At least six killed in bus, truck crash

BRONSON, Fla. (AP) — A truck slammed into the side of a school bus carrying handicapped children home from school Friday, killing six people and injuring 17, at least three critically.

The dead, all from the bus, were the driver, four boys and a girl, said Levy County Sheriff's Department spokeswoman Ola Crews.

The flatbed truck, loaded with large tires for logging vehicles and traveling at 40 mph, apparently ran a stop sign at the rural intersection, said Florida Highway Patrol trooper Theresa Allen.

The school bus carried 19 handicapped children from the Williston Middle and Bronson Elementary schools, along with two adult aides and the driver, said Janice Zipperer, Levy County School Board secretary. The children ranged from pre-school age to 18.

William Franco was driving about 100 yards behind the bus when the accident occurred.

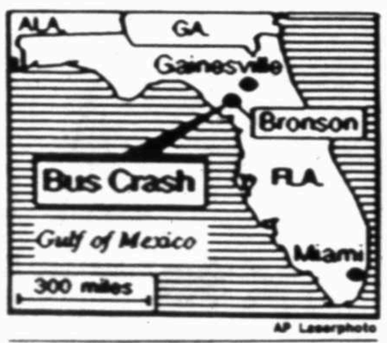

"I saw the impact — the truck never slowed down," said Franco.

For about an hour after the accident rescue teams worked feverishly to extract children from the crumpled bus, which ended up in a ditch with the truck embedded in its side, said neighbor Troy Reid.

"They were using hacksaws around the windows to cut some of the people out," Reid said. "Also they were hooking up chains to the side of the bus and trying to pull it off."

"The bus was shoved over into the ditch and a lot of the the students couldn't get out," said another neighbor, Harrell Hemingway.

Bodies lay under blankets while helicopters and ambulances ferried away the 17 injured victims, including the truck driver, the two aides and 14 children, to Gainesville-area hospitals.

Hospital officials said two victims were still in the operating room late Friday night, three victim were in critical condition, two serious, eight were stable, and two had been discharged.

One victim taken to Shands Hospital was Lester Lee, a 17-year-old retarded boy who attended Williston, said his aunt, Mary Edmondson.

"He can't see, he can't hear and he can't speak," she said. The boy was in surgery and she did not know his condition.

The boy's mother, Caroline Brown, was on her way to Tacoma, Wash., for the funeral of her brother, who was killed in an accident, Ms. Edmondson said.

"She doesn't know about her son yet," said the aunt.

When Lester's grandfather, Paul Brown, arrived at Shands, he collapsed with chest pains, said Ms. Edmondson.

Tips for tackling job pressures and stress was the subject of a seminar Friday night at the Ramada Hotel in Midland.

Psychologist says there's hope after bust

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Almost all Midlanders probably can relate to an undue amount of stress and anxiety in the workplace brought on by the oil bust.

Although there is hope for an upturn in the local economy, the threat of a pink slip or even Chapter 11 still looms overhead for many.

Office layoffs also have created heavier workloads and more pressure for those lucky enough to still have jobs.

But a California psychologist here Friday night said there are ways a person can restructure his thought processes to channel negative energy into a positive experience that will smooth psychic wrinkles at work, as well as well.

"Stress is an indication something is occurring that you are fighting against," said Lee Gibson, a Huntington Beach, Calif., counselor who holds a Ph.D. in humanistic psychology.

People ostensibly resist negative forces at work — such as a griping boss, project deadline pressures or a bad relationship with a co-worker.

However, even the good that a career can bring — a promotion to a big city replete with a new house and car — can throw a person's id out of kilter as well, Gibson explained.

"People fight against having things different or new occur," the psychologist explained.

One is thrown out of whack by this resistance and consequently suffers the "blahs" because, Gibson maintained, he is tied emotionally to his career expectations.

"We have been raised to think it's impossible to not expect things in life," Gibson said. But this philosophy must be changed to the extent that one must disconnect those emotions and simply accept the reality of the situation at work, he added.

Although there are no "quick fixes" to quelling stress at work, for starters, one should realize that his lay-off or lack of time to complete work most likely is not a reflection on his worth as a human being, Gibson said.

Iran threatens retaliation if oil exports halted

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran does not want war with the United States but will attack U.S. warships if they threaten Iran's vital exports, Iranian news media quoted President Ali Khamenei as saying Friday.

Prime Minister Hussein Musavi reportedly called for an all-out war effort to defeat Iraq in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war and crush the "military expeditions of the U.S.A. and the agents of global arrogance."

Khamenei and Musavi both spoke Friday at the weekly prayer session at Tehran University, and their remarks were quoted by Tehran Radio, monitored in Nicosia.

■ Sources say tankers may actually be U.S. warships — 8A

Khamenei was quoted as saying that Iran does not want "to challenge the United States to a war in the Persian Gulf."

"If the objective of the American presence is to allow the Kuwaiti and Saudi Arabian regimes' oil to be exported easily, but Iranian oil not to be exported, then we will not allow it, and no power will be able to prevent our retaliatory measures, whether America or any other power stands in our way," he was quoted as saying.

The Islamic Republic News Agency, also monitored in Cyprus, quoted Khamenei as saying Iran "will retaliate without respect for the presence of U.S. warships in the gulf and without heed to the damage likely to be inflicted on them."

Khamenei's remarks appeared to be a warning to Iraq not to resume its air strikes on tankers carrying Iranian oil.

Iraq halted its ship attacks July 20, apparently under U.S. pressure, after the United Nations Security Council called for an immediate cease-fire.

Iraqi leaders have said they will not hold off hitting Iran's economic lifeline for much longer.

Oil industry sources estimate that during the lull in the so-called tanker war, the Iranians have boosted their oil exports by about 25 percent to about 2 million barrels a day.

Culver considered to take Hill's place

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midland District Judge Barbara Culver was surprised to hear Friday that she is among a "stable" of potential nominees to replace Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice John L. Hill Jr., she said.

"I haven't any reason to think that the governor would ask me to serve in that capacity," said Culver. "Of course, if he asked I would give it serious consideration.

"I think any judge or attorney would be flattered to be on a list of candidates for the top judicial job in the state of Texas, and I certainly am," she said.

State GOP Chairman George Strake said a number of Republican judges around the state — including former San Antonio Judge Roy Barrera, who ran for attorney general last year — also are possibilities for replacing Hill, who announced this week that he will step down Jan. 1.

Gov. Bill Clements will make the appointment, but he was vacationing in Colorado and not available for comment Friday.

Reggie Bashur, Clements' press secretary, said, 'The governor is going to have a very comprehensive review. He's going to have an inclusive, as opposed to an exclusive, list. It's going to be a long list."

The Houston Post reported Friday that Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston, the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, was on the list of potential replacements for Hill.

The Houston Chronicle and Austin American-Statesman said Rep. Patricia Hill, R-Dallas, was another lawmaker on the list.

Police looking for links in deaths of four friends

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The June 28 death of a 30-year-old woman from apparent chemical poisoning has raised questions about the deaths of three friends over a four-year period.

However, without hard evidence, according to one law enforcement officer, attempting to link the deaths is a tenuous process since facts gathered at this point are largely circumstantial.

Leza Kay Chandler, 1752 E. 53rd St. in Odessa, was found dead about 2:30 p.m. June 28 by a friend from Midland, Kerri Dawn Middleton.

David A. Dowler, 34, 3707 W. Louisiana in Midland, remained in the Ector County jail Friday night in lieu of $510,000 in bonds. Dowler is charged with murder in connection with the death of Ms. Chandler and with possession of firearms silencers, which are considered prohibited weapons.

The cause of death of the young woman has been attributed to chemical poisoning, but an Odessa police spokesman has declined to identify the specific chemical discovered during the course of an autopsy ordered by Peace Justice Manuel Valles. Ms. Chandler's death was unattended.

Workshop educates law enforcers, volunteers on Texas Crime Stoppers

From Staff Reports

Prosecuting cases, laws, proposed legislation and other legal issues were among the topics of a three-day workshop to educate Texans on how to prevent crime in their communities.

About 160 law enforcement officials, citizen organizers and volunteers attended the workshop at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

David Cobos, coordinator of Texas Crime Stoppers and former Midland Crime Stoppers coordinator, said the course's objective was to provide trainees with an understanding of the history, philosophy and purpose of the Crime Stoppers program.

"A successful (Crime Stoppers) program is one that is receiving tips and solving cases," Cobos said. "In essence, I would have to say all of our 160 programs are successful."

Since its inception in 1978 in El Paso, Texas Crime Stoppers efforts have resulted in 24,931 arrests. As many as 34,838 cases have been cleared and $3.5 million has been awarded to persons with information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects involved in criminal activity.

Co-sponsored by the Institute of Criminal Justice Studies at Southwest Texas State University, the course instructed trainees on how to outline fund raising projects used by Crime Stoppers programs in Texas.

Cobos said the Texas Crime Prevention Institute offers one of the most comprehensive crime prevention training programs in the nation. It conducts basic and specialized courses aimed at the needs of crime prevention practitioners.

Sections of the training program are presented by the nation's foremost Crime Stoppers practitioners, including Criminal Appeals Court Judge Mike McCormick and Richard Carter, the leading authority on Crime Stoppers law, Cobos said.

Participants worked in group sessions to exchange intelligence information concerning criminal activities in their communities, such as narcotics trafficking and crimes committed by transients.

ICJS has trained over 25,000 criminal justice professionals in Texas and 42 other states, Canada, Guam, Saudi Arabia and U.S. military agencies. The institute is certified as a police academy by the Texas Commission on Law Enforment Officer Standards and Education.

Family of teen missing after bus accident files $9 million lawsuit

STATE

KERRVILLE (AP) — The family of a teen-ager who drowned when a church bus ran into the floodwaters of the Guadalupe River filed a $9 million negligence suit Friday against the operators of the youth camp where the boy and other youngsters were staying.

The family of John Bankston Jr., 17, alleged in the suit filed in state district court that officials of the Pot O' Gold Youth Camp near Comfort were negligent in allowing the teen-agers to leave camp July 17 when the Guadalupe River was cresting to an all-time high.

Besides Bankston, nine others were killed when the church bus and van they were in was swept away by the roaring river.

Bankston is still missing, and state game wardens who had been searching for his body said Thursday they would have to end the hunt. But a private group financed by Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot is continuing the effort.

The suit, filed by Dallas attorney Mark Nacol, names as defendants the camp, Huisache Avenue Baptist Church of San Antonio, which operates the camp, and administrators of both.

Kerr County also was named in the suit, but no damages are sought, said a court clerk, who declined to give her name.

The suit claims the church camp failed "to exercise a high degree of care in properly supervising" the campers.

Bankston was among 43 people traveling in a bus and van owned by the Seagoville Road Baptist Church of Balch Springs, a Dallas suburb.

The Seagoville group and several other groups had been at the camp a week and were trying to leave through a road about 180 feet from the Guadalupe River. Some buses made it, but floodwaters engulfed the Seagoville vehicles, forcing the group to abandon them for trees.

The suit specifically mentions Zelda Bonam, the camp's cafeteria manager and the wife of the camp administrator, who talked to authorities early on the day of the accident about the river level.

Bankston's family claims Mrs. Bonam "was notified on at least three specific occasions of the danger of imminent flooding...and that under no circumstances whatsoever should any of the children in the camp be allowed any exit route which crossed the low-water bridge at Hermann's Sons Crossing."

Also named as defendants were Mrs. Bonam's husband who is camp administrator and Huisache Avenue church pastor, the Rev. Claud J. Bonam, and their son, Claud Bonam Jr., and others associated with the camp.

The Bonams were out of town on vacation and not available for comment Friday, said church secretary and family member Donna Bonam, who declined further comment.

A grand jury last week declined to indict anyone in the bus accident.

Wright refuses to say whether he would support Contra aid proposal

GRAPEVINE (AP) — After meeting with Nicaraguan Contra leaders Friday, House Speaker Jim Wright refused to say whether he would go along with their proposal to put U.S. military aid in escrow in case peace negotiations with the Sandinista government fail.

"I never did enter into any enterprise in my life anticipating its failure, because if one does that, he sows the seeds of its failure," Wright said.

The Fort Worth Democrat met with directors of the Nicaraguan resistance movement in a hotel at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. After the meeting, he held a news conference with the three — Alfredo Cesar, Alfonso Robelo and Aristides Sanchez.

Reporters repeatedly asked Wright if he would agree with the Contra escrow proposal, but each time he steered clear of a definite answer and finally said he wasn't ready to make a commitment on the subject.

Instead, Wright said, he would rather discuss humanitarian aid to the Nicaraguan resistance.

"There is money in the pipeline already committed, already appropriated," Wright said. "We've been talking about creative ways to use whatever money there is for peaceful processes. Let's call that humanitarian aid.

"I'd rather spend some money sending in a peace corps, sending in a literacy corps, sending a medical corps. Then we won't have to send the Marine Corps," the speaker said.

Wright also would not speculate on what approach Congress might take toward the funds and the peace negotiations.

"I'm not ready to spell out exactly what formula Congress might be willing to support. The fundamental concept is we're going to give peace a chance," he said.

Mediator to look into discrimination complaints

MONAHANS (AP) — A U.S. Justice Department mediator plans to meet next month with some minority-group members and officials of the Monahans-Wickett-Pyote Independent School District over complaints of inequitable treatment.

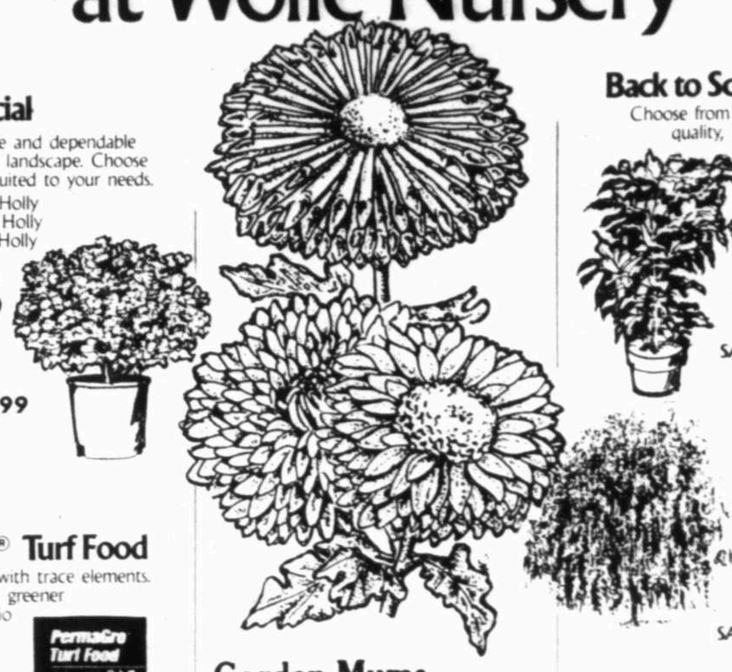

Minority teachers, students and administrators, primarily Hispanic, allege that the school district discriminates against minorities.

Justice department conciliation specialist Richard Sambrano said Thursday he will convene a Sept. 22 closed meeting between school administrators and a minority committee that has compiled complaints.

Earlier this month, nearly 30 Monahans residents aired their complaints at a League of United Latin American Citizens meeting.

Minority members have said they feel under-represented in teaching, coaching, counseling and administrative positions and that the school district discriminates against minorities in promotions.

Man asks DA to drop assault charge against Gonzalez

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A man who accused veteran U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez of hitting him asked that a misdemeanor assault charge against the congressman be dropped, a prosecutor said Friday.

Bexar County District Attorney Fred Rodriguez said his office filed a motion to dismiss the charge after Bill Allen, who said Gonzalez hit him in a San Antonio restaurant, got tired of the case and Gonzalez apologized.

"He wanted a finality to it," Rodriguez said. "He wanted both sides not to engage in any further political discussion."

County court-at-law Judge Anthony Ferro, who was assigned the case, was out of town and will decide next week about the dismissal, Rodriguez said. Attorneys for Allen and Gonzalez agreed that the case would be dropped if Gonzalez apologized, he said.

In a statement, Gonzalez apologized to his constituents, but not to Allen.

"I know that I have a reputation for strong political beliefs and for fighting hard for those beliefs," he said. "If, during this matter, words were spoken that caused Mr. Allen concern for his family, I regret the same.

"I do not, however, apologize to Mr. Allen or anyone else for my political beliefs and I expect no apology from him for his political belifs," the 26-year congressman said.

The alleged assault occurred last Dec. 4 at a restaurant. Allen said Gonzalez punched him in the face, and Gonzalez said Allen accused him of being a communist. The congressman said he was defending himself because Allen appeared to be reaching for a weapon.

Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, criticized almost everyone in the case, even forcing Judge Timothy Johnson to remove himself from the case.

The congressman used the floor of the House of Representatives to blast local officials, who he said were out to get him.

His first attorney, Charles Butts, resigned after heavy criticism from Gonzalez, who also called the district attorney a "coward." Gonzalez also said Rodriguez sought to file the charges because he refused to endorse him in last year's party primaries.

Suit alleges travel company sold bogus travel packages

Mattox

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox filed suit Friday against a local travel company, alleging the firm engages in deceptive trade practices by promoting bogus travel packages.

"We're trying to warn people that deals that sound too good to be true — that's exactly what they are — they're not true," Mattox said at a press conference.

The lawsuit was filed in district court against Houston-based International Travel Corp. and Resort Travel International Inc., also known as Holidays International.

It also lists as defendants Richard Deane, chief executive officer of International Travel and former owner and operator of Resort Travel, and Bradley Hinton, director and owner of International Travel and former owner and operator of Resort Travel.

The lawsuit is asking for injunctive relief and restitution to consumers and then a permanent injunction, Mattox said.

"We want to warn consumers of Texas in particular Harris County and the surrounding areas about individual marketing products such as vacation packages that they say are sanctioned by the attorney general's office," Mattox said. "The attorney general's office does not sanction this.

"This is an example of one of the kinds of corporations," Mattox said. "They frequently do not provide travelers with services they are guaranteed."

Since 1985, using a variety of names and marketing schemes, the defendants have offered free or low-cost travel packages to consumers nationwide, the lawsuit says.

Holiday International sold vacation packages to retail merchants in the Houston area and around the country to be used as promotional awards to customers. Mattox said the company claimed to be approved by prominent public officials and business organizations when in fact it was not.

The attorney general's consumer protection division began receiving complaints from consumers who said Holidays International had not disclosed numerous restrictions which made travel very expensive, said Assistant Attorney General Rose Ann Reeser.

She said her office has received about 300 complaints about the travel packages and more come in everyday.

In December 1985, Resort Travel entered into an assurance of voluntary compliance with the attorney general's office, Ms. Reeser said.

Subsequently, the defendants ceased operating and formed International Travel, a massive telemarketing scheme selling travel club memberships. Holidays International informed consumers that their accounts were being assigned to International Travel, but were not, Ms. Reeser said.

Cost of the travel memberships vary from $349 to $499, she said.

There was no answer at the company's office Friday afternoon when The Associated Press called for comment.

Mattox said there is some possibility of receiving restitution, "but it's not going to be easy."

He said his office is not sure how much money the company has made selling the alleged bogus travel packages, "but considering the volume, it's a lot."

The attorney general said the NBC "Today" show ran a piece about travel clubs and mentioned his office's action concerning such companies.

"Just hours after this story ran, one of the persons we have been investigating placed a call to an NBC producer, claiming that Jim Mattox had appeared on ABC's 'Good Morning America' that very morning giving his company a clean bill of health," Mattox said.

"Hogwash," he added. "Obviously, I would not go on national television with such a line as this individual claimed."

Lawmaker says Legislature should enact stricter control over savings and loans

AUSTIN (AP) — With growing problems plaguing the Texas savings and loan industry, the chairman of the House Financial Institutions Committee says the Legislature should enact tougher controls over the institutions.

"We need tougher, more stringent regulations," said Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Cleburne. "I definitely think our regulatory system ought to be strengthened."

One of the main problems is a lack of experienced examiners to audit and review savings and loan transactions, the lawmaker said.

When Texas savings and loans were a "safe little industry that was heavily regulated," it was all right to have a small force of inexperienced examiners, Gibson said.

"But when the industry was deregulated and the opportunity was there for these crooks to come in, we did not correspondingly beef up our examination force," Gibson said.

The average examiner has been with the state savings and loan commission less than two years, according to a study conducted for the House committee.

"They're examining billion-dollar savings and loans with that type of experience," Gibson said. "It's amazing."

Gibson said that historically, the examination force has been mostly younger people who used their positions to gain experience in the savings and loan industry, then left the force to join the institutions they monitored.

During this year's legislative session, Gibson introduced a bill that he said would have allowed the state regulatory agencies to hire more experienced examiners by exempting them from the state government's salary schedule.

"It would have given us the regulatory tools we need to get control of the situation. We need experienced examiners who know a rat when they see one," he said.

But while the savings and loan industry supported the higher fees that would have been needed to pay for experienced examiners, lawmakers who opposed the salary exemptions succeeded in stalling the legislation and kept it from being considered by the full House.

Missionary returns home

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston nurse who spent three months as a captive of Mozambican guerrillas returned home Friday night to her waiting family and friends.

"I feel great," said Kindra Bryan, 27, as she arrived in Houston following an 11-hour trip from Amsterdam. "It's just good to be back home. Good to be back in Houston and in the United States."

Ms. Bryan was greeted at Houston Intercontinental Airport by her parents, Claude and Mary Jo Free, and a sister and nephew. A smiling Ms. Bryan received flowers and a hug from her mother.

Ms. Bryan and six others were kidnapped May 13 and released last week at the Mozambique-Malawi border by pro-Western guerrillas fighting Mozambique's central government. A spokesman for the rebels said the captives were marched out of Mozambique for their own safety.

During the captivity, the group traveled on foot more than 300 miles. After her release, Ms. Bryan spent a few days visiting other missionaries in Zimbabwe after being debriefed by the U.S. State Department in Malawi.

"Because of what happened, I feel a little out of control of my life," Ms. Bryan, who traveled to Mozambique as a missionary nurse, said earlier this week. "Just to be independent — just to get in my car and do what I want to do without anyone having to drive me. That's what I want."

She plans to spend time with her parents who live in Wellborn, near College Station, before deciding on what to do. Until last year, she was a nurse at M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston.

During the ordeal, Ms. Bryan lost 20 pounds and now weighs about 103 pounds. She was in Africa as a nurse for Youth With A Mission, a charitable missionary group. The others held captive were all residents of Zimbabwe, and also were performing charity work.

Ms. Bryan said the language barriers prevented much substantial communication with her captors, but said they were largely protective of the group and that the soldiers were not brutal.

That is a major boost for Tehran's war effort. An estimated 90 percent of its revenue comes from oil exports.

Unlike the Iraqis, who pump their oil overland through pipelines to Saudi Arabia and Turkey, Iran's oil routes go through the vulnerable shipping lanes of the gulf.

Iran has said it will not attack ships if Iraq does not. A resumption of Iraqi attacks in the strategic waterway means U.S. warships escorting Kuwaiti tankers flying the Stars and Stripes could become targets.

The Iranian leaders' comments underlined an intensifying belligerency in Tehran in recent days during the U.S. buildup, Iran's rejection of the U.N. cease-fire call and mounting Arab pressure on Iran to stop the war.

U.S. warships have escorted five one-way convoys in the Persian Gulf since July 20. Shipping sources said a sixth reported convoy actually may have been U.S. warships.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, also reported widespread radio interference and unexplained jamming of radars, adding to confusion caused by desert sandstorms that reduced visibility.

Pentagon officials in Washington, who also demanded anonymity, said the amphibious cargo ship St. Louis entered the gulf carrying two small mine sweepers and some fast patrol craft, and that two other warships had arrived to replace two scheduled to depart.

The London newspaper The Independed quoted European shipping sources as saying the U.S. Navy was considering putting large barges in the Persian Gulf for use as offshore bases for U.S. military forces.

CULVER

The Austin newspaper quoted Strake as saying the list of potential nominees also includes District Judge Oliver Kitzman of Hempstead, San Antonio district judges David Peeples and Tom Rickoff, and former San Antonio appellate judge John Clark.

Others mentioned by the GOP chairman included District Judge Tom Phillips of Houston, District Judge David West of Pasadena, and Dallas appellate judges Linda Thomas and Nathan Hecht.

OPEC meeting plans help level out prices

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Plans by two OPEC committees to meet next month have helped oil prices level out after being jolted by developments in and around the Persian Gulf, the OPEC news agency said Friday.

In Jakarta, Indonesian Mines and Energy Minister Subroto said one of the committees of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will likely discuss the possibility of raising OPEC prices.

The committees, originally scheduled to meet in Vienna on Sept. 7, will convene Sept. 10, the news agency said. Oil prices have risen this week as the market viewed the scheduled committee meetings as "a stabilizing factor," the agency said.

OPEC Conference President Alahji Rilwanu Lukman, who called the meetings, said in Lagos on Tuesday that the organization would implement all necessary measures to achieve "the OPEC objective of maintaining market stability."

The two committees were set up at the last OPEC conference in July. The first, comprising the oil ministers of Nigeria, Indonesia and Venezuela, was set up "to undertake visits to member countries in order to motivate them to comply with te terms of agreement" on production and price levels.

At the last conference the organization decided that OPEC production during the fourth quarter of 1987 should total 16.6 million barrels per day, the same ceiling applied for the third quarter.

The second committee, made up of the oil ministers of Algeria, Indonesia, Nogeria, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela, was established "to monitor the price evolution in the market in relation to the OPC official prices in order to secure price stability around the OPEC price structure."

Subroto if all OPEC member could stick to its quota agreement, it is not unlikely to raise its official price up to $20 per barrel by the end of this year.

"But it depends much on whether the member countries could restrain from producing more than their respective quota," Subroto told reporters.

Some industry watchers have pegged the overall daily surplus at as much as 3 million barrels.

He said all claims about over production figures are speculative. "Nobody knows how much Iran and Iraq produce at this time because they never announced their production since they are at war," he added.

He said the sharp price fluctuation this month was caused by tensions in the Persian Gulf.

Overproduction that followed the "shock" in spot market had caused a decline in price by $4 from more than $22 per barrel in two weeks, he said.

Rescuers gather around the scene of a school bus-truck collision which left at least six people dead and 17 injured. Apparently the truck driver ran a stop sign and broadsided the bus.

BUS

The dead were identified by state police and school officials as bus driver Edith May Asbell, 59, Benjamin Bennett, 4; Glenda Morrow, 6; Mathew Queen, 8; Tommy Thompson, 9; and Charles Wilburn, 11. All were from Chiefland.

Parents were meeting at Chiefland Elementary to learn the status of their children, school officials said.

Identifying the dead was difficult because the children did not carry identification, and teachers were brought to the crash scene to help the Medical Examiner's office, sheriff's officials said.

Man sentenced 20 years for voluntary manslaughter

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

A 35-year-old former Midland parks groundskeeper received a 20-year sentence in state prison Friday in the conclusion of what the district attorney called "a very unusual case."

Manuel Parra Gonzales, a permanent resident alien who has lived in the United States a total of 15 years, was convicted Thursday of voluntary manslaughter by an 8-man, 4-woman 142nd Judicial District Court jury.

A Midland County grand jury handed down a May 14 murder indictment of Gonzales for the April 23 shooting of Ruben Huitron of Midland, a distant cousin, with a .30-30 caliber rifle.

Gonzales had testified earlier this week that he had been raped by the victim in 1974 and subjected to taunts by the man on many occasions over a number of years.

On the day of the shooting, Gonzales had searched for Huitron to find out why the man kept taunting him and to ask him to stop, the defendant had testified.

A Lubbock psychologist, Richard Wall, had testified for the defense that Gonzales suffered recurrent flashbacks and "night terrors" over the 13 years since the alleged rape.

On the day of the shooting, Gonzales suffered from what the psychologist called "decompression," an episode in which he lost "the organization of personality" and could "no longer function in an organized, adult, consistent way."

In his charge to the jury, Judge Pat Baskin said the panel could either find the man innocent or convict him of murder, voluntary manslaughter, or involuntary slaughter.

Said Schorre Friday of the expert witness testimony: "I think the verdict shows they (the jury) weren't particulary impressed."

The district attorney added that the panel during punishment deliberations decided that a deadly weapon was used in the shooting.

Schorre's winning of that legal point means that Gonzales will not be eligible for parole until one-third of his sentence is over, the district attorney said.

STRESS

At least in Midland, a majority of the lay-offs were simply a result of a lack of revenues brought on by the declining price of oil.

Instead of being depressed about job pressures, one should look at them as a chance to prove he can handle the load, look at it as a challenge or relate to a lay off as a chance for a new beginning, the psychologist explained.

Ted Windecker, owner of a successful computer business in Midland, said at the seminar Friday night that Gibson's philosophies helped his business through a nasty 1986.

"Lee's teachings were immeasurable to me during the bust," Windecker said.

"The best explanation is to look at last year. The economy had fallen out from all of us. The key was, however, how you viewed it and accepted it in your life. Life is based on our viewpoints and we can change them," Windecker said.

Was finding a good side to the bust difficult? Windecker did.

During the boom, there was "absolute craziness," the computer store owner said. "Million-dollar deals were made on the street corner on properties that had no values."

The good side Windecker found during the economy's decline came in changing business procedures to accommodate the tighter economy.

"Now we're coming out from the other side, we're doing business differently and millions are being made again."

One must realize that life — and work — consists of a cyclical pattern composed of breakthroughs, breakdowns, break-ups and breakthroughs once again, Windecker said.

"If we could just understand that a breakthrough must be right around the corner after a break-up" things would be easier, Windecker surmised.

Gibson added some final thoughts on dealing with stress.

"What we have or don't have doesn't make a damn bit of difference. It's instead how we relate to it that's important."

One must shift the insecurity related to resistance of reality to a more self-secure "empowerment" way of thinking, Gibson said.

That way, the psychologist said, the stress can begin to disappear when one realizes it is easier to accept it rather than resist.

MC late registration to start

From Staff Reports

Late registration begins Monday at Midland College as fall semester classes get under way.

Classes open with an enrollment of 3,048, which is 216 more students than on the first class day of 1986's fall term.

Persons wishing to register for credit courses should come to the Student Services Office in the Administration Building.

Hours this week are 8 a.m.-8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday.

Those who want to sign up for as many as five classes have a deadline of Tuesday, Sept. 8.

Those who want to take three classes or less may register as late as Tuesday, Sept. 15.

"We're pleased with the registration count, although quite a few who had pre-registered didn't come and two heavy rains probably kept some people away," said Dee Windsor, associate dean of students and registrar.

After the first week, late registration hours will be 8 a.m.-5 p.m. The college offices will be closed Monday, Sept. 7, for Labor Day.

"Registration as soon as possible is what we are stressing right now," commented Dr. Ray Yell, vice president for instruction. "With our large enrollment, some classes are reaching their limits while others may be cancelled if enrollment is below our minimum number. We hope the late registrants will come out as quickly as possible, since each day they miss classes puts them that much further behind."

Last fall's final registration was an all-time record 3,683, while the final count this fall is projected at around 4,000.

Fall course bulletins are available at the college, at all Midland banks, the Midland County Library, and the Midland Chamber of Commerce office.

Information about courses which are still open may be obtained by calling 685-4501.

Justice to run for Hill's position

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Democratic Supreme Court Justice Ted Z. Robertson Friday became the first announced candidate for chief justice in next year's election.

The seat became open Wednesday, when Chief Justice John Hill announced he will retire Jan. 1 to concentrate on making judicial selection an appointed process. Robertson said he is "a strong believer in the elected system of judicial selection" and is prepared to run against whomever Gov. Bill Clements appoints as interim chief justice.

"Even though, as an incumbent, I will give up almost certain re-election to a six-year term on the Supreme Court, I choose to run for election to the last two years of John Hill's term because the challenge is worth the risk," Robertson said. "The chief justice of an appellate court must have a judicial demeanor to be an effective leader among equals. I believe that I have proved that I do."

Robertson, 66, first won election to the state's highest civil court in 1982. He served for 22 years as a prosecutor and judge in Dallas County before that. A native of San Antonio, Robertson received his undergraduate degree from Texas A&I University in Kingsville, attended St. Mary's University School of Law in San Antonio and practiced law there and in Dallas for 21 years.

DEATHS

The deaths of Ms. Chandler and that of three friends are being questioned by Odessa police because two of those — one in February 1986 and another in August 1983 — also were unattended.

The death of 29-year-old Kathy Hicks of Midland in 1986 at the Ector County Coliseum has been attributed to "a malfunctioning heart valve," according to Ector County Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss.

Investigation of the death of Juan Antonio Casillo, 29, of Odessa, indicates some kind of chemical might have been involved, but no chemical has been identified as yet, according to reports.

Lisa Blythe Krief, 26, of Odessa, was found dead in an eastside home Aug. 16, 1983. An autopsy at the time apparently revealed no evidence of foul play.

According to Kloss, "All four of these people knew each other. They were all close friends.

"When they died there was nothing suspicious, and a normal autopsy was done," said Kloss, chief of the sheriff's office investigation division. "They (pathologists) weren't looking for any chemical agents at that time.

Said Kloss: "All of a sudden, these people in the prime of life keel over and that's what the question is: How they died."

Concerning the Odessa Police Department investigation of the four deaths, Kloss said, "We're kind of getting into it (because of the Hicks' death), but we haven't got anything to go on."

According to Kloss, "We haven't really sat down with the city (police) and said, 'Hey, what are we looking at.'"

Aside from the fact the deaths involved four close friends who were in their mid-to-late 20s, the only other link appears to be an apparent acquaintanceship with Dowler and the possibility two of the deaths — including Ms. Chandler's — may have involved unknown chemicals.

Secord: Iran wanted to help in raid to free U.S. hostages

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Iranians dislike the radical Lebanese who took American hostages and they offered to provide information for a U.S. raid to free the men, Richard V. Secord said in a magazine interview released Friday.

Secord, a retired Air Force major general who played a central role in the Iran-Contra case, said the Iranians told him they did not completely control Hezbollah, the Lebanese Shiite umbrella group.

Although the Iranians succeeded in securing freedom for some hostages, they said "they had to pay off the Hezbollah" to achieve results, he said.

U.S. officials have said they believe the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime has leverage over the pro-Iranian groups holding the hostages.

Secord, in an interview in the October edition of Playboy magazine, said Iranian officials also realized they would have benefited from a U.S. armed raid to free the hostages.

"They would have made speeches about the Great Satan, gone to prayers and had a wonderful time. At the same time, they could have rested assured that we had knocked off quite a few of those bastards that they couldn't stand either."

Secord, who handled logistical details of the Iran-Contra affair for Lt. Col. Oliver North, the former National Security Council aide, said the idea of cooperation leading to a raid was brought up as recently as last fall in a meeting between Americans and an Iranian delegation with ties to Hashemi Rafsanjani, the speaker of Iran's parliament.

But North and his superiors balked at the idea, Secord said, because cooperation with the Iranians was such a sensitive issue and because "they thought they could get immediate results by negotiation."

In the interview, Secord also said — North's superiors took advantage of his energy and non-stop work habits. "He was like a mule — and you know how the Army treats mules. You load him up and load him up until pretty soon his back breaks. Then you eat him."

While North was physically courageous and good at bureaucratic infighting, Secord said, "I don't think he's real tough...Ollie is the kind of guy I would like to keep on tap — but not on top."

— President Reagan's primary motivation in selling weapons to Tehran was securing the release of the hostages, not opening lines of communication to the Iranians.

Reagan has said the latter goal was crucial. But Secord, asked if Reagan saw a geopolitical advantage in dealing with Iran, said, "That's too complex for the Reagan mentality. I don't think he could handle it."

— Members of an Iranian delegation that made a secret trip to Washington last year wanted female companionship "so their handler made 44 calls to escort services until they got some girls to go to the Virginia hotel where they were staying."

He said he learned about the calls because the room was bugged by the CIA, which was upset about having to pay for the telephone calls.

— Several meetings between Americans and an Iranian delegation known as the "second channel" were taped on videocameras and with audio recorders.

"I facilitated the taping for the CIA," Secord said. "The idea was to have an accurate record when the investigations came. As they always do."

Mark Belnick, an attorney for the Senate Iran-Contra committee, said he was unaware of any videotapes of meetings between the Iranians and the Americans.

— A meeting in Tehran in May 1986 between Iranian officials and an American delegation headed by Robert C. McFarlane, the former national security adviser, was poorly planned.

"He (McFarlane) thought he was going to a meeting of the U.N. or something," Secord said. "There wasn't even an agenda. McFarlane just wasn't thinking straight. He went into Tehran with the notion that as soon as he arrived, the hostages would be released."

As for the hostages, Secord said that in a meeting last fall the Iranians "said to us that the best way to clear up the problem — because it was a problem for them as well as us — was to give us the location of the hostages and let us deal with it."

When asked if the Iranians were willing to compromise the Hezbollah by helping the United States in an armed raid, Secord replied: "They brought this up to North and myself several times."

Secord said he supported an armed raid. "I wanted to badly," he said, explaining that with intelligence supplied by the Iranians "there could be no better place to run a hostage raid than Beirut."

Crash survivor's mail, gifts 'piled to ceiling'

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The 4-year-old girl who survived the crash of Northwest Flight 255 has received more than 800 gifts and $77,000 in donations since the world learned of her ordeal, officials said.

In all, more than 12,000 pieces of mail have poured in for Cecilia Cichan at the C.S. Mott Children's Hospital and the University of Michigan Burn Center, where she was in fair condition Friday.

"We're piled to the ceiling, so the post office is holding it for us until we can open some of this," said Dean Lidgard, administrative assistant at Mott hospital.

Cecilia was the only person aboard the flight to survive the Aug. 16 crash that killed 156 people, including her parents and brother.

"People are looking for a bright spot in this terrible tragedy and she is it," said Lidgard, who is coordinating the mailroom reception of Cecilia's letters and packages.

Cecilia's relatives have not decided what to do with the stacks of gifts, some of which have been taken to her bedside, Lidgard said.

"The family comes in two or three times a day and they pick out the articles with the help of the nurses," Lidgard said. "(Cecilia) uses it and then they bring it back and bring her a few more items."

The mail has included get-well wishes from a group of U.S. Marines in North Carolina, a stuffed animal from a little girl in France and a balloon from pop singer Lionel Richie.

"Some little girl wrote 'when you're feeling better and come through my town, do drop by,'" Lidgard said.

Lidgard said the outpouring of gifts and donations for Cecilia was greater than for any other patient during his 10 years at the hospital.

Cecilia, who suffered a broken leg and collarbone, cuts on her head and burns over 30 percent of her body, likely will undergo more skin grafts soon, said hospital spokeswoman Catherine Cureton.

She said some of the grafts performed on her right hand on Aug. 21 may not have been successful. It was not known when Cecilia would be released from the hospital, Cureton said.

Relatives told the girl Monday night that her father, Michael Cichan, 32, mother, Paula, 33, and brother, David, 6, were killed in the nation's second-worst air disaster.

India suffers 20th century's worst drought

AP Laserphoto

An unidentified Indian caretaker at a state-administered cattle relief center holds the skull of a dead cow. On the left are remains of 40 other dead cows which died of dehydration.

By DILIP GANGULY

MEHSANA, India (AP) — When evil dominates the land, a Hindu legend says, the god-king Indra blurs the vision of the rain god Varun, and sinners are punished with nine afflictions. The first is drought.

In an India where faith and superstition often supersede logic, many believe this is what is happening today, as more than 250 million of the nation's 780 million people suffer from the century's worst drought.

Families are hungry and migrating. Cattle and sacred cows, thirsty and unfed, are being released with prayers into deserts of certain death. There isn't enough water for both man and beast.

The life-sustaining rains of the monsoon, poor in recent years, failed completely this year. The subcontinent that became a model for the "Green Revolution," with granaries overflowing, is suddenly brown and dry.

At least 14 of India's 25 states are affected by drought. Every day newspapers report drought-related deaths — some from hunger and malnutrition, some from related diseases, some from contaminated water, some from eating poisonous roots.

Even New Delhi, home of 6 million, is thirsty. Drinking water is rationed in many neighborhoods of the capital.

Against a daily demand of 572,000 gallons of milk, the supply has fallen to half. Dairy farmers from nearby states, lacking fodder for their cows, cannot maintain the supply.

Electricity also is being rationed in New Delhi, to divert power for irrigation.

"It is hell. I have money to buy milk for my kids, but I just can't...I have an air conditioner, but I can't run it," said Mangla Kohli, a housewife in New Delhi, which is sweltering in the mid-90s.

In the western state of Rajasthan, one of the hardest-hit areas, officials estimate 93.5 percent of the 34 million people are affected. More than 75 percent of the crops — wheat, corn, mustard, and cotton — have been damaged.

Some people must walk six miles a day to fetch drinking water in clay urns they carry on their heads and hips.

"Every day there is a rush and a fight to get drinking water. We stand in queue for hours," Rani Devi, of Rajasthan's Nokli village, told a reporter.

"What bigger punishment can a Hindu face than seeing his Mother Cow dying in front of him of hunger or thirst?" asked Bhika Ram, a priest in a temple here in west India's Gujarat state.

As he spoke, a man gave drops of water to a dying cow in the nearby road. Hindus revere cows as mother figures and providers.

During a 300-mile drive through Gujarat, an Associated Press reporter saw miles of parched land, dead or dying animals, gaunt villagers lining up for water and priests praying for rain.

At one state-run operation for drought-stricken animals, most of the 400 cows were dying.

"We used the last of the fodder we had three days back. Since then the animals have eaten nothing," said the caretaker, Daha Bhai Bharbar.

Said Gujarat's top elected official, Chief Minister Amarsinh Chaudhary: "My biggest problem is fodder. Unless we get it soon, 25 percent of the state's 20 million cattle will die.

"...Besides administrative remedies, I am performing Pujas (a prayer ritual) for rain. In a desperate situation like this, you have no other option but to turn to God."

Government officials estimate the national crop loss at $1.54 billion, but note the cumulative impact on economic development could prove inestimable.

Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi canceled a European trip this month in order to deal with the drought, and all other government officials have been ordered to cancel foreign trips and cut expenses.

Food, fodder and water are being rushed to affected areas from central stocks. Collection of land taxes is being deferred. A special "drought levy" has been proposed for luxury goods.

"The situation is very grim. We are fighting the drought on a war footing," said Sanat Mehta, spokesman for Gandhi's governing Congress Party.

To conserve its stockpile, the government also has banned further exports of wheat to Vietnam, North Korea, Nepal and Jordan, the only recipients. Grain stocks were considered moderate sized at the end of July — almost 24 million tons.

Nicaraguan black market thrives as formal economy shrinks

By SALLY JACOBSEN

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — "El mercado negro," the black market where Nicaraguans earn extra money, find needed machine parts and buy essential food and clothing, has grown robust in the past year as the formal economy withers.

The size of the informal sector is unknown, since its transactions go unreported and untaxed, but analysts' estimates range from less than one-third to more than one-half the size of recorded economic activity.

Dealings in the underground economy are widespread:

— Manufacturing workers leave the job with pockets stuffed with goods they made that day. Out on the street, they can sell them for many times the price charged at government-run stores, where supplies are limited.

— Workers show up briefly at their regular jobs and quickly leave to "moonlight" by selling goods or doing other work to supplement government-set salaries.

— Service station managers illegally sell extra gasoline coupons to their customers, at double the government-established price.

— An unofficial market in U.S. dollars thrives, recently bringing 9,800 Nicaraguan cordobas for each greenback, well above the 6,800 offered by government exchange houses. The government also offers dollars for 70 cordobas each if they are to be used to import essential goods.

Nicaragua's economy has been battered by the Contra war, the U.S. trade embargo, the scarcity of foreign aid and the weakness of world prices for such Nicaraguan exports as cotton.

PEOPLE HERE say they take part in the informal sector to make ends meet.

"What I earn daily I pay out the same day in food for my children," said a vendor at Managua's Eastern Market, the hub of black-market sales.

Inflation is high, running last year at 657 percent, eating into workers' purchasing power. The minimum salary, set by the government, is 27,700 cordobas a month — barely enough for a few quarts of milk on the black market.

Shortages of basic goods are widespread, and costs vary sharply.

The government distributes 54 products to consumers at subsidized prices, including such staples as cooking oil, soap, sugar, salt and rice.

Some are channeled to government-run stores that serve a wide variety of workers, who show special cards to enter and then can buy only a limited quantity of the available supplies inside.

For example, each consumer has a monthly allowance of three bars of bath soap, two rolls of toilet paper and a tube of toothpaste, and salaried workers are allowed two pairs of shoes, a pair of pants and a shirt every six months.

Anything beyond that, consumers must buy in the government-supervised and more expensive free market, or on the black market.

A quart of milk recently cost 600 cordobas at government stores and, consumers said, as much as 6,500 on the black market. Rice can go for as little as 140 cordobas a pound at the subsidized price and as much as 700 elsewhere. Scarce cooking oil, which carries a subsidized price tag of 200 cordobas a quart, soars up to as much as 10,000 on the black market.

Vice President Sergio Ramirez said last week Nicaragua would run out of oil before year's end unless it receives immediate help. In June, the government reduced monthly gasoline rations from 20 gallons a month per car to 18 gallons.

Street vendors sell their goods in the Eastern Market, the hub of Managua's black market where Nicaraguans can make extra money and find other items made scarce by the war effort.

THE EASTERN Market is packed with stands selling everything from beans, powdered milk and baby bottles to used roller skates and hinges. Some are sold illegally, having been stolen or bought from government stores for resale at higher prices. Other goods are sold legally at the going rate.

One vendor was selling red sports shoes that workers can buy for 10,000 cordobas in government stores, when available. He paid an acquaintance 25,000 cordobas for the shoes — "They need the money for food" — and intended to sell them for 30,000.

Private economist Francisco J. Lopez, director of the Nicaraguan Institute of Economic and Social Research, estimates about two-thirds of Nicaragua's labor force of 1 million people works in some way in the informal sector.

Said businessman Roger Cerda Perez, "The informal economy is maintaining the formal economy."

His company makes plastic bags that, because of Nicaragua's shortages, are used to hold everything from water to beer. The bags have become so desirable that Cerda Perez found his employees were stealing them to sell on the streets at 10 times his price.

Sandinista government officials urge workers to return to the formal sector but seem little able — or willing — to stop the activity.

"The Sandinistas tolerate it because they know (the economy) cannot survive without it," said a Western European diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "It is uncontrollable."

"THERE'S A confusion intellectually among the Sandinistas about what to do about the informal sector," said Michael E. Conroy, associate director of the University of Texas at Austin's Institute of Latin American Studies.

He said officials worry about losing employees to the informal sector but know government-set salaries cannot compete with the outside earnings.

The government recently announced a 30-percent wage increase, a move Conroy believes was an attempt to draw workers back into the formal sector.

Managua's government-aligned newspapers rail against black-market dealers, dubbing speculators "lizards" and printing names of vendors hawking meat, clothes and other goods on the black market.

The government's 1987 economic plan acknowledged the difficulty in halting the activity.

"Despite administrative efforts to control the growth of commercial activities, the urban informal sector continues growing with a new variation," the report said.

The new twist, it said, "is the quantity of workers of the formal sector who spend part of their work time in the sale of articles or work for their own account to supplement their income."

Nicaragua's economy weakest in Central America, experts say

By SALLY JACOBSEN

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Nicaraguan economy, pummeled by the Contra war, the U.S. trade embargo and scarce foreign aid, has deteriorated sharply and is now probably the weakest in impoverished Central America, analysts say.

Shortages of such basic goods as beans, meat, soap and cooking oil are widespread. Residents stand in line for hours for meager allotments.

After 657-percent inflation in 1986, consumer prices could skyrocket as much as 2,000 percent this year, according to a private estimate. The cordoba, the national currency, is so weak that a five-inch stack of 1,000-cordoba notes is worth only about $100 on the black market.

With government tolerance, an underground economy thrives in food, clothing and spare parts.

"The economy here has gone out of control," said Roger Cerda Perez, general manager of the private company Plasticos Modernos and a member of business groups opposed to the leftist Sandinista government.

A diplomat from a Western European country agreed: "This economy does not work in the modern sense anymore."

President Daniel Ortega has acknowledged the economy's troubles, calling it an "economy of survival" brought on by the Reagan administration's opposition to his government and Washington's support of the Contra rebels.

The Western European diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said top Sandinista officials describe each day they survive as a day won. "They just want to stay alive," he said.

THE ECONOMY began its slide several years ago, a decline that has worsened recently. The government did not respond to Associated Press requests for interviews with top economic officials, but the statistics paint a dismal picture:

— The economy contracted 0.4 percent last year after a sharp 4 percent decline in 1985.

— The trade deficit worsened, registering $661 million in 1986 compared to $593 million in 1985. Such exports as coffee, cotton, sugar and bananas were down 27 percent last year to $219 million.

— The foreign debt for this nation of 3.4 million people stood at $5.7 billion at the end of last year.

The government has blamed the decline in exports on both falling world prices, especially for cotton, and lower export volumes.

As for the debt, the government said only 10 percent of the service due in 1986 was paid, because of the scarcity of foreign currency. A U.S. banking source, who demanded anonymity, said Nicaragua has made no payments at all since early 1985 on the $1.3 billion it owes private foreign banks.

A country with a low population density, abundant land and agricultural resources, Nicaragua now may well have the sickest economy in Central America.

In neighboring Honduras, long ranked as the region's poorest country, the economy grew 3 percent last year. El Salvador's economy, wracked by a lengthy civil war and a deadly earthquake last fall, was up 1 percent. The United States provides aid to both those countries.

IN ITS 1987 economic plan, the government said "foreign aggression" — meaning the Contra war — and depressed commodity prices have hampered economic recovery. The sum of the economic costs of the aggression in 1986 amounts to approximately $150 million, which is equal to more than half the revenue from exports," it said.

The Sandinista government, which came to power in July 1979, has been battling the U.S.-backed Contra rebels for 5½ years.

Without the war, said private economist Francisco J. Lopez, "we would be making clothes for the civilian population. Instead of making military boots, we would be making shoes. Instead of producing food and sending it to the war front, the food would be in the market."

As much as 60 percent of the government's budget is channeled to defense, according to analysts.

Lopez, director of the Nicaraguan Institute of Economic and Social Research, estimated that 20 percent of the working population of about 1 million was engaged directly or indirectly in the war effort.

Because of Washington's strong opposition, the government has found foreign aid hard to come by.

The Reagan administration suspended its aid in April 1981. In May 1985, it imposed a trade embargo that effectively halted commercial relations between the two countries.

The economic cost of the embargo has been difficult to estimate. One Western diplomat calculated it at less than $50 million in lower export earnings and higher import costs from May 1985 through the end of last year.

"The sanctions have hurt," said the diplomat, "but not severely."

BUSINESSMEN SAID they can easily get needed spare parts for U.S. machinery from other countries, although at prices often 15 percent higher.

"It increased our costs but we find anything we want through Panama," said Cerda Perez.

Lopez and others, however, contended the embargo's impact has been substantial, since Nicaragua, like all Central American countries, always had close ties to the United States.

Without U.S. help, the Sandinistas have turned to the Soviet Union and its allies. Soviet-bloc countries have provided Nicaragua with about $500 million in aid each year since 1985, a West European diplomat said. Badly needed crude oil accounts for about $70 million of that.

Moreover, the Sandinista government recently said the Soviet Union intends to limit oil shipments, and Ortega recently announced measures to reduce energy consumption and increase energy prices.

Eyewitness recounts fighting in, around Manila

EDITOR'S NOTE: Associated Press correspondent James W. Hatton was an eyewitness to a stream of actions Friday in a military-rebel attempt to overthrow President Corazon Aquino of the Philippines. Here is his account of a day of rebellion in Manila.

By JAMES W. HATTON

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — For me, the day began at about 2 a.m. A telephone call from the office Friday told me another coup attempt was being made against the government of President Corazon Aquino, and this time it appeared "serious."

Soon afterward, I was standing beside the highway near the tall transmitter for Channel 4, the government television station.

The popping rattle of M-16 rifle fire and slower stutter of heavier automatic weapons sounded in the gentle hills around the walled compound that houses the tower.

I started downhill, crouching slightly, trying to keep trees and bushes between me and the shooting. It took only a couple minutes to reach the compound and I edged along the wall toward several photographers.

Just as I reached them, they picked up Robert McDonald of New Zealand, who had been wounded. He was pronounced dead at a hospital.

For three or four hours there was sporadic firing from and into the tower compound. I saw several groups of three or four rebels, wearing green fatigue uniforms with no insignia, moving along the 9-foot-high wall.

Soon after dawn I saw about a dozen rebels crouched along the far end of the wall. Minutes later they began running, one at a time, across the asphalt road and diving into the safety of shrubbery around homes facing the compound.

Those who had crossed poured heavy fire at the compound to cover their running comrades. When all were across they disappeared, into the shrubbery or the crowds of residents who had jammed an adjacent access road.

Firing stopped. Hundreds of Filipinos raced up to the compound gates and began cheering "Cory! Cory!" the president's nickname.

A man ran up with four large loaves of bread and tossed them over a side gate. Soldiers inside cheered him.

Minutes later, three rebels rose from the shrubbery and, their eyes darting nervously, moved slowly toward the access road.

Some in the crowd spotted the rebels before the young men had taken more than a few steps.

Five or six men ran up to the rebel troopers and grabbed their arms, using their own bodies as shelter. They hustled the youths along the sidewalk to a house halfway down the block, where several other rebels were changing into their regular uniforms as a prelude to escape.

About half an hour later I reached sprawling Camp Aguinaldo in suburban Quezon City, where the rebels were said to be regrouping.

Everything was quiet.

A couple of hundred people lined the street.

Dozens of journalists pressed against the massive iron gate, shouting questions at soldiers in the concrete pillbox that elicited no answers.

At midmorning, about 50 Scout Rangers marched up a side road toward the main gate. They stopped about 100 yards away, awaiting further orders.

After taking shelter from the already burning sun, they told a reporter they were pro-Aquino, from a camp about an hour's drive south of Manila.

Scattered shooting began shortly before 11:30 a.m. Shutters started coming down on shops that had done a brisk business in sandwiches, tiny cakes and soft drinks.

Firing intensified at about 1:20 p.m. and dozens of residents moved away to safety. For the next four hours, the pop of rifles and boom of heavy weapons told the progress of the battle across the base.

Residents took cover at first, but by late afternoon had become accustomed to the shooting and edged forward again. Before long, 300-400 had gathered across the intersection.

They watched intently as the first of three civilian firetrucks entered the post at about 4:20 p.m., then left a short time later in a convoy with other fire vehicles.

The three-story headquarters building could be seen burning. Plumes of gray-black smoke spewed into the air.

Then, just after 5 p.m., the air force arrived and the crowd fled again.

The pilot dipped the left wing of his propeller-driven trainer and began a sharp turn, his wingmate close behind. Seconds later they dived toward the rebel-held military headquarters.

The lead aircraft dropped a single bomb. It exploded behind the already burning building at Camp Aguinaldo, but it helped the pilots line up their target.

They returned at least three more times, dropping a total of about 10 bombs from the T-28s, aircraft from World War II known locally as "tora toras" because of their resemblance to the famed Japanese Zero fighter.

Then the pilots made two strafing runs, raking the area with fire from wing-mounted machine guns.

Hundreds of residents of Quezon City had gathered outside the camp's main gate to watch the loyalist assault on the mutinous troops who had seized the headquarters in their attempt to overthrow the Aquino government.

When the planes attacked at about 5 p.m., only about 200 yards away, the predominantly young crowd fled

Americans might be targets of insurgents, U.S. analysts say

WASHINGTON (AP) — An attempt by disaffected military officers to topple the Philippine government was mounted at a time when U.S. intelligence agencies were warning that American officials in the island country might soon be targeted by communist insurgents, sources said Friday.

The administration and Pentagon sources, who requested anonymity, said intelligence reports circulated recently among top officials at the Pentagon, State Department and other agencies had discussed dissatisfaction within the Philippine military about the government of Corazon Aquino.

The reports did not predict, however, that Mrs. Aquino would face another coup attempt led by military officers such as was launched on Friday, said one official.

Rather, the reports concluded that communist guerrillas — who have been growing in strength in recent years — were mounting a campaign of violence in Manila itself by assassinating policemen, military officers and government officials, and that there was now reason to believe Americans might be targeted as well.

"The analysts believe that the Filipino communist party may for the first time target Americans as part of a stepped-up terrorism campaign," said one official who has read the documents. "There is no suggestion that American tourists or non-officials would be targeted, but the appraisal did conclude that U.S. diplomats and military officials might be."

The sources refused to discuss the evidence that led to the conclusion that Americans might be targeted and likewise declined to discuss any precautionary steps that might have been taken.

One official indicated that recent intelligence reports had focused on the Aug. 2 assassination of Secretary of Local Governments Jaime Ferrer, a member of Mrs. Aquino's cabinet. The 70-year-old Ferrer was killed by men wielding machine guns while being driven home from church.

Ferrer was the first member of the Philippine cabinet to be assassinated.

The assassination of Ferrer was one of about 40 such attacks in recent weeks in or near Manila, most of which have been aimed at policemen and military officials, said one official.

"The attacks are believed to have been carried out by communist assassination teams," the official added.

As for the Philippine military itself, however, one source said the U.S. intelligence reports had charted "a lot of dissatisfaction within the military over what some consider the less than enthusiastic Aquino government support of counterinsurgency operations against the guerrillas."

"On the other hand, there was also evidence cited of dissatisfaction on the part of senior members in the government who have been critical of the performance of the military. But there was nothing predicting another mutiny."

Rebel troops attempting to overthrow President Aquino seized several key military installations before loyal forces launched a fierce counteroffensive with air strikes and artillery barrages.

The coup attempt by hundreds of mutineers was led by Col. Gregorio Honasan and other midlevel officers and mounted on major military and media facilities, including the presidential compound.

At least 23 people were killed and 175 wounded, including the president's son, in the mutineers' offensive, the gravest challenge yet to the 18-month-old administration of Mrs. Aquino. She was not injured.

Friday's attacks took place two days after a nationwide strike by tens of thousands of transport workers and others to protest fuel price increases. The strikes were organized by the May 1st Movement, which the military believes is communist-infiltrated.

The U.S. sources said Friday the mutiny and fighting had so far had no effect on the huge U.S. bases in the Philippines located outside Manila — Clark Air Base and the Navy port at Subic Bay.

Sources say tankers may actually have been U.S. warships

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Reported convoys of reflagged Kuwaiti tankers in the Persian Gulf actually may have been U.S. warships deploying in the U.S. naval buildup in the region, shipping sources said Friday.

Sand-bearing winds during the last few days sharply cut visibility over the gulf and led to conflicting reports whether U.S. warships were escorting another convoy to Kuwait — the sixth one-way convoy since July 20.

Two of the last three tankers designated to get U.S. flags and U.S. protection were still anchored outside the Strait of Hormuz awaiting a Navy go-ahead to enter the gulf, said to a source close to the Kuwait Oil Tanker Co., which owns the 11 ships.

The same source, who demanded anonymity, said the next convoy may be southbound from Kuwait, where three other vessels have been loading since their arrival there last weekend.

The reported activity in the gulf could have been warships preparing to rendezvous with those three in international waters off Kuwait's loading terminal, other sources said. The Navy refuses to divulge ship locations or movements.

"...Yesterday we saw on radar what looked like two tankers and two warships moving in convoy off Ras al-Khaimah. It looks now as if what we were seeing was only warships."

— Anonymous source

Weather conditions generally improved in the northern gulf on Friday, but dust and haze continued over southern sections. Shipping sources also reported widespread radio interference and unexplained jamming of radars along the gulf.

"Between the weather and the jamming we can't figure out anything," said one source. "Yesterday we saw on radar what looked like two tankers and two warships moving in convoy off Ras al-Khaimah. It looks now as if what we were seeing was only warships."

Ras al-Khaimah, one of the United Arab Emirates, is located at the inner boundary of the Strait of Hormuz, the narrow gateway to and from the gulf.

Shipping executives who regularly monitor shipping activities in the gulf said earlier that marine operators heard extensive radio traffic indicating that U.S. ships were moving north in the gulf, suggesting that another convoy was moving.

Pentagon officials in Washington said Wednesday that the amphibious cargo ship St. Louis entered the gulf carrying two small mine sweepers and some fast patrol craft and that two other warships had arrived to replace two scheduled to depart.

The sources, demanding anonymity, said another Navy amphibious cargo ship, the Raleigh, also reached the Gulf of Oman just outside the gulf with four more mine sweepers and several speedboats.

But it was not known whether the Raleigh entered the waterway. Nor was it clear whether the St. Louis and the Raleigh would remain on station after delivering the small mine-sweeping boats and commando speedboats.

Pentagon officials said there were no plans to further expand the Navy's gulf-based Middle East Force.

It grew from nine to 10 ships with the arrival of the carrier Guadalcanal two weeks ago with its eight RH-453D Sea Stallion minesweeper helicopters.

Pentagon officials said a nine-ship battle group headed by the aircraft carrier Ranger had arrived in the northern Arabian Sea outside the gulf.

Replacing the carrier Constellation in a previously announced turnover, the Ranger will provide combat air support for convoys.

The regional buildup, expected to total more than 40 ships when complete, also includes the Missouri, a modernized World War II-vintage battleship, and three escort ships now en route from the Philippines.

Hanoi says it's found remains of three MIAs

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — U.S. military experts who talked with Vietnamese officials about 1,776 Americans missing in action in the Vietnam War say Hanoi may have found the remains of three MIAs.

A U.S. medical team also returned to Bangkok from Hanoi on Friday after simultaneous but separate talks on Vietnamese disabled in the war, reportedly the first team Washington ever sent for such discussions.

The four military experts, from the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center, said in a statement after their arrival in Bangkok that Vietnam "has advised us that they have recovered three (sets of) remains which show some evidence of being those of Americans."

"But they are continuing their investigation concerning these remains and are not prepared to say with certainty that they are Americans. They will advise us at a later time concerning their investigations," the statement said.

Vietnam last returned remains believed to be those of MIAs last Oct. 26, when it handed over three sets.

The four-day meeting that ended Friday focused on what the team called discrepancy cases, which the Americans consider the top priority MIA cases.

These are cases where Washington says strong evidence shows the Vietnamese know what happened to the MIAs and include instances where Americans failed to emerge from prisoner of war camps.

A statement from the medical team said, "these first, productive discussions focused on the problems of the physically disabled in Vietnam." The team said it would present its findings to the U.S. government and volunteer agencies.

The visits were the first steps implementing a recent agreement between U.S. presidential envoy John W. Vessey and Deputy Premier Nguyen Co Thach of Vietnam to end months of deadlock on humanitarian issues.

They were the first talks since last October, although sessions are supposed to be held up to six times annually. During the impasse, Hanoi accused Washington of not cooperating on the MIA issue.

Hanoi has said that in return for help on MIAs, Washington should aid disabled veterans and other war victims including orphans and people allegedly affected by U.S. spraying of the herbicide Agent Orange.

Official Vietnamese media says the country has about 500,000 veterans disabled in the wars fought in Vietnam since the 1940s.

A State Department official in Washington said this apparently was the first time the government has sent a team to Vietnam to discuss such problems.

On the medical team were Dr. Carlton Savory of the Hughston Orthopedic Clinic in Columbus, Ga., Fred Downs, director of the Prosthetic and Sensory Aids Service of the Veterans Administration, and Dr. Larry Ward, who represented private relief organizations.

The United States has given some humanitarian aid to Communist Laos, where America is trying to account for 549 MIAs. But U.S. policy is to deny Vietnam development aid while it occupies Cambodia.

Sources in Washington said Laos, which had followed Vietnam in stalling on the MIA issue, also agreed to pursue discrepancy cases in talks in Vientiane earlier this month.

Striking South African stabbed to death, burned

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The nation's largest gold producer met with representatives of the black mineworkers union after firing 12,000 more strikers Friday in an attempt to end the 19-day-old walkout.

One working miner was stabbed to death and burned, another company reported Friday, bringing to seven the number of black miners killed in the nation's longest and costliest strike against its major gold and coal mines.

National Union of Mineworkers officials met in a hotel room Friday evening with representatives of Anglo American Corp., which now has fired 37,600 miners and threatened 19,000 more with dismissal if they don't return to work.

Another company, Johannesburg Consolidated Investments, has fired 4,600 strikers.

Union General Secretary Cyril Ramaphosa, President James Motlatsi, Assistant General-Secretary Marcel Golding and six other officials met with Anglo's industrial relations manager, Bobby Godsell, and director of manpower, S.W. Van der Colf.

They would not say what the meeting was about, but promised a statement when it ended.

The union met last week with Anglo officials to discuss reducing violence during the strike, which has resulted in 350 injuries, seven deaths and 300 arrests.

The union met Tuesday with the Chamber of Mines, representative of the top six mining houses targeted in the strike over higher wages and better benefits. Ramaphosa said the union had lowered its wage increase demand from 30 percent to 27 percent, but the Chamber refused to discuss altering the 15 to 23.4 percent raises it implemented, effective as of July 1, after negotiations broke off in mid-July.

The Chamber offered a slight improvement in vacation pay and a doubling of death benefits, which the striking miners overwhelmingly rejected in voting Wednesday.

Anglo, the worst-hit by the strike, says 80 percent of the union's membership works in its mines. It began dismissing miners last week and said it would continue until the walkout ended.

Anglo has said it is hiring short-term replacements for the fired strikers, but has declined to release any figures. Anglo, which produced more than 39 percent of South Africa's gold last year, employs about 180,000 black miners.

Although the mine strike is legal, South African companies have the right to fire workers who do not show up for their jobs. Ramaphosa has said it would take six months to hire and train replacements for the 340,000 men he says are on strike at 44 mines.

Israel will 'finally' have draft constitution drawn

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

JERUSALEM (AP) — After nearly 40 years, somebody finally has come up with a draft constitution for Israel, which has never had one.

A group of Tel Aviv University law professors has come forward after 20 months of study with a 48-page document.

Uriel Reichman, dean of the university's law faculty, said a constitution was needed to give stability to the political system and make the government more immune to the demands of small, special-interest parties.

"Israel is in a continuous crisis which may in the long run endanger the democratic fabric of our society and even hamper our ability to function as a nation," Reichman added in an interview.

Reichman said legal experts from West Germany's Max Planck Institute in Heidelberg and Yale University in New Haven, Conn., were consulted. Israeli experts were also convened to discuss what should be in a national charter.

The outcome was a hybrid, a part presidential and part prime ministerial system modeled on West German's government, he said.

Israel's Declaration of Independence set a deadline of Oct. 1, 1948, for a constituent assembly to convene and write a constitution. The assembly turned itself into Israel's first parliament and passed the buck to the Constitution, Law and Justice Committee, which has yet to produce the document.

Israel's parliament, the Knesset, has passed so-called "basic laws" which established the government structure and which are intended to be incorporated into a constitution. But most guarantees for individual rights grow out of Supreme Court decisions.

Shulamit Aloni, a member of the Constitution committee, said a draft bill of rights failed to win approval this year, but she added that she would re-introduce it after the November 1988 elections.

Mrs. Aloni, leader of the liberal Citizens Rights Movement, said a constitution was necessary because most Jews immigrated to Israel from countries where there was no democratic tradition.

"A constitution, and especially a bill of rights, is needed to establish the norms of what is right and wrong and to provide a system of checks and balances which is lacking now," she said.

A 30-point human rights section in the Reichman draft states all people are equal under the law, guarantees basic freedoms such as assembly and speech, establishes a right to privacy and bans capital punishment except for crimes against humanity and genocide.

Israel's socialist tradition is maintained with guarantees of free education through the ninth grade and free medical care and a subsistence income for the indigent.

Some liberties, such as freedom of speech and the right to make a phone call if arrested, are limited by provisions allowing exceptions for reasons of national security.

Reichman said a public action committee is being formed to raise funds to promote the constitution. He conceded it would be an uphill battle but said he was encouraged by public opinion research showing wide support for reform.

Political scientist Bernard Susser and Rina Shapira, a sociology professor, surveyed 1,200 Israelis and found 85 percent of those questioned favored changing the electoral system.

But Susser said in an interview that while many sought change only about half believed reform was possible.

"There's a sense that the Israeli political system is so entrenched that you can't change it."

The chief opponents of a constitution are the Orthodox religious parties, which hold the balance of power between the two major political blocs with 14 seats in the Knesset and two seats in the 24-member Cabinet.

Under the draft constitution, the religious parties would no longer be king-makers.

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

An ad in today's Pennsylvania Gazette announced the publication by Young & McCullough, of:

"THE AMERICAN SPELLING BOOK OR, First part of a Grammatical Institute of the English Language — Seventh Edition"

"By NOAH WEBSTER, Esquire"

The ad, over a third of a page, included recommendations from Connecticut Lt. Gov. Oliver Wolcott, Yale President Ezra Stiles, Connecticut Congressman Stephen M. Mitchell, artist John Trumbull, poet Joel Barlow, and many others.

The celebrity endorsement is not new.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

Abraham Clark, of New Jersey, joined the three states and four individual delegates present yesterday and the day before.

The directors and agents of the Ohio Company met at the Bunch of Grapes Tavern in Boston, and received a report from their lobbyist, Manasseh Cutler. Cutler outlined the contract he had negotiated with the Board of Treasury, in which the Ohio Company agreed to purchase a minimum of 1,000,000 acres in what is now Ohio at $1 per acre, less one-third of a dollar per acre allowed for bad lands and the cost of surveying, payable in two installments. The board approved Cutler's actions.

CONVENTION TODAY

Article XVI, the "full faith and credit" clause, came up. Hugh Williamson (N.C.) didn't understand the clause, and moved to substitute the language in the Articles of Confederation. James Wilson (Pa.) and William Samuel Johnson (Conn.) provided their interpretations. Charles Pinckney (S.C.) moved to commit and add a provision for uniform bankruptcy laws; James Madison (Va.) agreed. Edmund Randolph (Va.) moved a provision for accepting state actions by other states. The resolutions were referred to a committee.

A committee recommendation not to require a two-thirds vote to pass acts regulating trade was brought up. A move to postpone this report and instead require the assent of two-thirds of the members of each house lost after debate, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and Georgia aye, 7 no. The committee report was then agreed to.

Pierce Butler (S.C.) moved to insert a provision for the return of fugitive slaves, which was agreed to. Agreement to this provision may explain South Carolina's vote for regulating trade by a simple majority.

The Convention then moved on to consider admitting new states.

DELEGATES TODAY

Elbridge Gerry (Mass.) wrote his wife for the fourth time this week.

"What is the cause my dearest love that you are of late so liable to fainting? I am quite distressed about it. If you do not find relief soon, I shall quit the convention, & let their proceedings take their chance. Indeed I have been a spectator for some time; for I am very different in political principles from my colleagues. I am very well but sick of being here; indeed I ardently long to meet my dear Nancy."

LOOKING BACK
Sectional Differences

Today's debate on navigation acts is probably the clearest expression of differing state economic interests to be found in the Convention records.

In presenting his motion to require a two-thirds vote of the total membership of each house to pass a bill regulating trade, Charles Pinckney "remarked that there were five distinct commercial interests — 1. the fisheries & W. Indian trade, which belonged to the N. England States. 2. the interest of N.York lay in a free trade. 3. Wheat & flour the staple of the two Middle States, (N.J. Penna.) 4. Tobo. the staple of Maryd. & Virginia (& partly of N. Carolina.) 5. Rice and Indigo, the staple of S. Carolina & Georgia.

"These different interests would be a source of oppressive regulations if no check to a bare majority should be provided. States pursue their interests with less scruple than individuals. The power of regulating commerce was a pure concession on the part of the S. States. They did not need the protection of the N. States at present."

After Luther Martin's (Md.) second, Charles Cotesworth Pinckney (S.C.) said that the interest of the South was to have no commercial regulations, but the Eastern states needed it, and had accommodated the South (on the slave trade) and he opposed fetters on regulating commerce. George Clymer (Pa.) said the Northern and Middle states would be ruined if they couldn't retaliate against foreign regulation. Roger Sherman (Conn.) observed that the divergence of economic interests among regions was itself security against abuse. Charles Pinckney observed that his five interests were minute — the great division was North and South.

Gouverneur Morris (Pa.) noted that preferences would increase American shipping, and a navy was essential to security.

Hugh Williamson (N.C.) wanted a two-thirds requirement. "No useful measure he believed had been lost in Congress for want of nine votes."

Richard Spaight (N.C.) opposed the motion. The South could build ships for their own use if trade regulations were abused.

Pierce Butler (S.C.) opposed the motion because he was "desirous of conciliating the affections of the East."

And so the debate went, with George Mason (Va.) and Edmund Randolph (Va.) supporting the motion, and James Wilson (Pa.), James Madison (Va.), John Rutledge (S.C.) and Nathaniel Gorham (Mass.) opposing it, but no one disagreed that North and South had very different interests.

Reagan: Bork law-and-order judge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan renewed his battle for Senate confirmation of Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork with a declaration Friday that "the purpose of criminal justice is to find the truth, not to coddle criminals."

Reagan pictured Bork, a judge on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington, as a strong law-and-order judge during a meeting here with administration and law enforcement officials.

Illinois Gov. James Thompson, a former U.S. attorney, said the group, representing sheriffs, chiefs of police, state troopers and other law officers, unstintingly supported Bork.

"Nearly one-third of the Supreme Court's time is taken up with criminal justice, yet there has been little focus...on Judge Bork's views in this area," Thompson said.

"We told the president that we would go from this meeting today to form a national group of law enforcement officers to lobby for Judge Bork," he said.

Reagan opened the meeting by saying: "I am particularly pleased to have your views on a matter that will have continuing impact on law enforcement and criminal justice long after my administration leaves office."

"The Supreme Court has always had a critical role in the administration of criminal justice both at the state and federal level," Reagan said.

"And that's why when it comes to crime and safety of our citizens, it's so important for our courts to take a tough, clear-eyed look at the Constitution's purpose to establish justice and ensure domestic tranquility," he added.

Noting that Bork had argued in favor of the constitutionality of death penalty laws as solicitor general, Reagan said, "It is essential that capital punishment remain on the books if we are to protect innocent lives from the tragedy of vicious criminal acts."

"It's time we reassert the fundamental principle that the purpose of criminal justice is to find the truth, not to coddle criminals," the president said.

Attending the meeting were Donald Baldwin, executive director of the National Law Enforcement Council; John Bellizzi Jr., a director of the International Narcotics Enforcement Officers Association; Robert Bonner, U.S. attorney in Los Angeles; Fred Foreman of Illinois, president-elect of the National District Attorneys Association; New Jersey State Trooper Thomas J. Iskszycki, chairman of the National Troopers Coalition; Col. Robert Landon of Montana, president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police; Don Olmodt of Minnesota, past president of the National Sheriff's Association; Detective Dewey R. Stokes of Ohio, president of the Fraternal Order of Police; and Larry Thompson, former U.S. attorney in Atlanta. Attorney General Edwin Meese III and White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr. also attended.

At a news conference preceding the president's meeting with Bork supporters, members of the California-based organization Access to Government criticized Bork's judicial record.

"Judge Bork does not believe in law and order," said Karl Manheim, professor of constitutional law at Loyola School of Law in Los Angeles. Manheim maintained Bork's pattern is to "selectively enforce the laws of Congress," ignoring, for instance, portions of the Sherman antitrust law with which he disagrees.

"When it is government against the individual, the government must always win" in Bork's view, said Erwin Chemerinsky, professor of constitutional law at the University of Southern California.

Reagan spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, asked Thursday about Bork's prospects for confirmation, said "we're very optimistic, (we) think his chances are very good."

On July 29, at a meeting of the National Law Enforcement Council in Washington, Baker also said he was optimistic, but told the sheriffs, chiefs of police and state troopers, "It does require our help, hour help."

At that meeting, Reagan, while calling for Bork's confirmation, told the law officers, "I feel the American people want criminals going to jail while constitutional rights are preserved."

The Senate Judiciary Committee has scheduled 10 days of hearings on the Bork nomination, beginning Sept. 15. Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., the committee chairman, has said it will vote by Oct. 1, but he has indicated he would not be concerned if the full Senate did not vote by Oct. 5, when the court reconvenes.

Texas Southern Baptists say committee endorsing Bork 'departure from policy'

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Southern Baptists formally protested a national committee's endorsement of Robert Bork for the U.S. Supreme Court Friday, calling the action "a radical and tragic departure from Baptist policy."

The Southern Baptist Convention Public Affairs Committee endorsed President Reagan's nomination of Bork last week in Nashville, but the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission said the move could jeopardize the tax-exempt status of the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

"No Baptist can speak for other Baptists. That's just not our structure," said TBCLC Director Phil Strickland. "We do not believe it is appropriate for a Baptist agency to endorse candidates for appointive or elective office."

The TBCLC, which serves as the public affairs committee for the 2.4 million-member Baptist General Convention of Texas, unanimously called for a review of the national committee's action as a possible violation of SBC bylaws.

"In its formal action and statement to the press, the (national) committee has exhibited incredible disregard for and ignorance of Baptist policy," the Texas group said in a statement.

"It is good for appropriate Baptist agencies and bodies to inform Baptists of important issues and how candidates stand on issues, but it is bad for one Baptist to presume to speak for another and to adopt partisan positions on candidates and appointments for office," it added.

The Texas group protested the Public Affairs Committee's statement urging the Senate Judiciary Committee and the Senate to confirm Bork's controversial nomination and said the committee incorrectly presumed to speak for all Southern Baptists.

The TBCLC called the endorsement "tremendously divisive and destructive," and added that "such actions may also jeopardize the tax-exempt status of the Southern Baptist Convention."

The Texans called on the SBC's Executive Committee to review the Public Affairs Committee's actions.

Records show in July PTL lost $300,000

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — PTL filed a financial statement Friday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court, showing the television ministry and Christian theme park lost more than $300,000 in July, the second monthly loss in a row.

PTL, according to the statement, lost $307,580 in July. The ministry also lost money in June, following a profit in May, when there was an extensive fund-raising effort, PTL Controller Dana Caldwell said Friday.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, PTL's chairman, said in May that PTL had lost money every previous month since July 1986 except December, when it broke even.

On Friday, Falwell, appearing in a message taped at Lynchburg, Va., told viewers of the "PTL Club" show that the ministry needed $1.5 million in contributions by Labor Day to survive.

"Let's trust God for the miracle," Falwell said, referring to the effort this summer to raise $20 million by Sept. 7. Donations as of Friday totaled $18.5 million, he said.

"We've come too far to turn back now. We're going to make it in spite of everybody who says we can't. Our God is able."

Meanwhile, PTL lawyer Roy Grutman said Friday that an attempt by Jim Bakker's attorneys to have him removed as the ministry's bankruptcy attorney and have his fees returned to PTL was "a lot of hot air."

San Francisco attorney Melvin Belli's motion on Grutman was sent to the court Friday and probably will be filed on Monday, said Bakker's local associate, attorney Ryan Hovis of Rock Hill.

Belli claims Grutman, a New York City attorney, has improper conflicting interests because he has represented the personal affairs of Jerry Falwell and PTL chief executive officer Jerry Nims.

Hovis said Grutman should be disqualified because federal bankruptcy laws say attorneys must be disinterested parties.

The real motivation behind the motion is an attempt by Bakker to "disrupt this ministry or further the interest of his own ministry," Grutman said.

Bakker handed PTL over to Falwell after confessing in March to a tryst with a church secretary but later claimed the ministry had been stolen.

Burger praises coverage of Constitution celebration

Burger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retired Chief Justice Warren E. Burger on Friday praised the news media for the attention given to celebrating the bicentennial of the Constitution but pointed out that the document's authors preferred to work in secret.

"They boarded up the windows to keep you fellows out," Burger said at a breakfast meeting held by the American Newspaper Publishers Association Foundation.

Burger, who is chairman of the Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution, said he was pleased by the amount of coverage the observances have received.

"You couldn't pick up a paper in the last two months without seeing something on the Constitution," Burger said.

During his 17-year tenure on the court, Burger was noted for spurning the media, and on a couple of occasions reacted angrily to what he considered to be intrusions by television camera crews.

But he says his dealings with reporters have warmed since he left the court last year.

"Now that I am out of active service, I no longer shun the media, nor am I shunned by the media," Burger said.

He said, however, that the news media and the courts have an interest in protecting each other's independence.

"The rights of the media are broader than just running a business," Burger said. "If there weren't independent courts...to enforce the First Amendment, you'd be out of business."

The 200th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution will be marked Sept. 17 in Philadelphia.

On Sept. 16 in Washington, President Reagan, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Burger will lead a nationally televised ceremony on the steps of the Capitol.

Reagan will lead a Pledge of Allegiance in which 50 million to 60 million school children nationwide are expected to take part, Burger said.

Rebels rebuild political, military presence in San Salvador

By JAMES LeMOYNE
New York Times News Service

SAN SALVADOR — The Salvadoran guerrillas are practicing what they call "prolonged popular war" with a vengeance, as the country slides into its eighth year of civil conflict.

In a tactical shift, the Marxist-led rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front are rebuilding their political and military presence in the capital, moving to exploit government failures and severe economic strain.

The government of President Jose Napoleon Duarte, which had the rebels on the run two years ago, has now given them room to gain. It has failed to offer social and economic programs that work and, after three years of formal electoral democracy, the average Salvadoran feels worse off.

"This government does not realize that it is fighting a revolutionary war," a senior military officer said. "It has failed to apply the social and economic programs the country needs and it is losing its social base among workers and peasants."

Because Salvadorans are weary of killing and war, the rebels may well fail to find new supporters among disgruntled urban workers and slum dwellers.

But they clearly intend to try, saying they have returned to San Salvador to sharpen political and economic tensions. According to captured rebel documents, the guerrillas hope to spark a general strike before the American and Salvadoran elections in 1988 and 1989.

Such a strike seems highly unlikely but the documents, which both rebel and diplomatic sources say are authentic, outline step by step how the guerrillas intend to pursue it.

The strategy calls for the formation of front groups in labor unions, student organizations and human rights committees. These groups would serve as a base to seek wider support, while they hold strikes, sitins, embassy occupations and the street demonstrations that are already under way.

At the same time, the documents show, rebel military cells are infiltrating the capital to raise "the level of violence" and further weaken the government. Several bombings and a recent effective rebel-imposed ban on public transport two weeks ago attest to the rebel presence.

The rebels have been assisted by the lifting of the longstanding state of siege that permitted the police to detain suspects for two weeks and prohibited street demonstrations.

They have been assisted by the lifting of the longstanding state of siege that permitted the police to detain suspects for two weeks and prohibited street demonstrations.

Suspected rebels can now be detained for only three days, after which they are usually released. Government officials say the civil courts are afraid to convict suspected guerrillas, who are capable of retribution.

Nearly every week 200 to 500 rebel supporters demonstrate in the capital. In two recent incidents, the police wounded demonstrators wielding nail-studded clubs as they tried to break through police lines. The police also opened fire when demonstrators began destroying government vehicles. But the authorities' overall response has been cautious.

It is highly debatable whether the rebels' new tactics can be successful. People resent bans on public transport and attacks in the largely tranquil capital.

They also fear a possible return of government repression. Bystanders have criticized club-carrying students for being violent. The size of demonstrations is diminishing, not growing.

But unemployment and inflation are rising and the government is widely seen by Salvadorans as incompetent and corrupt.

At a time when Duarte's popularity seems to be lower than ever, the rebels are making their political presence felt. They have spray-painted most of the city's walls and the American Embassy with slogans. And in poorer neighborhoods, residents showed greater sympathy for demonstrators.

For their part, the guerrillas say they had no alternative but to return to the streets after four years in which, for most city dwellers, they had become little more than a faceless military force somewhere in the distant hills.

They are trying to recover the political base they had in 1980 before the government cracked down on them, a probably unattainable goal.

The rebels have also have been working for two years to perfect a new military strategy. They infiltrate army units and then launch precise and devastating attacks by specially trained forces, backed by highly accurate mortar fire.

Military officials say they believe the army is now thoroughly infiltrated by the rebels.

Meanwhile, the guerrillas have continued to use land mines and, more recently, remote-controlled mines to great effect. According to captured guerrilla documents and rebel deserters, most of the top commanders have been trained in Cuba and, in several cases, Vietnam.

After eight years of polishing the techniques of revolutionary war, they are unquestionably the most able practitioners of it in Latin America. With probably no more than 4,000 armed rebels and perhaps 30,000 committed supporters, they have been able to cripple this small country of more than six million people.

While they are effective in battle, the rebels have yet to show that they can be more than spoilers. But given government incompetence and their will to fight, it would be a mistake to underestimate their capacity.

Village caught between army, leftist rebels

By BRYNA BRENNAN

JUTIAPA, El Salvador (AP) — Hours after the last government troops broke camp and moved on, a handful of villagers chatted in the village square and speculated about how long it would take for the rebels to return.

"I think they'll be back by tonight," said Santa Ana Alberto Lopez, 62. "They come. The army comes. But in reality we are left unprotected."

Jutiapa is a lush village off a muddy dirt road surrounded by mountains about 40 miles northeast of San Salvador, the capital.

It is typical of many isolated hamlets that are occupied briefly by one side or the other in the 7-year-old civil war between leftist guerrillas and the U.S.-backed government.

The people, including the 300 who remain in Jutiapa, are bounced back and forth as unwilling hosts to troops and battles they simply want to go away.

The elected mayor moved out a few years ago when rebels went on a kidnapping spree. The insurgents bombed the municipal building and destroyed telephone and electric services as part of their economic sabotage plan and guerrilla campaign intended to prove the government can't protect the people.

The villagers say they don't care which side controls Jutiapa.

"We just want to live in peace," said Lopez, wiping his coffee-colored forehead with his hand and then stroking the white stubble of a beard. "This town used to be filled with people and was so pretty."

Several thousand villagers abandoned their pastel-painted adobe homes and corn fields in 1983, just after the guerrillas grouped as the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front took over Jutiapa.

"We all left," said Blanca Argelia Ramirez, 50. "I moved my family of nine to San Salvador. It was sad. We were lost there."

Mrs. Ramirez said the townspeople fled not because they feared the rebels, but because they were frightened by possible armed forces retaliation.

On Sept. 25, 1983, the air force bombed the nearby village of Tenancingo to end a guerrilla siege. About 75 civilians were killed, and the town was deserted.

"We thought the same would happen to us," Mrs. Ramirez said.

More than 400,000 Salvadorans remain displaced by the war, according to the government and armed forces.

Mrs. Ramirez returned to her village after two years but moved into another house.

"That one was ours," she said, pointing to a house down a rocky road and alongside a rushing stream. "We were afraid to stay down there because the other houses are empty and we don't know who can come at night."

Jutiapa has no police force or civil defense. There's always the chance the army and rebels will meet in their town and do battle.

"We close the shutters at 7," said Mrs. Ramirez, who wore a blue flowered dress and plastic thongs. "We figure we're all alone and we don't know who will come through."

Neither the rebels nor the army maintains a permanent presence in the town, but both pass by. The government troops recently stayed in the village for 15 days.

A day after they left, the afternoon stillness was broken by the sounds of government aircraft passing overhead.

The small group standing on the muddy, unkempt grass in the shaded plaza looked up indifferently.

"Sometimes when the troops move out they shoot at guerrillas on the ridges or they bomb Cinquera," Lopez said.

A woman who had moved from nearby Cinquera five years ago joined the conversation to say that her house had been bombed and the village destroyed by government forces.

The air force drops an average of six 500-pound bombs per day in the northern and eastern parts of the country, according to the U.S. Embassy.

"We haven't been bombed," Lopez said. "But it's not good here. We have to get our town back in order."

Dozens of homes away from the plaza were empty. Many walls were bullet-pocked or cracked. The whitewashed Roman Catholic Church, where the date 1890 is painted above the split wooden door, is closed.

Chance of rain in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

The chance for storms continues throughout today, forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport said Friday.

Today should be partly cloudy with less than a 20 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms. The high should be in the mid-80s. Winds should be from the southwest at 5-15 mph.

Tonight, the chance for evening thunderstorms increases to 20 percent. The low tonight should be in the low 60s.

Sunday skies should be fair by noon. The high Sunday is forecast in the mid 80s.

STATE

Heavy rain and thunderstorms plagued much of South Texas Friday, while light rain and isolated showers dampened the southwest portion of the state.

Most of the thunderstorms were in the lower part of the state from Laredo to Corpus Christi and southward into the lower Rio Grande Valley, the National Weather Service said.

Light rain and isolated showers stretched from the lower Pecos Valley eastward into parts of the Hill Country. The cold front that brought the cooler weather to the state weakened considerably as it neared the Gulf.

The forecast for North Texas calls for partly cloudy skies with scattered thunderstorms in the south today, spreading across the region by Sunday. Highs should be in the mid 80s to lower 90s, with lows in the 60s.

South Texas should be partly to mostly cloudy through Sunday with scattered thundershowers. Lows should be in the 60s and 70s, with highs in the 80s and 90s.

West Texas should be mostly fair in the Panhandle and far west through Sunday, but fair to partly cloudy in the Concho Valley, Permian Basin and Trans Pecos. Highs should be in the 80s to near 90, with lows in the 50s and 60s.

NATION

Much of the Southeast sweltered under temperatures that soared well into the 90s Friday, while heavy thunderstorms struck in and around the nation's capital and cool and rainy prevailed in the Northeast.

High heat and humidity spread from southeastern Virginia across the eastern Carolinas to southeastern Georgia and central Florida, with temperatures approaching the 95- to 100-degree mark, the National Weather Service said.

The heat and humidity also brought widely scattered thunderstorms to the Southeast and Gulf Coast.

Heavier rainfall and storms were reported farther north, from New England across the mid-Atlantic states to Kentucky and Tennessee.

Lee out of control in 'controlled' grid scrimmage

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

OZONA — Pluck a wishbone at Midland Lee and all your dreams come true.

At least, that was the feeling here Friday afternoon as the 1987 "Rebel Armada" was unveiled for the first time against outside competiton when Lee took on the Class 5A Del Rio Rams in a controlled scrimmage session.

And that wishbone rolled up an 8-2 touchdown margin when the two teams began their tugging.

They say you can prove anything by statistics, but Lee's statistics were impressive enough to signal some high score warnings across West Texas this fall.

Fact: Lee rolled out 604 yards of total offense among 11 backs and receivers.

Fact: The Rebs scored four times in their first 18 plays.

Fact: Lee — yes, Lee's run forever Rebels — used three quarterbacks to PASS for 215 yards and a touchdown. Lee threw 11 times, almost a season's worth. And they completed eight.

Fact: Lee runners had 389 yards rushing and were stopped on downs only twice in the entire scrimmage.

Fact: Dennis Sterling, who missed spring training with a bad back, accounted for 254 yards total offense with 115 rushing on 10 carries and five receptions for 139 yards. He scored three times. Forget the bad back question.

Fact: Fullback Waymond Goodley rushed for 97 yards on seven carries and scored three times.

Fact: The offensive line, a minor question mark heading into the season despite great size, erased most doubts. Charles Short was a standout.

Fact: Four of Lee's touchdowns came on plays of 74, 66, 50 and 21 yards. Long distance dialing.

"WELL, IT was quite a showing for the offense," said an elated Earl Miller after the scrimmage. "They put some numbers on the board. I don't think I saw more than four or five busted plays all day. Anytime you have as many backs and linemen returning as we do, you can do some things. We did some things today."

A year ago, Miller left the scrimmage with these same Rams wondering if his team could win a game, despite a 4-2 win.

"We're further along with the offense than we were last year and this is as far along as we've been in the kicking game since I can remember," said Miller. "I was really pleased with the conditioning our kids demonstrated. The humidity was really bad, but I didn't see anyone dragging it out there."

Lee had impressive showings from all three quarterbacks. Geoff Rich completed four-of-four passes for 85 yards. Dudley Jordan ran the option flawlessly, gaining 48 yards rushing on two carries and hit three-of-four passes for 115 yards, including a 74-yard TD pass to Sterling. Danny Elliott completed one-of-three passes for 15 yards and guided the second team offense to a touchdown.

Tight end Quincy White had a big day with two catches for 61 yards while Shawn Moore caught one for 15 yards.

Backup running back David Whiteside had 43 yards rushing and a TD.

Bulldogs hard to find

Scrimmage shifted from Pecos

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

With sports writers and a sprinkling of fans travelling to Pecos to watch the Friday sun set, the Midland High Bulldogs and Pecos Eagles were holding their version of the "Phantom Scrimmage" at Memorial Stadium.

Heavy rain in Pecos Thursday night, where winds got up to 80 m.p.h., left Pecos stadium unplayable for Friday night's scheduled 7 p.m. scrimmage between Pecos and MHS.

The decision was made to move the scrimmage back to Midland — and not at the scheduled 7 p.m. start, but for a 5:30 p.m. beginning. Some didn't get the word.

So it's going to be a surprise for a few MHS fans to learn of the Bulldogs' 2-0 scrimmage victory over Pecos. If it's secrecy the two teams wanted, secrecy is what they got. Maybe, they were trying to avoid the scouts — or the writers. If so, they did a good job of it, working that particular play to perfection.

AT ANY rate, high placed rumors indicate that the "Phantom Scrimmage" did take place and the Bulldogs are reporting a 2-0 win, although it can't be confirmed by the Fourth Estate, the blessed protector of the people's right to know.

The story goes that MHS and Pecos started the scrimmage, running 20 offensive plays each. Midland High got a six-yard touchdown run from Dewayne Roberts during that session while Pecos failed to score.

The two teams then ended the scrimmage with a one-half, game-type setup, without returning punts. Midland High got its other touchdown, a nine-yard run by Guy Giesecke, during that portion of the scrimmage and Pecos again failed to score.

Midland High head coach Doug McCutchen was pleased with the overall performance of his team.

"I think Pecos is going to be a good team in their district," said McCutchen. "We did some things well and some not so well.

"We looked good throwing and catching the ball, but our line blocking on pass plays broke down a few times and we need to improve there. For the most part, our execution looked good, but our running backs broke down a few times."

MCCUTCHEN USED both Jeff Somers and Russell Page at quarterback and liked what he saw. They threw the ball very well. We completed 8-of-12 passes and you have to be pleased with that."

Somers connected on three of four passes for 47 yards while Page hit on five of eight passes for 59 yards. Neither threw an interception. On the receiving end were Shawn Savas, Michael Ball, Herbie Cavanaugh and Max Reyes.

The shutout pleased McCutchen, but he was even more impressed with the five turnovers his defense produced. Linebacker Scot Mowles and safties Chris Johnson, Kevin Rychell and Donnie Doan each came up with interceptions and linebacker Clif Coleman recovered a fumble. MHS had only one fumble in the turnover catagory.

"Anytime you have a four-turnover margin over the other team, you have to be happy with the defense," said McCutchen.

Linebackers Coleman, Clyde Govan and Mowles, the heart of the MHS defense, drew praise for their play. That may be the best set of linebackers in the league. MHS coaches were also pleased with the play of defensive tackles Jeff Davis and Jeff Rashall.

"We were hoping that our defense would look good because we know that is where our strength is now, and I thought we were about were we should be at this point in time.

Cowboys, Raiders play Sunday

Associated Press

Unlike the old days, when the New York Giants and Jets played for the bragging rights to the Big Apple, their preseason meeting now tends to be just another exhibition game.

So a new issue has been trotted out for tonight's game at Giants Stadium, which will be nationally televised by NBC.

Zeke Mowatt's conduct on the basketball court.

The problem stems from the Giants-Jets basketball games last winter, which ended with a 3-3 split. Mowatt, who with Mark Bavaro gives the Giants the best tight end tandem in football, did not endear himself to the Jets with his flying elbows on the boards.

"I have nothing against the Giants," says tight end Rocky Klever of the Jets. "The only guy I have any problems with is Zeke Mowatt. He's a fine football player and a fine athlete but he's a jerk."

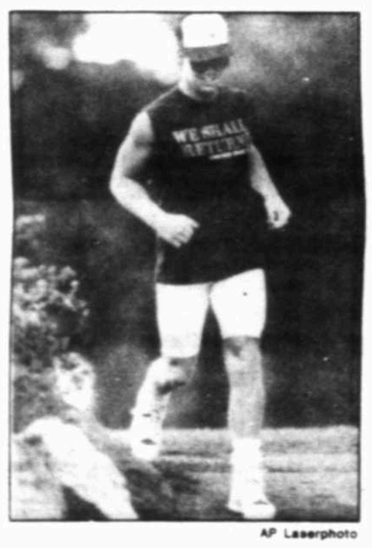

"Zeke knows we're going to be coming after him," says linebacker Kevin McArthur.

NEW ENGLAND is at Minnesota this afternoon on CBS-TV. The other night games are Washington at Tampa Bay; Miami at Philadelphia; Pittsburgh at New Orleans; Cincinnati at Green Bay; Cleveland at Atlanta; Buffalo at Kansas City; Houston at Indianapolis, and Denver is at the Los Angeles Rams.

The Los Angeles Raiders are at Dallas Sunday night in ESPN's game of the week and St. Louis is at Chicago in an ABC Monday night game.

THE GIANTS-Jets game is the 19th between the two and the ardor has cooled considerably since the first game, when the Jets were upholding the honor of the American Football League. The Giants lead the exhibition series 10-7-1 and the two teams, who meet again in December, are 2-2 in regular-season meetings.

Chicago Bears quarterback Jim McMahon, after off-season shoulder surgery, is back, but his future still depends on verdict of the doctor.

The 2-0 Giants enter the game with Coach Bill Parcells grumpy about the progress of his Super Bowl champs. He is particularly concerned with depth at cornerback and on the offensive line, where starting right tackle Karl Nelson is out with Hodgkin's disease, a form of lymph cancer.

"There are a lot of questions in my mind," Parcells said. "This is the time when you're putting the roster in shape. There are a lot of areas I'm not sure of."

Like the Giants, the 1-1 Jets will continue to be looking at people. One interesting duel is at punter, where 14-year veteran Dave Jennings, picked up from the Giants two years ago, is being challenged by free agent Tom O'Connor.

Jennings still seems to have the edge. Coming off a career-low 39.4-yard average last year, he has punted three times for an average 51.5 yards in the two exhibitions while O'Connor was also performing well — a 51-yard average on two kicks.

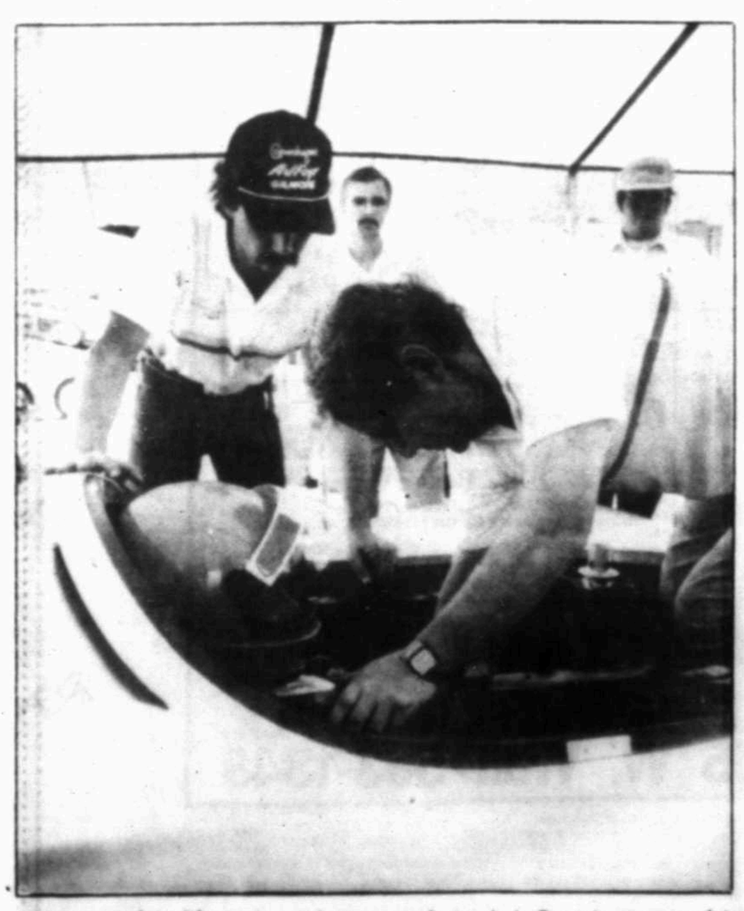

"HE CAME to camp in the best shape I've ever seen him in," special teams coach Larry Pasquale says of Jennings. "His stomach, arms, legs are tight. You can see it when he runs. And he's very professional and knowledgeable about his craft. He can correct problems instantly through the combination of discipline and years of experience."

New England, which lost its first two exhibition games, goes to Minnesota in an upbeat mood despite injuries that will keep five startrs, including quarterback Tony Eason and Pro Bowl linebacker Andre Tippett out of the game. Steve Grogan and Tom Ramsey will fill in for Eason.

"I think our football team is capable of winning the world's championship this year. It's what I really believe," Raymond Berry, the usually low-key coach, predicted this week.

In addition to Eason and Tippett, offensive tackle Steve Moore, center Steve Brock and strong safety Roland James will also miss Saturday's game.

But kicker Tony Franklin, who signed two weeks ago, will probably see his first action of the season and so will tight end Lin Dawson, who missed all of last year with a knee injury sustained in the 1986 Super Bowl loss to Chicago.

Immersed in life-saving tub-type cockpit, A.J. Foyt is strapped in for assault on USAC Closed-Track world record at Fort Stockton.

TED BATTLES

A.J.Foyt's 'Day at the office'

Battles

A line of cars followed by the media bus wended through the predawn darkness from I-10 out of Fort Stockton to the test track 15 miles out in the lonesome West Texas prairie.

This trip was supposed to be unnecessary. Only an arm twist promise of an interview with A.J. Foyt Wednesday night here, got me this far. And the plan was to depart early Thursday for Midland. Watching someone go after a speed record had all the appeal of watching grass grow in my front yard.

Foyt freely discussed his woes and suspension by CART at Wednesday and detailed the injustice of it all. As for the act of grabbing an official by the shirt, Foyt explained it came "after I'd raced all day and made less than those who had just gone a few laps. So I totaled one car and wound up with $14,000 prize money. You bet I was hacked."

However, it soon became evident that Foyt's troubles were refried beans compared to the mounting anticipation of his record attempt and became an engulfing wave.

The experimental cars to be raced at the Test Center could impact upon the auto industry in the future, testing the Quad 4, a revolutionary smaller concept in engines.

SO AS THE caravan awaited entrance gate security check approval, a plane buzzed the track in the distance, flying so low it disappeared behind the desert brush on the back stretch. It made several runs, presumably checking the course for A.J.'s record attempts later.

Oldsmobile wasn't even aware of the 7.123-mile Fort Stockton track three months before, but picked it over its own five-mile oval in Arizona and other tracks that would have been approved for a closed-course record attempts, such as Indy 500 and Talladega.

"We wouldn't be able to reach the speed we wanted on the 2 1/2 mile Indy track and Talladega is simply too rough. The Aerotech runs with as little as a half to an inch track clearance," Oldsmobile engineer Jim Dawson explained.

FORT STOCKTON has been around since 1956 to test tires for Firestone. It was redesigned in 1967 into a three-lane track with a "15 per cent elevation and 140 mph hands off capability and 90 mph on the bottom two lanes."

The straightaways are 1.5 each and the curves 3/4 mile radius. Foyt would run in the middle lane as he had done the day before in posting a 257.095 in the Indy-capable Aerotech to break the American record of 233 set in November and the world record of 251 set in Italy in 1979 on a track the same length as Fort Stockton.

The only elevation is 1.8 per cent grade on the back stretch just before the the turn.

THE MEDIA bus made a familiarization tour of the course as the first hint of dawn penetrated the heavy gray overcast. Someone asked if rabbits were a problem.

"Yes, not big, but they come out early in the morning and we get them to leave," which for the slow-thinkers explained the plane, which was parked ominously beside the track during the tests, "just in case."

A power outage at the track delayed the assault on the 251 mph record an hour until 9 a.m. and by then the wind was up.

THE PREPARATIONS for a run for this vehicle dreamed up by Oldsmobile's most imaginative minds were surprisingly elementary. The Aerotech's blemish free, smooth metal surface was being polished with windex and when someone asked if "that's really tape?" The reply was "Yes, it's duct tape. It's for for panel skirts added on at A.J.'s request in the belief that it would increase the speed. It did, dramatically."

The difference, if you understand these things, was "300 pounds of drag and 150 horse power," whatever that means.

AS PREPARATIONS neared their conclusion. Dawson remarked, "It's just another day at the office to A.J. He is talkative and relaxed, but once that helmet goes on and he climbs into the cockpit, notice the intensity in his eyes." No one starts a day at the office with that kind of intensity in his eyes.

Foyt, the four-time Indy winner, sinks down into the cockpit tub so deep that his shoulders are below the top edge. Quarters are so confined that until he is strapped in, they can't attach the steering wheel.

Okamoto builds three-shot edge

BUFORD, Ga. (AP) — Ayako Okamoto of Japan shot a 4-under-par 68 to build a three-shot lead Friday at the halfway mark of the $250,000 World Championship of Women's Golf.

Okamoto, winner of 11 events in her seven years on the LPGA Tour, had a 36-hole total of 6-under-par 138 on the 6,073-yard Pinelsle Resort golf course.

The Japanese star, fighting a summer cold, held her three-shot advantage over the season's leading money-winner, Betsy King, who shot a 70 for a 141 total in the battle for the richest first prize in LPGA history, $81,500.

"I was much more relaxed today," Okamoto said, adding that her cold was improving day-by-day.

Okamoto had six birdies and two bogeys, scoring three of her birdies on putts in the 10-15-foot range.

She bogeyed the par-3 No. 6 hole when she three-putted from 45 feet and ran into trouble again on the final hole, catching a trap with her tee shot and then landing over the green.

"A 3-stroke lead is very easy to catch up in 36 holes," Okamoto said.

First-round leader Kay Cockerill, the two-time U.S. Women's Amateur champion and the only amateur in the select field of 12, fell out of the lead with a double-bogey 5 on the 167-yard sixth hole.

The 22-year-old former UCLA player, who has announced plans to turn professional next week, had a 74 and was at 143.

"Today I didn't hit the ball as well," Cockerill said. "I hit only nine greens. I missed a few putts and I didn't have a lot of birdie opportunities."

Okamoto said playing in the final twosome with Cockerill made her more relaxed.

"I was interested in the lady who won two U.S. Amateurs," Okamoto said. "I feel she's one of the best players around."

Cockerill salvaged an otherwise ho-hum round with birdies on Nos. 16 and 17.

King had only one bogey, when she missed a 5-foot par putt on No. 9.

"I played better today, more solidly," King said. "I didn't scramble as much."

Mediate eagles into Provident lead

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Rocco Mediate made a pair of eagles Friday on his way to a 7-under-par 63 and a 1-stroke lead over Joey Sindelar after the second round of the $450,000 Provident Classic.

Mediate, who played his second straight bogey-free round on the 6,641-yard, par-70 Valleybrook Golf and Country Club course, finished with a 36-hole total of 11-under-par 129.

Sindelar, who matched the course's competitive record with a first-round 62, was 11-under after 15 holes but slid into second place as he sandwiched two bogeys around a birdie on his final three holes for a 68 and a 130 total.

Morris Hatalsky, who had a 3-under 67 Friday, was third at 131, two shots off the pace.

John Inman, Greg Powers and Andrew Magee were three strokes back at 132 and five players were four shots off the lead at 133.

Sigel gains U.S. Amateur quarterfinals

JUPITER, Fla. (AP) — Two-time champion Jay Sigel and qualifying medalist Scott Gump won second-and third-round matches Friday to reach the quarterfinals of the 87th U.S. Amateur Championship at Jupiter Hills Club.

Sigel, winner of this six-day tournament in 1982 and 1983, defeated U.S. Public Links champion Kevin Johnson 3 and 2 in the morning. He came back in the afternoon to eliminate David White of Conroe, Texas, 2-up on the par 72, 6,915-yard Hills course.

Webb, a graduate of Louisiana State University, defeated 17-year-old Harry Rudolph III — the youngest player left in the tournament — 1-up in 19 holes. A victory over Gump Saturday morning would put Webb in the semifinals, which would clinch a berth in next year's Masters.

Sigel's next opponent will be Eric Rebmann of Plantation, Fla. Rebmann beat Leslie Ellis of Tupelo, Miss., 4 and 3 before ousting Thomas Dyer of Melrose, Mass., 2 and 1.

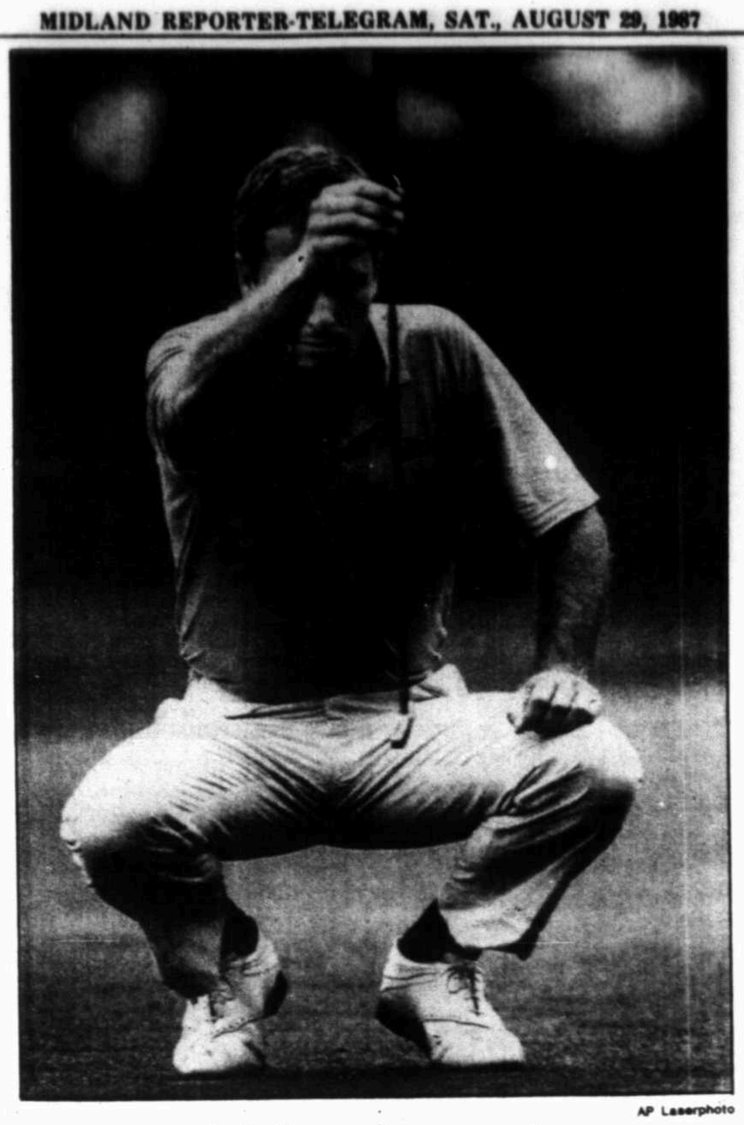

The winners of Saturday morning's quarterfinals will advance to the 18-hole semifinals in the afternoon. The two survivors will meet in a 36-hole finale that ABC will televise on a tape-delay basis Sunday.

Jeff Manson captures Junior PGA

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Jeff Manson fired a 1-under-par 71 Friday to win the boys' title at the PGA Junior Championship.

Vicki Goetze, 14, of Hull, Ga., completed her wire-to-wire victory in the girls' division with a 72 Friday.

Manson's subpar final round on the Champion course at PGA National gave the 17-year-old from Long Beach, Calif., a 72-hole total of 6-over 294. Thomas Hurley of Darien, Conn., had a three-stroke lead going into the final round, but skied to a 78 to finish second at 298.

Curtis Strange...lines up a putt.

12 1-putts makes for Strange leader

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Curtis Strange one-putted 12 times in a misty, drizzly rain Friday and shot a 4-under-par 66 to move into a two-stroke lead after the second round of the $800,000 World Series of Golf.

"Miserable conditions. It was nasty out there," Strange said after completing two trips over the long, tough Firestone Country Club course in 136, four under par.

"Any time I shoot 66 at Firestone, I've got to be putting good," said Strange, a two-time winner this season.

Strange took the lead with a 20-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole and preserved it with a 15-footer to save par after driving into the trees on the 18th.

Bobby Wadkins, three shots ahead of the field after a 64 in the first round, slipped 10 shots higher and did not make a birdie in a 74 that dropped him into a three-way tie for second at 138.

Wadkins, playing well behind Strange, surrendered a share of the lead with bogeys on two of the last four holes.

"Under the conditions out there today, I would have considered 70 a very good round today," Wadkins said.

"I just didn't play nearly as well as I did yesterday and I made no putts."

Wadkins shared second with Paul Azinger, who had his second straight 69, and Fred Wadsworth, who chipped in twice on the way to a 67.

Greg Norman of Australia got into position with a 20-foot birdie putt on the 17th and was tied at 139 with Jay Haas and defending champion Dan Pohl.

Haas also shot a 66, while Pohl shot 67 and Norman had a 69 in the chilly, steady drizzle that left the elite field of 43 soaked.

Strange holed a pair of birdie putts from about 15 feet on the front side, made another from 4-5 feet and capped a 31

Skins Cooke wants new, domed stadium

WASHINGTON (AP) — Redskins owner Jack Kent Cooke said Friday that he is anxious to move his team out of RFK Stadium and into a domed stadium that he hopes can one day host the Olympics as well as the Super Bowl.

Washington has sold out RFK Stadium for every Redskins game since 1966. But the facility, which was originally built to house a baseball team, seats only slightly more than 55,000.

Only St. Louis and Houston play in smaller stadiums, and the Redskins have more than 17,000 people on a waiting list for season tickets.

"The Redskins — believe it or not and you must believe it — do not make money," Cooke said. "What's worse, they show no sign of making money. Frankly, I would shout 'hallelujah' every hour on the hour if the Redskins would break even. But they can do it only with a modern stadium not dissimilar to the Silverdome in Michigan."

Cooke, speaking at the annual Redskins "Welcome Home" luncheon, promised he would keep the team in the vicinity of the nation's capital.

"I am not a carpetbagger and I am not a gypsy," Cooke said.

Cooke said he yearns for a "modern, first-class, 75,000 domed stadium designed specifically for football."

"My imagination is not running wild when I tell you such a stadium will inevitably make us eligible for hosting the Olympics, the Pan Am games, our own college bowl game and even, one day, the Super Bowl," he said.

Top trio at Elkhart

ELKHART LAKE, Wis. (AP) — Defending champion Emerson Fittipaldi, PPG Cup point leader Bobby Rahal and career road race win leader Mario Andretti head the field for Sunday's $450,000 LivingwellProvimi 200-mile road race at Road America.

"I think it's the greatest road racing circuit in the country," said Rahal, who has not won in five previous races at Road America. "It's easy to go quick but tough to go real fast."

Rahal's lead is only 14 points over Michael Andretti, who calls the course "my favorite road course and I've always said it is one of my favorite tracks." The road course stretches four miles.

Rahal is the defending national points champion and was the pole sitter at Road America last year, but Fittipaldi won the rain-postponed race. The finals were not held until almost two weeks after the race began and Fittipaldi, still battling cold and wet conditions, went on to defeat Michael Andretti by .33 seconds. Rick Mears took third.

Mario Andretti, who separated a shoulder Aug. 16 in the Quaker State 500 at Pocono Raceway, will be trying for his 20th road race victory. He also is the career road course leader in poles with 23 and earnings with $1,297,896.

Orange takes pledge

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Acting on a suggestion by head coach Dick MacPherson, the Syracuse University football team has taken a no-alcohol pledge for the 1987 season.

The policy, the first of its kind under a MacPherson-coached team, will be enforced by tri-captains Don McPherson, Ted Gregory and Paul Frase.

But, said McPherson, the starting quarterback, it will basically be up to each individual to comply with the new guidelines.

Syracuse finished 5-6 last year after three successive winning seasons and a bowl appearance in 1985.

Lendl, Cash upset

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Top-seeded Ivan Lendl and third-seeded Pat Cash of Australia, the Wimbledon champion, were upset victims in the quarterfinals of the $150,000 Hamlet Challenge Cup Friday, as rain forced matches indoors for the second straight day.

Lendl, the world's top-ranked player, was beaten by eighth-seeded David Pate of Las Vegas, Nev., 6-3, 6-7 (7-9), 7-6 (7-3). It was only his sixth loss of the year.

Cash, who has struggled after beating Lendl in the Wimbledon final, was eliminated by unseeded Jonas B. Svensson of Sweden 6-7 (7-9), 6-2, 7-5.

The matches were moved indoors to the Port Washington Tennis Academy by the host Hamlet East facility because of rain.

Pruett top qualifier

ELKHART LAKE, Wis. (AP) — Scott Pruett, of Roseville, Calif., driving a Roush Racing Merkur XR4Ti, was the top Bendix Trans-Am qualifier here Friday and is on the pole for Saturday's 100-mile race at Road America.

Pruett, who has won the pole position six times this season, averaged 106.870 mph on the damp track, which slowed qualifying significantly.

Eunice wins, 12-6

EUNICE (AP) — Senior halfback Shay Boatman scored two touchdowns and led the Eunice Cardinals to a 12-6 victory over Capitan in a 1987 New Mexico high school football opener here Friday night.

The victory snapped a 13-game losing streak for Eunice, which was 0-10 last year and had lost its last three games of the 1985 season.

Boatman scored on runs of 34 and 19 yards and finished with 141 yards rushing on 15 carries.

Sierra home run keys Ranger win

Associated Press

DETROIT — Ruben Sierra's two-run homer keyed a four-run eighth inning as the Texas Rangers rallied to beat the Detroit Tigers 5-3 Friday night.

The Rangers trailed 3-1 when Oddibe McDowell, leading off the eighth, reached on an error by Detroit first baseman Dave Bergman and scored on Sierra's 27th home run, a shot into the left field seats on a 2-1 pitch from Jack Morris, 15-7.

Pete Incaviglia followed with a single and scored on a go-ahead double to the center field fence by Pete O'Brien. O'Brien moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on a single by Larry Parrish.

Morris failed in a bid for his fourth consecutive win, but the Tigers maintained a narrow lead over Toronto in the American League East.

Mitch Williams, 7-3, who relieved Jeff Russell in the sixth, picked up the win with two innings of relief. Dale Mohorcic pitched two hitless innings for his 16th save.

Athletics 3, Blue Jays 2

TORONTO — Dave Stewart, 18-9, allowed six hits in 7 2-3 innings to become the major leagues' first 18-game winner with his 11th win in his last 13 decisions.

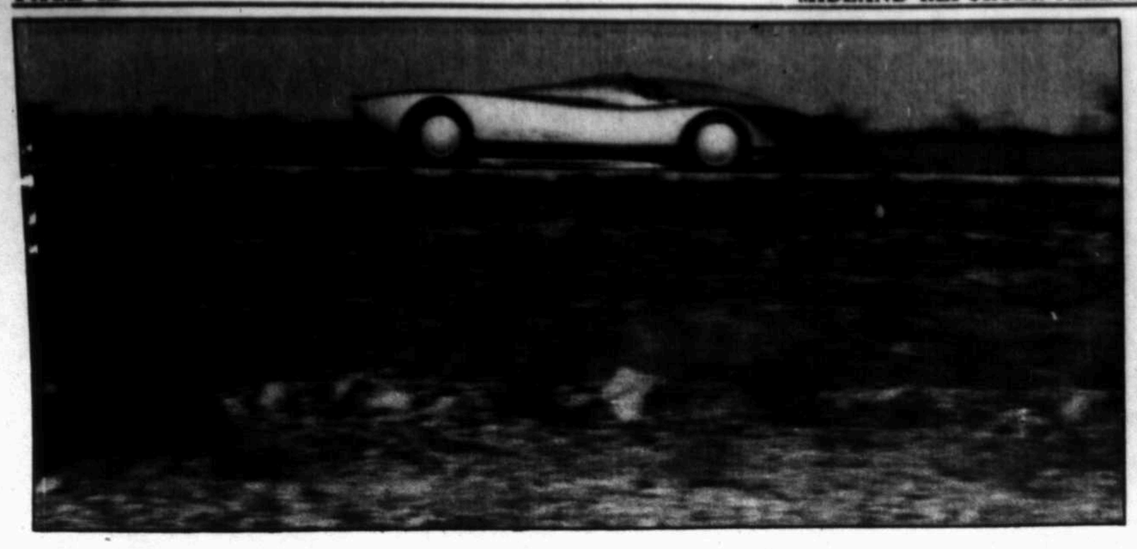

Dennis Eckersley got the last four outs for his 10th save.

Dave Stieb, 13-7, was the loser despite pitching his third complete game.

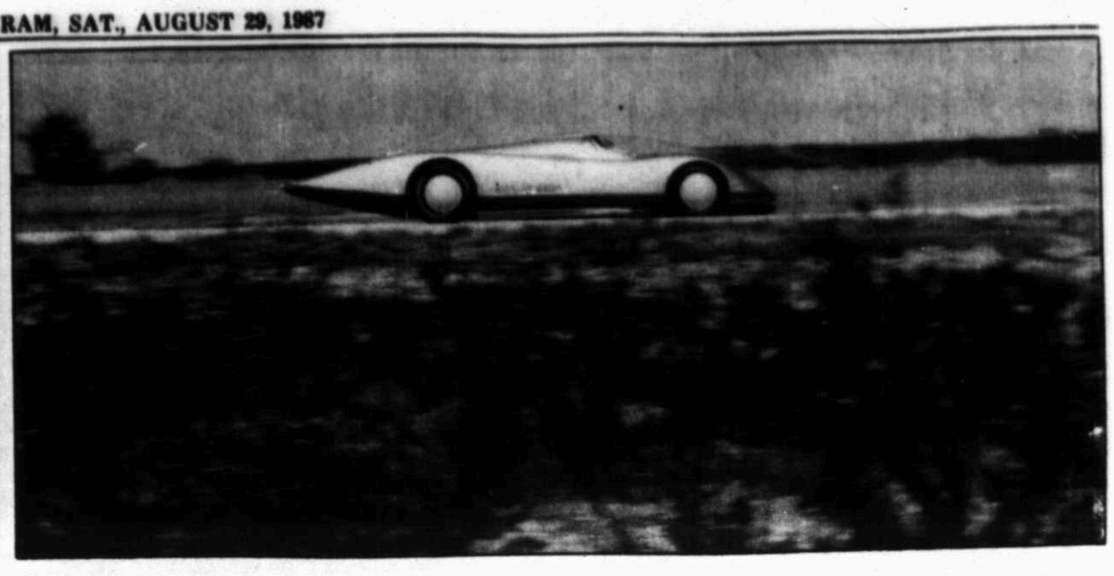

Brewers 1, Twins 0

MILWAUKEE — Chris Bosio pitched a two-hitter for his first victory in a month and Greg Brock drove in the game's only run with a double.

Greg Gagne

A.J. Foyt is a blur on the horizon as he sets a record in the Aerotech "Indy" Quad 4 Oldsmobile with a speed of 257.195 mph.

The faster version of the Aerotech Quad 4 sets a Flying Mile world mark of 267.399 mph at Fort Stockton Test Center.

FOYT

Although in radio contact with the pit, Foyt never takes his eyes off the road to look at the dash board. They are trying to devise to solve this problem.

Dawson said, "The soles of his sneaks are so thin he can feel a dime if he walks on it."

THE AEROTECH Indy holds 40 gallons of fuel. It can make about four laps around the 7.123 mile oval, so the record try usually comes on the third or fourth circuit.

There are nine lookout points around the track and 10-15 pick up trucks with firefighting capabilities in addition to the heavy engines and ambulances....and the airplane. It's enough to make a day-at-the-office a frightening experience even for a bystander.

It doesn't help when they start the engine and slide the plexiglas over the cockpit. It takes six guys to push this sleek bullet out on the track and it sputters and coughs like a taxiing World War I Spad. For the first half mile it sounds like a Spad about to head into a smoking tailspin. This is what's going to set a new world speed record?

The crosswind on the backstretch grade forces Foyt to abort after the third lap because of fuel fumes in the cockpit that blur his vision, but he has his record, 257.195, not what he wanted, but the Oldsmobile officials are satisfied.

"We have perfect weather at 7:30 a.m. every morning, so we schedule the test for that hour," Foyt shakes his head, "And look what happens."

NOW preparations begin to make ready the 1.9 liter Aerotech for an assault on the Flying Mile record. This is more difficult, since the car runs the mile clockwise and counter-clockwise and the times averaged out. What's more, both runs have to be made within an hour.

Foyt considers this the more difficult. For one thing he comes from out of the rim into the test mile and, for another, it's from the wrong direction.

By now the wind had subsided, the sun was out and the small army of witnesses had shed their jackets.

The 1.9 liter Aerotech holds 25 gallons of gas and uses 1.2 to the mile. Its longer tail eliminates Indianapolis as a test site.

Foyt reached for his "Brain Bucket" as preparations neared completion and climbed into the life-saving tub, the reason driver can walk away from the debris of a totally disintegrated car.

Attendants changed the tires and completed the taping job and the immediate worry was that they would run out of tape. Unbelievable...250 mph and held together by tape.

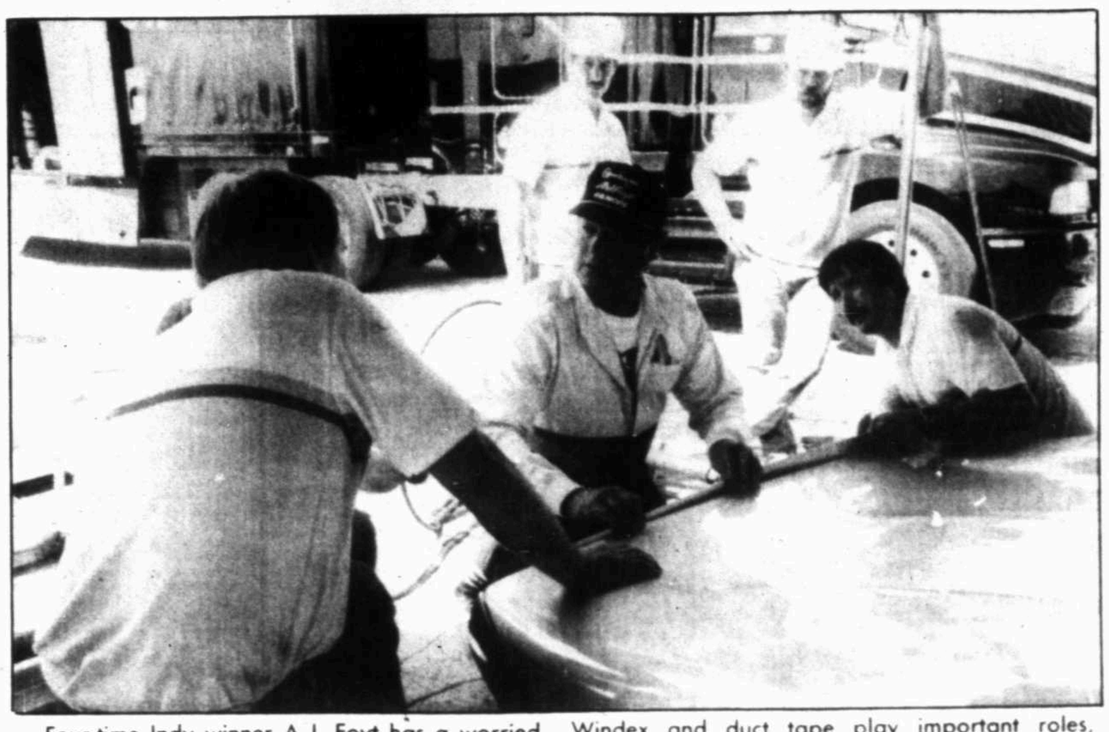

A speculative article in the 1950s predicted that to attain speeds of 250 miles in the future, tires would have to be five inches wide. They are closer to 16 inches.

THE 278 from the left put Foyt in position for an impressive record in the Flying Mile if the pit crew could ready the car for the return run within an hour.

Foyt, despite the fact that he was uncomfortable going the wrong way, came back in "257-and-change" for a record 267.399. That erased a record of 254.578 for 2 liter engines by Phil Hill at Bonneville, a record that had stood since 1959.

Like watching my lawn grow? Well, maybe that appraisal should be amended somewhat. Still, look at it this way. Even if it were, I wouldn't have to cut it.

Coody ties Crampton for Senior lead

JEREMY RANCH, Utah (AP) — Senior Tour rookie Charles Coody and Bruce Crampton shot 3-under-par 69s Friday to tie for the first-round lead of the $300,000 PGA Senior Showdown Classic.

Coody, competing in his sixth senior event since turning 50 in July, covered the back nine in 3-under-par 33, despite a stiff afternoon wind on the par-72, 6,947-yard Jeremy Ranch course in the mountains east of Salt Lake City.

Coody had an eagle-3 and two birdies on his final seven holes after playing the first 11 at even-par.

Crampton, 51, winner of four Senior Tour tournaments this year and seven events in 1986 when he joined the over-50 circuit, was 3-under after five holes and matched par the rest of the way.

Al Chandler, Bill Collins and Don Massengale were one stroke back at 70, with six players at 71.

Coody's best finish in his first five senior events was a tie for 21st at the Senior Classic in Concord, Mass. three weeks ago. Coody, who won the 1971 Masters and two other PGA Tour events in the 1960s, seemed to play better as the wind blew stronger.

"In a wind like that, the main place it bothers be is chipping and putting," said Coody, who made his eagle on the par-5, 530-yard 13th hole with a driver and three-wood combination, leaving the approach six inches from the pin.

Crampton, who shot a 7-under par 65 in a pro-am event Thursday, said the wind affected him on the back nine.

"When you are 3-under after four holes, you have visions of shooting a better round," said Crampton, whose $454,299 in winnings last year was tops on the Senior Tour.

Chi Chi Rodriguez, winner of seven Senior Tour events this year and the circuit's leading money winner, was in contention for the lead through 15 holes, but then he took a triple-bogey-8 on the par-5, 508-yard 15th hole, landing two shots in a water hazard. He finished with a 3-over 75.

The Showdown Classic was a regular and senior best-ball event for the past four years. This is the first year since 1982 it has been an all-senior tournament.

Colts, Oilers tangle tonight

Both without top draft picks

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — With two exhibition games left before the start of the 1987 NFL regular season, the Indianapolis Colts and Houston Oilers are without their top draft picks and seeking some answers as the final cuts approach.

The first two pre-season games were used in part to look at a lot of borderline players. Now, it's time to start thinking about the final roster, says Colts' coach Ron Meyer, who expects to play only those who are likely to make the team.

The Oilers and Colts play in the Hoosier Dome on tonight. Neither the Colts' Cornelius Bennett, a linebacker who was the second player picked in the NFL draft last spring, nor the Oilers' Alonzo Highsmith, a fullback and the third player taken in the draft, has signed a contract.

"WE'RE REALLY walking a tightrope, wanting to protect our best players (from pre-season injury), yet wanting to win because the community wants a victory," said Meyer, starting his first full season as the Colts' coach.

Indianapolis, 1-1 in exhibition games, is coming off a 37-13 loss at Minnesota. Houston, also 1-1, edged New Orleans 16-13.

"Some areas I thought we'd be further ahead," said Meyer, referring to the Colts' passing game — both offensively and defensively — as the biggest questions. Starting quarterback Gary Hogeboom has hit only eight of 23 attempts for 69 yards and has been sacked four times for losses of 38 yards in the first two games.

On defense, the Colts have allowed an average of 252 passing yards a game.

"Houston is a much improved team. They're a very pressing team and very aggressive. They try to make the big play defensively," said Meyer.

IN HOUSTON'S victory over New Orleans, the Oilers held the Saints to just 25 rushing yards on 18 attempts.

"They just got after them, like a young Chicago Bears' team I'm telling you, they're impressive," said Meyer. "This will be a much more severe test defensively than Minnesota was."

Houston quarterback Warren Moon played only two long series last week but is expected to go longer against the Colts. Rookie Cody Carlson, a third-round draft pick, has hit 15 of 30 attempts for 121 yards so far.

"We still have some things we need to accomplish," says Houston Coach Jerry Glanville.

"We made enough mistakes (we saw) on film that there are things for us to work on and correct."

The Houston ground game produced 217 yards against New Orleans, with running backs Mike Rozier and Allen Pinkett leading the way. Pinkett, with 87 yards, is the top rusher through two exhibition games.

Ronas Ryon looms as favorite

From Staff Reports

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. — Ruidoso Downs hosts the first million-dollar race of the 1987 series on Sunday when last year's All American Futurity winner Ronas Ryon goes up against the quick filly Sompinlikaglass.

The winner of the 440-yard showdown earns more than $360,000. Gates open at 11 a.m. MST.

Ronas Ryon is considered to be one of the fastest quarter horses in the nation and will be favored.

The Windy Ryon colt is among the richest horses in the history of the sport having earned $1.37 million in two years.

The Arnold Simmons trainee opened his 3-year-old campaign by winning the Graham Farms Derby at Val Verde April 12. After posting a nose verdict in Kansas Derby trials in Ruidso debut, Lil Bit Shiney took a whisker win over the colt in the finals.

Ronas Ryon then won Rainbow Derby consolation and suffered his second defeat in seven appearances to Sompinlikaglass in trials for the All American Derby on Aug. 19.

Sompinlikaglass qualified for the West Texas Derby at Sunland Park this spring, where she could manage no better than sixth.

The filly won five of 11 races last year to earn $224,000 for Sen. J.E. Jumonville of Ventress, Louisiana. She capped her freshman campaign winning the Whataburger Futurity at Bandera Downs after finishing last to Ronas Ryon in the All American Futurity.

The remaining field for the 1987 All American Derby includes Hooked On Cash, Irish Moon Lass, Jet Go Chick, Unies Rocket, Maricaibo, Dashin Linda, Some Super Jet and Ruler Oak.

49ers' Walsh fears New Orleans may break out

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — One of these seasons, the New Orleans Saints might reach the National Football League playoffs and make San Francisco 49ers Coach Bill Walsh look good.

"It seems like I say this every year, but I think New Orleans is on the verge of breaking out and getting into the playoffs. They've been flirting with it every year," Walsh said in a pre-season look at the 49ers' opponents in the National Football Conference's Western Division.

"The Atlanta Falcons have a fine young team, but their quarterback has to become established," Walsh added, referring to 25-year-old David Archer.

Those two teams are trying to break into what has been a California monopoly in the division.

Walsh is heading into his ninth season with the 49ers, who won their fourth NFC West title in the last six seasons by finishing 10-5-1 last year and edging the Los Angeles Rams, 10-6. The Rams have one division title and four runner-up finishes so far in the 1980s.

Atlanta last made the playoffs in 1982, the strike-shortened season, and hasn't had a winning season since. Last year's Falcons went 7-8-1, and an off-season change brought Marion Campbell back for his second tour as head coach.

The Saints, in their first season under Coach Jim Mora, were 6-5 at one point last year, then faded out of the division race and finished 7-9. In 20 NFL seasons, Saints have never posted a winning record or made the playoffs.

What the Saints have going for them include a highly regarded defensive line and linebacking unit; Rueben Mayes, who rushed for 1,353 yard as a rookie and their superb placekicker, Morten Anderson.

NFC West

David Wilson and Bobby Hebert again are competing for the starting quarterback job. The two passers combined for 12 touchdowns and were intercepted 25 times.

Atlanta's Archer was another of the many NFL quarterbacks injured during the 1986 season. He helped the Falcons to a 5-1 start, but the team was 5-5-1 when he suffered a shoulder injury in November, and backup Turk Schonert took over. The Falcons' strong rushing attack is led by Gerald Riggs, who has gone over 1,000 yards three straight seasons.

Defensively, Atlanta ranked in the middle of the NFL pack statistically last year.

Coach John Robinson of the Rams has a new offensive coordinator, Ernie Zampese, formerly with the San Diego Chargers. Zampese will oversee the annual challenge of giving the team a passing offense to adequately complement NFL rushing champion Eric Dickerson. The Rams' passing offense ranked dead last in the NFL last season.

Jim Everett became the Rams' starting quarterback late in his rookie season and is the unchallenged at quarterback.

"He's very competitive. He's very confident," Zampese says of the 6-foot-5 passer from Purdue who threw for 1,018 yards and eight TDs as a rookie.

Everett and the Rams should have the advantage of full-time play from Henry Ellard, the wide receiver who missed the early part of last season because of a contract holdout. Ellard caught 34 passes for 447 yards in nine games last season, after gaining 811 yards on receptions in 1985.

The Los Angeles offensive line is one of the league's strongest and most experienced. The defense, which ranked fourth in the NFC last year, includes longtime performers such as safety Nolan Cromwell, linemen Reggie Doss and Gary Jeter, and linebacker Carl Ekern, all with at least 10 seasons of experience.

San Francisco's veteran players include several who starred on the Super Bowl championship teams of 1981 and 1984. Quarterback Joe Montana heads that list.

But it's unlikely that Walsh envisioned more than a year or two of backup duty for Steve Young when he traded with Tampa Bay for the 25-year-old quarterback, former Brigham Young All-American and USFL player. Young was a starter most of last season and took plenty of lumps, being sacked 47 times and intercepted 13 times while throwing for 2,282 yards and eight TDs.

Montana had back surgery in September and played only eight regular season games last year, yet passed for 2,236 yards.

Keith Fahnhorst, the 35-year-old offensive tackle, center Fred Quillan, tight end Russ Francis and wide receiver Dwight Clark are among veterans nearing the end of their careers.

The 49ers' most talented young players include wide receiver Jerry Rice, the 1986 league leader in receiving yardage with 1,570, fullback Roger Craig, and defensive linemen Michael Carter and Charles Haley. Others expected to become starters soon include three rookies, running back Terrence Flagler from Clemson and offensive linemen Harris Barton of North Carolina and Jeff Bregel of Southern Cal.

Frosh female tailback vows to make grade

SAN MARCOS, Calif. (AP) — Stefanie Benway is 5 feet 5½ inches tall and weighs 125 pounds, but the 14-year-old girl says she's got what it takes to play tailback for her high school's freshman football team.

"There are going to be some people who want me to quit, but that's just gonna make me hit back all the harder," Benway said. "I'm pretty fast and I'm a lot stronger after working with weights this summer."

Head coach Bruce Storrs said he has no problem with a girl trying out for his freshman football team at San Marcos High School.

"She'll be treated just like every other player," he said. "She's going to have to hit and be hit."

"I know I'm taking a risk," Benway told The Vista Press newspaper this week. "I could get hurt. I could break an arm or something. But I love football."

Benway hopes to be her team's starting tailback, and said she may end up playing against her former boyfriend, who is aiming to be starting quarterback at Vista High School, the school she attended before moving to San Marcos.

"My boyfriend — well, he's my ex-boyfriend now — always told me I could do anything I wanted to do," she said. "Well, I want to play football. That's not why we broke up. And it's not because I'm going out for football at San Marcos. He encouraged that."

Benway transferred schools because her parents divorced and she went to live with guardians in San Marcos. She has never played organized football, but held her own in pickup games against boys. She decided to try out for the freshman football team after seeing a notice in the school bulletin about a team meeting.

Taiwan back in LL finals

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Wang Chih-Kwou hit an eighth-inning home run to break a scoreless tie and threw a two-hitter as Hua Lian, Taiwan, defeated Moca, Dominican Republic 4-0 Friday to earn a spot in the Little League World Series against a team from California.

Fu Wei-Yuan added a run-scoring double in the eighth, and Chu Shi-Chag followed with a two-run homer in a game postponed Thursday evening after seven innings because of darkness.

Hua Lian was scheduled to play Irvine, Calif., representing the United States, today at 3 p.m. in a nationally televised championship game.

Taiwanese teams have a 38-2 record in World Series play and have won six of the last 10 Little League championships.

Reeves now knows how good his Broncos are

Associated Press

The Denver Broncos' trip to the Super Bowl last season finally gave Coach Dan Reeves the barometric reading he wanted.

"In the first few years I was here, we were never sure how good a football team we were," Reeves said. "But last season we made it to the final game. Now we know we're not that far away from being world champions."

On the other hand, the rest of the AFC West isn't that far away from the Broncos.

In fact, the Seattle Seahawks, 10-6 last year, are favored to unseat the Broncos, 11-5, as division champions. The Raiders, with perhaps the division's best defense, have improved on offense and Kansas City is coming off its first playoff season in 15 years.

San Diego continues to rebuild under Coach Al Saunders, who succeeded Don Coryell at midseason last year.

The biggest change in the Broncos will be new faces on defense.

Another worry was the tendency of the Broncos' undersized defense to wear down late in the year.

Steve Sewell, 6-foot-3 and 210 pounds, may wind up as the fullback, but he's hardly the pile-mover Reeves covets. Although Simon Fletcher (6-5, 245) and Bruce Klosterman (6-4, 225) will be tried at strongside linebacker, the Broncos likely will open the season with Jim Ryan, 215, at the position.

The draft did produce some help, however.

Top pick Ricky Nattiel, a speedy wide receiver and kick returner from Florida, has caught everything thrown his way, and he gives quarterback John Elway another deep threat to go with Vance Johnson and Mark Jackson.

Seattle ended 1986 as one of the NFL's best teams, winning its last five games by an average 33-15 margin.

Seahawk fortunes rose and fell with Jekyll-Hyde quarterback Dave Krieg. In the last five games, he completed 66 percent of his passes for 1,288 yards, 11 touchdowns with just one interception.

When Krieg was bad, he was awful, and was benched twice by Coach Chuck Knox.

When Krieg is on, the Seahawks have an effective balanced offense. His favorite target is Steve Largent, who enters his 12th season as the NFL's No. 2 career receiver with 694 catches. The elusive Curt Warner led the AFC in rushing last year with 1,481 yards.

Seattle's defense slumped to 22nd in the league in 1986, and Knox seemed to target the linebacking corps as the culprit. He drafted Tony Woods and Dave Wyman with his first two picks and obtained Brian Bosworth in the supplemental draft.

The Raiders are coming off an 8-8 season, only their second season in 22 years without a winning record. Owner Al Davis doesn't tolerate mediocrity, and in the offseason he moved.

Kansas City compiled a 10-6 record and made the playoffs for the first time since 1971, then abruptly fired unpopular Coach John Mackovic. Special teams coach Frank Gansz, whose aggressive unit helped carry the Chiefs into the wild-card playoff game, was named head coach.

Gansz inherited a solid defense with perhaps the NFL's best secondary.

Kansas City's offense was the worst in the NFL last season. The running game ranked next-to-last.

Meadowlands declared environmentally safe

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The Meadowlands sports complex is environmentally safe and testing the area probably will not turn up any links to cancer, the chairman of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority said Friday.

Authority Chairman Jon F. Hanson announced at a news conference that the sports authority plans to spend at least $50,000 to conduct environmental tests around the northern New Jersey complex to allay fears that people are exposed to health hazards.

The safety of the complex, which was built on a former landfill, has been under scrutiny for the past week since it was revealed that New York Giants tackle Karl Nelson has become the fourth member of the team to get cancer in the past 7½ years.

"We're not going to tell the (environmental) experts what to do," said Hanson. "We're going to say, 'Here is the concern we have and tell us what you find.' We believe we're in great shape. We've been monitoring the air and water since we've been in existence."

The Meadowlands conducts quarterly tests of air and water quality at the sports complex and those tests never have turned up any contaminents that might pose health problems, said Robert E. Mulcahy, president of the sports authority. Mulcahy will direct the study.

Hanson said the authority has not decided who will conduct the tests, but that he preferred they be done by experts from the private sector. He said the authority would release the results as soon as possible.

The studies may include voluntary testing of employees, depending upon the recommendations of the experts, Hanson said.

"My expectations are that the conclusions will be that our environment here is as good an any environment can be," Hanson said. "I don't expect there will be any word that there is a problem with cancer."

Mulcahy said that none of the 100 people employed at Giants Stadium has been diagnosed as having cancer. He said he planned to work with the tenants to assure they are informed of every step and have the opportunity to review the results.

Giants defensive back Kenny Hill said he welcomed the test.

"I think it's warranted if only to ease the minds of the people who work here every day," Hill said. "Even if the authority doesn't feel it's a hazard, they're doing it to alleviate negative stuff people have been writing."

Besides Giants Stadium, the Meadowlands sports complex also houses the Meadowlands Racetrack and the Brendan Byrne Arena.

JIM MURRAY

Ex-cager Erickson answer to a Walter Mitty's prayer

Murray

Every man has got a little Walter Mitty in him.

I got a lot. I see myself in the British Open, hitting these incredible long shots hole after hole, gaining on the leader until I come to the 18th needing a 3 to win and 4 to tie. It's a long par-5 over water and a raging gale is blowing in my face as I face a 255-yard second shot, all carry, to this elevated, fiendishly guarded small green.

"Give me the driver!" I command my caddy.

He blanches. "You'll never get there with that!" he pleads. "Take the 4-iron and lay up!"

My lips curl in unconcealed contempt. "Hah!" I snort. "Murrays never lay up! Murrays go for it! Better to die on you feet than live on your knees! Give it here!"

I snatch the driver from his trembling hands and slash the ball in this long gorgeous trajectory that is the envy of the tour and the ball soars high and true, over the raging seas, over the sand and lands majestically on the green where it takes one hop and sucks up and stops two feet from the hole.

THE CROWD goes wild and my caddy, a Yank like me, gets tears in his eyes and says, "God bless you, Jim, you've brought the cup back to America! It's ticker tape on Broadway for us."

And, then, there'd be the dream where I was on the dance floor doing these incredibly complex and beautiful tango steps with a girl wearing a comb in her hair and the whole ballroom would stop and watch and someone would sigh, "Look at those moves! Nobody since Valentino could tango like him!"

Or, it'd be the bottom of the ninth in the World Series and the home team would have the bases loaded, two out, and us one run ahead and the skip would call me in from the bullpen and ask anxiously, "Do you think you can get him?"

I'd snarl, "Are you kidding! That's only Musial up there. Gimme the damn ball! He won't even hear these three pitches!"

I BRING this up because Keith Erickson, the ex-basketballer, has come up with an idea that should bring joy to the Mitty in all of us.

It's a cassette of a "Dream Game" in which you are the star. It's you who's bringing the ball up-court, who is faking Larry Bird into the popcorn machine or laying up over Robert Parrish or dribbling around Dennis Johnson at the top of the key. Or maybe you're going over from the one-yard line against the Chicago Bears or running back the winning punt in the Super Bowl. Whatever your private fantasy is, the cassette fulfills it.

We're living in an era of break-neck wish-fulfillment anyway. Baseball offers "fantasy camps" in which you can, for a fee, line up alongside Duke Snider or Maury Wills for a week, bat against Sandy Koufax. Presumably, somebody will come along with an idea to let you climb in the ring with Muhammad Ali for an afternoon or maybe try to return Rod Laver's forehands for a set.

KEITH Erickson is probably best known to the world at large as the guy who has made a career out of saying, "You're right again, Chick," on camera or over the air at Laker games.

All his life, Keith has been Tonto.

He was not the best basketball player ever to come out of UCLA, he was not the best baseball player, he was not the best volleyball player or tennis player. But if you wanted one man for four sports, Keith Erickson was your man, the best that school has had since Jackie Robinson.

He was on that famous Bruin team that went 30-0 and won the Final Four in 1964 without a man on the team taller than 6 feet 5 inches, a team that went 28-2 and repeated the next season as national champs. The trouble is, the public remembers Walt Hazzard, Gail Goodrich and Kenny Washington from those teams. What Keith gets is a surprised "Oh, were you on that team? I'd forgotten."

In the pros, he came to the Lakers at the same time as Wilt Chamberlain, to give you an idea. That's like riding in an open car with the Pope or going to a premiere with Joan Collins.

His job on the court was always to take the ball away from somebody and give it to somebody else. He shot only in the (unlikely) event that he found himself with the ball and only one second to go.

Not surprisingly, he hit the broadcast booth as "color man" for Chick Hearn when his career on the court was over. Chick needs a color man about as much as Siberia needs air conditioning. Chick has a low threshold of interruptability.

Keith now seemed ready for a lively career as somebody's butler. Instead, he and Chick have teamed up in a new kind of broadcast, the "Chick Hearn's Dream Game" cassette, a five-minute trip down Fantasy Lane that puts you in the center of a mythical championship game in which you make the difference.

If you ever dreamed of stealing the ball from Larry Bird with two second on the clock and swishing the winning basket through without touching iron, if you ever dreamed of getting Wade Boggs on a high slider with the Series on the line or serving an ace to Ivan Lendl to win Wimbledon, do they have a gift for you!

ERICKSON thinks it's an idea whose time has come. He has left the booth to handle the promotion and production of the new product, the ultimate in party records, rated PG and bring the kids.

The only thing Keith's dream cassette lacks at the moment is the ever-lovin' postgame show where our hero could say, "Shucks, it was nothing. I knew Larry Bird couldn't handle my head fake."

In my case, it would be Pebble Beach that couldn't handle my power swing. "I just cut a little 4-wood in there, just rolled my wrists and hit a little knock-down into the wind. I like a little wind. Holds the shot on line."

And when the announcer says "A little trick Hogan taught you?" I will answer coldly, "No, a little trick I taught Hogan!"

Pocketa-pocketa...

LEE

The Lee defense was not the same showcase as the offense. The Rebel Brigade gave up a lot of yardage and a lot of big plays, but Miller didn't appear to be too concerned. Especially since the Rams scored only twice and one was on the last play of the regular scrimmage.

"WE'RE NOT as polished on defense right now. It's going to take a lot of hard work for us to get there because we don't have as much talent as the offense has. But I did see some hitting and that's what I wanted at this point.

"Del Rio ran a lot of fancy stuff at us and they caught us with our pants down a few times, but we really hadn't prepared for Del Rio. Both times they scored, they caught us trying to work on some things like blitzing."

All-District safety Jimmy Fennell, who also missed spring training with a bad foot, was aggressive on defense. Eugene Farmer, Blaine McAnally and Chuck Ellis all came up with big defensive hits. Michael Doran had the only interception recorded in the scrimmage.

There was also some oddities seen in the scrimmage. Durian "Cal" Jenkins had two rushes from the fullback slot. The 5-foot-7, 160-pound mighty mouse also plays at wide receiver and halfback.

Asked if he was the smallest fullback in America, he responded, "No, the quickest!

"They play me everywhere because I'm the smartest back they've got. I never forget it once I hear it."

Defensive tackle Dejuan Norris (225), who has started 23 consecutive games at defensive tackle, was also used at middle linebacker. But he's kind of like the gorilla. He plays anywhere he wants.

The bad news of the day came with the junior varsity losing by a 2-0 count to the Del Rio JV.

"I was a little disappointed with that because we've tried to work more this year with the JV kids. That's been a goal of ours," said Miller.

Lee now awaits its first real test Friday night at Memorial Stadium when they host Lubbock Coronado at 8 p.m. in the season opener. Here's hoping the Mustangs bring some track shoes.

Iowa's Hayden Fry, right, and Tennessee's Johnny Majors admire Kickoff Classic Trophy. The teams meet Sunday at the Meadowlands in college football's opening game.

Iowa, Tennessee kick off

Vols' speed worries Hawkeyes

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Iowa and Tennessee, which open the college football season Sunday in the fifth annual Kickoff Classic, are violating the old adage that there's no sense worrying about something you have no control over.

Fifteenth-ranked Iowa is worried about Tennessee's speed; 16th-ranked Tennessee is worried about Iowa's size.

"I could talk about Tennessee's speed, but I don't want to get sick here," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said Friday. "We truly feel that they're one of the fastest football teams in America, if not the fastest.

"If we're lacking something at Iowa and in the Big Ten, the biggest difference we see when we go to the West Coast (i.e., the Rose Bowl) is the speed factor. Tennessee is like a West Coast team."

IOWA, on the other hand, resembles an NFL team with an offensive line that averages 270 pounds from tackle to tackle.

"They say football games are won up front and my biggest concern is how we match up with Iowa's physical people," Tennessee's Johnny Majors said. "We won't match them there, and I don't know if our speed will offset that."

Tennessee's speed includes whippet wideouts Anthony Miller, who runs a 4.3 forty, and Terence Cleveland and T.D. Woods, who clock in at 4.4. Miller, running back Vando Davis and defensive backs Terry McDaniel and Victor Peppers all are sprinters on Tennessee's track team.

The Vols had even more speed, Majors said, when they lost their only previous meeting with Iowa 28-22 in the 1982 Peach Bowl, a game in which the teams combined for 789 yards of offense and 19 Peach Bowl records.

"That year, we had three world-class sprinters in Willie Gault, Clyde Duncan and Mike Miller," he said.

FRY surprised the media and upset the game's sponsors when he put quarterbacks Dan McGwire, Tom Poholsky and Chuck Hartlieb off-limits until after the game.

"I don't feel it will help our team at all to let these guys be interviewed," Fry said. "I'm trying to protect all our quarterbacks from additional pressure."

McGwire, a 6-8 sophomore who Fry says can throw the ball 90 yards, will start, but all three will see action.

"The thing that concerns me about Dan McGwire making his first start (he was 6-of-12 for 174 yards a year ago) is how he'll react to all the different defenses. Can he take a snap without falling down?

"I once had a quarterback I let be interviewed by TV on the sidelines before his first start. Then he went out and lined up under right guard. The center was unaware of it and snapped the ball 15 yards in the air.

"I DON'T know how long McGwire, or any of them, will play. If one of them gets a hot hand, that guy will play longer than the others."

McGwire is the younger brother of Oakland A's rookie slugger Mark McGwire.

"We're very young in certain positions and we have veterans at other positions," he said. "That makes for good chemistry. As a result, I feel good about this team, but we're not nearly as good as I'm hopeful of being by midseason. We have a chance to become a very good team if we can keep people healthy."

Besides Tennessee's speed and Iowa's size, Fry said a key factor is that "Tennessee has a proven quarterback (junior Jeff Francis) and we don't. In the early season, the defenses are always ahead of the offenses, anyway."

MAJORS' concerns with his team are the defense, which finished eighth in the Southeastern Conference last year, and replacing place-kicker Carlos Reveiz. The defensive line figured to be one of Tennessee's strengths but tackle Mark Hovanic and noseguard Brian Hunt, both scheduled starters, are injured.

"The things that give you consistency are a good, strong kicking game and a good, strong defense," Majors said.

Mary Robinson took consolation honors by defeating Nina Colter. Phyllis Maxwell won the first flight with a win over Ruthe Owens and Mary Jane Belden defeated Gladys Awalt for the consolation title.

Nelda Johnson and Clarke won the gross title in the Cry Baby Flight while Carolyn Connelly won the net title.

Special prizes went to Ruthe Owens, putting; Carolyn Connelly, chipping; Stacy Owens, long drive championship; Connelly, long drive first flight; and closest to the pin honors went to Maxwell and Dixon.

Sampson marriage on rocks

HOUSTON (AP) — Celebrity attorney Marvin Mitchelson has been hired by the pregnant wife of Houston Rockets forward Ralph Sampson to handle her possible divorce from the athlete.

Mitchelson was hired by Alieze Dial, who married Sampson about eight months ago and is now five months pregnant, The Houston Post reported. Mitchelson said he has met with Sampson's representatives and will explore reconciliation efforts over the next few days.

"The possibility of reconciliation is still open," he said. "In any potential divorce case, I always explore reconciliation first. I prefer to go in stressing the positive."

Sampson's agent, Gene Perry, said he hopes the troubles can "can be settled quietly and quickly." Sampson has been working out this summer on the University of Virginia campus.

Liquor store lucky at lottery

ROBINSON, Ill. (AP) — Lady Luck does more than smile on Gene Wilkin's liquor store. She practically grins ear to ear.

Wilkin's store, The Liquor Rack, this week sold its fourth multimillion-dollar state lottery ticket.

"We're doing our best to let people know we'll have five," Wilkin said Thursday. "If you don't think that way, you shouldn't be playing."

On Wednesday, Richard Lowrance, a 27-year-old laborer, won a $10 million jackpot with a ticket bought at The Liquor Rack, which sold a $1.6 million ticket in 1984, a $2.3 million one in 1986 and an $8 million one a month ago.

"We've got some lucky people," Wilkin said. "A lot of people think we're a little extra lucky."

Selling a winning ticket is "almost as good as winning the lottery yourself," he said.

Indeed, the business selling a winning ticket receives a bonus equal to 1 percent of the winnings — $100,000 in the case of Lowrance's jackpot.

Lottery records show one other agent in Illinois has sold as many multimillion-dollar winners: Quick Trip Foods in Pekin.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, prominent minister of another generation, began his pastoral prayer one Sunday with: "Now I lay me down to sleep." Embarassed, he caught himself, fumbled around for proper pastoral phrases, and in a cold sweat continued his prayer.

I don't know what happened," he wrote later. "The words just came out. A slip of the mind, a return to childhood, I guess."

As he was greeting people following that service, no one mentioned his prayer-slip until a little old lady came up. Taking the pastor's hand in both of hers, she looked deep into his eyes and said: "Thank you, Dr. Poling. I got new insight into my pastor this morning."

Dr. Poling, almost afraid to ask, managed finally to say: "Oh, and what was that?"

"I saw my pastor, as a little boy, kneeling by his bed learning his first prayer."

What our children will be, they are now becoming. The poet is right:

'Life is real circus' for Catholic priest

RELIGION

By JIM JONES

FORT WORTH (AP) — Tigers and grizzly bears rolled by in cages, and elephants moved within crushing distance of the Rev. Jack Toner backstage at the Ringling Brothers, Barnum & Bailey Circus.

The longtime Catholic priest didn't budge an inch.

He smiled and waved at a showgirl atop one of the elephants. Circus music played and a clown winked and said, "Hi, Father Jack," just before the nation's largest circus began a recent performance at the Tarrant County Convention Center on its current tour of Texas.

"They say this is the greatest show on Earth, but I say these are the greatest people on Earth," Toner said.

Toner is a circus priest.

He travels everywhere with the circuses, counseling employees and conducting church services while wearing vestments decorated with a clown on one side and a circus ring on the other.

Each day, he prays that trapeze artists, animal trainers and others performing dangerous acts will come through safely.

He's had to conduct one funeral for an aerialist who was killed in a fall.

"I love the circus," said the gray-haired 73-year-old priest as he watched the performers parade. "I never get tired of it. I've seen this same performance at least 500 times, but I always find some little detail I've missed."

Toner's appointment to be National Chaplain to Circuses in America, in 1983, was the culmination of a lifelong dream.

The Rev. Jack Toner poses with some of his circus friends backstage at the Ringling Brothers Barnum & Bailey Circus, recently in Fort Worth. Toner travels everywhere with the circus, counseling employees and conducting church services while wearing vestments decorated with a clown on one side and a circus ring on the other.

"I became enamoured with the circus when I was 9 years old," he said.

He would play hooky from school in New Britain, Conn., his hometown, to see any nearby circus.

"My father never chastised me for skipping school, because it was he who instilled in me the great love for the circus," Toner said. "When it came time in my life to make a decision, I chose the church, but I've never stopped loving the circus."

"...When it came time in my life to make a decision, I chose the church, but I've never stopped loving the circus."

— Rev. Jack Toner

Even after being ordained as a priest in 1944, Toner attended circuses and made friends with owners and performers, he said.

For 14 years, he taught Greek, Latin and theology at LaSallette Seminary, in Hartford, Conn. In 1958, he began working with the church's foreign mission board.

During that time, Toner kept up his circus connections.

Another circus chaplain, the Rev. David Hennessey, died during a circus performance in 1982, apparently of a heart attack, Toner said. A committee of the National Council of Catholic Bishops offered Toner the position.

Toner eagerly accepted.

"This is like a typical parish, except it is on wheels," Toner said. "Our church services are ecumenical because there are many non-Catholics and even atheists that we minister to."

Circus life is grueling for the performers and also for the priest, Toner said.

"I like the nomadic lifestyle," he said. "If you don't you couldn't survive."

No eye has seen, no ear has heard, no mind has conceived what God has prepared for those who love Him! But God has revealed it to us (Believers) by His Spirit.

God shall supply all your needs according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus, who said, "And everyone who has left houses or brothers or sisters or father or mother or wife or children or lands, for My name's sake, shall receive a hundredfold, and inherit everlasting life."

"Let not your heart be troubled; you believe in God, believe also in Me. In My Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I am going there to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come back and take you to be with me that you also may be where I am . . ."

We are not telling you fairy tales when we explain to you the power of our Lord Jesus Christ and His coming again. My own eyes have seen His splendor and His glory; I (Peter) was there on the holy mountain when He shone out with honor given Him by God His Father. I heard that glorious, majestic voice calling down from heaven, saying, "This is My Beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Tongues-speaking 'divinely inspired'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Like a ripe peach, you can't know its deliciousness until you taste it. That's one description given of that strange religious phenomenon — "speaking in tongues."

It has spread extensively among Christians these days, but it remains a bafflement to those who don't do it. It's also a mystery to those who do. But they say it's great.

Now that the practice has broken out of its Pentecostal confines and spawned "charismatics" in mainline denominations, curiosity about it pricks the uninvolved, in churches and out.

Just how does it feel and function in a person? Several participants recently were questioned about it at an Assemblies of God convention in Oklahoma City. Among their descriptions:

"It's exhilerating, wonderful." "It brings the warmth of God's presence." "It's a divinely inspired language of prayer." "It's being carried beyond yourself."

With all the inner beneficence ascribed to tongues-speaking, they say they themselves don't understand the stream of syllables they utter, but God does, binding them with him in adoration.

"It involves you with someone you're deeply in love with and devoted to," says the Rev. Bill L. Williams of San Jose, Calif. "We don't understand the verbiage, but we know we're in communication."

That awareness is "beyond emotion, beyond intellect," he says. "It transcends human understanding. It is the heart of man speaking to the heart of God. It is deep, inner heart understanding.

"It comes as supernatural utterances, bringing an intimacy with God."

Tongues-speaking is regarded a sign of baptism in the Holy Spirit, paralleling the first Pentecost recounted in Acts 2, when the spirit-filled apostles were understood by people of many languages.

Until recently, most historic churches held that the phenomenon, also called glossolalia, ceased after the apostolic age, but it emerged anew in Pentecostalism about the turn of this century.

In the late 1960's, it began appearing in mainline denominations and now involves "charismatic" groups in Roman Catholic, Lutheran, Presbyterian, Episcopal, United Methodist and other bodies.

About 40,000 of them met in New Orleans in July, an ecumenical jamboree of tongue-singing praises to God and evangelistic fervor. Church statistician David Barrett said the growing movement now totals 256 million worldwide.

"It's not just a novelty, but it builds up the church," says the Rev. James Walter of Shawnee, Okla., among those questioned at the Assemblies of God meeting.

Of the tongues-praying, he says, "It's just a great exuberant feeling. The only way to understand it is to experience it."

The Rev. Billy Martin, of Farmington, N.M., says that in tongues-speaking, the Holy Spirit "takes the most unruly member of the body and controls it. You don't do it. The Spirit does."

"The Spirit gives the power, using something physical to express it. It's a joyous, glorious wonderful experience."

The Rev. Darlene Miller of Knoxville, Tenn., says "it's like the sweetness of peaches that you can't know until you taste it itself. There's nothing ever to compare with that taste.

"It's a beautiful, peaceful, comforting feeling. You know the presence of God, the power of God. It is sweet, beautiful, a rushing sensation, a power of God throughout the body.

"It has to come forth in the audible voice of tongues. The body cannot control it. But out comes the beautiful phrases of love and praise of God. It's a totally heavenly language."

The Rev. David P. Strickland of Memphis, says "it's an intensely personal, internal communion with God. You speak mysteries unto God.

"Since I don't understand the words, it has to be the Lord."

The Rev. Robert Teel of Tishomingo, Okla., says "It helps our infirmities and builds up faith. The Spirit guides our prayers in utterances unknown to the human mind."

Asked if the experience is most moving the first time and later becomes more routine, he said, "It's great all the way. It's wonderful."

The Rev. Dick Champion of Springfield, Mo., editor of the Assemblies weekly, Pentecostal Evangel, says tongues-praying "is being carried beyond yourself. It's being lost in the presence of God.

"You reach a point where individual vocabulary can't express the praise, but the Holy Spirit uses your vocal chords to do it for you in ways that transcends your own understanding."

Juleen Turnage, Assemblies information secretary in Springfield, says that sometimes when exhausted and under pressure, such prayer brings "a refreshening in spirit so that I can deal with things I couldn't do before."

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Traditional Episcopalians will organize in Atlanta

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Prayer Book Society — a tradional worship service — has been scheduled at The Cathedral of St. Philip in Atlanta during the 1987 National Conference of the Prayer Book Society, the largest lay organization in the Episcopal Church. The conference will be held at the city's Colony Square Hotel from Sept. 25-27.

In the past, the Society has been barred from using traditional church facilities due to its advocacy of the 1928 Book of Common Prayer. During the 1984 National Episcopal Conference in Washington, D.C. a candlelight service was held by the Prayer Book Society on the lawn of the National Cathedral when access to the Cathedral was denied the Society.

Regarding the decision to allow the traditional 1928 service to be held in the Cathedral, the Reverend Jerome F. Politzer, President of the Episcopal Prayer Book Society, called the move a "commendable pastoral action and we are indeed grateful." He also noted that Cathedral officials will provide a musician for the service.

The Rev. Charles J. Child Jr., Bishop of the Diocese of Atlanta, stated, "We look forward to hosting the Prayer Book Society..." The Bishop additionally added, "It is understood that the text for that service will be from the Book of Common Prayer 1928."

A service of Morning Prayer will be held 8 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 26. Groups of conference attendees will be shuttled to the Cathedral of Saint Philip for the Morning Prayer and then immediately transported back to the Colony Square Hotel for the first session of the day.

Appalachian Trail celebrating 50th anniversary

By JONI BALUH

In 1921, forester Benton MacKaye wrote about his dream of the country's first national scenic trail, a vision that would be realized 16 years later as the Appalachian Trail.

As officials celebrate the 50th anniversary of the path that runs through woods, mountain ridges and occasional towns from Georgia to Maine, hundreds of hikers will be quietly savoring the vistas and solitude of its 2,000 miles.

One of them is even recording a start-to-finish video.

MacKaye, of Shirley, Mass., presented his idea in an article called "The Appalachian Trail, An Experiment In Regional Planning" in the October 1921 issue of the Journal of the American Institute of Architects.

The forester, who died in 1976 at age 96, helped design and route the trail, which stretches from Springer Mountain in Georgia to Mount Katahdin in Maine, said Brian King, spokesman for the Appalachian Trail Conference.

Its 2,097 miles make it one of the longest marked footpaths in the world, according to the conference, a volunteer group that coordinates the efforts of trail clubs, state and local governments, federal agencies and individuals in trail management and maintenance.

August 14 marked the 50th anniversary of the opening of the last link of the trail, the northern slope of Maine's Spaulding Mountain. The trail's official anniversary ceremony will be on the trail in Carrabassett Valley, Maine.

To mark the anniversary, Daniel Wingfoot, 39, of Conyers, Ga., is making a "Golden Anniversary Expedition." Wingfoot, who hiked the entire length in 1985, left Georgia April 11 planning to spend 169 days on the trail. He should reach Mount Katahdin on Sept. 26, according to conference spokeswoman Jean Cashin.

Wingfoot is making the first end-to-end video record of a trail hike, compiling a condition report for the conference, and is cataloging the trees, flowers, ferns, berries, birds and wildlife along the trail.

Ms. Cashin says interest in the trail is up for the anniversary year. Following a February article in National Geographic, "we got triple the mail and phone calls" to the conference's Harpers Ferry, W.Va., headquarters, she said.

The trail extends through Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

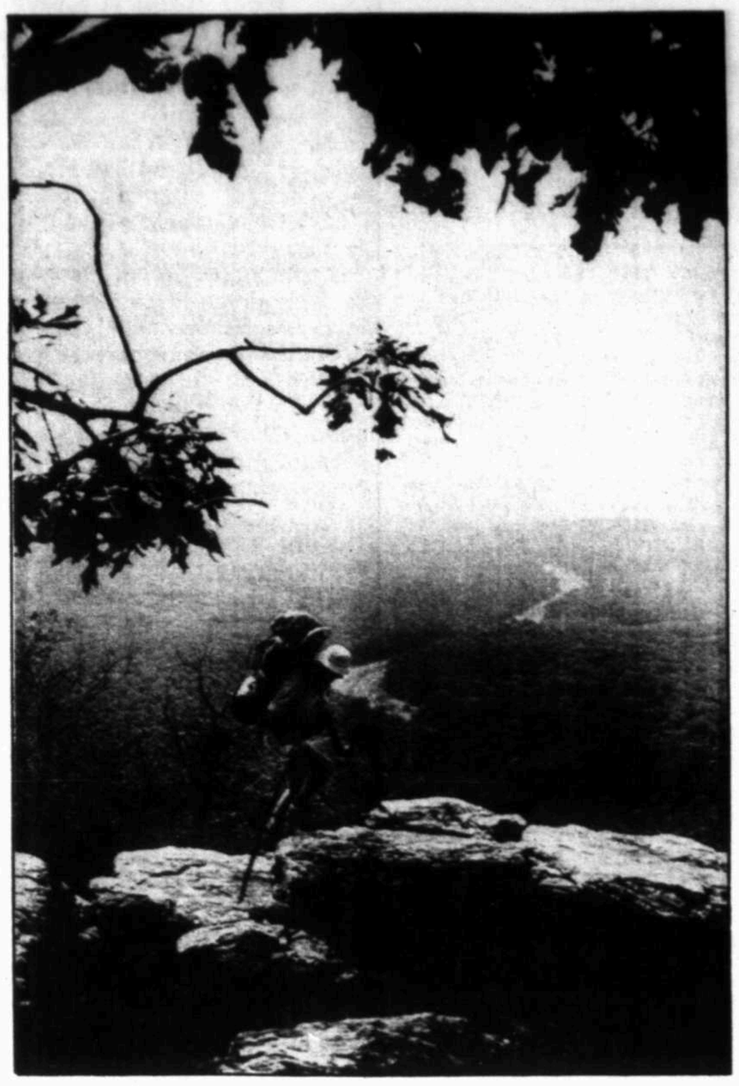

Ms. Cashin estimated 3 million to 4 million people use the trail each year, but she expects a far greater number this year. Usually about 400 start in Georgia in April planning to go the distance, but this year at least 700 started.

About 1,500 have hiked the whole trail, "but not all in one shot," she said.

Ms. Cashin, who has hiked 500 miles of the trail, said hiking the length of the trail usually takes about six months. It can be done in four months, she said, but hikers in a hurry do not have the opportunity to visit towns along the trail.

"Weekenders use the trail more during the summer than anybody," Ms. Cashin said. Most of the requests the conference gets come from weekend hikers, she said.

The heaviest use of the trail, which winds through eight national forests and six national parks, is in the Shenandoah National Park and the Great Smokies.

Jan Curran, of Coral Gables, Florida, walks along the Bear's Den rocks near Snickers Gap in Loudoun County along the Appalachian Trail recently. The 2,097 mile scenic trail extends from Springer Mountain, Ga., to Mount Katahdin, Me. August 14 will make the 50th anniversary of the opening of the last link of the trail.

AP Lasergraphic

Virginia has the longest section of the trail — about 500 miles — and West Virginia has the shortest section, about 25 miles along the Virginia-West Virginia border.

The greatest elevation is on Clingmans Dome in the Great Smokies, 6,643 feet. The trail is slightly above sea level where it crosses the Hudson River at Bear Mountain State Park near Peekskill, N.Y.

There are more than 200 shelters, spaced about 10 miles apart, and 12 hostels along the trail.

Shelters are usually lean-to's and some require reservations while others are on a first-come, first-served basis. Hostels, sometimes called hospices, are usually in buildings just off the trail and are run by churches or other organizations. They may offer beds and shower facilities. Those run by American Youth Hostels have a small fee.

One popular hostel is a church-run facility at Delaware Water Gap, Pa., King said.

The "friendliest town on the Appalachian Trail," at least according to many hikers, is Damascus, Va., Ms. Cashin said.

The trail runs down Main Street, according to Mark Reeter, town manager of the community of 1,300 people.

"The trail for many years, since the beginning really, has been an integral part of the community," Reeter said. "We are a very small community and the citizens have always enjoyed having hikers from all parts of the country and all walks of life share a bit of themselves with us — and the people of the town share with them."

The Damascus United Methodist Church operates a hospice for hikers and the town opens the showers at the municipal pool for their use, he said.

"We are one of the few places on the trail that I'm aware of that hikers consider a home away from home — someplace where they can pick up mail, get a meal and rest for a few days."

Asked about the impact of the trail on the economy, Reeter said, "We don't see it as a business. It provides an element of liveliness and color to a small community."

Damascus had its first Appalachian Trail Days festival in May and plans to make it an annual event.

"The trail is famous for its camaraderie," according to Ms. Cashin.

King said he believes long-distance hikers see the trail as a "personal therapeutic experience," while others hike it for exercise, the variety of terrain and the views.

The trail is not, however, without its problems.

Two Maine hikers were murdered near Pearisburg, Va., in 1981, while hiking the trail to raise money for a school for the disabled. The crime was the basis for a book, "Murder on the Appalachian Trail," by Jess Carr.

All but 139.4 miles of the trail are protected from development — state park or game land, or property owned by the National Park Service or the U.S. Forest Service, King said.

Maine has the largest section of unprotected trail, roughly 82 miles, followed by Pennsylvania with 26 unprotected miles, King said. The remaining unprotected miles are spread along the trail.

"There is a great deal of negotiating going on," King said, adding that the number of unprotected miles should be less than 100 by next year.

Congress in 1968 passed the National Trail System Act, which named the Appalachian Trail as the first scenic trail. Seven trails are listed in the act, including the 2,600 mile Pacific Crest Trail that stretches from Canada to Mexico through California, Oregon and Washington.

Chili crop jeopardized by heavy rains

EL PASO (AP) — Floods caused by heavy rains could destroy as much as 30 percent of the chili crop in the nation's largest pepper-producing county, officials said.

No injuries were reported as floodwaters damaged at least 20 homes in the El Paso area, driving away occupants. An estimate of the dollar damage has yet to be made.

The rain totaled about 1.5 inches at El Paso International Airport and 3 to 7 inches in the flooded area. The normal annual precipitation in El Paso is 7.77 inches, according to the Texas Almanac.

Officials in two counties have asked their states for employees and machinery to cope with the flooding, which began Monday night following a steady day-long rain in far west Texas and southeastern New Mexico.

Dona Ana County produces half the green chilis in New Mexico and is the largest producer in the nation, county Extension Agent Javier Vargas said Wednesday. Green chilis, varying from mild Bell peppers to spicy jalepenos, are susceptible to a fungus called chili wilt that attacks the plant's roots in hot, wet conditions, Vargas said.

Before the rains, chili-pickers were about a week behind, Vargas said. Many will have to wait another week before they can resume picking because of standing water in the fields. Late picking and root rot could destroy an estimated 30 percent of the 9,000 acres of chili in the county, he said. He stressed that the 30 percent figure is an estimate that could be revised as fields are checked.

County commissioners declared the county a disaster area at a Tuesday night emergency meeting. The declaration was sent to Gov. Garrey Carruthers with the request that he provide personnel and machinery to help.

The rain saturated the ground and caused the Rio Grande to rise near the top of its banks, causing drainage problems in some parts of Dona Ana County and El Paso County.

'Lifers' work to better lives of inmates

NORFOLK, Mass. (AP) — Convicted murderer William Doucette spent years hanging around short-term inmates until he got it through his head that they would soon be getting out of prison and he would not.

To face the future and try to live productively, Doucette, who entered Massachusetts Correctional Institution at Norfolk in 1979, turned to other lifers for help.

Doucette joined Lifers Group Inc., started by inmates to help each other cope with the prospect of life behind bars. Its 200 members try to improve prison life, educate the public and work for charity.

The group runs a theater program at Norfolk, raises money for a children's hospital, builds and repairs toys for underprivileged youngsters and started a college program about prison life.

The key to surviving a life behind bars is to live it well, says William "Lefty" Gilday, who killed a police officer during a bank robbery.

"Most of my life, I haven't benefited society, and this is my way of giving back," Gilday said. "It's the way I do my time. I find it works."

"I hated the lifers once," said Doucette, 35, who attended a Lifers Group meeting at the urging of a friend and now is on its board of directors. "I didn't want to admit I was one of them."

Any lifer is eligible. Annual dues are $10.

Members started a runners' club that raises money for the Kennedy Memorial Hospital for Children in Brighton, and they renovated the prison's entry room and chapel.

Lifers said they helped stop an attempt by some legislators to end a furlough program last year.

The program was threatened after a murderer out on furlough was charged with raping a woman, slashing her boyfriend and threatening four police officers, Doucette said.

Doucette said he wrote to lawmakers and corrections officials asking them not to punish other murderers in reaction.

Ancient empire may lie beneath Bolivia

LUQURMATA, Bolivia (AP) — U.S. archaeologists are unearthing evidence that Bolivia's ancient, enigmatic Tiwanaku culture was a powerful empire that supported tens of thousands of people in its central city and immediate suburbs.

Digs in this peasant village on the swampy edge of Lake Titicaca are turning up an extensive network of terraced, stone-walled houses and courtyards dotted with tombs, some containing elaborately crafted ceramic bowls and figurines dating back more than 1,000 years.

"Almost every time we've put a hole in a two-kilometer-square area, we've hit a house," said Charles "Chip" Stanish, an anthropologist at the University of Chicago. "We not only hit one house, we hit a lot of them."

"It's becoming clear we're looking at massive population sites."

To Bolivians the discovery is not that surprising. For decades they have maintained that the Tiwanakus were once the Americas' finest and most powerful empire, providing the inspiration for the better-known and relatively modern Incas of Peru.

But the digs are destroying a notion long held in international archaeological circles that the culture was little more than a loosely knit confederation of fiefdoms struggling to survive in the thin air, harsh climate and infertile soil of the Bolivian "altiplano" (high plains), about 13,000 feet above sea level.

"It's now being considered a powerful, integrated state," said Alan Kolata, anthropologist from the University of Illinois who is co-directing the excavations with Bolivian archaeologist Osvaldo Rivera. They are the first major foreign digs in Bolivia since the 1930s.

Emerging shortly before the time of Christ, the Tiwanakus flourished for scores of generations and reached their technological and artistic peak in the years 600 to 800, before the culture collapsed and disappeared some 400 years later. Their influence extended north and west across Lake Titicaca well into Peru, east into the rain forests of the Amazon basin and south in Chile and Argentina.

Their central temple stood at what is now the potato-farming village of Tiwanaku, 10 miles from Luqurmata, which apparently was a vital suburb. Still standing are a haunting collection of massive stone ruins including an accurate calendar and an elaborately carved Gateway to the Sun.

Also left behind, at points all around the lake and even hundreds of miles from it, are a now-disintegrating network of raised fields that provides the basis for arguments that the Tiwanakus had the resources for a concentrated population and wide-ranging political control.

Excavations have shown that the fields, divided by long irrigation canals, were sophisticated and highly productive. A base of cobblestone was topped by gravel and then impermeable clay, which kept salt from the lake's brackish waters from seeping into the topsoil above.

Recent studies across the lake in Peru, by Clark Erickson, also of the University of Illinois, indicate that productivity was as much as 800 percent that of current farming practices.

Kolata holds a more conservative estimate of 300 to 400 percent, but nonetheless believes the fields could easily have supported 40,000 to 120,000 people alone in the 32-square-mile Tiwanaku valley. "That's a substantial population, by any standard," he said.

Grandfather's clock craft to be 'handed down'

MANSFIELD (AP) — His 90-year-old hands are no longer steady enough to run a jigsaw, so Pete Henz looks to a youthful pair of hands that, when taught how, will carry on his work.

The hands belong to his 25-year-old grandson, Tim Henz.

The sun barely has begun to rise each day when Pete and Tim Henz gather in a small workshop behind Tim's Mansfield home to build the objects that they both love — clocks.

Pete is a clockmaker.

He learned how to make clocks as a boy in Germany, but he worked for a steel company when he moved to the United States.

He went to work for the Arlington school district in 1954 and began to build clocks again. In 30 years, he made 150 timepieces, but after two heart attacks and three strokes, he gave up.

Tim, an Arlington policeman who collects clocks and who had learned from his father how to repair them, decided that for the family to lose his grandfather's knowledge would be a waste.

"Grandpa has so much knowledge in his head," Tim says. "I though I would see if he wanted to spend a couple of hours every morning working over here."

Spend a couple of hours every morning making clocks? Tim had just given his grandfather a new purpose — to pass on the legacy.

"I says to myself, 'He got my eyes and my hands. He got me,'" Pete Henz said. "He's a young fellow. Between him and me, he's got good eyes and experience for the machines. I got the knowledge. So we got into the business."

They stood together one recent morning admiring an eight-foot mahogany case that in another week would contain the mechanism to mark time. It is their first joint creation. It was Pete's idea and went together without a pettern or a plan on paper.

"Pretty soon it's going to chime," Pete says in a heavy German accent. "Next week, I think."

The mechanisms come from Germany, and the lumber for the cases from a Fort Worth Lumber company.

"This is Honduran mahogony," Tim explains. "Grandpa insisted on it."

His grandfather adds, "It's hard wood."

The harder the wood, the deeper the chime.

Pete Henz came to America from Germany in 1914 at age 17. He earned $5 a week on his first job. But the time he married his wife, another German immigrant named Stella, he was making $16.50 a week working for Bethlehem Steel.

Pete and Stella moved to Arlington after he retired in 1954. He took on a second career running boilers at Arlington High School and a third career making clocks.

Their son, Tim's father, Peter, was repairing clocks by then. As soon as Tim was old enough, he began making calls with his father.

"Since then, I've just been picking up odds and ends of things and repairing them," Tim says.

Tim's house in Mansfield and his grandfather's house in Arlington are alive with chimes on the hour and half-hour. Each room has several clocks.

Pete Henz likens clocks to people, with faces and hands and ticking hearts.

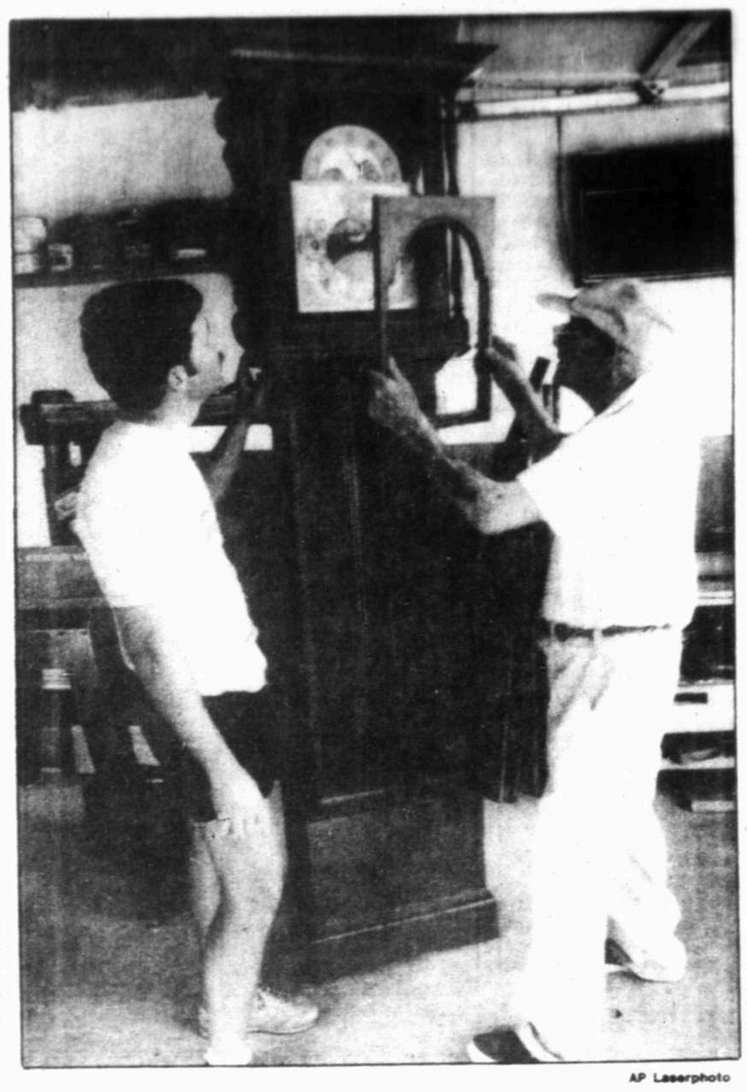

The ones he designs are unique — sometimes spur-of-the-moment whims.

On their first dive into the clock business, Tim at first was leery of his grandfather's style. Pete gave his grandson the dimensions for the clock and told him to cut the wood. Tim wasn't certain the dimensions would work, but he cut them anyway.

"I just figured this is the way Grandpa has been making them for years," he says.

Turned out, the dimensions were perfect.

Tim says he is learning that for his grandfather, clockmaking comes from the heart.

Spaniards promoting sun, sea, sangria, smiles to boost tourism

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Smile, the government is telling Spaniards, and let the tourists smile with you.

Spain is promoting smiles as well as sun, sea and sangria in a bid to overtake the United States as the world's No. 1 earner of tourism revenue.

"Be nice to tourists because Spain is synonymous with nice," government ads say. "A smile is your contribution."

Another shows a man calling his wife from a public telephone surrounded by a group of people. "Maria? Listen, I've just met a group of very nice tourists, and I'm bringing them home for lunch. Prepare 70 Spanish omelets."

The ad campaign seeks to remind those Spaniards who don't smile that tourism is their country's top industry and its main source of foreign currency.

Revenues from tourism represent 10 percent of all of Spain's goods and services (gross national product) and they pay for a good portion of the country's imports as well as the trade deficit and the oil bill.

Directly or indirectly, the tourist sector employs more than a million Spaniards, or nearly 10 percent of the work force of a nation where unemployment is a European high 21.7 percent.

Last year Spain earned more dollars from tourism than both Italy and France and came close to surpassing U.S. tourism revenues.

According to the Madrid-based World Tourism Organization, the United States posted revenues of $12.9 billion, while Spain earned slightly more than $12 billion.

Most of the U.S. tourism revenue comes Americans themselves traveling from one place in the country to another.

Spanish officials say Spain expects to earn a record $14 billion this year.

Government statistics indicate a 10.2 percent increase in tourists during the first half of the year to a total of 18.4 million, 1.7 million more than in the same period last year.

The number of American visitors was up 14.4 percent over last year.

The transport, tourism and communications minister, Abel Cabellero, says this year has been the best yet for tourism, with a total of 50 million visitors expected, breaking last year's record of 47.3 million.

The General Secretariat for Tourism has carried out a $31-million campaign to promote Spain in Europe and the United States where a program last year was scrapped at the last minute because international terrorism gave potential tourists the jitters.

But Americans are returning to Europe in huge waves now.

Last year American tourism in Spain dropped off by 22.8 percent to 769,785, down from 997,774 in 1985. The 1986 figure was only a drop in Spain's overall tourism bucket, but Americans are bigger spenders than European visitors.

Officials said Americans spend an average of $500 a person while in Spain compared with $400 for each West German or $346 for each French or British citizen.

Nearly 60 percent of visitors to Spain come from France, Britain and West Germany.

Much 'hot air' spewing over 'on-air' changes

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Some volunteers at KUNM-FM say the University of New Mexico station's new format is boring. The dispute at the listener-supported National Public Radio affiliate has been anything but.

It has included lawsuits, protests and a fight in the control room that was heard over the air. It also prompted a two-week shutdown last month.

The station is back on the air, but two lawsuits are pending in state court against station and university officials over KUNM's switch on Aug. 1 to a format featuring jazz and classical music.

One lawsuit, filed by the listener group Friends of Free-Form Radio, alleges KUNM committed fraud during fund-raisers by saying it would continue a daytime format that allowed volunteer announcers to play a variety of music.

In another suit, 20 volunteers contend that KUNM management and university officials breached an employment agreement, violated the volunteers' rights by suspending a grievance procedure and violated their right of free speech by retaliating against them for publicly opposing the format change.

Volunteers and listeners staged protests against the new format, and radio staff members and disc jockeys say they have received harassing phone calls and letters.

The control room scuffle occurred May 14 when an announcer denounced the format change on the air and called for the program director's resignation.

Program director Patrick Conley said he ordered the volunteer announcer, Andres Mares-Muro, to leave the control room and turn off the microphone. He said the volunteer's refusal resulted in a shoving match. Mares-Muro alleges Conley grabbed him from behind and tried to choke him.

Mares-Muro, who was suspended but later reinstated, filed misdemeanor assault and battery charges. Conley is scheduled to appear in court Sept. 29.

"Concern for the welfare and safety of staff and property of KUNM" prompted the university to take the station off the air July 1, said Alex Sanchez, the school's vice president for community and international programs.

"It cooled the situation down," he said.

The station returned to the air with half-day programming on July 13 and is gradually increasing its hours. The effect on its audience size is undetermined.

Earlier this summer, general manager Tim Singleton estimated 35,000 people were tuning in to some part of KUNM's programming.

Singleton said the station changed its format because a survey showed a decrease in listeners and because the daytime programming was not yielding contributions.

He said program diversity is being maintained through specialty shows on the weekends and in the evenings.

Chris Martin, a former volunteer at the station, said the new format will stifle diversity.

"This seems to be a national trend among public radio," she said. "They're trying to get seamless radio, to homogenize the sound."

KUNM has had a history of conflict between volunteers and management, said John L. Walker, an attorney for Friends of Free-form.

"About every two or three years somebody comes in and says we're going to clean house with all these scruffy, renegade volunteers."

City ignores dressing for a day

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Mayor Bud Clark's "Dress as You Please Day" looked more like "Dress as Usual Day" as even city employees generally ignored his third annual celebration of casual attire.

"I've been shocked," said Keeston Lowery, a city commissioner's aide who wore tennis clothes to work at City Hall on Tuesday. "Participation is really poor, and I think it's disgusting."

Clark, who was attending a City Council retreat at the city's Leach Botanical Gardens, wore an open-collar white shirt and blue shorts, an aide said.

When Clark proclaimed his first "Dress as You Please Day" in 1985, downtown was awash with workers in Hawaiian shirts, shorts and other weekend togs. The event gained national attention.

This year, however, there was little advance publicity about the day and many were unaware of it.

Financial decisions should be made only after consultation with experts. Tax changes will affect the way you conduct business. Personal relationships give you an edge in a competitive environment. Family members' influence grows. Go ahead and get those academic credentials you need.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: the Louisiana "Kingfish" Huey Long, civil rights leader Roy Wilkins, actress Shirley Booth, colorful relief pitcher Tug McGraw, actress Elizabeth Ashley, fashion designer Geoffrey Beene, skier Jean Claude Killy, actress Joan Blondell, actors Timothy Bottoms and Fred MacMurray, slugger Ted Williams.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Others are easily wounded today. Think before speaking. Your bluntness can get you into trouble, even though many people find it refreshing. Put an end to gossip by telling the whole truth.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You need to get your mind on business and leave it there. Make your own decisions and let partner do the same. A relationship that is built on lies cannot survive. Be honest.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may overreact if someone seems to be ignoring you. You are not being snubbed. It is just that his attention is elsewhere. Seize the initiative in business and get a favorable deal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The bill you thought you might have to pay has been taken care of. Spending time at a park or the beach is a valuable health investment. Watch what you eat.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get a lucky break. Romances bloom like spring flowers. You will soon say "goodbye" to financial worries. Do not go borrowing trouble. Deal with problems as they arise. Maintain a positive attitude.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are feeling more competitive and have the determination to do almost anything. A quiet candlelight dinner will have the desired effect. Have faith in your abilities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Spend money on necessities only. There will be plenty of bargains in the stores if you search for them. Enjoy the last romantic days of summer. Dress comfortably when working at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are still thinking about work when you should be relaxing. Take some time to smell the roses. You deserve more treats than you usually give yourself. Talk with those closest to your heart.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The big gains you are interested in will come from relationships, not financial investments. Look for ways to improve your health and appearance. Mate will be supportive. Show your appreciation for loved one's understanding.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Not a good day to venture far from home. Consult a friend if confused about a social appointment. Take stock of other family members' problems and look for ways to help them. Listen closely.

Powell doesn't think he will get much attention in history books

Powell

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Lewis F. Powell Jr. says he's surprised by the praise he's received since retiring from the U.S. Supreme Court, and he doesn't think he'll get much attention "in the long reach of history."

In an interview published Thursday in the Richmond News-Leader, Powell said he plans to remain active in retirement by visiting Virginia law schools, perhaps participating in seminars on the Supreme Court and sitting occasionally on appeals courts.

The Richmond resident, who will turn 80 on Sept. 19, said he decided not to return to private practice partly after stepping down in June because he did not want his service as Supreme Court justice to attract clients.

Despite his 15 years on the court, Powell said he doesn't think he'll take up much space in future generations' history textbooks.

"In the long reach of history, I'll be surprised if my name is large," Powell said.

Borg

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - Former tennis star Bjorn Borg is separating from his common-law wife and mother of his only child, Jannike Bjorling, the Swedish media reported.

Ms. Bjorling, 20, was quoted in an interview with Aftonbladet newspaper Tuesday as saying "the rumours are true. It is over between Bjorn and me now."

Borg, 31, met Ms. Bjorling in 1984, the same year he separated from his former Romanian wife, Mariana Simionescu.

Borg's and Ms. Bjorling's son, Robin Borg-Bjorling, was born in 1985. As is common in Sweden, the couple never married but shared Borg's home in the Stockholm archipelago.

Borg, who retired from the tennis circuit after winning Wimbledon five straight times from 1976 to 1980, has investments in real estate and a fashion business. He also works as a tourism ambassador for Sweden abroad.

DENVER (AP) — Colorado's Gov. Roy Romer says he feels a strong kinship with rock star Bruce Springsteen, and it's not just that they were both "Born to Run."

"Every time I'm listening to Bruce Springsteen, he's talking about real people who are trying to deal with the world as they find it. And I dig it. He speaks to me," Romer said in an interview with WNEW-FM, a rock music station in New York.

"People in political office are too stuffy. You have to fight to keep human. Bruce helps."

The 58-year-old governor, who says he discovered Springsteen before any of his seven children, even agreed to tape a promotional spot for the radio station.

"Good morning," Romer says on the tape. "This is Roy Romer. I'm governor of Colorado and I never make any important decisions in the morning until I've had my Bruce Juice."

Alex Coletti, assistant producer for WNEW's Dave Herman Rock 'n' Roll Morning Show, contacted Romer after learning that the governor was late for a speech last week when he became engrossed in Springsteen's "Born in the U.S.A" album playing on his car cassette deck.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — The city's mayor says his police department made a mistake in giving $250 worth of parking tickets to drivers from the movie company producing actor Richard Gere's new film, "Farm of the Year."

"We're in competition for the movie industry and we ought to be doing what we can to attract them," Mayor Don Canney said.

Cedar Rapids Convention Bureau Director Jim Garrett said Thursday the company, Harvest Films Co., will pay the fines.

However, Garrett said he'll meet with representatives of the city council and Harvest Films to discuss parking alternatives while the company is in town shooting the picture.

A Harvest Films official earlier this week dropped the 53 tickets off at City Hall, apparently expecting they would be torn up. Public Safety Commissioner Floyd Bergen said the city would not excuse the fines.

DETROIT (AP) — Donald Sutherland and Charles Durning have unveiled a new film produced and written by Detroit natives and shot on location in the Motor City.

"The Rosary Murders" premiered Thursday night at the Fisher Theatre here with a turnout of about 1,400 people dressed in tuxedos and evening gowns.

The movie was produced by Detroit native Bobby Laurel and the screenplay was written by mystery author Elmore "Dutch" Leonard of Birmingham, Mich., based on a book by Detroit novelist William X. Kienzle.

Durning was joined at the premiere by Detroit Tigers veteran Darrell Evans, who said the film was suspenseful.

"I hadn't read the book and didn't know what to expect," Evans said. "It kept me on the edge of my seat."

The film tracks a person who kills several priests and nuns in the Detroit area. After each murder, a rosary is found wrapped around the victim's hand.

Air traffic control system not 'up to speed'

EDITOR'S NOTE — The nation's air traffic control system is still feeling the turbulence from the mass firing of more than 11,000 controllers six years ago. Reports of near-collisions are on the increase and all the while the skies are becoming more and more crowded. The Federal Aviation Administration acknowledges there is a shortage of sufficiently trained controllers at some airports, but insists that safety has not been compromised.

By H. JOSEF HEBERT

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — As Pamela Kerr maneuvered a dozen planes through 1,500 square miles of sky over Oklahoma, she forgot about Ozark Flight 400, putting the plane on a collision course with another aircraft.

In the real world the mistake could have been tragic, but for the 26-year-old trainee it would not likely cost her any sleep — only 15 points on a test problem at the Federal Aviation Administration's air traffic controller school.

Nine days later, Kerr graduated with 133 other students, out of a class of 231, from the FAA Academy after a 13-week course on how to be an air traffic controller. "It's going to be a long time, though, before I handle real traffic," she says.

In fact, it will be sometime in 1990, if all goes well, before the former teacher, a language major in college, will be considered a fully trained controller.

The problem is that the FAA needs her and her classmates right now — at a time when the number of controller errors and near-collision incidents have been increasing. But learning the technique of guiding jetliners that carry hundreds of people through the busy skies takes not weeks or months, but years.

And that goes a long way toward explaining why the nation's air traffic control system is still feeling the turbulence from the decision by President Reagan six years ago — on the morning of Aug. 3, 1981 — to fire 11,375 members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (PATCO) after they went on strike.

Two-thirds of the 16,375 controllers were gone overnight, including all but about 3,000 of the FAA's most experienced, so-called full performance or FPL, controllers. Some sections of the country were hit especially hard, with busy radar centers and towers in Chicago, New York and Boston losing close to everyone not in supervisory ranks.

TO REBUILD the system and keep planes flying was nothing short of "a real bit of magic," says Donald Schmidt, now the air traffic manager at the New York air traffic control center.

"First-line supervisors lost three years or more of their life holding the system together, teaching, training, coaching, struggling and patiently waiting for the new breed to come up to speed," Schmidt says. He considers the new breed of controllers better than the old.

But today, as air travel is growing at a frantic pace, the post-strike air traffic control system is still not up to the speed many of its critics say is necessary. And, they predict, it won't be for years to come.

Harrowing experiences in the sky aren't always linked to air traffic control problems. That was the case recently when a Delta Air Lines L-1011 flew 60 miles off course over the Atlantic and came within 100 feet of colliding with a Continental Airlines jumbo jet. The two planes were well beyond air traffic control radar.

But other times the controller, or at least the system under which he works, clearly has been a factor.

Many close calls have been attributed to controller mistakes.

— A Pan American World Airways jet almost hit a Venezuelan jetliner in June at 31,000 feet near Bermuda after a controller forgot both planes had been cleared for the same altitude

— TWO CONTROLLERS in the Los Angeles airport tower didn't talk to each other and a Continental Airlines Boeing 727 took off so close over a small Cessna, which was cleared to cross the runway, that the jet's landing gear struck the small plane's tail.

The airlines grumble that they can't put enough airplanes into the sky because of controller shortages; travelers complain about delays caused by FAA restrictions; controllers gripe about workloads and have a new union to get more clout, and aviation safety experts caution that the shortage of controllers may be threatening safe flight.

"Since the strike we have come full circle," says Rep. Guy Molinari, R-N.Y., a sharp critic of the FAA. "Morale is probably lower today than it was before the strike, staffing levels are much lower, while air traffic has dramatically increased."

While the FAA has been praised for keeping planes aloft after the strike, officials in both government and the industry said in interviews that mistakes, miscalculations and, to some extent, plain stubbornness have been at the heart of the continuing air traffic control problems.

They cite as examples:

— A failure by the FAA to grasp the effect of airline deregulation on the air traffic control system, despite signs as early as 1984 that airline traffic numbers and patterns were changing dramatically.

— A belief by senior and midlevel FAA officials that the recovery plan, so successful during the first two years, was on target. Critics say they paid too little attention to its shortcomings.

— AN UNSWERVING belief that there were far too many controllers before the strike, causing planners to consistently understate post-strike staffing requirements.

— An excessive reliance on upcoming automation that had been expected to begin easing controller workloads toward the end of this decade, but which now has been delayed to at least the mid-1990s.

— Pressures to reduce the federal deficit, which put a lid on FAA spending at a time when the recovery should have proceeded at full speed to meet future demands.

— Pressure from the White House to make the system work without rehiring any of the fired controllers.

"They were caught in an ideological mud field," says Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., who has fought to have some fired controllers brought back.

While the FAA should have planned three and four years ago for the needs of 1986-87, critics say, they focused on short-range requirements and faced an increasingly stingy White House trying to find ways to roll back the federal deficit.

The pressure to rebuild the air traffic control system had eased two years after the strike.

"IT SEEMS to me we are paying the price today of five years of neglect," says Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., chairman of the aviation subcommittee.

But Ford acknowledged Congress may also have been fooled.

"I don't know if we've been stonewalled, but they've always said the air traffic control system is adequate, it's safe...So how do you refute it."

In June, Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, in a sharp reversal, acknowleged that at least another 955 controllers will have to be hired. Less than a month earlier FAA officials had argued on Capitol Hill against legislation calling for a controller increase.

But the new controllers called for by Mrs. Dole won't be of much use until 1989, or perhaps even later, say the experts. Meanwhile, the shortfalls must be made up by overtime — about 420,000 hours worth this year — and in the continuing development of trainees already in the pipeline.

That means many six-day workweeks for a sixth straight year for many controllers at the busiest facilities.

At last count, there are 15,115 people in the controller work force, but as of May only 11,188 of them are actually handling traffic.

NOW APPEARING RUTH SHORTER

During her seven years as a performer, Ruth Shorter has become accomplished in many styles of music.
As a working vocalist and bassist in the Albuquerque area Ruth has gained many fans in the Country-Western and Country-Rock Circles. This lead to nomination for 1985 "Female Vocalist Of The Year" by the New Mexico Country Music Association.
Also in 1985 came the honor of being a featured vocalist at the very exclusive "Madrid Jazz Festival", sponsored by the New Mexico Jazz Workshop.
To her credit, Ruth is often asked to perform as an "Opening Act" for major stars, the most recent include Earl Thomas Conlee, Razzy Baily and Donna Fargo.

British researchers gather to divulge breakthroughs

By LESLIE SHEPHERD

LONDON (AP) — Men tell jokes because they often have little else to say to one another.

Extraterrestrials are too busy to contact earth.

Crocodiles contain clues to what causes cleft palates in humans.

By the next century, toothbrushes will be obsolete, huge tides will threaten to engulf Britain and new telephones will thwart obscene callers.

All the latest weird and wonderful breakthroughs in the world of science and near-science are coming to light this week in Belfast, Northern Ireland, where the 156-year-old British Association for the Advancement of Science is holding its annual meeting.

Originally established to bring together the latest scientific finds, the association has been partly supplanted by professional journals over the years. But it remains an annual source of delight and fascination, and its proceedings fill whole pages of newspapers in August.

Humor was one of the more serious topics this year.

Jonathan Miller, a qualified physician and accomplished professional comedian, explained his theory that men tell jokes because their social awkwardness inhibits them from discussing more serious things.

"Women simply don't seem to require jokes in the same way men do," he told the 2,500 delegates in an auditorium at Queen's University, Belfast.

Christie Davies, a sociology professor at Reading University, revealed that there is a more or less fixed pool of ethnic jokes, which each country adapts to its own needs: in Britain it's the Irish.

Davies didn't think the jokes were racist, saying: "They are a kind of thermometer rather than causing heat in themselves."

Moving right along, Sir David Bates, professor emeritus of theoretical physics at Queen's University in Belfast, explained the absence of messages from outer space by saying the extraterrestrials were probably otherwise engaged.

Bates conjectured that civilizations that are technologically ahead of earth are too intelligent to waste their efforts sending messages into space.

Then the conference moved on to teeth, with biologist Mark Ferguson of Manchester University predicting toothbrushes would be obsolete by the next century, thanks to anti-decay vaccines and mouthwashes containing genetically engineered bacteria.

He even imagined tinkering with dental cells to enable adults to grow new teeth whenever the old ones wore out.

Ferguson also reported he was experimenting on crocodile eggs to discover the cause of cleft palate, explaining that the palates of crocodiles and humans have some similar characteristics.

Dr. Michael Hall, head of the chemotherapy division of Roche Products pharmaceutical company, reported on new AIDS drugs, but said the ultimate goal was genetic engineering to cut the virus out of individual cells.

"If this ever proves possible, then the implications will raise serious ethical and moral questions, perhaps as difficult to answer as those relating to AIDS itself," Hall said.

"It would mean that we could manipulate at will the human genetic pool, produce super races, modify ethnic traits, exercise socially unacceptable habits — in fact, produce people to order."

Environmentalist Bill Carter of the University of Ulster warned that the warming of the Earth would raise sea levels by 11 feet in the coming 120 years and flood much of Britain.

On a happier note, communications engineer Michael Miller predicted a telephone for the 1990s that would record an incoming caller's number, making it easier to catch obscene callers.

More than 400 papers were read this year at what is considered one of the biggest concentrations of brainpower in the British Isles. And speaking of brainpower, zoologist Michael Crawford came up with an intriguing theory about what separates man from the apes.

It's all in the diet, he told the gathering. Man got smarter when he moved from the savannah to the shores and started eating fish. It was the polyunsaturated fats found in cod, mackerel, freshwater salmon, crabs and shellfish that made the difference, he said.

Waldheim visits site of concentration camp

MAUTHAUSEN, Austria (AP) — President Kurt Waldheim, whose military service in Germany during World War II sparked international controversy, laid a wreath Friday at the site of the largest Nazi concentration camp in Austria.

About 15 protesters shouted "We want an anti-Fascist president!" as Waldheim arrived at the former concentration camp of Mauthausen, in the province of Upper Austria. It was his first visit there since he took office in July 1986.

Austrian and American news media and the World Jewish Congress published documents during the presidential campaign last year linking Waldheim to Nazi atrocities in the Balkans when he served there as a German soldier in World War II. Waldheim denies any wrongdoing.

A so-called White Book was issued earlier this month by Waldheim supporters disputing the accusations against the former United Nations secretary general. At a news conference in Linz, the capital of Upper Austria, Waldheim said his decision to see the camp, now a museum, during his official visit to the province was "an obvious gesture."

"I have repeatedly expressed my views about the Holocaust and the immense suffering of the Jewish people during this time," Waldheim said.

The Austrian head of state said he has emphasized the need "that we in Austria do everything to guarantee that such tragedies are not repeated."

About 200,000 people were murdered by the Nazis in the Mauthausen camp, which was built by prisoners from the Dachau concentration camp after Austria was absorbed by Nazi Germany in 1938.

Waldheim said he had expressed his wish to visit Mauthausen "to, in this way, express my respect to the vicitms of this concentration camp."

The president placed a wreath of red and white carnations at a commemorative tomb, stood in solemn silence, then bowed deeply.

He then toured the museum, including the gas chamber and crematorium.

In an interview with Austrian television later, Waldheim said he had a sincere desire to visit "this place of horror."

Before his arrival, demonstrators carried a banner saying, "We want an anti-Fascist president," but were ordered to remove it by police. They shouted the slogan as Waldheim arrived.

Albania, Greece no longer in state of war

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Greece on Friday announced it had officially ended the state of war with neighboring Albania that had lingered as a legal leftover from World War II.

"The government declares that its characterization of Albania as an enemy state has ceased to exist," said government spokesman Sotiris Kostopoulos.

His announcement came one week before Albanian Deputy Foreign Minister Sokrat Plaka is due in Athens for a five-day official visit.

Premier Andreas Papandreou's socialist government, which came to power in 1981, has sought to improve relations with communist Albania and last year declared its intention of lifting the state of war.

But problems over real-estate holdings of ethnic Greeks living in southern Albania, confiscated by the Greek government when war was declared in 1940, had delayed the decree, according to Foreign Ministry officials.

Kostopooulos said lifting the state of war would improve the status of the ethnic Greek minority in Albania, thought to number around 300,000 and form lmost 10 percent of the country's population.

He did not say if the property issues had been settled.

The government's decision was denounced as "criminal" by Bishop Sebastian of Konitsa. He heads a campaign for freedom of worship and preservation of the Greek language in Albania.

"We strongly condemn the government's one-sided decision to raise the state of war without first securing the human rights of the North Epirots," said the Greek Orthodox bishop. His diocese nominally includes North Epirus, the Greek name for southern Albania where most ethnic Greeks live.

Churches were closed when Albania outlawed religion in 1967 and declared the country officially atheist.

Greece declared war against Albania in 1940 when Italian troops invaded Greece through North Epirus.

For Albania, lifting the state of war was a symbolic gesture, since Albanian officials have said the conflict ended when Greek-Albanian diplomatic relations were re-established in 1971.

Albania closed its border with Greece in 1946 and ordinary Albanians are constitutionally barred from traveling abroad. But since 1984, several hundred ethnic Greeks in Albania have been allowed to stay for up to three months with relatives in Greece.

Thousands of Greeks now take advantage of regular tours organized by Albturist, the Albanian state tourist authority, to visit their relatives in Albania.

YOU'RE GONNA LOVE IT!
GEORGE BURNS

"I should know," says George Burns, "I've been here ninety-one years, myself! Why did Oldsmobile select me to be their spokesperson? Well, since it's such an important event, they needed someone debonair, someone romantic. Case closed! I'm their man. It's probably only coincidental that I'm also one of a select few who've been around as long as Oldsmobile. That's an accomplishment and cause for celebration.

"The celebration? It's big. Oldsmobile and Olds dealers across the country are out to set an all-time August sales record! Guess what? They've got terrific Oldsmobile values. Maybe I'll trade in my cigar."

Buy now and you can own a beautiful 90th Anniversary Oldsmobile. The selection is outstanding. So, you can step up to and enjoy the Oldsmobile style and value of your choice even at this year-end season. Which is just one good reason that, long after this summer's over, you'll be glad you bought a new Oldsmobile.
