Soggy Dameron Park forces Jubilee Junction to relocate

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

It's not quite a jungle out there, but it is -- in the words of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce president Tommie Weemes -- a swamp.

The swamp is Dameron Park, where the annual Town and Country Jubilee is scheduled to be held Saturday.

On Friday afternoon Weemes announced that the situation at the park has forced Jubilee organizers to move the Jubilee Junction to the far east edge of the park.

Weemes said the entertainment stage and booths will be set up on the parking lot across from the Community Center.

The parking lot will be closed to traffic, although Seventh Street and Schley will remain open, he said.

"The other area is, quite frankly, a bit of a swamp," Weemes said, adding that he hopes those attending Jubilee Junction will be patient with organizers as the move is made.

The stage will be at the far south end of the parking lot, along the median separating the lot from Seventh Street. The booths for food and games will be throughout the rest of the area.

Weemes said moving the Junction to the parking lot means some changes need to be made in alignment of booths and in their operation.

"We don't have a lot of electrical outlets in the area," he said, adding that organizations operating booths are asked to bring butane-powered equipment where possible.

A meeting will be held at 5 p.m. today in the Chamber of Commerce with representatives of all 37 booths to determine where they will be placed on the parking lot.

In addition, representatives of the 50-plus entries for the Jubilee Parade will attend that session to learn marching order.

Jubilee activities get under way early Saturday and run throughout the day.

A schedule of activities appears in today's Hereford Brand.

The parade will kick off at 10:30 a.m. at Hereford High School, featuring the HHS Mighty Maroon Band, trucks from the Hereford Fire Department, floats, cars, bikes and horses.

The parade will travel south on Avenue F to Park Avenue, then west on Park to Main and south to downtown, where it will disband.

The parade is sponsored by the Whiteface Kiwanis Club.

Jubilee Junction kicks off immediately following the parade.

Dameron Park will be the site of all activities of the Junction, including the entertainment and booths, as well as horseshoe and washer pitching areas and volleyball games.

Across the street, the Jubilee of Arts will be held in the Community Center from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sponsored by the Pilot Club, the Jubilee of Arts features craftsmen from New Mexico and Texas who will show and sell their wares.

The Hereford Senior Citizens Center, 426 Ranger, will host its annual quilt show in the auditorium from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Also Saturday, local merchants will participate in a city-wide Sidewalk Sale, with many of them offering special discounts or promotions for the day.

The merchants and the chamber are giving away a trip for two to Dallas for the Oct. 13 game between the Cowboys and the Arizona Cardinals.

The winner will be announced (See JUBILEE, Page 2)

Reception here honors Rep. Combest

Larry Combest, U.S. Congressman, 19th District, and his wife, Sharon, visited with area residents who attended a reception for the Lubbock Republican here Thursday night at Hereford Country Club. The event was sponsored by political action committees of the Texas Sugar Beet Growers, the Texas Cattle Feeders, and Plainview Production Credit associations. Combest spoke briefly and answered questions from the audience. Attendants donated $100 a couple for the reception.

Kemp frontrunner for nod as VP

By JOHN KING

AP Political Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) - With his deadline for a critical decision at hand, Bob Dole was seriously considering offering the No. 2 spot on the Republican ticket to tax-cut champion Jack Kemp, an energetic campaigner who has had prickly relations with Dole over the years.

As Dole prepared to head home to Kansas today to make his choice, Kemp was the favorite, followed by Florida Republican Sen. Connie Mack, according to sources familiar with the search.

Michigan Gov. John Engler and former South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell were described as in a second tier of prospects.

"This is in his hands," Kemp said of Dole. "I do not know what the future holds, but I know who holds the future." Asked if he wanted to run with Dole, the former housing secretary and New York congressman said, "You don't answer questions that you haven't been asked."

Dole was visiting the Dwight D. Eisenhower presidential library in Abilene, Kan., before heading to his hometown of Russell, where he is tentatively scheduled to announce his running mate on Saturday. If Dole stuck to the schedule, he was to call his choice and other finalists Friday night or early Saturday to inform them of his plans.

"I haven't talked to anybody, don't know anything and I'm going home," Campbell told a reporter who encountered him at a Washington airport. Asked if he wanted to be Dole's choice, Campbell said, "I don't even talk about it."

Kemp emerged as a prospect in recent days as Dole and top advisers looked beyond their existing list for a candidate who would generate enthusiasm at next week's Republican National Convention and be attractive to independent voters critical to Dole's chances of erasing President Clinton's healthy lead.

Kemp, 61, was sounded out by senior Dole aides Wednesday. After he expressed interest, a meeting with Dole was arranged Wednesday night. Kemp met again with senior Dole advisers Thursday, and Dole's search team plunged rapidly into a detailed background investigation. Kemp spoke with Dole campaign manager Scott Reed late Thursday.

In a brief telephone interview early today, Kemp said he had not been offered a spot on the ticket.

Mack and Kemp are close friends and former House colleagues - and from a wing of the Republican Party with which Dole has often found himself at odds. During their House days, they formed the Conservative Opportunity Society along with Newt Gingrich, now the House speaker, and Trent Lott, who replaced Dole as Senate majority leader.

Mack, whose state's 25 electoral votes are critical to Dole's chances, got a taste of the scrutiny a national campaign would bring while taping a Florida television show Thursday, when he was asked about marijuana use more than two decades ago.

"If we are going to disqualify everyone who ever experimented with marijuana, there wouldn't be many people left to run," Mack said. "Our generation made a mistake."

Mack said he and Dole are philosophically in step, understanding "people are fed up with Washington interfering in their lives."

Dole and Kemp have had a prickly relationship, dating back to the early 1980s when Kemp was leading the charge for deep tax cuts and Dole was warning about the soaring federal budget deficit.

They were rivals for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination, and Dole was furious this past March when Kemp backed Steve Forbes for the Republican nomination after talking to Dole aides about an endorsement on the eve of the New York primary.

Forbes said picking Kemp would electrify Republicans and "excite the country." Not that there wouldn't be criticism; Kemp has sparred with Pat Buchanan because of Buchanan's protectionist trade views and proposal to place a moratorium on legal immigration.

Juvenile crime reported down

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Nationwide attention to youth crime from every segment of society is being credited for a surprising drop last year in the arrest rates of juveniles for violent crimes, particularly murder.

With the release Thursday of preliminary 1995 FBI statistics that defied predictions that teen-age violence would continue to soar, experts like Northeastern University Professor Jack Levin said a new attitude toward youth crime in the last three or four years amounts to "a cultural revolution, and it's paying off in these rosy crime figures."

"Everywhere, police, clergy, school systems, parents, universities and even businesses are focusing on the problem of youth violence," said Levin, who directs Northeastern's Program for the Study of Violence and Conflict.

After surging nonstop since 1987, the nationwide arrest rate of youths aged 10 to 17 for violent crimes dropped 2.9 percent, and their arrest rate for murder plunged 15.2 percent, Attorney General Janet Reno said.

The murder arrest rate has declined two consecutive years, to 22.8 percent below the 1993 figure. The last time these two juvenile arrest rates - for murder and violent crime - both dropped in the same year was 1983.

"It's important that we recognize there's not one magic key," said Reno, whose top priority has been youth crime. "It's communities, governments coming together with their citizens to really reweave the fabric of society around our children, while at the same time letting our children know that they will be held accountable."

Youth violence became one of the nation's most feared crime problems as teen-agers were recruited and armed by crack cocaine barons during the 1980s. While adult crime has dwindled, youth violence has surged, and more was predicted because the number of teen-agers began to grow in 1992 and will increase 17 percent in the next decade.

Reno, police executives and academic experts cited a panoply of federal, state and local programs to explain the new numbers: more police attention and tougher sentences for the most violent youths, big-city crackdowns on guns in the hands of kids, increased community help for first offenders and prevention programs to occupy youths with free time and little supervision.

Police Chief Dennis E. Nowicki of Charlotte-Mecklenburg, N.C., where the number of juvenile murder arrests declined 15.4 percent in 1995, cited a change in police thinking.

"In my profession, there is a recognition that prevention is necessary and it works," Nowicki said. "Enforcement by itself will not solve the problem; we also need prevention targeted toward youngsters before they become hardened criminals."

Like others, Nowicki's department has put police into new roles. His police force attends parent-teacher meetings and trains with mental health professionals and social workers. Each of 140 schools has a volunteer police officer, teacher and parent running a club for disruptive or underachieving students. The students get rewards, like amusement park tickets, if they attain academic goals and stay out of trouble.

Fifteen students in one club who had been failing math all got "C's" or better after running a stationery store for other students, Nowicki said.

Like New York City police, Nowicki's officers conduct a truancy program to return kids to school.

Professor Alfred Blumstein of Carnegie-Mellon University hailed efforts in several big cities to take guns from juveniles, because gun murders accounted for the entire 169 percent increase in the teen-age murder rate between 1984 and 1993.

"A quarter of all murders occur in seven or eight big cities," Blumstein said.

New York City saw its murder arrest rate for teens aged 15 to 19 drop 27 percent in 1995. Deputy Police Commissioner Mike Farrell credited strict enforcement of quality-of-life laws against graffiti, loud noise from boom boxes, public drinking and riding bicycles on the sidewalk.

Platform revitalizes campaign, claim Republican conservatives

By CALVIN WOODWARD

Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Conservative activists say their troops will swing behind Bob Dole, thanks to a platform strong on their principles. Even a Dole holdout felt pride of authorship in the document.

The completed platform draft to be presented to the Republican National Convention next week is suffused with language sweet both to economic and social conservatives whose interests do not always meet.

"This does revitalize the campaign," said David Keene of the American Conservative Union on Thursday, especially happy with the tax cuts and economic principles copied into the document from Dole's presidential campaign.

Social conservatives were still beaming from the maintenance of tough anti-abortion policies and their success in limiting new abortion-tolerant language to an appendix of the platform.

Tough language on immigration, threats to U.S. sovereignty from multinational bodies and western land reform echoed or played close to the themes of failed GOP candidate Pat Buchanan and many of the freshman members of Congress with similar views.

But all the jubilation might come at some cost. As with any ideologically strong platform of the left or right, success in pleasing the activists can make it harder to appeal to the great middle ground of voters in the fall.

Political analyst Kevin Phillips, a maverick Republican, said the platform, even while endorsing existing free trade agreements, sets a tone suspicious of outsiders and paints the culture as besieged.

"This represents catering to the people who have sort of a hammer-lock on the processes but you do so at the expense of appeal to the broader electorate," he said.

Norm Ornstein of the American Enterprise Institute said the substance of the platform might be a "small headache" for Dole. A potentially greater one was a perception, rising from the abortion debate, that the candidate was not in control, he said.

But the campaign also passed a major hurdle in coming up with a backroom compromise that removed the threat of a floor fight by abortion-rights Republicans.

"The political activists will come out of here with a head of steam," said Ralph Reed, executive director of the Christian Coalition and a leading figure in the fight for a conservative-values agenda.

"It will help energize conservatives. It's good for the Dole campaign."

The Dole campaign placed great stock, with mixed results, in using the platform deliberations to show his hold on the party. Platforms often lose significance for presidential candidates after that test, and are ignored when political realities demand it.

Perhaps with that in mind, Haley Barbour, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said he hadn't yet read the platform, or any previous one, but intended to "when I get a chance."

Bay Buchanan, chairwoman of brother Pat's primary campaign, said Pat Buchanan was ecstatic over the adoption of planks that incorporated his themes.

"There's so much of his material in it, he's considering asking Haley for a royalty," she joked.

Still, Pat Buchanan is waiting to see Dole's choice of a running mate and how his supporters are treated at the convention before endorsing him.

Social conservative leaders who had worked the hallways and backrooms of the platform deliberations, including Reed, Phyllis Schlafly of the Eagle Forum and Gary Bauer of the Family Research Council, joined several economic and defense conservatives at a news conference to heap praise on the platform.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

In reference to Mrs. Liz Agan's letter of Aug. 4, it is disturbing and insulting that her fear and anger caused her to lash out at the residents of the 300 block of Star and the citizens of Hereford.

Being a police officer is dangerous and Mrs. Agan's concern for her husband is understood. No one questioned whether he was on duty or off duty. We are aware of the oath police officers take.

And, Mrs. Agan, we don't see your husband or any police officers as bad guys! Not only is Randy a police officer, he is our neighbor. If we, the residents of Star Street, were too slow to respond or call for back up, it was because we were asleep when the incident was taking place at about 11:30 p.m. This was probably the case with Mrs. Agan, who lives three houses from where the incident began, and she did not respond, either.

My husband works for the Hereford EMS. He, too, was off duty but when the call came through that an officer was down, he did not hesitate to run to the scene to assist.

I urge Mrs. Agan to collect all the facts before she lashes out and passes judgement on the residents of Star Street and the people of Hereford. Randy was not refused help!

Thank you,
Delme Arellano

Yogurt could sub for meat in schools?

WASHINGTON (AP) - Children could soon be seeing yogurt instead of meat in their school lunches under a proposal that has upset cattle producers.

"USDA should be promoting meat, not pushing it under the carpet," said Sen. Larry Pressler, D-S.D. "School children must be provided nutritious and healthy meals, and they should include meat."

The Agriculture Department last month proposed allowing yogurt substitute for meat in school lunches. School officials think it will be a hit with kids.

"I think they would like it, certainly not as a steady diet," Sally Rucker, co-manager of food service for the Rochester, Minn., schools, said Thursday.

Child-care providers and the food industry have been pressing for the change for at least 15 years, but USDA balked out of concerns about the lack of iron and other nutrients in yogurt.

The department has decided to leave it up to school nutritionists to make sure meals are balanced.

The department already allows some meat substitutes, including cheese, beans, eggs and peanut butter. That's enough, according to the National Cattlemen's Beef Association.

School lunch programs, which feed 25 million children nationwide, are a huge market for the food industry. The federal government subsidizes the cost of the meals and sets requirement for their nutrition and content.

USDA provided schools with 146 million pounds of beef during the past school year.

But yogurt would add variety to lunches, it's easy for children to digest and it requires no preparation, proponents say.

The department remains concerned that children may drink less milk if they eat yogurt.

Cost also could be an issue for yogurt, USDA acknowledged. The Michigan Milk Producers Association, which conducted the study, had trouble finding schools willing to participate because of yogurt's cost.

Ann Landers

'Historian' shares his memories

Dear Ann Landers: I must respond to "Chris in Heyburn, Idaho," who told the under-35 crowd to stop complaining. He talked about his childhood, with no electricity, no bathrooms, the Depression, 50-cent-an-hour jobs and no cars. My experience was luckier.

I was born in 1911, in a house built in 1904. It had a bathroom. All the other houses had bathrooms because outhouses were illegal. My uncle's 200-year-old farmhouse also had bathrooms. The only one- or two-holers I used were in primitive campgrounds in state parks. They scared us kids.

We didn't get electricity until the early '20s, but ours was one of the last houses on the street to get wired. A family with five kids was expensive.

As for cars, my father drove a secondhand, seven-passenger, 1917 Chandler touring car during World War I. It took 10 hours to go 159 miles to my uncle's farm. Most of that was due to repairing flat tires. If you could go 50 miles without a flat, you were lucky.

My first car was a 1923 Model T Ford, which my roommate and I bought for $150 in 1930. In 1941, when my salary was $3,000 a year, I bought a brand-new Pontiac "Turtleback" for $1,100 and drove from Cleveland to Boston in one day so that I could marry my sweetheart. It turned out to be the day before Pearl Harbor. In 1945, I drove that same car from Philadelphia to San Francisco on Navy orders.

Times were tough during the Depression when I graduated from engineering college. I was near the top of my class, but it took eight months to get a job at 40 cents an hour. A year after graduation, many of my classmates were unemployed. A job really counted for something when there was 25 percent unemployment, no unemployment benefits, no welfare, no food stamps and no medical benefits. Families took care of each other. My father went broke insisting that all five of his children go to college, but he paid every penny of his debts. I didn't appreciate what a great person he was. He had character. -- Bill From Sebastopol, Calif.

Dear Bill: If my arithmetic is right, you are 85. It's not every day that a "historian" writes to me. Thanks from all of us for sharing your memories.

Dear Ann Landers: I hope I'm not too late to write about my love-at-first-sight story. I've enjoyed those that have appeared in your column. Here's mine:

It was 1953, and I was on my way to Sweden aboard the liner "Stockholm." The second night out, I spotted in the dining room a man with a great head of red hair. I turned to my mother and said, "I am going to marry that man."

We met a few days later, and I asked him to marry me, in a kidding manner, of course. He said he would think about it. Two years later, he arrived in the United States from Denmark, and we were indeed married. We had six beautiful daughters and enjoyed 37 years of a wonderfully happy marriage until he lost his valiant fight with cancer. He was the best thing that ever happened to me. -- Lillian Hauritz, West Covina, Calif.

Dear Lillian: Thanks for a truly romantic love story.

I have printed letters from people who met their mates on buses and boats, but an amazing number meet on airplanes. It's interesting to me how often cupid seems to have done the seating.

I'd love to hear from readers who married a seatmate. Please send your letters to: Ann Landers, Seatmate, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Lewis takes third in all-around race

Hereford's Monty Lewis finished third in the all-around cowboy competition at the High Plains Junior Rodeo Association season ended with its finals July 25-27 in Clovis, N.M.

The official results of the finals were released this week.

Lewis, who competed in the 13-15 age division, also picked up a belt buckle for first place in year-end ribbon roping. In other year-end competition, Lewis was second in breakaway roping and ninth in tie-down calf roping.

Lewis was one of a dozen Hereford-area youngsters who competed in HPJRA events this year.

Rodey Wilson finished fifth in the all-around cowboy standings in the 13-15 boys division. Wilson was consistent in the roping events, finishing fifth in the year-end standings in all three events: tie-down calf roping, breakaway roping and ribbon roping.

Marty Wilson took eighth in the year-end standings for bull riding in the 13-15 boys division. Several Hereford-area participants placed at the finals themselves.

--Misty Meyer (16-19 girls) was eighth in the first go-round of breakaway roping.

--Melissa Meyer (13-15 girls) was 10th in the first go-round of barrel racing.

--Amy Northcutt (9-12 girls) was 10th in the finals average in barrels.

--Marty Wilson took third in the second go-round of bull riding with a score of 57. He was sixth in finals average.

Rodey Wilson and Lewis did very well in the roping events:

--Wilson won the second go-round of tie-down calf roping with time of 11.63 seconds. He was fifth in the first go-round (16.05) and second in the average. In ribbon roping, he took fourth in the second go-round (7.08).

--Lewis finished third in the ribbon roping average after taking seventh in the first go-round (8.95) and eighth in the second go-round (7.83). In breakaway roping, he was seventh in the second go-round (3.61) and sixth in the average (7.58). In tie-down calf roping, he was eighth in the second go-round (14.06).

Other Hereford-area youths who participated in HPJRA events this year included Kip Kendrick, Pecos Alford, Trent Barber, Shay Henderson, Johna Wilson and Kayli Wilson.

El Paso fans go wild for Cowboys

By EDUARDO MONTES
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP) - The fans surged up in a blue wave, throwing up their arms and emitting throaty yells to encourage their idols on the field.

And that was only for a passing drill.

The Cowboys got a true hero's welcome Thursday night as they trotted onto the Sun Bowl turf to take on the Houston Oilers in a scrimmage, won by Dallas 17-16.

The fact that the game was meaningless to the world champions didn't matter one bit to the 51,118 fans in the stands.

"This is tremendous. Just take a look," Jaime Garcia, who was decked out in a Troy Aikman jersey and Cowboys cap, said while gesturing toward the first sellout crowd the Sun Bowl has ever seen.

The game was much anticipated in El Paso, a stronghold for Dallas fans, and a boon for local charities, which will get a percentage of the projected $1.3 million in proceeds from the game.

Garcia paid $220 for two tickets, the most expensive available, and he said it was easily worth it.

The other fans, most wearing

Cowboy blue, apparently agreed.

They began cheering the moment the Cowboys came on the field to stretch, did the wave during early drills, and then cheered and hollered during the scrimmage as though a Super Bowl ring was at stake.

"Awesome," said Cowboys safety Bill Bates.

Added Aikman, who had groused about the trip earlier in the week: "The experience of having to travel was well worth it."

The Cowboys, who have been decimated by injuries, used the game to get a good look at some of their backups.

Sherman Williams, running with the first team while Emmitt Smith rested, rushed for 67 yards on eight first-half carries. He scored twice on runs of 1- and 5-yards.

Chris Boniol added a 30-yard field goal to close out the Cowboys' scoring.

Wade Wilson went 4-of-6 for 86 yards after replacing Aikman, who played only one drive. Aikman was 2-of-3 for 25 yards, including a 17-yarder to Deion Sanders, in leading the Cowboys to their first score.

Cowboys need Irvin's leadership, work ethic

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Despite Michael Irvin's off-field troubles, Dallas Cowboys coaches and players say his work ethic on the field is unmatched.

That's just what the injury-plagued Super Bowl champs need.

Irvin runs practice routes as if it was the fourth quarter of a playoff game, is hard on himself even for dropping a pass from a third-stringer in camp and constantly barks at teammates, on offense and defense, to do a better job.

Irvin is suspended from playing in the season's first five games, but his presence will be felt after he takes leave from the Cowboys on Aug. 26, coaches say.

"He's a come-at-you leader on the field," said Dallas offensive coordinator Ernie Zampese. "He has a tremendous effect on his teammates, especially on the young guys."

"Just watching how he runs pass patterns, how he gets off the press at the line, how he approaches practice, is a great experience for the young guys."

Troy Aikman calls Irvin "the emotional sparkplug" of the Cowboys.

Still full of trash talk, Irvin wasted little time Wednesday in taking over his first practice with the team since being sentenced in mid-July to probation for cocaine possession. The NFL has suspended him for the first five games for violating its substance abuse policy.

Those expecting a remorseful Irvin on the field could be surprised. He insists he won't change his outspoken approach to football.

"I'm Michael, and that's the only man I could ever be," he said. "When I'm on the football field, I am going to be the Michael that enjoys the game like I have always enjoyed the game."

The team is facing more questions about its health and depth than at any time in the past four years, and that was a concern to Irvin while he was in Florida with his family over the past three weeks.

Eight starters are battling back from surgeries or injuries, and the team has lost tight end Kendall Watkins, backup safety Charlie Williams and backup defensive end Darren Benson for the year.

"I was sitting back at home and watching the guys go through the injuries and kind of suffering," Irvin said. "I said, 'Hey, I gotta get back out there, just to be out there.' That's why I am here."

Rain can't cool off Perry's hot round

By DOUG FERGUSON

AP Sports Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - The way Kenny Perry was playing, he didn't want the first round of the PGA Championship to end. And at times, it seemed it never would.

A small caddy revolt on whether male caddies should be allowed to wear shorts in sauna-like conditions was squashed when two who tried were ordered to change into pants right there on the second tee box.

It became a moot point when thunderstorms pelted Valhalla Golf Club and suspended play for nearly four hours, leaving 60 players to complete their rounds when play resumed this morning.

Phil Mickelson, at 6-under-par through 12 holes, and a host of others are trying to match Perry, the Kentucky native who shot a 6-under 66 despite not being able to see clearly over the final six holes because his contact lenses and overcast skies are not a good mix.

The horn to suspend play sounded as he walked toward the 18th fairway. With hundreds of locals cheering his every shot, Perry was in no mood to pack it in.

"I really didn't want to come out early in the morning just to hit one shot," Perry said. "I was kind of in a decent rhythm and I felt pretty good about it, so I just wanted to go on and finish the hole."

The way he finished was almost as bizarre as the day itself. All Perry could see of his 20-foot birdie putt was that it broke right.

"I just picked a spot and I basically just tried to lag it down there," Perry said.

Perry grew up in Franklin, and it seemed like the entire community of 10,000 was there to cheer him on, whether he was rolling in an 8-footer for birdie or a 3-footer to save par.

"Now I know how Greg Norman and John Daly feel," Perry said. "It was a thrill for me to play as well as I did in front of them. That's just a dream come true, to shoot 6-under out here and be leading the golf tournament the first day."

It could have been even better. He had birdied three holes in a row and belted a drive down the middle of the par-5 10th hole when play was suspended at 2:43 p.m.

When he returned at 6:30 p.m., he failed to get down in two from pin-high in the rough, missed a 6-foot birdie putt on No. 11 and almost fell apart on the 12th hole, when he pushed his drive into the woods, failed to chip back to the fairway and had to make a 3-foot downhill putt to save bogey.

But he stuck a sand wedge to 8 feet at the island green on the par-4 13th hole and fed off the gallery to keep his round going long enough to take the lead.

He'll have his work cut out if he wants to stay there.

While Perry was slowed by the delay, it gave Mickelson a boost. He returned to the course and made a 12-foot birdie putt on No. 5, saved par with an 18-foot putt from against the collar of the rough on No. 9, and knocked down the stick at the par-3 11th for another birdie.

Mickelson took a five-minute putting lesson and, after disappointments in the three previous majors, feels his time could come this week.

"I do have a lot of confidence in the way I've been playing, let me just say that," he said.

Former Masters champion Ian Woosnam was at 5-under through 14 holes, and those in the clubhouse include defending champion Steve Elkington at 5-under, two-time PGA champion Nick Price at 4-under and Nick Faldo at 3-under.

The Oilers' top prospects, quarterback Steve McNair and running back Eddie George, did not play.

Instead, Houston rookie Mike Archie ran for 68 yards and a touchdown on 16 carries. Al Del Greco added a 26-yard field goal with more than seven minutes gone in the third quarter.

A 25-yard TD pass from Donald Hollas to Brashant Carter with 27 seconds remaining in the game made it close. But the Oilers failed to convert a two-point conversion attempt.

The crowd, of course, cheered like it mattered.

Tigers rise up against West contenders

By The Associated Press
The Seattle Mariners and Texas Rangers probably had it all figured out: A quick trip to Detroit, a quick series victory over the worst team in the majors, and a quick boost in the American League West division race. Boy, were they wrong.

After the Tigers won two of three games against the second-place Mariners, Detroit beat the first-place Rangers 3-2 Thursday night to take two of three from Texas.

The Tigers, who improved their record to 40-74, are coming off a season-best 7-2 homestand. They have won 10 of 14, but head into a nine-game road trip against the AL's three division leaders - New York (East), Texas (West) and Cleveland (Central).

With a 27-28 mark since June 6, Detroit has eliminated comparisons to the 1962 New York Mets.

"Not only are we winning, but the young players are becoming more dependable and our pitching has been good," Tigers manager Buddy Bell said. "I think the way we're playing now is more realistic, but it all depends on pitching."

In other AL games Thursday, Cleveland clipped Seattle 2-1, New York beat Chicago 8-4, Oakland nipped Kansas City 2-1, Minnesota topped California 13-6, Baltimore beat Milwaukee 6-4 and Toronto defeated Boston 9-6.

Omar Olivares (7-7) was the most recent pitching standout, winning his third straight start. He allowed nine hits and two walks, and struck out five. His four complete games equal the total of the rest of Detroit's staff.

"Early in the game I was making some pretty good pitches and they were still getting the hits," Olivares said. "Then I started mixing things up, coming inside more to the lefties. They'd start looking for that, and I'd make a good pitch outside and they wouldn't hit it well."

Tony Clark broke a 2-2 tie in the bottom of the ninth, hitting a one-hit RBI single off Gil Heredia (2-4) to score Ruben Sierra.

Indians 2, Mariners 1

In eight shutout innings at the Kingdome, Cleveland starter Chad Ogea allowed only a disputed infield single by Rich Amaral in the second inning.

Amaral hit a grounder to second baseman Jose Vizcaino, who threw to first baseman Mark Carreon after Carreon scrambled back to cover the bag after going in the hole.

First base umpire Tim McClelland ruled Amaral beat the throw, but a TV replay appeared to show Carreon got the throw and had his foot on the bag before Amaral touched it.

"I thought he was out," said Ogea (6-3). "Everybody else thought he was out, too."

It was the Indians' first sweep in the Kingdome since Sept. 26-28, 1986.

Jeff Kent and Jim Thome had RBIs against Terry Mulholland (0-1), who made his second start since being acquired from Philadelphia on July 31.

Yankees 8, White Sox 4

Darryl Strawberry again battered Chicago pitchers at Yankee Stadium, hitting two more home runs to give him five in his last three games.

Strawberry, who hit three home runs Tuesday, hit a three-run homer off Luis Andujar (0-2) in the third. He added a solo shot in the fifth, his eighth since joining the Yankees on July 7.

"Once I get into the groove of hitting homers, it seems to come to me. I'm not trying to hit homers," Strawberry said.

Bob Wickman (4-1) pitched 2 1/3 innings of one-hit relief.

White Sox first baseman Frank Thomas, who was thrown out of Wednesday's game for arguing a called third strike, had - to be restrained by teammates in the dugout after striking out swinging in the seventh.

Athletics 2, Royals 1

Oakland, which leads the major leagues with 183 home runs, didn't hit a home run in a third straight game for the first time all season. But rookie Don Wengert (5-7) allowed four hits in 6 1/3 innings in his first start since July 23. He went on the disabled list the following day with a sore right shoulder.

Geronimo Berroa and Jason Giambi had RBIs for the Athletics against Doug Linton (5-7).

Twins 13, Angels 5

Host California has lost four in a row and nine of 10. The Angels are 0-3 since John McNamara took over as interim manager after Marcel Lachemann resigned.

Jim Edmonds homered twice, but California couldn't beat Rick Aguilera (5-4), who won his third straight decision.

Shawn Boskie (10-6) allowed five earned runs in 3 1/3 innings.

Orioles 6, Brewers 4

Baltimore's Eddie Murray moved past Lou Gehrig into sole possession of 15th place on the career homer list with his 15th of the season and 494th of his career.

Brady Anderson and Bobby Bonilla hit two-run homers for the visiting Orioles off Jeff D'Amico (3-5).

Baltimore rookie Rocky Copping (7-3) allowed five hits in five innings.

Blue Jays 9, Red Sox 6

Toronto's Alex Gonzalez matched career highs with four hits and four RBIs at Fenway Park. But he also made two errors at shortstop and got thrown out trying to stretch a single into a double.

Woody Williams (1-0) won his first start of the year, allowing two runs in five innings.

Aaron Sele (5-9) allowed four runs in the first inning and gave up four more in the fifth.

Phils hand Maddux another loss

By JOHN KEEKS
AP Sports Writer

It only took a couple of swings to make Greg Maddux and Kevin Brown each a perfect 10. And for them, that's perfectly awful the way they've been pitching this season.

At Atlanta, Jim Eisenreich hit a two-run triple in the eighth inning Thursday night off Maddux to lead the Philadelphia Phillies over the Braves 4-1.

For Maddux, that was difficult to deal with because he had dominated Eisenreich before that crucial at-bat: the Phillies' hot-hitting right fielder - he's batting .335 this season - struck out once and hit into two double plays earlier against Maddux, who dropped his fourth straight decision and fell to 10-10 on the season. It's the longest losing streak in more than four years for Maddux, who was 19-2 last season.

In Miami, Brown was going through what he must be accustomed to by now - another outing without support. And this time the frustration may have seeped through.

Brown came into the game against the New York Mets with the lowest ERA in the majors (1.94), and the second-worst run support. After he allowed a one-out walk to Alvaro Espinoza in the eighth, the Mets knocked Brown out of the game with consecutive homers - by Bernard Gilkey (his 26th) and Todd Hundley (his 35th) - and won 3-0, leaving Brown also at 10-10 on the season.

Out of character? You bet. Last season for Baltimore, Brown allowed only 0.52 homers per nine innings, second-best in the American League behind Seattle ace Randy Johnson (0.50).

Maddux, who captured his fourth straight NL Cy Young award last season, can lay some of the blame on his teammates. He has a 2.87 ERA and has given up only 12 earned runs in his last five starts - four losses and a no-decision. But the Braves have scored only nine runs in that period.

Maddux didn't point a finger at the offense, which had 34 hits the previous two nights in 10-4 and 14-1 wins over the Phils.

"I just pitch," he said. "I don't care about those other things. I just worry about pitching, and I just got beat."

By Matt Beech, who won in his major league debut. The left-hander pitched seven innings and allowed three hits and one run - on a squeeze bunt by Maddux. Beech struck out four and walked two in stopping the Braves' winning streak at four. Ricky Bottalico pitched the ninth for his 23rd save.

Astros 6, Expos 2

At Houston, Doug Drabek pitched a six-hitter, his first complete game in just over a year.

Mark Grudzielanek got a two-out single in the sixth off the glove of second baseman Craig Biggio in shallow right field for Montreal's first hit off Drabek (6-7), who was nearly perfect in the early going.

Grudzielanek also reached in the first - on an error. Drabek then retired 17 straight batters and 21 of 23 through the first seven innings. He struck out seven and walked one.

Bill Spiers went 2-for-3 and homered for the Astros, who moved into a tie with St. Louis for the Central Division lead.

Expos starter Pedro Martinez (9-7) lasted only four innings.

Padres 12, Pirates 3

At Pittsburgh, there wasn't anything wrong with the Padres' offense.

Archi Cianfrocco drove in three runs and the Padres matched their season high with 19 hits.

Cianfrocco, Brian Johnson and Ken Caminiti each had three hits. Caminiti added his 22nd home run in support of Scott Sanders (5-4), who won for the fourth time in five starts.

Chris Peters (0-2) took the loss. Dave Clark hit a solo homer in the Pirates' second, his second in two games.

Giants 5, Cardinals 3, 10 innings

At St. Louis, pinch-hitter Dave McCarty hit a two-run homer off Cards reliever Dennis Eckersley in the 10th inning to give the Giants their first road win in eight games.

Rick Wilkins, who had a two-run double in the eighth, opened the 10th with a single off Rick Honeycutt (2-1). After a sacrifice, McCarty connected for his second pinch-hit homer of the season.

The barrage spoiled the Cards' late comeback. They tied the game at 3 in the eighth on Ron Gant's 22nd homer and Gary Gaetti's RBI single.

Jim Poole (1-0) pitched 1 1/3 innings for his first NL win. Rod Beck worked the 10th for his 22nd save.

Mets 3, Marlins 0

Brown was beaten by Mets right-hander Pete Harnisch (8-7), who pitched eight shutout innings.

"This has to be frustrating," Marlins manager John Boles said. "The guy has had such a great year and he doesn't have the wins to show for it."

Harnisch, who won his third consecutive start, allowed four hits, one walk, and struck out five.

"You might have to go back to '93 or '94 for me to say I felt this good," said Harnisch, who underwent season-ending arthroscopic surgery on his right shoulder last Aug. 18. "I felt all along that it might take a year. I'd like to think it's all behind me now."

John Franco pitched a perfect ninth for his 24th save.

Rangers trade for pitcher Burkett

By STEVEN WINE
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI (AP) - The Florida Marlins gave up on a disappointing season, which allowed the Texas Rangers to bolster their playoff chances.

AL West leader Texas acquired right-hander John Burkett on Thursday from Florida for Class-A pitcher Ryan Dempster and a player to be named.

The Marlins, who also called up three minor-leaguers, began laying the groundwork for 1997. They're fourth in the NL East.

"With the moves we've made, we've become a much younger club," general manager Dave Dombrowski said. "I thought this season we would be in a position where we would at least be competitive for a wild-card spot. We're disappointed, but you have to face reality."

The 31-year-old Burkett, 6-10 with a 4.32 ERA in 24 starts this season, said he expects to start for the Rangers on Saturday or Sunday in Toronto. Texas has a two-game lead over Seattle.

"I wish things had worked out better for us this year, but I'm looking forward to going to Texas," the right-hander said. "Having a chance to be in the playoffs and the World Series - that's the ultimate goal."

Though the trade deadline was July 31, Burkett passed through waivers to become eligible to be dealt.

The Rangers acquired Burkett in a trade once before, when they obtained him from San Francisco in December 1994 during the baseball strike. But the Rangers released him when the strike ended, and he signed as a free agent with the Marlins.

"It's a little shocking that they want me back," he said.

"Obviously the offense is more intense over there. I think I'll be able to make the adjustments and do well."

Last year Burkett was 14-14 with a 4.30 ERA for Florida.

Phillies fire Hobson

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Scranton Wilkes-Barre Red Barons manager Butch Hobson, who admitted using cocaine in court documents, according to a newspaper report, has been fired by the Philadelphia Phillies.

The 44-year-old former Boston Red Sox manager faces cocaine possession charges after agents from the Drug Enforcement Administration said they found 2.6 grams of cocaine worth about $120 inside his shaving kit in a Pawtucket, R.I., hotel in May.

If convicted, Hobson faces up to three years in jail and a $5,000 fine. He has proclaimed his innocence publicly.

"The Phillies have released Butch Hobson from his contract and will not rehire him," general manager Lee Thomas said Thursday. "I cannot comment further."

Hobson, of Fairhope, Ala., has been on a leave of absence from the Phillies' Triple-A club since shortly after he was arrested. His attorney, Stephen Famiglietti, did not return a phone call Thursday.

Bookstore full of western tales

By MARLA PIERSON
Waco Tribune-Herald
GROESBECK, Texas -- Caught between a Wednesday afternoon phone call and a customer, trader Bill Bond chooses quickly.

"I got a victim that just came in, and I'm fixing to show him something, and I hope he doesn't commence to tremble," Bond says amiably into the line, holding the cordless phone as he pulls a book from the shelves.

Don Griffin, one of Bond's friends in the cow business, has already taken a seat in one of four chairs set around a table in the middle of the store.

"Uh-oh," Griffin responds apprehensively. "I never stop in with the purpose of buying a book, but he's always got something sitting around he knows I'll buy."

Today it's "The Last Trail Drive Through Downtown Dallas," one of the few Ben K. Green books Griffin doesn't already have.

"Isn't that great?" Bond asks, settling onto the floor.

Griffin asks the price. Bond names one, meandering on with the sales pitch, a narrative likely more rare in today's book-selling than the volume itself.

It's not a one-sentence exhortation of the author; Griffin already knows that.

So Bond relates how he got the volume, weaving a tale involving a vacation drive through Tularosa, N.M., and Aunt Ethel (or whatever her name was, Bond says) sitting in a secondhand bookstore.

Griffin shies away from the book. Bond offers another one before the conversation winds to horses, cattle, slaughterhouses and rainfall.

Bond, 60, is a fan of history stories. There are plenty of both in the downtown space where his grandfather and father had a dry-good store. Last week, a former conductor of the Denver symphony--another story, Bond says--stopped by long enough to reminisce about a female college student who gave up her studies to become a bullfighter.

Bond talks of a recent drive through New Mexico.

"Are you familiar with the Anasazi Indians? Let me tell you. This is the short version," he says, giving a brief chronicle of the tribe.

Bond was a cattle trader through the 1980s, good years for the business. These aren't.

"But so many of us are so caught up in this tradition, we've been fooling with all our lives that we just can't imagine not having a cow," Bond said. "I'm not going to be without a cow."

He opened the store a year and a half ago, mainly from books and Western art he had at home.

"I just piled a bunch of stuff in here I like to look at, and I sell a little something every now and then," Bond tells a customer.

What he has includes the works of authors such as Willa Cather, Larry McMurtry, John Graves and Cormac McCarthy.

There is a mix of nonfiction ranging from a pictorial history of Waco to books about Mexican artists Diego Rivera and Frida Kahlo.

"I'm on real shaky ground setting myself up as a literary critic. I'm in the cow business. I run a country bookstore," Bond said.

But he can also speak easily about the duality of Kahlo or run through the works of Cather. There is a section on women of the West.

"Men usually had two or three wives. They worked 'em to death having babies and hauling water. Well, who's responsible for settling the West? It's not Billy the Kid. It's all these women," Bond said.

The art is Western or local. There is the work of Charles M. Russell and Frederic Remington as well as Melvin Warren of Clifton, Denver watercolorist William Matthews and Nevada photographer Linda Dufurrena.

"I have very little original art because original art is so expensive. Most of my things are good quality prints," Bond said.

The bulk of the original photography is by Peter Ogloff, a Canadian artist who moved to Groesbeck with his wife and has set up a darkroom in the back of Bond's store, an arrangement that evolved from a chance encounter.

Ogloff's wife came home from an overnight shift at the local hospital one morning and mentioned she had talked with another employee, Bond's wife, about black-and-white photography.

"A half hour later, this guy came to the door," Ogloff said of Bond. Ogloff's equipment and many of his pictures were in Canada; he had only one book to show Bond, a work published in the late 1970s.

"On the basis of that, he took this leap of faith," Ogloff said.

Bond footed the bill for supplemental equipment and financed his move into the store.

There is no payroll here, Ogloff and Little each work in the store some, as does Vickie Weaver, who runs a picture-framing business from the space.

Bond finds other ways of drawing in potential artists: a mechanic at the local Goodyear store showed him a picture taken of a comet over Groesbeck. Ogloff made reproductions, and the photographs are in Bond's store.

"It's a home run," Bond said.

An alternative-school student was in Bond's store hashing out ideas for an assignment to write a 250-word biography. He settled on the history of Idgey, the border collie that works cattle for Bond in the mornings and tends the store afternoons.

"If I like it, I'll buy it from you," Bond told the student. "You'll be a published author."

Bond paid $10 for the work which remains in the store.

"That's the first edition, a rare copy of Idgey's life, and it's 250 words," Bond said proudly, checking the biography for the correct spelling of the dog's name, which came from the movie "Fried Green Tomatoes."

He arranged for the high school Spanish teacher, originally from Mexico, to teach four months of Spanish lessons in the store, a reflection of Bond's passion for the country and efforts to be bilingual.

"This was Mexico before we stole it from them," Bond said, explaining his interest. "How many people do you think would know this wasn't always America?"

It isn't a rhetorical question. He waits for answers, then moves back into an all-day stream of anecdotes, questions, thoughts and stories.

As the last customer, an acquaintance who now lives in Kansas, starts strolling out around 5 p.m., Bond lingers, saying how he wants to get up that way next.

A century of service

The Hereford Lions Club on Wednesday honored two long-time members with certificates for their years of service to the club. Dr. Milton Adams, seated, was given a certificate and pin for 55 years total service to Lionism -- including 50 years of perfect attendance -- while Alton Farr, standing at right, was honored for 50 years membership. Congratulating the men is club president L.J. Clark.

Names in the news

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) - Wilson Pickett, under orders from a judge to get help for his drug problem or face jail time, checked into a drug rehab center after returning from a European tour.

Pickett, 55, known for his hits "Mustang Sally" and "In The Midnight Hour," entered a 28-day program at Valley View in Sullivan County, N.Y., last week, his lawyer said Monday.

When the singer pleaded guilty July 1 to being under the influence of cocaine, the judge told him to get help or go to jail. On Monday, the judge postponed sentencing until Sept. 6.

The prosecutor is seeking up to 1-1/2 years in jail for Pickett, who had been paroled for assault and drunken-driving convictions in 1992.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Def Leppard's Rick Allen was ordered to clean up graffiti for a month and get a year's worth of domestic violence counseling for beating his wife.

Allen, the pop-metal band's one-armed drummer, pleaded guilty to spousal battery Tuesday. He also has to attend 104 Alcoholics Anonymous meetings, and pay for the costs of making a domestic violence public service announcement and airing it on MTV.

Allen, 32, was arrested in June 1995 for choking his wife and slamming her head into a wall at Los Angeles International Airport. Stacy Lauren Allen suffered minor injuries.

Allen lost his left arm in a car accident in England in 1984 and later rejoined the band with the help of a custom-made drum kit and computers.

Nuevo Laredo workshop creates glass treasures

By ALDOLPHO CARDENAS
Laredo Morning Times

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico -- It is a hot, dark and dusty workshop in which tools so primitive, yet so practical, are used by novice and skilled artisans to create glass treasures. The tools also preserve the Bejines family's tradition of "sopladores de vidrio" or glass blowers.

"Many people see broken glass every day, everywhere and think of it as an eyesore, but we who work this craft see it as something we can use to create a thing of beauty, or a useful vessel," explained Malaco Bejines, who oversees his family's glass blowing and exporting shop in Nuevo Laredo.

Malaco's brother, Lucio Bejines, handles the business end, while the former is general manager of the workshop.

Brother Salvador, or "Chava," is one of the workers who actually does some of the glass blowing. He also serves as an equipment maintenance technician.

"Our sisters take care of the stores we have in town where we sell our wares," Malaco said. "So, as you can see, it is a family business. We all pitch in to help out."

The Bejineses have been at their Nuevo Laredo location east of the city on Leona Vicario Street for the past 25 years. The family hails from Guadalajara, where artisans abound.

In addition to supplying their own stores and Mexico in general, the Bejineses export glassware to the U.S. They are currently working on a contract for several thousand items featuring the famed Mickey Mouse design.

As he preparing to show visitors how the glassware is created, Malaco warned of the extreme heat the shop's two furnace kilns produce.

"There can be no room for error on the part of anyone," he noted. "If you get burned with one of the tools that carry or blow the glass, that's a first or second degree burn to the skin. If you come in contact with the hot glass, that's an automatic third degree burn and that's serious."

Movements by the workers, who create as many as 300 pieces a day, look like a well-choreographed play.

The "apontilladore" uses a 4-foot steel rod to select the amount of crystal and colored glass that is to be used for a specific piece.

That piece is then transferred to the "soplador" who uses a hollow, round and tapered 4-foot section of stainless steel through which he blows and begins to form the piece.

He then hands the piece over to the "pasador," who takes the piece back to the kiln. Inside the central brick kiln, temperatures are measured in thousands of degrees as natural gas generates the needed heat to melt the glass and colored sand.

From several feet away, unmelted glass can be seen through the open mouth of the kiln, jumping in the air like popcorn as it begins to melt in the infernal temperatures and slide down into a floating pool of glass, or crystal.

Floating above the surface of the crystal pool are medium sized clay pots that hold the different colors used to create various patterns.

Once the piece has been handed back to the soplador, he continues blowing and forming it; shaping it in a metal mold, rolling it over a narrow steel table, and then over a small stack of wet newspapers.

"When the piece is blown to the correct size," Malaco explained, "the pasador then passes it over to the 'maestro' (master), either Candelario Carrillo or Alfonso Oseguerra."

Seated close by the kiln, Carrillo, who has 30 years of experience as a soplador and who has earned the title of maestro, uses simple forged tools that have been custom-made for his craft.

The maestro places the finishing touches on the work, in this case a pitcher, and is the only one who does a "degollado," or opening of the vessel.

The maestro returns the piece to the kiln for a short while, then transfers it to the tempering kiln, called "el arco," because of its arched hatch. The "arquero" is the worker tending the arco.

"Inside the arco the temperatures are not as hot," Malaco explained. "We use natural gas and wood to fire this kiln where the finished products are cured for about 24 hours."

The arquero monitoring this kiln has the most important job of the entire operation, Malaco says.

"Our maestros can make the most beautiful glassware fit for a king," he said, "but if the arquero drops the piece or does not cure it just right, it will bend or break and all that work will be for nothing."

"It's hard work, but it is honorable work, and we take pride in creating the things we manufacture," Malaco says, wiping his brow.

Facts About The

BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

JACOB'S WELL

ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF THE ANCIENT SAMARITAN CITY OF SYCHAR, IS JACOB'S WELL WHERE JESUS OF NAZARETH ASKED THE WOMAN OF SAMARIA FOR A DRINK OF WATER. IT IS SITUATED AT THE EASTERN MOUTH OF THE VALLEY BETWEEN MOUNT EBAL ON THE NORTH AND MOUNT GERIZIM ON THE SOUTH. THE WELL IS MORE THAN 75 FEET DEEP BEFORE WATER IS REACHED BUT IT IS STILL USED AND ITS WATER IS PURE AND IS SUPERIOR TO THAT OF NEARBY SPRINGS AND STREAMS. THE DEPTH OF THE WELL CERTAINLY AGREES WITH THE STORY OF THE SAMARITAN WOMAN ADMONISHING JESUS THAT HE HAD NO WAY TO GET WATER FROM SO DEEP A WELL AS THIS ONE WAS! (JOHN 4:11)

THE WELL WAS PROBABLY DUG BECAUSE THE MANY SPRINGS IN THE VALLEY DRIED UP IN THE SUMMER AND PEOPLE NEEDED A GOOD SOURCE OF WATER SUPPLY WHICH A DEEP WELL WOULD GIVE THEM.

Why Advertising Works!

Maybe you figure other retailers in your line are going to cut back their advertising, so it's safe for you, too. Right? Wrong! You're in competition for the consumer's dollar with every other retailer in town, no matter what he sells. People have only so many dollars to spend, and if they don't spend them for what you sell, they'll spend them for something else.

AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Yesterday's Cryptoquote: COMMON SENSE IN AN UNCOMMON DEGREE IS WHAT THE WORLD CALLS WISDOM.—ANON

Fear comes from uncertainty. When we are absolutely certain, whether of our worth or worthlessness, we are almost impervious to fear. Thus a feeling of utter unworthiness can be a source of courage.

Stunt woman thrills to the spills

Plano resident has taken the fall for many stars

By BRYAN WOOLLEY

The Dallas Morning News
WESTMINSTER, Texas - In "Annie Hall," she was Diane Keaton. In "Barfly," she was Faye Dunaway. In "King Kong" and "Blue Sky," she was Jessica Lange, and in "Feds," she was Rebecca De Mornay. You've also seen her as Sharon Stone, Heather Locklear, Cheryl Ladd, Kate Capshaw, Heather Thomas and Farrah Fawcett.

During the past two decades, she has appeared in 57 movies and 42 television series, including such favorites as "Kojak," "Alfred Hitchcock Presents," "Taxi," "Cagney & Lacey," "Magnum, p.i.," "Charlie's Angels," "Matlock," "Doogie Howser," "Tales From the Crypt" and "Father Dowling Mysteries."

Yet if you ran into Diane Peterson in a supermarket in her Plano neighborhood, you wouldn't know her from any other periodontist's wife.

Ms. Peterson's job is to look like somebody else. As a stuntwoman, she's paid to make you think you see somebody famous doing something dangerous when you really don't.

"I've done a lot of people," she says. "Some biggies, some not-so-biggies."

On this particular morning, she's barreling down a back road near the tiny Collin County community of Westminster in a Jeep driven by ... Is that Chuck Norris? Nope. It's Kinnie Gibson, Norris' spittin'-image stunt double on "Walker, Texas Ranger."

In this episode - titled "Plague," to be aired sometime next fall - the intrepid Ranger is being pursued by MPs wearing helmets and gas masks and firing M-16s at him. Ranger Walker's passenger, played by Ms. Peterson, is Shana Iron Shirt, an American Indian doctor.

Somewhere this morning, Norris and a young actress named Elaine Bilstad are playing these same roles in a less hectic situation. But here, at the intersection of FM2862 and FM455, next to a field where a farmer on a John Deere is baling his hay, hell's a-poppin'.

As the scene opens, the Walker Jeep is roaring down FM2862 with the two MP Jeeps in hot pursuit. The Walker Jeeps try to turn onto FM455, misses it, goes into the ditch, comes back onto the highway, bouncing high into the air, tires squealing, and roars on, still pursued by the MPs.

One of the MPs leans out of a pursuing Jeep's window with a rifle. Walker and Shana crouch low as gunfire explodes around them. A bullet hits a tire! It blows! Walker loses control! The Jeep slides to the side, rolls over and over and comes to a dusty, metal-crunching stop! Walker is unconscious! Shana is hanging upside down!

That's the way you'll see it on your TV screen next fall. It'll be an action-packed minute or two. But for Ms. Peterson and the rest of the "Walker" second unit, which films the car chases, explosions, gunplay and fistfights that are the show's trademark, it's a long, grueling, humid, near-100-degree day in the boonies. And the ways they're tricking your eyes are many and clever, involving a number of vehicles, wigs, ramps, dummies and camera razzle-dazzle.

It's an unusual episode for Ms. Peterson. She's wearing a dark wig and doubling for Ms. Bilstad, a guest star on the "Plague" episode. Usually on "Walker" she wears a blond wig and doubles for the show's female lead, Sheree Wilson.

But any woman you see on "Walker" who's driving like a maniac, running out of an exploding building, crashing through a window or falling off a skyscraper is almost certainly Ms. Peterson.

This is one of her easier workdays. She's the passenger while Gibson does the driving. "I love car chases," she says. "I love them. I would do a car chase every day if I could. But I would rather do the driving. It's hard for me to be the passenger, because I'm not in control. I just have to sit there and be quiet. That's really hard for me."

If she had grown up in another time, Ms. Peterson would have been called a tomboy. "I was always outside," she says, "riding my bicycle, riding my horse, climbing things. One winter I climbed up on our roof and jumped off into a snowbank. My mother was sitting by the window typing, and she saw me flying past. I gave her a lot of gray hair while I was growing up."

Ms. Peterson's dad, owner of a New Jersey trucking firm, taught her to drive an 18-wheeler when she was 9, and when she was old enough to get a license she made runs for him. Driving a rig is still one of the skills she lists on her resume.

After earning a degree in acting from the University of Miami, she returned to New Jersey and got a job as a Playboy bunny. Playboy later transferred her to London, where she tried to get acting jobs on British TV. "But my work permit was only good for being a bunny," she says.

In 1974, she moved to New York and picked up small acting jobs here and there. One day she was working on "Kojak" and saw two stuntmen do a car chase. "I went, 'Wow! That's what I want to do!'" she says.

She asked the two stuntmen to teach her the job, but they refused. No stuntwomen were working on the East Coast then. The men were doing women's stunts in wigs and dresses. But Ms. Peterson kept pestering the men, and finally she became their student.

They rented cars and practiced side slides and reverse spinouts with her. They piled up cardboard boxes, laid a thin pad on top and showed her how to fall off buildings. They showed her how to burst through plate-glass windows.

"Finally I got a job getting hit by cars for a traffic-safety film," she says. "For four days, I got hit more ways than you can think of. One day a car hit me in the knees, and I said, 'OK, that's it. I've had it. I quit.'"

"One of the guys who were teaching me said, 'It's like falling off a horse. If you don't get back out there right now and do it again, you'll never do another stunt in your life.' So I got back out there. My knees were shaking. Bam! I took another car hit."

During her two years in New York, she was the only stuntwoman working there. She appeared in a number of movies, including "Annie Hall," in which she gave Woody Allen's stunt double a wild ride in a Volkswagen through the streets of Manhattan.

"But in the winters there was no work because of the terrible weather and the snow," she says. "Also, when they came to New York to make Hollywood movies, they gave all the best stunts to California people."

She packed her Corvette and moved to the West Coast. Two weeks later, a stunt coordinator called her and asked: "Have you ever been hit by a car?"

"Have I!" she replied. Her Hollywood career was launched.

In her early California days, she was in a lot of car pictures, including "Grand Theft Auto," Ron Howard's directing debut. Sometimes she worked as an actress, sometimes as a stuntwoman, sometimes as both. Between movie and TV jobs, she modeled.

As her reputation grew, she doubled for many of Hollywood's stars: falling off buildings, getting set on fire, fistfighting, swordfighting, doing the kwan do, driving 18-wheelers in near-wreck scenes, scuba diving, doing car chases and crashes, getting thrown from speeding vehicles, doing stunts on personal water craft, sulkies, horses and helicopters.

In "Allen Quartermain and the Lost City of Gold," she swung on a vine over a pit of bubbling gold. For the bar fight she did in "Barfly," standing in for Faye Dunaway, she was the first woman to win the Stuntmen's Award for Best Fight, the rough-and-tumblers' equivalent of an Oscar.

Her colleagues (there are only about 50 stuntwomen working) elected her president of the Stuntwomen's Association of Motion Pictures for seven consecutive years.

Then a few years ago, she accompanied a girlfriend on a skiing trip to Aspen.

"We were going up to Snowmass," she says. "The bus was real crowded. I sat down next to this guy, and we just hit it off. He goes, 'I live in Plano, Texas,' and I say, 'Where is that?'"

Her new acquaintance was Dr. Jeff Glazer, Plano periodontist. He asked her for a date and wooed her with limousines and long-stemmed roses. After their ski vacation ended, they flew back and forth between Dallas and Los Angeles to visit each other.

"As soon as I heard 'Walker' was starting up and was going to be shot in Dallas," she says, "I called Eric Norris, Chuck's son. He's the stunt coordinator on the show. He and I had worked together before. I said, 'Eric, I'd really like to work on your show.' He said, 'You'd be perfect to double the lead.' And that was that."

She moved to Plano. About 15 months ago, she and Dr. Glazer were wed.

"I still fly back to California pretty often," Ms. Peterson says. "This month I'm going to L.A. to work on 'Starship Troopers,' a futuristic battle movie. But I always stay available for 'Walker.' I live here now, and it's like family, we work together so much."

"Also, Jeff works on everybody's teeth. He's doing implants on all the stuntmen who have their teeth knocked out."

At the end of her day as Dr. Shana Iron Shirt, Ms. Peterson's Jeep crashes into a line of gas pumps at a service station and sets off a series of fiery, earth-quaking explosions.

She escapes, of course, narrowly.

"I've never had a day when I woke up and said, 'I wish I didn't have to go to work,'" she says. "Not once. From the day I started until now, I've always been thrilled about what I do. It's always something different, a laugh, a scare. I always have a good time."
