Winter (dis)content

Winter weather can be both a blessing and a curse. Left, the sun shines down on a snow-covered field in northwest Indiana, where recent snowfalls put an end to an unseasonable warm spell. But, above, a Miami, Fla., woman isn't too pleased with the less-than-pleasant weather. The downpour along Biscayne Boulevard was bad enough, but her collapsed umbrella just added insult to injury.

Ex-Teamsters consultant murdered

CHICAGO (AP) — Former Teamsters consultant Allen Dorfman was "silenced" in a gangland-style execution because criminal associates feared a looming prison term would make him reveal secrets learned in 30 years of mob dealings, officials believe.

Dorfman was shot in the head five times at close range Thursday as he and a friend were going to a restaurant in Lincolnwood, a northern suburb. His companion was unharmed, and the gunmen escaped.

Forty FBI agents were assigned to assist police from Chicago and Lincolnwood in the murder investigation. A nationwide alert was issued for two unnamed male suspects. Police were also seeking a third man, believed to be the driver of a getaway car.

The millionaire insurance executive had longstanding ties to the Teamsters union and organized crime. He escaped unharmed from an attempt on his life 16 years ago.

"There's no doubt in my mind that Mr. Dorfman was killed to keep him quiet," said Patrick Healy, the Chicago Crime Commission's executive director. "A lot of people in the criminal world will sleep better tonight knowing that Dorfman is silenced."

Dorfman was convicted Dec. 15 with Teamsters President Roy L. Williams and three other men of conspiring to bribe then-Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., with a lucrative Las Vegas land deal. Cannon was not charged but lost a bid for re-election.

Dorfman, 60, faced up to 55 years in prison — tantamount to a life sentence. He was also under indictment in Illinois and California, and a federal grand jury was investigating an alleged kickback scheme involving Dorfman and the Teamsters health and welfare fund.

For more than 30 years, Dorfman maintained a grip on the murky billion-dollar business of Teamsters loans, land deals and insurance, officials said. His stepfather was a friend of Jimmy Hoffa, the former Teamsters boss who disappeared in July 1975 and was believed killed during a power struggle for contol of the union.

Snow makes travel difficult

The Permian Basin remains under a travelers' advisory for today and tonight with freezing rain and snow complicating travel on already water-laden highways.

According to the National Weather Service forecast, however, some relief is in sight for Saturday when temperatures should rise and partly cloudy skies may permit a bit of sunshine through the dense shroud that's hovered over Midland.

Heavy snow and chilling rain dropped .76 inches of precipitation on the area during the past 24 hours, pushing the monthly and yearly rainfall total over the inch mark, to 1.06 inches.

A steady rain which fell for much of Thursday converted to snow at about 7:30 p.m., blanketing city roads not already submerged by water with slick, heavy slush.

A spokesman at the Federal Aviation Administration control tower at Midland Regional Airport said planes were both taking off and landing this morning, despite slushy runways. But some early morning flights were postponed due to the treacherous runway conditions and least one flight was cancelled.

Several area communities, including Andrews, Stanton, Rankin, Big Lake and Lamesa, reported snow continuing this morning, with accumulations in some areas nearing 2-3 inches. A Dawson County sheriff's office spokesman said trees and power lines near Lamesa were felled by heavy ice and snow.

Midland College, Midland Independent School District and Ector County School District reported all schools open despite the inclement weather and fervent wishes to the contrary by some students.

The NWS forecast calls for a chance of freezing rain and snow today and tonight, although accumulations should not amount to more than an inch.

Tonight's low should slip into the mid-20s with winds from the northwest

New postmaster named

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

U.S. Postmaster General William Bolger Thursday selected the head of Port Arthur's postal operations to become Midland's new postmaster effective Saturday.

V.L. "Bill" Williams, 47, a post office employee for the past 26 years, succeeds former postmaster David E. Holster, whose 41-year career with the Postal Service ended in retirement Dec. 31.

Williams survived a selection process that began in September and eventually canvassed 57 applicants — including five from Midland.

Vernon Greggerson, Postal Service sectional center manager in El Paso, notified Williams of his appointment Thursday afternoon, shortly after receiving official word of the promotion from Washington, D.C.

"I'm looking forward to it; it's a great opportunity," said Williams in a telephone interview Thursday afternoon. "The city is very attractive. Midland has a good reputation as a very aggressive, clean city."

Williams, who counts Holster as a "good friend," said his predecessor's tenure "is going to be a hard act to follow."

But both he and Holster share the desire to provide good mail service, according to Williams. "We're kind of old-fashioned about that," he said.

Williams said he subscribed to The Midland Reporter-Telegram for a few months and gathered some information from the Chamber of Commerce in preparation for the application process. He said his "homework" may have helped him land the job.

"I think that one of the things that's helped me get the job is my knowledge of the community," he said. "I felt I had a fairly good chance."

Williams says he doesn't expect any particular problems moving from the 132-employee Port Arthur operation to command about 349 workers and a larger mail volume in Midland.

He said no immediate changes are planned for Midland's Postal Service, although local employees may have to

Investigation ends in raid

A month-long investigation by the Midland County Sheriff's Department culminated early today when deputies served a search warrant on a rural Midland County residence and arrested three men.

Capt. Pat Fuller said deputies recovered "several guns" and an "undetermined amount of narcotics" when they served a search warrant on the residence for stolen property and narcotics. The residence is located about a mile southwest of the city, Capt. Fuller

Emissions focus of last day of asphalt plant hearings

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

With one side focusing on emissions from an asphalt plant stack and the opposing group looking at effects of fugitive emissions around the facility, testimony in a Texas Air Control Board public hearing on a permit exemption concluded about 9:45 p.m. Thursday.

The three-day session held in City Hall Council Chambers pitted Petroplex Land and Development Co., which is operating an asphalt plant east of the city, against residents of Skyview Addition, a subdivision across the road from the asphalt plant.

Although the TACB had granted Petroplex a permit exemption to construct and operate the plant on a tract between County Road 1160 North and CR 1150 North last August, protests from the residents prompted the state agency to schedule the hearing.

With the fireworks from the first two days out of the way, both sides and the TACB legal counsel slowly scraped away at each other's testimony.

The evening session centered on David Cabe, a consulting environmental engineer with Waide & Associates of Austin. Hired by the Skyview residents, Cabe presented several "modelings" which calculated emissions from various points and the amount of dirt that would be deposited and/or stirred up along a road to the plant by trucks utilized by Petroplex.

Early in his testimony, Cabe said he calculated on the basis of 14-ton dump trucks with 10 wheels.

But Petroplex attorney Jim Boldrick brought out later that Petroplex is using trucks that are 14.5 tons with two axles and six wheels. This change, contended Boldrick, should drop Cabe's calculated emissions to within an acceptable range.

WITHOUT PAVING the dirt road and without controlling the storage piles and stack, Cabe estimated there would be 111 tons of emissions a year caused by the road, 386 tons from the storage piles and 322 tons from the

Hijacker tried to do same thing in 1980

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A retarded man who hijacked a plane, then was shot and killed by an FBI agent who climbed through a cockpit window, had commandeered the same flight in 1980 and was free on probation, authorities said.

None of the 41 passengers and crew aboard the Northwest Airlines jet were injured in the 2¼-hour seizure Thursday.

The hijacker, who was shot as he began releasing some passengers, had falsely claimed to have a bomb in a shoebox and said he wanted to go to Afghanistan, witnesses said.

Authorities said 20-year-old Glen Kurt Tripp took over Flight 608 as the white-and-gray Boeing 727-200 approached Portland International Airport from Seattle.

Tripp, of Stanwood, Wash., had held another Northwest jet, also Flight 608, for 10 hours on July 11, 1980, at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport, claiming he had a bomb in a suitcase and demanding $100,000.

Just before being arrested in that hijacking — in which no passengers were harmed and where the "bomb" turned out to be a jacket in a suitcase — Tripp reduced his demands to a fast car, a head start and three cheeseburgers. Experts described him as a mentally retarded 17-year-old, and said he had the intellect of a child between the ages of 9 and 12.

During Thursday's hijacking, Tripp railed against the United States for failing to help Afghan guerrillas fighting Soviet troops, said a passenger, John Boyle of Falls City, Wash.

Tripp made no demand except to be flown to Afghanistan, said Donald R. Jones, Port of Portland police chief. "He said he had been in prison and it wouldn't hurt the folks on the plane to sit with him for awhile." Airline officials said the jet was not capable of such a long flight.

The plane landed in Portland about 1:45 p.m. As the hijacker spoke to the crew in an otherwise empty first-class section, two FBI agents climbed through a cockpit window and waited.

Tripp agreed to release about half the 35 passengers, and as they slid down an emergency exit chute, the agents moved in, according to police and witnesses.

"At that time, the suspect made a sudden motion with the box as if to throw it at the agent," said William Baker, agent in charge of the Portland office. "The agent fired one shot."

Tripp was killed with a .38-caliber revolver, he said.

The hijacker was about 5-foot-10 and slender, wearing a suit and black work boots, said a passenger, Army Capt. Marsha Hibbard of Oregon City.

When the flight was about 60 miles from Portland, Tripp "came walking up past me and stopped and said something to the attendant about getting on the phone and telling them we're flying to Afghanistan. I didn't believe it," said passenger Gene Macellari, 55, of Seattle.

The man claimed he had to get home to his wife and two children in Afghanistan, according to Boyle.

Law officers "were all over the place," said Macellari. "I thought I was watching SWAT."

Tripp was on 20 years' probation for first-degree extortion and first-degree kidnapping in the 1980 hijacking, said Dick Paulson, spokesman for the Washington Department of Corrections. Tripp served no time in prison in that hijacking.

He had reported regularly to a probation officer and was being treated at a center for the developmentally disabled, Paulson said.

adjust to a new management style.

"I'm going in with an open mind," said Williams. "I'm going in with the idea that everybody is doing their job now — and expecting that."

Williams was raised on a ranch near Georgetown. On June 19, 1956, he began his Postal Service career as a part-time mail carrier in Austin.

After 15 years in Austin, including two years as a supervisor, he was promoted to the postmaster's job at Pflugerville in March 1971. He was named Georgetown postmaster in June 1972, before moving to Port Arthur as postmaster in January 1976.

Williams said he hopes to move to Midland and assume his duties by about Feb. 1.

A bachelor and a self-proclaimed "great Cowboy fan," Williams said he's eager to come to Midland.

"I'm looking forward to coming out there and being active in the community," he said. "I think the postmaster should become a part of the community."

Officers were not releasing specifics on the type of narcotics recovered pending analysis. That information may be known early next week, Capt. Fuller indicated.

The three men arrested in connection with the search were present when the residence was raided between 3:30 and 3:45 a.m. There was no resistance, the captain said. Names of the men arrested were being withheld pending filing of formal charges.

The primary investigation was conducted by investigator John Lightfoot of the sheriff's department, Capt. Fuller indicated.

No further arrests are anticipated in connection with this search at this time, the captain said.

Watt finishes strip mining regulations work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Completing one of Interior Secretary James Watt's chief goals, the Interior Department has finished a two-year overhaul of government regulations governing the strip mining of coal.

Officials said the rewritten rules did away with "regulatory excesses" in rules adopted by the Carter administration and got rid of what Watt once termed a "bureaucratic nightmare...more designed to obstruct coal production than to further the cause of reclamation."

However, environmentalists attacked the proposed rules after they were unveiled Thursday, saying they furthered Watt's two-year assault on the 1977 law requiring strip miners to restore the land to its approximate original contour and to replant trees and grass.

Controversy swirled over whether the new rules would allow mining inside the boundaries of national parks.

Interior officials said Watt was committed to using all means at his disposal to prevent any mining in the parks.

But environmentalists attacked the proposed regulations for leaving the decision on such mining up to the states and they said they doubted the sincerity of Watt's pledge to fight strip mining in areas where the states give the go-ahead.

The National Park Service, in a September memo, identified 3.7 million acres inside the boundaries of 55 parks where coal mining could potentially be authorized. These are areas where the federal government has not purchased privately owned land inside authorized park boundaries.

The National Park Service and environmentalists had argued for a regulation that would have banned any mining unless the private land owner had made application for all necessary mining permits by Aug. 3, 1977.

Instead of that proposal, the new regulations will leave it to each state to decide who can strip mine inside the parks based on whether the private party has a valid claim.

In parks where the states rule mining can proceed, Watt promised to use all legal avenues to prevent the mining from occurring, including buying the land or trading other government property for the land inside the park.

"The secretary has said he does not want mining in these national parks and he will do whatever is necessary to prevent it," said James R. Harris, director of Interior's Office of Surface Mining.

But Norman Dean, an attorney for the National Wildlife Federation, said, "The new regulations specifically contemplate that mining can take place in the parks if an operator demonstrates he holds valid existing rights."

The proposd new rules, outlined in a 231-page document, deal with all aspects of strip mining regulation. They give states far greater flexibility in regulating mining operations, but do not go as far in some areas as earlier proposals.

stack. Paving the road would reduce that figure to 17 tons, and chemically treating the storage piles and stack would reduce those numbers to 39 tons and 6.5 tons, respectively. That would give a total emissions figure per year of 62 tons, he said.

Maximum allowed from the plant by the TACB for a permit exemption is 25 tons.

Boldrick needled Cabe about his opinion on whether or not the emissions were too high or fell within a reasonable limit.

"Is the fugitive emission from the road significant by itself?" he asked.

"Yes," said Cabe.

"At what time does the figure become grandly significant?"

"When the emissions exceed EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) standards," replied Cabe. "For this particular source (road) on the day I looked at it 5 to 10 tons would be significant."

Boldrick then asserted that Cabe's calculations didn't reflect that the plant would be emitting too many pollutants but rather the problem was fugitive emissions, or those caused by other sources in the area.

TRYING TO PIN down Cabe on what he considered a "significant level" of pollutants, the engineer finally said that 1 ton per year of road emission runs into a significant level.

"That road sits surrounded by cotton fields," noted Boldrick. "Probably 1 ton on the road alone comes from the cotton field."

At one point, hearing examiner Ramon Dasch asked Cabe if "Farmer Brown's plowed fields will be violating TACB standards."

Another part of Cabe's calculations concerned the number of trucks and Boldrick also set fire to these figures. Cabe said he figured 10 to 11 trucks per hour would be using that road, but the Petroplex attorney asserted the number is 8. "There's an error of 25 percent on this calculation," he said.

Dasch questioned the witness as to how much difference that change would make in his calculations and Cabe replied it would be reduced proportionately.

Adding to the attack was TACB attorney Don Postell, who said Cabe had used the wrong "silt content" of the soil. Instead of the number 40 percent it should have been 10 percent, and Postell said the change also would lower the emissions figure.

Picking up on this, Boldrick asked Cabe to do some refiguring and the engineer came up with the number of 4.84 tons. "And you said earlier that anything less than 5 would be OK," the attorney recalled.

STUDYING THE FIGURES, Boldrick asked Cabe if he had computed any emissions on the asphalt plant. "Do you know what it can do in the field?"

Cabe began relating what a brochure on the plant said about the emissions.

Boldrick interrupted, citing an emission number and added, "That's not a very significant emission into the atmosphere."

Before the hearing concluded, Skyview attorney Douglas Caroom of Austin called Dick Moise, Petroplex spokesman, back to testify.

"Did you notify the TACB of the blowout operation on the 15th (of December)," he said, referring to an earlier contention that a rule requires written notification of startup.

That rule, argued Moise, applies to plants that are operating in violation of TACB rules, "and we weren't."

After sharp examination Tuesday night of Moise by Caroom and Wednesday night of Skyview residents by Boldrick, Thursday morning started with a technical explanation by Bruce Broberg of the TACB staff. He testified that TACB calculations showed emissions would fall below the maximum level.

Under cross-examination by Caroom, Broberg admitted the "models" don't include fugitive emissions.

"Most fugitive emissions are not quantifiable," said Broberg.

"Does that apply to roads?" queried Caroom, who received a "yes."

Next on the list was Joann Wiersema, who reviews permits for possible adverse health impacts.

"If it's below the EPA standards, in my opinion there would be no adverse affects," she said, adding in response to Caroom's questioning that she didn't consider effects of fugitive emissions.

And John Haagensen with the TACB regional office in Odessa pointed out that the roads into the plant should be paved with the area inside the facility sprinkled to hold down the amount of blowing dust.

In closing the hearing, Dasch instructed the three attorneys to submit written final arguments within 30 days. The hearing examiner added that he will make a recommendation on the exemption in no less than 90 and no more than 180 days.

Reagan's mid-term marks not the best

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's advisers are quietly planning an early re-election strategy aimed at reasserting the leadership control they acknowledge he has lost and repairing his weakened political standing.

With Reagan's popularity sagging below other modern presidents at the midterm, and repeated reports of disarray in the administration, no attempt is being made to deny that Reagan is at a dangerous political crossroads as planning begins for the 1984 campaign.

"He's clearly got some problems," former aide Lyn Nofziger said. "If the election were tomorrow, he'd be in trouble."

But Nofziger, a political consultant who retains close ties to Reagan, and presidential aides believe Reagan's problems can be overcome if the right changes are made — and soon.

"THE THIRD YEAR is the make-it-or-break-it year," said a Republican strategist who spoke on the condition that he not be identified further. "You either use this year to your advantage or it becomes your undermining."

From interviews with Nofziger and seven senior and mid-level White House aides it became clear that the strategy for corrective action includes reviving the economy, reducing unemployment, restoring Reagan's leadership image, advocating policies that help women and minorities — all an effort to shore up his eroded political base.

Everyone interviewed agreed there was a universal assumption within the White House that Reagan will seek a second term. No one said it would be easy.

"We knew this was going to be the toughest year," said Joanna Bistany, special assistant for communications.

David R. Gergen, assistant for communications, conceded Reagan's loss of influence when he said "one of our greatest concerns" is the realization that the initial confidence the president inspired has eroded.

A WHITE HOUSE aide, who spoke on the condition that he not be further identified, said bluntly: "The leadership edge is gone and agenda control is gone. And they are the things presidents have to take into the year of their re-election with them."

In an attempt to get back that leadership edge, the State of the Union message Reagan will deliver Tuesday night was designed to "help re-establish him as a central figure in American politics," according to Gergen.

White House advisers believe the budget and economy are the main issues on which presidential leadership is judged. The best way to restore that image is for Reagan to be viewed as actively tackling unemployment and the recession.

In a recent speech, White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III said Reagan's fiscal year 1984 economic blueprint "must be bold...because it would be a serious mistake for a president to abandon leadership in this area to the Congress."

No one is repeating Reagan's 1982 campaign theme of "stay the course." Republicans lost 26 House seats in that election, widely seen as a setback for Reagan.

WITH SOME changes in course expected, White House aides are anxious to avoid any appearance of presidential waffling and prefer to portray them as adjustments that indicate flexibility.

"We're not going to bolt or depart from our foundation that's been laid," said Cabinet secretary Craig Fuller. "We are prepared, however, to look at policies that should stimulate the economy."

Fuller said Reagan's budget choices weren't very appealing and "the whole message here is 'you've got to take some essential steps to bring about economic recovery.'"

So the budget Reagan submits to Congress on Jan. 31 will contain new initiatives to deal with unemployment, which was 10.8 percent in December. Previously, Reagan has opposed specific programs to ease joblessness, saying it would improve as the economy grew.

However, the consensus was that unemployment was too serious to ignore because it creates fear even for those who have jobs. "That's the thing that will beat Ronald Reagan if he runs again and loses," Nofziger said.

BESIDES FOCUSING on leadership, the re-election plan also is designed to woo back parts of the coalition that helped elect Reagan in 1980, but have since abandoned him, such as blue collar workers, Catholics, and Southerners.

"I'm going to be very frank with you," said the aide who spoke anonymously. "Reagan's base is gone."

Nofziger said the blue collar workers "are basically Democrats who are going home again because right now they're not real happy obviously with unemployment and the perceived threat of unemployment."

At the same time, there will be an effort to broaden Reagan's political base by appealing to women and minorities who have not supported him.

The recent nominations of Elizabeth Dole to be Transportation secretary and Margaret Heckler to be Health and Human Services secretary resulted from the establishment of a high-level Coordinating Council on Women at the White House several months ago.

"THEIR RECOMMENDATION was that you have got to have more women with visibility and clout in the administration and they recommended two women in the Cabinet, thinking that was impossible," said Ms. Joana Bistany, special assistant for communications. "And now we have three."

U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Jeanne Fitzpatrick is also a member of the cabinet.

Reagan's job performance rating at the midterm is substantially lower than those of four recent predecessors. A new Gallup poll showed Reagan's approval rating is 41 percent, compared with 51 percent for President Carter at the same point.

"You have periods in which a president is down," Ms. Bistany said. "You either let events overtake you and just become so mired down in this despondent atmosphere that is being portrayed or you go on about your business. I think by and large people have made a decision to go on about our business."

Troops move into Beirut-area villages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops moved into hilltop villages overlooking Beirut today to disengage warring Christian and Druse militiamen, following all-night artillery and rocket duels that left four people dead and seven wounded, police reported.

The action came a few hours before U.S. troubleshooter Philip C. Habib was due to arrive at Beirut airport about 2½ miles west of the battle zone, where U.S. Marines have been stationed since late last year.

Lebanese news media said Habib was bringing a compromise calling for a partial pullback of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces next month and establishment of American-manned electronic spy stations in central Lebanon.

In Israel, meanwhile, a storm of public criticism followed the announcement that PLO chief Yasser Arafat and three prominent Israeli leftists had held unprecedented political talks.

Police said Israeli armored units entered the embattled villages of Bsaba, Maroufieh and Dhour el-Shweifat at mid-morning and ordered rival militiamen to stop shooting and evacuate all combat positions.

CHRISTIAN-DRUSE clashes have erupted sporadically for almost a week in the three villages, which overlook the airport positions of U.S. Marines serving with French and Italian paratroopers in Lebanon's multinational peacekeeping force.

The new fatalities brought to about 100 the total number of people killed in the nine-week-old war between Christian and Druse militias in central Lebanon, by official police count.

Israeli and Lebanese negotiators clashed at the bargaining table Thursday over Israel's demand for early-warning outposts in Lebanon, which would be used to monitor Syrian troop movements once Israeli troops withdraw, officials attending the talks said.

A Lebanese government spokesman quoted by Lebanon's state-run National News Agency said Lebanon rejected the establishment of early warning stations for Israel, but is willing to set up such stations on its own and man them with Lebanese experts.

Israeli news reports said Habib was working on a compromise proposal for listening posts manned by Americans, but conference sources said the U.S. delegation did not put the idea on the table at the formal talks, held Thursday in the Israeli border town of Kiryat Shmona.

LEBANON'S STATE television said Habib, under orders from President Reagan to speed up the negotiations, also proposed a partial pullback by Israeli and Syrian forces in Lebanon's central mountains by mid-February.

State-run and privately owned radio stations in Lebanon said the Habib compromise also calls for the Lebanese army, backed by units from the U.S., French and Italian peacekeeping force, to take over control of several mountain areas promptly. They also would take control of the international highway between Beirut and Damascus, the radio reports said.

Despite the wrangle over the spy posts, a joint statement by negotiators at the U.S.-mediated talks said "good progress was made" in the eighth formal bargaining session.

That "progress" entailed creation of four committees designed to speed up the negotiations. The working groups may meet as often as four times a week, while the full delegations continue their twice-weekly sessions.

The joint communique said the committees were created "to enter into detailed examination" of four of five topics on the agenda: withdrawal, security arrangements, future Israeli-Lebanese relations and possible guarantees of the final agreement.

A fifth committee was named previously to formulate a declaration ending the 34-year-old formal state of war between Lebanon and Israel.

MEANWHILE, THE PLO and the Israeli leftist Sheli Party issued an historic joint announcement of political talks this week between Arafat and three Israelis doves. Neither side said exactly when or where the meeting took place.

Ribbing leads to school shooting

MANCHESTER, Mo. (AP) — A "nice boy" who had won a good citizenship award was taunted about his family by his junior high classmates before he pulled out pistols and killed one student, wounded another and took his own life, officials said.

David F. Lawler, 14, opened fire with an automatic .22-caliber pistol at Parkway South Junior High School on Thursday, killing Randall Koger, 15, and seriously wounding Greg Palmer, also 15, said St. Louis County police detective Richard Seymour.

Witnesses told police that Koger and Palmer had made disparaging remarks earlier about Lawler's brother and stepfather.

The boys, all eighth-graders, were not disciplinary problems at the suburban St. Louis school, according to Principal Don Senti. He called Lawler "an above-average student" who received a good citizenship award last semester.

"All three of these kids came to school every day — what more can I say?" Senti said.

Neighbors of Lawler's said they were shocked at the shootings.

"I can't believe he'd do that," Gielea Lavacek said. "He was just a nice boy who played around here. It's a total shock to me."

Gym teacher Sherry McWhorter, who was watching the 25 students in the study hall, told police Lawler fired one shot from a .22-caliber automatic into the ceiling at about 11:45 a.m. and said, "Now, everybody shut up," according to Seymour.

Lawler then yelled at Koger, "You won't call my brother a (expletive) anymore," and fired two or three shots at him. Koger fell to the floor, fatally wounded in the back, Mrs. McWhorter said.

Lawler then walked up to Palmer, who was lying on the floor, and said, "You can't call my brother a (expletive) anymore," and fired once, police said.

The boy then walked to the front of the room, pulled another gun, a .22-caliber revolver, out of a bag which police said contained "a sizable amount of ammunition" and said, "I can't stand it anymore."

The boy put barrel of the revolver to his temple and pulled the trigger, Mrs. McWhorter told police.

Both Lawler and Koger were pronounced dead at a nearby hospital.

Palmer remained in serious but stable condition Thursday night at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Pro handicappers like Washington Saturday

By ANDREW BEYER
Los Angeles Times and Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Dallas Cowboys are very narrowly favored to beat the Washington Redskins Saturday, but among professional handicappers there is a consensus about what will happen in the NFC championship game:

The Redskins are going to win it.

In fact, one handicapper who operates in the Cowboys' territory insists that picking Washington is the only intellectually respectable position to hold on this game.

"Anybody who does their work has to like the Redskins," said Steve Turner, who runs the Texas Sports Wire, a football-handicapping service. "Anybody who gives out this game (to his clients) and doesn't give out Washington doesn't know much about handicapping. This is cut and dried.

"Dallas' only advantage is that they've been in the pressure cooker before, while the Redskins have a lot of young players," Turner maintained. "But from every other standpoint, the game is in Washington's favor.

"NO. 1, DEFENSE: they've proved they can play better defense than the Cowboys. No. 2, preparation: they will have two extra days to prepare for the game. Dallas played last Sunday and will lose a day traveling. No. 3, they're at home. No. 4, they're playing on natural turf. No. 5, revenge: this is the most important factor in all handicapping and Dallas handed the Redskins their only loss of the year."

But what about that game? Didn't the Cowboys' victory at RFK Stadium here prove that they are the superior team?

Rich Bomze, who publishes the Sports Reporter, analyzed the Cowboys' win with his usual attention to statistical detail and concluded: "Throw that game out."

Bomze loves the Redskins for compiling a 17-4-1 record against the point spread over their last 22 games, and he readily forgives that loss to the Cowboys.

"For that game," he said, "Dallas put in a new defense that Washington had never seen, rushing two linebackers. Theismann was sacked seven times for 60 yards. Of his nine interceptions this year, he threw three of them in that game. Riggins carried only nine times for 26 yards. Those are not legitimate figures."

THE FIGURES Bomze thinks are legitimate are the ones that reflect the Redskins' defensive superiority and the Cowboys' recent offensive shortcomings: "Washington has held its last three opponents to less than 100 yards rushing. I love that defense, and I don't think Tony Dorsett will get 100 yards against them. They're in gear, they couldn't be peaking any better. But the Cowboys aren't sharp; against Tampa Bay, they got inside the 20-yard line four times and couldn't score. I pick Washington, 20-16."

While the Texas Sports Wire and the Sports Reporter are two of the more reputable names in the often fly-by-night business of football touting, nobody in America has a better batting average this year than an obscure outfit called A.S.T. Sports. A Las Vegas-based newsletter called the Sports Service News has monitored the performance of 112 handicapping services this season, and A.S.T. has led them all, compiling an amazing 71.4 winning percentage on its selections.

The service's proprietor, Aaron Thorne, was reached by phone in Endicott, N.Y., and was asked whom he liked in the big game.

"Wait a minute," Thorne said. "Let me consult somebody." He returned to the phone a moment later. "Dallas," he said.

WHAT WAS his reasoning?

"You probably wouldn't believe it," Thorne said. "I used to use statistical bases — the number of yards a team gained per rush, the number of yards the defense had allowed per rush. ... I used to do that. But my wife would make her picks on the games, too, and she was tremendous. I got tired of seeing my selections wrong and hers right. So I stopped using my own games and just relied on her intuition. Out of her last 18 games, she's 15-3. Uh, wait a minute."

Thorne left the phone briefly and then returned.

"Washington," he said. "We want to switch the pick to Washington. I had said Dallas because I know they're a good football team but my wife thought about it in the kitchen for a couple of minutes and Washington's our selection."

That makes it a cinch. On to the Super Bowl.

No. 1 Bruins beat Bears

By Associated Press

California Coach Dick Kuchen obviously was mistaken.

"We felt we could lighten up a little on Jackson in the beginning," he said.

Responding to the challenge, Ralph Jackson scored 15 of his career-high 17 points in the first half and helped top-ranked UCLA rally to beat Pacific 10 Conference opponent California, 68-63.

"Obviously, we made some adjustments at halftime," the Cal coach said.

UCLA trailed by six points twice in the first half but bounced back for a 38-35 halftime lead. California pulled within one, 56-55, with 6:45 remaining, but

College Basketball

UCLA scored 10 of the next 12 points — assisted on two buckets by Jackson — to pull away.

"Thank goodness for Ralph Jackson," UCLA Coach Larry Farmer said.

Forward Kenny Fields scored a team-high 19 points for the Bruins, 12-1 and 5-0 in the Pac 10. Center Michael Pitts scored a game-high 22 points for Cal, which lose to UCLA for the 47th consecutive time dating back 22 years.

Three other ranked teams — all in the Big Ten — saw action Thursday night. Second-ranked Indiana defeated Michigan State 89-85, and No. 10 Iowa clobbered 18th-ranked Minnesota 68-52.

Top Ten

Ted Kitchel scored a season-high 32 points to boost Indiana over Michigan State, but Coach Bobby Knight was not satisfied.

"We allowed them to make a seven-point run at us," Knight said. "This disappointed me because it enabled them to get back in the game. This was the least alert any team has ever played since I've coached."

Indiana led by as many as 16 points in the first half until the Spartans rallied to cut the margin to five early in the second half. Randy Wittman added 22 points for Indiana, 13-1 overall and 3-1 in the Big Ten.

Bob Hansen scored 19 points, and Greg Stokes had 17 to lead Iowa to an easy victory over injury-riddled Minnesota. Forced to play without starting guard Marc Wilson, who was out with a hamstring pull, the Gophers fell behind 35-22 at the half.

The Hawkeyes, 12-2 and 3-1 in the conference, held 7-foot-3 Minnesota center Randy Breuer to 16 points. Minnesota fell to 11-3 and 3-2.

Unranked Teams

In other Big Ten games, Brad Sellers scored 24 points as Wisconsin defeated Northwestern 49-45, and Tony Campbell's 23 points paced Ohio State over Michigan, 75-68.

Lamar extended the nation's longest homecourt winning streak to 61 games with an 83-53 Southland Conference victory over Northeast Louisiana; behind the 28 points of Tom Sewell.

Luellen Foster scored 10 of his 16 points from the foul line late in the game to give Alabama-Birmingham a 71-60 Sun Belt Conference victory over Old Dominion.

Bulldogs face key test tonight

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Once again the Midland High Bulldogs find themselves in a key game in the race for District 4-5A supremacy as they take on the Abilene High Eagles on at 8 p.m. today in Abilene.

While the Bulldogs are fighting in Abilene for first place, Midland Lee will be at Chaparral Center against Abilene Cooper and looking for its second win of the 4-5A season.

The Bulldogs, coming off a scorching 67 percent shooting performance from the field against San Angelo Tuesday, hold lead the district with a 4-1 record, 12-9 overall, with four teams knotted in second place at 3-2: Abilene High, San Angelo, Odessa High and Big Spring.

IN A LEAGUE featuring five teams with a fairly equal distribution of talent, Midland High coach Jack Stephenson says Abilene High "Is as good as anybody. They've got some outstanding players, two of the better players in the league in (Les) Hines and (Mike) Simmons. They are a good shooting team with good rebounders and they have four starters back from last year, Hines, Simmons, (Tim) Robinson and Shannon Daniels. "Hines and Simmons are averaging about 20 points a game and they are good players."

Midland High counters with Johnny Pannell, a 13.4 per game average, Doug Hixon, 11.9, David McFarland, 11.1 and Blake Liberty, 8.8.

Stephenson will utilize those four players plus most of his bench in his "Wave Attack" running game plan to try and stop the running Eagles.

"They play exactly the same as we do," said Stephenson. "They run, they press, they fast break, exactly like we do."

With first place on the line, Stephenson sees the pressure to win heavier on Abilene's shoulders. "If anybody is under pressure, it's Abilene High," he said. "Even if we lose, we're still in first place."

MIDLAND LEE, plagued by a lack of experience and a lack of height, is a 1-4 in district and 3-18 overall. Tonight, however, the Rebels will be facing a team that is also finding it difficult to win: Abilene Cooper.

Though the Cougars got off to a good start by knocking off pre-season league favorite San Angelo, they have been finding the going rough since and are only one game out of the cellar at 2-3.

But that doesn't mean they don't have some talent.

"They've got a real good outside shooter in (Bob) Estes," said Lee head coach Paul Stueckler, "and two of their players are coaches' boys, Estes and (Greg) Mendenhall. They're the best players on the team. They've got a scrappy team. Their record is not real good but they've got a good team. They did beat San Angelo."

The Rebels will probably go to the style of play that has gotten them their lone 4-5A victory, a game Stueckler has dubbed the "Domino Game."

The "Domino Game" is Stueckler's version of a slow-down, patient attack geared toward taking a team out of a running game and is effective in opening up a zone defense. He's employed it in his last three games and it was the main reason for the Rebels 36-33 win over Odessa Permian.

With ball control a key to the success of the "Domino," pressure falls on the shoulders of Lee's scorers to wait for their shot. Alvin Henry and Tod Brown do most of the scoring for Lee with 9.2 averages each while Sylverster Johnson and Derek Westbrook come in at 8.1 and 7.0 respectively.

ELSEWHERE IN District 4-5A play, either Odessa High or San Angelo must fall out of the four-way tie for second place as the Bronchos travel to San Angelo. Big Spring and Odessa Permian will meet in the remaining league game.

Boy's District 4-5A Cage Standings

OC escapes MC pistol-whipping with slow down

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — It may have been snowing outside, but it was like watching butter melt here Thursday night inside the cramped and packed Odessa College gym.

The Wranglers of Odessa College tried to cool off the shoot-from-hip Chaparrals of Midland College with a four corner delay game. The result was that the Wranglers didn't get pistol whipped, but they lost 45-34 in this brief Western Junior College Athletic Conference non-game.

It wasn't the most exciting of cage displays except for the fact that the game was close throughout. However, who could blame the Wranglers, who are desperate for a victory under any circumstances. OC is now 1-6 in loop warfare while MC climbed to 7-1.

It's a good bet that had the Wranglers run with the powerful scoring machine of the Chaps, they would have been blown out of their own gym. This way they stayed in the game and even had their chances to win it.

In doing so, however, OC became a record victim of the Chap defense. The 34 point effort by the Wranglers is the least amount of points in history scored against the Chaps in one game.

OC did make a game of it by holding the ball more than shooting it and was behind by a mere three-point margin, 33-30, with 5:16 left in the game. Who knows what a break or two at that point could have done. But Nate Bufford, who led the Chaps with 16 points on a seven of 14 night from the field, answered the OC challenge with a bomb and Ervin Williams got a rebound layup for a 37-30 lead and the game was history.

"I thought we handled things very well," noted MC coach Jerry Stone. "A delay game in their gym requires a mental approach and we stayed in the lead to control things.

"You look up at the scoreboard and your leading by only five can be a little scary, but you have to realize that a five-point lead in a game like this is really like a 12-point lead if the pace continues. It was a good Odessa-Midland affair and if we keep this a friendly rivalry, it will be good for basketball."

The Chaps never did trail in the game and that's the way you beat a four corner attack. However, the Chap players didn't like the OC tactics. It crimped their style.

Bufford, however, remained the eternal optimist after the game, saying, "I don't like this kind of game, but we got to work on our 2-3 defense that we never use."

But Bufford expected the four corners before going into the game. "They (OC) used the slow down game against Howard College. It didn't work for them in that one either, but I expected to see it tonight."

Chester Smith, MC's 6-6 post who was coming off a big 36-point night in Monday's victory over Clarendon, didn't have a chance to have another big night, but he still managed 14 points on a six of 13 shooting effort. Smith was the only other Chap in double figures.

"They (OC) played too slow for us. I didn't think they wanted to play with us anyway," noted Smith. "I don't expect to see that type of game against us many more times though because none of the other teams in the league like to play that kind of game."

Dolphins defy 3-in row odds

MIAMI (AP) — Good things come in threes. So do bad things. It all depends on which end of the score you're on.

Coach Don Shula and the Miami Dolphins have a chance to carve out a small niche in the National Football League record book Sunday against the New York Jets in the American Conference championship game, the final stepping stone to the Super Bowl.

Miami already has baeten New York twice, 45-28 and 20-19 during the regular season. Only a half dozen times in NFL history, and not since the 1970 merger with the American Football League created the existing alignment, has one team beaten another three times in the same season.

That prospect — along with the Dolphins' concern over the lower back injury bothering Miami place-kicker Uwe von Schamann — is a principal subject of discussion as the game approaches.

"If we lose to them three times, we don't deserve to be in the Super Bowl," said Jet quarterback Richard Todd. Other New York players spoke of "revenge" for the losses, the first of which — on opening day in 1982 — ended the Jets' eight-game unbeaten streak against Miami.

But Shula doesn't see it quite that way. "I don't look at it as having to beat the Jets three times in a season," he said. "I look at it as beating them for the first time in 1983."

Shula would, of course, love nothing more than to be on the winning side of three in a row this time. In 1965, when he was Baltimore's head coach, the Colts lost three in a row to Green Bay.

Since the merger, two teams have met three times in one season on nine occasions. In each instance, the teams split the regular-season games. In 1971 the Dolphins beat Baltimore, then lost to the Colts but won the third meeting 21-0 in the AFC title game. Last season Buffalo beat New York, the Jets rebounded in the second game, then the Bills outlasted the Jets 31-27 in a wild-card playoff.

The series between Miami and New York is virtually even, the Jets having won 17 games, lost 16 and tied one. It has been a history of streaks. New York won the first eight meetings and Miami won 14 of the next 16 before the Jets' most recent domination.

Sunday's game is the first playoff meeting between the teams.

The Jets, who traveled to Los Angeles last weekend and knocked off the Raiders, the AFC's winningest club, have spent this week back in New York, working out in sub-freezing temperatures. It hasn't been received all that well.

Snow in Rockies delight to skiers

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

The Rockies need another snow storm, a situation that perhaps is in the process of being remedied. Although the snow depths sound good, it has been so long since a refurbishing downfall that the snow is packed hard and worn thin and ice on the lower slopé areas is a hazard.

Nevertheless, those who took advantage of winter wonderland conditions over the holidays have a knapsack full of memories to keep them going until they can get back to the slopes.

Benefiting from storms that swirled over the peaks of northern New Mexico and along the Colorado border, the skier who went before Christmas not only found knee-deep powder but escaped the post-Christmas rush.

In the latter respect, the skiers got an additional bonus when storms in West Texas and southern New Mexico over the Christmas weekend prevented barrel-stave advocates from flocking to the mountains in the their expected numbers late Christmas day or the day after.

TAOS, anticipating the usual Dec. 26 rush, instituted skiing by reservation through the New Year's weekend. If you didn't have a reservation to pick up at the lift window, the take-pot-luck-skier couldn't get on the mountain, unless there were fewer than 4,000 skiers.

The idea was to keep alive the Taos tradition of "no lines."

As it turned out, the crowds failed to arrive in the expected hordes because of hazardous road conditions in the supposedly salubrious winter climes to the south. It proved a lucky break for the operators at Ski Valley.

The reservation system was not without its snags. Herr Eng Boen, noted Midland skier, said his window-wait was a half hour, but others were to complain of an hour and a half of the 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. slope time lost. By now, however, the kinks should be worked out and if a short wait at the lift window results in shorter lift lines, it will be well worth it.

Other reservation dates are planned for Feb. 12-13 and March 13 through 19, when big crowds are anticipated.

IT WAS easy to see why the post-Christmas hordes hadn't arrived on schedule. The snow-covered, ice slick highway from Santa Fe to Roswell on the way home resembled Hitler's retreat from St. Petersburg. Cars were strewn in drift ditches along the side of the road and there were even a few overturned trailers. It was a sobering sight.

But even the driving-on-egg-shells return couldn't dim the memory of the trip.

Early in the week, skiers were slushing downhill without shirts, some of the module-ignoring machos even peeled down to shorts and boots.

THAT QUICKLY changed when the storms rolled over the mountains, providing two days of steady snowstorm skiing as cannons boomed over the ridge where trails were temporarily closed. After what happened in California last spring, no one shrugged off the avalanche control precautions as unnecessary distractions, serving only to delay the skier from his appointed trail.

A 51-inch snow level at the week's start, reached 71 inches after two days fall, the deepest in the Colorado-New Mexico Rockies, outside of Wolf Creek.

The resulting powder was never better or, to some, deeper. One girl took a tumble coming down the West Basin with skis and poles flying. She never found one of her skis, which scooted under the snow, nobody could find where. But there's always spring to look forward to.

ONE WEARY parent, forced to Herring Bone to the top of a run late in the day, when legs ache and rebel, by goading offsprings, discovered the powder was so deep, he couldn't lift his skis to turn on the descent. The result, a series of frustrating tumbles, just how frustrating were later revealed when on the ride back to Taos at the day's end, a son, with a tape-recorder memory, recited verbatim each of the indelicacies that accompanied fall No. 1, fall No. 2, fall No.3, fall No. 4.... A bit unnerving when the victim thought he was mumbling to himself. However, it's a quick, effective way to clean up a parent's act in a hurry.

Still, defensively the guilty party squirmed, "I couldn't have said those things. I've never heard of some of those words...besides, what did you expect, taking me up Heart Attack Hill."

FOR THE skier visiting Taos this winter, in addition to good snow, providing the area is replenished intermittenly, he will find higher lift prices ($19), an expanded parking area and a rebuilt restaurant (The Phoenix) on the Kachina Basin side of the mountain. It's the fourth time the isolated rest stop has been rebuilt. Fire, arson suspected, destroyed it most recently last February.

The two new ski lifts and expanded trail system, approved last year, have not been developed as yet, but, with a mountain to yourself practically, they weren't really needed.

For overnight lodging, the range is vast. The weeklong ski valley packages at The Thunderbird or St. Bernard, including meals, tickets and lessons, to the TEnnis Ranch on the road from Taos, to the wide variety of in-Taos motels to the dormitory style Abmonidable Snowmansion, a bunk and breakfast for $9 or so, at Arroyo Secco.

Taos' continued expansion as a ski area is not without opposition. A group of citizens from Rio Hondo and Val Verde picketed the parking area, handing out leaflets protesting the transfer of water rights for further development and expansion at, what they fell, is the expense of the towns water requirements.

Tammy gets first goal as Pack wins

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

With the way the Midland High bench was yelling "Tammy, Tammy," you'd have thought Tammy Smith had scored the winning basket in Thursday night's District 4-5A girl's basketball game against Abilene High. Instead, all the cheering for was her first varsity points.

With the game long since out of reach, the Bulldogs outscored the Eagles 17-1 in the second quarter for a 35-10 halftime lead, MHS coach Jane Young was giving her bench a lot of playing time.

Smith was in the game in the final minutes and as the clock wound down to 13 seconds, she put up a shot from medium range that thrilled her teammates, her coach and fans as it fell through the hoop.

The players on the bench kept up the "Tammy, Tammy," chorus until the end and Coach Young joined in when the Bulldogs stole the ensuing in bounds pass. She started yelling "give the ball to Tammy," to give her 5-foot-7 junior a shot at the last bucket. Smith got the ball, but didn't get off the shot. No harm done, Midland High easily took the game, 61-30, for a 6-2 league record while Abilene High fell to 0-8.

WHILE SMITH'S bucket was easily the highlight of a one-sided game, it had no bearing on the final outcome which was more-or-less decided by the play of Sheila Christian who had 18 points, 15 in the first half despite three personal fouls.

"I thought Sheila played an excellent game," said Young.

She was one of the few as the Bulldogs, overall, looked like they were lacking that little extra they have shown in previous games. There were a lot of missed shots that could easily have been made and some passes that were thrown where they shouldn't have been.

But, despite the lack of crispness, Young was pleased with her team's performance.

"It looked like they were having fun out there and I got everybody into the game," she said. "I think we just weren't playing with the intensity we've had in some of our past games, but we won the ball game and that's what counts. I thought we played a great game but we need more intensity on Monday (when the Bulldogs take on cross-town rival Midland Lee at Lee Gym). But, any time we play Lee, the game is always a good one."

AMONG THOSE players who came off the bench to join Smith, who has seen action in 14 games this season, were two who have seen limited action through the year and one who got her first taste of varsity play: Lisa Bowers. Karen Tabor and Theresa Mason also saw plenty of time.

Of the regulars, Penny Griffin and Rebecca Caton broke into double figures with 10 points each. For the Eagles, a team playing without the services of four of their better players (they were kicked off the team), Jennifer Wolfe was the leading scorer with nine points while Sharla Gilmore added seven.

Monday's game against Lee's Rebels not only has the incentive of being a cross-town rivalry, but also the incentive of a key game in the race for 4-5A first place. The Rebels are coming in with a 7-1 record and a one-game lead over Midland High and Big Spring at 6-2.

Because of the disciplinary action taken against the Abilene High players, the Eagle junior varsity game against Midland High had to be scrapped since AHS had to take players from its ranks to fill the varsity gaps.

Steers, Bobcats stay close in 4-5A

In District 4-5A girls' basketball action, the Big Spring Steers and San Angelo Bobcats stayed within striking distance of the league-leading Midland Lee Rebels by posting victories over Odessa Permian and Odessa High respectively Thursday night.

The Steers, tied with Midland High for second place at 6-2 and one game behind the Rebels in the standings, exploded in the fourth quarter for 22 points while holding the Panthers to 10 enroute to a 50-33 victory.

The loss dropped Permian to 5-3 in 4-5A play and into a tie with San Angelo for third.

Monette Wise led the Steers' attack with 14 points while Sylvia Randle added another 12 and Shell Rutledge 10. Permian was led by Carolyn Gibbs with 10 points.

The Bobcats posted a 7-6 lead at the end of the first period of play and were up by a 19-14 count at the half. The Bronchos fought back in the third quarter to cut the maring to one, 29-28, but San Angelo won the final frame 12-10 to insure the victory.

Bonnie Smith led the Bobcat scoring attack with 15 points and teammate Val Scholaudt added 10 more while Pam Allen and Melanie Rheams paced OHS with 12 and 10 respectively.

Lee girls ease Cooper

ABILENE — Midland Lee used a strong fourth quarter attack Thursday night to erase an Abilene Cooper 44-36 third period lead and go on to claim a 53-50 girls' District 4-5A victory here which kept the Rebels on top of the league standings at 7-1.

In that decisive final quarter, which the Rebels won 17-6, Faye Oudems played a key role as she netted three of her five fourth quarter free throws to help bring Lee back to a 47-47 tie with a little over four minutes remaining the game.

With the score tied, Lee's Queen Sanders came away with two back-to-back big offensive rebounds that she put back up to give the Rebels a 51-47 lead.

Oudems hit her final two free throws with a minute left in the ball game to give Lee a little breathing room at 53-48.

Felicia Farias held a hot hand for Lee against Cooper as she scored a game-high 17 points while teammate Stacy Harmon added another 10. For Cooper, Pat Seldon scored 13 and Leisa King added 10.

The victory improved Lee's league-leading record to 7-1 and sets up a key encounter against Midland High, in second place at 6-2, Monday night at Lee Gym. A Lee victory, combined with a Big Spring (also 6-2) loss to San Angelo (5-3), could give the Rebels a big two-game lead during the second half of the district race.

For diehards, a dream come true

Dr. Leonard Arnold of Winnekta, Ill., flanked by twin sons, Larry and Gary, work out Thursday at the All Star Baseball School in Scottsdale, Ariz. They will play against the 1969 Chicago Cubs today. The school, with a $2,195 tab, was cooked up by former Midland Manager Randy Hundley.

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — They will never be mistaken for the Boys of Summer. But for 45-year-old Dr. Harry Soloway and 62 other middle-aged baseball fanatics like him, today "will be one of the biggest days in our lives."

Soloway, a psychiatrist from Chicago, is among a group of men age 35 and older, most of them die-heard Cubs fans, who have spent the past week — and $2,195 apiece — living out their diamond dreams.

THEY HAVE been taking part in a simulated spring training camp run by members of the 1969 Cubs, and the gathering was to wind up with the amateurs taking on their Chicago instructors in a 15-inning game today.

"I've been a Cub fan for more than 30 years. This is my reward," the salt-and-pepper bearded Soloway said Thursday after the last intrasquad scrimmage.

HIS TEAM, averaging 41 years in age, came from all over the country for five days of specialized instruction from former Cubs Ernie Banks, Billy Williams, Ron Santo, Ferguson Jenkins, Glenn Beckert, Randy Hundley, Jim Hickman, Jose Cardenal, Rich Nye and Gene Oliver.

These are the same Cubs who blew the 1969 National League East Division pennant with one of the more classic late season fold-ups in major league baseball history.

"I hear people are picking us to get beaten by eight runs, too," said Santo, alluding to how Chicago finished eight games behind the New York Mets in 1969 after leading for the season's first 155 days.

But win or lose, Soloway said the camp was worth it, no matter what the cost.

"You better believe it. Every bit of it," he said. "'You only live once."

At the start of camp Sunday, most of the amateurs thought they were going to die here. If the half-hour of daily aerobics didn't get them, something else usually did.

MEL HELMS, a real estate developer from Mundelein, Ill., tore knee ligaments while throwing a ball to the plate from second base the first day. Even Oliver said his body "feels like it's been through a war ... and lost."

"Only if they don't show up," said Soloway. "I hear they may throw Fergie Jenkins at us. It's funny that he was the best pitcher on the '69 Cubs and will probably be the best pitcher on the '83 Cubs. That tells you something about the Cubs' player development."

HUNDLEY, former Midland Cubs manager who organized the camp along with Illinois business partner Allan Goldin, said "if these guys can beat us, it would fulfill another of their fantasies and that's OK because that's what this thing is all about."

Even Heisman Trophy winners are guilty of fumbles

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Who won the Heisman the year Jim Brown didn't? (Paul Hornung, of course.)

Now it gets tougher. Who won the Heisman the year Gale Sayers finished 12th? (Why, that would be John Huarte, you will recollect.)

Would you believe Joe Namath, Sammy Baugh, Bobby Layne or Otto Graham never won a Heisman? Also, what do Floyd Little, Walter Payton, Bob Griese, Dick Butkus and John Unitas have in common? Give up? They never won the Heisman either.

Now it really gets tough: Who won the Heisman the year Freeman McNeil didn't? (Well, that would be Charles White, of course.)

FREEMAN MCNEIL, you have to understand, is the best runner with the football on any field in 1983. You can prove it. He ran for more yards than any back in the NFL this season. More than Tony Dorsett, Marcus Allen or Billy Sims, Heisman winners all. More by plenty than Charlie White or George Rogers, who also won Heismans Freeman McNeil didn't.

The college boys? Well, let's put it this way: They haven't run into Lyle Alzado yet. Call us when they do.

Freeman McNeil is the success story of football 1983. The New York Jets are on the brink of the Super Bowl after knocking back the Raiders last Saturday, 17-14, and they are there largely because of Freeman McNeil — 786 yards in the regular season, 303 yards in two playoff games so far.

FOR FREEMAN McNeil, it hasn't all been a parade down Fifth Avenue, a walk in the sun. First of all, Freeman doesn't exactly look the part. He looks, at first, like this kind of soft little fat kid whose feet hurt. He didn't have to sit down and make up his mind whether he wanted to join the Olympics instead of the NFL. Freeman runs fast, but only if something is gaining on him with murder in its eyes. A clock is not his idea of an opponent.

When he went to UCLA, he had opted for one of those funny little offenses where running backs only get the ball when the quarterback runs into a jam. He passed up USC where they stamp out Heismans like cookies behind an offensive line that could sweep out 100-yard days for Toulouse-Lautrec.

But the New York Jets are not the Heisman committee. They vote with their pocketboook, the sincerest form of flattery, and they were not fooled. Freeman McNeil's total of 17 (count 'em) 100-yard games at UCLA impressed them more than his Heisman ballots, and they made him their No. 1 draft pick in 1981. McNeil was still around when the Jets picked (third) because New Orleans with their first pick chose (natch) the Heisman Trophy winner, George Rogers. The New York Giants chose Lawrence Taylor. The Jets were happy to pick a guy who never finished in the top ten in the Heisman. They didn't care how short, fat or slow Freeman McNeil was supposed to be, they liked where he kept ending up with the football: the end zone.

THE JETS were a 4-12 team when they drafted McNeil. They moved immediately to 10-5-1. This year they were 6-3 and in the Easter egg hunt for the Super Bowl. They were alive after two rounds of playoffs after Freeman McNeil helped them blow out the dangerous Cincinnati Bengals with a 202-yard day and the Raiders with 101.

So, after the Raider game, why wasn't Freeman dancing in the aisles of the locker room, throwing his helmet and yelling "A-l-l-l r-i-g-h-t!"? Or listening to the coach condemn Al Davis as "a sick man"?

Why was Freeman McNeil cowering in his locker and looking as if he just heard the stock market fell?

In the Coliseum catacombs lockers, familiar territory to Freeman McNeil, visiting players dress two to a cubicle. On the slate on the door, the equipment manager scribbles the numbers of the players in chalk.

When Freeman McNeil came to his locker after the game, he reached up and quickly erased his number "24." Then he locked the door and stared at the floor while his teammate grabbed a towel and headed for the shower. Freeman McNeil did not feel a part of the dancing in the streets.

To understand, you have to go back to the closing minutes of the game. The Jets with their second interception of the day had just stalled what appeared to be the Raiders' last chance for the day. They had the ball, the lead (17-14) and there were only two minutes to play. They handed the ball to Freeman McNeil three times. Object: freeze out the game. "When you have a cannon, you fire it," Jets Coach Walt Michaels said.

ONLY, THE cannon misfired. On the third carry, on the Raiders' 23, Freeman McNeil lunged for a first down. Burgess Owens hit the ball with his helmet and it squirted loose.

L.A. got the ball. Two passes later, they were on the Jets' 42-yard line, second down and two to go and 1:50 left to play. On the sidelines, Freeman McNeil could see his whole life flashing before him, to say nothing of the headlines whirling around buildings on Times Square or screaming from the news trucks on Broadway: "McNeil Fumbles Away Super Bowl."

"You don't know what trauma this caused, what I was feeling. I thought 'I have lost us this game. I've lost us the Super Bowl!' I am not supposed to fumble in that situation. You're supposed to think in those situations."

Freeman McNeil sat staring at the floor. "See this shirt?" he asked, indicating an advertising T-shirt for a "Big Mac Attack." "I wore this shirt the last game I played in the Coliseum, the day we beat SC, 20-17."

CLEARLY, THIS Big Mac felt the shirt had betrayed him, turned on him. It hadn't. Out on the field, with 1:50 to go, the Raiders' Jim Plunkett and the Jets' Lance Mehl took him off the hook. Mehl intercepted Plunkett's pass.

McNeil was not consolable. "I had fumbled twice. I'm not supposed to fumble twice in a championship game," he said solemnly. He ignored the pounding on the door of the shouting media, the brandished microphones, the spinning tape recorders.

He had fumbled at the half, with 38 seconds to play, turning the ball over to the Raiders on the New York 39, just after he had rambled for 26 yards. The Jets escaped then, too, as Cliff Branch fumbled the ball right back to New York three plays later.

"But you won!" an interviewer tried to comfort McNeil. "Don't matter, it's on my mind. I almost lost us the game." "But look," his companion persisted, "even Jim Brown fumbled! Red Grange! How long you going to brood about this?" "Two days," said Freeman McNeil.

HAE WAS firm about it. Penance fixed. "No way a man ought to fumble twice in a game like that," he said, shaking his head, like a monk about to immerse himself in the icy water of remorse. "Tell those guys outside it's messed up my head and I don't want to talk about it till I get dressed and regroup myself a little bit."

His hearer reluctantly assented. But he couldn't resist pausing at the door, turning and consoling. "Look, Freeman, you're too hard on yourself. I mean, look at it this way: even Heisman Trophy winners fumble!"

Some of Cowboys like to play at RFK

DALLAS (AP) — It sounds bizarre, but some of the Dallas Cowboys say they actually enjoy playing in RFK Stadium, where they will be the object of boos and scorn Saturday.

"It's a stimulant to play there. It gets your adrenalin going," said Dallas linebacker Bob Breunig on the eve of the Cowboys' departure to meet Washington in the National Conference title game.

"I love to play on natural turf. It's my favorite surface," Breunig said. "Having all the fans against you gets you motivated."

FORMER Cowboys Charlie Waters and Cliff Harris used to delight in playing at RFK.

"There was nothing like getting dirt and grass all over you — that was football," Harris said.

"Yeah, I feel that way, too," Breunig agreed. "There's a noise factor you have to deal with, but it's nice when you can quell it with a good performance."

"It's good to get ahead early if you can and take the crowd out of the game," fullback Ron Springs said.

Dallas has had spectacular success at RFK Stadium, winning there the last three times — including a 24-10 triumph on Dec. 5.

The Cowboys have beaten the Redskins six consecutive times.

"The Redskin fans really get involved," said wide receiver Drew Pearson. "They are diehard."

THE COWBOYS also are prepared for the worst of field conditions. They worked out all week in Dallas in frigid temperatures and on the soggy natural surface of their practice field.

"It (the field) will be to their advantage because the play on it," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "That place can be three degrees and snowing or 40 degrees and soggy. We'll just have to take what we get."

Landry said the crowd would be another factor.

"You can't do anything with a noisy crowd other than backing away. Then it gets louder," Landry said. "It did bother us a great deal in Minnesota. It's a real problem."

Noise gives the Dallas offense trouble when the team is in the spread, with quarterback Danny White some five to seven yards behind the center. Then, it's difficult for the players to hear White's signal counts.

ASKED IF he liked to play in RFK, White said "Yeah, after we win. It's a tough place to play."

The Cowboys were scheduled to fly to Washington this afternoon.

"Our goal is the Super Bowl and it won't be a successful season unless we get there," said Springs.

"We've had two big disappointments the last two seasons losing out in the National Conference championship game," he said. "It was something we had to think about throughout the off-season. We don't want to have to go through that again."

Stadler leads Hope Classic with 15-under after two days

AP Laserphoto

Deryl Evans of Los Angeles Kings whips shot past Detroit goalie Corrado Nicalef for a score in National Hockey League action.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Craig Stadler, already setting a blistering pace in the $375,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic, says he'll need more of the same to win the tournament.

"I've got to keep going. I can't relax. I can't look back to see who's there. I've got to shoot 8-10 under, at the very least, the next three days," Stadler said after he'd completed two rounds of this marathon event with a spectacular 129 total, 15 strokes under par.

"He may be hard to catch," admitted Gil Morgan, seeking a rare, third consecutive victory. The unique format, however, could work to his advantage, Morgan said.

"You never know," said Morgan, who trails by seven strokes in the five-day, 90-hole event. "With a tournament this length, you may have a chance to make up a little slack."

And Stadler, who followed an opening 63 with a 6-under-par 66 at Tamarisk in Thursday's second round, agreed.

"It's much too early, in this tournament, to tell. The courses are in such good condition, the weather is so good, there are a lot of birdies to be made out there. I've got to keep going," said Stadler, who has a 6-shot lead over PGA winner Ray Floyd, Bob Murphy and Hal Sutton, tied at 135.

Jack Nicklaus, with former President Gerald Ford and House Speaker Tip O'Neill in his amateur team, made eagle-3 on his first hole at Tamarisk and shot 68. He had a 140 total for his first two rounds of the year. Arnold Palmer, also playing at Tamarisk, slipped to a 74 and was at 145.

Stadler, who took the Masters and three other American titles and topped the season's money-winners with $446,462 last year, hasn't made a bogey yet and his total is only three strokes off the all-time Tour record for the first 36 holes of a tournament. He played the front nine in 31 Thursday.

Mavericks defeat Trail Blazers, 121-112

By The Associated Press

The Portland Trail Blazers, as per the NBAPA, insisted on a first-class flight to Dallas ... where the Mavericks promptly brought them down to earth.

The players association's contract with the NBA requires first-class seating for all players on flights lasting more than an hour. In the past, when there weren't enough first-class seats on the same plane, some of the players were "bumped" to the coach section.

The result was a 121-112 victory for the Mavericks

NBA ROUNDUP

Clippers 100, Pacers 95

At San Diego, rookie Terry Cummings scored six key points late in the fourth period, including the go-ahead shot with 2:14 left, to help the Clippers erase an 11-point fourth-quarter deficit and end a three-game losing streak.

Cavaliers 97, Bullets 89

World Free scored 29 points, including 11 in the third quarter, to lead Cleveland to only its second road victory in 18 tries. It was Washington's seventh straight loss.

Stittler hits 1,000 mark

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Darryl Sittler scored an assist and a goal to become the 17th player in NHL history to score 1,000 or more points, as he led the Philadelphia Flyers to a 5-2 victory over the Calgary Flames Thursday night.

Sittler got his 999th point at 12:25 of the first period, assisting on a goal by Glen Cochrane, and scored his 1,000th point on a goal at 10:02 of the second period.

NHL ROUNDUP

The goal was a 60-footer that went off the glove of Calgary goalie Don Edwards. Sittler skated past a Flames defender and let go just as he crossed the blue line.

Sittler, 32, reached the 1,000-goal plateau one year to the day he was traded to the Flyers from the Toronto Maple Leafs for three young players.

The Flyers, with Sittler and Bobby Clarke both at the 1,000-or-more level, are the only team in the NHL with two active players in the coveted $slot. There are only three other active players with 1,000 or more points: Marcel Dionne of Los Angeles, Guy LaFleur of Montreal, and Gil Perreault of Buffalo.

Sittler, in his last 10 games, has seven goals and seven assists for 14 points. He is 14th, behind Alex DelVecchio of Detroit Red Wings (456), on the NHL's all-time goal scoring list, and 21 points behind Rod Gilbert, of Boston and the New York Rangers, who retired with 1,021 points.

Bruins 4, Sabres 0

Pete Peeters, who has been sensational all season in leading the Bruins to the best record in the NHL, stopped 20 shots in extending his personal unbeaten streak to 24, 20-0-4. Boston is undefeated in its last eight, surrendering 11 goals in that span.

Peeters leads the NHL with 26 victories, the seven shutouts and a 2.15 goals against game average.

Devils 3, Blues 3

Mike Antonovich, New Jersey's 31-year-old rookie center, had a goal and an assist, as did Brent Ashton, as the Devils moved into a tie with Pittsburgh for fifth place in the Patrick Division, the first time since November that New Jersey has not been alone in the cellar.

Islanders 4, Canadiens 4

The three-time Stanley Cup champions now are unbeaten in seven games but had their six-game winning streak snapped when Montreal's Mark Napier connected against goalie Roland Melanson on a breakaway with 2:25 remaining. Napier had two goals for the Canadiens, who rallied from a 2-0 first-period deficit to go ahead 3-2, only to fall behind again 4-3 in the final session. Bryan Trottier scored twice for the Islanders, giving him six goals in the last four games.

McEnroe defeats LeClerc in Volvo

Wire and staff reports

NEW YORK —"I won, so that's the main thing," John McEnroe said after disposing of Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina 6-3, 6-4 in the quarterfinals of the Volvo Masters tennis Thursday.

"I thought I played all right. I just didn't serve as well as I could have, and I think I need to serve better if I'm gonna win the tournament," the left-hander from New York said.

The victory over Clerc sends McEnroe against the other half of the Argentine Davis Cup team, Guillermo Vilas, who stopped Andres Gomez of Ecuador 7-5, 6-4.

In today's quarterfinals, third-seeded Ivan Lendl will play Yannick Noah and top-seeded Jimmy Connors meets Johan Kriek.

MC defeats OC Wranglers

Suprisingly, the Wranglers outrebounded the Chaps by a 28-21 margin, but MC hit 18 of 40 from the field while OC countered with 14 of 41, missing several sure layup opportunities.

Al Penny, the 6-4½ OC sophomore, led the Wranglers with 12 points. OC's 6-3½ Delbert Jones had a rough time battling the Chaps underneath and ended the night with eight points, hitting four of 13 shots. That was a big key in the game.

The Chaps almost set another record. Spud Webb, dunkless in this one, almost played an entire game for the Chaps without scoring. He had no points entering the last minute of play and ended up with six points in the last 42 seconds. He took only three shots in the game, but he scored the Chaps' last six points with four free throws and a buzzer bomb.

Now the Chaps three straight home games to look forward to as Western Texas, an upset victor over Howard College Monday, comes to Chap Center for an 8 p.m. game. The Chaps host Clarendon Thursday and South Plains on Jan. 31.

Howard College, 2-2 in the league race, is finding it hard to get in conference games. The Hawks' game with Clarendon Thursday was postponed until Saturday by snow.

In August, he sought medical treatment for headaches that began after he was kicked in the head in a swimming pool.

Physicians discovered the tumor, the size of a golf ball, and Kotar underwent eight hours of surgery at a New Jersey hospital in late August. But doctors decided against removing the cancerous tumor from the center of his brain, fearing such extensive surgery could endanger his life. In October, His right lung collapsed soon afterward, forcing a tracheotomy to be performed, and a water sac in his head was drained. Kotar's was moved from intensive care unit into his own room about 1½ months ago. Since then, he has been improving steadily, according to his wife...

Consumer prices rise only 3.9 percent in '82

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, restrained at the end by a big December decline, rose just 3.9 percent in 1982, the smallest gain in a decade, the government said today.

In the last month of the year, the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index recorded a 0.3 percent price tumble. The monthly drop, only the second recorded since 1965, equalled last March's decline.

The advance posted for the full year, less than half the 8.9 percent of 1981, was restrained in large part by a record fall in gasoline prices. Natural gas prices, however, posted a record increase.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said today's report was "good news. It shows we have gone a long way toward winning the battle against inflation."

The department said that plunging mortgage interest rates and a further easing in energy prices were responsible for about three-fourths of the moderation in the yearly inflation measure.

In December alone, housing costs overall tumbled 0.8 percent, driven by a sharp 4.6 percent drop in home financing costs. Home prices themselves rose a tiny 0.2 percent.

Food prices also fell, off 0.1 percent.

Gasoline prices declined 0.9 percent. At year's end, such prices were 7.6 percent below their March 1981 peak.

Medical care costs, as they had all year, rose. Such expenses were up 0.7 percent last month; for the year, they shot up 11 percent.

Of all the components in the index, only medical care costs grew at a higher rate last year than in 1981.

Overall, economists attributed the inroads made last year in controlling inflation mostly to the serious recession, good crop harvests and the worldwide oil surplus.

Indeed, the Labor Department said gasoline prices for the year fell 6.6 percent, the most since the Depression year of 1935, when records were first kept.

Gasoline prices had risen 9.4 percent in 1981, 18.9 percent the year befor that, and 52.2 percent in 1979, when Middle East oil producers raised their prices and gas lines appeared around the country.

Natural gas prices, however, rose 25.4 percent last year, also setting a record. For December, such prices were up 1.2 percent. Analysts generally attribute the surge to congressional decontrol of new-gas costs.

Since decontrol began in 1978, natural gas customers have seen their bills more than double, congressional investigators said earlier this winter. Gas prices rose 14.9 percent in 1981.

Food prices, reflecing in part the bountiful harvests, rose only 3.2 percent last year, down from the 4.3 percent increase of a year earlier.

Housing costs for the year rose 3.6 percent, well under the sharp 10.2 percent increase of 1981. Home financing costs tumbled 6 percent; they had soared 20 percent the year before. But home prices themselves rose at a sharper rate last year, jumping 7.5 percent after a 1.2 percent gain in 1981.

The full-year consumer price increase was the smallest since the 3.4 percent of 1971 and 1972, when wage and price controls were in effect.

Inflation was 12.4 percent in 1980 and 13.3 percent in 1979.

Today's announcement was the second time in a week that the department had reported a sharp full-year easing in a major inflation measure.

Last Friday, the department said its Producer Price Index for finished goods — the wholesale price index — climbed 3.5 percent last year, the smallest rise in 11 years and, like the retail price index, less than half the gain of 1981.

While the producer price measure is a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level, the CPI checks prices for a broader range of items, including medical care and housing, than does the PPI.

If retail prices fell for 12 months at December's rate, the yearly decline would be 3.2 percent. The annual rate reported by the department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly changes than the figure made public.

In today's report, the Labor Department provided these other details on consumer price activity:

—Overall transportation costs were unchanged last month after a 0.3 percent increase in November. For the full year, such costs rose 1.7 percent, compared to an 11 percent increase in 1981.

Used car prices rose 1.5 percent last month while new car prices were up 0.4 percent.

—Home heating oil prices fell 0.6 percent in December, and, for the year, were down 0.7 percent. Such costs had surged 17 percent in 1981.

—Prices fell last month for beef, pork, poultry, eggs and fruit. Prices for meals eaten in restaurants rose 0.6 percent while alcoholic beverage prices were up 0.1 percent.

—Clothing prices in December fell 0.4 percent. For the year, such costs posted a 1.6 percent gain; they had risen 3.6 percent in 1981.

—Entertainment costs inched up 0.1 percent last month. They rose 5.6 percent for all of 1982 after climbing 7.2 percent in the previous year.

—Rents rose 0.3 percent in December, down from recent months.

Starting with the January retail price report, the department will change the way it calculates certain housing costs in the CPI. That report will be released Feb. 25.

Under the new formula, the department will calculate what homeowners would charge if they rented the home they own.

The department is altering the formula because of criticism that the current homeownership component distorts the overall inflation rate.

It does that, analysts say, by overstating the effect of increases or decreases in home prices and mortgages rates — which make up homeowner costs in the current calculation — because those factors are so heavily weighted.

That means that when mortgage rates and home prices were going up, the inflation measure tended to be boosted even higher.

With the recent fall in mortgage rates and easing of home prices, however, the index may be understating inflation.

Indeed, had a formula similar to the new one been used in December, the overall inflation index would have risen a seasonally adjusted 0.3 percent.

If the new formula had been used in the yearly calculation, the measure would have risen 5 percent.

In all, the unadjusted CPI stood at 292.4 in December, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $29.24 last month. All the monthly calculations reported by the department are adjusted to account for normal seasonal variations.

Unemployment at record levels in Europe

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Unemployment broke through the 12 million mark in the European Ecomomic Community in December, a post World War II record, the EEC reported today.

The 10.5 percent unemployment rate, compared to 10.3 percent in November, represented the eighth straight monthly increase in joblessness and "illustrates how serious the problem of rising unemployment in the community has become," the EEC said in a statement.

There were 12.035 million jobless in the 10 countries, 277,000 more than in November. More than 40 percent of the total were people under 25, further evidence of the crisis in youth employment, the statement said.

There were nearly 2.3 million more unemployed people in the Common Market countries than a year ago when the rate was 9 percent.

Only in France did the employment picture improve, from a 9.5 percent jobless rate in November to 9.4 percent in December, the second straight monthly improvement.

In West Germany the rate jumped from 7.7 to 8.4 percent, representing 181,000 workers.

The toll climbed from 11.4 to 11.5 percent in Italy, 11.4 to 12 percent in the Netherlands, 11.9 to 12 percent in Britain, 13.9 to 14.7 percent in Ireland, 9.3 to 9.9 percent in Denmark, 1.5 to 1.6 percent in Luxembourg and 1.8 to 2.4 percent in Greece.

Laffer foresees upturn in economy

HOUSTON (AP) — The nation's economy is starting out of its long recession, will boom later this year and experience "phenomenal" growth in 1984, according to a White House economy advisor and father of the so-called "supply side" economics.

Arthur B. Laffer, 42, said the nation will start enjoying the effects of elements of "supply side" economics later this year if Washington politicians will stay with President Reagan's policies.

Supply side economics have not worked earlier, said the California economist, because the tax cuts that are key elements in the plan were staggered over two years.

If a 25 percent tax cut had been put in place at once, said Laffer, the nation's economy would have turned around more quickly.

Laffer, here for a luncheon speech, said at a news conference Thursday that former President John F. Kennedy did a better job improving America's economy 20 years ago than Reagan is doing now.

Both Reagan and Kennedy faced similar economic woes, said Laffer, but "Kennedy did a lot better job. Period. Kennedy really cut it."

At the mid-point of the Kennedy administration, said Laffer, the federal government enjoyed a budgetary surplus. Reagan has forecast a $190 billion deficit.

The nation is heading out of economic trouble under Reagan, he said, "although you'll have to see what happens this year. Reagan has gone back on some of his issues that I hoped he wouldn't."

Asked if Reagan has changed his views, Laffer said, "I don't know. My best guess is that he's responding to practical politics."

Laffer criticized the recommendations of a commission that proposed a number of changes for the troubled Social Security system, all of them bad, he said.

He said the commission's plan took the wrong tack in raising Social Security taxes, extending the system to cover government workers and cutting the increase in benefits to the elderly.

The economist said the idea of extending the Social Security to government workers was "sort of a chain letter."

"If you extend a chain letter to one new layer, you may postpone the ultimate debacle, (but) it increases the severity of the problem," he said.

Instead, said Laffer, the commission should have taken the opportunity "to cure the long term problem" with the pension system. This could have been done, he said, by extending the retirement age.

He said his plan calls for not touching the benefits for workers now aged 55 and up. For those age 45 to 54, his plan would extend the retirement age to 66½. For those 35 to 44, retirement would be at 68, and for those under 35, it would be at age 70.

Assets of the 228 money funds reported by Donoghue's Money Fund Report of Holliston, Ma 01746 decreased $3.3 billion to $196.5 billion for the week ending January 19, 1983.

The funds' 7-day average yield declined to 7.92% from 8.02%. The funds' 30-day average yield fell slightly to 8.09% from 8.16%.

The funds' average maturity figure remained at 37 days for the second week in a row.

William E. Donoghue says, "This week's asset outflow from taxable money funds is larger than last week's $1.8 billion decline, but is still smaller than any other week since the bank money market deposit account was introduced. Tax-free money funds, however, continue to attract assets. This week's asset inflow of $319.2 million brings the two week asset increase of tax-free funds to $1 billion."

More Americans claiming relief checks

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — First-time claims by jobless Americans for government relief checks are on the rise again, signaling new unemployment woes, Labor Department statistics show.

New applications for unemployment benefits increased by 18,000 — to 568,000 — in the week ending Jan. 8. This follows a surge of 33,000 such claims in the previous week, which reversed December's trend toward declining claims.

Without referring specifically to the 10.8 percent unemployment rate which has left more than 12 million people on the jobless rolls, President Reagan told reporters Thursday that he sees "an American economy and an America on the mend."

Summarizing his first two years in office, Reagan referred to those who are out of work, saying " ... it's a real human tragedy that so many of our people today are still suffering for the political mistakes of the past that we've finally started to correct."

The first-time claims figures for the first week in January, while higher than in the previous week, still were below the peak filing level of 703,000 claims placed in the week ending Sept. 16. Nonetheless, private economists have said that whenever new applications near 600,000 in a single week, that ordinarily portends a rise in the overall unemployment rate.

The jobless rate rose only fractionally in December, from 10.7 percent to 10.8 percent, but there was little evidence that joblessness had peaked.

The figures for January will be released on Feb. 4.

Meanwhile, the Employment and Training Administration said in Thursday's report that approximately 6.27 million people were collecting jobless benefits under the various programs in the week ending Jan. 1. That's the highest level since the program began in 1935.

The figures also showed that only about half of all unemployed Americans are covered by the unemployment insurance compensation system.

But the record-level payment of claims was due largely to an emergency federal jobless benefit program enacted by Congress last August in response to the year-old recession.

The previous record number of Americans collecting unemployment benefits under a host of state and federal programs was 5,962,167, which was registered in the week ending March 8, 1975.

The total number of Americans getting benefits under the state-run, basic benefit programs plunged by 199,000 in the week ending Jan. 1, to 4,168,000.

The government report did not show how many people exhausted benefits. But a sample of eight states with high joblessness indicated that 40,900 people had drawn the maximum benefits available under those state-run programs.

Volcker says fear of deficits keeping interest rates high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker says the fear of continuing big deficits is keeping interest rates abnormally high, a situation which could abort a long-term economic recovery.

He urged Congress and the Reagan adminstration to work now, "with energy and force," to bring the deficits down.

"As things stand, fear of growing deficits clouds the futures and contributes to market pressures and inflationary uncertainties," Volcker said Thursday night in a dinner speech to the American Council on Capital Formation, a business-oriented group.

"Meaningful action to demonstrate the government's discipline on the fiscal side would reduce concern about future inflation and future interest rates," he said.

Volcker said future budget deficits are built in and will not fall as the economy recovers.

He said he was "acutely aware" that gains made last year toward reducing inflation were achieved "in the midst of great economic hardship — record unemployment and business bankruptcies.

"It is in that context that our ability to bring the ballooning federal deficits under control seems to me so crucial," he said.

This year's deficit of $175 billion to $200 billion — two-thirds of it caused by the recession — will be about 6 percent of GNP, Volcker said. Last year's was 3.6 percent. The largest deficit ever, measured against GNP, was in 1976 when the government's red ink amounted to 3.9 percent of the total of all goods and services.

GM to phase out X-car in '84

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp.'s X-cars, recalled 11 times since they were introduced, will be phased out beginning in mid-1984, the Detroit Free Press reported today.

The Oldsmobile Omega and Pontiac Phoenix will be discontinued after the 1984 model year, the newspaper said. Olds and Pontiac will concentrate instead on marketing their smaller J-car models, the Firenza 2000, and intermediate A-car lines, the Ciera 6000, the newspaper quoted GM sources as saying.

Other X-car models, Chevrolet Citation and Buick Skylark, likely will be dropped after the 1986 model year, the newspaper reported.

Mutual fund picture much improved in '82

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — In the financial smorgasbord offered by the mutual fund industry, just about everything has been tasting pretty good lately.

Funds concentrating on the stock market, naturally, had a good year in 1982 as stock prices rallied to record highs. But many gold and bond funds fared even better.

Lower interest rates and competition from new bank accounts have taken some of the steam out of the boom in money-market funds. Still, those funds provided an average yield of 12.63 percent over the 12 months through Nov. 30, according to Donoghue's Money Fund Report of Holliston, Mass.

"The performance of the fund industry over the last five years has been truly sensational," said A. Michael Lipper, president of Lipper Analytical Services, in a report issued at New Year's.

By Lipper's calculation, seven funds specializing in gold-mining shares recorded an average gain of 48.73 percent last year. For 114 bond funds, the figure was 30.2 percent, and for 350 stock funds 25.03 percent.

With this kind of performance has come renewed popularity. The Investment Company Institute, a trade group, estimated that funds other than money funds had record net sales in 1982, taking in $7.6 billion more than they paid out in redemptions.

In the "go-go" days of the 1960s, at the previous height of their vogue, the best net sales total achieved by the funds was $3.06 billion in 1969. In the "no-no" days of the 1970s, redemptions exceeded sales in seven of the 10 years.

According to the institute, mutual funds of all types now have 21 million shareholder accounts — more than double the total just five years ago.

The dramatic rise of the money funds in recent years has clearly played a part in that resurgence, attracting vast numbers of savers and investors to mutual funds for the first time. Another boost was provided by the 1981 tax law, which gave all workers the right to open individual retirement accounts, or IRAs.

The fund industry has vastly expanded its product line. In addition to stock, bond and money funds with varying objectives, there are tax-free bond funds, tax-free money funds, option funds, international funds — and other new variations coming out all the time.

For a would-be investor, one important question is whether a fund carries a sales charge, or "load." In the early days of the funds, most were marketed through brokers and salesmen who were compensated through fees of up to 8½ percent of the total invested.

There are still many of this type, some of them with excellent performance records. But "no-load" funds are much more common now.

Sheldon Jacobs, editor of the quarterly newsletter The No-Load Fund Investor, says there are about 250 no-load funds investing in stocks and bonds, and another 270 money market funds that carry no sales charge.

"This wide choice probably seems bewildering to most investors," Jacobs acknowledged. "The fund of their choice should meet their basic investment objective, have a solid reputation for strong management and good performance. In a volatile market, these strengths will serve well over the long haul."

The industry's past suggests another point to bear in mind. In the late 1960s, as stock prices were topping out and heading into two severe bear markets, investors were scrambling to buy mutual funds at just the wrong time. By the mid-1970s, at what turned out to be a golden buying opportunity, almost nobody had any interest in them at all.

When studying the charts in a mutual-fund prospectus, it pays to remember that it's always too late to buy yesterday's results.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Prospectus gives unit trust information

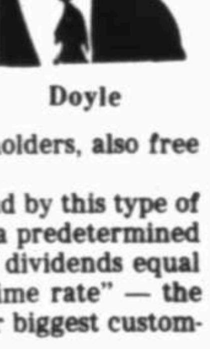
By BILL DOYLE

Q. I'm looking for some kind of tax shelter for $5,000. A broker recommended a floating-rate municipal bond unit trust. This seemed to me a fairly good idea, since I could buy three $1,000 units in the trust and put the remaining $2,000 in my individual retirement account.

However, the broker could give me no literature about the unit trust and I am reluctant to trust his word alone. Where can I obtain information about the unit trust's safety or risk, dividends, brokerage commission, etc.?

A. All that information and more is printed in the trust's prospectus, which is a disclosure document. That broker should have given you a prospectus when he made a sales pitch for the trust's units. By not doing so, he fractured the rules covering the offering of newly issued securities.



Doyle

A floating rate municipal bond unit trust invests in industrial development bonds backed by bank letters of credit. The trust collects tax-free interest from those bonds and passes it along, as dividends, to unit holders, also free from federal income tax.

As the name indicates, dividends paid by this type of unit trust "float" — up or down — in a predetermined formula. Most floating-rate trusts pay dividends equal to either 65 or 70 percent of the "prime rate" — the interest banks charge on loans to their biggest customers.

This arrangement keeps the dividend yields on floating-rate trust units in line with the interest yields on newly issued municipal bonds. As a result, an owner of floating-rate trust units usually can sell or redeem his or her units at their $1,000 face values.

Summed up, floating-rate municipal bond unit trusts are considered safe investments. But, get hold of and read the prospectus of the particular trust that broker is recommending before you invest.

Group piano study aids student, adds confidence

A young person beginning piano lessons today might find that learning piano is quite different from what it was many years ago. One of the main differences is the popularity of group lessons today. Group lessons give young people the confidence to tackle piano with the same uninhibited energy they bring to basketball or soccer. Being part of a group boosts confidence.

Marguerite Miller, a prominent music educator says, "One of the major advantages of group teaching and playing is that students immediately learn to play something musical. In a beginning class, students learn a short, simple melody, while the teacher provides back-up accompaniment--often something jazzy. Students have a sense of making music, and that is very satisfying."

Dr. E. L. Lancaster, of the National Piano Foundation, says, "Generally, instructors are discovering that theory and musicianship, especially creative activities, can be taught more easily and quickly in groups. The new version of group teaching stresses creativity, improvisation, and feeling for all types and styles of music. The aim is to expose the child to popular as well as serious music."

The Midland School of Piano was established by Nancy Knapp and Linda Cody, both certified, degreed teachers with considerable expertise in the musical field.

Ms. Cody graduated magna cum laude from Baylor University. Upon graduation, she was awarded the Certificate of Meritorious Achievement in Piano. Before coming to Midland, she lived in Los Angeles for 10 years, where she was a music specialist for the Unified Public Schools, instructor for Adult Continuing Education, and instructor for Yamaha International School of Music. She was also pianist and musical arranger for Pacific Paramount Productions, pianist and assistant musical director for the Downey Civic Light Opera, and director of the Downey Civic Chorus.

Ms. Knapp received her Bachelor of Music and Master of Music degrees in piano performance from Texas Tech University. She was the winner of the prestigious Eva Browning National Piano Competition, and has appeared as soloist with the Texas Tech University Orchestra, Forrest Heights Chamber Orchestra, and Midland Friends of Music Orchestra. Her teaching positions have included Texas Tech, University of Arizona, and Lubbock Public Schools, where she was the Director of the High School Group Piano Program.

The teachers at Midland School of Piano believe that the total person is developed through the study of piano. In addition to learning to play the piano, students develop social skills, ability to concentrate and memorize, self-discipline and self-esteem.

Midland School of Piano offers classes for ages four to 18. One of the most exciting programs is the Kinder-Piano classes for ages four, five and six. This is a preparatory study aimed at producing good musicianship and a solid foundation for playing piano. Another special class is a teenage class, which emphasizes pop music. Each student in these classes plays on a separate, individual electronic piano.

Midland School of Piano is now accepting enrollment for classes beginning Feb. 1. For more information, call 694-1934 or 697-1320.

Today's small cars need more frequent tune-ups

Most of today's cars have the small 4 cylinder or V-6 engines. These are capable of saving a lot of gas and giving you more economy for your dollar. But these small engines also work a lot harder than the old-time V-8's. According to Bruce Hart of Roberts Auto Supply and Machine Shop, these smaller engines take approximately 88 percent more work to move the car the same amount of miles as a larger engine.

"Your plugs fire 88 percent more often; points break, engine bearings and crankshafts turn 88 percent faster," says Hart. He points out that these small engines will need tune-ups much more often than the standard V-8 engines. "If you usually tune-up a V-8 every 10,000 miles," he says, "you'll need to tune-up a small engine every 5,000 miles."

Hart says that another maintenace feature which requires more frequent service is the oil change and oil filter replacement. "These smaller engines are equipped with smaller oil filters," he says. "This means they aren't going to be able to filter as efficiently as a larger filter, and will require more frequent change."

Hart says most car manufacturers recommend tune-ups after 20,000 miles, but he says this is based on perfect highway driving conditions. "West Texas has its own unique climate," he says, "and we have to take that into consideration. Here, there's quite a bit of blowing dust, we have the heat and dryness of the climate to consider, and also the fact that most of us do quite a bit of in-town driving. All of these factors mean our cars need more frequent tune-ups."

Saudis said to have agreed to abandon $34 oil price

By STERLING NOEL
Hearst Feature Service

The word from the Persian Gulf, as relayed by the Economist of London, is that Saudi Arabia has at last agreed to abandon its benchmark oil price of $34 a barrel.

The reduction could be from $2 per barrel to $4. Such amounts may not be enough to start a price war among the 13 nations of the OPEC cartel, say analysts, but they would be a step in that direction.

Principal beneficiaries at this time would be the Four Sisters of Aramco — Exxon, Mobil, Texaco and Socal — who buy and market most Saudi oil. They are credited with having forced the Saudi price cut at their meeting Jan. 4 in Geneva with Saudi oil minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani.

Their arithmatic has been a disaster since the start of the oil glut, when many OPEC members joined Mexico and the North Sea producers in slashing prices as much as $6 a barrel. Aramco was forced to pay the $34 benchmark price.

Based upon the purchases by the four partners of around 3.5 million barrels a day of Saudi oil, Aramco has been losing as much as $13 million a day, according to William L. Randol, oil economist with First Boston Corp.

The Aramco situation and other American interests, however, are incidental. The main point of this Saudi move will be to widen the rift within the OPEC and likely end all power of the cartel to fix oil prices so long as the oil glut persists.

The Saudis will not be acting alone. Their principal allies are the members of the Gulf Cooperation Council, a regional policymaking organization composed of Saudi Arabia and its five Persian Gulf neighbors — United Arab Emirates, Kuwait, Qatar, Bahrain and Oman. The price cut will not be made without their approval. All but Oman are members of the OPEC. Together with the Saudis, they possess half of the cartel's oil reserves.

Arrayed against these six are Iran, Libya, Venezuela and Nigeria, all of them objecting vehemently to efforts of the Saudis to impose production ceilings. Iran has been particularly bitter, accusing the Saudis of reneging on a "promise" to let Iran's production rise. Iran is selling some 2.5 million barrels a day now, compared with 1.2 million last spring, and has been a foremost price-slasher among the OPEC rebels.

Thus, oil prices are no longer dictated by OPEC decrees, but by the growing financial needs of many producers, both within and outside the OPEC. There has been stubborn resistence to spiraling costs, and for the first time since the 1973-74 Arab embargo, oil prices have moved to a free float.

At the year end OPEC meeting in Vienna, Iran demanded an allotment of 3.2 million barrels a day and was offered 700,000 less. Said Iranian delegation chief Mohammad Gharazi: "We are currently producing 3.2 million barrels a day and will continue to do so. At the outbreak (of Iran's revolution in 1978) the Saudis and others agreed that, when Iranian production went up again, they (Iran) would be let back on the market. This is our right. It was a promise."

Saudi Arabia sought to stand fast on the lower allotment to Iran, but at the same time refused the oil ministers permission to limit Saudi production to its current level, which has been around 5.1 million barrels a day.

Venezuela likewise refused efforts of the ministers to curtail its production. Said Energy and Mines Minister Humberto Calderon Berti: "My government has just reduced the budget by $4 billion, and even with that, we cannot produce less than 1.9 million barrels a day, as they (in OPEC) want me to." The allotment proposed for Venezuela would have called for a reduction in pumping of 800,000 barrels a day.

So Iran and Venezuela, as well as Libya and Nigeria, and perhaps even Saudi Arabia, are all contributing to the oil glut and, thankfully for us, lowering prices.

Some confident OPEC can keep oil prices up

NEW YORK (AP) — Traders and investors seem increasingly confident that OPEC can keep oil prices from collapsing — heading off problems for American banks with outstanding loans to petroleum-producing countries.

The 13 oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are scheduled to hold an emergency meeting Sunday in Geneva, Switzerland, to attack for the second time in as many months the problem of a glutted oil market.

OPEC failed at a meeting last month to agree on how much oil each member should sell. It is a particularly pressing issue because Iran and some other members have continued to grab sales from the Persian Gulf Arabs by offering hidden discounts. OPEC reaffirmed at last month's meeting its basic price of $34 a barrel.

Failure this time, some analysts believe, could trigger a cut in the oil price charged by Saudi Arabia and other Persian Gulf Arab oil exporters. That could lead to cuts by other producers seeking to protect their shares of the market. The result could be a rapid and startling decline in oil prices worldwide.

That would cheer motorists and other fuel users. But it also would raise the possibility of loan defaults by heavily indebted oil exporters such as Mexico. American banks, mostly multinationals, have loaned Mexico an estimated $25 billion.

In an extraordinary rush to avert a price crash, OPEC minister and high-ranking officials of Mexico, Canada and other non-OPEC oil exporters have dashed between world oil capitals this week in advance of the Sunday meeting in Geneva.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, the oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, was quoted by the government-controlled news agency Thursday as saying he saw "encouraging signs" that all ministers would agree on a production-sharing system. He also warned that prices might be cut if there was no agreement on quotas.

Mayor of Allentown wants Joel to share royalties from hit with city

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Singer Billy Joel should consider sharing some of the royalties from "Allentown" with people in the town that his hit song made famous, the mayor says.

In a letter mailed Thursday, Mayor Joseph Daddona suggested the singer set up a scholarship fund for "aspiring young artists who might one day follow in Joel's footsteps."

Billy Joel

The song starts out: "Well, I'm living here in Allentown and they're closing all the factories down. Out in Bethlehem they're killing time, filling out forms, standing in line..."

Nearby Bethlehem is the home of Bethlehem Steel Corp., suffering from the recession with the rest of the steel industry. The song is "telling it like it is," Daddona said.

A spokeswoman for Joel in New York, Julie Steigman, said she thought the singer had heard about the mayor's proposal but did not know what his response would be.

The mayor said a scholarship fund would not only be "a great way to share a tiny part of your good fortune with others in Allentown, it would also help keep alive the 'Allentown' song and the Billy Joel legend (which you have already become here)."

The letter does not ask for a specific percentage of the royalties. "Whatever Billy Joel feels is appropriate," Daddona said.

LONDON (AP) — President Reagan can "sleep easy" about the first record produced by his daughter, Patti Davis, says a music critic, because she has stayed away from anything controversial.

Patti Davis

The album is called "Patti Davis." Its dozen numbers — including seven songs she wrote herself — range from pop to country and hard rock.

The album by the 29-year-old entertainer was recorded in London in November and December for Runaway Records.

Peter Holt, music columnist for the London Standard, said Thursday he was given an exclusive preview.

"I can vouch that it is an impressive debut from the president's singer-guitarist-songwriter daughter," said Holt. "President Reagan can sleep easy as far as one aspect is concerned. Known for her anti-nuclear views, Patti has steered away from anything controversial..."

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Shirley Chisholm, the first black woman to run for president, is returning to the classroom to share her knowledge of two topics she knows well: politics and women's rights.

S. Chisholm

Ms. Chisholm represented Brooklyn, N.Y., in Congress from 1968 to 1962, when she did not seek re-election. On Feb. 1, she becomes a visiting professor at Mount Holyoke College.

She will teach "Social Roles of Women" by herself, and be co-instructor with another professor of "American Political Systems."

At a seminar for 16 women and four men at Hampshire College here on Thursday, Ms. Chisholm refused to say what her political role might be in the 1984 Democratic convention. She unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination for president in 1972.

"I just live one day at a time," she told the students.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — After years of frustration, Florida Gov. Bob Graham finally won a college football bet — and has a leather mountaineer jacket to prove it.

Graham received the jacket, complete with fringes, from West Virginia Gov. Jay Rockefeller because Florida State beat West Virginia in the Gator Bowl on Dec. 30 in Jacksonville.

"It's a perfect fit," Graham said Thursday as he tried the jacket on in his office in the Capitol.

If Florida had lost, Graham would have given Rockefeller a Seminole Indian jacket.

Graham's betting record has been lackluster until now. In 1981 he had to work a day in Oklahoma after he lost a bet with Gov. George Nigh on the Orange Bowl; Oklahoma beat Florida State in a thriller.

And in the fall of that year, Graham bet a box of Florida mangoes on the Miami-Mississippi State football game. Mississippi State won. Graham discovered that mangoes — a sweet tropical fruit grown in south Florida — were out of season. He sent oranges instead.

Singapore structures change stories

SINGAPORE (AP) — "When you come for your appointment, remember we are one floor higher, although we haven't moved at all," a dentist's receptionist advised a patient by phone.

Members of the Singapore Town Club in the Straits Trading Building now push elevator buttons for the 12th floor instead of the 11th as before to find their sanctuary. The club stayed put, but the floors were renumbered.

It's all part of a government-decreed plan to standardize the floor numbers of tall apartments and office blocks. An estimated 450,000 units are supposed to be renumbered by March 1.

The change is designed to remedy a confusing array of floor designations in different buildings. For example, government-built apartments, which now house about 70 percent of Singapore's 2.4 million people, used letters.

The ground floor was labeled "G" and the next floors upward were "A," "B," etc. The letters "I" and "O" were not used because they resembled the numerals "one" and "zero."

Confusion was rampant since the elevator call buttons usually carried numerals. Visitors seeking an apartment on floor "T" might decide to push 20 since it is the 20th letter in the alphabet. They should instead press 19 due to the two dropped letters and the fact that elevator numbering started with the ground floor as "one."

So now, the government has stepped in to assure complete standardization in private apartment houses and commercial office blocks.

There has been a proliferation in recent years of "upper ground floors," "mezzanines" and "sub-sub-levels" in shopping centers and hotels.

Most office buildings in this former British colony used English-style floor numbering. The ground floor was called just that with the first floor one flight up. The government opted for numbering similar to that found in the United States.

A master plan calls for the ground floors with the main entrance to be known as "01," with successive floors above labeled "02," "03," and so on.

There is no total cost estimate for the switch either for government buildings or those in the private sector. Nor can anybody provide an estimate of the size of the windfall likely to be enjoyed by sign painters, elevator maintenance firms, commercial printers or rubber stamp manufacturers.

Chewing gum, yawning may lessen discomfort

Dear Dr. Solomon: I take a trip by plane about twice a year, and I always have trouble with my ears when we land. Is there anything I can do to at least lessen the discomfort? — Angela, Greensboro, N.C.

Dear Angela: Earache may occur during a desent from high altitude. The problem may often be alleviated by yawning, swallowing, or chewing gum. A nasal decongestant may also be helpful for some people.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard it said that people who have an optimistic outlook on life are better able to fight cancer than someone who is not very hopeful. How can anyone prove that this is so? — Madeleine, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Dear Madeleine: The results of study conducted on rats suggest that feelings of hopefulness may better enable a patient to fight cancer, but I hasten to add that rats are not people, and that drawing comparisons between the two may be extremely misleading and occasionally unwise.

The study involved a group of rats that were injected with cancer cells. Some were then subjected to electric shocks. The researchers found that these "helpless" rats were more seriously affected by the cancer cells than were other rats that either were not shocked or were able to avoid the shocks. They conclude from this that patients who feel they are able to control events in their lives may have an enhanced ability to fight cancer, possibly because their immune responses have not been weakened.

Dear Dr. Solomon: As a long-time and faithful reader of your column, I know that most of the questions you get about appearance deal with overweight and acne. But I have another question about appearance. Is it true that gelatin will make a person's nails healthy? — Sara, New York City, N.Y.

Dear Sara: Those who claim that drinking gelatin will improve the health of nails have so far failed to come up with scientific proof. The American Council on Science and Health has reviewed five studies that presumably demonstrated the value of gelatin for this purpose. The Council concluded that the studies generally failed to adhere to accepted criteria for sound scientific research. For example, there were no control groups, the subjects generally were aware of the purpose of the studies and could therefore have been influenced, and there were no objective standards for what constituted healthier nails so that a valid comparison could be made before and after the studies were completed.

In brief, proof that gelatin is of value in improving the health of nails is still lacking.

For Dorothy, Syracuse, N.Y.: I suggest you let your doctor decide whether you are allergic and in need of treatment. The use of oral contraceptives for example, may produce allergy-like symptoms. I have seen this occur in more than one of my patients over the years.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Stock market gains

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy issues and Apple Computer shares were the standout per- formers as the stock market posted a small overall gain Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had fallen 16.75 points in the last two ses- sions, edged up 2.76 to 1,070.82.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled 82.79 million shares, against 80.90 million Wednesday.

Apple was by far the day's most active issue, climbing 3½ to 37⅛ bid in the over-the- counter market, with more than 3.1 million shares chang- ing hands. That marked a new high for the stock since the company went public at $22 a share in December of 1980.

This week, Apple introduced a new personal computer, dub- bed Lisa, designed to appeal to executives, professionals and other office users with a sys- tem minimizing the need for "computerese."

At the NYSE, meanwhile, energy issues accounted for nine of the 15 most active is- sues as traders responded to news reports that the Organ- ization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was close to approv- ing a plan to limit production rather than cut prices.

There have been widespread fears that a collapse of oil prices would send shocks through the international bank- ing and financial system.

Mobil, the Big Board volume leader, rose 2⅛ to 27⅞; Union Oil of California 2¼ to 33¾; Gulf Oil 2⅜ to 32¾; Standard Oil of Indiana 1⅞ to 46¾; Texaco 1¼ to 32⅞, and Phillips Petroleum 1⅛ to 36.

Among oil-field service and drilling issues, Schlumberger gained 2⅞ to 51; Halliburton 1¼ to 38½; Sedco 1¾ to 33¾, and Baker International 1½ to 24½.

At the American Stock Ex- change, Asamera Oil rose 2 to 17½; Mitchell Energy & Devel- opment ¾ to 21⅝, and Kirby Exploration ¾ to 8½.

The reports also seemed to benefit some banking stocks. Citicorp, up 1⅝ at 34⅝, and Bankamerica, up ⅛ at 19¾, both ranked among the volume leaders.

At the same time, they prompted selling of the airlines, which are large consumers of fuel from oil. Delta Airlines dropped ⅞ to 41⅞; AMR 1¼ to 19½, Trans World 1½ to 26⅜, and UAL 1½ to 30½.

Foremost-McKesson dropped 2½ to 40⅜. The company said its profits from continuing operations for the quarter ended Dec. 31 were down about 11 percent from the comparable period a year earlier.

The daily tally on the NYSE showed about nine gainers for every eight stocks that de- clined, and the exchange's composite index added .52 to 84.51.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on re- gional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, total- ed 97.12 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials rose 1.24 to 164.59, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 1.02 at 146.29.

The Amex market value in- dex gained 2.87 to 371.40. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 245.99, up .79.

Mutual fund picture much improved in '82

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — In the financial smorgasbord offered by the mutual fund industry, just about everything has been tasting pretty good lately.

Funds concentrating on the stock market, naturally, had a good year in 1982 as stock prices rallied to record highs. But many gold and bond funds fared even better.

Lower interest rates and competition from new bank accounts have taken some of the steam out of the boom in money-market funds. Still, those funds provided an average yield of 12.63 percent over the 12 months through Nov. 30, according to Donoghue's Money Fund Report of Holliston, Mass.

"The performance of the fund industry over the last five years has been truly sensational," said A. Michael Lipper, president of Lipper Analytical Services, in a report issued at New Year's.

By Lipper's calculation, seven funds specializing in gold-mining shares recorded an average gain of 48.73 percent last year. For 114 bond funds, the figure was 30.2 percent, and for 350 stock funds 25.03 percent.

With this kind of performance has come renewed popularity. The Investment Company Institute, a trade group, estimated that funds other than money funds had record net sales in 1982, taking in $7.6 billion more than they paid out in redemptions.

In the "go-go" days of the 1960s, at the previous height of their vogue, the best net sales total achieved by the funds was $3.06 billion in 1969. In the "no-no" days of the 1970s, redemptions exceeded sales in seven of the 10 years.

According to the institute, mutual funds of all types now have 21 million shareholder accounts — more than double the total just five years ago.

The dramatic rise of the money funds in recent years has clearly played a part in that resurgence, attracting vast numbers of savers and investors to mutual funds for the first time. Another boost was provided by the 1981 tax law, which gave all workers the right to open individual retirement accounts, or IRAs.

The fund industry has vastly expanded its product line. In addition to stock, bond and money funds with varying objectives, there are tax-free bond funds, tax-free money funds, option funds, international funds — and other new variations coming out all the time.

For a would-be investor, one important question is whether a fund carries a sales charge, or "load." In the early days of the funds, most were marketed through brokers and salesmen who were compensated through fees of up to 8½ percent of the total invested.

There are still many of this type, some of them with excellent performance records. But "no-load" funds are much more common now.

Sheldon Jacobs, editor of the quarterly newsletter The No-Load Fund Investor, says there are about 250 no-load funds investing in stocks and bonds, and another 270 money market funds that carry no sales charge.

"This wide choice probably seems bewildering to most investors," Jacobs acknowledged. "The fund of their choice should meet their basic investment objective, have a solid reputation for strong management and good performance. In a volatile market, these strengths will serve well over the long haul."

The industry's past suggests another point to bear in mind. In the late 1960s, as stock prices were topping out and heading into two severe bear markets, investors were scrambling to buy mutual funds at just the wrong time. By the mid-1970s, at what turned out to be a golden buying opportunity, almost nobody had any interest in them at all.

When studying the charts in a mutual-fund prospectus, it pays to remember that it's always too late to buy yesterday's results.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Prospectus gives unit trust information

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I'm looking for some kind of tax shelter for $5,000. A broker recommended a floating-rate municipal bond unit trust. This seemed to me a fairly good idea, since I could buy three $1,000 units in the trust and put the remaining $2,000 in my individual retirement account.

However, the broker could give me no literature about the unit trust and I am reluctant to trust his word alone. Where can I obtain information about the unit trust's safety or risk, dividends, brokerage commission, etc.?

Doyle

A. All that information and more is printed in the trust's prospectus, which is a disclosure document. That broker should have given you a prospectus when he made a sales pitch for the trust's units. By not doing so, he fractured the rules covering the offering of newly issued securities.

A floating rate municipal bond unit trust invests in industrial development bonds backed by bank letters of credit. The trust collects tax-free interest from those bonds and passes it along, as dividends, to unit holders, also free from federal income tax.

As the name indicates, dividends paid by this type of unit trust "float" — up or down — in a predetermined formula. Most floating-rate trusts pay dividends equal to either 65 or 70 percent of the "prime rate" — the interest banks charge on loans to their biggest customers.

This arrangement keeps the dividend yields on floating-rate trust units in line with the interest yields on newly issued municipal bonds. As a result, an owner of floating-rate trust units usually can sell or redeem his or her units at their $1,000 face values.

Summed up, floating-rate municipal bond unit trusts are considered safe investments. But, get hold of and read the prospectus of the particular trust that broker is recommending before you invest.

Group piano study aids student, adds confidence

A young person beginning piano lessons today might find that learning piano is quite different from what it was many years ago. One of the main differences is the popularity of group lessons today. Group lessons give young people the confidence to tackle piano with the same uninhibited energy they bring to basketball or soccer. Being part of a group boosts confidence.

Marguerite Miller, a prominent music educator says, "One of the major advantages of group teaching and playing is that students immediately learn to play something musical. In a beginning class, students learn a short, simple melody, while the teacher provides back-up accompaniment--often something jazzy. Students have a sense of making music, and that is very satisfying."

Dr. E. L. Lancaster, of the National Piano Foundation, says,"Generally, instructors are discovering that theory and musicianship, especially creative activities, can be taught more easily and quickly in groups. The new version of group teaching stresses creativity, improvisation, and feeling for all types and styles of music. The aim is to expose the child to popular as well as serious music."

The Midland School of Piano was established by Nancy Knapp and Linda Cody, both certified, degreed teachers with considerable expertise in the musical field.

Ms. Cody graduated magna cum laude from Baylor University. Upon graduation, she was awarded the Certificate of Meritorious Achievement in Piano. Before coming to Midland, she lived in Los Angeles for 10 years, where she was a music specialist for the Unified Public Schools, instructor for Adult Continuing Education, and instructor for Yamaha International School of Music. She was also pianist and musical arranger for Pacific Paramount Productions, pianist and assistant musical director for the Downey Civic Light Opera, and director of the Downey Civic Chorus.

Ms. Knapp received her Bachelor of Music and Master of Music degrees in piano performance from Texas Tech University. She was the winner of the prestigious Eva Browning National Piano Competition, and has appeared as soloist with the Texas Tech University Orchestra, Forrest Heights Chamber Orchestra, and Midland Friends of Music Orchestra. Her teaching positions have included Texas Tech, University of Arizona, and Lubbock Public Schools, where she was the Director of the High School Group Piano Program.

The teachers at Midland School of Piano believe that the total person is developed through the study of piano. In addition to learning to play the piano, students develop social skills, ability to concentrate and memorize, self-discipline and self-esteem.

Midland School of Piano offers classes for ages four to 18. One of the most exciting programs is the Kinder-Piano classes for ages four, five and six. This is a preparatory study aimed at producing good musicianship and a solid foundation for playing piano. Another special class is a teenage class, which emphasizes pop music. Each student in these classes plays on a separate, individual electronic piano.

Midland School of Piano is now accepting enrollment for classes beginning Feb. 1. For more information, call 694-1934 or 697-1320.

Today's small cars need more frequent tune-ups

Most of today's cars have the small 4 cylinder or V-6 engines. These are capable of saving a lot of gas and giving you more economy for your dollar. But these small engines also work a lot harder than the old-time V-8's. According to Bruce Hart of Roberts Auto Supply and Machine Shop, these smaller engines take approximately 88 percent more work to move the car the same amount of miles as a larger engine.

"Your plugs fire 88 percent more often; points break, engine bearings and crankshafts turn 88 percent faster," says Hart. He points out that these small engines will need tune-ups much more often than the standard V-8 engines. "If you usually tune-up a V-8 every 10,000 miles," he says, "you'll need to tune-up a small engine every 5,000 miles."

Hart says that another maintenace feature which requires more frequent service is the oil change and oil filter replacement. "These smaller engines are equipped with smaller oil filters," he says. "This means they aren't going to be able to filter as efficiently as a larger filter, and will require more frequent change."

Hart says most car manufacturers recommend tune-ups after 20,000 miles, but he says this is based on perfect highway driving conditions. "West Texas has its own unique climate," he says, "and we have to take that into consideration. Here, there's quite a bit of blowing dust, we have the heat and dryness of the climate to consider, and also the fact that most of us do quite a bit of in-town driving. All of these factors mean our cars need more frequent tune-ups."

Family planning

Area representatives of an ad hoc coalition held a news conference Thursday to support the Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion a decade ago. From left representatives are: Charles Seltzer, lawyers for choice; Paula Spinks, Permian Basin Women's Political Caucus; Ed Kurtz, Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin president; and Karen Marshall, Texas Abortion Rights Action League and National Organization for Women.

Ten years doesn't seem to be enough water under the bridge to keep interest groups from expressing their views about the Supreme Court ruling which legalized abortion.

Midland-Odessa citizens, representing political, religious and health organizations, Thursday publicly supported the Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court ruling which will celebrate its 10-year anniversary Saturday.

Local representatives prepared a supportive statement, presenting it to the news media at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission board room at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Members of the ad hoc coalition supporting "choice," were Edwin Kurtz, president of Planned Parenthood; Paula Spinks, Permian Basin Women's Political Caucus; Charles Seltzer, Lawyers for Choice; and Karen Marshall, Texas Abortion Rights Action League and the National Organization for Women. Another support group not represented was the Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights.

The views voiced covered the right to choose abortion, American support, when life begins and government interference.

"We support a woman's right to choice in deciding whether to have an abortion," Kurtz said. "We believe that the best method of family planning is effective contraception to prevent pregnancy. However, since no contraceptive method is perfectly effective or always available, a woman, in consultation with her physician, should have the right to obtain a safe, legal abortion."

While Right to Life supporters attack Planned Parenthood because it is partially funded with tax dollars, Ms. Marshall asked: "What about wars? There are many many things people pay taxes for that they don't believe in."

Seltzer took the issue one step further, adding "you've got to remember it is a fundamental constitutional right for those individuals to make up their own mind in reproduction freedom.

"They (Right to Life supporters) can have their opinion, but they also want to force their opinion on us through the constitution," he added.

Kurtz said a majority of American people also support "pro choice," and 90 percent of the Americans support a right to abortion under certain circumstances.

"An amendment to prohibit abortion might even ignore the rights of women in case of rape or incest or for women with life-threatening health conditions," Kurtz added.

The representatives discussed when life begins, agreeing that "the moment an unborn being becomes a person cannot be mandated by law; it is a religious and philosophical matter."

Seltzer said this point of difference could lead to disturbing ramifications if life was decided to begin at conception.

"Finally," according to Kurtz, "a prohibition of abortion would mean government interference in a most private and personal area of our lives."

Nurse's aide testifies fellow worker struck older patient

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 20-year-old nurse's aide testified Thursday in Midland's 142nd State District Court that fellow worker Sherry Sims, 29, "started hitting" an 84-year-old patient who was "spitting out" water which Ms. Sims was trying feed her with a 2-ounce plastic syringe in the early morning hours last July 20.

"She starting hitting her," the Spanish-speaking aide, Patricia Portillo, testified through a translator. "She started slapping her on the head..., on the chest...only (with) her hands."

The aide told prosecutor Jim Rex that the bed-ridden patient in Terrace Gardens Nursing Home was "just holding her hands and telling her to stop."

Testimony indicated that the woman, who has lived at the nursing home since 1975 and has been bed-fast for five years, was scratched on either side of the face, suffered a bruise on the left breast and upper right arm, and a swollen lower lip.

If convicted of injury to an elderly person in the non-jury trial before Judge Pat Baskin, Ms. Sims could be sentenced to prison from two to 10 years and fined $5,000 or she could be placed on probation.

In her testimony, Ms. Portillo said that she and Ms. Sims had entered the room occupied by the patient and another woman. But Ms. Sims left to get the syringe, returned and tried to give the elderly woman water.

The patient resisted.

"I saw her (Ms. Sims) when she hit her on the face and the chest," the aide said. "(I) saw her hands moving toward her face."

Rex asked the aide if Ms. Sims ever hit the patient on the back.

"I did not see," she said, "because I got scared and turned my back to give water" to a roommate when the alleged slapping and scratching started.

However, the state witness said she saw Ms. Sims "hit her on the face and chest" and that the patient "started to hold her hand" and said "Stop! Stop!"

Under cross-examination by defense attorney Edward T. Garza, Ms. Portillo at one time said she did not see the aide striking the patient but only heard sounds of slappings. Later, the aide said she saw the bed-fast women being hit but immediately turned her back.

"Do some of the older people ever become belligerent at you?" Garza asked the aide.

"Yes," she replied.

"Did (the patient) become belligerent at Ms. Sims?"

"No."

But the aide said the patient did become angry when she was being struck and as she was telling Ms. Sims "not to hit her."

Earlier in cross-examining the aide, Garza asked how she and other aides received instructions on the care and feeding of patients. She said, for example, that a licensed vocational nurse (LVN) "would tell how to feed water" — via syringe, straw or glass — and that the aides would check to see if the patients were wet or soiled.

"Do you have any training in being a nurse's aide?" Garza asked Ms. Portillo.

"Yes,...very little. Only what they showed us." The aide said instructions, required by the Texas State Health Department, were given only in English. And since she speaks and understands only Spanish, she comprehended little of the instructions.

The aide initially did not report the injuries to the patient, saying she was afraid to do so.

Another witness, Terrace Gardens LVN Liz Arnett, recounted the patient's injuries and said the injured woman "was extremely upset; she was hysterical" later in the morning, about 7:15 a.m. on July 20, when the patient's 51-year-old daughter came into the nursing home to bathe her mother and to get her ready for breakfast. The daughter spotted the injuries and told nursing home officials of her mother's bruises and scratches.

"She was crying and screaming," Ms. Arnett said. That was about six hours after the 84-year-old patient had been injured.

Ms. Arnett said it was not unusual for a patient to refuse water.

"Sometimes we have to coax them a little bit to take their fluids," she said, but noted that aides are cautioned never to use force in feeding patients.

Lillie Niblett, now hospital LVN who was a witness for the defense, said she noticed only a scratch on the left side of the patient's mouth and a bruise on her left breast.

The nurse said that Ms. Sims has "always been nice to the patients. I've never seen her handle patients rough."

The judge recessed the trial until 11 a.m. today.

Garza said the 29-year-old former aide is to take the witness stand in her own defense at some point in the trial.

Craddick reappointed chairman of natural resources committee

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, has been reappointed chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee by Speaker Gib Lewis.

Lewis announced House committee assignments Thursday.

Craddick also was named to the Energy and Calendars committees. Craddick has been on the Energy Committee for 10 years, but this will be his first year on the Calendar Committee. "It (Calendar Committee) is a very powerful committee," Craddick said. "Anyone can propose a bill, but the calendar committee sets the bills that go to the floor for a vote."

The appointment of Craddick as chairman of the Natural Resources Committee means he will be serving as chairman of the committee for the eighth time, having been appointed chairman of the panel for the first time in 1975.

Craddick said he was pleased with the appointments "Those are the three that I wanted," he said.

Rep. Jay Gibson, D-Odessa, was named to the Appropriations and Local and Consent Calendars committees, and as chairman for budget and oversight of the Higher Education Committee.

Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, was named to the County Affairs and the Local and Consent Calendars committees, and as vice chairman of the Liquor Regulations Committee.

Midland files suit against asphalt plant for violations of city zoning ordinances

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The city of Midland, which claims Petroplex Land and Development Co.'s asphalt plant in northeast Midland is in violation of city zoning and building ordinances and is polluting the area, has filed suit for a temporary injunction in Midland's 142nd State District Court.

The plant, which is between Midland County Roads 1150 North and 1160 North, nevertheless has a permit from the Texas Air Control Board to operate. It has been defending that permit in a public hearing in Midland this week.

In its petition, the city of Midland is alleging that Petroplex's property was annexed via City Ordinance 6072. Upon first reading of the ordinance last Aug. 24, the city says it acquired jurisdiction over the property's future use and maintained status quo over the property.

On Sept. 24, the Midland City Council adopted Resolution No. 82-260 which reinforced its jurisdiction over the property and which "prohibited the issuance of building permits, certificates of occupancy and compliance and the construction of buildings and structures on the (Petroplex) property unless such would be allowed under an 'A-E,' Agricultural-Estate District," of the city's zoning code.

That code, however, prohibits issuance of a building permit in a newly-annexed territory not deemed for agricultural use.

"That (code)...does not allow land and buildings in an 'A-E,' Agricultural-Estate District, to be used for an asphalt plant," the petition claims.

Since Aug. 24 when the city allegedly gained jurisdiction over the Petroplex property, Petroplex "caused to be constructed" and "is operating an asphalt plant" on the annexed property. Petroplex, which is headed by Midlander Clyde C. White, is operating without a building permit and without a certificate of occupancy in "contravention of ordinances and resolutions," the city's petition claims.

In seeking the injunction to close down the plant, the city is maintaining that:

—"(The) asphalt plant does and will result in the continuous disturbance of the use and enjoyment by owners of property in the immediate area."

—The construction and operation of the plant is in violation of the building and zoning ordinances and will result in the "destruction of zoning plans."

—The plant is causing "excessive air pollution and noise in the surrounding (Skyview) residential neighborhood."

—The plant is creating "substantial safety hazards and annoyances" to the surrounding area.

—The plant is causing a lowering of property values and "constitutes an illegal infringement on property rights in the surrounding area."

Monahans teen-ager gets life prison sentence

AUSTIN (AP) — A 19-year-old Monahans man has been sentenced to life in prison for the rape and abduction of a West Texas banker's wife last summer.

The four-day trial, moved here on a change of venue, ended Thursday when the 10-woman, two-man jury recommended one life sentence and a total of 283 additional years in prison for James William Hughes.

Hughes was accused of abducting a woman at gunpoint shortly after 4 p.m. on Aug. 31 and demanding $300,000 ransom from her husband, Charles Wade, president of the First State Bank of Monahans.

Acting at the kidnapper's instructions, Wade arrived at the Monahans Sand Hills State Park with the cash demanded, but could not locate the gunman. Police arrested Hughes with the victims in a pickup truck near Crane about 7 p.m. that night.

Prosecutors introduced a confession signed by Hughes and called 15 witnesses to the stand, including the victim. Hughes was convicted of raping her twice, one in Ward County and once in Crane County.

Jurors deliberated about two hours Wednesday before finding Hughes guilty to all five charges against him, and returned Thursday to deliberate about two more hours on his punishment.

Hughes was sentenced to two 99-year sentences on two aggravated rape charges, a life sentence for aggravated kidnapping, 75 years for burglary with intent to commit rape and 10 years for auto theft.

White to be able to review appointments

AUSTIN (AP) — In an historic legislative session, Texas senators have voted to allow Democratic Gov. Mark White to review 59 appointments made by lame-duck Republican Bill Clements, the man White defeated in the Nov. 2 general election.

The session included senators — on principle, they said — voting against friends and political supporters.

Forty-three Clements nominees survived Senate votes Thursday by close margins, but still face possible public hearings before they can be confirmed.

"These are painful votes for a lot of us," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, described his votes to return nominees to White as "some of the most difficult" in his 10-year Senate career.

Democrats said they were trying to change a tradition started by Gov. John Connally in 1969 when he made hundreds of appointments just before leaving office, a maneuver that took the privilege away from incoming Gov. Preston Smith.

Connally, who later switched to the Republican party, was one of the victims Thursday as the Senate voted 19-12 to return his appointment as a regent at the University of Texas, his alma mater.

Asked if he intended to reappoint Connally, White said, "I would think that would be one of the most remote possibilities."

Former House Speaker Bill Clayton's appointment as a Texas A&M regent also was returned to White, 16-15.

Republicans claimed Democrat White's mass recall effort was pure partisanship.

White, however, went on record in favor of a proposal that would stop him from making appointments near the end of his administration.

"The governor won major victories today," Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said after the 4½-hour session had ended, "but I think the Senate came out of it well...No bridges were burned."

Brooks predicted White would reappoint 80 percent to 90 percent of the nominees returned to him.

"I think it's been mischaracterized as a victory for me or a defeat for me or a victory for anyone," White told reporters. "I think what it's going to be is a victory for the state of Texas in changing the policy so we don't have a recurrence of this."

Twenty-four of the 31 senators filed a bill Thursday that would prevent lame-duck appointments by an outgoing governor.

Stolen Spanish artifact seized by Customs agents

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An 18th Century Spanish colonial artifact, made of pure gold and jewels and valued at $3 million, has been confiscated by undercover U.S. Customs agents after it was offered for sale to the San Antonio Museum Association.

Customs agents allege that a Colombian illegally brought the historical piece, a gold monstrance purchased from a monastery in Bogata, Colombia, into the United States.

A Justice Department attorney described the piece as the third most valuable religious artififact in the Western Hemisphere and said that it purportedly once was used for a mass in Colombia presided over by a visiting pope.

No arrests were immediately made.

Ken Consey, director of the San Antonio Museum of Art, said a man contacted Nan Kelker, curator of the museum's New World Art exhibits, in late October offering to sell the gold artifact for $1 million.

The artifact, seized by Customs agents Thursday, was brought into the United Staes through New York City in 1979, the man told museum officials.

The monstrance has a circular glass inset in the middle of a cross, with spirals radiating toward the edge of the 36-inch tall cross, which is studded with emeralds and rubies.

Consey said the religious artifact is believed to have been made in the early 1700s for use in Roman Catholic masses to display the Holy Eucharist.

"At the time the museum was approached, Nan started looking into the history of the piece to determine its authenticity and legality," Consey said.

Ms. Kelker discovered earlier this week that the piece probably was not in the country legally and alerted federal authorities. She met with Customs agents and her staff to exchange information.

Ms. Kelker arranged a meeting with the man wanting to sell the cross on Thursday at the museum and was accompanied by Customs agents posing as museum officials.

"The agents went undercover with the guy and purported to be interested in purchasing the artifact," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Bill Blagg. "When it was offered for sale, they seized it."

Blagg said although the man was not arrested, Customs agents "led me to believe this guy was available if they decided to prosecute. We'll decide who to prosecute after a meeting with Customs agents."

Blagg said a Colombian who allegedly smuggled the artifact into the United States is "the main culprit," but has returned to his native country.

Thefts, church break-in among complaints reported to police

Theft of six rings and other jewelry valued at nearly $1,500 from a Midland residence and a break-in at a church were among complaints being investigated early today by Midland Police Department officers.

Gloria Estrada of 1111 N. Terrell told police her home was burglarized between Saturday and Thursday and the jewelry, valued at $1,430, stolen. She said the jewelry included six rings set with different stones, a crucifix and a "dog-tag" necklace.

Police reported finding no sign of forced entry into the residence.

The Rev. Neely Landrum reported a break-in at Asbury United Methodist Church. He said on Tuesday night he discovered burned matches and desk drawers pulled open in the church's office. On Wednesday, the minister said he found that a north window at the church had been broken and mud was on the window seal and floor.

Police reports indicated nothing was found to be missing. Method of entry was believed to be someone reaching through the broken church window to unlatch the door.

In other reports, Keith Parr of 3000 W. Illinois Ave., Apt. 49, reported the burglary of his vehicle. He said the burglary occurred between Tuesday and Thursday while the vehicle was in the apartment parking lot. Items taken included cassette tapes, a western hat, racquet ball racquet, jogging outfit, four wheel covers and assorted hand tools.

Total value of the items was listed as $465.

Midland firemen responded to a car fire at the intersection of Marshall and New Jersey early Thursday morning. A car owned by Mark Crouch received heavy fire damage at that location as the result of what was believed to be a fire caused by an electrical short. The fire was extinguished with 75 gallons of water.

Alcoholics Anonymous sponsors Midland Mid-winter Conference

Five principal speakers from New York to California will be featured in the 13th annual Midland Mid-Winter Conference of Alcoholics Anonymous this weekend in the downtown Midland Hilton ballroom.

Registration fee is $20 per person.

Dick G. of Denver, Colo., will speak in today's 8 p.m. session, which will be followed by a Night-Owl Meeting.

Saturday's sessions will begin at 8 a.m. with breakfast and a General Service Organization (GSO) meeting in the Trellis Room. Speaking at the 9:30 a.m. Saturday sessions will be Dr. Bob P. of Minneapolis, Minn., and Winnie E. of LaPuente, Calif.

Ray O'K. of Mamaroneck, N.Y., will talk at the 8 p.m. Saturday session, which will be followed by a dance.

Speaking at the 10:30 a.m. Sunday session will be Wilbur M. of Arlington, Va.

Among the speakers will be a member of Al-Anon, an independent organization which works closely with A.A.

Since alcoholism is deemed a family disease, the Al-Anon program, which is based on the same 12 spiritual principles as the A.A. program, is an organization designed for those affected by alcoholism, such as relatives, employers, employees or friends of alcoholics.

Throughout the conference, except for actual session times, a hospitality room operated by Midland A.A. members will be open in Rooms 210-211 of the Hilton.

"Alcoholics Anonymous," the basic textbook for the A.A., defines alcoholism as a compulsion of the mind combined with a physical addiction or allergy and a spiritual void.

Priest's ordination to take place later

The priest ordination of Fred Tinsley at Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, originally scheduled for tonight, has been cancelled, according to a church spokesperson.

The ordination will be re-scheduled for a later date.

West Texas authorities issue arrest warrant for Hobbs man

ANDREWS — West Texas officials have issued an arrest warrant for a Hobbs, N.M., man in connection with the October shooting death of a 27-year-old woman, Belenreyes Castillo of Mexico.

Auturo Pantino Navarette, 27, was arrested late Wednesday afternoon on a warrant charging him with the slaying of Belenryes Castillo, but New Mexico officials said he refused to waive extradition.

The warrant was issued hours after another man pleaded guilty to the slaying after plea-bargain discussions with Andrews County officials that lasted almost five hours.

Jesus Melendez, also of Hobbs, about 50 miles northeast of Andrews, was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Woman indicted by grand jury for acquaintance's shooting

Eunice Marie Hodges, a 42-year-old U.S. Postal Service supervisor, has been indicted by a Midland County grand jury for murder in the Nov. 22 shooting death of an acquaintance who allegedly broke into her home.

The grand jury in December considered the case, passed over it, and upon further investigation earlier this month indicted the woman.

Killed was Roy H. Hutcherson, in his late to mid-50s, of Alexandria, Va.

In November, Ms. Hodges had told police that the man had been harassing her via telephone calls, and said he was going to visit her despite her protestations.

The man apparently entered Ms. Hodges' home at 2003 Northrup Drive via a back gate, which had been broken, and banged on a door. Ms. Hodges told police that she refused to let him in because he appeared to have been drinking alcoholic beverages and that she was afraid of him. The man then broke a rear window, entered the house, and she shot him in the head with a .38-caliber pistol as he was approaching her in a hallway.

Andrews man killed in one-car mishap

ANDREWS — A 22-year-old Andrews welder was killed early today when his welding truck ran off U.S. Highway 385 north of here and struck a tree.

Monty Joe Garrett was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident, 2.5 miles north of Andrews, by Andrews County Justice of the Peace Rusty Bartley.

Investigating Department of Public Safety trooper Buff Angel indicated Garrett's welding truck was southbound on U.S. 385 when it left the roadway, ran into the median separating the northbound and southbound lanes and struck a tree.

'Sex professor' still bitter over furor

By MAURA DOLAN
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. — Seven months after resigning his tenured teaching post California State University, Long Beach, Barry Singer has found a new life as a student, a legal plaintiff and a job-seeker determined to leave behind his media-conferred title of "sex professor."

After death threats forced him to hide out for a week in the Mojave Desert town of Boron last June, the glib, outspoken former professor of psychology of sex quickly obtained a new, unlisted telephone number and later moved to a new home whose address he carefully guards.

A prospectus for a book he wanted to write about his experiences has been rejected by a publisher, and Singer said the publicity about his sexuality course will make it impossible for him to find a teaching job at another university.

He has enrolled at a university in Southern California, with plans to continue research in psychology but not sexology. He also has filed a claim against the university and its administrators and a slander and libel suit against a student who complained about his course, a former colleague who allegedly characterized Singer as "mentally deficient" and a Long Beach newspaper.

"AT FIRST, I just wanted to drop the whole thing, just to go and turn the page," said the small, bearded, bespectacled Singer. "But there was something in me that wouldn't let me do that ... As I told my friends I got mad."

After a long, self-imposed silence, Singer discussed his new life during an interview in the comfortable, plant-filled living room of his Huntington Beach home. He was candid and relaxed, interspersing jokes aimed at himself with criticism of the university and the news media for creating the "hystria" surrounding his course.

Singer, 39, was suspended with pay last May after he said in a published interview that he had been "romantically involved" with some of his students, attended student parties where there was nudity and sex and openly discussed giving homework credit for sexual experimentation.

Singer clearly feels betrayed by the university administration. He said that the university administration knew and did not oppose his dating of students prior to the press attention and initially dismissed as a ridiculous a student complaint about his course.

Rummaging through a large, cardboard box, Singer produced a February 1980, memo that he said was written by Dean Simeon Crowther of the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences. The memo, typed on lined, yellow paper and signed "Sim," described as "generally excellent" a paper Singer had written about the ethics of faculty-student romance.

IN HIS PAPER, Singer wrote that he had been sexually involved with two students during his 11 years at Cal State Long Beach. The memo signed "Sim" was generally complimentary but urged Singer to refrain from writing about his personal experiences.

Crowther, contacted later by the Los Angeles Times, said he could not comment because of Singer's litigation against the university.

But, according to Singer, what concerned the university was not his course or his personal behavior but his public frankness about it. He described himself as "real honest," with a flair for discussing the unspeakable and striking out at convention — characteristics he said some some friends might aptly describe as a "complete lack of social judgment and a naivete."

But he said that the personal side of him is different.

"I'm not gregarious," he said. "I'm not friendly. I'm shy on a one-to-one basis. I have troubles relating to women."

AT THE TIME he resigned, Singer said, two campus police officers had come to guard his Seal Beach house because of reported death threats. He said that he feared his home might be set on fire or his dogs poisoned. He described his former roommates as paranoid about the threats and his friends as anguished and in "emotional turmoil" over his interviews and the media attention.

"My parents were dismayed," said Singer, the oldest of three children reared in Cincinnati. "Things were uncomfortable and embarrassing for them." He brightened and laughed. "But my family wasn't too upset because they always expected I would come to a bad end."

Singer is seeking to be reinstated at Cal State Long Beach on the grounds that he resigned under duress. He said that he wants to return just so he can teach his sexuality course again, "as a matter of principle," the same way he taught it before.

"I'm very proud of the way the class developed and I'm very proud of the way I taught it," he said.

Singer insisted that he gave students credit for sexual experimentation only when he believed the experience would be safe for them. But he conceded that there may be "some legitimate controversy" over what is safe, and he acknowledged that some of his colleagues might be horrified by his views.

THOSE WHO ELECTED to use the option included a woman who was living with a man and wanted to have a bisexual student join them in bed, and several heterosexual women who decided to try lesbian experiences, Singer said.

"I happen to think that a straight woman having a lesbian experience is just fine," he said, "that there is virtually no risk involved, no trauma involved, no problem."

Although no student ever decided to try a sexually open marriage, Singer said, he would have been delighted to have advised one on how to go about it.

"I would have been thrilled to do that, and yeah, I would have gotten a kick out of it," he said, adding later that he has had personal experience in alternative life styles. "I enjoy helping people."

Singer asked that the university where he is studying not be identified lest he embarrass his new associates. He said that he may become a counselor for persons interested in exploring alternative lifestyles and joked in a deadpan voice that he is considering running for public office.

He compared his treatment by the news media to that of former Bendix executive Mary Cunningham and described reporters as "arrogant, vicious and unscrupulous." He said that some publications erroneously reported that he required his students to have sex with him and some reporters fabricated identities in efforts to get interviews with him.

"I REALLY hate the press," he said at one point, and then smiled as he considered why he agreed to be interviewed once again. "Well, I don't know," he said. "You asked me. I'm naive. I'm honest."

He said that he is angry and disillusioned by what he believes was a betrayal of principles by the university and sensationalistic, "hysterical" approach by the news media.

His mistakes, he said, were in molding his original defense at the university around sexuality issues instead of academic freedom concerns, and in giving interviews to reporters with whom, he said, he was often terse.

"I lost my job, I have financial troubles and a lot of people hate me," he said. "So there has been a severe dislocation in my personal life.

"But I think the worst thing for me has been the disillusionment. I can live with being poor, but I cannot live very easily with not liking my own species."

Researchers study Sudden Infant Death Syndrome

By MARY ROTHSCHILD
Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — A baby's breath is the first thing parents listen and look for when they check their sleeping child — the soft sound, the gentle rise and fall of the chest. To think that this breathing might stop without warning during sleep is unthinkable, but it sometimes does — as many as 7,000 times every year in the United States — as small babies fall victim to a mysterious malady labeled Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

SIDS is defined as the unexpected death of an apparently healthy baby for whom a routine autopsy fails to identify the cause of death. Although SIDS strikes infrequently after the first six months, it is the most frequent cause of death between the ages of one month and one year.

In their attempt to solve the puzzle that is SIDS, medical researchers uncover new information and disprove old theories every year. But today's most confusing and controversial SIDS debate concerns a baby's breath and whether it should be monitored.

Several major children's hospitals in the United States, including Children's Orthopedic Hospital and Medical Center here, now have infant monitoring programs. COHMC currently has about 28 infants on home monitors and has monitoried more than 350.

ACCORDING TO Dr. Nora Davis, director of the COHMC program, most of the babies were referred to the clinic following a spell in which the parents found the child turning blue or struggling for breath. Such a spell is known as apnea, a Latin word that means cessation of breath. A three-day battery of tests then is performed to determine the cause, but in some cases, however, there's no explanation for the apnea and no way to be sure that it won't happen again.

Most of the infants are then sent home with monitors which record their heart and respiratory rates as they sleep. The baby is attached to the monitor with an electrode band that is strapped around the belly. Wires lead to a machine about the size of a tape deck. If respiration or heart rates fall below certain levels, the monitor bleats a loud warning.

No one questions that the use of the monitors is helpful, perhaps even lifesaving, for an apneic child. But controversy crops up when people suggest that the monitors might prevent a SIDS death.

Several media reports on SIDS, including one by CBS' 60 Minutes and another in Parents magazine, claimed that apnea is a symptom of SIDS, and hailed monitors as a way to save babies. The claim is generally supported by some doctors, notably Dr. Dorothy Kelly, co-director of the pediatric-pulmonary laboratory at Massachusetts General Hospital. She runs a large apnea clinic and holds to the theory that SIDS babies, while appearing healthy, may be subtly handicapped.

BUT THE BELIEF is hotly disputed by Dr. Bruce Beckwith, chief pathologist at Children's Orthopedic Hospital and Medical Center in Seattle, who performs the autopsies on all suspected SIDS deaths in Washington's King County. Beckwith, by his own admission a maverick among SIDS researchers, insists that apnea and SIDS are different entities. Unlike most of his colleagues, Beckwith has not seen apnea as the breakthrough clue SIDS researchers have been searching for.

Beckwith now points to new evidence he says bolsters his belief that the vast majority of SIDS victims have no inherent respiratory problems. He cites a British study of 9,829 infants, all monitored for a 24-hour period during the first six weeks of their lives, recently concluded by Dr. David P. Southall. Twenty-seven of the monitored babies — the expected number based on statistics — subsequently died of SIDS, but not one of the SIDS victims prior to their deaths showed any evidence of irregular breathing when awake or asleep. If the children had been "abnormal" since birth, according to Beckwith, "at least some of these kids would have had observed respiratory difficulties."

Davis also has faith in the British findings; moreover, she has an intuitive feeling that most SIDS babies are normal until the time of their deaths. "You can't talk to hundreds of SIDS parents like I have without believing they would have noticed something was wrong. There are not that many idiot mothers out there."

BECKWITH BELIEVES that apnea probably is a factor in less than 2 percent of all SIDS cases. He describes SIDS and apnea as "two circles — there's a SIDS circle and an infant apnea circle — with a tiny overlap. My plea is that SIDS and apnea not be spoken of as the same thing. They really should be thought of as separate phenomena."

But if SIDS isn't directly linked to apnea, what is it? Beckwith describes it as a "final kind of event that happens instantaneously, probably in the baby's throat, and closes off the airway. A set of muscles, instead of getting the message to relax, might get the message to contract at the wrong stage of the respiratory cycle and the throat closes off. That might happen for just one breath and nothing comes of it, or the message may get locked in, like a short circuit," he says.

If SIDS is as simple as that, many things could exacerbate it, according to Beckwith. Minor illnesses like colds or "the sniffles" have long been associated with SIDS; Beckwith speculates that the sensory stimuli coming from an inflamed throat might be "bombarding the brain stem with input and increasing the likelihood that something will go wrong."

BECKWITH'S VIEW of SIDS has been called "nihilistic" by some of his colleagues; the Southall study, according to a COHMC spokesman, could put SIDS research "back at square one." If it proves to be correct, SIDS could truly be incurable, "an inherent risk in the human ability to develop so quickly," according to Beckwith.

The study also questions whether infant monitors can ever successfully intervene in a SIDS death.

Says Davis, "It's all philosophical supposition. Some physicians tell parents whose children die of SIDS that there was nothing they could have done. Others believe they might have been able to help the child if they were there to intervene when the baby stopped breathing. It's a ring-around-the-rosy argument that may never be solved."

Davis said she became interested in apnea research because "I hoped there was a relationship between apnea and SIDS." She estimates that her apnea monitors probably have "saved" no more than two children. Many babies snap out of their apnea spells on their own. On the other hand, several monitored children have died — unable to be resuscitated.

One group of babies monitored more than others is the subsequent siblings of infants which died of SIDS. In the general population, about one in 400 babies will die of SIDS. Yet some studies have claimed that as many as one in 70 newborn siblings also will die.

BECKWITH SAYS the risk of multiple SIDS deaths in the same family has been "grossly overstated," and says a national SIDS conference held in Baltimore last year showed much more "reassuring" statistics. With the exception of some known hereditary factors, the risk of subsequent SIDS deaths is about 1.6 per 1,000 — or the same as the random rate, according to the figures reported at the Baltimore conference.

His culinary effort is 'for the birds'

By DENNIS SCHOLL

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — Chuck Sarley is a gourmet cook who doesn't mind sharing culinary secrets.

Just to prove he's no snobbish chef, here's a Sarley favorite that warms the tummies of hundreds of his friends every winter.

Take the largest jar of economy peanut butter you can find, mix in two pounds of corn meal and a few raisins or prunes, render a pound of suet into a liquid, and stir everything together until it has the consistency of soft lard.

Voila!

You'll win the heart of every chickadee, nuthatch and titmouse within miles of your birdfeeder.

Sarley, better known as the "Birdman of Jacobsburg," is an ornithologist who knows his sunflower and thistle seeds better than most people know their A's and B's.

"Feeding birds has gotten to be a very important part of people's winters," Sarley said. "You can open the drapes and enjoy watching birds feed and you can have fun identifying them or photographing them.

"But you must remember that you're creating an artificial environment for the birds. And once you start feeding them, it's up to you to continue. You are attracting birds that will become used to coming to your specific area."

Not everyone will become involved in bird feeding as heavily as Sarley. But then not everyone has the state-funded budget available to Sarley, who is a game warden for the state.

With a little help from his feathered friends, Sarley went through 600 pounds of cracked corn, 200 pounds of white millet and 1,000 pounds of sunflower seeds last winter.

"I lost count on the peanut butter," he said. "And I have no idea how much suet we went through."

If you want to do some bird-feeding at home this winter, Sarley advised, all that is needed is a small amount of backyard space, a birdfeeder or two, seed and a few hours of weekly maintenance.

Sarley said the most important aspect of feeding birds was supplying proper cover so that they feel "at home" in an artificial environment.

"Cover is sometimes more important than the food," he said. "If you don't have proper cover, birds may not come in. Juncos and chickadees are afraid to come into the open if they don't have a place five or 10 feet within the food. They will be afraid of an attack.

"The easiest way to provide cover is to use discarded Christmas trees. If you have no natural cover, you can post the trees 6-8 feet behind the feeding area. The trees will hold their needles well into the spring."

Naval Medal of Honor winner's life 'interesting'

By STEPHANIE SALTER
Hearst Feature Service

Congressional Medal of Honor winner James Bond Stockdale has a left knee that hasn't worked since North Vietnamese soldiers shattered it in a prisoner of war camp in 1965.

But the retired Navy vice-admiral doesn't take the elevator. He regularly battles up two flights of stairs in Stanford University's Henry Hoover Memorial Building to teach 60 sophomores in a seminar in "Combating Coercion and Manipulation."

Stockdale, a senior fellow with the Hoover Institution and the most decorated Naval hero in America as well as the holder of the nation's highest award, doesn't take the stairs to show how tough he is. He already proved that during his eight-year stay in Hoa Lo (Fiery Furnace) prison in North Vietnam. His mentor, the Greek philosopher Epictetus, had the answer about the stairs 20 centuries ago when he wrote:

"Lameness is an impediment to the leg, but not to the will."

Like most of Epictetus' pieces of advice, Stockdale took that one to heart and made it work for him.

IT IS DIFFICULT not to court melodrama when describing this 58-year-old former Navy pilot. Even he reluctantly admits that his "is a good story."

As a 41-year-old commander of a Navy air wing, flying combat missions near Hanoi, Stockdale was shot down in September 1965 and captured by the North Vietnamese. He then spent the best part of his 40th decade coming to terms with himself in a prisoner of war camp that was unencumbered by rules of the Geneva Convention.

Stockdale had help in his search for values from his adversary relationship with the Vietnamese soldiers who ran the prison, particularly the officer in charge, Major Bai. Help came in the form of beatings and other physical torture. In addition, the American prisoners were deprived of medical care, food and one another's company.

Major Bai — nicknamed "The Cat" by the Americans — was primarily interested in persuading the prisoners to publicly denounce the American government. Favors and humane treatment were promised for cooperation. Punishment, such as having one's arms trussed high and tightly for long periods of time behind one's back, was the other side of the coin. Forty-five minutes of trussing usually insured six months of useless, dangling arms.

Yet Stockdale has said the physical abuse was the least of the ordeal. The truly terrible monsters were self-doubt and fear.

PRISONERS WERE ISOLATED from one another and forbidden communication in the hope of nurturing their doubts and turning them against each other and their country.

The highest-ranking Naval officer in Viet Nam, Stockdale organized his 10 compatriots against their captors. They subsisted on a wall-tapping code to bolster one another's confidence and loyalty. It was not uncommon, Stockdale said, for these tough military men to tap out such message of support as "God bless you," and "I love you."

"You get very comfortable with that kind of trust and loyalty in the extortion environment," he said.

Stockdale managed to convince his mates that submission, even in the slightest degree, was the beginning of the end.

He never complied with Major Bai's wishes for public denunciation of the United States, resorting once to pounding his own face against his cell wall so it wouldn't be fit for propaganda viewing.

WHILE IMPRISONED, Stockdale explored the vast realm of his education, demanding his memory serve and strengthen his convictions. He drew spiritual nourishment from his childhood days in Abbingdon, Ill., where his mother, a teacher, had laid a rock-solid foundation for learning. He called on his years at the Naval Academy in Anapolis and his post-graduate days at Stanford where he had first embraced philosophy.

One of his professors at Stanford, Phillip Rhinelander, introduced him to Epictetus, whose beliefs, particularly those that deal with personal freedom and dignity and becoming a slave to no man, guided Stockdale through prison and into academia.

As Stockdale told his class in his first lecture:

"This isn't a how-to course — how to cope with your boss, how to survive in prison. It deals with the big idea of human dignity, the big idea of human autonomy and how one clings to it when others — individuals, political groups and systems, religious groups and systems — would treat him as a mere thing, a mere productive unit, as a means to their ends."

'Computer parties' successful business

By GREGORY SPECTOR
Hearst Feature Service

LAKEWOOD, Calif. — Lavon Koerner is feverishly getting ready for what could be called a "pyramid computer party" — an almost weekly occurrence since last February. He and his secretary can be seen frantically setting up folding chairs around the living room where his Texas Instruments home computer rests among the house plants.

Koerner, who has a full-time job as an executive with a management consulting firm, is a distributor for Tronics Sales Corp., a company that markets Texas Instruments home computers exclusively through home sales campaigns. Started in 1981 by an out-of-work Braniff pilot, Tronics' distributors make money in basically two ways: by selling Tronics products and receiving sales commissions, or by enlisting other distributors — referred to as "down lines" — and earning bonuses from their sales. Tronics is predicting $25 million in sales in 1983. And despite the personal computer's relatively steep price — about $300, not including a $100 rebate — sales have been brisk, according to Koerner.

In a typical party scenario, after his 12 guests have arrived, Koerner begins a two-and-a-half hour meeting. His spiel is folksy, yet subtly slick — the product of ten months of practice and successful enlistment, he said, with anywhere from 600 to 800 distributors selling in 14 different states.

A down-line organization — where one distributor "sponsors" others — works like this: A sponsors B, who sponsors C, who sponsors D, so B, C and D are all down line from A. Everyone upline then benefits through bonuses when D sells a computer. And recruiting down-line personnel, rather than making retail sales, is where the real money is made with Tronics, says Koerner.

In his "parties," Koerner introduces his product and its attributes, letting guests try their hand at the entertainment and educational software and quickly covering how to get the computer to help figure out the best house or car to buy.

"You now have the chance to break into a world people are whispering about," said Koerner, as he begins telling his guests how they too can get in on selling the equipment. "This is not a get-rich-quick program, but with some work and by putting together your own organization, you can make a lot of money," he said.

Using some conservative sales figures volunteered by one of the guests, Koerner lets his computer do the explaining of just how much money one can make. The computer revealed a year-by-year geometric progression of impressive earning figures. By about the fifth year, the totals were in the millions.

After taking a few questions, Koerner closed the meeting by saying guests were under no pressure to buy and could call him later, if interested. The party then was adjourned for coffee and cake and more computer games to play with. Koerner later said that all of the people invited to the meeting "not already down line" called him back and joined the Tronics selling network.

"When I first was invited to a Texas Instruments party, I was somewhat fearful of computers," Koerner said. "There was a lot of talk of pyramid schemes in the news at the time, and I didn't want to be involved with anything illegal or hurt my friends. And I wasn't interested in get-rich-quick schemes or having a garageful of computers I had to get rid of."

NEWS For Preschoolers

Your Child's First Toothbrush

During the years one through six, children are likely to develop dental habits and attitudes that last a lifetime. During these same years, cavities are the most prevalent childhood dental problem.

Many parents will be glad to learn that cavities aren't inevitable. Since the toothbrush is a first line of attack against cavities, choosing the right toothbrush for your youngster is an important decision.

Choose the right toothbrush for your preschooler and get your youngster off to a healthy start in life.

Often in the past, a child's toothbrush was simply a smaller version of the adult variety. Preschool children need a toothbrush with a small head and soft, polished, rounded bristle ends. The toothbrush should fit well in a child's small mouth and get into all areas, including hard-to-reach back teeth. The brush should be easy for a child to maneuver and have a handle long enough for Mom and Dad to give a helping hand, if needed.

A preschooler's teeth may only be temporary, but dental habits learned in childhood last a lifetime. So it is important for children to learn proper brushing from the start. To brush correctly, dental authorities recommend brushing with short, gentle back-and-forth strokes, keeping bristles slightly angled toward the gum line.

Home remodeling trend current housing boom

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

If you are thinking about upgrading or remodeling some portion of our home, you are not unique.

Remodeling became the single largest residential construction market in 1981 and the trend is expected to continue, according to a building trade publication.

Altogether, Americans spent some $46 billion in 1982 on home improvement and upkeep, according to U.S. Department of Commerce estimates.

The growth of the remodeling field is hardly surprising at a time when tight money and escalating new home costs have encouraged many to improve existing homes, rather than moving on to new or larger quarters elsewhere.

One result of the current interest in remodeling is that the variety and quantity of information on the subject has been growing. If they know where to look, consumers can find many free or low-cost sources of guidance on subjects such as energy conservation, adding rooms, new materials, selecting a contractor, and doing-it-themselves for almost any repair or remodeling project imaginable.

RECENTLY, the National Association of the Remodeling Industry (formerly the National Home Improvement Council) prepared guidelines for individuals about to undertake a home improvement project.

The association suggests consumers take their time and do some investigating, visiting home centers to see what is on the market, before committing to a home remodeling project.

Information is usually available from the public library as well as the local Cooperative Extension agent, listed in the telephone book's Yellow Pages under "County Government."

Besides providing booklets and reference lists on subjects pertaining to home and garden maintenance and improvement, many extension service officers will answer specific questions. The agent may be able to help you decide whether a specific project is within your competence as a do-it-yourself project.

IF THE contemplated improvement is related to saving energy, another good source is the residential department of the local utility. They can provide energy audits and information and literature about saving energy around the home.

Once you have decided to go ahead and hire a contractor, observing some precautions can lessen the risk of ending up with a botched job.

According to Randolph Seifert, an attorney who specializes in housing questions, the remodeling area is fraught with consumer complaints, not necessarily because of contractor dishonesty but mainly from the failure of both sides to realize what they are getting into.

"There are too many handshakes in this business," according to Seifert, when a clear contract spelling out what is to be done by whom, when and where and what each party's responsibilities will be is basic to eliminating disputes.

Seifert says, contractor selection should start with a call to the local building department and a request for recommendations of people doing good work in the area.

Building departments are likely to be both knowledgeable and helpful, he said, both in small towns where everyone knows everyone else and in larger cities where you may have to dig a little harder to find the officials who are familiar with your specific neighborhood.

LOCAL BANKS are another good source for information on contractors. Furthermore, once a few candidates have been identified, the bank can help you check credit ratings and references.

Manufacturers of appliances and home remodeling materials provide a new source for information on remodeling. As a result of the growth in interest in the subject among consumers, more manufacturers have gotten into the business of providing general information.

The latest to offer such material to the general public is General Electric Co., which recently published four booklets as the first volume of the "GE Home Library."

The titles are: "Cooking: How to Make Your Kitchen Work For You," "The Kitchen: Practical Ways to Update and Reorganize," "Light: Simple Tips for Your Home" and "Home Video: Understanding Your New Options."

(Mail requests for GE series with 50 cents for postage and handling to: GE Home Library, P.O. Box 4528, Monticello, MN 55365.)

DEAR ABBY

Man feels exposed in woman's world

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Everyone says, "It's a man's world." It isn't. If anything, it's a woman's world. Explain this:

If a woman undressed in front of a window with the shade up and a man stood outside and watched, the man would be arrested as a peeping tom.

But if a man undressed in front of a window with the shade up and a woman stood outside and watched, the man would be arrested for indecent exposure. — A MAN IN A WOMAN'S WORLD

DEAR MAN: Not necessarily. It is doubtful that a man — or a woman — who disrobed inadvertently before an unshaded window would be arrested for indecent exposure.

Nor would one caught in the act of observing someone of the opposite sex disrobing before an uncovered window necessarily be arrested as a peeping tom (or tomette, whichever the case may be).

Intent is all important. Gender is not.

DEAR ABBY: For 14 years my wife and I have had a running battle over a difference of opinion that has left us both somewhat battle-scarred. Before I invite guests (including my relatives) for the weekend, I always get my wife's OK first.

When my wife invites guests for the weekend (usually her relatives), she never asks for my OK ahead of time. If I am told at all, I am simply informed that so-and-so is coming for the weekend.

When I remind my wife that I always ask for her approval before inviting guests and think she should give me the same consideration, she says, "You are eccentric." Then she reminds me that she is an adult, and she sees no reason to ask for my "permission" to invite guests to her home.

How do you view this, Abby? — MIFFED IN MARYLAND

DEAR MIFFED: Marriage is a partnership. The home is not hers — it belongs to both of you. It's not a matter of asking for permission to invite weekend guests, it's simply "clearing" with one's partner before issuing an invitation. It's the courteous and considerate thing to do.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 33-year-old, average-looking male with a four-year college education who seems to have terrible luck finding a young woman. I have joined dating clubs, which cost me a lot and got me nowhere. I am not in the habit of going to bars, but I was so desperate for female companionship one night I went to a bar and picked up a young woman and she turned out to be a prostitute.

I see guys all around me with girls, and they don't appear to have any more on the ball than I have. What's wrong with me? I'm starting to worry about myself, Abby. I've even prayed to St. Jude, and I'm not even Catholic.

I consider having a companion of the opposite sex more important than a job or career. I want someone to share my life with. Without that, everything else is meaningless. Can you help me? — LONELY IN DENVER

DEAR LONELY: What are your outside interests? The theater? Music? Museums? Art? Dancing? Sports? Antique cars? There are any number of places to meet people (church included) that will bring you into contact with women whose interests are the same as yours, which is a good starting point. Enroll in some extension courses at your local university.

And let everyone at work know that you're interested in meeting someone. Everyone has a "lovely" cousin, niece, neighbor or friend who is aching to meet a nice guy who doesn't want to go to bars to meet a nice girl.

(What you don't know can hurt you. For Abby's booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," send $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Applying varnish properly

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Whether you are applying varnish to unfinished wood or to a surface from which a previous finish has been removed, the vital first step is preparation.

You never will achieve a first-class finish with varnish unless you recognize it will not turn a bad surface into a good one and that the finish can be ruined by its mortal enemy, dust.

Varnish can, in fact, accentuate the faults in a piece of wood. And it should never be applied to a dusty surface or in a room where dust is likely to travel, as would be the case when there is a movement of air from a nearby window, a hot air duct, an air conditioning unit or anything else.

Don't even start varnishing until you are sure everything in the room is dust-free and that nobody will even walk in the room until the varnish is thoroughly dry.

These precautions are necessary when using regular varnish, which is called natural-resin varnish, or polyurethane varnish, which is a synthetic of high quality but more expensive.

IT CANNOT be emphasized enough that it is important to read the label on the container carefully and follow the directions carefully, since there are differences among the various brands on the market as well as between the two principal types of varnish.

This applies not only to the manner of application, but to such things as to whether and how much the varnish should be thinned and what undercoat is recommended. Generally, shellac can be used as an undercoat with regular varnish but not with polyurethane.

The brush should be dipped into the varnish about one-third the length of the bristles, wiping off the excess by tapping lightly against the inside of the container and not by dragging it across the inside of the can. This latter practice and shaking the can often cause bubbles as the varnish is spread.

Flow on the varnish in the direction of the wood grain. Use light, long strokes. Immediately cross-stroke against the grain. Complete the application by stroking lightly with the bristle tips in the direction of the grain, using an almost dry brush.

IN WORKING with a table top or any other large surface, brush from the center of the top towards the edge, lifting the brush the instant the edge is reached. As with all brush-stroking when using varnish, do not bear down very much, which is still another way to get bubbles on the surface.

For an extra fine finish, sand each coat of varnish lightly, just enough to smooth out any irregularities but not enough to remove any of the new coat. Use a fine grade of sandpaper or steel wool. Be sure the coat is thoroughly dry before you do this and be certain to wipe off any grit or dust after you complete it.

In doing any varnishing, always keep what is called a "tack rag" on hand. This is a clean cloth sprinkled with turpentine and then further moistened with the varnish that is being used. Or you can buy one at most stores that sell varnish. It is excellent for removing dust from the surface before you begin work.

SOME WOOD finishers also keep a clean wooden toothpick nearby. It can be used for picking up specks of dust from a finish that is still very wet. A tack rag can be used again and again if, after each use, it is wrung dry and placed in an airtight metal container.

Varnish can be left as is after the final coat or rubbed with pumice and rottenstone powders or some other rubbing compound, followed by a coat of wax.

Hints for home handymen

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I am a typesetter for a daily newspaper and have set your column for use in our paper. I was especially interested in your reply to a reader's query about holding mitered corners together in the making of picture frames. Your suggestion to use a vise or certain clamps undoubtedly will work out all right, but I have another method that is very simple.

The easiest and best way for putting picture frames together and holding them in place until the glue dries is to bind them together with string. Simply glue the mitered edges, place the sides in place and then proceed to wrap the outside edges of the assembled picture frames together with string. In doing this, I generally use about 15 turns of the string around the frame, stretching it tight on diagonal corners. This is done, of course, on a flat surface like a kitchen table.

You will find that when 14 or 15 turns of the string have been wound and pulled tight around the assembled frame, it is very tightly secured for a strong glue joint. After the joints have dried, the string can be removed and Nos. 3 or 4 finishing nails can be driven through the joint to provide additional strength. When the frame has sufficient wrappings of string around it, the end can be tucked underneath the several wrappings to keep it snug and tight.

Having been a printer for 35 years, I got this idea from the trade, since printers for generations have used string to tie up type forms to keep them intact and to prevent piling or spilling. The "hot metal" days of printing have given way to "cold type" where everything is done by phototypesetting and computers, and we no longer use string in the composing room. Let me know what you think of this idea. In the meantime, I enjoy reading your column, as you come up with some very good ideas for do-it-yourselfers.

A. — An excellent idea. I should have thought of it myself. Many is the time I have stood across the table from a printer and watched him put the type in place and "tie up" the form. Thanks a lot.

Q. — We want to knock down an inside wall in our house in order to combine two rooms. We have been warned to be sure the wall is a nonbearing partition, which presumably means a wall that isn't supporting anything. We are fairly certain this particular wall is not supporting anything, but we aren't positive. How can we tell whether it is?

A. — To be positive, you will need the services of a professional, who must make an inspection before he can give you a decision. Yes, you can make a fairly accurate guess. For example, if you can determine which way the floor joists run, you may solve the problem — but then again, you may not. When the joists run at right angles to the partition, the chances are it is a loadbearing partition. When the joists run the same way as the partition, the chances are it is a nonbearing wall. But I have seen a nonbearing wall which ran at right angles to the joists. It is too important to make a guess that might be wrong. A professional has several different ways to check whether a wall is nonbearing. While you are at it, have him determine, also, what other complications might develop should you attempt knocking down the wall yourself. Even when a wall is nonbearing, it houses various kinds of equipment that must be handled with care.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find many tips in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Uncle Sam wants 79-year-old

SAN ANGELO (AP) — When Wade Darsey received a notice saying Uncle Sam wanted to know why he had not registered with the Selective Service System, he was puzzled.

That's because he's 79 years old.

"I wondered what to do. I didn't want them to throw me in jail for not registering for the draft," said the former civil service employee, who has been retired for almost 14 years.

Darsey said Wednesday that he received a government form in an IRS package two weeks ago asking why he had not completed a draft registration form.

After conferring with Tom Green County Judge Edd B. Keyes, Darsey said he sent the questionnaire and copies of birth certificates for both him and his wife back to the Selective Service.

"I was just trying protect myself. I got the thing two weeks ago and they only gave me 15 days to answer," he said.

"Seems some place over in Maryland didn't have any record of me," he said, "and so I get this thing asking why I had not registered for the draft."

A judge restrained Virgil Everhart Thursday from continuing his own form of property settlement, which, to Virgil, meant literally dividing his house in half. Circuit Court Judge Dan Cornette told the Kentucky man that he was to stop or risk going to jail.

Judge orders man to stop dividing his house in half

CENTRAL CITY, Ky. (AP) — A man who began cutting his house in half to protest a proposed divorce settlement was told by a judge to stop his "mighty cute trick" or risk going to jail.

Circuit Court Judge Dan Cornette issued a temporary restraining order Thursday, barring Virgil M. Everhart from continuing his impromptu carpentry. Everhart had already hacked through the floor, walls and ceiling to carve a symbolic line that would leave the interior in two equal portions, one marked "His," the other, "Hers."

"Mr. Everhart, you've pulled a mighty cute trick," Cornette said at a hearing Thursday, adding, "The only thing standing between you and the jailhouse door is your job."

Everhart, 57, is a boilermaker for the Tennessee Valley Authority at its Paradise, Ky., steam plant.

He began cutting up the living room floor with various drills and saws early this week after receiving a summons from his wife's attorney setting out her requests for an equal property settlement, temporary child support and alimony pending a final divorce decree.

By Thursday, Everhart's carpentry was big news. Crews from a half-dozen television stations and a major network descended on his modest one-story frame house in Muhlenberg County to film his protest.

He was frequently interrupted by telephone calls from radio stations seeking interviews, some from as far away as London and San Francisco.

Everhart's efforts came to an abrupt end Thursday afternoon when he appeared in Muhlenberg Circuit Court. Cornette granted his wife Janice's request for temporary child support, alimony and the restraining order.

Pole's movie hot politics

Hearst European Bureau

PARIS — Strictly speaking, the French Revolution isn't what reporters would call a breaking news story. After all, it happened nearly 200 years ago. But it has suddenly become a hot political item on both sides of the Iron Curtain.

The man chiefly responsible is movie director Andrzej Wajda, who is probably Poland's most famous living son after Pope John Paul II and Lech Walesa.

It's not the first time that Wajda's film-making has raked over historical embers, scorching a lot of fingers in the process. But never before has he managed it in several countries at once, as he has with his new film "Danton" about the life and death of one of the French Revolution's key figures.

Until now, Wajda's fame has rested largely on works like "Man of Marble" which poked gaping holes in the official party history of postwar Poland and helped prepare the ground for the Solidarity movement. Poland's military rulers considered his international standing so great that they dared not arrest him, as they did other "dangerous" writers and artists following the imposition of martial law 14 months ago.

INSTEAD, HE was allowed quietly to leave Poland to make a film in France. "Danton," which has just been released here, was the result. Polish leader General Wojciech Jaruzelski now may be sorry that he didn't jail the director or, at least, keep him at home.

He may not be the only one. The same could be said for a sizeable number of French left-wingers who have interpreted the movie as a veiled attack on the left everywhere. They think it could prove damaging less than two months before significant nationwide elections here that are viewed as a test of where France's Socialist-Communist regime is headed.

"Danton" isn't likely to break box office records. Based on a Polish play, it is heady going, thick with historical and ideological allusions. Not the stuff to appeal to your average film buff. It is political dynamite, nevertheless.

The movie relates the last seven days of Georges Danton's life before he was hauled off in a tumbril and guillotined on the orders of his former friend and later rival, Robespierre. It was the act that sent the French Revolution plunging into the bloodthirsty Reign of Terror, an episode that has been repeated in nearly every revolution since.

Regardless of either Danton or Robespierre, the concept of "revolution" itself is ultimately doomed to wallow in disillusion and bloodshed and is therefore futile and, in the final analysis, unjustified.

In dramatic terms, Danton, interpreted by Gerard Depardieu, who specializes in playing amiable roughnecks, is the movie's tragic hero. Robespierre, predestined to his role as executioner by his rigid concept of historical necessity, is inevitably the villain.

THAT, IN FACT, is how most historians have seen them. But, as many commentators here have pointed out, Wajda's film treatment seems to be saying something else: that regardless of either Danton or Robespierre, the concept of "revolution" itself is ultimately doomed to wallow in disillusion and bloodshed and is therefore futile and, in the final analysis, unjustified.

If that is what Wajda means to say, there is nothing new about it. That violent revolution possesses an apparently built-in dynamic leading to terror and tyrants like Napoleon and Stalin has been obvious to students of the phenomenon for a long time. But left-wing ideologues continue treating it as a highly contestable revelation.

The French left was especially incensed by one moment in the film when Danton-Depardieu blurts out, "The people have only one enemy — the government!"

Those are fighting words to communists and socialists when, as is the case here, they are the government.

French communist filmreviewers have decried the movie as "counter-revolutionary." Their view is shared by critics in Poland where its public showing has just been indefinitely postponed for "technical reasons."

However, there is a difference between the two sets of detractors. French left-wingers, while worried by the potential impact here, say the film is obviously intended to be a commentary on modern Poland.

AIDS spread possible, study says

BOSTON (AP) — A mysterious disease that breaks down the body's immune system, so far affecting mostly homosexuals and drug addicts, may have the potential of spreading to the general public, a new study says.

The syndrome has recently turned up among hemophiliacs and other people who receive blood products. Investigators now fear it is caused by an infectious agent, such as a virus, and spread through blood or sexual contact.

A warning of its possible hazard to the general public was issued Thursday by doctors who examined 10 victims who denied any contact with drugs or homosexuality. All were Haitian immigrants who developed the mysterous ailment called acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS.

The Haitian outbreak "suggests that immunity is not conferred or guaranteed by virtue of a traditional lifestyle," the researchers wrote.

"The possibility that the syndrome is due to a transmissible agent should dispel any sense of complacency that this is a homosexual or Haitian disease that does not have potentially serious public health ramifications for everyone," they said.

The study, conducted by doctors at Downstate Medical Center in New York City and the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Since 1981, 48 Haitians in the United States have been diagnosed as having the disease, which destroys the body's immune system and leaves victims open to a variety of exotic ailments.

In all, about 900 cases have been confirmed, and up to 70 percent of the victims die within two years of their diagnosis. Three-quarters of the victims are male homosexuals, and most of the rest are intravenous drug users or Haitians.

"It's not simply limited, as many thought in the beginning, to people with aberrant lifestyles," said Dr. Jeffrey Vieira of the Downstate center, who studied the outbreak among Haitians. "Nice people get VD (venereal disease), nice people get AIDS.

"If it's transmitted by blood product, we have to start considering who we permit to donate blood and discriminate on the basis of lifestyles," said Vieira.

The National Hemophilia Foundation has called for a ban on blood donations from homosexual men, citing the increased risk of transmitting AIDS. But three major blood collectors — the American Red Cross, the American Association of Blood Banks and the Council of Community Blood Centers — said in a joint statement Tuesday that their blood banks would neither ask donors if they were homosexual nor exclude them because of it.

The 10 Haitians studied had a variety of fungus and parasite infections that healthy people normally shrug off. Six of them died, and two were still sick during the follow-up period.

'Passive smoking' may harm fetus

CLEVELAND (AP) — Pregnant women who do not smoke but breathe in others' smoke expose their unborn babies to a chemical believed to slow fetal growth, a researcher says.

The study of 107 pregnant women focused on thiocyanate levels in blood taken from umbilical cords at birth, Dr. Paul M. Kuhnert, assistant professor of reproductive biology at Case Western Reserve University, said Wednesday. He said the chemical is believed to impede the growth of fetuses.

An article published in the December issue of the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology said the study at Case found a pregnant passive smoker "exposed the fetus to a measurable increase in at least one metabolic byproduct of tobacco smoke, thiocyanate."

"We can't say yet whether there are significan effects" of passive smoking on the fetus, Dr. Sidney M. Bottoms, who was among Case researchers and now is at the University of Texas Medical School in Houston, said Wednesday.

Ann Browder, a spokeswoman for the Washington, D.C.-based Tobacco Institute, a trade association for cigarette manufacturers, said the study did not sound significant.

Oraflex to have limited use

WASHINGTON (AP) — The arthritis drug Oraflex, which was pulled off the market last August after being linked to at least 72 deaths, will make a limited comeback, its manufacturer says.

Ron Culp, spokesman for Eli Lilly and Co. of Indianapolis, said 100 physicians who helped perform clinical trials of Oraflex before its approval can order new supplies for patients they treated during those trials, in cases where the patients haven't responded to other therapies.

The Food and Drug Administration approved this limited use of the drug.

Patients receiving Oraflex will have to undergo frequent laboratory tests and medical examinations at their own expense to determine whether they suffer any of the liver and kidney problems that led to Oraflex's withdrawal, Culp said.

If this limited use is successful, the company is willing to make the drug available to a larger group of patients who have not responded to other types of treatment, he said.

The company withdrew Oraflex from worldwide sale on Aug. 4, 1982, after reports in Great Britain and the United States linked it with at least 72 deaths. The Food and Drug Administration did not ban the drug and the company is within its legal rights in offering Oraflex on a limited basis.

Culp said the company had received numerous requests for supplies of Oraflex from doctors and from patients since it was withdrawn.

Aspirin effect told

BOSTON (AP) — Aspirin interferes with the lungs' self-cleaning process, but the problem is not significant enough to offset the drug's benefits, researcher say.

The lungs are lined with a thin layer of mucus and water that traps breathed-in dirt, dust and bacteria, and tiny hairs, called cilia, transport this mucus up to the throat, where it is swallowed.

Normal doses of aspirin slow down that process, the study said, and its authors said more study is necessary to see how this affects people with lung disease.

Area representatives of an ad hoc coalition held a news conference Thursday to support the Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion a decade ago. Ten years doesn't seem to be enough water under the bridge to keep interest groups from expressing their views about the Supreme Court ruling which legalized abortion.

Midland-Odessa citizens, representing political, religious and health organizations, Thursday publicly supported the Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court ruling which will celebrate its 10-year anniversary Saturday.

Local representatives prepared a supportive statement, presenting it to the news media at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission board room at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Members of the ad hoc coalition supporting "choice," were Edwin Kurtz, president of Planned Parenthood; Paula Spinks, Permian Basin Women's Political Caucus; Charles Seltzer, Lawyers for Choice; and Karen Marshall, Texas Abortion Rights Action League and the National Organization for Women. Another support group not represented was the Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights.

The views voiced covered the right to choose abortion, American support, when life begins and government interference.

"We support a woman's right to choice in deciding whether to have an abortion," Kurtz said. "We believe that the best method of family planning is effective contraception to prevent pregnancy. However, since no contraceptive method is perfectly effective or always available, a woman, in consultation with her physician, should have the right to obtain a safe, legal abortion."

While Right to Life supporters attack Planned Parenthood because it is partially funded with tax dollars, Ms. Marshall asked: "What about wars? There are many many things people pay taxes for that they don't believe in."

Seltzer took the issue one step further, adding "you've got to remember it is a fundamental constitutional right for those individuals to make up their own mind in reproduction freedom.

"They (Right to Life supporters) can have their opinion, but they also want to force their opinion on us through the constitution," he added.

Kurtz said a majority of American people also support "pro choice," and 90 percent of the Americans support a right to abortion under certain circumstances.

"An amendment to prohibit abortion might even ignore the rights of women in case of rape or incest or for women with life-threatening health conditions," Kurtz added.

The representatives discussed when life begins, agreeing that "the moment an unborn being becomes a person cannot be mandated by law; it is a religious and philosophical matter."

Seltzer said this point of difference could lead to disturbing ramifications if life was decided to begin at conception.

"Finally," according to Kurtz, "a prohibition of abortion would mean government interference in a most private and personal area of our lives."

Nurse's aide testifies fellow worker struck older patient

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 20-year-old nurse's aide testified Thursday in Midland's 142nd State District Court that fellow worker Sherry Sims, 29, "started hitting" an 84-year-old patient who was "spitting out" water which Ms. Sims was trying feed her with a 2-ounce plastic syringe in the early morning hours last July 20.

"She starting hitting her," the Spanish-speaking aide, Patricia Portillo, testified through a translator. "She started slapping her on the head..., on the chest...only (with) her hands."

The aide told prosecutor Jim Rex that the bed-ridden patient in Terrace Gardens Nursing Home was "just holding her hands and telling her to stop."

Testimony indicated that the woman, who has lived at the nursing home since 1975 and has been bed-fast for five years, was scratched on either side of the face, suffered a bruise on the left breast and upper right arm, and a swollen lower lip.

If convicted of injury to an elderly person in the non-jury trial before Judge Pat Baskin, Ms. Sims could be sentenced to prison from two to 10 years and fined $5,000 or she could be placed on probation.

In her testimony, Ms. Portillo said that she and Ms. Sims had entered the room occupied by the patient and another woman. But Ms. Sims left to get the syringe, returned and tried to give the elderly woman water.

The patient resisted.

"I saw her (Ms. Sims) when she hit her on the face and the chest," the aide said. "(I) saw her hands moving toward her face."

Rex asked the aide if Ms. Sims ever hit the patient on the back.

"I did not see," she said, "because I got scared and turned my back to give water" to a roommate when the alleged slapping and scratching started.

However, the state witness said she saw Ms. Sims "hit her on the face and chest" and that the patient "started to hold her hand" and said "Stop! Stop!"

Under cross-examination by defense attorney Edward T. Garza, Ms. Portillo at one time said she did not see the aide striking the patient but only heard sounds of slappings. Later, the aide said she saw the bed-fast women being hit but immediately turned her back.

"Do some of the older people ever become belligerent at you?" Garza asked the aide.

"Yes," she replied.

"Did (the patient) become belligerent at Ms. Sims?"

"No."

But the aide said the patient did become angry when she was being struck and as she was telling Ms. Sims "not to hit her."

Earlier in cross-examining the aide, Garza asked how she and other aides received instructions on the care and feeding of patients. She said, for example, that a licensed vocational nurse (LVN) "would tell how to feed water" — via syringe, straw or glass — and that the aides would check to see if the patients were wet or soiled.

"Do you have any training in being a nurse's aide?" Garza asked Ms. Portillo.

"Yes,...very little. Only what they showed us." The aide said instructions, required by the Texas State Health Department, were given only in English. And since she speaks and understands only Spanish, she comprehended little of the instructions.

The aide initially did not report the injuries to the patient, saying she was afraid to do so.

Another witness, Terrace Gardens LVN Liz Arnett, recounted the patient's injuries and said the injured woman "was extremely upset; she was hysterical" later in the morning, about 7:15 a.m. on July 20, when the patient's 51-year-old daughter came into the nursing home to bathe her mother and to get her ready for breakfast. The daughter spotted the injuries and told nursing home officials of her mother's bruises and scratches.

"She was crying and screaming," Ms. Arnett said. That was about six hours after the 84-year-old patient had been injured.

Ms. Arnett said it was not unusual for a patient to refuse water.

"Sometimes we have to coax them a little bit to take their fluids," she said, but noted that aides are cautioned never to use force in feeding patients.

Lillie Niblett, now hospital LVN who was a witness for the defense, said she noticed only a scratch on the left side of the patient's mouth and a bruise on her left breast.

The nurse said that Ms. Sims has "always been nice to the patients. I've never seen her handle patients rough."

The judge recessed the trial until 11 a.m. today.

Garza said the 29-year-old former aide is to take the witness stand in her own defense at some point in the trial.

Craddick reappointed chairman of natural resources committee

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, has been reappointed chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee by Speaker Gib Lewis.

Lewis announced House committee assignments Thursday.

Craddick also was named to the Energy and Calendars committees. Craddick has been on the Energy Committee for 10 years, but this will be his first year on the Calendar Committee. "It (Calendar Committee) is a very powerful committee," Craddick said. "Anyone can propose a bill, but the calendar committee sets the bills that go to the floor for a vote."

The appointment of Craddick as chairman of the Natural Resources Committee means he will be serving as chairman of the committee for the eighth time, having been appointed chairman of the panel for the first time in 1975.

Craddick said he was pleased with the appointments. "Those are the three that I wanted," he said.

Rep. Jay Gibson, D-Odessa, was named to the Appropriations and Local and Consent Calendars committees, and as chairman for budget and oversight of the Higher Education Committee.

Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, was named to the County Affairs and the Local and Consent Calendars committees, and as vice chairman of the Liquor Regulations Committee.

Midland files suit against asphalt plant for violations of city zoning ordinances

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The city of Midland, which claims Petroplex Land and Development Co.'s asphalt plant in northeast Midland is in violation of city zoning and building ordinances and is polluting the area, has filed suit for a temporary injunction in Midland's 142nd State District Court.

The plant, which is between Midland County Roads 1150 North and 1160 North, nevertheless has a permit from the Texas Air Control Board to operate. It has been defending that permit in a public hearing in Midland this week.

In its petition, the city of Midland is alleging that Petroplex's property was annexed via City Ordinance 6072. Upon first reading of the ordinance last Aug. 24, the city says it acquired jurisdiction over the property's future use and maintained status quo over the property.

On Sept. 24, the Midland City Council adopted Resolution No. 82-260 which reinforced its jurisdiction over the property and which "prohibited the issuance of building permits, certificates of occupancy and compliance and the construction of buildings and structures on the (Petroplex) property unless such would be allowed under an 'A-E,' Agricultural-Estate District," of the city's zoning code.

That code, however, prohibits issuance of a building permit in a newly-annexed territory not deemed for agricultural use.

"That (code)...does not allow land and buildings in an 'A-E,' Agricultural-Estate District, to be used for an asphalt plant," the petition claims.

Since Aug. 24 when the city allegedly gained jurisdiction over the Petroplex property, Petroplex "caused to be constructed" and "is operating an asphalt plant" on the annexed property. Petroplex, which is headed by Midlander Clyde C. White, is operating without a building permit and without a certificate of occupancy in "contravention of ordinances and resolutions," the city's petition claims.

In seeking the injunction to close down the plant, the city is maintaining that:

—"(The) asphalt plant does and will result in the continuous disturbance of the use and enjoyment by owners of property in the immediate area."

—The construction and operation of the plant is in violation of the building and zoning ordinances and will result in the "destruction of zoning plans."

—The plant is causing "excessive air pollution and noise in the surrounding (Skyview) residential neighborhood."

—The plant is creating "substantial safety hazards and annoyances" to the surrounding area.

—The plant is causing a lowering of property values and "constitutes an illegal infringement on property rights in the surrounding area."

Monahans teen-ager gets life prison sentence

AUSTIN (AP) — A 19-year-old Monahans man has been sentenced to life in prison for the rape and abduction of a West Texas banker's wife last summer.

The four-day trial, moved here on a change of venue, ended Thursday when the 10-woman, two-man jury recommended one life sentence and a total of 283 additional years in prison for James William Hughes.

Hughes was accused of abducting a woman at gunpoint shortly after 4 p.m. on Aug. 31 and demanding $300,000 ransom from her husband, Charles Wade, president of the First State Bank of Monahans.

Acting at the kidnapper's instructions, Wade arrived at the Monahans Sand Hills State Park with the cash demanded, but could not locate the gunman. Police arrested Hughes with the victims in a pickup truck near Crane about 7 p.m. that night.

Prosecutors introduced a confession signed by Hughes and called 15 witnesses to the stand, including the victim. Hughes was convicted of raping her twice, one in Ward County and once in Crane County.

Jurors deliberated about two hours Wednesday before finding Hughes guilty to all five charges against him, and returned Thursday to deliberate about two more hours on his punishment.

Hughes was sentenced to two 99-year sentences on two aggravated rape charges, a life sentence for aggravated kidnapping, 75 years for burglary with intent to commit rape and 10 years for auto theft.

White to be able to review appointments

AUSTIN (AP) — In an historic legislative session, Texas senators have voted to allow Democratic Gov. Mark White to review 59 appointments made by lame-duck Republican Bill Clements, the man White defeated in the Nov. 2 general election.

The session included senators — on principle, they said — voting against friends and political supporters.

Forty-three Clements nominees survived Senate votes Thursday by close margins, but still face possible public hearings before they can be confirmed.

"These are painful votes for a lot of us," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, described his votes to return nominees to White as "some of the most difficult" in his 10-year Senate career.

Democrats said they were trying to change a tradition started by Gov. John Connally in 1969 when he made hundreds of appointments just before leaving office, a maneuver that took the privilege away from incoming Gov. Preston Smith.

Connally, who later switched to the Republican party, was one of the victims Thursday as the Senate voted 19-12 to return his appointment as a regent at the University of Texas, his alma mater.

Asked if he intended to reappoint Connally, White said, "I would think that would be one of the most remote possibilities."

Former House Speaker Bill Clayton's appointment as a Texas A&M regent also was returned to White, 16-15.

Republicans claimed Democrat White's mass recall effort was pure partisanship.

White, however, went on record in favor of a proposal that would stop him from making appointments near the end of his administration.

"The governor won major victories today," Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said after the 4½-hour session had ended, "but I think the Senate came out of it well...No bridges were burned."

Brooks predicted White would reappoint 80 percent to 90 percent of the nominees returned to him.

"I think it's been mischaracterized as a victory for me or a defeat for me or a victory for anyone," White told reporters. "I think what it's going to be is a victory for the state of Texas in changing the policy so we don't have a recurrence of this."

Twenty-four of the 31 senators filed a bill Thursday that would prevent lame-duck appointments by an outgoing governor.

In urging the Senate to return Clements' reappointment of John Blocker of Houston as an A&M regent, Caperton noted that Blocker was a "good friend and good regent" and had hosted a fund-raiser for Caperton.

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, one of Clayton's lawyers in the former speaker's Brilab trial, said Clayton "is a friend and will be a friend when I cast a vote against him and leave this chamber."

Other nominees who were returned to the governor included Hilary Doran Jr., former executive assistant to Clements, and Bill Meier, the unsuccessful GOP candidate for state attorney general. Clements had named Doran a UT regent and Meier a regent at North Texas State University.

Survivors included Lias "Bubba" Steen of Cuero, an appointee to the Texas Employment Commission, and Sam Barshop of San Antonio, a UT regent appointee.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, said on the Barshop and other votes "commitments were made and not kept."

White left the name of Chief Justice Jack Pope of the Texas Supreme Court off his recall list, saying Pope had been elected to the high court before his appointment as chief justice and that it would be "ridiculous" to try to remove him.

The Senate without debate voted 30-0 to confirm White's appointment of John Fainter Jr., former top assistant to White in the attorney general's office, as secretary of state.

Thefts, church break-in among complaints reported to police

Theft of six rings and other jewelry valued at nearly $1,500 from a Midland residence and a break-in at a church were among complaints being investigated early today by Midland Police Department officers.

Gloria Estrada of 1111 N. Terrell told police her home was burglarized between Saturday and Thursday and the jewelry, valued at $1,430, stolen. She said the jewelry included six rings set with different stones, a crucifix and a "dog-tag" necklace.

Police reported finding no sign of forced entry into the residence.

The Rev. Neely Landrum reported a break-in at Asbury United Methodist Church. He said on Tuesday night he discovered burned matches and desk drawers pulled open in the church's office. On Wednesday, the minister said he found that a north window at the church had been broken and mud was on the window seal and floor.

Police reports indicated nothing was found to be missing. Method of entry was believed to be someone reaching through the broken church window to unlatch the door.

In other reports, Keith Parr of 3000 W. Illinois Ave., Apt. 49, reported the burglary of his vehicle. He said the burglary occurred between Tuesday and Thursday while the vehicle was in the apartment parking lot. Items taken included cassette tapes, a western hat, racquet ball racquet, jogging outfit, four wheel covers and assorted hand tools.

Total value of the items was listed as $465.

Midland firemen responded to a car fire at the intersection of Marshall and New Jersey early Thursday morning. A car owned by Mark Crouch received heavy fire damage at that location as the result of what was believed to be a fire caused by an electrical short. The fire was extinguished with 75 gallons of water.

Alcoholics Anonymous sponsors Midland Mid-winter Conference

Five principal speakers from New York to California will be featured in the 13th annual Midland Mid-Winter Conference of Alcoholics Anonymous this weekend in the downtown Midland Hilton ballroom.

Registration fee is $20 per person.

Dick G. of Denver, Colo., will speak in today's 8 p.m. session, which will be followed by a Night-Owl Meeting.

Saturday's sessions will begin at 8 a.m. with breakfast and a General Service Organization (GSO) meeting in the Trellis Room. Speaking at the 9:30 a.m. Saturday sessions will be Dr. Bob P. of Minneapolis, Minn., and Winnie E. of LaPuente, Calif.

Ray O'K. of Mamaroneck, N.Y., will talk at the 8 p.m. Saturday session, which will be followed by a dance.

Speaking at the 10:30 a.m. Sunday session will be Wilbur M. of Arlington, Va.

Among the speakers will be a member of Al-Anon, an independent organization which works closely with A.A.

Since alcoholism is deemed a family disease, the Al-Anon program, which is based on the same 12 spiritual principles as the A.A. program, is an organization designed for those affected by alcoholism, such as relatives, employers, employees or friends of alcoholics.

Throughout the conference, except for actual session times, a hospitality room operated by Midland A.A. members will be open in Rooms 210-211 of the Hilton.

"Alcoholics Anonymous," the basic textbook for the A.A., defines alcoholism as a compulsion of the mind combined with a physical addiction or allergy and a spiritual void.

West Texas authorities issue arrest warrant for Hobbs man

ANDREWS — West Texas officials have issued an arrest warrant for a Hobbs, N.M., man in connection with the October shooting death of a 27-year-old woman, Belenreyes Castillo of Mexico.

Auturo Pantino Navarette, 27, was arrested late Wednesday afternoon on a warrant charging him with the slaying of Belenryes Castillo, but New Mexico officials said he refused to waive extradition.

The warrant was issued hours after another man pleaded guilty to the slaying after plea-bargain discussions with Andrews County officials that lasted almost five hours.

Jesus Melendez, also of Hobbs, about 50 miles northeast of Andrews, was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Woman indicted by grand jury for acquaintance's shooting

Eunice Marie Hodges, a 42-year-old U.S. Postal Service supervisor, has been indicted by a Midland County grand jury for murder in the Nov. 22 shooting death of an acquaintance who allegedly broke into her home.

The grand jury in December considered the case, passed over it, and upon further investigation earlier this month indicted the woman.

Killed was Roy H. Hutcherson, in his late to mid-50s, of Alexandria, Va.

In November, Ms. Hodges had told police that the man had been harassing her via telephone calls, and said he was going to visit her despite her protestations.

The man apparently entered Ms. Hodges' home at 2003 Northrup Drive via a back gate, which had been broken, and banged on a door. Ms. Hodges told police that she refused to let him in because he appeared to have been drinking alcoholic beverages and that she was afraid of him. The man then broke a rear window, entered the house, and she shot him in the head with a .38-caliber pistol as he was approaching her in a hallway.

Andrews man killed in one-car mishap

ANDREWS — A 22-year-old Andrews welder was killed early today when his welding truck ran off U.S. Highway 385 north of here and struck a tree.

Monty Joe Garrett was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident, 2.5 miles north of Andrews, by Andrews County Justice of the Peace Rusty Bartley.

Investigating Department of Public Safety trooper Buff Angel indicated Garrett's welding truck was southbound on U.S. 385 when it left the roadway, ran into the median separating the northbound and southbound lanes and struck a tree.

Garrett's body was taken to Singleton Funeral Home where services are pending.

The 1st year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8 3/8% loan to value interest will be charged at a rate of 12 3/8% for the 1st 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payment 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period the graduation in payment will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 12.875%. *Principle and Interest only is calculated in monthly payument.
