturers' orders for goods, in orders for plant construction and heavy equipment, in building permits and stock market prices.

Four of the 10 decreased including the length of time companies must wait for deliveries from their suppliers, the number of new businesses being formed, the price of certain sensitive raw materials and the money supply. Of these, the Commerce Department said, the amount of business formation contributed the most to holding the rise down.

The report revised the change in December from a 0.6 percent increase to a slight 0.1 percent rise while it said the decline in November was 0.1 percent rather than the previously reported 0.2 percent decline.
