WTC readies for 15th fall semester

Western Texas College, which opened its doors to students for the first time in the fall of 1971, will begin its 15th fall semester Thursday.

Registration will be held Wednesday and Thursday, with sophomores to register Wednesday afternoon and freshman Thursday morning. Evening students can take advantage of a special registration period from 6:30 until 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Students planning to enroll at WTC for the first time in the fall are encouraged to fill out admission forms Monday through Wednesday on campus.

These forms are available in the Student Services office in the administration building.

Classes for evening students will start Thursday, a departure from past years. Day classes will begin Friday.

All classes will be dismissed for the Labor Day holiday Sept. 2.

Freshman can begin moving into the dormitories at 2 p.m. Tuesday and are invited to attend a freshman picnic and fun night beginning at 6 o'clock that evening.

The college cafeteria will serve a continental breakfast at 8 a.m. Wednesday and sophomores can begin moving into the dorms at 10 a.m. Sophomore registration is scheduled from 1 until 5 p.m.

An orientation program for dormitory students is planned at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Fine Arts Theatre. It will be followed by the traditional faculty-student ice cream supper at 7:30 p.m. and a Howdy Dance in the cafeteria at 8:30 p.m.

Kappi Chi, a Christian fellowship organization, will host a movie and refreshments starting at 8:30 p.m. in the Christian Student Center.

This issue of the SDN contains the annual "Back to School" edition for WTC. It includes a complete listing of college courses plus articles related to classes offered this semester.

Tax hearing due for county's rate

A public hearing to allow comment regarding a proposed tax increase by county officials is slated for 5 p.m. Monday at the Scurry County courthouse.

The commissioners have proposed a tax rate of 17.6 cents per $100 valuation — an increase of 2.7 cents over the 1985 rate.

This equals an increase of some 13 percent.

For property valued at $50,000, this would equal a tax bill of $88. Using last year's rate, this same property produced a county tax bill of $77.50.

Monday's hearing has been called in compliance with "truth in taxation" laws, which require taxing entities to allow public comment whenever they propose to raise taxes more than 3 percent above a calculated figure called the effective tax rate.

The effective tax rate for Scurry County this year is 14.4 cents — a figure lower than the actual tax rate charged. The drop was brought about by the county finishing its bonded indebtedness payments for the new wing of Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

When compared to the effective tax rate, the proposed figure of 17.6 cents per $100 valuation computes to a 22 percent tax hike.

Tuesday to mark teacher in-service

In-service activities for teachers in the Snyder school system begin Tuesday with a back-to-school breakfast sponsored by the district.

The meal will be served from 7:15 until 8:30 a.m. in the high school cafeteria.

An assembly for all staff members and guests is then slated from 8:45 until 10:45 a.m. in Worsham Auditorium at SHS.

The keynote address at this assembly will be given by Dr. Wallace E. Davis, dean of the college of education at Corpus Christi University.

A range of welcome remarks are planned also, to be opened by comments from Superintendent Bob Hawes. Other words of welcome are scheduled from Dr. Tom Scannicchio, assistant superintendent for instruction; Rod Waller, mayor of Snyder; Roy Baze, chamber of commerce president; Mike Reed, school board president; Tom Gonzales, president of the Snyder Classroom Teachers Association; and Tom Strayhorn, president of the Snyder chapter for TSTA.

Assistant Superintendent Jack Gorman will then introduce new staff members for the 1985-86 school year.

From 11 a.m. until noon, teachers will go to their respective campuses for individual faculty meetings with principals.

'Buff' events expand

Plans for Snyder's annual White Buffalo Days celebration in October include several additions and changes related to "fun" sports competitions.

A four-man, low ball golf tournament — scheduled to be played at both Snyder Country Club and the Western Texas College golf course — will be an added feature.

In addition, the annual Buffalo Stampede will include a biathlon — 32 miles on bicycle plus a 10-K (6.2 mile) run — and a new "Iron Kids" competition.

It will be for youngsters age 8 and younger competing in a 2-mile bike race and a quarter-mile run. Ages 8-14 will have a five-mile bike race plus a 1 mile run.

Heading up the golf tourney is Price Courter, PGA golf pro at Snyder County Club, and Dave Foster, pro shop manager at WTC.

For the Buffalo Stampede, Patrice McKinney, aerobics and fitness instructor at WTC, is in charge.

An expanded event this year will be the dance contest — which last year primarily featured break dancing. Sandy Pavlik, owner of the Hair Station, is in charge and she said they will open the contest up to other types of dance this year.

Committee chairman for the event, Billie Smith, said, "With the addition of new events and expansion of old ones, we anticipate a larger celebration than in past years, and a wider range of participation."

WTC's Bliss Mayhan, a native of Kim, Colo., was the top rough stock rider in the recent AJRA Rodeo. His efforts won him a bronze creation by Ben Miller of Fluvanna.

When the award was presented, Bliss Mayhan's mother was taken by the facial features of the bronze. She asked Ralph Miller if there was any connection between the bronze and the former Johnny Light.

Ralph said he didn't know but that Johnny Light had been his and Riley Miller's rodeo idol when they were growing up. Mrs. Mayhan explained that Light had taught her son to ride.

When Ralph asked his brother Riley about the bronze, Riley inquired if Mrs. Mayhan had noticed the inscription which read, "The Likes of Johnny Light."

Mrs. Mayhan not not seen the inscription, but had only seen the facial resemblance. What makes the situation even more interesting is the fact that Ben, the artist, had never seen nor did he have a picture of Johnny Light.

His creation was simply from stories that he had heard his father tell of the veteran rodeo hand.

Hospital 'cracks down' on due bills

Attorney's for Cogdell Memorial Hospital this week filed the first of an expected series of lawsuits in 132nd District Court aimed at collecting unpaid bills owed the hospital.

Four suits were filed with the dollar amounts owed the hospital in excess of $1,000 in each case.

Altogether, those accounts — all arising from hospital admissions or emergency room treatments between Jan. 1, 1983 and Dec. 31, 1984 — total $13,558.

Hospital administrators say the four filings are the first in what will likely be several lawsuits.

The action is part of Cogdell's overall attempt to crack down on delinquent accounts.

TDC warrant discovered after arrest

The arrest of a 24-year-old suspect Friday on forgery charges filed here turned up a parole violation warrant issued out of the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville.

Currently being held without bond for transfer back to TDC is Olegano Romero.

He was arrested by police Friday in connection with a check forgery incident reported Thursday by Rosa Hernandez of Snyder, who said someone had stolen and forged her husband's name to a check totaling $150.

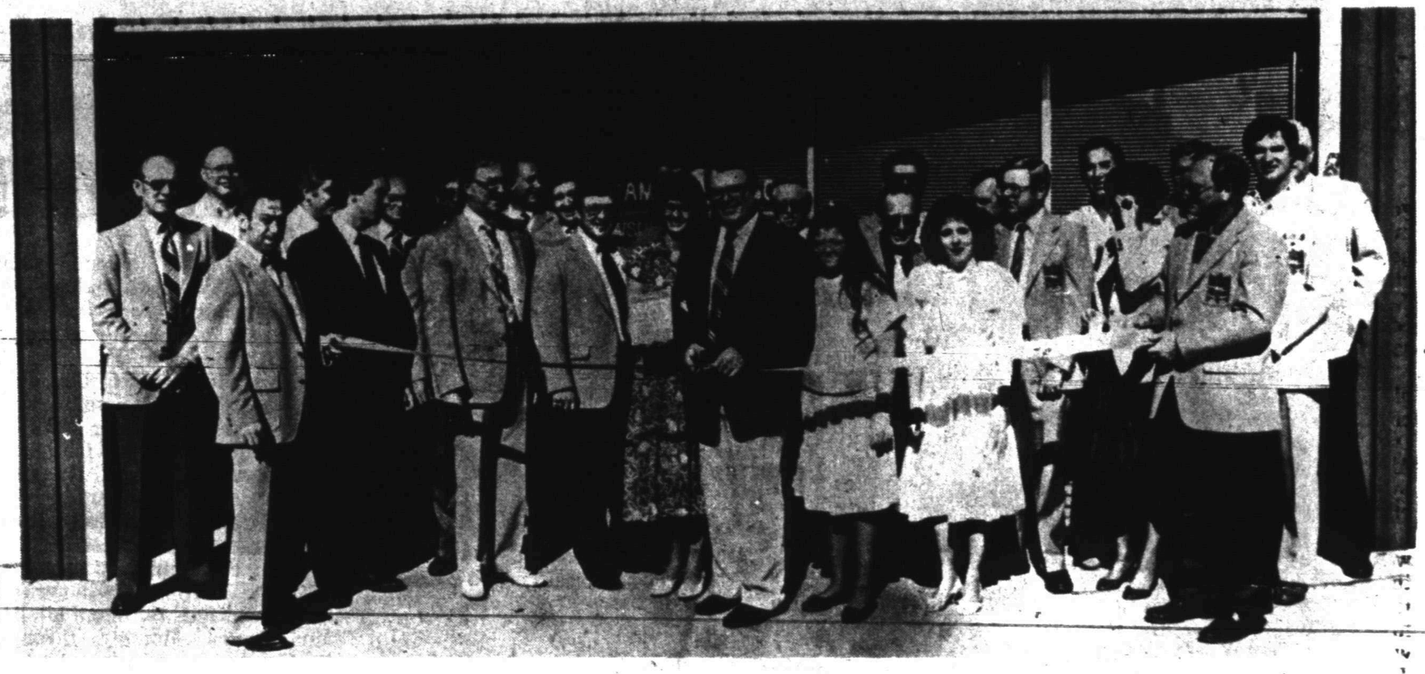

Romero was arrested on the forgery charge around 1 p.m. Friday. A routine computer check then turned up the outstanding TDC warrant.

Millions awarded

RIO GRANDE CITY, Texas (AP) — A Starr County jury has recommended that almost $8 million in damages be given to the family of an oilfield worker fatally shot in the face by a co-worker.

The seven-man, five-woman jury found gross negligence Thursday on the part of Heldt Brothers Trucking of Alice, an oilfield service company, and one of its former employees, Moises Medrano, 37, of Port Isabel.

Fourth inmate attacked in three days

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — A Texas Department of Corrections inmate was in stable condition after he was stabbed in an apparent retaliation for the attack of another inmate, officials said.

Hipolito Marez, 22, an inmate at the Coffield Unit near Palestine, was the fourth prisoner attacked in a TDC facility over a three-day period, TDC spokesman Phil Guthrie said Friday.

The inmate, serving 30 years for an aggravated robbery conviction in Hudspeth County, suffered wounds to his back, chest, right side and knees and was in stable condition late Friday at a Palestine hospital, Guthrie said.

Eighteen inmates have died in TDC prisons this year and 163 others were stabbed.

Marez was stabbed Friday six times while in a high-security recreation yard at the unit, Guthrie said, adding that a guard outside the yard saw the suspect attacking Marez.

The officer reached through a hole in the fence and struck the suspect with a riot baton, he said. The attacker then threw the weapon, a nine-inch flat piece of metal, onto the prison roof and surrendered, Guthrie said.

Anderson County sheriff's investigators were questioning a 23-year-old inmate, serving a life sentence for a Bexar County murder conviction.

Investigators said they think Marez may have been knifed in retaliation for the stabbing of another Coffield inmate, David Mena.

Mena, 22, was in stable condition Friday at a Palestine hospital, Guthrie said. He was stabbed four times Thursday evening as he and other prisoners exercised in a prison day room, Guthrie said.

Mena, serving a 20-year sentence for an aggravated robbery conviction in Harris County, was stabbed with a nine-inch piece of steel in his chest, back and neck, Guthrie said.

Three convicts were being questioned by sheriff's investigators, but there is no apparent motive for the knifing, Guthrie said.

"They had exercised together for several months and there was no apparent friction between them," he said.

On Thursday, Arturo Aguilar, 30, was stabbed to death with a nine-inch shank Thursday afternoon at the Eastham Unit near Lovelady. Investigators believe Aguilar was knifed in retaliation for the stabbing Wednesday of Eastham inmate Ricardo Muniz Hernandez, 27, who was in fair condition at the TDC hospital in Galveston, Guthrie said.

Lawyer: vital information is being withheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is concealing vital information that could help win a new trial for Allen Friedman, uncle of Teamsters Union President Jackie Presser, on a 1983 fraud conviction, a Friedman attorney says.

The assertion by attorney Dennis Levin, made during an in-chambers meeting with U.S. District Judge Sam H. Bell of Akron, Ohio, was not challenged by the government, a transcript of the Aug. 16 session shows.

Levin claimed the government was withholding "99 percent" of the evidence needed to support a motion for a new trial for Friedman, according to the transcript, which was made available by Justice Department officials Friday.

Judge Bell was scheduled to hear further arguments Monday.

Friedman, 63, was convicted nearly two years ago on charges of collecting $165,000 in payments from Presser's Teamsters Local 507 in Cleveland without actually working for the money. Friedman has served 11 months of a three-year fraud sentence.

His lawyers, citing widespread reports of Presser's purported cooperation with the FBI as an informant, now insist their client, who has been serving time at a federal prison in Texas, deserves a new trial.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III has confirmed the Justice Department told Bell they would accept having the fraud indictment against Friedman dismissed — and thus see him go free — rather than having to divulge confidential information about Presser. The transcript underscored that position.

William Bryson, a Justice Department lawyer, told Bell the government would not share its information on Presser's role.

"... To either confirm or deny, whatever, (that) Jackie Presser is a government informant, would be contrary, particularly in the face of the allegations that have been made, both to the department policy and to the informant privilege," Bryson said.

"Since ... we obviously cannot proceed with a new trial or any other form of further proceedings without turning over this information, we would be prepared to agree to a dismissal of the indictment."

Friedman was one of two men convicted as a result of a government investigation into an alleged $250,000 ghost-payroll scheme at Teamsters Local 507 in Cleveland. Presser was the local's secretary-treasurer and still holds that post.

A Justice Department spokesman confirmed that David Margolis, chief of the department's organized crime section, tried early in the inquiry to prevent Cleveland investigators from searching Presser's office.

Spokesman John Russell defended the attempt to block the search, based on legal technical reasons, as legal and correct.

The investigators, however, eventually conducted the search.

About a month ago, the Justice Department decided not to seek Presser's indictment in connection with the alleged payroll scheme.

The department was forced to take that action, The Los Angeles Times and The Washington Post reported, after high-ranking officials learned belatedly that Presser had been cooperating with the FBI and possibly was given authority as an informant to sign checks which went to the "ghost employees."

Neither the FBI nor the Justice Department has ever confirmed that Presser cooperated with the FBI, and John R. Climaco, the attorney for the Teamsters leader, has denied it.

Fugitive avoids recapture efforts

TEXARKANA--Kenneth Wayne McKelvey obviously knows how to capitalize on a stroke of good fortune.

Since he was mistakenly released from the Bowie County jail more than a year ago, McKelvey has avoided all law enforcement efforts to recapture him.

This week McKelvey has been added to the Texas Most Wanted list. A $1,000 reward is being offered for information leading to his capture.

McKelvey is wanted on a warrant charging him with the aggravated robbery of the Cotton Belt Credit Union in Texarkana.

Police reports indicate that a black male armed with a small caliber handgun robbed the credit union on May 5, 1983, then fled in a dirty Ford or Chevrolet with Texas license plates.

On June 13, 1983 Texarkana Crime Stoppers received a tip identifying two suspects in the robbery. One of the suspects, R. T. Barlow, was arrested at the Greyhound bus depot in Texarkana on some burglary warrants.

In a statement to the Texarkana Police Department, Barlow identified Kenneth Wayne McKelvey as his associate in the robbery of the credit union.

On June 20, 1983, a warrant was issued for McKelvey's arrest, charging him with aggravated robbery.

KENNETH MCKELVEY

A year later, McKelvey was finally apprehended by the Dallas Police Department on two counts of credit card abuse. Investigators say these charges were later dropped and McKelvey was transported to the Bowie County jail by sheriff's deputies, who had burglary charges pending against him.

But on July 5, 1984, McKelvey was released from the Bowie County jail because of a paperwork mixup.

He has not been seen since by law enforcement authorities.

McKelvey is described as a black male, 27 years of age, 6-1, 180 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes.

Anyone with information concerning his possible whereabouts is asked to call Texas Crime Stoppers toll-free at 1-800-252-8477 or their local Crime Stoppers program. In all cases, callers do not have to reveal their identies.

Texas Most Wanted is a cooperative program between Texas Crime Stoppers and the Department of Public Safety.

Convicted swindler still sticks to his story

AUSTIN (AP) — Convicted Yugoslavian swindler Bratislav Lilic insists he remains the only man who can reunite a wealthy Austin businessman with the missing son he's spent $400,000 to find.

"They have his son and his son will rot right where he is," said Bratislav Lilic, 44, a Chicago resident who claims to be an agent cut loose by the Soviets after his arrest on federal fraud charges.

"He can spend another $10 million, will not do him any good," Lilic said Friday.

Lilic, identifying himself as Alexander Ivanov, took $46,000 from Douglas Pierce. In return, Lilic told Pierce he would soon see his son John, missing since his ship went down in the South China Sea in October 1983.

It was nothing but a con, said federal prosecutors who persuaded jurors to convict Lilic on four fraud charges that could bring 35 years in prison.

John Pierce disappeared in the sinking of the Glomar Java Sea, victim of a Pacific typhoon. Pierce, then 29, was a derrick hand on the drilling ship.

Douglas Pierce believes his son drifted to Vietnam in a lifeboat and now is a prisoner of the Vietnamese. He also believed Lilic was a Soviet agent who could negotiate the return of his son.

After several broken promises from Lilic, Pierce reluctantly cooperated with the FBI and helped in the arrest and conviction.

"He had all the trappings" of a Soviet agent, Pierce testified. "I have to take some chances or I'll never get my son back."

Pierce blew it, Lilic said in his first interview since being convicted. "He had the real contact."

Officials at the Federal Correctional Institution at Bastrop, citing a federal court order, barred an Associated Press reporter from interviewing Lilic in person. The order says Lilic's lawyer must be present for interviews, but the attorney refused because Lilic has been heavily criticial of his defense.

However, Lilic twice telephoned the AP from the prison's day room.

In those interviews, he maintained that he never lied to Pierce because he was, indeed, a Soviet "intermediary" who had seen John Pierce in a Hanoi hospital.

"It was my understanding that if anything goes wrong nobody will admit anything," Lilic said of the Soviet embassy's silence on his case.

"This job, nobody ever promised to me a rose garden," he said in his thick Eastern European accent.

It was his last meeting with Douglas Pierce — when he was arrested in San Antonio — that would have brought the father-son reunion, Lilic said. Pierce was to be flown to Cuba, then Vietnam, he said.

The Vietnamese wanted to return John Pierce so he can tell of the Glomar Java Sea's CIA connections, according to Lilic.

The negotiations could continue if he is freed, he said.

"Upon my release from prison, we can continue the negotiations, still on our own terms," he said.

Lilic contends he is the only person who can win Pierce's freedom, as well as the freedom of other missing Americans he says are in Vietnam.

Douglas Pierce now is convinced Lilic was a fraud, working for a Soviet embassy official who hatched the plot and kept the money.

Although Pierce has pieced together a story that satisfies most of his own questions, some doubts remain. Pierce says Lilic told him stories about his son that only could have come from the missing man.

"I don't know if I've told that story in 20 years and I certainly didn't tell it to this man," Pierce said of a story about his son stealing cigarettes 25 years ago.

"I think Lilic truly believes, as do I, that my son is alive. Whether he saw my son or not, I have no idea," Pierce said.

He said he turned Lilic in because other efforts failed and, "If Lilic was something other than a low-echelon guy and was worth something on the trading block, he would be mine to trade."

Pierce said Lilic once told him he was a KGB agent.

Dr. Krenek talk slated

Dr. Harry Krenek, Dean of Instruction at Western Texas College, will discuss "Going Back to College" at the Senior Citizens Center Tuesday morning.

His program is to begin at 11:30 a.m. in the dining room. Krenek will also answer questions from the audience after his remarks.

Senior citizens will once again be assisting with the registration at WTC on August 28-29. Working as volunteers through the VIVA program, the senior citizens help students finish up registration by issuing parking permits required for all vehicles parked on the campus on a regular basis during each school year.

E. L. Hill will conduct the Friday sing along in the center. The sing along begins at 11:30 a.m. Blood pressures are tested starting at 10 a.m. each Friday.

Senior citizens who need transportation to pay bills, shop for groceries or visit doctors' offices in Snyder can make arrangements by calling the Senior Center office at 573-4035. Transportation is by van and riders can be picked up at their homes and returned there. The vans also bring senior citizens to the center for a nutritious meal Monday through Friday and persons interested in riding the vans are invited to call the office any weekday.

'Vitamin cure' isn't the answer

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My husband is 73 and gets along fine, but he has high blood pressure. The doctor took him off his medication, so he decided to take lecithin, cod liver oil, chelated zinc, super garlic, ferrous sulfate and gelatin. I think he takes too much. What do you think?

DEAR READER — He may be taking too much and not enough. The substances you list may help him in many ways, but they won't control his blood pressure. So he probably is taking too much of the wrong thing and not enough of something that may do some real good.

Not every hypertensive patient needs medication. For example, many patients can lower their blood pressure by taking calcium, losing weight, reducing salt intake, getting more exercise and changing to a less stressful life style.

If your husband's doctor discontinued the medicine, he may believe that your husband does not need it. To make sure, your husband should have regular blood-pressure checks. If his pressure rises and remains high, he has a tough decision to make. The stuff he is taking now is unlikely to harm him, but I'd hate to see him delude himself to the point where he refuses medical follow-up. Please make sure he supplements his vitamins and minerals with a little food.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My doctor says I have drusen retinopathy. What can I expect in coming years? Should I get a second opinion?

DEAR READER — Drusen are deposits that develop deep within the retinal layer. Some rare forms of drusen are hereditary, but most types simply occur with age. These deposits are often nothing to worry about, but they may — as they grow — be associated with central visual loss, so-called macular degeneration. Your ophthalmologist can advise you how to check your vision periodically so you can discover quite early if your sight is being compromised. I don't believe a second opinion is necessary at this time, unless your vision is failing and you have to consider laser therapy.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My 70-year-old mother has pain in her lower abdomen that radiates to her back. This always happens after eating, especially if she eats too much at one time. She doesn't eat dairy products and her gall bladder was removed in December. What could cause this?

DEAR READER — Your mother may be experiencing a phenomenon called gastro-colic reflex. When the stomach is stimulated by being overfilled, the large intestine may contract. When there are deposits of air in the bowel, the patient may feel sensations resembling cramps or colic.

If your mother is experiencing lower abdominal pain on a regular basis, I suspect her doctor will want to further investigate her symptoms to make sure that a more serious condition isn't the cause. Additional helpful tests might include a barium enema X-ray series or colonoscopy. If your mother's large intestine is found to be normal, she will probably wish to eat smaller amounts at more frequent intervals.

If you have questions about MENOPAUSE, you can get answers in Dr. Gott's new Health Report on the subject. Send 75 cents plus a self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Menopause.

I have been asked many questions about chiropractors. The typical reader wants to know what chiropractors do and for what sorts of ailments a person would visit one.

This is a loaded question, and no matter how I answer it, I'm going to get into trouble with someone. The best I can do is give you an honest opinion ... and get into trouble with everybody.

Chiropractors are non-M.D. practitioners who believe that disease is caused by improper alignment of the spinal column. Therefore, to cure illness, they manipulate the spine.

Now, from a purely practical point of view, I think you should know that the spinal bones are quite securely held in place by extremely tough ligaments. About the only way you can realign your spine is to drive your Oldsmobile into a brick wall at 60 mph. In addition, no valid scientific investigation has ever shown that cancer, heart disease and diabetes are in any way related to the spinal nerves, in a chiropractic sense. Yet chiropractors make a ton of money pandering to an unsophisticated public that is desperate to find alternatives to traditional healing methods — and, frankly, we physicians are sometimes not so hot at curing things.

However — and that's a big "however" — chiropractors can aid certain conditions. People with backaches often can be helped by chiropractic manipulation. I suspect that all backaches contain an element of muscle spasm, and chiropractic manipulation — which pulls out tired, spastic muscles — can mean salvation for a large group of patients whose back pain is partially due to spasm. My suspicions about how it works are immaterial; it does work.

Good chiropractors are like good psychiatrists: They're hard to find. But once you've found one who can help your back, stick with him. Stay away from any chiropractor who boasts that he can give you total body health. It's just not true. Support the chiropractor who knows his limitations and recognizes the appropriate role he has to play in relieving discomfort.

I refer patients to chiropractors. I know that many physicians consider it unethical, but the chiropractors I use do a great deal of good. Why shouldn't I use non-medical treatment if it's in the patient's best interest? Furthermore, many chiropractic techniques are now standard equipment for traditional, un-rebellious orthopedic surgeons. The issue is one of recognizing one's limitations. I think I recognize mine, and the chiropractors I know recognize theirs.

But be careful. If your backache doesn't improve after a few days of chiropractic manipulation, get thee to a physician. Similarly, if your doctor doesn't ease your backache and get you on your feet, try a chiropractor.

One word of warning: Slipped discs can be made worse by manipulation. In the presence of electrically sharp, excruciating pain that may radiate down the back of a thigh, pass chiropractic and proceed directly to a neurologist or neurosurgeon.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

FARMING OPERATIONS UNDERWAY — Western Texas College Ag instructor Jim Judah, shown here feeding sheep at the school farm, has already gotten farming operations underway and ready for students to take over once the fall school term begins. Both sheep and swine raising operations will be conducted at the school's leased farm southeast of Snyder. (SDN Staff Photo)

BUILDING HORSE PENS — The building of additional horse pens at the old Scurry County Rodeo Grounds — currently leased by WTC for rodeo team use — will be a major project for the ag and rodeo students as the fall term begins. Shown boring holes to set poles for the pens are student Bill McElvaine of Snyder and WTC Ag instructor and rodeo coach Bob Doty. (SDN Staff Photo)

College ag program is getting underway

Meat and livestock judging teams at Western Texas College will begin their fall schedule in October, Jim Judah, agriculture instructor and teams advisor, said.

"We started judging last year with some students who were already on campus," Judah said. "We expect to have three of them back and have been able to award them judging scholarships.

"We're looking forward to having a good group of freshmen, too. They were not recruited especially for judging but they have good background from high school and we think they will be assets to our program."

WTC's livestock judging team will be competing only against two-year schools and the meat judging team will compete against four-year colleges and universities. To be eligible for judging teams, members must be enrolled in a judging course but are not required to be ag majors. Students involved with a judging team do have to put in a lot of hours outside the classroom, so their interest must be a continuing one, Judah said.

Clarendon College, South Plains College and Howard College in Big Spring have livestock judging teams and are very active in competitions.

The first competition of the year for the livestock team will be in Shreveport, La., while the meat team will go first to Plainview. The livestock team is to go to competitions in Canyon and Goodwell, Okla. in December.

Both teams are to go to Fort Worth and Houston early in 1986 and to the swine judging competitions held each year in Sweetwater. The NACTA (nationals) contest will be in April.

WTC operates an 80-acre livestock center which is used as a laboratory to supplement agriculture courses. About 20 acres are in cultivation and the remainder in pasture, with facilities for livestock as well. The college purchased a herd of Suffolk sheep last spring and has purchased Duroc and Yorkshire bred gilts this summer. The sheep and swine operation will be used extensively in teaching and in livestock exhibition. Livestock will be sold to area 4-H and FFA members for projects and used in the college's judging contest held in March.

Judah taught in Wellman Independent School District before joining the WTC faculty in August, 1984. He is a graduate of Lubbock Christian College, where he received the bachelor of science degree, and of Texas Tech University where he earned the master of science degree. He was assistant professor of agriculture at LCC from 1978-81 and in 1981 moved to Snyder as a drilling fluids engineer with NL Baroid drilling fluids. He returned to teaching in 1983.

Lawyer: no abuse involved

AUSTIN (AP) — An Air Force staff sergeant whose 68-year-old mother starved to death in his apartment hadn't abused her and instead spent thousands of dollars on her care, his lawyer says.

Dain Whitworth, an Austin lawyer representing Joe Victor Dixon, said Dixon was conscientious about caring for his mother, who was senile, partially blind and diabetic.

Dixon tried to get his mother placed into a nursing home, but could not, the lawyer said.

"He hired private nurses to spend part of the day with her. He was sent out of town on assignment in April or May and couldn't pay the nurses, so they quit coming," Whitworth said. "After that, he would come home at lunch and fix lunch."

Mad residents seek better service

ROYSE CITY, Texas (AP) — Residents of a trailer park who have gone with little or no water for two weeks are still grappling with officials at Blackland Water Corp. to end the supply drought.

The park, 35 miles northeast of Dallas, gets its water from Blackland, a private company that buys water from the city of Rockwall then sells it to about 850 residents of unincorporated areas in Rockwall County.

But demand for water during August's relentless heat has surpassed the capability of water lines and storage tanks supplying the area, said Rockwall City Manager Bill Eisen.

"I'm mad. If my trailer caught on fire, I couldn't put it out," said Floyd Lee, one of the residents.

Bob DeJarnatt, another resident of the trailer park, said the problem appears to be an influx of new people into the area: "There are just too many people tying into the lines out here."

Residents said they have been unable to water their lawns or take daily baths during the past three summers. What water they have gotten has often been dirty, they said.

"You almost have to boil it to drink it," said Carolyn Thompson. "It's dirty, and there's no pressure. It's been continually getting worse for two weeks."

Dave Gladney, who recently moved into the area, said he has tried to grow a lawn but has been unable to.

Poet Percy Bysshe Shelley was born in Sussex, England, in 1792.

Saturday Evening Post magazine was founded in 1821.

The Gentle Breeze of Jesus
"Real Worship"
"A time will come however, indeed it is already here, when the true (genuine) worshippers will worship the Father in spirit and in truth (reality); for the Father is seeking just such people as these as His worshippers. God is a Spirit (a spiritual Being) and those who worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth (reality)." John 4:23,24. The Amplified Bible.
When Jesus spoke these words to the woman at the well, he told us much about worship. Combine Jesus' words with those of Paul about worship and we see what real worship is like.
"What then brethren, is (the right course)? When you meet together, each one has a hymn, a teaching, a disclosure of special knowledge or information, an utterance in a (strange) tongue or an interpretation of it. (But) let everything be constructive and edifying and for the good of all...So, let two or three prophets speak—those inspired to preach or teach—while the rest pay attention and weigh and discern what is said...so that all may be instructed and all may be stimulated and encouraged...For He (Who is the source of their prophesying) is not a God of confusion and disorder but of peace and order. As (is the practice) in all the churches of the saints (God's people..." I Corinthians 14:26-33, The Amplified Bible.
Paul concludes in the following verses that these instructions about worship are the commandments of God. When God's people are allowed to worship in Spirit and in Truth, they minister Jesus' love to those about them and God receives the highest glory.

Court convicts one man

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A U.S. District Court jury has convicted one defendant and acquitted another on charges they attempted to extort funds from two Houston businessmen.

Maryland construction consultant Eugene Burch, 49, was found guilty Friday of conspiracy to extort, aiding and abetting interstate travel in aid of extortion, and using a telephone to intimidate with intent to extort.

Richard H. Simpson, 29, of Flint, Mich., was acquitted of two counts of conspiracy to extort and aiding and abetting interstate travel in aid of extortion.

Judge Thomas R. Brett set the sentencing of Burch for Oct. 7. Burch, who had been free on bond since he was indicted last year, was ordered into the custody of U.S. marshals. He faces up to 15 years in prison and $30,000 in fines.

Burch was alleged to have been involved in a conspiracy to extort money from Houston businessmen Richard Chenault and Richard Breedlove.

Burch claimed the businessmen owed him about $10,000 from businesses the three had been involved in four years ago. Simpson was alleged to have been one of two men recruited to travel to Houston and threaten Breedlove and Chenault.

Breedlove testified that in September 1981, two men came to his Houston office with a revolver and threatened to blow him up with dynamite if he didn't produce money.

Another defendant in the case, MacArthur Reed, is alleged to have accompanied Simpson to Breedlove's office. Reed is awaiting trial.

Nuns pressured by Vatican to retract abortion position

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two dozen nuns and others who contend that committed Catholics can have differing views on abortion are coming under increasing Vatican pressure to retract their statement and pledge adherence to traditional church teachings.

"The Church's teaching on ... the radical immorality of direct abortion is clear, constant, and unequivocal," Cardinal Jean Jerome Hamer, the Vatican's top official for religious life, said Friday in concluding a three-week visit to the United States.

Hamer said the nuns had created a scandal that could only be remedied by "indicating adherence to the teaching of the Church." Failure to do so, he said, would result in disciplinary hearings. The ultimate penalty would be dismissal from their religious orders.

The nuns were among 97 people who signed an Oct. 7, 1984, newspaper advertisement challenging what they called the "mistaken belief" that the only legitimate Catholic position on abortion is that it is wrong in all circumstances.

"In fact, a diversity of opinions regarding abortion exists among committed Catholics," said the ad, published in the New York Times.

Frances Kissling, director of Catholics for a Free Choice, said another advertisement will be published in the Times this fall, this one with at least 1,000 signatures, to express solidarity with the right of Catholics to sign such statements.

"He is totally unaware of the nature of political life in America," Kissling said of Hamer. "His values of free speech are just not understood. He's causing far more scandal in denying people both moral and political rights than could possibly have been caused by religious people signing such a public statement."

A month after the ad appeared, the Vatican called for retractions from the 28 nuns, priests and brothers who had signed it. Two brothers and two priests — the only male clergy who had signed — complied with the request, but none of the nuns did.

Kissling said the Vatican seems to have hardened its stand by adding the demand for indications of "adherence" to church views — a requirement she said is akin to McCarthyism.

"They are being asked to sign loyalty oaths that they adhere to the teachings of the church. The assumption is that we are disloyal," she said.

Hamer, who has been seeking the retractions indirectly through the religious superiors of sisters who signed the statement, said he was "encouraged by the good will" he has encountered in discussions of the matter this month in the United States.

There are no holly trees in Holly, Colo., which took its name from pioneer rancher Hiram S. Holly, according to National Geographic. But Hollytree, Ala., population 275, was named for the huge wild holly tree that once stood at the crossroads.

Ragin' Tigers look tough in first scrimmage action

STAMFORD – Coach Dennis Tomlin and the staff brought their Ragin' Tigers here Friday night with the thought in mind of finding some players. Find them they did.

"Oh yeah," grinned a jubilant Tomlin, after the Tigers outscored Vernon four touchdowns to two in the first scrimmage action for both teams. "We came to find players and we found a bunch of them."

Both Snyder and Vernon scored two touchdowns apiece with their first-team units. Snyder also scored once with its second team and once with its third team.

Perhaps even more telling was the fact that Snyder came up with seven turnovers - three fumble recoveries and four interceptions.

"That was great to see," said the coach. "We were concerned because our secondary is so inexperienced but these folks really rose to the occasion."

Vernon scored a 32-yard touchdown on a counter play, then came back with a 50-yard TD run moments later as the teams ran the first of two offensive series with the first units. After that, however, the state-ranked Lions were unable to reach the goal line again.

"What pleased me the most about our defense was the hitting we had. The second time we went out (on first-team defense) we had more confidence and we played much better. It was a team effort. The kids were really getting after it," the coach said.

Snyder countered in its opening series of first team offense with a 47-yard touchdown run by fullback Justin Webb.

Later, the Tigers' second-team offense scored when Reggie Price went over from four yards away. The third-team unit got into the act when quarterback Brad Gartman hit Alan Holt on a 31-yard scoring toss.

Snyder's final touchdown came with the first unit, when quarterback Mike McWilliams scored on a two-yard run.

McWilliams, Cotton Merritt, Tony Pineda and Todd Pollard all intercepted passes for the Tigers.

Two of the fumble recoveries were unofficially credited to Rusty Radican and Brent McFarland. The other Tiger to fall on a loose football was unnamed Friday night.

Tomlin said he wanted to look at films of the scrimmage before he gave his final report card, but did mention several players that stood out, including quarterbacks McWilliams and Gartman; defensive back Pollard; running backs Mike Long and Toby Ubando; outside linebacker Jimmy Hunter and linemen Donnell Davis, Trey Tippens, Chris Garrett, Juan Benitez and Henry Treat.

"Despite the four touchdowns, Tomlin said, "we didn't execute real well on offense all the time. But this has been a great scrimmage for us. We found some players, we were aggressive, and the things we saw that we did do bad are things we believe we can correct."

Parker suffers injury in Friday's scrimmage

STAMFORD -- While the Ragin' Tigers had reason to be pleased with Friday night's scrimmage against Vernon here, it wasn't without a price, apparently.

Veteran player Steve Parker, a strong point for the Tigers both as offensive guard and outside linebacker, went down with a knee injury.

The senior had to be taken from the field on a stretcher and was in extreme pain. He was later taken to the hospital in Stamford. X-rays indicated that there were no broken bones, however, it was feared that there might be cartilage damage.

"We hope Steve is back tomorrow. We're hoping for the best, but no, it doesn't look real good right now," said Coach Dennis Tomlin. "You don't replace someone like him very easily."

Tomlin did say that Jon Traylor stepped in at linebacker after Parker went down and "played very aggressive." He also said Mike Keith did well when he spelled Parker at the guard position.

"We do have some depth at guard and linebacker, so that helps. Of course if Steve is out it will make a difference in our depth. Right now, we're just hoping for the best," the coach added.

Laufenberg makes his mark

by The Associated Press

Babe Laufenberg's statistics were strikingly similar to Joe Theismann's, but the man Laufenberg is worried about is Jay Schroeder.

Theismann is Washington's No. 1 quarterback but Laufenberg may have cut the distance between him and Schroeder when he completed 12 of 21 passes for 200 yards and two touchdowns Friday night, including a 25-yarder to Clint Didier with four seconds remaining that lifted the Redskins to a 37-36 victory over the New England Patriots and kept them unbeaten in three National Football League preseason games.

"I certainly think I helped my cause," said Laufenberg, in his second year out of Indiana, who also threw a 75-yard touchdown pass to Gary Clark. "I feel like I'm at my best when I get in a game and things go wrong. I feel I can make things happen."

"It may have made the decision easier," said Coach Joe Gibbs.

The Laufenberg-to-Didier victory pass offset a tremendous second-half effort by Steve Grogan, who came off the bench in the third quarter to direct three scoring drives for the Patriots while completing 16 of 24 passes for 180 yards and one touchdown. Grogan also scored on a 2-yard run.

In other NFL pre-season action Friday night, Detroit trimmed Cincinnati 31-17, Philadelphia edged the Los Angeles Rams 14-12 and St. Louis defeated Pittsburgh 14-6.

Eagles 14, Rams 12

Philadelphia rookie Herman Hunter returned the second-half kickoff 99 yards, the second time the Tennessee State product scored on a kickoff return. His first went for 97 yards against the New York Jets two weeks ago.

The Eagles opened the scoring with 52 seconds left in the first half on a 40-yard pass from Ron Jaworski to Tony Woodruff. Hunter then took the second-half kickoff, started down the left sideline, then cut across the field and into the clear and the Eagles led 14-0.

The Rams scored on Mike Lansford's 40-yard field goal, Charles White's 1-yard run and a safety when defensive end Booker Reese tackled Randall Cunningham, Philadelphia's rookie quarterback, in the end zone.

Cardinals 14, Steelers 6

Stump Mitchell carried eight times for 95 yards, including a 64-yard touchdown run in the first half and a 3-yard scoring plunge in the third quarter. St. Louis was aided by three Pittsburgh fumbles and an intercepted pass. Gary Anderson accounted for the Steelers' points with field goals of 40 and 41 yards.

Lions 31, Bengals 13

Detroit's Eric Hipple passed for two first-half touchdowns and ran for another to give Coach Darryl Rogers his first NFL victory. Hipple, who is battling Joe Ferguson for the Lions' quarterback job, completed 15 of 22 passes for 164 yards and ran four times for 41 yards. He started the scoring with a 5-yard run at 5:29 of the first quarter and threw a 5-yard pass to David Lewis at 10:36 to give the Lions a 14-0 lead.

Cincinnati's Larry Kinnebrew scored on a 2-yard dive at 1:53 of the second quarter but Hipple countered with a 12-yard touchdown toss to Mark Nichols at 13:37.

Nine more NFL exhibition games were scheduled Saturday, including San Diego at San Francisco, Cleveland at Buffalo, Atlanta against Green Bay at Milwaukee, Indianapolis at Denver, the New York Jets against the New York Giants, Tampa Bay at New Orleans, Seattle at Minnesota, Kansas City at Houston, and Miami at the Los Angeles Raiders.

One of the most explosive matchups figures to be Miami, last season's Super Bowl loser, against the Raiders, the Super Bowl champions of the 1983 season.

The weekend schedule will be completed Monday night, with Chicago at Dallas.

Childress apparently ready to sign contract with Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) - The agent for Houston Oilers first-round draft choice Ray Childress says he's reached a verbal agreement with the Oilers on a four-year contract that will make his client the third highest paid player in the April 30 National Football League draft.

"We've got a verbal deal and there shouldn't be too much room for mistakes," agent Joe Courrage said Friday night. "It's a good deal for Houston. Ray's going to be ready to play. He just needs a few weeks to get caught up."

Oilers officials declined comment on the negotiations but Courrage said he and Childress would be in Houston today to look over the contract and sign it.

Prior to Courrage's announcement, Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzeg said the Oilers had raised their offer.

"We increased our latest offer to help Ray achieve his objective of being the third highest paid player in the NFL draft," Herzeg said. "We thought it was time for Ray to get to camp and play football."

Childress, a defensive end from Texas A&M, will be paid about $1.85 million over the four years of his contract. At 6-feet-6, 267 pounds, he had been projected as a starter before training camp began.

Oilers Coach Hugh Campbell said it would be hard now to get Childress ready in time for the Oilers' season opener Sept. 8 against the Miami Dolphins.

"There is so much work there to be done between the defensive end and outside linebacker," Campbell said.

Richard Johnson, the Oilers' other first round draft choice, signed a four-year contract Thursday for $1.7 million.

That left Herzeg with one player left unsigned - starting fullback Larry Moriarty, who made an impromptu appearance at Friday's Oilers workout.

He chatted briefly with Herzeg about a meeting time to discuss a contract and then endured a round of good-natured ribbing from his teammates, who suggested he put on a uniform and join them in the sweltering workout.

"I want to be an Oiler bad," Moriarty said. "I want to be here Monday and I want to be in Dallas on Saturday. There's just nothing more to be said."

Moriarty, the Oilers' leading rusher last season, has no negotiating room left, however, according to Herzeg.

"There will be no negotiating," Herzeg said of an anticipated meeting with Moriarty. "Larry has been given four options from the club owner and it's up to him to respond to one of those options."

Lady Tigers grab a couple of victories in tournament

MONAHANS — Coach Vicki Nelms' Tigers put together a couple of hard-fought victories here Friday to advance in the Monahans Volleyball Tournament.

The Tigers defeated Plains 16-14, 14-16, 15-8, in the morning, then edged Alpine 15-11, 10-15, 15-13 in the afternoon.

They were to play San Angelo Central at noon Saturday. A victory then would send them to the 8 p.m. championship match. A loss would put them on the court at 6, playing for third place.

The victories were the first for Coach Nelms at Snyder and she was understandably happy to get that first win out of the way.

"Oh gosh, yeah," said the coach, whose Tigers are 2-1 now. "I was pretty excited."

Snyder was down 10-1 in the first game to Plains but came back under the consistant scoring of Karlene Thompson to win. In the three matches this season, however, the Tigers have lost the second game after winning the first.

"We're a slow starting team and for some reason we're having trouble winning the second game after winning the first. We don't always play with the same intensity," said the coach. "The key is to get our offensive plays in. If we don't run our offense, we're in trouble."

She said Snyder's reputation as a good blocking team is causing other squads to change their tactics.

"Teams know we can block so they try to dink against us and hit us with off-speed shots. Plains even tried hitting from the back row. We're going to have to do a lot of work on dinks and off-speed hits," she said.

Snyder junior varsity also won its first match here Friday, defeating Crane, 15-8, 15-8. The Cats, 2-0 for the season now, were to play Alpine at 10 Saturday morning.

Brand locks for lead at golf World Series

AKRON, Ohio (AP) - Britain's Gordon Brand Jr. scrambled to a 67 and tied Roger Maltbie for the second-round lead Friday of the $700,000 NEC World Series of Golf.

Brand, 27, a former club pro who qualified for this elite event as the European Open champion, said he hit only four fairways on the Firestone Country Club course, "and I don't have any idea how many greens I missed.

"I think I had about 26 putts," including a 3-putt bogey on the third. "If I hadn't pitched and putted very well, I'd have had a 74 or 75," he said.

But he holed from off the green for two of his four birdies, finished two trips over the 7,173 yard course in 134, six shots under par, and was tied for the lead at the tournament's halfway point.

"The course is playing about as easy as it can," said Maltbie, who was tied for the first-round lead and retained a share of the top with a 69.

Tom Kite, Fuzzy Zoeller, Calvin Peete and Billy Glasson moved to within a single shot of the lead at 135.

"It's been a nice, pleasant week for me. I've got some consistency back in my game, something that has been missing," said Kite, who has made only one bogey for the week.

He had a solid 68 but, playing with Zoeller, said he "felt like I was backing up on that back nine. Fuzzy had seven 3s on that side - amazing," Kite said.

Zoeller, who played the back nine in 31, moved up with a 67 in the mild, cloudy weather. Peete matched par 70. And Glasson, once the leader alone, shot a 66 that included 31 on the front.

"I had a little trouble coming in," he said after making bogeys on two of the last three holes. "I took the gas," he said. "I was playing like it was Sunday afternoon instead of Friday."

Hal Sutton, who birdied the last two holes, Tom Watson and defending champion Denis Watson of South Africa were at 136, placing nine players within two strokes of the lead going into the final two rounds of the chase for a $126,000 first prize.

Sutton shot 68. Tom Watson, trying to salvage something from a disappointing, non-winning season, closed with a 67.

Deadlines given to USFL teams

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) - The United States Football League lost a star player to the rival National Football League, issued two deadlines to troubled teams and failed to decide which franchises will be in the struggling circuit next season as its summer meetings ended.

USFL owners met at this seaside gambling resort for seven hours on Friday, and the most notable news was their decision to allow a wide receiver to pass through league waivers.

Anthony Carter, a star wide receiver with the Oakland Invaders last season, has already agreed to a multi-year contract with the Minnesota Vikings of the NFL.

The Invaders were willing to let him go on waivers but several USFL teams wanted his rights.

"We took up the question and agreed Carter would not be prevented from going to the NFL," said USFL Commissioner Harry Usher. "It was the best thing to do from the league point of view."

Usher had hinted after the morning session that he might announce some mergers after the afternoon sesion. The announcement never came though.

Usher said after the meeting he still hoped to have 12 teams in the league when it resumes play in the fall of 1986. He said the league did give the owners of the Portland and San Antonio franchises until about mid-October to submit letters of credit.

The league also dropped three or four charges against St. Antonio in return for the franchise's promise to comply with the league's collective bargaining agreement with the player's association.

Usher said the owners of the financially strapped Portland franchise would not be able to post a letter of credit at this point. He said the Breakers were given a period of grace to arrange additional financial backing or work on a merger.

"The grace period will last until such time as it becomes dumb or stupid to include them in a schedule," he said.

According to Usher, the owners also decided on a traditional September to January schedule in 1986. Some owners had hoped to play a November to March schedule, which would not put the league in direct competition with the NFL.

On another matter, Usher said the Denver franchise was looking at three merger possibilities and one possible transfer. He added that it was unlikely the team will play in Denver again.

Tech's Smith regains eligibility for season

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Halfback Timmy Smith has regained his eligibility and can play for Texas Tech this season, the school announced Friday.

The junior was Tech's leading rusher last year with 711 yards, but he was academically ineligible and had to pass nine hours of summer school to play this fall, head coach Jerry Moore said in a statement.

The 6-0, 203-pound Smith went through his first practice Friday afternoon.

"Timmy worked hard to regain his eligibility and that is good for him and for our program," Moore said. "However, that doesn't mean he's going to come right in here and play for us."

Smith will compete against others for playing time, he said.

In two years with the Red Raiders, Smith has rushed for 1,153 yards. He was a part-time starter last season.

Andujar chalks 20th victory

by The Associated Press

Joaquin Andujar has been called flashy, stylish, a showoff and a lot of other things. Now, he can be called a 20-game winner - again.

Andujar became the first 20-game winner in the major leagues this season Friday night by pitching the St. Louis Cardinals to a 6-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves. The right-hander, now 20-7, was the only National League pitcher to reach that mark last year when he went 20-14.

The triumph, coupled with the New York Mets' doubleheader loss to San Diego, moved the Cardinals into a one-game lead in the NL East. And Andujar said the team's success, rather than his own, was most important.

"I don't have any numbers," he said. "I just want to go to the World Series. That's my goal."

Andujar is the first NL pitcher to record consecutive 20-victory seasons since Houston's Joe Niekro in 1979 and 1980. Andujar is the first St. Louis pitcher to do it since Bob Gibson in 1969 and 1970.

"I like his style," Andujar said of Gibson. "He's a real tough guy."

In other NL games, San Diego dropped New York 6-1 and then 3-0, Los Angeles slammed Montreal 8-4, Houston beat Pittsburgh 2-0 in 10 innings, Cincinnati nipped Chicago 3-2, and San Francisco halted Philadelphia 4-1.

Andujar battled to his 20th victory, going 7 1-3 innings but giving up 12 hits. Jeff Lahti finished the game for his 15th save.

"I'm not going to say it was easy, because the game was not easy," Andujar said.

Padres 6-3, Mets 1-0

Mark Thurmond combined with two relievers on a six-hitter in the opener, and Roy Lee Jackson teamed with three pitchers to scatter five hits in the nightcap as San Diego swept in New York.

The two victories moved the Padres within 6½ games of Los Angeles in the NL West.

Reds 3, Cubs 2

Cesar Cedeno's pinch-single drove home the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning, helping reliever John Franco win his 11th straight game.

Ron Oester opened the Cincinnati ninth with a triple and Cedeno followed with his game-winning hit.

Rose went 1-for-4 and now has 4,180 hits, leaving him 12 away from breaking Ty Cobb's all-time mark of 4,191.

Five-foot-long oil slick is discovered by fishermen

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Fishermen in the Gulf have sighted more oil moving toward the Texas coast as crews finish cleaning up almost 1,100 tons of oil-stained sand after a slick struck shore last weekend.

N.R. Johnston and Steve Qualia, local sport fishermen, said Friday they saw a five-mile long, ¾-mile wide slick of oil 35 miles east of the Port Aransas jetties.

They spotted the slick Thursday afternoon while on a fishing trip, they told authorities.

"It was making a nice slick. It had a real good sheen," said Johnston, president of the Texas Championship Billfish Tournament.

The two men said the oil looked fresh.

State highway crews Thursday finished cleaning up oil-stained sand after oil struck portions of Mustang and Padre islands last weekend.

"We've been spotting this stuff offshore for about a month now, said Qualia, a board member of the annual Port Aransas billfish tourney.

The Coast Guard said it would investigate the sighting. Air reconnaissance of the Gulf of Mexico earlier this week had revealed no oil sheens, the Coast Guard said.

But the fishermen say the oil is bobbing in larger amounts than normal, and is a "nuisance."

"When these guys drag a $40 lure through some oil, it's garbage," said Kevin Kail, manager of the Deep Sea Headquarters in Port Aransas.

Johnston and Qualia said they began noticing large amounts of oil while fishing in late July about 30 miles offshore, east of Port Aransas. Since then, they have continually seen the oil.

"I have fished in the Gulf 25 years and it's been bad this year," Johnston said.

Weather postpones launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A fast-developing thunderstorm rolling over the launch area just nine minutes before scheduled liftoff forced postponement today of space shuttle Discovery's launch on a mission in which space-walking astronauts will try to "jump-start" a dead satellite.

NASA said another launch attempt will be made Sunday morning, with the launching set for 7:57 a.m. EDT.

The skies above Cape Canaveral had been clear for several hours when black thunderclouds moved in from the south.

The launch team had only a 34-minute window — from 8:38 a.m. to 9:12 a.m. EDT — to launch Discovery. Hoping the storm would clear out, the clock was counted down to the five-minute mark, where another hold was called.

The clouds were beginning to break up, but when it became clear they would not quit the area in time, launch director Bob Sieck called off the effort for the day. The launch window is determined by several factors, including the time that three communications satellites are to be deployed by the astronauts and by the position of the disabled satellite they will try to rescue.

The five astronauts had been in the shuttle cabin for more than two hours when the countdown was halted. They were to return to crew quarters to await another try Sunday.

3 grass fires reported Friday

Three grass fires prompted runs by units of the Snyder Fire Department Friday.

Late Friday night, units doused a grass fire near Fluvanna. Earlier Friday, at 11:08 a.m. and 7:16 p.m., other such fires produced runs at Ave. L and Texas and two miles north of Union respectively.

Four-year-old in minor mishap

A four-year-old Snyder girl received what were called minor injuries Friday after she was struck by a vehicle traveling in front of her residence.

Reports indicate the youngster, identified as Kelga Stagner of 612 29th St., was later taken by private vehicle for a medical examination.

She did not require hospitalization, however, and records with Codgell Memorial Hospital's emergency room indicate she was not treated there.

The driver of the vehicle, a 1980 Mercury, was Bobby Ray Thompson, 3100 Ave. K.

Noted apartheid opponents arrested

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said today they had seized and imprisoned 18 leading opponents of apartheid, while one of the country's most influential voices against white rule appeared to have gone into hiding.

The detainees included Anglican Rev. Syd Lockett, director of the church's board of social responsibility, and physician Dr. Farouk Meer, acting president of the multi-racial United Democratic Front anti-apartheid coalition.

Meer was nabbed by security police in a Durban drug store, friends said. Lockett was taken in Cape Town near his home.

The security police began the roundups after the Rev. Allan Boesak, a mixed-race clergyman, announced Friday morning that he planned a march next Wednesday to the gates of Pollsmoor Prison, to demand freedom for Nelson Mandela.

Mandela, considered the leader of South Africa's blacks, has been imprisoned for life since a 1964 conviction for planning sabotage.

Essa Moosa, Boesak's attorney, said Boesak backed out of a scheduled address Friday night and that the Dutch Reformed Church minister and his family were unreachable.

Moosa said he did not know where to contact Boesak, but the Cape Town lawyer said he did not believe Boesak, president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, had been arrested.

White Buffalo events expanded

In-service activities will continue through Friday. Next Labor Day Monday, Sept. 2, will be a holiday for teachers with the first day of classes due the following Tuesday, Sept. 3.

Income Eligibility Guidelines for free and reduced-price meals must be provided to the media for the public release.

Snyder announces criteria for free and reduced prices

The Snyder Independent School district has announced its policy for free and reduced price meals for children unable to pay for meals served on the National School Lunch Program.

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free and reduced price meals.

Application forms will be available for all children when they or their parents register for school. Additional copies are available in the office of the principal of each school. The information provided on the applications is confidential and will only be used for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year.

In certain cases foster children are eligible for these benefits regardless of household income. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for meals, the school which the children will be attend should be contacted.

In operation of child feeding programs, no child will be discrimminated against because of race, sex, color, national origin, age or handicap.

Under the provisions of the policy, each school principal will review the applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissastified with the ruling of the official, he may make a request either orally or in writing to Jack Gorman, assistant superintendent, School Administration Office, 2901 37th St., telephone 573-5401 for a hearing to appeal the decision. The policy contains an outline of the hearing procedure.

Each school and the central office has a copy of the complete policy which may be reviewed by an interested party.

Local school officials have adopted the family size and income criteria for determining eligibility as shown in the accompanying chart.

Judge upholds UPS plan; fight not over

AUSTIN (AP) — The United Parcel Service has scored another victory in its fight to make deliveries in Texas, but company officials say the battle is not over.

State District Judge Joe Dibrell of Austin upheld a Texas Railroad Commission order Friday allowing UPS to make deliveries within Texas. The company long has provided interstate service, but has been barred from picking up and delivering the same package within Texas.

A 1931 state law said deliveries could only be made on scheduled routes. UPS provides on-demand, non-scheduled service.

In January, after the Texas Supreme Court had ordered the commission to conduct a full hearing on the UPS request, the three-member panel said the company had shown "that the services of existing carriers were inadequate."

Several Texas-based delivery companies challenged that decision in court. But Dibrell said in an opinion that "United Parcel Service proved a prima facie case that the public convenience will be promoted and that a public necessity exists for the service proposed by United Parcel Service."

Dibrell also said UPS "is able to meet the public convenience and necessity and that a grant of authority will promote the public convenience and necessity."

He overruled the Texas companies' claim that the Railroad Commission did not have jurisdiction to grant the UPS application.

Alarm grows with number of confirmed cases of AIDS

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The deadly disease AIDS, practically unheard of in Mexico two years ago, has prompted popular alarm and an explosion of publicity as the number of confirmed cases continues to grow.

Eight people have died in Mexico of acquired immune deficiency syndrome and there are 63 known victims listed by public hospitals, the federal Health Department said in a report this week. It said 22 of the cases were diagnosed from January through July of this year.

However, researchers say the isolation of the country's rural regions make it impossible to establish the actual number of AIDS victims and deaths.

This week a major Mexico City newspaper, El Universal, devoted two pages of its Sunday edition to the issue, illustrated on the front page by a picture of American actor and AIDS victim Rock Hudson.

Since then public dermatology clinics have been swamped by people worried that their skin ailments signal the onset of AIDS, said Dr. Romulo Bitar, a specialist at the Health Department's General Hospital of Mexico.

This week nearly every newspaper in the capital ciuy published at least one article a day on the disease. Most are about AIDS itself, and the new attention among public health officials to screening blood donors.

Other stories reported on a 24-year-old woman in Tijuana who died of AIDS minutes after giving birth to a stillborn, premature baby. Doctors said she had been suffering from AIDS for five months, since receiving a blood transfusion at a Los Angeles hospital. The hospital was not identified.

In Mexico City, a 36-year-old architect was found hanged in his room in the AIDS ward of the National Nutrition Institute hospital, where 16 victims were being treated. Much of Mexico's AIDS research is conducted at the center. Friends said the architect, who was hospitalized for the second time with the disease, had been depressed after receiving a poor diagnosis.

HYPERACTIVE CHILDREN

"Our observations at the NY Institute for Child Development indict sugar as a critical culprit in producing symptoms of hyperactivity and learning disorders," states their new book."Treating your Hyperactive and Learning Disabled Child", published by Anchor Press, NY. "The large intake of sugar in the U.S. is a hazard...diets high in sweets-sodas, jellies, flavored fruit punch and gelatins, cupcakes-leave the child undernourished."

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

Consider Nancy walking slowly through her new home.

The contents of a mountain of moving boxes have found a niche in various closets. Pictures have been hung and her floors gleam.

With nothing left to do, she pours a cup of coffee and ponders, "My possessions have a place, but what about me? We should never have moved to this place at all!"

In an age in which one out of every five families in this country moves at least once during the year, scenes similar to this one are commonplace as displaced families make the adjustment to new surroundings.

In Scurry County, one group is trying to help ease that adjustment for newcomers to the community. Last fall, Chris Burns, Mary Jacobi, Tonya Canada and Janice Mitchell decided to "get together because we wanted to do things together." The group became the Newcomers' Club as the women began to reach out to others.

Newcomers themselves, the women believe that "it's nice to be with people who are in the same boat."

A study by Robert S. Weiss of the psychiatry department of the Harvard Medical School indicated that for emotional stability, people need to establish relationships with other persons.

Part of the sense of well-being comes by knowing someone will be there to give assistance if needed. We need to develop intimate friendships to share our deepest confidences. Our self-worth is enhanced by friends who respect us; and we need to know that others share our social concerns.

In their book, "Did Somebody Pack the Baby?" Barbara Friedrich and Sally Hultstrand note, "These are all needs that are frustrated when we move until we are able to locate new friends who will fill the void."

Women, especially, feel the isolation that a move can bring, particularly those who are not employed outside the home. Those women face the problem of earning their "community credentials" all over again. People in their new area are not aware of their strengths, their resources or their knowledge. If they want to contribute to the community, they must tow the fine line between being too pushy and too reserved.

Last month, members of the Newcomers' Club changed the name to New Friends to reflect the group's philosophy. "Some people feel so isolated. The husbands are out doing their jobs and the women are at home feeling lonely. They need new friends," added Gingah Williamson.

Originally from South Carolina, Chris Burns and her husband John came to Snyder last August. "Any time you move into a new town, you're shy, ill at ease. You don't know what's available. (Through the group) we've learned who the doctors are; what to do in Snyder; where to shop — things like that."

Gingah, whose husband Ralph is the local supervisor with Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, said that she was 26 years old before she moved from her hometown. Even though she has always enjoyed moving ("I look at it as a new adventure."), she believes that emotional risks are still involved.

Because her children had no playmates when the family moved to Snyder last August, Gingah drove around the neighborhood looking for other children.

Realizing that some women tend to be more shy and reserved, Mary Jacobi added, "We changed the name because we really aren't a club and because we didn't want to give people the impression that there are dues or rules or that we are cliqueish." Mary was raised in Louisville, Ky. An administrative assistant with Chevron, her husband Bill grew up in Palmyra, Ind.

Friedrich and Hultstrand added, "There seems to be a growing reluctance on the part of many an established community or neighborhood to welcome newcomers in the more 'traditional' ways. Perhaps it's because we newcomers are not the novelty we once were. If you move into a house that has changed hands several times in recent years, the other neighbors will be inclined to leave you alone. I suppose they feel that it won't be long until you'll be gone too, so it's not worth the effort of getting to know you. Whatever the reason, it's been a long time since I've been welcomed with so much as a plate of cookies on moving day or thereafter."

Maybe a newcomer to Snyder will miss a plate of cookies, but New Friends are hoping to offer an atmosphere in which they can make those new and lasting friendships.

The group meets the last Tuesday of each month for coffee. Activities often include touring city sites such as the Scurry County Museum. Working women are invited to join New Friends for special features such as picnics and husband-wife dinners. A shopping trip to Lubbock is also being planned.

William Hill was killed in 1952 in an attempt to go over Niagara Falls in a craft made of rubber tubes.

Take any medication with plenty of water, and if a dose is prescribed for bedtime, take it at least one half-hour before you retire, says Family Circle magazine. Otherwise, you run the risk of esophagitis, an inflammation of the esophagus, the passageway from the mouth to the stomach. Esophagitis can produce painful swallowing and chest pain that can last from several days to several weeks. Among those especially susceptible to esophagitis, it says, are active teenagers who tend not to wash down medication. At risk also are older people whose slower esophagus contractions tend to hold medication longer in the passageway.

It's not a bad idea to think of the bridge hand that you're playing as though it were a crossword puzzle.

After the king and ace of spades and East's ruff of the third spade, East played back the 10 of diamonds. It seemed as though the contract depended upon the finesse against the heart king, but declarer first played the king of clubs from dummy. East obligingly put on the ace, and declarer ruffed. If East held the club ace, where was the high-card point count for West to have opened the bidding? South had the answer. He banged down the heart ace, pickling the singleton king and making his contract.

Was there anything the defenders could do? If East had the power of clairvoyance, he would know that South was void in the club suit and fishing for the location of the club ace. All East had to do was casually play low on the club king. Declarer would ruff, get back to dummy by trumping a diamond and take the losing heart finesse. If you find the East that made that play, send me his name. I'll give him some free publicity.

Minerals Needed in Diet

In addition to the multitude of vitamin supplements on the market, health-conscious consumers are also being urged to take minerals. But do we need to be concerned about out intake of minerals?

Minerals are essential for good health and growth. It's also important that people get their minerals in just the right amounts.

Some minerals, such as calcium, phosphorus, sodium, chloride, potassium, magnesium and sulfur, are needed in relatively large amounts. In this case, a "large" amount ranges from milligrams to one gram.

Other minerals, called "trace minerals," are needed in small amounts. Iron, manganese, copper, iodine, zinc, cobalt, flourine and selenium are included in trace minerals.

Minerals like lead, mercury and cadmium are actually harmful and can cause poisoning.

Other minerals can cause ill effects if you take as little as twice as much of the amount required for good health. Taking too much of one essential mineral may upset the balance and function of other minerals in the body.

Excess mineral intake can reduce your ability to perform physical tasks and can contribute to health problems such as anemia, bone demineralization and breakage, neurological disease and fetal abnormalities. The risks are greatest for the very young, pregnant or lactating women, the elderly and those with inadequate diet or chronic disease.

Since minerals, like vitamins, are widely distributed in foods, healthy people can get what they need by eating a varied diet that includes foods from all of the basic food groups.

Since minerals can be stored in the body and become toxic if too much accumulates, taking mineral supplements can be risky. If you choose to take mineral supplements, take them under the supervision of a physician, and don't use them in amounts in excess of what the body needs.

Scurry Library News and Views

Scurry County Library staff notes that local participation this year in the Awesome Adventure Summer Reading Program has been very good. The program is a joint effort of the county library and the Texas State Library.

The number of books read by participating students at both West Elementary and North Elementary was so close that head librarian Janice Mitchell has declared both schools winners.

All children from those two schools who completed at least 15 books and received a certificate may pick up their prize at 10:30 a.m. Thursday. Those unable to attend that day may pick up their prize later.

The library registered 432 children with 191 of those reading the required 15 books for a certificate. The contest determined which school would have the most books read during the summer. Books were added to the school totals only in increments of 15. Children were to read those books in their reading level to keep the contest fair with many able to complete more than the minimum requirement.

The library staff would like to thank teachers, school librarians and, most of all, the parents for their support to the program and for encouraging their children to read.

Children receiving certificates last week included Jonathan Lemons of North Elementary; Jon Holley, Daniel Holley and Jay Holley of Northeast Elementary; James Bishop, Marc Bishop and Libby Bishop of Stanfield Elementary; Jennifer Beard, Jeremy Beard, Chris Gayle, Julie Zeck, Cara Glassock, Laura Greene and Sheila Wiseman of West Elementary; and John Nalley, nonaffiliated.

You Know You're Going to Have a Good Year Ranching When

You can't see the prickly pear in you pastures for the grass.

You haven't been able to shear sheep for four months because of rain.

Spring wildflowers appear which haven't been seen since your grandmother was a child.

You bog down on the way to feed the chickens.

Two healthy lambs are following every ewe.

Calves are bigger than their mamas at seven months.

You get 200 bales per acre cutting hay on buffalo and curly mesquite grass.

You get an inch of rain the day before you think you really need it.

Mesquite trees start dying of root rot.

The County Commissioner fixes your road.

You Know You're Going to Have a Bad Year Ranching When

Your registered Herefords start dropping black baldy calves.

Your sheep dog had puppies the day before you start shearing.

Thirteen windmills break down on the same day and you only have 12.

Rattlesnakes keep the wife out of the garden all summer.

A dust storm blows up from two directions in one day.

It hails on the third setting of tomato plants without getting the ground wet.

Your cattle sprayer freezes and bursts the pump the last day of April.

Your hunters sue for damages from prickly pear overgrowing their hunting stands.

You ask the government for drought hay to feed your sheep and they airdrop six pair of coyotes.

You have buzzards roosting at midday on your goat pens.

You get your Easter lambs to market in time for the Fourth of July.

You sell your mohair to an Iranian rug dealer for $20 a pound and the check bounces.

BEAUTY BRIEFS

Facial exercise

Although some exercise teachers believe that routines for exercising facial muscles can help retard signs of aging, there's no proof that it works.

Of all body muscles, facial ones probably get the most natural exercise, through talking and eating, for example. Exercising facial muscles doesn't prevent lines or sagging.

The skin isn't supported by muscles but by its own internal system of fibers. To stave off early aging, avoid such bad habits as frowning and squinting. These soon produce irreversible lines.

With whole-wheat flour...

Fresh fruit is key to healthy bread

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Fresh fruits, such as apples and bananas, combine with whole-wheat flour and lower cholesterol ingredients to make healthful breads. What is more, they taste good. A slice of an apple ring or banana-orange bread will go well with summer grilled foods and salads.

WHOLESOME BREAD — Wholesome banana-orange bread fit into summer eating plans. (NEA Photo)

WALNUT-APPLE RING

- 1 1/2 cups whole-wheat flour (unsifted)
- 1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour (unsifted)
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 3/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 2/3 cup safflower oil
- 1 2/3 cups firmly packed light brown sugar, divided
- 6 egg whites or 4 whole eggs
- 1/4 cup milk
- 2 1/4 teaspoons pure vanilla extract
- 1 1/2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon ground allspice
- 4 cups diced tart apples (un-pealed)
- 1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts, divided

Glaze (optional)

- 1 tablespoon milk, divided
- 1/2 cup confectioners' sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour a 10-inch tube pan; set aside.

In a large bowl, combine whole-wheat and all-purpose flours, baking powder, salt and baking soda; set aside. In a large mixing bowl of an electric mixer, beat safflower oil and 1 1/3 cups of the brown sugar until combined. Gradually beat in egg whites until blended. Mix in milk and vanilla; beat until sugar is dissolved, about 2 minutes. Gradually mix in reserved flour mixture, blending just until combined.

In a medium bowl, combine remaining 1/3 cup brown sugar with cinnamon and allspice. Add apples and 1/2 cup of the walnuts; mix well. Stir into batter. Spoon into prepared pan. Sprinkle the top of batter with remaining 1/2 cup walnuts.

Bake until a cake tester inserted into center comes out clean, about 1 hour and 15 minutes. Let cake cool in pan for about 30 minutes. Loosen edges with a spatula and turn out onto a serving plate. Serve warm.

If desired, dribble with a glaze prepared by heating in a small saucepan 1 tablespoon milk until hot. In a small bowl combine confectioners' sugar with 1 1/2 teaspoons of the hot milk and vanilla. Gradually stir in more hot milk until mixture is the consistency of a thick white sauce.

Spoon glaze over cake. Wrap cake and store in refrigerator.

This kitchen-tested recipe makes one 10-inch ring.

BANANA-ORANGE BREAD

- 1 1/4 cups whole-wheat flour (unsifted)
- 1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour (unsifted)
- 2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1 cup mashed ripe bananas
- 3/4 cup honey
- 2 tablespoons safflower oil
- 2 egg whites or 1 whole egg
- 3/4 teaspoon grated orange peel

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Grease a 9-inch-by-5-inch-by-3-inch loaf pan; set aside. In a medium bowl, combine whole-wheat and all-purpose flours, baking powder, baking soda and nutmeg; set aside.

In another bowl, combine bananas, honey, safflower oil, egg whites and orange peel. Add flour mixture to banana mixture; mix just until combined. Spoon into prepared pan. Bake until a cake tester inserted into center comes out clean, about 1 hour.

Let stand in pan for 10 minutes. Loosen edges with a spatula and turn onto a wire rack to cool. Serve warm, garnished, if desired, with orange slices topped with melted orange marmalade or apricot jam. Wrap loaf and store in refrigerator.

This kitchen-tested recipe makes one 9-inch-by-5-inch-by-3-inch loaf.

Buddhism revival is allowed

LHASA, Tibet (AP) — Street vendors camped around Lhasa's Golden Jokhang Temple sell old photographs of the exiled god-king, the Dalai Lama. Pilgrims with yak butter offerings chant sutras and swing prayer wheels at reopened shrines.

The former hermit kingdom of Tibet is undergoing a religious revival after years of fanatical suppression of Buddhism under the Chinese Communists, who have occupied the vast plateau for three decades as self-proclaimed liberators.

Bombed temples, desecrated icons and painted slogans exalting the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung still pockmark the valleys and stark peaks of this Himalayan fortress in central Asia, which is the size of western Europe but inhabited by less than 2 million people.

The ruins are reminders of Peking's attempts to crush Tibetan culture and bury a feudal theocracy that ruled the mystical land for centuries, resisting Chinese domination and later appealing vainly for outside help. By some estimates, hundreds of thousands of Tibetans died in the struggle.

The exiled Dalai Lama, in an article for the New York Times op-ed page on Aug. 9, wrote that "at least 1.2 million have died as a direct result of the (Chinese) occupation."

The Dalai Lama fled Lhasa on March 17, 1959, as Chinese troops encircled Norbulingka Jewel Park, his summer palace, and later reduced it to rubble. But from his exile home in Dharamsala, India, the 49-year-old spiritual leader of Tibet remains a powerful force among his compatriots. Nearly 100,000 fled with him abroad.

"Almost all of Tibet's great wealth, — especially the priceless religious statues, images, paintings and icons that adorned our thousands of monasteries and temples — has been plundered and taken to China," the god-king wrote in the dispatch from Dharamsala.

But after 35 years of what the Chinese now call a mistaken approach, they say they are funneling $1.4 billion into restoring temples and building roads, schools and tourist hotels in the poorest region under their control.

"The policy in Tibet has become more open," says Tibet's Communist Party secretary, Wu Jinghua. "It cannot go backward. Tibet is a mysterious place and we want to open it up. We welcome all our friends in the world to come and have a look."

The Communists only in recent years have let a trickle of foreigners tour the "roof of the world," a land of dizzying elevation and oxygen-thin air.

At 12,210 feet, Lhasa is among the world's highest cities, a mix of decayed Chinese concrete and centuries-old buildings of stone and dried earth, ringed by craggy, treeless snowcapped peaks and verdant fields of barley.

Western journalists who visited three years ago were shocked by evidence of religious oppression, bitter poverty and Tibetan hostility toward the Chinese. Buddhist rituals, the core of Tibetan life, were restricted and police kept visitors inside Lhasa.

The government suspended press tours thereafter, but recently allowed groups of reporters to travel overland nearly 800 miles from Lhasa through grasslands and glacial passes to the towns of Gyantse, Xigaze and the Nepal border.

Private herds of black, shaggy yaks and nimble goats graze by villages of dried-mud huts adorned with multicolored "wind horses," or prayer flags. Brick-like dried animal manure, which is used for fuel, is stacked in rows.

"Hello, bye-bye," shout ragged but friendly children in quickly learned English, their faces caked with mucus and mud from never bathing.

Once banned from doing business, vendors clog Lhasa's smelly packed-earth alleys and the Parkhor, a circular road outside the seventh century Jokhang, Tibet's holiest shrine.

They offer bound sutras, incense, prayer wheels, scarves, bracelets, boots, bootlegged tapes of Taiwanese pop star Teresa Teng, bottles of barley liquor and makeup imported from Nepal.

State stores are stocked with TV sets, stereo tape players and Japanese video systems for up to $7,700 dollars, equivalent to the combined annual income of 70 Tibetans.

Asked who can afford such luxuries, a clerk at one store said with a smile, "Some of us pool our savings."

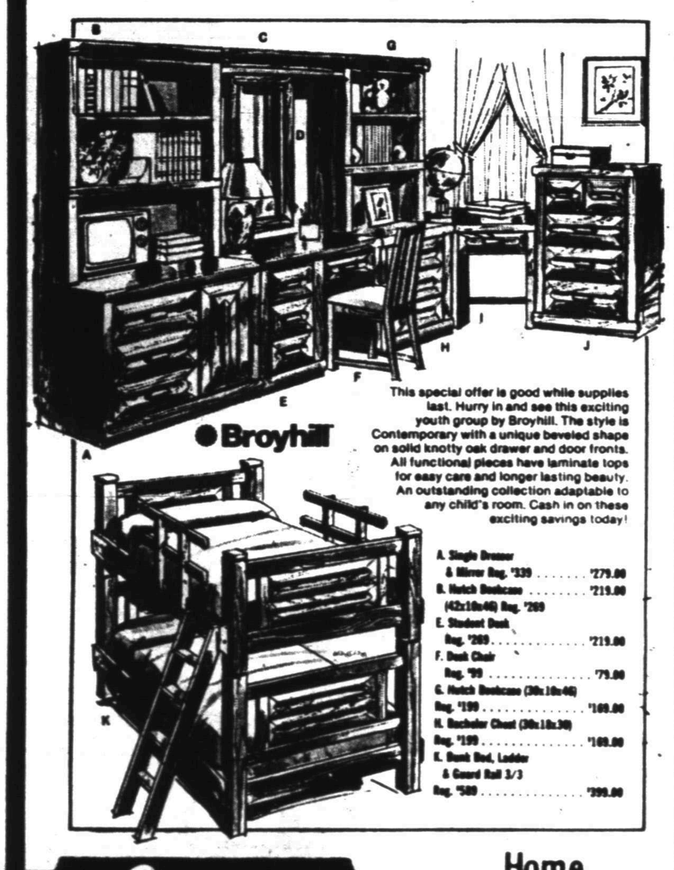

There are at least two public video parlors among Lhasa's ancient facades. One chalk marquee advertised a Chinese romance from Hong Kong.

Next to its shelves of political works, the official Xinhua bookstore has a trinkets counter featuring framed photographs of American teen star Brooke Shields in a scanty outfit from the movie "Blue Lagoon."

Stop in and meet Art and Helen Feinsod and be enchanted by their family of gnomes, created by Tom Clark of Cairn Studio in North Carolina. Each is an individual and each has a story. If you've never had the good fortune to see a gnome there's no better time or place. Ask about the Gnome book, and about their investment value as collector items. You're going to fall in love!

Some of our very best friends are Gnomes!

Helen and Art Feinsod announce the grand opening of their new gift shop at the Purples Sage Motel. "We have a room full of happy faces here," says Helen, speaking of the large collection of Gnomes and other Woodspirits which are the gift shop's special feature. "Any Gnome will make you happy and the more you're around them the more you'll love them!

These creations, from Tom Clark of Cairn Studio in North Carolina depict facial expressions which are totally unique and prompt such responses as "I know someone who looks like that!"

The faces on these friendly Gnomes, Woodspirits and Special Characters have come from many sources. The painting on the cover of the book of Gnomes was the inspiration for the "Forest Gnome" which Tom created in 1978. Since that time he has used books on photography, mountaineers, coal miners, fishermen and folk tales as well as individual sittings from real life characters.

Tom does his original art work in soft clay. From this clay figure a mold is made. Upon completion of the molding process the clay original is destroyed when it is actually dug from the mold itself. Because the original creation is destroyed and because each mold is limited to approximately 50 reproductions, each statue in the collection is in essence one piece of a limited edition of 50 castings. Tom's second editions are created by "resculpting" a reproduction of one of his original works. During this "resculpting," various modifications are made and the next edition is born. These modifications vary from adding new leaves or acorns, to totally changing the characters' facial features and expression.

Each piece of the collection is individually hand cast from an original with a special blend of resins, crushed pecan shells and wood chips. The pieces, all numbered according to their appropriate edition, are then hand painted, stained and hand laquered.

Upon purchase, each piece is registered and a certificate of ownership is then mailed from the studio to the new owner.

Because of the very limited nature of Tom Clark's artworks the Cairn Studio has created the secondary market, which will be the only means available for other interested collectors to purchase the statues you own, should you be interested in selling. This secondary market will be of paramount importance in establishing the market value of your collection.

With the Gnomes and Woodspirits the Purple Sage Gift shop has clowns, ducks and statues made by other Cairn Studio Artist. They also have wildflower seed post cards as well as regular post cards.

Dear Abby

Take a Chance on Happiness; It May Not Come Back Again

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I just returned from the most wonderful experience we ever had. First we flew to Hawaii, then to Tokyo, Hong Kong and to the People's Republic of China. We're recently retired and aren't rich by any means, but we wouldn't have traded this trip for a million dollars—if we had it.

Why am I telling you this? To say "thank you" for the enclosed article my wife had clipped from the Los Angeles Times (Jan. 10, 1982). After reading it, she made me promise that when I retire, we'd take a fabulous trip. And we did.

Please run it again, Abby. I'm sure many other couples could benefit from it as we did.

GRATEFUL IN LA MIRADA, CALIF.

DEAR GRATEFUL: Here's the piece, and a follow-up letter. I hope they do for others what they did for you:

DEAR ABBY: I work for a travel agency and love it, but the one aspect of my job that saddens me is seeing so many widows booking tours, hoping to meet others in the same circumstances.

The most common remark I hear is, "How I wish my dear departed husband could have lived to take this trip with me! He worked so hard all his life, and just when he could have relaxed and enjoyed life, he died."

So Abby, tell your readers not to put off those vacation trips too long. Take a trip, and make some memories—together.

MEMORY MAKER
IN MILWAUKEE

DEAR MEMORY MAKER: Thanks for a timely reminder that it's always later than we think.

Women, urge your men to enjoy the fruits of their labor now, and if they resist, tell 'em it's no fun for a widow to see the world on her husband's insurance money.

DEAR ABBY: Your readers might appreciate a follow-up story on the above article that appeared in our newspaper several years ago. Hazel, my wife of 42 years, cut it out and showed it to me. Because it made sense to us, we took a long-dreamed-of Caribbean cruise—something we always wanted to do, but never found the time.

Abby, we had the time of our lives! And I'm glad we went, because Hazel's health began to fail last year, and after a long illness, a merciful Lord took my beloved wife home to her eternal rest. I found this clipping in her Bible. Thanks for the memories, Abby.

DEAR ABBY: I am going through a paternity suit with this girl I still have some very strong feelings for. I really was in love with her, but we had a falling out and I haven't spoken to her in six years.

The nearer the court date comes, the more I want to call her up and talk to her to see if there is any way we can get together and work things out.

I'm afraid if I call her, she could get me for harassment. I would really appreciate your advice.

STRONG FEELINGS

DEAR FEELINGS: Ask your lawyer if one phone call would be considered "harassment." In the meantime, I see no harm in writing her a letter, expressing your feelings.

Trick shop is jokers' haven

By Andy Oakley
Arlington Heights Daily Herald

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP) — Phil Johnson pointed to a counter on the other side of his store.

"Will you put this over there for me?" he asked a young girl.

Johnson began to hand a yellow, plastic mustard container to her. When the unsuspecting girl reached for it, a mustardcolored substance squirted out, prompting her to screech and jump back a couple feet.

"Oh, I'm sorry," Johnson said. "Did I get any on you?"

But there was no need for the young shopper to worry. The substance wasn't mustard as she originally thought. Johnson tucked a yellow string back into the container, another practical joke successfully completed.

A strange way to treat a customer? Not if you're the owner of P.J.'s Trick Shop at Town and Country Mall.

But Phil Johnson isn't always all fun and games.

"I never considered myself a prankster," he said. "The only thing I do is squirt the mustard or ketchup at them."

But for anyone looking for a good prank — or for a person in search of a simple novelty item — P.J.'s Trick Shop is a joker's favorite hangout.

Johnson, who has been in business in Chicago's northwest suburbs for more than 14 years, splits his business into sections: T-shirts; practical jokes; magic; rock 'n' roll; Halloween; posters; adults-only items; and joke newspaper headlines.

Many of the T-shirts on display aren't ordinary, run-of-the mill products. A "hatchet," for instance, sticks to the front of one shirt, apparently buried in the chest as red "blood" surrounds a "wound."

"Anything I have in here isn't needed," Johnson said. "No one needs it. Who needs itching powder? ... But it's fun. You get kids from 6 years old up to 96 years old. The biggest surprise I've found is that Halloween is for adults. The adults have most of the Halloween parties."

Johnson opened his first store in 1967 in the south Chicago suburb of Markham. He eventually expanded and moved his store to Randhurst Shopping Center in 1971.

Literature is translated into Cajun French

VILLE PLATTE, La. (AP) — Anonymous and determined, a backwoods scholar has translated parts of Chaucer, Shakespeare, T.S. Eliot and several lesser-known poets, as well as written a primer — all in Cajun French.

The poet has refused to sign his name to his work. All he wants, he has written, is to remind residents of this part of central Louisiana of their heritage.

This is Evangeline Parish, an area of flat swampland, crawfish ponds and rice fields, named after the poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Most of the 33,000 residents are descendents of French Canadians, who fled the North when the English took over in the 18th century. Many still speak a variant of French — Cajun, derived from the word "Acadia," the region where many of the settlers came from.

To anyone who speaks the French of modern-day France, Cajun is almost incomprehensible. It has developed into a distinct dialect, not English and not quite French.

And in these parts it is still very much alive. Vastly outnumbered, separated from their roots in Canada and France by thousands of miles and two centuries, the Cajuns have struggled to keep their identity.

So when the first bundle of translated literary classics arrived on the doorstep of radio station KVPI — which broadcasts much of its programming in Cajun — announcers were delighted.

"It came out of nowhere," said Jaycee Fontenot. "We don't know who this guy is, but he must be some sort of genius."

As with all subsequent manuscripts from the mysterious scholar, the work was signed "ain Cadjein" — according to the translator's own rules, "a (male) Cajun."

Ten years later, the translations keep arriving at the station. The station's employees carefully gather the hundreds of neatly hand-written pages and bind them into notebooks.

A note in the latest drop reads: "No special favors to ask; I just like to get people thinking from time to time about what they're giving up."

"Correct" Cajun spelling and grammar is up to the linguistic pioneer, and has become a subject of some controversy throughout Louisiana's Acadia.

Purists, like the Council for the Development of French in Louisiana, have long advocated classic French rules and helped overcome a ban against speaking French in the schools.

As boxers go to the mountain to work the fat from their body, Ernest Hemingway once wrote, so do people find themselves in need of working the fat from their soul.

It's an image we've always favored, and with the annual summer vacation on its way, we adopted it as a theme for those seven days "away."

This without having the slighest idea what we were talking about — but it somehow sounded right. At least more original than recharging the old batteries or slowing down to smell the roses.

We suspect what most folks seek with a vacation is some kind of rejuvenation process. An experience from which we somehow expect to come back feeling "better" about something. A changed outlook and an improved state.

But to explain further, whatever it is to work the fat from the soul, we didn't manage it. Instead, like most folks, we and the family arrived back from the supposed rest and relaxation feeling flatter than a flitter.

For vacations — at least the successful ones — often prove too much good medicine. We're supposed to say, "Boy home sure looked good," when in truth the highway, strange 7 to 11 stores, the amazing fact that landscapes change before your eyes and the crazy affection you develop for cramped vehicle interiors had not begun to lose their appeal.

The motion of travel still produced a pleasurable sense and the smell of travel — for some reason characterized by the disinfectant fragrance of endless service station restrooms — remained if not sweet, at least pleasant.

People say, "I was ready to be back home." We heard people say in school, "I was ready for summer to be over."

Our only reply — Bullfeathers!

We've had as many belly aches as the next guy, the direct result of too much of life's sweets. But it occurs to us a diet can also be too lean.

Like gas through a carburetor, when the mixture ain't right, the car, she don't run so good.

We find ourselves still in need of a scratch for that old itch. And seven days on the road just made us want seven more.

And seven more would likely have only found us only wanting seven times seven.

There must be an end to this mathematical formula, as their is an end to all highways.

Acknowledging this — and assuming a perfect world of paychecks that continue to roll in minus the requirement of work produced — we find ourselves in a mood to track the end of both.

So rather than working fat from the soul, perhaps we found it in need of another nourishment. That required additive called change.

A home away from home

By Don Graff

Should the Philippines blow — and even in Washington they are reluctantly coming to think that it may come to that — the country's presidential couple should have no difficulty settling in at a suitable address in exile.

A good bet would be 13 East 66th Street, New York, NY 10021.

Imelda Marcos, the sleek and scheming wife of President Ferdinand Marcos, owns the six-story town house there, according to an impeachment motion against her husband in the Philippine National Assembly.

The motion charged Marcos with taking unconstitutional advantage of his office and powers to enrich himself, his family and close associates at the expense of the Philippine people.

It failed to pass, to no one's surprise since Marcos's ruling New Society Movement has a 2-to-1 hammerlock on the 183-member assembly. But it was a shrewd move by the opposition, focusing public attention on the corruption that pervades his 20-year-old regime and is feeding a rapidly expanding communist rebellion.

Marcos himself, refusing to relax political restraints or clean up his own house, is widely regarded as the rebellion's greatest asset — not only by the domestic political opposition and his increasingly alarmed mentors in Washington, but by the rebels themselves, the Maoist-inspired New People's Army. As a high-profile target, he could not be easily replaced should he be removed or die. (Marcos suffers from an undefined ailment, believed to be kidney disease.)

His regime is fast losing all public credibility. It is openly looting the economy and is apparently incapable of responding to the spreading guerrilla war except by military repression, which only drives more of the back-country population into the rebel ranks.

Human rights abuses have drawn complaint from the American Bar Association, not particularly noted as a champion of liberal causes at home or abroad. But the ABA has protested the systematic disappearance and killing of Philippine attorneys courageous enough to take the cases of Marcos's political opponents.

The administration, concerned about big U.S. bases at Subic Bay and Clark Air Force Base, if nothing else, and American business interests, with $1 billion of Philippine investments at stake, have been exercising their influence on behalf of reforms quietly but ever more urgently.

To no apparent effect as yet on Marcos. But that doesn't mean some sort of message isn't getting through.

The house on 66th Street isn't the only place First Lady Imelda has to call her own. The impeachment papers also credited her with several large office buildings in Manhattan, a mansion in London and an estate in Italy.

Nor is she the only one close to the president to be dabbling in foreign investments. Several Cabinet members, the head of the national airline and a number of businessmen, longtime beneficiaries of Marcos' "crony capitalism," are reported to be doing very well.

According to a recent investigative report in the San Jose, Calif., Mercury News, total foreign holdings of Marcos and company may be on the order of $100 million. If — or, more likely, when — worse comes to worst, no one need worry about where to go or what to live on.

Meanwhile, the looted Philippine economy is virtually bankrupt, another basket case for the anything but painless remedies of the International Monetary Fund. That always requires belt-tightening from those whose stomachs have already shrunk.

The Philippines would appear to be as ripe as any country in sight for a communist takeover. And Mr. and Mrs. Marcos, currently of Manila but perhaps soon to be of East 66th Street, would appear to be doing their damndest to ensure that it happens.

Never accuse them, however, of not being prepared.

SDN Week in Review

MONDAY
August 19

With the start of public school classes just weeks away, back-to-school activity began Monday in Snyder.

Snyder merchants' traditional back-to-school sales began early in the week and college staffers at Western Texas College began in-service Monday.

Although public school administrators have been on the job since Aug. 5, public school classes in all Scurry County schools and in Borden County won't begin until Sept. 3.

Jury selection in the murder trial of 30-year-old Bharat N. Bhakta was concluded Monday in 132nd District Court.

He is accused of killing his 25-year-old wife Kumud on April 25.

Charlie Yoast, former Scurry County commissioner and assistant coliseum manager for the past three years, was named the new coliseum manager Monday.

The decision came shortly after noon following an hour-long executive session in which the court interviewed four finalists for the position.

Twenty three staffers and one board member at Western Texas College were presented service awards Monday during the annual faculty and staff dinner.

Guest speaker for the event was Dr. Edward O. Daniel, vice president for investments with Prudential Bache Inc. of Fort Worth.

TUESDAY
August 20

The recently completed 10th annual AJRA National Finals Rodeo was updated for chamber members Tuesday, with the AJRA to return to Snyder again in 1986 under a somewhat revised contract obligation.

The major change as outlined Tuesday sees the AJRA agreeing to drop a "hold harmless" clause in the contract, an item which burdened the chamber with liablity responsibilities in the event of possible lawsuits.

WEDNESDAY
August 21

Jurors in the murder trial of 30-year-old Bharat N. Bhakta found him guilty of voluntary manslaughter Wednesday afternoon.

The jury decision rejected the state's charge of murder and found that Bhakta's actions which resulted in the death of his wife Kumud was one of "passion."

The 132nd District Court jury deliberated some three hours Wednesday. Under the charge given them, they could have returned a verdict of murder, voluntary manslaughter, aggravated assault or acquital.

An endowed scholarship in memory of Patsy Jones Fee has been established at Western Texas College by her son, James Aaron, a Fluvanna rancher, it was reported Wednesday.

Mrs. Fee was the first woman student to earn a degree in animal husbandry at Texas Tech University, where she graduated in 1948.

THURSDAY
August 22

An 18-year prison sentence — near the maximum directed for the particular case — concluded trial proceedings here Thursday involving 30-year-old Bharat N. Bhakta.

The sentence was handed down in connection with the death April 25 of his 25-year-old wife Kumud.

The same jury found Bhakta guilty of voluntary manslaughter Wednesday afternoon. That offense carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison.

A new insurance bid offered Snyder school trustees Thursday managed to duck a projected $111,000 cost increase to the district during the 1985-86 school year.

But to keep district costs at essentially the same level, board members opted to adopt a new insurance plan which increases annual deductible costs for school personnel from $200 to $300.

As a "plus" to the new plan, however, school personnel will see an immediate reduction in out-of-pocket expense related to prescription drugs, resulting in a maximum charge of $3 for each prescription drug buy.

The Cogdell Memorial Hospital Board of Managers reviewed an outside audit of the facility's operation during 1984 Thursday night.

Meeting with the board were Monte West and Jerry Vestal of Anderson, Vestal and West.

FRIDAY
August 23

A man arrested on sexual assault charges issued out of Abilene earlier this week was the same suspect ultimately convicted here in March of 1973 for murder in connection with the death of then Snyder High School sophomore Elizabeth Goodlett, it was reported Friday.

Charged is James Robert Hurd, 33, who was living in Blackwell in Nolan County when arrested Tuesday by Jones and Nolan County authorities. He is charged with sexual assault in connection with the abduction of a 38-year-old woman from an Abilene North 1st St. Kmart last Monday.

A 30-year-old prison inmate sent to state prison for charges originating in Scurry County has become the 18th inmate homicide this year inside TDC facilities, it was reported Friday.

Killed Thursday was Arturo Aguilar, who began serving his current sentence in 1984 due to burglary charges here.

The AFL Houston Oilers overwhelmed the Boston Patriots 27-7 in exhibition football action in Houston's Rice Stadium Saturday night — Aug. 21. Jack Spikes of Snyder started his first pro game at fullback in that contest.

25 YEARS AGO

Thirteen-year-old Curtis Brown and his mother, Mrs. Ray Brown, ginned Scurry County's first bale of cotton for 1960 Saturday — Aug. 20 — at the Planter's Gin here. Young Brown recruited a crew of 14 hands to hand pick the bale Friday afternoon from an irrigated field 11 miles southeast of Snyder. 2,100 pounds of bolls ginned out to a bale weight of 418 pounds.

Paris flea market does big business

PARIS (AP) — Rusty World War I helmets, 17th-century commodes, plastic shoes and leather T-shirts, centuries-old silver baby cups and used tuxedo shirts.

These are some of the myriad objects to be had for a price at the Marche aux Puces, Paris' largest and most popular flea (puces) market, which is celebrating its 100th anniversary this summer.

For many tourists, a visit to the Puces ranks with the Eiffel Tower. Some 120,000 people, in fact, are estimated to flock north to the Metro stop Porte de Clignancourt each weekend, the nearest convenient point to the St. Ouen market complex. The Puces is open only Saturday, Sunday and Monday, but year round.

The days when a lucky few would stumble unknowingly on dust-covered masterpieces now worth millions are long gone, but the 75-acre Puces draws hordes of bargain-hunting tourists, savvy antique collectors and dealers.

"When I see all this junk, I keep wondering where it all comes from," said Penelope Bender, an 18-year-old from Charlottesville, Va. "There's so much of it, and it doesn't look like American junk."

Ms. Bender's search for a heart-shaped locket ended in vain, but she said she enjoyed rummaging through old movie posters and piles of lace underwear, and lunching on the traditional flea market fare of sausage and french fries.

The Puces came into existence in 1885 when hawkers and junk peddlers were banished from downtown Paris and forced to sell their wares, mainly used clothes and household items, in the countryside north of the city.

Today, the Puces is big business, with some 10,000 people earning their living in its 3,000 separate stands. Judging from the luxury cars that line the narrow streets around the market, it is a profitable business, with yearly turnover estimated around $120 million, half of it coming from foreigners.

"There are more and more Americans coming to buy at the Flea Market," said Giselle Gaboriaud, a dealer in antique silver in the Puces' Serpette section. "Not just in the tourist season, but all year round."

She said the weakness of the franc against the dollar put Americans in a strong buying position but added that "knowing there are lots of American dealers around has pushed prices up for everyone."

Still, prices of antiques — a pair of sterling silver serving forks was about $80 — are usually 15 to 20 percent cheaper than in downtown antique shops.

China is end of road for people

HARBIN, China (AP) — Marjorie Fuller jokes about Ezra Pound and Mao Tse-tung's chance of heaven. But of the 21 years she and her mother spent in a Chinese prison camp, she says only, "We'd like to forget about it."

The two former Americans, swept up in China's mid-century turmoil and stateless for three decades, live in an old folks home in this northeast city, where they landed five years ago and where they plan to die.

"I'm desperate to go up there to heaven. All my best friends are there," quipped Marjorie, whose conversation is sharp and witty and devoid of apparent bitterness.

The daughter, 62, and her mother, Seraphine Fuller, 80, have each other for company and little else to occupy their days in the country where they were born and have always lived — but where they still cannot speak the language.

One of their few diversions is to meet visitors who learn of them and come to the two-story "Harbin Retirement Home for Foreigners," final resting place for 14 elderly Russians, Koreans, Japanese and stateless people.

"I'm a bamboo American," said Marjorie, who corresponds with 15 pen pals around the world and receives Agatha Christie mysteries from an Indian woman friend in England.

Her blue-eyed mother, born in Harbin to a Polish railway worker and his Ukrainian wife, sat quietly beside her, dressed in a matching white blouse.

The women forfeited their U.S. citizenship after Mrs. Fuller divorced her American husband in Shanghai in 1930 when Marjorie was a small girl. Alfred Fuller worked for the Thomas Cook agency and later remarried and moved to San Francisco.

The women stayed in Shanghai and decided to become Chinese citizens. When the Communists came to power, their Chinese passports were destroyed and they were stateless.

Anti-foreigner sentiment swept the country in 1959 and they were interned in a Shanghai prison camp along with other non-Chinese, including known murderers.

The Fullers remained in prison for 21 years and Marjorie, who speaks with an American accent, could cite only one reason: "We were a bunch of foreigners."

"We lived on cement, 10 to a room. There was no heating and barely two square meals a week."

The Bible helped them to remain sane, she said.

The Red Guards of Mao's "Cultural Revolution" struck next in 1966.

"They came in and wanted to burn our Bibles. I said throw us in the fire too and they said, 'Oh, they're crazy,' and went out," Marjorie said.

Four years after Mao's death in 1976, the foreigners' prison emptied and the Fullers were put on a train for Harbin.

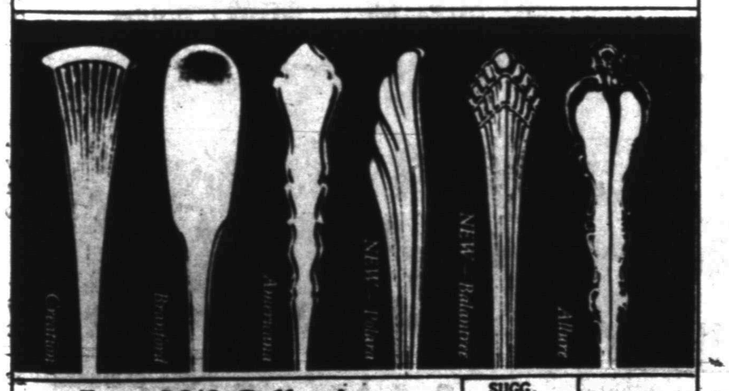

When their plight became known, U.S. officials offered them passports and money.

"We said no thank you," Marjorie said.

Church campsite is still popular

LAKESIDE, Ohio (AP) — The bells play Rock of Ages, setting the pace for vacationers who saunter between beach and park, cottage porches and small shops in this mile-square onetime Methodist campground.

For the 3,000-5,000 people who come each week to stroll on the dock, play shuffleboard, meander around Hotel Lakeside, rock on cottage porches, or just stare out at Lake Erie, Lakeside — the 112-year-old Chautauqua-style settlement that grew from a camp meeting site — is a relic of old-fashioned ease.

Only one person has a workday stride. Tom Edwards is tearing through the lazy-day pace with talk of modern management and high-tech accounting methods in the drive to preserve a relic. He is charged with seeing that Lakeside's oldtime facade stays put while its management and finances charge ahead.

He wants to make the cottage town on Marblehead peninsula a model for church-sponsored camps nationwide. The hundreds of such camps which flourished after World War II, holdovers of the Chautauqua movement of the 19th century, are now down to a few dozen.

"We're playing catch-up right now," says Edwards, who brought Lakeside's annual budget from $800,000 in 1980-81 to $2 million this year. What he is catching up with is a boom of interest in family entertainment and safe surroundings, or, as he puts it, " a need to go back to the basics."

The conservative rules and regulations that continued into the 1950s from Lakeside's church origins — including requiring visitors to cover themselves with robes between cottage and beach in the name of modesty— have relaxed, although no alcohol is permitted on the grounds.

The word residents mention most is "security," provided by a fence and entrance gate, as well as attitude.

"People don't lock up their cars and they don't lock up the cottages. You feel pretty secure," said 32-year-old Becky Hope, of Columbus, who has been visiting Lakeside each summer since she was 5. "It's kind of an ideal little world for a short time."

"You lay your tennis rackets down, your bike, and they're there when you come back. We don't lock our house," said Mary Parks, a Findlay woman who bought a Lakeside cottage six years ago as a retirement retreat.

Lakeside was a Methodist camp meeting site in the 1860s. It followed the lead of the Chautauqua, N.Y., camp that developed beyond a religious emphasis to include culture, recreation and education.

Blind rabbi able to teach students anyway

NEW YORK (AP) — After Rabbi Joseph Wanefsky has listened to a lecture by a professor of Talmud at the Yeshiva University-affiliated Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary (RIETS), he is able to remember most of what he has heard.

"It's like listening to a symphony," he explained. "When you know what to listen for, you get more out of the symphony. I've had a lot of experience listening."

The 47-year-old Wanefsky has been blind since he was 12.

Today, the rabbi serves as a mentor for freshmen in the university's Yeshiva Program-Mazer School of Talmudic Studies. He prepares those freshmen before they hear lectures from the professors at RIETS.

Sometimes Wanefsky — who holds a doctor of Hebrew literature degree and has written two books — even delivers lectures himself when, in his words, he "pinch-hits" for the professor.

He works with the students in groups of two, three or four, and he usually begins by having the students read to him from the Talmudic passage they are going to discuss.

"Reading to me is a good experience for them," he said. "They have to become attuned to the text. They can't just sit back and relax and listen."

Rabbi Heshie Reichman, whose students work with Wanefsky, said the rabbi "is able to develop close personal relationships with the students. He works with them as individuals and educates them in an intimate fashion.

"He is also an inspiration to them," Reichman said. "When they see the hardships he has overcome they are motivated to work more diligently at their studies."

Wanefsky was raised in Brooklyn. Both his father and his mother's father, who lived with the family when Wanefsky was a boy, were Talmudic scholars.

Young Joseph Wanefsky was able to continue his studies after losing his sight because he had done so much reading before the age of 12.

"My eyesight was never good," he said, "but, while I could, I read the Talmud. I was exposed to the knowledge."

After the boy lost his sight, his father continued to read to him from Jewish texts.

"I was lucky to have understanding parents," Wanefsky said. "I know other blind people who had to go live in special homes because their parents could not deal with their handicap. But I stayed with my family. I was not isolated."

Wanefsky attended the Long Island Rehabilitation Center for Blind People and then Yeshiva College, the men's undergraduate, liberal arts and sciences division of the university.

At the college, he served as president of the sociology club, student court judge and staff member of the student newspaper.

He graduated with honors in sociology in 1962. That same year, he was ordained at RIETS. Wanefsky earned a master of arts degree from the university in 1965 and his doctorate in 1969.

"I guess I just never paid too much attention to my handicap," he said. "You immerse yourself in whatever you can do."

When he was younger, Wanefsky said, he was very interested in the legal nature of the Talmud, but today, "I am more interested in the rationale of being that is in the Talmud. I am more interested in the higher purpose of life."

Victims helping others

By GLENN N. KAUP
Doylestown Daily Intelligencer

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (AP) — To be dependent upon others, for B.J. Gregor, is just about the worst thing possible.

For the past 30 years, Mrs. Gregor has waged a tough battle against arthritis, which has spread to practically every joint in her body. Both her knees and four finger joints on her right hand have had to be replaced with artificial parts.

Each day, Mrs. Gregor exercises to ensure her independence, which allows her to dress herself, paint, write poetry, move around the house and be active in the community.

At age 69, Mrs. Gregor helps others cope with a disease that has no cure. She is a self-help counselor for Quakertown Community Hospital's arthritis program.

Mrs. Gregor says she can help other people in the program because she is well aware of the problems different people can have with arthritis.

"Different people have different needs and different ways of using the information," she said.

Through the program, she says she is able to teach people things that took her 20 years to learn.

"When most people want to give up, they look to Mrs. Gregor, who has such a great attitude," said Ann Duerst, coordinator of community education at Quakertown Community Hospital. "Just to see her in action, it is great for the people in the (self-help) class."

Mrs. Gregor says arthritis patients are not handicapped or crippled — just people with "a heck of an inconvenience."

Individuals with arthritis must remain busy, she points out. In order to reduce the pain the patients have to continue to stay mobile. They must realize that they cannot go back to the way things used to be, she says. "This is now, so let's do something about it."

Mrs. Gregor says a lot of people don't realize that they enjoy being dependent on others. She cautions people with arthritis not to enlarge the pain of their disease to gain attention.

The trick to helping others is to let them know they are helping you, she explains. "Every place I go, I learn more than I teach."

Her husband, William, a retired construction supervisor, has helped her and others continue their independence. In a workshop near their home in East Greenville, Gregor makes various items out of wood to enable arthritic patients to turn on the television or microwave oven, or even pull up their own socks.

Mrs. Gregor says she tries to continue to learn about the disease and she attends as many seminars on it as possible.

She would eventually like to set up a program to talk to people who have just been diagnosed as arthritic. She says the people who attend the self-help program have already accepted the disease and are on the long road back toward rehabilitation.

Volunteer group would like more visibility

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The General looked at his army and put it out of the military business. He got rid of the uniforms, turned posts into branches and made lieutenant majors executive directors.

Part of the reason is that hardly anyone knew much about his army — the Volunteers of America. The VOA, in fact, ruefully calls itself "the invisible agency," an impression it would like to change.

The VOA recently commissioned a survey of 30 pilot cities to find out just what people thought when they heard Volunteers of America.

"The people doing the survey told us to save our money after only four cities," says O. P. "Boots" Hoffman Jr., director of development. "The answers were all coming out the same: Santa Claus and thrift shops."

That is only a small part of what VOA is about. The thrift shops make up about 5 percent of VOA's activity and the bellringing Santas appear only in New York City.

They get a lot of attention, though, since the Santas ring their bells right under the noses of major television networks in midtown Manhattan and are a natural for a Christmas special.

The VOA began its services with the prison population. Maud Booth, who along with her husband Ballington Booth founded the VOA, was the first woman ever allowed into Sing Sing, where she worked with inmates.

In the past year, the VOA entered the jail business, taking over one of the few privately run facilities in the country. It's a 42-bed institution in Roseville, Minn., just outside of St. Paul. While this is the first jail the VOA is running, it operates about 16 centers throughout the country dealing with the prison population. Most of these are halfway houses.

Five years ago, the VOA was reorganized when Raymond C. Tremont took over as president and chief executive officer. He did away with the military trappings and strove to bring more accountability into the organization.

Tremont, who is still affectionately called "General," essentially gave up a benign dictatorship to become a leader, whose tenure, while not as precarious as that of a Notre Dame football coach or a Yankees manager, could be challenged.

But before he handed over his crown, he moved the company store from its historic headquarters in New York City to New Orleans, his adopted hometown. The balding, silverhaired Tremont, 61, concedes he might not have been able to get away with that today.

The Volunteers of America began when Ballington Booth, a son of William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, severed ranks with his father's organization. Ballington and Maud Booth felt that the Salvation Army, whose roots were in England, was sending too much money from America back to Europe. They founded VOA in 1896 and since then the policy has been to stay American, not international.

"When our founders left the Army there was quite a bit of friction," says Tremont. There is still a good-natured rivalry between the "Vollies" and the "Sallies," adds Richard Salyer, executive director of the VOA in New York.

The Salvation Army, far better known, is much larger than VOA and in many cases offers similar services to communities. The Army has maintained its military tradition and trappings.

Tremont says there wasn't much resistance when he abolished the uniforms.

"I was never a great lover of the military trappings, but I thought there would be some clinging to the past," he says, "but there was very little." The VOA is in 165 cities and 37 states and its 1984 revenues were $132 million, up from $91 million in 1982.

It's in small cities such as Llewellyn, Neb., where it runs a school clothing distribution center and a health clinic.

In New York City it operates a variety of programs, including a residence for women, an 800-plus bed facility for homeless men, the largest such year-round facility in the country, an old-fashioned mission, a program for recovering alcoholics and more.

Yet, there is no VOA presence in some large cities like Atlanta or Washington, D.C.

"I would like to think the mayors of cities where we run services know who we are, but that just isn't the case. We really are the invisible agency," says Tremont. "Part of that is because by the nature of our programs there are often not signs on the outside that say this is a Volunteers of America project. We just blend in with the neighborhood.

In fiscal 1984, the VOA helped over 750,000 million Americans and spent $149 on each person it served. Forty percent of VOA funding comes from government grants, federal, state and local. In service units, a figure in which many individuals are counted more than once, VOA says it met the needs of over 10 million in 1984.

Housing is a big part of VOA services, including housing for low and middle-income families, the elderly, troubled delinquents, autistic children, unwed mothers, the emotionally or physically disabled in group homes and prisoners in halfway houses.

VOA also operates alcohol and drug rehabilitation centers, the thrift shops, meals on wheels programs, senior citizen clinics, the whole spectrum of social services.

Recently, VOA has embarked upon a literacy program, which has opened in five pilot cities: Houston, Boston, Harrisburg, Pa., Oakland, Calif., and Rochester, N.Y. The VOA is working with the Literacy Volunteers of America as well as the American Association of Retired Persons.

The VOA is also looking for blue-ribbon donors, taking out twice monthly ads in the Wall Street Journal. Instead of used parkas and sofas, they're looking for people who want to donate automobiles, yachts, apartment complexes and the like.

"Right now, we've been offered a 90-foot yacht in Florida, a 280-unit apartment complex in Houston and a 38-foot yacht in Lake Pontchartrain," says Hoffman.

VOA is a Christian, nondenominational church without distinct dogma. It calls itself a ministry of service and its leaders are ministers of the VOA.

Fem volunteers are fighting fires

By J.D. HORNING Willmar West Central Tribune

CORRELL, Minn. (AP) — When the fire whistle blows on a weekday in Correll, one of the volunteer firefighters will often manage to bring along a sack filled with freshly baked chocolate chip cookies — from the volunteer's own oven.

The weekday firefighting force in the tiny western Minnesota community includes the Correll Volunteer Auxiliary, 10 women who help battle the blazes when most of the 13 regular squad members are tied down with their jobs.

The auxiliary was formed in June 1984 and includes eight firewomen who recently completed "Fire Fighting One," a training course on the basics of how to snuff out fires.

The women volunteers have responded to a few local minor fires, and although they have yet to battle a major building blaze, they are available to assist the fire department at a moment's notice.

"We don't get all that many fire calls," said Correll Fire Chief Galen Muenchow. "But you never know what will happen, and we're happy to have all the support we can get.

"Besides, we have a lot of fun," Muenchow said as he munched on one of the fresh cookies at a recent training session.

Muenchow has been the fire chief "off and on" for the past 20 years in Correll, a town of 76 residents in the southeastern corner of Big Stone County. He said the last major building fire in Correll took a barn on the east edge of town in 1976. Since then, it has been nine years of "mostly grass fires, car fires and tractor fires."

Muenchow's wife, Pat, one of the auxiliary volunteers, said some of the smaller fires seem to break out "in the middle of the day, when the men are off working. That leaves mostly us women to tackle them."

Mrs. Muenchow said the regular firefighters first offered to accept the women into the department, but the women instead opted to form the auxiliary, which also helps raise funds to support the department through auctions, raffles, bake-offs and rummage sales.

However, when needed, the auxiliary serves as a back-up to the firefighters "trained to help and available to help," Mrs. Muenchow said. "We realized (last year) that we could be of more assistance, and a small community like ours has to help itself."

Phyllis Petty, a supplemental teacher's aide and auxiliary president, is one of two women in the auxiliary to complete the entire 72-hour training course. She said she "learned a lot from (the course), not just on how to fight fires, but things to use every day. I think if I had a fire (at home) now, I would know what to do, and not panic..."

The auxiliary is trained for nearly every possible situation, said Mrs. Petty, whose husband, Dwight, also is a firefighter.

Even if the full complement of regular firefighters was on the scene, she said, "most of us would be there too, ready to do whatever we could."

During their training course at the Willmar Area Vocational-Technical Institute, the women participated, in "controlled burns" of an abandoned farmhouse and an old barn.

Mrs. Petty, who described herself as "the foolhardy one," was the only woman trainee to enter the flaming farmhouse during the first controlled burn.

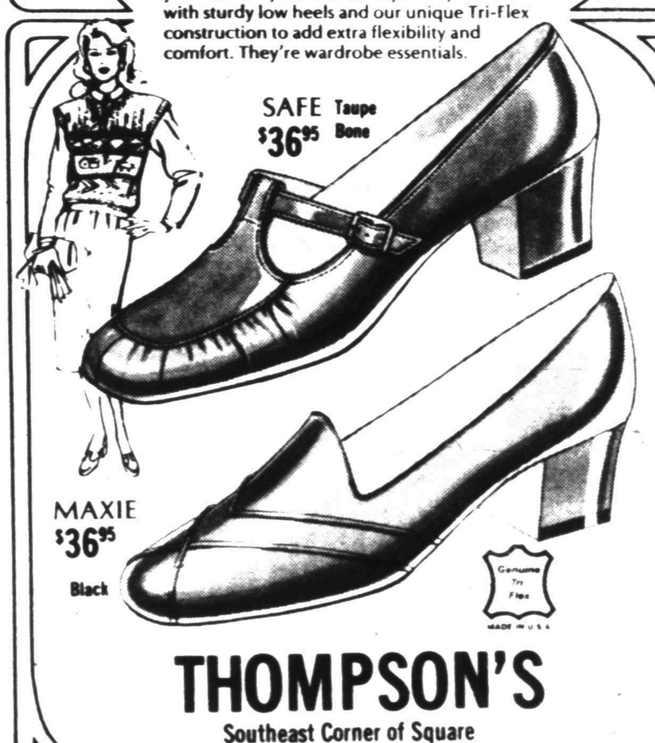

"You can't beat actual on-the-job training," Mrs. Petty said. "We felt the heat, and we watched how the fire spread. Then we learned how to stop it."

HOWDY, FRIENDS!

WE'RE ON THE GROW

There are only a few more days left until we open our brand new store at 30th and College Ave. We're working like mad to get everything nice and spiffy by Wednesday when we have our Grand Opening. So please be patient just a little while longer!

8 A.M. WEDNESDAY!

We'll close our 26th street store Tuesday night at 10 p.m. and open our new store at 8 a.m. Wednesday. We'll have a ribbon cutting ceremony with the Mayor at 10 a.m. and all kinds of other Grand Opening activities. Check the cupboards, call your friends, organize a car pool and "COME ON DOWN!"

TRADITION CONTINUES!

THE NEW!

Furr's and Snyder go back a long, long way. We opened our store on 26th Street in 1949, just a year after oil was discovered and the boom started. And we've hung in there together through the good times and the not so good times. Our store burned to the ground in July of 1959, and by December we'd rebuilt on the same foundation and were open for business again. Then in 1967 summer rains flooded the creeks and we had 5 inches of water in the store. Where was all that water during the fire--when we needed it?

BIGGER! NEWER! BETTER!

You've been great friends and neighbors, Snyder, and we're proud to build you a new store. It's a big one -- 34,000 square feet -- and it's chock full of the latest equipment and technology. All the refrigeration units and frozen food cases are brand new, and we've even installed a computerized checkout system.

START PLANNING NOW FOR THE GRAND OPENING!

We don't want to give any secrets away, but we are going to have some fabulous Grand Opening specials when we show off our new store. So start making your shopping list now!
