Gunman kills 2 in U.S. Capitol

Capitol police officers slain, female tourist wounded in shootout

Tourist Angela Dickerson, 24, is rushed to a helicopter on Capitol Hill Friday in Washington, D.C. Two policemen were fatally shot, and Dickerson and the suspected gunman were wounded late Friday afternoon in an exchange of gunfire inside the Capitol, officials said.

WASHINGTON — A lone gunman with a history of threats against the government stormed the Capitol on Friday in a hail of gunfire that killed two police officers and came to a bloody end inside the offices of House Majority Whip Tom DeLay.

The veteran Texas lawmaker escaped unharmed after herding his staff into his office and bolting an oak door against the fiery onslaught that shattered a routine afternoon at the nation's capital and sent hundreds of tourists fleeing the building.

DeLay's bodyguard, John Gibson, who rushed to stop the gunman as he burst into the Sugar Land Republican's suite, was killed. Police Officer Jacob Chestnut, who first attempted to stop the assailant when he bypassed metal detectors at an east-side door of the Capitol, also was slain.

A woman tourist, Angela Dickerson, 24, was shot before police critically wounded the gunman. He was identified as Russell E. Weston, 41, a Montana resident known to the Secret Service for making threats against President Clinton and the Pentagon.

"This is, indeed, a sad day for the United States Capitol Police, the United States Congress and the nation as a whole," said a somber Sgt. Dan Nichols, the Capitol Police spokesman who announced the officers' deaths to reporters.

Capitol flags were placed at half-staff and parts of the building will

Terrified tourists hide in restrooms, stairway

By Connie Cass

WASHINGTON — Panicked tourists rushed for cover under a stairway, in bathrooms, behind pillars. Police, guns drawn, pushed others to the floor. A mother screamed for her child as people ran by.

"There was a guy just running, just shooting at anybody he could hit," said Justin Brown, an employee in a Capitol gift shop. "The first thing I thought was, 'Duck.'"

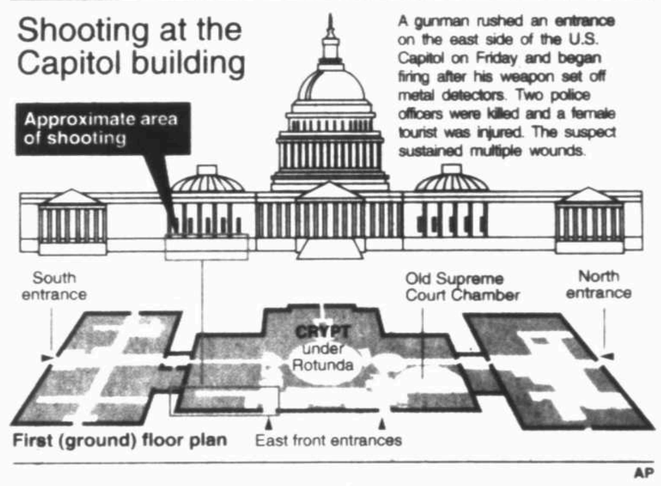

Chaos broke out in a Capitol hallway — which fills with tourists on any summer day — when a gunman and Capitol police exchanged fire. At first, many people were stunned by the sound, unsure what was happening. How could there be shots in a building secured by police and metal detectors at every entrance?

"I turned and I thought, 'That can't be possible,' so I just kept walking," said Gillian Simon, visiting from Wilmington, N.C. When she heard four or five more shots and the screaming mother — and other tourists fled past her — Simon ran and hid behind a column.

Just off the first-floor hallway, House members and aides were gathered in the office suite of Majority Whip Tom DeLay, R-Texas, to celebrate passage of a health insurance bill. Suddenly they heard a sound "like firecrackers, bang, bang, bang," said one woman, who asked to be identified only as a Ways and Means Committee aide.

A congressional staff member ran in shouting, "Everybody get down, get down!" said the woman, who was in a conference room with about a dozen other people.

Neighbors say suspect believed government was spying on him

By Amy Beth Hanson
Associated Press

RIMINI, Mont. — A paranoid drifter. A threat to the president. A man who feared a neighbor's satellite dish, and one whose own father reportedly told him to get out for killing more than a dozen cats a day before two people were slain at the U.S. Capitol.

The images of shooting suspect Russell Eugene Weston emerged in the hours after Friday's shootings, drawing immediate comparisons to another high-profile Montana resident: Unabomber Theodore Kaczynski.

The 41-year-old Weston apparently drifted between his home in the southern Illinois town of Valmeyer and Montana.

Like recluse Kaczynski, Weston lived in a cabin in the woods in this tiny old mining town about 20 miles southwest of Helena. Weston's cabin is about 40 miles southeast of the structure Kaczynski lived in.

Weston showed up on the Secret Service computer list of people who might be a low-level threat to the president, a federal law enforcement official told The Associated Press.

Ken Moore, who lives about a quarter mile from Weston's cabin outside Helena, said Weston believed Moore's TV satellite dish was pointed at his house so he could be watched.

Moore said Weston would stand in front of the dish, "waving his arms, talking to it, saying, 'Here I am.'"

Moore, who has lived in the area since 1959, said Weston moved in about three years ago. Moore said he knew Weston as "Rusty."

Weston has lived in the Helena area off an on for at least 15 years.

He believed the government had planted mines on his Montana property, The Miami Herald reported on its Web site

Access to government information under threat in Texas, lawyer says

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A Lubbock attorney brought area journalists up to date on the battle to reverse legislative trends restricting the public's rights to government information.

Don Richards is a private attorney who also serves as a staff attorney with the Texas Freedom of Information Foundation.

In a discussion at Friday's meeting of the West Texas Press Association at the Midland Hilton, Richards spoke about ongoing efforts in the battle to keep government open in Texas.

"It's real important. We have had some real problems in the last three years," Richards said.

Legislative battles are under way to halt or reverse efforts to increase secrecy in governmental entities such as cities and school districts. Discussions are continuing in Austin to keep judges from exempting their tax-supported administrative records from the Texas Open Records Act.

In city governments throughout the state, it is becoming more and more prevalent for city officials to establish private corporations that utilize public funds. This is an attempt to keep the taxpayers ignorant of the decisions regarding the use of those public funds by closing the meetings of this private corporation, Richards said.

The Texas Press Association and the Freedom of Information Foundation are continuing legislative efforts to force these entities to open their doors to public scrutiny.

"The public is entitled to see the process work, just like a jury sees the legal process in court," he said.

"Unfortunately, the Texas Municipal League is working to train government (officials) in ways to get around the

Graham convicted

Former Air Force Academy cadet David Graham smiles to his mother in a New Braunfels courtroom before the beginning of closing arguments Thursday. A jury found Graham, 20, guilty of capital murder Friday in the killing of 16-year-old Adrianne Jones. Graham was calm as the jury announced its verdict, which means an automatic life sentence. Prosecutors did not seek the death penalty, partly at the request of the victim's family.

Japan's foreign minister wins majority for party leader

■ Disgruntled party members and opposition leaders criticize selection as sign party is unable to update ways.

Associated Press

TOKYO — After a campaign filled with bold pledges of fresh leadership and radical initiatives, Japan's ruling Liberal Democrats defied voter demands for change Friday by choosing a president favorable to the party powerbrokers.

Foreign Minister Keizo Obuchi won a commanding majority of the ballot for party leader, a post that is almost sure to lead him to the prime minister's job when Parliament votes later this month.

Obuchi's victory was a triumph for party elders, who staved off a push by dissident lawmakers to pick a leader more appealing to an electorate increasingly impatient with the Liberal Democratic Party's failure to turn around Japan's worst recession since World War II.

Disgruntled party members, opposition leaders and others immediately criticized the selection of Obuchi — an LDP insider who is not known as an innovator — as a sign that the party is unable to update its ways.

The opposition called for immediate elections in the powerful lower house of Parliament, the LDP's stronghold, to capitalize on voter discontent and drive the party from power.

"The LDP just has empty words," scowled Hideyuki Otsuka, the owner of a small company in Tokyo. "Japan needs adventurous leadership that can bring about change once and for all."

Obuchi beat two candidates who offered more radical solutions to Japan's economic problems in an unusually open race that the party touted as a major move to be more responsive to the public.

He garnered 225 votes, compared with the 102 won by former Chief Cabinet Secretary Seiroku Kajiyama and the 84 received by Health Secretary Junichiro Koizumi.

Because of the LDP's control of the lower house, Obuchi is virtually certain to win the election for premier expected on July 30. He would succeed Ryutaro Hashimoto, who announced his resignation last week after the party's humiliating defeat in upper house elections July 12.

Obuchi said his victory reflected a mandate for his policies and called for party unity.

The economy dominated the campaign. While all three candidates had similar proposals, Obuchi — apparently with assent from party leaders — fleshed his out with the most details.

"Because the economic slump in our country has a big impact on Asia and the rest of the world, we have to pull Japan out of recession as soon as we can," he said.

The main goal of Obuchi's program is trying to get Japan's thrifty consumers to buy. He has proposed $42.6 billion in tax cuts and a $71 billion spending package. Obuchi also said that cleaning up the debt-plagued financial sector with a swift implementation of the LDP's "bridge bank" plan was among his priorities.

Skeptics questioned his reformist pledges.

"We do not foresee the LDP taking a stance aimed at making major reforms," Naoto Kan, leader of the opposition Democratic party, was quoted as saying by Kyodo News agency. "Reform can only take place under a government selected by citizens."

Asian leaders welcomed Obuchi's triumph, hoping his international expertise would translate into more Japanese help for the region's troubled economies.

"We hope this contact he had with us will provide the kind of leadership we would expect from Japan," said Malaysian Foreign Minister Abdullah Badawi. "We hope that they will play a more active role and they would be able to help us."

Although Japan has its own economic woes, Badawi and others attending a Southeast Asian foreign ministers' meeting in the Philippines said its help is crucial to all of Asia's economic recovery.

The election results came after the Tokyo stock markets closed. In currency markets, Obuchi's win failed to trigger a huge sell-off of the yen that some had predicted. The dollar bought 140.54 yen in late afternoon trading, down 1.14 yen from late Thursday in Tokyo and below its late New York rate of 141.38 yen overnight.

Experts predicted that Obuchi — who has a reputation as a consensus-builder — will merely accelerate Hashimoto's policies rather than embark on a genuinely new path.

"The key difference is that Obuchi will have to compromise more with the opposition to get bills passed through the upper house," said Shigenori Okazaki, a political analyst at SBC Warburg Japan Ltd.

Obuchi also must placate a skeptical public.

"Obuchi doesn't have a personality that suggests things will change from Hashimoto," said shopkeeper Noriyoshi Kondo. "I don't expect the economy to get any better."

U.S. couples rush to adopt Cambodian babies before election

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Foreign couples, most of them American, have scrambled to adopt Cambodian children at fees of up to $15,000 before weekend elections that could lead to tighter rules for bringing home babies.

"We went from the airport to the orphanage to the embassy. I never even got a chance to shave," said Joe Balcerak, of Rochester, N.Y. He arrived in Phnom Penh on Wednesday, picked up an 18-month-old girl he named Jana Lynn, and they left the country Friday.

After waiting months, sometimes years, to adopt, couples were told that if they could collect the children before Sunday's elections, there would be no wait. Many had never considered adopting a Cambodian child before last week.

At least 22 American families came to adopt babies in the past week, many with less than four days notice. Some Europeans also are adopting, but Americans are the most active.

Civil war during the 1980s left Cambodia with a surfeit of orphans and an economy too shattered to care for them. Orphanages would have perhaps one wet-nurse for eight babies — meaning most starved.

Giddy parents congregated at the Sunway Hotel with their new Cambodian children, rocking them in soft new baby blankets and dressing them in fuzzy outfits.

"We cleaned out (a nearby orphanage) pretty well," Balcerak said. "There are maybe only a half dozen left."

Cambodia first opened its doors to international adoptions in 1989, and they skyrocketed after a U.N. peacekeeping mission arrived in 1991. But the country halted foreign adoptions in 1992 for fear that the adoptions could not adequately be monitored.

Adoptions began to resume slowly in 1993, under strict government control. Fewer orphans have lost both parents because of war; instead, many come from families that cannot afford them.

The doors to foreign adoptions have swung wide open amid the political turmoil that followed a bloody coup last year when strongman Hun Sen deposed his co-prime minister, Prince Norodom Ranariddh.

The Ministry of Social Action and Veterans Affairs decided that if prospective parents could prove that they met the adoption requirements of their host countries, Cambodia would quickly approve the requests.

A Maine-based agency, Maine Adoption Placement Services, which has been active in matching American couples with orphans, pushed to have a batch of adoptions arranged before July 25.

"I think they are afraid that the adoption policy might change" with Sunday's elections, said Sandy Nickels, the proud new mother of a two-month-old baby girl, Grace Vandy.

Most families said they paid between $10,000 and $15,000, about a third of which goes to pay "processing fees" to the Cambodian government. Critics suspect the children are being rushed out of Cambodia by greedy officials who want to line their own pockets in case the elections put their jobs in jeopardy.

The new parents appeared dazed by the whirlwind of events.

"We had 48 hours to throw together two months of paperwork," said Michael Shantzis of San Francisco, the new father of an 18-month-old girl named Theany. Theany spent her last few hours in Cambodia sleeping on a bench in the hotel's restaurant.

Theany's birth mother, abandoned by her husband, was forced to give her up because she could not afford to raise her, the new parents said. They hope to find some way to give money to the family.

Red Cross launches fund for victims of Agent Orange

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — The Vietnamese Red Cross launched a fund Friday for victims of Agent Orange, saying the toxic defoliant is starting to claim its third generation of victims.

"With Agent Orange, the land mines were planted deep in the very essence of life — in the genes of the men and women," said Red Cross official John Geoghegan. "That this war is being fought again with their grandchildren is a horrific thought."

An unknown number of people suffer from the effects of Agent Orange, which was sprayed over the jungle by U.S. planes to strip away cover for North Vietnamese troops.

Estimates of Agent Orange victims range from tens of thousands to 2 million Vietnamese. In April, Prime Minister Phan Van Khai ordered the first nationwide survey, which is expected to be completed next year.

In addition, veterans from at least four countries who fought on the side of the former U.S.-backed South Vietnamese government sued the chemical's manufacturers in the United States, saying exposure caused chronic illness, deaths and birth defects.

According to U.S. records, the United States sprayed about 12 million gallons of Agent Orange from 1961 to 1971 over parts of southern and central Vietnam.

The total included about 375 pounds of dioxin, a trace of which can cause cancer.

The spraying was stopped in 1971, four years before the end of the war, after laboratory tests showed that dioxin can cause cancers and birth defects.

It's virtually impossible to determine which birth defects or ailments are directly related to Agent Orange.

But the Vietnamese Red Cross says there appear to be common threads: brothers and sisters suffering from the same uncommon deformities; arms and legs that are twisted in a certain way; eyes without pupils.

Hoang Dinh Cau, chairman of the National Committee for Investigation of Defects from Toxic Chemicals Used During the Vietnam War, said recent studies show dioxin levels and the high rate of birth defects are dropping.

But some areas still have high toxicity levels in the soil and oil of fish.

Cau said recently-developed treatments have improved the lives of some victims. Those children who have the most serious deformities are cared for at 11 "peace villages" scattered across the country that can handle a total of 500 patients. More villages are planned.

CAPITOL: Officers killed, tourist wounded in shootout be closed Saturday while police investigate.

DeLay, who was hustled out of the Capitol and onto an airplane bound for Houston, said in a statement, "I cannot express the depth of my sorrow for this loss."

DeLay, No. 3 in the Republican leadership, did not appear to be a target of the assault, but the suite of first-floor offices he occupies are closest to the entryway where the shootout began.

"I believe he (Weston) chose a route that he thought was open to him because other routes were closed," said Rep. Bill Thomas, R-Calif., chairman of the House committee that oversees the Capitol.

The deaths of Gibson and Chestnut were the first in the Capitol building, which has been a terrorist target in the past but remains an open symbol of the nation's democracy.

"The officers who were killed, and those who apprehended the gunman, are true heroes of democracy, and every American owes them a deep debt of gratitude. They gave their lives to protect the lives of hundreds of tourists, staff and members of Congress," said House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga.

Clinton, taking a brief respite at Camp David, called Gingrich to offer assistance. The president received briefings throughout the afternoon. Barry Toiv, a White House spokesman, said there had been a slight upgrade in security around the White House after the attack.

"Hillary and I were deeply disturbed to hear of the shootings this afternoon at the United States Capitol," Clinton said in a statement. "The Capitol is the people's house, a place where visitors and workers should not have to fear violence." Clinton will make another statement on the shootings Saturday.

Weston's motive remained unclear but the shootout was being investigated by Capitol Police, D.C. Metropolitan Police, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Secret Service and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The Miami Herald reported that Weston's father said in an interview that his son believed the government had planted landmines on his Montana property.

The House of Representatives had just completed its work for the day, passing a Republican version of a bill to give patients more rights in managed health care operations. Most members were heading home for the weekend.

A handful of members, including Rep. Nick Lampson, D-Texas, remained on the floor to participate in special orders, the time of day in which any member can speak for one hour on any subject.

Nichols reported that at 3:40 p.m. a lone gunman entered the Document Door, the first floor public entrance in the middle of the Capitol on the east side that faces the Supreme Court.

Witnesses reported hearing a series of sharp reports as Weston forced his way past metal detectors and opened fire on guards who attempted to stop him.

Tourists caught in the gunbattle fled for safety and fell atop children to protect them. The woman tourist was shot in the shoulder and face. Chestnut, an 18-year veteran and father of two children, was the first officer to be shot, suffering wounds to the head.

Weston, also wounded, stumbled into a hallway 10 feet away and opened a private door, an unmarked side entrance to the dozen or so tiny offices that comprise DeLay's Whip operation, according to Thomas.

Gibson, an eight-year veteran and the father of three, usually sat at a desk just inside the door. Gibson and Weston engaged in a furious gunbattle as they stood less than 10 feet apart.

Both Gibson and Weston fell wounded in the hallway inside DeLay's offices. Gibson died after a lifeflight-helicopter ride to the hospital. Weston underwent four hours of surgery and was expected to recover, Thomas said.

Sen. Bill Frist, a Tennessee Republican and a heart surgeon, rushed from his office to the shooting scene where he administered aid and helped with resuscitation efforts.

Tourist Linda Addotta was seated on a bench just inside the Capitol with her youngest son, Jacob, leaning against her napping. Her husband and two other children were standing nearby when the gunfire started. She threw Jacob under a table and lay atop him.

"I didn't look up. You could hear the guns going off. It was like a nightmare," she said.

"There was a guy just running, just shooting at anybody he could hit," said Justin Brown, an employee in a Capitol gift shop. "The first thing I thought was, 'Duck!'"

Tourists fled down the massive steps that adorn the west and east front as word of the shooting spread. Police huddled tourists into hallways and offices in an attempt to protect them.

Officers locked all the doors leading into the House floor and the House gallery, with members and tourists trapped inside, for more than an hour after the incident.

"This was not a fault of security. It was an individual who was determined to blast his way into the Capitol," Thomas said.

TOURISTS: People hid under desks and tables

(From 1A)

Then came another round of shots. The gunman was near the back door of the office suite, she said.

People hid under desks and tables. Some tried unsuccessfully to open windows to flee outside. When told it was safe to emerge from behind the conference room door, the aide saw medical personnel trying to resuscitate two people.

Unsure if there might be other gunmen on the loose, police officers tried to secure the building, closing off entrances. They told office staffers to lock their doors. They blocked stairways and elevators in third-floor corridors where tourists were lined up to enter balconies that overlook the House floor. Reporters were kept inside the press room. Later, tourists were escorted to exits but asked to leave their names and addresses before departing.

In the first-floor hallway, Ronald Beamish, a 70-year-old from Gloucester, England, was resting near the souvenir shop when he found himself suddenly at the center of the chaotic scene. He was among the first to reach a wounded Capitol Police officer.

"I saw an officer hit the floor. I approached and felt his pulse. ... He was very seriously wounded," Beamish said. His son, Gareth, 41, looked frantically for his father in the surging crowd but couldn't find him, so he and other relatives took refuge in a women's bathroom.

Lynda Hoober, 55, of Greenville, S.C., was in the hallway. "As soon as we heard someone say, 'Oh my God, she's been shot,' we ran up and hid," said Hoober, who took refuge under a stairway. Afterward, she saw a woman, dressed in shorts, with bloody bandages over her eye and an arm. She was tended by bystanders until medics arrived, Hoober said.

Sen. Bill Frist, a heart surgeon, raced from his office to the scene and treated two people. One man had been shot in the face. The other had several gunshot wounds, and Frist performed cardiopulmonary resuscitation before riding with him to a hospital.

Frist said he didn't know whether either man was the gunman. "I was really just focused on keeping their hearts and lungs moving," said Frist, a Tennessee Republican.

Within hours, the flag over the Capitol was lowered to half-staff for two police officers who died of their wounds.

SUSPECT: Father said to have thrown Weston out for killing cats with shotgun

(From 1A)

Friday.

The Herald reported on its Web site that Weston was last seen at his family's home in Illinois Thursday after he had an argument with his father. The argument with Russell Weston Sr., 66, was because Weston had used his shotgun to kill more than a dozen cats, the Herald reported.

"He shot a bunch of cats and I made him get out. I got mad, told him, 'You gonna have to leave,'" said the man who identified himself to the newspaper as Russell Weston Sr., in an interview with the Herald.

One official told the AP the weapon used in the Capitol shooting was .38-caliber gun.

The younger Weston did not have a handgun, his father told the Herald. But asked to check for his own personal weapon, a Smith & Wesson .38 special, the father said "It's not there," the Herald said.

The father could not be reached for comment by the AP. His phone was disconnected and the rural road that leads to the Weston home was blocked by authorities, who said FBI agents were in the house.

Weston's father said his son survived on federal disability benefits, had not worked since the mid-1980s, but drifted between a half-acre plot of land where he mined for gold in Montana, and his family home in Valmeyer — 23 miles south of St. Louis — for years, the father told the Herald.

He said his son recently wrote a federal agency, he was unsure which, to complain that the government had planted landmines on his Montana property, the Herald reported. A government official wrote back to say there was no evidence to support the claim, the father said.

The elder Weston told the Herald his son is "an introvert."

"He doesn't have too many friends," the father said.

A Montana Justice Department investigator and sheriff's deputy were stationed outside the cabin Friday night waiting for FBI agents to arrive and begin a search.

Records show Weston was arrested in Helena in 1991 on a charge of sale of dangerous drugs, according to a Montana Justice Department official speaking on condition of anonymity. The charge ultimately was dismissed. No further information was available on the incident.

Jury sentences Rogers to nine years in prison in teacher death

By Rick López
Staff Writer

A jury sentenced Michael Lynn Rogers to nine years in prison Friday for killing a 51-year-old Midland teacher with his pickup and then leaving her body in a remote cotton field.

Rogers, 28, was convicted of manslaughter Thursday in the death of Glynda Sue Jones, who taught at Bush Elementary School. Rogers ran into Ms. Jones as she was walking around her Valley View neighborhood on County Road 1140 on Aug. 4, 1997.

His manslaughter offense was upgraded from a second-degree to a first-degree felony because Rogers has a 1990 felony conviction in Nolan County for burglary of a vehicle, District Attorney Al Schorre said.

Because this was alleged in the indictment, jurors had the option of giving Rogers a prison sentence ranging from five to 99 years or life, Schorre said. The defendant also has convictions in Midland County for misdemeanor charges of driving while intoxicated and possession of marijuana.

'This is the beginning of final closure for myself and others. We can move on and go on with our lives now. Glynda would have wanted it that way.'

— Russell Jones, the victim's widower

Schorre said he will always honor a jury's actions, but was curious why they rendered a light punishment.

"I was surprised by the nine-year sentence and how the jury came back with a sentence so soon," Schorre said.

He will be eligible for parol in 4 1/2 years, Schorre said.

Russell "Rusty" Jones, the victim's widower, said he was comfortable with the jury's decision and was relieved that justice still exists in Midland County.

"The judicial system still works and justice was served. The trial was fair and even and the jury made their decision," Jones, 53, said. When asked if a harsher sentence should have been rendered, Jones replied, "It would have been appropriate."

Now that the trial is over, Jones and his family will look forward to starting a new chapter in their lives, he said.

"This is the beginning of final closure for myself and others," he said. "We can move on and go on with our lives now. Glynda would have wanted it that way."

He told reporters that he wanted to thank the District Attorney's Office and the Sheriff's Office for their expertise and work. He also thanked Sheriff Gary Painter for helping the Jones family since the night Ms. Jones was missing.

"He didn't get any sleep the night we were all searching for Glynda," Jones said.

Kellie Jones, the couple's 27-year-old daughter, said she's glad the defendant was held responsible for her mother's death.

"I'd like to have seen a whole lot more in the sentence, but if the jury was sure of this sentence; then they might be right," Ms. Jones said. "I'm glad he'll pay for what he did."

Ms. Jones was pleased that the jury also considered her family's pain, though Odessa attorney Tom Hirsch, who represented Rogers, told the jury that handing a stiff punishment to his client would be unfair to his wife and children.

"I definitely feel bad for his family, but my family has suffered too — and we will for the rest of our lives because nothing will bring our mother back," Ms. Jones said. "My mother was the brightest star this planet will ever see. More people loved her more than most people are loved in their lives — and she loved them back that much."

Hirsch said that he was disappointed with the jury's manslaughter verdict, but was glad that they did not impose a heavy penalty.

"The jury could have done a whole lot more, but I'm sure the family's thankful for their decision," Hirsch said.

Midland County to get $1.88 million in tobacco settlement, says attorney general

By Alice Ashmore
Staff Writer

Midland County will receive $1.88 million as a result of the settlement between the state of Texas and U.S. tobacco companies, according to the Attorney General's Office.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales signed the documents Friday clearing the way for $17.3 billion dollars from the tobacco firms to begin flowing into state coffers.

"We now have the ability to dramatically improve the health care of Texas, especially our uninsured children," Morales said. "The local governments as well as the Texas Legislature could make no wiser decision than to have dedicated these funds to the health and welfare of all Texans."

It is not known yet how the money will be spent in Midland County. "It appears that the money will go to the Midland County Hospital District," said Midland County Attorney Russell Malm.

County Commissioner Guy McCrary said Friday, "I am not aware of any formal notice to Midland County regarding the revenues that Midland County will be receiving.

"The nature of the settlement is that the money is supposed to be used for health care issues," he said.

Harold Rubin, CEO of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, was unavailable for comment, said Laurie Johnson, director of public relations.

Under the terms of the agreement, the state has agreed to pay $2.2 billion over the next five years to "political subdivisions with indigent care obligations," said a letter to Midland County Commissioners from the law firm of Allison, Bass and Associates in Austin.

Allocations to the counties were made on a per capita basis, according to Sonya Sanchez, deputy press secretary to the attorney general. By comparison, Ector County received $2.1 million.

Texas counties and hospital districts will receive their first payment of $300 million on Jan. 4, 1999. Over the next three years the entities will share in $450 million to be divided on a per capita basis, according to Ms. Sanchez.

Also during the next five years, approximately $1.8 billion will be placed in a trust fund, the proceeds of which will be distributed among counties and hospital districts beginning in the year 2002. Under public health provisions of the settlement, $264 million will go to fund a Tobacco Pilot Program, designed specifically to reduce the use of tobacco products by children under the age of 18, Ms. Sanchez said.

The settlement also banned the used of billboard advertising of tobacco products as of Friday. The agreement also includes a ban on tobacco promotional products, including T-shirts and caps, sent into the state via direct mail or from catalogs.

Lawyers discuss possible Clinton testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of resistance, President Clinton's lawyers have opened talks with Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr on the delicate issue of how the president might provide information to the grand jury in the Monica Lewinsky inquiry.

Presidential spokesman Mike McCurry refused to say Friday whether the discussions were prompted by a subpoena — or the threat of a subpoena — from Starr. But McCurry said Clinton attorney David Kendall was working with Starr "to try to ensure that the grand jury gets the information it needs."

The White House announcement appeared intended to signal a major shift after at least four or five rejected requests for voluntary testimony by Clinton, disputes over providing documents and legal challenges to block the testimony of presidential aides and Secret Service agents.

"I can't tell you what the status of discussions are that the lawyers are having," McCurry said, relaying a statement from White House counsel Charles Ruff. "But as this statement of the counsel indicates, it makes very clear that Mr. Kendall is working with Mr. Starr's office to provide the information that the grand jury needs."

Starr spokesman Charles Bakaly did not return telephone calls.

Former White House special counsel Lanny Davis said the case appeared to be at a turning point.

"It's my judgment that the White House and the president's lawyers see the end game is very near and that the country wants this over with," said Davis, who maintains close ties with the administration. "This is the right time for the president to come forward."

Trying to read between the lines of the Starr-Kendall discussions, Davis said, "My interpretation of what's been said is that no official subpoena has been served out of respect for the office, but it is certainly implicit that these discussions are in lieu of a subpoena."

Starr's office has taken the position that it is constitutionally permissible to subpoena the president in a criminal matter; Clinton's defenders dispute that assertion and say only the House can issue a subpoena.

The grand jury is investigating whether Clinton and Ms. Lewinsky, a former White House intern, lied about an alleged affair under oath in the Paula Jones sexual harassment lawsuit. Starr's investigators also want to know whether Clinton and presidential friend Vernon Jordan encouraged Ms. Lewinsky to lie by trying to help her find a job and a lawyer.

Judge approves late-term abortion for incest victim

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP) — A judge cleared the way Friday for the parents of a 12-year-old girl allegedly raped by her 17-year-old brother to take her out of state for a late-term abortion.

Probate Judge Pamela Gilbert O'Sullivan granted a prosecutor's request to withdraw a petition to take temporary custody of the girl. The petition, which the judge granted last week, had barred the parents from taking their daughter to a Kansas abortion clinic until she underwent a psychological evaluation.

Since then, the girl has received mental health and medical evaluations and she and her parents received counseling.

"We wanted to make sure she wasn't being rushed out of town by parents who were embarrassed," said Carl Marlinga, the Macomb County prosecutor.

Now, he said, "We are satisfied that the child's best interests are being looked at."

The girl is about 28 weeks pregnant. Abortion is illegal in Michigan after the 24th week unless the girl or woman's life is endangered, but Kansas permits it under certain other circumstances.

The parents' attorney, Lauren Tomayko, said the parents and the girl will go to Kansas so she can be evaluated for an abortion. She declined to say if the girl would have an abortion. That decision will be made after the family meets with experts at the clinic, she said.

It was unclear when the girl and her parents would be traveling to Kansas, where legislators this year prohibited "partial-birth" abortions except when two physicians agree it's necessary to save the mother's life, or if the pregnancy will cause "a substantial and irreversible impairment of a major physical or mental function."

Dr. George Tiller, the owner of the Wichita abortion clinic where the parents had an appointment last week, has said he is complying with the law.

His clinic, Women's Health Care Services, was bombed in 1986. Thousands of anti-abortion protesters chanted and marched outside his clinic in 1991 during what they called the "Summer of Mercy." And in 1993 Tiller was shot and wounded in both arms by Rachelle "Shelley" Shannon of Grants Pass, Ore.

Tiller's attorney, Lee Thompson, would not comment on the case.

The girl's parents have said they did not learn until July 6 that she was pregnant. They arranged to take her to the clinic. Then, a cousin of the girl told authorities about the alleged incest and plans for the abortion, and Marlinga's office went to court July 17.

The parents and experts in Michigan who have seen the girl in the past week agree an abortion appears to be in her best interest, Ms. Tomayko said.

"This 12-year-old certainly did understand what was going on," he said.

The judge turned down an Oakland County lawyer's last-minute request to be appointed guardian for the girl's fetus. Rebecca Wasser argued that the state could move to protect the fetus because it is now viable, or able to live outside the womb.

"We have the voice of death present today," she told the judge.

Ms. Wasser said she was conceived when her mother was raped. Her mother considered an abortion, she said.

"We're easy targets, children of rape, or incest. ... I believe I am the living embodiment of what is at stake here," she said.

Man wanted in 3 states arrested in Midland

From Staff Reports

Midland County sheriff's deputies on Thursday arrested a man on Ector County warrants and learned that he was a fugitive wanted for crimes in three states, according to reports.

Derrick James Gardener, 38, was arrested in Midland late Thursday on charges of making alcohol available to a minor. While investigating the local charge, deputies discovered he was wanted in Nevada on three sexual assault charges, one kidnapping charge in California and two sexual assault charges in Hawaii.

Deputies said he'd been living in Odessa for two months and used about 10 aliases — including Melvin Maletich — while eluding authorities.

He was extradited to the Ector County jail Friday. Bond will not be set because Gardener might be extradited to one of the three states where he is sought, officials said.

OBITUARIES

Willie Mae Myles

Funeral services for Mrs. Willie Mae Myles will be Saturday, July 25, 1998, at 11 a.m. at Mount Rose Baptist church with the Rev. William Palmer officiating.

Willie Mae Myles died July 19, 1998 at a local hospital. Interment will be in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Jackie Warren Funeral Home.

Mrs. Willie Mae Myles was born on October, 11, 1916, to the parentage of Hugh Hodge and Annie Mae Washington in Deberry, Texas. Mrs. Myles married Leemon Myles and to this union three children were born. She later moved to Lamesa, Texas and then to Midland, Texas.

She was preceded in death by her husband, her mother and her oldest son, William Myles.

She leaves to cherish her memory: two daughters, Maybelline Myles and Rita Jones Ray, both of Midland, Texas; one son, Willie Myles of Monahans, Texas; one granddaughter, Lois Fletcher of Midland, Texas; two grandsons, Ralph Lyons of Tucson, Arizona, and Lamon Myles of Monahans, Texas; one sister, Maple Owens of Fort Worth, Texas; eight great-grandchildren, sixteen great-great-grandchildren and a host of nieces, nephews, cousins and friends.

Obituary & Death Notice policy

There is no charge for death notices of residents or former residents of Midland or for those who have Midland relatives. We also publish death notices for residents of the surrounding West Texas area.

Free death notices include date and place of death, service and burial information, funeral home handling arrangements, date and place of birth, brief biography, survivors and memorials. A longer, more detailed obituary is available for a charge. It may include tributes, expanded biography, organizational associations, notes of appreciation, pallbearers, honorary pallbearers and a photo.

Deadline for both free death notices and paid obituaries is 4:30 p.m. and information must be either received from or verified by a funeral home.

TRADE: Corridor would bring new jobs, economic growth to West Texas, says Perry

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram
Motran Alliance Chairman Charles Perry spoke at the Midland Hilton Friday about the La Entrada Trade Corridor. His lecture was part of the 68th Annual Summer Convention of the West Texas Press Association.

the port of Topolobampo.

Transportation is one of the best hopes for future development outside the oil and gas industry for the region, Perry said. "We're not going to become another Silicone Valley ... Right now the most promising thing I can see is foreign trade," he said.

If the corridor is completed, by 2020 the La Entrada corridor could see 2 million trucks per year moving through West Texas carrying trade goods from the industrial center of Chihuahua City and from all of the Pacific Rim nations through the port of Topolobampo.

This would mean large numbers of new jobs and economic opportunities for every city in West Texas, no matter what the size, he said.

Chihuahua has plants owned by 100 of the Fortune 500 companies and is the world leader in "wire harness" production, Perry said.

"Their economy is growing by 10 percent a year — way beyond anything we've ever seen in the U.S.," Perry said.

These goods will move along La Entrada and numerous opportunities will exist for those who find a way to use this expanded trade flow. U.S. goods will be going south along La Entrada, but there are other business opportunities, he said.

Each truck entering the United States needs cargo insurance, and selling this kind of insurance at the entry of Presidio would be a good business venture, Perry said, citing an example of the opportunities that might exist.

Mexico is spending money to improve roads on its side of the border. "And Mexico is not flush with cash right now," he said.

A 16-mile stretch of new road will need to be built through the mountains near the border, because the steep existing road is not adequate for truck traffic.

Once this happens, the Mexican industrial center will be linked through West Texas and will be able to avoid the expensive and time-consuming bottleneck of the port entry at El Paso, he said.

The entry port at Presidio has five lanes and only one is ever in use at one time, Perry said. In addition, there is a new bridge constructed there that would greatly aid expanded truck traffic when the first part of La Entrada becomes a reality, he said.

Texas needs to continue pushing for this effort, since New Mexico is already working on a state plan to siphon off some of the El Paso truck traffic jam.

If the road linking Topolobampo with the rest of the system is completed, this new trade corridor could save shippers time and money taking Pacific nations' goods to central and eastern parts of the United States.

This will bring in a substantial percentage of the trade that currently lands in southern California, Perry said.

THREAT: Lawyer asks journalists to help stop trend

laws," he said.

Over-broad interpretation of the few exceptions to the Texas Open Meetings Act is allowing cities, counties, school boards and other governmental entities to subvert the spirit of the laws, he said.

The collection of laws protecting the rights of citizens to know how government is conducting business "has got a little hole in it — and it's getting bigger," he said.

Richards called upon journalists to be active in halting this trend in their cities. Journalists should file letters requesting personal notification under the law for any emergency meeting, he said. These letters should be refiled periodically.

If a serious violation occurs, the news agency should report it to the district and county attorneys — although historically these officials have been reluctant to pursue these legal violations as vigorously as other kinds of law breaking, he said.

Serious or ongoing violations should be challenged in the courts, Richards said.

In addition, the matter should be reported both as news stories and as editorials, he said.

Richards warned journalists to be alert to abuses of the open meetings exceptions. Just discussing the possibility of litigation among board or council members is not a legal reason to close a meeting.

The law allowing closed meetings to discuss litigation is based on the attorney/client privilege and an attorney must be present if this is the basis for a closed meeting, he said. This matter has already been decided by the Texas attorney general, he said.

In addition, other non-essential personnel may not be present at these closed meetings. Only those with information pertinent to the case are allowed in a meeting closed for this purpose.

This is the most abused of the exceptions to the Texas Open Meetings Act, he said.

Outlining the laws regarding police department information, Richards clarified that the law regarding the identification of the victim of a sex crime states only that police may not identify the victim by name. The police should report the crime as any other, but use a pseudonym such as Jane or John Doe rather than the victim's name, he said.

The decision on whether or not to report a victim's name gathered through other means rests solely with the news agency and is not a violation of law, he said.

"Most newspapers have a policy not to disclose the name of a sexual assault victim ... and that is a very good policy," he said.

There are a very few situations in which the identification of the victim could be important — for instance, when allegations of guilt are of considerable public interest as in the William Kennedy Smith trial, Richards said.

Also, FOI Foundation efforts in Austin overturned recent legislation that blocked the access of the press to police department information regarding accidents that occur in the city.

The courts decided that the legislation, which was drafted under the guise of protecting victims against unscrupulous attorneys, was in violation of the open records laws and nullified the law, pending redress in the Legislature, he said.

Judicial gag orders, or any other prior restraint regarding criminal proceedings, are void in regard to the press, he said.

"The Supreme Court has held it is unconstitutional to punish the press for publishing information about a trial that was obtained without violating any law," he said.

Jury finds Graham guilty of capital murder

■ Verdict means automatic life sentence because prosecutors did not seek death penalty.

Associated Press

NEW BRAUNFELS — A jury found former Air Force Academy cadet David Graham guilty of capital murder Friday in the killing of a 16-year-old girl.

Graham was calm as the jury announced its verdict, which means an automatic life sentence. Prosecutors did not seek the death penalty, partly at the request of the victim's family.

He was accused of shooting Adrianne Jones twice in the head at a remote lake in December 1995 at the demand of his vengeful fiancee, Diane Zamora, who wrongly believed Graham and Miss Jones had a one-time sexual liaison.

Miss Zamora was convicted in February in Fort Worth of capital murder in Miss Jones' killing and is serving a life sentence. Graham's trial was moved here because of publicity surrounding the case.

Miss Jones' parents and two brothers spoke after the verdict was announced, thanking the jury and addressing Graham.

Her father fought back tears and thanked the jury for their courage and their time.

The victim's brother, Justin Jones, told Graham he didn't hate him. "I can't hate an animal, for they are ignorant, dumb and blind," he said.

A second brother, Scott Jones, his voice breaking and barely holding back tears, said of Graham, "He ruined so many lives, so many families, and unlike my brother, I can hate an animal and I can hate David Graham."

Linda Jones, Miss Jones' mother, said she hoped her daughter would be remembered with integrity. "She's still among us, watching us. I remember her eyes with joy.

Mrs. Jones said to Graham: "I'm sorry for you and your family."

The seven-man, five-woman jury began deliberating Graham's case Thursday and met for nearly five hours before Judge Don Leonard adjourned court for the night. Deliberations contined for about five hours on Friday.

They had the option of convicting Graham on a lesser charge of murder or aggravated kidnapping.

Jurors had asked to review an assortment of evidence, including crime scene photographs, jailhouse letters Graham wrote after his arrest and a copy of the statement Graham typed for police in which he confessed to the Dec. 4, 1995, shooting death of Miss Jones.

They also asked for some information involving the testimony of John Green, a friend who said Graham and his then-fiancee, Miss Zamora, showed up at his house the night of the killing and washed up in his bathroom.

The crime occurred while they were all in high school in the Fort Worth area. Graham and Miss Zamora were arrested in September 1996 after Graham began attending the Air Force Academy and Miss Zamora had gone off to the Naval Academy.

Defense attorneys contended Graham was not present when Miss Jones was slain and that Miss Zamora acted alone in killing the young woman she believed to be her romantic rival.

Defense attorney Dan Cogdell told jurors in opening statements Graham helped Miss Zamora cover up the crime afterward and vowed to her he would confess along with her if she were ever caught.

In closing arguments, prosecutors stressed that Graham confessed to the killing and that the 9mm Makarov pistol used in the crime was found in the attic of the home where Graham had lived with his father.

"There's the murderer, the capital murderer. That's the shooter," prosecutor Mike Parrish said, pointing at Graham in the courtroom.

Prosecutors called nearly 30 witnesses in six days of testimony. The defense rested its case Wednesday immediately after the state without calling a single witness. Cogdell said he didn't believe the prosecution had proven its accusation and that he wanted to emphasize that point.

"When I told them why I rested behind the state it didn't seem to offend the jury," Cogdell said Friday.

'He ruined so many lives, so many families, and unlike my brother, I can hate an animal and I can hate David Graham.'

— Scott Jones, Adrianne Jones' brother

Despite his assertion that Graham was not present when Miss Jones was killed, Cogdell never offered an alibi for his client.

On Friday, asked by reporters where Graham was at the time of the killing, Cogdell said: "Don't know. I wasn't there."

Fed Cup draw

MADRID, Spain — A rematch between French Open finalists Arantxa Sanchez Vicario and Monica Seles will highlight the Fed Cup semifinal this weekend between Spain and the United States.

A powerhouse in this competition, called the Davis Cup of women's tennis, Spain won four of the five Fed Cups between 1991-1995 but lost to the United States in 1996.

Sanchez Vicario defeated Seles 7-6 (7-5), 0-6, 6-2 to win the French Open in June.

They will be playing again on a clay surface at Madrid's Club de Campo. Sanchez Vicario's teammates will be Conchita Martinez, Magui Serna and Vivi Ruano.

In addition to Seles, the American team has Mary Joe Fernandez, Lisa Raymond and Fed Cup newcomer Corina Moniaru. Lindsay Davenport was to have been on the team, but was dropped last week by coach Billie Jean King.

The two countries have faced each other seven times in Fed Cup competition, with the United States holding the advantage, 4-3. Seles has a 6-0 record in Fed Cup play.

The semifinal begins Saturday night with Sanchez Vicario taking on Raymond followed by Martinez against Seles.

In the reverse singles Sunday, Sanchez Vicario plays Seles and Martinez faces Raymond. In doubles the same day, Sanchez Vicario and Martinez are scheduled to face Fernandez and Raymond.

The winner will play either defending champion France or Switzerland, which also plays its World Group I semifinal this weekend.

Martina Hingis, the world's top woman player, leads the strongly favored Swiss in Sion, Switzerland, against France.

Hingis will get plenty of help from Patty Schnyder, who has outdone her teammate so far this season, winning five titles.

Woman wins

DULUTH, Minn. — Ila Borders, the first woman to start a men's minor league baseball game, became the first to win one when Duluth beat Sioux Falls 3-1 on Friday night.

Borders pitched six shutout innings, allowing three hits and two walks while striking out two. She threw 73 pitches, 40 of them strikes.

Three other Dukes pitchers closed out the game.

The crowd of 3,048 stayed long after the game, chanting "Ila! Ila! Ila!"

Borders (1-1) dropped her ERA to 6.04. It was her third start of the season and of her professional career.

She made history a year ago by becoming the first woman to pitch in a regular-season men's professional baseball game.

Pair of Buffs prepare for All-Star games

HOUSTON — In Stanton, athletes are used to winning in their respective sports.

This past school year, the Buffaloes were treated to a banner year in athletics. The football team went undefeated and won the Class 2A state championship, and the boys basketball team won district 6-2A yet again without a loss and made it to the regional semifinals.

The rewards continue for both Stanton teams, as for the first time in the school's history there will be two Buffaloes selected to compete in both Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star games in Houston. Marcus Washington will compete in the basketball all-star game at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Hofheinz Pavilion, while Tyron Davis will be a part of the football all-star contest at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Rice Stadium.

Washington enjoyed two stellar seasons at Stanton after moving from Sterling City. During his senior year, Washington averaged 19 points, 12 rebounds and four blocks per game.

"He probably could've put up bigger numbers for us but we had a balanced attack. He was the foundation and building block for our basketball team," said Stanton basketball coach Doug Gordon. "It's an honor for our program and he's earned it. What a lot of people may not know is that Marcus also made the all-state TABC (Texas Association of Basketball Coaches) academic team. So, not only did he take care of things on the basketball court, but he took care of things off the court as well."

For Washington, the selection to participate in the all-star game is just the icing of a great career at Stanton.

"It's an extreme honor," Washington said. "They only pick two Class 2A players for each team. It's going to be great testing my skills against players from the whole state of Texas. I'm going to get some good experience and have some fun. Dedication and hard work gets you recognized."

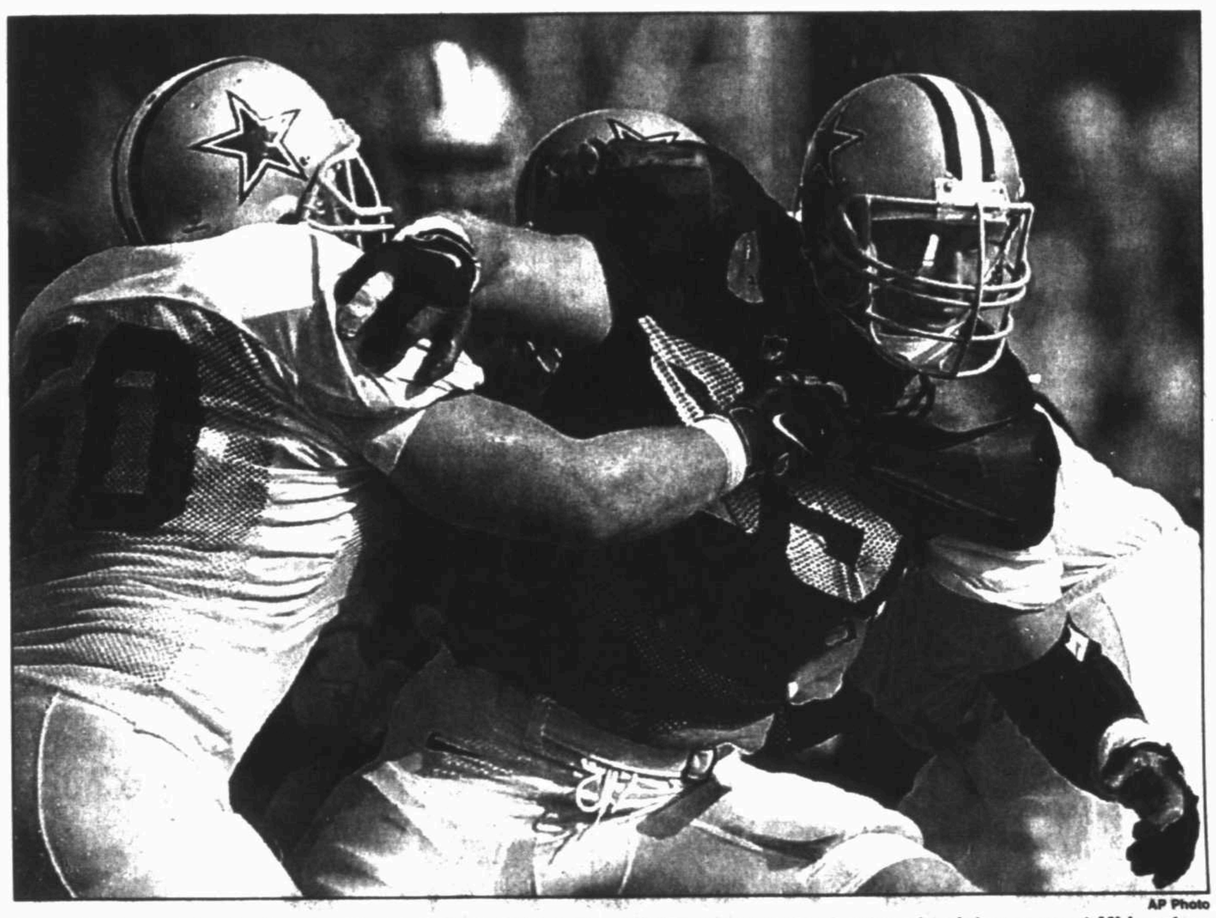

This is the second straight year that a Stanton Buffalo has participated in the all-star basketball game. Last year, current Odessa College Wrangler Leo McCalister participated and won the slam dunk contest.

"Marcus just needs to have a good time at the all-star game," Gordon advises. "Its a good time situation, not a pressure situation."

Next year, the 6-foot-8, 205-pound Washington will join McCalister on the Odessa College basketball team. Washington turned down several small college offers and even turned down an offer from the Air Force Acad-

Martial arts expert helps Chan's team — Gailey, not Jackie — with pass rush

By Denne H. Freeman

WICHITA FALLS — The Dallas Cowboys have brought out an ancient oriental weapon to try to help their meek pass rush.

They have brought in a martial arts instructor who has a black belt in karate to help them find a way to neutralize the hands of grabby offensive linemen.

Defensive tackle Chad Hennings likes it a lot.

"We're so much farther ahead in training camp then we've ever been and one of the reasons is our consultant, Joe Kim," Hennings said. "He shows us different techniques on how to fight off hands. We needed something to combat the way offensive linemen get away with holding."

Hennings said there was some skepticism at first although martial arts knowledge had helped former Cowboys like Randy White and Jim Jeffcoat. It was defensive line coach Jim Bates who gave an OK to the idea.

"Hands are the key to stopping a pass rush," Hennings said. "If you can get rid of the hands then you can rush the passer."

"I try to speak to players in football terms," Kim said. "If they can learn the proper techniques it should help them keep hands off."

Coach Chan Gailey said the martial arts consultant could help.

"I was a little skeptical at first, but I've seen what he has been teaching and I like it," Gailey said.

Hennings said there are several reasons he expects the Dallas defense to be solid this year. A lack of a pass rush led to only seven interceptions last year, lowest in the NFL.

"We've got Leon Lett back for the full season and that's going to make a tremendous difference," Hennings said. "Leon is a load and will help us both stopping the run and rushing the passer."

Lett missed most of last year because of an NFL-mandated drug suspension.

Hennings said an improved offense this year also will help the defense.

"We were on the field a lot last year and I think this offense is going to keep us off the field," Hennings said. "That really means a lot when the offense keeps the ball."

There is some worry about the Cowboys two green defensive ends, rookie Greg Ellis and Kavika Pittman.

"The ends need a lot of work to show

NBA, union to resume negotiating

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK — They finally have a date to talk. And when the NBA and the players' union resume negotiations Aug. 6 to end the lockout, training camp will be two months away.

The lockout is more than 3 weeks old and these will be the first formal discussions between NBA commissioner David Stern and union director Billy Hunter since June 22.

Stern and Hunter spoke by phone Thursday night, a few hours after the union filed an unfair labor complaint with the National Labor Relations Board, the government agency that helped end the baseball strike in 1995.

The NLRB also was involved in the 1995 NBA lockout when the players voted to accept a new labor agreement rather than decertify their union.

When the NBA and union last met, talks broke off after 30 minutes. Players said they saw no need to listen to any new proposals that included any weakening of the Larry Bird rule, which allows teams to exceed the salary cap to re-sign their own free agents.

The stalemate is now being fought on several fronts. Aside from the upcoming talks and the NLRB filing, the dispute is in federal court and before arbitrator John Feerick.

The union filed a grievance with Feerick on behalf of some 200 players with guaranteed contracts who are not being paid during the lockout.

The league responded by suing the union, seeking a ruling saying it should not have to pay players during a lockout and that Feerick should be prevented from holding an arbitration hearing on the complaint.

The union has yet to respond to the owners' suit, and Feerick has scheduled a July 30 hearing to hear arguments on whether he has jurisdiction.

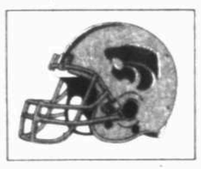

In Thursday's NLRB filing, the players charged the league with improperly imposing a lockout before an impasse

Kansas State fans talking national title

By Mike Drago
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — When Bill Snyder arrived at Kansas State, he made few promises and set no goals except to field a respectable team in seven to 10 years.

Now the words Kansas State are being uttered together with the words national championship. Still, the question remains like a wet blanket over the rebirth of the Kansas State program: Can the Wildcats beat Nebraska?

It was a question asked first and often Friday as Snyder gathered with other Big 12 Conference coaches and players to discuss the upcoming season.

His response followed the same line, no matter how many times he was asked: "I don't know. Ask me that Nov. 15."

Snyder has taken Kansas State from being one of the nation's worst programs — 2-30-1 in the three seasons before he arrived in 1989 — to 11-1 and a fifth-consecutive bowl appearance last season. It was the first 11-victory season in school history.

Still, there was Nebraska and a 56-26 drubbing on Oct. 4, the 29th consecutive victory over Kansas State. The Wildcats' last win in the series was 12-0 in 1968.

So is one of Snyder's goals to beat the Cornhuskers on Nov. 14?

"No," he said. "The goal is to get better."

Over and over he downplayed the question. Again and again the question came up.

"If we sit around and wait until November to play Nebraska, then we're going to let Nebraska beat us somewhere down the road," he said. "We just have to take it a step at a time. Our step right

Americans claim gold in basketball, bronze in diving

By Bill Barnard
AP Sports Writer

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — It was a day of surprises for U.S. athletes at the Goodwill Games.

From diving to basketball to beach volleyball, they did the unexpected — they won and racked up medals.

Mark Ruiz thought he was in water over his head against the dominating Chinese divers. He fell short in the 1-meter springboard, but not by nearly as much as he expected.

Ruiz, already the best U.S. platform diver at 19, made his first big splash off the springboard winning the bronze medal behind a pair of Chinese men and ahead of an onrushing German.

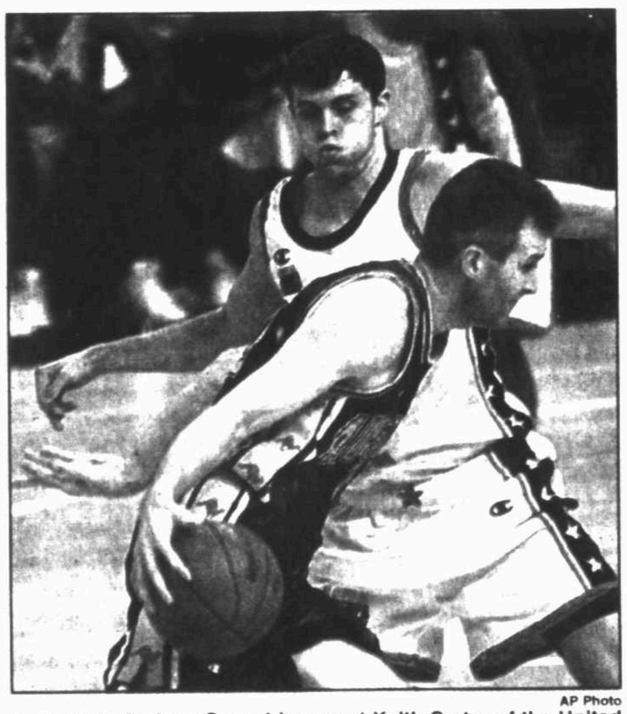

And there was no bigger surprise than at Madison Square Garden, where the young U.S. basketball team also won a medal is wasn't supposed to — the gold.

The squad of college undergraduates beat Australia 93-85 in overtime.

It was the first major international men's basketball title for a team of U.S. amateurs since a college all-star team won the world championship in 1986.

"It's unbelievable, to win a gold medal for the USA. It's the Twins' Serafini fills in for hurt Tewksbury, cools off Rangers

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Dan Serafini shut down the most prolific lineup in the majors through six innings and Terry Steinbach delivered a rare clutch hit for the go-ahead run to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 5-3 win over the Texas Rangers on Friday night.

Serafini, who had lost his last three decisions and was without a victory since June 16, allowed nine hits and two runs before Mike Trombley came on to start the seventh with a 4-2 lead.

The Rangers came into the game leading the majors in runs and hits, but while Serafini was on the mound they managed only Rusty Greer's RBI single in the fifth and Mike Simms' solo homer in the sixth. Greer added an RBI double off Trombley in the seventh.

Filling in for injured starter Bob Tewksbury, Serafini (4-3) walked one and struck out four.

One day after blowing a 5-2 lead, Rick Aguilera got his 23rd save. The win was just the sixth in 18 games for the Twins.

Juan Gonzalez, whose 114 RBIs lead the majors, was 0-for-3 with a walk after hitting four homers and driving in 13 runs in his previous five games. He flied out against Trombley to end the seventh with the tying run at second base.

Steinbach broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth with a two-out single off Esteban Loaiza (0-1) after Todd Walker doubled. Steinbach is hitting just .181 with runners in scoring position this season.

Loaiza allowed four hits and 10 hits in 5 2-3 innings in his second start for Texas. Acquired earlier this month in a trade with Pittsburgh, he lasted only 5 2-3 innings and gave up six runs and eight hits against Tampa Bay in his first game for the Rangers.

■ AL Roundup

Indians 2, Tigers 1, 11 innings

CLEVELAND — Travis Fryman led off the bottom of the 11th inning with his 21st home run night, giving newcomer Steve Reed and the Cleveland Indians a win over the Detroit Tigers.

Fryman hit a 3-1 pitch from Doug Bochtler (0-1) into the left-field stands for his third hit of the game against his former team.

Reed (1-0) struck out three in two scoreless innings in his AL debut. Reed, acquired late Thursday in a five-player deal with the San Francisco Giants, was helped in the 10th by a controversial double play turned by Omar Vizquel.

Joe Randa reached on a one-out infield single and was running when Paul Bako hit a high chopper over the mound. Vizquel gloved it on the first-base side of second, lunged to tag Randa and threw to first for the double play.

Blue Jays 10, Red Sox 6

BOSTON — Juan Guzman finally got some offensive support in another strong outing as Toronto hit three homers.

In his previous six games, Guzman (5-12) had a 2.66 ERA but was just 1-4. In those four losses, the Blue Jays scored only four runs.

That changed as Ed Sprague, Jose Canseco and Tony Phillips each homered..

Devil Rays 6, Athletics 0

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Tony Saunders got his first win in more than three months and Bubba Trammell drove in three runs for Tampa Bay.

Saunders (2-9) ended a 16-start winless streak dating back to his last win on April 16. It was the longest winless drought in the majors this season.

The left-hander allowed five hits in 6 2-3 innings and survived seven walks. Jim Mecir pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the seventh inning and completed the combined five-hitter with perfect relief.

Orioles 7, Mariners 4

BALTIMORE — Rafael Palmeiro hit two homers, including a rare shot onto Eutaw Street, as Baltimore extended its winning streak to five games.

Rich Becker went 3-for-4 with a homer and four RBIs for the Orioles, whose 14th win in 15 games lifted them above .500 (52-51) for the first time since May 14.

Baltimore has won 11 straight at home, one short of the team record set in 1969. The Orioles moved within seven games of Boston in the wild-card chase, further narrowing a gap that was 15 1/2 games at the All-Star break.

Yankees 5, White Sox 4

NEW YORK — Darryl Strawberry's second homer of the game, a two-run shot in the sixth, rallied New York to its fourth straight win.

Strawberry's 15th homer off left-handed reliever Bryan Ward (0-1), helped the Yankees improve baseball's best record to 72-25. It was Strawberry's second multihomer game this season and the 30th of his career.

Paul O'Neill also homered for New York, which got just six hits.

Royals 4, Angels 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Anaheim ace Chuck Finley sustained a bruised left elbow when struck by a line drive in the loss.

Finley (8-5) left the game immediately after being hit by Jeff King's drive in the fourth inning. The lefty was taken to a hospital for X-rays that revealed the injury, and will be re-evaluated in 48 hours.

Schourek rises up for Astros

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO - Pete Schourek pitched seven strong innings to match his longest stint of the season and the Houston Astros defeated the San Diego Padres 2-1 Friday night in a meeting of NL division leaders.

■ NL Roundup

Schourek (6-6) gave up one run and five hits, walking none and striking out six. He exceeded his victory total of 1997, when he went 5-8 for Cincinnati in a season riddled by elbow problems.

Mike Magnante pitched the ninth for his second save.

The loss snapped a three-game winning streak for the Padres, who had also won 10 of their previous 12 games. The Central-leading Astros are 5-2 against the NL West-leading counterparts.

Sterling Hitchcock (4-4) allowed two runs and six hits in six innings. In his previous three starts, he was 0-2 and gave up 18 runs in 16 innings.

Jeff Bagwell hit a leadoff double and stole second to set up the run that gave a 1-0 lead in the second. He scored when Alou followed with a sacrifice fly for his 24th RBI in the last 22 games.

The Astros took a 2-0 lead in the sixth. Moises Alou led off with a double and scored on Sean Berry's single.

Ruben Rivera hit a solo homer to narrow the deficit for the Padres in the seventh.

The Padres' Tony Gwynn doubled and singled to tie Zack Wheat for 29th place on the career hit list with 2,884.

Hitchcock escaped a bases-loaded jam with one out in the fifth when he struck out both Derek Bell and Bagwell.

Braves 3, Pirates 0

PITTSBURGH — John Smoltz pitched a three-hitter for his first shutout in nearly a year, and Andres Galarraga hit a two-run homer to power the Atlanta Braves past the Pirates.

The Braves' 68-35 record is the best in club history through 103 games and includes a 6-1 record against the Pirates, who had won six of seven. The Braves have outscored the Pirates 37-11 and have outhomered them 12-4.

Galarraga's two-run shot in the fifth off Chris Peters (4-8) was his 33rd of the season and his 30th against the Pirates, including three this season. He had a two-homer game in Pittsburgh on April 8.

Galarraga drove in all three Braves' runs, putting them ahead 1-0 in the first with a force-play grounder following Tony Graffanino's one-out double and Chipper Jones' single. Graffanino went 2-for-4 while batting second in the Braves' order for only the fourth time this season.

Smoltz (9-2) didn't need much offense after that, striking out a season-high 10 and walking none in his most dominating start and first complete game of the season. He is 5-1 with a 2.52 ERA since coming off the disabled list June 20.

Mets 5, Cubs 0, 1st game
Mets 7, Cubs 3, 2nd game

CHICAGO — Carlos Baerga drove in four runs as New York swept a doubleheader for the second time in three days.

The Mets, who swept Milwaukee on Wednesday, have won six straight games and moved within 1 1/2 games of the Cubs for the wild card.

In the first game, Armando Reynoso pitched eight shutout innings to win his first appearance in a year and Brian McRae had three hits for the Mets. Reynoso had been sidelined with a shoulder injury.

New York pitchers have combined for 13 shutouts, four in the club's last six games.

New York trailed 3-2 in the eighth inning of the second game before scoring five runs in the last two innings. The Mets took the lead in the eighth on RBI singles by Mike Piazza and Lenny Harris off Terry Adams (7-6).

Dennis Cook (6-3) got one out for the victory.

Cubs starter Jeremi Gonzalez (7-7) lost the opener.

Brewers 10, Expos 7, 1st game
Expos 11, Brewers 2, 2nd game

MILWAUKEE — Vladimir Guererro had a career-high five RBIs and homered for the fourth straight game as Montreal split the doubleheader.

Mike Thurman (1-0) pitched six-hitter in his first start this season as the Expos snapped an eight-game losing streak.

In the opener, Mark Loretta hit a three-run homer, Dave Nilsson had a two-run shot, and Jose Valentin added a solo shot as the Brewers won despite losing starting pitcher Jeff Juden.

Juden was ejected by plate umpire Jim Quick for arguing moments after surrendering a home run to Shane Andrews.

The Expos gave Thurman a 6-0 cushion in the second game with four runs in the third off Paul Wagner (1-5), who was activated off the 15-day disabled list before the game.

Phillies 6, Marlins 4, 12 innings, 1st game

PHILADELPHIA — Scott Rolen hit a two-run homer in the 12th for Philadelphia.

After Bobby Abreu's one-out single, Rolen hit his 19th homer on a 1-1 pitch by Antonio Alfonseca (2-2).

The Marlins have lost six straight.

Wayne Gomes (9-3) pitched the 12th to earn his major league-leading ninth relief victory as the Phillies (52-48) rallied for their 30th come-from-behind win this season.

Captain flirts with no-hitter, beats Angels

Staff Report

SHREVEPORT, LA. — Shreveport's Joe Nathan pitched six innings of no-hit ball on the way to 6-1 Captains win over the Midland Angels Friday night.

It appears that Nathan (1-1) wasn't bothered by the 90-minute rain delay to start the game. Apparently, the Angels' offense was as they finally got a hit and a run in the eighth inning when Eddie Christian had a RBI groundout.

The Caps got all the runs they needed when they scored three runs in the third off Angel starter Matt Beaumont (5-10). Frank Charles had a two-run double and Kenny Woods had an RBI double in the inning. Shreveport aded two more runs in the fifth inning.

At 7:35 p.m. today, Midland sends Matt Wise (8-5, 5.30 ERA) against Shreveport's Jason Brester (0-7, 5.30).

GOODWILL: Diver Ruiz surprises

highlight of my life," said Wally Szczerbiak of Miami-Ohio, who grew up in suburban Long Island and used to come to the Garden to cheer on the Knicks. "It was great to win it here in my hometown."

Ruiz, who moved to Orlando, Fla., from Puerto Rico six years ago, was in third place after all six rounds, but he said he no clue of his standing.

"I don't ever look at the scoreboard," he said. "I thought I was fourth. All I do is concentrate on my own dives."

If Ruiz had been paying attention, he would have seen Andreas Wels of Germany scoring 72.00 and 73.47 points on his last two dives with a string of 8.0 and 8.5 scores, putting the pressure on Ruiz.

But Ruiz nailed his last dive, a reverse 2 1/2 somersault with a half-twist, scoring 74.40 points to finish with 395.52, just 2.28 ahead of Wels.

Zhou Yilin of China was first after each of the first five dives, but a superb final dive gave world champion Yu Zhoucheng the gold with 426.24 points, just ahead of Zhou's 421.86.

Ruiz was first in this year's national championships and first in the World Championships trials in platform last year before finishing sixth in the world meet. He didn't qualify for either the 1- or 3-meter springboard events.

"I wasn't really a serious springboard diver until this year," he said. "Over the past year, I've done so much better in the springboard, so that now I'm diving consistently. I plan to continue training in all three events."

America's other teen-age diving hope, Troy Dumais of Ventura, Calif., was fifth after three dives before scores of 31.62 and 31.50 in the fourth and fifth rounds. Dumais, 18, second in the 1-meter at this year's world championships, fell to 10th in the 12-man field.

"I didn't have the confidence in myself to do the dives I normally do," Dumais said. "I was thinking stupid thoughts, thinking too much, second-guessing myself."

Dumais said Ruiz was not really far behind the two Chinese men.

"They're dominant because they're consistent," he said. "They believe they're the best. They are so mentally sound. But if Mark had hit two dives that he had 6.5s on, he would've won. He was only 25 or 30 points behind."

had been reached — as required by federal law.

Yet Hunter was quoted as calling the stalemate an "impasse" less than two weeks ago.

In the Washington Post on July 12, Hunter said he would phone Stern "to see if there's some inclination to break the impasse" that caused the lockout to begin July 1.

The union's NLRB filing prompted a response from NBA in which its chief legal officer questioned the willingness of the players to bargain.

"Arbitration, charges of unfair labor practices and threats of decertification will not end this lockout. That will occur only if there is good faith negotiations leading to a new collective bargaining agreement," lawyer Jeffrey Mishkin said.

"The NBA owners have made multiple proposals to the players, while the players have refused to budge from their first offer. The only refusal to bargain here is by the players' association," Mishkin said.

The union has not made a new proposal since April. The league claims to have made four separate proposals, but the union says it's basically the same proposal presented four different ways.

STANTON: Two Buffaloes get honor

(From 1B)

emy. After talking to several people including Stanton girls basketball coach Ron Mayberry, a former coach at South Plains College, Washington came to the decision to play in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

"I think it's one of the most intense basketball leagues in the entire nation," Washington said about the WJCAC. "The play is intense and it made me think that a year or two might help me develop into a better player. I might even be roommates with Leo.

"I turned down Air Force because if I go there I've got a five-year commitment and I want to go and do other things."

A goal of Washington is to play Division I basketball. With hard work and more skill development, Washington and Gordon believe that dream can become a reality.

"I think Marcus is scratching the surface of what he can do," Gordon said. "In the off-season he put on 20 pounds and his shooting has really improved. I think mentally and emotionally he'll be ready to play college ball."

No matter what team he plays for, Washington will be taking a winning attitude with him.

"When you play at Stanton you're expected to win," Washington said. "I don't like losing and losing just motivates me to work harder."

Davis is the first Stanton football player to be named to the Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star game since 1996 when Jerell Lee went. Davis, a 6-foot-1, 170-pound wide receiver for the state champion Buffs, grabbed 50 receptions for 1,221 yards and 24 touchdowns. Davis is also remembered for his 88-yard kickoff return which turned the momentum Stanton's way in the state championship game, which resulted in a 33-7 win over Rogers.

"I'm real excited for Tyron," said Stanton football coach Mark Cotton. "I'm awful proud of him. I would've been surprised if he wouldn't have made it. This is a direct result of the season he had. He was an impact player on our football team and we're really going to miss him."

Davis said he was surprised to be selected to participate in the all-star game but is looking forward in going to Houston with Washington and having some fun.

"I think it's going to be a tremendous experience," Davis said. "I'm excited and ready to play. I think playing with some of the best football players in the state will make me play better because they're all good."

Davis, like Washington, will continue his playing career beyond Stanton High School as he will play wide receiver at Abilene Christi..n thi fall.

"(Abilene Christian) is expecting him to contribute right away," Cotton said. "The adjustment for him is not going to be a physical thing but whether he can get his priorities outside of football straightened out. I think he'll be an impact player in college. He has the speed and athletic ability to do it. In the last 18 months he's made leaps and bounds, maturity and physically-wise."

Davis said he ready to move on to college but will always remember the success he enjoyed with the Stanton Buffaloes.

"Stanton was a great experience but I'm sure it would be for anybody that's a part of a state championship," Davis said. "I'll always remember that season."

You can bet that Davis and Washington are two Stanton athletes that won't be forgotten anytime soon either. After all, they were winners.

Marco Pantani takes part in a sit-down protest by Tour de France cyclists Friday before the start of the 12th stage, which goes from Tarascon-en-Ariege to Le Cap d'Agde in southern France.

Tour de France cyclists stage sit-down protest

By Salvatore Zanca
Associated Press Writer

CAP D'AGDE, France — Angered by the drug scandal that has dominated cycling's premier event, Tour de France riders protested Friday by delaying the start of racing.

For two hours, the cyclists deliberately stayed off their bikes and milled about.

"We are fed up with being treated like cattle. So we are going to behave like cattle," Laurent Jalabert of France told Radio Tour, the station that follows the race.

Jalabert, the world's top-ranked cycling the past three years, led the demonstration before the 12th stage, which was eventually won by Belgium's Tom Steels.

"The sport is no longer interesting to anyone," Jalabert said. "We won't cycle and that's the end of it."

Tour director Jean-Marie Leblanc helped negotiate the start to the stage in a meeting with team directors.

The scandal has haunted the Tour since its July 11 start in Ireland. Armin Meier, a rider for the banned Festina team, became the first Tour de France cyclist to admit taking the banned drug EPO, a hormone that increases the red blood cell supply.

"Yes, I said that I had taken EPO, how I took it and why I took it," he told France Info radio. "I'm just the victim of a system."

Meier refused to say if his teammates had also taken the substance, and he criticized police treatment of the riders.

"I feel a little like a criminal," he said. "Each rider had two police officers. They put me under pressure for four or five hours. They took everything. I undressed. They could see all of me. I went into a cell with a wooden bed. ... But I feel better inside because I have told the truth. Perhaps it is good for the sport."

The 148-member pack finally began racing 10 miles from the official starting point, and two hours after the official starting time.

Steels won the 137-mile stage from Tarascon-sur-Ariege to Cap d'Agde in southern France, his second stage victory of the Tour.

Jann Ullrich of Germany held a 71-second overall lead over Bobby Julich of the United States after Friday's stage. The Tour is making its way across southern France before hitting the Alps on Monday.

On Friday, Jalabert was part of a long breakaway. The lead was up to five minutes at one point before the pack caught up. Julich questioned Jalabert's tactics, first by protesting and then by leaving the pack.

"I don't know what Jalabert was trying to prove but just glad he animated the race," Julich said. "He is a great champion but there are 10 more days to go and if he wants to go out and do a big ego thing because we didn't stop the race, he will pay the price for making the breakaway."

Jalabert is third in the overall standings, less than two minutes behind Julich.

"I was in favor of a little bit of a demonstration but no way was I in favor of stopping the stage at all," Julich said.

Floyd fires second straight 70 in Open

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Overjoyed with another 70 in the 19th U.S. Senior Open, Raymond Floyd said he'd gladly take two more.

In search of his first Senior Open championship, Floyd took a two-shot lead halfway through the tournament by carding his second straight 1-under-par 70 on Friday for a 36-hole score of 140.

"In a minute," Floyd quickly replied when asked if he would be satisfied to repeat on Saturday and Sunday what he accomplished in the first two rounds.

"You bet I'm pleased," he said. "I hit a lot of fairways today, I hit a lot of solid shots. I might have even played better today than I played yesterday."

Floyd's first-round performance over the 6,906-yard, par-71 Riviera course was the only under-par score of the day, and it gave him a one-shot lead over five golfers.

Two of those five — Bruce Summerhays and club pro Roy Vucinich — each shot even-par 71 for the second straight day on Friday, giving them 142 totals.

Summerhays would have fared even better had he not bogeyed the final three holes, but he wasn't dismayed.

"Even-par after two rounds on this golf course is great," he said. "I'm not going to dwell on it."

Next at 143 were Dave Stockton, who had a 1-under-par 70 in the second round, and Isao Aoki, who had a 71.

Four shots off the pace entering Saturday's third round of the 72-hole event were Gibby Gilbert and Brian Barnes, each of whom had their second straight 72; Hugh Baiocchi, who had a 73; and Vicente Fernandez, who had a 71.

The scores were a bit lower than on Thursday, when the average was 78.903 — the highest first-round average in the history of seniors golf.

Pre-tournament favorite Hale Irwin rebounded from a 77, his worst round of the year, to shoot a 68 in the second round — the best score through two rounds of the tournament.

Irwin's total of 145 was five shots off the pace. He was tied with Gil Morgan, who ranks second behind Irwin on the senior tour earnings list and was also considered a pre-tournament favorite.

Also at 145 were Jose Maria Canizares and Bob Murphy.

"I kept it in play today and made some great saves," said Irwin, who had three birdies in the only bogey-free round of the tournament. "It was a great round. I probably need one more of those. At least I got myself into position."

In the group at 146 were Jack Nicklaus, who at 58 is attempting to become the oldest winner of the Senior Open, and John Mahaffey, who shot 70 in the second round.

Nicklaus, who had a 72 in the second round, said his arthritic left hip didn't bother him nearly as much as it did Thursday.

"I started out this morning, I didn't think I could walk the first two, three holes, then whoosh, it went away," he said. "It didn't bother me at all the last 12, 13 holes."

Pak's giant eagle gives her share of first-round lead

HOWLAND, Ohio — Rookie sensation Se Ri Pak capped a late surge with an eagle on the final hole to grab a share of the lead after Friday's opening round of the Giant Eagle LPGA Classic.

Winner of two majors already, Pak tuned up for next week's final grand slam event, the du Maurier, by putting together five birdies and an eagle for a 7-under-par 65.

She shared the lead with defending champion Tammie Green, who is four months pregnant, along with Alicia Dibos and Becky Iverson.

Pak relied on her marksmanship with her irons to close with a flurry. She hit a 6-iron to six feet on the par-3 16th, then dropped an 8-iron at No. 17 just three feet from the cup.

At the easily reachable 451-yard, par-5 closing hole, she followed a long drive with a 5-iron from 176 yards that wound up seven feet from the hole. Pak then rolled in the eagle putt to the delight of a large crowd circling the 18th green.

Wood, Horgan lead Charity

SUTTON, Mass. — P.H. Horgan III and Willie Wood belatedly finished their first rounds today, holding their lead at the final CVS Charity Classic.

Both were at 7-under-par 64 at the Pleasant Valley Country Club course, which was pelted with rain Thursday during a 3-hour, 42-minute delay that left 60 golfers on the course when play was suspended.

Horgan played two holes to complete his round, and Wood one. Both were at 7-under when they finished Thursday night.

Dave Stockton Jr., whose father won the event in 1971, shared 67 with 11 others, including brothers Lee and Larry Rinker — making the first round a true family affair.

"Any tournament would be a special tournament to win," said Stockton, who is looking for his first PGA Tour victory. "But to win where my dad won would be very special."

Rose fails to make the cut

HILVERSUM, Netherlands — Justin Rose turned his game around Friday and shot a 6-under 65 at the Dutch Open, but he fell a stroke shy of making the cut in his pro debut.

The 17-year-old Englishman had six birdies in the bogeyless round after a 77 in the first round Thursday.

Lee Westwood added a second-round 66 to his course record-tying 8-under 63 Thursday and shared the lead at 129 with Australian Stephen Leaney.

Defending champion Alex Zanardi prepares to leave the pit area during time trials Friday at Michigan Speedway in Brooklyn, Mich. Zanardi will go for a record fifth straight CART victory in Sunday's U.S. 500.

High speeds don't upset CART drivers

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Don't be confused by all those guys over 230 mph on Friday at Michigan Speedway. The Handford Device, intended to slow the Indy cars, is working.

"The new rules are great," said Michael Andretti, a two-time winner on the 2-mile, high-banked oval. "The car feels really good in traffic and really good by itself. If we didn't have the Handford Device, who knows how fast we'd be going."

The device is a big, boxy rear wing, devised by Swift Engineering chief designer Mark Handford to create additional drag on the cars, thereby slowing them and making them tougher to drive through the turns.

After testing, initial estimates were that the wing slowed the cars by about 10-15 mph from last year at Michigan and sister track California Speedway.

That's what made the speeds so surprising in the opening practice sessions for Sunday's U.S. 500.

Adrian Fernandez, a winner earlier this year on the 1 1/2-mile oval at Motegi, Japan, led the way with a lap of 232.004 mph. Andretti, winner on the 1 1/2-mile oval at Homestead in the season opener, followed at 231.051. Scott Pruett won last year's U.S. 500 pole with a lap of 233.857.

Eight drivers, including defending race champion Alex Zanardi, were above 230 on Friday. Nineteen drivers in 27 cars, including backups, were within 1 second of the top at the end of the day.

Zanardi, who topped out at 230.525, is going for a record-breaking fifth straight victory this week. However, of his six victories in 11 races this season, only one — on the 1.27-mile track at Madison, Ill. — has come on an oval.

"I am happy with what we accomplished today," Zanardi said. "These cars can pucnh such a hole that you can hit a draft and pick up 2 miles an hour. That can put you from 20th to first in an instant."

Andretti said nobody should be panicked by the big numbers.

"I think when we get out there by ourselves (on Saturday in qualifying), I don't think we'll be running these speeds," he said. "The pole could be 4 or 5 mph slower than today."

Bobby Rahal, who was fifth on Friday at 230.407, said, "I ran about 226 by myself. That shows what the draft does to the cars.

"Drafting is just unbelievable. You can be in turn four and pick up a draft from a car entering turn one. It's like you're in a big bowl sometimes."

Speculation heading into the opening of practice was that the cars, with the new aerodynamic device, were going to be a handful to drive, particularly with other cars around, because of the big hole they'd be cutting in the air.

"It's not as bad as they told me," Fernandez said. "On our own, it feels pretty good. In traffic, you have to be a little more careful. If somebody gets in front of you, they cut a big hole and it takes a little longer to get back up to speed."

Paul Tracy, who was third at 230.769, noted that it's a constant battle between the teams and the rulesmakers, with one trying to find more speed and the other trying to slow the cars, or at least hold the line.

"If the rules were uncontrolled, by the year 2000 we could be doing 300 mph," he said. "I like to go fast, but you've got to stay within some limits. The big question this week was what the drivability of these cars was going to be, and it was pretty good."

Andretti said he isn't worried about the ultimate numbers, fast or slow.

"I just want to go faster than these other guys, whatever the rules."

Despite the sizzling speeds and the uncertainty about the stability of the cars, the only crash in 3 hours and 15 minutes on the track, including 45 minutes for rookies, came in the final minute of the afternoon session.

Robby Gordon escaped injury when he crashed hard in the second turn. He immediately climbed out of the car, sat on the wall at the top of the banking and waved to the crowd. CART officials then decided to forego the final minute of practice.

Burton captures pole at Pocono

By Dick Brinster
AP Sports Writer

LONG POND, Pa. — Ward Burton took advantage of a slightly cooler track near the end of a 46-car qualifying session Friday and tamed Pocono International Raceway to win the pole for the Pennsylvania 500.

Starting beside him Sunday will be Jeff Gordon, whose speed held up until Burton's Pontiac went 168.805 mph, giving him his second pole this year and fifth of his Winston Cup career. It broke Mark Martin's two-year-old event record of 168.410.

"Jeff had a great lap, and I didn't know if I could beat it," Burton said. "But the field kept getting faster and we drew a late number."

He went out 45th, 14 spots after Gordon's Chevrolet cruised around the 2 1/2-mile track at 168.249. Although he fell short, Gordon wound up on the front row for the eighth time in the last nine races.

"I knew some cars could beat us, but it was a great lap," he said. "They've been giving me some great qualifying engines."

Burton, winless since his only career victory three years ago, saw the fortune of running later in the session as turnabout being fair play. He recalled how Gordon took the pole from him under similar circumstances two months ago in the Coca-Cola 600.

"I had a great car at Charlotte, and nobody was even close," he said. "But he went out late and beat me by two-hundredths of a second."

This time, it was a rout. Burton, faster than Gordon in the final practice before qualifying, blitzed the triangular-shaped track in 53.316 seconds. Gordon was nearly two-tenths slower — just as he had been in practice. He said he never had a chance to run a representative qualifying lap during practice.

"But, he usually picks it up in qualifying," said crew chief Ray Evernham, who thought the lap might stand up.

Although Burton maintains he has no rivalry with Gordon, he admitted to being somewhat excited by the prospect of beating him for the pole — especially after being reminded by crew member Bobby Foley of the Coca-Cola 600 scenario.

"Remember what happened at Charlotte," Foley told him. "You're getting ready to go out late. Jeff's on the pole."

Burton smiled, recalling the conversation.

"That kind of got my attention," he said.

Gordon will be seeking his third Pocono victory, as will Rusty Wallace. Prior to Burton's late run, it appeared it would be a 1-2 Gordon-Wallace start as it had been last month for the Pocono 500.

Wallace went 167.936 in a Ford, then criticized himself for not doing better.

"I just kind of got high in one, and go it high across the tunnel, then I got it high across the last turn," he said. "But the whole time, it was running fast."

The Pontiac of Bobby Labonte was fourth at 167.838. Next at 167.785 was the Chevy of Joe Nemechek, who had the pole for this race a year ago. He was followed by Mark Martin, whose Ford went 167.698.

Morgan Shepherd, Kenny Wallace, Dale Earnhardt and Michael Waltrip rounded out the top 10.

IRL drivers desire more elbow room in Charlotte

By David Droschak
AP Sports Writer

CONCORD, N.C. — Drivers in the Indy Racing League will gladly trade a few bumps at Charlotte Motor Speedway for more wide-open racing at the VisionAire 500.

The 300-mile race Saturday night on the high-banked 1.5-mile track should provide more room for drivers to maneuver compared to last week's wreck-filled race at Dover, Del., where just 10 of 22 cars were still going at the end of the Monster Mile track.

"Dover is a wonderful track, but it forgives no one," said Indy 500 winner Eddie Cheever Jr., who will start 12th out of 24 drivers at Charlotte.

"This track is much wider, especially at the exits," added Greg Ray, who qualified second as a substitute driver for Billy Boat, who is still nursing injuries. "You can run two and three wide where Dover just narrowed up at the exits. It was hard for our cars to run so fast two abreast. This is a more comfortable race track to race on. You don't have to be quite as precise."

Most drivers agreed with Cheever and Ray, saying Charlotte's length and wider track would give fans a more exciting race, and some relief for teams nursing their equipment following Dover.

CMS will also be a better track for drafting, according to pole-sitter Tony Stewart, who became the first driver in the 38-year history of Charlotte Motor Speedway to crack the 220 mph barrier with his qualifying run on 220.498 Thursday night.

"Anytime you are on an open race track if you get help behind a car you are going to gain speed and you are going to see more than myself running 220, you are going to see two or three guys doing it," said Stewart.

"When you get all these cars turning air at the same time it's like a giant tornado, you get the air moving a little quicker and you get less resistance. It worked in Atlanta, it worked here last year and it worked in Texas."

The only minor drawback at Charlotte for the Indy car drivers is some roughness in turn 4.

"They were there last year so it wasn't unexpected when we came back here last year," Stewart said of the bumpy ride. "This track has a lot of age on it, and for this track to be doing as well as it is pretty amazing. Everybody knows they are there, it's the same for everybody."

IRL drivers practiced in near 100-degree heat Friday but will begin Saturday night's race at 9 p.m. when temperatures are expected to be between 75 and 80 degrees.

Driver crashes at Sears Point

SONOMA, Calif. (AP) — Top fuel driver Shelly Anderson received second-degree burns in an accident during qualifying Friday for the Autolite Nationals at Sears Point Raceway.

Anderson's car went out of control at the finish, and she hit both retaining walls alongside the track before coming to a stop. She remained alert and conscious, NHRA officials said.

Anderson was taken to John Muir Medical center in Walnut Creek, Calif., where she was being treated for slight burns to her left hand and ankle.

Anderson's brother, funny car driver Randy Anderson, pulled out of the Autolite Nationals because he wasn't feeling well. He was undergoing tests at UCLA Medical Center in Los Angeles.

His car will be driven by Dale Creasy Jr. in this weekend's event at Sears Point.

Randy Anderson was expected to return for next weekend's Northwest Nationals in Seattle.

Denver signs Davis for life with $50-plus million deal

Associated Press

GREELEY, Colo. — Terrell Davis became the NFL's highest-paid running back, signing a nine-year contract that essentially keeps him with the Denver Broncos for the rest of his career.

■ NFL Roundup

Sources said the contract is worth $56.1 million, including an $11 million signing bonus.

The Super Bowl MVP confirmed the deal, which tops the contract of teammate John Elway, when he reported to training camp on Friday.

"Mike (Shanahan, the coach) has said from my first day that if you work hard, you'll get rewarded for it," Davis said. "Fortunately for me, I've worked hard for three years, and it's all paid off. I knew it was coming."

The Broncos, who restructured Davis' contract after the sixth-round draft choice rushed for 1,117 yards his rookie year in 1995, agreed to renegotiate again if Davis had consecutive 1,500-yard seasons.

He then rushed for 1,538 yards in 1996 and 1,750 yards in 1997, and capped last season with his Super Bowl performance. The Broncos tore up the three years remaining on his contract.

"Money won't change me," said Davis, whose average annual salary went from $1.17 million to $6.23 million, exceeding Elway's $5.7 million. "I still hang out with the same people. Now we can move forward, and I don't have to worry about my contract. You don't want to go into training camp with contract on your mind.

"I didn't come into the league expecting to get a big raise. I had to perform, and I did. I set a goal to be the best player I could be. I've tried every year to get better."

Shanahan said he learned on Thursday an agreement with Davis was near.

"Terrell was working out and had a big smile on his face, like he usually does," the coach said. "He was taking it all in stride. I said, 'Hey, it's great to have you tied up. A player like you makes a guy a good coach, and I appreciate everything you've done.'

"Any time you get a commitment by a player — especially in these days — to have a lifetime contract, it's great for both parties. He's a quality person and a great football player, and he's going to represent us well. He has handled himself like a veteran from the first day he came in."

Shanahan said owner Pat Bowlen enthusiastically endorsed the long-term deal.

"Pat is so supportive," Shanahan said. "I felt very strongly that we needed to get Terrell committed for the rest of his career and to reward him for what he's done. Pat said, 'Do what's right.'"

Shanahan wasn't worried about any complacency on the part of Davis.

"The thing I've been most impressed about is, with all the commitments Terrell has had this off-season after the Super Bowl, he has worked out harder than I've ever seen him work out before," Shanahan said.

"As you know, after a little success, some people don't handle it the right way. But Terrell has been able to keep that workout routine going. He's probably in as good of shape, if not better, than he's ever been."

Lions

Although he still wants his contract renegotiated, wide receiver Herman Moore appeared for Detroit's first practice session at Saginaw Valley State.

"I honestly believed I needed to be here for the first practice," Moore said. "Conscience, as well as logic, took over. I need to be here, I love being here. I think it would have strained our relationship if it were a situation where I was not here."

Falcons

Defensive tackle Nathan Davis, a 6-foot-5, 310-pound tackle drafted out of Indiana last year, quit the Falcons on the team's second day of camp at Suwanee, Ga., saying he had no desire to play.

"If someone doesn't want to be here, we don't want to force them," Atlanta coach Dan Reeves said. "He wasn't ready mentally and just didn't seem to push himself."

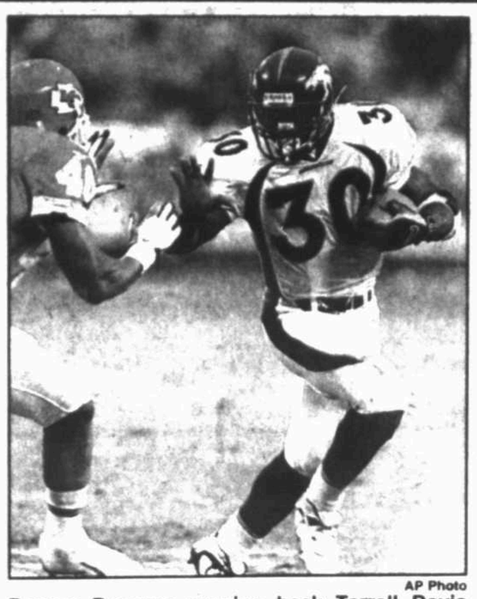

Bears

At Platteville, Wis., Edgar Bennett was the No. 1 halfback as Chicago began practice Friday. The full-speed contact drills were his first since he ruptured an Achilles' tendon a year ago.

"It felt great," Bennett said. "I was really looking forward to it after missing all of last year."

Bennett, a part-time fullback for the Green Bay Packers, signed with the Bears as a free agent in the offseason with the understanding that he would get a shot to be the starting halfback.

Chicago then drafted Penn State's Curtis Enis in the first round a few weeks later and indicated he would be the team's featured back, but Enis is a holdout.

Denver Broncos running back Terrell Davis signed a contract Friday that will likely keep him in Denver for the rest of his career. The nine-year deal is reportedly worth $56.1 million.

Swollen-kneed Smith returns to workouts

Associated Press

■ Cowboys Notebook

WICHITA FALLS — Running back Emmitt Smith, although there is still slight soreness and swelling in his right knee, practiced on Friday.

An MRI Thursday did not show any major problems but Smith missed both practices as a precautionary measure.

"It feels better but there is still a little swelling in there," said Smith, who has been dogged by injuries the last several seasons. "I'm still looking for a a good season. I really like our new offense."

IRVIN IN BACKFIELD: Those attending Friday's morning practice at Midwestern State University were treated to the spectacular sight of wide receiver Michael Irvin catching a screen pass coming out of the backfield.

It's all part of coach Chan Gailey's plan to help Irvin defeat the double-teaming he has been facing.

"I love it," Irvin said. "I was really loving it until I saw big Leon Lett out there. If it had been a real game I might have been in trouble."

NEWTON SPEAKS: For the first six-days of training camp Nate Newton had his lips sealed to the general media while he filed exclusive reports to San Antonio television station KMOL.

Now, that's he talking fulltime he can't be shut up.

Of Wichita Falls fans, Nate said: "The way I flow with the fans, we're going to bring in a love relationship that can't be broken."

On the Cowboys new offense, Nate said: "What we got now is unstoppable. We're going to score, score, score."

RED ZONE TALK: The Cowboys are trying to do better inside the opposition's 20-yard line but they're having trouble so far early in training camp.

Troy Aikman was intercepted three times in Thursday's practice but coach Chan Gailey said the new offense will take time to develop.

"We've just put in our red zone package so it's going to take time," Gailey said. "We've got to be able to pass the ball when we get down there if we can't run it."

Dallas scored only 16 touchdowns out of 50 visits to the red zone last year.

"It can be hard to throw the football down there because the field is so compact," Aikman said.

Bills' Spielman decides to skip season to tend to ailing wife

By Carolyn Thompson
Associated Press Writer

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — This was one decision Chris Spielman didn't have think about: His wife has cancer and he will not play football this season.

"I've always been a husband and a father first and a football player second," he said Friday.

The 32-year-old linebacker for the Buffalo Bills was on the verge of coming back from a neck injury that sidelined him for the second half of last season.

Then his wife, Stephanie, was diagnosed with breast cancer 10 days ago. Thoughts of football were gone.

"It was a very easy decision to make for me," he said, speaking during a conference call from his home in Upper Arlington, Ohio.

His wife had surgery at James Hospital at Ohio State University and faces several months of chemotherapy, beginning next week.

"I told her that I want to be the one to take her to treatments," Spielman said. "I want to be the one to hold her hand. I want to be the one to be with my kids when she can't."

Stephanie Spielman, 31, was diagnosed after noticing a lump following a miscarriage.

"We believe the baby was sent to give us that detection," he said.

Mizzou wants to forget OT heartbreaker

By Mike Drago
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Missouri coach Larry Smith says the Tigers did their best to forget about last year's heartbreaking overtime loss to No. 1 Nebraska.

The game ended on a bizarre play where Cornhuskers receiver Shevin Wiggins kicked a Scott Frost pass over his head in the end zone. Little-known reserve wideout Matt Davison made a miraculous diving grab of the kicked ball for the touchdown to tie the game and force overtime. Nebraska ended up winning 45-38.

Smith said he told his crushed players, "We're not going to look at the tape. You played a great football game."

"I said 'We're not going to let that kick bury us. Forget it, get it out of there. Put it behind you, move on and go to the next step,'" he said.

The strategy worked: Missouri rebounded the next week to beat Baylor 42-24 and finish 7-4.

■ Big 12 Notebook

Linebacker Barry Odom said the high-profile defeat and the way the Tigers handled it were good things in retrospect.

"As far as I look at it, it made our team grow together," Odom said. "We had to keep going. We couldn't just sit back and say, 'What if?' I think it turned into a positive."

THIN RANKS: Kansas coach Terry Allen says his program probably split the state's top recruits with Kansas State this year. Then again, there weren't many to go around.

"This year I think there were six, maybe seven football players in the state of Kansas that signed Division I football scholarships — in the whole state," Allen said. "We're sitting in Dallas and I could walk down the street and find more Division I football players. That's not a slap at anybody's face, but it's a reality."

ALL FOR ONE: Texas coach Mack Brown says his staff has talked with running back Ricky Williams about handling the Heisman Trophy speculation that will swirl around him this season. Brown also has challenged the team to bear down if it wants Williams to win the award.

"The way that we will handle that is that the Heisman is not an individual award. It's a team award," Brown said. "I'm not sure it's the best player that wins the Heisman. ... It's the best player on the best team."

Williams agreed.

"I undertand that for me to get the Heisman or to break the record that the team has to help me," he said. "Without them, I'm really nothing."

HE'S THE MAN: Brown says he feels comfortable entrusting the Longhorns' offense to senior quarterback Richard Walton. Texas fans remember Walton's dismal performance in last year's 66-3 loss to UCLA, including a critical fumble and interception that got the Bruins off to their rout.

"He had a tough game against UCLA, but we had a tough game against UCLA," Brown said. "Richard will be our guy and we feel very confident about his abilities."

Walton will get his chance to atone for last year in a Sept. 12 game at UCLA.

'MACK, YOU IDIOT': Brown said he's already being told by some Texas fans how to run the Longhorns' offense this fall. Not all the messages are very polite.

"There are signs up in Austin, 'Give it to Ricky 40 times, Mack, you idiot,'" Brown said.

A NICE GUY: Allen won supporters at Kansas last year by winning five games. He won over players with his personality.

"Coach Allen is a breath of fresh air for our program. It used to be that it was very hard to get in touch or even talk to our old coach," said Jayhawks guard Justin Glasgow. "It seems like you're always running into him and you always end up talking to him a while. He's just very personable."

TOO OLD: Brown is making no promises on how fast he can turn the Texas program around, but he sounds confident it won't take too long.

"I don't know if it's one year, two years. I don't know if it's a month," Brown said before adding, "I'm 47 and I'm too old to sit around with a bad team."

WHO'S YOUR DADDY?: Williams and Texas middle linebacker Dusty Renfro were asked if they ever face off in practice and, if so, who usually holds the upper hand. There was a pause before Renfro piped up.

"Ricky knows who his daddy is," he said. Williams offered no rebuttal.

now is to improve our players."

Snyder said he's trying to keep his players focused by reminding them of the hard work and "one-game-at-a-time" approach that has built the program.

"Understanding how we got there is significant," he said. "Not taking things for granted is important."

Wildcats players seem to have memorized the mantra. Quarterback Michael Bishop, tackle Ryan Young and linebacker Travis Ochs all resisted reporters' repeated attempts to bait them into saying something — anything — about their chances against Nebraska.

"Every person I run into, that's the first thing they say. 'Can we beat Nebraska?'" Bishop said. "All I say is that's a possibility, but we play Nebraska a long way into the season."

Said Ochs in response to another query: "We'll find out on Nov. 14. If we have one loss before we get there, that game's not going to be very big. ... November's a long way away."

Snyder similarly downplayed the talk of a Big 12 title or a national championship. National publications have talked about the Wildcats in such lofty terms, partly because of a soft schedule that includes such behemoths as Indiana State, Northern Illinois and Northeast Louisiana.

"If we can get ourselves good enough to do that, I don't know," Snyder said. "I don't know if good is good enough anyway. I would expect that it takes far more than just having talent. There's a lot of things that have to fall in place, and good fortune is certainly one of them."

'BOYS: Hennings likes idea

(From 1B)

progress," Hennings said. "But we have a long preseason to work on all of that."

Hennings said the new coaching staff under Chan Gailey is doing a good job of instilling discipline.

"I've had to run one penalty lap and I don't want to run another," he said. "That's a good deterrent to mental mistakes for sure."

Hennings, who came out of the Air Force as a pilot during the Gulf War, took one of his days off to visit nearby Shepperd Air Force Base.

"That brought back a lot of memories," he said. "I remember how stressful flight training was."

Hennings flew during the war but was never in combat.

Asked if he might like to be a commercial pilot again some day, the 6-foot-6, 270-pound Hennings grinned.

"I was almost too big for the Air Force," he said. "I'm not sure that would work. Maybe some day I might be interested."

For now, Hennings has some karate to learn.

Catera sports sedan comes from European Opel Omega

BY BOB PLUNKETT
Special to Midland Reporter-Telegram

BEE CAVE, Tex. — On a romp across tall Texas hills west of Austin, my sports sedan exhibited a no-nonsense attitude of European touring cars with exacting road manners which generate confidence for a driver.

When running fast into too-tight curves on a wiggly route around Lake Travis, it plowed through every bender with nimble agility.

When whipped over multiple lanes in town, its athletic ability allowed me to scoot past traffic tie-ups.

When forced to avoid a sudden road hazard, it stopped quickly in controlled fashion with no deviation from a straight-line path.

And everywhere I steered it during the recent tests in Texas, this one seemed uncommonly quiet in the cabin, which posed twin bucket seats in front of a bench for three.

Meanwhile, cool melodies floated through the leather-lined confines of the passenger compartment, thanks to a Bose sound system as filtered through eight speakers.

Such pleasant behavior and plush comforts in the manner of fine European touring sedans may not be uncommon, yet the twist to this car's good behavior is that it bears the badge not of some elite and ultra-expensive German brand but the laurel crest of Cadillac at General Motors.

Cadillac, it seems, serves up a sedan with definite European airs in the pleasing form of mid-size Catera.

How can Cadillac, that icon of Detroit steel, produce a European car? Product planners at Cadillac simply went shopping in Europe through the GM network of automotive subsidiaries.

Basics for Catera start with a European brand of GM called Opel, which produces the rear-wheel-drive Omega MV6 sedan of mid-size dimensions.

Catera rides on a beefed up version of the Omega chassis, which comes together in Germany and mates with a 200 hp Opel V6 engine built by General Motors in England and a 4-speed electronic GM automatic transmission from France.

The car contains MacPherson struts with stabilizer bar in an independent front suspension system, plus a cockpit rigged with firm and supportive front bucket seats specifically adjusted to conform to Cadillac's image of elegance, with power-driven controls added and a host of comfort and convenience features too.

Cadillac's worldly car lands in North America with price points which compete strongly against the Europeans — the bottom line dips as low as $30,630, which clearly makes it the most affordable choice in Cadillac's stable.

Development of Catera signals a shift in Cadillac's traditional marketing strategy and it coincides with evolving demographics among luxury car consumers. As the sun sets on the land yacht crowd, the sun also rises on the Baby Boomer brigade now nearing the age of 50 and in significant numbers moving into the affluent market for near-luxury automobiles.

This shift in composition of the luxury car market becomes obvious when comparing type of buyer.

Early in this decade, purchasers of traditional large luxury cars like Cadillac's former Fleetwood and current Sedan DeVille dominated the market at 52 percent, while entry luxury customers only accounted for 25 percent.

By mid-decade, though, traditional buyers had dwindled to 35 percent as those in pursuit of affordable luxury vehicles increased to 39 percent.

The rising trend for affordable luxury vehicles continues today, which explains why Cadillac now reaches out to the Boomer market with Catera as a lure.

Boomer shoppers — affluent, educated and product savvy — as a rule don't bring to market any brand loyalty, according to Catera's brand manager, Dave Nottoli. They read labels, compare products, like to shop around.

For their autos, big is bad but mid-size is good.

Regarding point of origin, automakers from Europe and particularly Germany have the market locked up. "Boomers," observed Nottoli, "prefer tighter suspensions and responsive handling. They want cars that are sporty, safe, luxurious."

In Catera comparative tests against potential luxury competitors from Europe and Japan, the Cadillac performed admirably. On twisty roads, it exhibited an aggressive posture and maintained lateral stability with a responsive ride quality.

For safety, Catera applies a steel cage around the passenger compartment, with front and rear crash zones built into the structural architecture, plus side door beams and a collapsible steering column. Driver and front passenger each get an adjustable 3-point safety belt and airbag.

In addition, Bosch traction control and a 3-channel anti-lock brake system appear as standard features.

Back to the Future:OnStar makes cars smart

DETROIT - When you drive with OnStar, you're never alone. "That's what a lot of our customers tell us," said Chet Huber, managing director for OnStar communications services. "There was one customer that comes to mind. She was an elderly lady who's husband had just died," he said. "But she didn't like driving alone, so for a while she stop going places. Then she purchased a car with OnStar. A few weeks later she called to tell us OnStar gave her mobility again because she for the first time since losing her husband she felt secure about driving."

OnStar is a complete communications system currently available on 24 General Motors models. But it is much more than a hands-free cellular phone. With a push of the button, the driver is connected to a trained advisor at one of OnStar's communications system that can provide a number of services, including:

Use Global Positioning System (GPS) satellite technology to locate the vehicle. A map appears on the advisor's computer screen, allowing them to tell the driver exactly where they are. At the driver's request, the advisor can also plot a course for a specific destination, then give detailed, step-by-step directions on how to get there.

With more than four million files in the OnStar database, advisors can locate the nearest gas station, bank, service provider, restaurant, hotel or other points of interest.

For example, at the driver's request, advisors can locate the nearest ATM machine and provide directions. If the driver wants to know about a specific restaurant in a particular city, the advisor can read off a list. If the driver wishes, the OnStar advisor can even call ahead and make reservations.

Provide emergency assistance in the event of an accident, crime or mechanical problem. By pushing the emergency button on the phone, an OnStar advisor is immediately connected to the driver asking the nature of the situation. If police, rescue and/or a tow is needed, the operator locates the nearest provider to the vehicle and dispatches them. If the airbags are deployed in an accident, the system automatically dials the OnStar center. An advisor calls the driver to check on the situation. If no one responds, the advisor dispatches the nearest emergency provider.

If the anti-theft system is activated, the vehicle automatically calls the OnStar communications center. The advisor then tries to locate the owner and get confirmation the vehicle has been stolen. If confirmation is received, or the owner cannot be located, the advisor alerts police and assist them by tracking the vehicle and relaying its location to officers.

If the driver experiences mechanical difficulties or believes the vehicle is malfunctioning, they may call an OnStar advisor to perform a systems check. The information is downloaded and sent by model to the OnStar center. The advisor compiles the information and instructs the driver to either stop immediately, proceed to the nearest service center or if it is a minor problem, wait until the next maintenance cycle.
If the driver locks their keys in the car or forgets where they park, they can call the OnStar center on a toll-free land line, provide their personal security code and the advisor will unlock the doors or flash the lights and honk the horn until the driver locates the vehicle.

"The neat thing about OnStar is that it offers the most up-to-date technology, but it doesn't overwhelm the customer," said Huber. "They can push one button and talk to a real person who can provide them with all the information they want and need — as they need it."

Paradise Found: '98 Toyota Camry XLS V6

Roadworthy

1998 Toyota Camry XLE sedan

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Competition in the front drive family size sedan segment of the automotive marketplace is fierce and unforgiving. Consumers are demanding more of their daily mounts while expecting to purchase the new sheetmetal at a modest price. Woe to the automaker that does not appease this group. It is into this lion's den that the next generation Toyota Camry enters.

While the vehicle bristles with improvements, the most notable is that of the price. Toyota heeded the cardinal rule and paid serious attention to removing cost while at the same time building value and improvement in. I spent some quality time with a Camry XLS V6 to see why its so popular.

Value Message

What do you do when your current family size sedan is so popular that you extend current model year production by a month? You redesign the car of course. In 1997, Toyota has introduced the world to the next generation Camry. The new Camry boasts more aerodynamic sheetmetal and more interior room. Toyota accomplished this magic by evolution, not revolution of the car line. As a result, the wheelbase is two inches longer, the base 2.2L 4-cylinder engine produces eight more horsepower and the 3.0L V-6 produces six more horses than the ninety six model. Only the four door sedan body style is offered — available in CE, LE, and XLE trim.

On the road, the 3.0L V6 was silky, smooth and very responsive throughout the powerband. Inside the cabin, displays and controls were excellent. The roomy interior and comfortable seats front and rear makes the Camry a very nice place to spend a lot of time. Interior lighting has been greatly improved. In addition, the Camry offers both a cigarette lighter plus and additional electrical outlet just below it. The foot rest for the driver's left foot is very comfortable.

In summary, the Toyota Camry is a transportation appliance that is very easy to drive in the daily dispatch. Underhood fluids are easy to reach but not consistently marked. A few gripes: the optional armrest is too high and far back for short drivers, the controls for the cruise is a quirky third stalk, and the pass though from the trunk is very small.

By the Numbers

Standard safety equipment includes: dual air bags, four wheel anti-lock brakes ($550 for the CE), and side impact door beams. Traction control is only available on the six cylinder LE and XLE models as a $300 option. EPA fuel economy for the Camry ranges from 23 city/31 highway for the 2.2L 4-cylinder, five-speed manual to 19 city/26 highway for the 3.0L V-6, four-speed automatic.

Retail prices start at $16,938 for the entry level CE to $24,868 for the XLE six-cylinder automatic. Destination charge adds $420. On the subject of availability, one word: scarce. Your local dealer might be able to locate one for you if you do not want to wait. There are no rebates.

INFORMATION SYSTEMS SUPPORT

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has a full-time position open in its Information Systems department. Our multi-server network of Macintosh & NT 4.0 servers includes about 90 workstations on a mix of Macintosh & Windows 95 platforms. The position will be responsible for supporting users, upgrading/minor repair of systems, & general network support.

Our facility is a 7-day a week printing production environment. The hours for this position will primarily be 7 am to 4 pm Monday through Friday... however, other evening or weekend overtime hours will be required as needed. Since our shop is basically a 2 1/2 person operation, the position will require the individual to be on call via pager.

Only experienced individuals should apply. Previous work history in this area, along with verifiable references will be required. From ancient parables to the Old West:

Spreading God's message through fiction

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

■ Related story/4E

DALLAS — Stuart Brannon was a strong, decent, kind-hearted man. Alena Tipton, a beautiful, family-oriented, strong, princess-like figure who caught the eye of every man in town.

Stuart and Alena lived in the Old West, circa 19th century. They may or may not have known each other at some point, but regardless of their familiarity — or lack thereof — they do share at least one thing in common: They both convey messages of hope and a strong faith in God.

These and other voices spring from the pen of Stephen Bly, a Christian fiction writer who uses his characters to reach readers of a genre that continues to grow in popularity, like so many other forms of Christian entertainment today.

Bly, in Texas last week to attend the Christian Booksellers Convention at the Dallas Convention Center, says his characters hold true to a Christian's world view, depicting God and Jesus Christ as real and alive.

The latest in Christian fiction writer Stephen Bly's Heroines of the West series, The Marquesa, is due for a fall release by Crossway Books.

GOD'S SQUAD

Police chaplains assist both officers, community

By Alice Ashmore
Staff Writer

You could call them "The God Squad" — a group of dedicated police chaplains who volunteer their time to help both officers and the community.

The Midland Police Department currently has four volunteer chaplains aiding the department.

Rev. Dale Stinson, of St. Paul's Anglican Church, is coordinator for the 10-year-old program. "I've been involved for the last two years," Stinson said. "The purpose of the program is to provide whatever support the religious community can to the police department."

Sgt. Mike Roberts of MPD'S D.A.R.E Unit, acts as the police liaison to the chaplain program. "The most important thing they (chaplains) provide is just the fact that they care for the officers — both on a spiritual basis and as a friend."

"They (cops) have one of the most pressure-intensive jobs," Stinson said. "It is very helpful for them to have someone to turn to." Stinson should know, he spent 30 years as a special agent with the Drug Enforcement Agency before entering the clergy. "I think in a lot of ways I understand what police officers go through," he said. "I think cops go through more crises than any other profession."

Midland Police Chief John Urby said, "The police chaplain program has undergone a kind of resurgence." Urby said the program "is intended to give our officers another avenue they can use in times of crisis."

"I got involved with the chaplains in the very beginning — when we were in the formative stages," said the Rev. K C. Blackketter. "At the time I did not know I would become so heavily involved." Blackketter is also the full-time pastor at Bethel United Methodist Church in Midland.

The purpose of the program, Blackketter said, "Is to be available for ministry to the police department — both officers and civilians."

"We are on call, and we rotate as to when we are on call," Blackketter. The police chaplains are

Lutherans, Catholics take step toward mending rift

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

Grace alone, faith alone, Scripture alone.

Seldom have so few words divided so many people for so long a time.

Almost five centuries after Martin Luther took issue with the Vatican's stance on justification — or what it takes to enter heaven — at least one branch of the Lutheran church appears ready to attempt to mend its longstanding rift with the Roman Catholic church. Catholics appear ready, too.

Luther's disagreement in 1517 with what he considered corruption and theological error in the church contained his disavowal of the Vatican's position on justification. His theses touched off the Protestant reformation, which led to the split in Western Christianity.

Catholics have always held that God's grace, faith and good works are the fundamental necessities for proceeding to heaven after death. Lutherans believe it is by grace, faith and Scripture alone that one can achieve salvation.

In June, after decades of negotiation, officials with the World Lutheran Federation and the Roman Catholic church approved a proposed Joint Declaration on the Doctrine of Justification, which in its language, takes a step toward ecumenism, something

Can faith lower barriers in divided communities?

By Lisa Singhania
Associated Press Writer

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. — Five days a week, Judy Lammers crosses from home in mostly white St. Joseph to work in mostly black Benton Harbor. The bridge over the St. Joseph River is an easy drive, but the chasm between communities is harder to navigate.

For that, Mrs. Lammers turned to her church.

Spurred by a book about the communities' racial inequities, the pastor in her predominantly white church organized a choir exchange with a black congregation across the river. After an afternoon of singing, Mrs. Lammers says, racial and economic differences felt a little less glaring.

"You can't help but be concerned about race issues, living here in St. Joe," says Mrs. Lammers, who is white. "As Christians, we want to work toward resolving those things... ." She calls the choir exchange "a gr eat opportunity to begin to know each other."

Boarded-up buildings line many Benton Harbor streets, which are deserted after dark. State police shore up the city's police force. Less than a mile away, St. Joseph bustles with restaurants, boutiques, offices and a picturesque beach front. Most of Benton Harbor's 13,000 residents are black; most of St. Joseph's 9,200 residents are white.

The Rev. Walter Brown, left, and the Rev. Kent Meyer, pose in Brown's Ebenezer Baptist Church in Benton Harbor, Mich. They are working together to help improve race relations in the area. (AP Laserphoto)

Still, both communities share a strong religious tradition. Mrs. Lammers' pastor, the Rev. Kent Meyer of the Zion Evangelical United Church of Christ, noted

VINCENT MULI WA KITUKU

Breaking cultural 'walls' to gain spiritually

The two forms of greetings practiced by the Kamba people of Kenya, East Africa, where I was raised, are verbal and hand shake. The nature of blood and social relationships largely determine who to greet verbally or with a handshake. It is a taboo to use the wrong form of greeting in any occasion.

Kituku

Hugging and kissing are new to the culture and are practiced by people with Western education influence. Still, they don't hug or kiss in public. I happen to be one of those with Western influence, but I never had hugged or kissed in public until 1988, while at the University of Wyoming.

Jana, a co-worker, hugged me, and I immediately told her that I was married. She didn't understand my meaning and after several days, I brought my daughter with me to work for Jana to know I was really married. She kissed my daughter and hugged me. I had informed my wife, so I decided to have Jana meet my family. When she did, Jana hugged all of us.

I learned that hugs and kisses are forms of greeting in the Western cultures. Unknowingly, Jana had broken cultural "walls" and opened a channel of new thinking in me, a way of comfortably greeting my friends. Most importantly, hugging and kissing are the practices my children, who are growing up in this culture, know. I adapted to it!

My experience with hugging from Jana takes me to the time Jesus was with a Samaritan woman at the well (John 4: 9-30). Jews had no dealings with Samaritans, the woman asserted. They were not to share a drink out of the same cup or well.

Further, it was culturally unacceptable for a man to be alone with a married woman, although this was a public place. Adam Clarke's commentary suggests that a man couldn't even talk to his own wife if they met in a street "to keep up the appearance of chastity and temperance." Jesus' disciple marveled, without saying a word, why he would do that, what He was after and why He would talk to the woman, probably the way I wondered why Jana would hug me. Theirs was racial and cultural prejudice. What Jesus had done was a not customary practice.

However, the results of Jesus' visitation with that woman, breaking cultural "walls," indicate that she received salvation and inner peace and wanted all the inhabitants of her city to get the same thing.

What would have happened had Jesus not taken the initiative? That woman who had a heavy burden, having been married five times, would not have had the hope of eternal life. Traditional history indicates such a woman was not respected in her community. However, after her encounter with Jesus and her past was revealed, she had the courage and motivation to stand in public and declare, "Is not this the Christ?" The Bible says, "Then they went out of the city, and came unto Him." By taking the initiative, Jesus lifted the burden from this woman, restored her respect and created an opportunity for a city of Samaritans, commonly considered as gentiles, to hear His message of salvation.

Soul vexation starts when one considers cultural, economic, religious, tribal or racial "walls" that prevent us from helping lift the burdens of other people.

An adoption affirms faith and inspires a new song

By Nancy Kruh
Associated Press

DALLAS — Almost the moment Billy Crockett began to play the piano and sing, the sanctuary at Northaven United Methodist Church was thick with the incense of music and emotion. "Miracle and mystery, that's what you are . . ." The words weren't meant for just anybody. The church bulletin said so. This was a song dedicated to Gordon - the happy little boy over there on the front row, sitting in his father's lap. Gordon, the long-awaited son the North Dallas congregation had been praying for. Gordon, the child of God about to be baptized on this recent Sunday morning.

This was his day, and this was his song - truths made self-evident simply by the number of tear-rimmed eyes in his midst.

Gordon didn't know this, of course. There's only so much you can expect of a 1-year-old. Someday, he'll know, though. He'll understand what his parents went through to adopt him, and he'll learn how it inspired Crockett, a highly regarded contemporary Christian musician, to compose and record a song and dedicate it just to him.

Someday, Gordon Durbin Tabb Webb will know the whole story - of hope, pain, faith and, ultimately, joy - a story that actually began long before Crockett had even heard Kenn Webb and Harriet Tabb were planning to adopt this child from Guatemala.

Crockett and the couple had become friends when he and his wife, Dodee, attended a Bible study at the church back in 1996. Webb and Ms. Tabb, both Dallas attorneys, are lifelong Methodists; raised a Baptist, Crockett says he and his wife began attending the church three years ago, attracted to its "good energy" and "healthy chaos."

"It's a redemptively turbulent place," he says. The description makes it a fitting place for a man whom the church's pastor, the Rev. John Thornburg, calls "wonderfully turbulent."

"There's a line from one of his songs, 'getting to the bottom of life,' " says Thornburg. "He's always looking to get to the bottom of life - to the source of all things, to what gives us energy and courage and inspiration. To God, obviously.

"But he's open to ambiguity. . . . And there are a lot of Christian recording artists who don't want questions, only answers."

In early 1997, Crockett was in the thick of working on a new album when he and his co-lyricist, Milton Brasher-Cunningham, started a song about infant baptism, the sacrament that welcomes a child into a church. Their inspiration had come from a passage in From Beginning to End, a book about rituals by the popular kitchen-table philosopher Robert Fulghum.

"I have never liked the phrase 1/8in Genesis 3/8 that says we're just made of dust and return to dust," Fulghum writes. ". . . The biblical verse should say, 'Miracle thou art and to Mystery returneth.' "

"He's saying there's great miracle and mystery to life," says the 41-year-old musician, sitting in a high-back chair in the den of his North Dallas home that also doubles as his studio. "One of the Psalmists says that God says, 'I knit you together in your mother's womb' . . . and that's what began to move me about baptism. We're not saying, 'Let's make meaning out of this little life,' but it's almost like God says, 'I lend you this life for a while.'

"I began to see the mystique of baptism. The thread of belonging goes back before we ever arrived."

The insight put the two songwriters on course, but got them only so far, recalls Brasher-Cunningham, a former youth minister who has collaborated with Crockett since the mid-1980s.

"We went over and over with the first line: Who are we talking to? Who is speaking?" says Brasher-Cunningham, now a Boston schoolteacher.

With its lyrics not yet come to life, the melody was set aside.

That spring, Webb and Ms. Tabb had begun their own odyssey, taking their first steps toward adopting a child. Ms. Tabb had given birth to their daughter, Anne, six years before; now the North Dallas couple, who are both in their late 30s, longed for a son. Adoption, they say, was a natural decision, since Ms. Tabb herself is adopted.

After attending an orientation at a local adoption agency, both say they knew instantly they wanted to pursue a child from another country. "It just kind of felt right," says Webb.

The couple, who met in law school and married 13 years ago, both know foreign adoption is often perceived as some sort of heroic attempt to save the world, or at least a small part of it. But neither they, nor people who know them, say they ever saw it that way.

"From their standpoint," says family friend Becca Cavner, "they wanted to have another child. . . . To me, what they did is out of the ordinary. To them, it's not."

Webb and Ms. Tabb read and did their research. They chose Guatemala, they say, because of its closeness and its reputation for good foster care and a relatively efficient adoption process. After they'd been approved by the agency, their research seemed to have paid off. Within weeks, they were notified their son had been born. They even were sent a photograph. They already had a name to go with this tiny face: Gordon, the name of Kenn's father and grandfather. Now it was only a matter of time.

The couple shared the good news with family and friends. None received it more happily than the Crockets, both of whom feel a strong connection to Guatemala. Crockett spent two weeks there doing research and outreach ministry, and his wife's family has been even more involved in mission work there.

Once the adoption process was under way in Guatemala, Webb and Ms. Tabb were told that - if all went as planned - they could go get their son within the next three months. They were thrilled, as well as relieved. Their research had led them to believe bonding with the child could be a problem beyond infancy.

But by midsummer, they began to sense that not all was going as planned. The case had to make its way through Guatemala's court system, as well as three separate government agencies. Each bureaucracy, it seemed, presented an unexpected delay or snag.

Stoically, Webb and Ms. Tabb readjusted their timetable. Maybe not three months. Maybe four. Or five. Not knowing was something new for two people who sharpen their lives on order and schedules. On the Internet, they linked up with other couples awaiting Guatemalan adoptions who were experiencing similar delays.

"It was frustrating because not only did we want him with us, but we wanted to get our relationship started," says Webb.

At first, when the Crocketts saw the couple in church, they eagerly asked for progress reports. But by degrees, the news grew more cautious and restrained. "When I heard the fourth or fifth time, 'Well, we're just going to see . . . .' I honestly didn't feel so close to them to keep asking," says Crockett.

But then, after that, he didn't really need to ask. As the weeks passed, he could see for himself what they were going through. "There was quiet that moved me," he says. "They were demonstrably waiting and hoping, which runs so counter to the cynical way we live our lives. They put their heart all the way out."

BARRIERS: Better jobs, schools needed to supplement prayer in Benton Harbor more than 160 churches within a 5-mile radius. They include the Brotherhood Church of God in Christ in Benton Harbor where the Zion church choir sometimes practices.

(From 1E)

Can faith close the gap?

"There's just so much fear and distrust that's built up over the years," Meyer says. "Knowing that the people on the other side of the river share the same belief... helps a lot in helping people to let go of some of the fear of each other.

"We are called to be one in Christ, regardless of our race or national origin," he says. "This is something that God is calling us to do."

For many years, Meyer's congregation has volunteered at a Benton Harbor soup kitchen. But, he says, this is the first time he has used faith to reach across the river.

In Benton Harbor, the Rev. James Atterberry applauded the choir exchange at his Brotherhood Church of God in Christ. "This would just get us familiar with each other, so we could see we have more in common than different."

The crossover was prompted in part by a book published earlier this year. "The Other Side of the River," by Alex Kotlowitz, chronicles an investigation into the 1991 death of a black teenager last seen alive in St. Joseph. Some residents dismissed the book as inaccurate and exploitative. Others lauded its frank discussion of racial divisions.

Then, in March, a white police sergeant in St. Joseph was accused of knocking a black from Benton Harbor off his bicycle and filing a false report to conceal it. Though no criminal charges were filed, he was suspended for 20 days and demoted. The officer is appealing.

An in June, the Ku Klux Klan rallied on the steps of the Berrien County Courthouse in St. Joseph. The rally lasted 20 minutes, with police outnumbering spectators. But Klan officials said local residents, whom they refused to identify, financed the demonstration.

"We're the only county of this size in the state that does not have any minority representation," says the Rev. Walter Brown, a black who has lived in Berrien County for 46 years.

"You don't have to read a book to know it. I see it every day, and so do others. For too long, we've been like an ostrich with our head in the sand."

Brown, who heads the Ebenezer Baptist Church in Benton Harbor, vowed to act after reading Kotlowitz's book. So he organized a luncheon of ministers from both sides of the river to talk about race relations. Eighty-five people turned out, including Meyer. Joint choir practices were one of many ideas proposed.

The Rev. Richard Taylor would like to see the group help integrate shopping areas. Taylor, who leads the First Congregational United Church of Christ of Benton Harbor, says many stores attract only white or black customers.

"I would think all Christian people would want to see these types of things changed," he says. "These are the kinds of things this council could address directly ... an integrated group could visit the store."

The ministers acknowledge that prayer cannot address all of Benton Harbor's problems. Many, including Brown, believe better jobs and better schools are the key to revival. (For 1997, the annual unemployment rate was nearly 22 percent in Benton Harbor and 1.6 percent in St. Joseph, according to state records.)

But religious dialogue may be a start.

Willodene Buchanan of Benton Harbor sang during the choir exchange. Mrs. Buchanan, who is black, says singing, and prayer, forced her to reach beyond what's familiar and comfortable.

"We're praising the same God, so there shouldn't be any hassle or discomfort about praying together, black or white."

CHAPLAINS: Personal involvement varies from officer to officer accessed by pager.

Blackketter sees a real need for the police chaplain program. "It is real easy for a police officer to feel isolated," Blackketter said. "They see the worst of society. If you are not in law enforcement, it is hard to understand." He said the life of a law enforcement officer is tremendously stressful. "They take a lot of abuse."

Blackketter said his level of involvement with MPD officers varies in intensity. "Some just say 'hi' in the hallway," he said. "Others talk to me about their marital problems, and we pray together."

In addition to their religious training, the police chaplains undergo some specialized training. "They must attend the Citizens Police Academy, and have a clean criminal record," Stinson said. The chaplains also go on "ride-alongs" with patrol officers to become familiar with police work.

Roberts said the chaplains are all certified by the International Conference of Police Chaplains. "They receive very specialized training," Roberts said.

Although the chaplains are volunteers, the police department provides the chaplains with a vehicle, radio and uniforms.

"I think the chaplains program is one of the hidden jewels within the department," Roberts said. "I wish more people would take advantage of it."

The police chaplains perform all the ceremonial duties for the MPD, including law enforcement memorial services. They also assist officers with death notifications, and also provide counseling to citizens through referrals by a police officer. "I ministered to a lady whose baby died in a house fire — I was called there by the police."

Blackketter said he gets as much as he gives to the police chaplains' program. "I benefit from being a chaplain — it helps broaden my view of the world," he said. "Pastors tend to get caught-up in their own world and their congregation.

Blackketter has only one regret. "I would like to be able to put more time into things like stress management for the officers"

Assistance from the chaplain program is not limited to officers. "We serve all the staff, as well as sworn officers," Stinson said. "We all carry pagers and we are always available."

"I really want them to interact more with police officers. We want to get the chaplain program more integrated into the police department," Urby said. "I think it is a positive goal for us to have this year.

Christian book biz: Industry's growth staggering, crosses $1 billion mark

By Kim Sue Lia Perkes
N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — Baby boomers looking for the meaning of life, Generation Xers wanting to avoid the mistakes of their parents, business professionals seeking new leadership and a general population wondering about the millennium have one thing in common.

They are buying millions of Christian books.

Book sales are estimated by industry analysts to account for $1.2 billion — and rapidly rising — of the Christian retail market.

The industry has experienced double-digit growth since 1993 as mainstream Christians, who once thought of Christian books as the staple of fundamentalists, are now finding ones that feed their appetite for spirituality.

"As we move into a high-tech, fast-paced culture there is a general growing hunger for spirituality," said Tom Mockabee, senior vice president and publisher at Zondervan, one of the country's largest Christian publishers.

"Not too long ago, New Age books filled the hunger and it never really satisfied," said Terry Walsh of the B&B Media Group, a Chicago-based publicity firm that handles Christian authors. "Now, they are coming and looking at Christian books for satisfaction."

Christian books are so popular, they are popping up in airport gift shops. Sales are so strong that many of the nation's largest secular bookstores, Borders, Barnes & Noble, Waldenbooks and B Dalton are cashing in.

"Barnes & Noble, B Dalton and Waldenbooks — all of them are adding buyers familiar with our market," said Trevor Overcash of AMG Publishers, which specializes in Bibles and Bible-related books.

And large commercial discount stores, like Wal-Mart and Kmart, have jumped on the bandwagon.

"Religion books really sell," said Mark Tauber of HarperSan Francisco, the religious publishing arm of HarperCollins Publishers. Already Wal-Mart, its Sam's Club subsidiary, and Kmart have ordered 100,000 copies of a devotional book, "365 W.W.J.D.?" (What Would Jesus Do?), due out later this year. It shows that secular stores are eager to grab hold of the latest Christian craze.

The crossover to secular stores is celebrated by Christian publishers who are quick to point out that a decade ago those same stores showed little interest in stocking their books.

At the Christian Booksellers Association's annual industry trade show that ended Thursday in Dallas, the up-and-coming books will give readers plenty of choices.

"It's like an ice-cream pavilion; there's so many different flavors," said Lew Schoettle, the owner of Schoettle Publishing in Hayesville, N.C., who had a booth at the show.

Noticeably absent on the exhibit floor was the flood of angel books that until recently seemed to dominate the market. "The angels have flown on to a higher realm," said Phyllis Tickle of Publisher's Weekly, which tracks trends in secular and religious books.

"We've seen a decline in scholarly books," observed Charles Rosenberg, who owns Rose Printing Co. in Austin. More than 50 percent of the books Rose publishes are Christian.

Many of the new books break down denominational barriers, drawing from traditional Christian values but stopping short of favoring a particular denomination. Instead of preaching, books at the booksellers show offered food for thought and guidance for a better way of living.

Baby boomers are turning to authors like Philip Yancey, whose most recent book, "What's So Amazing About Grace?," explores issues of forgiveness, and Richard Foster, whose Celebration of Discipline outlines spiritual disciplines for a more fulfilling life. Foster's book has sold more than 1 million copies.

"What I write is aimed at people who have given up on the superficiality of modern culture, including the modern religious culture," Foster said. His next book, "Streams of Living Water: Celebrating the Great Traditions of Christian Faith," is about to be released.

Generation Xers are demanding "how-to" books that cover everything from how to prepare for marriage to how to be a good parent.

"These Xers are saying, 'We saw divorce in our family and I'm not going to go there,'" Tickle said.

In fact, books on the American family that help people cope with everyday life and support basic values, such as honesty and integrity, are expected to be the next biggest trend. Virtually every major Christian book publisher offers a complete line of titles that deal with marriage and family issues. There are even speciality books, like "The Attention Deficit Child" by Grant Martin. Martin, a Washington-state psychologist, presents medical information, deals with psychological issues and offers advice to help parents cope. He also tells them how God fits into the equation.

Also booming is faith in the workplace. It's not about proselytizing to co-workers, but how to revive decency and compassion in what many workers are perceiving as a cold, cruel corporate world, said Martha McClendon of Broadman and Holman, a leading Christian publisher.

"The thrust is ethics, and business etiquette and being a strong leader," she said. "You don't want to treat someone like a dog at work and then on Sunday go sing in the church choir."

Ron Nielsen, a salesman for Rose Printing, said he is noticing books that repeat a familiar message. "The end is coming," he said.

Fallen televangelist Jim Bakker was at the booksellers show to publicize the upcoming release of his newest book: "Avoiding the Dangers of Materialistic Christianity in the End Times: Prosperity and the Coming Apocalypse."

Books about the Rapture and Apocalypse are starting to hit bookstore shelves, but the number of titles should explode in the months ahead as curiosity about Christianity's next 1,000 years heightens with the impending millennium.

"It's a pretty wild line we're going to cross," Tauber said.

FICTION: Subtle message delivery makes reader transition easier

(From 1E)

"Different writers have different ways of spreading their message," Bly said. "I like my messages to be more subtle. I don't like to be preachy. My books are traditional Westerns where good triumphs over evil, except in my books, good triumphs over evil without stooping to evil's ways."

> 'Stories prepare the heart to start thinking about how Christ works in a person's heart.'
> — Stephen Bly

Having been compared to San Angelo's Elmer Kelton, and even to Larry McMurtry, Bly's formula is working well for him. He has written over 40 books, including the popular Stuart Brannon series, the Austin-Stoner Files and Heroines of the Old West.

"I had a 15-year-old student talk to me one time," Bly said. "He said he was trying to figure out a way to confront the school bullies who had been giving him a hard time. And he said to himself, 'Stuart Brannon wouldn't do it that way.'

"Your protagonists have to be believable. You can't set them up so high that people can't believe in them."

Bly writes characters such as Brannon not only to appeal to male readers but to females also. He hopes even teenage girls can learn from Brannon that men can be — and should be — both "sensitive and caring, yet strong and decisive."

In his previous Christian juvenile fiction books, Bly said his message is to depict for kids that "God always provides, no matter where you go."

A former rancher and agriculture engineering major, Bly began ministering about 20 years ago. He and his wife Janet live on a ranch in Winchester, Idaho (pop. 232), where he pastors at the only church in town but spends most of his time writing.

His latest book, Red Dove of Monterey, was released last month and is the first in what will become the Old California series. In a nutshell, according to the synopsis on the back cover, Alena Tipton, the Red Dove of Monterey, is "a confident entrepreneur in a man's world seeking to fulfill her calling. He's a rugged rancher who longs for peace from his tragic past. They're both about to find it all on a journey they make together."

Red Dove is set in 1842 California, just before the Mexican War. The spiritual theme of the book, Bly said, is to be a light in the darkness. "Alena feels God has some purpose in her life and she is searching for what that purpose is supposed to be," the author said.

Bly thinks his subtle way of presenting a Christian message makes it easier for readers wanting to make a transition from secular fiction to the Christian fiction market.

"I want to write well enough and have a good enough story to where the mainstream reader says, 'Hey this is a good, interesting story with a strong, good plot.' "

And his method of subtle messaging works for people both in and out of the mainstream.

"I had a prison chaplain in Maine call me and ask for 10 copies of each one of my books," Bly said. "He told me the only way he can get a book in the prisoners' hands is by pushing them through the bars."

The chaplain told Bly the inmates in the prison read his stories and later, the chaplain returns and discusses the stories, a unique form of prison ministry.

"In Matthew 13," Bly said, "Jesus was asked, 'Why do you speak in parables? Why do you tell stories?' " Bly said. "And He said it was to prepare the heart to receive the Word. Stories prepare the heart to start thinking about how Christ works in a person's heart."

From Red Dove of Monterey ...

The older woman pursed her lips and studied him from head to toe. "He has been in prayer for quite some time. My knees are sore. The sun is hot. I decided to come home. Padre Santo, have mercy on my soul. Sometimes my faith is so weak."

Alena laced her fingers together as she glanced back across the plaza at the church. "Does he normally pray this long?"

"He never prays this long. He must be praying for the entire human race — by name." Emilia crossed herself and bowed her head. "Padre Santo, have mercy on my soul."

Merced pulled off his hat and wiped his sweaty forehead on his shirt sleeve. "There are some days when I feel like prayin' from dawn to dusk, too."

Alena's throat tightened. "Yes, but not while hundreds of people wait for your benediction."

Merced nodded. "That's true enough. The Lord must be dealin' with him on some matters. I imagine padres have plenty to be concerned with."

"For several hours?" Alena pressed.

"Haven't you ever wrestled with the Lord over somethin' day and night?"

"I don't believe so."

"You will. You're still young."

— By Stephen Bly, c. 1998 Crossway Books

KITUKU: Turbulent times can lead many to break through different walls

(From 1E)

I consider the greatest success to be when one soul goes to bed breathing easier or having hope in facing another day because I was there to listen, encourage, or lend a hand.

Times are turbulent. Lack of long-term job security, unprecedented family breakdowns, spiritual starvation, and individualism are rampant. This calls each one with the joy of the Lord to break any cultural, tribal, racial, religious, educational and economical "walls" and help restore hope, bring healing, and determination to those in need.

Hypocrisy, discrimination are sinful, and that's the gospel truth

By Clyde Wadsworth
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Opinion

SAN FRANCISCO — Spurred by the religious right, Republicans in Congress are waging a Bible-thumping crusade this summer against lesbian and gay Americans.

GOP leaders have branded gay people as sinners. They have stalled the ambassadorial nomination of gay philanthropist James Hormel and promised to kill a presidential executive order that bars discrimination in federal workplaces against gays and lesbians.

"I believe the Bible defines this practice as a sin," Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott explained in a recent column sent to newspapers.

The Mississippi Republican, speaking on a conservative television talk show a few weeks ago, described homosexuality as an addiction that can be treated like alcoholism or kleptomania.

The next day, House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, quoted Bible verses that he said showed homosexuality is a sin.

"The Bible is very clear on this. In fact, I can give you a reference if you like — one of many — but it is very clear on this. Now, both myself and Sen. Lott believe very strongly in the Bible. ... I abide by the instructions that are given to me in the Bible."

He cited what he said were several references to homosexuality in the New Testament books of Romans, Timothy and First Corinthians.

You can almost hear the echo of Southern conservatives who earlier this century described interracial marriage as a sin and racial segregation as part of "God's plan."

Armey, of course, made a name for himself years ago by referring to Barney Frank, a gay Democratic congressman from Massachusetts, as "Barney Fag." He quickly apologized and, incredibly, explained the epithet as a slip of the tongue.

Let's just pretend for a Christian second that legislators Lott and Armey actually believed in the Constitution's separation of church and state. Let's pretend that Senator Lott, for example, had a rational, secular basis for refusing to allow the full Senate to vote on Hormel's nomination as ambassador to Luxembourg.

Let's just imagine that in their personal lives, citizens Lott and Armey practiced what they preached — that they conformed their every back slap and thank-you-ma'am to the literal word of the Bible.

There would be no more bacon, rare steak or cheeseburgers for Dick Armey, the Texan. The dietary laws of the Old Testament forbid them.

There would be no more polyester blends for Trent Lott. The Book of Leviticus, not to mention good taste, prohibits the wearing of mixed fabrics.

The New Testament also poses a number of thorny problems for Lott and Armey. Gentlemen, say goodbye to your rising salaries and pensions.

Accumulating wealth is, according to Scripture, out.

Passing judgment on others is also discouraged. And when you feel that urge to discriminate against your gay neighbors or nominees, don't forget the Golden Rule.

Then, of course, there's that pesky New Testament command against hypocrisy.

This might be the most difficult command of all for Lott and Armey.

Political lackeys of the religious right have a penchant for quoting biblical verses that support their mid-20th century, middle class (dare I say) lifestyle, and ignoring passages that condemn the sins of greed and self-righteousness.

But there is hope for political hypocrites such as Lott and Armey. Hypocrisy, like opportunism and demagoguery, is a disease of the body politic. It is treatable. We must work with these Republican leaders to control their problem. They will thank us someday.

JUSTIFICATION: Not all Lutheran branches in agreement

(From 1E)

Pope John Paul II has made known he hopes all people can work toward by millennium's end.

While the Vatican has not made any wholesale changes or dropped its belief that good works are essential for God's justification, it at least appears to have softened its position.

According to the Rev. Michael Pfeifer, Bishop of the Diocese of San Angelo, "the statement says we are justified and saved first and foremost because of God's generous grace, His pure gift, and then it's His grace that does enable us to perform good works of love and service."

Pfeifer said the signing of the proposal by high-ranking officials of the two faiths represents "a major step forward in building an important bridge with our brothers and sisters from another religion" and said the pope's stance on ecumenism helped spur on the agreement.

Glen Kramer, pastor at Midland Lutheran, one of three Lutheran churches in Midland affiliated with the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, also showed support of the doctrine.

"I support the discussion and the talks we've had with all the churches in the ecumenical movement," Kramer said. "Our talks with the Roman Catholics are especially important. Moving toward common understanding is very helpful and gives a sense of unity to our congregation."

Kramer said the mere wording of justification is what has separated Catholics and Lutherans more so than the understanding of the term.

"I'm very hopeful that at some point we can move toward full communion with the Roman Catholic church," Kramer said.

The Rev. H. George Anderson, presiding bishop of the ELCA, said the proposal, "does more than just open a chapter in Lutheran-Roman Catholic relations. It really starts writing a new book.

"We have agreed that when God deals with human beings, God says, 'I love you,' and doesn't say, 'I'll love you if ...' "

Remaining differences between Roman Catholics and Lutherans about justification have to do with "how we respond to this message of love.

"Justification," Anderson said, "is one more area of faith where Lutherans and Roman Catholics agree. We have a broader basis to affirm our neighbor's church and theology."

Pfeifer added, "From our perspective, this helps us to be clear on how we understand justification. The question raised helped us to better understand this great mystery of God working in human lives and God's bringing salvation from the point of grace."

Pfeifer said whether the justification doctrine is accepted by all branches of Lutheranism is yet to be seen, but "among mainline (Lutherans) there is concurrence."

However, Pastor Dean Kelm, of Odessa's Redeemer Lutheran Church of Joy, a congregation affiliated with the more conservative Missouri Synod branch of the Lutheran faith, said there is still much to be done.

"The point of view of (the Missouri Synod church) is our church is not willing to compromise," Kelm said. "Grace alone, faith alone, Scripture alone and that will not change."

Kelm said the issue will not be resolved overnight, and may, in fact, never be resolved.

"We do agree with the ELCA in that we haven't resolved this matter with the Roman Catholic church. Our position is that we want to resolve it before we have an agreement with them."

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, July 25, 1998:
You are stable, efficient and goal-oriented this year. You know where you are going and aren't going to let others stop you. Your manner of expression is especially clear. You can gain greater freedom with your excellent financial savvy. Seek to further your education or specialize even more in your field. If you are single, be more understanding of someone's choices. People naturally gravitate to you, though understanding your choices in a potential partner is another task entirely. If attached, the two of you work toward a special financial goal. VIRGO is true-blue.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ A child delivers good news. If single, you hear from a romantic interest. Be more playful. Emphasize fun, and enjoy life. Engage in leisurely activity. Sometimes, you push too hard. Be realistic about limits. Tonight: Make it relaxing.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Focus on home life. To resolve a domestic dispute, plan a family meeting. The younger members express their feelings. Let creativity and caring merge. Allow the child in you to emerge this afternoon. You delight others and yourself. Tonight: You are a walking happening.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Reach out for someone. Examine your long-term interests with a neighbor. Doing what is politically correct is important. Excellent communications mark a visit. Take time to slow down at home. You have been running very hard. Tonight: Take a night off.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Expenses are out of whack. Don't let someone push you too hard financially. Discuss your limits. Someone needs to understand where you are coming from. Make time for a leisurely visit in the afternoon. Meet at a favorite spot. Tonight: At your home away from home.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Your ideas spill forth. Listen carefully to someone when making plans. The seeds are here for a special day. Worry less about costs and more about the quality of your life. In this atmosphere, someone loosens up. Talks are now possible. Tonight: Let life flow.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Your mind works overtime. Mull over a decision. Understand your limits in a discussion. Actions speak more clearly than words. Lie low, until you feel balanced and ready to move. In the afternoon, go with that energy surge. Others clamor around you. Tonight: Get loose.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Get up early, and get going. If you have a project on the horizon, there is no time like the present to complete it. Join friends, whether for a softball game or a fun day at the beach. Do what you do best — socialize. Tonight: Vanish, and let everyone wonder where you went.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You are in the limelight. Others come to you for advice. Take care of an older relative first, before you join friends. Friendship blossoms with an acquaintance. Discussions with a partner could be stilted at first, but they are important. Tonight: Celebrate Saturday night.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Take a risk. Don't settle for the status quo. Be ready to take off at the drop of a hat. Spontaneity is beneficial. Someone comes up with a wild idea. Why not? Don't think others won't notice your high profile. Worry less about practicality. Tonight: Be a star in your own life.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Let it all hang out in a discussion. A partner responds in a similar manner. You air problems and acquire a clearer perspective as a result. In the afternoon, go for a drive to the beach or lake, or take in a fun movie. Invite friends along. Tonight: A wild adventure.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Determine what is good for you in a discussion with a dear friend. You find this person unusually direct. Together, you reach a new understanding, which allows your relationship to flow. Talks also include money matters. Tonight: Go for togetherness.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Work demands your attention. Somehow, you know that you aren't seeing all sides. Get feedback from those who are involved with different aspects of your work. Take time with a special relationship. You might get a new pet. Tonight: Out with friends.

Chapel Hill talks trash to Michael Jordan

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Who has the guts to talk trash to Michael Jordan? Could it be the very town where he began his road to glory?

The Chicago Bulls superstar's plan to lease space for a third restaurant has been stymied by the unresolved issue of what to do with the building's garbage.

Trouble arose when local authorities and neighbors couldn't agree with a developer on where to put the proposed restaurant's trash bin. Neighbors insisted the garbage truck couldn't cut through their property during pickups; the town said there couldn't be a restaurant without the bin.

The proposed restaurant would be the anchor tenant of a 40,000-square-foot complex across the street from the University of North Carolina, which won one of its national basketball titles with Jordan.

Jordan already has restaurants in Chicago and New York.

UNITED NATIONS — Actor Danny Glover put aside all his lethal weapons during recent visits to Namibia and South Africa as a United Nations goodwill ambassador.

"These are two countries that are dealing with inequities that have accumulated over 300 years," Glover said Thursday. "When I see them now, I feel it remarkable."

Glover, who starred in the 1987 HBO movie "Mandela," also got a chance to visit with South African President Nelson Mandela, who celebrated his 80th birthday during Glover's visit last week.

As a goodwill ambassador, the co-star of the "Lethal Weapon" series is helping spread the message that people can organize themselves to improve their lives.

Glover also said his mission is to spread "tolerance and understanding and compassion for what has happened in the past, and what the past is."

———

HASTINGS, Neb. — Country western singer Faith Hill welcomed a special guest during a recent gig: her daughter.

Gracie, 18 months old, joined her during band introductions, drawing oohs and aahs from the crowd. And Hill is expecting another child soon.

"Thanks for being so sweet to welcome an eight and a half — ooh — almost nine-month pregnant woman," Hill told 4,000 fans gathered Wednesday.

Hill performed some of her biggest hits, including "The Hard Way," "Take Me as I Am," "It Matters to Me" and "This Kiss."

Hill left the stage with her arm around her daughter and carrying a sign reading "I'm you're No. 1 fan."

ALBANY, N.Y. — Al "Grandpa Munster" Lewis lashed out at his political opponents but saved a few taunts for some of his supporters during a campaign stop.

The actor-activist and current Green Party candidate for governor of New York took swipes Thursday at current "Gov. George 'Potatohead' Pataki" and New York "Sen. Alfonse 'Pothole' D'Amato."

"I hope nobody gets offended. And if you do, that's your problem, it ain't mine," said the 88-year-old who is best known for playing the role of Grandpa in the 1960s television series "The Munsters."

"I appeal to the largest block of voters in the state of New York," he said. "It's the embarrassing number of 60 percent who don't vote. There is no industrialized country in the world that has that embarrassing figure."

Lewis said the reason Americans don't vote is because they believe that without the cash to make big political contributions, their interests won't be represented.

"Instinctively they know," he said. "Their reaction is simple: 'The hell with it. Honey, give me a beer and let's watch the Giants play the Packers.'"

———

LOS ANGELES — A Superior Court judge refused to allow the former nanny of Bruce Willis and Demi Moore to pursue her lawsuit against the celebrities in California court.

Judge Irving Feffer said Thursday he would not overrule two earlier rulings that the case be heard in Idaho, where Moore and Willis, who recently announced they were separating, maintain a residence.

Kim Tannahill filed a lawsuit Feb. 2 in California, alleging she was denied overtime pay, physically threatened and verbally abused while serving as caretaker to the couple's three children. She also filed a federal lawsuit claiming labor violations.

Willis and Moore countered by filing a suit in Idaho, claiming Tannahill stole money, defamed the couple and breached a confidentiality agreement.

Ms. Tannahill lost a legal bid to dismiss the Idaho suit. She is appealing that ruling. She also is appealing the recent dismissal of her federal suit.

Pending the outcome of the appeals, Feffer said he could not allow Tannahill's case to proceed.
