

INVESTIGATION COMMITTEE NOW NAMED FIRE THREATEND DALLAS BUSINESS SECTION --- DAMAGES HEAVY WOULD STOP COTTON PRICE MANIPULATION

CONGRESSMEN OF SOUTH TO PUT UP FIGHT

Secretary Jardine Unable To Render Needed Assistance

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—No action to prevent manipulation of the cotton prices in futures trading can be taken by the agricultural department under the existing law, Secretary of Agriculture Jardine said today, in a statement replying to an appeal from Southern congressmen.

It is expected that at the next session of congress several drastic bills will be introduced. The new legislation will call for a general revision of the methods used for obtaining information about the prospective yield and the condition of the crop.

The representatives in both houses from the cotton producing states have been aroused over the recent reports that have been published, especially the last two reports. Close on the heels of the publication of the reports cotton dropped from $2.59 to more than $3 a bale.

Members of the house and senate from the South are expected to join in with the farm relief members from the middle west in getting through a bill that will curtail the manipulations of the grain and cotton market. Conference probably will be held and some measure that will be adaptable to both the cotton growers and grain producers will be evolved and introduced. A hard fight is expected.

At the last session the McNary-Haugen bill had a clause in it to curtail the manipulation of grain markets, especially the wheat prices. Some effort also may be made to get the Southern farmer included in the relief measure. Cotton now is selling below the cost of production, according to some of the Southern representatives.

WILL TAKE ON ALL COMERS, NEW CHAMP

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—The heavyweight championship of the world is not to be placed in the ice box, according to Gene Tunney, the new champion. "Every new champion has announced that he is going to be an active champion, but few have lived up to their promise," Tunney said. "But I am going to be an active champion. Just at this moment, I have no plans for the immediate future, and I think the public will agree with me that I am entitled to a few days' rest before I consider any offer."

He denied that he had ever drawn the color line, and added, "I will fight any one in the world. I want to conduct myself like a champion and like a Marine, and will meet any one fairly."

"He went to bed in the 'wee snax' hours this morning and left orders in a secluded hotel he was not to be disturbed, and the hotel staff carried out his orders."

Jack Kearnes refused to answer questions as to how much money he had won or lost on Dempsey.

Walter Hagen Title Holder Is Holding On

MARYLAND MAN IS DEMOCRATIC PROSPECTIVE

By CHARLES P. STEWART
(NEA Service Writer)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland is now unmistakably in the limelight as a Democratic presidential possibility.

It all depended on his renomination as chief executive of the Cocksade State at the recent primary. Beaten, he'd have been out of consideration for the presidency. Overwhelmingly victorious, he's in the running.

It remains for him to be re-elected in November, and Maryland isn't always a Democratic state, but it always is except when there's disunion in the state Democracy's ranks, and there are no signs of it at present.

So it's reasonably safe to assume that the governor will succeed himself by a satisfactory majority.

Ritchie's limelight isn't quite as bright as Al Smith's or William G. McAdoo's.

If, however, Smith's and McAdoo's limelights cancel one another in 1928 as they did in 1924, then Ritchie's limelight will be about as good as anybody's.

It may or may not have to compete with Atlee Pomerene's.

In case Pomerene's is elected to the Senate from Ohio, he'll have a powerful limelight, but if he's beaten, he won't have any.

Senator Jim Reed's limelight isn't turned on full blast as yet, and it's too soon to predict how much it will brighten, or whether it will go out altogether.

In the opinion of politicians, Senator Jim was a little too slow in getting into the presidential limelight.

"Buddy" Spaulding 4 Years Old, Talks Bravely at Death

HOUSTON, Sept. 24.—The unusual case of Frank "Buddy" Spaulding Jr., 4, talking coherently as death drew near was reported to physicians.

"Mother, give me a nickel. I'm going to leave you pretty soon and I'm going to need it. I'm going on a long journey," the child said.

A little later just before the boy died he asked his mother why she was crying.

"Buddy" died of burns.

Justice Deals Out Mercy To Large Family

Even justices of the peace have their weak spots. Justice J. N. McFatter of Ranger is no exception to this rule, and frankly says that when a man or woman comes to his office with four or five children as reinforcements, he feels like saying "Go and sin no more." He had an experience along that line yesterday. He issued a search warrant for officers to search a certain home in Ranger, where they found on the premises a bottle of liquid that smelled like liquor and looked like corn.

The officers took the "likker" from the woman of the home and told her to report with her husband at the J. P.'s office. They did and brought with them five little children, the youngest a nursing baby. They claimed they had not made the liquor but had bought it from a man known to the police as a drinker but not as a vendor of booze.

They were permitted to go yesterday without charges being filed, but the J. P. will carry the sample over to the county attorney's office this afternoon for his inspection before "finis" can be written to the chapter.

KNOWN KILLED IN HURRICANE 364; 2,000 HURT

UNDATED.—While Miami and surrounding towns in the area devastated by the West Indian hurricane, entered on their seventh day of rehabilitation, physicians and surgeons concentrated their efforts today to prevent an outbreak of pestilence. Typhoid and tetanus stricken is being rushed to the storm stricken area by boat, airplane and train. So far only a few isolated cases of the disease have been reported but the badly disrupted sanitation situation presents an ominous threat.

Wholesale evacuation of towns in the Everglades is under way.

State troops have ordered those who survived the storm in Morehaven to depart immediately as badly decomposed bodies of victims increased the danger of an epidemic.

Soldiers on flat boats picked their way through the Everglades, to ascertain the plight of isolated towns.

Officials after a survey issued the following figures: Known dead, 364; injured, 2,000; homeless, 25,000; property damage, $200,000,000; losses covered by insurance $16,000,000; needed for rehabilitation work, $4,000,000.

Naval Destroyers Take Miami Food

Consolidation Of Subsidiaries Sought by S. P.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Consolidation of the Southern Pacific subsidiaries in the Texas and Louisiana areas, now operated as separate lines, was proposed today by the Texas & New Orleans railroad in an application filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. EIGHT FIREMEN ARE OVERCOME FIGHTING BLAZE

A. Harris and Company Store Ablaze Early In Day, Traffic Blocked

DALLAS, Sept. 24.—Fire which raged in the A. Harris Company six-story store, causing damage estimated at between $50,000 and $100,000 was brought under control by mid-forenoon, after nearly every available piece of fire fighting apparatus in Dallas, had been brought into action.

The eight firemen who were overcome by smoke and the injured fireman, are reported to have recovered. The blaze was confined to a two-story arcade to the sixteen story main building.

Water lines across the streets held up all downtown traffic early in the day. More than 10,000 work day persons were on the streets and watched the dense smoke that hurled from the building.

Orange Daily Leader Damaged by Fire

ORANGE, Sept. 24.—Fire of undetermined origin did damage estimated at $7,500 today, when the Orange Daily Leader, an afternoon newspaper, suffered damages estimated at $5,000. Practically all the damage to the newspaper plant was in the composing room, H. C. Connelly said.

The Leader will be forced to suspend publication until their Sunday morning edition.

The Stark building in which The Leader was housed, suffered $2,000 damage.

TUNNEY NOW LIEUTENANT IN MARINES

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 24.—Gene Tunney, the new heavyweight champion of the world, was informed that he is to be commissioned a first lieutenant in the United States marine corps. Announcement of the appointment was made by Col. Cyrus Radford, commandant of the marines, at the navy yards here, in a telephone message from marine headquarters at Washington.

Col. Radford reached Billie Gibson, Tunney's manager, and conveyed the news.

Possibility of a return match between Dempsey and the new champion, mentioned in reports from Tex Rickard's headquarters today.

"Jack has a schedule for such a match and it may be worked out next spring," Rickard said.

Harry Persons, the Swede, also was mentioned as a possible opponent for Tunney.

PASS CASES CRIMINAL DOCKET

Owing to the fact that the county attorney and his assistants will be busy on criminal cases in the Ninety-first district court next week, Judge Tom J. Cunningham of the county court-at-law, passed the criminal cases for the week beginning Monday, Sept. 27 to the week beginning Monday, Oct. 11.

One of the important cases to be tried in the county court-at-law, which will be called the week of Oct. 11, is that of George Lasater, charged with negligent homicide, growing out of the death of Mrs. Hill, an aged woman of Spur, Texas, who died as a result of injuries received in a car accident which happened at the Leon bridge on the Eastland-Carbon highway more than one year ago.

COTULLA.—Right of way is being secured for the electric transmission line between this city and Dilley which is to be built by the Central Power & Light company.

Star Witness

Miss Peggy Cavanaugh, 23, is being held incommunicado under $10,000 bail at Canton, Ohio, as star government witness in the murder of Don R. Mellett, murdered publisher. Authorities say she rode with Patrick McErmott, fugitive who is under indictment for the crime, a few nights before the murder, and will testify at the trials of Ben Rudner and Louis Mazer, his alleged accomplices.

TUNNEY WINS CHAMPIONSHIP FROM DEMPSEY

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 24.—There is a new heavyweight champion of the world. Gene Tunney, formerly of the United States marine corps, known in every port in the world where wires reached, won the heavyweight championship of the world, and the richest prize in the sporting world when he was awarded a 10-round decision over Jack Dempsey last night.

In these modern days of the prize ring, since Tex Rickard started offering millions of dollars to fighters, it has been the opinion of those close to the game that the heavyweight title would never be passed on a decision. But the title passed last night before a crowd of 130,000 spectators, and there was not one voice of protest from the largest crowd that ever saw an athletic contest in the United States.

Why Did Dempsey Lose?

The question first asked here today, "Why did Dempsey lose?"

Those who thought that Dempsey could not lose and who had bet 3 to 1 he would remain champion, recalled rumors that all the race track money in New York had been planted on Tunney, and the fight was in the big.

But any unprejudiced spectator who saw the fight last night knows that Dempsey lost because he was not the Dempsey of old and that he would not have taken a defeat for all the money in the world.

Dempsey did not have the punch and Tunney found after the first round that he could take the champion's best and he gained confidence in himself round after round. In the last rounds, Tunney started snarling at Dempsey and in the clinches he began to out-westle and out-rough Dempsey.

Fouled Tunney.

The losing champion committed foul after foul. He pulled rabbit punches that were barred by the Pennsylvania boxing commission, but Tunney did not protest. He punched Dempsey out of the clinches and countered him so viciously that for the first time since he had been champion, Dempsey started holding. Tunney was hurt several times and was in danger as many times, but he always came back and was forcing Dempsey back with punches that didn't knock him down, but that wore him down.

The talk around Philadelphia also was favorable to Tunney, but the resin smellers of the ring asked among themselves: "Now that he has the championship, what is he going to do with it?" He has only six months before the New York boxing commission will be testing him with a challenge from Harry Wills.

FROM THE BIBLE
THE COST OF SACRIFICE—“I will surely buy it of thee at a price; neither will I offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God of that which doth cost me nothing.” 2 Sam 24:24.
PRAYER—Lord, help us to bring to thee the most acceptable sacrifice—a broken and a contrite heart.

WHERE IS MY WANDERING BOY TONIGHT?

Parents in Eastland county soon will be singing that pathetic hymn with heart aches unless something is done by them to stop the night life. The boys in one town are no better than in the other towns. It seems to us as if youth has too much leeway these days.

We believe in progress and advancement in all lines of endeavor, but when it comes to raising children, the old-fashioned methods seem to cling to us. We believe that home is the best place for youths after 9 o'clock at night, except on stated occasions. We have no kick to make on the school authorities in Ranger or any other town, because they are doing the best to keep youth within due bounds. But we do think that boys and girls should not be allowed to roam around at night indiscriminately.

Thursday night in Ranger, a mother was compelled to call to several boys who were making the night hideous in and around the High school building. So that the family could get its rest, this good woman was compelled to tell the boys that if they did not cease yelling and making noise to say nothing of cursing, she would call the police. The matter should be remedied in the home.

We favor supervised playgrounds and recreation, also the Boy Scout and other such movements because they go a long way toward solving the problem of youth.

The growth of delinquency is becoming alarming. It could be largely solved if parents knew where their children were after dark. In cities where they have supervised play, and Boy Scout councils along with other clubs that throw around the youth uplifting things, the delinquency problem amounts to practically nil. Joy rides, and other night parties are too frequent in the towns in the oil belt.

Making companions of your boys and girls mothers and fathers also goes a long way toward solving the delinquency problem. The parent these days leaves too much for the teacher to do in the way of rearing children. A fair sample of it is the Leopold-Loeb case. There are many others. Boys and girls who congregate around the corners at night for a little lark is the beginning of delinquency. At night, home is the best place with son and daughter, unless the parents know exactly where they can be found, and with whom they are associating. Schoolhouses and fire escapes are no places for youths after dark, especially as late as 9 and 10 o'clock at night.

OBSERVE EDUCATIONAL WEEK.

The schools and all the communities in Eastland county should begin to plan for the celebration of Educational week that begins Sunday, Nov. 7, and continues through Saturday, Nov. 13. Short programs should be rendered every day in the schoolhouse. The teacher should give a short lecture, and if not the teacher, some well versed person. Let them know what this country stands for, and for what principles the forefathers bled and suffered for to make it possible for others to live.

The tentative program makes Monday Constitutional day, Tuesday Patriotism day, Wednesday Equal Opportunity day, Thursday Armistice day, Friday Know Your School day, Saturday Community day. The program outlined covers the field and could be carried out with little trouble.

The time to keep cool over the coal situation is past. We must warm up to it before long.

SOCIETY AND SOCIAL AFFAIRS

Joint reception 1920 and New Era clubs at the Gholson from 3 to 5.

PLANS FOR RECEPTION PROMISE MUCH INTEREST.

Plans for the joint reception to be given Saturday afternoon by the 1920 and the New Era clubs, at the Gholson hotel, from 3 to 5 promise much interesting entertainment. Mrs. M. H. Hagaman will give a report of the biennial at Atlantic City, of the National Federation of Women's Clubs. A musical program, including some of Ranger's best talent will be given. All members of both clubs are urged to be present at this first social gathering of the clubs for the year—all teachers of the city are invited guests, as are all state and district officers of the federation.

ALATHEAN CLASS EXTENDS INVITATION.

The Alathean class of the Central Baptist church reports that on last Sunday they had a splendid attendance at Sunday school, and they extend a cordial invitation to prospective members to come out and join their class this coming Sunday.

The Delphians met yesterday afternoon at the Gholson with a good number present and after their regular program of current events, they made plans for the opening meeting on Oct. 2, at which time all the Delphian clubs in the county will meet in Ranger, at the Gholson hotel, in an informal reception. In this connection, Mrs. W. W. Housewright urges all members of the Ranger Delphian club, whether affiliated with the club now or not, to meet with her at her home on Pine street, Thursday afternoon at 8 o'clock for a special meeting.

FAIR AND FLOWER SHOW MOVE MERRILY ALONG.

The big fair, and Eastland's biggest flower show moved along in perfect working order, all day yesterday, and attracted thousands, who filled the grounds to capacity, during the afternoon, and evening hours.

Visitors to the flower show declared that the exhibit far exceeded their greatest expectations.

Out-of-town clubwomen, officers of the state and district federation of the Texas women's clubs, were the guests of the Civic League, and personal guests of the general chairman of the flower show, following their attendance upon a local federated club affair.

Mrs. M. H. Hagaman, second vice president; Mrs. R. Q. Lee, treasurer; Mrs. John J. Pitts, district chairman; and Mrs. Philip P. Parks, president, Eastland county federation, T. P. W. C., were personally conducted through the flower show building by chairmen of different departments, and were presented boxes of the delicious home-made candies the league is selling, which are being generously donated by their members.

These women expressed great surprise and pleasure over the business-like and practical manner in which the flower show is conducted, each department having its own printed placard, announcing the chairman in charge and classification indicated. Premiums have been awarded in all departments of the flower show excepting art, which includes the amateur and professional work in hand-painted china as well as departments in both classes of oils, water color and pastels.

Only two departments failed to materialize, pastels and "Mums," and these were eliminated entirely.

Miss Moellendick, teacher of art at the Randolph College at Cisco, was scheduled to act as judge, in the art department, at 4 o'clock this afternoon. She will be the personal guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Jackson for dinner this evening.

The cabinets containing the loan art exhibit, curios, and antique laces, clay paintings, old revolvers, and pipes has excited as much admiration as any thing exhibited.

Charles C. Robey's collection of ancient firearms, arranged amongst the laces, suggested the thought of pistols at 5 a. m., and visions of queenly and old time ladies.

The public is asked to take advantage of the plant and bulb sale being conducted by the chairman for the league, Mmes. Neal Moore and Earl Woody, where very low prices are asked for handsome stock displayed by Valliant's.

At intervals throughout the day, fresh candy was delivered to the candy table chairman, Mrs. P. I. Parker or her assistants. Any one wishing to lay in a supply of candy for Sunday is requested to patronize this department for this fine selection of confections.

An amusing bit was observed in the business end of the flower show when the colored maid, who has been employed by the general chairman to assist the ladies on duty in the flower show, returned from an hourly trip, across the dusty exhibition ground carrying a bucket of water which she wearily emptied into the ice cooler with the remark, "It's just like watering elephants at a circus."

There are certainly no more popular spots than the two water coolers furnished by Mmes. E. C. Satterwhite, and H. O. Satterwhite. But unfortunately, the general drifting public not interested in flower shows, darts to the stand, grabs a drink, and then escapes. This makes it difficult to keep sufficient water.

This evening, a large crowd is expected and an overwhelming rush is anticipated tomorrow.

Numbers of clubwomen have indicated they will attend Saturday, from all the adjacent towns, as this is a

MICHAEL CURTIZ

Michael Curtiz, the famous European director who has been signed to a long term contract by Warner Bros. is a Hungarian by birth. When he was twenty-two, he went to Denmark, imbued with the desire to play in motion pictures.

Instead of playing, however, he directed, and then went to Paris for Pathé. After the war, he went back to Hungary, and on the strength of his success with "The Waltz Dream" he was engaged by a Viennese film company to make seventeen pictures. His best known pictures are "Moon of Israel," "Sodom and Gomorah," "Memoirs of Satan," "The Golden Butterfly" and "Red Heels."

"The Third Degree," based on the famous melodrama by Charles Klein, and starring Dolores Costello, will be Curtiz's first Warner directorial assignment.

BUSINESS WOMEN AND THEIR CLOTHES

By HEDDA HOYT.
(Written for the United Press.)
NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Writers of women's pages are forever giving advice upon dress to business women suggesting as a rule, dark colors, long sleeves, sensible necklines, little jewelry, no cosmetics, subdued footwear, etc. One would think that the business woman was a creature apart from the same nature ladies who drudge about kitchens. And in a way she is.

It is even more necessary for the business woman to be well dressed than it is for the woman who does house work in the mornings and goes the streets in the afternoons. The business woman must look her best eight hours a day for six days of the week. Looking trim and smart is part of her job. Men do not want drab looking assistants about their offices; girls with unmarcelled hair, sallow skins and hideous frocks. The day of the "maiden lady" stenographer is passed and those prim old pioneers of the keys are today bobbed, rouged and shorter-skirted along with the new recruits to the ranks.

When I say that men do not want slatterns in their offices I do not mean to infer that they want women with the danger signal written all over them. A man wants an assistant who is neat, becomingly and sanely dressed and with well cared for hair, hands and finger-nails. He expects these things in both men and women assistants.

The office vamp with peroxidized hair, rouged lips and fluffy frocks which were suitable for an afternoon tea proved herself a liability rather than an asset and thank goodness, we see her type no more. The middle route between the two extremities of dressing is a hard one to follow.

Even the girl who uses the office as a means of livelihood between high school and marriage must learn that office clothing must combine smartness with dignity rather than with altarpiece. If she wears sleeveless, knee-length, form-displaying dresses she merely lessens her chances of advancement and gains the disapproval of saner women with whom she is associated.

As to colors, dark shades are easier to keep in condition and they give a business-like appearance to the wearer. But—in these days of bright colors, the business woman need not confine herself strictly to somber shades. Dull shades of green, tan, rose and even certain darker reddish shades can be worn if they are made in tailored styles. We find no uniformity of dress except in some of the large department stores and in factories. The business woman has achieved a tremendous place in the business world, a place which she perhaps never would have attained had she been garbed as a chorus girl, or as a misfit in navy-blue serges.

PLAN PUBLIC WEDDING FOR RANGER SHOW

Some young couple are going to start life off economically if they will get married in public at the Fall Festival and Style show, to be staged by Ranger merchants and business men, aided and abetted by the Chamber of Commerce and the Retail Merchants' association. It looks like they won't even have to buy the license. A local preacher will tie the knot and every merchant in Ranger will give them a wedding present—the only thing they have to do is face the crowd that will be gathered to witness the ceremony. Some fine sensible young couple is going to take advantage of this free offering.

Plans are coming along fine, it is reported, however, other than the decision to have a public wedding as a drawing card and to buy their own decorations for the event, nothing has been done of a very definite nature. In the matter of decorations, the committee, found that it would cost $300 to have a decorator come out from a city to put up the decorations, so the committee can buy the materials much less than that and a decorating committee can do the work up, and then the decorations belong to Ranger for time to come.

W. W. Housewright, one of the committee, said that they were going to try to get some real vaudeville artists for the event, who will stage a free show. Mr. Housewright and Mr. Patterson have been visiting the different carnivals at various county fairs trying to get just what they want in that line.

There will be an auto race from here to Olden. The entries are limited to cars that have not cost more than $50. Prizes will be given to the oldest couple attending the fair, and there will be a lot of other prizes—good substantial ones, for different events that are slated to make this a most wonderful event.

Rumania Sends Child Counterfeiter House of Correction

By United Press.
FOGARAS, Rumania.—A bank note counterfeiter, thought to be the youngest on record, has been arrested and convicted here.

Emila Popa, 13, while her parents were away removed a bank-note from her mother's cash drawer and made a copy of it on a piece of stiff paper. She placed the original note back in its hiding place and ran down the street to the candy shop. The bill of large denomination. Surprised to see such a little girl with such a large bill the candy merchant scrutinized it closely, and discovered that it was not genuine. Emila was arrested and sent to a house of correction. Her parents were also called into court but were released when Emila proved to the court that she had made the bill herself.

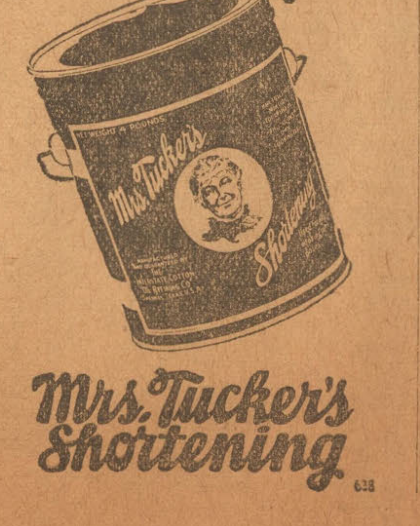

Ranger Second Team Will Play Breckenridge

Ranger's second team, which played so well last night at the Central West Texas Fair at Eastland, when they met Eastland's second team, will play Breckenridge second team of Saturday night.

The game, which was the first football game to be played at night in Eastland county, proved such a winner that it was decided to let the winning team stage another game on the closing night of the fair.

Improvements And Buildings Are Underway

Building and improvements in Ranger's residential section are going right along. Mrs. Chester Jones is erecting a commodious house on West Main street, just west of the Eureka Tool company's plant, and seven carpenters are at work rushing it toward completion.

W. M. Donley recently bought the T. B. Langston home at 700 Cherry street, and has moved into his new home. Mr. Langston has only owned this property about two years, but he has in that time planted trees, flowers and a lawn and converted it into a very desirable home.

Mrs. F. W. Allen of Fort Worth has had a corps of carpenters, paper-hangers and painters working on her home at 417 Pine street, now occupied by Mrs. R. B. Campbell, and the improvements inside and out add much to the attractiveness and desirability of this home.

J. C. Pierson has bought the C. E. Maddocks house that was completed this summer, at the head of Elm street. This is a very beautiful eight-room house and will make an ideal home.

Eric Holland, of the Texas company, is improving his home on Young street by the addition of two rooms, and modern plumbing fixtures.

DRILLS AGAIN BUSY NEAR MORGAN WELL

It is stated in oil circles that an active drilling campaign for the immediate future is being planned for that section northeast of Rising Star in the vicinity of Mike Morgan well. The Magnolia has a rig up for a deep test 1,000 feet south of the Morgan. As many as six other locations in the territory are reported.

A 400-barrel producer on the Kilgore tract was brought in this week in the vicinity of Rising Star by the Gulf Production company.

The Hill well being drilled by Barclay et al., some seven miles north of Rising Star, is still problematical following a shot given last week. It is not showing very favorably for a producer.

Much interest is being manifested in the T. H. B. McAllister well, about three miles northeast of the Mike Morgan well. It was reported today that a joint of casing was pulled in two in the well yesterday, which would delay drilling operations some. The test is nearing the pay.

It was reported this morning that a location had been made on District Judge Elzo Been's farm in the Long Branch community, south of Carbon. But Judge Been stated that no location had been made that he knew of.

Delinquent Tax Payments Since September 6, Big

Exactly $1,474 has been collected on delinquent taxes by city and school tax collector E. A. Ringold of Ranger since he took charge of the city and school books on Sept. 6. The largest amount collected was $220 and the smallest amount 30 cents, which was paid for taxes on a Victrola.

Mr. Ringold stated that he was meeting with splendid co-operation, that people seemed to realize that the schools had to have money to run on, and that he had the promises of several more delinquent tax payments in the next few days.

Today he had a letter from a non-resident thanking him for calling her attention to her delinquent taxes and enclosing check to cover—which does not happen more than once in a blue moon, Mr. Ringold said.

RANGER'S POPULAR MAIL CARRIER BACK ON JOB

Joe Perdue, popular mail carrier of Ranger, is back on the job again, after a two weeks vacation trip, most of which was spent in Wichita Falls. At the different business places this morning, when he showed up on his route it was "Hello, Joe; glad you are back," which was a testimony of this young man's popularity with Uncle Sam's patrons.

$350 Stake Race At Fair Saturday Will Be Feature

The greatest attractions ever offered in a single day in the Oil Belt will be given tomorrow, the closing day of the Central West Texas Fair in Eastland.

A $350 stake race, the winner take all, will bring together 10 of the fastest horses ever seen in this section for a seven furlong race. A cowboy's relay race, in which each rider will use three horses, changing saddles each time, over a mile course, will be another thrilling race while two other events will complete the racing program Saturday.

The races yesterday and again this afternoon drew big crowds. Thirty horses, en route to the big San Angelo fair and the Juarez winter season, stopped in Eastland lured by the exceptionally big purses offered. The result is a series of speed classics that have brought the crowds to their feet, shouting wildly.

Gorman and Eastland will meet on the football field as another big feature of the fair tomorrow afternoon. Several hundred fans from Gorman will attend in the hope of seeing their favorites, heavier and more experienced, defeat the shifty Maverick eleven. The teams seem to be nearly evenly matched and the game should be hotly contested.

Vaudeville in front of the grandstand, tricks by a "high school" horse and the carnival attractions will provide ample amusement today and again tomorrow.

Yesterday was Ranger and Olden day at the fair and the people of those cities turned out in immense numbers. The attendance has been excellent thus far. A record-breaking crowd is expected Saturday.

Hole-In-One Shot Solved By Smart Caddy

PARIS.—The sixth hole of the golf course of St. Jean de Luz seemed to have magic in it. It produced a wonderful crop of members of the

Clover Lapel

A distinctive note in new fall suits is the clover notch lapel.

"Hole-in-One" club and yet was one of the hardest shots.

It has a masked approach, only the top of the flag being visible over a hilltop from the tee. But the balls kept dropping mysteriously into the cup at one shot, the champagne popped gaily at the clubhouse and the tips which flowed into the pockets of the lucky caddies who witnessed the wonderful shots increased in size and number.

Then someone grew suspicious. The thing was too good to be true. There was an investigation and the secret came out.

The golfers, it was learned, popped away hopefully at the invisible green. Their balls went whistling more or less accurately over the hilltop and out of sight. Then they came bouncing into sight of an ally of the caddy waiting out of view. In a second the bright young man at the sixth hole had picked up the ball, dropped it into the cup and was out of sight in the bushes by the time the golfers had come trudging over the hilltop.

Then the ball was found in the cup, there was amazement and rejoicing, a big tip for the clubhouse. And somewhere outside behind the buildings, there was a division of the caddy's spoils, so that the unseen young man who did the wonder at the sixth green could have his reward.

Cocaine King Of Paris is Dead; Noted Character

By JOHN O'BRIEN (United Press Staff Correspondent) PARIS.—Those few people in Montmartre who have read the Bible or some of it are asking themselves whether the adage about living by the sword and dying by the sword is not aptly illustrated by the passing of "Big Raoul," known for half a score of years as "Le Roi de la coco." "Coco" is Montmartre's king for cocaine.

Raoul Dianoux, who had left Fresnes prison a few months ago after having served a three-year sentence for selling "dope," was found dead in his luxurious bachelor apartment in the rue des Trois-Bornes, over near the Bastille, the quarter of the hardened criminals of all kinds and nationalities.

He was sitting stark naked in an armchair, his head resting on a table. Dianoux was a huge man, whence his sobriquet of "Le Gros Raoul." The doctor who made a cursory examination said death came from congestion. No evidence of drugs was found but it is believed that he had become an habitue of the vice through which he had amassed a fortune.

Theatrical Men The "Cocaine King" numbered among his customers men and women high in the theatrical, artistic and literary worlds. After the war his clientele included many Americans for the most part young girls "studying art in Paris" who fancied that learning the latest eccentricities of the so-called Bohemian lotus eaters was a necessary part of their education.

His life until he came to Montmartre was a closed book. He was certainly a man of education. He was not a criminal in the ordinary acceptance of the term. But he frequented criminal haunts. White slavers, confidence men, crooks of all kinds, bought his wares.

"Big Raoul" was usually seen in the all night joints surrounded by a gang. Some people thought this was because he was afraid. It was not that. The men about him were the "coke peddlers" who actually dispensed the drug. Raoul was too clever to have any in his own possession. If one of his lieutenants got caught so much the worse for him. That was one of the risks of the profession. For years the special "dope brigade" of the police department were on his trail. Even when he finally caught "with the goods" he almost got away on a technicality.

From Germany Raoul obtained his supply of cocaine from Germany. It came in by the wholesale, often several pounds at a time. Such a deal would bring the "King" from $5,000 to $6,000 when sold at twenty to forty francs a "sniff." The price usually depended on the extent of the customer's desire.

Police raided Raoul's apartment one evening with the certain knowledge that one of the regular consignments had arrived. Minute search revealed nothing. Then one of the policemen noticed a string hanging from a window. When pulled up it was found that a bag at the end contained the drug supply.

"It was not found inside my dwelling," pleaded Raoul in court. The judge agreed but the police put on the stand two women to whom Raoul had actually sold the stuff. The "King of Cocoland" lost his realm.

Pacific Nations Stand in Fear Of Another Big War

By A. W. V. KING (United Press Staff Correspondent) SYDNEY, Australia.—A circle of international fear exists all the way around the Pacific, declared J. Merik Davis, general secretary of the Institute of Pacific Relations, upon his return here from a tour of all countries bordering the ocean.

Davis made the trip in an endeavor to arouse greater interest in the peace aims of the institute and to perfect arrangements for the second conference of the institute at Honolulu in July, 1927.

"I was much impressed by the circle of fear which exists right around the Pacific," Davis told the United Press here.

"The United States is afraid of certain elements of Japanese life. Japan is desperately afraid of the United States and that was emphasized in 75 interviews I had in that country. America's economic penetration and growing militarism is the way they view it. Japan is also afraid of China and Russia. China is afraid, much afraid of Japan.

"Here in Australia, the people seem to be afraid of Japan, though again it is acknowledged that Japan can never harm Australia, owing to the great distance between the two countries and the difficulties of transport.

"This element of fear and suspicion the institute is trying to eradicate by the gathering and dissemination of accurate and provable facts affecting food supplies, laws relating to migration and their interpretation by responsible officials treatment of aliens, and others."

Davis said that in Japan he tried to get past the "internationals," the group of people always brought out to meet Americans, and sought interviews with dozens of the leaders of the reactionary groups, including the Fascists.

Pointing out that the institute of Pacific relations was confining itself to trying to understand the points of view of different national groups, Davis said that it did not deal with immediate concerns and interests, but took a far and dispassionate view on international matters, and hoped to avoid, if possible, any future conflict between east and west.

"It may not be possible to avoid such a conflict," he added. "We do not think it is. But we appeal to intelligent people in these countries to make an effort to avert such a catastrophe."

Pan-American Labor Conference To Be Held In 1927

By United Press. WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Plans for a Pan-American Labor Conference next year representing twenty-one republics will be formulated by the American Federation of Labor by meeting at Detroit, Oct. 4, when a date will be agreed upon.

The conference will be held sometime in 1927 under the auspices of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and has a total membership of twelve countries in Central and South America.

Labor leaders here say that the primary purpose of the convention will be the consideration of measures designed to assure the unity and solidarity of the labor movement in each American republic. In several countries, it is said, rivalry exists between organizations.

An effort will be made to establish better understanding and relations between the labor movement of the various countries. The American leaders will be prepared to give full technical advice and facilities to the visiting laborites.

Although the convention will be chiefly concerned with industrial and economic matters, federation workers here foresee the probability of important international political aspects incidental to the major motives of the meeting.

A special committee representing labor organizations of the United States, Mexico and Porto Rico, will be named in October to visit the various countries to explain the principles and purposes of the federation and extend personal invitations.

The federation now represents labor organizations of the United States, Mexico, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Dominican Republic, Peru, Ecuador, Guatemala, Colombia, Venezuela, Cuba and Porto Rico. Argentina is said to be actively interested in the conference.

All other countries of South and Central America and the West Indies will be invited to send representatives and a complete attendance of labor leaders from all of the twenty-one American republics is expected.

Belgian Police Arrest The King Speeding Charge

BRUSSELS.—King Albert, hurrying to save the Belgian franc, was speeding on his "motorbike" from the royal palace at Leaken to his new "office" in Brussels, at the tidy rate of thirty miles an hour.

Two scandalized gendarmes trapped him and brought the impetuous monarch to a stop. They demanded his drivers permit which he promptly produced. It was made out to "Albert of Belgium."

Tableau! Profuse apologies. But the King shook hands with them and insisted it was all right.

"You were only doing your duty," he said, "and now I will do mine—I am a little late for my work."

And he started his motorcycle and speeded off.

Conservation Association To Delay Session

STAMFORD, Sept. 24.—Announcement was made today by Homer D. Wade, secretary of the Texas Conservation Association, that the annual meeting called for Oct. 18 at Brownwood has been postponed until Nov. 8. The postponement was made necessary because Hon. J. A. Kemp, president of the organization, who is now in Europe, was delayed upon his return and could not reach Texas in time for the date scheduled. A strong program has been arranged for the meeting, and it is quite likely that it will be necessary to have a two-day session instead of one day as originally planned. The postponed date will give President Kemp time to return, and he will be present and preside at the meeting now set for Nov. 8.

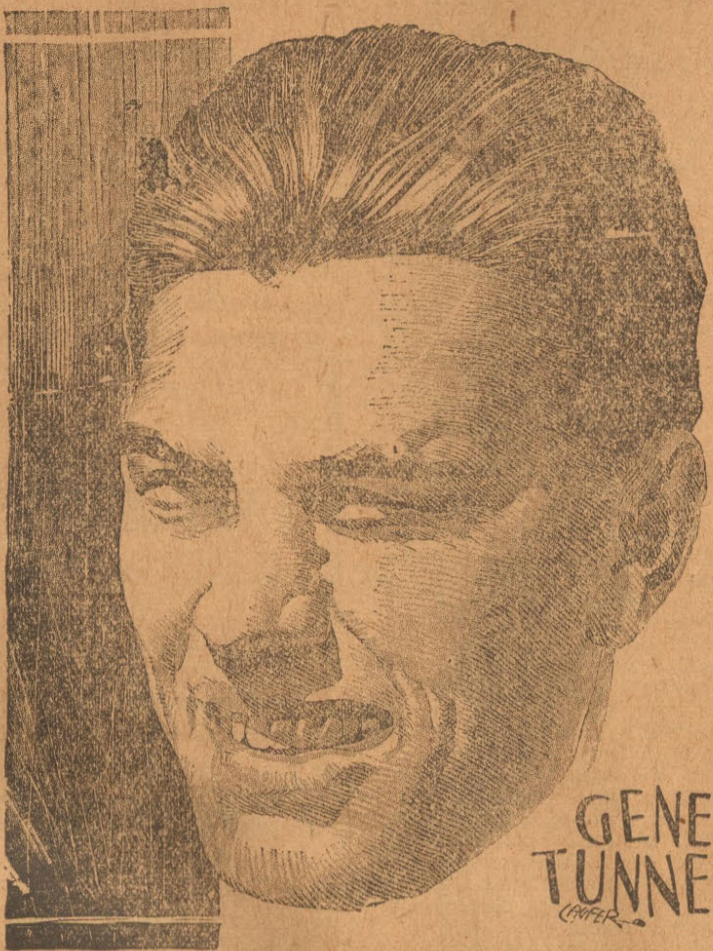

Certificates Of Marriage Must be Shown

By United Press.
BUDAPEST.—Married couples who wish to economize by using a double bath house when visiting mineral bath establishments, must in the future bring their marriage certificates along. In Budapest, as in most Central and Eastern European countries, a policy of "no questions asked," has been used when couples requested double accommodations in hotels and bathing resorts. Some one in Budapest recently decided that this kind of procedure was not quite correct and demanded that the police keep at least one eye on frequenters of such establishments. The authorities decided to issue an ordinance decreeing that from now on a marriage certificate must be presented to the attendant or else only separate cabins will be obtainable.

Couple Commit Suicide In Family Vault, Midnight

ARAD, Rumania.—In order to cause as little trouble as possible to the authorities and to their respective families Gustav Braun, 45, and Anna Lazar, 18 chose Braun's family vault as the ideal place to commit suicide when they tired of life here. Braun was one of the town's richest merchants. Anna was his secretary. They became infatuated; and when local gossip began to make life unpleasant, they decided to die together. Some years ago Braun had prepared a vault in the local cemetery for his family. To this vault they went in the dead of night, locked themselves in, and killed themselves with revolvers.

MANY FUN MAKERS IN "MONTE CARLO"

One of the greatest assemblages of comedians ever to play in a single picture appears in the cast of "Monte Carlo," Christy Cabanne's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy playing at the Lamb Theater Saturday.

The picture is a farcical satire on the department of American tourists written around the adventures of three girls who won a trip to "Monte Carlo" in a newspaper popularity contest.

Since his desertion of villainous roles, Lew Cody has gained wide recognition as a whimsical comedian and in this company he is supported by such laugh experts as Trixie Friganza, favorite of screen and stage, whose "Bag of Tricks" was a vaudeville headliner; Karl Dane, the comedy star of "The Big Parade"; Cesare Gravina, Harry Myers of "Con-

English Strike Is Modernizing Old Time Homes

LONDON.—The coal strike is driving English housewives heading into modernity. Never has there been so lively a demand for gas and electric house-keeping equipment as is reported now by the dealers. Gas stoves and gas ovens are replacing the old-fashioned coal ranges over which British women have toiled for generations. Electrical equipment is appearing on hundreds of British breakfast tables, to simplify housekeeping and avoid the shortage of coal. Gas furnaces are also being installed in many homes. A shortage of domestic servants has also helped to accelerate the demand for labor-saving and time-saving household equipment. English wives are adopting the American way of doing their own work and they inevitably demand all the modern comforts and assistances available.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 24.—After holding the Pelicans scoreless for six innings with a one-run lead, Slim Love weakened in the seventh and New Orleans won the opening game of the Dixie series, 5 to 1.

Martina, a former Texas leaguer, was on the mound for the Pelicans, and was stingy with his hits. In the second inning, a walk, a sacrifice and a hit scored the first blood for the Dallas Steers, after which the Indian sign hung out for them. Morse, Riley, Deal and Vickery rapped out two baggers.

The game was called at the end of the seventh inning by the umpires on account of darkness.

Harbin, Russian Refugee Colony Of Pretty Women

By RANDALL GOULD (United Press Staff Correspondent)
HARBIN, Manchuria.—Perhaps Harbin's reputation as the home of pretty women is not wholly deserved. But do not argue the point with the fagged Far Eastern traveler who, weary to extinction of the sight of ladies finished in various tasty shades of yellow, first strolls along Kitaiskaya street and fills his eye with a continuous stream of Russian pulchritude in which none of the girls seems under fifteen or over thirty.

It is a fact that Harbin's forty-five or fifty thousand Russians contain probably a larger percentage of pretty women than may be found anywhere else on earth. Let the detractors to this view be put down as those who have visited Harbin in search of a good time and have not found it. There must be many such. Harbin does not go out of its way to welcome the stranger and take his money. To have a good time in Harbin one must encounter many difficulties—notably that of language, for without knowledge of Russian one is gravely handicapped.

Harbin is the great centering place in the funnel which collects Russian girls from all over Siberia and points west, and which sends them south in a stream which touches Mukden, Dairen, Kobe, Yokohama, Peking, Tientsin, Shanghai, and goes on ever southward to include

Farmer Unearths Magnificent Coffin Of Ancient Period

PEKING.—A poor farmer digging in the dry bed of a river near Tsengchow City was amazed to unearth an ancient coffin of tiles decorated with chariots and warriors in bas relief, and containing a number of curios. The farmer reported to the magistrate who sent scholars to view the find. They declared the coffin a relic of the Chow or Chin Dynasty of 3,000 years ago. On the front of the coffin is an inscription translated to read: "Drawn and Written by Kuo Kung." The relics were removed to the district Yamen. Electric motors are manufactured in this country at the rate of about 1,000,000 a month.

Eastland Second Team Wins From Ranger, Score 8-6

Under the powerful rays of many electric lights, the Ranger and Eastland second teams battled valiantly in the first night football game ever seen in West Texas. The game was played last night as a big attraction of the Central West Texas fair and several thousand fans witnessed the contest, Eastland winning 8-6.

Lemley of Ranger made a around right end for 65 yards to score the first touchdown of the game. Eastland knotted the count in the third quarter when a fake play and off tackle drives with Williamson bearing the brunt put the ball across. Williamson made the touchdown.

Then came the climax of the game. The end was near. Ranger, fighting desperately, started down the field. It looked as though a touchdown was inevitable. Through the line they ripped; and forward they went on off tackle plays until Eastland stood at bay, five yards in front of their own goal. But there they stopped the attack and the ball went over to Eastland.

Williamson stood behind his own goal line and kicked 75 yards beyond the line of scrimmage to Ranger's 20-yard line. Where, a moment before, it was Eastland who was desperate, it was now Ranger's turn. They decided to punt but the kick was blocked and was converted into a safety which gave Eastland two points and victory. Several passes were attempted and one was completed by each team. Eastland completed one for 50 yards, Smith to Brown.

Native Customers In France Get A Cut In Prices

By United Press.
PARIS.—Tourists may or may not be aware of it but they pay more in Paris restaurants for a meal than a Frenchman pays. The scheme is ingenious. In a restaurant overlooking the Seine much frequented by foreigners two Frenchmen were dining. The waiter brought the bill amounting to 190 francs. The guest glanced at it and noticed that 10 per cent was taken off. He eyed the waiter inquiringly. "It's like this," said the attendant. "The manager knows you are Frenchmen and on account of the drop in the franc you cannot be expected to pay like the Americans or British. As we have no right to make two prices we settle the difficulty by giving you the same check as a foreigner would get but in your case we deduct the 10 per cent."

Farmer Sleeps Mastodon Found On His Place

By United Press.
By THOMAS B. MORGAN (United Press Staff Correspondent)
CASERTA.—A huge monster, generally thought to be the fossilized skeleton of a mastodon, was recently discovered near here and visitors from all over Italy as well as many tourists, are crowding every day to see the bones of the giant beast.

The Caserta mastodon has two tusks nearly eight feet long, one of which is perfectly preserved, though the other is broken, probably owing to the work of the excavators. The skeleton lies at a depth of some 26 feet below the ground, and is so far only partly excavated; the work having been temporarily suspended in order to allow the government experts to decide on the best method of raising it.

The proprietor of the land where the mastodon was brought to light is stated to have become quite unbalanced by the find and lives in dread that the precious brute will be carried off. He sleeps beside it at night in the field where it lies, with a gun by his side, and during the day pockets the small fee he asks to visit the mastodon from the crowds of curious visitors.

"Across the Pacific," starring Monte Blue, is an epic picturization of the Philippine insurrection which followed the Spanish-American war. Patsy Ruth Miller has been loaned by Warner Bros. to Inspiration, and will play Richard Barthelme's leading lady in his next picture.

For 'day-in-and-day-out' obstacles fence riders on western ranches have nothing on the maintenance crews that patrol electric transmission lines through the mountains. In winter they sometimes find snow so deep that only the tops of poles and towers along the lines are visible. In such cases "pole climbing" is done on snowshoes instead of with linemen's spurs.

Our guess is men would show their knees if they were as proud of them as women are of theirs.

Wreck of Trans-Atlantic Non-Stop Plane

Photo rushed over telephoto wires by NEA Service shows wreck of the giant Sikorsky Trans-Atlantic plane which crashed and burst into flames while taking off on the attempted non-stop New York to Paris flight. Two of the crew were killed and incinerated in the blaze which followed and the plane reduced to scrap. Captain Rene Fonck and Lieut. Lawrence W. Curtin, U. S. N., escaped by jumping. A broken wheel on the extra landing gear which smashed while the ship was racing down the runway was the cause of the accident.

Wildcats Who Play Tomorrow Really "Wild"

"A nice practice game" is what the Ranger Bulldogs figured on when they watched the Rising Star Wildcats for a contest in Ranger Saturday afternoon.

But the Bulldogs have suddenly learned that instead of being tame housecats, the Rising Star boys are as ferocious as their name, "Wildcats."

For these boys last week played a 0-0 game with the Howard Payne college second team.

When a high school team can play a tie with a college eleven, even though the college boys are reserves and not the varsity, they have done something to be proud of. And when a class B team does it—well, it has more class and power than a majority of the class A high school elevens.

The 26-0 defeat that the Bulldogs gave Strawn last week made some fans believe that the Rising Star game would be a cinch but such is far from being the case. The Wildcats are capable of giving the Ranger team all they can handle and it is possible that Rising Star will win tomorrow.

Last season, Rising Star reached the district finals in class B, losing the title by one touchdown and probably would have won if injuries had not kept a star out of the game. This season, Rising Star has nearly all the veterans back and they are out to win the district championship in their class.

While fans from that city are not making any claims, advance reports are to the effect that "Doc" Sellers, Rising Star editor and paramount enthusiast on football, will lead a big delegation of fans to Ranger for tomorrow's game and if Mills, Swoford, Cooper & Co. are stopped, those rooters from "Star" fill not be surprised.

Another reason why tomorrow's game is important is that Rangerites are anxious to see if the Bulldog line is improving. The forward wall did not perform up to par by any means last week and as one of the hardest games of the entire year is only a week off—the Stephenville battle—the Ranger machine must get to hitting on all 11 cylinders.

The Bulldogs' probable starting line-up is: Ends, Phillips and Shipp; tackles, Hindman and Cornelius; guards, Taylor and Seay; center, Cooper; quarterback, Reeves; halfs, Mills and Swoford; full, Grubbs. An injured shoulder will keep Whitehall, fullback, out of the game.

French Complete Largest Flying Boat In World

By C. T. HALLINAN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
LONDON.—The French navy has just completed at St. Nazaire the largest flying-boat in the world and is pushing to completion what will be the largest submarine in the world, it was disclosed by Hector Bywater, the well-known naval writer, summing up the first complete analysis of the new French navy published in the semi-official "Moniteur de la Flotte."

Public opinion in Great Britain is somewhat taken aback at the news of the naval activity across the channel.

The new colossal flying-boat, which is to be attached to the Toulon naval aerodrome, is 98 1/2 feet long, has a wing-spread of 131 feet and weighs over 17 tons. It boasts a speed of 126 miles an hour and a flight endurance of 3,000 miles and, when necessary to get out of range, can soar to a height of 10,000 feet. Its construction is adapted for two things—the carriage of a large supply of bombs and absolute seaworthiness in all weathers.

As for the submarine, the French, in appreciation of its tremendous dimensions, do not call it a submarine

Uses No Glue, Either

"Snipe" Conley, manager of the Dallas Steers, Texas League pennant winners, heard about the "ball holding" stunt of Dazzy Vance of Brooklyn and decided to show the famous speed ball merchant a trick or two. Vance, it will be recalled, recently held six regulation size balls in one hand and the boys down front immediately claimed the title of "biggest hands in baseball" for Dazzy. Now along comes Conley of the Texas Conleys with a mitt capable of grabbing seven simultaneously, as the above photo depicts. If you think this is an easy stunt, just give it a whirl some day.

at all; their technical name for it means a "diving cruiser." Its tonnage will be between 3,000 and 3,500 tons. No other details are disclosed.

In addition to this great "diving cruiser," the French are rapidly constructing 14 "ocean-going submarines" of 1,500 tons with a wide radius of action; six "ocean boats," another type of submarine, of 1,100 tons; 19 coastal submarines of 600 tons and 2 submarine mine-layers.

In all, France has completed within the past four and a half years, new vessels to the number of 93.

"With the possible exception of Japan," said Bywater, "no other country has built anything like this volume of naval tonnage during the period in question."

Among the important additions to her fleet are:

Three cruisers of 8,000 tons armed with eight 6.1-inch guns. Complete and afloat.

Four cruisers of 10,000 tons, speed 33 knots, armed with eight 8-inch guns. Two are completed.

One cruiser-mine layer, of 5,700 tons, reported fast and well-armed.

One cruiser-training ship, of 5,500 tons; speed 20 knots; eight 6.1-inch guns.

Two aircraft carriers.

Twelve scouts, of 2,400 to 3,100 tons; speed 5 1/2 knots; armed with five 5.1-inch guns and six torpedo tubes. Six of these are completed.

Twenty-six destroyers, according to Bywater, "the largest and most powerful destroyers afloat." Their tonnage is 1,500, their speed 33 knots. They carry four 5.1-inch guns and six torpedo tubes. Twelve are completed.

Two fleet oil-tankers.

In addition under the French Navy Law, the following new vessels are to be laid down between 1927 and 1929:

Two cruisers of 10,000 tons.

Nine scouts of 3,000 tons.

Ten destroyers of 1,500 tons.

One submarine cruiser.

Sixteen ocean submarines.

Four submarine mine-layers.

Twelve coastal submarines.

This brings the total of new ships up to 117, with a tonnage of 325,000 and all of it, according to the Navy Law, must be ready for service before the end of 1931.

The leaves are falling from the trees. This is the season of the sneeze.

If you can make your handkerchiefs do a few more weeks you will get some new ones for Christmas.

Culinary School Opens Monday In Eastland

Have you ever been taught to make cooking a pleasure?

Have you ever been taught to make the art of cooking as intriguing as other arts become to those who master them? A musician reaches the heights of joy or creation, when he plays well a beautiful piece of music. Have you ever reached such heights from a well made cake? Has the baking of a delicious pie, the art of fashioning or decorating a cake ever given you sheer joy? Do you thrill with pride over this?

If you have missed all this, don't do it any longer. Attend the free cooking school to be staged here from Monday, Sept. 27 to Friday, Oct. 1, inclusive, under the auspices of the Eastland Telegram, for your particular benefit and learn to make pies and pastries with the same amount of joy that poets compose poems.

The Eastland Telegram has engaged Mrs. Ida Chitwood, culinary artist of national renown to conduct a week's cooking school here. Mrs. Chitwood who is a national authority on cooking and baking, will give lectures and demonstrations each afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock. Mrs. Chitwood will doubtlessly amaze the women of this vicinity with the contributions she is able to make in one short week, to that greatest of all institutions—the home. The problems that Mrs. Chitwood will discuss will be those that are daily encountered in the home.

dishes and many new ideas on the kitchen and home will be presented. Here the young housewife will be taught many valuable things and the experienced housewife will also find a store of knowledge awaiting her. No longer need she tire of cooking "the same old thing."

Mrs. Chitwood became widely known in the South during the war through her connection with the food administration. She is a graduate of the domestic science department of several eastern colleges and has taken post graduate work at the famous Boston School of Cookery. She has made a specialty of household economics and has a wealth of knowledge calculated to aid the housewife in the efficient management of her home budget, the work of the kitchen and the protection of the health of members of her family by provision of properly planned diet.

A model kitchen will be installed for use of Mrs. Chitwood where the preparation of meals will be demonstrated. Mrs. Chitwood will preside over the kitchen, presenting her subjects to the women most graphically and interestingly and in a manner that will be easily understood.

Women are requested to bring pencils and notebooks.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Warner celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary last week. Their four sons, Harry, Abe, Jack and Sam, gave a huge party in their honor.

Practical Problems

Her solutions are practical and based upon economy and utility. The saving that the housewife will be able to accomplish by attendance at the school and receiving the scientific and modern ideas, will more than repay her for the time spent there.

How to use left-overs to the best advantage and how to purchase will be shown by Mrs. Chitwood.

The lectures will cover the entire range of domestic economy applicable to the kitchen and dining room, home economics, table preparation, arrangements of menus, the actual cookery, food values, how to buy economically with regard to quality, etc. After each short lecture, Mrs. Chitwood will give practical demonstrations and each woman in attendance will be given the opportunity of taking notes of recipes and process of preparation.

SAINT and SINNER

by Anne Austin

1926 by NEA SERVICE

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:
The Lanes are an average American family.

There is Mrs. Lane, fat, middle-aged, sickly.
Mr. Lane, a carpenter, trying to land a small contracting job with a young business man, Bob Hathaway, who has been invited to dinner.
Junior, 21, irresponsible, wild.
Faith, 20, the stay-at-home drudge, splendidly built, but not pretty.
Cherry, a stenographer, beautiful, with strange top eyes.
And Joy, 9 years old, impudent and irresponsible.

Cherry and Junior—nicknamed Long Lane—have both lost their jobs, and Cherry sets out to find a new one, driving downtown with Chester Hart, Faith's own "steady," whom Cherry has succeeded in "ramping." While cleaning house and preparing for Bob Hathaway's visit for dinner, Faith finds a letter under Cherry's pillow from Albert Ettleson, evidently a traveling man from Indianapolis, whom Cherry has picked up, although she has a swarm of home-town suitors.

Both Faith and Cherry are charmed with Bob Hathaway, but Hathaway's eyes are riveted on Cherry, who manages to make it appear that she has prepared the delicious dinner herself. Faith, in an effort to prevent Cherry's walking away with this man as she has with all others, tries to flirt with Bob, but despises herself for her cheap play for him. She is invited by Hathaway to accompany him and Cherry to a movie, but realizes she is not really wanted.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY: CHAPTER IV.

"Thanks very much," Faith said evenly, her eyes looking steadily into Bob Hathaway's. "I'd love to go, but I really have to go over the household accounts tonight. I'm sure you and Cherry will have a good time—without me," she added, with the barest trace of emphasis.

But the eager relief with which Bob Hathaway turned to Cherry made her feel faint with anger and humiliation. When the two had gone, Faith's light, musical laugh blended with the rich basso of his own delight; Faith stood in the hot living room for a long moment, with her hands clenched so tightly that her nails bruised her palms.

From the front porch, where her mother and father were abandoned to their ease, came Mrs. Lane's satisfied comment: "Cherry sure made a hit with that nice Mr. Hathaway."

Faith could hear her father's grunt of relief as he drew his shoes from his swollen, hot feet and dropped them heavily to the floor. "It was Faith that oughta made the hit," he told his wife, in the tired, slow voice.

"Cookin' up that grand supper for him, and all. I'd like to see Cherry settle down, though. And Hathaway's a fine fellow. Got a head on him, he has. And money in the bank."

"Now, Jim Lane, don't you go throwin' Cherry into matrimony," Mrs. Lane said sharply. "I figger on keepin' her at home for two-three years yet. A girl like her don't have to worry. She can have her pick of the big bugs of this town—pretty and cute as she is."

Faith, with an almost passionate gesture of rebellion, flung her arms above her head, then as suddenly slumped into a chair at the library table and buried her face in her hands.

"How much did the bills come to last week, Faith?" her father called from the porch.

"I was just going to check the charge slips," Faith answered.

From a drawer of the library table she took out the clipped sheafs of bills, and began to check them with frowning intenseness.

Eighteen dollars and 60 cents for groceries for one week! And that didn't include the butcher's bill and the dairy bill.

"Mother, here's a charge of 20 cents for cookies on the tenth. Let's see, that was Saturday, wasn't it? I didn't buy any cakes—"

"Maybe Schultz made a mistake," her mother's voice came behind her plainly. "I wish you'd trade at that cash-and-carry store, Faith. Schultz is always over-charge us—"

"Thank you for the loveliest drive, Bob," she whispered.

"We can't," Faith interrupted grimly. "You know we're always behind with the grocery bill anyway, and Schultz is the only grocer who will wait for his money. Did you buy any cakes on Saturday, or marshmallows on Friday? I'm sure I didn't."

"Oh, yes, I remember now, I sent Joy for them. That little Stegar girl was here Saturday and the children wanted to have a tea party. The Stegars are awful high-toned folks, Faith. I didn't want Cora Stegar tellin' her Ma that Joy didn't have a bite in the house for a tea party."

"I wish you wouldn't let Joy charge things without telling me, Mother. I suppose she charged the marshmallows, too."

"I et them myself—me and Joy," Mrs. Lane assented defiantly. "It's a pretty come off if I can't have a bite of candy when I'm cravin' it, without askin' my daughters' permission—"

"All right, Mother. Of course you can. I just wanted to know," Faith tried to make her voice sound cheery, but she was tired, so tired.

"Butcher, $6.17. Goodness knows that's as little as anyone could expect for six hungry people," she muttered to herself. "Round steak's gone up again. We'll have to have stew of some kind—only I Scents a pound. And that chuck roast wasn't bad, but it took twice as much gas to cook it—"

Her frowning worry over the bills was broken into by the shrill clamor of the telephone bell.

"Who was that?" her mother called out impatiently, when Faith had seated herself again at the table, to go on with her work.

"He didn't give his name," Faith replied guardedly. "He wanted to speak to Cherry."

"My land, I never saw a girl as popular as she is," Mrs. Lane chuckled.

Faith took the pin out of the dairy's charge slips and scanned them quickly. "My Lord! Sixty cents for whipping cream!" she said to herself. "We'll be in the poor house if Cherry doesn't quit bringing so many men home to dinner. Five pounds of butter, at 60 cents a pound, seven quarts of milk at 16 cents, five dozen eggs—total $7.12. I'll have to cut that down. But if I don't have bacon and eggs every morning for breakfast, they all howl as if I were starving them—I wonder if Chris Wiley thinks I'm such a fool I wouldn't know his voice? If Dad knew—"

"What's the total damages, Faith?" her father's voice was anxious under its attempt at jocularity.

"Groceries, butcher and dairy, $31.89," Faith told him apologetically. "I'll try to keep it down to 25 this week, but we'll have to skimp all week to make up for tonight's company dinner."

"I can give you only $20 of it, honey." He came padding in on his stockinged feet, and laid four $5 bills on the table. "You know I only worked four days this week, but I've got a little over a hundred coming to me on that front street job. Pay 'em all something on account, and tell 'em I'll settle up in a few days. Come along to bed, Martha. Gettin' late."

When Mrs. Lane came waddling into the living room, waving her palm leaf fan, Faith rose and kissed her on the cheek.

"Good night, Mother. You'd better take a dose of bromide, so you'll sleep better. I'll bring you in a pitcher of nice lemonade in just a minute."

"You're a good girl, Faith," Mrs. Lane patted the girl's shoulder. "It was real sweet of you to let Cherry have her chance at Bob Hathaway, him being so smitten with her and all. But I wish you'd find a nice young man to take you out more. You're lookin' real peaked."

"Oh, I'm all right, Mother," Faith's voice choked with sudden tears. Her

Had the year 1926 been a normal year, business at the Ranger postoffice this year would show an increase, Postmaster Jesse Meroney said today. Business at the postoffice was affected by the Sand City boom until September of last year. One man alone bought $1,100 worth of stamps, which taken with other revenue that was of a necessity part and parcel of the boom, the business at the postoffice shot up far above normal.

This year there has been nothing unprecedented to cause the receipts to do a marathon, so naturally the business reflects only a normal increase. Mr. Meroney said, however, that he thought business had been better all this year and the figures based on a normal business for 1926, showed an increase.

The people of Oregon will vote this fall on the "Housewives Bill" which is backed by the housewives' council of Portland authorizing the state to go into the business of generating and distributing electricity generated at waterfalls and to bond itself up to 5 per cent of its total assessed valuation or about 50 million dollars.

PALE & PEAKED

Texas Lady Was Advised by Her Mother To Take Cardui, Which She Did With Good Results.

Hamilton, Texas.—Mrs. Gladys Poitvent of this city, says: "At times I suffered awfully with pains across my back and through my sides. I would have to go to bed and stay two or three days at a time. It was very worrisome. I managed to keep going, but... did not enjoy myself at all."

"One day my mother remarked on how bad I looked. She said: 'You look so pale and peaked, why don't you take a bottle of Cardui?' She had taken it herself a number of times, and it had always improved her health, so she thought I had better try it."

"I got the Cardui and began taking it, and from the first dose or two I could see a change for the better. The first thing I noticed was that my appetite was improved. I began to be hungry and I enjoyed my meals. I slept better at night. My rest was so much quieter that I got the benefit from it. I kept on with the Cardui and took it for several months. The pains in my back and sides grew less until they finally quit bothering me."

mother's rare demonstrations of tenderness always completely unwevered her.

After her mother and father were asleep, Faith stretched her tired body in a long, canvas deck chair in a venedarkened corner of the porch. A slight breeze sprang up, and gradually she drifted into a light sleep.

She was awakened by the tinkle of Cherry's subdued laughter. The girl stood with one hand on the screen door of the living room, her lovely face, ethereal in the moon light, upturned to Bob Hathaway's adoring gaze.

"Thank you for the loveliest drive, Bob," she whispered. "I'm so glad we didn't go to silly old movie. I feel as if I had known you for ages. Isn't that strange?" With an appearance of shy impotency, she suddenly stood on tiptoe, and ran her fingers through the crisp waves of her chestnut hair. "I've been wanting to do that all evening, Bob! Oh, dear, you'll think I'm terrible!" she laughed softly.

The man's arms went out, were about to grasp her, but Cherry swung open the screen door and darted into the living room, closing the door after her.

Through the wire meshes, her musical voice came teasingly: "No, you don't, Mr. Hathaway! See you Thursday—Bob."

"You're the most adorable little witch I ever saw," he said huskily.

Faith watched him stride swiftly down the graveled path to his car, swing his long legs into the driver's seat without opening the door, then start the car with expert ease.

When he was safely away, Faith followed Cherry into the living room, her eyes stern and accusing.

"Don't you think, Cherry," she began, before the startled girl had a chance to speak, "that you're going pretty far with a man you have just met? Haven't you any sense of decency at all?"

"So you were listening, were you?" Cherry's little pointed nails dug into the smooth whiteness of Faith's bare arm. "If that isn't just like you! Jealous, that's all! Do you think I'm blind? It was as plain as the nose on your face that you had fallen for Bob Hathaway, and because he couldn't see you at all, you spied on me!" The topaz eyes were blazing like an angry cat's.

"I waited up to tell you that Chris Wiley had called you." Faith flung Cherry's hand from her arm.

"And I suppose you tattled to Mother about that?" Cherry cried. "I'd like to know what business it is of yours if I—"

"He said you were to call him as soon as you came in," Faith went on evenly. "He didn't give his name, but he said you'd know who. Of course I recognized his voice. He was sbr as a boiled owl—"

Before Faith could finish her sentence, Cherry had darted out of the room. Faith knew she had gone to telephone. If Dad woke up, there'd be the devil to pay, but it would serve her right, she thought, as she went to her own bedroom, where Joy was soundly sleeping, her thin little arms and legs flung over two-thirds of the double bed.

Cherry did not come in for her usual good-night confidences, and Faith went to bed, but she could not sleep. Half an hour after Cherry had made the telephone call, Faith heard her sister's door open softly, heard the light, tiptoe steps of the girl as she crept through the hall toward the living room. Faintly there came the creaking of the screen door hinges, and Faith knew that Cherry had slipped out to keep a rendezvous with the man to whom Jim Lane had forbidden the house.

New Magazine For Parents Makes Its Appearance

By United Press. NEW YORK.—Under the sponsorship of sixty eminent specialists in children's health, education, and welfare, a new national periodical called "Children, The Magazine for Parents," made its initial appearance today.

"This magazine," it was announced by George J. Hecht, president of "The Parent's Publishing Association," under whose auspices it is issued, "will have no propaganda purpose, being dedicated solely to fathers and mothers, for the sake of a new generation of normal, intelligent and healthy children. In this it will have the active co-operation of the leading educational and child welfare agencies, private, public and governmental.

Among the editors of the new magazine are: Miss Julia C. Lathrop, former chief of the U. S. Children's Bureau, Angelo Patri, educator and author of books on child training, Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, Judge Ben B. Lindsey of the Juvenile Court of Denver, Colo., Livingston Farrand, president of Cornell University, Dr. Lee K. Frankel, chairman of the National Health Council, Dr. Helen F. Woolley, director, Institute of Child Welfare Research, Teachers College, Columbia University, James E. West, Chief Scout Executive, Mrs. Sidonia Greenberg, director of the Child Study Association of America, Mrs. Jane Deeter Rippin, national director of the Girl Scouts, and Dr. Bela Schick, discoverer of the Schick test for diphtheria.

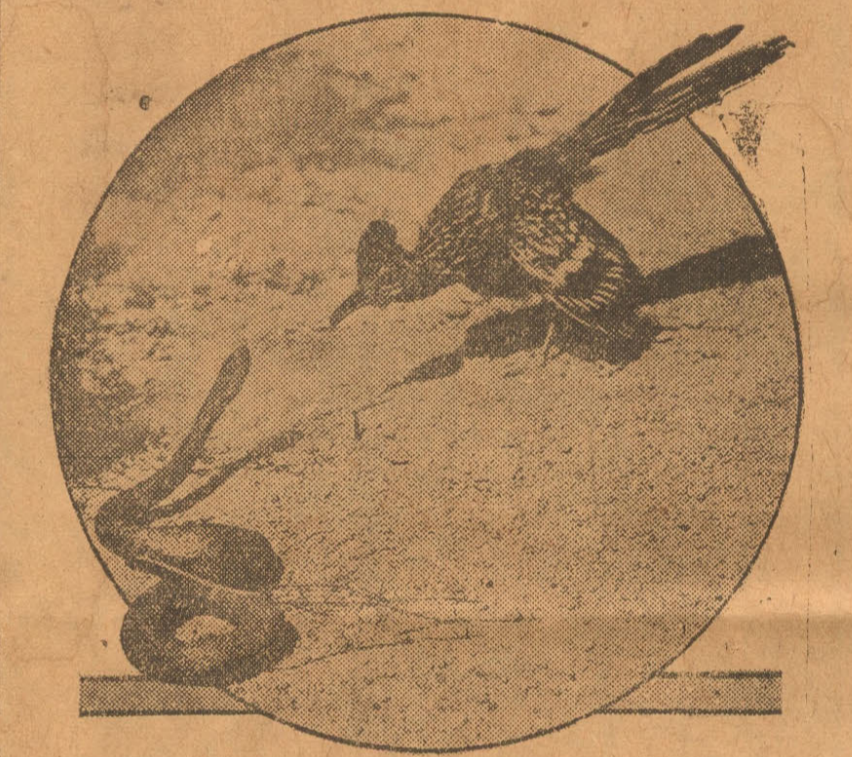

"There are magazines on the breeding of hogs and dogs, the growing of flowers, the refining of metals," explained Hecht, "there are magazines for laboring men, radio fans, barbers, beekeepers—for every trade and profession, except the greatest of all—parenthood.

"Billions of dollars are spent on schools; but practically nothing is spent to teach parents how to rear their children. Of 96,000 hours of a child's life between the ages of five and sixteen, only 7,000 hours are spent in school; the other 90 percent of the time is parents' responsibility. The new magazine will have nothing for children to read; it will consider with parents all the vital problems of bringing up children from crib to college."

Goodnight Park Is Suggested In Palo Duro Canyon

Special Correspondence. AUSTIN, Sept. 23.—During the recent vacation period J. Frank Dobie, adjunct professor of English of the University of Texas, visited the ranch regions of South Texas and the Panhandle for the purpose of adding to his great fund of information in regard to the early cattle days, and incidentally collecting legends and folk-lore of which he has been making a specialty for several years. The fact that Mr. Dobie comes of a pioneer family of ranchmen and that he was a cowboy in his younger manhood days, especially fits him for the research work which he is now conducting. With him, it is a labor of love.

How a Snake Hypnotizes a Bird

This remarkable photo shows a Texas rattlesnake in the act of ordering his lunch. The snake is hypnotizing a clapperbird just before he coils to strike and kill the bewildered bird with his poisonous fangs.

spects the most remarkable man living in Texas today," Mr. Dobie said. "He has never sought the spotlight and his modesty has prevented the people at large from knowing his true greatness. He has been a lever and student of nature all of his life and there are few if any naturalists do him honor, and as one means of perpetuating his memory a State or National Park should be created out of Palo Duro Canyon, which formed part of his ranch, and that stretch of wonderful scenery and beauty should be called "Charles Goodnight Park."

Persimmons Tempt Passerby on Elm Street, Ranger

Two Japanese persimmon trees loaded with golden fruit make one's mouth water, as they pass the Wier apartments on Elm street, Ranger, but the wise know better than to yield to temptation and taste one until after the luscious fruit has been kissed by Jack Frost.

These two persimmon trees bear fruit every year and bear profusely, regardless of whether it is a wet or dry season, which goes to prove that Ranger soil will grow a fruit that one always associates with East Texas or Louisiana.

Littlefield Calls For a Thousand Cotton Pickers

Special Correspondence.
 LITTLEFIELD, Sept. 24. — At least a thousand cotton pickers are needed in the Littlefield vicinity within the next two weeks in order to save the crop here. President Arthur P. Duggan of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce has written the headquarters office in Stamford in regard to the critical situation.

"The need for cotton pickers in this country is becoming very acute. Cotton around Littlefield has not been affected by anything in any way and there are very many fields that will produce a bale an acre. The cotton is opening very rapidly and farmers say they will need at least a thousand pickers in this vicinity within the next two weeks. We can get no promise of help from employment agencies. It is imperative that the farmers here save their cotton, and the only way they can do it is to get more help in the way of pickers."

Manager Homer B. Wade and Assistant Manager Ray Leeman of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce will attend a two-day conference in Fort Worth this week to discuss the farm labor situation and farm labor shortage. It is hoped that something can be accomplished at that meeting to relieve the present cotton labor condition.

Ranger Masons Of Scottish Rite Celebrate Feast

The ancient Jewish feast of the Tabernacles from whence the Pilgrim fathers conceived the idea of the American Thanksgiving day was celebrated by the Scottish Rite Masons of Ranger Thursday evening in the Gholson hotel. Rev. H. B. Johnson, eighteenth degree Mason, was the speaker of the occasion. Other speakers were W. W. Housewright and C. E. May.

At the conclusion of the program a business meeting of the organization was held, and Rev. H. B. Johnson was elected president to succeed Dr. Carl Wilson, removed to Houston, and V. V. Cooper, vice president.

Chopsis S. Welsh acted as toastmaster of the occasion.

It was the first time the Feast of the Tabernacles was ever celebrated in Ranger. Heretofore it has been customary for the feast to be celebrated by the Scottish Rite brethren at the cathedral, but in pursuance of getting the brethren in the outlying towns to have a real clearer understanding of Scottish Rite Masonry and to further inculcating tolerance among members in general, it being a principle of Scottish Riteism, that tolerance in religion is a bounden duty, the meetings are held.

In addition the celebration is educational and acquaints members with part of the Bible to which comparatively little attention is paid.

It is now customary for tiny electric lamps to be mounted on the control panels of radio sets so that the operator can make fine adjustments of his dials with accuracy even though there are no other lights in the room.
